VOL. IX.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON, SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1861.

NO. 4.

Written for the Banner of Light. THE SONG WE USED TO SING.

BY MARY BURT.

Out of the past comes a voice to-night, Cheerily over the grass-grown years ; And the tones sound strangely familiar-As I listen, my eyes dim with tears.

'Tis his voice, who left us, long ago. For a home on the "other shore, Whose feet grew weary ere yet it was noon And faltered, then-walked no more.

Suns have risen and gone to their rest, And months have grown into years, Since the still small voice I have heard to-night, Made music for my ears.

I remember the day that the angel came, Though we saw not his shining wings; He folded them round our blue eyed one -Since then-with the angels he sings.

And the song he is singing floats down to us From his shining home above. And it sounds like one we used to sing. The one that he most did love.

We have sung it oft at the twilight hour, In the olden days, long gone, And it drops on my heart with a healing balm; Every word of that dear old song.

And I love to think, as I sit to-night, He remembers it all as of yore-For the angels have taught him sweeter songs Since he lived on their own bright shore.

We shall sing it again, I know we shall, That song of songs which we love ; I will practice it here, earth-taught awhile, Then together we'll sing it above. Milan, Ohio, March, 1861.

Written for the Banner of Light.

UDITH:

THE MYSTERY OF MORTON MARSH MANOR.

BY M, V. ST. LEON.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED. On our way home the events of yesterday were Darrowly discussed. "Now confess mamma," exclaimed Miss Blackburn to Lady Orford, "that you do admire Sir Wil-

"I own his fascinating manners, and of course admit that these emotions have made sad inroads praises; but I believe you mistake about the clopeon my dislike."

"I am so glad, for do you know I have promised myself much enjoyment in his society, and I could fortunately her husband had property of his own, so not bear you to disapprove him."

"I should be wretched. Alethia, if I thought there were any danger of your taking a warmer interest than friendship," Lady Orford hurriedly rejoined, ing of my cousin? with ill-concealed agitation, which struck me as being disproportionate to the cause, "but you would quired, as calmly as possible. not so openly praise him, if there were even a tendency that way."

"You are quite right," replied Miss Blackburn, " I surprise. could never be in love with Sir Wilford. But I do like him immensely, do n't you, Judith?"

" Most certainly," I answered slowly, still recur ring to the singular resemblance to my cousin.

"Why. I declare," said Alethia, laughing, "you answer so absently that I doubt you know what I as is the case with so many of those clannish Scotch-

I repelled this charge, but stated that I was thinking of the likeness Sir Wilford bore to an old friend mond of whom this episode was related, and having

"I hope I need not-repeat the warning which I gave to Alethia's cousin," said Lady Orford, smiling had thoughtlessly told Captain Yarrington that my uneasily. "Sir Wilford Dudley is not a marrying cousin was free; I could not recollect if I had men-seem to have taken a sudden spite against marriage, speaking of him the evening previous? If I had or at least, in the case of the gentleman in question. not, the identity need never be known, or I supposed Pray what has he done that he shall end his days a to be ignorant of the facts.

sing pertinacity of her mother provoked. ladyship, gravely; "there are other Blue Beards than cause her husband's disinheritance. A few similar such as behead their wives. Some blight the heart, cases have taught me great caution." and cruelly spare consciousness. That is suffering worse than death."

But did she not expressly state when his name was them." first mentioned that she had only a prejudice inherited from a friend? With a sigh I gave up the sub- discussion." interposed Miss Blackburn, "we were ject, wondering if mystery were to be my portion settling Sir Wilford Dudley's claims to our confidence and surrounding through life.

At dinner that day the gentlemen renewed the discussion; but devoted as Lady Orford was to his ought to give us the benefit of her opinion." stepmother, and unanimous as they generally were in opinion, it was Captain Yarrington who now agreed with her ladyship, while Lord Harry warmly sided with Miss Blackburn. I hardly knew to which said Captain Yarrington, in a low voice, fixing his side I belonged. I was favorably impressed with eyes on me with an expression I could not define. the part our new acquaintance had played thus far, yet I could not disregard the judgment of two such some deeper source? for, though a gallant, he was sound and mature minds as were against us.

"Here is Miss Kennedy now," said the Captain, stration surprised me. Instantly, however, I reflec-"who says nothing-"under which King, Bezo- ted that circumstances like those we had so recently nian ?""

"I am puzz'ed," I answered. "Sir Wilford's my previous frankness, replied: countenance is certainly impassible, yet I think he Was not always thus seemingly cold and exclusivehe may have seen sufficient sorrow to chill a once him than to any other person save yourself, and I impetuous nature."

"He has certainly caused enough to make him look grave," exclaimed Lady Orford with a slight tremble in her voice; "he is not a bachelor-but was the husband of a lovely woman who was devoted to him, and he broke her heart in return."

A sudden silence succeeded then Lady Orford re-

"Perhaps I have done wrong to speak of this matter which is forgotten by nearly all but the principal actors; I could not, however, hear you wasting your sympathies on him and remain silent."

"I heard something of this while abroad," remarked Captain Yarrington, "but I was not sure of my informant's correctness, and then there are always two sides to these reports."

"Yes, indeed," added Lord Orford; "now this wife may have had 'two faces under one hood,' and death may have released Sir Wilford from martyrdom." "My dear Harry," exclaimed Lady Orford, " I assure you that she was a truly angelic woman." "Then, belle mere, I can easily comprehend that she might have been wearisome beyond expression for my part, I shall never marry until I can enact Petruchlo to a Katherine. Ah, now!" he continued, coaxingly, seeing an expression of pain on her ladyhips's face, "I beg pardon if I have wounded your feelings, but there are so many slanderers who especially delight in attacking matrimonial reputations, and magnifying disagreements, that I am very cautious of crediting rumors to that effect. -I can cite you an instance in point. There is a worthless half-pay captain, whom one meets at every fashionable place of dissipation in Europe—he is an unprincipled, but clever fellow, the younger son of a branch of the Saville family; I dare say you're met him time and again," turning to Captain Yarrington, who nodded acquiescence; " well, he had a lady-like, broken-spirited, invalid wife, as all these aristocratic spendthrifts who live by their wits have, and a daughter that not even the confusion, neglect and exposure of their wandering Bedouin-like existence could contaminate—she was as shy and beautiful as a fairy, but as enthusiastic and artless as a child. I never knew the exact circumstances, but I heard that she married a young Englishman—they eloped, I think-and his friends were informed by with. Don't you remember hearing the story, Dick ?" "Perfectly. Miss Saville was deserving of yo ment; there were some very romantic circumstances though; she only lived about a year afterward, and she did not suffer from having caused his ruined some mischief-maker that he had thrown himself away for a miserable, low-born woman, the associate of gamblers, and the incarnation of everything that is crafty and shameless. Without giving the poor child a chance to refute these slanders in person, this young man's mother disinherited him forth-

My heart beat quickly. Might they not be speak-fortunes."

"Do you recollect the gentleman's name?" I in-

"It was Scotch-Murray. Were you acquainted with these events?" replied Coptain Yarrington in

"I knew a family of that name—but then there are so many Murrays." "His christian name was..." (I suppose the Captain understood the entreaty in my eyes that he would not proceed, for he concluded:) "A surname, men, they are difficult for strangers to recollect."

I breathed more freely. I was sure it was Richnever mentioned that he was married. I disliked that Lady Orford should now hear his history. And I tioned his name; if so, why should not the Captain "Indeed, mamma, I cannot help laughing; you have told me these circumstances when we were bachelor? Do you fear he would prove a Blue Beard?" At any rate," Lord Orford remarked, "this lovely And Alethia gave way to the mirth which this amu- young wife of Murray's was an angel almost, and yet persons were not wanting sufficiently malicious "You speak very lightly, my dear," replied her and untruthful to represent her in such a light as to

"I agree with you generally," said Captain Yarrington; "I only believe my own feelings and percep-Miss Blackburn was silent from respect, but I tions in judging another-in comparison with that was pained to have a doubt of Sir Wilford's chiv- test I pay but little heed to the good or evil reputaalry suggested. Why did not Lady Orford with her tion a person bears with others. Even public facts accustomed frankness say what she had against him are deceptive--unless you know the hidden springs, that even her debt of gratitude could not cancel? you may put any but the right construction on

"But we are wandering from the subject under and esteem. Here is Miss Kennedy, who is almost a witch for arriving at correct conclusions, and she

"'T is indeed," responded Lady Orford; "I never saw keener insight."

"I am particularly interested in your decision," Were his words mere compliments, or did they veil not an insincere man, and this unreserved demonshared, alter after-intercourse materially, and with

"I hope you will agree with me in favorable opinion, Captain Yarrington, for I owe more gratitude to should not wish our opinions to conflict."

against Lady Orford and myself?"

"If you are hostile, sir. But I can understand ites with all." her ladyship's reasons for looking unfavorably on Sir Wilford. Your sentiment has not so clear a cause." said the Captain, "but I have a theory that all inrefusals to affinitize, that no chemists of humanity present, or to come; that is, they are either instinchave yet sprung up to explain." However decided the opinions expressed, they seemed to influence future actions but slightly, for generally." Sir Wilford became almost as frequent a guest as Captain Yarrington, between whom and himself a certain distance, amounting to coolness, never diminished, but rather increased.

CHAPTER VII.

Not long after the conversation above recorded, as sat one afternoon under the shade of a fine old tree on the lawn, sketching a favorite bit of landscape, heard mingled voices, and directly after, the whole of our now increased family party came through the walk where I was seated.

"Come Judith," said Lady Orford, "we are going to stroll about; will you join us?"

I declined, on the plea of finishing my sketch while the light was most favorable to the scene before me; and, although the others urged me, I remained firm, Sir Wilford declaring I would not go return." lest I should fall to his lot during the walk. Even that failed to move me, and they were soon gone, Alethia leaning on the arm of Captain Yarrington, while the other gentlemen took places each side of Lady Orford. As I looked after them I could not but notice how the tact with which the Captain supported Miss Blackburn disguised her infirmity, and how animated her fine dark countenance was with her wide-brimmed gipsy hat shading the rich flush of exercise, and play of expression. Her companion was uniformly fascinating, but there was a tenderness in his manuer as he supported her steps of my cousin possessed me, and the Captain was that bespoke a devoted delicate nature, worthy any true woman's heart.

"It is evident Miss Blackburn will not sign that name much longer," I meditated; "she will make a wife one can be proud of, and doubtless become more suave than now-yet I should hardly have supposed her capable of awakening such compassionate sofeness, as her slightly defiant disposition did not invite it."

Gradually I became absorbed in my occupation, when a shadow fell across my paper, and to my surprise I beheld Captain Yarrington advancing toward me, wearing an expression 1 could not analyze, and quite alone. "I thought you where are your companions?" "You are not aware how long it is since we left you—more than an hour; and as the ladies are taking a siesta after their fatigue, I concluded to remain out of doors rather than share the smoking room with Harry and Sir Wilford."

There was a slight symptom of irritation in the Captain's voice, which I did not understand. Had Alethia wounded him by some sharp speech?

"May I look over your sketches?" he inquired, taking my portfolio from the seat. "Certainly; but you will find little to interest you they are principally unfinished, mere suggestions to be worked up at leisure." "You draw figures as well as landscapes, I pereive," remarked the Captain, holding up a crayon of Miss Blackburn. "I have not much proficiency in portraiture,"] replied, "but Lady Orford requested me to make the attempt. I am aware it is a poor one." "It is like. The features are quite exact, but there is a peculiar expression that I consider more artist, he retouched the picture. The effect was thunderbolt." magical—the rare but brilliant smile which had irradiated Alethia's face, as she had passed me, lean- presume?" ing on Captain Yarrington's arm, that afternoon, was transferred to paper, by a few altered lines and arrangements of light and shadow.

I was delighted, and inquired if such success always attended his efforts.

"That depends on the original. Anything marked ness; but whom have we here?" he exclaimed, as family?" he resumed his inspection of the drawings.

been more than ever struck by their similarity. "I do n't understand these, Miss Kennedy. Are they of the same person?"

"Oh, no! do n't you recognize either?" young man ?"

ly one?" "Elderly has various degrees, Miss Kennedy," responded my companion, smiling; " but if you mean, dy?" do I look upon him as a man no longer young, I reply Yes."

appearance of one who has lived much in that time," mond Murray and become otherwise." "Thirty is a low estimate, in my opinion, but you At this moment the sound of the piano reached will think me entirely prejudiced after the many oc- us. casions on which I have differed from you in regard "Miss Blackburn is playing one of Sir Wilford to him."

all association."

"Whatever the cause, our repulsion is mutual, as I began putting away my drawing materials, and presume you have noticed, Miss Kennedy?" Thus appealed to, I could not avoid answering that house was silent. What was the cause of my com-

"Then you side with Harry and Miss Blackburn I thought they were attracted to each other less than to any member of our party, while both were favor-

"I must confess myself at a loss for a reason," "I can hardly account far it myself-one of those explicable dislikes are grounded on injuries past, tive, though ignorant resentments, or warning impulses, which should be more regarded than they are

"But don't you think such a theory likely to bring about the best result?"

"I do not think it causes, it merely prophecies the inevitable." "What a lovely old place," Captain Yarrington resumed, after a short silence, and holding up a picture of Morton Manor. "That was the scene of my happiest hours; it is my cousin's homestead." "The one you spoke of some time since?"

" Yes, sir."

"Singular that he should choose to remain abroad, especially when he has a congenial female relative to make his home cheerful." "Meaning me?"

"Exactly, for I suppose you must be attached to the place, and willing to reside there if he should "I never anticipate that."

The words escaped my lips before I was aware how much they implied a mystery, and my companion looked slightly surprised.

I might have said that his health demanded travel, or coined some other fashionable subterfuge, but I was not given to them; and had I been, Captain Yarrington was the last person to whom I should have offered deception. A sudden thought came over mehere was one who must know something of Richmond -perhaps had actually met him. A longing to hear eminently discreet; under these united temptations ventured.

"Do you recollect the incident Lord Orford related of Miss Saville who married that young Englishman ?" I inquired.

"Perfectly, you are acquainted with the parties?" " Not with both-but you said the gentieman's name was Murray, and I may know him."

"Were the circumstances we discussed new to "Some of them. I heard of Mr. Murray's marriage with an adventuress, as she was called, but. nothing subsequent. Were you a friend to either party?"

"I was to Miss Saville-Mr. Murray I never met."

"Then you do n't know where he now is?" "The last I heard of him was that he had fallen heir to a large property."

"Yes, by the death of his mother."

found."

"I understood that she disinherited him on account of his marriage." "Nevertheless he is her heir-there was no will

"So he gets his rights, after all; pity the forgiveness should have come so late. I fell sure his mother could not have denied that his wife was a sufficient excuse for a hasty marriage."

"It was a very sad thing. I doubt, however, that Mrs. Murray would have been reconciled to her son, as I think she had selected a wife for him, and was more incensed at the destruction of her plans than anything else, otherwise she would have waited his account before judging."

"Pardon me if I am intrusive; but if Mrs. Murray had a preference in regard to a daughter-in-law, was her son aware of it?"

"That I do not know; his marriage was so sudpleasing than the one selected—allow me, since you den and youthful, that perhaps she had not thought are not desirous of retaining it." And taking a cray it time to speak of it; beside, he was ever in the on from the box, with the skill and rapidity of an | habit of consulting her, and the news came like a "You are an intimate friend of Mr. Murray's, I

" He was a relative, sir."

"Indeed! Then of course you understand his character. As I have said before I was deeply interested in his wife, and consequently any particulars concerning him at the period of their marriage are interesting to me. May I ask what you suppose his is more easily copied than a harmonious sweet- motive was in not announcing his intentions to his

"There again I am ignorant. Directly the news I had been so impressed with the resemblance be- came, all mention of his name was prohibited, and tween Sir Wilford and my cousin, that I had made as I was not in correspondence with him I have not water color portraits of both, and in so doing had heard from him since, except through one short letter on business chiefly."

"But still you probably have some opinion-and if you choose to give it to me I should be pleased." "First then, I was quite sure that he was blame-

"To be sure. This is Sir Wilford Dudley; but less throughout, and that he would never disgrace his-were you endeavoring to picture him as a himself by any low connection. Further than that there was absolutely no room for conjecture; now "I intended different individuals. But why do that I know his wife was a lady by birth, even if you ask if I were trying to portray Sir Wilford as, a not happily circumstanced, I wonder he did not sigyoung man? You surely don't consider him an elder- nify his intentions, but I am sure he had a good reason."

"Mr. Murry is a favorite with you, Miss Kenne-

"I have a thorough confidence in him, sir. I had an intimate knowledge of him as a boy, and he was "I have supposed him about thirty, but he has the all that was true and noble. He could not be Rich-

Dudley's favorite airs," said Captain Yarrington, "I do not think it prejudice, but one of those sin- hurriedly; "she too is in favor of him; he is a gular cases where total absence of sympathy repels most fortunate person to secure the esteem of so many fair critics.

the Captain absently assisted me. Our walk to the panion's repressed excitement whenever Sir Wilford was in our family circle? Was it jealousy? As we stepped on the partico we saw through the drawing room window that Sir Wilford was leaning on the piano while Miss Blackburn executed with great feeling a plaintive aria. As our steps reached her ear, she turned her head, and the look of sadness was exchanged for a gay recognition, while Sir Wilford, on the contrary, appeared a trifle colder, if possible, than usual. Captain Yarrington remarked, in a voice full of some subdued emotion:

"How finely Miss Blackburn plays! Do you object to leaving your portfolio with me a short time?" I gave it into his hands, and went to my room to prepare for dinner. While dressing, my mind was busy reviewing the day's incidents, that seemed to indicate a mingling of interests. There appeared to be little doubt of the attachment of Captain Yarrington for Alethia, and I was quite as certain that she was not indifferent to him; but what was the magnet that drew Sir Wilford so frequently to the house? His resemblance to Richmond led me off to more immediate interests, and I rejoined the family in that state of mind which sad retrospection causes. As usual, music was the amusement of the evening, and I noticed with surprise that while Miss Blackburn played, it was Sir Wilford, and not Captain Yarrington, who turned the leaves and suggested the pieces. In a formal meeting this distinction would have been due the superior rank of the baronet; but during this season of seclusion, etiquette was set aside, and equality established between all admitted members.

The Captain consequently divided his attention between Lady Orford and myself, and if he were dissatisfied or jealous, his manner, serene, and full of its usual charm, betrayed nothing of it:

The evening was of pressively warm, and I suffered from the heat in an unusual degree. Lady Orford noticing my flushed checks, remarked:

"You must have a headache, Miss Kennedy; I believe I never saw you with a vestige of color before, except a passing blush. Did you get overheated today?"

"The wind was sultry as I sat sketching, and my black dress makes me warmer."

"You should wear grey or lavender-you know it was admissible some time ago."

"I am so used to dark colors now, Lady Orford, hat I should feel unlike myself in anything else." "I suppose you were much attached to your aunt, but I really think you should change for the sake of

I presume your authority as regards feminine aprel, is unquestionable, Lady Orford, but Miss Ker nedy appears to me to have been specially formed for wearing mourning. It may be because my first associations of her are in black, but I am quite sure it would take some time to reconcile me to an alteration."

"But then you know, Captain, Yarrington, a young girl cannot always be clad thus, and though Judith was doubtless much attached to her Aunt Murray. the time for resuming colors must come sometime."

Aunt Murray I So now there was no secret on that head between the Captain and myself, I believe I felt a sense of relief, as I was sure he would not reveal the identity of Richmond with the hero of Lord Orford's story. Though I was certain that Captain Yarrington must have connected the threads into a distinct web, no look or gesture indicated such to be the case-his delicacy did not permit him to know anything beyond what I confided.

Meanwhile Miss Blackburn and Sir Wilford were absorbed in their music, until Lady Orford, with the uneasiness that only the latter ever awakened in her uniform temperament, managed to draw them into general conversation. It so chanced that the subject of antipathies came under discussion. Sir Wilford Dudley talked remarkably well, but it appeared to be a faculty acquired by long cultivation, and his views were cynical, while Captain Yarrington possessed the gift of rare eloquence; the thorough experience of life, which evidently was his, also, had elevated and developed a noble nature, and, when he. spoke, there was a magnetic conviction in his hearers' hearts, while Sir Wilford merely succeeded in confusing the intellectual forces. Que felt and believed—the other reasoned and doubted.

"For my part," said Miss Blackburn, " I am amazed that there is so much submission to social cana This creed of loving one's relatives before all outside. the family circle, is monstrous to me. We do, not choose our kin, yet they consider themselves privila . eged by mere consanguinity to dispense with that politeness which makes life endurable, and then claim from accident what others expect from morit."

TO BE CONTINUED.

One of our exchanges tells us the following laugh, able incident :

" A servant girl in Newburyport recently went to the venerable Dr. Spofford for advice, declaring her allment to be a pain in the bowels. The venerable Doctor gave her a cathartic, and requested her to call-again in a few days, which she did. He asked her if she had taken the medicine, to which she replied in the affirmative. He then asked her, did anything pass you after taking it?" "Yes, sir," said she, "a. pass you after taking it?" "Yes, air," said she, "a horse and wagon and a drove of pigs." The Doctor collapsed, remarking "I think you must be better."

A Dutchman, the other day, reading an account of a meeting, came to the words, " The meeting then dis-He could not define the meaning of the latter word, so he referred to his dictionary and felt satisfied. In a few minutes a friend came in, when Honty said-" Dey must have werry hot wedder dere in New York. I ret an agount of a meeting where all de peoples had melted away."

Wherever God in his Providence places you, thereand nowhere clse are you to seek to glorify Him, and to obey his will, and to fulfill your obligations. The post of duty is holier than altar or shring-it is the holiest place in Christendom.

Written for the Banner of Light. THE WINDS OF SPRING.

DY A. P. M'COMBS.

The balmy winds of Spring are here. From emerald isle and tropic vale, With song and sunshine in their rear, And Flora with her blooming trail,

They struggled hard with blustering March. But triumplied o'er his shivering chill, And softened down the ley starch That Winter gave to mountain rill.

They 've played along the sunny stream That wanders where magnolias bloom, Or through the broad Savanna's gleam, That never slept in Winter's tomb.

They've strayed mid palm and orange groves, Q'er rubied stands, and spicy dells, Where rich perfume in freedom raves, And rosy summer ever dwells.

They 've fanned the cheeks of Peru's maids, And dallied with their golden hair, And danced with the Caribbean naiads, O'er seagirt isles of beauty rare.

They come with soft and dewy tread. Scattering the mild and pearly rain, And gently wood from its brown bed The tender green along the plain.

They 've kissed young April's downy cheek. And now she smiles amid her tears, And dons her dainty robe so meek, Where violet's modest blue appears.

They 've wakened from their quiet sleep The pinks among the forest trees. And fondly round the primrose creep, And softly kiss th' anemonies.

Upon their fragrant breath they bring The annual songsters of our bowers: On earth's bare bosom cause to spring The rosy tints of coming flowers.

They've robed our groves in living green, That now resounds with songs of glee. Strewed garlands o'er May like a queen. And scattered daisies o'er the lea.

Our childhood's days to memory give Our faded hopes, and present pains Are all forgot. Again we live Where they sport o'er youth's vernal plains.

Written for the Banner of Light. KATE MALINE. A HEART'S HISTORY.

BY PHEBE OWEN.

It was a June evening, balmy and fragrant. The air was heavy with the perfume of roses and the plume-like locust flower, drooping thick from the branches of the graceful trees which clustered round the stately mansion of General Maline.

A broad avenue led from the house to the road. On one side was a sloping hill covered with noble forest trees; half way between the house and gate was a shelving rock, the edges and crevices filled with fern, wild roses and honeysuckles, and a sturdy oak with its broad branches kept it always in shade.

It was an evening for love and poetry, and the two figures who now stood on that rock, seemed to realize those feelings. I wish I could picture to you Kate Maline and her lover as I saw them then, and many an evening before.

I was on a visit to her mother of a few weeks, and we had gathered out on the piazza after tea. Arthur. Mills had ridden from the city about four o'clock. and was now trying to toar himself away; but it seemed more than he could accomplish.

Never did I see brother and sister more alike in general expression-with the same dark, soul-stirring eyes and raven hair. Kate's full red lips, slightly parted, spoke a world of feeling; while his, thinner and closed, spoke firmness and decision. Her complexion had all the fairness of the lily with. out color, while the clive tint of Arthur's cheeks glowed with a bright flush.

Kate's figure was tall and queenly, and as she stood in the softened light of a mellow sunset, with her simple white wrapper and a wreath of the locust bloom Arthur had placed on her brow, I thought her beautiful; but he who stood at her side thought her more than that. How often in my presence has he called her his guardian angel, and said she had been the bright spirit that saved him from ruin, when father and brothers had cast him off for a wild freak of boyhood.

The sun had sunk below the horizon, but its lingering beams still rested on the tips of the distant hills. Twice had Arthur started and unfastened his horse which stood pawing and restless at the gate, and again returned to say a few more words.

General Maline walked the piazza in an impatient mood and with knit brows; something was wrong I could see, but what it was I could not tell.

Mrs. Maline laid by her netting, and seemed to be enjoying the beauty of the evening in her calm manner; the children had gathered into the parlor round the centre-table, with their books, and the soft light of the solar lamp gleamed out through the lace drapery of windows opening down to the floor.

Twilight deepened, the moon came out full and bright-higher and higher it rose, flooding that whole scene, and bathing every shrub and tree with its glorious light, and still Arthur lingered, and still that proud, stern father paced up and down with rostless steps and a frowning brow. Stopping at length in front of his wife, he said:

"Call in that imprudent girl; it is quite time this farce was ended."

I proposed going for her, and my deep mourning dress hid my approach until quite near them. Arthur was on one knee before her, while she playfully chid him for the attitude.

"Nay. Kate, you are my guardian angel, and as such I kneel to you; tell me again you love me, and I am off. This has been the happiest evening of my life. I see Miss D- bringing you a summons from your mother; once more, farewell."

And soon the gapid strokes of his horse's feet were heard in the distance. Wrapping the shawl round her which I had brought, she proposed we should walk along the bank and enjoy the moonlight on the water, for the beautiful stream of C- wound like a silver thread a short distance from the house.

"How strange I feel to-night, Aunt Mary. (Although there was no tie of relationship between us, she always called me so.) A something comes over my spirits at times, checking their flow with a chill. Do you believe in presentiments? I have strong faith in them. Arthur says this has been the happiest evening of his life-it is Friday, and the third day of the month; on such a day and date we first exchanged vows. Oh, what a wild dream of happiness it has seemed, almost too blissful for me to realize, whose whole life since childhood has been sad-

She spoke to me with the freedom of an old and long-tried friend, who had known both her and mother's trials in whatever shape they came.

ther will read me a lecture for keeping you out."

sat alone waiting our return.

realized?

married her. He came a stranger in the place, with in a very short time.

there was no congeniality, and when the novelty of her beauty wore off, he called her tame. The calm He was jealous and tyrannical by nature; children came, and he was jealous of her attention to them. Ho forced her into society, until the silent grief began to tell on her faded cheek; then he grow careless whether she went or stayed.

She was a devoted mother, and her children only kept her to his side. Many and many an hour had she prayed for strength to bear her through, for her children's sake; and two boys and two girls now nightly knelt, and asked for blessings on their mother's head.

Kate had been a companion more than a child to her for several years. The oldest was a son, mar. sad, sweet face, so pallid in hue and so tearful in exried, and in business in the city. There were several pression. General Maline ordered his horse and rode years between the two oldest and youngest.

General Maline seldom spoke to his children, except to chide them for some fault, and they were always restrained in his presence. No wonder Kate turned pale at the summons.

I sat down in my room to finish a book, and half an hour after, I heard Kate's step along the passage, the most terrific storms I ever witnessed. No cur-She did not come in, as usual, but passed into her own room and locked the door.

I had been asleep, and something woke me; some unpleasant sound. I listened. Kate's room joined fell in torrents. General Maline always sat with his mine, and it came from there-moan after moan. I started up, threw on my dressing gown, and knocked lity," he said. He would throw open the shutters and at her door. After some time she opened it, and sit at the open window; but, like his whole course Oh, my God! could I believe that figure was our dar toward her, it only terrified her more. There was ling Kate, whose radiant beauty I had gazed on so no soothing word, or kindness of manner, and it was lately in the holy moonlight! Pale indeed, she was, always painful to me at such times to be near. but haggard and wan; those glorious eyes bloodshot and wild, and her long black hair sweeping the floor. The storm had indeed been terrible that crushed our lily so.

"Come in, Aunt Mary. I was afraid it was ma." One glance round the room showed her bed untouched. On her open writing-desk lay a package of miniature open, with those dark searching eyes looking up from it.

The tale was soon told. Kate's father had forbidden her seeing Arthur again. There had been a jealous feeling growing up between him and Arthur's father for some time. One counted on his family, and the other on his dollars. To-day they had met at a dinner party, and both being heated with wine, words passed between them which exasperated General Maline so, he swore a bitter oath that no daughter of his should wed one of the fam-

" I allowed your interview this evening, knowing it should be the last, and it shall be, or you quit my presence forever,' my father said.

Aunt Mary, I wept. I went on my knees and named again. Return his gifts and letters. I want crushed in that storm. no whining faces round the house. I will show his

Oh! Aunt Mary, it will break Arthur's heart. him for a foolish quarrel. Were it not for my poor mother, I would leave all and follow him; but I could not leave her and know that her life was wasting away in sadness and gloom, without one cheering spirit. Oh, God! is not my lot a hard one?"

