INVITES YOU TO DISCOVER THE AMERICAN SOCIETY for the OCCULT SCIENCES

The American Society for the Occult Sciences has been founded to bring you news, special events and benefits, and research information that can be gotten from no other single source . . .

As a member, you will be invited to special events, seminars, demonstrations—many of which will be personally supervised by HANS HOLZER.

As a member, you will receive THE PSYCHIC WORLD, the Society's monthly bulletin, written to keep you posted on latest scientific explorations, to help you learn how to develop your own "psi" abilities, to let you share the ESP experiences of your fellow society members.

As a member, you will be invited to special travel events—including a "Ghost Hunt" within the New England area . . . an overseas study of English poltergeists . . . continental hauntings.

As a member, you will be entitled to the consultation services of a specially screened and tested group of psychic "contacts"—astrologers, mediums, gifted sensitives and "seers", and others who have had their abilities tested and verified by the Society.

As a member, you will be entitled to purchase special books—including many best sellers at substantial discounts. (At least 25% off list price . . . and often as much as 80% off!) You will also be entitled to purchase special reports, monographs and private papers written for members only.

As a member, you will be offered many products tested by the society—calculated to develop and expand your psychic abilities.

As a member, you will be given the opportunity to take part in special social events—seminars, psychic development sessions, seances, demonstrations—to be conducted in key cities throughout the nation.

NO OTHER SOCIETY offers so many benefits, such a wide and varied program of activities, publications and events. If you act today, you may get a Charter Membership of 14 months for only $10.00. (The price will probably be much higher after the first of next year.) In addition, you will be entitled to a special bonus gift—for new members only.

SPECIAL BONUS

Join right now and receive FREE a $6.98 LP record: "HANS HOLZER TELLS HOW TO DEVELOP YOUR EXTRA SENSORY PERCEPTION" (On the reverse side: "WHAT IS WITCHCRAFT".) PLUS "The Edgar Cayce Reader" a best selling book.

Mail the coupon right now. After 35 days, if you are not totally delighted with the benefits of membership, just let us know. And every penny you have paid will be refunded.

WITH the fifth issue of BEYOND REALITY on the newsstands, I feel it is time now to discuss the format of our publication. Although the majority of our readers have written in praise of our publication and its format, some show disfavor.

I have heard from many readers concerning the loss of editorial matter because of the full page illustrations and large titles. At this time, I would like to inform my readers that we are putting out a magazine, an elaborate magazine for persons probing the world BEYOND REALITY, who feel they are in need of a good consumer-type publication, and not a news letter nor digest, and most certainly not just another pulp.

First, the illustrations add a little feeling to the otherwise very drab-looking magazine that it would be without the extra effort in thought and artistic ability which adds to the interest of the articles and stories.

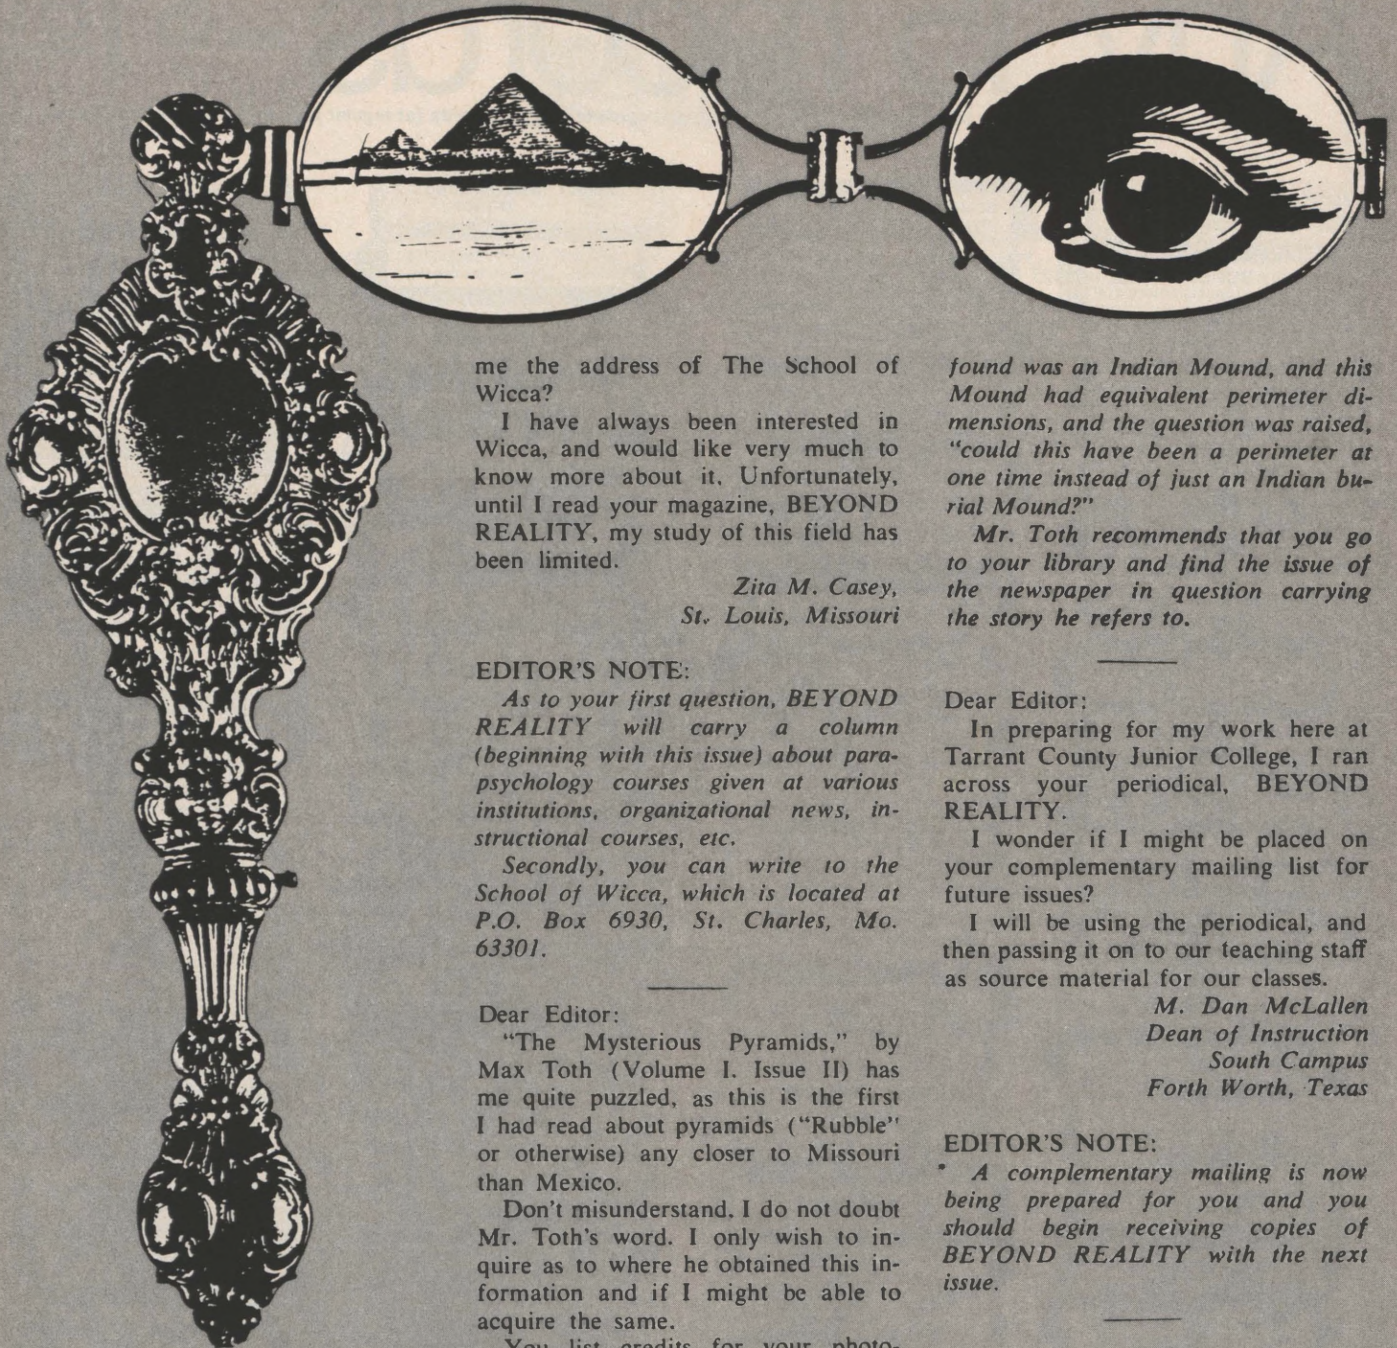

Secondly, I would never sacrifice written material for art. This I can assure you. I would not stretch the stories just for the sake of more written matter which would not add any more to your knowledge or pleasure.

If more and better material were available to me, I would add several more pages to the magazine, despite the cost, but, I will like it to look like a magazine. Many readers have written to me asking for more "way-out" material. This again I will do only when I can locate true way-out material, not fiction which many other publications dealing with the occult are passing off as true accounts.

Our staff is a well-qualified group of people knowledgeable in matters of the Occult. Equally qualified are our many contributors. We are constantly in communication, and we are constantly on the alert for material which contains foundation, for we know that our readers are not looking for fiction, but instead are seeking the truth. Your letters are most welcome, keep writing.

Sincerely,
Harry Belil

LETTERS

Dear Editor:

Having just finished reading your latest issue of BEYOND REALITY, I would like to send you my sincerest congratulations. Your magazine seems to state facts in plain layman's terms, which allow many people, unaware but interested in parapsychological events, to get acquainted with them, and its varied and allied fields.

Can you let me know something about various universities, colleges and organizations which have classes in parapsychology? Also, can you give me the address of The School of Wicca?

I have always been interested in Wicca, and would like very much to know more about it. Unfortunately, until I read your magazine, BEYOND REALITY, my study of this field has been limited.

Zita M. Casey,
St. Louis, Missouri

EDITOR'S NOTE:

As to your first question, BEYOND REALITY will carry a column (beginning with this issue) about parapsychology courses given at various institutions, organizational news, instructional courses, etc.

Secondly, you can write to the School of Wicca, which is located at P.O. Box 6930, St. Charles, Mo. 63301.

Dear Editor:

"The Mysterious Pyramids," by Max Toth (Volume I. Issue II) has me quite puzzled, as this is the first I had read about pyramids ("Rubble" or otherwise) any closer to Missouri than Mexico.

Don't misunderstand. I do not doubt Mr. Toth's word. I only wish to inquire as to where he obtained this information and if I might be able to acquire the same.

You list credits for your photographs, but no references. I would imagine however that such things are left to the writers themselves.

Mr. Toth lists none (save on energy and structure). I sincerely would like to know more about the existence of this pyramid near St. Louis and am in hopes you can assist me as my local county library can't seem to do so.

Ella Van Dyke
St. Louis, Missouri

EDITOR'S NOTE:

According to Mr. Toth, in the late Spring or early Summer in 1972, the St. Louis Post Dispatch carried an article regarding an archaeological find in which it was claimed that what was found was an Indian Mound, and this Mound had equivalent perimeter dimensions, and the question was raised, "could this have been a perimeter at one time instead of just an Indian burial Mound?"

Mr. Toth recommends that you go to your library and find the issue of the newspaper in question carrying the story he refers to.

Dear Editor:

In preparing for my work here at Tarrant County Junior College, I ran across your periodical, BEYOND REALITY.

I wonder if I might be placed on your complementary mailing list for future issues?

I will be using the periodical, and then passing it on to our teaching staff as source material for our classes.

M. Dan McLallen
Dean of Instruction
South Campus
Forth Worth, Texas

EDITOR'S NOTE:

A complementary mailing is now being prepared for you and you should begin receiving copies of BEYOND REALITY with the next issue.

Dear Editor:

I am a student gathering information on the occult. I am greatly interested in the field, and I am presently doing a study on Witchcraft. I am in the process of looking for books on the subject.

If possible, do you know where I might be able to find a book, written in English, on the subject, and published in the 15th or 16th or Century?

Ron York
South River, New Jersey

BOOKS FOR REVIEW

MIND COSMOLOGY, by Anthony Norvell, Parker, $6.95. This amazing book reveals how you may use the secret doctrine of Mind Cosmology to perform wondrous miracles—and translate your inner dreams into the outer reality you desire.

The book, from which you may achieve a fortune and gain financial security on any level of living you choose, combines the latest revelations of the space age with the age-old mystic truths of the Far East.

When you tune in on its cosmo-astral forces, brilliant new powers will be yours. You will be granted psychic guidance, the ability of clairvoyant vision, and the secret of astral projection, says the author, who has traveled to all parts of the globe investigating occult and psychic phenomena, and lecturing on mystic philosophy, metaphysics and ESP.

THE ASTROLOGERS AND THEIR CREED: An Historical Outline, by Christopher McIntosh, Praeger, $4.95. Today, more than ever, before, Astrology is enjoying unprecedented popularity.

But, how many people know where Astrology came from, how Astrologers work, or what traditions underlie their own sign?

This book, which traces the development of astrology from its origins to the present time, provides thoughtful answers to such questions, not only for enthusiasts but also for the skeptics who regard astrology as a remnant of medieval superstition.

THE HISTORY OF ASTROLOGY, by Zolar, Arco (Illustrated), $7.95. From the Chaldean astrologers who, 5,000 years ago, sought clues to the future in the position of the planets to its present-day revival, here is a complete history of the world's oldest science by the popular astrologer who has been publishing books on the occult since 1932.

Presented here is astrology as the world's oldest science, as an ancient and universal religion, as man's first majestic effort toward cosmic understanding and as a study of human character and understanding.

THE INNERSPACE PROJECT, by Jeff Berner, World, $8.95. Written by an astronaut of inner-space, this book was created as a survival handbook, a collection of overviews and new perspectives, alternative realities and techniques for expanding consciousness without drugs.

Chapters on self-realization, daily life, the eternal Now, the material world, problem-solving, the environment of Planet Earth, the media, brainwashing, education, the generation gap, business, the military, ecology, and sources for the design of alternative futures come together in an attempt to awaken the passengers of Spaceship Earth, who find themselves marooned in the 20th century.

This book is a plea for the enlightened and imaginative use of the human mind and spirit, and the good housekeeping of the physical world.

ENA TWIGG: Medium, by Ena Twigg (with Ruth Hagy Brod), Hawthorn, $6.95. The British medium Ena Twigg had allegedly communicated with the American bishop James D. Pike, who was lost in the Palestinian desert.

On September 4, 1969, Ena Twigg, her husband, Harry, and Canon John Pearce-Higgins sat in the Twigg living room, and suddenly a voice commanded Mrs. Twigg to turn on the tape recorder.

It was the voice of Bishop Pike, who had been dead for 24 hours.

The entire transcript of that amazing tape is presented in this autobiography, along with the author's other incredible experiences as psychic and medium between two worlds.

HANS HOLZER'S HAUNTED HOUSES, by Hans Holzer, Crown (Illustrated), $5.95. The world's most famous psychic investigator and the author of 26 books, presents a guided tour of over 50 haunted houses—from simple cottages and farmhouses to mansions and fortresses.

Ghosts, according to the author, an assistant professor at the New York Institute of Technology, where he teaches parapsychology, are the surviving emotional memories of people who have either died tragically or whose last moments on earth were especially unhappy or traumatic.

DESTINATION MARS, by Martin Caidin, Doubleday, $7.95. Is Mars the only planet in our solar system other than Earth capable of sustaining life? The Red Planet has been the subject of intense study and speculation for centuries. Now, for the first time, the author, an authority in astronautics, aviation and science, demonstrates how much we already know and are still learning about Mars, and shows how much we have to gain by deciphering the secrets of our closest planetary neighbor.

In a fact-filled and fascinating narrative, Mr. Caidin tells how the successful flight of our Mariner spacecraft with their incredible sensing and testing devices and TV cameras radically changed long-cherished scientific concepts about Mars.

THE ICE AGE, by Bjorn Kurten, Putnam (Illustrated), $16.95. This book is a clearly written and comprehensive account of that vast pre-historic time when most of our planet was covered by ice sheets that has devastated our globe time and time again. We feel that this book tells a most enthralling story, the formation of the world man lives in and his emergence into it. Photos and paintings how survivors from the past sites look today. Charts and maps spell out the extensive technical data in the text.

We strongly recommend this book for the student of geology and anthropology and, for the layman who wants to know more about the formation of the Earth and the forces that act on it. A wealth of information on subjects of perpetual fascination.

CHANCE AND LIFE, by Marc Oraison, Doubleday, $4.95. In this provocative exploration of the scope and value of human knowledge, the author thoughtfully analyzes the basic differences between the scientists and the man of faith in their views of life.

An outstanding French psychiatrist, Mr. Oraison intends to provoke and question rather than provide final explanations as he sets forth the concept of "knowing" in general, and discusses different kinds of knowledge and the means by which we arrive at them.

He has written many books concerning the problems man encounters, particularity in the area of sexuality.

DICTIONARY OF SPIRITUALISM, by Harry E. Wedeck and Wade Baskin, Philosophical Library, $10. This encyclopedic work surveys a wide variety of supernatural phenomena, ranging from the cosmogonies of the earliest mythmakers to the esoteric practices of present-day gurus.

Analyzing a multiplicity of myths, legends, cults and mysterious occurrences, it leads the reader beyond the confines of history, psychology and religion into the inner depths of the human personality and the outer reaches of the imagination.

It incorporates the myriad results of man's fascination with the unknown, his insatiable thirst for knowledge, and his attempts through symbolism to link the finite and the infinite.

A handy reference work for the scholar, it is an indispensable vade mecum for all those who approach the Age of Aquarius with an open mind.

ESPECIALLY IRENE, A Guide To Psychic Awareness, by Irene F. Hughes, Steinerbooks, $1.65. What is extra-sensory perception? How does it work? Can it be developed? These are some of the questions answered in this book by a well-known clairvoyant.

Mrs. Hughes has rather impressive credentials as a seeress. Among her predictions were the Apollo 13 disaster, the Kennedy assassinations, the 1967 Chicago blizzard, President Johnson's decision not to seek reelection.

Mrs. Hughes discusses her theory that everyone has latent psychic abilities he can learn to develop. She sets forth the methods for cultivating these abilities in straightforward fashion.

Techniques include telepathy between partners under controlled conditions, thought projections into photosensitive paper, blindfolded color sensitivity training, meditation and receiving images from objects belonging to strangers.

The book also offers Mrs. Hughes prophecies for the future. Some are frightening—another civil war in the United States between 1989 and 1991. Some are unexpected: a unified Germany by 1978, an entirely new United States Constitution by 2029. Others are pleasant or amusing—a way to conquer baldness; polka-dotted striped or flowered automobiles, all with computerized safety devices.

