

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 1.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,116.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Notes and Comments.... 1	BOSTON LETTER..... 4
A "Cynosure" W a y- Mark..... 8	REFORM NEWS:
Why Romanism Opposes Masonry..... 8	From the Washington Agent..... 5
A Special Notice to Our Readers..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Southern Outrages..... 9	Utah and the Mormons— I; A Handmaid of the Lord in the South; Pith and Point..... 5,6
Personal Mention..... 9	LITERATURE..... 6
John G. Fee..... 9	LODGE NOTES..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
The Anti-Masonic Reviv- al in Boston..... 1	THE N. C. A..... 7
A Plea for United Effort on the Part of Reform- ers..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
SELECTED:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
An Odd-fellow's Renun- ciation..... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

Bro. I. R. B. Arnold leaves his large floating chapel, for a few days, at Vevay, Ind., in charge of local help, to give a lecture on secrecy at the Free Methodist Conference at Colchester, Illinois, which is to convene on the 23d instant. He will be accompanied by his magnificent collection of stereopticon views, and give temperance lectures at DeKalb, Sycamore and Wheaton. If there are a few other points, or opportunities, afforded at the above-named places, where large and good congregations desire to hear Bro. Arnold lecture on Masonry, he will accept a few such appointments only (his time being limited), making no charge, but expecting collections to be made in his behalf at each lecture. Bro. Arnold and his pictures make an attractive combination.

The arguments made by the Chicago Herald and numerous other papers, both local and provincial, that it will be necessary to open the World's Fair on Sundays, because it will give the working classes an opportunity to visit it on that day, have altogether too local an application to make them effective. As used, the arguments refer, almost wholly, to working men and women in Chicago and its suburbs. As for those in other portions of this State, and also for those who live in other States, the question of the Sunday opening of the fair is of no moment. According to the usual custom, the working men and women in outside towns and cities will be allowed to form excursions to the fair, and as no one can see all the wonders of it in one day, tickets will undoubtedly be issued allowing them to remain here for several days, none of which need be Sunday. On that day, if they remain in town, there will be numerous church and other religious attractions to employ their time pleasantly and profitably, independently of the charms of the fair. If this is the case with our outside visitors, it is reasonable to suppose that our own tired workers will naturally find more enjoyment out of the fair than in it, on that day; for long tramps amid the bewildering sights of the Exposition would scarcely refresh either the mind or body sufficiently to enable them to resume their labors on the following morning. We advocate, instead, the giving of employes in each factory from three to six days' vacation for visiting the show, and keeping it closed on the Christian Sabbath.

The Catholic Knights of America at St. Louis, Mo., are greatly shocked and quite wrathly over the alleged absconding of Supreme Treasurer Wm. O'Brien, with the funds of the order, from Chattanooga, Tenn. Meetings were held by the lodges throughout St. Louis on Saturday night, and the discussion of the affair is represented as "stormy," especially when a telegram from a high official in the order was received, confirming the intelligence. The prevailing disorder threatened to disrupt the order in St. Louis, but ended in the adoption of the following, addressed to the supreme officers at Chattanooga: "We denounce the man who has fallen so low as to appropriate to his own use money belonging to widows and orphans. We demand of our present officers that they pursue the culprit to the end of our country, that he may not have a resting place under our flag. We demand that the sinking fund be drawn upon immediately for a sum sufficient to meet at once all outstanding obligations, and that the same be placed to the credit of the widows and orphans' fund. As we understand it the sinking fund now amounts to $165,000. We pledge ourselves to stand by our order and show to the world that our 25,000 members will each willingly share his portion of the relatively small loss. We denounce all who would from mercenary motives magnify our misfortune." The amount taken is not stated, but if it corresponds with the outburst of angry feeling which the embezzlement has created, it must be very large.

The story of ex-letter carrier O. A. Gardner, who was recently on trial at Minneapolis, Minn., for abstracting money from mail-matter intrusted to him, will again attest the truth of Anti-masonic statements made over and over again in this paper, and confirmed too frequently by the records of the courts. The evidence of Gardner's guilt seems to have been well-established before the trial began, for although he had been acquitted on one charge he stood indicted on a second one. The defense, by F. F. Davis, Gardner's attorney, charged that he had been persuaded to confess his guilt by Inspector-General Gould, of Chicago, on the promise that Gould, as a fellow Mason, would see that he should be acquitted. Gardner himself, the reporter continues, was then put on the stand, and told the story in detail. Gould, he said, had made known to him the fact that both were Freemasons, and urged him to confess on the promise that his acquittal was assured. Gould, he said, went further, and declared that had he known Gardner was a Mason before his arrest, he (Gould) would have warned him. This testimony, continues the report, "made a big sensation," as Davis (Gardner's attorney) is himself a Freemason. "In fact," says the same authority, "the judge, the lawyers on both sides, and most of the jury on the first trial were Masons." Taken in the light of the obligation in the Royal Arch degree—"I furthermore promise and swear that I will assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty, and will espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same, whether he be right or wrong"—what a farce becomes justice in our tribunals for the conviction and punishment of criminals! And the man who would voluntarily take such an oath, and keep it, is unworthy of the fellowship of honest men and is self-degraded to the rank of a villain, dangerous alike to society and the government under which he lives. We tell the story as we find it related in the Philadelphia Press of Sept. 4, where it appears as a dispatch from Minneapolis, and have no reason to doubt its correctness.

Our readers will understand that business notices of outside parties appearing in this paper as reading matter are prepared by our advertisers. Frequently they read as if written in this office, and as if the Cynosure indorsed their statements. The editors and managers of this paper do not vouch for the truthfulness of the advertisements which it prints, although none is admitted to its columns if known to be fraudulent in its designs. Every reader is expected to exercise due discretion, and investigate before entering into negotiation with advertisers.

THE ANTI-MASONIC REVIVAL IN BOSTON.

Propos to the recent discussion of Freemasonry, an incident has occurred that appeals to us as of special significance. We do not refer to the defence of Masonry by Rev. Mr. Cleveland of Melrose, nor to the particular statement in the Boston Journal that he had received the "thanks of several outside and unknown parties." Although in view of the past stand of the Baptist denomination, which so profound a student of religious phenomena as Dr. Finney declared to have been "the beginning of the greatest revival in America," it seems not a little strange that a Baptist clergyman of any note should be found apologizing for the most active rival among lodges of the Gospel; moreover, while it is singular that the Journal should seem to make it quite pointed that it was "outsiders" who expressed their gratitude for Rev. Mr. Cleveland's questionable performance, and left us to infer that the insiders (that is, Cleveland's church) were not so much impressed with the praiseworthiness of his enterprise, yet we do not consider this as especially significant. Aside from the fact we are about to consider, the most suggestive is the statement in the same report, that Cleveland is going away on a vacation, owing to bad health, and the list is given of those who are to supply his desk. The list embraces the most aggressive of Anti-masons. It might seem, therefore, that the insiders, (that is, the church,) were inclined to disinfest that pulpit immediately after Cleveland's departure for a season of rest. If this be the case, what will they do with Cleveland on his return?

The fact of special significance in the notice before us is the statement that some one from the State of Georgia had sent Rev. Mr. Cleveland a mammoth watermelon. Straws are said to indicate both the direction and speed of a current, to confirm any guess that was based in the facts. This is what this watermelon from Georgia does.

The principal charge against the Masonic fraternity is, that it is a secret organization, whose numerous lodges are so closely linked, and have such a complete understanding between each other, that information is flashed from one point in the chain to all the rest with lightning quickness, so that whatever person should prove obnoxious to the fraternity in Melrose, or Boston, would be a spotted man in New Orleans or San Francisco within twenty-four hours; and that to become obnoxious to a lodge in Melrose means practical destruction of influence in any other place on the globe. And the Masonic order is one whose communication is carried on in secret. All its devices are hidden. Moreover, one knows only its publicly-professed purposes and principles of action. While it creates the suspicion, by its very secrecy, that its enterprises cannot be wholly legitimate, that which is of the light cometh to the light. The Masonic lodge is classed—it is self-classed—among the orders and people of the world which cannot endure the light "because their deeds are evil." Evil communications, or evil methods, cannot be consistent with good practices or good motives. Evil demands the night in which to act. Good demands the daylight. There may be good in the night, and good men may choose the night in which to act. But this is exceptional, and is the result of seasons of extraordinary evil.

But, in such cases, do good men exclude women? Are Masons engaged in practices to which they cannot admit their wives? Have the Masons initiatory rites so indecent or coarse that it would be a shame to have the two sexes admitted to them without separation? This is the suspicion under which Masonry rests, and which the secrecy of Masonry confirms. This it is which makes the presence, and more than all, the apologies, of ministers of the Gospel so monstrous, or should. For any clergyman to go where he cannot take his wife, where the face of woman would be abashed, should outlaw him! To place himself under the suspicion under which Masonry rests, that this is the actual state of the case, should be as fatal to his influence as the suspicion that he is an adulterer. And, according to the New Testament, he is, for he is a partner in that which is impure. The body is the temple of the Holy Ghost. To expose it in indecent postures, is to degrade it. To strip it of a decent veil, under any circumstance, is a degradation. Masonry is under the suspicion of practices that are immodest. If this be untrue, then admit women to your lodges. Make the lodge, with proper safeguards, the type of a great family. Do it if you dare, my Masonic friend! Expose your daughter and wife to the rites that you carry on in the dark! But if outrageously maligned, then come to the light! Will men submit or subject themselves to suspicions so injurious if they be of the purer mould? What minister will wantonly place such a stone of stumbling in the way of the innocent and weak? What minister? Answer! What man will subject himself to such odious suspicions? What man? Answer! Who will class themselves with the creatures who, among men or animals, must seek concealment under cover of profound, unimpenetrable secrecy and darkness? Who? Answer! Look for your answer in the history of every indecent, disloyal, and dangerous body of mankind! Look amid the jungles of crime and animalism in all ages! The "Knights of the Golden Circle," whence darted the murderous dagger and pistol of a Wilkes Booth! the Clan-na-Gael, whence came the atrocious assassination of Dr. Cronin; the Jesuits, and scores of other like examples.

Masonry is not the expedient of a great social crisis. It is an organization that is imbedded in the normal body politic and body social. It is a foreign body—a body that is alien to the whole genius of our institutions. It is radically undemocratic. It is the creator of suspicion and dread on the part of all who do not enjoy its favor. Suspicion is a greater destroyer than fact. The worst that man can conceive against a people or an individual is not so bad as either may come to imagine is being conceived against it. An institution like Masonry is calculated to stimulate such suspicions to the utmost. It must, as its scope widens, become increasingly a source of fear, and in time give rise to bloodshed; at least, forcible suppression. This has been, and will again be, its history. What then of the clergymen who give the support of both personal membership and the authority of their pulpits to this order? Are they not open to the suspicion of being blind leaders of the blind?

Said Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it." "Every good citizen," said Wendell Phillips, "should make war on secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are prohibited by law, and rooted out of existence." But the Rev. Mr. Cleveland receives marked expressions of gratitude from several unknown outsiders for having spoken in advocacy of Freemasonry! And some enthusiastic confrere, away down in the State of Georgia, sends Cleveland a mammoth watermelon as an expression of his joy; and within a week! The communication, it will be observed, is very intimate between the most distant links in this golden chain of secrecy! The news of what goes on in Melrose, a suburb of Boston, even when only the preaching of a sermon, in defence of Masonry, is flashed to the State of Georgia, and within a week comes a large watermelon all the way from that State! What sort of an organization have we here? Is it not most significant that such an incident as this could occur? Does it not show most distinctly the close bond that binds the remotest lodges together? Is there not an electrical sympathy between the remotest members?

Are we not also taught to see the extreme sensitiveness that prevails among Masons in respect to everything that is said and done by the public touching their order? Why? Are we so sensitive when the family is discussed? or when the Republic is attacked? Everything else but Masonry is a lawful subject for discussion. But, says the Mason, you malign us. Why? If you are maligned, it is because you are afraid to be known, and by your underground methods compel us to hypothecate what your apparent character seems to justify. That you are maligned, if you are, should show you that your method is an evil one, let the motives of the individual Mason be as pure as you please. This fuss and repeated bad blood that we are compelled to endure from all shades of adherents to the lodge system should condemn it in the mind of every good citizen. There are natural causes enough for social suspicion and unrest to warrant no good man in creating and lending his countenance to artificial ones. The "offences that must needs come" are not the ones which are damning to society. When, in view of them, special circles of men combine to take advantage of their superior abilities or social qualities so as to exclude the general community from an equal participation, they become evils of a destructive character. Masonry is not a natural offence, but an artificial one. It does not answer to anything normal in the development of society. Masonry is the malign organization of human selfishness. It is the expression of that which is at the bottom of man's worst troubles. It is this, in virtue of its supreme evil characteristic of secrecy. Next, it is so because it is a secrecy that is, as we have said, selfish. Action, bearing the name of benevolence, is fraudulent when partial. The essential characteristic of benevolence is impartiality. We might say, universality. Any action that tends to foster the special interests of a circle or special body of men, especially when grounded in an organization that excludes an equal participation on the part of all who might wish to share in the advantages of that body, is anything but benevolence. It is organizing within a democracy an aristocracy grounded in the most powerful of human motives, viz: selfishness. Sumner tells us that it was one with the slave power, when he and other lovers of freedom were contending for the liberation of the slave. A Western judge has recently declared that he could not continue a Mason and discharge his duties as an impartial magistrate. More than one clergyman has been unable to account for the mysterious influence which has been at work against him in his church, and even when he has sought a new field of labor. Could he know the inside working of Masonry, he might at once be able to trace the mystery to its source.

Take an example that has come under the observation of the present writer. A brother in a near town once spoke of the inefficiency of Christian churches. He spoke on the whole rather in justification of these lodges. He assumed that were the churches doing their duty these lodges would have no excuse for their existence. The extreme sensitiveness that always attends conscious wrong-doing so confused the average listener, who chanced to be a member of one of these rivals of the pulpit, that the report went through the community that the Rev. So-and-So had made an assault on secret orders! The effect of that report was far-reaching and suggestive. Soon after, he was in a fair way of being called to one of the more desirable of New England churches; but the smeller that churches now send about previous to giving a "call," getting on the scent of this atrocious unwisdom (or worse) of not being in sympathy with secret orders, declared that was enough to make a call impracticable. Lodges and their sympathizers thus control the destiny of preachers of the Gospel! But churches that resort to these underground methods when settling a pastor are as open to the condemnation of all honorable men as the lodges themselves. We might suggest, that the spirit of secrecy cultivated by these orders may have had no small part in developing this obliquity on the part of so-called Christian churches.

The recent discussion of Masonry in the meeting of Baptist ministers, in the city of Boston, evoked two expressions which we will do well to ponder at this point. The first was the attempt, on the part of the same Rev. Mr. Cleveland, to gag the free discussion of secret societies, in failing to accomplish which, he peremptorily threw up his membership in an association of fellow-clergymen, scores of whom are the peers, and not a few of whom are the superiors; of himself in every particular. The second is a notice of the same agitation by the Boston correspondent of the Examiner. He accords to it the charitable nature of a freak of "the silly season." A freak that the "Modern Athens" does not escape, but which a few of the more choice elect are superior to. Whether Masonry, like preaching in liberal pulpits, makes a man modest, or modesty makes a man a Mason (as well as a liberal), it is evident, that the aforesaid correspondent ("C. H. W.") and the Rev. Mr. Cleveland are fully agreed in this, that either one with his own opinions is a majority. The former goes so far as to pronounce those who have recently disturbed the retirement in which Masonry finds its greatest security, to be "donkeys and devils." This he does in quoting Charles Kingsley, who has somewhere remarked, as "C. H. W." plainly thinks, with fitting application to the discussion of Masonry, that "there will always be plenty for the righteous to do so long as so many donkeys and devils are permitted to live." "C. H. W." is without question fully satisfied that this quotation has but one application, or that it applies to but one class of those who engaged in this recent debate. We might agree with him so far, and then not assign to him or such as have his full approval the character of either philosophers or saints.

The mere fact that Masonry as a system is calculated to stir up so much bad blood, or to give rise to such base though baseless accusations as even the best of men now and then indulge, when speaking of it, is a solemn impeachment of it. This might not appear so clearly in the case of the ordinary man of the world, but in the case of clergymen, it should be a sufficient reason for regarding Masonry as a social and religious offence. The Rev. Mr. Cleveland, in quitting that ministers' meeting and renouncing his fellowship with that Association out of a love for Masonry, which was superior to his love of the Christian brotherhood, is a type of the so-called Christian Mason in all places. When the choice lies between the lodge and the church, the Mason holds to his lodge. Between the lodge and the church, the latter is discussed with less offence to him than the former. "Little children, keep yourselves from idols," is not inapplicable to the present craze for secret orders. A PASTOR.

A PLEA FOR UNITED EFFORT ON THE PART OF REFORMERS.

BY WILLIAM KNIGHT.

In Nehemiah we read the history of the Jews, God's chosen people, on their return from the Babylonish captivity, the punishment visited on them for their sins in mixing with the nations around them in their forms of government, intermarriages, forms, methods, and objects of worship, unholy practices, etc., against God's specific commands so often reiterated. In chapters 3, 4 and 5 is the account of their building again the wall of Jerusalem, and the opposition they met with; and it seems to me that the parallelism, with conditions, as we find them at present, is very striking, history having repeated itself wonderfully, and some valuable lessons may be gathered in tracing this parallel. Jerusalem, in Bible symbolism, represents the true church, while Babel and Babylon, whether in Nehemiah or Revelation, represents the church in confusion and captivity, fallen, and suffering the punishment for its sins. The wall around Jerusalem represents the line of separation between the church and the world; when the church becomes fallen, she goes into, or becomes, Babylon, and when this line of separation is broken down, she enters into a condition of spiritual harlotry, or mixture with the world (see Rev. 17 and 18), and consequent confusion, which is the meaning of the term Babylon. In Nehemiah is the history of God's people returning from Babylon, coming to a realization of their fallen condition, and building again the wall of separation between the church and the world—the true work of reformers. The wall is represented as being partly in the valley, and partly on the hill. The valley part would illustrate sinful practices pertaining to the lower or fleshly nature, such as intemperance in the gratification of the passions and appetites, fleshly excesses, etc., while the hill part would represent corruption in the forms, methods and objects of worship.

It seems that the work was carried on on all parts of the wall at the same time, and that each of the workers built over against his own house; then follows a minute description of each gate, and part of the wall, and the workers engaged at each particular place. The first mentioned is the sheep-gate, I suppose because the keeping of sheep was the most common employment of the Jews, and the application to the present time would be for a person, engaged in this business, having his mind enlightened, as he naturally would if a child of God, on practices connected with his business which are inconsistent with God's standard of right; perhaps in the treatment of the animals, or in marketing or preparing the products, or securing, by the aid of secret organizations of those engaged in the same business, unjust profits. As he discovers these iniquitous practices, he lets his light shine, both in his actions and words; he builds the part of the wall over against his own house.

The next mentioned is the fish-gate, another very common employment, as is shown by the disciples being mostly fishermen; then the Old Gate is mentioned. This represents the old people letting their light shine on the line of separation that used to exist between the church and the world in former times, when they were young.

Next mentioned is the throne of the governor; those engaged in politics letting their light shine on corrupt practices connected therewith; then are mentioned the goldsmiths, apothecaries and merchants, building, representing those engaged in merchandise, in its various branches, each one seeking by every possible means to bring about a reformation to God's standard of righteousness, the business in which he is engaged, or over against his own house.

These laborers are represented as separated far from each other, and scattered along the wall; and sometimes it was necessary that they should be all gathered together, to make or repel an attack from the enemy; just as in the present day there are certain special attacks of the enemy, such as through intemperance and secret societies, that need a united action on the part of all of God's workers to repel; so Nehemiah gave his instructions that when the trumpet was blown, they should all gather for united action; the trumpet would represent our periodicals and ministers; and reforms that require united action are those that are accomplished more especially through the ballots, or general rather than specific abuses that need reforming. We see here that every child of God has a special duty to build over against his own house, or to seek by every means in his power, according to his ability, to bring his particular business or calling to the true standard of right, as in God's sight; and what an opportunity it gives us to let our light shine, both in actions and words. Yea, and even to bear persecution, for we shall surely get it from those engaged in the same business; for instance, let the merchant or manufacturer cut down his profits to the golden rule, both in the price of the article sold, and in the treatment of his laborers, the time he requires them to work, and the remuneration for services, and then refuse to enter the secret combination of those engaged in his business, a combination whose only real object is to secure unjust profits. What an influence he will have, and what a storm of persecution he will have to endure, and what an approving conscience, and an assurance that the treasure that he may lose here, by this course of action, will be laid up for him in heaven. This, to my mind, would be "making to himself friends of the mammon of unrighteousness," and "being faithful in that which is least." (See Luke 16: 1-13.)

And the women, too; what an opportunity to suffer for Christ's sake they have in stemming the tide of fashion by word and practice in the matter of clothes and social abuses, and that which pertains more especially to women; they, too, can be builders on this wall over against their own house.

Now notice, in the fourth chapter the methods employed in the work; the half of them wrought in the work, and half of them held weapons of war, and those that worked, worked with one hand, and carried a weapon with the other (the sword and trowel); some bore burdens of rubbish away, and some built with new material; but all recognized the importance of each other's part of the work, while doing their own.

It seems to me the great cause of failure on the part of reformers in the present day is the lack of unity among them, caused by this lack of recognition of the importance and adaptability of each other's methods and line of work, to secure the grand result. One says, you must not fight at all. If you do, you destroy everything. Another says, fighting is the only way to accomplish anything; and the two oppose each other, in spirit, forgetting that fighting is just as necessary sometimes as building. In the time of David and Solomon, when the temple was built, David did all the fighting and Solomon all the building; but David's work was just as necessary as Solomon's. David prepared the way for Solomon to build. 'Tis true, David was not allowed to build the house, though he wanted to, because he was a man of blood, a fighter; and the nature of God's house and kingdom is peace. John the Baptist, again the fighter, preparing the way for Jesus the builder, he was a rough, stern man, exposing and denouncing all kinds of iniquity and calling to repentance in thunder tones, while Jesus is the friend of publicans and sinners; but both were necessary; and even to cure diseases of the body we have to have the surgeon and the nurse, or the bitter dose of medicine, and then the careful nursing; and the great need of to-day is courageous fighters, Ronaynes, or Stoddards, to agitate, and perhaps irritate; then the softer, kinder builders to follow the fighters, the one to clear away the rubbish, the others to do the building, and neither to criticise or oppose the other.

Then how much we need unifying in regard to the work that is to be done; some parts of the wall to be built in the valley, and some on the hill; some called to work in the valley, and some, more especially on the hill; some to labor more especially in temperance work, the valley part; some against secret societies, a little higher up; some against sectarian divisions in the church, higher still; Paul says (in 2 Cor. 7: 1) we are to "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit;" the flesh is lower than the spirit, and yet both need cleansing. All parts of the wall must be built; but how is it at present, among earnest workers?—are there not those laboring zealously for temperance, who even deny the necessity of any opposition to secret societies? They say, in substance, just build the wall in the valley, and there is no need of a wall on the side hill, and all the labor you expend there is wasted; and they even oppose, instead of help, those laboring on this part of the wall; or they say, come down and help us build the wall in the valley, and then we will go up and help you, forgetting that this leaves one part unprotected, and gives the enemy a chance to concentrate his forces on the weak part. And so of those engaged in anti-secret society work on the side hill; they say of those called to work against denominational divisions in the church, the part on the hill, there is no need of a wall there, the hill will take care of itself, your labor is all wasted, come down and spend your energies with us and your work will count for something; but each one's commission is from God, and not from man, and if he leaves following God to follow man, he becomes a failure at once, and God's commission to each one is voiced in these words: "Let your light shine." God gives the light; we just let it shine. If God gives us clear light on any part of the work, that is our place on this wall; and if one particular method of conducting the work appears to us to be better adapted to accomplish it than others, that is the method God wants us to use; and while we are doing this, let us each accord to the other the fullest fellowship and co-operation so far as we can and pursue our particular calling, realizing that we are all laboring to accomplish one grand design, which is the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. Yours in the battle for truth and righteousness.

Richburg, N. Y.

AN ODD-FELLOWS RENUNCIATION.

I am a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and these lines are written with a consciousness that for every word that I pen I must give an account to him. Several years ago, before I had felt that I must enter the ministry, I joined the Odd-fellows, and in the course of time I passed from the lowest to the highest office in the subordinate lodge and became a candidate for membership in the Grand Lodge. I am not now a member of that organization. But I think that it must be clear to any one from the foregoing statement that I did not leave the order because my ambitious aspirations were not realized. I had every office given me that I desired. It required two years for me to decide what was my duty; that clear, I performed it in the name of the Lord—I withdrew. I therefore speak that I know.

I want to make just a single point in this communication, which will show that membership in what is termed "the more important secret orders" is inconsistent with the position occupied by a Gospel minister. I am aware that there are many dear brethren who belong to them, and I would not say that they are not Christians, but they would do more effectual work for the Lord if they would come out from these organizations.

The object of the church of Christ and that of the minister of the Gospel is to save souls that are in danger of eternal ruin. According to the Word of God the natural man is in danger of eternal death. Christ as the bleeding sacrifice is revealed as the one by whom man can be saved, and by whom only this can be done. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." It is supposed that every evangelical minister realizes two things: first, that men are lost, and second, that Christ alone can save them. He goes forth to preach these truths. What is taught in secret societies? Universal salvation on the basis of good works, ignoring entirely the work of the Son of God. Jesus Christ is a prohibited name in the lodge—I speak of an Odd-fellows' lodge; I never was a Mason—and the recognition of his divine nature, and divine mission to earth, forbidden. His atoning work, his mediatorial work, are thus set aside. But every Odd-fellow is taught that he can be saved independent of the Son of God. I know nothing of the internal work and teaching of Masonry or Knights of Pythias, etc., but I do know this, that their burial services all teach that to be a good member of their order is a certain guarantee of salvation. It is the worst form of Universalism. Said an Odd-fellow to me one day: "The lodge is better than any church." A Masonic neighbor recently said the same thing to me.

These things neutralize the Gospel of Christ, and are to-day keeping thousands out of the church of God. Many incidents come to my mind, as I write, which I would like to mention, but these must be reserved until I see whether this finds its way into the editor's waste basket. God has permitted me to lead some souls to Christ during my ministry, but there has not been an Odd-fellow among them. They have been satisfied with the religion taught by the lodge.

I have thus indicated one great reason why I am opposed to secret organizations—because they ignore Jesus, my Saviour, and teach men that they can be saved apart from him. It seemed to me, and still seems to me, that an organization which teaches any other way of life but that found in Christ, is no place for an evangelical minister; it is no place for me, certainly.—Rev. J. F. Packard, editor of "Messiah's Herald," Boston, Mass.

Cardinal Manning is forming a union of Catholic workmen on the lines laid down in the recent encyclical of the pope. The society embraces the entire English-speaking world. Cardinal Gibbons is working in conjunction with Cardinal Manning in organizing the American branch of the union. The organization is open to both skilled and unskilled labor. A small entrance fee will be charged. The aims of the organization are to oppose socialism, to wean members from socialistic bodies, to maintain a good standard of wages, and to find employment for members. Membership in the union does not involve resignation from other trade unions unless the tenets are opposed to the letter or spirit of the pope's encyclical. Cardinal Manning is very hopeful of good results to flow from the movement.—E.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Labor Day—Outcast Boston—Dr. Lorimer and the Sabbath—The Searles Will Case.

"Labor day" turned out a very quiet holiday indeed, and the police detailed to preserve order found no occasion for their services. The rain poured down from early in the morning until 3 in the afternoon, a perfect deluge. Parades and processions were out of the question. It is the first time since Labor day began to be celebrated, six years ago, that heaven has been so unpropitious to its observance. In spite of the rain, however, the beautiful consistency of the law which closes up all the bar-rooms on that day, but permits the wholesale liquor dealers, the bottlers, and those who hold grocery licenses, to keep open, was even more fully manifest than last year, when the occasion was disgraced by an outrageous amount of drunkenness; as the police reports show this year a considerably larger number of arrests. Important political results, as we know, often hinge on the state of the barometer. How many still believe that had it not been for a rainy election, Cleveland would never have been President!—and what distinguished Frenchman—was it Talleyrand?—during the Reign of Terror in Paris, always made it a point to go to his door the first thing in the morning for a diagnosis of the weather. If it threatened rain he would predict a quiet day, on the theory that nothing is so effectual to disperse a mob as a thorough wetting. But it seems that the subtle influence of the barometer does not extend to the saloon. All weathers, as well as all days, are alike to the god Gambrinus and his devotees. Speaking of the curious fact that mobs have in more than one sense a dislike to cold water: Now that the papers are full of funny prophecies of the whimsical situations likely to arise when a rain-making bureau is actually established at Washington, the writer is moved to add her contribution to the general fund by suggesting that instead of the military with Gatling guns, the rain-makers be called out to disperse unlawful gatherings; thus substituting comedy for tragedy.

The timely document recently issued from the headquarters of the committee of women voters in Boston ought to bring all the halting ones to a sense of their duty. The enemies of Woman Suffrage have but grudgingly allowed them to vote on the school question and without doubt a strong effort will be made at the next Legislature, backed up by the liquor power and the Romish hierarchy, to deprive the women of Massachusetts of even this small political privilege. According to the rule by which the last shall be first, woman's vote will eventually be the force that shall hurl these powers of evil from their throne; but the day will be retarded or hastened according as she realizes this and arouses to her opportunity.

The ministry has been often reproached for a lack of practical sympathy with the outcast children of want and crime, but in the Rev. Lewis E. Banks they have an eloquent spokesman. One social evil after another he has made the target for his series of remarkable sermons, which even those who criticize such themes as out of place in the pulpit must acknowledge have done good in stirring up investigation. We are told, every now and then, that the power of the pulpit is on the wane; and yet from scarcely any other source would such charges have been treated with so much attention, or have made so profound a stir. His latest attack has been on the management of the pauper institutions at Deer Island; and if even the half which he has told is true it is a disgrace to the city. It reminds one, in the bare repulsiveness and horror of the details, of that realistic sketch in the Little Classics, "A Night in the Workhouse." Under Mayor Matthews, Irish Romanists seem to have quite as strong a pull on the city's treasury as even in the palmy days of O'Brien, and what care they, or the church they represent, for these poor unfortunates? It is only the old story of waste and mismanagement. Municipal suffrage for women would soon put a stop to this scandalous and inhuman neglect of the city's outcasts, and I may also add that it would be one of the best things that could possibly happen to the pockets of Boston's long-suffering tax-payers.

Dr. Lorimer is awakening criticism, even in such papers as the Herald, by his very free-and-easy interpretation of the law of the Sabbath.

According to the Reverend Doctor, if he is correctly reported, "a man should amuse and rest himself as he sees fit on that day." These are certainly advanced ideas—a good deal in advance, let us charitably hope, of those entertained by the majority of the members of the Tremont Street church—but at the same time it is one of the articles of the Masonic religion, of which he is such a well-known devotee. Great is the Sabbath-breaking lodge, and Dr. Lorimer is its prophet.

Could there be a sadder object-lesson than will probably be afforded by the Searles Will case when it comes to trial? Had the owner of those contested millions freely distributed her wealth during her life time in deeds of charity and beneficence, her name might now be held in honor as a second Baroness Burdett Coutts. What an opportunity she had to make friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, so that when her wonderful mansion at Great Barrington should know her no more, she would live forever in the grateful memory of the thousands she had blessed. Now the lawyers will fatten on it, and the greedy heirs—numbering, it is said, twenty-five or thirty—in their eagerness to clutch a portion of the dead woman's forty or fifty millions, stand ready, without remorse or scruple, to blacken her character, which she cannot rise from the grave to defend. It is simply pitiful.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9, 1891.

The authorities of the Postoffice Department have been, to use a commercial phrase, engaged in "taking stock" as to the effect produced by the anti-lottery law during the first year of its existence, and they say that the result is a satisfactory one. Inspector Maynard, who has had special charge of all cases coming under this law, reports that the use of the mails has been practically abandoned by the lottery organizations, with a consequent reduction in their business of from one-half to two-thirds. He also reports that he has succeeded in making strong cases against the presidents of both the Louisiana and Mexican lottery companies for violations of the new law, and he has no doubt of the conviction of both of them when the cases come to trial; all of which is satisfactory as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Mr. Maynard says that the lotteries are still doing a lucrative business through the Express companies. Now, what is wanted is some legal means of stopping that. Some time ago it was stated that the legal advisers of the Postoffice Department were engaged on this very question, and from the fact the traffic is still carried on with the knowledge of the postal authorities, it is evident that they failed to find any law to cover the case. If that be true, a carefully drawn bill should be prepared, which will leave no loophole for those who carry on this nefarious business, and be pushed through Congress as soon as that body meets.

The eighth regular biennial session of the National Congress of the order of Chosen Friends is now in session in this city. There are representatives from nearly all the States and from Canada present. This order now has a membership of 40,000, and it is one of the few secret insurance organizations that admit women as members.

A very large congregation had the pleasure of hearing Rev. Dr. M. L. Haines, of Indianapolis, on Sunday morning. He is the pastor of the church to which President Harrison and Attorney General Miller belong, and is a pleasing pulpit orator. Many regrets were expressed that he could not promise to remain here another Sunday, as many unable to attend last Sunday were desirous of hearing him preach.

Secretary Rusk has received a letter from a Chicago gentleman, suggesting that Prof. Dyrenforth experiment this winter with the same apparatus that he is now using to produce rain, with a view to ascertaining if an artificial fog created by explosions will prevent the ravages of frost. The writer of the letter is confident that it will. No experiments can be made unless they are authorized by Congress, and the money appropriated to pay for them. The fact is not generally known, but it is true, that Secretary Rusk has really nothing to do with the rain-making experiments now being made in Texas. They are operated under a special act of Congress.

The good people of Washington are much gratified to learn that the legal authorities on the Virginia side of the Potomac river are at last aroused and determined, so they say, to break up the den of gamblers which the law against pool-selling drove from just beyond the northern boundary of this city to the Virginia end of the Long Bridge, where they have all congregated to ply their disgraceful trade, and to add to the number of ruined young men who began their downward career by purchasing pool tickets on horse-races. And, taking the words of those who have visited the place, the gamblers do not confine their operations to pool-selling, but carry on almost every known species of gambling. The Washington newspapers have printed columns exposing this place and telling the names of the men who run the dives, but it was not until the present week that the Virginia authorities displayed a disposition to take any steps towards repressing the evil. The Judge of the Alexandria County Court instructed the grand jury to procure witnesses and indict as many of these gamblers as possible, and members of the Washington police have been active in assisting the Virginia authorities to procure the necessary evidence to convict these law breakers.

The President and Mrs. Harrison are expected to return to the White House the last of this week, or the first of next, although the repairs and improvements upon that building will not be completed for several weeks to come; but the work which remains to be done is mostly painting, frescoing and decorating on the first floor, so that the President's family will not be very much inconvenienced, as their living rooms are all on the top floor, where the improvements have been completed.

REFORM CONVENTION IN KANSAS.

A call, signed by S. Hart, Lecompton, State Secretary; G. A. Torrence, Denison, Treasurer, and D. H. Coulter, Winchester, all members of the Executive Committee of the Kansas State Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., and of which J. S. T. Milligan is President, has been issued for a convention to be held at Denison, Jackson Co., Kan., beginning on Wednesday evening, October 14, 1891, and continuing throughout the next day and evening.

The object is to revive the work of Reform in Kansas.

Addresses by able speakers from a distance may confidently be expected.

Friends of the cause in Kansas are urged to send delegates, and to raise and forward liberal contributions.

Delegates from adjoining States will be cordially welcomed, and free entertainment will be provided. There should be a large attendance.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE WASHINGTON AGENT.

EN ROUTE FOR WASHINGTON, Sept. 8, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Brockton and Campello are stations on the Old Colony railroad, Massachusetts. They are chiefly noted for their shoe manufactories. It was my privilege to spend Sabbath at the latter point. I was especially pleased with the beauty of this place and the industry of its inhabitants. It has many churches, and no saloons or jails. Many of its citizens are of Swedish descent. There are at least four churches in which the Swedish language is spoken.

By special invitation of the pastor, I spoke in the Congregational church. Though the day was cloudy, rain falling much of the time, I was greeted with large audiences, both morning and evening, some 500 being present at the former, and over 700 at the latter service. The collection was ten dollars, and the expression of sympathy general. Rev. Mr. Norlin, of the Lutheran church, showed much interest, and invited his members to hear me, though, by previous appointment, he had service at the same hour. The Swedish M. E. pastor expected soon to move, but promised, when settled, to send for our paper.

That these people know a good thing when they see it is evident from the way in which they subscribed for the Cynosure, thirteen giving their subscriptions one afternoon. Rev. Mr. Oldham, of the English M. E. church, has been Mason, but was opposed to the abuses of Masonry, and hence had not been in a lodge for five years. He said the Good Templars, was the worst lodge he had to contend with. Under the guise of working for temperance, the young people would have kissing games, dancing, etc. One young man, in subscribing for our paper, said he had serious thoughts of joining the Odd-fellows, as he had been advised to do so by a friend; but after hearing me, he would not do so for one thousand dollars. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I left these friends with a warm heart, hoping to comply with their invitations to return at a future time.

While canvassing in East Boston, I called on a young man who is agent for the "Iron Hall" and a number of like co-operative secret societies. In declining a subscription to the Cynosure, he remarked that business was very dull. "Even ten cents," said he, "is an object." I spoke of several of the co-operative lodges that were breaking up. "Yes," said he, "all the short-term ones must break up." He did not believe, however, that those he represented would. In calling on a friend I mentioned my conversation with the "Iron Hall" man. "Why," said he, "I supposed he had been making lots of money out of these 'devil-take-the-hindmost' societies." This name, though sounding strange, fits the case very well, I think. The one who goes in first gets the money, and the hindmost pays it. I heard of two men entering into business; the one had money, the other experience. In a year's time they had exchanged places. If the devil don't catch the foremost as well as the hindmost, they will have to repent, for the thing is a gambling scheme on its face.

We spent a blessed hour in the prayer meeting in Dr. Gordon's church, Friday evening. The basement of the church was well-filled. A deep spiritual interest was manifest. No more could lodgers live in such an atmosphere than could a fish live out of water. When the church gets right with God, the lodge must go down. Friends in New England, I believe God has great blessings in store for you this fall and winter. Oh, that his mighty power might sweep over the land! Then would the altars of Baal be broken down, and Elijah's God be manifest to all the people. Let us labor, pray and expect great things.
W. B. STODDARD.

—The venerable mother of General Lew Wallace, of Indiana, spoke on temperance and woman suffrage at Union Park Congregational church, one evening last week.

—John F. Cramer, one of the proprietors of the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, was arrested Monday for alleged violation of the anti-lottery law in publishing an extract from a San Francisco paper attacking the validity of the act.

—After twenty-seven days of silence, George Matthews, of Indianapolis, broke forth into singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." He claims to have had visions of heaven, and his description of scenes and his intercourse with those who have gone before are said to be thrilling in the extreme.

—A note from Wheaton reports that on a recent Sunday the Wheaton College Church received, at its communion services, twenty new members, among whom were the heads of six families, including evangelists Wyekoff and Chandler. Rev. Mr. Wise, the pastor, is very popular with the people, and unusually large congregations have filled the church during the summer. When the college shall open, on the 22d inst., the seating capacity will be severely taxed.

—While there is nothing fully established concerning the artificial production of rain by gas explosions in the upper atmosphere, as assumed by the experiments of Professor Dyrenforth and ex-Senator Farwell under the superintendence of the government, the evidence in favor of their claims is very flattering. Further operations in the same direction will eventually confirm or refute their position in the premises. Following immediately in their wake comes a Chicago inventor, who proposes to qualify or prevent severe frosts by the artificial production of fog at the opportune moment, by means similar to those employed in producing rain. It is not safe to ridicule these pretensions until they have been proved failures. The world can afford to wait a little while.

CORRESPONDENCE.

OUR BOSTON LETTER.

NO COMPROMISE.

BOSTON, September 3, 1891.

"What fools these mortals be."

By these I refer exclusively to two recent correspondents of the Boston Traveller and those they may represent, who respectively style themselves "Republican," and "Temperance Republican." The Traveller editorially noticed them, but, to my mind, not so satisfactorily as it might have done.

"Republican" manifested his folly in calling upon the Republican party to insert a prohibition plank in its platform, and "Temperance Republican," in criticising his brother of a less complicated egotism, inquires whether Prohibitionists in such a case would "abandon their own, or put up a 'dummy' to give half a vote to the Democrats."

The Traveller might have affirmed that the insertion of a straight prohibition plank into the so-called Republican platform would be as deadly to its continuity as a party as the introduction of a living Christ would be into Romanism; for, as the latter is a religious apostasy—a departure from the true doctrines of Catholicity—so is the former an apostasy from the genuine principles of Republicanism, and exists only by the usurpation of the record of the original.

Prohibitionists cannot make such a compromise. "Men do not put new wine into old bottles." The formation of the Prohibition party was, because of the intemperance problem, a political necessity. It is more than a reformation. It is rather the survival of a principle which can foster nothing but unadulterated truth and equity, and its adherents must expect, like the early Christians, the Waldenses and Albigenses, to meet the opposition of the blind devotees of the admixture of truth and error. But ultimately they will triumph.

Prohibition is, indeed, the genuine orthodox Republicanism. All other labels are an infringement. Prohibitionists made a mistake in naming their party. It should, more properly, have been Original Republican, or some term synonymous.

"Temperance Republican" claims, or rather asserts, that Prohibitionists gave half a vote to Democrats. That may be, but it was just because they saw that they were indirectly giving their entire vote, as "Temperance Republican" is now doing, to the rum interests, that they came out of the pseudo-Republican party, the preservation of only a half-vote being a consideration and a gain, and organized under a new identification.

Every Republican ticket cast to-day, whether the voter is aware of it or not, strengthens the power of the liquor trusts. The men who adhere to the insidiously transmogrified old party, are as blind and willful as the men who remained in the corrupt Romish church after the search-light of the Reformation had revealed the error of its way and its bald iniquities.

"Republican's" demand of his party is preposterous. "Temperance Republican," I will respectfully inform that the Prohibitionists will continue, in spite of their enemy's cry of "failure" and "dissolution," to put up a "dummy," which, in not a very distant future, will speak such dynamical words that every false political system will tremble at the thunder of their enunciation and topple into the abyss of perdition, where they belong. He has yet to learn the folly of "despising the day of small things."

D. P. MATHEWS.

UTAH AND THE MORMONS.—I.

OGDEN, Utah, Aug. 26, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As a few facts are of more value than many opinions, I am disposed to respond to your invitation to send a communication for publication in the columns of our "Polar Star," by writing a letter, such as I frequently write from my Western home to my Eastern friends. The Territory of Utah is large, its mountains are large, and if the conceit of its people is of the same order, it need be no matter of great surprise. Judging from what has been done for Utah by the government, from what has been said by lecturers, and what has been written on the subject, the people of Utah have received an unusual degree of attention. There must be a reason for this. And if there is a reason, it may not seem to the readers of the Cynosure presumption in me to occupy their time with a letter.

I have been in Utah nearly five years. Ten years ago polygamy was openly practiced, and Mormonism was seen and felt by strangers coming to this Territory. At that time the Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Episcopalians, and perhaps some others, were in the enthusiasm of new work just begun among this peculiar people. Mormonism was feeling, as it had never felt before, the power of outside influence. It may have been unnatural in its manner, and embarrassed in its feelings toward these new influences. Things may have been done which the calmer judgment of the people would not endorse. Be that as it may, I was not here then, and did not receive my first impressions under such conditions.

Since I have been here I have seen nothing of polygamy. Had I come, not knowing anything of the people before coming, I should not have felt from my first impressions that the people of Utah were essentially unlike the people of other parts of our nation.

Let me tell you what I know of Utah and Mormonism from my personal acquaintance with the country and the people. I confess that my acquaintance is limited, as compared with that of some others. My work has kept me very busy, and has left me little time for simply getting acquainted with things and people.

One of the first things which impressed me was the difficulty of getting to Utah, and of developing this country forty years ago when the settlement was begun. The people who came first were poor, and all work was done by hand, with the aid of very simple tools. The first need of the soil here is water; and it cost this people an immense amount of toil to begin a system of irrigation. Naturally enough, the system was imperfect in every way. It took time and experience to make a system which would use the water economically, and get it over all the land. And in the development of the system, complications arose in regard to rights, privileges and duties. A judge told me that a very large number of the cases coming before the courts, one season, when water was scarce, and every man was tenacious for his right, were "water cases." As the Mormons were first on the ground, they had the first claims to the water generally, so far as by their system they had appropriated the water. Then, too, the Mormons settled many difficulties, which others bring to the courts, by arbitration provided for by church rules. Hence it came about that many water suits have seemed to be a contest between Mormons and Gentiles. And in the imperfect condition of the system, much has been left to the judgment of the water master, and the good will of neighbors. And, of course, if the good will was lacking, trouble would be the natural result. In communities where nearly all of the people were Mormons, the few who had left the Mormon church might lack the good will of their neighbors, and they might have reason to complain of ill treatment in regard to the use of the water.

Similar difficulties have arisen in regard to taxes. The system of assessing and collecting taxes is still very imperfect and unsatisfactory. A tax receipt in Utah is a statement reading "A. B. has paid his taxes in full for the year 1890." The same man assesses and collects the taxes. The assessor, in some cases, according to his own judgment, takes from time to time what he can collect, crediting it on the amount of taxes, precisely as a grocer would collect on a bill which is not promptly paid. An old resident, who had been a Mormon, but who had left that church, told me that when the tax collector, a Mormon, came to collect his taxes, he complained of the amount, charging the assessor and collector with extortion, and accusing him of doing this because he (the tax payer) had left the Mormon church. After a long and heated dispute, the tax collector threw off one-third and gave the tax payer a receipt in full.

The practice in regard to taxes is changing for the better. But one can easily understand how a great deal of ill-feeling might be provoked by such a system. And one can understand, too, how any trouble might be in some cases, and seem to be in others, an attempt on the part of a Mormon collector to oppress his apostate or Gentile neighbor.

Everywhere one sees evidences that the first settlements in Utah were under the direction of one leading mind. Everything indicates a plan, and evidently a good plan, to serve the purpose of the one who made the plan. But I fail to see evidences of real greatness in that one leading and controlling mind. The people of Utah have worked against many and great difficulties. But the development of the Territory does not indicate that a man of great business sagacity, courage and nerve had pushed things with energy and enthusiasm. Certainly there is no evidence that such a man had imparted his own spirit to the masses of people who looked to him as a leader. There are no evidences of remarkable statesmanship, patriotism, or philanthropy, in the development of Utah. But there are evidences that a heterogeneous mass of people, without experience, without resources and without the ambition of adventure, have been gathered here, and have been made, in the main, comfortable, contented, and in a moderate way prosperous. They are on the road to higher ambition, larger development, and more abundant prosperity.

There are no marked differences between Mormons and Gentiles in Utah, apparent to a stranger. Most of the farmers are Mormons, or apostates—that is, persons brought up under Mormon influences, but now out of that church. In dealing with these people no one would know a zealous Mormon from an apostate, unless engaging in conversation which might bring out some testimony on the subject of Mormonism. In the towns Mormons and Gentiles are not labeled by their manners, nor by their ability in their several professions, trades or avocations. They are not easily distinguished by their social habits, except on a somewhat intimate acquaintance. I do not mean by this that Mormons and Gentiles mingle freely in their social life; they do not. But were one to be entertained in a Mormon home, or find himself in some social gathering of Mormons, he would not find things essentially different from what they would be in a Gentile home, or social gathering.

But my letter is already long, and I must close. Perhaps at some future time I will write on other phases of the Utah problem. My conviction is that the grace of God, and an uncompromising adherence to truth, are essential to the best development of any people. Yours faithfully,
AMOS JUDSON BAILEY.

A HANDMAID OF THE LORD IN THE SOUTH.

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I want to write a little for your paper, which I read weekly, and then I distribute most of them among my neighbors. Last Sabbath (Aug. 9th) one of the M. E. ministers preached a sermon especially for the old folks. One of my neighbors helped me to meeting. I also took dinner with my neighbor. The vexed question came up in regard to radical reformers. I made the remark that I did not know of a single person in this region on whom my deceased husband's mantle had fallen, except on myself; and that I calculated, as heretofore, to sound the alarm, to the best of my ability, in thunder-tones. I was greatly wrought upon. I felt that God was pressing me on to stand straight up for Jesus as opportunity presented itself. I said, also, that my husband and I had years ago been called of God to this work as willing instruments; but he has gone to his reward, and I am left alone to do what I can for the cause of reform.

Everywhere the people ought constantly to be stirred up to help on investigation in regard to these great moral questions of the day. I hear so many say, "I am opposed to the lodge," and they talk all right; but you ask them to subscribe for the Cynosure, and they have a great many excuses. You know how it is. And then some of them belong to churches that tolerate Masonry; their practice is inconsistent with their talk. If all the ministers that are preaching in muffled pulpits would "step down and out," and stand undressed before God, stripped of their Freemasonry and their time-serving policy, or any other thing that would hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain, and then take a plunge into the God-head's deepest sea and wash away their sins of omission, would they not be better prepared [to preach the everlasting Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? Then, I think, it would not be long until these wicked institutions which so blight the fair heritage of God would be swept, as with the besom of destruction, from off the face of the earth.

My soul cries out, "How long, O Lord, how long?" Dear friends of reform, one and all, have faith in God, that these things may speedily come to pass. God blesses me for my sincere longings after truth. Down here the Masons say that Jesus Christ was a Freemason. A lady told me that a Mason said, in her house, that Christ was a Mason. She told him such a declaration was not very welcome in her house.

In conversation, not long since, with a high Mason I said to him, "You send your dead from the lodge below to the grand lodge above, which is blasphemy in the extreme." He made no reply. I said, "Your benevolence, instead of relieving the widows and orphans of the deceased members of your fraternity, as you assume it does, mostly goes in creating magnificent Masonic temples, costing millions of dollar." He said the rich Masons furnished the money, to build these temples; that it did not come from the dues of the society. So they equivocate. He said his wife belonged, or was a Mason. "Yes," said I, "she belongs to the back-kitchen degree, and thus is kept peaceable." He had the audacity to say that John Wesley was a member of the lodge. I told him such was not the case. So the conversation ran on till we parted.

A Freemason in the neighborhood got convicted at a series of meetings. The minister and a layman went to visit him. He did not get on very brightly, and finally concluded to trust in his Masonic religion. The layman, who is a high Mason, said that was good, but it did not go far enough. It will go far enough, I fear, to send him to perdition.

I will close by saying I am a warm friend of reform.
MRS. A. C. HAND.

PITH AND POINT.

MASONIC PROFESSORS OF RELIGION.

"The most zealous professors of religion would go almost barefooted and on frosty ground," five or ten miles, to a lodge meeting, when, under the same embarrassing circumstances, they would not go a fourth part of the distance to a prayer meeting! This, to me, was evidence strong and conclusive that they loved the 'handmaid' more than the mistress."—Allyn's Ritual.

MASONIC GOODNESS.

"Masonry is a good thing, because many a Mason has said so at least a thousand times. It is true that some have said it is a bad thing, but that is not at all to the purpose. . . . Masonry is a good thing. Anybody can see it that has half an eye. It takes young men in as soon as they come to the years of consummate foppery, and shows them that Mahometanism and the mysteries of Pythagoras, or Swedenborg, are just as good as the mysteries of Moses or Christ!"—BOBALINDA OWEN.

MASONIC CHARITY NO CHARITY.

Masonic charity: "A few select ones, far removed from want, separate themselves from the community, and give to each other additional security for encouragement in business, and also against the reverses of fortune. What induces them to give each other pledges of mutual support in misfortune? Certainly no leadings of divine charity, but motives of human prudence. And when misfortune breaks the hope of one, he has a right to the provision laid up for this emergency in the days of his prosperity; and it is no act of charity in the fraternity to dispense that provision to his wants; it is his due."—Ward's Magazine.

CHARITY NOT CONFINED TO MASONRY.

"The highest adept in Freemasonry cannot name a great and good object, pursued, or pretended to be pursued, by the institution, which is not openly and successfully pursued by other societies in the country, the signs and grips not excepted; and it is wholly unaccountable that Christians, educated in the same schools, and trained in the same families, should wisely attempt to accomplish the same benevolent ends by means so diverse, as Freemasonry is diverse from all other benevolent and useful societies."—Ibid.

WELL PUT.

"The Fourth of July was not born in a beer saloon on Sunday afternoon."—BURDETTE.

WORLD'S FAIR PHILOSOPHY.

"The most comical of all arguments for opening the World's Fair on Sunday, is that we ought to exhibit an Italian Sunday because an Italian discovered America."—WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

"Masonry has penalties higher than expulsion; it has obligations that have no resemblance to charity or mercy; it has oaths to conceal the secrets of a brother, including his crimes, murder and treason not excepted."—N. Y. W.

LITERATURE.

The Century for September has a fine, full-page portrait of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, with a review of his poetry, by Frank D. Sherman. New installments are printed of the Squirrel Inn, by Frank R. Stockton (illustrated), and the Faith Doctor, by Edward Eggleston. Other articles and contributors make up an attractive number. They are as follows: A Winter Journey Through Siberia, illustrated, by Geo. Kennan; The Wood Nymph's Mirror (Adirondacks), by Chas. H. Lunders; full-page view of David and Goliath, from a painting by Wm. L. Dodge; To California in 1849; Through Mexico, illustrated, by A. C. Ferris; Elder Marston's Revival, illustrated, by LeRoy Armstrong; Vigilance, by Charlotte F. Bates; The Distribution of Ability in the United States, by Henry C. Lodge; Building, by John Albee; "Zeki", illustrated, by Matt. Crim; DeMorte Beata, by Theo. C. Williams; The Government of Cities in the United States, a Present-Day paper, by Seth Low; A Painter's Paradise—Play in Provence, by Elizabeth R. Pennell, illustrated; Two Italian Old Masters—Francia, Ghirlandaio, with two full-page copies of their works, by J. W. Stillman; Treatment of Prisoners at Camp Morton, illustrated, by W. R. Holloway and Jno. A. Wyeth; Country Newspapers, by E. W. Howe; The Possibility of Mechanical Flight, by Secretary Langley of the Smithsonian Institution. Topics of the Time:—The Sub-treasury Cheap Money Plan—Notable Civil Service Reform Gains—Progress of Ballot Reform. Open Letters:—The Question of Pensions, by Frank Bell and W. M. Sloane; Weakness and Danger of the Single Tax, by Wm. W. Folwell, A British Consul's Confidence in the Union Cause, by E. M. Archibald; A Brotherhood of Christian Unity; W. L. Dodge, by Theo. F. Seward, etc.; Greeley's Estimate of Lincoln; Bric-a-Brac, by several hands. Published by the Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

The American Garden for September contains thirty-four papers, pertinent, bright and varied; among which we note, of the most important, the following: Continuation of the Gardens of Newport, illustrated, by L. D. Davis; Sixty-Four Millions of Dollars, illustrated, by B. E. Fernow; Vegetables in Eastern Yankeedom, illustrated, by E. P. Kirly; A new installment of the Economic Plants of Japan, illustrated, by Prof. C. C. Georgeson; My Raspberry Fields in 1891, by E. P. Powell; Vintage Time in California, by J. T. Connor; Camphor Production in Florida; Autumn Care of Roses, by S. A. Little; Seed-growing as a Business, by E. M. Haven; Notes From a Woman's Garden (September), by M. E. Vigneron; Southern Horticulture, continued, by Geo. R. Knapp, and others of considerable interest to horticulturists and gardeners. New York: The Rural Publishing Co.; $2 per annum.

Not long ago, Rev. R. Q. Mallard, D.D., of New Orleans, La., published a series of papers on "Plantation Life Before Emancipation," in the Southwestern Presbyterian, which were received with general favor. At the suggestion of his readers and by the advice of ministerial friends, Dr. Mallard will shortly issue these articles in book form. "The purpose of the author has been to portray a civilization now obsolete, to picture the relations of mutual attachment and kindness which in the main bound together master and slave, and to give this and future generations some correct idea of the noble work done by Southern masters and mistresses of all denominations for the salvation of the slave." The book will be sold to subscribers for $1.00 per copy, and to others at $1.25. Dr. Mallard's address is 208 Napoleon ave., New Orleans, La., and the volume may be ordered through him.

The September Evangelical Repository, as usual, is rich in original papers and selections from current literature. Its contents are as follows: Work of Southern Christians Among the Negroes Before the War, by Rev. Dr. W. M. Grier; Paul and Virgil, by Rev. Dr. R. J. Miller; The Missionary Conscience, by Rev. T. E. Holliday; The Working Women of To-Day, by Helen Campbell; Long Life; Catholic and Greek Church Statistics; In the Tiger Jungle—Does God Hear Prayer, by Rev. Dr. Jacob Chamberlain, continued; The Persecution of the Jews: Aims of University Extension; Doubts Concerning Evolution, by Josiah Keep; The "Holy Coat" of Treves, by A. C. Townsend; Illustrations; Sabbath-School Lessons; The Young People's Department, conducted by Rev. J. T. McCrory. Pittsburgh: Published by J. T. McKalip & Co.; $2.00 per annum.

The Century Magazine will celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by publishing a Life of Columbus, written especially for that magazine by Emilio Castelar, the famous Spanish orator, statesman, and author. The work is written in Spanish, and will be carefully translated. Senor Castelar, whose interest in and admiration for America are well known, has made a careful study of the new historical material bearing upon the subject, and it is said that his papers will be very richly illustrated. Other articles dealing with the discovery of America are in course of preparation for the same magazine.

WHEATON COLLEGE

OPENS SEPT. 22D INST.

Young women are entitled to all the privileges and honors of the institution. They recite in the same classes, perform the same work and receive the same degrees which young men do.

Tuition at WHEATON COLLEGE is free to the children of ministers and missionaries in active service. They pay the incidental fee of $2 per term.

Stenography and type writing are taught at WHEATON COLLEGE. Graduates in these branches are already occupying good positions.

Nine WHEATON COLLEGE students were in our Theological Seminaries last year. Seven of them were graduates and two specials. Three of them graduated from the Seminaries, the rest expect to continue their work and two more strong men begin at CHICAGO SEMINARY in the fall.

References. WHEATON COLLEGE is now entering upon its thirty-second year. It has graduated two hundred men and women. These graduates are ministers of the Gospel, superintendents of public instruction, medical practitioners, judges of United States Courts, merchants and farmers. They are well and favorably known from Boston, Mass., to San Francisco, Cal. Persons wishing to know of us are referred to them, or to pastors of churches or public men in this vicinity.

See advertisement on page 16.

LODGE NOTES.

An applicant who cannot state the year of his birth is ineligible for membership in the Royal Arcanum.—Supreme Council Decision.

The Chicago Odd-fellow has gone "the way of all the earth"—died, been devoured by The Odd-fellows' Herald, edited by Grand Secretary Adams, of Bloomington, Illinois.

At its meeting at Lancaster, Pa., recently, the Federation of Labor decided not to recognize the Socialists' Labor Party or Farmers' Alliance, and declared against affiliating with any political party.

Overheard in the street: "There goes the supreme president of our get-rich-quick order, the 'Dizzie Day Dreams.'" "Are you in that?" "I'm supreme sucker. I had three policies all running at once."

A correspondent of the New Age, writing from Merced, California, says: "Our Rebekah Lodge here was not a success. It lived but a short time and died happy, in the hopes of glorious resurrection." Outside of the order such language is rightly deemed blasphemous. But then Odd-fellowship is a "religious" institution.

A correspondent writes to the Boston Knights of Honor Reporter (September issue), denouncing "the attempt by the Supreme Lodge at its last session to make past Supreme Dictators life members of the Supreme Lodge, with voice, vote, mileage, and per diem. He claims that the Supreme Lodge should be a representative body, and that it is unwise and contrary to the spirit of our constitution and laws to add a number of men to our governing body who represent no one but themselves." Evidently this correspondent "hath his quarrel just."

You cannot be too particular about the medicines you use. When you need a blood-purifier, be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It will mingle with, purify, and vitalize every drop of blood in your body. It makes the weak strong.

OUR PREMIUM! THE EMPRESS Sewing Machine For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled.

It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work.

It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments,

put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00. With Christian Cynosure 1 year..$22.00.

For further particulars address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

- 3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Oseola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Ponton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnettson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagram

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835.

Compiled and Arranged by John G. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introductory

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

321 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF The Christian Cynosure, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. F. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graver Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gifford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART, AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A 'NUT-SHELL.'"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1891.

A "CYNOSURE" WAYMARK.

To-day we enter upon the twenty-fourth annual volume of the Christian Cynosure, thankful that God has so long honored it as a factor in his service for the down-pulling of the works of darkness and Satan which hinder the coming of his kingdom upon earth; thankful that through his grace and the help of his Holy Spirit he has strengthened the hearts and hands of the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION to expose the sins and fallacies of secret societies; thankful that he has given skill and wisdom to the scribes of the Cynosure to make known his ways to the children of men and his will concerning them; thankful that we have the evidences, from week to week, that our labors have not been in vain in the Lord, and, above all, that we are desirous, by his help, to continue to work and watch and pray, like good sentinels, at our respective posts of duty.

When those who have known the Christian Cynosure from its inception—who have seen its struggles to maintain the work of Reform, often under the most discouraging circumstances,—and who now realize to what power and influence it has attained as the opponent of secret societies, and the sins of other evil associations and individuals—when they consider out of what a wilderness of deceit and mummery the paper has endeavored to bring the dupes of the lodges, and recall its efforts to keep young men from casting themselves into the talons of the devil through the murderous obligations of secret orders—every Christian has reason to thank God that he has given success to its labors and has also bestowed upon it the prosperity and length of days for which we so heartily rejoice to-day.

The good seed sown by the Cynosure, during its past years of trial, is manifested in the growth of the principles which it has so sturdily advocated; and it affords us great encouragement when we read the evidences of it in our private letters and exchanges. For example, we copy the following from the anti-secrecy department of an Alabama paper of a recent date:

"The object of this department is to bring all Americans, without regard to age, sex, party, or church affiliations, closer together as compatriots for the defense of our holy Christianity and free government against the further encroachments of these God-defying, Christ-rejecting, man-degrading, soul-destroying secret fraternities. They are as intensely anti-Christian as they are anti-republican and despotic. Freemasonry is sun-worship, Simon-pure. Ring it through the land—a half-million able-bodied Masonic sun-worshippers in the United States!—a temple of pagan idolatry running full blast, within hearing of almost every school and church edifice in America! What a blot on our boasted civilization!—what a very travesty on popular Gospel evangelization!

"The church, ministry, and laity, will carry a fearful responsibility to the judgment for their criminal silence and comparative inactivity for so long amid this mad carnival of pagan idolatry and false worship. What America needs to-day is one grand 'Home Missionary' effort to remove this organized heathenism. All true Bible believers will bid us a hearty God-speed, and thousands will count it a duty, as well as a pleasure, to give material aid to this undertaking, so auspiciously inaugurated. It will be a standing astonishment to our children's children, that such things existed while our orthodox churches were fitting and sending forth missionaries, and pouring out money like water, to evangelize and enlighten poor benighted heathen in foreign lands.

"Especially do we hope to reach and enlist the young people. They are the hope of the nation. They are soon to assume the weighty responsibilities of society, church and state. Write to us for any information desired in our line of investigation, as it always affords us satisfaction to give all the light in our power to the earnest inquirer after knowledge. We want workers in every school, lyceum, congregation, and company, to the remotest hamlet, to conduct an active campaign.

"And now we leave the subject with you, trusting that the all-wise, over-ruling Providence will lead, guide and direct you. Yours for right and light."

The spirit and design of the foregoing extracts are so in harmony with the principles supported by the Christian Cynosure as to need no commendation to impress their value upon our many readers. The fight is on, and God and his angels are interested witnesses of the conflict. It is no time for us to lay down our armor and boast of what we have done, and so we propose to trust in God and go on to victory in his name.

WHY ROMANISM OPPOSES MASONRY.

The recent issues of the Western Catholic News (one of the important organs of the Roman church) have pungently attacked the existence of secret societies, and that it should do so in the face of the fact that the church has long been, and is now, the friend and promoter of those hypocritical and murderous secret societies, the order of the Jesuits and that of the Clan-na-Gael—besides others, perhaps, which may be less influential, and possibly not quite so malevolent as those above named—is to the unlearned a profound mystery. But the mystery disappears as the light of history is thrown upon it.

The Roman Catholic church never does anything without some sort of a pious reason for its action; and as there is a cause for its opposing Masonry while it clings to its own dangerous secret societies, we shall proceed to explain this antagonism, which so strongly indicates a large degree of inconsistency in the conduct of the church.

Waiving the question of the earlier existence of secret bodies of men for special purposes, we find that in the year 1425, nearly 300 years before the organization of the first lodge of speculative Masonry, at the Apple-Tree Tavern in London, the brick and stone Masons were wont to assemble in "chapters" and "congregations." Henry, the English historian, attributes the origin of these societies in England to the difficulties experienced of obtaining enough men of skill to build the churches and monasteries of the Middle Ages; and that, consequently, architects and builders were favored by the popes with indulgences to augment their numbers.

At that time (the fifteenth century) Henry VI. was king; and Parliament passed an act forbidding the gatherings of these Masons, in consequence of their alleged interference with the business and wages of laborers. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Henry Chicheley, was then Grand Master of the order. "The act," says Wm. L. Stone, in his letter to John Quincy Adams, dated Jan. 8, 1832, "was supposed to have been procured by the illiterate clergy, who were hostile to the secrecy observed by the society—believing that they had an indefeasible right to be made acquainted with all secrets, by virtue of auricular confession; and the Masons would not confess. The Archbishop, however, had sufficient influence to prevent the execution of the law. But the Roman Catholics have uniformly been the most bitter opponents of the institution (Masonry) in Europe since its revival in England and its propagation from thence to the Continent. . . . It was speedily proscribed in France, the Netherlands, Italy, Spain and Portugal; and in our own day the decrees of the latter powers against it have often been echoed in thunders from the Vatican—probably because it infringes upon the privileges which they wish to enjoy themselves. Auricular confession is sacred. No menace or power can extort from a priest a secret so sacredly and inviolably reposed. The Catholic priest, if a true Catholic, will 'have his throat cut across, and his tongue plucked out by the roots,' before he will reveal the secrets of the confessional."

But when a rival depository of secrets is created (like a Masonic lodge, the members of which are bound to "hail, always conceal, and never reveal" the secrets of their hidden works) it is quite another thing; it must be put down; it is heretical.

Here, then, is the difference. The Jesuits, the Clan-na-Gael, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, with other societies, are principally, if not altogether, made up of adherents of the Romish church, who go to confession, buy indulgences, and, living under the shadow of the church, have its confidence and protection.

Take the Freemasons and the Orangemen and the Protestant societies of all countries, who by their strength are able to snap their fingers in the faces of the priesthood, refusing to confess any of their lodge secrets to any but a sworn brother of the lodge, and the Church of Rome, perforce, not having any use for such obstinate and heretical fellows, has no resource except to oppose and revile them.

The question of principles involved in the aims and works of secret orders is of small importance in the church's discussion of them. The main incentive for opposing these societies by the church is their resistance to its tenets. Freemasonry being a deistical order, has no affiliation with the church, and refuses to acknowledge its authority; and if that or any other institution declines to reveal its secrets to the Roman priesthood, it is, on that account, heretical. Thus it is that the question of confession or no confession determines the standing of the society.

A SPECIAL NOTICE TO OUR READERS.

Rev. W. I. Phillips, Secretary and Treasurer of the National Christian Association, reports the receipt of numerous letters of which the following are interesting extracts:

STRENGTHENING THE SINEWS OF WAR.

