Vol. XX September 1, 1917 No. 1

Mortal Mind and Human Mind

FREDERICK DIXON

IN the effort to grasp the full significance of Christian Science, there is nothing more necessary to keep steadfastly in view than the unreality of mortal mind and all its accompanying phenomena. What exactly Mrs. Eddy meant by mortal mind she has explained, with her usual unrivaled terseness and clarity, in a single line on page 25 of "Retrospection and Introspection," in the words, "That which sins, suffers, and dies, I named mortal mind," while on page 9 of "Unity of Good" she makes equally clear the absolute necessity for never being betrayed into any admission, mental or verbal, of the reality of mortal mind, when she asks, "What is the cardinal point of the difference in my metaphysical system?" and immediately answers her own question as follows: "This: that by knowing the unreality of disease, sin, and death, you demonstrate the allness of God. This difference wholly separates my system from all others."

Mortal mind, then, and human mind are equally and absolutely unreal. They are the illusion which counterfeits God, or Principle, and they possess not one single particle of good, for they are the negation of good. The idea that the human mind is a sort of mortal mind and water, cannot find one line of support in Mrs. Eddy's writings. Human mind is simply mortal mind expressed humanly. The struggle of the human being for salvation is, consequently, the effort to put off the illusion of the carnal mind,—that is, the mortal mind incarnated or expressed in the flesh, for the word carnal is derived simply from the Latin carnis, meaning flesh,—and to put on the Mind of Christ. Now this divine Mind, or Mind which was in Christ Jesus, is infinite, since God is infinite. Therefore, when the mortal or human mind is put off, and the Mind of Christ or divine Mind is put on, nothing has been changed and nothing has been created, for the divine Mind being infinite has been there all the time. What has seemed to happen is merely that the illusion of the human senses has passed away into its native nothingness. If the human mind had passed into divine Mind, as is sometimes erroneously imagined, evil in some mysterious way would have become good, and so actually eternal.

Precisely the same dilemma of course arises when the effort is made to explain human mind as a not quite so bad mortal mind. The attempt ends inevitably in an endeavor to whitewash mortal mind. Then this whitewashed mortal mind is gradually diluted until it becomes divine Mind. Thus, instead of the "scientific translation of mortal mind," described by Mrs. Eddy on pages 115 and 116 of Science and Health, in which the unreality of evil ceases to deceive, so that the reality of good becomes spiritually understood, a sort of crazy genealogical table is set us, to the effect that mortal mind begat human mind, and human mind begat divine Mind, who is called God.

What really occurs is very simple, and is again and again carefully explained by Mrs. Eddy in her writings. The only reality is God, or divine Mind, whose image is man made in the likeness of Mind, and whose reflection is divine idea. The fact that this is so constitutes the only supposititious origin of the lie about or counterfeit of divine Mind which was named by Mrs. Eddy mortal mind, and which, when expressed through the human race, she often termed human mind. But the only power a lie can ever even seem to exert is the temporary sense of power it may seem to possess while those who listen to it are sufficiently ignorant of the truth, the knowledge of which would free them from the bondage of the lie. As, then, a man comes to know more about the truth, the liar or human mind is destroyed, and in proportion to the destruction the truth becomes apparent.

Every atom, then, of human mind that appears to exist is unadulterated mortal mind, and human beings differ from the beasts just in this, that they claim to "be as gods, knowing good and evil." It is here, indeed, that the lie of mortal mind reaches in humanity the very arrogance of sin, for it claims evil as part of good, and ignorance as the complement of knowledge. It is the very confusion of Babel, a "house divided against itself." Every phase of sin, from the blood-guiltiness of David to the drunkenness of Noah, is exposed in it; every consciousness of limitation, from the riches of Dives to the hunger of Lazarus, is manifested by it; the misery of Rachel, the leprosy of Naaman, and the treachery of Judas,—all these are physical expressions of it. But the moment you find instead the wisdom of Solomon, the strength of Samson, and the dutifulness of Shem, the self-surrender of Abraham, the confidence of Daniel, or the insight of Isaiah, you are witnessing what Mrs. Eddy terms, on page 115 of Science and Health, "evil beliefs disappearing," and the appearance of those transitional qualities which in the ratio of their appearance lead toward the realm of that perfect spiritual understanding of Jesus which constituted his true humanhood, or man appearing. For the putting off of the old man and the putting on of the new means simply the gradual dissolution of the lies of human sense, and the gradual comprehension of the eternal likeness of Principle. This is man appearing.

If there were any truth in the suggestion that the human mind is less evil than the mortal mind, it would logically follow that the human mind could be purged of evil and become divine. Such a theory, however, would make the human mind eternal, and it would prove that the divine Mind was not infinite, since somewhere in infinity room would have to be found for this human mind. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Eddy makes the matter perfectly clear by dismissing the human mind as a myth. "The hosts of Æsculapius," she writes on page 150 of Science and Health, "are flooding the world with diseases, because they are ignorant that the human mind and body are myths." This proves, finally, that there is no good in human mind, for good is Principle, and it is impossible to destroy one iota of Principle.

Consecration

ELIZABETH PINCKNEY SKINNER

WEBSTER defines consecration as the "state of being consecrated; dedication." In the epistle to the Hebrews we are told of "a new and living way, which he [Jesus] hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." Consecration means a conquest over material sense, which lifts one out of the belief in death, also the belief of mind in matter. As our Leader says, "We should consecrate existence . . . to the Life which mortal sense cannot impair nor mortal belief destroy" (Science and Health, p. 428). The qualities needed to accomplish this victory over fleshly beliefs, and which prepare consciousness to realize the omnipotence of good, are obedience, consecration, and unity. In order to overcome the sense of evil in the world, the belief in a power apart from God, we must learn to obey; that is, to comply with the demands of Truth, submit to its authority, and yield to the impulse, power, or operation of divine Principle, Love. We must learn what it means to consecrate our lives to the service of God; and we must gain a spiritual sense of unity with good—God and His ideas.

On page 177 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy asks: "Will you . . . become real and consecrated warriors? Will you give yourselves wholly and irrevocably to the great work of establishing the truth, the gospel, and the Science which are necessary to the salvation of the world from error, sin, disease, and death?" We should ponder this request. Consecration to the Christ-idea makes one equal to the destruction of any and all error, for evil is but the expression of the subjective state of mortal mind, and though it has built itself to reach high heaven, it was thought before it appeared as matter.

The objectified thought, therefore, is as unreal as its supposed origin,—the evil mind, which is unable to formulate itself into any expression of power that the unity of good and the understanding of the law of Love cannot lay low. As we obediently strive to gain an understanding of the unity and allness of good, we are able to prove by degrees the nothingness of matter, the demonstration of which can be made only in a stern conflict of the denial of mortal selfhood and of the material body, and through the recognition of the idea of divine Mind, the image of Principle. This inspires us to pledge ourselves to a deeper consecration to the cause of Christian Science, to "a more sincere and Christly love of God and our brother, and a more implicit obedience to the sacred teachings of the Bible and our text-book, as well as to the all-inclusive instructions and admonitions of our Church Manual in its spiritual import, that we may indeed reach 'unto the city of the living God'" (Miscellany, p. 46).

Joshua and his band went seven times around the walls of Jericho. In this demonstration we see that the struggle to know more of divine Principle must be carried on persistently, until the walls of material sense are broken down, and the obstructing beliefs of the carnal mind can no longer hide the spiritual sense of God, man, law, and gospel, and God as expressed in reflection. In beholding this reflection there is instantaneous healing. To be like the Father, human consciousness must be purified, clarified, and strengthened, that the divine nature, character, or image may be seen in reflection.

Consecration is individual, unselfish; it is one with God, and therefore is unity; it is divine in quality and cannot be pierced by mortal thought, proving the truth of this Scripture: "And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; . . . as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." This refuge in God is realized through spiritual perception, understanding, and application. Consecration to Christ, Truth, does not permit of a belief in the reality of good and evil, but calls for the administration of the law of God to meet every human need; it instructs us how to train each little tendril of aspiring hope to faith, and from faith to spiritual understanding, demonstrating fruition wherein divine Love becomes our closest friend and the source of spiritual happiness and joy.

Complete consecration means constant adherence to the truth; it witnesses to the omnipotence and omnipresence of good, denying either presence or power to evil. This course of steady, active obedience to God is prayer without ceasing; it is inspiration and aspiration, and is not only an inward devotedness of self to His service but an outward profession of allegiance,—a dedication. Complete consecration to God and humanity makes it possible to show our faith by our works, and to prove that "now are we the sons of God."

The Signature

PERCY M. HOLDSWORTH

INCIDENTS of daily experience ofttimes bring to the student of Christian Science cause for profitable study, as the following instance illustrates. A party of men were returning from a convention at which had been represented corporations and industries of great material wealth and power. In the party were several who had in their hands the control of large affairs, and a group of three men included one of these. During their conversation the man of affairs spoke modestly, in answer to inquiry, of his own work. As an executive officer of several closely associated corporations it was his duty to handle matters of great moment, and on occasion to sign for the head of these companies most important papers. He had also, through years of proven worth, become so conversant with the affairs of this man who was the dominant head, that the latter had given to him power of attorney to conduct his personal investments and sign his name when necessary.

The incidents related were of more than passing interest to one member of this group, for he was a student of Christian Science, using his growing understanding to distinguish between absolute truth and material belief, and seeking always to know the spiritual fact. Thus in the following days he turned over in thought two words, "sign" and "name," which had impressed him as they were spoken.

Among the definitions of the noun "sign" are the following: "That by which anything is made known or represented; that which furnishes evidence; a mark; a token; an indication; a proof." One dictionary also used this illustration: "The kings and earls themselves . . . could only make some mark or sign for the name, and it is from that custom that we have learned to speak of signing our names." Definitions of "name" were: "A descriptive or qualifying appellation given . . . on account of character or acts." "Reputed character; reputation, good or bad." Thus it was seen that to sign another's name was to indicate his character, and so through the years in which the man of affairs had acted as agent for his superior, the papers signed had been the agent's expression of his superior's desires, will, and character.

No one may sign another's name without authority to do so, and until one is sufficiently acquainted to understand the nature and desires of him whom he would represent, no such authority is given. Only after long association with his superior, and a constant endeavor to be found faithful and worthy, and so to understand his employer's character as to be able to express his desires to others, was this agent given the right to sign his name. No doubt as years of association passed, the agent in sincere admiration of his superior's ability and good qualities tried to make them his own, and in these ways to imitate and resemble the one whom he served.

To the Christian Scientist there is but one name worthy of honor, and the sign thereof is healing and pardon. In Science and Health we read, "Christian Science does honor God . . . by doing many wonderful works through the divine name and nature." Also, "The divine nature was best expressed in Christ Jesus" (pp. 483, 259). A study of the New Testament reveals to us that it was his likeness to God and constant communion with Him which enabled Jesus so to understand the divine name and nature that he could express it "with signs following." At what was probably his earliest opportunity we find him in the temple, inquiring of the doctors, who were "astonished at his understanding and answers." Just preceding his public ministry he was "led by the Spirit into the wilderness," where through forty days of resistance to evil and communion with good he proved that he could never be induced to use the divine name and authority to further evil's suggestions, however enticing and subtle they might be. Near the close of his ministry we find him, after looking to God in prayer, signing the divine and spiritual decree of life eternal with the command, "Lazarus, come forth."

In considering the life of our Leader we perceive this same earnest search for God, and that clear understanding of His nature which enabled her to signify His character by works of healing. In "Retrospection and Introspection" she tells of her admission to the Congregational church after her insistent expression of her knowledge of divine Love had broken down the barriers of theological dogma, and of the cases of healing which resulted from her preaching and teaching in later years. It is clear to all who read Mrs. Eddy's writings that study of the Scriptures, and the constant desire to know God through reason and revelation, were the means by which she came so to understand the divine nature that her works were the sign thereof, and these means she repeatedly commends to all Christians who desire to awake in the divine likeness.

Guided by the teaching and example of their Leader, Christian Scientists are working to prove this promise given in substance by Christ Jesus, as we read in Mark's gospel: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." This signing of the Father's name is not presumption; it involves no assumption of personal power. It is but the visible declaration of the Father's will, for we are told in the gospel of St. John that the Son of man came to do "the will of the Father."

What gratitude we owe to Mrs. Eddy for revealing to us the nature of our Father-Mother God, and how gladly we study the Bible and the authorized Christian Science literature to know Him, and so to understand and express His true image and likeness that our acts may continually prove our understanding of the divine name and nature. No temporal power can begin to compare with this privilege. No earthly potentate exists who can offer such sure reward for faithful service, for, as we are told in the book of Acts, "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Prayer of Absorbing Desire

FRANK BUNKER

To many persons the reading of that wonderful first chapter of Science and Health, and particularly Mrs. Eddy's statement that "desire is prayer" (p. 1), has given the first inkling that prayer means something more than an attempt to communicate with God in a more or less formal way. The verses which the little child repeats at its mother's knee; the invocation pronounced by the preacher early in the church service; the sonorous, dignified, and majestic prayers of ritualistic religion; and the beautifully worded outpourings of the human heart, which have come down to us as a part of the world's great literature,—these are the types of prayer with which in varying degree all are familiar, and it is these which are commonly connoted when the term is used.

With that illuminating spiritual insight which earnest students of Mrs. Eddy's writings increasingly recognize to be characteristic of her, she perceived that prayer in its fuller and more complete meaning comprehends as well that craving of the human heart which lies too deep for the spoken word; that innermost and absorbing desire which is the basis of character, the mainspring of conduct, the driving power of men's lives.

The words which we utter may spring from our lips only. Expediency may dictate them, or the desire to do what is expected of us, or the thought of what others may think or say. Words may be used to disguise and obscure our thought as well as to project it and make it transparent. Words in and of themselves are an airy, nimble, and often irresponsible troop, quickly adapting themselves to every change in our mood and purpose. Our desires, on the other hand, are not so completely the servants of our wills, for they spring unbidden from our deepest emotions. They admit of no easy disguise, of no quick shift to meet a changing situation, of no lightning play of feint and guard and thrust as in a fencing contest. Since our conduct is so much more closely related to our desires than to our words, it has come about that the world in taking its measure of a man has learned to examine his deeds rather than his speech. It has found out that a man's determining and directing desire can be better come at through the channel of his actions than through that of his utterance.

It is however true that many times the prayer of our lips and the prayer of our desires are not in accord; for the one may express what we think we ought to pray for, or what we think God would wish us to pray for, while the other embodies what we actually do pray for. Many a man lifts his voice in public prayer, asking for more humility and for a greater measure of spirituality, whose prayer of absorbing desire is expressed in a mad struggle for riches, for fame, for power, for the world's applause. Many a woman joins in songs and hymns of praise whose innermost craving is for a life of selfish ease—a life filled to satiety with creature comforts. For such as these, whose dominant desires give the lie to their words, the world has a well defined contempt and a very ugly name. It was upon this class that there fell the most scathing denunciation of all time, that pronounced upon the Pharisees, whom Jesus likened to "whited sepulchers," outwardly beautiful, but inwardly filled with all uncleanness.

Though the yearnings of the hearts of men when viewed in the aggregate appear to be endless in their diversity and dissimilarity, yet in each consciousness the innermost craving in essence is either chiefly material or predominantly spiritual. Environment, early training and education, and most of all the sea of human belief in which apparently we are immersed and whose waves are ceaselessly beating upon human consciousness, are the seeming influences which shape for us our material desires and impel us to strive with all our might for their realization.

Men never become so completely enthralled in materiality, however, but that some ray of spiritual light penetrates their consciousness and is reflected by them. Every noble and unselfish impulse, every act of unstudied and spontaneous kindness, every sincere and heartfelt wish for greater spirituality, comes through the activity of the Christ-spirit. While this spirit is everywhere present, always has been and always will be, and while it is ceaselessly operative, yet one's consciousness may be so filled with materiality that the "still small voice" will not be heard. There will come a time, however, when the defenses which materiality builds against the Christ-idea will weaken; when the struggle for supremacy will become a conscious one; and when human consciousness will be so cleared of false standards and beliefs that the desire to be wholly possessed of the Christ-mind will prevail.

Digitized by Google

Before this point is reached, however, the high sounding words of materiality must be recognized for what they are, namely, assumptions which are false and presumptuous. Materiality has a thousand specious proposals which it urges upon him who seeks good fortune—and good fortune is sought by all. It offers the possibility of acquiring great possessions; it tempts with the bubble of fame; it dazzles with the prospect of power; it would silence doubts with fanciful pictures of ease and pleasure. So audacious and plausible are its pretensions, moreover, that oftentimes the hollowness of it all is recognized only after great suffering has been endured, after bitter disappointments have been met, after the human heart has been broken with its burden of grief and sorrow. "In some way, sooner or later," Mrs. Eddy writes, "all must rise superior to materiality, and suffering is oft the divine agent in this elevation" (Science and Health, p. 444).

Even after the wish for a life of pure submission to divine Truth has become uppermost in human consciousness—has become the prayer of absorbing desire—the conflict is by no means ended. The one who seeks to be rid of material self in order that God may take possession, has still to prove his sincerity. Doubts assail his faith, perplexing questions challenge his understanding, the flood of sense-testimony at times seems to cloud spiritual sense, the pressure of earthly affairs confuses and distracts him; while from within, the perversities of his own heart impede his progress. With Paul one can regretfully say, "The good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do."

Mrs. Eddy tells us that "man's enslavement to the most relentless masters—passion, selfishness, envy, hatred, and revenge—is conquered only by a mighty struggle" (Science and Health, p. 407). But he who perseveres, who fights "the good fight" against the illusions of materiality, whose prayer of absorbing desire is for union with Christ in God, will enter finally into that state of peace and joy and harmony which is heaven; for on the authority of no less a person than Paul it surely will come to pass that "we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

Responding to the Divine Demand

ETHYLE B. NESBIT

As one contemplates the spiritual realities which are unfolded through the study of the Lesson-Sermon, thought rises in gratitude for the table that divine Love has so bountifully spread for us during this awakening process which is revealing the truths of spiritual existence. A recent experience proved the Lesson-Sermon to be the word of God, guarding and guiding thought into a fuller understanding of God and man as His idea.

A testimony of the perfect healing of a baby's finger, the tip of which had been cut off just above the nail, had been lovingly offered at the mid-week testimony meeting; and while one was glorifying God for this wonderful manifestation of His power and presence, the thoughts of another were unconsciously expressing doubt. She was, however, suddenly awakened to the error by a recollection of the demand of Truth as expressed by Paul, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" But instead of admitting gratitude for this healing truth, and rebuking the error, thoughts of condemnation were admitted. To think that one who had proved in Christian Science the healing power of God, should doubt! This greater enemy was not, however, discovered until the next morning, when the Lesson-Sermon was taken up, and obedience in respect to the daily study uncovered the intruder; though it again presented itself and sought to darken the true sense of the Bible reading. When, however, the following reference from Science and Health was taken up, the enemy received its death-blow: "Human ignorance of Mind and of the recuperative energies of Truth occasions the only skepticism regarding the pathology and theology of Christian Science" (p. 252).

This spiritually awakened faith is healing all mankind. Many times in our striving to rise higher we ask, "What lack I yet?" We may feel that we have accepted Christian Science as the truth, that we study the Lesson-Sermon, and all the books by Mrs. Eddy, read the articles and experiences in our periodicals, and yet we do not get out of our study what others apparently do. Possibly we lack a vital faith that Christian Science is the word of God; perhaps we have not realized the importance of guarding its divine mission by knowing that it is under the same protection as was the church of which Isaiah declared, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn."

As our spiritual armor is put on and the sword of Spirit is wielded, not only do we silence the lie which would hinder individual progress, but we behold Science lifting humanity above all the discords of sense into divine harmony, and through the lens of spiritual understanding we discern that Christian Science will ultimately bring perfect freedom to all mankind. This daily effort to "continue" in the truth, as Christ Jesus admonished, will break the selfish mesmerism which would prevent us from being alert to detect and destroy the intruding thoughts that hinder us from doing faithful service in that loving obedience which alone enables us to demonstrate Truth.

The Lions

HELEN C. HALDANE

MANY have gained help from a study of Daniel's life, and especially his experience when cast into the lions' den. All such stories in the Bible are very useful to Christian Scientists in working out their individual problems.

One lesson gained in this instance is from the way Daniel showed what the seeming error was that had to be destroyed. It was not the lions in the den: they had nothing to do with Daniel, and his realization of this doubtless overcame his fear, so that to his consciousness they were harmless. On page 514 of Science and Health we find the definition of lion as an idea of divine Mind. It reads as follows: "Moral courage is 'the lion of the tribe of Juda,' the king of the mental realm. Free and fearless it roams in the forest. Undisturbed it lies in the open field, or rests in 'green pastures, . . . beside the still waters.'" Daniel's work was to know that the counterfeit lions of mortal belief were envy, jealousy, malice, and criticism, the belief of place and power,—manifested as ravenous beasts,—and that all the false accusations of mortal mind, even under the laws of the Medes and Persians, could not harm God's idea, expressing purity, innocency, and justice.

Daniel started his work by giving thanks to God, his King. He neither feared nor gave power to any law but the divine, or to any government but that of justice and Truth. He recognized that his position did not depend on human personality, but upon divine Principle. By this understanding of Truth, and this consciousness of the ever-presence and protecting power of infinite Love, the mouths of evil were shut, and the malicious thought had no power but to uncover and destroy itself.

Thus in our daily work as Christian Scientists, when called upon to overcome some belief of evil, let us begin as did Daniel, and as Mrs. Eddy tells us to do when she says, "Keep your minds so filled with Truth and Love, that sin, disease, and death cannot enter them" (Miscellany,

p. 210). Then, no matter how loudly mortal mind may try to tell us that, because we like Daniel have broken the laws of the Medes and Persians, we must be cast into the lions' den, we need not fear. If condemned to suffer from any form of evil, whether sin, sickness, limitation, or the world's hatred of Truth, let us remember to look away from the so-called manifestation of error, and know that only our acceptance of the lie that there is another law or power can separate us from the love of God, which, as Paul says, "is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Like Daniel we should realize that life is eternal and indestructible; that every idea of God is pure and harmless in His kingdom. With this realization "the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night." Then shall the truth be declared to all the world, and men be brought to serve the living God, whose kingdom is everlasting and His dominion "an everlasting dominion."

Shutting the Door

ETHEL S. EVANS

Two little children were playing one day, when the older, aged seven, began to describe her aches and ills. "I have an awful cold," she said, "and my tooth hurts, and I'm just sick." The five year old, who had been listening gravely, replied: "Why don't you shut the door in its face?" This voicing of the truth was of course effectual, and the error so scientifically rebuked soon vanished into nothingness.

We are told in one of Faber's hymns that—

> If our love were but more simple,
> We should take Him at His word, and this was what the trusting little one had done; his thought, so pure and unfettered by theories of disease, has dispelled many a cloud of error from his home. The Master's declaration, "Except ye . . . become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," is easily understood by the Christian Scientist who is closely associated with little ones. Their ready acceptance of truth, when it is presented to them, gives children the ability to shut the door in the face of error's din—and really that is all we are ever required to do. The breath of truth sweeps away each vestige of evil, and thus destroys its asserted power.

There is nothing to dread when fear, that busy and subtle instrument of evil, is met with the divine declaration, "I am God, and there is none else." When we see God's allness we can unfailingly see the falseness of error's arguments. On page 252 of Miscellany Mrs. Eddy affirms this truth: "Have one God and you will have no devil;" and we can do this when we constantly realize the omnipotence of God, all-conquering good.

Each right thought can displace a thousand evil ones, thus shutting the door on error's attempted entrance and forestalling an evil deed. Like a stone cast into a lake, which produces ripples that go far and wide until they gradually pass beyond our sight, so an act (which was first a thought, either good or bad) may reach not only beyond our vision, but go down the ages to bless or harm mankind.

It is only when the door of our consciousness is opened to mortal mind, that cruel impostor designated by Christ Jesus as "a liar," who "abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him," that we are affected by false beliefs or thoughts which would separate us from the one Mind. When admitted into our mental dwelling how often are these beliefs of evil externalized as sickness, self-righteousness, resentment, and their attendant brood of evils, which are ever ready to enter, unless our thought rests upon the rock of spiritual understanding.

Bibles for American soldiers and sailors, to be given by the Scripture Gift Mission of Philadelphia, will carry a foreword by President Wilson urging the troops to read diligently the Scriptures. The President has written this inscription:—

"The Bible is the word of life. I beg that you will read it and find this out for yourselves—read, not little snatches here and there, but long passages that will really be the road to the heart of it.

"You will find it full of real men and women not only, but also of things you have wondered about and been troubled about all your life, as men have been always: and the more you read the more it will become plain to you what things are worth while and what are not; what things make men happy—loyalty, right dealings, speaking the truth, readiness to give everything for what they think their duty, and, most of all, the wish that they may have the real approval of the Christ, who gave everything for them—and the things that are guaranteed to make men unhappy—selfishness, cowardice, greed, and everything that is low and mean.

"When you have read the Bible you will know that it is the word of God, because you will have found it the key to your own heart, your own happiness, and your own duty.

[From "Church Editor Confessions" in McKeesport (Pa.) News]

The value of newspapers and magazines in spreading religious beliefs is a fact that is thoroughly recognized by the Christian Science church, and in practically every public library you will find copies of the official publications of this church. This is true at the local Carnegie Library, for Christian Science publications are to be found there in two languages. But you will search in vain for official publications of other churches. Now and then a stray religious paper will be found on the tables, but the Christian Science papers are always on hand. The followers of Mrs. Eddy show their faith in printer's ink, and use magazines and newspapers to spread their beliefs. This may account for the fact that the Christian Scientists are often of the educated classes, who perhaps have come in contact with Mrs. Eddy's teachings at the public library.

In passing it might be remarked that the Christian Science church publishes one of the best dailies of the country, namely, The Christian Science Monitor. Ask any newspaper man to name the five leading papers of the country and he will be sure to include the Monitor. It is not devoted to religious propaganda; there is one article in each issue—and only one—dealing with the Christian Science faith. The other columns are filled with news matter, well written and edited. The Monitor prints much news that the other papers do not have space for; and when there is any uplift movement going on, no matter what the denomination, plenty of space is given to the cause. Where other papers print excerpts of speeches, the Monitor prints them complete. Scandals, murders, divorce,—all such stuff is conspicuous by its absence. There is one complete page of editorials, dealing with present-day topics in a scholarly, thoughtful, and practical way. The newspaper has been called the poor man's college; if this be true, The Christian Science Monitor is the university, where a postgraduate course can be pursued. The Christian Science ideal of looking on the bright side is lived up to in the columns of the Monitor.

The circulation is not limited to members of the Christian Science faith. Thousands who hold tenets exactly opposed to Mrs. Eddy, read the Monitor because of its clear presentation of public problems and the great amount of correct information to be found in its columns. At Harvard University a quotation from the Monitor is accepted as true without further confirmation. The writer of this column, although not a Christian Scientist, reads the Monitor daily, and is glad to acknowledge that he is always broadened and informed by doing so. As far as I know there is no other sect that publishes a daily paper.

[W. Stuart Booth in Arvada (Col.) Enterprise]

Many members of the clergy are apparently stirred by the acceptance by Christian Science of the dual, and yet single, command of the Master to preach the gospel and heal the sick. Strangely enough, however, instead of first casting the beam out of their own eye, so that they might see clearly how to render full obedience to this command of Jesus, which he never divided or abrogated, they spend their time carping at those Christians who are humbly endeavoring to follow the Wayshower in both word and deed.

Although Christ Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," the so-called orthodox churches of today measure a man's Christianity by his creed rather than by his deeds. When one's idea of religion is expressed as a creed, it is but natural that he should attempt to measure everything by his own particular yardstick. This is a rather dangerous procedure, as one's mental vision is liable to have become so narrowed and perverted thereby that the true sense and appreciation of other teachings are not gained; and misapprehension inevitably leads to misrepresentation.

This seems to have been the case in Arvada recently, and for the benefit of those who desire the facts it is appropriate to quote Mrs. Eddy's words as found on page 497 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the Christian text-book: "We acknowledge and adore one supreme and infinite God. We acknowledge His Son, one Christ; the Holy Ghost or divine Comforter; and man in God's image and likeness. . . . We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Wayshower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death."

It is sad that any preacher of the gospel of Christ should so forget the Master's teachings as to traduce the name and character of one who has done so much for humanity as has Mary Baker Eddy. Through her spiritual devotion, consecration, and unselfishness, great numbers of people have been redeemed from suffering and sin, and are showing in their lives that "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Ridgewood (N. J.) Herald]

It is well known that the growth of the Christian Science movement has been attended by a clamor of opposition, and particularly by a din of clergy. Also, that the utmost efforts of those who have tried to stay the progress of Christian Science have been notable for their futility. For this lack of the desired effect there are at least two evident reasons. In the first place, Christian Science has always deserved whatever it has gained in the estimation of men. The vast majority of those who have sought its benefits according to its own rules have been convinced that Christian Science is all that it purports to be; and other people in a fair proportion to their opportunities for observation have recognized Christian Science as a wholesome influence in the lives of its adherents. In the second place, the opposition to Christian Science by the most of its adversaries has been of a character that does not deserve to succeed. This observation is illustrated in a typical manner by the letter from a clergyman which was published in the Herald.

One of his statements was as follows: "Christian Science says that marriage may be 'relinquished by mutual consent or legally dissolved.'" There were quotation marks around the last seven of these words, as though Mrs. Eddy had used them. The fact is, however, that Mrs. Eddy never said that marriage may be relinquished by mutual consent. What she did say is to be found on page 297 of "Miscellaneous Writings," and is as follows: "A man or woman, having voluntarily entered into wedlock, and accepted the claims of the marriage covenant, is held in Christian Science as morally bound to fulfil all the claims growing out of this contract, unless such claims are relinquished by mutual consent of both parties, or this contract is legally dissolved." In law and in morals there are certain claims or obligations incident to the marriage relation which may be relinquished by mutual consent. Any fair-minded reader can see that Mrs. Eddy referred to them, not to the contract of marriage, as the subject of relinquishment by mutual consent.

Another statement by the same minister of the gospel was as follows: "Christianity believes that the Bible was given to us by the inspiration of God, the Holy Spirit, and is profitable: Christian Science denies this." There is not the slightest basis or pretext for this reproach. Immediately following it there was a quotation from page 170 of Mrs. Eddy's "Miscellaneous Writings," inserted as though it supported the foregoing statement. The words quoted were these: "The material record of the Bible is no more important to our well-being than the history of Europe and America." The rest of the same sentence was not quoted, and is as follows: "But the spiritual application bears upon our eternal life. In short, Mrs. Eddy was simply speaking in favor of a spiritual rather than a material interpretation of the Scriptures. The sentence thus garbled was a part of a sermon by Mrs. Eddy in which she used the words "inspired pages" with reference to the Bible, and said that she found all that she preached within its pages.

[Charles W. J. Tennant in Middlesex County Times, Ealing, England]

In the report of a discourse in the Ealing Congregational Church, entitled "The Abolition of Death," the preacher is reported to have said: "Escape from death, pronounced possible by Mrs. Eddy through belief in the unreality of death, has been proved impossible, for she has died and her death contradicted what she taught in life. Had her teaching proved true, it would have been the greatest calamity that could have happened to the world."

The teaching of Christian Science with regard to death is in no way disproved by the passing away of Mrs. Eddy. The fact remains that eternal Life is God, who knows no death; a false sense of life may seem to die, but this does not in any way interfere with the immortal Life which is revealed through spiritual understanding. Death is the result of the belief of life in matter.

Mrs. Eddy writes on page 426 of Science and Health, "Sin brought death, and death will disappear with the disappearance of sin." For one so to gain in spirituality as to be able to overcome death would be of the greatest benefit to humanity, for such a demonstration would be the fulfilment of the words of our Master: "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." There are many examples given in the Bible of those who were spiritually minded enough to overcome death and lay off the flesh, as Jesus did at the ascension. These witnesses are a comfort and an incentive to others to strive to let that Mind be in them "which was also in Christ Jesus," and which alone can enable them to emulate his works. Christian Science is the Comforter which leadeth into all truth.

[John M. Tutt in Trenton (Mo.) Republican]

The report of a sermon delivered in Trenton by a revivalist contained certain allusions to Christian Science and to Mrs. Eddy which, to put it mildly, were as untrue as improper. The following statement is accredited to this preacher: "I am against anything that denies the divinity of Christ. Universalism and Christian Science are the product of the devil." It is of course out of keeping to align any other religious teaching with Christian Science, since it is fundamentally different from all others and is synonymous only with itself, that is, scientific Christianity, or exact knowledge of the laws of God in their application to humanity.

If Christian Science is the product of evil, Christianity is, for the teaching of Christian Science accords in every respect with Christ Jesus' claims concerning himself and his designation of what should constitute discipleship. With regard to what should mark a Christian, these statements of Jesus are conclusive: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils." "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Ecclesiastical critics of Christian Science who have not taken the trouble to understand, would do well to consider Jesus' parable of the traveler who fell among thieves, and being left helpless was ministered to not by the professional theologian, not by the dogmatist, who seeing the victim's plight refused the needed succor, but by the despised Samaritan, whose compassion was real and whose Christianity was practically expressed in deeds.

The implied charge that Christian Science denies the divinity of Christ, calls for a more explicit statement, since the truth or untruth of the charge wholly depends upon what is understood thereby. Christian Science teaches that Christ Jesus was the Son of God, and hence truly divine. On page 583 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, we find this definition of Christ: "The divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error."

Christian Science does not, however, agree at all with the teaching that Jesus was God. Aside from the evident illogicalness of such a dogma, there stand the insuperable facts that the Scriptures do not teach it, and that the words or acts of Jesus himself fail to confirm it. He consistently claimed for himself sonship with God, and vehemently disclaimed all attempts to deify him. "Why callest thou me good?" he remonstrated, "there is none good but one, that is, God."

[Lloyd B. Coate in Kenton (Ohio) Democrat]

Our critic states: "The Bible says, 'It is appointed unto men once to die'; but Mrs. Eddy says, 'There is no death.'" (Science and Health, p. 331.) If this man understood Mrs. Eddy's writings he would know her statement refers to God's perfect, spiritual idea, even His own image and likeness, and not to mortal man. Those who ridicule the teaching of eternal life oppose the teaching of Jesus the Christ, for he was the greatest teacher and demonstrator of eternal life the world has ever known. Christian Scientists are striving to follow in his footsteps. The healing of hundreds of thousands of people of all manner of sickness and sin through Christian Science is proof that Christian Scientists are in a measure grasping the truth taught by Christ Jesus. Mrs. Eddy never boasted that she would not pass through "the valley of the shadow of death." She urged Christians to have faith in God. On page 43 of "Unity of Good" she says that it will require "time and immense spiritual growth" to triumph over death in the way Jesus taught and commanded.

The old hackneyed statement that Christian Science is neither Christian nor scientific avails nothing, for Christian Scientists are daily proving that it is Christian because it is Christlike, and that it is Science because its teachings are based upon demonstrable truth and are in full accord with the definitions of science given by lexicographers.

Our critic refers to a statement by Mrs. Eddy that "man is incapable of sin, sickness, and death" (Science and Health, p. 475), while the Bible says, "Christ died for our sins." The man referred to by Mrs. Eddy in this sentence is God's image and likeness, and not a sinful mortal. For a full explanation of Jesus and the Christ we would refer your readers to pages 332 to 334 of Science and Health. In speaking of "the Son's duality," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 334: "This dual personality of the unseen and the seen, the spiritual and material, the eternal Christ and the corporeal Jesus manifest in flesh, continued until the Master's ascension, when the human, material concept, or Jesus, disappeared, while the spiritual self, or Christ, continues to exist in the eternal order of divine Science, taking away the sins of the world, as the Christ has always done, even before the human Jesus was incarnate to mortal eyes."

Christian Science teaches that nothing but Christ, Truth, can destroy the awful illusion of sin, sickness, and death, and enable mankind to put off the mortal, or the old man, and put on the immortal,—the spiritual, real sense of existence.

[Editorial in Ottawa (Ontario) Citizen]

The Citizen prints a contribution by an official representative—the committee on publication for Ontario—of the Christian Science church, the world's youngest Christian denomination. As the circumstances in connection with our acceptance of this statement are exceptional, an explanation here may not be considered inappropriate. It seems that earlier in the year the editor of The Christian Guardian, the periodical organ of one of the strongest Christian denominations in Canada, felt impelled or justified, in accordance with his interpretation of Christian practice, to print two articles grossly misrepresenting the sincere religious convictions of a comparatively small though growing body of his Christian fellow citizens. The attack, it is pointed out, was entirely unprovoked, unless the practice of attending quietly to one's own business while permitting others to exercise the same right can be properly construed as a provocation.

When a reply, written by an authorized representative of the Christian church attacked, was offered to The Christian Guardian and publication requested, the editor, no doubt still in accordance with his understanding of the Sermon on the Mount, declined to print the defense. Most professed Christians, it is to be presumed, regardless of their church affiliations, will find it difficult to approve of the action of the editor of The Christian Guardian. Having been unable to resist the temptation to print an attack on his misconception of Christian Science, ordinary British fair play, not to mention the Christian ethics the Guardian professes to demonstrate, would seem to demand the publication of the reply of the defendant. When these circumstances were presented to the Citizen and a request was made that the defense referred to be given space in this paper in order that at least some of those who had read the Guardian's attack might be given the opportunity, denied them by the editor of the Guardian, of reading "the other side," the Citizen gladly agreed to do so.

[This article was written by Mrs. Eddy in 1910. Its message is of vital importance to every Christian Scientist today.]

Principle and Practice

MARY BAKER EDDY

THE nature and position of mortal mind are the opposite of immortal Mind. The so-called mortal mind is belief and not understanding. Christian Science requires understanding instead of belief; it is based on a fixed eternal and divine Principle, wholly apart from mortal conjecture; and it must be understood, otherwise it cannot be correctly accepted and demonstrated.

The inclination of mortal mind is to receive Christian Science through a belief instead of the understanding, and this inclination prevails like an epidemic on the body; it inflames mortal mind and weakens the intellect, but this so-called mortal mind is wholly ignorant of this fact, and so cherishes its mere faith in Christian Science.

The sick, like drowning men, catch at whatever drifts toward them. The sick are told by a faith-Scientist, "I can heal you, for God is all, and you are well, since God creates neither sin, sickness, nor death." Such statements result in the sick either being healed by their faith in what you tell them—which heals only as a drug would heal, through belief—or in no effect whatever. If the faith-healer succeeds in securing (kindling) the belief of the patient in his own recovery, the practitioner will have performed a faith-cure which he mistakenly pronounces Christian Science.

In this very manner some students of Christian Science have accepted, through faith, a divine Principle, God, as their savior, but they have not understood this Principle sufficiently well to fulfill the Scriptural command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel." "Heal the sick." It is the healer's understanding of the operation of the divine Principle, and his application thereof, which heals the sick, just as it is one's understanding of the principle of mathematics which enables him to demonstrate its rules.

Christian Science is not a faith-cure, and unless human faith be distinguished from scientific healing, Christian Science will again be lost from the practice of religion as it was soon after the period of our great Master's scientific teaching and practice. Preaching without practice of the divine Principle of man's being has not, in nineteen hundred years, resulted in demonstrating this Principle. Preaching without the truthful and consistent practice of your statements will destroy the success of Christian Science.

The Alert Sentinel

A SOLDIER on guard at a particular place has the definite responsibility of challenging with his "Who goes there?" every person who comes,—allowing to pass those who have the right of way, evidenced by their giving the password, and checking or resisting those who have no right to pass, or giving the alarm to the whole garrison in case of an attack. Two words used by the apostle Peter are peculiarly applicable to one on "sentry go." He says, "Be sober, be vigilant." Vigilance is forbearance from sleep at ordinary hours for rest, and sobriety is forbearance from drunkenness at all hours. The reliable sentinel maintains an alert mind. He is vigilantly attentive to duty, his faculties unimpaired by drunkenness or drowsiness. Upon his faithfulness rests the safety of the trusting camp.

The Manual (Art. VIII, Sect. 6) indicates that each one of us must be a sentinel on guard to defend consciousness from intoxication and sloth. It is entitled "Alertness to Duty," and proclaims the necessity for daily defense against the aggressive mental suggestion which would poison and intoxicate the mentality till unreason and perversity prevail; or bring on self-pleased stupor, wherein the victim can both forget and neglect "his duty to God, to his Leader, and to mankind." Any one who intends to be a Christian Scientist must understand these things. If he were joining any other religious denomination, it would be sufficient to express agreement with certain formulated beliefs or doctrines, or agree to take part in certain recurring ceremonies; but becoming a Christian Scientist means more than a mental concession. It means the whole life consecrated: it means enlistment on the side of Principle; and from the moment of enlistment the new soldier of Christ must fight all that expresses enmity to Principle,—in other words, the carnal mind which "is enmity against God." Where is the battle ground? It is within, because the battle of error is against the coming of the kingdom. "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you."

Is victory assured? It is assured, because already won by "the firstborn among many brethren." Speaking of the struggle preceding the victory, Mrs. Eddy says of Christ Jesus: "Forsaken by all whom he had blessed, this faithful sentinel of God at the highest post of power, charged with the grandest trust of heaven, was ready to be transformed by the renewing of the infinite Spirit. He was to prove that the Christ is not subject to material conditions, but is above the reach of human wrath, and is able, through Truth, Life, and Love, to triumph over sin, sickness, death, and the grave" (Science and Health, p. 49).

Now, to guard a mentality and keep it pure, so that it is sincere and stainless, a transparency for Truth to shine through, is far better than St. Anthony's wrestlings, or Luther's contests with the devil, which depend upon the fact that the tempter has been admitted. Better far the scientific way, which admits only good as reality, and, resting in Truth, finds therein defense from every aggressive lie and liar. The more the worker is a man of truth, the more vigor he has. He prays, "Lead us not into temptation," and expects to walk the upward way devoid of any necessity for giving place to the devil. The tentative Christian Scientist opens a door to temptation, and dallies with mental suggestion. Curiosity makes him think he will miss something if he does not listen to the story of error and learn the ins and outs of a material method. Then when the need for prompt action comes, he is drowsy and heavy with the mesmerism, and becomes the victim, not the victor, unless he vigorously protests, and as a protestant wins his freedom.

This periodical was established by Mary Baker Eddy in 1898, and "entitled Sentinel, intended to hold guard over Truth, Life, and Love" (Miscellany, p. 353). Fulfilling its mission, it will help each earnest-minded reader to sentinel his own life.

The Ark

THE subject of the ark as it appears in Scripture and as it is explained in our Leader's writings, is of deep interest to students of Christian Science. In their earlier religious experiences most of them were accustomed to think of the ark in a very literal way; but in the light of Truth it is seen to be a spiritual idea, in which we may find refuge from all the storms of error. In the Bible the first mention of the ark is made in Genesis, where the account of Noah's protection during the flood is set forth. We also read in Exodus that when Moses was an infant his mother made an ark of bulrushes in which the child was placed, and committed to the unceasing protection of divine Love, so that no harm could befall him. There were cruel human foes on the shore and fierce crocodiles in the waters; but this mother in Israel, even at that early day, trusted her child to divine Truth and Love, and God did not fail her. If we glance briefly into the record, we shall find that the child was claimed by Pharaoh's daughter and brought up by her, and that his education in all the learning of that time was apparently necessary in order to fit him for meeting its representatives at a later day, when he sought to free his people from Egyptian bondage.

The idea is again presented to us as the "ark of the covenant," which is described in several of the books of the Bible, the ark which accompanied the children of Israel on their wanderings and at length found a permanent resting place in the temple at Jerusalem. The fact that it was regarded with superstitious awe by many of the people, need not prevent us from seeing its deep significance as a symbol of the divine idea; and when this is once apprehended in Christian Science, it makes luminous all that we read about the ark in the Bible, and also shows us how we may find safety in the spiritual idea, which was symbolized in the varied experiences of the Hebrew people. On page 581 of Science and Health our revered Leader thus defines ark: "Safety; the idea, or reflection, of Truth, proved to be as immortal as its Principle; the understanding of Spirit, destroying belief in matter." She goes on, "The ark indicates temptation overcome and followed by exaltation."

It is well for us to remember that the symbolic form of the ark, as expressed materially, is of little consequence, although this met the varying needs of humanity at different times. When, however, we apply our understanding of divine Truth, we shall discover that every presentation of the subject shows us how we may find refuge and safety in time of need. In the ninth chapter of the epistle to the Hebrews we are told about the tabernacle which is "the Holiest of all; which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant." All of these symbols relate themselves without difficulty to the working out of our human problems, and we rejoice in knowing that our manna comes to us fresh every day from the rich provision of divine Love, and that it means for us, in the proportion of our assimilation of it, eternal life.

After the deluge Noah was assured by ever present wisdom that a flood of waters would never again cover the earth; but as the history of the human race unfolds we find distinct reference to another sort of deluge, that of fire, which has undoubtedly come upon mankind at this very hour. Some of the Scripture writers saw this as meaning the entire destruction of everything on the human plane; but Isaiah, whose clear spiritual vision never lost sight of the divine idea, wrote: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." In his second epistle St. Peter tells us of the coming of this second deluge, that of fire; but with calm confidence he also tells of the protection of those who love and obey God, declaring that "the Lord is not slack concerning his promise." He does say that there will be a great consuming of all materiality, when even "the elements shall melt with fervent heat;" but he hastens to add that in spite of this we should "look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." In an old hymn we find these deeply significant lines:—

> And when the waves of ire
> Again the earth shall fill,
> The ark shall ride the sea of fire
> And rest on Zion's hill.

In this second deluge those who understand the divine Principle of Jesus' teachings will read with calm assurance his words respecting this latter-day experience. He bids us watch and pray always that we may escape the things that shall come to pass on the mortal plane, and that we may lift thought above the "surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life," but he at the same time says, "There shall not an hair of your head perish." On page 188 of Miscellany our revered Leader says, "Your ark of the covenant will not be brought out of the city of David, but out of 'the secret place of the most High,' whereof the Psalmist sang, even the omniscience of omnipotence." Be this forever our ark of the covenant, our place of refuge!

ANNIE M. KNOTT.

Labor

THE habit of using the term labor to mean merely manual work springs from the materialism of the age. Therefore the troubles which have grown up around what is termed labor can be corrected only by spiritual understanding. All work is originally mental because it requires thought at the source. There can be no absolute line of separation between the man who plans the city and him who digs the trench. They are both thinking beings, and if they stopped thinking the spade would drop from the hand of the one as surely as the pen from the hand of the other. Antagonism between the workshop and the office, wherever it exists, is based upon the supposition that the work done in the first is manual and in the second mental. The truth is that as the world moves today all work is becoming more mental. Machinery performs what seems to require intelligence, but the intelligence is not in the machine, it is expressed by man.

From the supposition that some kinds of work can be merely manual, there has arisen a certain disdain of labor on the one hand and a natural resentment on the part of the laborer. The workshop has even been pushed to overvalue its services in order, as it supposed, to safeguard its rights against the office. Hence the labor troubles which the unscrupulous mental manipulator has sought to use to his advantage in creating internal difficulties in order that external duties might be neglected. All men are really workers to some extent, and should be coworkers; the lines between them should not be those of separation but of coordination, and as their work becomes increasingly mental, as it inevitably must, they should find their unity in Mind, not in matter, and thus establish the brotherhood of man.

All honest work has its place and should have its reward, for "the laborer is worthy of his hire," but the increase comes only with the understanding that God is Mind and Spirit and man mental and spiritual. Looking to matter for wages fills the hand with the wages of sin, which is death; looking to Spirit for supply keeps the water of life ever flowing and fresh day by day. Jesus warned his generation against laboring for matter when he said, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you." What can endure unto everlasting life except that which is by nature eternal? Christian Science reveals Truth, Life, and Love as substance and "incapable of discord and decay" (Science and Health, p. 468).

Surprising as it may seem to the average man in factory or counting room, when he receives his pay at the end of the week or month he is really receiving in kind. If he has been conscious of mental or spiritual activity, he receives in return of that substance which is "the evidence of things not seen," and so is imperishable; if he reaches out for mere matter, his wages will be expressed in decay and destruction. In proportion as all workers become metaphysicians, who labor not for the meat which perisheth, will the so-called labor troubles cease and Mind displace matter.

Moreover, with peculiar perversity the rights and status of woman have been continually overlooked in apportioning the rewards for work well done. As the free woman of inspiration is the greatest producer of true substance on earth today, her reward should be the greatest. Until her share is rightly settled the world's division of profit and loss will continue futile and its reckoning will have to be done over and over again. The right woman is today the supreme metaphysician, rewarding the race with riches untold. Christian Science as revealed by Mary Baker Eddy is ready to pay the wages of eternal life to receptive men and women, to fill every hand with the word of Truth and every heart with the spontaneity of Love, thus settling all labor disputes and inaugurating the dawn of a new era in which work will not be labor but play.

WASHINGTON.—The outstanding feature of the year's work was the session of the state legislature, lasting from Jan. 8 to March 8, 1917. The cordial reception given our literature by members of that body, and the advanced stand taken by it in maintaining the religious liberties of the people, unimpaired by medical encroachments, are noted. During the year there was an average number of articles in newspapers requiring correction. There has been a definite lessening of active hostility to Christian Science in these published references to it, many of them being intended to be somewhat friendly, and being chiefly erroneous in that they confuse Christian Science with other teachings that have little if anything in common with it. The newspapers published thirty articles written by this committee during the year as a means of correcting such misstatements.

ALTON, ILL.—The Christian Scientists, who have been holding meetings in the Chapter House on Beacon Street for five or more years, have negotiated the purchase of the building on Tenth Street back of the Randall homestead at Tenth and Henry Streets, and will use it as their church home. It was stated today [July 14] that the organization has the money to pay cash for the property. It plans to do some remodeling, and within ninety days, at the most, to occupy the building.—Alton Telegraph.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—On the site of the old structure it is proposed to erect a new edifice to meet the needs of the rapidly growing congregation of First Church of Christ, Scientist. The auditorium will have a seating capacity of five hundred, and the Sunday school room is designed to accommodate some five hundred children.

New Rochelle Standard.

LEXINGTON, MASS.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, on Forest Street, Lexington, which is attended by large numbers from that town, Arlington, and Waltham, is to be enlarged and improved, work having started yesterday [July 7]. The plans call for enlarging the auditorium of the church by building an addition at the rear.—The Boston Post.

QUINCY, ILL.—Members of First Church of Christ, Scientist, were pleased yesterday [July 8], when officials of the congregation announced that all of the debt on the church edifice had been paid off. The building cost twenty-five thousand dollars and was erected about four years ago. On Sept. 2 it will be dedicated with appropriate services.—Quincy Herald.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, COL.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Christian Science Society have united, and in future will be known as First Church of Christ, Scientist. All services will be held at the new edifice on the corner of Tenth Street and Cooper Avenue.

WAUKEGAN, ILL.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, has received permission to hold services Sunday afternoons at the Naval Station, Great Lakes, Ill. The first service was held July 29.

SUPERIOR, WIS.—The edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, was dedicated yesterday [July 15].—Superior Telegram.

The Lectures

SHEFFIELD, ENGLAND (First Church).—John Sidney Braithwaite, lecturer; introduced by the Rev. Charles M. Shaw, who said in part:—

As an introduction to the lecture this evening it may be of interest if I tell something of my own experience in Christian Science. I have been identified with the Christian Science cause for about seven and one half years. I had no leaning toward this teaching, but on the contrary had strong antagonism toward what I believed it to be, and on more than one occasion publicly denounced it. During the later years of my ministerial life I had much uneasiness about the creeds and practices of my church; in brief, they did not justify themselves in face of the necessities of men. About this time Christian Science was brought to my notice, and chiefly on account of the friend who mentioned it to me, who had by this means been healed of long standing insomnia, I was induced to read the literature. At once I was surprised and interested; it was so different from what I had expected.

For about two years I was drawn on, step by step, most reluctantly, for I was unwilling to break away from the church in which I had been brought up; but finally I was convinced that Christian Science is the only possible interpretation of the teaching of Jesus. I therefore left my church, not because it was easy or pleasant to do so, but because I could not do otherwise. Christian Science has quickened my spiritual life to a degree I had not before experienced; it has settled all my intellectual difficulties about the Bible and faith; it has given me much saner, broader views of life, and has delivered me from many minor physical troubles which had long hampered me.

SCRANTON, PA. (First Church).—Bliss Knapp, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Cole B. Price, who said in part:—

These times are times of testing and of trial for the whole world. The old order is changing, yielding to the new. Forms of government, policies, philosophies, are being tried by the refiner's fire, and purged of everything which cannot stand the test of truth and goodness. Every man feels more than ever before the need of something to cling to in the midst of all this turmoil, the need of a religion which in theory and in practice is synonymous with truth and love. This religion must be modern, meeting present-day, every-day needs, satisfying the modern spirit of keen, scientific questioning. It must be as ancient as "the Ancient of days," because it must be true; and there is no new truth, only new expression of truth.

Christian Scientists know that they have found such a religion—a religion which is potent, immediate, available, which offers logical answers to their questions, which is natural and clear, true, loving, and good.

Scranton Times.

PASADENA, CAL. (First Church).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Vestina Scobey Doolittle, who said in part:—

Those who heard the message of Jesus the Christ and followed in the way he pointed out, had the joy of proving that his word was true. Because for a few hundred years only this trust was faithfully guarded, the availability of the vital teaching that meets every need seemed to be lost sight of for centuries. But it was not really lost. Through prayerful study of the Bible Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, found the practicality of the teachings of Jesus and restored it to the world in Christian Science. She was humbly grateful for the revelation, and we are deeply grateful to her. She found Christian Science in the Bible, and her great desire was that all the world should find it there, too. For humanity's help she wrote "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and established the various activities of the Christian Science church, including a board of lectureship, that all who hungered for peace, joy, health, the fruits of the Spirit, might learn how to bring them forth.—Pasadena Star News.

MUSKEGON, MICH. (First Church).—Frank Bell, lecturer; introduced by William E. Pew, who said in part:—

There are so many ologies, creeds, and religions presented to the seeker for truth that one scarcely knows which to follow; but the Scriptures tell us to "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Christian Science stands this test. The proofs are manifest not only in the healing of sickness and disease but in the healing of lack, discouragement, ingratitude, of hate, malice, and envy; bringing joy and peace to the human consciousness, as countless thousands in all walks of life are willing to testify.

HAMILTON, OHIO (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Robert M. Sohngen, president of the Board of Education, who said in part:—

I am not a member of the Christian Science church, and I am only acquainted with its doctrines in a general way. It has been my observation, however, that its membership is made up from a very large part of the forward looking, good citizenship of the state and nation. I know that its doctrines inculcate cheerfulness and helpfulness; I feel certain that fear has no place in its teachings. Simple faith, a world-wide charity, and the betterment of the conditions of men and women everywhere is a part of its religion. It must be a wonderful experience to be enlisted in such a service.—Hamilton Republican-News.

Testimonies of Healing

I wish to bear testimony to what Christian Science has done for me in the last year. I was captain of a British man-of-war, which was torpedoed by a German submarine in the southeastern Mediterranean. When the ship gave her last plunge, I dived overboard, but was immediately sucked back again under the foc'sle awning, some twenty feet under water. I had no sense of fear whatever: my heart seemed full of love, and the knowledge that God was with me even in the depths of the sea. This kept all my faculties clear, and I was able to dive deeper still, so as to clear the awning and regain the surface practically none the worse. The submarine came up and made us all prisoners, took us in to the coast of Cyrenaica, and turned us over to the Senussi—a bloodthirsty and ultrafanatical Muhammadan sect, to whom human life is of no more account than that of a sheep.

For nineteen weeks we were prisoners in the Libyan Desert, exposed to every privation,—naked, hungry, barefooted, sick, burnt by the sun, and chilled by the rain and the bitter cold of desert nights,—our lives always in great peril. After four months I escaped, and covered half the hundred miles of waterless desert which separated us from our friends. I was recaptured, and was in extreme peril of being instantly murdered; but I was preserved from death, although I was flogged with an elephant hide whip, stoned, and spat upon; but remembering him who suffered without a cause, I was hardly conscious of pain.

At the end of five months, the country being blockaded, the last of the provisions ran out: for some time we had been on a quarter of a pound of food a day and were in a state of great weakness and reduced to skin and bone. Apparently only a few days more of life remained, as nothing human could help us. We realized that God was our only help, and the inevitable answer came. The British forces, burning an Arab camp, discovered a letter of mine written to the Senussi commandante two months previously. It stated our condition and the name of the Wells where we were. The British captured a prisoner who had been there thirty years before, and with him as a guide they covered with armored cars and ambulances one hundred and twenty miles of trackless desert in the enemy's country; found, rescued, fed, and clothed us, and returned another one hundred and twenty miles—all within twenty hours. During our captivity there were no medical comforts of any kind, and I believe I am correct in saying I was the only one who never had dysentery or any kind of illness: five died of starvation. My Christian Science friends were working for me all the time I was a captive, and the wife of another prisoner was also a Scientist.

I have been interested in Christian Science for some six years now, though I have swerved many times from the straight and narrow way and have much error still to overcome. But this I know, that it appeals equally to my head and my heart; that though I fall, I am never utterly cast down; that I am happier than almost any one I know; that when I humble myself under the hand of almighty God, and cast out my human sense of personal ability, physique, and so forth, and realize the real source of all good—then and then only do I get my answer.

I have never known sickness since I was a child, but I have been rather deaf for fifteen years: recently I have been able to hear my wrist-watch easily, a thing I had not done for years. This is the result of Christian Science treatment: an aural specialist told me years ago it could never get better but would gradually get worse. I thank God that up to the present I have not been the means of taking any human life, but that I have been able to serve my country equally by saving lives.

RUPERT S. GUNTLIN-WILLIAMS, Captain R. N.

I thought it was just curiosity which made me look into Christian Science, as I had heard some very absurd statements made by those who were not acquainted with the teachings, but now I know that divine Love was leading me. I was at that time practising as medical nurse, and had been doing so for two years, which was probably why anything connected with healing work attracted my attention.

I will not attempt to describe the mixed feelings with which I read Science and Health,—how often I was sure that it was quite wrong, yet reading on was as often compelled by its very logic to see that it was true, and consequently to know that it was my own belief which was wrong. It was very hard to grow out of those beliefs, and I wish to express my gratitude for the testimonies, which helped me very much. They seemed to say, "By their fruits ye shall know them," when doubt as to the truth of this religion tried to creep in.

I shall always remember with deep gratitude the loving-kindness I met at the Christian Science reading room in the weeks that followed. I felt I could not continue my chosen profession, so explained matters to my patient's wife and returned home. Four months later I was married; but serious trouble seemed to have arisen previously, and it was due to Christian Science that the solution was so happily worked out.

Then after two months my husband went to France with his regiment, and again and again have I had cause to thank God for His goodness and that Christian Science taught me how to banish worry. I can truly say I have not worried about him, because I have been able to realize his absolute safety as a child of God. Christian Science has taken away all sense of separation, which I know from experience would have been very great had this teaching not changed my thought about it.

When our little girl was born I asked for Christian Science treatment, with excellent results. I really felt too well to stay in bed, but the rest of the family were not Scientists, so I went gently. Although to mortal sense it seemed necessary for me to have stitches taken, I refused to submit to it, saying that Christian Science was equal to even that occasion—and I was right, for the healing is perfect. The baby is a healthy, happy child, and was helped over vaccination beautifully. A bowel difficulty has also been entirely overcome for her through Science. Last summer I was compelled to ask for treatment for hemorrhoids, and my gratitude for relief from that painful condition can better be imagined than described.

Every day I have cause for rejoicing and gratitude for the freedom which Christian Science brings, and I do thank God that this truth is given to us through the faithful work and life of our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so truly followed our Master, Christ Jesus.

EDITH HILL, Hanwell, London, W., England.

From my earliest recollection I wondered why those who were supposed to know God were not able to turn to Him in times of sickness, want, or distress, and find their prayers answered as did Jesus' disciples and the early Christians. The Bible was read in our home every Sunday, though with no explanation of the saving power of divine Love; but the hope that God would at some time and in some way be revealed to us was never quite lost.

Arriving at womanhood I found myself many thousand miles from home and loved ones, in poor health and with other problems so great that there seemed scarcely a ray of light. In this seeming extremity thought was constantly reaching out for God. I had been treated by several physicians for stomach disorder, nervous trouble, headaches, and other diseases, but with only temporary relief. I had also followed rigid systems of dieting, so that I was constantly longing for food, but dared not eat it. At this point a friend, seeing my fear of food and of almost everything else, placed in my hands a copy of the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. As soon as I began to read this book it was very clear to me that here was the truth for which I had so longed.

I read until late in the night, forgetting the law made by the doctors that I must not read in the evening. This was repeated daily for some time, but from the first day there was no return of headaches. Fear of food also vanished; I began to eat everything and experienced no bad results. Nervousness likewise disappeared, and the nights were passed in restful sleep. The truth seemed so wonderful that for days I scarcely laid Science and Health down, and with Jacob of old I said, "Surely the Lord is in this place," as one error after another disappeared before the light of spiritual understanding.

After a little time a painful internal trouble made its appearance and I was obliged to ask help of a practitioner; but the healing was quickly effected, and the spiritual uplift that followed will always be remembered. The faithful practitioner pointed out clearly why it had been necessary for me to ask help at that time. When Science and Health was returned to my friend I had allowed a sense of limitation to prevent me from purchasing a copy for myself, so was left for several days without this necessary spiritual food and unprepared to meet the error when it made its appearance.

Since my first healing in Science seventeen years ago it has never been necessary to absent myself from my duties on account of ill health. During these years I have found that our Leader's writings, together with the Bible, are the most precious possessions on earth, for in them we find that which "feeds thought with the bread of Life" (Science and Health, p. 222). Daily my heart goes out in gratitude to our revered Leader for her life of devotion to the uplift of humanity, and I know that this gratitude can only be expressed in an earnest effort to show the world that Christian Science is indeed the religion which Christ Jesus lived and practiced.

ELSIE E. EDWARDS, Somerville, Mass.

I have been a student of Christian Science nearly four years, and although I have not made the progress or had the marvelous results expressed by many others, and feel that I lack much of having come to the full requirements of a true Christian Scientist, yet I have been marvelously blessed, physically, morally, socially, and in the business affairs of daily life.

When Christian Science first came to me I felt myself one of the most wretched of men, being in the midst of several years of business failures, separated from home ties and friends by seemingly hopeless discord and with no ray of hopeful outlook ahead. I was broken in health and courage, with but little faith left in the goodness of God or man. Life seemed so hopeless that I longed for the end of it all.

Under these conditions I first had Christian Science brought to my attention in a way to create some interest in the study of it. One of the good friends who had kept me supplied with Christian Science literature persuaded me to attend a Sunday service, and soon afterward I went to a Wednesday evening meeting. Then I began to study more earnestly, and before long became a regular attendant at all the services. My thoughts were gradually led into new channels, the world and daily life began to look brighter, business improved, and new friends came into my life. I began to feel a new faith in and a warmer feeling of loving nearness to my creator. With these spiritual and material advancements my health greatly improved. I had constantly resorted to medical treatment for various physical ills, but soon relied wholly on the healing power of Truth.

For nearly four years now I have not taken any medicine, and though I have not been wholly free from physical ills, I have enjoyed better health than in over twenty years. Best of all, I have never enjoyed such peace of mind and love toward an ever present Saviour, and good will to my fellow man. I have been wonderfully blessed in many ways through Christian Science, and have fully demonstrated to my own satisfaction that in no other way can that complete peace, health, and happiness in all that makes life worth living, be found more perfectly than in its teachings. I truly and sincerely thank God, and am grateful to Mrs. Eddy for Christian Science.

G. WILLARD SHEAR, Delta, Ohio.

I send this testimony in gratitude for my healing in Christian Science. This teaching is helping me in my daily problems, and is showing me how to uncover error and destroy it with the truth. It has taught me that God is a very present help in time of need. I used to think it was not right to trouble God with our small problems, as He had enough to do to attend to the larger ones; but Christian Science has taught me that God is with us all the time, and that He is not a person sitting on a throne judging our every act, but is divine Love, Life, Truth, and intelligence, and we only have to know the truth of His creation to be free.

I have had many demonstrations of the power of Truth. Glasses that had been worn for sixteen years were quickly laid aside as a result of reading Science and Health. I did not begin the study of Christian Science for physical healing, but to get a better understanding of God and the Bible. I was raised in a so-called orthodox church, my father being a minister, but could not get the right understanding of God until I began the study of Science and Health in connection with the Bible. This has brought me the peace that passeth understanding, the "pearl of great price," and I am indeed thankful to God, and grateful to His faithful follower, Mrs. Eddy, for showing us the way to Him. She does not ask us to believe, but to prove the truth in our daily lives.

Christian Science teaches us to rely upon God in every need, and helps us to bear our sorrows. I have been studying Science for several years, and feel that I am gaining in understanding each day.

I was in a hopeless condition and on the verge of despair when Christian Science was recommended to me. This subject was entirely new to me at that time, but when through a few testimonies of healing I obtained knowledge of the fact that the divine power is an ever present help, I at once clung to this new hope and with the help of a kind practitioner was speedily healed. I did not seem to be run down physically, but was mentally; indeed I was very sick in mind. I suffered with sleeplessness, with a sense of uneasiness, of continuous fear, with a dull pain in the back, and was subject to crying fits. My work at the store was given up, as I seemed unable to devote to it the necessary attention, patience, and energy of purpose. A trip lasting several months, and various "cures," followed by sojourns of longer duration in the country, brought no relief from this dreadful condition.

At a hospital for nervous diseases, where I had presented myself for examination, the physicians recommended a two weeks cure at the same institution and then a prolonged stay at a sanitarium somewhere in the country. Although they did not tell me so, I gathered from their conversation that they feared a serious development of my mental condition. Not having had the slightest idea as to such an eventuality I was now greatly alarmed. The thought of such a terrifying prospect resulted in a decided change for the worse, when in my great need another physician recommended to me Christian Science as the best means of recovering my health.

After the first treatment from a kind practitioner I went home, and for the first time in a long while slept from five to six hours without interruption. On the following day I was able to attend to my duties at the store. Whenever it seemed as if I could not perform work of one kind or another, I would think along the lines indicated by the practitioner—that with God's help all things are possible; and so it proved to be. All this meant a hard struggle, but after a few weeks I felt strong and firm enough to continue on the way of truth without further direct treatment from the practitioner. The dull pain in the back disappeared, regular sleep and appetite returned, and instead of fear and worry, contentment and happiness prevailed.

Over a year has elapsed since that time, and I am striving upward, higher and higher toward the light, in the firm resolve to continue to the best of my ability upon the road on which I have started. I am most deeply grateful to God for the many proofs of His love which have been revealed to me through Christian Science, and am indeed thankful to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, as well as to all who, laboring in the service of Christian Science, are benefiting mankind in so large a measure.

With deep gratitude I send this testimony of my healing through Christian Science. All my life I had been bound by the belief of having inherited a weak constitution, and in August, 1915, I came home from normal school to mortal sense suffering from a nervous breakdown. Christian Science was brought to my notice for the second time, and this time I was ready to relinquish the binding beliefs and become receptive to the healing power of Truth. After having treatment for a few weeks I was healed, and on returning to college in the fall was able not only to take the regular schedule but to do extra work besides. I realize now that our only true inheritance is from God, and that this understanding releases us from mortal bondage. At the close of the year's term good health, a high record, and many beautiful demonstrations of Truth gave proof of what had been done for me through Christian Science.

One experience by which I profited I hope will reach others struggling with the same problem. As the close of school drew near, the rush and worry of final examinations seemed to be manifested by all the students. On the last day in which it was possible to finish the term theme I lost the old limited sense of time, and realized the here and now in loving service to my fellow students. The suggestion that time was too limited to spend in helping others was met by the peaceful assurance that in God's kingdom time is unlimited and life eternal. Late in the afternoon I sat down to write my theme, and never had the thoughts and the proper language come so quickly and easily. I spent less than half the time ordinarily devoted to this task, yet my paper was returned to me with few mistakes and the highest grade I had ever received. My desire to be governed in all things by the Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," was strengthened by this demonstration.

A fear of mathematical examinations was overcome with one treatment. Even from a mortal viewpoint this fear had no foundation, for I had kept up thoroughly with the work, but as a result of the treatment peace and calmness came over me, for I was made to know that the one divine Mind reflected through me did the work. I did not have to make a single correction in working out the solutions, and when the paper was finished I knew that the problems were perfectly solved, so I was not surprised later to learn of the perfect grade. My heart is filled with gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, as the Discoverer of this glorious truth.

Ten years ago I became a victim of nerve trouble which later terminated in neuritis. I took treatment from medical men, bathed in and drank medicated waters, but still the trouble continued, and finally I was forced to give up business entirely.

When my attention was called to Christian Science I was a wreck, suffering from a severe attack of herpes as well as acute neuritis. I asked for help in Christian Science, and after the first treatment the craving for alcohol and chloroform was gone. In three days the skin trouble and neuritis were overcome, in eight days all desire for tobacco had left me, and on the twelfth day I ran upstairs two steps at a time, something I had not done since the early days of my trouble. All this was a revelation. I had been a druggist for twenty years, and here was a cure brought about by Christian Science where drugs and medical science had failed.

Sixteen months have passed since my healing. Domestic happiness has entered what was formerly a home of discord, financial entanglements have been straightened out, and spiritual enlightenment and understanding now fill the thought that was formerly turbulent and cloudy. Words cannot express my deep gratitude to the revered Founder of Christian Science, for this Science has done all for me. It has taught me how to discern the real from the unreal, the true from the false,—the incompatibility of good and evil, love and hate, light and darkness.

Today a joint study of the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy gives peace to both mind and body, whereas my former study of the sciences and philosophies gave me nothing but discord and misery.

A. F. GLEDHILL, Captain C. E. F., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

Four years ago I accepted Christian Science earnestly. Up to that time I was a source of misery to myself and every one around me. The doctor said he could do nothing more for me, unless I would agree to undergo an operation. This I would not consent to, knowing that to mortal sense I was too weak to survive such an ordeal. I had eaten only three meals in sixty-five days, and during this period had not been able to sleep more than ten minutes at a time.

Previous to this I had tried Christian Science treatment and it had helped me, but I was not ready to leave all for God. Man's extremity was, however, God's opportunity, and again a practitioner was called. After treatment was given me I went to sleep, and awakened only twice that night. The next morning I ate a little soup, and from the third day was able to take a quart each day. I was permanently healed of asthma, of nervous headaches from which I had suffered since six years of age, of chronic sore throat, and of many other diseases. Besides all these afflictions there was a deep sorrow in my home that seemed to me unbearable,—the passing on of a loved one.

I had been brought up by a loving Christian mother, and was also a church member myself, but I had prayed for her recovery all in vain, and this led me to believe there was no God. I remarked that I never would attempt to pray again; but thank God I am learning each day how to pray aright. I have also been healed of hatred, and for this healing I am indeed more grateful than words can express, for this is what I call putting off the old man with his deeds and putting on the new.

Our baby, four years old, has known only Christian Science. He was healed of a severe attack of croup in one treatment; also of whooping-cough and measles at the same time, when three weeks old, in just a few days. One day he had a very hard fall, which seemingly paralyzed him from the waist down, so that he had no use whatever of his legs, but he was healed by the third day. Both he and his eight year old brother have the privilege of attending a Christian Science Sunday school, for which we are sincerely grateful.

Much gratitude is felt toward all the Christian Scientists who have helped me along the journey from sense to Soul. Each day my greatest desire is to know more of God, who heals all sickness, sorrow, and sin, and to live so as to be worthy of being called a Christian Scientist.

MARY E. BARNETT, Los Angeles, Cal.

Christian Science was taken up to meet the need of an unsettled, poverty stricken existence, which had followed in the wake of a long illness. I had lost all confidence in religion as expounded from the pulpits and went to church only to hear the music. Having been a nurse for a long time, I was familiar with the use of drugs and other modes of treatment for the sick, and for years would not think of being without a case of drugs and appliances for personal use.

Then belief in drugs changed to belief in manipulation, and I took a special course in one of the large schools where healing without drugs was taught. After graduating, however, I was the victim of the long illness mentioned and was pronounced very nervous by the doctor. I was secluded in a quiet room at a private hospital where I had gone to take a position in the new methods I had just learned. After many weeks I refused further treatment and left the hospital amid the protests of friends and physicians.

Soon after this a lady told me of a friend who had been healed in Christian Science and asked me to go with her to the Christian Science church, but for some reason she did not mention it again and we did not go. A short time afterward I went to southern California to take up my work again, and a position was secured in a sanitarium. There I met two nurses who were Christian Scientists and from whom I learned of the truth.

One of these nurses let me read in her copy of Science and Health, and though I read only a few lines and then had to rush on duty, it was with a new outlook on existence. I borrowed the book that night and read, beginning at the first page. I felt like a new person. Every week I had Friday off, but hearing of the Wednesday evening meetings I asked another nurse to exchange days with me, and went into Los Angeles to tell my husband the "good news" I had heard. We attended church that evening, and my husband was relieved of pain in his shoulders which had been constant for two years, caused by a dislocation. His healing followed, and many difficulties were adjusted. We were almost without funds, but took what we had to buy Science and Health, which we have studied daily ever since.

During the past two years we have overcome many phases of error by the application of the truth as taught in Christian Science. I was healed of intense facial neuralgia instantaneously after writing to a practitioner for treatment. A severe attack of throat trouble was overcome in one treatment, and many times financial aid has been received when it seemed impossible to get work. Many opportunities have come to prove the value of Christian Science. While to material sense I was in good health when I turned to Science, there have disappeared numerous minor troubles, such as a tendency to catch cold, a throat affection, weak eyes and the need of glasses, besides irritability, anger, and criticism. Christian Science has made me a better nurse, a better wife, a better friend; it has set me on the way that Jesus showed long ago and for which I long sought in vain among the false shadows of materiality from which this truth has lifted me.

Words seem futile indeed to express my gratitude for Mrs. Eddy's loving and patient work, that enables us to know "the only true God." I am truly grateful for the freedom this understanding has given me, and as the false beliefs recede the glorious realities light the way to a still greater freedom and understanding.

About three years ago I had an attack of blood-poisoning. My hand and arm swelled up considerably and great suffering was experienced. There was no strength left in the hand. In my trouble I went to a Christian Science practitioner and asked for help, with the result that I was completely healed in five treatments. This healing seemed so beautiful to me that my heart was filled with meekness and gratitude.—OLE ARNESEN SANDVEN, Minneapolis, Minn.

Some three years ago the aid of a Christian Science practitioner was sought for relief from mental trouble. Almost at once sleeplessness vanished, and acting on the advice of the practitioner I made a determined effort to grasp something of the meaning of Christian Science. I had been studying Science and Health and the Bible Lessons daily for about four months with apparently no enlightenment, when acute lung trouble developed in a member of the family. After a severe struggle with fear the practitioner was called upon for absent treatment, and the result was an instantaneous healing.

Following this beautiful demonstration of God's protecting care, the sense of working in the dark for something beyond human attainment vanished, and a feeling of peace, rest, and hopefulness appeared. Through the patient, loving work of the practitioner invalidism has been overcome and health has been restored. I am deeply grateful for Christian Science, and for the understanding of the Bible, which previously had seemed a sealed book.

MRS. CHARLES H. GILL, Chicago, Ill.

The Prince of Peace

CAROLINE A. BALY

WHEN thou in lowliness of heart dost wait
On Love, for answer to thy plea
Art list'ning for my voice, my will to know,—
My peace I give.

When lusting thought is hushed in silent prayer
To Love, for meat and drink sublime,
When bowed in pure desire my will to do,—
My peace I give.

When Gabriel's presence mortal contests quells,
The great red dragon quails in fear:
With him that overcomes his will for mine,
My peace I leave.

When life triumphant soars above the grave
And death lies vanquished at thy feet,
When love is seen as perfect prayer and praise,
My peace I bring.

When mortal will is conquered, self is dumb,
And in thyself mine image I behold,
In confidence serene thy light then shines,—
Thy Prince hath come!

From Our Exchanges

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.Litt., in The Christian Commonwealth]

By the mind of Christ we mean more than his capacity for thinking, albeit the depth of his mind, its vitality, its sanity, its white beauty, not less than the sweep and grandeur of its conceptions, are worthy of long study. No, what we mean is his insight, his outlook, his motive, his thought, his knowledge,—the truth which his mind revealed. If in one way his mind seemed limited by what it omitted, in another it was limitless. Sure as a line of light it sought first the supreme Truth, and all other things were added to it, each falling into its place and disclosing its meaning. To the mind of Christ the first truth and the last, the central and sovereign reality, was God, who is Love. From that fountain all his life flowed; from that light all his truth was kindled. No wonder the universe, now dark, now terrible, was transfigured in his mind beyond all power of poet-words to tell, lighted by an eternal sunrise and touched with ineffable beauty.

[The Advance]

The duty of the ministry and the church today is to uphold spiritual ideals in a time when the world is tending to express its faith in terms of dynamite and powder; to keep before the eyes of men the sure truths of the gospel and the ideals of peace; to comfort men and women in the midst of the sorrows and the uncertainties of a period of stress and anxiety; and to believe in that righteousness which is to emerge out of the war and to be the hope and inspiration in the future. The minister who does this is the true prophet of God. This was what the Bible prophets did in their day, and they did it so well that much of what they wrote is just as good for our uses as it was for the people to whom it was first uttered. But there is no way to make it really available for our present need without first finding out what the prophets meant in their application of it to the needs of their own life and time.

[The Universalist Leader]

The Christian religion is a religion of love; if all those who claim to be Christian were to believe in their love with all it involved, the kingdom of heaven would soon be a fact here in this world. Then all our relations would be governed by the desire to serve, and to do justly. Then we should have social, and economic, and international peace. The religion of love means nothing else.

What Is a Subscriber?

Christian Scientists are told by Mrs. Eddy in the By-laws of The Mother Church, Article VIII, Section 14, that it is both their privilege and duty to subscribe for the Christian Science periodicals.

In the world of law and commerce, one who subscribes to an agreement or document of any kind, assents and agrees to its provisions, affirms his mental support of it, and then formally signs his name to it as evidence of his at-one-ment in thought with its aims and purposes. As the literal definition puts it, he "underwrites" his portion of the responsibility entailed by the document.

The Christian Science periodicals record the progressive unfoldment in human consciousness of the truth about God, man and the universe. The Christian Science Journal, the Christian Science Sentinel, and Der Herold der Christian Science each have their own field of usefulness in the line of spiritual activity which is clearly seen and understood by every thoughtful Christian Scientist. The Christian Science Monitor links in a common bond the progressive element in human affairs with the scientific right thinkers upon whose shoulders rest the vital issues of the hour, thus becoming an impersonal ambassador to the "Millions of unprejudiced minds" (Science and Health, page 570) who are waiting and watching for that which will prove their deliverer.

The true sense of being a subscriber to these periodicals includes much more than the mere payment of the subscription fee for a designated period of time, with perhaps only a casual or perfunctory inspection of the contents.

Subscribing to the Christian Science periodicals is having a share in "underwriting" the future peace of the world. Each of these periodicals will produce the maximum result when every one to whom a subscription goes becomes truly a subscriber.

ARE WE TRUE SUBSCRIBERS?

Simplicity of the Word

CLARENCE W. CHADWICK

WOULD-BE critics of Bible teaching must not overlook the fact that spiritual things can only be spiritually discerned. If this basic fact is ignored, one is as incapable of intelligently commenting upon the teaching of the Scriptures as he would be of talking about something of which he knows absolutely nothing. We are told in I Corinthians that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." This statement of Holy Writ should and does make its appeal to the humble and sincere seeker after Truth. With such a one it immediately puts a stop to any unwitting attempt to interpret spiritual truth through the medium of mortal mind or material sense. What an atmosphere of Christian charity, consideration, and kindly feeling would prevail in the world if all would allow themselves to be instructed by this simple but profound statement of Scripture!

If "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," is it at all unreasonable to assume that these same men wrote from the same standpoint of inspiration? People who think deeply upon spiritual things do not question this assumption, even though they may not fully grasp the inspired or metaphysical meaning of the Bible. They have experienced enough of the peace and joy of the Spirit so that to doubt for one moment its inspired origin would be impossible; nor would they hastily yield to the temptation to place a material or sense construction upon its spiritual teaching. In the same manner must seekers for Truth approach the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, if they would arrive at an intelligent understanding of its teachings and be able to impart them to others. It is the simplicity of spiritual teaching which confounds the worldly-wise, and even many professing Christians seem not to grasp the thought that material sense testimony is in open conflict with spiritual testimony, and that the exercise of faith in an unseen higher power demands the subjugation of the so-called physical senses.

To say that one has faith in God, while claiming the right to think and to act in accord with the evidence before the material senses, would mean that one can serve two masters. This is the very thing which millions of people are vainly endeavoring to do. They seem to think that faith is something which can operate without their questioning material sense testimony, but such thinking on their part leaves them slaves to a false sense which has no intelligent estimate of spiritual things and knows not how to discern them. Without knowing it they are trying to have faith in Spirit without questioning the validity of that which denies the presence and reality of Spirit, that is, belief in matter. Here Christian Science comes to the rescue of benighted mortals and awakens thought to the opposite natures of Spirit and matter. It tells them that to have faith in Spirit is to deny the power, presence, and reality of matter or material sense. The moment this point is grasped understandingly the simplicity and practicability of Christian Science become self-evident.

God is good. No Christian could question the simplicity and directness of this proposition; but immediately comes the thought, Where did the evil all around us come from? This question betrays at once an ignorance of the meaning of two of the simplest yet most inclusive words in the human vocabulary,—"God" and "all." Science says that God is good and God is All, hence good is All; and since God is Spirit, Spirit is good and All. The intelligent acceptance of these simple propositions means the complete forsaking of all belief in any other being or existence than God, or good. In other words, to accept or to have faith in God, good, is to deny the existence of matter and evil. Until this point is scientifically discerned, the simplicity of the word will not be appreciated even by professing Christians. Instead, the proposition that good is All will seem to them abstract, unreasonable, and impossible.

Does one stop to realize the meaning of omnipresence when admitting that he believes God to be everywhere present? This very individual may express contempt for Christian Science because it does not reason from a personal sense standpoint, little realizing that the admission of God's omnipresence is absolute denial or contradiction of sense-testimony. The admission that Spirit is everywhere present precludes the presence of that which is unlike Spirit, else such admission is without faith in God's allness. In other words, it is blind belief without understanding, and this is not faith. Paul must have been reasoning upon this very subject when he stated that "without faith it is impossible to please him [God]." The individual who says, "I believe what the senses tell me," is disqualified to say or to prove anything that is scientifically true about God. He can theorize, nothing more. The very simplicity of the word of God will be "a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense" to him. He will say that he believes God to be everywhere present, but that evil or matter is also present. This admission leaves him at the mercy of a false material sense which Jesus defined as "a liar, and the father of it," and while under its sway he will think that he is doing God service when ridiculing and condemning his own mistaken concept of Christian Science.

The meek and humble servitor of Truth accepts with childlike faith the proposition that God is the only real presence, and with this as a sure foundation he goes forth with the calm assurance of a David to slay the Goliath of sense-testimony which would boast of a power and presence opposed to God. He succeeds in proving that good is all power and presence, because he has no faith in outward appearances but all faith in the unseen fact that God, good, is All-in-all. Instead of thinking that Christian Science is an unreasonable belief, he is honest enough to apply the rules of this teaching to his own immediate needs, and thereby opens for himself the door to the kingdom of heaven on earth. He is amazed at truth's simplicity and naturalness. "God is All" has a new meaning for him when he becomes conscious of freedom from pain and disease. The absurdity and unnaturalness of a material interpretation of the Bible disappears,—he has caught his first glimpse of practical Christianity, which can come in no other way.

The time will come when every one who professes to love the great Wayshower will be able to prove the power of God to heal disease and sin in precisely the same manner that Jesus did, and he will reach this point of spiritual understanding through childlike, humble acceptance of that most simple yet profound statement of Christian Science, "God is All," which has ever confounded and ever will confound the worldly-wise. Those who prefer to judge by what they see and hear will continue in blissful ignorance of the simplicity, directness, and naturalness of the word of God as presented to the world in the Bible and in Science and Health. On page 339 of the last named book we read, "Since God is All, there is no room for His unlikeness." Could this basic truth of Christianity be more simply stated?

Eternity versus Time

KATHARINE MERRILL

ON the door of a shop that many people enter hung a card with the brightly colored words, "Time is just a little precious bit of eternity." To a Scientist who passed the door came instantly the opposite truth, "Time is no part of eternity" (Science and Health, p. 468). The one who phrased and prepared the card intended to check the waste of time by making the reader pause to consider the value of his time: but the motive nevertheless was only a partial thought after all, a truth half perverted.

For what is time valuable? For nothing, men admit, except the measure of life it includes and the opportunities it affords. Men think of these opportunities mostly in terms of pleasure getting and money making, in terms of the play and the business of the world, the "going to and fro in the earth." The measure of life and the opportunities supposedly given by time are thought wasted unless there is definite visible gain to represent them; or, as some one has said, "unless there is something to show for it all." This thought too is usually a perversion, because gains visible and tangible are too often in their nature merely material. They are mostly based on the belief in the value of matter and material objects as true essence, substance, things to be prized in and for themselves, apart from the thought which created them or which is represented or expressed in them. Men indeed are not always blind to underlying thought, as for instance in the case of a gift from a friend,—a gift whose smallness may be apologized for and excused because of the love that goes with it. Yet many are tempted to feel that they could prize the love more if the object could be rated higher.

The opportunities men seek are as a rule opportunities to acquire,—to acquire friends, home, property, ease, learning, position, fame, and the multiplicity of objects upon which humanity dotes. But from the standpoint of absolute truth the real value of any object, whether a friendship, a flower, or a business, becomes clear only as we spiritualize our sense of it, as we see and properly estimate the value of the thought that produced it and the purpose for which it exists,—to express to human sense truthfulness and beauty and utility. It thus becomes a manifestation of these spiritual qualities, one of the diversified forms in which these qualities shine through the mist of mortal thinking.

These qualities are not dependent on time or influenced by time. In fact, it is seen that they have a real existence in thought even though the object or manifestation of them may not appear to the senses, may not "materialize." We recognize these qualities as above time and free from its domination; time is therefore clearly not what produces the objects, and should not be thanked for them or valued for them. It is only perverted mortal thinking which names, uses, and estimates objects without much if any regard for the spiritual reality which they typify. And it is only dull materialism that allows this mortal name, use, and estimation to constitute the whole of the object and the value and purpose of its pursuit.

Since the spiritual reality of anything is its true value, manifestly this spiritual reality, this true idea as God knows it, is what men should strive after. Hence it is not time that is wasted by the careless person whose notice the card on the door was intended to catch. What is wasted is opportunity to direct thought, to direct it not toward the objects of sense, as mortal will demands, but toward those God-ideas which mortal sense perverts. The opportunity to do this is ceaseless, independent of time. Thought so directed toward reality brings its own manifestations of inner peace, sufficient means, and visible health. These may appear to be the very same objects for which all the world is striving, but this appearance is deceptive. Later, as fuller spiritual understanding is attained, these manifestations themselves will be more spiritual.

Yet even now, while the degree of understanding generally reached is still small, these manifestations of happiness and health and prosperity are different from what the world thinks them to be. They are different because they are the result of conscious effort to recognize and obey God in everything. They do not spring, as many of like appearance do, from self-will, mortal opinions, and human inconsistencies. The individual who has thus consciously and with effort fixed his thought on supersensible realities, and who finds himself receiving along with his spiritual experiences some measure of those blessings which the world calls material,—that individual may be trusted to know and to testify honestly whence those blessings came and what he intends them to mean in his own future growth. He is surely a better judge of what has happened than one who has never cared to investigate even the possibility of spiritual blessings taking form in the things that are "added."

Just as mortal thought blunders in striving for the sense-objects supposed to be offered by time, so it blunders in attempting to lengthen and beatify that span of life which time is supposed to include. Time is a notion agreed on by mortals for their own convenience and to measure their own concept of eternity. Eternity being a thing that the finite senses cannot grasp, those senses form a concept of time; they have to work in something of their own make-up, something limited like themselves. But Life is not limited, for Life is ceaseless being. Even mortals do not think of life in the abstract as ending, but only of certain forms (or separate entities) as ending and changing into other forms, yet still forms of life.

This unending life in the abstract that mortals cling to is only the mist-shrouded spiritual fact of man's eternal life. To that life, time can add neither length nor happiness. Man finds eternal life elsewhere than in and through time, which by its very nature of limitation is the opposite of eternality. He finds it in God, who is Life in its fullness and completeness, its divine richness beyond all human understanding. Time can measure no span of this Life. Compared with it, time is but "a sensual thought, like an atom of dust thrown into the face of spiritual immensity" (Science and Health, p. 263).

An individual struggling to understand the wonder of this and to make it practical for himself, may get his comfort in knowing that he is now in his eternal life; and that the meaning of this fact will be more and more opened to his perception as he clings to it with faith and gratitude. A new year will thus truly become another period for spiritual unfoldment, and he will see that these changes and unfoldments are God's measurements, the only true measurements. As a final achievement, he will prove, as Mrs. Eddy says on page 266 of Science and Health, that man "does not cross the barriers of time into the vast forever of Life, but he coexists with God and the universe."

A Day of Service

PAUL DRAUDE

As a member of the literature distribution committee and an usher in one of our branch churches, the writer has had many opportunities to see what is being done by Christian Science. Being very young in Science when I commenced this distribution work, the privilege of serving the cause has meant the working out of many problems according to Principle.

During the stay of some battleships in the Hudson River not long ago, two of the sailors attended several of our services. The chairman of the steamship distribution committee had a talk with them, and learned that there formerly had been a copy of Science and Health in their ship's library, but that it had disappeared. They were promised another copy, also a copy of "Miscellaneous Writings," and I was asked to take these books over to the ship on Sunday, as the battleships were to sail the next morning. We did not have the names of these men and did not know if we would be allowed on board, so it was at once realized that we must look to divine Mind for guidance.

Sunday afternoon I reached the dock just as the three o'clock boat came in, but the crowd was so great that I could not get on, and so waited for the next boat, which was to come at four o'clock. At half past three a boat came from one of the other battleships with word that the secretary of the navy was inspecting the ships and that no more visitors would be allowed on board. Most of the crowd left the dock, but the thought came to me that as it was my duty to place the books in the library, the way would be opened.

Realizing that divine Mind would lead me, I waited until a little before four, and then approached a group of sailors from the battleship which I wished to visit. On nearing them I heard some degrading talk, and continued on a little farther, to where an officer was signaling out to the ships. When he had completed his message I told him I had some books for the library of one of the ships, and asked him if he thought I had a chance to get over. He said that perhaps I could, and so I waited until the four o'clock boat came, when word was passed around that no visitors would be taken back. This signal officer was in charge of the gangplank leading to the float, and he was admitting some sailors whose shore leave had expired. I was standing at the outside of the crowd, and as soon as the sailors were aboard he waved for me to come through, and I was the only visitor taken along. As I sat in that little boat I was filled with a sense of the allness and nearness of God and with thankfulness that He was guiding my footsteps.

When we boarded the battleship I started for the back of the ship, passing several groups of sailors on the way. Suddenly a sailor came up to me, saying, "I think you are looking for me," and I immediately recognized him as one of the two men who had attended our meetings, so that the books were placed in the proper hands. This man who was cook for the petty officers, took me to his little messroom, where on the floor stood a large hand-bag wide open. He showed me what it contained,—a Bible, a complete set of Mrs. Eddy's writings, two concordances, a Quarterly, and many pamphlets, making as it were a complete Christian Science outfit. He said that he left this open all the time, and the other men came and helped themselves, returning the books when they were through, the number then interested being eight.

I then met the other man who had attended the services. He had charge of the ice-making machine, and he also had a complete Christian Science outfit, which he kept in a large box alongside of his work. He said he sometimes had opportunity to read while the machine was running, and had the books at hand so that any one else desiring to read them could do so. I could but think what a splendid chance there was for these men by their purified living and thinking to act as mighty beacons, letting their light so shine that their mates would be attracted to this saving and uplifting truth.

These two sailors returned to shore with me at five o'clock, when all visitors have to leave the ships, and when I left them they were on the way to the evening service at our church, after which a few more words were had with them. Thus ended an entire day spent in Christian Science service, and it was truly the happiest day I have ever experienced.

Appreciation of the Lectures

GRACE N. I. CUMMINGS

To one living in a small town the Christian Science lectures are a great blessing, awakening students to more earnest efforts in applying the truth gained in studying our literature. When a lecturer's heart goes out to the audience with so much of the Christ-love that he is impelled to give in closing a special message to each one, how that message is treasured and thought over afterward! At the close of one lecture we were told that we would never again be so much afraid as we were before listening to the words which had been spoken. I for one needed that message, and realized that I was healed of discouragement.

At another lecture the story was told of a poor woman who lived inland, and whose friends decided to take her to the ocean, knowing of her great desire to see it. As she stood on the shore, looking out over the water, she was heard to say, "Thank God, here at last is something of which there is enough." From this time on I began to see that there was enough of many things; and were they not all mine,—the beautiful sky, the mountains, sunrise and sunset, trees, water, air, and more than all else, as the lecturer said, enough of Christian Science? Then there was the story of a man who seemed to be in need yet did not know what he needed. He thought it was material things,—money, coal, potatoes,—until it was at last proven to him that what he was really looking for was happiness, and he saw that he needed spiritual things instead of material.

In still another lecture we were told much of the sacred Scriptures, from Genesis on through Revelation, and the different kinds of literature the Bible contains were also pointed out. This was very instructive, and taught us more reverence and appreciation for that wonderful Book of books. Two other lectures to which I have listened brought to mind this passage from Revelation: "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." These words were, to me at least, descriptive of the lectures. They were as poems set to music, and whenever I read them the rhythm is there just as when I heard them spoken.

I was greatly uplifted by these lectures and much mental debris was swept away. A year after hearing one of them, when a severe ailment had been attacking me for two days and I seemed unable to throw it off, I spent a day thinking upon some statements of truth made in the lecture, and all symptoms of the illness vanished. If any one should think I was using these words as a formula, let me say that such was not the case, as when I was beginning in Christian Science I found that the particular thought which solved a problem in one instance would not do the work in a different experience. I had to find a new expression of the truth for the solution of each problem. A recent lecture has inspired me with a greater desire than ever to study more earnestly Mrs. Eddy's writings and all of our authorized literature.

Once there was told the story of a man who, when asked how the long evenings in the country where he lived were passed, replied, "Well, sometimes we set and think; and sometimes we only set." Perhaps we may smile at this apparently humorous reply, but in reality it is not pleasant to remember that one has often "only set," when God has so many beautiful ideas for us to think upon if we are willing to do so, and particularly when we know that, as Mrs. Eddy tells us (Science and Health, p. 286), "God's thoughts are . . . substance and Life."

Life Eternal

J. ALLEN BARRIS

IT has ever been the hope of mankind to escape from the beliefs of the flesh and their attendant evils and disappointments. Mortal man, believing or hoping that the present material existence will have an end, and longing for a surcease from his trials and disappointments, looks forward to the time when he will enter upon what he is pleased to call eternal life, forgetting that whatever is eternal is without beginning and without end. He does not stop to consider that from the very nature of eternality, if we are to have eternal life at any time we must have it all the time, even at the present moment. Existence to be eternal at any particular time must be eternal at all times. There is no period at which we can begin such a state; it always has been. This being the case, one is just as near eternal life at the present time as he ever will be. It is ignorance which hides this fact from him, and the great task of mankind is to acquire the truth which will dispel this ignorance.

The Adam or fallen man came into existence, according to the allegory in Genesis, as the result of eating "the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," for the sentence was, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." It is therefore this knowledge of good and evil, this belief of life and intelligence in matter, which constitutes the state of death in which the Adam-man still dwells. This state must have had its inception at the moment of disobedience, for does not the warning say "in the day" that they should eat (not at some time thereafter) was the punishment to follow the act, so that this state of belief in death was coincident with the act of acquiring the knowledge of good and evil, and is recognized as mortal or material existence,—a state which is dead to the consciousness of Life as the only reality. It is the working out from this mortal sense of existence which constitutes the resurrection.

That which makes life eternal is the spiritual fact that God is man's Life. As God is the only permanent Being there is, it follows that everything which is eternal must be included in Him. "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all," declares the "scientific statement of being" as given on page 468 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. The Master said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." If the knowledge of God, who is Spirit, is life eternal, then the belief that we can know matter, the opposite of Spirit or God, must be the opposite of eternal life. The more thoroughly our thought is fixed on matter and the more thoroughly we believe in the reality and power of matter, in that proportion are we separating ourselves from God, from life eternal.

When do we know God, or when do we really know anything? It is perfectly evident that the truth is the only thing which is knowable, and truth is demonstrable. We know God only in so far as we have proved His power to heal and to save us. The attainment of a full knowledge of God is one of progression, as is all knowledge; therefore the attainment of eternal life is not something that can be accomplished merely by exchanging one state of existence for another,—by passing from one sphere of action to another sphere of action through the experience called death. The modus operandi is a mental one.

The transition called death is simply an event in this mortal material sense of life, and does not necessarily mark either the beginning or the end of any period of existence. As with any other event, however, there may be a measure of growth as the result of the experience which will lift thought to a higher plane of consciousness; but as far as human consciousness is concerned, it will flow along its material channel until all materiality disappears through spiritualization of thought. Then will death, or the material sense of things, be overcome, and we shall find ourselves in that state of consciousness called the kingdom of heaven, from which in reality we are never absent.

If human effort is to be devoted to the attainment of eternal life, which is the fulfillment of the command, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," then every experience which increases our knowledge of God is bringing us just that much nearer our goal, and every experience which deducts from or obscures our knowledge of God is preventing our approach to the goal, if not leading us away from it. The working out of our physical problems in Christian Science takes us farther than would at first appear. It includes much more than the healing of physical conditions. Every case of sin or sickness which is overcome through our knowledge of God, is to that extent acquainting us with eternal life, for the working out of the problem has produced in us a larger realization or knowledge of God. To the same extent has death been overcome, for consciousness has, in a degree, lost some of its materiality.

If this is true concerning the healing of sickness through a knowledge of God as taught in Christian Science, what must be the result of the so-called cures that are made through material means? Does not any seeming benefit from the physician's dose only serve to increase, at least for a time, our faith in the efficacy of matter to heal? Can we not reasonably say that such a result would increase our faith in something apart from God, and to that extent take us farther away from Him? Would it not fix more firmly in consciousness the belief in the power of death by shutting out from us the knowledge which is life eternal?

We are told that the time will come when all shall know God. Every departure from the straight path means that we must retrace our steps, and we read on page 407 of Science and Health that "every hour of delay makes the struggle more severe," for thought becomes more firmly fixed in the belief of the reality and power of matter. Much of our so-called knowledge is merely belief. Just as the world at one period said it knew that the earth was flat, or that the sun rose in the east and moved across the heavens to sink to rest in the west, with just as much authority does it say today that it "knows" the sick are healed by material means. It will learn that this so-called knowledge concerning healing is but an erroneous belief, and will also learn that its beliefs are taking it backward instead of forward, and so will hasten to change its methods.

Christ Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." He also said that he came to fulfill the law, to satisfy the demands for man's redemption, so that this saying of his must have had its incentive in a desire of mortal man for something he did not have. As the supply is equal to the demand, the way for the demonstration of this saying must have been provided. The way of salvation is the true method of working out our problems.

When a problem of sickness comes to the truth to be healed, we mentally survey it from every point, and then through Science and reason we become convinced of the spiritual fact concerning it. With this conviction as our armor, we take our stand to resist mentally all that is suggested by the physical senses, which claim that there is a sick man to heal. Then, "undisturbed amid the jarring testimony of the material senses" (Science and Health, p. 306), and having our "loins girt about with truth," also "taking the shield of faith," we fearlessly maintain our position until we see the evidence of the physical senses melt away, because spiritual sense has prevailed.

Love's Reward

ANNA J. HUDSON SMITH

On page 454 of Science and Health we read, "Love inspires, illumines, designates, and leads the way." This wonderful truth was sweetly and simply proven to me over two years ago, when I called to see one who was apparently a very sick man. I found him trying to sit up a few minutes on a hard, wooden chair, and when leaving I thought there surely must be some way to provide a more comfortable chair for him.

It was a very hot day, but I decided to go on down town and price canvas chairs. Upon inquiry, I found they were five dollars, which was quite beyond me at that time. I then recalled a practitioner who had an office close by, and on going there I found that he had the frame of just the kind of chair I wanted, but it needed a new canvas. Returning to the furniture store to ask the price of a new canvas, I was told it would be a dollar and seventy-five cents; but on the way home I passed a tent and awning shop, and stepping in to ask what they would charge to put a new canvas in the chair, was told it would be a dollar. When I gave the order, strong in the assurance that Love would provide the needed sum, the clerk said: "Oh, yes, we know the man who lives in that tent. I do not think he will need any kind of chair very long."

The chair was to be finished in a few days. In the meantime a lady came to see me who said she would like to give me a dollar, because I had given her such a helpful thought one day in regard to her glasses that she had been able to lay them aside permanently. I told her I did not desire to take a dollar for that. Then she said, "Will you take it for a little love offering?" I hesitated a moment, then said, "Yes; and I will tell you what this dollar will pay for." I told her of the sick man and the chair I was having repaired for him. It was the afternoon of the day that the chair was to be finished, so I took the dollar and went to the shop. The clerk said, "You know, we found a bit of canvas that just covered the chair, and it will cost you only fifty cents." For a moment I was quite overpowered, then I silently thanked God for the loving thought which had come to me to help a suffering man that hot summer day.

I am happy to say that the chair was not in use very long, because the man who then seemed to need it is now working in a garage and is as grateful for the teachings of Christian Science as I am. This is only one of the many proofs which I have had of Love's sure reward, and that, as Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 17 of Science and Health, "Love is reflected in love."

[From a news dispatch in The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass.]

The New York Court of Appeals, the highest court of the state, has again construed and applied the New York statute which forbids the practice of medicine without a license, but provides that it shall not affect "the practice of the religious tenets of any church." [This case is entitled People v. Vogelgesang, and it will appear in Vol. 221 of the New York Reports.] The same statute was before the same court in the now well-known case of People v. Cole, 219 New York Reports 98, when it was held to fully protect practitioners of Christian Science. In that case, however, the court said, "The religious tenets of a church must be practiced in good faith to come within the exception." In the present case the facts presented an instance of fraud or pretense, and it was decided accordingly.

At the same time, the Court of Appeals held that the trial court erred by charging the jury that the defendant had not the right to practice his religion for pay. The Court of Appeals also construed, in a clear and accurate manner, the clause in the New York statute designed to protect practitioners of Christian Science, and, after referring to like provisions in other states, summed them up as follows: "Through all this legislation runs a common purpose. The law exacts no license for ministration by prayer or by the power of religion. But one who heals by other agencies must have the training of the expert."

The seven judges who sat in this case were agreed, except that Judge Cuddebach held that the defendant should have been granted a new trial by reason of certain errors of the trial court. The opinion of the majority, written by Judge Cardozo, follows in part:—

Cardozo, J.—The defendant had been convicted of the illegal practice of medicine. He says he is a spiritualist and that he has practiced the religious tenets of his church. If that is all that he has done, he has acted within his rights. We think he has done more.

The statute prohibits the practice of medicine without a license, but excepts from its prohibition "the practice of the religious tenets of any church" (Public Health Law, sec. 173; Consol. Laws, chap. 45). We held in People v. Cole (219 N. Y., 98) that the exception protected the practitioners of Christian Science, who taught as part of their religion the healing power of Mind. Even then we said that there were times when the question of their good faith must be submitted to a jury. But things were done by this defendant which no good faith could justify. He combined faith with patent medicine. If he invoked the power of Spirit he did not forget to prescribe his drugs. "It is beyond all question or dispute," said Voltaire, "that magic words and ceremonies are quite capable of most effectually destroying a whole flock of sheep, if the words be accompanied by a sufficient quantity of arsenic" (Morley's Critical Miscellanies, III, p. 17).

The law, in its protection of believers, has other cures in mind. The tenets to which it accords freedom alike of practice and of profession are not merely the tenets, but the religious tenets, of a church. The profession and the practice of the religion must be itself the cure. The sufferer's mind must be brought into submission to the infinite Mind, and in this must be the healing. The operation of the power of Spirit must be not direct and remote, but direct and immediate. If that were not so, a body of men who claimed divine inspiration might prescribe drugs and perform surgical operations under cover of the law. While the healer inculcates the faith of the church as a method of healing he is immune. When he goes beyond that, puts his spiritual agencies aside and takes up the agencies of the flesh, his immunity ceases. He is then competing with physicians on their own ground, using the same instrumentalities and arrogating to himself the right to pursue the same methods without the same training.

The meaning of the act is made plain when we consider kindred legislation elsewhere. In varying phrases immunity is granted to those who practice their religious tenets, but always in such a form as to confine the exemption to spiritual ministrations. The statutes are collated in the briefs in People v. Cole (supra). Thus, in Maine (Rev. Sts., 1903, chap. 17, sec. 16, 1895, chap. 170), Massachusetts (R. L., chap. 76, sec. 9) and Connecticut (Gen. St. 1902, sec. 4514) the exemption is specifically declared to extend to those who practice Christian Science. In New Hampshire (L. 1915, chap. 167, sec. 17) it is declared to extend to "those who endeavor to prevent or cure disease or suffering by spiritual means or prayer." In Illinois (Hurd Rev. St., 1909, chap. 91, sec. 11, p. 1474) the act does not apply to "any person who ministers to or treats the sick or suffering by mental or spiritual means without the use of any drug or material remedy." Nearly the same language is used in the statutes of New Jersey (L. 1915, chap. 271, sec. 9), North Carolina (L. 1905, chap. 697), Colorado (Rev. Sts., 1908, sec. 6069), Virginia (L. 1912, chap. 237, sec. 11), and Michigan (L. 1913, chap. 368, sec. 8). There are like provisions in other states. Through all this legislation there runs a common purpose. The law exacts no license for ministration by prayer or by the power of religion. But one who heals by other agencies must have the training of the expert.

If that is the true view of the meaning of this statute the defendant on his own confession has violated the law. Errors which otherwise might be important are thereby rendered harmless. The court charged the jury that the defendant had not the right to practice his religion for pay. There was doubtless error in the ruling (People v. Cole, supra). It is impossible, however, that the error should have affected the result, and we disregard it as immaterial (Code Crim. Pr., sec. 542; People v. Swersky, 216 N. Y., 471, 481).

The defendant was justly convicted and the judgment should be affirmed.

[From The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Aug. 16, 1917]

From the speeches and writings of statesmen and others in all parts of the world it is becoming more and more evident that the conflict through which humanity is passing is being generally recognized to be the Armageddon of ideas. This statement has, in fact, already become trite. That, however, which is not so generally perceived, is that this is not an entirely novel state of things, for sometime toward the end of the first century of the Christian era, Paul of Tarsus wrote to the Christians in Ephesus, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places;" and to the Corinthians he said, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal."

In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 12) Mrs. Eddy writes: "Mortal mind at this period mutely works in the interest of both good and evil in a manner least understood; hence the need of watching, and the danger of yielding to temptation from causes that at former periods in human history were not existent. The action and effects of this so-called human mind in its silent arguments, are yet to be uncovered and summarily dealt with by divine justice." Taking these two statements together, and comparing them with the article called "Ways that are Vain" in "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 210), it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that we are faced today with conditions similar in a degree to those which confronted the apostle, and that we must use his weapons if we are to emerge victorious from the battle.

Paul was nothing if not practical, and to have some little knowledge of the state of the world in which he lived is also, probably, to have some idea of how to deal with present day problems, which do not seem to be so very different, for though human experience changes greatly on the surface, fundamentally it remains much the same.

Paul wrote his great series of letters at a time when the Roman civilization had spread the meshes of its net all over Greece and the greater part of Asia Minor, and, by its contact with the ideas it found there had lost much of its old uprightness and purity, thus declining to the level of the older civilizations. In the first place, the Romans had become extraordinarily rapacious and their immense accumulations of wealth had brought with them the usual accompaniments of luxury, idleness, and superstition. The Greeks, again, with their vivid love of beauty and their philosophic turn of mind, had developed a materialism more refined in its sensuality than any the world has ever seen, and blended with these two main streams of thought, Greek and Roman, was a cult of demonology and magic, common no doubt to all primitive races, but in this case accentuated not only by the physical perfection of the cultivation, but also by the association, through trade and commerce, with the East.

Comparing, on a very broad scale, those conditions with some prevailing today, we find many points of similarity,—the immense wealth, the materiality engendered by a philosophy and science based on the evidence of the physical senses, and a religion consisting largely of rites and ceremonies "received by tradition from your fathers." It is not an exaggeration to say that the trinity of modern worship consists of money, the human intellect, and the material body.

The passage in the letter to the Ephesians referred to above, throws a light upon modern conditions which makes it peculiarly applicable to our present needs. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world." Compare also with this the third and fourth verses of the second chapter of II Thessalonians, where Paul is referring to "the day of Christ," saying: "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."

Do not these passages, taken in conjunction with Mrs. Eddy's writings, make it abundantly clear that the rulers of the darkness are not and never have been mere flesh and blood, but that they are hidden mental forces, exercising what is now known as hypnotic influence through the jealousies, hatreds, and lusts of men and of nations?

Not long ago a famous surgeon stated in conversation with a student of Christian Science that in lecturing to his pupils he always instructed them to impart hopeful suggestion to their patients. When it was pointed out to him that if he once admitted the power of suggestion he could not limit its operations to good, but must allow that it would be just as easy to suggest evil to the patient, his attention was arrested and he acknowledged that this must be so, and that an appalling vista of baneful possibilities was thereby opened.

To return to Paul's advice to the Ephesians, he enumerates quite categorically the weapons of our warfare which will be found mighty through God to the abasement of every kind of spiritual wickedness in high places. Truth, righteousness, glad tidings, faith, and the "sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God," comprised his arsenal, and will be found one day to be the only weapons which have ever done anything permanent toward the peace of mankind. They are really all contained in the last, the word of God, for that word is Truth, that which actually is. This word, demonstrated by Christ Jesus, and scientifically explained by the Discoverer of Christian Science, is the great fact that "there is no life, truth, intelligence, nor substance in matter. All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all" (Science and Health, p. 468). The recognition that this is so, necessitates righteousness if the truth is to be made practical; it brings the glad tidings of liberation from sin and sickness, for it is the belief in matter only that originates those evils, and it bases faith on demonstrable understanding.

There are many signs of the times which prove to those with the seeing eye that this word of God is already fulfilling Isaiah's prophetic utterance: "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

[From an editorial in The Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal]

Many, with blind faith in the teachings of their fathers, turn to the old-time prophecy: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: . . . for the former things are passed away." Such look and wait for the time when there shall be no more "wailing and gnashing of teeth," no more sorrow and no more pain; a time when swords shall be beaten into pruning-hooks, and the lion and the lamb shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat grass like the ox. And perhaps, after all, it is to such childlike faith the world must now turn in its darkest hour for inspiration and light. Perhaps—who can say?—there is the essence of truth in the prophecies of old.

There is one thing that almost all will concede, from the materialistic scientist to the religious neurasthenic, and that is that if mankind were wise enough they could eliminate the possibility of disaster, especially disaster caused by human inventions. Already there seems to be wisdom enough in the world to desire that war shall cease. It really seems that the problems of war, accident, sickness, and sin will be solved in proportion to the amount of genuine truth humanity is willing to receive, and along with truth, love, the spirit of service and cooperation. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Ft. Pierce (Fla.) News]

An item in a sequence of aspersions furnishes an apt illustration of the methods by which professional antagonists gather materials for fomenting hostility to Christian Science. It is only fair, however, to say that the bit of evil now to be mentioned is not a recent device, hence the assailant who has just made use of it may have gotten it from one of his fellows. Indeed the evil spoken against Mrs. Eddy gains what currency it has, mainly because some opponents are disposed to repeat anything detrimental to her which they hear one another say.

The matter now in question was started as follows: "Mrs. Eddy said in a letter to Judge Hanna: 'I have marveled at the press and pulpit's patience with me, when I have taken away their Lord.' " What she actually wrote to Judge Hanna is to be found on page 15 of a pamphlet entitled "Christian Science History" which was issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society and widely distributed some years ago. The complete quotation was this: "Mrs. Eddy has recently said in a letter to me: 'A new discovery of science always has awakened the world to fierce combat, and Christian Science is no exception to this rule. I have marveled at the press and pulpit's patience with me, when I "have taken away their Lord" to present the risen Saviour, more spiritual appearing of God's power,—and I thank God, and the vox populi for these signs of the times.' "

The reader is invited to notice that both and all of these sentences need to be read as a whole, also that one of them was omitted, with an essential part of the other, and that the quotation marks around certain words in the remaining fragment were taken off. In such a process of garbling, the golden rule was trampled under foot. Mrs. Eddy's letter to Judge Hanna plainly alluded to John xx. 1-18, where Mary Magdalene feared she had lost her Lord, only to find him nearer and more helpful than before.

Finally, Christian Science does not deny that Jesus Christ came in the flesh. On the contrary, this religion accepts the entire Scriptural account of his advent and career. Indeed, the purpose of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and its branches throughout the world, is to "commemorate the words and works of our Master," and to "reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing." This is stated in our Church Manual (p. 17). Doubtless there are important differences between Christian Science and the religious views sincerely held by the minister who has made these attacks; but Christian Scientists are no less sincere, no less earnest, than he is.

Such issues are not likely to be resolved by controversy nor disposed of by willful obloquy. If our brother chooses to look for salvation to the death of Jesus, as he has with unnecessary vehemence insisted, Christian Scientists cheerfully concede his right to do so and to preach his faith to as many as may be willing to listen. On the other hand, since we choose to look for salvation to the Master's life, and feel assured by such words as, "Because I live, ye shall live also," and by such proofs as are furnished by better health and morals and a more satisfying knowledge of God, we claim an equal measure of religious liberty, and we confidently believe this will be granted by all fair-minded persons.

It is true that a number of clergymen and others in the older denominations who cling tenaciously to what is called old theology and its dogmas, have refused to believe that Mrs. Eddy was under divine guidance in the discovery of Christian Science and in the writing of its textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." However, the statement of our critic that the Christian world has repudiated Christian Science is incorrect. There are hosts of active Christians who are students of Christian Science, and who employ its healing ministry, although they are not actively identified with the Christian Science organization.

At any rate the statement that Christian Science is of aught but God cannot be proved or disproved by mere belief or argument. Christian Science is demonstrable, and there are thousands of people in all walks of life who are proving that it is from the Father. It brings better morals, better health, better manhood, and better womanhood. Those who test its teachings impartially will find that these statements are very modest, since Christian Science is in reality the reestablishment of primitive Christianity.

God Governs

THE thoughtless will admit that God governs, but even the thoughtful sometimes fail to see the corollary that it is not then man's business to govern. Much of the sorrow of men on the earth is due to their endeavor to work out a fulfillment of the promise of the serpent, "Ye shall be as gods," in the attempt of some to govern others. It is clear, however, that if God governs, man as the likeness of God is the expression of government. The kingdom of heaven is not an assembly of dignitaries and common folk, of subjects and princes, wherein some are subdued by others and obey the will of others. The kingdom of God is the reign of righteousness, and when that which governs is obeyed, "as in heaven so on earth" (Science and Health, p. 17), then the kingdom is come.

Jesus especially desired to keep his followers free from the temptation to govern. He knew that, because of the wisdom and insight they had gained, other human minds would try to make lords of them. Therefore he said, "Be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren." When Christ is recognized as the one Master, or Immanuel, God is being presented for man to know. The practical apostle James says: "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation [or judgment]. For in many things we offend all." Just the acceptance of the fact that that which governs must be perfect, makes it clear that it is not man's place to govern. Indeed, when each individual is governed by God there is manifestly no need for one to think of governing another.

It is wise to come back always to the fact that God governs. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it: except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." One wishes that all burdened business men could know this and recognize that they are not called upon to be responsible for the government of employees as persons, but for bringing about metaphysical directing—setting business in the right way—so that all may unite in demonstration. It goes without saying that God's way is the right way. When any one says that God governs, he means that upon goodness is laid the burden of governing man, and upon nothing else. In order to establish a young prince in what his Oriental teachers believed to be the right sense of authority and power, the child was taught every day to slay a kid, and was excited into a frenzy of bloody cruelty, in the belief that thus he would become so inured to frightfulness that he would be able to control his millions of subjects through fear. How entirely different is the Christian conception of life, which in declaring where the government shall rest, says of him upon whose shoulders it shall be, that "his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

Looking at it metaphysically, man expresses dominion through being a dominion wherein good dominates; or to put it another way, he represents a condition in which Mind is Dominus, or Master. Mind, when we use it as a synonym for Deity, means perfection. Therefore, when God governs, the expression of this in man is unsullied goodness, perfect intelligence, and spiritual love.

The Changing and the Changeless

CHURCHGOING people are all familiar with the hymn which says, "Chance and change are busy ever," and are apt to accept its implication quite unquestioningly; yet in the prophecy of Malachi we read, "I am the Lord, I change not." On page 522 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy asks: "Does the unerring Principle of divine law change or repent? It cannot be so." The student of Christian Science early learns that he must hold to the unchangeable goodness of God, infinite Mind, and at the same time he must be clear that God's ideas, like their divine Principle, are unchangeable. To the human sense they may seem to unfold "from glory to glory," to use Paul's words; but in reality they do not change, because they express that which is changeless and eternal.

Just here we need to discriminate carefully between the human concept of man and the universe and the divine idea, because it would be most unfortunate if the human sense did not change from wrong to right and from evil to good until perfection is reached. It may be said, however, that unless we had for our guidance an unchanging and unerring Principle we should have no standard by which to work, and our efforts would at best be uncertain. Outside of Christian Science the human concept of life undergoes perpetual change. The child's sense of it is very different from that of the young man or woman, and again with advancing years the outlook upon existence appears to be so greatly changed that it is well-nigh impossible to think of life at all as one did in childhood.

Here Christian Science comes to the rescue and says that it is not enough to go back to the human child consciousness, if such a thing were possible, but it offers instead the enlarged outlook upon life which means nothing less than infinite good at all times and under all circumstances, and which says, in the words of Revelation, "Behold, I make all things new." It is hardly necessary to add that it is this changed outlook upon life which means healing in Christian Science. The erstwhile sick man suddenly finds himself well, and this because he has been brought to realize in some measure the eternal fact that God is changeless and that man as His idea reflects the divine nature.

The next forward step leads one to discover that Truth is changeless, although it would hardly be possible to find two persons outside of Christian Science in entire agreement as to what constitutes the truth of any circumstance or condition. From the standpoint of material sense it would be quite impossible to do so, because "chance" and "change" are indeed busy on the mortal plane, and so what appears to be true today may not seem so tomorrow. For example, mortal sense might say that one is drawing nigh the gates of death and insist that this is true because medical law has so declared, but by another day this mistaken belief as to the truth of being has disappeared, if these words of Christ Jesus have been grasped: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

A further step reveals the fact that the human sense of love changes so much from youth to age as to be practically unrecognizable, yet this change has nothing to do with reality. We find this declaration of infinite Love given through the prophet: "Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love;" and it is this Love, illuminating human sense, which heals every phase of sin and sickness and removes the fear of death. The one who is so healed becomes aware for the first time what love really means, and so for such a one all things are changed, but only because he has learned that divine Love is changeless. He then begins to radiate its wondrous light upon all with whom he comes in contact, and if he finds that he is not doing this it is time to see what needs changing, to see what of self is shutting out the light. Mrs. Browning says:—

> The eternities avenge
> Affections light of range.
> There comes no change to justify that change,
> Whatever comes—Loved once!

On page 96 of Science and Health our revered Leader says, "Belief is changeable, but spiritual understanding is changeless." Well may we work, watch, and pray to reach this ultimate of true being.

ANNIE M. KNOTT.

Profit and Loss

To be an unprofitable servant is to invite the experience of the man mentioned in the parable who was cast into outer darkness: "For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." To be profitless is to be spiritually useless. Profits are not evil in and of themselves; metaphysically considered, they are a natural increment produced by the law of Life, and they deserve to be studied and to be garnered.

In the great world upheaval of today much attention is being given to commercial profits. The word "profiteering" has even been coined, under stress of circumstances, to describe the act of taking advantage of the war to make undue profits; but the wise man will ask, Are the conscientious objectors against profiteering moved by scientific alertness, or by fear, greed, or jealousy? If these latter qualities act on the jury which renders a verdict, there will be a miscarriage of justice, for evil cannot try evil successfully. If, however, spiritual perception delves down to the foundations of undue profits, it should bring to the surface the mental manipulations of animal magnetism, which is endeavoring to take the bread of life from the nations. A real understanding of profits held by people who think rightly would adjust the injustice of undue profits and arrest the profit leech with his parasite agents. Food destroyers would vanish as the result of the mental determination of a whole people that food profits must be honest and just.

The inspired strength and the youthful enthusiasm of the young army which is preparing in the Western Hemisphere to settle the question of the Eastern, will lead to much more than a military readjustment. This host is sweeping before it into the dustbin of the past the old practices of corruption. It is David over again, the shepherd lad pitted against Goliath and slaying the giant of material arrogance.

The whole political economy of the world will be on a new basis when that army has finished its task, and profiteering at the expense of one's neighbor will have been destroyed. When the new war plow shall have turned up the last lingering vestiges of secular and ecclesiastical autocracy, so that they may shrivel into dust under the light of day, then will also the new man be on hand who has learned to share his profits of love with the brotherhood of man. In this elemental overturning the pride of human efficiency will be exposed as materialism gone mad. The serpent lust will no longer charm its subjects, for the adroit idea of spiritual reality will have removed its fangs.

The so-called mental forces which expected to profit by inaugurating a world war are today easily recognized by the average observer of events. The men and women influenced by those forces, though unwittingly, may well ask themselves the searching question propounded by Jesus: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul." Out of this expected profit has come a colossal loss. The game of mental profiteering, with nations and hemispheres as mental concepts, has failed. The ammunition forged for the attack upon Principle has ricocheted upon person, and in the grand reckoning of the hour profit is altogether on the side of Christian Science and loss on that of the malpractitioner.

In an article entitled "Take Heed!" in "Miscellaneous Writings," Mrs. Eddy has written (p. 368): "But while the best, perverted, on the mortal plane may become the worst, let us not forget that the Lord reigns, and that this earth shall some time rejoice in His supreme rule,—that the tired watchmen on the walls of Zion, and the true Christian Scientist at the foot of the mount of revelation, shall look up with shouts and thanksgiving,—that God's law, as in divine Science, shall be finally understood; and the gospel of glad tidings bring 'on earth peace, good will toward men.'"

Christian Science Benevolent Association Fund

"ON behalf of the Christian Science Society, Pretoria, S. Africa, I have much pleasure in forwarding the enclosed draft for £25. 15. 3., £25. 5. 3. of which is to be devoted to the Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. The sender of the additional ten shillings wishes the amount to go to the Real Estate fund. We esteem it a great privilege to be able to contribute to this grand project, the achievement of which will, we know, prove an inestimable blessing to humanity."

"In recognition and in grateful appreciation of the great benefits received daily from the teachings and through the application of Christian Science, as taught in the textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' by Mary Baker Eddy, as well as through the other writings of this great gentlewoman, it is my earnest desire to join and to help to further the great cause of Christian Science, well knowing that it will be a blessing to suffering humanity, even as it has been to me ever since Christian Science was brought into my life. I have today remitted by 'Japanese Foreign Money Order' the sum of U. S. Dollars 50.00, and leave with you the decision as to whether the amount shall be applied to one of the purposes indicated in the article 'Looking Forward,' appearing in Sentinel Feb. 12, 1916, or to both. With sincere gratitude I testify of the great help I am receiving through the authorized literature. My reverence for Mrs. Eddy is unbounded, and thanking God for all that He has bestowed on me, my prayer is that I may give and love more."

"Several Christian Scientists here [Berne, Switzerland], members of this society and others, have contributed the sum of $80, for which I am today sending you a cheque. This amount is to be equally divided between the two funds, that for acquiring real estate, and that for the Benevolent Association. It is only 'a drop in the bucket' as it were, but it is sent with much love and gratitude."

"At the annual meeting of the Jacob S. Shield Association it was unanimously and lovingly endorsed that we participate in the privilege of contributing again to the fund of the Christian Science Benevolent Association. Therefore, in accordance with this action, we enclose check for three hundred twenty dollars ($320) and wish to assure you that this activity, together with all others of The Mother Church and its Board of Directors, has our hearty and loving support and co-operation. With much gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, for the many opportunities afforded us in Christian Science."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The building committee of First Church of Christ, Scientist, has let the contract for the completion of the new church edifice at Third Street and Ormsby Avenue. When completed the building will represent an outlay of two hundred thousand dollars. The lot on which it will be erected fronts 150 feet on Third Street and 200 feet on Ormsby Avenue. The building will be 89½ feet wide and 176 feet long, outside measurements. Its foundation was laid late last year, and the congregation has been meeting under a temporary structure built on the permanent foundation. The seating capacity of the new church will be fourteen hundred.—Louisville Post.

LOWELL, MASS.—The work on the new edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, at the junction of Andover and Nesmith Streets, is being rushed along. The building, according to plans, will cost between fifty and sixty thousand dollars, but only a portion of it will be built this year. The structure will be 87 feet by 55 feet. The members of the church have decided to expend eighteen thousand dollars on it this year, and accordingly only the Sunday school department, which will take up about half of the building, one story high, will be erected for the present.—Lowell Sun.

OMAHA, NEB.—Plans are being made for Second Church of Christ, Scientist, to build on the site, 70 by 125 feet, that it bought some time ago on Forty-first Street, between Dodge and Davenport Streets, East Side. It proposes to have a building seating about eight hundred people and costing possibly sixty thousand dollars.—Omaha World-Herald.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., AUSTRALIA.—The Christian Scientists in Sydney now occupy a church home of their own, situated in Riley Street, close to Oxford Street. It seats about seven hundred and fifty persons. Adjoining the church is a Sunday school room for over one hundred scholars.—The Sydney Herald.

The Lectures

WAUKEGAN, ILL. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Maud Bairstow Johnson, who said in part:—

For centuries sick, sinning, suffering, unhappy humanity have been praying in vain for deliverance from these joyless conditions. Some of us, in our dire need, have as a last resort turned to Christian Science, and have here found the way of communing with our heavenly Father that brings the asked for blessing; have here found the true concept of God, the God that does answer our every prayer; have here found a saving, healing Principle that can be successfully invoked in every condition, under any circumstance or emergency,—in fact have here found the way of salvation.

RICHMOND, IND. (First Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Clarence W. Bertsch, who said in part:—

In the eighth chapter of John it is recorded that Jesus made this statement: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It was this truth which freed Daniel from fear when placed in the lions' den; which freed the three Hebrew boys from harm when in the fiery furnace, and which freed Paul from fear of poison when the viper fastened itself on his hand. It is this same truth which is today freeing people all over the world from wrong thinking, from fear, sorrow, sickness, from doubt, worry, discord, from discomfort, pain, fear of need, and from many of the more insidious forms of sin, through a proper understanding and a practical application of the teachings of Christian Science.

MASSILLON, OHIO (First Church).—William R. Rathvon, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Minnie C. Becker, who said in part:—

It is of supreme importance that we should know the truth about God, and where we may find Him. Christian Science is the revelation of the Christ, Truth, to this age. It is the Science of God, man, and the universe. "Perfect God and perfect man" is its "basis of thought and demonstration" (Science and Health, p. 259). Its Principle is Love. Christian Science teaches us to rely wholly on God, and how we may find Him a present help in every time of need. From it we learn that material existence is but a moving picture, passing before us each day, while spiritual existence, the spiritual man, is real and eternal. It teaches us to know God, "whom to know aright is Life eternal" (Science and Health, Pref., p. vii).

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL. (First Church).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Arthur A. Hubbard, who said in part:—

We hear a great deal about willingness and ability to serve and to help others, and this is well; but what about our own willingness and ability to receive, to be receptive of good and of good only, our readiness to learn and so progress out of old out-worn beliefs into new and better ones? If we ourselves are not rising to higher attainments and broader outlook, how can we help others to reach a higher level? This humble and open-minded attitude is surely what Jesus referred to when he said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven;" and again, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." The need now, as then, would seem to be the recognition and humble admission that we are poor in spirit, and the reaching out for righteousness—right thinking and doing—that we may be filled and give of our plenty to others.

Recent world events would seem to prove that material methods and superficial philosophy and ethics have failed to advance permanently the common joy and harmony, and that other ways must be sought. The Bible teaches that this way is a spiritual way, and Christian Science emphasizes and explains this teaching, and what is more, demonstrates and proves for every one who is willing to investigate that this way—the Christ-way—is the only way to lasting peace for the individual, and so for nations.—Colorado Springs Gazette.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. (Sixth Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Francis O. Cass, who said in part:—

In the beginning God said, "Let there be light: and there was light." In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" its author, Mrs. Eddy, tells us that "light is a symbol of Mind" (p. 510), and that "the time for thinkers has come" (Pref., p. vii). Today, by right or scientific thinking, one can obey Paul's command, "Work out your own salvation," for in the full-orbed light of Christian Science God is revealed, and the prophecy of Isaiah, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined," is again being fulfilled. Christian Science is this light or enlightenment, dispelling the gloom of darkness, doubt, and fear, and lifting the burdens from the weary and heavy laden.

LEEDS, ENGLAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Frederick R. Rhodes, who said in part:—

Practically all inquirers into the teachings of Christian Science admit that it gives its adherents a sense of joy and happiness, together with a feeling of absolute security. One of our eminent physicians has just issued a book to show that pessimism is really a disease, and so it will be difficult for anyone to say truthfully, if Christian Science has the power to make people happier or more optimistic, that even in the opinion of materialists it is not a valuable therapeutic agency. Christian Science has, through the unfolding of "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," given back to mankind the ability to refuse to remain in bondage to the so-called law of sin and disease. Its teachings scientifically prove by "signs following" that the closing words of St. Matthew's gospel, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," are indeed available for all who will trustingly accept them.

STILLWATER, MINN. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Mayor J. R. Kolliner, who said in part:—

I am not a member of the Christian Science church, but I have known many Scientists, and I have attended their Sunday services and Wednesday evening testimony meetings in this city, in Minneapolis, and in New York City. I am safe in saying that I know of no one to whom this teaching has not brought an increased peace and happiness. In attending these meetings in the several cities I find that many of our successful, thinking men and women are interested in and joining this church; also that the churches are crowded, and that many—a large percentage—of those in attendance are substantial, thinking business men. Why is this? From testimonies given at the Wednesday evening meetings I make the following deductions: The business men referred to do not receive dividends from this religion that they can deposit in our national banks, but they receive dividends that are payable in peace, contentment, happiness, and health. They have a better understanding of God's laws and of man's relation to Him. On page 250 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Man is not God, but like a ray of light which comes from the sun, man, the outcome of God, reflects God."

