Written for the Banner of Light. LIFE AND LOVE.

BY OLLAH TOPH.

To live our little life, its duties done As best comports with our concepts of truth; To lift hot faces to the dews that spring From lands eternal where each drop hath life; To lave our weary sculs in streams that flow From hidden founts of good; that were the source Of man's content and of progression's law. Source of the eternal life, which dieth not. But, set elsewhere, leaps forward to new work, Forgetting not, but wiser for the past.

Beyond the irksome frets of this poor thing We name the Instrument of Life, are chords Diviner, gathered into one sweet strain Of glory for the soul that, calm, endures The broken measures and the fitful flings Of base discordance o'er the trembling strings. There swells the triumph for the ennobled soul Grown braver, stronger, though the poisoned thrusts Of sland'rous tongues well-nigh do rive the strings And hush the æ dian sweetness of their sighs.

To live! to run our little round of days, To dream our dreams, and told the airy vell Of their soft seeming o'er reality, And then to love! Love! Ah! we name that Life, The morning of our day of days, the song of songs, full pulsing to the beat of heart, Eye meeting eye, and flashing glad surprise That kindred souls are one; hand touching hand, Transmitters of that strange, magnetic glow Which wraps twin souls within its vap'rous breath.

True love is free. No oath nor vow can bind, Nor cordon of man laws hedge it to place. No brazen cries of laws conventional Can still the sweetness of its voice, but clear It sings his message, and from narrowed sphere Of two souls' personality speaks out Unto the larger world of all mankind For thus Love, being blessed, would bless in turn. And generate that brotherhood which seals The union of our nature and our God.

To live, to love, and then to quit the scene; To lift our hot, tired faces to the dews And stars, and reach out for Love's tender hand As close the shadows fold us in their arms. And, beating at our feet, the waters sing, And rise, and bear within their slumb'rous depths The memory of happy other days; . To hear across the shadowed vale the calls Of our beloved as strength And flash the answer back: "Love! Love! I come."

That! That the brief experience which leads Unto the perfect day. To live; to love; And loving, learn that every deed hath part In shaping that we name the after life, But which is only fuller, deeper breath When we make issuance from the vale of death. The note hangs falt'ring on the whitened lip. The measure breaks-a rest-the spirit slips Beyond the vale where waters sing, to one Who cries with outstretched arms, "Love, welcome

The Bearing of Electrical Conditions on Active and Passive States.

BY QUESTOR VITE.

Part I.

From "Radioconducteurs." Dr. Ed. Branly. Paris. From La Revue de l'Hypnotisme. Dr. Ed. Branly. From L'Actualité Medicale. Dr. Tisson. Paris.

In electrical phenomena a conductor is a substance which allows electricity to pass through it freely, such as copper, iron, etc. An insulator is a substance that interrupts its flow, such as resin, paraffin, sulphur, air. Conductors are to electricity what transparent bodies are to light; while insulators are equivalent to opaque bodies.

It is well known that electricity passes freely along a metallic wire, i. e., a conductor in which the molecules are in close contact. Dr. Edouard Branly, Professor of Physics of Paris, found in 1890 that if a body in which the molecules are discontinuous-are separated from each other by air, such as a tube of iron filings -is introduced into the above conductor, the electric current ceases to pass.

But if an electric spark of undulatory, vibratory character, such as a spark from a condensor or from a Wimshurst machine, is discharged in the vicinity of the tube of iron filings, even at a distance of twenty-five yards, conductibility then becomes induced therein, and the current passes. Such a body may therefore be called a discontinuous conductor, in contrast with an ordinary continuous con-

If, however, a slight shock is given to this body (or its temperature is raised), it loses its conductibility again. It may consequently be made alternately to be an insulator or a conductor.

It is this discovery that forms the basis of the system of wireless telegraphy developed by Marconi, in which the receiving instrument consists in a discontinuous conductor, while transmission is effected by means of induced vibrations of great intensity, which are conveved by the ether in the atmosphere in the same way and as quickly as light is conveyed by it (or the force generating the effect known to us as light).

Prof. Lodge has stated that if ether is not electricity, it will probably be found to be akin to it. And it must be remembered that dynamos extract the electricity they generate | As Dr. Pupin states in his work on "Neurones" from the atmosphere (as man extracts and generates his vitality therefrom), which conse quently appears to be a reservoir of electricity. It would, therefore, appear to be the electricity within the ether in our atmosphere that forms the conducting medium of the indused vibrations propelled from the transmitter, and picked up and responded to by the receiver above described, which becomes conductive under the influence of these induced vibra- ous conductors, so do similar stimuli act most tions. And this transmission is probably effect. | efficaciously in effecting the cure of anæsthesia | his time and energy in trying to demonstrate ed by a polarizing process carried forward by and paralysis, says Dr. Branly, which implies this dunamis of God as a present reality.

iron bar or electro-magnet, under the influence | conducting elements in both cases. of an electric current.

This action may be illustrated by an experi ment with a Geissler tube. If a discharge from a condensor is passed through a spiral coil cur rents of great energy are established; induced in a second similar coil placed opposite to the first. If a Geissler tube is placed between the extremities of the wire of the second spiral coil, then every discharge from the condensor will be seen to illuminate the tube in the sec ond coil, opposite to the first, and not connected with it. What occurs between these two spirals illustrates the action that takes place between the transmitter and receiver in wireless telegraphy.

With regard to the induction of conductibility in the discontinuous conductors used as receivers, it is probable that the etheric sheaths of the contiguous but isolated particles, are not in contact with each other, and that it is this fact that insulates them.

The vibratory stimulus of electric induction appears to cause the etheric sheaths to expand and interpenetrate each other, thus constitut ing continuous conductibility (as in the atmosphere, or in a wire) while a shock causes etheric contraction, with consequent insulation; discontinuity.

The conductibility effected by induction does not terminate immediately with the cessation of the inducing stimulus, but persists for several days, and even then leaves an increased sensibilization, permitting the repro duction subsequently of a similar conductibility by a weaker stimulus than the first. A residual influence appears to be left analagous ization. And it must be noted that while heat and shock inhibit or suppress the induced con ductibility, so do they also exert demagnetizing and depolarizing effects, which facts go to confirm the inference already made, that transmission through the atmosphere by induced currents is effected by the polarization of the etheric atoms.

These discontinous, intermittent, conducting bodies may be called radio conductors. because their conductibility is induced by the vibratory, radiant energy carried by a disby its former possessor, who asked her the charge from a condensor, or a static machine, above question. Assuming the record of this at a distance. They may also be termed intermittent conductors, as they may alternately be made conductor or insulator.

Dr. Branly has established a most striking comparison between this system of vibratory, radiant electric transmission on discontinuous, intermittent conductors, with that of our nervous system.

It used to be supposed that our nervous system consisted in continuous conductors, which have often been compared to telegraph wires. The similarity between the conductibility of our nervous system and that of electric conductibility was recognized in the adoption of the terms nervous current and nervous conductors.

Dr. Durand de Gros has shown in his "Electro-Dynamisme Vitale" (Alcan, Paris) that men's nervous energy is really electro-motor; that the gray vesicular cells of the brain, of the reflex centres and ganglions, are the generators of this energy, while the white fibres or tubules are receiving and transmitting conductors. All these cells are individual centres of soul faculties; they are soul monads carrying the faculties of sensation, thinking and motive power; motricity. The same faculties pertain to the spinal reflex centres and ganglions of the sympathetic, which he defines as local brains, local soul-monads. The nervous energy generated by these soul-monads pertains consequently to soul-psyche; and consequently is psychic, while being electro-motor, as already

These individual soul monads are grouped in associative affinity of faculty. The synthetics of their associative faculties constitute man's soul, which comprises an associations of indi- demonstration of the statement that it is still vidual monads-sub-selves grouped around a central, directing soul or self. This theory he associate the dead "who are alive" from their terms poly-psychism. Its validity has been recognized by Dr. André des Essarts and by Dr. Prcf. Virchow's recent definition of man's organism as a "social mechanism." It constiof the subconsciousness, as of Mr. Myers' "aubliminal consciousness." But the priority belongs to Dr. Durand, as recognized by Prof. Perrier, before the French Academy of Sciences, on the 4th of March, 1895.

Recent histological research by Golgi, Ramon y Cajal, Van Gehuchten, have confirmed this, by showing that the central nervous system is formed of neurones, i. e., of discontinuous elements which are only related to each other | the fruits of their belief? Whatever other meanby contiguity. Each cell or element possesses a positive and a negative protoplasmic pro- the professors of modern churchianity have longation, which if elongated by a stimulus from without, comes in contact with the simi- dition with that of the mother of Jesus. (Steinheil, Paris): "The nervous system is an ear and the seeing eye. Could anything be aggregation of neurones, distinct from and not more deplorably foolish than the attitude of united with each other, though contiguous." This is confirmed by the fact that as a shock shock following on a severe injury to man. entail traumatic hysteria, paralysis, neurasthenia, probably entailed by suspended transmission of the nervous energy, carrying sensibility and motricity, due to the contraction and consequent insulation of the neurones entailed by the shock. This would account for the well known hysterical phenomena of anæsthesia, sudden transference of sensibility, restriction of the visual field. It would also account for cases of spontaneous lethargy and catalepsy, etc.

Again, the radiating undulations produced by electric discharges of high tension induce some are driven to despair and the verge of conductibility in discontinuous conductors. So do they also produce satisfactory therapeutic results, as shown by d'Arsonval and d'Apostoli, in cases of impaired digestive functioning, and this, probably, by reëstablishing contiguity and contact, and consequent transmission between insulated neurones in the vaso-motor it is also true that there is a "spiritual body." nerves.

Resurrection.

BY R. E. FICHTHORN.

"Whom seekest thou?" According to an ancient record, which millions profess to believe, a mother went very early to the tomb looking for the body of her beloved son. Instead of finding the body she was confronted event to be a fact of history, we simply wish to call the attention of those who base their only hope of a future resurrection upon this event, to what we consider an inconsistency.

This dogma is a vital part of the web of theology, and another portion just as important for the stability of the whole system is the teaching that Jesus was exclusively divine. It needs no argument to show that you cannot predicate universal resurrection by taking for your premise the existence of one whose birth and life you declare was unlike yours and mine. A special life means a special resurrection, leav ing no hope for others. If we want to share in the resurrection of Jesus we must discard the teaching that he was any more divine than it is possible for us to realize. If both teachings concerning him are true, then we get no benefit from either.

The idea of thinking that we can come closer to our departed friends when near their dis. carded bodies; and the fetich of giving extravagant, and in so many cases exclusive attention to the "dissolving" house at the expense of ignoring the vanished tenant, is simply ancient necromancy up to date. Less selfish mourning for the loss of the visible idol, and more unselfish sympathy for the departed one would be much better for all concerned.

Should it be proven that the question in the ancient record is not true, it would not make any difference, for the same condition exists to-day. Mothers are seeking for their boys in nearly the same way as did the mother of Jesus. The newspapers suggest that it is the duty of our government to bring home the bodies of our Cuban heroes. A very marked almost impossible for the living "dead" to dis bullet and fever-wrecked bodies. We would not withold a drop of consolation from those Ed. Perrier of the "Institut," in his work on whose sons and brothers are no longer in the "Les Colonies Animales." It is recognized by visible companies as they are now returning many leading biologists and is confirmed by home, but we feel that they are looking in the wrong direction for genuine consolation as long as they only think of them as the victims tutes the basis of Prof. Pierre Janet's theory of war or the Cuban climate. How much more of satisfaction they would derive by heeding that wise saying of the ancient writer in regard to his master, "that he would remember him no longer after the flesh" and the conditions that rent the veil of flesh, but remember them "after the spirit," and as present in their very homes.

Here is a great mystery. Why do not the millions who profess to believe the Bible enjoy ing may be read into the word "backsliding," really lost ground when we consider their conwhile the multitude to-day, after many centuries of belief, have lost the use of the hearing those blind masses and their leaders toward The man who professes only to believe his Bible says "he believes that the power of God was mightily manifested in the past, but those the etheric atoms, similar to that set up in an | that they induce contiguity and contact in the | It is easy to tell which of these two believers actually believe the so called sacred record. We think the one who attempts to show us his faith by works, or at least knows that if the laws were understood, the same "works" the past, and, in so far as all practical use of a living, present God concerns him, he is an atheist. "His hand is not shortened." "Prove weakens, and even arrests conductibility in a God," t.e., demonstrate your belief in God by discontinuous conductor, so does the nervous using him. Only believing a record of mighty works that have been wrought through others who proved or used God is a very beggarly faith," that haunts us with a "fear" that we might lose it, causing also much "trembling."

After what has been said concerning the fruits of superficial beliefs, it can readily be seen why the believers in the orthodox doctrine of the resurrection are still blind and deaf, and therefore so skeptical that they cannot admit that their departed friends are near, asking, "Whom seekest thou?" As believers in a literal resurrection of the body, rebellion against God, because all of what they knew of their friends is going under the sod: all on account of this materialistic teaching which has so magnified the body of man, that man has become dethroned and ignored.

If it is true that there is "a natural body," Now man is spirit, and never had or will have These illustrations effectually demonstrate anything less than a spirit body clothed in a material garment. The resurrection is the rising up or anastasis of the man and has nothing whatever to do with the material garment which returns to its original elements. Not according to theology, but common sense, some of the elements of our present fleshly veil may be such as were once discarded; but this patching of the garment must cease when the garment itself is cast aside. "If I be lifted up' for "I am the resurrection and the life," refers to Christ or the spiritual consciousness awaiting recognition and lifting-up by every man. Until this "I am" or Christ mind is set free and at liberty to rise up as our individual consciousness, we have no share in the anastasis or resurrection of the Bible, even if we ave discarded our material garment.

Only to the extent that the immortal Christ consciousness rises in us as the efficient cause, do we possess an immortal, spiritual body as an effect. If man, who is a state of consciousness, has not yet risen to the immortal plane, when so-called death comes, the "change' will not affect the nature of his body, for a time is yet alive, a warning that ecclesiastispirit-body is not necessarily an immortal cism would, if possible, regain its lost power, body. We shall then only know ourselves as them to the church. Say they, Santa Claus is we are known now by those who see us from the cause is "lifted up." We might use the word "progression" as a purer and broader term to convey all the meaning of a genuine tured, hell as limned have been the agencies resurrection.

In this connection we are also attracted to the other question that might be asked to-day: gloom, long puritanic faces! "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" living. There are those still living in the flesh ing is the legitimate sequence of teaching the trine, so well fathered by the Persian Zoroaster. nursed in Egypt and adopted by the Church, has so much adulterated the belief of its members with materialism that they can only perceive the fleshly presence.

On looking for the cause that sustains such a literal therefore dead dogma, we think it is because those who pretend to feed humankind are seeking for the living among the dead, seeking among the husks of authorities for the living bread. The heathen writers cannot be in the theological heaven, and yet their socalled profane writings are taught in sectarian colleges as classics. Sermons are based upon what some one else has said instead of the individual experience of a living, present Christ.

authority. others is very helpful to those who seek it for the purpose of duplicating it in their own experience, but to simply know and believe the thus in the possession of the "faith once committed to the saints" is a great delusion. You but you cannot commit a living faith any more than you can commit the sunshine of to-day to the future generations. The past is dead, and the future is not ours, so that in the present alone must we look for life, and for that which sustains life. If we are experiencing the blessings of the resurrection, being lifted up in consciousness, we are no longer looking for life in the ruins of the past, or seeking for the living among the dead, but we know that life is always a present condition. Again, in order to know that our dead (?) are living, we must first be alive ourselves.

Raid on Santa Claus.

BY WILLIAM FOSTER, JR

Some very religious people, that is, dogmatic creedists of the type of blue labeled orthodoxy. are attempting to obliterate the good cheer of the Christmas time. They are horrified at the idea of Santa Claus and present-giving, because they are secular. Christmas, they say, is a sacred day, hence secular matters should not be obtruded upon it, that it may be observed and spent religiously. They would have us believe the day was God ordained, yet they cannot offer a scintilla of evidence to prove that God has ever had anything to do with it. The idea of sacredness is man made, as is much of the ecclesiasticism palmed off as religion.

Sunday, according to the Church, is a sacred day, but nowhere in the Bible is there a command from God for an observance of the day. or an intimation that it possesses a peculiar sacredness. True, Moses brought down from the mountain tables of stone, on which he declared God, with his finger, had traced sundry commands, among them one for a Sabbath, setting apart the seventh day, Saturday. This is the only authority for a holy day, and nowhere in the Bible, or by the mouth of prophet or vicegerent, can be found a command whereby the holiness and sacredness of this seventh day was transferred to the first day, and its observance made obligatory. The first day anciently was dedicated to the Sun, hence the name Sunday. The pagans observed it by various ceremonials, but neither Jesus nor the Apostles attached to it any special sacred. ness, or gave it any of the characteristics of the Mosaic Sabbath.

Sunday was christianized after men like the Emperor Constantine came to rule the church, creatures of lust and power who used the church as an instrument to minister to their ambitions. Hence this Sunday, first day of the week, was christianized to fool the Pagans and rope them into the fold more readily.
Indeed, much of our popular Churchianity is varnished Paganism. Churchianity and Christianity are as far apart as the poles. I make no war on the simple, soulful and pure moral and ethnic teachings of the Judean carpenter. His early followers never aspired to dominion, creeds, dovetailing together inconsistent, imbruting dogmas as the words of God, the canons of the Almighty. At this late day, however, it is done, the clergy presuming they can. in the name of religion, subordinate the world to Churchianity.

The crusade against Santa Claus, and the festivities of Christmas, on the plea of secularism, is evidence that the bigotry of the olden a myth; children should not be deceived. But a higher plane whose vision is not obstructed has not the world, children and adults been by the fleshly raiment. Effect can only rise as | deceived and hoodwinked for centuries? Ever since Calvinism came upon the stage, the church machinery has been run on the line of deciption. God as set forth, the devil as picof the church. MEDIUMISTIC WORK.