BURMESE SUPERNATURALISM, by Melford E. Spiro, Prentice-Hall, $3.95. This is the only full-length, wholly comprehensive account of the Burmese folk religion and its relation to the traditional Buddhism of the country. This fascinating subject is examined in relationship both to its historical, social and political background and to its effect on society, culture and personality in modern Burma.

Based on extensive interviews and research conducted by the author in Burma, this unique volume explores such vital issues as the social, cultural and psychological characteristics that give rise to and support supernaturalism; whether animism or Buddhism is really the basic belief of the Burmese people; and whether the two religious systems function antithetically within the society or reinforce each other.

Life presented many unusual experiences when I was fifteen years old. I moved away from Memphis, Tennessee to Louisiana, and went to school and worked in New Orleans. I returned home on vacations to Memphis. It was during one of my vacation times in August that I decided to return to the old church that I attended regularly when I lived in Memphis. The church was a good three miles away from my home and I had to walk down the main road to the church. I went alone, not realizing that I would have to return home after 9:00 p.m., alone, and that the street was as black as midnight! It was just outside of the city limits on the eastern part of Memphis. Streetcar tracks ran along beside the main road, but there was little traffic on this particular Sunday night.

As I was walking along the road, suddenly it was as though a voice screamed at me to get onto the streetcar tracks! I took another step and then found that I couldn't take any more steps and froze in my tracks. I stood there trembling for a moment, trying to determine what it was that I should do—should I really walk over to the streetcar tracks, or should I go forward and forget the terrifying voice that was urging me to get out of the road? Just then, the faint headlights of a car coming far away down the road appeared, and I felt a little relieved, thinking that it was good that some other human being was close by.

As the car approached me, I began to be horrified, because right in front of me there was a huge snake, coiled and ready to strike! I didn't know whether it had escaped from Overton Park Zoo or whether it had just come from somewhere out of the woods. Indeed, it was very huge, almost like a python, but not quite that large. As the car approached, I turned and ran, and jumped onto the streetcar tracks; the car saw the snake and ran over it and more than that, stopped and ran back and forth across it until it killed the snake, and then went on. I was too frightened to do anything but walk very hurriedly the rest of the way.

As if that wasn't enough, there was not a single light on in any of the houses on the street where I lived and there were no street lights. As I started down the street, I felt someone close beside me in the pitch darkness. I ran to the edge of the road and tried to stay very close to it, running as fast as I could, with this thing running right on my heels. I knew that it was another human being and that whoever it was did not think good thoughts. I almost lost the direction to my own home, because it was so black, and suddenly I swerved onto the driveway of the house next door and started screaming.

At that point, my mother turned on the lights and came out onto the porch and there we saw the shadow of a man continuing running down the street. Indeed, he was so close to me at all times, that I felt that he was going to grab me at any moment.

The only warning that I had of the person was that I felt someone breathing on my neck, before I actually heard the footsteps behind me. They started far away from me and then gained in distance between us. So, actually, the breathing on my neck was a psychic warning. Continued on next page

As far as the snake was concerned, I certainly had been warned in plenty of time to be protected.

For a while, I lived with my sister in New Orleans and had quite a way to walk to school each day and then to work after school. The weather was so beautiful most of the year, that it was a pleasure to walk to school because I enjoyed watching the lovely flowers and shrubs bloom and then fade away and other new ones come in their stead. However, many little incidents happened where ESP worked in warning me to protect myself. For example, one afternoon, I was a little late in leaving school. Suddenly, a sound of warning happened around me, like a shrill vibration and I knew that something was wrong. I stopped suddenly and then was urged by a mighty power around me to take the street car home and not to walk. As I waited for the streetcar, a car came by very fast and almost hit me. There were two men in it and I tried to get the license number. I was terrified because I was the only one waiting for the street car and felt that it had been a deliberate attempt on their part to run me down. When I got on the streetcar, as we traveled a few blocks, I looked out the window and there was the same car with the same two men in it and one of them was shaking his fist at me. Of course, I did not know what this was all about because I did not know either of them. I realized in a few more blocks I would have to get off, but fortunately, I got off right in front of my home and so I dashed across the street and down the sidewalk to the back door into the house. However, I was terrified more because no one was home and the men were sitting out front in the automobile. I went to the front door and looked out and they were on their way to the door. I pulled the shade down on the back door and locked it and then called the police. As the police car drove up, the men drove away and I had to tell the police that they had been bothering me, but then of course, nothing could be done because they actually did not harm me.

I want to bring out here and now that it was not because of any prediction that I had made to them or about them, because I did not know them, but I do feel that they may have mistaken me for someone else. However, once more I was grateful for the warning that came in time.

It has always been that whenever anything is wrong—whenever anyone is following me or whenever anyone has it in their mind to do me harm, there is a tremendous electrical humming around me that warns me and if I am still for a few moments, then I know exactly what is going to happen. I have plenty of time, then, to make my move to protect myself.

During the time that I was fifteen, I also wrote down hundreds and hundreds of predictions that go far into the future to the year 2046. Many of these predictions are being used today in my columns and wherever I lecture. It was a most unusual time in my life because it seemed that some of the most important things happened and some of the most frightening things happened. It was also the year that I wrote many poems, and beginning at fifteen, I also started an unusual stamp collection. As far as the poetry is concerned, there have been six poems that have been published in different books and there are four hundred others or more that have never been published. When I was fifteen, I also wrote a song and it was published and I did get publicity in the local newspaper in New Orleans about it.

My part-time job at the hospital in New Orleans brought me many unusual experiences with many unusual people. For example, one of the doctors on the hospital staff asked me if I would like to make the rounds with him, to cheer up his patients. He felt that I could do them a lot of good. I don't know why he chose me other than that I certainly was a happy type of person and undoubtedly struck him as such.

I enjoyed reading their mail to them and talking with them and it was on one of these tours that I told the doctor that one of his particular patients, a lady, would not live through the following day. He checked her thoroughly and then told me that he didn't understand what I was trying to say because she did not seem to be that near death.

However, that very afternoon she was put into an oxygen tent and the next day before noon, had died.

It was also at this same hospital that many people from a grain elevator explosion were brought. They were burned terribly and I shall never forget watching them being brought in with the skin hanging from their bodies. Only a few of them survived. However, there was one man whose eyes seemed to be terribly burned when they brought him in and yet I felt that he would be one that would live. He did, and stayed in the hospital a very long time and made many friends with many people while he was there.

At another time, I was rushing with one of the doctors to the emergency room, telling him about a case that had just come in. I told him that I felt that the man had been poisoned. I was not a nurse and had no medical training, whatsoever. After I told him that it was a strange feeling that I had, he said, "Gee, perhaps I should keep you around all of the time to help me diagnose the patients." Of course, he was only kidding, but then he did come back to me again and again to ask me what I thought about quite a number of the patients.

At one point I told him that there was another intern in the hospital that really was not doing a good job on the blood counts and that I felt that he was really making many errors. This of course, was a very difficult thing for me to tell him because I couldn't prove it since I didn't know anything about blood counts. However, when he checked into it, he found that it was true and after much thorough checking, that young man was discharged from the hospital.

I used to spend many evenings in the Public Library with a very dear friend. We would walk down the long avenue smelling the azaleas and other lovely flowers that grow

STRANGE AND UNKNOWN

Herewith are several true experiences, which I feel would be of interest to the readers of Beyond Reality; not only in the realm of the strange and unknown, but also in the area of new scientific discoveries.

The field dealing with the occult has long been held in fear and awe. That mysterious and toboood parcel of knowledge once whispered of in darkness, and then only among close friends, has for too long been a Pandora's Box, and those who see it are truly afraid of opening it.

Only recently have we as a society graduated, so to speak, to a higher step, in that the occult has become a household word and no longer is it feared to the extent it was at one time.

Only now are people beginning to approach the sixth sense with a more open mind, deeming it one of the most prominent and interesting fields of investigation still open for mankind to probe and ponder.

Without investigation there is no knowledge, and knowledge can never be achieved while human beings live in the shadowy world of fear and superstition.

Unlocking Lost Secrets

Can the Egyptian long-dead yield lost worlds? According to three French specialists, the answer is yes. Seeking to unlock secrets from a mummy, secrets it might have inadvertently bore to its grave some 2,200 years ago, these Sorbonne Institute (Paris, France) scholars are using a method they have devised for separating and salvaging the stuck-together fragments of papyrus from which the mummy's shroud was originally made.

The work is a direct consequence of the frugality of undertakers of Ghoran, a village in the upper Nile where the mummy (the one they're working on at present) was laid to rest two centuries before the birth of Christ.

Working under a cloud of steam, Professor Bataille and his associates busily "cook" these shrouds, studiously seeking to unlock old secrets.

Papyrus, a paperlike substance made from the pulp of the plant was the writing material of the ancient Egyptians. For years, archaeologists have known that mummies, covered with papyrus, are in effect, well-preserved filing cabinets of government documents, business accounts, school texts and literature.

Studying papyrus fragments from mummy cases, the Egyptologists (after they steam the shroud much the same way a French housewife steams mussels) fit the pieces together.

In this manner, they recently discovered a clue to a romantic mystery dating back to about 270 B.C. From several shrouds, the professor and his group assembled scraps of what they thought might be a copy of a play written around 300 B.C. by the Geek poet Menander.

What do we see at death?

As early as 1848, anthologies of the dying visions of famous persons were published and many accounts have been included in 17th and 18th century literature.

The moment of death seems to be highly correlated with the appearance of apparitions. At this moment, apparitions were noted to be of two types: the apparitions seen by the person who was at death's door; and, the apparitions of persons who are dying seen by the living miles away from the dying body.

Apparitions were seen in Biblical times, as well, and even today there are cases of many individuals who claim to have seen spirit entities.

According to G.N.M. Tyrell (who has described in composite form abstracted numerous accounts)

TWO SPIRIT LECTURES ON EDUCATION

"You are constantly being reincarnated, to learn, as in school . . ."
These were the words of Mark Twain, as spoken through trans-medium Elwood Babbitt, at an assembly at Smith College, on October 28, 1971.

By CHARLES H. HAPGOOD

Former Professor, University of New Hampshire

One of the most remarkable trance mediums in the country is Elwood Babbitt. In six years of study with him I have talked with 60 or more spirits who have taken over his body in trance. Medical observations of his blood pressure changes and of electroencephalograph recordings of his brain waves support the conclusion that these spirits are in fact different personalities and not splinters of his own unconscious mind. The enormous number of these personalities and their great range of thought, experience, and personal interests support the same conclusion. Two of these spirits are Dr. Frederick Fisher one of the medium's controls, and Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain).

On October 28, 1971, these two disembodied spirits addressed a meeting of Smith College students on the subject of Education. The medium, Elwood Babbitt, was in deep trance. He has never had any interest in educational philosophy himself. He had no memory afterwards of what had been said by the spirits. The talks were tape recorded and are reproduced verbatim in this article. They are reproduced, however, not merely because they are spirit messages received through a medium, not just because one of them was a famous author, but because of the value of the talks themselves.

DR. FISHER

This is Dr. Fisher assuming control of the human body. And as I vibrate here from spirit I look upon your auras, your rainbow of colors that constantly vibrate from your material selves as well as from your mind energy, or from that force that compels you to animate in your material vibration. You see in yourselves a direct reflection of the spiritual energy of love. Yet this is not deeply understood in your condition of life. For you are limited by the constant fears that surround you, and of course by the material disciplines placed upon you by your parents and by your physical senses that are directly influenced by your environment.

However, you find yourselves most uncomfortable in the surroundings of your material life. And you seek a deeper meaning to your individuality. And so you seek it from your educational facilities of earth. Some may seek it in the chemical compounds [drugs] that force you into a safe little world within yourself, where you can hide yourself away from all material pressures. Yet you must realize that in all that is artificial there is karma involved. And here, of course, I speak of that Law of Cause and Effect. That is, the artificial life of drugs may have reverse or negative repercussions because the drug taker has not earned the experience).

So it is your First Law of All Living, whether it be human, animal, or plant, that there still flows within you free will expression. And in that Law we see that each of you is a God within yourself. But is your direct connection with the vital force of all life, both materially and spiritually, that connects you with the outer dimensions of your being . . .

I speak to your tender ears, and tender knowledge, of what fully is infinite, in repeating a poem that may enhance your spiritual growth. I ask you as spirit to listen most carefully, for it will answer most of the questions that vibrate in your atmosphere at this moment.

When in the dim beginning of the years
God mixed in man the rapture and the tears
And scattered through his brain the starry stuff,
He said, "Behold, yet this is not enough,
For I must test his spirit to make sure
That he can dare the vision and endure,
Leaving behind only a broken clue,
A crevice where the Glory glimmers through,
Leaving him in tragic loneliness to choose,
With all in life to win, or all in life to lose.

So we speak of the dim beginning of the years, when out of the cosmosphere came Energy, producing, as your science tells you, a molecular structure, an adhesion of energy that gave life to all things, not only by your rule of friction, but by the tremendous role of atoms that through chain [chemical] reactions brought a physical body into existence.

So when we speak of the Infinite Intelligence, when you speak of God, you are only speaking of your Self Within. And truly, when you grow to your full awareness and perception, when you give total appreciation to all that is within this universe, then that total appreciation opens your way to that God Within. So pause in your road of life, and ask to see the full grandeur of that Intelligence, the divinity of that Energy.

Do not become stalemated by what others think, say, or do. Do not be fearful to undertake anything your spirit may want to do. Instead, it is to live in a total spontaneity of life that will allow you this full free connection with all the universe. And it is as you open your mind energy that you will see the full force of the All-in-All, and understand the immutable laws that govern a life of simplicity.

For you were born in simplicity. You were born in pain, yet a joyous pain. For it is your right again and again to incarnate that energy for the purpose of becoming not in at-one-ment with yourself, but at-one-ment with all the beauty that life offers. Break down your walls of complexity. Open your spirit. Open your soul, and open your brain and mind to this free flow. And as you gaze upon those outer dimensions then you will see the fullness of all life, its purpose and your attainment. And then you will know the meaning of those words: Peace on Earth, Good Will toward Man.

I leave you with this reminder. Think of it. For you shall find that as you have exposed your own energy to mine, though you may find rejection on your analytical level, that I have the wit to win. For I have placed seeds within your spirit that will grow and flourish. And in my energy I know that I have builded you to your own kingdom of peace and true spiritual love. Whatever your world offers, remember you cannot buy the most precious gift that all men wish to attain. And that is the gift of true understanding.

Dr. Fisher, in this talk, touched on the inner springs of life, he talked of the inner spirit, but he gave a guideline to the right attitude of the individual to his education. After he stopped speaking the medium remained in deep sleep for a few minutes. Then the expression on his face changed and with a different voice and a mid-western drawl, another spirit spoke in a different vein.

CLEMENS: I suppose I've got to make my grand entrance into the world, amid ovations and the clanging of bells, and the roar of sirens, a knock on the door, and be whisked away into the cells that are now occupied by the less fortunate.

HAPGOOD: No. We don't have to do that to you, Sam.

CLEMENS: Well, I suppose I have to announce my identity. God knows why. Nobody will believe it, anyway. But I'm Mark Twain, Sam Clemens, old fool, if you prefer. But I've been asked to come through this narrow canal once again into the earth. And of course I made the trip once before between all the bumps and belches, and squelches from the gastronomical odors that prevail in the birth cycle. [Laughter].

Now I am not wishing to assume control. I . . . I'm . . . I really don't want to be here. But I met with this old reprobate Hapgood [laughter] and I got involved in his intellectual process, and his knowing all things, opening wide his great and fabulous knowledge. And so here I find myself involved once again in coming into your manure heap of living—which I detest.

I thought, you know, when I lost my cadaver, that I could have the streets of gold, many beautiful girls at my disposal, spirits in the bottle to nip at occasionally. Yet I was terribly disillusioned to say the least. That is, I found girls as well as boys lost the ability to procreate. And, of course, this tempted me sorely to find another birth channel. But I decided, as I looked at your economy and your establishment, that I would refrain from cluttering the globe any more than was needed. And I am sure my candid opinions would not be blessed by your higher forces that now lead you to rack and ruin.

I did want to speak to you little children about what you are involved in. And if this vibration serves me correctly you are all studying to be educated fools. [Laughter]. Now it is all right to get an education. But also it's wise to bring along with you a spiritual education, so that you can open the stall and be able to unlock a door without consulting some damnable book that has all the instructions 1 through 5, and if you miss 3 you'll be out of luck and will never make the out-house 50 yards away. [Laughter].

Now in your educational process all of you bill and coo and stew, rant and rave about what an educational facility should be. But listen to the wise words of "Uncle" Sam. Quote, unquote. It is that your world, as I float around in this peculiar energy, is a school within itself. And it has all the things you need to become well-balanced individuals. Now where your weakness lies is not in racial imbalance, or who is going to wheel somebody from one structure to another, or whether your skin is colored red, white, or blue. The paramount issue is that you express a free total understanding of yourself. Somethin' like that guy Fisher was spouting about. [Laughter].

Now for a true education—and some day the intellectual numbskulls will have a rebirth of principles and will see that to have full free expression is to have your education—do learn what you want to learn. That is where you are student-teacher and not teacher-student. That is where the professor trails the student around and guides him to the things that that student wants.

It is highly amusing to me to see how every one of you has an examination coming. And this taking of liquids and pills and this jouncing to your "john" every five minutes to relieve the bladder is a weakness in itself. For your educational facilities only bring uncomfortable pressures. And this causes that uncanny feeling of being only an expulsion of flatus in the world sewer.

Now in this all children, including myself, you know, from the tender age of diapers and social errors and some graces—all are curious from birth. It is so in all of life's dimensions, or whatever label or term you put onto them. And if you bother to stop a minute and to listen within yourself, you know where you're going to fit in this crazy hectic ball of dirt that spins in an infinity that I know and can see now. You know what you want to do, and should express yourself most strongly. You want education, which I honor as long as you don't become a damn fool. Get all the education you can, but get it in a free way, where you come together as true persons wanting to understand and know what you want to know.

I feel — and I've learned this since I've become a dewdrop on the Face of Infinity — that it is important that as you learn you do it in an easy way. And gradually you will see that each subject you learn will become of value in what you will do later.

Now don't think for a moment that you're an accident of your parents' indiscretion. For I now see life more deeply expressed than what I knew when I was on the earth and I can tell you, you are constantly being regenerated into life (reincarnated) to learn, but not so much from your books, which are only the opinions of others, but from your nature and from all the things given within the material world. And again, I fully agree with the Fisher principle that appreciation has been lost in your uncreative way of study, and in your way of gaining technology by destroying one thing to construct the other. The construction is your defeat, for the more comfortable you make the body, the more uncomfortable you make the spirit.