"Yes, it is, Kate; but it must be for a good purpose these trials are sent." "Oh, I have said that so often, and it is one sad scene after another, constantly. When my childhood's eyes were first o ened to my mother's unhappiness, and day after day went by and I saw no change, I said perhaps it is wisely ordered. When in all things, married in opposition to my father's wishes, and left us so that we had almost lost sight of him, I tried again to console myself with these words; and now, when all that seemed to make life desirable is about to be taken from me, must I echo them again? I cannot—nature rebels. Oh, you do not know how every fibre of my heart is wound I spent with his sister when you kindly consented to society; and in all things we seemed to feel alike. der an account to its Maker. A few weeks before I returned home, a trifling misunderstanding occurred between him and his father, quiet and settled, that I saw how our darling Kate and in the heat of passion he was ordered from his was changed. The pallid hue of her face contrasted home. He came to me, and told me all, and said : with the deep mourning dress, was startling. There · I am going out into the world now, to make my was no murmur of complaint; she was always with own fortune; but one promise I ask you to make __ | Annie and her lessons, or hovering round her moththat you will always answer my letters.' I did so, er. Although Mrs. Maline had benefitted much by and for more than a year we corresponded, always sea-bathing, the shock of her husband's death had as brother and sister. But another feeling was ripening and strengthening both in our hearts. He has said Kate had over-exerted herself waiting on her told me repeatedly that those letters have saved him father, but she would soon rally; and so we hoped; from some rash act, when thoughts of home and his but winter came and passed, and brought no lightfailure in business had driven him almost to dis- ness to that weary step, or color to that pallid cheek. traction. It was not until father, brothers and sis- No allusion was ever made to Arthur by any of us; ters had written repeatedly to recall him, that he but often in our walks, as we passed the rock which should soon meet. It was the lovely Indian summer.

"Kate, you must not borrow trouble; it is the ting along in the parlor, with my guitar in my lap, night-air causes your chill; come home, or your fa- not playing, but humming one of his favorite songs. The windows were all open, and the sweet autumn All around seemed still and quiet as we approached air filled the room. A step on the gravel walk rousthe house; the children had retired, and Mrs. Maline ed me, at the same moment Arthur sprang on the plazza, with his dog and gun. I started forward to "Kate, your father wishes to see you; he is in the meet him, but felt that I crimsoned, when he said, library." Kissing her good-night, she said: "how | will sister Kate kiss me after my long absence?" pale you look; it is wrong to stay out so late in the One year had greatly changed his appearance. He was stouter, were whiskers, and exposure had made Kate did look pale, but it was at the summons his complexion a shade browner, but his eyes and from her father. Were her forebodings about to be smile were the same. For hours we walked and talked along the creek. Oh, it was a glorious after-Mrs. Maline had been a beauty and a belle in a noon, and my favorite season. Arthur had so much quiet New England village when General Maline to tell me; and now he had come home to stay, and we could have our old meetings again; and during all a fine figure, plenty of money, and a free, dashing that levely season he came often, and never without manner, and she was wooed and won, and borne off a new book, a piece of music, or something that to a new home, far away from her native hills, all struck, his fancy, and he knew I would like. Before winter came our vows were plighted, now-Oh, But it was mating the hawk with the dove; Aunt Mary, am 1 dreaming? Oh, God! spare my senses, for my poor mother's sake."

I strove to calm her, but words would not come demeanor of the New Englander did not suit him. I only felt how deep must be the feelings she was called on to crush, and in all of her wretchedness, thoughts of her mother's unhappiness could not be banished. I insisted on staying with her, but she would not hear to it.

> "No, Aunt Mary, I must be alone with my God, and as you value my peace, never breathe to ma what you have witnessed to-night."

Morning came and found Kate in her usual place. beside the coffee urn -a post her mother had resigned for some time, owing to delicate health. To-day she was confined to her room with one of her nervous headaches and it was well she could not see that to the city, and all that long day did Kate sit in her mother's darkened room, and with noiseless step and low voice minister to her wants.

Oh, are not children sent as blessings! What would life have been to that mother without? The day was sultry and close, and ended in one of tains could shut out the lightning's glare, while crash after crash of thunder seemed to shake the earth. Trees bent and snapped before the blast, and rain wife at such times, "trying to cure her of her timid-

I left the room to seek Kate, knowing her timidity, too. Her room was vacant, but I found her in the parlor pacing the floor with rapid strides and blanched face. She started forward and threw her arms round

"Oh, Aunt Mary," she said, "it is all over-I am indeed desolate. To-day when old Isaac took the letters tied up, one or two little parcels, and Arthur's package to Arthur, he sent back this note—read it, and see that the elements, too, have conspired against

> 'I received the package, and a shudder came over me ere I opened it. Oh, Kate, we are indeed separated! You are but doing your duty, and I must not blame you. Only one request I will make—meet me at "the Rock" this evening at eight o'clock, and there let me take my last look and farewell of one who has been my guiding star through life. To-morrow will again see me a wanderer—I care not where—withut one cheering ray to light my future. I know well how crushing the blow is for you, but your woman's strength is strong in the right. ARTHUR.'"

Alas, poor, stricken ones! To-morrow saw him stretched on a sick bed with brain fever; and for days there was no hope. Kate never knew it, but the excitement and exposure to the storm that night produced if. We sat talking until past midnight, and implored him to wait a few days, and he would it was only then that the storm spent itself. I was think differently. But no, his heart was flint. He obliged to leave the next morning, and as we drove spurned me, and commanded me to write to-night down the avenue and passed the Rock, marks of my last letter, and tell him I could see him no more. horses' feet and men's too, were there. A heavy Now do not go and consult your weak mother, but branch had fallen across the rustic bench and crushed do as I bid you, and never let me hear the subject it down. What matter now? Hearts, too, were

It was late in the fall before I again visited Fern purse-proud father we can live without an alliance Dale. The house had been closed all summer. Mrs. Maline's physician had ordered sea-bathing for her: and General Maline, glad of an opportunity, had Noble, good, generous and brave, and I must resign hurried Kate from one watering place to another, thinking to banish the past. I heard they were home only a few days before, when, one morning, a note came to me from Kite, saving, "Can you come to us, dear Aunt Mary? Father is very ill, and ma so nervous I caunot leave her alone." An hour's drive brought me there, but I had learned how matters stood from old Isano, as we drove along. He had lived in the family before Kate was born; many a time had General Maline's harshness and ill temper almost driven him off.

But, "missus so good and kind to old Isaac." he said he could not go. "Then Miss Kate is such an angel nothing bad can come near us; but oh, Miss my dear brother George, my companion and adviser D --- she is so changed -- she is so pale, and looks as if she would soon take wings and leave us. Massa scold all the time we were away; he want her to dance and sing, so many fine looking gentlemen want to drive her out; but she always prefer old Isaac's driving and missus beside her."

I found a great change in all when I arrived. General Maline was tossing in the delirium of a raground him. It is not alone since our engagement. ing fever. He would let no one come near him but but for two years before. You remember the winter | Kate and old Isaac. Mrs. Maline wandered from room to room; she had taken a severe nervous spell stay with ma. Then our acquaintance commenced. on seeing her husband's sufferings, and the Doctor Evening after evening we met. Sometimes in a had forbid her entering his room again. Little Ancrowded assembly, sometimes in a social circle at his nie and Willie were home from school; George and sister's, my sweet friend, Mrs. C-, and sometimes | his wife had been sent for, but not one of them could alone. I could not tell how it was, but I had learn- share Kate's vigils. I felt I could be useful, and preed to look for him on all occasions. He called me pared myself for it. The Doctor was in constant atsister Kate, and told me to look on him as a brother | tendance; but he told me soon after I arrived that and use him as one. Our tastes were congenial in he had little hope, and so it proved. The third night all things-books, music, paintings, our siews of after, the soul of General Maline was called to ren-

It was not until after the funeral, and we were shaken her nervous system very much. The Doctor consented to return; but he knew his mother's heart | must ever call up a haunting vision, I could see ached in sorrow for her youngest by. I remember | Kate's color come and go, and I could scarce keep well our first meeting after he came back. His last back my words of sympathy. I knew Arthur had letter said nothing of returning only hoping we made a home in the South, and wealth was said to come to him unsought.

and about four o'clock in the afternoon. I was sit | A hasty summons from a dear sister who lay ill took me off, and it was many weeks before I could quit her bedside. A slow nervous fever kept her down, and Spring was again on the earth before I was free from the sick room. I had had several short letters from Kate; she spoke seldom of herself, but often of her mother's improved health, and how much they missed me.

Two weeks had passed now, and I had heard nothing from Fern Dale. I was about to write again. drives, the heavy knocker muffled and shutters clos-

Our darling Kate was dying! A severe cold setbrought on hemorrhage of the lungs, which prostrated her so much the doctor said she could not stand another, and the least excitement would cause it.

Poor Mrs. Maline looked so haggard and worn. looking at that wreck made by a parent's harshness and felt that he had a heavy reckoning to make.

Kate had been sleeping since noon, from a heavy ppiate; it was now four o'clock, and she still slept. sound, and she murmured:

"I knew you would come, Arthur; my spirit called

A whispering outside the door caused me to open at his rashness, and hurried to expostulate, but Arthur's anguished countenance I can never forget. Another homorrhage followed, and the doctor arrived at the same moment it was checked, but Kate's hours were numbered. It would be cruel to separate them now one linstant.

The doctor sent for Arthur in another room, and told him she could not live, and that excitement of hood. any kind would hasten her end. He dropped in a chair, and clasping his hands on his forehead; groan after groan came from his heart, as though the fibres were being rent. We left him alone in his grief.

Half an hour after, he glided into Kate's room and sat down by the bed, so pale, so calm, no marble image could be more so. She slept again; another opiate had soothed her.

Arthur persuaded us all to lie down, and he would the morning. Old Isaac sat outside the door, ready dog, he never slept.

Feeling that she was in trusty hands, after seeing Mrs. Maline in her own room, with Annie and Charlie, for the doctor said she must not lose any more sleep, I lay down in my own old room, adjoining Kate's, and from having traveled all night before, I must have slept very heavily.

It was day-light when I awoke. I started up in sun was flooding the room. One window was open, and the breath of roses and locust blooms was again filling the air round those youthful forms. Kate brow, but it was the sleep of death.

"Do not blame me that I did not call you; her join her in the heavenly spheres."

He spoke with a calmness I could not then underwhat supported him in that hour of trial.

Ten years had passed. I had made my home with Mrs. Maline since Kate's death, and Annie and Charley were under my tuition.

We were passing through the city of ----, on our of fellow-travelers, went to hear a woman lecture in a trance. The speaker was already on the stand God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for when we arrived, and the large hall was filled to correction, for instruction in righteousness overflowing. One other person was on the stand, seated at a little distance from the speaker. I could not be mistaken. It was Arthur Mills ! calm, pale, and listening with rapt attention to every word. for a few moments her agitation was so great, I was afraid we would have to leave.

"Who is that gentleman on the stand," I asked, of a clever-looking person at my side.

"Oh, that is Mr. Mills, one of our wealthiest citi zens. People say he is a little eccentric; but he is a man of much moral worth, and is truly a friend to and he makes a good use of it."

The lecture was over, and giving this person a we drove back to the hotel.

We were to leave the next day at noon; but we had thur was announced. Changed, he was indeed, from calmly of Kate and the past.

"Yes, I am happy," were his last words. "She her." and so we parted.

" How strange Arthur talked," said Mrs. Maline. to the boat. Arthur Mills is a Spiritualist!

> MAY TO APRIL. Without your showers I breed no flowers, Each field a barren waste appears. If you do n't weep.
> My blossoms sleep.
> They take such pleasure in your tears. As your decay
> Made room for May,
> So I must part with all that's mine;
> My baimy breeze,
> My blooming trees, To torrid suns their sweets resign. For April dead My shades I spread. To her I owe my dress so gay; Of daughters three Thus to repose All Nature goes; Month after month must find its doom. Time on the wing May end the Spring, And Summer frolics o'er her tomb.

To close our triumphs is one day.

It falls on me

Original Essays.

NOTES HERMENEUTICAL AND CRITICAL.

BY HORACE DRESSER, M. D., LL. D. NUMBER TWO.

The terms, sacred scriptures, as used by the pulwhen I received a few lines from Mrs. M. saying pit, and as accepted by the people, in these days, Kate was very ill. I knew from the tone of it that are applied solely to the book called the Bible, whose she wanted me, and now dear Sue was improving so title page reads thus: The Holy Bible, containing the rapidly, and leaving her with one of the most devoted Old and New Testaments. Scripture—the scriptures husbands, I felt I must go to them. Latarted that |-in common parlance, are terms conveying the same evening, and reached Fern Dale a little [past same signification, and without the adjective words. noon the next day and my heart sank as I drew sacred or holy, which commonly accompany them, near the house and saw the tan-sprinkled walks and denote the Jewish and Christian compilations embodied in the Bible, which is the English of the Greek word Biblos. This volume has come to be received by Christendom as the sole treasury of all tled on her chest, and the exertion of coughing had that is sacred and holy in the literature of the world. Besides such high and exclusive claimsacredness and holiness-for this collection from Hebrew and Greek authors, the pulpit has decreed and the people have submitted to the edict that took her post by the bed and sent her to seek some these productions are inspirations of the Deity in rest. Everything was so still round the house, for some sense higher than and different from all others Kate was beloved by every child and servant. I sat outside its pages, search for them world-wide and world without end, howsoever carefully we may; that they are the only scriptures having origin in the divine Element-that they are the all and singular Godbreathing words given for man's guidance and asthought I heard carriage wheels, and supposing it surance forevoland forever-par excellence, the alone was the doctor, for a moment forgot it. Kate stirred word of God. Let us examine the qualities claimed and her lips moved. I bent my ear to catch the for them by the clergy, to wit, superior sacredness and holiness-diviner origin and inspiration.

The inculcations and teachings of theology in the. past, have established in the minds of men the belief that all scripture, meaning by this, as we have it. Arthur, haggard and wild, stood before me. One stated, the Old and New Testaments only, that which glance at the bed, and he passed me. An instant is canonically embraced within the leaves and more and she was folded in his arms. I trembled limits of the Bible, not including the apocryphal portions found in some editions, is given to man by inspiration of God, and hence is holy-is sacred-is oracular. Such a faith is absolute and governing in all the churches-Protestant as well as Catholic-a blind faith at best in each, extorted by their creeds and books of confession and enforced by their discipline under the domination of a sovereign priest-

But what if proper translations of the writings of the Bible and the uses of language shall unequivocally demonstrate that these writings are not all the scriptures in the world—that all scripture is not confined to the pages of the Holy Bible, but that these terms are co-extensive with and take in all that was ever written since the world began-will the blind believer admit that this mountain mass of literature-some of it good, some of it evil, as it watch, and call us if needed. The doctor gave all certainly has been, has come or been given by the his directions, and said he would be back early in inspiration of God, according to the lessons learned him by his sagacious and sacerdotal teacher? Will to be called, and with the watchfulness of a faithful he not deny that all the bad writings, at least, that have had existence, could have been given by the inspirations of the Divine Being?

This notion of the people that all scripture is comprehended within the range and extent of the books of the Bible, and that what is there found, is the totality of the inspirations of the Deity during all the ages of the world, no doubt has been derived from the false teachings of hierarchs and the unwaraffright, and opened the door softly. The morning ranted version of a passage in one of the letters of Paul to Timothy. This Apostle never taught his son in the Lord, as he affectionately called his protege, that all scripture is imbued with theopieusty-inslept with a wreath of the same locust blooms on her spiration of God. He never affirmed that the Hebrew Bible, the Old Testament, the Hely Scriptures Arthur rose to meet me, and with a sad smile of the Jew, those writings which he tells him are able to make him wise unto salvation, were theopneustic throughout, from first to last, in all their particular pure spirit left me a little past midnight. The an. lars, and in all their varieties, much less would he gels were impatient for her and hurried her away, aver that all scripture, in the general and etymo-But oh, she is and always will be near me, until I logical sense, which embraces all writings whatsoever, had such quality. But we will proceed to ascertain what he did affirm in this behalf, and to corstand; and it was several years after, before I knew | rect, if able, a passage doing mischief in its English presentment. We deem it a proper and useful exeroise for our present notes. We copy from the COMMON VERSION.

2 Tim. Chap. 3, Sec. 15. And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are way to the Falls of St. Anthony, and joining a party which is in Christ Jesus. 16. All Scripture is given by inspiration of > 17. That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. GREEK TEXT.

Epros Timotheon Epistole deutera, Keph. 3, Schi. 15. and listening with rapt attention to every word. Kai oti apo brephous ta iera grammata oidas, ta Mrs. Maline and myself recognized him at once, and dunamena se sophisai eis soterian, dia pisteos tes en Christo Jesou.

16. Pasa graphe, theopneustos, kai ophelimos pros didaskalian, pros elegchon, pros epanorthosin, pros paideian ten en dikaiosune: 17. Ina artios e o tou theou anthropos, pros pan ergon agathon exertismenos.

1. KAI OTI, ETC. We have placed before us the fifteenth section, not so much for the purpose of varythe poor. Wealth seems to come to him unsought, ing its language by another version, as for the purpose of introduction to the next section, which will be mainly the subject of the present inquiry. We card with a request that he would hand it to Arthur, prefer, however, other language, and shall exercise here our preference, though the proper sense and idea do not suffer by the words used in the common carcely risen from an early breakfast, before Ar- translation. With the statement of facts and the doctrine of the section, we have no fault to find. the ardent, impulsive lover. Now calm, serene, hope- But we remark, it may be remembered that Paul ful-looking forward to a bright future, talking and Timothy first made acquaintance at Lystrathat Timothy was "the son of a certain woman which was a Jewess"-that "his father was a s near me always, and I only wait for the sum | Greek"—that Paul, after Timothy had agreed to go mons. I care not how soon it comes to take me to forth with him through the cities and provinces of Asia, "took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters." That he was a "Yes," said I, as we tied on our bonnets to drive believer in the New Faith, and fell in at once with the protasis of Paul to preach the Gospel of Spiritual life—that he was an inheritor, on the maternal side, of a faith in Judaism-that Paul failed not to commend "the unfeigned faith that was in him, which dwelt first in his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice." All these circumstances render it plain that the favorite of the Apostle was versed in the Holy Scriptures. We have the authority of the words of his great patron-APO BREPHOUS TA IERA GRAMMATA OIDAS-ever since an infant thou hast been acquainted with the sacred writings. These were the books of the Old Testament, as we have seen. That they had been operative and influential on the child. cannot be doubted; but however useful they may have been to him, and however necessary they might. be for him in his future career as a teacher of the truths of the New Dispensation, there were other writings which he might not neglect, as will be seen in examining the next section. Paul fully appreciates them, and awards to them all due weight and importance. What more need be said of them to commend them to the consideration of men-TA DU-

tent to give thee wisdom in respect to thy welfare. Not- plication. Once in each letter he brings it to his conwithstanding the high estimate placed upon them, sideration and urges its importance. He uses this we plainly discover that he deems them deficient in language, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, one element of power; let that be infused-taken in which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying to the mind of their receiver and student, and they on of the hands of the presbytery." Again : "Wherewill become mighty instrumentalities. Here is no fore I put thee in remembrance, that theu stir up dissuasion to their continued uses, but they are the gift of God which is in thee, by the putting on of deemed and declared to be a dead letter without the my hands." We have not space here to dwell upon vitalizing impulses of faith in the Messiah, of whom | the question, what was the kind or nature of his they all along make mention-mere exponents of a mediumship? His great patron deemed it semething coming era, of another and better age of the world, not to be neglected-something worthy of being of the establishment of the kingdom of heaven among aroused and pressed into the service of his Master: men on the earth-mia risteos res en Christo Jesou | not, like the modern clergy, denying the existence of -through faith, a faith in the Gaspel of Jesus. We such gift, and denouncing those who believe in and depart here from the common translation, "through exercise it. faith which is in Christ Jesus." It will be observed that the words Christ Jesus, in the Greek, are not in the same case; taken literally and signifying the present the following version: same person, it would seem that we should find them agreeing in case, both of them in the dative, or both use the language of grammar. They are often found faith—a faith in the Gospel of Jesus. thus posited, and almost always in the same case But sometimes the word Christos, by metonymy, is put for the word or doctrine of Christ-the Gospelthe Christian religion. In the present instance all difficulty is obviated by the use of the figurative, propared for every good office. instead of the literal meaning; accordingly we have chosen to use the former.

2. PASA GRAPHE: Every writing whatsoever-not the scriptures of the Old Testament alone, to which reference has just been made, but the writings of poet and philosopher, of whatsoever age and nation fornia," in which the Professor tries to prove that of the world, come as well within the all-embracing category of just claim, to impart their power also in the spread of knowledge and truth, in their contribution to the humanities. Homer and Hesiod, Plato and Socrates, are here to instruct and make wise the young disciple of Christianity, as well as Moses and Job, David and Solomon, provided they evince the breathings of divinity-qualifications indispensable in each. The so-called sacred and profane have been marshaled in beautiful antithesis-let the Apostle settle their claims and dispose of them according to their fitness to help humanity. His transition from speaking of the scriptures so sacred to the Jew, to those of the Gentile world, and bringing them both | cial pains to make inquiries when I have heard of into immediate and collatoral comparison of uses, are such cases in the papers, headed, "Another victim remarkable features in the passages chosen for this present criticism. His origin and education had qualified him above all men, to pass an impartial judgment in respect to the relative value of each, in suicide. This case was extensively published in the the matter of well-being; born a Jew, but a Roman papers as the bable directly to Spiritualism. I wrote citizen; brought up in the Jew's religion, but a Christian; the Old Testament to him classic, but no more so than the writings of the men of Greece and Rome; to the dweller at Jerusalem quoting the Hebrew prophets, but to the sages on Mars Hill, at Athens, reciting from Aratus; to Titus, Bishop of Crete, polishing a paragraph with a passage from Epimenides. We deem it safe to heed his declarations, set forth in a fumiliar letter to his adopted son, on the immensely interesting subject of Faith in the Gospel of Jesus. The occusion certainly called for candor, and his knowledge and wisdom in divine things afforded him abundant illumination to teach truly. We accept his arbitrament in the premises. 3. THEOPNEUSTOS: God-breathed, God-inspired, breathing of Deity, divinely inspired. such Paul denominates the quality of the scriptures or writings that are useful in the affairs of life. All scripture -every writing-most certainly has not such quality, though the Common Version declares it has thus : " All scripture is given by inspiration of ¡God." No limitation here; but everything written is soripture, and everything written is, therefore, given by inspiration of Goul How widely different is the Greek-every writing divinely inspired is profitable. etc .- limitation here to what is God-inspired alone.

It should not be forgotten in this connection that the words which we are considering are found in the letter containing the charge in respect to the duties and doctrines which a beloved son was to observe in the course of his ministry as the bishop of the church of the Ephesians. His part as a preacher of the gospel of a Higher Faith, among a people of such ed, and conferred together as to the most successful culture and refinement as obtained in the cities of method of preventing him from squandering his Greece, at that time, would seem to demand of him property. They finally decided upon a plan which various learning and comprehensive views of affairs -hence the suggestions touching the importance and value to him of becoming familiar with all literature, ancient and modern, sacred and profans. Paul himself had known its advantages in the wide field of his labors, then drawing to a close. His great learning and resources had extorted from the Roman Agrippa the declaration, "Much learning doth make thee mad." This letter was dated at Rome when he was brought before the Emperor Nero the second time, and suffered martyrdom. Hear him say in this incomparable valedictory from which we have chosen the passages for the present notes: " I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course. I have kept the faith-henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteous

4. The literature here recommended is deemed orn-RIMOS, beneficial, profitable, useful, servicable; PROS DID-ASKALIAN, for instruction; PROS ELEGOHON, for demonstration; PROS EPANORTHOSIN, for emendation; self." PROS PAIDEIAN, for nurture; TEN EN DIKAIOSUNE, & nurture in piety. Thus equipped for the work of a preacher, not limited to the learning and books of the Jew, which without faith and practice in the doctrines of Jesus, it is implied, would not bring safety more than any other writings, but at liberty to draw upon the learning and libraries of the universal Republic of Letters, for all of inspiration that they may contain, do we behold the pupil of the Apostle. That he judged all these things necessary for a herald of the Higher Faith, appears distinctly mind soon becomes tranquil, and, as Dr. Butler truly in the next section.

5. INA ARTIOS, etc. We give the sentence this version ; that a man of God may be complete-fully prepared for every good office. The words TOU THEOU AN-THROPOS, man of God, are not intended to designate a bishop more than any other teacher or receiver of as at the North, that our popular religious teachings the doctrines of Faith in Jesus, more than any man of picty, more than any Christian. A bishop in the great religious excitement, called revivals. ' Examtime of Paul, and in his mind, meant merely a publio teacher of the Christian Faith-it did not then They are found in every community. as now in the Roman and Anglican Church, signify a superior grade or class of clergy.

taken for this occasion, that reference being solely to whole number I did not see a case reported in one of what kind of literature he would have his model our religious papers, and very rarely in the secular preacher at Ephesus study to make himself com- papers, and then the cases were so smoothly worded, plete, there is one other matter seen in other parts that one ignorant of the facts would not know the of his letters to his pupil, which should not be omitted | true cause. Why is this studied concealment, or enhere, as an important item among the things which tire suppression of facts on this subject? go to swell the catalogue of qualifications for comword, of Timothy, whom Paul himself helped to de- which are now studiously concealed.

NAMENA SU SOPHISAI RIS SOPERIAN -means or things po- velop, to use another word of modern conse and ap-

We feel justified, from the examination which we have given of the selections from Paul's Epistle, to

16. And that ever since an infant thou hast been acquainted with the sacred writings, things potent of them in the genitive, and hence in apposition, to to give thee wisdom in respect to thy welfare through > 16. Every writing breathing of Deity, is beneficial. for instruction, for demonstration, for emendation, for nurture-a nurture in piety:

17. That a man of God may be complete-fully

SPIRITUALISM VS. POPULAR THE-OLOGY.

I noticed an article in the Bannen of Feb. 2, headed "Professor Anderson and Spiritualism in Cali-(in California, at least,) Spiritualism is a fruitful source of insanity.

The able reply by R. B. Hall very folly and truly refutes the scandalous charges, so unblushingly published, by one who acknowledges he gets his living by humbugging and deceiving the public.

I have taken considerable pains to investigate the subject of Spiritualism for several years past; looking at its facts and philosophy, its practical workings upon individuals, and its influence upon the human mind.

I have never yet known of a case of insanity caused by Spiritualism; although I have taken speto Spiritualism," &c. There was the case of Mr. Upson, of Waterbury, in this State, who, after heavy losses by fire, became low-spirited and committed a letter to Mrs. Upson, and the reply was published in the Banner and Telegraph some two years since. showing most conclusively that Spiritualism had nothing to do with it.

I recently saw a statement that a man in the eastern part of this State had become insane by Spiritualism. I notice that about once a year such reports go the rounds of the papers; and every suspected case is sure to meet with the greatest pub-

Two years ago I fell in company with Dr. Butler, for many years and still the able physician and superintendent of the Insane Retreat at Hartford, and had a lengthy conversation with him on the principal causes of insanity. I asked him particularly if any cases of insanity from Spiritualism had come under his care. His reply was in substance like this: "We have occasionally had patients brought here, said to be insane from the above cause. but I never considered them really insane, but more properly under the influence of a miserable delusion. and they generally soon get over it; we never have had many such cases to attend to."

Dr. Butler also gave me the full particulars of the case, only a few years since, of a wealthy gentleman of Chicago, Ill., (his name I cannot now recall) who became a convert to Spiritualism, and in following its teachings, strove to relieve the cases of suffer ing and want that came to his notice by the free use of his money, and was really enjoying "the luxury of doing good." It was soon noised abroad, and the "heirs expectant" of his property became alarmwould apparently accomplish their object. Under false pretences they decoyed him from home, put him aboard of the cars, hurried him away more than a thousand miles, and confined him in the Insane Retreat at Hartford on the alleged plea of insanity. Dr. B., with his long experience and thorough knowledge of insanity, in all its various manifestations, was not long in discovering that his patient was the victim of a cruel conspiracy, and that he was not really insane at all. Dr. B. at once conferred with the Mayor of Hartford and other prominent citizens, and the unanimous conclusion was, that they would clear their hands of all complicity in the matter. The result was, they released him from confinement, and sent him on his way home rejoicing.

The opponents of Spiritualism, the Pharisees of to-day, have changed but little from their brethren of nearly two thousand years ago. Even our great spiritual leader, Jesus, was often accused of being under the influence of Beelzebub, the Devil, &c.; and we read that on one occasion " his friends went out to lay hold of him, for they said, he is beside him-

Ancient historians, speaking of Jesus and his followers, call them the infatuated victims of a miser-

I do not think it need excite wonder or surprise that some persons of peculiar temperament, when the truths of Spiritualism first dawn on their minds. when for the first time the joyous truth that their loved ones who have passed from the form still live and demonstrate their presence and affection for them, should be fairly delirious with joy; but the said, "such cases are easily cured."

I will now as briefly as possible state some of the fruits of the popular theology in producing insanity. I have traveled considerably in many of the United States, and find that the effect is the same South often produce insanity, more especially during times of ples are so common as scarcely to excite remark.

During the great religious excitement of 1857-8, there was a fearful increase of insanity, as reports Though not referred to by the Apostle in the text of our Insane Hospitals will attest; and out of the

I wish some competent person would publish a pleteness of the man of God. This thing had been volume calling the public attention to the subject; mentioned in the early pages of the Epistles-wo he would not have to go far for abundant material. mean the mediumship, in the modern sense of the Such a volume would reveal most astounding facts

Dr. Amariah Brigham, formerly Superintendent of the Insane Retreat at Hartford, afterwards Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum at Utica, N. Y. more than twenty years ago, published a volume entitled "Influence of Religion upon Health, and the Physical Welfare of Mankind," which created considerable sensation among theologians, and was rather severely criticised by the religious press. Dr. B. had made the subject of insanity, in all its doing for us in this place? forms, his special study for many years; and probably but few, if any, could have done the subject od the proceedings of a three days Spiritual Festimore complete justice. He showed in a masterly val we held the last days of October. Since then we manner the fearful ravages of insanity, and traced a large per centage of them directly to religious ex- ual showers, or in other words with lectures from citement. His statements and arguments were sup. some of our best trance and inspirational speakers; ported by a long array of facts. Names, places and have a promise of a continuation of the same and particulars were given, and no candid reader blessings. We have had, in all, thirty-seven leccould peruse the book without being convinced of tures since the festival closed. Among the speakthe dangerous influences on our popular theology, ers who have delivered regular courses of lectures, I more especially during the periods called regivals. The book created a profound sensation at the time, lowing, as worthy of patronage by a deserving pubas the whole was so painfully true, and could be lio: verified in every community by witnessing some poor shattered intellect, made so by the teachings referred to.

And still theologians are blindly pursuing the same course, well "knowing how their ox is wont to push with the horn, and they would not restrain him." Some of them know better, while charity would lead us to hope that the most of them, ow ing to their early training and ignorance of the resulis, are more to be pitied than blamed. Of all such we would say, may God forgive them, "for they know not what they do."