"Pauline Earle-Pauline Earle," he repeated to himself in a musing tone, "who is she? There never was but one Pauline that I knew, and she went to France. Pauline Lamont, poor, misguided Marie's sister. Can it be possible that she returned to this country and became my evil genius? But what tale could the gift and advice could be, but he would make use of it, and perhaps in unravelling the mystery of his wife's disappearance, other things might be revealed to him. He did not stand upon the order of his going, and in two days he was en route for San Francisco, where he arrived in due time, seeking out his old quarters and making himself at home. Gordon had vowed to himself not to return to his daughter until he could solve the secret of her mother's fate for her, and he decided not even to write the child of his arrival in California. He supposed that she was safe and contented, if not at his old friends the Hylers, in the city, then surely at the Brown ranch, where she had every right to be while he owned an interest in that property. He never dreamed that Lou was earning her own living in a lawyer's received respect from his heart.

The artist's search for Pauline Earle in San Francisco was not an easy one. For weeks and mouths he searched, at last engaging a detective to aid him. It was early in January, 1897, when he arrived in the city; it was late in the year before he abandoned his quest. At length his detective learned that one Madam Earle, with her daughter Marie, had lived in San Francisco some years before, but that she had long since removed to some portion of Southern California. She had been a dancer upon the Orpheum stage, and it was presumed that she had abandoned that calling, for she had at one time met with a fall that had injured her hip and rendered her permanently lame.

During his stay in San Francisco, Gordon had spent all his money; but having returned to former haunts and labors, he managed to eke out an existence by means of his brush. Again he was baffled in his search, but he determined to remain in the city until he could save enough to continue his travels and search for the woman who, he was now convinced, was the sister of his first wife, Marie. "It was she who wrought all my ruin," he thought. "I must find her. I have a feeling that she is in Los Angeles and that I shall find her there." Little by little, and by dint of economy and saving, he secured a small sum, sufficient to take him to Los Angeles. In that city he again set about his search, trusting more fully to the intuitive or impressional guidance within himself than to any external clue that he had or might receive. But while the artist is pursuing his hitherto fruitless search, we will return to Hazel, or Nurse Janet, who. after sending the money and note to Gordon that sent him on his quest toward the setting sun, returned with a lightened heart to New York, where she remained, busy in good works of ministration, until the Spring. In May she received a respite from labor, and went to New Orleans to visit her friend Mabel Treadwell now Mrs. George Vaughn-from whom she received a cordial welcome. Dr. Vaughn was of a genial, comewhat metaphysical disposition, yet a thoroughly practical man of affairs. He had become interested in psychical subjects, had studied clairvoyance, hypnotism and magnetism, and had more than once brought his knowledge of one or the other of these occult branches of science to his aid in serious cases of illness under his care. During the few months of their married life he had frequently subjected his wife to certain hypnotic experiments, and had found her an invaluable aid in tracing out the seat of disease and the proper curative agencies in several cases, and at the time of Hazel's arrival Dr. Vaughn was engaged in writing up a series of articles upon his investigations and experiments in the psychical realm, with an exposition of their value in the medical field, for a therapeutic magazine

Hazel became very much interested in the theories and conclusions of this physician. His conversation was charming and his views instructive. Having had several peculiar occult experiences of her own-which she recited to him and which he noted down as facts for his articles-the nurse could readily enter into sympathy with him in his studies and experiments. She had seen many cases of somnambulism, and even of entrancement, among her patients during the years of her labor as nurse, and she believed indeed that there are "more things in heaven and earth" than the medical fraternity as a body suspects. Mabel Vaughn had not only become a fine hypnotic subject and clairvoyant under the intelligences from higher realms. One of these sight with startling accuracy. claimed to be an ancient philosopher, giving no name but that of "Garza," and certainly the subject matter of his discourses was of a high grade of thought, culture and elequence, evincing the grandest conception of humanitarian principles and ethics, and, both in thought and expression, far beyond the men tality of Mrs. Vaughn, through whose lips they came. The other intelligence called him self "Dr. Cameron." He claimed to have been a physician of the old school who passed from earth in Ohio fifty years ago. He was a character of broad culture and deep thought, who had evidently been studying the laws and who had evidently been studying the laws and principles of vital magnetism, electricity, hypnotism and kindred subjects, since his departure to the spirit world, and who was quite oapable of imparting much information on these subjects through the lips of his medium.

it was on the evening of May 27, Dr. Vaughn, his wife and Hazel were seated upon the back porch of their residence, which overlooked a pretty little garden of beauty and bloom. The doctor had been very busy for some hours with office work, and he had but a few moments be fore come out to enjoy a breath of the balmy air. Scarcely had he scated himself when his wife exclaimed: "George, dear, I have been talking with Hazel about going away for the summer. She says she must get back to work, but I contend that she ought to take this season for recuperation and rest. You must help me to persuade her to share my views. I know that you will not leave the city for more than a week, if you do that, but we cannot stay here

Cameron had possession of her.
"My friends," this in elligence began, "the lady medium has been making her plans for the summer, but they cannot be carried out. We have work for you all.

"This will be a sickly season in New Orleans. The yellow fever will prevail in various quarters. Many will be stricken down with it, many will die. We need you all, for the summer of 1897 will prove a memorable one for you in this fever stricken city. Doctor Vaughn, your post will be here. You will have many cases to attend, and you shall lose none. You, madam," turning to Hazel, 'will be called to minister to the sick and dying. The lady medium must remain at home, for a council of physicians will centre their forces in this house, for which how must conve as the bettery. From of which she must serve as the battery. From here they will be distributed to places of need. Doctor, in every case you must apply the mag netic remedies. Draw off the poison from the intected bodies by the vital magnet sm, and impart new life to them in the same way. You shall require full instruction in each case as shall receive full instruction in each case, according to its demands. Your success will be truly great."
With a little further instruction to each one the spirit physician withdrew. Then came she have told Hazel to make the child turn Garza and held his listeners well nigh spell from me as she did? half an hour he talked, and then departed, after which a sprightly little Indian maiden from the Seminole tribe came, and enlivened He had no idea who the unknown donor of the hour with her cheerful to igue.

Then Mabel spoke: "I have been conscious through it all," she said, "and have listened to every word, although all the while I was gazing upon the most beautiful scenes. But there! I could have cried when the doctor predicted the breaking out of fever here and said we must all remain in the city. I suppose he knows what he is talking about, and that both of you will cheerfully acquiesce in his opinions. But I am not resigned at all to any such situation as he marks out for me.'

For a moment she prused in aggrieved si-

"Of course my opposition will make no difference to the spirits; they will have their own way, and I know it is for some good. But I must tell you what I saw while they were talking through my lips. I was outside of myself, apparently, though I seemed to be in this chair, too. Anyhow, I saw myself enveloped in a glow of crimson light that changed to golden, and then violet. From the light, office, and he would have rebelled at the tiny streams of electric sparks went out and thought, although he considered labor honora formed a circle of stars around the three of ble in the main, and an honest daughter of toil received respect from his heart.

los, and from every star a clear, beautiful blue flame flashed. Then I saw a sick person brought in on a cot; the flame of the stars was directed upon him, and it penetrated his body, driving out a dark, cloudy efflavia and infilling him with a pale yellow light. Soon he arose and walked off, as if cured. And then I heard some one sing, and the song told me that the scene was a symbol of the way we three, with our spirit helpers, would be in strumental in saving human lives. After that I saw a green forest. It was of the loveliest green; the sod was velvety and strewn with flowers; the trees were stately, and the branches were rich with perfect foliage and hung with crimson and golden fruit. Beneath a tree stood a girl about fifteen; she was an Indian, but very handsome; she was clothed in cream white, decorated with scarlet; she wore a star on her brow. She held a handsome white fawn by his golden collar. On her shoulder perched a bird of brilliant plumage. She looked at me with a smile, then came towards me, and, as she did so, Garza ceased to speak, and Star Eye began to chatter to

A call for the doctor broke up the little séance at this point, and soon the ladies retired to their own apartments, but all plans for the summer outing had been abandoned in that hour. Events proved the predictions of Dr. Cameron correct. The fever developed, and many human beings were stricken down by it. The city was quarantined, the mails fumigated, and doctors and nurses had enough to do. As the spirit prophecied, Dr. Vaughn did not lose a case, though if some of his brother physicians of the old school had known of his methods of treatment they would have charged him with lending himself to quackery and fraud. But he was successful, the sick recovered under his hands, and the well blessed him for the comforts that he gave.

Hazel, in her ministry as nurse, stood faithfully by her post, and performed her tasks well and Mabel in her home lived the life of a re cluse, and helped the spirits to silently hold the forces, and to do the work which in the blessedness of love for suffering humanity they had elected to do.

At last their task was done; the fever had abated and the city was released from its isolation. Dr. Vaughn was more than gratified at his success—his brother physicians had looked upon him with envy. Some day not far distant he would publish the secrets of his successes, but at present he had other work to do. Hazel had not been with him in every case; she had been working with other physicians, and she had seen patients die where she had felt they could have been saved. But she held her peace, for it was not for the nurse to take exceptions to the physician's care. But now all was over. She had not yet formulated her plans for future days, but was quietly resting with Mabel and the doctor at a pretty little water-side some miles from their home. In the moonlight they sat and conversed on many things, when all at once Mabel said, "Look, George! look, Hazel! do you see that cloud of smoke? how dazzling white it is. And see-it is opening! the spirits are doing this for us. Can you see it too, or is it only my clairvoyance that is quickened?" They did see it-a mass of brilliant whiteness opening and disclosing to view a panoramic scene of importance and significance.

CHAPTER XX.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

It was a beautiful spectacle that presented itself in the open to these interested observers. A series of panoramic scenes understood by none but Hazel, and by her only in part, but of bewitching interest to all. The mysterious. cloud-like appearance that had opened before them presented in its depths a picture of surpassing beauty. It was as if one had been called to gaze into the heart of some snowy, glistening cavern, in which brilliancy itself was visible. A beautiful shining recess of whiteness and splendor, upon which were pho-tographed, one after the other, scenes in the influence of her husband, but a reliable trance medium as well, and she had of late been frequently taken possession of by one or the other of two advanced and highly instructive life of Hazel that depicted themselves to her

First came the appearance of herself as a young and happy maiden, sitting by the side of her father on the bluff by the sea. Then followed scene after scene in rapid succession, each moving away as its successor appeared, until in these pictorial illustrations the story of her life up to date was told. One peculiarity of these pictures was that the char noters in them seemed to move and appear as if in lowed with life and activity. They stood out from the brilliant background of the cave in life-like distinctness and with all the natural coloring incident to them.

After a while there came a pause in the pass ing of these representations, during which the snowy recess was flooded with colors of the most gorgeous hue, one shade of beauty succeeding another, each more lovely than the last, gradually to ring down from the more vivid hues to more delicate dyes of pink, and violet, and yellow, dying out again in the pris tine whiteness of the walls.

Then came a new series of transformations of spectacular beauty, enling in another pic torial representation of scenes in the lives of mortals. And now Hazel saw her child in somes depicting her life, or rather its experiences of importance up to the present time. As a whole the scenes were flooded with the light that is shed by an innocent happy life. But the three last representations gave forth a cloudy emanation that seemed to betoken sorrow and p in. The latter showed Lou, first as a young woman of perhaps nineteen, sitting alone in a small, plainly furnished room, with her face bowed upon her hands, as in an agony of grief. The succeeding scene pictured her as turning in scorn from a youn; man with dark eyes, and hair like a raven's wing, and the closing scene of all represented the same young lady as if listening to some tale poured into her ears by a small, dark eyed, wizen faced woman whose once black hair was now as white as the winter's snow. Every now and then this latter woman raised her hand to her throat, as if something stifled her, and the watchers saw that she suffered from some spasmodic cough. while once a stream of scarlet issued from her lips with startling distinctness, and with such an appearance of reality that Dr. Vaughn instinctively started to his feet as if to go to her

But the picture faded and the whole appearance passed from view. For a few moments the trio sat in silence, and then the well known tones of Garza were heard speaking through the lips of Mrs. Vaughn.

"My children," said the sage, "we have given you an illustration of spirit-painting art work that can be produced instantaneously and at the will of the artist. We have repre sented to you scenes in human experiences that have a significance to one of you. My daughter"—turning to Hazel—"you have been most grossly singled against. The time is coming when you must know the truth. That woman in the last picture whose frame seemed racked with a consuming disease you did not recognize, but she once cruelly deceived you. Her name was Pauline. You are needed in California. Make your arrangements as soon possible to go thither. Your work as a nurse of the sick in hospital and ward must cease. You have other duties to assume. Make your preparations to go to Southern California—to Los Angeles. Go to No. - East Fifth Street and ask for your daughter. You will find her there after six o'clock each night. Make yourself known to her; she is in need of a mother's love. Do not doubt. After what you have seen to-night you cannot doubt nor question, but go at once.' And go she did, as soon as she could arrange her affairs, for she telt that it was a voice from heaven that had bidden her, and it could not be disobeyed. And now that she was about to leave the old life behind her—the life of sacrifice, of patient toil for others, of long and hopeless waiting, a life that she left with many a pang of regret, for she had loved her noble work and the ties it had formed for her -all the old time associations and memories of home, of husband and child came thronging upon her heart with the intensity of pain.

She was as one walking in the dark, uncer tain what she was to meet, yet the spirit had told her to go and go she would, but what would come from it all she could not divine. than all else. Garza had told her that she had been deceived, and by Pauline. If so, then all the weary years of separation from her husband and child had been most grievous years indeed to them, and she had done them bitter wrong. Oh, how she wished that she had gone to him in that long past bitter hour and asked him for the truth! or, better still, that she had confronted him with Pauline and learned the truth from them both. But she had thought herself justified in her course. To be sure, she was young and inexperienced then, not much acquainted with the world's ways, trusting always to her husband to plan for her; but she thought she had done right to leave him, for the proofs of his perfidy had

She was heartsick now with doubt and susense, as she went on making preparations or her departure for the Pacific slope. Poor ittle Hazel! She had suffered much, but now that she had discarded nurse's sap and gown, and stood arrayed in a neat and pretty traveling costume of gray and blue, she appeared quite young and handsome; her silky dark locks, although thickly sprinkled with gray, were coiled in a loose knot at the back of her shapely head, with tiny ringlets gently caressing neck and brow. Her large and sombre eyes still retained their beauty and lustre, while her gentle face and graceful figure bore the impress of a lady as dainty and cultured as one could wish to see.

Her leave-taking of her friends was one of trial to them all, for they were knit together by tender ties of association and love; but as Garza assured them that all would yet be well with them, and that they should meet again, the separation seemed to be but a temporary one.

The long journey was made without special incident, and Hazel, on her arrival in Los Angeles, was immediately driven to No. — East Fifth street. It was after nine in the evening, and she doubted if she should find the object of her search; yet her anxious heart would not allow her to wait a moment longer than was necessary to prove whether her search was what she had hoped or not.

The house before which she alighted was an humble one, neat and unpretentious, but in a rather lowly quarter. There was a light in the front room, for its rays streamed out from the open window. Bidding her driver remain for further orders, she ascended the steps and rang the bell. Her summons was answered by an elderly woman of respectable appearance. who responded to her inquiries by directing the lady to an apartment up one flight in the rear, holding her lamp aloft as she gave the directions, that the visitor might find the way. With beating heart and muffled tread Hazel hastened on. Her tap upon the door was twice repeated, but, receiving no answer, she was about to move away, when something prompted her to turn the knob. She did so, and the door opened at her touch, revealing a rather plain but neatly-furnished apartment, lighted by the flame of a small lamp upon the table. At this table a young lady, in a modest suit of brown, sat, her face buried in her hands, her attitude that of grief and pain. Hazel paused upon the threshold, with a look of blank surprise, for this was the reality and prototype of one scene in the vision that had been given to her and her friends. Then she softly crossed the room and knelt down by her daughter's side. Lou-for she it was who, dressed in work day clothes, sat in that humble room-had not heard the tapping at her door nor heeded the entrance of her guest. She had been busy that evening in destroying many little love notes, and other tokens of affection which her whilom lover, Norton Bradley, had formerly bestowed upon her, and the effort bad been sufficient to wring her heart with pain, for as yet she had not wholly torn his image from her breast, although it bade fair to soon vanish away. For her dream of love was over; she had awakened to find her idol clay, and shattered at her feet, and the struggle to cast him forth had been a bitter one, although from the first she never swerved. That was nearly a month ago; she had sent him found the courage until to night. And now aglow with the warmth and radiance of love.

she had finished her task, which had left her faint and weary, with the sting of a wounded heart still rankling in her breast. And so she had not heard that quiet tread, nor felt the nearness of the one who had brought her into this world. For Hazel had a silent step, one about the beds of the slok and dying, and therefore it was not until she felt a loving, gentle hand raised to draw here from the tearful eyes that she discovered she was not alone.

Poor girl, she had grown pale and wan from the effects of toil and of trouble, and her large and mournful dark eyes looked in startled wonder upon the sweet face of her visitor, as a spirit might have gazed in bewildered surprise. "My darling," and Hazel's low, soft tones were tremulous with emotion, "I am so thank-ful to find you. I seem a stranger to you, but, dear, does not your heart recognize me? Look, dear, into my features, and see if you cannot tell me who I am!"

For a moment a cloud seemed to blur the vision of the girl, then she bent forward eagery, and, with trembling, gazed into the face before her with devouring eyes.

How long they thus gazed into each other's souls neither knew, each pair of eyes so like the other, drinking in the sight of a face longed for through years of waiting and of hopelessness. But at last the spell was broken, for with a cry, "Mamma! mamma! it is you, know it is you; have you really come back to me?" Lou clasped her mother to her breast. The embrace was a long and silent one. Only angels can view such a scene, and we draw the veil over it.

