WE TAKE PLEASURE IN ANNOUNCING ----

JOHN FUDGE, D.Sc., completed training at Saint Hill and has returned to Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C. as Organizational Secretary. He received on graduation a Class III with Honours. In the opinion of Saint Hill instructors he is one of the best students the course has had. At time of departure his meter was coming down to clear and he will probably complete clearing in DC in a few weeks of auditing.

With Dr. Fudge and those already trained, FCDC now has as many Saint Hill graduates as London, and with those soon to return will have more Saint Hill graduates than any other organization in the world.

an experiment with scientology processes in a first grade

WHEN these six year olds came to me in September only five of them seemed normal happy children with normal responses to their environment. A few were noisy and boisterous but most of them were shy and withdrawn. They seemed tense and filled with anxiety. They talked and listened very little or not at all.

I considered that these children had lost their beingness or had never been granted any in the first place. Most of them had no self-determinism. They didn't want to do anything. They just sat there staring at me with expressionless eyes and faces. Very few of these children had attended kindergarten and I realized facing this new adjustment from home life to school life posed a difficult problem for them.

The first Scientology game used was "Watch Him", usually played in the morning for fifteen minutes. The room was very large and enough chairs could be set up in one end of it.

There were many and varied reactions but eventually everyone liked the game. Often when the children were free to choose an activity they would ask to go over in the corner and play "Watch Him". I also used an adaptation of "I heard that" letting pupils count, say nursery rhymes or a poem we had learned.

In the afternoon I used various pictures in the chalk tray or taped to the blackboard. For example, a rabbit and a squirrel. I would say

"This is a game to see how well you can use your eyes and your ears. When I say 'Look at the rabbit' you look at the picture of the rabbit and then say 'All right'. I will say "Thank you". Then I will say 'Look at the squirrel". After you look at the picture of the squirrel you say, 'All right" and I will say 'Thank you' or "OK".

We used this for about ten minutes.

Sometimes I would use pictures of a girl and a boy (Alice and Jerry - the children in the Pre-Primer). Sometimes I would use two volunteers from the class to stand in front of the room on either side of me about five feet away.

Look at Mary.

(Pupils) All right.

Thank you.

Look at Joe.

(Pupils) All right.

Thank you. Etc.

This type of thing went on until January. By this time the pupils had become more alive and interested in people and things around them.

After the first Metropolitan Achievement Test in January, I really went to work on, "Look at that Wall", and continued until the final IQ test in May.

Eight pupils (1 - 6, 9 and 10) used "Make Me Believe It". These were chosen because they could work with less noise than the others. After I showed them how the game worked they were more or less on their own for fifteen minutes a day for about four weeks. (Had I known then what I know now I would have let the others use it. Note the final achievement and progress of these in comparison with others in the group.)

Some Comments on the Test Scores

Numbers 7 and 14 had been ill and out of school for several days. They returned the day the IQ test was given. This probably accounts for their minus scores. Number 22 probably did much guessing on the first test. Number 30 showed no change in IQ. He was the only one in the group who wore glasses and they stayed broken most of the time. He also broke an arm and was in the hospital for several days.

Nevertheless these children along with all the others showed remarkable improvement in other ways. Everyone seemed more alert, was eager to work, and had a keen sense of belonging to the group. Each child seemed to have developed a feeling of personal worth which led to self-confidence. All of them assumed an unusual amount of responsibility regarding personal appearance, care of the room and helping one another.

If, during a class period, certain pupils came up with wrong number combinations or were unsure about familiar words, several in the group would ask to help them after class. When this first happened I asked, "What will you do to help him?" These are some of the replies: "Let him count buttons, children, chairs or anything until he knows that three and two are five." "Drill him with these words on the flash cards then let him make a sentence using each word."

The pupils who needed help did not resent being helped by their classmates. In fact, some would ask, "Let so-and-so help me". If a child had been absent several days everyone felt responsible to teach him the new game, song or poem learned during his absence. Nor did they all clamor to do it at once. Somehow they had developed an ability to choose among themselves or let the person himself choose the one he wished to help him.

Some Interesting Reactions

At the beginning of the school year Number 28, a very small boy, told me he couldn't hear. When I asked how did he know he said his big brother told him. "Can you hear what I am saying to you now?" I asked. "Yes", he replied. I asked him to move about twenty feet away to note if he could still hear what I said. He did. And He could hear. "You can hear!" I said. "Tell your brother he made a big mistake". The boy grinned for all he was worth. He felt both ears as if he had just discovered them. Ever after this when the command, "Feel your ears" was given he would be the first to feel his ears and the last to turn them loose - grinning all the time. One day when he was doing numbers at his seat he stopped all of a sudden and began to feel his ears. I moved quietly about the room and asked what he was doing. He said he was feeling his ears to see if they were still there. Whenever he drew pictures he made the ears twice the size of the animal.