ROME, N. Y. (First Church).—Bliss Knapp, lecturer; introduced by Thomas N. Pudney, who said in part:—

The Christian Science religion is a practical religion, demonstrating by works the power of divine Truth and Love. It is applicable to every condition and every walk in life. It searches the highways, the lanes, and the byways of mortal consciousness and brings to man that peace and understanding which the world cannot give. This is being demonstrated throughout the world, and even on the battle fields thousands are testifying to the great blessings of physical, mental, and moral healing. Christian Science carries the message, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden."

Testimonies of Healing

I should like to give this testimony to the healing power of Truth. I was appointed to a ship which commissioned and was attached to the grand fleet. We had a large number of officers in the ward room, but I was the only Christian Scientist. The fact that I did not smoke or drink seemed to leave me as one apart, and as time went on this gap between myself and others grew to such an extent that the time came when I had not a friend in the ship—no one even to join, in the rare opportunities we had, for walks on shore. This experience on board a ship was totally new, for I had always been "hail fellow, well met," with those above and below me. It seemed as though the whole question resolved itself into whether I would just concede one point, for if I did I could at once regain their friendship. If I would only accept the invitation to "come and shake for a drink," or join in the not altogether classical yarns around the smoke room fire,—or concede just any one point,—I should find the barrier immediately broken down.

Many and many a time have I quietly taken myself off to my cabin, and how I have striven and prayed for help and strength—week after week and month after month, till at last I became once again "one of the boys," but this time on God's terms. I can hardly trace the gradual answering to Truth, but slowly and surely the change was wrought, until three times I sent by request for a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, which with my own made four copies of the textbook which were being read in the ship. My companions for walks and sails were only limited by the capacity of the boat. My only help through that trying time was the understanding of God as taught in the Bible and explained in the textbook of Christian Science.

My gratitude for this experience and for the understanding of God and man that has been placed within my reach by Mrs. Eddy's teachings is deep and sincere, for I was able to prove conclusively that "one on God's side is a majority."—LIEUT. C. H. LIGHTOLLER, London, England.

As I was almost always sick, Christian Science had been presented to me many times; but it was not until I witnessed the instantaneous healing of a friend who had been sent South as a last resort, that I determined to see what it would do for me. I had been depending upon will-power alone for my help, having no use for medicine, and when I went for my first treatment I was completely exhausted from trying to keep at my work while constantly enduring severe pain. Three years before this I had undergone an operation for appendicitis, and since that time the pain had never left my side; while two years before my back had been injured in an accident, and medicine and other methods of relief had failed to help me. I also had rheumatism, hemorrhoids, and goiter, and wore glasses.

After a week's treatment in Christian Science, so much relief had been experienced that I began to realize that there was the same good here for me as others enjoyed. The pain in my side was overcome at once, and the use of glasses was given up. My rest was sweet at night and my days were harmonious, so I knew that Christian Science was true. For a year I studied a little each day and had a practitioner's help whenever I was ill. Then came my real trial. I was sick for a long time, and it was not until many wrong thoughts were replaced by loving ones that I was healed and learned to "look away from the body into Truth and Love" (Science and Health, p. 261). It was a real healing, for I received the understanding which is now a daily protection. The ills that come vanish quickly when the searchlight of Truth is turned on them.

My marriage nearly two years ago brought me much happiness, and my husband studies this beautiful truth with me. Our supply comes through God's law of good for all, and it is indeed a blessing to know this. I am grateful that my entire family are now studying Science. My prayer is that each day I may do some good, and thus give the best expression of my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who has shown us how to understand the Christ which heals and purifies.—AILEEN ROGERS, Dallas, Texas.

I would like to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. For about two years I was ill with what some of the best doctors in our city called a nervous breakdown. The last one said that if I would go to the hospital I would very likely get well; but after being there six months I came home worse than before I went.

Then a friend asked me to try Christian Science and at my request brought a practitioner to see me. The latter said that God would heal me, but after she had talked for a while I decided not to have anything to do with Science, for I had been a church member since childhood and could not give up my church. Man's extremity, however, proved to be God's opportunity, for in 1913, when the flood destroyed all I possessed in the home and in business, I wrote to the practitioner asking for help, and as a result was able to help with all the work. As there were many ills to be overcome, I went to her for treatment, and was given a copy of Science and Health, so that I could study and prove its teachings for myself.

My gratitude for Christian Science is more than I shall ever be able to express, for I am healthier and more contented than ever before, and I owe it all to this teaching. While grateful for my healing, I am more so for having found a God who is Life, Truth, and Love, and that I understand more of the Bible. I am striving daily to be a real Christian Scientist and to help others as I have been helped. I enjoy all the literature and love the church services. Every day I thank God that this truth has come into my life and has made me free, and I am grateful to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who was so pure and stood so firm that she was able to show us the way.

LOUISE STREMMEL, Zanesville, Ohio.

I am very grateful for the benefits received in Christian Science, and though not a Scientist I realize its uplifting power and healing influence, mentally, spiritually, and physically. My baby boy was healed in a few treatments of inactive bowels and a condition of almost incessant colic. Through the treatment given him I was healed of a kidney disease of long standing, and of a very painful spinal trouble which would attack me at intervals, when it seemed as if I would fall to the floor unless I could immediately find a place to sit down.

My eldest child was healed of an umbilical rupture from which he had suffered for nearly two years. The inflammation had grown so bad that he suffered greatly if his clothes touched him, and he cried a great part of the time. We consulted many doctors and had taken him to specialists, but nothing could be done for him. He was healed of all pain in one Christian Science treatment, and in ten days I removed a bandage which he had worn since the beginning of the trouble. In two weeks he was free from every trace of inflammation and conditions were normal. He is as well as any child now and has had no return of the trouble.

This was over a year ago. My husband was amazed and gratified when he saw the results, as I did not tell him the child was having Christian Science treatment until the healing was completed. We are both grateful for this healing, and I hope to know more of this truth which has done so much for my dear babies and myself. My daily life has been happier and brighter since I took up the study of Christian Science.

MRS. HARRY WHITE, Bishop, Cal.

I thank God for the many blessings which have come to me through Christian Science. For thirty-two years I suffered with rheumatism in the right hand as a result of a birth, and no physician was able to help me; neither could the physicians heal or relieve me of pain in the back. Finally I was led to Christian Science through friends, and was healed by having treatment from a practitioner. I asked her for a copy of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and through reading it gained a better understanding of these glorious teachings and of the nature of divine Love. As things were explained, it became clear to me that if I held my thought steadfastly on the true and enduring ideas which are an emanation of God and are expressed through man, I must needs experience health, happiness, love, and purity, and with the dawning of this understanding my life has changed for the better.

When errors present themselves or when tests come, I know that if I take my stand on God's side they must yield and I must come out victorious, for error has no power. I know God, Spirit, to be the Principle of being, and the law of Spirit makes me free from all evil. I am most deeply grateful to God, and lovingly remember Mrs. Eddy, who has shown us the road leading to true happiness and peace.—FRAU ROSINA PAULINI, Salem, Ohio.

I am truly grateful for the many blessings which have come to me through Christian Science. Thirteen years ago I was a physical wreck, having suffered for ten years from chronic stomach trouble and many years from bowel disorder and anemia. These ailments were all destroyed in a few months through treatment in Christian Science. I have also been sustained through great sorrow and separation, and Christian Science has been a wonderful help in my business, proving to me that true substance is the understanding of God, which supplies all our daily needs.

I am also grateful for the Christian Science literature, which feeds and sustains me every day. I have not been a member of any church, but am glad to say I have found in Christian Science what I have been seeking for years. It is truly the Comforter, for it has helped me in every kind of trouble and is bringing me into more peace and harmony every day, as I am obedient to its teachings. I am thankful to God for His "wonderful works to the children of men," and for the life work of our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy.—MAMIE J. SMITH, Chicago, Ill.

Since Christian Science entered my life twelve years ago, a number of transformations have taken place in my inward and outward being, some of which are manifest to the world and some of which are the satisfying secrets of my own heart. Christian Science has healed me of disease; it has worked changes for the better in much of my habitual thought about pleasure; it has supplied me with work when I desired employment; and it has opened a new outlook upon life which robs the grave of its victory and substitutes hope and peace, even in the midst of stormy experiences here, for the despair and fatalism of my previous human thinking.

Glasses which I wore for nine years and which the specialist said would always be necessary, were removed through the inspiration of Christian Science. In the eight years since this step was taken I have been engaged constantly in newspaper and literary work which has exacted heavy toll from my eyes, yet without the deterioration predicted. With the help of a practitioner I recently went through a malignant attack of malaria successfully. Functional disorders have been righted many times, and in eight years I have not taken any medicine or resorted to any kind of material relief. The last ailment found me without a single desire to resort to former methods of treatment, and this definite faith in spiritual healing as presented in Christian Science I count a great gain.

There is much work yet to be done, there is still wide room for improvement in my life, but there is the reassuring thought that in Christian Science I am on the right road to attainment. Mrs. Eddy's true and imperishable monument lies in tributes such as this, in the great happiness she brought into isolated lives of which she had no knowledge, but which testify gratefully of their knowledge of her and of the knowledge they have gained of God through her.

WILLIAM R. SCOTT, Paducah, Ky.

As one who has received untold blessings through the teachings of Christian Science, I desire to express my gratitude for the revelation of Truth, which has healed me of many ills. It has shed a light on the Scriptures that enables me to read the Bible understandingly, perusing it from a sense of pleasure instead of mere duty. It has increased my dependence on God, good, and established a greater desire to walk in the footsteps of Christ.

In December, 1915, I was stricken with paralysis. Next day I called in a Christian Science practitioner, and in three days was moving about the house again. In less than two weeks the healing was complete. I was also healed at this time of a bowel disorder which had troubled me for over forty years. My healing seemed more remarkable because to mortal sense I am past eighty-five years of age. At another time, while reading Science and Health I was healed of a very bad cold. In answer to a question by Jesus to the disciples, Peter replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." When reading those words I felt the healing so clearly that I spoke out loud and said, "I am healed."

I surely thank God for Christian Science. My health is very good for my age. I study Science and Health and the Bible every day. Christian Science is my delight, and I attend the services regularly. I read Science literature in preference to anything else, and love it, for it is so uplifting.—MARY COX, Sacramento, Cal.

I did not come into Christian Science for healing, as I always had good health and heartily enjoyed all the good things and pleasures of life; but there came a time when these did not satisfy me, nor could I find what I sought in orthodox religion. I could not join any of the churches I had attended, for though there was much in them which was seen to be good, there was also a great deal which I could not believe to be the right interpretation of the Christianity taught by Christ Jesus. Then I heard of Christian Science, and asked a friend to get me a copy of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. After reading the copy loaned me, I lost no time in securing one of my own, for I was satisfied that this book made clear to the world the truth about God and His relation to man and the universe.

The logic of Christian Science impressed me forcibly, also the fact that it could be demonstrated in the healing of sin and sickness. My first proof of the healing power of Christian Science was in the case of a wasp sting. Several years before this I had a painful experience from a similar sting, and it made me fearful of the results. Now in the first rush of fear a material remedy was used, but I then turned to Science and Health for help. For two days there was no apparent improvement, and my arm was much inflamed and very uncomfortable, so I asked help from a Christian Scientist. In a day all the bad effects disappeared, save a slight mark, which in its turn soon vanished.

At another time a sharp attack of rheumatism, which had caused me much pain during the day and had kept me awake practically all night, was also overcome in one day. Several small growths that disfigured my hands have vanished. Before I knew of Christian Science I had tried to remove them materially, only to have them return again in greater numbers than before. It is now over two years since the realization of the truth in Christian Science caused them to vanish into their native nothingness. Headaches, biliousness, colds, cuts, and bruises have all yielded to the power of Truth. I am very grateful for the way fear is being overcome, also self-will and self-consciousness, and I never cease to be thankful for the protecting power of Christian Science.

It is the spiritual uplift that one experiences through an understanding of Christian Science which is the real healing and for which I am most grateful. It has given me a different outlook on life and is showing me the true way of loving my neighbor as myself. I am very grateful to Christ Jesus for the wonderful love he expressed as the Wayshower, and to Mrs. Eddy for making clear to us again, in her life and writings, the truth that heals.

A. VERA HEWITT, Kirby Muxloe, Leicester, England.

To say that I am thankful for what Christian Science has done for me but feebly expresses my gratitude and appreciation. It has helped me over many rough places, and was a great help in overcoming my grief at the passing on of a dear son. I was instantaneously healed of a wasp sting through the realization that divine Love is always present and an ever ready help. I had often been stung before, and at such times would suffer and be very uncomfortable, but this time there was no pain at all. On one occasion when my husband was going through a thick undergrowth he was struck in the eye by a branch which had been released by the man ahead. The eye was very painful, but I declared the allness of God, divine Mind, and have not heard another complaint from him.

I am thankful to God for the many blessings experienced, among them being the overcoming to a large extent of a high temper, and grateful to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for this saving truth that heals all mankind. I am striving to know more of God and His untiring love for His children, and hope to be a Christian Scientist not only in name but in works.—MINNIE M. SMITH, Sarah, Miss.

For eighteen years Christian Science has been the means of bringing many blessings into my life. About five years prior to the time when my own active interest in the subject began, a relative had been healed of a chronic disease pronounced incurable by two physicians. Although I was grateful for her restored health, my interest in Christian Science was not deeply stirred. Later, however, when perplexities and troubles multiplied in my own experience, I commenced a careful study of the subject, with most gratifying results. Here indeed was the Science of being; here my questionings regarding God, man, substance, and force were satisfactorily answered, not merely theoretically, but practically, for demonstration followed spiritual enlightenment.

During eighteen years I have had but one serious illness. This was in the form of a mental and nervous breakdown, which occurred about ten years ago. Although the adverse conditions were severe and lasted several months, the healing through Christian Science was complete. More than this, I found myself freer and healthier after the healing than at any time before. During this time of stress so-called hereditary and temperamental tendencies were destroyed which material or human means could never have reached. God's power alone is able to produce such radical results.

The satisfaction which comes with the spiritual outlook that Christian Science brings, must be experienced in order to be appreciated. This Science illumines every human problem, bringing joy and healing when faithfully followed. A small appreciation of Mrs. Eddy's great work for humanity awakens sincere gratitude, which grows more profound as her wonderful life and love are more fully comprehended.

CHARLES F. HACKETT, Boston, Mass.

With deep gratitude to God I acknowledge the benefit received through Christian Science. I was deaf in one ear and partially so in the other, followed by great pain for a year. I was very much discouraged, knowing that such an affliction would be detrimental to me in my work as a nurse. My doctor examined the ear and said I had taken cold in it, and that it would probably be better when the warm weather came; but the warm weather came and left again, and the ear was no better.

I then consulted an ear specialist, who said I had some catarrh, and that for some time I would have to go to him twice a week to have the ear treated. I had some treatments from him, but without any good results; so I decided to try Christian Science. I went to a practitioner, who treated me, and from that moment the pain was gone; but the deafness was still there. In three days I had another treatment, after which I did some shopping, a thing I very much disliked to do on account of my deafness, as I could not hear what the clerks said to me; but on this occasion I had such a sense of happiness that I forgot all about it. On leaving the store I met a friend, and while talking to her I discovered that my hearing was restored. I felt so full of joy and of thankfulness to God that my feet scarcely seemed to touch the street.

During the past year I have had two other almost instantaneous cures, and also have experienced a great spiritual uplift through the clear knowledge that divine Love is ever present to guide and sustain me. All these and many more blessings I owe to Christian Science, and I am thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for the light which shines on my path.

MRS. A. D. VAUGHN, Los Angeles, Cal.

For ten years Christian Science has been my only physician and has met my every need; but it was not until last summer, when I had the great privilege of class instruction, that my heart really went out in thankfulness to God and gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for this blessed truth. I attended the Christian Science Sunday school for nearly four years, and am very grateful that my teaching at that time was along the line of spiritual truths instead of the old material beliefs. We have in Christian Science such an abundant source of supply to meet our human needs that one cannot help expressing gratitude, in the hope that others will see the good work and glorify God.

Now that ten years or more have passed since my first healing in Christian Science, I wish to express my deep gratitude and appreciation for all that has come to me through this blessed truth. I was healed instantaneously of a disease I had suffered from since birth, a malady the medical profession was unable to cure, although many noted specialists had handled the case. My childhood was spent in a lifeless state, and at times I would lie for days as one dead. Such complications as kidney and heart trouble and an enlarged liver were overcome at that time. An enlargement of the neck disappeared as I continued the study of Science and Health, and a chronic throat affection vanished into nothingness.

I am especially grateful for the spiritual understanding gained, and rejoice in a religion which can be applied in daily affairs. The Christian Science literature has been a great joy to me, and I highly appreciate the work done by our board of lectureship, also the loving efforts of the faithful members of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church in Boston, and the untiring activities of the Publishing Society. My thoughts turn lovingly to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who through her understanding has given this great truth to the world.

LALLIE MASSIE BENDELL, Denver, Col.

Over three years ago my attention was called to Christian Science at a time when I could not see any help ahead. I had just lost my little boy and felt as if I never could be comforted. I met a friend one evening and she asked me to try Christian Science. The next afternoon I called on a practitioner, and when she treated me I was completely lifted out of my troubles. That evening I went to the testimony meeting, and it was a great joy to me as I learned of the truth that makes men free. A short time after this I again called on the practitioner for relief from hemorrhage and was healed in one treatment. A year later we were blessed with a healthy, happy little girl, and I experienced no suffering at all. I have been healed of varicose veins after a doctor said there was no cure except by an operation, also of catarrh in its worst form, from which I had suffered since childhood, just by reading Science and Health.

For all these healings I am deeply grateful; and for the spiritual uplift which has accompanied them my gratitude is beyond expression. I cannot say too much for Christian Science, as it has always met my every need. When I first heard of this teaching I thought if it could only be true, why it was the same as if Christ were here again. At times my joy knew no expression,—I was so glad to know it was a practical truth, which we had with us all the time. It gives us a different outlook on life, which is larger and more full of meaning than ever before; a desire to be better, to achieve some good every day. When I read the Bible and Science and Health in the morning, everything goes well for the day.

In sickness and in health Christian Science has been our comfort and our stay. I can truthfully say I think anything is possible in Science if we are faithful. I praise God for giving Mrs. Eddy power to explain the truth to us so clearly that we all can avail ourselves of it today.—MRS. FRANK YOUNG, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

I wish to add my testimony to the many helpful ones that have appeared in the Sentinel from time to time. Having been reared by Christian parents, I was from earliest childhood interested in the study of the Bible, and always took an active part in church and Sunday school work; but as the years passed I found that although I was faithful to the teachings of my church my efforts in the search for truth did not bring the desired results.

With the sincere desire to know the truth I began the study of Christian Science in the fall of 1914, and since then have had many demonstrations of the power of Truth over error. In the spring of 1916 a very bad abscess appeared on the side of my face. As this trouble had manifested itself on previous occasions, I asked for treatment from a Christian Science practitioner, and with her constant help and assurance that God's work is perfect, within ten days I realized a complete healing without the evidence of a scar which those about me feared would so disfigure the face. In July the practitioner was again asked to treat me, as I seemed to be overcome with the heat. With the ever ready help so kindly given in time of need I soon realized my privilege to know more of Truth and Love, and thereby experienced a healing and quietness which has enabled me to continue my work more harmoniously. Stomach disorder of many years' standing, creeping paralysis, and kidney trouble have also been overcome.

It has been my privilege to become a member of The Mother Church, and I am indeed thankful to have a part in the cause which is the means of uplift to suffering humanity. I am very grateful for the devoted life lived by Mrs. Eddy and for the priceless book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which enables one to gain a clearer understanding of the Bible, and these lines are sent in the hope that others may be led into the satisfactory search for Truth which enables one to demonstrate the all-power of God.

CATHERINE DECKER, Zion City, Ill.

We have had many proofs of the power of God as revealed through the teachings of Christian Science, for it has never failed to meet our needs when properly applied. Where discord, discontent, and sickness in various forms seemed to reign, now there is harmony and health and happiness. Chicken-pox, whooping-cough, appendicitis, the supposed effects of poison-oak, and many other ailments which seem to manifest themselves with a growing family, have been overcome. One of the recent blessings I have enjoyed was the demonstration made when our little boy arrived. There was no doctor in attendance, but with the help of a practitioner the experience was very beautiful. A sense of fear of several years' standing, the result of discordant conditions following a former experience, was overcome.

I am very grateful for an understanding of Christian Science, and am endeavoring to heed the admonition of Paul in his second epistle to Timothy, where he says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." I am indeed grateful for this wonderful truth as revealed by Mrs. Eddy.

Darkness Dispelled

EDITH F. MUNROE

'TIS said that God is good; yet men believe
He who is Love divine
Doth send them sorrow, pain, all things that grieve;
This gloomy creed's not mine.

'Tis said that God is Life. Why then declare
That death is God-ordained?
Our Master conquered death. Shall mortals dare
Question what he attained?

Yes, God is Truth, men say; yet they give heed
To grievous lies that bind
Them fast to sin and sickness. Sad indeed
The plight of mortals blind!

The light still shines in darkness; God hath sent
To earth Love's message sweet,
And now we know that Truth omnipotent
Doth reign, all is complete.

From Our Exchanges

[Rev. Charles Graves in The Christian Register]

Jesus failed to reform the faith and lives and aims of his people just because they did not want to be reformed; but even that failure is not so complete as it seems at first sight. He failed to reform the people: he failed to get them to see the things he saw and as he saw them, failed to inspire them to seek the same goal he was after reaching, failed to win their love to the virtues he prized. There may be disappointment in that, but we shall all agree that he did not fail with himself. He succeeded in making himself a living daily exponent of the moral and spiritual truths he taught. While you and I would rejoice the more had there been thousands who were inspired to the same achievement, it is surely something better than failure for one man to succeed in making of himself a living example of the righteousness possible to all men. No man fails if he succeeds only in making himself a little better than he was and a little better than the people about him. That is the one and only beginning of the reform, the redemption of the world.

[W. B. Selbie, M.A., D.D., in The Constructive Quarterly]

It is beginning to be recognized that the religion of a nation is best represented, not by any organization or by any external means, but by the spirit and temper of the people. In the long run religion is mainly an individual thing. It may and should find for itself corporate expression, but if this is to be adequate it must spring from the individuals of which the body is made up. The religion of any society will not be higher than that of the members composing it, though it may easily be lower, as when it becomes a matter of striking the average or finding the least common denominator. In this connection, therefore, the interpretation of religion, whether for the individual or for society, becomes a matter of paramount importance.

[Miss A. Maude Royden in The Christian Commonwealth]

We today need not a prophet (though God may send us one), but a message. We need to know how our Christianity can conceivably be applied to the world in which we live. It is not enough for us to know that St. Francis of Assisi found out an answer or that John Wesley had a message. Our world is different from theirs, and we want to know how Christianity can be made to work here, in the twentieth century, in this war of continents.

What Is in a Name?

The spiritual genius of Mrs. Eddy is revealed in no more definite way than in her exact and scientific use of words. Words are simply the symbols of ideas, and Christian Scientists may enlarge their concepts of motives, objects, and events by analyzing the significance of their Leader's use of language.

No better example could be given than Mrs. Eddy's choice of the name "THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR" for the great International Daily Newspaper which her spiritual vision conceived and which is being developed day by day toward that ideal which is the true substance of journalism.

Webster defines the meaning of the word MONITOR as "that which warns, reminds, advises, or instructs."

Thus in the fulfillment of its mission, THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR is spreading "undivided the Science that operates unspent" (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 353) and its warnings, reminders, advice, and instruction should be read, understood, and heeded by all world-citizens if they would be active factors among the right-thinkers in this momentous period of human history.

Those Christian Scientists and others who have understood and followed Mrs. Eddy's request and advice to "subscribe for and read our daily newspaper" are thereby bringing into their experience, perhaps without fully realizing it, the blessings which must inevitably flow from obedience to a request based upon the understanding of PRINCIPLE.

Man's God-given Dominion

JUDGE CLIFFORD P. SMITH

To practice Christian Science, or even to study it intelligently, every student needs continually to observe the distinction it makes between reality and illusion, and especially to notice this distinction in its application to man. Thus applied, it is the difference between the consistent man, whose sole Principle is divine, and the human personalities who seem to be made up of qualities that are neither consistent with each other nor with any consistent cause. Examining this incongruity, Christian Science finds that the line between reality and illusion must be drawn in the so-called human mind, and the separation it makes therein turns out to be of utmost value to humankind. By the same process this Science both restores and fulfills the religion of Christ.

In the light of Mrs. Eddy's explication it is to be observed that Christianity was originally based on the truth or reality of being. Its basic requirement was the knowledge of the truth concerning God and man; and we are informed by standard authors that the Greek word in the gospel according to John which is translated "the truth" denotes absolute reality as opposed to what is merely apparent, seeming, or false. Notice these sayings: "For this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." These sayings of the Master, the second of which is quoted from the Revised Version, imply that the human or mortal sense of life and man is false, and that abundant and eternal life and the freedom of real manhood are to be gained by finding and realizing the truth of being. According to the teaching of Christ Jesus, all the possibilities of being exist now and for us.

Our present situation was stated by John in these words: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." He did not mean that we shall ever be different from what we really are. He meant that we are the sons of God, though the reality of being doth not yet appear. He did not foresee a loss of identity; he discerned the realization of true identity. Mrs. Eddy applied the same discernment when she said, "Sin, sickness, and death must disappear to give place to the facts which belong to immortal man" (Science and Health, p. 476).

Salvation from evil, then, depends in the first place on observing the distinction between real being and its supposititious opposite. Freedom from disease, for example, follows the absolute knowing of the absolute truth concerning Life and man. To cope successfully with disease, it must be taken from our concept of Life and man and seen to be nothing but error. When so handled it is subjected to the divine law by which Truth destroys error. The same practice is equally applicable to any and all of error's secret or visible forms. Salvation from error depends in the second place on the exercise of man's God-given dominion.

According to the Bible the law of man's creation and being includes the decree, "Let them have dominion"—dominion "over all the earth." This is one of the natural rights of man, and it is one that exists now in all its fullness, as an idea to be apprehended and realized, even though the average man manifests more subjection than dominion. This ideal was instanced by him to whom St. Paul referred as "the man Christ Jesus;" and it was he who said, "My peace I give unto you." His peace was the result of dominion; it was the result of power over whatever would disturb the harmony of man; and for us to have his peace, we must gain that true sense of being and power which he possessed and exercised.

Now, what was the secret of Jesus' dominion? By virtue of what did he possess such unlimited power? He disclosed the basis of it by saying, "I can of mine own self do nothing." That is to say, he possessed power or dominion by virtue of man's relation to God—by reason of man's unity with infinite and omnipotent Mind. It was this unity, this at-one-ment, which he exemplified throughout his earthly career; and the main reason for the common lack of dominion is the common error that man is a material selfhood separated from God.

There is another aspect of dominion that is equally important. That is, dominion is not the power to interfere with the rightful and lawful order of the universe, nor is it the power of one person to impose his human will on another. It is the power to overcome disorder, to subdue discord, and to maintain the law of God. It is the power to demonstrate the truth of being. It is the power to overcome evil with good, whereby God's will is done on earth as it is in heaven.

Where and how, it may be asked, is our dominion to be exercised? Mrs. Eddy has furnished the answer to this question by saying, "Good must dominate in the thoughts of the healer" (Science and Health, p. 446). It is plain that one can deal particularly only with the errors which come to his attention. Hence in the practice of each student error should be handled at the entrance of his thought. Not only is this where error should be handled, but it is where it may be handled for any case, no matter how complicated the situation may be. For this purpose a case is a state of affairs, a set of circumstances, apparently including some error or erroneous action; and of course any one to whom an error appears must either believe or disbelieve it. Hence, as the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science has said, without qualification, "We should subjugate it as Jesus did, by a dominant understanding of Spirit" (Unity of Good, p. 50).

Near the close of his earthly career Jesus said to his disciples: "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." If what he accomplished was inexplicable, or supernatural, or peculiar to himself, what reason had they to "be of good cheer" because of his overcoming? Is it not fairly evident that he thus spoke because he had shown the way for them and for us? Did not his overcoming of evil "bear witness unto the truth"? His acts of power were done in accordance with law—in accordance with the immutable law of good. His mighty works attested the presence, action, and power of divine Principle. The signs which he furnished proved the true qualities of real being —of your being and mine—and proved it to be free from evil. So far from being supernatural, his healing works were supremely natural, for they evinced the true nature of God and man. They separated what is real and enduring from what is destructible and unreal. By words and deeds he taught and proved the true idea of God and man, thus declaring their entire separation from evil. This was his mission; this was the method by which he was and is "the light of the world."

Peter described the ministry of Jesus by saying that he "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him." His ministry consisted less of verbal instruction than it did of object lessons whereby he illustrated man's rightful and natural dominion over evil. Indeed his entire earthly career, in which he overcame one after another the errors incident to the human or mortal sense of life, until he rose completely above it—this was the supreme instance and example of man's God-given dominion and being. And "God was with him" just as God is with us.

Praise and Thanksgiving

JOAN MACDONALD

PRAYER constitutes a large part of our spiritual life, and a very important part of prayer is praise and thanksgiving, for these as understood in Christian Science include the answer to prayer, acknowledging the spiritual fact as a present reality. Those three great spiritual characters, David, Jesus, and Paul, made constant and practical use of praise. How often did the psalmist rise from the depths of darkness and despair to a joyful realization of God's ever-presence and all-power through the medium of praise; indeed the Psalms, which embody the highest expression of Israel's prayer and praise, are but a symbol of that nation's demonstration of the practical availability of God, divine Truth.

Christ Jesus, our supreme example, gave thanks before the manifestation of God's power and presence were made apparent to human sense, and his whole earthly life was a progressive demonstration of joy and rejoicing in the truth. Paul, who humanly speaking led a life of hardship, seems to have taken as his motto, "Prayer with thanksgiving," as the giving of thanks runs through all his letters. Not only does he unceasingly thank God for His "unspeakable gift," but he remembers what we all too often forget, namely, to be grateful for every least mark of kindness shown him by his fellow men.

We read in Isaiah, "They shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away." Gladness and joy do not come by chance, but through obedience to Principle. Neither need we wait until the senses consent to our giving of thanks, but proceed if necessary in direct opposition to their testimony. Daily and hourly we consciously and unconsciously use the law of mathematics, not waiting until we feel compelled to do so; and we can as constantly utilize this spiritual idea of thanksgiving, that like a thread of gold it may be woven through the varied activities of our daily living.

Many of us have known at one time or another the power of praise to break the mesmerism of fear, thus preparing the way for the complete demonstration of Truth's power. One such experience stands out in the memory of the writer. Alone among strangers, she was suddenly stricken down with a severe illness. When she was able to make her wishes understood, a Christian Scientist was sent for. In the midst of the confusion the Scientist said to the patient: "You must stop that groaning. You must be quiet." When assured that this was impossible, she returned, "Well, then, we will turn it into praise." And it was not long before both practitioner and patient were quietly, though at first very brokenly, singing together. Human consciousness, lifted to the goodness of God, was silencing mortal mind's insistent clamor, and from that time the recovery began.

Praise is positive, uplifting, and health restoring. Breaking the mesmerism of doubt and fear, it clears the way for the activity of the healing Christ. In "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy says, "The warmth and sunlight of prayer and praise and understanding will ripen the fruits of Spirit, and goodness will have its springtide of freedom and greatness" (p. 331). Let us begin today to live in this sunshine of joy and praise, and so hasten our demonstrations of health, holiness, and harmony.

Activity

JOHN M. DEAN

ACTIVITY as applied to work in Christian Science is a much misunderstood term, and this because of its purely spiritual nature. Spiritual activity is in no way related to hurry or worry, neither is it even remotely dependent upon physical, mental, or verbal gymnastics; hence a Christian Science treatment should partake of none of these qualities. Right mental effort is never labored or strenuous, and we have the Scriptural promise, "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Thus it follows that he who is busiest to the human sense of things, may be accomplishing far less than he who manifests the quiet assurance which comes from conscious spiritual power.

In the quaint phraseology which she sometimes employed, Mrs. Eddy tells us, "Rushing around smartly is no proof of accomplishing much" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 230); and this is true on every plane of thinking. When confronted by a condition which needs to be remedied, can we improve matters by becoming excited, and does not excitement under such conditions indicate doubt of our ability to cope with threatened danger? It is always well to be calm, and the opposite belief, which sometimes asserts itself even with those whose equanimity is usually unruffled, needs to be met and mastered before we can do our best work.

It must also be plain that undue hurry indicates a belief that there is a reality to be grappled with, and that something depends upon our personal efforts. This attitude weakens one's position, for error once given the semblance of reality becomes just as real as we make it, and there can be no perfect healing until the healer's own concept is rectified. If we even remotely dignify error as an entity with power to think and to assert itself, it at once assumes for us a reality to which it has no legitimate claim. On the other hand, if we reverse this thought, and calmly and understandingly take an immovable stand on the allness of good and the nothingness of evil, whether the error be manifested as headache or cancer, the healing is accomplished. Our warfare is "not against flesh and blood," and when we are induced to believe that a powerful, tangible error needs to be overcome, then we are perforce fighting "as one that beateth the air."

On page 445 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Christian Science silences human will, quiets fear with Truth and Love, and illustrates the unlabored motion of the divine energy in healing the sick." It must be clear that infinite Love, or divine Principle, is never excited, hurried, or overtaxed. The work of good is spontaneous, and man's reflection of good should come just as naturally and with as little effort. Mortal mind has decreed that evil is more natural than good, and that consequently it is far easier to do evil than to do good. This attempted reversal of the facts of creation has held mankind in bondage to a lie, but this false concept is fast being destroyed, and it is no longer universally conceded that a lie moves more quickly than does the truth.

A helpful lesson may be taken from the narrative of the raising of Lazarus. Jesus was a short journey from Bethany when he made the simple statement to those that were with him, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep." Upon his arrival he was met with the implied rebuke from both Mary and Martha, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died," and this was followed by the intimation from Martha that to restore Lazarus was impossible, because he had been dead four days. Then we are told that "Jesus wept;" but does any one suppose that he who the next instant said, "Lazarus, come forth," and made that marvelous demonstration of raising the dead, wept because of grief at the death of his friend? Rather did he weep because of the blindness and unbelief of those whose experience should have taught them better than to think that the mere bodily presence of the Master, coupled with some show of haste, was essential to the performance of God's work.

Spiritual activity is of course the only activity that is worth while, although until mortals learn better, physical activity may seem necessary and desirable. From time immemorial it has been customary to show considerable physical activity in the sick room, and anxiety and solicitude have actually been kept in the foreground as though they were indispensable to proper treatment. The true Christian Scientist is never indifferent to the needs of the sick and suffering, but because custom has decreed that constant questioning, or the taking of temperature, or manipulation, or medication, or any of these is necessary to healing, Christian Science with its quiet and unemotional methods is often misunderstood, and its representatives are called cold and indifferent.

There is a vast difference between divine compassion and mere human sympathy. One helps, while the other harms. One is serene and calm; the other is apt to be disturbed and excited. One knows; the other doubts. One relies solely on the activity of Spirit; the other depends on the counterfeit activity of matter. One understands that everything depends upon God; the other believes that all depends upon some human personality and material methods. In short, one places all trust in Truth, while the other relies upon error. Thus it is seen that in the Christian healing of the sick the difference between divine compassion and human sympathy is exactly the difference between God and senseless drugs.

It follows then that the serenity of a Christian Scientist is not born of stoicism, or of a lofty disdain of those things which need to be corrected. Spiritual confidence is born of a sense of the ever-presence of God and the consequent nonexistence of His supposed opposite, devil or evil. However, this attitude cannot beget indifference to human needs or make one slow to respond to a call for help. Evil needs to be recognized and corrected, just as one would rectify mistakes in mathematics or in music; but just as these inharmonies cannot be overcome by accepting them as true, or by superficially sympathizing with the one who believes them, so must it be in the work of correcting other errors, which are just as mental, whether or not the world is ready to acknowledge that fact.

There is an old Latin proverb which means "Hasten slowly." This holds true in the realm of metaphysics as well as in the so-called realm of physics, and this fact needs to be definitely recognized. When work in Christian Science becomes laborious, or hurried, or irksome, it ceases to be scientific. To take note of time in the work of healing is out of line with a proper concept of healing, and is apt to be an indication of impatience. "Let patience have her perfect work," the apostle counsels, and history contains no record of true healing through hurry or impatience.

Even when error seems to be in the ascendant, the Christian Scientist knows that this condition is only a temporary belief, which the activity of divine law will destroy when the hearts of men are ready for it. The operation of Truth is not necessarily either slow or fast, but is always timed with man's readiness to accept it. Thus some healings are instantaneous, while others appear protracted. The world has yet to learn the true meaning of that saying of Peter, "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years."

"Little foxes"

FREDERICK R. RHODES

WHEN even a small understanding of Christian Science is sufficient to bring a feeling of security to the human consciousness, it is strange that the student is inclined to underrate the prophylactic side of this teaching until one of the many incidents which go to make up the human sense of existence causes him to think what a deep debt of gratitude he owes for the revelation of the ever presence and protection of divine Truth. He then recognizes that it is this divine protection which has placed him to a great extent out of the reach of those little occurrences which in their varied appearances would tend to spoil the sense of harmony to which we are entitled as "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ."

In Solomon's Song we read about "the little foxes, that spoil the vines." All Christian people have admitted that these foxes stood for various phases of error, and unless we guard our thought assiduously they may gain a foothold in our consciousness under a variety of disguises, among which are procrastination, apathy, worry, doubt, and by no means least a subtle error which mortal mind calls "near enough." This "near enough" mental attitude has proved itself responsible for a great deal of trouble in the human experience, as it is the parent thought and forerunner of laziness, inexactitude, limitation, and the like, and is one of the chief delusions of this mortal mind. One of the first truths we learn in Christian Science is, "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation" (Science and Health, p. 468); therefore it logically follows that there can in reality be no such condition as "near enough," because whatever is not in complete accord with the truth of being does not really exist.

As in the science of numbers there can be only one answer to any given computation, so in the Science of being harmony can be obtained only by exact thinking, or knowing the truth. It is therefore the duty of all those who have named the name of Christ, in their study and practice of Christian Science, to be on guard all the time against any evidence of this little fox creeping into either thought or deed and endeavoring to spoil the individual expression of the parent vine.

One way in which all Christian Scientists can protect themselves is by reading the works published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, for they are as clean and wholesome as it is possible for literature to be. These give us an intelligent ability to discern the "little foxes" by a gradual thought purifying process, and naturally at the same time uplift our ideals to the point of becoming real in our daily experiences. It would be quite impossible to overestimate the value of The Christian Science Monitor in leavening the thought of the world, and as a newspaper it is becoming increasingly apparent to all that its mission, as stated by our Leader in the first number,—"to injure no man, but to bless all mankind,"—is being slowly yet surely effected.

Digitized by Google

The world little realized then and has not yet begun to apprehend fully the real value of the discovery made by Mrs. Eddy of the demonstrable availability of the Christ, Truth, at all times and under every circumstance. It is only possible to become conscious of this as one progresses in understanding, because the effects of truth can be discerned only as the human consciousness is uplifted until its eternal progress gradually transforms human conditions, for, as our Leader tells us (Science and Health, p. 54), "through the magnitude of his [Jesus'] human life, he demonstrated the divine Life."

A Robin's Song

ELEANOR S. STURTEVANT

IT was a dreary day,—the wind was blowing clouds of dust over the streets, the clanging cars were raising their share of it, besides making the usual noise, and the many swiftly passing automobiles were adding the fumes of gasoline to the rest. It all seemed very trying to the writer, who was endeavoring to cross the street with a child clinging to one hand and with numerous packages in the other. "What an inharmonious condition!" came the thought, and "What a disagreeable day—what confusion!" quickly followed, for the home just left had seemed so distasteful: the furnishings were old, the duties manifold, good endeavors were evil spoken of, and selfishness and injustice seemed to prevail.

Just as I reached the center of the street I heard the song of a robin. Almost invisible, nevertheless there he was, on the limb of a lonely old poplar, singing cheerily away as though his little throat could not express all his gratitude. But why here? I questioned. Why does he not fly to the pretty park a few blocks away? Instantly came the answer: It is not the harmonious places that need the song of joy, but the seemingly dark, unhappy spots that need to know peace and love and harmony. With this thought came the understanding that if one is living in harmony with Principle, the heart will sing its song of joy and gratitude just as unconsciously as did the little bird, and its melody will be heard above the discord of mortal thought and opinion. Needless to say, the demonstration was made, for into my consciousness came rest and peace. Besides this, in a short time a new home and many added blessings were realized.

It was only the song of a robin, but he was doing as much as he could to add to the joy of the world,—and why should not we who are the children of a king do as much? What a keen sense of gratitude we should have that through the discovery of Christian Science we can find real peace, and be able to sing even when clouds are darkest, because of the wonderful privilege that is ours of living in this time of the world's history, when we can demonstrate that the kingdom of God is here and now. Just as spontaneous and unceasing as was the song of the bird, so should our gratitude be for the blessing brought to us by one noble woman, who could perceive Principle and live in harmony with it all through the storm of mortal thought, that she might make known its message to a needy world.

The "Key to the Scriptures"

EDITH AZALIA ADAMS BAILEY

ONE who has not studied Christian Science as taught in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," is sometimes curious as to why this book should be called a key. One such seeker for truth eagerly searched through the pages of this book for the key, expecting to find a Bible concordance that would explain various Bible words and phrases. Coming in due course to the Glossary, a sense of disappointment was felt because this "Bible dictionary" seemed so meager in its scope by comparison with the preconceived idea of what an adequate "Key to the Scriptures" should embody. Serious study of the Christian Science textbook, however, showed it to be a veritable key which does unlock to the understanding many spiritual treasures of the Bible that formerly were unappreciated, and it does throw new and definite light on much more of which the true meaning was before only partially grasped.

Only those who have passed through a similar experience—and doubtless there are many such—can know the sense of joy and reassurance which comes in the midst of doubt when on the printed page in Science and Health is met the expression of many of the ideas already secretly held regarding the teaching of the Scriptures along various lines. The sense of gratitude almost overwhelms the reader in finding himself no longer isolated and alone in his beliefs, because he recognizes that all Christian Scientists must believe the same, in so far as they accept the Christian Science textbook as an exposition of the Bible.

The child in school begins his study of arithmetic as a portion of the training laid down in the curriculum. He has a textbook which states clearly the fundamental rules governing each step to be taken in working out the problems given. The child may not understand that arithmetic is included in the course to train his thought along mathematical lines. He may not understand why it is of any benefit to him personally or to anybody else to spend time and effort in learning and applying the rules to the problems assigned for the daily lesson; yet with the truly childlike mind, unquestioning before the voice of authority, he sets to work to learn them and to put them into practice. He comes to reason out why he gets a certain result. Experience in the application of the principle taught in the textbook makes him expert in time, and given a problem at random, he is able without reference to the textbook to make use of the right rule to solve that particular problem.

For a time he unquestioningly accepts the statement of his teacher that he has solved the problems correctly. The instructor represents to him all that he himself has not attained in knowledge and its application. Then he begins to wonder how his teacher always knows when he gets the right answer to the problems, and he learns that there is a "key" which gives the correct answers to the problems in the arithmetic. Upon inquiry he finds that somebody else has learned the same rules that he is learning, has applied them, and has solved the same problems upon which he is working; somebody else has proved the solutions right and set down the "answers," so that the future student may know when he too obtains the correct result. Having found out this much, it is not long before the student is able to work out and prove the accuracy of similar problems not stated in the textbook.

So the individual investigating Christian Science often takes up Science and Health with no definite idea of why he should study it. Yet because some friend whom he implicitly trusts and respects has recommended the study of Christian Science, or because he has been told of some marvelous cure of sin or disease accomplished through the demonstration of an understanding of Christian Science, or because he has been told that herein is his only hope of salvation from a so-called incurable disease, unconquerable sin, or the dread of death itself, or because the book comes quietly to his notice without the intervention of any personal effort to bring it about and he reads it "to find out what it is,"—in whatever form it comes, he recognizes the voice of authority. Thus he fulfills the first condition necessary in obtaining a knowledge of Christian Science, for he begins to read the textbook, though perchance understanding but little of what he reads. The mere fact that he does read it gives evidence of his sincerity of purpose, though he may not admit it and may even go so far as to deny it. At first he may find only a sentence here and another there that he can understand, but they let light into his darkened consciousness and gradually the logic of Mrs. Eddy's writing convinces him. He begins to understand and to apply the truth he is learning.

Like the child in school, the student of Christian Science discovers for himself the Principle underlying its teachings; he becomes able to reason so as to apply the truths he is learning, and finds the application practical. He gains confidence in working, knowing that divine Principle, God, cannot fail, and thus becomes able not only to solve his own problems, but to extend a helping hand to his fellow men. Like the schoolboy advancing from arithmetic to geometry, he can solve "originals" through applying the understanding he has gained of absolute Truth, even though textbook and teacher be not immediately at hand in the hour when the need comes to prove what has been attained by sincere study and joyous and grateful practice.

In the quiet hours of study of the Bible and Science and Health the student finds that Mrs. Eddy's book is indeed a "Key to the Scriptures," a key which makes the Bible an open book instead of one securely locked. He finds that Mrs. Eddy discovered the same basic laws that he is learning; that she applied them and solved the same problems in her experience that he has to meet in his; that she proved her work correct and set down the "answers," so that her students may know when they too obtain the right result. More than that, in this day the student of Christian Science comes to know that not only our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, worked out and proved the truth of what she learned and taught, but that countless numbers of her loyal students and students' students are being enabled to do the same thing through the spiritual apprehension of divine Principle revealed in the Christian Science textbook. Hour by hour their number steadily increases, and the problems of humanity are being worked out.

On page 465 of Science and Health we read: "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love," and this basic truth is the addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division of the Science of Mind, which is more truly mathematical in its exactness than any of the so-called natural sciences. It may be said to supply the much sought for "fourth dimension."

Shadows

EDITH L. PERKINS

WHEN shadows fall, soft doth the evening fold
Her veil of purple o'er the weary west,
Homeward a swallow flies to guard its nest
Till night is melted in the morning's gold.
Thus through the hours that may seem dark and cold
The Father shields His children on His breast,
Well knowing what each one hath need of best,
Till all in Mind reality behold.

Rejoice, dear heart, for now the day is here!
Though dark the night, glad doth the morning break;
Love's light alike for all is shining clear,
Then freely of its radiance partake,—
So from the seeming shadows of the past
Come forth and see that only joy thou hast!

The one really essential thing to know about malpractice is that there is no such thing. The one essential thing to know about a malpractitioner is that there is no such person. It is not sufficient to say, as Betsey Prig said to Mrs. Gamp, on a famous occasion, of the impalpable Mrs. Harris, "I don't believe there's no sich a person;" it is necessary to demonstrate it as a fixed scientific fact. The philosophic mind coming suddenly face to face with such deductions from axioms it has itself laid down, hesitates, recoils, and finally surrenders to the evidence of its senses. Matter, for instance, generations of the philosophers have maintained to be unreal. Plato said so, Abelard said so, Berkeley said so, Sir Oliver Lodge says so. Now, if this is true, physical diseases are the result of mind, energy, or some other supposititiously nonmaterial first cause. But when the philosopher feels sick, what happens? He accepts the evidence of his senses, which, on his own showing, are phenomenal and not noumenal, and with unblushing illogicality proceeds to doctor mind with matter, cause with effect. It was so that Berkeley exalted siris, the humblest drug in the pharmacopœia, to the status of a universal panacea.

Mrs. Eddy differed from the philosophers,—it might more fairly be said from the soi-disant philosophers, for she was really the first true philosopher since the first century of the Christian era,—inasmuch as she went boldly, step by step, from her axioms to their logical and inevitable conclusions. "That," Jesus had said, "which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Just nineteen hundred years later Mrs. Eddy wrote, on page 9 of "Unity of Good": "What is the cardinal point of the difference in my metaphysical system? This: that by knowing the unreality of disease, sin, and death, you demonstrate the allness of God," of Spirit. Again, that which is born of the flesh is mortal, perishing, unreal; and that which is born of the Spirit is spiritual, real, and eternal.

You may argue, ad infinitum, that matter is indestructible, that as Shakespeare himself said:—

> Imperious Cæsar, dead and turned to clay,
> Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

The fact, the material fact, remains that on the showing of philosophic idealism, from Plato to Lodge, matter is a phenomenon; and, therefore, so far from Cæsar being resolved into a brick, the human mind has exchanged a subjective condition, called Cæsar, for a subjective condition called a brick, and your Cæsar or your brick, to quote Shakespeare once again, "are such stuff as dreams are made on." Berkeley declared that matter was unreal, and then, when this unreal matter became sick, proposed to cure it with unreal tar water. Shakespeare once poetically said, "Throw physic to the dogs: I'll none of it." One wonders what he would have said, in practice, to the mummy powder of his contemporary, the learned Sir Thomas Browne.

Anyway, if Macbeth disbelieved in physic, he thoroughly believed in witches; everybody in Shakespeare's day did, and the thinnest of partitions doth divide witchcraft from malpractice. Now the belief in malpractice is part of the belief in matter. It is impossible to believe in the first without believing in the second; nor could you believe in the first unless you believed in the second. The moment, therefore, you make matter unreal you make malpractice unreal, for as Mrs. Eddy writes, on page 334 of "Miscellaneous Writings," "You must find error to be nothing: then, and only then, do you handle it in Science."

The trouble, or one of the troubles, is that it is often the human being's sense of self-importance that causes him to cling to his own materiality, and it is no less frequently his sense of self-importance that causes him to insist on the power of the malpractitioner.

When people tell you they have a great deal to meet they are commonly engaged in telling you that they are people of no mean importance. The malpractitioner may pass you over as too insignificant to trouble about; but not so them. Nor would it ever do to admit that malpractice could be met and overcome with a very moderate understanding of Science. Such a statement would imply that the malpractitioner was a nonentity, which is exactly what he is. Yet until you admit that he is a nonentity, you will never find error to be nothing, and therefore you will never succeed in handling it scientifically. The man, in short, who insists on the power of evil, writes down his own ignorance of Science, as completely as any Dogberry could have desired. The fact is, that believe in malpractice, and you are bound to have a malpractitioner; believe in a malpractitioner, and malpractice will be with you always.

At the same time, it need hardly be said that the prime factors in superinducing a belief in the power of malpractice are fear and ignorance. Fear is essentially the result of ignorance, for ignorance constitutes the unknown. As soon as a man understands what he is dealing with he rises to meet it, and his knowledge becomes eventually the conqueror. When, of course, this knowledge is founded upon Principle, the victory is irresistible. Man must face evil as its master. He must recognize its unreality, and grasp the fact that, though it claims omnipotence, and though scholastic theology and human experience based on this theology have surrendered to its claim upon this earth and deferred the victory to a new world, nevertheless it remains exactly what Jesus termed it, "a liar, and the father of it," and so, having no place in Truth, is consigned through the operation of Principle to unreality.

The meaning of this, like all the statements of Christian Science, is simplicity itself. It means that the existence of malpractice like that of any other form of evil is a lie, and that it depends for whatever supposititious effect it may seem to have upon the victim's ignorance of Truth. Nobody knows better than the malpractitioner himself his own innocuousness. He knows that he depends on the ignorance, the fear, or the sensuality of the world to work out the suggestions he originates. These are, apparently, terrible weapons, and he prides himself on his knowledge of how to make use of them. But, fortunately, they abide not in the truth, and knowledge of this renders them impotent. But evil must be handled as nothing, in order to be handled at all.

How then do you handle evil as nothing, and make nothing of the malpractitioner? It is the simplest thing in the world. "Jesus," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 476 of Science and Health, "beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick." Keep, then, in your mind the picture of a human and personal malpractitioner, and malpractice as an operative force must remain a supposititious reality, always present to a supposititious consciousness. But decline to accept this sternly, determinedly, irrevocably; blot out the picture of the malpractitioner, and see equally determinedly and equally irrevocably that there is nothing but the image and likeness of God, whatever that may be,—and whatever it may be, it is not a perfect human being,—and you will begin to laugh at your childish fear, and the victory will be yours. Then, instead of being the plaything of evil, you will begin to be the master of evil, and to understand something of what Isaiah meant when he wrote: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Lawrence (Mass.) Tribune]

In the March number of the North American Review there was an article headed, "What Are the Churches to Do?" by the Rev. S. D. McConnell, LL.D., D.D. This writer, whose viewpoint was indicated by his title and degrees, stated the present plight of the churches in these words: "Time was when their task was to win bad men; now the task is to retain the good ones." This frank avowal by a prominent member of the clerical profession should be of special interest to the people of Lawrence. They have just had occasion to wonder what reason could induce professedly Christian churches to employ a practiced vilifier to speak against Mrs. Eddy and Christian Science.

It is now generally known that Christian Science is founded on the teaching and example of Christ Jesus no less than are the faiths that differ from it and from each other, and it is generally recognized that this religion has been of great benefit to many people. It has stood the Master's test of all religions, "Ye shall know them by their fruits." Christian Science has not only conferred inestimable benefits on its adherents; it has exerted a wholesome influence on the entire mass of human thought. That it has wrought beneficial changes in the theory and practice of medicine, has been admitted by more than one representative of the medical profession. That it has wrought profound changes in the religious beliefs of mankind, has been admitted scantily by members of the clerical profession; but this fact can be clearly proved by comparing the teachings of Christian Science with the trend and change of religious thought since 1875, when the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was first published. The article mentioned at the beginning of this letter is an item of evidence to this effect.

In this situation the progress of Christian Science cannot be checked by reckless and violent words. It is more blessed to be reviled than to be a reviler. Indeed, the only blessings that ensue from reviling Mrs. Eddy or Christian Science are those which come to people who are moved by it to seek authoritative information about this benefactor of the human race and the religion of which she is Discoverer and Founder. Instead of opposing Christian Science, other churches should adopt it. Fortunately for everybody, this process is going on in spite of opposition.

In a report of a lecture under the caption "Intellectual and Spiritual Problems," reference is made to the subject of Christian Science. The lecturer stated that Christian Science was based upon false metaphysics, but he did not substantiate his statement by any proof; surely such a method could not be considered very convincing by any audience.

The practical evidences of the healing and saving power of the Word of God, as understood and practiced in Christian Science, are surely a sufficient answer to such a remark as the above, and these have during the last half century spread themselves in countless thousands all over the civilized world. Christian Science certainly does teach that God is the only cause and creator, and therefore that everything that is real must partake of the same qualities as the cause from which it emanates; otherwise there would be more than one creator, and God would cease to be infinite.

Speaking from the only real point of view, that of infinite intelligence, man is never an originator or creator, but he unfolds or reflects the thoughts which originate in the infinite Mind, or God. When man thinks something which is not in accord with the truth about God, he only thinks he thinks, and in consequence does not express the truth. As it is impossible in any science to conceive of a principle except through the idea which correctly expresses it, so real or true thinking, through which we gain an understanding of the Science of Christianity, can only be the consciousness of the attributes of God, who is the Principle of this Science of being.

It is quite obvious that all the wrong sense of Christian Science betrayed by our critic is due to the inability to discern between the relative and the absolute. As Paul said, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." The mortal sense of right or good is of no value in determining the real or spiritual. Our Master, speaking of John the Baptist, said, "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." It is therefore through a higher human recognition of the real, and not in the mortal belief of knowledge, that we are eventually able to render ourselves servants "unto righteousness," and thus gain a sense of the exact or scientific knowledge of God.

Christian Science proves beyond a doubt that "the unity of humanity" will be ultimately brought about through the individual recognition of the one divinity, in which all the children of our Father-Mother God will dwell in that unity of thought and purpose which constitutes eternal harmony, or the kingdom of heaven. On page 131 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy writes, "Christian Scientists preserve unity, and so shadow forth the substance of our sublime faith, and the evidence of its being built upon the rock of divine oneness,—one faith, one God, one baptism."

[Samuel Greenwood in Victoria (Canada) Times]

The report of an address on Christian Science before the church summer school, rightly calls for some comment. The division of Christendom into many differing creeds and churches proves the lack of uniformity of thought on religious questions; but when one's difference of opinion develops into denunciation, he is perilously near that unreasoning intolerance which has cursed the past so abundantly.

It is not in any sense correct to say that "Christian Science is the creed of a class," or that "it is a plea for the prosperous who are weary of life." Its appeal is universal. It is the appeal for good thinking and good living, and in this appeal there can be no class distinctions. Christian Science is being sought by rich and poor alike, although in most instances the latter lose their sense of poverty as they gain a better understanding of man's relation to God.

The speaker's acknowledgment that "Christian Science has produced physical, mental, and moral cures," belies his statement that it is "anti-Christian," or that it is "scientifically cruel," whatever he means by that. Christian Science teaches, not that all existence is a dream, but only the untrue sense of being. St. Paul's exhortation to "put off the old man," or the carnal, evil sense of man, implies that that sense of man is not worth keeping; in other words, it is not divinely real, but in its relation to reality is as a dream.

Mrs. Eddy's acceptance of the Scriptural teaching of God's omnipotence, omnipresence, and omniscience, that is, His allness or infinitude, should not call for criticism on the part of a Christian minister. Christian Science does not teach that God is "everything" in the sense which the speaker evidently attaches to that word, for God's allness could not logically include the things which the Scriptures tell us must pass away, a declaration plainly based upon the recognition that these ephemeral things must pass away because they are not scientifically real, in other words, not permanent. The world should have learned by this time, through its fiery experiences, the folly of quarreling over the definition of God; the demand is not so much for creeds and theories as for actual Christian living.

The present instance recalls a statement by a Congregational clergyman, as quoted in the Longmont (Col.) Ledger: "I have learned that the idea most people have of Christian Science is an erroneous one, and that the thing so often attacked as Christian Science is not Christian Science at all. I am not a Christian Scientist. There are some things upon which we differ, there are more things upon which we agree, and the few things upon which we differ should not prevent us from loving each other and living and working together for the glory of God and the good of men."

[Editorial in Sherburne County Star-News, Elk River, Minn.]

A magazine article upon Christian Science has come to our attention, entitled "Christian Science under the X-ray," in which the writer in scathing terms seeks to prove that this cult, its tenets being unprovable by scientific test, is therefore "un-Christian and ridiculous." But wait. How many of the accepted facts of human and natural life are not to be proved by scientific analyzing? We hold no brief for Christian Science; but because we cannot place it under the X-ray and note its workings is no reason for passing it by with a sneer as "ridiculous."

Can any scientist explain exactly how a blade of grass, for instance, grows? They talk learnedly, of course, of the chemistry of the soil, the green coloring matter with a long name, and its conversion by the plant into stem and leaf, but how? How? What causes the plant to accomplish this transformation? The scientists are up against a stone wall. Another test. Can the greatest intelligence explain exactly how the words are conveyed hundreds of miles through the air in wireless telegraphy and picked up at the end? Sound waves, of course, but how and why? Until we can explain and dissect and X-ray facts like these we have no right to say that any belief, because not demonstrable by scientific test, is "ridiculous."

[Charles W. J. Tennant in Wallasey and Wirral Chronicle, Seacombe, England]

My attention has been drawn to an article entitled "Spiritualism: True and False." The writer of it seems to think that when Christian Science came on the scene the "healing power and spirit phenomena" of Spiritualism were withdrawn. Christian Science is defined by Mrs. Eddy, on page 1 of "Rudimental Divine Science," as "the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony." True spiritual healing has not been withdrawn through the advent of Christian Science, but greatly increased. It is spreading with phenomenal rapidity, in proof of the Biblical prophecies, "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea;" and "The inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity," because Christian Science has revealed the understanding of the words of our Master, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The Near Future

THESE are days when the world is mobilizing its resources to the last available unit; but, because "all is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation" (Science and Health, p. 468), all that can really be mobilized is right mental activity. Is the Church of Christ, Scientist, collectively, and are its members individually, mobilizing spiritual resources upon a basis that will enable them to stand in these "latter days," and to fulfill their responsibility to themselves and to all mankind?

In the Sentinel of September 1, in her article "Principle and Practice," our Leader speaks in words which should awaken the slumbering thought of Christian Scientists and transform them into real "sentinels of Zion's watchtowers" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 370). This latest message, preserved until the hour for its presentation, should startle thought and compel self-examination. Self-knowledge alone is the touchstone by which can be determined the question of whether those who have enlisted in the ranks of righteousness, progress, and Science are fulfilling their duty in reflecting the saving power of wisdom, Truth, and Love.

As Mrs. Eddy explains, the "faith-Scientist" observes only effects. He bases his daily existence and future expectations largely upon the transitory changing opinion of human belief shifted about by the winds of mental suggestion. His thought fluctuates between hopes "for a convenient peace" and of physical ease and material abundance on the one hand, and discord, dread, and fear in its many forms on the other.

The invasion of Truth into the hidden realm of mental suggestion which is doing the bidding of every form and system of malice, idolatry, and sensualism, is producing in an ever increasing degree a chemicalization in human consciousness which can only be neutralized and rendered harmless by the demonstration of Christian Science. It is the effect of this hidden mental influence which today obstructs and confuses the fulfillment and fruition of the right motives and desires of men and nations.

On page 571 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says: "Who is telling mankind of the foe in ambush? Is the informer one who sees the foe? If so, listen and be wise. Escape from evil, and designate those as unfaithful stewards who have seen the danger and yet have given no warning."

Again she has warned Christian Scientists in these words: "Peals that should startle the slumbering thought from its erroneous dream are partially unheeded." And again: "This material world is even now becoming the arena for conflicting forces. On one side there will be discord and dismay; on the other side there will be Science and peace" (Science and Health, pp. 223, 96).

The Christian Science Monitor reveals the signs and stages of evil's claims to power, and also the evidence in human thought of Truth's appearing. The Christian Science Sentinel is the mouthpiece of that which guides, guards, and directs the awakened thought toward the goal of everlasting victory. A legion of consecrated, irresistible right thinkers is being recruited for world service in the great mental conflict of Armageddon which is now before us. God has commissioned this army for active and constant service in the universal realm of thought, wherein are seen both the crumbling of the structures of false mortal belief and the "harbingers of truth's full-orbed appearing" (Science and Health, p. 224).

Vital questions of the hour are these: Do we understand the campaign? Is our armor whole and invincible? Is our equipment complete and effective?

The Trumpet Call

"IF the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?" This was Paul's vivid question to the Corinthians.

It might be supposed that he spoke as a Roman citizen, drawing his figure from the legions of the all-pervading army of Rome. But in his letter to the Romans he declared his allegiance to his people, saying, "I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin." How often as a child he must have been thrilled with the stories of his people, hearing in imagination the trumpet blasts of Ehud and Gideon as they rallied the people against Moabites and Midianites; the trumpet call of Saul the king; of Joab, David's great captain; or of Sheba, son of Bichri the rebel. Read the story, from Sinai on to the Apocalypse, and one hears what Milton described as "sonorous metal blowing martial sounds." At Sinai there was "the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud," which made the people in the camp tremble; and the Apocalypse begins with the hearing of "a great voice, as of a trumpet," and tells of seven angels with trumpets who in turn sounded the judgments of God. No wonder then that the prophets as spiritual teachers use the trumpet in metaphor. Ezekiel describes Israel's desolate condition by saying, "They have blown the trumpet, even to make all ready; but none goeth to the battle."

Ezekiel's parable of the watchman is of special interest in its careful discussion of responsibility: "If the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman: if when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning . . . his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul." Then the "watchman unto the house of Israel" is warned that if he do not "speak to warn the wicked from his way," he shall be the one responsible; but if he "warn the wicked of his way to turn from it," and the one in error does not turn, the watchman is delivered from responsibility. Obedience thus maintains the watchman in the safe place, and enables him to do his work aright without involving him in any sorrowful consequences.

What soldier knows or cares who the trumpeter is, so long as the signal is clearly sounded and he knows it to be a signal for himself and all his comrades to obey? Here then is the beauty of all truly metaphysical work. It is absolutely right, but it is impersonal. When a demonstration of healing takes place, it does not mean that the agent has himself done something, but that he has been able to sound the trumpet call to right action, which the patient has obeyed. What those who hear really recognize and obey is the signal which originates with divine Mind. Think for example of Peter's clarion call to the man lame from birth who was laid daily at the temple gate: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." No wonder the response was immediate, "and he, leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God."

The worker who works for himself, or the writer who speaks for himself, is like the singer who sings for distinction. By his personal attitude he makes for himself an audience of judges, who divide into admirers of his performance and critics of his method; they wage war over his person. But the metaphysical worker or writer announces truth even as a true musician announces harmony. His one thought and desire is to declare the truth of being, the perfection and completeness of God and His idea; and if through study and demonstration he has prepared himself to do this, the trumpet sends forth no uncertain sound, but rather the clear call to victory over every form of error. And the audience is united by giving attention, whereby every listener gains some portion of good, each one receives according to his developed ability, and is grateful for what he has received. It is as if there were a great stairway, and on the first step were beginners in the study of Christian Science, then higher up those who have proved it for themselves, then those who have proved it for others, until the whole movement is represented; then the message metaphysical reaches them like the piercing-sweet strains of a trumpet; and they rejoice, not thinking of the trumpeter, but of the harmony and the clearness of the message.

Every Christian Scientist in any community is as a watchman of the house of Israel, and should be alert to his responsibility as such. If he is obedient to Principle, he will be enlightened to know when the warning note should sound; and if he can become as wise and loving as Jesus was, it will be said of him that he too speaks "as one having authority, and not as the scribes;" the trumpet will sound with certainty. The explanation of inefficiency in some messengers is that they are more concerned about the reception and the entertainment, the honor and the perquisite of the ambassador, than they are about the message of their King and its delivery; but Principle is "the great King over all the earth," and the messengers of Principle are themselves so highly rewarded by being near to God that any material or personal favor from man is paltry and insignificant.

Mrs. Eddy's message to the first annual meeting of the church in Concord (Miscellany, p. 155) might in this connection be received by every one of us for inspiration: "May it catch the early trumpet-call, take step with the twentieth century, leave behind those things that are behind, lay down the low laurels of vainglory, and, pressing forward in the onward march of Truth, run in joy, health, holiness, the race set before it, till, home at last, it finds the full fruition of its faith, hope, and prayer."

Habits

HUMANITY prides itself on its good habits,—but is there reason to set so high a value upon mere habits, even if they are accounted good? That which passes for habit is so often merely an attempt to circumvent inspiration. It is apt to be based upon fear and to smack of mental laziness. Limitation sets its prison mark upon almost all human habits. They run in grooves and prevent human beings from hearing or heeding the voice of Spirit. The political habit makes a man vote with his party, right or wrong; the ecclesiastical habit keeps millions in bondage to false gods and places a barrier between them and the only true God. The habits which make men follow the same daily routine, use the same paths, turn the same corners, remark on the same features of the landscape, repeat the same jokes,—these habits belittle and confine. They may induce people to pride themselves on being reliable and sedate, but there is no true growth, no possibility of progress in them.

Spiritual progress involves a constant change of habits. Inspirational living is not at first habitual, but spontaneous. Man's attempt to outline his own mode of living exposes him to the doom of all flesh, but obedience to spiritual intuitions insures safety. The worst that "spiritual wickedness in high places" can wish for its victims is to have people consider themselves of settled habits, whether for good or bad. Then supposititious evil intelligence can always know where to find its prey, and the good human off guard falls easily into every trap of mental deviltry. There is nothing more disconcerting to intentional evil than the obedience of the Christian Scientist to spiritual inspiration. Since evil cannot understand spiritual spontaneity, it is necessarily baffled by the one who follows Spirit instead of mere habit.

But some one will say, Surely the habit of going to church is good, the habit of keeping the body clean, the habit of not contracting debts. The answer is, Yes, and no. As a mere habit, going to church has no efficacy for good, and might indeed bring one into subjection to the worst scourge of the human race, namely, ecclesiasticism. But if the desire to know God and His man actuates one in going to church, that desire is blessed and not the habit. Mrs. Eddy found herself under the necessity of warning the readers of her textbook even against "the mere habit of pleading with the divine Mind, as one pleads with a human being," which, she writes, "perpetuates the belief in God as humanly circumscribed,—an error which impedes spiritual growth" (Science and Health, p. 2). On the other hand, she assures us that "the habitual struggle to be always good is unceasing prayer" (p. 4); and on page 11 she writes, "Prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, nor can prayer alone give us an understanding of Truth; but prayer, coupled with a fervent habitual desire to know and do the will of God, will bring us into all Truth."

To keep the body clean is indeed desirable, but if this is done from the standpoint of mere habit, based upon fear or in compliance with supposed laws of health, this very habit may be used by evil to bring about loss of health. Not to incur debts may appear commendable, but such a habit, springing from fear of indebtedness or from unwillingness to be under obligations, may prevent one at a critical moment from earning a fortune or saving a city.

Society must rid itself of the worship of habit before its members can rise to the point of safety in "the secret place of the most High." The divinely natural is the humanly unexpected. Therefore to be ever living in the humanly expected is to exclude one's self from divine naturalness. Many a man is today keeping himself out of the kingdom of heaven by accepting as righteous the habits created for him by the world's laws. Let no one glory in mere routine, for in after days, when the call comes from Spirit for sudden activity, routine may prove a millstone about the neck.

Christian Scientists are learning to habituate themselves to listen for the "still small voice" of spiritual understanding, which takes no account of their habits. Abraham broke away from the deep-rooted human tendency of outlining when he obeyed the divine command and went forth into a land he knew not of. This call comes to every Christian Scientist constantly.

Pleasure and Pain

THE psalmist gives us this assurance respecting our heavenly Father, "At thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." It need hardly be said that the pursuit of pleasure begins for mortals in earliest childhood, and coincident with this pursuit come endless disappointments and sorrows, for the human sense of pleasure seldom rises above the plane of sense satisfaction, and is therefore bounded by materiality, concerning which the master Christian said, "The flesh profiteth nothing." This only means, however, that we should seek until we find the pleasures divinely provided and promised, which neither deceive nor disappoint.

In the book of Proverbs we read, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. . . . Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, has done more than any one since the time of Christ Jesus to point the way to true pleasure, and she has done this by showing the utter fallacy and delusiveness of belief in the pleasure sought in any wise through the material senses. It cannot be denied that those who become addicted to the drink habit do so in almost every instance because they are on a quest for pleasure, although some would say that their intention is to drown their sorrows in the intoxicating glass. The one who has never fallen into this particular form of error might at once see the delusiveness of it, but he might not see that until he seeks pleasure in God's way, and sees it to be inseparable from the true concept of man as God's image and likeness, he has not gone very far along the way to salvation from false belief, and should not censure the one who is enslaved in the manner that he condemns.

Mrs. Eddy's method of dealing with this phase of error—with every phase of it, indeed—is no less loving than thorough. She declares that the healing of the inebriate must come through the understanding "that there is no real pleasure in sin" (Science and Health, p. 404), and she adds, "Arouse the sinner to this new and true view of sin, show him that sin confers no pleasure, and this knowledge strengthens his moral courage and increases his ability to master evil and to love good." Our Master, who always went down to the depths in his teaching, has this to say respecting those to whom the good seed of Truth is brought, but who fail to bring forth fruit therefrom: "That which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." This is a sad picture of the disappointing search for satisfaction in any material condition, and it was doubtless because of the sorrows ensuing therefrom that in the early Christian centuries many turned their backs upon the world, and sought peace, if not pleasure, in seclusion and solitude.

Throughout all Christian history, however, there have been some sincere seekers who had at least glimpses of the vital things which never disappoint, and so we find these words in a hymn,—

> In thy service pain is pleasure,
> With thy favor loss is gain.

This is coming very near to the heart of things, for whenever we are willing to seek good at any cost, the pleasure of this ennobling quest begins to grow upon us, until at length it unfolds into the certainty of possession. In Hebrews we read that Moses, who in his early manhood was surrounded with the splendor of the Egyptian court, turned his back upon it, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." His pleasure, his joy, like that of the Master, was to be found in the glorious work of emancipating the human race from its enslavement to evil of every sort, and the writer of this epistle to the Hebrews gives us a wonderful lesson when he counsels us to "run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross."

The human sense of pleasure needs the transforming power of Spirit to cleanse it from the falsities of mortal belief, and as this is accomplished the desire for pleasure is changed into the consciousness of pure joy; and all the while new energies are being unfolded which make joy possible in every experience. The sooner we make our choice the better for us, because, as we read on page 390 of Science and Health, "Truth will at length compel us all to exchange the pleasures and pains of sense for the joys of Soul."

Current Notes

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—A few years ago a number of North Adams people became interested in Christian Science, and meetings were held at their homes, in hotel parlors, and in the Grand Army Building. The membership grew until the need of a permanent home was felt, and the society then bought the old brick schoolhouse on Chestnut Street, which was no longer used for school purposes, and fitted it up for the use to which it was to be put. It is an unpretentious but comfortable building, standing well back from the street, with a broad lawn in front, and constitutes a satisfactory home for the young and growing church.—North Adams Herald.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The contract has been let for the edifice of Fifteenth Church of Christ, Scientist, which is to be started at once at Central and Pine. It is to be a building costing more than two hundred thousand dollars. The church will seat fifteen hundred people and the Sunday school room one thousand.

HUNTINGTON PARK, ILL.—Work on the new edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, is progressing rapidly. The building has an imposing appearance, and when completed will be an edifice of which Huntington Park can be proud. The contractor says it will be ready for occupancy not later than the first of September.—Huntington Park Signal.

The Lectures

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. (Second Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Zelia S. Reidhead, who said in part:—

Jesus' life among men was a service of loving deeds, and he was the Wayshower. In the Bible, in the life and works of the Master, our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, found a demonstrable, healing truth. She was so glad and so grateful for this light which illumined her consciousness, that her whole after life was devoted to revealing to suffering and sinning humanity this gift from God. How well she did her work is evidenced by the hundreds of thousands of happy, grateful Christian Scientists the world over.

SEATTLE, WASH. (joint lecture).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by William K. Sheldon, who said in part:—

We, the members of the Christian Science churches and societies of Seattle, have invited your presence this evening in order that you may be told, so far as the limited time will permit, something of what Christian Science has done for hundreds of thousands of men and women in this broad land of ours,—what it has done for us and what it can do for you. You will be told how, through its kindly ministrations, sweetness and joy have come into lives previously embittered and sorrowful; how health, harmony, and happiness have obtained where disease, discord, and disappointment have previously made their abode. And above and beyond all, you will be told how there can come to the human consciousness here and now, glimpses at least of an endless vista of possible spiritual growth, the full realization of which would mean the attainment of the promise of the Master when he said, "Behold, the kingdom of God is within you."

You will be told that these benevolent and beneficent achievements result solely from knowing that God is, as Christian Science declares Him to be, infinite Principle, infinite Mind, infinite Life, infinite Truth, and above all infinite Love, and from knowing also that man, God's man, created in the image and likeness of Him "whom to know aright is Life eternal" (Science and Health, Pref. p. vii), is, as Christian Science declares Him to be, the perfect expression of the one infinite and perfect Mind.

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (First Church).—Ezra W. Palmer, lecturer; introduced by Thomas W. Dixson, who said in part:—

Suckled in creeds outgrown, the world has too long been asleep to the practical application of the truths of the Bible to present day needs and to a correct understanding of God and what He is and does for mankind. Awaking to its great need of what it has not, it utters Job's plaintive cry, "Oh that I knew where I might find him!" Beneath the surface of gross materialism of the present age is an undercurrent of spiritual longing and desire which a knowledge of God alone can satisfy, and to the honest inquirer in his search for the living God Christian Science offers practical proofs and demonstrations of a God that meets every need.

KANSAS CITY, KAN. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Mildred Barnes Hill, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a religion of love. The lawyer tempting Jesus asked him which was the great commandment, and Jesus said: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Through the study of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, this commandment unfolds in a scientific way, and like a rule in mathematics becomes clear as one applies it in working his problems. The Christian Scientist as he proves this spiritual truth in his daily life becomes healthier and happier.

ROANOKE, VA. (First Church).—Frank Bell, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Vira P. Dunn, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a religion, not of fear, but of love, peace, and joy, as well as of power,—a religion that is delivering the children of men from every ill "that flesh is heir to" and making them realize what it means to be made in the image and likeness of God. Christian Science declares that the teachings of the Bible are as true and as applicable to human needs today as they were two thousand years ago. It holds such statements as these to be true: "The Lord he is God; there is none else beside him." "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." "God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid."

Testimonies of Healing

During a period of nearly sixteen years I have applied the truth as taught in Christian Science and it has never failed me. Science and Health has been my practitioner. Some time ago I awakened one Saturday morning to find myself bound hand and foot with rheumatism, accompanied by high fever. There had been no previous symptoms of the illness, but the pain became intensified to such a degree that a member of my family asked me to apply for help. The request startled me, for it was such a new experience; it seemed to suggest failure and a lack of understanding, and I felt quite crestfallen. Just at this point a passage from Science and Health came to mind with great force, "If students do not readily heal themselves, they should early call an experienced Christian Scientist to aid them" (p. 420).

I then asked myself, Who are the students? Can any one say he is as yet a graduate of Christian Science? Thus my decision was made, and the next step was the choice of a practitioner. I wanted to be led, with no thought of personality, and again I asked myself, What mental quality do you consider the best transmitter of truth? The answer came instantly, "Honesty is spiritual power" (Science and Health, p. 453). I pondered these words, earnestly striving to comprehend their import, for I felt the word was used in a sense higher than a monetary one.

I called for the dictionary, and found honesty there defined as freedom from dissimulation; fairness; justice. Then I remembered that Mrs. Eddy says, "In the Science of Mind-healing, it is imperative to be honest, for victory rests on the side of immutable right" (Science and Health, p. 446). Thus my thought was led to one who exemplified these qualities to a marked degree. The following day I attended both church services and was perfectly free; every vestige of the frightful dream had vanished. I can but feebly express my gratitude for this experience, for the clearer realization of "the word of God" as a two-edged sword.

I am profoundly grateful to our Leader for her gift to the world. "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" has been to me a beacon light in every time of trial, doubt, and perplexity. I know that God is all-presence and all-power, and His presence and power are as available when the storms of sense rage and roar as when the seas are tranquil.

EMMA GOODMAN, San Francisco, Cal.

Like many others, I came into Christian Science when God found opportunity in my necessity. After years of prejudice against this teaching, based upon ignorance of its fundamentals, and after all material remedies had failed, I found myself in the position of a mariner in a stormy sea without sail or rudder and in a sinking ship. Divine Love, reflected by a friend, lifted me from my seeming peril and piloted me to the safe harbor of Christian Science. With a few treatments by a practitioner liver trouble of thirty-five years' standing entirely disappeared, and since that time, about six years ago, I have been healed of many ailments of throat and lungs, including bronchitis, acute lung trouble, and influenza. About two years ago, while away from home, I was instantaneously healed of a severe attack of pleurisy.

For thirty years I was an inveterate smoker, but this habit was entirely overcome by Christian Science over a year ago. My health was never better than it is today, and work has become a pleasure. My bonds are being loosed one by one, and I am daily enjoying that freedom which is promised to those who know the truth. For years I searched for the truth about God and man's relation to Him. I always knew there was a God, for I could see His reflection in my mother's face, but the God presented by dogmatic theology, oriental philosophy, theosophy, and so on, left me in hopeless despair. I knew that the God who created this universe, with its myriads of wonderful forms and colors, each playing its part in some divine plan, must be a God of infinite power, intelligence, and love, for, as the psalmist said, "the heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

I am very thankful to Jesus for making plain the truth about God and man, and for showing mankind how to work out their own salvation. I am also grateful that after his teachings had become obscured and perverted by materialism and dogmatism, a woman of the nineteenth century was so spiritually minded, so pure in thought, so brave, and so strong, that she could break down the barriers, dispel the mists of materialism, and reveal to the world primitive Christianity in all its original purity and power, thus enabling modern followers of Christ Jesus to heal the sick and save the sinning in the way taught and practiced by the Master. Through the understanding I have gained of the teachings of Christian Science life has taken on a new meaning, and I am striving daily to become more worthy.

Fourteen years ago, while searching for a more intimate knowledge of God, I was led to Christian Science through reading an adverse article in the daily newspaper. I waited to see if any answer would be forthcoming, and shortly a letter appeared which breathed a tone so different to the article mentioned that I determined to look into the subject. Accordingly I went to the reading room to ask some questions and to procure the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Its beautiful promise and logic at once impressed me, but it was not until six months later that I definitely decided to form my life upon its basis.

At first I did not think much about physical healing, but soon began to hope that Truth would free me from an imperfection which as a younger woman had greatly troubled me. It was an eruption on my face, which though not bad had become chronic and caused much self-consciousness. I had treatment from several practitioners, but apparently the trouble did not yield. Not until it became advisable for me on account of diminished income to live quietly in the country, did it vanish from my thought, and then I awoke quite suddenly to the fact that it had disappeared.

It is because I feel I have never adequately expressed my gratitude for the healing of this discordant condition that I am sending this testimony to the Sentinel. For all the other great benefits which I have received, such as peace of mind, the gradual elimination of fear and worry, an ever growing capacity to demonstrate harmony in my daily life and surroundings, with a much brighter outlook upon life as a whole, I do indeed thank God, the giver of all good; also Mrs. Eddy, through whose patient labors these blessings are today offered to all mankind.

Before taking up the study of Christian Science I suffered much from sensitiveness, thinking that people did not like me and were slighting me. Now it is so different; because of my changed thought about everything I find people loving and lovable. Shortly after becoming interested in Christian Science I was attacked by a heavy cold. For several days I tried to overcome it, but with no apparent result. One afternoon, after I had been reading Mrs. Eddy's "Miscellaneous Writings" for half an hour or so, I put away the book, and did not think of my cold again until that evening, and then only to discover that it had entirely left me. On several occasions I have been healed instantaneously of severe pain. A short time ago a badly ulcerated tooth, which had made one side of my face swell to about twice its normal size and which caused discoloration around one eye, was healed in a few days, the pain ceasing a few hours after the practitioner was called.

I am gradually learning that if, when confronted by sin, sickness, or discord of any kind, I just cling to the truth about God, and man made in His image and likeness,—hold to the spiritually real,—the clouds of sense, howsoever dense they have seemed, melt away, and good is again proven to be the only power and presence. I am very thankful for the revelation of Truth in this age, given to the world through the unselfed labor of Mrs. Eddy. I hope daily to become more worthy to be called a Christian Scientist.

MARIE WALSH, Victoria, B. C., Canada.

Christian Science has been in our home almost ever since I can remember, but it has only been in the last few years that I have thoroughly appreciated it and tried to put into practice the truths I have been learning. When I was a child a number of warts appeared on my body, a particularly ugly one being at the base of the nail and making the finger deformed. These were instantaneously healed, and the finger was made perfect through the realization of the truth as taught in Christian Science.

A few years ago, through the help of a practitioner, there was added another proof of the ever presence of God. While away from home on a visit I was taken suddenly ill. I suffered great pain and the symptoms seemed very alarming. Friends brought me home, where I arrived with a very high fever. The next day every tooth became loose and my tongue was so swollen that I could not close my mouth or speak. Under Christian Science treatment the fever was overcome in three days and the weakness and other conditions disappeared a few days later. I was stricken on a Wednesday, and a week later I was able to attend the testimony meeting. By the Sunday following my condition was absolutely normal. Through God's protecting care I was wonderfully sustained during the experience of childbirth, and I have since had many proofs of the power of Truth.

My gratitude to Mrs. Eddy is unbounded that she discovered and gave to us a religion which influences our daily living. I know that I can best prove my gratitude by constant striving for that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus."

One afternoon, toward the end of November, 1915, I was in my kitchen, which measures only about eight feet by nine and has one whole side of glass. The window was closed and I was standing in the middle of the room when a tremendous detonation occurred. Instantly all the glass of the doors and windows was reduced to splinters in an indescribable whiz which I shall never forget. All the furniture was incrusted with glass and the floor heaped with debris. My whole apartment was in the same condition, and I did not know where to move. The cause of this was an explosion about one hundred meters from my house. Many people were seriously hurt, and I was the only one left quite unharmed. Once again I had been protected by divine Love, which, as Christian Science has taught me, surrounds us constantly.

It was about twelve years ago that I heard of Christian Science through a relative, but not knowing English I worked mainly with the Bible, a book which was quite new to me at that time. I have derived my ideas about protection especially from the ninety-first and the twenty-third psalm. I am happy to attend the Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings, where I hear a French translation of Mrs. Eddy's book and receive wonderful instruction about the power of Truth. I have received innumerable blessings since I began to put into practice the teachings of Christian Science, and my life has been completely transformed by it. This testimony is given with a heart full of gratitude.

MME. D. DIZIER, Paris, France.

It is with a sense of deep gratitude for the numerous blessings which have come to me through the study of Christian Science that I add my testimony to the many which tell of the richness of this, God's blessing poured out to mankind. In 1904, after years of mental darkness and physical anguish, I was told I had small chance of recovery from an operation which was, according to three physicians, absolutely imperative if I would live another day. In my fear and despair I resolved first to see what a little band of people claiming to heal by prayer and calling themselves Christian Scientists, could do for me, so a practitioner was called. For three weeks I had been suffering from fever, pain, and sleeplessness, said to be due to an abnormal growth, but after treatment was given me I fell asleep and awoke healed. I arose from bed, dressed, and ate a hearty meal with my family. There has been no return of the trouble in any form.

I knew that the healing was of God, and through many proofs of the availability of this truth since that time I have day by day gained clearer views of God as Love. I was healed of rheumatism and chronic Bright's disease through the reading of Science and Health, also of nervousness and a very ugly temper. I am endeavoring to glorify God in my body as a proof of His loving-kindness to the children of men. My earnest desire is to grow into a more complete understanding of God's will and way, and so to express in some measure my gratitude for this great light that hath shined into my life and my appreciation of the help of loving friends.

Words are inadequate to express my sense of indebtedness to Mrs. Eddy, our revered Leader, who so lovingly gave to us this rich legacy and the many helps to progress,—our periodicals, reading rooms, and especially the spirit of loving unity to be found in every true follower of this Christ-teaching.—CLARA P. NUESS, Wichita, Kan.

It is over six years since Christian Science was demonstrated to my satisfaction in my cousin's home in the East, where I was visiting at the time, causing me to lay aside my prejudice and to investigate the wonderful truth. Only God knows of the struggles and the battles that have been fought in my passage through the wilderness.

At the time of my wonderful healing over three years ago I was not able to stand. For five years I had suffered terribly from ingrowing toe-nails, and in July the toes became so swollen and inflamed that my friends urged me to have medical attention. I knew too much of Christian Science to want to give it up, and I clung to the thought that "with God all things are possible;" but after three days of suffering I sent for a practitioner, who came with such confidence and assurance that all fear was destroyed. I had three treatments, and the third day the "trouble" peeled off like bark, and perfect toe-nails have been mine ever since.

I could not enumerate the healings that have been ours.

My husband, at the time of my struggle, was in Arizona on account of lung trouble, and was unable to work. Finances were giving us much concern and the outlook was gloomy indeed. From that very time, however, things changed, and he has held a responsible position indoors and is growing into the precious truth that makes us free. Our two children have not had a drop of medicine since I was healed, and we find God a very present help. My main object in life is to live worthy of being known as a Christian Scientist and to help others to learn Truth's potency.

I am thankful to God for Mrs. Eddy, who was pure enough to be able to give us the spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures, and I am thankful for our literature.

MINNIE I. DILLOW, Yucaipa, Cal.

One Sunday morning I found upon arising that my face and entire body were covered with what appeared to be a rash, and I had a high fever. My mother became alarmed and insisted that I return to bed, as she feared it was a case of measles. I went back to bed and read the Lesson-Sermon, but as the condition seemed to get worse, I asked my Sunday school teacher the next day for help. On Tuesday my entire body began to scale, which would indicate that the ailment was what is known as scarlet fever. By Wednesday the condition was entirely overcome.

I am very grateful for this healing, and for many other demonstrations, as well as for the privilege of attending Sunday school, which has been the source of my knowledge and understanding of Christian Science.

EMMA MELCHER, Chicago, Ill.

I have received much encouragement from reading and hearing of the wonderful healings brought about by the power of God through Christian Science. From childhood I suffered with stoppage of the bowels, although my mother and my husband took me at different times to the best specialists. The last time I was told I could not live many years, that I was suffering from a tuberculous condition of the bowels. A friend asked me to go with her to a Wednesday evening meeting, and there I heard such wonderful testimonies of the healing and regenerative power of Christian Science that I felt "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding" descending upon me, and sought the help of a practitioner next day.

By the loving help of this Scientist, and the study of the Bible as interpreted in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, I gained a better understanding of the truth which sets us free, so that after two or three treatments I was completely healed. That was nine years ago, and since then I have not taken medicine, massage, or been treated by doctors. Not only was the physical healing wonderful, but the spiritual uplift gave me a brighter, happier outlook and the knowledge that divine Love truly meets all our problems.

I am striving daily to prove my gratitude to God for showing me the light of Truth, and through our Father's guidance to be the means of helping others to find it.

MARGARET DALRYMPLE, St. Leonards-on-Sea, England.

Because I have been helped so many times by reading testimonies given in the Sentinel and Journal, I feel it my duty to give to others as I have received. I did not come to Christian Science for physical healing, but was drawn to it through living with some friends who were Scientists and who practiced their religion.

I have since had healings too numerous to mention, but the overcoming of ptomaine poisoning stands out in my memory as one of the most wonderful. I was taken sick in the evening, but was not acquainted with the symptoms of the disease, so tried to sleep, thinking the discomfort would soon pass away; but I awoke in the early morning hours with intense pain, which kept getting worse till it was almost unbearable. The friends who were with me tried to know the truth about me, but they were very young in Science and were not able to destroy their fear; so a telegram was sent to a Christian Science practitioner, asking for help. About two hours later I went to sleep, and awoke soon afterward without a pain. There was not a particle of soreness, and I was perfectly healed. I found that it took about an hour and a half for the message to reach the practitioner, and know it was the truth she was declaring for me that came to my consciousness before I went to sleep.

For the physical healing and other blessings that have come to me through the study and application of Christian Science I am truly grateful; it is indeed the truth that makes free.—ELIZABETH THEODORSON, Baker, Mont.

About six years ago I first turned to Christian Science through the interest of a friend; but although I realized great benefits from the few treatments received, I did not accept its message at that time. The seed of truth had however been sown, and about May, 1914, feeling a sincere desire to understand the teachings of Christian Science, I began the study in earnest. Although I did not come to Science for physical healing, I am grateful for freedom from sick headaches, from which I had been a lifelong sufferer; and colds and other ills have been overcome by the help of practitioners. I am far more grateful, however, for the love of the Bible and the understanding of it which I have gained, also for the knowledge of an ever present, loving Father-Mother God, divine Principle, and for a demonstrable rule by which to work out every problem, whether mental, physical, spiritual, or financial.

Christian Science is enabling me to overcome criticism, discouragement, impatience, and other unlovely traits of disposition, and is teaching me to be more kind and charitable toward my fellow men. The daily helps received from the periodicals, the great blessing of class instruction, and the joy of being able to help others through this wonderful truth make me daily more grateful to Mrs. Eddy for bringing to this age this new-old truth that Christ Jesus used and taught. My desire is to strive always to have that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," and to do with willing hands whatever work is apportioned me in my Father's vineyard.

In the summer of 1908 I was led into Christian Science after eighteen months of suffering. For ten months I was unable to work, and as I had a wife and three small children to care for, things indeed looked discouraging. Christian Science was brought to my wife's attention by a neighbor, who although young in Science afterward explained it to us sufficiently to interest us in it, and gave us some copies of the Sentinel. These I read without my glasses, something I had been unable to do for several years, as my eyes were considered very weak. I have had no further need of the glasses, although I have read at night for hours.

Our neighbor had said that she would send an older Scientist to see me if I did not object, and accordingly in a few days this lady called, bringing Science and Health, which she left with me. With this Scientist's help I began to recover from a complication of ills diagnosed by six reputable physicians as spleen trouble, gall-stones, uric acid, stomach and bowel disorder, and anemia. An operation had been suggested for gall-stones by two of the physicians, so I went to see another one, who repudiated the former diagnoses; but in my case, as in all others healed in Christian Science, Christ, Truth, proved to be the great Physician, whose diagnosis is always correct. The tobacco habit was also overcome by the truth. Christian Science has been a wonderful help in our family, for through it my wife and children have been healed of various ills.

Before coming into Christian Science I did not have much use for the Bible, although raised in strict accord with the church, and a fear of reading it always possessed me; but since Christian Science was presented to me the Bible and Science and Health have been my daily companions. Class instruction has been one of my blessings, and to say I am grateful but lightly expresses my thankfulness to God, and my gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for being a willing channel for this truth which is daily leading mankind out of darkness into light.—HARLEY R. GEBHART, Franklin, Ohio.

It is with sincere gratitude for Christian Science that I give this testimony. I have found the daily study of the Bible and Science and Health a great help not only in physical trouble but in every difficulty that comes up. About a year ago my son was struck in the eye with a baseball while at school. A clot of blood formed, covering the sight, and the thought was at once presented to him by several that an operation would probably be necessary. He came home very much excited and in great pain. I told him to repeat the "scientific statement of being" (Science and Health, p. 468); then I called a practitioner, and in thirty minutes he was back at school. By morning all evidence of the clot of blood had entirely disappeared, and he has never felt any ill effects from the accident.

Not long ago I had an extremely sore throat and suffered greatly. For three days I tried to overcome it, but finally telephoned to a practitioner and asked for help. In about eighteen hours every sign of swelling and soreness had gone. Complete relief from pain was experienced in an hour, and I fell into a sound sleep. "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust."

MINNIE C. MOSER, Laws, Cal.

Some eighteen years ago I had an attack of sciatica, from which the doctor said I would never recover, and I had suffered intense pain for about two years, when I heard of Christian Science. Through reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was completely cured. The pain was overcome gradually, and the affected leg, which was contracted, was restored to its regular length and thickness, so that instead of walking in a hobbling and painful manner, I have ever since been able to walk quite erect and free from pain.

This is one of countless blessings received during the past sixteen years through Christian Science. To God I give all the glory, and to Mrs. Eddy a loving and thankful heart; while to those who have helped enlarge my understanding of Christian Science I am deeply grateful.

T. CHAMBERS MILLS, London, S. E., England.

It is with a feeling of sincere gratitude that I tell of the many blessings which have come to me through Christian Science. Some seven years ago, when I was going through a dark period of my life, a neighbor handed me a copy of the Sentinel. I was very much interested in the testimonies, and said that if those people had been healed then I could have hope also. I soon had proof of the truth, for one night I slept soundly and peacefully. The next day I wondered where the night had gone; I did not know it was "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding," that I had experienced.

I soon bought a copy of Science and Health and began to study it. My healing was slow, as there was much to overcome, but with the aid of practitioners who gave me treatment and encouragement at intervals, I improved slowly, and thereby gained in spiritual understanding. I have also been healed of asthma that was said to have been inherited, and colds and throat trouble have vanished through the power of Truth. In Isaiah we read, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light." I too was in darkness until I came into Christian Science and learned my relationship to God. I am indeed grateful to our revered Leader for giving us this truth that makes free.—ANNA N. WILCOX, Minneapolis, Minn.

I consider it a sacred duty to acknowledge my beautiful healing through Christian Science. In the first place I was saved from going through an operation for a so-called malignant tumor. Then besides weak lungs there were said to be gall-stones and enlargement of the heart. I also suffered from nervous headaches and a serious skin trouble. For the healing of these ills, as well as for manifold other blessings, I shall ever be grateful to God, the giver of all good, to Christ Jesus the Wayshower, and to our beloved Leader, through whose pure and exalted life we have been enabled to know God's kingdom is here on earth as it is in heaven.

For all the Christian Science literature, and for the consecrated, unselfish life of all friends near and far who have the honor to serve with the great brotherhood of Christ, I give thanks. My unceasing prayer is that all trusting hearts who seek healing may be comforted through the power of the word of God, as I have been. May my life in some measure prove worthy the honor for the higher calling as a student of Christian Science!

ELSIE FROMME, San Antonio, Texas.

One day about five years ago, while my thirteen year old brother was playing hockey, in some way he was hit on the knee. It became very sore, and we called in different doctors; but he kept growing worse, so we took him to a specialist in Milwaukee, Wis. He was there several weeks, and his leg was put in a plaster cast, but there was no improvement. The doctor said the cast could not be removed, as it was a case of tuberculosis of the bone. My brother was very weak, and when he walked at all it was with crutches.

My grandfather, who lives in Milwaukee, was reading The Christian Science Journal, and he sent to mother the name of a practitioner who lives here, asking her to have a talk with this lady. My mother therefore went to the practitioner's office and told her about the case, and she called the next morning to see my brother. After she had talked with him a while he asked for treatment, and as a result he got up without any help and walked across the room and back to his chair. In a short time he was making a small garden. He would put his crutches near him, but did not use them. He had about six weeks' treatment and grew strong and tall. Although the leg is sometimes a little stiff, he has been working on the Government locks all the spring, selling nautical books to the different boats. In doing this line of work he is obliged to climb ladders.

For this healing we are very grateful. Christian Science has brought only blessings to us, and for that reason we are sending this testimony, so it may help some one else to the truth which makes free.

From Our Exchanges

[The Christian Work]

Men grow and religions advance by the constant challenge of a moral ideal. It is the gleaming peak flushed with the glow of a rushing dawn that calls forth effort and keeps the soul in the sublime mood of faith. Such an ideal works most powerfully when it is incarnate in a person. That is one of the many reasons why Christianity has the preeminence among the religions of the world. Its Founder was its ideal. He himself was what he taught; he did what he commanded. There is, therefore, a true sense in which the faith is comprehended in his simple and sublime "Follow me." Christ, what he was and what he wrought, is Christianity. He is at once the ideal, and by his resurrection the moral motive power that energizes men to pursue it.

[The Continent]

What the church has to give to the world in these beggared times is not always what the world thinks it wants nor what it cries out for. The world would remain the same old world if it received that. What the church has to give is a transforming thing that will give the world power. If only the church would cease to fumble through its pockets looking for what the world thinks it wants, while it overlooks what the world really needs!

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.Litt., in The Christian Commonwealth]

Since God and man are akin naturally, inevitably the highest, purest, truest man is our most luminous revelation of God. Here lies the meaning of the life of Jesus. He reveals God by revealing man, and man by revealing God. The two are always united in his faith, as they are in fact, and that is why with him religion is as natural, as free, as joyous as life. Nay, it is life; for he came that we might have life, and have it more abundantly. No wonder his life, so pure, so strong, so heroic and tender, stirs us like noble music, like the memory of stainless days when life was new and the morning faces smiled.

[The Universalist Leader]

The heaven of which we dream and for which we hope is after all but the ideal of what the earth may some time be, at least of what we want it to be; and as this ideal glows more and more clearly before us, and burns itself more and more deeply into brain and heart and soul, it becomes the prophecy and assurance of a new earth which will be heavenly.

What Is News?

Proverbs 25:25. As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country.

The word "News" is said to have been originally taken from the points of the compass:

meaning items of interest from the four corners of the earth.

As Christian Scientists change their beliefs about the world into understanding about "the Principle of the universe, including harmonious man" (Science and Health, page 276), it necessitates a corresponding revolution in their concept of what constitutes news.

They learn that news is neither gossip nor conjecture, but a revelation of the truth of that which human thought only believes or symbolizes and a record of the significant and constructive happenings in the forward march of human events.

The various periodicals issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society were all established by Mrs. Eddy to fit the need in human consciousness for news.

The Christian Science Journal, the Christian Science Sentinel and Der Herold der Christian Science gather and furnish true news for the reader who has just become interested in Christian Science and also for the student of Christian Science.

The Christian Science Monitor Mrs. Eddy established "to bless all mankind" (Miscellany, page 353) with news of value and significance.

The Monitor also retrieves the germ of truth and progress in the "far country" and brings it to Christian Scientists whose right thinking about it may aid in bringing it into fuller expression.

It carries back the viewpoint of Christian Science to the "far country" "as cold waters to a thirsty soul."

It is the great international daily newspaper, accurately setting forth the interesting and significant everyday happenings of the world, and putting on them, editorially and otherwise, a constantly higher interpretation.

There can be no substitute for this news from all points of the compass. It hints to the awakened thought, the four sides of the celestial "city" described and interpreted by Mrs. Eddy on page 575 of Science and Health. This kind of news cannot grow old before it reaches the Monitor subscriber, because such news can never be known until it is scientifically discerned and understood. Such news can never be told until it is scientifically told.

Are you familiar with the world's "good news"?

"Our Father-Mother God"

LOUISE KNIGHT WHEATLEY

A YOUNG student of Christian Science had reached a certain milestone along the heavenly pathway. She saw that before she could proceed much farther she must learn to differentiate between evil and the person manifesting it. Then, too, her practitioner had told her that since God does not know or see evil, neither does man, God's reflection, know or see it. How could this be? she wondered. How could God heal anything if He did not know about it? And how could He help seeing evil, when every one else saw it so plainly?

These were grave questions, especially for one whose concept of God had been inherited from a long line of ministers who had seemed to take delight in thundering forth threats of divine vengeance upon the heads of trembling and terror-stricken congregations. In fact, she lingered in the vicinity of this particular milestone for some time, for she could not seem to pass it, though she would not go back. Her constant prayer was for understanding, and when that prayer was finally answered it came about in a most unexpected way, as answers to such prayers usually do.

She had not then grasped the deep import of the words on page 16 of Science and Health, "Our Father-Mother God, all-harmonious," but one day she went to call on a friend. It was a sultry midsummer afternoon, and the shaded porch was most comfortable. Just as she was leaving, the small son of the family came in, hot, tired, sunburned, and tear stained, and climbed up into his mother's arms. That he had been making mud pies was self-evident; indeed the stick with which he had been mixing them was still tightly clasped in one chubby hand, but his mother did not seem to see it. She caught him to her heart, regardless of her dainty dress, and covered the grimy little face with kisses.

"How can she do it!" wondered the visitor. She herself loved babies, but they had to be clean babies, not muddy ones. As she wended her homeward way, still pondering, she said to herself, "I suppose it is because she is his mother and loves him so." Then like a flash came the answer to her prayer,—"Why, that is just exactly like God," she thought joyously. "He does not see the error either, because He loves us so." The milestone had been passed. She saw that the dirt on the child's face and hands was no more a part of the real child than error is a part of the real man. Two women had been looking at the same thing; one saw a muddy, cross, unattractive baby, the other had looked through and beyond these outward evidences to see her child as he really was, just as "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals" (Science and Health, p. 476).

What had made the difference? It was mother love. One had seen the error because she had not loved enough to unsee it; the other had not seen it because she was thinking only of her dear child, and in her eyes he was as lovely and lovable right then and there as he would be later on when the mud was all washed away and he was as fresh and rosy as some sweet flower. Just in the degree, then, that one loves does he separate the error from the man, just as the mother separated the error from the child. Mother love is indeed so great, so pure, so selfless, that it touches the hem of the divine, and through its heavenly radiance is caught a glimpse of that which transcends all human comprehension, divine Love itself.

How it rests one to remember this! For we all seem at times to be but children after all, wanting to come home to be comforted. We have finished our mud pies, and found them stale and profitless. We have played with our toys, and broken them. Older children have tyrannized over us, big dogs have frightened us, bumped knees have made us cry. And so we go wandering home at last, weary and worn, footsore and heartsore, our disappointed hopes still clasped in stubborn fingers which somehow will not let them go. And then how sweet it is to turn "like tired children to the arms of divine Love" (Science and Health, p. 322). How we can take heart to begin again as we remember that the dear Father-Mother of us all is looking through and beyond those false evidences of failures and mistakes, misdirected efforts and fruitless struggles, to behold only the perfect man, who is never tired, never heartsick, never discouraged, but who is held forever in the tender keeping of omnipotence; he who cannot sin "because," as St. John says, "he is born of God."

Let us rejoice that we have found in Christian Science a God who is not only our Father but our Mother as well; a God before whose supposed wrath we do not need to cringe and tremble, but who may be loved and understood. The noblest human parent of whom the world has ever known but faintly shadows forth the goodness of the infinite all-Father, whose purity is so great that He cannot look upon evil, because in the white light of His eternal presence the fictitious claims of evil vanish like mists before the sun; and the most beautiful love light that ever shone in a mother's eyes is but the reflected radiance of that Love which holds humanity in its embrace, because it is the Mother of man and the universe.

What though the world looks coldly on, judging its own unrighteous judgment? "I like babies, but they must be clean ones," said that one who had loved little. "I like people, but they must be good ones," says the world today, drawing its skirts aside. Love, however, knows no mortal classification. God does not divide His children into good ones and bad ones, those which are clean now and those which will be clean after a while. In God's sight all His children are as spiritual and spotless now as they ever will be, and His children have no impurities to be washed away. St. John writes: "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us."

Let us try to see as God sees, for that is the only true apprehension. Let us not turn away from our brother just because he comes to us dusty and travel stained from the day's journey. Let us encourage him, and give him our hand, even if his own should yet happen to bear the marks of the day's toil. With that clearness of spiritual perception which enables us to hold to the truth in the very face of any material evidence which may clamor for recognition, let us see him as God's idea ever is, not as he seems to be to mortal sense. Does the world still maintain its old attitude,—"I will love him later on, when the mud is washed away"? "Be of good cheer," said Christ Jesus, "I have overcome the world." In Isaiah the question is asked if a mother can ever forget her child or cease to have compassion on him. To this the divine Parent answers, "Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee."

Confidences

CASSIUS M. LOOMIS

WHEN we bestow a kindness upon a fellow being, we do well; when we impart to another's ear a confidence—this is something which calls for the utmost caution. Not that a sincere, trustful confidence is or can be at all times harmful, but there is a discretionary boundary or limit to all human interchange of words.

Every conscientious worker in the field of Christian Science hears much of the rights and wrongs of those who ask for help. Bound by the sacred ethics of our Leader's teaching (see Manual, Art. VIII, Sect. 22), a confidence thus conferred must go no farther, and there is a self-evident reason for this. Should the confidence thus given in trust be repeated to another than the practitioner, the demonstration of healing may become uncertain, as this third person may be overly confident of the healer's work, or his thought may be that of doubt, or unbelief, or covert opposition, and thoughts thus centered upon the case may become a hindrance, and can never be a help. In brief, the interference of an extraneous mentality must needs be overcome before the field can be successfully cleared for action.

In Christian Science only the patient, the practitioner, and God are connected with a treatment, and it is better, whenever possible, that no outside mentality should even know that the work has been undertaken. After the healing has been accomplished, testimony regarding it may be given in public or printed in our periodicals, thus imparting to the needy inquirer the truth of the healing, which is all the more effective for being impersonal, so far as the practitioner's name is concerned. Furthermore, when a confidence is in any measure betrayed it ceases to be a confidence; it is in reality neither more nor less than a breach of trust, wholly unwarranted in Christian ethics.

Many a student in this faith can look back to the time before he had learned the value of right thinking and right speaking, and recall when, having committed a wrong, he would seek out a valued friend and confess the fault, thinking thereby to get a partial relief of conscience. He can remember that after this confession his disquieting thought was augmented rather than allayed. He had taken the wrong path entirely, for why should he not have gone straight to God, "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning"?

To set right the thought of every applicant for help, is the office of our sincere workers in truth. Great indeed is the forgiveness and charity of the Christian Science practitioner who can listen to a confession of another and, instead of looking thereon through the eyes of the world, can minimize the wrong by knowing that the doer thereof, strangely forgetful that man is the child of a just God and therefore perfect in his real self, has been made a channel for error. The applicant has come for healing, not to find a cosharer of his faults and misfortunes, and this makes the difference. The treatment, like the benediction of the compassionate, forgiving Saviour, must be such as to help destroy the error wholly. When it is destroyed it is quickly forgotten, as if it had never been.

The light of a new day is dawning upon Christendom, and we are all cosharers in the wonderful harvest at hand. Would healing be realized if the slightest taint of condemnation entered into the practitioner's work? Then let the law of good reign in the heart of the devout student, follower as he is of the humble Nazarene and a lover of humanity in the broadest sense. It is truly a praiseworthy evidence of right thinking when one is able to listen to a tale of need, and while it is being recited to treat it lovingly and at the same time to deny successfully its reality. It is the suffering mortal thought which tells the tale; it is a thought single-eyed and truly Christlike which can so minimize the apparent wrong that the one who needs help will find a ready healing. Every recorded healing in the Master's time, and later during the lives of the apostles, was the result of unselfed love made manifest. Then is not a confidence submitted with an open willingness of spirit truly sacred?

In defense of this same need of correct healing, we find an incontrovertible and scientific statement on page 367 of Science and Health: "Because Truth is omnipotent in goodness, error, Truth's opposite, has no might. . . . The greatest wrong is but a supposititious opposite of the highest right." Who, then, would care to deal with a wrong, stated in confidence, as if it were an article of merchandise to be appraised by a variable market among men? So a confidence bestowed and properly listened to in love is a good step toward the abolishment of the inharmony complained of. To betray a confidence may help to wreck the career of the most worthy neighbor we have, and make us unworthy followers of the Master we profess to serve; while to win devoutly another's confidence, even the confidence of a child, may prompt us to speak a word which will lead to a whole life's betterment.

The Concordances

MAUDE J. KNISELY

RECENTLY the writer found herself in a situation which she likened to that of a man who sits down beside a newly acquired, unworked gold mine, dreaming of all the wonders its wealth may procure, until hunger and the night shadows awaken him to the necessity for further activity before he may rest in the possession of his riches. She had been contemplating, with similar pride of ownership, the lengthening line of volumes which contain the writings of our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, supinely expecting that the beneficent truths inscribed therein would exude in some mysterious manner through their bindings, and take shape in the blessings desired in her experience.

She was awakened from this flimsy dream when a severe trial revealed her need for more of the knowledge of the truth that makes free, and with the two concordances, which were at this time placed in her hands, a systematic study of these works was begun. This delving was eagerly pursued until the rays of Truth began to pierce through the adamant of false belief. Next there was a patient breaking away of the clinging particles of fear and doubt, and then a cleansing until the pure, spiritual reality was brought into human view and the problem was solved.

As the gold from the mine, at last legalized by the Federal stamp, must flow out of the palm of the possessor in order to bring him the exchange he craves, so the writer found there must be no attempted hoarding of the truth, but a free and constant use of every particle of the newly unfolded spiritual treasure in the day's activities; a readiness to be the means through which spiritual reality may operate to regenerate the world.

The textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," contains a complete exposition of this divine Science. In Mrs. Eddy's other writings, however, are set forth valuable lessons gained from further research and experience,—lessons given by her as the growth of students and of the various activities she organized for the advancement of the cause needed these lessons; for Mrs. Eddy did not write merely to produce books, but to enlighten, encourage, and safeguard students in their emergence from the narrow limits of sense into the boundless sphere of Soul. No needless work did she express, and no word of hers should have less than the most earnest study and consideration by her followers and students.

With the concordances one may easily enter upon the most exhaustive study of our Leader's statements on any subject, and find in them and in the Scriptures which corroborate them an ever available counselor, comforter, physician, and friend. The way is illumined, and, as Paul tells us, "the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." On page 3 of "The People's Idea of God" we read, "Let us rejoice that the bow of omnipotence already spans the moral heavens with light." Truly may we rejoice that in our revered Leader's words we have safe guides to these heavens,—perfect harmony.

College Societies

JOHN ELLIS SEDMAN

IN 1904 Mrs. Eddy caused to be published in the Sentinel of March 12 the by-law entitled "Privilege of Members," which provides, "Members in good standing with The Mother Church, who are members of the faculty, instructors, or students in any university or college, can form and conduct a Christian Science organization at such university or college, provided its rules so permit" (Manual, Art. XXIII, Sect. 8). Since then, societies or organizations have been formed in eleven universities and four colleges; and the regular meetings of these societies are announced in the Journal under the heading "Christian Science Organizations."

These meetings are similar to the testimony meetings in the Christian Science churches, except that they are held on some week day other than Wednesday, and as a rule are open only to members or graduates of the university or college and their invited guests. Testimonies are common which relate how Christian Science has enabled an individual to overcome fear and a sense of limitation, and thereby to achieve results in the classroom or in examinations which could not otherwise have been achieved. Frequently, too, the speaker expresses his gratitude for the help he has received at the meetings of the society.

One student related that when taking an examination in mathematics he solved every problem without difficulty except one, and spent an hour and a half on that one without discovering any solution for it. He then began to recall some of the testimonies which he had heard at a meeting of the Christian Science society in that university, testimonies in which the speakers had told how reliance upon the one divine Mind had enabled them to accomplish results which were impossible by the ordinary processes of the human mind. He laid aside the examination paper and spent some minutes in contemplating the great truth that God is the one infinite Mind, and that each man reflects that Mind, and for that reason has the natural ability to express the intelligence necessary for the solution of any problem. Then he turned again to the question which had baffled him, and saw a way of solving it. After the examination books had been read by the professor, this student was told that he was the only one in the class who had solved that particular problem; and he knew what had enabled him to accomplish that result. And far more valuable to him than the mere solving of every problem on an examination paper was the proof that the divine Mind is ever present, and that its infinite intelligence is always available to every one for the solution of all human problems.

The college societies have done considerable work in the distribution of Christian Science literature, and almost boundless opportunities for the rendering of valuable service in this direction lie open to them. That this work is bearing fruit is clearly indicated by the appreciative letters which have been received from recipients of the literature. Especially do these letters speak in warm praise of The Christian Science Monitor, and of its value to teacher and to student.

A very important feature of the work within the colleges is that of arranging for lectures on Christian Science delivered by members of the board of lectureship of The Mother Church. The problem which confronts the college society in giving a lecture is somewhat different from the problem presented to a church, because the lecture is usually given in a building owned by the college, which the society is allowed to use as a privilege that must be exercised in accordance with the rules of the college. This often makes it advisable or necessary to admit to the lecture only members of the university and graduates, but this necessity has resulted in one advantage. It has enabled the lecturers to take up the problems which confront students in college, and especially those about to enter upon the larger field of activity without, in a more intimate and helpful way than might have been possible were the audience composed largely of adults of mature experience.

Most of the societies hold a reception for the benefit of new students soon after the opening of the college year. These receptions enable the students who are interested in Christian Science to become acquainted with one another, to learn something about the society and its work, and often more about the movement as a whole and the opportunities which are open to all to render valuable service to mankind. Here the incoming student often begins friendships which prove lasting and inspiring. And who can measure the helpfulness and the beauty of true friendship which Christian Science brings to light, that friendship of which Jesus spoke when he said to his disciples, "Henceforth I call you not servants; . . . but I have called you friends."

One source of strength to the college society is the interest and active cooperation of the graduate members, for the graduate who has left the university may continue to belong to the society as an associate member. If he resides near enough he may attend all its meetings, and wherever he is his interest in it and his support of it may continue and increase.

The value of Christian Science to the young man or the young woman in college can never be overestimated. The student who puts Christian Science first in his life finds not only that he is gaining something far beyond what anything human, however wholesome in its place, could possibly give him, but also that his activity in Christian Science helps him in everything else that is legitimate, enabling him to do better work in his studies, in debating, in athletics, in any honest endeavor. He proves for himself the truth of Mrs. Eddy's statement that "business men and cultured scholars have found that Christian Science enhances their endurance and mental powers, enlarges their perception of character, gives them acuteness and comprehensiveness and an ability to exceed their ordinary capacity" (Science and Health, p. 128). By activity within the society he proves the great value of spiritual cooperation and Christian fellowship, and that in true unity there is strength.

When, after graduation, the student looks back upon his years at college with the broader vision of one who has gone on discovering more of the boundless possibilities of man in God's likeness, the experiences which stand out like mountain peaks, and the ones for which he is most grateful, are those wherein the allness and the goodness of God were proved to him through his understanding of Christian Science. He recognizes that in those experiences he caught clear glimpses of that which transcends the human sense of things and brings lasting satisfaction and real advancement. Then is he indeed grateful for Christian Science, and for that loving foresight which caused the Leader of the Christian Science movement to give to the field this by-law under which the college societies are formed and conducted.

Truth's Invisible Host

MARY BEECHER LONGYEAR

SEVERAL years ago the writer stood gazing out of the window one dark night at a scene of humanly unpreventable destruction and terror. Several miles away the sky seemed ablaze with flames leaping and darting like demons after their defenseless prey, while billows of dense smoke befouled the air and sky. Night was coming on and the wind was rising to a furious gale. Thought went out to the homeless families who it seemed were at the mercy of the elements. "It cannot be true," I cried aloud. "God is there, ruling by His omnipotent power; and man is His loved child and cannot suffer. Love fills all the world." Then, pulling down the curtain, I closed my thought against the seeming, and soon recovering my trust in infinite good, I found peace. Two hours later I ventured to look out of the window again. I saw only a few dark clouds on the horizon, and knew that Love had poured forth a healing shower and quenched the terrifying error.

Science and Health, the word of Truth, is our angel with the flaming sword at this critical epoch in the material world. Let us all awake and put on our armor, the right concept of God and man, and follow our Leader. The battle is at our own threshold, entering our loved homes, and we must be prepared, better prepared than we are at present, to win the victory. When we come before our great Captain to enlist, if we are harboring thoughts of resentment toward others, or thoughts of self-condemnation or of self-justification, or any critical thought of any who are in our ranks,—the loyal Board of Directors, the enthusiastic editors and workers of our publications, our practitioners, our lecturers,—if we are desiring to dominate, to control others, He who is all wise and all loving will not receive us into His service. We must pledge ourselves to be obedient, humble, loving, active soldiers, working together in harmony, or we can never win our cause.

Our church members should bear the banner of Love aloft and enter the world's conflict as one man. With thought centered on the perfection of infinite good we would lose sight of personality and stand shoulder to shoulder in this battle against impersonal hate and carnage. Then all the avenues of Christian Science thought would be filled with the reality of Truth's power and the ever presence of Love's kingdom, and the effulgent curtain of divine fire would extinguish the aggressive strivings of despotism in ourselves as well as in others. Then the intense activity of spiritualized thought would reduce to nothingness the baseless argument that God does not govern the sea, sky, and earth.

The questions may here arise, Who is the enemy? What are we to fight against? Every Christian Scientist knows that it is the false claim of sin and a false concept of God and man. We do not have to leave our own environs to be in the battle every day. In treating individual patients we can embrace the whole world in our thought, and realize the truth of our Leader's words, "Thy kingdom is come; Thou art ever-present" (Science and Health, p. 16). If we do not love the man we see every day, how can we be in God's service and help to heal the whole world which seems so sadly in need of love today?

Thinking of the great war as real, as material instead of mental, and then working in desperation to overcome it, even to "treating" it all the livelong day, would only be wasting our energies. We are commanded to use our spiritual weapons against the impersonal powers of evil, and to bring their seeming manifestations to the nothing of nothingness. If the dear Christian Scientists in all lands but knew it, we are the most powerful army in the wide world today. With us is an invisible host of angels winged with love. We must declare and realize that we are united in thought and action, and, hastening to do God's service, sound the trumpet which tells of His omnipotence, proclaiming in unison, "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein."

Our Problems

EDWARD EARLE DANIELL

IN order to deal rightly and effectively with what we term our problems, we must know and consider what the world at large is thinking and doing, for the inharmony and suffering one seems to experience is but his acceptance of the world beliefs. Freedom to work out the Science of being will be found in the realization of this statement: "In Christian Science, man can do no harm, for scientific thoughts are true thoughts, passing from God to man" (Science and Health, p. 103).

Today the world seems to be in the throes of hatred, sorrow, sin, disease, and want, more intense than has ever before been witnessed. This does not indicate, as some would believe, an increase of these phases of error, nor a failure on the part of Christianity. The mortal belief of fear, hate, and sin has always been just what it is today, but the Science of Christianity has brought more clearly to the comprehension of the world what these errors are, and has made more apparent the supreme need of the world today,—a practical application of the understanding of God as Love.

If any who have accepted Christian Science as their guide seem to have an unusually heavy burden to bear in spite of their increased efforts to be right, it is not reason for dismay, doubt, or despair; rather is it a time for rejoicing, because they have not in reality an added load to carry, but, having accepted a higher standard of living, they more clearly discern the error which has always interfered with human progress. On page 96 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy writes: "This material world is even now becoming the arena for conflicting forces. On one side there will be discord and dismay; on the other side there will be Science and peace." We must therefore ask ourselves which side we are taking mentally. Are we on the side of "discord and dismay," or are we on the side of "Science and peace"? We are apt to be mesmerized by the arguments of animal magnetism, and thus led to believe as the world believes. Let us strive to overcome this belief of mortal attraction, instead of trying to apply the rules of Science merely to rid our bodies of physical discomfort. There is no sick man to be made well; what needs correction is the human belief about God's creation.

The mount of inspiration where Moses talked with God and received the decalogue was first, to mortal sense, a mountain of error covered with thick clouds. We read that the smoke from mount Sinai "ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly." The load of responsibility which seemed to rest upon the shoulders of the patriarch for having led the children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage into the wilderness of darkness and doubt appeared too great. The people rebelled constantly because of the failure of human planning; but instead of letting this remain a stone in his path, Moses reversed the evidence of the material senses, and in place of an obstruction it became a stepping-stone to a higher vision.

As we go farther we come to Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, beginning with the wonderful beatitudes—the commandments of Love. After submitting to the form of baptism prescribed by the world Jesus was sorely tempted to use the world's methods in his mission of preaching and healing. But the devilish suggestions were resisted with the understanding of Truth, and he started forth on his mission to mankind with renewed confidence in spiritual power. He learned that John, because of having attacked the animal beliefs of the carnal mind with the world's methods when he was not equal to the battle, had suffered death. With this view of the hatred and sorrow of the world before him as a problem which threatened him personally, Jesus reversed the evidence of human testimony, and preaching the most wonderful and complete system of ethics ever set forth, he proved that the pure in heart do indeed see God.

When error confronts us in confusion and tumult, we should at once view the situation quietly and calmly, remembering that it is but one more opportunity to prove God's presence and omnipotence, and thus it becomes a time of purification from fear and doubt. Let us avail ourselves of the blessing that is our divine inheritance. When to the young civil engineer there comes the opportunity to bridge a gap or tunnel a mountain, he does not strike out blindly, but looks the problem over dispassionately and carefully, and figures out the whole plan to meet the specific requirements. This plan is complete, drawn according to the rules which are his protection, before he turns his attention to the obstructions on the ground. Then, keeping in mind the perfect construction, he sets to work to get rid of all that would hinder progress. Systematically the power of understanding is brought to bear on the situation, until perfection is the result.

As students of Christian Science our method of procedure should certainly be as orderly as that of the engineer. With an understanding of God as infinite Mind for a basis, it follows that the real man, as an idea of the perfect Father, divine Love, is a perfect reflection. With this ideal ever before us, we may then start in to eliminate the obstructions of sense, safely trusting the loving Father to give the needed wisdom. The farther Jesus proceeded in his healing ministry, the greater to mortal sense became his problem. What a difference between turning water into wine and rising triumphant over death! Yet to Christ Jesus the problem could never have been other than this: to prove each moment the infinitude of God, omnipotent Life and Love. He did not allow mortal sense to make this or that form of sickness, domestic trouble, mental weariness, financial distress, or any other of the phases of error real to him. Following his example we find that there is only and ever one work before humanity,—to know God aright.

God gives us always strength enough and sense enough for what He wants us to do; if we either tire ourselves or puzzle ourselves, it is our own fault. And we may always be sure, whatever we are doing, that we cannot be pleasing Him if we are not happy ourselves.

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Virginia (Minn.) Enterprise]

It was Sir Leslie Stephen who spoke of a churchman as one who "gives no indication of having any religious views whatever, beyond a dislike to dissenters." Such a description is not universally applicable; dislike of dissent is not the predominant element in the religious views of all ministers. Yet there is more than a hint of fact in the words just quoted, as the people of Virginia had recent occasion to observe. This, at least, can be safely said: Any religionist is more likely to be qualified to explain his own creed than to condemn other religions, and in the former effort rather than in the latter is he more likely to be engaged in God's service.

Take, for instance, the recent letter in the Enterprise from a minister who assailed Christian Science as "anti-Scriptural." Such a declaration amounts to more than a dislike of dissent. He might as well have said, "My religion is Scriptural and I am not a Christian Scientist; hence I pronounce judgment that Christian Science is not Scriptural." It would be more sensible to recall that the text of all religions furnished by Christ Jesus was, "Ye shall know them by their fruits;" that the fruits of Christianity which he named were the works he did, and that the most prominent of these works was Christian healing. (See Matt. vii. 15-20; Mark xvi. 14-18; John xiv. 12; Matt. x. 5-10 and xxviii. 19, 20, and James v. 13-16.) When our contentious brother can show as many of the fruits described in the New Testament as do Christian Scientists, it will then be time enough for him to say that their religion is less Scriptural than his. But if that time should come he would have less relish for sectarian strife.

The instance of alleged conflict between Christian Science and the Bible, chosen by this gentleman for his letter to the Enterprise, was not fortunate for his purpose. Instead of showing that Christian Science is anti-Scriptural, it showed that he is not so close a student of the Bible as a minister should be, and that he spoke about Christian Science with but little knowledge of his subject. It showed that he was not even aware of the Scriptural distinction between the real man of God's creating and the unreal human concept of man which seems to begin with birth and end with death. This distinction is consistently made throughout the authorized literature of Christian Science; it is easily understood as well as easily followed, and there is no reason why any one who chooses to become a public critic of Christian Science should disregard it.

The Bible also teaches that the real man, or God's man, lives in Him, safe from all danger, and speaks of mortal man, or "mortality," to be "put off." Thus Jesus declared, speaking of God, "He is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him." Yet the Master also said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Although Paul said, "In him we live, and move, and have our being," yet he also said, "This mortal must put on immortality." So also John said, "The world knoweth us not, because it knew him not."

Not only does Christian Science accept and emphasize the inspired teaching and practice of Christ Jesus as showing the way out of mortality, but in this connection it is well to remember that two of his disciples described this way as "a new and living way," "the way of truth." Furthermore, the history of original Christianity as well as the history of Christian Science proves indisputably that to this way accrues less of what pertains to mortality, or mortal man, and more of what belongs to immortality, or the real man; less of hell and more of heaven, immediately—here and now. This is a fact that should be of utmost interest to all people.

The following paragraph from page 63 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, is pertinent: "In Science man is the offspring of Spirit. The beautiful, good, and pure constitute his ancestry. His origin is not, like that of mortals, in brute instinct, nor does he pass through material conditions prior to reaching intelligence. Spirit is his primitive and ultimate source of being; God is his Father, and Life is the law of his being." It was this truth which the Master himself declared when he said, "Call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven."

The experience of Christian Scientists has proved to their satisfaction that their religion is both spiritual and practical, both divine and applicable to human needs. For them, and for many people who are not yet avowed Christian Scientists, the knowledge of absolute truth about man and his relation to God which this religion teaches and renders available for human progress, has brought forth the fruits of better health, more genuine goodness, and a greatly increased measure of happiness. To all other people, and particularly the clerical profession, Christian Scientists would say: We shall be glad to offer you the benefits of Christian Science when you want them. Meanwhile, we only ask that you speak of our religion with such fairness as you would desire if our positions were reversed.

[Frederick P. Rhodes in The Hull (England) Mail]

In a report of a lecture under the caption "The Church and Mental Healing," are several references to the subject of Christian Science. The lecturer stated that the real objection to it was that it was founded on a false metaphysics, and seemed to ignore the unity of the human race. A statement of this kind, without a single quotation from or reference to any authorized Christian Science work, reminded one of Lord Byron's "Bunting," and did not sound very convincing. If the teachings of Christian Science were based upon anything false they would come to naught, instead of which hundreds of thousands of human beings are expressing their gratitude to God that His Word has brought a measure of health and happiness into their lives after all human efforts had failed. Is not this in keeping with Jesus' words, "By their fruits ye shall know them"?

It is quite natural to say that "the science of bodily healing grew very slowly and by observation," because this is simply the result of human efforts to deal with a bodily or physical condition, an alteration of outward manifestations. This does not, however, apply to the healing in Christian Science, which deals solely with the only true healing, i.e., the transformation of the body by the renewing of the mind. On page 261 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes, "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts."

True healing is surely the recognition of man's at-one-ement with his God, which constitutes the kingdom of heaven; and does not our Master tell us that "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation"? The greatest exponent of true healing never said that those who asked for help, either mental or physical, could only gain it very slowly, and I cannot recollect any instance of periods of convalescence being necessary in the works of healing done by his followers. When we come into line with any basic law it operates immediately in the human experience, and when we call upon God, the Principle of being, the reply is, "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

Christian Science certainly does not "ignore the unity of the human race," as is clearly proved by the following words of Mrs. Eddy (Science and Health, p. 340): "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'; annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

The Union officer of health declares, "I say definitely and emphatically that it would be in the public interest to suppress faith-healing and all allied forms of quackery." Now quackery is objectionable in every direction, under the dictionary definition that a quack is one who pretends to knowledge which he does not possess. But with all due deference to this officer, Christian Science is not quackery. Christian Scientists do not ape or compete with the medical faculty in the use of questionable drugs, dangerous inoculations, or hypnotic suggestion, nor do they diagnose or treat disease from any material standpoint whatever.

Christian Science has an entirely different basis and modus operandi to that of the medical profession, and works from a totally opposite—a spiritual and not a material—standpoint. The tree is known by its fruits. The phenomenal spread of Christian Science is due to the fact that it is meeting the needs of those who turn to it for health, happiness, and spiritual peace. If spiritual healing ought to be suppressed in the interests of the public, then the Bible also should be suppressed, for the Bible is full of accounts of such healing and enjoins the necessity of spiritual healing for the sick as well as for the sinful.

We know of only one perfect healer of sin and sickness, but if Jesus of Nazareth were here in the flesh today, would he not be the first to be arraigned before the tribunal of a medical council empowered to suppress spiritual healing, for assuredly he healed by the Spirit and power of God alone, and taught and commanded his followers to go and do likewise. Christian Scientists claim that they are endeavoring to follow this teaching practically, and though they are as yet far from perfect, their endeavors are attended with a wonderful measure of success all over the world.

Christian Science is having the warm approval and commendation of humanity wherever its influence is felt or known throughout the world today, because it is meeting the needs of humanity, sick of its sufferings and wearied with its superstitions; because it is bringing to this humanity the cheering message and proof that there is rest, peace, joy, health, strength, and an inexhaustible supply of the heavenly Father's loving-kindness and care, where only the ashes of unanswered prayers seemed to remain.

Indiscriminate quoting from the Bible is one of the most futile of processes. It hardly ever carries conviction with it. Everybody knows that passages have time and again been torn from the pages of the Bible to defend the most unchristian acts and to bolster up the most irrational dogmatic positions. Not only so, but the almost innumerable Christian sects in existence differ more or less from one another on the interpretation of some part or parts of the Bible, oftentimes of comparatively little importance. Now, why is this? It has come about largely because of the fact that the Bible has been read without a clear understanding of the true nature of Deity. Mrs. Eddy says, "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love" (Science and Health, p. 468). Christians will readily admit the truth of that comprehensive definition. Christian Scientists always proceed to the interpretation of the Bible with the truth about God before them. In no other way does a rational rendering of the Scriptures become possible to them. The Bible contains the record of the gradual discovery of God to the human race. It relates many of the spiritual experiences of those who have become enlightened to a greater or less degree as to God's nature; and it often tells of the folly of the human mind, enthralled in the false beliefs of material sense. Unless one brings to the interpretation of all such recorded experience understanding, to some extent, of the absolute truth about God, one is almost certain to fall into all manner of quite irrational positions.