But at length Hazel aroused and said, "My darling, there is much to be told on both sides. I am your mother, and I have always carried this next my heart—see!" drawing a little golden locket from the bosom of her dress. It was in the shape of two linked hearts, a pretty trinket which she opened, displaying a tiny picture of her baby, puinted by the artist when the child was but two years old. Be neath the miniature the inscription, "Baby Lo1," in golden letters, appeared. On the other side of the locket was a ringlet of curling hair, cut from a baby's head. Hazel kissed the letter and held the trinket up, for Lon to the latter and held the trinket up for Lou to examine. "It was all I had of my baby," she said; "but the hour is late, my love," the mother continued. "I have but just a rived from the East and have not secured a stopping. separated from my baby; shall we go together to the hotel, or can you accommodate me here?" The carriage is below. I cannot be

"Oh, mamma dear, let me send the carriage away, and you stay with me to night. The house is respectable, and the bed is neat and clean, though this is a humble place. I have to work for my living, and caunot afford to live in luxury; but the people of the house are quiet and kind, and they do not intrude upon me. I had better quarters—more suitable for you-up to a month ago; but I gave up my work in the law office, and could get nothing t) do except in a canning factory, so I had to come down within my means. Of course I have friends, but I would not go to them. I want to do for myself."
"But, child, this is distressing. Where is your father?"

"Papa? I do not know whether he is living or dead."

"You do not know?"
"No! He left me two years ago to seek for my mother. I have n t seen him since. But there is the cabman; we must dismiss him, hen we can talk!

And they did talk, carrying on their conversation far into the night, making mutual disclosures and gaining but very little slumber, though as yet the mother did not reveal to her child why she had fled from her home so long ago, reserving that confession for a future day.

A Dream. BY SARAH WARD.

As I lay upon my bed at night I slept and dreamed; and in my dream an angel came to me and said, "Come," and I went forth with below. him into strange places, the like of which I had never seen before. We entered the corridor of a great prison, and in the grave-like cells I saw the sleeping forms of men upon their narrow beds. Some boyish faces there were, that looked almost innocent beneath the kindly touch of sleep; on others were traced the sad records of long, dark years.

But upon the head of every slumberer in those dreary cells there beamed a strange, so ft light. It was almost like a halo, save that it seemed to shine from without rather than to radiate from within. Even the most sinister face in all that throng was thus illumed. I wondered as to the source of this light, and in response to my thought the angel said. "It is the glow of the tender, prayerful thoughts of those who love them."

And I thought: "Surely among all these des peradoes, these outcasts, some there must be who are friendless."

Again the angel answered: "No, not one. Many a mother's love follows the wanderer hither and abides, even when that mother's place is found no longer among the ways of men, and the white flower of her memory has almost perished in the Upas shade of crime and hatred. Even those deserted and disowned by their natural kindred are not forgotten, for there be high and holy ones who make such poor souls their special care. And above all is the gracious light, shining from the face of Him who said, in Galilee, Love one another. On some fair, auspicious day, these poor children of sin will grow weary of gazing in the dust, and, looking upward, some beam from this wealth of radiance will cleave the darkness of their life."

Leaving the prison, we sped on beneath the starry skies. Down, down, down, now we were in a mine. Some laborers were still at work breaking coal. Their forms were toilbent, and their faces grimy, but all about them I saw the glory. I saw how the affection of their wives and children abode with them here as a living presence, and how the very depths of the earth are aglow with the light of love. Again we journeyed on. Now we were above the heaving sea. Wherever a queenly ship, or the humblest of sloops sped on its separate way, there bent above each a luminous arch of palpitating brightness.

The angel said, "It is the meeting of the good wishes and go ispeeds of those whom the voyagers leave behind, and the longing expectancy of others who wait to greet them on the shore to which they fare."

And I saw how the midnight ocean, the gloom of the cold sea, is all flecked and dappled with the brightness of love.

In that strange pilgrimage we paused in the vile districts of great cities, where hideous poverty made existence almost unbearable, and in peaceful country places, where the moonlight lay like a benediction up in the sleeping farms; but wherever there was a hu man heart to beat and suffer there I beheld the glory.

Since that dream the world has seemed: fairer place to me. Through its mists of doubt and perplexity gleam the starry eyes of Hope. Upon the lowliest brow I see the luminous insignia of membership in the Royal Family of the King whose name is Love. And sometimes in a waking dream I see the world as it shall one day be, when selfishness shall have waned and knowledge shall have widened when the broad aureole of one life shall touch back his ring, persistently refusing to see him, and she had meant to destroy these other all dark chasms shall be bridged with light, tokens of affection before this, but had not and our old Earth goes swinging on her way, Niagara Hushed.

To awake from sleep to the consciousness of a great or unexplained noise is often apalling, but it may be no less fearful to awake to the made noiseless by the habit of softly stepping consciousness of a sudden stillness where the ear has been used to sound. One who from birth has always been accustomed to the thunder of Niagara, has lately told in a daily paper the story of the morning, now fifty years ago, when the roar of the cataract ceased and a great stillness settled over the district. He says:

I was born twenty-five years before, with the roar of Niagara in my ears, and had lived ever since within a mile of the cataract. I awoke that morning oppressed by a strange feeling, which I found was caused by the astounding fact that the roar of Niagara was

My first thought was that I had become deaf in the night, but the sound of the ticking of a clock in the next room assured me that my hearing was not affected. The tumult of Niagara was stilled, and the unwonted silence was

I hastily dressed, and ran from the house. Scores of people were hastening toward the falls to learn the cause of the alarming quietness. The sight was a strange one. Where the river had been was now a naked bed of jagged black and slimy rock, and the precipics over which it had hurled its waters was bare from shore to shore. Niagara was dry, or so nearly so, that the sound of the water that fell over the rock was as the trickle of a brook.

People from the Canada side walked along the edge of the precipice, and made their way nearly to Goat Island on the American side without wetting their feet. A number of ancient gun-barrels were found among the rocks of the river bed above the rapids. People swarmed to see the strange sight

This extraordinary condition of affairs continued all day. When the people went to bed late that night Niagara was still silent, but when they awoke the next morning the thunder of the falls was shaking the earth as usual, and the cata ract had returned to its old habit.
The power which had silenced Niagara was soon discovered. It was in March that the noise of the cataract ceased. The winter had been one of the coldest on record. Thick ice formed in Lake Erie. The break up came sud-denly. Toward the end of March a stiff, northeasterly wind came up and broke the ice-fields. separating them from the shore during the icefloes up the lake, piling them in great banks as they moved.

Toward night, on March 30, the wind changed suddenly to the opposite quarter, and became a fierce gale. The surface of the lake was packed with miniature icebergs, and the storm hurled them back with such force that a great dam was formed at the head of Niagara river.

This dam held back the water, and before long the river above the falls was drained, and by the morning of the 31st Niagara was silenced. For twenty-four hours its voice of thunder was hushed, but by the morning of April 1 the ice pack gave way under the pressure of water, and the cataract reasserted it-

A COASTING SONG. BY #. D

" Down, down the hill how swift we go, Over the ice and over the snow." This was the song we children sung In days gone by, when I was young; While with hearts and cheeks aglow We glided over the crusted snow.

And as the song comes back to me I feel a thrill of old-time gice Cutting away the cares of life, Till freedom comes from toil and strife, And once again in thought I go Coasting over the ice and snow.

Down, down the years how swift we go! And if our pulses flutter low, And eyes have lost their youthful light, We still can see our future bright In many gleams from that fair shore Where youth is youth forevermore. Orange, Mass.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL .- "The great lesson which emerges from all this is as to the religious use of the temporal world. Heaven lies behind earth. We see that this earth is not merely a place to live in, but to see in. We are to pass through it as clairvoyants, holding the whole temporal world as a vast transparency, through which the eternal shines.... To the spiritual man there lies behind this temporal a something which explains all. Work is an incarnation of the Unseen. In this loom man's soul is made. There is a subtle machinery behind it all, working while he is working, making or unmak all, working while he is working, making or unmak ing the Unseen in him. Integrity, thoroughness, hon-esty, accuracy, conscientiousness, faithfulness, pa-tience—these unseen things which complete a soul are woven into its liner work. Apart from work these things are not. As the conductor leads into our nerves the invisible electric force, so work conducts into our spirit all high forces of character, all essential qualities of life, truth in the invaid parts... The spiritual fluids and the electric fluids are under the same law: and messages of grace come to the soul along the lines of honest work, like the invisible message along the telegraph wires."—Dr. Henry Drummond.

All the work, the achievements, the courte sies and the philanthropies of life serve a two-fold purpose; that of immediate convenience, comfort or aid on the plane of the Seen; that of development and spiritual enlargement on the plane of the Unseen. A railroad is built across a continent, a cable is conducted under an ocean, a family in need is clothed and fed, a house is built and furnished and made ready for the beautiful drama of living, and immedi-ate uses are served, general progress and en-lightenment are extended, the ways and means of terrestrial life are made finer and easier; but all this is the temporal side; the perma nent side is that the spiritual man has exer-cised his faculties and achieved greater development in his progress toward the spiritual world. Generous and beautiful as are many of the charities and courtesies and kindnesses of daily life—is it yet fully realized that an oppor tunity to do a kindness to another is a luxury rather than an obligation?

There is some one we know who is in need of aid, and we recognize the need, and suggest to ourselves that A, who has vast possessions, ought to assume this care and meet this need rather than we, who have no possessions at all; and this is wholly wrong and defective reasoning; for instead of its being a sacrifice or a burden to do all that is in our power for the one in need, it is a divine opportunity, a spiritual luxury; and the only way to multiply those things needful in this part of life is to divide them. Possessions are not a mere arbitrary affair, a thing of exact measurement, which, being lessened or depleted, necessarily remain so. Possessions of all kinds—money, houses, lands, what we will—are but a precipi tation in a given form from the Unseen realm. There is an abundance. The universe teems with riches. Things have no value merely in were eaten in ancient Rome." and of themselves, but only in that which they represent. If they represent a certain energy which holds itself constantly related to the divine energy which is fed from that infinite fountain, they will be renewed in plenty and frequency, like the loaves and the fishes.

This result is the working of a spiritual law, and it will only be experienced by those who have learned to live by that law. The laws governing the spiritual world are as absolute as those that govern the temporal. But as man is, primarily, a spiritual being, destined to live in a spiritual world, he can achieve his stirituality of life and relate himself to the divine powers. Nothing is impossible to him whose will has merged itself in the will of God. This is the only secret of the marvelous work of Jesus; and He distinctly affirmed that what He did all may do, and "even greater

The entire drama of life is uplifted and simplified when we relegate the event of death to its true place as an incident, only, in the onward progress. In about 1886, Frederic W. H. Myers, of London, pointed out the truth of the "subliminal" or subjective self-meaning just what might more clearly be termed the spiritual self-and it was Mr. Myers who originally pointed out the law of telepathy between persons still in the physical body, a law which one or two others have erroneously claimed to first promulgate.

It is Mr. Myers and some of his associates in Society for Psychical Research who ante dated by some seven or eight years the discovery of this law before it was promulgated by any one else. Now the assertion that telepathy is limited in its action to those who are still in the physical body is a very false and misleading one, because the event of death is an incident only; a mere throwing off of the physical body, which is temporarily superim posed upon the spiritual (which is the real) body, and the telepathic intercourse between spirit and spirit is not affected by death even, in that it becomes somewhat clearer and easier when one of the two is freed from the restric tions and limitations of the body. When both are free, then the ease and instantaneous intercourse by thought is, of course, still more perfect. The spiritual faculties of man are his real self. To exercise and develop those faculties in work in generous expressions, in aid to others, in the communion of thought with the friends in the Unseen world, as well as in the Seen, is the true mode of develop ment appointed by the Divine Power.—Lilian Whiting in Boston Budget, Nov. 27, 1898.

SOJOURNER TRUTH died Nov. 26, 1883, "Sojourner Truth was one of the most unique characters of her own, or of any other age. Black as Erebus, wholly uneducated so far as book knowledge was concerned, she spoke whatever came to her mind as truth with the utmost fearlessness, and with a mighty fervor and simple eloquence which held even cultivated and fastidious hearers spellbound. She claimed to have 'met Jesus one day in the woodshed,' and to have been directed by him to call herself Sojourner Truth. She firmly believed that all her affairs were directed by God, and literally took no anxious thought for anything. Once a meeting at which she would speak was appointed in Valley Falls, R. I. She was the guest of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Chace, whose noble championship of the rights of negroes and of women is so well known.

"'Sojourner,' said Mrs. Chace, trying to prepare her colored friend for a possible disappointment, 'how will you feel if only two or three come to hear you speak.'

"'Nebber you fret, honey,' was the reply; particularly women who are alone. I do not 'de Lord sent me here, and it's his business to think that many of us who have our kin closest see to de audience. Dat don' trouble me.' It to us on Christmas Day stop to realize what seemed, indeed, as though the Lord did 'see to the audience,' for it was large and respectful, listening to the negro woman's words, ungrammatical, but burned through with power and flame, with unwavering attention. "Sojourner's wit and sarcasm were often called into play. On one occasion, when Parker Pillsbury was speaking against slavery in a schoolhouse in the South, there arose a tempest, so severe that it threatened to tear the roof from the building. From among the audience, which was obliged, by the storm, to remain after Mr. Pilisbury had ceased speaking, main after Mr. Pilisbury had ceased speaking, a man arose, saying he had no doubt that the tempest was sent by God as a punishment for those who had listened to such blasphemy; that he should not be surprised if they were all struck by lightning; that he himself expected to be. Slowly, amid the darkness which filled the back part of the room, there loomed up a majestic figure, its towering turban making a sharply defined white spot in the blackness.

""Do n't be scar't, child,' cried Sojourner Truth. 'Most likely de Almighty never heerd tell of ye.'"—Lida A. Churchill, in Success.

ST. NICHOLAS.—Our boys and girls will be well entertained with the current issue of this valuable magazine, which ever contains instructive and interesting reading. E. II. House in his article on "Bright Sides of His tory." shows that Lucullus was not a glutton, but gave his elaborate banquets for the purposes of display. The author says:

"One of the Greek historians says that the regular price of a meal at a Roman hotel was about one quarter of a cent. That was a little before the time of the emperors; but we know that in Trajan's reign two cents a day were considered ample for the support and education of a boy. On this basis, at a rough calculation, the money paid for Caligula's support might have supplied a dinner for one hundred fifty millions of people if so many could and fifty millions of people, if so many could have been brought together.

'I call it wickedness,' said Amy; 'downright wickedness.' "That was the opinion of quite a number, even then, my dear. Lucullus was often taken to task for his prodigality, and several years later a great writer named Juvenal spoke his mind freely enough on the subject. He gave dinners, too; but from one of his bills of fare, drawn up with his own hand, we can find what he considered ample for himself and friend. His principal dish was a young kid, after which he offered chickens, new laid eggs, and vegetable, and, for dessert, grapes, pears and apples.'"

"'He was no glutton,'" said Percy approvingly.

"No; nor was Lucullus, in the lowest sense, though he seemed determined to make himself out worse than he really was. He always pretended that he gave his huge banquets for a purely selfish purpose. He invited a party of Greek travelers so often, and at such reckless expense, that they finally protested and declared themselves unwilling to accept any more; but he told them they should not set it all down to their account, for, though a part of the display was for their sake, more of it was for his own.

"Don't you think," asked Percy, "that he said that in kindness, to make them feel at ease?"

"I like to think it, and am glad when other persons do the same; for I have a fondness for Lucullus, in spite of his faults, as you will have when you come to know all about him. There is no reason for classing him with the vulgar gormandizers of his age, like Vitellius, or Commodus, or, I may say, the majority of the emperors, most of whom took more pleasure in managing kitchens than in ruling kingdoms. Domitian, the last of the twelve Capars, considered problems of cookery so far above questions of state that on one occasion he called the Roman senate together to consult with him as to how a turbot should be prepared for the table. He looked upon the Senator Montanus as a miracle of wisdom, for no better reason, apparently, than that this cultivated epicure could tell, by the first bite he gave an oyster, whether it came from England or from the Mediterranean. It is Juvenal, again, who tells us of the delicate taste for which Montanus was renowned. I think, however, that the faculty of distinguishing British oysters does not count for much. A good many Americans could do that, enjobly anough with their ever could do that quickly enough with their eyes shut; though net, perhaps, if the oysters had sugar on them, which was one of the ways they

The Dream of the Toy. The Sandman lost a dream one night— A dream meant for a boy; It floated round awhile, and then It settled on a Toy.

The toy dreamed that it stood in class With quite a row of boys; The teacher rapped upon his desk And cried, "Less noise! less noise!" Then, looking at the Toy, he scowled, And said, "Next boy-foretell." "Oh, please sir," cried the little Toy, "I do n't know how to spell.

Indeed, I don't know how it is, I'm sure I am a toy, Although I seem to be in class, And dressed up like a boy."

What's that? What's that?" the teacher cried-In awful tones he spoke; He came with strides across the floor, And then the Toy awoke.

There lay the nursery, very still,
The shelf above his head;
The fire burned dimly on the hearth,
The children were in bed.

There lay the dolls and Noah's Ark.
"Oh, dear me!" said the Toy,
"I just had such a dreadful dream!
I drea neu I was a boy." —Kat -Katharine Pyle. Century Co., Union Square, New York.