"Please find enclosed $5.00, and count on another five when you need it. Notify, and we will try to act promptly. W. W."

"I would like to give more, but money is scarce with me this year. Hope, if I live, I will be able to do more next year. I send you five dollars. R. W."

"I am feeling pretty poor, but I must make some contribution to the cause which is so near my heart. I enclose $5 herein. I look for better days for the N. C. A. C. H. W."

"I would not like to pledge myself for an annual contribution, but will give what I can so long as your work is devoted to the advancement of truth and righteousness in this sinful world. Enclosed find ten dollars. A FRIEND."

"Please find five dollars enclosed. To me the signs of the times are perilous. H. C."

"Please find within one dollar. Bless the Lord! The morning light is breaking in Boston. R. R. W."

"I am now far ahead of the tenth of my income for the present year, though I have done nothing for the N. C. A. I enclose five dollars for that cause. J. D."

"I shall not forget the cause which lay so near my husband's heart. Enclosed you will find a check for three dollars. S. P. M. A."

"I consider the Cynosure worth five dollars to me annually. As it only costs me $1.50, I can easily afford to send you the balance of $5.00. 'To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin.' Where is the intelligent Christian reader of said paper that does not know it to be a good act to send it to our colored ministers in the South? G. M. F."

"Please find two dollars enclosed. I can not say if I will have anything next year, or not, to send the N. C. A., but 'if the Lord wills,' it will be so. I. N. B."

WE ARE GLAD TO REPORT that during the last month not only were expenses paid, but the deficit of salaries was in part made up from the contributions of the friends whose cheering words we give you above as samples of the many we received from others whose gifts enable us to make the above favorable report.

HAVE YOU MADE YOUR WILLS?

If so, have you remembered the cause which the Cynosure represents? If so, have you notified the Treasurer of the Association? It is an added security, in case of a will, if the institutions remembered are informed.

We are glad to announce that we have within the past month been notified of four different wills made in favor of the N. C. A., one of which is in Canada.

THE FALL CAMPAIGN.

In order to keep the Reform work in active operation, it will be necessary for us to receive many other donations promptly during the next few weeks—not in “quantity” only, but in “quality” also—consecrated money, like the widow’s mite, hallowed by prayer, faith and self-denial. Our Lord said: “She hath cast in more than they all.”

State meetings of Anti-secrecy Reformers will soon be held for the furtherance of the fall and winter campaigns. That in Kansas will occur in October, and that in Iowa in November. The Association is also planning for State conventions in Illinois and Ohio. The annual gathering in New England will be conducted by Bro. J. P. Stoddard. Dates and places of meeting will be announced hereafter.

Temporary lecture fields for immediate work will be filled by Bros. H. H. Hinman and Wm. Fenton, whose appointments will be announced hereafter.

J. P. Stoddard was to have preached at Canterbury, N. H., last Sunday, lecturing in that vicinity for several days this week. Next Saturday and Sunday he is to be at Greensborough Bend, Vt., returning to Boston (D. V.) by the 23rd inst.

We begin this month to send the Cynosure weekly to 135 colleges, hoping to reach many thousands of young men and women who are liable to the temptations of secret orders.

Also, the Cynosure is being sent weekly to about 700 ministers of the Gospel in Southern States, some of whom write that they are reading this paper to their congregations from their pulpits, with good effect.

Bro. Porter is soon to begin his annual tour among the Southern colleges.

Secretary Phillips is busy making arrangements for addresses in various churches and colleges.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

This is the caption of an article printed in the Teller, a Baptist newspaper, published in New Orleans, La.,—not in the old days before the Southern Rebellion called the nation to arms, but in the year of our Lord 1891, and in the present month of September; yet the condition of things recorded in that article shows how the devilish ante-bellum spirit that oppressed the Negro in his Southern home is still rampant. After recounting some of the persecutions heaped upon his race before and during the war, the writer says:

Since the Negro has become a free citizen, he is a despised and rejected creature to (or in the estimation of) his old task-masters. Cars must specially be provided to separate the offensive and obnoxious pest, the Negro, from his superior white brother, separate barber-shops to shave, separate confectionaries, separate hotels; next, we presume, will be separate courts, separate prisons, and, alas! a separate world to live in, and a separate death, with a separate heaven to rest in, and a separate hell to burn in; and, for all these desired separations from the Negro, the white man will get children by Negro women, and then insist on those same children being separated from him. Oh, what a civilized land is ours!

We fear that God’s quarrel with the United States of North America is not yet ended. Abominations abound, and he is too pure to behold sin with either indifference or approval. His judgments are as sure as his mercies, and he is no respecter of persons. Let us pray that none of those things which we deserve for our national sins may come upon us; and let us strive, by earnest and prompt reformation, to avert those evils that justly threaten to overwhelm us.

—The Inter-State Industrial Exposition of Chicago began its nineteenth annual exhibition yesterday (September 16) and will close it October 24. The great building has been completely and fully decorated, and all available space allotted to intending exhibitors, for what promises to be the most complete and magnificent exhibition in its long history. The Cook County Agricultural and Horticultural Society, with a prize list running into thousands of dollars, have undertaken a floral display that has never been equaled in this country. In the building is also exhibited an exact reproduction in miniature of the buildings and grounds of the World’s Columbian Exposition, with magnificent electric effects; covering as it does a space of 5,000 square feet, it is one of the wonders of modern mechanical art, and will be worth a journey to see. The Lincoln Log Cabin Association are also exhibitors. All railroads transport passengers at excursion rates.

JOHN G. FEE.

A REMARKABLE AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

BY EX-PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

Fifty years ago a young man came over from Bracken Co., Kentucky, to Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, to study theology under Dr. Lyman Beecher.

The American Anti-Slavery Society had been formed in Philadelphia seven years before—in 1833. I was, at that time, pastor of an anti-slavery church, the Sixth Presbyterian, in Cincinnati, having graduated from that school in 1838. Young Fee (that was the Kentuckian’s name) attended my church, and was often at my house. He had become an Abolitionist; and, instead of going abroad as a missionary, felt called of God to preach in his native State, where the property-ownership of human beings, the worst, or one of the worst, institutions of heathenism, was heathenizing that fair portion of the United States. Suckled by a slave, and reared amid slave-holders, he knew what he was to meet in opposing slavery, which, in the words of Pickens, of South Carolina, boasted itself to be “a frank, bold system of naked, undisguised force.” He said to us in Cincinnati, in view of his mission: “If you brethren will hold on to the rope, I will go down into this well.”

His father was a successful slave-holding farmer. He lived in a large, plain brick house, surrounded by rural wealth, pigs and poultry; and he made money, and received in his nature the reaction of the slave-system which Dr. Beman, of Troy, N. Y., used to say, “makes a man a devil.”

Mr. Fee’s mother was the daughter of a Pennsylvania Quakeress, whose religion is not apt to bleach out. The parents had joined the Presbyterian church, and their pastor preached, “Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be;” and though the Africans were descendants of Ham, and were not Canaanites, Fee’s pastor used the text “by way of accommodation” to justify American slavery, which Wesley properly called “the vilest that ever saw the sun.”

So young Fee found it. He was willingly squeezed out of his Presbytery and Synod, and so freed from slave-holding fellowship. And, from that time on, he ran a perfect gauntlet through mobs on his right hand and left. But his life was spared, while the mob-leaders died, in the language of the coroner, “by act of God.” He married a Bracken county girl, Matilda Hamilton, whose mother refused to have slaves in her house, and the result of their united prayers and labors is Berea College, in Central Kentucky, based on the doctrine of the Bible and the Declaration of Independence, that “God has created men of one blood to dwell on all the face of the earth.” Acts 17: 26.

Of all the books which the fall of slavery has produced, none surpasses this little biography of Mr. Fee, the instruction it affords as to the nature of slavery and its workings in families and churches, and, finally, in the war of States. And if a colporteur, or colporteurs, could take the book to the farmers of Ohio and Kentucky, along the Ohio river, every family would buy one and read it as the Scotch families read Scott’s Tales of the Highlands, with only this difference, that Fee’s story is a simple, straightforward narrative of facts.

Nor is this all. Mr. Fee wishes to change the face of Christendom by abolishing its sects. And that is the real animus of the volume. He undertakes this by attempting to get the Christian world to be immersed, and also persuading them to drop present denominational names, and call themselves simply Christians. And as the abolition of sects is desirable, this attempt to do good will do good; though the only immediate effect should be another sect whose creed is that there shall be no sects.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Secretary of War Proctor started on his annual tour of inspection of the Northern and Northwestern posts Thursday.

—Mrs. Leland Stanford has given $100,000 to the Society for the Relief of Orphan and Destitute Children at Albany, New York.

—On account of ill health, Rabbi S. H. Sonneshein, of the Temple Israel of St. Louis, has resigned. He will go to Germany to reside permanently.

—The Washington agent, since his return to his own field, reports flattering progress. On Sabbath evening, September 6, he addressed about 700 persons at Campello, Mass. The meeting was a grand success.

—President Charles A. Blanchard returned from his six weeks’ sojourn in California last week, in good health and spirits. Wheaton College and the readers of the Cynosure will extend to him a hearty welcome.

—The deaths of the past week include Major J. M. Bundy, the editor of the New York Mail and Express, who was stricken with apoplexy at Paris, Tuesday. Jules Grevy, ex-President of the French Republic, died on Wednesday.

—Dr. Lorimer, who recently preached two sermons in Chicago, has returned to Boston, where he was advertised to repeat one of these discourses on the 13th inst. The Doctor evidently believes in Masonic progress, as he has recently become a member-elect of the Supreme Council, Scotch Rite, and some of his brother Baptist ministers, we are informed, express an opinion that he is doing no good in the ministry.

—A letter from Morning Sun, Iowa, says: “Of course, you know there was a new lodge organized here the week following Brother Hawley’s visit—K. of P.—with eighteen charter members, including our postmaster, the candidate for representative, who is also the M. E. Sunday-school Superintendent, and other members of both the M. E. and Presbyterian churches, and others.” The devil must have been pretty close to Bro. Hawley’s elbow in that town.

—Elder J. L. Barlow, who has been for many years associated with the N. C. A. and its labors, serving, at various times, as its President, director, agent and lecturer, was among the welcome visitors at the Cynosure’s noon prayer-meeting one day last week. Although grown gray in the Master’s service, the Elder continues, faithfully and ably, to fill the pastorate of the Richmond (Ill.) Baptist church. We trust there are still many years of active and useful labor before him in his sacred office.

—Bro. William Fenton, the able lecturer against secret societies, whose home is in St. Paul, Minn., has been with us for several days. On the 6th inst. he lectured very acceptably before the Salvation Army at Wheaton. He has now gone East on business, and letters will reach him for a week or more, if addressed to Troy, N. Y. On his return to Chicago, he is under engagement to deliver several lectures in this State. Perfectly conversant with the evils of the lodge system, and being a courageous speaker, his lectures carry conviction to the hearts of his hearers.

THE HOME.

THE WORKERS DIE.

Quite noiselessly the seed is sown,
But well the sower toils;
He keeps outside the strife of men,
He does not seek their spoils,
But steadily and faithfully
He sows the perfect seed;
Not his to reap the harvest,
Yet his the nobler deed!

But ah! how empty seems the world
When the quiet workers die!
You do not know their names, perhaps?
They are well known on high!
And where they lived, and loved, and wrought,
Their little world was blest;
For their lives were made all beautiful,
And Jesus gave them rest.

The earth can never be the same
When its best have passed away!
Who does the Master's business
As faithfully as they?
They were the gentle peacemakers
In the church and in the home,
And their good lives were one long prayer—
Lord, let thy kingdom come!

And it has come for them! They see
The Christ; they join the psalm
Of praise; all storms are over,
And they are in the calm!
They see the face they longed to see,
Forgotten all their care.
They are within the Father's house,
And nothing grieves them there!

They leave sad hearts to mourn them
And a drear and empty space;
And who can ever fill it?
Oh, God of love and grace,
Thou knowest how hard it is on earth
All that is best to miss!
Give aching hearts the comfort
To thank thee for their bliss!

—Marianne Farningham.

WIDOW MORLEY'S RIGHT HAND.

Two ladies, boarders at the Elmsmere hotel, were driving along a pleasant country road. Near the edge of a wood they passed a small, unpainted cottage, from whose open window came the sound of a sweet voice singing:

"He leadeth me, He leadeth me,
By His own hand He leadeth me.
His faithful follower would I be,
For by His hand He leadeth me."

"Mother," said the younger of the ladies, "this must be the home of the two children from whom we bought the baskets yesterday. Very likely that's their blind sister singing. Let's go in and see her."

"Very well," replied the mother, Mrs. Adams. "We may be able to help her in some way."

It was the work of a moment to fasten the horse to a convenient tree. Then the ladies entered the cottage. Near the door sat the 'Widow Morley,' industriously weaving a basket, while in a corner, near the window, was her blind daughter, engaged in the same occupation.

"So, this is the place where all those pretty baskets come from?" It was Miss Adams who spoke. "May we come in for awhile and see how you make them?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! You're very welcome. Ellie and I often get lonely sitting here by ourselves. But least we would if it weren't for her singing. That sort of keeps us cheered up, you know."

"I should think it might," said Mrs. Adams. "Where did you learn that hymn, my dear?"

"A gentleman taught me," answered the blind girl, timidly.

"Take seats, ladies, and I'll tell you all about it; that is, if you care to hear," said the widow. "Most of folks seem to take an interest in Ellie, so may be you will, too. You see she fell into the fire one day while I was out washing, when she was only two years old, and she's been blind ever since. But she's my right hand, ma'am, for all that. She's always so happy and cheery-like, it keeps me in heart, you know. Why, when her father died, and I didn't know how I could ever earn enough to keep her and the other two girls, she said, 'Don't be discouraged, mother; there'll be some way found.' And so it was. A gentleman who was staying then at the hotel heard of our trouble and came to see us. He had somehow learned to weave baskets when he was a boy, and he taught Ellie how to do it, so that she might make a little money for herself. Then, when she found that the baskets could easily be sold among the boarders, I learned how to weave them, too. I work at them when I have no washing to do, and the other children sell them after school hours."

"That is very good. But you haven't told us about the hymn."

"Sure enough, I haven't. Well, this gentleman was a minister like. At least, if he wasn't one, he was good enough to be one; and all the time he was teaching Ellie to weave baskets, he was telling her about good things, such as we read about in the Bible, ma'am; and one day he brought a hymn book and began to sing from it. Why, ma'am, the child learned the tunes right away, and the words with them. You'd have been surprised; I'm sure you would. And she's kept on a-singing them hymns ever since, and they're what keep our spirits up, you see."

"We have something else, too, ma'am, to make us happy. It's this little Testament that the gentleman gave Ellie when he was going away. He said, 'Now, Ellie, you must get your mother to read this book to you every day.' And she's done it, ma'am. She never forgets it. And if I ever get to heaven it will be through that blessed child. She's only twelve years old, but she knows more than I do about what the Lord Jesus said, and how he lived, for she remembers everything she hears."

"I'll show you something else, ma'am, if you care to see. It's this book with the raised letters that the same gentleman sent to her from New York. His name is Mr. Allen, ma'am. Just the day he went off, I told him how Ellie was learning her letters by feeling over the names on the stove, and I suppose that gave him an idea, for he sent her this book. It's the Gospel of John, and it's printed just the same as the books the blind children use in the schools."

"How would you like to have your daughter attend a school for the blind?" asked Mrs. Adams. "She could learn to do a great many useful things, and might get to be a teacher herself."

"Oh, ma'am, it would be the happiest day of my life that would see her going. She's my right hand, as I said, and I'd be that lonely without her that I couldn't tell how much. But, oh, ma'am! it breaks my heart to think of her just sitting here and weaving baskets all her life, when she might be doing something better. Do you know how she could get into a school?"

Mrs. Adams thought she did.

A few weeks later found Ellie at a blind asylum diligently at work with her studies. Her evident desire to learn earned for her the approbation of her teachers; while her cheerful, sunshiny manner won their affections and that of her classmates, too.

They all realized that it was something more than what is called "a good disposition" which made the young girl so attractive. It was the love of Christ in her heart brightening her life.

It was that love which now and again led her to speak of him to others and to show them the way to his cross.

When, after completing the course, she entered upon the work for which she had been trained,—that of teaching girls who were blind like herself,—it was felt by all who knew her that she would point her scholars upward.

The light of day might never enter her eyes, but the Sun of Righteousness was shining upon her soul. She could not do otherwise than speak of his glory. With her all was light and all was well.—Mary J. Porter, in the Christian Intelligencer.

ENCKE'S COMET COMING.

Encke's comet was seen by Professor E. E. Barnard, at Lick Observatory, Mt. Hamilton, Cal., early on Sunday morning. This wonder has been journeying in space out of sight of all star-gazers for three years and three months. In that time it has traveled more than 700,000,000 miles.

Prof. Pons, of Marsilles, France, discovered this comet in 1818. Prof. Encke, of Berlin, made it the subject of special study. Encke predicted its return in 1822, and it was seen in that year by Sir Thomas Brisbane in New South Wales. Encke predicted that it would return again in 1825 and 1828. It did so, and thus it became known as Encke's.

Encke's comet is a very staid and respectable home body. It is very different from Biela's comet. This tramp of the heavens reported as usual in 1858 and winked one eye at the earth, but failed to show up again at the appointed time in 1859 and again in 1865. Nothing has been seen or heard of it. But Biela's comet was hardly responsible for what it did, because in 1846 it split into two parts, each a complete comet in itself, and it seems to have gone off on a celestial jig and got "bewildered among the rings of the meteorites," as the professors say.

Short-period comets have short tails, and Encke's comet is of this class. It has a nucleus, and will probably show its tail soon. The body is transparent to its core. The coma is the haze of light surrounding the bright center, which is called the nucleus.—Selected.

PALESTINE ITEMS.

A lady who has been living in Jerusalem for ten years writes thus to the Age to Come Herald concerning the contemplated railroad from Jaffa to Jerusalem:

"The railroad, I suppose, will be finished this year. They have sent for three more engines, and they will bring Pullman cars likewise for the road. The world moves, and the new growth of Palestine will be more than a restitution.

"If the Lord wills, I expect to go to Jaffa when the railroad is finished. I have never been away from Jerusalem and its suburbs since I came here ten years ago, except once when I went to Hebron."

She further adds: "The markets are now, May 27, full. Eggs are plenty—seven for four cents. Fine cucumbers and apricots are very cheap. Plenty of everything good, and large quantities for a little money.

"Benjamin has done well with his garden this year. He sold all his beans for a good price, and is selling off his onions. The people like to buy of him. We are all blessed with an abundance of work. This is no place for lazy people, unless they have a good purse of money, and then they can live cheap and well.

"Real estate is in good demand yet. House rent is especially high. They tell us that every steamer brings thirty or forty families of Jews. Many have money and will buy land.

"The Turks love money, and they see this is their time, and they are selling and giving up their houses. The present boom in land will not last always. There will be changes; ups and downs; and there is land enough around the city to swell its proportions to any size. The growth of the city is encouraging.

"The best way for newcomers is to buy land and build. That will keep down the price of land, houses and rent. Buy land and build. That is just what the Jews are doing, and they are right; it is just what should be encouraged."

A WELL-DRILLED STUDENT.

Oliver Holdfast was a pupil in an academy whose principal was distinguished, not for pushing his scholars rapidly forward, but for grounding them thoroughly, especially in the languages and mathematics.

Oliver grew impatient when he approached the age proper for entering college. "Other lads of my age," he said, "are prepared to enter; why should I not be fit also?"

"After another year you will be," urged the teacher.

Oliver happened at this time to be often in the company of some youths who, though undergraduates, were not ambitious to excel. He caught their spirit, and being told that examinations for entrance to college were not very severe, he grew indifferent in his own studies.

Being put under a private tutor for that year, instead of continuing in the academy, he slighted his work. As a consequence, when he appeared for examination he was rejected. His rejection stung him sharply, and when once more placed under a tutor, bent himself earnestly to his work. At the beginning of the new year he passed a fine examination, and then went through his college terms with ease and success. "Now," he often says, "I know the value of that thorough grounding I got at Professor Z——'s academy. But for that I should have had hard work all through my college course."

Yes, his academic teacher was right. He who intends to excel in anything must lay a good and strong foundation. He may be ridiculed by foolish fellows as being slow. So was a certain miller who, when building on a turbulent stream, bolted the foundation of his mill to the solid rock. It cost him much money, but when, a few years later, a freshet swept every building in the valley except his mill to destruction, he had his reward. His strong foundation saved his mill. It is even so with character, scholarship, business and every other human work. Whatever is to last, to succeed, to accomplish something, must have a solid foundation. Things that are to end well must be begun well.—Christian Advocate.

SUPPOSE.

Suppose, my little lady,
Your doll should break her head,
Could you make it whole by crying
Till your eyes and nose are red?
And wouldn't it be pleasanter
To treat it as a joke,
And say you're glad 'twas Dolly's
And not your head that broke?

Suppose you're dressed for walking,
And the rain comes pouring down,
Will it clear off any sooner
Because you scold and frown?
And wouldn't it be nicer
For you to smile than pout,
And so make sunshine in the house
When there is none without?

Suppose your task, my little man,
Is very hard to get,
Will it make it any easier
For you to sit and fret?
And wouldn't it be wiser
Than waiting like a dunce,
To go to work in earnest
And learn the thing at once?

Suppose, that some boys have a horse,
And some a coach and pair,
Will it tire you less while walking
To say, "It isn't fair?"
And wouldn't it be nobler
To keep your temper sweet,
And in your heart be thankful
You can walk upon your feet?

And suppose the world don't please you,
Nor the way some people do,
Do you think the whole creation
Will be altered just for you?
And isn't it, my boy or girl,
The wisest, bravest plan,
Whatever comes or doesn't come,
To do the best you can?

—Phoebe Cary.

MAKING PICTURES.

Elsie was intently watching her aunt paint a picture, when she suddenly said, "Oh! auntie, I do wish I could make pretty pictures like you do; do you suppose I can when I grow to be a woman?"

"My Elsie need not wait to be a woman before she can make pictures," replied her aunt; "indeed she is making them all the time, some beautiful ones, but, I am sorry to say, some ugly ones also."

"Why, auntie, what do you mean? I don't see how I am making pictures; I am sure I don't know what you mean," said Elsie.

"The pictures I am speaking of are life pictures, Elsie," said her aunt. "Whenever my little niece is cross or disagreeable she is making an ugly picture in the memories of those about her; when she is kind and pleasant she is making a beautiful picture. Do you see now what I mean? When mamma asks you to help her in her work, take care of baby brother, or do an errand, and you leave your play and willingly help your mamma, you are making a beautiful picture in her memory, a picture that she will love to look at afterwards. But if you refuse to help mamma, and answer by frowns and cross words, you leave an ugly picture in her memory, one that will give her sorrow and pain to look at afterwards. When you are thoughtful enough to bring papa's wrapper and slippers when he comes home tired at night, when you help mamma when she is busy, whenever you are kind and loving, you are making beautiful pictures in papa's and mamma's memories. Won't my little Elsie try always to make beautiful pictures?"

"Yes, indeed, auntie," said Elsie. "I wish I could always make beautiful pictures and never make any ugly ones."

Don't all of my readers wish the same?—Selected.

TEMPERANCE.

THE UNGODLY LEAGUE OF CHURCH AND SALOON.

Prohibitionists of America, the time has come for a new warfare. The ungodly league between churches and saloons must be broken, if the churches have to be split from turret to foundation stone in order to do it. A church that will any longer palter or stammer in the presence of these 140,000 gaping hells in America is one that is an enemy to God and a menace to the moral health of the nation. The minister that any longer supports by his ballot or his silence the policy of license or a license party is as guilty before God on this subject as a barkeeper, and no longer worthy to be a religious instructor or moral guide. The time has come when the truth must be shown in all its nakedness. The saloon exists because it is legalized and protected. Its legalization rests upon the voters of America. There is the responsibility for all this immeasurable woe and sin. Men who deliberately shut their eyes to this fact are men unfit to take communion at God's table, and a church that will let them do it is unfit any longer to be called a church. We say this in all deliberation, conscious of all that it implies. If we cannot condone this sin in a party or a political leader, much less can we do it in a church or a minister.

What is this institution that is tolerated, perpetuated, protected by nearly four million voters who are church members? Here is a description of it by the New York Tribune four years ago:

"It is impossible to examine any subject connected with the progress, the civilization, the physical well-being, the religious condition of the masses, without encountering this monstrous evil. It is at the center of all social and political mischief. It paralyzes beneficent energies in every direction. It neutralizes educational agencies. It silences the voice of religion. It baffles penal reform. It obstructs political reform. It rears aloft a mass of evilly-inspired power which at every salient point threatens social and national advance; which gives to ignorance and vice a greater potency than intelligence and virtue can command; which deprives the poor of advantages of modern progress; which debauches and degrades millions, brutalizes and soddening them below the plane of healthy savagery, and filling the centers of population with creatures whose condition almost excuses the immorality which renders them dangerous to their generation."

Every word of this is true, none the less true because extorted from a journal itself an ally of the traffic, and it is this "monstrous evil" that men are commissioned to carry on year after year by professing Christians. If the saloon-keepers are "poisoners-general," as John Wesley said, then those who commission them for this business stand side by side with them in their guilt. If they are "traffickers in human blood," as Lyman Beecher said, thousands of ministers and about four million professed followers of Christ have on their hands the same blood and have nothing like the same stress of temptation to palliate their guilt. "This question should not be dragged into the pulpit." In God's name, isn't murder to be dragged into the pulpit and censured? "To sell rum for a livelihood seems bad enough," said Horace Greeley, in words that burn to-day, "but for a whole community to share the responsibility and the guilt of such a traffic for a beggarly $10 seems a worse bargain than that of Eve or Judas.

Men and brethren, there are stains of blood on the pulpit. There is blood in the pews. The foundation-stones are wet with it. The words of Lowell's "Parable" are truer to-day than when they were written:

"But still, wherever His steps they lod,
The Lord in sorrow bent down his head.
And from under the great foundation stones
The Son of Mary heard bitter groans.
'Have ye founded your thrones and altars, then,
On the bodies and souls of living men?'"

What is to be done about it? There is but one thing to do. The guilt which we refuse to share politically is one we should refuse to share religiously. The church must be purged of this guilt. Persuasion, argument, entreaty, have failed. Resolutions have been passed by conferences and synods and councils, and official declarations delivered, but the guilt of the church remains. Resolutions, even the strongest, will not remove it. Do not even the liquor-dealers pass good resolutions? The guilt of the church remains so long as a man who deliberately supports the legislation of drunkard-making is allowed to remain in its pulpits or in its pews. It is time the church be put to the test. A blood-guilty church is even worse than a blood-guilty party. It is as bad to share in the one as in the other. If any church or any minister or church paper refuses hereafter to free itself or himself from complicity with this "traffic in human blood," every true Prohibitionist, in our opinion, ought to repudiate such a church or minister or paper and withdraw his or her support. We want some sanctified cursing done. "Curse ye Meroz," said the angel of the Lord, "curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

One thing more. A few years ago, J. W. Bruce, of Canastota, N. Y., said that the church is the bulwark of the rum power. We criticised Mr. Bruce for the utterance. We want to apologize to him now. His vision was clearer than ours. Thank heaven, there are churches (a very few) and ministers (also few) who are shining exceptions; but the controlling, dominant power of every large denomination in America is in league with the saloons and slums of our land, and that league is ratified yearly at the ballot-box. More than that, the attitude of the church is a bar, though it ought not to be, to the action of those outside the church.

The attitude of the churches of America is the bulwark of the rum-traffic.

God pity us, it is the truth.—The Voice, New York.

A TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

One of the most telling and convincing temperance speeches that was ever delivered by the thousand and one temperance orators—John B. Gough not excepted—was given in a very few words at the police headquarters in Dallas City, Ill., one evening last week by a man who was put in a calaboose by our city marshal for being intoxicated.

The man was a young person, a well-to-do farmer, and had about his person when put in the lock-up $115.00 in bills. When asked by the court what he had to say to the charge, replied: "Yes, I was drunk; I confess the charge is true."

Whereupon the court proceeded to assess a fine of three dollars and cost of suit, taxed at $1.60. To this the defendant objected—and entered a plea that the city "had no right to assess a fine." The law was read to him. Still he objected and proceeded to give his reasons in the following brief words: "The citizens of Dallas City voted to grant retail liquor license, which gives the saloon-keeper the right to retail liquor and make people drunk. You get double pay by the dram-shop trade. You oblige the saloon-keeper to pay a large revenue into the city treasury for the privilege to make us drunk, and the fine goes into the city treasury, taking double toll."

"Is not this right?" queried the court. "No! It is double pay. If it is right for you to license dramshops, it is right for us to get drunk—see? The city folks are the ones who ought to be fined—or the saloon-keeper, when we get drunk. That is the way it is—we poor devils have to pay for it all—see? The saloon-keeper and city council are in partnership in the dramshop business, in order to get a large revenue for the city to pay big salaries to you officers and police to keep up appearance of good government. You fellows are covering up a wrong under color of the law."

The court quietly informed the defendant that his arguments were, to say the least, forcible and to the point, but as the law compelled him to assess the fine it would be so ordered and adjudged by the court, and the law had to be executed, right or wrong. The man paid his fine, taking a receipt therefor, remarking as he left the court that he would attend to the matter and see if a man could be treated in such a way as that—he would go to a higher court.—Hawkeye, Burlington, Iowa.

BIBLE LESSON.

A STUDY IN TEMPERANCE.—SEPTEMBER 27.

SUBJECT.—The Two Paths.—Proverbs 4: 13-19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way.—Isaiah 28: 7.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 1: 1-14. T.—John 1: 35-42. W.—John 4: 1-15. Th.—John 5: 10-29. F.—John 6: 1-14. S.—John 6: 28-40. S.—John 10: 1-16.

COMMENTS BY REV. F. N. PELOUBET, D. D.

THE WORDS OF THE WISE. This lesson is part of the advice of the wisest of men, to the young. Probably Solomon was thinking of his own son, Rehoboam. His words are therefore of all the more value to us.

1. The path of the wicked.—Vs. 14-17, 19. It is almost universally acknowledged that strong drink is one of the greatest incentives and encouragements to all kinds of sin and wickedness.

IT IS THE DOOR TO A WORLD OF INIQUITY AND SORROW.

The only safety lies in not entering that door; in total abstinence from all that intoxicates.

THE RESULT OF OBSERVATION by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, president of the New York Central Railroad Co., in a talk to railroad men. "Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman and child in Peekskill. And it has been a study with me to mark boys who started in every grade of life with myself, to see what has become of them. I was up last fall and began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors. It is remarkable that every one of those that drank is dead; not one living of my age. Barring a few who were taken off by sickness, every one that proved a wreck and wrecked his family did it from rum, and no other cause. Of those who are church-going people, who were steady, industrious, and hard-working men, who were frugal and thrifty, every single one of them, without an exception owns the house in which he lives, and has something laid by, the interest on which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day. When a man becomes debased with gambling, rum or drink, he doesn't care; all his finer feelings are crowded out."

A REVIVAL OF PLEDGE-SIGNING. Mr. Albert Griffin, one of the sincerest of temperance reformers, believes that the paramount need of the hour is that of a "pledge-signing revival." What then? Shall prohibition be abandoned? By no means. It is needed to clinch the nails driven by the moral-suasion hammer and to keep the devils from returning into the men out of whom they had been driven. We must have both moral suasion and legal suasion; but the best, if not the only way, to secure both is to make our main fight directly against the drink habit.—The Advance.

2. The path of the Just.—Vs. 13-18. Shining more and more unto the perfect day. A growth in every good, through obedience to good instruction.

IMPORTANCE OF BEGINNING RIGHT. THE TWO WAYS. Pythagoras compared life to the letter V. It is the diverging of the broad and the narrow ways. It is easy to go in the right way at first. It is comparatively easy to cross from the wrong to the right way at the beginning. But each day's progress widens the distance; obstacles grow greater, till at last it is almost impossible to change.

THE PUBLICAN'S CONUNDRUM. The Christian Leader tells of a liquor-dealer in the town of Ayr, Scotland, who had a particular brand of whisky which he wished to advertise. One day the circus was coming to town, and, to add interest to its performances and advertise his whisky, he offered a prize for the best answer to the question, "Why this particular kind of whisky resembled a certain bridge across the water of Ayr?"

The show came, and the answers to the liquor-seller's question were handed in to be examined, and the successful competitor was announced. He proved to be a poor boy, who perhaps knew from experience what he was speaking of; and his answer to the question why that publican's whisky was like the bridge was, "Because it leads to the poor-house, the lunatic asylum and the cemetery."

The publican probably looked glum as he paid his money; and he is not likely to propose any more prize conundrums to advertise his whisky at present. Perhaps some who have drunk it will also halt and take another road.—Hastings.

THE POSITION OF THE CHURCH. I heard incidentally of a case through a fallen man who obtained liquor at a house which was rented for the sale of liquor by a professing Christian. I went to him and said, "You have rented your building for the sale of liquor." He replied, "I can get a larger rent for it than I can for any other business." I said, "You are a Christian; do you believe the law of God allows you to do it?" That man was so utterly bewildered and confused, because the law allowed him to do it. I recall the words of John Pierpont again. He said: "You may appeal to the law that is on the book; you may keep your license fast clutched in your hand when you come up before the judgment seat of God, and say, 'Here is my license.' It won't pass there as it does here."—Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Dr. Pentecost has decided to resume his evangelistic work in Calcutta, India, next winter. The Calcutta Missionary Conference, at a recent meeting, expressed its great gratification at the decision and will extend to him a hearty welcome.

—The contributions of Alabama Baptists for missions have increased from $200 eighteen years ago to $70,000 last year. The South has always been noted for the numerical strength of the Baptists. When they learn to give as do their brethren in the North they will see real prosperity.—Journal and Messenger.

—The Baptist Publication Society has just got out a new revised edition of the New Testament.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Most of the Chicago ministers have returned and are in their pulpits. At Plymouth there were more than the house would hold to welcome Dr. Gunsaulus. At Union Park there were very large congregations. In the morning was communion, and although Dr. Noble has been absent all summer, fourteen were received to membership, six of them on confession, more than ever before at a September communion. Rev. Dr. Goodwin, of the First church, is to return from Europe early in October.

—The Free Methodist church at Howard City, Mich., having lost its house by fire and having decided to surrender its organization, the members have voted to deed their church site to the new Congregational society, who will begin at once to build.

—Student Bean of the present middle class at Chicago Seminary has just closed a very profitable summer's work at Crawford, Neb. The Sunday-school has more than doubled, a Christian Endeavor Society organized, a complete religious census of the town made, several added to the membership of the church and the money raised for a fine bell. Resolutions of appreciation of the summer's work were passed by the church.

—The Congregationalists are about to establish a large educational institution at Olympia, Wash. Something over $50,000 has been given by one man, and others stand ready to assist as soon as the move is fully under way.

—Rev. C. N. Lyman, who was for twenty years pastor at Onawa, Iowa, but who was obliged to resign on account of ill health a few months ago, has so far recovered as to be able to resume pastoral work, and he has accepted a call to the church at Alden.

LUTHERAN.

—The church schools and colleges are about opening their autumn and winter sessions. We have cheering news already from many of them. Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg has the prospect of a large increase over last year. Wittenberg has already more than seventy new students enrolled, and has prospects for more. Carthage and Midland will both have, as reports come, a great increase in numbers. Our seminaries, too, seem to be all highly prosperous.—Lutheran Evangelist.

—There is a Lutheran daily paper in Chicago with 6,000 subscribers.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—At Seminary avenue, Aurora, Ill., a new church society was formed Aug. 25 with fifty-three members, to be known as the Willard M. E. church of Aurora, Ill. O. F. Hall was appointed pastor for the remainder of the conference year.

—Salt Lake City is to have a new Methodist church, which will be located near where the recent tent meetings were held.

—A camp-meeting at Frederica, Iowa, closed Aug. 23. There were upward of fifty-five seekers; forty joined the M. E. church, and others will follow. some went to other churches. The local church was greatly strengthened and uplifted. Financial obligations were all met. Evangelist C. W. Garlock led the meeting.

—The bell and belfry of a church in Breckinridge, Col., were blown to atoms by dynamite. The outrage is supposed to have been perpetrated by friends of the saloon, in revenge for pastor Passmore's outspoken opposition to the liquor traffic.

—The fourth annual session of the Western Presiding-Elders' Convention will be held in Topeka, Kan., Oct. 27-29.

—Shawano, Wisconsin, conference, reports an impressive baptismal service on Aug. 30, at which sixteen were at the altar, including one entire family of seven.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The First Presbyterian church of Southold, L. I., is the oldest one in the State of New York out of New York City. It was organized on the 21st of October, 1640.

—Mrs. Jane Coates died recently at Greencastle, Ind., aged sixty-nine. She was the founder of Coates College, of Terre Haute, and by her will the residue of her estate goes to the college.

—In Utah the Presbyterians are carrying on mission work in twenty-eight towns outside of Salt Lake City and Ogden, and have twenty-one ministers, fifty-eight teachers, thirty schools, and about 2,100 pupils, seventy-five per cent of which pupils are from Mormon or ex-Mormon families.

—Eleven of the Southern Presbyterian churches last year gave over $1,000 each to foreign missions. One has pledged this year over $2,000.

—The First Presbyterian church, Portland, Oregon, is already looking forward to the coming of the General Assembly in 1892. The seating capacity of the church is to be enlarged.

SALVATION ARMY.

—Out of the British Isles, the Salvation Army has now 1,705 corps and 1,040 societies, altogether 2,754 separate salvation societies. These are led by 5,800 officers.

—The Salvation Army holds about 50,000 meetings every week in different parts of the world.

—J. W. Munson, an eccentric old philanthropist, who died lately at Honolulu, and was buried by the Salvation Army post at that place, leaves $50,000 to the Salvation Army of Seattle, Wash.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Ministerial Association of Pittsburgh recently listened to a paper by Dr. W. J. Robinson, on "What is the Scriptural argument for the exclusion of women from the ministry and eldership?" The points were: 1. In the constitution of human society, as set forth in the Scriptures, man was given priority of being and authority and headship in position. 2. God himself, in all the provisions he has made for the church in every dispensation, has carefully excluded women from positions of authority. 3. The Scriptures expressly exclude and prohibit women from positions of authority in the church.

—The second United Brethren Reunion at Idlewild Park, Allegheny, Pa., was a decided success. Over six thousand members of the tribes of the United Brethren went up to the feast. Bishop E. B. Kephart delivered the address. Twenty-three of the pastors were there with their congregations. The church-building movement in Allegheny Conference continues encouragingly.

WESLEYAN METHODIST.

—The Indiana Conference, at Baker's Corners, was largely attended. Rev. E. Teter, President, and Rev. W. H. Kennedy, Secretary, were re-elected. In all expressions on moral reform questions, and experimental doctrines, showed no declension or wavering, much less abandonment of the cause of righteousness and truth, although much despised and spoken against. From the reports of the charges composing the conference, the year seems to have been one of encouraging prosperity, the membership rising from eighteen hundred to twenty-three hundred during that time.

—Rev. R. H. Rust, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Ann Arbor, Mich., has been elected president of Cincinnati Wesleyan Female College. He accepts the position, and will spend a year traveling in Europe.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—The smallest church in the world is said to be at St. Lawrence, near Ventnor, Isle of Wight. It has a seating capacity of twelve people.

—There are about two hundred private Mohammedan schools in Bombay, in which the Koran is taught; and they are all maintained by individual wealthy Mohammedans, who provide the necessary funds.

—From March 1 to August 1, the missionaries of the American Sunday-school Union in the Northwest established 406 new Sunday-schools, with a membership of 1,444 teachers and 12,319 scholars. Besides this they aided old schools in 1,673 cases, where there are 8,190 teachers and 81,201 scholars; held 2,456 meetings; made 14,521 visits to families; distributed 2,656 Bibles and Testaments, placed in the schools religious literature valued at $2,950, and traveled 199,621 miles.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The Mayor appointed Charles B. Obermeyer Assistant City Prosecuting Attorney, vice George W. Crawford resigned.

Mayor Washburne and Commissioner O'Neil are perfecting a plan to fill in the Lake Front basin and to derive tax-saving revenue indirectly.

Western lines will sell reduced rates to the Chicago Exposition once a week.

In the Labor Day parade from 15,000 to 20,000 participated. The day was celebrated generally throughout the city, the picnics being all largely attended.

COUNTRY.

Lou. V. Stephens, receiver of the Fifth National Bank of St. Louis, which failed Nov. 7, 1887, Monday sued the directors of the bank for $343,337.97 alleged to have been lent in violation of law.

Bertha Ison, aged 19, was shot dead at Bloomington, Ill., Monday by Dr. Charles E. Ballard, of Saybrook, a former lover. Ballard then committed suicide.

Near Hartington, Neb., last week Dennis O'Flaherty, a wealthy ranchman, offered three of his neighbors poisoned alcohol. One died, a second was reported dying Monday, while the third will recover. O'Flaherty is in jail.

Labor Day was observed Monday throughout the country as a holiday. Organizations of workmen paraded and listened to speeches. There was no demonstration at Pittsburg.

Warrants were issued Monday for the arrest of President H. A. Christie, of Chicago, and Treasurer E. E. Wise of the McPherson, Texas and Gulf Railway of Kansas, charging them with the embezzlement of $250,000. This amount, it is claimed, represents the profits made off the construction of thirty-two miles of road. Cities, counties, and townships were victimized. It is said the company was composed chiefly of Chicago men.

Monday the Department of State was notified by Minister Egan, at Santiago, that he had formally opened communication with the new government of Chili.

F. L. Caroli committed suicide in a San Francisco hotel Monday by exploding a dynamite bomb. The windows were shattered, and portions of Caroli's remains were blown into the street.

It is denied that there is to be a consolidation of the leading wrought iron pipe manufacturing concerns of the country. Reports from St. Louis confirm the rumor that a type trust is to be formed.

R. C. Layton's tea and spice house on South Water street, New York, was damaged to the extent of $25,000 by fire on Tuesday. The Morse Wool Scouring Works at St. Louis were destroyed, causing a loss of $25,000. Fully insured.

Near Celina, Ohio, Tuesday, James Lewis accidentally cut Tom Johnson's hand while thrashing, whereupon Johnson pushed him into the machine, and his head and body were ground to a pulp. Lewis' brother Frank then seized a pitchfork and plunged it into Johnson's body, killing him instantly.

Judge Thomas, of the United States District Court, issued an injunction Tuesday against the Railroad Commissioners and Grain Inspectors of North Dakota restraining them from inspecting grain in transit.

Nine persons were fatally poisoned at a Sunday dinner at the home of George Gregg in Belleville, Kan. It is not known what the poison was or who administered it.

Reports of officers to the Illinois Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., show 289 lodges, a gain of 22; total membership, 11,249, a net gain of 1,472; receipts, $9,026; expenses, $7,384.

Articles of incorporation of the Ogden Street Railway Company, at Chicago, with a capital stock of $2,000,000, were filed with the Secretary of State of Illinois Tuesday.

At Springfield Tuesday the State Bureau of Labor Statistics re-elected the Hon. Charles H. Deere President and Colonel John S. Lord Secretary. It was decided to make a thorough investigation of the condition of working women in this State, and also to make a full inquiry into the "sweating" system.

Latest advices to the Canadian Government place the rye crop at 2,000,000 bushels.

P. H. Patrick and a son of the Hon. J. B. Brown, of Pembroke, Ga., came to blows about a small settlement, and a brother of Brown tried to separate them. Revolvers were drawn and all were mortally wounded.

Gustav Berger, a German Count, killed his wife and committed suicide at Topeka, Kan., Tuesday, as a result of a quarrel over a dollar.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

J Griffin.....	$ 5 00
J G Laughlin.....	5 00
J W Suidter.....	5 00
Peter Housel.....	2 00
C A Blanchard.....	5 00
Julia Hulbert.....	5 00
Miss M Whipple.....	50
Previously reported.....	593 99
	$621 49

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

W R Morley.....	$25 00
Previously reported.....	81 08
	$106 08

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 7 to Sept. 12:

Mrs H Kerlinger, Rev S O Irvine, J H Gray, Rev O W Watkins, S Creswell, Wm Reid, L H Bohrer, Rev N S Smith, E J Chalfant, J L Laughlin, J Grove, Miss S E Moore, S Witmer, A Arend, J Soult.

GRIFFITH NEWS ITEMS.

Griffith is destined by her unequalled railroad and fuel facilities to become the future great manufacturing suburb of Chicago.

Street grading is being rapidly pushed. Junction avenue is being opened up North through to the Little Calumet River.

The Standard Oil Company is now laying its second Oil Pipe line through Griffith from the Ohio Oil fields. The original pipe line has been in operation over a year. Fuel Oil is supplied at two-thirds the cost of coal.

Negotiations have just been opened with one of the oldest and largest Normal Schools in the country relative to its removal to Griffith. Nearly 1,000 pupils are now in daily attendance.

The Foundry and Power Company recently located at Griffith is now negotiating to do business on a much larger scale than was originally proposed. When the present plans are perfected, from 300 to 400 men will be employed in the manufacture of steam radiators.

A definite contract with a sash, door and blind factory working 60 men will doubtless be closed by September 15th, as preliminary arrangements are all made. This contract provides for the immediate erection of a hotel and boarding house and ten private residences. Others will soon follow.

Jay Dwiggin & Co., the owners and promoters of Griffith, are well known in banking circles. They are sole owners of the Commercial Bank of Lowell and the Citizens' Bank of Hebron, Indiana, both near Griffith. They are also stockholders in the Citizens' National Bank of Attica, Indiana. They were formerly connected with the United States National Bank, now the Columbia National Bank of Chicago. They are thoroughly responsible. Remittances may be made to them with all confidence, and their judgment in real estate matters may be relied on.

HARVEY.

Chicago's Temperance Suburb.

New Blocks—just subdivided—adjoining Atkinson Steel and Spring Works. And Bellaire Stamping Company's immense manufactory—now being erected. Rare chance for investors to reap a profit.

Come, see, and get first choice at first prices.

Be sure your deed comes through the Harvey Land Association as their deeds are the only ones that positively, absolutely and forever prevent saloons and kindred evils.

Additions to Harvey are not thus protected. Send for New Plats and prices.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION,

819 to 825 THE ROOKERY, CHICAGO.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.
FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	93 @ 93 1/2
Winter.....	93 @ 93 1/2
Corn—No. 2.....	62 1/2 @ 63
Oats—No. 2.....	27 @ 28 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	87 1/2 @ 88
Bran per ton.....	12 50 @ 12 75
Hay—Timothy.....	10 75 @ 11 50
Butter, medium to best.....	18 @ 25
Cheese.....	06 1/2 @ 08
Beans.....	1 85 @ 2 25
Eggs.....	16 @ 16
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 16 @ 1 22
Flax.....	98 @ 99
Broom corn.....	02 1/2 @ 05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	26 @ 35
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	4 1/2 @ 5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @ 13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @ 29
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	5 95 @ 6 30
Common to good.....	3 90 @ 4 70
Hogs.....	5 35 @ 5 60
Sheep.....	3 40 @ 4 80

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	1 01 @ 1 03 1/4
Corn.....	72 @ 73
Oats.....	34 @ 35 1/2
Eggs.....	18 @ 19 1/2
Butter.....	13 @ 25
Wool.....	14 @ 39

KANSAS CITY

Cattle.....	1 75 @ 5 75
Hogs.....	3 00 @ 5 10
Sheep.....	3 90 @ 4 55

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Olerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition at W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 57 pages.	$.25
FIFTY CENTS.
$ 1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumm. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$ 1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

HOME AND HEALTH.

SLEEP AND HEALTH.

There is a story told of a certain tradesman who was in difficulties, and went to his rich brother for assistance. On his arrival he found him in bed, and had to wait some time for his appearance. "I am surprised at your staying in bed so long," said the poor relation; "I have been up three hours, at least." "Yes," replied the more fortunate brother, "but you see when I do get up I am thoroughly awake." The hint was more forcible than thoughtful, yet it contains a lesson which is especially applicable to those who are trying to gain for themselves a livelihood and a fortune. He who has enough sleep has secured one of the safeguards against the encroachments of disease and mental prostration. His nerves are steadier, his intellect is clearer and keener, and the business and responsibility of life are attended to with a degree of comfort and efficiency that are not otherwise attainable.

A few days ago, two gentlemen met by chance in our sanctum. They were quite youthful in appearance, and in excellent health. On comparing notes it was found that both had been in the military service during the "late unpleasantness," but upon opposite sides. Their youthful appearance led to a banter as to which was the elder, and it was agreed that each should mark the date of his birth on a slip of paper, and place it in the writer's hands, when it transpired that the "wearer of the gray" was senior by some seven years. We confessed our astonishment, for he was by far the younger looking. "I am a great homebody," he explained, "and having married soon after the war, I have scarcely ever missed retiring for the night as early as nine o'clock. In addition to this, my habits of life have always been simple and temperate."

Here was a man fifty years of age, who did not look to be more than thirty-five, all owing to simple and regular habits of life, with a due allotment of sleep. And nature will never be cheated of her requirements, without writing her protest in indelible lines.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE CARE OF DEAD CHICKENS.

Housekeepers do not always understand that a chicken, after the animal heat leaves the body, is not fit for food in less than twenty-four hours. During this time the muscles are stiffened by the rigor that succeeds directly after the departure of animal heat in all animals, and are tougher than they are at any time previous. In Virginia and many parts of the South, cooks kill and dress poultry with great rapidity, and plunge the pieces of chicken while they are still warm with animal heat into the frying kettle. This secures the tender, succulent dishes of fried chicken which are justly the pride of the old Virginia cook. There is something repulsive to the Northern housewife in serving up a fowl that was perhaps a few moments before strutting about, the pride of the yard. An equally good and tender dish of chicken may be attained by keeping the fowl till the muscles relax, and it is in prime condition for food. In fact, only by the rapid process of frying can a chicken be cooked done before the muscles stiffen. This the Southern cook knows, and she never attempts to fricassee or roast a fowl that has not been hung at least twenty-four hours.

ABOUT THE HOUSE.

A medical writer says the dyspeptic who eats a light supper should resort to the use of a towel, wet with tepid water, and covered with a dry cloth, the whole then applied to the pit of the stomach. Before the sufferer knows it he will float into shadow land, such is the sympathy between the organs of digestion and the brain. Owing to the position of the stomach a light sleeper ought to sleep on the right side instead of the left; never on the back.

When fruit ripens it soon rots. The object, then, is to prevent the fruit from fully ripening. A careful system of ventilation, walls which are frost-proof, and avoidance of a thorough draft will insure success in keeping fruit during the cold months. Such fruits as tomatoes, etc., can be kept sound for quite a while by observing these three conditions.

Steaming the face at night over a bowl of very hot water, and then bathing it with very cold water, is a simple method of giving it a Russian bath, and will tend to make the skin whiter and smoother and the flesh firmer.

Babies should be looked after with particular care lest they take cold. The best clothing is that which is warm and at the same time light. Flannel is the best material for all seasons of the year.

One of the best and simplest remedies for torpid liver or biliousness is a glass of hot water with the juice of half a lemon squeezed in it, but no sugar. This is to be taken night and morning.

If vaseline or butter be applied to the skin immediately after a blow of any kind it will prevent discoloration.

If going on a long drive do not forget that water is acceptable to the horse "between meals" in hot weather.

Waste of wealth is sometimes retrieved; waste of health seldom; but waste of time never.

Bad habits are Philistines who put out the eyes of Samson and make him grind in a mill.

If you will rub the horse down when putting him out all sweat, he will enjoy it.

The brusque and fussy impulse of these days of false impression would rate down all as worthless because one is unworthy. As if there were no notes in sunbeams! Or comets among stars! Or cataracts in peaceful rivers! Because one remedy professes to do what it never was adapted to do, are all remedies worthless? Because one doctor lets his patient die, are all humbugs? It requires a fine eye and a finer brain to discriminate—to draw the differential line.

"They say" that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have cured thousands.

"They say" for a weak system there's nothing better than the "Discovery," and that the "Favorite Prescription" is the hope of debilitated, feeble women who need a restorative tonic and bracing nerve. And here's the proof—

Try one or both. If they don't help you, tell the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., and you get your money back again.

DON'T KNIT but buy Home-Made Hosiery. It is close knit from all wool yarn, with double heels and toes. A pair of the BEST SOCKS, post-paid 45 cents; a good pair 25 cents. Discount to clubs. Samples and price list FREE. WM. C. COLEMAN, Sabetha, Kan.

MARLIN SAFETY

REPEATING RIFLES FOR SALE
EVERYWHERE
 MADE BY THE MARLIN FIRE ARMS CO.
 NEW HAVEN, CONN., U.S.A.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
 Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
 Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
 A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
 Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

BUY A LOT AT GRIFFITH!

THE COMING GREAT
 MANUFACTURING SUBURB OF CHICAGO.
LOTS $100.00 AND UPWARDS.

Payable, $4.00 and upwards, monthly. Send $2.00 deposit to hold your lot. Contracts issued when one tenth is paid.

Are You a Dollar Saver? One dollar a week saved secures you a lot at bottom prices at Griffith, which within one year will rival Hammond and Harvey as a manufacturing point. Griffith has four railroads now in operation, three Eastern Trunk Lines and the Outer Belt Line. It is higher elevation than Harvey, has two more railroads, and the Standard Oil Pipe Line, which supplies fuel oil at two-thirds the cost of coal. WITHIN A YEAR when the factories are running, lots will bring TEN TIMES the present prices. Get our folders, showing map and plat of Griffith, together with eleven editorial extracts from Chicago dailies and Real Estate papers concerning Griffith's advantages and bright future.

GET IT TO DAY.
You Miss an Opportunity of Your Life
 If you fail to secure a lot before prices advance. Don't wait until you have a large sum of money to invest. $2.00 cash will secure the lot of your choice now. Buy at the bottom. Mention this paper.

JAY DWIGGINS & CO.,
 409 Chamber of Commerce bldg.
 CHICAGO, ILL.
 We refer by permission to the Columbia National and Metropolitan National Banks of Chicago.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
The Voice (N. Y.)	$1.00	and Cynosure $2.50
Union Signal (new subscribers only)	.50	" 2.00
Cosmopolitan and premium (see premium offer)	3.50	" 4.80
North American Review	5.00	" 5.50
Popular Science Monthly	5.00	" 5.50
Century Magazine	4.00	" 5.00
Harper's Magazine	4.00	" 4.50
Harper's Weekly	4.00	" 4.75
Scribner's Magazine	3.00	" 4.00
Independent	3.00	" 4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, The Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,
 Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
 REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
 (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
 321 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (Ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Post-paid. 25 cts.

FARM NOTES.

THE CULTIVATION OF CELERY.

In reply to the inquiry of the Nebraska subscriber who asks how to plant and cultivate celery, we give the following: Sow in the open ground as soon as it is fit to work in April, and keep clear of weeds until the time of planting, in June and July. The tops should be shorn off once or twice before planting so as to insure "stocky" plants, which suffer less on being transplanted. Plant in rows three feet apart for the dwarf varieties, and four to five feet for the larger sorts, and set six inches apart in rows. If the weather is dry at the time of planting great care should be taken that the roots are properly "firmed" by pressing the side of each plant gently with the foot; this compacts the soil and partially excludes the air from the roots until new rootlets are formed, which will usually be in forty-eight hours, after which all danger is over. After the planting of the celery is completed, nothing further is to be done for six or seven weeks, except running through between the rows with the cultivator or hoe, and freeing the plants from weeds. About the middle of August we begin the "earthing up," necessary for the blanching and whitening of that which is wanted for use during the months of September, October and November. The first operation is that of "handling." After all the soil has been drawn up against the plant with the hoe, it is further drawn close around each plant by the hand, firm enough to keep the leaves in an upright position and prevent them from spreading. This being done, more soil is drawn against the row (either by the plow or hoe, as circumstances require), so as to keep the plant in this upright position. The blanching process must, however, be finished by the spade, which is done by digging the soil from between the two rows, and banking it clear up to the top on each side of the row of celery. —Farm, Field and Stockman.

CURRENT GROWING.

Current growing offers a favorable opening to the small fruit culturist. It is a branch of horticulture that is rarely overdone, and in which the profits, under favorable circumstances, are very large. Cuttings should be made and set in August or September, so that they may get started before the soil is chilled by the cooler weather of autumn. If one has not any bushes of his own from which to take cuttings, the cutting may be bought for a small price from the nursery men; and this method of starting a plantation will be much better than to make the outlay that would be required should one-year or two-year roots be purchased. The cuttings must be from the shoots of the present year's growth, should be six or eight inches long, and placed vertically in the soil with an inch exposed at the top.

BENEFITS OF TILE DRAINING.

A writer in the Drainage Journal claims that the tiled drain renders a very great service to the land, not only by draining it of surplus water, but also by aerating it; that is, forcing the air through it. This writer says that this process is going on in both winter and summer, if the outlet of the drain is not submerged. In the winter the air passes in at the outlet of the drain, and being warmed by the earth to a higher temperature than the outside atmosphere, expands and forces its way upward through the soil toward the surface. In the summer the reverse is the case. The air above the surface of the ground being warm and the air in the drain being cool, the latter naturally flows down and out of the mouth of the drain, while the warm air from above passes down through the soil into the drain. When it is remembered that the nitrifying organisms in the soil need an abundance of air to perform their work, it will be readily understood how serviceable a drain of any kind, if rightly constructed, really is.

BRIEFS.

The potato beetle will attack all kinds of plants when it appears if the potatoes are not up. Tomatoes for an early sup-

The Superior remedy for all diseases originating in impure blood;

the

MEDICINE

which may always be relied upon to give the best satisfaction, is

AYER'S Sarsaparilla
Cures others, will cure you

ply must be examined daily to guard against the beetle. The beetle will leave the potato to attack the egg plant, and it will require but a few hours for such plants to be entirely destroyed.

W. H. Watkins says the following is a sure preventive of injury to cabbage from the cabbage worm. We are trying it on some plants to see how it works here in Illinois: Break off one of the bottom leaves and cover the top of the plant with it. As it dries up and gets away replace it with a fresh one.—Exchange.

The first cost of working land to the proper depth is considerable, but when once done and the other impediments—that is, rocks, stones or stumps—disposed of, there is an annual saving of time and tools in the work.

The wool clip in Australia this year is the largest in the history of the colonies and will reach $100,000,000 in value. There will be 20,000,000 bushels of wheat for export from Australia.

When feeding to fatten, all things considered, it is best to feed dry food. During growth the pigs will thrive better on a ration of ground oats, shorts and oil meal, with sweet skim milk.

Put wood ashes and salt where the hogs can get at them every day and hour in the day to take a lick. If pulverized charcoal and sulphur are added no harm will be done.

Don't trust to memory. When putting seed away mark each package or vessel. It will not come amiss to put 1891 on as well as the name and variety.

The premium list for the winter exhibition of the Illinois State Horticultural Society to be held in Olney, Illinois, December 8 to 10, is already out.

Be careful now and when the pastures begin to fail, give the cows some grain, if indeed you are not doing it all the time.

Gather the seed when ripe; don't let it shell off. The first matured is the best. The first matured will shell first.

The Downs and other mutton breeds rank first in Iowa, where sheep are increasing in numbers and quality.

Wheat middlings is a good material for growth, and corn one of the very best to fatten.

In pruning, all large wounds should be covered with white lead and oil.

Apples always look nice in the orchard that has a high fence around it.

The bees garner what would otherwise go to waste.

Use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer and your thin gray locks will thicken up and be restored to their youthful color, vigor, and beauty.

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS.
ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escapements, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgia movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00
With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50
" " " " (11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer-head, horse-head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00
With the Cynosure one year, hunting case..... 23.00
With the Cynosure one year, open face..... 19.75

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Best Things In Cookery

Are always made with the ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest rolls, biscuit, cake, etc., and which the most expert pastry cooks declare is unobtainable by the use of any other raising agent.

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER, besides rendering the food more palatable and wholesome, is, because of its higher leavening power, the most economical.

The ROYAL makes more and better food than any other baking powder because it is the purest.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The sentence of the Rev. Howard McQueary, of Canton, Ohio, suspended for six months for alleged heterodox utterances, has been changed by Bishop Leonard, of the Episcopal church, to perpetual suspension.

Hydrophobia is said to have developed among two herds of cattle near Boone, Iowa.

At Worcester Wednesday the Prohibitionists of Massachusetts nominated a State ticket, headed by Charles H. Kimball, of Lynn, for Governor. William Oscar Armstrong, a colored man, was nominated for Auditor.

Fire Wednesday at New York destroyed the building occupied by Schillenberg, clothing; H. Baum, milliner; A. B. Pouch, advertising novelties, and the G. W. Greed Company, manufacturers of women's undergarments, causing a loss of $100,000; fully insured. Twenty thousand dollars loss was caused by fire at Strong City, Kan.

Wednesday the twenty-second annual convention of the Master Car and Locomotive Painters' Association of the United States and Canada began at Washington. J. A. Gohen, of Huntington, Va., was elected President.

A receiver has been appointed for Amasa Lyon & Co., umbrella manufacturers at New York. The liabilities are $76,000, and the assets $65,000.

Twenty persons were injured by the wrecking of an excursion train on the Iowa Central Railroad, near Grinnell, Iowa, Thursday.

There was shipped to Mexico from Ottawa, Ill., Thursday, the first train-load of fire-proof material ever sent from one country to another.

The Michigan M. E. Conference voted Thursday, 146 to 34, in favor of admitting women as delegates to general conferences. The announcement of the result of the vote was greeted with applause.

The President issued a proclamation Thursday reserving certain forest bearing lands in the Yellowstone Park region.

Thursday a young man and a young woman committed suicide by jumping into Niagara River just above the falls.

Fire in the carpenter shop of Thomas Stevenson at Albany, N. Y., caused a loss of $45,000; insured for $15,000.

Fireman Luby was crushed to death by falling walls. Flames destroyed the Mount Pleasant House at Amberst, Mass. Loss, $35,000; insurance $13,000. At Birmingham, Conn., the Derby Rubber Company's mill was burned. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $30,000.

A shortage of $30,000 has been discovered in the accounts of J. A. O'Brien, treasurer of the Catholic Knights of America, at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. M. Jackson, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was elected Grand Matron of the Order Eastern Star, at Clinton, Iowa, Friday.

Jacob H. Shaffer and his daughter Ida were killed and his daughter Ella was seriously hurt at a railroad crossing near Warren, Ohio, Friday.

Individual paid-in subscriptions to the World's Fair now aggregate $3,000,000 and the city will soon be called on to issue its $5,000,000 in bonds.

Chicago's World's Fair Commissioners returned to New York from their trip abroad with hearty pledges of European support.

Heirs of Joshua Garrett claim thousands of acres in Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Delaware Iron Works, at Newcastle, Del., were gutted by fire, and 800 hands are thrown out of employment. The loss will amount to $300,000.

By an accident to a scaffold nine men were thrown into the river at Pittsburg.

Charles Dost of Dayton, Ohio, found his only daughter at St. Cloud, Minn., after a search of twenty-seven years.

Near Beaver Brook station, Colo., a Union Pacific passenger train jumped a curve, fell down an embankment, and injured 23 persons, 5 of whom will die.

At Denver, Col., Friday Mrs. J. Stewart and her 2-year-old baby were burned to death, as a result of the woman having attempted to start a fire with kerosene.

A census bulletin issued Friday shows that the estimated value of real and personal property in Kansas is between eight and nine hundred million dollars, and that the mortgage indebtedness is $235,485,108.

Petroleum of superior quality has been discovered near Colingo, Cal.

Two stone slabs, one of them bearing the inscription, "June 1, 1716," and the other the date 1716, were found near La-

Harpe, Ill., recently. They are supposed to mark the resting places of LaSalle's explorers.

The assessment of the railway property in Indiana is $160,809,575, against $69,762,676 last year. The increase on the Pennsylvania Road alone is over $14,000,000.

It is reported that Andrew Carnegie and other iron and coke men are about to establish a steel plant on the Pacific coast.

By the terrible earthquake shock at San Salvador, C. A., and vicinity, last Wednesday, it is reported that hundreds of persons were killed and many others injured.

W. P. Dame, wholesale dealer in paper and cards at Boston, has liabilities of $75,000; assets $45,000.

The Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends Thursday elected U. H. Morse, of New York, Councilor. F. V. Buschick, of Chicago, was elected trustee.

The Dairymen's and Farmers' Club of Elgin and vicinity was formed Thursday and elected S. N. Wright President and A. W. Hutchins Secretary.

The steamer City of New York arrived at Queenstown Tuesday, making the best record for the eastern trip across the Atlantic in five days, twenty-two hours and fifty minutes.

Suit was begun in the Elgin city court Tuesday to wind up the affairs of the Preston Reduction Company.

The American Tin-plate Company was incorporated Wednesday with a capital stock of $300,000 to manufacture tin-plate near Elwood, Ind.

Articles of incorporation of the Tamaroa and Mount Vernon Railway, principal office at Chester, Ill., capital stock $500,000, were filed with the Secretary of State of Illinois Wednesday.

Shipments of wheat in Kansas have become so heavy as to blockade the railroads.

Chapin Hall, the gift of Mr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, to Beloit College, was dedicated Tuesday.

Scarlet fever has broken out in the State school at Sparta, Wis. About fifty children are afflicted.

FOREIGN.

A telegram from the United States Minister at Copenhagen to the Secretary of State announced that the restrictions on the importation of American pork into Denmark had been removed.

The English labor congress passed a resolution favoring an eight-hour law.

JOHN G. FEE.

An Autobiography.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, postpaid, $1.00.

President J. Blanchard says: "Of all the books which the fall of slavery has produced, none surpasses this little biography of Mr. Fee, the instruction it affords as to the nature of slavery and its workings in families and churches, and, finally, in the war of States."

Until the first of November next, old or new subscribers to the Cynosure can secure this remarkable autobiography and the Cynosure one year for only $2.00.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TO YOU

FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or

SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or

SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or

McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ASTHMA POSITIVELY CURED
By the Swedish Asthma Cure. Sample mailed free. Address COLLINS BROS. DRUG CO., St. Louis, Mo.

FILL YOUR PURSE and improve your prospects. Why not? You can do so honorably, surely. Have you read our illustrated advertisement in the first number of this paper, this month? Better do so, if you haven't. We can and will, if you please, teach you quickly and without PAY, how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. You can commence at home, in any part of America. We start you. Both sexes. All ages. Easy to learn and manage. All particulars FREE. Better write at once, if you haven't already. Address Stinson & Co., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

HARVEY, ILLINOIS.

THE GREAT MANUFACTURING AND TEMPERANCE TOWN.

A good investment. About two miles south of Chicago. The manufacturing enterprises located during the past year represent a capital of nearly $4,000,000.

ACADEMY ADDITION

which corners into within 4 Blocks of the very geographical center of Harvey, and is the educational center on which the HARVEY INDUSTRIAL ACADEMY is being built, is located between 147th Street and Calumet River. Look at No. 9 in the illustrations. The completion of this building and the opening of the Fall term will largely increase the value of all property in Harvey. The President of one of the largest manufacturing concerns in Harvey said that the coming of this institution would add more to the Real Estate values than the coming of any factory now located there. Those who purchase now in ACADEMY ADDITION buy at first prices. It is in this Addition that the Manager of the Pullman Palace Car Co. of New Orleans has purchased 48 lots. Houses being erected on this addition rent for 30 per cent of cost of house and lot. These are opportunities for investment seldom offered. It is crossed by the proposed Elevated Road to the city. It is the nearest to the World's Fair Site, a 15 minutes' ride; over a half mile of river frontage. Lots from $200 and upward. Payments to suit. We will mail readers of THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE a Plat of the whole of Harvey free, as we show the whole town to all who come, and on account of the superior advantages in beauty of location, natural drainage, etc., it is not surprising that such rapid sales are being made in ACADEMY ADDITION.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS, & CO.,
161 LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

BICYCLES Given Away FREE. WORTH $45. FREE TO BOYS AND GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE. WITHOUT ONE CENT OF MONEY.