I could give many facts, some of them painful and distressing in the extreme, which have come under my own personal observation, verifying the statements I have made.

Not a reader of this, or scarcely a person of adult age, but who has witnessed some cases of insanity caused by the awful doctrines of hell-fire and eternal torments, an angry, offended God, and the fiery billows rolling beneath.

Thank God, these monstrous doctrines are losing their hold on the human mind. The glorious light of Spiritualism has again dawned upon the earth. and is rapidly dispelling the mists of ignorance, su perstition, and intolerance which has so long bound the human mind, and we hear the glorious news from every quarter of the globe, of the gradual spreading of our beautiful philosophy, which is destined surely to bring " peace on earth and good will to man." D. B. HALE.

Collinsville, Ct.

Written for the Banner of Light. THE IDEAL ACTUAL.

I walk with shadows as in dreams: Bright forms around me rise Within the watch light clear that gleams From Memory's sicepless eyes.

Impalpable the Phantoms glide My spirit's pathway o'er; And yet I see them at my side, Companions ever more.

A Puritan grandfather bold. Firm treading, kind, but grave, Seems saddened that I tell the fold He deemed sione could save.

Yet, with the troubled look of grief, A hope seems blending there, Which calmly says-"There's one relief; The Samson arm of prayer !"

His stately partner's at his side, That ne'er knew Woman's fears; But shared her love, the living tide, And sympathy and tears.

I see them now-they 're in my ways Where e'er I rest, or roam-The lingering light of early day Round childhood's sunny home.

But nearer glide, and hand in hand, The two that blest my birth-They've joined again the severed band Inat linked their lives on earth.

He, sound of mind as hale of frame-She, tragile as the flower: But strong in love, the quenchless flame That makes e'en weakness power.

A brother, plucked in manhood's dawn-An only sister dear-How full their cherished forms are drawn In heart-light, warm and clear!

Ah ! holler visions still I great ! A mother and her child I The wife and daughter !- forms more sweet, More seeming, undefiled !

They smile to rest the stern alarm. As in the days of old; And grasp my hand, as when this arm Was steady, strong and bold.

Their coming is not such as seems. When evening shadows fall -.. Not airy emptiness of dreams, But spirit-presence, all !

They ne'er have left me-ne'er will go, Awake, or when I sleep; But, night or day, or cheered, or low, Their vigils round me keep.

Kindred and friends, loved less or more, Are ever with me here-I see them as in days of yore, With joy, and oft a tear.

I know they wait my advent, where All mortal sorrows cease-Where conflicts that I ill can bear, Bring the sweet boon of peace.

Of unions past, abides; That felt by them is each success, Or trial that betides. The change from life to life has broke

No tie that bound us here-

I know that still their consciousness

From out Death's shadows they awoke, To life more pure and dear. So walk I now as one that dreams-With phantom shapes that rise. And seek me where in spirit gleams

The light of Memory's eyes. Be such an earnest to my heart, Of clearer sight, above The clouds that earth and heaven part;

New London, Ct., 1861.

And ties of spirit love. MARCO MILTON.

death of its terrors; that which enlightens the work. Atheist, and cannot but reform the vicious; that Correspondence.

Spiritualism in St. Charles, Killuols. Will you allow me, through the columns of your welcome paper, the privilege of informing the friends of progress spread broadcast throughout the civilized world, what the light of the New Dispensation is

Last November you will recollect that you publishhave been wonderfully blessed with frequent spiritmay be permitted to mention the names of the fol-

Miss Bell Scougall is a trance speaker of great merit-a young lady who sprung up from the humble walks of life, and is now, under the power of spirit control, confounding the most highly educated Doctors of Medicine and Divinity, and bringing thousands to a conviction of the truth of spiritual inter-

Bro. E. V. Wilson gave us a course of his very best lectures, calling out large audiences, who, on leaving at the close of each lecture, were anxious to return the next evening to hear more of the strange and new, yet pleasing doctrine, and wondering that they had never before seen that the Bible was full of proofs of the doctrine of spiritual intercourse.

Mrs. A. L. Streeter, whose name was mentioned in the report of the Spiritual Festival, has been here again and delivered a long course of masterly lectures. She is a wonderful medium-had very limited advantages of education, was married at the age of fifteen years, has a family and three children, and has always been in very limited pecuniary circumstances; yet in spite of all adversity, she has been developed to a plane of mediumistic powers truly astonishing. She will, although a little frail woman of twenty-four years, hold an audience spell-bound for two hours at a time, with a voice that fills a large church, and repeat it every evening in a week and three times on Sundays.

Brother J. H. Randall gave us a course of his beautifully logical and metaphysical lectures. He has a remarkably fine intellect, and uses chaste language, and is brilliant in the expression of thought. He is just the medium to settle down and lecture to a good, well organized society of Harmonial Philoso-

Brother H. P. Fairfield, one of the vory best lecturers we have ever had, gave us five of his very excellent lectures, the last of which was from the control of the eccentric Lorenzo Dow.

Among the very pleasant and agreeable spiritual treats we have had this winter, has been an exhibition of the spiritual paintings by the celebrated artist-medium, E. Rogers, now deceased. These paintings are owned by Brother W. F. Jemieson, a young trance speaker of promise, who is now exhib. iting them to the public. They are worthy of patronage. They commence with the death scene, then trace the spirit through various unfoldings in the spheres, showing spiritual scenery of great beauty and interest.

This evening Mrs. Stowe commences a course of three lectures. We are expecting Brother S. B. Whiting here to lecture to us next week. Our beau tiful church, which the Universalist Society so kind ly tendered us the use of for the ensuing year, is usually well filled at our lectures; and although it has been almost a protracted series of lectures during the evenings of the past winter, yet the interest in the great cause of "Harmonial Philosophy" is greatly on the increase, and rapidly extending among our very best citizens. The same interest felt in this place is being extended to adjacent towns and villages. I remain fraternally, S. S. Jones. St. Charles, Ill., March 25, 1861.

Centre Lisle, Broome Co., N. Y.

Between the Sundays of Oswego and Utica a call for laborers brought me from a contemplated rest, a visit down the Binghamton railroad to Lisle, where I switched off in a buggy three miles to this little Centre village, where the people have erected two houses for the worship and glory of God, and the trustees here closed both of them against such heresics as Jesus and his disciples taught and practiced. and excluded the teachers who show any of the signs of believing his doctrines. Brother Root, who had borne willingly his share in building one church and supporting preaching, but who had become too spiritual to feed on husks all the time, being refused the use of the church for preachers of the living gospel when it was not needed for the old and dead, resolved to hear, and have those who had ears, and were desirous to hear such as had new religious, scientific or moral truths to proclaim, and for that purpose he built, finished and furnished a neat and commodious hall-called the speakers and invited the people, and the prospect is, what might be expected, that soon the other churches will be "empty and to let." Several speakers have been here before me, and more are engaged. The people come in freely and contribute liberally for such preaching as is in harmony with science, nature, reason, common sense and the religion of Jesus. Hundreds of places which I have visited could by a like effort of one or more friends get up a nent and commodious hall like this, and then have no difficulty in supporting speakers who are competent to feed the multitudes which are almost everywhere "anhungered" and will continue so until they get some better food than Orthodox pulpits furnish them. Today (Friday) I am to have two meetings, because I cannot stay over Sunday, and the people are anxious to hear more than I can say in two evenings. All through this region of Central New York the people are awakening and calling for honest, carnest and enlightened teachers of spiritual truths, of the life to come, and intercourse between the two spheres of human existence. WARREN CHASE.

April 5, 1961.

A New Speaker. Please mention, under the head of trance lecturers, the name of "Mrs. Jennette J. Clark, care of Wm. S. Everett, Esq., East Princeton, Mass."

In behalf of Mrs. Clark, who is a most worthy and estimable woman, I would state that she has entered There is in Spiritualism that which comforts the upon her mission as a lecturer, by the urging of our mourner, and binds up the broken-hearted; that spirit friends, who are now aiding and prompting which smooths the passage to the grave, and robs her onward (as they say) to a noble and glorious Already in the "circle," she has given some very which cheers and encourages the virtuous, amid all remarkable tests; but her mission hereafter is lecthe trials and vicissitudes of life; and that which turing mainly, and from those already given by her demonstrates to man his duty and his destiny, leav. in this vicinity, we have much to hope for her in ing it no longer vague and uncertain.—Judge Edtake such compensation only as the friends can afford to give. JOSEPH W. NIE.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealers The Light Shineth in Darkness-Bee Yo Only Who Will.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PLAIN DEALER :- Please allow me through your independent Democratic Plain Duales, a little space in vindication of the right against the wrong, of the true against the false, of the wisdom of the unseen spheres against human weakness and folly.

A few evenings since a party of gentlemen and ladies were invited to the house of a well known and highly respectable citizen, to witness the manifestations of spirits through the mediumship of Mr. H. M. FAY. Among those present were two gentlemen who are well known as skeptics and hostile to this order of phenomena, and we have no doubt honestly so. At an early hour one of these gentle-men announced that he had brought with him a cord, with which he proposed to tie the medium so that he would not get released until he was lot loose by mortal hands. To this Mr. FAY very justly objected, as he did not claim spirits could untie a string or small cord. After some discussion, in which the medium was called an impostor and other epithets not of a flattering character, the party was assembled in the room set apart for the occasion, the friends of the medium ordered by the gentlemen aforesaid on the back seats, while they took such as were nearest the medium, so as to be handy to catch him when he left his seat" to float the violin over their heads.

With such an arranged circle, every one who knows anything of the philosophy of physical manifestations of spirits will readily understand but little could be done by spirit power, while no obsta-cle whatever to deception, if these phenomena are such, would thus be interposed. A medium could of course tie and untie himself as well in the immediats vicinity of a skeptic as that of a boliever. Had the miracles of Jesus been of his own power, he would never have left the record that he could do no mighty work in Nazareth, in consequence of the unbelief of the people-a fact that in these skeptice ! times would be deemed a rather severe comment up on the character of a medium. Manifestations being slight, it was finally consented that a young lady, who is a Spiritualist and a medium, should take a front seat, on condition that it should be between the gentlemen who had thus far dictated the circle; which, with a few other changes being made, a voice through the trumpet requested that all but a few who were named should leave the room. This request complied with-'mid much irrelevant talk and unseemly jeers from a few of the persons passing out—we were promptly told through the trumpet that manifestations could not and would not be given when parties present contemplated breaking up the circle by acts that must of necessity destroy all power to manifest. Here party who, by his near proximity to the conspirators, overheard the plan.

The gentlemen who were thus excluded because they would not regard the regulations of a circle, of course left, no doubt thinking it was their superior sagacity and acumen that had prevented interesting demonstrations in their presence, instead of the fact that they had violated natural laws of which they

was a decided manifestation of intelligence, foreign to the medium, and which was vouched for by a were ignorant. The circle having re-assembled, the medium was soon tied and submitted to a committee of two, to see if he could place himself unaided in the position yound, when the light was struck. One of the gen-Memen instead of reporting upon the question, soon announced that he could release the medium's hands. This was as positively denied by other parties; and the medium having lost in some degree his usual forbearance, under all the imputations and abuse of the evening, declined to submit to any forcible manipulations not in the order of investigation. The question was not whether spirits could tie his hands so that mortals could not untie them, but, rather, that he was tied in such a manner as to preolude the possibility of his doing it himself.

With this dominant spirit again manifest on the part of guests, in violence to all courtesy and order, the circle was dismissed by announcement through the trumpet, and a few, who had come there estensibly to see demonstrations of spirit presence, by which man's immortality is brought to light, went away with the gratifying reflection that they had so interfered with conditions that they had seen and learned nothing of importance.

These details, which of themselves are by no means interesting, suggest several ideas which are of more or less importance to the philosophical inquirer. No more common mistake is made than that of assuming unbelief, of skepticism to be a mark of sagacity and wisdom. This is the origin of more opposition to new developments than anything else. Pride of opinion masters such men. Watch them and you will find they are ever ready to accept a popular delusion. Unbelief in that which is true is a mark of ignorance. Deacon Homespun could not believe the world turned over, because he did not understand the philosophy of the earth's motion. The mind that cannot discern the principles involved in certain phenomens, sees them as vulgar, isolated tricks, and no amount of argument or demonstration can convince such a person for he has not grown in capacity to the condition for their

Franklin said the great error of mankind was in not believing enough. In spiritual matters, Jesus taught that through belief came development, and consequently salvation.

That egotism which commits a man to the assertion that a certain thing cannot be true, because he has not been convinced, against the combined testimony of all who have had a fair opportunity to judge, is one of the weakest traits of human na ture, and ought to take its place among the defects of character which forbid confidence in his opin-

The common assertion that the physical manifestations of spirits in tying a medium to reveal their power, and, in speaking through a tin trumpet to manifest intelligence, are low and vulgar, is also evidence of a very limited view of the subject. Does the wise builder rear a superstructure without first having laid deep and broad the foundation in rough stone? Shall Spiritualism that takes in all of God. man and matter, and is already the mightiest power that wields the destinies of mankind, be devoid of a basic structure in elementary facts, because some persons of limited conceptions see in them only the rough external development? Thank God, time is without end, and the law of man's being is progress, and therefore there is hope even for all such. While the Lords and Ladies of London are eagerly investigating this phenomena, and the Emperor of France holds dark circles in his Palace, shall it be said that persons in Cleveland assume to denounce these demonstrations of that which man is most anxious to know as low and vulgar? It is only those who live purely external life that can entertain such views.

Again, the skeptic is constantly knocking his head for the want of brains—against the invariable law of conditions, claiming that fraud and deception are intended, because these things are not done in open day. Every phenomenon in Nature has its special conditions. It is only through certain and invariable conditions that man has a being, and some of these are such as it is deemed proper to mention only in the most secret chamber, and yet human life is not a delusion, simply because all its phenomena are not brought to daylight investigation. A broad philosophy, and intuitional powers make believers, while ignorance and a dull perception make skeptics and bigots. One more point and I have done. God, our Father. knows no distinction between his children-he reveals himself as fully to one class as to another: and therefore, when among men it is deemed important that one should be saved, or convinced of a great truth, more than another, discomfiture is sure

In a large experience among investigators, I have never seen a man convinced of the truth of spirit . communion until he first learned to be honest with himself and others, and treated the matter with sufficient decorum to permit his spirit friends to approach him. Whoever has learned the power of the human will, knows that it may be to the spirit what iron bars and bolts are to the mortal. None so blind as they who will not see. C. D. GRISWOLD, M. D.

Special Contributions. BY A. E. NEWTON.

Co The contributor to this department is responsible for no other portion of the paper. Letters and communications designed specially for him should be directed to care of Box

SPIRITUALISM IN RELIGION.

NEW SERIES.

No. III .- Consecrated Houses.

Co-extensive with the religious sentiment in the human race, has been an instinctive demand for holy places, or consecrated houses, in which to perform the ceremonials, or engage in the contemplations enjoined by each peculiar system of worship. Hindooism has its "dewals :" Buddhism its " lamaseries" of various grades, from the humble huts of hermits to the "Eternal Sanctuary" at Bouddha La; Egypt, Persia and Greece had their uncounted temples to the gods; Judea her synagogues and her "Holy and beautiful House" on Mount Zion; Mahometanism has its "mosques," and its chief temple at Mecca; the Roman Church her chapels, cloisters, churches, cathedrals, all surmounted by the unapproachably magnificent St. Peter's at Rome; Protestantism of all sects, has its churches, chapels. meeting-houses, and lecture-rooms. All these are set apart with more or less exclusiveness, for solely religious uses, and with the idea that some special benefit accrues from devotions or religious acts performed in such consecrated places. And even that simple child of Nature, the North American Indian. has his "Sacred Lodge," in which alone, by the aid of mystic rites and incantations, he thinks to obtain on urgent occasions, the surest responses of the Great Spirit to his earnest calls.

It seems almost self-evident that an instinct or impulse so universal in humanity, must have some substantial foundation, or subserve some important use which may be made apparent to the understandings of men. So clear is this, that even "Positivism," the latest form of Rationalistic Philosophywhich claims to ignore all authority, all "revelation," and all speculation as to causes in religious matters, confining itself solely to the severest scientific observation of demonstrated results-even Positivism recognizes the value of consecrated places for meditation and worship. It prescribes, if I mistake not, not only houses set apart for public religious exercises, but a sacred apartment or apartments in every dwelling-an oratory, with suitable embellishments, fitted up for the sole use of each member of a family, into which no other person should ever be allowed to intrude.

Religionists in general, seem to have either obeved this impulse as a blind instinct, or they have taught it as a duty resting on arbitrary requirements of Deity. God is represented as being especially gratified with having a house or temple exclusively devoted to Himself, and hence inclined to confer peculiar favors on those who worship within its sacred precincts. A large portion of the religious world. including the great majority of Christendom, seem to feel that the more gorgeous and magnificent this temple, the more richly endowed with treasures of gold and silver and art, the greater the satisfaction it affords to Deity, and the greater the benefits He. deigns to bestow on worshipers. On the other hand, a small and decreasing faction of Protestantism has maintained the opposite extreme, fancying that God could be pleased alone with unsightly ar. chitecture, bare walls, and appointments in every respect neglectful of both beauty and comfort.

Perhaps it is not strange, then, that, as a reaction from such palpable errors, there should be a class who regard this instinctive desire and reverence for "holy places" as a mere superstition. There are Rationalists, and even Spiritualists, who scout the repugnance manifested by some religious people to having their houses of worship used for promiscuous or "secular" purposes, as altogether groundless and whimsical.

But Spiritualism has supplied us with a definite and rational philosophy of this common instinct. showing it to grow out of natural and universally operative causes.

All Spiritaalists who have had any familiarity with the rudimental phenomena of the movement. are fully aware of the importance of certain conditions to the successful manifestation of spirit-power and intelligence. Among the conditions universally insisted on, are, a degree of quiet and harmony, with the presence of some person or persons whose organisms furnish a certain quality of aromal emanations, or magnetism. In order to the production of sounds (raps), or movements of physical substances, it is always required that sufficient time should clapse to allow of the "charging," or impregnation with this magnetism, of some portion of the furniture of the room; and it is well known that such phenomena are most successfully produced in an apartment that has been repeatedly used for the same purpose, and thus become more fully charged in every part. Hence many persons have been instructed and induced to prepare and set apart rooms especially for physical demonstrations of various kinds.

The same rule of conditions has been found to apply equally to manifestations of a more intellectual character. In fact, the more delicately susceptible persons are to the influence and impressions of spirits the more sensitive are they also to disturbing influences from any source around them, and the greater the need of protection or isolation from that which is incongruous.

It is, furthermore, a well-ascertained fact that every person is constantly giving off emanations which partake of his own quality-that is, of the quality of his thoughts, desires, aspirations, as well as of his physical condition, whether healthful or diseased. These impregnate or saturate everything around him. From them, good psychometrists will .tell-by simply feeling of his clothing, or a scrap of . his writing, or any article he may have carried about , his person, or the chair he has occupied—his general physical, mental and moral characteristics, and the feelings that may have been prevalent at the time. We thus leave the impress of our characters and thoughts on everything and every person around us, as we move through the world, even though we speak not a word!

Momentous truth! Clairvovants sometimes see these emanations as they have crystalized about an apartment. Those which are purer and clearer in quality present the eppearance of delicate frost-work, penetrating the interstices, and glistening upon the surfaces; while here and there, perchance, is a foul stain, a filthy blotch, occasioned by an angry word, a malevolent thought, or a lustful desire, which it may take a long time to purge away.

It follows, then, that the more exclusively an apartment is used for one specific purpose, whether industrial, amusementary, o intellectual, the more fally does it become charged with the special kind of failing success."

aroma or magnetism peculiar to and favorable for that purpose; and the more unmixed and powerful will be its influence upon all who enter it. This is why we are unsuccessful in any employment in a new place, until we get to feel "at home" in it. Writers or literary persons are especially aware of this; to write their best things, they must be in their accustomed chairs, in their favorite nookthat is, in the focus of an invisible magnetic battery which has been gradually constructing around them.

It follows, also, that if we have a room into which we enter only when in the exercise of the highest and holiest aspirations of our natures, that room must be charged with only the quality of emanations peculiar to that state, and hence favorable for its best exercise. And this, too, furnishes the best conditions for the presence and direct action upon us of the purest and holiest beings with whom we are capable of coming into interior communion. The benefit is derived from no capricibus pleasure on the part of Deity, but results simply from adaptation of

Thus we see the philosophy of "consecrated houses" and "holy places." To some it may seem altogether fanciful; but no well-informed Spiritualist can question it. All sensitive and impressible persons are familiar with experiences which confirm its truth. Trance and inspirational speakers well know what depression, restraint and torture of spirit they undergo in attempting to speak in certain halls, and before some audiences; and they know, too, the freedom and power of utterance which they experience in other surroundings. The open air, the leafy grove, the mountain side, where the atmosphere cannot become surcharged with human emanations, has always been found peculiarly favorable for inspirational teachings.

We see, also, the use of a special consecratory service, when a room or edifice is to be set apart for a specific use. If the personal emanations of an assembly do actually permeate and adhere to the nay, their very existence is bound up, as now. It is substances of the walls and furniture, it follows that one of the most difficult things to say just what is those which are first imparted penetrate most deeply and affect most permanently its quality. So that if an act of conscoration is a real thing, and not a sham-if it calls forth the deepest and holiest desires of your hearts, it may produce a great and sensible change in the condition of an apartment.

It is plain, too, that there is a reason for making a consecrated house both a model of architectural spiration (and none others should be tolerated in such a place) are charged with the magnetism of such inspiration, and thus tend to reproduce it in others. The precious metals, too, as gold, silver, and gems. Hence the instinctive tendency to enrich religious tem ples with all such treasures—in consequence of the problem out with. which they become, in process of time, batteries or centres of a potent influence which strongly impressancient churches and cathedrals of Europe, know the ism. No doubt, however, one tendency of such places is to develop a religion which consists more in a blind and sentimental reverence, than in perception or love of right; and hence the need of its counteraction in Protestantism and Puritanism. The rational mean will be found between the two extremes.

A word of practical deduction, and I close. Every spiritual communion. Our domestic architecture in likewise, that there is a peaceful and conservative general makes no provision for this; just as, till recently, it made no provision for ventilation, bathing, etc. It is as unspiritual as it has been unphysiological and unhealthful. Spiritual men and women will demand a new and improved style. Each will re-

"An oratory dim,
But beautiful, where he may raise,
"Unheard of mon, his daily hymn.
Of love and gratitude and praise;
Where he may rovel in the light
Of things unseen and infinite,
And learn how little he may be,
And yet how awful in thy sight,
Ineffable Eternity!"

This room should be at the top of the house, above the noise and bustle of busy life. It should, if possible, be lighted from above, giving opportunity to gaze up into the blue depths of infinity, and upon best tend to facilitate its purposes. Some persons would prefer to have only bare walls, with no object to attract the external senses, in order that internal abstraction may be more complete. Others of different organizations, would be aided by appropriate pictures and symbols, in order to impress the internal through the senses. Each should follow his or her own bent, and worship in his or her own way. divine influx, would be no waste of time, but an immense help to its most wise, energetic and useful employment.

By thus regarding these simple laws of our being, and surrounding ourselves with proper conditions, having first consecrated ourselves to right and true living, we may come into the daily realization of a life en rapport with the celestial heavens, and vastly nobler than most people have yet conceived of.

Charles Colchester, the Test Medium.

From an interesting communication in the Herald of Progress, we extract the following notice of the mediumship of Mr. Charles Colchester, of New

"Mr. C. has been used by spirits as a medium but tally, while engaged in a social chat with an acquaintance, in an ice-cream saloon. The conversation turning upon Spiritualism, his companion, who was a partial medium, asserted that he could give Mr. C. the above extract, says that though it may in a sense be name of his deceased father; and to his surprise the exaggerated, so far as the prediction may refer to name was given correctly. 'Father,' exclaimed Mr. colchester, astonished at the unexpected result, 'if you can do this through a stranger, you surely can manifest in the same way through myself. Do you cotton in countries where climate and labor are remember that you promised, when I was a lad, to available for the purpose; and it is equally certain grant the first request I might make when I became of age? My twenty-first birth day is but just past.

I now ask of you to fulfill this promise by making of me a medium.' Immediately his hand was controlled to write, and his powers as a test medium have of a formidable competition can be originated-but continued from that hour unintermittingly. He re- the interests at stake are too weighty, the amount of ceived his education in England, and possesses the bearing of a gentleman. He is courteous and considerate to investigators, lending himself cheerfully to any test demanded by their doubts. Names, ages, place of death, tests of identity, are given with un-

Bunner of Night.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1861.

OFFICE, 3 1-2 BRATTLE ST., BOSTON.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Clubs of four or more persons will be taken at the fellow

Business Letters must be addressed,

William Berry, Publisher, BOSTON, MASS.

New York Advertising Agency. S. T. MUNSON, No. 143 Fulton street, New York, will act as our agent in that city, for soliciting advertisements only.

NOTICE.

Our subscribers will please to note that our principal office is at Boston, from which place all papers are mailed, and we are not responsible for contracts made with any other parties. Letters should invariably be addressed to W. BERRY,

3 1-2 Brattle street, Boston.

SECESSION-WAR-COTTON-RUMORS. Never before, in the history of our nation, were the people at large so excited with alternate hope and fear regarding matters with which their progressbest to be done. Shall the central government announce its determination to collect the revenues and enforce the laws, even at the cost of human life and a terrible shock to the prevailing sentiment of the age? It is a difficult question to answer; for if it be answered Yes, then the result may be the driving off of thousands of men in the States that have already seceded, who are only waiting for an opportubeauty, and a repository of gifts-of offorings of gold, nity to take this whole affair in hand themselves, and precious stones, of paintings, statuary, and the and are chiefly sensitive to the least interference of creations of high art. The religious sentiment is the general government. If, on the contrary, it be intimately associated with the love of the beautiful. answered No-it may be, as is not unfrequently rep-In fact, it is the love of moral and spiritual beauty, and resented, that the Union party throughout the South hence the love of material beauty is but its proper | which is waiting but for some leading, guiding movecounterpart or complement. The two can never be ment like this, will wither and die out entirely for divorced in healthful minds. Besides, all works of want of support and outside sympathy. The chief art, which are produced under a lofty and pure in- difficulty attending a final decision on this question occurs from the impossibility to get at the real facts. If the administration could be accurately informed relative to the temper of the public mind throughout the Southern States, it would, of course, know are the best absorbents of the finer magnetisms. exactly how to proceed; as it stands, guess work and shrewdness and instinct are all that are left to work

It is very difficult to say whetherwe are to have war, or not. One thing seems to be certain; that, es every receptive person who enters within their if we do, it is going to be provoked by the bold and precincts. Impressible persons who have visited the defiant conduct of the leaders who at present hold control of the government machinery in the Southdifference between their atmospheres and those of ern States. President Lincoln has certainly abthe dreary, barnlike "meeting-houses" of Puritan- stained, whether by word or deed, from asserting his preference for violent interposition on the part of government, and the country is bound to accept his conduct thus far as dictated by the considerations of genuine patriotism. They who would cavil at that, are plainly determined to be satisfied with nothing. And although we have little doubt that there is a strong element in the present cabinet that is strongdwelling should have its consecrated room, or rooms, ly set for war-like operations, and with as little dekept wholly sacred to religious contemplation and lay as may be, still it is a consolatory offset to know, element there, too; and, between these opposing tempers and inclinations, the country will be likely to get all the advantrge possible. When men, like the leaders on both sides of this political issue. stand angrily threatening one another, there is great danger of a collision; and violence once undertaken and entered upon, to attempt to reason before passion has fully sated itself, is to waste the breath.

But allowing that the Gulf States accomplish their plan, and set up for themselves the political Utopia of which their over-enthusiastic statesmen dream. What then? Will the struggles and con vulsions through which they have been compelled to pass in order to realize their scheme be instantly permitted, in the natural order of events, to go by without leaving any results? Are established arthe quiet stars. It should be furnished only as will rangements allowed to be violently broken up and overthrown in this way, without the payment of any of the penalties? It cannot be so. Whenever a change is effected in the existing order of things, and by a violent wrench, it is expecting what cannot be, to look for any improvement before the hurt has first been healed.

Concerning the effect which these concussions of political opinion and prejudice will have upon the An hour spent in such a room, in the early part of production of cotton—on which our brothren in the the day, with a reverent opening of the interiors to Gulf States are ready to stake their future fortunes -the London Times remarks, and with an air of truth, as it strikes us, that they will determine this peculiar branch of human industry, gradually but surely, into different directions and localities. "The office of producing raw material for British cotton mills," says that journal, " is eagerly and clamorously sought after. In Asia, in Africa, in Australia, and in America, people are ready and anxious to undertake the duty. Egypt, Ethopia, Abbeokuta, India, New Granada, and a dozen of other countries beside, are competing for our orders. Which tenders may be ultimately successful, we shall not now inquire; but one thing is certain, and that is-that the absolute monopoly of the Southern States will be lost!" This from the giant organ of cotton and commerce, too! from the press that, with all its professed love of liberal ideas and fair play, could never eighteen months. He discovered his powers acciden- afford to turn its back upon its patrons and supporters, or the men who set commerce in motion! Another European paper, in commenting on the energy will be thrown into the capacity to produce that the effort will be more or less successful. It years even may clapse before anything in the shape capital involved too large to permit the uncertainty which has hitherto ruled, to occur again."

Thus secession may itself be the very key that, in good time, (if philanthropists can but wait upon God, who made white and black just as they are,) will unlock the whole problem of African slavery. Principles, even of progress and benevolence, must needs be wrought out through human means and have fallen upon us, that Eugland, France and permanent good even in temporary crosses, and servation," with the shy intention of putting in doubts, and evils.

ure. One day the President has given definitive as- did once reign to some practical purpose. surances to the Southern Commissioners that, in no morning and contradicting it with such emphasis in the evening, is getting to be looked upon as a nuisance scarcely deserving hearty contempt.