ADIES' HOME JOURNAL .- Opinions regarding Platonic love are many and varied, but the subject is always attractive. The following is an extract from an article by Francis Evans: "'Do you believe Platonic love is possible between young unmarried men and women?' a young married man said to me not long ago. More likely to be possible between them than between a married man and a young, unmarried woman, I replied. He looked at me a moment, then the color mounted to his face as he replied: You are rather hard on us.' Women blush for nothing, but a man never colors up without a cause. That red flush, although it was for the sex of innerited trousers, not for himself particularly, would have confirmed me in my belief had I been a bit shaky—which I was not. What did he mean by Platonic love, anyway? What do we all mean when we use that epithet? Look first at the dictionary definition. Platonic love: A pure spiritual love subsitting between the sexes, which regards the mind and its excellencies only. That last clause, 'regarding the mind only,' upsets the theory of Piatonic love entirely. The truth is, that there is no such thing existing between any man and woman. As soon as the feeling of regard between people of opposite sex grows strong enough to be designated as love, it emanates from the heart, not from the brain, and is not interested alone in the excellencies of the mind, although mental attraction in many cases is the first cause of the love. The clearest form of expressing affection for any one is by means of a caress given with the hands, arms and lips. This is natural and right when the affection is allowable—as between mother and child, husband and wife, or brother and sister."

Edward Bok reaches out in sympathy to those who are "Alone at Christmas." It would be well to keep them in mind, and endeavor to cheer them on their way all the year round, but the thought of especially remembering them on Christmas day, when all the world is festive, is commendable. In his article he says: If in this age of organizations innumerable there is room for one more, it is for an organization which would bring together, especially on Christmas, those who are alone in the world, our feelings would be if they were not with us. It is so hard to imagine ourselves in a position other than the one we are in. And yet that position might easily be other than it is. With many that position is other than God has made judges, yet who are alone. Some giri, per-hape, alone; some woman alone; some young man; some old man; alone! Alone at Christ-

SANTA CLAUS IN THE OLD SLUMS.— Jacob A. Riis contributes an article on "The Passing of Cat Alley" to the December Century. Mr. Rlis says:

When Santa Claus comes around to New York this Christmas he will look in vain for some of the slum alleys he used to know. They are gone. Where some of them were there are shrubs and trees and greensward; the sites of others are holes and hillocks yet, that bye-andbye, when all the official red tape is unwound and what a lot of it there is to plague man-kind!—will be leveled out, and made into playgrounds for little feet that have been aching for them too long. Perhaps it will surprise some good people to hear that Santa Claus knew the old alleys but he did. I have been there with him, and I knew that, much as some things which he saw there grieved him—the starved childhood, the pinching poverty, and the slovenly indifference that cut deeper than the rest, because it spoke of hope that was dead—yet by nothing was his gentle spirit so grieved and shocked as by the show that proposed to turn his holiday into a battalion drill of the children from the alleys and the courts for patricians, young and old, to review. It was well meant, but it was not Christmas. That belongs to the home, and in the darkest slums Santa Claus found, homes where his blessed tree took root, and shed its mild radiance about, dispelling the darkness, and bring ing back hops and courage and trust.

THE SENSE OF JUSTICE IN THE SLUMS.-Cat Alley has it faults, but it can at least be said of it in extenuation that it was very human. With them all it has a rude sense of jus tice that did not distinguish its early builders. When the work of tearing down had begun, I watched or e day a troop of children having fun with a see-saw that they had made of a plank laid across a lime-barrel. The whole Ir sh contingent rode the plank all at once with screams of delight. A ragged little girl from the despised "Dago" colony watched them from the corner with hungry eyes Big Jane, who was the leader by virtue of her thirteen years and her long reach, saw her and stopped the show. "Here, Mame," she said, pushing one of the smaller girls from the plank, "you get off an' let her ride. Her mother was stabbed yester And the little Dago rode, and was made KINDERGARTEN REVIEW.-Every home should contain this magazine. The great est question of the day is: "How Shall the Children be Educated?" Parents as well as teachers should glean from every available source information on this all important sub ject. This magazine contains words of interest to teacher, parent and child. Elizabeth Rowland sends this message to mothers:

Untold joys and the highest education await the mother who conscientiously takes all the care of her little child. By so doing she will-find herself developed in many ways which are of the greatest benefit to herself and others. She may have thought before that she knew how to work and to make the most of each hour, but when faithfully supplying every need of a baby, and at the same time attending to household and a share of social duties, she will almost wonder what previously filled her days. She will realize just what things are important in her daily life, and will let go many things that were formerly considered so.

Her daily life must accord with the child's needs and routine of living, and should there-fore be the implest and most healthful. Plenty of fresh air, early hours for meals, and for sleeping as well as for waking, will cause her to find her youth renewed in spite of her "confining employment." One cannot dwell upon self and selfish objects when entirely at the service of a helpless child, and this annihilation of self is alone of untold value. Considered in no other light, the development of unselfishness, of patience, of the power to work, of the ability to enjoy what a child enjoys, the constant opportunity to look at the world from a child's true and unbiassed point of view, the opportunity to watch the marvelous unfolding of a human intellect, and the continual incentives to higher living-all these are compensa tions enough to make any mother who faintly conceives of them undertake all the work they

But to all this are added some of the sweetest joys of a woman's life. A child turns nat urally to the one who cares for it, and who supplies its wants. What true mother would not be jealous of the nurse who was preferred to herself? Who would have her child's ever-questioning eyes turn elsewhere than to her own for their answers? Who would not gain at any cost the perfect confidence and sympa-thy of her child? And these can only come from constant intercourse and devoted care.

I believe that every true mother who has thus cared for her children feels that no matter what it has cost her she has gained far more than she has spent; and that the development and the joy which her children have been the means of giving her have exceeded many times all she could possibly do for them. Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out, and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free,

It embodies the results of more than a score of years of patient research on the part of Mr. Savage, and contains a great number of intensely interesting and well-authenticated "ghost stories." Indeed, it cannot fail to prove as entertaining as fiction to the general reader, while for those who are interested in psychical research it will be welcomed as one of the ablest, most critical and important presentations of this subject which has appeared since the scientific world has taken cognizance of Psychical phenomena. This volume embraces the subject matter found in Mr. Savage's masterly series of papers which appeared in The Arena during 1892, also his discussion of Psychical Research published some time ago in The Forum, together with an important introductory paper. The cloth copies contain a fine por trait of Mr. Savage.

MY LYRICAL LIFE, POEMS NEW AND OLD.

BY GERALD MASSEY.

The Poems of Mr. Massey were first placed before the American public in 1834, and at once became enthusiastically admired in this country, as they had been in England by such men as John Ruskin, Hugh Miller, Mathew Arnold and Walter Savage Landor, and highly praised by such authorities as the British Quarterly Recter* and the London Athenaeum.* Those who held that early edition in such estimation will warmly welcome the present. It contains the best poems given in the former, critically revised, and in some cases added to, and unward of two hundred additional ones written since that time, inspired by the reformatory, progressive and spiritualistic events that have made the last third of a century the most notable period in the history of the world. Their beauty of expression, impressiveness of thought and vividness of description are unsurpassed. Landor has said they "remind us of Shakspeare in the best of his sonnets"; and Ruskin: They are "a helpful and precious gift to the working classes."

Since the issuance of the early editions Mr. Massey has become a Spiritualist, and being such, and one of its able advocates, his poems, as they now, appear, are of special interest to our readers. In his preface he says:

"The Spiritualist who has plumbed the void of death as I have, and touched the solid ground of fact, has established a faith that can neither be undermined nor overthrown. He has done with the poetry of desolation and despair; the uighs of unavailing regret, and all the passionate wailing of antruitful pain. He cannot be bereaved in soul! And I have simple testimony that my poems have done welcome work, if only in helping to destroy the tyranny of death, which has made so many mental slaves afraid to live."

Baffled.

A songster from the wildwood becomes a captive, and is placed within a cage to sing into time to utter words of encouragement unto the ears of the inmates of a home the songs in which he reveled in his forest freedom. But his inspiration is gone, his vivacity is extinguished, and his voice is hoarse with pain. He beats his wings against the bars of his cage, seeking to break forth again into the liberty that once was his. Each time he falls back baffled, exhausted, and almost hopeless. Ever and anon he renews his efforts, only to meet with the same result-defeat. In time, if his heart does not break, if he does not wear his life away with grief, he learns to endure his captivity, but the memory of his glorious freedom yet remains, and causes him to look out upon the landscape around him with an in tense yearning to cleave the atmosphere in a skyward flight, or to skim along the earth in ter. He must be able to say: search of food. His songs, if perchance he ever sings in prison, are not the glad joyous out pourings of a happy heart that lives in love and for love, but are rather the low sad minor strains that tell of sorrow, grief and pain. The currents of his life are turned into unnatural channels, and the results must needs be in keeping with the causes that produced them.

The soul of man, dwelling in the boundless freedom of eternity, becomes captive under the siren-call of Love and Duty, and is imprisoned within a tenement of clay, to express itself in love to its kindred, wherever they are found. Like the bird from the woodland, it finds its cage a barrier to every attempt to express the grand inspiration; that were his in freedom, and vainly seeks to burst its prison walls to once more revel in the liberty of thought that forever obtains in the Eternal Home of the Soul. In the first years of its sojourn on earth memory retains much of its real life, and occasionally permits rare gems of wisdom to burst forth from the tender lips of a child. People marvel at these flashes of what they call genius, sadly shake their heads, and predict that the child in question is destined to an early immortality. So little do people really know of the source of such wisdom, that they complacently dismiss the most important factor of earth-life, and trust to Chance, or Fate, to teach them, as well as to develop an immortal soul.

As years pass on, these flashes of memory that reflect wisdom from beyond become less clear, and at last are hidden by the opaque walls of material interests, erected by the senses of the physical. Still, deep down in the innermost recesses of the soul lingers a dim consciousness of something outside of the circumference of physical being that pertains to its real selfhood. It enters man's thought as a subdued, tender pain, and causes him to send forth on wings of love sublime inspirations that cheer and encourage humanity in its upward march. But every attempt to interpret that elusive will-o' the-wisp of consciousness, like the song of the once free bird. is completely baffled as it seeks full expression. A low, sweet minor may ring out to solace the afflicted and to recall those who are susceptible to its sweet tones from temptation's of clay, that they are able to break forth after tive.

a fewishort years into the freedom of the ages that ever was and is and will be theirs. Some there are who live through all their earth years in dream land, finding within the cloisters of memory resplendent plotures of the real life of the soul. They seem to live in the past and impress those who never look beneath the surface of life for real causes, as dwelling in perpetual grief, whereas they are only trying to live from within, but are buffled in all their attempts by the barriers of illusions of materiality.

The vast majority of the human family will, when questioned, confess that their soul ideals have ever baffled their every attempt to make them the realities of the present hour. Every man at some period in life feels an intense yearning for a larger freedom, for a more glorious liberty for his inner nature. It may come when his heart has been mellowed by grief or softened by pain. It may come when the world of sense, through introspection, has become obliterated for a moment, and the higher faculties of his nature are quickened by the soul-forces from the eternal spheres of the spirit. Ah! the ideals of the soul! How they iuspire, how they transform those to whom they are revealed! They enable their recipients to look beyond the barricades of sense into the realm of the soul world, where the Permanent forever abides. These earnest longings of man's higher nature, these intense yearnings of the spirit, these calls of the soul are only desires on the part of the real man to grasp more of truth, and to more fully comprehend the meaning of life.

Who has not felt, in some quiet moment, a subtle prompting from a fource unknown, for something that will remove the feeling of uncertainty, or the sense of failure, from the temple of his thought? Who has not cried out in agony of soul for more light upon life's mysterious pathway in order that he may go forward in safety, guided by Knowledge? Who has not felt that every effort, e'en though put forth in all honesty of thought, and integrity of purpose, has resulted in total failure, leaving the thorn of defeat to sting and torture the

Who has not realized, not through the syllogisms of logic, nor the demonstrations of mathematics, that there is more of life than the narrow isthmus from the cradle to the grave? Who has not pleaded for more wisdom to express to those in need the perceptions of the life that is real in the spheres of the Perma nent? Who has not called, with voices choked by aching bitter sobs, with eyes beclouded by regretful tears, for power to overcome the obstacles that baffle their search for the kingdom of truth? Who has not exclaimed, in tones of bitter grief, "Soul of my own soul's being, when wilt thou wake and speak?"

These anxious questionings, these intense yearnings, these subtle, aching pains are the travailings of the soul in its birth into a broader, a grander freedom of being. They are the recognitions of the fact that that freedom was the soul's original heritage, lost by contact with so-called matter, through the blindness of man to the verities of the spirit, They are indices that man is being awakened by higher inspirations than those of the physical to a comprehension of his real na. ture, true mission and final destiny as an intelligent entity. They are sign-boards pointing to the City of Wisdom, toward which man has long been looking, but has not dared approach through fear of offending some power concerning which he knew nothing. Man now finds that these very experiences are his teachers, who are gently yet firmly leading him into that city by the hand of Knowledge. He now can take courage from the revelations he receives through his own efforts, and finds others as well as to himself. He knows that the world of matter will not long baffle his efforts to find the sphere of the soul, and that his longing to cleave the atmosphere of thought in an uplifting song, or to cause mankind, by the voice of inspiration, to look up from the muck-rakes of sense to see the spiritual crown, that may be theirs if they will but earn it, that hangs low in the clear sky of Truth for all who choose to don and wear. He knows, too, in these moments of intensity, that past, present and future have been, are, and ever will be his, and that he must use every means at hand to add to the sum total of his knowledge in order that he may prove that he has gained much by his transit across the plains of mat-

Spiritualistic Marriages.

In many States, Spiritualist speakers have the right to perform marriage services, the laws being so framed as to admit of their those statements know them to be false and doing so. In Massachusetts the law states that Mayors of cities, Justices of the Peace, and well-grounded doubts as to the historical char-Ministers of the gospel ordained according to acter of Jesus, hence salvation through a myththe usages of their respective denominations may unite people in marriage. Spiritualist speakers in this Commonwealth are not, literally speaking, "ministers of the gospel." They of Truth and Humanity would be subserved are ministers of the gospel of Spiritualism, which division is not recognized by the law, Again, the Spiritualists have not as yet established any usages, hence none of their speakers and mediums can be ordained according to the usages of the denomination, for no such usages exist. It therefore follows that spiritualistic ordinations, per se, convey no especial rights in respect to the performance of marriage services. The case of the pastor of the jealousy, inharmony and selfishness are sting-Independent Church at Greenwich, Mass., is an exception, because of the fact that the usages of the liberal churches were followed in the ordination and settlement of the speaker. The Holidays.

At this time the minds of thousands of people are occupied with thoughts of the holidays, and speculating most anxiously as to what kind and how many remembrances they will receive, as well as how many they will be obliged to give in return. It is a fixed habit with many people to give only to those from whom they themselves are reasonably sure to receive gifts. Others give only after they have received presents, thereby following the old rule, "you help me and I will help you." The holiday oustoms are radically wrong as at present followed. They put a severe strain upon the slender purses of working men and women and often cause chill Penury to stare many of them in the face after they have weakly followed the examples set them by their wealthy neighbors. Even among the classes possessed of large fortunes present making has become a serious burden. They follow the custom, realizing that social prestige, political power and church influence will all be jeopardized if they fail to do so.

Instead of being a glad, forgiving, happy anniversary, Christmas is rather a time when men and women seek to outdo one another in the richness and prodigality of their gifts. It engenders jealousy among children as well as among grown people, unless each member of a family fares as well as the other.

It causes envy among friends and neigh bors, and paves the way to open quarrels. In many instances the poor are indeed remembered, but the remembrance comes in such a way as to make them feel their poverty all the more keenly, and fills their hearts with bitterness as they reflect upon the seeming fact that the Lord Christ has been so generous with some, and so ungenerous to them in the distribution of the goods of the world.

The holiday season, on the whole, is no longer an inspiration to men and women to seek out the sick and afflicted, the mourners and unfortunates among the sons and daughters of men, that they may comfort them. Why should they take this trouble for people they never knew and care nothing for? What is it to them that some poor boy or man was crushed beneath the wheels of a heavy dray, leaving the family at home with no means of support? Why should they worry because hundreds of families in their city are without food and fuel? Why should their holiday be spoiled because some landlord has put a shivering, delicate woman and her little chil dren into the street through inability to pay rent? Why should, they be expected to spend their money that they have accumulated by thrift, hard work, inheritance or class legislation to benefit people so far beneath them? These are legitimate questions as the holidays approach, and we predict that many prosperous Americans will seek to find answers satisfactory only to themselves ere the New Year

We are aware that many merchants, grocers, coal-dealers, etc., will remember the needs of a few of the poor on Christmas day. But what are a barrel of flour or a few pounds of coal when compared with the needs of the whole year? A day of warmth and feasting, to be followed by cold and fasting that make life even harder to bear, is the only possible re sult. If the noble philanthropists and the generous hearted tradesmen would benefit the poor permanently, they should deal with causes and not with effects. This would require them to prevent class legislation, the unjust interpretation of laws, the inhumanity of man to his fellow men, and the grinding down of the wages of the artisan classes. We have no fault to find with honest, well-distributed charity, but we do object to giving the world of unfortunates a gleam of light once or twice per year that makes the gloom of their lives even darker and denser than before. We feel that it would be well if the money squandered at every yule-tide could be put into a common fund from which the actual needs of the worthy poor could be met in every city, town and hamlet throughout the year! We dare assert that the interest alone on such a fund would be more than sufficient to do the work required.

There is a religious side to this question to which we must allude briefly. False ideas of God, of human nature and of history are fostered by the observation of this holiday weakness. It is true that many children are made momentarily happy through rich and costly presents; but they are also deliberately deceived by their elders who instruct them in falsehood by asserting that their treasures are given them by "Kriss Kringle," "Santa Claus," or "Saint Nicholas," all of whom are known to be mythical personages by those who so gravely make the assertion. It is also said to be the celebration of the birth of the Savior. What Savior? History shows that the world has had many Saviors, whose natal days are as uncertain as is that of Jesus of Nazareth. Children of all ages are gravely told that Jesus is the true Christ, the one only through whom they can inherit eternal life. Those who utter misleading. They also know that there are ical man must also be false. Many other arguments can be advanced against this custom as at present in vogue. We believe the cause by its complete abolition.