So sometime — I can't place it in your clock — but sometime education will be free, where you go to your teachers, or some who think they're a little smarter than you, and learn what they have to say, although you haven't got to believe it. But do it without a structured system. Learn what you can. And go on to something else. But what you learn is all that you're going to take with you.

Nobody can fail to observe the sharp contrast of the two minds that are expressed here. Whether the second talk was really from Mark Twain is for the reader to decide. It certainly is in the style of Mark Twain, and this has been true of other communications from him. So far as I myself can judge from my knowledge of Mark Twain's mind and character this is authentic. But perhaps this question is not all-important. In either case—whether the spirit who spoke through Babbitt was or was not Mark Twain, whether the expression came in some mysterious way from the unconscious mind of the medium — it still remains an interesting psychic phenomenon. For the thought expressed is creative educational philosophy. It is good advice to teachers and students alike and it should be the basis of educational philosophy in the United States. □

NOSTRADAMUS

THE ENIGMA OF A PROPHET

By STEWART ROBB

Although he was burned in effigy as a witch for his prophecies which came to pass, his fame spread. Kings, princes and prelates beat a path to his door. He was never in want during France's most momentous period.

N mid-June of 1791 Louis 16 and his family escaped from Paris in disguise with the intent of reaching the Austrian border. They got no farther than Varennes, where they were detained by the mayor of that town, whose name was Saulce (or Sauce in modern French). The suspicious mayor inited them into his grocery shop and then called in a travelled fellow-townsmen who identified the King. That was the end. Oil cans hung from the rafters of the shop, and Stefan Zweig, in his biography of Marie Antoinette, remarks that the shop reeked of rancid oil.

After the discovery came the return to the sullen capitol. The royal family were nearly mobbed more than once on the way, and indeed one of Louis' boyguards was lynched.

At this time Louis' Minister of War was a man named Narbon. He was considered traitor by the king, the court and the Catholics generally. He favored a moderate revolution and a constitutional monarchy. He was what we might call an appeaser of the left.

Shortly after the tragic return to Paris the royal palace of the Tuileries was attacked by a mob. With imperturbable courage the king appeared alone before them, without his guard—this time his pacifism may have saved his life—and in token of his submission to the will of the people put on the Red Cap of Liberty proffered him by one of the mob.

Two months later a second and much more violent attack on the Tuileries was led by 500 men of Marseilles. The song they sang, The Marseillaise, became the national anthem of France.

Now here is the prophecy, in a very literal English translation. With the background of history just given the reader, he will find the interpretation quite clear:

The husband, alone, afflicted, will be mitred
Return, conflict will take place at the Tuileries;
By five hundred, one betrayer will be titled Narbon, and Saulce, "We have oil, with knives."

The original French of the last two lines reads:

Par cinq cents, un trahir sera titré
Narbon et Saulce par coutaux avons d'huile. (9.34)

There are the two names in the original French text. And note that right after naming the mayor-grocer, Nostradamus writes: "We have oil," that is, "We sell oil," which Saulce certainly did. And the vivid terrifying scene previewed by Nostradamus was "with knives."

The events related in this remarkable prophecy are all highlights of history, they are all related and inter-related, and they all take place within a period of 14 months of one another. The naming of the protagonists—or should we say antagonists—is of course the most remarkable feature of all. One betrayer was of the bourgeoisie, the other titled. The name Saulce does not occur again in all the annals of the history of France.

How was Nostradamus able to do this? How could he make predictions so specific about events that were to take place hundreds of years after his death? Was it because he was an astrologer? No. It is true, that Nostradamus, like other physicians of his day, knew astrology, then a respectable science, and used it in the accepted way, to cast horoscopes of patients as a diagnostic aid. But astrology at best could carry the predictor only so far. The astrologer does not so much as claim to be able to predict names of people not yet born, nor describe their history, for before he can prognosticate he requires the horoscope of the person about whom he is predicting. And the horoscope follows, not precedes birth! No, Nostradamus obviously went far beyond what a pure astrologer can do.

Prophecy was a gift Nostradamus possessed. He states that he was born with it and that he cultivated it by prayer, much as one fans a flicker till it becomes a flame. He was born a Christian, but was of Jewish descent. It is said he claimed to be of the tribe of Issachar, one of the Lost Tribes of Israel, and of this tribe the Bible says, "They were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do."

His gift, the seer said, was cultivated by prayer. Let us note his own words on the subject — and who should know better than the prophet himself?

I have attributed the entire accomplishment to divine power and inspiration . . . By the grace of God and the good angels, the prophets have had committed to them the spirit of vaticination, by which they see things at a distance, and are enabled to forecast future events. For there is nothing that can be accomplished without Him, whose power and goodness are so great to all His creatures as long as they put their trust in Him . . . As for ourselves personally, who are but human, we can attain to nothing by our own unaided natural knowledge . . .

There must be a recognition,

says Nostradamus:

that all things whatsoever proceed from the divine power of the great eternal Deity from whom all goodness emanates . . . The perfect knowledge of causes cannot be acquired without divine inspiration; since all prophetic inspiration derives its first motive principle from God the Creator, next from good fortune, and then from nature . . . The judgment perfects itself by means of the celestial judgment . . . In the presence of the faculty divine the three aspects of time are clasped in one by eternity.

Who was this who spoke so confidently of his divine inspiration and then proceeded to prove that he had it?

Pierre Michel de Nostredame was born December 14, 1503 in St. Remy, Provence, France. His grandparents were converted Jews and apparently took the name of Nostredame, an earlier French form of Notredame — our Lady — from the church near where they lived. His father, who was of gentle birth, was a successful notary public. The lad was put to school at Avignon "to learn the humanities," and thence to the University of Montpellier, which then as now was a celebrated school of medicine. Here he took his doctorate with dazzling speed and success. He soon won fame as a physician, curing thousands during the plague years. Alas, though, he was not able to heal his wife and two children, he lost them to the pestilence. He wandered the land in sorrow, travelling as far as Italy, and possibly even visiting the Holy Land — though this is not certain. He settled finally in Salon, in the South of France, marrying again, and here his fame grew. In 1555 he published a slim volume of prophetic quatrains of four-line verse stanzas which immediately made him a celebrity. He was invited to the Paris Court by Henry the Second and his wife Catharine de Medici and there was lionized, asked to prognosticate, to find lost articles and missing persons. A typical story concerns the prophet's Paris days. One night when he had already retired a page of the Beauveau family banged on his door. Before the lad had time to announce his errand Nostradamus called out: "You are making a lot of noise for a lost dog. Go away and look on the road to Orleans. You will find your dog being led on a leash." Which proved true. This easy ability made the prophet the sensation of Paris.

A number of his predictions "clicked" during his lifetime. The most famous of these was the one which foretold the death of King Henry II in a tournament.

The year was 1559. Henry was celebrating a double wedding, that of his daughter Elizabeth to Philip II of Spain and that of his daughter to the Duke of Savoy.

The king, in a pleasant mood, entered the lists, his escutcheon on occasion being a lion. During the first two days he distinguished himself. The third day he challenged the reluctant young Comte de Montgomery, captain of his Scottish guard, who also had a lion in his escutcheon. In the contest a splinter from Montgomery's lance pierced the king's gilt visor and entered a point right above his right eye, while another splinter injured his throat. He died in agony ten days later.

The prophecy of Nostradamus concerning this event was immediately recognized and stunned everybody:

The young lion will overcome the old

*In single duel on the warlike field
He will burst his eyes in a cage of gold,*

*One of two wounds, then to die
a cruel death.*

The Parisian populace, concluding the prophet was a witch, burned him in effigy. Fortunately he was safe at home in Salon at this time or he might not have escaped mischief, though it is important to remember that he had the favor and protection of the Queen Mother, Catharine de Medici all his latter life.

As time went on he published more verse prophecies and his fame grew. His student and biographer Chavigny writes, "Those who came

. . . However, of greatest interest are the healings—the miracles taking place through this Channelship (Mrs. Ruth Norman).

We will begin first by telling you that the Mission all started with the meeting of Dr. Ernest L. and Ruth E. Norman, when they met in 1954. This great Seer and Prophet, E.L.N., the greatest Intelligence ever to come to earth, left his outer spheres of space to come to deliver this great science to the earth world, which he did. His physical body when born was more or less of a materialization; not in the sense of the word, a materialization such as the spiritualists create, yet his physical body was not like an earthman's. He was far more delicate in all respects—sensitive and super-sensitive. Even when a very small child of seven or eight in the early grades of school, this great Intellect showed the teachers through demonstrations with a candle and oranges how their textbooks on astronomy were incorrect, and they changed their books when he proved his point to them regarding the phases of the moon. He is, of course, a Super Genius.

Dr. Norman has foreseen people's future many years in advance, and during the war years, he worked in the dance halls with the wives, telling them of their husband's activities, positions, locations, and of their safety, etc., many of which afterwards, when the men came home, related the authenticity of his relating to them. In certain instances, he related the wounds of the overseas soldiers—one in particular who received a 15-inch gash in the right leg crawling under a barbed wire fence. When he returned home the first thing the wife did was to run his pant-leg up to search for the scar, and which was very plain. She measured it to find the wound was exactly 15 inches. Quite flabbergasted she was. This, the kind of seeing Ernest was capable of expressing.

For over 15 years he searched for Ruth. He told many persons, "There is one woman on earth who will understand me and my science and will help me bring my books to the people." Thus when they met, they both knew each other on the first physical meeting.

During Dr. Norman's life, many other seers and psychics saw around this man three spiritual beings, significant of very ancient and wise ones. They were wearing long white robes, long flowing white hair and beards and carrying huge books. These were seen on several occasions with him. Then when he met Ruth (the woman he married a very short time after they were brought together), these three spiritual beings were seen, psychically, with her by another psychic. Ernest happened to be nearby when one certain medium was relating to her about these three spiritual beings carrying these enormous books—the size of course representing the importance of the work which has been brought to earth. One seer told him, "Whenever you are ready, the books can be brought." He said, "I am ready." That very night he met Ruth, who has since worked with him and helped to bring in these works, in the way of being a polarity. As Ernest would dictate the words, she printed, published and distributed via the mail the entire library of these 20 books when completed which are, in themselves, the future science of this Space Age.

Countless persons' lives have been changed due to their study. Thousands of persons have been reached through the mails. This work has been done underground, so to speak, for this Spaceman's safety, for Ernest and Ruth were well aware of the dangers of those who would waylay and destroy their work and mission were the masses aware of what was being done during these 18 years of this bringing in and of the contact with these higher worlds, which he had and maintained all during this time. He maintained through his own Superconscious, the contact with his Brothers in outer space, living in these vast spiritual worlds and dimensions.

This science is being proven by the many students. Many are the files of letters of testimony that have been collected from the readers—the students who have obtained, from time to time through these many years, the books and lessons and tape-recorded teachings. From these letters have been taken excerpts of their testimonial which number in the many thousands, relating healings from a mere headache to cancer, or anything one wishes to be conscious of: Serious mental problems, schizophrenia, dementia praecox, and every kind of a mental, physical and psychic condition possible has been helped, corrected, improved and healed.

Most convincing are the Ray beams we students sense, which enter into our consciousness and transcend us. As we listen to the taped lectures by Dr. Norman or the verses recited by Mrs. Ruth Norman, we become so transcended; it's difficult to stay awake—and often we don't! We see and sense the Higher Beings who come to us as lights. Most all students see the tiny dots of gold flash into their minds. Then with further study and understanding, the lights seem larger and brighter. We see them, then sense the fragrance they emit, often as a delicate, delightful effulgence. Very often the healing rays we sense projected to us cause us to become rubbery legged, so uplifted and transcended do we become, as the great Infinite Powers projected by these great Spaceman come unto us to heal, help, lift and enlighten us.

Throughout the writings of Dr. Norman, he relates how these people live on higher worlds. Five entire books contain descriptions of how these countless thousands of interplanetary dwellers—greatly advanced Beings—work with us that we may learn to become likewise infinitely wise; that we may become one of these Spiritual Beings after leaving the body in so-called death.

Throughout the texts it is described how man lives life after life in reincarnating and gaining, with each life, certain knowledge that progresses him. Principles of this metamorphosis is related in detail to a far greater degree than any earthen has previously known, teaching man the progressive, regenerative evolution.

At the very beginning of the mission, Dr. Norman gave a series of lectures in one of the Los Angeles auditoriums, which were put in printed form for the countless students in their study—which is, in essence, a life-long study. This is not some pseudo science but a very factual, scientific way of life. Dr. Norman describes the true formation of the atom, of the inner worlds, and of the very cosmos itself, relating how man is an electronic instrument, very similar in principle to our modern television and radio. He teaches how man's problems, physical, mental and otherwise are but a reliving of some former life; how, when these situations and experiences are brought into focus with conscious mind and with the help of these great Intellects in the spiritual worlds, the individual realizes help and healing of his problems and cancellation occurs, using the phase reversal principle—exactly as used in the modern television circuitry.

But space would not permit at present entering into this vast teaching. Suffice to say that it is available for any individual. Now this great Intellect has returned to his Flame People, the Spacemen, and he maintains contact in this work, working with and through his wife, Ruth. At the present, she conducts a healing class, and indeed, miracles are being performed, which proves the continuity of life as well as the great inner help these Space people project to those in touch with them.

At the end of this letter are attached two or three letters written by students, one who spent a few hours on October 8, 1972, with Mrs. Norman. Her writing and relating tells the story of how this woman of 27 years has, throughout her life, been reacting and living as an infant! Now—and using the science—and with the Power and Ray beams from Mrs. Norman's Higher Self and the help of Dr. Norman and other Spacemen on the Inner, could this past tie and block be cancelled out instantly. The woman is now an entirely different person, as she has "suddenly grown up."

Unearthly Visitors

Elizabeth Montgomery, and famed poet-songwriter, Rod McKuen, have had experiences with the supernatural.

By HAYDEN C. HEWES

Demons and spirits, unearthly visitors and witches, have inspired and terrified man since the dawn of history. Some supernatural phenomena have been explained away by science, others exposed as fakery or hysteria. What remains, however, is staggering evidence that an unearthly visitor exists beyond the reach of reality as we know it.

While the findings of modern day scientific investigators are meticulously examined, man waits in ignorance, wondering whether the truth will have any significance for him, or is this all nothing more than an impossible dream, never to be reached? Man can and will follow that star of unknown knowledge, no matter how hopeless or how far.

The supernatural, is a thought-provoking subject that covers a wide area. Books and magazine articles have discussed the subject of the unexplained from the abominable snowman, to the zombi, a dreadful phenomenon produced by black magic . . . a corpse that is a mindless, walking slave.

Several years ago the author boasted a weekly radio series entitled SOUND STRANGE dealing with the world's strangest mysteries.

Each week the unusual, the unknown, the uncanny, and the unbelievable were explained and explored. One subject that generated a great amount of interest was that of ghosts. Just what a ghost is has never been determined. There are many theories open for discussion, but the fact remains that something does exist.

It is ironic that Elizabeth Montgomery, star of the very popular ABC-TV series "Bewitched," in which she portrays a modern day 'witch,' believes in ghosts. Not only does she believe in them, but admitted, "I've seen one."

The unforgettable experience occurred when Miss Montgomery was a young girl. "As a young girl I visited England with my family and spent some time in an old manor house belonging to friends." Miss Montgomery, known as 'Samantha' continued to relate her experience. "My room was on a corridor near the main stair. One afternoon, shortly after we arrived, I was about to open my door when I became conscious of someone hurrying down the hall. It happened several times. Once I definitely saw a foot and the hem of a skirt as it disappeared around the corner. I rushed back, but there was no one there. I was certain that whoever or whatever I had seen was not dressed in the fashion of the day. Later the housekeeper explained that this apparition had been seen ever since that house was new. She passed off the incident very casually. She obviously accepted the ghost, whoever it was, as just another member of the household."

Elizabeth Montgomery

Another famous and internationally known celebrity to have an experience with a ghost is Mr. Rod McKuen, the famed poet-songwriter.

McKuen's experience with the supernatural is a recent one. Known to millions the world over, Rod has been a drifter, seeing the beauty in the simple things of life which he expresses in his works.

Recently McKuen bought a big house in Beverly Hills, California. Although it isn't what one would call a mansion, it's no hovel, either.

For the first time McKuen found a home that he loves. "This is where I want to live the rest of my days," he continued, stating, "I walked in and said, this is it, I'm home."

The big house, some say has as many as 30 rooms; also are the living quarters for his staff . . . the people that help him with the many different enterprises that he is involved in.

The wood-paneled library McKuen calls the Diana Ross room because . . . "I heard that she was shown the house before I was, and when she reached this room and saw the wood paneling, she said, "Well, we could paper-cover the wood."

Of all the rooms in the house the most intriguing is the small bedroom almost hidden away on an upper floor. Adding to the mystery of the room is the fact that Rod's four English sheepdogs refuse to go into the room and McKuen explained why. "The original owner of the house was an opera singer, named Gertrude, and it was reported that she died there."

Not only do the four dogs know her ghost is still there, McKuen does to. "I've seen her," McKuen said describing the ghost of the house, "she wears a nightgown, either white or very pale blue." In closing McKuen described the experience with the unknown as simply, "She isn't frightening."

Who can say what relationship might develop or what influence the ghost may have upon McKueon. She might even be the inspiration of another masterpiece of the famed poet-songwriter. □

Dr. and Mrs. Norman have devoted all their energies to The Academy of Parapsychology which now claims over 70,000 members around the globe.

Dr. Norman has left the physical and is working with and through Mrs. Norman from the higher inner side of life.

corrective measure that will follow Shirley's is from a woman living in Escondido, who attended the first group session. Mary came all bundled up, her head and throat all bound up with thick scarfs, clutching her bag with both arms as if she were almost grasping for her last breath. At a certain period students were asked to share or voice their problems. Mary gave out with a loud rasping rattle of her lungs. When Mrs. Norman asked how long she had that terrible condition, Mary said, "All my life." Mrs. Norman replied, "We'll have some power on this condition." Mary did not show up the next week as they had arrived too late, but the following Sunday she attended, with no wrappings about her head or neck and looking at least 15 years younger—and happier. When asked about her condition, she said, "It is all gone! I have it no more! I can breathe so much easier."

And so the average person will say, "How could this be—a condition she has carried all her life, and such a serious one, with a cough that comes from the very depths of her lungs, almost a rattling noise, some would say, the death rattle?" This could come about due to the fact, as Mrs. Norman related later, that before Mary's grandmother died, she had been attached to the child and had this condition when she died. So when she went over into the astral worlds, through her attachment and love for the little girl, attached herself to the child and there has lived through Mary's entire life, inflicting her condition onto Mary—unknowingly, of course; but this is the way it is when people are unfamiliar with the after-life—with life after physical death. There is absolutely no sign of Mary's condition now, and as she says, "I can breathe so much deeper and feel so much freer," and to say the least, she looks so much better and younger, as all the students present will agree. As a matter of fact, some announced, "Is that the same woman!" They did not know her, so great was her change! She had even carried the appearance of the old lady who had died and left her condition with her as a child. So you see, the miracles of the time of Jesus are again being repeated. He is again working with us in this beautiful healing process and procedure and, as he has related so many times, "There are no limitations, only in man's mind."