Let me add, in conclusion, that Christian Science is entirely consistent in all the deductions it draws from the definition of God given above, a definition strictly in accord with the Scriptures generally and the teachings of Christ Jesus particularly. Thus, since God is infinite Life, there cannot possibly exist, as reality, anything which claims to be Life's opposite, no matter how strongly mortals may believe it to be otherwise.

[Rollin E. Smith in Janesville (Minn.) Argus]

Our critic need not have gone to such extremes to prove that there is sin in the world—in this mortal existence. Christian Science does not deny that mortal man sins: it denies the reality of sin, metaphysically considered. A mathematician, for instance, does not deny that errors are made in attempting to solve problems, and such errors are very real to the one who makes them. But the mathematician knows there is no reality in error; that is, no principle of error; no power that causes any one to make errors; on the contrary, he knows that there is a principle—unerring, always the same—of mathematics. When this, the truth, is applied, the error vanishes, thereby proving its unreality.

So it is with sin. Christian Scientists do not deny that there is sin in this material existence; they deny that it has any more substantial foundation than has an error in mathematics, though the consequences to those who commit sin are greater. Any sinner may prove the unreality of sin by ceasing to sin.

[Lloyd B. Coate in Middletown (Ohio) News-Signal]

Christian Science is reclaiming the infidel by giving him a demonstrable understanding of God. It is reforming the drunkard and healing the sick, not through willpower, not through mental suggestion, as our critic avers, but through the power of God, divine Mind. If Christian Science was from an evil source, as our friend seems to think, how are we to account for the fact that it leads mankind to become better men and better women, having greater faith in God? Christ Jesus said, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit."

Because nothing impure, no discord of any kind, nothing that worketh or maketh a lie, no sin, no sickness, no death, exists in the divine Mind, therefore Christian Science classifies as unreal everything that does not express the character and nature of God, and as real, everything that God made, that which is eternal and will abide forever. But to human, material sense sin, sickness, and death exist as stern realities and are to be dealt with and overcome in the way demonstrated by Christ Jesus, the supremacy of Spirit over matter. Jesus pronounced sin a "liar," boldly asserting that it is devoid of truth. (See John viii. 44.) Paul declared, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." The spiritual understanding of this law of Spirit and how to utilize it constitutes the discovery Mrs. Eddy made which she has named Christian Science. This understanding has brought surcease from sorrow and reformed the sinner.

Christian Science does not condemn any channel for good. The world is wide and offers to every one a splendid opportunity for doing good. Would it not be far more Christlike to seek to overcome and destroy the sin in the world rather than to speak unkindly of one another? Surely during this world war professing Christians have a great work before them.

The article on woman's suffrage in your paper quotes at length from a Parisian by the name of W. L. George, who refers to Christian Science as one of a number of things that contribute to looseness in family affairs. Mr. George's theories of "feminism" and "the religion of nature" are characterized in the article as free-love. When Mr. George, or any other person, attempts to ascribe to Christian Science an influence that would cause family relations to become "looser and looser," or declares there is any association between Christian Science and free-love, he proves thereby that he has no conception of Christian Science teaching.

Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, wrote much that may be said to be epitomized in a brief statement from the chapter on Marriage, in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 57), which reads: "Chastity is the cement of civilization and progress. Without it there is no stability in society, and without it one cannot attain the Science of Life." The opening statement in the article entitled "Wedlock" in her book "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 285) reads: "It was about the year 1875 that Science and Health first crossed swords with free-love, and the latter fell hors de combat; but the whole warfare of sensuality was not then ended. Science and Health, the book that cast the first stone, is still at work, deep down in human consciousness, laying the axe at the root of error."

[Editorial in Morning Telegraph, New York, N. Y.]

"True to Christian Science, He Dies Barring Doctors," is the way a headline reads in one of our morning contemporaries, and then the story is told of how Professor Bement might have had medical attendance in his last illness if he had permitted it. The inference is that if he had called in a doctor he would be alive today. And the inference may be correct; we do not pretend to say that it is not. A great many persons, first and last, have survived serious illness after calling in medical practitioners, and this professor might have been one of the lucky patients. Also it may be remarked with all truth that a great many persons first and last have died after consulting physicians and after being treated by them. This is an indisputable fact, and yet we never see a headline reading, "True to Allopathy, He Dies Under Doctor's Care," or "Faith Unshaken in Homeopathy, Patient Succumbs Despite Efforts of Physicians."

It seems to us that it all should rest with the individual. If he desire it, he should be attended by a doctor—in his last illness; and if he have no confidence in doctors he should trust to his faith and mental medication. If, indeed, it is to prove a "last illness," he is as well off in one case as the other, and statistics will show that his chance of survival in final or other illness is about as great whether he dose himself with physic or whether he depend upon faith and good fortune.

[Extract from "Message to The Mother Church" for June, 1900]

"History repeats itself"

"CONFLICT and persecution are the truest signs that can be given of the greatness of a cause or of an individual, provided this warfare is honest and a world-imposed struggle. Such conflict never ends till unconquerable right is begun anew, and hath gained fresh energy and final victory.

"Certain elements in human nature would undermine the civic, social, and religious rights and laws of nations and peoples, striking at liberty, human rights, and self-government—and this, too, in the name of God, justice, and humanity! These elements assail even the new-old doctrines of the prophets and of Jesus and his disciples. History shows that error repeats itself until it is exterminated. Surely the wisdom of our forefathers is not added but subtracted from whatever sways the sceptre of self and pelf over individuals, weak provinces, or peoples. Here our hope anchors in God who reigns, and justice and judgment are the habitation of His throne forever" (p. 10).

"Pleasures and palaces"

PERHAPS the author of "Home, Sweet Home" may not himself have roamed among palaces; but he did try out material pleasures, only to find with the Preacher that "all is vanity,"—that after all his searching abroad for pleasure, it was to be found in the simple joys of home. On page 390 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Truth will at length compel us all to exchange the pleasures and pains of sense for the joys of Soul."

One wonders if the pleasure seeker's longing desire does not always, though it may be unconsciously, reach out in the direction of something which will satisfy, something which is nondeceptive and real? Christian Science answers this question by showing that there can be a transformation whereby the longing of the human heart may be appeased, and how that "catalogue of disappointments" which human life is said to be by the disappointed, may be displaced by plans and experiences wherein good develops according to the predestination of Love.

For some persons life would seem to be organized for pleasure. It is pleasure they pursue from clime to clime, wherever it has its "season." Moreover, palaces stand in ordinary thought as expensive expressions of the effort after pleasure; hence to those who envy the pleasure seekers and are jealous of the palace dwellers, the belief of material pleasure is even more real and aggressive than to those of whom Jesus said, "They that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses." Although the sybarite's life is to him usual and something of a bore, the envious mind, craving for luxury, feels resentment toward the fortunate.

Christianity in its early days redeemed both palace dweller and slave,—the one from ennui and the other from envious hatred,—and gave them something that vitalized being and made life worth while. The rediscovery of practical Christianity came in an age of material prosperity, which had rather a cynical regard for the old ways of religion, and had set a new god in its Pantheon, named by philosophers Rationalism, by business men Success,—really the old familiar Moloch of materialism. Rationalists were busy explaining away the Science of Christianity, showing how miracles cannot occur, and therefore that the works of Jesus of Nazareth must be viewed as only mythmakers' tales; and high priests of success were busy showing how unpractical was the Sermon on the Mount.

Upon this material age Christian Science dawned, and began to prove the fulfillment of what Jesus spoke regarding his works, whereof he said to his disciples, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." Demonstrations of healing were now as then revealing Principle. Moreover, through Christian Science men began to discover a new kind of success in business, following the rules of the Sermon on the Mount. Great changes also came about whereby barren lives became glorified and the indolent-sick became active, whereby the envious were healed of mental poison, and the dead-in-stupor, drugged with sin, were brought to life again. No one could refuse to acknowledge these changes, because they became intimately known. Almost every one knew of some one in his wide circle of acquaintances to whom Christian Science had brought restoration and healing.

Now such external changes could only occur because of radical changes within. In other words, these wonderful betterments could only be based on thinking quite different from the thinking upon which wrong conditions had depended. This is made clear by the direction given in Science and Health regarding the sick: "Show them that the conquest over sickness, as well as over sin, depends on mentally destroying all belief in material pleasure or pain" (p. 418). We may not perceive how radical this is, until we see how the whole world theory depends on the belief in material pleasure and material pain. We might examine the practical use of this belief which is made in maintaining control. When a poet wrote the lines,

> I stood in Venice on the Bridge of Sighs,
> A palace and a prison on each hand,

the two beliefs were graphically expressed. The tyrant says to his servant, Do as I say and the pleasures of the palace are yours; disobey and the pains of prison await you. But before a man can be coerced he himself must have a strong belief in material pleasures or pains.

He may then be forced to choke down every moral uprising and to strangle at birth every heavenly intuition that comes to him. Why? Because his own beliefs make it impossible for him to entertain angels, and so make him the victim of the scheme and guile of mere mortals. But he is always free if he knows the remedy, and the remedy is Principle, of course. One who is named in ordinary phrasing "a man of principle," cannot be perverted to base ends or the conscienceless plans of others. How much more safe is the man who knows Principle as God. He himself is a prince in the house of God, and fears not, because his inheritance is sure. His happiness is mental, his joy continues, so his work prospers and the reward of work comes with it. He understands practically what Mrs. Eddy says in Section 15 of Article VIII of the Manual, "God requires our whole heart, and He supplies within the wide channels of The Mother Church dutiful and sufficient occupation for all its members."

When heavenly joy comes to a man its quality makes clear to him its indestructibility. It is the opening upon his understanding, to a degree, of what God is. There cease to be ups and downs. His assurances are not followed by uncertainties. He understands how "the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Transformation

A MOST insistent demand of the Christian religion reads, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." A dictionary definition of the word transform is, "To change in nature, disposition, heart, character, or the like." This is good so far as it goes, but it does not even point to the tremendous change presented in the Scriptures. There the demand is that the mortal shall "put on immortality," and that man shall express the divine nature in thought, word, and deed. The healing which comes through Christian Science may be said to inaugurate the work of transformation from the very start, and in some cases the change is so rapid and so marked as to seem miraculous to those who know of it. One who has been for years in bondage to the belief of intemperance or some other phase of sensual slavery, suddenly rises out of it and turns with loathing from the fetters which appeared to hold him without his consent. He rises up a man, because he has begun to apprehend what man in God's likeness must of necessity be.

On page 295 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Mortal mind would transform the spiritual into the material." If we accept the evidence of the senses, it would seem as if it had been successful in so doing, but its illusions vanish when the light of Truth is turned upon them, and then the effort is made, as she adds, to "recover man's original self in order to escape from the mortality of this error." Even where humanity does not yield to the enslavement of sinning sense and false appetites in their grosser forms, there is the equally hopeless slavery of sickness, with all that this implies. Thought is centered upon the mortal body, quite forgetful of the admonition to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. The sick thought is a source of misery, not only to the one who entertains it, but to all who are acquainted with it; and the sad thing is that material methods of treating disease only intensify the tendency to think upon bodily conditions and so to aggravate the discord. It cannot be said that popular theology does anything to remedy this direful condition; rather does it stand helpless before it, and what is even worse, it condemns the appeal to divine law which is made through Christian Science.

In spite of all this, however, the demand of the Christ voiced by St. Paul comes down through the ages; and what a wonderful meaning it has: "Be ye transformed." Sickness gives place to health as a proof of the divine ever presence; and this is only a small part of the change, for it indeed includes the entire "nature, disposition, heart, and character." The most fitting illustration of this on the physical plane may be found in the transformation of the caterpillar into a butterfly, and it should not be forgotten that the work of transformation has already begun when the creature is enclosed in its temporary shroud, awaiting the hour of fuller unfoldment.

There is nothing uncertain about this word of St. Paul in that marvelous fifteenth chapter of I Corinthians: "We shall all be changed." Outside of Christian Science this means to most people the change that comes after death, but not so with those who have in any wise experienced the healing power of Truth. For them the transformation from material belief to spiritual understanding is going on continually, until the climax is reached which is so beautifully expressed in the third chapter of II Corinthians: "We all, with open face beholding as in a glass [or mirror] the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." A well-known writer says that the words "from glory to glory" may properly read "from character to character."

Truth leaves nothing unprovided for, and we must not forget that this glory is ever at hand, to make radiant every hour of the day with its divine influence, healing mind and body, until nothing remains which needs to be changed, because the transformation is complete,—there is a perfect reflection of the divine nature and character. While at present we see this momentous change being expressed through an ever increasing number of individuals, the larger promise, as given on page 191 of Science and Health, reads, "Thus the whole earth will be transformed by Truth on its pinions of light, chasing away the darkness of error."

ANNIE M. KNOTT.

Material Beliefs Destroyed

POPULAR opinion finds it difficult to admit that what are generally called material facts are nothing more substantial than material beliefs. To the uninstructed mentality there is something deceptive in the apparent solidity and stubbornness of matter, but Christian Science by the irresistible logic of its teachings wipes away the false appearance and reveals the reality of Mind, carrying out the Scriptural statement that "the flesh profiteth nothing."

Therefore every student of Christian Science begins by degrees to separate Mind from matter, and to recognize that the latter, including all its manifestations, belongs to the realm of belief and not to that of understanding. Moreover, there is likewise a supposed mind, which indulges in belief, and which the Discoverer of Christian Science has named mortal mind. At the same time it must be recognized that naming a falsity does not make it true; hence the name mortal mind does not stand for a reality, but for an illusion. Mrs. Eddy has written, "Scientifically speaking, there is no mortal mind out of which to make material beliefs, springing from illusion" (Science and Health, p. 399).

The false beliefs of mortals carry one into suffering, sin, and death, whereas the mental correction resulting from spiritual understanding gently leads one high above seeming human causes into the one great cause, God, from whom true intelligence is derived. Many evil human beliefs are admitted to be normal, such as trials, bodily suffering, financial troubles, misunderstandings, and martyrdoms; consequently the human consciousness provides for a repetition of these experiences until they assume the likeness of fate and go unchallenged. In this manner discouraged human beings are often wearied and bowed down into burden bearers, when they might rather be stepping forth in the panoply of freedom. With this habit of resignation to material beliefs comes the further one of self-condemnation, and yet properly conceived self-condemnation may be understood as the condemning of the material beliefs to their essential nothingness, thus subserving the ends of good.

The true view of man given by Christian Science rejects the category of material beliefs and substitutes for them a divine concept. It takes away prenatal inherited false concepts of man, wipes out the mental human opinions upon which material laws are seemingly based, ejects sordid thoughts, and sweetens consciousness with the essence of love. At times of special stress material beliefs run rampant like a raging forest fire before the self-will of the wind. If unchecked by spiritual understanding, destructive mental fires would burn up the constructive timber of good purposes. The prayers of Christian Scientists have forestalled such evil intentions in forest fires, storms, accidents, and calamities, just as they have arrested the vicious attacks of the "last enemy" suddenly argued, and this through the understanding of Life which is God.

The simplicity of Christian Science makes it the natural dwelling place for little children. They readily learn to distinguish between realities and material beliefs, and to reject the latter promptly and vigorously. The tender love which this Science holds out to them is like their native air, healing and invigorating them in the hour of need. The child consciousness which so quickly absorbs the realization of God's presence as that of the one beneficent Mind, just as quickly denies the supposed presence of mortal mind, following Mrs. Eddy's reasoning in her declaration on page 103 of Science and Health: "In reality there is no mortal mind, and consequently no transference of mortal thought and will-power. Life and being are of God. In Christian Science, man can do no harm, for scientific thoughts are true thoughts, passing from God to man."

The Lectures

NEW YORK, N. Y. (First Church).—Ezra W. Palmer, lecturer; introduced by Campbell MacCulloch, who said in part:—

Christian Science bases its sole reason for existence on its firm adherence to faith in one all-powerful God, and is consistent in turning to God in times of trouble, and to Him alone. Christian Science places dependence alone upon the spiritual law that Jesus expounded, and relies not at all upon the many material means of man's own devising; for it realizes that these are but the many inventions of which the Preacher speaks, and that they are wholly inconsistent with a firm allegiance to that God of whom it is said, "And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good."

CHERRYVALE, KAN. (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Charles W. Avey, who said in part:—

Jesus the Christ found no good in matter. "The flesh profiteth nothing," he said. Nor did he intimate that heaven could be attained by dying, but declared, "The kingdom of God is within you;" that is, heaven, harmony, is a state of consciousness within the reach of all men. Now Christian Science accepts Jesus' statement,—a statement he did not leave unproved,—and this lecture is given for the purpose of pointing mankind heavenward, not through death but through Life, not in matter but in spiritual understanding, and in obedience to Jesus' commands: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature;" "Heal the sick."

BINGHAMTON, N. Y. (First Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. John Clapp, who said in part:—

It has been my privilege in the past eight or nine years to have had glorious glimpses of the workings of Christian Science. I am not a member of the Christian Science church, but realize that it should be a great privilege to introduce a speaker on the subject of religion in this age of religious tolerance and liberty of thought. If we would be fair and just, we must be open-minded to new things, and the remarkable thing about Christian Science is that it is not new, but as old as creation and more illuminating than electric light. Much of the misconception of popular thought about Christian Science has been corrected by these lectures.—Binghamton Press.

PITTSFIELD, MASS. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Henry A. Germain, who said in part:—

No man or woman ever yet did anything worth while when acting from dishonest motives. All legitimate business transactions are based on honesty; all the advancement which has been made in the control of the forces of nature has been the result of painstaking, honest research and the application of facts discovered to the needs of humanity. All facts are honest, needing neither excuse nor apology. We all recognize this to be true in what we will call material affairs and in the relations of one human being with another, but are inclined to forget that it is equally, indeed much more necessarily true in the realm of spiritual things and in our relation to God.

Christian Science has come to clear away from our mental vision the mists of ignorance, superstition, tyranny, and self-seeking, and to replace these with the spiritual fact. As St. Paul said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Christian Science reveals spiritual facts. It neither asks nor needs apology or excuse; its uplifting influence on the health and the morals of unnumbered thousands is its unanswerable justification.

DOWNERS GROVE, ILL. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Emily Giessner, who said in part:—

The conditions which seem to confront us in the world today would indicate humanity's great need of something that will help and heal it—heal it of its sin, sickness, and sorrow. Centuries ago Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Christian Science is teaching its students how to do this, how to come more and more into Jesus' way of thinking. We Christian Scientists find that to the extent we do this the yoke does become easy and the burdens gradually lighten.

BERLIN, N. H. (Society).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Edwin Leslie Jewell, who said in part:—

Jesus came teaching that religion consists of something more than merely preaching about God. He proved by his mighty works his right to the claim of the Messiahship, and through these demonstrations also proved that when man is governed by divine law, man has dominion over sin, sickness, disease, and death. What he did he taught his disciples to do. When he sent them forth, the command was as imperative to heal the sick as to preach the gospel, and there are many instances recorded where they repeated the works of the great Teacher. History also has it that this gospel of both preaching and healing went on for about three hundred years, thus proving false the current theory that none but Jesus and his immediate disciples were to practice healing.

Although the art of healing by prayer was lost sight of for several centuries, it could not be destroyed. About fifty years ago this gospel of healing was discovered by Mary Baker Eddy, and again given to hungering humanity through her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Today all those who are studying this book and putting its teachings into practice are proving that Christian Science is a demonstrable religion.

ASHTABULA, OHIO (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by William J. Rice, who said in part:—

There is today a large and constantly growing body of people scattered throughout the civilized world who are learning that the operation of the divine law which restored health and harmony in the first century is available here and now. In the eighth chapter of Romans we read: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Christian Scientists are proving daily that this is no idle promise; in fact, they are proving that every word of the Scriptures is full of meaning and vital to our well-being.

JACKSON, MICH. (First Church).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Jacob J. Bolhuis, who said in part:—

Truth destroys error; therefore the knowledge of Truth becomes the physician in each individual consciousness, as the Bible teaches: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Again, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Testimonies of Healing

Christian Science found me when to mortal sense all was darkness and despair. My one longing was to quit a life which was filled with sorrow and sickness; but I am now full of gratitude to the dear Master, who said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," for I am finding rest from grief and sickness through the study of the Bible and of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. This textbook has illumined the Bible and revealed its wealth of promises to me and to all mankind. To me it was a glorious revelation to be shown that I could claim to be a child of God, inseparable from His love. In the first epistle of John we read, "Now are we the sons of God," and as we accept Christ, Truth, we find we were ever God's children.

My physical healing seemed slow to mortal sense, as my fear was great. I had lived on drugs for years, but was quite willing to give them up after my first treatment in Christian Science, though I was a long while giving up all the little gods. If my head throbbed violently and help did not come quickly, I would resort to applications of hot water. When a practitioner pointed out to me that I was making a god of this, I said if that was so I would never use the water again for remedial purposes, and I never was tempted to. Yielding up the human for the divine will brought my healing, and I have learned that when our healing is slow there is always a step which we are not quite willing to take.

I had always suffered much from throat trouble and toothache, and had acquired the habit of eating peppermints. I did not see that I was leaning on them for aid, but this mistake was lovingly pointed out to me, and when I gave up the error my throat and teeth were relieved, and the lesson, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," was again learned. I mention these things because they may help some one to see that reliance upon the little gods may hinder more subtly than the others, because seemingly less important to human sense. My husband has been healed of rheumatism in Christian Science, also of the smoking habit, and our little girl knows no other remedy than this truth, which does set free.

Words but feebly express the gratitude I feel for the privilege of studying the Bible in the light of Christian Science; it is indeed a lamp to our feet and a guide to eternal Life. Daily, through the study of the Bible and Science and Health, I am finding more and more of the truth. Though I can speak of no sudden or instantaneous healings, I can truthfully say that I am being healed daily of many false beliefs, and "in quietness and in confidence" am learning more of the power of God.

ALICE TOLSON, Encanto, Cal.

My first healing in Christian Science brought the clear conviction that I had found the truth, and that assurance has never left me. It is eighteen years since that healing. I was then an invalid, suffering from nervous breakdown and other physical conditions. For years I had been struggling to keep up on will power and with the aid of physicians. After four months of illness and idleness I made an attempt to take up a part of my professional work, but met with failure. Once more the friend who had many times before spoken to me of Christian Science, asked me if I would not try it. Discouraged and bitter I asked, "Will it heal me?" and the answer came, "Yes, it will."

Two days later I saw a Christian Science practitioner. I was full of argument and a desire to know all the deep things of God, but she wisely led me to see that in Science as well as in all human knowledge the first steps must be taken before the more advanced ones can be understood. Never shall I forget the illumination that came with that first healing; the world seemed a different place, for there was joy instead of sadness, hope instead of despair. Best of all there was given to me a God I could love, and a Bible I could read and begin to understand. Although religiously brought up, for years I had had no interest in the Bible, as it gave me no comfort. This was all changed in a few days. I perceived the meaning of Jesus' teachings and practice, and that his example was for us now, and for all to follow.

It seems almost needless to say that I received the physical healing; that from the despairing invalid who was only able to sit up a part of each day, and who could not walk the distance of a city block without collapsing from the effort, I was able the third day to walk fourteen blocks. With this first understanding of Christian Science there was the complete destruction of any belief in the power of a drug to heal, and there has never been in all these years the slightest temptation to turn to material remedies again.

About two years later a little son came to me, and according to medical law we both owe our lives to Christian Science. He has never had any other remedy than Science for the discordant conditions that have arisen. There have been many proofs of healing in our family. Measles, whooping-cough, stomach trouble, colds, appendicitis, and other ailments have been overcome. There has also been a wonderful overcoming of fear, and of the belief that internal conditions resulting from injuries and other causes must incapacitate one unless dealt with by a surgeon. I am proving by a very active life that God is my strength and my life. Innumerable proofs that God is the source of supply have come to us. When the path seemed most difficult Love has again and again met the need.

These are only a few of the many blessings received, for the law of God, when rightly understood and applied, meets every human problem. My heart is filled with gratitude for the tender, patient love expressed to me by practitioners and friends, and for our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so bravely worked alone to give mankind the understanding of God's love and protecting care. I know that in the degree I apply these teachings I shall see all conditions of inharmony overcome.

EUGENIE B. ABBOTT, New York, N. Y.

With a heart full of gratitude I write this testimony in regard to two wonderful healings which took place in our family through Christian Science in 1913. The first was that of our youngest child. He had been ailing for some time, and when we had to call a physician he said it was a case of diseased tonsils. Several material remedies which he prescribed were tried, but none of them was successful. After over a week's time this physician's services were discontinued, and one who had been recommended to me as a baby specialist was called. He pronounced the trouble rheumatism, caused from the diseased tonsils, and stated that it would be a very slow case. But the little boy grew worse every minute, the tonsils being so swollen by the next day that it was almost impossible for him to breathe, and the only rest he could get was when I held him in an upright position. I had heard of Christian Science, and it came to me that I must try it, so I hurried to the nearest telephone and called for help. Under the practitioner's care my little boy was healed perfectly in a few treatments.

For over a year one of my eyes had been causing me great distress, but I had lost all hope of its being any better, for I had been treated by two of the best eye specialists here without a particle of benefit. One physician diagnosed the case as a cataract. After my child's healing I decided to try Christian Science for my eye. Immediately I began to study Science and Health, and with absent treatment from the practitioner my eye was completely healed. I do sewing and fancy work of all kinds now with the greatest of ease. I discarded my glasses soon after beginning the treatments, and have not had them on since, although at the time Christian Science treatment was begun I was almost blind in the affected eye. For the many ways that Christian Science has helped me and mine I am most truly thankful to God.

While I was driving from the barn to the house in November, 1914, my horse turned suddenly and started to run. The buggy was overturned, and as I fell out one hip struck on the hub. I was carried into the house on a cot, and a Christian Science practitioner who had been called came soon afterward. One of the leading physicians of our city was called in to see if there were any broken bones, and although he did not find any, he did not think I could get well. He said that if I did recover I would be a cripple. The practitioner came every day and I had a Christian Science nurse. In two weeks I was able to sit on the edge of the bed with my feet on the floor, and before Christmas I was walking about the house unaided. I am as thoroughly healed as if there never had been an accident; am stronger, weigh more, and am in much better health than before it happened.

During the years I have known of Christian Science I have had no other help in times of sickness, accident, and sorrow; and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. I could not begin to tell of the peace and joy that have come to me and to my two children through Mrs. Eddy's wonderful works. All I can say in thankfulness and praise but mildly expresses my deep gratitude to Mrs. Eddy and to the loving friends who have helped me along the way.

Five years ago I had an attack of sciatica which continued from early spring until the autumn and made walking difficult. The drugs and liniments used during all this time did not help me, and by November the suffering had increased to such an extent that I had to give up work. The pain had become so violent that my hip seemed to be dislocated. At this stage I turned to Christian Science, and a measure of relief was experienced at once. In two weeks the pain had entirely disappeared, but it took some weeks for the hip joint to get back into position so that I could walk without lameness. There has been no return of this trouble.

JOHN M. PEAKER, Ottawa, Canada.

I have derived much happiness through the expression in our Wednesday evening meetings of my gratitude for the great help received through the reading and study of our Christian Science periodicals, and it has occurred to me that I might express that gratitude in a larger way through these periodicals.

For many years I was a semi-invalid, in a constant state of suffering and unhappiness and the cause of much trouble and anxiety to those about me. All my life I had an intense longing to know how to live rightly, but the harder I tried the more of a failure I seemed, until finally there seemed to be nothing left for me. Everything that the medical profession had to offer was tried, and if loving care had been sufficient to heal me I certainly had much manifested to me; but I grew worse all the time. The Bible seemed a closed book, and the church to which I had belonged failed to give the solution to the problem of living. The state of mind in which I found myself at this time culminated in a severe attack of illness, and for days I was not conscious of what was going on about me.

A year before this the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, had been offered to me by a sister who had been helped in Christian Science, but I did not seem to be able to grasp the truth at that time. The seed, however, was planted, and when I recovered consciousness I had a strong desire to try Christian Science. A practitioner was called, and after the first treatment I knew that this was the truth for which I had been longing all my life. I accepted it eagerly and was quickly healed. My greatest joy was to find a religion the rules of which if properly applied would solve the daily problems.

I feel that only by living constantly up to my highest sense of right and applying the truth patiently and perseveringly can I express my thankfulness to God for His loving guidance, and my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, whose purity and self-immolation made her a ready channel through which this truth could be given to the world in such a clear and concise form.

Sixteen years ago Christian Science came into my life, and every day since I have had something for which to be grateful. About eight years ago I had an abnormal growth and at times could not bear to have my clothes fastened around me. I tried to overcome the condition myself and sometimes was better, but my husband and mother said so much about going to a doctor that finally I consented to do so just to satisfy mortal mind. The doctor after an examination pronounced the trouble an abnormal growth, and said I had better go to a hospital and have it removed at once; but I went instead to a Christian Science practitioner, and at the end of three months felt so much better that I stopped treatment. The growth passed away and I have never had a symptom of it since. This is one of many blessings received through Christian Science, for which I am very thankful to God and grateful to our Leader.

EDITH MCCAUSTLAND JENKINS, Montague, Cal.

The time has come when I feel that I must express my gratitude to God, to our Leader, and to all others who have helped me in my journey to the Father's house, and with a grateful heart I send this testimony. Although my husband is an American, his business necessitates our living abroad; but Christian Science found the way over the sea and up into our Swiss mountains. I had been ill for almost two years, during which time the best doctors here diagnosed the trouble as nerves, rheumatism, and female disorder. For weeks at a time I could not leave my bed, and even when for a few days I was able to rise, I had to be helped and felt as if a heavy load were bound to the small of my back. At last I was operated on, but there was still no improvement. Then the doctor said another and very serious operation would be necessary, but I refused to permit it. I had borne enough, and if any one had told me I could go to sleep and would not have to wake again, I would have been so glad, as I had grown to be a burden to myself and others.

Just at this time a gentleman who had come over from America mentioned Christian Science to me. I asked a few questions about it, and his answers so interested me that I asked him to send me the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, as I had plenty of time for reading and felt that I would like to know more about this healing truth. When the book came I found great pleasure in reading the noble thoughts of our Leader and was very happy while reading; but the thought, If it were only true, was always there. I kept on, however, and one day—I shall never forget it—there came a wave of joy and thanksgiving with the realization, Why, it is true, every word of it; it always has been true, and always will be true. Where was the back trouble, the nervous heart, and where were all the other errors which had bound me for two years? Gone in that moment of spiritual understanding, and they have never returned, although this was over three years ago.

But the most wonderful part of it is the absence of fear, the knowing when you awake that you have the whole day to do God's work in, and that nothing can prevent its being a good day. To know, when you begin to meet material needs, that God gave man dominion over the whole earth, leaves nothing to fear. We have had so many beautiful demonstrations of God's power to heal and to bless, that I could not begin to tell of them all, but my joy and my understanding increase each day, and in time I hope to be found worthy to help others as I have been helped.—IDA E. BEER, St. Gall, Switzerland.

Several years ago Christian Science was brought to my attention by a very good friend, at a time when I was sorely in need of a change of thought. My trouble at that time was mental, and as I had been dwelling upon it constantly it had assumed mountainous proportions. This friend said he knew that Christian Science could help me, and at his earnest request I consented to visit a practitioner, although decidedly skeptical as to results. I however left the practitioner's home with an already changing thought, and immediately began the study of Science and Health, visited the reading room, and went to church. Later I got a Quarterly and studied the Lesson-Sermons. The unreality of my trouble was soon proven, for it disappeared entirely.

Through Christian Science I have gained complete victory over bowel difficulty and accompanying hemorrhoids, with which I had been troubled since boyhood. Other minor ailments have entirely disappeared and been forgotten; but they were numerous. I am so thankful that I am today able to help myself when adverse conditions try to fasten themselves upon me; and, what is far more gratifying, it has been demonstrated that I can help others also. I find that my advancement in Science is proportionate to the use I make of the understanding already gained.

Until about a year ago I had been an inveterate smoker, but in June last my eyes were opened to the folly of continuing as a slave to tobacco. One morning as I came into the office and was about to have my customary smoke I decided that with God's help I never would smoke again; and I never have. The wonderful part about it (and this will be more fully appreciated by those who are or have been smokers) is that I never have had a desire for tobacco. Since I gave up the habit I feel much better, both physically and mentally.

I am truly grateful for the understanding and happiness Christian Science has brought to me; for the realization that true peace and contentment are not to be gained through material things; also for the spiritual and moral uplift.—BLAINE W. R. KROUT, Denver, Col.

From childhood I was never satisfied with myself or my surroundings. I was always discontented, and longed for some assurance that there was something besides this life, which seemed so empty. I was very sensitive, and as I grew older was often melancholy and gloomy for days at a time. There seemed to be so much evil and injustice all around me that I often asked myself if life were really worth living. I always believed that God was good, but was told that He sent evil for some wise purpose, and this was very confusing to me.

At the age of nineteen I went to assist in the household of a family who were Christian Scientists. The quiet atmosphere and their kindness attracted me; they seemed to possess something that I was looking for all the time, so I decided to find out what it was. Science and Health was always on their reading table and they told me that I might read it if I wished. I did read it in all my spare moments, and soon purchased a copy. I also attended church, for I had found the truth about God,—that He is good only. This revelation was such a joy that for many days I lived on the mountain top of perfect bliss. But I have since been down in the valley to work from the bottom up, and there have been some fierce battles and fiery trials.

There have been many cases of physical healing in our family. With the help of a faithful practitioner several members have been restored to health in a short time, although conditions seemed serious. The physical healing is enough for everlasting gratitude, but the mental uplift stands forth like a bright illumination. We do indeed thank God that Mrs. Eddy discovered Christian Science.—MARY D. VOELZKE, Elgin, Okla.

I wish to express my gratitude for Christian Science. Many years ago I had a great sorrow,—my only boy was run over and killed instantly in front of our house. Friends told me that he was too good for this world, and that God had taken him from me to make me a better woman. In the face of such a statement from professing Christians it was hardly to be supposed that I could turn to God for help and comfort in my affliction; so I nursed my trouble and fretted over my loss till nervous breakdown set in, accompanied by terrible mental depression.

For eleven years I was a patient at hospitals, sometimes getting relief, but not for long, and wishing myself dead. About two years ago, through the advice of a friend, herself a Christian Scientist, I began the study of Christian Science. Since that time I have had no recourse to hospitals, doctors, or medicine of any kind. The healing has been slow and there are still some problems to be worked out, but if at times discouragement begins to assail me, I think of what I was and what I am, and know that if I am faithful to my trust all will be well.

The Bible is an endless source of comfort, and has opened up for me a new world of which I was ignorant before. The Christian Science literature is also a great help, and for this and all the other blessings received through Christian Science I cannot be too grateful. Day by day I am experiencing the goodness of God in every phase of life.—MRS. E. LAWLESS, London, England.

We who are constant recipients of the blessings of divine Love should show and express our gratitude for help received. A feeling of gratitude surges over me when I think of my condition now as compared with what it was two years ago, and I daily breathe a prayer of thanksgiving for the understanding that health, happiness, and strength are like the sunshine,—they belong to one person as much as to another.

As one who has been brought back from "the valley of the shadow of death" through the power of Truth as revealed in Christian Science, I would indeed be ungrateful were I not to make public acknowledgment thereof. Constant grieving over a loss brought about the condition in which I finally found myself. In July, 1914, I was brought from the mountains in an apparently dying condition. The doctor stated that there was absolutely no hope for me, my condition having been diagnosed as lung trouble of a quickly developing nature, accompanied by serious heart trouble. My sister then telephoned to a Christian Science practitioner, and with one absent treatment I was brought out of these troubles.

A month later I was confronted with other ailments,—gallstones and acute lung trouble. The former was overcome in one treatment, but the latter was slower in yielding. It took a little child to awaken me. One day she stood by my bed and said, "Auntie, wake up; it is only a make-believe, because God did not make it."

Christmas eve, 1914, found me facing another problem, this time dropsy. I was having Science treatment, but to mortal sense was again nearing death. Conditions were such that my family was scared into sending for a doctor, and circumstances over which I had no control forced me to the hospital. During the next few months I had every known remedy tried on me and was tapped four times, but after each operation I would go back to the old condition. In all that time I had not lain down once or been able to keep anything on my stomach. The conditions were to sense terrible, and it was impossible to straighten my legs.

My family were once more informed that my life was a matter of only a few hours. I however refused to accept the verdict of death, and rested in the thought that nothing was impossible to God and that divine power was just as available in the hospital as elsewhere. I was as sure of this as was David when he said to the Philistine, "This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand," and suddenly all the pores in my body were opened. The amount of water that ran from me was incredible, and although I filled up again I knew the victory was won; it made no difference to me what the outward conditions were. One morning at one o'clock I fell asleep, and at five o'clock I awoke with my legs straightened out, feeling well and ready to go home. I was perfectly healed; and my strength returned too. For the latter healing I had absent treatments.

I am grateful for all my trials, as through tribulations we get nearer to God. I am thankful to God, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for having taught us that ever present Love supplieth every need.

VIOLA ROACH, San Francisco, Cal.

I wish to testify to my sister's healing, as I was with her through it all and saw her come out of each trial through the power of Truth as revealed in Christian Science. Each time I saw the doctor I was told it was impossible for her to live. I am also grateful for the blessings that have come to me through the study of Christian Science. My gratitude knows no bounds when I realize the many difficulties I have been able to overcome through this beautiful truth.—MRS. W. WATSON.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me, in the hope that my experience may be of help to some one who is as hungry for the truth as I was. My first healing was that of a severe stomach trouble, for which some of the best medical doctors had been employed. In one Christian Science treatment this condition was permanently overcome through the understanding and application of the truth by a dear friend.

Though I was grateful for the physical relief, I was not ready to give up the many false beliefs which I thought were necessary to my welfare, so I began seeking for the light in orthodox churches, but did not find the peace for which I was longing. After several years I attended the Wednesday evening testimony meetings, and though I thought how beautiful such a life must be and how happy every one seemed who understood Christian Science, I still thought it was not for me. Then came a summer of sorrow and sickness, when the way seemed dark indeed.

At this time one came into the home who though not a Christian Scientist herself had many friends that were, and who asked me to see a practitioner. I did so, and during our conversation was told that God, who is Love, does not give sickness and sorrow to His children, but health and peace. This was the ray of light that penetrated the darkness, for I had always thought that God had sent my sickness and had taken away those I loved. My healing was slow, but through the loving help of the practitioner I was led to see myself as a child of God and to claim my birthright; then, it is needless to say, my healing was complete.

Not long ago it was necessary for me to be left alone for several days in a large city. As night approached, for an instant I was overcome with fear, but the "still small voice" came softly, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world;" and with this message came such a sense of peace and freedom that I knew I should never be alone again.

I have had many beautiful demonstrations of the protecting care of divine Love, and cannot express my gratitude for the understanding of God gained through the faithful study of the Bible, together with "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy; also for the many channels our Leader has left us for the unfolding of this peace "which passeth all understanding." My prayer each day is that I may reflect more love.

BLANCHE PERRIN, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

On Thanksgiving day, 1915, I was brought home from a hospital helpless and despondent. It did not seem as if I had anything to thank God for, and I could not see why I should live when I could be of no use. A dear neighbor came to see me and talked with me of Christian Science. She let me take a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and I began to study it. I can thank God today, for I am a different woman, happy and contented.

Words cannot express the gratitude I owe to Christian Science for the help and comfort it has given me. I now own a copy of Science and Health, and am studying it every day. The help and comfort derived from it is wonderful, and my healing has been permanent.

MARY C. BERGH, Detroit, Mich.

The Hills

J. ARNOLD HAUGHTON

I LOOKED upon the steadfast hills,
And prayed that I might grow
As grand as they; their strength—it fills
My heart with rev'rence so!

Bathed in the sunlight all serene,
Majestical they stand,
Guarding the beauty of the scene
Like sentries of the land.

Ah, grassy slopes, your restful shade
Reflects the deepened calm
Which now my sense its own hath made,
Like rhythm of a psalm.

So let there grow upon my thought
A knowledge of that Love
Whose hand in noble shape hath wrought
Truth's hills that soar above.

From Our Exchanges

[The Methodist Times]

One of the greatest of our misfortunes is that we are prone to take the material world as the real and practically the whole world. All else we are tempted to think exists on sufferance, and may be thwarted, or even crushed, by the brute forces which have the mastery of events. Such a conception is equally irreligious and untrue. The secret of the universe is revealed in the ideals —spiritual, moral, and social—which come to light and life in the higher consciousness of men. These unfold the meaning, purpose, and resources of the divine order of things as material facts and laws never can. These ideals in which the world is founded and for which it exists are eternal in God, and come to their own through the history of man; they abide permanent and reigning.

[The Christian Work]

The world is today expanding religiously. Rarely has there been a time when men cried out more persistently after the noblest and best things in life. The world is not in the hands of the devil, as some are saying. It is still God's world. He rules. Let us never forget that. It is well for us to be in harmony with His plans. No sane man would think of fighting the laws of nature. He would be a fool who tried to stop "the stars in their courses." But for some reason some men believe that they have power successfully to oppose God in the spiritual world, forgetting that the spiritual world is God's world, as well as the physical world, and that God's laws prevail in the unseen world just as they do in the seen.

[Rev. William H. Bown in The Living Church]

There can be no real greatness of character when no difficulties have been encountered and no temptations overcome; and there can be no songs of triumph unless an enemy has been met and a contest fiercely waged. But this very condition is really a help to us, for we learn that life is a battle, and not a hymn. But in spite of this truth we are reminded that we need not expect to be preserved from the world's evil by our own exertions merely, but that we must earnestly seek for God's gracious and ready help. The moment that the spirit of self-reliance prompts us to feel that we may venture with impunity upon forbidden ground, the moment that we cease to look to the protecting care of God to hold us up, that moment we will be taught the sad and mortifying lesson of our own weakness.

What Is Advertising?

To advertise means to announce, promulgate, give notice of, warn, advise, admonish.

Absolutely speaking the only thing that can be advertised is "the truth of being," as taught in Christian Science. Mrs. Eddy says, "The truth of being is perennial, and the error is unreal and obsolete" (Science and Health, p. 265).

Christian Science periodicals other than THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR carry no advertising except that of Mrs. Eddy's works, the various publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and the cards of Christian Science branch churches and practitioners throughout the world, all of which may be said to have at least a close relation to advertising "the truth of being."

In the world of business Mrs. Eddy's advice may well be remembered. She says, "Mind's possibilities are not lessened by being confined and conformed to the Science of being." (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 60.)

Hundreds of millions of dollars are expended annually to "announce" in periodicals and elsewhere the goods offered for sale by the great commercial institutions of the United States.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR carries such of these announcements as are compatible with its standard of journalism.

The MONITOR insists on the integrity of the advertiser and truth of the advertisement; it emphasizes high motives and the desire to serve rather than the mere desire to sell goods or make money; hence it encourages these qualities in advertising.

As the MONITOR'S advertisers are successful they find encouragement to further steps toward ideal business methods.

Christian Scientists should not patronize advertisers merely because the advertisements appear in the MONITOR. But patronage of MONITOR advertisers accompanied by a proper metaphysical concept of what this patronage means is an important part of the healing work of Christian Science, helping to lead all publishers and all advertisers up to a higher sense of publishing and advertising.

Authority

GEORGE H. MOORE

CONSERVATION of unity is the end and aim of all real authority, and "unity is spiritual cooperation" (Miscellany, p. 162). Authority originates in the right of the Author of the universe to the control of that which He has made. It ultimates in the spiritual cooperation of man with his creator, as exemplified in the divine authority exercised by Jesus, as a result of his close association with the Father.

Throughout the entire range of law and order God's prerogative holds true, whether it appear in the mere detail of orderly human conduct, in the healing of sickness and sin, or in the whirling of the worlds through the boundless blue. Every word of true authority is an assertion of His right, and obedience to His word is essential to a fruition of His right. All lesser power to direct or to command is a derived power, which possesses no inheritance of its own beyond the right to spiritual correlation with its source. Authority itself must hold true to its own design,—as Truth can never be more than Truth, or Love can never be less than Love. Principle must be true to its own nature, else creation could have no unity and the universe itself would disintegrate.

The most obvious test of any semblance of authority is the question as to its origin. If authority be derived from the one power alone competent to enforce obedience, then the unity which it seeks to disclose is real and entitled to endure. If on the other hand asserted authority be so much as tinged with personal assumption or self-seeking, if it be directed to preferment of the instrument of power rather than to exaltation of the source of power, then its rule would degenerate into tyranny and disorder and the sham unity at which it aims would end in disruption and dishonor. The spiritual cooperation which alone defines unity is an interrelation of Principle and idea which exalts the idea only through its clearer reflection of the divine original. In a word, all authority is of God and for the glory of God.

"Order is heaven's first law," Pope declares in his "Essay on Man." Order is clearly God's law, because order is an integral element of unity. Every law humanly framed or perceived, which makes for orderliness, is to that extent at least a reflection of divine law and is backed by its authority, whether the law in question apply to the regulation of traffic in a busy street or to the most momentous affairs which affect the relations of governments and peoples. Every instinct which makes for disorder or disunion among men is as clearly a denial of divine law, and subject to its proscription and condemnation.

The rebellious perversity which seeks to misuse responsibility, to discredit authority, to violate unity, is born and bred of self-importance, fathered by the assumption that the power to control is resident in the instrument of law rather than in the Principle which evolves and supports both the law and its means of expression. The "divine right of kings" is as the divine right of peasants, no more, no less, than the right to serve Principle. This privilege abandoned, prince and pauper alike sacrifice all pretense to usefulness in a well ordered world. A traffic policeman whose vain concern for his own appearance or prestige nullifies his true function of watchful helpfulness in the motley crowd wherein he is appointed to reflect Principle, is cutting from under his feet his only reason for being. If planets could think, their thoughts could not be given to vainglorious dreams about the beautiful orbits they were cutting out for themselves in the azure blue, else their infinite rhythm would long ago have been resolved into chaos. The thought which finds reflection in the stars, as in every lesser witness to the divine harmony, is that of the imperative unity from which emanates all their glory and all their security.

The teachings of Mrs. Eddy insistently prescribe obedience to law and order, wherein and wherever their demand appears. Human laws manifest their true caliber only as they are obeyed. Good laws thereby vindicate their divine sanction and warrant for being. Bad laws are thereby exposed as bad, through the bad results consequent to their enforcement,—for human law like all else that is human must be judged by its fruits. But no individual who is awake to his rights owes or acknowledges any debt of obedience or of subservience to person or to personality unbacked by higher necessity. God Himself is no respecter of persons, and His sons have inherent right to the same immunity. Whether in authority or out of authority, all men alike owe sole and constant allegiance to Principle, which alone has wisdom and power to perpetuate unity.

The bearing of these facts on the activities of Christian Scientists is obvious. The design of Christian Science work is the establishment in the minds of men of the truth that there is absolutely and exclusively but one law of well-being, defining and fulfilling the basic impulse of Life itself,—the self-assertion and self-perpetuation of good and the consequent self-extinction of evil. Christian Scientists have learned that those who would find security and usefulness in the onward sweep of this infinite purpose can do so only as they are alive to the fundamental intent of its rule, the conservation of unity with divine Mind through spiritual cooperation with its demands. In true spiritual democracy, wherein all men alike are governed by Principle, the individual is called out from the ranks for no other reason than his concurrence with God's design, his willingness to obey Principle; and constant alertness to this basic fact is an imperative necessity for those who would meet the requirements of God's service.

The Christian worker, however lowly or however important his assignment of duty may seem to be, whose thought wanders in the by-paths of vainglory and self-importance, who invites or accepts as his proper wage the mesmeric blandishments of a personal following, who lays down either his own mere opinion or the obiter dicta of others as just basis for a call to obedience, overlooks and sacrifices entirely the great dominant ideals of true service, and furthermore imposes his own miserly limitations on all those who come and go at his beck and nod.

This spiritual sovereignty which is resident in true humility speaks the word of authority to every form of human distress, sickness, and sin, but it performs an even more vital function in snuffing out the presumptuous self-importance of mortal mind, ever seeking new ways to advertise itself and its vagaries, to challenge the divine unity, and to set up a kingdom of its own apart from God. The great leaders of mankind have always been the servants of mankind. Mrs. Eddy counseled her students, "Follow your Leader only so far as she follows Christ" (Message for 1901, p. 34), and she maintained her unique spiritual leadership and authority because in all her wonderful career she neither asked nor accepted for herself any more pretentious dignity than that, as she herself says on page ix of the Preface to Science and Health, of "a willing disciple at the heavenly gate, waiting for the Mind of Christ."

Command and Promise

OLIVE ALLISON

ONCE an elderly woman left her native state and lived for a number of years in a distant part of the country. Later she returned to her former home, looking so much younger, healthier, and happier than when she left, that one of her friends remarked to a Christian Scientist, "I wonder if she has taken up your faith, she is so greatly improved in every way." Such statements are not unusual, because it is generally known that Christian Scientists are a healthy and happy people. They are so because Christian Science teaches them the right solution of every life problem. They need only demonstrate obedience to divine commands in order to receive the fulfillment of God's rich promises.

Jesus gave the world both a command and a promise when he said, "Ask, and it shall be given you." Those who desire the fulfillment of the promise would do well to grasp the significance of the command. To ask does not mean an attempt to compromise with the demands of Truth or to dictate to the Almighty. That is what people do who make remarks like the following: "I shall be grateful if I am healed;" "I shall believe in Christian Science if it benefits me;" "If there is anything in this teaching I should have been healed by this time." Those persons are not asking anything of God. Asking expresses desire, and as Mrs. Eddy says, "Desire is prayer" (Science and Health, p. 1). Asking implies meekness. It implies that one knows enough to be "poor in spirit," for of such Jesus said, "Theirs is the kingdom of heaven." A petitioner is always a dependent. Even Jesus acknowledged his dependence upon God, for he said, "I can of mine own self do nothing;" and again, "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."

Those who would follow the great Wayshower do not err when they become petitioners of God. They should however be sure that they are seeking aid from God alone. He who looks to materiality for protection is not truly asking God for that protection. If health is sought in drugs, it is not being sought of God. The mere asking of God for something should signify confidence that He will grant the request. Such trust in God obviates the necessity of looking to another power for aid. Supplication is the simplest form of prayer. Its place in the life of the beginner in Truth should not be ignored, for it is the first step toward the realization that what he asks for is really his and needs only to be accepted. Those who have not realized in their lives the fulfillment of the promise, "It shall be given you," should earnestly attempt to discover wherein they have failed to obey the command "Ask."

Another statement of combined command and promise is, "The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace." To obey this injunction sometimes seems quite difficult, especially when error would disturb and agitate the thought. Some one may be manifesting a discordant mental condition and showing combativeness of spirit. Another may be unappreciative of one's efforts or be directing unjust criticism toward one. An attempt to retaliate by fighting for self seems to be the natural tendency; but if fear is eliminated, if equanimity of thought is preserved, if absolute peace of mind is retained, the promise, "The Lord shall fight for you," will be fulfilled. Jesus often experienced the fulfillment of this promise. When his enemies reviled and persecuted him, he answered not a word. There is no record that he ever insisted upon explanations, clamored for recognition or appreciation, rehearsed error, or contended for personal rights; nevertheless, God gave him the greatest possible victory,—the everlasting conquest of sin, sickness, and death. God defended him, and God defends all who know the nothingness of error well enough to hold their peace.

In her writings Mrs. Eddy teaches that rendering obedience to a command necessarily precedes the fulfillment of a promise. For instance, she says, "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts" (Science and Health, p. 261). One who is not experiencing desired blessings should measure his thoughts by the standard of "the enduring, the good, and the true;" then those thoughts that stand the test should be held steadfastly. To think error part of the time and to try to think truth the rest of the time, falls far short of obedience. Those thoughts which fail to stand the test are the ones to be dismissed. The more tenaciously such thoughts cling to consciousness the more vigorously must one work to displace them. This elimination must continue not only until a right thought has been substituted for every wrong one, but until scientific, right thinking has become a habit. Then will one be holding "the enduring, the good, and the true" so steadfastly in consciousness that the blessing of experiencing the promised good will be realized.

Christian Scientists know that the rich promises of the Bible are for God's people in all ages, and they know that these promises will be fulfilled when God's divine mandates are understandingly obeyed. Therefore the happiness of Christian Scientists has its source and continuance in an earnest search for divine commands and in a faithful effort to obey them. They know the correctness of their Leader's thought as expressed on page 118 of "Miscellaneous Writings," "Obedience crowns persistent effort with everlasting victory."

Truth's Sustaining Power

REGINALD LAVERY

[We are privileged in being able, through the courtesy of the writer of the following letter and the one to whom it was addressed, to present to our readers this confirmatory testimony of the sustaining power of Truth experienced by those who even in the midst of seeming dangers rely upon omnipotence.—THE EDITORS.]

I SUPPOSE that in a letter from the front you will expect to hear something about the war, but I am going to write about something of far more importance than the material side of the war; in fact I am going to write about something which makes war, even when you are in the thick of it, appear foolish and unreal, despite the so-called horrors which material sense tries to tell us are so apparent.

After a few months' experience of the conditions out here, I think a good many people came to the conclusion that there is only one thing worth living for, only one thing worth thinking about, and that is God. Of course they have been forced to this conclusion, in a way, as a result of the terrible human experiences which they have been through. However, if men have advanced to such a state of spiritual understanding as this without the help of divine Science, you can draw your own conclusions as to what I have gained in understanding with that help.

It would be useless for me to try to thank you in words for bringing to me the truth that summer many years ago,—I can only do this by demonstrating the truth which was taught. Thank God, I have been able to do that these last twelve months in France and have been rewarded a hundredfold, so that the seeds sown many years ago have indeed yielded a rich harvest. Not only once or twice have I proved the allness of God and the nothingness of evil, but on every occasion since I have been in the trenches have I proved God's omnipotent power, and believe me those occasions have been many.

When you see great trees snapped off like a twig and hurled yards, when you see a whole house demolished by a single shell, when you see a great rent which would hold a thousand men torn in the ground by a mine, you begin to wonder what power there is in matter to help one to escape such destruction, and of course there is no power in the material world to help a man who is in such a strait. That is the turning point, when men turn from matter to Spirit, and man's extremity becomes God's opportunity. Above the mighty thunderings comes as the sound of many waters the unchallenged declaration, "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth." What a blessing to know that it is impossible for a man to be in any conceivable circumstance where God cannot help him, because if we do think this we are believing in a power opposed to God.

It has been my privilege on many occasions, when right in the midst of these mighty thunderings, to be able to realize my at-one-ment with God, and so be conscious of that peace which passes human understanding. I cannot describe this peace, but it brings that calm and exalted thought which is undisturbed by all the testimony of the material senses. Sufficient is it for me to know that I always have it so long as I am conscious of that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus,"—always conscious of good, there is no need to fear. These promises from the Bible mean everything to me: "Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee." "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee."

Surely one cannot be fearful or discouraged in the face of such promises. However, it is necessary for us to give up all our material aims and ambitions and plans, and that ought not to be very hard, for most of them have been ghastly failures. When we can with confidence leave everything to God, and say with Jesus, "Not my will, but thine, be done," then we can rise above the din and discord of mortal strife in the knowledge that the battle is not ours but God's. There is no need then to worry and think about when the war will be over or how it will finish, or what we shall have to go through, or whether we shall be killed or wounded. These things have nothing to do with us, since as Mrs. Eddy tells us, "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine" (Science and Health, p. 14). It is good to know that the all-seeing, all-acting, all-powerful Mind is guiding and governing our affairs every second of the day and night.

What a glorious lesson it is this week on "Sacrament." I think this is my favorite lesson, although I suppose we ought not to have any favorites, as they are all so beautiful; but there is something in this subject which always appeals to me and takes me far out of the reach of material belief. How well do I remember this lesson at this time last year, about a week before we left for the front. I was sitting under a little tree one Sunday evening, just by Stonehenge, Salisbury Plain. There was a sublime sunset and marvelous cloud effects in the sky, and studying the lesson under such peaceful and beautiful conditions I indeed had a peep into that city described in Revelation. As I sat there in the shadow of stones that are the remains of a great altar upon which human sacrifices were offered by the Druids long centuries ago, so this week, twelve months afterward, have I studied the same lesson in the shadow of the remains of buildings which mark the place of a greater altar upon which the greatest human sacrifices have been offered—in Ypres.

However, the divine Mind is not influenced by person, place, or thing, and although the conditions this year are about as ghastly as mortal mind could conceive, divine Love has shined through all and revealed even greater truths than last year. This experience reminds me of a verse in one of our hymns (Hymnal, p. 194) :—

> Feast after feast thus comes and passes by;
> Yet passing, points to the glad feast above—
> Giving sweet foretaste of the festal joy,
> The Lamb's great bridal feast of bliss and love.

What beautiful milestones we have in the Lesson-Sermons on this great and sublime journey from sense to Soul! We cannot take the wrong road if we always keep our eye single to the light. It is not always an easy path; very often there are swift currents to battle against, dark caves of mortal thought with all kinds of dangers and temptations lurking in the corners, high mountains of material sense to climb and overcome; but, whatever we may meet on this journey, we can rest assured that we will not meet anything which Christ Jesus has not met before us. "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." One cannot give too much importance to the words, "be of good cheer." If there is one thing which smashes the seeming reality of evil, it is cheerfulness; not the cheerfulness derived from material pleasures, which vanishes with the first approach of trouble, but the cheerfulness which is the outcome of high ideals and good works. This cheerfulness shines on as a beacon light, although perhaps surrounded by the most appalling human conditions.

I remember during the winter months in the trenches toward the end of last year, and before we were equipped with the gum boots, we were days in the front line with the mud and water above our knees, and sometimes almost up to our waists; but amidst all this I was able to keep my mind so filled with thoughts of Truth and Love that I was hardly conscious of the material surroundings, and so was able to keep cheerful not only myself, but those about me as well. This is a great help to one's comrades, as they have nothing to help them and they look to you in every trouble. It is a beautiful position to be in, and you can fairly feel the good you have sent out return unto you tenfold when you see with what success you have helped them. I think this is the greatest reward a man can have, as it is the product of the greatest power in the world, the power of Love. As Paul said, the man who has not Love is as nothing. How true those words are!

All the inventions of mortal mind which are now being made to destroy men, are really destroying themselves; no matter how terrible or monstrous or destructive they may seem to appear, they fade away into nothingness with the first appearance of Love. There is a place on a well-known road here that leads to the trenches, which is called "Hell Fire Corner." Well, when we are in ——— we have to pass this corner every night on fatigues and working parties. They always shell this corner some time during the night, and you do not know what second the shells are coming. When I get near this place, instead of thinking of it in this way and expecting shells every second, I always think of it as "Love's Corner," as I know

Love is there as much as in any other place in the world; and there is no more of God in one place than another, as He fills all space; therefore there are no dangerous places for God's idea.

It is beautiful what peace and comfort and what a sense of security I get if I realize this when passing such places. The same thing applies when I am in a listening post out in No-man's-land, just a few yards from the enemy mine. I have been able to realize some of the most beautiful thoughts when in these situations. Surely to be able to call upon a power like this, which is master of all material conditions and circumstances, is to have the "pearl of great price," for which we may well work, watch, and pray, no matter what we meet here to go through with in order to attain it; then we shall indeed finish our course with joy, and receive that glorious reward promised in Revelation,—"He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

What a glorious task we have before us,—what ideas of Mind there are still to be unfolded, how we may well work for that day when all peoples and nations shall recognize divine Mind as the only Mind, when man shall love his neighbor as himself, when all the ideas of Mind will be expressed in everything that is beautiful and good, when there is neither crying nor sorrow, nor any more pain, for all things will have become new. Thank God, we need not wait through long tedious years before we can enjoy these spiritual blessings, but we can begin here, right where we are, to enjoy them.

"Suffer the little children"

EUNICE SIMS UPTON

IN thinking over the many blessings for which we as Christian Scientists have occasion to be grateful, the understanding which has come in regard to little children is prominent in the writer's thought. The little ones who are instructed in Christian Science cling naturally to all that is good, and it is not at all unusual to find a child simply and naturally disentangling the errors which are still clinging to and hampering the parents' thought. The most beautiful of all is the realization of the wonderful protection bestowed upon these little ones when brought into the light of divine Science.

In a very few years the great cause of Christian Science must be represented in large part by those who today are young children, and its further progress will depend largely upon the purity of thought which is being inculcated, the exactness with which the demands of Principle are being taught, both in the home and in the Sunday school. Mortal mind is prone to argue that it would rather do some other line of work than to teach children; hence it would leave this important duty to another,—some one who could do this work better than the one to whom it is offered. Some such argument as this has come to the writer in a number of different forms, and each time Love has led her back to the knowledge that to teach the children properly was her highest duty and privilege. It is no difficult task to impart the truths of Christian Science to children, when we realize that in every case where error seems to hold its ground stubbornly it is the older thought which seems to be swayed by mortal mind, and not that of the little one.

Experiences have come to the writer which have taught her many needed lessons, and some are given here with the hope that they may impart a blessing to others. A call once came to her to attend to some business matters which would require her to be away all the morning, leaving alone in the home two children, aged respectively nine and six years. Just as she left the house the thought came that nothing in the way of special counsel had been given to the children; but there was no time to go back, and turning to divine Mind for their protection, these words came: "God is there." Thought was fully occupied with the duties of the morning and the children were forgotten, although once during the time an anxious thought flew homeward; but instantly came the assurance of God's ever presence and omnipotence.

On returning home some hours later, the children were found sitting at the table studying the Lesson-Sermon. They had spent the entire morning in this way, and in deep humility a prayer of thanksgiving went up from the mother's heart. How often had much time been spent in mental work for the children, and then, after leaving them in God's care, mortal mind would tempt the mother to be anxious and to meddle with the work God had been asked to do. How often had the "don'ts" of mortal mind occupied valuable time; but in the case cited not one had been spoken, scarcely a thought of anxiety had intervened, and so God's work was perfect.

On another occasion a great fire was burning several blocks away, and all was excitement. The little boy did not return from school at the usual hour, and on inquiries being made, it was found he had gone to the fire. Time passed and still he did not return. The mother sought divine guidance, and in a short time peace was realized, though the conviction came clearly that she must go after him. On nearing the fire she saw that the streets were filled with crowds of people, so that it seemed well-nigh impossible to find a child seven years of age in that great crowd. While these thoughts were crowding in, the "still small voice" was telling her to go straight on, and she did so. Not far from the burning building was a fence, and there the crowd was greatest; but still looking for guidance, the mother walked directly to the fence and placed her hand on the boy's shoulder, although when three feet away she could see nothing of him.

The mother had been led to the boy by the shortest possible way, and again a lesson of deep humility was brought to consciousness. Why had one anxious thought ever crept in, when she knew that Love "never faileth"? Divine guidance is ever at hand and the little ones are ever in Love's care. Such lessons as these bring many moments of earnest thought, and the words of the Master, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," are fraught with deeper meaning. Does not this forbidding come from our doubts and fears, our beliefs that arrogant mortal mind can do something better than the Most High?

The gentle Master's admonition was very plain: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." When we become humble enough to learn some of life's deeper lessons, then we begin to understand the significance of the definition of children as given by our Leader on page 582 of Science and Health: "The spiritual thoughts and representatives of Life, Truth, and Love."

Unselfed Love and Gratitude

JENNIE M. DELLANO

MANY helpful lessons may be gained in our passage from sense to Soul through appreciation of the unselfish deeds of others. The Scriptures are filled with these object lessons, such as the little maid of Israel who, when taken captive into Syria, did not sit down in self-pity and bemoan her fate, but turned her thought to helping Naaman that he might be healed of his leprosy. Not only was Naaman's healing accomplished, but we find him giving this complete acknowledgment of its source, "Now I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel."

In one of our Wednesday evening meetings a gentleman told of his having reached home from business one evening in excruciating pain, when a telephone message came asking him to help a friend who was suffering. His first thought was that he had quite enough to do for himself, but he answered, "Yes, I will." He gave his friend treatment as taught in Christian Science, realizing the allness and power and presence of God with the patient, and man's likeness to his Maker. And when the gentleman's thought reverted to himself he was healed.

We read in our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, "Whatever holds human thought in line with unselfed love, receives directly the divine power" (p. 192). All nature expresses the thought of giving out beauty and loveliness and expecting nothing in return. The great trees leave out in grandeur, affording shelter and shade for God's little ones. The early hours of the summer mornings are gladdened by the songs of birds, which pour out gratitude to our heavenly Father before they have found their morning meal. We are too apt to give thanks afterward instead of before we receive the blessing. This was not Jesus' way; he said, "Father, I thank thee," and then bade Lazarus come forth.

The life of our beloved Leader is one pæan of praise and gratitude to God, reflecting an ever flowing activity of unselfish deeds whose monument the centuries cannot crumble. "Love, redolent with unselfishness, bathes all in beauty and light," she writes on page 516 of Science and Health. Paul did not wait to be healed of the "thorn in the flesh," but gave his life to healing the sick and raising the dead—loosening the mental and physical bonds of himself and others. Joseph did not spend his time in condemning his brothers for having sold him into Egypt, but, dropping sense and self, he made his captivity a stepping-stone to a higher understanding of God, whereby he was enabled to feed his brethren in the days of adversity. Had Daniel felt aggrieved at the presidents and princes who influenced King Darius to cast him into the den of lions, he would never have been delivered unharmed, for we learn in Christian Science that hate is an animal propensity which attracts that defiling element in our human experience; while love is a reflection of divine Mind and is continually "under the shadow of the Almighty."

May our lives be a credit to our Leader, who gave her all for God and humanity that we might be healed and see the light that will never fade away, even the "Spirit of truth," that will abide with us forever.

A Song of Joy

EMILY F. SEAL

THERE sings in my heart from day to day
A joyous thought which clings alway,
And lifts me above earth's cares and fears,
Till I seek no more the place of tears
But find my hope to courage grown,
Remembering Love's sure care for His own.

He cares—our Father—for every child;
Not one is left in the wilderness wild,
But is led to pastures green, beside
The living waters, so still, so wide.
Not a far-off God on a golden throne,
But a Father who cares for His very own.

The scepter of Love is over us all,
Touching each child at the faintest call;
So my heart sings on from hour to hour,
A song of sweetness and of power,—
Growing in fullness and swelling tone,—
God always, always cares for His own!

["'He trusted in God.'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Aug. 23, 1917]

It would be difficult more perfectly to state the secret of Christ Jesus' power than did the chief priests when they said of him, "He trusted in God;" nor could words, contemptuously spoken as these were, better expose the materialism of the carnal mind, which it was the purpose of Jesus' trust in God to destroy but which the priests had no intention of surrendering. The priests claimed that they themselves trusted in God, as many mortals since their time have also claimed. The difference, however, between their conventionalized worship of a national deity and Jesus' scientific trust in the divine Principle which he understood, was measured by Jesus' success in destroying those very illusions of sensuous existence in matter which to the materialists were solid reality.

Trust in God today, as in Jesus' time, can mean nothing but the conscious turning away from the testimony of the material senses to reliance upon the evidence of spiritual reality. It was this reversal of material order which made Jesus the Christ the hated of materialists, who felt the rebuke of his spirituality but were unwilling to part with their materialism. It is just this unwillingness of the human mind to lay down the desires of the material senses that prolongs the suffering of those senses.

The persistence of humanity's trust in matter, in the face of continual disappointments due to the failure of the thing trusted in, can only be explained by the human mind's ignorance of Spirit. This false trust in material power or promise is the lie about a quality of mind, a characteristic of the real consciousness, which reflects God, and which therefore naturally relies upon Spirit and upon nothing else. As this genuine trust in God penetrates human beliefs, fears are dispelled, and a man consciously receives the immediate reward of peace commensurate with his singleness of confidence. The prophet Isaiah referred to this quality of spiritual reliance and its effect when he said, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee."

This "peace of God, which passeth all understanding," can no more result from blind faith in God than can ignorance of mathematics demonstrate accuracy in numbers. This is because faith without understanding of Principle virtually amounts to reliance upon a humanized sense of God, and constantly reverts to the senses to answer whether it has received the good it hopes for. This accounts for the perpetual struggle of the human mind between the extremes of hope and discouragement. Christian Science gives the needed understanding of God as unchanging, ever operative divine Principle. It shows that, as a consequence of the oneness and allness of Spirit, the evidence of the senses is entirely unreal. Upon this scientific basis trust in God takes a man through dangers unscathed, overcomes material obstacles and diseases, and brings into experience the harmony of this more spiritual sense of being. "To divest thought of false trusts and material evidences," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 428 of Science and Health, "in order that the spiritual facts of being may appear,—this is the great attainment by means of which we shall sweep away the false and give place to the true."

The human being struggling toward an abiding trust in God does not at once extricate himself from false trusts and belief in material evidences. It may even seem to material sense that the opposing elements, whether mental or physical, become more intense in proportion to the sincerity of the effort to trust in Principle. Moses did not escape the experience in the wilderness because he trusted in God; but his trust delivered a nation. Daniel did not escape the den of the beasts because he trusted in God; but his trust proved the lions harmless. Not under the shelter of his own home roof, but in a pagan court, was Joseph destined to prove his trust in the abundance of God.

Christ Jesus accepted the gage of materialism that he might prove the power of trust in Principle; prove that immortal man, as the child of God, is above the destructive touch of materialism. It was to this struggle between the material and the spiritual, the unreal and the real, that Mrs. Eddy referred when on page 226 of Science and Health she wrote of her experience, "I saw before me the awful conflict, the Red Sea and the wilderness; but I pressed on through faith in God, trusting Truth, the strong deliverer, to guide me into the land of Christian Science, where fetters fall and the rights of man are fully known and acknowledged."

With the understanding that God is divine Principle, there comes the assurance that all that God creates is also good. In what God bestows upon man there is no element or possibility of evil. The effect upon the human mind of this scientific understanding immeasurably transcends the effect of the effort, however conscientious, to trust in God while still believing in the reality of evil. When evil is known to be an illusion of the human mind itself, it is seen that, however trying or sorrowful human conditions may seem to be, the sorrow can be overcome and the trial emerged from triumphantly, because neither trials nor suffering are of God. The realization of the actuality of present spiritual harmony demonstrates the unreality, the nothingness, of matter and its discords. "Step by step," Mrs. Eddy writes, on page 444 of Science and Health, "will those who trust Him find that 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.'"

The effort to trust in God from this scientific basis is by no means easy to material sense. It means, indeed, a tremendous wrestling with that unreal sense of existence until it is overcome, and a man can walk, conscious of liberty, in a demonstrated knowledge of the supremacy of Spirit and its reflection. The psalmist, who again and again urged men to trust in God, declared of those who endeavor to resist the lie of materialism, "The Lord shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in The Berkshire Gleaner, Lee, Mass.]

In view of The Berkshire Gleaner's review of Mark Twain's book on Christian Science, or rather his book against Mrs. Eddy, I trust that you will permit me to quote a comment on this book by his biographer, Albert Bigelow Paine. In Mr. Paine's biography he said (pp. 1186, 1187) that Mr. Clemens "never had any quarrel with the theory of Christian Science" but had "animosity for the founder."

It can hardly be contended that animosity for Mrs. Eddy qualified Mr. Clemens to deal fairly with either her or the religion she founded. Nevertheless it was characteristic of him that he aimed to be fair, and there was a contest between his dislike and his admiration for Mrs. Eddy. His final opinion of her was expressed as follows ("Mark Twain," p. 1187): "Closely examined, painstakingly studied, she is easily the most interesting person on the planet, and in several ways as easily the most extraordinary woman that was ever born upon it."

In spite of Mr. Clemens' animosity for Mrs. Eddy he paid to Christian Science the tribute that accepts the final test of every religion, namely, its fruits. Thus he said ("Christian Science," p. 268): "Personally I have not known a Scientist who did not seem serene, contented, unharassed. I have not found an outsider whose observation of Scientists furnished him a view that differed from my own." And as his biographer has said ("Mark Twain," p. 1187): "He frequently expressed a deep obligation which humanity owed to the founder of the faith, in that she had organized a healing element ignorantly and indifferently employed hitherto."

The specific comments on Christian Science or Christian Scientists made or reported in the Gleaner will not stand the test of reasonable observation. It is not true at all that Mrs. Eddy is worshiped by her followers. No other religious leader has been more careful than she to turn the thought of her followers away from herself to her teaching. Nor is it true that Christian Science "permits no discussion." What it does, which has been given this misinterpretation, is to provide better means for discussion than preaching, and to inculcate the greater value of thoughts and deeds over mere words.

The statement that Christian Science "has no charities" can only mean that its charities are either not known to its critics or are different. The most genuinely charitable people know that the mitigation of effects is not the best form of charity. Nevertheless, Christian Scientists have given as much money for the relief of suffering from the European war as any other body of people of equal number in the United States. Moreover, as the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts observed and held in a case which involved the validity of Mrs. Eddy's will: "The promotion of the religion of Christian Science is as definite as many donations which have been upheld as public charities. Relief of spiritual destitution, religious or moral ignorance, intolerance or perversity, is a good public charity." There is a wide field for such charity; and the debt which humanity owes to Mrs. Eddy for restoring the element of healing to the Christian religion, which Mark Twain admitted, amounts to a greater charity than anything done by any or all of her critics.

[Samuel Greenwood in The Colonist, Victoria, B. C., Canada]

To the bystander witnessing the periodical "flaying" of Christian Science on the part of its clerical and other opponents,—for the most part the clerical,—the enduring vitality of the victim must seem at least remarkable. To this same bystander it must seem that neither denunciation nor ridicule of another's religion is the best way to establish the superiority of one's own. Its critics should see that the only feasible way to dispose of Christian Science, in the event of its not being true, is to replace it with something more satisfying and helpful.

The attempt of the speaker to define Christian Science or its method would not appeal to a Christian Scientist, and a Christian Scientist, let it be remembered, is more competent to say what Christian Science is, or how it is applied, than are its opponents. The assertions that Christian Science is "anti-Christian," that it "denies the Saviour," and so on, only serve to announce the speaker's difference of opinion, though that could be done more generously than by a misstatement of facts.

This critic acknowledges that Christian Science heals the sick, which he admits is a very Christian thing to do, even to the extent of advocating its adoption by his own church. If he is conversant with the facts of the Christian Science movement, he should also be willing to acknowledge that it has been conspicuously successful in liberating men from sinful and vicious habits, and is helping its adherents everywhere to live better and purer lives. If these things are "anti-Christian," the meaning of that word as generally applied stands in sore need of improvement.

The assertion that Christian Science denies the Saviour would, if true, be a revelation to Christian Scientists. While they, in common with other Christians, are conscious of their shortcomings, they would naturally not think of including that among them, for the very good reason that they accept Christ as their Saviour not only from sin but from sickness as well. It would be difficult to name a denomination that regards the mission of Christ Jesus in a fuller sense, or that strives harder to obey his commands.

[Duncan Sinclair in Partick Gazette, Glasgow, Scotland]

Under the title, "The Cross of Christ," in a recent issue of the Gazette, reference is made to those who have "become Christian Scientists and no longer believe that there is such a thing as death; and that hence they could not believe that Jesus died for sins."

In the first place, Christian Science does not deny that death seems to occur, as a phenomenon, on the material plane of human consciousness; but it differs entirely from generally accepted religious systems in that it does not admit that death has its origin in God. Christian Science holds that God is infinite Life, and that in infinite Life there exists no such thing as death, which is the very antithesis of Life. Death is the result of the beliefs of the carnal mind,—the material sense of things, which sense is in direct opposition to the fact that God and His universe are entirely spiritual. Death is unreal in the absolute sense, in the sense, that is, that it does not exist in the consciousness of God.

Further, Christian Science does not underrate the sacrifices made by Jesus the Christ for the world,—indeed, Christian Scientists look upon the Nazarene as the greatest friend and the best friend of mankind,—but they differ from many as to the meaning of his life. Christian Science looks upon his work as essentially that of a Saviour. It holds that Jesus' whole effort was directed toward the destruction of the beliefs of sin, disease, and death. But could he have destroyed anything real? Not if reality be defined as that which exists in the eternal consciousness of God. Undoubtedly in every healing of sin and disease he performed, as well as in the recorded instances of the raising of the dead, Christ Jesus proved that sin, disease, and death were false beliefs of the human mind, and that they could be, and actually were, destroyed through his spiritual understanding of Truth.

The Master, notwithstanding all he had done for mankind, recognized that the world had to be shown that he could overcome the belief of death in his own case; hence his submission to the crucifixion was not to propitiate the wrath of a God of vengeance, because such a being did not exist, but to demonstrate God's power—the power of Truth and Love—over the world's belief in evil. One of the saddest things to contemplate is the fact that so many seem to believe even yet that God, who is infinite Love, could demand the suffering of any one to appease His hypothetical wrath. It is one of those fallacies which future generations will look back upon with wonderment, and marvel how it could possibly have originated.

On page 24 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy writes: "The efficacy of the crucifixion lay in the practical affection and goodness it demonstrated for mankind. The truth had been lived among men; but until they saw that it enabled their Master to triumph over the grave, his own disciples could not admit such an event to be possible."

[Carl E. Herring in Omaha (Neb.) Bee]

A writer in the Bee reverts to the common notion of the reality of evil because it is evident to the senses that evil exists. This he calls using one's common sense.

Common sense is an excellent thing, but labeling one's own views common sense does not make it so. Common sense kept the world flat for a great many centuries. Common sense stopped Galileo and the progress of the world, made Huss a martyr, blotted New England with the witchcraft delusion. Common sense sits on the back end of a train and sees the rails close up. Common sense interprets the Bible literally, and the commoner it is the more absurd the sense. Common sense interprets "fire" as good or bad according to the use that is made of it, which is only a step in advance of the Parsis, whose god was fire; in both cases attributing to fire a potentiality in itself for good or evil.

We have no objection to the use of the words common sense, and frequently the "C. S." of Christian Science is said to stand for common sense; but it should be used only as the ultimate of philosophy and not as the crude beginnings. As an illustration, our critic sees in the statement that God is All-in-all a deduction that if this is so "there is nothing else." Such common sense interpretation would render a discussion of things spiritual impossible.

Words at the best are inadequate to express ultimate truth, and when their meaning is dried up to express only the commonplace usage of the farm or stock yards they become impossible. The "allness of God" is simply another form of expression in which to present the universally accepted fact that God is supreme and infinite. The conclusions which flow from this postulate are properly the subject of earnest difference among students, but the premise is not.

[Aaron E. Brandt in Meadville (Pa.) Messenger]

In the notes on the International Sunday School Lesson reference is made to Christian Science; and in commenting on the healing by Christ Jesus of the man who was blind from his birth the following statement is made: "Jesus did not talk to the blind man of the 'delusions of mortal mind.' He recognized suffering and sought its alleviation."

If this statement aims to show that there is a difference between the practice of Jesus and the teaching and practice of Christian Science, and that Jesus did not heal blindness, disease, and suffering of all kinds from the standpoint that they are delusions and not realities, kindly permit us to point out that on many occasions he denied entirely physical evidence, and in the case of Jairus' daughter he said, "She is not dead," although this declaration was treated with scorn by those present, who doubtless believed as does this critic. Christian Science, as taught in Mrs. Eddy's writings and practiced by her and her followers, has overcome not only many cases of blindness but also every kind of disease and sickness mentioned in the Scriptures and out of them.

Christian Scientists recognize, however, Jesus' greater understanding of this truth and his equally greater ability to practice it. It is a difference of degree only, and not a difference in kind; the same difference that exists between a pupil and his teacher with reference to the subject-matter taught. That blindness is a delusion of mortal mind, the term given by Mrs. Eddy to designate that which is opposed to the real or true Mind which was in Christ Jesus, the evidence is too strong to admit of any doubt at this day. The mere fact that Jesus removed the man's sense of blindness is proof of this.

If Jesus did not in so many words say that blindness was a delusion, his act of restoring sight speaks louder, much louder than words, and keeps echoing and re-echoing down the ages this momentous fact: that blindness is of such a nature that it can be destroyed by an understanding of Truth, the Word of God, which is eternally fixed and invariable; and that the things that are seen and temporal, which certainly include blindness and every ill of the flesh, are not the things of God's creating, or Jesus would not have destroyed them; but that they are, and must be, the delusions of a false sense.

Notice

FOR many months past The Christian Science Board of Directors has been collecting, compiling, and binding in form for permanent preservation such letters or other authentic statements by Mrs. Eddy as their owners have desired to give to The Mother Church. The members of The Christian Science Board of Directors, and many other Christian Scientists throughout the field, have given to The Mother Church their original letters written by Mrs. Eddy.

On behalf of The Mother Church this Board acknowledges its appreciation of the cooperation extended by Christian Scientists in the field in connection with making this collection.

Christian Scientists or others who knew Mrs. Eddy personally or through correspondence at any period of her human experience, and who are therefore able to record their reminiscences or furnish data of historical value, are requested to communicate with this Board.

Principle Our Omnipresent Guide

To Christian Scientists the word Principle expresses the truth that "God is infinite Person," unlimited in knowledge and goodness, as the textbook states. Again it says: "God is Love. He is therefore the divine, infinite Principle, called Person or God" (Science and Health, pp. 116, 302). If we once thought we could work secretly in the chambers of our imagery for six days in the week, and that our mundane or selfish thinking could be covered from sight by a parade of righteousness on the seventh day, all this willful deception disappeared with the first gleam of understanding that God is Principle.

Some complain that this word Principle expresses to them something cold, searching, relentless; but with any actual demonstration of healing comes assurance that Principle means comfort, resource, reliance,—the warmth of Life, the joy of righteousness. It means heaven brought nigh when the discovery is made that Principle guides man omnipresently, that is, guides his every step heavenward. The Scripture describes this exactly: "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way."

Formerly men were accustomed to think of God as so personal that there were limits to the divine understanding, such limits that He must of necessity judge according to appearances. If, for instance, He demanded the acclamation of praise, hearing the loud-throated acclaim of the multitude He could not be aware of the wandering thoughts of an individual devotee. If He demanded a fast, He could be pleased if one, although feasting secretly, so disfigured his face that he appeared unto men to be fasting. If He required prayer, the fragrant odor of clouds of incense rising would satisfy, instead of the heart's meekness and the purification of desire; or long and ostentatious verbal prayers could create a favorable impression and be the cover for secret iniquity. In other words, the inevitable result of holding a personal sense of God is Pharisaism, which Jesus most emphatically condemned as being a woe to man, not a blessing. He said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation."

It would seem, then, that the personal sense of God means God and man sundered, or in practice man sundered from goodness—living only the appearance of goodness on set occasions of worship, or on such occasions as might be termed days of reckoning. The theory means denial of divine omnipresence and omniscience. But when we accept the teaching of Christian Science and understand God as infinite Person,—as perfect Mind, omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient,—then the futility of trying to deceive ourselves or Deity by false appearances is at once apparent. We may hear men declare that "appearances are deceitful," but we recognize that their misleading belief cannot affect either infinite Mind or one who is guided by that Mind. Of the divine messenger it was said, "He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth." Christ Jesus, then, was exactly and intimately guided by Principle, from which he was not for a moment separated.

The coming to human consciousness of the understanding of Principle is like the rising of the sun after a night of storm. But here the analogy fails; for the human almanac provides for sunsettings, whereas in metaphysics it is said, "Thy sun shall no more go down." Once accepted, the light is nevermore withheld. God as divine Principle literally guides every motive and act, so that there is peace amid worldly confusion, quietness of heart amid "wars and rumours of wars," and the certainty that Love is omnipotent to heal even while men seem to be aggravating the sorrows and distresses of mankind.

Since, then, "the day of the Lord" has come to many, clearly its light must shine for all. Those who pause from blind strife for a moment may say, Show us the salvation of your God. Wherever this question is an honest one, Christian Scientists can answer it by revealing Principle as the omnipresent guide and giving testimony regarding their own healing. What mean our periodicals for the world unless they are an open forum for record and testimony and proof of the fact that God is intimately known to men and women, and children too, as infinite Principle—that is, Love inexhaustible, of whose beneficence man is partaker, from whose eternal goodness man can never be separated.

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Things that Seem

SURFACE indications catch the eye of material beliefs and pretend to be solid facts. Therefore spiritual discernment is necessary in order to separate appearances from "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." The average business man, priding himself on his practical nature, or common sense, as the expression is generally used, is apt to be startled when he discovers, upon making acquaintance with the Science of Christianity, that it is "the invisible things" which really count in human life, while the visible are but after effects of underlying causes.

This sobering sense of Truth works mighty transformations in people's careers, when reliance upon material props gives place to trust in God. In the same way those who seem to stand alone in the world, making their way against many odds, find through Christian Science that the powers that be are ready to work for them and not against them. They learn to brush aside the material evidences of their own limitations and of the world's shortcomings, thereby revealing the true inexhaustible reservoir of divine supply.

As fear is an enemy which enters into every human problem, the struggling Christian is in danger of being reached through that avenue unless he resolutely turns away from things as they seem to things as they are. Then he will be supplied from an invisible source and will himself possess the secret of how to feed others who also are hungry and thirsty. In proportion as the things that seem are set aside for realities, in that proportion does true success and prosperity crown right endeavor. Mrs. Eddy writes on page 570 of Science and Health: "Millions of unprejudiced minds—simple seekers for Truth, weary wanderers, athirst in the desert—are waiting and watching for rest and drink. Give them a cup of cold water in Christ's name, and never fear the consequences." This promised rest and drink are spiritual realities quite apart from things that seem. They are earned only by actually living God's word, breathing the mental atmosphere of perfect Love wherein no hate can dwell, and obeying God's commands.

All manner of conflicts, petty annoyances as well as grievous ills of the flesh, can be destroyed by spiritual obedience to the promptings of the divine Father-Mother. The practice of healing the sick by Christian Science is essentially an act of obedience to the example and injunction of the Wayshower, who said, "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils." Truth is ever at work, feeding with impartiality the righteous and the unrighteous in proportion to their sincere desires, supplying the water of life in the wilderness, and protecting the weak with the covering of its wings. Truth, which deals only in things as they are, upsets the calculations of error, which tries to set up falsities. It overlooks neither the heavy-laden, nor the obscure, nor the disconsolate, but disposes of their burdens as mere things that seem, and so lifts them into an atmosphere of freedom and gratitude.

In the world test of to-day the question arises more than ever persistently, What is real, and what are the things that seem? Under the latter classification Christian Science places evil of every sort, whether of the physical battle field or of the dark chambers of imagery. Only God's actual creation is indestructible; all else belongs to the realm of belief, and must give way in human consciousness to the things that are and to the laws that be.

Prophecy

THERE was perhaps never a time when prophecy was more eagerly looked into than at the present, and this is surely well, for we find in the first epistle to the Thessalonians this admonition: "Despise not prophesyings." It is however of the utmost importance that students of Christian Science should keep ever in view the true meaning of prophecy when distinguishing between the beliefs and utterances of mortal mind and the inspired declarations of those who gain their views of past, present, and future from the divine Mind. On page 593 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy thus defines the word prophet: "A spiritual seer; disappearance of material sense before the conscious facts of spiritual Truth." This at once recalls these words in the second epistle of Peter: "No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

The statement that there is no "private interpretation" of Scriptural prophecy has many times aroused a sense of antagonism on the part of those who felt that they were as capable as any others of interpreting prophecy; but from the Christian Science standpoint the above passage offers no difficulty at all, because it at once becomes clear that we must ourselves be inspired by divine Truth before we are able to interpret the inspired utterances of those who were thus illumined. Furthermore, the student of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, knows that in our efforts to understand the Bible, indeed to understand anything,—our own experiences or the conditions of humanity as a whole,—we must apply all we know of divine Principle. Moreover, we learn in Christian Science that the divine influence designated in Scripture as the Holy Ghost, or "the Spirit of truth," means the divine Science of God and man, and so all our efforts in the way of right interpretation must be governed by Principle and be followed along the lines of divine Science.

As we read the prophecy found in the Bible, or much that has been written by godly men throughout the Christian centuries, we are apt to feel greatly troubled because in many instances the dark clouds of mortal sense seem to shut out the light of Truth and Love. Our revered Leader recognizes this when she says respecting the Old Testament, "It would almost seem, from the preponderance of unreality in the entire narrative, as if reality did not predominate over unreality, the light over the dark, the straight line of Spirit over the mortal deviations and inverted images of the creator and His creation" (Science and Health, p. 502).

It therefore becomes very clear that in reading prophecy we must separate between the real and the unreal, knowing as we should that the unreal will vanish away in proportion as the light of understanding is turned upon the dark images of mortal sense. We should not forget, however, that the warnings given in Scripture must not be overlooked. Mortal mind would be glad to dream on in its belief of the pleasures of the senses, all based upon the delusion of life as separate from God, Spirit, and unlike the divine creation. This false dream must be broken; indeed it could not last in any case, having no Principle, hence no reality; but as the rays of divine Principle scatter the clouds, heavy with their dark pictures of sin and suffering, the reality which was "in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be," appears.

Jesus' disciples evidently thought that because of their Master's demonstrations over sin, disease, and death the whole of error would speedily vanish, but he proceeded to show them that there would be an aggravation of error as the slumberers were roused from their dreams of sense. He warned them against any clinging to materiality, and spoke of the great tribulation which would prevail in the final stirring up of error, but by way of assurance he said, "Lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." He also said that the "gospel of the kingdom" must of necessity "be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations," before the end (of error) could come. Following his warnings as given in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, we come to his marvelous parables of the ten virgins, the talents, and the last judgment, all of which we should diligently apply to ourselves, in order that we may become partakers of the blessings which come from the all-conquering Principle that he declared.

In Scriptural prophecy we have the warning, the way of escape, and the triumph of good pointed out, and so we come back to Peter's words which immediately precede the first passage quoted from him in this article: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts."

The Lectures

KANSAS CITY, MO. (Second Church).—William R. Rathvon, lecturer; introduced by Andrew G. Bodwell, Jr., who said in part:—

The Scriptures say, "If God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" We are told not even to have a thought as to what we shall eat or drink, or wherewithal we shall be clothed. Christian Scientists are finding that these statements are full of practical meaning, and that the one great lack today, strange as this may seem, is not primarily a lack of material food and clothing, but a lack of a true understanding of God. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," the promise reads, "and all these things shall be added unto you."

This does not mean that Christian Scientists ignore the immediate needs of their fellow beings; on the contrary, through the Christian Science War Relief Fund thousands of dollars' worth of food and clothing are being sent systematically to the war sufferers in Europe. But Christian Science shows that the primary need is to seek first the kingdom of God, as the Bible teaches. In the book of Psalms we are told that "they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing."

LYNBROOK, N. Y. (Society).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Harry Cunningham, who said in part:—

In these times of stress, when the whole world seems to be in a state of upheaval, we cannot spend our time more profitably than in learning of a religion the Principle of which is God, and its object the demonstration to all mankind that harmony and not discord is the reality. We are told in the Bible that God is Love; and Christian Science is proving this daily by the reforming of the sinner and the healing of the sick,—the very signs our Master said would follow them that believe. In this connection Mrs. Eddy, the Founder of Christian Science, says in the opening words of the first chapter of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God,—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love." Christian Scientists honor God. They accept unreservedly the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and it is by doing so that they can prove and are proving the nothingness of evil in whatever form it may appear, be it poverty, malice, hatred, or revenge.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. (First Church).—William R. Rathvon, lecturer; introduced by Audley F. Hewitt, who said in part:—

A Christian Science lecture is always constructive; it never tears down except to rebuild. The speaker this evening may possibly refute ideas that some of you have long believed, but you may be assured that he will not do so without explaining to you that which Christian Scientists have found vastly more satisfying. Nor will he do so without recognizing the truth that every religious experience is a matter for individual decision. Christian Science teaches that true liberty can come only with a right understanding, a correct knowledge of God; but it places upon each one of us, individually, the responsibility of demonstrating our own concept of God. That is one reason why the growth of Christian Science is today paralleling the growth of liberty throughout the world.

ANCON, CANAL ZONE, PANAMA (Society).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Elbert Sherman Waid, who said in part:—

I believe all will agree that never in the world's history has there been a greater need for a solution of the many problems—physical, moral, economic, and national—that confront all people. We want to know how to be healthy, strong, successful; how to be good and how to do good, as individuals and as a nation. Many thinking people have come to the conclusion that not through human theories, doctrines, or experiences, but through an understanding of God and His laws, will come the deliverance which is promised in the Bible. Jesus of Nazareth said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Christian Science presents this truth.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS. (First Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by George W. Holbrook, who said in part:—

Much that is good has been said and done in the name of science, but the science capable of "lifting humanity above itself into purer desires, even into spiritual power and good-will to man" (Science and Health, p. 407), must be Christian, in other words, it must be an absolute understanding of God.

We know that Christian Science, being based on the Bible and following the teachings and works of Christ Jesus, is the Science of being, furthermore it is demonstrable. Christian Science heals sickness and sin; it comforts the sorrowing, and makes love and good abound wherever the letter and the spirit of this divine Science are understood.—New Bedford Times.

LOS GATOS, CAL. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by W. C. Wurz, who said in part:—

Jesus' declaration, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," was proved to be demonstrable then, and is again so proved by those who have learned to understand, at least to some extent, what he meant by truth. Christian Science is revealing to a waiting world the truth as the Master understood it, and by it the sick are healed, the sorrowing are comforted, and the sinning are reformed.—Los Gatos Mail News.

LONDON, ENGLAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by R. G. Watson, who said in part:—

At a time when the thought of the world is rocked to its foundations, and the various systems of philosophy have been tried and found wanting in the solution of the problems of life, and the forms of religious doctrine have failed to satisfy the longings of humanity for the truth about existence, one recalls the words of the prophet Amos, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." We who are students of Christian Science are convinced that it is solving all our problems far better than we could have hoped for.

CHICAGO, ILL. (Fourth Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Lillian H. Turner, who said in part:—

The teaching of Christian Science about God and man is scientific knowledge. Job said, "Acquaint now thyself with him [God], and be at peace." Job had passed through a great struggle with physical suffering, as well as the loss of his children and of his large possessions. His great desire was to know wisdom and "the place of understanding," and ultimately he gained this knowledge, which brought to him healing from his afflictions, and also brought more abundant earthly possessions. Christian Science is proving that this acquaintance with God is a practical, scientific fact, to be used in our daily life.

COLFAX, WASH. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Mary E. Hull, who said in part:—

The angel song heralded to listening ears in centuries long since past has continued ceaselessly echoing and re-echoing adown the corridors of time, and today repeats its glad refrain, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The healing message it bears is grandly emphasized in the clarion tones of Christian Science; while in its "low sweet prelude" is breathed in infinite tenderness to the whole world the Christ-call, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Testimonies of Healing

This testimony is gratefully given in recognition of the power of Truth. In early manhood I became addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors, and when the necessity of quitting the habit was realized I found human will-power to be futile and impotent. This fact was demonstrated repeatedly, until its availability was necessarily denied. Following this, the power of God was invoked through the orthodox church, but again failure was the result. Not once, but several times, was this remedy tried. Then I resorted to material remedies, but after the fear of nausea (which was the only basis of the "cure") had been dissipated, the craving for strong drink overcame me. Then I again turned to the orthodox church and again tried to understand God, but could not, in spite of the fact that I had been practically reared in the Sunday school and church of an evangelical religious organization, and had served in every elective and appointive office, even at times filling the pulpit.

For thirty years the irresistible craving for strong drink was ever present, even during periods of temporary abstinence. I at last found myself in the position of a man who could no longer resist the habit even for a little while, and was in debt to the point of hopelessness, with a wife and two children who had never ceased to pray that the power of God might intervene and save me. It was under these circumstances that my dear wife and daughters, having heard of Christian Science and its wonderful results, prevailed on me to investigate it. Through the reading of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy I was healed. I read the textbook from cover to cover over and over again, but still continued to drink, until there came a day when my liking for liquor turned to aversion and I had no satisfaction in it. The desire and craving for it had left me, and has not returned. Tobacco in its strongest forms was used during all these years of intemperance, but when the liking for strong drink left me the pleasure in using tobacco also vanished, and since then I have had no desire for it.

Since acquiring a small understanding of divine Principle through Christian Science, the passions of mortal mind, hate, revenge, selfishness, and the like, have given way to love, and our home life has been transformed. Many demonstrations have been made over physical inharmonies. We have found unvaryingly that "divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need" (Science and Health, p. 494). Glory be to God, and gratitude from the fullness of the heart to the Discoverer of the Principle of primitive Christianity.

J. J. DIRKS, St. Louis, Mo.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. About two years ago I was taken with severe headache. This condition lasted for four weeks, and I suffered night and day during that time. A doctor who was called to see if he could do anything for me, said my trouble was caused from biliousness. He gave me some medicine, but it brought no relief. Finally there was what the doctor called a cerebral hemorrhage, which paralyzed my whole right side so that I could not move a finger, and both speech and sight left me almost entirely. I remained in that state for two weeks without any apparent change, although taken to the hospital the third day.

I had heard of Christian Science previous to this, and had friends who were loyal Scientists, but as I did not understand its teaching I had not given any thought to it. Having little faith that the doctors could do anything for me, however, I decided to try it, so requested my husband to bring me a copy of Science and Health which a friend had loaned me. At that time I could not see to read, but I tried a little each day and very soon could see every letter plainly. This gave me hope, so I continued to read, although I could not sleep nights, because of so much suffering. In a couple of days I discovered that the awful pressure at the base of the brain had ceased, and from that day I began to improve, with the help of a friend who was knowing the truth for me.

In four weeks from the time I was taken to the hospital I was up and walking about without any support whatever, and I left there in a few days. I went to my friend's house and stayed two weeks, having treatment during that time, and also studying faithfully that I might get a better understanding of Christian Science. I improved so much that I was then able to go home, and in a very short time was doing most of my work. I have also been healed of hernia of ten years' standing, of bladder trouble, and of chronic bowel disorder. I have gained in weight and never felt better in my life.

For all these blessings I am truly thankful to God, and I am grateful to Mrs. Eddy for giving us this truth. I am trying to live each day so as to be worthy of all the blessings I have received.

Words cannot express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done and is doing for me every day, and it is an ever present help in the rearing of my children. It is such a consolation to know that wherever they are, God is caring for them. I took up Christian Science on account of my eyes, after having been to an eye specialist in Kansas City every other day for two months without finding any relief, and afterward to St. Louis, where I was treated every day for two weeks and a part of the time two and three times a day. My suffering was intense, and the specialist said I would always have trouble with my eyes and would have to wear glasses with a very thick lens.

I came home discouraged, but was led by divine Love to attend a lecture on Christian Science. I was so sure it would help me that the very next day I began to read "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and a few days later went to see a practitioner. In ten days from the time I began reading the textbook I took off my glasses, and have not used them since, nor have I felt any need for them during the past four years. I have also been healed of neuritis, acute attacks of stomach trouble, severe headaches that lasted several days, chronic bowel disorder, and several other ailments, as well as worry. For all this I am very grateful. I also find Christian Science indispensable in my every-day life. There is no problem it cannot solve if applied correctly, and it is a great pleasure to me to be able to help others. I have been greatly discouraged at times, but find it is for my own good that the way sometimes seems rough and thorny.

I would like to relate how divine Love protects us when we are seemingly in danger. On account of high waters and washed out bridges I was delayed for about a week from reaching my destination. On the sixth day the trains on one road began to run as usual. A bridge we had to cross was being repaired, but was considered safe. Our train started across, but when halfway over, the bridge began to tremble, so the engineer stopped the train and then backed off. It was decided that we should wait until a train came from the opposite direction, when passengers could be exchanged. All that could were to walk across the bridge, and the rest would be taken on hand cars. I walked across, a gentleman carrying my baby, and I never had the least fear for its safety or mine.

This was in the afternoon, and on the following morning the damaged end of the bridge was washed away.

Measles, mumps, chicken-pox, biliousness, toothache, burns, bruises, catarrh, a throat affection, and many minor ailments have been overcome quickly in Science. For all these healings I am deeply grateful, but the spiritual uplift is worth more than all the other things put together. I am grateful for the privilege of having had class instruction, and can never be thankful enough for the blessings received through the understanding of Christian Science. My one desire is so to live that I may show my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for this wonderful truth that makes free.—PEARLE H. JARBOE, Kansas City, Mo.

About three years ago, after everything had been done for me that could be done by physicians, and we had been advised to go to a high altitude as soon as possible, I took the advice of a loving friend and asked a Christian Science practitioner for treatment. I am most deeply thankful to God, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy, to be able to say that with less than a week's treatment for tubercular disease I was completely restored to health. At the same time several other conditions were overcome from which I had suffered for a number of years. I shall never forget how patiently the practitioner explained man's relationship to God, and how quickly the fear disappeared. She told me to hold in thought continually the truth that "perfect love casteth out fear."

My husband also has had many proofs of God's protecting care, for he took up the study of Christian Science with me, and on several occasions we have had it proved that "with God all things are possible." My prayer is to live close to God, to understand and to be obedient to His laws.—MRS. WILLIS E. AYERS, Charleston, S. C.

Out of love and gratitude I wish to acknowledge some of the benefits received in Christian Science. I did not come to Science for physical healing, but was drawn into it through witnessing the wonderful healing of a young girl, a relative, who was suffering from tubercular disease in its advanced stage. The seed of truth was sown in my consciousness, and some years later I took up the study.

Since then I have been healed of growths in my nose. The symptoms were most distressing, for I could not breathe through my nose at all and could not articulate distinctly. With the loving help of a practitioner some relief was gained, but I finally resolved to take up the work myself, and through faithfully studying our Lesson-Sermons and reading Science and Health, gradually I became better, until the healing was complete and permanent. At the birth of my little son, four years ago, Christian Science was found to be an ever present help. My husband also has been healed of a severe form of stomach disorder.

For these demonstrations, and many others, I am truly thankful to God, the giver of all good. I also wish to express my gratitude to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so faithfully worked to overcome many obstacles in again presenting this truth to the world.

My gratitude for Christian Science can only be expressed in a desire to prove by works this never failing, practical, and demonstrable religion. From childhood I suffered from nearly every so-called serious disease known to medical science. I submitted to seven surgical operations, each one of them, however, being submitted to without hope of recovery or relief. In July, 1908, I underwent two critical operations, one for perforating ulcers of the stomach, and the second, two weeks later, for obstruction following the infective perforations. Three weeks after this peritonitis in its worst form set in. I was under the constant care of an able specialist and nurses, but the surgeons told my mother that with the best of care my chances were one in a thousand.

For seven weeks I struggled between life and death. Then Christian Science came into my home and saved me. The first treatment brought the joy and peace for which I had so long hoped, and also a return to natural sleep. I had been a slave to the morphine habit for over sixteen years; for seventeen years I suffered from sleeplessness, for the relief of which the drug was first prescribed. In ten treatments I was free from bondage to this drug. I had worn glasses for over sixteen years, but the demonstration of dispensing with them was instantaneously made four years ago.

I am most thankful to God, who inspired our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to give to the world a religion which when rightly applied meets every need. Christian Science practitioners are messengers of God, giving peace, joy, and harmony to those who are suffering under false beliefs and discords, whether physical, moral, or financial. I am grateful for the seeming trials, for by them we are tried and purified. My gratitude for all these blessings is beyond words to express.

IDALYNE M. BEEMER, Los Angeles, Cal.

After about eight months of service at the front I feel that it is my duty to give a testimony saying how very grateful I am for the many benefits received through Christian Science. On several occasions I have had to material sense some narrow escapes, and at times things have looked very dark; but after a few moments of reflection and turning my thoughts to God, good, all fear and anxiety has passed away. During the recent advance this has come home to me more forcibly. One day after coming out from the trenches we were marching along the road, which was being shelled heavily, when the two men next to me were hit. One passed away and the other was wounded, but I came through without a scratch.

I look forward to receiving the Sentinel and the Monitor, which are sent to me weekly, though at times it is not convenient to read them until I am out at rest. Again I must say how grateful I am to Mrs. Eddy and her teachings for what they are doing for me and mine.

WILLIAM STEWART, Rochdale, Lancashire, England.

I am deeply grateful for the help that has come to me through Christian Science, and although quite young in this truth I would like to tell of my first demonstration. While working in the garden I injured my side and in the evening began to have dizzy spells. The following day I could not raise my head from the pillow without becoming weak and dizzy. My family were reluctant to call a Christian Science practitioner and wished me to have a doctor, but I refused to give my consent.

The next day as I heard the discussion about sending for a doctor I came to the conclusion that if I intended to receive any benefit from the practice of Christian Science, now was the time to try it. I asked to be taken into the next room, and as soon as I was left alone I took up Science and Health, which was close at hand. I opened the book at the chapter on Christian Science Practice, but at first, on account of dizziness, was unable to make out the letters. In a few moments this statement respecting sick people became quite clear and seemed to rivet my attention: "Their strength is in proportion to their courage" (p. 417). I dwelt upon this thought for a while, and gradually realized that in order to gain the strength I must have the courage, so I arose and walked to my room. This seemed the hardest thing I had ever done, but the moment I attempted to dress, instantly strength came to me and I was healed.

I walked briskly out to the family, who seemed somewhat surprised; but I insisted that I had been healed, and ate a hearty breakfast, helped to prepare the Sunday dinner, and indulged in some candy, although for three days previous I had retained no nourishment. As I realized that those about me did not understand, I recalled the words of our Master, "Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not?" I however understood the power by which I had been healed, and for this my first demonstration in Christian Science I am very thankful to God. I am also grateful to our beloved Leader for having brought the truth before us, not to believe blindly, but to demonstrate for ourselves.

Gratitude to God impels me to give my testimony in regard to the healing and sustaining power of Christian Science. I had pursued worldly happiness and success, sparing no means within my power to procure them. Then, when they seemed about to be mine the whole structure was dashed to the ground, and I saw that within myself or within the means which I had been using there was no power to remedy the situation. In humility and repentance I turned to God, asking for another chance. Almost at once the opportunity came,—a new field of work, a new environment,—and I accepted it as an answer to my prayer. My heart was so filled with gratitude that when Christian Science was presented to me very soon after this, it found a ready soil. I accepted this as a further answer to my prayer, realizing that Christian Science was the means and the way for the redemption of my life.

Since then Christian Science has done so much for me that I could not begin to tell all. Immediately upon beginning to read Science and Health I was enabled to take off glasses which had been used for about six years, and they have never been put on again. I have done more reading since that time than ever before, and have experienced no discomfort. Many other ills have been overcome, but it is of another phase of the action of Truth in human experience that I wish particularly to tell.

The work that I took up was new to me, being a responsible position in the schools of a good-sized city. I had to plan the course and make models for the art work affecting about one hundred and twenty-five teachers and five thousand children. Though I felt insufficient of myself to do this work, I believed that God through Christian Science would reveal the way, and truly ideas came to me as veritable revelations. Many times when I knew not what to do or where to turn, intelligence was given me to lead me out of the difficulty. In fact the finest work which I have done was done at just such times, when I was most willing to surrender my own will or pride of intelligence.

My whole attitude toward the work has been changed. Whereas before I had regarded whatever work I was doing as a means for self-advancement, I now realize that the work is God's, and that He supplies the intelligence to accomplish it.—MARIE CLARKE, San Diego, Cal.

About a year and a half ago I came to Christian Science sick in mind and body as a result of great trouble in the family, which I thought at the time I would be unable to live through. I suffered with shattered nerves, melancholy, nervous stomach trouble, and all manner of complications. Our family physician could afford but little relief, and I felt I could not possibly continue that way. In my distress the remembrance of Christian Science, of which I had heard much good, came to me, and I thought that even if it should not help there would be one gain,—my faith in God would be restored. I asked advice of a neighbor who was an attendant at the Christian Science church, and she gave me the address of a practitioner, who came the next day and took up treatment. I also suffered very much with sleeplessness. After the first treatment I slept peacefully all night, and soon became aware of the fact that there was a steady improvement in my condition. Thanks to the great patience and love shown to me, the healing took place in about two months, and I am now free from all these troubles.

I would like to add here that a few weeks later I was quite suddenly taken ill with a severe attack of rheumatism, the pain being so intense and continuous that I seemed unable to use my small knowledge of Christian Science; in fact it seemed as if I would lose consciousness. After having suffered in this way during a whole night and day, I notified a practitioner, who sent word that she would begin with the work at once. Two hours later I was free from pain and went to sleep. I could not, however, move my arm; in fact several weeks elapsed before it became normal and I was able to do my housework. This healing particularly impressed me, and my heart was filled with gratitude to God and with love toward Mrs. Eddy, whose clear, spiritual thought enabled her to reveal to mankind this glorious truth. This new teaching is proving a great help also in my daily life.

Seven months ago I was put to the test—it became incumbent upon me to demonstrate the power of Truth. My sister-in-law, who was staying with me at the time, sustained an injury of the foot by knocking it against an iron bedstead. She paid little attention to this and finished her work, but an hour or two later severe pain set in, the foot appeared to be very much swollen, and she was unable to walk. She tried to read in Science and Health, but could not do so on account of the pain. As we did not have the correct address of the practitioner, I looked upon the situation as an opportunity to prove that God is our life, that Truth alone reigneth, and that disease has no power. I kept these facts before my thought and read the ninety-first and one hundred and twenty-first psalms; but I did not merely read them—I firmly believed what I was reading, believed that God would help. After about two hours of prayer I found my sister-in-law quiet and free from pain. Upon seeing me she asked: "What have you done for me? Did you pray?" I answered in the affirmative, and she cried for joy. Our gratitude to God was unbounded.

Whenever a discordant sense tries to assert itself, I direct my thought to this wondrous truth. I have used no medicine during all this time, for God has been my only physician. May this testimony of my healing through Christian Science prove a help to some fellow being, as Mrs. Eddy's writings and the Sentinel have been a comfort to me in times of tribulation. I have but one wish—that I may wax strong in the light of Truth.

I am grateful for the many blessings which have come to me through the study and application of the truth about God and man as taught in Christian Science. The day I bought a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, we had our first proof of the power of Truth over physical disease, for our seventeen months' old boy was healed of a very severe cold on his chest after only two Christian Science treatments. During the past five years and a half Christian Science has overcome every physical discord that has been manifested in our little family, including influenza, neuralgia, acid burn, ivy poisoning, whooping-cough, chicken-pox, measles, catarrh, and fever. A sprained toe was instantly made well, and both my husband and I have been healed of eye trouble so that glasses are no longer needed.

I am very grateful for these healings, but the mental help is much more wonderful to me. Christian Science has revealed to me a God who is Love, whose will I am trying to do, whereas I used to be afraid to pray "Thy will be done" because I did not know what that will might mean. Now I know that God has only love and good for all His children, and that He does indeed heal all our diseases.—BELVA L. ISGRIG, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Our little daughter has had a beautiful healing through the application of Christian Science, and I am happy to tell of it. So many times I have heard parents say that they are not afraid to trust Christian Science for themselves, but fear to trust their little ones to its care, and to such this testimony may be of help.

From the time our baby was four weeks old until she was seven months old she was constantly troubled with a bowel disorder. As the baby's father was not in Christian Science and feared to trust it for healing, we resorted to material remedies; but conditions grew steadily worse, until nothing seemed strong enough to bring about normal action. Two specialists in children's diseases were consulted, but the treatment recommended was tedious, difficult, and without promise of good results for a long time.

At this point I called my husband's attention to the fact that I had been conscientious and patient in trying everything that he had believed in, with the result that our baby was growing worse, and now asked to be permitted to try my way. This we did, and after about three weeks' treatment in Christian Science our baby was entirely healed. There has never been a return of the difficulty, and the little one is now over two years old. During the three weeks there were many dark and trying hours, but the reward was great and served to make us more and more reliant on God for our blessings.

For this and many other experiences of healing I am deeply grateful. I am happy that I know through the study of Christian Science that any and all conditions of inharmony can be put out of man's experience through the understanding and application of the truth.

I have a great desire to express my gratitude for Christian Science and for all the blessings that have been manifested in my life since it came to my attention. At a Wednesday evening meeting I was healed of a bowel trouble from which I had suffered for twenty years. Since the age of twelve I had been afflicted with an ingrowing toe-nail, which at times was so painful that I could scarcely stand, and it was necessary to have part of the nail cut away once or twice a year by a physician. I had two Christian Science treatments for this trouble, and the nail grew out just like the others. I have also been healed of severe headaches which lasted from three to five days.

A short time ago I was taken seemingly very ill. My throat was much swollen and I had a very high fever all night. The next morning by holding to the truth I was able to attend to my usual duties till nine o'clock, when I had to lie down. As the fever was still increasing, I asked my daughter to telephone for help, but as she did not state how much in need of assistance I was, the practitioner did not arrive until two hours later. My husband said I had better send for a physician immediately, but I begged him to wait a while. Soon afterward the practitioner arrived, and in a few minutes the fever left me. I slept half an hour, and when I awoke I was hungry, for I had not been able to take food for twenty-four hours.

For these healings and many others I am deeply grateful, but I am thankful most of all for the spiritual uplift. I shall always be thankful to God for His many mercies, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for making available to us this saving truth in Christian Science.

GERALDINE RIPKEN, Los Gatos, Cal.

About nine and a half years ago, while suffering from a severe stomach trouble, I was advised by a friend to try Christian Science. Acting on this advice I purchased a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and read it, with the result that in less than a month I was entirely healed. I continued to read the book, and after several months found that I no longer needed eyeglasses, which had been worn for almost eight years on account of a structural defect of the eyes.

Nearly a year ago I was healed within a few days of a severe case of what is generally called pleurisy, through the earnest work of a Christian Science practitioner. I find that through putting into practice the truth contained in Science and Health I am enabled to work out very satisfactorily the many problems which have to be met in my daily life, both at home and in the business world. I am most grateful for these and many other healings, and for the knowledge I am gaining each day through the study and application of the teachings of Christian Science and the Bible. I am also most grateful for the privilege of being a member of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in this city.

This testimony is written in loving gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. It is the biggest blessing that has ever come into my life; for it has brought me to a realization of God as an all-sufficient supply and a never failing help in time of need. I am grateful for many beautiful healings in our family, but much more so for the understanding of God that I have gained.

Over a year ago our ten year old boy was completely and permanently healed of rheumatism in one week, with only three or four absent treatments in Christian Science. Other ailments, such as kidney and bladder trouble, whooping-cough, nervousness, and a throat affection, also have been overcome. I am most thankful for all these benefits.—ELIDA J. DAHL, Chicago, Ill.

The Open Door

W. EDSON SMITH

Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it.—Rev. iii. 8.

WE had been prisoned for so long, so long!
  High walls had ever hemmed us round about;
A ragged garden held a smothered song,
  No glimpse of God's without.

And then, one day, there was that open door,—
  Green fields, and flowered brooks, a smiling land;
Shyly we followed the white road before,
  Like children, hand in hand.

And children ever, through immortal years,—
  Immortal childhood under skies of blue;
The far side of the rainbow. Gone the fears!
  God's promise did come true.

From Our Exchanges

[Rev. W. Y. Fullerton in The Christian]

It is all important to have a Scriptural creed; but the working creed of most lives consists in but a few articles, and in these days of searching we are finding that our faith becomes stronger as it becomes simpler. "It would trouble me far more," wrote Bishop Paget of Oxford, "if under any great trial my mother's faith were to break down or prove useless, than if ten of the cleverest men I know were to tell me that they had examined the evidence and come to the conclusion that there is nothing in Christianity." Now that faith which was Bishop Paget's great standby is precisely the thing that is common to all the churches,—the simple working faith in Christ as an everyday Saviour.

It cannot be too greatly emphasized that it is not organization or doctrine that makes us one, but the possession of the Spirit. Who has not the Spirit of Christ is none of his; who has, is his. A frank recognition that by one Spirit we are baptized into one body, will bring Christian unity in sight, unity that will never come any other way.

[W. B. Selbie, M.A., D.D., in The Constructive Quarterly]

There is no doubt that much error and confusion in the past might have been avoided if churches and peoples alike could always have remembered that religion is a life, and is not to be confounded with the externals in which it finds expression. Creeds, dogmas, and forms of worship, important as they are, are not of the essence of religion. But, unfortunately, when it comes to giving outward form and semblance to the faith, these things necessarily bulk large and are apt to usurp the place of that which is far more vital. It has to be admitted that there may be a decent external show of religion, both intellectual and devotional, without any real substance behind it, and the danger of this in all state religions is obvious and familiar. It can only be avoided by the clearest possible understanding of the fact that religion is not a matter of externals at all, but is a deep inward force depending on a relationship between the soul and a higher power or powers and issuing in social and moral activities. It is, to use a familiar phrase, more concerned with the practice of the presence of God than with ideas about God, though no doubt the two can never be entirely distinguished.

[Rev. W. E. Orchard, D.D., in The Christian Commonwealth]

The man who trusts every one will no doubt often be taken in, but he does not make people worse than they are; at the most he only provides them with a temptation which brings out their true character.

....Opportunity....

THERE is never lack of opportunity for God to be expressed through man, never lack of opportunity for man to express God.

The Bible and Mrs. Eddy's writings teach that this spiritual quality is constantly available in human concepts of opportunity.

St. Paul says: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men" (Gal. 6-10), and Mrs. Eddy says: "I desire the equal growth and prosperity of all Christian Scientists, and the world in general; each and every one has equal opportunity to be benefited by my thoughts and writings" (Miscellaneous Writings, page 291).

The notice printed at the request of the Postmaster-General of the United States on the front page of this issue of the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SENTINEL and reproduced above, offers one of the greatest opportunities that could be given for the purposes for which St. Paul and Mrs. Eddy raised their voices and devoted their life work.

Christian Scientists, who see the underlying causes of the great world-overturning now in progress, and who know the scientific remedy, will take advantage of the opportunity. Into the tremendous stream of publications which will go forward to cheer the soldiers at the front, a sufficient quantity of Christian Science periodicals may be included to greatly protect those who are fighting the battle of democracy, and hasten the close of the war by a righteous and permanent peace.

NOTE—Those desiring to help distribute the Christian Science periodicals to soldiers at the front in accordance with the Postmaster-General's plan, but who do not wish to send their own copies of the periodicals, or copies previously given for local distribution work, may make arrangements with any Christian Science reading room to send periodicals regularly as desired.

Unity

STOKES ANTHONY BENNETT

On page 264 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy says: "Unity is the essential nature of Christian Science. Its Principle is One, and to demonstrate the divine One, demands oneness of thought and action." How very important it is, then, that we as Christian Scientists should keep ever before us the high thought of unity! How important that we should allow nothing to obscure or to dislodge this thought, thereby jeopardizing our individual progress and hindering the advancement of our cause! Mrs. Eddy knew full well the value of true unity, and her many admonitions to work for and to preserve this unity are significant beyond degree. They are, as it were, guideposts along the upward way of every honest truth seeker, which point him to the shining goal of successful demonstration. They are, in a word, direct and sure leadings to practical Christian Science.

As we are told in the foregoing quotation, the Principle of unity is "One," and this "One" of course means God, the source and support of all that really is. Unity, therefore, is an attribute or a quality of God, an expression or a reflection of His oneness. It is the perfect spiritual bond which reveals God and His handiwork as indivisible and inseparable, as forever infinite. It is the immortal, eternal link which discloses the indissoluble connection between the creator and His creation, between Mind and its idea, Truth and its manifestation, Love and its object. Wonderful in meaning, mighty in strength, and unfailing in accomplishment, unity is indeed "the beauty of holiness." Born of God Himself, unity is and ever will be the grand exemplification of the allness or wholeness of Deity, and therefore of the oneness of divine, omnipotent Principle.

"To demonstrate the divine One, demands oneness of thought and action." Here we have a declaration by our Leader which is nothing less than a brief outline of the standard by which we may see how much we understand of the Principle of Christian Science, and how much we are proving of this Principle. To put it differently, this declaration is the sure, unmistakable test of our sincerity and honesty, and of our fidelity to the teaching which we profess to espouse and to follow. "To demonstrate the divine One" is really all there is to Christian Science,—the Science of spiritual being,—for, as we have already seen, this "divine One" is God, and God is the Principle, the essence or cause of whatever truly exists. Therefore the work, the only work, of Christian Scientists is to demonstrate Principle; to prove the entireness of God and of His reflection.

At this point let us see just what it means for us as Scientists to be unified in thought and action. Upon first consideration of our Leader's words as above given, we may be prompted to say that surely we are one in thought and action, because we could not be students of Christian Science and be otherwise. But upon a more careful, prayerful consideration of these words, may we not be led to change our minds? May we not, strange though it be, come to realize that in practical, everyday experience we have wandered far away from both the letter and the spirit of our teaching concerning unity and brotherhood, and so have forfeited our legitimate right to be known as loyal, obedient Christian Scientists? As we continue to ponder this matter, may we not come face to face with certain conditions, both individual and collective, that are inharmonious and undesirable, and that have been rendered thus simply through our failure—yes, our refusal—to accept and abide by our Leader's inspired counsel on the subject of unity, with all this word implies?

Now in some instances these disturbing and disheartening conditions have to do with our work as church members; and this particular work must have had a chief place in the thought of our Leader when she penned the words quoted at the outset of this article. There can be no doubt that membership in a Church of Christ, Scientist, gives those holding it unlimited opportunities to gain an understanding of genuine unity and fraternity, as well as of all else that makes for harmony, peace, and good will, and then to prove their understanding. Affiliation with either The Mother Church or a branch church means not only an acknowledgment and indorsement of its obligations to foster concord, amity, and righteousness both among ourselves and among mankind in general, but also an honest, sincere desire and intention to live up to these obligations, thereby showing the world that a faithful follower of Christ's teachings is always alert and active in behalf of every good thing.

The human, carnal mind, however, that mind which St. Paul affirms is "enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God," would have us believe that under certain seemingly hard and trying circumstances it is either impracticable or impossible to hold strictly to the high ideal of unity, and at the same time to promote and protect in a respectable, dignified, and reliable manner our own welfare and that of our church. In other words, this human, fleshly mind would have us believe that there are some occasions when it is imperative that we should have our own personal, willful way, and should even go so far, perhaps, as to set aside altogether our Leader's vital saying, "Unity is the essential nature of Christian Science." Inasmuch as the carnal, material mind is the "devil" in mortal experience, and so is, in the language of the great Metaphysician, "a liar, and the father of it," we should not be deceived by its false suggestions, but should deal with this counterfeit of the one divine, immortal Mind as Jesus did, when he said with all his strength and vigor, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

It is in no wise a fact that so-called problems in our midst cannot be met and mastered by understanding and demonstrating scientific unity, for if it were, our Leader's numerous statements concerning this unity and its saving power would be of no value whatever. By reversing the arguments and beliefs of mortal mind we arrive at the truth; therefore it is plain that the sole reason why we do not solve each and every difficulty that presents itself in connection with our church work, is not because the teaching of Christian Science respecting unity is one whit impracticable, but rather because we do not let that unselfish, patient, and forgiving Mind be in us "which was also in Christ Jesus," and do not work together in humility and in brotherly love.

Since the Principle of unity is God, and God is supreme, there can be no exception to the scientific rule of unity. What may appear to be an exception is but a failure to apply the rule wisely and correctly,—a failure on the part of some one somewhere to do his duty. With omnipotence as the basis of unity, the possibilities of unity are unfettered and unlimited. With divine Principle originating and sustaining every phase of true unity, each Christian Scientist should rejoice in the privilege that is his to aid in bringing forth the grand and glorious fruits of unity. What matters it if mortal mind does seem to lay before the scientific rule of unity a hard problem in either the individual life, the home life, or the church life, which it vehemently asserts can never be solved! God is more, infinitely more to us than mortal mind; and an exact, demonstrable knowledge of God, divine Love, as One or All-in-all, and of individual man as tributary to or at-one with God, hence forever in loving unity with his brother man, is the answer—and the problem is solved.

In these last days of error, when the decisive battle of Armageddon is being waged upon the human plane, and every force of evil is striking hard at the very foundations of unity, equality, and freedom, let us as Christian Scientists be up and doing. Fully awake to the issues of the hour, and praying unceasingly for wisdom from on high, let us guard well our own ranks against the cruel, crushing foes of self-righteousness, self-justification, self-will, and self-aggrandizement that would break through these ranks and overthrow the priceless standard of Christian Science unity and solidarity which our brave, fearless Leader set for us as she herself fought a good fight and proved the unspeakable superiority of Soul over sense, Mind over matter, Truth over error, good over evil, and Love over hate.

Mrs. Eddy says, "I once thought that in unity was human strength; but have grown to know that human strength is weakness,—that unity is divine might, giving to human power, peace" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 138). It is by exemplifying this unity in our own daily overcoming of the false, illusive claims of evil and its host, that we shall be helping beyond measure the world cause of real and lasting brotherhood and democracy.

Educational Influence of the Monitor

CARLOTTA S. SIGNOR

WHENEVER human aspiration is externalized in some achievement far beyond all previous accomplishment in that line, again is the divine dictum heard, "I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." The door to a truer, purer, happier outlook upon the world has opened. None of us really means to refuse to take the broader view, or to deprive himself of a true record of human activities, a fuller knowledge of the manifest operation of good among men, a deeper insight into the tendencies of events, an acquaintance with our neighbors in other lands, far and near, which alone can establish an intelligent understanding of their needs and aims. With understanding, how quickly prejudice and harsh judgment—archenemies to education—vanish!

In a recent address a man prominent in national affairs said: "Common understanding and community of action are the product of communication. In modern civilized states this means the ability to read newspapers. The product of such communication is what the sociologists term 'like mindedness;' it is the quality which makes it possible for men to act together in a common cause." The educational value of The Christian Science Monitor is one that to be fully appreciated must be realized by actual experience. To the unschooled the daily reading of the Monitor is a liberal education; to the college bred it is not only an adequate presentation of the progress of the world, but a constant whetting of the pleasures of past studies by a style enriched with illustrations drawn from the treasures of literature, history, and art.

It is no one-sided education which is gained in the reading of this great daily. On the first page we get the important events of the day, stated without surmise or exaggeration in careful English. Some knowledge of current events is necessary to every well-informed person, and an acquaintance with significant movements is even more important and much more interesting than the passing event. Proceeding in our paper we find absorbing articles on public measures in our country and in the countries of the six continents, to say nothing of the islands of the sea. There are also interviews and accounts which make us acquainted with the great personages of the time, or with the still picturesque villager of some remote corner. We find new and comparative studies in educational methods; we can keep abreast with music and musicians, and be informed on the drama.

A full page gives important and reliable financial news, and reviews the business of notable concerns. A full page also gives clean news of athletics and sports. On another page fashion tendencies are reviewed, and taste and judgment are stimulated by clever treatment of household problems. The little ones just beginning to read, or interested in pictures only, are entertained and instructed by amusing, whimsical pictures and verses, by incidents and stories which interest while they foster generous and loving impulses.

Human thought grows by what it feeds upon. Does it make a difference in the quality of an individual's thought as to what company he keeps? Does it make a difference as to what he reads? Can as pure a mental home be maintained when crime, disaster, and horrors must be waded through to find the worth while news, as when the worth while news is printed alone? The present writer never sees a child looking over an ordinary newspaper without being reminded of the experience of one who interviewed the warden of a large prison with the view of subscribing for The Christian Science Monitor for the use of the unfortunate inmates. The warden assured him that he could not allow it. No daily newspapers were allowed in the wards, as the constant recital of crimes tended to contaminate the prisoners. Think of it,—contaminate those already acquainted with evil, but yet be good enough for the home! The visitor explained that the Monitor was an example of clean journalism, and said that he would send a few copies and call again. A week later the warden was again interviewed. "Why," he said, "I'll be glad to have this daily. There is nothing here to injure any one."

Can we think too earnestly as to what it means to an adult, or to a child, to read a mixture of good and evil, or to read good only? We do not countenance the eating of decayed food with the pure. Is the mental food less important? Can we keep the stream pure if we allow the polluted dribblings of mortal mind to enter, where we should have a clear channel through which wholesome waters may flow to cleanse and quicken? In this connection I cannot resist quoting part of a letter signed "Methodist Student," published in the Illinois Oak Leaves and in the Austenite in July, 1916. It is as follows:—

"To the Editor: I desire to say a word about Christian Science and its devotees. I am not a Christian Scientist, and never intend to be. But I read The Christian Science Monitor. It is the only real newspaper in America, as far as I know, and I read many newspapers. I have frequently been surprised at the enlightenment of the Christian Science people on public questions. They are aware of events and issues and problems and of affairs in a way that the rest of us are not. At first I thought that it might be a proof of their faith. I have now solved the riddle. They read The Christian Science Monitor: and the regular reading of this great newspaper will educate anyone. It is quite different from Chicago's big daily newspapers, and can be read a week or a month after publication as well as ten minutes after going to press.

"Every citizen who desires to be well informed and to know both sides of national and international issues and local problems, has only to subscribe for the Monitor. It is a newspaper that the entire family can read with pleasure and profit; and the criminal and degenerate are not exploited. The articles are all sane, uplifting, and interesting, and the whole world is covered by special correspondents. There is only one article each day that refers to the Christian Science faith, and that is on an inside page, where it can be found by those seeking to be informed of the church views and faith: but it is not thrust upon the reader's attention. The Monitor is not a propaganda paper."

In reading the Monitor our course need not consist of geography, civics, and history in the making alone, but refreshing flights may be made into the realm of one's favorite art, be it literature, painting, dramatics, or music. We may carry out the advice of the wise man who counseled us to read each day a beautiful poem and see a beautiful picture. Last, and in invitingly large print, is the editorial page, a page rich in analysis and comment on current affairs,—a thought inspiring interpretation and correlation of conditions mentioned elsewhere; a page serious in the main but relieved by the whimsical treatment of some one or more subjects. Praise for this department is generously bestowed by careful critics of journalism in many locations.

No accumulation of facts can so increase one's culture as the constant association with great ideas. The progress of the world is a great idea, and should be followed along the big, true lines of advancement, not along petty lines of transient happenings. An idea is a vital thing. It is not destroyed by use. Its potency is revealed only by use. Only those who read The Christian Science Monitor regularly have any concept of what it means to the schoolboy or to the college man in breadth of view and extent of information, together with the cultural growth which comes from mental excursions into the realms of purity, truth, and beauty.

The Explanatory Note

CECIL E. BENJAMIN

As the student of Christian Science becomes more receptive to Truth and awakens to the consciousness of the universe of right ideas, much in our revered Leader's writings which had perhaps seemed of little consequence before is found to contain that which is of great import and necessary to our cause. An instance of this kind, revealing a wise provision for the maintenance of "the dignity and defense of our Cause" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 148), recently opened out to the writer through a study of the explanatory note in the Quarterly. To him this note had previously seemed to contain little of consequence, apart from the recital for the benefit of visitors at our services of the fact that Christian Science preaching is impersonal, but now it became clear that in holding this view he had allowed a vital part of the service to pass unrecognized.