The little mistletoe arrow slew Balder, the good and beautiful God of the Norsemen. It was so insignificant that its oath was not thought necessary when all objects in nature were importuned to protect him, but it accomplished the work of death at last. In Spiritualism. the little mistletoe arrows of suspicion, ing to death the good and beautiful truths offered in its name. Rise, O Spiritualists, and angel by your noble lives and pure aspirations.

Thanksgiving will long be remembered by the friends of the passengers on board the ill-fated City of Portland. The kind Providence that gave America the manifold blessings of war, bountiful crops, riots, race difficulties and hunger, did not forget that the maw of death needed a few more innocent to return thanks for the victims of the Port | to-day.

Spiritualism demands white lives, pure and pay in full for everything they get.

ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS, M.D.

We take pleasure in presenting to our readers excellent cuts of the medal presented to this eminent gentleman by the National Lyceum Association of Great Britain last June. We also reproduce the illuminated address presented by the same progressive body to the distinguished founder of the Lyceum system, on the occasion mentioned. It was a splendid tribute to a man who has done much for humanity, and was all the more graceful because it was totally unexproted. Dr. Davis ranks with the seers of the ages, and will be remembered as one of the world's greatest revelators centuries hence, when he will be classed with Swedenborg, Boehme and other eminent mystics.

The Illuminated Address which follows, as well as the Medal, may be seen in the window of the Banner of Light Bookstore:

Andrew Jackson Davis:

Dear Sir and Brother-We have been commissioned by the members of the Lyceums affiliated with the British Spiritualist Lyceum Union to beg your acceptance of the accompanying Silver Medal, commemorative of the Jubilee of Modern Spiritualism, as a token of their appreciation of the eminent services rendered by you to the cause of humanity in instituting Children's Progressive Lyceums as revealed to yourself by the spirit world, and which are being productive of so much good work amongst the Spiritualists in your own country and in the United Kingdom.

We desire that you may long be spared to inspire hope and courage in those faithful workers whose aim and delight is to teach those grand and gioripps truths communicated to you from the spirit spheres.

Yours fraternally, JESSE GREENWOOD, President. JOSEPH SUTCLIFF, Treasurer.

Bigotry and Intolerance.

These two elements in human nature have been the cause of the majority of the evils that have beset the race since the dawn of time. War, rapine and murder, selfishness, lust and greed, all find their inspiration in the promptings of these demons that lurk in the dark recesses of the human mind. The execution of thousands of innocent men and women as witches, as well as the horrors of the Spanish | this State. Every Spiritualist who believes in Inquisition, are evidences of the great power genuine mediumship, and in loyally protecting these diabolical potentates at one time held. Can we say that they have been overthrown, or even conquered, by the majority of people in our day? Rev. Dr. Withrow still preaches the doctrine of endless punishment, and actu ally hopes that those not of his household of faith will suffer eternal torture. His views are held by many clergymen who have not his courage in the avowal of their convictions. Certainly he and they are both bigoted and intolerant.

The Christian sects are envious and jealous one of another. Each assumes a superior virtue and boastfully claims to be the sole possessor of the avenue leading to the kingdom of God. They are all ready and willing to brand the liberal religionists of the times as heretics and infidels. They bigotedly assert that their faith is the only Orthodox one in existence, and place all others under the ban of their enlightened(?) judgment. Some members of these several Christian sects even go so far as to refuse to aid any one not of their own faith, and decline to act in any capacity with those whom their preachers call infidels and prophets of evils. It is not difficult to find instances in the immediate present where good Chris tians have refused to shake hands with Universalists, Unitarians and Spiritualists. It is also known that they have gone even beyond that limit, and boycotted them in business. In some States Christian intolerance has been so great as to prevent the election of Spiritualists. Liberalists and Free Thinkers to official positions. Cases are on record to prove that men have cast their ballots for candidates of doubtful honesty, rather than to vote for a man of different religious views.

Thus we see that Bigotry and Intolerance are yet rulers over the minds of many men. Are the Spiritualists free from their dominancy? "The most illiberal man in the world is an illiberal liberal," says some one. Can we say that all Spiritualists are truly liberal people? If they are, would there be so much boasting of the many wonders Spiritualism has done? Would there not be, rather, more attempts to show the beauties of that Spiritualism to the world through nobler lives and upright characters? Would there be so much haste to pronounce opinions upon metaphysical questions, and so much fault finding because of the refusal of all Spiritualists to accept certain definitions? Would some be so certain that they had possession of the royal road of Truth, and that every man ought to be compelled to go their way? Would there be so many divisions in local societies over mere trifles? Would there be so many anxious to hold office if they were truly liberal in their opinions and felt that there were others as good as themselves? Would there be so many insinuations as to other people's motives, and sly inuendos against their characters? Would there be so much of the "rule or ruin" spirit manifested on the part of those who feel that their way is the only right way? Until Spiritualists can give satisfactory replies to these queries both by precept and example, they will certainly appear both bigoted and intolerant to the outside world, and to the thoughtful ones in their own ranks.

The next holiday festival will be Christmas. This Christianized feast of Saturnalia of the ancient pagans has become the thing in fashionable society, and Spiritualists feel that they, too, must observe it, otherwise they will be out of style. They had rather be out of pocket than out of style, hence become blind followers of the blind. Is it not rather inconsistent for Spiritualists to celebrate Christmas, the so-called natal day of Jesus of Nazareth, pledge your word to protect Truth's revealing especially so since there is a grave doubt as to his ever having existed?

Suffering is one of man's teachers to lead him to a knowledge of himself. Physical and mental pain cause man to sigh for those things that will restore harmony in every department of his nature. Man's failure to profit by his experiences is the source of the victims, hence enabled him (the death angel) inharmony that is found in human beings

Winter is now upon us, and the worthy poor should not be forgotten. We hope the every person's first obligation, and no man has | characters and high aspirations on the part of | liberal-minded in our ranks will not forget any right to injure others, as well as himself, all of its adherents. The State Association.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Spiritualists' Association will be held on the first Tuesday in January, 1899. This live, working organization has already proved its usefulness on many occasions, and has most faithfully served the people ever since its incorporation. It deserves the support of every lover of truth, right, honesty and justice in the same, as well as in the work of sustaining pure Spiritualism, should unite with this association at once. The membership fee is only one dollar per year, and every Spiritualist will be paid threefold by allying himself with this progressive body.

Lyman Abbott.

This well known progressive pulpit orator has recently resigned the pastorate of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, N. Y., made famous by Henry Ward Beecher, on account of failing health, and will hereafter devote himself to his duties as editor of The Outlook. Dr. Abbott has maintained the high standard of excellence raised by his distinguished predecessor for ten years, and stands to-day at the head of the liberal orthodox Congregationalists in the United States. His retirement is to be deeply regretted, as he was fast leading his people into broader fields of thought. As editor of The Outlook he will still exert a wide, healthful influence over the reading public. We hope that his successor will carry the standard of progress forward with the same degree of rapidity and certainty that he has done.

An Appeal for the Children.

It has been the custom of some of the local societies to make a special effort to care for some of the many poor little children who know nothing of Christmas festivities. In times past, these children have been taken largely from the North End, but this year it is hoped that unfortunate ones from our own fold may be looked after first. With this end in view, an appeal is sent out to the Spiritualists of Boston to make diligent search for needy children between the ages of four and twelve years. A Christmas tree with suitable gifts will be provided for the first fifty whose names and ages are sent to the BANNER OF LIGHT office. Please send the names as soon as possible.

We call the attention of our readers to an error in the editorial "Medical Rights League," in our last issue. The omission of the word not in the last clause of the last sentence completely changed our meaning. We also wish to apologize for a type error in the title of a poem written by Mrs. Kate R. Stiles. It should be "The Poverty of Words," instead of Poetry.

Our esteemed friend, Mrs. Julia Steelman Mitchell, has recovered from her recent severe illness, and is ready to resume work upon the spiritual rostrum. We congratulate her upon her recovery, and wish her a full measure of success.

Another pioneer Spiritualist has gone out to her immortality, Mrs. S. C. Semple of Laconia, N. H., aged 94 years and 11 months. The funeral services were held Sunday, Dec. 4. Mrs. Semple took the first number of the BANNER OF LIGHT that was ever printed.

Many readers of THE BANNER will no doubt remember Mrs. Sophronia E. Warner-Bishop, one of the pioneer workers in the field of Spiritualism. In a letter to her son, H. H. Warner, under date of Nov. 16, she has the following to say:

"I thank you for THE BANNER. It does me more good than any words of mine can tell. I am proud of the dear editor, and would like to clasp his hand. I can now be proud to give this dear paper into the hands of opposers or those who are asking for light. Many, many thanks for THE BANNER. It is feeding my soul. I see the work, or the record of the work of old friends, and the growth of the Lyceum does my soul good.

Human Culture and Cure.

Parts Third and Fourth of "Human Culture and Cure," by E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL. D., is a valuable work for atudents; Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity.

Part Third includes an epitome of I. Philosophy in its Past Developments.

II. The Chemistry of Mental Action. III. Phreno Physicznomy.

IV. Psychology in its General Features. V. Psychometry or Perception of Interior

VI. Psychomic or Hypnotic Phenomena. VII. Clairvoyance, or Vision by Higher Grade Lights.

The subject of Hypnotism is attracting great attention, but no authority either European or American, seems to have reached any correct rationale of the subject. Dr. Babbitt's knowledge of the chemistry of the fine forces aided in large numbers to participate in the delightby the wiser ones, has seemingly given him a clear light concerning these mysterious phenomena, as well as the laws of mental action, psychometric phenomena, phreno-physiognomy, clairvoyance, nervous action, etc.

Many illustrations are given to demonstrate the psychic brain and body, which are so mighty when the ordinary brain can be held in abeyance. He says: This psychic body is what St. Paul calls the "spiritual body," and others the astral body, while Aristotle, and other inspirational souls have mentioned it. I call this invisible, interior body psychic, because it is of the grade of fineness to see by the psychic light, to hear, and perceive and reason through the medium of the psychic aura, which, when unimpeded by the coarse fleshly conditions, is far more swift and keen of perception than the organs of the ordinary body.

There are numerous cases in which, from some great fall or shock, this inner, more important self, seems to have been shaken loose from its cruder encasement, until it was able to look down upon its body lying separate from itself.

Prof. Varley, the eminent English electri cian, was at one time able to see his outer body and to move back and forth in his ethereal body.

The author, some time before coming to California, had a terrible fall on the ice, his whole weight striking on his right arm. With his left arm he reached to where his right arm seemed to be, but could not find it. On looking, he found he did not reach far enough to both thanks and praise for his kindness and get hold of the visible hand by half a foot. For efficiency in making the musical program a two or three weeks afterward, when aiming to move that arm, the psychic arm would come up to just where he willed it, but the external arm rested unmoved, like a piece of dead matter. Gradually it would come part way, as far as the inner arm, until finally both arms worked together. To see him feeling in mid air to find his arm was a source of amusement to his friends. This inability to move the arm did not come from any blockade of the nerves of the arm, as the flexor nerves were not reached by the swelling. Besides, when the psychic arm was felt to come up to the face, the nerves themselves did not move. Some lessons can be drawn from this: First, nerves alone, even with an unimpeded flow of nerve forces, cannot fill the whole demand of vital action, but must have this psychic body as a day, Dec. 12, at 2 30 and 8 P.M., under the oy Mrs. Pauline Edeler in tests. basis of life. Second, even this psychic body auspices of the Helping Hand, an auxiliary of the First Association of Spiritualists. cannot be called the complete ego or self of human being, for without the external body a human being is wholly cut off from the outer world around him, his form being invisible, his voice being inaudible, his nerves or muscles being too fine to deal with grosser nature around him, while he himself would be a nonentity to the inhabitants of the earth. The body, then, is a part of one's self, so far as life in this world is concerned. "Souls are the motor forces of the universe," said Thales; but even these souls would be helpless without bodily forces. Even the psychic body is made of refined matter and must have its in-

The author shows that the phenomena of hyp nosis and other refined phases of psychic force, are a proof of the Law of Power, and, in harmony with that principle, are more searching, more am perfectly familiar. I desire your coopera upbuilding to the mental and spiritual forces, more enduring, and if used with any kind of skill, more safe than the use of ruder forces for human upbuilding.

He also says that Self-hypnosis is a very important thing to attain to, and if it cannot be reached unaided, some true souled person who is already psychically developed can assist very much for awhile. As soon as possible, however, one's own grand possibilities should be evoluted, so that one may come nearer to the high and the Deific.

We know there are thousands of people eagerly seeking demonstrated knowledge, and there fore take pleasure in recommending Dr. Babbitt's book, as it contains a systematized course of study, which if pursued will lead the student to a much better understanding of the finer forces of man, and a clearer, broader conception of the divinity of every power. The Doctrine of Spirit Return.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

I sincerely believe that the old-time prejudice against the doctrine of spirit-return is almost dead, even among those who are supposed to be devout Orthodox people and High Churchman I do not be devout Orthodo posed to be devout Orthodox people and High Churchmen. It is very gratifying to think that such is the case. How is it, then, perhaps some one will ask, that so many thousands still go to the churches and keep aloof from the meet-ings of the Spiritualists? I think it is because there is a good deal of spirituality now being preached in the churches; besides, one cannot be expected to give up his old forms and cere-monies at once. The thing for Spiritualists to do is to seek a still broader plane of work and follow more practical methods. I have made it a special object, during the past two years, to interview Orthodox people of all creeds with the view of getting their opinions regarding the doctrine of spirit return, and in only one instance was I told that it was a "foolish be lief." I afterwards learned that this answer came from a man who never wrote an original sermon.

On Sunday, Dec. 4, the First Association of Spiritualists assembled in Casino Hall, Girard three days' convention. The weather was very unfavorable, as rain fell in torrents during the entire day. Nevertheless, the attendance at all the meetings was excellent.

At 3:30 the regular afternoon exercises commenced with choir singing, followed by an invocation by W. J. Colville, an exquisite baritone solo by Mr. Scott, and a sublime address by Mrs. Longley on "The Religious Aspects of Spiritualism," and "What of Animals in a Fu-ture Life?" At 7:45 P. M, the third great meeting convened, and though the storm had grown more furious, there was a large representative attendance. Music was of a high order.

Mrs. Longley's invocation and remarks were touching and appropriate in the extreme, and W. J. Colville's lecture on "Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, but only asks a hearing," was a stirring appeal to all who heard it to put simple truth before all things and determine to follow its lead, no matter into what pathway it may guide. The decorations of the platform were extremely beautitul and reflect high credit on the excellent taste and indefatigable industry of the ladies of the Helping Hand, who most effectively designed and carried out the plan. Prof. Bacon, organist and choir director, deserves both themps and projector high kindness and complete success, and every member of the choir is entitled to share in the gratitude of all who were privileged to listen to the en-chanting melodies and harmonies which floated from the well filled gallery to the floor beneath. On Monday, Dec. 5, the second day's meeting opened at 10 30 A.M. with a lecture by WJ J. Colville on "Our Thoughts-Their Influence on Health and Circumstances," followed by replies to questions. Next week a report of the Monday afternoon and evening and the Tuesday gatherings may appear, but these sessions could not possibly have been reported in time for this week's BANNER.

on Sunday next, Dec. 11, the Lyceum will meet at 2 P.M. W. J. Colville will lecture at 3 15 on "Christ and Cæsar—Their Relative Claims on Human Attention," and at 7.45 P.M. on "Ideal Marriage on Earth and in the World of Spirit." Impromptu poems follow lectures.

A Spiritualistic Colony.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

During the war with Spain I have been engaged as a navigating officer on board United States transports, but now as my services are not particularly required, I have returned home to carry into effect a long cherished ambitio 1; that is to plant a colony of Spiritualists in the Orient.

The events of the war have brought into our possession a group of islands which are rich in all things useful and beautiful, and where sinterior soul principle or element of pure spirit. cere believers in our grand faith could attain a more elevated plane of existence than where we are continually retarded by the uncongenial elements of our present society.

I refer to the Ladrone Islands, with which I tion in getting such a colony together, and if you care to lend your support to its establishment I shall be glad to correspond with you, and lay before you my plans. Hoping to hear from you at your earliest

ROCHESTER.-G. W. Kates writes: We have enjoyed a treat here, given to us by Moses Avenue and Thirteenth street, and opened a Hull. He lectured for us Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, Nov. 29 and 30 and Dec. 1. His subjects were respectively: "The Old and the New," "Angels, are they the Spirits of the Dead, and do they hold Communion with the Inhabitants of the Earth?" and "The Moral Tendency of Modern Spiritualism." He had the hall well filled with our intellectual people, who earnestly listened to The exercises commenced at 10:45 A.M. with fine music, followed by an invocation by Mrs. M. T. Longley of Washington. After other singing, Captain Keffer (President of the Association) made brief introductory remarks in his happiest vein, to which Mrs. Longley very his happiest very his happiest very his happiest very his happiest very his ha CORINTHIAN HALL.-This famous hall, made so by the first meetings to investigate the "raps" being held there Nov. 14, 1849, was almost totally destroyed by fire early in the morning of Dec. 2. Thus a landmark in the history of Modern Spiritualism is gone. The morning papers gave an account of the "rappings" in connection with their report of the conflagration; and that goes to show that the event is historical in Rochester, and will always be an important part of the record mace by Spiritualism.