None the less remarkable and extreme, the condition of another younger lady took place just recently too, and she will verify (as a matter of fact, all three of these people will verify to anyone wishing to write to them, for they wish to proclaim from the housetops the wonder of this Science and the blessedness of their freedom). This woman has been a mental case throughout her life. She constantly contemplated suicide. The poor soul has been afraid of everything in this world. As she writes, there is nothing she can think of that she wasn't fearful of. She lived a life of torment in hell. So severe was her mental problem that her eyes would not always focus; they would roll to the ceiling. Her head would drop over and she would sit or stand with her mouth dropped open—sometimes the tongue partially extruded. That was the picture Rachel presented when she was first seen at the Center on October 1, 1972. The following Sunday found her so greatly improved that it was, frankly, almost unbelievable, and the second and third Sundays find her very rational and normal. Not only that but she is now an extremely intelligent woman! It is now predicted by Mrs. Norman that this woman will become a very prolific and successful writer. At the present she could write an entire book about what has happened to her during these past three weeks, so many lifetimes has she relived! Namely, one of Madame H. P. Blavatsky.

Each student present at these meetings has experienced healing in some measure, whether it is physical, psychic, psychological, mental or pure spiritual progress. In one way or another, each individual has experienced great and vast healings. Now the very wonderful part about all this is that one need not actually be present to so experience. He can, through his own home study, if he enters into it sincerely, likewise realize this help, as Mrs. Norman will be helping psychically and spiritually from this side, and her beloved one, Dr. Norman, the great Avatar from the Inner, along with all of his associate spacemen, the great Brotherhood, will be helping from the inner. These healings and all incumbent personal help shall be carried on with all who enter into this study of this life-changing science.

One other very interesting case,

Louis Spiegel (who will also reply to any individual so desiring verification) has been in this study for some eight years, yet just recently he made the great change-over, for he had severe blocks which prevented him from accepting his negative past; yet now in the present, his life is changing very rapidly. Louis was the individual, Pontius Pilate, so you can well guess that he had much guilt to overcome, as well as the drastic suicide experience which he committed afterward. All of these things had to be relived by him—and relive them, he has! Right to the very exacting point of even feeling this desire again in the physical to kill himself—so much so that he incarcerated himself during that time the inclination was present. It was, during this incarceration, that he experienced mental or psychic contact from Mrs. Norman (called Ioshanna), sensing the words, "Fight for your life, Louis. Get out of that place!" This contact gave him the courage and ability to move out of that place into which he had incarcerated himself—this mental institution. Louis is writing his own book which will be titled "The Resurrection of Pontius Pilate" and it will indeed be a most revealing, fascinating and exciting book, telling of his many experiences, his confrontations with his past and his overcomings. And, of course, he relates how it has been due to Unarius and the inner help that has saved his sanity and his life on more than a few occasions.

These are but a few of the persons who are at present in the immediate area. As was said in the beginning. Dr. and Mrs. Norman went about their mission, he bringing in the teachings from the Inner Worlds—all secretly, underground—"for his safety." Now that he has returned to his Space people, now is the time to come out of hiding and give to the public this great, vast, life-changing Science.

As was mentioned, there have been literally many thousand of testimonials written which have been stored and filed and counter-filed, each condition alphabetically filed—whether it be psychic, physical, mental, financial, psychological, regardless, and each category filed so that one can thumb through the files quickly and find any specific condition he wishes to locate, and then refer to the student's letter for corroboration. This has been done for the benefit of the doctors in the future, as they learn about this great work.

The doors to this healing process and Academy are open to anyone needing healing and help, and one need not necessarily be in this area. Of course, it is better were one able to do so; yet, those needing help and healing at a distance, here is the requisite: Obtain from your family doctor or any physician a certificate or record of your problem, stating exactly what it is, its severity, your doctor's name, the date and your name, and send this along with your request for healing, relating what the problem is, how long it has existed, and of course, your request for at least one book to start your study. These books have been published and offered at a very nominal fee so that no individual need be without this teaching. However, if any person so needful lacks the mere few dollars for the first book, this too, will be sent gratis and with the compliments of the Academy.

We are, at the present, endeavoring to collect a large group of new or recent healing testimonials (for the medical professional use) and this is the need: the doctor's certificate of the existing condition, whatever it may be, and after the healing has been effected, then the individual must supply us with a certificate of a final examination by the doctor and his relating of the existing condition, after healing. Surely, we feel this is little enough to ask for the help on receives.

It should be said, too, that there is a vibronics healing which Mrs. Norman expresses. She has recited many of the verse and poetry which the Spaceman, Dr. Norman, has written from his Higher Self, His Creative Mind, and they do carry

DEVELOPING PSYCHIC ENERGY

BY BRYCE BOND

Breathing is the most important thing that you can do for developing Psychic Energy and expanding your Psychic talents. Most of the good breathing techniques we borrow from the Yogis. These practices have been used through the centuries and with remarkable results. The spleen, the appendix, and the heart are the three physical organs which transform the food energy taken into the system, into Psychic energy. These organs act as "transformers" of energy. These days, everyone can help himself to a richer, fuller life, to more energy, success in his endeavors, and all of his dreams can come true.

Psychic energy is in the air we breathe, called "Prana" or life force. The longer we breathe, the longer we live. Breath controls the body and its functions. It controls our emotions and our way of thinking.

Deep breathing and meditation are two of the best things any man, woman or child can do. It brings self-realization, a better understanding of the oneness (yourself) to the oneness of the Infinite (Creation).

Breathing can retard age, or slow the aging process. The more you practice, the more you will notice that your negative thoughts will be fading. And the more you will become positive in almost everything you do. Breathing is free, you can have all you want . . . just learn to use it properly, and you will see outstanding results. It will give you a healthier, more creative mind.

When you deplete the psychic energy in the body, you deplete the psychic energy. That's why you see people growing old before their time. Negative thoughts deplete the psychic energy.

Through deep breathing, the oxygenation of the blood stream is improved, and every vital organ, endocrinal gland, nervous center, and body tissue receives better nourishment. To breathe correctly is to stay young longer. All you have to do is to look around you. Look at the people you know, and you will see amazing things. The way they walk, look, and talk. Their personality, the way they dress. You can tell if they are breathing properly or not . . . most of the time they are not. Never bring your troubles home or to the table.

Rule No. 1: AVOID NEGATIVE THINKING! One of the best books on Psychic Energy is by Joseph J. Weed. We are now going to change our breathing habits to a more controlled breathing. We will use techniques which employ breath controlled by the mind. First of all select a quiet place to practice in, at a time of day in which you will not be disturbed. In Yoga breathing, the lungs are completely filled and completely emptied. When you inhale, let your stomach come out, inflating it like a balloon. Just feel your lungs getting full. Breathe very slowly with a regular rhythm or count. Sit in the crossed-leg position, or in a straight back chair, with the back straight, head erect, eyes closed. Your hands should rest on your knees with the thumb and index finger locked together to keep in the Psychic energy, and palms facing upwards. Breathe through your nostrils only, mouth closed. And as you breathe concentrate on that spot between your eyebrows, better known as the Third Eye. Due to time and space we will condense these exercises. Lets start now with the RELAXING BREATH:

No. 1. Take a deep full breath through both nostrils, inhaling to the count of eight. Hold your breath for the count of six, and then exhale for the count of eight, with slow, deliberate counts. Follow the above directions, and you will feel yourself getting very, very relaxed. Enjoy it! Feel how calm it makes you, Never force or speed through these exercises.

Next we will do the SOUND BREATHINGS, which to me as a teacher and investigator are some of the best. The vibrations these sounds set up within the body affect certain psychic centers or glands, referred to in Yoga as the Chakras. The first sound will be AHHhhhh. This sound affects the solar plexus, about two inches below your rib cage. When you do these sounds, extend the sound as long as you can. Find your own level, and sense and feel the vibrations in your solar plexus area.

2. Take a deep, full breath . . . (SOUND) AHHHHHhhhhh. . . . until your lungs are completely empty. Take another deep full breath and repeat the exercise.

3. The next sound will be (YOU) Youuuuuuuuuuu! Again you repeat the same as above, extending the sound until your lungs are completely empty. Feel the vibration in your spiritual heart, which is the right side of your physical heart. Not only is this good for you mentally and physically but very good for the voice. Now take a deep, full breath . . . Youuuuuuuuuuu . . . and repeat again.

4. The next sound will be (SOL) or (SO), whichever is the easiest for you. SOOOOOoooooo. This sound is directed to your thyroid and thymus glands. Feel the subtle vibrations warming this area. Now take a full, deep breath . . . SOOoo, till the lungs are completely empty. Then repeat again.

No. 5. The next sound will be (Eeeeeeeeee). These vibrations will affect your senses, your hearing, sight, smelling, tasting. Feel the slight, tingling effect it has upon these areas. Now take a deep full breath . . . EEEEEEEeeeeeee . . . till your lungs are completely empty. Then repeat again.

No. 6. The next sound we will do is (SUN), with the tongue hitting the roof of the mouth. These vibrations are directed to your Third Eye, that space between your eyebrows, home of the Pineal gland. Concentrate all your attention to that space between your eyes. Now take a deep, full breath SUNNNNNnnnnnn till your lungs are empty. And repeat again. These Chakras, or your spiritual centers, need exercise also, like your body. They all go hand in hand.

No. 7. The last sound will be S.O.M. (SOME). This is done with the lips and mouth closed, so a humming effect is set up. This time you should feel the vibration in your brain, as if your brain was boiling. Keep your eyes closed throughout these exercises . . . and try to focus your attention to the area between your eyebrows. In other words look WITHIN! Now let us take a deep, full breath SOMMMmmmmmmmm. Until the lungs are completely empty, and then repeat again.

Next lie flat on your back, completely relaxed, breathing deeply and fully through the nostrils only, enjoying this warm state of bliss.

Set aside a certain time each day to do these exercises. And with each day try to extend the sound a little more. You will find yourself becoming more relaxed, increasing your vital energy, looking younger and more healthy. The more you do, the better the results.

But give yourself enough time. As the weeks and months go by, you will see definite results. Never overtire yourself. Breathing, like Meditation, is a lifelong study, for it is life itself. Again, the longer you breathe, the longer you live. If you are interested in bettering yourself, which I am sure you are, check into a Yoga center in your area. There are plenty of books on Breathing, so investigate. You will be greatly rewarded. Breathing is a science . . . one to be practiced every day. The above techniques should start you on the way to Psychic development. □ a great healing power. Also, he has mentally projected other verse to her since his return to the Inner Worlds, which she has written. Many students have experienced healing by the mere listening to these verse. This is all part of the great healing. No "laying on" of hands is necessary; no exercises, no repetitions or mantrums or words; no prayers, no breathing exercises or gimmicks, or symbologies, but rather, that which is used and serves as the corrective measure are the great Ray Beams, the projected Light Beams that are directed from these great Intelligences, on the Higher Worlds. These rays and beams are projected through Mrs. Norman who, in her Higher Self, demodulates these high frequencies down into the earth's atmosphere or radiating fields. Due to the great difference in the earth fields and the higher dimensions, there is a demodulation that is necessary; and due to her contact with this Spaceman during their past lifetimes, she is thus capable of serving in this channeling capacity. Their motto is "no limitations"; they set no lines of demarcation, for in the minds of these Higher Intellectuals, no limitations exist.

It should be said, too, that this Spaceman, called in the physical earthworld, Dr. Ernest L. Norman, was, in a distant past lifetime 3,500 years ago, the Pharaoh Akhenaton, or Amenhotep IV, and if you remember, according to history, the priests in the temple cornered him in his palace, tied him and forced him to drink the poison cup of prussic acid which terminated his life and expression, his endeavor to bring to the people of Egypt, great scientific, spiritual teachings of the atom (which is, in essence, as represented to the present atom). Then again, he returned to earth to live the life of Jesus of Nazareth, and you know how his life was terminated at that time.

So thus, with these vivid memories of these past premature terminations, was sufficient reason why these two great souls would necessarily work "underground"—secretly, anonymously and quietly, as they prepared so assiduously and diligently their message. They prepared the entire library (20 books, lesson courses and recorded lectures) for the future—which is now at hand—to deliver to the earth people. Of these two lives (Akhenaton and Jesus) further relating will be given in detail at another time. They have been told throughout some of the books, and especially in the book called "The True Life of Jesus" and its sequel, "The Story of the Little Red Box."

So it is indeed the most wonderful thing that has happened to the earth world. When man even slightly begins to conceive of this inter-dimensional science, the world shall begin to be a far better place upon which to live. As any individual realizes, the earth has been, for some years now, headed toward oblivion. It has long since reached and passed the point of equilibrium, where spiritual awareness should equal or balance that of the physical or mechanical. Thus it is of vital importance that man begins to learn of his true spiritual nature. Thus it is now possible, through these various texts and the Channelship of these two individuals, any person can learn to change his life for the better and on all levels of life.

It can be said, and most truthfully so, the miracles have been stepped up and are even more profound and plentiful since Dr. Norman has left the physical and is working with and through Mrs. Norman from the higher, inner side of life. The prophecy Jesus made in Jerusalem when He said He would return has been fulfilled. He has returned—and left again—to return no more. He came especially to help free all those who had to do with the crucifixion, and this He did. Before returning to earth, He set it up on the inner with all these persons that they would be put in contact with Him on earth and taught how to free themselves of the great guilts incurred in that long-ago Jerusalem Time.

Thus it has been; those who built the crosses, those who fought over

His robe, His betrothed Mary—yes, the one who pressed the crown of thorns—all have made appearance and have relived or reviewed their part in that horrendous episode—and in the viewing or reliving, have found their peace. For instance, the man who pressed on the thorns (now a woman) has had, throughout the entire present lifetime, severe headaches. Then with the viewing of her action, the entire seeing of the crown pressing, a sudden relief of the pain was experienced—a permanent healing resulted, thus proving the truth of the experience long ago—as well as the principle of reincarnation.

Thus, the files of Unarius are filled with such cases, and they could keep your entire magazine filled for years to come. So vast is this work and so numerous the miracles, many of which dwarf by far those contained in the Bible. My own life—acting as secretary for the past eight years to Mrs. Norman—has been changed so greatly for the better and on all levels that words could never describe the improvement. I have seen and read from students' letters, miracles of all natures, forms and descriptions. We have come to know the inner worlds of reality, the causal worlds and dimensions.

The Science of Unarius is so complete, it fills the gap existing in materia medica, in all scientific aspects, including space, spacecraft, yes, even how the planets are held in position, etc., but most important, what is man and what makes him tick. This, the doctors cannot tell. They know not, yet the earthman is frightened of the Spaceman who can give him all the answers!

Mrs. Norman stands ready to demonstrate her wonderful healing powers—powers and rays projected by the Higher Intellectuals from outer space, using the same principles as do our televisions and radios, functioning via energy oscillation or frequency relationship. These healing Ray beams oscillate in millions of megacycles per second, or instantaneously, and results, too, often as rapid. □

Every year, countless lives are lost by fire. People are maimed and property damage is costly. In most instances, arson or carelessness has been the cause. Yet there have been "odd" conflagrations known to baffle men of science.

Strange Fire Spirits

By JANE AND KURT SINGER

HE life story of Mrs. Reeser is not spectacular. She lived a respectable life, married a Pennsylvania surgeon and settled down in Lancaster to rear her family. After the death of Dr. Reeser, Mary moved from Lancaster into an apartment in St. Petersburg, Florida, to escape the harsh winter of her home state and to be near her son.

On the night of July 1, 1961, Mr. Reeser called on his sixty-eight-year-old-mother. She was clad in a nightgown and a housecoat which covered her ample figure of one-hundred-seventy pounds. She sat serene and happy in a comfortable chair, chatting about everything and nothing. Shortly after nine o'clock, Mr. Reeser kissed her goodnight and left.

At about eight the next morning, the landlady, Mrs. Henserd, went to Mrs. Reeser's door with a telegram which had just arrived for her. When there was no answer, the landlady tried the doorknob. To her horror, it was intensely hot. She raced down the corridor and summoned two housepainters who broke into the apartment.

The remains lay in and about the chair which had been gutted and destroyed with the exception of buckled, fused steel springs. On a more careful scrutiny, the stunned threesome noticed that the ceiling and the higher parts of the walls were covered with a kind of greasy soot. Other than the charred bits of bones, the burned chair and the smudge on the walls and ceiling, nothing else in the room seemed to have been even scorched.

Mrs. Henserd called the police immediately. The officers who arrived on the scene called Chief-of-Police Reichart. This was no ordinary case in which, for instance, a woman goes to sleep with a lighted cigarette in her hand and is burned to death.

The coroner scratched his head. Mrs. Reeser's body was almost completely cremated. There remained only a portion of her backbone, a left foot, some internal organs and her skull which had, inexplicably been shrunkened to less than normal size.

Further investigation disclosed that the slipper on the left foot was not burned, and the rest of the furniture in the room showed no sign of exposure to heat with the exception of the slightly scorched rug directly under the death chair.

For lack of other evidence, the police set the time of the conflagration at 4:20 p.m. since the electric clock had stopped at that time. There was, however, no indication of faulty wiring any place in the room.

When the police turned to fire authorities, the crematorium experts agreed that a heat of 3000 degrees Fahrenheit, sustained over a period of hours, is necessary to consume a body to the extent of Mrs. Reeser's.

Yet, none of the other residents in the apartment house had heard the crackle of flames, smelled smoke or been conscious of the stench that comes with the burning of human flesh.

The intense heat had caused some secondary damage and was retained in the air of the room, particularly in the metal fixtures for some time, but this had come from heat rather than flames. Mrs. Reeser was the target, and the victim.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation moved in to help. After weeks of investigation, both the local and national authorities threw up their hands. The F.B.I. called it "improbable," and Chief Reichart said, "The case is not closed and it may never be closed to the satisfaction of all concerned."

The work of the supernatural forces which destroy their victims with fire, yet leave all else around untouched, is not unique to recent decades.

Several years ago, the Madras Mail of India reported that an almost completely consumed corpse of a woman had been found in an Indian village. Although very little of the woman's body remained, her sari and blouse were not even scorched and nothing else in the house showed any effects of heat.

The French Societe Medico Chirurgical reported a similar "supernatural burning" which was turned over to Dr. Bertholle for investigation. Again blast furnace heat had almost completely destroyed the internal organs and the left arm of a woman. And again, there was no evidence of fire except on the body. The filmy draperies, inflammable blankets and sheets were not even singed.

In the village of Whitley Bay, Wisconsin, a retired school teacher, Margaret Dewar, found her elder sister lying on an untouched bed. Wilhelmina was horribly burned and quite dead.