It has been repeatedly pointed out in the periodicals that the importance of the Lesson-Sermon can hardly be overestimated, and therefore that we cannot afford to overlook anything which could make for a clearer realization of its truth by all who study and hear it. St. John says, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God;" and Webster defines this "Word," or Logos, as "the expression or incarnation of the divine reason, especially as the mediator between God and man." Now we are aware that mortal mind through its various agencies would seek by means of specific silent suggestions, which sometimes manifest themselves in the form of drowsiness, coughing, and in other ways, to prevent the Lesson-Sermon, the divine Word, from being understood and thus performing its healing mission, and in our present state of consciousness we find that specific arguments of error must be specifically handled and obliterated.

On page 233 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "The utterance of truth is designed to rebuke and destroy error," and a careful study of the second paragraph of the explanatory note shows that the Lesson-Sermon contains the truth which gives the rebuke and accomplishes destruction of error. It reads: "The canonical writings, together with the word of our textbook, corroborating and explaining the Bible texts in their spiritual import and application to all ages, past, present, and future—constitute a sermon undivorced from truth, uncontaminated and unfettered by human hypotheses, and divinely authorized."

Thus we see that any and every lying mesmeric suggestion which would or could interfere with the permanently increasing and continuous efficacy of the Lesson-Sermon in any manner or way whatsoever, is proved powerless. In other words, the reading of the note, whether in private before the daily study of the lesson, or in public at the regular service, constitutes an impersonal prayer or treatment by student or by readers and congregation, having for its object the assurance that the Lesson-Sermon shall, without shadow of hindrance, carry its compassionate, healing message to each and every consciousness, and thus perform its mighty work.

"Tell no man"

GERTRUDE SUTTON

THE novice in Christian Science finds no subject on earth so desirable to discuss as this beautiful and, to his consciousness, new truth. Usually his first joy is expressed by talking of the subject in season and out, to listeners willing and to listeners unwilling, to those who are friendly, indifferent, or antagonistic.

Jesus' healings were nearly always prefaced by a few words of teaching, and were sometimes concluded by the wise counsel to "tell no man." But the practitioner is not surprised to read that the one healed often fails to heed this advice. The writer does not forget how many, many demonstrations had to be made over again because of her constant talking to incredulous listeners, and especially does one of these experiences stand out in her memory. After Christian Science had been studied a short time, glasses that had seemed indispensable were laid aside. Joyously she told this to every one she knew, and presently, lacking sufficient understanding to protect herself, she had to return to the use of glasses and wear them for many months.

The wisdom of our Leader was as great as her love for humanity, and if we would only be obedient to her loving counsel, how many painful experiences we should avoid! Again and again we are told in Science and Health not to discuss symptoms and disease. "Look away from the body into Truth and Love, the Principle of all happiness, harmony, and immortality" (Science and Health, p. 261) is its teaching. Hence we should not discuss ailments past or present. We are healed of disease and sin by seeing these errors for what they are,—illusions, shadows cast by wrong thinking, by the belief in the power and reality of evil. We are not healed until our consciousness is changed, for we read on page 231 of Science and Health, "If God destroys not sin, sickness, and death, they are not destroyed in the mind of mortals, but seem to this so-called mind to be immortal."

In proportion as we replace the false or mortal concept of man with the right idea, we are healed, and this healing is made manifest in body and surroundings; in fact our healing comes by realizing that man is the image and likeness of God,—spiritual, indestructible, and unchanging. In proportion as we identify every individual with this real man, we are healed. Did this man ever have rheumatism or weak eyes? No, indeed! Then that condition was an illusion, a false concept of mortal mind. Evidently it was not a condition of matter that held us in bondage and of which we were healed, but a condition of wrong thinking,—fear, ignorance of God's law, or sin externalized.

We must not describe a disease believing and declaring that we had it, for indeed we never did have it. As we advance in the understanding of this marvelous and priceless truth, we perceive that the ailments we believed we had were mental and not material, were fear and self-pity and self-righteousness, were condemnation and criticism externalized. And as we learn to replace these with truth and love and meekness, we discover that we are indeed becoming acquainted with God, "who healeth all thy diseases."

We can never say too much in praise of Christian Science; we cannot rejoice too much that we have the wonderful privilege of being students of it. It is the "pearl of great price," worth more than all we ever had. It ushers us into the new birth. It establishes the kingdom of heaven on earth. It unlocks the Scriptures and is the key to the kingdom; but let us be very careful to manifest a zeal more according to wisdom. Let us study and think more, and talk less, remembering always that obedience to our Leader's wise and loving counsel is the very best protection.

The Real Man Here

LOU-VEE B. SIEGFRIED

THERE is no compromise between the mortal belief of existence and the understanding of what constitutes true existence or reality. The psalmist sounded the confession of mortal existence and of the mental character of its counterfeit of man when he cried, "In sin did my mother conceive me." One definition of the word conceive is, "To take into one's mind, to formulate or imagine." Cruden defines sin as "any thought, word, action, omission, or desire, contrary to the law of God." Then a human body is but the projection of a belief of life, sensation, and substance in matter, entirely outside of and contrary to the law of God which reads: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness."

So persistently is this belief held in mortal thought and surrounded by common consent of multiplied mortal believers, that it becomes apparent to the physical senses as a new human being or subdivision of mortal belief. On page 263 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says: "The multiplication of a human and mortal sense of persons and things is not creation. . . . The fading forms of matter, the mortal body and material earth, are the fleeting concepts of the human mind. They have their day before the permanent facts and their perfection in Spirit appear."

The misconceptions of man are as though the human mind, hiding behind spectacles of finite, material belief, with lenses colored and distorted by the illusions of the five physical senses, gazed out upon reality and sought to remedy by material means what it seemed to see. Such an attempt has always been as needless and futile as was the bleaching process employed by a friend of the writer to remove what seemed a yellow stain on some white linen which she was washing while wearing amber goggles to lessen the glare of a southern noon. Scarcely more promising of success would be the effort to beautify a human being by patching up his shadow with silhouette paper. The real man is as little affected by what happens to the shadow-like mortal existence as light is affected by darkness.

In sleeping dreams the body concept in the dream seems just as real, active, and intelligent as the supposed waking self, and the dream sense is just as consistent in its inexplicable situations and activities as mortal activities are to human sense; yet how absurd dreams are to the awakened dreamer! Just as surely as the sleeping dream has no power over, control of, or part in the daily activity of humanity, the longer dream of mortal existence is temporal, unreal, and powerless to control the real man's activity. Feeding and clothing the body, making money to gratify ease in matter, saving the belief of life in matter, if done without any attempt to pierce the dream of material existence by awakening to the facts of being, can only terminate in that climax of mortal belief called death, both in the sense of physical dissolution and spiritual barrenness, if they do not actually hasten it. Paul says, "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace;" hence the necessity to save life by learning what man's life is, by knowing it as the eternal and indestructible reflection of perfect Life, or God.

Christian Science reveals the law of God whereby the perfect man can be apprehended here and now. God's work is done and man is created for eternity. It is our work to reverse scientifically the fables of mortal sense within our own consciousness, seek to apprehend God, and thereby know the real man. Jesus gave us the perfect example for progressing from the human plane of misconception to spiritual perception, and Mrs. Eddy with spiritual insight and her clear statement of the Science of Christianity has indeed unlocked the records of the Bible, so that we may find and apply for ourselves the law of God. Every correction of mortal belief reveals to us the perfect man in the degree that the correction is in accord with divine Principle and our motive pure. The only real man is spiritual and is actually here. His appearance is not postponed until a hypothetical release from matter through the mortal phenomenon styled death; nor is he indigenous to any special place, period, or clime.

The appearance of the real man to human consciousness begins when the first step toward apprehending the true nature of God is made, for man is inseparable from God, in whose likeness and for whose expression man was created.

Digitized by Google

The real man is no more to be found imprisoned in matter than faith, love, or eternity are to be found by chaining them down to matter or by annihilating them. The real man is not appreciable to the physical senses or affected by them. He is perpetually occupied in manifesting the harmonious activity of divine Mind, or God, and is oblivious to all misconceptions of Truth accepted by mortal belief through incapacity to perceive God and man clearly. When humanity accepts the truth of being, belief is supplanted by knowledge, and mortality is obliterated from human consciousness, which then becomes spiritual understanding.

Giving

WILLIAM HALE COOMBER

IN one of the hymns in the Christian Science Hymnal (p. 89) we are taught that,— Ceasing to give, we cease to have,

Such is the law of love.

It is on this basis that students of Christian Science are acquiring the true idea of giving; and to know how to give rightly is necessary. The greatest thing we can give to the human sense is that reflection of Love which seeketh not its own. There can be no true giving without the thought of Love underlying the act. To give unwillingly is not giving at all, and cannot bring a blessing in its train. In a Christian Science church one gives because one loves to do so, whether in the form of money, testimony, or in any other way. When the inexhaustible source of supply is understood we shall never cease to give, knowing that the more we give the more we get. One should not give merely for that reason, but because to give to some one else of the good one has, brings a joy that withholding never can.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive," said the apostle. The parable of the talents has not always been understood—it has seemed to some a little unjust that "he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath," but it has probably been overlooked that the one "that hath" was giving what he had, whether of money or talents, and so, in accordance with the divine law of giving, it was made possible for him to receive more.

It must be seen that giving is practical, active, and that there is nothing of a negative nature about it. Christian Scientists can help along the cause of Christian Science in many ways by their practical giving. They can attend the Christian Science services as regularly as possible, can give testimony of benefits received through Christian Science, and they can, if faithful, become members of a branch Christian Science church or a society, and also of The Mother Church, a privilege which gives one increased opportunities of service, and so for giving, in the cause of Christian Science.

Above all, one can always strive to think rightly, which is perhaps the highest form of giving, because right thinking produces right doing, which also includes giving.

For who that leans on His right arm
Was ever yet forsaken?
What righteous cause can suffer harm
If He its part has taken?
Though wild and loud, and dark the cloud,
Behind its folds His hand upholds
The calm sky of tomorrow!

[Editorial in Eastern Argus, Portland, Maine]

It is a noble service being rendered by the Christian Science church during this period of world-wide human misery. As shown by the statement published in The Argus yesterday [July 19], the generous contributions made by members of this denomination for war relief work already amount to several hundred thousand dollars, and they are still liberally giving. The Christian Science organization will, with a continuation of its present good work, go on record as one of the most potent agencies for relief of destitution and misery incidental to the war.

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Springfield (Mass.) Union]

The canard against Christian Science, which one of your correspondents repeats, has been rehashed with variations for a decade or more and frequently exposed. The story is that a native of India was told of Christian Science when she came to America, and recognized it as an ancient Indian philosophy. The nature of the information furnished to this visitor from afar is not stated, but it can be gathered from her explanation of the philosophy which she identified with Christian Science. "It means just this: the philosophy of nothingness. You are to view the whole universe as nothing but falsehood. You do not exist. I do not exist. The birds and the beasts that you see do not exist." This narrative is most inept because Christian Science does not teach anything of the sort. Incidentally, it can be said that no one ever adopted such a philosophy for himself. The thought "I do not exist," is an intellectual impossibility.

It is to be observed in the New Testament that Jesus expressed the object of his entire service to humanity in terms of life. He did this not only once, but often. The end of all that he said or did was that we might forsake the finite and gain the infinite sense of life. Included in this is all that constitutes salvation. Christendom has been accustomed to look for salvation to the death of Jesus, but in his teaching the essential factor was his life. As he himself said, "Because I live, ye shall live also."

What was the basis from which Jesus taught and proved the true idea of life? He expressed it in such statements as the following: "As the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." "I live by the Father." "One is your Father." "All live unto him." Because these sayings are true, what Mrs. Eddy has written concerning the nature of the experience called death must also be true. No difference what the mortal seeming in any case may be, the actual life of man is never ended; it is never even arrested.

Jesus was perfectly self-consistent when he said, "Lazarus is dead," and when he said of another who had undergone the same experience, "She is not dead, but sleepeth," and when he said universally, with reference to the life-giving Spirit, "He is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him." Did infinite Life withdraw itself from Lazarus for four days? Was there a period in which for him there was no God? Rather than this, is it not true that from the viewpoint of divine reality he lived and must ever continue to live? Man's genuine identity is indestructible. From his real substance nothing can be taken. Since it is true that "God created man in his own image," it is also true, as an unknown writer has said, that God created man "to be an image of his own eternity."

A Christian Scientist, therefore, is one who accepts the absolute truth taught by Christ Jesus and uses it scientifically for the betterment of human conditions. How soon will this absolute teaching be completely proved? The proof of it is involved in Christian Science healing; and as the Discoverer of this Science has said (Science and Health, p. 428), "The evidence of man's immortality will become more apparent, as material beliefs are given up and the immortal facts of being are admitted."

[Warren O. Evans in The Hope Valley (R. I.) Advertiser]

From the tone of a recent editorial it would appear that its writer is at a loss to understand how a Christian Scientist is able to hold fast to the faith or understanding that is in him, even to the point of facing the "last enemy."

Having proved the inadequacy of material remedies, the true Christian Scientist could no more be tempted to return to them in the hour of his great extremity than one could be induced to return to the use of a candle after having experienced the brilliancy of the electric light. He is as sure of himself and of the Truth or Principle which the teachings of Christian Science reveal as he is of the fact that two and two make four. And even though he may be called to pass through the experience of death, he still knows that God is his Life; that he can no more be separated from God, his real Life, than the sunlight can be separated from the sun. He therefore reaches that point of absolute assurance where he can say with Paul, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life [mortal sense of life] dear unto myself."

The practice of Christian Science is not merely to prolong human existence; although through the application of the teachings of Mrs. Eddy human life is extended to a marked and noticeable degree. Were it not so, there would not be the widely published report of an occasional death of a Christian Scientist.

Christian Science is an exact science, based upon an understood Principle, with definite rules for its demonstration. To the Christian Scientist, therefore, the study of this Science becomes most interesting and satisfying. Not only does he find himself in better health and less liable to sickness, but the former yearnings of the human heart to know God and to understand human existence are satisfied. He catches a glimpse of what Life really is, and begins to realize God's presence with him every hour of the day,—not in the old theological way through blind faith, but in a practicable, scientific, demonstrable sense. He knows that Life is not in matter; that he lives in Mind, in consciousness, and he is at peace. As Job says, "Acquaint now thyself with him [God], and be at peace."

To know God, then, is the one and only end worth striving for. As Mrs. Eddy puts it on page 3 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "To understand God is the work of eternity, and demands absolute consecration of thought, energy, and desire."

[Clyde Johnson in Wyoming Tribune, Cheyenne, Wyo.]

In reporting a recent meeting of the Young Men's Literary Club, the Tribune said that a doctor who was present made some startling statements regarding the physical condition of pupils in the Cheyenne schools and followed them up by saying that the "condition could be reduced to a minimum by a proper policy of medical inspection and treatment, beginning in the early grades." Now there is a wide difference of opinion among thinking people as to what might constitute a "proper" policy of medical inspection and treatment. And besides it would be difficult to shape such a policy without flagrantly trespassing upon individual rights and playing into the hands of those who wish to dominate and control the thinking and general activity of their fellow men.

There is a large class of people who honestly and consistently believe that the best attention and instruction a child could possibly have is embodied in the succinct command of Christ Jesus, "Take no thought . . . for the body." Christian Scientists believe in and practice bodily cleanliness, but they are ever mindful of the admonitions given by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (pp. 382, 383): "We must beware of making clean merely the outside of the platter." "We need a clean body and a clean mind,—a body rendered pure by Mind as well as washed by water."

It was also brought out at this meeting, the report continues, that among several influences that had operated to defeat medical inspection was the "prejudice of religious sects, organizations, and denominations which oppose the theory that there is any real disease at all." Christian Science most emphatically opposes the theory that disease is real, and this opposition is based squarely upon the Scriptures. If disease is real, God made it, and the Scriptures tell us that God made everything and saw that it was good. No one who has had any experience with it will make the assertion that disease is good. Christian Science plainly points out that disease is a human experience, and draws the line sharply between the real or God-created and the unreal or experiences of suffering, sinning mortals. It teaches mortals how to "gravitate Godward" (Science and Health, p. 265).

It is difficult to understand how honest and legitimate opposition to compulsory medicine can be designated "prejudice." The position of Christian Scientists in opposing the encroachments of material systems is a consistent one. Before their healing in Christian Science most of them had given one or more of these systems a thorough trial and found it wanting; and now, since taking up this new-old method of spiritual healing, they are endeavoring to follow all the teachings of the Master. It was the Master who said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." It is well for tired humanity to heed his command to "heal the sick" and to remember that he did it through the divine Mind and not through matter.

[Judge Samuel W. Greene in Mayfield (Ky.) Messenger]

In the Messenger is printed a sermon called "The Signs of Christ's Coming," in which the minister takes occasion to say some unkind and untruthful things about Christian Science. To say that Christian Science is neither Christian nor science is to imitate the carping critics of half a century and means nothing. Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer of Christian Science, says on page 123 of Science and Health:—

"The term CHRISTIAN SCIENCE was introduced by the author to designate the scientific system of divine healing.

"The revelation consists of two parts:

"1. The discovery of this divine Science of Mind-healing, through a spiritual sense of the Scriptures and through the teachings of the Comforter, as promised by the Master.

"2. The proof, by present demonstration, that the so-called miracles of Jesus did not specially belong to a dispensation now ended, but that they illustrated an ever-operative divine Principle. The operation of this Principle indicates the eternality of the scientific order and continuity of being."

The minister says that Christian Science denies the atonement and asserts that every man is his own savior. Christian Science expressly affirms the doctrine of the atonement, and in a most helpful way illustrates Christ's reconciliation of men to God, going on to show that man comes forth from God, that he reflects God, Truth, Life, and Love, and thereby illustrates the atonement, or, as Mrs. Eddy puts it in Science and Health (p. 19), "the at-one-ment with God."

Christian Science is giving man the opportunity to realize here and now the ever presence and power of God, and points out to him a present plan of escape from sickness, sin, and death. It has brought health, peace, and happiness to thousands the world over, and the minister's unfair criticism will not have been in vain if it leads some of its readers to investigate this life-giving truth, this practical religion.

[S. T. Downs in Logansport (Ind.) Tribune]

The report of the Boy Scouts' first day in camp stated that several patients were treated in the Red Cross hospital "by a combination of Christian Science and horse liniment." This statement undoubtedly was intended as a jest, and a Christian Scientist can enjoy a joke at his own expense; but he sees in the seemingly harmless statement a danger of increasing an already too common misconception of what, to him, is a thing of the greatest importance,—the salvation of mankind from sin, sickness, and death.

The practice of Christian Science is not ignoring discord and doing nothing, nor is it a combination of mental effort and material drugging; it is rather a very active and Christianly scientific endeavor to know the truth, just as the great Teacher, Christ Jesus, commanded. The Christian Scientist relies wholly on the operation of spiritual law, which is brought into operation through prayer, just as did he. Through this radical reliance on God, Christian Science is healing all manner of disease, sin, and discord.

[John D. Huber, M.D., in Albany (N. Y.) Argus]

In a recent number of "Health Talks" I included a letter from a girl who claimed to be in need of a surgical operation but who alleged that she was being prevented by her father from having the operation because he was a Christian Scientist. The letter and my reply raised a protest from Christian Scientists, who claim there is nothing in Mrs. Eddy's book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" to warrant placing obstructions in the way of those who elect to rely upon material methods for relief from sickness and suffering in preference to Christian Science. My reply was based upon the supposition that because Christian Scientists believe they have found a more efficacious means than medicine and surgery, they would oppose the employment of medicine and surgery by others. Evidently this is not their attitude; therefore I am glad to be enlightened on the point and to make this correction.

[William D. Kilpatrick in Maple Rapids (Mich.) Dispatch]

Permit me to say through your columns, in reply to a statement made in a local pulpit concerning Christian Science, that Christian Science is most distinctly not "superstition." If Christian Science were based on superstition, or even partially so, it would have been a thing of the past long ago. One of the most common charges against the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth was that they were based on superstition, and he was accused of accomplishing his healing work through Beelzebub, alias hypnotism, mesmerism, superstition, and the like. Christian Science is answering this form of criticism in exactly the same way that Jesus did, namely, by proof. Superstition can never be proven, while Christian Science is proving itself daily and hourly through the healing of the sick, the reclaiming of the sinner, the overcoming of misery, unhappiness, poverty, and all the ills to which mankind are subject.

Christian Science is proving itself to be true by proving the Bible true, and it is the only religion today that offers the world proof in place of preachments that Bible teachings are divine and scientific. One who is not capable of following the command of the Master by scientifically and metaphysically healing the sick and casting out sin has little excuse for attempting criticism of a religion so demonstrating its divine purpose. Every disease known to mankind has been healed through Christian Science; sin of every name and nature is being reduced; misery, unhappiness, poverty, and so on, are being gradually overcome, and in their places are being planted the seeds of health, happiness, purity, hope, and plenty.

[Samuel Greenwood in The Sun, Vancouver, B. C., Canada]

Notwithstanding the statement of the critic quoted in your column, Christian Science does not in any sense deny "the authority of Jesus Christ," as even a cursory examination of its literature would readily disclose. "The authority of Jesus Christ" is a term broad enough to include not only the acceptance of all that the Master taught, but the doing of what he said his followers should do.

Now Christian Science accepts this "authority" so fully as to consider Jesus' command to heal the sick as binding upon the Christians of the first century. We have no authority to separate it from his command to preach the gospel; and only a sense of spiritual impotence would seek to evade this command by placing the responsibility on the shoulders of the medical profession. Until this critic accepts "the authority of Jesus Christ" as unreservedly as do Christian Scientists, he is in a lamentably poor position to question their attitude on that point.

The charge that Christians do not regard the Bible as "the revealed word of God," is another fallacy that a slight knowledge of Christian Science would dissipate forever. Mrs. Eddy's writings abound with passages sustaining the sacred character of the Scriptures, and emphasizing her acceptance of their teachings. On page 126 of Science and Health she writes: "The Bible has been my only authority. I have had no other guide in 'the straight and narrow way' of Truth."

The attempt of the speaker to identify Christian Science with yogism serves to bring out his lack of acquaintance with both the teaching and the practice of Christian Science, for these have brought peace and health to multitudes of people, in the place of misery, and are guiding them into the way of righteousness. Whether or not Christian Science coincides with this gentleman's views is of small moment beside the fact that it is bringing forth the fruits of Christianity, and that it will continue to do so to the glory of God and for the salvation of mankind.

Christian Science has withstood the assaults of scholastic and doctrinal theology for the last fifty years, but instead of going "to pieces," it has been blessed abundantly. Sometime I am sure this speaker will see wherein he has mistaken and misrepresented a teaching that is divinely sanctioned in the good it does, and instead will thank God for it.

Distribution of Literature

FOR a number of years the free distribution of Christian Science literature has been assuming increasingly larger proportions in the activity of the entire field. The desire of Christian Scientists to avoid neglecting this important work, together with the necessity for developing step by step the organized means for accomplishing the best results, has sometimes produced a lack of uniformity in methods and a liability in some instances of conflict in authority.

After careful consideration of the subject by The Christian Science Board of Directors and by the Trustees under the Will of Mrs. Eddy, it has seemed clear that the field should demonstrate greater uniformity in this work.

The By-laws of The Mother Church show clearly that the branch churches and societies are organizations independent of each other, through which Christian Scientists express to the world a large part of the activity of the Christian Science movement. It is considered advisable to avoid even a slight deviation from the plan of orderly and systematic classification of the duties of churches and individual workers which Mrs. Eddy's demonstration has provided. Therefore The Christian Science Board of Directors recommends that the responsibility for the free distribution of authorized Christian Science literature outside of the Boston district, should not be separated from the work of the branch churches and societies. This important activity should be carried on through their literature distribution committees. This will leave the Committees on Publication free to carry on their work as specifically provided in Article XXXIII and Article I, Section 6, of the By-laws of The Mother Church.

This Board also recommends the free distribution of authorized Christian Science literature through near-by branch churches and societies to interested readers in communities where there is no branch church or society, and in order more effectively to encourage such distribution the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy will hereafter assist by allowing the cost of this distribution to be included in their offer of assistance to branch churches and societies.

Government not Politics

THE problem usually set for a country or a community is to bring out a social order wherein there will be justice primarily. Christian Science sets a higher ideal than this, indicating the order of things wherein love will be the animating force in government, and justice not an end in itself but a definite means to a good end. Mrs. Eddy shows clearly that character must be developed by a thorough cleansing from love of sin. She says, "Escape from punishment is not in accordance with God's government, since justice is the handmaid of mercy" (Science and Health, p. 36). What is wrong in present conditions is the misinterpretation of justice due to a masculine conception of it, whereby it takes the nature of revenge against the wrongdoer. Prison systems which have wholly the intention of punishment illustrate this. For one error the whole man is made to suffer, while the right way is to use the resources of the whole man to abolish any error.

What raises more resentment than anything else in children is injustice, and as criminals are usually undeveloped they too often have a passionate sense of resentment when they feel that the strong arm of the law is guided by cruelty and that compassion is never considered. It is worth while to ponder the saying, "Thou shalt judge with the mind of twelve men and the heart of one woman." The author who wrote that recognized that in every woman there is the motherly element which would bring out love, whereas there might need to be discussion and argument with a dozen men, that is a jury, in order to bring out an adequate sense of justice. Christian Science forwards this view of the case and takes it out of the personal sense to establish it in Principle, because it shows how both men and women when guided by Principle bring out balanced humanity and rise into the equableness of divinity, even according to the example of Christ Jesus, who could say, "I and my Father are one,"—whose life, words, and deeds illustrated the fact that Mind is both Father and Mother God.

Now without the complete elements of Mind there can be no true government or development of order for the nation in a way similar to the development of order for the welfare of the family. The politician, for example, is one who schemes and plans to use powers and processes of government for personal advantage and local ends. He is one of a group that is against other groups. He is working for one party which is striving to defeat another party. Generally money is a sort of god to him; at least he measures success by the amount of it he can divert from the service of those he is against to the use of those whom he favors. As his basis for asking the support of the voters in a community he makes the claim that he diverted the resources of the whole country to the local community. Often this money is spent for public buildings not needed, or canals never used, or barracks not inhabited, but the plea is made that the money for those needless things was at least spent in that community. He forgets that others will do the same thing and misuse the taxes in similar wasteful political projects, so that in the end everybody will be cheated.

The underlying theory of all this is wrong. It is as if the members of one family should take advantage of mutual trust and steal from one another and waste the family income, so that such squandering would cause others to suffer lack. The mother of the family is indeed the "lady;" that is, as Ruskin so interestingly develops, the loaf-dispenser. If she makes any distinction it is likely to be in caring for the littlest one and considering the need of those not yet grown. One cannot imagine a mother playing politics with the bread supply of the house; and this same consciousness which has love for its motive must become developed in those who politically govern, even if the way to this consummation devoutly to be desired be "woman in politics." Woman, however, would translate that term, to which some object, into "womanliness in government," and then politics as it now is would cease to be, and the government of community or country would embrace with loving interest its members and citizens.

Consider, for example, the saloon in politics. No one would engage in the drink dispensing business if he knew enough to do better. Whenever the healing of Christian Science has reached gamblers and saloon keepers, they have had a vision of useful living, and moving forward, have become helpers of mankind and ceased to be the debauchers of youth. Christian Science does not "take away a man's living," but delivers him from hell, and shows him the way of true life.

Count up what a mother does to bring a son to twenty-one years. There are ten thousand patiences and self-denials, watchings and servings, and yet the servant of the underworld would take this boy who has been cared for by heavenly-inspired love, and for a few greasy pieces of silver in his till would willingly make him a staggering mass of misdirected muscle, with bloodshot eyes and maudlin mind. Should such things be? Shall the underworld of callous selfishness control our cities? Is the politician who creeps around dark corners and whispers behind his hand in order to hold the backing of those engaged in a nefarious traffic, to decide the fate of the sons and daughters of citizens? The sooner there is an end of political scheming of this sort the better, for it is right that the true sense of government wherein Love rules shall be recognized and prevail.

And how shall it prevail? By individual submission to God and allegiance to Principle, for thus comes right self-government. On pages 125 and 106 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy makes this clear in the statements: "Reflecting God's government, man is self-governed;" and, "Man is properly self-governed only when he is guided rightly and governed by his Maker, divine Truth and Love."

Warfare, True and False

READERS of the Bible are apt to overlook the fact that although the idea of peace figures largely therein, a great deal is also said about warfare. This is not confined, moreover, to the wars of the Jews, which are recorded at considerable length in the Old Testament, for we find frequent reference to another sort of warfare in the New Testament, one of the most significant statements concerning which is in the nineteenth chapter of Revelation, where we read about one who is called "Faithful and True," and who is also spoken of as "The Word of God." Respecting this great spiritual idea symbolically presented as a warrior leading the armies of heaven, we are told that "in righteousness he doth judge and make war."

As we study the Old Testament records, and find how material warfare was employed by the Hebrews to compel alien peoples to accept their religion, we can only note through the centuries the melancholy effects of such a method of advancing the cause of Truth on the human plane. At the same time we become aware in Christian Science that the struggle between right and wrong, between Truth and error, will go on through the centuries until right prevails, and the righteousness which is the unvarying demand of divine law is established over the whole earth. On page 568 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy, in commenting upon St. John's vision as presented in the twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse, says that here "the Revelator first exhibits the true warfare and then the false." To the Christian Scientist all warfare means a mental struggle between right and wrong; and while the warring instincts of the human mind are constantly seeking to express themselves, there is also a deep-seated desire for peace,—a desire which is too often blind to the true elements of peace as spiritually understood. St. James characterizes this in deeply significant words when he says: "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

It goes without saying that if the deepest desire of all men was to express absolute purity in thought, word, and deed, the struggle in the individual consciousness would lessen until finally the Master's benediction, "My peace I give unto you," would be realized. St. Paul learned many lessons from the Roman soldiers with whom he was closely associated for a number of years. For three years he was a prisoner in the garrison at Cæsarea; and later, during his residence as a political prisoner in Rome in the reign of Nero, it seems that a member of the imperial guard was detailed to be his custodian, and when they were out in the streets a chain bound the wrist of the one to the other. It is very important to note that while Paul uses the figure of human warfare to a considerable extent throughout his epistles, never once do we find him expressing any censure of the fearless men with whom he was associated. It is said that one after another of these men became converts to Christianity under his teachings; and they doubtless learned that while warfare would probably continue for a long time, yet the motive of the individual warrior should be to express righteousness and to look constantly for the triumph of good over evil. In his first epistle to Timothy we find him admonishing this young disciple, that through his study of the Holy Scriptures he might be enabled to "war a good warfare; holding faith, and a good conscience." Paul tells us that "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds."

The trouble with most people is, that they have not understood how to use the divinely provided weapons of which Paul speaks, and which he found to be mighty; and this may be said to apply to every one of us. One thing is sure, however, that there will be no peace for us as individuals, nor for the world at large, until we have learned to distinguish between the true warfare and the false. We may perhaps have to begin by doing that which is nearest right on the human plane; and to the extent that our motives are pure they will be mighty, and will lead beyond all question to victory. We are often tempted to be moral cowards, to seek what Mrs. Eddy calls "a false, convenient peace" (Miscellany, p. 211); and while this may seem to satisfy for a season, it will never bring the results which must be attained in order to establish the kingdom of God on earth. He who said, "My peace I give unto you," also said, "I came not to send peace, but a sword." He without question never used any weapon but the sword of Spirit, and he taught his followers how to use it, but he at the same time taught that there must be no sluggishness or apathy in his service, for not so could the kingdom of God be established upon earth.

When we come to live in entire harmony with divine law and are governed wholly by Truth and Love, then we shall find the most terrible manifestations of evil fading out into nothingness before the light of Spirit which we radiate. Then will come to an end the age-long warfare of mortals, and those who have put off mortality can say as did Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

Treason

THE betrayal of friendship is generally accounted a particularly odious offense. Even those who have made little progress along spiritual lines can be depended on to support their friends, at least as far as they are conscious of the meaning of the term loyalty. Why then is it that lasting friendships are comparatively rare and people after a time draw apart who might be expected to remain united? The divergence of ideals seems to account for much of this tendency. On page 80 of "Retrospection and Introspection" Mrs. Eddy writes, "There are no greater miracles known to earth than perfection and an unbroken friendship." Nothing drives human beings farther apart than that which they consider a betrayal of their ideals, and they give such conduct the ugly name of treason.

The Christian Scientist is at times faced by the question of uncovering error lest silence be taken as an indorsement of evil. What are the absolute facts in the case? Is evil real or unreal? What is mortal man that his attitude toward evil should determine what is intrinsically real or unreal? Can any one by giving thought make one atom of evil a reality? It is not possible for any human being to indorse evil, to give value to unreality by adding his name as he would indorse a check, for such a paper is a counterfeit, forged and issued by that false mind which Jesus has frankly described as "a liar."

It should therefore comfort the Christian Scientist to recognize that no matter how rampant treason may seem in its temporary successes and how successful in deluding mankind with its transient triumphs, it can never be made real by any possible juxtaposition with good, and can never be really indorsed or countenanced, even though no opportunity may present itself of uncovering it for what it is. This conviction should lighten the load of many a conscientious teacher, practitioner, or reader who has somehow been made to feel that he is responsible for another's mistakes because he is not in position to correct them.

Nay, further, there may come to him the grief of seeing the lambs of the fold follow a hireling instead of the good shepherd. He would save them if he could. He sees the familiar signs of personal control which would try to operate as an interference between Father and son, Principle and idea, and put asunder that which God has joined together. He observes the unmistakable process of that mental tyrrany which would if it could possess, absorb, dictate, and outline every activity of its victim. He feels the very natural desire to warn, to break the chains of slavery, to rescue the innocent from falling under the influence of the evil-minded. But perhaps no sure way presents itself of doing this without shocking the innocent and doing further harm. Therefore the would-be rescuer is thrown back into a condition of sorrowing helplessness and is tempted to mourn for the lost sheep.

But now comes an opportunity for a little self-questioning, for a quiet mental interrogatory which may follow these lines: You say that personified evil is at work luring the innocent into its grasp, and you wish to save them. Very well, do you believe personified evil has power, that it can think or has ever produced any history? If you do not, then why labor to keep any one from that which has no power? The most contemptible forms of evil, designated as disloyalty, treachery, treason, though they may operate on a national scale, are not part of God's creation and cannot by any form of indorsement on the part of any human being become more than nothing. In these times of secret manipulations it is well for Christian Scientists to recall Mrs. Eddy's statement that the Science of divine Love "would enable man to escape from idolatry of every kind, to obey the First Commandment of the Decalogue: 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me;' and the command of Christ: 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'" (Message for 1900, p. 5); and that, as our Leader says in continuation: "On this rock Christian Science is built. It may be the rock which the builders reject for a season; but it is the Science of God and His universe, and it will become the head of the corner, the foundation of all systems of religion."

CHICAGO, ILL.—When critical times on the Mexican border made necessary the mobilization of the National Guard, the Christian Science churches of Chicago, acting through their joint literature distribution committee, began the work of giving a copy of the leather bound pocket edition of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, or of other works by this author, to any Chicago member of the militia who desired to have the book. The privilege was also extended to recruits for the regular army and the navy, and many men in our country's service gladly accepted this offer, and so found a great aid to the study of the Bible and to spiritual growth. This work has continued without interruption, and is now being extended to the men whose acceptance by our exemption boards gives them the honor of service in the new American army and navy.—The Austinite.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH.—Work on the new edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, for which a site on the corner of North Naches Avenue and A Street was purchased some time ago, will be begun to-morrow morning [Aug. 29], though the work of preparing the site has been under way for some time. The church, when completed, will cost in the neighborhood of sixty thousand dollars. The unit which is to be built at the present time will cost between thirty-five and forty thousand dollars. The auditorium, with a floor space 79 by 95 feet, will seat about eight hundred and fifty persons.—North Yakima Republic.

The Lectures

CHICAGO, ILL. (Ninth Church).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by George E. Simmons, who said in part:—

The apostle Paul, in his epistle to the Philippians, said to them: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Clearly this means that the working out of salvation is an individual problem. The responsibility may not be shifted to another. The creating and governing Principle, God, must be understood and wrought out in the experience of each one. The Bible contains full and complete instructions regarding salvation. Christ Jesus has shown us the way by demonstration. He worked out his own salvation, not from sin only but from every troublesome and inharmonious condition, sickness and death included.

The Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," is exactly what the title says,—a "Key to the Scriptures." It corroborates and explains the Bible in its "spiritual import and application to all ages, past, present, and future" (The Christian Science Quarterly, Explanatory Note). The Christian Science lectures explain the teachings and practice of Christian Science. The facts of Christian Science are set forth in words that are readily understood, for the effort is to make plain to each individual the way of salvation. The effect is always a blessing, never an injury.

BUFFALO, N. Y. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by George L. Hodgson, who said in part:—

Our Master during his earthly ministry gave a definition of life. He said in the seventeenth chapter of the gospel according to St. John, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." In the fourth chapter of the same gospel he defined the nature and character of God. He said, "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Here for nearly two thousand years we have had the words of Jesus Christ himself telling exactly what constitutes life and how it is to be sought and found. Christian Science is restoring to mankind to-day this new-old truth which preaches good tidings to the meek, proclaims liberty to the captives, and opens the prison to them that are bound.

MALDEN, MASS. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Dr. J. W. Rice, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a religion of love. It teaches that Love will overcome hate, jealousy, and kindred elements of the carnal mind. Never in the world's history has there been so great need of a knowledge of God as there is to-day, and men never realized this need more than they do to-day. In these times of stress Christian Science is the message of "on earth peace, good will toward men." Through its silent ministrations we are learning more about the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and striving for that Mind which was in Christ Jesus, and which alone can bring the peace that passeth human understanding.

Testimonies of Healing

When my attention was first drawn to the teachings of Christian Science and I began to read Science and Health, I was instantly and deeply impressed with its logic, its practicality, its common sense. Here at last, it seemed to me, I had found a workable religion, one that could be used to live by. I had been reared in a religious atmosphere and at twelve years of age had joined a church. For a number of years I conscientiously took part in its activities, but never seemed to gain any genuine sense of peace and comfort from my beliefs about God, nor could I see much evidence of real spiritual joy and uplift in the lives of religious people around me. Even my mother, a most sincere Christian and a woman of beautiful character, found her faith no refuge from morbid fears and anxieties, which darkened our home with thoughts of sickness and poverty and gradually wore out her life.

When I first became interested in Christian Science I was just finishing my college course and was in a most disturbed state of mind. There was sickness and discord in our home, and having been convinced that I had made a mistake in the choice of a profession, I was filled with anxiety about my future. I then passed through an experience which left me with a curious prejudice against organized Christian Science, and particularly against its Founder. So, while I continued to cling to the little understanding of Truth I had gained, and tried blindly to apply it, I was determined not to study Science and Health or to attend Christian Science services.

There followed two years filled with sorrow, disappointment, anxiety, and physical weakness. Finally one day I despairingly asked myself why I should be so miserable and weary when I knew what it meant to be the child of a loving Father; why I could not gain some practical help from that knowledge. The answer came instantly from my awakened conscience: "Because you are trying to get help on your own terms. You are blindly and stupidly prejudiced, and you are dishonest. You admit that you gained something good from Christian Science, and now you want to use that good for your own selfish purposes, without even giving credit to the source from which you learned it."

That was sufficient, for I had been trained to despise dishonesty above all things. I sent for the copy of Science and Health that I had left at the home of a relative, and began to study it and also to attend the services of a Christian Science church. With this surrender my troubles began to disappear. Pressing anxiety was relieved, I obtained a more congenial position, and the nervous exhaustion which had weighed upon me simply faded out of consciousness.

Now for nine years Christian Science has been my only physician, both for mind and body. That I have had no serious physical disorders to overcome is due, I feel sure, to the protecting power of divine Love. Minor ailments, including colds, acute stomach trouble, and a throat affection, have all disappeared. Mental discords, such as sensitiveness, discontent, and impatience, have been overcome in large part, while a morbid tendency to worry is rapidly yielding to the power of Truth.

Every position that I held came to me unsolicited, with a distinct improvement in salary and prospects. Six years ago I was lifted, in a way that seemed miraculous, out of a line of work that I had outgrown, and was given an astonishingly advantageous start in magazine writing. The way has often seemed a rugged one, but I am sincerely grateful for each hard experience that has helped me to overcome error.

I am grateful for the privilege of class instruction, for the fact that two dear relatives have also found the way in Christian Science, and for the great happiness of a marriage with one who with me loves the truth and tries to live it. I wish to acknowledge gratefully the help received from Christian Science friends, and with deepest reverence to acknowledge my boundless indebtedness to the woman who made the wonderful demonstration of restoring this priceless Christ-healing to weary and heavy laden humanity.

Fifteen years ago I went to a Christian Science practitioner for help to overcome what seemed to be a chronic inherited appetite for liquor. I had had two shocks of paralysis and suffered from a throat trouble, but these seemed minor evils, with which I was willing to put up if I could be freed from what to me was the besetting sin. I had been in the habit of using liquor from a very early age, having been left alone to earn a living as best I could when twelve years old, and two years later being employed in a hotel where the conditions were not such as to promote sobriety.

After being tossed about on the sea of what seemed to be a tempestuous life voyage, but always hungering after a life of peace and happiness, I was asked why I did not try Christian Science. I asked for treatment and was healed, but after fifteen months error suggested that I could have been healed in the orthodox church of which I had been a member, and as I liked the services and ritual I went back to it. I also went back in other ways; but the dream was of short duration and I awoke. Now that so many years have elapsed and all vestige of the false appetite has faded away, I can see the glistening peaks of the mountain top after the long fight, and realize in a degree what St. Paul meant when he said, "I have fought a good fight, . . . I have kept the faith." The throat trouble has also been overcome.

In regard to the paralytic condition, I have not had any trouble for many years in walking long distances, riding a wheel, or doing any of my usual work. When very tired I still limp, but have been examined twice in the past four years by two different medical examiners for insurance and have passed without any question a very satisfactory examination. The last examiner remarked that he rarely found any one in such perfect physical condition as I was at my age, which was fifty-one at that time. In my work I quite frequently make one hundred and fifty to two hundred calls a day.

What a benediction and what a healing thought that is on page 55 of Science and Health, where our Leader states, "Truth's immortal idea is sweeping down the centuries, gathering beneath its wings the sick and sinning." God speed the day when all mankind will rest beneath the shadow of the mighty wings of Love and Truth.

I have had a healing in Christian Science which to me seemed most wonderful. After the birth of my little son one of my breasts became infected and I called upon my physician for advice. Upon examination I was informed that I had chronic enlargement of the glands. As time went on my case became more serious, and I visited another physician, who stated that there was an abnormal growth, which would have to be removed. I then went to a surgeon in one of our largest hospitals, and he too said that my condition required an operation.

It was at this time that I called for help in Christian Science, and in three weeks I was healed without the use of a knife. All impurities passed from me, and the open wound, which seemed almost impossible of healing, as it covered such an area, closed up nicely in three weeks. I am enjoying good health and am happy in the study of this truth. I am truly thankful to God, divine Love, for my healing.

MRS. J. LEVY, Chicago, Ill.

This testimony is given with a sense of gratitude and humility. In my thirteenth year I had Bible instruction and was confirmed, but still all too many of Jesus' words and works remained unexplained. Four years later I took up the reading of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, a copy of which had been lent to me by a family who had told me of their healing. Next I read four numbers of the Journal.

As both my parents were ailing, I proposed that they take Christian Science treatment, and it was decided that mother should have treatment first. She was afflicted with a stomach trouble which was not very serious, but which dated back to the birth of her last child, twelve years previous. I took a forty-three mile trip to a neighboring town in order to talk to a Christian Science practitioner in her behalf, and her healing was instantaneous and took place that same day. I gladly secured a copy of the textbook.

Father was suffering from gallstones. He had consulted physicians and spent weeks at the hospital, then came home with seven kinds of medicine besides an electric battery; yet the attacks continued to return, and at shorter intervals, until he had them once or twice a month. However, on the second day after mother's healing I again called on the practitioner, and father was helped in that the attacks became fewer and less severe, until he had none inside of seven months.

In 1898 I had class instruction. The application of what we learn in Christian Science is a great help in married life and in bringing up children. In Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Only the action of Truth, Life, and Love can give harmony" (p. 169); and in so far as we put our trust in divine power, we need fear no evil. In the case of our four children the so-called children's diseases have as a rule manifested themselves in a mild form, and pneumonia has been overcome without leaving any bad after effects.

As for the days of confinement, my recollection of them is almost that of holidays. Metaphysical treatment was given, and I read the Lesson-Sermon constantly during the hours preceding. My mother and at times my husband were the only persons present, except the first time, when we had a Christian Science practitioner at the house. The result was that on the second day I was able to sit down comfortably at the dinner table. When the last child was born, it so happened that I had to take care of everything. We gave thanks and experienced nothing but harmony and well-being. In the sixth chapter of Matthew we read, "Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink." I strove to gain a scientific sense of things, and the demonstration manifested itself in complete freedom from stomach trouble. I partook of everything I prepared for the family and ate no special food. The children were all nursed by me. Whenever before birth an inharmonious condition tried to manifest itself, I would declare the truth, and overcome the trouble either through reading the textbook and treating myself or with the help of a practitioner.

Now, have all these wonders taken place in order that levity and ease may be indulged in? Surely not, but that the coming of the kingdom of heaven on earth may be hastened. In I Corinthians we read: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." In 1910 I joined The Mother Church and for two years rejoiced in being a member of a branch church. Then we moved, and later again, and the last seven years we have belonged to a Christian Science Society.

FRAU AMANDA KIFFIN, Broken Bow, Neb.

For fourteen years I have proved the healing power of Truth in Christian Science. The most difficult problem to be solved occurred as I was returning from the Sunday service over a year ago, when I fell on a wet pavement and seemingly was helpless to move, the left wrist being broken and the left leg sprained. I was taken to a hospital, but the only material means used was an anesthetic when the bone was being set, as the surgeon refused to take the case otherwise on account of the severe pain in the leg. I remained there two days, and in the mean time a Christian Science practitioner had been engaged and absent treatments were given. I would say here that most loving attention was shown me during my stay at the hospital. After a week's help at my home from a practitioner, I was impressed that the work was mine to do.

Instruction had been received from a loyal student of Mrs. Eddy, and I felt that God had helped me many times in past years and would do so again. I could not as yet move the leg at all, and the pain seemed very real, although the wrist healed with no pain. For many months I read only that which tended to spiritualize thought, during which time the Journal and the Sentinel were a great help and comfort to me. Slowly but surely progress became apparent, and the doctor's verdict that a year would elapse before I could be active was disproved at the end of four months, for I was then able to attend to all my household affairs. I limped slightly, but used no support, and gradually the lameness disappeared. This healing was accomplished under the most trying circumstances. I am truly grateful—more than can be expressed in words—for the blessed truth which makes free.—AMELIA BOND GRAY, Los Angeles, Cal.

It is with joy that I testify to the healing power of Truth. Christian Science, the beautiful new-old religion which Jesus taught and left to us as a rich legacy, was brought to me by friends about ten years ago. Several years later I was healed of what to mortal sense seemed a very badly injured knee, as I was unable to walk. I called a Christian Science practitioner, who after treating me remarked as she departed that I was all right and would need no more help. I felt quite resentful at her remark, but while thinking about it something seemed to ask why I did not try to walk. Obeying the intuition, I arose and walked.

We have had many proofs of the power of Truth in our family. Influenza, chronic bowel trouble, malaria, structural defect of the eye, ptomaine poisoning, and stomach disorder, among other things, have been overcome. The members of my family are students of this Christ-teaching and regular attendants at the Christian Science church. For several years no medicine has been used in our home, although in the old thought it was used daily.

The physical healing is only incidental in comparison with the spiritual understanding, which enables us to see man in God's image and to love our neighbor as ourselves. I am truly thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this Comforter which shall teach us all things. I hope always to be faithfully "waiting for the Mind of Christ," as our Leader expresses it on page ix of the Preface to Science and Health.—JOSEPHINE A. SPARKS, Oroville, Cal.

In the fall of 1914 I met with an accident, the wheel of a cab passing over the toes of my right foot. I was carried to my rooms, as the foot was very painful, also badly swollen and bruised. As soon as possible I summoned help from a Christian Scientist, who said she would treat me at once and asked me to come to the city. I did as she requested, and to my great pleasure was able to walk without the slightest difficulty after my arrival there. The healing was beautiful, without the loss of a single toenail.

The next summer a window sash fell on my left hand, and the pain was intense. I called this same friend, and told her that the hand was badly injured and very much inflamed. Treatment was given me, with the result that the next day the hand was much better, and the second day I could use it as well as before the accident. It was permanently healed.

I know that divine Love will meet my every need, and for all the blessings received I am more grateful than words can express. I am thankful to God for Christian Science, and also grateful to Mrs. Eddy for discovering this truth that is our help in times of trouble.

MARGARET KELLEY, Lexington, Ky.

About six years ago I underwent a surgical operation on the advice of a well known specialist. I had had long treatments and a previous operation for the same trouble, but to no purpose. The doctor assured me that in about twenty days I would be a well woman, but the case was more complicated than was at first supposed, and some days after the operation acute lung trouble set in. The cough and the hemorrhage burst the stitches of the wound, which had to be reopened, and the suffering was indescribable, as the heart was not in a condition for me to have an anesthetic administered. For two months I could not raise hand or foot, and with difficulty would glance at the Bible, which was a great comfort.

At length the doctor saw my mental suffering and at a risk allowed me to leave the hospital. Housekeeping was out of the question, as I could not stand, so we went to a pension. There in the evenings after dinner different topics were discussed, Christian Science among them. As I had inquired into many doctrines in the hope of knowing the Bible better, I at once asked what it was, and some very disparaging remarks were made. The evident lack of justice made me desire to know something about this teaching, and my husband said he would help me to do so when I was better. Five months later we went to our own home, and a few days afterward I obtained the address of a Christian Scientist and went to see her. The talk with her did not impress me, but she loaned me the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and I found it very good, especially the first chapter.

Some days afterward I returned the book, and was asked if I wished to buy a copy; but I said I was off for a holiday on account of my health and could not afford it. The Scientist however said I could pay for it when convenient, and I was so surprised at being so trusted by a stranger that I bought the book on those terms. I read it every day, and after three weeks stood up straight, cast off the surgical appliance, bathed in the sea, and disobeyed all the doctor's orders. The cough and the hemorrhage had gone, and a prenatal heart trouble began to disappear fast. When I got back home I had the measles, and was a little afraid, as the hemorrhage returned. My husband looked disturbed, but I told him not to worry, as it meant the end of the lung trouble. I was taken ill on a Friday, and on the following Monday was at my duties. Loss of memory was also overcome.

What finally made me take up Science was this. A troublesome growth came on the palm of my hand, and I went to the doctor to ask what it was. He said he could hardly tell, but it could be cut out and my hand would be all right in a few days, although he could not guarantee results. I went home and applied the truth and within a fortnight was free. Now, with the Christ-way and Mrs. Eddy's practical rules, all our problems have been and are being perfectly demonstrated over. I am grateful to my fellow Scientists and for the services. I can say in spirit and in truth, "My soul doth magnify the Lord."

ERNESTINA PRADA, Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Christian Science is the greatest thing in my life, and is lifting me from pessimism to its opposite. The growing knowledge of God as infinite Principle, divine Love, is strengthening and inspiring me. I have been healed of many physical ailments, also of nervousness, an irritable temper, and in a measure of painful self-consciousness, as a knowledge of the allness of divine Love leads me to forget the body and human personality and brings a sense of joyful assurance and of unfailing help and protection.

This assurance is particularly helpful in these days of war and uncertainty. Divine Mind is guiding and guarding us all the way. I would especially mention the Zeppelin raids, which are frequent in our district. Being a physical coward, I would naturally find them terrifying, but every time I realize the presence of Life, Truth, Love, I am spared all suffering, and the event is transformed into an uplifting experience.

From our many healings it is hard to select the best, but the quick healing of my little son from an attack of bronchitis showed me the potency of Christian Science as compared with material remedies. This attack was overcome in two hours by absent treatment, after the father and I had worked all the night previously with no apparent result. I never saw such a quick healing by any other means; it was most impressive.

As for myself, four years ago I was an unhappy semi-invalid. Though not yet thoroughly robust, I am a different woman, and take pleasure in being able to perform my manifold household duties in a regular manner. Christian Science has truly proved a blessing to me and mine. I am unspeakably grateful to God, to our Leader, and to the many kind friends who have helped me in Science.

CATHERINE KENDALL, Wanstead, London, England.

I would like to corroborate my wife's statements, and also to add my own testimony. Christian Science came to me four years ago, when my faith in mankind had been rudely shaken, and also my faith in God, or what I then conceived God to be, for I could not see why He should allow any one to suffer who was trying to be good. Christian Science has given me a God that I can know and understand, and has necessarily given me a better concept of His image and likeness, man; in fact it has put thought on a spiritual basis instead of a material one, and so has transformed my outlook on life. I can now see that my material losses, so called, have been my spiritual gains, and that I have been entertaining angels unawares.

I have found Christian Science a great help to me in camp here at Aldershot. I have proved that "Love is reflected in love;" also that "trials are proofs of God's care" (Science and Health, pp. 17, 66). Christian Science has greatly helped me in overcoming the sense of separation from my wife and two children, and I have learned that I can be about my Father's business wherever I am.

I am grateful for the better understanding of the Bible which I am gaining through the study and application of Christian Science, for the Bible has become a living book since its spiritual meaning is being interpreted. Words fail to express my thankfulness to God, and my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for giving again to the world that truth which our Master and Wayshower said would make us free.

THOMAS KENDALL.

For more than ten years I have enjoyed the privilege of being a student of Christian Science, and I feel deep gratitude for all the blessings which have come to me through this means. The autumn before becoming interested in Christian Science I had an attack of congestion of the lungs, so lived in constant dread of developing chronic lung trouble. The warning by the doctor to take care never to catch cold, only made me more afraid.

Upon beginning to study Christian Science I did not immediately lose all fear, but realized that either it was right to trust in material remedies for health or it was not, and reached the decision that I must trust God alone to heal me in the future. Gradually my health improved, as I gained a firmer grasp of what Life really is, and for a long time I have been entirely free from fear of this trouble. For years before taking up Christian Science I was almost lame during the winter with chilblains, being unable to go out at times, as I could not bear to have shoes on. This trouble has also vanished, and many other ills have been overcome for me through the understanding of Truth.

Grateful as I am for the physical healing, I am far more grateful for the help Christian Science affords me in the affairs of everyday life. Whenever it has been honestly and understandingly applied to any wrong condition it has proved an unfailing remedy. I am grateful for all the good that comes through The Christian Science Publishing Society, for the joy of being a member of The Mother Church and of a branch church, also for class instruction, and for all the many channels for progress which our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, has opened up for us.

SUSAN FARQUHARSON CAMPBELL, Schenectady, N. Y.

It is because of gratitude and appreciation for Christian Science, and for the many blessings received since becoming interested in this wonderful truth, that I send this testimony for publication. Through earnest study of the Bible, together with Science and Health and the other Christian Science literature, I have been healed of many false beliefs, such as superstition, fear, and criticism. I have learned to express more love for every one, and right thinking has taken the place of wrong thinking. Through trying to realize God's perfect creation and man as His image and likeness, goiter of long standing has disappeared, bowel trouble to which I had been subject for years has been overcome, and an ugly wart on one of my hands has vanished.

I am grateful for these healings, but much more so for the understanding of the allness of Life, Truth, and Love which I am gaining every day. Words could not express my thankfulness for the Christian Science literature, for the services, and for the lectures, which are such a wonderful help to me. I feel profoundly grateful to Mrs. Eddy for giving us this understanding of God.

I. MAE RUBLE, Union, Ohio.

I am very happy to give my testimony as to the benefits derived from Christian Science. In 1910 I was completely cured, in a week's treatment, of tubercular throat trouble of several years' standing. Medicines of all kinds had been tried, and I turned to Christian Science as a last resort. My healing is permanent and my faith is absolute. Many other troubles have been overcome, such as varicose veins, severe headaches, and weakness of the spine. I also find that many conditions of thought have been changed, and I have been lifted into a higher consciousness. That I am now a strong, well woman is all due to Christian Science.

I am striving to love my neighbor and to be pure in heart, as the Bible teaches. I am truly grateful for all that Christian Science has done for both me and mine.

Thoughts for Each Hour

MYRTLE STRODE JACKSON

WINGS in the sky at morning's shining gate,—
The wings of wrath, the maniac wings of hate.
O Spirit, save us e'er it be too late!
Swiftly the answer came:
There are no wings in the wide sky above,
But the protecting wings of God's great love,—
The Holy Spirit brooding as a dove
O'er those who trust His name.
Wings of omnipotence, peace, and protection,
Wings of Love's constant, unerring direction,
Wings of the Spirit, swift pinions of prayer,—
Shelter our homes in Thine all-loving care,
Fold us in stillness, and strength, and perfection.

Mine-fields in depths no fisher-folk discern,
Torpedo tracks the ocean billows churn,
Our ships sail forth, but will they safe return?
Love answered thus:
There are no depths unto your heavenly King.
Good fills all space! O death, where is thy sting?
Can height, or depth, or any other thing
Separate us?
Depths of the ocean of Love ever flowing,
Depths of the riches of Christ's own bestowing,
Depths of God's mercy, of Truth's healing power,—
Be Thou our safety in danger's dread hour,
Thou the All-seeing, All-acting, All-knowing.

Minds, many minds, in business, medicine, art;
Millions of minds in every creed and craft,
What rest for weary brain and aching heart?
Then Science said:
There is no mind in the whole world abroad
But the one Mind, the great, eternal Lord,
Creating earth and heaven by His word,
Himself the head.
Mind of omniscience and true revelation,
Mind of the Spirit, of Love's inspiration,
Mind of the Scriptures, of Christ understood,—
Bind us as one in Thine infinite good,
Rule every heart, every home, every nation.

From Our Exchanges

[Rev. George H. Parkinson, D.D., in Pacific Christian Advocate]

All of our interests, both in the things that pertain to business and in the things that pertain to the heart, are immediately concerned with the life of all races and nations, and we must set ourselves to such an interpretation and application of Christ's gospel as will make these new conditions just and brotherly. From some heart the world will demand an adequate ideal; from some fountain it will seek its healing and refreshment. Through her ministry the church must interpret and apply the ideal that is in Christ's heart; it must open a fountain deeper and richer than the comforts of wealth and power, or men will try to rebuild their civilization upon the philosophy without Christ, and upon a science without a heart.

[Rev. J. Frank Thompson in The Universalist Leader]

A final truth to be noted is that if we truly and supremely desire the accomplishment of God's purpose, and value our personal achievements chiefly bcause they contribute to that result, we shall rejoice in all the noble and beneficent deeds of other people as if they were our own. We shall make them ours through sympathy with the special benefits which they bestow and the general welfare which they promote. Thus we shall be saved alike from envy and discouragement.

[The Christian Register]

A real church is known for a minimum of the things that offend common sense, and is blessed with a maximum of the great affirmations and acceptances that have been good for all mankind since the world began. By this simple emphasis the only organization that is needed will come; it will be not adamant, but well knit; it will be not mechanic, but organic; it will be not cold with perfunctoriness, but breathing spirit and life in its beautiful forms and ceremonies, its fellowship and usefulness. This is the first requirement.

[Zion's Herald]

The "simple life," of which we hear so much, is essentially the spiritual life. At its core is an eternal, not a temporal, interest, and it is at peace because it is centered in God. Its singleness is a simplicity that is "in Christ;" it may therefore coexist with the largest amount of service for humanity amid the complexities of the modern world.

"What Is Money?"

Mrs. Eddy called the fund which Christian Scientists freely gave to build The Mother Church extension in Boston in 1906 "two millions of love currency" (Miscellany, p. 14).

Jesus, when viewing the rich men offering their gifts, said of the widow who threw "two mites" into the treasury of the temple at Jerusalem, "Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all" (Luke 21:3).

The widow of Judea and the Christian Scientists of 1906 grasped a high concept of Love as ever-current, they conceived the commodity used by men for their medium of exchange as being a symbol of the all-currency of love and they expressed this concept in the highest terms of service to God and to their fellow man.

The right concept of money is strengthened by studying Mrs. Eddy's comment on the contributions made by Christian Scientists to build The Mother Church extension. She said, "In the now they brought their tithes into His storehouse. Then, when this bringing is consummated, God will pour them out a blessing above the song of angels, beyond the ken of mortals—a blessing that two millions of love currency will bring to be discerned in the near future as a gleam of reality; not a madness and nothing, but a sanity and something from the individual, stupendous, Godlike agency of man" (Miscellany, p. 14).

That which makes the giving of Christian Scientists so much more effective than the mere giving of money is the understanding with which Christian Scientists give.

It is impossible to compute the good done for the world, or to Christian Scientists themselves, by those activities of The Mother Church and its branches, all of which are the direct or indirect results of Mrs. Eddy's revelation of God's "infinite resources" (Science and Health, p. 60). Through these channels Christian Scientists are furnished the opportunities to give scientifically. The mere contribution of funds for any purpose without some measure of the scientific understanding of giving really nullifies the effect of the gift.

The unselfish support which Christian Scientists are giving to all of these activities of The Mother Church and its branches cannot be computed as money; it must be measured in terms of Mind. "Giving does not impoverish us in the service of our Maker, neither does withholding enrich us" (Science and Health, p. 79). True giving is a symbol of constructive spiritual building.

The Tenth Commandment

REV. JAMES J. ROME

WHEN we remember that every mortal is a creature of education and that the influence of environment and association is largely responsible for the formation of his character, it is very evident that his manner of living is simply the result of his obedience to that particular condition of thought by which he has been surrounded. No matter how much a man may think he is independent, self-made, and free from external influences, he is not, until he gains freedom in the truth.

While the responsibility for one's earlier experiences may rest on others, every one must and does inevitably arrive at a period known as the age of accountability or responsibility, when his own choice must be made as to the path he will follow,—a time when the appeal of Joshua to the people of Israel is applicable to him individually: "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." Whatever line of thought he decides upon and pursues will soon be apparent by the effect produced in his life. The words of Paul to the Romans are therefore of universal application: "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Hence the question constantly faces each individual, Whom or what am I obeying?

Obedience does not necessarily imply a sense of servility or subjection to another's thought. Being obliged to follow the commands of another would imply personal domination. The original word obey used in the above passage does not imply compulsion, for it means to hearken or listen submissively. Now it is very evident that we cannot be giving heed to two opposite things at the same time. If we are listening to error we are disregardful of and consequently disobedient to Truth; if we are admitting the wrong we are denying the right, and if we are obeying the material or mortal sense we are disobedient to the spiritual; hence Jesus' saying, "No man can serve two masters." Yet every moment we are obeying one of these opposing thoughts.

The only one who can rightly demand our obedience is God, the Principle of man's life, that on which his very existence depends. The only real obedience, then, is man's reflection of his divine Principle. In reality a disobedient man is an impossibility,—one might as well speak of a nonreflecting mirror. The reflection of divine Principle as presented in man portrays perfect being. The obedience required of mankind is the recognition and acknowledgment of this fact, namely, that man in reality expresses only good. The admission of this fact relieves one from his subjection to the power and influence of erroneous belief, and brings him into possession of his divine rights of health, holiness, and harmony. The Scripture declares, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land." As a man comes into a knowledge of his true relation to God, he will be found in accord with everything that is Godlike.

The only real obedience is willing obedience. Unwillingness, or self-will, is the root of all disobedience. Mere outward observance of rules or regulations is not obedience, and neither is compliance with certain demands from a sense of fear or the mere desire to please. Obedience is doing what one sees to be right because it is right. Willing obedience to the leadings of truth so far as we apprehend them will open the thought to receive more truth; but disobedience to our highest understanding of right will shut us out from the heavenly kingdom. This demand for obedience applies to the smallest details of human experience, and only as we are diligent in recognizing and complying with these demands constantly, are we prepared to accomplish good results, which in turn will lead us to a higher understanding of truth, whereby we are enabled to attain still better results. To the faithful steward in the parable it was said, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord." This rule of progressive obedience is forcefully illustrated in the study of mathematics. Only as the rules for one class of problems are understood and strictly observed are we prepared to grapple with problems in a higher branch and master them.

The mainspring of all obedience is love. In "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy says, "Obedience is the offspring of Love; and Love is the Principle of unity, the basis of all right thinking and acting; it fulfils the law" (p. 117); and in her Message to The Mother Church for 1902 she says, "Selfishly, or otherwise, all are ready to seek and obey what they love" (p. 17). Readiness to be controlled by divine Love, quiets the turmoil and strife of self-will, mortal desires and ambitions, and enables us to hearken—listen diligently—for the direction of supreme wisdom and willingly obey the divine voice.

"Love never faileth"

IDA E. BEER

IN going over the whole of the experience which follows, the writer's heart is full of gratitude to a loving Father, who guided, guarded, sustained, and delivered us during a recent disaster at sea. Every action of ours that day was a thought expressed, and that it was a reflection of God's thought the end will surely prove. The first saving thought was in changing the position of my steamer chair. It had been placed away forward, but my husband thought I would be warmer and more comfortable farther astern, so he moved me back. When the explosion came the place where I had just been sitting was entirely demolished.

It was a beautiful day, and my husband stood leaning on the rail near me, looking out over the water, when far away he saw the wake of a torpedo, and called out, "Torpedo coming!" Immediately afterward there was a crash, a whole sea swept over us, and the bow of the boat was cut off as with a knife, and sank from sight. I was very much surprised, after a few moments, to realize that we were still unhurt on the boat. We removed our coats, and within two feet of us hung two life preservers, which we helped each other to adjust. Then we stood there alone, as everybody had rushed astern. I asked where we should go, and never doubting that the ship would sink in a few minutes, my husband remembered what a friend of his, a passenger on a steamer which had been sunk, had said, that in case of shipwreck we should get up high; so we made our way forward, and up on the captain's bridge, where there were lifeboats. One was just being launched, and we got in along with about fifteen men, I being the only woman, as the captain's bridge was very difficult to reach, the ladder leading to it having been shot away.

I had always known that many lifeboats were upset in the launching, but I knew there was a law of God to meet our need, and that this law was in operation and would bring us safely down to the water. It did, although at least twenty-five people jumped into the boat as she slowly passed alongside of the ship. Just as we were safely afloat and pushed off free of the ship, water poured into the boat, which we bailed with hats, caps, hand bags—anything we could find. Every one feared we would sink, but God's law, as understood in Christian Science, was right there to adjust everything, and after a little while the leaking stopped.

One great difficulty which we had to overcome was our being unable to understand one another, as there were people of so many different nationalities aboard. There was a woman floating in the water near us, calling for help, and we and a brave young Englishman were pulling toward her, while the others were pulling in the opposite direction, as we already had fifteen more passengers than the boat was supposed to hold. We had to have a leader, and divine Love became that leader, inducing the others to pull with us, and we were able to save six more without any further protest.

We rowed around, one harmonious company, for several hours, keeping near the ship, but not yet allowed to go aboard, as there was no surety that she would keep afloat. Then suddenly from a calm sea there was a change to wind, black clouds, and a few flakes of snow. Despair seized many, for we knew that neither the ship nor our little boat could withstand rough weather, as we were so heavily laden that to ship one sea would have been fatal to us. Then clear as crystal came the remembrance of a statement in the article "God's Law of Adjustment" (see pamphlet, "Law and Work"): "If a man were drowning in mid-ocean with apparently no human help at hand, there is a law of God which, when rightly appealed to, would bring about his rescue." I shut my eyes to the mortal fear and suffering about me and appealed to that law. There was no human help near, but God is everywhere; His is the only power that can say to the waves, "Peace, be still," and He said it.

In a very few moments the storm had passed away and we were recalled to the ship, which seemed likely to be able to keep afloat until help came. But it was several weary hours before a ship came—and how I had prayed that we might be saved by a vessel going to France, as we were on our way home to Switzerland, where, although we are Americans, we had lived for the past nine years. The order came, "Women first," and the transfer of them began. There was also a rope fixed by which men could slide down from our boat to the other vessel. My husband and I had been together through it all, and I did not wish to be separated at the last, so we waited until I was the last woman left, and then we were passed over together. Immediately afterward the call came to cast off, and I was overjoyed to find we were headed for France.

That run through the night, dark, cold, everybody fearful that another torpedo might find us, was over none too soon, and we were so grateful when we stepped on shore about twelve hours after the disaster. Of course we were wet, cold, and had sustained slight sprains and bruises, but God's law was right there to appeal to, and everything was met and overcome. I am sure that any one who reads this will agree with me that it was a wonderful demonstration of God's willingness and ability to save.

The Work of Healing

MORA TUCKER

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE rightly applied and rightly received heals completely and permanently, but we must be willing to comply with the requirements whereby the healing power of Truth can be demonstrated. It is very different in its requirements and operation from other curative systems, the healing being the result of the operation in human consciousness of spiritual law.

In applying to a Christian Science practitioner for treatment, the patient must understand that treatment is a cooperative work, and that neither the practitioner nor the patient does the healing. The practitioner understands somewhat of the spiritual law, the law of Truth, also what God is, what man is, and the relation existing between God and man. His work is to realize this clearly, and to lead the patient to relinquish his false concepts of both God and man, thereby opening his consciousness to the operation of spiritual law.

A thought which seeks help through spiritual means while still clinging to the desire for material help, is verily a "house divided against itself," which cannot successfully withstand or destroy the claims of sickness. On page 167 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy we read, "Only through radical reliance on Truth can scientific healing power be realized;" and again, on the same page: "The scientific government of the body must be attained through the divine Mind. It is impossible to gain control over the body in any other way." Outward conformity to these requirements will, however, do very little to forward the healing, unless every suggestion of material help is excluded from consciousness and thought is held steadfastly to the omnipotence of God.

Very often the patient gets the impression that all that is necessary for him to do is to be willing to let Christian Science heal him, but he needs to understand that sickness is in the first place the result of a wrong mental condition, in other words, of wrong thinking. It can be readily seen that while spiritual law is operative at all times and in all places, the patient may prevent its operation in his consciousness by holding to false concepts and thoughts unlike God, good,—such as fear, impatience, criticism, resentment, selfishness, dishonesty, and such evils.

God's law is continuously operative, but to come under the government of this law we must remove whatever would obstruct it. We must love God with our whole heart, strength, and mind, and our neighbor as ourself, if we would be free. No one can work out our salvation for us. We must all do our own praying and our own reading, in so far as we can. The Christian Science practitioner can, however, do much to help by directing the patient's search for the truth, showing him where his thought needs correcting, and by his own clear realization of the truth.

The patient on his part must come with an earnest desire to know the truth revealed in Christian Science, with a humility which will enable him to be obedient to its requirements, and with at least as much patience as he has previously had with material means of healing. Such a state of consciousness indicates that already a great many obstructions have been removed. Nothing worthy of possession comes to us without some effort on our part. Let us be willing to sell all that we have in order to gain this "pearl of great price." Every improved physical condition brought about through the application of Christian Science indicates a purer thought, a more enlightened consciousness, some putting off of the "old man with his deeds," and some reflection of that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus."

When we consider how much stress is laid by the medical profession on proper atmospheric conditions and proper food for children, is it strange that Christian Scientists should be just as careful of the mental atmosphere and thought food? Jesus the great metaphysician declared, "Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man." At another time, speaking to his disciples, he said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of," referring to his knowledge of God, which was sustaining him. The following incident, which occurred a few years ago, may illustrate this truth.

A woman came to my home one afternoon in great distress about her little child. Her appearance was so uninviting that my first effort on seeing her was to look beyond the seeming and hold fast to the true concept of man. She told me of the child's condition, which I recognized to be what is known as scurvy, and it had reached the stage where the child was having spasms continuously. I knew that this physical condition was supposedly due to impure air and impure or insufficient food, but my knowledge of Christian Science enabled me to look beyond the material and to reach the real cause of the trouble, to understand that a pure mental atmosphere and spirituality of thought were needed above all else to establish harmonious conditions. I explained to the mother the cause of disease and the remedy. She promised to keep out of the home all impure conversation, all gossip, and to read the Bible and Science and Health.

The child was healed in one visit, but the real healing was in the consciousness of the mother. Her purified thought was soon manifested in more harmonious surroundings, a clean, well kept home, and in neat personal appearance on the part of herself and children. We do not need to seek a material atmosphere to find health, or certain kinds of food in order to be well. If we make our mental atmosphere what it should be, not only will we be benefited, but our little ones will be well and happy.

Reality versus the Counterfeit

LEWIS C. STRANG

IN pursuit of her stupendous task of uncovering to the human consciousness the unreality of matter and contrasting this unreality with the reality of Spirit, Mrs. Eddy frequently characterizes as "counterfeits" the universe and man which are cognized by the material senses. The following quotation from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 337) is illustrative: "The visible universe and material man are the poor counterfeits of the invisible universe and spiritual man."

Students of Mrs. Eddy's writings often marvel at her accurate use of words and her ability to choose from the many meanings which human usage has gathered around the same word, the one distinctive concept that best serves her purpose of making clear the spiritual idea. Her use of the word counterfeit is markedly characteristic of this keen selective quality, so much so that to gain an adequate and accurate sense of the fundamentally important teaching contained in passages of which the one quoted is typical, it is essential to acquire a clear, definite understanding of the metaphysical meaning of this term.

At first thought the meaning seems quite obvious. One thinks of a counterfeit dollar bill, picturing it in thought as something which looks like a genuine dollar bill. Without realizing it there has forthwith been given to the counterfeit a certain sense of reality and substance. Unfortunately, in too many instances thought as regards the nature of the counterfeit stops at this point, with the result that right there begins the deception of the material senses which would cloud the understanding of what Mrs. Eddy means.

One dictionary gives as the first meaning of the noun counterfeit, "That which is made in imitation of something, with a view to deceive by passing the false for the true." In her use of the word Mrs. Eddy never loses sight of the basic sense of deception, and he who would follow her revelation must always carry his concept beyond the point of superficial resemblance argued by the material senses to the perception of the deceptiveness which is inherent in the full meaning of the word. Returning to the counterfeit dollar bill with this clearer, fuller meaning in mind, it is evident that any resemblance which may seem to exist between the counterfeit and the genuine is entirely on the surface—a resemblance which deceives one who is ignorant but never one who knows. The trained sense of the expert handler of money instantly detects the spuriousness of the counterfeit and casts it out.

Thus, although the deceiving and deceived material senses would argue that there is a likeness between the counterfeit dollar bill and the genuine, the truth is that they are diametrical opposites. The genuine dollar bill is something; the counterfeit is nothing. The genuine is good; the counterfeit is bad. The genuine is a real dollar bill; the counterfeit is so unreal that it is no dollar bill at all. It has no legitimate existence, and therefore it is ruthlessly destroyed, so that even material sense, which is inclined to believe somewhat in its reality, sees it no more. The genuine dollar bill has value, but no one believes that one hundred cents of real value has disappeared when the counterfeit dollar is no more; no one experiences even a sense of loss except the unfortunate person who was deluded into believing that he possessed a dollar when he had only a counterfeit. Even he has suffered no real loss, for his false belief about the worth of the counterfeit could not give it actual value.

Furthermore, it is seen that together with the sense of deception inherent in the word counterfeit there is also the meaning of oppositeness to, in quality and nature. That Mrs. Eddy recognized this and included it in her concept of the word, is indicated in the following quotation from the definition of Adam: "Life's counterfeit, which ultimates in death; the opposite of Love, called hate" (Science and Health, p. 580). It is plain that a counterfeit of life, which ultimates in death, is the opposite of that Life which is eternal; and the added explanation of the counterfeit as "the opposite of Love, called hate," makes the point still plainer. Therefore, when Mrs. Eddy declares that "the visible universe and material man are the poor counterfeits of the invisible universe and spiritual man," she is stating in unmistakable and comprehensive terms the eternal truth that any resemblance which material sense may argue as existing between "the visible universe and material man" and "the invisible universe and spiritual man," is inherently deceptive and illusionary; that in reality the two are diametrical opposites in nature and quality—the one bad, the other good; the one causeless and without principle, the other the eternal effect of the creative, intelligent, divine Principle called God.

The efforts of material sense to instill and perpetuate a pseudo-science of correspondences between the illusions of mortal belief and the realities of spiritual creation are as insistent as its efforts to maintain the reality of matter itself. But no one who understands Mrs. Eddy's use of the word counterfeit can for a moment be led astray by so false an argument, however plausible or satisfactory it may seem to be at its first presentation. Its plausibility is superficiality; its satisfaction is subtlety. When Mrs. Eddy says counterfeit, she means counterfeit; she never means counterpart. She is always consistent with the proposition definitely stated in the following quotation: "Anatomy and theology reject the divine Principle which produces harmonious man, and deal—the one wholly, the other primarily—with matter, calling that man which is not the counterpart, but the counterfeit, of God's man" (Science and Health, p. 148).

The relation which the beliefs of matter—"the visible universe and material man"—bear to the ideas of Spirit—"the invisible universe and spiritual man"—is the relation which darkness bears to light, a negative to a positive, an absence to a presence. One would never dream of studying darkness in order to learn about light. On the contrary, one knows that as he learns the nature and laws of light he gains greater and greater dominion over darkness; he realizes that he might study darkness forever and the only result would be the tragedy of losing even the little light that he has, as the fishes of Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, are said to have lost their sense of sight through constant living in the dark. So also one might investigate, analyze, and explore "the visible universe and material man" throughout the ages (and material so-called science has committed this awful blunder) and find not a hint of reality.

The wise Christian Scientist does not waste his time with counterfeits in his pursuit of the genuine. He is endeavoring to reach beyond the illusions of sense and grasp to some extent the realities of Spirit. He is learning what it means to be the man of God's creating—to be intelligent, loving, to "overcome evil with good." He is experiencing the notable achievement that his clearer perception of spiritual reality does not spoil him for practical human living, does not make him impatient or out of tune even with "the visible universe and material man," but enables him to understand the one and to help the other more effectually than he ever could before. Because he knows that matter is the counterfeit of Spirit, he, like the expert handler of money, is consistently lessening the danger to himself and others of having the unreal foisted upon him as the real.

On Guard

LAURA DUNBAR HAGARTY

EXPERIENCE proves the wisdom of becoming so familiar with the works of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science that incorrect teaching is at once detected. Frequently there circulates in attractive epigrammatic or antithetic form a decidedly misleading thought, but because of its rhythmic sound and the semblance of truth it announces, it readily becomes current, eclipsing in popular use the safe utterances of absolute good.

"You do not have to fight; you do not have to struggle; you only have to know," is one offender. Nowhere in Mrs. Eddy's life or writings is there any warrant for the enervating assertion that we do not have to struggle, or to be on guard. On the contrary, we find on page 4 of Science and Health this anticipation of continuous warfare: "The habitual struggle to be always good is unceasing prayer." Indeed a glance at the Concordance to Science and Health shows that under the headings "struggle," "striving," "overcoming," "warfare," and synonymous terms, our Leader enforces over and over again the fact that spiritual ascendancy is won only by supreme effort, and in this position she is entirely Scriptural. Both the Old and the New Testament abound in biographic and didactic accounts of the struggles made by mankind to remain true to God, divine Truth.

In Israelitish and Judaic history, industrial, political, civil, and religious liberty was won by mighty effort. An intimate acquaintance with the lives of the most distinguished leaders among the children of Israel forces the conclusion that attainment meant striving against the powers of evil. Records of conspicuous individual godliness among the rank and file of the people offer evidence that achievement was the result of virile endeavor. Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Nehemiah, Daniel, proved that consecration to God means constant watchfulness and effort. Deborah, Hannah, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego confirmed the wisdom of the apostolic injunction to "fight the good fight of faith."

Above all else, the example and the words of the Master are conclusive. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate," "Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation," "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," are his injunctions. From early boyhood, as shown in his courageous debate with the doctors of the law, until his final triumphant demonstration over all evil, Jesus the Christ exemplified the fact that to serve God involves not only work but warfare.

Assertions which apparently are so well balanced and therefore so invitingly quotable as, "You do not have to fight; you do not have to struggle; you only have to know," accomplish their end by making the recipient satisfied to relax in his mental work. No harm whatever would result if "knowing" always came without any preliminary clearing away of erroneous concepts, but the fullest "knowing" is the child of persistent, consecrated activity directed toward a fuller understanding of God. Knowing does not come to humanity as do the sunbeams, entirely unsought. Unquestionably there are times when knowing comes like Pentecostal light, on occasions when the receiver is not aware of any special effort on his own part to bring about the desideratum. Such times, however, do not represent the daily experience of the seeker for Truth.

Those who are fighting error as something may need to be reassured that knowing the truth about God and about themselves is all that is necessary. For this purpose our Leader has abundantly covered the ground in absolutely scientific phrase which carries with it no element that must subsequently be unlearned. For instance, on page 567 of Science and Health she says: "The Gabriel of His presence has no contests. To infinite, ever-present Love, all is Love, and there is no error, no sin, sickness, nor death." Christian Science practitioners and those who testify at Wednesday evening meetings would run no risk of adulterating pure metaphysics in this respect if they carefully scrutinized each current saying before giving it wings, and then searched Mrs. Eddy's writings for the exact sentence which fits the case. In this connection it is interesting to note that masters of English are beginning to acknowledge that Mrs. Eddy's writings contain examples of the best English prose style. It is not necessary, therefore, for the Christian Scientist to turn to other authors for superior modes of expressing spiritual teaching.

Digitized by Google

Especially noteworthy is the fact that our Leader's writings invariably direct thought to the Principle of all healing, —to God Himself; and thus she gives the seeker or learner a working basis upon which to build. If the Christian Scientist would build solidly, he must be on guard against the allurements of lethargy or apathy. On page 2 of her Message to The Mother Church for June, 1900, Mrs. Eddy says, "The song of Christian Science is, 'Work—work—work—watch and pray.' "

Brief, Clear, and Effective Testimony

ESTHER E. WATSON

IN thinking upon the giving of testimonies it has often seemed better to give more prominence to the operation of good in human consciousness, rather than to dwell too much on error's ways and works. Every one who has received help in Christian Science surely has experienced a deep sense of gratitude and an earnest desire to express it, not only to friends but at the weekly testimony meetings; yet it seems to be quite a common experience to have arguments come to us in the way of reasons why we shall not or can not give expression to our gratitude. Error suggests that we cannot talk so well as some others, or that our demonstration is not sufficiently great to be of interest, when in fact any and all excuses that come to us for not giving our testimony are but attempts to hinder us from glorifying God.

When a person wishes to testify as to what divine Truth has done for him or her, it is well to consider whether it is immortal Mind or mortal mind which is the impelling force. If we know that we of ourselves can do nothing, but that it is God who worketh in us "both to will and to do of his good pleasure," then the truth will be voiced in an effective manner.

We are reminded that some of the most wonderful of Jesus' demonstrations of healing have been told in a very brief way, yet clearly and effectively; such as that of the widow's son being raised from the dead, where a few verses tell the story. The account closes with these words: "There came a fear on all: and they glorified God." Again we read that "great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them: insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel." The wonderful story of the healing by Peter and John of the man at the gate Beautiful is told in a few verses, and we read that the man expressed his gratitude by entering "with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God."

By relating too much in the way of detail our testimony is apt to have the opposite effect from that which is intended, for thereby we seem to admit to ourselves, as well as impress upon the thought of others, that the error or falsity was real and something to be known and felt, when the only effect a testimony should have is to prove to all that we have been able through the teachings of Christian Science to demonstrate that God and His idea alone constitute reality and are all there is to be known.

To make a testimony brief yet effective, we may well think upon the words of St. Paul, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Then if we let this Mind govern us it will express itself, and our testimony will be brief in the statement of facts, clear in the understanding that God is the only power, and effective in its mission to the stranger within our gates and to all mankind.

["The Infinite Resources of God"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Aug. 27, 1917]

Mrs. Eddy, when she wrote on page 330 of Science and Health, "God is infinite, the only Life, substance, Spirit, or Soul, the only intelligence of the universe, including man," stated the basis from which Christian Science demonstrates that the resources of God are unlimited. The material world is quite oblivious to the fact. Look where one may, there is to be found the belief in limitation. Sometimes it takes the form of ill health, at another time it assumes the guise of poverty, while it frequently masquerades in the garment of evil, that darkened mentality which is simply the belief that good is not omnipresent.

Now Christian Science has come to enlighten mankind as to the true nature of God. Through knowledge of the truth which it reveals the sense of limitation will be broken for human beings and the infinite resources of God become available for them. To those who are oblivious to the true status of man, the position is analogous to the case of a man in bodily starvation who is living beside a locked room full of every provision suitable for human sustenance, with the key of the room in his possession, but who cannot open the door because he thinks the key has been lost. That is how it stands with every man who believes he is unable to avail himself of the abundance of good which it is in the power of God to bestow. He stands in gloom surrounded by the infinite riches of Spirit, as completely shut out from the use of them, through material belief, as if they were entirely locked off from his reach or infinitely removed from his grasp.

What, then, is the error which seems to produce the effect just described? It is the belief that God is not infinite in every one of the attributes of His being. Christian Science insists on the truth of the allness of God. Christian Science holds that no progress worth the name can possibly be made by mankind toward the utilization of the resources of God, until they have obtained a grasp of the divine nature as "the only Life, substance, Spirit, or Soul." God, Christian Science says, is the only real presence, power, or substance; and this being so, there exists no real material presence, power, or substance. Matter is unreal because Spirit is infinite; so-called matter is a false sense of reality, an erroneous belief of substance where substance is not.

It will be seen that Christian Science altogether contradicts what are called the material senses. It gives them a flat denial. It likens their testimony to the illusion of a dream. It states unequivocally that the human mind gives matter all the presence and power it seemingly has, and that this so-called mind suffers by the recoiling of its own false beliefs upon itself. So long as the human mind hypothesizes matter as reality it will continue to believe in material resources, and the spiritual resources of God will remain hidden and seemingly obscure.

To Jesus the Christ the unlimited resources of God were available. They sustained him for forty days in the wilderness. He drew upon them liberally when he fed the multitude who had followed him to hear his message. It was from the same unlimited source he obtained the understanding of spiritual law which enabled him to heal the most aggravated cases of disease which sought his aid, and to walk upon the face of the waters of the Sea of Galilee. Knowing the allness of God as he did, knowing the nothingness of matter as he did, Jesus could say to those about him: "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Christian Science inspires with the same faith that the Master possessed, because it reveals the truth he so wonderfully set forth.

When a man prays the prayer of spiritual understanding, as Christian Science teaches him, he strives to realize the allness of Spirit, strives to make clear to himself that because of the allness of God, Spirit is the only real substance in existence, and that it is available at all times everywhere. As he does this, and precisely as he does this, he rises above the false sense of material substance and begins to understand the words of Jesus just quoted. It is not a question of asking God to bestow His spiritual blessings, but of a man so understanding the true nature of God and spiritual man as to be able to avail himself of those blessings. How clearly did Mrs. Eddy see this when she wrote, "Soul has infinite resources with which to bless mankind, and happiness would be more readily attained and would be more secure in our keeping, if sought in Soul" (Science and Health, p. 60).

But how, it may be asked, can the resources of God, Spirit, meet the needs of human beings materially? What happens to human sense is that as a human being gains a knowledge of God as Spirit, and as fear is removed by this knowledge, he becomes freer, throws off the belief of limitation which is solely a material conception of things, and finds himself obtaining an increased sense of possession which takes the form of meeting his human needs. No one who has grasped to any extent the teachings of Christian Science has failed to prove for himself the truth of the saying of Jesus, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

The resources of God are not limited in any way. Just as they supply the so-called material needs of the passing day, they are present to raise up the sick and to comfort those who mourn. And how? By the same mental process in every case. A sick person believes himself the victim of material law. He learns through Christian Science of the truth of being, the allness of Spirit and spiritual law; and as he does so, the material beliefs which bind him are broken and he obtains a better sense of health. Similarly with the disconsolate. Good is unlimited. Good never can be destroyed or lost or injured at any time. All that ever can perish is a finite sense of things, or false material consciousness. No limit can be put to the resources of God, because God is infinite Love.

A truth seeker is one whose aim is to find that which is true. Obviously, such a person needs to be sincere, open-minded, and above all disinclined to prejudge. An insincere, narrow-minded, prejudiced person could never find the truth, because he would be prevented by his own mental darkness from finding the way out into the light. This may explain why many of the ideas that have blessed mankind have come to light in unexpected ways, outside the beaten paths of popular opinion and self-satisfied orthodox teachings.

I am led to refer to this matter because of an article headed "Christian Science," the author of which displayed a surprising unfamiliarity with and prejudice toward the teachings of Christian Science. In every instance he misrepresented the subject. Those readers who admire sound argument—and I am sure they are many—must have been impressed by the absence of it in the article referred to. To refer to a uniformly happy, healthy, law-abiding body of people as "neurotic, hysterical, religious epileptics" indicates anything but a truth seeking attitude.

The God of Christian Science is Principle. The aim of Christian Science, as taught by Mrs. Eddy in Science and Health, is to teach mortals to mold their thoughts and deeds so as to coincide with this perfect model. In no other way, Christian Science declares, can mortals become like Principle, or Godlike.

[Carl E. Herring in The Bee, Omaha, Neb.]

In The Bee a critic pertinently suggests that if the Bible is its own best interpreter, why Science and Health? We answer that Science and Health brings us back to the spiritual meaning of the Bible from which the plethora of commentaries and apologetics has sidetracked us. At present we stagger under the weight of creeds and dogmas and need a guide and some inducement to lead us back to the religion taught and exemplified by Jesus of Nazareth.

Our critic further says that no one was ever converted to Christian Science simply by reading the Bible. Surely he must have overlooked the fact that Mrs. Eddy was converted to Christian Science through reading the Bible, and we will not entertain the thought that our critic means to suggest that Mrs. Eddy was not thoroughly converted.

The average sermon, as we all know, starts with a text and uses it as a point of departure. A Christian Science service, on the contrary, starts with the Bible and uses it throughout the entire service. Probably no body of religious people study the Bible more than do Christian Scientists.

There is no copyright on salvation, and Christian Science has sufficiently shown its ability to survive and to meet the needs of humanity, so that it would seem now to be the part of wisdom to put up the hammer and make use of at least the fundamentals of this religion which has regenerated so many lives.

[Rose A. Lilly in Jackson (Mich.) Patriot]

An article appeared in the Patriot entitled "You Get What You Think." The fair, open-minded way in which the writer endeavored to point out the good in Christian Science is to be commended. In teaching the allness of Mind and the consequent nothingness of its opposite, matter, Christian Science makes a clear distinction between the divine Mind, or God, and the so-called mortal mind. In other words, it is the Mind which was in Christ Jesus, and not the mortal or "carnal" mind, which Paul says is "enmity against God," to which Mrs. Eddy refers on page 468 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," where she says, "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all." Christian Scientists understand that to the extent that they come into possession of the Mind of Christ and intelligently put off or reject the carnal mind and its testimony, they demonstrate that matter and its attendant ills are unreal, since matter is nothing but mortal mind or human thought objectified.

Christian Science does not deny that disease exists as a false belief of mortal mind. However, it does deny that disease exists as a reality of God's creation, and proceeds in the manner taught and demonstrated by Jesus the Christ to eliminate it from human experience. That Christian Science healing is based upon a clear understanding and application of the words and works of the Master is proved by the fact that through its ministrations sickness and disease, both functional and organic, are being permanently overcome in the manner prescribed by him and without resort to material means. It would be useless to attempt to convince hundreds and thousands of good people who have been raised from beds of suffering by Christian Science after having exhausted all material means in search for health that they need anything material as a healing agency. They have learned from experience the truth of Mrs. Eddy's words on page 67 of

Science and Health, "Grace and Truth are potent beyond all other means and methods."

Had the great Physician believed that some diseases were the result of material and others of mental causes, and that some were harder to heal than others, he would have placed himself on a level with those he would help and thus would have limited the power of God through whom the healing works were accomplished. Apparently it took no greater effort on his part to heal the man "which had a spirit of an unclean devil" than it did to restore whole the impotent man "which had an infirmity thirty and eight years" in the sheep market at Jerusalem.

On page 476 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy gives a concise statement of the method employed by Jesus in all of his healing work. She says: "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

Christian Science teaches that all disease, whatever its name or nature, results from a misunderstanding of God and the real man of His creating. In the Bible we read, "All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made." In this light it is seen that all of the ills which appear to the material senses to be real and to have a material or a mental cause are without God-given authority and are therefore capable of being destroyed by a correct understanding and application of God and His spiritual creation.

[W. Stuart Booth in Greeley (Col.) Tribune]

When the most scientific and Christian man of all time, Christ Jesus, went about doing good,—healing the sick, freeing the sin-bound, and comforting the sorrowing,—he was maligned, because the divine Principle of his teaching and practice was not understood. Since Christian Science is but the restatement of primitive Christianity it is not surprising that the adherents of scholastic theology should oppose its advance by misrepresentation and calumny.

It is as easy and also as unavailing to declare that Christian Science is neither Christian nor scientific as it was for those who knew no better to claim that the earth was not round. The practice of Christian Science is nothing other than "following Christ's precepts and example," which is Webster's definition of Christian, and this agrees exactly with the gauge furnished by the Master when he said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Critics of Christian Science are fond of quoting Paul's warning to Timothy to beware of "science falsely so called," but they evidently do not see that this very quotation directly implies Paul's recognition of true science or exact knowledge of God, Truth, which he in other places strongly urges upon all Christians. Both the words and the works of Jesus show that he possessed exact or scientific knowledge of Truth and spiritual law; hence it was this same scientific knowledge that Paul enjoined when he wrote, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Christian Science enables its students to prove that this command can be obeyed and proven in the most practical ways to-day as it was two thousand years ago.

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 354) Mrs. Eddy writes: "The opponents of divine Science must be charitable, if they would be Christian. If the letter of Christian Science appears inconsistent, they should gain the spiritual meaning of Christian Science, and then the ambiguity will vanish."

An article in an issue of the Nordisk Tidende illustrates the contradictory nature of the opposition to Christian Science. In this instance the critic said, "It is to no purpose to say that medical treatment was of no benefit in this or that case;" yet he himself offered this very argument against Christian Science. In fact, this religion has been proved to be not only safer but more reliable than material medicine as a cure for disease. Moreover, it is a remedy and the Christian remedy for both disease and sin. This has been proved in the lives of unnumbered thousands who are now its adherents.

When this critic said that the Christian Science movement is an outcome of people's bias against science, he betrayed an ignorance of both the teaching and the history of Christian Science. The facts are that this religion is the direct outcome of original Christianity. It is the "Spirit of truth" which Christ Jesus foretold and promised. Christian Science is related to original Christianity as original Christianity was related to Judaism. The later religion grew out of the earlier, and became its fulfillment.

The woeful fear expressed by this critic that the general adoption of Christian Science would mean the loss of the medical knowledge which has accumulated for ages, is the same kind of fear that has been expressed whenever a better way of doing anything has been discovered. The knowledge of how to do things by manual labor has accumulated for ages, but this is no reason why mechanical discoveries should not be adopted. Even the fear that the adoption of machinery would mean a loss to laborers has proved to be groundless. The very men whose labor was displaced by the machinery learned to use it, and were benefited by its adoption. In like manner, the general adoption of Christian Science will be of universal benefit, and in the end it will be seen that no person and no legitimate interest will be harmed by it.

In this connection it should be remembered that medical lore is not a science in the full sense of this term. This fact has been often admitted by eminent members of the medical profession. Thus, Professor Henle of Germany said: "Medical science at all times has been a medley of empirically acquired facts and theoretical observation, and is so likely to remain." Similarly, the great English surgeon, Thomas Smith, F.R.C.S., said, "Medicine as a whole, as it comes to us, has none of the exact laws of science, nor are its doctrines capable of demonstration."

Love Unchanging

EDITH L. PERKINS

Hush, little one.
'Tis but a passing dream that makes thee weep;
Thy mother's here, and watch o'er thee doth keep,— Hush, little one.

Rest, tired heart.
What makes thee grieve is but a groundless fear;
God changeth not, His arms are ever near,—
Rest, tired heart.

Rest, weary world.
E'en while thou criest that the battle's long
Love's changeless law is righting every wrong,—
Rest, weary world.

Economy

IN theology the word economy is used to mean a dispensation or distinct era under divine government. For example, what is termed the legal era of divine economy is that period which follows the giving of the law to the Hebrew people wherein their national prophets were interpreters. Following that came the postlegal era, when national bounds were transcended because by the appearing of the Christ a universal kingdom began, and "the law and the prophets" were superseded by the demonstration which fulfilled both law and prophecy. With the discovery of Christian Science there came a new era, distinguished by renewed demonstration of the reality of good, concerning which Mrs. Eddy says: "To the physical senses, the strict demands of Christian Science seem peremptory; but mortals are hastening to learn that Life is God, good, and that evil has in reality neither place nor power in the human or the divine economy" (Science and Health, p. 327).

This use of the word economy to indicate the regulation of human affairs by the divine government might very well be regarded more thoughtfully. In the ordinary way of thinking the word economy has unpleasant sound and meaning to the man who wrongly thinks that if he must economize he will then be defrauded of legitimate good in some way, and for that reason does not open his life to the benefit of bringing his affairs into true order. The original meaning of the word economy is literally and exactly household management. This implies the procuring of needed supplies and making payment therefor duly, so that the word early connected itself with disbursements. Not the wise and liberal spender, but the penurious one, came in time to be accounted economical, when in truth the penurious standard was an entirely wrong one.

In our Manual (Article XXIV, Sect. 5) this guidance is given: "God requires wisdom, economy, and brotherly love to characterize all the proceedings of the members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist." Allowing ourselves to be taught the meaning of words by Mrs. Eddy, we first learn that economy is associated with wisdom and brotherly love. It may then be readily seen that the motive, measure, and method usually implied cannot be correct. When his motive is fear, the measure money, and the method limitation, the would-be economical person does not find joy in his household management. If one makes money the measure of economies it usually leads to losses, since money itself as a standard is by no means inflexible, like the bronze standard of length fixed in solid stone whereby drapers may test their yardsticks. Money as a measure of value is changeable and unreliable; a better measure is use. The wise householder must determine what is needed for use, and the fulfillment of actual use and service determines the value of what is paid for.

The motive in economy ought not to be dread of extravagance, anxiety regarding criticism, or fear of loss. Love for those included within the household should be the purpose transcending all others and be the justification for every economy. And the method should never work out any deprivation, because economy tends always to enrichment, not to limitation. False economy may lead a householder to use a wrong measure and to be misled by cheapness, to the extent, for example, of procuring adulterated food or an imitation product which has no value in use. Wisdom and love, however, always correct the false view, and if under their guidance there be fewer wandering desires, the need which is legitimate is then more readily satisfied, and joy, gratitude, and peace result in the home. How comforting it is to learn what our Leader says on page 203 of Miscellany: "Goodness and philanthropy begin with work and never stop working. All that is worth reckoning is what we do, and the best of everything is not too good, but is economy and riches."

Christian Science not Debatable

THE association of the word Science with Christianity produces surprise when first heard. The general assumption seems to be that Christianity is a matter of faith and faith an uncertain and more or less optional condition of mind, which may or may not correspond with the facts of being. Therefore when Mrs. Eddy first enunciated the fact that Christianity is scientific and not really subject to blind belief at all, she startled the thinkers who were willing to listen to her, doubtless giving many an earnest seeker after truth a first ray of genuine hope. Still the habit of treating theology as a belief instead of as a science persists among mortals, largely because a belief makes small demands upon life and conduct, while science, being accurate, must be obeyed if it is to be applied at all.

A science is not debatable, that is, it is not open to question. It must be unimpeachable in order to be science at all. A debate as generally organized is an oratorical contest in which an affirmative declaration is made and maintained by one side and disputed by the other. Such an affirmative declaration invites debate, and this virtually admits that there is a negative side. On the other hand, in the science of mathematics the multiplication table is not debatable because it is scientific, that is, it is based on accurate, ascertained knowledge. This is the nature of Christian Science. It may prove unacceptable to those who are indulging in certain habits of thought, but its teachings cannot be successfully disputed, and the attempt to do so should not even be made. It is founded upon spiritual forces which silence all argument antagonistic to Truth. The demonstration of the healing of the sick and the saving of the sinner by Christian Science answers the would-be debater with irrefutable facts, proving this Science as true to-day as it was when Jesus cited his works to the disciples of John the Baptist in proof of his Messiahship.

It is not without reason that the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, contains the following by-law: "A member of this Church shall not debate on Christian Science in public debating assemblies, without the consent of the Board of Directors" (Art. X, Sect. 1). On page 1 of "Rudimental Divine Science," in answer to the question, "How would you define Christian Science?" Mrs. Eddy says, "As the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony." Evidently "the law of God" cannot be debated, and to attempt to dispute it would be courting inevitable disaster.

While the supposititious sciences upon which personal sense relies for its continuance are constantly shifting, Christian Science remains to-day exactly as it was when discovered in 1866, an immutable law of Truth. Never more than at this hour has the need for stable, steadfast reliance upon God been made manifest. Physical force is destroying itself. The most elaborate machinery for the destruction of others turns upon itself. The efficiency of mortal man carried to its extreme proves to be a house divided against itself. The attenuation of matter into mental forces of evil only carries the carnal mind nearer the point of annihilation. But while this process of exposure hurries to its culmination, Christian Science rests upon the sure basis of God as Principle, immovable and serene. It is cause for deep gratitude that though the heavens seem to fall this Science endures undisturbed.

It would be difficult to find any phase of art or science, any department of church or state, or any aspect of social, political, or economic life which has not been affected by the world war. Religious belief especially has been put to the test by those who face death on the battle field. The demand for a religion which is scientific is insistent on the part of those who need divine protection. The stock arguments of conventional theology no longer satisfy, because they are based upon blind belief and not upon Science. Under the pressure of pitiless forces the soldier at the front, the sailor on his watch, and the relations they leave behind are pondering about Spirit and Spirit's manifestation. They gladly hear the news that the unseen good is not imaginary and the invisible power of God not fictitious, but mighty "to the pulling down of strong holds." At the thought of this a great burden rolls from their shoulders, spontaneous joy wells up in their hearts. Behold whatever earthly hopes may perish or human standards trail in the dust, "the law of God," Christian Science, remains inviolate, beyond the reach of dispute and debate, instantaneously available and divinely compassionate.

Adaptation

A PROMINENT educator once said that a very important element of progress is adaptation, or the faculty to adjust one's self to changed conditions. This faculty is really indispensable to growth, and implies a ready response to the overturning of all things around us on the human plane until the perfect, divine idea is expressed. We may remember that St. Paul once said, "I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry." Then follows the secret as to how this may be accomplished: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

It is well to remember that all growing things must adapt themselves in a very vital way to their surroundings. Dead things make no response to this law of growth. The stone may seem to increase in size but it does not grow; whereas all things which reflect Life do so, for, as our Leader tells us on page 520 of Science and Health, "growth is the eternal mandate of Mind." It is therefore our high privilege to respond to this mandate and to find the operation of the law of Love, through which "all things work together for good to them that love God." This law of adaptation is wonderfully illustrated in the whole earthly experience of Moses. Owing to the hard vicissitudes of the time, he was separated from his earthly parents, who doubtless desired above all else to have him taught what they themselves knew about God and His law; but for many years it seemed as if these hopes were being entirely frustrated. The young child was taken to the home of a heathen princess and received his early training in ways which appeared to lead far away from the pure monotheism of the Hebrew patriarchs.

For a season Moses seemed to enjoy without question the splendors of the Egyptian court, but the time came when the spiritual idea of manhood with all that this implies rose up in protest against cruelty and wrong, and so we find him a homeless wanderer, and then a humble shepherd tending sheep in the wilderness. That he had undoubtedly learned the lesson of adaptation, which makes every lesser thing subservient to the one great purpose of life, is evident throughout the entire record of Moses' experience. Once indeed we find him hesitating, when he was bidden to return to Egypt in order to be the liberator and leader of his people on their way to the promised land, but he was soon obedient to the divine behest. The story is so well known to all students of the Bible that it need not be repeated, but there is distinct evidence that Moses never ceased to adapt himself to the changing conditions around him and thus was constantly responsive to the law of growth. We read that when he was an hundred and twenty years of age "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated," and in the psalms we are told that God "made known his ways unto Moses."

In the history of the Christian Science movement we have had ample opportunity to adapt ourselves to the changes which have so quickly followed each other in obedience to the spiritual law of growth. In the early days of the movement it seemed necessary for a time to have sermons prepared by workers throughout the field until the divine purpose should become clear to our inspired Leader, and her followers ready to respond to it. The forward step in this direction meant the Lesson-Sermon for the entire field, with readers instead of preachers. Then came another demand for adaptation when those who had served as readers three years or longer were called upon to give up this office to others. In some few instances there were murmurings on the part of those who failed to see that the law of growth was at work, and to the extent that this mistaken view was indulged the great blessing which always comes to ready obedience was temporarily missed. Before long, however, the reason for the change became apparent and the reasonableness of the demand universally recognized.

It is surely clear that we need to adapt ourselves readily to the changes which are constantly going on in the world around us. Many of these changes may to our human sense seem to be grievous, but they will become gladsome if we are ready to learn the lessons of the hour. There is no lack on the divine side, and we are assured in the inspired words of Science and Health (p. 13) that "Love is impartial and universal in its adaptation and bestowals." It remains with us to rouse ourselves, that we may never miss the good which Love and wisdom has for us at every step of the way.

Current Notes

HONOLULU, HAWAII.—An undertaking of particular interest is the construction of an edifice for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Honolulu, Hawaii, the ground of which was broken during the first part of the month of June, 1917. During July, 1916, an architect was requested to furnish preliminary sketches and estimates for a church building to cost approximately forty thousand dollars. These sketches were approved by the building committee, and in November of that year the architect was instructed to prepare complete working drawings and specifications. Reputable local contractors were invited to submit estimates, and the lowest figure was sixty thousand dollars. On the recommendation of the architect the contract was awarded to the lowest bidder on the percentage basis. What makes the project particularly noteworthy is the fact that the progressive construction of the edifice is carried on by unsolicited subscription to the building fund, and the church membership is promoting every effort toward keeping financial pace with the structure. On the morning of July 24, 1917, the simple ceremony of laying the corner stone took place. The auditorium will have a seating capacity of eight hundred people.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—A new Christian Science church has been formed in San Francisco. It is Eighth Church of Christ, Scientist, and will hold services in National Hall, 1975 Mission Street, for the first time to-morrow morning [Aug. 12]. National Hall has been occupied for several years past by the congregation of Second Church of Christ, Scientist; but with the growth of this church a new edifice was built at Dolores and Cumberland Streets, into which Second Church moved a month or so ago. A part of the congregation of Second Church will be taken over by Eighth Church.—San Francisco Examiner.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, AND THOMASVILLE, GA.—A memorial fund of one million dollars, with a total annual income in excess of sixty thousand dollars, to be known as the "Ellen Garretson Wade memorial fund," has been established in accordance with the terms of Mrs. Wade's will. Among the organizations benefiting are: Christian Science Society of Thomasville, Ga., nine hundred dollars; First Church of Christ, Scientist, Cleveland, thirty-one hundred dollars.

The Lectures

NAMPA, IDAHO (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by the Rev. Gates E. M. Young, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, who said in part:—

I am not a Christian Scientist; but may say that I am an unprejudiced seeker after the truth, and that I am willing to accept it from whatever source it may come. I am not inclined to adhere very strictly to any one school of thought, especially in so far as that school may have written arbitrary theories or creeds, but claim the right and freedom of investigation. This may lay one open to the charge of being a freethinker, but with that great scientist, Lord Kelvin, I rather think it is true that if one will think seriously enough and hard enough, he will be brought to the recognition of God. "And here lies the foundation of all religion," the great scientist said.

We are living in an age which demands fearless thinking. Freedom in government, in science, and in religion is impossible so long as we decline to assume the pressing responsibility of serious thought; and we are slaves if we think only in terms of traditional creeds. Each age brings its own discoveries, which cannot be ignored; and every generation has its prophets, who ask for an audience. Eternity is here. The world sojourns in its depths, and we live in its very heart. It is for us to realize the present and eternal reality of God. It is our task to come into an understanding of the reality of life. It is in this direction that we must seek for truth; and it is the truth that will make us free. Why should we think it impossible to make this discovery, or think it unreasonable to come into harmony with the purposes of God?

CHICAGO, ILL. (Twelfth Church).—Clarence W. Chadwick, lecturer; introduced by W. C. Strauss, who said in part:—

You have been invited to listen to a lecture on Christian Science, wherewith we hope to bring a ray of light into some darkened life, to tell the sick, the poverty stricken, and the hungering heart, that there is in Christian Science a positive cure for every ill "that flesh is heir to." Some two thousand years ago Christ Jesus said, or rather commanded his disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." He also gave the command, "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give." This, my friends, is the essence of Christian Science. We believe in obeying all of the divine commands.

NUTLEY, N. J. (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by J. O. Powers, who said in part:—

Nearly two thousand years ago there lived a man so good, so great, so wise, so perfectly expressing the divine Spirit, that a large part of the civilized world worships him to-day almost as Deity itself. So far as is known, Jesus left no written word; but his deeds and sayings as reported by others have been a source of tremendous encouragement and inspiration ever since. By applying the power of Truth to apparent ills of every sort he, his students, and their successors revealed over and over again the inherent health and perfection of man. And yet so strong has been men's belief in their own weakness and imperfection that the very essence of Jesus' teaching—"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect"—is not generally regarded as really applying to the human race, and men have continued to accept limitation as their natural heritage.

In 1866 Mary Baker Eddy discovered the divine Principle of mental healing, and brought back to a world, self-committed to a sense of sin and suffering, this glorious message of right thinking and right being.

RACINE, WIS. (First Church).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by H. D. North, who said in part:—

Nearly two thousand years ago Pilate asked, "What is truth?" and the echo of that question has come down through all the centuries. Men have been looking for truth. Why? Because Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Then, too, men have been looking for freedom from the many bonds which have bound them. These are: first fear, and then follow sin, sickness, sorrow, suffering, pain, poverty, and all the evils "that flesh is heir to." Men have sought in many ways; much theorizing has been done, many creeds have been written, many sects formed; they have sought in mortal mind and matter, and have not found freedom. In our time one appeared whose ear was so attuned to the word and works of Jesus that she caught the import of that promise. Mrs. Eddy claimed it as her own by divine right as God's child, and accepted her freedom. She named her discovery Christian Science, and gave it to the world; and to-day hundreds of thousands all over the world are giving glad testimony to the power of Truth to make men free.—Journal-News.

LONG BEACH, CAL. (First Church).—Dr. Francis J. Fluno, lecturer; introduced by Albert M. Cheney, who said in part:—

The desire on the part of humanity is for peace, harmony, and rest. Centuries ago Christ Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." But mankind have been taught to believe that peace or heavenly rest can be attained only by first passing through "the valley of the shadow of death." In other words, the belief prevails that it is necessary for a person to die and go somewhere in order to enter the kingdom of heaven, or be in the presence of God.

About fifty years ago Mary Baker Eddy discovered Christian Science and gave her discovery to the world. It teaches that mankind does not have to die in order to attain this peace and rest; that God is Life; that heaven is a state of consciousness; and the very fact that man exists is proof of the presence of God.

WHEATON, ILL. (First Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by Alfred E. Waterman, who said in part:—

To those who have come seeking a knowledge of the truth which makes men free, Christian Science offers a key which unlocks the Scriptures, and brings the blessed assurance to all mankind that "with God all things are possible" and that "now is the day of salvation." Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Christian Science is opening the understanding, and enabling mankind to lay hold of the promises given in the Bible and to make them effective in the healing of sorrow and sickness and sin.

MINDEN, NEB. (Society).—William R. Rathvon, lecturer; introduced by Robert E. French, who said in part:—

Christian Science needs no defense; it stands upon Truth, which knows neither fear nor doubt, but reposes in the tranquillity of its own supreme majesty. That it is not understood by many is no proof that it is not true; that it has been misrepresented by some is but the history of all great truths; that it has been maligned by others is no more than were the teachings of the Master.—The Minden News.

Testimonies of Healing

Language fails when I attempt to tell of the many benefits which Christian Science has brought to me. While I did not seek it for health, that was found; for I found God, and where God is there health abounds. I did not seek it for strength, but found that also, for God is our strength. I did not expect to find happiness, but it was awaiting me, for I found that peace "which passeth all understanding."

Several years ago I commenced the study of Christian Science to see if it would lift me out of a condition of mental darkness bordering on nervous prostration, caused by the sudden and seemingly tragic death of a brother who was on his way to meet me. I turned to the Bible for consolation, but found none, for my former teaching had been so different concerning death that it held God responsible. Although I had been attending the Christian Science church about a year, I had not purchased the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, not knowing the storehouse of knowledge it is. I was advised to do so, and in less than a month this condition was lifted from me, a condition of sleepless nights and days of agony, of such chaos mentally that even the sunshine and flowers and the wonderful scenery of the country through which I was then traveling seemed to mock me.

From the time I realized my relationship to God my entire outlook on life was changed, and through this demonstration began the spiritual unfoldment of my family. My daughter, upon visiting our home and reading Science and Health with an open mind, was healed of a condition that physicians said would necessitate an operation, fear of which caused her to be a sufferer for a year and almost a physical wreck. She was permanently healed by reading the textbook.

My husband, who was a confirmed agnostic and never read the Bible, began to see "a great light," and purchased for himself the Bible and Science and Health, taking them with him on his trips. Through the study of these books he has experienced many cures. All desire for the social glass has gone; profanity and a hasty temper have been overcome, as well as chronic colds. He has been helped morally, mentally, and physically, and for these blessings he is now trying to show his appreciation in his daily life.

Some five years ago I was healed in one treatment of chronic bronchitis. Chronic throat trouble has been overcome, also terrible headaches, which left me prostrate for two or three days after each attack. For these healings I am most grateful, but above all for the good I can do to others, since our beloved Leader tells us in Science and Health, "The good you do and embody gives you the only power obtainable" (p. 192). I am sincerely grateful for the awakening that has come to me and mine through Christian Science, and am striving by my daily living to prove my gratitude.—VIRGINIA LEE HIGHT, Chicago, Ill.

I wish to express my thankfulness to God for all the good that has come to me through a better understanding of Him, made possible through the study of Christian Science. This teaching was first brought to my attention in 1897 by a friend who in his travels had heard of it and of the remarkable cures wrought by it, and who, being skeptical, had investigated the case of one who had been healed after the doctor had pronounced her incurable. On arriving home this friend told his wife what he had heard about Christian Science and what he had seen as a result of its practice. The wife remarked: "This seems to be a godsend. Go right over and tell this to our friend [giving my name], because a member of his family has been pronounced incurable by the doctors and he intends to take the patient to the same doctor you mentioned."

The result was that next day a letter was written to a Christian Science practitioner, asking for treatment. The practitioner wrote in reply that treatment would be given at once, and that we were to look to God alone for healing and were not to use any medicine or apply any material remedies. This was made very plain, and I am grateful that it was, for acute lung trouble was added to the diagnosis of an incurable disease and friends and neighbors proposed all kinds of remedies and different doctors; but all were refused, and threats of prosecution against me for not employing doctors and applying remedies fell on deaf ears. The practitioner's letters and the reading of the Bible helped us, and in a remarkably short time perfect healing was the result. The practitioner advised us to send to Boston for a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and when the book arrived an earnest study of it was begun at once. As a result I was completely healed of lung trouble, chronic stomach disorder, headaches, and other ailments supposed to have been inherited and for which medicine had been taken since childhood.

After this proof of the healing power of Christian Science we resolved that, no matter what others might think, Christian Science should be the only remedy employed in our home. There were no other Scientists in the town and county in which we lived, and many times our understanding of the truth was put to a severe test. Every temptation, however, to go back to medicine, every fear, and threats made because no material remedies were used for the children when sick, were put out of our thoughts. God, divine Love, was absolutely relied upon, and healing—often instantaneous—was the result. Colds, coughs, broken bones, toothache, earache, contusions, sprains, fevers, and other ailments that occur in a large family, were all overcome through Christian Science. Our eight children are now men and women, and all of them students of Christian Science.

To-day I rejoice that I am learning that man is God's idea and that man's unity with God is an established fact. In closing I wish to express my gratitude to the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy, through whose efforts all these blessings were made possible for me and mine.—JOHN A. DEADRICH, Oakland, Cal.

It is with a heart filled with love and gratitude that I give my testimony. Although I have been but a short time in Christian Science, during that brief period many blessings have come to me and mine, my mother and three sisters having also been greatly benefited since coming into Science. I did not turn to it for physical healing, but during my study of the Bible, and of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I have been entirely free from colds and eye trouble,—sties also were instantaneously destroyed when the truth was declared.

I am indeed very grateful for these healings, but more so for the peace of mind that has come to me through the understanding of what God really is. I have come to know that no matter in what difficulty we find ourselves, God is with us; His ever protecting care has been proven to me many times. A short time ago I attended a lecture which was given in Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, New York City. I had never been to the church before, and not being familiar with the neighborhood was somewhat confused on leaving the subway station. However, as I began to walk a feeling of protection came over me, and trusting in God, I let Him lead the way. And how lovingly I was guided!

Words cannot express my deep gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, who was pure enough and strong enough to bring to light this glorious truth. My greatest desire is to live up to Jesus' command, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—RUTH O. BIESENTHAL, New York, N. Y.

Because the help received from Christian Science has been mental and moral rather than physical, I have long delayed offering my testimony for publication; but I now gladly subscribe the following in the hope that some one of similar temperament may perhaps find interest in the experiences which taught me that "if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself."

I am deeply grateful for the health and happiness which Christian Science has brought to me, but much more so for the reconstruction of thought and character which has been taking place ever since this divine influence first touched my life. Even as a child I had an intense longing to make people happy; at home we were taught from our earliest days to love and help the poor, and the poor gradually became such an obsession with me that finally I really had no other interest or ambition than to help them. When I left school the longing to do something became intensified, and without stopping to consider if I was spiritually qualified for so high an ideal, I gave myself up to what is called "good works;" but I had a dissatisfied sense throughout that at best we were bringing only momentary gleams of sunshine into darkened lives and were not effecting any permanent or radical result.

After beginning to study Christian Science I saw quite clearly that our failure was due to the fact that we were dealing with effects, while leaving untouched the essential causes of human misery, and that Christian Science alone uncovers the cause of human wretchedness and destroys it. As a result, interest in my former pursuits and activities faded out and intrenched itself in Christian Science. Just as this teaching has healed other people of the belief that they were sick or sinful, so it healed me of the belief that I was personally good. I know that nothing but the relentless light of Truth shining into my consciousness could have revealed to me the selfishness, self-righteousness, and self-love lurking there.

It dawned upon me that instead of laboring to redeem others (according to my own extremely narrow and conventional concept of redemption), it was mine rather to seek my own redemption from a highly developed belief in the real existence of evil, and to learn from Christian Science how to become conscious of the reality of good, the omnipresence of divine Love. My old ideals had not vanished but were simply transformed, and were approaching practical and scientific attainment. However far distant the day, I knew that with patience and humility I should ultimately be privileged to be the means of bringing to others no mere evanescent dream of material happiness and prosperity, but the priceless gift of spiritual understanding that destroys sin and sickness and reveals the divine Principle of real being.

Looking back, it seems to me that the thing which after many years and countless struggles I have been brought to see most clearly is that a personal sense of material activity is mere vacuity, and that in one moment of absolute spiritual understanding there is more love, more self-sacrifice, and more real activity than in a lifetime of philanthropic endeavor based on materiality. Everything upon which I could expend material energy has gently dropped out of my life, and I have learned how to obey the divine command, "Be still, and know that I am God." Had it not been for Christian Science I feel sure I should still be laboring in the dark night of human endeavor, whereas I now know that "Christian Science silences human will, quiets fear with Truth and Love, and illustrates the unlabored motion of the divine energy in healing the sick" (Science and Health, p. 445).

Christian Science is teaching me what divine Love is, and how to love ceaselessly, impersonally, universally, divinely; consequently life has become to me a continuous unfoldment of joy. Above all, I am grateful for the fact that God is Love; and I am grateful for the life of Christ Jesus, the faithful witness to mankind of the love of God; also for the life of Mrs. Eddy, for the matchless courage and spirituality that enabled her to proclaim and demonstrate her discovery of the truth taught and practiced by Christ Jesus to an unbelieving and ungrateful world. I am likewise grateful to all the faithful Christian Scientists through whose lives the light of divine Love is steadily shining.

ALICE MURIEL TRIPP, Bedford, England.

It is with the greatest thankfulness to God and gratitude to Mrs. Eddy that I write this testimony as another proof that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." My parents were both deeply religious people, but still their understanding of God was of no help to them in time of sickness, for from childhood I was not strong. Fear for my throat and lungs began when I was about one year old, and at the age of five a fall down a flight of stairs, causing blindness for five weeks, left me weak and frail. At intervals for several years I was confined to the house with severe illnesses, beginning usually with colds, and twice the attacks were considered to be what is called quick consumption.

Through care and a great ambition to be doing, I rose above these conditions and managed to hold positions of responsibility. When about twenty-five years old I was injured in a railroad accident, as a result of which I suffered from a derangement for which I was treated weeks at a time, during a period of several years. Finally an operation was all that I had to look forward to for relief, and as this was the one thing I had strongly opposed, I spent many sleepless nights dreading what seemed to be inevitable.

While in the West, where I had gone in the hope of finding health through a change of climate, the blessed truths of Christian Science were offered for my acceptance. At first I did not see that they were applicable to my need, as the material view of life blinded me to the glorious fact of spiritual perfection in God, good; but in an hour of utter despair I turned to God, and with the assurance of help the thought came to me that He had healed others and would heal me. I was instantaneously helped, so that I returned to my position the following morning instead of going for the operation. For weeks I carried with me the thought of God's ever-presence, with the result that I gained in weight and manifested great improvement. Then I met a Christian Scientist, who advised me to have the help of a practitioner. I did so, and am very grateful for having been led so wisely that I saw the need for earnest study of Christian Science.

From the first I knew that what I read in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy was the truth. The book was read hungrily, and with constant reading the understanding of the allness of God and the nothingness of error became clear. The light of spiritual healing dawned on my consciousness, and joy and peace and health became my possession. For these and the many other blessings which have come to me during the past nine years through the understanding of the Science of being, I am most grateful.—AGNES ROBERTSON, Chicago, Ill.

In 1915 our baby had a very wonderful healing, and as my wish is to help others, I am happy to be able to write this account of it to be published, since I have read so many testimonies which have helped me. The child was supposedly born with an obstruction of the bowels, so that there was action only about three times a month. I used to go daily to a Christian Science practitioner, carrying the baby in my arms, and was sometimes so discouraged that I could not keep the tears back. Having been a trained nurse, I knew of many things to do for this trouble in a material way but very little in a scientific way, as at that time I was young in the study of Christian Science. But for the practitioner's daily talk and the wonderful encouragement she gave me, I would have given up.

The day the healing came I shall never forget. There had been no action of the bowels for nearly two weeks, and fear got hold of me; but on my way to the practitioner's home a sense of peace and great joy came over me. Upon reaching the house I told the practitioner of the situation, and she assured me that the baby was healed. Later in the day this was proved true, for there was perfectly normal action. Even while the baby was in bondage to this condition he had eaten and slept and was otherwise normal, and he is to-day a remarkably strong, healthy child. The coming of the second child was a beautiful demonstration of the truth, since in the old thought there were many reasons why such a condition was difficult. I did not go to a doctor at any time before or after the baby came, and got up the fourth day.

The Bible is becoming clearer to me all the time, and I do enjoy the literature, the daily study of the Lesson-Sermon, and the inspiring hymns. I am trying to love my neighbor as myself. Sensitiveness has been overcome, also a tendency to exaggerate. Resentment has yielded to the power of Truth, and a desire to do right is ever with me. I have been healed of rheumatism of the knees, bleeding hemorrhoids, sleeplessness, and many minor ailments.

I am most truly thankful to God, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy, who has given to us this wonderful Science.

MAYBELLE YOUNG SNOW, San Francisco, Cal.

I first became interested in Christian Science through the works of healing that were going on all about me, and a desire to know how they were accomplished. The study was taken up entirely from an intellectual standpoint, and my understanding came so slowly that I often wondered if it would be necessary for me to be healed of some physical ailment in order to gain it. My health being unusually good, that seemed a remote possibility; but I persevered, and other much needed healings came,—moral, mental, and financial.

Recently an opportunity came to test the efficacy of Christian Science in physical healing. In July, 1916, a bad case of skin disease developed. My slight understanding of Science enabled me to hold it in check, but the healing did not come, and it finally became evident that a practitioner should be consulted. I was in California at the time, and as I intended to return to Massachusetts in October I concluded to wait and consult a friend and practitioner in Boston. We were ten days traveling, with so little privacy that my daily study and reading were neglected. The result was an aggravation of the disease and a falling out of the hair which frightened me.

On reaching my destination in Massachusetts, I wrote to the Christian Science practitioner, describing my condition, and there was almost immediate relief. Within two weeks nearly all traces of the disease had disappeared, leaving only an unusual amount of dandruff. That soon disappeared, and within a month of the first treatment my scalp was in a perfectly healthy condition. My hair is now thicker than it has been since childhood. A great many years ago this same condition of the scalp had manifested itself, and was followed by a general breaking out all over the body, so that I was kept out of school for six months.

At the time I began to look into Christian Science I had no belief whatever in God, and did not believe many people had, if they would only admit it. Now I have an understanding of God, slight, but growing stronger every day because of daily proofs.—MISS M. E. FOLLETT, New York, N. Y.

For what Christian Science has done for me and mine I am more grateful than can be expressed in words, as it has been our only help for almost eleven years. I was healed of a disease said by the doctors to be incurable. It was claimed that even an operation could not heal me, although my family physician urged me to submit to one in the hope that it might give some relief. He said that without the operation I might live about eight months, but would be nothing but skin and bone, as I had been kept under an opiate for four months and was suffering constant pain.

That surely seemed the darkest hour before the dawn. I prayed to God that He would either take me out of all this suffering or send something to help me, as I had seven children to look after. My prayer was heard, for that afternoon a lady in our neighborhood asked if I would try Christian Science, and a practitioner was called. The healing was rather slow, but it has been permanent. Many other ailments have been overcome in my family, such as headache, toothache, lame back, sprained ankles, sore throat, liver trouble. I have learned that there is nothing impossible with God, and am grateful that evil is overcome with good more and more every day.—DORA SCHUETT, Saginaw, Mich.

As a member of a so-called liberal church I found myself in early life quite satisfied with its teachings; in fact I never doubted that it was the true religion until sorrows and trials came, and then I learned that it held no balm for the troubled heart. For a number of years I was organist in another orthodox church, and there also I found nothing that offered a solution to my problems. I became very much depressed in thought, and seeing that sooner or later all had laid upon them heavy burdens of grief, sickness, poverty, or other ills, I came to the conclusion that God, if there was a God, did not care for His children, and that death ended all. Although these beliefs were forced upon me, I was ashamed to have them and told no one, trying to maintain an outward show of happiness while despair reigned in my heart.

About seven years ago I was offered a position as organist in a Christian Science church and accepted it, little thinking I would find there an answer to all my questions, for I had laughed at Christian Science. In less than two months a change took place in my thought, for these people manifested so much of health and happiness that I decided to investigate, and my only fear was that Christian Science would prove to be as disappointing as the theories I had looked into when I found myself drifting into atheism. I sought a practitioner and told him I would like to know something about Christian Science. He asked, "What do you think about God?" I had condemned myself for not being able to believe in God, so with shame and reluctance I told him of my unbelief. He smiled reassuringly and said: "Do not be troubled about that. I was healed of the same thing." Immediately I felt a sense of relief, and for an hour I plied him with questions, being so impressed by his answers that treatment was asked for.

I had suffered from stomach trouble and nervousness for years, but through Christian Science I was healed in three days. While I was grateful for the physical help, it was as nothing compared with the joy that came to me as a result of the mental healing. Christian Science means more to me than anything else that has come into my life. I know it "meets the heart's great needs," for during the past few years a peace and happiness has been experienced that I had come to think would never be mine. There have been trials and testing times too, but when rightly met they have proven to be opportunities for growth and advancement.

CARRIE E. STOUGHTON, Erie, Pa.

With a heart full of gratitude I testify to what Christian Science has done for me. It is now about seven years since I suffered from a so-called incurable disease. I was taken to the hospital to be operated on, but after making the incision the doctors refused to operate and I was sent home to await the end. I remained in bed for five months, suffering untold agony, unable to eat or sleep, and was almost entirely under the influence of an opiate. This was my condition when Christian Science found me. Through the patience and spiritual understanding of a loving practitioner I was led to see clearly that all things are possible to God, so that after a week's treatment I discontinued the use of the opiate, and in three weeks was entirely healed and able to be up and around the house. I can truthfully say, and so can many others who knew of my terrible condition, that I was "born again."

The blessings which Christian Science has brought to my home are without number. I have enjoyed for almost seven years the spiritual understanding which enables me to realize that the Scriptural promises are mine to enjoy. One of my greatest joys is the knowledge that what God has done for me and for thousands of others He is willing and ready to do for all. My heart overflows with gratitude for our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and I pray to be more obedient to this beautiful truth which makes men free.

EMELINE J. FRASER, Minneapolis, Minn.

With grateful thanks for the many blessings which have been mine since first taking up the study of Christian Science, I would like to send the following testimony, hoping it may help some one to keep firmly hold of the power of divine Love. I first became interested in Christian Science about 1908, when living in Alameda, California, through seeing the change it had brought in a friend who had been suffering from a heavy loss. I took the book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and found it indeed a "pearl of great price."

At that time I was a physical and mental wreck, with the doctor's verdict hanging over me that I must submit to another operation, else I could not get well. I have never had the operation, and can testify to the great power of Love and Truth, which indeed lifts us above chaos and dark night. Many have been the ills overcome during these years. About two years ago in hanging a picture I fell, bruising my shin. It caused me much pain, but I paid little attention, as many other things seemed to come up. About two weeks later I had to take a long trip which required considerable walking, and the wound opened.

When I returned home that night my leg was inflamed, and by morning it was in a serious condition. I was living many miles from where help could be obtained. Blood poisoning set in, and my husband told me he thought amputation would be necessary. It seemed a long time ere the tide turned, but later in the week, while looking up at the hills around us, I became conscious of a wonderful light, and the thought came, What has this leg to do with Life? God is our Life. The wound opened, and at night a piece of bone came out of the calf. The healing was complete, and the leg has never given me any further trouble. This proved to me more than ever that God is everywhere and hears His children's call.

During these years we have never had any medicine in our home; all look to Christian Science alone. How can our gratitude be better expressed to our beloved Leader, who gave us this great truth, than by living the life in word and deed and helping others to know the truth also!

MARY F. HARSTEDT, Auckland, New Zealand.

The inclosed testimony from my wife is correct in every particular. We have had many blessings in our home through Christian Science, for which I am very grateful.

When I first turned to Christian Science for physical healing, it was with no desire to know of its truths, but simply for the loaves and the fishes. Nevertheless, Love forced me to accept what was most needed for my growth, and looking back now I can see how through it all, while I had been outlining the way, divine Love had been gently leading me out of darkness into the glorious light of Truth.