AUBURN.-S. Comstock Ellis writes: The First Spiritualist Society opened meetings Sunday, Nov. 6, E. J. Bowtell of Ithaca speak. ing on that day, and the Sunday following.
Two evenings each week were devoted to lessons on the "Development of our Occult Forces." Both lectures and lessons were fine. Bro. Bowtell is a student, and gives most freely of the results of his years of study and thought never seeming to tire answering the questions with which he was constantly plied.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing followed Mr. Bowtell as speaker for our society, and in the ten days she was with us won her way to all hearts. She gave us seven fine lectures, and awakened an interest in Spiritualism here quite wondertul for so conservative and orthodox a city; her audiences increasing so fast that the new and beautiful Music Hall was secured for the last Sunday's lectures.

SYRACUSE. - Anna M. Armstrong, Sec'y, writes: The First Society of Spiritualists held its regular meeting Sunday afternoon and evening, Dec. 4, at the office of Dr. E. F. Butterfield. Features of afternoon meeting; reading, Dr. Butterfield; remarks, Mr. E. G. Reilly; speaking, Mrs. Huntley; psychometric readings, Mrs. A. E. Underhill; congregational

Although the evening was very stormy a large audience greeted Mrs. Russell of Philadelphia in her fourth appearance before our society. Mrs. Russell as a test medium brought many words of comfort to sorrowing hearts. This society meets Dec. 11 at 3 and 7:30 P. M. Dr. E. A. Wood will speak, and Mrs. Russell will again vo ce messages from the spirit-world.

PAINT TALKS. XI.

What Paint Manufacturers Know.

Paint manufacturers, like everybody else, are in business Paint manufacturers, like everybody else, are in business to make money. Money is made in the paint business by meeting the demand of the public, which demand includes convenience, beauty, economy and durability. The most successful paint manufacturers are those who have succeeded in meeting most fully all of these requirements and in convincing consumers that they have so met them. In order to meet the public demand and to protect their trade, which is continually menaced by the enterprise of alert competitors, paint manufacturers must under tand the properties of pigments, oils, and vehicles, and must know how to meet successfully new requirements and new conditions. Hence every well-conducted paint factory is a vast chemical and physical laboratory, is which new facts are continually seized upon and emb died in the products of the house, even if they are not published to the world. In the course of these investigations and tests, pursued incessantly for years, all paint manufacturers have discovered certain fundamental facts, which are now of common knowledge among them, and which are embodied by all of them in their better grades of paints. They all know the importance of pure linesed oil, and realize that satisfactory paints cannot be made with any substitute for it. Consequently in all the better grades of pann only pure linesed oil is used, without alkalies or adulterants. They also know that the use of zinc white in a paint enables it to carry a higher percentage of oil, and that its chemical stability permits it to be combined with many brilliant colors that are destroyed by other pigments; and they know that zinc white in a paint, besides giving brighter and more lasting this than can be otherwise produced, preserves the less stable pigments from destruction, and thus adds to the durability of any paint of which it forms a part.

All of these facts, which are known to every paint manufacturer, are of the greatest value where the competition is so great as in the paint trade, and upon them all successf to make money. Money is made in the paint business by meeting the demand of the public, which demand includes Combination paints differ from one another in detail, and combination paints differ from one another in detail, and upon these differences the claims of their manufacturers for superiority are based; but all agree unanimously in the claim that any good combination paint is better in all respects than any "straight" paint that can be made. It is for the consumer of paints to profit by the knowledge of these paint manufacturers, and when selecting paints, to see, first that they bear the name of a rejutable house and second that they contain the white jurielly.

KARL ANDERSON'S TABLES OF HOUSES

For Astrological Students, with Towns, Cities, etc., for which they are applicable, neat, concise and plain.

Under the present form it offers to the student of the Divine Science tables which combine nearly all of the principal places on the globe, and the others any person can, by referring to a late atlas, add to the list, should they not be found therein. The work has been admired for its legibility and shupleness of arrangement, its excellence of type, and, above all, for the number of tables, comprising, as they do, from the Tropics to the Arctic Circle. The ascendants and mid-heaven can easily be urned in right ascension by tables at the end of the book. Together with Planetary Desortations which the Planets give when posited in any of the twelve Signs, and the effects of Directions or Aspects of the Planets, forming a complete Astrological Guide.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Questions propounded by inquirers—having practical bearing upon human life in its departments of thought or labor—should be forwarded to this office by mail or left at our Counting-Room for answer. It should also be distinctly understood in this connection that the Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them to the life beyond the characteristics of their earthly lives—whether of good or evil; that those who pass from the mundane sphere in an undeveloped condition, eventually progress to a higher state of existence. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not compart with his or her reason. All express as much of Truth as they perceive—no more, the summer of life who recognize the published messages of their spirit-friends on this page, from time to time, will verify them by personally informing us of the fact.

SPIRIT-MESSAGES

MRS. JENNIE K. D. CONANT.

Report of Séance held Nov. 25, 1898.

Spirit Invocation. Oh, thou Spirit Divine, we bring ourselves in close communion with thee to obtain thy assistance in opening comminication between the spirit-world and the souls on earth. We thank thee for the many blessings that have been bestowed upon us in the past; we know if we are dutiful and do our part they will still continue. We thank thee for the extension of life here, and for the knowledge and wisdom we have gained. Oh, assist us to cast out all fear and all doubts, and to trust in thy divine power, knowing we are part of thee. We seek to be led and to be instructed wisely, that thy spirit may constantly abide with us. We observe the physical and earthly conditions of many hearts are made glad on Thanksgiving Day (which is set apart by our government so that all may unite once a year in feasting and in rejoicing), but how much greater would their blessings be if they could come in touch with the silent spirit that gives food and consolation when all earthly things fade away. When our earthly friends leave us and deceive us, we know that our spiritual friends are still with us. Guide us and direct ne in all things, now and through eternity. Amen,

INDIVIDUAL MESSAGES.

George Cooper.

I seem to be the first to be permitted to open the séance this morning. I am glad to identify myself here as one that has proved the change called death, and the consciousness of life beyond. I am glad also to return, feeling that the whole atmosphere is pregnated with Thanksgiving rejoicing, but while we see it has brought joy to many, it has brought grief unto others.

Many who ate with their families a year ago left vacant chairs this year; many who were knowing that Mary Alice is still with her and together are now scattered, and in some homes sadness and desolation reign to-day; oh! how My name is Mary Alice Doherty, and my home, hard it is for the spirit to enter into such homes | South Boston. and comfort them. To those whose hearts are desolate, and who feel that life is not worth living, a little crumb of comfort may be given, and through the power of penetration, patience and the law of attraction, we may be able to that children are recognized in earth-life and bring them to observe that little crumb, and they may open the doors of their hearts, and welcome us in spirit, and seek our assistance. When all things look bright and comfortable. and they have the means to secure all they dcsire, they are then not very apt to seek any supreme power; they seem to think they have them a letter or communication as a Thanksplenty to day, and will always have it; but oh! how things do change. When our stores are empty, and our hearts desolate, and we have only a little over eight years old. The dccno means at hand to provide for the necessities tors called it brain trouble. I don't know of the physical loly, it is then we are apt to cry for assistance, and that is why I return felt very bad, and it does this morning. I wish this morning. I have been out of the body mamma to know that my head does n't feel bad some time, and I have observed how conditions have changed with those that were near and dear to me. I have observed that the heart to. day is not rejoicing for the success of the past, but is desolate for not only the loss of the loved ones gone before, but the loss of material things, and for circumstances that now surround them in life. I see where it is neces- mother say so many times: "If Eva May could sary for them to seek the spirit, and be brought to a consciousness that it is not all of life to been to me. Now I would have some one to live on earth. I will not delay you longer, al. help me and some one to talk with." I know though there is much I desire to say, but I feel she is interested in Spiritualism and is some. it will not be proper this morning, as I appreciate this privilege, and must not abuse it. I feel that if I try I may be able to enter into the surroundings of those I desire to, through through herself, for I can often come to her. the medium of your press; my message is a little strange perhaps, but I have reasons for it. and I hope the one it is intended for will come or that I am really there; yet I try to comfort in contact with it, and will understand every her and give her strength, and that is why I word of it. Say that George Cooper was here came in this morning, as the good spirit said I this morning sending his Thanksgiving com. | might follow as the next in turn, so I have munication, he ping it will bring joy, not sor row, light, not darkness, peace, and not disturbance, for such is my mission this morning | Maine. -a mission of love. My home was in Les Ar-

Elizabeth E. Powers.

I would like to send a few words this morr. I think I have not been forgotten since I was ing to my children. I am thankful that I am called out of the body, for I went very sudable to make myself known, and I am pleased | denly. to realize that, after throwing the physical body aside and passing on to a sphere more I was young, being a little over twenty two real than the one I left, I can still hold my friends in memory and throw my influence around them and protect them in many ways. Children, mother is with you to protect and give you advice as much as is possible for me to in spirit; you know I always tried to help you in the past. There are circumstances and conditions in spirit similar to those in earth-life when we cannot shield you from all things. Since passing from the body, I have learned one thing in particular, and that is: a mother's love is oftentimes more hurtful than bene ficial. We do not give our children an opportunity to stand on their own feet and use you want to. It is hard to make others undertheir own brains and let them think for themselves. I know I was very anxious for mine to do what it seemed to me was right. I did not stop to think that they might comprehend differently than I. I had a great desire to honor my father and mother, and I felt my children ought to do the same. Now I see need then to fight fraud as much as you do.

this morning, for I wish Annie and Isabelle prove its identity every time if you give and Fred to know that I now see and under it an opportunity. We cannot always conthem to understand each other better, and will only help us a little we can prove in-try to study each other more. Each must mortality of the soul every time. There is a depend more on himself and seek for his own great work going on, and there is a great deal elevation. Don't feel that we have to be slaves, one to another.

Father is with me this morning, and so is the spirit than while in the toly, for we un derstand the influences that are brought to bear upon us. This is my Thanksgiving greet ing to all, and I would say to those who are visited by sorrow: Fear not, for the way of the Lord is mysterious, but it is good and just.

I am Elizabeth E. Powers, and my home was in Chicago, Ill. I passed away in a hospital in | think there is something in it." I say to all, New York through the effects of an operation GIVEN THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF for a cancer, and most of my family are in New Jersey and New York City.

Mary Alice Doherty.

I would like to send out a letter this morning, through your general postoffice (for that is what they call this meeting in spirit-life), to my father and mother. Every time these holidays come around they seem to think more of those who are gone than they do of those who are with them. I have been out of the body some four or five years. I passed away with diphtheria; I was quite sick, and at times did not know what surrounded me. There are many changes in earth-life that I do not re member; and as I return to this body to send a communication. I feel there are many things I would like to say that I can thoroughly remember, but I wish mother and father to know that when these holidays come, and they seem to miss their friends who are gone to spirit-life, and say "So-and-so was here at such and such a time." it is because the spirit is with you that you think of it, and, instead of grieving and feeling bad, and not being reconciled to the spirit who is gone, you ought to feel happier, for it makes the spirit feel worse, and is does not help the mortal to de velop any; your duty is to the living, and not to the so-called dead. The dead, as you call them, are better off than those of earth-life. Mother, I speak of this to make you feel happier and more contented. You realize that we know how you love us and miss us; and when you are downhearted and discouraged you often pray to God to take you, and that is wicked; for if he wished to take you he would, without your asking, provided he considered it was for the best. Now, mother and father, and dear little sister, when the work in earthlife is complete, and the spirit-world is prepared to receive you, we will all meet again in this bright morning-land, for things are very pleasant here, and I am very happy with grandma and Aunt Mary, and many of our friends gone before us. My little brother Robert is with me also, and we are only waiting and watching until time goes by, and we will all meet again and have a truo Thanksgiving dinner. I cannot hold the medium very long this morning, as I have waited a long time. I hope mother will be satisfied, for she takes your paper, and so does Aunt Sarah, and I know some of them will see this message, and I hope she will not only appreciate it, but rejoice at still loves her, and will assist her in all things.

Eva May Hemmenway.

I, too, want to send a few words to my mamma and papa, because this seems to be the time are always made happy. That is why I am here this morning, for there is nothing makes us happier than when we can give a present to some one and see that it makes them glad; at d I don't know of anything I could do now to help mamma and papa so much as senting giving offering.

I passed away some time ago, and was what that meant, but I do know that my head when I am in my spirit-home, only when I come back to the earth-conditions. I see she is not in the same house as when I passed away, and she has changed somewhat; her health is not very good lately, and I would like to help her. I would be quite a big girl now if I had lived in the physical body, and I can hear only have lived, what a help she would have what mediumistic, yet she is a little doubtful, for she wonders sometimes why I manifest through some other medium more than I do but she cannot always fully realize it, because she don't know whether it is her own mind, done the best I could. My name is Eva May Hemmenway, and my name was in Portland.

Fred Robertson.

My name is Fred Robertson, and you can locate me in Waterville, Me., especially, where

I left quite a number of friends down there, years old, and death was unexpected; but the young die as well as the old. I want to say to Emaline, and to all of those in whom I was personally interested, that, while the shock and the sadness were hard to overcome. I am glad of it. I was interested in spiritualistic things before I passed away, and I have those on earth who are interested still. I have tried to manifest in many ways, and I have been successful sometimes and other times I have not. I find the earth people are a good deal the same the world over, and I find in the spirit-life a similarity, but it is hard to do all stand you as you want them to. It is hard sometimes for us to manifest just when they went us. When the mortals will leave themselves open and free, spirits can then come in when they feel like it and have access to the stand what I did not in earth-life, and I want | trol the mortal conditions, but if they more needed. The spirit has tried many times to prove immortality of the soul and bring consolation and comfort to every heart, and to Frank, and we are all happier in union in telethem that the spirit returns to God who gave it.

That is why I am here this morning, showing that the body is destroyed but not the spirit. and yet how very few have sufficient knowledge and courage to say, I know my friends live and will live, and I will also. We are apt to get into ruts, as "I hope it is so," or "I investigate, and let reason and common sense prevail, for there is something in it to find out for yourselves.

I am glad to be here this morning, and I thank you all for this privilege, but I must cut this speech short, for there are others just as anxious as I am and the time is limited. I will now bid you a good-bye.

Carrie E. Freeman.

My name is Carrie E. Freeman, and my home Bridgeport, Ct., where many of my friends still reside, with whom I am anxious to come in contact, anxious to make them know what a beautiful thing it is to die and to be released from all the physical environments of the body, and to get away from many of the conditions in earth-life that we have to try to overcome. I was quite well along in years before I passed on, and was an invalid for a great many years. and I knew how good the angels were to me in all my suffering. Tuey kept me passive and reconciled, because they gave me to under stand the heavier the cross the brighter the crown, and to realize that bye-and-bye it would be well. I had many who had gone before who were waiting for me, but I was not conscious of the spirit communion with our loved ones, If I had been I would have been happier, and perhaps made others happier; but we must live by the light we receive.

I wish to return this morning, because have observed that my son has become much interested in Spiritualism, and has been investigating spiritual phenomena. He has not been quite satisfied with what he has received, for some things look very clear, and others look so vague that he is not satisfied. I heard him make a remark but a little while ago, that if he could get anything tangible that would meet with his reason, could see it from a logical standpoint, he could believe. He is somewhat interested in all sciences, and "especially in life's progress, and he is anxious to learn. I hope God will give me strength to help you take the first step in life immortal. Remember, you sow the seeds; you sometimes reap weeds. but because there are weeds among our flow ers, it does not destroy the flowers. Say to him and my family, and to all who may read this message: "Cultivate your flowers and bring forth the bright blossoms, and you will be strengthened by your efforts. I have refer ence to Spiritualism and mediumship and the problem of divine life. You may find those who seem to you not honest, or you may find others who assume more than they are capable of doing; but while you may find those who simulate truth, remember the parable-the your own. Father is with me this morning, and joins in sending this message. May it bring some comfort and consolation to the ones it is intended for. I will close, as I am not able so hold the medium any longer, and hope at some future time to be able to do better.

Verifications of Spirit Messages. To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

I have your paper sometimes through the kindness of a friend, and saw in the list from the circle-room my sister's name. I am not able to subscribe for the blessed paper, but I sent on a quarter to get a few numbers, so as to be sure to get her communication when her turn came, and to-day I have the precious letter from the other shore. She passed on Jar. 30, 1897, from Braceville, O., and Emma R. Tuttle sent the obituary notice to THE BAN-NER, and now she reports to us. This communication is all right, except a slight mistake in the first name-it is written "Menica," and it should be MERCIA BOYNTON LANE. I am the sister in Fort Worth, Tex. The other is in Newton Falls, O., as she stated. I must have some copies to send to friends who will not get it any other way.

Thanking you for the good circle room, and the good work you have accomplished,

I remain your co-worker. MRS. JENNIE BOYNTON HURLBUT.

1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Fort Worth, Tex. To the Edltor of the Banner of Light:

The message from MENICA BOYNTON LANE is well appreciated and correct in all its details, except first name should be MERCIA. The mistake is not strange, as in earth-life such mistakes were frequent; and in manifesting, the name Mercia has never been given perfectly-always an M, but no further. All are much pleased and grateful for the privilege accorded to our loved ones, as well as the blessing to our own glad hearts. We prize THE BANNER. It has long been a welcome guest in our household. I am trying to get two new subscribers; hepe to succeed. ROXANA F. BARBER.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Referring to the spirit message published in the BANNER OF LIGHT under date of Aug. 20, from MENICA BOYNTON LANE, I would state that with the exception of a slight error in first name, the message is perfectly correct. And my sister joins me in extending to THE BANNER medium and circle our heartfelt thanks for transmitting these word; to us from our spirit mother. Very truly yours, Oil City, Pa. GEO. B. LANE.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light: In THE BANNER of July 30 this year, was a message from Thomas D. Francis, my husband. I believe it was his, as it was true in every particular, and spoke of promising friends that he would send a message back had placed it there. Remember that the ochome and the surroundings, and you will not | through the paper after he had passed over, | currence took place at the residence of the two and that one little incident was quite a test, things anew, and that is why I wish to return some one else manifesting, for the spirit will had not looked for it to be fulfilled, and was much surprised as well as pleased, and feel that this acknowledgement is justly due the medlum. Yours respectfully,

MRS. T. D. FRANCIS. Manchester, N. II.