If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle they can obtain it free without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1,000 or more.

DESCRIPTION OF BICYCLE: The wheels are 26 inches with crescent steel rims and molded rubber tires, and run on hardened steel cone bearings, adjustable to wear; geared to 46 inches; detachable cranks; four to five inches throw; frame finely enamelled, with nickel trimmings. Each machine is supplied with tool bag, wrench and oiler. Equal in quality to those sold on the market for $45.00. We have both boys' and girls' styles. We deliver the bicycle free of all charges anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEAK CO., 234 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 2.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,117.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:		CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments.....	1	Suspicious Inflation of
Iowa's New Agent.....	8	Land Values; The
Jury Trials Abolished.....	8	Lodge Rampant in Mis-
The Pope Favors Repub-		souri; What the Bishop
lics.....	8	Says of that Coat at
One Phase of Masonic		Treves; Utah and the
Deception.....	8	Mormons—II.....	5,6
Two Veterans of the Cross		NEW ENGLAND LETTER.....	4
on Lodge Iniquity.....	8	WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4
Berea College.....	9	Sterling Opinions of Ma-
Personal Mention.....	9	sorry.....	6
CONTRIBUTIONS:		LITERATURE.....
Three Addresses.....	1	OBITUARY.....	7
Some False Assumptions		LODGE NOTES.....	7
of Protectionists.....	2	AGENTS AND LECTURERS.....	7
A Summer Visit to the		THE N. C. A.....	7
Sea Shore.....	2	THE HOME.....	10
SELECTED:		TEMPERANCE.....
The United Brethren.....	3	BIBLE LESSON.....	12
High License No Remedy		RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
for Intemperance.....	3	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
REFORM NEWS:		MARKETS.....
The Anti-secret Reform		HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
in Iowa.....	4	FARM NOTES.....	15

Rev. H. H. Hinman, of Oberlin, Ohio, will spend October in Wisconsin, delivering lectures on secret societies at various points. Friends desiring to hear him will please notify us at this office.

Bro. W. B. Stoddard writes that he is to spend the month of October in the State of New York, and that if any of the friends of Reform desire him to lecture in certain localities during his visit, they should address him at once at Washington, D. C. They will find him an interesting speaker.

The Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, at Bloomington, on Saturday last, voted on the eligibility of women as lay delegates to the electoral and general conferences of the church. A three-fourths vote was required to carry the question in the affirmative; the ballot stood 132 for the affirmative, and 71 against the proposition. This practically defeats female lay representation in that conference until next year. Women in the churches have become such prominent and effective workers, that to deny them privileges that will tend to make them more efficient as members seems rather harsh and injudicious.

Washington is a remarkable city, and seems, like Athens, to be given up largely to the worship of many gods, besides an equal amount of devotion to the lodge. An intelligent correspondent, writing to us last week, says: "In looking around, I find more than 325 secret lodges in this city, and more forming. You cannot say too much against secret organizations, for they are corrupting the whole land, making law and order of no account—the laws not worth the paper on which they are written. Notice the decision of the jury in the Hampton murder case and others which I could name. They make a sensation for a time, but are soon forgotten." This is but another instance in which the lodge is usurping the functions of the courts, defrauding justice of its rights, and making innocent men to suffer, while the guilty members of the lodges go unpunished. This evil is becoming too common long to be borne in silence, and a terrible day of reckoning is approaching.

To the correspondent in Hartford, Conn., who inquires about the alleged abduction of Miss Vera Ava in this city, several days ago, and to others who may be interested in her case, we wish to say that as soon as the real facts of the affair can be secured, due notice of them will be taken by the Cynosure; but at present her experiences are so mixed up with daily newspaper exaggerations and surmises, that to sort out, dust, and inventory the stock of an old junk shop would be a more satisfactory task.

The Church Unity Conference, held last week at the Kenwood Evangelical church, in this city, was quite well attended by the friends and advocates of Church Union, which proposes to abolish denominational distinctions among orthodox Christians on the following basis: The union of all true believers in Christ—a union that shall be both spiritual and apparent to the world; all the believers in a given locality are rightly the church of that locality, and ought to recognize each other as members of this church; such a union will tend to promote the elevation of the moral and spiritual life of the church, and seek the evangelization of the world, but especially the destitute regions of our own land. These principles are advocated by many earnest, sincere Christians, and are believed to be those that will prevail in the millennium of our Lord.

The Committee on Temperance at last week's session of the Des Moines (Iowa) Methodist Conference made no uncertain sound in its report as to the status of that church on the question of Prohibition, which it advocates as the only effective method of dealing with the rum traffic, urging that destruction, instead of regulation, of the liquor traffic, is the only policy which Christians can consistently indorse. Expressions condemning special executive clemency towards violators of the Prohibition laws; praying against evil and then voting in favor of it, and party attempts to eripule the enforcement of Prohibition, are also included—"maintaining that party alliance with the outlawed saloon is rank treason against the State." Prohibitionists are proud of Iowa, and earnestly desire to see her firm and triumphant in this eventful war in which she is engaged.

As we go to press this week, we are placed in possession of the details of a great swindle perpetrated upon the mountain settlers in West Virginia. The fraud was instituted by the formation of what purported to be a secret order—a branch of what was alleged to be the "National Assembly," said to be a patriotic institution, having for its object the relief of the national government. Four of these "assemblies" were organized, two at St. Albans and Charleston, and one each in Lincoln and Boone counties. The order proposed to put into the possession of the government the gold coin hoarded up by the people, to the end that the government might be enabled to meet its obligations and be saved from national repudiation. The organization was of the most secret character and the meetings were held in the woods, in ravines, etc., and never in a house. All admitted were bound to secrecy by a most solemn oath. It was stated by one of the conspirators that the organization had its central office at Washington, and was authorized and sanctioned by the Treasury Department, which was in the greatest distress for gold. The department, he explained, had plenty of paper money and had agreed that for all the gold coins paid into the assembly and certified by the officers there would be paid five times the sum in paper currency. Nothing less than $200 would be accepted from any one member. In the most surprising manner, the unsophisticated mountaineers embraced the opportunities offered for thus investing their money, and they begged, borrowed, and mortgaged to obtain gold coin for this truly "sinking fund." Thousands upon thousands of dollars were sunk before the postal authorities proclaimed the scheme a fraud and caused the arrest of two of the three leaders in it—Henry Ash and Geo. W. Rose. Robert F. Lively, the third one, escaped, and at last accounts was still at large. The amount secured by them is estimated at about $50,000.

THREE ADDRESSES.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

PEACE.

Hon. Josiah Quincy spoke in a Boston theatre on Peace. He said: When the United States Constitution was drafted, in 1787, there were only three Republics. Now, of the forty-four governments in the world, twenty-three are Republics, and of the twenty-one remaining, only seven are absolute monarchies, and fourteen are limited. Wars are so destructive that it is impossible for them to continue. An air-ship can drop explosives upon a city and destroy it, and there is no defense. Besides, nations are becoming such near neighbors that war is as unlikely as between the States of our Union. Furthermore, Christianity is leavening national life until the watchword is running from land to land: "Peace on earth, and good will to men."

HIGHER CRITICISM.

Rev. N. West, D.D., spoke at Crescent Beach, Boston, on "Higher Criticism." He said: There are two kinds of criticism, higher and lower. Lower criticism deals with the meaning of a passage; high, with its genuineness; one criticises the text, the other tells us whether we have a text to criticise. The higher criticism is divided into two branches, the literary and the historical. The literary assumes that the same writer will use the same class of words uniformly. A change of words proves a different author. In the first chapter of Genesis a certain Hebrew word is used for God. A little farther on, another word is used. There must be, therefore, a different writer. Farther on, another word still. So they prove that there are at least thirteen writers in Genesis. Therefore Moses is not the author of it. But look! Horace's Odes are entirely different from his Satires. This proves that Horace did not write his poems. Lord Macauley wrote his essay on "The Human Understanding" early in life, and his essay on "The French Revolution" late in his career. They are as unlike as a black and white man. Therefore, he did not write his own essays. No critic can advocate the literary theory and keep his face straight. It is effete and vanishing away. The literary theory is maintained by Prof. Briggs, of Union, and Prof. Evans, of Lane Seminars. Here is a sample: From the time that God made the covenant with Abraham until Jacob went down into Egypt was 215 years. The time of the affliction of Israel in Egypt was 430 years. The law was given three months after the Exodus. So that from the making of the covenant with Abraham until the giving of the law was 645 years. Paul says, in Galatians, that from the confirming of the Abrahamic covenant until the law was 430 years. Therefore, say the critics, Paul was mistaken, and that passage was not inspired. But, Paul did not say, from the making of the covenant but from the confirming of the covenant. The word for make signifies to divide, to cut in two, as Abraham divided the victim, and the smoking furnace and burning lamp passed between the parts. But the word for confirm means to swear an oath. God confirmed the covenant in Isaac with an oath, and unto Jacob for a law, at Bethel; then at Mamre, and again at Bethel, before he went down into Egypt. The confirmation extended over 215 years. Now, Paul says: From the period of confirmation to the law was 430 years. And that is true. Where are the critics? Again; in 1 Kings 6: 1, it is said that from the Exodus until Solomon began the temple, was 480 years. The fact is, it was 645 years. So the writer is mistaken 165 years, and that passage is not inspired.

But what are the facts? God's method of keeping chronological tables differs from ours. In Matthew it is said that from Abraham to David was fourteen generations; from David to the captivity was fourteen generations, and from the captivity to Christ was fourteen generations. Now we know that there were more generations. Sometimes the father, son and grandson bear the same name, so that this table is not intended for an accurate measure of time. God's chronology follows two lines: the kingly from David, and the high priest from Aaron. In the passage in Kings referred to, the high priest line is adopted. From the anointing of Aaron until Solomon began the temple was 645 years. But during the Judges, the people apostatized and there were no high priests. This continued seven generations, and lasted 165 years. God makes no account of that. It is as though it had not been. Leaving that out, there were 480 years of high priests' administrations from Aaron to the temple, so that the writer said just what he intended, and our critics are unhorsed.

Paul said: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable," etc., etc. The new translation renders this: "Every Scripture that is inspired is also profitable." Why did they make this change? Not one of the Greek fathers renders it thus. No version justifies it. No law of Greek syntax, or Greek grammar, sustains it. No passage in the Greek classics can be adduced as a parallel. Why did they change it? It was a gratuitous concession to the higher critics. It was a base betrayal of our Bible.

A word as to prophecy. Any one with eyes open sees that foreign missionary activity in our times is unprecedented. Never anything like it was known in all time. It is also patent that there is a disposition in all the churches to question every thing. Breach of trust, want of confidence, are common. Christ said, in Matthew 24, "when brother shall betray brother;" and "because iniquity abounds the love of many shall wax cold;" "and when this Gospel shall be preached in all nations for a witness, then cometh the end." We are very near that time.

LODGERY.

Ex-President Rev. J. Blanchard gave an exceedingly interesting talk in the parlors of your New England agent, on Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. He traced the connection between the idols which Solomon's wives brought into Israel, and the false worship accompanying the altars of the lodge in our land. These things they sacrifice to devils, and not to God. After the Morgan murder forty-five out of every fifty members left the lodge in the North. The order went South, where it flourished. The war of the Rebellion was concocted in the lodge-room. At the close of the war the Union soldiers brought the lodge with them from the South. It has since flourished in the North. The government is manipulated by it. The churches are paralyzed. Business is controlled by it. The press is confronted by the spectre. He used to say, in beginning an abolition speech: "Many slave-holders will get to heaven before me, but the system of slavery is an abomination before God." So he says, Many members of the lodge will get to glory, but the whole system of secrecy is a curse to humanity.

Listening to his thrilling narration of facts and incidents, I could not help saying to myself: "Here is a David that God has raised up to slay the giant of secretism. Though his locks are silver, his heart is young and his hand wielded, with unerring precision, 'the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God.'"

Boston, Mass.

A feature of London of special interest to the temperance reformer is the rapid increase of the new order of coffee-houses, which are becoming almost as numerous in the city as the public-houses themselves. The publicans complain that a very large percentage of their old customers now get their lunch at these establishments.

SOME FALSE ASSUMPTIONS OF PROTECTIONISTS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The theory of protection by tariff legislation is based on the assumption that the people of any nation are under no obligation to consider the interests of the people of other nations, but are solely concerned as to what is beneficial to themselves. This is the old heathen idea, that the people of different countries are natural enemies; that whatever will benefit one will work injury to the others; that all claims of practical kindness stop at international lines, and that God's law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," does not apply to governments, and means only, at most, the neighbor who is a fellow-citizen. It is on this principle that our statesmen have thought it right to restrain, and sometimes prohibit, the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as greatly injurious to the people of our nation; but if the poison was to be carried to heathen Africa, or to the people of any other nation, then it is a matter of no concern to us. So, too, if an increase of tariff on manufactured silks (so as to be practically prohibitive except to the very wealthy) works great injury to the laboring people of France and Italy, then the supposed benefit that we reap at the cost of their suffering is something to be proud of and rejoiced in. If the makers of tin-plate in Wales are, in consequence of our tariff, thrown out of employment, or have their wages greatly reduced, it is not regarded as an evil; if so, our interests are only enhanced. We talk of "the pauper labor of Europe," and yet when that labor is devoted to the production of articles which we have never been able to adequately produce, we still seek to make it less remunerative, so that the laborer shall become an actual instead of a metaphorical pauper.

The same selfish spirit is manifested towards States and sections. Thus the Mills tariff bill was framed to favor the South, as against the North, and the McKinley bill favors the North at the expense of the South. This is regarded as legitimate by those who hold national, sectional and class interests as the sole object of consideration, and know nothing of a world-wide law of justice and humanity. True, charity begins at home, but it does not stop there.

A second false assumption is, that a vast revenue may be collected by a great number of paid officials and placed in the national treasury. If only such revenue is collected at our custom houses, then it is not a tax that anyone pays; at least, it is not a tax paid by the people who consume the articles on which the duties have been collected. Mr. McKinley, in his recent speeches, held that since no citizen of Ohio could show a receipt for any tariff tax, therefore he had paid none. The logic of the man who would make boats run up stream by the force of the current, is fully equal to this. All revenues collected by government are paid, directly or indirectly, by somebody's labor. In the end it is the laborer who pays. Suppose this enormous burden is divided between the producers and consumers—between the laborers of Europe and the laborers of America; it is none the less a burden, and a burden borne by the world's toiling masses. Somebody gets the benefit of it; but it is neither the producing nor the consuming laborer.

A third false assumption is that the interests of any class can be fostered by legislation, except at the expense of every other class. To say nothing of the effect of tariff legislation on manufactures, let us look at it as it affects farmers. There are what are called "protective duties" on potatoes and eggs. In times of dearth and scarcity—say one year in five or ten—the duty on potatoes enhances the price and adds to the profits of farmers who raise a surplus. But this same increase in price is a burden that falls on all consumers, on all laborers, especially the poor, and under circumstances when they are least able to bear it. The consumers greatly outnumber the producers, and are taxed for their benefit. The duty on eggs is a constant tax, which benefits a few farmers, but by increasing the cost of living and the possible comforts of all laborers, especially in our sea-board cities.

A fourth false assumption is that tariffs do not, as a rule, enhance prices to the consumers. It is admitted that the removal of the tariff on sugar has greatly reduced the price. It is less now than it was one year ago by more than the amount of the tariff. It is admitted that our reciprocity treaty with Germany will increase the price of pork to the American farmer, because it is made cheaper to the German consumer by the removal of the duty he has had to pay; but it is denied that the increased duties on tin-plate, and cotton ties,—neither of which are produced to the extent to which we produce sugar,—are made to cost more to the consumer. This is strange logic.

A fifth false assumption is, that when, under an increased tariff, the prices of imported articles are reduced, it is the increase of duty that causes the reduction. This is an example of "port hoc ergo propter hoc," with a vengeance. Why were the duties on wool increased by the McKinley tariff? Surely to increase its price. Had it been supposed that the price would have fallen every farmer would have protested. Yet the prices of all foreign and domestic wools are naturally lower than a year ago.

Was it the tariff that caused the reduction? Not at all, but increased production and the gradual shrinking of prices all over the world. The same causes have prevented a material increase in prices on manufactured goods on which the duty has been increased.

A sixth false assumption is that we can add to the advantages and wages of American labor, and at the same time shut out the competition of European laborers. Our ocean borders were once vast barriers for our protection. Now they are simply ferries, over which men pass and re-pass within a week. Formerly the doings of the American people were slowly and imperfectly known by the masses of Europeans. Now, every event that affects their interests is instantly flashed in all their cities. Increase of wages is an invitation for them to come and do our work. We cannot protect our laborers from European competition except by the prohibition of their immigration. We cannot build a Chinese wall around us if we would. We cannot altogether separate ourselves from the rest of mankind; and any system of legislation that rests on such an assumption, will in the end be destructive to our interests, as well as that of others.

Oberlin, Ohio.

A SUMMER VISIT TO THE SEA SHORE.

BY MRS. A. E. KELLOGG.

[Revelation 22: 1, 2.]

"And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." All this, in the holy city which is lighted by the glory of God, and the Lamb is the light thereof. The point in this glorious vision by which I am specially impressed is the monthly yield of the fruit which grows upon the banks of the river which proceeds from the very throne of God and the Lamb. These trees, true and steady, year in and year out, every month scatter their healing leaves among the suffering nations, and gather strength from the river of God to mature the fruit suited to each successive month, while from the same source new leaves continually burst forth and mature for medicine.

Now, like this wonderful tree, the Cynosure has been toiling, gathering and scattering, week in and week out, through all the summer time, while one, at least, of your faithful readers has been idling by the shore of the Eastern sea. I am not at all sure but the making of the summer months, exceptional in regard to ripening fruits of holiness and scattering leaves of healing among sin-sick souls, is a device of Anti-christ to retard the work of healing and saving. Two months at least out of the twelve are left blank, and another gone, before matters are adjusted for the work.

This wonderful tree bare twelve manner of fruits—fruits meet for every month in the year, with no exception! Do we miss the nourishment adapted to the summer time, by not being in our place when it falls? My own experience and observation hints as much.

I left my home just as the trees had put on their summer dress; and these leaves will have been cast aside before I look upon them again. How much has been missed, who can tell?—and what has been gained? Very little, I fear, as the rule seems to be to live to one's self—to be satisfied simply to be.

My summer has been spent at an old New England village, situated on an inlet of Buzzard's Bay; the Indian name by which it was known in colonial times having given place to one not at all in harmony with the place, but adopted (tradition tells us) at the suggestion of a wealthy man who settled there, and whose wealth it was expected would be left to improve and beautify "Marion," as it is now called. But the wealth was bestowed elsewhere, while the name abides. The place is a favorite summer resort for many quite celebrated persons from Boston and New York. Last year it had quite a "boom" in real estate, from the fact that President and Mrs. Cleveland spent the summer there, and it was reported that he intended building a summer home overlooking the Bay. Great, therefore, was the disappointment when, instead, he purchased a place at Tudor Haven, on the opposite shore. The temperature of the water makes the place very attractive for swimming and bathing, although there is no beach. It is also a quiet harbor, where multitudes of sailboats lie at anchor, looking very pretty at rest; but beautiful when, with sails set, they dance over the waters like things of life. Everybody sails, and nearly every one swims. Even the carriages which ply between the town and the station are called barges; so everything speaks of the sea.

There are a Congregational, an Episcopal and a Universalist church. The Episcopal pulpit is ably filled during the summer by Rev. Mr. Brooks (brother to the Bishop) for one month, and by Rev. Mr. Tompkins, of your city, for another, etc. I only attended the Congregational church, and listened to the resident clergyman, who is well reported of by the people. There are many pleasant drives—one to Waltham, which is mentioned in Colonial history, five miles distant; Mattapoisett, about the same, in an opposite direction, where you get a fine view of the Bay. By turning aside, and driving three-quarters of a mile into the woods, we visited a lady who says that on the last day of September she will be one hundred and eight years old. She lives entirely alone, takes care of her small house and her garden, except the plowing; converses intelligently, and is in possession of her faculties. She has grandchildren living who would gladly take care of her, but she refuses to leave the place where she has lived sixty-three years.

The city of New Bedford is but twelve miles from Marion. It is a fine old-place; some of its residence streets are beautiful. You get a distant view of the great cotton mills in crossing the "long bridge." Considerable shipping is also in view. One could spend a week very profitably in either or both of these old towns, which are reached by the Old Colony Railroad and its branches.

I should fail to impress you with the fact that Marion is situated in an obscure corner of God's heritage, if I did not mention that it has been overlooked by those aggressive and nearly everywhere-present agents of Anti-christ, viz, the saloon and the Jesuits; so that the maids of the summer visitors must needs charter a barge, now and then, for a drive to Waltham in order to be shriven and strengthened in the faith, or carry their burden back whence they came; in which case, it is said, they would miss a pleasant drive, and a gay Sunday, notwithstanding the errand on which they go. And only by going to a neighboring town can the thirsty for the fiery drink satisfy their craving.

The style of architecture is very primitive, as it might well be; the cottage which was occupied by our party is said to have been built one hundred years ago, and seems to have been constructed on this wise: A substantial stack of chimneys was erected, intending a fireplace for each of the three rooms on the ground floor, with one on the second. In two of the fireplaces were inserted eyes in which swing iron cranes with hooks on which to hang the kettle. This being done, and the flues perfect, not forgetting the brick oven with a place beneath to store the kindling, the house was built around it, very laboriously it would seem, as it is covered, roof and sides, with shingles made by hand; and, although innocent of paint, still in good repair. The cottage is shaded by beautiful linden trees, the only objection to which is, that they grow impatient of their summer dress, and before visitors leave, are as bare of clothes as the summer bathers, which, like the trees, would look more modest clothed and in their right mind, with this difference, that it is not optional with the trees. One thing struck me as being phenomenal, i. e., the skill which the habitual swimmers attained in their play with the element supposed to belong to creatures with fins and scales. I saw feats of diving from which I turned away with a sickened feeling at the temerity of boys and girls; not satisfied with a reasonable plunge from a sufficient height, but climbing upon a wood-pile at least eight feet high, dived off it, pell-mell, into the water, one turning a summersault backward into the sea. I could not look, and wondered if it paid, any more than the flying trapeze, to risk one's life in trying to learn to do what a monkey could do without trying.

A month more, and the summer people will have departed, and the front doors of city houses will be opened, whether the inmates have been to the mountains, the sea, or in the back-parlor and the sewing room with seamstress and dress-maker, getting ready for the gay season. It is all one to us, and we too will march on.

Monroe, Mich.

THE UNITED BRETHREN.

The trouble in the United Brethren church is thus stated by the Knight, the Ohio organ of the secret Knights of Pythias: "Our readers will remember that the reform element of the United Brethren church succeeded in adopting a new creed or confession of faith at their general conference held at York, Pa. A very small number of hide-bound irreconcilables left the conference and set up for themselves, re-affirming the principle that no man belonging to a secret society was fit for any other place than Pluto's domain. Being left in the possession of the church and its properties, the 'liberals' have gone on administering the same in proper form. The hard-shells, instead of carrying their case to heaven, went into the secular courts and tried to dispossess the 'brethren.' The decisions of the courts have been uniformly in favor of the 'liberals.' It will be seen that the spirit of persecution which has been exercised against those who are members of secret benevolent societies has received its eternal quietus in this large and influential church. Those who hold to the old obsolete ideas are so few in numbers and influence that they are harmless, their last fangs having been drawn by the above decision."

If such a commendation is of any value to the United Brethren, or a source of joy to those who have become "liberals" in that church, they are welcome to all the benefits to be derived from it. On the other hand, we print, below, a letter from Bro. W. R. Morley, of Brush Creek, Iowa, showing the "true inwardness" of these same "liberals:"

"The 'liberals' of the U. B. church have commenced suit against the radicals for possession of their church, suit to come off in November. I understand that there are only two members that gave anything towards building it, and they gave only five dollars each. The radicals, with the outside help, paid the remainder of the needed $2,200."

SECRET SOCIETIES WELCOMED.

Bishop Weaver, of the U. B. church, in his cross-examination, June 25th, 1891, in the Printing Establishment case, tells us how the Liberal church welcomes Freemasons and Odd-fellows, and only rejects such secret orders as Molly Maguires, Nihilists and White Caps—as though any rule were needed to keep out these last named societies! We quote from the official stenographer's reports:

(Cross-examination by Mr. Young.)

Question. The attitude of the church, from the year 1876 down, had been one of opposition to secret societies, had it not?

Answer. Well, a majority—there always was in the church an element opposed to that legislation.

Q. The leading members, however, had strongly expressed themselves, had they not, against secret societies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has there been a change in the church in that respect?

A. In the opinion and views of the church?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I so understand it; yes, sir.

Q. Does the present Liberal church admit into membership members of secret societies?

A. It does.

Q. Without disciplining them?

A. It does.

Q. Has the present Liberal church defined, in any way, the organizations which it regards as secret societies?

A. It has not officially; neither was it defined under the old, definitely.

Q. Does it admit Masons and Odd-fellows?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Members of all the various societies?

A. Except those that are known to hold principles at variance with the Word of God. They are governed by that rule in the Discipline which was adopted under the old Constitution. We have not the same now that we had under the old Constitution.

* * * * *
Q. What societies do you embrace within that prohibition [the Constitution]?

A. Well, any society that holds principles contrary to the Word of God.

Q. What are such societies?

A. I do not like to name; it is not polite or politic.

Q. Are you able to name one?

A. I should think the "Molly Maguires," "Nihilists" and "White Caps," and such like organizations.

Q. They do not usually apply for membership in the United Brethren church; you do not permit the red flag to be carried under that organization?

A. That is it; yes, sir.

What a farce it is to pretend to have a constitutional provision against secret societies, and then so interpret it? Is it not a total abandonment of that position? And how the "Liberals" have been deceiving our people by representing that the end sought was not the overthrow of law against secret societies, but a modification thereof. Who can sound the turpitude of such ecclesiastical deception!—Milton Wright, in Christian Conservator.

HIGH LICENSES NO REMEDY FOR INTemperance.

Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular argues that there is no authority for the supposition of high license advocates that a diminution in the number of licenses in any locality may be followed by a corresponding diminution of drunkenness. In support of its argument it quotes from a report of crimes and offenses in Edinburgh, Scotland, recently issued by the chief constable of that city: In 1888 there were 803 licenses issued in the city; in 1890 there were 769, a falling off of thirty-four. In 1888 the total number of persons arrested was 5,996; in 1890 the number was 6,336. The number of those arrested who were drunk at the time was 3,932 in 1888, and 4,306 in 1890. The number found drunk and unable to take care of themselves was 2,190 in 1888, and 2,235 in 1890. The ratio of the number of persons drunk when arrested to the total of the population of the place was 1.47 in 1888, and 1.56 in 1890, showing that the increase in population has nothing to do with the increase in drunkenness. The report shows that there has been a constant increase since 1854 in the number of grocers' licenses, or, in other words, in the places where consumption on the premises is forbidden. In commenting upon the figures, the Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman says: "They show as plainly as anything can show that there is no reduction of drunkenness caused by reduction of the number of licenses."

Rev. Dr. C. H. Payne takes the position that we should hold the pulpit responsible just as much for its silence as for its utterances.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Politics.—The age line.—What is a physical conscience?—A prospective queen at Wellesley College.—Some Yankee stories.

Massachusetts has held her Prohibition Convention, and nominated Messrs. Kimball and Smith for her two chief offices. The latter belongs to the Young Men's Prohibition Club, and this shows the advance which has been made since the days—not yet very far away—when the presence of a young man at such gatherings was almost, and his nomination to office quite, a phenomenon. I do not yet know how these two nominees stand on the lodge question, but the choice seems to give general satisfaction. Prohibition would easily carry the State this fall if every respectable voter would remember and act upon the advice given by Rev. Roland D. Grant, in his late address at Fryeburgh, Me.: "Do not vote to license the business; for be you a drunkard in rags, or a gentleman in broadcloth, if you both vote for license the devil himself couldn't tell the difference between the ballots." The Republican convention is now sitting in Tremont Temple, Boston, contrary to their usual custom, which is to hold their meetings in Worcester. The platform is a rather formidable one for length. It is a mistake of both the old parties, and in this respect the Prohibitionists "follow hard after them." The latter would do well to copy the wonderful brevity, simplicity and directness of our old American party platform. The only plank in it (the Republican) which was applauded when it came to the reading was the one in which they declared themselves "in favor of the most efficient legislation for the restriction, prevention and suppression of the evils arising from the sale of intoxicating liquors." Notice, it is the evils arising from the sale, not the sale itself, that they propose to restrict, prevent and suppress. The Republican party, then, according to this showing, is much in the position of a convicted sinner who wants to get rid of the consequences of his sin rather than the sin itself. Woman suffrage, of course, receives no mention. New Zealand, where woman has at last been granted full suffrage and made eligible to Parliament, is so much ahead of Massachusetts.

Speaking of the age line,—it is certainly drawn with much more latitude than formerly; and this is one reason why we hear so much less of "middle-aged people," while even the really old in point of years still hold their own in the arena of the world's activities to an extent that would have astonished the men and women of another generation. Rev. Daniel Waldo, so well known as Father Waldo, was chosen chaplain of the United States House of Representatives on his ninety-second birthday (he lived to be 102), and on his one hundredth birthday went from Syracuse to Albany and preached. And yet the parish of Cambridgeport refused to settle him as its pastor, though he was then but forty-eight, on the ground that he was too old. This was in 1810; but now, even in the ministerial profession the dead line of a man's usefulness is no longer set at fifty—the age of Dr. Bushnell when he gave to the world the most important addition New England had made to theological literature since the days of Edwards—save indeed in some Rip Van Winkle parishes, which have yet to learn that in this matter, as in others, "the world do move."

What is a "physical conscience?" Do any of us know? Dr. Arabella Kenealy, in the National Review, claims that there is such a thing, and that it stands in the same relation to the body that the moral conscience does to the soul. We have all seen people who persistently and systematically set every law of hygiene at defiance. In such their physical consciences may be said to be "scared as with a hot iron." Then there are the valetudinarians, those at the other extreme, whose fear of catching cold amounts to a mania; who eat all their food with carefulness, and measure out their drink with trembling. These are the people with morbid physical consciences from whom we may well pray to be delivered; for did you ever see a person of this class who did not try to shape everybody around him according to his own procrustean standard? And then—Heaven be praised!—we sometimes meet with the perfectly healthy and normal conscience that obeys the natural laws written in the body just as a healthy moral consciousness obeys intuitively the laws given on Sinai. Then there is the deficient physical conscience—not so much seared as naturally obtuse and blunted. The terrible aeronaut accidents, so common of late, lead one to think that not only the unfortunate performers, but the people who crowd to witness such suicidal exhibitions, are open to this charge. Perhaps we might even go a little farther. Granting, as almost every thinker would admit, that the moral and physical consciences are interlinked, and the one stands back of the other, does not the fact that public sentiment is not yet strong enough to put down exhibitions that peril life and limb a sign that we are still some distance removed from the highest type of Christianity which requires us to take a rational care not only of our own bodies but the bodies of others?

Wellesley College is to have a prospective queen among her pupils one of these days—no less than the Princess Kaiulani, heir apparent to the crown of the Sandwich Islands;—at least so says the Hawaain correspondent of the Transcript. Surely she could come to no better place to be taught, not merely the "ologies," but all that goes to the making of a noble womanhood,—one which can adorn with equal grace a palace or a cottage.

The death of James Russell Lowell has called attention anew to his "Biglow Papers," and their wonderful portrayures of Yankee character. There is a whole fund of anecdotes, which, if gathered up, might vie with the many stories told of the canny Scotch; for as Mrs. Stowe has remarked in recording her impressions of European travel, "the Scotchman and the New Englander resemble each other. The children of the Covenant and the children of the Puritan are of one blood." Here are two:

He was of Pilgrim stock, a pillar of the church "in ye olden tymes," of whom in my childhood I used to hear this incident related. He was working on his farm one day with a pair of oxen, when said oxen began to "cut up" in a manner that I fear me would have provoked some profane adjurations from the average farm hand now. What did he do? Scold them? Whip them? Not he. Nor did he even use the mild Yankee synonyms for something stronger; but he did give vent to his feelings—this New England-born Uncle Toby—by shouting desperately as the oxen started on a run down the hill: "Whoa! Bless yer souls!" Tradition does not say whether this queer benediction brought them at once to a halt. Their owner long since went to rest in the assured hope of a better resurrection; but this story lives after him.

The other is of a common, laboring man of deep religious fervor, a kind of half-preacher, half-exhorter, who on one occasion prayed thus: "O Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that we are fools. And now, dear Lord, we pray thee that thou wouldst deal with us as with fools." How could a complete casting of our own weakness and ignorance on the divine wisdom be better expressed? ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16, 1891.

President Harrison returned to Washington last night from his long vacation. He expresses himself as feeling much better than when he left Washington, and he certainly looks a great deal better than he has looked since his inauguration. Mrs. Harrison did not return with him, having concluded to spend a couple of weeks in New England before settling down for the winter.

A conference, the final result of which will have a very important bearing upon the foreign exhibits at our World's Fair, is going on at the Treasury Department as I write. Those present are Secretary Foster, the English and the German World's Fair Commissioners, and the members of the committee, which has just returned from a trip through Europe in the interest of the fair. These gentlemen say that it is absolutely necessary that some arrangement shall be made which will exempt goods intended for exhibition from the payment of tariff, if we expect the foreign manufacturers and merchants to send their goods to the fair. It has not yet been fully determined whether this can be done through a Treasury ruling or whether it will require an act of Congress.

Washington will entertain two notable church bodies this fall. Next month the Methodists will hold their great International Conference here, and on the 17th of November the Church Congress of the Episcopal church will begin its annual session here. Senator Edmunds was elected president of this Congress last year, and in the event of his being unable to preside at the coming meeting, his place will be taken by Bishop Dudley, of Kentucky. This body has no legislative functions, the most that it can do in that direction being to recommend to the General Convention of the church.

Rev. Dr. Lansing Burrows, of Augusta, Georgia, made "Fragments" the subject of an interesting address here on Sunday afternoon. His description of the miracles of the feeding of multitudes from small supplies, by the Master, was masterly in the extreme and deserved the praise it received. He noted that the same miracle was twice performed and that there was a much greater quantity of fragments left in one instance than in the other. This he took to indicate that there could be no mathematical calculation of divine power, and that no such calculation was needed, when the concordance revealed all that either Christian or non-believer required to know. "It could not benefit us, perhaps," he said, "to endeavor to solve the problem of how those fragments grew from hand to hand. It is enough that the fact of growth should be so, and in that idea of passing from hand to hand we find an example, which, if we ever learn it thoroughly, will bring a millennium; I do not say it will be the millennium of the prophets, but such a one as will make man a better companion and better disposed towards his fellows." After saying that too much attention was wasted upon what is prospective and distant, while the work of grace which might begin at once with a neighbor was neglected, the speaker concluded by saying that it was faith which made the fragment which had received the blessing divine a fragment of fragments, abundant for all.

Washington is constantly trying experiments of all sorts, and arrangements have about been completed to organize a church upon an experimental plan. This church will recognize no creed, but will admit members regardless of the religious belief they may have entertained previously. The new church is to be known as the "People's Church," and, if present plans are carried out, it is to have its first public meeting October 4, in the Academy of Music. Rev. Dr. Alexander Kent, who has been pastor of the Universalist church in this city, is at the head of the new church.

Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond, Virginia, who enjoys an international reputation as a pulpit orator of the first rank, preached twice at the Church of the Covenant in this city last Sunday, and on both occasions the church was crowded.

Fully five hundred children attended a meeting by "Our Union" Band of Hope, Sunday afternoon, in the temperance tent; the most impressive feature of the meeting was the repeating by the little members of the Band of Hope of their triple pledge, to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor, tobacco and profanity.

The Indian office has revoked the license of four traders in Indian Territory, on account of their selling beer, and it will revoke the license of every trader who engages in the traffic; and, besides, their bondsmen will be sued for violation of the prescribed regulations. The department is fully determined that beer shall not be sold in the Territory.

REFORM NEWS.

THE ANTI-SECRET REFORM IN IOWA.

BIRMINGHAM, Iowa, Sept. 14, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Perhaps all of your readers, and especially those in our State, will be glad to hear a few words about the work in Iowa. We are glad to report that the outlook for the prosperity of the Reform cause in this State, as well as elsewhere, is very encouraging. Although we must regret that organized, systematic work against the lodge evil has not been as prosperous here for the past few years as it was for awhile previous, still we feel confident that a sentiment has been formed which is destined to bear much fruit in behalf of truth and righteousness as against the idolatry and error of the secret lodge system. The thing needful now is to organize this sentiment properly and set it actively at work for the accomplishment of a grand and noble purpose—the exaltation of Christ and the destruction of the secret lodge, which is his enemy and the rival of the church. It is our intention, by the help of God, to put Iowa in the front rank of this great movement.

A live, energetic and capable State agent and lecturer has been secured in the person of Rev. John V. Potts, formerly of North Robinson, Ohio. Rev. Mr. Potts comes to us well recommended, and is meeting with favor and success among our people. He is of a fervent Christian spirit; a man of great piety, deep thought and strong convictions. He has labored in the Gospel ministry for about thirty-five years and has labored against the lodge for almost as long a time; that is, he has been an anti-secretist all his life. He has given considerable active service in this work. In his own State he secured subscribers for the Cynosure, sold and distributed hundreds of pages of Reform literature, got up meetings to discuss the question, and in various ways aided the work. He was engaged in the Sabbath Reform work in Ohio, just previous to his engagement with the Iowa Christian Association. So much by way of an introduction to our people. The question now is, shall we continue to push the work and keep Bro. Potts in the field right along? We certainly ought to do so. He is ready and willing to spend and be spent in the work if the friends will give him anything like a due encouragement and support. His purpose is not only to work earnestly for the building up and strengthening of our State and local associations, but also to move out into new places where no labor has been spent and then create a sentiment in favor of our work. He will thus broaden as well as strengthen the Iowa anti-secret work. Every friend of the cause here should be ready to do his part to help keep the ball rolling.

Our State convention is to be held this year in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Crawfordsville, Washington county, Iowa. Our young friend and earnest fellow laborer, Rev. F. J. Wilson, is pastor at that place and he has kindly invited the Association to meet in his church. There is also a United Presbyterian church at that place which is, of course, friendly to our work. Perhaps some of the sessions will be held in its house of worship. We hope such may be the case. We feel assured that the good people at Crawfordsville will be glad to hospitably entertain all who may attend the convention. Let there be a full attendance and a grand, good meeting. The date fixed by the constitution is the second Tuesday and Wednesday of November. Don't forget the time and prepare to attend.

Very truly yours, W. L. ENLOW.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

WEST BARNET, Vt., Sept. 18, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The work opens well in this region. I have spoken five times since leaving Boston on Saturday last, and Mrs. S. twice before the W. C. T. U. I have appointments up to the 22d inst., and may not reach Boston until the last of next week.

Bro. Paris is going with me to-day, to call on pastors, and I may arrange for meetings up to Friday evening. I speak at South Ryegate on the 22d, and shall spend Sabbath (20th) at Greensboro Bend. Greetings to all.

J. P. STODDARD.

REFORM CONVENTION IN KANSAS.

A call, signed by S. Hart, Lecompton, State Secretary; G. A. Torrence, Denison, Treasurer, and D. H. Coulter, Winchester, all members of the Executive Committee of the Kansas State Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., and of which J. S. T. Milligan is President, has been issued for a convention to be held at Denison, Jackson Co., Kan., beginning on Wednesday evening, October 14, 1891, and continuing throughout the next day and evening.

The object is to revive the work of Reform in Kansas.

Addresses by able speakers from a distance may confidently be expected.

Friends of the cause in Kansas are urged to send delegates, and to raise and forward liberal contributions.

Delegates from adjoining States will be cordially welcomed, and free entertainment will be provided. There should be a large attendance.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SUSPICIOUS INFLATION OF LAND VALUES.

DOUGLASS, Kan., Sept., 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In a man who has been in Kansas for the past decade there arises a great variety of feelings when he observes the hard booming that is going on in the neighborhood of Chicago. The advertisements produce in us a mixture of mirth, wonder, apprehension, and sadness. We have been through it all, and so recently that even the short human memory has not left it behind. I doubt not the people of the vicinity of Chicago would not like our prophecies of what will be the situation in about four or five years. How thoroughly like Kansas those advertisements sound! Will there be, in a few years, the same long lists of sheriff and mortgage sales that we now have in our papers? Does no one's memory run back some twenty-odd years, to the time when the same thing was done before in the vicinity of Chicago? Miles of streets were graded on the prairie, never to be traveled; miles of sidewalks were built around vacant blocks, only to decay. I was forcibly reminded of that former boom a year ago, when visiting a brother in a town near Chicago. He had been employed to tear down an old barn on a decaying place. The house still stood, though its supports had partly given way, a toppling and mournful wreck, while the sidewalk had literally rotted to pieces. It reminded me of Kansas.

There are a great many wonderfully cheap houses in Kansas to-day; and while we do not want any more boomers, speculators, dead-beats or fools, men who could "turn their hand," as the saying is, "to anything" might, I think, do reasonably well. One great trouble with this country has been the superabundance of men who do not know how to do anything to contribute to the sum total of labor, or, at most, something of so little account that there is but little demand for their work.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good," and to those in a position to take advantage of it the depression here has been the means of gain. Some poor men are getting cheap homes, who otherwise would have none. Some time ago we purchased three buildings, which, when built, cost about $800, and moved them on the church ground for a parsonage. We paid for them $125, and I do not think the fitting up has cost, even reckoning the work and material donated, more than $200, while we have a very comfortable, pleasant and convenient house of five rooms, besides pantry, closets, etc. This is an illustration of what has been and can be done now with a little money.

There was a boy who said that pins had saved the lives of whole families, by their not swallowing them. There are those who can save a great deal by not investing in suburban real estate. Let them save their money and there will come a time when they can get wonderful bargains in homes, not very far from the great metropolis of the interior.

T. C. MOFFATT.

THE LODGE GOD RAMPANT IN MISSOURI.

CHULA, Mo., Sept. 3, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The tracts and Cynosures you sent came to hand in due time. I passed around the one entitled, "Killed Without Inquest." One old gentleman, a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, took occasion to manifest the spirit of the lodge god, by calling me all the dirty names he could think of, and finally struck me. Quite a number of persons were standing by, looking on and listening. I kept cool, and explained to him, as best I could, how nicely he was manifesting the spirit of Christ; but he answered that he was "keeping his obligation (. . .), and had done just what his obligation (. . .) required him to do." Then one of the worst blasphemers in the country came across the street, and the old man took him by the hand and called him "brother."

Then they both went on with their abuse, and kept at it all the afternoon, whenever they could get hearers. The result is, the people are paralyzed and afraid to say or do anything. One member of the Methodist Episcopal church advised me to say and do nothing against them, because they would injure me. Another gave me the same advice, and added that he could not be induced to say aught in opposition to them; that a man's life, in that case, would be in danger. I asked him if he thought they would kill me. He said he believed they would. I then asked him what he thought of his preachers whom he looked upon as a band of assassins. "I don't know," he replied.

A Baptist brother also advised me in a similar manner. All seemed to be afraid of their lives. I reported the old Presbyterian to one of his elders, and I was assured that he would be brought to trial for his conduct. Their meeting will be held on the second Sunday of this month. When the matter is disposed of, I will report. In the meantime I keep giving out the tracts, hoping and trusting that the people may get their eyes open.

(Rev.) L. RAYMO.

WHAT THE BISHOP SAYS OF THAT COAT AT TREVES.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Well, does the world look on aghast? No! Will it look indifferently upon this exhibition of the coat at Treves? We shall see.

If the world does not care enough about it to write, and talk, and protest, and withdraw, then we may know that into her tissue moral la grippe has surely entered, and with as fatal a tendency as the physical plague could ever have taken, and that the depressent in this moral issue is a want of due gravity, sincerity and righteous indignation, on the part of the Christian church, who make no inconsiderable part of her family; for it is to Christians that the Bishop of Treves addresses himself, when he says: "I expect this exhibit to do great things for the Christian religion."

Does the true Christian church expect it will do great things for it? No! Why not say it then, and give a reason for the "hope that is within them?" "Because it is of too little account," do you say? Sin, be it ever so trifling, is not a good tonic for the Christian church. The criticism and disapproval of many of the members of its own—the Catholic church—at its last exhibit in 1844, was so great, that that church lost many of its members, and has not found it well to bring the garment forward again, for nearly fifty years; but now, what? Is the world so cheap and trivial that we shall make no remonstrance? Nine coats on exhibit by the Catholic church, in different parts of the world; and there was but one; and what has THAT to do with saving men?

It is said that Christians are to be like their Lord; and (Isa. 42: 13) "He shall go forth as a mighty man; he shall stir up jealousy like a man of war; he shall cry, yea, roar; he shall prevail against his enemies." Shall not the church be like him now, and cry out, until these can get no hearing for their childish impositions?—until, disappointed, this coat at Treves, with all the nine, be put away for the next five thousand years or more?

CHICAGO BISHOP.

UTAH AND THE MORMONS.—II.

OGDEN, Utah, Aug. 31, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—My acquaintance with the Mormon people has not led me to change the opinion I had of Mormonism as a religion, before coming to Utah, in any essential matter. In any study of the history of Mormonism in this region, one ought to consider carefully the state of society in all this mountain country, the social and religious ostracism of the people, and the dangers from internal dissensions, should such be allowed to arise and gather strength. The political features of the organization must also be considered. Factions in the church almost necessarily became little rebellions in the State. When the Morisites left the Brighamite church, they built a fort and gathered a band of soldiers for the defense of their religion. On the one hand, no community could withdraw peaceably from the Mormon church, any more than a State could peaceably secede from the Union. And when a community appealed to arms, Brigham Young turned his guns against that people. But the arms, and forts, and soldiers, belonged rather to the political than the religious department of the organization.

It must also be remembered that one essential feature of Mormonism is the secret organization, which belongs as much to the religious as to the secular departments. Persons familiar with the practical workings of such societies as Masons will know how to estimate that feature of Mormonism. The secret order of Mormonism is not for parade and display, since they do not come before the public in any way to exhibit their regalia, or to show their power. If the Danites and "Avenging Angels" have had anything to do with funerals, their part has not been to bury the honored dead.

To Mormonism belongs the persistence of fanaticism rather than the strength of religious conviction. The masses of the people are Mormons, not because they can defend the doctrines of the church, but because they believe the church to be right. And if a part of it is right, it must all be right, is an argument which the writer has heard many times. It is quite a common thing for Mormons to testify that they have received some sign by which they know that Mormonism is right. One lady told this story: When she was a little girl she was totally blind. Her blindness continued for many months, perhaps years. At last her father had a revelation to the effect that if he would immerse his daughter in the river which flowed by his house, according to directions given in the revelation, and for a specified number of days, her sight would be restored. He did as directed, and the sight of his little girl was restored. This little girl, now a woman of intelligence and of influence, is a Mormon because of this miracle. Another lady told, as her testimony, that when she was a young lady all of the members of her family had become Mormons, but she had stoutly resisted all exhortations. At last, in a dream one night, the Lord himself led her to the brink of a stream and said to her, "Be baptized," and handed her to a Mormon elder who was waiting there to baptize her. It was this dream which made her a Mormon. It appears to be true that the masses have been attracted to Mormonism, as a whole, and converted to it, rather than to the specific truths of that religion. What have seemed to outsiders to be essential features of their system, can be suspended or sacrificed, and the church is undisturbed—the members make no protest.

If this analysis of the subject is correct, it ought to follow, (1) that the members would readily accept any readjustment of the system, or any reform which the leaders would advise or endorse; and (2) that it is not certain that even the leaders would, if they could, make the future of the Mormon church what its past has been. And there is much evidence to indicate that this is the case.

The strength of Mormonism has been the motives of its leaders, rather than other convictions. In their convictions the Mormon leaders do not differ essentially from other men. Their system was made to serve a purpose. Polygamy was made a part of Mormonism for a purpose, as is clearly seen in the history of the application of the Edmunds law against it. For a time the church resisted the law, and men went to prison rather than promise to obey it. But, later, the church issued a manifesto against polygamy, and in favor of obedience to the law. And this was done not because the belief of either the leaders or the people had changed on this subject, but solely to conform to a changed purpose of the leaders of the church. Some of the Mormon people claim that the manifesto is only a temporary device to avoid trouble until the church can regain its political power; and that when it can safely be done, polygamy will again be taught and practiced. Others tell us that the Mormon leaders know that polygamy is out of harmony with the civilization of the present, and that while they believe that God sanctions it, and the Bible teaches it, yet they do not wish to isolate themselves by continuing it as a part of their system. But whichever theory may be the correct one, it is evident that polygamy is retained or rejected according to the purpose of the church leaders, rather than because of their belief in regard to it. Here, again, we may say that if this analysis is correct, our inquiry should not be, What do the Mormons believe in regard to polygamy? but rather, What will be their purpose in regard to it? And this will put the problem of polygamy in Utah not far remote from the temperance problem east of the Missouri (that question has hardly crossed the river yet) where men do not ask what the national parties believe in regard to temperance, but, rather, what will they do about it? Yours faithfully,

AMOS JUDSON BAILEY.

STERLING OPINIONS OF MASONRY.

"As to the question of the attitude of Christians toward the secret orders, two or three things seem to me very plain. One of them is this: that the whole movement of things on the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement on the line of Scripture and Christianity."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

"God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and his service, and to the church by depleting and robbing her of her male membership, THAN ANY OTHER ONE ENEMY OF CHRIST. There never was a time when the cry, 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Bible Studies, 1889, p. 389.

"We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion."—From Pres. Finney's book, "Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," pp. 260, 263.

LITERATURE.

GAMBLING: OR, Fortuna, Her Temple and Shrine. The True Philosophy and Ethics of Gambling. By James Harold Romain.

This volume, so daintily printed and bound, belongs to that great and growing class of books which it were better for mankind had they never been written. Briefly, in the light of human philosophy, it is an apology for the crime of gambling. No Christian man or woman can indorse its sentiments. It is a cold-blooded, worldly treatise, expressing, no doubt, the opinions of thousands of unscrupulous men in the pursuit of wealth and blinded by self-interest; but to the pure-minded believer in the Lord Jesus Christ it is an abomination. We speak by the book itself: "Men have gambled in all ages of the world. . . . Now and ever will mankind court the mysterious and uncertain. . . . Truth is not absolute but relative. It is not to be established ex cathedra. Moralists are not in a position to denounce gambling per se. . . . To live is to gamble. . . . Man is the creature of circumstance. . . . Sumptuary statutes are futile and impertinent. . . . In itself, to gamble is neither a sin nor a crime. For the law to punish the practice is futile and unwarranted. . . . Gambling, with certain conditions, should be licensed and placed under the surveillance of a police." Such philosophy is damnable, and, if followed, will send as many souls to everlasting perdition as the writings of Volney, Voltaire, Tom Paine or Robert Ingersoll. Shame on the man who will write or print so vile a book!

Our Day for September, Joseph Cook, editor, will find interested readers. The Anti-Opium Resolution in Parliament, by which the opium trade with China was condemned, is discussed at length by ex-Pres. Cyrus Hamlin, of Lexington, Mass., who urges the United States to be as prompt in subduing this evil as the mother country. From the North American Review, the editor transfers Anthony Comstock's scathing censure of the "Vampire Literature" of the day, which is ruining so many American youth. The article is timely. The Present Tendencies of American Congregationalism, a paper by Prof. L. F. Stearns, of the Bangor (Me.) Theological Seminary, read at the Pan-Congregational Council in London, and the valedictory address to the same council by Joseph Parker, D. D., are substantial echoes of the spirit that pervaded that notable assemblage. Joseph Cook contributes Warp and Woof, a Boston Hymn, sung at Tremont Temple in that city, at the 220th Boston Monday Lecture, Feb. 23, 1891. Our readers will find it in full on page 10 of this issue of the Cynosure. Mr. Cook's Boston Monday Lecture has for "prelude 4," General Booth's Great Plan for the Poor. Those who desire to gain a view of the "true inwardness" of the Salvation Army and its work will find it here. The book reviews of Our Day are an important feature of its editorial department, and well worth careful reading. The Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D., of Boston, recently delivered a most timely and powerful discourse on the Merits and Defects of American Journalism, liberal extracts from which are reprinted in this magazine. Its strictures on the press are just and pungent. In Questions to Specialists, J. J. Skordalsvold, of Minnesota, replies at length to the question: What is the attitude of the Scandinavian population of the United States toward practical church work, and especially toward parochial schools? This paper is full of interesting information on the subject. The editor's brief notes conclude a good number of this magazine.

The Home-Maker for September (edited by "Jenny June") has for its frontispiece a lady in full riding costume looking from her balcony and asking, "Is He Coming Here?" a pretty design. The current number of Typical Homes relates to Old Deerfield, Mass., and the home of the Champneys, illustrated, introducing interesting historical memories. From the Postern of Vanity Fair leads the reader through some pleasant reminiscent scenery and historic ground at Forts Greene and Dump-ling, and along the Providence river. The Three Fates, by Marion Crawford, is continued. Some Old-Time Jersey Weddings, illustrated, will interest the ladies who read them. Other articles are: The Southern Girl on Horseback; What is the Real Element of Danger?—When Sewer-gas Enters our Houses, How Can it be Kept Out? by Mrs. H. M. Plunkett, will commend itself to every thoughtful housekeeper. The usual departments Art at Home, With the Housewife, Practical Homes, Fashions, Book Notices, and Cycling, are replete with information on these matters. There are also several poems of considerable merit. Published at 44 East 14th street, New York City.

Miss Alice M. Fletcher, of the United States Interior Department and the Peabody Museum, Cambridge, will contribute to The Century in 1892 the result of her studies of the American Indian in a series of illustrated papers. They will give an intimate account of how the Indian actually lives and thinks, his music, home life, warfare, hunting customs, etc., and it is the opinion of Professor Putnam of Harvard that they will undoubtedly be the most important papers that have ever been published on the subject, and that they will give an entirely different idea of the Indian from that now commonly prevailing. The series will be called "The Indian's Side."

The Missionary Review of the World for October is up to the usual standard of excellence of that aggressive and interesting magazine. The Department of Literature of Missions contains ten carefully prepared and inspiring articles by able writers, covering topics of current value to all who are interested in missions. The International Department, Editorial Notes, The Monthly Concert of Missions, and the General Missionary Intelligence, are likewise full of valuable information relative to the cause in all lands. Published by Funk & Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year; 25 cents for single numbers. In clubs of ten, $1.50.

The Cynosure is averse to criticism of individuals. Its field of censure is as wide as the world, but it wars only with the evil in the world. Hence when it is called upon to review an attack in Hudibrastic rhymes upon a good man, who is also a minister of the Gospel and engaged in disseminating its truths, it asks to be excused. It is not wit to call one's neighbor names because he thinks for himself and uses the talents which God has given him to convince his fellow-men of their errors, although he may have erred himself. "Judge Burnham, care of Messrs. Colby and Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston," will understand this allusion.

The August issue of the Humane Journal (Chicago: Albert W. Landon, 3 Rialto Building, publisher) should commend this excellent monthly to the perusal of every family where humanity to man and beast is cherished. It deserves a large patronage, for the lessons which it teaches are noble and permanent, and cannot be too frequently or forcibly impressed upon the growing generation. $1.00 per annum.

Buds and Blossoms for September contains much and varied reading for the younger people. The engravings, and indeed the entire contents, are attractive and impressive, and the tendency of the whole is to elevate and instruct while affording continuous entertainment. Published by J. F. Avery, 1 Henry street, New York City. $1.00 per annum.

OBITUARY.

The death of Mrs. SAMANTHA FARRER McCONOUGHY, a warm friend and patron of the Christian Cynosure and its Reform work, occurred at Atkinson, Ill., September 2, 1891.

The deceased was born at Hinsdale, N. H., June 11, 1811. In June, 1832, she was married to Jesse Worcester, by whom she had two children. Subsequently she lost, by death, her husband and one child. In June, 1849, she married Eli H. McConoughey, to whom she bore also two children. The father and all her children, except one son, Eli B. McConoughey, preceded her to the home above.

On Wednesday, September 2d, Mother McConoughey was thrown from her carriage and instantly killed. A concourse of old settlers and friends followed her to her last resting place.

She and her husband were among the charter-members of the Congregational church at Atkinson, Henry county, Ill. Having been converted in her childhood, she consecrated her life to the cause of Christ; and to none of God's calls did her heart go out so strongly as to the work of the National Christian Association, giving to it her money, and zealously advocating the cause of anti-secrecy. She was always foremost in reforms and advanced thought.

Her memory is fondly cherished in the circles where her virtues were best known, encircling, like a halo of love and light, the life that has been transferred to a better and a brighter world. Peace to her ashes! CLARA BOWKER TRUMBULL. Stillman Valley, Ill.

LODGE NOTES.

Brethren, hold your ear this way. We are not going to give you a new password, but whisper a suggestion. Don't imagine for a moment that your wives can't tell whether you were at lodge or having a time with the boys. We have tried it. It won't work. Go to lodge. —Spring of Myrtle. How can the wives distinguish the difference? They are not "in it," in either case.

In many of our lodges can be found members who, while they never have anything to offer for the upbuilding of the order themselves, are foremost in opposing any plan that may be put forward looking to an increase in membership, and denouncing the projector thereof as a crank.—Secret Society Paper. Possibly they have discovered the fallacies of the lodge, and are tired of "roping in" innocents. All honor to them!

"We know," says a secret society paper, "of a number of sisters" (Daughters of Rebekah) "who really know more in a minute of true Odd-fellowship than some of these pompous brothers ever knew during their entire connection with the order." How did the sisters learn it, if their husbands and brothers didn't tell them? The woman's degree is such a slight part of the order as to be almost tantalizing in its lack of information about the rest of the show.

Bloomington, Ill., has a lady "Noble Grand" in one of the Odd-fellows' lodges; and this is the way in which that poor woman is wasting her energies, according to the local organ: "She has been a member of our lodge almost from the beginning. In that time, one and a half years, she has not missed more than four times, and she drives five miles to lodge through darkness and storm, heat and cold, when we town sisters think we can't go. She has ten in family and keeps no help." With her talents and energy, if converted, what a missionary she would make!

"Madam, you must be satisfactorily identified before I can pay this draft," said a bank cashier a few days since to a sharp-featured, middle-aged lady, who bore unmistakable signs of being a spinster. "Identified sir! Why, I am already identified with the Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters of Pocahontas, Order of Eastern Star, Pythian Sisters, Knights and Ladies of Honor, Chosen Friends, Antimatrimonial League, Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Soldiers' Aid Society, Weekly Sewing Circle, Industrial Union, Daughters of Rebekah, Chautauqua Circle, East Side Whist Club, and—and—great guns! Identified!" —Royal Arcanum Journal.

Presto! Change! Gray and faded beards made to assume their original color by applying Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers. It never fails to satisfy.

OUR PREMIUM! THE EMPRESS Sewing Machine For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled. It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work. It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance. It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments, put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 1 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00. With Christian Cynosure 1 year..$22.00.

For further particulars address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20.cents per pound:

- 3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnettson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John U. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOKS, ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association 221 West Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF The Christian Cynosure, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The objects of this Association is: "To expose, wither and remove secret societies, Freemasonry, in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Cor. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; 50 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1891.

IOWA'S NEW AGENT.

We are glad to call attention to the letter in this issue from our friend and co-worker, Mr. W. L. Enlow, editor of the Birmingham (Iowa) Free Press. Iowa is a noble State. Its soil, climate and people are among the best of their classes. Our agent, Rev. C. F. Hawley, has done several years' faithful and successful labor there. He has united and harmonized our friends, and now is succeeded by our new fellow-laborer to whom we are so pleasantly introduced by Bro. Enlow. We are glad to welcome Bro. Potts to our ranks, and wish for him great usefulness and every blessing. There is no branch of Christian labor more important than the one upon which he is entering. His business is to set forth Jesus Christ as the sole hope of men, and to seek to remove the lodges which antagonize him and all the institutions which he has established. Upon the foundation already laid we trust that Bro. Potts may rear a lofty and imperishable structure to the honor of God and the salvation of multitudes of men.

JURY TRIALS ABOLISHED.

Los Angeles, Cal., has a Sunday-saloon-closing ordinance, and, as a matter of course, the saloon-keepers oppose its enforcement in every possible manner. Recently a number of them were arrested for violations of this ordinance, and when brought before the magistrate, demanded jury trials. The justice, however, sustained by a State law assigned to meet this emergency, promptly refused them the privilege. The saloon-keepers took an appeal to the Superior Court, and after hearing the case, the presiding judge handed down a decision sustaining that of the justice. Furthermore, he submitted his decision to the other judges of the Superior Court, and all concurred in its correctness. Commenting on this case, the California Voice remarks that the liquor men have now been beaten at every point. They have failed to show the unconstitutionality of the city ordinance and the invalidity of the State law.

The trial by jury has always been esteemed a sacred privilege; but, as in everything else, circumstances alter cases, and we all know what shameful abuses of right and justice have been fostered by jurors with secret society affiliations and prejudices, misplaced "sympathy" with the criminal, and predilections for bribes. The Californians have found it out and so have Illinoisans; but the law-makers of the Pacific coast have shown superior foresight, courage and energy in defeating the designs of evil men, by abolishing the possibility of putting unworthy fellows on a jury to acquit an offender who deserves punishment. It is a great victory for the "city of the angels."

THE POPE FAVORS REPUBLICS.

It is reported that the Pope is preparing an encyclical on the different forms of government, with the intention of showing how much the nations are indebted to the church for conciliatory settlement of differences arising from the change of government forms, and some of the organs of this same Roman church are telling us, likewise, how fond the Pope is becoming of republican national rule. But the tyrannical government of the church of Rome introduced into any republic would destroy the republican principle within a year. There is nothing in common between any free government and the Vatican. When the United States cut loose from Great Britain and set up as a republic, she cast off, alike, the dominance of monarchy and the Established church, and made herself a law unto herself, independent of any other power, bestowing upon every citizen the right to live, to labor, to worship, and to pursue happiness as God should lead him. But in every republic founded or encouraged by the papal hierarchy there would soon be an Established church, or system of worship, and all who did not unite with it would be denounced as heretics, and their lives made miserable by the coercion of the priesthood. It would not long be a republic, but a hot-bed of anarchy and revolution, like the Catholic republics in South America, and the papal forces would have their hands on the throats and their feet on the breasts of all who opposed the papal government. No, there is nothing in Romanism that affiliates with the reign of freedom. It is a thing of cloisters, dungeons and intolerance. Says the Catholic Review (New York, September 6, 1891): "The Catholic church is a church of authority. Obedience to law is as necessary in the church as in the State. Private members of the church cannot consistently judge for themselves either in faith, in morals, or in ecclesiastical arrangements. If a man persists in judging for himself and following his own inclination in opposition to the judgment of the church, he is not a loyal Catholic." That's the sort of republican government that the Roman church desires to establish. May God forbid it!

Says the New York Catholic Review: "Catholics are bound to build up a Catholic branch of the public school system, where children will be educated as Catholics at the expense of the State." There it is—church and state, and republicanism and infallibility—what a mixture!

ONE PHASE OF MASONIC DECEPTION.

Masonry is shrewd in a few things, self-concoited in others, and tricky where trickiness will best serve its purpose. Deception is its strongest element, and is practiced upon its novitiates, as we have many times shown, by boasting to them of the great light and glory of the order, and exalting it as the handmaid of true religion. Not only is deception a part of the lodge system in misleading its initiates by its forms and ceremonies, but the order, with great unanimity, attempts to deceive all persons outside of the lodge as to its secret work, its obligations and its operations. Certain information, carefully worded to attract and interest those whom the lodges would invite into the order, is publicly given to the world; but this class of Masonic literature is more remarkable for what it withholds than for what it makes known; for the latter is designed only to show, in an exaggerated manner, what a glorious exponent of true charity, benevolence and good-fellowship Masonry, when properly understood, will be found.

But here is another phase of the subject that interferes seriously with the lodge system as presented by Masonic authorities, and that is the thorough exposures of its entire character and subterfuges by Masons who have renounced the lodge and shown its fallacies and iniquity. These men have been persecuted, called perjurers, and even killed, for exposing the secrets of the order, but they have not finched from their duty, and the result is that the economy and rites of Masonry and its degrees, to the number of forty-two, have been printed and publicly sold by the National Christian Association.

Of course, all this is very un-Masonic and very aggravating to those in the lodges, who have sworn to always hail, never reveal, but always conceal, the secrets confided to them; but, of course, as the renouncing Masons very generally agree in their expositions on essential points of the lodge work, in the mouth of two or three, (or a dozen) witnesses, these exposures are thoroughly established, and Masonry, in all its fullness, stands before the world, with all its worthless wisdom, sham pretensions and corruption laid bare; and the sight is not a charming one.

Masonry, thus brought to bay, and forced to attempt a refutation of the revelations made by the opponents of the order, having no righteous principle to sustain it, and wounded to the quick by the printed exposures, was obliged to resort to its best weapon—deception—for its defence. It was therefore decided, in secret conclaves, to issue forged and altered copies of the revelations of Morgan and others who had made public the secret work of the order. This was freely done. We have at hand one of these books, "Jachin and Boaz," an English exposition of the first three degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry, which undoubtedly caused the murder of its author in the streets of London, and which bears evident marks of this Masonic tinkering, so that it cannot be depended upon as the original book. Morgan's book, it is well known, was also altered by Masons and printed as the genuine work; and these spurious expositions, made only to deceive, have been widely published as refutations of the real expositions. The trick was well-planned and sufficiently successful to show to what straits Masonry was driven by its opponents.

The expositions of Masonry and Odd-fellowship, with those of several minor orders, published by the N. C. A., are genuine and thorough, and their veracity has been tested and acknowledged by Masons and Odd-fellows both in and out of the lodges; their authenticity is unimpeachable.

Attention is often called by disgruntled lodge adherents to the fact that the expositions sold by us do not agree; that differences in the text are numerous, and that, therefore, they must be all spurious. These apparent discrepancies are easily explained. We have a genuine exposition of lodge work in India, which differs only in immaterial points from that followed in this country; the changes are merely verbal and unimportant. We have, also, a well-thumbed lodge ritual from an English lodge (not a copy or exposition) which shows a few variations from those in our own country.

"Ecce Orienti; or Rites and Ceremonies of the Essenes (Masons); National Series; seven degrees; arranged in accordance with the standard formula," and printed in cipher (which Doesburg's and other N. C. A. expositions render into plain English) is a series of genuine Masonic work, designed for the use of Masons only. The work in the volume for use in Michigan lodges differs from that adopted in those of Illinois; and the variation is quite as marked, so far as language is concerned, as in the N. C. A. expositions of the same class of work. But all these differences are non-essential and no hindrance to a true understanding of the ritual.

We have written thus in detail on this subject, that the public may be warned of the double-dealing of Masonry as a great order, and to show that the occult work of the lodges is no longer secret but thoroughly exposed to the public.

TWO VETERANS OF THE CROSS ON LODGE INIQUITY.

"I am now a few days past ninety-two years of age." So writes to us the venerable William G. Keil, of Senecaville, Ohio, under date of August 31, 1891. And still, tremulous with age and infirmity, so that his writing is often difficult to decipher, he purchases anti-secret tracts and other kindred literature to distribute where they will awaken and restrain the thoughtless and ungodly, and urge them to seek the higher and better things of the Lord's great and glorious kingdom.