I had been looking for material results, but God's way was leading me to seek first the kingdom of God, that all other things might be added. The healing came slowly; at times I almost questioned if it was for me at all, but Christian Science was daily becoming dearer to me and the steps onward were being taken unconsciously. First came love for the literature and the mid-week service, then the joy of daily study and interest in the Sunday service; and so on through a natural progress the way led to church membership and class instruction.

It was not until the last named step had been taken that I saw what had been going on all through the years. Then like a burst of sunlight came the revelation of the progressive demonstration, and I saw that this was the healing, and that as I made the kingdom of heaven my quest all other things were added. As each material barrier was broken down, the next step forward had been taken, and my gratitude to God, to Mrs. Eddy, and to faithful practitioners, for all the loving guidance through the wilderness, knew no bounds.

Over and above the physical healing I treasure this revelation, that these steps have constituted progressive growth in the understanding of Christian Science, which is indeed the kingdom of heaven, unfolding to me the Scriptural truth that God's ways are higher than our ways, and that as we are assured by our revered Leader (Science and Health, p. 254), "When we wait patiently on God and seek Truth righteously, He directs our path."

ALICE G. SMITH, Brookline, Mass.

From Our Exchanges

[The Christian Intelligencer]

The fundamental verities of the gospel of Christ point the way of the world's redemption from its sins and sorrows. Peace and the blessings of peace are spiritually conditioned. War will never cease until the world turns from the idolators unto the one God and suffers the divine go-between, Christ Jesus, to restore the broken harmony. Christ is the world's one and only peacemaker. He is in the world to-day bringing men to God, and binding them together with the bonds of unquenchable love. Wherever he reigns there is peace.

[New-Church Messenger]

The life of religion consists in the doing of that which is good, especially in connection with the activities of every-day life, the functions of one's regular calling in the community. The practice of piety, so called, has for its proper purpose the learning of one's duty and the inspiring of a true purpose into all phases of life.

[The Christian Work]

The spirit of adventure in search of truth is inevitable, but the Christian adventurer starts with a goal in view—the cross; and from the cross he proceeds on the path that leads him to follow under the guidance of the Holy Spirit the person of the living Christ, who will mold character until it becomes more and more like his own.

[The Watchman-Examiner]

They who revel in the glory of the flower in full bloom are to those who are willing to dig and cultivate the soil and tend and care for the plant and wait until it burgeons out in flaming glory, as the many to the few. Yet it is the few who make possible that in which the rest delight. It is the passion for making one's barren bit of world beautiful that spells out red geraniums and all the other flowers of love and gladness and joy that bloom in the great world-garden.

[Rev. Trevor H. Davies in The Methodist Times]

When the eyes of the spiritually blind shall be opened and the ears unstopped to the softest whisper of God, when the sinful soul is cleansed and the dead raised to the life of unselfishness, then shall be presented to the world the last vindication to the Master's claim. Men may sneer at a doctrine, but they will not sneer at a life; they may be heedless of a creed, but they will give thought to a character.

What Is Circulation?

The spiritual modus operandi of true circulation is beautifully depicted by Mrs. Eddy in her definition of angels on page 581 of the Christian Science textbook as follows:

"Angels. God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

The highest human corporeal concept of the truth about man is expressed today in Christian Science, hence the circulation of knowledge and information about Christian Science must be the highest human concept of spiritual (and the only real) circulation.

Every copy of Science and Health is an "Angel."

Every Lesson-Sermon, every Wednesday evening testimony meeting, every Christian Science lecture, is an exemplification of "God's thoughts passing to man."

Every Christian Science Sentinel, Journal, or Der Herold der Christian Science expresses "spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect."

Every Christian Science Monitor reflects "the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

As Christian Scientists perceive and embrace opportunity to encourage the circulation of these messengers of Christian Science, are they not aiding themselves and the world to entertain "angels, the true ideas of God, the spiritual sense of being"? (Science and Health, p. 548.)

Opportunity to send the messengers of Christian Science on their healing mission to the world has been opened through the Postmaster-General of the United States in his plan to send to soldiers and sailors at the front, at nominal postage, literature offered by individuals at post offices or to postmen.

A printed notice on the front of this issue signed by Mr. Burleson explains the simple plan.

Those desiring to send periodicals who do not wish to send their own copies, or copies previously given for local distribution work, may make arrangements with any Christian Science reading room to send periodicals regularly as desired.

Partisanship, Patriotism, or Principle?

GEORGE SHAW COOK

ACCORDING to dictionary definition a partisan is "one who adheres, sometimes blindly, to a party, a faction, a cause, or a person." Partisanship is "the state of being partisan." Patriotism is defined as "love of country; devotion to the welfare of one's country."

The first definition of the word principle, as given in one of the best modern dictionaries, is "beginning, foundation." It is further defined as "a source, or origin: that from which anything proceeds; fundamental substance." Principle as used in Christian Science means the one infinite source, origin, cause, or creator of all that really exists; that from which all reality proceeds; the fundamental substance, the intelligent cause, the eternal foundation of the universe. This divine Principle is understood in Christian Science to be Mind, Spirit, God.

It is an interesting fact that while the words partisan, partisanship, and patriotism are not used in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the Christian Science textbook, the word Principle occurs therein more than one hundred times. This does not indicate that the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science was unpatriotic. There are many evidences of Mrs. Eddy's deep-seated love of country, and there is every reason to believe that her country's true welfare was very near her heart; but as for partisanship, as the word is used in this article, Mrs. Eddy had none. This fact is illustrated by what she said in a Boston newspaper in November, 1908, as follows: "I am asked, 'What are your politics?' I have none, in reality, other than to help support a righteous government; to love God supremely, and my neighbor as myself" (Miscellany, p. 276).

From the foregoing statement made by Mrs. Eddy near the close of a national political campaign may be learned, inferentially at least, the comparative value given by her to partisanship, patriotism, and Principle. It is therefore well for Christian Scientists in the present hour, as always, to give earnest heed to the example of their Leader, and to consider carefully those questions on which she thought deeply and expressed herself so clearly.

Partisan or party politics may serve in ordinary times to preserve the governmental balance. They may prevent the pendulum of political theory and practice from swinging too far in either direction. It is doubtless true that the party in power is in some instances wisely restrained by an opposing party. Other relative advantages might be claimed for partisanship, but in times of threatened danger or in great national crises, partisanship is superseded by the higher law of patriotism. Patriotism involves unselfish surrender of one's own interests to those of his country; it means sacrifice of self for the common good. Patriotism may entail the sacrifice of home comforts, of fortune, or even of human life itself, for the welfare of others. Patriotism is therefore relatively better and higher than partisanship. Ultimately even so high and noble a thing as patriotism must give way to a still higher and better and more satisfying thought, namely, that of allegiance to absolute Principle. Loyalty to party and loyalty to country must sooner or later be supplanted in the thought of every individual by loyalty to divine Principle.

Mrs. Eddy has revealed to the world what Principle really means. She has shown that Principle is not something distant or cold or abstract, but that it is in fact universal Truth, eternal Life, ever present, changeless, impartial, perfect Love. As the true meaning of Principle begins to unfold to human consciousness, as one begins to understand that Principle is the one infinitely wise, merciful, just, and loving Father-Mother God, who is ever near to all His children and to whom all are equally dear, one begins to see the impossibility of separating the welfare of one individual or nation from that of all. This revelation of Truth enables the student to perceive, perhaps very imperfectly at first, that partisanship, racial prejudice, animosity, competition,—all that tends to separate nation from nation and man from man,—must finally yield to the supremacy of divine Love.

Victor Hugo is credited with having said concerning the twentieth century that in this century "the scaffold will be dead, royalty will be dead, war will be dead, dogmas will be dead, but man will live. For all there will be but one country, and that the whole earth. For all there will be but one hope, and that the whole of heaven." Whether this prophecy is rightly attributed to Hugo, or whether its fulfillment will come now or later, it is not necessary to discuss here; that its realization will surely come in God's own time and way is certain. Nor need we speculate whether the present world fermentation will continue a year, a century, or indefinitely. Meanwhile Christian Scientists will be wise not to indulge in fearful expectation of the continuity of evil. Rather is it better that they should know that "with God all things are possible," and that in absolute Truth evil is even now unreal.

In this way it is possible to face present conditions calmly and courageously, even though to human sense their end may not be in sight. Indeed it is probable that strife will continue as long as the beliefs which make for war are present as human consciousness; but just in proportion as selfish, material, sinful thoughts are eliminated from the world's thinking, war and strife will cease. When through the revelation of divine Principle individual citizens of the world are able to free themselves from thoughts of fear, jealousy, envy, hatred, greed, and lust, then unreal causes of war will cease to exist. The true Christian warfare of right thinking will ultimately transform and regenerate completely the individual and collective human consciousness. Then God, divine Principle, "shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

On page 340 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says: "The divine Principle of the First Commandment bases the Science of being, by which man demonstrates health, holiness, and life eternal. One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself;' annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

"Sons of God"

CARRIE LEE POOLE

It is always a knowledge of the truth which corrects and destroys false impressions. A right idea entertained in human consciousness always shows the great need of mental transformation. This mental process involves the separation of good and evil in our thinking,—the giving of place and activity to good only, and none to evil, because Christian Science is founded upon the Scriptural platform of the first statement of creation, when God, or Spirit, comprehending all that He had made, pronounced it "very good."

We read that "God created man in his own image." Man is therefore spiritual, perfect, immortal as "when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." What has taken this overflowing joy out of the lives of mortals? To this it may be answered that mortals were never included in this characterization, but only the sons of God. The harmony of being is an expression of the law of infinite good, and there is no other law existing or operating to separate man from the continuity of God's law.

But what about the sick and sinful race of Adam? some one may ask. Christian Science denies this Adam creation on the basis of the statement that sin, sickness, and death have no place in God's creation as recorded in the first chapter of Genesis. Until we dissolve in our own thought this impossible partnership of good and evil, supposedly proceeding from God, who created only good and therefore could not know evil, man's unity with the Father is not made the foundation of our life basis, and these opposite beliefs will be at odds throughout time. This so-called man that starts from "the dust of the ground" is the counterfeit, or the serpent's trail that blind humanity has followed since the time of mortal history, crying out to an anthropomorphic God to heal it of the serpent's sting. The Adam curse has masqueraded in truth's garments as being part of truth, and its clever disguise has baffled many an earnest thinker; but the serpent's trail has always betrayed mortals into sickness, sin, and death. Moreover, it marks a gulf between the sinful race of Adam and the sons of God that no mortal can span.

The spiritual creation is thus emphasized in the epistle of John: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." The gentle Nazarene came to show men the path of Life, that they might know his Father, and our Father; his God, and our God. As human consciousness is educated out of its false beliefs it will find that the Adam concept was never any part or condition of man.

The knowledge obtained from the physical senses fulfills its own conditions, either in a belief of health or in a belief of sickness, and the knowledge thus obtained is the forbidden fruit of which God said, "Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die." Spiritual thinking contradicts false physical sense, and floods human consciousness with the sunlight of Truth, revealing the very presence of a loving Father who is ever imparting health, joy, and endless good to all His children. The ranks of Christian Science include thousands who have been redeemed by Truth from a dark or painful experience through mental transformation, which includes the extinction or obliteration of disease, evils of every kind that infest humanity yielding to the indisputable fact of God's all-power.

In the historic pages of the Old Testament the second account of creation is so closely intertwined with the name of "Lord God" that the spiritual account seems almost lost. Every individual must learn to distinguish between the record of Truth and the history of error, between the sons of God and the Adamic race. The veil of materialism which has overshadowed and darkened spiritual creation is taken away in Christ, Truth. Through the transforming spirit of Truth human destiny has found its healing balm, but the keynote of universal salvation lies in a complete knowledge of the rights of man as attuned to the infinite One.

We can never be too humbly thankful to God for our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and for the wondrous light that the torch of Christian Science has shed upon the Scriptures, whereby the sin-sick and heavy-laden through a transformed consciousness are finding emancipation. The teacher of Christian Science, the lecturer, practitioner, or writer who inspires humanity to search the Scriptures in the light of our Leader's works, is pointing the way through Christ and helping humanity to reach the summits in the understanding of divine metaphysics which our Master attained.

On page 519 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says: "Mortals can never know the infinite, until they throw off the old man and reach the spiritual image and likeness. What can fathom infinity! How shall we declare Him, till, in the language of the apostle, 'we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ'?" When one knows that man is the image and likeness of God, the spiritual reflection of Life, Truth, and Love, he begins to realize the purification of sense and self, and becomes a clear transparency for the light to shine through in order that it may reach his fellow man and heal him. Each human footstep must be taken in meekness, penitence, and obedience, rejoicing in another's good and with love enough to magnify good and minimize evil.

God has given to man dominion, and we are promised "power to become the sons of God." Those who accept the Adam concept are cheating themselves of man's divine birthright and place in the kingdom of God. Did not Jesus' love-crowned mission to a benighted world show us how to become conscious that we are the sons of God? By his resurrection he proved God the Father to be the life of man. Let us never turn aside, unheeding the message that Christ, Truth, is the resurrection and the life to all who believe. Paul says, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

Prophecy

LIEUT. COL. ROBERT E. KEY

In a wonderful passage Jeremiah the prophet foretells the building of a great city, so strongly built, so well fortified, that it shall not be "thrown down any more for ever." Before this city of perfection and permanence had appeared, there had been another on the site of it, a temporal and material city which had soon been overthrown. There, to mortal sense, lying in every direction, were the ruins of great buildings. Outside the crumbling walls were the sepulchers of the dead, while heaps of ashes marked the spot where fires had been kindled.

Surely a habitation of the dead is here depicted, dreary and desolate; and yet how strange it is that there are mortals who still seem content to wander in just such a ruined and dust strewn wilderness, deeming it the work of divine providence and accepting the whole appalling picture as if it were the design of a loving Father. Has it ever seemed to such as these that the real city may still be intact, as Jeremiah predicted that it would be, and that it is strong, eternal, and spiritual?

This truly is the "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God;" that city where nothing shall enter that "defileth, . . . or maketh a lie," and wherein man may live and move and be abundantly satisfied. Ezekiel saw this vision of reconstruction in the valley of the dry bones, for he says: "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones . . . And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest." There seems something helpless and pathetic in this reply of the prophet, almost implying an unwilling submission to an evil thing. It is as if Ezekiel would say: But why, O Lord, are they thus? Why are they dead and dry and useless? without hope or life or love?

The prophet is in the "valley," the metaphysical signification of which is "depression; meekness; darkness" (Science and Health, p. 596), and as he looks out over a wilderness of bones he is asked, "Son of man, can these bones live?" All around him is the evidence of material sense, which assures him that this is not possible, but around and above him is the voice of God, which bids him exercise his God-given dominion to prophesy, and be free! "Prophesy," says the voice of God, "upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord."

The Christian Scientist who wishes to be enlightened on the meaning of a Scripture word or passage is not slow in seeking out his "Key to the Scriptures" and in searching diligently until he has found the master word which will unlock the treasure. Here the word "prophesy" has arrested the attention, and he turns to the Glossary of Science and Health to see if the word is thought worthy of a definition therein. On page 593 the word "prophet" is given, and as to prophesy is the action of the prophet, it is evident that the meaning of prophet will also disclose the signification of to prophesy. Here prophet is described as "a spiritual seer; disappearance of material sense before the conscious facts of spiritual Truth."

"The conscious facts of spiritual Truth," he repeats to himself. Am I keeping in consciousness the facts of spiritual Truth? What are they? And what do they signify? They are certainly not sin, sickness, and death; for if these are conscious facts, then every instinct of my existence is at fault. The facts of spiritual Truth are clearly the opposite of these. In Science and Health (p. 476) we read, "Sin, sickness, and death must disappear to give place to the facts which belong to immortal man." Thus only can the facts of existence be discerned and the kingdom of heaven be available to man. Sin, sickness, and even death itself must be rejected and dethroned, and we to-day as prophets may begin the work of dethronement. Though the city lies in ruins, or appears to do so, it is our privilege to prophesy as God commands.

And this is the word given: "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel." In this land of Israel there are no dry bones, but the whole house of Israel is found as God ordained it to be, and man's individuality is recognized as spiritual, and eternally conscious of his relationship to God. Though the vision to some may appear too wonderful and transcendental for our present mental grasp, yet if it is ever true, then it is true now, and no amount of delay or argument can make it otherwise. The time is now, and man's spiritual likeness can now be recognized in a way that has never before been possible.

Every effort on our part to prophesy, that is, to place the spiritual fact before the material seeming, will bring this perfection nearer to accomplishment, and make it more possible to heal the sick with scientific certainty and success. Does the task seem difficult? Is the way so long? Does our courage fail? Remember that others have looked on that ruined city and not lacked the courage to begin the building. "One on God's side is a majority," and the real city is of God, not of man. It is God who has already done the building, and our part is simply to recognize His work and be ready and willing to live as He ordains.

Efficient Service

NELL FLASH

BEFORE accepting service in any capacity in our church work, it becomes necessary to understand thoroughly the fundamental requirements of that service and to be familiar with the nature and significance of church relations. A careful, prayerful study of the Manual of The Mother Church, together with Mrs. Eddy's definition of church (Science and Health, p. 583), gives us a basis whereon to build. We who have the privilege of serving in the least way upon committees should not look upon it as gratuitous work, but as an opportunity to pay in some small measure for something already received from Truth. We should never forget that some one labored to place the cause of Christian Science before the world, up to the point where it was first presented to us, and that as we, too, conscientiously do our work we are preparing the way for our brother man. Ours is an endless labor of love, and Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 100), "Love's labors are not lost."

In the degree that Christian Science is a business it should be placed upon our highest concept of the demands of Principle. We of the business world know that prompt and faithful attendance, accuracy, and speed have been the foundation stones of our success. It is an important reason indeed that keeps any one of us from his or her office. We soon learn that the lack of accuracy or speed leaves us at the foot of the ladder, and if we possess one quality in the way of efficiency we must strive until we have acquired others. To be satisfied with anything less than perfection means to be left in the sea of mediocrity. Entering into unnecessary conversation and having superfluous telephone calls are conditions early eliminated in our business careers.

When we accept the privilege of serving on a church committee, our cause is our employer, and our service adds to or detracts from the progress of our cause according to our realization of the spiritual meaning of church service. As we review the work done by the previous committee, mortal mind has a strong tendency to condemn it, pick it to pieces, smile at its apparent inadequacy, and be quite self-righteous in the desire to tear it down and destroy it. We forget that those who labored before us probably worked under different conditions and circumstances, and that because of their untiring efforts we are able to build better, profiting by their possible mistakes, and realizing that there is in reality but one church, no matter how many differing human conceptions there may be concerning it.

In many cases it is necessary to check over the work of a coworker, and we should regard this not with the thought that we are looking for mistakes, but as an opportunity for Truth to prove itself, knowing that divine Principle will uncover error. This changed viewpoint in our consciousness will prevent us from malpracticing upon the work already done. The offices where Christian Science work is done should manifest all the qualities for which our cause stands,—efficiency, promptness, harmony, progress, and above all, unity of the one Mind. This can never be accomplished, however, so long as we as individuals enter into the work in a nonchalant manner, regarding our appointments as responsibilities easily canceled. Our business offices should be recreation centers in very truth.

It is the privilege and duty of each one of us to shake off the inertia which would mesmerize us into a belief of the unimportance of our task, and to lift thought above the material activities to a knowledge of the spiritual sense of church work. In the degree that this is done we are ushering in the church triumphant.

Testimony Meetings

GEORGE L. HODGSON

DEFINITE instructions as to the form a testimony of healing shall take, as given in Section 24 of Article VIII of the Church Manual, include this statement: "This testimony, however, shall not include a description of symptoms or of suffering, though the generic name of the disease may be indicated. This By-Law applies to testimonials which appear in the periodicals and to those which are given at the Wednesday evening meeting." From this it does not seem that it was intended by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, that the period allotted for testimonies was other than for the sincere expression of gratitude and praise to God for benefits received through the application and operation of Christian Science, and a rehearsal of these benefits, or blessings as they are termed in the by-law quoted, for the information and encouragement of others.

It is therefore manifestly out of place for a Christian Scientist to attempt, during the brief period devoted to this part of the service, to describe his metaphysical method of giving a treatment or his manner of metaphysically applying his understanding of how such a treatment should be given. There are several good reasons why such remarks are not timely. In the first place, the two or three minutes to which in a large church the speaker is entitled, are much too limited to do justice to so deep a subject. Besides this, such an attempt always goes over the head, so to speak, of the layman or stranger who is seeking information concerning Christian Science. Furthermore, unless the Scientist has a clear conception of the metaphysics of Christian Science, he is liable either to befog others or to become hopelessly befogged himself. It is much better and far wiser to confine such statements to private rather than public expression. In fact it is far better to allow the beginner or seeker to glean this information for himself from our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures;" for all overcoming of discord, whether sin or disease, is the result of individual not vicarious effort. Consequently the student must work out his own salvation according to the measure of his own understanding.

A person is often apt to overlook the fact that in using the language of Christian Science he is speaking a new tongue not understood by humanity in general, and that at a testimony meeting there is no opportunity except from the desk to correct a misstatement or to amplify ambiguous remarks. In the meantime the impression has been made upon the audience, and individuals are in danger of going away with the thought that what they have heard is in strict conformity with the teachings of Christian Science. Frequently people are unnecessarily antagonized, sometimes permanently so, by what they have heard a well meaning Christian Scientist unwisely say.

The Wednesday evening meeting is one of the means instituted by Mrs. Eddy for giving to the world the results achieved by Christian Science, demonstrating by present proof "that the so-called miracles of Jesus did not specially belong to a dispensation now ended, but that they illustrated an ever-operative divine Principle" (Science and Health, p. 123), and people come to this meeting to hear what Christian Science is doing. This is an age when results are demanded as proofs, rather than mere doctrines or theories. Jesus' rule, "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the slogan of to-day. There is danger, therefore, of a Christian Scientist getting into the habit of expounding the letter rather than of giving the fruits of Spirit. When the disciples of John came to ask Jesus if he was really the Messiah, the answer given was, "Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." If we carefully study the above by-law and try to make our testimonies comply with its clear instructions, there can be no possible misunderstanding by the stranger that is within our gates, nor necessity for correction or amplification by the one presiding at the meeting.

The best testimony meeting of the year is as a rule the one held on Thanksgiving day, during the twenty-five or thirty minutes devoted to this purpose. We come with thanksgiving, and our hearts are filled with overflowing gratitude to God for His infinite blessings, and we give expression in a simple, direct way to this heart overflow, for, as our Master has said, "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The result is a wonderfully spontaneous service, and the healing at such a time is incalculable, for as at the day of Pentecost we are "all with one accord in one place." Each Wednesday evening meeting can be just as impressive and unlabored and as fruitful as the Thanksgiving service. We need only to come with the same measure of thankfulness and rejoicing, with the same glad desire to give the reason for the hope that is within us in the same simple, unselfed manner.

Endurance

WANDA WHITMAN

NOT so very long ago a class in ancient history, while discussing the doctrines of the Stoics, was asked this question by the teacher: "What is the modern sect of people whose beliefs are much akin to those of the Stoics?" A student immediately answered, "The Christian Scientists." Needless to say, the student who answered the question was not acquainted with Mrs. Eddy's teachings, and if he had known as much about Christian Science as he knew about the philosophy founded by Zeno, he would have perceived the difference immediately.

There were at that time three Christian Scientists in the history class, which consisted of about thirty students. This fact was known to most of those present, with the exception of the teacher and the student who made the comparison, and there was a laugh in which the Scientists joined. The remark was amusing, and yet it was disappointing. The calmness with which the truth of Christian Science is discussed by those who are more ignorant of its teachings than of lunar geography, may sometimes cause a feeling of momentary irritation in a Christian Scientist who happens to be present, but the irritation is quickly overcome when he considers that this is only a phase of belief through which most of us pass. Many can remember a wild desire to stick pins into the first Christian Scientist who spoke of the truth, "just to see if he would feel it," and we should therefore be patient when symptoms of this desire are manifested in others.

In the case mentioned above, probably each one of the Scientists had to grapple with a tendency to rise and explain the difference between the philosophy of the Stoics and Christian Science, but it was well that such a wish was repressed, as it was neither the time nor the place for an explanation. Still, that same silent forbearance might have been called an exemplification of Stoicism, had it been known. Those who are not acquainted with Christian Science may seem to confuse its teachings with what is termed Stoicism, although it is rare that they are able to name that which they believe it to be. We hear, for example, the remark, "Oh, just imagine you are a Christian Scientist and pretend that you do not suffer when you do, and that you are all right whether you are or not,"—a mental attitude which would better describe a Stoic than a Scientist.

The only similarity between Stoicism and Christian Science is that both teach the necessity of being superior to the senses, but from entirely different standpoints. The Stoic believed evil to be divinely sent, and hence to be quietly endured; the Christian Scientist knows evil to be impossible as a part of God's creation, hence its claims to reality are to be firmly denied and met with the knowledge of Truth. The Stoic believed in ignoring sickness and death as necessary but unimportant; the Christian Scientist believes in overcoming them in accordance with the commands of Christ Jesus and his example. The Stoic was as indifferent to joy as to sorrow; whereas Christian Science is the religion of joy.

The world is slowly but surely advancing to a realization of the immeasurable distance between the popular estimate of the teachings of Christian Science and the reality of these teachings. Let us be truly thankful for this progress, as for that measure of understanding already attained by the students of Mrs. Eddy's teachings.

Truth's Voice

INEZ KOCH

It seemed to me, in childhood's days,
I heard a gentle voice
Which helped to lighten all my ways
And make my heart rejoice.

Then, as I grew to manhood's state,
New voices seemed to come;
And oft they told of bitter fate,
Which would all joy benumb.

But over all, so sweet and clear,
I heard one voice anew,
That sang, and rang, so clear, so near,—
My falt'ring hope made new.

It held the songs of all the world,
And sang them in my heart,
And when I listened to Truth's voice
In Love I had my part.

Selected Articles

[George R. Lowe in Toronto (Ontario) Saturday Night]

It seems unfortunate that a periodical of such high standing as Saturday Night should have been betrayed into such a pitfall of loose expression as to say, "Mrs. Eddy's theory of malicious animal magnetism," when dealing lightly with the psychology of shopping.

Mrs. Eddy did not invent a new devil named "m. a. m.," as might be inferred from your statement; she did not propound a new theory of magnified evil and thus add to the terrors of the human mind. She did practice and teach the omnipotence of absolute good, God, and the consequent impotence of evil. In pursuing this scientific practice of overcoming evil, sin, disease, in human experience, thus following the example of Christ Jesus, she demonstrated her discovery to be worthy of the designation Christian Science. In dealing with evil from this standpoint she detected and uncovered its exceeding sinfulness, exposed the harmfulness of hypnotic suggestion as capable of any crime, and used the term "malicious animal magnetism" to describe evil at its worst. Could there be any more expressive term for the source of the horrors perpetrated in our day on land and sea?

Mrs. Eddy's thought and work are beneficent in purpose. Her analysis of evil was to destroy it; not to ignore or cover it up, but to expose its wrongness, lawlessness, and falsity, and thus to annul it as something which has no part in God's creation. By this spiritual process hundreds of thousands have overcome in some measure the fear of evil, and have been healed of diseases induced by the fear of evil.

[Charles M. Shaw in City News, Manchester, England]

If the correspondent "Open Mind" is correctly described by his signature, there should be no difficulty in convincing him of his error in classing Christian Science with "clairvoyance, crystal gazing, etc., which gull the people with miraculous and mysterious doctrines."

The popular belief about miracles, that they are supernatural and that they are infractions of divine law, permitted for certain ends and for certain favored individuals, which is the belief accepted by the contributor "Ignotus" as well as by "Open Mind," is in opposition to Christian Science teaching, wherein the word miracle is used in the strict New Testament sense of a manifestation or sign of divine power. In this sense Christian Science, therefore, does claim to work miracles, not, however, as infractions or suspensions of divine law, but in conformity with and in reliance upon that law. Just how this can be, Christian Science makes clear in its interpretation of creation as spiritual only. Mrs. Eddy says on page 27 of "Miscellaneous Writings": "Creation, evolution, or manifestation,—being in and of Spirit, Mind, and all that really is,—must be spiritual and mental. This is Science, and is susceptible of proof."

Consequently the material world and its phenomena are but the false mortal sense or counterfeit of the true universe, therefore unreal. It follows then that what are called miracles are only evidences of the subordination of matter and material laws to the influence of divine Mind reflected in some individual like Christ Jesus, who performed his wonderful works not in virtue of a specially bestowed power but because of his understanding and application of his knowledge of God and His law, an understanding which he indicated could be shared by his followers. On page 23 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy says, "The prophets, Jesus, and the apostles, demonstrated a divine intelligence that subordinates so-called material laws; and disease, death, winds, and waves, obey this intelligence." The ability of men, however, to reflect this intelligence and its power is in proportion to their spirituality.

Undoubtedly many have difficulty at first in accepting the Christian Science view of the material world, but there are far more difficulties involved in the belief that God is the author of that world and of those so-called laws which in their operation produce catastrophies, disease, suffering, death. Christian Science shows that these things are the effect of mortal ignorance of God, and unfolds the divine way of escape. Neither is there anything mysterious in Christian Science, as your contributor states. Truth is never mysterious, though it may be difficult to apprehend. Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Scholars agree that what he meant here was the absolute truth, implying that men have the capacity for and ought to seek absolute truth. Christian Science is the explanation of absolute, that is spiritual, truth, and is enabling men to gain freedom from sin and its effects.

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Ft. Pierce (Fla.) News]

The comments on Christian Science which have furnished the occasion for this present writing were mainly nothing more than mere dogmatic and intolerant opinions. In so far as they did not amount to more than this, they can be safely ignored along with such offensive epithets as "cult" and "fraud." Nothing of this sort proves anything to intelligent men. It may be, as the reverend gentleman has said, that many Christians do not have "trained or logical minds," but opinionated persons are apt to underrate the intelligence of their neighbors. Nowadays the average man desires information, but he is entirely capable of thinking for himself. There were, however, among these various comments certain particular points which need to be noticed because they might, if ignored, pass for authentic information.

One of these particular errors was thrice repeated, and was to the effect that Christian Science teaches that man has no body. Such is not the case. This teaching denies the false and material concept of body, but it both affirms and proves the true and spiritual concept thereof. The following quotation from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, is pertinent: "To divest thought of false trusts and material evidences in order that the spiritual facts of being may appear,—this is the great attainment by means of which we shall sweep away the false and give place to the true. Thus we may establish in truth the temple, or body, 'whose builder and maker is God'" (p. 428).

Another item in the same series was that Mrs. Eddy attempted to use evil wishes as a power against her enemies. A more groundless accusation was never put in print. It could have been arrived at only by an utter reversal of the actual facts. The facts are that Mrs. Eddy divided the good from the evil in human consciousness more clearly than this had been done since the Sermon on the Mount. She exposed the use of evil thoughts for intended harm; she insisted that all evil must and can be forsaken; and she taught how the power of God is available for the destruction of every description of evil, including disease and forms of error which had not been recognized as such. It is worth mentioning here that Mrs. Eddy's prediction that courts and juries would eventually deal with mental crimes has been to some extent fulfilled. Thus a coroner's jury at Chicago returned a verdict in which they specified "that the deceased was mentally assaulted by her husband at a time when she was physically and mentally delicate" as the cause or means of a woman's death, and this verdict was approved by the coroner. In this connection, however, it should be known that Mrs. Eddy taught the reality and supremacy of good even to the exclusion of any opposite power, and Christian Science healing is accomplished on this sole basis.

[S. T. Downs in Owen County Democrat, Spencer, Ind.]

Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" says that in order to advance in the understanding of Christian Science teaching one must "study thoroughly the letter and imbibe the spirit" (p. 495). If our critic were a little closer to Christian Science and Christian Scientists, he would not make the statements reported in another publication in Spencer: "He declared that the teachings of Christian Science were not only contrary to the true interpretation of the Bible, but an insult to human intelligence." The latter part of this statement is completely refuted by the testimony of thousands of the world's best citizens who have embraced Christian Science teaching and are practicing it in their lives daily. The first part of the statement evidences nothing but prejudiced opinion.

The Bible itself gives the test whereby we may determine whether or not Christian Science correctly interprets the Word, and indeed we find this test in the words of the Master, "By their fruits ye shall know them." The last chapter of Mark records the Master's command to preach the gospel, and it tells the signs that shall follow true preaching, and all Bible students know that healing the sick is one of these signs. In spite of the fact that the revivalist so unmercifully berated the followers of Mrs. Eddy, he makes no effort to obey the Master's command to heal the sick, while Christian Science gives indisputable, incontrovertible evidence that it is reclaiming thousands upon thousands from vice and sin, and healing all manner of sickness and disease.

Christian Science practitioners have not healed all who have appealed to them, and do not claim to have done so. Neither did the disciples who were intimately associated with Jesus heal disease unfailingly; but the great Teacher showed the way and he healed unfailingly. The large measure of success that has attended Christian Science ministry proves that the promise, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," will ultimately be fulfilled in those who strive sincerely and understandingly to follow the great Wayshower, Christ Jesus; and Christian Scientists believe this large measure of success also proves beyond dispute that the works of Mrs. Eddy enable mankind to find the way.

[Henry Van Arsdale in Long Beach (Cal.) Press]

Christian Science does not undervalue or minimize the redemptive and healing work of Jesus as exemplified in his sacrifice on the cross, as was stated in an account of a sermon delivered before the Christian church convention a few days ago. On the contrary, Mrs. Eddy's writings contain innumerable references to the crucifixion, and of the six brief tenets of the Christian Science church two are devoted to the experience on the cross and the widespread results to humanity of that "intense human sacrifice" (Science and Health, p. 54).

The clergyman quoted one sentence from a paragraph on page 25 of Mrs. Eddy's book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," but omitted the opening and closing sentences of the same paragraph, which are as follows: "The spiritual essence of blood is sacrifice. The efficacy of Jesus' spiritual offering is infinitely greater than can be expressed by our sense of human blood. . . . His true flesh and blood were his Life; and they truly eat his flesh and drink his blood, who partake of that divine Life." Christian Science rationally explains the atoning work of Jesus as expressed in his life and in his crucifixion. It teaches that it is man who needs to be reconciled to God, not the loving Father to His children.

In the sermon, reference was made to Hebrews ix. 22, to the effect that there is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood. Throughout the Old Testament blood is used as a symbol of sacrifice, and the writer in Hebrews so used it, as will be observed from the context. It is so used in Christian Science. This is fully explained in "No and Yes," where, beginning on page 33, Mrs. Eddy devotes nearly six pages to the preeminent sacrifice of Jesus. Had the clergyman read this he would not have made the statements credited to him. It may be well to call attention to the fact that the Bible also teaches that "remission of sin" is possible through repentance and through reliance on Christ Jesus.

[John M. Tutt in Poplar Bluff (Mo.) American]

Christian Science does not compel; it persuades truly, but only as it presents a reasonable explanation of God and man and unfolds God's plan of salvation from the ills and sins of the flesh. Where Christian Science has touched the lives of men, it has blessed. Why warn against an influence for good in the world? The beneficence of Christian Science would extend even to those who now think they do God service in attempting to block its progress, and would open channels of usefulness to the talents now devoted to exhortation. Jesus went about healing the sick and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. In obediently imitating Jesus in the former, Christian Science is convincingly doing the latter. Jesus said, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."

Our critic, a clergyman, said, "I believe the old Book, and I will stand on the Bible alone as the Word of God." Here seems to be a point of agreement between him and Christian Science, for the first tenet of the Christian Science church states: "As adherents of Truth, we take the inspired Word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal Life" (Science and Health, p. 497). Moreover, as our critic again says: "It is not what you think or what I think, but what the holy Word of God says." Surely, then, the thinker will see the unfairness of the demand of our critic that his own concept of what the Bible says be the standard for others whose understanding of the Word, though differing from his, is to them convincing and satisfying. To Christian Scientists "the word of God is . . . powerful," and their experience in the practice of Christian Science furnishes practical proofs of the correctness of their concept of God and man as revealed in the spiritual import of the Scripture.

The following succinct statement will correct in a general way many of the present critic's favorite animadversions: To the Christian Scientist the spiritual meaning of the Bible is all-important. Through spiritual understanding alone he is able rightly to divide the Word of God and reconcile the seeming inconsistencies of the text. He is able thus to do this without mutilating or discarding any portion of the Scriptures. He believes that when Jesus said he was "the way," he meant just that, and hence that all must walk in that way. He believes in Christ Jesus' selfless sacrifice; in the crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension; that his triumphant emergence from the tomb proved the power of God to overcome death and the world's hatred of Truth, which culminated in the futile endeavor to kill Jesus.

The Christian Scientist believes in personal salvation through all Christ Jesus lived to do; that, in his own words, "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Hence the subscription made by Christian Scientists to the doctrine and ordinances in their spiritual meaning and observance; in repentance, reformation, the new birth; in spiritual baptism, "submergence in Spirit;" in "spiritual communion with the one God" (Science and Health, pp. 581, 35); in the at-one-ment, or unity of God and man, exemplified in the life of Christ Jesus; in salvation by grace—the exercise of Love; in doing as well as feeling,—"faith without works is dead;" and, what is of great importance, in Christian healing as taught and practiced by the Master.

[William D. Kilpatrick in Albion (Mich.) Recorder]

If the entire sermon preached recently in a local pulpit on Christian Science was as devoid of truth and as full of ill-concealed religious intolerance as the synopsis reported, doubtless those in the congregation who knew even a little of the true teachings of Christian Science were reminded of the familiar saying of Jesus, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

The fact is, and it has been so often authoritatively stated that our critic should not be in ignorance on the point, that Christian Science is based unqualifiedly on Bible teachings. To the thoughtful observer it is evident that the doctrines of Christian Science are not only not opposed to the gospel of Christ but are identical with it. Practically all of the Master's commands to cleanse the sinner have coupled with them the injunction to heal the sick. Christian Scientists are to-day, with remarkable success, obeying these teachings, thus keeping intact the whole Christ, the undivided garment. In other words, Christian Science is so explaining and exemplifying the words and works of Jesus as to make them a present day power. Not only has this new-old religion healed every known disease, but it is destroying sin, restoring to self-respecting citizenship hopeless slaves to passion and appetite, bringing happiness, harmony, and peace to those who are availing themselves of its beneficence.

The assertion that Christian Science is a human effort teaching that sin, disease, and death are delusions, is too unqualified to be within the facts. Simply to affirm that sin, disease, and death are delusions without a supporting understanding of the truth, the knowledge of which Jesus said would make us free, is nothing short of mental quackery and most decidedly is not Christian Science.

Christian Science does teach, and proves by its works, that sin, disease, and death are illusions of the human, or, as St. Paul puts it, "carnal" mind,—that when this so-called mind yields its claims, which it can do by following the teachings of the Master, to an understanding of the one Mind, or God, then it is seen that these conditions are false and not creations of God, who is of "purer eyes than to behold evil."

Those who are interested in knowing what the teachings of Christian Science really are will not take as final the word based on misunderstanding and prejudice, but will avail themselves of the many opportunities offered to investigate first-hand for themselves. Christian Science has never suffered from honest investigation.

Food Conservation

By invitation of Mr. Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator, twenty-five active members of the Christian Science church residing east of the Mississippi River recently attended a conference on food conservation in Washington. A report of this meeting was published in The Christian Science Monitor of Oct. 8. The important question of protecting and wisely administering the food resources of the country was presented to those present by Mr. Hoover and others. Resolutions were unanimously adopted pledging assistance in every consistent way in the necessary work which the Government has undertaken through Mr. Hoover.

The following open letter to the Churches of Christ, Scientist, has just been received and we are glad to give it to the field herewith.

"To the Churches of Christ, Scientist:

"No other power in this free country can more effectively reach the homes and put through a great systematic program of voluntary unselfish service than the organizations which represent the religious faiths of our nation. We are appealing to churches, synagogues, and other religious societies to undertake a definite campaign to enlist our people for food conservation, pledging them to use for themselves the foodstuffs not suitable for export, of which we have an abundance, and to use sparingly the wheat, meats, and sugar which are so terribly needed to feed the hungry men and women of France and our other allies. While our boys are offering their lives in the trenches, we are asking the folks at home to make this daily sacrifice at table in order to make victory possible and help suffering humanity.

"The State Food Administrator of your state hopes that you will help in this nation-wide movement by a public presentation on Oct. 21. We will send, within a few days, some printed material describing the food problem and suggesting definite plans whereby the religious organizations can make this campaign effective to all of the churches in the country. We hope that the churches can carry on a very definite campaign among their members, lasting through the nine weeks beginning Oct. 28, according to the suggestions which will be sent out.

"Confidently thanking you in advance for all that you may do in this humane and patriotic cause, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

"HERBERT HOOVER."

In practical demonstration of their support of "a righteous government" (Miscellany, p. 276), and in fulfillment of the demand for economy which Mrs. Eddy has designated as "God's Requirement,"—"God requires wisdom, economy, and brotherly love to characterize all the proceedings of the members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist" (Church By-Laws, Art. XXIV, Sect. 5), Christian Scientists now have an added opportunity to prove their good citizenship by abiding by both the letter and the spirit of the plan adopted by the Government.

The specific requests of the Food Administrator will be found on the inside back cover of this issue of the Sentinel. It would seem appropriate for Christian Science churches and societies in the United States to respond to the request of the Government by bringing this subject to the attention of their congregations. Resolutions pledging cooperation and support of the Government's efforts for food conservation may properly be adopted by Christian Science organizations and copies sent to Mr. Herbert Hoover, National Food Administrator, in Washington.

True Prayer and Vain Repetitions

JESUS had very little patience with the formalities of religion. With keen characterization he showed the ineffectuality of the labored efforts of the Pharisees and others who "for a pretence make long prayer," who would trumpet their almsgiving in the streets, or paint their faces with haggard lines during a fast, so as to "appear unto men to fast." His sense of prayer was simple and direct. It meant to come close to the Father by first shutting out worldly cares, and then in absolute quiet to commune with Spirit, in order that the result might be manifest in spirituality; and so the Father, seeing in secret, would thus reward openly. He was emphatic in saying to his disciples, "When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do."

This is to be noted: that even to the heathen vain repetitions became monotonous; hence a prayer mill was invented, the prayer being first inscribed, then fastened to a wheel, which as it was revolved brought the prayer to constantly recurring notice. But Thibetan cleverness went farther, and relieved the priests of the weary work of praying (or turning the wheel) by attaching the prayer mill to a water wheel, so that the praying became absolutely mechanical.

We smile at these quaint devices of those we are pleased to call the heathen; but our superior airs would vanish if we realized how the theory of a prayer mill is utilized by various groups of self-seekers who are making their prayers not to God but to mankind. These groups, having no sense of God, of course do not pray to any invisible source of good for benefit. The good they desire is visible to the eyes and appreciable to the senses, and their deep desire is to get it away from those who have it. Let not those who call themselves modern and civilized think themselves so superior to their brethren in Thibet. What is a subsidized newspaper but a prayer mill, constantly demanding of that hydra-headed god, the public, that those who express their determined desire shall gain it, and enjoy advantage, perquisite, and power. As we have said, the mundane schemers have no sense of God as Principle, or the source of good; but they have the subtle conviction that if they can mesmerize mankind, they can get abundantly just what they want, and so "lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!"

The prophet Jeremiah records the divine denunciation of those who acquire the inheritance of others by subtlety and wrong mental methods. "As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." The insistent prayer of the subsidized newspaper may apparently succeed in the strengthening of wrong and the establishment of injustice, but all who trust to such methods are like those who sow the wind and of necessity reap the whirlwind. "They shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble."

We have a good example of prayer to mortal mind in the case of the cowardly slayer of the noble man who at the time was President of this country. This narrow-browed, vanity-haunted creature prayed for sympathy, and false women responded with flattery and flowers, like priestesses of mortal mind. Mrs. Eddy, the true woman, tells how she visited the assassin, and how her words penetrated his moral idiocy and roused conscience, so that the jailer said, "You have brought what will do him good" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 112).

What this assassin was able to do in a small way to gain sympathy and win from a few the sentimental forgetfulness of the cruelty of his crime, other criminals attempt to do in a larger way. No matter how great the defalcation and dishonor of a man, his noisy prayer for sympathy will be made to mortal mind, which then pretends not to hear the quiet voice of justice making demand for restitution. A thinker spoke earnestly to the representative of a group which had defied all law and righteousness, and outraged humanity to such a degree that there was general disapproval in the world; and in reply this representative spoke not of reform, not of amendment, not of such restitution as the old Levitical law set forth to balance maiming and theft, but spoke only of making a new organization, not for crime, but for the gaining of sympathy. Such a theory of prayer would surely "make prayer the safety-valve for wrong-doing" in a way different from, and worse than, that discussed on page 6 of Science and Health.

The criminal first desires apathy, that he may work out his crime unhindered; then sympathy with his case, so that punishment be either hindered or made void. The prayer of the criminal is manifestly the prayer of the unrighteous. But the wonder of real prayer is in so uniting the seeker after God with divine Principle that upon him, and with him, the malign prayer of mortal mind has no effect whatever, and no influence. "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty."

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Spiritual Interpretation

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS are very earnest students of the Bible,—none more so,—and if they ever become puzzled over the meaning of passages which appear in the Lesson-Sermons or which are found in their regular study of the Bible, it is only because they have accepted to a certain extent the views of those who are accustomed to interpret Scripture largely from the standpoint of material sense. The spiritual interpretation which is of real value is that which comes naturally in the ratio of one's growth in the understanding of God and His law, and through the application of the truth to all human conditions, whether individual or collective.

At the present hour, in the midst of the great world struggle, as it would seem, Paul's words to the Thessalonians are deeply significant: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." In connection with this we find a statement regarding the "man of sin," "the son of perdition." Many have been the attempts of religious people, past and present, to interpret the statements in this epistle, and also in the book of Revelation, from a personal and local standpoint, and the result of such interpretation must necessarily be a growing tendency to make error real, to give it power; and this of course is the very thing that error would have us do.

The tendency of the human mind in all ages has been the same. The human intellect has sought and many times found channels for the exaltation of its mortal concept of selfhood, and so there has been personal domination disguised as an angel of light. Respecting this personification of belief in a mind separate from God, appearing in the book of Genesis under the name of Adam, our revered Leader says, "He begins his reign over man somewhat mildly, but he increases in falsehood and his days become shorter" (Science and Health, p. 529). From the human viewpoint this aggressive phase of error intensifies its claims and extends its demands; and this fact was recognized by Paul when he said in the chapter already quoted that the mortal personification "opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped;" but we are assured that whatever be the manifestation of error, it will be destroyed by Truth, and the intensely metaphysical statement of the apostle is that the error will be "revealed," or uncovered, and then follows this verdict of Truth respecting personified evil: "whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." The power of the Word is here presented, as it is again in Revelation, and the student of Christian Science will readily grasp the fact that the "brightness" of the divine appearing will dispel all darkness and annihilate the shadows which hide therein.

As we study the book of Revelation we find that the dragon is back of every manifestation of error which seems to have power over men; but while the beast may have the "seven heads and ten horns" of the Apocalypse, nevertheless its doom is sure; and the beautiful and wonderful thing is that "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," is to lead the faithful on to final victory. On page 567 of Science and Health we read: "The beast and the false prophets are lust and hypocrisy. These wolves in sheep's clothing are detected and killed by innocence, the Lamb of Love." In Revelation we read that "the Lion of the tribe of Juda" is represented in the triumphs of Truth no less than the Lamb, and it should not be forgotten that these divine ideas are inseparable.

Error may make its appearance throughout the ages disguised in many ways, and with as much power as mortals grant to it because of their ignorance of God, the one infinite Mind. Even where man's spiritual instincts rise in rebellion against the aggressions and tyranny of mortal mind and gain victories which count for a great deal toward the welfare of humanity, yet the error will continue to appear until the allness of God as understood and demonstrated in Christian Science becomes of vital interest to all mankind. It is not enough for professing Christians to say or even to think that they believe in God. More than this is needed. They must understand and demonstrate continually in their own experience the nothingness of evil when it offers either power or pleasure to them through the senses.

St. John, who gave us the marvelous vision of the Apocalypse, has this word, which should mean so much to every student of Christian Science to-day: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." He also tells us that all that is represented by the world passes away; then he adds, "but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." We may well cling to this assurance until all the darkness of mortal belief fades out in the light of Truth and Love.

True Patriotism

THE word patriotism contains within itself a root word meaning father. While therefore patriotism is generally accepted as meaning love of one's country, a search for the origin of the word leads us to see that a true definition includes also love of one's real father, or love of the one Father-Mother God. True patriotism cannot exist without an underlying consciousness of God's presence and power as infinite Principle. The foundation of every nation which hopes to prosper in righteousness must be laid on the "Rock of Ages" and not upon the shifting sands of selfish ambition. In a world aroused as never before to mental activity it behooves every patriot to make certain that he has found the true basis for his love of country. The intentional manipulation of the human mind in order to cover national crimes goes on apace. Prearranged plans for deluding humanity en masse are constantly being detected, exposing underground activities which are unsuspected by those who do not look below the surface. But to derive one's love of country from one's love of God, good, safeguards patriotism. The more the citizen knows about the true nature of God and of His man, the better patriot he is, the readier to be a true soldier, the quicker to detect treason, which is the intentional perversion and misuse of information in thought and deed, and the surer he is of protection against the attacks upon his health and happiness, his abilities, and his good name.

An appalling instance of perverted patriotism has been forced upon public observation by the world war. To ignore this particular case would be to lose one of the important lessons which the great war is capable of teaching. Under the guise of patriotism a whole nation from childhood to old age has been trained through mental suggestion to think as one man, and thus at the word of command to act as one. While outwardly manifesting the virtues of unity and obedience, this people has been secretly and systematically mesmerized to do the will of an evil manipulation. Nothing more efficient in the way of psychological debauchery has ever appeared in history. Yet Christian Science presents salvation through repentance to the individuals who may have temporarily succumbed to pseudo-patriotism as truly as it does to those who are in subjection to sin and sickness, and threatened by death.

Psychology as taught and practiced by the schools is the so-called science which concerns itself with personal sense. Rightly understood, psychology can be redeemed and made to concern itself with the study of Soul, that is, of God; but as long as the concept of patriotism is subjected to the interpretation of a false psychology it must share the experiences of all false beliefs. Mrs. Eddy laid bare the false psychology and pointed to the true when on page 3 of "Miscellaneous Writings" she declared: "Because God is supreme and omnipotent, materia medica, hygiene, and animal magnetism are impotent; and their only supposed efficacy is in apparently deluding reason, denying revelation, and dethroning Deity. The tendency of mental healing is to uplift mankind; but this method perverted, is 'Satan let loose.' Hence the deep demand for the Science of psychology to meet sin, and uncover it; thus to annihilate hallucination."

True patriotism is not produced by human will power; indeed, it must inevitably perish under the lash of self-will and personal domination. True patriotism is that love of country which is authorized and sanctified by the Spirit coming to the flesh. It is never selfish, and as it grows it widens its sympathies, opens its protecting arms, throws the sheltering cloak of its compassionate love over more and more of mankind until, under the impulsion of divine Love itself, patriotism gathers all mankind to its heart. The true patriot, beginning at home with his affections, so purifies his love that he can go abroad to bless. On the pedestal of the statue of a great reformer in the city of Boston we read the words, "My country is the world; my countrymen are all mankind." The true citizen of the world is first of all a patriotic citizen of the kingdom of heaven within, and is actively obedient to the Father-Mother Soul in the order of genuine psychology.

Current Notes

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The reading rooms of First Church of Christ, Scientist, were moved on Saturday [Sept. 22] to the fourteenth floor of the Tribune Building, at 154 Nassau Street. The new rooms have a seating capacity treble that of the ones vacated. The down town location, it is believed, will give a greater number of persons engaged in business, as well as residents of New Jersey, an opportunity for study and meditation.—New York Tribune.

WATTS, CAL.—Plans have been completed for a new church building to be erected for the Christian Science Society. The building will have seating accommodations for one hundred and fifty. It will cover a ground area 38 by 63 feet.—Los Angeles Examiner.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.—Since August, 1916, literature has been placed in county convict camps, the workhouse, the Young Men's Christian Association, the telephone exchange, the relief association, the interurban station, department store rest rooms, railroad shops, cafés, theaters, and street cars, as well as given or mailed to individuals and placed in racks in church and Sunday school. Monitors have been sent to editors throughout the state and to girls' canning clubs. The amount of literature distributed by the literature distribution committee is as follows: 3449 Sentinels, 316 Journals, 31 Heralds, 6514 Monitors, and 22 pamphlets, a total of 10,332 pieces. This committee has placed gift subscriptions for the Monitor in two newspaper offices and in the Young Men's Christian Association, and for the Sentinel, Journal, and Monitor in the Carnegie Public Library.

The Lectures

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH. (First Church).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Mr. Brown, editor of the Selah Optimist, who said in part:—

When the subject of Christian Science is correctly explained it brings joy and peace, because with the understanding of it fear is broken and God-given freedom comes naturally. Permit me to say that Christian Science does not need much explanation. Its greatest mystery is the unerring simplicity of its truth. The great hunger in the world to-day for a better understanding of God proves that the husks of materialism have not satisfied or saved mankind. The constant cry for ages has been for health, happiness, and progress. Christian Science answers this cry and supplies the need. All that is required is a receptive spirit and sufficient humility to learn. No worldly wisdom or scholastic learning is necessary to find this Christ-healing—merely a readiness to accept the truth as clearly stated by Mrs. Eddy. She has elevated religious understanding from a theoretical to a practical basis, and has proven many times beyond a doubt that a clear understanding of Christianity meets every need of mankind.—Yakima Herald.

NEWPORT, R. I. (First Church).—Bliss Knapp, lecturer; introduced by Lee Dare Young, U.S.N., who said in part:—

Theory has no place in the Christian Science religion, which demands of its followers that they accept all of Jesus' teachings as true and practicable here and now, and that each day must see them living nearer to the standard the Master set for us to follow. Christian Science teaches the ever presence of God to help and heal each and every one of us. It does not theorize on this point, but proves it in actual human experience all around you every day of your life. Christian Scientists trust God completely for all things, and are proving daily, in spite of the world's arguments to the contrary, that God knows more about surgery, finance, pleasure, and protection than mortals ever can know, and that His methods are spiritual and not material, for God is Spirit.

PASADENA, CAL. (First Church).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Seymour W. Condon, who said in part:—

At this time, when so many are feeling that political absolutism and ecclesiastical absolutism are in a most subtle way making common cause against human liberty, thoughtful men and women are yearning more earnestly than ever before for a righteousness that shall have in it the element or quality of efficiency. Christian Science strikes the very keynote of righteous efficiency. It teaches and demonstrates the absolute omnipotence and healing ever presence of divine, infinite Love.

BOURNE, MASS. (auspices Society Buzzards Bay).—Bliss Knapp, lecturer; introduced by George A. Stevens, who said in part:—

In 1866 Mary Baker Eddy discovered and put into practice Christian Science, and in 1875 completed her first edition of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which has proven its true value in bringing to light the Principle and truth of the Bible. Through its teachings thousands have been able to see and to receive in some measure man's spiritual heritage.

GREENFIELD, MASS. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Fred L. Hunt, who said in part:—

Christian Science is increasingly commanding the respectful consideration of the world, because the Principle that it teaches is producing tangible results. It is bringing happiness and harmony, health and peace, into the everyday life of countless thousands.

Testimonies of Healing

An awakening of my spiritual understanding to the wonderful power and love of God came to me with a force that was irresistible. Prior to March, 1916, I was engaged in a business which kept me away from home during the week, except on Sundays, but my wife had procured a copy of Science and Health, and she asked me to take it along with me to read. I promised to do so, but as the only chapter which impressed me even a little was the one on Prayer, I gave up reading the book. Later I again tried to read it, but only to lay it aside.

About two weeks after that I had a severe attack of influenza, so went to a specialist on the nose and throat, who treated me about two weeks. As I was no better I did not know what to do. My wife then advised me to see a Christian Science practitioner, and at last I consented. When I went to his office I did nothing but ask questions, which he answered. I began to feel better, and in five treatments was cured. This experience so impressed me that I once more began to read Science and Health, and this time understood it much better.

Shortly after this my wife was suddenly stricken with apoplexy as she was coming downstairs. I heard her fall, and with assistance took her into our rooms. Some ladies in the house aided her, and one of them without my consent called a doctor, who made an examination but found no bones broken. He said the attack was due to nervousness, then wrote a prescription which the lady had filled; but I would not consent to my wife taking the medicine. She went to sleep, and the next morning got up as usual. I was already up and dressed, and a lady who had come in the night before to assist was in the room, when suddenly she called to me that my wife was going to fall, and I sprang up just in time to catch her.

We put my wife to bed in an unconscious condition and I telephoned to her only sister, who had lately had a clear demonstration of the power of God, and also called in her practitioner. In the meantime my wife was speechless and helpless, the entire right side being paralyzed. The second day under Christian Science treatment she was no better, and I feared the end was near. I knew that if she passed on without a doctor in attendance there would be much trouble, so I sent for a physician whom I had known for thirty years, the chief surgeon of a large hospital. He came promptly, looked the case over, and gave a prescription; but the next day I saw there was no hope in doctors, so made up my mind to go back to Christian Science.

The first practitioner had been called away, so another one was asked to take the case, and after five days my wife could speak my name. The doctor came again, but made no comment, so the next day I went to his office and asked him plainly what hope there was of my wife living. He answered, "No hope whatever." I went back home feeling that I was done with medicine, and thoroughly and faithfully believing that my wife would live, for my reading of Science and Health was explained to me like a flash. I clung to Christian Science, and ten days after she had been stricken my wife was up and walking around. The doctor called again to see her, and asked her to get up from the chair and let him see her walk. She did so, and he was astonished. He knew we were using Christian Science, as I had told him I was going to do so, and he said, "Let the good work go on."

My wife is now well, and we are both Christian Scientists. We thank God daily for His loving care, and believe that Mrs. Eddy is a blessing to mankind in her teachings and in her writings; also that the truth she taught will endure for all time.—Major C. J. Berry, San Francisco, Cal.

I wish to express my gratitude for all that Christian Science has done for me. About two years ago my eyes began to trouble me; I was nearly blind, and could not read or sew. I consulted an eye specialist, who after a thorough examination said that cataracts were forming on both eyes and that nothing but an operation would remove them. My husband and I, however, both dreaded an operation.

Several years ago I had heard of Christian Science, but I had very little faith in it at that time. In my extremity, however, I had my daughter write to a practitioner, as there was none in the town where I then lived, and absent treatment was given me. When I had taken six treatments I could read her letters, and after two more I went to see her. She gave me five treatments while I was in the city, and my eyes were healed. My sight is as good as before the trouble. I have also been healed of a sprained foot and other ills. I am very grateful for all the benefits which our heavenly Father has bestowed upon me, and my sincere desire is to be worthy to be called a Christian Scientist.

Jennie Murphy, St. Clair, Mo.

Eight years ago I was instantaneously healed of an internal organic disease, a so-called incurable bowel trouble, and nervous exhaustion, also of corns and bunions, through reading Science and Health. Since then I have had many wonderful experiences of healing. A felon appeared on one of my fingers, and as my mother had often suffered intensely from this trouble I felt no little anxiety. The manifestation was present for about two weeks, but the pain was instantaneously overcome, leaving me free to attend to all my household duties, as well as piano practice, in which that finger was used as freely as any other. After two weeks had passed I noticed that the finger was very much disfigured, but again turned away from sense-testimony, realizing, as the apostle tells us, that "the word of God is quick, and powerful." The finger became perfectly normal, and the nail is now better than it ever was.

Another healing was that of an ulcerated tooth. Some fifteen years ago I had a large rear tooth treated for an abscess, and recall the intense suffering I endured, visiting the dentist every other day for nearly two months before it was filled. Later, when part of the tooth broke off, I turned my thought away, until I awoke one morning with an abscess. I had always suffered greatly for days before visiting a dentist, but this time, after studying the Lesson-Sermon and reading a chapter from Science and Health, I at once sought one out, and he informed me that the tooth would have to be extracted. I said I would think it over, and in walking toward home declared that what is impossible to mortal man is possible to God; that as I seemed to need this tooth, the need would be met. I then went to another dentist, who remarked after looking at the tooth, "I see you have had an abscess." He began the necessary preparation for filling the cavity, and then I realized that fear was entirely absent. With a joyful song in my heart I praised God for the healing. After the work was finished the dentist remarked that he wished some of his other patients were as free from nervousness as I was. I smiled at this, recalling that before I came into Science no dentist ever wished to take me as a patient.

The above are only a few out of many healings I have had, and in grateful acknowledgment to God, also to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, I send this testimony. I am trying to live in harmony with all mankind and to know but the one Mind, infinite and ever present.

SYLVIA KISHIMA, New York, N. Y.

For many years my wife suffered from an internal organic trouble. Many good physicians did all they could to cure her, but without success. Eight years ago Christian Science healed her instantaneously. She had read but a few pages of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, when she found herself suddenly well. This remarkable healing attracted my attention, and I began to study that wonderful book. To my surprise I soon found myself free from stomach trouble and bowel disorder, also from the smoking habit, although I had used tobacco more than fifteen years.

During the past eight years the blessings which have come to me through Christian Science are very many, including the overcoming of physical ills, business troubles, financial difficulties, and social discord, and resulting in moral regeneration and spiritual uplift. For all this I am deeply thankful to God, and also grateful to Mrs. Eddy.

CHOICHIRO KISHIMA.

It is with great pleasure that I write this testimony to express my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for the good I have found in Christian Science, and to tell of the wonderful proof in the case of my ten months old baby. When washing one day I put the wash boiler on the porch after removing the clothes, and while I was hanging them out my elder child called to me that the baby had fallen into the boiler headfirst. When I pulled him out, he seemed to all appearances to have passed away; but I had no fear, and held to the truth that no harm could come to God's child. In less than five minutes the water came out of his mouth and nose and he opened his eyes. Some neighbors wanted me to use material remedies; but I told them God would heal him and he would be all right, and he was.

I am striving each day to learn more of Christian Science, so that I may help to lighten the burdens of others.

ADA M. CRUMP, West Granite City, Ill.

With a deep sense of gratitude I confirm my wife's testimony. Love's ever present help has proven to me without measure a "pearl of great price." Through reading Science and Health I have been healed of the tobacco habit of twenty-three years' standing, also of neuralgia in the eyes from which I had suffered for twenty-four years.

As we press on we cannot be too grateful for the pure thought that discerned spiritually these priceless precepts and gave them to hungering humanity, also for the tireless workers in headquarters. I am striving each day to prove myself worthy the calling of a Christian Scientist.

W. J. CRUMP.

In deep sincerity I wish to express my loving gratitude for the board of lectureship of The Mother Church. One lecture in particular, given in our church, has been with me constantly ever since I heard it, and it was my great blessing to hear it twice. I had just been healed of a serious attack of acute lung trouble, and had overcome fear enough to go out on a rainy night to hear the lecture. I was still under the belief of disease being real, but the healing work was going on, for during the next day the lecture kept coming back and unfolding new thoughts to me, and my consciousness was so cleared that when I heard it again I felt that the lecturer had come for me alone.

While apparently passing through "the valley of the shadow of death," all I could realize was that God was my life. The earnest work of the practitioner, endeavoring to flood my consciousness with a sense of Love, proved to me conclusively that God fills all space and that the healing Principle is Love. The healing was accomplished with but one present treatment and a few absent ones.

Another healing took place shortly afterward. Mrs. Eddy has written on page 339 of Science and Health, "Divine Life destroys death, Truth destroys error, and Love destroys hate." When a sense of hatred was seemingly directed toward me, I did not "stand porter at the door of thought," as our Leader counsels us on page 392 of the same book, but let it in. I found out I was not loving my neighbor as myself, but was disobeying the second commandment, and once more I went down into the valley of the shadow. When almost losing consciousness, again I declared that God was my life, and the healing was instantaneous. The first time the healing came through the work of the practitioner, but the second time through my own realization of the truth. With a deep sense of humility I realized the fearlessness and moral courage of our beloved Leader when she begged us to overcome the sense of God as being personal.

Words are inadequate to express my gratitude to God for giving us Christian Science, and for all His loving-kindness to His children.—MARIAN C. BEUZEVILLE, Long Beach, Cal.

I am indeed grateful for Christian Science and all it has done for me. It has given me a God who is always with me, and has taught me to love more and to see man as he is. I came to Science in the darkest hour of my life and was lifted out of darkness into light. I was healed of chronic colds, sciatica, and many other ailments. Before coming into Science I would suffer for days from sciatica, not being able to move without pain. The physician told me there was no cure for it and that I would have to stand it, but through the power of Truth I was healed in one week. I am very grateful for this healing, also for all the Christian Science publications. I am thankful to God for the blessings my family and I have been enabled to receive, and feel deep gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for giving to the world this new-old religion.—BESS C. SHAW, Rockford, Ill.

As I begin to write of my first healing in Christian Science, a thought of wonder rises in consciousness as to how I managed to live before I came into some understanding of the truth about God and ourselves. I believe all, especially children, long for God; and how can He be revealed except through Christian Science!

Almost instantly I was healed of throat trouble of years' duration, after much suffering had been experienced both from the condition itself and from the efforts of doctors to alleviate the trouble. I finally decided that the torture inflicted by the well-meaning physicians was worse than the original trouble. During one of these painful experiences a stranger approached my mother and inquired for me. Later she helped me very much, but advised me to go to a practitioner and be entirely healed. I did so, and great is my gratitude, not alone for the physical healing, but for the guidance and harmony that divine Love has bestowed upon me.

From the first I loved Mrs. Eddy and her wondrous works, revealing a God who is all good, in whom "is no darkness at all;" a Father-Mother God, altogether lovely. For this alone we should extend to our Leader endless love, by following in the straight and narrow path up to the Christ-mind.—VIOLET SEATON-FRANK, Fishkill, N. Y.

In my case it has again been proven that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." After our baby passed on, and I found myself in extremely poor health, I lost all faith in medicine and was willing to turn to God with all my heart. In a few treatments I was healed of a serious internal trouble, so that I could walk without pain. This trouble had manifested itself following the birth of my second child, and I was confined to the bed for four months and for two years suffered much pain whenever I tried to walk. After taking up Science I gave birth to a child, and with the help of a practitioner no pain was experienced, although there was a little fear at first, and I gained steadily every day. In comparison with my experiences under medical treatment this was nothing short of wonderful to me and to my friends, and I can but praise God for "his wonderful works to the children of men."

My two little boys were practically healed of measles in three days, and after the fifth day all outward symptoms had vanished. One of the boys burned his feet severely, but with the help of a practitioner the pain was overcome in an hour and he was the first one up the next morning, running and romping as usual; his feet were almost covered with blisters, but these quickly disappeared. For this healing and numerous other blessings I feel thankful to God, also grateful to Mrs. Eddy. My greatest hope is that I may be found a worthy Christian Scientist.

ADA VARNEY HOPKINS, Chicago, Ill.

I should like to express my gratitude for Christian Science and for all the blessings it has brought to my home. In 1914 my little son, aged six years, had a severe attack of scarlet fever. He was attending a public school, and because of the law and of those around us, I called a doctor, who said the boy would have to go away to an isolated hospital. He said the child had an abscess at the back of his throat, and he made out a list of material remedies for me to use. I told him I should not use them; that God was our only healer. The doctor made no objection beyond saying I was running a great risk.

I then applied to a Christian Science practitioner, who treated the boy, with the result that he was healed instantaneously. The fever left him, the abscess disappeared, and when the doctor came the next morning my son was eating an egg. Of course he was taken away, because the case had been reported; but I had no fear, for I knew that God was with him. At the usual time he was sent home. When I noticed he had a discharge at the nose, a great feeling of resentment seemed to lay hold of me, and I kept wondering why this thing should be, as the child's suffering was terrible; at times he could not breathe, and the discharge was very offensive. I again asked for treatment, but the condition did not seem to yield and the child's cries were distressing to hear. I helped him to the best of my knowledge in Christian Science, but fear seemed to creep in. One day when the practitioner was talking to me of how to keep our thoughts pure and loving, I saw that the error was in my own consciousness. I had all the time been harboring resentment, discontent, and uncharitableness toward others. That evening I cleared my thought from all wrong, and the boy was healed in the same night.

A few months after this my youngest child, a girl of four years, was suddenly attacked with what seemed to be a mortal sickness. She was so ill that she could not turn, or even raise her hands. The same practitioner treated her, but I was greatly tempted to be afraid. I was on the eve of traveling to a town about forty miles away, but it seemed impossible to take the child. She was unconscious most of the time, but when sensible kept repeating to herself these words from Mrs. Eddy's hymn: "Shepherd, show me how to go." I did indeed want the good Shepherd to show me how to go, as my furniture was all packed for this journey to another home. At times I was tempted to be downcast, but I clung steadfastly to the truth.

When the morning came I looked away from all error, although it seemed very evident to the senses. I did not dress the child, but wrapped her in a blanket. She seemed to sleep all the time, and when we arrived at the end of the journey she looked up in my face and said, "The Shepherd showed us how to go." What beautiful proof I had of these words! The practitioner had given her absent treatment, and she had a perfect healing. In less than a week she was running about as usual.

I hope this testimony will help some one struggling along on the road from sense to Soul. We are indeed grateful for Christian Science,—for all the blessings we have received and the help it is to us in our daily life. It has never failed us when faithfully applied. We are grateful to Mrs. Eddy for showing this wonderful truth to the world, and thankful for a God who is Love, "a very present help in trouble."

MARGUERITE BARRETT, London W., England.

It was while visiting some friends early in 1912 that I first became interested in Christian Science by hearing of the healing of their little son; and I can express but a little of the gratitude I feel to God for leading me to this wonderful truth. I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for making a clearer and better understanding of the Bible and of the words and works of Jesus available to mankind. At the time Christian Science found me I was a wreck mentally, morally, and physically, full of regret for what might have been and full of fear for the future; but with the study of Science and Health and the Sentinel and Journal, together with the help and counsel so freely and lovingly given, I have learned to forget the past, and fear of the future lessens as understanding increases.

I have had many and wonderful proofs of the healing power of the truth as taught in Christian Science, among them being the overcoming of neuralgia in the head, of appendicitis, from which with the loving help of a practitioner I was freed in four days, and of a sprained thumb and ankle which yielded in three days. The tobacco habit left me while reading Science and Health. There have also been many beautiful healings in my family of three, and where there was seeming anger and discord now there is love and harmony. For all these many blessings I am deeply thankful to God, but still more so for the uplift in thought which makes earth a fairer and holier place and teaches the brotherhood of man.

I should like to express a little of the gratitude I feel to all the kind friends who have so readily and lovingly extended a helping hand over the rough places; and I know that thanks are best expressed in trying to follow the teachings of our Master. My prayer and hope is that I may one day be worthy of the name Christian Scientist.

I desire to express my gratitude for Christian Science and for what it has done for my family. One evening in November, 1909, a relative of my husband, one whom I had met but once before, called to see me. She found me a nervous wreck and my little girl suffering from what is called a "rising" in the head. To me she seemed a messenger sent from God, as I soon found that she loved to talk of the Bible and of spiritual growth, for which I was hungering and thirsting. I was almost discouraged trying to talk to anyone on religion, for each one would avoid the subject; but that evening was an inspiration to me which has never been forgotten.

On leaving, this relative said she would pray for my baby if I desired, and I was only too glad to have her do so, as I believed in prayer, although I then knew nothing of what prayer in Christian Science meant. To my surprise the child was entirely healed the next morning. I had help for her a number of times before asking for treatment for myself. At twenty-two months of age she had not walked a step, although material means of every kind had been used; but after the first treatment in Christian Science she used her feet, and in a week she walked all right. Words cannot express my thankfulness to God for His healing truth. I asked help for my eyes after wearing glasses seventeen years, and the healing was instantaneous. That was over six years ago, and I have never had any need of the glasses since.

My second child was born after I became interested in Christian Science, and he is healthy, happy, and self-reliant. I have been healed of rheumatism, stomach trouble, cuts, burns, and many other discordant conditions, but feel more thankful for my healing of a wrong conception of God and of God's relation to man. I am truly grateful for a better understanding of the Bible, and feel deep gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for being a pure channel of love through which God could let His light shine that we too might have this beautiful truth. Many times before learning of Christian Science I have earnestly prayed for understanding, asking that God would let His light shine upon His Word so that I might know how to serve Him aright, for I was not satisfied with the limited light I had. I now realize that Christian Science is the light for which I was longing.

I first heard of Christian Science over two years ago. Before that time I was in a state of weakness and mental depression, which condition may have been induced by my having drawn away from God. Still, I was earnestly searching after the truth, and through a wonderful dispensation was led upon the right road. My first knowledge of Christian Science was received through a lecture on this subject. I was filled with the greatest astonishment, as I had no idea there was something in the world which could free us from sin, disease, poverty, and all manner of inharmony. The impression which I received at this lecture, little as I understood the subject presented, proved such an inspiration and had so liberating an influence that I realized then and there that Christian Science meant salvation from all my troubles.

Soon after that evening I called on a practitioner of this teaching and asked her to treat me, which she did in the most loving way. Through her faithful, indefatigable work, I became a different woman. The application of the teaching freed me of a lung trouble which had stayed with me despite the fact that I had spent years at a sanatorium trying to get rid of it. Life at times was a misery on account of a nervous heart condition, which would bring me very low and make me feel very depressed. Starting from a false premise, I believed that I must accept and patiently submit to this trial as ordained by destiny. I have now learned to apply Christian Science under all circumstances and in all cases, no matter what their nature, and whenever properly understood and applied, I find it works beneficially.

I am most deeply grateful for having thus been able to acquaint myself with God, and also wish to thank all those who have helped and will continue to help me to follow the way which leadeth out of darkness into light.

ELISABET OTTO, Dresden, Germany.

With heartfelt gratitude I send this testimony of healing in Christian Science, as it may be the means of helping some one, and I feel it a duty as well as a privilege to acknowledge God's goodness to me. On Nov. 26, 1915, I was taken ill very suddenly with acute lung trouble, and sent word to a dear friend, a Christian Scientist, that I needed help. After seeing me she telephoned to a practitioner, who took the case. For the first five days I was unconscious of my surroundings part of the time, and many of my friends said I could not live; but God was lovingly taking care of me, and I gained strength each day. By the first of January I was able to do my own housework, even the washing, though to mortal sense this was a dangerous thing to do; but it was a proof to me of God's protecting care.

I am so thankful I was led to know about Christian Science several years ago through the healing of one of our daughters. Before I got through reading the beautiful chapter on Prayer in Science and Health, I was convinced it was the true teaching of Christ Jesus. I am thankful to God, and grateful to the many dear friends who were so kind to me, as well as to Mrs. Eddy, who gave to the world that wonderful book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which studied with the Bible shows us the way from sense to Soul.—CATHERINE M. ROSS, Argenta, Mont.

In gratitude and thankfulness for the understanding of God that I have gained through Christian Science, I send this testimony. Christian Science first came to my aid when I was about sixteen years old, and while I did not take up the study of it then, although wonderfully healed, I was brought back to it through suffering until I recognized it as the only way. I have been healed of a continual feeling of weakness and exhaustion, which prevented me from performing my necessary duties, also of stomach and bowel trouble; and greatest of all, a sense of despondency has entirely disappeared.

I thank God continually for His constant and loving care, for I realize that He leads and governs me always; that "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for the many channels through which she has made it possible for us to learn the truth.

MRS. EVERETT N. BRYAN, Waterford, Cal.

I desire to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. The truth came to me at a time when I was called upon to part from one who was near and dear to me; but with the help of a practitioner I was led out of sense into Soul, the heaven-bestowed heritage of man. I was shown that no good thing could be separated from man in the image and likeness of God, and that life is eternal. Since then I have had many proofs of God's loving care for His children, and I am striving by daily living the truth to be worthy to be called a Christian Scientist.

From Our Exchanges

[Rev. W. S. Swayne in The Guardian]

Men rallied to the call of Christ; they became disciples of the kingdom,—they thought not of themselves and of their own welfare, whether spiritual or temporal, but of God and His cause, and His kingdom, and they found that in so doing they had got into the right relationship to God, and to their fellow men; they had achieved their true life; in a word, they were saved. They did not, however, set out to secure anything for themselves, even their own eternal salvation, but rather to submit themselves wholly to God. They sought first "the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," and they found that unexpected blessings were added to them.

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.Litt., in The Christian Commonwealth]

To-day, in the presence of an unparalleled anguish, the terror of the seen ought to drive us to the tenderness of the unseen. If our hold on the outward is being weakened, our grasp of the inward and eternal ought to be firmer, evoking a new mystic sense. A shadow of mystery and awe is upon us. Unless something fair and fine comes out of it, enriching the times to be, surely we have not met it in the right way.

[The Christian Register]

There is nothing so much needed of religion now as faith. We could dispense with all its faiths if we could surely keep its faith; and without its faith all the faiths in the world would be like bran after the sifting. For faith is the spirit and purpose of a religion. It is what runs through men's beliefs, giving them kinship and a unity under all their differences. It is not what men believe but how they believe it that constitutes their faith.

[The Methodist Recorder]

What One could say with perfect truth, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life," all could not affirm. What I think is needed is frankness, transparent sincerity. The candid friend may be a nuisance. But shining speech, like shining countenances and shining streams and shining morning hours, will bring comfort and cheer to the heart.

[The Watchman-Examiner]

The church has won its important and decisive victories, East and West, and throughout the changing centuries, by its fearless proclamation of the essential doctrines of the Christian faith. Great conceptions of great themes, great convictions concerning great truths, have bred great preachers, great revivals, and great missionary enterprises.

Food Conservation

As noted in telegraphic dispatches in The Christian Science Monitor, the United States Food Administration has decided to greatly extend the scope of its activities.

The Food Administrator, Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, has appealed to Christian Scientists, as to all good citizens, to extend every aid possible.

What Each Family Can Do

This is what the Government, through the Food Administrator, asks in the cause of food conservation:

The wise and careful use of Wheat, Meat, Butter-fat and Milk. The use of other fats for butter in cooking. The use of other cereals for part of the wheat in bread.

The use of other meats, such as game and fish, or the use of eggs and cheese, to reduce the demand for beef, pork and mutton, should be advocated.

The larger use of fruits and vegetables should be featured. The substitution of the foods that are plenty for the foods that are scarce, or especially needed for export, does not imply any cutting down in the ration of nourishing foods.

Waste in cooking and serving must be eliminated. Perishable foods, locally grown, must be consumed more freely. The "Gospel of the clean plate" must be preached.

Opportunity to send the messengers of Christian Science on their healing mission to the world has been opened through the plan of the Postmaster-General of the United States to send to soldiers and sailors at the front, at nominal postage, literature offered by individuals at post offices or to postmen.

A printed notice on the front of this issue signed by Mr. Burleson explains the simple plan.

Those desiring to send periodicals who do not wish to send their own copies, or copies previously given for local distribution work, may make arrangements with any Christian Science reading room to send periodicals regularly as desired.

"Like devastating witch-grass"

NELLIE B. MACE

ONCE overcome through the scientific understanding of Mind, a diseased or discordant condition does not recur. Christian Science heals sickness beyond the possibility of recurrence. If there should seem to be a relapse, the error which bases the belief of repetition may be scientifically uncovered and removed. The suffering from which Christian Science has once relieved a man cannot return any more than a nettle which has been pulled up can again appear. If another manifestation like the one destroyed arises, this can only mean that the rudimentary belief which bears this particular discord has not yet been extirpated.

The real work of Christian Science is to destroy the belief in materialism which infolds the germinal root and stem of disease and nourishes its outspringing manifestations. The overcoming of the false mentality is the way to healing beyond recurrence. Mrs. Eddy makes this sufficiently clear on page 217 of Science and Health, where she says, "When you have once conquered a diseased condition of the body through Mind, that condition never recurs, and you have won a point in Science." The human mind persists in a self-fettering system of association. Certain circumstances or conditions are supposed to produce certain results. If similar circumstances reappear, the identical outcome is expected; and as men first see subjectively before seeing the object, if a false conception be fostered, the manifestation usually appears just as it was believed it would. Heredity, contagion, war, illustrate this point.

Recurrence does not come from any inherent power in what is called disease to bring itself back. Repetition is only a part of the material conception from which disease arose in the first place. Christian Science points to the need for deeper healing in such an event. It lifts the very root of belief in evil out of its native soil. More than this, it eliminates, slowly it may seem, but surely, the carnal mind itself, the soil and subsoil in which the embryo weeds of fear, passions, and all sensuousness take root and from which they derive their sustenance.

One or more wrong conditions of thought may have been uncovered and destroyed at the time of one's first healing of physical disease. The physical and mental discords disappeared as a single unreality. Later on,—it may be soon or after several years,—other circumstances and evil influences may arise which make an appeal to the old emotions of fear, rebellion, bitterness. If these be indulged, there may come a day when one stands confounded before a recurrence of some disorder which he had felt confident was healed; but it is not the same manifestation. Nothing which is really destroyed returns. The first healing definitely and finally removed the expression of an evil belief in one specific instance; now the work must go deeper. The entire rootstock of belief in materiality must be unearthed and destroyed. The last liability to evil emotions, fears and lusts, must be torn out. Since "the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth," to quote Isaiah, the false consciousness itself which nourishes the material belief must be exchanged for spiritual consciousness, the scientific understanding of Principle.

With peculiar appropriateness Mrs. Eddy employs the figure of a certain divaricate weed to illustrate the crowding stubbornness of belief in a material mind and its manifestation, matter. On page 343 of "Miscellaneous Writings" she says: "The weeds of mortal mind are not always destroyed by the first uprooting; they reappear, like devastating witch-grass, to choke the coming clover. O stupid gardener! watch their reappearing, and tear them away from their native soil, until no seedling be left to propagate—and rot." An injury resented, an imaginary wrong brooded over, an evil tendency persisted in, spreads until all righteous thinking is crowded out.

A weed in another tribe of this same grass family, known as couch grass, or quitch grass, illustrates the evil of repetition; a bit of mischief-making reaching abroad to become a slander; a little feud multiplying into a great war; an incipient fear increasing to epidemic. This perennial multiplies in cultivated grounds by its creeping rootstock. Its prostrate stem produces roots below and leaves above. It is difficult of extirpation because its stems need only to touch the soil in order to begin to grow both downward and outward. If the plow cuts the running stem, this does not destroy but rather accelerates its propagation. Where one branch is cut, more independent plants, like the fabled hydra, spring up. So in scientific healing it is not enough to remove merely one particular manifestation of an evil belief; divine metaphysics shows that the soil of carnal mind itself, out of which disease and discord first arise and then in turn take root and multiply, must give place entirely to the divine Mind, which causes and nourishes only the unfoldment of spiritual ideas.

No instance of recurrence is recorded in the healing ministry of Jesus the Christ. The truth he reflected so thoroughly eradicated the error which lay behind the outward manifestation, that the healing of the particular disease he was dealing with was instantaneous and permanent. Jesus knew, however, that complete immunity from all disease and discord could be gained only as individual consciousness came out of not only specific false beliefs, but all materiality in which these evil beliefs propagate. So he said to the infirm man whom he healed at Bethesda, "Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee." A lapse to old mental conditions would inevitably objectify evilly. The first healing had lifted this man's consciousness, through the power of the Christ, nearer to Principle on a specific point, but individual effort would be necessary for him to come into the abiding understanding of divine Mind and the operation of spiritual law.

No material tendencies, under any extenuating name of disposition, pride, self-will, or what not, may be left to bury themselves more deeply in mortal mind, thence to send out fresh manifestations. The desires of the flesh, sensuous pleasures, self-ease, as well as the beliefs of suffering, must be exterminated. The Israelites were commanded to drive out all the evil conditions of the land. Concerning what they indolently or willfully allowed to remain, it was pronounced, they "shall be pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell."

The individual who has begun to understand the meaning of the struggle between the unreal and the real, will not be dismayed nor yield before a reappearance of evil. Rather will such a one labor the more sincerely, as did Paul, to the end of "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." Neither disease nor discord is physical, but always a subjective state of an unreal mind. Liability to disease can be destroyed, then, only as these subjective states are disposed of. And as these mental states arise like a miasma from the soil of mortal mind itself, real security must be found by emerging from an unreal mentality into the Mind of the Christ. Mrs. Eddy says: "So-called mortal mind or the mind of mortals being the remote, predisposing, and the exciting cause of all suffering, the cause of disease must be obliterated through Christ in divine Science, or the so-called physical senses will get the victory" (Science and Health, p. 230). It was surely this truth of the allness of divine Mind which the prophet glimpsed when he said, "What do ye imagine against the Lord? he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time."

Man's High Destiny

WARREN CHARLES KLEIN

On page 46 of "No and Yes" our revered Leader writes these stirring words: "Man has a noble destiny; and the full-orbed significance of this destiny has dawned on the sick-bound and sin-enslaved." At this time many individuals who have read these lines are asking, What is this destiny; am I participating in it? The ancient Greeks believed in three so-called destinies which supposedly swayed the lives of men. They were known as the Fates,—Clotho the spinner, Lachesis the disposer of lots, and Atropos the inevitable. From the uninstructed human standpoint destiny means fate or doom. Not knowing or not caring about the matter, the average mortal makes good fortune his choice, but carelessly accepts sin, sickness, and death as his destiny. With the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, to guide him, the Christian Scientist banishes from his thought all material philosophy and appropriates the spiritual point of view of Christ Jesus and his apostles.

That valiant apostle Paul states clearly and unmistakably the true and only destiny of man, as recorded in Romans: "For whom he [God] did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." To be conformed to the image of the Son of God is therefore the only destiny of mankind, and Christian Science is the divine agency through which this desirable conformity is being accomplished. In Christian Science we discover what constitutes man as the image and likeness of God, and this correct and practical instruction enables us to rid ourselves of false beliefs, fears, and doubts in respect to our happiness and our destiny. As man coexists with the perfect Mind, Life, Truth, and Love, and reflects God, he necessarily partakes of the divine nature.

Since the "great First Cause" is perfect and indestructible, man as its likeness or effect must likewise be perfect and indestructible. Since God is perfect divine Love, the real man must be perfectly loving or express perfect loveliness. Since God is perfect Mind, the real man must express perfect mentality. Since God is perfect Truth, the real man must be perfectly truthful, or express perfect truthfulness. These scientific and absolutely logical deductions may be carried through all the synonymous terms for God. There is no corporeality involved in this line of reasoning. It is a thing of consciousness, and it is the absolute truth about God and man. The practical benefit that can be derived from this understanding has been proved by thousands of people in the healing of sickness, sin, and death, as well as by growth in grace and by increased service to the world and to mankind.

Mrs. Eddy tells us at length in our textbook how the healing work and growth are accomplished, and on page 160 of Miscellany she instructs us how to appropriate the divine energy and participate in the divine destiny. She says, "To live so as to keep human consciousness in constant relation with the divine, the spiritual, and the eternal, is to individualize infinite power; and this is Christian Science." The truth about God and the real man can be applied to every condition in the human economy. The fundamental truth about Principle and its idea can be utilized so as to destroy and cast from human thought every vestige of fear and superstition, also the belief in disability and incapacity.

The spinnings of the mortal dreams of sin, the disposings of the human lots of sickness, the dire belief in the inevitableness of death, can all be annihilated and finally obliterated from human consciousness through the application of our understanding of God, and of man in His image and likeness. The infinity of absolute Truth as understood in Christian Science is unmistakable; and step by step, "here a little, and there a little," human consciousness is being pierced by the spiritual message of light and good cheer. Our destiny and possibilities along this line are not only seen theoretically, but students of Christian Science expect and have many realizations of the practical operation of this far-reaching and ever-present Truth.

Some people, however, still maintain a belief in fate or destiny, and leave the divine quite out of the question. For instance, a man who possesses great strength of character and who is looked upon by his fellow beings as successful in his chosen profession, who has perhaps attained eminence, accumulated a fortune, and built so greatly in the human way that nothing more can be desired to make his little world satisfactory to himself, may believe that he has fulfilled his destiny. Christian Science comes to him and shows him that he still has a long way to go before he can claim completeness and thus fulfill his higher destiny. In order to reflect the complete image and likeness of God he must have some definite understanding of the spiritual man of God's creation. He cannot claim to have demonstrated completeness until he has brought out the feminine qualities of tenderness, purity, and love, together with the masculine qualities of strength, intelligence, and truth. The ideal man is perfectly balanced spiritually and mentally, but mortals must realize this complete manhood and womanhood in individual consciousness in order to express man in the image and likeness of the Father-Mother God.

Likewise a woman may have demonstrated purity and love and success in one or several activities, but to fulfill her true destiny she must also realize the strength, intelligence, and truth that belong to man in the image and likeness of the one creator. The manhood and womanhood of God's creating must appear and be demonstrated in the individual consciousness in order to fulfill man's high destiny. This manhood and womanhood is wholly in Mind, in God, and is the ideal discovered and explained by our Leader. This immortal model and divine conception is purely individual and spiritual in its understanding and attainment, and it is revealed through Christian Science. Human philosophy, material psychology, and mortal belief would endeavor to put this ideal into corporeality, or "flesh and bones," as Jesus called it, and thereby nullify it; but Christian Science maintains its immortality and spiritual omnipresence in qualities of thought, despite all mortal testimony to the contrary. Christian Science maintains that we are destined to understand this divine fact of completeness perfectly, and visibly express it in conduct and in experience.

It is related that the Chaldeans and the ancient Greeks looked to the stars and to gods many for their destiny. In the history of nations some humanly great men have depended upon astrological calculations to point their destinies. Chronological data are of no importance, but it is interesting to note that during the very year in which the greatest modern believer in so-called human destiny passed away on the island of St. Helena—1821—the herald of this new-old understanding of a nobler destiny was born in Bow, New Hampshire.

Christian Science teaches that only those are highly born who are the sons and daughters of Spirit. In the divine genealogy there is naught of the pride or the bravado of human birth, or of mortal life and death. Each one of us will realize his likeness to God as he puts off the mortal and puts on the immortal. And thus we learn that our divine destiny is simply that we are to be completely conformed to the spiritual idea, the image and likeness of divine Love. Any one who has the understanding of this spiritual man, as taught in Christian Science, and lives in accord with this understanding, is participating in some measure in the noble destiny revealed through our revered Leader.

Self-denial

FLORIA A. MOCATTA

To find the true meaning of a word we usually must wade through the sea of material associations and accumulated traditions which conceal its real status in the dictionary of human language. Webster defines self-denial as "denial of one's self; forbearing to gratify one's own desires." A familiar sequence of ideas implies that this practice propitiates an unknown power, whose pleasure it would appear is to deprive worshipers of something considered desirable. Theology perpetuates this belief, which fosters an exaggerated egotism manifested in self-indulgence, in self-righteousness, or in extreme self-effacement,—a state of consciousness which is sometimes only self-seeking in disguise. For the furtherance of its own ends mistaken dogma manipulates these facts and encourages an asceticism which, instead of destroying the selfhood it is seeking to suppress, only accentuates it.

Christian Science, with the illuminating torch of Truth, lends to the question of self-denial a new significance, unfolding fresh areas of spiritual activity. As understood in Christian Science self-denial is the evangelization of human thought through elimination of the belief in life, pain, or pleasure as resident in matter. The self which seeks expression in a thousand subtle ways should be unceasingly denied, for it is only a mortal concept masquerading as God's man; consequently it is but the counterfeit of man as eternally coexisting with God, made in His image and likeness,—a statement contained in the Bible and confirmed by Christian Science.

Constant realization of the only real selfhood will gradually efface from consciousness any falsity needing to be denied, and will reveal God's perfect man, without sin or fault, dwelling where he always was and always will be,—"eternal in the heavens," the true consciousness. Any condemnatory, contradictory creed, attempting to destroy or to lessen man's true individuality, is doomed to eventual oblivion; for the teachings of Christian Science, flowing in an irresistible wave of progression, are steadily annihilating the barriers of sense which hold mortals in the bondage of false doctrines, and these teachings are transforming the consciousness of mankind through the understanding of unadulterated reality.

The life of Jesus of Nazareth is one continuous chronicle of denial of the supposititious human self, and the unfoldment to humanity of the true Ego, culminating in the eternally complete triumph of man as symbolized in the resurrection and ascension. It is possible for each and all of us, through consistent study of the Bible and the Christian Science publications, gradually to rise above the misty haze of mortal misconception and gain the clear heights of truth. "In the quiet sanctuary of earnest longings," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 15 of Science and Health, "we must deny sin and plead God's allness." We are denying sin when we refuse to endow matter with life, power, or purpose; when we silence the incessant promptings of selfishness and repudiate the pretentious jurisdiction of sense.

In order that human consciousness may become clear, erroneous earthly beliefs must be continually crucified. This process is the same in the case of individuals as it is for nations. No nation attains true greatness unless the interest of the individual is subordinate to that of the nation, and the interest of the nation must be ultimately subordinated to the welfare of the world. Out of the narrow haven of personal preoccupations we emerge into the ocean of universal sympathy, where sense suggestion becomes less obstructive, and purified thought, seeking a higher basis of reasoning, attains the place of which we read in Judges that "God hath given it into your hands; a place where there is no want of anything that is in the earth."

Through the leaven of Christian Science, permeating mortal thought, the obsession of matter becomes less aggressive in the world consciousness, and the realization of Spirit's power is more widely disseminated. It should be noted, however, that persistent denial of false selfhood, without the recognition and acknowledgment of the true selfhood, induces a negative mental condition which opens the door wherein false mental suggestion enters and pursues its poisonous intent. To believe that in depriving ourselves or denying ourselves something good or desirable we are able to benefit others materially, betrays ignorance of the foundational law of spiritual supply, which is never limited, never halting, but continuously active and exact. This law was demonstrated by Christ Jesus in the distribution of loaves and fishes to the multitude, when supply was demonstrated through the understanding of Mind's allness and included no sense of sacrifice.

We must deny human selfhood that we may perceive spiritual selfhood, and thus appreciate the fact of gain wherein is no loss. This individual mental process helps the whole race by lifting the burden of beliefs in poverty and privation which press upon mortal thought through the channels of sense. It will be seen that all which anyone possesses in reality is the understanding of God, good, and this understanding is open to all alike, through patient study and practice of the spiritual teachings which are based upon divine Principle, and unceasing denial of error's effort to dominate human consciousness.

Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 462 of Science and Health that "self-denial, sincerity, Christianity, and persistence alone win the prize, as they usually do in every department of life." Perplexedly, ofttimes inconsistently, mankind is continuously seeking some method of attaining better living conditions. In this quest it has hitherto been confronted with a mass of false conclusions and laws, wholly unconvincing and imperfectly practicable. Amid this medley of hypothesis and conjecture the most prominent theological doctrine is redemption by self-denial, in the sense of sacrifice, as a means of grace with a humanly conceived God, a method which emphasizes pagan systems and fosters ignorance of the creator's capacity to provide all good for all His creatures.

If we believe that any of God's ideas can for an instant be denied an iota of good, we question omnipotence; and if we believe that by self-denial, as it is ordinarily understood, good is being bestowed on some one else at our expense, we are presuming to usurp the divine prerogative, we are endeavoring vainly to divert the even current of divine law, "since," as we read on page 494 of Science and Health, "to all mankind and in every hour, divine Love supplies all good." Between the opposite poles of mortal thought—self-abnegation or self-sacrifice on the one hand, and self-indulgence or selfish desire on the other—lies the path indicated by our Leader in her teachings, where the limitations consequent upon false concepts of Deity disappear and carnal desires are destroyed.

The self-satisfaction of asceticism has lulled mankind for centuries in the security of an empty hope, but the irresistible impetus of Truth as revealed in Christian Science teaches us, proportionately to our understanding of Spirit, that through the denial of mortal selfhood the Christ-man may be demonstrated. Spirituality is a condition of Mind consequent upon continual correct thinking, and it is through the whole-hearted exercise of this faculty that man glimpses the glory of spiritual selfhood and enters into the kingdom.

Spiritual Food

MINNIE S. BELL

So long as mortals believe in a material body, it necessarily follows that material food will be needed by them; but when through the study of metaphysics we learn that Life is God, Spirit, then we begin to look to other sources than matter for our supply, our daily bread.

As the Master sat by Jacob's well, hungry, thirsty, and weary, he found the sustenance he needed by giving out the truth to the woman who had come there to draw water. When his disciples returned from their search for material food, they found that their Master's need had been supplied,—his hunger and weariness were gone. Their thought was still too material, however, to grasp reality, to discern that Truth is able to supply every need of man, and so they did not understand Jesus when he said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of," but said one to another, "Hath any man brought him aught to eat?"

In Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "The one important interpretation of Scripture is the spiritual" (p. 320), and only such interpretation will give us the food we need. Suppose one were to give a starving man a basketful of Brazil nuts, and he did not know that the hard shell hid the food which he was needing; we would not help him unless we showed him that by breaking the shell he could get at the kernel. If we read the Bible simply as the history of certain tribes of people, it can do nothing for us in the way of salvation from sin, disease, and death. As our Leader says on page 241 of our textbook, "Take away the spiritual signification of Scripture, and that compilation can do no more for mortals than can moonbeams to melt a river of ice."

Before our dear Leader opened up the Scriptures, showing us how to get at the food contained therein, we were in just such a plight as the starving man, because we were dwelling upon material theories all the time. Thanks to Mrs. Eddy we have been shown how to break through these incrustations and so get at the "kernel" of truth, the real food contained in the Bible. Did not our Master say, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God"? Spiritual understanding is the bread of life, and when we fully realize this we shall be willing to search the Scriptures for that bread, and also be ready to break it for others.

How often we hear it said that "history repeats itself;" and in a sense this is true of material history, for men are simply going round and round in a circle of material beliefs, crying out that life is a mystery and there is no satisfaction to be had on this side of the grave. Neither is there, so long as we try to work out the problem of life from a material basis and do not take the divine Principle as our starting point. When we make divine Truth our starting point, then all the tangles begin to unravel; we start to know where before we only believed, and to prove what had seemed to our clouded sense only a mystery. Then, too, thanks be to our Father-Mother God, we know what is our daily bread and how to obtain it.

Unfoldment

EDWARD EVERETT NORWOOD

In Christian Science a correct understanding of the truth must antedate any satisfactory demonstration of it. We have this truth only in the proportion that we prove it. The human consciousness which is sufficiently awake to good to protect itself from evil suggestion, is unfolding to God, good, every day and hour. Why? Because it is embodying spiritual ideas, an infinitude of which are ever present and always available. Conversely, this spiritual activity neutralizes and eliminates the arguments and suggestions of sinful sense, and so escapes "the corruption that is in the world through lust," —the belief of mind in matter.

What a great difference there is between the two! To mortal sense there are two kinds of masters. The one, false thinking, based upon personal sense, leads us into bondage; the other, spiritual reflection (right thinking), based upon Principle and law and rightly directed, sets us free. As the Master declared, "If the Son . . . shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." It is pitiful to consider the bondage which human sense endures because of its false beliefs. It sees no way out, because it perceives not the truth of being. It has no individuality, but is simply an ignorant participant in the universal illusion of life in matter.

Now the moment human consciousness is awakened to the demands of Truth, it begins to be spiritualized, becoming in a degree active, patient, loving, and pure, and is on the way to perfection. It sees that there is but one attraction, divine Love, although there seem to be many counterfeits. It becomes wiser, because it begins to reflect the one wisdom. It becomes humble, because it embodies the idea of humility and knows there is nothing in mortal mind to be proud of. It becomes pure, because the idea of purity is being individualized and thereby the Principle of purity is discerned. Above all it becomes loving, because thought has so risen above the limited and personal sense of love that the desire is to help and heal, and thus to bless mankind in the one affection. In short, the old things of personal sense are passing away, and all things are becoming new.

All these mental steps are significant of growth,—of spiritual unfoldment. On page 261 of Miscellany Mrs. Eddy writes: "To mould aright the first impressions of innocence, aids in perpetuating purity and in unfolding the immortal model, man in His image and likeness." One is beginning to put his mental activity into terms of exactness from a logical basis of right reasoning, Principle and law; and as this is done the fallacious arguments of sinful sense are seen as illusion and no longer deceive. Human consciousness is emerging from the general identification of mortal mind, and individualizing the infinite power which is supreme good, ever present, ever active, and always available.

One learns what a blessing and joy he is to himself and the universe simply because he lives in it; and his thought is helping to heal and redeem universal consciousness. He rejoices at every experience, for each is a proof of God's presence and protecting care. With the revelator he intelligently discerns the "new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven," and realizes that this holy habitation is his eternal home. It gives him courage to press on to greater heights, unfolding new beauties, more exalted views, and embodying more and more the transcendental spiritual ideas of the infinite and eternal Mind.

Because of all this, because he is reflecting in a greater degree the supreme good, his consciousness is clear and pure enough to desire only the real, the good, and the true, cherishing no affinity with error, and courageously meeting it whenever and wherever it seems to appear, detecting and exposing it as illusion, having neither place nor power, no matter how attenuated and subtle it may appear or how tenacious it may seem to be in its grasp. He becomes a good healer of the sick and of all discordant conditions; one whose every thought, motive, and purpose is to bless and uplift and strengthen his fellow men, and whose joy is in the Lord, upon whose law he meditates "day and night."

He is grateful to God at all times for the many blessings received, counting them over and over and cherishing them with happy, joyous heart. His gratitude is intelligent, because he discerns the Principle thereof and the law through which these blessings are manifested. He rejoices, not for the outward signs or symbols, but because he is unfolding in the Science of being; that his consciousness is being purified, and he knows no man after the flesh, but stands for his spiritual identity in Mind every moment. He knows full well that he has the truth, or an idea, only as it is so well defined in his consciousness that he can impart it to the prepared thought about him; and ceasing to impart, he ceases to possess. Mrs. Eddy points this out on page 323 of Science and Health: "If 'faithful over a few things,' we shall be made rulers over many; but the one unused talent decays and is lost."

As the student of Christian Science presses on, making active and vital his understanding of Truth, he is bringing heaven to earth and enjoying it all the time. He finds that every right thought overcomes false belief, and the fear and the trembling, the self-pity and the whining, vanish away. He is courageous and hopeful, patient and loving, putting a stout heart to a steep hill, and rejoicing in the undying realization that Love's sunshine is always about us and a good God is everywhere.

["Be of good comfort"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Sept. 7, 1917]

Most people are aware that discordant mental conditions affect the body. Thus, for example, anger, fear, jealousy, and such like passions, will derange bodily function; and without doubt if indulged in for prolonged periods they tend to produce certain types of disease. Indeed it is usually conceded that evil thinking directly produces discordant bodily effects. That is pretty generally admitted by the great majority of those who have given any thought at all to the subject.

And as with what are more commonly styled the evil passions, so it is with grief, doubt, suspense, and fear. All of these moods of the human mind affect the human body, causing it in some cases to sicken, and making mankind its slave instead of keeping it the obedient servant which it ought always to be. Christian Science points out that the human body and the human mind are inseparable, and shows at once how thought becomes manifest on the body. The body is but an image held in the human mind, and this image becomes more or less unhealthy or more or less healthy according to the condition of the mind which holds it. Like the sensitive photographic plate which is so readily influenced by every gradation of light, the human body responds to human will, to human fear, and to every other human passion. It is well to be clear about this, because to be ignorant of it is apt to prevent the seeing of the way out of the discomforts of human existence.

On page 445 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy writes, "Christian Science silences human will, quiets fear with Truth and Love, and illustrates the unlabored motion of the divine energy in healing the sick." The spiritual understanding of Truth and Love destroys the errors of mortal sense. And how? Christian Science teaches that God is infinite Mind. This means that there is only one Mind or one real consciousness in existence. This consciousness is perfect. Being perfect it is absolutely harmonious, without a trace of evil or error about it. The expression of perfect consciousness must be altogether without effort, frictionless, unlabored.

Now, are human beings trying to realize what such a declaration about God signifies? Do they not rather continually accept the testimony of the material senses that there is a real consciousness of evil, of disease, a consciousness synonymous with human passion, a consciousness of distress and inharmony, which ultimates either in the suspension of life or in its destruction? It must be conceded that that depicts the position to a very great extent of the human mind. But it is all wrong. It is nothing else than a denial of God, a denial of Truth, Life, or Love, because God—Truth, Life, or Love—is infinite. Every evil thought or desire, every pain acknowledged as real, is a denial of the presence of good. And the question becomes, On which side will a man place himself?

It is readily acknowledged that divided allegiance is an impossibility. No man is able to serve two masters and be faithful to both. No man can put his complete trust in God and at the same time have confidence in the opposite of good. That is the same as saying that a man has to acknowledge that only one real power exists, namely the one Mind, good, and as a corollary, that evil is not a real power but a false belief, opposed, as a belief, to good. Let a man put this knowledge into practice and he will speedily prove for himself that Truth and Love destroy the evil beliefs of mortal mind, bringing comfort and peace and directly conducing to a healthier state of the human body. In his words to the church at Corinth Paul did not doubt the efficacy of the power of Truth and Love: "Be perfect, be of good comfort," he said, "be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." There is no other basis whereby "good comfort" and peace is assured to humanity than this of knowing the spiritual truth concerning the one Mind. Mind is omnipresent. Every real idea is the expression of Mind; hence all ideas are omnipresent. It is not necessary, therefore, to have to search for truth in what men call space, for all truth, all the spiritual ideas of Mind, are where men are now. Divine Love is expressed everywhere as perfect Mind; therefore it is always available to meet mankind's every need. Reversing material sense testimony by bringing out the allness of Spirit as revealed to spiritual sense, Christian Science carries to the human race the Comforter, which shall lead it into all truth.

Man is not a structure of flesh and bones with a flickering spark of intelligence within; man is the spiritual idea of God, the image or reflection of perfect Mind. Man as the spiritual idea of God is not under the sway of material belief. He is under the government of spiritual law, the obedient servant of that law; and being under perfect law, man has the protection and restfulness which perfect law insures. "Thus it is with man," Mrs. Eddy has said, "who is but the humble servant of the restful Mind, though it seems otherwise to finite sense" (Science and Health, p. 119).

How grateful mankind should be for Christian Science, which brings the truth about God as the Comforter in all human woe. The great apostle to the Gentiles expressed that gratitude well when he said: "Blessed be God, . . . who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." It is the true knowledge of God which brings healing, and a man is comforted when he is healed. All real healing is spiritual. Healing goes on as the false beliefs of the human mind are destroyed by Truth and Love, and as it proceeds, the peace of God, which is the "good comfort" of divine Mind, is accepted and enjoyed by mankind.

[Duncan Sinclair in Partick Gazette, Glasgow, Scotland]

Christian Science holds that God is infinite in every one of the attributes of His divine being. Thus, God is infinite Life, infinite Truth, infinite Love, infinite good. Since God is infinite Life, so-called death cannot be part of His consciousness. Therefore the words which your correspondent quotes, viz., "Death is unreal in the absolute sense, that is, that it does not exist in the consciousness of God," express precisely the position of Christian Science. There is no getting away from the logic of the position. To assume that death is real, in the absolute sense, is to deny that God is infinite Life. But Christian Science declines to limit God as Life, because to do so is simply to deny the truth about Him.

On the other hand, as has been said before, Christian Science does not deny that death occurs, as a phenomenon, on the material plane of human consciousness. Indeed, Christian Science holds that every erroneous belief held by mortals will ultimately be destroyed; but nothing that exists in divine Mind can ever pass away. Paul certainly said to the Corinthian church, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Undoubtedly the apostle knew that death was altogether the result of mortal error; and the same knowledge unquestionably inspired his question to King Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"

Christian Science draws the clearest possible distinction between divine consciousness, or infinite Mind, and the so-called human consciousness, or material sense of things; and it is as this distinction is understood that one is able to apprehend the mission of Christ Jesus and the sayings of the apostles relative thereto. In every one of the wonders of healing performed by Jesus the power of divine Mind or Truth was manifested over the material beliefs of mortals; and the same happened when he raised the dead. Throughout the whole of the earthly career of the Nazarene the power of Truth over the errors of human belief was being demonstrated; and assuredly he proved in his own case that spiritual understanding could triumph over even the human belief called death when he rose from the grave on the third day. But if death had been real, in the sense that it was part of divine consciousness, not even Jesus could have overcome it.

[Robert S. Ross in Auburn (N. Y.) Citizen]

The Citizen reports a sermon delivered at the Summer School of Theology in which the clergyman made the common mistake of associating the teachings of Christian Science with methods of healing that are based either upon blind faith or upon mental suggestion. By way of correction, permit me to state that Christian Science is neither of these. Outside of this Science the reality of sin and disease is undisputed, even by those endeavoring to overcome it. By reality Christian Science means that which proceeds from God, or divine Principle, and has a basis in fact.

If sickness were real, it could not possibly be cured and it would be useless to try. But according to Christian Science, God is the author of good only. From this it follows that sickness is not real, owing to the simple fact that it is not good. A perfectly good God could create only a perfect man. When this spiritual fact is understood and applied to discordant human belief, mortals will realize what Christ Jesus meant when he said to his disciples that by knowing the truth they would be made free. "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 476 of Science and Health. "In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

Other healing systems undertake to make a sick man well, thereby working against the success of their own efforts; while Christian Science heals the so-called sick by knowing that man as God created him has never been sick. That the Christian Science method is the correct one is evidenced by the healing of cases which according to medical belief are supposed to be incurable. It was Christ Jesus who said that a tree is known by its fruits.

[W. Stuart Booth in Larimer County Democrat, Ft. Collins, Col.]

The absence from Christian churches of the works which Christ Jesus promised should be done by all who believed on him, understood his teachings, is clear evidence of the need of a spiritual key to the Scriptures, such as has been furnished the world by Mrs. Eddy in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." The study of this book has opened the spiritual treasures of the Bible to many thousands, and has so illumined its sacred pages that the divine Principle of the Master's teaching and practice has been revealed, and God's law of harmony, health and happiness, has been proven to be as available now as it was nineteen hundred years ago.

Christian Scientists do not claim to have "preempted certain portions of Christianity" nor to "hold letters patent" on Christian healing. That would be something like trying to preempt certain portions of sunlight or to take letters patent on the multiplication table and its use. In her book "Unity of Good" Mrs. Eddy says, "If there be any monopoly in my teaching, it lies in this utter reliance upon the one God, to whom belong all things" (p. 10).

Christian Science proves that the promises of Christ Jesus are capable of fulfillment now to all who will comply with the conditions attached to them. He overcame sin, ill health, and death by his understanding of the ever presence and omnipotence of God, good, and the consequent unreality and impotence of evil. This is the divine basis of Christian Science which enables its adherents to repeat his works, in some degree at least; but this is not accomplished by simply closing the eyes and repeating a formula presented by Mrs. Eddy until one is hypnotized into an ecstatic condition. On page 452 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy writes, "Expect to heal simply by repeating the author's words, by right talking and wrong acting, and you will be disappointed." And again on page 454 we read: "The superiority of spiritual power over sensuous is the central point of Christian Science. Remember that the letter and mental argument are only human auxiliaries to aid in bringing thought into accord with the spirit of Truth and Love, which heals the sick and the sinner."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Virginia (Minn.) Enterprise]

The third attack on Christian Science by a certain reverend gentleman, which the Enterprise has printed, again illustrates the fact that people who try to convince others that Christian Science is something bad, continually find themselves relying on misrepresentations. The reason is this: Christian Science is good; it is good in what it teaches and in what it does for its adherents; therefore the choice of material for opposition is very limited.

In this situation, one of the consequences of opposition is that the admissions or concessions made by one opponent refute what is said by another. For instance, here is the reverend gentleman trying to convince the people of Virginia that Christian Science is against the Bible and against prayer. On the other hand, at Alliance, Ohio, not long ago, when a preacher and editor spoke to the representatives of fifteen churches or denominations on how to stop the inroads of Christian Science, he said: "There are many things the church might learn from Christian Science, including greater loyalty to the Bible, more faithful testimony to the power and grace of Jesus Christ, the value and privilege of prayer, and last but not least, the potency of a holy life."

Acceptance of the Bible is the first tenet of Christian Science. Moreover, a Christian Scientist keeps his Bible in active use. It is neither covered with dust in a forgotten drawer nor kept on a parlor table as an ornament. It is needed every day for the study of prepared lessons on which, as Mrs. Eddy has said, "the prosperity of Christian Science largely depends" (Church Manual, Art. III., Sect. 1). The Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, is read at the same time because the light which it throws on the Scriptures justifies its name and has opened the Bible to unnumbered thousands of people for whom the Bible had been closed. With Christian Scientists this textbook does not take the place of the Bible; in connection with the Bible it takes the place occupied, or at least sought, by sermons in other churches.

[Peter V. Ross in The Orland (Col.) Unit]

In a recent issue of the Unit is published an article from a medical journal which may create the impression that Christian Scientists are unfriendly to the medical profession. This misconception, if it exists, may have arisen from the fact that physicians and Christian Scientists entertain widely differing opinions as to the nature of disease and the proper methods to be employed in preventing and curing it. But this variance should not, and it is believed does not, unless in rare individual cases, lead to anything in the nature of unfriendliness, or induce either profession to discredit the practice of the other.

Mrs. Eddy has said, writing on page 151 of Science and Health: "Great respect is due the motives and philanthropy of the higher class of physicians. We know that if they understood the Science of Mind-healing, and were in possession of the enlarged power it confers to benefit the race physically and spiritually, they would rejoice with us. Even this one reform in medicine would ultimately deliver mankind from the awful and oppressive bondage now enforced by false theories, from which multitudes would gladly escape."

A tendency is observable in some quarters toward making medicine compulsory for all people, regardless of their individual opinions or convictions. Christian Scientists, in common with all other people who discern the significance of this tendency, can hardly be expected to view it with approval or complacency. But this does not mean that Christian Scientists are opposing medicine for those who desire it; they simply are opposed to having medicine or medical treatment forced upon people to whom it is offensive, for they see quite as much danger in compulsory medicine as in compulsory religion.

The writer of the medical article in question calls upon Christian Scientists to show their Christianity and their Science in work of relief and in the care of the wounded during this time of war. He may be assured that Christian Scientists will avail themselves of every opportunity in this connection which presents itself. Necessarily their work will be different from that of the medical profession, and perhaps outwardly less in evidence, so far as remedies are concerned, but it will be found efficient in time of war as it has been in time of peace.

It is well to remember, however, that medicine has full sway in the army and navy. Its theories have there been given the practical effect of law. The conditions, therefore, for the application of Christian Science in that field can hardly be regarded as favorable; nevertheless its healing power will, when appealed to, exert itself quickly, unobtrusively, but none the less effectively, toward the relief of suffering and the preservation of life and health.

"To-day," as Mrs. Eddy says on page 150 of Science and Health, "the healing power of Truth is widely demonstrated as an immanent, eternal Science, instead of a phenomenal exhibition. Its appearing is the coming anew of the gospel of 'on earth peace, good-will toward men.' This coming, as was promised by the Master, is for its establishment as a permanent dispensation among men; but the mission of Christian Science now, as in the time of its earlier demonstration, is not primarily one of physical healing. Now, as then, signs and wonders are wrought in the metaphysical healing of physical disease; but these signs are only to demonstrate its divine origin,—to attest the reality of the higher mission of the Christ-power to take away the sins of the world."

Footsteps of Progress

THE history of the Christian Science church as an organized religious movement covers a period of less than forty years. Its growth from humble and modest beginnings to its present status as a mighty power for good recognized throughout the world, has caused even those not interested in the teachings of Christian Science to marvel at its progress. The Christian Scientist, however, as his individual experience develops and as his understanding of mental action becomes clearer, perceives that only through divine guidance and inspired leadership could such results have been attained.

The events between the Hawthorne Hall meetings and the great gatherings in The Mother Church extension constitute a record of the rich inheritance which has been bestowed upon the officers and members of The Mother Church of to-day. Christian Scientists are heirs of the victories and achievements of Mary Baker Eddy and of her students, the pioneer laborers for this great Cause, who with loyalty and devotion helped their Leader to maintain her church and to fulfill her mission. Only as we study the history of the Christian Science movement do we appreciate the debt of gratitude we owe to those who have borne "the burden and heat of the day," when to stand before the world as Christian Scientists meant little less of selflessness and sacrifice than it did in the earlier presentation of the Christ in the time of Jesus.

Christian Scientists will recall the joy and gratitude which greeted the progressive changes in The Mother Church government which were initiated from time to time in the course of broadening and forwarding the work of Christian Science when The Mother Church was blessed by the personal guidance of Mrs. Eddy. Since our Leader has ceased to direct the movement in person this Board has proceeded in the firm conviction that the By-laws of The Mother Church—her demonstration of what constitutes government, are simple, practical, and complete. This view has always been proven correct; no essential rule or by-law has ever been found lacking; no right action has ever been limited or prevented by a by-law. From December 3, 1910, it has been the rule of this Board that no important step should be taken without the unanimous concurrence of the Directors, and without advice and approval by the best legal counsel obtainable on any legal questions involved.

For several years it has been apparent that the increasing demands of the movement upon the time and thought of the members of The Christian Science Board of Directors would necessitate some readjustment of their duties. The growth and expansion of The Mother Church and its branches naturally and necessarily require a corresponding growth and expansion in the organization charged with the duty of handling the organic affairs of the movement. It is felt that a partial solution of the problem has been found in the plan which has now been adopted and which becomes operative on November 3, 1917.

Allison V. Stewart has resigned as publisher of Mrs. Eddy's works, and will be succeeded by The Christian Science Publishing Society, to whom in the future all correspondence and orders for Mrs. Eddy's writings should be addressed.

John V. Dittemore has resigned as Clerk of The Mother Church, to be succeeded by Charles E. Jarvis, who will assume the duties of Clerk in addition to those of Corresponding Secretary to The Christian Science Board of Directors, the position which he now holds.

Adam H. Dickey has resigned as Treasurer of The Mother Church, and will be succeeded by Bliss Knapp, who has been for fourteen years a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church.

James A. Neal has resigned the office of Chairman of the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy, where he has had charge of the administrative duties of that office. This work will hereafter be under the management of H. A. T. Dow, who will become Corresponding Secretary for the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy.

It is believed that these changes will be very helpful to the members of this Board in giving them more time for the direction of the affairs of The Mother Church, and it is felt sure that the changes will be well received by the Field.

The Kindness of God

WE need an understanding of the term "a personal God." Of some people in a snowbound train it was said that they discussed business and stories of character to the point of geniality, then politics and religion to the point of exasperation. When men argue regarding God there is sure to be controversy, because every man holds strongly his view on this subject, even though it be an insufficient belief. When men say God is Person, they are correct, as Mrs. Eddy clearly shows (see Science and Health, p. 116), for by this they mean infinite Person, and from all that is infinite there must be excluded imperfection and evil. When, however, they speak of "a personal God," the very indefinite article shows them to be incorrect. In the statement of Jesus to the woman of Samaria regarding God, an exact translation leaves out the indefinite article. "God is Spirit" is the exact rendering; and he continued, "they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Let us examine the use of the word personal. In halls of congress, in parliaments, or in any such representative assembly, criticism which is of a general nature and of corrective tendency, aiming at improvement, is not resented; but criticism that is "personal" is. Most institutions have a few employees who are difficult to deal with because easily offended, liable to jealousy regarding place and perquisites. They have life out of focus because they are too personal. Again, one finds people who in ruling others seem to have but one end in view, namely, the humiliation of the subordinate. They take advantage of a man's helplessness in the bonds of discipline to be aggressive and insolent, because the victim can make no reply in word or act without apparently endangering his reputation for loyalty to his country, its army or navy; or, if it be in a business institution, endangering his opportunity for continued and useful service. This misuse of power, which is so very common, is spoken of as the curse of personal authority.

Now the records of history show that men attribute a similar sense of things when they think of God as personal.

They believe Him to be jealous regarding His power, and arbitrary in the exercise of authority. This is exactly the argument which the man of the one talent used against his master. He said, "I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: and I was afraid." In like manner, when people think of God as a taskmaster they have a personal sense. So what they really mean when saying they have a personal God, is that they look to Deity through the mist of personal sense. This is quite clearly elucidated in what Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 13), "If we pray to God as a corporeal person, this will prevent us from relinquishing the human doubts and fears which attend such a belief, and so we cannot grasp the wonders wrought by infinite, incorporeal Love, to whom all things are possible." Scripture has a rebuke for this wrong view when it says, "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself."

When we turn from the personal and traditional view regarding God, and gain a scientific sense, we are then able to understand what Mrs. Eddy says in Miscellany (p. 189): "The government of divine Love derives its omnipotence from the love it creates in the heart of man; for love is allegiant, and there is no loyalty apart from love." Thus we begin to understand what the apostle Paul meant when saying that "the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared." The teaching of Christian Science is that the starting point of good must be love. Since God is Love, for that very reason God is divine Principle. The Christian Scientist is one who knows his Principle and accepts what is implied regarding himself, namely, that he shall be guided by Principle and become obedient to it. Thus to him appears "the true God, and eternal life."

When the sick rise from the bed of languishing and become active for useful service, they have an experience of the kindness of God appearing to them. When the victim of an enchaining habit gains his freedom, there is a glow of joy whereby he knows that the kindness of God has appeared with its blessing. When a good man who for a lifetime has suffered under theological theories which assured him that his own status was that of a miserable sinner and a worm of the dust; which declared regarding his children, down to the babe in arms, that they were under God's wrath and curse because of Adam's original sin; when he learns in Christian Science the remedy for Adam, and when Christ thus redeems him,—he also knows that the kindness of our God has appeared to him. This Christian Science movement has records of redemption by the thousand. Its workers have knowledge that transcends all opposing arguments. They have assurance within that what has blessed them has omnipotence to bless all mankind. Is it any wonder, then, that "those who discern Christian Science," as our Leader says (Science and Health, p. 97), "will cheerfully await the certainty of ultimate perfection."

"On the top of the mount"

THOSE to whom it has been given to reach the summit of some great height know what a sense of exaltation may be experienced there. The sky seems near and the earth distant, the air is rarefied and keen, clouds trail their lengths far below, all pettiness is displaced by the grandeur of nature. Such impressions may be taken as symbolical of spiritual qualities. Indeed, the Scriptures contain many references to the mountains in this sense. We read that at the time of the giving of the Ten Commandments "the Lord came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the Lord called Moses up to the top of the mount." The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews represents God as admonishing Moses: "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount." Is not this mount the pinnacle of spiritual vision where absolute security and joy reign evermore and suffering is necessarily absent? From this mount proceed first the Ten Commandments, then the Beatitudes, and in our day the Christian Science textbook. It was this spiritual exaltation which made Isaiah exclaim, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace;" and drew from the psalmist the song, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help."

The top of the mount is a position which the metaphysician can gain and hold through the practice of Christian Science. It is a spiritual point of vantage whence error looks insignificant and Truth near and friendly. When earthly beliefs are being surrendered and false burdens thrown aside, when reliance on material medicine, materialized religion, and material science so-called is being expelled by trust in God, then the Christian wayfarer is climbing into the heights and ready to be refreshed by the vision of limitless good. All the way up he will need perseverance and endurance and the willingness to advance step by step. In mountain climbing it is often impossible to see far ahead; on the lower slopes forests may impede the view, and further up there are apt to be steep, rocky places where it behooves the climber to watch carefully his foothold. Perhaps straying clouds cover the trail or sudden corners cut off the sight of the further ascent. It is necessary to trust in God, to realize that His path having once been chosen it will inevitably lead into serene heights, to the top of mount Zion. There may be moments of weariness or even exhaustion before the top is reached, when the scientific recognition must be steadfastly maintained that man is spiritual and mounts heavenward through spiritual impulsion only.

Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 511 of Science and Health, "To mortal mind, the universe is liquid, solid, and aëriform. Spiritually interpreted, rocks and mountains stand for solid and grand ideas." To bear this spiritual interpretation in mind means to be refreshed while climbing out of the mist of earth into the heights of Mind's "solid and grand ideas." On pages 323 to 328 of "Miscellaneous Writings" the Discoverer of Christian Science also illustrates the salvation of humanity by its ascent from valley to hilltop. She writes: "Picture to yourself 'a city set upon a hill,' a celestial city above all clouds, in serene azure and unfathomable glory: having no temple therein, for God is the temple thereof; nor need of the sun, neither of the moon, for God doth lighten it." This whole allegory pictures in descriptive language the joys, dangers, and victories of the climb to the top of the mount of vision. Nor is this ascent a mere theoretical exercise, for it has a very practical side, namely, the healing of the sick and sinning. As the scientific Christian mounts into the heights he sheds the impedimenta of earthly travel, attains freedom from self, is washed clean by the upper atmosphere of spirituality, and reflects more accurately the divine Being. Then it is that error sinks out of sight, the world, the flesh, and the devil become nonexistent to his state of consciousness, and he approaches the Mind of Christ which knows no evil. As a result the nothingness of sin, sickness, and death is made manifest and demonstration is reached. In the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, we read (Art. VIII, Sect. 24): "Testimony in regard to the healing of the sick is highly important. More than a mere rehearsal of blessings, it scales the pinnacle of praise and illustrates the demonstration of Christ, 'who healeth all thy diseases.' "

Law and Life

MOSES is usually thought of by Bible students as the great Hebrew Lawgiver. Indeed Mrs. Eddy refers to him as such on page 321 of Science and Health, where she explains in a wonderful way how he was prepared for what she names "the actuality of Science." To this she adds, "Matter was shown to be a belief only." The student of Christian Science will readily see that without an understanding of the actual demonstration of truth he could not have given to the world the divine law as voiced in the Ten Commandments, and the Mosaic law as found in the Old Testament.

It is deeply significant to read in the thirty-fourth chapter of Exodus that when Moses was on mount Sinai in communion with the Mind which governs the universe, and while he was receiving the divine law which was addressed to humanity in the Ten Commandments, he was without material food for forty days and forty nights. The record reads: "He did neither eat bread, nor drink water." According to material sense he would undoubtedly have presented an appearance of having passed through a most severe ordeal, but the very opposite of this is to be found in the statements which follow. We are told that when he returned to the children of Israel his face shone so that they could not look upon him, and he was obliged to put a veil over it. This is a wonderful lesson for the student of Christian Science, and shows that if we commune with God and with true desire study His law, knowing at the same time the nothingness of materiality as the basis of our support in any direction, we too shall gain that fuller sense of Life which will be manifested in health and strength and be a sign of the power of divine Truth to all who are prepared to accept the truth of man's being.

Farther on we read that after many years of faithful and strenuous service in leading the children of Israel toward the promised land Moses was separated from them, and although the record reads that he died, to the Christian Scientist this means that he was ready to advance beyond any of his people, and it certainly could not mean death in the ordinary sense of the word, for, as we read, he again went up into a mountain to commune with God and to have a vision of the promised land, which must have meant something far above and beyond what the human eye could see or material sense cognize. We read that Moses was "an hundred and twenty years old" at this time, but we are assured that "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated." The record goes on to say, "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face."

In the ninetieth psalm, which we are told was written by Moses, we discover his deep spiritual understanding as expressed in these words: "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." Again we read, in the seventeenth chapter of Matthew, that at Jesus' transfiguration on "an high mountain apart," Moses appeared with Elias, in the presence of three of the disciples, and talked with the glorified Son of man. Some commentators say that this mountain was the same as the one which Moses ascended when he left the children of Israel, but that is of little consequence compared with the great spiritual lesson to be gathered from the story of man's immortality.

In our Master's teachings we find many references to Moses, but the one which has undoubtedly the deepest spiritual lesson is that found in the twentieth chapter of Luke, where Jesus said: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him."

We can never afford to forget the relation of divine law to the healing work of Christian Science. In reality divine law is one, while it reaches humanity through the channels of its greatest need. The Decalogue was given to meet human need, and it bases the healing work of Christian Science. This is made very clear in Mrs. Eddy's wonderful article, beginning on page 65 of "Miscellaneous Writings," in which she says that "Christian Science demands both law and gospel." To this she adds, "They are a unit in restoring the equipoise of mind and body, and balancing man's account with his Maker." It is only as we obey God's law that we come to understand it and realize its healing power, and this calls upon us to rise above the mortal sense of law and life that we may have our vision on the mount and rise above all sense of mortal frailty. Our Leader says in the article quoted: "To reach the summit of Science, whence to discern God's perfect ways and means, the material sense must be controlled by the higher spiritual sense, and Truth be enthroned, while 'we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen.' "

Correction

The first article in the Sentinel for October 13 by Rev. James J. Rome was upon obedience evidently, and should have had the title "Obedience," of course.

The heading of an article published July 21 was shuffled into the place of this proper title. Mr. Rome has reason to ask an apology for this mistake, and the office expresses humility and regret. Perhaps our contributor has read the rendering, in what is called the Printer's Bible, of Psalm 119:161, which is, "Printers have persecuted me without a cause."—THE EDITOR.

The Lectures

FAIRBANKS, ALASKA (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Guy B. Erwin, who said in part:—

There is no religion to-day that more closely adheres to the teachings of the Scriptures than does Christian Science, and especially to that which the Master taught and commended to his followers. Christian Science affirms that God's law is unchanging, never held in suspension, and is "the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever;" that God is, as the Bible declares, the Father above, "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning;" that what was true in Jesus' time is true to-day, and that the works he did may be done again. It is this understanding of divine Principle which heals to-day as it healed in the days of the Master, and as it always will heal when correctly applied. The world already owes much to Christian Science for its wonderful message bringing this ministry of healing and salvation to a people in bondage to the creeds, doctrines, and time-honored systems of a material age, and the debt grows in proportion as the enlightenment spreads.

Testimonies of Healing

Searching for that which might help me to realize my early ideals of character, on reaching majority I turned from the orthodox church with disappointed hopes. In a small way I found guidance for right living in the writings of a few ancient philosophers and modern essayists, but my first reading of Christian Science literature persuaded me that it contained all for which I had been seeking in so many other directions.

Having read a copy of the Sentinel, I soon afterward bought the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and persistently read it. To find a teaching which not only pointed the way to the highest idealism by casting off the evil thoughts and actions to which mortals are prone, but which also taught that this process of correction heals disease, was indeed sweet to me; but the weeding out of the errors of the human mind and the overcoming of physical ailments was slow and ofttimes discouraging work.

Physical healing was first sought for a very painful back, which became much worse after six months' reading of the textbook. I laid the book aside for a short time, but soon resumed the reading of it, and after a while the trouble disappeared entirely. When I had been studying for about three years, stomach disorder and catarrh of the head also left me. I had been of a very nervous temperament from childhood, although the symptoms usually attendant upon this ailment had been largely controlled by human effort. In 1906 I received an appointment to teach in the schools of Portland, Oregon, and it was during two years of teaching there that the nervous condition assumed its worst form. Some help was received from practitioners, but I was told to continue to read the textbook and put its teachings into practice as much as I could. Healing was slowly but permanently established, and whereas formerly I had been annoyed by every passing disturbance, I am now able to abide in "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding." A painful trouble with two toes, one on each foot, was overcome as I became conscious of the infinitude of God, good, and the nothingness of evil.

I am grateful for a countless number of healings, and that false human beliefs are daily disappearing; also for the freedom and awakened thinking which have come to me as a result of the application of the truth that makes free, as taught by the great Master, Jesus the Christ, and as discovered and expounded in this age by Mary Baker Eddy. I cannot express sufficient gratitude for the spiritual understanding of the Bible that I have gained through the study of our Leader's writings.