In the midst of conflicting sentiments and opinions, the country is thrown into a state of mind that, in some lights, may be thought exceedingly unfor- | ple do really improve, they do it themselves, of themtunate; but we have faith—it is an instinct with us selves, and within themselves, and not because so be wrought out. As we have before remarked, our that foreign fleets were preparing to visit our shores. people were fast becoming too grossly material, and putting their trust too entirely in money; social position was bought, rather than earned, showing the social standard to be so low that its interpreters were capable of being bribed and corrupted. These troubles will at last tend to sift out the chaff from the wheat; and men will be all the better for being put upon their good behavior, upon their resources. upon their nobler instincts, their sense of charity, and benevolence and humanity. If a better day is to come, events like the present are just the ones to hasten its approach and dawn.

Give us Proof.

I am a good deal entertained by those Spiritual Messages; but how comes it that there are no responses published? With all the circumstantialities given by the Spirits, are there no persons living who can either confirm or deny what is stated? If they cannot be confirmed, it would seem that Spiritualism is a magnificent tissue of lies. O. J. P.

We can only put these messages before the public as we receive them. In former years we investigated to our own satisfaction, and built up a faith in the manifestations in our own mind. It is impossible for us to investigate as we used to do, as business presses upon us. We are as desirous, howone can be, and have made many loud calls upon the friends who reside at places where they can investigate them, to do so, and give us the result. of their truth are satisfied with the proof it is to them, communication has been nublished for over six ent." months, that some person informs us it "was correct in every particular." Now had these simple words been written immediately after publication. they would have been of as much importance and microscope reveals them not less than the telescope, value to the public as was the message, and would each at either extreme of creation. In the insect have added to the message untold weight.

We are satisfied that more than half of these messages are thus heard from at so late a day, that it is useless to publish their confirmation.

But we will remind our friend, and many others who ask the same question, and who are suffering from the neglect of parties to write a few lines, either denying the truth of messages published, or giving the facts bearing upon them, that the fact that there are no denials of them, or attacks upon their truth, either by individuals or papers, is presumptive evidence of their truthfulness. We have invited refutations of the messages we publish, and are as ready to publish such, if true, as confirmations; for if they can be proven false, neither ourself nor the medium who sits for them, would lend aid in propagating falsehood.

We again call the attention of our friends to the wast importance of their investigating the statements contained in this department of our paper. Indeed, we earnestly entreat them to devote a little time to it, when any spirit who lived near them manifests, and write us the result of their researches. No one thing would give greater interest to the BANNER OF LIGHT, or do more to strengthen the hopes and faith of investigators, than brief statements (no matter how brief) of the result of inquiries made in reference to the messages published by us. We feel sure that if the friends knew how important this is, they would not content themselves with their knowledge of the truth-would not rest until they had imparted it to us, and through us the Dr.: "We know not the laws of the Spiritual to the public.

The Free Negroes.

It is undeniable that this class in our national ture of Kentucky passed a law, which stipulates color entering the State shall be liable to an impristhat every, free person of color found therein after the of this idea of spiritual presence!" first of May, 1862, shall be liable to seizure and sale as slaves for life. The governor of Delaware recommended the repeal of the law of 1855, allowing this class in Maryland to remove and reside in New requests us to notify Bro. Miller, who, he says, Castle and Kent counties, in that State; and the lectured in that place some four or five years element of population in Alabama have been warned should endeavor to revisit them by all means, and give sale into slavery."

Ourselves and Europe.

It is surmised, since our own political troubles instrumentalities; they are worth nothing to the Spain have an eye to their own special interests on race as long as they remain more abstractions, but and around this continent. The outbreak in St. become of value at the exact moment when they are | Domingo is possibly a token of what may be expectrendered practical. And he does not yet fully com- ed. The rumored sailing of the united fleets of these prehend the plan of universal benevolence for the three nations for our shores does not look well, either human family, who is unwilling to see great and They may be coming over only for purposes of "ob. good lick for themselves, as they find occasion per-The flying rumors about the daily changing state mits. If this is really so, we think that those porof parties are almost painful for their uncertainty. sons and parties whose impracticable theories-more With nothing but such materials for an opinion that is inhuman and unfortunate in fact, than philanthropto be worth much, its texture must be flimsy indeed. ic—have brought us as a nation to the verge of ruin, One day Fort Sumter is to be evacuated, and Major must take a sight of comfort with their reflections. Anderson to be taken off by a government steamer; It is truly, as the slang phrase goes in New York, a on the very next, it is all fixed so that there can be "big thing" for us to destroy a powerful nation over no possible mistake about it, this time, that rein- our impracticabilities, and because we cannot bear forcements are speedily to be thrown in, at any risk to wait on God's good time, and thus let in a legion of human life, and at any cost of government treas- of selfish and devilish influences where at least Order

England and France and Spain, all three, are contingency, are troops to be sent South for purposes | ready enough now to step in with their fleet of "obof invasion, or for any hostile purpose whatever; servation," and pick up a crumb or two on private and, on the next, he is reported as mum over his de account. How much better are we going to be for termination as a shut tomb, and the Cabinet will their armed presence? or how great will be the imgive up their ominous secrets about as readily as provement to the slave? It is well enough for us one of Herring's Salamander' Safes will squirm and all to remember that self protection is the first law, curl up in the fire. One thing, anyhow, is settled and that, unless we first take care of ourselves, we and decided, that the telegraph has lost all its can certainly do nothing for anyhody else. A great freshness and originality in the work of lying; this and thorough lesson will have been learned, in more business of transmitting such important news in the than one quarter, before we have done with these troubles; and one certainly is, that it will not do to drive human nature, even on a good road, like that of Reform, any faster than it feels it for its own interest to go. External government has been relied upon for moral advancement, loug enough; if peoto believe that happy consequences are certainly to compelled. And this is our homily upon the rumor

A Healthy Heart.

It is not often that we can point to a public man whose heart is so fortunately placed as to be able to keep his ambition balanced: and when we can, it is desirable that the most should be made of the example. For instance, what could be more fresh and delightfully human than an extract like this from the diary of Sir Charles Napier? Or what, coming from a military man, could present the horrors of war in a more striking light? Or who could paint the charms of affection with more freshness and grace? Thus:-" Nineteen long letters from Lord Ellenborough! He has made me Governor of Scinde, with additional pay! and has ordered the captured guns to be cast into a triumphal column, with our names. I wish he would let me go back to my wife and girls, it would be more to me than pay, glory and honors. This is glory! is it? Yes. Nine princes have surrendered their swords to me on the field of battle, and their kingdoms have been conquered by me, and attached to my own country. Well, all the glory that can be desired is mine, and I care so little for it, that the moment 1 can, all shall be resigned, to live quietly with my wife and girls; no honor or riches repays me for absence from them. Otherwise this sort ever, to have reports from those messages, as any of life is no life to me; is agreeable only as it may enable me to do good to these poor people. Oh! if I can do anything to serve them where so much blood has been shed in accursed war, I shall be happy. Many are recognised, but the persons who know May I never see another shot fired! Horrid, horrid war! Yet, how it wins upon and hardens one when and do not seem to realize the importance of telling in command. No young man can resist the temptathe public the same. Many is the instance, where a | tions-I defy them; but thirty and sixty are differ-

The Wonders.

This world of ours is filled with wonders. The creation, particularly, there is so much to has never been dreamed of-wheels within wheels, without computation or number. Let us take a rapid glance at the proofs of this statement. The polyphus, it is said, like the fabled bydra, receives new life from the knife which is lifted to destroy it. The fly-spider lays an egg as large as itself. There are four thousand and forty-one muscles in the outerpillar. Hooke discovered fourteen thousand mirrors in the eye of a drone; and to effect the respiration of a carp, thirteen thousand three hundred arteries, vessels, vins, bones, etc., are necessary, The body of every spider contains four little masses pierced with a multitude of imperceptible holes, each hole permitting the passage of a single thread; all the threads, to the amount of a thousand to each mass, join together when they come out, and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web; so that what we call a spider's thread, consists of more than four thousand united. Leuwenhock, by means of microscopes, observes spiders no bigger than a grain of sand, and which spun threads so fine that it took four thousand of them to equal in magnitude a single hair.

Spirits all Around us.

Rev. Dr. Peabody, the editor of the North American, has written in a very un Orthodox way about the presence of spiritual beings all around us, and we trust his friends will not take offence if we quote an extract into our columns, to show how perfectly he agrees with us in belief and sentiment. Says life; but if, even while here on earth, and while it is confined to the body, the mind has, through its material organs, a kind of universal presence, and its thought outstrips the sunbeam, can we suppose that population is very poorly off for chances, especially they who have advanced before us are more restricted in the Slave States. It is unfair to take away from in knowledge, and that eclipse falls on all that they them the few privileges they have so long enjoyed leave behind? I cannot doubt that this world lies without molestation, particularly without giving open to their view. With enlarged powers, with them any warning. Their case is cortainly a hard higher faculties, while all seems darkness to us, all one. The Philadelphia Ledger sums it up in this to their purer vision may be light around us. And manner, in speaking of what has been done with I would fain think that there are blessed thoughts them recently by the various States:-"The legisla- coming unawares, and holy impulses, and better purposes, which visit the soul in its struggles, from that no slave shall hereafter be emancipated, unless the helping love of the departed. Sure I am that removed from its limits; and any free person of our danger is not from too great faith in the reality of the spiritual world. That world, where is it? onment of not less than one, or more than five years. Is it not the teaching of reason, that it is a'l around A bill passed the Georgia legislature, which provides us? God grant that we may feel the moral power

. A Word to Leo Miller.

A subscriber, residing in Sparta, Canada West, legislature enacted that any free person of color may since against Spiritualism, that it is the desire of be sold to the highest bidder for debt. The same many who listened to him at that time, that he to leave at once, or submit to extreme measures. The a course of lectures on his experiences in and hapcity councils of Charleston, S. C., have so heavily py conversion to the only true religious philosophy. taxed the free colored people of that city, as must He would be cordially received by all classes. Here speedily result in universal abject poverty, or their is a large field to work in, he says—the harvest is great, but laborers none.

Literature.

EVIL: ITS SOURCE AND REMEDY. An Address, by A.

This is a Tract, or Treatise, of twenty-four pages. Its author's purpose is to define Evil, which includes an account of its source and nature ; to fairly and fully state the problem of its uses in the divine economy. the various complications of that problem, to portray the application of a spiritual theory of Evil to the human character—and not only the character of men affairs of men, to consider in what way the removal of evils may best be promoted and secured, to understand exactly what are the uses of evils of all sorts and what special service they do in divine economy, and the grand remedy for all Evil, as it is found by which to which to judge of the character of men operating everywhere in the minds of the human

Mr. Newton is a clear perceiver of Spiritual truth, a logical reasoner, and able to make himself understood by all reading and reflecting classes. He incidentally reviews Dr. Child's book, "Whatever Is, is Right," and throws out ideas in that connection which, though not new, are nevertheless very necessary to keep familiar with in reading that book or any other upon the same subject. There are many excellent points made by Mr. Newton in this tract. One cannot rise from its perusal without confessing that he apprehends his duty and all his spiritual church in any aspect without seeing a strong tinge relations much more clearly than before. He classi- of Saint Paul, coloring, at times, the whole fabric. fies the various kinds of evils as they deserve, making some mere stimulants to the soul and others its open side, were all Saint Paul. The advent of Christ profoes, showing that some are administered to the spiritual, as alteratives and other remedial agents are to the physical nature, and establishing the fact that all things are mixed in our organization, and that none of us can be all good or all bad. What | thoughts and words had not been embodied and carhe puts forth as the spiritual theory of Evil, cannot | ried out by the strong-minded and energetic people fail to find ready response in many a human mind.

Who surrounded him. It is not for me to say that Christianity would not have existed but for Christ, It is so plain, that if the world had been made perfeet in the first place, we should have nothing to do for ourselves, and hence that there would be no progress, no growth, no life. This is Tract No. 4, of Mr. Newton's writings, and deserves a wide circulation and universal perusal.

Sold by Bela Marsh, Boston, for five cents the single number, half a dollar per dozen.

FIRELIA: a practical and economical substitute for Cotton. Embracing a full description of the pro-cess of cottonizing flax, hemp, jute, china grass and other fibre, so that the same may be spun or woven upon either cotton or woollen machinery. Together with a history of the growth and manufacture of wool, cotton, flax, etc., in Europe and America. With illustrations from microscopical examinations. Boston: L. Burnett & Co., 22 Phoenix Building, 1861. For sale by Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co., 117 Washington street. Price

This book is a novelty that promises great usefulness to Northern and Western agriculturists, and indeed to the whole community. It presents a new feature of interest to the whole agricultural and he beheld in him the world's promised Messiah. As commercial world. It claims, and tells how the fibres of flax may be substituted for these of the cotton plant for the manufacture of shirting, sheeting, calico and cambric, making a stronger and more durable fabric with the same expense that cotton cloth is now made. Thus, Northern factories may be supplied from the products of Northern farms, without the importation of cotton from Southern States. The author very appropriately dedicates this volume " To the Farmers and Mechanics of the American Union, whose hearts and hands support the dignity of manual labor;" and every farmer and die would be Spiritualism. Padmire his indomitamenhanic cannot do less than peruse this volume ble energy, and his fidelity to his own ideas, together with interest and profit. If the claims presented by with his willingness to open his mind to the recepthe writer be practicable, which it has been stated have been proved by actual experiment, the cottonizing of flax will prove one of the most useful dis. coveries of the present age. Flax can be easily raised in all the Northern and Southern States, yielding other good man; and neither Paul nor Paine knew seed enough, which is always a cash article, and is sufficient to pay for its culture, and a handsome profit beside, in that part of the plant which is to be he went to the opposite extreme, and I think it is converted into cloth. Besides, the stemmy part of the plant, which is spoiled by the old process of "rot-Shaker. He regarded marriage as a thing of conting," and lost in shives without this process, in the venience, but recommended something better. He new mode is saved and may be used for a nutritious "fodder," the same bulk of which is better and more of mankind, than by absolute continuity-by strict palatable for cattle than the sweetest hay. The celibacy. He said men and women could serve the book also contains many interesting statistical facts about the production of cotton, wool and flax, their manufacture, which is immensely large, their importation and exportation. Let the metaphysical reader, as well as others, buy and read this book, and rest the mind, by turning it to a subject that is profitable to our earthly well being. Anything that tends to elevate the farming interest is noble, and deserves treme, for both are absolute monstrosities. Paul the attention and co operation of all.

Discussion.

Bro. John O. Harris writes us from Auburn, Me., that a discussion is to be held between G. B. Stebbins, of Rochester, N. Y., in the affirmative, and such person or persons as R. R. York, of Yarmouth, J. C. Welcome, of Richmond, and O. R. Fassett, of West Poland, Me., preachers of Second Advent doctrine, may select, in the negative. It will take place in Lewiston, Maine, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, April 29th and 30th, and May 1st and 2d. Each side to occupy half an hour, and two hours to be occupied each evening. Judge Smith is to be The Bible was written by earnest men, but mistaken, chairman of the discussion. The question is: Re- though we can do with it better than we can without solved, that reason, nature and philosophy teach it. that all men will live eternally; that the Bible is not the infallible and miraculcusly inspired word of God; and all questions of religious faith, of life and other was the vicarious atonement. There is nothimmortality, cannot be decided by its teachings.

Miss Mardinge at the Music Hall.

We learn that Miss Emma Hardinge is invited to speak at the Music Hall on Sunday morning, April trine. I do not depend upon any sacrifice for my sallath, by invitation of the Twenty-Eighth Congre-vation. If I am saved at all, I shall be not by grace, 14th, by invitation of the Twenty-Eighth Congregational Society, (the late Theodore Parker's.)

Mr. Mansfield in Boston.

April 15, at No. 12 Avon place, leading from Wash- would see woman as the salvation of the world—the ington street, between Nos. 262 and 266.

Force of Imagination .- One hot day at New Orleans, there was a great scarcity of ice in the marketindeed, the supply was very nearly exhausted, and they were wholly out at the St. Charles. What was to be done? A lucky thought came to the bar-keeper. He procured some thick, small pieces of plate glass, and threw them into the punch and juleps, nor was the trick discovered. The next day a vessel opportunely arrived, laden with the real, delectable and refreshing

THREE REPRESENTATIVE MEN .- Senator Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, commenced life as a shoemaker, Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, followed the same occupation, and Senator Douglas, of Illinois, was once a journeyman cabinet maker. These three mechanic. legislators represent their constituents with an ability and talent rarely witnessed, and never exhibited by any than those who sprung from the laboring ranks.

LUCY F. BIGELOW, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. - The

Reported for the Banner of Light. BOSTON SPIRITUAL CONFERENCE, WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 10, 1861.

Suppror .- " The Apostle Paul and his Writings. DR. H. F. GARDNER, Chairman.

Rev. Mn. Thaven. - This subject may be considered various aspects. I think Paul has given us some excellent rules by which to judge of and estimate and women, but of the book in which his own writings are contained. He said on one occasion, "Try the spirits, whether they be of God." And I understand by this that he would have us judge in the same manner of the character of a book. As a rule and women, Paul's command is not very much regarded by the masses of the people. As a test for official patronage, character is not regarded-only politics. In religion, too, church membership is of more account than Christian character. We must learn to judge of men and women by their hearts. and not by their heads.

Mr. WETHERBEE .- I believe in every age all the great examples of reformation that have become matters of history, have come generally at times when it was about right for them to make their appearance. In a great measure, if not altogether, such advance or change has been according to the character of the men associated with it; and I can never look at the As we see the church fifty or a hundred years ago, duced a great change in the religion of the Jews. I respect him, and can find no fault with what he taught, but he seems only like any other good man who has helped the civilization of the world. He would at this time have amounted to nothing if his more than science would if Newton had not lived. Jesus, with his love of humanity, and his overflowing affectional nature, lived out his religion, but he was without the power to impress it upon the age, without the aid of strong-minded people like Saint Paul, to save it from the wreck. But if Paul had not done this, some other one would. To-day I look upon Paul as the theologian of the world, though Christianity is one thing, and theology is another. We trace, I think, Christianity back to Christ; and with just as much truth as we trace back to Paul, the great fabric of ecclesiasticism—of theology. He was the power who embodied the doctrines of Christ, and spread them all over the world in the form we have them. HENRY C. WRIGHT .- I have a great admiration for Saul of Tarsus, and of Saint Paul, and I wish to call attention to one trait of his character-that of unfaltering fidelity to his convictions of right. One of the noblest men known in human history, is Saint Paul. He illustrated his nobleness of character, when he abandoned his position in society-a position of wealth, honor and respectability, gave up his future prospect in life, laying them all on the altar of the weak and crucified Jesus, because to his belief, I have a right to judge. Nothing is wrong because Saint Paul opposed it, nor right because he favored it. In respect to Paul's honesty and faithfulness to his highest convictions, he is an example for the world. Would to God all Spiritualists were as true and unshrinking in their devotion to their high and holy mission, as Paul was to his, and just as ready to forsake all things in order to vindicate the glorious truths of a religion which was to lift the mind from a plane of sensuality to one of purity and spirituality. Are you willing to make the sacrifices for principle that he did, and like him be cast down, but not disheartened? For us to live then, would be Spiritualism, and for us to tion of every higher ides. Thus much for the man: now as to his writings. The first question is, have the writings of Paul benefited mankind? Most assuiedly! Are they infallible truth? Most assuredly not more than the writings of Thomas Paine, or any the whole truth. Paul was brought up a polygamist, and polygamy was the doctrine and practice of the Jewish nation. But after he was converted, he would have been a thoroughgoing and consistent saw no other way to heal the diseases and sufferings Lord better single than married—because if they have got a wife or husband, they have got to do something for them. He recommended marriage only where it is better than something worse. He taught a doctrine of celibacy, and learned it from Christ; and how any believer in the New Testament can avoid the conviction the Shakers come to, I don't see. A Bible believer must be a Shaker or a Mormon-one or the other. I don't go for either exthought the celibacy extreme would save the world -but, to my mind, it would be as disastrous as the other. On this idea of Paul's, the Catholic Church has based the doctrine of monasteries, where the priests, compelled to live without marriage, may retire, and isolate themselves from the world, and also the nunnery system, where women may do the same thing. But then the monasteries and nunneries are always very near together, and are always married together. The monastery is the husband, and the nunnery the wife. How much better it would be for them to come out on a natural plane, and seek salvation through each other-though not unfrequently they bring damnation upon each other! I believe there is nothing in the Bible that teaches the true conjugal relationship of one man and one woman. Luther inferred Paul was a polygamist and jusing in the world worse than this doctrine of vicarious atonement. The doctrine of human sacrifices is the corner-stone upon which the Christian Church rests. That God demanded the life of one man to expiate the sins of the rest of the world, is a monstrous docbut by my own works. If you are saved, it will be because you can't help it, and no one can damn you. Mrs. Thomas -- Paul says, "Let your women keep silence, and besubject to their husbands;" but if he Mr. J. V. Mausfield may be found on and after was here now, his ideas would be enlarged. He crowning point of man's existence. Let her be at her husband's will only for her own good. She should speak the truth that flows from her lips, and man should profit by it; for she is his preserver and his salvation. MR. WRIGHT .- I stated that the writings of Paul had done great harm to the world in two respects. First, in the doctrine of marriage; secondly, in the doctrine of vicarious atonement. But in another respect have the writings of Paul done infinite mischief to the world-where he says woman was made for man, and not man for woman. This is a monstrous doctrine, and I do n't see how any woman can believe Paul was inspired when he wrote it. He says man is the glory of the world, and woman must look up to God through her husband. CHAUNCEY BARNES .- After taking a ride from the Rocky Mountains in Vermont, I feel abashed to ome here and hear the gentleman in question so severely handled, when he has not an opportunity to speak for himself here. As a Reformer and Spirit-ualist, I would not think it my duty to go and pry up what Brother Paul said and did, more than for you to pry up what I was doing some years ago. communication must have been mi-laid, if sent. believe he was sometimes inspired, as I am, and he What was the subject?

speak of his good deeds. There is too much faultfinding among Spiritualists. I believe Paul did better than any other medium ever did. As for woman, if analyzed, she will prove to be better made than man-more rarified in her composition. Let her rise and shive, for out of her wisdom is obtained. Let us take the Bible's truth and build upon it, and not pull it to pieces. A few years ago I drank, swore, and sold rum; but my angel mother came and taught me to be a man, and forsake the evil traffic. You don't get reformation in the Church, but in the lower spheres; and if Bro. Wright had been there, he would not find fault with anything. How should you like to have your works torn to pieces, and held up to ridicule, as you are doing to the works of those who are now inhabitants of the spirit-world? I am ashamed of you. You are retrograding.

Mrs. Cooler .- I have some sympathy with Saint Paul, as all professing Christians have. I think somewhere, he says, "Love your wife as you love yourself." If this rule were carried out, I think there would be no trouble. I have sometimes thought Paul was rather severe on women, and I've often wished he lived on earth now, so that I could speak to him face to face, about it. I think we should rely upon man for his strength and judgment, when we know they are better than our own. Man is God's noblest work, but woman is not a step behind him. I was myself brought up a rigid Roman Catholic. and was destined for the nunnery, but would not go I have had a bitter experience, but I thank God for it, for I have profited by it. I live on earth to bind up the broken hearted, and do what good I can, and I can sometimes shed a smile, if nothing more. sus had something else to think of, and Paul had not time to marry. This is probably the reason of the course they took.

Dr. GARDNER.-I have great respect for Paul, but little for his writings. I think him a noble character-a true man. One of the greatest evils the world is groaning under, is the fear of what Mrs. Grundy may have to say. Many fear the old lady, and dare not utter their highest thoughts. I am not afraid of the venerable dame, and so shall speak my con victions. Paul's was a character I would strive to imitate-both for his honesty and his unflinching integrity. He uttered his thoughts freely, and I applaud his outspoken honesty; but I have no sort sympathy with his sentiments in regard to polygamy and monogamy. I can erect a standard only for myself; and Paul erred in trying to erect a standard for other people. What is one man's meat is another's poison. I guard my own rights jealously, and wish to guard others as well as my own. I have no fault to find with Bro. Wright and what he has said, but if he had tried to erect a standard for all others, the same as his own nature requireswhich he has not done—I should oppose him. In some of his writings, I think Saint Paul fully and freely advocated free love, and in other places he advocated a total and entire abstinence from the sexual relationship; his doctrine of salvation through Christ is likewise somewhat obscure and contradictory. But after all, he is the most able and logical expounder of the Christian religion we have, in spite of his ambiguity and contradictions.

Mr. WRIGHT .- Paul says a great deal about the subjection of woman to man, but not a word about the subjection of man to woman. I believe this subugation should be mutual, or not at all. I am willing to be owned by a woman, but I must own my owner. I am subject to Gol, but the God is in my own soul. Let Paul be criticised; he ought to be-not for the sake of criticism, but to bring out the truth; though universal Christendom denounces you if you criticise anything claiming authority. I overhaul Paul, and criticise him as much as any one, and if he is here. I think he will approve of my course, subject to the God that speaks in both our souls.

REV. Mr. THAYER read some consecutive passage from the moralizings of Paul, to show his inconsis

The same subject will be discussed next week.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

ON THE FIRST PAGE OF THE BANNER-Poetry: "Judith, or the Mystery of Merton Marsh Manor," (con

SECOND PAGE-Poetry; A fine Spiritual Story, con." plete, by Phebe Owen; Notes Hermeneutical and Critical," by Horace Dresser, M. D., LL. D., to which we call the reader's attention especially.

THIRD PAGE- Spiritualism vs. Popular Theology,' by D. B. Hale ; Poetry-"The Ideal Actual," by Marco Milton; Spiritualism in St. Charles, Ill.; A letter from our racy correspondent, Bro. Warren Chase : An account of physical manifestations in Cleveland, with comments thereon, by C. D. Griswold, M. D.

FOURTH AND FIFTH PAGES-A host of good things ne spread before you, reader.

SIXTH AND SEVENTH PAGES-Three columns of Spirit Messages, spoken through Mrs. Conant-one on the subject of American Slavery, and one on Morals in America; Poetry; Spiritual Conference at Clinton Hall, New York; Obituary Notices; Movemenst of Lec arors ; Advertisements, etc.

EIGHTH PAGE-Pearls; A Lecture by Cora L. V. Hatch ; A Lecture by Miss Emma Hardinge.

Some anonymous writer still persists in sending us long communications of a "flighty" nature—i. e., of such vast development of mind, that we fear, should we publish them at the present time, none of our read ers would be able to comprehend them. We have giv en them into the custody of our printer's "imp." who will preserve them for the columns of the Banner when the time comes" that they will be "fully appreciated by a discriminating public." In order to save expense he had better not forward any more until the government becomes "frank" enough to allow all letters to go "free." So bide your time, Mr. Anonymous.

THE BRIDE. But where is she, the bridal flower, That must be made a wife ere noon?
She enters, glowing with the moon
Of Eden on its bridal bower.—[Tennyeon.

A correspondent at 'Arlington, Hancock county, Ohio, states that a few days since, Dr. Bushong, a member of the M. E. Church, of that place, while lying at the point of death, was conversing with Col. E. B. Vail, of the same place. Said he:

"Colonel, do you believe a spirit in the body can leave it and return?'' "Certainly," said the Colonel, "I do."

The doctor then remarked that he knew it could, for he had just been away, and could look down and se his emaciated form lying on the bed. He also advised his wife never to ridicule those of her neighbors who believe in Spiritualism, but to assist them if they were in need.

M. C. GAY has removed to 624 Washington street.

The N. Y. Commercial says the report that Jefferson Davis had telegraphed to Charleston not to fire on the vessels conveying men and supplies to Fort Sumter, is confirmed by despatches from Charleston to a shipping house in New York.

The Texas Legislature has passed a bill dividing the State into six Congressional districts. Also a bill to issue State bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, to be secured by a special tax.

The past winter was one of unexampled severity in Syria and Palestine. Snow storms were heavy and numerous; but they did the slaying before the snow

A Havana letter of the 5th to the N. Y. Express says that the annexation of Dominica to Spain is fully confirmed. The army to sustain the movement con sists of seven thousand men; together with several Spanish steam frigates. The whole matter only awaits the Queen's ratification.

A lady in Charleston, S. C., a few nights ago bad three children at a birth. Prentice makes the event an occasion to say that Charleston continues to be a port of delivery.

SCRATCHES ON HORSES .- Wash their feet and legs clean, and when dry, paint them with white lead. One or two dressings only will be needed.

We clip the following from the Boston correspon, dence of the Southbridge Journal: - .. Miss Hardinge, of Spiritualistic fame. Is now engaged in a noble work, and one that commends itself strongly to philanthropists and all lovers of humanity—that is, for the redemption and establishing a home for abandoned women, who are driven, from want or motives unfathomable, to a life of shame. And is n't it singular, that the severest opposition she receives is from her own sex? What a comment upon human nature!

The New Mexico correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, says the citizens of Arizona, in convention at Messila on the 16th ult., voted themselves out of the Union. Gen. C. J. Jones, formerly of Missouri, has announced himself as a candidate to represent Arizona in the Congress of the Confederate States.

Hon. Joseph T. Buckingham died at his residence, in Cambridge, on Thursday morning, April 11th, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. He was the oldest editor and printer in the State.

Hon. John G. Palfrey took possession of his office as Postmaster of Boston on the 11th inst.

The Massachusetts Legislature adjourned on the 11th inst., having been in session over three months.

It cost a young man in Somersworth, N. H., $4.92 for kissing a young lady there against her will. Cheap enough.

At Pensacola, from the Navy Yard to the new lighthouse, two and a half miles, all the rebel guns are arranged to bear on Fort Pickens and the channels.

AN EDITOR GETTING UP IN THE WORLD .- The Wash ingtonian says its editor is "on the wing."

Joseph S. Hewins, the driver of a stage running between Falmouth and Monument station on the Fairhaven Branch Railroad, has been indicted and held for trial before the U. S. Circuit Court, for robbing the Falmouth Mail pouch in October last, of a very valuable package intended for the Suffolk Bank, Boston, and containing $5,000 in money, notes, drafts, etc. Jenny kissed me when we met, Jumping from the chair she sat in ; Time, you thief i, who love to get Sweets into your list, put that in.

Say I'm weary, say I'm sad:
Say that health and wealth have missed me: Say I'm growing old, but add— Jenny kissed me!

The Massachusetts Legislature has granted $5000 to the Washingtonian Home, 36 Charles street, Boston. We learn that the Institution will shortly be removed to a more central location, where the accommodation will be ample.

HE WOULD HAVE HIS JOER .- In the Methodist Con ference, recently, the examination of elders was in progress, when the name of a Chaplain of a House of Correction being called, the Presiding Elder remarked that " as he had an increasing congregation, who were all, to a man, under conviction, his return to his appointment was unanimously desired, and it was hoped he would succeed in converting many of them, as they were very constant in attendance on his preaching."