Number 25 was unusually large for his age (6-10). He seemed dull and listless. He moved about very slowly and put forth very little effort to do anything. After a month of "Look at that wall" he perked up to the extent he was quite talkative, swift-moving and mean. His school work was worse than ever. Several times he deliberately disobeyed me and fought smaller boys and girls for no apparent reason. I finally spanked him and sat him in front of a long mirror to think things over. After ten minutes or more he came to me and said, "Let's look at that wall". (It was all I could do to keep from laughing. I suppose he thought after that spanking both of us needed to "Look at that wall"). We did. Also I used CCH 1* on him and three others after school twenty minutes a day for two weeks. This boy's IQ went up twenty points, his school work improved, and he was much more cooperative.

Some Comments from Others

A supervisor commented that all the children seemed to have such bright shining eyes - "and they all look at me," she said. "Makes me feel a bit queer. I'm not used to children looking at me like that."

One morning the principal was observing a group in reading. When I finished I asked would she like to hear group 1 or group

* Note: CCH 1 is a Scientology process.

3 next. She was astonished - thought the one she had just heard was group 1. After hearing group 3 she couldn't understand how all of them could read. She asked if I would let the other first grade teachers come in and observe me teach. I refused because I knew what I was teaching out of the the textbook was the thing that was helping the pupils the most. It was the Scientology processes I was using with them.

And now ---

The Sour Note

It had been known previously that the passing grade on the Metropolitan Achievement Test would be 1.4 showing that the child had been in the first grade four months. This is low but it has always been said "The test doesn't show everything. I had no 1.4's. My lowest was 1.6 so I placed everyone's name on the passing list. What did I do this for! The principal called me into her office and said she did not want "wholesale promotions". She said, "it stood to reason" the lowest group should fail and returned the list to me to change it. I kept it two days. When she sent for it I returned it unchanged. She sent it back by a student and said, "Change this right now and send it back!"

I did.

The principal didn't know what I was doing and I didn't tell her. In the fall I had handed her a copy of Science of Survival* and asked if she would read the Publisher's Introduction and let me know what she thought about it. I went on to say it gives facts and figures on how a person's IQ can be increased. And I wondered if something could be done to improve the intelligence and behavior of the children in our school. She said she would "look it over" during her lunch hour. That same day she returned it by a student with no comment whatever. So I went on a "Do it yourself" basis. The school gave the Metropolitan Achievement Tests but I gave the IQ tests for which she had to sign before I could purchase. I told her I was doing an extension course.

* SCIENCE OF SURVIVAL by L. Ron Hubbard is a book which enables the reader to predict the behavior of the people around him in his environment and to handle them more easily. It also indicates how he can help them change their behavior. The book is written around the Hubbard Chart of Human Evaluation -- each chapter explores one column of the chart showing the characteristic behavior at each Tone Level. A MESSAGE FROM THE ORGANIZATIONAL SECRETARY

I completed the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course on 8th June, 1962, being awarded by Ron a Class III classification with Honors. I spent exactly nineteen weeks at Saint Hill. During this time I worked most Saturdays and Sundays, logging on the average at least 60 hours of auditing and study time per week, not including breaks, etc. This is normal for an SHSBC student. I passed approximately 100 bulletin checks and about 45 tape examinations. I gave about 200 hours of auditing during that time and received about the same. Plus many Training Drills whose number I lost count of. That describes the bare bones of the Saint Hill Special Briefing course during the time I was on course. Since that time the course has been further improved and made more precise.

At no time did I ever feel at a loss for something to do and at no time did I ever feel that the eye of an instructor was off me.

Since returning to Washington, D. C. , I have been engaged in the task of putting into the organizational set-up here the things I learned at Saint Hill. Most of these naturally have been Technical (to do with auditing and the training of auditors). I have constantly been seeking to upgrade the level of Technical to the point of perfection. In this I have achieved some measure of success, finding a full willingness amongst staff here to learn and to apply what is learned. This has showed up primarily in our Hubbard Guidance Center results, which have been steadily improving for many weeks. In the Academy of Scientology I have insisted on greater and greater precision of application of training skills, and this too is going in well.

You are entitled to know what I am doing. Those Saint Hillers who have returned to field practices are usually quite self-evident by the enormous increase in their activities and need no further explanation as a rule. A Central Organization, however, is a different "breed of cat" to a field activity and is not self-evident to such a simple degree. As the first Class III auditor to work in this Central Organization I have considered it my duty to apply Saint Hill training here to the best of my ability, to increase organizational efficiency to the public and the field.

We will shortly have more Class III auditors at work here. They will teach the HCA (Hubbard Certified Auditor) course and will further improve the level of tuition in the Academy. Class III auditors will also work in the Hubbard Guidance Center to assure faster results and Clearing in the HGC.