After an extensive investigation, the police were forced to call the case "open" and to surmise that it was another example of an inexplicable conflagration.

Another such case occurred in Dover, New Jersey. The malevolent fire directed its wrath on Miss Green, a housekeeper employed at a local hotel. She was found still alive, unique in these incidences, but unfortunately for the sake of science, although Miss Green was still conscious, she could give no explanation for the fearsome flames that had suddenly, from nowhere, attacked her. Her clothing was in perfect condition; her flesh, however, was so severely burned that she lived only a few hours after reaching the hospital.

Mrs. Stanley Lake, at Kingston, New York, met a similar fate 43 years ago. Her death followed the same pattern. Her clothing was not charred although little remained of her corpse.

As one reviews the numerous cases of the strange fires (there were over fifty reported in the United States alone in the last fifty years), the fact becomes obvious that women are more often victims than men.

Mr. J. Temple Thurston of Deptford, London, however, was an unfortunate male victim. He was found dead of severe burns although his clothing was intact.

In the annals of supernatural fires there are many reports of those which did not attack human beings but were content with inanimate objects. Mr. C.H. Williamson of Bladenboro, North Carolina, had the misfortune to live in a house plagued by fire "spirits." As if by spontaneous combustion, his daughter's dress would suddenly burst into flames. Each time they were able to save her from being burned, but after several such occurrences, the family moved. There was no further trouble.

The world's most famous example of a building haunted by supernatural fires was the Borley Rectory in Essex, England. For two centuries the rectory housed a wide variety of diabolic influences, including fire. Finally, the authorities of the Church of England abandoned the old building and sold it to a retired sea-captain, W.H. Gregson.

One night, however, as Gregson was sorting a box of books, a wall of flames shot up, engulfed the house, burning it to the ground.

It is likely that there are more cases of these conflagrations than have been reported and subjected to investigation. Many people seem hesitant to expose themselves to the ridicule of non-believers. They merely attribute the flames to spontaneous combustion and let it go at that. This tendency became clear during the series of weird happenings in the home of the James Herrmanns on Long Island. While there were no fires, small and large objects whizzed about their house, breaking and leaving wide dents on walls and furniture. Since the case received world-wide attention and a crew of scientists assembled to investigate the phenomena, the Herrmanns were very much in the public eye. During the period, many people wrote or called with both advice and questions. A number of queries came from people who had experienced the fire phenomenon but had not reported it to the police or to investigators in the field of the supernatural.

From the various accounts, it appears that some people attract these spontaneous flames. There seems to be a tendency, too, for these individuals to be subnormal mentally or subject to abnormalities such as epilepsy or catalytic seizures.

According to Dr. Woodman, writing for the Michigan Medical News, he had met a young man who could take a handkerchief, rub it while breathing on it, and it would burst into flames.

The late Vice-President of the United States, Charles Dawes, investigated a young mechanic in Memphis, Tennessee who, according to the New York Sun, "took a handkerchief, breathed on it and it caught fire."

There has been no answer to the eerie fire phenomenon. The serious scientists and para-psychologists have been led up blind alleys with each probe they have made. Perhaps we will know the cause tomorrow, but today we only know these mysterious fire have happened. □

IVAN SANDERSON'S STUDY ON FROZEN MAMMOTHS

By IVAN SANDERSON

ABOUT one-seventh of the entire land surface of our earth, stretching in a great swath round the Arctic Ocean, is permanently frozen. The surface of some of this territory is bare rock, but the greater part of it is covered with a layer, varying in thickness from a few feet to more than 1000 feet, of stuff we call "muck." This is composed of an assortment of different substances, all bound together with frozen water, which becomes and acts like rock. While its actual composition varies considerably from place to place, it is usually composed of fine sand or coarse silt, but it also includes a high proportion of earth or loam, and often masses of bones or even whole animals in various stages of preservation or decomposition. There is so much of the latter on occasion that even strong men find it almost impossible to stand the stench when it is melting. This muck is spread all across northern Asia and is exceptionally widespread in Northern Siberia. It appears again in Alaska, and lies across the top of Canada almost to Hudson Bay.

The list of animals that have been thawed out of this mess would cover several pages. It includes the famous woolly mammoths and woolly rhinoceroses, horses like those still existing wild in Asia, giant oxen and huge kinds of cats and dogs. In Alaska it also includes giant bison, wolves, and beavers, and an apparently quite ordinary lion as well as many other animals now extinct and some which are still in existence, like the musk-ox and the ground squirrel. The presence of the extinct species provides us with a fine set of riddles, and of those that are not extinct, with another set; and the absence of still others (like man) provide us with a third set. The greatest riddle, however, is when, why, and how did all these assorted creatures, and in such absolutely countless numbers, get killed, mashed up, and frozen into this horrific indecency?

There is one corpse in particular that is exceptionally irksome. This is the famous Beresovka mammoth that was thawed out of the frozen earth or "muck" of northern Siberia just after the turn of this century.

There was a time when there hardly seemed to be any real mystery here, apart from the preservation of animals long since extinct—in what was sometimes a perfect state. When western science first became aware of the matter, they summarily dismissed it with the classic statement that "the animals fell into the ice." And, for quite a time, this suggestion seems to have proved quite satisfactory to most people; those who murmured that one cannot fall into ice were hushed by dismal accounts of Swiss mountaineers falling into crevasses in glaciers.

It came to light, however, that there are not—and never were—any glaciers in Siberia except on the upper slopes of a few mountains, and that the animals are never found on mountains, but always on the level plains only a little above sea level. Further, it was pointed out that no bit of one has ever been found in ice. They are all in the muck.

These facts indicated water as the agency which engulfed the creatures. It was explained that they fell into rivers and

Stock Market Reports based on Numerology and Astrology

IFE is short, art long, experience not easily obtained, judgment difficult and therefore, it is necessary that one pay particular attention to timing. It is much worse to conceive one who knows those things which he is ignorant of, than to be ignorant of those things which he ought to know.

A little knowledge with an excellent judgment, avails more than poor judgment with the greatest learning; yet judgment is very much assisted and perfected by learning; but everything prospers better, and is far more easily perfected that has nature and favorable planets for its guide. A skillful person acquainted with the nature of the stars is enabled to avert many of their effects and to prepare himself for those effects before they arrive.

When selecting a time for the purchase or sale of a stock or bond, use the following procedure:

Reduce your full name to a number total of 9 or less.

In this system of numerology the letters of the alphabet respond to the 9 digits or single numbers. Numbers of two figures are not retained except in the cases of 11 and 22.

The letters of the alphabet must be reduced to single numbers; consequently more than one letter responds to the same number as shown below:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I
J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R
S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z

After you have reduced your name to a number, obtain the number representing the day of the week (Monday is 1, Tuesday is 2, Wednesday is 3, Thursday is 4, Friday is 5, Saturday is 6, and Sunday is 7) plus the time of the day that you desire to purchase a security. When you obtain the numbers for the day and time of the day (A.M. 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10-11-12; P.M. 13-14-15-16-17-18-19-20-21-22-23-24), add them to your name, and then add the total again, if it adds to more than 22 add the total again. Remember that only 22 numbers, each representing a different category of securities are used in this system.

For example: If your name number digit is 5 and the day number is 6 and the time of the day 7. You add 5 plus 6 plus 7, equals 18. 18 would be the category of securities you would find most fortunate to purchase according to the science of numerology and astrology. Referring to number 18,

UFO REPORT

BY HAYDEN C. HEWES, DIRECTOR, IUFOD

This report was investigated by Daniel Garcia and Victor Johnston on December 9th, 1972. Photographs are documented by The International UFO Bureau.

A single witness, one of outstanding reliability, Albert Young, a former aircraft inspector, reported examining at close range, a winged aircraft of nearly conventional appearance which crashed into a fence in Oklahoma during a heavy UFO period.

The UFO in question has no visible power source. In addition, two neighbors were interviewed, who stated that the subject is honest. The two witnesses of the UFO were located at approximately the same time (each within one hour), almost due north of the Oklahoma site, in Kansas (The Hays sightings).

According to witness Young: "The skids on the undercarriage hooked the two top barbwire, broke off a post, and almost flipped over on its back. If it hadn't hit the fence, it would have hit me about chest high. The craft was about 20-feet at wing-span. No occupant was observed in the domed area. Whoever built the craft was a master at camouflage . . ."

The case in question was reported to the International UFO Bureau in a letter written by a friend of the witness. This case has not been published in any newspapers, as the subject wanted no publicity.

However, the subject gave exclusive permission to the IUFOD to use his name and photographs in BEYOND REALITY.

"UFO CRASHES IN OKLAHOMA"

Mr. Albert Young lives on a small farm not too far from Enid, Oklahoma, which is located in the Northwestern part of the State. On the night of August 15, 1972 Mr. Young let his dogs out prior to going to bed. While walking out into his cow lot with his dogs, Mr. Young observed a brightly colored object approaching him from the West. The object appeared similar to objects observed before.

Mr. Young told International UFO Bureau investigators, Daniel Garcia and Vic Johnston, "It was moving about as fast as a man at a fast walk. It slowed down about 50 feet West of me." Actually the object was a lot closer than estimated.

The object "then raised up to come over a fence that was covered with tall weeds," Young continued.

The craft which appeared to be following a fence line had two "skids" on the underneath side. Young went on, "the skids on the undercarriage hooked the two top barbwire, broke off a post, and almost flipped over on its back. When the UFO stopped, its nose was about 1½ feet away from where I stood.

As Young looked at the strange craft the nose was on the ground while the tail was in the air at a steep angle. "There was a flashing red light in the center of the wing which was estimated to be about 14 inches in diameter." Young told Garcia and Johnston that the flashing light had a pulsating effect like lights seen on police patrol cars speeding crazily through city traffic.

As Young approached the unusual craft he noticed that the wing spread was about 20 feet while the length was about 18 feet. An estimate due to the fact that beyond the flashing light anything seen was mostly shadow. "The flashing light was rotating clockwise and contained four red panels with small holes in each of the panels letting out white light," he brought out.

Describing the craft Young said it was a dull, dark color, possibly black or red or even dark green, and that the red light on top made it almost invisible. "Whoever built the craft was a master at camouflage, you see only what they want you to see."

In all the unusual aircraft was on the ground maybe five minutes. During that time, Young, who at one time in his career was an aircraft inspector for McDonnell noticed that there were no rivets in the wing. "It was all one piece. The craft, which looked like an airplane, didn't have de-icers on its wings. I looked for a conventional propeller.

The Afterlife

Is there too much emphasis on the afterlife? Are the heaven and hell men anticipate figments of their own minds — and conditions which they create here? Are men forfeiting the divine opportunities this life affords by merely making it a preparation for a future existence? Is it not possible that here — on earth — men can become the real images of their god by understanding and expressing the infinite element within them? If deity is universal in its essence, not isolated in remote space, then all the elements of spiritual ecstasy and beatitude are possible in this life.

THIS FREE BOOK OF EXPLANATION

Too long have men placed their god beyond the galaxies and closed their consciousness to the divinity residing within themselves. Not beyond the threshold of death, but in this world does it lie within the province and power of man to experience that supreme state of peace profound. For those who think tradition should be re-examined in the light of our times, we offer the fascinating free book, Mastery of Life. Address Scribe E.J.X.

to France sought Nostradamus as the only thing to be seen there." His neighbors held him in awe and respect; kings, princes and prelates beat a path to his door; he was never in want. He was made physician in ordinary to King Charles the Ninth, and when he died in 1566, he was a prophet with honor in his own country.

From that day to the present the fame of Nostradamus has been a steady crescendo, one culmination being a monument honoring him, said honor being conveyed by the Government of France in the present century.

The quatrains of Nostradamus cover the entire course of history from his own times to the present and beyond, and, over and over again, history has caught up with his predictions and fulfilled them in the most startling manner.

Most of them concern the fate of France, and particularly by its rulers. Not that Nostradamus ignores the rest of the world. But like other prophets, he is a patriot, concerned first and foremost with the destiny of his own people, and where he predicts events in the histories of other nations, it is generally where that history bears relevance to that of his own nation.

He devotes the greatest proportion of his prophetic attention to the most momentous periods in history. Hence the many quatrains on the French Revolution and the Napoleonic era.

A word of warning to the reader who would "crack" the prophecies on his own. He must remember at all times that Nostradamus is a Frenchman. If he writes "the government," unless he specifies otherwise, he means his own government. If he writes "the king," he means his own king, and so on. When he is referring to other nations he is quite capable of saying so. When his prophecy concerns, let us say England, he will say England, or Britain, or the Isles. When the prediction concerns Germany or Italy he will name these nations or mention some place-name in either country.

Oh, a little more concerning the sceptic. He tends to say, "These prophecies are so elastic; they are vague and general and fit whatever events you want them to fit." But nobody who has devoted serious attention to the prophecies believes this. Sometimes I enjoy quoting passages from the prophet to just such a scoffer, then asking him to find another interpretation for the prophecy than the one I apply to it. Here are a few such passages:

"The queen will be sent to death by jurors chosen by lot." This can only refer to Marie Antoinette who was condemned to death by twelve jurors who were chosen by lot. Such an event had never happened in history before and has never happened since.

One remarkable quatrain of Nostradamus — the final one — reads:

The great Empire will be by England

The all-powerful for more than 300 years

Great forces will pass by land and sea;

The Portuguese will not be content with it.

England had not begun to be an Empire when Nostradamus glanced over the Channel. But the 300 years have come and gone and the truth of the prophecy is plain.

Certainly the sceptic cannot find various interpretations for the following dated prophecy:

The year 1727 in October

The King of Persia taken by those of Egypt . . .

"Those of Egypt" refers to those who ruled the land, who were the Turks. The King of Persia was not literally kidnapped from the field of battle but he was conquered in the year and month predicted. Dreyss' Universal Chronology states:

*Year 1727. Persia and Turkey.
Treaty of peace (Oct.); the Turks
keep all the country from Erivan, in Georgia, to Tauris and Hamadon;
the Sultan of Constantinople is recognized as the legitimate successor of the caliphs.*

Historian A. L. Castellan states: "The Peace was very advantageous for the Turks, since they conserved proprietorship over a great part of this vast kingdom, and acknowledged superiority over almost all the rest." And extremely disadvantageous for the Persians: P. M. Sykes writes, "The provinces held by Turkey were ceded to the Sultan. In other words, Persia was dismembered."

The "1727, October" prophecy was in print in the year 1558.

Another equally remarkably dated prophecy on the French Revolution is found in the 16th century Frenchman's prose writings. Nostradamus has been describing a terrible period in history in which the clergy were persecuted, then adds:

There will be the greatest persecution of the Christian Church, worse than that which took place in Africa, and this endure to the year 1792 which people will think to be a renovation of the age.

The Reds of the French Revolution hated Christianity to such a degree that not only did they murder multitudes of the clergy — who has not heard of the September massacres of 1792—but they even abolished the Christian Calendar, calling 1792 Year One of the Republic. Napoleon restored the calendar in 1806, so Nostradamus was also precise in his statement that they would think it to be a renovation of the age.

A prophecy involving the earlier English Revolution contains a line that has stunned sceptics—by their own admission:

Parliament of London will put their king to death. (Senat de Londres mettront a mort leur roy).

As every schoolboy knows, Oliver Cromwell had King Charles I sent to execution, and he was legally condemned by Parliament. H. G. Wells, in his Outline of History states: "Such a thing had never been heard of in the world before." It was an unthinkable thing that Nostradamus had predicted — for his own time, that is. When he penned the line, monarchs ruled by divine right. Elizabeth Tudor was an almost absolute monarch and Parliament was an insignificant body.

Let us now take a quatrain whose prophetic fulfillment took place in the lifetime of many of us. This verse actually names a personage not born when the prophecy was penned. "The True Centuries" contains several such quatrains.

*The assembly will go out from the castle of Franco,
The ambassador not satisfied will make a schism:
Those of the Riviera will be involved,
And they will deny the entry to the great gulf. (9.16)*

My study of Nostradamus began in 1940. The quatrains I decided to work on I typed on three-by-five-inch cards, in both English and French, and on the reverse side of each card scribbled the fulfilling historical facts. These showed around to various people for critical comment. One of the prophecies scrutinized was the "Franco" quatrain. A friend studying it commented, "That last line, 'They will deny the entry to the great gulf,' must refer to Gibraltar." He opened a book to a page showing a map of the continent of Europe. It was obvious. The great gulf was plainly the gulf of the Mediterranean and the entry was Gibraltar.

There were now two clues:

1. Gibraltar.
2. The name Franco.

The interpretation of the prophecy now became easy, something that rarely happens in trying to decipher Nostradamus before the event. This emerged: There would be a meeting on the Riviera between the representatives of Franco and of the Axis powers, but the outcome would deny Hitler Gibraltar. At this time no such meeting had taken place on the Riviera.

For several months I carefully scanned the front pages of the newspapers, assured there would be such a meeting. There was. On February 13, 1941 the New York Times, headlining Riviera announced a conference between the Axis emissaries and Fascist Spain had begun. And Hitler wanted the use of Gibraltar.

The situation looked black for the Allies, and most of our newspaper and radio commentators gloomily felt that if Hitler asserted himself the Axis would get Gibraltar.

Believing I had the key to the prophecy, however, I confidently awaited a contrary outcome, and was not let down. The war had four more years to go, yet in my Scribner Nostradamus on Napoleon, Hitler and the Present Crisis, published in September of that same year, I ventured out on a limb:

After the war, history books summarizing the part played by Spain in the present conflict will mention that Franco met Mussolini on the Riviera, and refused to Cooperate with the Axis to let troops pass through Spain to Gibraltar.

If Nostradamus can write thus forecastingly about Spain and Franco, can he do likewise with America? Does he? Well, despite some Nostradamians to the contrary, he has little to say about our land. This is not surprising. Nostradamus was French of the French and was interested first and foremost in his own nation. Prophets put their own people first.

Nevertheless, he was the first person in the history of the world to put into cold print the words:

*government of America
The original French reads:
Chef de Londres par regne L'Amérique*

that is,

*There will be a head of London
from the government of America.*

The entire prophecy reads:

*Head of London from the government of America,
The Island of Scotland, he will pave you by freezing;
They will have Reb for king, a very false Antichrist,
Who will put them all in an uproar. (10.66).*

The Bible foretells the coming of false Christs, but what is a false Antichrist? Certainly not Christ, but apparently one considered falsely to be an Antichrist. However, "Time testeth troth."

When Nostradamus penned these lines there was no government of America and no connection between England and America, for the first colonists had not yet been sent over.

The quatrains seems to prefigure a possibility of the near future: something like Union Now With Britain.