TOLERATION OF CHRISTIANITY IN CHINA .- The Shan ghae Herald of Jan. 12th, says that an edict for the toleration of Christianity in China has been issued from Nankin, by a young prince, only twelve years old, son of Siutsieuen, "Celestial King" of China under the rebel dynasty.

The bill to suppress fortune telling before the Pennsylvania Legislature, was amended by the Senate, by striking out the provision relative to "spirit-rapping." During the debate upon the bill, Senator Finney said :

"I am rather inclined to think that there is a com munication between the material and spiritual world. I think, at least, there ought to be. If we can progress so far in humanity as to become assimilated to a spiritual state, we may have some such communication."

VOLUME NINE.

The features of the BANNER OF LIGHT for the fol lowing year will be as follows: "

Select Domestic Stories. Essays on Reform Topics. Progressive Editorials. A. E. Newton's Contributions. Spiritual Communications. Mrs. Conant's Department. Correspondence. Reports of Boston Conference.

Reports of New York Conference. Abstracts of Boston Spiritual Lectures. Abstracts of New York Spiritual Lectures. Poetry, Wit, News.

MRS. M. B. KENNEY Will speak as follows: In Charlestown April 21st and 28th; in New Bedford, May 5th and 12th; in Charlestown, May 19th and 26th; in Ouincy, June 21; in Newburyport, June 16th; in Gloucester, June 23d. Her address is Lawrence, Mass.

H. L. Bownen will give ticket lectures, or otherwise, on Mental and Physical Anatomy. Address, Natick, Mass.

DR. L. K. Coonley, Trance Speaker, and Mrs. S. A. Coon-LEY, Reciter of Poems, both Clairvoyants, and Spirit Seers expect to attend the Convention at Sturgis. Michigan, this month. They would be glad to devote their time for a few nonths to come in Michigan, Wisconsin, &c. Terms always at the ontion of those by whom they are employed. Address Sturgis, Mich., until further notice.

THE HERALD OF PROGRESS.

Andrew Jackson Davis, Editor, assisted by an association of able writers and correspondents. Cosmopolitan in every department of knowledge; its crystalized thoughts are in tended to furnish a beacon-light for the future Its columns are open to communications upon every subject. Its work is to elevate the mind, and to add to man's material com forts. Particular attention is given to the department of Health, with new and progressed methods of treating dia seare, by the Editor. Devoted to no sect, belonging to no party, not given to one idea, it presents itself to a liberaln inded community and asks their co-operation. The Herald of Progress is published every Saturday on a double folio of eight pages, for two dollars per annum, or one dollar for six months in advance. Specimen copies forwarded gratis. Address A. J. DAVIS & CO., 274 Canal street, New York.
April 20.

Brown's Bronchial Troches.

Whoover is troubled with Coughs, Hoarseness or Sore Throat will find these "Troches" a most admirable remedy Indeed, at this season of the year, those at all inclined to pronchial complaints should not be without them. They are prepared by Messrs. John I. Brown & Son, who, as Apothecaries, rank among the first in this city, and are sold by all the principal druggists .- [Boston Journal.

Western Lecturers's Conference.

For the general good of the cause in which we are engaged, and in co operation with our co-laborers of the East, we here-by invite the lecturers on Spiritualism and connected reforms to meet at Strigis, Michigan, on Tuesday, April, 23d, for a four deep. Conference on The objects of this meeting are substantially the same a

The objects of this meeting are substantially the same as these of the Quincy Convention, viz: A free exchange of views and sentiments, to the end that we may understand and appreciate each other, unlike our efforts, and establish a general co-oparative feeling among Reform Lecturers. The calling of a National Convention at Oswego, N. Y., in August next, by the "Quincy Committee." being contemplated, we hope that the Lecturers, as far as possible, will attend the Conference and thus become interested in and add strength to the general movement. Although this call is particularly to Lecturers, we heartily desire the attendance of all friends of reform to meet and enloy with us the exercises of the Conference and coloy with us the exercises of the Conto Lecturers, we heartily desire the attendance of all friends of reform to meet and enloy with us the exercises of the Conference. Our friends at Sturgis have kindly endered he used of the "Free Church," also the hospitality of their homes, and will do all in their power to make the Conference interesting and beneficial.

It is hoped that Lecturers who are interested and cannot attend, will indica o their co-operative views and suggestions by letter. Address "Lecturers' Conference," Sturgis, Michigan, care of J. G. Walte, or either of the manes attached hereto.

MRS. H. F. M. BROWN F. L. H. WILLIS, MRS. LAURA MCALPIN, FRANK L. WADSWORTE, ABRAM SMITH, CHARLES HOLT, N. FRANK WHITE, MRS. & E. WARNER, LAURA A. E. DEFORCE, A. B. French, S J. Finney, JAMES COOPER, M. D. HUDSON TUTTLE

NOTIQUE OF MEETINGS.

ALLSTON HALL, BURSTEAN PLACE, BOSTON.—Lectures are given here every Sunday afternoon at 2.43, and at 11 o'clock in the evening. The following speakers are engaged: hies Emma Hardinge will speak the four Sundays of April.

Miss Emma Hardinge will speak the four Bundays of April.

Consersance Hall No. 14 Bramsields entert. Boaton.—
The Boston Spiritual Conference meets every Wodnesday evening, at 712 o'clock. (The proceedings are reported for the Banner.) Bubject:—"St. Paul and his Writings."

A meeting is held every Thursday evening, at 71.2 o'clock, for the development of the religious nature, or the soulgrowth of Spiritualists. Jacob Edson. Chairman.

Bjiritual meetings are held every Sunday at 10 1-3 A. M. and at 3 and 7 1-2 P. M. P. Clark, Chairman.

OHARDESTOWN.—Sunday meetings are held regularly at Central Hall, afternoon and ovening. OAMBRIDGEFORT.—Meetings are held in Williams' Hall, Westorn Ayonue, every Sunday Afternoon and Evening, at 8 and 7 o'clock. Seats free to all. The following named speakers are engaged:—Mrs. Sponce through April; Mrs. Fannie B. Felton, May 12th; Miss Eannie Davis, May 10th; Miss Ennie Davis, May 10th and 26th; Mrs. R H. Burt, June 2d and 6th; Miss L. E. De-Force, June 16th, 23d and 86th; Mrs. F. O. Hyzer during August; Leo Miller, Esq., during October; Mrss Emma Hardinge, Sept. 1st and 8th.

Lowell.—The Spiritualists of this city hold regular meetings on Sundays, forenoon and afternoon in Wells's Hall, They have engaged the following speakers:—Mrs. M. S. Townsend during April: Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, during May; Miss Lizzie Doton in June; R. P. Ambler in July; Mrs. Mary M. Macumber in August; Warren Chase three first Sundays in September; Miss Fanny Davis in October.

GLOUGESTER.—Spiritual meetings are held every Sunday, at the Town Hall. The following named speakers are engaged: Mrs. Elizabeth Clough, April 21st.

New Bedvond,—Music Hail has been hired by the Spiritualists, Conference Meetings held Sunday mornings, and speaking by mediums, Afternoon and Evening. Speakers engaged:—Wm. E. Coroland, April 21st; F. Robinson, April 28; Mrs. M. B. Kenney, May 5th and 12th; Mrs. R. H. Burt, May 10th and 26; Miss. Faunic Davis, June 2d, 9th and 10th; Dr. A. B. Child, June 23d; Rev. S. Fellows, June 3ist; Miss. Emma Hardinge, Sept. 15th; Miss. Bell Scougall, Dec. 1st., 8th, 15th, and 22d.

Foxnono.—Meetings first, third and fifth Sundays of each month, in the Town Hall, at 11-2 and 71-4 P. M. Speakers engaged:—H. B. Storer, April 21.

POTNAM, CONN.—Engagements are made as follows:—Warren Chase, for May; Miss L. E. A. Dellorce, Aug.

Warren Chase, for May; Miss L. E. A. Delforce, Aug.

PORTLAND, MR.—The Spiritualists of this city hold regular meetings every Sunday in Lancastor Hall. Conference in the forencon. Lectures afternoon and evening, at 3 and 71.2 o'clock. Speakers enguged:—Miss F. Davis, April 21 and 23, and May 5 and 12; Mrs. M. S. Townsend, last two Sundays in May and the first Sunday in June; Mrs. M. M. Macumber last four Sundays in June; Miss Lizzic Doten during September; Miss Laura Delforce during October; Mrs. Anna
M. Middlebrook during November.

PROVIDENCE.—Speakers engaged:— W. Chase two last Sundays in April; Miss Emma Hardingo in May; Mrs. F. O. Hyzer in June; Laura E. Deforce in July; Mattie F. Hulett in Aug.; Mrs. A. M. Spence in Beptember; Mrs. M. S. Townsend the first two, and Mrs. M. M. Macumber the last two Sabbaths of Oct.; Belle Scougall in Nov.; Leo. Miller in Dac.

Oswego, N. Y .- Meetings are held every Bunday afternoon and evening at 2 and 7 1-2 o'clock r. m., in the Universalist Church, (termorly Episcopal.) Seats free, Steakers engaged:—E. V. Wilson, Asril; H. B. Storer, May; N. F. White, June; Miss Emma Hardinge, July; Miss A. W. Spraque two first Sundays in August; Mrs. A. A. Currier, November.

NEW YORK.—Meetings are held at Dodworth's Hall regu-larly every Sabbath. Mrs Cora L. V. Hatch will speak every Babbath till further notice. Meetings are held at Lamartine Hall, on the corner of 20th street and 8th Avenue, every Sunday morning.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TRRES.-A limited number of advertisements will be in sorted in this paper at fifteen cents per line for each inser-

MEDICAL TREATMENT—NUTRITIVE PRINCIPLY. DR. ALFRED G. EALL, M. D., PROFESSOR OF PRINCIPLES author of the New Theory of Medical Practice on the Nutrative Principle, may be consulted on the treatment of every form of humor, weakness and disease, in person or by letter, from any part of the country. It is restorative in its effects, reliable in the most prestrate cases, and justly worthy of the confidence of the afflicted. All the Medicines used are purely vegetable No 250 Washington Street, Boston Mass. Oct 1.

SPLENDID OFFERS—A CHANGE FOR ALLI Send stamp for full particulars to NORTON & CO., Manchester, N. H. April 20.

S. A. WAKEFIELD, Clairvoyant and Healing Medium, No. 3 Lathrop Place, leading from 299 Hanover street, Boston.

April 20.

AN IDEA

CONCERNING THE ORIGIN OF THE WORLD

AS RELATING TO NATURAL RELIGION. A NEW and interesting pamphlet by "D. M." Price ff-teen cents, postage two cents. Address A. J. DAVIS & GO., 274 Canal street, New York. 1t April 20.

REMOVAL.

REMOVAL.

MRS. A. C. LATHAM, of New York, Magnetic and Clairyoyant Physician. has removed to 292 Washington St., up. stairs, corner of Bedford St., Beston. Having completed arrangements with several Healing Mediums for a combination of power in all cases that shall require it, she feels escure in saying that her facilities for the cure of diseases are surpassed by none within her knowledge. Her past success and increased resources unite in guaranteeing that disease will surely be cured. Room open day and evening.

April 18.

Wheeler & Wilson's SEWING-MACHINES.

NEW IMPROVEMENTS!-REDUCED PRICES!

THE WHEELER & WILSON MANUFACTURING COM-- PANY, beg to state that in the reduction of the prices of their Sewing Machines, the public shall have the benefit of the decisions of the U.S. Courts in favor of their patents. This reduction is made in the belief that they will hereafter have no litigation expenses in defence o their rights. The Whoeler & Wilson Sewing Machines will now be sold at rates that will pay fair profits on the capital invested, cost of manufacture, and expense of making sales-such prices as wil enable the Company, as heretofore, to sell first-class machines, and warrant them in every particular.

They are adapted to every want that can be supplied by a Sewing Machine, and approved alike by Families, Dress Mak ers, Corset Makers, Galter Fitters, Shoe Binders, Vest Makers and Tailors generally. Each Machine complete with a Hemmer. OFFICE NO. 505 BROADWAY, N. Y.

SEND FOR A CIRCULAR. istf

MRS. C. F. AYRES will re-open her house, 1st of May, for the accommodation of a few boarders from the city, in the healthy and pleasant village of New Canaan, Ct., 21-2 hours from New York, by New Haven Railroad, four miles from Darien Depot. Every attention paid to the wishes and comforts of those who may favor her with their patronage. For particulars of lecation, facilities, &c., would refer to A. F. Carter, 21 Park Row, N. Y. 1t April 13.

TRACTS FOR THE PEOPLE. No. 1.—"Spiritualism Defined." 4 pages, 1 cent. No. 2.—"What does Spiritualism Teach?" 4 pages, 1

cont.

No. 3.—" Spiritual Progression." 8 pages, 2 cents.

No. 4.—" Evil: 1ts Source and Remedy." 24 pages, 5 cents.

The whole series sent by mall, postpad; on receipt of 10 cents in stamps. Address A. E. NEWTON, Box 2335, Boston.

Sold also by BELA MARSII, and Spiritualist booksellers, gen.

A HIGHLY INTERESTING WORK, THE Narrative of Dr. H. A. Ackley, late of Cleveland, Ohio, since his entrance into Spirit-life. Price 10 cents. For sale by BELA MARSH, 14 Bromfield street, Boston April 6.

SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.—144 propositions, proved affirmatively and negatively, by quotations from Scripture, without comment. Says a correspondent of the Herald of Progress: "The most_studious reader of the Bible will be amazed and overwhelmed at every stop in going over these pages, to find how numerous and point-blank are the contradictions." Sixth edition. Price 15 cents, post paid—eight for a dollar. Sold by the publishers, A. J. DAVIS & CO., 274 Canal street, N. Y., and by all liberal Bookeellers.

DR. S. B. SMITH'S FIFTY DROP MAGNETIC MACHINE,"

Wonderful Improvement in Magnetic Machines. Invented by Dr. S. B. Smith, of 322 Canal St. New York, by which his DIRECT CURRENT Magnetic Machine is increas-ed in power ten-fold, reducible also to a minimum power for EXTRACTING TEETH WITHOUT PAIN. The Zines never require cleaning. Expense of running one cent a week. With full directions for its medical use and for extracting teeth without pain. PRICE, $13.

Sout by Express to all points of the Union. Address

DR. SAMUEL B. SMITH. 322 Canal St., Nw York B

THE NEW BRICK MACHINE

TS gradually extending over the United States and Canada B gradually extending over the Onice Gates and Canada — is worked by one man, by borse and by steam—makes from 4000 to 25,000 bricks a day—costs from $75 to $400. For further particulars in a pamphlet giving full instructions on brick setting and burning, address, enclosing three stamps, FRANCIS H. SMITH, Baltimore.

Dec. 8. cop6m

The Messenger.

Each message in this department of the Bannan we claim was spoken by the spirit where name it bears, through Mas, J. H. Conant, while in a condition called the Trance. They are not published on account of literary merit, but as tests of spirit communion to those friends who may re-as tests of spiris communion to those friends who may recognize them.

We hope to show that spirits carry the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond, and to do away with the erroneous idea that they are more than range beings. We believe the public should know of the spirit-world as it is—should learn that there is evil as well as good in it.

We ask the reader to receive no dectrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his reason. Each expresses so much of truth as he perceives—

MESSAGES TO BE PUBLISHED.

The communications given by the following named spirits will be published in regular course. Will those who read one from any one they recognize, write us whether true or Aursday, Feb. 14.—How may principles are there in the economy of nature? and does not overy epoch in life give us a new principle? David Bartlett, Augusta, Mo.; Josiah S. Parker; Mary Louisa Shaw; Juliet Hersey.

We shall re-open our Circle Rooms, for the reception of messages for this department our paper, on Tuesday, April 16th, at three o'clock in the afternoon.

We find our present room, which was once ample, too limited to accommodate the crowds that throng to witness the manifestations-so that, if we continue them on the free system, we must engage a larger room than that we now occupy. We shall hereafter charge An Admittance fre of Ten Cents to each sitting.

Is not American Slavery Unconstitutional?

The question we have before us at this time, is one we have already answered. Nevertheless, to satisfy more fully the mind of him who seeks to know further, we will again answer the question-Is not American slavery unconstitutional, and should not every individual of the United States do all he is able to do, to defend the Constitution? We have before affirmed that American slavery is not unconstitutional. Inasmuch as the Constitution has and does suffer slavery to exist, it upholds it; so far it sanctions it, so far it becomes its protector.

And again, inasmuch as the Constituion gives to every State the right to make her own laws, the Constitution has no right to, nor does it in any way interfere with the laws made by any of the States. We again affirm that we do not deny that slavery is evil in the abstract; that it has been and is the cause of much suffering both in the past and present. But that there is a still greater evil hanging over the emancipated slave we also see. Incapable of combating with that with which you are daily brought in contact, inasmuch as he is far below you mentally, it is better, far better for him to remain in slavery until nature has lifted him to a standard wherefrom he may defend himself.

Jesus Christ was said to have permitted the devils to enter into a herd of swine, and they ran to the river and wore choked. Many question the truth of this, and perceive it unjust. But Jesus perceived it differently; had he not suffered the devils to have entered into the herd of swine, humanity would have been a greater sufferer. We do not say the story is correct as you have it, but we use it as an illustration.

Inasmuch as Jesus suffered the devil to do this, he upheld him, sanctified his act; and inasmuch as God permits slavory, He sanotifies it, upholds it, and it is a part of His governmental law.

We would not counsel you to turn traitor to your country for your own interests, the interest of the slave, or of anything you come in contact with, but we will ask you to see both sides of the question, and if ever you lend your power in any direction, be sure you do not step upon your neighbor's rights. Be sure, in defending individual rights, you do not tear down the rights of a nation. Take not the wild words that come to you by the breath of slander as a positive truth, but see, and know if it be possible for you to do so, as individuals.

You at the North will always stand up for what you consider to be individual rights. Take the rum-seller. When the Maine law was introduced into your statutes, he said, "I have a right to buy and sell liquor by virtue of your own State Constitution, and I will never surrender my rights." The defenders of the law sought to break down intemperance by the law, but did they do it? No. for the rumsellers saw that they were taking means that were not lawful, and they stood up in their knowledge and affirmed the right to do as they did. Now the rum-sellers, many of them, are standing up in the face of the South and saying, "I will send of our power to overcome you, and you shall live by our laws, for they are best." Is that right? Have not the men of the South the right to stand up and defend their rights? Have they not the right to stand up and say, "inasmuch as the Constitution recognized slavery and permitted it, I will defend my

They have the right to do this; but it would be far better if you of the North and your brethren of the South should come together in unity, each giving to the other their rights. Too many engaged in the present conflict are fighting for individual supremacy. Instead of fighting for the supremacy of the Nation as a Nation, the power is centered in the immediate circle of home or self, and their arms are short, their sight is short, and their judgment is If they would be what they say they desire to be, able defenders of the Constitution and of right let them seek to uphold the Nation; let them subserve her interests, and instead of attempting to divide, let them unite. When you are willing to bring your individual selves into the sunlight, and be told of your faults, then you may think you are standing upon a sound platform. But until you are willing to take this position, in the name of God do not strive to make any one clse take it. If you both have faults, try to see these faults by your own, and instead of saying to your brother, "you are evil, and I must put you under my feet." try to teach him he is Godlike, and he will rise in the scale of wisdom much faster than by the application of the law of

And in regard to the slave, again we affirm, if you would elevate the slave to your standard of power, give of your own life forces. This you must What would be liberty to the slave who has not Anglo-Saxon blood in his veins. You had better cast him into the ocean with a millstone about his neck, than to give him liberty he cannot know

You need not wrap yourself up in your self rightcousness and say these are evil teachings, for if Nature tells us this is the only way by which the slave can be brought up to your standard, believe us there is no power to gainsay it.

We will say to you who are striving so strenuously to liberate the slave, give him not only liberty, but power to use it. Give him not only of your gold and silver, not only of your external conditions of life. but give him of your powers as human beings, bring him up to your standard according to Nature's law

Thus, according to our opinion, American slavery is not only constitutional, but Christian. Inasmuch as the minds of this generation are not willing to conform to Nature's law strictly, but are more willing to serve that law that will not serve them well; inasmuch as they are willing to sail on the sea of erroneous opinion, rather than on Nature's sea, then it is better for the slave to be bonded. The time is not far distant when our ideas as given here to-day will be better appreciated because better understood.

Charles T. Wentworth.

I have got free at last. I served three years in a mad house; but I'm free at last. I 've got through, and it's now my privilege to speak for myself. I am from Worcester. I left there about seven months since, and glad enough was I when I knew I had My disease was softening of the brain, in connection with disease of the stomach. Dyspepsia was the first feature. If that had been properly attended to. I should not have been insanc. I was insane, but not all the time, for there were times I degenerate nor fall from its high position.

could remember and look back to see I was not insano.

I have left a daughter and two sons. They do n't know I can come back and speak; but I want they should, for there's a way by which I can point out theirs. They need not fear to trust my sanity now. for I have outlived all the insane part of my nature. That was the body, and glad am I to get rid of it. Though his internal be true and pure, yet in the extwould not be encumbered with it again for ten ternal he has wandered from his God.

Innsmuch as he believes that God has yielded up leave any work undone, we have to come back and crooked paths straight by it.

There are many things pertaining to my family connections that I wish to remain forever and over in the silence of the past. I'm not going to speak No, we answer, and Nature thunders in voices of of them here to day, nor should I if I met any of my deepest tone, No. You may as well ask if God has family; so they need n't think of that. I'm going not been dethroned-if he has not given up his power to say as little here as will answer my purpose.

My name was Charles T. Wentworth. I lived on earth fifty-two, most fifty-three years. In early life I was in the dry goods business. I do n't care to Oh, thou sc-alled man of God, come down from say anything about business matters after that the temple accreted by man, and enter into the holy time. I would wish we could use memory only in a of holies in thine own being—that temple not made certain direction; but it seems it covers almost with hands, eternal in the heavens, and ask if at everything we ever walked over. And the grave, any time God has forgotten his own. and all the conditions we are called upon to pass through, can't blot out anything from the page of memory. Anything we have passed through in our lives, we have the power to reproduce in thought again. Whenever we pass through with anything similar, the springs of memory are touched, and we pass through it again.

Now I'm done for the day.

Alice De Lacy.

My name was Alice De Lacy. My father is in Philadelphia, I did n't die with my father. I died at Montreal, at the Catholic school. I was seventeen years old. I had been in Montreal but two and a half years. I was to leave the school this season. I wish to speak to my father—I must. Father Jerome brings me here, and says, "Speak, and you will find your way to your home." He has been dead seven years. He was priest of St. Mary's Chapel, Montreal.

So you write to William De Lacy, and say Alice came here from Montreal, and wished to speak with him. Yes, I died of fever brought into our school by visitors on last distribution day.

Samuel Robbins.

I'm Samuel Robbins. Twenty years ago I lived in Salem, Mass. There is a question pending with some who remain of my family, with regard to the truth or falsity of Modern Spiritualism; and they say if it be true, let some of the family come—let them come to strangers, and speak of things known only to us and themselves, and we'll believe.

In the family of one who is concerned, nearly oncerned with the question, there is a book which was mine, and in that book on the fly leaf, is written these words: "If a man die, shall he live again? and if he live again, when shall he live, and where? Midnight thoughts of Samuel Robbins."

Now I'm going to throw out a question—it is this: If I, Samuel Robbins, did not come to tell what is therein written, who did? Now, if they can decide who did come and tell, let them; for the book has been laid aside for years, although it is don't come here with my brains in one place and laid aside as a sacred relic—they will save me or myself in another. James Haggerty received your others the trouble of answering it. If they cannot paper from his consin in Liverpool, and when my tell, they may suppose the writer did come and tell the words; and if he did, Modern Spiritualism is to let you know it is all true. If he knows his duty, true, maybe; and if it be truth, it is worthy of a good Christian investigation.

There, I'll leave this with them. It's as much as their weak stomachs can digest at this time. When they get strong, I'll give them stronger food.

Annie Smith.

My much loved father, the light is shining within me, through the efforts you are making to enlighten your family and mortal acquaintances. So, dear father, if you see no good results from your efforts in your range of life, do not stop working, as the angels receive light thereby. Love from me to all.

William Jones.

The world moves on just as though I had not died. I wish to communicate with my family. Feb. 12. WILLIAM JONES, of New Ham Morals in America.

Have not morality and religion greatly degenerated in America, on account of her long continued national

This is the question given us to discuss this after-

At the outset we have to tell our questioner that morality is one thing and religion another. Morality is but the child of education. The moral law has en born of educational principle, inasmuch as it belongs only to the external of your life.

Religion is an inherent quality of the soul. Nothng can change it; no evil, however great, can affect it in any way. Inasmuch as it is of Deity, it can no more be affected by the many evils that exist among you, than can Deity himself be affected.

Those conditions or manifestations of life which our questioner decides are positively evil, we cannot consider such, seeing as we do that every cause must of necessity bring forth a legitimate effect, which is as essential and natural as the cause. And every effect in your midst has a something to do with your purification and elevation.

Those things, which seem to be national avils and in the abstract are such, are simply the result of education, or perverted morality, or assumed law which has not had its origin in that best of all rules given by Confucius and Aristotle, and demonstrated hrough Jesus.

If there is a dividing line between religion and norality, let us consider what it is.

Nature has drawn it, and thus it must be good nd right. Nature claims all religion as her own. All pure and undefiled religion is natural, perfectly so, and Nature proves true to her own always, and prevents it from being trespassed upon by any external influences. These seeming evils rise like mountains in your midst, it is true; but your religion, that which is found in Nature, or has its origin in God, or is a result of Deity working through humanity, cannot be affected, though mountains of ovil, death and hell may rise up and oppose you.

These long continued national evils! Our interrogator speaks of them as though they were legion -and doubtless they are so to him, for he perceives the product only of one condition, or the outward manifestation of such a moral law as you are blessed with. And again he says that moral law is perverted to a certain extent, and that it gives your inharmonious unfoldment. One is demonstrated through American slavery. It comes before the mind of the abolitionist in darkness and terror; it carries a ban ner stained with blood and a yoke of oppression. But to one who has not embraced these abolition principles, it is but a seeming evil, it is devoid of all its power and stands forth as a thing God will ake care of in his own time and way. Now here is a difference of opinion, a difference of morals, and a difference of religion. But all are born of education. You may differ as widely in all but the God principle, but you cannot differ in that. One may believe it is an evil, another an evil in the abstract; and all have to do with the moral law privilege of speaking with some who are friendly to alone. But man's religious law is self-existent-it had no beginning, and has no end, and nothing can draw it from him at any time. Think you the slaveholder has no religion of his own? Verily he has. His organism differs from down his law to serve any moral law-

That religion that always had existence in hu-

These seeming differences are but the shaking off of one manifestation and putting on another, while the real essence, the real life principle, must always be the same.

Though our interrogator believes in God, and to them some things it is necessary for them to do invokes his blessing one day in seven, we fear he in order to make straight my affairs, which are now forgets his God; has not the firm reliance upon Jehovah he should have, considering his holy calling. We fear he may possibly degenerate in the external.

of my property was expended for me in taking care one portion of His power to evil, we have a right to of my wants. But that snarled up part, I can believe he has wandered from the true God and straighten in ten minutes, if they give a chance. I did think once that when we died we left for-ever the things of this world; but it seems if we ture, and there communed with God. Perhaps he has wandered among the externals of life to find finish it; and I think it is a good way, for we make God, whereas man can only find his God in his own

Have not religion and morality greatly degenerated in America?

No, we answer, and Nature thunders in voices of Feb. 13.

John, O'Donnelly.

There has been much said about coming back in my country, but little believed. I made a promiso that I would come and speak in America, should I find I could. I was barn and died in Newmarket, in Ireland. My name was John O'Donnelly. I come to most sixty one years.

Our place was beset with strange noises all about, for months. The noises declared themselves to be spirits. I myself was sick at the time.

I have got four boys and two girls—John, Michael,

Patrick, James, Catherine and Mary-all living, every one. I was husbandman. I took care of a place, and

I made a promise that if I could come, I would, and tell what I could about the noises in our place. That they were by spirits, I must say, but whom I have not yet found out. I find myself well capable of speaking, and I do n't care to come here any more, now that I have kept my promise. But I'd like to find some other way to make myself understood, other than by wisdom we had before I died. That's a bad way to make ourselves known, for you 'll sometimes get the good, and sometimes the wrong, for a great many make these noises, and you shall be perplexed to find the right one come. I know well your opinion of the Irish; but you have only known that class who cannot live in their own country because of their poverty and ignorance I'm not going to say I am a whit better, but I did not have to leave my country, nor did I—so I may say I belonged to the higher class. Should my letter go right, I hope to give my countrymen light where it 's all talk now. It's a deal you hear about it in America, and about us; but there is little seen of it with paper from his cousin in Liverpool, and when my letter is published, I'll ask him to write you about it, and does it, you'll know it is true, and when he writes you about it, you may publish it, if he allows

I shall do all I can to prove this truth-not be cause it will put down the Catholic religion, but be-cause it will make it better. In our church, we have always held to communion of saints, and it will only be adding a little more to it. It's not all the priests, who tell you they are opposed to it, who are. Would James Haggerty tell the people he believed it, if he had not facts enough to prove it to the people, so it might be good and useful to them?

Now, by the grace of God and all the saints, I Il come again, after you hear from Haggerty, and learn I'm true. Good day to you.

Margaret Ellen Cobbett.

Oh God, to hear of heaven before you die, and then to find more of hell than heaven! I've left four lit-tle children, the oldest only thirteen years old. They have been separated, since my death, and I see them without any natural protector and guide, drifting about on the cold billows of life. And could I rest in heaven? No. God never made a heaven large enough to hold a mother who sees her children left on earth in m sery. I was sick near three years, of consumption, part of the time confined to my bed, part of the time able to be round and look after my children. I have been in the spirit-world most three years, and I may say I have been in hell most three years, for I have never seen the time I have been satisfied about my children. I was born in Boston; shortly after marriago we moved to New Bedford. My husband was a sea-faring man and was lost at sea from the barque Lady Jane Grey. Since that event I have seen more of the hard side of life than anything else. I am assisted here to-day by an old friend of mine, who did much for me, both spiritually and physically, when I and he were in the body. His name was Whittredgea physician, of New Bedford. He helps me here today, that I may help my children. You talk of slavery. There is more slavery with you than at the South. Let a parent leave children, with no one to take care of them here, and if they are not put down lower than the slaves at the South I am not here to-day.