A Letter from Abby A. Judson.

NUMBER FORTY-BEVEN.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

By way of disposing of all other details before entering on the body of my letter, I will say that two anonymous gifts have reached me during this month, which I was requested to acknowledge in THE BANNER. They were from Palmyra, Pa., and from Washington, D. C. I thank these friends, but would gladly have learned their "name," as well as their local habitation."

The rich verdure of the morning-glories has blackened, and the twisted stems look bare in this Thanksgiving snow. But under the snow the drifting leaves, and the gathering soil many seeds lie hidden, and will gladden us with abuniant bloom when our planet reaches another quarter of the ecliptic. And with the precious self-sown seed of my own plants, I ex pect to delightedly watch those that will grow from the seeds sent me by our dear friend of the Cause, Mrs. Anna K. Clifford of Cleveland. Hers will be lovely indeed, "of unusual size, a beautiful blue in color, with a horizontal rim of white at the outer edge, while the neck of the flower shows a rosy tinge."

I have just formed the acquaintance of "The Lyceum," published by her husband, Mr. Tom Clifford, and illumined by her gentle spirit. I am very much taken by this weekly, and recommend it to all Spiritualists who desire their own children, and those of others to be both entertained and enlightened by this admirable little paper.

Several years ago I cut out from the Religio-Philosophical Journal, a short article by Minot J. Savage, entitled "Evidence." It gave me much to think of at the time, and was the keynote to much that has come to me since, regarding spiritual phenomena. I have just re read it, and it seems to me just as valuable as when it first met my eyes.

His first point is that no iteration of the statement, "I know it is so," is sufficient; the facts must be established by evidence that would satisfy a court of justice. His second point is, that we must not call in the spirits of the dead as an explanation, till every other conceivable theory has been shown to be inadequate. The spirit theory must be proved as clearly as is the fact that the earth is a sphere.

He recommends that those who have had a remarkable experience write it out as accurately as possible, and settle the date, if that can be done, and have others who were present do the same. Also, if you have in the future such an experience, record it at once, whether you know that it comes true or not. Then tell some one of it at once, and get this person to witness your fecord. Third, if it comes out true, make a written record of this new fact, and have as many persons witness this record as possible. Always set down the

This is the true way to get an accumulation of real evidence. By so doing we can put it out of the power of opponents to say, "You spirit of truth will lead you, and if you develop think you saw such and such a thing," "You your own spirit-faculties, you will know the | imagined that," or "You and the persons with spirit when it comes to you, and will recognize you were psychologized." That last objection is painfully amusing, as it is spiritual investigation alone that has taught christendom the possibility of being psychologized.

It is the pursuance of such methods that caused that immense audience at the closing session of the World's Psychical Congress in Chicago in 1893 to hang with breathless attention on the words of F. W. H. Myers of England. And it is his rigid adherence to such methods that has given so rare a value to the investigations of Dr. Hodgson, and his frank and fearless statement of the conclusion he has reached.

Not long ago a gentlemen residing in the Middle West sent me a photograph of a lifesiza portrait of his relative, believed to be taken through the psychic power of a wellknown medium in Chicago. On the back of the photograph is a printed account of the way this portrait was produced, and it makes the claim that this special phenomenon gave absolute evidence of the truth of spirit-existence and spirit return.

And yet a careful examination of this printed statement reveals so many flaws that its value as direct evidence is reduced to nil. It is precisely one of those narrations that are convincing to Spiritualists, but do not convince non Spiritualists who are accustomed to weighing evidence.

To premise, the original of the portrait, a well-known resident of the town where this gentleman resides, passed to spirit life in 1888. In 1891 the gentleman began his investigations into Spiritualism with the same medium and her companion, through whom this portrait was obtained in 1897, and was convinced through them that Spiritualism is true. I was in that town in 1891, conversed with this gentleman and remember the facts of the case. During the intervening six years he continued his acquaintance with these two mediums, and they had ample opportunity to search out all facts connected with his dead relatives.

When this "convincing" manifestation took place in 1897, he was at the residence of the mediums, in a room alone with one of them. He had brought the canvas for the portrait with him. He placed the canvas under a table in the middle of the room, a curtain was pinned around the table, and he and the medium waited, while engaged in conversation. He expressly states that the medium had never seen his dead relative, nor a picture of him. He does not give any proof of this, Could he have been with that medium every day and night during those six years, and know in that way that she had never seen his picture? Or, did he make this important statement on the word of the medium herself? At the end of three hours he heard three taps upon the table, then, "no one else having touched the canvas after he had placed it there," he took it out and found a life-size portrait of his dead relative.

He does not state that he had made a thorough examination of the floor, nor of the ceiling of the room directly below it. We do not therefore see a solid ground for his statement that no one had touched the canvas after he mediums. How can he prove that during the that, instead of their being blind and obstinate, I was the one. I can now behold all a medium as to whether it was your friend or and was not known by others at all. I myself the floor, and the prove that during the attain it, there would be no further incentive to upward effort.—C, H. White.

hand, and now marked to duplicate his own oanvas, not substituted? Three hours gave ample time for all this to be done.

We hope not to be misunderstood. We know more remarkable things than this have been done by decarnate spirits under proved conditions that made explanation impossible only on the spirit hypothesis. What we mean to say is that the account of this manifestation, and a majority of ordinary manifestations, leaves too many exposed places, and too many flaws to allow it to be taken as actual evidence of the intervention of decarnate spirits.

I have myself been personally cognizant of many instances of spiritual manifestation that could be accounted for only on the spiritual hyrothesis. I have also been personally cognizant of many manifestations that could have been accounted for by the intervention of mortals a'one, but which I believe to have been genuine, from the nature of the medium, from the internal evidence of the communication, and from the likelihood that the spirits would avail themselves of the opportunity. And I have been personally cognizant of a very few instances where fraud was intentionally used by a bogus medium.

It is for the skeptical outside world that we insist that evidence be irrefragable, that there be no loop-hole where the enemy's arrow can find entrance. But when we commune with our dear decarnate friends, we demand nothing of the sort. Then it is, "Soul to soul, like the blending of light do our souls mingle." And the same lofty spirit wrote me on one occasion, "The soul needs no tongue, my child." But these communings are naught to the "madding crowd," though they are everything to the happy recipient. On such occasions we do not think of a test. Indeed, the very word is repugnant. But when we seek to bring a manifestation to the notice of the outside world, in order to convince them that Spiritualism is true, we demand the clearest. the strongest and the most impregnable evi-

F. K. Stugg, of Newark, N. J., fully endorses my letter in The BANNER of Nov. 27 as to the eminent merits and sincerity of this wise woman. Her books are, to him, the best he can find, and he hopes these holidays may bring her orders for many, as well as other help. He knows her personally, and was at her house Yours truly,

An Important Subject.

Mr. Editor and Readers of the Banner of Light: Dear Friends-Believing that you are one and all deeply interested in the promulgation of truth, and in the spread of true Spiritualism in its various aspects of instruction and labor, consequently interested in the mission and work of the National Spiritualists' Association, I make no apology for approaching you in behalf of this important and useful organization. I do not propose to weary you with the oit. repeated quotations concerning the strength of unity, and so forth, but I do wish to recall them to your minds with an influence and an emphasis that will lend a new meaning to them. Why? Because the N. S. A. holds out its hands to you-not only in appeal for your financial aid and sympathy, but also in loving and kindly greeting, hoping to be received and understood. This worthy organization recognizes the fellowship of men and the value of fraternal association. It appreciates the importance and good work of every spiritual society, however few its numbers, and however small the seating capacity of its assembly room. It desires to have every society that promulgates spiritualistic truth chartered with it, not only for its advantage in being thus strengthened, but also for the further protection of such society.

The National Spiritualists' Association is interested in the work of true mediumship of all phases of manifestation-it desires to clasp hands in friendly accord with all who are working for the dissemination of truth and in promoting harmony among men.

Shall we not, then, receive your encouragement and cooperation in the good work of the N. S. A., which aims to gain sufficient funds to aid worthy and indigent mediums, also to establish homes and other institutions of a practical nature, worthy of our Cause; to be able to send out missionaries who can assist needy and worthy societies in their efforts to reach the public with spiritual truths, or who can go to localities where no spiritual society exists. and preach the truth as the angels give them utterance; to provide sanitarium and educational funds for the blessing of the sick and the enlightment of the ignorant, and to do a great many good works in the name of Spiritualism which it could well and ably accomplish if each spiritualistic society will charter with it; if every Spiritualist in the United States will but contribute a dime to its treasury, and if ten thousand Spiritualists out of the millions of believers in our Philosophy will become contributing members to the N. S. A., at one dollar a year, which sum, after all, is scarcely

Dear friends, those of you who have not considered this subject, come over and help us. Help us not only to pay the current expenses of the N. S. A., but to do the work we long to more effectively forward; to protect the weak, instruct the ignorant, care for the sick and destitute, be a sustaining power to mediums and public workers in Spiritualism, a menace to error, and a protection to all that is noble and of truth in our glorious Cause. By your active and timely cooperation, dear friends, your sympathy and encouragement, and by such advice and financial aid as you can conveniently give, the interests of this Association can be enhanced a thousand-fold.

two cents per week.

Permit me, before closing, Mr. Editor, to thus publicly return thanks to the many friends who have mailed me personal congratulations on my election to office in the N. S. A. I thank them, one and all, in spirit, and deeply appreciate their kindly words; among them are Thomas G. Newman, Dr. Peebles, Charles Dawbarn, W. H. Bach and many other public workers, as well as many from more private life who are equally valued and dear. I thank them, one and all, and also the editors of the various spiritual papers for their kindly words.

columns of our secular exchanges, and venture to present them to our readers in order that they may know by what standard Spiritualism is judged by the outside world, from the published utterances of some professed Spiritualists.

Reincarnated Spirits.

The recent statement that spirits are not reincarnated, as was Jesus when he came to earth, being reborn as a child of the Virgin Mary, is not correct, for recent researches along poiritualistic lines have given scientific proof of the fact of reincarnation. Nearly every person has lived previous lives, either upon the earth or upon other planets or spheres, and after death will come back to earth again if they are not properly developed while here. A lady artist in Boston, a well known medium, was told by her controls that she had lived in Spain four hundred years ago, and that her former husband, Emanual, was still around her, although she is now married to another man. Other mediums told her the same story, and one prophesied that if she atten led a materialization scance her spirit soul mate and former husband, Emanual, would materialize in a visible human body, which she could see and talk with. The seance was attended, and, although no one present knew the lady or her reincarnated history, she there met a beautiful materialized angel, who was dressed in gorgeous robes, filled with dazzling jewels, a very high spirit. She talked with him, and other people also did the same thing, thus proving his reality. Then he gradually dematerialized, almost while the lady held his hand. This case is well authenticated, and from twelve sources of information the facts were verified by about twenty eight people. The startling revelations of psychical research and modern mediumship are revolutionizing the churches, and the fact is, never was there such a panic in the churches as at the present day. New ideas are coming to the front, an i among them materialization of spirits and reamong them materialization of the incarnation are taking front seats.

Roxbury.

Bogus Seances.

There is so much talk about alleged bogus séances and fraudulent mediumships that perhaps a few cases bearing on these points might haps a few cases bearing on these points might throw some brilliant light on dark places, and lighten the pathway to psychological research and the tomb. A few years since the claim was made by Spiritualists that a certain materializing medium in Philadelphia was impersonating spirit forms, and some Boston people desired that sue be arrested, and prosecuted to the extent of the law. Two detectives and officers were sent to the scances for the pur officers were sent to the scances for the pur pose of catching her in the act. They were all ready to grasp the first spook who appeared, when the head officer said: "I guess we won't grab this one, for this old Quaker woman is my dear mother, who has been dead for twenty years." The spirit spoke to her boy, and no arrest has ever been made. Another case was right in Boston, where a famous lady artist said to an alleged materialized spirit: "How do I know you are a spirit, and not the medi um dressed up?" when the spirit dematerialized before twenty people, and then materialized from a tiny speck of white on the floor. ized from a tiny speck of white on the floor. The spirit afterward conversed with her daughter, and convinced every one that she was really a spirit from the next world. At the same time about thirty of ier spirits materialized, and were all recognized. Yet this medium is called "a first class fraud" by people who can't see all their dead relatives in five minutes for ten cents. Clergymen want to have these marvelous miracles performed for nothing, and then damn the medium if there ain't power enough to get full forms at the first sé ince. Another case: A man told one of Poet Bryant's relatives that he could hunt up a lost man by having the spirits tip out an answer by the table. They thought the man was crazy, but decided to try his method, when, as he said, the spirits told where the dead man had gone, where he worked in various cities, and the actual place of burial, etc. Similar to the little Fox girls, who fifty years ago first started the spiritualistic movement -an event greater than the invention of the Atlantic cable, the telephone or the steam engine, since it marked the first successful attempt to communicate between the two worlds of heaven and earth in this nineteenth century.

Spiritualism.

In the Traveler one who signed "Ever and Always a Spiritualist," seems to be one of "a Judas in every twelve," or shall we be more kind, and say he is one of the ignorant Spiritualists? I have seen an I shook hands with and heard ghosts speak. Not one, but many times. A Spiritualist ought not to be so ignorant as to dear what has been known for aggs. If they dony what has been known for ages. If they deny some of the phenomena not so much known, we might cover their ignorance with greater charity; but a Spiritualist who denies materialization is no more a Spiritualist than a man is a mathematician who does not know how to add numbers. When we wish to erect a ten story fire-proof building we do not start the walls on the foundation of a one-story wooden house, a hovel, if you please, but we remove all the old walls and start on a solid foundation. So with Spiritualism. Ingersoll, and men of his kind, are tearing down the old dogmas and creeds, and when the foundation of the old hovels are removed we come with Spiritism and erect a more robust creed; a truth that has been demonstrated. A person who does not know spirit materialization to be a fact, is not a Spiritualist, though he or she may be a small part of one. Yours truly,

Thought-Waves.
Chap. XV.—Christian Science, Mind-Curc, Faith-Cure—then Physical Relations.
Chap. XVI.—What the Immortal State Must Be.
Chap. XVI.—Personal Experience—Intelligence from the Sphere of Light.

The author sets out to put on a more scientific and ration al basis the proofs of the doctrine of Immortality. He recognizes the fact that we live in an age of growing skepticism; that evidence which was once sufficient is no longer so, and that in the minds of a very large class of carnest and intelligent persons faith in a future state of existence has a very slender hold.

THE VOICES.

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW. THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorloud attributes.

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality of Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their cord, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF PRAYER enforces the idea that our prayer must accord with immutable laws, else we pray for effects, independent of cause.

THE SIXTH SENSE; or, Electricity. A Story for the Masses. By Mary E. Burell.
This is a fine and pleasing Story so interestingly fold that each individual character of its dramatis persona speedily comes to be regarded by the reader as a familiar acquaintance, and all of them as every-day associates. One of these possesses spiritual gifts, being both clairvoyant and clairaudient; and, added to these, a clear perception of the philosophy and phenomena of Modern Spiritualism.

In the course of the narrative much is explained that is problematic to those newly investigating the subject, and in some instances to long established Spiritualists.

", ALIUO

(Pronounced We-ja,) the Egyptian Luck Board, a Talking Board, is without doubt the most interesting, remarkable and mysterious production of the 19th century. Its operations are always interesting, and frequently invaluable, answering, as it does, questions concerning the past, present and future, with marvelous accuracy. If furnishes never-failing amusement and recreation for all classes, while for the scientific or thoughtful its mysterious movements invite the most careful research and investigation—apparently forming the link which unites the known with the unknown, the material with the immaterial. Size of Board, 12x18 inches.

Directions.—Place the Board upon he laps of two persons, lady and gentleman preferred, with the small table upon the Board. Place the fingers lightly but firmly, without pressure, upon the table so as to move easily and freely. In from one to five minutes the table will commence to move, at first slowly, then faster, and will then be able to talk or answer questions, which it will do rapidly by touching the printed words or letters necessary to form words and sentences with the foreleg or pointer.

I IGHT: A Weekly Journal of Psychical, Occult and Mystical Research. "LiGHT" proclaims a belief in the existence and life of the spirit apart from and independent of the material organism, and in the reality and value of intelligent intercourse between spirits embodied and spirits disembodied. This position it firmly and consistently maintains. Beyond this it has no creed, and its columns are open to a full and free discussion—conducted in a spirit of honest, courteous and reverent inquiry—its only aim being, in the words of its motto—Light! More Light!"

To the educated thinker who concerns himself with questions of an occult character, "LIGHT" affords a special vehicle of information and discussion. It is the acknowledged representative of cultivated and intelligent Spiritualism throughout the world, everywhere quoted and referred to as such. The Editor has the cooperation of the best writers in this country and abroad, whose opinions are worthy of permanent record, whose experience and knowledge are of the highest value, and who have no other vehicle for their publications than "LIGHT." This gives the Journal a unique position and a singular value.

THE DEVELOPING CABINET. Every person who becomes interested in the Spiritua Philosophy is more or less interested in Mediumship and its development, and it is for the assistance of those desiring the unfoldment of their mediumistic gifts that PSYOHE, the Developing Cabinet, has been designed. It is arranged to store the vital magnetism, or energy, and adapted to develop anything from raps and table-tipping to independent slate-writing and other phases of mediumship. The Cabinet in each case acts as a storage house for the magnetic energy, and makes the attainment of the desired result more rapid and certain. The assistance of a few harmonious friends will be beneficial, but all inharmonious subjects should be dropped while engaged in the search for psychic phenomens, PSYOHE is 3x8x13 inches in dimension, has no metal in it, is made of wood selected for it by the Controlling Intelligences, and is THOROUGHLY MAGNETIZED.