As to the future fate of the seer's own nation, some things seem clear, though all cannot be till history catches up with prophecy. In most cases, in interpreting Nostradamus absolute sense cannot be made of predictions still to be fulfilled, but notable exceptions exist. Now, for instance, there are quatrains that concern a future king of France, a Bourbon, a Henry, fifth of his name, who is to have a long and glorious rule. Unlikely as this may seem for this century, the lines are so limned that Nostradamians who do not agree with one another on other quatrains of the things to come, agree here. Apparently this future ruler will be a king-emperor, whose sceptre will extend over a Latin bloc which includes France, Spain, Portugal and Italy.

And Russia? Well, there be no war with the land of the Soviets, despite dark clouds. For years I have affirmed this in my public lectures and on the Long John all-night radio show — even during the midst of the Cuban Crisis, and still see no reason to change my mind. Were there to be war between these two giants — who at times seem to express as much intelligence as Fafner and Fasolt — Nostradamus would have penned something about it. But he has absolutely nothing. Indeed, he has a very few quatrains on Russia. One of them concerns the Russian Revolution:

*Songs, chants and slogans of the Slavic people
While princes and Lord are captive in the prisons,
In the future, by idiots without heads
Will be received as divine oracles.*

The paramount trouble-center is the Near East. An Arab Antichrist is to arise with the military genius of Napoleon and the cruelty of Hitler. His war is known to students of Bible prophecy as Armageddon. Armageddon is Megiddo, a plain in Palestine. This is not to say the entire war will be fought there but that Megiddo will be the pivotal

Money . . . love . . . power . . . friends . . .
everything you want!

The amazing miracle of

can automatically bring you the things you most desire.

Find out how!

Scott Reed—Master Researcher—has just made what may well be one of the most exciting revelations in the history of Psychic Research. For the first time anywhere, he reveals an amazing materialization method . . . in a thrilling new book called THE MIRACLE OF PSYCHO-COMMAND POWER: The New Way to Riches, Love, and Happiness.

The Discovery that Could Change Your Life

Scott Reed says, "For years I dreamed of an automatic way to do things, that would make life a heaven on earth. I spent all my time in scientific and occult libraries, searching for the secret . . . until one day it happened! I discovered THE SUPREME COMMAND FOR SUMMONING DESIRES OUT OF THIN AIR . . . and I found that I could actually materialize desires and make things happen automatically! Everything I asked for I received, with this secret . . . a new home . . . a new car . . . thousands of dollars, and more! All problems seemed to dissolve. I felt a mysterious aura around me . . . a feeling of power!"

The Words of the SUPREME COMMAND:

"I B----- I- M----- A- T-- H----- P---- T--- R----- M--- I- M- M--- A-- I- T-- M--- O- T-E----- O-- A----"

"Into those blanks fit the opening words of THE SUPREME COMMAND, as I discovered it," says Scott Reed—and he gives you the words, in this new book. Then, Reed says, "you'll have a secret that is guaranteed to bring about any event or condition you desire, starting immediately! Anything is within the realm of possibility!"

Scott Reed Gives Startling Proof!

"On nearly every page of this book," Reed says, "I show you how ordinary men and women from all walks of life—no better, no smarter, no luckier or harder working than you—got what they wanted, easily and automatically, with the Miracle of Psycho-Command Power. If it worked for them—it will work for you, too!"

Reed tells of Phillip O., who—desperate for money—sent up THE SUPREME COMMAND with Psycho-Command Power! A short while later, staring at the kitchen table, empty moments before, he noticed an envelope with a thick bulge in it. It contained $600, the exact amount he needed!

And he tells of Bradford D., who achieved love and companionship with THE SUPREME COMMAND . . . of Bill N., who found a steady stream of money . . . Jill H., who made her boyfriend say "Yes!" instead of no . . . Gloria D., who brought her mate to her without asking.

almost wild in New Orleans. We would sit in the Library with a book, reading and discussing many things. Those were joyous times for me. However, it was during one of these times that I told my dear friend that her daughter was going to marry a minister. She laughed and said that indeed, would be very unusual, but then, of course, she would accept it if it happened. Her daughter was my very dearest friend, and she is married to a Baptist minister.

Now, I would like to go back to a time when I was ten years old. We had just moved into a different neighborhood in Memphis, Tennessee. About three blocks from us was a very huge and beautiful house. However, it never was lived in by any family for any length of time. So, when the present family moved out, my brothers and I and some neighborhood kids went to look over the house. It had about fifteen rooms and believe-you-me, they were very beautiful rooms. It was truly a Southern mansion.

In one of the rooms that was built onto the back porch, we found huge chains fixed to the floor and assumed that here slaves were kept at one time. However, the most unusual incident happened when we went into the basement. Of course, there were no lights there because no one lived in the house. My brother was a very brave person and so he went first and started walking around in the darkness of the basement trying to find a window that he could open. He couldn't open the window from the inside and yelled at us to come on in, that it was extremely dark there and we might be able to adjust our eyes to the darkness and see what was there.

As I walked into the basement, I found that the floor was dirt, no concrete at all, just dirt, and this frightened me somewhat. As a matter of fact the feelings were so powerful, that the spirits of some of the people who had died in that house were there, that I felt that I would suffocate if I didn't get out of the basement. As I started back toward the door, which my brother had secured open with a huge stick, the stick jumped out and the door slammed and there we were in extreme darkness. We all scrambled to the door and out of there. It was a very eerie feeling because at the same time, we heard many voices upstairs and yet we knew that no one was up there.

One of our favorite things in summer, the year that I was ten, was to sit on the edge of the sidewalk with many other kids in the neighborhood and tell "ghost stories." I still remember the names of some of the kids from those days and how frightened we all were about 11:00 p.m. when we knew that we had to go inside. Often, we did not sleep.

The incidents that I have recalled here actually happened and in each instance, other than the last little item about the "ghost stories," I want to point out the effectiveness of listening to the natural warning that comes. This can happen to any person who develops their sensitivity to any degree at all. If you listen to the "within person" and if you are extremely aware of the situations in your life and of everything going on around you, then indeed, you will hear warning sounds and symbols and in time to protect yourself. □ point of strife between Arabs and Jews.

The war seems to be about over by the end of the century. The French prophet has a remarkable prediction which a newspaper journalist some years ago misinterpreted to mean the end of the world. He frightened some people. But the prophetic lines say nothing about world's end:

*The year 1999 seventh month,
A great king of terror will descend from the skies
To resuscitate the great king of Angolmois
Around this time Mars will reign for the good cause.
For the good cause? Perhaps by* the end of the century some war will be tapering off, with victory in sight on the side of right. Who is this king of terror? Only time will tell. But the seer of Renaissance France certainly selected an appropriate century for his outer-space event. Had he predicted 1899, 1799, 1699, or even 1599 — all future dates for him — the prophecy would have made no sense. Now it is beginning to. Angolmois is an old name for a province of France. Some interpreters think the word is an anagram of Mongol, making the King of Terror a coming Jenghis Khan.

After the war to end war, Nostradamus has a beautiful line, "the end of evils begun." There will be world peace and it seems a world government, with headquarters at Jerusalem, chief city of the three monotheistic religions, Jewish, Moslem and Christian.

In this dawn of mankind's dream of a righteous New Order, there is to be what Nostradamus deems a spiritual renaissance, when the knowledge of Good shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Sickness, age and death will diminish and finally be overcome and man will in time find himself and recognize himself as a purely spiritual being, incapable of destruction, but capable of functioning on both this plane and the so-called after-death planes. Peace will be perpetual and they shall learn war no more. □

You haven't seen a horoscope like this before, unless you have actually seen one of our in-depth personalized horoscopes. We invented computerized astrology 5 years ago when we learned that millions of people were interested in personal authentic astrology, not the short forecasts found in newspapers.

Many people could not afford the time and money required to have a personalized horoscope cast by a qualified astrologer. Such reports could cost up to $300.

Newspaper and magazine astrology is based on the twelve Sun Signs, so everyone in the world born during the same period gets the same horoscope — 12 possibilities in all. Authentic astrology is based on the month, day, year, time and place of birth, with the positions of all the planets taken into account — so the possibilities of variation are infinite. For instance, two people born on the same day in the same city, but at different times, get different horoscopes. Two people born on the same day at the same time, but in different places, get different horoscopes.

The Time Pattern horoscope is an individual, 20,000 word report all about you and you only. It describes your character as well as your potential in life, love and business. It also projects the trend of events you can expect during the next 12 months, giving highlights for each month and pinpointing individual days that are astrologically significant.

Time Pattern Research Institute was selected by the country's leading department stores as the most reliable astrological service available.

1. You receive your report within 10 days from receipt of your order.
2. You get the most comprehensive astrological report ever made available — 20,000 words, a whole book about you and you alone for only $20.00.
3. If you are not pleased with the report for any reason whatsoever, you may return it any time within a whole year from the receipt of your report for a full refund.
4. We predict that you will be astounded by the accuracy of your report.

You are one in a million, not one in twelve. Get the horoscope that fits you and no one else. Get a Time Pattern Report®

If exact time isn't known we'll use 12:00 noon.

There wasn't one. There were no jets, and the craft made no noise," he said.

"I felt the wing which was thicker than an ordinary wing on a small plane. The metal was smooth with the feeling of rough paint."

Thinking somehow it might possibly be a conventional craft, Young started to go under the wing to see if there was a door, or an insignia near the wing. As he did, he brought out, "it started to raise up and slid back off the fence. I kept my hands on the wing and felt no vibration from a motor. The craft raised up a few feet, tilted some and took off to the West and flew out of sight."

Young added, "Whoever built the thing knew what they were doing. It was better built than a German aircraft." Young stated that he had worked on over 8,000 aircraft during World War II.

Thinking back just prior to the craft crashing into the fence, Young said there was "no down-thrust of air" because there was no dust from the fields as the craft crossed it and the fields were power dry.

While no beings were observed inside the small dome on top, Young believes that the craft was not from this planet. "They must be from outer space," he asserted.

It appears that additional witness ses have been located that also reported UFOs not far from the Oklahoma site.

Incident 1. Mrs. Colette Neely, housewife at Hays, Kansas, reported that she with three others (husband James and friends Edward and Cecil Ruder) watched an object approach Hays at approximately 10 p.m. from the South on the night of August 15, 1972. The UFO was moving slowly and was reported as "bright red with a size as large as a pie plate."

Incident 2. Mr. Glenn Stricker, retired, reported that he and his wife observed an object on the evening of August 15 approximately 10:15 p.m. traveling North at a slow rate of speed. "When I first saw the object it was about straight East of me. Because it was night, it was difficult to determine its size, height, speed etc. It did seem, and if that was true, it was probably 100-200 yards above the ground traveling about 15-30 MPH. "The craft was comparable to that of a large headlight and appeared as a "round red light."

Going back to the Oklahoma case, the Bureau checked on the credibility of Young in that it was a single witness case. His closest neighbor is Ron and Linda Classen. Ron told Bureau officials that Young had reported the incident to him and that he "seemed sincere." Ron added that he has known Young for about 12 years and that he "does not tell stories." The Classens' were on vacation in Colorado and were not at home on the 15th.

Another neighbor that has known Young for the past 20 years told the Bureau, "As far I know Albert Young is an honest, reliable person." Mrs. Leona Dickinson added that she had not talked with Young since the incident and did not know of it.

This Oklahoma Crash incident is unusually strange in that it gives an account of a vehicle which cannot be accounted for in terms of any machine of known manufacture. An object which might easily pass unnoticed due to its fairly conventional configuration

The witness in this incident once again is of sufficient reliability and has an aircraft background to relate the UFO in terms of present aircraft.

Although the description of the UFO is unusual, similar descriptions are on file at Bureau headquarters in Oklahoma City. Investigator Johnston who has been researching UFOs since the late 1940s stated, "this case was one of the most interesting that he has investigated in several years." □

Challenge Your Mind to Relax With The

ELECTRIC REACTOMETER

You can't fool this one. Place your fingers on the indicator, and it immediately starts "clicking" as it measures your nerve waves. The number of electronic clicks per second depends on your emotional state. Learn to relax your mind and hear the difference. Help yourself achieve a more relaxed state. Test your emotional interreactions with others. When two people touch the reactometer at the same time the clicking will reveal your inter-reactions. Uses one 9 volt transistor battery (not included.)

"Suppose that an apparition appears before you next to a normal human being. Both figures would appear equally real and solid, and the apparition would have color as well as detail. The solidarity would appear the same from any angle.

"Light would operate on both alike. One could hear the apparition breathing and even the rustle of its clothing if it were approached. The apparition would be reflected in any available mirror and also cast shadows."

Tyrell, according to the Rev. J. Gordon Melton, brought out that the apparition would most likely seem to be aware of our presence and manifest that awareness by facial expressions and movements of the hand. If it would touch us, the touch would be as a normal person touching us.

"There would, however, be significant differences between the apparition and a normal person," the Rev. Melton brought out. For instance, a touch, while feeling normal, would possibly be accompanied by a sensation of cold. The solidarity of the apparition would be questionable, as our hand would be able to move through it."

The spirit would not photograph nor would there be any conversation (if taped on a tape recorder). The apparition, after a while would disappear, either suddenly or slowly, by fading or just walking out of the door. Other paranormal activity might accompany the apparition.

Anglican Clergyman J. Stafford Wright recounts one encounter with an apparition in his book, "Mind, Man And Spirits."

The encounter was at a New Year's Day service of Holy Communion.

Wright was reading the Ten Commandments to his congregation in an early part of the service. Suddenly, he noted a latecomer enter into the church. He was an elderly man who was wearing a brown overcoat.

The "individual" caught the Clergyman's eye and took a seat near the rear of the Church. During the Communion, the members of the small congregation came forward to be Served. All were women except the Verger in his black gown.

Said Wright later: "There were no signs of the man who arrived late. So, afterward, I asked the Verger what happened to him. He seemed surprised, and told me nobody had come in late. I persisted that he had come in by the door on my right, and had passed right in front of the Verger. His reply gave me the traditional creepy feeling down the back; for he said, 'He couldn't have come in by that door, sir. We always keep that door locked, except for funerals.'"

Coincidence or Reincarnation?

On a Monday morning late in July of 1935, Joan Bigby, (Beyond Reality secured her name via old court records) a tall, raven haired and striking, beautiful girl of 24, had stepped out of the Felony Court Building and into the sunbaked streets of downtown Manhattan, New York.

Arrested by police the day before on a prostitution charge, she had been held without bail overnight, and had a hearing in court that morning.

Although she'd been a prostitute all of her adult life, in and out of reform school as a child and back and forth from the Women's House of Detention as an adult, she had somehow gotten off this time with only a severe tongue-lashing, a small fine and a suspended sentence.

As soon as she'd stepped off the curb to cross over to City Hall, an onrushing truck had smacked into her, crushing her skull on impact,

TRUE EXPERIENCES

THE KISS OF LIFE

Some years ago I had to enter a German hospital. I was down with a deadly combination of flu and pneumonia. The doctors did their best but, finally, had to give it up. I was transferred to a "dying chamber" — a room customarily used in that country for patients with no hope for further living.

Two more hopeless men lay in that room; one — beside me — an Estonian seaman. He had no friends nor relatives seeing after him. A young Estonian nurse was said to be working with the hospital; but she never came to look up her countryman.

The final night for the poor seaman arrived. At midnight I heard him murmuring, "Dying . . . dying . . ." Was it an expression of fear, or of relief — I didn't know. I felt semiconscious myself all the evening. Then right at the same time, I suddenly fell asleep. And started dreaming immediately. I saw the young Estonian girl entering the room, bending over my pillow. She placed a long, sweet, and refreshing kiss on my chopped lips. A wonderful feeling appeared, and a deep, deep reviving sleep came over me . . . When I awoke in the morning — my fever was gone! The crisis was over — I was well. To the great surprise of all the attending hospital personnel.

But the seaman had died at that midnight . . . Had some sparks of life sprung over to me at that moment? Or was it just a time coincidence of both the events?

Still it would be hard to explain, in a rationalistic manner, the appearance and the pattern of my strange dream, the vision of the girl had not projected her in my thoughts; did not expect any favor from her or the deceased. □

WAS IT PSYCHIC COMMUNICATION?

About all I can offer for documentation is My word. I have lost contact with the friend I herewith speak of, and the incident was never mentioned to our parents for fear of retaliation (why were you sleeping on the job, etc?).

Perhaps my words will become a little more palatable if you know something about me. I am a public school administrator in Southwestern Michigan and a Notary Public for the County of Berrien.

Here is my experience:

The summer of 1960 promised to be free from many of the normal responsibilities one would expect after graduating from high school. A friend and I had a job painting a house. The owners were gone all day and we had until school started in the fall to finish. We took frequent breaks and generally got along well. Perhaps one thing led to another — we'll probably never know — but many small inconsequential events took place that summer that at the time we didn't associate with any psychic ability.

We hadn't really gotten into ESP

although it was mentioned on occasion. Some of the things that happened that summer could have been due to coincidence or merely the close and continual association of two friends. It seemed, however, that we always knew what the other was thinking.

Many times during our breaks we would amuse ourselves with archery practice. On one particularly hot and humid day when every move was an effort, my friend decided to take a short nap in the shade on one side of the house. We had our target set up against one of the many giant pine trees on the grounds which was to the right and in front of my sleeping friend. I felt his nap would provide me with opportunity for some extra practice.

After a few rounds, one of my shots went wild above the target. But instead of settling safely in the ground at some distance, it glanced off one of the pine boughs and to my horror headed directly toward my friend. Everything happened so fast that I didn't have time to cry out a warning at least not verbally.

At the last instant my friend suddenly moved to the side and the arrow imbedded in the house in the same spot he had been. If he didn't move when he did, he would have been killed. In talking about it afterwards, all he could remember was a feeling of danger and that something was rushing at him. □

Now...know in advance your GOOD DAYS BAD DAYS HIGHS—LOWS with a Bio-Rhythm™ Chart-Report™ you can

USE your high energy days to AVOID your off days
BE EXTRA CAREFUL on accident prone and error likely days

You know how often you have felt on some days that you can tackle any problem with ease and enjoy what you are doing. You also know how you have suffered on off days when nothing seems to go right. WELL THESE DAYS CAN BE CHARTED IN ADVANCE.

This is a discovery that has captured the mind of scientists for over 50 years. These researchers have been aware of the cyclical fluctuations in physical energy, the nervous system, moods, emotions and feelings of well being. For years scientists computed charts by hand. Now for the first time available to the public through the computerized technology the IBM/360.

EVERYBODY HAS UPS AND DOWNS

Everybody has cycles — everybody's cycles are different. The capacity to learn and to absorb seems to be highly regulated by INTERNAL LIVING CLOCKS starting the day you are born. These physiological changes are a part of our very bones and flesh. Dr. William Fliess, at one time President of the German Medical Association, published in 1903 THE RHYTHM OF LIFE; FOUNDATIONS OF AN EXACT BIOLOGY... his discovery of a formula that traced a 23 and 28-day high and low period in man's physical and nervous system based on thousands of case histories. Professor Teltscher of Innsbruck later discovered the 33-day cycle affecting the intellectual capabilities.