"Send such," he writes, "as you regard as suitable to expose the folly or wickedness of the craft. I shall try to make the best use I can of any and everything you send. I am still a devoted friend of the Cynosure, have strong confidence in its great efficiency, and wish it was more generally circulated and read. We take several other religious periodicals, or weekly papers, such as the Lutheran Observer and the New York Weekly Witness, but as I can read but little, I seldom read much in either of them except the dear old Christian Cynosure, and nearly always all tracts. I regret that I can write no better. I could a few years ago, but I am so debilitated and tremulous that it is rather marvelous that I can write at all; my hand is crooked and crippled with rheumatism, and has been for thirty years. . . . Born in Strasburg, Va., August 7, 1799, I got my training for the work of the Christian ministry (Lutheran) in Winchester, Va.; preached the Gospel in Virginia some five years; then came to Ohio, where I labored in the work of saving souls, till near thirty years ago, when I was disabled and had to quit the field, dearly as I loved the work. I am now confined to the house, often suffering much, but I endeavor to bear it patiently. I am sometimes very gloomy. My dear mother suffered, the last few years of her life, with religious melancholy, and it would not be strange if I should go in the same sad way.

"During my three or four years' study in Winchester," continues our venerable correspondent, "I had learned enough about Freemasonry and the men who espoused and adhered to it, to satisfy me that it is an institution to be avoided by Christians, if not by all good citizens; and I have never seen or heard of anything since to give me a more favorable opinion about it or any of the numerous orders, for the land is now swarming with them, as Egypt was at one time with lice, locusts and frogs!

"Is it really true," he asks, "that there is a new 'Independent Order of Owls,' and that respectable men 'screech' among them? It would seem as if the devil himself could not devise anything too foolish to amuse and ensnare plenty of men! But enough; my soul is sick with every day's report of every sort of outrage with which the earth is filled. It may, however, be the policy of the devil to draw attention from the graver outrages that he commits.

"If any one in your office will have the time and industry to cull enough out of this scrawl to make a short narrative of facts, publish it in the Cynosure and send me a few copies, I will send them near and far off, and urge people to subscribe for the paper, and I have no doubt it will do good.

"I would be grateful and glad if the editor, or some other competent person, should add a few pithy and forcible reasons to show that these secret orders are anti-Christian and injurious to individuals and society, and that they really remind one of the 'smoke of the pit,' if not the pit itself."

[We know of nothing better at hand on this subject than the testimony of another venerable veteran of the cross, John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., which we copy below from his Autobiography, just published by the National Christian Association.—EDITOR.]

Our esteemed and aged correspondent closes his letter as follows: "May God bless the Cynosure and all its friends, and spread through all the land the light it gives, speedily and effectually. Your old friend in the good work."

TESTIMONY OF JOHN G. FEE.

About 1846-7, the community in which John G. Fee then resided "had a union temperance society, into which," says Mr. Fee, in his Autobiography (p. 51), "all, young and old, rich and poor, could come, 'without money and without price.' It was proposed that there be formed in our school-house a society known as 'Sons of Temperance.' I was requested to join and give my influence. I declined the invitation to join, and in a public discourse gave my reasons for so declining:

"First, impracticable. The form of organization—initiation fees, with passwords and closed doors—such will shut out a large portion of society, will fail to meet the needed end—the reclamation of the masses.

"Second, the secret principle is wrong. (1) It is contrary to the genius of republican institutions, where every movement affecting the interests of society is supposed to be open to the view of all. (2) Unfair. Such societies being secret, give one class of men an unknown and an undue advantage over the other members of the society—an unfair advantage. (3) Dangerous. Such societies give opportunities not only for unfair advantages, but opportunities to bad men to devise measures not only injurious to society, but perilous to governments. Such societies are selfish, and, as such, contrary to the spirit and letter of Christianity. (a) They reject the very objects of charity—the halt, the lame, the blind—help those who help the society and can help themselves. (b) Usually they reject men in this country simply because they are colored. This fosters the spirit of caste. (c) This society, as such, hides from the world whatever light or good it may have—'puts it under a bushel.' Christianity requires that we let our light shine; if we have good works, let them be seen. If there be anything good, society ought to have the benefit of it. (d) This was the precedent of our Lord, who said, 'I spake openly in the temple, and in secret have I said nothing.' He is our pattern.

"It was then said, 'The amount of secrecy is small.' I said, 'The principle is just as certainly vicious when small as when large; a poison is the same, little or much.' I said, 'The devil tempts not to vice in its gross form—at first, only in small proportions, and that veiled by some assumed good; "he comes as an angel of light."' I said, "Some of you know that it is just in this way Jesuitism now works. It does evil that good may come."

"I said, 'I have traced the history of your movement. It was concocted almost exclusively by Freemasons and Odd-fellows.' These men know that temperance was a good and reputable thing, and that if the youth of the land could have their minds familiarized with the secret principle, made reputable by association with acknowledged good, then it will be easy, after a time, for such to step into other orders with larger measures of secrecy, even those associated with blasphemous oaths, a false religion, a religion like that of Freemasonry, which claims to fit men for the lodge above—a religion in which all men can agree—Jews and pagans, Mohammedans and Parsees; a religion of mere sacrilegious rites; a religion in which the name of Christ is excluded from every official prayer; Christ treated as Mohammed, Zoroaster, or Confucius; yes, worse—the name expurgated from quoted scriptures. (See Mackey's Ritual, pp. 384-5.) I said to my hearers, 'Beware of those stepping-stones that lead to institutions that are blasphemous, delusive, and perilous to society and republican institutions.'

"The 'Sons' did not live long in that region. Afterwards, when I had moved to Madison county, where I now live, I was told by an influential friend, who was a Freemason, that if I would join the Masons I would be protected from the mobs" (of slaveholders.) "I replied, 'If my protection and immunity from violence is to be secured by connection with orders at once delusive, selfish, perilous to society, and treacherous to Christ, then I cannot have protection from such men.' Before I came to Madison, I was waylaid, shot at, clubbed, stored; by force kept out of church houses; and since I came to Madison, have been in the hands of six regularly organized mobs of violent men, yet have I not shown the secret sign of distress, nor muttered the words, 'Is there no help for the widow's son?'"

BEREA COLLEGE, KY.

Since coming North I have, in a number of instances, seen it stated that this institution, which, by the terms of its charter and in all its history, has been strictly undenominational, is likely to become a Baptist institution. Some say that it has practically become such. I wish to say that after nearly two years' residence at Berea, and with a full knowledge of the facts, I can pronounce such statements utterly unfounded, and I believe that they were the result of sectarian bigotry, and are a malicious misrepresentation. Never in its history was this excellent institution on a more strictly unsectarian basis.

Chicago, Ill.

H. H. HINMAN.

—The (Baptist) Standard, Chicago, pithily remarks: "So far as comes under our own observation, the Sunday papers all oppose the Sunday closing of the Columbian Exposition. Does anybody happen to know the reason why?" The reason is obvious. The pocket is involved.

—The nomination for the Legislature, in Page county, Iowa, of Hon. Frederick Nelson reflects credit upon the friends of Reform in that district, as Mr. Nelson, one of the ablest and best men in that county, if elected, will competently and honorably serve the interests of his constituents.

—We desire to say with reference to the advertisement in last week's paper, which states that the deeds to property in the Additions to Harvey do not contain the prohibitory clause, that we have seen the deed used by Walter Thomas Mills & Co. for property in the Academy Addition, which contains a very strong prohibitory clause, and we are glad to correct the statement of the advertiser as to the above-named Addition.

—The New York Herald gives an account of a Masonic convention, in the report of which it is stated that the brothers boasted of having as members in their lodges, in the State of New York, ordained ministers of the Gospel who are in good standing in their respective denominations. New York is not the only State in which the church and the lodge have met on "the five points of fellowship." Illinois is quite as bad in this respect.

—Robert G. Ingersoll thinks that the American Sabbath ought to be wiped out. If he means the modern pleasure-seeking, beer-sodden, criminal Sabbath instituted by sinful foreigners as a substitute for the sacred, sober, peaceful Puritan Sabbath of sixty years ago, let it go,—the sooner the better; but if he means the Sabbath hallowed by God on Sinai and confirmed by the Lord Jesus Christ himself while he was on earth, we vote that Ingersoll be invited to go first.

—Bro. C. B. Ward, the able and energetic American missionary in India, has in press, in that country, "The History of the Telugu Mission and Orphanages." Bro. Gladwin, who has seen the advance sheets of the book, writes that he "can assure all interested in stirring pioneer work, that a good treat is in store for them." Eternity alone will show how great is the work in which these good brothers are engaged, and the blessed fruit which they are bringing forth as the result of their labors.

—Bro. W. J. Gladwin, in the August issue of the India Watchman, offers a reward of One Hundred Thousand Pounds (nearly half a million dollars) for "a safe and sure statement as to how the following work can be wrought so as to be genuine, effective, hearty and permanent—How can idolaters be brought to obey the first and second commandments, blasphemers, the third, children, the fifth, the immoral, the seventh, and the dishonest, the eighth and ninth—how, oh! how, can all this be done by ministers and Christians who habitually violate the fourth and tenth commandments? Address, the India Watchman, Bombay, India." We are going to write to Bro. Gladwin, and tell him how all this may be done.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Harry Whitbeck, the 7-year-old son of millionaire George W. Whitbeck, of Portland, Oregon, was found at Homestead, Pa., Wednesday, by Government Detective W. C. Negus, having been stolen from his parents when 14 months old.

—Rev. William Fenton, of St. Paul, Minn., returned from his visit to the East last week, and on Sunday, in company with Bro. Hinman, spoke at Prospect Park, Du Page county, and since then have been filling other appointments in this vicinity.

—Governor Fifer Tuesday appointed the following persons managers of the Illinois Reformatory at Pontiac: Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago; Captain A. D. Cadwallader, of Lincoln; Valentine Jobst, of Peoria; R. D. Lawrence, of Springfield, and James R. Scott, of Champaign.

—Miss Sarah E. Farley, who has been for several years engaged in active work among the colored people in Louisiana, and who has been spending two or three months visiting her friends in the North, was in Chicago this week on her return to the South. She is greatly interested in her work, and finds it both pleasant and profitable.

—It was proposed some time ago to institute a Good Templars' lodge at Miles, Iowa, but Bro. W. J. Gladwin, then doing missionary work in India, and knowing the people and the evils of the Good Templars' order, forwarded a printed exposition of its work and other anti-secret literature to friends in Miles, with such good effect that the lodge was never organized. Thus a foreign missionary did a good job of home missionary work, although 10,000 miles away. The truth does prevail.

—The deaths of the week are as follows: Mrs. Theresa Fair, late wife of ex-Senator James G. Fair, San Francisco, Cal.; Geo. B. Loring, of Massachusetts, a prominent diplomat under past administrations; in London, Sir John Steell, R. S. A., the sculptor, who made the statues of Sir Walter Scott and Robert Burns in Central Park, New York. Col. Frederick A. Conkling, brother of the late Senator Roscoe Conkling, died Friday at New York. Ex-Congressman William L. Scott, Erie, Pa., died at Newport, aged 63 years.

—The Church Unity Conference, held at the Kenwood Evangelical church, in this city, last week, our report of which will appear in full in the Cynosure of Oct. 1, brought together a number of well-known and esteemed Reform workers, including the venerable John G. Fee and Rev. H. H. Hinman, of Berea, Ky.; Rev. C. E. Hulbert, of Detroit, Mich.; Rev. C. S. Bullock, West Indian missionary; Rev. E. R. Worrell, of Chicago; Mrs. E. B. Granis, of New York; Revs. E. Mudge, John P. Hale, H. A. Kerns, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard. Several of these friends were welcome visitors, also, to the Cynosure office, during their sojourn in the city.

THE HOME.

WARP AND WOOF.

[Sung at Tremont Temple, Boston, at the 220th Boston Monday Lecture, February 23, 1891.]

Before he formed a star,
Our God arranged our lot;
Our little lives were planned afar,
When we as yet were not.

Time hath no aimless strands,
God warp and woof combines;
Life's loom is in his holy hands,
His shuttles know their lines.

He loved us when as yet
We had not seen the sun;
God's forethought is man's coronet,
And love by love is won.

He purposed all he sends,
He knows what us awaits;
He marketh now the distant ends
Of paths to hidden gates.

All acts his eyes foresee
And never choice constrain;
So willeth he that we are free
His grace to loes or gain.

His love hath filled the past,
An ocean without shore;
Our purchased souls him first and last,
Love, trust, obey, adore.

—Joseph Cook, in Our Day.

THE STORY OF A SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

It was a straggling village in the mountains of West Virginia. The neighborhood was generally peaceful and quiet. Those religiously inclined were divided among some five or six different denominations. Year after year the school was opened about the first of May, and succumbed to the heat of August.

One spring, when the subject of opening the school was broached, many said, "It is no use." "It will only be a failure as usual." A few said, "We will open it, and keep it open for a year." Thus divided, the school was opened. Literature from the American Sunday-school Union was purchased. At one time came a story of a missionary along the coasts of the United States who desired a yacht to prosecute his work. The matter was laid before the school, and they were asked to contribute. The people were poor, but one dollar was raised and forwarded. It did not do much toward the yacht; but when afterwards the yacht had been purchased by others, and its picture was printed, it was remarkable the good it did the school to know they had a dollar in the work.

August heats were passed, September and October frosts came, and now some said the school must close. Three or four said, with no unkindly feelings to those who must quit, "There will be a fire in the school-house every Sunday morning (the nearest church was some three miles away), and there will be Sunday-school. If there are only two present, there will be Sunday-school; if only one present, there will be Sunday-school, and all are welcome. Come when you can; the school will go on."

It was a dreary, cold winter; sometimes only four or five were present; sometimes eighteen or twenty. Many an earnest prayer went up from that faithful few for God's blessing. The winter passed. A wedding took place in the neighborhood. A wedding was always the signal for a hilarious outburst in the community. Imagine the surprise of the superintendent when the leader in the outbursts came to him, and said:

"We have concluded to have no 'belling.' Can't you get a minister to hold a meeting in the school-house? The people feel they want one."

On that very day a minister had told the superintendent to announce an appointment for the next Sunday evening, and, if the people desired, he would continue it. The Spirit of God in answer to prayer was working in the community. The meeting began, as usual in many places, to waken up the frozen church-members.

The superintendent suggested that it might as well be made a common-sense matter, and the revival could just as well begin the first night of the meeting as on the tenth, if the people were ready. An invitation for inquirers was given, and one responded; the next evening fifteen, and all of them members of the Sunday-school. It reached out, and the neighborhood was moved.

Twenty-six were converted. A church was organized, and, although they have no house as yet, the church is prosperous.

The Sunday-school has gone on winter and summer ever since,—some eight years. Those young people have grown to manhood and womanhood, and most of them are earnest workers in the church, scattered as they are in several States.

There is nothing startling in this story. It is of plain, common people, working in a plain, common way,—relying on God. Others can do the same. There was no brilliant talent, no professional evangelist, no learned scholar. It seems, to-day, that it is not the five-talent men, but the one-talent men, who need to go to work in village church and country school-house to bring about a great revival.—James N. David, in the Sunday-School Times.

THE BROKEN SAW.

A boy went to live with a man who was accounted a hard master. He never kept his boys; they ran away, or gave notice they meant to quit; so he was half his time without, or in search of a boy. The work was not very hard—opening and sweeping out the shop, chopping wood, going errands, and helping round.

At last Sam Fisher went to live with him.

"Sam's a good boy," said his mother.

"I should like to see a boy nowadays that had a spark of goodness in him," growled the new master.

It is always bad to begin with a man who has no confidence in you; because, do your best, you are likely to have little credit for it. However, Sam thought he would try; the wages were good, and his mother wanted him to go. Sam had been there but three days, before, in sawing a cross grained stick of wood, he broke the saw. He was a little frightened. He knew he was careful, and he knew he was a pretty good sawyer, too, for a boy of his age; nevertheless, the saw broke in his hands.

"And Mr. Jones will thrash you for it," said another boy who was in the wood-house with him.

"Why, of course I didn't mean it, and accidents will happen to the best of folks," said Sam, looking with a very sorrowful air on the broken saw.

"Mr. Jones never makes allowances," said the other boy; "I never saw anything like him. That Bill might have stayed, only he jumped into a hen's nest and broke her eggs. He daren't tell of it; but Mr. Jones kept suspecting, and suspecting, and suspecting, and laid everything out of the way to Bill, whether Bill was to blame or not, till Bill couldn't stand it, and wouldn't."

"Did he tell Mr. Jones about the eggs?" asked Sam.

"No," said the boy, "he was 'fraid, Mr. Jones has got such a temper."

"I think he'd better own up at once," said Sam.

"I suspect you'll find it better to preach than to practice," said the boy. "I'd run away before I'd tell him;" and he soon turned on his heel and left poor Sam alone with his broken saw.

The poor boy did not feel very comfortable or happy. He shut up the wood-house, walked out in the garden, and went up to his little chamber under the leaves. He wished he could tell Mrs. Jones; but she wasn't sociable, and he had rather not.

When Mr. Jones came into the house the boy heard him. He got up, crept down stairs, and met Mr. Jones in the kitchen. "Sir," said Sam, "I broke your saw, and I thought I'd come and tell you 'fore you saw it in the morning."

"What did you get up to tell me for?" asked Mr. Jones; "I should think morning would be time enough to tell of your carelessness."

"Because," said Sam, "I was afraid if I put it off I might be tempted to lie about it. I'm sorry I broke it, but I tried to be careful."

Mr. Jones looked at the boy from head to foot, then, stretching out his hand, "There, Sam," he said heartily, "give me your hand; shake hands. I'll trust you, Sam. That's right; that's right. Go to bed, boy. Never fear. I'm glad the saw broke; it shows the mettle's in you. Go to bed."

Mr. Jones was fairly won. Never were better friends after that than Sam and he. Sam thinks justice has not been done Mr. Jones. If the boys had treated him honestly and "above-board," he would have been a good man to live with. It was their conduct which soured and made him suspicious. I do not know how that is; I only know that Sam Fisher finds in Mr. Jones a kind master and a faithful friend.—Scotch Tract.

A SUNDAY SCRAP-BOOK.

A Sunday scrap-book is a source of almost unlimited pleasure and profit to children who can read and write. The book should never be brought forth except upon Sunday, though the materials should be gathered during the week. These consist of a fair-sized scrap-book, paste or mucilage and brush, illustrated papers or magazines from which pictures can be cut, a pair of scissors, a Bible and a Concordance.

Select a picture and cut it carefully from the paper; paste it neatly into the scrap-book, somewhat above the center of the page. Then, by aid of the Concordance, select a verse which the picture suggests, and write it neatly below the picture, adding the chapter and verse from which it is taken.

Comic pictures should be excluded, and such as are manifestly unsuitable. Yet it is surprising to see how large a number that a young person would select are capable of Scripture illustration.

A boy of twelve lately chose one of Frederick Remington's, representing a scout upon a rearing horse.

After pasting it in his book, and with the aid of the Concordance, he wrote beneath the picture the following:

"A horse is a vain thing for safety; neither shall he deliver any by his great strength." Psa. 33: 17.

Another was a scene in a hospital ward. A poor boy in a bed, several poor people standing by, and the physician and nurse in attendance. Under this picture was written:

"The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: Thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness." Psa. 41: 3.

A party of children wearing snow-shoes. Verse: "He giveth snow like wool. He scattereth the hoar frost like ashes." Psa. 147: 16.

Again. A picture of a fair English mansion, with pleasure grounds. This was called "The Mansion House." Instantly the boy exclaimed: "I know the verse for that. 'In my Father's house there are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.'" John 14: 2.

This employment cultivates the imagination; the hand gains skill. Great facility is obtained in finding Scripture references, while the verses are unconsciously committed to memory.—Selected.

YOUR DAUGHTER.

Olive Thorn Miller writes that if you can interest the daughter, just out of school, in the home, in keeping your house, taking charge of your table or some other department, having the table allowance to manage as she chooses, with a salary or whatever arrangement is most satisfactory, you are a fortunate mother. If she wants to study "art," grumble not at oils and turpentine, and allow her, if she wishes, to hang her efforts on the walls, but privately try to educate her taste by visiting galleries, by proper books, by an art atmosphere, by all the instruction that you can devise. If she loves music, pursue the same course. If her taste is for tools, don't be alarmed and call it unfeminine. The "feminine" is planted in the depths of her nature; you can't eradicate it.—Selected.

A TRUE DOG STORY.

Mr. Lane and his family lived in the country, and were the owners of the two dogs, Hero and Midget. Hero was a fine, large dog, while Midget, as you might guess from the name, was a little one. The two dogs were very fond of each other, and had many gay games together.

One summer the Lane family went to make a visit to some friends who lived in a village some seventeen miles away. Midget they took with them, but Hero they left behind.

Near the house where the Lane family were staying was a hotel, where lived a very large dog who was not always very friendly. One day

Midget went out for a walk. As he was passing the hotel, the large dog came out and commenced to fight poor little Midget. The poor little dog was dreadfully beaten, and crept to the house quite crestfallen.

The next day Midget was missing right after breakfast, and all search after him was in vain. Later in the day, who should be seen coming along the dusty road but Midget, and with him Hero! The little dog had gone all the way home after his friend.

The two dogs went to the house where their friends were, ate a hearty meal, and then trotted off straight for that hotel, and found the hotel dog. Then Hero gave that dog such a whipping that I do not think he bothered small dogs for some time. Then he turned about and went all the way home again.—Christian Intelligencer.

FIGS AND THISTLES.

The only hard place you can find in God's service is the one you pick out for yourself.

A little man never looks so big to the world as he does when he stands on a bag of money.

Some people, when they pray in public, push every window in heaven shut to begin with.

The devil has never been able to break up the man who had God for his partner in business.

The man whose income is from the devil has to ask his master what he shall do with his wages.

"Looking unto Jesus" is the only thing that will make the desert of life blossom as the roses.

The man who never has in his heart a desire for something better, has already begun to be a devil.

It makes the devil feel like going out and stoning the house when he sees people happy in church.

The man who undertakes to get rich at the expense of his conscience will find that he can't do it.

It takes a God to describe a God. The fact that the Bible describes God is proof that he is its author.

If your religion doesn't satisfy you, it can be taken for granted that it doesn't satisfy anybody else.

The man who finds the most fault with the preacher is the one who does the least to support him.

The Christian who is continually doing great things for his God is the one who is faithful in little things.

Going into eternity without knowing Jesus Christ is to leave this world with your back toward heaven.

The man who owns a railroad never gets half as much joy out of it as the one who travels on a free pass.

The devil don't care how much religion people get if they wait until they go away from home to practice it.

If you want people to believe what you claim to know about the Lord, don't go to sleep while trying to tell it.

The man who is a man never quits work and goes to whittling because somebody tells him the sun has spots on it.

The man who doesn't love his brother on the other side of the earth doesn't love his brother on the other side of the street.

Thousands of souls have been lost because somebody was afraid of doing something somebody else would find fault with.

If you want your boy to love you, don't make him hoe potatoes in the back yard while a brass band is passing the house.

There are people that claim that they are willing to do anything for the Lord, who never think of going to church on a rainy Sunday.

It is only here and there that a man could get to heaven if he had to prove by his wife that he had the old-fashioned Bible kind of religion.

The devil will never be lonesome as long as there are people in the church who expect to get to heaven without it costing them a cent of money.

It must be something of a satisfaction to the devil to give some folks a little money, and then make it almost kill them whenever they try to spend it.

No man will ever be able to look up from the pit and claim that he got there because God did not give him light enough to show him how to keep out.

There are women who sometimes think on Sunday that they have religion, but when the clothes-line breaks down on Monday they find that they haven't.—Ram's Horn, Indianapolis, Ind.

GOOD MEASURE OF LOVE.

One twilight was there when it seemed
New stars beneath young eyelids gleamed;

In vain the warning clock would creep
Ancar the hour of beauty-sleep;

In vain the trundle yearned to hold
Far-Eyes and little Heart-of-Gold;

And Love that kisses arc the stuff of
At last for once there was enough of,

As thought of all affection's round
The fond climateric had been found—

Each childish fancy heaping more,
Like spendthrift from a miser store,

Till—stopped by hug and stayed by kiss—
The sweet contention ran like this:

"How much do I love you?" (I remember but part Of the words of the troth of this lover)—

"I love you"—he said—"why—I love you—a heart
Brimful and running over.

"I love you a hundred!" said he with a squeeze;

"A thousand!" said she as she nestled;

"A million!" he cried in triumphant ease,
While she with the numbers wrestled.

"Aha! I have found it!" she shouted, "Aha,"

(The red to the soft cheeks mounting)

"I love you—I love you—I love you, Papa,

Over the last of the counting!"

—Robt. U. Johnson, in St. Nicholas.

TEMPERANCE.

EXPERIENCE OF DES MOINES.

"Liquor-dealers and anti-prohibitionists," says the Advance, "who are constantly harping on the blighting effects of prohibition upon the prosperity of a city, will not be able to draw much comfort from the experience of Des Moines, Iowa. Des Moines is a city of sixty thousand people and has not an open saloon within the county in which it is situated, and yet it is just now enjoying an era of the most remarkable prosperity. Such a thing as a house or store-room to rent can scarcely be found at any price, while more than a thousand new residences and more than a million dollars worth of new business blocks, some of them the finest in the West, are in process of erection. Bank clearances run from twenty-five to fifty per cent higher than a year ago; its manufactured products for 1890 exceed those of 1889 by more than $5,000,000. Every kind of business is extremely prosperous, and the actual statistics of the Transfer Companies show that the population is increasing, by new arrivals alone, at the rate of a thousand per month."

THE BREWERS' METHODS.

The proceedings of the Annual Convention of the United States Brewers' Association, as given in the Brewers' Journal, have two specially noteworthy features. They emphasize the practical value to them of what they call their "Literary Bureau," through which they employ the types to promote their interests. They send out a variety of printed matter extolling the merits of beer, proclaiming the "failure" of prohibition, advocating "reasonable" license, etc., etc. These documents they furnish freely to legislators, journalists, and others, and so make their impress upon public opinion more widely and more effectively than many friends of temperance realize. Their example in this respect has a most valuable lesson for temperance men and women. In proportion to their numbers, they make a much more extensive and influential use of their so-called literature than do temperance people and members of churches,—who might easily do so much more,—of temperance literature.

Again, they teach an important lesson in their method of influencing and controlling legislation in their behalf. Relatively few in number, yet by organization and unity of action, they demonstrate very largely their present ability to either obtain legislation directly in their own behalf or to prevent adverse legislation by their opponents. Their type of organization is the League, for the specific purpose of controlling in their favor the action of legislators and candidates of all political parties. In this they have hitherto been eminently successful. With them, as organized beer men, tariffs may go up or tariffs may go down; silver may be restricted or there may be unlimited coinage,—it is immaterial so long as they are able to win and maintain for beer a supremacy. In this direction, also, do they exemplify a worldly wisdom which the friends of temperance might, to great advantage, emulate.

AN AWFUL WARNING.

Some good people think that because parents and children in European countries go to the taverns together, drink their beer, and eat their lunch without becoming drunkards, it is safe for parents and children to do so in this country; but they make a grand mistake. Years ago, an industrious, well-to-do German mechanic, an honored member of a church, was accustomed to send his little boys for beer and have them drink with him. He thought there was no harm in it. The boys grew up, and one became a drunkard. One day his father reproved him for his drunkenness, when in turn he said, "Father, why do you scold me? You taught me to drink!" The remark made a deep, painful impression on the father's mind, and when a few years later, the son killed himself drinking, the calamity and the son's remark so preyed upon the father's mind that, although a very healthy, strong man, reason was dethroned and he but recently committed suicide. These are all well-authenticated facts. The circumstances occurred in Ohio. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Selected.

PRAYER AND BEER AT THE MORMON THEATER.

Mrs. Joseph Cook, who was with her husband at Salt Lake City in December last, at a meeting of representative ladies, asked a series of questions concerning Mormonism, one of which was: "What amusements are most patronized by Mormon families?" The answer, in part, was as follows:

"The theatre and balls. In Brigham Young's time, the theaters and dances were opened with prayer, frequently by himself. Beer was partaken of freely at these entertainments until both sexes were noticeably under its influence. This is no longer the fashion in Salt Lake City, but it is still kept up in the settlements. The Bishop presides at the balls, although not a few are the worse for liquor before the close of the entertainment."

Mormonism, incongruous or worse, in many aspects, is certainly mixed and reprehensible in its "amusements."—Temperance Advocate.

AT THE POLLS.

Unspeakably serious are the facts that the saloons of the United States send eighty thousand youths annually down into drunkards' graves; that wherever they exist they afflict more families and slay more bodies than war and pestilence; that they are the chief causes of pauperism, crime and insanity; that they are the chief law-breakers in every community and the resorts where crime centers and the places where men are stimulated to crimes of the worst character; that they are dens of profanity, lewdness and ungodliness; that they are the open enemies of the church of Christ and of almost every endeavor to improve the moral condition of men; that they are one of the chief foes of the home and fill thousands of homes with discomfort, poverty, brawling, violence, torturing anxiety and long-continued suffering and anguish. Either for or against that sort of thing Christian men are to vote this fall. There ought not to be any doubt on which side they will be found. In one locality the saloon seeks alliance with Republicans, in another with Democrats. It ought to be defeated in both. Honest differences of opinion can be settled and more wisely and satisfactorily settled when the saloon is excluded from political power and put under restraint.—Christian Intelligencer.

Of the 250,000 commitments for drunkenness last year in Great Britain and Ireland, 76,600 were cases of women. This rate is one conviction to 190 people in England; in Scotland one to 80, and in Ireland one to 100.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON I.—Fourth Quarter.—October 4.

SUBJECT.—Christ Raising Lazarus.—John 11: 21-44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life.—John 11: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 11: 21-32. T.—John 11: 33-44. W.—John 11: 1-10. T.—John 11: 11-20. F.—Job 19: 23-27. S.—Mark 5: 35-43. S.—John 12: 1-9.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Resurrection and the Life. Vs. 21-27. Christ risked his life by going into Judea again, as we can see by the flash of martyr courage which it brought out from Thomas: "Let us also go that we may die with him." But the idea probably never crossed his slow perceptions that Jesus had in himself the power over death, and could only die by a voluntary yielding up of himself to his enemies. Martha was a woman quick of action, and correspondingly quick of thought. Her faith was of the impulsive sort, reaching at a bound so sublime a height that she could say, "I know that even now whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee;" and the next moment sinking in dark eclipse under what seemed Christ's common-place words of comfort, "Thy brother shall rise again." She had not grasped, any more than Thomas, the truth to which Christ was trying to lead her: that he was the Resurrection and the Life, and there could be no actual death for one who falls asleep in him. But even real and earnest Christians need to be asked, "Believest thou?" that is, "Do you take in this fundamental idea in all its grand significance?" The very custom of wearing mourning when a friend dies is proof enough in itself that most of us have not yet done so. We ought to be far ahead of Martha; and yet as we stand around a dear one's open grave, we are too apt to believe, like her, in "some divine far-off event," which we call the Resurrection, rather than in him who is the Resurrection.

2. The Divine Sympathizer. Vs. 28-38. Jesus had been a beloved and familiar guest in the Bethany home; but now the circumstances had changed. He had bitter enemies even in that little company which met to weep and mourn with the afflicted sisters. Mary's quick response to Martha's summons proves how much she longed for some word of comfort from Jesus' lips that would go deeper than theirs. Whether there was a dim hope in her heart, as in Martha's, that he would do something more, the story gives no hint. "The Master is come and calleth for thee." How often buried in selfish grief the call falls on deaf ears. Jesus seems to have held no conversation with Mary as with the other sister, probably for the reason that the mourners had followed, supposing that she went out to weep at her brother's tomb, and he did not wish at such a moment to be drawn into any controversy with his enemies. "If thou hadst been here my brother had not died." But the whole world, and even the sisters themselves, would have been losers. The full depths of Christ's loving sympathy for the mourner would not have been revealed, nor his divine power over death and the grave so clearly manifested. So we may long in the midst of some great affliction for Christ's bodily presence, thinking that thus the sorrow would have been averted, instead of realizing the far better thing—that he is preparing for us by his absence. "He groaned in the spirit." Why was our Saviour thus troubled at a moment when he was about to restore his friend alive, and dry up the tears of the weeping sisters? It is more than probable that his divine heart took in not only their grief, but that of all other mourning ones—that heart which bore our griefs and carried our sorrows—and thus we can have the sweet comfort of knowing that Jesus wept for us; for us and with us. The best-dispositioned of the Jews attributed his silent tears to grief for the departed Lazarus, "Behold, how he loved him." Jesus may have thought not of Lazarus alone, but of all his followers to the end of time who would have to pass through the dark valley; of the shrinking fears and the parting pain; and it is possible, too, that some mysterious shadow from his own death may have fallen upon him, as when he said, "Now is my soul troubled," (chapter 12: 27). "Again groaning in himself," at the malignant unbelief of the Jews, who, as the event proved, were just as malignant and just as unbelieving after he had raised Lazarus as they were before.

3. The glory of God manifested. Vs. 39-44. Many lessons are here unfolded. (1) Human hands must roll away the stone. The glory of God can never be manifested by simply preaching the Gospel, while we let alone some evil thing that is keeping multitudes out of the kingdom. The call is to take away the stone without stopping to measure our ability to do it, or whether we shall arouse the prejudices and fears of men by so doing. The lodge and the tobacco habit are two mighty stones lying over the spiritual tombs of thousands. Shall we not obey the command to roll them away? (2) There are so-called "hopeless cases," which even their Christian friends have ceased to pray for. Is there not in Jesus' answer to Martha a reproof for such unbelief, for it is in the conversion of such that God's glory is most clearly manifested. (3) A soul newly raised needs to be loosed from its fettering grave-clothes. Harmful habits, wrong associations, false beliefs, will not drop off of themselves. Human hands must do the work. Would there be so many backsliders in our churches,—young Christians whose every step has been hindered by something in their past which they lack the strength or the knowledge to break away from, if we were faithful to do this most tender and needful ministry?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Rev. Milton R. Boone, D.D., in the Journal and Messenger, says that the entire colored population of Missouri is 52,607, and that there are enrolled as members of the Baptist church 21,000. There are eight or a dozen district organizations and one general organization. Several Sunday-school associations, managed principally by the young, progressive people of the church, are doing a grand work for the Master. Rev. H. H. White is Sunday-school missionary for the State.

—Baptist State anniversaries for this year are as follows: South Dakota, Sioux Falls, Oct. 1; North Dakota, Lisbon, Oct. 3; Indiana, Evansville, Oct. 5; Wisconsin, Delavan, Oct. 5; Minnesota, St. Cloud, Oct. 13; Kansas, Atchison, Oct. 13; Illinois, Bloomington, Oct. 19; Iowa, Marshalltown, Oct. 19; Colorado, Colorado Springs, Oct. 20; Michigan, East Saginaw, Oct. 21; Nebraska, Nebraska City, Oct. 28.

—On the 6th inst. a new Baptist church was dedicated at Iowa City, Ia, with much enthusiasm. Twenty-four hundred dollars, to clear off the church indebtedness, was raised. The Christians, Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians gave up their services and united in the dedication. There were many flocks in one fold.

—The latest word from Rev. C. H. Spurgeon is that he is convalescing. He was able on the 8th inst. to spend a half-hour in the garden of his residence without special fatigue. All will rejoice in the prospect of his recovery.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The opening address at the beginning of the Chicago Theological Seminary year was given in Carpenter Hall, by Prof. H. M. Scott, on the Ecumenical Relations of the Theological Seminary, with special reference to Rome, Berlin, Oxford and Chicago. Besides the students a large number of the pastors and other friends of the seminary were present. The seminary opens the new year with the largest attendance it has ever had. The most marked increase is in the number of new students in the regular course. The number in all the departments will be nearly if not quite two hundred. There are in all fifteen professors and instructors.

—The new Chapin Hall at Beloit, Wis., the gift of Dr. D. K. Pearsons, had its fitting dedication by the faculty and students at the beginning of the term, last week. It is a beautiful building for a Students' Home, with accommodations for about seventy students. Already fifty more students than can be provided for have applied for rooms in it.

—The Third Congregational church in San Francisco, having observed somewhat the operations of a brigade of the Salvation Army in that neighborhood, invited them to come in to its mid-week prayer meeting, the other week. The brotherly invitation was accepted. The Salvationists came, dressed of course in their customary uniform, and a great crowd of people came with them. The addresses, songs and personal experiences given by them awakened, it is said, the liveliest interest, to the special edification of all present.

LUTHERAN.

—Thousands of Lutherans from the Baltic provinces of Russia have emigrated to the Southern provinces of Brazil, where there are already more than 100,000 Germans. The pastors there are overworked and too few in number to withstand the encroachments of the Jesuits.

—The persecutions of the Lutherans in the Baltic province of Russia, by the Czar and his priests, have become so severe that more than 100,000 Lutherans are deprived of their pastors, who have been deposed from office and banished to Siberia for no other reason than faithfulness to their ordination vow.

—The chapel in the sequestered Augustinian convent at Heidelberg, in which the monk Martin Luther had preached during the convention of the order in 1518, has been given for a place of worship to a newly-organized Lutheran congregation in that reformed city.

—C. H. von Donner, a Lutheran merchant in Hamburg, has given $500,000 for a woman's hospital as a thank-offering for the good results of an operation performed on his wife.

—The Icelandic version of the New Testament was printed in Denmark in 1540. The 350th anniversary of this event was celebrated with much rejoicing by the Icelanders resident in and near Winnipeg. They are good Lutherans, and show their faithfulness by earnest study, and obedience to the Word.

—By order of the Russian ministry the pastors of all Lutheran churches were required to read the imperial announcement of Archduchess Sergius' defection from Lutheranism to the Greek church, before their congregations, on Sunday, May 10. This may have been intended as a humiliation for Lutherans, but disgrace rests with the party of force.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Cincinnati conference, by a vote of 81 to 59, adopted a resolution instructing its delegates to general conference "to oppose in that body any action which discriminates between the privileges of men and women in the church of God."

—Rev. P. A. Cool, A. M., of Central Illinois, has been selected by Dr. Hartzell for the presidency of Wiley University, Marshall, Texas. President Cool will enter at once upon his important work.

—Judge John Pipher, who gathered the nucleus for the First Methodist church of Manhattan, Kan., on board a steamer en route to that place from Cincinnati, was recently presented a gold-headed cane by Methodist admirers on his eightieth birthday.

—The Toronto Christian Guardian says: "Rev. Dr. Fawcett, of Chicago, gave Dr. Potts a check for $1,000, which is to be invested and will thus yield $50 or $60 per year, which sum is to be given to the ministerial student who shall deliver the best oration on Methodism. The prize is to be held in perpetuity."

—Rev. Dr. John Williamson of this city has spent the summer as evangelist in four camp meetings, at which over 1,100 professed conversion. His Bible readings were especially profitable, and a feature of every session. He has few if any superiors in this most fruitful and instructive exercise, under which sinners are reached and Christians built up on their most holy faith.

—The Rock River Conference convened at Joliet yesterday.

—Lodi, Illinois, reports ninety conversions and eighty-one accessions to the church during the past conference year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—It is said that there were 717 converts to Roman Catholicism in one diocese in England last year. The English Churchman asks, "Assuming this statement to be correct, we should like to know how many of these 'converts' were prepared for the final step by ritualistic priests."

—The summary of the work done by all the Christian denominations in Utah, is about as follows: Eighty-five mission Christian schools in seventy-eight different towns, employing 172 Christian teachers and educating about 6,500 pupils, three-fourths of whom are from Mormon families.

—There are three "mission steamers" on the waters of the Upper Congo, and many more which are busy in trading. The "mission steamers" convey preachers and teachers to the various stations on the great river and its numerous branches, and carry supplies when needed.

—The American Sabbath Union is divided for field work into districts. The territory east of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi is under the supervision of the General Secretary, Rev. J. H. Knowles, D.D., 23 Park Row, New York, and the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Wm. J. R. Taylor, D.D., Washington, D. C. Eighteen central States are under the supervision of Rev. Jas. P. Mills, of Chicago, Ill. The territory west of the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas, are under the supervision of Rev. Edward Thompson, D.D., of San Francisco, Cal.

—President Stephenson told the English Wesleyan conference that thousands and tens of thousands of Methodists are determined to put great questions of morality far beyond all considerations of party interest. It would be better that this or that party should be placed for seven years in the cold shade of opposition, than that men whose reputation was entirely bad should be suffered to take high places in office. He believed that he was speaking for thousands of Christian voters when he said that they were so fully determined to put moral questions above party considerations that, if necessary, they would rather abstain from voting and put their own party in a minority, than allow notoriously immoral men to take high office.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Tuesday the Milwaukee Avenue State bank of Chicago was given a certificate of authority to begin business, with a capital stock of $250,000.

The Trades and Labor Assembly will be reorganized as a purely legislative body.

The bar primaries resulted in the recommendation of Sigimund Zeisler for judge, to succeed Judge Altgeld.

Prohibitionists met in convention and nominated candidates for county commissioners and for drainage trustees.

The ordinance to license select all-night saloons was lost by a tie vote.

The Republican County Central Committee changed the date of the convention to Thursday, Oct. 1, and the primaries to Sept. 30.

The enormous movement of grain to the seaboard continues, and rates remain high.

All city departments will have a half holiday Oct. 7, the date for unveiling the Grant monument.

All—six—of a family named Shalk, on Sedgwick street, were suffocated in the flames of their dwelling, Friday night.

COUNTRY.

The Canadian government was advised Friday that the destitute Russian Jews recently landed will be forwarded to the United States.

At Des Moines Friday the conference of the Methodist church voted to admit women to the conference.

Lawyers say that the law giving women the ballot in school elections in Illinois is unconstitutional.

Three men were killed at Montville, Ohio, Friday by the explosion of a boiler in a jelly factory.

James Hart, a stockman at Oswego, Kan., was murdered in his bed Thursday night. Mrs. Hart's first husband was murdered a few years ago.

A sorghum manufacturing company have put in operation the largest plant in the world at Mooresville, Ind. It has a capacity of 1,000 gallons daily.

At Rochester, N. Y., Thursday the Flour City Bank levied on the James Vick seed corporation on a chattel mortgage for $85,000. An application has been made for a receiver. Liabilities between $175,000 and $200,000.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 14 to Sept. 19:

Mrs M C Gerrard, S Shroyer, W L Enlow, Mrs J N McKeown, Mrs A Haughawout, Mrs M C Eaton, H H Hinman, F F Sewart, Miss K M Hartsock, J Sutcliffe, J Kerr, Mrs M P Morris.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	96 @	96 3/4
Winter.....	96 @	96 3/4
Corn—No. 2.....	53 @	55 1/4
Oats—No. 2.....	29 @	32
Rye—No. 2.....	87 1/4 @	88
Bran per ton.....	12 50 @	12 75
Hay—Timothy.....	10 50 @	11 50
Butter, medium to best....	18 @	25
Cheese.....	06 1/2 @	09 1/4
Beans.....	1 75 @	1 85
Eggs.....	17 1/2 @	18
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 16 @	1 22
Flax.....	95 @	96
Broom corn.....	4 @	05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	26 @	35
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 1/4 @	5 1/4
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	21 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	5 90 @	6 25
Common to good....	3 65 @	4 55
Hogs.....	4 55 @	5 60
Sheep.....	3 00 @	4 50

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 04 1/2 @	1 00 3/4
Corn.....	60 @	65
Oats.....	32 3/4 @	35 1/2
Eggs.....	19 1/2 @	20
Butter.....	13 @	25 1/2
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY

Cattle.....	1 50 @	5 60
Hogs.....	3 00 @	5 00
Sheep.....	3 90 @	4 55

ORDER NOW! THIS ADVERTISEMENT MAY NOT APPEAR AGAIN.

$1,200,000. IN LAMPS

GIVEN AWAY!

To Buyers Of Our Soap.

WE SOLD OVER 90,000 boxes of "Sweet Home" Soap last year and this year want to reach 100,000 new customers and to thoroughly introduce our unrivaled Soaps and choice Toilet Preparations into the better class of American Homes. To accomplish this quickly we offer all purchasers a big inducement to order at once.

You Must Have Soap—it is an absolute necessity—the only question is where you shall buy it; we make it a decided object for you to buy of us—direct from factory to consumer, and save all middle-men and dealers' profits. We find quick sales and small profits pay.

We Do Not Claim to make any profit on this transaction, but everyone who orders becomes a permanent customer—one box often selling a dozen more—and we rely on your being so well pleased with our Box and the handsome present received that you will show them to your friends, recommend them and thereby secure us many more orders.

OUR COMBINATION BOX contains a large supply of the best Soaps and Finest Toilet Articles made, and will give satisfaction to the most fastidious and exacting person. We have been manufacturing Soaps for over fifteen years and operate one of the largest and best equipped plants in this country having a capacity of ten million pounds a year.

Remember "Sweet Home" Family Soap is an extra fine pure soap, made from refined tallow and vegetable oils. On account of its firmness and purity, each cake will do double the work of the common cheap soaps.

Read what the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut says:

J. D. LARKIN & CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

150 5th Ave., New York, June 9, 1891.

Gentlemen:—
I take pleasure in stating that during the past two years we have used in my household two of your Sweet Home Boxes with the various extras, etc., which you give; during this time we have not had to buy any other soap for laundry, household or toilet use. The goods are very pleasing to my family, and we have found the extras all that you have promised and consider the entire outfit a most excellent investment. JESSE L. HURLBUT, is a happy combination of the useful and the ornamental—beautified by the artisan, improved by the inventor—one of the most successful and appreciated products of the 19th century—which we give to induce you to buy these necessary household supplies from us. No matter how many other lamps you may have, this one will be welcome because it is so good and handsome, and gives such a clear, strong light.
Principal of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle.

THE "CHAUTAUQUA" PIANO LAMP

It is made of solid brass, polished and lacquered so it will ever retain its lustre without burnishing. It stands 4 1-2 feet high and can be extended to 6 1-2 feet in height. The burner is central draft like the "Rochester" and cannot smoke or smell, it throws a beautiful pure light of forty candle power. Easy to regulate, cannot get out of order and is in fact equal in every way to the most expensive lamp that can be purchased. It is shipped complete ready for use with chimney, wick and handsome shade, (with silk fringe and tassel) giving the light as it is thrown out into the room a mellow and subdued effect.

You Run No Risk

We do not ask you to remit in advance, or take any chances. We merely ask permission to send you a box of these goods, and if after 30 days' trial you are fully convinced that the soap and toilet articles are all we claim, you can then pay the bill—$10.00. But if you are not satisfied in every way, no charge will be made for what you have used and we will take the box away at our own expense; HOW CAN WE DO MORE?

Some people prefer to send cash, but we do not ask it—but if reader remit in advance and send us lady housekeepers with full number and town) we will please add to this beautiful Piano Lamp present.

Where paid for in advance, we ship ceived. All other orders are filled in Persons remitting in advance can be funded without argument or comment does not prove all they expect. P COMPLETE, only Ten!

We can refer you to thousands of people Soap for many years and still order at re Buffalo, Bank of Commerce, Buffalo; N. Y. New York; Metropolitan National Bank, in the United States. Also R. G. Dun & Co.,

450,000 BOXES
To Families throughout the U. S.
Established 1875, Paid up Cas
J. D. LARKIN & CO., FACTORY Seneca, and Car

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

—AN—Easy Problem
Sale of Boxes For Year 100,000
One Lamp With Each Sale @ $12
TOTAL $1,200,000

Each Box Contains

ONE HUNDRED CAKES, (full size) $6.00
"SWEET HOME" Family Soap, enough to last an average family one full year. It is made for all laundry and household purposes, and has no superior.

10 BOXES BORAXINE, a New and 1.00
Wonderful Discovery How to Wash Clothes Without Boiling or Rubbing, by the use of BORAXINE. Cannot Possibly Injure the Fabric. Simple—Easy—Efficient. Full information will be sent you. In each package is a coupon good for 10c., payable in goods. This you receive ten of these coupons—besides the Boraxine—worth in all 1.00

Two Boxes (1-2 Doz.) Modjeska Complexion Soap. 1.20
An exquisite beautifier. Producing that peculiar delicate transparency, and imparting a velvety softness to the skin which is greatly admired. It removes all roughness, redness, blotches, pimples and imperfections from the face. Especially adapted for the nursery or children's use, or those whose skin is the luxury of luxuries.

Perfume25
Fragrant perfume for the handker-popular and lasting perfume made.
Ocean Bath Toilet Soap25
Bathing substitute for sea bathing.
Cream Oatmeal Toilet Soap. .30
Elite Toilet Soap30
Modjeska Cold Cream30
Healing, Healing, Beautifies the Skin,
Cures Chapped Hands and Lips. .25
Tooth Powder25
Gum Sweets the breath.
Sachet Powder25
Soothing Soap25

Bought Separately $11.35
Bought of Manufacturer 12.00
$23.35

For Box Only, $10.00

Retail value.....$30.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, a 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON I.—Fourth Quarter.—October 4.

SUBJECT.—Christ Raising Lazarus.—John 11: 21-44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life.—John 11: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 11: 21-32. T.—John 11: 33-44. W.—John 11: 1-10. Th.—John 11: 11-20. F.—Job 19: 23-27. S.—Mark 5: 35-43. S.—John 12: 1-9.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Resurrection and the Life. Vs. 21-27. Christ risked his life by going into Judea again, as we can see by the flash of martyr courage which it brought out from Thomas: "Let us also go that we may die with him." But the idea probably never crossed his slow perceptions that Jesus had in himself the power over death, and could only die by a voluntary yielding up of himself to his enemies. Martha was a woman quick of action, and correspondingly quick of thought. Her faith was of the impulsive sort, reaching at a bound so sublime a height that she could say, "I know that even now whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee;" and the next moment sinking in dark eclipse under what seemed Christ's common-place words of comfort, "Thy brother shall rise again." She had not grasped, any more than Thomas, the truth to which Christ was trying to lead her: that he was the Resurrection and the Life, and there could be no actual death for one who falls asleep in him. But even real and earnest Christians need to be asked, "Believest thou?" that is, "Do you take in this fundamental idea in all its grand significance?" The very custom of wearing mourning when a friend dies is proof enough in itself that most of us have not yet done so. We ought to be far ahead of Martha; and yet as we stand around a dear one's open grave, we are too apt to believe, like her, in "some divine far-off event," which we call the Resurrection, rather than in him who is the Resurrection.

2. The Divine Sympathizer. Vs. 28-38. Jesus had been a beloved and familiar guest in the Bethany home; but now the circumstances had changed. He had bitter enemies even in that little company which met to weep and mourn with the afflicted sisters. Mary's quick response to Martha's summons proves how much she longed for some word of comfort from Jesus' lips that would go deeper than theirs. Whether there was a dim hope in her heart, as in Martha's, that he would do something more, the story gives no hint. "The Master is come and calleth for thee." How often buried in selfish grief the call falls on deaf ears. Jesus seems to have held no conversation with Mary as with the other sister, probably for the reason that the mourners had followed, supposing that she went out to weep at her brother's tomb, and he did not wish at such a moment to be drawn into any controversy with his enemies. "If thou hadst been here my brother had not died." But the whole world, and even the sisters themselves, would have been losers. The full depths of Christ's loving sympathy for the mourner would not have been revealed, nor his divine power over death and the grave so clearly manifested. So we may long in the midst of some great affliction for Christ's bodily presence, thinking that thus the sorrow would have been averted, instead of realizing the far better thing—that he is preparing for us by his absence. "He groaned in the spirit." Why was our Saviour thus troubled at a moment when he was about to restore his friend alive, and dry up the tears of the weeping sisters? It is more than probable that his divine heart took in not only their grief, but that of all other mourning ones—that heart which bore our griefs and carried our sorrows—and thus we can have the sweet comfort of knowing that Jesus wept for us; for us and with us. The best-dispositioned of the Jews attributed his silent tears to grief for the departed Lazarus, "Behold, how he loved him." Jesus may have thought not of Lazarus alone, but of all his followers to the end of time who would have to pass through the dark valley; of the shrinking fears and the parting pain; and it is possible, too, that some mysterious shadow from his own death may have fallen upon him, as when he said, "Now is my soul troubled," (chapter 12: 27). "Again groaning in himself;" at the malignant unbelief of the Jews, who, as the event proved, were just as malignant and just as unbelieving after he had raised Lazarus as they were before.

3. The glory of God manifested. Vs. 39-44. Many lessons are here unfolded. (1) Human hands must roll away the stone. The glory of God can never be manifested by simply preaching the Gospel, while we let alone some evil thing that is keeping multitudes out of the kingdom. The call is to take away the stone without stopping to measure our ability to do it, or whether we shall arouse the prejudices and fears of men by so doing. The lodge and the tobacco habit are two mighty stones lying over the spiritual tombs of thousands. Shall we not obey the command to roll them away? (2) There are so-called "hopeless cases," which even their Christian friends have ceased to pray for. Is there not in Jesus' answer to Martha a reproof for such unbelief, for it is in the conversion of such that God's glory is most clearly manifested. (3) A soul newly raised needs to be loosed from its fettering grave-clothes. Harmful habits, wrong associations, false beliefs, will not drop off of themselves. Human hands must do the work. Would there be so many backsliders in our churches,—young Christians whose every step has been hindered by something in their past which they lack the strength or the knowledge to break away from, if we were faithful to do this most tender and needful ministry?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Rev. Milton R. Boone, D.D., in the Journal and Messenger, says that the entire colored population of Missouri is 52,607, and that there are enrolled as members of the Baptist church 21,000. There are eight or a dozen district organizations and one general organization. Several Sunday-school associations, managed principally by the young, progressive people of the church, are doing a grand work for the Master. Rev. H. H. White is Sunday-school missionary for the State.

—Baptist State anniversaries for this year are as follows: South Dakota, Sioux Falls, Oct. 1; North Dakota, Lisbon, Oct. 3; Indiana, Evansville, Oct. 5; Wisconsin, Delavan, Oct. 5; Minnesota, St. Cloud, Oct. 13; Kansas, Atchison, Oct. 13; Illinois, Bloomington, Oct. 19; Iowa, Marshalltown, Oct. 19; Colorado, Colorado Springs, Oct. 20; Michigan, East Saginaw, Oct. 21; Nebraska, Nebraska City, Oct. 28.

—On the 6th inst. a new Baptist church was dedicated at Iowa City, Ia, with much enthusiasm. Twenty-four hundred dollars, to clear off the church indebtedness, was raised. The Christians, Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians gave up their services and united in the dedication. There were many flocks in one fold.

—The latest word from Rev. C. H. Spurgeon is that he is convalescing. He was able on the 8th inst. to spend a half-hour in the garden of his residence without special fatigue. All will rejoice in the prospect of his recovery.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The opening address at the beginning of the Chicago Theological Seminary year was given in Carpenter Hall, by Prof. H. M. Scott, on the Ecumenical Relations of the Theological Seminary, with special reference to Rome, Berlin, Oxford and Chicago. Besides the students a large number of the pastors and other friends of the seminary were present. The seminary opens the new year with the largest attendance it has ever had. The most marked increase is in the number of new students in the regular course. The number in all the departments will be nearly if not quite two hundred. There are in all fifteen professors and instructors.

—The new Chapin Hall at Beloit, Wis., the gift of Dr. D. K. Pearsons, had its fitting dedication by the faculty and students at the beginning of the term, last week. It is a beautiful building for a Students' Home, with accommodations for about seventy students. Already fifty more students than can be provided for have applied for rooms in it.

—The Third Congregational church in San Francisco, having observed somewhat the operations of a brigade of the Salvation Army in that neighborhood, invited them to come in to its mid-week prayer meeting, the other week. The brotherly invitation was accepted. The Salvationists came, dressed of course in their customary uniform, and a great crowd of people came with them. The addresses, songs and personal experiences given by them awakened, it is said, the liveliest interest, to the special edification of all present.

LUTHERAN.

—Thousands of Lutherans from the Baltic provinces of Russia have emigrated to the Southern provinces of Brazil, where there are already more than 100,000 Germans. The pastors there are overworked and too few in number to withstand the encroachments of the Jesuits.

—The persecutions of the Lutherans in the Baltic province of Russia, by the Czar and his priests, have become so severe that more than 100,000 Lutherans are deprived of their pastors, who have been deposed from office and banished to Siberia for no other reason than faithfulness to their ordination vow.

—The chapel in the sequestered Augustinian convent at Heidelberg, in which the monk Martin Luther had preached during the convention of the order in 1518, has been given for a place of worship to a newly-organized Lutheran congregation in that reformed city.

—C. H. von Donner, a Lutheran merchant in Hamburg, has given $500,000 for a woman's hospital as a thank-offering for the good results of an operation performed on his wife.

—The Icelandic version of the New Testament was printed in Denmark in 1540. The 350th anniversary of this event was celebrated with much rejoicing by the Icelanders resident in and near Winnipeg. They are good Lutherans, and show their faithfulness by earnest study, and obedience to the Word.

—By order of the Russian ministry the pastors of all Lutheran churches were required to read the imperial announcement of Archduchess Sergius' defection from Lutheranism to the Greek church, before their congregations, on Sunday, May 10. This may have been intended as a humiliation for Lutherans, but disgrace rests with the party of force.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Cincinnati conference, by a vote of 81 to 59, adopted a resolution instructing its delegates to general conference "to oppose in that body any action which discriminates between the privileges of men and women in the church of God."

—Rev. P. A. Cool, A. M., of Central Illinois, has been selected by Dr. Hartzell for the presidency of Wiley University, Marshall, Texas. President Cool will enter at once upon his important work.

—Judge John Pipher, who gathered the nucleus for the First Methodist church of Manhattan, Kan., on board a steamer en route to that place from Cincinnati, was recently presented a gold-headed cane by Methodist admirers on his eightieth birthday.

—The Toronto Christian Guardian says: "Rev. Dr. Fawcett, of Chicago, gave Dr. Potts a check for $1,000, which is to be invested and will thus yield $50 or $60 per year, which sum is to be given to the ministerial student who shall deliver the best oration on Methodism. The prize is to be held in perpetuity."

—Rev. Dr. John Williamson of this city has spent the summer as evangelist in four camp meetings, at which over 1,100 professed conversion. His Bible readings were especially profitable, and a feature of every session. He has few if any superiors in this most fruitful and instructive exercise, under which sinners are reached and Christians built up on their most holy faith.

—The Rock River Conference convened at Joliet yesterday.

—Lodi, Illinois, reports ninety conversions and eighty-one accessions to the church during the past conference year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—It is said that there were 717 converts to Roman Catholicism in one diocese in England last year. The English Churchman asks, "Assuming this statement to be correct, we should like to know how many of these 'converts' were prepared for the final step by ritualistic priests."

—The summary of the work done by all the Christian denominations in Utah, is about as follows: Eighty-five mission Christian schools in seventy-eight different towns, employing 172 Christian teachers and educating about 6,500 pupils, three-fourths of whom are from Mormon families.

—There are three "mission steamers" on the waters of the Upper Congo, and many more which are busy in trading. The "mission steamers" convey preachers and teachers to the various stations on the great river and its numerous branches, and carry supplies when needed.

—The American Sabbath Union is divided for field work into districts. The territory east of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi is under the supervision of the General Secretary, Rev. J. H. Knowles, D.D., 23 Park Row, New York, and the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Wm. J. R. Taylor, D.D., Washington, D. C. Eighteen central States are under the supervision of Rev. Jas. P. Mills, of Chicago, Ill. The territory west of the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas, are under the supervision of Rev. Edward Thompson, D.D., of San Francisco, Cal.

—President Stephenson told the English Wesleyan conference that thousands and tens of thousands of Methodists are determined to put great questions of morality far beyond all considerations of party interest. It would be better that this or that party should be placed for seven years in the cold shade of opposition, than that men whose reputation was entirely bad should be suffered to take high places in office. He believed that he was speaking for thousands of Christian voters when he said that they were so fully determined to put moral questions above party considerations that, if necessary, they would rather abstain from voting and put their own party in a minority, than allow notoriously immoral men to take high office.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Tuesday the Milwaukee Avenue State bank of Chicago was given a certificate of authority to begin business, with a capital stock of $250,000.

The Trades and Labor Assembly will be reorganized as a purely legislative body.

The bar primaries resulted in the recommendation of Sigimund Zeisler for judge, to succeed Judge Altgeld.

Prohibitionists met in convention and nominated candidates for county commissioners and for drainage trustees.

The ordinance to license select all-night saloons was lost by a tie vote.

The Republican County Central Committee changed the date of the convention to Thursday, Oct. 1, and the primaries

ORDER NOW! THIS ADVERTISEMENT MAY NOT APPEAR AGAIN.

$1,200,000. IN LAMPS

GIVEN AWAY!

To BUYERS OF OUR SOAP.

WE SOLD OVER 90,000 boxes of "Sweet Home" Soap last year and this year want Edition: _____

Date: June 12, 1880

Description: 8 page letter concerning ill health & return to U.S.

Location: _____

Stacks: Range: _____ Section: _____ Shelf: _____

Vault: S 2, b 3

Cage: _____ Cabinet: _____ Shelf: _____

Year inventoried: _____

For the parlor, hall, library or guest chamber, parlor, club rooms, lecture rooms, wedding, birthday or anniversary present, there is nothing finer, more useful or ornamental than a "Chautauqua" Lamp.

AINS (full size) $6.00
ly Soap,
ar. It is made
as no superior.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 14 to Sept. 19:

Mrs M C Gerrard, S Shroyer, W L Enlow, Mrs J N McKeown, Mrs A Haughawout, Mrs M C Eaton, H H Hinman, F F Sewart, Miss K M Hartsock, J Sutcliff, J Kerr, Mrs M P Morris.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table with market prices for various commodities like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rye, Bran, Hay, Butter, Cheese, Beans, Eggs, Seeds, Lumber, Wool, Cattle, Hogs, Sheep.

NEW YORK.

Table with market prices for Wheat, Corn, Oats, Eggs, Butter, Wool.

KANSAS CITY

Table with market prices for Cattle, Hogs, Sheep.

It is shipped complete with shade, (with silk fringe and tassel) giving the light as it is thrown out into the room a mellow and subdued effect.

You Run No Risk

We do not ask you to remit in advance, or take any chances. We merely ask permission to send you a box of these goods, and if after 30 days' trial you are fully convinced that the soap and toilet articles are all we claim, you can then pay the bill—$10.00. But if you are not satisfied in every way, no charge will be made for what you have used and we will take the box away at our own expense; HOW CAN WE DO MORE?

Some people prefer to send cash with their order. We do not ask it—but if readers remit in advance and send us lady housekeepers with full number and town) we will pl: addition to this beautiful Ple able present.

Where paid for in advance, we ship colved. All other orders are filled in. Persons remitting in advance can fund without argument or comme does not prove all they expect. P COMPLETE, only Ten!

We can refer you to thousands of peop Soap for many years and still order at re Buffalo, Bank of Commerce, Buffalo; Ne New York; Metropolitan National Bank, i in the United States. Also R. G. Dun & Co.

450,000 BOXES To Families throughout the U. Established 1875. Paid up Cas J. D. LARKIN & CO. Seneca and Cai

Retail value.....$30.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear

TWO BOXES BORAXINE, a New and 1.00

Wonderful Discovery How to Wash Clothes Without Boiling or Rubbing, by the use of BORAXINE. Cannot Possibly Injure the Fabric. Simple—Easy—Efficient. Full information will be sent you. In each package is a coupon good for 10c., payable in goods. Thus you receive ten of these coupons—besides the Boraxine—worth in all 1.00

Two Boxes (1-2 Doz.) Modjeska Complexion Soap. 1.20

An exquisite beautifier. Producing that peculiar delicate transparency, and imparting a velvety softness to the skin which is greatly admired. It removes all roughness, redness, blotches, pimples and imperfections from the face. Especially adapted for the nursery or children's use, or those whose skin is

- Perfume25
licious perfume for the handker-
popular and lasting perfume made.
Ocean Bath Toilet Soap25
Cream Oatmeal Toilet Soap. .30
ating substitute for sea bathing.
Elite Toilet Soap30
Modjeska Cold Cream30
ching, Healing, Beautifies the skin,
Cures Chapped Hands and Lips.
Tooth Powder25
ens the gums, sweetens the breath.
k Sachet Powder25
aving Soap25

Bought Separately $11.35

ught of Manufacturer 12.00

$23.35

r Box Only, $10.00

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any ad dress on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET. CHICAGO.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

HOME AND HEALTH.

CARE OF THE TEETH.

The temporary teeth should have the best possible care. Their function is an important one; they are to "hold the fort" till the permanent set are ready to come upon the scene, and should then give way to their successors with the cheerfulness of a displaced politician. It is, therefore, a mistake to suppose that on account of their temporary character their decay is a matter of little consequence, or that they may be extracted at any time without injury. They should be kept in the best condition possible until the development of their successors absorbs their roots, and they become loosened. If this loosening fails to take place, as frequently occurs, they should be drawn as soon as the crown of the permanent tooth appears through the gum, in order that the latter may take its proper place in line. Two or three times a year is not too often to have a dentist examine the mouth of a child, till the permanent teeth have developed.

The first molar of each set—known as the six-year molar—may appear anywhere from five to seven years of age, and this, besides being the first of the permanent teeth, is also specially liable to decay. Very generally it is the first tooth requiring the dentist's forceps, and may be drawn before the twelve-year molar of the same set makes its appearance. In this case the loser, as the cavity will be partially filled by other teeth when they appear, often believes that his quota of teeth has been less than his neighbor's. Even parents often confound these molars with the temporary set and neglect them when known to be diseased, supposing they will soon give place to others. The second set of molars appears at about the age of twelve, and the last or wisdom teeth five or six years later. The advent of any of these is liable to be accompanied by soreness, ulceration, or more serious complications; the eyes or ears may be affected, or serious nervous troubles may result. When these or similar complications arise, not readily understood, it is well to look for the cause in the mouth.—Good House-keeping.

PROTECTION FROM LIGHTNING.

The fatal lightning stroke is so frequent that persons much exposed to thunder storms should take all known precautions against it. In a scientific paper recently read before the Royal Meteorological Society, Mr. G. J. Symons, F. R. S., the English meteorologist, presented a large mass of important data on the phenomenon of thunder storms.

Ordinarily persons exposed to a thunder storm flee to the nearest shelter to escape wetting. Mr. Symons shows that "if a man is thoroughly wet it is impossible for lightning to kill him." He refers to a remarkable proof of this fact. The great scientific lecturer, Faraday, once demonstrated to his audience at the Royal Institution that with powerful aids to electrical apparatus at his disposal it was impossible for him to kill a rat whose coat had been saturated with water. It would be well, therefore, for any person in a severe thunder storm and liable to a lightning stroke to allow himself to be drenched with rain at the earliest moment possible, and in the absence of sufficient rainfall to avail himself of any other means at hand to wet his outer apparel.—N. Y. Herald.

TO MEND RUBBER CLOTHING.

It is sometimes very convenient to have a cement for India rubber, by means of which a worn spot in the overshoes or any rubber article may be repaired without expense or trouble. To make a small quantity of such cement, sufficient to keep for emergency, purchase five cents' worth of red rubber from some dealer in dentist's supplies. Cut it into bits, put into a bottle, and cover it with chloroform. In about ten minutes it will be dissolved. It should be applied with a brush like a muclage brush. Do not leave the bottle uncorked for an instant, except while removing the brush, and apply the cement as rapidly as possible, or it will harden. Where there is a large hole a piece of what is known as "rubber dam," which may also be purchased from a dealer in dentist's supplies, may be useful. Cut out a piece of this of suitable size, fasten it over the hole with a few stitches and brush over the rubber with the cement. Care should be taken not to inhale any chloroform nor to leave this cement where children can get to it.—New York Tribune.

USES FOR OLD PAPER.