I call upon those people who have the care of my children to treat them well. Thank God, the grave does not hold us; consumption does not kill our spirits. He has provided a way to return, and although the way gives us much of heaven, it gives us of hell also, for we see much of suffering. Oh, you mothers, pray earnestly that God will not take you from your children, and I know he will hear your prayer, for it is natural. I believe, if I had called aloud to nature and nature's God, death would have stayed away-for if we call aloud to nature's God he must answer it. The people who have charge of two of my children, are intimate acquaintances of the physician who assists me to come here, and he joins with me in asking them, if they have any humanity in them, to treat those children well. They are in New Bedford. If they were in Boston, I'd go in spite of your closed doors, to them and speak to them; for a mother's love is strong, when set in the right current.

My husband's name was John Cobbett, and mine was Margaret Ellen. My children's names are Ellen John, Sophronia and Louis.

Oh, if I could have retained my belief in a personal devil, I should have been glad, for I should have thought that some of the dark shades of the picture of life were made by him. But to know they are made because man does not understand God or himselfl

Now, before I go, I call in the name of God, upon those folks to do right—if they have anything like human souls, to do right, and not suppose, because I am dead, I cannot see-for death has of late been robbed of all power, and life has been clothed with power to take upon itself all conditions, to do away with death. I want Doctor Whittredge to have the him, and I hope he will have that privilege soon.

Billy Murray.

Darned good place, here, mister. I just comeyours, and his religion differs. But the same God haint been here but little while. I got a chance to upholds and feeds him; and if our questioner will come back pretty soon after, I kicked the bucket. see God as he is, he will see that he cannot lay I used to live out in East Cambridge. I was twelve years old when my mother died, and the old man got to being drunk pretty often, and then I got pretty manity, cannot now be trampled upon, nor can it bad, and I was carried to the Reform School, and took sick, and went to the Island. I have only been | knowledge of their characters, and when communi- God and Creator. He is my father, who dandled me dead here a little while, and I promised the boys I'd come back. My name was Billy Murray, and I want to send a letter to Judge Maine. He's the best fellow you ever saw; he used to come and talk to the boys once in a while. I said I'd come back and speak to the boys if I could, and I got a chance, after trying four or five times. But my mother wants me to speak to the old man. He gets hauled up before the Police Court, and gets sent over. Mother thinks there's a chance to make him over. Mother thinks there's a chance to make him over. I don't. I haint forget how he kicked me down stairs. We lived near the Crossing of the Lowell tality, all the provious patients of granted, or put them to the test of rigid examination? It is sour duty, and a duty which we are fully competent to perform, to scrutinize this matter severely—for truth does not require we shall take it for granted, but asks to be placed in the cruelble of inquiry, knowing it will come out like pure gold. We have facts to make a religion as demonstrable as the multiplication table; and we for my rights and got sent up to the school, where which, blindly accepted by our forefathers, made up you get treated pretty well. They do n't dare to that drama of religion which is now obsolete—overtreat you bad there, for the Judge comes down once turned—a mere matter of history.

In a while, and the boys tell of it.

Dr. Young.—A Mr. Ives once we Tell Judge Maine I'm pretty happy. I'm one of and identified, through raps, a person who had the boys that sung to please him when he was down there. If he wants to hear good nice singing, he better come where 1 am now. They have nice sing-but whom he did not know was dead. He potained but whom he did not know was dead. He potained ing here, and no cracked voices.

Joseph Astor.

Written for the Banner of Light.

ANGEL WHISPERS. BY BLIZA A. PETTSINGER.

At the hour when Nature waketh From her quiet, dewy sleep-When the morn in beauty breaketh, Whispers near me softly creep.

O'er the fields I often wander. In the twilight's dewy haze, When my memory loves to ponder On the friends of early days.

Then I hear these voices round me, Hear some loved and cherished tone. That in memory long has bound me With a magic all its own.

Fancy, with unerring finger, Paints a face, a cherished form, That around me loves to linger With a never-dying charm. Oft my soul is tried and weary

With some task it fondly sought: Then they ever come to cheer me, Leading me from thought to thought. If my mind is e'er uncertain

In pursuing what is right, Then they gently lift the curtain That enwraps the inner light. Oh, these friends so kind and loving!

That whisper now so softly near, Each brave act and thought approving-Bid me "onward-never fear." Much I love this way of teaching

That unfolds the inner light; Yes, much better than the preaching That involves the soul in night. San Francisco, Feb. 12, 1861.

Reported for the Banner of Light. SPIRITUAL CONFERENCE, AT CLINTON HALL, NEW YORK.

Tuesday Evening, March 26, 1861.

QUESTION :- The Identification of Spirits.

Dr. HALLOCK .- On what authority do I affirm that sphere of usefulness. For example, the principle and evidence on which I found my belief in the identity of what purports to be the spirit of my dethe pretensions of those who claim to be in communication with more exalted spirits, historical personages, who have led the thoughts of the ages. For if I cannot make out the identity of my father whom I have known, how is my brother to make out the identity of a man whom he has never known? And may it not be, that while I am competent to satisfy myself as to my father, there is a wide margin of doubt in the case of one who thinks he has identified Swedenborg, Paul, or other great men? Now all the collateral questions hang upon this of identity, and hence its prominent particular bearing. For as I have before said, if it can be shown world has been based in its origin on the supposed ability of the seer to identify either God or one of his holy angels. Now it is evident that the certainty of our identification of any individual must be in direct proporculiar characteristics. I can add nothing to the argument of Dr. Gray, as regards the moral side of this question. It is good, is it not, for me to know that my father still lives, and cares more than before for me. Now, by virtue of the demonstrated relations between the good and the true, it seems a nccessary inference, that what purports to be my father and communicates with me in a manner which bears out the assertion, is as true as the good is good. Take another case in my own experience. While in a congregation at church, one Sunday morning, with my attention entirely directed to the preacher, I saw the actual form of three individuals—two of whom had borne to me the most intimate relations which two human beings could bear to a third; the other I did not recognize, and it afterwards proved to be an infant sister whom I had never seen. I saw them as distinctly, and knew them as well, as I see and know my friends in this hall. Now could that have been the exercise of a demoniac power, representing itself in the visible forms of those I had loved most dearly? Is it like a devil to produce what is good? Is it like a malignant being to pro-Or, is it like an exalted angel to practice such a deto the conclusion that such communications must proceed from the spirits themselves-the good and see their truth. But all this class of demonstrative evidence is shut out when we come to spirits whom we have not known-mere historical persons. How is a man to know absolutely that he is talking with Swedenborg, Bacon, Paul, &c.? How could Moses know he was talking with God, face to face? Yet we find of spirits he had never seen in life. In the case of dead here a little while, and I promised the boys I'd cations, purporting to be from them, bear prima facto stairs. We lived near the Crossing of the Lowell tality, all the previous notions of the other life, of Railroad, on the right hand side going out from inspiration, &c., have been totally reversed by Mod-Boston.

If I was one of that woman's young ones, I'd fight of determining the real value of those phenomena

Dr. Young .- A Mr. Ives once went to a medium

g here, and no cracked voices.

I do n't know exime phenomena through four different mediums in succession, before he found out that the spirit in-I've been dead some months. I do n't know exactly how many. I do n't want to tell what I do n't know, for if I do, they went to tell what I do n't know, for if I do, they went let me come again.

I was at the Reform School for fighting the old man. He kicked me, and I fired a stick of wood at him; but the Court said I was unruly and bad. The bad was all in him. Mother thinks if we could the thought he saw and conversed with his wife, wether and silter and si talk to him he'd be better; but why did n't he stop mother and sister; and all the communications and drinking when mother died? Maybe he's over, somewhere, now. I do n't like him, if he is my father. Mother may do the talking. I wont. I am fafraid he'd kick me down stairs, if we were both up here.

How the may do the talking if he is my father. Mother may do the talking. I wont. I am here been from his memory and reflected back through his senses. Spiritual manifestations must come, and come wholeful to many and reflected back through his senses. Spiritual manifestations must come, and come wholeful the many description and hallucination, or that of truth and reality. Now, Dr. Hallock cannot see what purpose could be served by deceiving him in the case referred to, yet, "Sing, yea, write the Lord a new song, for lo, he cometh to redeem his people." These are the words called for that you might know of the truth of my coming from your secret session.

The Jews are falsely represented as having worshipped the Delty of the Universe, while, in fact, they produce the continuous recognized only the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, a mere local Divinity—and the inference 19 that spirits do idencify themselves, but have often pretended they were others than they really were. When spirits rap out that they are such and such distinguished persons, why should they be discredited, any more than when they purport to be our fathers and sisters? And would any spirit out of the spirit world thrust himself into a circle and pretend to be my father, when that very father's spirit was all the while at my side? We have got to assert in general terms that spirit manifestations are genuine; and accept them, in all cases where we cannot prove to the contrary. Until skepticism came in, almost every one went from the circle joyful, at the idea of having communicated with spiritfriends. Now all is coldness and doubt; and, if this goes on, diabolism will be revived and reign over us Mrs. French.-I have sufficient evidence on this question to make me a devout believer in the great fact that our friends do verily communicate with us —and amongst the best is that given by my mother and dear children. They seem to take a more lively interest in my welfare than any other spirits. I know them from the sweet feelings, the affectionate interest in myself, which they manifest. Long before the spiritual phenomena were generally known, these loved friends came and communicated with me as they do now. I saw them in my normal condition, and recognized them as, beyond doubt, the persons they purported to be. My mother's spirit has presented itself, so that two or three other persons present at the time, who were not mediums, recognized her-and she subsequently spoke to me in another room, and informed me of the circumstances of her death, precisely as afterwards confirmed by letters which had not then reached me. I had a brother in California, who appeared to me for three successive nights, while I was perfectly wide awake, and told me he had lost his life, and of various family circumstances I did not then know; all of which were afterward fully confirmed from distant sources. My children come and communicate with me, and I know them well, and all my living children readily recognize their style and manner. The question of importance to me in connection with all this is not that of identity, but of the benefit to be derived from this knowledge and communication. Its object is our improvement and growth in wisdom, and that we may so order our lives here as to result in our advantage. In this way I know my communications are greatly to my advantage. I am advised against doing what would be foolish and unjust to myself and others-and every point is placed in such DR. HALLOCK.—On what authority do I affirm that a light as appeals to my judgment and reason. My spirits with whom I converse are those of my departed relatives? The question may be stated in they never flatter me that I am reserved for a great this way, in its most direct and practical senses, but this way; in its most direct and practical sense; but mission, and let me fold my haudein expectant indethis way, in its index direct state of the s authoritarian, or what you please, I gladly and unquestioningly acquiesce in the counsels of what is so parted father, furnish a standard by which to try ed me that, at this time, I do not know what it is to evidently superior. My spirit friends have so trainhave a revengeful thought, because they have so often told me that such a feeling retards spiritual progression. They have borne me up in the midst of trials, from which I never could have risen by the aid of earthly friendship. These came upon me as soon as I had finally thrown off the convenient garb of the popular religion; but, at the worst, my toils and ares seem light compared with the joys I have reaped from spirit communion with my departed friends. know when they come, and it matters not what I am doing; if they have a thought to present which is more important, it is immediately given forth. Last Sunday, for instance, when at the Conference that any single man has survived the death of the with Dr. Green, I became, after a while, uncontrollabody, that is sufficient to establish the immortality bly restless, although much interested in the discusof all men. But the first or minor proposition rises sion going on, and was finally obliged to obey the almost into the dignity of a major, when we reflect summons thus given me, and return home. There I that, in all ages, the religious government of the found a man awaiting me, and suffering such agony as he could not have endured much longer. Although I had never had such a case before, I was prompted immediately as to what was to be done, and, in less than fifteen minutes, the patient was wholly relieved, and has not suffered since. There was evidence of tion to the closeness of our acquaintance with his pelidentity to me. In such cases as this, I am aided by a spirit-physician, of whose identity I am so well satisfied, that any directions coming from him I obey to the very letter, and have never had occasion to repent of doing so. My spirit-friends generally talk audibly to me, and on two or three occasions, those have heard them who were not Spiritualists.

MR. CAMPBELL had three questions which he wish ed to ask Spiritualists, and to which he was ready to wait a reasonable time for answers, viz., 1st-What is the religious dispensation under which Spiritualists suppose themselves to live? 2d-Is any dependence whatever to be placed on the phonomena of Spiritualism? 3d-Spiritualists, as a class, profess to cultivate what they call Harmonial Philosophy. What is the cause of the great discrepancy between their preaching and their practice, in this respect?

Dr. Gray said that, in the earliest ages men made their religion from what they saw in the changes of the seasons and the work of the Deity in the production of the fruits of the earth. They worshiped the heaven. ly bodies as so many animated agents of that Delty. Next to this astronomical phase of religion, came duce that which seems a part of my very soul's life? the inspiration of angels, purporting to speak for the Lord God-which is the dispensation under ception? Is not such a belief incompatible with the which we live. Lastly, religion was established on very structure of the mind? Then we are driven what I conceive to be a higher plane still, viz., the identification of persons who have departed from the body, as living, in a state of moral responsibilthe true are there together, in their right relations—ity, the enjoyment of the affections, and with full and that, as I feel the good there is in them, I also scope for the exercise of their intellect. In this last phase, the identification of a single spirit, made beyond the possibility of doubt or cavil, carries with it, as a necessary consequence, a modification of all existing sanctions of human conduct derived from precepts supposed to be given from the heavenly world.

Thus I have answered my friend's first question. In the old religious system, we are told of two stupendous religious systems built upon the as-sumed knowledge of the medium as to the identity through the ranks of tolerable and intolerable sintocracy in the other life, from the archangels, ners, till we come to the archfiends at the bottom historical personages, though absolute identification of the scale. But the archangel in my heavens is is impossible, we may be somewhat aided by our he who reveals to me the parental character of my on his knee and inspired into me the substance of of father and child, for, in so doing, he commits the subscriptions to the Barren, and are requested to call attensin agains the Holy Chest of the Universe.

self. Yet identity has been brought to the experimentum orisis, and been proved, and it will continue to be so proved; for my opinion is that physical demonstrations of it will go on increasing in life and power for ages yet to come; because it is of the last importance that it should be established. First in value among the evidences of identity, because carrying us beyond the possibility of psychical doubt, is the construction of a living, moving body, obedient to the will and intelligence which produced it. Sec. ond in importance (as is well and properly stated by Judge Edmonds) is the moral portraiture of the party deceased, showing traces closely corresponding with qualities manifested in this life. Third, (and this form of proof has great force when joined to the others,) we have the evidence given in the feelings of an honest, sensitive soul, on the occasion of com-munion with what purports to be the presence of some well known relative or friend. If any individual will retire sufficiently from the conquiscences of the body, the lust of gain, and the stir of the outward world, he will feel the presence of angels. In the state of mind thus produced there is of course great liability to illusion, yet friend Adams, for instance, is able to sow broadcast among you proofs states, is able to sow broadcast among you proofs that the auternal of the soul may go forth and lay hold of other spirits, and give you the gatherings of tts observations in the form of descriptions. This specified street, Besten. belongs to the third class of evidences I have enu--a class not to be despised, though the most difficult and delicate to estimate, the most sub ject to illusions, and the most likely to lead to disastrous and even immoral results in practice. When, astrous and even immoral results in practice. When, from the nature of the case, identity cannot be denoted by the giving of great historical names, as authority for communications, is a dangerous proceeding, befor communications, is a dangerous proceeding, because the majority of mankind will be carried away by the dignity of the title. But when you are on a plane where identification can be made out, it is of the greatest importance to human happiness and morals that it should be established; for when a spirit thoroughly identifies himself to me, I know that there is somewhat of a solid revelation as to what I am to expect in another life. Dr. HALLOCK.-Jesus stated the universal princi.

ple governing the matter of identification, when he said that where two or three were gathered together there was he in the midst of them, that is, persons who were on the same plane of moral being must touch somewhere, or communications would be impossible —similarity of purpose is necessary. I presume that every believer in Spiritualism bases his belief on supposed intercourse with some of his departed relatives. When an honest inquirer purposes to sift the evidence in this matter, what person would be so likely to occupy the open point of contact as some one he had loved in this life? Would not the quickened affections of the persons cause them to mest, through this very purpose of ascertainment? A man is conjoined with those with whom he is in affection, whether in or out of the body; and in or-der to secure to himself the presence of the pure and good, he must aspire after the good and pure.

MR. Coles remarked that he was not sufficiently sensitive in this respect to identify the persons of spirits; but the evidence which had been obtained by his wife he considered satisfactory, as it had been confirmed by tests. As to the theory, according to which a great proportion of the communications might be produced by mesmeric transfer between our own minds, he thought it was erroneous, and that it tended to throw doubt on the whole philosophy of manifestations, so as to lead to the questions of our friend as to whether after all there was anything in

Dr. Gray asserted that the physical facts which had been obtained—the reproduction of a body in time and space, settled the whole question.

> SALLIE AND L BY ANNIE M. DUGANNE.

We're in the market—Sallie and I— Are there no bachelors wanting to buy? None who have courage enough to propose? None who have wisdom enough to disclose That they've shirts without buttons, and pants without straps,

They have vests with fringed edges, and coats with torn flans. And their last winter's hose are minus of toes,

And their uncovered heels are like to get froze, For lack of such bodies as Sallie and I To attend to the wants and the woes we espy? We are no coquettes-Sallie and I-

We are no orderes—annote and apply—
So free loving dandles need not apply—
Beauty's admirers or wit's devotees
Need not approach, for we never shall please;
But we know of a circle whose names are untold
In Fame's shining temples or mansions of gold. Whose lives without spot, or blemish or blot, Have won them the honor the world giveth not— For such, worthy bachelors, Sallie and I Still wait in the market-will ye not buy? Unsullied Virtue, Sallie and I

Only can offer to those who apply-Hearts warm and loving we've striven to blend With hands ever ready in need to befriend; And our lips seldem gossip, our feet rarely roam Beyond the charmed precincts of childhood's sweet home. And to wash, brew or bake, small splutter we make,

For "Quiet and Thrift" is the motto we take. Oh! rare are such housewives as Sallie and I-Lonely old bachelors, will ye not buy?

We 're in the market-Sallie and I-Shall we be left in the market to die? Bwiftly youth's fleeting years over us go,
Dimmer the rays from Hope's beacon light glow,
And the dimples where Cupid hath chosen his bed,
Too long left unkissed, will be wrinkles instead —
And our hearts like the May, will forget to be gay, If Love's fragrant blossoms ne'er dawn on our way, Such the petition Sallie and I Offer to bachelors - pray, will ye buy?

OBITUARIES. OR Monday, 18th inst., Osceola, the infant boy of Rosalie and Washington A. Danskin, Jr., was withdrawn from the material covering in which he had been enshrouded—was lifted above the chilling atmosphere of earth, and borne by angels hands to that pure clime where gentle zephyra, laden with perfume from the flowery isless of spirit-land, will over fan his brow.

fan his brow.

As the cartily shell was laid within the ground, four angels, from the home of light, caught up the little spirit-form and placed it softly on a downy couch by golden canony o'orspread. Oclestick choristers sang joyously their songs of praise to Him, where love encircles oven the little ones of praise to life, where love eneircles even the little ones of earth. Groups of infantlic sprits floated around the tiny alumberer, scattering betateous flowers upon his couch and trying to win a smile, or catch a glance from him who soon will join them in their glassome sports.

Attendant upon these little ones came a score of beauteous maldens, with voices more melodious than Æolus' softest tones, warbling sweet songs of welcome to the new born spirit.

epirit.

Hovering just above a band of matrons came, five in number, their countenances beaming with undernal leve—their mild eyes glistening with tears of sympathy—their sett voices breathing words of comfort for the mother's heart.

"No evil to thee, mother,

Hath the solemn angel wrought!

We foreral authom is a glad evangel—

Hath the selema angel wrought?

His funeral authom is a glad evangel—

Thy habe dies not."

Thus they spoke, and though unseen, their words were not unfelt; the mother's sadness was changed to gladness; the father's sorrowing heart was seethed. With trust unfaltering they consign their loved one to the care of angel-hands and feel that all is well.

Baltimore, March 21, 1861.

In Leominster, Sunday morn, March 17, Mrs. Angelina Thomson passed beyond the ken of mortal vision, to the home colectial, for whose rest her weary, earth-worn agirit had ardenily longed. Through long mouths the outer form had been fiding and vanishing, while the pure, sweet, patient spirit had been "removed day by d.y." The notifiest attributes of the soul had, by her, been assiduously cultivated; to know her, was to love. Possessed of mediumistic powers, often after suffering, grievious to be borne, did the dear immortals speak, through her pale lips, words of peace and love, leaving thereen a sweet smile of hope and joy. Blessed one, we mourn theo not! Rather will we thank the dear Father that for thee there is no more sorrow.

Tuesday morn the fasil body was conveyed to the Unitarian church, where noble Emma Hardinge dispensed to friends and neighbors "the bread of Heaven." Beautiful and impressive were the words of the Heavenly message, Bweetly discoursed the angel visitant of the "second birthday of the brautiful," which friends had that day must to celebrate. Not in sadness and gloom was she berue to her rest, but he second her controlly abscerted the rest and rest to rest. brate. Not in endness and gloom was she borne to her rest, but hopefully, cheerfully, flower-wreathed, was she carried out 'mid the fast falling snew, whose dazzling whiteness imaged to our minds her speciess purity.

MOVEMENTS OF LECTUREUS.

Parties noticed under this head are at liberty to receive tion to it during their lecturing tours. Hample copies sent But, in this matter of identification, assertion is of rec. Lecturers named below are requested to give notice of no real value; the thing uttered will take care of it- any change of their arrangements, in order that the list may be as correct as possible.

Mrs. Amanda M. Sparce will lecture in Cambridgeport 5 Sundays in April. Taunton. 4 do in May, Providence, 5 Sundays in Bept. Bangor first 5 Sundays in June. Bradley last 2 Sundays in June. Bangor 4 Sundays in Oct. and 1 in Nov. Address, the above places, or New York

Oity,

Miss L. E. A. Defonce will lecture at Decorah, and Davenport, Iowa, in April; at Plymouth, Mass., in May; Providence, R. I., in July; Quincy, Mass., Aug. 4th, 11th and 18th; Baratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 23th, and Sopt. 1st; Putnam, Conn. Sopt. 8th and 18th; Concord, N.H., Sept. 22d and 26th; Portland Me., in Oct. Applications for week evening lectures, addressed as above, will be received.

WARREN CHASE lectures in Providence, R. I., April 21 and 28; in Putnam, Conn., four Sundays in May; in Stafford, June 2; in William, June 3; in Windeer, June 16; in Chicopeo, Mass., June 23; llethel, Vt., June 30; South Hardwick, Vt., 4 Sundays of July. Will be at the Worcester Convention in April. He will receive subscriptions for the Banner of Light at club prices.

Banner of Light at club prices.

Mrs. Laura McAlpin, lectures in Eikhart, Ind., April 21; will attend Speakers' Convention at Storgie, Mich., 28th. Will speak through the month of May in Eikhart and Goshen, Ind.; the three last Sundays in June in Toledo, Ohlo. Will answer calls to lecture in the vicinity of her Sunday appointments on week evenings. Address, care of Mrs. H. F. M. Brown, of Cleveland, Ohlo; C. North, Eikhart, Ind.; C. Cale Goshen, Ind.; and Herry Breed Taleby Ohlo. Cole, Goshen, Ind.; and Henry Breed, Toledo, Uhio.

LEO MILLER will speak in Hartford, Conn., April 21st; Bridgeport, April 28th; Philadelphia, four Sundays in May; Bangor, Me., four Sundays in July; vicinity of Bangor through August; Cambridgeport, four Sundays in Oct.; Provi-dence, R. I., five Sundays in Dec. Mr. M. will answer calls to lecture week evenings. Address, Hartford, Ct., or as ddressed as above.

FRANK L. WADSWORTH speaks in Sturgis, Mich., April 21st and 28th; Adriau, Mich., May 5th and 12th; Toledo, O., May 16th and 26th; Detroit, Mich., five Sundays of June; Lyons, Mich., four Sundays in July. Address accordingly.

Mas. Augusta A. Currier will lecture in St. Louis, Mo., the first three Sundays of April; and in Beardstown, Ill., the fourth Sunday. She will speak in the Eastern States until late in the Fall; when she will again visit the West, lecturing through November in Oswego, N. Y. Address J. W. Currier, Lowell, Mass., box 815, or as above.

Miss Belle Scouolal lectures in Elkhart, Ind., the four Sundays of Oct.: Providence, R. I., the four Sundays of Nov.; Now Bedford, Mass., the four first Sundays of Dec. Will receive applications to fecture in the Kastern States during Jan., Ecb. and March of 1802. Address as above, or Rockford, In Miss EMMA Houston designs passing the Summer months in New Nampshire and Vermont. Those wishing to procure has services as a lecturer will please address her at East Stoughton, Mass. She lectures in Sutton, N. H., the four last Sundays in June, the 0th, 16th, 23d, and 30th.

H. P. FAIRFIELD Speaks in Adrian, Mich., 21st and 28th of April. For engagements in the West and Bouth, address, care Lemuel Martin, Esq., Adrian, Mich. JOHN MAYHEW will be for the next month or elx weeks in-boring in Ohlo, and letters up April Tiet may be addressed to him, care of Davis & Cuppy, Dayton, O., and to May let care of Mrs. H. F. M. Brown, Claveland. Ohlo. Miss Lizzie Doren will speak the last two Suudays in April, in Willimantic, Ct.; four Sundays in June, in Lowell, Mass. Address, Plymouth, Mass.

Mrs. Christiana A. Robbins lectures in Hammonton, Atlantic County, New Jersey, every other Sunday, and will speak in other places in the vicinity when called upon. Mas. F. O. Hyzes will lecture through April, in Vermont; during May, in Lowell, Mass; during June in Providence, R. I.; July in Quincy, Mass. Address all April, Sponcerport, N. Y.

PROP. J. E. CHURCHILL started for the West, Jan. 1st, 1861 to lecture on the subjects of Phrenology, Psychology, Mag-netlem and Clairvoyance, Will speak for the brethren en

MRS. MARY M. MACUMBER will lecture the last two Sundays in April at Taunton; four Sundays in June at Portland, Me. MRS. ELIZA D. SIMONS Will lecture in New York during April and May; in New Boston, Mass., in June, and July 7th and 14th. Address, Bristol, Conn.

G. B. STERBINS will be in Massachusetts through the month of April, if his services are required. Aduress, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Miss M. Munson, Clairvoyant Physician and Lecturer, San Francisco, Cal. Miss M. is authorized to receive subscrip-tions for the Banner. DEXTER DANA will speak in the Webster Street Church, East Boston, Sunday afternoon, April 21st, at 3 o'clock P. M.

MRS. M. S. TOWNSEND may be addressed at Lowell in April; at Portland, Me., in May; at Bridgewater, Vt., in June and July. Afterwards at Taunton, until further notice. CHARLIE HOLT will spend the Summer months in New En-Brown, Cleveland, Uhlo.

H. B. Storge speaks during the month of May in Cawego, N. Y. Address as above.

W. K. RIPLEY will speak alternate Sabbaths at Hampdon and Lincoln, Me., until May. MRS. E. CLOUGH, trance speaker, 2 Dillaway Place, Boston.
MRS. M. H., COLES, care of H. March, 14 Bromfield St., Boston.
MRS. FANNY BUBBANE FELTON, No. 25 Kneeland St., Boston.
MRS. J. H. SWAN, care P. Clark, 14 Bromfield St., Boston.
DR. O. H. Wellington, No. 202 Northampton St., Boston.
H. L. Bower, Natick, Mass., or 7 Dayls Street, Boston. H. L. BOWEER, Natick, Mass., or 7 Dayls aircet, Mosco, Joseph H. Bickyond, Itance speaker, Boston, Mass, Dr. H. F. Gardner, 46 Essex stroet, Boston, Mass, M. C. Question, 151 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Lewis B. Monroe, 14 Brombiel St., Boston, Mass. R. H. Burt, 40 Carver st., Boston, Charles H. Chowell, Boston, Mass.
Dr. P. B. Randolph, Boston, Mass.
Dr. P. B. Randolph, S314 Roston, O. H. DELLPIELD, box 3314. Boston.

O. H. DELLVIELD, DOX 3314, BOSTON.
BENJ. DANFORTH, BOSTON, MASS.
DH. O. O. YORK, BOSTON, MASS.
DHARLES O. FLAGO, 59 WARTON St., Charlestown, Mass.
MRS. BARAH A. BYRNES, 33 WINTER St., E. Cambridge, Mass.
MRS. E. F. ATKINS, Ocdar Avenue, Jamaica Plair, Mass.
REV. SILAS TYRRELL, No. 48 WAYFOR Street, Roxbury.
WM. E. ROER, ROXDURY, Mass.
PROF. WM. BAILEY FUTTER, M. D., Westboro, Mass.
MRS. J. PUFFER, Hauson, Plymouth Co., Mass.
MRS. BERTHA B. CHASE, West Harwich, Mass.
REV. JOHN PIERFONT, West Mediord, Mass.
MISS A. R. PEASS, South Willbraham, Mass.
MISS. A. P. PEASS, South Willbraham, Mass.
MISS. M. E. B. SAWYER, Baldwinville, Mass.
MRS. J. D. KARNEWORTH, Flichburg, Mass.
MRS. S. MARIA BLISS, Springfield, Mass.
MRS. S. MARIA BLISS, Springfield, Mass.
REV. STEPHEN FELLOWS, Fall River, Mass.
REV. STEPHEN FELLOWS, Fall River, Mass. RBV. STEPHEN FELLOWS, Fall River, Mass. A. C. Robinson, Sall River, Mass.

A. C. ROBINSON, Fall River, Mass.
BAAO P. GREENLEAF, Lowell, Mass.
CHARLES P. RICKER, LOWell, Mass.
N. S. GREENLEAF, LOWOLL, Mass.
H. A. TUCKER, FOXDOTO, Mass.
F. G. GURNEY, DUXDUTY, Mass.
J. J. LOCKE, Greenwood, Mass.
Mss. M. B. KENNEY, Lawrence, Mass.
Mss. M. C. CLAN, LAWRENCE, Mass.