MARTHA PICKHARDT, San Francisco, Cal.

It is a privilege and a duty to give my testimony, and I hope that it may benefit some one. The first thirteen and a half years of my married life I was in very ill health, suffering from one ailment or another day and night. Three physicians tried to help me, and a minor operation was performed, but there was little improvement in my condition. By that time I had lost all faith in medicine and doctors. The last doctor said that I never would be strong again, but would be better in two years if I was careful about doing heavy work; but in two years I was getting back into the same state of health as before.

During those two years I had prayed that God would either direct me how to be healed or give me an understanding that would bring about the healing, and had come to the conclusion that God alone could heal me. At that time it came to me to try Christian Science; so I asked for treatment and was healed. In one week I felt like a different woman. That was in 1900. I was run down generally and had a complication of diseases,—spinal headaches, weak eyes, stomach trouble, and ulceration. I took four weeks' treatment in Christian Science, and have been a strong, well woman ever since, able to do some very hard work with pleasure.

The first year I came into Science I lived in a small town, and then for five or six years in the country, where I could not see a Scientist very often; but I made a close study of the Bible and Science and Health, and thus laid a firm foundation, so that a number of good demonstrations were made. I have been able to demonstrate over blood poisoning, dislocation of the knee, dislocation of the spinal cord, toothache, and other ailments. I am very grateful for the physical healing, but much more so for the spiritual uplift, which is more than all else to me. It has changed all my views of life, so that life is now worth living. The only way I can express my sincere gratitude to God and to Mrs. Eddy is in good deeds and in helping others.

LAURA J. ELLIS, N. Topeka, Kan.

When I first heard of Christian Science I had a very vague idea of what it meant, but having exhausted medical help I decided to see a practitioner and discuss the subject. For twelve years I had been a semi-invalid as a result of an injury to my spine. The whole of one year was spent in bed and a spinal jacket was worn for a number of years. Very often I was in bed for weeks at a time, and even when considered well was constantly having medical and electrical treatment and massage.

I had to rest on a couch a great part of each day, and suffered much from pain, headaches, and sleeplessness. After talking with a Christian Science practitioner I asked her to give me treatment, and received immediate benefit, being cured of sleeplessness at once. I continued the treatment for three weeks, and before the end of that time was feeling quite restored to health. During the past nine years I have never spent a day in bed, and have been equal to any exertion required. I have taken many long railway journeys without suffering in any way, while formerly I could only take a railway journey by lying down all the time, and even then suffered a great deal. We have had no medicine in our home since I began the study of Christian Science. All sickness and the effects of accidents have been quickly overcome through Christian Science.

It is impossible for me to express my gratitude for the change in my life, for the freedom from fear and worry, for my new understanding of God, of the Bible, and of the real life of man. I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her courage and faithful work for mankind.

ELIZABETH H. LOWSON, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our periodicals have brought us so many helpful thoughts that I would like through them to tell of a few of the many ways in which Christian Science has benefited our home. It was first brought to my mother's notice by the healing of her invalid sister in three weeks' treatment, which convinced her that this was the truth that Jesus taught and applied in his healing ministry. Since that time she has been an earnest student of Christian Science, and has found it an invaluable and unfailing help in rearing a family and attending to the many duties on a farm. Especially is she enabled to prove man's God-given dominion over every material circumstance in her care for a handsome flock of poultry. Loss of little chicks, sickness, smothering, menace by hawks and so-called animals of prey, as well as difficulty in finding a proper market,—conditions apparently common among poultry raisers,—have been almost entirely eliminated from this flock, and it is a joy to see its response to absence of fear, due to the owner's realization that "all is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all" (Science and Health, p. 468).

My sister has been wonderfully healed of inflammatory rheumatism in its worst form. It had apparently reached the heart, and medical law would have given her but a few hours to live, when Christian Science treatment was asked for. Relief came in a few moments, and the recovery was steady and complete. When very young I was beautifully healed in a few treatments of what was called a severe case of scarlet fever, affecting the throat in such a way that several times it was feared I would strangle. Although this is considered a contagious disease, it was not contracted by any other member of the family.

With regard to school work the application of this one perfect Science has caused whatever success I have had in the solving of problems, in laboratory experiments, and in the mastery of a foreign language. It has given freedom from anxiety over examinations, confidence to undertake tasks formerly thought impossible, and has made all my work a joy. Moreover, it has filled my consciousness with so much love and thanksgiving that there is no room for resentment toward any one. I have never tasted a drop of medicine, have been taught not to fear anything, and scarcely know what it is to be less than happy. My one desire is to know ever more of this beautiful truth, and to prove by works rather than words my gratitude to our God who is Love, to Christ Jesus the Wayshower, and to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so bravely and faithfully followed in his footsteps.

ISABEL N. DOWNING, Minneapolis, Minn.

It is with a heart full of gratitude that I write this testimony of my healing in Christian Science. Nearly five years ago, in Los Angeles, California, I turned to Christian Science after doctors had said my case was incurable. For nearly four years I had been suffering from a stomach trouble and was under medical treatment all that time. No less than a dozen of the best physicians examined me, and nearly all agreed there was no help for me. I was getting worse all the time, although taking material remedies constantly.

One day my wife and I called on some old friends whom we had not seen for some time. For several years the husband had been a very sick man, but when we called he was away at work, and his wife told us that he was well and that Christian Science had healed him; that she also was strong and hearty. After a while he came in, looking so well that I should not have recognized him had I met him on the street. He told us about his healing, and as it was Wednesday invited us to go to church with them. We did so, and what I saw and heard there made me think! They told us where the reading room was, and when I walked in there the next day it struck me that Christian Science had more to it than I had ever given it credit for.

I read the Lesson-Sermon over, and then bought a copy of Science and Health and asked where I could find a practitioner. The next morning my wife and I went to see the lady whose address had been given us. After the second treatment I ate just what the rest did for dinner, and have never had any trouble since. I cannot tell how thankful I am. If this testimony should help some one, as I hope it will, then I shall have done a little in return for what God has done for me.—F. D. WAIT, Ackley, Iowa.

I vouch for the accuracy of all the statements in my husband's testimony, and wish to add that I have found Christian Science a great help in many ways. We both thank God, and feel grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her untiring efforts to benefit mankind.—MRS. F. D. WAIT.

Without the slightest knowledge of Christian Science, and yet with a feeling of ridicule for what I thought it to be, I was instantaneously healed in one treatment of a most severe case of tonsilitis, of chronic stomach disorder, and of the bad habit of taking drugs. While visiting in the home of a Christian Scientist about seven years ago, I was suddenly stricken with throat trouble. It alarmed me greatly, for I had a bad spell of it almost every year and would be under the doctor's care for several weeks at a time. I knew no doctors in the city where I was visiting, and so for several days lay quite ill, not knowing which way to turn and never giving Christian Science a thought. When, however, a member of the household spoke to me about this teaching, the thought came to me, "Prove all things;" and in order to be able to say from experience that there was nothing in it, I consented to a treatment, with the above mentioned result.

The healing was a revelation to me, and I sincerely hope that those who may be doubting will take courage from this testimony. We had been believers in homeopathy for years, and I had been the nurse for the family, with a material remedy for every ill, but I have not taken or caused to be taken one drop of medicine since 1909. I have been able to interest most of my family in Christian Science, and for my husband's complete healing of paralysis, in seven treatments, I am most grateful.

When I first began to attend the church services I did not enjoy the Wednesday evening meetings, but I attended them regularly, wishing to be obedient in every way to Mrs. Eddy's teachings. After about two years I was healed in one of these meetings of the need for glasses, which a specialist had said I would always have to wear. I am profoundly grateful to our beloved Leader, whose clear vision and untiring labor have given us our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

DAISY BUSH KELLER, Oakland, Cal.

Christian Science was brought to me a little over five years ago by a friend who had been healed, as he knew I had been ailing for twelve years and was still a slave to material remedies. He asked me if I would not try it, and as I did not know what it was, he loaned me Science and Health for three days. I commenced to read this book, and felt more peace of mind than I had for years, so I bought a copy, also the Quarterly, and said I would give Christian Science a fair trial. I had always wished I could love the Bible, but try as I would it had not much attraction for me. I read it only from a sense of duty, but now it has a new meaning and is everything to me.

I was a wreck both physically and mentally before I began to read Science and Health, but have been healed of mental depression, sleeplessness, sick headache, toothache, ulcerated gum, inflammation of the bladder, bunions, and numerous other ailments. I shall never cease to be grateful to Mrs. Eddy for that wonderful book, also for her other writings, for they have opened my eyes to the truth. Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." I have proved this to be true. I am very grateful for class instruction, as well as for the Christian Science literature and all the channels through which I have gained a higher understanding of Life, Truth, Love. For the physical healing I am grateful, but much more for the spiritual uplift; and above all, I am thankful to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift.

It is a duty that I owe to God, also to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to acknowledge some of the many blessings that have come to me and mine through the teachings of Christian Science. About fourteen years ago my husband was healed in two weeks' treatment of an ear trouble of about eighteen years' standing, which some of the best ear specialists in Milwaukee and Chicago could not cure. Through this wonderful healing other ailments left him, among them rheumatism, and he was able to give up wearing glasses.

All this made me very happy, so I began to study Science and Health, and was healed in a very short time of chronic bowel disorder. Several years ago I was suddenly stricken with what is called diphtheria, in its worst form, but through the help of a practitioner I was up and out for a walk in four days. For this healing, and for the many blessings that have been ours as a result of the loving and untiring work of Mrs. Eddy in bringing us nearer to our heavenly Father, I am so deeply grateful that words are inadequate to express my feelings.—MARY W. BECKER, Chicago, Ill.

It is with a sense of deep gratitude that I verify the above statement by my wife, and add that I share her happiness. The healing of the ear was such a wonderful revelation of the truth that it took some time for me to grasp the full meaning of this great healing power.—LOUIS W. BECKER.

I wish to express my gratitude for the understanding and love of God that Christian Science has brought to me. I have been healed of severe eye trouble of ten years' standing. The perfect vision came when a disturbed mental condition was overcome. I am most grateful, however, for the knowledge that there is a spiritual law which, when understood and applied, heals all sickness and sin through the power of Truth.—ALICE L. HARVEY, Brookline, Mass.

It is with deep gratitude that I tell of the blessings which have come to me through Christian Science. I was a delicate girl, and after my marriage I had a severe attack of acute lung trouble which left me an invalid. Later asthma was added, and this was the reason for my coming into Science. My sister had greatly benefited by this teaching, and I was persuaded, when staying with her, to go to the Wednesday evening meetings. There I heard such wonderful testimonies, and the people looked so happy, that I determined to see if anything could be done for me, as I was a most miserable and unhappy woman. I thank God very truly for leading me to take this step, and only wish that Christian Science had been shown to me years before.

I sought a practitioner, and never shall I forget the wonderful sense of joy which filled my being as I left her. To think that there was hope for me, who had long thought of myself as a hopeless invalid! I bought a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy and soon began to feel better, though my healing has been slow. I am now able to do many times as much work as formerly and am no longer an invalid. I have also been cured of a cough of many years' standing. More than all is the wonderful spiritual uplift, and the help Christian Science gives in gaining an understanding of the Bible.

ANNIE NAYLOR, Kidderminster, England.

I wish to express my gratitude for Christian Science, the study of which was taken up for the healing of a young daughter, who had what the doctors called bronchial gastritis. After all material remedies had failed, she was healed through Christian Science in three days, and has since enjoyed many years of peace and harmony.

For over fourteen years I have not used a single material remedy. Every need has been met in Science; sickness, sorrow, business troubles,—every one of these has been overcome by the small understanding I have of the truth. Every healing has been permanent, and I am doing better work than I ever did. Each day some new proof is added of God's love and goodness to me and mine. I am grateful that I can help others, and am trying to show my gratitude by devoting my life to God's work. I am thankful to God and feel deep gratitude to our Leader for this beautiful truth that we can use at all times.

LAURA Z. FORD, Memphis, Tenn.

It has been many years since I took up Christian Science for physical healing. Last winter I was taken with what is called typhoid pneumonia and struggled along for some time, not making much headway, and finally was obliged to ask for help. Of the next two or three weeks I have little recollection. The time came when I felt that the end was near, but with the help of the practitioner and the care of loving children I was soon up and walking alone. After that, complications developed in the form of acute stomach trouble, peritonitis, and appendicitis, but they also yielded to the power of Truth.

One day after these conditions had all been overcome, the practitioner came into my room and said she had not treated me for two weeks. Then I turned to God, thanking Him for the truth, and that at last I had learned how to work out my own salvation. Later my hair all fell out, but it is coming in thicker than ever before. Although I find each day some errors to be overcome, I feel grateful to our dear Leader for the "Key to the Scriptures," which teaches us how to understand the Bible that so long had been a sealed book to many. I am grateful for all of our Leader's writings, also the Sentinel, for our Lesson-Sermons, and for the testimonies given at our Wednesday evening meetings. I am learning that we can rest in safety, as we read in the ninety-first psalm, and can say, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!"—ATTIE A. TILLINGHAST, Oneonta, N. Y.

Christian Science came to me some ten years ago in response, as it seemed, to an earnest desire to understand the Bible. Science and Health was generously given to me by a passing acquaintance. I read the book through with difficulty, but always with the desire to find the truth if it was there, and with willingness to change standpoints which were the result of previous education. The blessing to me was great. I turned again to the Bible, impressed by Mrs. Eddy's statements that the truth taught in Science and Health was the truth taught by Jesus and demonstrable in the life of every sincere seeker for Truth. The fact that every man could prove the supremacy of Spirit in his own experience was the great attraction to me, for it vitalized religion; and if true, then indeed salvation was come to men.

My first conscious proving of the truth came in connection with a weak instep, which had troubled me from time to time. A realization of the significance of the verse, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings," healed me. Rheumatism yielded to the spiritual fact that in God "we live, and move, and have our being." These were the beginnings of the workings of Truth for me in the overcoming of sickness; and I am deeply grateful that ignorance and fear also have been to some extent eliminated.

How grateful we are for this understanding of the truth which makes us compassionate toward others and patient with ourselves, until the false trust is destroyed. I am truly thankful that the time was ripe for Christian Science, and that our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, was prepared to deliver this redemptive truth; also that I was enabled to receive it.

I am moved by deep gratitude in my desire to add this testimony in recognition of the last benefit derived through Christian Science. I sustained a bruise on my finger, which grew sore and I began to experience violent pain, so much so that for several nights I did not sleep at all. On the third morning the registered-letter carrier came, and upon seeing my finger, as I had to sign my name, he said, "You've got blood poisoning in the most severe form and had better go to the physician at once." Instead I rushed to a Christian Science practitioner, who immediately took up treatment. My fear at the mere word blood poisoning was very great, and my arm grew more and more swollen and stiff, until I began to feel severe pain in the breast. In the afternoon, driven by great fear, I again ran to the practitioner; and this time a different result manifested itself, for all sense of fear and worry left me and the healing was accomplished. I went to sleep in perfect peace and calm, and on the following morning the healing was visibly manifested, for the arm presented a normal appearance. My finger too is now entirely healed.

Thanks be unto God for having revealed to us the way to true health and happiness. While words fail to express my gratitude, I am trying to prove the same by my actions. For all the good which we experience daily I thank God from the depths of my heart.

EMILIE SENFT, Hannover, Germany.

For over ten years I suffered constantly from a complication of diseases, among them chronic bowel disorder, headache, female trouble, and rectal trouble in its worst form. During these years I had treatment from the best physicians in Chicago, took trips to Colorado Springs and California, but continued to grow worse. I was in such a weakened condition that I could not walk a block without pain and complete exhaustion.

One day, when I felt more depressed than ever and utterly discouraged, the thought came to me that a lady I used to know as a semi-invalid had been healed through Christian Science. I immediately called her over the telephone, and in answer to my question as to whether she thought Christian Science could help me, she gave me the name of a practitioner, who on being called consented to give me treatment at once. I had little hope of receiving any benefit, but to my joy and amazement my condition began to improve after the first treatment. In four days I was able to walk to the home of the practitioner, a distance of six blocks, without any discomfort. The improvement continued, and to-day my health is perfect. This healing took place nearly five years ago, and there has been no return of former ailments.

I wish to add that my mother, who lives with me, started to read Science and Health at the same time, and was healed of periodical sick headaches, which at times lasted forty-eight hours and were growing worse. She had suffered from these for fifty years. We have had many other healings in our home, and needless to say Truth is our remedy for every ill. Words cannot express my thankfulness to God, or my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for this wonderful healing truth.

GEORGIA BENSON CLAY, Chicago, Ill.

Christian Science came to me at a time when I was suffering from a sense of fear and depression that made life miserable. Sleeplessness, loss of flesh, and great irritability were some of the effects of this condition, and I was a burden to myself and my friends. The good results manifested by those who had devoted themselves to the study of Christian Science, led me to investigate it, and with the help of a practitioner and the study of the Bible and Mrs. Eddy's writings equally good results were soon realized in my own case. Sleeplessness was overcome, I regained my normal weight, and the sense of fear and depression was greatly relieved. The liquor, tobacco, and profanity habits, which I had acquired when a boy, left me without a realization of the time when I became free. A badly poisoned foot, an acute bowel trouble, and other painful conditions have likewise been quickly overcome.

For these blessings I am very grateful; but the realization that comes from the constant study of the Bible, together with "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," namely, that God is an ever present help at all times, is the greatest blessing, and for this I am most grateful.

JOSEPH P. BASSETT, Brookline, Mass.

Threefold

W. EDSON SMITH

GOD'S gift is Life: Himself! We should go straying, Hands full, hearts full, like happy children Maying;
Glad of clear skies, or roses drenched with rain:
His children, zestful of such radiant giving;
His children, never knowing death or pain,—
Caught close to Life—close, closer—in the living.

God's gift is Love: Himself! Is not that all?
Whether white dawn or gray of evenfall,
Peace of the lilies in the quiet lake,
Glory and gleam of blue-arched, wind-swept mountains!
Through Love we live, whatever ways we take,— Cypressed and sober, or by living fountains.

God's gift is Truth: Himself! That makes us free,—
Masters of deserts and the moaning sea;
Content that God is with us in our going,
For springs we drink of mirror back His smile;
Knowing at last that life is worth the knowing,
Knowing at last that love is worth the while.

From Our Exchanges

[The Methodist Recorder]

The promise is to those who gather together. There is no solitariness in spiritual life. Those who believe must identify themselves with believers. The world is discovering the power of association upon mind and heart: there is a corporate consciousness, and there are blessings that come only to those who seek the fellowship of those like-minded. There is a privilege of communion and an obligation of fellowship. It is not possible to be loyal to Christ and despise those who gather in his name.

[The Continent]

True human nature will never be known until sin is put out of it. The only perfect human nature the world has ever known, in the One who came to reveal both God and man and to show what men are meant to be, had in it no strain of selfishness or sin. The man who is like Christ is not a peculiar kind of man; he is the normal man. Sin is a stain on what ought to be an unstained life.

[American Lutheran Survey]

The great need of the world to-day is not efficiency in armies, or proficiency in diplomacy, or sufficiency in material supplies, but it is that return to the fundamental principles of revealed religion which will make men sane, sober, and sanctified, to move in harmony with the divine will, and thus to establish peace on earth and good will among men.

[J. K. Mozley, B.D., in The Constructive Quarterly]

The church proclaims to the world the need of redemption, not only of illumination; but she cannot redeem, though she is herself redeemed. Her office is to guide the world to see not only its own noblest possibilities, but its deepest and most urgent wants. So she can become both the servant of God and the servant of the world.

[Rev. E. E. Seyzinger in The Church Times]

God's first need is men and women who are penitent, watchful, hopeful; men and women who lean on His infinite resourcefulness. True inspiration and vision can only come from such.

[The Watchman-Examiner]

Life is always the great adventure or the great disappointment. Which of the two it shall be depends in no small measure upon what one does with the next thing.

Can Truth Grow Old?

The Master said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away" (Matthew 24:35).

The teachings of Christ Jesus are renewed in Christian Science, and are being daily reaffirmed to a more receptive world by Mrs. Eddy's writings, the Christian Science daily newspaper and the other Christian Science periodicals.

As these Christ-teachings did not pass away in centuries of darkness following Jesus' declaration noted above, can they pass away in whole or in part while modern mail trains and merchant fleets are hurrying the Christian Science periodicals to their destinations in all parts of the globe?

Monitor News Always Interesting

No matter when The Christian Science Monitor reaches the reader, its news is still fresh with the freshness of truth.

Here is what a subscriber writes from the Pacific Northwest, "I cannot refrain at this time from expressing my gratitude to the editors and each one connected with the publication of our periodicals and the Monitor. I sometimes just stop and try to imagine what I would do without my understanding of Christian Science, and our publications which contain such helpful and encouraging articles. The Monitor is wonderful. I have had it said to me, 'The news in the Monitor is so old when it reaches you,' and I invariably reply, 'But it's true when I receive it—there is a satisfaction in being able to believe what you read.' Not only is this paper appreciated by students of Science, but by the public generally. It is the work of Truth you are doing and it cannot fail."

Another subscriber in the state of Washington writes: "It is occasionally contended that the Monitor reaches us out here on the coast too late for the news of the day, but six years of experience with careful daily reading of it has shown me countless times items reach us two or three days before the local papers print them."

A letter from Pretoria, South Africa, says: "The Monitor is the best paper for my distribution work and is welcome in the hotels, cafés, etc. Sometimes it is over six weeks old, but is welcomed everywhere and is a mighty power for good."

One from Ohio says: "A neighbor who is a retired Presbyterian minister to whom we have been handing the Monitor daily for the past year, upon our apologizing for not sending copies more promptly said, 'You are doing very well—no matter how old they are I enjoy all the news in them, in fact it is the best reading matter I have.' He takes several good dailies but prefers the Monitor."

A California subscriber says, "The cry 'Stale news' counts for nothing, since so much of it is news that we get in no other way."

Are not the following words of Mrs. Eddy on page 246 of Science and Health applicable to the Monitor? She says, "Except for the error of measuring and limiting all that is good and beautiful, man would enjoy more than threescore years and ten and still maintain his vigor, freshness, and promise."

Demonstrating Christian Science

WILLIS F. GROSS

THERE is no mystery in Christian Science save the mystery which seems to enshroud everything that is not understood. A practical understanding of the fundamental teachings of Christian Science can be gained by anyone who is willing to devote himself to the diligent study of the Bible and the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. If these books are studied intelligently, the student will gain an insight into spiritual teachings which will enable him to take the first steps in demonstrating this Science. These first steps are indispensable. It is as impossible to gain the understanding of Christian Science without demonstration, i.e., without making an intelligent application of its teachings, as it would be for one to become a musician merely by reading a textbook on the subject, or a mathematician by learning the rules without solving any of the problems which are given to elucidate the rules and test the student's understanding. If the student cannot solve the problems in the textbook, it is proof positive that he does not understand the rule, even though he may repeat the words without hesitation.

To talk Christian Science in a pleasing and impressive manner is of itself no proof of understanding, any more than is the repetition of mathematical rules conclusive evidence that one understands the basic law of numbers. An intelligent grasp of the letter is necessary, but far more than this is required. The proof of understanding is to be found only in the works which demonstrate the truth of the words. If the works are not in evidence, the words are void of vitality and spiritual power.

Intellectuality is not essential to a right apprehension of spiritual things. Many of the so-called intellectual people who lived in the Master's day found it difficult to comprehend his teachings because of their very simplicity. The earnest desire to know and do the will of God will accomplish for mortals far more than all the learning of the schools, which for a time may seem to satisfy human thought with material theories. The Master selected for his immediate followers those who were possessed of sufficient spiritual perception to grasp in some degree the true import of his teachings, and they proved their understanding by their works.

The teachings of Christian Science are comprehensive, and yet they are so simple and direct that they are readily demonstrated by those who are willing to set aside material theories and work from a spiritual basis. In Science and Health we read: "To mortal sense Christian Science seems abstract, but the process is simple and the results are sure if the Science is understood. The tree must be good, which produces good fruit" (p. 459). On page 261 of the same book Mrs. Eddy writes, "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts."

Here is given in a few words a definite idea as to how the teachings of Christian Science are to be applied in actual demonstration. There is nothing mysterious about the modus operandi. It is right in line with the instruction given by Paul, who, citing whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, or of good report, bids us "think on these things." Anyone who is willing to accept spiritual teachings with childlike faith can readily apply Christian Science to the problem at hand and learn that Truth is effectual to meet the need of the hour.

The matter of demonstration simply resolves itself into a question of right thinking. To think right is to demonstrate truth, but right thinking is not attained through the exercise of the human will. In other words, one cannot say within himself, "I will think right," and then be able to do as he desires, simply because he has so determined. In the first place, he may not understand what constitutes right thinking. One may believe error to be truth, but his belief does not change the fact. In the second place, he will learn that it is not always an easy matter to keep his thoughts in right channels. Right thinking and right doing are inseparable.

In the absolute sense the only right thinking is the thinking of divine Mind. A man's thoughts are what they should be only when he is governed by the one infinite intelligence. When he is so governed, he reflects God, and the work of God is manifest in him. Jesus said, "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." By this he meant that whatever of good was accomplished by him was the result of the activity of the divine Mind, and not of any personal or material influence.

"Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true," is the instruction given by the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. It is worthy of consideration that no spasmodic or vacillating effort is sufficient to gain the good desired. One must be steadfast, turning neither to the right nor to the left; looking only to that which endures and is true. Paul expresses the same thought when he says, "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." The result will always be in proportion to one's faithfulness. If the effort is feeble and of short duration, it is unreasonable to expect satisfactory results. Only patient continuance in well doing can attain the desired end.

The demonstration of Christian Science in no sense involves the exercise of the human will; rather does it require the subjugation of mortal or material inclination and desire. In his present state of growth and progress man is but approximating the understanding of eternal being, and he little realizes what are the varying changes of human experience through which he must pass in reaching perfection. For this reason he cannot say, I will do this; or, I will gain possession of that particular thing. The apostle declared, "We know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." Jesus said, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him."

The way to harmony is through obedience to divine law, which brings into human experience whatever is necessary for one's growth and advancement. If one is obedient to God's law, he need not fear that he may lose his reward; neither should he be concerned as to what the reward will be. It sufficeth that the reward will be just. It may not be what the human sense desires, but it will be that which contributes most to an abiding peace and lasting harmony.

One of the first lessons for the student of Christian Science to learn is that it is impossible for the human or mortal mind to direct his course aright. Any attempt to rely on this so-called mind will prove disastrous. He must learn to acknowledge God in all his ways. He must desire and strive for the things of Spirit and not for material gain. The great Teacher declared that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." When this lesson is learned, continued progress is assured, for he becomes willingly obedient, and obedience is the straight and narrow way to happiness and prosperity.

Routine of Expectation

JOAN HUDGENS ROME

SOME one has very beautifully said of Mrs. Eddy, "She never allowed her day to dawn darkened with the clouds of yesterday." One day cannot be the same in routine as the day before, and one cannot expect it to be the same to-morrow as it is to-day, if he is acknowledging the omnipotence of the truth which has been held in thought through the intervening twenty-four hours. Neither is a human being just the same one day as he was the day before, or even the hour before, because the truth has been working through and above his consciousness and that of thousands of others, and this truth is effectual, as Paul tells us, "to the pulling down of strong holds." In "Miscellaneous Writings" we read that "the textbook of Christian Science is transforming the universe" (p. 372). Never could a thought of Truth fail, so each moment is new and different and more spiritual and joyous.

Of all the phases of mortal existence one of the most baneful is the sense of the monotony and routine of affairs which make up the experiences of that existence. The first impressions of a child are of activities in its environment,—in the household living, in what is considered necessary and correct in its food, its clothes, its pleasures, and the expectation of events which mean a broadening out of labor, of lessons in discipline, also the education and responsibilities of mortals. All this the child-mortal is taught to call "life," and he expects this routine to develop for himself through all the years to come. A mortal can have no outlook but to go through the day in the same order of demands on his time as he did yesterday. He will see others going monotonously through the days according to their personal conceptions of living. So he walks in the shadows of weariness, and finally the time comes when he says of the days, "I have no pleasure in them," for the days of man are as grass. As every Christian Scientist knows, this concept of life is not the reality of being, but is the illusion of life in matter, the belief in routine of expectation and routine of submission to matter which seems to be a law.

Our Leader says, "The professors of Christian Science must take off their shoes at our altars; they must unclasp the material sense of things at the very threshold of Christian Science: they must obey implicitly each and every injunction of the divine Principle of life's long problem, or repeat their work in tears" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 120). Truth being all-power, every thought of truth which one entertains in consciousness must be positive,—"for all the promises of God in him are yea and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us." The word of Truth thus adhered to has power, not because of the one who thinks it, but because it emanates from God. Every moment of time is different from the preceding one because truth has been thought, no matter what the material senses may report. Every thought of truth acting on our affairs, our environment, our living, does its perfect work. At this point we refuse to assume the position of Thomas, waiting for the corroboration of material sense and demanding that he be allowed to use his hands to prove the identity of the Master.

We must refuse to allow the material senses, human intellect, and false education to suggest to us what Christian Science should express. God would not be greater than mortal man if man were able to outline what the infinite "I AM" should do for His child. The effort to outline what is desirable springs from a wish to exchange what is unpleasant for that which is called pleasant, both beliefs being equally mortal limitations, though Paul assures us that God "is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

Christian Science teaches that as God is Spirit, man as His likeness must be and is spiritual; that God is infinite good—

> And man, whose heaven erected face
> The smiles of love adorn, is every moment through eternity advancing in the unfolding conception of infinite Mind; is every moment stepping into new, surprising joy,—new because he cannot discern it before his consciousness advances to it. There can be no mere repetition of any action of infinity, and therefore many things must be in the nature of a surprise to human sense, always an added interest, a newness of existence, eternally brightening. Thus does Christian Science save us from the delusions of a treadmill existence; and just in the measure of our dependence on Truth we shall find the prison doors opening and the oppressed set free. So we enter into that joy which our Leader prayed we might realize when she wrote (Poems, p. 31),—

> Joy—not of time, nor yet by nature sown,
> But the celestial seed dropped from Love's throne.

Minding Our Business

JOSEPH B. BAKER

ADMITTEDLY the usefully active life is the only life worth living, and happy is the one who has deliberately gone into a business in which the applying, according to his ability, of the one or the two or the five talents received from his Lord brings forth logical returns. In such a life there is a constant sense of progress, with every moment fully occupied,—satisfaction indeed! The one business that measures up to this standard is the Father's, and the nature of this business and the rule for minding it are specified by Mrs. Eddy with characteristic clearness on page 450 of Science and Health: "The Christian Scientist has enlisted to lessen evil, disease, and death; and he will overcome them by understanding their nothingness and the allness of God, or good."

The warfare between Spirit and the flesh is in this statement tersely summarized for all who are honestly seeking for the truth, so that no one who has undertaken to serve in this cause need be in doubt as to just what is to be done and the one way of doing it. Man's dominion now, as in the time of Christ Jesus, is entered upon by each individual in proportion as he acknowledges God practically, through recognition of and obedience to His demands; in other words, through the understanding gained by man in responding to the infinite wisdom of the Father. Does not this indicate the world's greatest need to-day to be spiritually scientific thinking?

In Proverbs we read, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." The vitalizing element in the teaching of Christ Jesus is the demonstration that the whole of man is found in his manifestation of Mind. Yet do we not see on every hand the very reverse of this,—stubborn rejection of Truth, impish perverseness, with their consequences, friction, discord, and downright destruction as the rule, or rather the misrule, of human existence? Everywhere we observe the fruitlessness of work performed through ill-considered effort or from a merely mechanical or sensuous impulse. Perhaps it is a business conference that comes to naught, or a family or social relationship that goes awry, or a personal sense of poverty or disease that seems to increase. The so-called progress of modern invention, and the introduction of elaborate business systems having a physical or a so-called psychological basis, have not diminished the pitiful sum total of human suffering. In the industrial world wonders are wrought by efficiency engineers, laboring to eliminate extra time-consuming manual movements of factory workers or to shorten manufacturing processes in other ways. But have these specialized reforms, based on so-called natural law, healed the general condition and intercourse of mankind? On the contrary, do we not have continually forced upon our attention the waste that goes on in every department of life, due to the absence of real or God-responsive thought?

Thus is the issue joined, in the mental conflict between good and evil, and thus also is indicated the universal remedy. By overcoming the condition of false, ungodlike mentality we invite the sense of the presence of Mind, and understanding means the activity of this ever present Mind. In knowing and declaring that Mind alone is the governing Principle of man, the availability of God through spiritual understanding, which is the utilization of Mind, is proclaimed. This salvation is announced by Mrs. Eddy in the tremendously significant statement, "The time for thinkers has come" (Science and Health, Pref., p. vii). In the scientific thinking which acknowledges but one Mind as the Principle of all, the Christian Scientist is equipped, like a good workman, to deal with every situation which arises in the best, the most practical way. He is able to mind his business, and he sets about it with rejoicing. He knows that its scope is infinite, and that in minding it he can never come to the end of happy and useful activities. His gratitude is expressed in obedience to the splendid charge in Isaiah: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."

The businesslike Christian Scientist is prompt to detect and destroy wrong thinking before personal sense has appropriated it,—before it has, so to speak, settled down into a concrete mortal thought or personal claim of error. Through daily experience he knows how immeasurably better his affairs go when real or loving thought is taken in obedience to Mind; and further, how God, divine Mind, helps him to think, helps him from the very first and at every step of the way. He finds that working for God is working with God, with all the genuine and thorough success that this fact implies. Consciously engaged in important work, he does not waste time and attention in gazing at or listening to inanities: he does not allow his thoughts to drift idly. Over the door of his mental workshop is the sign, "No admittance except on business."

Neither does the alert Scientist respond to malicious suggestions, for the simple reason that these can find no lodgment in the thought which is busied with real concerns. His repeated demonstrations encourage him to resist the temptation to seek mere human success in any encounter, and he is not easily led astray by what people say or by any other fearful notion. If it be fancied that man cannot always be on the alert,—that "rest" must sometimes intervene,—he understands that this suggestion is but one of the shifts of mortal mind, the mesmerism exemplified in the devils who cried out at Jesus' approach, "Let us alone." He is able to say, in the words of the hymn (Christian Science Hymnal, p. 116),—

Happy the man, who knows
His Master to obey;
Whose life of care and labor flows,
Where God points out the way.

Reading Rooms

EDITH L. PERKINS

AMONG the many blessings for which we are indebted to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, are the reading rooms maintained by the Christian Science churches and societies. At each church service a cordial invitation is given to the public to visit and make use of the reading rooms, where are provided all the published writings of our Leader, as well as the authorized literature of Christian Science issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society, all of which may be purchased, if desired, as well as read. Many of the reading rooms also maintain a loan library, from which this same literature may be borrowed for a period of two weeks, and may be renewed for the same length of time.

At the Christian Science reading rooms many are daily drinking of the life-giving waters through the study of the Bible together with its spiritual interpretation as given by Mrs. Eddy in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." A visit to a Christian Science reading room cannot fail to reveal the importance of this branch of the Christian Science movement and give one a realization of its far-reaching effects. Here may be seen those in widely varied walks of life, yet all feeling the same need and drawn by the same desire. In the perfect quiet for which the rules of the reading rooms provide, thought is refreshed and strengthened by communion with the one God, Spirit, and the realization of man's oneness with Him.

At the Wednesday evening testimony meetings the writer has often expressed gratitude to our Leader for providing these resting places and for the many blessings received from them, and now increased gratitude impels a further acknowledgment through the columns of the Sentinel. The first time that a great sense of gratitude for this branch of the church work came, was when in company with a friend, both of us strangers in a strange city, a visit was made to its reading room upon arrival, and a most loving welcome was received from the one in attendance. Information concerning a place to board was gladly given, and by means of this a place was found where the privileges of a home were enjoyed and a happy friendship was formed.

Again, the reading room has been as an oasis in the desert, a fountain of living water in the desert of discouragement and fear. It may be truly said that a visit to this fountain has never been in vain. Invariably the "cup of cold water" has been given and the needed help received, perhaps from a verse of the Bible illumined by the light of spiritual understanding, a declaration of truth by our Leader as given in her various writings, the reading of a timely article in the Sentinel or Journal, or the metaphysical article in The Christian Science Monitor. At other times the help may come through the reading of the Lesson-Sermon,—that daily food of the student of Christian Science so essential to spiritual growth,—or from a word of encouragement spoken perhaps unconsciously by the one in charge of the room.

At times the reading room has been a veritable refuge from undesirable material conditions,—a room which has seemed too cold for comfort, or in summer one which it has seemed impossible to stay in. Again, it has afforded a refuge from mental atmospheres seemingly difficult to breathe in, and at this refuge the opportunity has been gratefully utilized to realize that the only atmosphere is that of divine Love. With this realization strength and courage have been given to return and reflect the good received, thereby seeing more clearly what Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 150), where after quoting Paul's question, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" she adds: "If He be with us, the wayside is a sanctuary, and the desert a resting-place peopled with living witnesses of the fact that 'God is Love.' "

And so we who have found shelter in this sanctuary rejoice that what the Christian Science reading room is doing for one it is doing and will do for all who are ready to partake of its blessings, giving freely the water that heals, strengthens, and sustains,—even the water of life.

That Which Is Within

JEANNETTE L. WEAKLEY

A CERTAIN student of Christian Science, sleeping out of doors high on a western hill, wakened each morning in the winter to see only the bare, black branches of a couple of poplar trees beating back and forth in the bitter wind. One morning in March the branches seemed to be covered with tiny rough places, which later developed into little knots. Soon there came a soft rain, followed by warm April sunshine, and the knots grew to be buds, and suddenly the branches were clothed with a cloud of tender, feathery green.

All of this was a great lesson to the student. She herself was in need of clothing, and was desiring a more beautiful life; and to her came the keen realization that the gaunt, naked branches had been clothed and made beautiful by their connection with the tree, and by the connection of the tree with its root. Nothing from the outside had put the leaves on. They had appeared as a result of that which was within. The lesson was brought home, and she who needed clothing found herself speedily uplifted, enriched, and clothed.

In speaking of a provision of food and clothing Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you;" and he has told us where to find the kingdom of God, saying, "Behold, the kingdom of God is within you." We must seek and find the kingdom of God, then, in our own consciousness, putting down the rule of materiality and serving Spirit alone.

God, Spirit, is our only source and cause. Paul speaks of our being "rooted and grounded in love." Again, we are taught that Christ is the vine and we are the branches. Mrs. Eddy says in "Pulpit and Press" (p. 4), "You have simply to preserve a scientific, positive sense of unity with your divine source, and daily demonstrate this." If we do this, we shall have all of the fruit of the Spirit, for the root and the vine keep nothing back; and "the fruit of the Spirit," the apostle tells us, "is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." No law of earth can rob us of what our heavenly Father, our only source, cause, and creator, has bestowed upon us.

That it is possible to realize our unity with God and His Christ, St. Paul knew when he wrote to the Romans: "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Love's Protecting Power

MINER M. YORK

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE teaches that just in proportion as human thought becomes spiritualized through right thinking and living, we may feel sure of divine protection at all times. Spiritualized thought may be said to mean a consciousness in which Spirit, or God, is ever recognized as operating for good. Numerous instances are to be found throughout the Bible of this scientific fact, that of Daniel's deliverance being a case in point. It is recorded that Daniel's enemies, in seeking a pretext to bring about his downfall, could find "none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him." They said, "We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God."

How beautifully this law sustained him is seen in the time of his greatest need, for though his persecutors through intrigue and betrayal secured his conviction and sentence to death in the lions' den, Daniel was enabled to pass unharmed through an ordeal from which there seemed no hope of human deliverance, and to assure the king, who came in the early hours of the morning to see if he still lived, "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt." So impressed was Darius with this demonstration of divine power that he issued this decree: "That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions."

Scientifically considered, this episode in the life of Daniel has many helpful lessons for mankind. Let us suppose that Daniel had treasured hatred and revenge against his enemies. In such case could any power have saved him from destruction? No! for he would then have trespassed against the law of Love which is fulfilled in the words of Christ Jesus, "Love thy neighbour as thyself." One of the most difficult and at times seemingly impossible tasks for mortal man is to love his neighbor as himself; and when it comes to obeying the Master's injunction, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you," this is considered beyond the range of human endeavor. But "with God all things are possible," and in proportion as we learn in Christian Science to love our neighbor, and even those who seem to be our enemies, we clothe ourselves with an armor that protects us from every shaft of error.

Mrs. Eddy has given us the key to what must have been the cause of Daniel's protection when she says, "Beloved Christian Scientists, keep your minds so filled with Truth and Love, that sin, disease, and death cannot enter them" (Miscellany, p. 210). The importance of manifesting love, in the daily life of a Christian Scientist, is made clear when we realize that our Leader has made it the basis of the rule for our guidance, as set forth in Section 1 of Article VIII of the Church Manual: "In Science, divine Love alone governs man; and a Christian Scientist reflects the sweet amenities of Love, in rebuking sin, in true brotherliness, charitableness, and forgiveness." If Mrs. Eddy had given nothing else to the world but her revelation of the healing power of divine Love, this alone would entitle her to be known as the channel of the greatest good that has come to the human race since Jesus' time.

The Measure of a Man

HARRY J. DUNHAM

Oh, what's the measure of a man?
The prestige of an ancient clan,
A sturdy form, a comely face,
Or wealth, or power, or pride of place,
Devotion to ambition's aim
With one intent, an honored name
Which all the world with pride may scan,—
Are these the measure of a man?

Not so! The man of humble mind,
Who hath his Father's will divined,
And bearing much and suffering long
Yet no dominion yields to wrong;
Who, be his station high or low,
Doth no respect of persons show,
But serving God whate'er befall,
Doth righteous judgment judge withal;
Who succoreth those by want distressed,
Uplifts the fallen and oppressed,
Renewing hope and courage where
He found but fear and dark despair;
Who finds in evil's vaunted power
Occasion in the present hour
Again, as oft of old, to prove
The conquering might of Truth and Love;
Who, free from lust and blighting fear,
Accepts not things as they appear,
But sees, despite the carnal mind,
God's image stamped on all mankind;
Who turns aside hate's fiery darts
With charity, which Love imparts;
To whom existence understood
Means God as All, and All as good.

Aye, even though he be denied
The prestige of ancestral pride;
And comeliness, and wealth, and fame,
And power, and proud ambition's aim
Be each and all withheld, and he—
As worldlings judge—convicted be
Of failure, yet his deeds sublime
Will stand approved, till hoary time
Shall cease, and immortality
Doth crown his deathless victory
O'er sin, and self, and mortal sense,
And be for aye his recompense,
Revealing in the eternal plan
God's measure of a perfect man!

["Love of Animals"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 23, 1917]

One of the comforting deductions drawn from scientific Christianity is that animals can share with their human superiors the blessings of heaven. Of course as long as heaven is supposed to be a locality into which good people are transported after death, the likelihood of animals sharing this heaven seems problematical; but when the kingdom of heaven is recognized to be a present atmosphere of harmony, it becomes apparent that animals also may be surrounded by its benefits. The love of animals means more than appears on the surface. When it characterizes an individual or a race it implies freedom and love of God. Cruelty toward animals is found among those who are slaves of each other. In lands which are governed by tyranny the animals fare badly, but where liberty abounds the animals are well treated. The process seems to work somewhat as follows: the autocratic head of the state tyrannizes over the class under him, that class over the one below, until the lowest human stratum is reached, which in turn tyrannizes over the dumb animals. The more unscrupulous the oppression from the head of the nation, the worse the fate of the defenseless animals. On the other hand, freemen are traditionally kind to their animals, for they have no occasion to avenge themselves upon any supposed inferiors.

This question of the treatment of animals goes deeply into the psychology of nations, and is finally linked to their concepts of the First Cause, of God. Evil governments presuppose evil beliefs about God, and such beliefs affect injuriously the health and happiness of animals as well as men. The love of animals, wherever found, may therefore be taken as a sign of an inherent, even though an inarticulate, love of God. In reply to the question, "Do animals and beasts have a mind?" Mrs. Eddy on page 36 of "Miscellaneous Writings" did not hesitate to reply at length: "Beasts, as well as men, express Mind as their origin; but they manifest less of Mind. The first and only cause is the eternal Mind, which is God, and there is but one God. The ferocious mind seen in the beast is mortal mind, which is harmful and proceeds not from God; for His beast is the lion that lieth down with the lamb. Appetites, passions, anger, revenge, subtlety, are the animal qualities of sinning mortals; and the beasts that have these propensities express the lower qualities of the so-called animal man; in other words, the nature and quality of mortal mind,—not immortal Mind."

A practical deduction from this answer is, therefore, that human beings instructed in Christian Science can protect the animals under them from "the ferocious mind" and its evil effects, and the experience of multitudes of Christian Scientists verifies this fact. It has been noticed that during racial conflicts in which much hatred is expressed, domestic animals are apt to develop mysterious diseases which sweep over them like pestilences. The assumption has been that these diseases are due to physical conditions solely, but Science is uncovering the secret methods by which the liberated animal qualities strike at the harmony of beasts as well as men, and provides the cure through the spiritual understanding of the reality of being.

Therefore the little child caressing a household pet need not be reproved for wasting its affection on that which is excluded from heaven. People who are grateful for the serviceable horse, the faithful dog, the comfortable cat, the cheery canary, or other types of beings considered below the human in the scale of life, are learning, to that extent, the meaning of true creation. The carnal mind would like to make a menagerie out of the animal kingdom, to place it under human will power and make it growl, snarl, and hiss to order, but the divine Mind tames the lions through the spiritual understanding of a Daniel, and extracts the viper's sting through the scientific sense of a Paul. The artificial hatred which sends the sharks snapping at human beings farther inland than is their wont, can be neutralized by the scientific understanding which enabled Jesus to find his tax money in the fish's mouth. The instinctive protection which compassion bestows upon the domestic animals as well as the beasts of the field springs from a scientifically Christian perception that God made all that was made, that it was spiritual and not material, and saw that it was very good.

The various societies for the protection of animals, the institution of bird sanctuaries, even some of the game laws, spring from a just sense of responsibility toward forms of life which are relatively helpless against "the ferocious mind." Isaiah's vision of peace among the denizens of the animal kingdom is more than fancy; it is prophetic of a rapidly approaching era in which "the wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

On pages 514 and 515 of Science and Health, Mrs. Eddy, with a spiritual illumination which is far ahead of the times, lifts the animal kingdom out of the misnomers which Adam placed upon it and gives us the metaphysical good qualities of "the lion of the tribe of Juda," "the cattle upon a thousand hills," and the lowly worm. Even the right perception of the serpent is there explained. As the vision of the true creation spreads before man with increasing distinctness, Christian Science teaches him to "preach the gospel to every creature," to share with the lesser lights in the firmament of heaven the glorious effulgence which comes to him from Spirit, God.

Let no one, therefore, mock at the healing of the animals which is going on through Christian Science, for, as we read on page 550 of Science and Health, "God is the Life, or intelligence, which forms and preserves the individuality and identity of animals as well as of men."

[W. Stuart Booth in Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Col.]

The classification of Christian Science with hypnotism and psychology by a recent writer in your columns was unfortunate, as they are basically and wholly dissimilar, in both teaching and operation, for the dynamic force in Christian Science practice, the divine Mind or Spirit, is not even recognized in the other teachings mentioned. Furthermore, hypnotism is acknowledged by its votaries as capable of producing evil, whereas Christian Science, being the law of God, good, can result in good only, and Christ Jesus said, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

It is evident that "concentrated human will" and "sheer intellectual force" are largely responsible for the world war, and obviously that which causes a situation cannot cure it. Only as greed, lust, hatred, and fear are eliminated from human consciousness by the activity therein of love, purity, and confidence will the cause of strife be reached and annulled, and permanent peace be assured to mankind. And, as Mrs. Eddy has written in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 407), "Here Christian Science is the sovereign panacea, giving strength to the weakness of mortal mind,—strength from the immortal and omnipotent Mind,—and lifting humanity above itself into purer desires, even into spiritual power and good-will to man."

Christian Scientists individually are doing all they can to end the war, not only by serving their country in whatever capacity they can, but also by prayerful endeavor to let that Mind be in them "which was also in Christ Jesus," for thus alone can the universal brotherhood of man be established.

[Samuel Greenwood in The World, Vancouver, B. C., Canada]

The speaker at the Tabernacle, as reported in The World, had a splendid opportunity to give his audience some authentic information on the subject of Christian Science.

Christian Scientists will heartily agree with the speaker that a system which denies the authority of Jesus Christ or that the Bible is the word of God, does not deserve the name of Christian; but no religious teaching on earth to-day accepts the authority of Jesus Christ more literally or completely, or stands more squarely on the Bible as God's revelation of Himself to humanity, than does Christian Science. And Christian Scientists, be it known, are vastly better qualified to pronounce upon the teachings of Christian Science than are the critics who read into Mrs. Eddy's writings what they wish to find there, or who attempt to read out of them the truths which identify Christian Science with the Christianity of the Master.

The doctor's remark about Christian Science standing as "Satan's masterpiece" is, to say the least, irresistibly funny, when read side by side with what many others of his own cloth have said; and a minister's words are surely most worthy of acceptance when they are sent forth in charity and justice, both of which are Christian virtues of far greater value to Christendom than the denunciation and misrepresentation of other religions.

In the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Times of Sept. 27, 1915, a clergyman is quoted as saying, "Christian Science is the most flourishing department of Christianity in the world to-day." And in the Berkeley (Cal.) Gazette of Nov. 29, 1915, a clergyman of that city is reported as saying, "No one who knows anything about Christian Science can fail gratefully to recognize the great and helpful service it has rendered to a needy and suffering world."

The fact that many physicists are to-day veering strongly toward Mrs. Eddy's views regarding matter should convince the worthy doctor that there is no occasion for being alarmed or excited about it, and especially in public. If matter is not of God, he may be sure that it will sometime disappear from human consciousness because of its falsity; but if our critic holds that matter is of God, he should censure the apostle Paul for speaking of the flesh, or matter if you please, as lusting against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and saying that "these are contrary the one to the other." If, as the Scriptures teach, materiality is the opposite of spirituality, it is not too much to say that materiality is unreal, since the spiritual alone is real.

Had the speaker at the Tabernacle read Mrs. Eddy's writings even half carefully, he would not have stated that she denies God as the creator of man. Throughout all her writings she so absolutely accepts God as the creator of man and the universe as to acknowledge no other; but she does not acknowledge God as the author of aught that is sinful, if that is what our critic means, and in this she is certainly on Scriptural ground. The speaker evidently fails to differentiate between a sinning mortal and man in God's image and likeness, but until he does this he is not in a position to understand either the Bible or Mrs. Eddy's writings.

Jesus said: "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death;" and again, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." If these statements did not apply to himself, there is no hope for the rest of humanity. Jesus met death and conquered it, which was the crowning work of his career, as it established beyond doubt the immortality of man. If our critic is unable to understand our Master's immunity from death, he will find it still more difficult to understand his statement, recorded in the eighth chapter of John's gospel, that he lived before Abraham.

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Pittsfield (Mass.) Eagle]

In a Saturday issue was printed some copy furnished by a news syndicate wherein a medical writer undertook to inject in the body of his article on disease prevention an attack on Christian Science so unfair that in other papers coming to my notice editors struck out the objectionable paragraphs. Christian Science does not take any such stand as represented by this doctor; it does not ignore suffering. The sufferer who does not desire its ministrations, nor to receive its benefits, is free to seek whatever medical help is wanted.

Christian Science rests upon divine Principle, and the tenets of the church are wise and sensible. Followers of this religion, whose lives accord with these tenets and are governed by the one Principle, act wisely and do not give offense to their neighbors. Therefore, Christian Scientists as a religious body feel entitled to consideration from the press and in the press. As Mrs. Eddy has said in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 344): "Were it more fully understood that Truth heals and that error causes disease, the opponents of a demonstrable Science would perhaps mercifully withhold their misrepresentations, which harm the sick; and until the enemies of Christian Science test its efficacy according to the rules which disclose its merits or demerits, it would be just to observe the Scriptural precept, 'Judge not.'"

[H. R. Colborne in Australian Christian World, Sydney, New South Wales]

From reference made from time to time in the press, and also in an article published in your paper some few months since, it would appear that there are many misapprehensions with regard to Christian Science, and it has been described as "a substitute for the gospel," "a nostrum" and "Spiritism." Permit me to make a few observations in order that the wrong impressions may be removed.

Before deciding whether anything is a substitute, it is necessary to see what the original is. The apostle Paul in the epistle to the Romans defines the gospel as "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." In the fourth chapter of Luke we read that Jesus, after referring to the passage in Isaiah foretelling the office of the Christ, said: "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." Now anyone who has the slightest acquaintance with the gospel narratives knows that our Master, in accordance with such prophecy and by the power of God, absolutely healed physical diseases, although the ministers of his day attributed his works to Beelzebub, just as at the present day many attribute Christian Science healing to hypnotism, mental suggestion, and mesmerism. Our Master not only did these works, but he commanded and taught his followers to do the same, in the same manner, and said those who believed (understood) would do the same works, and even greater.

Christian Scientists accept this teaching and do these works by the power of God; but it must never be forgotten that Jesus did not limit his work, nor does Christian Science limit its ministry to physical healing. Our Master healed sin, and Mrs. Eddy in dealing with this subject wrote as follows: "Is healing the sick the whole of Science? Healing physical sickness is the smallest part of Christian Science. It is only the bugle-call to thought and action, in the higher range of infinite goodness. The emphatic purpose of Christian Science is the healing of sin; and this task, sometimes, may be harder than the cure of disease; because, while mortals love to sin, they do not love to be sick" (Rudimental Divine Science, p. 2). Again, Mrs. Eddy defines salvation as "Life, Truth, and Love understood and demonstrated as supreme over all; sin, sickness, and death destroyed" (Science and Health, p. 593).

This surely is a full salvation, and is not a substitute for the gospel of Christ; it is identically the same. Christian Science cannot be truly called "a nostrum," i.e., "any scheme or device of a quack or charlatan" (Century Dictionary). Christian Scientists have not pretended to cure; they have cured the sick, and this cannot be denied. The evidence of this fact is such that in a number of the American states the legislatures in making laws for the protection of the public from medical impostors and charlatans have expressly excepted the Christian Science church from the prohibitive provisions of such statutes.

[Carl E. Herring in Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald]

A correspondent in intimating that Christian Scientists, in common with every one else, use only such portions of the Bible as "suit their requirements," has touched upon the thing that through the ages has made religion dogmatic instead of spiritual. Christian Science endeavors to harmonize the Scriptures from the viewpoint of an entirety, and not by the isolated text system. Of course this fact can be made apparent only by a systematic study of Christian Science, and the matter cannot be judged of from a necessarily brief newspaper item. This unification of the Scriptures is brought about by constantly looking for the spiritual meaning of the Bible, and however contradictory the letter of the word may seem, it will be found that there is no conflict when the spiritual meaning is ascertained.

To illustrate: In the first chapter of Genesis we find that God created man in His own image, while in the second chapter we are told that man was formed from the dust of the ground. No one can read the two accounts of creation as given in the first two chapters of Genesis and find anything but contradiction under a literal interpretation; but Mrs. Eddy in the chapter on Genesis in Science and Health completely satisfies our critic's complaint, not by dogmatically presenting the issue in any narrow sense, but by illuminating the Scriptural meaning under each proposition set forth in the Biblical account of creation.

As our friend is undoubtedly a Bible student, may we not offer two propositions for serious consideration,—first, that all distinctive religious denominations, aside from Christian Science, found their right to separate existence upon one or very few isolated passages of Scripture; and second, that the creeds of the churches are frequently deductions made by theologians which bear no relation to the texts from which such deductions are supposed to be made. We so fully concur in the basic idea as set forth by our correspondent,—that the Bible needs to be studied from every dimension,—that we wish to leave no doubt of the fact that Christian Science is a sincere effort to do this very thing.

Important Announcement

BEGINNING with January, 1918, a translation in French of articles from The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, and The Christian Science Monitor will be made into an additional periodical under the title of LE HÉRAUT DE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE. These articles will be published with the English text opposite the pages in French, and the pages in English will be headed by the translation of the title as THE HERALD OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

The price for this periodical is $2.00 a year. Subscriptions are now invited and may be sent to The Christian Science Publishing Society.

This same plan of placing the English text opposite the translated pages will also be followed with Der Herold der Christian Science beginning with the January number, 1918.

In the establishment of Le Héraut de Christian Science Christian Scientists will welcome a further fulfillment of the purpose of our Leader, Reverend Mary Baker Eddy, in connection with the periodicals of Christian Science. In speaking of the intent of Der Herold der Christian Science Mrs. Eddy declared in the first issue of The Christian Science Monitor (Miscellany, p. 353) that it was "to proclaim the universal activity and availability of Truth."

Drawing Nigh to God

WHEN the prodigal son wanted to have his own way, he placed himself at a great distance from his father. He would be his own master, so he thought. All his gear, the gift of his father, he gathered together, "and took his journey into a far country." The most valuable possession of all, his father's love, he did not consciously take with him, that is, it was not in his thought. His sense regarding his father was the same as that of the wicked man regarding God, for of him it is said, "God is not in all his thoughts."

How shall there be a change in such a condition, unless it be in the way of drawing near to God, which would mean making welcome the thought of God, and aspiring Godward? The prodigal son arose, and retraced from the far country his long journey; and his father with unfailing compassion ran to meet him and forgive him, and thereby evidenced his unaltered love. Does not this illustrate the metaphysical truth stated by James: "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you"?

The early navigator who placed on the cork float in his bowl of water "the wise iron," and saw that floating needle seek the north star with perpetual desire, observed a pertinacity such as characterizes men, whose activities always point in the direction of their desires. What is the good man doing but following the direction of his motives? What is the so-called sinner doing but achieving his desires? Every one swings around to that which will satisfy him, as he believes, and he serves that. Paul, writing to the Romans, makes this abundantly clear when he says, "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?"

Many people meet life like a country boy at the county fair, listening to the clamorous voices of the side-show men and the hawkers, driven this way and that with curiosity and avarice, until his little store of money is all spent and nothing of worth has been given him in return. There are too many who are "tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine," seeking good everywhere but where it is. Home was the prodigal's need, and it was where his father was. Love is the great need of human beings, and it is where God is. Hence, as the prodigal drew nigh to his father to find home, we all should draw nigh to God and find, each for himself, that God is Love.

Is there any mystery about this approach to Deity? None whatever. Our teacher in Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, has made all clear in that beautiful elucidation of Prayer, which is the first chapter in the textbook. Our joyful progress Godward is then a process of entertaining angels, which as defined in Science and Health (p. 581) we find to be "God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

The human mind often tries to make out a case for itself in claiming a goodness of its own whereby to demand favor. It is as if the prodigal had approached his father saying, "I am not so bad as you think I am." What he did say was, "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son," and this repentance brought him nigh to his father. He did not try to place himself, but let his father place him; and his father did this by causing the sinner to disappear and the son to appear.

It is when the son of God appears, expressing God's image, that immortality also is expressed, mortal mind disappears, with its pride and fear, its sin, and its boasting. Then it becomes clearly evident, as we are so continually reminded by the "scientific statement of being" (Science and Health, p. 468), that "all is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all."

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Prayers for Prosperity

THE thought of prosperity is to be found in many places throughout the Scriptures, and it was undoubtedly regarded by the Hebrew people as a manifestation of divine favor. It certainly cannot be said that there was anything wrong about this if the idea which it represents was rightly understood, and it surely was by the more spiritually minded throughout the centuries which preceded the coming of Christ Jesus. In patriarchal times we find that no enterprise was undertaken without a prayer for divine guidance and prosperity, and we have a wonderful illustration of that which really constitutes it when we read in II Chronicles of the experiences of Uzziah. From the record we find that Uzziah was only sixteen years old when his long and harmonious reign began; but it is good to read that he did "that which was right in the sight of the Lord," and we are told that "as long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper."

In the Psalms we find many different phases of human belief presented, and if we search diligently we can always discover the spiritual truth which corrects the error. Thus we find the psalmist declaring that "God is good to Israel." Then we find him saying, "I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked." He evidently was passing through experiences such as are common to many Christian Scientists, but he tells us that when he went into the "sanctuary of God," advanced beyond material sense to spiritual reality, then he understood what had formerly been hidden from him; and the light of Truth entering his consciousness brought an awakening from this mortal dream wherein good seems to be subservient to evil. We find him giving thanks for the divine counsel which he had received, and a deep lesson may be gathered from the words which follow, "It is good for me to draw near to God."

In the 118th psalm we read, "O Lord, I beseech thee, send now prosperity." This recalls our Leader's words in her annual Message to The Mother Church in 1898, called "Christian Science versus Pantheism," where she says, "Pray for the prosperity of our country, and for her victory under arms; that justice, mercy, and peace continue to characterize her government, and that they shall rule all nations" (p. 14). One thing is certain, that neither nations nor individuals can prosper in any true sense, or for any length of time, unless they are obedient to the law of Truth and Love; and the sooner we find this out the better for us as individuals in the working out of our daily problems. The trouble usually is that the necessary steps, which call for unswerving obedience to divine law, are overlooked, because desire is turned so constantly toward prosperity, without due thought as to what really constitutes it, hence the spiritual height is not reached.

St. John had undoubtedly gained a true sense of this subject when he said in his third epistle, "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." If we were to watch constantly that our prayer for prosperity might be really based upon a deep, heartfelt desire for spiritual health, which means holiness, we should have no reason to mourn over wasted time or effort. Furthermore, in getting right ourselves in this respect we should help others to gain the incorruptible riches eternally provided by divine Love for all who love the truth. The student of Christian Science readily sees the deep intent of Mrs. Browning's words, where she expresses her concept of what "I" really means. It is this:—

> The conscious and eternal soul
> With all its ends,—and not the outside life,
> The parcel-man, the doublet of the flesh,
> The so much liver, lung, integument,
> Which make the sum of "I" hereafter when
> World-talkers talk of doing well or ill.
> I prosper, if I gain a step.

If we do not realize prosperity in our earthly experience, it is well to get rid of whatever clogging beliefs may be holding us back; and then, as in the early experience of the Church of Christ, Scientist, when a forward step was taken, we shall be able to record it as did our Leader, when she wrote: "This measure was immediately followed by a great revival of mutual love, prosperity, and spiritual power" (Retrospection and Introspection, p. 44). As Christian Scientists we could not even desire a prosperity which does not include that of our beloved cause, and so our own growth and well-being must be held sacred because of its relation to this cause and the blessing which it holds for all mankind.

ANNIE M. KNOTT.

The Army of the Lord

THE hosts of Spirit advance, confuting the mobs of matter. Irresistible in spiritual power they carry the new to supersede the old. With the cry of freedom they trample tyranny, and they uncover false pretenses as they march. They quicken the pace; they cause the righteous nation to blossom into sweetness and joy; they bring into line with Principle the peoples ready to obey God; they are trained through self-sacrifice to bury the dead beliefs of civilizations outworn; they bring the West to the East. Shall not Christian Scientists reenforce this army of the Lord with the equipment of spiritual might, with "the whole armour of God," "the breastplate of righteousness," "the shield of faith," "the helmet of salvation," "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God"? This word scientifically understood is protection against undersea monsters, against the storms of the air, electricity and hail, against the lurking thought which plants the mine and fires from ambush, against the diabolism which conceived and brought forth death-dealing fumes and stupefying clouds laden with the intent of disease. The word of God declared by the Christian Scientist can feed and clothe the army of the Lord and throw about it a sheltering wall which no fleshly temptation can penetrate.

March forth, then, upon thy divine mission, great host of Christian soldiers, animated by lofty purpose, strong and enduring, bound into unity by the power of Principle, intelligent, alert, keen, and joyous. The health of this army comes from God; its life is indestructible; it is the embodiment of spiritual good and cannot be penetrated by bullets, bombs, or gases of hatred. The pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night hedges it about with an impenetrable barricade. The song of Zion is on its lips, the oil of gladness anoints its head, and in its hand it carries the life-giving qualities of the word of God which it dispenses to the less fortunate brother man. The forces of evil cannot cope with God's eternal might; they quail before the light of Truth. For as Nebuchadnezzar once vaunted, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?" so to-day from out the dark chamber of intentional evil there comes the same boast, and the same reply is ready from the mouth of God, as it was for Nebuchadnezzar, "The kingdom is departed from thee." Too cowardly to surrender, the supposititious forces of evil fight on for fear of losing the little they yet seem to hold. But in due time there will resound through the palaces of church and state the contrite acknowledgment of God's power, who "doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?"

Animated by a deep love of peace, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science strove for the attainment of "on earth peace, good will toward men." Yet her experience with the tenacity of evil in human consciousness and her prophetic perception of to-day's world turmoil wrung from her the statement, "But if our nation's rights or honor were seized, every citizen would be a soldier and woman would be armed with power girt for the hour" (Miscellany, p. 277). That hour has sounded, and the army of the Lord is afoot prepared for war, while woman is learning power. The hosts of divine compassion advance into the dark places of arrogant fear, "to preach good tidings unto the meek," "to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

To-day Christian Scientists need to fortify themselves with that noble "Prayer for Country and Church," found in

Mrs. Eddy's Message to The Mother Church for 1898 and entitled "Christian Science versus Pantheism." Let the following extracts from that prayer speak to the present need: "Pray for the prosperity of our country, and for her victory under arms; that justice, mercy, and peace continue to characterize her government, and that they shall rule all nations. Pray that the divine presence may still guide and bless our chief magistrate, those associated with his executive trust, and our national judiciary; give to our congress wisdom, and uphold our nation with the right arm of His righteousness. In your peaceful homes remember our brave soldiers, whether in camp or in battle. Oh, may their love of country, and their faithful service thereof, be unto them life-preservers!" (Page 14.)

The Lectures

BOSTON, MASS. (The Mother Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Bicknell Young, first reader, who said in part:—

In behalf of the Directors of The Mother Church, and of its world-wide membership, I take great pleasure in welcoming you here this evening. The very name Christian Science, which Mary Baker Eddy gave her discovery, at once arrests the attention and inspires the hope of any earnest thinker. Until this name was clarioned forth, Christianity, though rich in history, poetry, literature, and art, was still only a system of postponed salvation. To-day, through Christian Science, it has become, with all its promises of health and peace, a scientific, demonstrable certainty.

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy thus spiritually defines day: "The irradiance of Life; light, the spiritual idea of Truth and Love" (p. 584). Many have come here to-night led by an expectant hope. Others, perhaps, under the shadow of pain, sorrow, sin, or despair, may be turning to Christian Science as the last recourse. May we not take Mrs. Eddy's beautiful explanation of the word day, as used in the Bible, and apply it to our meeting here, and may we not expect that this occasion and our participation in it will be a great measure of the veritable day of salvation? The apostle Paul, to those who had ears to hear, long ago removed the depressing element of time from the demonstration of Truth, in the glorious declaration, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."—The Christian Science Monitor.

DULUTH, MINN. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Edward C. Kennedy, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a religion for no particular sect or school; it teaches that whatever really blesses one blesses all, and declares that divine Truth and Love alone, as taught and demonstrated by Christ Jesus, is the remedy for all ills, and certainly heals sickness and disease, destroys sin and its evil effects, and brings health, joy, comfort, and peace to all, —a religion of Love, which in half a century has encircled the earth and through which will be established as a living reality the true brotherhood of man.

CHICAGO, ILL. (Seventh Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by Edith I. Weeks, who said in part:—

The great Teacher said of the sheep, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Jesus' spiritual understanding of God as Father, divine Principle, Love, enabled him to prove what he taught by meeting and destroying every phase of mortal discord. He did this not in violation of divine law, but in demonstration of God's law of harmony. Christian Science is to-day fulfilling the doctrine of the Master in healing the sick and sorrowing, redeeming the sinner, and satisfying the human cravings with a higher and more permanent joy.

SEATTLE, WASH. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Miss Evangeline Fox, who said in part:—

Christian Science has to do with God entirely as the only cause and creator. Through its teaching prayer has ceased to mean pleading and supplication, and is seen as a declaration of the allness of God and of man's relationship to Him. It has made it possible for men to understand the Bible, and thus to realize that the many healings of sin, disease, and death recorded there were not peculiar to any person or time, but followed naturally as the answer to prayer. It has turned thought from the contemplation of philosophies and creeds to a childlike trust and faith in God as our loving and ever present Father. Its message of joy and peace is free to all who wish to avail themselves of it through careful study and obedience.

CHARLESTON, W. VA. (First Church).—William W. Porter, lecturer; introduced by Frank Conklin, who said in part:—

Christian Science teaches the new-old idea, which was, and is, and ever shall be. Its teaching coincides with that of Jesus, and confirms and repeats the doctrine of the ancient prophets and apostles. Jesus said, "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." Some fifty years ago a pure, gentle, and loving woman, Mrs. Eddy, in a time of great need realized this promise in all the fullness of its meaning. The "still small voice" of Truth spoke direct to her, and she, through many trials and sacrifices, being persecuted and maligned at every turn, has given to the world this message of love. It comes to you to-day with healing in its wings.

GREENVILLE, OHIO (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Augustus A. Tobias, who said in part:—

Christian Scientists affirm that God's law is unchanging, that it is never held in suspension, but is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and that God "is universal, eternal, divine Love, which changeth not and causeth no evil, disease, nor death" (Science and Health, p. 140). The mission of the Christian Science church is to establish in the minds of men the truth about God and His creation. The work is one of demonstration rather than profession, so that much weight is given to good works.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. (Third Church).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Henry M. Newmark, who said in part:—

Jesus the Christ, to whom the prophet Isaiah referred as "The Prince of Peace," declared, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." Had the words and works of the Master really been understood, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man would long since have been realized in the world. We are grateful that the same promise has come to us to-day through Christian Science, which is reinstating "primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing" (Church Manual, p. 17), and is giving to us the peace which passeth all human understanding.

Testimonies of Healing

It is over three and a half years since I first heard of Christian Science. At that time I was in a desperate condition. For fifteen years I had suffered from rheumatic gout, affecting every joint from my neck to my toes. Several of the joints were locked, and each day I seemed capable of doing less. Several doctors and a specialist were consulted, and they all agreed that my case was incurable. I could do very little for myself; in fact was quite dependent upon my friends for everything.

At the time I heard of Christian Science I was much troubled about a sister who was suffering from a mental breakdown which was declared to be incurable, though she had been under medical care for about five years. In speaking of my sister a friend who visited at my home said she knew that Christian Science would heal her. I simply laughed at the thought and told her how many doctors had had the case, and that all had said she would never be better; but my friend was insistent, so I promised to mention the matter to my parents and abide by their decision. When I did mention the matter, my father said he would not have Christian Science tried; that if prayers could have saved her she would have been better long ago, and I agreed with him in this view of the case.

A few days later I was thinking about my sister's case and my own, and feeling very sorry for both of us, when the thought came, Why not try Christian Science? I had done everything possible to give her even the smallest pleasure, and if in later years I found that Christian Science could have helped her, I would never be able to forgive myself; so I at once proceeded to find out something about this teaching. I was introduced to a practitioner, and told her of my sister's case only. She talked very kindly to me, and listened patiently to my sad story, then asked me to call again after thinking over what she had said. I did call again, and she agreed to take my sister's case and give absent treatment, but she asked me to read Science and Health, which she kindly lent me. I took the book home and tried to read it, but did not understand it; however, having promised to read, I did so each day faithfully. Very often I went to see the practitioner, and I also attended the service at the church on Sundays and Wednesdays.

Treatment had been given my sister for just three months when the doctors recommended that she should come home for a test, although they said it was impossible for her to be better. Since the day she came home, however, now over three years ago, she has remained perfectly well. The following January she took up her professional duties in the scholastic world and has not been ill a day since. On the day following her return home she was in my room while I was dressing, and when I was putting on the bandages as usual she said to me, "Do you wear those things now?" I replied, "Oh, I should not wear them, now that I know of Christian Science," and threw them aside, intending to put them on when she left the room, for I thought I would not be able to walk without them; but she remained until I was ready to go, and I had to walk without them. I was quite free, and have had no return of rheumatic gout since. I can walk well and am in perfect health.

For this healing I am more grateful than words can express, but still more so for the spiritual change Christian Science has made in my life, for peace and happiness, and for a brighter outlook. For the better understanding of God I am indeed thankful, and I am grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her wonderful book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which has shown me so clearly that God does not afflict His children, but protects them, and provides all good for them continually.

EMMA PARRY, Liverpool, England.

I wish to verify my daughter's testimony, and also to add my own. For years I had been in a very weak state of health, owing to stomach and bowel trouble, and was continually taking medicine. My right eye also gave me a lot of trouble, and in the end had to be removed to save the sight of the other, making me much weaker than before.

I was then in my seventy-fourth year, and about that time met with an accident while boarding a tramcar, being dragged some thirty yards or more and getting very much shaken up. Through it all I had been in the hands of a doctor, but not being satisfied I consulted another physician, who said there was a growth. A specialist confirmed this opinion and I was put under the X-ray; but although the growth could be felt, it could not be seen. Another specialist treated me for some months without my getting any relief, and I was still under his care when the above wonderful healing of my daughters occurred.

Up to this time I had been much opposed to Christian Science, but what it had done for my daughters was sufficient evidence. I paid a visit to the practitioner, and while in conversation with her found myself willing to receive the truth. For some time I had been seeking something more satisfying, but had not found it until then. She advised me to read Science and Health, also gave me treatment, and told me to go home and eat a good meal. I did so, and suffered no ill effects. On the third night I was awakened in the small hours of the morning by a sense of the stomach being violently agitated. I got up and walked the room in alarm, thinking something serious was the matter, and to me it seemed a long time before the agitation stopped; then there came over me such a calm, peaceful feeling that, realizing I was healed, I went back to bed and slept until the usual time.

This happened in 1913, and since then changes have been going on in me for the better. I am now feeling younger and stronger by fully thirty years, and can take any kind of food without fear of results. For these and many other blessings I am most grateful, also for the knowledge and experience of the infinite divine Principle, Life, Truth, and Love, ever operative in all our affairs. I am thankful to Mrs. Eddy for making so clear to us the way of life in Science and Health, as well as our relation to God and His Son Christ Jesus, whom to know is eternal life.—ROBERT PARRY.

Through Christian Science I have been helped more than I can tell. For nine years I was treated by specialists and different doctors for stomach trouble, and at times existed on almost nothing. In March, 1915, I was taken ill with what was called deep-seated bronchitis, and was in the hospital a week. After coming home I did not gain any strength, and not feeling satisfied with my doctor, consulted one of the best specialists in Cincinnati. He diagnosed the case as fallen stomach and said that the lungs were affected; that I would never get stronger in this climate. I therefore went to Los Angeles in May, but landed in California broken-hearted at leaving my home and loved ones.

When Christian Science was mentioned to me by a lady, I said I did not believe in it; but after hearing of her wonderful healing I decided to try it as a last resort. A practitioner was consulted, and in just nine weeks I returned home well. Glasses were laid aside after having been worn constantly for nine years. Even with glasses I had been unable to read ten minutes without my eyes paining me dreadfully, but I can now read and study for hours without suffering any inconvenience. I have also taken off a stomach support which had been worn constantly, and have been healed of bowel disorder of many years' standing.

After returning home I was taken sick with every symptom of a severe bronchial trouble, but with the aid of a practitioner I was healed in less than a week. An attack of influenza was overcome in less than two weeks. I have had many more proofs of God's healing power, and seemingly difficult problems have been solved; in fact, Christian Science has met my every need. Although at times to sense the way seems dark, I know all will be met through Truth and the beautiful teaching of Christian Science. Words are insufficient to express my thankfulness to God, but I am striving each day to be better spiritually and to know more of this truth that makes free. I am also deeply grateful to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy.

MRS. EARL RICK, Covington, Ky.

It has been nearly four years since the light of Christian Science first penetrated the darkness and despair that filled my life, and led as a beacon light to a haven of rest. Our six months' old baby was suffering from a skin disease which had spread over his entire body, and required constant care both night and day. Our little girl, four years old, was suffering from attacks of stomach trouble and an extreme nervousness which manifested itself chiefly in a twitching of the eyelids. Both children were under the care of a child specialist, who had prescribed for them a most rigid diet. I shall not forget the burden I felt when, because of this diet, the physician said it rested with me whether the children got well, and that probably the little girl would never be able to eat in a normal way. But I rejoice to have learned in Christian Science that all these laws were man-made, and that God's law has rendered them null and void.

It is scarcely to be wondered at that I was weakened physically as well as spiritually, and was at times confined to my bed. At this time some relatives of my husband wrote that they were coming to our city, and this seemed the last straw, for we felt that we could not entertain them. But God's ways are not our ways, and when they came they were ever ready and willing to help, sacrificing their own pleasures for our good. They recommended that we try Christian Science for the baby. At first I would not listen, but occasionally they mentioned different healings they had experienced or witnessed, so that I became more and more interested.

After these relatives had been with us a few days I was taken sick, and expected to remain in bed three or four days, as I had done under similar conditions; but the next morning I got up, threw the usual remedy away, and have never had a return of the trouble. Since then Christian Science has been my only physician. In less than three weeks we began to have Science treatment for the baby. His healing was slow, but he is now a healthy boy with absolutely no trace of the trouble. It took us longer to rely entirely upon Christian Science for the little girl. We gave up the medicine, but still felt that she must diet. There came a time, however, when we found we could not bow down to both Spirit and matter, and must decide for one or the other. We then took our stand for Truth. After one week's treatment she was healed of the stomach trouble, and has had only one attack since, which was quickly overcome. The nervousness soon disappeared, and she is now a perfectly healthy child.

Words but faintly express my gratitude for these and many other physical healings we have had in our family; but even greater than these is the wonderful spiritual healing that is taking place in my consciousness and in our home. We are learning the higher meaning of the words family and home, and in the degree that we are more kind and patient to one another our home grows more beautiful and harmonious. I am deeply thankful to God, also grateful to our Leader, and I realize that it is only by living and practicing Christian Science in my daily life that I can express real gratitude.—OLIVE S. CRAIN, Detroit, Mich.

It is with a heart full of gratitude that I testify to the many blessings which I and mine have received through Christian Science. In the fall of 1912 my six year old son became afflicted with pain in the back which at times was intense. The physician called it a tubercular inflammation of the vertebræ, and as the trouble kept growing worse, I had to take the child to a hospital, where he remained four months and a half. He then seemed cured and was dismissed; but soon thereafter the trouble returned.

At that time I heard of Christian Science through two dear ladies and declared myself willing to accept this teaching, but unfortunately these ladies went away soon after. I often felt the impulse to read and study, but did not seem to get any hold on the subject; so when my boy again suffered intense pain, I returned to the physician, not being yet grounded in Christian Science. I rarely read the literature, in fact I seemed less and less able to understand it. When the doctor placed the child in a sanatorium and all the physicians gave but little hope of recovery, I became very disconsolate, and one day I went to see the ladies above referred to and quite frankly told them of the situation. They then kindly explained to me day by day the teachings of Christian Science, and helped me to take the child from the hospital and to have him stay with a Christian Science practitioner. According to medical opinion I would see my poor child limping and, as it were, an outcast; but in two weeks' time the child was able to come and see us with the kind gentleman who was treating him, and the healing went on steadily.

Next to God my gratitude goes out to the practitioner for the fatherly care bestowed upon my child, who is now well and romps about like other children. How often have I given thanks to God for this wonderful healing, yet I feel as if I could never be too grateful. I have also often experienced that the truth is not only a help in disease, but when properly applied is the most effective support under any circumstance.

WIDOW L. STEINHAUER-SOMMER, Ringgenberg, Kt. Bern, Switzerland.

The first healing I experienced through Christian Science was from tonsillitis. At the time this demonstration was made I knew very little about this teaching and relied on the help of a practitioner, being healed in two treatments. A member of my family did not wish me to depend on the spiritual method of healing, so when he was told that I was having help from a Christian Science practitioner, he insisted on calling a physician. I felt no doubt whatever of being healed through Christian Science, and had no desire to use material remedies. The chapter on Prayer had been my introduction to this healing truth, and it proved to be sufficient. Not knowing just how to work in Christian Science with the practitioner, I asked God to make the healing come quickly, so that I would not have other remedies forced upon me. The answer came instantaneously, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him," and at that moment I was completely healed.

This first victory of Truth over error will light my path through all eternity. Financial supply and the healing of various ills have also been demonstrated, and I am more than grateful for the understanding of God and the Bible that I am gaining each day through the study of this teaching. I am grateful for the literature and for the manifold blessings that continually come to me through Christ, Truth, and that this quickening influence is being felt all over the world. It is my sincere desire to live this gratitude.

EVA C. COOPER, Los Angeles, Cal.

Although young in Christian Science, I cannot refrain from testifying to the many benefits received during my short study of the subject, with the hope that my experience may awaken some other afflicted and doubting mortal to the truth, and to the blessings to be had through even a meager understanding of this teaching. I was never a religious man, although firmly convinced that God possessed unlimited power. As a boy I attended Sunday school and church, but for several reasons was not interested. From a superficial investigation of various denominations, I decided that their teachings were merely beliefs, and it seemed to me I could be as good out of the church as in it, if I followed my highest inclinations and obeyed the Ten Commandments as best I could. As a result I remained away from all religious meetings (with few exceptions) for twenty or twenty-five years.

For many years I suffered from stomach disorder, bowel trouble, and extreme nervousness. As material remedies gave only temporary relief, and each recurring attack seemed to increase in severity and duration, I finally became discouraged and inquired about Christian Science. The results of my call on a practitioner for help were astonishing, and this demonstration, together with the study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, proved that it is futile to dose with drugs and that God is indeed a very present help, for I was healed of the stomach and bowel troubles in two or three treatments, and the so-called nervousness has entirely disappeared. My business is now more pleasing and prosperous, and each day I am increasingly grateful for even the limited understanding I have of this wonderful truth which makes free.

I feel that Christian Science has measured up to my ideas of religion, exclusive of the fact that it is demonstrable, as absolutely proven in my case. On one or two occasions I have had a slight attack of stomach trouble, but each time it has been quickly overcome by a change of mental condition. All my other healings have been complete. Medicines have become a past experience with me, and I never think of such a thing as even considering them, as it has been proven to me they are useless, since Mind is all. I am more than thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for all these demonstrations of the power of Truth to heal the sick in any age.—JOHN B. MORRIS, Cincinnati, Ohio.

When not more than ten years of age I became subject to asthma, and passed many sleepless nights, while at times for days and nights in succession I was unable to lie down. Colds came so frequently that I was unable to attend school during the winter months until I entered high school. I could not do any heavy work, and no relief was experienced except from the use of injurious drugs, until Christian Science came to me some twenty years ago, when I found relief and finally experienced perfect healing. Many other ailments were overcome before the fear of asthma yielded; not until I could sweep and dust, and do other things without labored breathing, could I believe that my healing was complete.

Both organic and functional diseases have been overcome, sometimes through the help of a loving teacher and practitioner, sometimes through the reading of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I have been healed of acute lung trouble, an internal injury caused by an accident, and weak lungs. A badly injured ankle was restored in a few days through the reading of Science and Health, so that I was able to stand or walk with perfect freedom. Many acute attacks of illness have yielded to the truth.

I am grateful for these benefits, but most of all for the spiritual uplift which Christian Science has brought to me, for a greater sense of love toward God and mankind, for the overcoming of impatience, nervousness, fear, worry, sensitiveness, and sorrow. When those near and dear to me passed out under medical treatment, friends wondered at the comfort Christian Science brought. Surely this truth is the promised Comforter. It sustains us through fiery trials, takes away the sense of loss, and gives us the priceless treasure of at-one-ment with God. I am deeply grateful for all of Mrs. Eddy's writings, for the periodicals, and for the Lesson-Sermons, and thankful to God not only for benefits received, but for the joy of helping others.

LURA A. HOLLIS, Allston, Mass.

About twelve years ago I became interested in Christian Science through reading some copies of the Sentinel which had been sent us by our uncle. At first I read only the testimonies, but later purchased the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Almost all my life I had been a semi-invalid, and like the woman we read about in the Bible, "had suffered many things of many physicians, . . . and was nothing bettered." Through the reading of Science and Health I have been healed of colds, coughs, throat trouble, sick headache, and female weakness, while attacks of fever have been overcome with the aid of a practitioner.

There have been many dark hours in my experience since I began the study of Christian Science, but with the help of the Bible, together with our textbook, and by the application of the truth as I knew it, I have been brought through them. My children are all interested in Christian Science and have had many beautiful demonstrations. We are thankful for the physical healings, but the spiritual uplift is more than everything else. We are also thankful to God, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for revealing to us this great truth.—EVA SKELTON, Newton, Ill.

I have long felt that I should give my testimony in thanksgiving for what Christian Science has done for me and mine. I have been healed of chronic bowel disorder and of almost constant backache, with occasional attacks of lumbago, for which physicians gave me a medicine that nauseated me so that the cure seemed almost worse than the disease. This trouble vanished without any special treatment.

Christian Science helps me in all the affairs of life. We were living in a large old-fashioned house and wanted to move to a smaller one, more conveniently arranged, but could find nothing at all suitable. Finally I decided to leave the problem to God, knowing that if it were right for us to make the change the way would open, and if not I did not want it. After some time of making the best of the old house, a modern one, suitable in every way, was offered to us at the same rental.

Again, I was very desirous of being able to give something to the Christian Science church, which stands for so much to me, but I only had the money for the household expenses, and it was not mine to give. As I could think of no way to earn any money, I decided to leave this, too, to Principle. Quite a while afterward five dollars came to me by mail, but I had forgotten about the church money and tried to use it for something else that was much needed. I could not, however, find what I wanted, and it then came to me suddenly, as if some one had spoken the words, "Why, that is your offering to the church, not yours to spend for anything else." The money was given to the church, and soon the needed article was purchased also. Thus God, divine Love, does meet our every need if we trust entirely in Him, and wait patiently, nothing doubting.

These are only a few of the many blessings received from a knowledge of the truth gained from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by our dear Leader, Mary Baker Eddy.—MAUDE A. LOUDON, Seattle, Wash.

A deep sense of gratitude compels me to tell of a few of my healings through Christian Science. In the spring of 1907, while attending school, I was requested to submit to vaccination. This was very much against my wishes, but rather than lose the term of school I consented. A couple of days later a bad case of blood poisoning developed. A Christian Science practitioner was called, and in four treatments I was absolutely cured.

Christian Science helps me in my work; but for the assistance it has given me, I would not have retained my position, which is a very trying one. Smoking and profanity have been overcome by persistent work on my part, also headaches, colds, and many other ailments. I have not tasted medicine of any kind for eighteen years, but have relied only on Christian Science, which has met all my needs. I get much help from reading the published testimonies.

WALTER MORAINE, Omaha, Neb.

About twelve years ago a dear sister-in-law spoke to me of having been healed in Christian Science, but the remark passed over my head and I made no comment whatever. Six years later there came a great need to know of this healing truth, and this sister-in-law wrote me more than once, gently advising me to study it. That just by reading a book I could help one who was suffering from serious illness, seemed to me so ridiculous that I did not even allude to the advice when answering the letters. Still later, friends living near offered the "cup of cold water;" but I put it aside, not knowing the refreshment it affords.

Finally, when the need of knowing the truth became more insistent, I had an experience which led me to go to the only source to find it. One night, while camping a few miles from home, I was taken with a violent toothache. There was no remedy for this in the little box which usually accompanied us, so I pictured a night of suffering. Then I began to wish I knew what Christian Scientists believed about healing, for I had always supposed it to be human will power. As I reasoned within myself, I concluded that they did not rely upon will power, but must believe in a supreme power which heals disease. Then came the thought: Why not? The power which controls the universe, which keeps the stars in their courses, and which regularly brings the harvest—why not?

Those who have experienced the power of Truth to heal will readily understand what came to me at that instant. I had acknowledged omnipotence, and the toothache vanished. From that time on I wanted to know the truth that heals. After my return home a copy of Science and Health was purchased, and from my first reading of the book there was a complete acknowledgment that this wonderful message came to our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, directly from the one all-governing Mind.

During the five years that have intervened Christian Science has been my protection under all circumstances. I gratefully bear testimony to the instantaneous healing of a wasp sting, to painless dentistry, including the extraction of some old roots, and to the overcoming of fatigue. I have been lovingly led all the way, and the understanding of Christian Science keeps me in perfect health.

FLORENCE I. BATES, Sacramento, Cal.

Christian Science is the greatest blessing that has ever come into my life. We have had many proofs that God is an ever present help in time of trouble.

About two years ago our little boy, five years old, while blowing on a toy tin horn, fell violently on his face against a flight of stairs. The sharp mouthpiece of the horn was forced into his mouth, cutting a deep gash and tearing the palate partly away, so that it lay on his tongue. We immediately asked a Christian Science practitioner for help, with the result that there was no swelling or inflammation whatever. That evening the child rested well, and in the morning he was able to take a little nourishment. In the evening he sat at the dinner table and ate some soft food, and after the third day he was able to eat anything he wished.

At the end of two weeks the palate had gone back into place, and by the end of the next week new growth had filled in the wound, only a slight scar remaining. It had been said that the boy would not be able to talk plainly; but he is now in perfect health, and hummed the songs from our Hymnal even during treatment. This seemed a most wonderful healing to me, for I was filled with fear lest the parts hanging down could not grow back without being held in place, which was impossible with any material aid; but the practitioner encouraged me from time to time, in the words of our Master, not to be afraid, for God is omnipotent.

I am deeply grateful for this proof of the divine power to heal, grateful for all our periodicals, and thankful to Mrs. Eddy for "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which unlocks the treasures of the Bible.

MAE HODGINS, Marshfield, Ore.

I wish to express my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by the aid of which we are able to realize that God is "the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever," a "very present help in trouble," and "no respecter of persons." About six months ago I had a wonderful realization of this.

I was trying to bend an agate dish with a pair of pliers, when a lot of the enamel broke off and a large piece went into my eye, entirely covering the sight. Being alone at the time, I tried all manner of means to get it out, and the eye became very much bloodshot and inflamed, as well as painful. I then realized that I must have help, and still standing in front of the mirror in the kitchen the thought came to me of Elijah's experience, when the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench. Instantly the obstruction was gone and the eye was normal, and it has given me no trouble since.

This healing is only one of the many blessings received through Christian Science, for which I am very thankful.

From Our Exchanges

[The Christian Register]

What does any good man or woman really want most of all, in the household, in the neighborhood, in the shop or office, in the city or the nation? He surely wants to add all that he can to the common good. The greatest man is he who can give, achieve, accomplish the most. It may be some humble person who radiates faith, hope, good will, and brings so much more light into the world. Now the golden rule is only a single form of this mighty enterprise in which every one ought to be engaged. We will banish greed, fear, suspicion, war from the world by making the law work.

[The Christian Intelligencer]

The age-long conflict between righteousness and sin is a battle of wills, the self-will of man ignoring, defying, opposing, and seeking to thwart the good will of God. "Man's first disobedience" marks the beginning of the universal rebellion, and the putting to death of Jesus is the climax of the extent to which men are ready to go in the effort to throw off the yoke of the divine sovereignty. All the tragedy and misery of life may be accounted for by this obsession of man to acknowledge no master but his own will.

[The Universalist Leader]

Life outside is mostly within. We find about what we look for,—in ourselves, in others, and in God. We create the world in which we live. If it is good, we take the credit; if it is bad, we wonder why God did this thing! We complain because people will not see the good in us, when we are blind to the good in them. We wonder why men do not chant the beauty of the good in us, even while we are barking at the evil in those about us.

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.Litt., in The Christian Commonwealth]

Love is righteousness applied to life, duty done with joy, with abandon, serving even those who hate us. It seems hard if not impossible; but in the life of Jesus it is a wonder that haunts us, subdues us, making us wistful with that sweet sadness in joy which all perfect things evoke.

[American Lutheran Survey]

The man who does not take as the supreme purpose of his life the purpose to serve as a Christian, will miss the meaning of life, will waste his life, and what he leaves will be left as a monument either to his misconception of life or to his selfishness.

At the Battle Front

That The Great War now in progress is simply one stupendous phase of the great warfare between good and evil, all right thinkers discern.

Countless opportunities have been opened for Christian Scientists to aid at the battle front, and they have not been found wanting. One of the most wonderful of all ways that Christian Science has carried healing to the battle front has been through the Christian Science periodicals. The following are excerpts from a recent letter showing

Great Desire for the Christian Science Periodicals

> "A trained nurse, whose home is in California, and who has just returned from service at the front, states that the soldiers brought into the hospitals hold up little scraps of paper so defaced as to be almost illegible, and ask to have them read. They are clippings from the Christian Science Sentinel and The Christian Science Monitor. They say that it is the Christian Science literature which they wish read to them. . . . While in Paris Mr. —— also heard read several letters sent from men on the firing lines to the Christian Science Literature Distribution Committee, stating that they had read the pamphlets and now wanted the textbook, offering anything they possessed in return for it, glad to sacrifice their meager army pay to obtain it. He also states that 'in the field and base hospitals there have been many instances where the men, upon regaining consciousness, have asked for their clothes, eagerly searching every pocket for some pamphlet on Christian Science.' "

Opportunity for Christian Scientists at Home

These facts bring not only a tear of compassion and gratitude to the eye of the Christian Scientist, but also a realization of the importance of literature distribution on the battle front.

If every Christian Scientist sent each week just one more periodical to comfort, bless, and heal the soldier as he fights his part of the great "contest for the true idea, for human liberty and rights" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 101), the beneficial effect would be incalculable.

Those desiring to send periodicals who do not wish to send their own copies, or copies previously given for local distribution work, may make arrangements with any Christian Science reading room to send periodicals regularly as desired.

272 SCIENCE AND HEALTH

sent?" If sent, how shall they preach, convert, and heal multitudes, except the people hear?

The spiritual sense of truth must be gained before Truth can be understood. This sense is assimilated only as we are honest, unselfish, loving, and meek. Spirituality of Scripture In the soil of an "honest and good heart" the seed must be sown; else it beareth not much fruit, for the swinish element in human nature uproots it. Jesus said: "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." The spiritual sense of the Scriptures brings out the scientific sense, and is the new tongue referred to in the last chapter of Mark's Gospel.

Jesus' parable of "the sower" shows the care our Master took not to impart to dull ears and gross hearts the spiritual teachings which dulness and grossness could not accept. Reading the thoughts of the people, he said: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine."

It is the spiritualization of thought and Christianization of daily life, in contrast with the results of the ghastly farce of material existence; it is chastity and purity, Unspiritual contrasts in contrast with the downward tendencies and earthward gravitation of sensualism and impurity, which really attest the divine origin and operation of Christian Science. The triumphs of Christian Science are recorded in the destruction of error and evil, from which are propagated the dismal beliefs of sin, sickness, and death.

The divine Principle of the universe must interpret the universe. God is the divine Principle of all that repre- God the Principle of all sents Him and of all that really exists. Christian Science, as demonstrated by Jesus, alone reveals the natural, divine Principle of Science.

The Sound Theology of Christian Science

EZRA W. PALMER

FREQUENTLY an individual comes to Christian Science who has had some previous religious experiences in which the Scriptural promises of peace and harmony have not been realized, or perhaps his religious affiliations have failed to protect him against sickness, discouragement, or other vicissitudes. He remembers how he relied on the same Bible promises on which Christian Scientists rely, but met only with a series of bitter failures. He also remembers the inability of his former teachings to unfold continuously the inspiration and beauty of the Scriptures. He recalls that there came a time in his experience when he was distracted between holding to a creed he had outgrown and giving up hope of a reasonable interpretation of the Scriptures. As a result of this struggle the seeker may for a time lose faith in God and drift into a state of cynical skepticism.

Later, when an interest in Christian Science is aroused in this individual by the beauty of its teachings or through healings which may have attracted his attention, he may at first be inclined to be skeptical. Like a burned child who avoids the fire, he has no desire for a repetition of his disappointments. But there is no need for him to hesitate. Before him in Christian Science stretches a straight, stable highway,—"the way of holiness," as Isaiah terms it. To this seeker, as to all seekers for truth, Christian Science provides a firm footing upon which to gain confidence in God, and it gives an assurance that the promises of the Bible are true and can be demonstrated to be true. "The theology of Christian Science," Mrs. Eddy says, "is Truth; opposed to which is the error of sickness, sin, and death, that Truth destroys" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 62). The theology of Christian Science is sound throughout. It is without spot or blemish or inconsistency in reasoning. Like a flawless diamond its reflection of light is impeccable. Its sound, logical basis appeals to the reflective mind and spurs on the inquiring thought to new unfoldments of Truth, which is indeed infinite.

Since man is a spiritual being, religion to satisfy his spiritual aspirations must of necessity unfold to him larger, better, and clearer views of God and His universe. These views of God must be rational, proceeding logically from cause to effect or from effect back to cause. There can in reality be no conflict between the nature of God, infinite good, and the spiritual laws which He promulgates to govern the universe. God, who is infinite Love, cannot possibly be the author of disease or sin. Unless these things prove true to the individual his progress is blocked. Without vision of the perfection of God and His spiritual universe, the individual perishes, and the people also perish. Of itself the healing of sickness is not sufficient to work out one's full destiny; it "is only the bugle-call to thought and action, in the higher range of infinite goodness," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 2 of "Rudimental Divine Science." The beauty and glory of holiness, the undivided vesture of Truth, the logic and consistency of spiritual Science, must be seen in order to hold and satisfy the thoughts of those whom Hosea calls "the sons of the living God."

When this Science of Truth has been apprehended, the student can proceed with firm and joyous footsteps. No longer does he see theology with distorted vision; he sees the plan of the universe of Spirit in its true perspective. Theology becomes to him an exact, demonstrable Science. Understanding the light and logic of the Word, he is no longer tossed to and fro on the sea of human beliefs. Christ's Christianity stands forth, the living way of salvation. Creeds and dogmas are correctly judged; the nonessential, the unimportant, the relative, are rightly appraised, and that which rings true to eternal Truth is seen in its right coordination, "fitly framed together" with all the other creations of Spirit. Proceeding from the basis of the allness of Spirit, understanding continually unfolds to him new revelations of light and beauty.

The vital distinction between human mind cure and spiritual healing is also a sequence of the theological soundness of Christian Science. Only as the student grasps the conception of the wholeness or holiness, the omnipotence and omniscience of Spirit, can he make the distinction between the false action of so-called mind cure and the genuine spiritual healings of Christian Science. Only as the Christian Scientist sees and reflects the direct rays of Truth, and abides within their focal distance as they come straight from God, can he prove their healing power and heavenly inspiration, and thus avoid the pitfalls of human beliefs and the dark subtleties of false theology.

Christian Scientists cannot be too grateful that Christian Science is logically and theologically sound. Its sound theology is indeed "an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast," to quote St. Paul, and saves them from the chaos which results when men attempt to reason about God from a corporeal sense basis. Without a sound metaphysical basis spiritual healing would not be possible, nor would there be any safe guide to determine what was the word of God and what was not. Let us consider for a moment the history of religion for many centuries,—its doctrinal controversies and the absurdities resulting therefrom, its multiplicity of dogmas, creeds, and sects, its bitter religious wars. Why all these discords and violent differences of opinions? Beyond doubt these discords were largely due to the failure of Christians to understand and utilize the unchanging law of God, the undivided garment of divine Science, the theology of Christ Jesus, which when understood makes clear the fatherhood and motherhood of God, wherein, as Paul says, "we live, and move, and have our being" harmoniously, in accord with spiritual law. Then how true ring those other words of Paul, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

Mrs. Eddy has frequently referred in her writings to the theology of Christian Science,—she has in fact devoted a part of one chapter to its elucidation,—and she has carefully distinguished between false theology, which is satisfied with the husks of materialism, and the theology of Christ Jesus, which is life giving, thought inspiring, and joy bestowing. Testifying of sound theology she says in Science and Health (p. 138): "It was this theology of Jesus which healed the sick and the sinning. It is his theology in this book and the spiritual meaning of this theology, which heals the sick and causes the wicked to 'forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts.' "

Hymns and Inspiration

CHRISTINE A. EMERY

IT is a most interesting experience to meet or to hear from some of the many people who have derived untold benefit from the hymns in the Christian Science Hymnal. Far more is being accomplished through this one channel than most of us realize, even though we have had myriad blessings and occasions for gratitude. This is especially true in my own case, for I at first found Christian Science very difficult to understand and therefore very hard to accept. I often looked with awe on those who had been healed of what were called "really serious troubles" by merely reading or studying Science and Health. But the hymns, embodying as they do the Christianly scientific thought, were very comforting and inspiring and of wonderful assistance to me. Unconsciously I memorized many of them, and in times of stress the healing thought in those hymns would come to my mind. This was the more remarkable because until then I had been unable to grasp or to demonstrate the teachings of Christian Science.

At that time I was living in the mountains, remote from a Christian Science church or those interested in it. For several years I had been obsessed with a belief of loneliness which at times was almost despair, and in an effort to bring some of the good things of the outside world to my isolated home I had purchased a talking machine and a supply of records. But however helpful these were, I felt the need of something more dependable, and it was then that a friend who visited me brought Christian Science to my attention. I was unaccustomed to having religion demonstrated on an absolutely scientific basis, and was baffled by its very evident simplicity, not then realizing that like the laws of all true science those of Christian Science must be inexorable and fundamentally simple. So, although I had received wonderful help through the patient, loving efforts of my friend, and still was in need of much greater assistance, I clung to the elaborate ritualistic teachings of the church of which I had long been a member.

When I was in the very depths of despondency, I made the long trip to town to buy new records with which I hoped to amuse and cheer myself through the long winter looming ahead as almost unbearably dreary, and it was then that I heard and ordered all of the records listed as "Christian Science Hymns." These included Mrs. Eddy's hymns: "O'er waiting harpstrings of the mind," "Saw ye my Saviour?" and "Shepherd, show me how to go;" also two by other authors: "Day by day the manna fell" and "In Thee, oh Spirit, true and tender."

It is safe to say that no records were ever used more often than these, and no hymns so eagerly and repeatedly welcomed; surely none were ever so directly responsible for a completely regenerating change of thought. Regarding "Day by day the manna fell," I may say that it was through this hymn that the first ray of light came to me. After hearing it for the first time I remarked that it was the best sermon I had ever heard, and I have since met many people who expressed the same opinion, for it tells us so convincingly that each day's needs are most abundantly supplied, and we can all see the folly of letting our "foreboding fears" deprive us of our rightful heritage.

With this thought in mind I reviewed my determined efforts to secure what I considered a necessary material supply, and they presented a startling contrast to the half-hearted attempts I had been making spasmodically in search of the spiritual help of which I was so greatly in need. I began at once to turn my thoughts in the right direction and was most bounteously rewarded. In my seeming need of material things I had often wished—vainly, it seemed—that "the good old Bible days" would come again and that the heavenly manna and other miracles could be enacted before my eyes; then it would be impossible for me ever to doubt again, for I could easily believe that those things had been, and that they would continue their visible manifestations. Needless to say this train of thought was not and could not be the harbinger of the great joy I sought.

One day when I had played "Day by day" almost continuously, I took the Bible from the bottom of my trunk, where it had lain for many years. I had a great desire to read again about the wonderful time when God so lovingly supplied His children with the divine food. As I read, the glamour and the miraculous concept which I had formerly attached to this bread in the wilderness disappeared, and I found that the situation at that time differed but little from that of to-day, for even in those primitive days so filled with manifestations there were the doubters, the grumblers, and the careless ones, to whom this repeated visible proof of divine Love brought no thrill of exaltation or gratitude.

For the first time I realized that there were also countless numbers of us upon whom the daily manna is continually falling in the varied forms best suited to our needs; yet we fail to see it, or are too indolent, like some of the Israelites of old, to gather and use our daily portion and use it to the best of our ability, but instead look with envious, questioning eyes upon those who have done so. Many of us who are struggling through the wilderness of human doubt and fear are constantly asking for new proofs of the Father's love. Would it not be better to recognize and use to the utmost the gifts that are so abundantly provided, which are sufficient for us and far outnumber our needs, before we thanklessly ask for more?

We read that the taste of the manna "was like wafers made with honey," and all of those who have tasted their portion can exclaim most reverently and joyously with the psalmist, "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" They likewise rejoice greatly to be able to "enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise," to "be thankful unto him, and bless his name."

The Holy Ghost

GRAY MONTGOMERY

JESUS declared to the apostles that the Holy Ghost was the "Spirit of truth," as we read in the fourteenth and sixteenth chapters of John's gospel. It was not until many years after our Saviour's ascension that the Holy Ghost was defined by scholastic theology as a person,—one of three mystical persons united in some mysterious way to form one supreme, anthropomorphic God. Mrs. Eddy, accepting the definition of the Holy Ghost, explains that this "Spirit of truth" is Christian Science, and on page 1 of "Rudimental Divine Science" she defines Christian Science as "the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony."

By reason of the Holy Ghost, proceeding from God and expressed through man, the ancient prophets received their revelations which enabled them to indite the sacred books of the Old Testament. In the New Testament there are numerous references to the Holy Ghost. St. Luke writes of the message which came to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Mary's mentality being filled with the "Spirit of truth," she spiritually responded to the law of God which enabled her to give to the world the long expected Messiah.

John the Baptist prophesied the coming of the Saviour, and declared, "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire;" that is, the "Spirit of truth" shall purify the human consciousness and consume as by fire all the errors of material sense. On the day of Pentecost the apostles were filled with the Holy Ghost. Their understanding of God's law destroyed their fear and enabled them thereafter to do many wonderful works of healing, to teach the truth in the face of violent persecution and martyrdom. Jesus, filled with the Holy Ghost, healed all manner of sin and disease. By restoring the dead to life he overcame all material so-called laws by the power of the Holy Ghost, the supreme law of divine Mind. He thereby proved matter to be powerless, without force or intelligence. He proved life to be eternal, beyond the reach of discord, disease, or death.

The Holy Ghost has again in this age been manifested in the healing of mind and body. These beneficent results have awakened mankind to the fact that there is now, as in the days of the Master's sojourn on earth, a comprehensible divine healing method, a spiritual law by which even so-called incurable diseases can be healed. The Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy, explains in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," that the effectual operation of this law is the result of the clear realization in human consciousness of the allness of God as omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient good, divine Mind, Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, and of man as God's perfect spiritual idea or reflection.

By reason of this spiritual realization the practitioner, filled with the Holy Ghost, his consciousness permeated with the presence of divine Love, is able to serve as a clear transparency for the glorious sunlight of Truth. Truth's healing beams then radiate and reflect their light into the darkened places of that suffering mentality where false and fearful thinking has been entertained, and thus dispel every thought and every condition unlike the harmony, holiness, and purity of infinite Spirit and spiritual realities.

The divine influence of the Holy Ghost is characterized by universal unselfish love, entering and filling not only the individual human consciousness but to some extent the entire general thought of the age. Christian Science is gradually leavening the whole lump of human thought. Its influence has reached the realms of the healing practice, also of theology, physical science, and the business world. It is correcting the doctrinal mistakes of scholastic theology and is giving to mankind a demonstrable religion. It is educating humanity out of the false belief that matter is real, that it has force, energy, and intelligence. It is destroying the fear of physical laws and material conditions by teaching the allness of Spirit, by demonstrating the supreme power of spiritual law.

In the business world the "Spirit of truth" is gradually destroying dishonesty, craftiness, and selfishness, and is establishing in their place honesty and brotherly love. The movement for the better housing of employees, the opportunities now being afforded in many instances for employees to secure an interest in the business enterprises where they are employed, the spirit of mutual cooperation manifested between employer and employee, the providing of safeguards to protect workers, the educational facilities being provided for them,—all these are evidences of the Spirit of truth and love which is gradually pervading the realm of business.

The Christian Science Benevolent Association is a movement established in practical fulfillment of the teachings of this Science. No genuine student of Mrs. Eddy's teachings can fail to respond to the call for means to carry out to its completion such a noble purpose; for its benefaction will prove of far more than temporary or local influence, since it will spread ultimately over the civilized world, wherever Christian Science has become established, thus fulfilling the demands of the Holy Ghost to bless, to heal, to protect, to comfort, to show forth true love, to benefit all mankind.

The Holy Ghost has brought to the consciousness of many a suffering heart spiritual regeneration and surcease of sorrow. It has brought the understanding of God as all tender and ever compassionate divine Love, to whom mankind can turn with implicit confidence in His saving presence and power. Those who are filled with the Holy Ghost have positive knowledge of the unreality of evil and the eternality and ever presence of good. They reflect this understanding in joyous demeanor, unfailing equanimity, and harmonious, healthful, happy lives. While they still have their problems to solve, while they must continue to face and grapple with sin and sickness in themselves and in others, they know that there is a scientific spiritual law by which they can conquer all error. They therefore meet the attacks of evil fearlessly and confidently, knowing that through the understanding of divine Love they can win. Truth is always victorious over error, Love always banishes fear, and Life triumphs over death.

Overcoming Evil

MARY G. MALIN

In journeying daily to and from work one is struck by the fact that the majority of conversations overheard are just discussions of various phases of evil,—the illness of relatives, troublesome business conditions, family dissensions, and all the other multitudinous discords which seem to make up the daily life of the average human being. Let us consider for a moment the difference it would make, not only to their fellow citizens but to the world at large, if all these people were to talk of the brighter and truer side of life instead of sickness and sorrow; of the truth of being instead of the error of mortal belief. Would not the listeners be benefited? Would they not feel better for what they had heard, instead of, as is often the case, being merely conscious of a vague sense of depression?

In Paul's epistle to the Romans we find this exhortation: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Here surely is a definite course marked out for us. Instead of allowing all these suggestions of evil to overcome us, we are to overcome them; overcome them by realizing what Mrs. Eddy writes on page 228 of Science and Health: "There is no power apart from God. Omnipotence has all-power, and to acknowledge any other power is to dishonor God." Since God is good and omnipotent, it follows that there is no power but good. Where, then, does this sense of evil come in? It can not and does not come in at all unless we allow it; unless, by indulging in the discussion of seemingly discordant conditions, we give reality to the unreal, and so build up a belief in a second power called evil, thereby dishonoring God.

One of the most subtle temptations put forth by this false belief is the desire for human sympathy; the sympathy that pities and condoles while encouraging its recipient to enlarge on his or her grievances, until the tiny molehill becomes such a mountain of trouble that it completely obliterates, to the one who holds it, all sense of good. Now this human sympathy may seem pleasant, but is it helpful? Surely the reverse, since it assumes that evil is real; that, in fact, it has power and intelligence to rob God's children of their happiness; whereas true sympathy, the sympathy that helps and heals, is a very different thing. It is that which leads us to see what we are really doing if we ever allow this false belief of evil to overcome us. It shows us that mortals are deliberately shutting out from their lives the good which God bestows on all His children, the happiness which is theirs for the taking. True sympathy never encourages us to believe in the power of a lie, and since God by reason of His infinity knows nothing of evil,—for we are distinctly told in the first chapter of Genesis that "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good,"—evil can be nothing but a lie, having neither intelligence nor power.

Mrs. Eddy says: "When the illusion of sickness or sin tempts you, cling steadfastly to God and His idea. Allow nothing but His likeness to abide in your thought" (Science and Health, p. 495). If, when the temptation to be sorry for ourselves or the desire to discuss our troubles attempts to overcome us, we cling steadfastly to God, refusing to acknowledge any other power, we shall find that all inclination to indulge in this particular form of sin will vanish; that, in fact, by refusing to discuss any discordant beliefs either privately or in public, without giving also the cure for them, we are day by day overcoming evil with good, and thereby helping not only ourselves and our immediate friends to be better, but the whole world as well.

"The shadow of Peter"

MARY P. BELLINGER

In the fifth chapter of Acts we read of the healing work done by the apostles, as evidenced by this statement: "And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; . . . insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them."

These words recall a sermon which the writer heard many years ago. The minister used the last sentence of the above quotation for his text, and the special point of his discourse was that it was not the voluntary, conscious efforts put forth by any one which really counted, but the unconscious influence for good or ill which revealed a person's true character and determined his effect upon his fellow men. This seemed a "hard saying" to accept at the time, but of late this Scripture, in the light of Christian Science teaching, has proved helpful and inspiring. One may say mentally, as did the writer years ago, that it seems most unfair that our daily voluntary efforts to put down self, to speak the truth in word and deed, to resist temptation, to be loyal to our highest conception of right,—steps which we often take with unshed tears,—should go for nothing, and that we should be judged by some involuntary act or word, when perhaps caught unaware and off guard.

Do we realize that there never would be any unconscious influence without the voluntary effort? The homely, brown roots of the rosebush, buried in the earth, ever reaching out for moisture and nourishment for the plant, are yet in large measure responsible for the fragrance at the heart of the perfect blossom in the sunshine. So it is with the true essence of spirituality. As mortals rise above material belief and their thought advances spiritually, their real influence becomes less and less a part of their human selves and more and more a power of which they are personally unconscious.

On page 8 of the Message for 1900 Mrs. Eddy says, "As in the floral kingdom odors emit characteristics of tree and flower, a perfume or a poison, so the human character comes forth a blessing or a bane upon individuals and society." And again, on page 9 of "Rudimental Divine Science," we read, "The spiritual power of a scientific, right thought, without a direct effort, an audible or even a mental argument, has oftentimes healed inveterate diseases." This explains the healing influence of Peter's shadow. Going about his gentle ministry to the sick and sinful, absorbed in the contemplation of the Christ-ideal, it is possible that he did not even know of many who were benefited by his clear reflection of the truth. Purified by sorrow and sincere repentance, uplifted by his Master's never failing love, his real self became more and more manifest, and reflected that spirituality which tells of the divine ever presence.

So it was with the instantaneous healing of the sick woman who touched but the hem of Jesus' garment. Her humble faith and reverence were uplifted to touch, or recognize, that spiritual atmosphere in which the Christ forever dwells, and she was "made whole." Each one who has felt the healing power of Christian Science has had the same experience, and can testify that personality and human will had nothing to do with it. And countless are the healings of sorrow, sin, and pain by the unconscious reflection of Love in God's ideas around us.

Then, instead of feeling discouraged because our efforts seem so futile, and barren of the results we hope to achieve, let us remember it is not for us to say that they are barren. We know nothing about the sweet incense from earnest effort and unselfish thought which is blessing those who come within the radius of our lives. When we shall like Peter have learned by our mistakes, and because of them desire and work to forget our material selves entirely,—when our thought is filled with the love and tenderness of the Christ,—then will our unconscious influence right the wrongs of the world.

True Nobility

COL. F. H. MATURIN

Nobility and humility are, or should be, synonymous terms: to be truly noble is to be humble, and to be humble is to be noble. A great writer has well and beautifully written, "True nobility is the effacement of self; let a thought of self enter, and the glory of a great action is gone, like the bloom of a faded flower." We learn in Christian Science not only what this effacement of self means, but also what a vital necessity it is to us as Christian Scientists to practice this self-effacement in order that we may progress, and so reap the benefits to be gained from the teachings of this Science. We learn also from the study of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, that this self-effacement is what our Leader designates as "unselfed love."

In that wonderful and healing chapter entitled Prayer, with which the textbook begins, we read in the opening lines as follows: "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God,—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love." On page 192 of the same book Mrs. Eddy writes, "Whatever holds human thought in line with unselfed love, receives directly the divine power." In these two passages our Leader tells us of the great reward of true nobility, or humility, as expressed in self-effacement, in an unselfed love; namely, the power to overcome sin and sickness in ourselves and in others. In Micah we read that God requires this humility, for the prophet tells us we should love mercy and walk humbly with God; and Isaiah further tells us that God will reward the one who does this, for we read, "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor [humble] and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word."

At the time when Saul was "breathing out threatenings and slaughter" and persecuting the followers of Christ Jesus, it cannot be said that self-effacement was one of his most conspicuous characteristics. Yet when on his way from Jerusalem to Damascus, bent on further persecution, the light came to him,—the light that shone upon him out of heaven,—what a change! That Mrs. Eddy associated nobility with humility can be gathered from her metaphysical rendering on page 326 of Science and Health of Saul's experience. She writes of this change: "Thought assumed a nobler outlook, . . . and in humility he took the new name of Paul. He beheld for the first time the true idea of Love, and learned a lesson in divine Science." Christian Scientists are praying to-day, as Saul must have been praying, for more light, and so they learn the lesson as he learned it, and thus are able to say as he later said: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Service Is Joy

SAMUEL JOHNSTONE MACDONALD

One came complaining that the Lord
Had not vouchsafed him his reward
For faithful service, lo, these years,
But given for guerdon only tears.
Wherefore, he murmured, should this be,
While others countless blessings see?
Had he not labored well and long,
And earned the right to joyful song?

One blest by serving heard him through,
Then smiling said, This one thing do:
Turn frowns to smiles, make no complaint;
There cannot be a weeping saint.
The heart which knows no other aim
Than service, seeks nor praise nor blame;
Service is joy and joy alone:
True toilers find no time to moan.

Repining is rebellion's tongue,
Self-will by self's own serpent stung,
And venting forth its vain lament
When seeing self's self-seeking spent.
Self-stung and self-envenomed, naught
Can save it from its fate self-wrought;
But we from self can turn and flee,
And learn Love's healing minstrelsy.

Selected Articles

["Divine Protection"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 24, 1917]

If one thing stands out more boldly than another in the Old and New Testament Scriptures, it is the fact that God protects mankind. Turn where one may, there it is written down how God led those who put their trust in Him, fed those who called upon Him for sustenance, and healed those who cried unto Him out of their distresses. The Scriptures are constantly referring to God's nearness to and His presence among men.

Look, for example, at the ninety-first psalm. Who can read the wonderful, prayerful eloquence of it without becoming convinced that the man who penned it knew whereof he spoke; that he wrote from experience, out of the deep conviction of one who had passed through the dark waters of affliction with his understanding of the loving-kindness and protecting power of God strengthened and confirmed? Listen to these verses of the psalm: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty;" "Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." They convey the impression that the psalmist had not only experienced divine protection from the assaults of the beliefs of evil and disease, but that he was also aware of the mental condition necessary and precedent to obtaining the protection. Is not this indicated in the words, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High"?

Now, in the teaching of Christian Science can be found the truth which covers this question and explains all such references as those just quoted. For example, Christian Science teaches that God is unlimited, that He is all-inclusive being, that creation is the complete manifestation of His perfect spiritual being. Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer of Christian Science, became aware of the truth, the same truth as was taught by Christ Jesus, that man is at-one with God; that man, being the spiritual idea of God, is never separated in the faintest degree from divine consciousness. Mrs. Eddy's discovery of Christian Science had the immediate effect of healing her from a physical condition which had been pronounced incurable; but it did far more, for it revealed to her that the whole human race could be healed of its sins and its diseases through a correct understanding of God. To put it somewhat differently, the discovery of Christian Science revealed, as had not been done since the days of the Nazarene Prophet, that divine care and protection exist as mightily now and are as available now as then.

Why was it that men did not experience divine protection, unless in an uncertain and haphazard manner, until the discovery of Christian Science? Because the true knowledge of God was obscured; because of humanity's firm belief in materialism, in ritualism, and in ecclesiasticism. Men spoke of God, but they limited Him in all their thoughts. They called to Him to heal them, while clinging to their material beliefs. They prayed to Him as to a mighty ruler only, or a tribal God, oblivious of the fact that God is the divine Principle of the universe, perfect Spirit or Mind, knowing all that exists because all is the expression of His infinite intelligence. That is why men kept themselves and still tend to keep themselves out of "the secret place of the most High." But it has ever been the case that when a man's faith has turned to God as Truth and Love, enabling him to lean upon that Truth and Love and proportionately to refuse allegiance to so-called matter and human personality, he has felt the power of Truth and Love to protect him from the ills of the flesh and the temptations of the "carnal mind." That surely is why Mrs. Eddy could write on page 387 of Science and Health: "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering." Christian Science shows, however, that faith must advance to spiritual understanding before one can demonstrate with certainty and with constancy the protecting power of divine Principle.

To many the path of human life does not seem an easy one to tread. At times briars beset the way and rough stones make it hard and difficult. And what are one and all of the difficulties which go to make up the human burden? All have their origin in material belief; all spring from the error of belief that God is not really what He is,—infinite Mind, divine Truth and Love. So long as human beings continue to harbor false material beliefs instead of knowing Truth, they will continue to suffer, as if God was entirely removed from them. "Sorrow is salutary," the author of Science and Health has written (p. 66). "Through great tribulation we enter the kingdom. Trials are proofs of God's care." In the trials and sorrows of humanity error is seen bruising its own head; and the bruising will go on until God, as infinite Love, is known and acknowledged.

The writer to the Hebrews could say to his brethren concerning God's helpfulness: "He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." It is a long step from the Jewish tribal God, Jehovah, to the God who is infinite divine Principle, Love. But if any man would know how and why divine Principle is ever operative, protecting with infinite tenderness His entire spiritual creation, he must take the step for himself. Christian Science tells every earnest seeker for Truth how it is done.

[F. Elmo Robinson in Pacific Baptist, McMinnville, Ore.]

Again and again passages from the writings of Mrs. Eddy have been wrested from their context and placed alongside statements from the Bible in the critic's attempt to show that Christian Science contradicts the Bible. Not only has this been done, but conclusions have been drawn from these statements by our critic that are never drawn by Christian Scientists and that are impossible to one who has an understanding of the subject of Christian Science as a whole. If Christian Science really taught about God, man, Christ Jesus, sin, and atonement all that our critic claims that it teaches, I venture the statement that it would speedily collapse from lack of support or of adherents.

Christian Scientists accept the Bible as their "sufficient guide to eternal Life" (Science and Health, p. 497). They believe, in common with many other Christians, that the Bible may be considered in a twofold sense: first, as a book of sacred history, poetry, parable, and allegory; but secondly, as having a deep, a vital, underlying spiritual message, and that it is the discernment of this spiritual meaning of the Scriptures that makes possible salvation from both sin and disease. It is true that Christian Scientists believe that the mere material record of the Bible could be read indefinitely and be of no saving value to man; but when its spiritual import is grasped, as it only can be by the spiritually minded, then physical healing and salvation from the love and practice of sin inevitably follow.

To understand the statement that "sin can do nothing," one must understand what Christian Science teaches as to the nature of sin itself; and what Christian Science teaches about sin can be understood only in the light of what it teaches about God. Christian Science teaches that God is infinite Spirit, the only substance, intelligence, presence, and power, the only cause or creator, and that this Spirit, or Mind, is one, the infinite consciousness of good, precluding by its very allness an opposite called evil. Since pleasure and satisfaction are to be found in God, and in God alone, the belief that pleasure or satisfaction is to be had apart from God, or that there is anything besides God which can satisfy, is only supposition. Since God is infinite, All, He can in reality have no opposite; hence evil can only be the supposititious opposite of God. The individual who believes that there is satisfaction in entertaining a sense of resentment or revenge, awakens sooner or later to realize that he has not found satisfaction but suffering. Thus the indulgence of this false sense has proved the supposition that satisfaction could be had apart from God, to be a lie. Sin has never in a single instance proved itself able to give to the individual what it promised to give. It is a lie and a deception which, if believed, inevitably results in a sense of sorrow, suffering, and remorse.

The mere assertion by one who is indulging in sin that sin can do nothing, falls far short of handling this deception. The Master said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life;" and again, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It is only as human consciousness is turned Godward—only as the Christ, Truth, is enthroned within—that the belief in a power apart from God, with its attendant misery, want, and woe, is cast out. The denial of the power of sin to confer anything that it promises, instead of encouraging one to ignore its claims or to indulge them, turns one in the direction of God, who alone supplies all our needs "according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus;" and that state of consciousness which continues to look elsewhere than to God for peace and satisfaction is doomed to suffer until it gives place to the consciousness of God's presence and power. The fact that the teaching of Christian Science that sin can do nothing has resulted, in thousands of cases, in individuals being completely emancipated from the fear of sin or the love of sin in all its forms, is the most unmistakable evidence that this teaching does not encourage the indulgence of sin.

When Mrs. Eddy says that "man is incapable of sin, sickness, and death," that "man is never sick," and that "man never dies" (Science and Health, pp. 475, 393, 486), she is referring to spiritual man, made in God's image and likeness, the same man referred to by John when he says, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." Mrs. Eddy in making these statements by no means intends us to understand that mortals—"the children of the flesh," as Paul calls them—do not, to human sense, sin, sicken, suffer, and die.

Christian Science does not teach that the words Jesus and Christ are to be used interchangeably or the one as a synonym for the other. It teaches that the Christ is divine, the Son of God, coexistent and coeternal with the Father. The Christ, the Messiah or Saviour, was the divine selfhood of Jesus. Mrs. Eddy has said on page 334 of Science and Health: "The invisible Christ was imperceptible to the so-called personal senses, whereas Jesus appeared as a bodily existence. This dual personality of the unseen and the seen, the spiritual and material, the eternal Christ and the corporeal Jesus manifest in flesh, continued until the Master's ascension, when the human, material concept, or Jesus, disappeared, while the spiritual self, or Christ, continues to exist in the eternal order of divine Science, taking away the sins of the world, as the Christ has always done, even before the human Jesus was incarnate to mortal eyes."

[Hector Wallace Smith in Leith (Scotland) Observer]

Reference is made to Christian Science and mental science in the column headed "Mainly for Women" in a recent issue of the Observer. One or two of the remarks made by your contributor are somewhat inaccurate.

Comparatively few people nowadays confuse Christian Science with its opposite, mental science. What is called mental science proceeds entirely from the philosophy of the carnal mind and will power, whereas Christian Science is the Science of the Christ and proceeds from the divine Mind, and unfolds the divine will in the human consciousness. Christ Jesus declared that he came to do the will of his Father, and Paul wrote to the Philippians, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."

Your critic goes on to assert that Christian Scientists do not believe in the existence of evil at all, nor even in the existence of matter. Let me say that from the standpoint of absolute truth they certainly do not, because neither evil nor matter is eternal; but from the standpoint of material belief, or the phenomena of appearances, evil and matter do appear to exist in a temporal sense, and to this extent Christian Scientists admit the seeming existence of both. On pages 207 and 468 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy writes these words: "We must learn that evil is the awful deception and unreality of existence." "Spirit is immortal Truth; matter is mortal error. Spirit is the real and eternal; matter is the unreal and temporal."

It will interest the critic and your readers to know that because Mind does control and govern the body, several authentic cases are recorded in The Christian Science Journal and the Sentinel of persons having been healed of the effects of taking deadly poison. In this connection there is brought to mind the incident in the island of Melita, when Paul shook off the poisonous viper into the fire and felt no harm. Surely this was a proof of Paul's declaration that his preaching was "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Christian Scientists are likewise endeavoring to carry out the dual command of Jesus the Christ to preach the gospel and to heal the sick, and wish to be judged by results, for "ye shall know them by their fruits."

[Aaron E. Brandt in The News, Washington, Pa.]

Occasionally a clergyman commits a serious mistake in referring to Christian Science in a condemnatory manner. One such reference appeared recently in The News, where a clergyman is quoted as saying, "When Jesus comes with his glory, there will be no more Christian Science leading souls to hell." There is nothing in the statement which has any application to Christian Science whatsoever, and it serves no useful purpose. Instead, it has a tendency to mislead people, and to make of Christianity a divided kingdom. Clergymen who understand Christian Science and its redeeming virtues speak quite differently of it.

Christian Science shows that there is no advantage in waiting for Jesus to come in order to obtain salvation, since he came in due time and taught that the kingdom of God is at hand. He left his precepts and example for all men to follow, and Christian Science teaches and proves that to the extent men live in obedience thereto, they become better men physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually. In fact, there is nothing to be found in Christian Science teaching which has any tendency whatsoever to lead men astray. On the contrary, its standard of Christianity is so high that when adopted it invariably results in purifying consciousness, purging from sin, and healing sickness.

A theology which puts off the day of salvation to an uncertain future time can give no assurance of a salvation at all. "Behold, now is the day of salvation," said Paul, and Christian Science proves it by the very test which Jesus himself prescribed when he said, "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." The understanding of the Bible, gained by a study of Mrs. Eddy's book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," has healed thousands of helpless invalids, restoring them to health and happiness.

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Arcadia (Fla.) News]

What Christian Science teaches with regard to human relationships is in full accord with the passages on this subject in the New Testament. It was not Mrs. Eddy but the apostle Paul who first spoke of marriage as only better than a worse condition. (See the seventh chapter of I Corinthians, especially verses 8 and 9.) It was not she but Jesus Christ who first spoke of marriage as belonging to a state of existence lower than the highest. (See Luke xx. 27-38.) So also with regard to divine relationships, it was not Mrs. Eddy but the Master himself who first said, "Call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven." She was the first to teach fully or explicitly the motherhood as well as the fatherhood of God.

Speaking of marriage, Mrs. Eddy has said on page 52 of "Miscellaneous Writings," "To be normal, it must be a union of the affections that tends to lift mortals higher." Again, she has said on page 56 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "Marriage is the legal and moral provision for generation among human kind;" and on page 68 of the same book she declared her disagreement with the belief that nonsexual reproduction applies to the human species. Although Mrs. Eddy accepted the Scriptural account of the immaculate conception of Jesus, she has spoken of him as "the only immaculate" (Message to The Mother Church for 1901, p. 8), and no loyal Christian Scientist ever claimed to have given birth to a child without a human father.

Christian Science neither teaches that a physical union is a heavenly relation, nor that the kingdom of heaven can be entered by celibacy. In a moral and spiritual manner it separates the grosser from the purer aspects of marriage, and lifts up the Christ-ideal of which Paul spoke when he said, "There is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." God hath joined together the various qualities which constitute completeness, and no one who understands these could wish to put them asunder. The article on wedlock and the chapter on marriage in the above mentioned books, and all of Mrs. Eddy's writings upon this subject, are calculated to teach an enlightened Christian concept of marriage, and to show how it may promote human progress when it approximates spiritual unity, of which it is at best a symbol. The aptness of her writings for this purpose should be evident to any unbiased reader.

Comforts for Army and Navy

MANY inquiries have been received at headquarters in regard to reliable ways and means whereby knitted goods may be sent to men in the Army and Navy.

With this object in view the following committee is recommended to the field:

Comforts Forwarding Committee,
191 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts.

Information in regard to the kinds of articles most needed and specifications for their manufacture will be furnished on request.

Christian Scientists, however, will not lose sight of the fact that the above named activities can only supplement the primary metaphysical responsibilities for which their membership in the Church of Christ, Scientist, stands.

Prayer without ceasing, based upon the realization and demonstration of the facts of divine Science, is the hope of the world.

Hearty Cooperation

ONE thing should appear in every community in which Christian Scientists dwell, namely, that they are citizens of the best quality. Mrs. Eddy clearly sets forth this ideal when saying on page 70 of "Retrospection and Introspection": "The right teacher of Christian Science lives the truth he teaches. Preeminent among men, he virtually stands at the head of all sanitary, civil, moral, and religious reform. Such a post of duty, unpierced by vanity, exalts a mortal beyond human praise, or monuments which weigh dust, and humbles him with the tax it raises on calamity to open the gates of heaven. It is not the forager on others' wisdom that God thus crowns, but he who is obedient to the divine command, 'Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's.' "

Call war the great calamity if you will—how shall even this be taxed so that one may build him a road leading to happier conditions? There is one clear example of opportunity in the call from our government to avoid waste. We have been too long familiar with precept, and have often said, "Willful waste makes woeful want." Now has come the call to us to practice what we have preached; and it will be well if this be done with cordiality and happiness, with a view to giving as well as receiving the blessing which the demonstration will involve.