Most housekeepers know how invaluable newspapers are for packing away the winter clothing, the printing ink acting as a defiance to the stoutest moth, some housewives think, as successfully as camphor or tar paper. For this reason newspapers are invaluable under the carpet, laid over the regular carpet paper. The most valuable quality of newspapers in the kitchen, however, is their ability to keep out the air. It is well known that ice, completely enveloped in newspapers so that all air is shut out, will keep a longer time than under other conditions; and that a pitcher of ice water wrapped in a newspaper, with the ends of the paper twisted together to exclude the air, will remain all night in any summer room with scarcely any perceptible melting of the ice. These facts should be utilized oftener than they are in the care of the sick at night. In freezing ice cream, when the ice is scarce, pack the freezer only three-quarters full of ice and salt, and finish with newspapers, and the difference in the time of freezing and quality of the cream is not perceptible from the result where the freezer is packed full of ice. After removing the dasher, it is better to cork up the cream and cover it tightly with a packing of newspapers than to use more ice. The newspapers retain the cold already in the ice better than a packing of cracked ice and salt, which must have crevices to admit the air.

The people at the World's Dispensary of Buffalo, N. Y., have a stock-taking time once a year, and what do you think they do? Count the number of bottles that've been returned by the men and women who say that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery or Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription didn't do what they said it would do.

And how many do you think they have to count. One in ten? Not one in five hundred!

Here are two remedies—one the "Golden Medical Discovery," for regulating and invigorating the liver and purifying the blood; the other, the hope of weakly womanhood; they've been sold for years, sold by the million bottles; sold under a positive guarantee, and not one in five hundred can say: "It was not the medicine for me!" And—is there any reason why you should be the one? And—supposing you are, what do you lose? Absolutely nothing!

DON'T KNIT but buy Home-Made Hosiery. It is close knit from all wool yarn, with double heels and toes. A pair of the BEST for men, 45 cents; a good pair 25 cents.

The most marked increase is in students in the regular course. The departments will be nearly if not full. There are in all fifteen professors.

—The new Chapin Hall at Belmont, Dr. D. K. Pearsons, had its fitting and students at the beginning week. It is a beautiful building with accommodations for about seventy-five more students than can be applied for rooms in it.

—The Third Congregational church having observed somewhat the operations of the Salvation Army in that neighborhood to come in to its mid-week prayer week. The brotherly invitation of the Salvationists came, dressed of course in uniform, and a great crowd of people responded. The addresses, songs and personal ministrations awakened, it is said, the liveliest interest in the special edification of all present.

LUTHERAN—The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond.—Witness.

EVERY FAMILY

Should be provided with Ayer's Pills. No other aperient is in such general demand or so highly recommended by the profession. Mild but thorough in operation, these pills are the best of all remedies for constipation, biliousness, heartburn, indigestion, flatulency, loss of appetite, liver complaint, and sick headache. They break up colds, fevers, and malaria, relieve rheumatism and neuralgia, and are indispensable to travelers, either by land or sea. Sugar-coated and compounded of the purest vegetable cathartics, they may be taken with impunity by old and young. Physicians recommend these pills in preference to any other. H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark., says: "In 1853, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."

Ayer's Cathartic Pills
Every Dose Effective.

TO YOU FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or
SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or
SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or
McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
The Voice (N. Y.)	$1.00	and Cynosure $2.50
Union Signal (new subscribers only)	.50	" 2.00
Cosmopolitan and premium (see premium offer)	3.50	" 4.80
North American Review	5.00	" 5.50
Popular Science Monthly	5.00	" 5.50
Century Magazine	4.00	" 5.00
Harper's Magazine	4.00	" 4.50
Harper's Weekly	4.00	" 4.75
Scribner's Magazine	3.00	" 4.00
Independent	3.00	" 4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 13th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND; OR, Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

Most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.
Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great host who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of their lives, and to give comfort and help to those who are left behind.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1
Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 13x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,
WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

FARM NOTES.

SUCCESSFUL DAIRYING.

Because a man owns cows, and makes a business of dairying, is no reason in itself that he is qualified for making the pursuit a success; the first requisite in that direction is the man himself. He must be quick to note and remove unfavorable conditions, taking advantage of those that are favorable. He may or may not be familiar with the fine points that go to make a good milking cow, but he should thoroughly know his own cattle—not only those that give the most milk, but which of them yields the richest. Accurate observation and practical common sense will serve him a better purpose than scientific knowledge, says the Indian Farmer. He may not be able to make a chemical analysis of the different foods provided for his cows, but he must be able to determine which are most concentrated and which most bulky—the rations must be balanced, so as to give best and most economical results—quantity must not be mistaken for quality, a combination must be made that will produce the requisite amount of fat, heat and muscle. Food often stimulates the flow of milk without adding to its richness. The cow owner must know that each of his cows is giving him a paying return, and he is saving and feeding his fodder in the best condition and correctly and as to whether his methods of handling the product of his herd are the best and most economical. Upon his ability to determine results on these points rests the solution of the question as to whether he is qualified for a successful dairyman.—Mass. Ploughman.

CHANGING CHICKEN GROUNDS.

This is a matter of importance to poultry keepers. It has been truly said that one of the difficulties of successful chicken farming on very small places is not the lack of range and exercise, but the fact that the same ground must be run over from year to year. Some who have plenty of room make this same mistake from negligence, placing the chicken-coop year after year on the same spot. Lice may be kept off from the chickens anywhere with sufficient care, but the foulness of chicken droppings in time completely saturates the soil and breeds diseases that destroy the flock. The hen-house must be a substantial building, but it can be kept clean by care, and insects destroyed by frequent fumigation. But it will be an advantage if the hen-house is not so large that it can be readily moved. In some places we know that the hen-house location is changed every few years, and each time to a spot that has been plowed and seeded since the chickens were there before. It is better, anyway, not to have very large chicken-houses. If a large number of chickens are kept, then build more houses, and have them scattered as much as possible. This may make more trouble in feeding the fowls, but it will be far less than the loss and expense of sickness caused by huddling too many fowls in one place.—Exchange.

IMPROVE YOUR STOCK.

According to a sensible writer, it appears to some farmers that the stocking with pure breeds is expensive, and for this reason they are slow to use something better than the stock they have; but he declares that it is not expensive to grade up the stock, as a single male may improve an entire herd or flock. Improvement adds size and productiveness, and it is a loss to him who fails to make his young stock superior to the old ones. By aiming for some better, it will be but a few years before the entire herd is changed in characteristics, and will possess greater value as well as give a large profit.

THE SELECTION OF SEEDS.

An English farmer, noted for his success as a seed grower, began his useful career by going through his fields and selecting the largest and best ears of wheat as seed for a new sowing. Thus he produced ears nine inches in length, containing 121 grains, and from this seed he grew eighty bushels of wheat per acre. Pedigree seed, he called it. Now, if any farmer will do the same, and begin now and grow a few years, and at the end be able to show some wheat whose pedigree goes back through several crops of 40, 50 or more bushels per acre, he will have done the world a service and himself, too.

HARD VS. SOFT MAPLES.

The popular notion that soft maples grow more rapidly than the sugar-bearing kind, called hard, or rock maple is erroneous. The soft maple naturally grows on low, rich marsh ground, which may cause its greater luxuriance in such conditions. Where both have been transplanted on high ground there is little difference in growth. The hard maple is a few days later putting forth leaves in spring, but otherwise is every way as desirable as the other, and for sugar making is more so.

IN FAVOR OF DUCKS.

It is printed that Mr. M. K. Boyer, a well-known Pennsylvania poultry breeder, claims that, aside from the meat and eggs, ducks are valuable on a farm for their manure. It is of the richest quality, and ranks next to hog manure. For gardening purposes he finds it excellent. His experience is that a duck will make a good wheelbarrow load of manure in a year. Every farmer should keep a few ducks. The Pekin, Rouen, Cayuga, and Aylesbury ducks are land fowls and need no bathing water. They are by far the best fowls for a farm.

Just how an alterative medicine cleanses the system is an open question; but that Ayer's Sarsaparilla does produce a radical change in the blood is well attested on all sides. It is everywhere considered the best remedy for blood disorders.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
	SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Olerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
	TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS. ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escape-ments, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgin movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00
With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50
(11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer-head, horse-head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00
With the Cynosure one year, hunting case..... 23.00
With the Cynosure one year, open face..... 19.75

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The United States Official Report

Of the Government Baking Powder tests recently made, under authority of Congress, by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., furnishes the highest authoritative information as to which powder is the best. The Official Report shows the ROYAL superior to all others in leavening power; a cream of tartar powder of highest quality.

The Canadian Tests:

"The strength of the Royal is shown to be 23 per cent. greater than any other.

"As a result of my investigations I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength.

"F. X. VALADE,

"Public Analyst, Ontario,
"Dominion of Canada."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

During the month of August the United States exported $28,853,510 worth of breadstuffs, and $7,602,050 worth of beef and hog products.

George W. Updike, of the Grier Commission Company, of St. Louis, filed a suit Thursday charging J. B. Kelor, a partner, with having appropriated $40,000 of the firm's money.

At Big Rapids, Mich., Thursday 3,000,000 feet of lumber belonging to the Rodney Lumber Company were burned. Loss $25,000, partly insured.

Fire destroyed A. J. Simpson's sawmill at Layac Creek, Texas, Wednesday night, causing a loss of $50,000.

Thieves set fire to the village of Cargano, Ill., Wednesday night, and during the conflagration burglarized several houses. The loss by fire will exceed $30,000.

Fire destroyed the Memphis (Tenn.) Theater Thursday. Loss $50,000.

At Hastings, Minn., Thursday two elevators and the electric light works were burned. Loss, $100,000.

An explosion of gasoline in a store at Eldon, Iowa, started a fire that did $10,000 damage Wednesday night.

At Peoria, Ill., Thursday J. Newman was shot and mortally wounded by Joseph Githens in a quarrel over a whisky bill.

Thursday the Saxony woolen mills at Newburg, N. Y., suspended operations. Judgments aggregating $25,000 have been obtained against the concern.

It is found that the assets of the suspended First National Bank of Kansas City, Kan., are $1,680 and the liabilities $34,000.

Judge Dubose overruled the motion for a new trial Thursday at Memphis, Tenn., in the case of Colonel H. Clay

King, convicted of the murder of David H. Poston March 10, and sentenced him to be hanged Nov. 6.

Two freight trains on the C. B. and Q. collided near Aurora, Ill., Wednesday night, and shortly after another freight crashed into the wreck. Engineer John Ruddy was killed.

President Harrison signed a proclamation Friday opening the newly ceded lands of the Sac, Fox, Iowa, and Pottawatomie Indians in Oklahoma. The lands are now open for entry.

The United States has bought 182,000 acres of land in the Indian Territory of the Indians for 35 cents an acre.

FOREIGN.

Yellow fever is said to be raging at Rio Janeiro.

Phyloxera is ravaging the vines in South Styria.

In the Volga province in Russia there is already great suffering from famine.

The French government has recognized the provisional government of Chili.

The damage caused by the flood at Consuegra, Spain, is estimated at $2,500,000. Bodies of the victims are dumped by scores in common trenches.

Net profits of the Bank of England for the six months ending Aug. 31 were $763,238.

It is reported that murder and outrages by the starving peasants who haunt the forest are of daily occurrence in the south of Russia.

It is estimated that 2,000,000 pesetas will be required to repair damages caused by the recent flood in the Province of Almeria, in Spain.

The government has chosen a five-year-old relative of the ex-Mahrajah as the new Rajah of Manipur. A British officer will administer affairs during his minority.

Two steamers, one Greek, the other Italian, collided in the Bay of Gibraltar Tuesday, and both sank. Sixty-five lives were lost.

LIBERALITY.

Our readers have doubtless noticed from time to time in the past year or two, the large advertisements of Messrs. J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., telling all about their Great Bargain Box. This firm is one of the largest manufacturers of household and Toilet Soaps in the country. Their Sweet Home Soap has won an enviable reputation. All of their goods are the best that skill and money combined can produce. They have received thousands of testimonials from their numerous patrons, in praise not only of the purity of Sweet Home Soap, but also of the many handsome and useful presents which they give with every box.

Messrs. Larkin & Co. have adopted new and advanced ideas in the conduct of their immense business. One of the leading methods is in dealing direct with the user. They do not employ an army of traveling men to sell their goods to the jobber, who in turn has his own men to sell the retailer, thus materially adding to the cost of the goods, as each one handling them must have a profit.

It does not need any argument to convince every one that their method of selling direct to consumers is of great advantage to every housewife.

For sometime this firm has given handsome, useful presents of needed household articles to all purchasers of their soaps. Now they offer to outdo all previous efforts, and place within the reach of everybody an article which will make glad the heart of every lady in the land.

There are none who do not admire a beautiful piano lamp—the question is and has been how to possess one. Messrs. Larkin & Co. tell in their advertisement how to get one and that, too, at a price which all can afford.

The Chautauqua Piano Lamp stands 4 ft. 6 inches high. By means of the patent adjustable slide it can be raised to 6 feet 6 inches. It is made of brass, lacquered and handsomely finished. Fitted with the best central draft burner, handsome 5 foot silk shade, fringed, it is fit to adorn any parlor or guest chamber of the most fastidious.

We assure our readers the goods are all that is claimed for them, as we ordered one of the combination boxes and are entirely satisfied.

FREE TO BOYS AND GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE.

Worth $45. If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle, [26 inch wheels], worth $45.00 they can obtain it free, without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1000 or more. We deliver Bicycle free anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO. 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FILL YOUR PURSE

and improve your prospects. Why not? You can do so honorably, surely. Have you read our illustrated advertisement in the first number of this paper, this month? Better do so, if you haven't. We can and will, if you please, teach you quickly and without PAY, how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. You can commence at home, in any part of America. We start you. Both sexes. All ages. Easy to learn and manage. All particulars FREE. Better write at once, if you haven't already. Address Stinson & Co., Box 1500, Portland, Maine.

HARVEY.

Chicago's Temperance Suburb.

New Blocks - - Just Subdivided

Adjoining Atkinson Steel Spring Works and Bellaire Stamping Co.'s Immense Manufactory, Now Being Erected.

RARE CHANCE FOR INVESTORS TO REAP A PROFIT.

COME, SEE, AND GET FIRST CHOICE, AT FIRST PRICES.

BE SURE YOUR DEED COMES THROUGH

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION

As their deeds POSITIVELY, ABSOLUTELY and FOREVER prevent Saloons and kindred evils.

ADDITIONS TO HARVEY ARE NOT THUS PROTECTED.

Send for copy of Prohibition Clause in Deed, that has been tested in the highest courts. This is important; also for New Plats and prices.

The Harvey Land Association,

819 TO 825 THE ROOKERY, CHICAGO.

HARVEY.

NO SALOONS.

AS AN INVESTMENT

THE KEY TO THE WHOLE SITUATION IS

ACADEMY ADDITION.

On which the HARVEY INDUSTRIAL ACADEMY is being built, is located between 147th street and the Calumet River. WITHIN 4 BLOCKS OF THE GEOGRAPHICAL CENTER OF HARVEY. The completion of this building and the opening of the fall term will largely increase the value of all property in Harvey. Those who purchase now in ACADEMY ADDITION buy at first prices. It is in this addition that the manager of the Pullman Palace Car Company of New Orleans has purchased 48 lots. Houses being erected in this Addition rent for 30 per cent of cost of house and lot. These are opportunities for investments seldom offered. It is crossed by the proposed Elevated Road to the city. It is the nearest to the World's Fair Site; over a half mile of river frontage. Lots from $200 upward. Payments to suit. We will send FREE to the CYNOSURE readers the ONLY PLAT which shows the WHOLE of HARVEY as originally proposed. Owing to the superior advantages, beautiful location, educational center, natural drainage, etc., it is not surprising that those who come to Harvey to purchase locate in Academy Addition. We are exclusive agents for ACADEMY ADDITION.

THE FOLLOWING PROHIBITORY CLAUSE IS IN EVERY DEED:

The party of the second part "shall not erect or permit to be erected upon the premises hereby conveyed, any building to be used or occupied, or any part thereof, at any time hereafter, as a slaughter house, glue or bone factory, or manufactory of gunpowder, or any bone-boiling establishment or factory, or liquor saloon of any kind, or for any other dangerous, vexatious or offensive purpose or establishment whatsoever; or allow, suffer or permit any intoxicating drink or drinks to be manufactured or sold, or given away upon said premises, or any gambling to be carried on thereon, or any house or other place of lewd or immoral practice thereupon; and any violation of the above conditions, or either or any of them, shall absolutely divest the said party of the second part heirs, executors, administrators and assigns of the entire estate hereby conveyed, and of the appurtenances thereto belonging, and the same shall, ipso facto, revert to and belong to the said party of the first part, his successor or successors and assigns as fully and completely as if the aforesaid grant and conveyance had never been made, and all the covenants and agreements of the said party of the first part shall thereupon cease and determine, and the consideration paid thereon shall be absolutely forfeited to the said party of the first part, his successor or successors and assigns; it being expressly understood and agreed that the foregoing covenants, agreements and conditions, and each of them, so as to be kept and performed by the grantee herein heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, are part of the consideration for this conveyance."

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., - - - 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

P. S.—Our largest sales in Academy Addition are made to customers who visit Harvey and look over the whole situation.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 3.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,118.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:		SELECTED:
Notes and Comments....	1	My Experience in Free-
Free masonry in the		Masonry.....	3
Courts.....	8	Brazilian Preferences...	3
Keeley's Cure, Prohibi-		REFORM NEWS:
tion and Salvation....	8	From the New England
Nearing the Danger-Line	8	Agent; Round About
Influence Achieved by		Chicago.....	4,5
Fuss and Feathers....	8	CORRESPONDENCE:
A Wonderful Speech....	9	The Trail of the Serpent;
The Christian Union		Utah and the Mormons
Conference.....	9	—III; Pith and Point..	5,6
Personal Mention.....	9	LITERATURE.....	6
CONTRIBUTIONS:		IN BRIEF.....	7
What Religious Masons,		AGENTS AND LECTURERS...	7
Can Do.....	1	THE N. C. A.....	7
Two Women Grinding at		THE HOME.....	10
the Mill.....	2	TEMPERANCE.....	11
The Foe We Meet.....	2	BIBLE LESSON.....	12
Masonic Salvation.....	2	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
The City of Baltimore...	3	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER....	4	HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4	FARM NOTES.....	15

In the State of New York the Masons boast of having 705 ordained ministers of the Gospel among the members of their lodges, and it is probably true. How many of them are Christians?

The Philadelphia Ledger mentions the case of a fourteen-year-old boy who was arrested for highway robbery, in whose pockets were found not only his weapons of violence, but the inciting cause thereof—copies of sensational novels, describing the bold life of Western highwaymen, the sale of which should be "regulated" as is the sale of other poisons.

The Western Catholic News says: "The editor of the Christian Cynosure and his wife are a secret society." Oh, no; you are mistaken. We are only a private corporation for the transaction of legitimate business under the divine sanction, in the marital and parental line, that is all. The Jesuits and the Clan-na-Gael, and the Masons and Odd-fellows, if you please, never did anything that God could sanction. We spurn the comparison.

For several years past there has not been so much Reform work done, at any one time all along the line, under the auspices of the National Christian Association, as at present. This statement applies not only to the encouraging and increased demand, from all quarters, for anti-secrecy literature, but to the large force of intelligent and energetic lecturers who are now in the field. These comprise Rev. J. P. Stoddard, in charge of the New England work; Rev. H. H. Hinman, in Wisconsin; Rev. C. F. Hawley, in Kansas, where he will attend the State Reform Convention at Denison, on the 14th of October; Rev. William Fenton, in Illinois; Rev. J. V. Potts, in Iowa; Rev. S. F. Porter will soon visit the Southern colleges, and Bro. W. B. Stoddard is in New York. In addition to these, Bro. I. R. B. Arnold is at present visiting and lecturing in this vicinity for a short time before returning, with his floating chapel, to his river missionary work. Parties desiring to have either of these agents lecture at special places in the States to which they are respectively assigned may communicate directly with this office.

America, the well-known and ably edited "Journal for Americans," which has been, for three years and a half, under the management, respectively, of Hobart C. Taylor and Slason Thompson, a prominent feature among Chicago papers, has been sold to the proprietors of the Chicago Graphic, another popular and elegantly illustrated weekly journal. America has been, in its cartoons and letter-press, a persistent and influential opponent of the incursions of the Roman church upon our American institutions, and, also, every other attempt to bring them into disgrace or destroy them. It would add to the Graphic's character as an influential paper to adopt and exercise the sturdy and telling methods of America's recent manager in this respect.

A subject of more than ordinary interest is broached in our Washington letter (on page 4), this week, covering a suggestion of much value to those who desire to have the World's Fair of 1893 closed to visitors on Sunday. Unless some method to prevent it is formulated at once, and pressed persistently until a decision is reached, the fair will undoubtedly be classed among the Sabbath-breaking schemes of the day. Every Christian has a vital interest in this matter, and every congregation of Christians has now an opportunity to throw its influence on the side of the Lord. It will require activity, for the world and the devil are active and anxious to have this question decided in their favor. The need of the proposed appropriation by Congress of $5,000,000 will urge the friends of the fair to make a strong effort to secure it. But if Christians throughout the country are united and faithful, both the money will be forthcoming and the Sabbath saved from a wholesale desecration.

"The suspension of Messrs. S. V. White & Co., in New York, last week," says the Times of that city, "whatever inconveniences it may entail upon those immediately concerned, is likely to be of some value to the country at large. The immediate consequences, so far as can now be judged, do not threaten to be very serious. The impression among those most fitted to have a correct one is that the assets of the firm will be more than sufficient to meet its liabilities, and that with its experience and extensive connections a reasonable time will see its business resumed. But coming just at this moment when the country generally is beginning to feel the fever heat of speculation caused by the really flattering prospect for a very profitable year, the suspension of so widely-known a firm through speculation in corn will be very well suited to make the average business man, tempted to 'take a flier' in 'futures,' hesitate a little. And so far as it does that it will be a blessing." If it could bring grain and stock gambling to an end, it would be a better lesson still.

At the fifth annual Congress of the German-American Catholics of the United States, held at Buffalo, N. Y., last week, with a large attendance of priests and laymen, a platform was adopted, "offering our most devoted affection to the supreme head of our holy church"—the pope of Rome; demanding a restoration of the temporal power of the pope; indorsing the pope's recent encyclical letter on the labor question; protesting against interference with the Roman Catholic parochial schools; favoring the establishment of parochial schools and putting down the public school system; insisting on retaining and using the German language instead of adopting the English tongue; indorsing the bishops and priesthood of the Roman church as their rightful superiors, and pledging fidelity and attachment to them, and expressing confidence in them; protesting against the exercise of partiality for religious denominations in promoting the education of the American Indians, and indorsing the good character and works of the lost and lamented Windthorst. Little less than this was to have been expected from this Congress, the worst feature of which was the secret conclave of the priesthood on Thursday, which bodes no good to our republican or Protestant institutions. The question whether the United States is now, or will continue to be, a Protestant nation, cannot be too soon or too firmly determined.

WHAT RELIGIOUS MASONS CAN DO.

BY REV. WOODRUFF POST.

Writing under this caption, permit me painfully to refer to a brief experience, succeeding the period when I first conscientiously and scripturally opposed the evil of Freemasonry in conference.

Traacts of enlightenment were freely distributed. This, it was noticed, created great excitement. If those traacts were slanders—never proven so, however—my conduct was outrageous, and penalty was due.

It was whispered to me: "They" (who?) "are talking of ousting you from conference."

They did not, however; but they did worse for me—better for themselves. "Discretion was the better part of valor." So, calming their troubled spirits, they waited and schemed. We will not "oust" him, but we will win him, if we can; if not, we will set our heel upon him, and thus far shall he go and no farther if he "does not behave himself." Place a flower under the heel, and press down heavily, and it will shed fragrance around. Praise God, the weight came down and fragrance rose.

"What can harm you if ye are followers of that which is good?" Onward to duty in the fear of God, was the watchword; and so it was. On the mount of ascent, "All this glory will we give thee if thou wilt fall down and worship us. We will do thee good all the days of thy life." "You are ascending. No thanks to — for it; you are appointed to a good charge. Now; don't say anything on Masonry."

Being well-primed, and having on a good percussion cap, and well loaded down with about seventy of the best and ablest men in conference (young and old), by a hand-written endorsement of a drawn-up resolution sanctified by a pure-minded D.D., and sustained also by presiding elders, it went off hard and loud. It seemed to shoot the "poor brethren" into life instead of death, and they have lived ever since, and are flourishing. Oh, they are as thick as grasshoppers in the West, membership and clergy, everywhere in the churches.

It has seemed to some of us that God is not the author and head of the Masonic hierarchy, but that he may possibly be ordaining it his servant, we believe, for a purpose, as he did the terrible and dreadful Chaldean army, to both punish and purify Jerusalem for idolatry and rebellion (Hab. 1:1); after which purpose that terrible army was destroyed. (Jer. 50:9.)

"The Lord knoweth how to make the wrath of man to praise him." There is no doubt but much of the demoralization in the community generally, and formality and separation from God in the churches, is due to that "ancient and honorable" fraternity known as Freemasonry. How is it possible to be otherwise? God's elect shall come forth of them all, through the midst of the fiery ordeal.

What is written is through no personal ill will.

We pity the deluded, and forgive our adversaries. Paul said once: "In peril through false brethren;" "Yet none of these things move me." And yet all are not charged as false brethren, for some have been kind and true, so far as we know.

But oh, what a system! How those fearful obligations to sworn secrecy, etc., must necessarily impair the finer sensibilities of sanctified nature! There is enough of preponderance of iniquity in Masonry to trample in the dust all things attempting to prove that it is not heaven-ordained, but concocted by scheming speculators, who seek worldly promotion at almost any cost. Why Christian men should say and practically express: "You shall not succeed, so far as we can prevent, in any line of life, if you do not keep silent on the question," is more than many can divine. It need not be repeated how some have been pursued until the design of unearthly malice has accomplished its object so far as this life has been concerned. "Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward." The righteous "shall come forth of them all." "Oh, my soul, come not thou unto their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united; for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall." "Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel." (Gen. 40: 6.) "Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked, who whet their tongue like a sword that they may shoot in secret at the perfect." (Psalm 64.) Combined they deny God, because they reject the Son. "I and my Father are one." "Blessed is he that sitteth not in the seat of the scornful, nor standeth in the way of sinners."

Time fails me to tell how this superannuate of 71 years has been made to believe it possible that a minister rising in influence in his conference and usefulness, within and without, has been made to smart for his temerity in lifting up his voice against an evil which, especially at the present day, is known to be a detriment, if not worse, touching equity and truth.

It is past time to close this lengthy paper. "Book, chapter and verse," as Rev. A. Hard used to say, might be given in full, not perhaps interesting to the Cynosure's many readers.

Please let this suffice. When commencing this paper it was my intention to enter into a detail of experience. Late in the evening I drop the pen and offer a prayer for all men everywhere, for we shall all meet again to answer how we have performed our part.

Olean, N. Y.

TWO WOMEN GRINDING AT THE MILL.

BY REV. B. EISENTRAUT.

In looking upon the broad field of the Christians, with its great division, the one Roman Catholic, looking to Rome for spiritual food and nourishment, and the other, the Protestant denominations, looking upon the Bible as the only source of eternal life through Christ, it would naturally appear as if Christ illustrated our own times, with two women (church organizations) grinding at the mill. The one shall be taken, and the other left. These passages are found in Matthew 24:41, and in Luke 17:35.

The German version says: "One shall be accepted and the other will be forsaken. These events were to precede the day of judgment, portraying also the universal difference of Christians ignoring Christ's second coming. As we read in Matthew 24: 37-41: "But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until that Noe entered into the ark; and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left."

No anti-Christ had appeared yet in the apostolic age; there was only one foundation laid, through Christ; but now there are two agencies at work endeavoring to supply the Christians with provisions from two storehouses.

That the just shall live by faith in Christ, may be looked upon as the great platform of Protestants. Roman Catholics worship the traditions of their forefathers, looking upon temporal appearances of antiquity and outward attractions as the true divine path of life, of which Rome and the papacy are the only head. The language in Luke 17: 32-36 gives special warning in this direction in saying: "Remember Lot's wife. Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life, shall preserve it. I tell you in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together, the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left."

Christ does not mention any heathen in these verses, but proves that two branches could be found together; like two travelers seeking the haven of rest. One is represented as acting carelessly with Christ's law and commandments; is looking upon worldly attractions like Lot's wife, who looked back and became a pillar of salt. The period itself is illustrated, as if the majority had taken the road towards night and condemnation; seeking to save their lives through earthly intercessors.

The apostles of Christ had looked upon their Master as the only true Vine, in whom they were to abide and he in them; hence they had a curiosity to know from whence such an opposition was to arise as is said in the next verse: "And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? And he said unto them: Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together." Millions of Christians look to the papacy in Rome as the main, central and principal part of the body of the Christian church. Eagles, adorned with priestly robes, have been attracted thither for ages to grasp for the prey which the Roman power has held out for inducements under its banner.

These scriptural expressions of Christ recorded in Matthew and Luke are in full harmony with the prophecy of St. John in Revelation and the description of Babylon, the seat of the church which was to be found upon the seven mountains, or seven hills, the city of Rome. Rev. 17: 9. Its millstone is to be removed, as we read in Rev. 18: 22, to-wit: "And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of the millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee."

Babylon, in the Christian dispensation, shall meet with the same fate as the Babylon of the Jewish dispensation, of which Jeremiah 25:10 said: "Moreover, I will take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle."

How can the members of secret societies professing Christianity escape God's judgments, when one of the women grinding at the mill shall be dealt with such penalties as Lot's wife? Iron Hills, Iowa.

THE FOE WE FIGHT.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

Only those who study the secret empire can know its diabolical character. Some of the brethren, a few years ago, were very sanguine. They thought they could see the end of the campaign against this hidden foe. But how is it to-day? Well, our salvation from this abomination is nearer than when we believed; just as surely as the end of this present evil age draws on apace. "But is this work of the devil not to be destroyed till then?" I have no other or better hope.

I know that brethren will point us to the overthrow of American slavery, saying, Behold how quickly and completely that plant was rooted up, as our God went marching on.

But, brethren, while these two monsters are alike in some respects, they are in others very dissimilar.

1. Slavery was a local institution, while the lodge system is universal. This was and is a very important factor in working up a formidable opposition. Free soil, we may say, was absolutely necessary, in which to sow the seeds of liberty. We must have a spot on which to place our fulcrum, if we would move the world or shake the devil's kingdom. But where shall we find the free soil, when oath-bound secrecy is the question? Where shall we find a bit of solid ground for our fulcrum? Is there a State or county where the presence and power of the lodge is not?

2. Slavery was an open, tangible system of iniquity. No one could well doubt its existence, or its enormity. The slave was lashed, and bought, and sold, in open day and in open market. The tortures of the lash and the untold anguish of separated families, not to speak of the other damnable wrongs practiced upon the helpless slave, were open and above board; and the cries of the oppressed not only ascended to heaven, but entered the dull ear of the nation, and a tidal wave of judgment was started that swept the whole scene. On the other hand, the lodge system is a hidden thing—a mystery of iniquity. The lodge slave is bought and sold under the darkness of night, and behind tyed doors. The public does not see the degradation and sacrilege of the altar—or auction block—at which the candidate, denuded, kneels, and covenants eternal secrecy and service. Hence it is well nigh impossible to get the average man to understand or believe the horrors of the system.

3. The lodge slave is a voluntary slave. "Is this of your own free will and accord?" "It is," says the worshiper at these altars of Baal. Not so with our late Southern curse. On the part of the black man it was involuntary. This was a known quantity when the problem of liberty was to be solved. But you may open the prison door to the lodge slave, and he will not come out. Attempt to free him, and he is utterly indifferent, or perhaps becomes your enemy for so doing. His soul, rather than his body, is enslaved; and who but God shall set a soul free whom Satan has bound?

4. The slavery question was always more or less in politics, and it was impossible to keep it out; hence men were compelled to read and think about it; and, as a consequence, to take sides. But on the lodge question the political orator is dumb. The great daily papers are muzzled in some way,—afraid of these powers that be. What, then, is to be done? Is not the outlook dark—very dark?

About all we can do, brethren, is to keep running the underground railroad. There is no hope of an emancipation proclamation on this subject. These slaves must be freed as individuals. Those saved from this bondage, must, for the present, be hand-picked. Let us do as we can, and what we can; take them one at a time, in the name of the Lord.

Vernon, Wis.

MASONIC SALVATION.

BY REV. D. H. JOHNSON.

I have read that Masonry purports to save men from their sins. I had never heard it from the lips of a Mason until last Sunday, in a special sermon, to the "King's Daughters," by a D. D. and a presiding elder. Among other things concerning Masonry, he said: "Masonry saves men. I have known men to become religious after joining Masonry, who did not before pray. Masonry makes men better; binds them closer together than the church. You never hear of men backsliding from Masonry, but they do backslide from the church." He said that there was an instance in the Bible where 30,000 persons were slain because they did not know the password, and intimated that it was used as a Masonic term on that occasion; for, he said, "If they had been Masons, the result would have been different." He said that during the Revolutionary War, Gen. Marion made Masons of his soldiers before he would put them on guard. He made no citations or references; there was a general flow of words and statements. I suppose it was intended that we were to swallow them without questioning their truthfulness, as it was the presiding elder saying them.

This discourse was delivered to my people, from my pulpit. I did not let it pass without my disapproval of it. I felt that it was my duty as a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ to speak out for him then and there. Therefore I made a brief reply, in substance the following:

"1. I do not understand that the word 'Shibboleth,' in Judges 12: 6, was used on that occasion as a Masonic password; there is absolutely nothing to warrant the statement that it was a Masonic password and was so used on this occasion. It might have been used as a countersign, or watchword, for the Gileadite soldiers. This is only presumptive. It is generally accepted as stated; 'for he [the Ephraimite] could not frame to pronounce it right'—the word 'Shibboleth,'—even if he had been a Mason as it is claimed; but he was not one.

"2. I have read that Masonry teaches a salvation that saves. I do not understand the presiding elder to teach that Masonry saves;" [here the presiding elder interrupted and said: "Yes, I meant what I said; Masonry saves."]" "Then," I continued, "Christ is of none effect. It was not necessary for him to die, if Masonry saves. But Masonry does not save; there is only one way known to the world to be saved from sin—that way is by the Cross of Christ Jesus. Jesus says: 'I am the way, the truth, and the life.'

"3. In regard to backsliding: God does not compel man to accept the plan of salvation made by Christ Jesus. Man is not compelled to go to heaven or to hell. Man is left to choose for himself; whether he will serve Christ Jesus or the devil. If he starts out to serve the Lord, and joins the church, he is at liberty to renounce the church and the plan of salvation. God does not compel him to keep on to heaven; he is free, even in the church and service of the Lord. We learn, to-day, it is not so with Masonry. Once a Mason, always a Mason. He is not allowed to withdraw or backslide; there is no freedom, no choice, but one thing to do—"keep the oath." Where there is no freedom, there is no happiness. I am happy because I am saved. Masonry saves without giving happiness or freedom, I suppose. It is slavery, tyrannical slavery. It saves, it is claimed, and beats the church in holding its members. Why do its members bother the church of the Saviour? Why do Masons pretend to preach Jesus as a Saviour, if Masonry saves? Do not these preachers show a deal of inconsistency in preaching two salvations, or salvation by two different saviours—Masonry and Jesus?

"The presiding elder said, in beginning his sermon, that nothing was complete without woman, and 'The Influence of Women,' was his subject; that the Temple of Solomon was put together by women; that men did not contribute to it—all done by the women. The Gospel would not have been preached had it not been for the women, etc.

"Now, before he got far in this sermon, he turns to an institution that saves men, but excludes the women. Ah, I see why Masons preach Jesus. Jesus Christ can save women and men, but Masonry is capable of saving men only. Mysterious nonsense—or nonsense that is not mysterious.

"The doctor is at fault again in saying that none ever backslide or withdraw from Masonry; for every intelligent Mason knows that between 1828 and 1830 about 30,000 persons withdrew from Masonry. In May, 1891, there was at least one to withdraw, for the Cynosure has published his renunciation of Masonry twice; and there are others that have withdrawn recently, I presume.

"4. As to Gen. Marion making Masons of his soldiers, I can only say it is news to me. If I have read it I don't remember it.

"Now, I might have acted imprudently and in-subordinately to a superior officer, and an aged man twice as old as I. I might have said something in the above contrary to the facts and truth; if so I am anxious to be set aright."

After my remarks, the doctor gave notice that he would, some time in the future, preach a special sermon on Masonry; at which time everybody is invited to bring pencil and note-book.

I am warned by this announcement that I will have to preach a special sermon in reply. I want all the information on the matter involved in this matter I can get.

Friends can appreciate my situation when they know there is a lodge here, one eight miles due east, and one fourteen miles west of here. The majority of my congregation sympathize with me; but a man who takes a firm stand and determines to speak his convictions about such pernicious doctrines, needs a great deal of sympathy and help also. I would be glad to have any information you can give me, friends.

Cokesbury, S. C.

There was collected in the several internal revenue districts of Illinois over $38,000,000 in taxes last year, this amount being the largest by many millions collected in any State. Collector Mamer collected $13,964,833, and the Peoria district $21,624,472. The total collections in all the States were $146,035,376. Of this sum spirits paid $83,335,963, fermented liquors $26,008,534, tobacco $33,058,991, and oleomargarine $786,291. These figures are from the internal revenue commissioner's report recently issued.

THE CITY OF BALTIMORE.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

It is just one year since last I addressed your readers from Baltimore. This is an old Southern city, with Northern enterprise added. It is a city of monuments; the Washington monument at Mount Vernon place, Charles and Monument courts, being the chief. This is a great cylinder shaft, surmounted by a statue, and was erected by the people of Maryland. The following dates are on the four sides of the base: On the south: "Born 22d Feb., 1732. Died Dec. 14, 1799." On the west: "President of the United States, March 4, 1789. Retired to Mount Vernon, March 4, 1797." On the north: "Trenton Dec. 25, 1776; Yorktown, Oct. 19, 1781." On the east: "Commander-in-Chief of American army, June 15, 1775. Commission resigned, Dec. 23, 1783."

There are a number of libraries. The Peabody Library and Art Gallery, on the southeast corner of Mount Vernon place, is the chief. Next is the Enoch Pratt Library, on Mulberry street. This has several branches in different parts of the city. The Mercantile Library is select and elect, and necessarily small.

The parks are a leading feature. Patterson Park, on the east side, is a perfect beauty. Druid Hill Park contains 600 acres, and possesses much natural beauty. There are many smaller ones.

The Ross-Winans mansion, on Baltimore street, is noticeable. He was an engineer and made his money building the Russian railroad, from which he received a royalty on every soldier transported to the Crimea by the Czar. His fortune was immense. The Czar said, "Another such contract would bankrupt the empire." This man married a Russian girl and built a palace here. There are several acres in the lot. He adorned this with a collection of nude statues. The people here were shocked and complained loudly against the scandal. He would not remove the statues. So he built a brick wall, ten feet high, all around, giving it the appearance of a prison from without. His daughter now occupies it. One of his sons lives in London; the other two are supposed to live here, but spend most of their time abroad. They are great society people and seem to have no object in life except to spend their father's fortune.

The city is divided north and south by Charles street, and east and west by Baltimore street. One hundred numbers are allotted to each square, so that there is no excuse for getting lost. No. 1,000 North Charles, or any other, means ten squares from Baltimore street. No. 1,000 East Baltimore, or any other street, means ten squares east of Charles. The old part of the city is east of a creek called the Falls. So we find Central Ave. and Broadway over there.

Johns Hopkins University gives literary character to the city. The Roman Catholic institutions are strong in their way.

The leading morning papers are the Sun and the American. The first is independent, the second Republican. The Herald is the sensational paper of the city, and is published by a Jew. The evening papers are, the News and the World. The churches will be referred to in another letter.

Baltimore, Md.

MY EXPERIENCE IN FREEMASONRY.

I was converted under the preaching of Rev. J. L. McIlwaine of the M. E. church. About the time of my conversion I took the first degree of Masonry. While I was bowed at the altar taking the obligation something was drawn across my throat, with these words: "All of which I promise and swear under no less penalty than having my tongue torn out," etc.; "So help me God, and keep me in due performance of the same." A thrill went through my whole frame. I wondered if I could be a Christian and keep this terrible oath. My pastor was a Mason and I went to him for counsel. I was a babe in Christ. My question was, "Can a man be a good Mason without being a good Christian?" His answer was, "No." I was satisfied. Masonry became part of my religion. What a miserable dupe I was!

Thus I continued for years, sinning and repenting, going to lodges and saloons, drinking cider and beer, smoking and chewing tobacco. Still I was called a good Christian by the church. Brother E. D. Steer was sent to preach on our circuit, and I liked the man very much until he preached his Anti-masonic sermon; then I was mad through and through. He came to my house one day and gave me a free lecture on Masonry which stirred my anger still deeper. This set me to examine both sides of the matter. My wife used to go and hear the Free Methodists, and finally persuaded me to go. Wonderful! I found a people that had an experience in the things of God. Conviction fell upon me. First my tobacco went; then saloon, beer and cider.

One day an intoxicated Mason was using very bad language, and I reproved him. He drew his hand across his throat, warning me of the penalty of my obligation. I was astonished. I lifted my heart to God in prayer, asking him to deliver me from the bondage of Masonry. Quicker than a flash my prayer was answered, and I gave that man a strong Anti-masonic lecture. Praise God! I have been on that line ever since. None but one who has been redeemed can tell what a terrible hold the Masonic devil has on the soul of man. When God called me out of the lodge he gave me a living testimony against it. Praise his name!—De Witt C. Benjamin, in the Free Methodist.

BRAZILIAN PREFERENCES.

The following remarks, overheard by a Brazilian missionary, and published in Brazilian Missions, indicate, better even than statistics, the nature of the work that is being done, and the results that are being achieved in the new Republic:

"A hotel keeper: 'I only know one Protestant, and he is the only honest man in Sao Goncalo.'

"A Comerado: 'He will be sure to return the horse. He is a Protestant.'

"A ticket seller: 'I cannot make the change; you can pay me when you come back.' Then to the Station Master—"It's all safe. He is a Protestant.'

"Man at hotel table: 'They are Protestants, and Protestants are all trusty people.'

"One planter to another: 'A Protestant from Rio Feio! Then you have a trusty foreman.'

"A policeman: 'Oh, I don't know anything about the Protestants. We never have anything to do with them except when some priest makes a row.'

"A Negro soldier: 'Protestantism teaches you not to lie, and many other hard things. I cannot be a Protestant.'

"The father of two school-boys: 'Protestants have sense. They try to make the children better.'

"Man at card table: 'I don't like these Protestants. They never gamble. They are good for nothing.'

"The neighbor of a new resident: 'He cannot be a Protestant. He swears at his wife.'

"Guest at hotel table: 'I wish we had some Protestants in Christina. They are such a help to a place.'

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

"I belonged to two secret societies, and have bumped against nearly all of them, and know what I am talking about. Their sociability and benevolence may be all well enough; but they belong to the world. . . . I have about made up my mind that the whole thing is of the world, and the enemy of God and his church Brethren, why don't you say Amen? You know I am telling the truth; and I pray that you may have grace to receive it in love, as I have spoken it. As Christ's disciples we can make no compromise with the world. The friendship of the world is enmity against God."—From Bible reading, by L. W. Munhall, evangelist, on Separation, given Feb. 25, 1890, at Somerville, Mass.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Autumn moralizings.—"Allen and Haile."—A singular omission.—Ex-Minister Phelps on female education.—Other matters.—The L. O. L. eulogized.

The summer still lingers—like a prima donna loth to leave the scene of her former triumphs. Can the witching charm of a perfect day in October or September be compared with anything this side of heaven, unless it be a graceful and gracious womanhood that has reached its Indian summer? There is a sense in which the same thing may be said of youth that the Scriptures say of life. She who clings to it unwisely loses it; she who welcomes the advancing years as they come will find it;—a spiritualized youth whose charm "time cannot wither, custom cannot stale." The wild gentian and asters smile up from every country roadside with such a brave brightness as it seems might almost win the frost angel to spare them, but here and there a maple or an elm begins to show a streak of red or yellow with an ostentatious air, as a knight might display his lady's favor. I have before spoken of the fine elms which adorn Wellesley. The other day I noticed one rather singular circumstance;—they all slightly lean in one direction, and that is towards the east. An old inhabitant, however, explains this as owing to what is traditionally known as "the great blow" of 1815—in these days we would call it a cyclone,—and which, judging from the accounts that have come down to us, will bear comparison with its Western relatives of a later date. Big trees were felled as before the woodman's axe, and barns and dwelling houses were unroofed or blown down; and the tale of its wild fury recorded, though in characters that can be read only by a careful and loving observer, in the permanent twist given to these noble elms. How many an eccentricity in our fellow-beings may be due to some sudden blast of calamity or misfortune! The twist is plain enough to see, but the cause of it lies farther back than his or her average acquaintance, to whom it is merely "an odd streak," have eyes to discern.

"Allen and Haile" is now the Republican war-cry. They seem to have done well in their nominations. Mr. Allen is about 43, and has served creditably in Congress. Besides being a fine speaker, he is said to be quite an artist in oils, with a turn for nice carpenter work. This seems to me—though I am a woman and old-fashioned—as much more dignified and desirable accomplishments in a governor of Massachusetts than the reputation of being a mighty hunter or an enthusiast at base-ball, like the present Democratic incumbent.

Mayor Matthews has issued a register for the city of Boston, which has awakened much sarcastic comment, both for what he has put in and what he omits. The clause which includes "women who are citizens of the United States and duly registered" among the qualified voters of Boston, he has caused to be stricken out. This would be more singular did we not remember the bitter opposition which political suffrage for woman has always excited in the Democratic party and its natural allies, Rum and Romanism. Even a man so polished and gentlemanly as ex-Minister Phelps was not ashamed to carry out the traditions of his party, and confess himself half a century behind the age, by saying in his recent speech at the Ashfield dinner, that the purpose of female education seemed to be to make men of women; and while he would like to compliment his sex by saying that women were improved by the attempt, he did not think it was true. Such an utterance lends new force to Col. Higginson's immortal query, "Shall women learn the alphabet?" Unluckily for the ideas of men like Mr. Phelps, it is too late now to ask the question. The genius is out of the vase and cannot be flattered or driven back again. Such words, even from a more distinguished source, would not have been remarkable fifty years ago. To-day, with the thousands of graduates from Holyoke, Smith and Wellesley, scattered all over the land; with women as journalists, lecturers, lawyers, doctors and preachers everywhere, it is a stupid anachronism. Only in the air of a political reform party does the principle of equal rights to all, without respect to sex or color, seem to have any chance of thriving. The Prohibitionists in Massachusetts have honored themselves by appointing a colored man, Wm. O.

Armstrong, born in Oberlin, Ohio, for State Auditor; while a colored woman, Miss Mills, is a candidate for School Committee.

"The Salon in America" was the title of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's last paper, read before the Newport Town and Country Club, of which she is president. It is a pet idea with many of our social and literary leaders to try to plant this French institution on American soil, but the conditions are too widely different. It must be evident to all whose reading has made them conversant with the social life of the First Empire, that with the people who thronged the salons of Mesdames De Stael, Recamier, and other distinguished ladies, time was not a very precious article. The woman of to-day, with her Chautauqua Course and her Reading Club, and her Circle of "King's Daughters," and all the various educational and reform interests that clamor for her attention, can have as little time to attend salons as to read the old-fashioned seven-volumed novels that delighted her great grandmother.

Watertown, one of Massachusetts' oldest towns, and celebrated as the newly-discovered site of the ancient Norumbega, finds the question of parochial schools quite an important issue, caused by the fact that pupils from the latter have been refused admission into the High School, as unqualified. The attempt made to force them in as special students instead of obliging them to take a course in the grammar school, has brought out in a strong light the deficiencies of parochial instruction, especially on American history; and the wrong which the State is doing her future voters by allowing this deadly rival of her free schools.

Rev. Hugh Montgomery preached a sermon to the Orange Lodge, in his church, last Sabbath, from which we should judge that the order was identical with Christianity, and therefore full as good. The object and aim of Orangeism, according to Mr. Montgomery, is "not to hate Catholics but to love them; to do them good in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; to do what we can to put the Bible in their hands and teach them to be pure and holy." Nothing could surely be more excellent; but will Mr. Montgomery tell us if there is not a shorter and better way to accomplish all this, than by joining a secret, oath-bound order, whose path has been so often marked by riot and bloodshed, and the effect of which in keeping alive race feuds and jealousies is so evident as to lead to the recent order for the suppression of all Orange lodges in the Indian British army?

The Royal Ark has been indicted for fraudulent dealing on no less than eleven different counts. This may be some comfort to the sufferers, but it will not put the hard-earned money out of which they have been swindled back again into their pockets.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23, 1891.

Before now sermons have been preached by stones and by babbling brooks; therefore it is not strange that the beautiful exhibit made in the east wing of the National Museum building of the American Pomological Society, which began its annual session here yesterday, should suggest to thoughtful minds the scriptural text: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Upon a number of long, low tables are nearly one thousand plates, each containing select specimens of fruit grown by members of this useful society. Taking the Biblical text for a guide, it appeared to me that this beautiful collection of fruits, embracing the products of almost every known species that can be grown, from semi-tropical Florida and Southern California to the section along the northern limits of the United States, proved the members of the American Pomological Society to be intelligent laborers in nature's vineyards, and masters of the art of cultivating nature's products so as to get the best results.

The exhibit is, also, in a certain sense, emblematical of the final exhibit which must be made by those who have been endowed by a beneficent Almighty with a talent for controlling and influencing the naturally wayward and impulsive natures of human beings. And one almost shudders to think that many of the plates which might easily be made radiant by the halos which surround redeemed souls will, when the time of final accounting comes, be found empty, and the Judge will consign those who have wasted the valuable talents they possessed to everlasting punishment; while those who have been diligent will have the fruits of their diligence to exhibit, and will be duly rewarded for the good work they have performed, even as the member of the Pomological Society who produces a better species of a fruit than existed before he began his efforts to improve it is rewarded by his worldly success. It is a worthy ambition to devote one's life to the improving of any of nature's products, but more worthy to devote it to the improvement of one's fellow-man.

Another organization, the members of which are engaged in work that is of itself ennobling, and which few men can conscientiously perform without becoming better, met here yesterday in triennial session. I refer to the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons, which comprises in its membership the dozen or more large medical and surgical associations of the United States, composed of leading physicians and surgeons in all sections of our country. It would be difficult to find a more intellectual or dignified body of men than this Congress which was yesterday called to order in G. A. R. Hall.

A gentleman who has had a wide experience in national legislative matters gave expression, in a private talk, by some very interesting opinions on the question of whether the World's Fair shall be closed on the Sabbath day. He said: "Those who are opposed to the opening of the World's Fair at Chicago on Sundays have a splendid opportunity to get a law enacted by Congress this winter positively prohibiting the opening of the gates to visitors on Sunday, if they are energetic enough in embracing it. Under ordinary conditions, it might have been very difficult to have persuaded Congress to legislate upon the subject, but all difficulty will be removed when the World's Fair management makes its application for a loan of $5,000,000 from the government. When the bill for that purpose comes before Congress it will be easy to offer an amendment thereto making the loan contingent upon the closing of the Fair on Sundays. If this be done and all of those opposed to opening the Exposition on Sundays will take the trouble to make their wishes known to their Senators and Representatives, the amendment will certainly become a law, and there will be no doubt in anybody's mind about the closing of the Exposition on the Sabbath. If this opportunity be not taken advantage of, the Board of Managers of the Fair will, in my opinion, sanction the opening of the Fair on Sundays. This opinion is based upon the actions of members of the Board. Attempt after attempt has been made to get the members of the Board to commit themselves on this question, and there has been such unanimity in their replies, to the effect that there was plenty of time, and that they would not decide the question until just before the time for the opening of the Exposition, that I have come to the conclusion that they fully intend that it shall be open on Sundays, but do not care to so announce until it shall be too late to prevent it by Congressional legislation, which is the only way it can be prevented." If anything is to be done to influence Congress in this matter, it is none too early to begin now. If a committee of prominent members of every congregation in the United States would take up this question and devote a little time to it between now and December, a power might be organized that would be strong enough to compel regard for its wishes in the halls of Congress.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

WEST DANVILLE, Vt., Sept. 22, 1891.

The early frosts have added new beauties and great variety to the landscapes in this "Green Mountain" region. Inviting opportunities and favorable openings are detaining me here beyond what I had anticipated.

Leaving Boston on the 12th inst., my first stop was at Canterbury, N. H., where I spoke twice on Sabbath, and Mrs. Stoddard spoke on mission work in the evening. A lecture in the Town Hall, on Monday evening, on the Secret Lodge System, was well attended and I was glad to learn that one at least had "renounced the hidden things of dishonesty" since I was at Canterbury last year.

Beside Bro. and Sister James F. French, our cause has some warm friends in Canterbury, but they are too quiet for the interest of the cause they approve. I hope there will be an early reform among the reformers in this respect. On Tuesday evening Mrs. Stoddard gave a temperance address under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U., which was received with favor, and indorsed by a liberal contribution in aid of the cause.

On Wednesday, the 16th, we were welcomed at the parsonage in Ryegate, Vt., by Pastor Rev. Daniel Harris and wife, who had arranged for a lecture in the U. P. church. Owing to the town fair, in progress, many were detained from attendance, but those present gave earnest heed to the things spoken and expressed a wish to hear further at a more favorable time. A friend of Mrs. S., living within the bounds of Rev. D. C. Faris' congregation, was in attendance and conveyed to his home, where we were hospitably entertained and furthered on our journey when ready to depart. In spite of the fair, a good audience gathered in Bro. Faris' church and listened attentively to an exposition of the secret empire. Thursday I spent on the fair-grounds, conversing with individuals and arranging for future work. A lecture in the R. P. church at South Ryegate was appointed for this evening, the pastors concurring and agreeing to give notice on Sabbath.

Friday A. M. I visited Peacham and arranged for a lecture in the Congregational church on Thursday evening, the 23d inst. Arrangements were made with Rev. D. M. McKinlay for a lecture in his church at Burnet Center, on Wednesday eve., and a call on the Congregational pastor at Burnet Station resulted in a notice from his desk on Sabbath that I would give a lecture in the school-house at that place, on Friday evening next. I am greatly indebted to Rev. D. C. Faris and Bro. Geo. P. Sunderson for conveyances and other helps freely rendered in my work.

We reached Greensboro Bend on Saturday afternoon, and were met by Mrs. Stoddard's nephew and conveyed to the home of her brother, Alonzo D. Rollins, two miles distant. This was Mrs. Stoddard's birthplace, and some of her childhood's companions remain, although the larger part have scattered or have "fallen asleep." No appointments had been made in advance, but when we reached the old church at Greensboro, and met Rev. Mr. Knowlton, the pastor, in the vestry, he requested me to speak to his people, which I did. At Greensboro Bend there was an opening in the M. E. church, Rev. Mr. Vail, pastor, where I preached the Word in the evening. Arrangements could have been made without difficulty for lectures at a number of points, could I have spared the time, and I hope, later, to do a much-needed work in this field, that is ready for the sowing. Mrs. Stoddard remained for a few days with her brother and old friends, and will speak in the M. E. church Friday evening, on the work and methods of the W. C. T. U. After filling my four appointments in Caledonia county, I expect to meet Mrs. Stoddard at Wells River, and return to Boston on Saturday, the 26th inst.

The lodge is losing its grip on the ministers and pulpits in Vermont, and the right of private judgment and personal liberty is rising to the ascendancy. Said one brother to me, yesterday: "I joined the lodge because I was going to visit Egypt, Syria, and the Holy Land, and I was told that it would be a great help to me; but I found no assistance from that source, and have had nothing to do with them for twenty years." When asked: "What, in your judgment, is the most effective means of abolishing the lodge?" he replied: "If Masonry would execute the penalty for violating its oath upon some of the offenders, the people would sweep it out of existence, as they did slavery." Another, who had extensive business relations with railroad and other men, said: "I was induced to join the Masons to secure friends whom I could trust, and who would consider my interests and rights as sacred as their own. I found, however, that they would 'cheat, wrong and defraud' me whenever they got a chance, and, after losing a good deal of money by misplaced confidence, I absented myself from the lodge. They came to inquire why I did not attend, and I simply told them that I had found that I could make a living by staying at home and attending to my own business." The lodge to which this brother belonged has since dissolved by its own corruption, and the place where it was is relieved of that curse.

I hope soon to give date and place of our annual meeting, with speakers.

J. P. STODDARD.

ROUND ABOUT CHICAGO.

Sabbath morning, Sept. 20, in the Free Methodist church at Prospect Park, I preached the Gospel of the Son of God, from which it appears that Freemasonry is a false system of religion—a cunningly-devised fable; and, more than that, it is founded on a self-conscious, scandalous lie, absorbed into the souls of all true Masons and made the foundation for the ruin of the souls of mankind. Bro. Hinman was present, and took part in the service. In the afternoon we attended the newly organized Methodist Episcopal church, and heard the introductory sermon of its pastor, Rev. Mr. Catlin, giving his thirteen steps from sin to sanctification. He is the teacher of the Bible class of the Free Methodist church. In the evening, Bro. Hinman preached the Gospel, in the Free Methodist church, as opposed to secret so-

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE TRAIL OF THE SERPENT.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—"Whither, oh, whither?" In this city Masonic lying, murder, blasphemy and devil-worship is accepted as the "handmaid" of Christianity (so-called) by the churches. It is a reminder of Barnum's "happy family" of monkeys, cats, rats, mice, etc., all together in one cage. It is said to be customary on all public occasions for a distinguished preacher, who is a Freemason, to walk arm in arm, or ride in a carriage, with a distinguished Roman Catholic priest.

There is a "United Presbyterian" church here, the pastor of which was the late distinguished grammarian, Rev. Peter Bullion, the author of Greek, Latin and English grammars. He died about twenty-five years ago. The present pastor, Rev. R. D. Williamson, has just introduced an organ and choir of nine voices into his church service, which he considers a great innovation, and therefore deems it inopportune to allow the discussion of Masonic principles in that church just now.

One Presbyterian pastor says that it is none of his business, nor mine, to intermeddle with the secrets of secret societies; that he belongs to no secret society, but members of his church do; and he says he knows Masons to be good Christians and Christian ministers. Surely Satan can be on the best of terms with such a preacher as that.

Another Presbyterian pastor, having a large influential church, says that half the male members of his church are Freemasons; that his father was a Freemason (and, indeed, one might think that his spiritual father is also a Freemason). He goes on to say that he is frequently called upon to deliver orations for secret societies, and that he cheerfully accepts such invitations. Yet he belongs to no secret society, and says that he would rather leave his church than oppose Freemasonry. And so the sworn liars and devil-worshippers have got this church and pastor on their side.

The pastor of the largest and most influential church in the city, the Presbyterian, belongs to no secret society, but says that his father was a Freemason, and that he knows him to be the best Christian he ever knew. He parries testimony against Freemasonry by saying that there are objectionable statements in the Presbyterian confession of faith which might be used in a way to place Presbyterianism in a bad light; and he applies the same remark to the Bible. Freemasonry seems to occupy a very high place in the estimation of this pastor, and also in that of his wife, who says that her father is a Mason; and as for the murder of Morgan, what is that murder of one man to be compared with the thousands that drink has murdered?

I wonder if she can understand that her father's religion forswears men to have their throats cut and tongues torn out if they ever fail to conceal the secrets of Freemasonry, an institution which Judge Whitney was in justice constrained to call "the darkest and most damnable institution that ever scourged the earth or cursed mankind?" It thus surpasses the drink murder by its so-called respectable, forsworn soul-murder of the lodge current in the churches.

What shall be the end of such spiritual blindness? The Gospel is hid to the lost whose eyes the god of this world has blinded; and yet the blind are preaching a gospel which is another gospel and another Christ, even Hiram of the Masons, alias "Beelzebub, the prince of devils." Had the Apostle Paul met Gabriel preaching a gospel in harmony with Masonry or Odd-fellowship, is it not certain that he would have smitten him with a curse? (See Gal. 1: 8, 9.)

My spirit was refreshed at the sight of the beautiful marble monument of Captain William Morgan. The statue is thirty-eight feet high, and stands in the northwest corner of Batavia Cemetery, east of the city, and a few rods from the N. Y. C. R. R., on your left as you go east. The inscription on its base declares the truth, that he was abducted and murdered by the Freemasons for writing the secrets of Freemasonry.

I had the pleasure of conversing with a man, Mr. Wright, of Lansingburg, N. Y., who was a boy ten years old and living at Victor at the time of the abduction, and saw the carriage that contained Morgan in charge of the Masonic assassins authorized by the fraternity to commit the crime.

W. FENTON.

UTAH AND THE MORMONS—III.

OGDEN, Utah, Sept. 7, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The question is often asked: "Are not many of the Mormons sincere in their belief?" My acquaintance with Mormons would warrant me in saying that the most of the people are sincere. They believe what they claim to believe, and their practices correspond to their belief as nearly as do the practices of other religious people conform to their beliefs. It has seemed to me, however, that the Mormons—as is true of many other people—compare their religion with other religions, as if the human element were, after all, the final authority in every one. There does not seem to be in the people that sublimity of faith which one expects to see in those who fully comprehend the divine reality of revelation, and whose souls have been quickened by the power of an endless life. We do not complain of lack of sincerity, but rather deplore the lack of spiritual power, and the ennobling influence on the life of humble faith in Christ and a constant walk with God.

Perhaps one ought not to blame Eastern papers for expressing lack of confidence in the sincerity of Mormons in their present political movements. It is difficult for an outsider to understand the situation. And no one on the ground can ever look into the heart of a Mormon and bring from thence evidence of his sincerity. For myself, I am not troubled on that point. I believe that the Mormons mean all that they say, and that they are as sincere in disbanding the Mormon political party and joining the national parties, as other men outside of Utah are in their political professions and conduct. Doubtless the Mormons have rejoiced in this opportunity to ally themselves to the national parties, as a means to prevent further legislation against them. They saw a tide of sentiment arising in favor of Mormon disfranchisement in Utah, as it now prevails in Idaho. They saw the possibility of Statehood with Mormons left out. They were glad enough to rob their enemies of any argument in favor of such a result.

If Utah were to become a State very soon, it is probable that most of the offices would be held by Mormons. It is so, now, so far as offices are filled by election. But it does not follow that polygamy would be restored, and all non-Mormons driven from the country. If Utah were to become a State, there is good reason to believe that its future, so far as Mormonism is concerned, would be determined, not by what Mormons believe, but by what they purpose concerning the development of their country, and the welfare of their people. And there is no reason to fear that Utah would fall behind the average sentiment of the nation to which it belongs. It is safe to assume that the Mormons will not attempt to recover what they have lost, but rather to secure and develop what they have found.

But while I rejoice in the progress which all must acknowledge, I fear for the future of Utah, because I believe that her people are not equal to the present crisis of her affairs. The non-Mormons ought to be informed, but they are not. Missionary money has been poured into Utah until this Territory has been better supplied not only with common schools, but with academies, than the New England States. Ministers have been sent wherever they could get a hearing, and that has included most of the principal villages. And the results of all this missionary zeal have been, all things considered, very encouraging. But the masses of non-Mormons coming to Utah are not reformers. City governments have not been of a higher moral type under Gentile than under Mormon rule. If Asiatic harems have gone, European and American houses of prostitution have come. The social evil has not been cured by the removal of polygamy.

The Mormon people are not equal to the present occasion. The standard of the people is not high enough, and they have not the moral strength which the necessity of the times demands. Talking with a leading Mormon, the other day, I said to him: "Your people are not all prohibitionists?" And he replied, "No; but they are for mighty high license, I can tell you." Another, a Mormon bishop, said: "We used to have prohibition in this town; I can remember when we had but one saloon in the whole town, and that was kept by the very best man in the place. We (the Mormons) always had the saloon kept by the best man we could find—we gave it to him as his mission." While the Mormons generally are on the side of "law and order," they do not comprehend what the civilization and the progress of the world to-day demand as the social and moral standard of a professedly Christian nation.

In our city paper, this morning, is a notice of a "fight," a "glove contest" it is called by some, to be conducted in the Opera House this evening. If one were to arise and protest against this return to barbarism, he would not know to whom to appeal for an endorsement of his protest. The danger is that if one devil is driven out of Utah, seven others will be allowed to occupy the vacant place, and the last state be worse than the first.

If the Mormon people give up everything in their system which the government may require them to yield, such submission will not partake of the force of reformation. The Mormons will be in no position to urge reformation on points where that is needed. And it is not probable that they will be able to give much strength to reform movements introduced by others. But Mormonism is not now the great danger which threatens Utah and her people. We have known men from the mining districts in the regions round about Utah to come here that they might find a safe place for their families. But now that the policy of isolation has given away to a policy of progress, the Mormons do not discriminate between the good and the bad; the non-Mormons welcome both, and what ought to be a reformation is in danger of becoming moral chaos.

The history of past ages does not inspire a hope of easily winning the Mormons from the strong delusion under which they have labored for half a century. But one may be pardoned for wishing that there might arise for them a strong deliverer, whose gentleness should make them great—a leader who might turn them as prisoners of hope to the pure light of the Gospel, and to a strong faith in Christ. Again and again does the question arise in the mind of the writer, Is it possible to lead this people really to the God whom they ignorantly worship?

And now, dear Cynosure, I am aware that I have not been consistent with my first purpose as I began to write these letters. But my heart yearns for this people. I cannot treat them as enemies if it is possible to admonish them as friends. But the Mormon people are not calling for some one to convert them. They have not lost faith in their religion. The tears of Jeremiah did not save Jerusalem from captivity, nor from rebellion. Christ wept over Israel. But the multitudes, headed by the rulers of the people, refused to follow Christ into the light, but were not afraid to follow a thief and a traitor into the darkness of night. We know not with what baptism Utah is to be cleansed. But while repentance and salvation are possible, we pray that the people of this Territory may accept the offered mercy, lest, delaying too long, the wail of the prophet may apply to our people: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Yours faithfully,

AMOS JUDSON BAILEY.

PITH AND POINT.

DIDN'T LIKE HIS "CHOSEN FRIENDS."

"I was once a member of a secret order—was begged and coaxed into it, and was soon voted a C. F. But I soon found it was no place for me or any other professed follower of Jesus Christ. I regret that I ever took the secret oath."—REV. J. D. GRUNDY, Garlandville, Ark.

A VETERAN REFORMER.

"I have been a reader and admirer of the Cynosure for many years, and shall take it as long as I live. I wish it was taken in every family, as it would not fail to do a vast deal of good. May God bless its editors and publishers and all its patrons."—WM. G. KEIL (92 years old), Senecaville, Ohio.

TYRANNY OF LODGERY.

"Secret societies prevent the impartial execution of the laws, and obstruct the necessary and wholesome action of political parties. The judge on the bench, the juryman in the box and all the machinery of politics feels the tyranny of secret societies. . . . Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies and give himself no rest until they are prohibited by law and rooted out of existence."—WENDELL PHILLIPS.

BURNED HIS PARCHMENTS.

"God is owning my work here in Kansas. I got one Odd-fellow to burn up his parchments, last winter, and the other afternoon a man plucked off a Grand Army badge and put his foot upon it."—W. HACKETT, North Topeka, Kansas.

MASONRY DESERVES EXTERMINATION.

"The more I examine the institution of Masonry, the more deep and thorough are my convictions that its utter extermination is called for every consideration connected with the permanency of our free institutions, as well as with the welfare of the human race."—HON. WM. SLADE, of Vermont.

GOOD REASONS FOR OPPOSING LODGERY.

"Secret societies are useless in a republican government. They aim a death-blow at the system of equal rights. They are ghastly in the estimation of the uninitiated. Secrecy has nothing to do with honesty. God never authorized a secret society. The Gospel, which Christ commanded should be preached to every creature, does not exclude from the kingdom of God 'a woman, an old man in his dotage, or a young man in nonage,' or even a fool. With all these Masonry refuses to fellowship. Secret associations spring from the devil, and to their author must return."—ANONYMOUS.