MEETINGS IN BOSTON.

PROF. WM. M. LOCKWOOD.

THE BOSTON SPIRITUAL TEMPLE. - J. B. Hatch, Jr., Sec'y, writes: There is but one Prof. W. M. Lockwood in America, and he was with this society Sunday, Dec. 4, and will remain here for two months. The reception given him was of a kind that proved he had many friends in Boston. There was a large audience which evinced interest in all he said.

After a piano solo by Mr. Schaller and a beautiful song by Miss Laidlaw, President Allen, in a neat speech, presented the professor, who said in part:

"I am very glad to meet you again in Berkeley Hall. You know every year in New En. land every son and daughter always goes home to spend Christmas I have come home. Boston is said to be the Hub of the universe; it is not only the Hub in a commercial point, but the intellectual as well. I am here with a new line of thought, and I hope to have your earn-est thought to help me present the same."

During Prof. Lockwood's stay with this society he is to give a week day lecture of a different nature from those given on this platform Sundays. The first of the week-day lectures will be given at the Helping Hand Society, No. 3 Boylston Place, Wednesday evening, Dec. 14. The subject will be "The Possibilities of Human Love." Tickets can be procured of members of this society, also of the Helping Hand Society.

Prof. Lockwood will also during his stay tickets to this class by applying to the writer. We are to have a genuine spiritual revival during the next two months. Prof. Lockwood took for his subject Sunday morning, "What is the Higher Spiritualism?" and gave a lecture that will long be remembered by all who heard it. As so many of Prof. Lockwood's works are in print, and for sale at this hall, and at the BANNER OF LIGHT Book Store, we will only give a few words taken from his morning leature:

We have heard a good deal of late of a higher mental Spiritualism. This is a democratic age and a democratic platform to the extent of free thought, and I hope to call your attention to a new line of thought. When the priest became the politician then the country had to be run his way. Up to the time of Plato not many people had dared to think that we could love one another, and Plato did not dare to practice what he preached.

Plato left an impression that has obtained until the present age. A higher ideal of spirituality is beginning to be understood in this age. The human may be instructed into an error, but is never educated by error. Spiritualism does not only mean that your grandfather or grandmother can and will come back to you. Higher Spiritualism means knowledge, and we find such men as Abbott, Newton and Mills daring to take a peep at Truth. The spirit world that we live in is not controlled by any god.

At the close of Prof. Lockwood's address he received an ovation, and held an informal reception. In the evening he took for his subject, "The Evolution of a Thinker," and gave another grand lecture. Mr. Schaller gave a piano recital before the lecture. Miss Laidlaw sang, with violin obligato, C. L. C. Hatch, violinion

Don't fail to hear Prof. Lockwood through his entire course; you can't afford to lose a single lecture.

A subscription for the BANNER OF LIGHT would make a fine Christmas present. You can subscribe at this hall, and find it for sale at the news stand.

The many friends of this Society send out their sympathy to H. D. Barrett, and hope for his speedy recovery.

Mr. Fred Watson, our past pianist, and Mr. J. S. Mansergh, will be with this Society Sunday evening, Dec. 18. The writer has received a telegram to that effect. They will be pleased to meet their friends, and they have many here THE HELPING HAND SOCIETY, Gould Hall, 3 Boylston Place.-Mrs. Grace Cobb-Crawford writes: On account of the illnesss of Mr. H. D.

Barrett the reception to be tendered him by the Helping Hand Society was postponed until a later date. Due notice will be given through these columns. After supper Nov. 30 many speakers took part in the exercises, and spoke words of praise and sympathy for Mr. Barrett. The President, Mrs. Hatch, read a letter of regret dictated by Mr. Barrett, after which the following talent took part in the meeting: E.

L. Allen, Dr. Dean Clark, Mrs. Pettingill, Mrs. Clark, Mr. Warner, Mr. Varcoe, Mr. Sawln, and Mrs. Haven. E. W. and C. L. C. Hatch and Miss Gertrude Laidlaw rendered beautiful music during the evening. The meeting closed by the audience joining in singing "America." On Wednesday evening, Dec. 14, Prof. W. M. Lockwood will give a lecture for the benefit of this society. His subject will be upon "The Possibilities of Human Love." On the same evening this society will serve a Roosevelt sup per, and a good time is expected. Tickets for the lecture can be had of members of the so

BOSTON SPIRITUAL LYCEUM. - Clarence Arm strong, Clerk, writes: Sunday afternoon, Dec. 4. this Lyceum held a very interesting session. Owing to the severe storm the Sunday previous there was no Lyceum session, and the questions selected for that day were considered at this time. Several interesting experiences with the phenomena of Spiritualism were related. Prof. Schaller rendered a piano solo, after which we had our March, song, and usual exercises: Esther Mabel Botts, song; Master Har- opportunity is afforded them.

ECHO HALL, 1 JOHNSON AVE., CHARLESrown Dist .- A correspondent writes: Sunday, Dec. 4, the morning Lyceum was held, as usual, with a gradual increase. The evening services commenced at 7:40 with a service of song, led by F. W. Peak, assisted by Prof. Rimbach, cornetist; invocation by the Conductor, Mrs. E. J. Peak following with remarks by the spirit of her own mother, who requested the organist to sing "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-Night?" Mr. Walter Anderson of Chelsea was called upon for tests, which were very satisfactory to his hearers. Master Albert and Miss Alice Peak rendered an original poem by Mrs. Peak, with song; Mrs. Peak then proceeded to the usual work of giving tests and delineations. Mr. Ander son will be with us again next Sunday. Mrs. J. P. Nutter was with us last Friday evening. Mediums welcome.

THE LADIES' SPIRITUALISTIC INDUSTRIAL Association, a correspondent writes, met as usual last Thursday, supper at 6:30. At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. M. A. Brown. She announced that one hour would be devoted to short speeches, etc.; after that time it would be a social. This program was carried out, and several enter tained the company with music, speeches, readings, etc. It was one of the most enjoyable meetings we have had in some time.

THE BOSTON PSYCHIC CONFERENCE.-L. L. Whitlock, Pres, writes: This society met at 18 Huntington Avenue, at the hall of the Metaphysical School, Sunday, Dec. 4, at 2:30 P.M.

The subject, "Soul-Its Origin and Destiny," was treated in a very interesting manner by Mr. William Reed. Several others followed. It would be impossible to report correctly without more space than we have at this time. These meetings are free, and all are invited.

FIRST SPIRITUALIST ASSOCIATION MALDEN. S. E. W. writes: Mrs. J. K. D. Conant will be our speaker and medium on Dec. 11, at Odd Fellows Hall, Central Square, at 7:30 P.M.

LOWELL.-Thos. W. Pickup, Sec'y, writes: are, but no doubt those who did turn out were well paid for their trouble. Mrs. Effie I. Webster of Lynn was our speaker both afternoon and evening.

In the afternoon the controls gave a short talk, after which "Sunbeam" gave tests. The audience being rather small in the evening, it was decided to devote all the time to a test séance. "Sunbeam," Mrs. Webtser's guide, gave some of the most wonderful tests ever given from our platform, most of them to skep-tics, every one of them being fully recognized. The Lyceum met as usual, with a very good attendance. After exercises by the younger children, classes were formed for the discussion of the various subjects chosen by each class.
Our Ladies' Aid Fair was a decided success, the proceeds of which were somewhere in the neighborhood of $100. Mr. J. S. Scarlett is to be the speaker next Sunday.

FALL RIVER.-Mrs. Ann Hibbert, President, writes; We had two grand sessions Sunday, Dec. 4, in Grand Army Hall. South Main street. Our speaker was Mrs. M. H. Wallis of Man chester, England. She gave two excellent addresses, which were listened to with the closest attention. At the close of each address she gave quite a number of descriptions of spirit forms, which were well received. We had good audiences, considering the state of the weather. There was also a good attendance at our Lyceum session. Mrs. Wallis was very much pleased to see so many children present. She spoke many kindly words to them, at the close of which she was heartly applauded. Mrs. Wallis will be our speaker next Sunday, and we are sure, weather per mitting, large audiences will greet her.

SALEM.-First Spiritualists' Society-A. O U. W. Hall, Manning Block.—N. B. P. writes: The day was quite unpleasant Sunday, Dec. 4, and the audiences were very small indeed. Mrs. Carrie F. Loring of East Braintree was our speaker and medium. She delivered two beautiful discourses, and gave quite a number of readings, which were very correct, and much appreciated by those present. Sunday, Dec. 11, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring will be with us

G. A. R. HALL, 573 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridgeport.-Annie J. Banks, Cor. Sec'y, writes: The Cambridge Industrial Society of Spiritualists held a very interesting meeting Sunday, Nov. 20. Mrs. Maggie Butler spoke in her usual pleasant manner to a large audience; Mrs. Florence White gave a number of tests, which were recognized; music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Milliken and Mr. Harold Leslie. This society had its usual supper and entertainment Wednesday evening, Nov. 23. Mesdames Akerman and Knowles gave tests; music was furnished by Ada Came.

THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH SOCIETY, 527 Massa chusetts Ave., Cambridge.-Mrs. Ellis, Sec'y. writes: Our meetings Nov. 20 were well at tended and very spiritual. Our President, Mrs. A. J. Banks, made a few remarks, followed by many independent tests, which were fully recognized. Friday evening this society held a social at the President's home, which was enjoyed by all. Sunday, Nov. 27, the snow storm did not keep us from o pening our meet ings, and each session had a few who dared to brave the storm. We also have meetings every Thursday evening at 7.30. Mrs. Millen gives FITCHBURG, FIRST SPIRITUALIST SOCIETY, Dr. C. L. Fox, President, writes: Mr. A. Sawin of Boston attracted large audiences Sunday, Dec. 4. Mr. Sawin gave two able lectures. Many of the tests given were names, with full descriptions of the spirits. All were recognized. We hope to secure Mr. Sawin's services again in the near future. Mrs. L. A. Prentiss of Lynn speaks for us next Sunday.

BROCKTON.-The People's Progressive Association-Annie B. Bosworth, Cor. Sec'y, writes -held their usual evening meeting in Good Templara Hall, Dec. 4, having with them as their speaker and medium, Mrs. Nettie Holt-Harding of Somerville, who gave a very interesting lecture and tests, all of which were recognized. Next Sunday, Dec. 11, they will have with them Blanche H. Brainard of Lowell.

THE HAVERHILL SPIRITUAL UNION, William Hale writes, had for speaker Sunday, Dec. 4, Mrs. May S. Pepper of Providence. She was greeted by the largest audience of the season, lespite the terrible storm. Mrs. Pepper and her work are too well known to need any onlogy from me. Suffice to say she was at her best. Being the guest of Mr. Ham, President of the Helping Hand Association, she stopped there Tests were given by Mrs. S. S. Ham, which closed the meeting; after which a circle was formed to help a sick member, and, at Mrs. Pepper's suggestion, also continued to send a healing influence to H. D. Barrett. The Help-Speak truly, think purely, act nobly.

LYNN SPIRITUALISTS' ASSOCIATION-J. M. Kelty, President - Mrs. A. A. Averill, Sec'y, writes: Sunday, Dec. 4, the exercises at Cadet Hall consisted of fine addresses and excellent tests by Mrs. Tillie U. Reynolds of Troy, N. Y., psychometric readings by Mrs. Kimball of Malden, and short remarks from Mrs. Abbie N. Burnham of Malden. Thomas's full orchestra was present, and gave a most enjoyable concert. Supper was served in the banquet hall to a large number. Mrs. Reynolds will be with is again next Sunday.

MARLBORO.—The First Spiritualist Society -Mrs. F. A. Spalding writes-enjoyed two fine lectures Sunday, Dec. 4, by Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes of Boston. Our next speakers are Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing for Wednesday evening, Dec. 14, and Mrs. Hortense G. Holcombe of Springfield Sunday, Dec. 18.

BANQUET HALL, ODD FELLOWS BUILDING, CHELSEA. - Mrs. E. A. Foye, President, writes: We had a very good attendance Dec. 4, afternoon and evening, considering the weather. Mrs. H E. Millan of Cambridgeport was the medium, and Mrs. Brennan of Lynn gave tests in the afternoon, which were all recognized; Mr. Power of East Boston opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. J. W. Kenyon will be the medium for next Sunday.

MEETINGS IN BROOKLYN.

THE WOMAN'S PROGRESSIVE UNION .- Mrs. L. L. Smith, Sec'y, writes: The regular meet- has just closed a successful month's engage-Owing to the bad weather Sunday, Dec. 4, our audiences were not so large as they usually are, but no doubt those who did turn out were Where and What is It?" and the lecture was heartily appreciated by those present. The meeting closed with the usual spirit-messages. The evening service opened with an invocation, followed by a duet by Mrs. F. Kurth-Sieber and Miss Dikeman. entitled, "Open Those Pearly Gates;" Mr. Wiggin gave a fifteen minute talk upon "Clairvoyance," and the remainder of the evening was devoted to spirit communications. Feeling that there is a growing need of spiritual meetings in the Eastern District of Brooklyn, Mr. Wiggin will hereafter, under the auspices of the Union, conduct meetings at the Amphion Theatre Hall, upon the second and fourth Wednesday of each month. There was a good attendance at the first meeting, which was held last Wednesday evening, and the outlook for good work in this direction is certainly encouraging.

THE FRATERNITY OF DIVINE COMMUNION -Anna M. Tuttle, Cor. Sec'y, writes-held its usual services Sunday evening, Dec, 4, at Aurora Grata Cathedral, a fair-sized audience being present, though the night was very stormy. Mr. Fort occupied the chair, and Mr. Courlis being ill, Mr. William Franks was the medium. After opening hymn and Scripture reading, a beautiful poem, "Recompense," was read by Mr. Fort, who also made a prayer. Prof. Whitelaw rendered Handel's "Largo" on the violin, and the hymn "He Leadeth Me," was sung by those present. An address followed by Jerome H. Fort, subject, "Transition," handled in the speaker's usual able mantion,' ner. After another violin solo, "A Song With out Words," by Prof. Whitelaw, Mr. Franks gave many convincing tests.

A class meeting is held every Thursday evening in connection with the church, at Mr. W. J. Colville's college, 497 Franklin Avenue. No tests are given, but a lecture is delivered by some well known speaker each week, and opportunity is given to those wishing to ask questions on the subject of Spiritualism. There is no admission fee, a collection being taken to defray expenses.

A correspondent writes: Ira Moore Courlis has been quite seriously ill at the home of the Secretary, Mr. William Wellstood, Jr., on Eighth street. At the close of his usual Friday afternoon class, at his home, 209 Tompkins avenue, Mr. Courlis was taken with a severe pain in the back of the head, started for the doctor's to consult him, and stopped in Brother W.'s house; they prevailed upon him to remain over night, and at this writing he is quite ill at their home.

We have very few as earnest laborers among our younger workers. From Sunday to Sunday he draws large and inte lectual audiences, and it is under this strain that our dear brother has fallen. It is the prayer of his many friends, both in and out of our society, that he may soon be restored to health and usefulness.

MEETINGS IN NEW YORK.

FIRST SOCIETY OF SPIRITUALISTS. - The Tuxedo, Madison Avenue and 59th street, M. J. Fitz-Maurice, Sec'y, writes: Despite the inclement weather Dec. 4, a large audience assembled to greet Miss Margaret Gaule, who was most heartily received and gave many proofs of the future life that appealed strongly to the skeptics present. I am glad to state that Miss Gaule will continue with us throughout the month.

Announcement.

Believing that Spiritualism is a religion, and that in accordance with the laws of progression every Spiritualist should become more and more spiritual; and as it appears that the phenomens, such as tests, readings, etc., while necessary to attract the attention and convince us of the power of the spirits to communicate with us, do not tend to elevate the recipients. as most of the messages refer to material things; and being anxious to receive more spiritual teachings from those high and pure spirits, I have thought that it would be well to organize a group of twenty-five or thirty earnest men and women anxious to progress; but they must be determined to persevere-and I believe that we would not have to wait many weeks before our earnest desires would be satisfied. Should this view meet with the approval of earnest seekers, they are respectfully requested to communicate with "Earnest" care of the BANNER OF LIGHT; and when a sufficient number shall have answered, a meeting will be called to settle all the plans and perfect all arrangements.

PHILADELPHIA. - Charles L. GeFrorer, Sec'y. writes: The Philadelphia Spiritualist Society return and communion is a truth.

On the 13th ult. there came to our hall in the afternoon a Rev. Crawford Frost of the Church of the Holy Comforter of Baltimore Episcopal). After some convincing tests by Miss Gaule, he became very much interested, stating that he had been a seeker for a number of years, and that now he was more convinced than ever of the genuineness of Spiritnalism. On the invitation of our President, Mr. Locke, he was seated upon our platform in the evening, and in a brief address stated that he believed spirit-communication and the so-called ministration of saints in the church were one and the same thing.

Later in the week he attended Miss Gaule's seance in Washington, in which he stated that since he had been on our rostrum spirit-faces had appeared to him constantly, and that the church was very rapidly losing its attraction for him; from last accounts it looks as if we shall soon have another speaker in our ranks. On Nov. 2 a grand literary and musical entertainment was given under the management of the writer and Mrs. H. E. Snyder, for the purpose of obtaining a new organ for the society. The concert was a grand success, and, together with the proceeds of a seance by Miss Gaule, sufficient funds were obtained, in consequence of which a very handsome palace organ rests upon our platform. The engagement of Miss Lizzie Harlow in October was very popular and gratifying to the society, while the coming of the President of the National Spiritualists' Association in December is being looked forward to with pleasure by every Spiritualist in