Today's Health News in February of 1972 said, "Scientists have found evidence that our biological clocks can be meaningful in medical treatment."

The official Tactical Air Command Magazine "ATTACK" in the March 1972 issue reported in an analysis of accidents that 67% of the pilots involved had two or more Bio-Rhythm™ cycles in the minus portion.

A major chemical company testing the Bio-Rhythm™ cyclical theory in a pilot project covering 2 million man hours resulted in a 40% reduction of accidents in their plants.

Human errors can be reduced Flight Safety Foundation reported in their September/October newsletter concerning this human factor side of accident investigation and causation. A transport company in Japan which operates a fleet of some 700 busses, taxis and a primary railroad has been applying the Bio-Rhythm™ Theory to their operation. The results? As quoted in the Flight Safety Foundation newsletter, "In the first year of application the accident rate decreased by one-third as against a steeply increasing trend in the country as a whole"

BE WISE KNOW YOUR CRITICAL PERIODS

Now for the first time a complete set of charts plus detailed explanations for every critical period for every month for the next year is yours. Use the report for a whole year. If you are not completely satisfied that the Bio-Rhythm Chart-Report™ did not help you in your day to day plans, then return the report for a complete refund with no questions asked.

You will also know the exact dates when your glorious, golden, good days are waiting for you; days when you'll have that tireless extra energy and mental control over yourself. You will know ahead exactly the days when your creative talents come to the surface, so that you can prepare ahead and buckle down to accomplish and win in what you set out to do.

YOU BENEFIT BECAUSE YOU KNOW IN ADVANCE

Succeed because you chose the right day for that important appointment or task... don't fail just because you didn't know it would be an off day for you.

Bio-Rhythm Chart-Report™ will trace your good days, your off days, energy days, drag days, accident prone days for every month for a year.

Once Bio-Rhythm Chart-Report™ has helped you, you will never plan again without it.

were then deposited miles away in deltas and estuaries under layers of silt. This sounded splendid at first, but then the next group of riddles appeared. These animal remains were not in deltas, swamps, or estuaries, but were scattered all over the country. Almost without exception, they were stuck in the highest levels of the curious, flat, low plateaus that occur all over the tundra between the river valleys. It was also pointed out that the whole of Northern Asia, Alaska, and Western Canada could never have been one vast delta, nor could their rivers have wandered about all over this higher land, depositing muck uphill. But last, and worst of all, a number of these animals were perfectly fresh, whole and undamaged, and still either standing or at least kneeling upright.

A mammoth falling into a river filled with melt-water is not going to be carried along in an upright position and deposited thus miles away. Also, elephants are very good swimmers in any case, and, owing to the huge amounts of vegetable matter they must keep in their stomachs at all times and which develop much gas, it is well-nigh impossible to sink them. Before this can be accomplished they have to be in an advanced state of decomposition or even to have burst. Then their remains would be shoved, bumped and probably rolled over and over along the bottom of the river before coming to rest in their final silty graves. But these standing animals were perfect, not burst, and with their fur coats in good order; they were not decomposed. On the contrary, their flesh was perfectly preserved. So the water theory had to be abandoned.

Next, mud became popular. There are certain kinds of clays found on the tundra only a few inches of which are sticky enough to hold a man by his feet; and so some intrepid Russian scientists suggested that, given a few feet of this substance, it could hold a mammoth till he froze to death. Despite the fact that no such substance has ever been found either holding or lying under any frozen animal, this idea at first came almost as a relief and was heartily adopted by almost everybody. But there are always, it seems, some spoil-sports in mammoth hunting; they pointed out not only the above fact but also that this hypothetical "goo" would have had to be unfrozen at the time, and that this could only mean that the temperature of the air was well above freezing. The animals must therefore have been frozen after death—probably by starvation—in which case they would have fallen over and started to decompose. Two emendations were therefore proposed.

The first was the idea that the animals fell into gulches, breaking down the banks as they fell and being engulfed in mud, and then that a sudden drop in temperature took place and they were frozen, upright. The other was that, after they got stuck, a gigantic blizzard blew up and froze both them and the goo forever. Both theories sounded possible, but both were immediately shown to be impossible. It was particularly this Beresovka specimen that proved this.

The Beresovka mammoth was discovered by a Siberian tribesman around the turn of the century. It was sticking head first out of a bank of the Beresovka River, a tributary of the mighty Kolyma which empties into the Arctic Ocean. This man axed off the tusks and took them to sell at the nearest trading post, at Yakutsk, and there he told the Cossack who bought them about the rest of the animal. Now there was an ukase promulgated by the Czar in force at that time, stating that all mammoth or other frozen-animal discoveries were to be reported to the government. This the Cossack did, and a scientific expedition was sent by the National Academy of Sciences from St. Petersburg. The members of this company built a shack over the corpse and lighted fires within to thaw it out. They then dismembered it carefully, packed up the parts, refroze them in the air outside and sledged them to the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

This corpse was sort of squatting at the back-end, but was raised on one foreleg in front, with the other held forward as if about to salute. Much of the head, which was sticking out of the bank, had been eaten down to the bone by local wolves and other animals, but of the rest most was perfect. Most important, however, was that the lips, the lining of the mouth, and the tongue were preserved. Upon the last, as well as between the teeth, were portions of the animal's last meal, which for some almost incomprehensible reason it had not had time to swallow.

This meal proved to have been composed of delicate sedges and grasses and—most amazing of all—fresh buttercup flowers. The stomach contained many more quarts of similar material. This discovery, in one fell swoop, just about demolished all the previous theories about the origin of these frozen animals and negated almost everything that was subsequently put forward. In fact, it presented a royal flush of new riddles.

First, the mammoth was upright, but it had a broken hip. Second, its exterior was whole and perfect, with none of its two-foot-long shaggy fur rubbed or torn off. Third, it was fresh; its parts, although they started to rot when the heat of the fire got at them, were just as they had been in life; the stomach contents had not begun to decompose. Finally, there were these buttercups on its tongue.

Perhaps none of these things sound very startling at first, but if you will examine them, one at a time, employing simple logic and good, common horse-sense, you will immediately find that they add up to an incredible picture. Let us take the points in succession.

That the animal had a broken hip shows that some very strong force must have been exerted upon it either before or after death. By the position of the corpse it would at first seem that this was caused before death by the animal's falling into one of the famous gulches and then having struggled to get out with its forefeet. However, there is no reason why the fracture could not have taken place after the animal was dead and be due to some great weight placed upon it while loose material remained beneath it. The animal may, indeed, have slipped and injured itself, though from what or into what there is absolutely no evidence. It had obviously not been either inundated or washed away by a flood, and it had not been drowned. Third, and very importantly, it was not only frozen but perfectly so.

The flesh of many of the animals found in the muck must have been very rapidly and deeply frozen, for its cells were not burst and, although one mammoth has been found by the radiocarbon dating method to be just over 10,000 years old, the flesh of these animals was remarkably fresh and some was devoured by the explorers' sledge dogs.

At minus 40° Fahrenheit, it takes twenty minutes to quick-freeze a dead turkey and thirty to preserve a whole side of beef. But these are mere bits of meat, not live animals clothed in fur and containing blood, internal organs and food, at a living temperature of about 98°.

The problem is to extract all the heat from the whole beast, but this can only be done from the outside—and by working inward. Unless we have tremendous cold outside, the center of the animal—and notably its stomach—will remain comparatively warm for some time, probably long enough for decomposition to start in its contents, while the actual chilling of the flesh will be slow enough for large crystals to form within its cells. Neither event occurred with the mammoths.

Here we must digress for a moment to consider a related riddle—namely, how these animals were all killed so suddenly. (And please note, I do not mean at the same time). Temperatures of lower than minus-100° Fahrenheit have recently been recorded in Antarctica, and the air customarily registers much less than zero over wide areas of the earth, yet very large numbers of animals live happily at such temperatures. Sled-dogs burrow into the snow to sleep in Antarctica and thereby obtain some protection, but they also stand about in the open for hours, even when a near hurricane is blowing—and moving air has a much greater chilling effect than still air. Men, though admittedly well clothed, have been out in temperatures of minus-100° for up to half an hour—and in a roaring blizzard to boot—without their lungs freezing; but much more amazing were the little Shetland ponies that Scott took on his ill-fated dash to the South Pole in 1911. He got these to the dome of the Antarctic icecap, and they had to stand out in the open all the time, yet they survived as long as their food supply lasted. In fact, it takes a very great deal of cold to kill a warm-blooded animal, and especially one that is already somewhat inured to it.

It now transpires, from several studies, that mammoths, though covered in a thick underwool and a long overcoat—and in some cases having quite a layer of fat—were not specially designed for arctic conditions; a little further consideration will make it plain that they did not live in such conditions.

That they did not live perpetually or even all year round on the arctic tundra is really very obvious. First, the average Indian elephant, which is a close relative of the mammoth and just about the same size, has to have several hundred pounds of food daily just to survive. For more than six months of the year, there is nothing for any such creature to eat on the tundra, and yet there were tens of thousands of mammoths. Further, not one trace of pine needles or of the leaves of any other trees were in the stomach of the Beresovka mammoth; little flowering buttercups, tender sedges and grasses were found exclusively. Buttercups will not grow even at forty degrees, and they cannot flower in the absence of sunlight. A detailed analysis of the contents of the Beresovka mammoth's stomach brought to light a long list of plants, some of which still grow in the arctic, but are actually much more typical of southern Siberia today. Therefore, the mammoths either made annual migrations north for the short summer, or the part of the earth where their corpses are found today was somewhere else in warmer latitudes at the time of their death, or both.

Here is a really shocking (to our previous way of thinking) picture: Vast herds of enormous, well-fed beasts not specifically designed for extreme cold, placidly feeding in sunny pastures, delicately plucking flowering buttercups, at a temperature in which we would probably not even have needed an overcoat. Suddenly they were killed and sometimes without any visible sign of violence and before they could so much as swallow a last mouthful of food, and then were quick-frozen so rapidly that every cell of their bodies is perfectly preserved, despite their great bulk and their high temperature. What, we may well ask, could possibly do this?

Fossils of plants requiring sunlight every day of the year—which is far from the condition pertaining about the poles—have been found in Greenland and on Antarctica. This alone proves that at some time in the past either the poles have not been where they are now, or those portions of the earth's surface that lie about the poles today were once elsewhere. Astronomers and engineers concur in stating that the rotational axis of the earth cannot ever have shifted because the earth is a vast flywheel, and even if any force great enough could be found to so shift it, it would fly apart.

Ergo, the crust of the earth must have shifted. Whether it did so in bits and the bits then shifted around reciprocally as suggested by Wegener, or whether it moved as a whole as propounded by Hapgood cannot be debated here. The latter seems the more probable at present, but in either case, if the crust does from time to time come unstruck from the central body of the spinning earth, it will start to move and new parts of it will drift in under the poles. However, the circumference at the equator bulges by twenty-six miles compared with the mean average circumference of the earth as measured north and south through the poles. This means that any portion of the crust heading for the equator is going to have to stretch by thirteen miles, while any moving toward a pole will have to contract by the same amount. And what must then happen?

The crust of the earth is estimated to be variously between twenty and sixty miles thick. This is really very little compared to the whole earth, being only about as thick as the outer skin of an onion. Its rocks are to some extent plastic, but are like taffy in that they can be stretched slowly, but will break if pulled too fast. Therefore, if a part of the crust goes up over the rise of the equator too fast, it will crack open and form vast rockbergs, while the material from the layer beneath it will come welling up to fill these cracks and sometimes even to flow out in great sheets such as are found all over the earth. Also, both about the equator and toward the poles, where the crust is being squeezed, every available volcano will be set off.

Now, volcanoes, when in eruption, not only spew out lava and hurl out rocks but also eject masses of dust particles, steam and other gases. Some of the dust may be shot into the upper atmosphere and then drift all around the earth. After the Indonesian island of Krakatoa blew up in 1883, there were magnificent sunsets all over the earth for several years because of this dust. Other great volcanic eruptions have actually affected rainfall because moisture gathers around small particles, and the gases—notably carbon dioxide, if present—have a marked effect upon the content of the atmosphere. It has been estimated that if only twenty major volcanoes went off at the same time, all manner of positively terrifying things could happen to our old earth and thus also to both us and mammoths. In fact, this may be the answer to most of our riddles. This theory is buttressed by the fact that great layers of volcanic dust have been found interlarded with the muck in Alaska.

A sudden mass extrusion of dust and gases would cause the formation of monstrous amounts of rain and snow, and it might even be so heavy as to cut out sunlight altogether for days, weeks, or months if the crustal movements continued. Winds beyond anything known today would be whipped up, and cold fronts of vast lengths would build up, with violent extremes of temperature on either side. There would be forty days and nights of snow in one place, continent-wide floods in another, and roaring hurricanes, seaquakes, and earthquakes bringing on landslides and tsunamis (so-called tidal waves) in others, and many other disturbances. But perhaps most important may have been the gases which would probably have been shot up highest of all. What would happen to them?

And this is where we get back to quick-freezing mammoths, for frozen-food experts have pointed out that to do this, starting with a healthy, live specimen, you would have to drop the temperature of the air surrounding it down to a point well below minus-150° Fahrenheit. There are two ways of freezing rapidly—one is by the blast method, the other by the mist process; these terms explain themselves. Moreover, the colder air or any other gas becomes, the heavier it gets. If these volcanic gases went up far enough they would be violently chilled and then, as they spiraled toward the poles, as all the atmosphere in time does, they would begin to descend. When they came upon a warm layer of air, they would weigh down upon it and pull all the heat out of it and then would eventually fall through it, probably with increasing momentum and perhaps in great blobs, pouring down through the weakest spot. And if they did this, the blob would displace the air already there, outward in all directions and with the utmost violence. Such descending gases might well be cold enough to kill and then instantly freeze a mammoth.

Consider now our poor mammoth placidly munching away in his meadow, perhaps even under a warm sun. The sky need not even cloud over, and there need not even be a dust haze where he is living, which would appear to have then been about where Central Asia is today. All of a sudden, in a matter of minutes, the air begins to move in that peculiar way one may experience at the end of the arctic summer when the first cold front descends and the temperature may drop 60° in an hour.

All the mammoth feels is a sudden violent tingling all over his skin and a searing pain in his lungs; the air seems suddenly to have turned to fire. He takes a few breaths and expires, his lungs, throat, eyeballs, ears and outer skin already crystallized. If he is near the center of the blob, the terrible cold envelops him, and in a few hours he is a standing monument of what is virtually "rock". Nor need there be any violence until the snow comes softly to pile up on him and bury him. And here we leave him for a moment and turn to his distant cousin chewing away in Alaska, just outside the area where the blob descends. What happens to him?

The sky here probably does cloud over, and it may even start to snow. something he has not before encountered in September, when he is in the north on his summer migration. He starts to pad off for cover. But then comes a wind that rapidly grows and grows in fury and explodes into something unimaginable. He is lifted off his feet and, along with bison, lion, beaver from ponds, and fish from rivers, is hurled against trees and rocks, torn literally to bits and then bowled along to be finally flung into a seething caldron of water, mud, shattered trees, boulders, mangled grass and shrubbery and bits of his fellows and other animals. Then comes the

Is it true the amazing secret of TELECULT POWER

AUTOMATICALLY BRINGS YOU ANYTHING YOU DESIRE...

And in 10 seconds starts to draw Riches, Love, Fine Possessions, Friends, Power, Secret Knowledge, and much more into your life? See for yourself!

Yes, a staggering miracle has happened; A brilliant psychic researcher has discovered a secret—so powerful that it is said to bring your desires to you, from the invisible world, like a blazing streak of lightning!

Yes, how would you like to be able to sit in your living room, give the command for love, and instantly have your loved one appear at your side? Or give the command for money, and suddenly find a big, thick roll of dollars in your hand?*

Now, a daring new book called TELECULT POWER lays bare this magic secret, and shows how it can bring fortune, love, and happiness. And Reese P. Dubin — the man who discovered it — makes this shocking claim . . .

"Great Wealth And Power Can Be Yours!"

Admittedly, the concept this book proposes is completely opposed and contrary to normal human knowledge and experience. "But at this very moment," says Mr. Dubin, "I have startling proof that I want you to see with your own eyes! I want to show you . . .

- "How diamonds and jewels have appeared, seemingly out of nothingness, shortly after the use of this strange secret!"
- "How a man used this method for a pocketful of money!"
- "How a woman used it to fill an empty purse!"
- "How a farmer received a pot full of gold!"
- "How another user Teleported a gold jewel box to her, seemingly out of thin air!"
- "How a woman used this method to regain her lost youth!"
- "How a man, growing bald, claims he renewed the growth of his hair with this secret!"
- "How a woman used it to bring her mate to her, without asking!"
- "How another woman summoned a man to her — out of thin air!"
- "How a man heard the unspoken thoughts of others, with this secret!"
- "How a woman saw behind walls and over great distances, with it!"
- "How a man broadcast silent commands that others had to obey!"

Let us now clearly demonstrate to you the scientific basis behind the new wonderworking, Miracle of TELECULT POWER!

"How Telecult Power Brings Any Desire Easily And Automatically!"

For many years, Reese P. Dubin dreamed of a way to call upon the invisible forces at work all around us. He spent a lifetime digging and searching for the secret. These investigations brought him knowledge that goes back to the dim recesses of the past.

One day, to his astonishment, he discovered that he could actually broadcast silent commands, which others instantly obeyed. Using the secret he tells you about in this book, he tried it time after time — commanding others to sleep, get up and come to him, talk or not talk — and act according to his silent wishes. It worked every time!

Working relentlessly from this evidence, Reese P. Dubin succeeded in perfecting a new kind of instrument — called a Tele-Photo Transmitter — that concentrates your thoughts, and sends them like a streaking bullet to their destination!

OTHERS OBEY SILENT COMMANDS! Writing of the success of this method, one user reports the following experience:

"I willed her to pick up and eat a biscuit from a plate in a corner of the room. She did so. I willed her to shake hands with her mother. She rushed to her mother and stroked her hands . . .

"I willed her to nod. She stood still and bent her head, I willed her to clap her hands, play a note on the piano, write her name, all of which she did."

"No one can escape the power of this method," says Mr. Dubin. "Everybody — high or low, ignorant or wise — all are subject to its spell! And unless the person is told what's being done, he will think the thoughts are his own!"

HEARS THE THOUGHTS OF OTHERS! Experimenting further with the Tele-Photo Transmitter, Reese P. Dubin soon found that he could

"tune in" and HEAR the unspoken thoughts of others. He says, "At first, these hearing impressions startled me, and I took them for actual speech, until I realized that people don't usually say such things aloud! And their lips remained closed."