BAD, INHERENTLY BAD.

"The truth is, the institution itself is, by its very constitution, bad, inherently bad. It is not a good institution, the benevolent purposes of which have been perverted by bad men—but it is a corrupt institution, whose capacity for mischief has been restrained by the number of good and virtuous men who have been its members"—hundreds of whom have left it in disgust.—FREDERICK WHITTLESEY.

LITERATURE.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY AND MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS OF ELDER W. W. CRANE. Compiled and published by John Hawkswell. Syracuse, N. Y.: A. W. Hall. 1891.

Elder Crane, who was born in 1805 and died in 1869, seems to have been a power among the early Wesleyan Methodists, and a faithful pioneer preacher. The autobiography, which, in the author's modesty, he preferred to write in the third person, is filled with interesting incidents and reminiscences, and conveys many lessons, in his varied experiences, that may well be heeded in these degenerate days. The earnest and sincere Christianity of these sturdy Methodist pioneers is a study for their successors in the ministry, by whom, however, their plainness, faithfulness, and zeal are too often unappreciated. By far the larger portion of the book is filled with his contributions to the American Wesleyan. As a writer he was pungent and interesting, and his collected pieces very well reflect the versatility of his well-trained intellect, his power of observation, and his devotion to the cause of God and humanity. For Sunday reading, the mind disposed to worship God in the beauty of holiness will find this book an excellent companion. Price $1.00.

The Sunny Hour, a quarto monthly magazine of sixteen fairly printed and illustrated pages, published in New York City, at 18 West 14th Street, "by a boy for boys and girls," is a curiosity in several respects. First, its editor and publisher, Tello J. d'Apery, is a lad of 14; secondly, its profits (or income) is expended in buying shoes for barefooted poor children; thirdly, this youthful journalist says: "I do all the editorial work alone, and attend to the whole business of publishing it; I collect and pay bills, and do all I can to get advertisements, etc.; and I have no help at all, except in the book-keeping and mailing, which is too much for me. I am not working for myself, but to found a barefoot fund, and I am working against a good many discouragements and opposition, but I am forced to do it by a feeling that I must." His labors, however, have succeeded in getting together considerable money for his favorite charity, and from kings and queens as well as commoners, including the Empress of India, and Queen Olga, of Greece. Perhaps not the least interesting feature of his magazine is the long list of its contributors, among whom are the Queen of Roumania, the Prince of Montenegro, Sir Edwin Arnold, Rev. E. E. Hale, and dozens of others. The September number is finely illustrated, and bright with stories and sketches. Success to the Sunny Hour and its boy-editor!

The September number of the Review of Reviews (New York, $2.40) has a conspicuous feature in an article on the strategic value of the Hawaiian kingdom, lying at the "Cross-roads of the Pacific." The writer is a high authority in Honolulu, and his discussion of the international relations of the Sandwich Islands, and particularly the recent negotiations for securing to the United States an exclusive control of the best harbor they afford, is most timely and interesting. Another article is upon Chicago working girls, with particular reference to several projects already in successful operation for promoting their comfort and healthfulness. No other periodical in the world can compare with the Review in the range and the timeliness of its monthly portrait gallery. Thus, the September number gives fine portraits of the late James Russell Lowell; the late George Jones, of the New York Times; Mr. Clarkson, the new chief of the Republican party organization; Mr. Watterson, the Democratic Warwick; the Queen of the Sandwich Islands, together with the most prominent men of her kingdom; Mr. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis, the great miller; and of Professors Adler, Toy, and Adams, who conducted the recent Summer School of Ethics and Economics at Plymouth, Mass., with others better known in Europe than with us.

Few young mothers have access to the latest information regarding the diet of infants and young children, and it is therefore with pleasure we recommend the perusal of all who have anything to do with children, the exhaustive article "How and What to Feed the Baby," in the October number of that progressive periodical, Demorest's Family Magazine. This article is by a successful physician, and tells what food to give, how to prepare each kind, just how much and how often the child should be fed, when and how often the diet should be changed, and gives bills of fare for different ages, so that the most inexperienced mother may know just how to feed her baby from its birth until it is able to eat the regular meals of the family. And this is only one of the many attractions of the October number of this comprehensive family magazine, which is bright with several stories, including one by Ella Wheeler Wilcox; "In the Woman's Ward of an Insane Asylum" tells a pathetic tale; the article on "Sloyd" is instructive and entertaining; and there are other readable articles, and nearly 200 fine illustrations. It is published by W. Jennings Demorest, at 15 East 14th St., New York. Price 20 cents. Any of our local newsdealers will supply it.

The Missionary Review of the World (Funk & Wagnalls, 18, 20 Astor Place, N. Y. City), contains the following papers, dealing with topics of general and special interest: The Year 1890 in Japan, by Prof. George W. Knox, D.D.; Dr. Griffin on Japan, by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson; Buddhism and Christianity, by Rev. E. Snodgrass; Buddhism and Romanism, by Rev. George L. Macon; Education and Evangelism, by Rev. Charles C. Starbuck; A Plea for Medical Missions, by Dr. Clarence Thwing; The Free Church of Scotland's 27 Medical Missionaries, by Geo. Smith, LL.D.; Paul the Missionary, by Rev. John Ross; The Recent Audience with the Emperor of China, by Dr. B. C. Atterbury; Encouragement in the Work of Missions; Extracts and Translations from Foreign Periodicals, by Rev. C. C. Starbuck; Low-Pressure Belt of Morality as Marked by the Marriage Laws in India; Dr. Cyrus Hamlin on Restoring Palestine to the Jews; The Need of Special Preparation for Foreign Service, and several others of equal interest, Mission News, etc. $2 per annum.

The Gospel Record for September (Syracuse, N. Y., A. W. Hall, agent.) has a paper from the Cynosure's esteemed correspondent in West Africa, Rev. H. W. Johnston, descriptive of the proposed Inland Industrial Mission in that section of the Dark Continent, and African Mission Notes, by the same writer. Living issues—Success, and Annexation—are discussed, and the entire magazine is replete with good reading. $1 per annum.

From Hon. H. F. Bartine, M. C., we have received the Adverse Report from the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, relating to the coinage of gold and silver, submitted to Congress in February last. The arguments urged against the free coinage of silver are cogent and reasonable, and the whole report is an instructive review of the silver question.

IN BRIEF.

A law has been passed in Georgia, disqualifying intemperate physicians for practice. The law is not unreasonable. A half-drunken doctor and a very sick patient is not a pleasant combination to contemplate.

Bakersfield, in Kern county, California, has forty saloons and but two school houses and five churches, and yet if it was not looked upon as a Christian community, its citizens would feel insulted. Facts and figures go to show that if it is a Christian community the devil is doing the greater part of the work.—Pacific Ensign.

Speaking of the recent riots in China, Rev. J. T. Gracey writes in the Missionary Review of the World: "It will go hard with the anti-foreign party if they cannot find a better way to manage their internal politics than by the murder of such missionaries as Mr. Argent, a lay missionary, . . . for whose death, there is no doubt, the secret societies are responsible. Those societies are not good instruments for anti-administration politicians in China, as they are as little controllable by the Celestial Emperor as the Mafia are by King Humbert."

About a year ago a branch of the order of "Annual Friends" of Lowell, Mass., was established at Red Bank, N. J. The initiation fee was $5, the dues $4, and it was expected that there would be twelve assessments aggregating $36 during the year. The members were promised that they would receive $100 for the $45 that they paid in. Up to September there had been twenty-five assessments of $2 each, making the total investment $59. The members were willing to pay $14 in addition to the $45 in order to secure $100. but when September came with fourteen assessments, or $28 on each certificate, the lodge rebelled and sent a committee to the Supreme Council at Lowell to make inquiries. The report of the committee was not favorable and the lodge has disbanded, with a loss of $59 to each member.

From all sides, says the Bible Standard, come the testimonies of missionaries to the bad effect of the Porrah Bush Society, or African Masonry. Not only does this society hinder evangelization by drawing away the people after the devil-worship of the lodge, but in many places it is actually opposing Christianity. At Mabang the English Wesleyan missionary gave as a reason why his work had accomplished no more, that there was a Porrah lodge in the town which kept the people from Christ. At Rotofunk the evangelists who go out from the boys' home tell of opposition and slow progress wherever there were Porrah lodges. From Palli, Bompel, Spingele, come similar reports. Our readers will remember a graphic account of these African Bush lodges printed in the Cynosure of September 3, from the pen of Rev. H. W. Johnston, our esteemed correspondent in Sierra Leone.

Commenting on the celebrated sermon of Rev. B. Carradine, D.D., on "Secret Societies—Are they Right or Wrong?—A Blessing or a Curse?"—the Bible Standard and Gospel Record says: "Nothing better than this has appeared yet in the literature of the anti-secret work. It is plain, simple and practical. There are no speculations or peculiar forms of reasoning, but a straight-forward and enthusiastic setting forth of the facts, which every honest man can see are facts. Dr. Carradine's sermon came from an unexpected quarter, and was like the sudden outburst of a flame that lighted the whole heavens. It ought to be in every family in the United States." Since this excellent discourse was published by the National Christian Association, a few months ago, 5,000 copies have been sold. It is furnished at 50 cents per dozen, or $3 per hundred. at this office, in a neatly printed and covered pamphlet.

Hall's Hair Renewer eradicates and prevents the formation of dandruff, thickens the growth, and beautifies the hair as no other preparation will.

OUR PREMIUM!
THE EMPRESS
Sewing Machine
For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled. It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work.

It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments,

put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00.
With Christian Cynosure 1 year. $22.00.

For further particulars address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth. $1.00.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter
Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnettson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underwood
Lieutenant-General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOK,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The objects of the Association is:

"To expose, withestand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Nowfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents. $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Sec'y Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1891.

FREEMASONRY IN THE COURTS.

The fundamental objection to Freemasonry and like organizations is that they are pagan religions. They are rivals and antagonists of the church of our Lord Jesus Christ. This main fact we should always keep in mind and explain to the people. But while this is true, other facts are important and should by no means be forgotten.

Beside the church two other divine organizations exist, and the paganism that would destroy the church ruins them as well. We refer to the family and the state. The cases in which secret societies interfere with the administration of civil law are numberless. The miscarriage of justice in Chicago, when two boodlers, convicted at a cost of about $50,000, escaped the penalty of their crimes, is familiar to all. Attorneys, judges, sheriffs and, presumably, detectives, were paid by the tax-payers to punish public thieves. They got their money, and the boodlers got away. That they purposely aided in this plunder of the public purse, no one can affirm; that the lodge oaths of some of them require them so to do, no one can deny. The first page editorial note in our issue of September 17, shows the same forces at work in Minneapolis, Minn., where it was alleged that "the judge, the lawyers on both sides, and most of the jury on the first trial were Masons."

Two Masons testify. The one charged with crime says that the other told him that had he known him to be a Mason he would have warned him. The Masonic official testifies that he said nothing of the kind. The prosecuting attorney, also a Mason, says, in addressing the jury: "You may belong to that organization, gentleman, which has been referred to. I do; and I do not believe that any man on this jury believes that Inspector Gould's statements in regard to this Masonic matter are untrue. The order is built upon broader and grander principles than those which would allow a man to do what Gardner says Gould did."

We are not certain whether the judge who tried the case was a brother in the lodge or not. But any man at all conversant with Masonic obligations can see that the detective, prosecutor and alleged criminal were all brethren. It was entirely possible for them to have a perfect understanding. Under such circumstances, trials in courts of justice are farces, which public officials play in order to draw salaries, it being understood among themselves that their brethren in the lodge must not be harmed.

Of course, we do not affirm that all lodge-men will keep lodge-oaths. Some will; some will not. The late sheriff of Du Page county, Illinois, says that repeatedly brother Masons, criminals whom he had in charge, demanded aid, and that he refused to give it. It will be observed that the inspector above named makes the same claim. The head of the secret service of the United States Treasury, a few years since, told us that he was compelled to set aside his lodge relations while in that service. But the lodge-oaths bind Masons to help Masons, and all men who live up to the Masonic oath do it when called upon. It is obvious that no man so bound is fit to exercise any public trust. Men who rule the community ought not to be under secret obligations to a small portion of it.

KEELEY'S CURE, PROHIBITION AND SALVATION.

Rather a spirited war of words has recently been evolved between the advocates of what is known as "Keeley's Bichloride-of-Gold-Cure for Drunkenness" and the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mr. Keeley, who is now said to be in Europe establishing his peculiar sanitariums at different points on the continent, has for some time past had one or more such hospitals in Illinois; and very flattering reports of his cures of habitual drunkards have been widely published.

This alleged reduction of the drink habit to a disease that can be cured by medicine is so in opposition to the ordinary Christian belief that drunkenness is a crime voluntarily committed, that it aroused those faithful servants, the W. C. T. U., into opposition to this new-fangled theory. "The thought, purpose and intention of the W. C. T. U."—we quote from an address delivered by Miss Willard in Evanston, last week—"has always been to be friendly with those who help the temperance cause. But the Keeley cure is being boomed by the press for political purposes. Dr. Keeley's cure has merit in it and is a good thing, but it is held up and emphasized by the newspapers beyond its true value, for party ends. Watch and see if it is not boomed more and more from month to month until the close of the coming Presidential campaign. Both of the great political parties will exalt moral suasion, local option, Keeley cure, anything, in fact, except prohibition, which is the one bitter pill that they cannot swallow."

The daily press, almost without exception, have given Keeley and his doctor-stuff a most fulsome "send-off," just as it advocates without stint the doctrine of high-license as the remedy for drunkenness. Miss Willard is right. It must become a feature in the strife of politics as the devil's offset to the law of God. If drunkenness is not a sin against God, why has he told us that no drunkard can inherit the kingdom of heaven? God told Adam that if he ate of the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden, he should surely die. The devil said nay; but Adam and all his posterity have suffered for his sin for nearly 6,000 years. If drunkenness is only a disease, why should it keep a man out of heaven any more than would an attack of malarial fever? The idea, in the light of revelation and reason, is preposterous. Revelation pronounces a curse upon those who put the bottle to their neighbor's lips (that is, the saloon-keepers), and it warns the habitual drinker of ardent spirits that he shall experience God's anger if he does not reform. Reason long ago decided that drunkenness would ruin men; and ever since that philosophers and scientific students have been discussing methods to break up this great evil by human inventions.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union is founded on the discovery that God can and will, under the pressure of fervent prayer, remove the drink-thirst from the drunkard and so reform him more thoroughly than any human device has ever been able to.

The writer knew a young, healthy, fine-looking man, not a Christian, living in Chicago, who had this drink-thirst to an uncontrollable degree, although he could be classed only as a moderate drinker. On his way home to sleep, every night, he had to pass a saloon, and every night he went in to it and had one drink, going, soon afterward, to bed. Providentially, some influence, perhaps God's Holy Spirit, set him to thinking how weak and foolish he was, not able, with his strong frame and manly form, to get the better of so persistent a habit. But his will was weaker than his appetite for liquor, and he could not overcome the evil that beset him. Something prompted him to pray that his craving for ardent spirits might be taken from him. For a time even under this regular discipline, he could not prevail. But he was sincere, with sufficient faith to keep on praying. A few days more elapsed, and to his great joy and with considerable surprise, he found that he had conquered his appetite, and that he could pass and re-pass that and all other saloons, without a desire to enter or to drink any ardent spirits. The writer heard his testimony given at a Sunday-afternoon meeting, and on another occasion. The cure was performed not by the application of drugs, but by that power that has changed many a sinner into a living child of God.

The W. C. T. U. is right. Prohibition is the handmaid of God, as a human instrument for his glory in saving drunkards; but his methods that led to the formation of the W. C. T. U. are those that he will soonest honor. Prohibition is good, but it is not enough. Prayer is the key to the human heart, that opens it to the influences of the Holy Spirit, and he does the work—thoroughly, silently, gloriously.

"Keeley's Cure" is liable to degenerate (as Miss Willard suggests), in opposition to Prohibition, into a mere political factor in our elections; but it has its uses, and may be doing much good.

Prohibition also has its uses. Let its good work go on, to the discouragement of distillers, brewers, and whisky dealers; but when we come to reform the drunkard, it loses its efficiency. God alone is the drunkard's salvation.

NEARING THE DANGER-LINE

There is no doubt that the Roman Catholic hierarchy, at home and abroad, is about to assert its spiritual and temporal power to the fullest possible extent in the United States, to the detriment of our republican institutions, and ultimately to the conquest of our nation. There is abundant evidence of this statement.

In view of this fact, Protestants, who seem to be asleep with this danger staring them in the face, cannot too soon awaken to the critical condition of our beloved Republic; cannot too soon begin the thorough and persistent agitation of the truth that since the ascension of our one great, only and efficient High-Priest, the Lord Jesus Christ, there has not been, is not now, and cannot be until he returns again, any authorized system of priesthood on the earth to which mankind owes any allegiance whatever, or to which their service and obligation is in any manner due. This doctrine can be proved beyond a peradventure from the Scriptures, and is a fundamental truth of our Christianity. Therefore, the orders of priesthood in the Roman Catholic church, the Established Church of England, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, or in any other church in the world, or in either the Masonic, Odd-fellows', or any other secret societies, are fundamentally wrong and in antagonism to our Christianity; are entirely human, if not diabolical, in their conception, organization and operations, and should be totally abolished.

Perfectly convinced of this fact, the next duty of Christians is to personally urge upon their neighbors, one by one, to accept it as coming from God himself, to bring them to the Lord Jesus Christ as the only and perfect Priest to whom they owe service, and to confide them to his eternal care and keeping. If our country and religion are ever overturned, it will be through the agency of an assumed, unauthorized and tyrannical priesthood—the parasites of a system of spurious and corrupt religion.

INFLUENCE ACHIEVED BY FUSS AND FEATHERS.

It is not the benevolence, the charity, the fellowship, the personal benefits of Masonry, it would seem, upon which its votaries depend for the increase and glory of the order. A well-known humorous writer, none less than "M. Quad, the Detroit Free Press Man," comparing the past with the present work of Blue Lodge Masonry, says: "I have been a Blue Lodge worker in the old way and in the new, and my experience proves very good results for the new. In the old way—without robes or accessories or spirit—if we had an average attendance of twelve in a lodge numbering one hundred members we were highly pleased. If a brother came once or twice after taking his third degree, we did not expect to see him again unless on some great occasion," etc., etc. . . . "And what did the new way do for my lodge in two years? It made every worker perfect in the key; it increased the attendance four hundred per cent; it gave us three sets of workers on the floor, where we formerly had one; it brought back scores of brothers who had grown cold in Masonry; it helped to collect our dues; it brought us visitors; it posted every man until every one could post a candidate; it created an enthusiasm and an interest which quadrupled the number of candidates," etc., etc.

And the only difference between the old way and the new is (as defined by a secret society journal) "the adoption of the beautiful or dramatized modes of working." In other words, Masonry has come to seek its influence and popularity in the amount of show and tinsel which it displays for the captivation of the unwise and heedless. It has always been "a thing of shreds and patches," and now it adopts additional fuss and feathers for its accessories.

—The American Legion of Honor, so far as we have reason to believe, makes no pretensions to religion. It is at the best a sordid, take-and-give society. Its members pay their money into the treasury, learn some mouldy apothegms, have a few unimportant secrets imparted to them, and take out an insurance policy to meet certain personal emergencies. It looks, therefore, rather remarkable that a Baptist minister in New York should appoint Sunday evening in his own house of worship, the body of which is specially set apart for the use of the order, to lecture on the American Legion of Honor. And all this when the great city of New York is overflowing with sinners to whom a Gospel sermon on that evening would be "good news" indeed. The paper from which we copy is sure that the minister's "reputation for eloquence and learning is such that an instructive and pleasing evening is assured, which cannot fail to be of great service to the order." He is a member of the order, and would, no doubt, enjoy carrying the church into the lodge.

A WONDERFUL SPEECH

FROM A MAN 87 YEARS OLD.

Samuel Blanchard, Esq., has been an industrious and successful business man through a long life. He lives in Beloit, Kan., much respected by all, attends three prayer meetings in a week in the different churches, and is welcomed by all denominations. Beloit, of course, is crawling with secret societies; and as Mr. Blanchard is a Vermonter, when a young man he saw Masonry turned inside-out in that State, and he thoroughly understands the whole dark system.

At a late meeting of the Y. M. C. A., in Beloit, the leader read Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the Temple, and comments were made on its "great and precious promises." Mr. Blanchard spoke thus:

"The Bible is filled with precious promises, but all, or almost all, with a proviso—'If you will hear his voice;' 'All that will come unto me, I will in nowise cast out;' and to Solomon: 'If you will walk in the way of your father David, there shall not a man fail you to sit on the throne.' God commands Solomon not to go down into Egypt; not to put his trust in horses and chariots; not to marry, or give in marriage amongst the heathen. His was to be a reign of peace—a representative of the coming reign of Christ. But how did he obey God's commands? He went down into Egypt; procured the largest armament of horses and chariots of any of the surrounding kings; he took to himself heathen wives; built heathen altars on every hill and in every grove, for the worship of the heathen gods, while God's house was becoming a house of merchandise and a den of thieves. What is his kingdom now? Not a man to sit upon his throne, and the whole nation dispersed through the whole earth, a hissing and a bye-word.

"Solomon gave us many wise sayings, and told us many great truths. He says there is no new thing under the sun; what has been done shall be done again

"Are we not following in the footsteps of Solomon, as fast as time can move? Is not our land filled with heathen temples, where Christ is not permitted to enter? And is not the Church of Christ becoming decimated by the secret lodges draining the strength of our land of men and means into the lodges? It is estimated that three-fourths of our Methodist clergy belong to the Masonic lodge. I asked a good reverend brother, What class of persons Christ had in view when he said: 'Not all that say Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; for many shall say, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful things? Yet will I profess I never knew you.' Matt. 7: 21.

"He could not answer, and I answered for him thus: 'Have we not prophesied—that is, preached the Gospel of Christ? And 'in thy name cast out devils?'—that is, converted many sinners to seek Christ, 'and in thy name done many wonderful things?'—that is, got up great revivals?"

"He acknowledged my exposition to be earnest; but who those are that are so summarily rejected when they knock at the pearly gate of heaven for entrance, he could not readily devise. I suggested an idea, whether they might be those who, after doing many things for Christ, go into a heathen temple and bow at a heathen altar, where Christ could not go, and his name is not mentioned in their worship

"The next evening, at prayer meeting, the pastor—a high Mason—mentioned that Brother Blanchard called on him, and they had a very interesting conversation."

THE CHRISTIAN UNION CONFERENCE.

This conference was held in the Kenwood church, at Forty-sixth and Greenwood avenue, Chicago, Rev. John P. Hale, pastor. This church, which is one of the most efficient, and has one of the finest and best-appointed houses of worship in the South Division, is not yet six years old. It is strictly undenominational, though in hearty sympathy and fellowship with all Christian churches of every name. In illustrating the nature and efficiency of its work, it may be stated that a successful mission church of similar character has grown out of it, and the Ladies' Society report for the last year over $3,000 received and paid out for practical benevolence. This is aside from the regular church contributions for Christian missions.

The conference was not largely attended, but perfectly harmonious, and quite representative of those who believe in the visible unity of the household of faith.

Among those from abroad, were John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., the venerable founder of Berea College, and the apostle of reforms in that, his native State; Rev. C. E. Hulbert, pastor of Unity church, Detroit; Rev. C. S. Bullock, of Jamaica, W. I., and Mrs. E. B. Grannis, editor of the Church Union, New York.

The opening address was by Rev. C. E. Hulbert, of Detroit, and was responded to by the pastor. This, together with miscellaneous business, closed the forenoon session of the first day.

After the devotional services of the afternoon, the first paper read was by Rev. H. H. Hinman, of Oberlin, Ohio, on "The Divided Church and Christian Missions," in which he showed the great wastefulness of resources, and the evil influence on the minds of the heathen, that divisions engender. There was considerable discussion. A missionary from India spoke of the effects of sectarian division on the discipline of the mission churches, showing that these excluded for universality in one church readily found admission into a church of a different sect.

Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, next spoke of the relation of sectarian divisions to Christians. He clearly showed that our existing denominational divisions were unscriptural, and injurious to the cause of Christian education; but he saw no way out of the dilemma.

Rev. C. S. Bullock also spoke of the union movement in his field, and urged Christian people to be more loyal to Christ than to their sectarian doctrine.

A devotional meeting, conducted by the Rev. J. G. Fee, was held in the evening.

The second day's session of the conference closed its proceedings. The papers presented were upon the "Consolidation of Supernumerary Churches," by the Rev. E. Mudge and the Rev. H. A. Kerns; the "Problem of the Union Church," by the Rev. John P. Hale; "Church Union in Practice," by the Rev. E. R. Worrell; "Church Unity as a Prerequisite to the World's Evangelization," by the Rev. C. E. Hulbert, and the "History of Church Union Work," by Mrs. E. B. Grannis, of New York.

At 7:45 o'clock the conference held its closing devotional exercises. An effort will be made to effect a permanent organization and extend the idea of a united church. N. S. Bouton, Mrs. Grannis, C. E. Hulbert, E. Mudge, and H. H. Hinman were appointed to consider the matter.

CHARLES P. SUMNER, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

GEORGE WASHINGTON. Rev. Ezra Styles, D.D., in the Philadelphian, July 23, 1830: "Hitherto I have neither advocated nor opposed Masonry, unless it be in the relation of a conversation between General Washington and Governor Jonathan Trumbull the second, which the latter more than once repeated to my father. The latter, when aid de camp to the former, asked him if he would advise him to become a Mason. General Washington replied, that Masonry was a benevolent institution, which might be employed for the best or worst of purposes; but that for the most part it was merely child's play, and that he could not give him any advice on the subject."

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

cieties in general, taking Freemasonry as a type of the whole brood of vipers, and tracing the same wicked principle throughout all of them. In regard to the duty of the Freemason to break the wicked Masonic obligation, he remarked that an oath taken in a court of justice to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," should be performed; but an oath to tell a lie, a whole lie, and nothing but a lie, should be broken. Surely every honest person could say "Amen" to that, and no less surely could we say "Amen" to the violation of Masonic oaths.

On Wednesday evening, the 23d, the Seminary of the German Evangelical church (Lutheran), Prof. D. Irion, president, was opened for a hearing on the subject of secret societies. All the students, about 130 young men, were in attendance in the chapel of the seminary, with their professors and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Berens. During the lecture, Deut. 27: 15 was quoted: "Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the Lord, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. And all the people shall answer and say, Amen." Upon this it was observed that if Moses was now addressing this audience upon the wicked "abomination" of Masonry he would call upon all present who called themselves the Lord's people to say "Amen." At the close of the sermon, the pastor said "Amen," and the professors expressed their thanks for the address. Dr. Fischer kindly introduced the lecturer to the faculty, and thus opened the way for the introduction of the subject. Thanks for his kind entertainment also at his home.

W. FENTON.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—We are under obligations to an esteemed friend of the Reform cause at Schuyler's Lake, N. Y., for recent newspapers containing notices of some secret societies and their operations, in his vicinity.

—A circular from "The Christian Workers' Association," announces that the Cynosure's good Greek friend, Rev. A. D. Zaraphonites is to be present at a six days' convention of the association at Cambridgeport, Mass., on October 3-8; after which, with six other missionaries, he is to leave for work in foreign fields. He carries with him the best wishes and prayers of the N. C. A. and his friends in the Cynosure office.

—The Boston Globe and the Boston Herald, of September 25, contain the report of an interesting event in the family of Bro. J. P. Stoddard in that city. The Herald says: "Mr. J. P. Stoddard of 218 Columbus avenue was lecturing in Vermont when, a few days ago, he was peremptorily summoned by wire to return to his home in this city. Last night he was met by about thirty guests, some of whom had gained access to the family Bible, and was reminded that this was the 60th anniversary of his birth." The Globe adds: "A handsome stock of presents were temptingly displayed, and when the presentation speeches came, Mrs. Stoddard was not forgotten in the distribution. A purse containing $100 was one of the most useful of the gifts."

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard publishes the following card in relation to his recent surprise party, which we notice elsewhere: "Boston, Sept. 25, 1891. Editor of the Traveller. Permit us to acknowledge the receipt of $104.75 in cash, along with valuable articles, given by friends in aid of the work we are attempting in New England, to call attention to the nature and influence of the 684 secret societies, or lodges, mentioned in our city directory. The matter was a complete surprise and the pleasant company of thirty greeting us on our return from labors in New Hampshire and Vermont, and those who, not present, had contributed to this free will offering to the Lord's cause, will long be held in grateful remembrance by the recipients of this offering. J. P. and Mrs. A. E. Stoddard."

From the rude manner in which church members are attacking the New York Voice for its recent article, "The Ungodly League of Church and Saloon," which we reprinted in the Cynosure for Sept. 17, one would think that some of them are afraid the saloon will have to go.

THE HOME.

REPLY

TO THE OFT-REPEATED ASSERTION OF MASONS THAT "THE LODGE RELIGION IS GOOD ENOUGH FOR US."

PART I.

Music, We have an anchor. Songs of Joy and Gladness, p. 22.

Will your oath-bound lodge with its gorgeous train
Help you on to God, with him to reign?
Do his arms enfold and his presence lead
To the city of pearl with its golden streets?

CHORUS.

Then take the anchor that God hath given,
Sent us to earth from the port of Heaven;
For you Christ came to open the way;
Jesus his name—he is calling to-day.

Will your hood-wink hold in the coming tide,
With the cable-tow round your neck beside?
With your breast made bare, and your feet unshod,
Will it pay your fare to the courts of God?

Those blood-curdling oaths will your spirit freeze,
You so tremblingly took on your hended knees;
With your record here, so sadly marred,—
Can you meet it there at the bar of God?

PART II.

THE ONE SECRET SOCIETY WE INVITE YOU TO JOIN.

Psa. 27: 5. John 10: 9.

With one secret lodge, I'm in fullest accord,
It's composed of one, with my dear Lord;
No degree to take, and no fee to pay;
But for Jesus' sake;—trust God and obey.

Oh, this secret place where the Lord doth hide,
All his little ones who in him abide;
His pavilion safe from the strife of tongues
Is the secret place where God's child belongs.

To this secret place—and I know it well—
Where 'tis always safe and so sweet to dwell,
In the glorious light of his loving face,
Will you come to-night!—to this secret place.

—Mrs. Daniel Powers in the Independent Christian.

WHY NOT DANCE?

1. I cannot dance with a clear conscience, and therefore should abstain.
2. All branches of the church have condemned dancing as carnal and immoral, and inconsistent with the Christian profession.
3. The Vedas of India and the Koran declare that dancing is an immoral amusement.
4. Pagan moralists, like Cicero, condemn dancing as exciting licentiousness.
5. Dancing was one great means by which Nero corrupted Rome.
6. It has a bad name for professing Christians.
7. The best and most devout Christians do not want to dance.
8. Backsliders and unconverted persons love it.
9. It is not a favorite amusement with even conscientious worldlings.
10. It is one of the most favorite amusements of the vile and degraded.
11. The world has no confidence in the piety of church-members who dance.
12. It is a distinctive badge of worldliness and worldly conformity.
13. It destroys a professing Christian's influence and usefulness.
14. The promiscuous dancing of the sexes was not approved nor practiced in Bible times.
15. Dancing grieves and offends pastors and all devout Christians.
16. It is a companion vice with drinking.
17. It dissipates the mind, corrupts the heart and sears the conscience.
18. The décolleté dress of the dance is the immoral invention of procuresses and harlots.
19. The "German" and other round dances were invented in brothels, and they prevail there.
20. The liberties indulged in the dance are nowhere else allowed in decent society.
21. It brings virtue in close connection with vice, at late hours and under excitement.
22. Men do not choose to dance by themselves, nor even with their own wives and sisters.
23. The peculiar charm of dancing, beyond music and motion, seems to have a sex reference.
24. Indeed, it is so allied to licentiousness, that brothels are commonly called dance houses.
25. The confessional and police reports show that a very large proportion of abandoned women were ruined in connection with the dance.
26. I cannot dance to the glory of God.
27. If Jesus Christ were here I know he would not go with me to a dance, and I cannot ask his blessing on it.

28. I would not like to meet death at a dance.

29. I would not like to be found in a ball-room when the Lord comes.

30. And finally, I have no desire to dance, because my soul is filled with the joy of God's salvation, and my life with the privileges of his service.—Rev. E. P. Marvin, of Lockport, N. Y., in Messiah's Herald.

POWER OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

The Holy Spirit is able to make the Word as successful now as in the days of the apostles. He can bring in by hundreds and thousands as easily as by ones and twos. The reason why we are no more prosperous is that we have not the Holy Spirit with us in might and power as in early times. If we had the Spirit sealing our ministry with power, it would signify very little about our talent. Men might be poor and uneducated; their words might be broken and ungrammatical; there might be none of the polished periods of Hall, or glorious thunders of Chalmers; but if the might of the Spirit attended them, the most humble evangelists would be more successful than the most learned of divines, or the most eloquent of preachers.

It is extraordinary grace, not talent, that wins the day. It is extraordinary spiritual power, not extraordinary mental power, that we need. Mental power may fill a chapel, but spiritual power fills the church; mental power may gather a congregation; spiritual power will save souls. We want spiritual power.

Oh, we know some before whom we shrink into nothing as to talent, but who have no spiritual power; and when they speak, they have not the Holy Spirit with them! But we know others—simple-hearted, worthy men—who speak their country dialect, and who stand up to preach in their country place, and the Spirit of God clothes every word with power. Hearts are broken, souls are saved, and sinners are born again. O Spirit of the living God, we want thee! Thou art the life, the soul, the source of thy people's success. Without thee they can do nothing; with thee they can do everything.—C. H. Spurgeon.

SANCTIMONY AND SANCTIFICATION.

Sanctimony and sanctification are terms expressive of a condition not merely different but opposite.

Sanctified people are never sanctimonious. They are common, natural, and approachable. Sanctimonious people are generally unspiritual.

Sanctimony is the "form of godliness." Sanctification is the "power thereof."

A sanctified spirit is sweet, lovable, and loving. A sanctimonious spirit is frigid, formal, and distant.

Sanctimony is the devil's nearest approach to sanctification.

Sanctimony always demands propriety and steadiness in worship and work. Sanctification breaks through rules and regulations, leaps through fires, crosses rivers, to serve and to save.

Sanctification becomes all things to all men, hoping to win some.

Sanctification takes to the by-ways and hedges, and is the most at home in the lowly cottages.

Sanctimonious people hate sanctification and oppose the sanctified.

Sanctimony is affected holiness; sanctification is holiness in fact.—Selected.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

The methods of the Salvation Army could not be accepted by all Christian men, but they have been most acceptable to a vast multitude, have been humbly and heartily used, and have, beyond doubt, proved a very great blessing to very many persons. The army was organized by Mr. and Mrs. Booth twenty-five years ago, but has had its principal growth in the past ten years. In October, 1890, it consisted of 2,874 corps, led by 9,416 officers, whose whole time was given to the work of the army. The Gospel was preached by them in twenty-nine different languages in thirty different nations. Its papers, twenty-four in number, are all called *War Cry*s, but they also publish fifteen monthly magazines, total circulation of papers and magazines being 33,400,000 copies for last year, which required a use of thirty tons of paper each week. The income of the army for the year was $3,759,000, while they held 49,800 meetings at which millions of people assembled. The aim of the army is to reach, in general, the humbler and more abandoned classes—these classes which, as a rule, are most neglected by the churches. The army has rarely, in its work, collided with the churches, and, not as commonly as they have deserved, have they had the help and sympathy of the churches. Booth proposes to lift up the submerged tenth of England, and has asked $5,000,000 from the people for his work. The people have expressed confidence in his proposed plan by donating $550,000, and his work has commenced under the watchful eye of the world and the blessing of the church. The army has proved itself a great general blessing and we wish it the further and constant favor of God.—Exchange.

A GOOD NAME.

A young man does not always find it easy to get on in the world without education, or family influence, or personal friends, or property or health; but he will find in the long run that it is easier for him to make his way among men without any or all of these advantages than to make substantial progress in the world without the reputation of a good character, even though he has all these other possessions. Character stands for something everywhere in spite of its frequent slighting. Men who are themselves lacking in a good character appreciate and value it in others. A band of robbers would want an honest treasure.

The young man whose word cannot be believed, whose honesty is not above suspicion, and whose personal life is not what it ought to be, is not the young man the world has open places for. He may have health and wealth, and family position and a host of friends, but if he is without character he is at a disadvantage in every position in life. When a young man who has lost his good name makes an honest effort to recover it he finds that his way upward is a hard one—a great deal harder, in spite of all other helps, than it would have been if he had made a right start without these helps. Friends are comparatively helpless in their efforts to win confidence for one who has proved himself unworthy of it on former occasions. Then it is that the young is likely to realize as never before that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," even as a worldly investment.—Sunday-school Times.

BIBLE ARITHMETIC.

ADDITION.

"Add to your faith courage, and to courage knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity." 2 Peter 1: 5-7.

SUBTRACTION.

"Laying aside all malice and guile, hypocrisies and envies, and all evil speakings, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." 1 Peter 2: 1, 2.

MULTIPLICATION.

"Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord." 1 Peter 1: 2. "He that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness." 2 Cor. 9: 10.

DIVISION.

"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and you shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor 5: 17, 18.

RULE OF THREE.

"And now abideth faith, hope and love, these three, but the greatest of these is love." 1 Cor. 13: 13.—Chas. S. Long.

The recent amendments to the Prohibitory law of Maine, securing a stricter enforcement, are beginning to bear fruit. A proprietor of a hotel in Portland recently called a meeting of his creditors, attributing his failure to the enforcement of the law against the sale of liquor. That the new amendments are pinching the liquor men harder than before, is evident also from the fresh crop of items circulating through the daily press denouncing the Maine law as a farce, a failure, etc.—Christian at Work.

IN VAIN.

In New York City is found the densest population of any place on the globe. On the East Side there are 330,000 souls to the square mile, and who must of necessity live in the most terrible squalor and filth. Crowded in tenement houses, men, women and children, driven by the terrible power of competition, which is always seeking to lower the cost of production by lowering wages, work from early morning till late at night for less than enough to sustain life. Here is seen the terrible curse of child labor. Children four years of age—mere babies—are made to work all day in an atmosphere unfit for human beings to breathe, basting, sewing on buttons, or, more injurious still, stripping the leaves from that filthy weed, tobacco. Their lives are dwarfed and ruined. Under such conditions vice and crime are fostered. Is it any wonder that amid such degrading surroundings men lose their honor, women their virtue, and children become idiots, drunkards, and criminals? It is worse than blasphemy for people to kneel in prayer and ask God's blessing on humanity and then close their eyes and deaden their conscience to such terrible forms of evil and the causes which produce them. It is all in vain for those who call themselves Christians to talk of godliness, sobriety and virtue, and at the same time uphold a system that is creating thousands of criminals and paupers.—Western Advocate.

TOMMY AND THE ORANGES.

Tommy walked along the shady street, feeling just about as happy as almost any boy would feel. It was a bright, sunny day, and the birds were singing over his head, and he had only to turn his eyes to see the flowers in old Mrs. Camp's garden. He had had a good breakfast and was wearing a new pair of shoes.

"Tommy," said Mrs. Camp, as he was passing the door, "won't you do a little errand for me?"

"Yes ma'am," he said.

"I'm going to have company to tea, to-night, and I want some oranges at the store. I wish you would get me a dozen."

"Yes ma'am," said Tommy again.

He took the quarter she gave him and went to the store.

"I'm giving thirteen oranges to the dozen, to-day," said Mr. Gray, the store-keeper, and they're fine ones, too."

Tommy took the basket and walked toward Mrs. Camp's. When he turned into the shady street again no one was passing. He set down the basket and peeped into it. They were fine ones, sure enough, so large and round and yellow. Tommy thought they were the juiciest-looking ones he had ever seen in his life.

"I'd like one," he said to himself.

He was very fond of oranges. He wondered if he could ever dare to ask Mrs. Camp for one of them.

Then it came into his head that there were thirteen instead of the dozen she was expecting.

"I don't believe t'would be a bit of harm for me to take that," he said. "No, of course not. She only wanted a dozen; she said so."

Tommy took one of the oranges, put it in his pocket and went on. But he did not feel quite as happy as he had before. The basket felt heavier, the sun did not seem to shine so brightly, nor did the birds sing so sweetly.

"Of course it's right," said Tommy again. He did not realize that he was arguing against the good Spirit in his heart, which kept whispering:

"Tommy, that orange is not yours."

"And I'm awfully hungry." As we have said, Tommy had just had a good breakfast, but he had never yet found that that made any difference in his wanting an orange or, indeed, anything else good to eat.

"And I'm so tired lugging this big basket. It's no mor'n fair I should have some pay."

But it was no use. Tommy had a good mother at home, and all the talk in the world could not lead him to forget her words about boys keeping their hearts pure of ugly sin stains and their hands clean from picking and stealing. He took the orange out of his pocket. It seemed as though he never had wanted anything in his life as he wanted it. But into the basket it went, and then Tommy, like a wise little boy, set his small legs in motion and did not let them stop until he reached Mrs. Camp's door.

"There are thirteen to the dozen," he said as he handed her the basket.

"Perhaps she will give me the extra one," he said to himself, as she counted them.

"Yes, thirteen," she said. "They'll make a good, full dish. I'm much obliged to you, Tommy."

He watched until she put the last one back into the basket and set them away in the pantry. He felt a good deal disappointed, for the sight of them had made him wish for them more and more.

He went out and walked slowly for ten minutes, then gave a jump and whoop.

"Hurrah! If I had taken that orange it would have been all gone by this time and God would have known it, and mamma would have known it, too, for I couldn't have helped telling her. And if it was done, I never, never, NEVER could have undone it. I'd have been a thief all my life. Just for an orange! Oh, I'm glad, glad!"

And the sun shone so brightly, and the birds sang so merrily, that Tommy felt sure they were glad, too.—Sidney Dayre, in S. S. Advocate.

CRACKED RESOLUTIONS.

'Twas a set of resolutions,
As fine as fine could be,
And signed in pains-taking fashion,
By Nettie, Joe and Bee;
And the last in the list was written,
In letters broad and dark
(To look as grand as the others)
"Miss Baby Grace, her mark!"

"We'll try all ways to help mother;
We won't be selfish to each other;
We'll say kind words to every one;
We won't tie Pussy's feet for fun;
We won't be cross and snarly, too,
And all the good we can we'll do."

"It's just as easy to keep them,"
The children gayly cried;
But mamma, with a smile, made answer,
"Wait, darlings, till you're tried."
And truly, the glad, bright New-Year
Wasn't his birthday old,
When the three little sorrowful faces
A sorrowful story told.

"And how are your resolutions?"
We asked of Baby Grace,
Who stood with a smile of wonder
On her dear little dimpled face;
Quick came the merry answer
She never an instant lacked,
"I don't find much of 'em's broken,
But I dess 'em's about all cracked."
—Presbyterian.

TEMPERANCE.

THE BEER BARONS.

If any doubt existed as to the ultimate purposes and designs of the liquor interest they were thoroughly dissipated by the action of the convention recently held in this city. Those of our temperance friends who cherished the fond hope that there was a limit which the dealers would not dare to pass must have been amazed at the audacity of their demands and the sweeping character of their claims. It was not enough that they succeeded in compelling the conspicuous attendance of the Mayor, but he must perforce deliver an address of "welcome." His presence and his address were both insisted upon by a power which neither he nor the organization by which he was nominated and whose political representative he is, had the temerity to refuse; and that is the power which to-day confronts the law-abiding, order-loving, conservative portion of our population.

Compact, united, daring and aggressive, the liquor interest insists that the law as it now stands shall be so altered during the next legislative session as to practically put an end to police surveillance and inspection. And should this demand be refused, then the great beer barons, the powerful oligarchy which dictates nominations and directs legislation, which literally decides by whom we are to be ruled, stands ready with its money and its influence to crush out all opposition. Their power has been already felt in the politics not only of the city but of the State, and if it should continue to increase as it has done during the last ten or fifteen years the time is near when it will be the dominant power not only in the city and State, but in the nation.

From a table of statistics on food and liquor, we learn that the shops for the sale of liquor outnumber those for the sale of food by nearly three thousand; that the beer barons, to the number of eighteen or twenty, hold no less than 4,710 chattel mortgages on saloon fixtures, and that the aggregate amount of such mortgages is about five millions of dollars. Standing between the saloon-keeper and the politician, between the dive-keeper and the political heeler, the beer barons literally dominate the whole domain, at least so far as one party and its leaders are concerned. They are almost as powerful in making candidates for State and municipal office as the saloon and the dive are in making subjects for the penitentiary and State prison. It remains to be seen how long this power is to last, and how far the public will tolerate its insolent and audacious demands. Is it not enough that we should be taxed for the crime and pauperism of which their trade is the prolific cause, but must the whole body politic, the law-making power, and the Executive be made their subservient tools?—New York Catholic Review.

TESTIMONY AGAINST THE DRINK HABIT.

Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirits, and drink, is not only needless, but hurtful, and that the entire disuse of it would tend to promote the health, the virtue and the happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction, that should the people of the United States, and especially the young men, discountenance entirely the use of it, they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and the world.

(Signed) JAMES MADISON,
ANDREW JACKSON,
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

1837.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

A recent advertisement in the Derry (Ireland) Signal reads: "Wanted: A man and his wife as care-takers for a gentleman's country house. One must be sober." Was it too much to expect both to be?

A Massachusetts paper spoke of a saloon-keeper as being interested in a "graveyard" business; and a action for libel, with damages at $5,000 has been begun against it by the man.

The total membership of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the United States is something over 53,000. The societies of New York, Chicago, Baltimore and Washington are not auxiliary to the union.

The owners of 130 small drug-stores in Indiana have been obliged to go out of business since the law went into effect compelling all drug-stores keeping for sale any preparations of alcohol to pay the regular liquor tax exacted from saloons.

The five old Prohibition States, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, show a decreased production during 1887 and 1888 of 78,589 barrels of beer, while the high-license States of Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Michigan show an increased production of 253,114 barrels.—Brewers' Journal.

If it be true that Prohibition means "freedom," and high license is a "means of restriction," how can the above figures be explained?—New York Witness.

The Rev. Mr. Passmore wanted the saloons closed on Sunday, and the ill-feeling against him took the shape of placing dynamite in the bell of his church, the Methodist Episcopal. The bell and the belfrey were blown to atoms, endangering the lives of more than one hundred people. This occurred at Breckinridge, Col.

The Prohibition State Convention, of Pennsylvania, in Harrisburg, nominated W. W. Hague for auditor general, and George Drayton for State treasurer. The platform declares for an educational qualification for voters, condemns the Baker Ballot bill and the Constitutional Convention act, and discusses the civil service, tariff and trusts.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON II.—Fourth Quarter.—October 11.

SUBJECT.—Christ Foretelling His Death.—John 12: 20-36.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.—John 12: 32.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 12: 20-28. T.—John 12: 20-36. W.—Luke 18: 28-34. T.—John 14: 25-31. F.—Luke 22: 39-46. S.—John 16: 16-20. S.—Matt. 16: 21-28.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Greeks desire to see Jesus.—vs. 20-22. The tide of public feeling seemed about to turn in Christ's favor. His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, with the multitudes shouting "Hosanna," was a public recognition of his Messianic claims, such as had never been accorded to him before. And now he was to receive another singular act of homage, from a new source. Perhaps the expression in Ps. 110: 7, "He shall drink of the brook by the way," may have reference to the manner in which his spirit, sinking under the approaching shadows of a cruel death, must have been cheered and refreshed by these foregleams of his universal reign. That these Greeks were proselytes is evident; and also that they wished to see Jesus for some definite purpose. We can only guess what it may have been by the discourse which followed their visit. The practical question to be taken home to our hearts is, "Do we wish to see Jesus?" It is safe to say that this incident would never have been recorded, still less made the basis of some of our Lord's most spiritual and sublime utterances, if they had merely wished to interview him out of idle curiosity. So we must want to see him for something definite; something that we feel to be of vital importance. No one with such a sincere desire ever failed to see Jesus. It is also one of the most blessed privileges of discipleship that we may introduce others to Christ. How careful should we be to live ourselves on terms of such close intimacy and friendship with him that inquiring souls will come to us as these Greeks went to Philip, saying, "Sir, we would see Jesus."

2. Death the way to life.—vs. 23-27. "The hour is come;"—the hour when his great work should be consummated. Christ often alluded to this mysterious period; sometimes with exultation as the divinity within him beheld the after-triumph, and again depressed as his human nature shrank before the dreadful ordeal. This shows how closely his divine and human natures were linked together. In the present lesson we see both these moods swiftly succeeding each other. First: Exultation in the fact that his death should be the gateway to life for uncounted multitudes, as the seed-grain must die under the clod before it can bring forth the harvests that are to feed a world. Christ laid down no law for his followers that he did not himself, as a man, become amenable to. "He that loveth his life shall lose it;" he who has not the martyr spirit, ready if need be to lay down life itself for the truth. This is a solemn, a crucial, test. The grace to endure fierce persecutions is only given in times of persecution, as "dying grace is for dying hours;" but if we crucify the gross, the low, the worldly part of our natures; if we die daily by denying self, we have the same spirit with the martyrs of old. Two great honors are attached to Christ's service. (1.) To be continually in his presence. (2.) To be honored of the Father. If we go where Christ is not, where the associations are such that he must necessarily be shut out, how can we claim to be his servants, or expect to be honored of his Father? This is a question that all professing Christians who are members of the lodge may well ask themselves. It is the very essence of service that we separate ourselves from all other masters and serve him alone. "Now is my soul troubled." Pentecost thinks that these Greeks proposed to give Christ an asylum outside of Judea, where he would be safe from his enemies, and at the same time gather his adherents about him, and set up his kingdom among the Gentiles. If so, in refusing it he put aside his only way of escape from the dreadful death awaiting him. Can we wonder that his human soul was troubled, and that his only recourse was to cling fast to that will of his Father, which it had been his meat and drink to do, and must be henceforth his sustaining anchor in the "horrible tempest" about to burst over his head? Can we do better in times of distress and temptation than to cling to the same divine refuge? God's will is unchangeable, immovable, infinitely wise; and, however gloomy and forbidding it may look at first, it is sure to lead us by ways we know not of into his own peace and joy. "Father, glorify thy name." Superior over every personal feeling is the desire that his Father may be honored by this voluntary sacrifice of himself. "Hallowed be thy name" is a deeper petition than many of us think who take it upon careless lips, and who daily contradict it by glorifying self instead of God. Are we willing to give even our lives a sacrifice in order to see that prayer answered? Then we enter into the fellowship of Christ's sufferings, and may be sure that God will glorify himself in us, and us in him.

3. Christ lifted up.—vs. 29-36. "This voice came not because of me." Christ did not need this witness to himself, but his disciples did. He already saw as in one magnificent prospective, the world judged, its prince dethroned, and all men drawn to him by the magnetic power of his cross. "If I be lifted up." This shows that he fully realized "what death he should die," and how it would affect his followers. To strengthen their faith, not his, was this voice given. The questions by which his discourse was interrupted show how easily a captious, caviling spirit can find contradictions in the Bible. But if we walk in the light we shall be guided into all truth. No wonder that men are continually stumbling against difficulties, who persist in walking in the darkness of their natural reason.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION.

—From March 1 to September 1 the missionaries of the American Sunday-school Union in the Northwestern District established 450 Sunday-schools, into which gathered 13,876 scholars and 1,630 teachers. They also aided old schools in 2,047 cases, where 10,104 teachers are giving Bible instruction to 104,037 scholars. They held 2,941 meetings, made 18,127 visits to families, distributed 3,094 Bibles and Testaments, put into circulation $3,296 worth of religious reading, and traveled 128,844 miles. F. G. Ensign, Chicago, Ill., superintends this work.

BAPTIST.

—Only one person in forty-seven in the State of New York is a member of the Baptist church, and eighty-seven large villages in that State have no Baptist church. The Christian Inquirer thinks there is room in the Empire State for some Baptist missionary work.

—Shurtleff College opened its fall term with 150 students. The college is greatly strengthened by the additions made to its faculty, which now includes eighteen professors and instructors.

—The Chicago Baptist Hospital scheme, under the patronage of the Chicago Baptist Social Union, is meeting with very satisfactory encouragement.

—Dr. Lorimer repeated in his Boston Tremont Temple pulpit the sermon on the Sabbath which he had preached the previous Sunday in Chicago, and which had been unfavorably commented upon as favoring Sabbath laxity. If there was any ground for the charge of laxity in the Chicago sermon, there certainly was none in the Boston sermon, says a correspondent.

—Professor W. L. Cansler, Nashville, has been appointed as missionary and Sunday-school agent by the American Baptist Publication Society for the State of Tennessee, to work jointly with the State.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The American Board receipts for the past year are $690,922, about $75,000 more than last year. Thirty thousand dollars of the gain comes from the Interior.

—Dr. Goodwin returns to the city, October 10.

—The American Missionary Association will hold its next annual meeting with the Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland, Ohio, in October. Arrangements will be made for reduced railroad fares from all parts of the country.

—The annual meeting of the American Board is to be held in Pittsfield, Mass., beginning October 13. The treasurer reports donations of $37,568.16 and legacies of $7,441.89 during July, or a total of $45,010.05. The record for the eleven months of last year was $547,801.44; that of this year gives the gratifying result of $630,590.42.

—At a special meeting of Chicago Association it was voted to postpone the October meeting of the Association until Nov. 10. This is to avoid conflicting with the meeting of the American Board at Pittsfield, Oct. 13. The Millard Avenue church entertains the Association at its coming meeting in November.

—Wheaton College has become one of the largest feeders of our Chicago Seminary, nine of its students having studied theology there last winter. The friends of Christian education cannot afford not to have it perfectly equipped for its all important work, and the needed funds for the finishing touches to its new building ought not to be delayed.—Chicago Cong. News.

LUTHERAN.

—Of the 1,100,000 Lutheran communicants in the United States, about three-fourths are Germans. The remainder are Scandinavians, English, etc. In no fewer than twelve languages do Lutheran pastors preach the Gospel in this country. The total number of ministers is 3,692; churches, 7,948.

—The Forty-first Convention of the synod will convene at Forreston, Ill., October 13, at 7:30 p. m. It is greatly desired that all the pastors, and one lay delegate from each charge, be present.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—A distinguished politician, who is not a Methodist, declares that the labors of Methodist preachers "have added five dollars per acre to every acre of land in the West."

—Mr. George W. Childs, of the Philadelphia Ledger, who one year ago gave the Methodist Episcopal church at Wayne, Pa., the corner lot on which the handsome edifice has since been erected, has just made the church a present of a lot 80 by 241 feet, adjoining the church property, as a site for a parsonage.

—Rev. B. C. Dennis, of Central Illinois, is still in the field as an evangelist, and will respond to invitations from pastors desiring such aid. During the past year he has conducted services in which over 300 were converted and many brought into the experience of full salvation. His address is Knoxville, Ill.

—Pastor N. H. Davis, of Dorchester, Neb., reports a wonderful work in progress, under the direction of Messrs. Hoopengartner and Underwood. In eight days upward of fifty were converted and reclaimed.

—Chicago Methodism is sorry to lose Robert McIntyre, who now goes from Grace church to Denver.

—The Rev. S. A. Kean, D.D., pastor of the Walnut Hills M. E. church, has received authority from the Cincinnati Conference to engage exclusively in evangelistic work.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The news of the bequest of $70,000 by the will of John Goldsmith Payntor for the erection of a memorial Presbyterian church in Newtown, L. I., has been confirmed. Mr. Payntor left plans for the kind of church he wished built.

—The annual statistics of the Presbyterian church, by Dr. William Henry Roberts, the stated clerk, show a growth in the number of churches and communicants and presbyteries, and a decrease in the amount of contributions. There are 7,070 churches, a growth of 176 in the year; the total number of communicants is 806,796, as against 775,903 for 1890; the number of presbyteries is 216, an advance of 3 on 1890; there are 6,223 ministers, as against 6,155 last year, an increase of only 65; the contributions show a falling off, being $14,062,356, instead of $14,368,131.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—The coffin of Rev. Demetrius Augustine Gallitzen, the famous Catholic missionary, who founded the church in Cambria county, Pennsylvania, in 1803, has been exhumed. Although he died in 1840, the remains are in excellent condition and are to be exposed to public view.

—The Brooklyn Standard-Union says "that the value of investments in church property in that city is estimated at nearly $20,000,000. Of this vast sum the Protestant churches represent about $13,000,000, and the Roman Catholic about $7,000,000. The former number 290, and the latter fifty-eight."

—Leo XIII. is said to be engaged in the preparation of another encyclical letter, in which he will treat of civil governments. Having given much time to the study of the constitution of this country, the Pope is believed to have a strong leaning to republican institutions.

—It is said that three priests in the Brompton (Eng.) oratory have recently returned to the English church. This event has created no little sensation among Roman Catholic ecclesiastics. The return of a 'vert to the English church has been rare.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The centennial anniversary of the Hebron United Presbyterian church, Hebron, Washington Co., N. Y., was held on Sept 1, 1891. Rev. T. B. Turnbull, of Argyle, preached an excellent sermon from Psalm 49:13, last clause, "That ye may tell it to the generation following." Elder Wm. Robinson read a history of the congregation, after which dinner was served in the lecture-room to all the visitors and the congregation, 1,000 or more.

—The Synod of Ohio will meet at the United Presbyterian church, Steubenville, Oct. 5th, at 7:30 p. m., to be opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. J. W. Long, or his alternate.

—The company of missionaries of the U. P. church to sail on the steamer British Princess, Oct. 7, will number more than twenty. It is understood that the ship will take no other first cabin passengers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

M. M. Towle has sold to the Stony City land syndicate, composed of Iowa capitalists, 140 acres at Hammond for $250,000, on which a cotton mill and electric motor factory will be erected.

Railway men say that the scheme of raising their tracks would ruin them.

About thirty-five members of the International Congress of Geologists, recently held in Washington, D. C., were shown the World's Fair Grounds by Major Butterworth.

W. W. Wheeler found his sister from whom he had been separated twenty years.

A large number of organizations have made application for positions in the line October 7 at the unveiling of the Grant statue in Lincoln Park.

The Boss Carpenters' Association was formed Friday evening with a membership of 150.

James J. Gore, of the firm of Chapin & Gore, died Friday afternoon.

A banquet was given to Mr. George Howland at the Sherman House Friday night by the principals of the schools of Chicago.

The explosion of 200 pounds of dynamite, about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, at Thirty-fifth street, where a tunnel is being made under the Chicago river, created considerable havoc and excitement in that vicinity, but no person was injured.

COUNTRY.

Fire Monday destroyed the fair-ground stables and two barns of H. B. Sanborn at Dallas, Texas, with nineteen horses. Mr. Sanborn's loss is $20,000.

Gold Brothers' brick factory at Chesterfield, Ind., was burned Sunday night. Loss, $10,000; insurance, $2,500.

Fire, Monday, destroyed a block at Utica, N. Y., owned by Fred Weiler, Mrs. Agnes Weiler, and Charles Cox. Loss, $55,000; insurance, $72,000.

Anton Sieboldt was taken from the custody of the Sheriff at Darlington, Wis., Monday, by a mob of 500 men and hanged to a tree. Thursday, Sieboldt murdered James Meigan in a quarrel.

Forest fires, Tuesday, destroyed the village of Comstock, Wis. Great damage has been done in the vicinity of Ashland.

W. H. Davis was hanged, Tuesday, at Pueblo, Col., for the murder of his mother and her alleged paramour, James Arnold.

Sapinsky & Steinberry's barrel stave and heading factory at Scottsburg, Ind., burned Tuesday. Loss, $10,000. It will be rebuilt.

In a fight between the families of Gottlieb Kellam and August Blunt, near Joliet, Ill., Tuesday, the latter's 10-year-old girl was killed by Kellam. He is in jail.

President Harrison appointed a committee, Tuesday, composed of Lieutenant Colonel John W. Barlow, Captain Thomas W. Seymour, and Professor A. T. Mosman to relocate the boundary line between Mexico and the United States.

A petition signed by Mrs. Harrison and the wives of all the Cabinet ministers for the pardon of Mrs. Maybrick, who is serving a life sentence in England for poisoning her husband, has been forwarded to Minister Lincoln to present to Queen Victoria.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 21 to Sept. 26:

O C Lindley, W Schmitt, L E Reynolds, M Plummer, Rev T H Hanna, G Hoskins, G Swanson Jr, J N Bedford, J G Fee, J H Canfield, Miss E J Hyson, B Tunnicliff, G S Robinson, C O Russell, Rev W Beers, Miss K R McCreary, Rev T C Moffatt, W Whittemore, J F Smith, A F Plummer, E Tederson, T Sussex

TO YOU

FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or

SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or

SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or

McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The

Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	94 1/4 @	95 1/2
Winter.....	90 @	95
Corn—No. 2.....	49 3/4 @	51
Oats—No. 2.....	26 @	26 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	82 1/2 @	83
Bran per ton.....	11 75	12 00
Hay—Timothy.....	9 50	@ 11 00
Butter, medium to best....	18 @	24 1/2
Cheese.....	06 1/2 @	09 1/2
Beans.....	1 75 @	1 85
Eggs.....	18 @	18 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	85 @	1 13
Flax.....	90 @	91
Broom corn.....	4 @	05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	26 @	35
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 1/4 @	5 1/4
Lumber—Common.....	10 00	@ 13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	2 75 @	5 25
Common to good....	1 40 @	2 75
Hogs.....	4 00 @	5 15
Sheep.....	3 30 @	4 90

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 02 1/4 @	1 06 1/4
Corn.....	61 @	62
Oats.....	32 3/4 @	33 3/4
Eggs.....	20 1/2 @	21
Butter.....	13 @	25
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY

Cattle.....	1 25 @	5 70
Hogs.....	3 25 @	4 85
Sheep.....	3 90 @	4 55

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers!

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the church. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 80 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

AN OPEN FIRE.

No person, who is a resident of the country during the warm weather, and notes the changes in our fickle climate in a single day, can fail to appreciate the value of the open wood fire. Dr. Anderson, in his admirable lectures to nurses, recently published, speaks of the open fire as a necessary part of the ventilation of the sick room. In this country, says the Tribune, we are only just awakening to the danger and unwholesomeness of the close stove, the cellar furnace, and all the various methods of heating a house, by which we have endeavored to save our domestic servants' labor at the expense of our own health. The manner in which plants and all living things thrive in a room heated by an open fireplace, and the manner in which they wilt and wither amid the noxious gases, and in the superheated dry air of a house warmed by a furnace, teaches a practical lesson. There are very few days throughout the entire year in the country when an open fire is not of use. A low wood fire kindled on the hearth in the damp mornings of August and September will do more to ward away miasmas and fevers than all the drugs in all the pharmacies. In most parts of the country there are damp days in the months of August and September, and it is well known that this is a fruitful time for fevers and other malarious diseases. This is due, no doubt, to the presence of the decaying matter of early summer, which reeks in the damp atmosphere, and for this reason an open wood fire, which is the best purifier of the atmosphere, is especially wholesome in the morning and evening. In the midday the sun itself purifies the atmosphere.

The fire is not only cheerful to the eye and to the heart and makes us feel its kindly glow in our spirits toward all around us, but it brings health and strength to us and to our children, as well as to the delicate flowers in our windows. The Penates, the gods who presided over the health and prosperity of the family, were the gods of the hearthstone, and when we have relegated them to our cellars, it is no wonder that they avenge themselves by sending miasma and disease.—Anonymous.

A SAVORY DISH.

Cheese omelette is a most delicious and savory dish, and, since it is so quickly and easily made, furnishes an excellent dish for luncheon or tea on Sunday evening. Break three eggs into a bowl, beat well with a patent egg-beater, add a tablespoonful of milk or cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Place a frying-pan over a brisk fire and melt a tablespoonful of butter in it. As soon as the butter is very hot pour the egg mixture into it, beating all the while. Shake the pan gently while the omelette is cooking. As soon as it begins to "set," loosen the edges with a knife, scatter a dessert-spoonful of grated cheese over the surface of the omelette, fold it over in two, slip it onto a hot dish, and serve immediately. If the fire is clear and brisk the omelette should not take more than two or three minutes to cook. A chafing dish will permit of preparing this, and many other relishes at the table; certainly a much more comfortable way than in a hot kitchen, and if prepared at the table it can be served at once.—Christian Union.

SALT WATER BATHS.

One may enjoy all the benefits of a salt water bath without going to the seashore. A simple and effective substitute is to dissolve a cup of rock salt in warm water, and add it to the ordinary bath. There is no better tonic for an exhausted body, especially if taken just before going to bed.

HOME HINTS.

The washable cretonnes make good bed draperies and spreads. Colored marisilles in lovely tints is comparatively inexpensive and furnishes very attractive bed spreads.—N. Y. World.

Oatmeal is particularly valuable as a food. It contains more nitrogen than any other cereal, with a very large percentage of starch and sugar. It contains more than 90 per cent of nutriment. The coarsely-ground meal is best.—Ex.

For cleansing silver and brass add to one quart of rain-water two ounces ammonia and three ounces of precipitated chalk. Bottle and keep corked; shake before using. Wash silver in hot soapy water and rinse in clean water.—N. Y. Tribune.

Egg Salad: Boil eight eggs fifteen minutes; chop, salt and pepper them; then take one teaspoonful of flour, one of sugar, one of butter, one of prepared mustard and a half cup of good vinegar; cook five minutes and pour over the eggs.—Ladies Home Journal.

Here is a recipe for delicious crullers: Take four eggs, beat very light, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, the same of lard, a teaspoonful of salt and half a nutmeg grated; work into these as much sifted flour as will make a nice dough. Roll about an eighth of an inch thick, and fry in hot lard. Drop a pared potato into your lard to keep it from burning.—N. Y. Voice.

The many remarkable cures of catarrh effected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is conclusive proof that this loathsome and dangerous disease is one of the blood, only needing such a searching and powerful alternative to thoroughly eradicate it.

DON'T KNIT but buy Home-Made Hosiery. It is close knit from all wool yarn, with double heels and toes. A pair of the BEST SOCKS, post-paid 42 cents; a good pair 28 cents. Discount to clubs. Samples and price list FREE. WM. C. COLEMAN, Sabetha, Kan.

HE MISSED HIS OPPORTUNITY! DON'T MISS YOURS, READER. The majority neglect their opportunities, and from that cause live in poverty and die in obscurity! Harrowing despair is the lot of many, as they look back on lost, forever lost, opportunity. LIFE IS PASSING! Reach out. Be up and doing. Improve your opportunity, and secure prosperity, prominence, peace. It was said by a philosopher, that "the Goddess of Fortune offers a golden opportunity to each person at some period of life; embrace the chance, and she pours out her riches; fall to do so and she departs, never to return." How shall you find the GOLDEN opportunity? Investigate every chance that appears worthy, and of fair promise; that is what all successful men do. Here is an opportunity, such as is not often within the reach of laboring people. Improved, it will give, at least, a grand start in life. The GOLDEN opportunity for many is here. MONEY to be made rapidly and honorably by any industrious person of either sex. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 per day. You can do as well if you will work, not too hard, but industriously; and you can increase your income as you go on. You can give spare time only, or all your time to the work. Easy to learn. Capital not required. We start you. All is comparatively new and really wonderful. We instruct and show you how, free. Failure unknown among our workers. No room to explain here. Write and learn all free, by return mail. Unwise to delay. Address at once, H. Hallett & Co., Box 1750, Portland, Maine.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

"Turned Upside Down"

Is your home in this sad plight—many are and house-cleaning does it. Cold meals and no comfort; sour tempers and aching backs, hard work and too much of it, tired women and "mad" men—all from house-cleaning. And it's all needless. Don't make such a fuss over it. Take a little Pearline, and have it done easily, quickly and quietly.