In a free country there is apt to be an extreme development of individuality in the case of a few, who become accustomed to criticize with acerbity everything done by governmental authority. To them the essence of freedom is in resistance to authority. This is not the ideal of Christianity as set forth by the apostle Peter, who says: "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." No reluctant standing in the background is justified here; whereas a hearty doing of good in cooperation with those trusted to govern and direct is indicated.

In the vast operations of government there will often be a requirement to build with worn-out tools, as the warrior may have to fight with a broken sword if he have no other. There may be the mistakes of enthusiasts and the failures of the inefficient; but the citizen should desire always to provide remedy and help, and should cooperate in the spirit of the golden rule, serving his country as one who first of all loves God supremely.

Jesus gave us a picture of the critical and dissatisfied men of his generation in a striking analogy, saying that they were "like unto children sitting in the marketplace, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept." To the children as observers the great events of that day were the processions incident to weddings and funerals; and as they copied the activities of their elders, they would in their play have processions in which satisfaction was found when every one joined with his fellows heartily. Some would be found, as the illustration depicts, too superior to play the game with the others,—they would not make merry with the dancers and they would not lament with the mourners. Whatever was the game, they wanted something else. The Christian Scientist has not this superior air, though he may very well protect himself from needless complications and avoid entanglement in capricious schemes. He will be in hearty cooperation with the intent of his government, and to good intent will add intelligent demonstration.

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Righteousness Relief from False Responsibility

THE Discoverer of Christian Science in her writings lays stress upon the necessity for a right sense of responsibility, as witness for example her statement on page 119 of "Miscellaneous Writings" in her address on "Obedience": "We are responsible for our thoughts and acts; and instead of aiding other people's devices by obeying them,—and then whining over misfortune,—rise and overthrow both. If a criminal coax the unwary man to commit a crime, our laws punish the dupe as accessory to the fact. Each individual is responsible for himself." This moral responsibility is paid in full by disobedience to error and obedience to God, and underlying true obedience must ever be the realization that God is the only cause and creator and therefore bears the only real responsibility for man and the universe. Many a grand individual occupying a post of extraordinary usefulness to mankind has been brought to his knees and then to the ground by a false sense of responsibility, which in the subtlest sort of way ultimates in self-righteousness.

Practical Christian Scientists are aware of this temptation which tries to creep into their work and make them assume personal power and deny God as the only Principle. In this way the practitioner may be made to lose his practice and the church officer his opportunities for doing good. Even in the ordinary business enterprises of the world a highly developed sense of self-importance surely brings forth its own retribution; how much more certainly in the activities of the Christian Science movement, wherein it is taught that God is the only real power.

There is a sense in which the word responsibility describes a virtue, as when it is used by Mrs. Eddy in the quotation from her writings to which attention has already been called and when it refers to the quality of being able to respond to good or being amenable to it. But as generally used the word responsibility carries with it the burden of accountability for the things that be, implying that man is cause and creator. From this angle responsibility is seen to cover a misconception of the true nature of man as well as of God, and leads to self-righteousness. Man is effect not cause, and is himself active only in so far as he reflects God. Throughout the multifarious occupations of the children of men there are always positions which are designated as those of responsibility. Upon such positions public opinion places burdens which are often too heavy for their occupants to bear. These individuals need to protect themselves by realizing where the real responsibility lies and to cast their burdens upon Him. In this way Jesus could say, "My yoke is easy, and my burden is light," because he admitted only one power, one ever active Father-Mother Mind.

To be responsible, in the sense of being responsive to spiritual intuition, is to be in at-one-ment with God and therefore in the act of healing the sick and sinning. In writing of Jesus' work Mrs. Eddy says on page 18 of Science and Health, "He did life's work aright not only in justice to himself, but in mercy to mortals,—to show them how to do theirs, but not to do it for them nor to relieve them of a single responsibility." And what was this responsibility? Nothing less than to learn that God was the only cause and that man could only be effective in good by obedience to that cause.

"I can of mine own self do nothing," said Jesus, and the writer of the epistle to the Philippians exhorted those whom he addressed to realize their complete dependence upon the heavenly Father, "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Then picture a state of society in which every individual has learned to turn to Principle as the source of all action and to admit responsibility to that source only. Such a state of society would be under divine control, governed by the decree of God, harmonized by His law of adjustment, bound in fraternal cooperation, and showered with the blessings of joy. An individual or nation thus constituted would be free from self-righteousness and in the condition of instant responsiveness to divine guidance, and so would be safe in the arms of divine Love. This righteous state of being is a present possibility and excludes from itself all traces of false responsibility.

WILLIAM D. MCCRACKAN.

Christian Science Compassionate

THOSE who have been acquainted with Christian Science for a number of years cannot help noticing the great changes which are taking place in the world's thinking as a result of the truth taught in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" as well as in Mrs. Eddy's other writings. On page 118 of Science and Health we read: "In all mortal forms of thought, dust is dignified as the natural status of men and things, and modes of material motion are honored with the name of laws. This continues until the leaven of Spirit changes the whole of mortal thought, as yeast changes the chemical properties of meal."

Here it may be noted that before Christian Science was given to the world the homeopathic system of medication was bringing about very striking changes in the treatment of the sick, and although its theories were stoutly opposed by the older schools of medicine, yet within a short time their methods were greatly modified because of the protests which were made against the free use of poisonous drugs in medical practice.

In the earlier years of the Christian Science movement much objection was made to the teaching that all diseases—indeed, suffering of every kind—were due to mortal belief and not to any material condition; but at the present time, as never before, Mrs. Eddy's contention respecting this fact is conceded, even by the decisions of materia medica, especially in its treatment of those engaged in military service. So far as one can judge from ably written articles on this subject, it would seem that there is perhaps as large a number of men in the military hospitals suffering from diseases which are almost wholly the result of their own fears, as of those who have been actually wounded and who are under surgical treatment. To the student of Christian Science it might seem a very important thing to have such admissions made, but it must not be forgotten that Christian Science never approaches a sufferer, whatever be the supposed nature of his distress, with the statement that his suffering is due to imagination. Christian Science goes much deeper than this, as may be seen from these words of our Leader on page 460 of Science and Health, namely, "Our system of Mind-healing rests on the apprehension of the nature and essence of all being,—on the divine Mind and Love's essential qualities." It would therefore be very superficial to approach one who to mortal sense is a sufferer, whether from the injuries and terrors of the battle field, or the ills which come to so many in the dismal struggles of mortal existence, with a mere denial of his distress. When the truth of being is reached fear is overcome in the Christ way.

Practitioners in Christian Science have found that it is seldom wise to tell a patient that he is suffering only from his own fears, especially until he has learned that Truth is mightier than fear, which is simply a negation, a belief due to ignorance of the infinite power of divine Truth and Love to supply the remedy for every mortal ill. Mrs. Eddy's teachings, like those of Christ Jesus, are no less compassionate than wise; and so the careful student of her teachings finds that we must never make a ghost of fear of any sort, but inspire and strengthen the trembling thought of the beginner by the unequivocal promises found in the Bible, which when scientifically understood become to us life-giving laws which are ceaselessly operative, and which constantly and consistently prove the ever presence of God and of all good.

It goes without saying that the one who has become accustomed to the bondage of his own fears as well as the fears and mistaken beliefs of others, must be liberated from these, and in some instances—indeed very often—it may be necessary to startle the one who is in this state of servitude; but this can best be done by directing thought to the radiance of Truth and Love, which dispels every shadow, and by showing the joy and strength which come from a truer acquaintance with our heavenly Father.

It goes without saying that the leaven of Truth, so often referred to by our Leader, will undoubtedly change all human thought if only we use enough of it. The mere belief that disease is mental rather than physical is in itself of little consequence if the divine Principle of healing is not recognized and its beneficent influence appealed to. At the same time we may rejoice that the light of Truth is shining over all the battle fields of the world; and to the extent that Truth is known fear vanishes, and the dignity and courage which characterize the man and woman of God's creating come more and more into evidence. In the light of Christian Science the oft repeated assurance of Christ Jesus, "Fear not," comes to thought, and always with the conviction that these compassionate words mean to-day not less than they did when spoken by the loving Master.

Current Notes

RICHMOND HILL, N. Y.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, took title on Sept. 6 to a plot of ground 100 by 100 feet, located on Chestnut Street, between Jamaica and Lexington Avenues. This, in conjunction with their present property, gives the church a frontage of 100 feet on Greenwood Avenue and 100 feet on Chestnut Street. On this lot they anticipate erecting a permanent structure. The house now standing on the newly acquired property will, after alterations, be used for a reading room and other church activities. The present church structure will be enlarged to accommodate the ever increasing congregations until such time as a permanent church is erected.—Richmond Hill Record.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—On Sept. 30, Third Church of Christ, Scientist, held its first service in the new church edifice which is situated on Park Avenue below Berks Street. This church was organized May 3, 1914, since which time services have been held in Columbia Hall, on Oxford Street above Broad. In July, 1916, the plot of ground on Park Avenue was purchased. Ground was broken Oct. 15, and on Dec. 28 the corner stone was laid. The auditorium has a seating capacity of six hundred. The building and furnishing of this church, including the organ, will cost a little more than fifty thousand dollars.

FOSTORIA, OHIO.—Application for permission to execute a declaration of trust was filed in the Court of Common Pleas this morning [Sept. 22] by the Christian Science Society of Fostoria. The petition sets forth that the Fostoria society is indebted to the amount of twelve hundred and sixty dollars, and that the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy will pay that sum if a declaration of trust is executed.
Tiffin Tribune.

BERKELEY, CAL. (University of California).—The annual reception of the Christian Science Society of the University was held last night [Sept. 12] at the Town and Gown Hall. As no refreshments were served, the money which ordinarily would have gone for them was turned over to the war relief fund maintained by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts. This money will eventually go to the aid of Europeans whom the war has impoverished.

The Lectures

BELFAST, IRELAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by P. W. Bryan, who said in part:—

Looking out upon the many discordant elements that seem to prevail in the world to-day, men and women are filled with unsatisfied longing for something that seems lacking in the scheme of things; for something that will lift them above their material surroundings and draw them nearer to that unseen power which men call God; for something which will enable them to feel that God is an ever present help available to meet their daily needs. They are seeking, in other words, for truth—for the truth about God and His relationship to man and the universe. Christian Science claims to set forth that truth, and to prove its teachings in the way our Master, Christ Jesus, commanded his followers to do,—by preaching the gospel, the good news, and by healing the sick and the sinner.

FORT SMITH, ARK. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mayor J. H. Wright, who said in part:—

In the year 1898 there returned to Fort Smith a lady who had previously been in the practice of annually visiting one of our famous resorts for the benefit of her health. When she left our city she was in a very bad physical condition, but she returned with the bloom of health upon her cheeks. Her friends were delighted, and enthusiastically congratulated her upon her changed appearance, marveling that the waters and climate could have wrought such a wonderful change. She amazed her acquaintances with the statement that her improved condition was not due to the healing properties of the climate and waters, but to Christian Science. This naturally excited interest on the part of her friends, who gathered about her for information in regard to this new teaching.

This interest grew, and as a result thereof, three years later, in 1901, the first Christian Science church was organized in Fort Smith with a small membership, but from this small beginning it has grown to its present proportions—always going forward, never ceasing. In view of the harsh criticism, of the scoffings, and the abuse heaped upon this church, the wonder is that it has continued to exist at all. The explanation of this mystery may, however, be readily ascertained by an inquiry into the personnel of the membership of the church. Such an examination reveals that the church membership comprises men and women of our highest type of citizenship; those of thought and education, and those having the courage of their convictions. That is why Fort Smith is proud of its people who follow the teachings of this denomination. And so it is wherever you may go; you will find Christian Science flourishing, and its churches thronged with substantial and progressive citizens.

Fort Smith Times Record.

DAWSON, YUKON TERRITORY, CANADA (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Frederick P. Burrall, who said in part:—

We are assembled here this evening to hear about Christian Science, the Science of Christianity. Christ Jesus, the greatest teacher the world has ever known, expounded this Science and left it to us as a rich legacy to be used and proven. Speaking of his works he prophetically said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do," showing thus that his scientific teachings were to endure. According to Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and to other historians, the followers of Jesus continued to use this scientific knowledge for three hundred years. Then through the political ambitions of Constantine the true understanding became darkened, and it thus remained for hundreds of years, until Mary Baker Eddy as a result of her study and search in the Scriptures discovered anew this Christ Science, and with it healed herself and others and proved the exact truth of Christ Jesus' teachings. To give this knowledge to the world Mrs. Eddy wrote the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and founded the Christian Science church.

ginner by the unequivocal promises found in the Bible, which when scientifically understood become to us life-giving laws which are ceaselessly operative, and which constantly and consistently prove the ever presence of God and of all good.

It goes without saying that the one who has become accustomed to the bondage of his own fears as well as the fears and mistaken beliefs of others, must be liberated from these, and in some instances—indeed very often—it may be necessary to startle the one who is in this state of servitude; but this can best be done by directing thought to the radiance of Truth and Love, which dispels every shadow, and by showing the joy and strength which come from a truer acquaintance with our heavenly Father.

It goes without saying that the leaven of Truth, so often referred to by our Leader, will undoubtedly change all human thought if only we use enough of it. The mere belief that disease is mental rather than physical is in itself of little consequence if the divine Principle of healing is not recognized and its beneficent influence appealed to. At the same time we may rejoice that the light of Truth is shining over all the battle fields of the world; and to the extent that Truth is known fear vanishes, and the dignity and courage which characterize the man and woman of God's creating come more and more into evidence. In the light of Christian Science the oft repeated assurance of Christ Jesus, "Fear not," comes to thought, and always with the conviction that these compassionate words mean to-day not less than they did when spoken by the loving Master.

Current Notes

RICHMOND HILL, N. Y.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, took title on Sept. 6 to a plot of ground 100 by 100 feet, located on Chestnut Street, between Jamaica and Lexington Avenues. This, in conjunction with their present property, gives the church a frontage of 100 feet on Greenwood Avenue and 100 feet on Chestnut Street. On this lot they anticipate erecting a permanent structure. The house now standing on the newly acquired property will, after alterations, be used for a reading room and other church activities. The present church structure will be enlarged to accommodate the ever increasing congregations until such time as a permanent church is erected.—Richmond Hill Record.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—On Sept. 30, Third Church of Christ, Scientist, held its first service in the new church edifice which is situated on Park Avenue below Berks Street. This church was organized May 3, 1914, since which time services have been held in Columbia Hall, on Oxford Street above Broad. In July, 1916, the plot of ground on Park Avenue was purchased. Ground was broken Oct. 15, and on Dec. 28 the corner stone was laid. The auditorium has a seating capacity of six hundred. The building and furnishing of this church, including the organ, will cost a little more than fifty thousand dollars.

FOSTORIA, OHIO.—Application for permission to execute a declaration of trust was filed in the Court of Common Pleas this morning [Sept. 22] by the Christian Science Society of Fostoria. The petition sets forth that the Fostoria society is indebted to the amount of twelve hundred and sixty dollars, and that the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy will pay that sum if a declaration of trust is executed.
Tiffin Tribune.

BERKELEY, CAL. (University of California).—The annual reception of the Christian Science Society of the University was held last night [Sept. 12] at the Town and Gown Hall. As no refreshments were served, the money which ordinarily would have gone for them was turned over to the war relief fund maintained by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts. This money will eventually go to the aid of Europeans whom the war has impoverished.

The Lectures

BELFAST, IRELAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by P. W. Bryan, who said in part:—

Looking out upon the many discordant elements that seem to prevail in the world to-day, men and women are filled with unsatisfied longing for something that seems lacking in the scheme of things; for something that will lift them above their material surroundings and draw them nearer to that unseen power which men call God; for something which will enable them to feel that God is an ever present help available to meet their daily needs. They are seeking, in other words, for truth—for the truth about God and His relationship to man and the universe. Christian Science claims to set forth that truth, and to prove its teachings in the way our Master, Christ Jesus, commanded his followers to do,—by preaching the gospel, the good news, and by healing the sick and the sinner.

FORT SMITH, ARK. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mayor J. H. Wright, who said in part:—

In the year 1898 there returned to Fort Smith a lady who had previously been in the practice of annually visiting one of our famous resorts for the benefit of her health. When she left our city she was in a very bad physical condition, but she returned with the bloom of health upon her cheeks. Her friends were delighted, and enthusiastically congratulated her upon her changed appearance, marveling that the waters and climate could have wrought such a wonderful change. She amazed her acquaintances with the statement that her improved condition was not due to the healing properties of the climate and waters, but to Christian Science. This naturally excited interest on the part of her friends, who gathered about her for information in regard to this new teaching.

This interest grew, and as a result thereof, three years later, in 1901, the first Christian Science church was organized in Fort Smith with a small membership, but from this small beginning it has grown to its present proportions—always going forward, never ceasing. In view of the harsh criticism, of the scoffings, and the abuse heaped upon this church, the wonder is that it has continued to exist at all. The explanation of this mystery may, however, be readily ascertained by an inquiry into the personnel of the membership of the church. Such an examination reveals that the church membership comprises men and women of our highest type of citizenship; those of thought and education, and those having the courage of their convictions. That is why Fort Smith is proud of its people who follow the teachings of this denomination. And so it is wherever you may go; you will find Christian Science flourishing, and its churches thronged with substantial and progressive citizens.

Fort Smith Times Record.

DAWSON, YUKON TERRITORY, CANADA (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Frederick P. Burrall, who said in part:—

We are assembled here this evening to hear about Christian Science, the Science of Christianity. Christ Jesus, the greatest teacher the world has ever known, expounded this Science and left it to us as a rich legacy to be used and proven. Speaking of his works he prophetically said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do," showing thus that his scientific teachings were to endure. According to Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and to other historians, the followers of Jesus continued to use this scientific knowledge for three hundred years. Then through the political ambitions of Constantine the true understanding became darkened, and it thus remained for hundreds of years, until Mary Baker Eddy as a result of her study and search in the Scriptures discovered anew this Christ Science, and with it healed herself and others and proved the exact truth of Christ Jesus' teachings. To give this knowledge to the world Mrs. Eddy wrote the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and founded the Christian Science church.

Testimonies of Healing

My gratitude goes out to God for Christian Science, and I would show it by trying to demonstrate it in my life. For twenty years I had been delicate and was continually ailing. About three years ago relatives in England sent me some copies of the Sentinel, and later a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I thought Christian Science some new fad, so did not read the papers, though after a while I began to read Science and Health, not because I expected healing from it, but because this seemed to be the only return I could make for the kindness of those who had sent it.

I was not a member of any church and had no wish to be, for I could not reconcile the teachings of the churches with a God who is Love, nor with a loving Christ Jesus who had compassion on all suffering. I had been told that another operation—I had already undergone one—might free me from the chief trouble, but there was the chance that it might not. I rebelled bitterly on being told that God had sent this to me for some good purpose of His own, but never lost faith in God or in the Bible, although unable to understand how its teachings were to be made practical. After reading Science and Health about an hour every day for a week, however, I realized that the pain which had been almost constant had ceased. A bowel disorder for which almost all known remedies had been tried without success, also a delicate throat from which I had suffered all my life, were cured instantaneously; but I did not tell anyone for a fortnight, as I could not realize it myself.

Other ailments disappeared one after another. I suffered from a structural defect of the eyes, also from the effects of wrong treatment by a doctor several years before,—one eye having been almost blinded. I had to wear glasses for reading and other work, and dark glasses in the sun. With the healing of the other ailments by Christian Science, all medicines had been put away, but more than a month passed before it dawned on me that I did not need to wear glasses. The print of my Bible was so small that even with glasses it had always been necessary for me to be in a very good light in order to read, but after laying them aside I was able to read perfectly well.

Rheumatism gradually lessened, and left me in a year's time. Another ailment, considered serious, has finally disappeared. A sense of weakness and fatigue was longer in fading away, but instead of the prescribed rest I was ordered to take, I am now capable of any ordinary exertion. Recently, on a trip in the district, I rode about twenty-four miles a day for four days without any bad effects. These discords have disappeared without treatment, thus proving to me the truth of Mrs. Eddy's statement, "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony" (Science and Health, p. 390).

For freedom from ill health I am very grateful, but far more so for a religion that is reasonable and logical, an explanation of life, and a God who cares for His creation. I have had many demonstrations of the power of Truth, manifested in the overcoming of discord in myself and in others, through the understanding I have gained of Science, and I am glad that my healing caused others to study this teaching. A few of us read the Lesson-Sermons together every week, and we know that if we live so as to let our light shine, others will be attracted to the truth. I wish especially to say how much I appreciate our beautiful hymns; they have always taken a large part in helping me to overcome erroneous conditions and to realize the truth. I am also very thankful for the Journal and Sentinel, as help for any special need is always to be found in them; and I am grateful for the Monitor. This testimony is sent in deepest gratitude for our dear Leader, who worked so bravely to give to all mankind the truth which is making them free.

MRS. L. A. B. FROST, Nicosia, Cyprus.

When I first heard of Christian Science I became very much interested, and desired to know whether it really did heal organic diseases, as was claimed for it; because I had been told by the doctors that although apparently well, I had a blood disease which might break out at any time in some serious and probably incurable form. At the Wednesday evening testimony meetings I met persons who had been healed and asked them to tell me of their healing. I then carefully considered the evidence, and became convinced that Christian Science does heal all manner of disease.

I took up the study of Christian Science, and soon found by my own experience that the application of an understanding of its Principle brings results. Although raised in an orthodox church, I was unable to abstain from profanity or to govern my temper. At one time I had prayed regularly twice a day for several months to overcome these sins, but with no apparent benefit. In Christian Science I learned a better way to pray, so that the profanity was soon overcome and the spells of temper rapidly became less violent and less frequent.

About two years after beginning this study, the above mentioned disease broke out in the form of tuberculosis of the glands of the neck. I tried to overcome the attack through my own understanding of the truth, but became so miserable that I finally went to a practitioner. With the first treatment the pain and sickly feeling vanished, but the glands of the neck were no better. For about a year and a half I went to different practitioners with varied success. At the end of that time the neck was in a very bad condition and people began to urge me to have an operation, saying that unless something was soon done the disease would turn into lung trouble.

In this condition I heard of a Christian Science practitioner who had been a practicing physician, and thinking that he would be able to tell me what to do, having had experience with both systems, I went to him for advice. He assured me that it would be better to continue with Christian Science treatment, and was asked to take the case. After the second treatment, on inquiring when I should come back, I was asked why I wanted to come back. Then I saw that I had fallen into the habit of expecting the healing at some future treatment. I did have to go back, but only eight or ten times before my healing was complete. That was over nine years ago, and there has been no return of the disease.

I feel very grateful for this experience, because I know that every treatment helped me, and that through it all I was growing in my understanding of Principle.

HARRY E. DILLER, Erie, Pa.

Christian Science has been to me just as much a preventive as a curative. At the time I began reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was taking four kinds of medicine. I was said to have inherited a very torpid liver, and when quite young began to be troubled with periodical bilious attacks, which developed into enlargement of the liver and later into gallstones. One of the prescriptions I was taking for the prevention of the fifth attack of gallstones, which the attending physician told us would necessitate an operation; another prescription was to prevent a second attack of acute inflammation of the kidneys and bladder; still another was to ward off frequent attacks of neuralgia, which often required an opiate before relief came; and the fourth prescription was taken in the attempt to overcome a very serious trouble which was supposedly caused by my work behind the counter.

During my first year's study of Christian Science I had one attack of biliousness, which was quickly overcome through my own understanding of the truth. I have had two attacks of neuralgia, but these also yielded to the right application of the teachings of our textbook. The other ailments have never reappeared. No one knows better than a Christian Scientist how inadequate words are to express the gratitude and thankfulness that is felt for the blessings which have come from this divine revelation our Leader so unselfishly labored to give to all mankind. I am more grateful for the demonstrable knowledge of absolute truth than for the physical help. This knowledge is the only true preventive of sin, sickness, disease, and death, and only by learning each day how more correctly to apply our understanding of Truth, do we really merit the privilege of being called Christian Scientists.

On page 3 of Science and Health our Leader tells us that "action expresses more gratitude than speech," and it is this kind of gratitude which I wish always to express.

L. Grace Speaker, Vassar, Mich.

That for which I am most grateful to Christian Science is the new understanding of God and His creation gained through the study of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I have many times proved the truth of her statement on page 390 of this book, "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony."

I was brought up in what is called orthodoxy, but when old enough to think for myself, my thought of God was anything but loving. It filled me with resentment that I was not more fortunate in my circumstances, and that God had created a world with which it was so hard to be satisfied. I soon found that this God in whom I had been taught to believe, was of no use to me, so I ceased to concern myself about Him. I never entered a church unless obliged to do so, and became a scoffer at religion. My chief object was to get all I could of pleasure while I lived, and the result was a life of self-indulgence, which culminated in chronic gout in the foot. I could only limp about, unable to bear any but soft leather boots, and grumbled at everything and everybody.

I was well past fifty years of age when Christian Science found me in 1909, and I did not expect relief from this ailment, for I believed a good deal in medical theories. Every remedy known to me had, however, been tried without success, and I was convinced there was no cure for gout. The explanation of Christian Science given me was so logical that I asked for treatment, which was promised me if I would read the textbook. I did so during the week, and the next Sunday attended service in London. I left the building healed, and walked about all day without any pain, although wearing rather tighter boots than I did usually, and have never had gout since that day. I have been quickly healed of severe fever and ague, and coughing bouts which used nearly to choke me have disappeared.

Financial troubles which seemed insurmountable have been overcome, and I am now always solvent, whereas I used to be steeped in debt. I am always happy and contented, whereas I was formerly a misanthrope. I look forward to a life of usefulness and joy, instead of age and decay. I was a smoker to excess, a slave to this vice; now I never touch tobacco. All this I owe to Christian Science. It is not astonishing, then, that I never miss a service at our church; that churchgoing is now a pleasure instead of a bore. I hope more and more to prove my gratitude to our Leader by becoming a more useful member of the Church of Christ, Scientist.—Reginald I. B. Parkinson, Ludlow, Shropshire, England.

The benefits I have received through the study and application of Christian Science are too numerous to mention. I did not turn to it for physical healing, although I had exhausted every means known to the medical profession and had been given up to die. I knew Christian Science to be a religion of cheerfulness, and sought it because it would enable me to keep cheerful and patient till the end came; but in five weeks from the time I began to study its teachings I was healed of asthma in a very aggravated form, also of the drug habit which had been acquired as the result of long periods of suffering, and was able to get up and do all the work in a ten-room house, including the washing, although a trained nurse as well as a maid had been in attendance on me.

Later I was healed of a growth on my arm and another on my leg. These did not respond to treatment so quickly as the former troubles. I had help from a loving practitioner for several weeks before I realized that I did not dread the wakeful night as usual, having determined to use it as an opportunity to get better acquainted with God; but lo! I slept all night for the first time in many months. When I awoke in the morning and rubbed my hand over the affected part, it scaled off, leaving the leg perfectly normal, and there has been no return of the trouble since. The healing of the arm came less quickly, but it too has been permanent.

These healings took place five years ago. Since then I have had the privilege of class instruction, and for this and for the unfolding of God's goodness and mercy that each day brings, also for our loving Leader and all that she has provided for our guidance, I am more than grateful.

Ida M. Jackson, Los Angeles, Cal.

St. Paul says, "In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Though not wishing to be disobedient to this exhortation, I have already delayed too long in expressing through our periodicals my measure of gratitude. Christian Science has yet many things to teach me, but I am profoundly grateful for what I have already received, for the assurance that it alone, among all the doctrines proclaimed before the people of this day, can be correctly identified as the Comforter, or the "Spirit of truth," which will guide us "into all truth."

My path in the study of Christian Science "shineth more and more unto the perfect day," and an increased knowledge of the truth is gradually and surely improving my sense of health and transforming me from a delicate, sickly child into an active, healthy man. It is of inestimable value to know that man's divine birthright is not only immunity from disease, but also positive, robust health. I am especially grateful, however, to learn by experience that an honest, earnest study of Christian Science will likewise transform the character. Among my chiefest blessings I count the exposure and the expulsion of much selfishness, criticism, cynicism, aloofness, and so-called temperament. One cannot build up in his own thought a separate, personal self without obscuring his view of the one Ego, by which and in which all men truly live.

For these and many other similar lessons in Christian Science, and for the sustaining comfort of it in every hour of every day, I desire to give thanks to God, the giver of all good, and to the Lord Jesus, "that great shepherd of the sheep." I would also lovingly express my debt to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, and gratefully mention the assistance of my teacher and my friends.

C. C. BUTTERWORTH, 2d, Philadelphia, Pa.

It is with a sense of deep gratitude that I testify to the good received through Christian Science. I suffered with melancholy and dreadful nervousness, and finally broke down and lost the faculty of speech. My maid-servant became frightened and hurried away to call a physician. It was found that my pulse had stopped beating, but the physician, looking into my eyes, said he believed that life was returning. Closer examination failed to reveal a physical trouble other than the fact that my nervous system was shattered, as he put it. He said that working was out of the question for the present; that I must take very good care of myself,—stay in bed, of course,—and then have medical treatment. He added that if I did not follow his advice, he would assume no responsibility and that I might be stricken with paralysis. He came three times on that day.

Although in this seemingly hopeless condition, I was not dismayed for one moment. I had often had similar attacks before, though not so severe, and also knew that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." As soon as I was able to speak I had a Christian Science practitioner called by telephone from a distance. She came and lovingly took up work for me, with the result that the spasms ceased and I was again able to work.

Almost a year has elapsed since, and I have enjoyed better health than in many years. My gratitude for Christian Science is great, for it has not only helped me in times of suffering, but what is more, it has relieved me of a sense of sorrow, discontent, and fear. My past experience has been a sad one, but I can see how God has helped me out of tribulation. I feel profoundly grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her explanation of spiritual being, which was declared by Jesus the Christ.

FRAU M. RAUCH, Biel, Switzerland.

It was in 1907 that Christian Science was first brought to my attention. I was living on a farm, and seemed to be working beyond my strength every day. There was much inharmony in the home, and I was so discouraged that I often prayed I might die. At last I began to believe there was no God, for all my prayers were in vain. Then one day, when the darkness seemed the deepest, a lady came to my house on business, and seeing my great need, mentioned Christian Science to me. Later she sent me some literature, and after reading it I purchased a copy of Science and Health. This I also read many times, but without understanding it.

The following spring I was taken to a hospital to undergo what was called an emergency operation; but on returning home and resuming the hard work, I became ill with what is called quick consumption. I still read Science and Health, but only in a desultory manner. In July, 1908, I was sent to a different state, where it was believed the change of climate would benefit me, or at least prolong my life. At this time I also had acute attacks of asthma, and a very bad recurrent condition of the bowels. Being away from my family, who thought all healing power lay in medicine and climate, I decided to visit a Christian Science practitioner. I did so, and had treatment for some weeks, and wish space would allow me to tell of the love and patience which was accorded me. I was not healed, however, so returned to material remedies, in accordance with the wish of my husband, who had joined me in the West.

On my return to Iowa I gained slowly in strength and was only half faithful to the study of Christian Science, but I began to realize that many discordant conditions were disappearing, and as my thought grew clearer I could understand more what God is. As a result, harmony began to be manifested in our home, for I no longer saw error as persons, and this let in a great light. After I was entirely free from asthma, and after lung trouble, lifelong sick headaches, and many minor ailments had been overcome through Christian Science, I was given one final test.

A malignant disease of the breast and underarm became manifest, and great fear was felt, because a sister had passed on with the same trouble at my age. The greater the fear the more severe the suffering became, but this time I was not even tempted to turn to material means, and sought God as All-in-all. I went to a near-by city, where I could have present treatments from a Christian Science practitioner, and my healing came very quickly. After the third or fourth treatment the fever and pain began to go away, and soon the swelling receded, also the soreness to touch, and I found freedom.

Words are inadequate to express my thankfulness for this healing; but while I bless God for freedom from so many physical discords, I much more desire to praise and bless His holy name for spiritual understanding and freedom. I feel so grateful to divine Love that I want to praise God all the time, and feel like saying, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" I am grateful for the faithful life of our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for membership in The Mother Church, and for all our literature. I love all who have helped me in my path from sense to Soul.

This testimony is sent with a heart full of love and gratitude for the understanding of God I have gained through the study of Christian Science. By following the teachings of this practical religion I have had many demonstrations over physical ills. The fear of electric storms has also been overcome. I used to think that they were expressions of God's anger, but now I know that nothing but love and peace are found in God's spiritual creation. The Master said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." This message of peace banished fear.

I am very grateful for the "Key to the Scriptures" which

For many years I had suffered from a stomach complaint and rheumatism, and a general weakness during six months of last year absolutely prevented my doing any work. Happily for me, while in a convalescent home I made the acquaintance of a young girl who spoke to me of Christian Science. I can say that from the first treatment I felt better, and that the following treatments confirmed this improvement.

I am very thankful to God, also to Mrs. Eddy, and to all those who have helped me. I really feel glad to be alive, and can truthfully say that I have never been so happy; for not only am I healed, but my husband, who had suffered from a throat trouble which had been treated without definite results by doctors, was healed simply by attending the Christian Science services, without receiving special treatment.

Besides all this we have been benefited in other ways; everything seems to straighten out along our path, and it is with all my heart that I say to those who are still hesitating that here is the only true means of healing.

M. BOVEY, Lausanne, Switzerland.

It is a pleasure to add my testimony to the many others which have been printed, and to tell of the healing which has been accomplished for me through Christian Science, not only in a physical way but in the regenerating of my whole life and thought.

In the summer of 1915 I was seized with an attack of neuritis, which continued for some days and was very painful. It was impossible for me to raise my arm, comb my hair, or turn over in bed without pain. Having had this disease before, and never having received any permanent relief from material remedies, I was convinced that drugs would not reach my trouble. Through a kind friend Christian Science was brought to my attention, and although I knew very little about it, I was willing to try anything that would give me relief, so I called upon a practitioner, who lovingly explained the treatment to me. I knew instantly that this was what I had been looking for.

One treatment was all that I received, and after studying about two weeks I was entirely healed, and the ailment has never returned. The very first night I was able to sleep without waking once, and the pain was materially lessened by morning. Glasses have been laid aside after having been worn for over fifteen years, and many minor ills have been overcome through divine Love.

For all these blessings my gratitude to God and to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, is very deep, and my sympathy goes out to those who have never tasted of this wonderful truth as revealed through the study of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

VINNIE A. HURST, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

For about twelve years I suffered from stomach trouble, severe headaches, and a constant fear that these ailments would almost any day terminate seriously. Being engaged in the theatrical profession, I was led to believe that a worldly man, so called, was preeminent in every way. I smoked incessantly, enjoyed the social glass, and seemed to think that this worldly life was my only source of happiness, although I now recall, underlying all this, an inward desire for better things,—for a higher life, for something more worth while.

Physicians, in their earnest efforts to relieve me of physical distress, succeeded in giving me only temporary relief. I grew worse, and during the season of 1911-12 went from one doctor to another in a final struggle for freedom from disease and pain. In July, 1912, I was put upon a strict diet and given to understand that I had symptoms of several serious ailments.

Brought up in the Jewish faith, I learned to scoff at the name Christian Science, denied its healing power, and refused to permit it in my home, although I saw many proofs of its efficacy in the healing of a number of my intimate friends. My seeming antagonism grew stronger until August 22 of that year, when I awoke in the morning feeling very ill and fearing the end was near. I made a last appeal to my physician, who held out little hope; so that same afternoon I called a Christian Science practitioner to our home. A treatment was given me, and I was almost instantaneously healed. An hour later I ate a hearty meal, and I have been able to eat heartily ever since. Then and there I was healed of the tobacco habit, of all desire for liquor, and of many other ailments.

Since then I have had numerous proofs that "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." I was also instantaneously healed of religious prejudice, and wish to state that the help Christian Science gives one in business affairs, in church and home life, in the responsibility of parentage, and in his daily dealings with all mankind, is inestimable. I cannot begin to tell how grateful I am to God for the life of Jesus the Christ, and to our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, for having given us "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" and so many other channels through which we can overcome a life of anticipation of evil, and live under the one true law, the law of God, the law of the expectancy of good.—JOSEPH BREN, Chicago, Ill.

I wish to bear witness to the accuracy of the statements given in my husband's testimony, and to add that I have also been healed of many ailments, among them hay fever, from which I had suffered since early childhood, chronic bowel trouble, and severe stomach disorder. The greatest blessing to me has been the overcoming of fear in many forms. Christian Science was a great help to me the past year in an experience of childbirth, and in raising children it is invaluable.

For all the blessings that have come to me I am very grateful to God, also to Mrs. Eddy and to all those who have so lovingly helped me in Christian Science. I can only hope to show my gratitude by living the truth as our Master taught.—LOUISE A. BREN.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me and mine. I have not risen above all my ills, but chronic inflammation of the bladder and a serious bowel trouble have been overcome. My husband has been healed of rheumatism of the knee, and our youngest daughter of nervous breakdown and of ringworm on her hand and finger that did not yield to medical treatment. Our little granddaughter was healed of protruding piles. The law of contagion has been broken for our family, and many more blessings could be named. I trust I shall be able to pay my debt of gratitude to Christian Science by right thinking and right living.—ETTIE WILSON, Shiloh, Mich.

From Our Exchanges

[New-Church Messenger]

A knowledge of God involves a revelation of Himself. Nothing is more manifest in the letter of the Word itself than that a knowledge of God and things spiritual was revealed by God. The patriarchs, seers, prophets, and apostles were instrumentalities through whom God made known Himself, His laws, and the spiritual realities in the spiritual world.

[The Congregationalist and Christian World]

Of what sort is our Christian life which has spread itself over the world in divided streams and is now constituted of masses of disciples who are mainly unacquainted with each other, guided by men who are much inclined to make faces as they look away from their own followers to those who follow others? Is our Christianity fireproof in this day of flame and destruction?

[The Continent]

A perfected church would necessarily be a united church. It is only men's sins, men's follies, and men's ignorances that break up the church into denominational sections and fragments. Sincere longing for Christian union, therefore, is essentially a longing for more Christlikeness in the church and less of men's shortcoming and muddling.

[Pacific Christian Advocate]

Many are spending time deploring the religious depression of the day. We prefer to call attention to a most encouraging spiritual aspect of this period. It is that of the widespread and intense expectation that we are on the eve of a far-reaching, momentous movement in the realm of the spirit.

[Raymond Calkins, D.D., in The Constructive Quarterly]

The church treasures many truths and follows many practices which admittedly are not to be found in the earliest history of the church. The idea that the norm of the church was determined in the first hundred years of its life would seem to limit the operation of the Holy Ghost.

[The Watchman-Examiner]

We ought to think of the influence of our life on other lives. We bless or hurt them. We inspire or discourage them. We save or ruin them. Spirit inspires spirit. Love kindles love. Cheer spreads cheer. Benevolence propagates benevolence.

"What I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XX NOVEMBER 17, 1917 NUMBER 12

Overcoming

CLARENCE W. CHADWICK

To any Christian the word overcoming has no uncertain meaning, but the student of Christian Science may possibly give it more serious consideration than do many other religionists. The great Master made a remarkable statement when he declared, "I have overcome the world." It is one that should be more metaphysically considered than it usually is, for it indicates to the would-be follower of Christ Jesus the precise mental course he himself must pursue. He too must overcome the world, and in order to do so he must understand just what the Master meant by such a statement. To the evidence of the material senses the world that Jesus lived in is as much in existence as it was when he left it. The same hills, mountains, lakes, and valleys are all there. He made no attempt with howitzer and dynamite to obliterate matter, he used no physical force or human will power, he left the world in physical outline the same as when he entered it,—but he overcame it.

In what sense, then, did Jesus overcome the world, and where did the overcoming take place? are questions which many might ask. Christian Science answers both these questions, leaving no doubt as to the exact meaning of his words. On another occasion Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world." In other words, he understood that the real or unseen world was the world of God's creating, and this spiritual understanding enabled him to overcome a limited, finite sense of the world. Just as one looking through a red or a green lens would see the same objects appearing either red or green, so by viewing the universe through a material or through a spiritual sense one would gain either a material or a spiritual concept of things. Christian Science interprets creation as seen through the lens of Spirit, and by holding to this interpretation and refusing longer to accept any erroneous material concept, it enables the honest seeker for truth to get the better of or to overcome that false sense which always judges according to appearances.

Partaking of our human nature because he had a human mother, Jesus became humanity's Wayshower through overcoming the very human sense to which he seemed to conform. Had he for one moment lost sight of his spiritual selfhood, or the Christ, he would have failed to gain the conquest of materiality. Even before the final demonstration of this conquest, as manifested in the ascension, Jesus had overcome a matter-sense of the world. This mental ascent above the finite and material must have been made within the realm of consciousness.

Humanity to-day has this same material sense to silence and overcome. It must enlist under divine compulsion in the great mental battle of Armageddon and go forth to slay the Goliath of belief in a power and intelligence opposed to God. We too must know and offer proof that our kingdom is not of this world. To do this acceptably in the sight of God we must order our thinking and conversation aright and go forth to face the foe, firmly resolved to overcome whatever in human consciousness is unlike perfection. It is doubtful whether the average Christian stops to estimate the rich heritage which is bequeathed "to him that overcometh." So much emphasis is placed upon the necessity of overcoming, and such bountiful rewards are promised to those who conquer self and sin, that all who would know and do God's will can ill afford to be ignorant upon the subject of overcoming. It is of paramount importance that they understand precisely what it means and that they bestir themselves to put their understanding into practice.

Theory and practice go together in Christian Science. We are told in Science and Health, "It is Christian Science to do right, and nothing short of right-doing has any claim to the name" (p. 448). This is overcoming. No one bent upon living up to the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount need have any doubt about overcoming,—there is nothing else for him to do but to overcome. In "No and Yes" our Leader tells us, "The glory of human life is in overcoming sickness, sin, and death" (p. 33). This means blotting out of consciousness a material sense of the world, and substituting for it St. John's vision of "a new heaven and a new earth."

It is supreme folly to make light of this subject of overcoming evil with good, as some are inclined to do when the theory of the unreality of matter is touched upon in Christian Science. It would be a difficult task for the opponents of Christian Science to offer a basis other than that of the unreality of evil upon which any phase of evil may be overcome. To admit the reality or spiritual entity of evil would of course be nothing less than placing a mistake on a par with that which is absolutely right. This can no more be done in metaphysics than it can in mathematics. A mistake in mathematics is eliminated or overcome because it is a mistake and bears no relationship whatsoever to the basic law of mathematics. If the mistake were real, it would not be susceptible of any correction, much less could it be overcome.

There are not two kinds of reality, one to be overcome and the other to endure forever. All that can be overcome is a counterfeit, a false or mistaken sense of that which is right, and which is real because it is right. What is left of disease when all evidence of it is eradicated from the body? Is it overcome? In no true sense is it overcome until individual disbelief in disease obtains in the consciousness of the patient. So long as the patient believes that man was sick, that he may be sick again, that there is a power capable of making him sick, or that there is a reality termed sickness, disease is by no means overcome, in the true sense. In other words, a patient is not really healed until his belief in disease is proved by him to be no part of the real consciousness of man. A patient is not healed of lying until he loses his belief in falsity and refuses to tell lies. A lie is overcome when individual belief in untruth is reduced to nothingness and the divine Principle of right is understood and obeyed.

Let us press on in the work of overcoming, for only through the gateway of mental overcoming shall we come into conscious possession of man's rich heritage,—permission "to eat of the tree of life," to partake of the hidden manna, to exercise spiritual power over the nations, to be made pillars in the temple of God, to avoid being "hurt of the second death," to be "clothed in white raiment;" in other words, "to inherit all things."

"On earth peace"

THEODORE STANGER

To speak of peace on earth when the greater part of the world is involved in war, is to many mere mockery. The angel message delivered to the shepherds in the field of Bethlehem has no meaning to them. What can be its import? Did it refer to conditions existing at that time? Then, as now, nation was against nation, the strong preying on the weak, and bringing oppression, destruction, and death to thousands of peaceful people. Or was the message in the nature of a future promise? Why then did the world have to wait two thousand years in vain for its fulfillment? Is this fulfillment still possible, and if so, how can we assist in hastening it?

In view of the world's unreadiness to solve its present great problem by spiritual means, it is no doubt right for us to give our aid and support to certain measures which, in the best judgment of those who guide the affairs of the nation, will serve as human footsteps to better things; yet our chief task consists in doing right mental work. This does not signify that we may treat the situation in the sense of employing silent mental arguments in favor of one and to the detriment of the other group of belligerents, although we may think that we see very clearly "where right doth really lie," for such procedure would not aid in reconciling the human family, a house already grievously divided against itself. What we can and should do is to realize that error, wherever it is found, can only destroy itself; that it cannot harm the real man or cause destruction and devastation in the realm of God, and that Truth will finally be seen to be supreme. This work means nothing more or less than the discernment and demonstration of reality.

In Hebrews we read, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," and in II Corinthians, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." We are to look away from the things seen by material sense and to look at the things visible to spiritual sense. Christian Science opens our eyes to behold as present realities the things which mankind has hoped and waited for all through the centuries. What else can the eye of faith be but the discernment of reality? God's work is finished; it exists now and forever as a perfect spiritual creation, including perfect spiritual man. Instead of supinely waiting for God to do something, we must do something ourselves, namely, rise above the material seeming into the realm of the real, the realm of Spirit, the realm of harmony, where the heavenly chorus can always be heard.

Let the sorrowful heart ponder Mrs. Eddy's definition of "angels" in Science and Health (p. 581): "God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality." We have many instances in the Bible of men who were able to rise to a height of spiritual perception where they were in the company of angels and received their protection. Daniel was able to say, "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me." And the deliverance of the three Hebrew men from the "burning fiery furnace" was recognized by Nebuchadnezzar to be due to the fact that God, divine Mind, had "sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him."

Does God send His angels in our own day? Yes, indeed. Thousands of Christian Scientists know this from personal experience, and many letters and statements have been received from Christian Scientists at the front, some of which have appeared in our periodicals, testifying to the fact that angels, "God's thoughts passing to man," have protected them many times in the midst of a veritable "burning fiery furnace." The psalmist sang, "A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee." Is this protection only for the favored few to the exclusion of the "thousand" and the "ten thousand"? Assuredly not, for "God is no respecter of persons." All are protected who have learned what it means to look "at the things which are not seen," namely, spiritual realities.

We may not see with our eyes the evidence of peace about us, yet it exists here and now, discernible to all to whom "the evidence of things not seen" means something. In the degree that the world learns to recognize this evidence, will the things that are seen approach the state of spiritual perfection. In the meantime each one of us, by earnestly and persistently fastening his attention on reality, may hear the angels sing. They proclaim the Christ, who is with us "alway, even unto the end of the world,"—unto the end of all selfishness, strife, cruelty, suffering, want, and woe. This invisible Christ, Truth, not only is our protection from violence, but also supplies our every need. As Mrs. Eddy expresses it so beautifully on page 442 of Science and Health, "Christ, Truth, gives mortals temporary food and clothing until the material, transformed with the ideal, disappears, and man is clothed and fed spiritually."

Moses

ETHEL MUNRO GOSS

As an inspiration to service there is no stronger influence than a study of the life of one who has given his all in the service of mankind. As we look back across the ages at those heroic figures who made an indelible mark in the history of spiritual development, one of the first is the stalwart figure of Moses, who gave to the world the vision gained on mount Sinai. That the vision was given first to a people who repeatedly murmured at being led out of bondage, but makes the inspiration of his life the more compelling.

Moses must have possessed from the first that same independence of character which compelled his great forefather Abraham to obey the voice that urged him to get out of his country and to go into a land which Truth would show him. He had a hatred of oppression and a generous passion to help the oppressed, for we find him taking the side of his fellow countryman against an Egyptian taskmaster; then protecting the daughter of Reuel, priest of Midian, otherwise known as Jethro, against the shepherds. Still later he was led to his great life work, the freeing of the Hebrew captives in the land of Egypt, not by the strength of his own right arm, but in the strength of the God of Israel.

While the children of Israel "sighed by reason of the bondage," and "they cried, and their cry came up unto God," their future deliverer was being prepared for his mission by tending the flock of Jethro, his father-in-law, in the desert.

Digitized by Google

There, in silent communion with the God of his fathers, the vision was granted him of the God who would deliver his beloved people,—"I AM THAT I AM," the self-existent One,—and the vision was accompanied by a demonstration of Truth's power in the case of the rod and the leprous hand. There also to Moses, as to all who receive the message to go forward, came the suggestion of human weakness. "O my Lord," he pleads, "I am not eloquent, . . . I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." Still the vision fails not, and Moses is strengthened by the realization of Mind's all-power. So, with Aaron as his mouthpiece, he accepts his mission and takes his first step.

How wonderful must have been the return of Moses and Aaron to their own people, who now saw that their cry to God had been heard; that the God of their fathers had not forgotten His promises. We read that "they bowed their heads and worshiped," so by their gratitude taking their first step out of bondage. Then follows a long struggle with error before they make their start out of the land of idolatry.

After leaving Egypt, the first test of their new-found courage came when they were confronted by the Red Sea before and the power that would drive them back to servitude behind. There Moses, true to his vision in the desert, neither faltered nor failed, but steadfastly looked up to Truth to deliver them; and after their deliverance they sang in exultation, "The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation." It was after this that the bitter waters of Marah were healed by a tree which "the Lord shewed him," and here the people were given their first statute: "If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, . . . I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the Lord that healeth thee." This is the first record of healing through obedience, and here Moses outlines his life work—to teach his beloved people freedom through obedience. How stupendous the task, and what a heroic figure he stands, through murmurings, complainings, idolatry, and the materiality that sighed for the slavery and the fleshpots of Egypt! Once only we hear him complaining of the burden—"I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me." His cry reached the great heart of Love, and the help came; some of the elders became imbued with his spirit, and they bore the burden of the people with him. Moses denied to no one the right to share his mission. When the word came to him that two men in the camp were prophesying, the heartfelt prayer sprang at once to his lips, "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets."

"O people saved by the Lord, . . . thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places," was the prophecy of him who saw divine Truth face to face. That they who had been slaves in the land of material sense should learn freedom through obedience to spiritual law was his divine mission. We are experiencing the fulfillment of this prophecy now, by the same power that Moses knew carried him triumphant through the Red Sea, that upheld him through all the trials of the wilderness, and that raised him to Pisgah's heights, whence he beheld afar off the promised land. And with what ineffable tenderness he concludes his final message to his beloved people—"The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." This tenderness carries us across the centuries to the time when Jesus came to bring a fuller, richer revelation of law to a materialistic world, and stretching out his pitying arms over Jerusalem cried, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

Mrs. Eddy says: "The All-wise does not bestow His highest trusts upon the unworthy. When He commissions a messenger, it is one who is spiritually near Himself" (Science and Health, p. 455). Moses demonstrated this nearness in his perception of law, and, like our own beloved Leader, he was not content with keeping the vision for himself, but gave it to the world. This giving was his life work, and it involved such sacrifice that his life is an inspiration for all who share with him the desire to show mankind the way to freedom, to share in the work of the true church, which Mrs. Eddy has defined on page 583 of Science and Health as "rousing the dormant understanding from material beliefs to the apprehension of spiritual ideas."

Self-denial

SADIE LITCHFIELD KELLER

ONE of the most profound statements uttered by the Master was this: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." The question of self-denial has interested the ages, but only in the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth does it take on a meaning of real value to the human race. The exact words used in this statement are deeply significant: "Let him deny himself." It is not said that a man shall deny himself something, or deny something about himself, but simply, plainly is it put that he shall deny himself. Matthew, Mark, and Luke unite in this rendering of the great Teacher's words, and so it seems that humanity is face to face with the given rule of actual self-denial.

At this juncture, while longing to follow the Wayshower in his mighty demonstrations of divine power, all the mental training of one's earthly experience rises in rebellion. Personal sense says: "Deny myself! Why, no; I cannot do that. I have been years in growing along every line: I have spent much energy in building up and perfecting this self, in endeavoring to make it worthy of respect and honor; and besides, if I should deny it, blot it out, where would I be? Sacrifice myself? I want to live." But here again the Master's words come to us: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it." Then this cannot be the way to live. What then? "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."

Jesus said, "I and my Father are one." It is, then, for the sake of this oneness in God that we are to deny self. This leads us right to the contemplation of God as the only Life, and we note again the saying of Jesus the Christ, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Again we are confronted by the thought of oneness. God is infinite, perfect Being. Can there be more than infinitude? Where then is the self apart from Him called "I"? God is omnipresent. God is also omnipotent. Thus it is seen that there is no power beside Him, and the omniscience of Deity makes self-abnegation complete, for with the knowledge of God there is left no belief of a selfhood apart from infinite good.

The idea of God includes the consciousness of divinity and of none beside; it reflects the glory of knowing Love; of communing with divine intelligence; of beholding ever anew the might and gentleness, the justice and mercy, the activity and rest, the harmony and health, the joy and calm, the peace and exaltation, the grandeur and simplicity of Spirit, God. Surely this is our true being. Herein we find oneness, for in this idea of being there is no consciousness or mind apart from God, no power but that of divinity, no presence but the divine ever presence. Thus again are the words of the Prophet of Nazareth fulfilled, for he said, "I ascend unto my Father, and your Father,"—the oneness of all men in God. Paul's perception voiced this glorious fact in the words, "In him we live, and move, and have our being."

Christian Science supports this teaching of the Christ. On the first page of its textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, we read, "Prayer, watching, and working, combined with self-immolation, are God's gracious means for accomplishing whatever has been successfully done for the Christianization and health of mankind." Again, on page 568 of the same book we find, "Self-abnegation, by which we lay down all for Truth, or Christ, in our warfare against error, is a rule in Christian Science."

From these references we see, as in the New Testament writings, that one absolute requisite for the salvation of mankind from the ills that beset it, is the denial of the false sense of self which hinders the perception of oneness with God. The first step in any good work is to find out what needs to be done and how to do it. Then the genius of good works is faithfulness in persistent effort.

Ideas and Ideals

LOUIS A. GREGORY

CHRIST JESUS taught that there is nothing in materiality worthy to be held up to mankind as an ideal. He represented the mental, metaphysical, or spiritual as the ideal. Although he healed all kinds of disease, raised the dead, multiplied the loaves and fishes, walked on the water, and worked marvelous changes in material conditions, his counsel was, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The kingdom to which he points is absolutely ideal. He makes it clear, however, that this ideal is not to be attained in a distant future state, but that it is a present condition of right consciousness, and is the source of immediate good, or practical results.

Materialistic thought often scoffs at ideals. It has tried to idealize material means and things, but always fails, finding the result as mutable and imperfect as belief in matter necessarily is. Things metaphysical or spiritual are entirely beyond material comprehension, so to it the ideal seems visionary and impracticable. Christian Science demonstrates that man and his consciousness are spiritual, not material; so to God's man there is nothing intangible or unattainable about the ideas of Spirit, which are the ideals of Christian metaphysics. These ideals are based upon spiritual ideas, so in Christian Science the words idea and ideal are practically synonymous.

Human thought attributes reality to evil as well as to good, and thus would pervert the ideality of ideas into a double standard for measuring both good and evil. It was of this erroneous human thought that Shakespeare wrote, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so," and that Blackstone in his commentaries on fundamental civil law declares, "Thoughts are deeds, and may be crimes." These statements advance beyond the gross materiality that conceives matter to be the controlling factor, for they clearly state the supremacy of thought; but they mistakenly attribute as great power to so-called evil thought as they do to good thought. They fall short of the truth that makes free, the truth that good is the only power. Christian Science accepts this truth as fundamental and, going from human belief to spiritual understanding, maintains that God is the only Mind and His ideas are perfect, actually ideal. In this connection we read on page 213 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," as follows: "Of a man it has been said, 'As he thinketh in his heart, so is he;' hence as a man spiritually understandeth, so is he in truth."

Realization of the dominant influence of right thought is the first step away from the mistaken belief that man is governed by chance, circumstance, environment, the various forms of matter or evil. The influence of thought in determining the action, course, conduct, effectiveness, and persistency of the individual cannot be denied. It is said that we sometimes act involuntarily; but the fact is that when we act without mature deliberation we generally follow the course laid out by previous thought along the same line. Our hastiest action is apt to be determined by our general attitude toward the subject, by preconceived opinions. We are constantly admonished to act well, to do what is right, to refrain from wrongdoing; but outside of Christian Science little or nothing is said concerning the thought that determines the act. It is erroneous and ineffectual to seek to control action without dealing with the influence which causes and regulates it. To do so is as unsuccessful and as unreasonable as would be the effort to stop a locomotive by placing an obstruction on the track, instead of controlling it by shutting off the steam and applying the brakes.

More important even than the realization of the influence of thought is the necessity for distinguishing between true thought and its counterfeit; or, as it is generally expressed, between right and wrong thinking. He who thinks rightly will not act wrongly even under pressure. He may act sometimes without deliberation, but his action will be essentially right. He who thinks wrongly, who harbors thoughts of envy, hatred, revenge, passion, dishonesty, wickedness, is not going to act rightly now, or next week, or at any other time, until he changes his thinking and his standards. The Master said, "Ye shall know them by their fruits," and actions are the fruitage of thoughts. Right thinking is not a matter of habit; it is not an activity of the human mind; it is scientific thinking and reflects the activity of divine Mind. In Christian Science man thinks aright only when he is obedient to the Mind of Christ.

Each individual holds in thought something which he cherishes as ideal; and his happiness, peace, and effectiveness depend upon the rightness of what he has idealized. Material belief, so cherished, bestows no real benefit, and occasion will arise that will prove it to be transitory and disappointing. In direct contrast, any degree of spiritual understanding is an ideal that includes immediate blessing and constant, continuing benefit. Ideas are spiritual, emanations from divine Mind, and cannot be of matter or mortal mind. These ideas constitute the only actual ideals. Their existence cannot belong to a so-called past or to a mythical future, but to the eternal present. Concerning Mind the Scripture says, "From everlasting to everlasting, thou art God."

Vessels for Oil

NINA F. WINN

IN the chapter on Genesis in Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says that in comparison with the older Scriptures "the New Testament narratives are clearer and come nearer the heart" (p. 501), and therefore need less explication to bring out their spiritual meaning. It may be fairly stated, however, that divine Science illumines both the New and the Old Testament, and the spiritual messages to be found in them are being constantly uncovered by earnest seekers after Truth.

The majority of men and women in Christian Science have come from the older churches, where the study of the Bible was not alone advocated but often earnestly urged upon members; and not a few of us to-day owe much to our training in this direction, even if our desire to know the real significance of the incidents related in the Bible was not gratified. Inasmuch as we now have the benefits of the revelation of Christian Science, there is no reason why our thought should remain darkened along this line, for numberless Christian Scientists are finding the eternal Life promised to those who search the Scriptures.

At one Wednesday evening meeting the Scriptural reading contained the account of Elisha increasing the widow's supply of oil, and as the writer listened, and especially as she pondered it afterward, it seemed rich in lessons for the present hour. The account opens, it will be remembered, with the widow's appeal to Elisha for help for herself and her two sons. Elisha's question in response to the woman's plaint reveals him as a metaphysician. "What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house?" In other words he was asking her to what extent she had been receptive to good, for on that would depend her present receptivity.

Her reply elicited the fact that there was something in the house, namely, "a pot of oil." Here it is very helpful to ponder the definition of "oil" as given in the Glossary of Science and Health (p. 592): "Consecration; charity; gentleness; prayer; heavenly inspiration." The vessels were borrowed as Elisha commanded, and filled, and when there was not a vessel more, "the oil stayed." In other words, the supply was infinite, and stayed only because there were no more receptacles; or again, it was given only to the extent that the widow and her sons were receptive to the idea of abundance.

The true source of supply, with its nature and infinitude, has again been revealed to the world through Christian Science. Mrs. Eddy, its Discoverer and Founder, says on page 60 of Science and Health that "Soul has infinite resources with which to bless mankind;" and through the application of one's understanding of the Principle of this Mind-science every one has the blessed privilege of proving this divine fact, even as the boy in school solves his problem in arithmetic through his understanding and application of the basic law of mathematics.

Many vessels have been provided for the use of Christian Scientists in proving their own receptivity to the spiritual idea of abundance. Let us name a few and then ask ourselves whether we are using them. Let us think of the different funds in the Church of Christ, Scientist, as considered in this light. First, the general funds, and in many cases the building funds of our branch churches; the war relief fund; the Benevolent Association fund, and that for the purchase of real estate to be held by The Mother Church.

As the oil in the vessels was ultimately to reach the widow's neighbors, so the contents of the vessels just referred to are for our neighbors. As the vessels were provided primarily for the needs of the widow and her sons, so these funds are established for the salvation of Christian Scientists from a false and limited sense of supply, and as they pour into them understandingly they will have all they need. If, however, through fear of lack and failure to recognize the presence of the spiritual idea, or through selfishness and the fulfilling of their own lusts they withhold, they will never be richer in grace and mercy. Our oft sung hymn counsels in much the same way that Elisha did the woman who came to him (Hymnal, p. 89):—

> But if at any time we cease
> Such channels to provide,
> The very founts of love for us
> Will soon be parched and dried.

["Peace"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 6, 1917]

Peace and materiality are antithetical. To suppose that peace can be found in matter is to mistake the very nature of the latter. Peace, it is obvious, is an abstract mental condition. Matter is either a subjective condition of the human mind or the expression of some force or energy existing independently of that mind. Indeed, according to the theory of pure materialism, mind is something existing in and dependent on matter. In any case, then, if one or another of the conflicting explanations of human philosophy is to be accepted, a man's peace of mind is at the mercy of matter. For, even if the teaching of the idealist is accepted, a material or mortal mind, which weaves the flux of matter, has itself woven a condition of struggle in which peace is inconceivable.

In order to find peace it is, consequently, obvious that the human mind must escape from itself. In other words, the individual must cease to be carnally minded, and must instead find refuge in the Mind of Christ, that condition of spiritual-mindedness which is not merely the very antithesis of carnal-mindedness, but which is realizable only as the human or mortal mind, with its pictures of matter or inharmony, gives place to the manifestation of the eternal, divine Mind, the existence of which has been obscured by the suppositious material mist which is the inevitable atmosphere of this human or mortal mind whose subjective condition is matter.

Now matter, as has been said, is a condition of struggle. The very claim of the natural scientist, on which he bases his theory of the indestructibility of matter, demands this. Roughly it comes to this: that matter is a condition of flux, energy if you like, in which everything superficially appears to perish, but in reality enters upon a new lease of existence in accordance with the law of conservation. There is nothing particularly new in this. The Chinese Taoist, Tzu Li, illustrated it in discussing the future of his friend, Tzu Lai: "Verily, God is great! I wonder what he will make of you. Do you think he will make you into a rat's liver or into the shoulders of a snake?" Twenty-three centuries later Shakespeare suggested that the future of Cæsar might be found in a brick. But whether you adopt the theory of Chuang Tzu, Shakespeare, or Thomas Huxley, you arrive by one devious course or another at some so-called law of struggle which sooner or later, sooner generally rather than later, places the neck of man under the yoke of inharmony.

Now struggle of any description is war in some form or another, and peace only becomes a possibility as the law of struggle is shown to be not a law, but a misconception of law. Huxley put this very finely in his famous dissertation on miracles, in explaining that a miracle can in no case be anything more than the discovery of a hitherto unsuspected law. As this dawns on the human mind, this human mind begins to express its own mortality by, as Paul says, putting itself off; in other words, disappearing into its native nothingness. Then, as this material mind vanishes, there becomes revealed the divine Mind, expressed in spiritual and consequently permanently harmonious creation, with the result that the only true peace, because the only indestructible peace, is experienced. "Our false views of life," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 62 of Science and Health, "hide eternal harmony, and produce the ills of which we complain. Because mortals believe in material laws and reject the Science of Mind, this does not make materiality first and the superior law of Soul last."

Peace, then, as known to the human senses, unless governed by the Science of Mind, is only a period of mesmeric rest in those senses' experience of the law of struggle. To the soldier, for instance, the period between two wars may be a time of peace; but to the mechanic busily engaged, at good wages, while the soldier was fighting, peace may begin in loss of work, strikes, and riots the day it is declared. The soldier or the mechanic, wandering through the fields in the golden summer, may grow ecstatic over the peace of the country. But he sees, almost without notice, the sudden swoop of the hawk upon its quarry, or hears, without suspicions, the rustle in the hedgerow as the weasel stalks his prey. War, in short, is a mental acceptance of the reality of the law of struggle, and never can cease until the unreality of matter, and so of the human or mortal mind, is finally demonstrated. "Inharmonious beliefs," as Mrs. Eddy says on page 251 of Science and Health, "which rob Mind, calling it matter, and deify their own notions, imprison themselves in what they create. They are at war with Science, and as our Master said, 'If a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.'" This is war in heaven.

In a condition of perfect mental harmony there cannot, of course, be any such manifestation as war. But in that stage of relative human harmony which a man enters upon as he battles out of material night into spiritual day, he comes face to face with conditions with respect to which he must take his stand. Neutrality toward evil is a scientific impossibility. In such circumstances the man who understands something of Principle must take his stand in the ranks of those whose course is nearest to Principle. Those who judge merely as the world judges will take sides, of course, in accordance with their attachment to or detachment from matter. Such wars, in the state of the world's spiritual progress, are inevitable. The thoroughgoing materialist is bound to take up arms, as the only way he understands of gaining his object. The idealist is bound to oppose him with the sword, for the simple reason that he knows no better way of preventing the triumph of unrestrained evil. Of course, if enough people understood Jesus' teaching, their perception of the unreality of matter would make strife of every kind impossible. But Jesus himself did not pretend that the gaining of spiritual peace was to be achieved without its own struggle—the struggle with the senses. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

How does the world give peace? Anyone who has ever considered the question must know. Through that very ease in the senses which makes matter doubly real, and so rivets the belief of materiality, with all its inherent inharmonies, more than ever firmly upon its victim. This was not Jesus' way. He took his disciples from their homes. He made them strangers, so to speak, to their kindred. He made them outcasts whom the world was willing to despise and persecute. But he taught them how to prove the nothingness of these very trials; how to heal the sick and raise the dead; how to become fishers of men instead of fishermen. That was the peace which Jesus gave to them,—the peace of Spirit which no suggestion of matter could disturb. War was to go out of their consciousness, even out of that of the turbulent Peter, because materiality, the father of all inharmony, had been destroyed. And there was to reign instead "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding."

[B. W. Oppenheim in Kootenai Valley Times, Bonners Ferry, Idaho]

Christian Science does not contradict the Scriptures, as was asserted by a recent visiting evangelist. What the gentleman could justly say was that his interpretation of the Bible did not agree with that of Mrs. Eddy, the author of the Christian Science textbook, from which he quoted. No one has made this plainer than Mrs. Eddy herself. Theologians ought not to feel impelled to make intemperate attacks upon the conscientious beliefs of others. If those beliefs are wrong, an appeal to the reason rather than the prejudices of mankind should be sufficient to convince them of that fact.

Christian Science not only harmonizes with the Scriptures, but is based absolutely upon them and upon nothing else. The Christian Science textbook is what it purports to be, a "Key to the Scriptures." Those who will are invited to reread the Scriptures with this key, and to decide for themselves whether Mrs. Eddy's interpretation will not bear the tests of reason and practice. The Bible was originally written for an Oriental race in a diction full of imagery and poetical conception. Science and Health has presented the eternal truths of the Bible in modern English and in a style of exact statement demanded by the scientific development of our day. Christian Science has brought to this age a rational, scientific knowledge of God, a conception of God so intimate and close to each of us that His love and wisdom are available to solve our every human problem. It has revived primitive Christianity by revealing to man the possibility of being freed now, not hereafter, from sin and sickness and discord. The proof of this is seen in the effect of its teachings upon the lives and the practice of its adherents.

Much criticism has been directed against Christian Science because of what is conceived to be its belief about Jesus the Christ. The ordinary theological view is that the man Jesus was himself God, and that his perfection is unattainable by man. A Christian Scientist regards Christ Jesus as the perfect man, to be emulated and followed, with the assurance that the works which he accomplished by reason of his knowledge of God are possible to every individual through right living and right thinking—through consecration. The Christ is that perfect understanding of God which enabled Jesus to become the example or Wayshower for mankind. It is not true that Christian Science is a religion without a Saviour. It is founded absolutely upon the idea that the teachings of Jesus, if followed and practiced, will and do save mankind from all evil; but Jesus the Christ becomes a Saviour to us only to the extent that his teaching is practiced.

[W. Stuart Booth in The Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Col.]

A recent correspondent who refers to Christian Science asks, "What reason can be found for using the creator of the universe as our symbol of goodness?" To Christian Scientists the Bible teachings furnish sufficient reason for their conception of God as good, and in addition this is supported by logic, for the creator of the infinite, eternal universe must be good in both essence and expression, since evil is destructive in its very nature and tendency.

To those who are unacquainted with it, Christian Science may appear fallacious, but to those (and they are many) who have found freedom from sinful habits, surcease from pain and sorrow, and have realized spiritual peace and uplift through its teaching and practice, it is indeed the law of God, good. Christian Science demands and develops more than mere belief or blind faith,—even that spiritual understanding which can be and is proven in the most practical way in everyday experience.

As Paul addressed the intellectualists of Athens who had erected an altar "to the unknown God," so Christian Science to-day speaks to all honest, humble seekers for the truth, and says to them, "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." And Christian Science declares God, good, to mankind, not only in its spiritually reasonable precepts but also in the greater good brought into men's lives.

The most scientific as well as the most Christian man of all time, Jesus the Christ, disproved every so-called material law by proving the supremacy of spiritual law; and to show the universality and immutability of spiritual law he said: "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Ridgewood (N. J.) Herald]

The subject on which the critic expended the most of his derision was Mrs. Eddy's use of the word mind; but what he said would have had no point whatever if he had not ignored the distinction, which Mrs. Eddy has consistently made throughout her writings, between real Mind and its opposite or counterfeit. It may be added that the same distinction is to be found in the New Testament.

Every one knows that Christ Jesus drew a sharp distinction between Spirit and flesh. The one "giveth life;" the other "profiteth nothing" (American Standard Version). It is also to be observed that Paul translated these expressions into mental terms: "The mind of the flesh is death; but the mind of the Spirit is life and peace . . . the mind of the flesh is enmity against God" (same translation). Furthermore, Paul pointed out that the difference between these contraries is also the distinction between real Mind and its opposite, as well as the distinction between good and evil. For example, the latter part of the seventh chapter of Romans is devoted to analyzing the nature of the conflict in human consciousness between these opposites.

Therefore the mentality to which Mrs. Eddy referred on page 489 of Science and Health, when she said, "The less mind there is manifested in matter the better," is the same as that to which Christ Jesus referred when he said, "The flesh profiteth nothing." It is the same evil to which Paul referred when he said, "The mind of the flesh is enmity against God." The separateness of the real man from this false mentality was also declared by Paul in the words, "So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin."

In her discovery and statement of Christian Science Mrs. Eddy has declared anew the nature of real Mind and true consciousness, as well as the method or practice by which the law and power of infinite Mind are available in the working out of our salvation, as a present and progressive overcoming of evil with good. No one is obliged to accept this science of salvation; but it exists for those who want it, and Christian Scientists earnestly desire to have it protected from both misapprehension and misrepresentation.

[Frederick R. Rhodes in Harrogate (England) Advertiser]

In a report of a lecture under the caption "Intellectual and Spiritual Problems," reference is made to the subject of Christian Science. The lecturer stated that Christian Science was based upon a false metaphysics, but he did not substantiate his statement by any proof; surely such a method could not be considered very convincing by any audience.

The practical evidences of the healing and saving power of the Word of God, as understood and practiced in Christian Science, are surely a sufficient answer to such a remark as the above, and these have during the last half century spread themselves in countless thousands all over the civilized world. Christian Science certainly does teach that God is the only cause and creator, and therefore that everything which is real must partake of the same qualities as the cause from which it emanates; otherwise there would be more than one creator, and God would cease to be infinite.

Speaking from the only real point of view, that of infinite intelligence, man is never an originator or creator, but he unfolds or reflects the thoughts which originate in the infinite Mind, or God. When man thinks something which is not in accord with the truth about God, he only thinks he thinks, and in consequence does not express the truth. As it is impossible in any science to conceive of a principle except through the idea which correctly expresses it, so real or true thinking, through which we gain an understanding of the Science of Christianity, can only be the consciousness of the attributes of God, who is the Principle of this Science of being.

Our critic states that Mrs. Eddy contradicts herself because she says pain is unreal, and later that pain is the result of sin. It would be just as logical to say that the science of numbers is untrue or contradictory if we place the figure 5 on paper as the result of 2 times 2, and state that the 5 is unreal (i.e., not correct), but that it is the result of wrong computation.

It is quite obvious that all the wrong sense of Christian Science betrayed by our critic is due to the inability to discern between the relative and the absolute. As Paul said, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." The mortal sense of right or good is of no value in determining the real or the spiritual. Our Master, speaking of John the Baptist, said, "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." It is therefore through a higher human recognition of the real, and not in the mortal belief of knowledge, that we are eventually able to render ourselves servants "unto righteousness," and thus gain a sense of the exact or scientific knowledge of God.

Christian Science proves beyond a doubt that "the unity of humanity" will be ultimately brought about through the individual recognition of the one divinity, in which all the children of our Father-Mother God will dwell in that unity of thought and purpose which constitutes eternal harmony, or the kingdom of heaven. Mrs. Eddy writes on page 131 of "Miscellaneous Writings," "Christian Scientists preserve unity, and so shadow forth the substance of our sublime faith, and the evidence of its being built upon the rock of divine oneness,—one faith, one God, one baptism."

EMILY HOUSEHOLDER

To follow Truth, and leave the seeming all
For paths untried in erstwhile alien mead,
And see unlessened plenty from ripe harvest fall,
Annul the law, By sweat of brow shall be thy bread.

To glean with joy from every hope deferred
The precious sheaf of dauntless, patient trust;
To find in every thwarted aim the purpose stored,
Is answered prayer, replete and just;

To bring these treasures to Love's threshing floor,
Where tares nor moth nor mildew e'er can come,
Is garnered substance, full to running o'er,—
Is kingdom, heaven, and home.

"Sound in sentiment"

THE Manual of The Mother Church brings to the attention of the student many startling side lights upon character. For instance, where there is set forth in Section 2 of Article XXVI the obligation of the teacher to his pupils "to watch well that they prove sound in sentiment and practical in Christian Science," this demand enables every one who reads it to perceive for himself a desirable ideal. There are passages of Scripture upon which the light falls clearly when such an ideal is accepted. For example, what is written in the fiftieth psalm, "When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him," could not be said of one who was "sound in sentiment."

A certain kind of thief is able to thrive only because of false sentiment in those he victimizes. Were those who thus become partners and assistants to correct their easy-going sentimentality, he would have to work as honest men do, and the world would receive a benefit from his life which now it does not receive.

For the sake of illustration a special case might be discussed. One day as a Christian Science practitioner was engaged in peaceful study, preparing himself for his sacred work, a visiting card was brought to him with the message that a pleasant looking young man wished to see him at once. For a few minutes he held the card in his hand, waiting on God for wisdom, and listening for the message of healing for the one who was seeking truth. He became instantly aware of something wrong, and of the necessity for caution on his part. When he went down to see the visitor, he found him a very suave speaker, who with glibness which betokened much practice, told of having made a long journey in order to visit his aunt, who lived in a large city not far away, and of being stranded for lack of funds when so near his destination. He said he was disappointed and mortified; but as his aunt was a Christian Scientist, he said, he felt sure that some one of that faith would help him on his way out of kindness to her, especially as the fare to the city beyond was not so very much.

The tale was told as smoothly as an actor's phrasing on his two hundredth night. The practitioner sensed the fraud, of course, but immediately went for his hat, and invited the young man to come with him. "We shall go to the telegraph office," he said, "and as the one in charge is well known to me, there will be no difficulty in having a wire sent to your aunt, telling of your plight, and she within an hour can forward you the money to finish your so nearly completed journey." At this the young man became visibly disturbed. He floundered confusedly in speech, saying at last that he could not so pain his aunt by sending any such request. The practitioner asked why he should object to asking for a small sum by wire, when he had already said that he was taking the journey to ask in person for a large sum by way of assistance. The embarrassment of the visitor so increased that he made an excuse to get away, and as soon as he could left the town. But he had gone through several states prior to that day, fattening on the credulity of easy-going, unpractical Christian Scientists. The point to be considered is that practical Christian Science would have healed both the dishonest man and his victims.

Let us notice what Mrs. Eddy says in regard to discernment. In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 117) we read: "The student of Christian Science must first separate the tares from the wheat; discern between the thought, motive, and act superinduced by the wrong motive or the true—the God-given intent and volition—arrest the former, and obey the latter. This will place him on the safe side of practice." A study of this passage will show that it is not necessary for our periodicals to be exposing the particular varieties of fraud, since no advantage would derive from any explanation of the methods of the unrighteous. The thing which is important is to have the righteous man become wise regarding his work and courageous in its performance. It has been proved over and over again that "the wicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion."

In order to make this practical we might take the case of a fraudulent operator who claims to have a sister or mother on the other side of a wide continent, who he may say is an advertised practitioner. He may tell a tale of misfortune until the listener feels that this suppositional relative has been very neglectful, and he may out of that condition of false sentimentality be able to gather some monetary aid. By the time a letter has been written to the practitioner, who perhaps never had a brother, or never had a son, the operator has been able to go to new fields, and the fault remains uncorrected. Furthermore, the practitioner in question is called upon to write a great many futile letters in answer to these continual inquiries, which needless task takes up the time which should properly be devoted to practice. The telegraph system is at the service of those who wish to make inquiries; and the making of such inquiries, and the prepayment of the reply, would cost very much less than what is usually lost in giving assistance to the unworthy applicant.

The fact is that if Christian Scientists themselves will not encourage fraud through false sentiment, it will come to an end because unsuccessful. For deliverance from the many unclever operators who, according to reports, so crudely play upon sentimentality, a remedy may be found in the correction of whatever melodramatic sympathy may be felt for the beggar's inconsistent tale, and in the gaining of discernment whereby right mind reading is done. In other words, the remedy for the whole situation is in gaining an understanding of that Mind whereby the sick are healed.

Are not all the members of The Mother Church genuine partners in one great enterprise? If one member makes a fine demonstration, are not all blessed? If one member is an easy victim for error, may he not be in danger of being a channel for conveying discomfort to others; and is he not himself somewhat like an inefficient soldier who burdens another with his baggage? A distinct way for mutual help appears in this, that when one sees a thief he can avoid being a partaker with him. He can prevent him from thieving his time, his money, his peace of mind, and avoid becoming his agent to take away another's peace of mind, or character, or time. Mrs. Eddy asked cooperation from her students when she said (Miscellany, p. 130): "I have neither the time nor the inclination to be continually pursuing a lie—the one evil or the evil one. Therefore I ask the help of others in this matter, and I ask that according to the Scriptures my students reprove, rebuke, and exhort."

Sabbath Observance

THE question of Sabbath observance is not only of deep interest to older students of Christian Science, but it is important that the pupils in our Sunday schools should have clear views on this question as on all others which relate themselves to human progress. A tendency of the present age is too often indicated by a sudden change from one extreme to another, and so we find many who at one time had been accustomed to think of Sabbath observance in a somewhat superstitious way, ready to dispense with it altogether, —except possibly to attend once in the day some place of worship. The Christian Scientist who desires to be led aright with respect to this question, or indeed any other which would promote growth in spirituality, will find much help in pondering deeply our Leader's words on page 206 of "Miscellaneous Writings," where she speaks of the passage "from flux to permanence, from foul to pure, from torpid to serene, from extremes to intermediate."

It is now very generally admitted that the Hebrews had adopted from the Babylonians a good deal which pertains to the institution of the Sabbath, and yet there can be no question that the children of Israel sought as no others had done to make it an occasion for spiritual advancement which could only come from a better knowledge of God and His law. We are all familiar with the fourth commandment, but it is startling to find a statute that the one who profaned the Sabbath should suffer the death penalty. It is very interesting to note that while Isaiah points away from mere ritualism and outward ceremonial and bids the people turn away from "new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies," yet it is he who pleads for the true observance of the Sabbath, which must be based upon judgment and justice and thus bring salvation near to all the people.

Although it was contrary to the law for anyone to travel on the Sabbath or to do any work thereon, we read of Jesus taking a journey with his disciples on that day and plucking the ears of corn to satisfy their hunger. We at the same time read that the great Teacher justified them in so doing and said, "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath." We also read that on two occasions when a wonderful demonstration of Truth's power was made in the synagogue, an attempt was made to convict him on the technical ground of violating the law relating to the Sabbath. In the case of the man who had the withered hand, perfect healing was realized in spite of the bitter criticism of mortal mind, and even before Jesus pronounced the man whole he said, "It is lawful to do well on the sabbath days."

The other instance was that of a woman who had been a helpless sufferer for eighteen years. We read that when Jesus saw her he pronounced her whole, and this called forth an indignant protest from the ruler of the synagogue, again on the technical ground that Jesus had healed on the Sabbath day. This the Master characterized as hypocrisy, and he reminded them that even the beasts of burden were cared for on the Sabbath day and that it was in accordance with the highest law that this woman should be freed from her long time bond on the Sabbath day. It is good to read that "all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him," and it goes without saying that those who are to-day in the same mental attitude—looking for and rejoicing in the reappearing of the Christ-healing—will not be led astray in their desire to do what is right on the Sabbath day and every other day.

A close study of Paul's epistles reveals the fact that he was not held in bondage by a belief in the mere outward observance of the Sabbath, and yet there can be no question that all the days and all the hours were devoted by him to the establishment of God's kingdom on earth. In his epistle to the Romans he says: "One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." Again in his epistle to the Colossians he says, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come." To the Christian Scientist this would only mean that at all times and under all circumstances he must show himself to be above, not below, the ordinary standards, and prove conclusively that the great interest of his life is the truth which Christ Jesus practiced and taught, and which is to-day healing the sick not less surely than it did two thousand years ago. In speaking of the great church of the future Whittier wrote, "Its days shall all be holy time," and he added:—

> A sweeter song shall then be heard,—
> The music of the world's accord
> Confessing Christ, the Inward Word!
> That song shall swell from shore to shore,
> One hope, one faith, one love, restore
> The seamless robe that Jesus wore.

"Come unto me"

THE words which form the title of this editorial have rung in the ears of Christendom since they became public in the sacred writings. An infinity of comfort, protection, compassion, and surcease from sorrow radiates from them. Obeyed and understood they save and heal the individual, sow the ground and gather the spiritual harvest, solve the perplexities of nations and hemispheres, open the seven seals of error and explode the hidden mines of evil's intent. Acting upon the call contained in these words the scientific Christian is ready to face the world, the flesh, and the devil, and to see their nothingness.

The reason why these words have not long since established the religious, social, political, and economic millennium on earth is that they have not been properly interpreted. Scholastic theology, which constantly errs by taking the letter and mistaking the significance of things spiritual, centuries ago gave these words the fatal personal twist which robbed them of their saving power and nailed them to a doctrinal platform on which is also written the misconception that Jesus claimed for himself that he was God. Thus the depth of nourishing compassion which the great Master put into these words was neutralized by the mistake which the pride of priesthood insisted upon associating with his human personality. It suffices to tell the receptive thought that Jesus himself never made the claim which mistaken theology has forced upon him, but that he called himself "the Son of God." The very words in Matthew's gospel which precede those which are here under consideration refute this error, for we read: "All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."

Who or what, then, was this "me," this refuge for the weary? Was it the human personality of Jesus which was empowered to give rest to those "that labour and are heavy laden"? If that had been the case the hope of mankind must have disappeared at his ascension. Christian Science shows conclusively that the divine solace contained in Jesus' words sprang from his inseparable unity with the Christ, the Truth which makes free, which renders the yoke of obedience easy and the burden of spiritual power light. Jesus' own human burden proved to be inexpressibly heavy; he could not have urged others to find solace in his own personal experience, but he invited the spiritually minded everywhere and for all time to come unto the Christ, whose activities are perpetually light and easy in Truth. Mrs. Eddy, speaking of the human Jesus' atonement, has said: "The burden of that hour was terrible beyond human conception. The distrust of mortal minds, disbelieving the purpose of his mission, was a million times sharper than the thorns which pierced his flesh. The real cross, which Jesus bore up the hill of grief, was the world's hatred of Truth and Love" (Science and Health, p. 50).

Centuries of darkness followed the attempt of scholastic theology to personalize this call, "Come unto me," left by Jesus for humanity's enlightenment. Essentially this error is identical with that which crucified him. The supposition of his persecutors was that they could destroy the light he brought into the world by extinguishing his human life. They therefore yielded to this temptation and sought his death. Judas betrayed him, the high priest thrust Pilate forward to sentence him, the passers-by mocked at him on the cross, all the disciples but John deserted him, all his followers save the faithful women, because the carnal mind expected to destroy the Christ, Truth, by crucifying the human Jesus. As though this did not suffice, relentless priestcraft with the passing centuries then theoretically raised this same human Jesus whom it had once lowered into the tomb and tried to place him on a throne as God. Would not the tomb and such a throne be equally burdensome to a human personality? Then let it be known far and wide, to the world's very boundaries, that the Christ, Truth, calls unto the weary everywhere, "Come unto me," and utters its urgent request to-day as it once did through Jesus, inseparably joined unto the Christ, and that Christian Science is practically demonstrating for all who have ears to hear and eyes to see the salvation of our Lord, the presence of the kingdom of heaven on earth.

Current Notes

ALTON, ILL.—The congregation of First Church of Christ, Scientist, will this evening [Oct. 3] occupy the new quarters they have fitted up on Tenth Street, between Henry and Langdon Streets. The church bought the property, and the building has been transformed into one of the handsomest little edifices to be imagined. The main floor has an assembly room, which is capable of seating about one hundred people, with space for overflow in a reading room which adjoins the main auditorium.—Alton Telegraph.

LINCOLN, NEB.—At services held at eleven o'clock in the morning and repeated at eight o'clock in the evening the Christian Scientists of Lincoln dedicated their church building at Twelfth and L Streets on Sunday [Oct. 7]. The building was finished in 1912, but the dedication was postponed until after the mortgage was paid, September 24.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—A booth for The Christian Science Monitor was maintained at the Pioneer Pow-wow, September 13, 14, and 15. The Sunday school paid for the papers for this work. One hundred and fifty Monitors were ordered, of which one hundred were given out and taken from the booth. The remaining fifty were mailed by the distribution committee.

JACKSON, MISS.—Beginning November 1, 1917, First Church of Christ, Scientist, will have services Sunday evenings also, at eight o'clock.

The Lectures

PORTLAND, IND. (auspices First Church, Muncie).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Judge E. E. McGriff, who said in part:—

While I am not a Christian Scientist, I have a profound and deep respect for my friends who are; and although I do not understand their belief, I must confess they are receiving and imparting comfort and happiness through it. The little knowledge I have of the subject has not come to me as hearsay, but from sincere witnesses. I am thus informed that its advocates and believers have been brought from invalidism and from pain and suffering to health; that the mind is carried in a current of love, of charity, of benevolence, of happiness, of contentment and forgiveness. If, then, the teaching of Christian Science will change pain and suffering to health and comfort, bitterness and hatred to love, evil tendencies into purity of thought and speech, and thereby bring mankind into one broad brotherhood, then I am willing to admit that these accomplishments enlist my admiration.

PETOSKEY, MICH. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Jeanne A. Chichester, who said in part:—

When we as Christian Scientists are inquired of in regard to our religion,—if it be indeed of divine origin and in truth the word of God, healing sickness and sin,—we reply only by asking such questioners to investigate the works which Christian Science is doing in every community throughout the world; we ask them to learn of the many who are being freed from bondage to sickness, sin, and the fear of death; we ask them to learn how, through the teaching and practice of Christian Science, the blind see, the lame walk, the deaf hear, the sorrowing are comforted, the discouraged and heavy-laden are relieved of their burdens, and happiness, health, love, and peace are brought into their lives here and now. We believe that these are some of the signs which Jesus promised should follow them that believe on him.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. (Second Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by Archibald W. Edes, who said in part:—

One does not need to be a keen observer of the problems of the human race to know that above all else it desires salvation from something which it fears has power to harm. Christian theology has tried to solve the problem, and has presented to the human intelligence for consideration many differing plans of salvation, all of them postponing its realization to a future existence, if attainable at all. Many have tried to be satisfied with the different plans presented, but have nevertheless felt the instinctive urging of reason that they ought right now to be saved from trouble, discord, sorrow, limitation, despair, sin, sickness, and death.

Christian Science comes forward to solve the problem with an exact science, capable of demonstration, the exact opposite of material ecstasy or mesmeric emotionalism, without any taint of self-exploitation or of self-glorification, and says that salvation should be looked for right now, but that each one must work it out individually for himself. The means of doing this are provided in the Bible when correctly interpreted, and this correct interpretation has been given in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

PORTLAND, ORE. (joint lecture).—Clarence W. Chadwick, lecturer; introduced by E. G. Crawford, who said in part:—

For ages men have been seeking the truth regarding life or existence. There have been many theories and many religions, all having in view the eternal or future existence, and purporting to proclaim the truth. Truth has been in all ages the greatest of all virtues, and when attempting to define it, we find that it simply means "that which endures." The Bible teaches that we shall know the truth, and the truth shall make us free. All mankind is seeking for this truth which makes free. The world is hungry for a definition of truth that will satisfy and make for human happiness. That the truth proclaimed by Christian Science has met this test is acknowledged by great numbers of people who know very little about Christian Science except that it does make better men and women, happier homes, kinder business men, and without doubt better citizens.

Testimonies of Healing

It is six years since I turned to Christian Science for physical healing. My little girl's eyes were troubling her, and finally she became totally blind. I feared an operation, for she was barely five years old, and the gentleness of Christian Science appealed to me, so I sought the aid of a practitioner. Before many treatments had been given her, I discovered that I too was walking in darkness, that I was spiritually blind; but thanks to "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, I was lifted out of that darkness into the glorious light of Truth. Just as surely as "a new heaven and a new earth" appeared to me, the light of day returned to my child. It was a joy to see her vision return. When I entered the practitioner's office for the first time I did not dream that such a precious gift was in store for me; truly my "light affliction" was but for a moment, and it did work for me "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." From that time this gift of Truth has been "a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path," guiding, guarding, comforting me daily.

The healing has been permanent; no glasses have been required, and in fact this little girl will seldom wear a hat while playing in the bright California sunshine. Surely this is positive proof that the light no longer distresses her, and that her eyes do not trouble her in the least. I have had many difficulties to overcome in my journey from sense to Soul, and am grateful to Christian Science for aiding me to rise above them; but I feel most grateful for this one which meant my awakening. Through Christian Science my whole life has been beautified, and the world has taken on a different aspect; therefore I shall never cease to give thanks for the experience which revealed such abundant glories.

Is it then to be wondered at that I cannot find words sufficient to express my gratitude for Christian Science? I realize that my life alone can do that, and I strive now so to act that when weighed in the balances I shall not be found wanting.—Annie L. Wallis, Los Angeles, Cal.

On arriving back from the front after ten months' service in the trenches I testify to the strength and comfort received through Christian Science, which has taught me to pray aright, and has led me to the knowledge that God, divine Truth, is indeed a "shield and buckler" in times of what appears to mortal mind to be great danger. I cannot express in words the feeling of peace, "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding," which has come over me when things seemed darkest, with the knowledge that God was present and that there was no power opposed to His.

I went through three battles, and during all was unharmed. The whole time I did not touch medicine or go to a hospital, though being previously of such a delicate constitution that nobody believed I would last for long. I felt in fact stronger than the strong in great hardships and dangers, and when mortal mind did on occasion overshadow me with a sense of danger, by the study of Science and Health and prayer to the Almighty I was able to conquer this mental state and be again at peace.

I can never feel too thankful that I have been led through Christian Science to know the truth, and that I have proved for myself the power of God to be as available to us all now as it was in the days of our Lord. I pray that this testimony may be of help to my brothers who are about to enter into similar experiences.—Abel Smyth, Dublin, Ireland.

So much encouragement and so many benefits have come to me from reading the testimonies in the Christian Science periodicals, that I wish to express my gratitude for them and to testify to the healing power of Truth. I was led to investigate Christian Science when in great need of relief from physical suffering. Through an injury, blood poisoning was manifested in a severe form in the left leg. After three months' treatment under the best doctors, the family physician, my husband's most intimate friend, told us we must choose between surgery and Christian Science, as material remedies could assist no further. Having had previous experience with surgery, I was reluctant to try it again, but went to the surgeon and arranged to go into the hospital the day after Christmas, 1913.

On my way home, however, I decided that I could not then allow the use of the knife on my leg, so immediately telephoned to my husband, asking him to engage a Christian Science practitioner. Although unable to get to and from the surgeon's office alone, I found strength to go about seven miles on street cars to the office of the practitioner, and the second day following I realized for the first time what Truth can and does do. It was Christmas day, and as I much desired to see my family, I telephoned the practitioner to that effect. As a result I was enabled to go on four different street cars and spend several hours with my family, also to call on a sick friend who lived up three flights of stairs, and all this without pain or inconvenient fatigue.

My complete healing was slow, as my thought was filled with so-called material laws and its trend was very material. During the period of treatment I was most wonderfully healed of sciatica, from which I had suffered intensely. The pain left instantly, and there has been no return of it. Pleasure in the use of stimulants was overcome in the first treatment, and I have never taken an alcoholic stimulant since. As understanding has become clearer I have gained relief from weakness resulting from a major operation performed before I knew the power of Truth. Many other material benefits have come to me and mine, but we are most grateful for the mental freedom which a realization of the truth has brought into our lives.

I am very grateful for all our church services, especially the midweek meeting, as the reading from the desk and the testimonies given always provide that food which is so much needed. The periodicals are a source of much benefit, each serving a purpose. Science and Health has proven a blessing that words cannot estimate, in opening up for me the Bible and making it daily a source of courage and spiritual uplift. I had not read it for many years and had not attended church for fifteen; but not more than four or five services have been missed since the first Science service we attended on Christmas eve, 1913. The lectures are also much appreciated; in fact the system of education of the Christian Science movement is wonderful in its breadth. For it all we owe never ending gratitude to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy. I daily thank our heavenly Father-Mother God for the many blessings received through the study of Christian Science.

Susie Eberdt Hoomes, Chicago, Ill.

I hereby corroborate the above testimony of my wife, and might add that she has also been healed of nervousness of long standing. Before this blessed truth was presented to her she was unable to compose herself except for a short period of time.

Words are inadequate to express the gratitude I owe to God for the manifold blessings received since Christian Science came into my life nearly three years ago. I have been healed of profanity of many years' standing, and of the liquor habit covering a period of thirty years. Without any special treatment both of these left me. Pyorrhœa, a disease considered incurable by most dentists, has been overcome. Prior to coming into Christian Science I had lost several teeth because of this malady, but to-day there is not a trace of it left. I have also been healed of many minor ailments and have had many demonstrations in business problems. My disposition has been much improved, and altogether I am a better man in every way. Surely I am profoundly grateful to Jesus the Wayshower, and to Mrs. Eddy, who has revealed to us this wonderful truth that makes men free.

WILL PENDLETON HOOMES.

From childhood I was afflicted with what is known as tuberculosis of the hip and spine, and had had two operations when I was but two years old. When Christian Science came to me I was in great pain and confined to my bed. I was wearing a brace day and night, and the doctor said I would have to wear it for eight years at least. Instead of my days growing brighter, they were getting darker. The doctor finally called in a specialist, who said my only hope lay in an operation; but I dreaded the thought and wished myself away from this world. At the darkest moment my sister asked me to try Christian Science, saying she knew it would help me. When I began treatment I had thirteen open wounds; but these were healed in four weeks, and in six months the brace was discarded. After the third treatment I got out of bed and began to help my mother with the household duties. I have not had a sick day since.

I am full of thankfulness to our dear Father-Mother God for this wonderful healing, and feel very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for giving us this beautiful truth, which has put joy and health into my life. Christian Science is daily bringing happiness and harmony to my whole family, and this adds to my gratitude.—KATHRYN ARMBRUSTER, New York, N. Y.

When I first took notice of Christian Science, it was with an attitude of contempt, though I had never looked between the covers of Science and Health. When I finally gained the consent of mortal egotism to regard Christian Science with some respect, it was not for physical healing, but because of the effect of its teachings upon others. I have however frequently experienced its beneficial effects in relieving pain and restoring health and comfort. For many years I suffered intensely from nervous headache. Twenty years ago I was released from that bondage through Christian Science, and although for several years there were occasional symptoms of the trouble, a little application of the truth was sufficient to cause them to vanish like mist before the sun.

I also suffered from the frequent presence of gallstones; but one treatment in Christian Science freed me from that trouble seventeen years ago, and I have had no symptom of it since. Among my acquaintances there is much comment on my general health, strength, and activity, on my youthful disposition and temperament, although I am past sixty-five years of age. When engaged in manual labor I have worked side by side with men of less than half my age, and my part of the work has never fallen behind.

The experience which has afforded me the greatest peace and joy was in regard to my work. Christian Science has inspired me with moral courage to do that which I clearly ought to do, regardless of criticism. As a young man I obtained a university education, and for many years taught with success; but like many others I thought teaching too slow, and so tried other lines of work, with only indifferent results. I had qualified for a professional vocation, but followed vocations requiring hard manual labor. So long as I continued such lines of industry, no matter how diligently and faithfully I labored, a sense of limitation oppressed me.

When The Christian Science Monitor was established, I began to read it from the very first and have missed but few numbers since, so that I have thus kept in touch with modern developments in school teaching. A year and a half ago my wife persuaded me to resume teaching, although with the exception of occasionally substituting or doing private tutoring I had not taught for many years. With the help of a practitioner it was made clear that such was the right thing to do. I therefore presented my credentials from the university to the state normal school at Gunnison, for which I received full credit, and with a few weeks' attendance, taking modern subjects, I was graduated with a life certificate to teach in any of the public schools of the state. I was the first one of this class to begin teaching after graduation, and have been teaching almost constantly since.

It is a matter of surprise to nearly everybody that one of my age, who had been so long out of the work of teaching, could resume it so easily, and at once take a stand in modern methods even in advance of the average among young teachers. I want to add that the fountain of youth, like the kingdom of heaven, is within.

THOMAS C. CLAYTON, Montrose, Cal.

It is now more than five years since I first became interested in Christian Science. I did not think of it as a healing agent at the time, but after having read a few pages in Science and Health I laid off glasses which had been worn steadily for three years. The physician who examined my eyes had said I should never do without them and would require stronger lenses as I grew older. There has been no return of the eye trouble, nor have I worn the glasses since.

Numerous other healings followed, including the overcoming of chronic stomach disorder. I have relied on nothing but Christian Science since I began its study. I wish especially to say to those who seem to be hampered by the error known as limitation, that our every need has been met through the loving help of a practitioner whom we have never seen. Our understanding has been opened to know that God is an ever present help in trouble, and that our supply is spiritual, not material. I corroborate my husband's statement that while we were looking down for our supply no good results came, but when we turned away from material things and looked only to the one Mind to lead us, our supply came abundantly.

We both enjoy the Monitor, it is so very educational. We are constant readers of the Sentinel and Journal and find our every need is being met by our daily study of Christian Science. To say that we are thankful is far from expressing our appreciation of all the good that has come to us. We can do that only by striving each day to live in accordance with the teachings of divine Love.—MRS. LESLIE CLAYTON.

Every day I feel thankful for the privilege of being a student of Christian Science. I did not become interested in this teaching through any physical healing, but when told of it by a member of my family who became interested while I was away on a long visit, I knew at once it was the religion for which I had been looking; and so it has proved. I was laboring under a sense of self-condemnation because I failed to find what I wanted and what other people seemed to get in other churches. It is such a privilege now to be able to enjoy the study of the Bible and to do this studying intelligently. I have had a great deal of physical healing, some of it instantaneous and some very slow, and I am glad to know of the great Physician who heals all our diseases.

I would like to give one experience which occurred about a year ago, in the hope that it may prove helpful to some one else. In getting ready to go away for the summer I was very busy, and on the day of our departure I was conscious of having a sore throat, but ignored it. After a night on a sleeper, a belated journey the next day, and then a long ride in a cold rain to our destination, I felt very ill. At night I was obviously so sick that my husband was much disturbed, and finally I became fearful myself, as we were far from any help. After I went to bed the thought came to me clearly that I was just as near God there as anywhere, and that He is the only physician needed. Then I worked on mentally, applying my understanding of Christian Science, until in about three-quarters of an hour I was absolutely relieved of all the acute symptoms of pneumonia. I cannot tell how grateful I was to be able to prove the ever presence and availability of divine Love.

This experience taught me that ignoring error is not accomplishing anything; one should meet it squarely, recognize it for what it is, and cast it out. I am indeed grateful for Christian Science.

ALICE DAY BAKER, Indianapolis, Ind.

When quite young I became interested in Christian Science through the healing of a small growth underneath my chin. Although not sufficiently in earnest to hold the truth as a living reality, when trouble or difficulty came I always turned to Science for help and received it. Years went on, and after my marriage and the birth of a little girl I felt more inclined to use this beautiful truth, if not for my own sake for the sake of the child and those about us, as I wanted her to be a Christian Scientist.

Since that time we have had many proofs of God's loving care. When our daughter was two and a half years old she fell against the corner of the stove, breaking her collar bone. As soon as we realized what had happened I telephoned to a practitioner, and in about fifteen minutes the child was laughing again; in a week the soreness was all gone. Numerous other ills have disappeared in the same way. For the physical healing I am grateful, but more so for the mental and moral uplift and for a better understanding of God as a loving Father-Mother, gained through Mrs. Eddy's teachings.—OLIVE E. IVERSON, Victoria, B. C., Canada.

For a long time it has seemed to me that I ought to express publicly, through our publications, my gratitude for the beautiful healing and the many other blessings experienced in Christian Science. This teaching was presented to me three years ago by a friend who handed me a copy of the Sentinel. When reading the testimonies I found one by a woman who had been healed of a disease similar to that from which I suffered. As I read on through the testimonies the light of their truthfulness, and the joy they expressed, made me think, if these people could be healed in Christian Science, why could not I?

I was said to be suffering from intestinal indigestion, organic heart trouble, inflammatory rheumatism, and an internal disease, besides a tumor from which much pain was experienced. Several physicians told me I could not get well; that I could not undergo an operation, as my heart was too weak, and that I must look for the end at any moment. It seemed as if the medicine given me for one disease worked against another. I always took something to make me sleep, but even when the doctor told my family he had done all he could, I still had hope.

About a month after reading the Sentinel I decided to attend the Sunday service at the Christian Science church. I went alone, but met my friend there, and after the meeting asked her where I could find a practitioner, as I wanted help. She gladly introduced me to one, and treatment was begun that day. After the first present treatment I was able to eat solid food, which had been denied me so long, without suffering any distress, but it was three months before I was free from all the ailments. The practitioner was very patient with me in explaining the many seeming contradictions in the Bible, so that it has become an interesting study, whereas before coming into Christian Science it was seldom read, although I was a member of a church.

My healing was complete, and I have never had a return of any of the diseases. Glasses which had been worn for years were laid aside after the third treatment, and I am perfectly well and happy. Never a day passes without my going through the weekly Lesson-Sermon, and the Journal and Sentinel are my companions; in fact I do not have time to read and study anything but Christian Science literature.

I gladly give thanks to God, and am most grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this understanding of the truth; I am also deeply grateful to all who have helped me in Christian Science. I am striving each day to rise into a higher sense of Life and Love.—MRS. L. H. WILLIAMSON, Eatontown, N. J.

With a grateful heart I relate some instances in which I have experienced blessings through Christian Science. Some years ago I was taken with acute stomach trouble, which caused me intense pain for about two days. During this time two doctors were called, but they could give no relief. Then my wife telephoned to a Christian Science practitioner who resided at a distance of some three hundred miles. Immediately after the practitioner began to treat me the pain left, and I have not felt it since. About two years ago my right hand was badly injured in a machine, and the doctor at the hospital where the hand was dressed said it was absolutely necessary to amputate at least one finger. I would not allow him to do so, however, and after about two months' absent treatment from the same Christian Science practitioner, the hand was healed.

Many other difficulties of less importance have been overcome through Christian Science, but above all is the calm and peace of consciousness in knowing that we have a God who is omnipotent Love to lean on. I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy, and admire her courage in bringing this truth to an unsympathetic world and against so many odds.

A. C. PETERSSON, Kalmar, Sweden.

[Translated from the French]

It gives me much joy to express my gratitude for all the benefits I have received through Christian Science. For two years I had medical treatment for a stomach trouble, but despite the physician's care the trouble became aggravated. During the winter of 1915-16 I could not even retain milk, and the physician advised an operation. At that juncture, however, a person with whom my family was acquainted came and talked to me about Christian Science, and I went to see a practitioner, who declared herself ready to lend assistance. I very soon felt better, and as a result of a few treatments was able to eat any food that was placed upon the table. In two months I was healed.

Since my healing took place, all the members of my family have been benefited through Christian Science. My son was taken with appendicitis while doing military service in July, 1916, and as an operation was expected to be performed, he wrote us, asking us to apply for Christian Science treatment in his behalf, as he did not want to submit to an operation. After a few days he was able to join his battalion. My husband, who for years suffered with rheumatism and was obliged every winter to stay in bed for several weeks, has not missed one day's work since becoming acquainted with Christian Science. My eldest daughter has been healed of neurasthenia. She has also experienced healing after a fall on the ice, as a result of which she sprained her ankle.

For all these benefits which we have received, both in a mental and in a physical way, we are very grateful to God; also thankful to all who have helped us, and especially to Mrs. Eddy, who has given to the world this beautiful truth which heals all our infirmities.

MATHILDE RENAUD, Geneva, Switzerland.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. I came into it not for any particular physical healing, but for a change of thought, as I was doing a lot of wrong thinking. When I had been interested in this teaching only four days a sign was given me, showing that divine Love was already at work. From babyhood up to the time I became interested in Christian Science, a period of thirty-five years, I had the habit of biting my finger nails. My parents could not break me of this habit, and my wife had no better results, although I often felt much ashamed.

I had been interested in Christian Science less than a week, when in studying the Lesson-Sermon one night I happened to look at my hands, and saw to my astonishment that the finger nails were fully grown, as any normal nails should be. This healing took place over two years ago, and the desire to bite my nails has entirely disappeared. For this healing I am very grateful, and also for the better understanding of the Bible and of man's relation to God.

ROSWELL C. WHITMORE, Needham, Mass.

One evening about five years ago I was passing a hall where a lecture on Christian Science was being given. Curiosity led me to enter, and after listening for a time I was convinced that what the lecturer stated was true. The following Sunday I went to the Christian Science reading rooms and began to read the literature.

Some time after this I had a severe illness, and not having enough understanding of Truth to protect myself, I was persuaded to call in a throat specialist. The trouble was diagnosed as laryngitis, and I was told that it would affect the lungs and that there was no hope for me. This was a great shock to my family and myself, but I dismissed the doctor and then went to a Christian Science practitioner for treatment. I had lost my voice and could speak only in a whisper. After having treatment my voice came back, and I felt so uplifted that I went home to comfort my family with the assurance received, namely, that there was hope and life for me.

I felt that I was healed in that first treatment, but a few weeks passed before the full manifestation came. In view of the fact that I had not spoken above a whisper for a year, and was suffering from hemorrhage of the lungs, to me this seemed quite wonderful. I then took my books and the Lesson-Sermons and went to work in earnest. This wonderful change in me so impressed my wife that she said it destroyed all her fear concerning me. She was so convinced that what I had was the truth, that she left her church, and we are now journeying hand in hand on the road which leads to a clearer discernment of Truth.

My healing occurred over two years ago, and it has astonished the physicians and all who knew me, for they see the wonderful change that has taken place. My heart is full of thankfulness to God, also of gratitude to our beloved Leader and to all who have helped me to find this new and true sense of Life. I trust so to live that my life may testify to the fact that the Christ is here on earth.

W. TREMEWAN, Swansea, Wales.

I desire to confirm all that is in the foregoing testimony by my husband. I am very grateful both for his healing and for the revelation of this truth, which has changed our whole outlook on life. We now lean on God alone for our protection and support.—MRS. M. A. TREMEWAN.

Having been interested in Christian Science for about seven years, I feel I have much for which to be grateful, as it has met my every need. One thing in particular I would especially like to mention,—a demonstration over what is known as bloody flux, a disease which sometimes proves fatal. I felt badly one whole day, and tried to work for myself with what understanding I had of Science; but as I kept getting worse I called for help. The first day there was not much relief, for I had let in fear, just as I had two years before when suffering with the same disorder; but when the fear was conquered, the trouble was all overcome.

Another beautiful demonstration was over the effects of contact with poison ivy. I was in such a condition that I could not wear any tight clothing or even get my shoes on, but was healed in less than a week through the faithful work of a practitioner. My eyesight has also greatly improved. A specialist had told me that the optic nerve was practically gone, and that glasses really did no good except to lessen the strain. Now I can see to do finer and closer work without my sewing glasses than I could do before with them, and all my reading is done without their assistance, some of it by very poor gaslight. I feel very grateful to Mrs. Eddy, our beloved Leader, and am thankful for our literature, as it is a great help to all mankind.

JOSEPHINE DOOLY, Kansas City, Mo.

Christian Science came to me sixteen years ago, at a time when I longed and prayed to know and to do what was right, and through its teaching I have gained the peace "which passeth all understanding." I would say to all who are sick and weary that if they will patiently and conscientiously study and apply the teachings of Christian Science, they will gain health and peace. I was healed in one treatment of goiter and anæmia, and have had no return of these troubles. Since then catarrh, chronic headaches, backache, sore feet, and many other ailments have been overcome. I am grateful for all these experiences of healing, but more so for the overcoming of hatred, jealousy, envy, and other phases of sin.

I rejoice daily for the understanding of God and the Bible which I have gained through the study of the Christian Science literature. During the past year I have had more time to study Mrs. Eddy's books and have gained in spiritual understanding. In Science and Health (p. 367) Mrs. Eddy writes, "I long to see the consummation of my hope, namely, the student's higher attainments in this line of light." I am endeavoring to do my part in fulfilling this hope.

From Our Exchanges

[Shailer Matthews in The Constructive Quarterly]

The ethics of Jesus, his faith in a loving God as well as in a God of justice, his insistence upon the superiority of the personal over the economic, have long since passed beyond the limits of any ecclesiasticism, and too often unrecognized have become a part of the democratic tendency itself. The church ought to seize upon and adapt itself to this fact. The preacher of righteousness should be possessed of a contagious idealism that shall spread beyond the limits of his own immediate congregation into the social movements of the day.

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, D.Litt., in The Christian Commonwealth]

Who is the angel of the new day, its dawn now red with sacrifice, but dimly radiant with the promise of a better time to be? Who is it that holds out the only hope of a world made wiser by its folly and nobler by its suffering? Who is it that has haunted our hearts during these bitter days, his keen sword felt in our sharp questionings, his ineffable touch softening our sorrow, his presence made manifest in the new crucifixion of humanity? It is the eternal Christ.

[John A. Hutton, D.D., in The Christian World]

It is too soon to forecast on what new basis the general life will be resumed. But it is the very time for saying to ourselves and to one another what the basis was of that civilization which has just failed. We might put our experience on the tombstone of that immense fabric of knowledge and science and human pride which is now dying in agony, and write for the guidance of the generations to come an old line of wisdom: "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it."

[The Methodist Recorder]

Of the things that used to divide the churches,—doctrine, snobbery, politics, and organization,—the last is the most stubborn to-day. More than anything else it thwarts the universal desire for the undoing of "our unhappy divisions." Discussions of reunion always center in the question, How shall the church be governed?

[The Christian Work]

One of the most deadly temptations in life is to mistake a thoroughfare for a terminus, and to regard what is intended to be a means as an ultimate end. When we make a material thing a terminus, we only exist; when we make the material a thoroughfare to the spiritual, we begin to live.

sent?" If sent, how shall they preach, convert, and heal multitudes, except the people hear?

The spiritual sense of truth must be gained before Truth can be understood. This sense is assimilated only as we are honest, unselfish, loving, and meek. (Spirituality of Scripture) In the soil of an "honest and good heart" the seed must be sown; else it beareth not much fruit, for the swinish element in human nature uproots it. Jesus said: "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." The spiritual sense of the Scriptures brings out the scientific sense, and is the new tongue referred to in the last chapter of Mark's Gospel.

Jesus' parable of "the sower" shows the care our Master took not to impart to dull ears and gross hearts the spiritual teachings which dulness and grossness could not accept. Reading the thoughts of the people, he said: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine."

It is the spiritualization of thought and Christianization of daily life, in contrast with the results of the ghastly farce of material existence; it is chastity and purity, (Unspiritual contrasts) in contrast with the downward tendencies and earthward gravitation of sensualism and impurity, which really attest the divine origin and operation of Christian Science. The triumphs of Christian Science are recorded in the destruction of error and evil, from which are propagated the dismal beliefs of sin, sickness, and death.

The divine Principle of the universe must interpret the universe. God is the divine Principle of all that represents Him and of all that really exists. (God the Principle of all) Christian Science, as demonstrated by Jesus, alone reveals the natural, divine Principle of Science.

To meet the call for an edition of the Christian Science textbook which can be carried conveniently in the small pocket of a soldier's or sailor's uniform, a Vest Pocket Edition has been published. This small volume of 700 pages is printed on Bible paper and bound in khaki-colored ooze leather with overlapping edges, stamped in gold.

Single copy, $3.00. Twelve or more, each $2.75. This new edition is now in the hands of the binders, but orders will be placed on file and filled in rotation.

Conquering the World

ROBERT NALL

WHAT should be the attitude of every Christian Scientist toward the world, using the term as relating to those beliefs, precepts, and practices which are hostile to spirituality? Where is the line of demarcation, if any, to be drawn between voluntary seclusion, or self-isolation, and that cooperation with and assent to community interests and activities, many of which are necessary to meet human needs? What is the standard ever to be kept in view? How far are we to be in the world, fulfilling faithfully every legitimate obligation, and yet making no compromise with all that is right and true by intimate association with the materiality of the world? Who or what shall guide us to a righteous conclusion? And how shall we be so certain of the wisdom and justice of that conclusion, looking at it not only from a personal standpoint, but from its effect on our fellow men, that it becomes an unfaltering conviction toward which we could never dream of being recreant?

It is possible to determine this question without resorting to anything akin to casuistry or sophistry. There are great truths laid down in the Bible and in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, which as emanations from divine Principle we may all act upon without reservation or fear of being misled. But it is necessary that these truths shall be interpreted with that spiritual understanding which becomes the "light of the world" to each individual in proportion to his fidelity to Principle.

Perplexity sometimes arises from the belief that the Christly or spiritual life should be strictly reclusive. It is a temptation often coincident with deep earnestness and a heartfelt desire to do God's will by following loyally in the footsteps of the Master. Men and women of all periods of history have experienced this, and many have been drawn into the bonds of asceticism and mysticism, prompted by the feeling that—"the world forgetting, by the world forgot"—they could live in close communion with God, and thus the sooner overcome the demands of the flesh.

The error here—for it is an error to be carefully guarded against—is in supposing that self-repression or self-ostracism is necessarily conducive to spirituality, and is therefore well pleasing to God. In Science, spirituality, the essence of the Christianity of Christ Jesus, is not a mental attitude or pose, or religious demureness, or a species of affectation that is in danger of drifting into self-worship because it centers thought unduly on the material self rather than upon God. Spirituality is born of Spirit, matured by Spirit, and must be ever nurtured by Spirit if it is to manifest those qualities which it is its legitimate purpose to make practical in the redemption of the human family.

This purpose is altruism of the highest kind. It is both subjective and objective. It feeds on Christ, Truth, the living bread come down from heaven, and it is the normal state of the real man of God's creation. But it must ever be seeking the lost and finding them. It is the impulse that would go out into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. It would be inconsistent with its own nature if it could not be active. The passivity which refuses to live for others because it may be tainted by contact with the evil thought of the world, will rapidly degenerate into selfishness. He who thus makes himself an exile fetters his capacities and formulates an ethical code of his own which will make him a poor, emaciated being.

It is true there are Scriptural texts which seem by a superficial interpretation to justify a rigid withdrawal from relatives and friends, as well as from much human activity, even that which takes the form of simple pleasures. But to the active Christian Scientist these texts are instead spiritual stimulants. They are a call to rise above the mesmerism of mortal sense into the consciousness of Truth. They uplift and energize. They so expand the spiritual vision that the depth and height and majesty of Christian service is seen in its reflected glory—the presence and power of infinite Love.

Scriptural exegesis from a material standpoint too often promotes mental confusion, but the Christian Scientist will not err if he ever remembers the fundamental bases of his faith and is careful not to swerve one inch from these. By so doing he can rightfully interpret those passages to be found in the epistles which enjoin us to avoid every appearance of evil, and the statement, "All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient," or "profitable," as another rendering has it. We should know that no man liveth to himself, for his influence can never be repressed. With these may be associated the injunction which establishes a rule of action—that in all we do we should do it to the glory of God. It is necessary to remember that man is "the temple of the living God," and that there should be a separation in thought and practice from all which would tend to impede spiritual growth, diminish the desire for God's service, and prevent one from throwing off every weight which might hinder spiritual understanding or cause a brother to stumble.

Because Christian Science is the practical exemplification of Christianity as Jesus taught and lived it, and as it was revealed to our Leader and by her unfolded to mankind, its standard of perfection cannot be lowered. One may therefore safely take it as a rule of daily life that anything which does not conform to that standard is tainted by worldliness and needs to be carefully scrutinized. This applies to intercourse with our fellow men equally with our cooperation in any human activity. Worldliness is a demand and rule of the material senses, and wherever it is manifested it partakes of mental qualities which have no affinity with godliness.

To some this may appear to be an exalted spiritual attitude which is more idealistic than practical, but this is a subtle temptation which can only be met by remembering that if we would be loyal to Truth, and be faithful coworkers with God in the salvation of the world, we shall not only ever seek to keep our mental home pure and bright, but also to be molded and fashioned after the pattern of him who found it possible to overcome the world, yet at the same time to fulfill his divine mission in the world. Victory over the world came to Jesus as a necessary consequent of his perfect spiritual consciousness, his obedience to God, and his fidelity to Principle.

It is here that Christian Scientists may learn a lesson of the deepest value. We are privileged to be the exponents of a new-old religion which covers the whole ground of redemptive work. The power of Spirit is the only power, and in so far as we reflect Spirit we can have no relation with that which is unlike Spirit or the spiritual idea. That is our highest qualification for Christly work. How otherwise can we be channels for the healing streams of Love?

Our beloved Leader's call is clear and insistent. Read her familiar words in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 110): "Beloved children, the world has need of you, . . . it needs your innocence, unselfishness, faithful affection, uncontaminated lives." Who can judge the far-reaching influence of a consecrated life? Who does not know men and women who, while moving through the world, are spiritual lights, radiating health and peace and comfort everywhere? Such are they who, because they are seeking to be reflectors of infinite Love, and to be quickened by the spirit of Truth, are mastering sense-testimony instead of permitting it to master them. They are, as the apostle said, using the world and not abusing it. The world is every day better for their devotion and their pure lives. They are panoplied in faith and love, and ever conscious of the perfect idea. To them there is nothing common or unclean that may not be regenerated and transfigured by Love. And it is the demonstration of divine Love in the world which is the Christian Scientist's highest ministry.

The Christian Scientist and Transient Literature

FREDERICK REED

MUCH of the writer's personal correspondence of late has hinged upon the attitude of individual Christian Scientists toward current literature other than the publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society. Addiction to the regular perusal of the sensational newspaper, the current fiction magazine, and the habit generally of feeding upon non-Christian Science literature, have too often monopolized the time for study which, it seems to the writer, might better be given to provable expressions of Truth, such as one finds in our authorized current literature.

Our Leader recognized this situation when she wrote in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 7): "Looking over the newspapers of the day, one naturally reflects that it is dangerous to live, so loaded with disease seems the very air. These descriptions carry fears to many minds, to be depicted in some future time upon the body. A periodical of our own will counteract to some extent this public nuisance; for through our paper, at the price at which we shall issue it, we shall be able to reach many homes with healing, purifying thought." Indeed, it is difficult to understand how one who has had a taste of the nourishing bread of Life can be satisfied, even temporarily or in part, by a diet consisting of the husks of materialistic literature. For this reason the author ventures to offer the substance of a letter recently written to a correspondent, who stands as a type of many occasional readers of the Monitor and of the Sentinel, who are yet unawakened regarding the vital importance of these periodicals to every Christian Scientist, especially at the present juncture in world events.

To the correspondent it was said: You will find the love of reading and studying the Bible, and all authorized Christian Science literature, growing in your consciousness as you persist in reading and studying. One needs to be healed of the love of materialistic reading and study quite as much as one needs healing from physical pain; and literature based on anything less than the allness of God and the nothingness of matter must be materialistic. Knowledge acquired from such literature is really not knowledge at all, and must be cast out of one's consciousness before the full power of Truth, the real knowledge of Spirit, can take possession of one's life. At first blush this seems too sweeping a statement, but I believe that the facts justify it.

Now, if we had no substitute for this literature, there would be some justification for remonstrance. The fact is, however, that the Christian Science publications offer not only all that the materialistic press assumes to offer, but vastly more. Take the Monitor, for example. I believe I am safe in asserting that the citizen who reads that paper every day, and with open mind, acquires a better comprehension of world affairs—political, social, religious, literary, financial, and scientific—than can possibly be gained from an equally careful perusal of other current literature. The whole ground is covered by men and women eminently qualified, not only from the viewpoint of accepted worldly standards, but, what is vitally more important, from the viewpoint of the Christian Scientist. Anyone who persistently follows up this literature need look at no other in order to take his place with any man as one thoroughly informed on world affairs.

Moreover, one feature of this Christianly scientific literature, a distinctive and exclusive one, is the masterful uncovering of error within its pages. This is always important, and doubly so at this present time of unique world disturbance; for although the present world war and its inevitable corollary, confusion, may appear to be in process of settlement through external means, that is, through the struggle of opposing brute forces, it can be permanently settled only on the spiritual plane and through manifestation of the one and only power, God, Love, Spirit.

To this end the uncovering of error is a necessary precedent. The Christian Science publications to-day are thus "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." Christian Scientists in particular, and thoughtful men of the world, are now having their eyes opened upon a clear view of the error to be overcome as the final outcome of the present world struggle.

When the vital importance of this scientific uncovering of error dawns upon the consciousness of all professed Christian Scientists, they will hasten to devote to the conscientious reading and study of the Christian Science publications that time and energy hitherto misapplied, if not positively wasted, on profitless, because materialistic, literature of the present day. But the question at once arises, How can such acquaintance with error's methods be of any use to me, a layman, far removed from the activities of this world struggle? Because you, as a Christian Scientist, enlisted under the Captain of our salvation, have the one sure weapon, not only of defense, but also of attack, for the annihilation of all error.

Does not this suggest a work, possibly the work, allotted to the ever increasing body of Christian Scientists,—work in which each one, whoever he may be, wherever his lot may be cast, whatever his apparent limitations, may consciously participate? For is not the great world consciousness sick, and sick unto death? Also, is there not urgent call for the great Physician? And is not the Church of Christ, Scientist, through its individual membership, able to acquaint mankind with Principle, the source of healing and salvation? Through numberless instructions in her writings, our Leader has explicitly set forth the method of this healing, and with such definiteness and clearness that "wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."

Let us, then, be faithful to this responsibility put upon us, each one prayerfully, devotedly seeking guidance in the faithful discharge of his duty, his privilege, as a well-equipped soldier whose eyes have been opened and whose spirit has been illumined for active participation in this Armageddon of the Lord.

The Forward March

NELLE S. NEWELL

A CHRISTIAN SCIENCE church is founded upon Principle, and its members have come into this relationship because they have seen proofs of God's power. They are those who, wearied of theories and false gods, turn with hope to a higher concept, and find health, comfort, light, and love in a measure never dreamed of before.

United in one Mind, these travelers from material beliefs to spiritual understanding start their journey with lighter baggage than they have ever before carried, but there are none who have left off all the old, false ways of thinking. As they earnestly seek and strive to measure up to the requirements of this new-old religion, they may not all see the way in equal degree; but in proportion as each is faithful in following divine guidance and in keeping to the straight path, with the sunlight of Truth to dispel all shadows, one by one the shackles will drop away and the burdens lighten. Marching onward with firm step and with added confidence, such are enabled to give loving counsel and aid to those who are struggling with a heavier load; and thus the journey is made clearer and easier for all.

The provisions made by our Leader for advancing steps in Christian Science are wise beyond human ken. Then we should not let personal opinions enter, to delay the operations of Truth and serve error's purposes. What is a building fund but the nucleus of pure truth maintained by a church; and can this be depleted by aiding in the upbuilding of the cause through any channel? Is the structure which a congregation rears limited to dollars, mortar, plaster, earth? Let us lift our eyes and see that every activity for good, every thought of love, every healing accomplished, every sin overcome, every right idea displacing a wrong one, every step of progress, whether manifest in our periodicals, in the individual or the general uplifting, is church building. And to the extent that each one of us, or a church as a whole, perceives this and unites in one common effort with all others, to that extent are we revealing the church triumphant.

Can we afford to quibble over personal questions in our business meetings, and thus close our doors to light and love? Such meetings are for the purpose of wise procedure and united activity in the work of a church. Each member in humble, fervent prayer, seeking a higher concept in order to spread the seeds of Truth, should bring his tithe of good and assist lovingly, intelligently, in decisions; express himself kindly; vote wisely, and thereafter be silent and satisfied with the result. For in righteous obedience to such leading there could not come inharmony, and there should be no one tempted to voice, after a conclusion has been reached, that it was not Principle which had made that decision. Christian Scientists should never be tricked in this way into allowing the whispers of resisting forces to enter their thought and rend asunder the good accomplished, thus delaying the next forward step. Not one can be spared from the fold. There should be no dissenting voice, no channel for error to use in attempts to disrupt Christian Science churches. We should have, as our Hymnal says (p. 68),—

> One holy Church, one army strong,
> One steadfast high intent,
> One working band, one harvest song,
> One King Omnipotent!

Only as the world sees the fruits of love, holiness, and unity expressed in healing will the earth weary be lured to the doors of our churches and enter, there finding the peace they need and earnestly desire. Let Christian Scientists forget self, and with larger vision bless the entire race with the glories of an applied religion. Criticism, human will, jealousy, personal following, are all arguments and avenues of erring mortal mind; hence, in reality, powerless. And they must go down before calm, unswerving trust in Principle and undeviating, righteous vigilance for the cause.

The operations of Christian Science reach to the remotest ends of the earth, and a blessing received in one place is bound to help everywhere. Can we build the temple of Truth partially or selfishly? On page 79 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Giving does not impoverish us in the service of our Maker, neither does withholding enrich us." We see this to be true when we understand that all we can give is right thought, and that this right thought is from infinite Mind, by which we are continuously supplied in unstinted measure. This cause is universal, confined to no place, and the advancing steps are to be taken by each individual, that he may have his part in the redemption of this world. What a privilege it is to share in giving this marvelous opportunity for refuge from mortal laws and fears, and to find health and enlightenment, such as the sanatorium projected by The Christian Science Benevolent Association will afford.

Can we allow ignorance, indifference, selfishness, or any other evil to claim to separate us from the parent vine? Can we stand idly by and be satisfied to be merely onlookers in the progress of our cause? It is grand to know that in seeming stress and persecution a golden opportunity is at hand; that God is near, and that His work goes steadily on in spite of human resistance. It was in the darkened sepulcher that Jesus overcame the sense of death and gave to the world the proof of his teachings.

Unconscious Disobedience

G. HARRIETTE BLAKE

VERY early in her experience the writer became convinced that extracts of association addresses, copies of private letters, and all other so-called "helps" to the understanding of the teachings of Christian Science, not only were valueless but were definitely prohibited by the provisions of the Manual of The Mother Church. Accordingly everything of this nature in her own possession was destroyed, and on a number of occasions opportunity was afforded to point out this subtle form of error to other young students, resulting in the destruction of a good deal of spurious literature.

After devoting a number of years to the study and practice of Christian Science, a very distressing form of physical disturbance appeared, and continued for many months, notwithstanding the most earnest mental work. It then began to be apparent that some latent error needed to be brought out of its hiding place, and further work to that end was undertaken.

Some weeks later, while looking through a package of clippings, a printed copy of a letter, purporting to have been written by our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and which had been cut from a daily paper, was discovered. In this letter were typographical errors which should have settled the status of the document for any Christian Scientist, in that the meaning of the sentences in which they occurred was so changed thereby as to attribute to our Leader statements which she never could have written. This false form of words was immediately destroyed, and the mental freedom which followed resulted in the disappearance of the physical manifestation above referred to.

This experience shows how frequently we need to ask ourselves what we have in the house; what we are harboring that is not altogether righteous; in what measure we are, consciously or even unconsciously, disobedient. Can it be said of us at any time, "Thou that judgest doest the same things"? We surely need to "pray without ceasing," and to be faithful over the little as well as over the great things, that we may be found watching as well as waiting for the coming of Christ, Truth, to human consciousness.

Only a Sparrow

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE makes a morning land of our splendid world when we see it in the white light of Truth, and the students of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, the beloved Leader of the movement, gather spiritual lessons along whatever paths they go, from hours on to years. One morning I arrived somewhat earlier than usual at the office where I was working. It was the brightest of summer days, and the whole outdoors seemed to smile at me, radiant, glowing with the same gratitude that I felt. Mindful of our Leader's admonition, "Action expresses more gratitude than speech" (Science and Health, p. 3), I said within my heart, "Dear Father, if there is any way I can serve Thee in these moments before taking up my tasks for the day, I will be glad—whatever it is that comes for me to do."

Immediately after, apparently through no volition of my own and with no definite purpose in view, I walked across the hall to a suite of untenanted offices. In one room there were two windows side by side, facing on the same wide stone ledge. The window to the right was open, the one to the left was closed. A sparrow had come into the empty room seeking a transient shelter for the night. Doubtless since the first break of day it had fluttered breathlessly and striven with all the strength of wild wings in a heartbreaking effort to get through the closed window. There was a last pitiful flurry as I entered and came close, and then the struggle was done. It sat on the sill utterly exhausted with its efforts to be free, yet looking up at me with bright eyes; it did not move, even when the shadow of my hand fell across it.

And so I lifted up the little, weary, ruffled thing—slowly that there might be no new paroxysm of fear, carefully and surely that there might be no hurt—and took it away from the barrier, placing it gently on the stone ledge outside the open window, where it could sense its freedom in the blowing breeze. We looked at each other, the sparrow and I, for a little longer, considering. Then, as life without called, the sparrow flew across the roofs to its own place and I went back to mine.