I recommend two things to your attention: if you wish to get Clear, either be audited by a Class III auditor in the field or come to the Hubbard Guidance Center. If you wish to become an auditor come to the Academy of Scientology. Auditing is a wonderful profession as itself, but training as an auditor is invaluable for any line of work in Life.

To those of you who are already trained auditors, I recommend you make plans, if you haven't already, to attend the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course. A re-tread course at the Academy is desirable, if not essential. A re-tread course would certainly be essential for any auditor who has no experience with the Mark IV E-meter, as such training is considered to have already been attained by the Saint Hill student before he or she starts course.

I will look forward to seeing many of you at the Congress and will be happy to talk over with you any questions you may have or advice you may require on an individual basis. Also feel free to communicate with me at any time.

1962 is being for me a most successful year, with high expectations for the future. I hope this will be a splendid year for you too. The means for this are at hand and I urge you to make use of them.

My very good wishes to you all -

John Fudge, D.Scn.

 SCIENTOLOGY GAME NO. 1

NAME: "Watch Him".

POSITION: Children are divided in pairs, seated facing each other with knees almost touching.

GAME: Each child sits comfortably and relaxed in his chair perfectly motionless, watching the other, with his full attention on the other. If either moves, the other wins. He says, "Win" and marks one point on his score sheet, then the game resumes. (Time: fifteen minutes advisable.)

TEACHER'S NOTE: The purpose of this game is to extrovert the attention of the introverted child, to make the day-dreamy child more aware of his environment and of other children, to build the child's confidence and poise in facing others, to help the over-active child to bring his body under control, and to raise general alertness. Each child will become more aware of the other as he watches for movements.

SCIENTOLOGY GAME NO. 2.

NAME: 'Make me Believe it'.

POSITION: Same as in Game No. 1.

GAME: One child in each team holds a school book. He picks a phrase from the book and gets the idea as his own (as if he had just thought it up himself and it is really true). He then tells it to the other child. If it sounds really true, the other child says, 'I believe it', and the reader marks down one point. He then takes another sentence of phrase. He has five chances in all. If it sounds false in any way, the listener says, 'Make me believe it'. The reader must then use the next of his five chances to repeat that phrase and make it sound real and believable to the listener. If he repeats it five times unseccessfully, he gets one point anyway. The book then passes to the other child who becomes reader. (Time: fifteen minutes, or an even number of tries.)

TEACHER'S NOTE: This game will be found greatly to improve reading. Its purpose is to improve the child's ability to get what he wants to say successfully across to someone else, to make him more confident that his ideas are important enough to state, to overcome a reluctance to originate, such as extreme bashfulness, whining, etc., to teach the 'chatterbox' to speak more effectively with fewer words.

SCIENTOLOGY GAME NO. 3.

NAME: 'I heard that'.

POSITION: As in other Games.

GAME: One child holds a school book. He puts his full attention on the book and begins to read aloud, non-stop. The other child tries to bring his attention off the book by saying 'I heard that'. If the reader falters, loses his place, or looks up, he then challenges the other with 'What did I say?' If the listener can repeat the last sentence he heard, he wins a point. If he cannot, the reader continues. If 'I heard that' fails to take the other's attention off his reading, or if he cannot answer 'What did I say?', he is allowed three tries and then the book changes hands. This Game can be adapted to the pre-reading ages by having these children count, recite the alphabet, nursery rhymes, etc. (Time advised: fifteen minutes.)

TEACHER'S NOTE: The purpose of this Game is to make the child more alert to what others (teachers and parents especially) say to him, actually to hear them and understand what is said to and expected of him. It also improves the reader's ability to concentrate his attention on his work.

TEACHER'S NOTE: These games must be presented as GAMES to the children, for their enjoyment, not as drills. All of these games are to be supervised by the teacher, and arranged so that children of parallel standards are playing together. The teacher should make sure, by checking scores, that no child is being overwhelmed by his opponent and that all children have a chance and are encouraged to WIN.

Fifteen minutes per game is advisable, preferably in the morning.

It is advised that the games be played one per week in the correct order.

GAMES devised by Laurabeth Breeding from Scientology Training Drills of L. Ron Hubbard.

As per earlier directives, it is mandatory that all Professional-course students of Scientology must own a British Mark IV E-Meter.

Production of the British Mark IV E-Meter has now largely caught up with demand, and individual orders for these E-Meters received by HCO Technical Materiel Secretary, WW at Saint Hill Manor, East Grinstead, Sussex, England, will henceforth be dispatched immediately upon receipt of cash with order.

The price of the British Mark IV E-Meter is £44. 10s. 0d. sterling ($125), less 20% if the purchaser is a Franchise Holder or an International member of H. A. S. I.; such discount reduces the price to £35. 12s. 0d. sterling ($100). Postage and packing will be payable at these rates when despatched to addresses in the following areas:

In Great Britain.....	£1. 0s. 0d.
In U.S.A.....	$5 surface; $15 air.