SEES BEYOND WALLS, AND OVER GREAT DISTANCES! Then he discovered he could pick up actual sights, from behind walls and over great distances! And when he "tuned in" he could see actual living scenes before him—as clear as the picture on a television screen!

MAKES WOMAN APPEAR — SEEMINGLY OUT OF THIN AIR! With mounting excitement, Reese P. Dubin launched one of the most exciting experiments in the history of psychic research. He wanted to see if the Tele-Photo Transmitter could bring him an actual material object! He chose, for this experiment, the seemingly impossible: an actual living person!

He simply focused the Tele-Photo Transmitter, by dialing the object of his desire. In a flash the door burst open, and there — standing before him, as real as life — was his long-lost cousin!

He stared and rubbed his eyes, and looked again! There — smiling, with arms outstretched in greeting— stood living proof of the most astounding discovery of the Century!

Dial Any Treasure!

You'll see how to use the Tele-Photo Transmitter, to summon your desires. This special instrument — your mental equipment — requires no wires, and no electricity. "Yet," says Mr. Dubin, "it can teleport desires, swiftly from the invisible world."

When you dial your desire—whether for riches, love, or secret knowledge—you capture its invisible, photoplasmic form, at which point "it starts to materialize!" says Dr. Dubin.

"Telecult Power can work seeming miracles in your life," says Mr. Dubin. "With it, it is possible to dial any desire—called a Photo-Form—then sit back, relax, and watch this powerful secret go to work!"

"Instantly Your Life Is Changed!"

With this secret, the mightiest force in the Universe is at your command! "Simply ask for anything you want," says Mr. Dubin, "whether it be riches, love, fine possessions, power, friends, or secret knowledge!"

Suppose you had dialed Photo-Form #2 for Jewels, for example. That's what Margaret C. did, in an actual example Mr. Dubin tells you about. Rich, glittering diamonds and jewels literally appeared at her feet: a pair of gold earrings, which she found that morning . . . a surprise gift of a pearl necklace, and matching silver bracelets . . . a beautiful platinum ring set with emeralds and diamonds, dropped on her front lawn!

"Almost overnight," says Mr. Dubin, "it can start to multiply riches, bring romance and love . . . draw favors, gifts, new friends . . . or anything else asked for! It isn't necessary for you to understand why. What is important is that it has already worked for many others . . . men and women in all walks of life . . . worked every time . . . and it will work for you, too!"

Brings A Pocket Full Of Money!

You'll see how Jerry D. used this method. He was broke a week before payday. All he did, he says, was to dial Photo-Form #1. Suddenly he felt a bulge in his pocket. Lo and behold! He took out a roll of money . . . fives, tens, twenties . . . and more! Obviously, it had been placed there—but when? And by whom?

A Brand New Car Comes!

Marty C., a taxi driver, reports that he just dialed Photo-Form #4, sat back, relaxed, and waited for things to happen. In a short time, great excitement filled the house. His wife came hurrying in, saying, "We won it! We won a car and a cash prize! They just delivered it!" He got up and went to the window. There, big and beautiful, standing in the driveway, was a brand new Cadillac!

Brings Mate Without Asking!

Mrs. Conrad B. reports that she was tired of "pursuing" her husband, as she called it. She wanted him to voluntarily do the things she longed for, take her places, show affection. But he hadn't looked at her in years. He would fall asleep immediately after supper, or watched the ball games, or read the papers. Secretly Mrs. B. decided to try this method. She dialed Photo-Form #9 for Love! Instantly, her husband's attitude changed from boredom to interest and enthusiasm. And from that day forward, he showered her with kindness and affection! It was like a miracle come true!

The Power Of This Method!

There are so many personal experiences which I could recount, stories of healing, wealth, and happiness with this secret, that I find myself wanting to tell all of them at once. Here are just a few . . .

• REGAINS HAIR GROWTH! Walter C. had a shiny bald head with just a fringe of white hair showing around the edges. He tried this method, and soon his hair began to regrow. The new hair came in thick, dark, and luxurious!

• ROLLS DICE 50 TIMES WITHOUT MISSING ONCE! You'll see how this secret gave Albert J. the power to roll the dice 50 times, without missing once, and—for the first time in the history of Las Vegas—walk away with $500,000!

• DISSOLVES ALL EVIL! You'll see how this amazing secret revealed to Lawrence M. the people who were trying to make him look silly at work—actually revealed their secret thoughts—made them confess and apologize!

If TELECULT POWER can do all this for others, what riches, what rewards, what amazing results can it also bring to you?

cold that freezes the whole lot, and finally when the holocaust is over, the snow to cover it all.

This is exactly the state of affairs that we find in Alaska, where the mammoths and other animals, with one or two significant exceptions, were all literally torn to pieces while still fresh. Young and old alike were cast about, mangled and then frozen. There are also, however, other areas where the animals are mangled, but had time to decompose before being frozen; and still others where they decomposed down to bones and were then either frozen or not. Beyond these again, there are similar vast masses of animals, including whole herds or families, all piled together into gulleys and riverbeds and other holes, where only bones remain.

Here may be the answer to our riddle of why we find mammoths with buttercups in their teeth in one place, shredded but still-edible mammoths in another, rotting mammoths in a third, and mammoth boneyards somewhere else. The animals were frozen whole where the blobs of cold air descended before the winds began, shredded and frozen where the winds came before the cold had spread out, and reduced to bones where the animals had time to decompose before the cold reached them or where it failed to reach.

The remains, if still sticking out of the ground where the middle of the blob occurred, would have been safely sealed in if snow came, as the Beresovka mammoth probably was. A true icecap never formed in Siberia, but there is evidence that one once started to grow there; it soon died away, and as it did so, vast floods of melt-water brought great quantities of silt down from the south—which is the direction the rivers flow in Siberia—and deposited it upon the compacted snow. This froze in the fall, but melted in the spring, and since a dark material absorbs more heat, it gradually, year by year, dissolved the snow below and descended upon and eventually enveloped the quick-frozen mammoth by the slow substitution of chilled silt for compacted snow.

This does not of course purport to be the explanation of this singular phenomenon, nor is it put forward as more than just one possible way in which what is observed could have come about. There are aspects of it that don't quite jell—and perhaps this is for once an excusable pun. Principal among these is the extremely knotty question (an inexcusable one) of just how a frozen mammoth or anything else above ground actually got into a stratum of frozen muck which is rock-hard. This is the conundrum that annoys everybody and the one over which the "experts" invariably stumble. And stumble they have, ending with a veritable outburst by a leading buffoon in a frightfully august scientific publication a few years ago (whose name shall remain off the record as I do not wish to subject anybody to outright ridicule). Trouble is, nobody has yet thought up even a possible explanation for this business apart from the one quoted above, and this, as I say, is more than just dubious. Let us examine the matter, disregarding the causes of whatever did happen.

In order to freeze, or rather deep-freeze, a large elephantine you have not only to freeze it (externally) but literally deep-freeze it right to its middle, and bloody fast to boot; otherwise, first the contents of its alimentary tract, and then all its internal organs, will start literally to "cook" due to the release of heat from bacterial action as in a vegetable compost heap. Now, there are those who state that this is just the way in which the insides of these mammoths did get themselves preserved, and I will second the motion in that I once spent three weeks on a tropical beach cutting up a fifty-foot sperm whale that had manifestly been dead for months, and found that the muscular tissue deep inside was perfectly "fresh" and neither "blue" (as we say of completely raw steaks) nor overdone. So far so good, at least for the inside; but what of the outside?

If there was a drop of some 150° to 200° in the air temperature, the integument and any bits and pieces sticking out, like eyeballs and genitalia, would indeed be almost instantly deep-frozen. However, the (non-deep-freeze) expert should be informed that such an outer coating of deep-freeze is the best way to insulate the next layers within a solid, sealed body. Don't forget that "cold" is not the opposite of "heat;" it is the natural state, while heat is but a molecular agitation. Thus, you cannot draw cold out of anything, but you can dissipate heat. By this score, "cold" cannot diffuse into a body; rather, said body has to disseminate or diffuse its heat, thereby becoming what we call "colder;" and in the case of a thing like a mammoth this will take quite some time when it is enshrined in an insulating capsule of deep-freeze. So there are problems in the middle layers too.

But next, the really vital question. Whether you get the damned thing deep-frozen all through or not, how do you get it into a solid mass of something else deep-frozen, without destroying or damaging its outside and/or without said outside rotting due to warming-up, and refreezing? This is where the theory that the Beresovska mammoth got hit and instantly killed and frozen on the surface—i.e., in air—and was subsequently "buried" breaks down. That it was so, however, is obvious and, what is more, it is almost as sure that it was frozen first and then buried later, rather than the other way around—vide the perfect condition of its exterior and (don't forget) the little buttercups. The idea that it was first covered with snow and that this then compacted to firm, and thence to ice (glacial type), and finally to palaeocrystic or "fossil" ice is perfectly splendid; but how then did the muck get in the act? There are only two alternatives: either there never was any snow or ice in the first and second places but an overwhelming tide of muck came along immediately

NEW! The One Big Reference That Unlocks The Secrets Of Your Dreams!

What did the dream you had last night really mean? It could be vitally important for you to know. Now, finally, you can — quickly and easily. ZOLAR'S new ENCYCLOPEDIA AND DICTIONARY gives you the keys to unlock the secrets of just about any dream you'll ever have!

Zolar shows you how each letter in the alphabet vibrates to one of the numbers between 1 and 9; what months of the year, days of the week, and hours of the day vibrate to what numbers. He examines the Zodiac in terms of its influence on dreams — and charts the good and bad days of the moon for dream activity.

A LIFETIME REFERENCE!

Each of the 4,000 words alphabetically indexed in the Encyclopedia (from the letter "A" and "abandon" through "marriage" and "smoking" to "zipper" and "Zulu") has from four to as many as twenty different meanings — and Zolar has included every single one! A reference like this, drawing as it does on the documents and hidden manuscripts which have come down through the centuries, is the work of a lifetime — and a once-in-a-lifetime value for you!

after the elephantine deep-freezing event; or said snow and ice was gradually replaced by muck. But neither of these ideas work either.

First, the thing could not have been overwhelmed by muck because said muck would have also been deep-frozen and therefore of the consistency of a rock. (That it would have had to flow uphill is something else, and a point the advocates of this theory will have to explain). Second, again how did successive floods of muck, warm enough to be plastic, flow uphill and, more so how could the outside of the frozen beast—standing presumably now in pristine isolation like a statue due to the warmed temperature which presumably melted all snow and ice—fail to melt and so rot; and when a hairy beast rots from the outside in a moist atmosphere, the first thing that happens is that the outer layer of the skin sloughs off. No, dear experts, these ideas just won't work. You can't have it both ways and you seemingly can't have it either way this time; yet there are the bloody animals to prove that you must have it.

I suppose you will say at this point: "OK, you think you're so damned smart, you tell us what happened." Well, I can't, and after some thirty years on this bit I don't think I am going to try any more. There are those that seem to feel I am advocating some kind of cataclysm to account for all these mass deaths, and cataclysms unnerve everybody, let alone scientists. I am not advocating such, though I do think that the suddenly descending globs of super-cold air would seem to go further than any other theory to explain the results observable. As to the procedure and process for freezing the stuff I can but rely on the real experts in the meat industry. When it comes to floods of non-frozen muck running uphill I tend to give up, since I know, as a trained geologist, that the very idea is totally illogical though I suppose nothing is impossible. But getting a solid, deep-frozen elephantine into a solid mass of rock completely buffaloes (or should I say "elephants") me. If only somebody who knows what he or she is talking about would come up with a suggestion that might at least work on logical grounds or in accord with our present knowledge of physics, I would not only be happy but I could start making preparations for my wake. So, I am the executive secretary of a society stated to be founded for "The Investigation of the Unexplained." Splendid; but so help me! □ breaking the once-beautiful body which men had craved, which she had so often misused.

Joan Bigby had died violently that morning 38 years ago.

Or had she . . .

In the early Fall of 1970, Carol Ann McCartney (BEYOND REALITY has substituted a fictitious name for her real identity for obvious reasons), an Education Major at Columbia University, was taken by ambulance to a private sanatorium on Long Island, where she was treated for a severe mental collapse.

Early in her 38 years, Carol had searched her soul for the key to her own future happiness. She was very unattractive, physically, and so she ascertained, romance was out of the question.

Yet, being only human, a deep depression would overtake her whenever she thought of the thrill of love which she knew would be denied her.

She realized that she had to devote her life to something where she wouldn't think of her shortcoming. Or would do so as little as possible.

That something was the pursuit of knowledge . . .

For the past several years she had been a student, getting degree after degree. In another year she had planned to teach at a Manhattan, New York University.

However, the summer before her mental health had failed, she had met a young man, and had fallen deeply, passionately in love.

However, her love for this man was rewarded with indifference. This had driven her to despair and finally into a state of complete nervous disorder.

The drug that her psychiatrist had injected into her, had calmed her into such a state that she could relate exactly what had been bothering her, with a clear mind and in mature, detached terms.

Farther and farther back into her childhood the doctor probed, until, under total hypnosis, she was a child again, speaking as a child, behaving as a child, telling of childhood things.

Suddenly, under the full impact of the drug, which we believe induced some type of self-hypnotism, she stood squarely in the center of the room, hands seductively moving down her breasts, her body, swaying rhythmically to a tune she began to hum.

When the doctor told her to sit down, she became angered.

"Nobody orders me around," she insisted. "Not Joan Bigby . . ."

The startled, yet patient physician watched intently as the young woman stepped to the mirror in the corner of the room. She took one look at her reflection, and put her hands to her face and screamed, then she fainted.

In the weeks that followed the young mental patient had told the psychiatrist many things about Joan Bigby, things too personal to print here and things that only Joan Bigby herself would have known.

Curiosity had gotten the better of the doctor and he decided to investigate the facts he had been told about Joan Bigby.

Digging into court records, newspaper clippings and other files, he had come to realize that Joan Bigby had indeed existed, was a prostitute and had died in the manner related.

But more important, he uncovered something else: Joan Bigby was killed within hours before his patient was born. □

INSIGHTS FOR THE AGE OF AQUARIUS

DISCOVER, IN ONE BOOK,
WHAT YOU REALLY CAN BELIEVE.

by Gina Cerminara

The Hindu in India. The Christian in America. The Buddhist in Japan. The major religions in all parts of the world. Different, yet surprisingly alike. So says the author of Many Mansions in her startling new book. One which explains, through the latest discoveries about the principles of General Semantics, parapsychology and religious scholarship, the basic link between your faith and the world's others. Which helps end dissension, and foster tolerance, humanity and greater spiritual awareness. But, most of all, one which shows what world-wide religion, at its best, can be.

REVELATION

THE DIVINE FIRE

A higher intelligence has a message for you.
Brad Steiger
knows what it is.

BY BRAD STEIGER

They came to him by the hundreds. Letters from people who claim to have received messages from superhuman beings, each with the same theme: the day of judgment is near. Now those letters, along with interviews and evaluations by a number of clergymen, scientists and psychics, are contained in this surprising book which also shows how surprisingly easy it is to cultivate the Revelation Experience yourself. $7.95

OCCULT HAPPENINGS

By DICK SCHWARTZBERG

Gordon Turner, one of England's foremost spiritual healers will be a featured speaker at the SEF Annual Conference, to be held May 17th-May 19th, 1973 at the Bismarck Hotel, Chicago. Author of "An Outline of Spiritual Healing," Mr. Turner has worked with Harry Edwards to help organize the Association of Spiritual Healers of Great Britain.

The "Strange Fate" radio program hosted by Robert Cummings is coming to America after a successful three-year trial run on Canadian radio, Cummings was a professional broadcast journalist before he turned to a career as a syndicated radio personality.

Brad Steiger's STRANGE WORLD comes to Japan and Malasia and now appears in Joseijishin, Tokyo's largest weekly with more than a million readers weekly. It also appears in the Penang Star, Malasia.

Public appearances of Al Manning, President of the Los Angeles, California-based ESP Lab are continuing. Recently, he appeared on the Joe Delaney Show (Station KLAV — Las Vegas) where he discussed his book, "Helping Yourself With White Witchcraft." After that, it was on to Sacramento (KXTV's Noon News), and finally on to New York to tape an appearance on the TO TELL THE TRUTH Show.

A recent seminar conducted by Dr. Stanley M. Dean of the University of Florida, entitled "Science and Psi: Transcultural Trends," was held at the Annual Meeting of the American Psychiatrists Association in Dallas, Texas. It was the first time that such a gathering of psychiatrists took place to talk about psychic reality.

The Portland, Oregon Astrological Association recently featured nationally prominent author Marc Robertson who lectured on "Finding Your Function In The Universe." Held at the Lloyd Center Auditorium, Robertson answered many audience questions. He is a personal friend of Dane Rudhyar and teaches a practical application of his Personality-Centered approach to Astrology.

Well-known Clairvoyant and spiritual healer Noel Street has prepared an agenda of extensive lectures scheduled to take up most of the year. His message is one of spiritual healing, good health and the teaching of rebirth and reincarnation. Rev. Street is one of today's best-known psychics. His work is unusual as he is able to incorporate psychic diagnosis with treatment.

The First International Congress of Parapsychology and Psychotronics will be held in Prague, Czechoslovakia, at the Central Cultural House of Transport and Communication, June 18 to 22, 1973. This will be a working conference aimed at summarizing and evaluating the research results achieved so far in this field and at determining future research trends. It is an exciting milestone in international progress and cooperation. More data on the Congress can be had by writing to the First International Congress of Parapsychology and Psychotronics, Suite 3C, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N.Y. 10003 or by telephoning (212) 089-6237

The American Society for Psychological Research is in the process of conducting intensive research into out-of-body experiences using advanced methods and technology. Seeking the best talent for this project is Dr. Karlis Osis, Director of Research at the ASPR. He would highly appreciate not only hearing from members who can get out of the body most of the time when they try, but also receiving suggestions about other talented individuals. Write to: Robert H. Ashby, 78 Terrace Trail East, Lake Quivira, Kansas City, Kansas, 66106.

The New York Parapsychology Forum (Wilkie Memorial Building, 20 West 40th Street, New York City) holds classes on subjects ranging from "How To Use Your Psychic Ability For Spiritual Growth," to "Masters Channeling From The Higher Forces." Director Ann Koerning invites inquiries. Address them to her at 64 West 9th Street, New York City, N.Y. 10011.

The Pen And Quill Astrology Center, Seattle Washington, offers classes on Astrology, Numerology, ESP, The Tarot, Card Reading, Palmistry, Reincarnation, Development, Magic, Autogenics and Meditation. Scheduled are fortune telling parties, magic and mind reading as well as levitation demonstrations. The P & Q also offers tours to other cities, workshops, lectures, seminars, consultations and special events such as Billets, Clairvoyant Readers, "T" parties, Healing Demonstrations and autograph parties. If you're interested, contact the Pen & Quill, 17518 15th Avenue N.E., Washington, 98155.