MRS. E. O. CLARK, LAWFORCO, MASS.
J. H. CURRIER, LAWFORCO, MASS.
F. T. LANE, LAWFORCO, MASS.
MRS. J. J. CLARK, CATO WM. S. EVERELT, E. Princeton, Mass.
CHABLES A. HAYDEN, TRAICE SPEAKER, LIVETMOTE Falls, MC.
MRS. SUSAN SLEIGHT, TRAICE SPEAKER, FOTTIAND, MAINE.
MRS. ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, FOTTIAND, MC.
ALONZO R. HALL, EUST NEW SHATON, MC.
MRS. ISAAC THOMAS, BUCKSPOTT, MC.
MRS. ISAAC THOMAS, BUCKSPOTT, MC.
MRS. OLDFORN HUTCHINSON, ITAIDES SPEAKER, MILIOTA, N. H. MRS. E. C. CLARK, Lawrence, Mass.

MBS. 18AAO THOMAS, Bucksport, Mo. Speaker, Milford, N. H. MBS. A. P. THOMPSON. Holderness, N. H. MBS. A. P. THOMPSON. Holderness, N. H. OHARLES T. IRISH, GYAHOU, N. H. PRANK CHASE. SHUON, N. H. PRANK CHASE. SHUON, N. H. EZRA WILLS, Williamstown, Vt. MISS FLAVIA HOWE, Windsor, Poquonock P. O., Conn. Anna M. MIDULEBEGOE, Box 422 Hridgeport, Conn. MBS. HELEN E. MONBLL HARTHOR, COND. LEWIS O. WELCH, West Windham, Conn. MBS. M. J. WILCUSEON, STRAIFORD, CONN. MS. M. J. WILCUSEON, STRAIFORD, CONN. J. S. LOVELANU, Williamstie, Coun.

J. S. LOVELANU, Willimantic, Coun. Daniel W. Snell, No. 6 Princo st., Providence, R. I.

DANIEL W. SNELL, No. 6 Prince st., Providence, R. I.
L. A. COOPER, Providence, R. I.
Miss Busan M. Johnson, tranco speaker, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Miss Elizabeth Low, Leon, Chitarbughs Co., Now York.
Mss. M. L. Van Haughton, Sob 1-2 Mott st., N. Y. Oity, George M. Jackson, Bennettsburg, Schuyler Co., N. Y.
Miss. A. W. Delarolie, No. 2 King street, New York.
Miss. J. E. Price, Watertown, Jefferson County, N. Y.
Miss. Susan M. Johnson, No. 238 Green street, N. Y.
L. Judd. Papper N. 883 16th street. New York.

MRS. J. E. PRICE, Watertown, Jefferson County, N. Y.
MISS. SUSAN M. JOINNON, NO. 238 Green street, N. Y.
L. JODD PARDEE, No. 882, 16th street, New York,
MRS. FRANCES O. HYZER, Byencerport, N. Y.
MRS. E. L. CHAFFELL, Phenix, N. Y.
JOHN H. JENER, JOUKEVILLO, N. Y.
JARED D. GAOE, Onelda, N. Y.
MRS. E. A. KINGSBURY, NO. 1905 Pine street, Philadelphia,
MRS. E. COLLINS, 35 North Sixteenth St., Philadelphia,
MRS. CLARA B. F. DANIELS, Wostfield, Medina Co., Ohio,
MRS. H. M. MILLER, Ashtahula, Ashtahula Co., Ohio,
ALBERT E. CARFENZER, Columbia, Licking Co., Ohio,
B. P. LELAND, Middlebury, Summit, Co., Ohio,
B. P. LELAND, Middlebury, Summit, Co., Ohio,
A. B. FRENCH, Clyde, Sandusky Co., Ohio,
DR. JAMES COOPER, Bellefoutaine, Ohio,
MRS. SARAI M. THOMEON, Toledo, Ohio,
LOVELL BERDE, North Ridgeville, Ohio
MRS. FRANCES BOND, BOX-678, Cleveland, Ohio,
MRS. H. F. M. BEOWS, Cleveland, Ohio,
J. W. H. TCOINEY, Cleveland, Ohio,
W. A. D. HOME, Cleveland, Ohio,
M. A. D. HOME, Cleveland, Ohio,
M. A. D. HOME, Cleveland, Ohio,
M. A. D. HOME, Cleveland, Ind.
MISS FLAVILLA E. WASHBUEN, trance speaker, Rockford, Ill.
MATTIE F. HULETT, ROCKford, Ill.
ADA L. HOYT, Ohlego, Illinois.

MATTIE F. HULETT, Rockford, III. ADA L. HOYT, Chicago, Illinois. Rev. J. G. Fish, Three Rivers, St. Joseph Co., Mich. MRS. J. G. FISH, Three Kivers, St. Joseph Qo., M. Mrs. D. Olnabwics, Linden Genesee Co., Mich. Mrs. M. J. Kutz. Cannon, Kent County, Mich. Mrs. C. M. Stowe, Vandalla. Cars Co., Mich. Elijah Woodworm, Leelle. Mich. A. B. Whitikg, Albich, Mich.

Boston Adbertisements.

CAPILLARY DISEASES.

DR. PERRY.

THE CELEBRATED DERMATOLOGIST, and the only man in this country who has over made the treatment of Diseased Scales, Loss of Hair, and Premature Blanching, a speciality, has established himself at 29 Winter street, Boston, (formerly the residence of Dr. Reynolds.) where he can be consulted by all who are afflicted with any diseases of the Scalp, Loss of Hair, or Premature Blanching.

Dr. Perry is prepared to treat successfully the following Diseases, all of which are productive of a less of Hair.

Dobilitation of the External Skin, Suppressed Secretion, Irritation of the Scaip, Dandruff or Thickened Secretion, Infammation of the Scaip, Hair External Secretion Secretion of the Scaip, Hair External Distended or Swolien Roots, and Premature Blanching.

This is the only method based upon Physiological principles which has ever been presented to the public for the restoration of the Hair.

ples which has ever been presented to the public for the restoration of the Hair.

Particular attention is called to the Doctor's Theory of treating Diseased Scalps, and Restoring Hair. It no doubt will commond itself to every intelligent and reflecting mind.
There are eighteen Diseases of the Head and Scalp, that cause a loss of hair and in some instances premature blanching, each requiring in its treatment-different remedies. Where loss of hair has resulted from any of those diseases, the first thing to be done is to remove the disease by a proper course of treatment; restore the Scalp to its normal condition, keep the pores open so that the secretion can pass off, and in every the pores open so that the secretion can pass off, and in over follicic that is open, new strands of hair will make their ap pearance.

The philosophy of premature blanching is this: Iron and Oxygen are the principal constituents ofdark hair; Lime and Magnesia of light hair. When the suppressed secretions between the skins contain an excess of Lime, it is taken up by the strands, causing the hair to turn white; by opening the pores the accumulation of Lime passes off with the secretions, the natural components of the bair resume their ascendency, and the hair assumes its natural color.

Because persons have tried various preparations for the hair, and have been deceived by them, and in some cases their difficulty made weree by their use, they should not to discourged. The one preparation system for any class of discases, must necessarily prove a failure. No one compound can be available for a dezen or more diseases; it may remove some difficulties, in other cases is useless, and in some positively injurious.

lively injurious.

Dr. Perry's method is in accordance with the law of cause and effect. He makes a personal examination, accordance what discusse of the scalp has or is producing a loss of hair, what discuse of the scalp has or is producing a loss of hair, or premature whitening, prescribes such remedies according to its nature and requirements, as will remove the disease; hence his great success in treating Capillary Diseases.

As to Dr. Perry's ability and success in Treating Diseases of the Scalp, Loss of Hair and Premature Blanching he has in his peasession the most reliable testimonials from Physicians, Clorgymen and others in every city where he has practiced. They can be seen by calling at his office, 29 Winterstreet.

icer street.

23 All consultations free.
All inquiries or other communications should be addressed to DR. B. C. PERRY, box 2837, Beston, Mass.

MY EXPERIENCE; OR, : fife

Footprints of a Presbyterian to Spiritualism. BY FRANCIS H. SMITH, BALTIMORE, MD.

Price 50 cents, bound in cloth. Sent, postage free, on receiving the price in stamps, by the author, or by WILLIAM BERRY, & OO., 9 1-2 Brattle St.

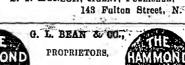

THE GREAT LECTURE OF

ANDREW JACKSON, Recently Delivered through the Mediumship of

listened to by a large and discriminating audience, and MRS. B. K. LITTLE, Test Medium and Medical Clairvoyelicited the warmest praise. It is the most marked and obseracteristic of the series.

Nov. 17.

Price, 15 cts., or $10 per Mundred. All orders will be promptly attended to. Address. S. T. MUNSON, AGENT, PUBLISHER,

No. 17 Tyler street. HOSTON.

I flicted. Having the power to look into its Health proper ties, I have watched its effects upon severe cases of Chronic Rhoumatism; many cases have been cured; three persons have been cured of White Swellings by the use of this Liniment. If I was in the earth-form, I would speak in praise of its morits. I can still look into the human system and sympathize with the afflicted. A Liniment has long been needed one that is absorbant, and relaxative, and this Lininent will meet all the wants, for Rhoumutism, Spinal Curvature, Stiff Joints, &c. From the Spirit of John Dix Fighen

Sold by G. C. Goodwin & Co., 12 Marshall street, Weeks & Potter, 154 Washington street, M. S. Burr & Co., 26 Trement street, wholesale agents, Doston; Bush, Gale & Robinson, 186 Greenwich street, New York; W. F. Phillips, 149 Middle street, Portland, Maine; and retailed by dealers generally throughout the United States.

. G. L. BEAN & CO., Proprietors, 17 Tyler street, Boston.

SEWING MACHINES.

SAMUEL C. HART RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the public to his complete assertment of FIRST CLASS SEWING MACHINES:

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES, BINDERS HEMMERS, GUIDES, SHUTTLES, BOBBINS, -AND ALL OTHER-Sewing Machine Fixtures.

The above will be sold low at prices to suit the times. Persons taught to operate machines. SEWING MACHINES TO LET.

AT SEWING MACHINE EXCHANGE, 17 PRANKLIN STREET, Boston. SPIRITOSCOPES.

W. E. HALLOOK Evansvillo, Indiana, is manufacturing the Spinitoscope or Dial, and is prepared to ship them to any part of America, at $2 each. They are neatly constructed, and, well packed in boxes, roudy for delivery. Address, enclosing $2, to WM. E. HALLOCK, Evansville, Ind.

W. M. E. HALLOCK Evansville, Indiana, is manufacturing the Brintroscore or Dial, and is prepared to ship them to any part of America, at $3 cach. They are neatly constructed, and, well packed in boxes, roady for delivery. Address, enclosing $2, to W.M. E. HALLOCK, Evansville, Ind. March 30.

1200 PER YEAR FOR ALL.—Only $10 capital reflections with Fullam's Patent Steneil Tools, the only perfect Steneil Tools and. Their superiority over all others appears in the curved side, which is patented, and by means of which a most perfect and durable die is formed, which-cuts a beautiful letter, and renders the cutting of Steneil Plates a very simple and profitable business. Two hours' practice enables any one to use the tools with facility. Young men are clearing from $5 to $15 per day with my tools. Circulars and samples aent free. Address, A. J. FULLAM, No. 13 Merchants' Exchange, Boston.

A VALUABLE MEDICAL BOOK,

A VALUABLE MEDICAL BOOK, A VALUABLE MEDICAL BOOK,

To Roth sexes, entitled, "The Medical Companion," prepared by an experienced Physician of this city. It treats, first, of Chronic Diseases in general; second, of Diseases of he Sexual System of both sexes, their symptoms and remodies; third, the Abuse of the Reproductive Powers, and an exposure of advertising quacks. Sold by W. V. SPENOER, Bookseller and Stationer, No. 94 Washington street. Price, 50 cents; three stamps extra, if sent by mail.
August 16.

DOARD FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.—Infants and young children can be accommodated with board, and careful attention, on application to Mra. J. M. Spear, No. 1 Nowland street, out of Dedham street, Beston. Torms reasonable, Oct. 13. PROF. LISTER, ASTROLOGER,

No. 25. Lowell Street, Boston.

Ese-oral-50 couts. A Circular of Terms for writing Nativities sent free.

If Nov. 3. A. B. CHILD, M. D., DENTIST,

NO IS TREMONT STREET. BOSTON, MARS

dollar. Also. LOVE ANE MOOK LOVE; OR HOW TO MARRY TO THE END OF CONJUGAL SATISFACTION—as roull fill-bound volume—is sent by mail for bine letter at a ma. Address GEORGE STEARNS.

ASYLUM FOR THE AFFLICTED!! The Early Physical Degeneracy of DH. CHARLES MAIN. No. 7. DAVIS STREET. Boston, Mass.

THIS is an Institution having for its basis the alloviation of the suffirings of our common humanity. It claims no superiority over like establishments. Its does claim EQUALITY WITH ALL, like it, or unlike it.

The Doctor gives particular attention to the cure of CANCERS, ULCERS, TOMORS, and Souns of all descriptions. Firs not of a hereditary nature, treated in the most satisfactory manner.

He would call attention to his newly discovered

REMEDIES! BLOOD PUBLISHER, PULMONARY SYRUP, DIORETIC SYRUP, manufactured from directions received while under spiritinfluence.

Persons intending to visit the above institution for treatment, are requested to give a few days' notice, to avoid confusion on their arrival.

Those who desire examinations will please enclose $1,00, a lock of hair, a return postage stamp, and their address plainly written, and state sex, and age.

Office hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M., and 2to 5 P. M.

The dector would call particular attention to his invauable

DIARRHEA CORDIAL, A medicine much needed at this season of the year, TO THE AFFLICTED!

CHARLES H. CROWELL, Medical Medium,

ROOMS, No. 81-2 BRATTLE STREET, BOSTON, (Banner of Light Building.)

Mr. O. is controlled by a circle of eliable Spirit Physicians, who will examine patients, give diagnoses of all diseases, and prescribe for the same. Those who reside at a distance and cannot conveniently visit his rooms, may have their cases attended to just as well by transmitting a lock of hair by mail, by which method the physician will come into

MR. J. V. MANSFIELD. THIS distinguished Writing Test-Medium for answering sealed letters may be found at 153 Obesinut street. Chelsea, Mass. His fee is three dollars and four postage stamps, Persons wishing his services will please not write any superscription on the letter they desire the spirits to answer, but seal it so that it cannot be disturbed or tampered with with-out detection. The answer and the scaled letter will he

MRS. J. S. FORREST, from Providence, Independent Chir-18. J. B. SURREST. Irom Providence, Independent Clair-volant, Healt, g and Developing Medium, can be con-suited at No. 20 Castle street, Boston, a few doors from Wash-ington street, where she will treat all diseases of a Chronic nature by the laying on of hands. Spinal diseases, contract-ed limbs, and nervous prostration, and all those afflicted in body or mind; will do well to call and test her mode of treat-ment. (Figs. hours from 24.0.12. A way 11.16.5.) Office hours, from 9 to 12 A. M., and 1 to 5 P. M.

April c. Smos

AMUEL GROVER, Trance Speaking and Healing Meddler, John, Rooms No. 2 Jufferson Place, leading from Bennett, Dear Washington street, Boston. Hours, from 9 to 12 A. M., and 2 to 6 r. M. Sunday and Wednesday afternoons excepted. Examination $1. Will attend funerals. Can be consulted evenings at his home, No. 3 Emerson street, Somerville, Mass.

April 6.

CLAIRVOYANT EXAMINATIONS AND COMMUNICA-TIONS by Mrs. Rockwood, assisted by Mrs. Pushro, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, from 9 A. M., to 4 P. M., at 135 Court street, Boston, Mass. Nov. 3.

MRS. E. M. T. HARLOW, (formerly Mrs. Tipple.) Clair-woyant Physician, 48 Wall street, Boston. Patients at a distance can be examined by enclosing a lock of hair. Ex-aminations and prescriptions, $1 each. 8m , Nov. 17.

MRS. S. O. JEWELL, a blind lady and a Clairroyant and Healing Medium, may be consulted at No. 54 Eseax street, Boston, or address by lotter. Examinations Free. Proscriptions $1: 1mo f April 0. GRACE L. BEAN, Writing Test Medium, No. 3 Lathrop Place, loading from 200 Hanover street, Boston.

MRS. L. F. HYDE, Writing, Trance and Test Medium, may be found at 8 Lagrange Place, Boston. August 25.

M 188 JENNIE WATERMAN, Trance and Test Medium.

8 Oliver Place, from Essex street. Terms according to time. 4m° Dec. 22.

M 188 E. D. STARKWEATHER, Ropping, Writing and Test Medium, No 4 Geborn Place. 1m6° April 6, MRS. C. A. KIRKHAM, Seeing and Trance Medium, 140 Court street, Boston, Muss. Sm Jan. 14.

DO YOU WANT A MUSTACHE?

DO YOU WANT A MUSTACHE?

STIMULATING ONGUENT,

For the Whiskers and Hair.

THE STIMULATING ONGUENT Is prepared by Dr. C. P. Bellingham, an eminent physician of London, and is warranted to bring out a thick set of in from three to six weeks. The article is the only one of the kind used by the French, and in London and Paris i is

. DRUGGISTS ETG. 24 William Street, New York. SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!

THE NEW METALLIC PEN.

WARREN & LUDDEN would calt the attention of all business men to their New PATENT COMBINATION PEN, which slides upon a wood pencil. This is the most flexible, cheapest and consequently the most destrable pen in use. It is diamond pointed, the points being selected from the best Iridium, and warranted to give entire satisfaction. The testimodals received from numerous sources—(and which will appear from time to time in public print)—are of the most flattering character. The great excellence attained in the production of this pen has been accomplished by a series of experiments extending over eighteen years.

It is reasonable to suncise that ere long this pen must take the precedence of all others now in use.

P. S. All orders will be promptly attended to, and on the most reasonable terms. Address

WARREN & LUDDEN, 169 Broadway, Room S Gilsey Building, New York, March 10. THE NEW METALLIC PEN.

March 16.

March 16.

Ty

MRS. METTLER'S CELEBRATED CLAIRVOYANT MEDicines. Pulmonaria, $1 per bottle; Restorative Syrup $1 and $2 per bottle; Liniment, $1; Noutralizing Mixture 50 cents; Dysentery Cordial, 50 cents, Elixir for Cholera, Wholesale and retail by B. T. MUNSON, June 2.

143 Fulton street, N. Y.

AMERICAN PEOPLE.

JUST PUBLISHED BY DR. STONE, Physician to the Trov

Lung and Hygienic Institute, a Treatise on the Cause of Early Physical Decline of American People; the Cause of Nervous Debility, Consumption and Marasmus.

This work is one of high moral tone, written in chaste, yet thrilling language, and appeals directly to the moral consciousness of All. Parents and Guardians especially, and tailing scientific and reliable aids and treatment for cure. It will be sent by mail on receipt of two 8 cent stamps.

The Parents and Guardians! fail not to send and obtain this book. Young Men! fail not to send and get this book Ladles! you too, should at once secure a copy of this book. Ladies I you too, should at once secure a copy of this book.

A Word of Solemn, Conscientious Advice to these who will reflect!

who will reflect!

A class of maladies provall to a fearful extent in community, dooming 100,000 youth of both sexes, annually to an early grave. Those diseases are very imperiectly understood. Their external manifestations or symptoms, are Nervous Deblity, Relaxation and Exhaustion; Marasmus or a wasting and consumption of the tissues of the whole body; choriness of breathing, or hurried breathing on ascending abili or a flight of stairs, great palpitation of the heart; asthma, bronchilds and sore throat; shaking of the hands and limbs, aversion to seciety and to business or study; dimness of eye sight; loss of nomory; dizzlucss of the head, neuralgle pains in various parts of the body; pains in the back or limbs; lumbage, dyspepsia or indigestion; irregularitity of bowels; deranged sections of the kidneys and other glands of the body, as leucorrhece or fleur albus, &c. Likuwise, enflexy, hystoria corrheca or fleur albus, &c. Likewise, epilepsy, hystoria corrhech or fleur albus, &c. Likewise, epilepsy, hysteria and nervous spasms.

Now, in ninety-nine cases out of every one hundred all the above named disorders, and a host of others not named, as Consumption of the Lungs, and that most incidious and will form of Consumption of the Spinal Nerves, known as Tabes Dorsales; and Tabes mesenterica, have their seat and origin and lessues of the Mark Views Views. Doracles; and Tabes messenterica, have their seat and origin in diseases of the Ithese Vicera. Hence the want of success on the part of old school practice in treating symptoms only. Dr. Andrew Stone, Physician to the Troy Lung and Hygiese Institution, is now angaged in treating this class of modern maladies with the most astonishing success. The treatment adopted by the Institution is now; it is based upon scientific principles, with now discovered remedies, without minerals or poisons. The facilities of cure are such that patients can be cured at their humes, in any part of the country, from accurate descriptions of their case, by letter; and have the medicines sont them by mail or express. Printed interrogatories will be forwarded on application.

Consumption, Catarrh and diseases of the throat, cured as well at the homes of patients as at the Institution, by sending the Cold Medicated Inhaling Balsamic Vapors, with inhale r, and ample directions for their use, and direct corre-

The system of treatment which has been found so univer-sally efficacious, practiced by this Institution for Consump-tion and Threat Discase, is the Cold Balsamic Medicated Va-pors—one of the new developments of the age.

Patients applying for interrogatories or advice, must in-close return stamps, to meet attention. The attending Physician will be found at the Instituconsultation, from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., of each day, Bun-days, in the forencen. Address,

Physician to the Troy Lung and Hygonic Institute, and Physician for Diseases of the Heart, Thront and Lungs, Sician for Diseases of the Heart, Thront and Lungs, 96 Fifth-st., Troy, N. P.

TO FEMALES MRS. DOCTRESS STONE,

THE MATRON OF THE INSTITUTION, Who is thoroughly read and posted in the pathology of the many afflictive and prostrating maladies of more modern origin, will devote exclusive attention to this class of diseases origin, will devote exclusive attention to this class of diseases peculiar to her sex. Among the many diseases daily met with, and which she trents with unheard of success, are chronic infammation and viceration of the womb.

The Medicated Ascending Douche: a most important curative, for arousing the nervous forces. Price, §4 and §6.

Hemales can consult Mis. Doctress Stone, confidently, by letter or personally. Address MRS. N. O. STONE, M. D.

Dec. 17. ly Matron to the Institution, Troy, N. Y.

SCOTT'S HEALING INSTITUTE, NO. 36 BOND STREET, NEW YORK, ONE OF THE most convenient, beautiful and healthy locations in the city of New York, JOHN SCOTT, SPIRIT AND MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN.

This being an age when almost anything in the shape o an advertisement is considered humbug, we desire persons who may be afflicted to write to those who have been relieved or cured at the Scott Healing Institute, and satisfy themselves that we do not claim half, what in justice to curselves we could.

selves that we do not claim half, what in justice to ourselves we could.

We have taken a large, handsome, and commodious house for the purpose of accommodating those who may come from a distance to be treated.

Hot and Cold Water Baths in the house; also Magnetic and Hot and Gold Water Baths in the house; also Magnetic and Medicated Baths, adapted to peculiar complaints. In fact, we have made every arrangement that can possibly conduce to the comfort and permanent cure of those who are afflicted. The immense soccess we have met with since last January prepares us to state unhesitatingly that all who may place thomselves or friends under our treatment, may depend upon great relief, if not an entire cure. Persons desirous of being admitted in the Healing Institute, should write a day or two in advance, so we can be prepared for them.

EXAMINATIONS

EXAMINATIONS.

Those who may be afflicted, by writing and describing symptoms, will be examined, disease diagnosed, and a pack age of medicine sufficient to cure, or at least to confer such benefit, that the patient will be fully satisfied that the continuation of the treatment will cure. Terms, $5 for examination and medicine many contractions and medicine.

lon and medicine. The money must in all cases accompany he letter. JOHN SCOTT. too and meaning.

JOHN SCOTT.

N. B. Recipes and medicines sent by express to any par of the country on receipt of from five to ten deliars, as the case may require. Be particular, in ordering, to give the name of the Town, County and State in full.

J. S.

Spirit Preparations.

GIVEN TO JOHN SCOTT, AND PREPARED BY HIM AT SE HOND STREET, NEW YORK. COOSIANA, OR COUGH REMEDY.

This is a medicine of extraordinary power and efficacy in the relief and cure of Bronchial Affections and Consumptive Complaints; and as it excels all other remedies in its adaptations to that class of diseases, is festined to supercede their use and give health and hope to the afflicted thousands.

Price 25 cents.

PILE SALVE. A sovereign remedy for this disease is at last found. It affords instantaneous relief, and effects a speedy cure. Mr. Everett, editor of the Spiritualist, Cleveland, Ohio, after twelve years of suffering, was in less than one week completely cured, and hundreds of instances can be referred to where the same results have followed the use of this invaluable remedy. Price $1 per box.

EYE WATER.

For weak or inflamed eyes this preparation stands unrivalled. It never fails to give immediate relief; and when the difficulty is caused by any local affection, the cure will be speedy and permanent. Price 50 cents.

BOT Tetter, Erysipelas, Salt Rhoum, and all Scroulatic eruptions of the skin, an invaluable remedy, and warranted to cure in all ordinary cases. Price, $1. This Salve, when used with the Magnetic or Spiritual powers of Dr. Scott, has never, in a single instance, failed to effect a permanent and positive cure, no matter how aggravated the case. It will be found triumphantly efficacious o itself alone, in cases where the part effected is open; and when Dr. Scott's services cannot be obtained, those of any cool madium whose newers are adouted to such complains.

good medium, whose powers are adapted to such complants will answer the purpose. Price, $10. This preparation is guaranteed to cure all kinds of inflammatory rhoumatism, and will leave the system in a condition that will positively forbid a return of the disease. Price, $5 per bottle. For $10 a positive cure will be guaranteed. per bottle. For $10 a positive cure will be guaranteed.

ALATIANA, OR HAIR RESTORATIVE.

This astunishing and powerful Medicine can be used for many diseases not specified. Scarcely a day passes but we hear of its wonderful effects, and often in an entirely new character of disease. We do not claim for it the reputation of a cure all, but we do regard it as a Cure of Many. It has proved startlingly and amazingly successful in the worst kinds of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains, Brulea, Dislocated Joints, Chilbiains, Frosted Feet, Stiff Neck, Tetter, Sore Breast, Sore Nipples, Spinal Compilaints, Baldness, etc., Price' $1 per far.

SI por jar.

Be Particular.

In ordering any of the above medicines, inclose the amount in a letter, addressed to the undersigned, and state distinctly how the package must be sent, and to whom addressed. In all cases, the package will be forwarded by the first convey-

DR. JOHN SCOTT, 38 Bond street, New York. Liberal discount made to Agents NEW YORK HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY, D. WHITE, M. D., SUPERINTENDENT.

No. 36 Bond STREET,

No. 38 Bond Street,
Whore may be found pure Hemmediathic Medicines, in Tinctures, Triturations, Dilutions and Medicated Pelets; Medicine Cases, for physicians' and family use, of all kinds and stres; Vials, of every description; Corks, Labels, Globules, Sugar-of-Milk, Arnica flowers and Plasters, Alcohol; Books on Homeopathy, &c., &c.
N. B.—All medicines sold at this establishment are prepared by D. White, M. D., formerly of "White's Homeopathis Pharmacy," St. Louis, Mo. The attenuated preparations are manipulated by the celebrated Dr. John Scott, one of the greatest healing mediums in the world. Address,
D. WHITE; M. D., 36 Bond street, New York, July 7.

MRS. W. R. HAYDEN

TEST MEDIUM AND MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT, No. 64 East 220 STREET, New York. Examinations for dis-case when present, $2,00; by a lock of hair, verbally, $3,00, when written, $5,00. Bittings two dollars per hour for one or two persons. BOOKSELLERS' AND NEWS-VENDERS' AGENCY.

BANNER OF LIGHT,

Would respectfully invite the attention of Booksollers, Deaters in Cheap Publications, and Periodicals, to their unequalled facilities for packing and forwarding everything in their line to all parts of the Union, with the utmost promphisude and dispatch. Orders solicited.

or two persons. ROSS & TOUSEY, 121 Nassau Street, New York, General Agents for the

THE MISTAKE OF OHRISTENDOM; OR, JESUS AND HIS GOSPEL BEFORE PAUL AND CHRISTIANITY—SIS pages 12 mo.—Is sent by mail for one magnetic rapport with them.

He will turnish patients with Medicines when required, prepared by Spirit direction, having superior facilities for so doing.

TERMS.—Examinations and Prescriptions, at office, $1.00 family visits $2.00; by letter, $1.00 and two three-cent pestage stamps.
Office hours from 0 to 12 o'clock A. M., and from 2 to 5 P. M.
MED Family practice respectfully solicited. The best of references given.

out detection. The answer and the scaled letter will be both promptly forwarded to the writer. m9 ly

MRS. CORA L. V. HATOH.

Will be published immediately and ready for delivery on the 4TH OF MARCH. This Lecture was properly to the decrease of the control o

April 6. MRS. L. S. NICKERSON, seeing and trance medium, may be found Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M., at 98 Hudson at, Boston. 4to Mar. 23

MRS. S. J. YOUNG will continue her private and public Circles as usual at 33 Beach street, until the first of April, 1801. Feb. 9.

MRS. MARY A. RICKER, Trance Medium, Rooms No. 145
Hanover street, Boston, Smo Dec. 22,

Hew Hork Adbertisements.

DO YOU WANT WHISKERS? DO YOU WANT WHISKERS?

BELLING HAM'S ÖELEBRATED

The subscribers take pleasure in announcing to the Citi-zens of the United States, that they have obtained the Agency ior, and are now enabled to offer to the American public, the above justly celebrated and world-renowned article.

WHISKERS OR A MUSTACHE,

SNOW'S PENS.

THE BEST IN USE!—One dollar will pay for a groce sent to any address by mall, postage paid.
Dec. 8.

If J.P. SNOW, Hartford, Conn.

Benrls.

And quoted edes, and jowels five words long, That on the stretched fore-linger of all time Sparkle forever,"

THE MAGIC BAND.