You'll have it done better, too—you won't have to rub the paint off to get the dirt off. You can save half your labor and half your time, if you'll clean house with Pearline—and everybody in the house will be thankful for it. Millions use nothing but Pearline for washing and cleaning

Turn the Key On the peddlers and grocers who tell you "this is as good as," or "the same as" Pearline. IT'S FALSE; besides Pearline is never peddled. 307 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscrip't'n price.	Our price for both.
The Voice (N. Y.)	$1.00	and Cynosure $2.50
Union Signal (new subscribers only)	.50	" 2.00
Cosmopolitan and premium (see premium offer)	3.50	" 4.80
North American Review	5.00	" 5.50
Popular Science Monthly	5.00	" 5.50
Century Magazine	4.00	" 5.00
Harper's Magazine	4.00	" 4.50
Harper's Weekly	4.00	" 4.75
Scribner's Magazine	3.00	" 4.00
Independent	3.00	" 4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes; "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price. FIVE CENTS. Sellin Price. $.15 "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. $.05

$.10 "WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. $.05

$.10 "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Olerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. $.06

$.15 "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. $.10

$.25 "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. $.10

$.30 "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. $.25

$.75 "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. $.50

$ 1.00 "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumrv. Cloth, 224 pp. $.50

$ 1.50 "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. $.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FARM NOTES.

BUTTER AND CHEESE AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

It is not likely that any feature of the Columbian Exposition will be of more interest to the farmers than the dairy school and the tests between the different herds and individuals of the various dairy breeds.

The manufacture of the product will take place in the dairy building, in an operating space twenty-five by one hundred feet, above which on either side will be a gallery which will accommodate fully five hundred spectators.

The school, in all probability, will continue through four months, and each participating herd will be represented by a given number of cows.

The results of these tests and the exhibition which will be made of the latest and most advanced scientific methods known in connection with the feeding and care of cattle, the treatment of milk and the production of butter and cheese, cannot fail to be of very great value to the dairy interests of the country.

FARM MACHINERY.

The farms of to-day carry more or less machinery. As a rule it is rather poorly cared for. A good farmer who has a good idea about machinery carries with him constantly a strong advantage over his more careless neighbor. One of the most frequent difficulties in the working of power machinery is the accumulation of dirt and gum in the bearings and journals, caused by the use of fat oils for lubrication and infrequent cleaning. The American Engineer gives the following directions for cleaning which are worth remembering:

"For each 1,000 parts by weight of water, take about 10 or 15 parts by weight of caustic soda or 100 parts ordinary soda. Let the solution boil and enter the parts to be cleaned; either boil them in this lye or let them steep in it for some time. All the dirt and resin is completely dissolved thereby, and it remains only to rinse and dry the parts. The action of the lye is such that it enters into combination with the oil and forms soap, which is readily soluble in water. In order to prevent the hardening of the lubricant on the machinery parts, it is only necessary to add about one-third kerosene. An occasional lubrication with kerosene alone is to be recommended."—Inter-Ocean.

REMEDY FOR CHICKEN LICE.

A reader asks for a remedy for lice on little chicks. Powder both hens and chicks thoroughly with either Persian insect powder (Bubach) or carbolic acid powder; use for the purpose one of the little bellows that is sold with the powder. Hot lime whitewashing three times a year of all poultry houses and appliances, while the dusting boxes, nesting-places, etc., are well sprinkled with hot lime water in which has been dissolved carbolic acid, a wine glassful to the gallon, will effectually destroy and keep the places free from these pests. A dust bath in which has been mixed some sulphur will also prove beneficial.—Er.

NUBBINS.

Professor Sanborn says he found over 13 per cent of hay was lost in the ordinary stack. House your hay.

If your customers ask for large, white eggs, try raising Black Minorcas or some cross of large general purpose fowls with Minorcas.

Don't be too anxious about getting new varieties of fruit trees. The standard brands are often better suited to our climate and therefore more satisfactory.

Watch your fowls carefully in moulting time. A little energetic treatment at this critical period may save you a good many hours of work over sick chickens.

Don't make the mistake of feeding chickens nothing but corn because it is cheap. It is ninety-six per cent fat, and furnishes no flesh or bone-forming foods.

The average crop of potatoes under the customary style of cultivation is not over fifty-eight bushels per acre in the United States; by intelligent progressive means in 1890, one man raised 1,071 bushels

THE BEST

protection against sudden changes in the weather is to purify the blood with

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It vitalizes and enriches the life-current, and makes the weak strong.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of

CONSUMPTION,

SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS and CHRONIC COUGH or SEVERE COLD. All Druggists sell it, but be sure you get the genuine, as there are poor imitations.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 339 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

per acre; twenty men raised over 900 bushels per acre; over 100 men raised 800 bushels per acre. A review of all the leading experiments show that the seed cut to two or three eyes rolled in plaster and set eighteen inches apart, and only covered two inches, produces the largest crops of salable potatoes. Not less than 500 pounds of phosphate per acre should be used.

"It is very strange," said the amateur gardener; "I planted radishes there, and nothing but a lot of green stalks have come up, with not a blamed radish or sign of blossom on 'em."

Our native nut bearing trees, like the butternut and black-walnut, are not only the hardest and best of shade trees but at ten to fifteen years they often bear from three to five bushels of nuts, worth $1 a bushel.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

Hold a steady hand and a level head. Husband your resources; make the best of the fair prices and good demand for farm produce. This may be the one year out of ten that it may pay to hold a crop. May be best to sell part and hold part.

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS. ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escape-ments, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgin movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00
With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50
" " " (11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00
With the Cynosuro one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer-head, horse-head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00
With the Cynosure one year, hunting case 23.00
With the Cynosure one year, open face 19.75

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Government Baking Powder Tests.

The latest investigations by the United States and Canadian Governments show the Royal Baking Powder a cream of tartar powder superior to all others in leavening strength.

Statements by other manufacturers to the contrary have been declared by the official authorities falsifications of the official reports.

George Barker, of Catlin, Ill., was arrested, Tuesday, for attempting to derail a train on the Wabash, near Danville, Saturday night. He said he simply wanted to see a wreck.

At noon, Tuesday, the Sac and Fox and Iowa Reservations were thrown open to settlement. There were three home seekers to every quarter section of land, but so far as heard from the land was settled peaceably.

Fire, Wednesday, destroyed the business portion of Bradley, S. D., causing a loss of $40,000. The chemical works of Goldsmith & Parsons, at Brooklyn, N. Y., burned. The total loss is $25,000.

While in a nightmare, Wednesday, S. D. Pierson, of Indianapolis, Ind., jumped from a window and was fatally injured.

Wednesday, the Dugdale Tin Can Factory at Indianapolis, Ind., burned. The loss is $40,000 and the insurance $46,000.

Two lots in the town of Chandler, just platted in the land opened in Oklahoma Territory, were offered for sale Thursday for a ham sandwich, but no buyers were found.

A lump of coal twenty-five inches square by nine feet in length was taken from a mine near Cartersville, Ill., Thursday. It will be exhibited at the World's Fair.

England is likely to have to pay Canadian sealers $500,000 or more as an indemnity for being driven out of Behring Sea.

By a vote of 86 to 28 the Southern Illinois M. E. Conference, in session at Mount Vernon, voted, Thursday, to admit women as delegates.

The charter of the National Women's Alliance was filed with the Secretary of State of Kansas, Thursday.

D. Cool, a Saunders county (Nebraska) farmer, Wednesday, received at the Omaha postoffice a letter written by a former sweetheart May 8, 1875. The letter was sixteen years, four months and thirteen days in reaching its destination.

Dr. Richard J. Gatling, the inventor of the Gatling gun, has patented a process for the manufacture of heavy ordnance, which, it is believed, will be cheaper, quicker, and better than existing methods.

The State Convention of the Nebraska Women's Christian Temperance Union met at Omaha, Wednesday.

Indications of silver in paying quantities have been discovered at Croix Falls, Wis.

Farm hands can find employment in the Red River Valley in North Dakota at from $2 to $3 per day.

Wisconsin Methodists, in conference at Oshkosh, Friday, voted to admit women as lay delegates to the General Conference.

A further increase in business activity throughout the country is noted in the weekly review of R. G. Dun & Co.

Snow, the first of the season, fell at Leadville, Colorado, Thursday night.

Jacob Brown, a tramp, confessed to the Minneapolis (Minnesota) Chief of Police, Friday, that he murdered a man in a box car at Centralia, Ill., eight years ago. Another man was convicted of the crime and sent to the penitentiary at Chester for life.

At Cincinnati, Friday, a fly-wheel twenty feet in diameter, weighing twenty tons, burst in an electric power-house. Two men were slightly injured and the building damaged to the extent of $30,000.

The Ramsey building at Springfield, Mo., was damaged $15,000 by fire Thursday. Insurance, $4,000.

Ephraim B. Ewing, Jr., formerly editor of the Jefferson City (Missouri) Tribune, is believed to have been murdered in Alaska, together with another white man and five Indians.

Washouts in Central New Mexico have made it impossible for trains to move for several days.

Four men were taken from a resort near English, Ind., by a gang of White Caps and whipped.

George B. Howard, a pension agent, was arrested at Adrian, Michigan, Thursday, charged with embezzlement.

Thirteen houses in Oakcliffe, Texas, a suburb of Dallas, were burned Friday. Loss, $30,000; insurance, $16,000.

Fire, Friday, destroyed S. Guckenheimer & Son's wholesale grocery and liquor building at Savannah, Ga., causing an estimated loss of $450,000, on which there is an insurance of $140,000.

Prairie and timber fires have been severely ravaging several districts in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakota, and other points during the past week. Large quantities of timber and other property have been destroyed, creating heavy losses. Several lives have been sacrificed to the flames.

The Plant flour mills, at St. Louis, Mo., were burned Sunday afternoon, together with an adjacent warehouse filled with farm machinery. The loss on the mills is estimated at $250,000; on the warehouse, at $375,000, nearly all covered by insurance.

A cyclone in Beltrami and Itasca counties, Minn., on Sunday, blew down nearly 200 millions feet of timber.

Illinois, Northern Indiana, and Southern Michigan experienced a decided shock of earthquake on Saturday evening. It was but slightly felt in Chicago. No serious damage is reported, but houses were shaken, and their inmates badly frightened.

Reports of drouth are continued in numerous localities. Rain is badly needed throughout the Northwest.

Several members of the Burlington and Missouri River Surveying party, who undertook to run a line through the Big Horn Canon, are supposed to have been drowned.

FOREIGN.

Considerable damage was done to shipping and crops in England and Wales Monday by a hurricane.

One London correspondent in Paris declares that the feeling is growing hourly in France that war with Germany is imminent.

It is reported that the Chinese authorities expect the European governments to unite in a demand for redress for recent outrages upon foreigners in China, and that they are therefore preparing for war.

Fire Friday destroyed the Gaiety Theater at London.

Some considerable excitement exists in parts of India over Russia's warlike movements. French authorities will consent to the importation of American pork.

Workmen on the Siberian Railway have revolted on account of poor and insufficient food.

The International Congress, called to discuss the cause of accidents to workmen and the best means to prevent such accidents, opened at Berne, Monday.

The Australian Mercantile Loan Company at Melbourne is insolvent. The assets are $200,000 and the liabilities $690,000.

Influenza is epidemic at Badajos, Spain. There are over 2,000 severe cases reported already.

The Pope has sent a letter to the German and Austrian clergy urging them to endeavor to eradicate the custom of dueling.

Russia has encroached, it is reported, upon territory 230 miles beyond the frontier defined in the Russo-Afghan treaty.

It is estimated that the total number of pilgrims to view the holy coat at Treves will reach 2,000,000.

A hurricane Sunday night demolished many houses in the city of Cansuegra, Spain, recently devastated by a flood.

PLAYS

Dialogues, Speakers, for School, Club and Parlor. Catalogue free. T. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago.

"THE NEW METHOD" for good health cures all chronic diseases. Rev. A. Albro, D. D., Utica, N. Y., writes, "One of the greatest boons to mankind in modern days." Infinitely better than the Hall System. Half the price. Send for testimonials. HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 BROADWAY, N. Y.

ASTHMA POSITIVELY CURED By the Swedish Asthma Cure. Sample mailed free. Address COLLINS BROS. DRUG CO., St. Louis, Mo.

DROPSY Treated free. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases pronounced hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. TEN DAYS TREATMENT FURNISHED FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, Atlanta, Ga.

HARVEY.

NO SALOONS.

AS AN INVESTMENT

THE KEY TO THE WHOLE SITUATION IS

ACADEMY ADDITION

On which the HARVEY INDUSTRIAL ACADEMY is being built, is located between 147th street and the Calumet River. WITHIN 4 BLOCKS OF THE GEOGRAPHICAL CENTER OF HARVEY. The completion of this building and the opening of the fall term will largely increase the value of all property in Harvey. Those who purchase now in ACADEMY ADDITION buy at first prices. It is in this addition that the manager of the Pullman Palace Car Company of New Orleans has purchased 48 lots. Houses being erected in this Addition rent for 30 per cent of cost of house and lot. These are opportunities for investments seldom offered. It is crossed by the proposed Elevated Road to the city. It is the nearest to the World's Fair Site; over a half mile of river frontage. Lots from $200 upward. Payments to suit. We will send FREE to the CYNOSURE readers the ONLY PLAT which shows the WHOLE OF HARVEY as originally proposed. Owing to the superior advantages, beautiful location, educational center, natural drainage, etc., it is not surprising that those who come to Harvey to purchase locate in Academy Addition. We are exclusive agents for ACADEMY ADDITION.

THE FOLLOWING PROHIBITORY CLAUSE IS IN EVERY DEED:

The party of the second part "shall not erect or permit to be erected upon the premises hereby conveyed, any building to be used or occupied, or any part thereof, at any time hereafter, as a slaughter house, glue or bone factory, or manufactory of gunpowder, or any bone-boiling establishment or factory, or liquor saloon of any kind, or for any other dangerous, vexatious or offensive purpose or establishment whatsoever; or allow, suffer or permit any intoxicating drink or drinks to be manufactured or sold, or given away upon said premises, or any gambling to be carried on thereon, or any house or other place of lewd or immoral practice thereupon; and any violation of the above conditions, or either or any of them, shall absolutely divest the said party of the second part, . . . heirs, executors, administrators and assigns of the entire estate hereby conveyed, and of the appurtenances thereto belonging, and the same shall, ipso facto, revert to and belong to the said party of the first part, his successor or successors and assigns as fully and completely as if the aforesaid grant and conveyance had never been made, and all the covenants and agreements of the said party of the first part shall thereupon cease and determine, and the consideration paid thereon shall be absolutely forfeited to the said party of the first part, his successor or successors and assigns; it being expressly understood and agreed that the foregoing covenants, agreements and conditions, and each of them, so as to be kept and performed by the grantee herein . . . heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, are part of the consideration for this conveyance."

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., - - - 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
P. S.—Our largest sales in Academy Addition are made to customers who visit Harvey and look over the whole situation.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle malaries are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London, England.

FREE TO BOYS & GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE.

Worth $45. If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle, [26 inch wheels], worth $45.00 they can obtain it free, without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1000 or more. We deliver Bicycle free anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO. 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

FALL TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

JOHN G. FEE.

An Autobiography.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, postpaid, $1.00.

President J. Blanchard says: "Of all the books which the fall of slavery has produced, none surpasses this little biography of Mr. Fee, the instruction it affords as to the nature of slavery and its workings in families and churches, and, finally, in the war of States."

Until the first of November next, old or new subscribers to the Cynosure can secure this remarkable autobiography and the Cynosure one year for only $2.00.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N

221 W. Madison St., Chicago

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

Vol. XXIV., No. 4.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,119.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:		SELECTED:
Notes and Comments.....	1	A Chinese Secrecy Society.....	3
The Fellowship of Christ and Baal.....	8	NEW ENGLAND LETTER.....	4
The Lodge vs. the Churches.....	8	WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4
Odd-fellowship and Salvation.....	8	Reform Work in the South 4
Church Investigation of the Lodge.....	8	REFORM NEWS:
Miss Willard and the Keeley Cure.....	8	Bro. I. R. Arnold at Colchester, Ill.; Bro. Hinman in Wisconsin; Bro. Fenton in Illinois; From the Western Agent.....	5
Secret Societies are Enemies of Ireland.....	8	CORRESPONDENCE:
"The Bible Mode of Baptism".....	9	No Excuse for Secret Societies; An Open Letter; Pith and Point.....	5,6
Anti-secrecy in the Sunday-school.....	9	LITERATURE.....	6
Personal Mention.....	9	LODGE NOTES.....	7
CONTRIBUTIONS:		AGENTS AND LECTURERS.....	7
The Warrior's Last Rest (Poetry).....	1	THE N. C. A.....	7
Satan Worship.....	1	THE HOME.....	10
The Foe we Fight—II.....	2	TEMPERANCE.....	11
What Russian Persecution of the Jews Means.....	2	BIBLE LESSON.....	12
Immortality.....	2	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
Minor of Prophetic Mysteries.....	2	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
		DONATIONS.....	13
		HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
		FARM NOTES.....	15

The unfamiliar appearance of this page is due to our vast desire to impress upon every reader the great importance of the work that ought to be done, and that, with the Divine permission, will be done this fall for the advancement of the reforms which we advocate.

The National Christian Association is still pressing forward in its Anti-secrecy Reform work, and at no time has it had more and better agents in its various lecture-fields, or a better demand for its expositions of lodge iniquity. The fall and winter campaign is opening well in these respects, so far as its operations have been outlined. Below we print notices of the approaching State and District conventions to aid in more firmly establishing our work throughout the country. In the South, among the colored ministers, the work is being carried on with considerable zeal, but the results are, as might be expected in that lodge-ridden region, extremely limited. With a stronger effort on the part of the friends of this mission enterprise in the North, and more liberal donations of money to increase its efficiency, great good might be accomplished in that fruitful field, where so much ought to be done. The agents in the various districts are faithful and earnest, and deserve to be fairly compensated for their persistent labor. Their task is at best a thankless one, so great is the influence of the lodge iniquity, both in and out of the churches. Books and tracts, those important factors in the Anti-secrecy Reform work, are also in good demand for distribution among the unenlightened citizens of lodge-cursed districts, where they serve to promote a healthy sentiment. All these items of missionary enterprise, however, are a great expense, and it is on this account that we appeal to every friend of the cause in which we are engaged to be as prompt and liberal in their donations for the work as circumstances will permit. Our opponents spend money freely to gain their ungodly ends, and in this freedom, with a better purpose, our friends may safely follow their example.

THE WARRIOR'S LAST REST.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Long ago the field of battle
With triumphant thunders rang,
And the victors waved their banners,
And their songs of victory sang.
One among them, brave and noble,
Was among the first who died;
And they buried him at sunset
With his good sword by his side.

There are others, brave and tender,
On the battle-field who fall,
And the grave-sod presses closely
Over banner, shield, and pall.
Well they met the foe and conquered,
Well they fought and bravely died;
In their nameless graves they're sleeping,
With their good swords by their side.

Not amid the cannon's thunder
Did those noble heroes fall;
Not where battle-flags are waving,
And the bugle's clarion call.
Bright the swords their strong hands wielded
And their battle-field was wide;
And they sleep, no more to waken,
With their good swords by their side.

Far away, among the mountains,
Where the winds are blowing free,
O'er the hot and sandy desert
'Mid the islands of the sea;
Where the glaciers gleam at midnight,
And the winds the tempests ride,
Are those warriors sweetly resting
With their good swords by their side!

Father, God! oh, thou Redeemer!
In the splendors of that day,
When the grave's cold walls shall tremble,
And their stones be rolled away:—
Grant that in the Rock of Ages
We may evermore abide,
Till we stand on God's bright mountains
With our good swords by our side!

Steamburg, N. Y.

SATAN WORSHIP.

BY RAY RAND.

There are two contending forces in the spirit world. Both are real, active and aggressive, always at variance, and ever contending for the ascendancy over the souls of men. They come as truth and error, good and evil, light and darkness. If the Bible teaches anything, it is that there is a personal God and a personal devil. Satan is no myth. He is the god of this world and "the prince of the power of the air." He has a retinue of fallen angels. These dark spirits influence people and lead them into all evil. The old serpent comes as an angel of light, and when the children of God present themselves before the Lord the arch-deceiver will be there also. He goes to and fro in the earth, seeking whom he may devour. His ancient agents were wizards, witches, sorcerers, necromancers, diviners, exorcists, magicians, astrologers and soothsayers. Moses met them down in Egypt. "Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments." But it was only an imitation—a false miracle. "And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians." God is very plain and emphatic on this business. "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards to be defiled of them: I am the Lord

ANTI-SECRET STATE CONVENTIONS.

Members of the National Christian Association and all friends of Anti-Secrecy Reform are hereby invited to attend and participate in the approaching State Conventions in behalf of the cause:

KANSAS

The Kansas State Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will meet in Annual Convention on the 14TH OF OCTOBER, 1891, at DENISON, JACKSON COUNTY, KAN., beginning on Wednesday evening and continuing through Thursday, including the evening of that day. Delegates from other States will be cordially welcomed, and free entertainment will be provided. Rev. C. F. Hawley, the Western Agent, is engaged in furthering the interests of this Convention. Let there be a large attendance.

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin State Anti-Secrecy Convention is to be held at VERNON, WAUKESHA COUNTY, in the Reformed Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Isaiah Faris is pastor, beginning on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29TH, and continuing through the following day. Rev. H. H. Hinman is now in Wisconsin, endeavoring to create a general interest in this Convention among the friends of anti-secrecy reform, to whom a cordial invitation to attend is extended.

IOWA

The Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will hold its Annual State Convention on TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, THE 10TH AND 11TH OF NOVEMBER, at CRAWFORDSVILLE, WASHINGTON COUNTY. Rev. John V. Potts, the new Agent in Iowa, is laboring faithfully in behalf of this Convention in that State. A large attendance is desired.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND

The New England Annual Convention will be held at Boston on WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention is Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stalwart Reform preacher. Rev. J. P. Stoddard is exerting his influence to make it a notable gathering of the friends of reform throughout the Eastern States.

ILLINOIS

At present nothing seems to be definitely settled as to the location and date of the Annual State Anti-Secrecy Convention, but it will be held AT AN EARLY DAY. Due announcement of all necessary details will be made soon. Rev. William Fenton, of Minnesota, is now engaged in creating an interest in its behalf.

your God." The command is, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." And the Lord makes it a personal matter: "And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people. A man also, or woman, that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone them with stones: their blood shall be upon them." Again, we read: "There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all these things are an abomination unto the Lord." King Saul, at the command of the Almighty, cut off the witches and wizards, and then made a fatal error by calling on the witch of Endor and invoking the spirit of the prophet Samuel. "So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the Word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to inquire of it." The Israelites often had to deal with this evil. "Moreover, the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images, and the idols and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem did Josiah put away." Jehu slew all the Baal-worshippers, destroyed their groves, altars and images. So also of Hezekiah: "He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made." Elijah slew the false prophets that none escaped. But Jezebel still survived, and another crop of false prophets led Ahab to his death.

No Bible student, or real Christian, need be deceived. Satan is a lying spirit, a liar from the beginning, and always ready to tell a lie. See 1 Kings 22: 22. No follower of the true God will for a moment commune with an evil spirit or with idols. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God?"

By nature the children of darkness turn to mystery and incantation. "And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof; and I will destroy the counsel thereof; and they shall seek to the idols and to the charmers and to them that have familiar spirits and to the wizards." It is always a delusion and a snare. God is always stronger than Satan in the final struggle. He frustrates these liars and base deceivers. See Isa. 44: 24; also 47: 12, 13. Daniel and his companions knew ten times more than all the magicians and astrologers in the realm, Dan. 1: 20; 2: 2; 4: 7, 9; 5: 7. Such is Satan worship. Let us follow the subject into the New Testament.

Avalon, Mo.

THE FOE WE FIGHT—II.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

Another reason why Freemasonry and other like societies will die hard (or rather not die a natural death at all, but be destroyed by divine judgments), is that they are oath-bound. The oath is the cement of their walls; and the walls will stand as long as the cement holds, and the cement will hold until it is disintegrated by the water of truth. But what is to be done when men will not hear the truth? These societies do not allow their members to discuss the subject.

We, and all who honestly study the subject, know that these oaths are illegal, extra-judicial, and sacrilegious, and that a common cannibal might well be ashamed of them. But what of that, as long as those who take them believe them to be sacred and binding? We may call it a delusion; but are not men bound the world over by delusions?

Again, the secret empire is a mighty and lasting power because it is a religion. Mackey tells us that "The religion of Masonry is pure theism." And the history of the race shows us that if there is one thing more than another to which men cling with a death-like tenacity, it is religion.

But you say it is a false religion. True. But that makes no difference. As a matter of fact, fanaticism is generally the legitimate outgrowth of false religion.

All false religions are a power, because the devil is in them. They begin and end with him; for all false worship has Satan for its object. Therefore, false religions are not lifeless, as some may think. "The whole world lieth in the wicked one." Moreover, many are under judicial sentence, under which God sends them "strong delusion, that they should believe a lie." Strange as it may seem, multitudes believe lies, especially with regard to religion; no doubt, therefore, that thousands of Masons expect salvation through the rites and ceremonies of Masonry.

We see, then, as reformers, how great the task is that lies before us. Here is a large and influential class of men in every county of the land, and of the world, calling themselves brothers of "the mystic tie" of secrecy, and worshipping together in these modern high-places called lodges; and bound together by an everlasting covenant. Masons are among the staunchest sects of false religionists. They are the Covenanters of the whole system. But their covenant, we may say, is just the opposite of the old true-blue Scotch covenant, which crowned Christ Lord of all.

Take in connection with these things, the love of money, and the love of power, which is so common to human nature, and we have the strongest possible motives that can be brought to bear on fallen man.

In the wild rush for wealth, men will lay hold on anything and everything which they suppose will help them seize the prize. The same is true in the struggle for political power.

The fact that the hidden hand, by sign and grip, can be used at the opportune moment, and with such magic power as to astonish all "cowards"—the fact that they are bound to prefer one another when anything is to be gained—acts like the lodestone in attracting men to, and in holding them in, the lodges.

Vernon, Wis.

WHAT RUSSIAN PERSECUTION OF THE JEWS MEANS.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

When De Toqueville wrote, in 1848, not more than one in twenty of our population lived in cities. To-day, one in four are in cities of the first and second class. As goes the city, so goes the nation. The contribution of Hon. Seth Low to the current number of the Century, on "The Government of Cities in the United States," is of living interest to all American citizens.

George Kennan contributes another article on the horrors of Siberian exile. He has so effectually turned on the lights that the accursed system cannot long endure the gaze of righteously indignant humanity. There are two foul blots on Russia—the exile system and the expulsion of the Jews. In the latter, that empire is unconsciously fulfilling the prophecies. When Frederick the Great asked his court preacher to give, in the fewest words, the best argument for Christianity, he replied, "The Jews, your majesty." God has miraculously preserved the Jews a separate people through the ages. They are now returning to their own land in greater numbers than after the decree of Darius to lift the captivity of Babylon. This is a most suggestive sign of our times. The Russian persecution is hastening it on apace. This return means that God's set time to favor his ancient people is at hand. It does not mean that Christ is to come bodily and dwell in Jerusalem a thousand years. That would involve the withdrawal of the Holy Spirit and cut off all hope of converting the wicked, either Jews or Gentiles. It means that God will soon pour out his Spirit upon that people, removing the veil from their hearts and opening their eyes, so that they can recognize Christ as their Saviour. "They shall look upon him whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him as one mourns for an only son, and be in bitterness for him as one that is in bitterness for his first born." Their conversion will be an object-lesson for all nations. "The fullness of the Gentiles shall be brought in." All nations shall serve him.

As the Jews will be the model for all nations in repentance and conversion to Christ, so the United States is to be the pattern for all in a free government. When our government was established, in 1787, there were only three republics. Now, out of forty-four governments in the world, twenty-three are republics, and of the remaining twenty-one only seven are absolute monarchies; while the remaining fourteen are limited. This change has come largely through the influence of our republic. The nations are looking to us for a model. This is a providential indication. God will have a perfect model. Slavery was banished in 1863. Not later than 1893 will secularism be put away. In 1866 reconstruction took place. In 1896 we may expect national reform to be an accomplished fact, by the incorporation in our national Constitution of a recognition of the Lord Jesus Christ as the King of kings.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

IMMORTALITY.

BY R. CANNING.

The term immortal, with its derivative immortality, occurs six times in the common version, and three times in the new revision; and probably in neither instance is it used to mean simply "eternal, conscious existence," but "eternal happiness," being synonymous with eternal life; and having reference alone to the unending happiness of the righteous. By a careful comparison of these passages with each other, their contexts, and other Scriptures, we find that immortality is affirmed only of the righteous. They only will have immortality or eternal life. But it does not, therefore, follow that the wicked will be blotted out of existence. The great difficulty lies in the wrong definition given to the terms immortal and immortality; and through this wrong definition one class of people believe and teach the "immortal soul" doctrine, or that all have immortality irrespective of moral character; while another class teach that no man has immortality only as it is imparted by Him "who only hath immortality;" and that those unworthy of it are destroyed and cease to exist. These are the two extremes of the divergence resulting from a wrong starting point: a wrong definition of the Scripture terms. But if we understand these terms to mean, not simply eternal, conscious existence, but eternal, conscious, blissful existence, eternal blessedness—as the reward of moral purity, the matter is made plain.

While eternal, conscious existence is set forth in the Scriptures as the sure portion of all, immortality, or eternal blissful existence, is promised only to the righteous. It is worthy of note that in Romans 2: 7, and 2 Timothy 1: 10, the word immortality is changed to incorruption; and in 1 Timothy 1: 17, immortal is rendered incorruptible, by the late revision. This removes the tautology so apparent in the old version and sets the matter in clearer light. In 1 Corinthians 15: 53, 54, immortality is used twice in contrast with mortal, and evidently refers only to the righteous. The remaining passage (1 Timothy 6: 16,) declares that Jesus Christ "only hath immortality;" i. e., eternal blessedness in and of himself: and he alone dispenses this "unspeakable gift" to all those who are found worthy to receive it. We find in these Scriptures no grounds to conclude that because the wicked have no promise of immortality, they will be blotted out and cease to have an existence.

Jesus says, speaking of the wicked and the righteous, "And these shall go away into eternal punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." (New Revision.)

If we receive what is here predicated of the righteous, why not, with equal fairness, what is predicated of the wicked? If we believe Christ, who is the truth, he will make us free.

Galva, Ill.

MINOR OF PROPHETIC MYSTERIES.

BY REV. B. EISENTRAUT.

In comparing the prophetic utterances of the prophets Isaiah and Ezekiel in regard to the king of Tyrus with the history of the Jewish and Christian dispensations, the scale of reason and proper application would fall in favor of the latter in all of the prophetic details. The commercial activity of Tyrus, from a temporal sense, in the days of these prophets, appears to portray another city in the Christian era from a spiritual standpoint. Neither profane nor sacred history gives us any clue whatever against the king of Tyrus ever practicing such a gross idolatry against the kingdom of heaven as is spoken of in Isaiah 23:18, saying: "And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord." The prophet saw that God would hold no communion with its pretensions, but says that the benefit shall be for those that desire to live in ease and comfort, or, as he said, it shall be for them that dwell before the Lord, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing. The first three verses of this chapter point with the finger of prophecy towards the West, from Palestine to the land of Shittim, where such a city would arise and she would become the mart of nations.

The city of Rome was to be the mart of nations. The removal from temporal prosperities from Tyrus of old was to transplant them into another power, as Isaiah said, 23: 8, 9: "Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honorable of the earth? The Lord of hosts hath purposed it to stain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honorable of the earth." Isaiah combined the question and answer together.

Near eight hundred years after the papacy had gained a firm foothold in Rome, the city lost its king, from about A. D. 1309 until 1379. The popes had taken their abode in Avignon, France, before they could be persuaded to return to Rome again. Isaiah looked forward to such a time, giving the exact period of their loss and power, saying, Isa. 23:15-17: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the years of one king: after the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as a harlot. Take a harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten; make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered. And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the Lord will visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth."

The temporal affairs of Tyre never reached such a pinnacle of fame upon the face of the earth; but Rome has fulfilled these prophecies.

According to Biblical chronologists, the prophet Ezekiel spoke his words against the king of Tyrus near 124 years later, in the 28th chapter, saying from the first to the seventh verses: "The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying: Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God; because thy heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am God, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thy heart as the heart of God: Behold thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee: With thy great wisdom, and with thine understanding, thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures: By thy great wisdom, and by the traffic, hast thou increased thy riches, and thy heart is lifted up because of thy riches: Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: Behold, therefore, I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations; and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness."

I think we are nearing the days when "the terrible of the nations" shall visit the city of Rome and cause its destruction, which was to follow after the declarations reached the climax of the papal infallibility of 1870.

The Vatican Council, in 1870, made the following a duty of faith for every Roman Catholic, to-wit: "We teach and define that it is a dogma divinely revealed, that the Roman pontiff, when he speaks ex cathedra (that is, when in discharge of the office of pastor and doctor of all Christians by virtue of his supreme apostolic authority, he defines a doctrine regarding faith and morals to be held by the universal church by the definite assistance promised to him in blessed Peter), is possessed of that infallibility with which the Divine Redeemer willed that his church should be endowed, for defining doctrine regarding faith and morals; and therefore such definitions of the Roman pontiff are irreformable of themselves, and not from the consent of the church. But, if any one, which may God avert, presume to contradict this our definition, let him be anathema."

Daniel the prophet said to Belshazzar, the king of Babylon, when he interpreted the handwriting upon the wall: "Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another." The popes of Rome have been acting wiser in temporal matters than the prophet; they have been gathering gold and silver into their coffers. They look upon their high sect of wisdom and elevation before the Christian world as being justly entitled to great remunerations.

The signs of the times give us no assurance for a prolongation of peace. The tendencies are drifting in another direction. All prophecies in the Old or New Testament, in comparing them side by side with history, bring us down to the end of the dial-plate of time and the end of the Christian era. The duty falls upon Protestant editors to give timely warning, for Roman Catholics never will.

Iron Hills, Iowa.

A CHINESE SECRET SOCIETY.

BY FREDERICK BOYLE.

[From Harper's Magazine for September, by permission. Copyright, 1891, by Harper & Brothers, New York.]

The secret societies of China are innumerable; and although the very great majority have no concern with public affairs, since most of them are persecuted, not one, perhaps, is friendly to the government. But the great leagues are furiously hostile. Expulsion of the Tartar, and, as we should say, China for the Chinese, are their passwords and mottoes. They work without ceasing to overthrow the dynasty; every year they raise revolts, and at intervals they break out in a grand rebellion. Schlegel satisfied himself that the Taiping movement was the work of the T'ien-Ti-Hwey, and no man has such authority to pronounce. It is certain, at least, that the troubles which began that tremendous outbreak in 1849 were directed by Hung-siu-Tsuien, a Grand Master of the T'ien-Ti. Wherever Chinamen dwell they have their secret societies, affiliated to the parent Hwey, and the professed object always is to overthrow the imperial line. . . .

First of these societies in every point of view is the T'ien-Ti-Hwey—I adopt the spelling now approved by Chinese scholars. . . . I shall have no room to dwell upon the striking resemblance of the usages and ritual of the T'ien-Ti to those of Freemasonry, and I cite Dr. Schauburg's name only to put inquirers on the track. Schlegel's personal investigations were started by a lucky chance. . . . But he obtained no assistance whatever from Chinamen. "I could not find one among them," he says, "to confirm or deny any single article of my discoveries." . . .

The T'ien-Ti, or Hung League, claims an immemorial antiquity. "Since the foundations of the earth were laid," says its catechism, "we bear the name of Hung." . . . The fact is that we should not expect to hear of the T'ien-Ti before the Manchu conquest. In those early days its motto was, "Obey Heaven and do Righteousness." That motto still heads every page of its hand-books, but in practice it is overruled by the eternal "Hoan Cheng, Hok Beng"—Drive out the Tartar, restore the native line. The league in its present form dates from 1664 A. D. . . .

T'ien-Ti-Hwey means association of Heaven and Earth. Its symbol is the triangle, "Man" forming the base. The unity of God and his intimate relations with mankind are tenets so much insisted on that Schlegel almost believes it a survival of the monotheistic creed displaced by Buddhism. Its moral code is not less pure. The equality of all men, the duty of benevolence, the forgiveness of injuries, are inculcated again and again. What is the practice we shall see?

The society recognizes another name, Sam-hap, translated "Triad," by which it is better known among foreigners generally; but the meaning is the same—Heaven, Earth, Man. . . . It holds itself justified in taking any means to secure a convert to further its ends, to punish those who reject it. The "rights" of the Catholic church in the Middle Ages are an exact parallel. Thus initiation generally is enforced, not willing. Each lodge has a varying number of Tai-ma, whose duty it is to hunt up recruits. Marking down a person who seems desirable, for one reason or another, they order him, by a written notice, to repair to such or such a spot. He who neglects to do so had best quit the neighborhood, concealing his new address. A savage beating or a false accusation will assuredly follow, and he may congratulate himself if no worse happen. But a man never refuses, unless he prefer exile. . . .

Its lodges are held in a secret place, the most difficult of access that can be found. Every approach is defended by traps and pitfalls under charge of armed men, posted in the trees or hidden in the brushwood—that is, of course, when the brethren are assembled. The first gate of the lodge is called "Ang," where the Executioner abides. It is his duty to behead any stranger who cannot recite the distich which gives admittance. . . .

To detail the ceremonies of initiation, most striking in themselves, and, above all, interesting from their resemblance to Freemasonry, would demand all my space. . . .

Pickering says the T'ien-Ti is a "combination to carry out private quarrels, and to uphold the interests of the members in spite of law; and lastly, to raise money by subscription, or by levying fees on brothels or gaming-houses." The Inspector-General of Police for Singapore says, "They are a standing danger to the peace of the settlement." And so on. Their government is a Reign of Terror, which the law itself maintains in its own despite; for if it be not thought advisable to take active steps against one who has incurred the ill will of the society, such as murder, torture, a pitiless beating, a false charge is brought, and supported, if needful, by a thousand witnesses.

CHINESE FRATERNAL RITES.

The Chinese Freemasons had a memorial celebration last night. The ceremony consisted of the usual Chinese form of worship, the burning of sticks and candles and the incineration of pieces of paper supposed to represent vast monetary values. Quong Chong, who keeps a general merchandise store on Washington street, just above fourth, is the great chief Mason of the Seattle lodge of Chinamen. The preliminary services were held at his place of business. After that the crowd, which numbered about fifty men, adjourned to the vacant lot and went through the forms that have been in vogue for the past 400 years.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the death of Lee Hae, the founder of the Chinese secret society. The worship that is held is supposed to be directed to him, to insure a continuation of favors shown by him in the past in admitting fellow followers of the faith to the pearly gate upon receiving an answering sign to the challenge, and always recognizing them when, in dire extremity, they call to him with the grand hailing sign of distress, and are transported by his efforts from the brink of the bottomless pit to the edge of the carpet that is around the throne of grace. This Lee Hae is a great man in Chinese estimation. Quong Chong told a reporter that he was the greatest man that ever lived, and above all, the founder of the order to which about fifty of Seattle's Chinese population belong.

The open-air ceremony began at 10:30 last evening and lasted half an hour. Candles were lighted and charm sticks burned. In the midst of a dense smoke the master of ceremonies stood, repeating the words of a Chinese chart, and bowing profusely at the end of every verse. Then he knelt down, still continuing his salaaming and sing-song repetition. His voice grew louder as he went on, and he finally wound up by falling prostrate before the layout, and while his fellow-worshippers filled a dozen cups with tea, a dozen dishes with fishballs and Chinese sweetmeats, he writhed in an agony of ecstatic devotion to the great Lee Hae, who was of earth, but is now in heaven, according to popular report. Then there was a bonfire, in which a million dollars' worth of obligations on paper went up in smoke. These were directed to members of the order who have gone to join Lee Hae. The bond was a propitiatory offering to the dead mogul of the fraternal bond. The money was to pay in advance the passage to the realms above of those who are alive, but expect that they will some day be dead.

A curious crowd of curiosity seekers gathered in the street. The Chinese expected that the hoodlum population would interfere, and prepared beforehand by petitioning to Captain of Police Peer to send a special officer to maintain the peace. Officer Noble and a reporter went to the scene, and so there was no outbreak.—Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer, Aug. 29, 1891.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

An old-time reminiscence—A surprise party at N. E. headquarters—The lodge in Massachusetts politics—A quotation from an old divine.

It is a little remarkable that our forefathers seemed never to practically realize that they "possessed the earth," or Boston streets would not be the narrow, crooked labyrinth they are now, reminding one of the familiar nursery rhyme about the streets of London. Yet no further back than sixty-five years ago, when the vexed question of "rapid transit" was, like many other burning questions, in the limbo of the future, a "five-cattle team," loaded with wood, and driven by a young countryman from the suburban districts, might have been seen quietly wending their way through that part of the city where the hubbub is now most deafening, and the blockades most hopeless and bewildering, to the woodstand near Park Street church, there to await a purchaser; when he was found, the heads of the patient oxen would again be turned homeward. That young man was the writer's father. Could there be a more signal illustration of the vast changes which have taken place in Boston in scarcely more than half a century?

So your correspondent mused while on her way to 218 Columbus Avenue on last Thursday, Sept. 24. It must be acknowledged that a strange air of secrecy pervaded our anti-secret headquarters. Mysteries of some kind were evidently being enacted, of which good Sister Powers was the presiding priestess; and, strangely enough, it was about Bro. and Sister Stoddard, who had just returned from their trip to Vermont and New Hampshire, that the plot especially thickened. Everything, however, was explained to their satisfaction when Bro. A. A. Hoyt, in a neat speech that abounded in bright and witty turns, presented them, on behalf of the friends there assembled, and many obliged to be absent, with over one hundred dollars in money, besides a variety of useful gifts, in remembrance of our New England agent's sixtieth birthday. Both responded in a manner which showed them to be thoroughly and happily "surprised." Miss Ella Carter, whose singularly sweet and cultured voice has been often heard at the Anti-secret Mission, gave us a beautiful solo; and after an hour spent in singing and social conversation, our little company separated. It was a delightful occasion, and, considering that the whole thing was planned and carried on to a successful issue by the same dear woman who, at the Holy Spirit's suggestion, has planned and executed so many other things for the advancement of the cause, it has left this afterthought in the mind of the writer: It has been a check to anti-secrecy in times past that its friends have been too isolated to cultivate the social spirit. There has been a great change in this respect, at least in Boston and vicinity, since Bro. Stoddard and his wife began their work here; and I attribute it chiefly to the fact that they have succeeded in arousing and enlisting the women. Anti-secret workers who find that "Ephraim is joined to his idols," might do well to "let him alone" for a space, and devote their energies to enlightening the sex which has never surrendered the right to think for itself to unknown lodge-masters, however "grand" or "puissant." Women move the social wheels, and in the direction they move so moves the world.

I was especially glad to greet among the friends Bro. Zaraphonithes, whose name is so familiar to Cynosure readers. He has that keen, finely-chiseled, intellectual face that one might expect to see in a native of the land at the feet of whose poets and philosophers all the nations have sat for two thousand years. Surely Greece, next to Palestine, ought to interest our hearts, for it was in a Greek city that the disciples were first called Christians, and it was among her peasants and artisans that Paul labored, and to whom he wrote those wonderful epitomes of Christian doctrine and duty which have been for ages the most prized heritage of the church. I understand that Bro. Zaraphonithes, who is now stopping at the home of Mrs. Helen Rice, the well-known W. C. U. worker, will stay in this country for a few weeks, and be open to lecture engagements as the friends may desire.

"Greece has many foolish things," he said, in response to a question whether Masonry was the disturbing factor there that it is in America;

"but they have no secret societies. They had one once, but it was the cause of so much evil and mischief that the government stamped it out."

Under the name of the associated endowment orders, the lodge is going to be quite a power in Massachusetts politics this year. "Already"—I quote this information from the daily press—"candidates for nomination and renomination have been made to feel that their standing in this particular must not be overlooked. In one of Boston's neighboring towns, only the other day, a prominent member of the legislature who, last year, was known as a strong opponent of endowment orders, felt it incumbent upon himself to notify a representative of the associated orders that they could count upon his support next year. This will insure his renomination," the paper adds. The lodge, when it appears in politics, like the saloon, always draws to the surface plenty of men of this stamp—willing to sell their principles for office. Another respect in which it resembles the saloon is that it is thoroughly unpartisan, and does not care a fig of what political stripe a man is, provided only that he be friendly to its interests. The fight is for the "long term" orders; that is, all who extend the time of payment to five years or over. They are said to have a voting force in the State of between sixty and seventy thousand—certainly enough to make some unexpected changes on the political checkerboard.

The Gamma Delta of Boston University held their initiation last Friday afternoon, and a number of freshman girls were blindfolded and put through the initiation ceremony;—given with their bright minds and innocent hearts their first lesson in organized secrecy. To be sure, there are plenty of women, and I am afraid some mothers, to say with Miss Willard that the secrets are too infinitesimally small to amount to anything; and yet if these same girls should meet together and indulge socially in drinks that contained the slightest, just the very slightest, percentage of alcohol, would they say "it was too little to amount to anything?"

With the cool weather comes the usual renewal of activity on all lines of religious and reformatory work; yet I often wonder if the loss can be computed which such work sustains every year through the general relaxation of effort on the part of our churches through the summer months. Unfortunately, Satan never takes a vacation. If anybody doubts that he is the busiest when Christians are least so, I recommend to their perusal the following quaint bit from old Hugh Latimer's "Sermon on the Plough."

"And now I would ask a strange question; who is the most diligentest bishop and prelate in all England, that passeth all the rest in doing his office? I can tell, for I know him who it is; I know him well. But now I think I see you listening and hearkening that I should name him. There is one that passeth all the other, and is the most diligent prelate and preacher in all England. And will ye know who it is? I will tell you; it is the devil. He is the most diligent preacher of all other; he is never out of his diocese; he is never from his cure; ye shall never find him unoccupied; he is ever in his parish; he keepeth residence at all times; ye shall never find him out of the way: call for him when you will, he is ever at home; the diligentest preacher in all the realm; he is ever at his plough; no lording nor loitering can hinder him; he is ever applying his business; ye shall never find him idle, I warrant you. . . . Oh, that our prelates would be as diligent to sow the corn of good doctrine, as Satan is to sow cockle and darnel!" ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM WORK IN THE SOUTH.

A letter from Rev. F. J. Davidson, pastor of St. Matthew Baptist church (colored), in New Orleans, La., September 25, which was recently burned by the enemies of Bro. Davidson for opposing the lodge, contains much matter of interest for the friends of Reform at the North. Those who have money to expend in a good cause will find Bro. Davidson's field a worthy one:

"I have just returned from attending the Baptist State Convention, which met in Shreveport, La., Sept. 9-14. I find a few in North Louisiana who are still willing to stand for truth and denounce the lodge. Yet there has been a marked decline in anti-secret work throughout the State, owing, no doubt, to the absence of a Reform lecturer. I am still here in this modern Sodom and Gomorrah, being persecuted for his blessed Name's sake. My church is up, enclosed and ceiled overhead, but we still lack . . . lumber to finish the church." Bro. Davidson's address is 392 Magnolia street, New Orleans.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30, 1891.

Washington church people, irrespective of denomination, are greatly interested in the preparations which are being made to entertain the large number of visitors who are expected to attend the Ecumenical Conference of Methodists, which will be in session here from October 7 to 21. All of the railroads running into Washington are selling tickets at reduced rates, and there is every indication that the expectations of our Methodist friends of a very large attendance will be more than realized.

Many attempts have been made during the last few years to get the colored people of Washington interested in the temperance cause; but, for some reason, no great success has attended those efforts, and the mass of our colored population—nearly one-third of the city's total—has remained, if not intemperate, at least indifferent, and such a thing as a colored property owner refusing to sign a saloon-keeper's application for license was almost unheard of. It may be imagined, therefore, that the temperance workers were delighted when they ascertained that a mass meeting of colored people was to be held on Sunday afternoon to consider ways and means for reducing the number of saloons in the District of Columbia. The meeting, which was largely attended, was presided over by Hon. Frederick Douglass, who opened it with a short but very sensible address on the benefits of temperance generally. Rev. W. H. Brooks then explained to the meeting the power which the law requiring the signatures of a majority of the property owners and house-keepers on the square upon which the saloon is to be located before the license is granted, gives to the people to reduce the number of saloons. He told his hearers that the law put upon the people the responsibility of saying whether the saloon should do business under the shadow of their own houses and open the doors that would eventually ruin many of their children. After calling attention to the depreciation in neighboring property which the saloon almost invariably caused, he said that in signing a saloon-keeper's application for license, a man was not only encouraging an evil, but was deliberately decreasing the value of his own property. He begged his hearers to say "No," and stick to it, when they were asked to sign an application for the licensing of a saloon, which he characterized as a "gateway to prison, to pauperism and to hell." Addresses were also made by a number of other influential colored men, including Rev. F. J. Grimke and Dr. C. B. Purvis, all in the same line, and it is fair to infer that this temperance movement, so auspiciously begun, is to have some practical results.

Educated at Oxford and the German Universities; ordained to the ministry; resigned on account of skepticism; practiced medicine for ten years, and upon a reconsideration of the causes that made him a skeptic, brought about by a series of misfortunes, discovered his error and was re-ordained to the ministry to become one of the hardest workers in the Master's vineyard: Such is a condensed history of the life of Rev. Dr. George Sexton, formerly of London, England, now pastor of a church at Dunkirk, New York, who addressed a Y. M. C. A. meeting here on Sunday afternoon, touching "The Testimony of History to Christ." His address embraced what might be called a "short-hand" historical sketch of the Christian religion, in comparison with other systems of worship. "In all other systems of religion," said the speaker, "it is possible to eliminate the teacher from the doctrine he professes without affecting the value of the system; but in the Christian religion Christ is the pivotal point, and without his personality the teachings of Christianity would fall to worthlessness. You can divorce Mohammed from his Koran, Buddha from the principles he affected, and Aristotle from his stoical philosophy, but attempt that with Christ and your pathway is dark as Erebus." Dr. Sexton, in addition to this address, preached twice on Sunday, his subjects being "Human Greatness and Divine Gentleness," and "Onward, but Whither?"

"Going to be a missionary" has something about it that causes it, whenever and wherever it be spoken, to touch and cause to vibrate some fine fibre of our inner nature. Haven't you felt it when discussing the future of some young man who is going or has gone to be a missionary? That fibre was touched in several hundred people last Sunday morning, as Rev. James Addison Ingle, who graduated last June at the Theological Seminary of Virginia, and who sails for China as a missionary on October 21, told a Washington congregation some of the needs of the people there, as well as some of his hopes of what he might assist in doing. Three of this young man's fellow-graduates have already gone to Brazil as missionaries. *

REFORM NEWS.

BRO. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 1., 1891.

I reached Sharon, Wis., Sept. 23, and found the friends of our anti-secrecy Reform "faint, yet pursuing." There has been, at this place, much light on this question. Those who were the leaders in religious work and who ought to have accepted it have feared to do so, lest it should impair their denominational interests, and the result has been a general decline in religion and morals. Churches have divided and grown weak, and Satan has taken advantage of their contentions to advance his kingdom; and so the lodges have grown, and the faith and zeal of Christians diminished.

What is true of Sharon seems to be largely true of all the villages in Wisconsin that I have visited. Nevertheless, they have not altogether yielded to Baal. Doubtless there are more than seven thousand whose knees have not bowed to him, and whose lips have not kissed him; and some of them live in Sharon.

Bro. J. W. Suidter took me to Walworth, where I found warm friends and promise of financial aid; but a meeting did not seem to be practicable.

On the 25th I went to Evansville, to attend the Annual Conference of the Free Methodist church. I was agreeably surprised to find so large a number of ministers and delegates, and to hear reports of such general prosperity. The conference met in the main building of Free Methodist Academy, a prosperous institution under the care of Prof. Coleman, who is assisted by five teachers. They have at present an enrollment of ninety students, but expect more. They have five buildings, but I was sorry to learn they were considerably in debt. A vigorous effort was made to pay it off, and one thousand dollars were pledged for that purpose. Our excellent brother, B. T. Roberts, presided, and preached a most powerful sermon on the evening of the 25th. The report of the Committee on Reforms was ably written, and contained a strong indictment of the secret lodge system. It will be doubtless given to the readers of the Cynosure. I was not only most kindly entertained, but granted a hearing in reference to our work, and was assured, from all quarters, that the Free Methodist people were free from all complicity with the lodge iniquity.

From Evansville I went to Baraboo, and stayed with our stalwart friend, J. W. Wood, who, if he is less active, is not less earnest in his protest against "the unfruitful works of darkness." On Lord's day we attended worship in the Baptist church in Baraboo, and heard an excellent discourse:

At night I spoke in the Wesleyan church in Lyons, to a good congregation, on the wickedness of the lodge system. I had the best of attention, and trust a good impression was made. I was sorry to learn that the pastor, who was absent, had declined to give notice of the meeting, and tried to prevent the use of the house for the consideration of this question. But for the persistence of Bro. W. Vandressen, who is still "strong in the Lord," I should not have had a hearing. I think all were pleased, and I was invited to come again. Baraboo is a growing city, with fifteen churches, nearly all weak and obliged to conform to the world in order to secure its support. The Masons are building a grand Masonic temple; and the M. E. pastor is the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge. The Congregational church, with which I once labored, is without a pastor, and, like the others, keeps its altar fires burning only by much effort and self-sacrifice. Were the children of light as wise in their generation as the the children of the world, they would surely cease to divide and contend. But God has not left himself without witnesses in Baraboo. The Free Methodist people have a house of worship and stand faithfully for pure Christian morals.

From Baraboo I went to Ironton, where for five years I preached the Gospel of Christ. There the Congregational church has gone out, and the M. E. church is apparently on its last legs. The M. E. pastor is a devoted Mason and Odd-fellow. The lodges flourish and draw the young men, but some of the women keep up the prayer meetings and pray for the deliverance of Zion. I attended such a meeting, and met many with whom I had labored in former years. I was rejoiced at their numbers, and earnestness, and that they were not afraid to pray against the lodge and the saloons. The meeting was in Ironton, but those who attended nearly all came several miles, from communities outside.

I am now at Madison, the beautiful lake city, set on a hill, but whose light does not shine for the honor of God or the good of humanity. Still I find friends and reformers here, and that wherever iniquity has come in like a flood, the Lord has lifted up a standard against it.

H. H. HINMAN.

BRO. I. R. B. ARNOLD AT COLCHESTER, ILL.

IPAVA, Ill., Sept. 30, 1891.

Rev. I. R. B. Arnold attended the Central Illinois Conference of the Free Methodist Church, held at Colchester, Ill., September 23d, where he delivered his Anti-masonic lecture. The stereoptic views given in connection with the lecture were clinchers to the statements made. It is certainly a most convincing method of shedding light on the dark system of Masonry. All who heard this lecture and saw its forcible illustrations said it was a grand success. Long may Bro. Arnold live to shed light on the darkness.

W. R. BONHAM.

BRO. FENTON IN ILLINOIS.

Last Sabbath morning, September 27th, "Masonry as a System of Religion" was my theme in the United Presbyterian church, at Englewood. In the congregation there was a lawyer who had come fifteen miles to hear the discourse. He is a Freemason, i. e., has taken the three degrees of Masonry, but he says that Freemasonry is a fraud. And he says that there never existed such persons as Hiram and King Solomon, nor King Solomon's Temple, nor Christ and the apostles, nor the Apostle Paul; that the twelve apostles were just what Freemasonry declares them to have been, i. e., in the Christian cosmogony, according to ancient sun-worship or ancient Masonry, symbols of the twelve months of the year and the twelve signs of the zodiac. When asked if Paul never existed, to write the Epistle to the Romans that bear his name, who forged the apostle's name and wrote the Epistle? The deceivableness of all unrighteousness was at his wits' end. Now, this man is a member of the legal profession and has practiced that profession in this city for years. He claims to be acquainted with a prominent Jewish Rabbi in this city, who, he says, says that neither Moses nor Jesus Christ ever existed.

Which, I ask, is the more consistent—this outspoken infidel, or such Freemasons as Pastors Lorimer, Thomas and Fallows, who preach self-conscious lies in the lodge and profess Christ in their pulpits? Do they not, in heart, hold the same views of Christ as does this infidel?

In the evening, my theme had a kindly and prayerful reception at the Holland Christian Reformed church, on Seventy-first street, west of Halsted street. Bro. Hillemonds, zealous for the truth in defence of Christ, opened the way, and Pastor Vanderwerp is no less zealous in behalf of the Saviour against the dark and hateful foe to truth—Freemasonry.

On Monday evening, the 28th, I spoke in the Immanuel Swedish Lutheran church, of the Augusta-naSynod, on Sedgwick street. Pastor Evald was absent from the city, but Pastor Mellander was present and introduced the speaker to the audience, and at the close expressed his approbation of the work of opposing and exposing the secret society frauds.

Until the true pastors inform themselves as to the character of the Masonic, Odd-fellow and other secret society methods and aims, there will be a necessity for special preachers to educate the people and defend Christ's kingdom from the secret society assaults of hell and the devil.

The German Evangelical (Lutheran) Seminary, mentioned in my letter in the Cynosure of Oct. 1st, is at Elmhurst, Ill., which fact I failed to mention in the letter. WILLIAM FENTON.

FROM THE WESTERN AGENT.

Leaving Beaconsfield, Iowa, I went to Clarinda, and from there into the country, where I called upon Rev. Mr. McKee, pastor of the Covenant church. He was going to drive across the country to Blanchard, and I went with him. The Kansas Presbytery of the Reformed Presbyterian church was to meet in Blanchard the next week.

I saw Rev. Mr. Sharp, the pastor of the Covenant church of Blanchard, and Rev. M. A. Gault, District Secretary of the National Reform Association, and it was arranged that a meeting to discuss National Reform issues and the lodge question should be held the evening before the meeting of the presbytery.

Rev. Mr. Faris, of Sparta, Ill., was selected to represent the National Reform work, and I was to represent the N. C. A.

After making this arrangement, I went to Fremont county and spoke twice, and did some canvassing for the Cynosure, but returned in time to attend the Blanchard meeting.

Rev. Mr. Coulter, of Winchester, Kansas, presided and made some introductory remarks.

Rev. Mr. Faris followed with an able address on National Reform, and I came next, with an address on secret societies. Rev. Mr. Coulter followed with a short, spicy speech; a collection

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

NO EXCUSE FOR SECRET SOCIETIES.

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga., Sept. 3d, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—A few days ago I received through the mails three copies of your interesting and excellent paper, and after examining the contents, I beg leave to say to you I most heartily endorse the principles therein set forth. At this advanced day of the world, when the facilities for information profusely abound among the people by means of the printing presses; when the sacred Scriptures are accessible to all classes; when the people are in the full enjoyment of a free government and religious liberty, and every condition of life seems favorable to the amelioration of the masses and the mental development of the young, there can be no excuse for secret oath-bound societies, let their professed objects be what they may, and their existence under a government like ours can only be a menace, and a shame and a reproach to Christianity itself. The Masonic order claim their "brotherhood" to be the best in existence, and make the further claim that their origin is in the hidden depths of antiquity.

In this Southern country, where the order is not so numerous as formerly, I find among Masons a diversity of opinion as to the time and place in which the order took its rise. Some affirm that in building Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem, in order that the immense structure might be raised without the sound of an implement being heard, and the skill being required to place every part to its appropriate place, it was necessary to organize this secret fraternity that they might be understood among themselves, but by no one else; that every sign, grip and pass word used at that remote day, is still in use at the present, and the fraternity is in full possession of all those ancient methods, genuflections and usages in erecting that great temple. Others, again, affirm that the order is much older than the building of Solomon's Temple. The order took its rise under some of the old Pharaohs of Egypt, say they, before the building of the Pyramids, and every sign, grip, and password then in use is preserved intact to the present day. There has, through all the long lapse of centuries, amid wars, persecutions, revulsions, the fall and rise of empires, been no alterations in the workings of the order. Stupendous claims! At the same time it is admitted by Masons themselves that the secret work of the order is not preserved upon parchment or paper, but has been handed down orally from these ancient times. It would indeed be straining one's credulity to believe any such stuff. Besides, it would require a great deal more than we have ever seen as the fruits of Masonry, to make thoughtful people believe there is any good in an order or craft making such unreasonable claims. Masonry is not as old as the Reformation. It will be difficult to prove the order had an existence two hundred years ago.

It is certainly time the Christian church should be free from the influence of all such heathenish, legendary crafts. Members of the church belonging to such should be admonished and encouraged to withdraw themselves from such, and sharply rebuked and even excluded when they prove obstinate. PHILIP L. HAMPTON.

AN OPEN LETTER

FROM JOHN G. FEE TO JONATHAN BLANCHARD.

DEAR BRO. BLANCHARD:—Your notice in the last Cynosure of my Autobiography is commendable, and in many respects good. You speak correctly when you say that I wish to "change the face of Christendom by abolishing its sects," but you misapprehend the nature of my work when you say: "He undertakes this by attempting to get the Christian world to be immersed," "and that as the abolition of sects is desirable, the effort to abolish will do good, though the only immediate effect should be another sect, whose creed is that there shall be no sect." I propose, in reply, to show that we have a creed, and a creed which is more than a mere sentiment—a creed on which all Christians can unite; that this does not necessarily imply immersion, and that an assemblage of believers based on this creed is not a sect.

1. The creed. This is not mere belief of a dogma, an interpretation, or a series of interpretations, but is belief on a PERSON. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "Trust in him" (the Son of God) "as the Saviour from sin." "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus the Lord."

This foundation is simple,—a child can understand it. It can trust in a person; it cannot in a dogma. This foundation is all-comprehensive; it includes all moral excellence, for Christ is "holy, harmless, undefiled." This creed includes all good works, confession, baptism, prayer—all Christ-like works. This creed excludes all that is evil: slaveholding, caste, secretism—all un-Christ-like works. The reception of this creed implies, also, a radical change in the inner man. The original work (Pisteno), as you know, when applied to belief in Christ, implies not mere intellectual assent, but also committal—committal of the whole man; hence, "He that believeth, (commits himself to) Jesus, as the Christ, is born of God." We have then a creed, simple, effective, divinely given—the creed of the primitive church, which will be the creed of the church of the future. Those who thus confess Christ and manifest a sincere purpose to do his will are, by common consent, regarded as Christians.

As far back as 1837, Alexander Campbell, in answer to the question, "Who are Christians?" replied: "Every one that believes in his heart that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God, repents of his sins and obeys him in all things, according to the measure of the knowledge of his will." With all such we propose fellowship and co-operation. We do not make immersion a condition of fellowship.

2. We now note that error of opinion in reference to a doctrine, an interpretation, a right, a polity, may be consistent with this faith in Christ; notably, so in reference to baptism. We know that the word employed by our Lord, in designating the rite, was not translated, but simply transferred, with an English termination affixed. The great mass of believers cannot translate; they must, of necessity, interpret. As Protestants, as Christians, we must grant the right of private interpretation,—earnestly seeking and prayer-fully asking for the true light. Because I believe the word employed by our Lord, in enjoining the rite, and when used to designate action, as it there does, means immerse; and because the action of a true baptism beautifully symbolizes an important truth in our own experience, death to sin and resurrection to newness of life; and because such baptism emblemizes the two important facts of burial and resurrection of our Lord, I urge all men to be baptized; and we know that 999 out of every thousand know that the immersion of a true believer, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, is Christian baptism. This is the trend of conviction. At Berea, Ky., in a town of 500 inhabitants, we have the one church of the place. On the basis of professed faith in Christ as the Son of God, the Saviour from sin, those who once were Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Disciples, colored and white, unite in worship. On this same basis are gathered scores of converts from the world. These are baptized in the name of the Lord, and unite in harmonious worship. Most of these converts who are thus brought in, ask to be buried with Christ by baptism.

3. Any number of these true believers in Christ, gathered together in a given locality, constitute the one church of that locality. If one hundred such assemblages shall be gathered together in the city of Chicago, one on this street, another on that, these will be parts of the one great body, an extension, but not division. These parts are not parties; but so soon as one of these assemblages, or any part of one of these assemblages, shall magnify any opinion, doctrine or polity above the unity of the body of Christ and build a party on such opinion or polity, they thus commit the sin of schism; and when, as a logical sequence, they take a name to designate the party they become a denomination, as the word imports, named from the rest of the body—and thus complete the sin of schism.

This I do not with a creed divinely approved. I build part of the one body of manifest believers in Christ.

Are you in this work, my brother, or is it true that you are building a party; and will the sun of your great name go down behind the cloudy sect, the sin of dividing the body of Christ?

PITH AND POINT.

BACCHA-TERPSI.

His father's name is Bacchus; i.e., "the god of wine." His mother's name is Terpsichore. She is "the muse who presided over Choral song and the dance." He is interested in a large firm of common sinners, who have him employed as their agent. He holds membership in nearly all the lodges of the city, and is continually busy in working up the interests of his employers. He does not find much opposition in the lodges to which he belongs, and has arranged to get nearly all of the brewers, the distillers, and the wholesale and retail liquor-dealers into the several lodges, and into the cherished habit of holding annual dances, and numerous other dances, until he has revolutionized society from Plymouth Rock to Cape Mendocino, and even persuaded some modern communicants to step out and dance when he pipes. Not long since he secured a room in the Masonic Temple. . . . for a member of the liquor firm, and had it "refitted" by a Good Templar "for the sale of intoxicating drinks." By close attention on lodge nights you can hear them singing in the I. O. G. T. lodge—

"Come, rally round our banner,
Come, help us in this fight."

When passing the Masonic Temple, you can hear them singing—

"Hail, Masonry divine—
Light of the ages, shine!"

While the voices "above" were still mingling in vesper accents, and becoming more and more faint, until at last they died away, and all was still; then there came an answer from the saloon in the northeast corner of the temple "below"—first, a liquid gurgle, then the tinkling glasses touched to others, with, "Here's to you, gen'lemen (hic) and to the lodge (hic) 'above' that rented us the (hic) s'loon 'below.'"—BORACHIA'S BO-PEEP.

COMPASS AND SQUARE RELIGION.

The compass, as the symbol of the heavens, represents the spiritual, intellectual and moral portion of the double nature of humanity; and the square, as the symbol of the earth, is the material, sensual and baser portion.—ALBERT PIKE.

[One would suppose that the Holy Bible, on which Masonic obligations are made in lodges, would share in the virtuous principles symbolized by the compass; but no. Chase's "Digest of Masonic Law" establishes the dogma that "To require a candidate to profess his faith in the divine authenticity of the Bible is a serious innovation in the very body of Masonry" "The Jews, the Chinese, the Turks, each reject either the New Testament or the Old, or both, and yet we see no good reason why they should not be made Masons. In fact, Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was, it would not be Masonry—it would be something else." So there are only the compass and the square to represent the religion of the Blue Lodge.—EDITOR.]

THE ULTIMATE PURPOSE OF MASONRY.

The ultimate purpose of Masonry is the utter overthrow of that whole religious and political order of the world which the Christian teaching has produced, and the substitution of a new state of things in accordance with their ideas, of which the foundations and laws shall be drawn from mere Naturalism.—POPE LEO XIII.

RELIGION OF GRAND COMMANDERIES.

"Hands round, then, faithful Brotherhood,
Join in the golden chain—
We part upon the Square below,
To meet in heaven again;
Each link that has been broken here
Shall be united there,
And none be lost around the throne
Who've acted on the Square."

—Old Masonic Hymn.

LITERATURE.