Oh, that sparrow! All the time since the glimmer of dawn it had been endeavoring to pass a barrier it did not, could not at the instant, comprehend. The world it knew and loved was in plain sight,—sky and tree and housetop,—and yet a cruel, merciless barrier reared itself between, keeping the tiny bird from freedom and food, from song and joy—everything before its very eyes. Other sparrows were flying here and there, high and low, rejoicing in life and living, and still—the barrier. All the while the way to freedom and happiness was so near, so clear. Only to cease the frenzy of panting effort, only a poising of wings, a turning in the right direction, and there was nothing in the way of freedom. The same stone ledge high above the city street, the same bright world before that other window—and nothing in the way.

And when, after the sparrow had done its utmost and had accomplished nothing, a loving hand closed down upon it, who knows what dread and despair filled the moment? That hand may well have stood for a final crushing out,—the end. If its shadow while yet open held thoughts of terror, the darkness of the closed hand surely could only mean death. What greater joy could there be for a sparrow, indeed, than to have the hand open; to find itself, no longer confused, no longer weary, in the warmth of the sun, the stir of the breeze, glad and free? A thought inspired by love had come at the right moment, as always, when there was no strength for wild, agonizing rushes hither and thither, stunning shocks against wall and ceiling, futility and delay. Love met the need; not too soon and not too late. Did not Jesus say, "One of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father"? And the Father-Mother God, infinite intelligence, infinite Love, is never too late.

Shall we not know this? Shall we not cease from striving, and rest? What mortal sense fears, may be only the approaching hand of Love. And what follows, whatever the seeming, is not and never can be a cruel crushing of upward soaring aspirations,—never a maimed hope, never a sick heart, never the darkness of death. The hand of Love closes over us, then opens, to give freedom forevermore. And so we find ourselves. Let us then rest, that we may be the readier for the finding,—the freedom; the stronger when we launch out on the wind of God's wise purpose into the sunlight of Soul.

Love, the Healer

ELIZABETH P. SKINNER

LOVE as divine Principle is comprehended only as we grow in the understanding of the qualities and characteristics of infinite Mind. There need be no arduous thinking about Love, since the consciousness of Love is not gained through any amount of logical deductions. "Science," Mrs. Eddy says, "denies all disease, heals the sick, overthrows false evidence, and refutes materialistic logic" (Science and Health, p. 120); therefore such logic is not embraced in spiritual intuition or the apprehension of Truth. Truth is so simple in nature that its very simplicity is a stumblingblock to mortal sense in the way of complete understanding, and the Love that is Truth is little understood.

Spiritual sense is the transparency through which Love may be seen; the unselfish of heart and pure in nature are the clear transparencies through which shines the light of Love. God's man reflects the purity of perfect Mind. Mortals are impure in the ratio of their belief in the power, life, and substance of matter. We are pure in the degree that divine Love is expressed by us in tenderness and impartial kindness, in showing compassion toward the sinner and binding up the wounds of the broken-hearted with the gentleness of true sympathy. It is Love that regenerates and saves. their lives to God, whose natures are illumined with the wisdom of perfect Love, can discern the latent good in mankind, no matter how deeply hidden by mortal belief.

Upon the spiritual heights of Love we lose sight of person in the revelation of Principle, the understanding grown beautiful with Love's wisdom. The robe of Truth is seamless; mortal analysis never reveals unity and harmony, for materialistic logic kills the spirit. Such logic does not reach the heart, and it can never make life worth the living; whereas Love, touching the heart of man, makes his whole life blossom into harmony. The wisdom of God opens the floodgates of the heart, and the peace of Love displaces doubt and despair. Mere logic, though apparently clean-cut, never heals, and is of no use in times of distress, of pain and sorrow; while the oil of Love poured into the wound by the hand of compassion gives peace and relief. Love, not logic, leads the wanderer home. Love, not human logic, sits by the couch of suffering and sheds the light of hope upon the troubled waters. Love is the bow of promise transforming the clouds into glistening gold. Love is the strong arm encircling the sufferer.

A manifestation of wisdom without love is an attempt to divide the seamless robe; but Love that is Truth endows with the highest wisdom all who reflect it. Love and wisdom blend in eternal harmony; their union is indissoluble in Truth: "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Love is the very breath of life. The ability to bless others is in proportion to the perfectness of our reflection of Love; if this ability is small, we should look to see that the clouds of carnal sense—"envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness"—are not obscuring this reflection; and if they are, let us cleanse self from everything that would hinder the passage of infinite Love.

The law of Love is creative, an unfolding of the true and beautiful, blending all its creations, making one grand choral note of harmony. The spirit of Love, manifest in the kindly deed, will lead hundreds into the truth while one is being reasoned into the kingdom of God through logical deductions. The manifestation of Love through our lives will surely, though perhaps slowly, awaken others to desire spirituality. Love asks no return. It is a continual blessing, and is not self-conscious. Love is a constant revelation of the kingdom of God within us,—an unfoldment whereby we lose sight of self in the reflection and radiation of our living Principle, for only as self is laid on the altar is human love lost in the divine. Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in The Republican, Springfield, Mass.]

The review of a book against Christian Science in The Republican was remarkable at least in this: it failed to mention that the book was written by a clergyman. Until now the motive, bias, and interest of one who assails another's religion have been considered important. In this instance, as in more than a few others, active opposition began when some of the author's congregation left his church by reason of their preference for Christian Science. From this beginning, the book in question followed the ordinary course of its kind. It put forward the usual claim, different only in details, of special qualification to speak against Christian Science; it set up the usual array of facts (actual and other) which have been compiled by the combined efforts of opponents since Christian Science first attracted members of other churches; it adopted many or most of the misrepresentations and misinterpretations of Mrs. Eddy's history and teaching that are to be found in other books written for the same purpose, and it inserted about the usual amount of favorable matter to save the book from instant rejection by readers who would look for some evidence of fairness.

In one respect the book in question is commendable, or comparatively so. That is to say, it is written in a comparatively inoffensive manner; it does not hurl abusive nouns on every page and stretch offensive adjectives from one topic to the next. In other respects this book is like the others on the same shelf. But it has a special grievance or complaint, which is that Christian Science takes people out of "the church" and away from "historic Christianity." Since this accusation has been made by other writers and is made continually in parochial conversations, it merits a brief examination.

What is "the church" out of which people are said to be taken by Christian Science? This question is begged by opponents, though it is evidently pertinent, and though it is given special interest by the fact that a large number of churches severally and exclusively claim to be "the church." The Century dictionary imparts this relevant information: "What constitutes a Christian church according to the Scriptures is a question on which Christian denominations widely differ." One fact, however, should be plain to all observers, and it is of greater moment than mere decrease or increase of denominational numbers. This fact is that the people who unite with the Church of Christ, Scientist, do so for the purpose of participating in the activities of that institution which they have found to be doing the most of the works of Christ. Said Mrs. Eddy of what she regarded as the true church: "We can unite with this church only as we are new-born of Spirit, as we reach the Life which is Truth and the Truth which is Life by bringing forth the fruits of Love,—casting out error and healing the sick" (Science and Health, p. 35). The more anyone unites with this kind of church the better for him and for all mankind.

And what is the "historic Christianity" which people are said to leave when they become Christian Scientists? This question also is begged by opponents, though its pertinence is palpable, and though there must be more than fifty-seven varieties of historic Christianity. Is the kind in question the Christianity of the New Testament? Or is it the Christianity of the earlier or the medieval creeds? Or is it the Christianity of the seventeenth century? In his "Rise of Modern Religious Ideas" Professor McGiffert takes the Christianity of the seventeenth century for his contrast with written by our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and which had been cut from a daily paper, was discovered. In this letter were typographical errors which should have settled the status of the document for any Christian Scientist, in that the meaning of the sentences in which they occurred was so changed thereby as to attribute to our Leader statements which she never could have written. This false form of words was immediately destroyed, and the mental freedom which followed resulted in the disappearance of the physical manifestation above referred to.

This experience shows how frequently we need to ask ourselves what we have in the house; what we are harboring that is not altogether righteous; in what measure we are, consciously or even unconsciously, disobedient. Can it be said of us at any time, "Thou that judgest doest the same things"? We surely need to "pray without ceasing," and to be faithful over the little as well as over the great things, that we may be found watching as well as waiting for the coming of Christ, Truth, to human consciousness.

Only a Sparrow

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE makes a morning land of our splendid world when we see it in the white light of Truth, and the students of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, the beloved Leader of the movement, gather spiritual lessons along whatever paths they go, from hours on to years. One morning I arrived somewhat earlier than usual at the office where I was working. It was the brightest of summer days, and the whole outdoors seemed to smile at me, radiant, glowing with the same gratitude that I felt. Mindful of our Leader's admonition, "Action expresses more gratitude than speech" (Science and Health, p. 3), I said within my heart, "Dear Father, if there is any way I can serve Thee in these moments before taking up my tasks for the day, I will be glad—whatever it is that comes for me to do."

Immediately after, apparently through no volition of my own and with no definite purpose in view, I walked across the hall to a suite of untenanted offices. In one room there were two windows side by side, facing on the same wide stone ledge. The window to the right was open, the one to the left was closed. A sparrow had come into the empty room seeking a transient shelter for the night. Doubtless since the first break of day it had fluttered breathlessly and striven with all the strength of wild wings in a heartbreaking effort to get through the closed window. There was a last pitiful flurry as I entered and came close, and then the struggle was done. It sat on the sill utterly exhausted with its efforts to be free, yet looking up at me with bright eyes; it did not move, even when the shadow of my hand fell across it.

And so I lifted up the little, weary, ruffled thing—slowly that there might be no new paroxysm of fear, carefully and surely that there might be no hurt—and took it away from the barrier, placing it gently on the stone ledge outside the open window, where it could sense its freedom in the blowing breeze. We looked at each other, the sparrow and I, for a little longer, considering. Then, as life without called, the sparrow flew across the roofs to its own place and I went back to mine.

Oh, that sparrow! All the time since the glimmer of dawn it had been endeavoring to pass a barrier it did not, could not at the instant, comprehend. The world it knew and loved was in plain sight,—sky and tree and housetop,—and yet a cruel, merciless barrier reared itself between, keeping the tiny bird from freedom and food, from song and joy—everything before its very eyes. Other sparrows were flying here and there, high and low, rejoicing in life and living, and still—the barrier. All the while the way to freedom and happiness was so near, so clear. Only to cease the frenzy of panting effort, only a poising of wings, a turning in the right direction, and there was nothing in the way of freedom. The same stone ledge high above the city street, the same bright world before that other window—and nothing in the way.

And when, after the sparrow had done its utmost and had accomplished nothing, a loving hand closed down upon it, who knows what dread and despair filled the moment? That hand may well have stood for a final crushing out,—the end. If its shadow while yet open held thoughts of terror, the darkness of the closed hand surely could only mean death. What greater joy could there be for a sparrow, indeed, than to have the hand open; to find itself, no longer confused, no longer weary, in the warmth of the sun, the stir of the breeze, glad and free? A thought inspired by love had come at the right moment, as always, when there was no strength for wild, agonizing rushes hither and thither, stunning shocks against wall and ceiling, futility and delay. Love met the need; not too soon and not too late. Did not Jesus say, "One of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father"? And the Father-Mother God, infinite intelligence, infinite Love, is never too late.

Shall we not know this? Shall we not cease from striving, and rest? What mortal sense fears, may be only the approaching hand of Love. And what follows, whatever the seeming, is not and never can be a cruel crushing of upward soaring aspirations,—never a maimed hope, never a sick heart, never the darkness of death. The hand of Love closes over us, then opens, to give freedom forevermore. And so we find ourselves. Let us then rest, that we may be the readier for the finding,—the freedom; the stronger when we launch out on the wind of God's wise purpose into the sunlight of Soul.

Love, the Healer

ELIZABETH P. SKINNER

LOVE as divine Principle is comprehended only as we grow in the understanding of the qualities and characteristics of infinite Mind. There need be no arduous thinking about Love, since the consciousness of Love is not gained through any amount of logical deductions. "Science," Mrs. Eddy says, "denies all disease, heals the sick, overthrows false evidence, and refutes materialistic logic" (Science and Health, p. 120); therefore such logic is not embraced in spiritual intuition or the apprehension of Truth. Truth is so simple in nature that its very simplicity is a stumblingblock to mortal sense in the way of complete understanding, and the Love that is Truth is little understood.

Spiritual sense is the transparency through which Love may be seen; the unselfish of heart and pure in nature are the clear transparencies through which shines the light of Love. God's man reflects the purity of perfect Mind. Mortals are impure in the ratio of their belief in the power, life, and substance of matter. modern religious ideas, and calls it "historic orthodoxy." He adds, however, that it has "gradually suffered disintegration, and is to-day widely, and in greater or less part, discredited within those very communions" with whom it was orthodox. From the same book and from Doctor Curtis's "History of Creeds and Confessions of Faith" it is to be observed that the communion represented by the author of the book that furnished the occasion for this letter is among those which nominally, but not actually, hold to the orthodoxy that was orthodox in the seventeenth century. Hence, instead of assailing Christian Science, he would better define and explain his own position.

As for the position of Christian Science, it does indeed differ much from that which is called "historic Christianity;" but it is identical with that which is set forth in the New Testament. Even the writer of the book in question admits that "Christian Scientists are among the few people in the land who read their Bible every day," and that "Christian Scientists are probably the most assiduous Bible readers in the world." So long as this is true, Christian Scientists will continue to practice the historic Christianity that is both original and permanent. Moreover, to quote a prediction made by Mrs. Eddy (Science and Health, p. 329), "as time moves on, the healing elements of pure Christianity will be fairly dealt with; they will be sought and taught, and will glow in all the grandeur of universal goodness."

[B. W. Parmenter in The Lawton (Okla.) News]

The revivalist holding local services is reported as saying that the Savior never contradicted himself; that he did not "give a gospel of a vicarious atonement for sin on a bloody cross to eleven disciples and a gospel of no sin and no atonement to Mary Baker Eddy." Mrs. Eddy does not teach "no atonement." On page 96 of "Miscellaneous Writings" by Mary Baker Eddy is the following: "Do I believe in the atonement of Christ? I do; and this atonement becomes more to me since it includes man's redemption from sickness as well as from sin. I reverence and adore Christ as never before." All through her writings she sustains the doctrine of atonement, and she sets forth her position, I submit, as clear as the English language can make it. Why then would not a minister of the gospel take her at her plain words and give them the plain meaning that ought to be given them?

As to the assertion that Mrs. Eddy teaches "no sin," permit me to say that at every church service, by her direction, the entire congregation prays in unison to be delivered from evil. In the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist (Art. VIII, Sect. 4), she says, "It shall be the duty of every member of this Church to pray each day: 'Thy kingdom come;' let the reign of divine Truth, Life, and Love be established in me, and rule out of me all sin." On page 19 of the same book, setting forth the objects for which the church was designed, she says it was for the purpose of "healing and saving the world from sin and death." In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 189) she states, "For man to know Life as it is, namely God, the eternal good, gives him not merely a sense of existence, but an accompanying consciousness of spiritual power that subordinates matter and destroys sin, disease, and death;" on page 261 she says that "mortals suffer from the wrong they commit, whether intentionally or ignorantly;" and she adds that "every effect and amplification of wrong will revert to the wrongdoer, until he pays his full debt to divine law, and the measure he has meted is measured to him again, full, pressed down, and running over. Surely 'the way of the transgressor is hard.'" How can any man circulate the report that Mary Baker Eddy either ignores sin or teaches there is no sin. She teaches that spiritual power and the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" destroys and overcomes sin, suffering, grief, the carnal mind, all mortality, the flesh, lust, and the devil, and that there is no other rule or right way to these splendid accomplishments.

[Carl E. Herring in Nebraska State Journal, Lincoln, Neb.]

Under the caption "The Churches," the Journal recently published an opinion that Christian Science is not orthodox. It is quite time that this much abused word orthodox should cease to be the football of every religionist who thinks he has an exclusive formula for getting to heaven. The dictionary definition certainly gives no one church the exclusive right to the term; and under this definition Christian Science clearly has a right to be considered orthodox. The fact is that Christian Science has a double claim, for it not only obeys the command of Jesus to preach the gospel, but also to heal the sick.

The heterodoxy of to-day is the orthodoxy of to-morrow, and every enthusiast or bigot, whichever it may be, asserts a claim for his religion on the basis of fundamentals, when in truth and fact it is only a difference in the understanding of how the problem should be worked out. For example, in the article under review it is naïvely suggested that the writer's church believes in the personality of God. Now it is equally true that Christian Scientists so believe, and therefore up to this point we have only opened the subject, not concluded it. It now becomes incumbent upon the adherent to say what he means by the personality of God, else he has used a phrase that conveys no meaning.

We agree that there is no "patent on good cheer and healing through prayer." Neither is there any patent on the words "personality of God," although there may be on what is meant by the phrase. Mrs. Eddy has very clearly and comprehensively said what she means by that term. Has the Congregational church been equally frank? We do not ask the Congregational church to recognize Christian Science. That is a matter resting in their own province. We do suggest that it would be more seemly to keep in mind the facts of history and recall that only a few short years ago the ancestors of Congregationalists were so unorthodox that they had to migrate to a new country. To this ancestry we owe the establishment of a government where liberty and toleration are the pillars of every hearthstone, and it ill becomes any descendants of the Puritan fathers to assume a strain of dogmatism or tyranny that should be left in the oblivion of history.

The woman of Scripture "was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity." Our critic would no doubt say that this woman was suffering from a physical cause or effect, but Jesus referred to her as one "whom Satan hath bound." Such physical effects are, therefore, Satan's bonds. Certainly they are not creations of God, but the very opposite.

Now Jesus defined Satan as "a liar and the father of it [the lie]." The bond that bound the woman, therefore, was a lie. On the other hand, God is Truth. These statements explain the method of Christian Science healing. Our critic will no doubt admit that Truth is a reality, and if so, the conclusion is inevitable that what Christ, or Truth, casts out is a lie, the opposite of reality. Under such circumstances for our critic to contend for the "existence" and reality of disease and destructive physical causes, is to support Satan and his cause. No other conclusion is logical. Physical cause, so called, is a destructive power, while the omnipotence of God is a sustaining power.

When contending for the "existence" of disease, our critic should understand that the term is not used in Christian Science in the very general way in which it is usually accepted. Mrs. Eddy never said that disease does not seem to have existence to ordinary human sense, but she discovered that its seeming existence has no relation to true existence, which is spiritual, real, and eternal. The Scriptures bear her out on this point.

It will thus be seen that the teaching in Christian Science of the unreality and nonexistence of evil is not a mere theory, but an eternal fact. The understanding of this fact is necessary in order to lay the axe at the very root of evil and cast it out as Jesus did. Nowhere do the Scriptures indicate that Christ Jesus healed sickness and corrected physical deformity on the basis of their reality. He destroyed nothing real when he healed physical conditions, and this shows why they can be corrected by spiritual understanding.

Mrs. Eddy practically summed up the whole question of cause and effect when she wrote: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause. Sin, sickness, disease, and death belong not to the Science of being. They are the errors, which presuppose the absence of Truth, Life, or Love" (Science and Health, p. 207). Our critic says further, "The most important work of the church is spiritual, and yet there is a work along health lines." He believes health to be material. But it can be shown that the words health and holy have their origin in the same root word, and mean the same thing. Health, life, intelligence, and true being are spiritual.

The critic's endeavor to find inconsistencies between Mrs. Eddy's works and the Bible has to do with fundamental questions which at some time occur to every man. These questions relate to the nature of God, the nature of man and man's relation to God, the nature of the universe and man's place in it, the problem of evil in the world. On all of these questions Christian Science differs from the theological views entertained by our ministerial friend. It challenges the correctness of these theological views and invites a reexamination of the Scriptures in the light of a rational and spiritual interpretation thereof.

Mrs. Eddy has given an accurate and scholarly exposition of Genesis (see Science and Health, p. 501), pointing out the real difference between the two accounts of creation therein, the so-called Elohistic and Jehovistic. She has accepted the first or spiritual creation as true and the second or material creation as untrue, since being inconsistent, both cannot be true. She has shown that logically a God who is all-powerful, ever present, and good, can create nothing inconsistent with the attributes of goodness. The conception of a Deity who would or could bring evil and disaster upon His children, or who would cause or permit them to suffer, is out of harmony with the concept of a good God. The universe and all creation, including man, if created by God, must reflect the goodness and perfection of their creator.

That which in human experience belies the goodness and omnipotence of Deity, classed generally as evil and personified in the Bible as Satan, Mrs. Eddy has pointed out is not the creation of a good God, but a false concept which, when seen for what it is, is destroyed. It is proving this fact of the unreality of evil that brings about healing and regeneration. It is difficult for the human mind, steeped in what it is pleased to term the common sense experience of everyday life, to conceive of all creation as wholly spiritual, and particularly to conceive the idea of the unreality of evil. The doctrine of the unreality of evil does not mean that one can indulge in sin, for that would be a recognition of its reality. On the contrary, Christian Science teaches the necessity for constantly eliminating from thought and act every trace of sin. By explaining sin as not having the support of Deity, man is given hope, because he is no longer fighting the inevitable. He is required only to see God as perfect, and man, His image, as perfect. A perception of this truth transforms even human conditions to approximate the divine. This is not a religious, mental, moral, and physical hallucination, as the critic asserts. Abstract as it may sound, it is but the application of a simple truth about God and man; and what is more to the point, it brings results. As in Jesus' day, men are healed of their diseases by learning the good news about God.

[S. T. Downs in Danville (Ind.) Republican]

The necessity for strict adherence by Christian Scientists to the teachings in the Sermon on the Mount may not be so clearly understood by the public as by Christian Scientists. In any event, the statement in a recent issue of your paper that a rumor to the effect that a revivalist had been taken ill suddenly and died in a hospital was thought to be "the dream of some Christian Scientist," would not be made by one familiar with the teachings and practice of Christian Science.

In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy states (p. 271), "The Sermon on the Mount is the essence of this Science," and her writings reiterate over and over again that a Christian Scientist must love his enemies. This revivalist is an avowed enemy of Christian Science, and he has in many ways despitefully used and unwarrantedly persecuted Christian Scientists and their Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and it has been the duty of Christian Scientists to point out this fact through the public press; but a Christian Scientist should, and undoubtedly would, be the last person in the world to cause false rumors to be circulated about any one, even such a bitter enemy as the impassioned revivalist. The true Christian Scientist is praying, "Father, forgive him."

[Hector Wallace Smith in Midlothian Journal, Portobello, Scotland]

Reference is made to Christian Scientists in the column "Religious News and Notes." From what this critic says, he evidently fancies that Christian Scientists have got hold of a "fancy religion." Of one thing I am quite certain, and that is he did not get his information from Christian Scientists, because they will all say that there is nothing whatever fanciful in Christian Science; that it is eminently a practical religion, able to heal the sick and the sinning, and that there are thousands of reliable witnesses who can testify to its power.

On pages 275 and 279 of Miscellany Mrs. Eddy has written the following: "Christian Science can and does produce universal fellowship." "Christian Science reinforces Christ's sayings and doings. The Principle of Christian Science demonstrates peace."

Our National Thanksgiving Hymn

MARY BAKER EDDY

God of the rolling year! to Thee we raise
A nation's holiest hymn in grateful praise!
Plenty and peace abound at Thy behest,
Yet wherefore this Thy love? Thou knowest best!

Thou who, impartial, blessings spreadst abroad,
Thou wisdom, Love, and Truth,—divinely God!
Who giveth joy and tears, conflict and rest,
Teaching us thus of Thee, who knowest best!

Ruler Supreme! to Thee we'll meekly bow,
When we have learned of Truth what Thou doest now—
Why from this festive hour some dear lost guest
Bears hence its sunlit glow—Thou knowest best!

How have our honored dead fought on in gloom!
Peace her white wings will spread over their tomb;
Why waited their reward, triumph and rest,
Till molds the hero form? Thou knowest best!

Shades of our heroes! the Union now is one,
The star whose destiny none may outrun;
Tears of the bleeding slave poured on her breast,
When to be wiped away, Thou knowest best!

Thou who in the Christ hallowed its grief,—
O meekest of mourners, while yet the chief,—
Give to the pleading hearts comfort and rest,
In that benediction which knoweth best!

(From Poems, Copyright, 1910, by Mary Baker Eddy.)

Thankful Hearts

CLOSE upon three hundred years have gone since the Pilgrims celebrated their first Thanksgiving day. Cotton Mather writes: "The harvest which God thus gave to this pious people caused them to set aside another day for solemn Thanksgiving to the glorious Hearer of Prayers." Fifty-three years ago President Lincoln settled its annual observance as a recurring festival for the United States of America. In so doing he made a proclamation which agrees with what is in the hearts of good men the world around, namely, spontaneous joy and gratitude to God at the time of harvest. Paul in speaking to the people of Lystra—they who were fain to do sacrifice to him as Mercurius because of his healing a cripple "who never had walked,"—turned their thoughts to the unseen God, who, he said, "left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness." This statement of Paul was in agreement with the psalmist's vision, "The earth is full of the goodness of the Lord," and the words of the Preacher, "The profit of the earth is for all."

In the sowing and harvesting, in the dying of the wheat grain and its resurrection in green blade and ripened ear of wheat, there may seem to be no mystery to the mind Bœotian to whom has come no vision of what Mrs. Eddy brings out in Science and Health (p. 191): "By its own volition, not a blade of grass springs up, not a spray buds within the vale, not a leaf unfolds its fair outlines, not a flower starts from its cloistered cell." Here, however, is the deep wonder and marvel of continuous creation further unfolded by Mrs. Eddy in Science and Health (p. 508): "The seed is in itself, only as the divine Mind is All and reproduces all—as Mind is the multiplier, and Mind's infinite idea, man and the universe, is the product. The only intelligence or substance of a thought, a seed, or a flower is God, the creator of it."

From this viewpoint to think at all is to be grateful. Every recognition of Mind brings with it a peace and tender joy because a sense of resource, of goodness and abundance, of rich inheritance and enduring life, accompanies the thought of God. This gratitude does not need any formal expression, for it is woven into the texture of living like threads of gold that make a rich tapestry gleam and glow. The heart grateful to God lives in continual happiness. "For 'who is so great a God as our God!' unchangeable, all-wise, all-just, all-merciful; the ever-loving, ever-living Life, Truth, Love: comforting such as mourn, opening the prison doors to the captive, marking the unwinged bird, pitying with more than a father's pity; healing the sick, cleansing the leper, raising the dead, saving sinners" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 124). It is not correct, then, to say that only one day in the year is dedicated to thanksgiving by those who recognize God as the giver of good.

Nevertheless it is prudent and appropriate for the whole nation, upon a set day, to express through united action of its citizens a national thanksgiving. In this Christian Scientists most heartily join; and in their giving of testimonies, which is part of the services provided for in the Manual, they not only give thanks for the grain and fruits of the earth, but also add expressions of gratitude for the heavenly fruits made manifest in the healing of sickness, in recovery from ill habits and sin, and in deliverance from evil. This is for the last Thursday of November in each year in the United States, and for whatever dates are set under other governments. But throughout the whole world there is for the movement the regular weekly thanksgiving every Wednesday provided for in the Manual of The Mother Church, whereby the earth is circled with praise to our God, who has saved our lives "by a great deliverance."

Thanksgiving, then, should be a means whereby men realize their blessings in the very process of giving thanks. Paul's admonition may be made general, "Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving," for thus may be found combined the joy of communion with God and the joy of gratitude. "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name."

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Be of Good Cheer

IN every individual's experience there comes a time when a word of good cheer lightens the heart weighed down by human perplexities. Christian Science shows the way God lifts the burdens of humanity, straightens the path of crookedness, and throws light upon every obstinate problem. That good cheer is essential in the sick room goes almost without saying. Mrs. Eddy writes on page 395 of Science and Health: "An ill-tempered, complaining, or deceitful person should not be a nurse. The nurse should be cheerful, orderly, punctual, patient, full of faith,—receptive to Truth and Love." The application of Principle can also iron out the wrinkles produced by business worry; it points to the present possibility of substituting spiritual ideas for financial cares, thus working out the laws of harmony in the business world. The word of good cheer, whether in the home or on the street, gives a taste of the heavenly riches within. When God's kingdom becomes established within the individual consciousness, the golden opportunities of spreading the kingdom on earth make their appearance.

A cheery Christian Scientist with shining countenance entering the office of one who is downcast can pour out the truth of compassionate love so abundantly that the mental atmosphere of that office will be changed. A smile may dissipate the wet blanket of discouragement more quickly than a sermon. The torch of good cheer carried by a Christian Scientist can light up the dark corners and hidden recesses of mortal man's fears, turning depression into spiritual courage and worry into joyful trustfulness in God. So the lack of a cheery word often darkens a promising day, or a hard, serious, pessimistic thought expressed in words arouses dark forebodings in an impressionable nature.

Christian Science enables man to realize that God holds the helm of his ship of life, and this saves him from being shipwrecked by his own fears or by the fears of others. The spiritual facts given in Science and Health counteract the temptation to false thinking when it assails the one who reads and faithfully practices what he reads. Thus thought is taught to take the true course into the channels of love where there are no storms. The apathetic would rather ride upon the tide without a rudder, drifting whichever way the wind of human beliefs may blow. But when the storms of fear and hate rage tumultuously, the cry goes out from those who are literally at sea, as it did from the disciples of Jesus, "Lord, save us: we perish." Then for man's encouragement the teaching of Christian Science should be remembered, that the Christ is ever present and peace is never absent, that the Christ is an abiding healing power.

The spiritually awakened know that alertness, keenness of vision, and joyful obedience steer the ship of state through the golden gate of spiritual understanding. The ever ready response to God's behests opens wide the spiritual intuition of spontaneity, and brings the power to be instant in season and out of season, saving man from the shocks of material time. When man recognizes that his beginning is with God, he will also learn through this that his ending is eternity with God, the Alpha and Omega of existence. Jesus brought to the surface his real self, the true reflection of God. The wise man of to-day, seeking the star of the Christ, is guided by his very desire to the place where the young child lies. Christian Science shows him simply and lovingly how godlike man really is.

This realization takes away the cold, cheerless selfishness from men, supplying them with the fuel of right thinking and warming up the atmosphere with the sunshine of spiritual gladness. To rejoice, to be glad, and to praise the Lord "with the timbrel and dance" are some of the instructions of the psalmist. Let Christian Scientists lift the burdens from humanity by knowing that the yoke is easy and the burden light. Mrs. Eddy says (Message for 1900, p. 2), "The song of Christian Science is, 'Work—work—work—watch and pray.'" Seriousness is a splendid tool for the argument of slavery to duty, imposed by the false teaching of long-faced scholastic theology. The real man, as we are told in Genesis, is in God's image, but mortal man, according to the same authority, was to earn his living by the sweat of his brow. Then the question presents itself, Are we mortal men, worn and weary, or real men who find God's work our song? If God did His work in the beginning, why interfere with God's work by feeling that it is essential to help Him maintain it or by taking responsibility upon ourselves as though God did not exist? If the pleasure of the presence of God is enjoyed, then man has learned the secret of true living, understanding God to be an ever present power, fulfilling all human need. Let Christian Scientists be living witnesses of Jesus' joyous declaration, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Economy and Brotherly Love

AT the present time we see many reasons for getting a larger grasp of the spiritual idea which is humanly represented in economy, and perhaps nothing can better help us to gain a truer sense of its meaning than Mrs. Eddy's words which are found in the Manual of The Mother Church (Art. XXIV, Sect. 5), namely: "God requires wisdom, economy, and brotherly love to characterize all the proceedings of the members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist." There certainly can be no higher reason for economy than the brotherly love which would deny oneself in order to share the good things which we possess with some one who may seem to be less privileged, so far as the present hour is concerned.

Many years ago a good lesson was learned by the writer in knowing a lady of considerable means who would not permit the slightest waste in her household, but who found great happiness in giving out to the needy, as wisely as she knew how to do so, an equal amount to that which was spent for the food of her own family. In gaining a true sense of economy, or of anything else for that matter, we need to get rid of the false beliefs which would hinder our recognition and demonstration of the truth involved in the case. Perhaps nothing has been a greater foe to the exercise of economy than the sense of pride,—a desire to appear well before the world; in brief, to make what mortal mind would call a good appearance, even where this has in many cases actually trespassed upon the demands of honesty. Now Christian Science insists that if we would be happy and healthful we must be honest with ourselves to begin with, and if we are, this kind of charity may begin at home, but it certainly will not end there, it will go forth in obedience to Principle into all our human relationships. It goes without saying that economy is not limited to money or food or clothing; indeed economy of time may very properly precede all our efforts in this direction. The wise man says, "He also that is slothful in his work is brother to him that is a great waster."

When we are called upon at this period to deny ourselves many things in the way of food, we may well ponder deeply Daniel's experience in the royal court at Babylon. To begin with, the three Hebrew youths who are mentioned in the first chapter of Daniel must have had remarkable spiritual training in their homes when they were ready to choose the very simplest food in preference to the luxuries of the king's table, including wine. They had to face the belief, which was prevalent then as now, that rich food and stimulants would build them up physically, but they understood otherwise, and so asked that they might be given only "pulse to eat, and water to drink." Their request was complied with, and we read that "at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat."

This might be taken by some as a strong argument for dieting, but as presented to us in this wonderful prophecy the emphasis is not laid upon the simple food of which these lads partook, but upon the spiritual understanding which they possessed, and which they evidently sought more earnestly at this time than ever before. The lesson for us clearly is, that if we are willing to deny ourselves material things for the sake of gaining a higher sense of spiritual reality, and also with the desire to help others, our advancement will be rapid and new views of divine law will be gained.

When we come to the New Testament we find that Jesus' earthly ministry was preceded by a forty days' ordeal in which he partook of no material food; and then we read of his feeding multitudes who followed him into the deserts seeking the truth which he was constantly declaring and demonstrating, the truth which overcomes sickness, sin, and death when understood in the Christ-way. In the presence of this glorious demonstration of the infinite supply of divine Love which meets all human need, we are reminded that even with a great outpouring there should be no waste, and so we have the Master's command to gather up the fragments that nothing may be lost,—obedience to this command being recorded by the four evangelists.

We cannot too often remind ourselves that the denial of self on the material plane leads to expansion on the plane of our spiritual understanding. In Revelation we read that when God is known as dwelling among men "they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more . . . For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters."

Literature boxes have been placed in N. S. & A. C. L. passenger stations. The County Jail and County Home have been supplied with literature, and the occupants seem glad to receive it. Four subscriptions to the Monitor are being sent to The Kinston Daily News, the Kinston High School, the Caswell Training School, and the City Library. We have heard of much good being accomplished from the literature that has been sent out, and we are still receiving the names of those who are asking for literature to be sent them.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—The edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, was dedicated Sunday morning, October 14. The edifice and the lot on which it stands, at the corner of Eleventh Avenue and Twenty-first Street, are estimated conservatively to have a value of more than twenty-five thousand dollars.—Birmingham Ledger.

The Lectures

ASHLAND, ORE. (First Church).—Clarence W. Chadwick, lecturer; introduced by Judge C. B. Watson, who said in part:—

Christian Science has been in the world as a doctrine for the consideration of men less than half a century, but its growth has been so rapid, and so much of good has been left in its pathway, observable to all men, that its persistence seems assured; the age of its martyrdom is past, and it has taken its stand as one of the greatest supports of the doctrines of Christ. I am not a Christian Scientist, but I have endeavored to study its teachings, and to observe its workings, and am assured that it has done great good in the world and is destined to become one of the greatest comforters of humanity. It is in harmony with the trend toward the establishment of a world democracy which shall have for its slogan, "On earth peace, good will toward men." I cannot discuss its doctrines, for I do not understand them sufficiently; but while I do not belong to the church, I cannot withhold approval of its good work and am glad to be in company with the millions of good men and women whose mission it is to establish a law of love and good will.

MILWAUKEE, WIS. (Second Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by B. F. West, who said in part:—

In the book of Revelation we read, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." This revelation to St. John is of supreme importance to the world, for the door referred to is the one avenue of escape by means of which a suffering, sinning, dying human consciousness may be saved from itself, from the bondage of its own beliefs. The approach to this door is necessarily by mental or spiritual processes. Christian Science points the way and shows the step to be taken. No one who has not obediently taken these steps in an honest endeavor to determine for himself whether or not such a door exists, is qualified to pass criticism on this Science or to deny its actuality.

FARMER CITY, ILL. (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Frederick C. Hill, who said in part:—

There usually comes a time when early training and strict adherence to time-honored customs fail us, and afford no relief in the solution of the grave and important problems of human experience. In many instances at such a time Christian Science has been presented and applied. Encouragement, peace, and comfort have ensued; serious mental and physical obstacles have been overcome. The evidence of regeneration and healing is plainly discernible.

The fact—for it is a fact—that Christian Science is based upon Bible teaching, is sufficient authority for the assertion that it is the truth. It recognizes and teaches no power or authority other than God and His laws, and commands strict reliance upon Him, and Him alone. Its practice embodies the simplicity of the life and healing works of the Founder of the Christian religion,—Christ Jesus.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS. (Society).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Gustave A. Tuchlinsky, who said in part:—

Why is Christian Science so universally accepted? Because it is a religion of health and happiness; because it purifies and uplifts character; because it satisfies those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness; because it heals and saves from sickness, sin, and sorrow; because it reveals to us the same God of love who was taught and demonstrated by Jesus the Christ. These are a few of the many reasons why thousands of Christian Scientists are so grateful to Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. (Ninth Church).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Douglas L. Edmonds, who said in part:—

There has never been a time in the history of human affairs when mankind were more in need of a demonstrable knowledge of God than now, and never a more vigorous determination to "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." It is now over fifty years since the discovery of Christian Science by its Founder, Mary Baker Eddy, and during that time millions of people in all lands have found health, happiness, and a solution of all problems through the understanding of God and of God's laws as given in its teachings. Christian Science is the application of Christian truths to human needs. It unfolds to us in a practical, comprehensive way the teachings of Jesus, and by its fruits has shown that the works which he did are possible to us here and now.

MILES CITY, MONT. (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by H. B. Wiley, who said in part:—

While I know very little about Christian Science, I have nevertheless seen some of the fruits of that Science. I have seen the color come to the pallid cheek, light to the listless eye, and a smile to the face that had been wan and lifeless. I have seen those who were disappointed and found little in life take up the study of Christian Science and find happiness and contentment in it and a desire to live and enjoy life. Under those conditions I could not be one of those who say, "There is nothing in Christian Science."

Testimonies of Healing

It is a pleasure to give an account of my experience in Christian Science, with the prayer that it may lead others into this wonderful truth. Some years ago I was stricken with a terrible organic disease. I went to many doctors and specialists, and following their advice undertook many different kinds of treatment, but found only temporary relief. As the years passed without relief I became more and more discouraged, especially as my case had been pronounced incurable by a number of physicians. During the last seven years of my illness most of my time was spent either in hospitals or under the care of friends. When told that I had Bright's disease, I decided to stand the suffering as best I could; but many times the pain was so intense it seemed as if I could not endure it, and I seriously contemplated taking my life. What I thought was my last attack came upon me in March, 1915, and when a specialist had treated me about four weeks without any improvement,—in fact I was steadily growing worse,—I decided that the end had come.

At this time a lady spoke to me of Christian Science and advised me to try it. I told her it would be of no use, as I had tried everything that physicians and specialists could recommend and it had done me no good; that I was in a helpless state, very weak physically and mentally, out of work and unable to work had I been able to find anything to do. The lady assured me that there was hope for me; that I was a child of God and therefore could be healed. I finally decided to try Christian Science, and she took me to a practitioner. Though I had not slept for weeks, after the first treatment I went home and slept nine hours that night.

This was, however, the only visit I was able to make to the practitioner, as it was necessary for me to remain in bed. My legs were swollen and partly covered with sores, there was a discharge from both feet, my heart troubled me, and I was in terrible pain. From a material point of view I was a physical wreck, and it seemed impossible that anything could give me relief. Owing to my weak mental condition there was also a constant inclination to suicide, but finally a change came over me and I became very patient. The practitioner was with me daily when possible; otherwise he gave me absent treatment, and after a few months I was healed.

I am grateful to Christ Jesus the Wayshower, also to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for her unselfish life, which enabled her to give us the right understanding. I now have no time for old errors, and know that Truth is the only healing power; that God is Love, and that I shall keep well and happy as I remain faithful to Truth.

GROVER SCHEPPELMAN, Louisville, Ky.

"When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." This promise from the forty-third chapter of Isaiah has been full of active, potent meaning for me during the last twelve months, which I have spent in active service as an infantry man with the British forces in France. One occasion stands out strongly in memory, when the floor of our shallow trench was sensibly heaving with the explosion of shells which dropped close to us on every side but never touched our little band of five. I could tell of many similar experiences; in one recently our trench was battered out of shape by heavy shell along its whole length, except for the few yards in which I and the comrades in my section were taking shelter.

Many times have I heard it said that the hard work, privations, and exposure of a soldier's life out here would "pull me down," but after a year I am stronger and fitter than ever before. On one occasion I came out of the trenches after a time of exposure to wet and cold weather, and feeling unpleasant pains in my hands, wrists, and knee joints, I recognized the symptoms of rheumatism, or something similar, —one or two men had gone to the hospital with it,—and was quick to deny its reality. Next day all stiffness and pain had vanished and the seeming exposure was forgotten.

On another occasion there were a number of cases of incipient dysentery in the camp, and on going into the trenches I found myself the victim of the same symptoms. Those with me strongly endeavored to persuade me to "go sick" and leave the trenches. It was about noon, I remember, that I reviewed the arguments pro and con, and after a sharp mental struggle the "still small voice" of Truth regained control and I resisted the temptation to believe in the reality of any seeming material indisposition. The healing of this trouble was quite instantaneous, as the symptoms ceased entirely forthwith.

Years ago I remember having my face swollen out of recognition from bee stings; this summer I have been twice stung on the neck by wasps with no after effects whatever. My only conscious effort for healing was a remembrance of the passage, "Nothing shall by any means hurt you," and a dismissal of the discord from consciousness.

It is possible here to give only the merest sketch of the way in which I have been helped, protected, and upheld by what I have been able to practice of Jesus' teachings through the illumination of Christian Science. The Bible, Science and Health, and the Quarterly go with me everywhere, and I have read the Lesson-Sermon under nearly every imaginable condition. I am also the regular and grateful recipient of the Journal, Sentinel, and Monitor through the fund under Mrs. Eddy's will. One article in the Monitor dealing with the command, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward," has helped me many times.

The mists of horror, fear, and misery in which animal magnetism had shrouded the scene of war have proved to have only the supposed substance given them by mortal mind. Most clearly have I proved the healing power of Christian Science, and I am ever grateful to our Leader for her wonderful life and work.

LAWRENCE A. HAYTER, Letchworth, Herts, England.

The experience for which I am most grateful and which stands out as one of the greatest blessings in Christian Science, is the regeneration or spiritual awakening, which has been wonderful. Christian Science was presented to me many years ago. At that time I felt my only need was release from the physical suffering that had been my constant companion for almost twenty years.

The diagnosis given by the various specialists sentenced me to invalidism unless surgery were resorted to, and the possibility of this course filled me with such terror that I finally rejected this opinion, and willingly listened to the loving statements made by a friend regarding Christian Science. Treatment was given me, and almost immediately I felt a changed mental condition. From suffering, fear, self-pity, and resentment, my thoughts turned to quietness and hope. In a short time the bodily conditions improved and the import of the Christ-healing began to dawn upon an awakened consciousness. This awakening was something to remember. In a few months there was such a change that I was ready to join the ranks of Christian Science.

During the intervening years there have been many tests, and these more than all else have convinced me of the power of the divine presence to heal and to lift mankind into the realization that man is God's image; therefore the tests have been opportunities to prove the truths presented so clearly by Mrs. Eddy in Science and Health. Each day is filled with a measure of gratitude, not only for my healing but that mankind may share alike the perfect love and trust in the omnipotent God who regenerates. Mrs. Eddy's writings are a daily inspiration, and words cannot express the love due her for this revelation of Truth.

It is nearly ten years since I first became interested in Christian Science. For thirteen or fourteen years I had been suffering from what was called muscular rheumatism, and had been treated by the best medical doctors. At times I had some relief, but was seldom free from pain. Through the study of Christian Science I have been healed not only of that disease but also of other ills and discords to which I was subject. My healings have not been instantaneous; I have had to work hard and faithfully, but by so doing have received the blessings.

On September 16, 1916, I was struck by an automobile going at a high rate of speed and rendered unconscious, besides being to all appearances severely injured. My wife and daughter were notified, and a Christian Science practitioner was reached by telephone within a few minutes after the accident, so the good work was begun almost immediately. Those at the scene of the accident, however, rushed me to the hospital,.where an examination was made and the injured parts were bandaged. The doctors feared the shoulder might be broken, but on being told that I depended upon God for the healing they allowed me to be taken home. A surgeon was called to set the broken bones, but for the healing I had Christian Science treatment only.

I think my experience was wonderful. The left foot was badly sprained, and I was told it would be a long time before I could use it; but on the fourth day I used it enough to go from my room to the bathroom. The right shoulder was also severely injured, and the same prediction was made respecting it; but on the sixth day I shaved myself, using my right hand to hold the razor. A broken rib knit in two weeks; also a severe wound on the right side of the head, and that which the doctors feared might be a fractured skull, have been healed,—all through the blessed knowledge of Christian Science.

I am deeply grateful for these healings and for the spiritual uplift, also for the daily blessings the other members of my family are enjoying. I pray that I may so conduct myself that my actions will show my gratitude. Christian Science is a constant blessing to me in my home and at my daily work. It destroys strife and discord and brings peace and harmony, and I thank God for it.

CARL E. MORDE, New Bedford, Mass.

First of all, I am grateful to Christian Science for the encouraging words that our periodicals always bring to earnest seekers for Truth, and I have been uplifted and fed many times through reading them. I have had many physical healings since accepting Christian Science, but the joy that comes to one who has been the channel through which another has received the healing truth is even greater than that occasioned by his own healing. This, too, I have experienced, and I thank God for it all. As I go on from sense to Soul I appreciate more deeply the sacrifices that our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, must have made to stand at her post so bravely and faithfully.

It has come to me that a testimony of lack overcome would perhaps be just as great a help, to some who read these pages, as one of physical healing. I humbly and rejoicingly bear witness to the fact that the Principle that turned the water into wine at the wedding feast is just as available today as then. The truth of the Scripture, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you," was given me when I was a beginner in Christian Science. I had taken up some work with the express purpose of using the money thus earned to purchase a piano, something I had desired for a good while. I was having treatment at the time and did not seem to be getting the help so much needed. Then one day the practitioner asked me if I was subscribing for any of the Christian Science literature, and I replied that I could not afford to do so. Yet all this time I was hoarding the piano fund. I shall never forget the remark she made: "Subscribe for the literature even if you have to go without bread."

Then and there I was healed of the wrong thought. I subscribed for some of the literature, and from that time on progressed more rapidly, feeding on the truth for which I was willing to make a sacrifice. When I thought of the piano at all I just held to the thought that God loved me and was giving me all good; and so loving and tender is our Father-Mother God that one day, when I was not in the least expecting it, for I never had gotten enough money together for the piano, a neighbor told me of a friend who had just had a new piano given her and had no home to place it in, and asked me if I would be willing to keep it for her free of charge. I still have the use of that piano, and it has brought me comfort many times in playing our beautiful hymns.

Since accepting the teachings of Christian Science and endeavoring to live in accordance therewith, I have never lacked any good thing, for it has enabled me to realize in a measure that "the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof," and to abide by the assurance, "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass." I send this testimony with a grateful heart, knowing that the desire to help some struggling one will be gratified.

MAUDE B. MARTIN, Genesee, Ill.

For over fifteen years Christian Science has been my only physician and guide. I was healed quickly and permanently of physical troubles from which I had suffered all my life,—chronic bronchitis and a weak heart. Later I was healed of an attack of scarlet fever in a severe form, and there were no lingering effects. My eyes also are stronger and my sight is clearer than ever before, and a throat affection has entirely disappeared.

For many years I attended the Christian Science Sunday school and I feel deeply grateful for that privilege. The loving guidance and care received there mean much to me now. I have been led gently but firmly into a truer thought of God, have been taught something of the glorious relationship of man to his divine Principle; and my whole character and outlook have been changed thereby. The Bible has become a daily companion, a wonderful spiritual guide in every circumstance, and my deepest gratitude goes out to our Leader for the light she has thrown on the Scriptures.

Not very long ago I had an experience which was a further proof to me that God is a very present help in time of need. I was attacked quite suddenly with a serious physical trouble and intense pain, and but for the prompt relief which Christian Science affords I might not have survived. There was no period of convalescence, for I went back to my work in a little over a week, richer for the experience because I knew that the demonstration meant God present with me.

I am grateful, and my greatest desire is to prove worthy. Each day brings added blessings.

A deep sense of gratitude prompts me to tell of my experience in Christian Science. Having been afflicted for over twenty years with a complication of diseases, such as stomach trouble, nervousness, sleeplessness, and frequent headaches, I became very despondent and discouraged at times, as medicine afforded me only temporary relief, but gradually I reconciled myself to the thought that God sent these afflictions for some wise purpose.

When first the light of Christian Science dawned upon me I grasped it eagerly, with the faith that if God healed others He surely would heal me. After a week's reading of Science and Health and a few copies of the Sentinel, I realized this was what I had long desired to know,—the truth which sets men free. Thereupon I consulted a practitioner, who gave me one treatment, and then applied myself closely to the study of Science and Health. I threw away all my medicines and ate whatever I wanted without any resultant suffering. The severe headaches and other ailments gradually disappeared. A poisoned foot has also been healed by applying the truth taught in Christian Science.

I feel very grateful for the spiritual uplift that is being gained daily, and for "that peace which the world cannot give," and cannot take away; also for the understanding that God is ever present with His children and provides for all their daily needs. I feel thankful to God for the understanding of His word gained in Christian Science, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which makes the Bible clearer. Christian Science has made me more hopeful, more able to cope with life's responsibilities, and better able to meet every emergency with faith and an understanding of the presence of good.

I came into Christian Science two years ago, and in this short time have gained a wonderful glimpse of real happiness,—love for God and love for man.

JENNIE E. HAYNOR, Norfolk, Va.

Since coming to Christian Science for healing I have had so many proofs that this is a science which can be proved as accurately as any mathematical problem, that I gladly give my testimony. I had been closely associated with the medical profession for several years as a graduate and postgraduate nurse, and had learned the fallacy of trusting in medicine, as what would help me would hurt another who had the same disease. I had looked into every known ism and ology without finding anything to satisfy my longing to know God, though I had been a member of an orthodox church for years. When my extremity came, and I was discouraged, disheartened, sick unto death, and was then told that God is Love, and that He does not send sin, sickness, and death to His children, I immediately felt that I had found Him. I began to study Science and Health in connection with the Bible every spare moment, and read nothing else for a year. As a result, I can truthfully say that I am more content, more happy, and more healthy than ever before.

Out of the many wonderful experiences of the proof of God's love and care I will relate one case of healing. When I was getting on a cable car in Chicago, the car started suddenly and I was twisted around in such a way that my spine made a noise like a pistol. I could not sit or stand, and was in such pain that I got off the car, and walked six blocks home, declaring God's allness and man's dominion with every step I took. For three days and nights I could not lie down at all, and I could not sit except for a few moments at a time. I was never out of pain, but I did all my housework, though I could not bend at all. At the end of the three days I was perfectly healed. I knew the belief of the medical profession about similar cases, but every man-made law was broken, proving the truth of Mrs. Eddy's words in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 380): "Every law of matter or the body, supposed to govern man, is rendered null and void by the law of Life, God." Christian Science has been our only remedy for ten years. It has met every need, and is truly a very present help always.

For the encouragement of those without intimate knowledge of the healing work of Christian Science, I contribute the following testimony with a deep sense of gratitude. About two years ago I was afflicted with what was termed by three specialists an aggravated case of blood poisoning, and was informed by them that a certain prescribed treatment might effect a cure within three or four years.

Every known symptom attaching to blood trouble was evidenced in surface indications, which were well defined and prevalent from the scalp of my head to the soles of my feet, and in other definite characteristics. Believing the time opportune for putting into practice the teachings of Christian Science and for demonstrating its truth in my own behalf, I at once asked for treatment from a practitioner, with the result that complete relief came within six months. No return of the disease has been experienced in the interval, and I have but recently passed successfully a most exacting physical examination for added insurance, requiring what is considered in the nature of a positive analysis and known as a Wasserman blood test.

While being treated for blood poisoning I suffered for several weeks from rheumatism, and during the greater part of this time was without the use of my limbs and practically helpless. One morning, after a night of extreme suffering, my wife read to me from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, as was her custom, and during the reading of the chapter on Prayer I realized that all pain had left me and I was free. No return of the trouble has been experienced.

My gratitude for the many blessings that have come to me and to my family through Christian Science is unbounded.—W. W. WINCHESTER, Minneapolis, Minn.

While attending a Christian Science lecture I was healed of stomach trouble, and my attitude toward life was changed completely. I then began a systematic study of the Bible and of Mrs. Eddy's writings, and since that time extreme nervousness has been overcome, also fear of poverty and of losing my reason. My memory is much better than it used to be, and I have gained a far greater appreciation of the good and great things that have been done and said in the world.

I am very grateful to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, also to those who are connected in any way with the Christian Science movement.—OLIVE HARRINGTON, Winlock, Wash.

One morning in the spring of 1915 I received a blow in the face from a rapidly moving object. After realizing that God is not the author of accidents, I experienced no pain. Later it was discovered that there were two cuts on the chin and the corners of one front tooth were gone. I went to a lecture at The Mother Church that evening, however, and in a day or two the cuts were healed. A small bunch then formed on the side of my face, for which I could not at first account. I did not remember finding the pieces of tooth, so the thought came that perhaps one corner might have been pushed into the flesh and was lodged inside the cheek. The next question was, if this were the case, how to extract the piece properly; but I resolved to leave the problem entirely to God, and did so. Several weeks passed; there was inflammation and a discharge on the outside of the cheek, but it did not heal. Finally, the night before the visit of some relatives, I realized quite clearly that there was no reason for me to be disfigured; that it was not according to God's law. The next morning my face was quite smooth, with no scar, and the piece of tooth was found embedded in the dry cuticle which had been rubbed off the cheek.

I have had the benefits of Christian Science for many years, and am exceedingly grateful for God's revelation of it to Mrs. Eddy, and for her faithfulness to her trust.

CLARA L. BAXTER, Boston, Mass.

My gratitude for Christian Science has not been acknowledged publicly so often as it might have been, but there is not one demonstration of divine Love's protecting care that I do not treasure deeply.

I have been benefited physically, morally, and spiritually by my study of Christian Science. A severe case of stomach trouble was overcome a few years ago, and recently I was healed of a tumorous growth. A physician diagnosed the case, as I felt it necessary to know what the error called itself, and he told me I must make preparations for an immediate operation. I said I was a Christian Scientist and believed Christian Science could heal me, but the reply was that I was too young to let my life go in that way, and should not delay a thing so important. While it seemed I was being faced by error on all sides, still I felt that "God is," and my faith gave one bound with the thought that what God cannot do man need not try. My healing began at that very moment. I am very grateful for all the experiences that have strengthened my faith, and wherever God leads I will go. I love every word penned by our dear Leader, and am grateful for our practitioners, readers, and lecturers.

Counting Blessings

A poet has said, "Count your blessings."

Mrs. Eddy said of The Christian Science Monitor, "The object of the Monitor is to injure no man, but to bless all mankind" (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 353).

Everywhere to-day men are finding it possible to count the blessings received from The Christian Science Monitor.

They are more than beginning to grasp the spiritual idea which the Monitor represents; more than beginning to understand the law of good which they invoke when they subscribe for, or contribute to, circulate, read, advertise in, or patronize the institutions or individuals advertising in, The Christian Science Monitor.

How Blessings are Mutualized in the United Kingdom

The following extract from a report of the London advertising bureau interestingly recites some of the blessings which the people of the United Kingdom are counting from the Monitor:

"Cooperation with the advertisers by members of the churches in London and also in Dublin has been shown in a marked degree.

"A director of the first class West End drapers who are advertising, himself not interested in our subject, told one of our members that his advertising manager had just told him of having paid £4 ($20) for one insertion and that they had been receiving at the rate of £15 ($75) a day since from Monitor readers; he was of course highly delighted and they have renewed; a head assistant later said that he used to put aside the Monitors (which the Distribution Committee brought) thinking the paper was religious, but their director had shown him what an interesting daily paper it is and he was going to read it.

"The first class tailor who had large insertions has renewed saying he has scores of letters from ladies saying how pleased they are with his coats.

"The largest original advertiser renewed in March for a year with much pleasure, saying they had had 'most gratifying results'; the boot advertiser tells of recent monthly turnovers running well into four figures, when previously the business had gone through a most difficult time.

"A dairy tells of 400 new customers resulting from their advertisement.

"A Dublin grocer having a half inch insertion traced £80 ($400) directly as a result, to his great surprise. A Dublin tailor said his business is 'hundreds of pounds better since he has been advertising.'

"A Dublin furrier spoke of very good results. He said, 'The readers of your paper are not like the readers of any other paper, they are most loyal.' He was impressed at the eagerness shown by the Red Cross in wanting his voucher copies of the Monitor for soldiers in hospitals.

"An interesting point is how supplies come to advertisers. The Dublin soap manufacturer says the materials 'keep coming in all the time' for the soap, although he has the greatest difficulty in procuring them for candles, etc., which he does not advertise. A Dublin laundry has reduced its prices, having obtained such a large quantity of starch, enough for years, before the war broke out. The furriers mentioned above were able to get a wonderfully reasonable supply of special skins which enabled them to advertise special prices.

"A Dublin seedsman was afraid of what other seedsmen would say to his catalogue prices being so low, and renewed his advertisement saying, 'You are just wonderful people.'

"May we express utmost gratitude for kind help and direction received always from The Christian Science Publishing Society; we realize that close unity with our revered Leader's organization brings inspiration, guidance, and encouragement for this work."

Thus is fulfilled again the declaration of Mrs. Eddy: "In the scientific relation of God to man, we find that whatever blesses one blesses all, as Jesus showed with the loaves and the fishes,—Spirit, not matter, being the source of supply" (Science and Health, p. 206).

"What I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

Vol. XX DECEMBER 1, 1917 Number 14

The Christian Science Monitor

ARTHUR F. FOSBERY

As recorded in the Bible, the history of the children of Israel shows the paramount necessity of allegiance to God and reliance on His goodness and power under all circumstances. The effect of every good or evil act of the Hebrew people is depicted as the natural result of the motive governing the act. When the people were obedient to God they prospered, when disobedient they suffered; and this record of the governing influence of God in human affairs has been of inestimable moral value to those desirous of choosing the way of life.

In The Christian Science Monitor, our great international daily, we have a current history of the moving pageant of human affairs, inspired by the same clear understanding of the allness of Principle which guided the Biblical narrator. It is to-day the one newspaper which embraces in its scope the progressive political advancement of the whole world. It has not only taken its place in the forefront of journalism, but its function there is unique as an exponent of Principle entirely outside the ranks of partisanship or prejudice, and beyond commercialism.

Christian Scientists who are making "good will toward men" a vital part of all their thinking, who rejoice in the truth of our Leader's words on page 13 of Science and Health, "Love is impartial and universal in its adaptation and bestowals," naturally have a keen interest in the struggle for social betterment and for emancipation from mental bondage which is going on all over the world, and every issue of the Monitor tells of some step of progress being taken somewhere. For instance, English educators lift their voices for more and better schools; a South American republic gains a greater measure of religious freedom; two other republics enter into closer relations and seal their bond of peace with a treaty; France shows that she is not asleep on the school question, and guards more jealously her children from clerical interference; Bible societies send in one year several hundred thousand copies of the Scriptures to China; a large number of Mexican women from different provinces meet for the discussion of social and political problems.

Besides this, we read that the Canadian provinces one after another adopt prohibition; a cabinet minister in one of the Balkan states delivers an oration on the demands of principle; a Mexican governor issues a sweeping order for compulsory education; an Indian maharaja strikes a blow at the paralyzing caste system, while in another province of India a wealthy shoemaker and some Buddhist priests make a practical protest against the same evil. Items of news such as these encourage the worker for humanity with the breadth of the protest against superstition and limitation, showing the truth of Mrs. Eddy's statement, "Ages pass, but this leaven of Truth is ever at work" (Science and Health, p. 118), and that even the "heathen in his blindness" is groping toward the light.

If a copy of the Monitor is placed beside any large monthly review, it will be seen that the monthly production cannot compare with this daily, and six of these dailies are printed every week. This is the first opportunity the world has had to read a current history of international events, and the full educational value of The Christian Science Monitor on its historical side alone cannot at this date be estimated. But people are awakening, and the man of the near future will know continental politics and policies as the man of fifty years ago knew his village affairs, and will take a keener interest in the prosperity of a state on the opposite side of the globe than his grandfather did in a neighboring township. There will be as marked a difference between the reader of the Monitor and the one who ignores it, as between the pupil who studies his lessons and the boy who spends his time in idleness.

Many of us would like to talk with the foremost thinkers on those political questions which affect national or international relations; in the Monitor we have the opportunity of reading the views of these prominent thinkers. We get directly at the thought also of men who have specialized in many different lines of activity, and obtain our information much more comprehensively than would be possible in a personal meeting with them, for it requires a certain understanding of a subject to draw out its important points in an interview.

An increasing number of people who are not students of Christian Science read our paper to keep abreast of the times. Its incomparable editorials and comments on questions of the day fill a long felt want for many earnest men and women; its high idealism and nonpartisan viewpoint enable it to lay a choice of opinions before its readers where there is a choice, and in matters of right and wrong to show the dividing line with justice and mercy.

It is well to recognize that the world needs to read the Monitor, but it is necessary to realize that we individually need to do so. Christian Scientists are the most ready for the advanced step in the journey heavenward which Monitor readers are taking. We have glimpsed the Love that is "no respecter of persons;" that "maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good;" that to every individual on earth, rich or poor, well meaning or evil, gives forth tenderly the same good qualities to be freely used, that each one may be healed and blessed and bless others in the using of them. We have glimpsed that Love, but it is of no practical value to us unless we manifest it; manifesting it, we shall lose sight of city, state, and national boundary lines, and yearn for the freedom and happiness of every nation, of every man, woman, and child.

Is it possible, therefore, for any one of us to let a single issue of our daily paper pass without eagerly searching its pages for information about the general progress of mankind and the happenings of significance to humanity in all parts of the world? The drawing closer in bonds of common sympathy of the thinkers who read the Monitor is bringing nearer the day when even trade wars will cease to be possible; and the delusion that one nation or individual can be advanced by dominating or being dominated by another, or that one person can profit at the expense of another, will forever vanish before the understanding of man in universal brotherhood, subject directly, without personal domination or mediation, to the government of the one all-loving Father.

Power of Right Thinking

ALFRED F. GOODMAN

ANYONE who is familiar with the teachings of Christian Science knows that the power to heal is in proportion to one's honesty, purity, and spirituality. Success is in proportion to the extent that we are "unspotted from the world;" therefore it is plain that anything which helps to lift us above temporal things or thoughts helps us to gain spiritually, and likewise that anything which tends to make material things more real to us hinders our advancement in Spirit. It behooves us, then, to be honest, frank, and true to ourselves in searching our mentalities to find what thoughts are helping and what are hindering us, and to govern ourselves accordingly.

A truly conscientious worker in the Science of Mind will separate himself from anything which tends to hinder his advancement in the understanding of Truth. Regardless of the hold material things may have upon his affections, he knows that "higher enjoyments alone can satisfy the cravings of immortal man" (Science and Health, p. 60), and is willing to dispossess all else and thus make room for just that much more truth. The real beauty of this is that he finds he actually did not give up anything at all, but instead has gained everything. He has parted with a temporal, unreal something, and gained something real and lasting, far more enjoyable and profitable. The material pain, pleasure, or desire did not help his growth in understanding, but hindered it. Therefore he is willing to give it up and gain the spirituality which the effort brings him; and he is blessed accordingly.

A mentality thus purified from evil and made active and awake in Truth and Love, is a wonderful power. It seems remarkable from the material standpoint how powerful such a condition of thought is, and mortal mind therefore calls the outcome "miracles." The many demonstrations of Jesus, instantaneous proofs of a thought free from guile and active in Truth, were not understood. Even now it is not thoroughly apprehended that Jesus did not have to work laboriously for every result he secured; for his thought was so powerful that he had only to speak the word,—connect the individual with the truth he knew mentally about God and man,—and the healing was accomplished. Jesus was indeed so mentally poised, so pure, and so free from materiality, that his thought was ever active in Truth; and the history of his life is full of proofs of the power of such a thought.

As Christian Scientists, followers of Christ, it behooves us to get our thoughts into a condition resembling that which enabled Jesus to overcome every phase of error; to have in us, as the apostle admonishes, that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus." It behooves us to get rid of error, and in place of it to get truth; and the power of our mentality to heal and to do good will be in exact proportion to the amount of evil, or error, we can get rid of, and the amount of purity, love, and spirituality we can put in its place.

In "Rudimental Divine Science" (p. 9) Mrs. Eddy says, "The spiritual power of a scientific, right thought, without a direct effort, an audible or even a mental argument, has oftentimes healed inveterate diseases." When we think this statement over carefully we shall see that the possession of such a right thought, and even the unconscious direction of this thought to a wrong condition, is powerful enough to restore harmony without a direct effort. Could there be anything greater than the possession of such a thought? Could we bend our energies to any better purpose? To gain this, is anything material too valuable to sacrifice?

There is, however, one factor not to be overlooked. It should never be considered that we can at any time neglect to give adequate attention to our work in Christian Science. A right Christian Science treatment is full, comprehensive, and entire; it covers the whole ground. Its purpose is the demonstration of Love, and no neglect is tolerated. Mrs. Eddy says, "Whatever the belief is, if arguments are used to destroy it, the belief must be repudiated, and the negation must extend to the supposed disease and to whatever decides its type and symptoms;" again she says, "If the Scientist reaches his patient through divine Love, the healing work will be accomplished at one visit, and the disease will vanish into its native nothingness like dew before the morning sunshine" (Science and Health, pp. 418, 365). A Christian Science treatment is direct, but whether argument be used or not, this in no way affects the fact that a right mentality heals unconsciously and leaves behind it many blessings.

One with such a mentality leaves in his wake happiness and joy from mere contact with the purity and holiness of his or her life. As we read in the fifth chapter of Acts that the sick were brought forth into the streets, that the shadow of Peter passing by might be cast upon them, so too the influence of our lives, if these lives are free from error, in passing by the sick and the sinning may help and heal. In view of these things it is impossible to put too much stress on the importance of earnest activity in cleansing our thought of all impurity and gaining true spirituality.

Mind's Ideas Omnipresent

AMY C. FARISS

IN the study of the story of Hagar's experience in the wilderness the young student of Christian Science may obtain much encouragement. How often does one whose feet have strayed into the wilderness of human doubt and fear cry out in anguish as did this Egyptian woman! All about is the bleak loneliness of defeated aims, the doubt of God's protecting care, the myriad fears of a mortal's blinded vision. Had one been near to Hagar and assured her of the existence of the well of water from which later she filled her bottle, she would not have believed what as yet her eyes had not beheld. In the beginning of one's journey out of the senses it is not always easy to grasp the fact that because Mind is omnipresent all of Mind's ideas are also omnipresent.

On page 597 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy speaks of wilderness first as "loneliness; doubt; darkness;" farther on as "the vestibule in which a material sense of things disappears, and spiritual sense unfolds the great facts of existence." Hagar found her spiritual sight while encompassed by her wilderness. That the well of water was a spiritual idea, existing forever present in Mind, was proven as clearly in Hagar's case as was the truth, which Jesus established for all time, that food for the multitude is an omnipresent fact, waiting only the unfoldment of spiritual vision to bring it into practical demonstration.

The world can never measure its debt of gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for bringing to groping mortals the wonder contained in her words, "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all" (Science and Health, p. 468). This is the truth which opens prison doors, sets captives free, causes the lame to leap and the weary to rejoice,—this great declaration that Mind and its ideas alone exist, and exist throughout all space and time. And not of lesser moment are her words on page 280 of Science and Health: "All things beautiful and harmless are ideas of Mind. Mind creates and multiplies them, and the product must be mental."

An illustration of the above statements came under the writer's observation, and because it has since meant much in the way of encouragement to her in moments of any special lack, possibly it may be of help to others. The idea of water—clear, bubbling water or a calm, deep pool—had always held a special charm for a certain student of Christian Science; therefore in taking up the study of Science, water as a symbol of life found a ready acceptance in her thought. The spiritual significance of Hagar's story had not at that time been even remotely grasped, but a day came in this student's experience when the subject of water was forced upon her attention. She owned a beloved little spot on which the scarcity of water threatened to make of no avail her years of patient labor. Barren garden spaces, drooping shrubbery, branches looking upward,—all seemed to call for that blessed moisture in which to human sense their very life is centered; but in the rather isolated settlement month dragged after month with no change for the better. Where before happy little green patches met the gaze, now dried weeds ran riot. Nor could this condition be remedied without entailing expenses heavier than it seemed wise to assume.

This circumstance brought the subject of water often to the student's mind, and it was then that Hagar's experience was more closely studied. Slowly it began to dawn on the student's thought that the well of water must have been present all the while, and much time was spent in wondering why Hagar had not seen it. Later, little by little, the understanding became clearer that the right concept of water was based upon a spiritual idea, present at all times and in all places. Then it suddenly forced itself upon her thought that water was present in abundance for her own little home, and that she, like Hagar, had failed to understand that this was so.

Immediately after this truth was seen it was found that under the terms of a recently enacted law a plan could be gotten under way by which the district in which the home was situated could be bonded for a sum of money sufficient to lay a fine water system without entailing any hardship for the individual property owner. In this case, unlike Hagar's experience, there was no sudden demonstration of the facts which now the student of Christian Science saw and understood, but in due time the big pipes were laid, and street by street a great force of water went flooding through the mains, though not at first through her street. Then came a moment of fear that after all this was not the tender work of Love which for days had seemed so sweet and bountiful. Rumor reached the student that the water was unfit for use. Was this then a beautiful demonstration of God's omnipresence? She would learn for herself just what this meant. For a moment, as she tasted of the murky draught, the joy of the past weeks vanished. Surely there must be some mistake! Love's streams are pure and refreshing. Yet, in spite of everything, there in her hand was the cup of ill-flavored water. What was she to think?

A week passed; then came the day when the workers reached her home and the water was poured into the mains. By now the certainty had settled in her heart that the one source of abundant supply was no other than divine Love. Had not the previous years of scantiness been changed into promise and activity simultaneously with the student's awakening as to what constituted the reality symbolized to human sense by water? Would it be possible for Mind's manifestation to withhold itself, now that all the work leading to its complete expression had been laid? Assuredly not. Although convinced that this was so, a cry of surprise escaped the student as she took her first drink from the hydrant. So clear and pure and wonderfully refreshing was the water that she doubted if there was in all the great state another such well. The water sparkled and shone like crystal in the golden sunshine, a symbol of life and joy and eternal peace. In time the water pipes of her neighbors became fit receptacles for this precious stream, but the fact remains that the street in which the student lived was the only one where the pipes had been cleared of the tar and iron with which they had become tainted when being cemented together.

God heard the voice of Hagar's son where he was; and no matter if our need is not always so great as was Hagar's, it is a perpetual cause for rejoicing that we can add, however patiently and slowly, our evidence in support of the infallible truth contained in our Leader's teachings. It is a cause for rejoicing that, even if not instantaneously, we can, need by need, find that our lack is supplied; that where before arid want claimed to hold sway, bright, bounteous fullness is at hand.

A Love Offering

ISRAEL PICKENS

ALL the earth seemed hushed in a solemn stillness as through the winding parkways two men wended their way to the knoll overlooking Lake Halcyon. The day was cold, though somewhat modified by the genial sunshine. Historic Mount Auburn was a rarely beautiful scene on that wintry day! A million sparkling gems adorned the branches of the stately English poplars, the elms, and the hemlocks, while in sweeping perspective lay the lake, radiant in its crystalline beauty. By the side of a beautiful ginkgo tree there towered a circular colonnade of white granite, upon whose base, emblazoned in letters of enduring metal, are these immortal words: "The monument whose finger points upward, commemorates the earthly life of a martyr; but this is not all of the philanthropist, hero, and Christian. The Truth he has taught and spoken lives, and moves in our midst a divine afflatus" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 166).

Here, among the departed of New England's illustrious, is a monument erected as a tribute to one whose earthly life was itself dedicated to the reestablishment of the religion of Christ Jesus, whose Christianity and Science declare and demonstrate the deathless and immortal being of man. The Master stated the purpose of his divine mission among men when he said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." "I am the way, the truth, and the life," is the Christ-utterance of eternity.

To God's messenger, Mary Baker Eddy, was revealed anew the understanding that God is Life, and because of this revelation the present age is witnessing the liberation of humanity from the bondage born of fear and from the beliefs of the carnal mind. It is through Christian Science that great multitudes of the stricken of earth can now be counted among the new-born of Spirit, and in grateful acknowledgment of such untold good they reverence her who made this new birth possible. A memorial in stone is therefore only a human expression of acknowledgment of her worth and her remarkable leadership. While their understanding may yet be immature, Christian Scientists, even now, do know with John that they have "passed from death unto life," and in the radiant light of this understanding the material, ephemeral experiences of earth are fast giving way to the perfect and the true. As Mrs. Eddy writes on page 331 of Science and Health, "In Spirit all is harmony, and there can be no discord; all is Life, and there is no death."

Wrapped in quiet meditation, and with a quickened sense of gratitude for this freedom-giving and life-bestowing truth, stood the two men. They were mere acquaintances and from far-distant states, but their hearts because of Love's leavening potency knew a comradeship that needed no formality or time to mature. Pausing before a massive granite slab on one side of the colonnade, their eyes again fell upon immortal words, a promise to-day fulfilled: "These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." On the opposite side of the structure was a corresponding slab with an inscription from Science and Health (pp. 128, 127): "The term Science, properly understood, refers only to the laws of God and to His government of the universe, inclusive of man." "Science is an emanation of divine Mind, and is alone able to interpret God aright. It has a spiritual, and not a material origin. It is a divine utterance,—the Comforter which leadeth into all truth."

Garlanded in beauty and distinctive simplicity is this symbol of gratitude erected to her whose life and teachings have caused it to be again said in Israel, "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."

"No night there"

MABEL CONE BUSHNELL

In that deeper study of the Scriptures which naturally attends a growing understanding of the teachings of Science and Health, the beauty of their spiritual meaning is unfolded to us in ever increasing measure. For instance, we read in Genesis, "The evening and the morning were the first day." Pondering this statement in connection with Mrs. Eddy's definition of day,—"The irradiance of Life; light, the spiritual idea of Truth and Love" (Science and Health, p. 584),—the writer came to see that even the wording of the Scriptural record passes over that which mortals call night by telling us only of the day, and leaving night and darkness still to be accounted for.

In times of stress and sorrow the darkness often seems to be all around us and the material sense of day brings not a ray of light; yet in God's universe there is never any cessation of His brightness, never any lessening of His glory, never a time when His day is not with us, for "there shall be no night there,"—no night at all in that city of our God visioned by the beloved disciple. In Zechariah we read: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark: but it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light."

These positive promises are for God's children now,—to banish from our thoughts the sense of darkness and night, also time, and to bring us into a more illuminating sense of Spirit's radiant day. Of necessity, the mortal sense of time brings a thought of daylight and darkness following close upon each other, yet here is our promise that "at evening time it shall be light." Where all is light we know there can be no darkness, and then it is that our material sense of night begins to give place to the mentally clearer view of omnipresent day, or Love's illumination.

On page 584 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says: "The objects of time and sense disappear in the illumination of spiritual understanding, and Mind measures time according to the good that is unfolded. This unfolding is God's day, and 'there shall be no night there.'" Thus we come to realize the dawning of continual day in our hearts; the unfolding in human thought of that consciousness which is all day, for it is all good, and in which no lack or darkness dwells. Day thus understood brings to thought the radiance of unfolding truth; the clearer vision of the heavenly Father; the joyful gladness of the sunlight of the divine presence. In obediently striving and pressing on we shall surely, even though it may sometimes seem slowly, come out of the illusion of night into the truth of unending day.

The writer remembers that for many years she did not like to see the sun go down; night seemed to bring a sense of depression and a continual wish for day to return, and through long periods of sleeplessness a constant waiting for morning. So it is with a grateful heart that she has learned to realize, through the study of Christian Science, that day is purely mental, and that one may always have day in his heart. "We have also a more sure word of prophecy," the apostle Peter writes, "whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts."

The healing influence of Truth brought quietness and rest, a confident abiding in the everlasting arms of Love, where one may rejoice in knowing that he is awake in God's day, for the continual unfoldment of the Scriptures through Mrs. Eddy's discovery of the Christ-healing and its practical application illumines the night of material sense with spiritual light. Little by little, as we press onward in our journey from sense to Soul, we glimpse the revelator's meaning when he wrote, "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever."

"There is a God in Israel"

MARY E. TRUITT

Many beautiful and inspiring lessons have been learned from the story of David the shepherd boy. Every child who has heard it has been filled with wonder that this slight youth, with only his sling as a weapon, could kill the much feared giant Goliath; but the real beauty of the story is lost if the child does not learn that the weapon which really prevailed against the enemy was not the sling, but David's unwavering faith in God's omnipotence.

Saul and all his army had not found one man who dared to meet the giant in combat, and David was aroused by the fact that the armies of the living God had been defied. When Saul heard of David's desire to go out against Goliath, he thought it folly for one so young and untried in battle to attempt to vanquish an enemy who was feared by the entire army. Then David told Saul how when tending his sheep he had had encounters with lions and bears, and in telling how he had slain them he took to himself none of the credit, for David knew wherein lay his strength. He proved this when he said, "The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine." When at last David had secured Saul's consent and had gone forth to meet the Philistine, his words to Goliath showed how surely he had gotten self out of the way. His one thought in slaying the giant was not for personal glory, but to prove God's allness; or, as he himself expressed it, "that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel."

On page 268 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "In this revolutionary period, like the shepherd-boy with his sling, woman goes forth to battle with Goliath." The repetition of this never old story in the light of Christian Science brought comfort to my small daughter when recently she called upon me in the night for help. I was sure the trouble had been overcome, and I wished to show her that she was fearing an unreal enemy, so I began telling her the story of David and Goliath. Soon she was quieted and very much interested in the story. At its completion I asked her if she supposed that the army of Saul and all the Israelites still feared Goliath after he had been slain, and she answered that of course they would not, for Goliath was dead. She then saw that her own enemy had been destroyed through the power of Truth, and that she could no longer fear it, for we had proven it was no part of God's image and likeness.

This thought not only brought healing to the child, but I found in it an unexpected lesson for myself. About a year previous to this a seemingly huge and powerful error, which claimed as its victim a member of our household, had been slain through faith in God as demonstrated in Christian Science. Our rejoicing was great and our gratitude boundless for this victory of Truth over error, but upon searching my thoughts I found that I had still been feeling a need to build a fortification against the possible return of the enemy. Surely my thoughts had not been properly guarded and the unvoiced fears of others had found lodgment there. I then saw that I had been daily battling with a dead Goliath, instead of being ready to meet and overcome with the wisdom and strength of Truth and Love other invading enemies.

We are told that "David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and behaved himself wisely." Had I been behaving myself wisely, and been ready to go wherever it was right for me to go? I saw that I had not, and with the realization of past mistakes came the determination no longer to occupy my time with assuring and reassuring myself that Goliath was indeed dead, but to go forth with the proven armor, ready to perceive and respond to fresh opportunities for demonstrating as did David, and proving with him that "there is a God in Israel."

Awaken!

CHARLES C. SANDELIN

AWAKEN from thy slumber! See
The feast of Truth prepared for thee!
The healing feast of joy and peace:
Partake, dear friend! Thy ills will cease!

Why dost thou weep? Look up! Rejoice!
And drink truth's vintage; raise thy voice
With songs of gladness! Blest thou art—
A child of God, from grief apart!

Love takes thy hand and leadeth thee
From out the mist of error, free!
And e'er remaineth at thy side,
With loving counsel as thy guide!

God's children ever dwell secure
From every ill—unfallen, pure;
Whate'er the evil mask may seem,
'Tis nothing but a mortal dream!

Selected Articles

["Time and Unfoldment"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A. Oct. 11, 1917]

The human mind is a procrastinator, for the reason that it is incapable of comprehending the fact of ever present good. Since the war is now occupying a great proportion of the attention of men, they continually look forward to the finish of the war in order to realize their dreams or ideals of good, or for, perhaps, the working out of some particular problem. Hence the constant use of the phrase "after the war" is attributable to this tendency toward, or habit of, procrastination.

The habit of anticipating good from a material standpoint, though it is certainly better than anticipating evil, is also unwise, not to say dangerous and detrimental to our progress. Because behind the conditions of material existence there is no Science or law to enable one to make accurate calculations, unless one can see, and, to some extent, demonstrate the metaphysical fact that Mind is God, and therefore that Mind is infinite in manifestation, we are continually working in the dark, and are constantly doomed to the disappointment of our fondest hopes. To rely on possible or probable material contingencies is to build our house upon the sand; in other words, upon the false foundation of human reason. These contingencies often work out contrary to our anticipation. Thus the goal we had counted upon, while it may, in itself, be perfectly legitimate, still eludes us, and this is so because we try to work from the standpoint of matter instead of from that of Spirit. The realization that, as Mrs. Eddy points out on page 547 of Science and Health, "the true theory of the universe, including man, is not in material history but in spiritual development," would change our outlook and place us in a position to receive the good we have sought hitherto unavailingly along material lines.

Now, working from the standpoint of Spirit does not mean in the least working spiritually to gain material ends. As a matter of fact, such a concept of work would end in failure, for such a method would be more material than the former frankly material way. It would really mean that the use of human will and not reliance on the divine Mind was being resorted to, that human will which in itself is the noumenon of material things; while working from the standpoint of Spirit means the realization that all good exists now and forever in the divine Mind, and that man, not as a corporeal being, but as a spiritual idea in this Mind, lives forever in infinite good. It means the realization of the truth of Mrs. Eddy's words in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 307): "God gives you His spiritual ideas, and in turn, they give you daily supplies," and that all we need or can ask for exists already in the divine Mind for man's use. Now, in the exact proportion that we realize this spiritual fact, these ideas become our own. In the same proportion they destroy the human sense of limitation. It means continually looking away from matter to Truth and Love, to Principle, where happiness, peace, and immortality are forever existent.

As this fact is realized it will be seen that the mortal limitations regarding time and circumstance are bound to disappear as Truth is understood, since Principle, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, remains unaffected by these apparent conditions, though they may shake the human belief of the universe from end to end. The fact is that the conditions upon which we have been basing our calculations exist merely in mortal belief, and, having their source in mortal mind instead of in Principle, do not exist in that spiritual realm or consciousness in which the real man lives and moves and has his being. Moreover, man as the image and likeness of God remains unaffected by mortal conditions, and the realization of this will proportionately establish, here and now, the understanding of man's legitimate heritage of dominion over all the earth.

The habit of looking forward to the end of the war for the fulfillment of his hopes is anomalous in the student of Christian Science. As a matter of fact, the only war there is for each of us is the sense of war which we entertain. If all reality exists in and of the divine Mind, and war never began there and does not exist in the divine consciousness, it is obvious that that which has no beginning has not got to finish, but that the right time is now in which to get rid of our belief in war or evil as a reality and gain the true sense of God.

If one is striving to advance Spiritward, he must cease to look to material conditions for times or seasons, or to regard either as real; for if he is demonstrating the allness of God, he is at the same time demonstrating the nothingness of the very conditions upon which he may be basing his calculations, and is in very much the position of a man who saws off a plank upon the end of which he is standing. Mrs. Eddy, with unerring foresight, saw clearly that as the power of Truth is demonstrated the instability of matter would become more and more apparent, when she wrote on page 96 of Science and Health, "Before error is wholly destroyed, there will be interruptions of the general material routine." The great upheaval going on in the world to-day, in uncovering the falsity of mortal belief, is proving, to all who have eyes to see, the increasing futility of basing their calculations upon matter, because it is this very upheaval of material things which is destroying, in the human mind, the belief that life and substance exist as matter, and is thus destroying the effects of that belief in material phenomena.

To the extent that we look to matter at all, to turn again to the Scripture metaphor, we increase the proportion of sand in our foundation, and our superstructure becomes insecure and less able to weather the storm and endure unto the end.

On page 306 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Undisturbed amid the jarring testimony of the material senses, Science, still enthroned, is unfolding to mortals the immutable, harmonious, divine Principle,—is unfolding Life and the universe, ever present and eternal." In these words of surpassing power and grandeur she makes it clear that the perfect, harmonious realities of Life are present, supersensible facts, and that the time for their realization and demonstration is now. Precisely the same truth was expressed by Christ Jesus centuries ago with characteristically striking simplicity when he said, "Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you."

[Robert S. Ross in Auburn (N. Y.) Citizen]

The Citizen reports a sermon delivered at the Summer School of Theology in which the clergyman made the common mistake of associating the teachings of Christian Science with methods of healing that are based either upon blind faith or upon mental suggestion. By way of correction, permit me to state that Christian Science is neither of these. Outside of this Science the reality of sin and disease is undisputed, even by those endeavoring to overcome it. By reality Christian Science means that which proceeds from God, or divine Principle, and has a basis in fact.

If sickness were real, it could not possibly be cured, and it would be useless to try to cure it. But according to Christian Science, God is the author of good only. From this it follows that sickness is not real, owing to the simple fact that it is not good. A perfectly good God could create only a perfect man. When this spiritual fact is understood and applied to discordant human belief, mortals will realize what Christ Jesus meant when he said to his disciples that by knowing the truth they would be made free. "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 476 of Science and Health. "In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

Other healing systems undertake to make a sick man well, thereby working against the success of their own efforts; while Christian Science heals the so-called sick by knowing that man as God created him has never been sick. That the Christian Science method is the correct one is evidenced by the healing of cases which according to medical belief are supposed to be incurable. It was Christ Jesus who said that a tree is known by its fruits.

[Duncan Sinclair in The Partick Gazette, Glasgow, Scotland]

The beautiful stanza which "J. D." quotes from Gray's elegy seems to indicate, if but indirectly, that men, no matter who they may be, are to be esteemed for the good they know and practice; and certainly the teachings of Christian Science are in accord with this dictum.

When a Christian Scientist is afflicted by some ill "that flesh is heir to," he does not "simply murmur," as "J. D." says, "It is not really real;" that is not Christian Science practice at all. Briefly, what the Christian Scientist endeavors to do in such a circumstance is to realize the spiritual fact that God is ever present as divine Love, caring for and protecting His own spiritual creation; that God or infinite good is all-powerful and able to destroy whatever claims to be the opposite of good. Healing takes place in proportion to the extent of his spiritual understanding. In Christian Science any healing, whether of a moral or a physical nature, results, as one knows the truth about God, in accordance with the words of Christ Jesus as recorded in John's gospel, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

[John M. Tutt in Poplar Bluff (Mo.) American]

Christian Science does not compel; it persuades truly, but only as it presents a reasonable explanation of God and man and unfolds God's plan of salvation from the ills and sins of the flesh. Where Christian Science has touched the lives of men, it has blessed. Why warn against an influence for good in the world? The beneficence of Christian Science would extend even to those who now think they do God service in attempting to block its progress, and would open channels of usefulness to the talents now devoted to exhortation. Jesus went about healing the sick and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. In obediently imitating Jesus in the former, Christian Science is convincingly doing the latter. Jesus said, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."

Our critic, a clergyman, said, "I believe the old Book, and I will stand on the Bible alone as the Word of God." Here seems to be a point of agreement between him and Christian Science, for the first tenet of the Christian Science church states, "As adherents of Truth, we take the inspired Word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal Life" (Science and Health, p. 497). Moreover, as our critic again says, "It is not what you think or what I think, but what the holy Word of God says." Surely, then, the thinker will see the unfairness of the demand of our critic that his own concept of what the Bible says be the standard for others whose understanding of the Word, though differing from his, is to them convincing and satisfying. To Christian Scientists "the word of God is . . . powerful," and their experience in the practice of Christian Science furnishes practical proofs of the correctness of their concept of God and man as revealed in the spiritual import of the Scripture.

The following succinct statement will correct in a general way many of the present critic's favorite animadversions: To the Christian Scientist the spiritual meaning of the Bible is all-important. Through spiritual understanding alone he is able rightly to divide the Word of God and reconcile the seeming inconsistencies of the text. He is able thus to do this without mutilating or discarding any portion of the Scriptures. The Christian Scientist understands that when Christ Jesus said he was "the way," he meant just that, and hence that all must walk in that way. He believes in Christ Jesus' selfless sacrifice; in the crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension; that his triumphant emergence from the tomb proved the power of God to overcome death and the world's hatred of Truth, which culminated in the futile endeavor to kill Jesus.

The Christian Scientist believes in personal salvation through all Christ Jesus lived to do; that, in his own words, "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Hence the subscription made by Christian Scientists to the doctrine and ordinances in their spiritual meaning and observance; in repentance, reformation, the new birth; in spiritual baptism, "submergence in Spirit;" in "spiritual communion with the one God" (Science and Health, pp. 581, 35); in the at-one-ment, or unity of God and man, exemplified in the life of Christ Jesus; in salvation by grace—the exercise of Love; in doing as well as feeling,—"faith without works is dead;" and, what is of great importance, in Christian healing as taught and practiced by the Master.

[Rose A. Lilly in Saginaw (Mich.) News]

The statement is made in an article in your issue of July 16, that "Christian Scientists throughout the world will observe this day as the anniversary of the birth of Mary Baker Eddy." The average Christian Scientist does not even know the exact date of the birth of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. On the subject of recording ages Mrs. Eddy herself has said on page 246 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "Never record ages. Chronological data are no part of the vast forever. Time-tables of birth and death are so many conspiracies against manhood and womanhood."

The further statement that "mind over matter" is the foundation upon which the Christian Science church is built might be confusing to some of your readers who do not understand the distinction made by Christian Science between the divine Mind, or God, and the so-called mortal mind. In teaching the allness of Mind and the nothingness of matter, Christian Science, it should be clearly understood, refers to the divine Mind, the Mind which was in Christ Jesus, and not to the mortal or "carnal" mind, which St. Paul says is "enmity against God." Christian Scientists understand that in the degree that they put off or reject the carnal mind and its testimony they demonstrate that matter and its attendant ills are unreal, since matter is nothing but mortal mind or human thought objectified.

The exercise of human will power in the endeavor to dominate matter is not Christian Science; in fact, the various phases of mortal mind cure, such as suggestion, hypnotism, and the like, have nothing in common with Christian Science Mind-healing and should not be confused therewith. That Christian Science healing is based upon a clear understanding and application of the words and works of Christ Jesus is proved by the fact that through its ministrations all manner of sickness and disease, both acute and chronic, are being permanently overcome in the manner prescribed by the Master and without resort to material means. The teachings of this religion are epitomized in the words spoken by Christ Jesus over nineteen centuries ago: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing."

[Judge Clifford P. Smith in Worcester (Mass.) Post]

I was much interested in the letter from a contributor to the Post, who did not sign his name, in which he said it was strange that a congregation of intelligent people should be willing to listen to a Sunday service on the subject "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" Of course your contributor referred to Christian Scientists; for Christian Science is the religion which has raised this question. Semiannually this question is the subject of a Lesson-Sermon in our church services.

It would have been sensible, I believe, for this correspondent to have attended the service when he read that this question would be the subject thereof. If he had done this, he might have concluded that the question is not so strange as is the fact that humanity has not until recently considered it a question. The strange thing is, that mankind has been content to regard as natural that which is utterly contrary to the nature of God, the only creator. Mrs. Eddy has said, "Nature and God are one and the natural order of heaven comes down to earth" (Science and Health, p. 118).

After all that can be said has been said, the answer to the question "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" must be tested by human experience. Superficially considered, this experience would seem to furnish only an affirmative answer, but the practice of Christian Science by the continual prolongation and enlargement of human life has proved and is proving the contrary. If your contributor and other readers wish to know the Principle of these effects and the basis from which Christian Science declares that sin, disease, and death are not real, this information can be obtained by attending the services of any Christian Science church, or by reading in any public library the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

[S. T. Downs in Goshen (Ind.) Democrat]

The statement, "The coroner has started an investigation," has for a long time accompanied the reports of death under Christian Science treatment, especially if the coroner is a medical doctor. While the law gives coroners the right, and in some cases makes it obligatory for them, to make an investigation when death occurs, special emphasis is usually laid on the investigation when Christian Science is concerned, manifestly for the purpose of giving the impression that a law has been violated if any other than the practice of medicine has been used in treating the sick. As a matter of fact, however, Christian Science is an entirely lawful method of treating disease, and it would be just as reasonable for Christian Scientists to insist upon an investigation and herald the fact when some one passes on under medical treatment without the presence and ministry of a Christian Scientist.

An Available Chaplain

LET there be court or commons, army or navy, public institution or secret society, and apparently there needs to be a chaplain. With regiment or ship, legislative assembly or king's house, he is looked upon as the official representative of the unseen, the spiritual. He is the reciter of services whereby thought can be lifted from mundane affairs upward, if possible, to divine harmony. Yet even with "the organ grand and the choiring band" and the service intoned, thought may not arise to heavenly flight. With formality may come familiarity, and the exquisite words of the chanted psalms or the intoned prayers may be words only, mere words, to the listener. But let a man find something awake within himself, a keen desire after God that kindles like flame and burns on while he is pondering, then he wants the substance, not the form, the meaning that accounts for words. Was it not of such an experience as this the psalmist was speaking when he said, "My heart was hot within me, while I was musing the fire burned"? We call that available which has power or efficacy for the accomplishment of the purpose or object in view. An available chaplain would be one efficacious in reminding men of the goodness of God, and such a chaplain might be not a person but an available book.

To those who are earnest seekers there may now come a chaplain, available and impersonal, needing no chapel, no vestments, no procession of singers, no organ diapason. The hillside or the deep woods will be cathedral enough, the little hut with its meager candle will be chapel sufficient, for this chaplain is in form a little book. It is a great book, too, the outstanding gift of the nineteenth century to the twentieth. But the edition of it referred to is a little book, a bibelot, suitable not only for the art lover's cabinet but for the pocket of the soldier's tunic as well. It will fit the sailor's ditty-bag, the surveyor's pouch, or the saddle bags of the cowboy or the cavalryman. It is the vest pocket edition of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." This book, the Christian Science textbook written by Mary Baker Eddy, has been for twenty-two years associated with the Bible in all the public services of the Christian Science movement throughout the world. Mrs. Eddy in her dedicatory sermon January 6, 1895, whereby the first building of The Mother Church was opened for services, said (Pulpit and Press, p. 7): "I have ordained the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' as pastor of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, —so long as this church is satisfied with this pastor. This is my first ordination."

In the year when this ordination occurred, the churches of the Christian Science movement were few. Since that date the simple form of service has circled the globe, and the churches and societies have increased fifteen hundred per cent. By this new plan for bookmaking the textbook of Christian Science may serve added thousands of seekers and students.

A man who is a chaplain, let us say, of troops in active service, has to struggle with every sort of limitation, fatigue, discouragement, weariness, and with a sense of futility because of "the little done, the undone vast." But a book has no weariness; it is transported as easily and simply as is a letter; it is not changeable; and its message waits upon understanding, waiting without any criticism or urgency. Its true teaching develops the mind of the student, so that he by studying teaches himself, and by proving what he has learned wins capacity to learn more. In her "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 50) Mrs. Eddy says: " 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' is a complete textbook of Christian Science; and its metaphysical method of healing is as lucid in presentation as can be possible, under the necessity to express the metaphysical in physical terms. There is absolutely no additional secret outside of its teachings, or that gives one the power to heal; but it is essential that the student gain the spiritual understanding of the contents of this book, in order to heal."

The scattered nations of the whole world will be glad to know the language of this textbook, that they may receive its message, because it unfolds Christian Science, and there is no remedy for the world's sorrows to-day other than Christian Science. Concerning the servant of the Lord, the Messiah, it is said in Isaiah, "So shall he sprinkle many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him: for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider." Following that prophecy came a fulfillment in the life and work of the prophet of Nazareth, but the influence of his life, his words and works, continues because his testimony was true and his demonstrations were scientific. Explaining these and making them practical for the world to-day by unfolding the Principle upon which they depended, we have the Christian Science textbook, whereof its author says (Pulpit and Press, p. 5): "This book is the leaven fermenting religion; it is palpably working in the sermons, Sunday Schools, and literature of our and other lands. This spiritual chemicalization is the upheaval produced when Truth is neutralizing error and impurities are passing off. And it will continue till the antithesis of Christianity, engendering the limited forms of a national or tyrannical religion, yields to the church established by the Nazarene Prophet and maintained on the spiritual foundation of Christ's healing."

WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE.

Cleanliness and Godliness

No one who has been acquainted with the results of Mrs. Eddy's teachings for any length of time could doubt their cleansing effect upon those who study them. Others, who have gained their impressions of Christian Science from adverse criticism, might gather the impression that physical cleanliness at least was thought of little importance by Christian Scientists, but nothing could be farther from the fact. In their churches, reading rooms, and homes the aim is to have order and purity well in evidence, and the relation of these to spiritual reality may readily be traced. Even the familiar statement that "cleanliness is next to godliness" shows that godliness must always take precedence over the other; but right here it may be remarked that where the human thought has felt the cleansing power of Truth, there will be a constant demand for purity in all things.

While it is quite true that Christian Scientists do not consider physical cleanliness as essential to health, they would cheerfully admit that it naturally accompanies it, because the thought which has been purified will never be content with anything else than purity in all its surroundings. Mrs. Eddy makes this very clear when she says on page 383 of Science and Health: "We need a clean body and a clean mind,—a body rendered pure by Mind as well as washed by water." There is, however, a great difference between the demand for external cleanliness, which is the result of fear or it may be of fastidiousness, and that which naturally accompanies a love of all that is pure and good. Christ Jesus made a clear-cut distinction between external cleanliness, even though it claimed to be associated with godliness, and the spiritual purity which springs from obedience to the law of God. When he was asked why his disciples did not comform to the ceremonial requirements of their time with respect to washing before meals, he directed his critics to the higher law which they ignored. He practically taught that when the inside is clean, the outside will be clean also.

A good many people seem to think that it is a difficult matter for mankind at large to maintain moral purity under all circumstances, or even to have much desire for it; but this is surely the result of false education. When one has been accustomed to cleanliness even of the external sort, he does not need to be reminded of the need for frequent ablutions. He would be extremely uncomfortable without them, and would almost prefer to go without his food than without the opportunity to wash,—this of course being largely the result of habit, yet at the same time being due to a certain amount of refinement, humanly speaking.

Here we ought to see that when moral purity has prevailed even for a little time as the result of spiritual understanding, there will be a greater demand for it in the individual consciousness than there ever is for external cleansing. It will also be seen that moral and spiritual purification are inseparable from health, as health is understood in Christian Science; and instead of its being a painful effort to seek the cleansing processes of Truth, these will bring no less joy and exhilaration in the mental realm than does the application of pure water to the human body. The bathing of Naaman the leper in the river Jordan but symbolizes the cleansing processes of Truth, and we can readily see that when he came up from the river he had left behind him other errors besides his leprosy. His response to the prophet's understanding of spiritual truth washed him clean from pride and prejudice with all their material accompaniments; and it was not alone his flesh which was like that of a little child, but his thought, which was ready to bow down in love and humility before the one God, the one Mind.

This experience of the olden time is being repeated daily in the healing and cleansing ministry of Christian Science. Mortals are bathing in the waters of Truth, and leaving in the dead past not only their sicknesses and sorrows, but also the pride which had done nothing for them save to shut out the healing influence of Truth; and so we see that for them —for all mankind, indeed—the cleansing processes must go on, for they add each day to the spiritual health and strength of all those who respond to Truth's demand. We are, moreover, encouraged to press on in this direction, having the assurance that our Father, who is "faithful and just," will "cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

At this time, when sin is being uncovered as at no other period in human history, we see that Truth is doing its cleansing work, and so we are called upon anew to have more faith in God, good, and to know that where the word of Truth goes out, the men, young and old, who are giving of the best they know to promote righteous government the world over, will so love purity that it will be to them a constant protection from danger of every sort, and this benediction will perpetually rest upon them: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God,"—shall see good, wherever they may be.

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

SAUL's career as a persecutor of the Christians was suddenly stopped by a voice saying unto him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" The pride of the Pharisee then had its fall, the cruelty of the odium theologicum was wiped out, Saul became Paul, the little one, and he who but a while before was "breathing out threatenings and slaughter" had to be led by the hand, helpless and abashed, into Damascus. Thus startling is sometimes the transformation of the individual when he hears the call of Truth. Writing of this experience Mrs. Eddy has said on page 324 of Science and Health: "When the truth first appeared to him in Science, Paul was made blind, and his blindness was felt; but spiritual light soon enabled him to follow the example and teachings of Jesus, healing the sick and preaching Christianity throughout Asia Minor, Greece, and even in imperial Rome."

Paul's victory came through obedience to God. His meek question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" parallels Isaiah's utterance, "Here am I, send me." Every advancing Christian must be ready without previous notice to declare this same readiness. The spiritual ear which hears is the spiritual understanding which knows. Heaven and earth are God's creation; he who obeys the divine voice and keeps the heavenly covenant, enters into his spiritual inheritance of power and dominion. Obedience to God enlists Principle upon our side in the warfare with the adversary, relieves us of the burnt offerings and sacrifices of materialism, and clothes us with the impenetrable mantle of God's protection. The chastening of Love becomes joyous through obedience. All the accumulated débris of the world's false thinking cannot obstruct the triumphant progress of him who listens, and listening hears, and hearing obeys. Foes within and without are thrown aside by this victorious advance. Hampering traditions lose their hold; false standards, a limited outlook, the demands of matter, current beliefs, and other figments of the world's imagination make way for the obedient who are panoplied in God's armor. Jesus brushed aside all the cherished points of view of self-righteous humanity in his day. Mrs. Eddy was obliged to master the incrusted conventions which would have prevented a woman from leading and commanding. She tells of her experience when as a child in her seventh year she repeatedly heard a voice calling her. The reader is referred to pages 8 and 9 of "Retrospection and Introspection" for a description of these spiritually significant incidents. At length she replied to the voice at her mother's request, using the words of little Samuel, "Speak, Lord; for Thy servant heareth."

Christian Scientists should be ready with their daily question: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? At the first peep of day the exultant sense of obedience should open their eyes and make them spring forward with joy. Behold, another day of possible achievement under divine guidance, another period of illumination which shall transform human consciousness. The material world drops and fades, and with it the myriad falsities of time and belief. The world's laws are seen to be mistakes, mortals are beheld as struggling against each other instead of against mortal mind, their common foe. Spiritually understood Isaiah's prophecy is fulfilled: "Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof." Physicality is resolved into carnal mentality. Gloom and chaos reign below.

But the answer of obedience to the call from on high brings the light. Saul who was blind becomes Paul who sees with spiritual sight. The Christian Scientist who follows the Leader emerges into the sunlight of eternal day. God's messages come and go upon the ladder of faith, and it is recognized that, as Mrs. Eddy writes on page 264 of Science and Health, "the universe of Spirit is peopled with spiritual beings, and its government is divine Science." All Christian Scientists may well ponder and reply to the call to come up higher into the realm of Spirit, where the still, small voice utters the commands of divine Science.

The church, which stands on the site of one of the first buildings erected in South Haven, viz., the old Tripp store, is a pleasing addition to the group of public and semipublic buildings in that vicinity. The auditorium is almost square and contains one hundred and fifty chairs, roomy and comfortable as well as attractively simple in design. The basement will contain the Sunday school room, which will accommodate at least one hundred children when it is finished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO.—The new home of First Church of Christ, Scientist, is located on South Seventh Street. The Christian Scientists, as the members of the church are best known to the public, have seen their following grow to considerable proportions in the last decade. They have, from time to time, held their services on North Sixth Street in a building which was situated on a portion of the site of the Central Presbyterian Church, in the Richards Building, and in the Schultz Buildings. For the last four years they have had quarters in the Monumental Building.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, has been an organized church locally, having taken out incorporation papers and having had a state charter since January, 1914. The edifice is located on the site of what many know as the old Brendel property. Others know it as the old Schultz residence.

The Lectures

MIAMI, OKLA. (First Church).—Ezra W. Palmer, lecturer; introduced by Clyde Morsey, who said in part:—

The power to heal spiritually was seemingly lost about three hundred years after Jesus' appearance on earth, and it remained for Mrs. Eddy in the year 1866 to rediscover this golden thread of healing and present it to the world through Christian Science, which comes to us as did the Savior of old, in meekness and might, offering to heal every one who is willing to answer in the affirmative the Master's question, "Wilt thou be made whole?"

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Oscar F. Greiner, who said in part:—

In religion there is a growing demand for something more than a mere formal statement of belief, for a religion that is not only logical but also practical and capable of demonstration. The old idea of heaven as a locality to be gained only after death, is being supplanted by the Christian Science definition, that it is a condition which can be attained here and now. In the past we have been taught that the Bible promises refer only to the future, while Christian Science teaches us that these promises can be realized in the present. According to the old belief we should bear such things as pain and sickness with patience, and look to the future for deliverance from these ills. Christian Science disputes this theory and says that there is an ever operating Principle which can eliminate all discordant conditions.

Digitized by Google

ST. LOUIS, MO. (Fourth Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by William E. Morgan, who said in part:—

In the twenty-third chapter of Proverbs we read of mortal man, "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy we read on page 550, "Error of thought is reflected in error of action;" and again on page 167, "Our proportionate admission of the claims of good or of evil determines the harmony of our existence,—our health, our longevity, and our Christianity."

If this be true it follows that the evils which befall the children of men—sin, sickness, death, infirmity, sorrow, despair, duplicity, treachery, disloyalty, and so forth, including the appalling world conflict which is constantly present in our thought—are all the outcome of erroneous thinking, and the way out of these conditions is to learn to think aright. The harmony of existence is not obtained by becoming adept in the ways of error, but by knowing more and more of Truth. Jesus admonished his disciples to know the truth, promising that the truth would make them free. The gospel of Christian Science is preeminently the teaching and practice of right thinking.

SACRAMENTO, CAL. (First Church).—Clarence W. Chadwick, lecturer; introduced by Hartley E. Jackson, who said in part:—

In all the turmoil and stress of this war-stricken world, this teaching of the reality and availability of God's love bids men hope for peace. "The Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save," cried the prophet; and of the saving, healing power of infinite, divine Love—of the guiding, governing ever presence of divine Mind, or Principle—hundreds of thousands of joyful, sincere Christians are testifying daily in regeneration of life, proclaiming that in Christian Science they have found the Comforter—the spiritual truth Jesus promised to mankind; and they are realizing their debt of gratitude to him who suffered that the world might know the truth that makes free. This truth, apparently hardly understood even by those with whom our Master daily walked, was revealed to the pure spiritual vision of our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, and by her given to all mankind in her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Christian Science is a demonstrable religion of love, peace, joy, and power.—The Sacramento Union.

Testimonies of Healing

Through Christian Science I was instantaneously healed of serious stomach trouble and general debility which had burdened me since childhood. This healing made me supremely happy, not only because of the relief from bondage, but because it proved to me that Christian Science is the truth that Jesus taught. We have frequent demonstrations in our home which prove to us the efficacy of this beautiful truth.

I wish to tell of my brother-in-law's wonderful healing of a malignant growth on the liver and of diabetes. He had no knowledge of Christian Science except what we had tried to give him after learning that physicians had pronounced his case hopeless. He went so far as to visit a practitioner, but his faith being stronger on the side of medicine he decided to return to that, as he considered his case altogether too serious to trust to something of which he knew so little. He soon became very ill and was confined to bed for many weeks. Finally physicians said that he had but ten days to live. My husband and I visited him on a Sunday afternoon, and to mortal sense it seemed that we might receive the message of his passing on within the next twenty-four hours. He was such a sufferer that after returning home we telephoned to his family and inquired if we might engage a Christian Science practitioner.

The family consented to this, and Christian Science treatment was commenced that evening by a faithful worker, and continued for ten days. Then, as there was no Christian Science thought or cooperation in the home, we decided to discontinue the treatments. The healing had, however, already taken place, although it required a few weeks for the patient and his friends to realize that it was permanent, owing to the fact that physicians had pronounced the case positively hopeless. It gives me pleasure to say that my brother-in-law is now well and has resumed his work, continuing it without interruption up to the present time.

I am indeed grateful for even a limited knowledge of this beautiful truth, which enables us to reach out to a fellow man in distress, and my prayer is that I may do some good each day.—Mrs. E. A. Bates, Chicago, Ill.

I have read the statement of my sister-in-law, Mrs. Bates, relative to my healing through Christian Science, and am very grateful for the opportunity of verifying same. I will gladly answer any inquiry from anyone seeking to learn the truth and desirous of gaining a better understanding of this great work.—S. G. Hutchison.

In gratitude for all that Christian Science has brought to me I send my testimony. For twelve years, so far as I can remember, not a day passed without my taking medicine. I was brought up in a home where everything that promised help was faithfully tried, but I still suffered more than I want either to express or to remember. Three minor operations that were undergone proved of no avail. Heartsick and despairing, I then consented to a serious operation. This was performed, and for a time hope was renewed, but only to be dashed to the ground. I was left in a more deplorable condition than ever, unable to take my part in the world, a burden to myself and all about me.

At this time, six years ago, Christian Science was presented to me. I had not heard of it before and jokingly laughed at it, but read Science and Health just because I wanted something to pass away the time. I turned first to the account of the spiritual creation, and my thought was so transformed and uplifted while reading it that I was instantaneously healed. I arose from the lounge where I was lying, took off the bandages which were being worn for support, and in two days was doing my housework. I have never touched medicine since; the Bible and Science and Health have met every need. Stomach trouble was overcome by realizing man's dominion, and for the first time in my life I ate without fear and suffered no ill effects. The way since then has sometimes seemed dark, but through faithful application of our Leader's teachings there has been constant progress out of discord into harmony. I am grateful for the daily lesson; for the Sunday service, which is impersonal, unadulterated, and satisfying; for a Bible so illumined by our Leader's teachings that its truth is sufficient for every need of mankind.

It is only as we progress and learn to apply the truth understandingly to the many problems that present themselves that we can begin to appreciate Mrs. Eddy's life work, and the wisdom she displayed in the manner in which she preserved and presented to us this "unspeakable gift."

Eight years ago I was led to take up the study of Christian Science for the healing of burns caused by a gas explosion. The force of the explosion threw me back about twelve feet, and my eyes, face, hands, and arms were severely burned. The pain in the eyes was so intense that the other burns, even where the flesh was exposed, were not noticed. A physician was called, but was unable to give any relief. I did not know how to get help in Christian Science, but a friend was called by telephone, and through this friend's understanding of the truth I was instantaneously relieved of all pain and could open my eyes and see perfectly. From the severity of the injury to the eyes I do not believe I could have seen again without the aid of Christian Science. Those who saw the burns said it would take six months to heal them, and that I would be terribly scarred for life; but with the help of a Christian Science practitioner the healing was complete in one week, and not a sign of a scar was left.

Two years ago, while overseeing some construction work, I was standing on a scaffold twenty-six feet high when a plank gave way. Even as I was falling the thought came to me, God is Love, and in Him I have protection. One foot was dislocated by the fall, but while I sat there realizing the truth of being, it went back into place without the slightest physical assistance. A doctor had been sent for, but he was permitted only to bandage the leg loosely. A Christian Science practitioner's help was secured by wire, and the day following I was able to return to my home in Kansas City unassisted, and in a short time could walk perfectly. More recently I was healed of the tobacco habit, which seemed quite tenacious. One day an especially helpful thought came to me on reading an article in the Sentinel, and a few days later I realized that I had been freed from the habit. There has never been any desire for the weed since.

During these eight years of study divine Love has met every need. Our three children have been healed of measles, fevers, and other ills, and have never taken a drop of medicine. I know that Christian Science is absolutely reliable, for God is omnipotent. The Principle taught and demonstrated is of the greatest importance to me every day in business affairs, for there is greater harmony and I have much more satisfaction in my work. I am very thankful for all the authorized Christian Science literature, having special cause for appreciation of the Monitor, as it was the means through which I secured my present employment, which is satisfactory and profitable. I am also deeply grateful for the spiritual unfoldment that comes to me daily through the study of Christian Science. I always read the Bible a great deal, but had no idea that its teachings could be demonstrated. I thank God for Mrs. Eddy, who through her pure thought and spiritual consciousness was able to write "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which makes Christianity demonstrable.

Christian Science has shown me a God whom I may know aright, a God who is Love, and it teaches me that Life is divine. It also teaches me how to pray aright, and that mere lip service availeth nothing. Mrs. Eddy says, "Lips must be mute and materialism silent, that man may have audience with Spirit, the divine Principle, Love, which destroys all error" (Science and Health, p. 15). For this correct understanding of God, the great I AM, and the true knowledge of prayer that is being gained each day through this study, I am most grateful.—PHILIP W. MILLER, Kansas City, Mo.

My heart overflows with gratitude for my knowledge of this truth and for the many blessings that have come to me in the past eight years. When Christian Science first came into my life, although I did not take it up especially for the physical healing, I was healed in two treatments of a complete nervous breakdown. Later, through the reading of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was healed of chronic bowel trouble of fifteen years' standing, also of neuralgia of the face which for a number of years had manifested itself during the winter months, so that I was never free from it for any length of time. About a year afterward the latter ailment returned with what to mortal sense was an ulcerated tooth, but with the help of a practitioner, not only was the tooth saved but the neuralgia was overcome and has never returned.

While the physical healings were indeed wonderful to me, that for which I was most grateful was the spiritual uplift. For about one month I read the textbook almost night and day, and surely did dwell "in the secret place of the most High;" but in my case the testing time soon came, and for more than three years I passed through what to mortal sense seemed deep waters. Discord of almost every nature was manifested in the family, but to-day nearly every member of the family has been benefited by Christian Science or is interested, at least in some degree, in it.

I am grateful for the overcoming of fear, also of the sense of limitation, and of every discordant condition that manifests itself in daily experience. I rejoice in the privilege of membership in The Mother Church, also in the branch church of this city. I am thankful to God that He sent us the Comforter, and that there was one pure enough to bring this wonderful truth to suffering humanity.

Seven years ago Christian Science was brought to my home upon the complete healing, in two treatments, of my husband's mother. The decision of five reputable physicians in consultation was that an immediate operation for gallstones must be performed. A few hours before she was to have been taken to the hospital I suggested that we try Christian Science. She knew nothing of this teaching but consented, so a practitioner was called. After the first treatment all pain left, and complete restoration followed the second. The patient had undergone severe suffering for about three weeks, so this healing was very wonderful to me. I had always been well, but thought that if ever I were ill I would rely on Christian Science.

About two years from this time I had a serious nervous breakdown and employed one physician after another, then began to take various kinds of treatment. When at the end of two years I was no better, as a last resort I took up the study of Christian Science. It seemed some time before physical relief came, but I had no thought of giving up and read a great deal. With the help of a kind practitioner I endeavored to know the truth, and am thankful for this period, as I learned that the one thing to be sought is understanding. Since beginning to study Christian Science this saving truth has been our only remedy. Each of my two children has had a number of quick and beautiful healings, and my husband was healed in two treatments of a severe attack of influenza, which seemed to be epidemic and to take a serious form.

At one time a testimony meant to me the telling of something that had been accomplished; now it means an expression of gratitude. For the help I have received from others, and the literature furnished by The Christian Science Publishing Society, I am very grateful, and I wish to express my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of this great movement. I am also thankful that the truth heals not only physical discords but every inharmonious condition.

[Translated from the French]

I feel impelled to give expression to my sincere gratitude to God for the good that has come to me and mine by being led to find friends who through Christian Science put us on the road to Truth. We attended the services regularly for about a year, and had seen much improvement along several lines; more especially, it was my life which showed a great change. Despite the troublous times through which we are passing, I enjoy much greater peace of mind than formerly. Thus, having just returned from my fourth term of service in connection with the mobilization, I may say that during my absence I have had no apprehension concerning the work which I would find at the office upon my return. Before becoming acquainted with Christian Science I worried for a month in advance of a mere supplementary training lasting twelve days.

During this last mobilization, however, a serious test presented itself, which, thanks to Christian Science, was readily met, as I realized that if I did what was right, no evil would or could befall me. To come to the point, the case was one concerning my eldest son. I knew that for some time he had been coughing a great deal, and my wife and I worked against this error; still, in view of the fact that the boy kept coughing, as she was alone my wife decided to call a physician. After a thorough examination he took my wife aside and told her of his apprehension, saying that the case was serious, one of the lungs being affected, and that the boy should be sent to the mountains as soon as possible. He also prescribed several remedies, besides massage.

I can readily imagine my wife's condition after this consultation had she not known of Christian Science. Thanks to her knowledge of it she remained calm, and worked all night against this error which seemed to have befallen us. All this took place on a Tuesday, and as I was away doing service I knew nothing about it. My wife, however, wrote, informing me of the situation, but without telling me all that the physician had said, as she thought it would cause me to worry too much. She simply told me that the physician had found our son's cough to be a rather serious matter which required treatment, and that she would explain to me upon my return on the following Sunday. Wednesday morning the physician called again, and found the little patient very much better than the preceding day. He had spent a good night, had hardly coughed, and there was no fever. The prescribed remedies not having been bought, there could be no question as to the way in which the result had come about. Upon examining our son again the physician declared that he had been mistaken, that the case was not so serious as he had thought, and that the use of the remedies prescribed would soon put the boy on his feet. Needless to say, my wife did not tell the doctor the real cause of this sudden change; but she continued to work in Science, a task made very much easier through the assistance of a Scientist who has proved a great help to my wife, and to whom I feel greatly indebted on that account.

The healing which ensued is quickly told. Upon my return from service on Saturday afternoon, that is, three days after the visit of the doctor, I found my son up, with blooming cheeks, all smiles, and freed from the cough. My joy may be imagined to be able on Sunday to attend the Christian Science service with my son, who four days previous had been declared to be so seriously affected. For all these benefits I praise God, and wish to thank again all those who have helped me to become acquainted with this great liberating agent, Christian Science.

In every way I have felt the harmony which even a glimpse of the truth brings. When a child I could never travel without being miserable, but on one occasion, before a trip of two days and nights, my mother asked a Christian Science friend to treat me, and as a result of the treatment I felt no annoyance then, nor have I suffered from this ailment since, though I have been on the train a great deal.

I came to Christian Science for peace, both mental and physical. An eruption appeared on my face, and for months I tried various material means of relief,—followed a physician's prescriptions, ate only certain foods, and tried other methods of treatment; but instead of improving, the condition became worse. Then I knew the time had come for me to turn to Christian Science. The healing was slow, but I read and studied the Bible, together with "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and as I learned more of the divine Principle of being, the fear grew less and less and the discord vanished.

I have had many other healings, some of them with the help of a friend who is a practitioner. There is still much to be overcome, but to have found the way is cause for constant gratitude and rejoicing. Each day brings new proofs that as we seek the truth earnestly, discords vanish and we become conscious of a wonderful sense of harmony.

Three years ago, while working as telegraph operator, I was stricken with physical and mental breakdown, so that I was unable to work and became very much worried over my condition. I had heard something of Christian Science, but like many people gave it little consideration; however, one Sunday in March, 1913, having spent a very restless night, I decided to see a practitioner in another city. I arrived at her home exhausted, but after a while began to respond to the truth. The practitioner then told me about God and the teachings of Christian Science. Before this I had only a faint idea as to what God is; in fact I knew very little of the Bible and its teachings.

I had been in the habit of going out with boys to saloons, thinking them places of entertainment. I drank, smoked, and used profane language, and called it all having a good time. After the practitioner had read and talked to me for a while I told her I wished to refrain from all bad habits and asked her to help me overcome error by applying the truth. Immediately my desire for drinking, smoking, and swearing left me, and since then, by the help of God, I have had no trouble in resisting temptation. I have held close to the teachings of Christian Science as found in Science and Health, and have thus learned how to watch and pray, whereas previously I was ignorant of how to pray or how to approach God for help. To-day I am a strong, healthy man. We have fully relied on Christian Science since I turned to it for help. My wife has had many proofs of the power of Truth, and we have three girls, all well and healthy.

Words cannot express my thankfulness to God for all these blessings, and my gratitude to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the wonderful healing truth.

W. A. LEWIS, Roodhouse, Ill.

I gratefully testify to the rich blessings received through Christian Science. Four years ago I began to read Science and Health to prepare for the birth of my second child. I suffered so much when my first baby came that I was filled with fear, but the second child was born without any pain, and before the doctor arrived. My husband came into Science just two weeks later, and he had a wonderful healing of nervousness.

Two and a half years later I gave birth to another child. Of course we had a doctor present to comply with the laws of the state, but it is needless to say he was not needed. In ten days I was up, doing my work and caring for three children. We are all happy, and have had many more wonderful healings through Christian Science. For all these blessings I am deeply thankful to God, also grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy.—MRS. W. A. LEWIS.

Christian Science came to me when all else had failed. I would be better for a short time, then as ill as ever again. I was acquainted with several Christian Scientists, and one morning something (I now know it was Truth leading me) told me to go to one of them and ask for help. I did so, and the lady sent a practitioner to see me. In a short time I was healed. I am grateful not only for the physical healing, but also for the mental cleansing, which brings joy and peace. At the time I was being treated for the chronic trouble my arm was bandaged and I was carrying it in a sling, having fractured a bone at the elbow. The day after the practitioner called I took the arm out of the sling and soon the bandage was discarded. The arm has never given me any further trouble.

We can never be grateful enough to Mrs. Eddy for her untiring efforts, and for giving to us her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which shows us so clearly how to interpret the Bible and how each one may work out his own salvation here and now. I am also grateful for the Sentinel, the Journal, and the Monitor, for I have been helped over many seeming obstacles by reading them.

IRENE A. HALL WILLIAMS, Kennett Square, Pa.

In October, 1910, when we decided to try Christian Science for our little girl of four, we were filled with anxiety and fear for our children. Our eldest child had been operated on several times for tubercular glands, and I was worried to distraction over the second child, who seemed to be very delicate and sickly, so that I was beginning to believe she might have this disease in another form. The teaching of Christian Science came like a ray of hope, as I had lost much of my faith in medical methods. The little girl began to mend under treatment by a Christian Science practitioner, so that gradually my fear was lessened and none of the terrible things I had anticipated came upon us. Both of these children are now strong and well, and we seldom have any illness in our family of six.

In the six years that we have been interested in Christian Science we have had so many blessings it would be impossible to tell of them all. Glasses which had been worn for a structural defect of the eyes have been discarded, frequent sick headaches have ceased to occur, and a malignant sore on my hand has disappeared; also many attacks of earache and other minor ills among the children have been overcome. My husband has been helped in his business problems many times, and we have a home where discord has been replaced by harmony and happiness.

We are grateful that our children may grow up with a better understanding of God as infinite Love, as taught in this logical and practical religion which is a help in every need; and we appreciate the good that comes to us through the Christian Science periodicals and so many sources, so that our cup indeed "runneth over."

I have long felt that a public expression of thanks for Christian Science was due from me. Could all the benefits this teaching has conferred on me and mine be written, they would indeed fill a book. Christian Science has changed my whole life and character; from an ill, unhappy semi-invalid I have become the very opposite. It has delivered me from fears, belief of inherited temper, as well as so-called inherited physical ailments, and changed my thought of God as an unknowable, far-away, unjust, mysterious power, whom I could not love and only feared, to that concept of Him as "universal, eternal, divine Love, which changeth not and causeth no evil, disease, nor death" (Science and Health, p. 140).

Christian Science when rightly applied has always brought harmony in place of discord of every name and nature. Like thousands of others I can only say that words fail to express my gratitude and love for the knowledge of Christian Science as given to the world by dear Mrs. Eddy. I am grateful for all our literature. The Journal and the Sentinel, with the helpful articles and testimonies coming to us so regularly, often meet some need of encouragement, or help us to detect some error in consciousness. I am thankful to the faithful workers who send out to the field such clear statements of Truth.

It has been twenty-four years since I first began to study Christian Science. In all this time it has been my only physician. It has healed my sorrows and met every need, mental, moral, and physical, as well as financial. Since my first treatments I have not spent a day in bed and have been able to do work that was seemingly very hard. I thank God every day for this blessed truth.

MRS. M. W. SAWTELLE, Fryeburg, Maine.

I am thankful for many manifestations of the ever presence of divine Love. Under Christian Science treatment I have given birth to two children with only a trained nurse in attendance. Almost no pain was experienced, and in each case I was up and about in a few days. The children have never had any medicine and have been cured of many minor ailments. They are bright and happy and a great joy to us. When nursing my little son an abscess developed on the left breast; but by holding to the truth I was able to continue feeding my babe, and with the help of a practitioner the condition was overcome in about ten days.

I have had many other proofs of the healing power of Christian Science, for which, as well as for other blessings, I am thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy. My husband also is grateful for what Christian Science has done for us.—TERESA H. BRISCOE, Ambala, India.

In 1911 I was in what is considered the last stage of pulmonary tuberculosis. I was weak, emaciated, and suffered from violent hemorrhages after the least physical exertion. The doctor informed my family that my condition was hopeless and that the end might come at any time. Since there was no promise of material relief I turned to God as a last resort, and with the loving help of a Christian Science practitioner, together with a careful study of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, I was healed. After this remarkable healing I allowed my interest in Christian Science to wane, and in a couple of years was obliged to do the work over as the result of physical relapse. I again had help and worked hard and patiently, so that in due time I was once more master of the condition, and have continued in the enjoyment of health ever since.

I have been healed not only of sin and disease, but also of a sense of poverty, the result of sickness, together with a limited sense of strength and ability to accept employment other than that to which I was accustomed. I can now do very hard labor; indeed, I work from ten to thirteen hours a day in a factory and go to and from work in all kinds of weather without suffering any bad physical effects. This is surely proof of my healing and of my reliance on Truth.

I am truly thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for the many blessings received. I also appreciate the loving help of practitioners and other Christian Scientists.

HARRY L. MCCORD, New Castle, Ind.

I was seventy-three years old when healed through Christian Science of stomach disorder and bowel trouble, from which I had suffered for over forty years and for which I was taking medicine most of the time. I was so sick I thought I was passing out. My daughters then asked me if I wanted Christian Science treatment and I said yes, so a practitioner gave me an absent treatment. I was able to sit with the family at the supper table that evening, and the next day went to the practitioner's office. In all I took seven treatments and was completely healed. I have never taken a drop of medicine since, and have better health than ever before. I am very thankful to God for this healing, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this beautiful truth.

It is with a heart overflowing with thankfulness to God that I write this testimony as to what Christian Science has done for me. I can never be grateful enough for the wonderful understanding that has unfolded to me through its teachings. I have had many proofs of God's loving care, and know that so long as I rely on divine Love every need is met. I wish to express my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for Science and Health and for all our other literature. Christian Science has altered the whole tenor of my life, and with the guidance of divine Love I know I shall be able to help others on the upward path.

From Our Exchanges

[New-Church Messenger]

Our Lord day by day preached about his kingdom. The people thought of a natural, civil, and political kingdom. The Lord, using the same term, meant something entirely different. He meant a new, a spiritual rule and government, a new life; a kingdom of conscience, not a kingdom of coercion and government by force of arms. He meant a new church in which new principles of life would first be accepted. As they were applied a new spiritual force would develop a new civilization in the world.

As the people listened a differentiation took place. Those of a purely Jewish type of mind clung to the literal idea; but others began to see a new light shining from the prophecies. They saw a more spiritual meaning within the letter. They saw that this spiritual idea was embodied in types and figures, in symbols and correspondences, that these were the means or vessels to convey the more precious truths within. So they became truly disciples of the Lord and entered into his kingdom, that is, into the Christian church.

[The Christian Intelligencer]

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil." Here we have Jesus ranging himself in sequence with all past revelation, recognizing its function and value, and claiming to bring out its spiritual meaning and to fulfill the purpose for which it was given. We cannot reflect on this attitude of Jesus, and the claims which it involves, without feeling an irresistible impulse to break forth into doxology at the wonderfulness and surpassing preeminence of Jesus. Here was the law aiming at ideal character. Jesus claims to realize what the law intended, hence claims to be sinless. Here were the prophets promising a coming deliverer, pointing to a Messiah. Jesus claims to fulfill the promises of the prophets, hence claims to be the Messiah.

[The Christian Work]

To Jesus Christ all work was sacred. Jesus Christ as a carpenter was just as divine as when he cleansed the leper or preached to the multitude. In every case he was carrying out the will of God. When Jesus stood by the river Jordan, and the heavens opened, and the voice declared, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," he had never, so far as we know, performed a miracle or preached a sermon. He had simply been toiling as a carpenter in the little town of Nazareth. He had pleased God as a carpenter.

What Is a Journal?

Mary Baker Eddy published the first issue of The Christian Science Journal April 14, 1883, stating in the prospectus that her purpose in founding it was "to bring to many a household health, happiness, and increased power to be good and to do good:—to kindle all minds with a common sentiment in regard for and understanding of Infinite Truth." Upon the organization of The Christian Science Publishing Society in 1898, the publication of the Journal was placed in the hands of the Society, and Judge Septimus J. Hanna was made editor.

The word journal comes from the French "jour," meaning day; and journal really means a daily record of occurrences.

Speaking of the fact that she gave the name for all the Christian Science periodicals, Mrs. Eddy says, "The first was The Christian Science Journal, designed to put on record the divine Science of Truth" (Miscellany, p. 353).

"Record," another French word, literally means remembrance.

Then is it not the function of The Christian Science Journal to put into our daily remembrance "the divine Science of Truth"?

This view seems strengthened by an examination of Mrs. Eddy's definition of "Day" on page 584 of Science and Health as "the irradiance of Life; light, the spiritual idea of Truth and Love. 'And the evening and the morning were the first day.' (Genesis 1:5.) The objects of time and sense disappear in the illumination of spiritual understanding, and Mind measures time according to the good that is unfolded. This unfolding is God's day, and 'there shall be no night there.'"

Is the Journal bringing us "irradiance of Life;" is it putting us in daily remembrance of "the spiritual idea of Truth and Love"?

Or is it to us merely a periodical that comes once a month, to be casually examined? Is it frequently read, and sometimes studied?

As an official organ of The Mother Church, containing a directory of Christian Science Churches, Societies, Reading Rooms, and practitioners throughout the world, will not The Christian Science Journal become a more extensively welcomed periodical when the true metaphysical significance attached to it by Mrs. Eddy is more clearly grasped by her followers?

Opportunity to send the messengers of Christian Science on their healing mission is afforded through the plan of the Postmaster-General of the United States to send to soldiers and sailors at the front, at nominal postage, periodicals offered by individuals at post offices or to postmen. The printed notice on the front of this issue signed by Mr. Burleson explains this simple plan.

Those desiring to send periodicals other than their own copies, or copies previously given for local distribution work, can doubtless make arrangements with any Christian Science reading room to send periodicals regularly as desired, either to soldiers and sailors at the front, or at the training cantonments, or for any other purpose of general distribution.