By woodland belt, by ocean bar, The full south breeze our forcheads fann'd, And under many a yellow star, We dropped into the Magic Land.

There every sound and every sight Means more than sight and sound elsewhere Each twilight star a twofold light, Each rose a double redness, there.

By ocean bar, by woodland belt, Our silent course a syren led, Till dark in dawn began to melt. Through the wild wizard work o'erhead.

A murmur from the violet vales i A glory in the goblin dell There, Beauty all her breast unveils, And Music pours out all her shell. We watch'd toward the land of dreams

A single thread of silver beams Was made the monster's rippling chain. We heard far off the syren's song ; We caught the gleam of sea-maid's hair: The glimmering isles and rocks among

The fair moon draw the murmuring main :

We moved through sparkling, purple air. Then morning roso, and smote from far Her elfin harps o'er land and sea; And woodland belt aud ocean bar To one sweet note sigh'd-" Italy !"

Many people, like fairy tales, are simple in perusal, but contain some subtle maxim, some cunning truth, in their moral.

THE HIDDEN WORLD OF FEELING. There are joys too bright for song. There are griefs too deep for hymning ; Not to earthly lyres belong: Thoughts with which our souls are brimming ; Silent, hidden, these must lie Where no earthly plummet soundeth; Silent then perforce am I When my spirit most aboundeth.

Note ye not the joyous gush Sometimes from my harp-strings leaping? Hear ye not the mournful rush Of the tears adown them sweeping? Oh I how faint these symbols all Of the hidden world of feeling! Now o'ershadowed by a pall, Now some shadeless joy concealing!

Who spends more than he should, shall not have to spend when he would.

"TRY IT AGAIN!"

Come hear what the bird on the hickory sings, Whose nest was blown off but a fortnight ago; In a new one, as soft, she is folding her wings, And a new love is perched on the branches below.

Come, hear what she says to the heart of the poor, Whose temples have fallen in wind and in rain; Come, hear how she sings a new song that is sure, To the glorious old carol of-Try it again ! H. Morford.

Those who shun society are either very strong or very weak.

IN THE SPRINGTIME. " In the Springtime, when the birds are singing And the grass is green and the flowers springing, When the trees are blossoming, one by one, And the days grow long in the lingering sun. Then would I die in the Spring time."

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of colestial fire, conscience.

Reported for the Banner of Light. BECESSION AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

A Lecture by Cora L. V. Hatch, at Dodworth's Hall, New York, "Sunday Evening, March 31, 1861.

Every subject, national or individual, presents two sides for argument. You have often heretofore been addressed on the probable origin of our present national difficulties—and the questions pertaining to the material and social interests of North and South, respectively, have been fully canvassed. In the course of these discussions, the North has re-ceived the greater share of blame; but, while this is just and correct as regards abstract views, there are questions yet unconsidered which present the subject in a different aspect. We propose now to consider Secession as an accomplished fact, and as dividing our nation, at this moment, into two separate and distinct governments; to examine the foundation of the new empire, compare it with the Constitution which has ruled the whole nation for nearly a century, and see if it has the elements of a stable prosperity—leaving out of view the relations of the past, and the duty and gratitude which the seceding States owe to the Federal Government.

Without dwelling on the right or wrong, policy or impolicy of slavery in the abstract, we shall attempt a decision of the practical question forced upon us, and point out the inherent and necessary instability of any government which has for its acknowledged foundation the enslavement of human beings. In the more enlightened nations of antiquity, slavery was always regarded rather as a neces sary evil than as a just and politic institution; and especially in Egypt, every means was adopted by her rulers to prevent the increase of their slave population, and chiefly by limiting the term of bondage The people of vanquished nations were led captive to adorn the triumphs of their conquerors, and swell the pemp of victory, but they were never held from the low, mercenary motives which prompt the modern owner of human chattels; much less was the difference of race ever alleged to justify their enslavement. On the contrary, the more enlightened the defeated nation, the greater was thought the honor of subjugating it; and the ancient Roman law gave freedom to captives taken in war, after a term of years.

Our own government, you are aware, was established on the broad principle that the right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" is common to all men of whatever nation or origin; and so universally applicable was this maxim, as conceived by its founders, that they seem to have considered that it would render our country a great centre, whence the light of liberty should radiate over the whole earth, and guide all nations to the same happy destiny. Of course, therefore, slavery in these States they regarded as an imported social usage, an unfortunate and anomalous accident, which they could not immediately remedy, but respecting which they thought it unnecessary to legislate for an intelligent, free and Christian people, who had, themselves, just succeeded in escaping from a condition of political servitude. Therefore, provisions, intended to be merely temporary, were inserted into the Constitution, in order to prevent difficulty and insure the protection of actually existing property; but what has been the result of the admission these made? With the acquisition of territory and the rapid increase of population, the strength and interest of the slave-holding class have proportionally advanced, until, now, from an exotic social usage, which was to wear away with the progress of the nation, slavery has grown into a gigantic, aggressive power, which seeks to prolong and widen its dominion over both sections of the country, which have been growing more and more entirely at variance. We are told that we owe our growth in intelli-gence and the spread of education among us, to the cultivated classes of the North in superficial accomplishments, graceful oratory, and chivalrous quali-ties, they are nevertheless, too indolent to attain to North, it is true, is to be especially deplored, at the any accurate practical knowledge of science, or manufactures, or to any depth of philosophy or statesmanship.

Recent occurrences have rendered us too familiar with the real value and results of Southern government, floanciering and diplomacy. We see them in a plundered treasury, ruined credit and a distracted Union. Virginia, it is true, has been called the as the great entreput of the Continent, we may mother of States and of statesmen; but, at the time this title was applied to her, Virginia was hardly more particularly a Southern slave State than Massachusetts or New York; and, even now, her position among the States is a peculiar one.

We have now the spectacle of Seven states disowning their allegiance to the Federal Government, some of which owe their very existence to that government, while all are indebted to its fostering care and protection, for their treasuries, arsenals and other publie property, and even the preservation of slavery it-self. The pretext for this withdrawal is, that a connection with the North will no longer subserve the interests of slavery, and I have no hesitation in as-senting to this proposition; for it is the tendency of the peculiar institution, as it is extended over a wider area, to override the interests of free laboring commu-nities; and this tendency being discovered by Northern statesmen, it necessarily became their object to prevent slavery from being finally established, by the unrestrained increase of slave representation, as the basis of the government.

So much for slavery, de facto; let us now consider the policy of this government. The great commercial and manufacturing interests of the North are maintained by the demands of the South in almost all that appertains to arts and agriculture; and even for a great portion of their food and the coarse garments of their slaves, the latter depends on these disturbers of her peace, and that their hands Importation. All that the South itself produces is raw material, which can be neither eaten nor worn. till it has been sent away to be manufactured. Now, for the successful working of the new government three things are requisite; first, either a well sup-plied treasury, or good credit; secondly, a leading, fundamental idea in its constitution which will answer the requirements of that government, in a con-centrated form; and, thirdly, provisions for the education, moral and religious, in the spirit of republi can freedom, of the whole people.

But first, the treasury of the Southern people would soon be exhausted; for they require, besides the high-sounding title of the Confederate States, a standing army of not less than half a million men; next, the products of the soil are all required for the gration of Souls; or, The Pythagorean Doctrine." sustenance of masters and slaves; money they have not, except for the transactions of business, which is largely carried on by credit; and when that shall be gone, they will be absolutely paupers. The government will be robbed of its revenue on imports from the fact that the people will be compelled to purchase, not where they can buy cheapest, but where they can get the longest credit—that is, from France, who will not sell without cash, or good security, even though their goods be admitted free of duty. As a consequence, the South will be virtually exact glance which defines and marks out individuenslaved, body and soul, to their creditors of the ality? Ye say, "I know,"—when ye have searched sap the life out of any people. Add to this the ex-penses of the necessary offices, and that the population, already one-fourth or one-third negro, and not being recruited by white emigration, will, in a quarter of a century, hardly contain a single white man of pure blood, and will be without a government competent to control the amalgamated mixture, and you have a finished picture of the consequences of Secession; and one which, however seemingly exaggerated, can be amply confirmed by statistics.

As we have already described the higher classes any government, much less one so anomalous as ed freedom is a mere empty name; while their system of slavery exercises over them the worst form of tyranny; for that system is inconsistent with the real liberty of the slaveholder himself, binding him the bondage of fear, and of the moral corruption the legalized slavery of any portion of its own population; human bondage has been merely a transitory consequence of war and conquest.

But we are now told that Southern statesmen have established a great truth never before discovered, viz: that there is a great barrier raised by Nature between the black and white races, which is suffithis hypothesis, or give more strength to their frame

On the contrary, the true policy, the necessary effect, of a good government, is to bring about a fudiverse from our own, it should either not have been as possible.

Slavery, then, in the first place, is morally wrong; best-known evidences given by the success of coun- tioning of the Lord. tries in which it has existed, it does not secure that general prosperity, pence and happiness, which are trine of the Metempsychosis, we find it standing on the propor objects of all just governments; conset he very threshold of time, originating-if we may quently, the people of the South, by adopting it as so speak—with those ancient philosophers, the first their fundamental institution, cannot devolop their who ever attempted to teach the people. This was escurces, or do justice to themselves.

For instance, the heavy taxation which will be necessarily imposed, will directly rob the wealthy of their surplus; and those who are poor will have to be subject to no merely material advantages, but, so betake themselves to labor for which they are en- far as observation could pronounce upon this most tirely unfitted, or leave the Confederacy. We have subtle essence, that it appeared to be the rule, the shown that Commerce and Manufactures cannot guide, the law, the triumphant superior of matter; flourish on the same soil with Slavery; for the slave therefore they assumed that the soul must be a part can only be driven to the mechanical culture of the soil; but the lash can never infuse a knowledge of claimed to trace up this essence, by the very necesmanufacturing processes into the inferior understanding of the negro; and if his labor could be so transferred, who then would do the work of tillage?

Free laborers from the North will not go there; and even the educated Southern gentleman is too in dolent to undertake the instruction of his own children; and, therefore, either sends them abroad. or procures a teacher from the North. Any attempt on the part of the South to manufacture for herself. must, therefore, prove entirely abortive. The relative statistics of North and South prove conclusively that ruin and degradation are the inevitable results of dependence on slave labor. Even the soil becomes hopelessly deteriorated. If slaves are set to raise the direct means of subsistence, they will consume the direct means of subsistence, they will consume were created for the purpose of ministering to this all that they produce; and, as we have shown, they orb. They assumed that these various orders of are wholly unfit for manufacturing operations. At all events, they must be provided with teachers for its imprisoned within the mask of flesh. And while a time, into ruin and bankruptcy, consequent upon rary spheres of probation, returning to their original repudiation at the South, the latter section will soon purity. This earth they held to be the grand theabe forced to return for more credit, and while its tre of all existence, all forms, all types, that were or material progress will be arrested, for a season, the ever should be. In this system, too, they recognized North will have the consolation of knowing that no that all the various forms, even the plant as well as wealth produced by slavery; and we cannot deny tented the slave population, it must be sustained by that the North does derive some compensating ad- the wit and energies of its citizens, or it will speed-vaninge from this connection; but the directly inju- ily be paralyzed. Were the country covered with rious results of the institution are to be seen among mines of gold, they could never be made available the people of the South themselves, upon whom it without the intelligent labor of white freemen : and evidently acts as a moral miasma. For, while the something of Yankee that and ingenuity are abso-nristocracy of that section may be equal to the more lutely required to maintain in working order the machine of representative government.

Southern Confederacy, can finally prosper. However rich the soil, however numerous and con-

present juncture, and that is the new tariff, which virtually excludes from your ports what otherwise would find its way directly here instead of to the South; and which, therefore, contributes to encourage that Confederacy. But commerce must again return to her best route; and, while New York may be robbed for the present, of her proud pre-eminence hope that this very difficulty will act as an incite ment to renewed energy on the part of the people and the government, to preserve that old Union which has Right and Justice and Liberty on its side. We have still the power to remedy this error, before the Southern Confederacy, which, in its madness, is mindful of the effects of its proceedings on foreign nations, has, through the success of its free trade policy, obtained a recognition by other powers-a recognition which, as completing the disruption of the Republic, would cause the overthrow of the Mon-roe doctr'n; impel even effete old Spin to revive her pretensions over Mexico, and, perhaps, lead to the submission of Texas, and, it might be, of the Southern Confederacy itself, to her despotic sway; when, exhausted by intestine feuds, that Confeder acy shall seek the protection of a State with which she has more real affinity than with any other.

But before the flame of Liberty shall be thus trampled out, there are twenty millions of Northern hearts to be subdued—hearts which still beat with the love of country, and thrill to the undying memories of the past. These shall yet overcome the tem-porary insanity of the multitude, and the designs of demagogues, who, since they can no longer govern a great nation, would fain tyrannize over a few of its dismembered fragments. We know the hearts these disturbers of her peace, and that their hands will joyfully aid in the great work of reconciliation and restoration.

Reported for the Banner of Light. THE TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS.

A Lecture by Miss Emma Hardinge, at Aliston Hall, Boston, on Sunday Evening, April 7th, 1861.

Miss Emma Hardinge again addressed, under spirit control, the audience at Allston Hall, Boston, on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, the 7th inst. The subject of her evening discourse was, "The Transmi-

The speaker read, by way of introduction, an illustrative passage from Bailey's "Festus," commencing, " There seems a sameness among things."

"Thus love is all that's wise, fair, good, and happy." And to love well, ye must know well. To know well, search the scriptures well. Whence came your affections? Whence were born your fates and prethe Northern States, instead of from England and dilections? In what vocabulary did ye learn to name them? By what instruction, or what rule did ye discorn? Out of earth's millions, who gave you that North - a condition of things of itself sufficient to the causes well, compared the ancients' thought, the minds of the great dead, with the living facts, through books, through observation.

And we would ask-How do you know to love, how to hate, how to discern? Who taught that unselfish, ennobling love of parent and child? All these are central thought. Thought analyzed-we find, beyond all books, before all schools, outside of and within all college lore, there is a mighty teaching spirit, a small, still voice, before all books were made, that wrote the law of heart and mind and life; and all that men have gathered thereunte is in the South, they are incompetent, from lack of deep nothing more than that experience spirit first did and thorough cultivation, to conduct with judgment point to. He cannot, then, afford to dispense with those deep, soul-like teachings that have transcended whose constitution proclaims, in the name of a free ancient time, when when print poke to spirit, when man people, that slavery is the corner stone of their po walked with God, and in the garden of his soul's whited will do not be did not be sent and in the the lowest phases of human existence. Their boast stillness of the fervid noon, responded to that cry— "Adam, where art thou?"-by standing forth the life and image of the voice that spake of God within himself.

We are sometimes told that the doctrine of the down, as it really does, to the mere raising of cer-transmigration of Souls originated with certain tain products of the soil; and keeping his soul in Hindoo sages. Sometimes the idea is attributed to Pythagoras. Neither assumption is true. The idea which fear always engenders. Never has even a of the Metempsychosis, together with your affections monarchial government been based, heretofore, on and predilections, came with those whisperings of the spirit that were before all systems. Pythagoras and Swedenberg defined them best into systems-Pythagoras the musician, the metaphysician, the physiologist, the spiritualist, the seer-the mathematical Pythagoras, who, in the ages of the past, taught all things, and through so clear and perfect a medium, that the world has immortalized his glocient to insure the success of their Confederacy, rious name. Those teachings in the form of the an-That this theory is fallacious could readily be shown; clent mysticism, were never before so well defined. but even were it true, it would not render more cor-rect the practical workings of these who proceed on Metempsychesis simply this earth, as the sphere where the grand drama of transmigration was taking place. Swedenborg, on the contrary, widened the view of the Samian seer, opened up the heavens, traced out sion of the various elements of the population, and the destiny of man, not only through this, but illimremove such as cannot be assimilated; and if the itable spheres of space, in each one of which he re-African race is indeed so radically and irreconcilably cognized in the famous Doctrine of Correspondences, precisely the same idea that underlies the Metemintroduced among us, or be now got rid of as quickly psychosis of Pythagoras. It is enough to say that these two spoke more clearly and more definitely than any of their predecessors that which the soul first econdly, it is impolitic; thirdly, according to the whispered of, when it began to respond to the ques-

When we attempt to trace the origin of the docthe central idea which they attempted to embody. They recognized that the soul was a part of God, uncreated and uncompounded; that, as it appeared to of that Infinite Essence, which ever was. They also sity of its indestructible qualities, through time, into eternal future. Soul, then, they pronounced to be the imperishable, unchangeable part, on which the forms of matter-as our modern poet declares-"are strung like ever-changing beads." They believed in a progression of the soul through different spheres, each of which was a probationary state, belonging to this erath. In that small and exclusive view of life which alone the ancients were enabled to take, by observation of this grand and splendid theof existence, they conceived that stars, suns, systems, were nothing more than so many dependents upon the supposed central earth. They conceived that these were the habitations of spifits who spirits partook of the nature and quality of the spirsuch purposes; and it is well known that the teach- they deemed that all were bound in one harmonic ers are not to be found in the South, where all la- chain of being, they also assumed that this earth bor, whether of mind or body, is esteemed degrading, was in reality the centre of all; that from hence except for the acquirement of superficial accom- went forth the mighty souls that should eventuate the superficial accomplishments, and where very few are able to apply ally be merged in the grand primal essence of God; their knowledge to the practical purposes of life, either in the department of art or of government. ing to contemplate the Eternal, had fallen from their Therefore, though the North may be plunged, for high estate, and were now gliding through tempo-Government founded on such a basis as that of the the animal, were so many types of the blind passions within man; that each one of these forms was sym bolical of character.

Remember, these ancients did not conceive of that which this march is written. universal system of progress which the experiences. There are other considerations growing out of the of this world are now beginning to define to an deep and carnest investigations of this doctrine, that seemed to them to be a memory of the past. Hence perceive upon this earth every gradation of forms; they conceived of retrogression. In the midst of we recognize from the absolute necessity of the imto rise; but by a constant series of oscillations, probationary experiences, alone, could the soul regain that is not to bear fruition in all its parts. the lost estate from which it had fallen. They pointed then to the various spheres, the the thick prison-house of matter. This was the origin of the doctrine of the Metempsychosis. They could not fail to realize that in every animal, however rude, there was some fragment of that thought, that spiritual perception of higher and better things which finds a voice in man. Those creatures, like humanity, are capable of improvement; and hence it is impossible to define or mark the difference between reason and instinct. The moderns talk of That," they said, "which is capable of improvement at all, must be throughout infinity." They found, therefore, no line of demarcation between the partial and the entire growth of the spirit. Hence, they reasoned, the spirit is a unity; it is the form alone which is the prison of the spirit; it is only that which crawls the earth; breaking through this narrow captivity, existence would ascend from the grub to the butterfly, from the butterfly may soar into the magnificent eagle, and this again is but the prison-house that may itself be elaborated into the glorious temple of man, once more a grub of a higher estate, to be eliminated into the immortal butterfly of soul.

These were the central doctrines of the ancients. In the doctrine of Pythagoras we find a wider sweep of teaching, the system that was taught by the ancients beginning to take the form of progress. Claiming that he, the "thrice-born man," could remember the scenes through which he had passed, he attributed his finer susceptibilities, his capacity to appreciate the wondrous music of the spheres, the and angles of all creation, his marvelous system of laws, which made him the wonder of the age-to a great variety of earthly experiences, the dim reflechim a receptive organism, and flashing before him in the fires of inspiration, appeared to him to belong to his own experiences. The thoughts that found an echo in his brain were to his perception the memories of the past, and he thought himself one who lived again and again upon the earth, and whilst he left the sphere of human existence, gods them selves might become incarnate.

He bewildered the minds of his followers by narrowing down the hereafter to this earth, instead of directing their aspirations to that better, that progressive sphere, which it is the joy of the Spiritualist to believe will be freed from the incumbrances of materiality, where the soul shall escape, once and forever, from all the tyrannous restrictions of mortality, and never again be condemned to bear the burden of earth and its woes.

The doctrine of Swedenborg takes a yet wider range. It teaches that on this earth the mortal woof is spun, once and forever; that, instead of a retrogression, every step in life is an advance. What back, by the aid of material science, his own present | rest that remaineth. existence, to the day when the earth was " without form and void," when it was a mere vaporous mass. ognized, chemist as he was, that in the doctrine of the Metempsychosis there was at least some foundation connecting it with the idea of progress for allthe chain which binds up all physical forms.

Such is the hypothesis, in this day of spiritual analysis, of bold, out-reaching speculation, when free speech and free thought are married, and the wildest conjecture is recognized to be nothing more than a distorted fact.

This is an age of hypothesis. The doctrine of corvelopment theory. The materialist, accustomed to find only in exact science his measure of truthlight, more light!"-choking down the whisperings of that intuition which claims there must have been a foundation for this universal belief in the eternal connection of all things, may snear at the development theory, but still fact after fact is obtaining in the minds that dare to search.

Investigating the origin and growth of the world and of man, we find that the solid and fluid globe first existed in the form of what is termed the cous element, of which the simple varieties are only some four or five in number, and of these it is very questionable whether some are not compounds. A strange theory is now prevalent, that nitrogen gas which forms a large part of the atmosphere, may be a compound. There is a question whether all the primary gases may not be reduced to two-hydro-gen, the lightest known body, and oxygen, which enters largely into the composition of every existing form of matter. In these, perhaps, we discover the magnificent base of all chemistry, and from this point spring forth all the splendid varieties that make up this great, round, rushing world. From the beginning of creation, all is one grand and splendid action of the Invisible Chemist, who, with these simple elements, and the ever restless knife of electricity cutting and carving up different portions of hese two gases, is able to produce the world of forms, the magnificent phantasmagoria of varied existence which we call life. Everywhere we find ife-in the smallest point of atmosphere, in every drop of dew, in every grain of sand. And through out the whole stupendous work of creation, chemistry is still the all-powerful instrument and agent Why should man be exempt from the universal law? So far from having been created by a s ecial, arbitrary act, is he not rather the sequel, the final result, of all those experimental adaptations that preceded him in the lower forms of life?

This is the Metempsychosis that Pythagoras dimly conceived, and that compelled him, long before any had power to demonstrate it, to write it down, and point to the innumerable strata beneath man, and proclaim that from and through each of those grades man had come-from out the viewless ether, the flying cometary mass, the dull-colored nebular star, from out the ancient boiling seas, the leaping flame, the wild tempestuous winds, the ancient sea beaches and melancholy ferns; that man was prophecied in every part; that nature, grand, glorious nature, in her mother-heart, held him, her darling, till, in the fullness of time she sent him forth to have dominion over all.

Such is the life of man, and such his origin. We do not conceive that it lessens the dignity of his creation. But what power, and what a sublime destiny it stamps upon his future. From what he has been, what he may be looms up in such radiant NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED glory, that we are fain to proclaim-It is good to

We believe that the original destrine of the Metemp live, it is glorious to be here, it is a mighty thing t sychosis was not the material one that subsequently be a living soul! Tell this to your children; write obtained. It was nothing more than that vague it on their foreheads; pointing down to the earth, transcendental view in which the Oriental exclighted tell them, in their abasement, that they came from to picture the soul's progress, pointing to the differ- this; but with the other hand point to the shining ent spheres of animal life as the types, or else the stars, and tell them these atoms are marching up to actual realities, through which the soul may pass. God, and they are parts of the great matter on absolute certainty. They had not the spheres of belong to the future life of man. Swedenborg, and observation that belong to the moderns, which would many others of those who presented this Metemhave enabled them to determine that life was a vast psychosis dectrine in its most tangible form, all progress. The dim shadows of the coming morn pointed dinly to a provious state of existence. We their fatalism, they also attributed to man that pow- mensity of creation, as well as from all that we can er of choice which enables him to carve out his own derive from the teachings of higher authorities, that destiny; although the most ancient Hindoos were there is an infinity of states in the hereafter. We accustomed to say that Brahmainscribed the destiny cannot look upon this earth without a recognition of of every living creature on his skull, they yet at- the fact, that for every human soul there must be a tributed to every act the responsibility that should future condition analogous to that which it now ocnour the absolute reward or punishment. Hence cupies. The view which we are compelled to take of they determined that man was able to fall as well as the eternal wisdom of our Creator, renders it impossible to conceive of any present state of being

We believe that in the eternal scheme there are as many marches of existence below this earth, as different species of animal existence; each one of there are above it; but we do not recognize the earth these, they said, represents the working of some one itself as one. The conditions of mind and matter of those passions that drag the spirit down, by which are absolutely defined and settled. There is no sort the wings of the soul have been lost and shrouded in of relation between the viewless, immaterial spirit, and the gross, material body. There is no more relation or likeness between the two than there is between these fair lilies and the coarse ground from which they sprang. Hence, there cannot be conceived any condition of matter now existing, that can be a resultant from spirit; nor can we imagine the spirits of lower worlds passing again into this material sphere. We might as well expect the englet to re-enter its shell, the acorn, which has given birth this difference, but the ancients could not find it. to the oak, once again to encase the giant of the forest. The butterfly does not return to the grub, nor the soul to the mould in which its form has been fushioned.

Hence do we claim, too, that this earth is not yet complete; that here is one starting-point in the great chemistry of life, and that there are myriads and myriads of them; to every world its better world, to earth its better earth; to this, again, the high supernal heavens. The physical world is more excellent now than once it was. The atmosphere is clearer, the fires are brighter, the seas more translucent. Not only is this so by the absolute and inherent necessity of progress, but man, also, has contributed to this glorious result.

From out the human form there passes a subtle fluid, of which we another time will speak. Mon call it Magnetism. It is that by which the psychologist is enabled to determine character; fon this subtle influence, adhering to all objects with which the body has come in contact, proclaims that the body and the soul go forth together. If all things, then, reveal your sphere, what is the result to them? chiding of the stars as they passed through other, If these bodily emanations, thus charged with char-his perceptions of the inevitable law of the squares acter, are found in every place where you have been, does not that character affect the earth, the atmocalculation and the harmony of numbers—all the sphere, the forms by which you are surrounded? It is deep and soul-like perceptions of Nature and her the very necessity of the eternal chemistry. In an atmosphere charged with the breath and emanations of many human beings, if it be submitted to careful tions of past ages, which, in all possibility, stored up analysis, there is first found a strange vegetable in the treasure-houses of the spirit-worlds, finding in matter, and from this, by subjection to certain conditions, appear microscopic forms of life. We know that these were said to be hypotheses, until within the last few years. But in this realm of hypothesis, some daring minds have trod, and verified this theory.
What follows? The air is dim with your character. The very atmosphere you breathe is fashioned by yourselves. The air is prating of your where-abouts. The dread artillery of heaven proclaims vengeance or compensation. Your deeds return in rain, bringing health or postilence, just as you have acted. Above you and above you yet, up to the most distant realms of space, stretches one constant chain of atmosphere; and your least action or lightest word is felt throughout the infinite universe.

Everything that tends to produce inharmony in this grand scheme is a failure, and must die. Every bitter word, every unkind tone, every ungentle deed every harsh, malicious thought must come into judgment with this supreme good. But whatever harmonizes with the progressive life of man, whatever then? The seer looked down upon the earth, and be brings more light, more peace, whatever helps the held in all its lower forms that mighty system of world up to its great salvation, that will live forever; chemistry of which man was a part. He traced it is that permanency which we call eternal life—the

In view of this constant scheme of changing form the last dread enemy, so long feared, is at last found Through material experiments he was enabled to do to be the most beneficial, the most necessary of all termine the quality of matter; and though he could the agents for the world's salvation. Death breaks only, faintly perceive that spirit, the triumphant up that which is imperfect. Death it is, that, delord over all, must have been, at some period, de-pendent upon matter for its externalization, he rec-in a higher and holier world fulfill some advanced and progressive mission.

In the constant transmigration of the spirit of all things, from a lower to a higher development, we recognize death as the universal agent; no more the herald of a reign of terror, but the beautiful Liberty Angel who opens the gate for the good and true to pass to a diviner sphere.

The Pythagorean doctrine, and that of Correspondences, then, are true, in the great system of universal chemistry, from the simple dual elements which respondences and the doctrine of the Metsmpsychosis attraction and repulsion have externalized, in hynow stand side by side with what is termed the co-drogen and oxygen, to this beautiful world of forms drogen and oxygen, to this beautiful world of forms -the transmigrations by which the immertal spirit has passed through all outward manifestations, until crushing out the voice of that spirit that cries for it reappears on this most glorious image of the Deity, man, the temple of the Holy Ghost.

> NEW BOOK BY

EMMA HARDINGE

NOW READY, THE WILDFIRE CLUB.

BY: EMMA HARDINGE,

"That the dead are seen no more, I will not undertake to "That the dead are seen no more, I will not undertake to maintain, against the concurrent testimony of all ages, and all nations. There is no people rude or unlearned, among whom apparitions of the dead are not related and believed. This opinion which prevails as far as human nature is diffused could become universal only by its truth." Vide "Basalas"." I be Johnson iclas."-[Dr. Johnson.

Spirit is like the thread whereon are strung The beads or worlds of life. It may be here, It may be there that I shall live again—° • • But live again I shall where'er it be.—[Festus.

CONTENTS.

The Princess: A Vision of Royalty in the Spheres.
The Monomaniae, or the Spirit Birde.
The Haunted Grange, or The Last Tenant: Being an Account of the Life and Times of Mrs. Hauntah Morrison, sometimes styled the Witch of Rockwood.
Life: A Fragment. Margaret Infelix, or a Narrative concerning a Haunted

Mau.
The Improvisatore, or Torn Leaves from Life History.
The Witch o' Lowenthal.
The Phantom Mether, or The Story of a Recluse.
Haunted Houses. No. 1: The Picture Spectres.
Haunted Houses. No. 2: The Sanford Ghost.
Christmas Stories. No. 1: The Stranger Gaest—An Incident founded on Fact.
Christmas Stories. No. 2: Falth; or, Mary Macdonald.
The Wildfire Club: A Tale founded on Fact.
Note.

BOSTON:

WILLIAM BERRY & COMPANY, 8 1-2 Brattle street. 1861.

Price $1. Booksellers, and controllers of public meetings are requested to send in their orders early. Price per dozen, $8. Sent to any part of the United States (except California postage free, on receipt of $1. Fob 23.

> JOB PRINTING, OF EVERY DESCRIPTION,

> > At this Offic.