The October number of St. Nicholas concludes the eighteenth semi-annual volume of this popular monthly "for young folks." Nor is it popular only among this class of readers; the adult mind finds in it much to admire and enjoy, besides the satisfaction one finds in witnessing the pleasure which it gives the children. The finest picture-sketch in the current number is that of the artist Dolph and the reproductions of his capital paintings of cats and dogs. Among the other amusing sketches and pictures the most striking are the Story of Nebraska Allen, by Kate M. Putney; Books of Olden Time, by C. A. Lynde; A School-girl's Recollections of Hans Christian Andersen, by Fraulein Rosa Schmalz; Tee-Wahn. Folk Stories, by Chas. F. Lunmis; Chan Ok (concluded), by J. O. Davidson, and the Fortunes of Tobey Trafford, by John T. Trowbridge. The pictures and jingles in a minor key are also very bright and amusing. Published by the Century Co., 33 E. 17th street, New York City.

The Arena for October is especially interesting. Geo. Stewart, D. C. L., LL. D., opens the month with a pleasant review-sketch of James Russell Lowell's literary career, accompanied by a full-page portrait of the lamented poet. Other articles of more or less interest, with their writers, are: Healing through the Mind, by Henry Wood; Mr. and Mrs. James A. Herne, by Hamlin Garland; Some Weak Spots in the French Republic, by Theodore Stanton; Leaderless Mobs, by H. C. Bradby; Madame Blavatsky at Adyar, by Moncure D. Conway; Emancipation through Nationalism, by Theodore B. Wakeman; Charles H. Pattee contributes some Recollections of Old Playbills; The Microscope from a Medical Point of View is treated by Dr. Frederick Gaertner; A Grain of Gold, a story, by Will Allen Dromgoole; Religious Intolerance To-day (editorial); Social Conditions Under Louis XV. (editorial); and the number closes with the usual current book notices. Published at Boston.

The principal papers in Scribner's Magazine for October are J. W. Powell's New Lake in the Desert (Lake Salton); Hunting American Big Game (illustrated), by Archibald Rogers; The Biography of the Oyster (illustrated), by Edward L. Wilson, and Carlyle's Politics, by Edward C. Martin. Other articles comprise a continuation of the Great Streets of the World—The Corso of Rome, by W. W. Story (finely illustrated), and The Wrecker, (illustrated), by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne; The Voices of Earth, by Archibald Lampman; Autumn Haze, by R. K. Munkittrick; C. H. R.—Lost off Hai-mun in the China Sea, by Julia C. R. Dorr; The Actions of Wounded Animals, by J. N. Hall, M. D.; In One's Age to One's Youth, by Edith M. Thomas; Clytie, a story, by Ernst Schottky; A Prayer, by Anne Reeve Aldrich; Captain Black, by Chas. E. Carryl, and the Point of View. A very good number. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City.

The Ladies' Home Journal for October, with its forty-five distinct papers and departments, copious engravings, and admirable adaptation to the sphere of society in which it is designed to circulate, is, as usual, an attractive visitor. Mrs. Beecher begins her serial—Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him, which will find many interested readers; Ella Wheeler Wilcox has a rather cynical review of modern marriages under the title of Social Slave Markets; Mary J. Holmes describes the Totem Poles of Alaska; Henry Clews has a characteristic paper on the Making and Saving of Money; Editor Bok devotes a few paragraphs to Writing for the Dollar; and Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage and a host of other contributors furnish an ample and varied number of literary side-dishes on as many subjects that will be relished by the Journal's army of readers. Philadelphia: Curtis Publishing Co. $1.00 per annum.

LODGE NOTES.

The Knights of Honor are offering prizes in order to increase the membership of their lodges, and the K. of H. Reporter sees no harm in the competition wrought by the scheme. A lodge man sees very little to condemn in his favorite society as long as it secures success to the order.

The Keystone of August 16th last gives an account of the disbandment of "Osiris Chapter," a branch of "The Egyptian Masonic Rite of Memphis," located in Philadelphia. The R. W. G. M. thereupon declared "The Egyptian Masonic Rite of Memphis" a "clandestine body," and washed his hands of its infamy.

"How is this, brother?" inquired the chairman of the visiting committee, "you have sent word to the lodge that you have small-pox, and I find you suffering from rheumatism." "Well, you see it's something like this," said the claimant for sick benefits, contorting with a fresh twinge, "there wasn't a soul in the house that could spell rheumatism."

A dispatch from Arkansas City, Kan., says: "It was learned to-day that a secret order of boomers has been organized all along the border of Southern Kansas. Already over 3,000 members have been sworn in. They propose to arm themselves early in October and make a raid on the Cherokee Strip. They will burn the grass, kill the cattle and make a determined stand to hold the Strip for homes."

The London Freemason had a story, March 1st, about one William Wilson, whose life was saved in the West Indies by Dolores Torros, a female Mason, who took her degrees in Texas, where ladies can enter the Craft. Grand Secretary Wm. F. Swain, of Texas, writes the Freemason that no lady can enter the Craft in Texas, or any other of the United States. It is possible that Donna Torros had taken the annex degrees of the Eastern Star, and thought she was a Freemason.—Masonic Chronicle.

The Otsego (N. Y.) Republican, printed at Cooperstown, notes the organization in that village of a "commandery" of the "P. F. Y. B. O.," a secret order of which we hope soon to know more, although it is extremely doubtful whether it is worth the time and trouble to hunt it down. Very few of the new "orders" are. The Republican says that there are 276 "commanderies" in the United States, and several in the near vicinity of Cooperstown. Can not some of our friends in that neighborhood furnish us with a sketch of its character and a copy of its ritual?

By far too little attention is generally paid to the prevalence of drunkenness, swearing and gambling among members of the Fraternity. If Masonry does not teach us principles of self-restraint and a vigilant guard over our passions, it does not teach us anything, and the distinguishing line which separates us as Masons from the rest of the world will soon be obliterated, and we will become a by-word and a reproach among men. The vices we have named are too common among the Craft—much to their shame—and the lodges are greatly to blame because they fail to discipline brethren when it is actually necessary.—Masonic Exchange.

The Masonic order stands at the head of secret fraternities, with 15,838 lodges, 1,082,992 members. Next come the Foresters, with 5,128 Courts, with 774,893 members; then come the Manchester Unity Odd-fellows, 657,581 members, and American Odd-fellowship, with 8,570 lodges, 575,000 members; 2,077 Encampments, 105,000 members; the Knights of Pythias, 200,000 brave men, and then the great beneficiary orders, the Workmen, Knights of Honor, Royal Arcanum, American Legion of Honor, Modern Woodmen of America, and others, representing 1,000,000 members, paying $20,000,000 annually in benefits.—Tidings.

Recently at Lapore, India, a large meeting was held for installation purposes, after which a banquet was given, attended by twenty-two brothers, at which the toasts were proposed in six European and seven Oriental languages. French, German, Latin, Italian, Hebrew, Urdu, Persian, Bengali, Sanskrit, Hindi, Dutch, Guzerati, and the District Grand Master wound up with an amusing specimen of the "lingua franca" spoken by the Panjaubi pleaders before the chief courts. No one of our living Grand Masters could understand, much less respond, to any one toast on the program whence plain English had been maliciously banished; still it would appear that twenty-two East India Masons in a single city were enabled to accomplish the feat. This ignorance of the living languages forcibly illustrates the ill effects of a corresponding ignorance of Masonic ritual compulsory on Americans through Grand Lodge dictation. Ragan enumerates the names of no less than seventy-one separate and distinct Masonic rites, of which we have practical knowledge of but a solitary one, which our learned wiseacres proclaim by law to be the only Masonry an intelligent Mason should be allowed to learn and labor at.—The Three Fraternities.

All humors of the scalp, tetter sores, and dandruff cured, and falling hair checked; hence, baldness prevented by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

OUR PREMIUM!
THE EMPRESS
Sewing Machine
For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled. It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order. Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work. It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance. It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well. It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use. All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments, put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Kuffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.
Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00.
With Christian Cynosure 1 year...$22.00.

For further particulars address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Plovering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL
With Eighteen Military Diagrams
As Adopted and Promulgated by the
SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE
OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835.

Compiled and Arranged by John G. Undersea,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE
UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction
By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Nowfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdalo; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1891.

THE FELLOWSHIP OF CHRIST AND BAAL.

The pastor of a church sends us the following statement of facts:

(1.) The Ladies' Aid Society, without my knowledge, got up an entertainment, last March, entitled: "The Deestrick Schule." The proceeds they divided between the church and the Rebecca lodge. The leading women of the church belong to the order. (2.) About two months ago the Masons organized a strong lodge here. The Ladies' Aid Society spread a banquet for them in the basement of the church, and they held high carnival there until midnight. A Congregational minister, from a neighboring city, was present and made a speech for them.

The late pastor of this church which is using the house of God to get money for the Rebecca lodge and to spread banquets for godless men organizing a pagan church, was, and (we suppose) is still, a Mason himself. The church has been soliciting money from sister churches for the erection of its building; and now that it is up, this house of worship is used to foster Odd-fellowship and Freemasonry—two heathen religions which are its direct antagonists.

It is singular that men of average intelligence should think it something strange to have Christians speak against lodges, and that they should consider opposition to Masonry opposition to Masons. We send missionaries to Romish, Armenian, Mahometan and Buddhistic countries, and no one imagines that we are assailing Romanists, Arminians, Mahometans or Buddhists; on the other hand, the moment we speak against Masonry or Odd-fellowship, many persons seem to think us hostile to the members of the orders; yet these lodges are more distinctly anti-Christian than any one of the religions above-named.

These old faiths never take the Word of God and mutilate it in order to get rid of the name of Jesus as Royal Arch Masonry does. They never take portions of Holy Scripture, like the words of our Lord at the burning bush, and put them into the mouths of drunken blasphemers as Royal Arch Masonry does. They do not construct an elaborate ritual, as Blue Lodge Masonry and Odd-fellowship have done, and legislate Jesus Christ out of it. It may be useless to repeat it, but we desire to say once more that we have none but the kindest feelings for members of secret lodges. For the lodges, as institutions, we have only sorrow and hostility. We do not like their rituals, their penalties, their Christless prayers, or their obligations to partial honesty, charity, purity, and humaneness.

We expect to see the day when it will be counted the height of absurdity for a man to be a member of a secret lodge, and at the same time be a professed Christian. If a man at this day should wish to unite with the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist or Presbyterian churches of his city, in order to secure friends, custom or votes, he would be considered a dishonorable man. Why is it any better for him to join secret, Christ-rejecting churches and at the same time hold membership in the church of Jesus? Men should choose. They do choose; and even when they nominally belong to two, they really belong to one, and we shall see the time when this absurd effort to serve Christ on the Sabbath and Baal on lodge nights will be given up.

THE LODGE VS. THE CHURCHES.

The unanimity with which the various church conferences and religious associations are giving expression, this fall, to their approval of the temperance, Sabbath-keeping, Sunday-school, moral education and Christian Endeavor reforms, is gratifying to the friends of Christianity; but the general omission of condemnation of secret societies by these religious bodies is as remarkable as it is reprehensible, when one considers how great and wide-spreading the lodge evil is becoming. It may seem like harshness to say it, but the union of church and lodge is evidently destroying the former, while the latter, aptly representing the world, the flesh and the devil, is vigorously endeavoring to gain the ascendancy. On this subject the editor of the Baptist Gleaner, published at Fulton, Ky., pungently remarks: "The ridiculous craze of the people to run off after lodges of various kinds, to the neglect of the churches and their work, is painfully illustrated in the following figures: Boston has 599 lodges to 243 churches; Brooklyn has 685 lodges to 355 churches; Washington has 316 lodges to 181 churches; while Chicago has 1,088 lodges to 364 churches. Is the world going wild on the lodge question? It is time the Baptists who are volunteering to defend the existence of lodges were calling a halt." And another esteemed contemporary quite as pointedly says: "Where there is only one lodge and five churches in a town, the churches will prosper; but in a town where there are five lodges and only one church, the church must go under." Happily there are churches where the lodge-devil is barred out and not worshiped; and they shall walk with Christ in white. (Rev. 3:4.)

ODD-FELLOWSHIP AND SALVATION.

A letter from D. S. Thompson, dated Melbourne, Iowa, Sept. 22, 1891, referring to a statement made by one of the Cynosure's excellent contributors in a recent issue, thus takes the latter to task:

"The statements in one of your periodicals, that the Independent Order of Odd-fellows teaches universal salvation on the basis of good works, ignoring entirely the Son of God, and that Jesus Christ is a prohibited name in the lodge, is basely false."

We will answer this, officially:

In the Massachusetts I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge Report for Feb. 14, 1889, page 336, speaking of applications for membership, it is written:

"Question 58—Is it lawful for a chaplain to commence and finish his prayer in the name of Christ?"

"Answer—Our order only requires a belief in the existence of a Supreme Being as a qualification for membership, and has no affinity with any religious sect or system of faith. Hence, everything savoring of sectarianism is not to be tolerated. The words, system of faith, or sect, do not have reference merely to sects within the pale of Christianity, but have a far broader significance, and include all the religions of the world. In this sense Christianity is a sect: hence it is inexpedient, unwise, and I think unlawful to make prominent reference to it in lodge work. There is no law requiring lodges to be opened or closed with prayer, but the Sovereign Grand Lodge in 1882 (Journal 9,147) adopted forms of prayer to be used in opening and closing, but left the use of them optional with subordinate grand lodges. These forms were adopted to avoid the danger of offending brethren of different sects or systems of faith by one of an opposite faith in extemporaneous prayer. If lodges follow these forms there will be no danger of offending, for although taken from the Christian Bible and including the Lord's Prayer, they exactly accord with the fundamental doctrines above referred to. We have Jews, and may have Mohammedans and other non-Christian sects within our order, and the rule applies to them equally with members of the Christian faith. They would not be allowed to use in prayer words which would be offensive to Christian ears; hence, it is better to avoid alluding to matters belonging to the peculiar faith of the chaplain engaged in prayer. If a Subordinate Grand Lodge adopts these prescribed forms of prayer, then the subordinates under its jurisdiction must use these prayers, if they use any, but they would not be bound to use them, as they could omit the use of prayers entirely at opening and closing."

Mr. Thompson also asks our esteemed contributor "if he ever made a vow before God and broke it." As we understand this query, it has especial reference to the obligation of an Odd-fellow when uniting with the order. Our answer is from the report of the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for August, 1886, page 813, relating to applications for admission to the order. The applicant says: "In consideration of such admission I promise and agree that, if elected, I will conform to the constitution and by-laws of your lodge, and those of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, and that I will seek my remedy for all rights on account of said membership, or connection therewith, in the tribunals of the order only, without resorting to their enforcement in any event, or for any purpose, to the civil courts."

In other words, he promises to become an outlaw of our civil government, owing allegiance only to the order, waiving his rights as a citizen, and consenting to take an extra-judicial obligation to that effect. This is a very different thing from taking a solemn vow to serve the Lord, and if he breaks his lodge obligation and withdraws from the order for conscience sake, he must settle it with God and his lodge mates. Odd-fellows may never forgive him, but in the sight of God there would probably be no condemnation for the renunciation of his wicked associations with the lodge.

CHURCH INVESTIGATION OF THE LODGES.

Many Norwegian Lutherans are anti-secrecy advocates, and at the recent Synod of that church a committee of clergymen was appointed to investigate the evils of the lodge system, and, after obtaining the best information possible on the subject, each member of the committee is to write a thesis containing the knowledge gained by him. At the next Synod these theses are to be presented, and filed for reference; and, subsequently, we are informed, they are to be printed for distribution among the church members. This is certainly a very satisfactory method of enlightening the churches on this fruitful subject, and an excellent system of strengthening the status of the denomination on the secret society question. While on this subject, we would state that several of these investigating clergymen have visited the Cynosure office in search of trustworthy information concerning the secret workings of the lodges, as have, also, ministers of other sects—to all of whom we extend a hearty greeting, and such facts and figures as we can supply them with are at their service.

MISS WILLARD AND THE KEELEY CURE.

We noted the fact last week that Miss Frances E. Willard had expressed her belief that the "Keeley Cure" (for drunkenness) "has been boomed by the press for political purposes," and closing with the remark that "Both of the great political parties will exalt moral suasion, local option, Keeley cure, anything, in fact, except Prohibition, which is the one bitter pill that they cannot swallow." Since then Miss Willard has issued a "card" to the public as follows: "As has been already said by me innumerable times in years past, I am a friend to Dr. Keeley and an advocate of the Keeley cure. As the result of inquiries instituted by me during the past week, I believe my remark last Sunday concerning the press (a remark not in my speech, but off-hand, and made half in jest and half in earnest) was too sweeping in its character, and that it involved an injustice to those newspapers that have advocated the Keeley cure. If Dr. Keeley will make known the secret of his method, the 10,000 W. C. T. U.'s from ocean to ocean—nay, around the world—will, I am confident, do their best to supply it free of charge to any who are unable to purchase for themselves." Why doesn't the W. C. T. U. cut loose from Good Templarism and Keeley's cure, either of which is liable at any time to be made a factor in political opposition to Prohibition? With 10,000 active, persistent, praying members, it needs no such doubtful aids. Later.—At a meeting of the W. C. T. U. the Keeley gold cure was discussed, and that organization declared not to be antagonistic to the work of Dr. Keeley.

SECRET SOCIETIES ARE ENEMIES OF IRELAND.

Two hundred delegates and numerous other Irishmen assembled in convention at Central Music Hall, in this city, last Thursday morning. Ostensibly they met as friends of Ireland, but the convention, as described by the headlines of the Inter Ocean's report, was composed of "Enemies of Ireland. Yesterday's Convention merely a Shallow Scheme—Hollow and Insincere. Honest Men Used by a Treacherous Combination. The Meeting Engineered by Individuals Conspicuous by their Absence." Further, the Inter Ocean says: "Those present voted and spoke by virtue of membership in an organization that has no constitutional existence and that has no recognition either in this country or in Ireland. They were delegates from societies that are as mythical as the Holy Grail. They came as Irish National Leaguers from States where the Irish National League has not been heard of for four years. Their credentials, so-called, were worthless. Admission was free to all. The Irishmen assembled—most of them well-meaning and honest—were used for a purpose—that was all. Rumor had it that the real meeting took place in secret at night, a meeting of the clans engineered by individuals who are conspicuous by their absence from the public gathering. Rumor is also responsible for the statement that Frank Byrne, of Phoenix Park notoriety, has been drumming the West for some weeks past to make the gathering of the 'old guard' in oath-bound session strong and representative. For all of which reasons the public convention was tame, spiritless, and disappointing." As in all former cases, the secret societies proved themselves the bitter enemies of Ireland.

"THE BIBLE MODE OF BAPTISM."

At an early age, ex-President Jonathan Blanchard was associated with Baptists, whose arguments in favor of immersion as the only proper method of administering the ordinance of baptism, created in his mind a severe struggle, for he had been led, among other associates, to believe that sprinkling was an equally right and satisfactory means of obeying and honoring Christ. Under these circumstances he began a careful study of the Bible, to determine, for himself, which mode of baptism had the divine sanction. The result of his researches he has embodied in a little pamphlet of twenty-five pages, under the above title, which meets with hearty approval from Congregational and Presbyterian believers. Of it Geo. N. Boardman, Professor of Didactic Theology in the Chicago Theological Seminary, says: "That he is a candid seeker after truth is obvious in every sentence. It is also obvious that he has been careful, patient and reverent in his study of the Scriptures. His exposition of Christ's baptism manifests a deep sympathy with divine revelation, and has seemed to some minds, at least, a convincing argument. The essay has elicited general interest and commendation wherever it has been read, and has proved helpful to some who were in perplexity. It is worthy of careful perusal by all who are interested in our Christian ordinances." These views of Professor Boardman are endorsed; also, Messrs. Jas. Tompkins, Secretary of the Illinois Home Missionary Society; Chas. R. Bliss, Secretary of the New West Education Commission, and Jos. E. Roy, District Secretary of the American Missionary Association. The Congregational News (Chicago) also says of it: "The booklet is the paper that was read before the Elgin Association and also the Chicago Ministers' Union. It more than sustains the impression made by hearing it, as the keenest and most reasonable argument we have ever seen. It is brief, can be easily read at a sitting, and should have the widest circulation among all who seek an answer to the question—Was Christ Immersed?" It has been neatly printed and is sold in any quantity by the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society, 175 Wabash Ave.

ANTI-SECRECY IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

It is probably known among the readers of the Cynosure, that the Mennonite church in America is opposed to secret societies. This circumstance is recalled to mind by the recent discussion in the eighteenth annual Sunday-school convention of the eastern district of that church, on this topic. In reply to the question, "What stand should our Sunday-schools take in regard to secret societies?" Mr. Rickert read extracts from tracts in his possession. Some secret societies do not mention the name of God. They, as a whole, do not support Christ's poor. We ought to trust in God's providence; that is sufficient. The topic was further discussed by other speakers; and it was the ultimate sentiment of the convention that, inasmuch as the church had taken a decisive position on this subject, the Sunday-school could do no more than to support the church's action. The Sunday-school is an excellent place in which to begin the exercise of true reform principles, before the children are old enough to be seduced into the iniquities of the lodges.

—Elder Joseph Cheaney, the able and eloquent prohibition advocate (known, also, as "the Texas Cyclone") has been engaged in Reform work in Michigan, but is now about to take the field in Illinois. He has had as many as one thousand in his audience at one time. The Prohibition Club of Coldwater, Mich., numbers 150 members and owns its own hall. He finds Michigan better organized for work than Illinois, with a greater number of Prohibitionists.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—On the eve of going to press, Bro. D. L. Moody and his friends are enjoying a reunion of those who have been converted under the work of the Chicago Evangelization Society, at the Moody Bible Institute. The program gives promise of a joyous social and religious gathering.

—Those who read, in last week's Cynosure, "A Wonderful Speech by a Man 87 Years Old," and are not already aware of the fact, will be pleased to know that Samuel Blanchard, mentioned therein, is an elder brother of ex-President Jonathan Blanchard, and a Reformer of the sturdy, sterling type that distinguishes the family. Would there were more of them, for the world sorely needs them.

—Ex-Pres. J. Blanchard is to leave, on Friday of this week, for Beloit, Kan., to visit his venerable brother Samuel, in company with whom he proposes to attend the Kansas State Anti-Secrecy Association (auxiliary to the N. C. A.), which is to begin at Denison on the 14th inst., and which promises to be a gathering of much interest and importance. Bro. Hawley, the Western agent, also expects to be present at that convention, and our readers may look for a very good report of its proceedings.

—Too late for insertion in this issue, we have received from Boston the metallic-plate portrait of the New England agent, Rev. James P. Stoddard. While it undoubtedly and fairly represents our esteemed correspondent, it is not in size or finish equal in excellence to those of the other friends of Reform that have hitherto appeared in the Cynosure; but, with the life-sketch of Bro. Stoddard, prepared by ex-Pres. J. Blanchard, it will occupy a place in our issue of October 15. We hope, in a future number, to present a larger and better "counterfeit presentment" of our friend.

—A pleasant reminiscence of the early labors of ex-President J. Blanchard in the cause of Reform, in his New England home, is perpetuated in the columns of the Bellows Falls (Vt.) Times. This is a reprint, in full, of an Address on Temperance, which was delivered at Saxton's River, Vt., by the venerable ex-President, in 1830, then in his eighteenth year, and printed in the old Bellows Falls Intelligencer of September 11, in that year. The Intelligencer was then edited by Thomas Green Fessenden, one of the brightest intellectual lights of the Green Mountain State, and he deemed the address worthy a place in its columns. Those of our readers who desire to know how brilliant was the promise in the ex-President's youth of the grand Reform work which he was permitted to do amid the stirring events of after-years, will be gratified, as we propose to reproduce the address in the Cynosure. We are sure they will be pleased to find it in several numbers of our regular Temperance Department, beginning with next week's issue.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

was taken for the N. C. A., and we adjourned.

I remained to attend the presbytery and was invited to address them on the N. C. A. work. A vote of hearty sympathy and earnest co-operation with the N. C. A. was then taken, and I was invited to lecture throughout the bounds of the presbytery.

Rev. Mr. Coulter, the secretary of the presbytery, and a member of the executive committee of the Kansas Christian Association, engaged me to attend and speak at the annual meeting of that Association, to be held at Denison, Oct. 14. I was greatly encouraged by the sympathy and hearty co-operation of these dear brethren in Christ.

I went into Missouri, and spent some time canvassing for the N. C. A. and the Cynosure, and then to Coin, Ia., where I spoke a couple of times.

I afterwards went to College Springs and preached in the Wesleyan Methodist, Congregational, and Free Methodist churches, and did some work for the Cynosure and other N. C. A.

interests. As the representative of the N. C. A., I was warmly greeted, and generously aided by those who have the anti-secret work at heart.

From there I went to Shenandoah, and preached to a full congregation, Sabbath night, on the Relation of Freemasonry and Kindred Orders to the Christian Religion.

An Odd-fellow, who said he was a member of the Methodist church of Lincoln, Neb., came up at the close of the meeting and conversed with me at some length. I had called attention to the religious pretensions of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship, and had given my reasons why they should rank with the idolatries of ancient times as part of the great system of man-invented worship of devils, which has cursed and destroyed mankind in all ages.

I had urged the doctrine taught by Paul, that we must not, by engaging in false worship, have fellowship with devils, if we would have fellowship with the Father and with our Lord Jesus Christ. I had insisted, as did Elijah, that we must cease to worship at false altars and worship God, and him only through the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ, as we have been taught in the Gospel.

This Nebraska brother did not deny that Freemasonry claims to fit men for heaven. Not being a Mason, however, he chose to speak for Odd-fellowship, as he had taken all the degrees, and held the highest offices of that order. He boldly declared that Odd-fellowship fitted men for heaven.

When I quoted the words of Dr. Evans, spoken while addressing the New Sharon lodge of Odd-fellows: "If you are good Odd-fellows, all the angels of God cannot shut you out of heaven," this Nebraska brother replied, "I would say if men were good Odd-fellows, the angels could not, and God would not, shut them out of heaven." He declared Odd-fellowship to be the twin-sister of Christianity. It needed, he thought, the discipline of Odd-fellowship to stir men up and oblige them to do good works.

This Nebraska brother seemed to be in hearty accord with a benighted church member in New York State, who is reported to have said, "I believe that Odd-fellowship is just as good and saving a religion as Christianity is." A bystander, who believed in Christ as the only Saviour of lost men, asked a gentleman standing near, "Do you believe that what this brother has said is true?" "Why, y-e-s—it is true enough, I suppose, but I do not think it is expedient for us to teach the people so. We belong to the church, and we want to build up the church, and it is not likely that we can get men to join the church if we teach them that they can get to heaven by Odd-fellowship just as well."

But this Nebraska brother was for boldly preaching the gospel of Odd-fellowship, and then when they had got them into the lodge, where, as he assumed, they could "read their title clear to mansions in the skies," he was for leading them on into the church, just as they would lead men from the Blue Lodge into the Chapter degrees, in Masonry.

Manifestly these Odd-fellow brethren of Nebraska, Iowa, and New York States have been hypnotized by Satan; and, should such strong delusions become general, our country would be a foreign mission field for nations still favored with the light of the true Gospel.

Many Christian men, ministers and others, are being rescued from this snare of Satan—the lodge. Let us pray and labor, and cheerfully contribute of our substance, to help on this reform work, that the dangers which threaten the life of both church and state may be averted.

Yours for Christ and his Gospel,

C. F. HAWLEY.

WASHINGTON, to Rev. Mr. Snyder, Sept. 25, 1798, speaks of his illness, "which allows me to add little more now than thanks for your kind wishes and favorable sentiments, except to correct an error you have run into, of my presiding over the English lodges in this country. The fact is, I preside over none, NOR HAVE I BEEN IN ONE MORE THAN ONCE OR TWICE WITHIN THE LAST THIRTY YEARS."

THURLOW WEED: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

THE HOME.

THE LICENSED SALOON.

We strive over tariff and ballot;
We legislate to me upon to me;
We build us strong forts and steel navies,
But leave undefended the home.
We boast of our freedom and progress,
While rumsellers mock at the boon;
And deal us out slav'ry, and rule us,
Enthroned in the licensed saloon.

What makes us so brutal in dealing With Chinaman, Red man and Black;
And what gives corruption such power
To put the whole nation a-rack?
What is it robs labor of plenty,
And tempts it to sing a mad tune?
Hell's triad of drink, lust and lucre
All shrined in the licensed saloon.

A cottage erst rich in home treasures,
Stands cheerless and bare in its gloom;
The drink demon, styled a good creature,
Has entered to curse and consume.
And tragedy stalks after revel—
Why turned not to blood the white moon,
When tipsy roughs brought home a father,
Shot dead in the licensed saloon!

A woman more hapless than Rachel
Is mourning, too stricken for tears;
Crushed down under shame heaped on sorrow,
To suffer, and suffer for years.
What fruit this of youth's joyous bridal—
Black night has come down at high noon,
Bereaved one by one of her children,
All slain by the licensed saloon.

What! are we more sordid than Judas;
And have we no pity or shame?
O stain and reproach of our manhood,
Foul blot on our fair banner's flame!
Most horrible sin of our people,
Why can't we be rid of it soon!
This nest of all crimes, thing accursed,
This Satan, the licensed saloon?

O Christ, once the crucified victim,
Now throned at the right hand of God,
To win by thy love the rebellious,
Or shatter with stern iron rod.
'Tis ours not to question our Saviour,
Nor judgment nor mercy impugn;
But give us the power, we pray thee,
To root out the licensed saloon.

—Rev. J. E. Walker, in Union Signal.

FACING A GIANT.

"Frau Schmidt, will you please to watch mother for a minute? I'm going to try if I can find father."

Christian Klein's mother was very ill—ill of a complaint called hunger, of which many people died in the cruel old times, nearly four hundred years ago. His father had been away since day-break, in the hope of getting food for her; and now it was evening, and he had not returned. So Frau Schmidt came in and Christian Klein went out.

Very picturesque looked the old town of Reisenburg (Giant's Tower) in the red light of sunset. Its gray old church towers and steep, narrow streets and queer little loophole-shaped windows, and tall, wooden house-fronts, striped with white and black—all looked fairy-like in the crimson glow. High over all rose the shadowy pines that covered the rocky hill, on the brow of which stood out, dark and stern, the battlements of the Grand Duke Ludwig's castle.

But the town people were in no mood to enjoy the view, splendid though it was. To them that grand old fortress overhead was like a wolf's den or a vulture's nest. Oppressed, ground down, forced to pay such heavy taxes that they had barely enough left to live upon and in daily terror of being murdered besides (for a prince of the fifteenth century held all his subjects' lives in his hand), the poor wretches had no hope except the Grand Duke might die or be killed, and that his successor might be a little less cruel and hard-hearted.

Suddenly there came a merry burst of hunting horns from the wood above, and up the narrow path leading to the castle rode a long train of green-coated horsemen, headed by a figure at the sight of which everyone trembled. Could a huge black bear have mounted on horseback, it would have made a very fair likeness of the terrible Grand Duke, whose chief pleasure was to go out and kill something, whether man or beast it mattered not a whit.

The blast of horns disturbed for a moment a group who had gathered around a pale, scared-looking man in the dress of a peasant, who seemed to be telling them something very startling indeed.

"I saw him with my own eyes," he was saying, "bound hand and foot upon a horse. They said he had killed one of the Grand Duke's deer, and he's to be hunted to death for it by the stag-hounds to-morrow morning. Poor neighbor Klein!"

A faint cry broke forth behind the speaker, and he turned hastily around, but only saw a little boy disappearing behind the corner.

The Grand Duke's deer park lay upon the side of the hill upon which his castle stood, surrounded by a palisade so high and strong that it was no easy matter to get into it. Nor, indeed, would anybody be likely to try, for what with the savage dogs which kept watch there all night, and that with the Grand Duke's fierce soldiers who had orders to kill anybody that was found trespassing, whoever got in had little chance of getting out again.

Just as the moon rose that night, a man who was pacing to and fro like a soldier on duty in an open space at the upper end of the deer park heard a slight rustling among the boughs overhead, and a small, dark figure, no larger than a child, dropped almost at his feet.

The man started back, but the child, so far from being frightened, came up to him, and said eagerly:

"Oh, please, can you tell me where the Grand Duke is? I want to see him."

The soldier stared blankly at him for a moment, and then burst into a loud horse-laugh.

"A brisk lad, in truth! And pray what dost thou want with the Grand Duke, my young prince?"

"I am not a prince," said the boy simply; "I am Christian Klein, of the Lederstrassa [Leather street], and my father is to die to-morrow for killing one of the Grand Duke's deer. But I am sure if the Grand Duke knew why he did it, he'd never be so cruel as to kill him."

"And why did he do it, then?" asked the soldier.

"Mother's dying for want of food, and father went out to try to get her some, and she's been watching for him all day, and if he doesn't come back she will die, I know she will."

The man was silent a moment, and then asked, gruffly:

"How came a slip of a boy like thee here at this hour of the night? Knowest thou not that the Grand Duke's bloodhounds are loose, and we guards have orders to kill anyone who enters without leave?"

"I know that, but I don't care, if I can only save father."

"A brave boy, truly," muttered the sentinel. "I doubt if any living soul would do as much for me. Well, lad, if thou fearest not dogs and spear-men, art thou not afraid of the Grand Duke?"

"No," said the little hero, firmly. "I know that they tell fearful stories about him but I can't believe he's so bad as they say, and then I always think how sad and lonesome it must be to have everybody hating him so, and no little children to love him as I love papa."

The soldier was silent for a moment, and then said in an altered voice:

"Child, thou hast thy wish. I am the Grand Duke, Behold him now."

He threw back his cap as he spoke, and the savage face which haunted the dreams of every man in Reisenburg stood out in all its terrors under the brightening moonlight. But to Ludwig's unbounded amazement, the child, instead of screaming or shrinking back, sprang up and cried joyfully: "Oh, I am so glad; I thought I'd never find you, or that the soldiers wouldn't let me speak to you. You'll let father come back to us?"

"What, after killing one of my deer?" growled Ludwig in his harshest voice. "No, he has broken my laws, and he shall die."

The boy's face fell, and he stood a moment as if thunder-struck, while the Grand Duke watched him keenly.

"Kill me, then, and let father go," said Christian at length; "I'm too little to work for mother, and she can do without me; but if any harm should come to father she would die"

As he stood there in the moonlight, with the black shadows of the woods behind him, Ludwig fancied that he saw in his face a strange likeness to his own little boy that died years ago—one of the few living things which that iron-hearted man had ever loved.

"Come with me and show me where thy mother lives," said the Grand Duke at last. "If thou hast spoken truly, well and good; if not—"

The flash of those terrible eyes, which had never known fear or mercy, sufficiently filled up the blank as the prince and the peasant boy went forth in the darkness.

"Good news, mother!" cried little Christian, rushing into the dark and dismal room where his mother was lying all alone, for good Dame Schmidt had at length been forced to leave her.

"Who talks of good news?" answered Frau Klein, in a dreamy voice; for her mind was so weakened by hunger and distress that she hardly knew what was passing around her. "There is no good news for us, unless it pleases God that the Grand Duke should die."

A quick-drawn breath, as of some one in pain, answered her from without, and Prince Ludwig's mighty figure stalked into the room, which he surveyed wonderingly by the light of the lantern that he carried.

"The boy spake truth in very deed," muttered he. "What a place! 'Tis worse than any one of my castle dungeons."

It was indeed. The plank walls shook and groaned at every gust of wind. The mud floor was worn into countless hollows by the rain which had trickled through the cracks in the roof. The air was chilly and damp as a burial-vault; and the white, pinched face of the poor creature who lay helpless on her rotting straw might have passed for one who was already dead.

Roused by the stranger's entrance (though she did not recognize him), she rose half erect, with a look of terror in her sunken eyes.

"What has happened?" gasped she. "My husband—"

"Fear not. Thy husband shall be here within two hours," said Ludwig, turning hastily away as if ashamed of himself. But at the door he turned again, and, holding out his hand to Christian, said:

"Little one, wilt thou kiss me before I go?"

The child put his thin arms around the great, thick neck, and as his little wan cheek touched the old tyrant's grim, bearded face, Ludwig's savage eyes grow dim with unwonted tears.

Two hours later Hans Klein was in his sick wife's arms, and little Christian was looking wonderingly at a packet containing a heavy gold chain which he had seen on the prince's neck, with a slip of parchment inscribed: "From Grand Duke Ludwig to the little boy who did not hate him."

Thirty years later two men, the one in dark robes, the other wearing the rich dress which showed him to be the mayor of Reisenburg, stood together in the old church of St. Adelbert, beside the marble tomb in which Grand Duke Ludwig had just been laid.

"God bless him!" said the mayor. "If he began by doing evil, he ended by doing much good."

"Thanks to thee, Master Klein. And they might well write upon thy tomb (though I trust it may be long ere thou needest one), what they have written on thy monument in the marketplace yonder. 'God hath sent his angel and shut the lion's mouth.'"—Selected.

SHE ALWAYS MADE HOME HAPPY.

The night before Mrs. Harland died she called Marion to her side, and taking her hands into her own cold ones, said:

"Promise me, daughter, that when I am gone you will take my place, and keep a home for your father and the children."

"I will do my best, mother dear," sobbed the weeping girl, "but I can never fill your place."

"I know it will be hard for you to give up your cherished plans for the future, but God will give you strength for the sacrifice demanded," whispered the dying woman.

Again, with bursting heart, Marion promised to care for the dear ones about to be bereft.

At midnight the unbidden guest entered the stricken home, and when the sun arose in the morning the Harland children were motherless. After the funeral was over, Marion bravely put aside her beloved books and conscientiously devoted her energies to the task she had undertaken. She made it a point to see that the house was in perfect order, as of old, and her father and the boys had no cause to complain of the daintily-prepared food she served; neither were the little ones less tastefully clothed than when their mother's loving fingers had arranged their toilet; but, oh, how they missed the bright, cheery face that had once presided over the home!

Marion tried to do her duty, but the sad countenance she carried constantly about was gloomier even than the sombre robes she had donned. Every evening the sun set upon her weeping at her mother's grave, and through the long day any burst of merriment from the children was quickly silenced by her reproachful eyes. How could they be happy and their dear mother lying so still and cold in the silent grave!

One evening, after a peculiarly trying day, she went upstairs to prepare for her accustomed walk. As she passed through the living room she caught a glimpse of her father's sad face, turned westward toward the cemetery, where the white monuments glistened in the setting sun.

She felt a momentary impulse to sit down by his side and try to cheer him, but her own heart was too heavy to minister to the woes of others, so she hurried on, leaving him alone in his sorrow. The boys' room was next to hers, and as she tied on her hat she heard Frank say, in a pleasant tone, "I do wish, Charlie, that you would not get into the habit of spending your evenings in such a place. No good can come of it."

"No harm, either, I suppose," was the defiant answer. "It is bright and cheerful there; and a fellow must have a little fun."

"You know mother would not approve of the associates you are forming," replied Frank, sadly.

"And if she had not died I never would have been tempted to go, for she always made home happy," said Charlie in a subdued voice. After a moment's silence, he added, "It is so gloomy here, I often feel like running away. Why can't Marion be cheerful like other people whose friends have gone to heaven?"

"Hush!" whispered Frank. "She does the best she can. Has she not given up her school-life and all her bright prospects that we may have a home together?"

"It is a poor home where all the sunshine is shut out," mused Charley. "It may be all right, but I wish things were different."

"And they shall be," gasped Marion, as an overwhelming sense of her selfishness, in so indulging her grief, took possession of her. "Mother, mother, I have proved untrue to my trust."

For a few moments the fair head was bowed in earnest supplication; then the young girl arose and went softly down stairs. Raising the curtains in the darkened parlor she seated herself at the piano, and allowed her fingers to wander over the keys. At first the notes were plaintive, but after a few minutes a happy song trembled on her lips. She noticed her father changing his position to catch the words of the melody, and after a few moments Frank came down the stairs and joined his voice with hers. As the evening advanced the children gathered in, and Charlie did not go down town as he had purposed. Though it pained Marion to smile when she felt like crying, she tried to forget self in the happiness of others. The time never came when the mother was not missed from the family circle, yet, by keeping close to the cross, and cheerfully performing her duty, Marion succeeded in her efforts to make a happy home for her father and the children. If she ever regretted the disappointment she had met in not being permitted to finish her education, her outer life gave no indication of the unrest within.

At Marion's suggestion, the son's loving words, "She always made home happy," were engraved upon the mother's tombstone, and no higher, sweeter tribute could be paid to woman, be she wife, sister or mother.—The Brethren Evangelist.

A tract of land in the suburbs of Louisville, Ky., is being converted into a high-toned residence section by the editor of the Wine and Spirit Bulletin. Many distillers and liquor dealers are investing in homes. Every deed will have a clause forever prohibiting the sale of liquor in this section. Is any stronger testimony needed to show the effect of a liquor store on neighboring property?

THE LITTLE MAID FOR ME.

I know a little maiden,
Whom I always see arrayed in
Silks and ribbons, but she is a spoiled and petted little elf,
For she never helps her mother nor her sister nor her brother;
But, forgetting all around her, lives entirely for herself.
So she simps and she sighs,
And she mopes and she cries,
And knows not where the happy hours flee.
Now let me tell you privately, my darling little friends,
She is as miserable as miserable can be,
And I fear she's not the little maid for me.

But I know another maiden,
Whom I've often seen arrayed in
Silks and ribbons, but not always; she's a prudent little elf;
And she always helps her mother and her sister and her brother,
And lives for all around her, quite regardless of herself.
So she laughs and she sings,
And the hours on happy wings
Shower gladness around her pathway as they flee.
Now, need I tell you privately, my darling little friends,
She's as happy as a little maid can be?
This is surely just the little maid for me.

—Harper's Young People.

TEMPERANCE.

THE IOWA METHODISTS.

The following is the Report on Temperance adopted at the recent session of the Des Moines Methodist Conference in Iowa by a rising unanimous vote and loud "amens." There was not a dissenting voice:

1. That the Des Moines Conference reaffirms its devotion to the principles and policy of prohibition, believing it to be the only effective method of dealing with the rum traffic.

2. As Christ came not to regulate but destroy the works of the devil, we believe that destruction instead of regulation of the liquor traffic is the only policy which Christians can consistently indorse.

3. We believe the rum traffic is entitled to no more protection or legal status by license than are theft, arson and murder. We maintain that the license of an evil is "an agreement with death, and a covenant with hell."

4. We deprecate the attempt of any party to reinstate the legalized saloon in our State, and maintain that such party is an enemy of the home, the church and the state, and in alliance with all the dangerous elements that menace the purity of the home and the safety of the commonwealth. We maintain that party alliance with the outlawed saloon is rank treason against the state.

5. We denounce the attempt of any party to cripple and obstruct the enforcement of the prohibitory law, and then on the ground of non-enforcement demand the repeal of said law.

6. We protest against the policy of special executive clemency toward the violators of the prohibitory law, and respectfully suggest that it is the sworn duty of our chief executive to enforce said law rather than wink at its violation, and then insist upon its repeal because it is not enforced.

7. We cannot indorse any party that proposes as a temperance measure to build toll-gates to the jail, the alms-house, the penitentiary, the gallows, and hell in the shape of license laws. We demand an impassable wall instead of a toll gate.

8. We believe it monstrous mockery to pray "Thy kingdom come," and then vote for the devil's mightiest agency, the licensed saloon. We insist that in the present crisis our politics and our religion should be "well shaken before using."

9. We pledge our moral and political support to the party that stands for the maintenance and enforcement of the prohibitory law, and invite the co-operation of all home-loving and law-abiding citizens, regardless of previous party affiliations.

10. We commend the Iowa State Temperance Alliance for its faithful and diligent work in this cause and in its efforts to enforce the prohibitory law, and agree with it that prohibition, as involved in this campaign, is not a matter of mere party politics, but is a question affecting the dearest interests of society—the moral and religious life of the people—as well as the peace and prosperity of the homes; and as a moral and religious duty we lay it on the hearts and consciences of all honest men of all parties to work and vote to save the homes of Iowa from the curse of the legalized liquor traffic, and to this end we pledge to the Alliance our cordial co-operation.

ALPHABETICAL STAGES OF ALCOHOLISM.

Dr. Cyrus Edson contributes a paper to the September number of the North American Review on the question, "Is Drunkenness Curable?" and ends the article by reciting an alphabetical rhyme, describing all the stages of alcoholism from the first nip to a drunkard's grave, which he learned from a patient, a young man of great ability and fine moral perceptions, who was an incurable inebriate. The doctor says that his eyes would stream with tears as he recited the following verses, describing his own case and career. It is the most truthful and graphic picture of the kind that has been printed:

- A stands for Alcohol; deathlike its grip;
- B for Beginner, who takes just a sip;
- C for Companion who urges him on;
- D for the Demon of drink that is born;
- E for Endeavor he makes to resist;
- F stands for Friends who so loudly insist;
- G for the Guilt that he afterwards feels;
- H for the Horrors that hang at his heels;
- I his Intention to drink not at all;
- J stands for Jeering that follows his fall;
- K for his Knowledge that he is a slave;
- L stands for the Liquor his appetites crave;
- M for convivial Meetings so gay;
- N stands for No that he tries hard to say;
- O for the Orgies that then come to pass;
- P stands for Pride that he drowns in his glass;
- Q for the Quarrels that nightly abound;
- R stands for Ruin that hovers around;
- S stands for Sights that his vision bedim;
- T stands for Trembling that seizes his limbs;
- U for his Usefulness sunk in the slums;
- V stands for Vagrant he quickly becomes;
- W for Waning of life that's soon done;
- X for his exit, regretted by none;
- Youth of this nation, such weakness is crime;
- Zealously turn from the tempter in time.

THE RUM-SELLER'S IMPREGNABLE FORTRESS.

A Plainfield saloon-keeper is waging war against a citizen who objects to having midnight revelry and disorderly proceedings under the windows of his domicile. Finding that remonstrance was of no avail, the harrassed citizen put up a high board fence which not only closed the saloon windows against his premises, but shut out light and ventilation, whereupon the saloon-keeper retorted with midnight horn-blowings, howling dogs and a general racket of portentous proportions, until the citizen's family are well-nigh crazed. In answer to threats, the saloon-keeper replies that he has a license and that he is impregnable in his position. That is the fortress into which the gin-miller and the gin-miller's allies invariably retreat. He has paid money for a license to sell liquor. The theory is that the license permits him to do anything and everything he chooses on his premises, and that no power on earth can take the license from him.—Newark, N. J., Daily Advertiser.

NEBRASKA A REFUGE FOR IOWA'S OUTLAWS.

The Law and Order League of Sioux City has turned over again, and again the outlaw liquor-dealers, white and black, male and female, are breaking for Covington and the protection that awaits them under the Nebraska high-license law. Twenty-five saloons closed their doors in the Iowa town the other day and the proprietors immediately pulled for the shore.—Lincoln (Neb.) Daily Call.

The Good Templars of New South Wales have decided to make national prohibition a test at all parliamentary elections.

An address to the king of Gazaland has been signed by the Duke of Westminster as the chairman of the native races and the liquor committee, encouraging him to take measures to prevent strong drink being brought into his country. He is assured that the European governments would be at his back if he went the length of entirely forbidding the ruinous traffic.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON III.—Fourth Quarter.—October 18.

SUBJECT.—Washing the Disciples' Feet.—John 13:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 2:5.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 13:1-17. T.—Mark 9:33-37. W.—Luke 14:7-11. Th.—Luke 18:9-14. F.—Matt. 23:1-12. S.—Mark 10:35-45. S. 1 Peter—5:1-6.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. A lesson in humility.—vs. 1-5. The hour had come—at once of bitterest agony and supremest joy; of the lowest depths of abasement, and the highest glory; the hour when Jesus' work would be finished and he should return to the Father who had sent him. John's narrative gives us a better idea than the other evangelists (though even he records but a small part) of the significant lessons and the deep and tender words of comfort that he crowded into the brief space of his earthly life now remaining; for "having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." How much more may we count on his un-failing love now that the sacrifice is forever completed? Christians of every land and age have held these chapters as especially precious, not only because they give the last recorded words of Jesus, but because they are his last words to us. Every disciple, to-day, can feel that he has as much share in them as did the twelve to whom they were originally addressed. So our lesson to-day is no less needed than it was then. Our Lord had already seen in the twelve the first beginning of that spirit which a few centuries later was at the bottom of the Romish apostasy;—the desire for rule and preferment that is the germ from which all systems of ecclesiastical tyranny and corruption have sprung. He then taught them the need of humility before they could even enter his kingdom, much less attain the highest rank therein, by the object-lesson of a little child set in their midst; but now he would teach them by himself becoming the object-lesson, taking the dress and doing the work of the most menial servant. Furthermore, as his divine glance went down the ages that were to come, he must have seen how this evil spirit of pride and ambition, perhaps cloaking itself under superior religious zeal, would "work subtlety" to overthrow and destroy the Church he was about to shed his blood to save. We can, therefore, see why he tried to make this his last lesson to his disciples so tenderly impressive;—a synopsis, as it were, of all of his previous lessons.

2. Peter's protest.—vs. 6-11. Peter, always foremost in impulsive speech, almost resents what seems to him a degrading of that sacred Person. Allow the Son of God to wash his feet!—to do for him a slave's work! Never. It was not enough even to be assured that hereafter he would apprehend the whole significance of the act. This false humility in Peter was none the less false because he thought it true. Every virtue has its counterfeit, and the worst form of pride is often the counterfeit of humility. How often we fail of some high blessing or privilege because we feel that it would be presumption for us to step forward and claim it! Yet when God has promised it to us in his Word, and is holding it out to us, what deeper presumption than to refuse to take it? "If I wash thee not." Jesus here refers to the spiritual cleansing of which his washing of the disciples' feet was a type, and Peter must have so understood it from his impulsive exclamation, "Not my feet only, but also my hands and my head." But Jesus, carrying out the parabolic signification of the act, reminds him that a person once washed does not require to be washed again, only to have his feet cleansed from the dust and defilement with which they must necessarily come in contact. So he who has been cleansed by the blood of Christ does not need a second cleansing, which would discredit the first, as if our Redeemer could do any half-work. Having once been freely forgiven and justified he does not need to pray for what he has already received; but he does need to pray daily for cleansing from the defilements of the way;—the mistakes and errors and short-comings which must necessarily cling to him while he continues in this mortal life. And he who believes himself to have attained perfection in the sense that he has none of these frailties of the flesh for which he daily needs to pray for forgiveness, may well fear lest he has never been really washed from his sins, and these solemn words of our Saviour may apply to him: "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me." For even the twelve were "not all clean." Iscariot's feet had been washed, but his soul was black with unconfessed guilt.

3. The lesson brought home.—vs. 12-17. "Know ye what I have done unto you?" Very puzzling lessons are often set before us, but the Lord never leaves us without a key to their right understanding. Neither does he ask us to practice any duty or virtue without first giving us, like a wise and faithful teacher, an example to follow. So when he asks us to seek the lowliest service, he first sets us the example by thus ministering himself. How many poor saints there are in every community whose feet we may wash; how many "little ones" who need some homely and perhaps disagreeable service that love to him would make sweet! "If ye know these things," etc. Some are only hearers. Some go so far as to praise deeds of humility and self-sacrifice in others; but only they who themselves do the Master's will can have his blessing.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND BRANCHES.

—The Anglican Communion embraces all Christians in full communion with the Church of England, and so is composed of these parts: The Church of England proper, with its 38 bishops and 24,090 other clergymen; the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, 61 bishops and 3,800 clergymen; Church of Ireland, 13 bishops and 1,807 clergymen; Church of England in Canada, etc., 24 bishops and 1,300 clergymen; Church of England in Asia, 13 bishops and 713 clergymen; Church of England in Africa, 13 bishops and 350 clergymen; Church of England in Australia, 21 bishops and 269 clergymen; Episcopal church in Scotland, 7 bishops and 266 clergymen; scattered, 9 bishops and 120 clergymen; a total in round numbers of 200 bishops and 32,600 clergymen.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. Dr. Munhall, the English evangelist, has engagements for several points in Nebraska the coming season, commencing with Beatrice about November, and going from there to Grand Island. Applications are coming in from various quarters for the services of Evangelist Billings.

—The regular fall meeting of Chicago Association, at Millard Avenue church, will be held Nov. 10, instead of Oct. 13, in order not to conflict with the American Board meeting at Pittsfield.

EPISCOPAL.

—Rev. Howard MacQueary, the Episcopal clergyman who was found guilty of heresy, was recently formally deposed from office as a priest of that church by Bishop Leonard. The ceremony was performed in Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, O., with great solemnity. But before this was done, MacQueary had written a letter to the bishop announcing his withdrawal from the Episcopal ministry. He has accepted a call to a Unitarian church somewhere in Michigan.

EVANGELICAL.

—The general statistics of the Evangelical Association for 1891 furnish some bright rays of hope. There is no little encouragement in some of these figures. In the midst of all the trouble, the church has had 2,457 more conversions than last year; 17,271 accessions, an increase of 174; the entire increase of membership has been only 1,726 above all losses, but it carries us beyond the 150,000 line. This is as nearly correct as can be under the circumstances.

—The unfortunate trouble in the Evangelical Association (Albrights) continues and even intensifies. There seems to be no hope of reconciliation. Two General Conferences now seem to be inevitable—the party headed by Bishop Dubs meeting in Philadelphia, and the followers of Bishops Bowman and Esher at some other point. This month is the time. Each General Conference will claim to be the legal conference. We do not sufficiently understand the question to have an opinion on this point. But division is inevitable.

LUTHERAN.

—The current catalogue of the Deutsche Evangelical Lutheran Concordia-Colleges at Ft. Wayne, Ind., Milwaukee, Wis., St. Louis, Mo., and Springfield, Ill., and the Teachers' Seminary at Addison, Ill., is received. It indicates an acceptable course of study and a fair attendance of students at each institution.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Nebraska lay electoral conference voted to apply two tests to their delegates, asking whether they are in favor of admitting women to the general conference and are prohibitionists. One proposed candidate replied that he was the father of seven girls, and of course was in favor of the admission of women. He also has been a prohibitionist for ten years.

—The Central Illinois Conference at the recent session asked the General Conference to provide training schools for lay workers. It was especially requested that such a school be established in Cincinnati, under the management of B. H. Cox, the noted "lay deacon."

—It is stated that members of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, in the Los Angeles conference—men, women, and children—gave an average of over $12 a piece last year for church purposes.

—Clayton, Iowa, has just closed a prosperous revival. The town has 400 inhabitants and not a score of professed Christians. C. W. Garlock, evangelist, and Rev. R. Ricker assisted for two weeks. There were sixty conversions.

—The second Ecumenical Conference of the Methodist church met in Washington, D. C., on October 7, and will continue in session about two weeks. This is the second world's conference of Methodists, and will have an important influence upon the church. About 500 delegates are expected, of whom 200 will be from other countries.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Synodical Home Missionary Society of Illinois will be held at Joliet, in the First Presbyterian church, October 21, at 9 A. M. At noon the meeting will adjourn to unite with Synod in the missionary convention. Home missionary addresses again on Thursday morning at the First church from 9:30 to 10:30.

—The Presbyterian Collegiate Institute located at Longmont, Col.,—Dr. Geo. T. Crissman, president,—has made a progress and growth during the year which places it among the flourishing institutions of the country. The opening of its present term registers an attendance of one hundred per cent greater than one year ago.

—Princeton Theological Seminary opened on Thursday, September 17, with 106 new students, and with a total of 190 present in all the classes. The opening address was by Prof. Charles A. Aiken, D. D. The Seminary is in a remarkably good condition.

—From 1880 to 1890 the population of the United States increased twenty-four per cent. During the same decade the membership of the Presbyterian church, North, increased over thirty-four per cent. And yet there are people who say this age is too much advanced to believe Calvinistic doctrine.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. J. C. K. Milligan, a Reformed Presbyterian minister of New York City, has resigned the pastorate of his congregation, which he has held for a quarter of a century. He sympathizes with those clergymen of that body who were suspended at the meeting of Synod in Pittsburgh last summer. He has been cited to appear before the presbytery for trial, Oct. 29.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—A Roman dispatch says that the Pope is preparing an encyclical against the agitation going on in Italy in favor of the enactment of a divorce law. The feeling in favor of such a law is very strong, and especially in the city of Rome itself.

—The Pope has sent a letter to the German and Austrian Catholic clergy urging them to make the strongest endeavor to eradicate dueling.

—The Pope is organizing an international congress to be held at Fribourg in 1892, to arrange a European Catholic Democratic Union.

—A Roman Catholic priest in Lotharingia, who denounced marriage contracted by Protestants as sinful concubinage, was sentenced to imprisonment by a court of justice. The priest, however, did not say more than the church of the Pope is saying since the Council of Trent.

—A letter from Rome to the Catholic News states that "the Holy Father has been pleased to nominate Rev. Father Sebastian Sanguinetti, of the Society of Jesus, Consulor of the Holy Roman and Universal Inquisition, vice the late Father Molza, S. J."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—One of our missionaries in Egypt sends for tracts on the Tithe, on Psalmody, and for some of the best books on secret societies. This indicates that the light is being spread in Egypt as it is in the church at home, and that the same means of promoting it are needed and used. —Christian Instructor.

—The Young People's Convention of Northern Indiana Presbytery is changed to Thursday, Oct. 15, instead of October 1st.

—On August 13, 1891, Mr. Francis Power was ordained and installed to the eldership of St. Charles, Ia., congregation, an event which has not occurred in that congregation for more than twenty-five years.

—In both India and Egypt, the hot season being nearly over, the brethren and sisters who were forced to seek at their health resorts a change, are resuming their work. In both alike there are marked evidences that labors are not in vain. New villages and multitudes of people also are calling for missionaries and teachers.

—The Second Synod will meet at Bellefontaine, Ohio, on the 13th of October, at 2 P. M., and will be opened with a sermon by the moderator, Rev. A. K. Strane.

—The Norfolk Mission College opened Sept. 7 with an enrollment of five hundred and fifty. More than two hundred applicants were turned away for lack of room.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Officers Joseph Smith and John F. Fogarty were arrested for assaulting and robbing Horace Johnson.

The tug C. W. Parker exploded her boiler near Archer avenue bridge, Sunday afternoon, killing outright Captain Jas. B. Carter, engineer John C. Moore and Samuel Armstrong, the cook, all of the tug, and five other persons, and seriously injuring many others.

An English widow, named Leavey, committed suicide in Jefferson Park on Sunday by shooting herself.

Articles of incorporation of the Cicero and Riverside Street Railway Company, capital stock $25,000; the Sterling Fuel and Light Company, capital stock $2,000,000, and the Elevated Tramway Company, capital stock, $125,000, all of Chicago, were filed with the Secretary of the State of Illinois Tuesday.

Wednesday the Illinois Board of Equalization added 50 per cent to the assessment of Cook county lots.

A receiver was appointed for the United States Rolling Stock Company by Judge Blodgett.

Friday Governor Fifer ordered a special election in Cook county Nov. 3, to elect John P. Altgeld's successor as Judge of the Superior Court.

COUNTRY.

Fire destroyed the Cedar Beach Hotel at Lake Wawasee, Ind., Monday. Loss, $12,000; insurance, $7,000.

At Alton, Ill., Monday, Mrs. Celia A. Phillips shot and instantly killed George E. Cochran, a commercial traveler from Mulberry Grove, who insisted on entering her house.

Young Ray, who was captured in New Mexico last Saturday and brought back to Durango, Col., has confessed that it was he who murdered his mother last Wednesday. The husband and father is insane from the shock.

T. R. Marshall, a lumber dealer of Johnstown, Pa., made an assignment Monday. Liabilities and assets about $30,000 each.

Masked men gained entrance to the Cheyenne (Wyo.) jail by strategy Sunday night and liberated two convicted murderers. One was recaptured late Monday.

At Oxford, Me., Wednesday, the Harper Manufacturing Company's woolen mill burned. Loss, $100,000.

The Sholl Lake (Wis.) Lumber Company's dry house burned Thursday. Loss, $10,000.

Prairie fires west of the Missouri, in North Dakota, are alleged to have laid waste an area 300 miles long and 200 miles wide.

The fifth annual corn palace at Sioux City, Iowa, was thrown open to the public Thursday. Rain prevented formal opening ceremonies.

At Kansas City, Mo., Thursday, the Ivanhoe Electric Street Railway Line was sold at a foreclosure sale. The road, mortgaged for $100,000, was bought by the Thomson-Houston Company for $25,000.

S. V. White & Co., of New York, are likely to resume business next week. The firm has saved from $250,000 to $500,000 out of the wreck.

Prairie fires near Fort Yates, N. D., swept over an acre 100 miles wide by 300 miles long, destroying farm buildings and herds of cattle and horses worth $500,000.

The Interstate grain elevator at Morris, Minn., burned Tuesday. Thirty thousand bushels of wheat and one carload of flax were consumed.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 28 to Oct. 3:

I M Pidgeon, Rev B J Larsen, F W Weed, G H B'akeslee, Rev C G Fait, C Hillemonds, B Williams, Rev C G Fero, T Spaulding, M Fitch, J Palmer.

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

Table listing donations for Current Expense Fund: C A Blanchard $ 5 00, S F Porter 23 00, Mrs M W Bingham 5 00, Rev J S Rice 2 00, Moses Plummer 3 50, John Sutcliffe 2 00, Previously reported 621 49.

$661 99

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

Table listing donations for Southern Ministers' Fund: I R B Arnold $ 1 75, C G Fait 2 00, Rev T C Moffat 1 50, Previously reported 106 08.

$111 33

For Free Tract Fund:

Table listing donations for Free Tract Fund: R J Hathaway $ 50, Wm Whittemore 50, Previously reported 2 75.

$ 3 75

W. I. PHILLIPS, Sec'y and Treas. 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table of market reports for Chicago: Wheat-Spring 95 1/2 @ 96, Winter 96 @ 96 1/2, Corn-No. 2 54 1/2 @ 55, Oats-No. 2 26 @ 29, Rye-No. 2 84 @ 84 1/2, Bran per ton 12 50 @ 12 75, Hay-Timothy 9 50 @ 11 50, Butter, medium to best 21 @ 25, Cheese 06 1/2 @ 09 1/2, Beans 1 65 @ 1 85, Eggs 18 @ 18 1/2, Seeds-Timothy 90 @ 1 13, Flax 92 @ 93 1/2, Broom corn 4 @ 05 1/2, Potatoes, per bush 25 @ 35, Hides-Green to dry flint 4 3/4 @ 5, Lumber-Common 10 00 @ 13 00, Wool (washed) 24 @ 29, Cattle-Choice to extra 6 00 @ 6 30, Common to good 3 40 @ 4 30, Hogs 4 65 @ 5 05, Sheep 3 50 @ 5 00.

NEW YORK.

Table of market reports for New York: Wheat, No. 2 1 04 1/2 @ 1 06 1/2, Corn 62 @ 66, Oats 33 3/4 @ 34 1/4, Eggs 21 @ 23 1/4, Butter 13 @ 25, Wool 14 @ 39.

KANSAS CITY.

Table of market reports for Kansas City: Cattle 1 25 @ 5 75, Hogs 3 25 @ 4 85, Sheep 2 50 @ 4 50.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors no gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader. -Northwestern Christian Advocate.

These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond. -Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago II

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Standard Works

-ON-

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail price sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Free masonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church, 5 cents each.

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations. $2.00 "A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa. He who wants to know what missionary effort means in these days may well learn from this volume. The reader who goes carefully through will have a good bird's eye view of recent events in Africa, with all the results of modern travel. The work contains aoid information of use to all who are interested in the future of this wonderful country. The many illustrations throw light upon savage customs and costumes."—Graphic.

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth, $1.50

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America. 1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled...2.00 2. Beveled boards, full gilt...2.50 3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges...2.50 4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges...4.00 5. Persian calf, padded and emossed, gilt roll and r. g...5.00 6. Crushed levant, elegant...6.00

7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors...7.50 Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall.

Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use... 20 My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children... 20

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set...9.00 An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Bear's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods. Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed. Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set...2.10 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set...4 20 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Bataia.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound per set...4.80 Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols...4.00 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth...1.00 Twelve Striking Sermons... 50 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons... 50 Twelve sermons on the Resurrection... 50 Twelve New Year Sermons... 50 Twelve Christmas Sermons... 30

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SELECTED RECIPES.

Pickled pears may be easily prepared by the following recipe: To one quart of vinegar allow one coffee-cup full of sugar; stick two cloves and a bit of cinnamon in each pear and cook until tender in the syrup, then bottle in self-sealing glass jars.

Peach preserves.—Select the finest and nicest fruit. Pare by slipping the skin off if possible. Make a syrup, allowing a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit, and in this cook the peaches till tender, then put them carefully into jars; boil the syrup till it is thick and rich and turn over the fruit.

Cold catsup.—Chop fine 1 peck peeled tomatoes, 1 pint onions, 1 quart celery, both chopped fine, teacup sugar, tablespoon each salt and pepper, cinnamon, cloves, ginger; add also 1 quart vinegar. Do not cook. Place in cans or jars. This catsup has kept from September until the following June without sealing.

Recipe for cucumber pickles.—Salt 1 pt.; put the salt on the cucumbers, bring the water to a boil and pour it over the cucumbers, and let it remain 24 hours; then pour off and cover with the following: Pepper, 1 oz.; allspice, ½ oz.; cloves, ½ oz.; vinegar, ½ gal. Put the spices in vinegar and heat nearly to a boil, then pour over the cucumbers.

Excelsior chowchow.—One quart each peas, shell beans, cut string beans, corn and young beets, all boiled and cut in pieces size of string beans. Add 1 cup sugar, 1 pint sliced onions, 1 quart vinegar, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon each salt, pepper, cinnamon, ginger, mustard and cloves. Boil one hour. If not well saturated with vinegar add a little more. Keep in small jars.

To make skeleton leaves, soak in rain water for some weeks, remove by floating upon a card, and very gently remove the upper skin with a soft camel's hair brush. Float in water and catch on a card with the other side uppermost, and remove other skin and pulp. A stiff brush may be needed, to be used by dabbing. Do not touch with finger. Finally wash well, bleach with javelle water, wash and dry.—Scientific American.

Sweet pickled pears.—Ten pounds of Bartlette pears, not quite ripe; wipe them, and remove the blossom end, then cook in boiling water until tender. Remove fruit and strain the water; take 1 quart of this water, add to it 1 quart of vinegar, 5 pounds sugar, ½ cup mixed whole cloves, allspice, mace, and stick cinnamon. Put it on to boil for half an hour, then add the pears, and when well scalded, remove them and pack in glass jars. Boil the syrup down until there is enough to cover the fruit; pour it over, and seal at once.

To can green corn.—Cut the corn from the cobs and pack in glass jars, pressing down close and filling to overflowing. Screw on the tops. Place a thick layer of straw or hay in the bottom of the wash-boiler, and pour in cold water to half the height of the jars, cover the boiler tightly and boil gently for three hours, keeping the water constantly at the same depth by adding boiling water when necessary. At the expiration of the time, lift out the jars and tighten the tops. When they get cold tighten again if possible.

Champlain potatoes.—Cook one tablespoonful of butter and one teaspoonful of flour in a saucepan, and add cold boiled potatoes in somewhat thick slices. Mix well with a cupful of stock gravy or milk, and season with salt and pepper. Stew all together for a few minutes, then remove from the fire and add the yolk of one egg beaten with one teaspoonful of lemon juice and a little cold water. Stir for a few minutes, pour in a hot dish, and serve with chopped parsley. This way of cooking potatoes is called also "Maitre d'Hotel."—Demorest's Magazine.

For pickled onions the small, silver-skinned ones are best. Take off the outer skins and then with a knife remove one more skin, when the onion should look quite clear. Put them into strong brine for three days. Bring vinegar to a

The Cod
That Helps to Cure
The Cold.
The disagreeable taste of the COD LIVER OIL is dissipated in

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA.
The patient suffering from
CONSUMPTION,
BRONCHITIS, COUGH, COLD, OR WASTING DISEASES, may take the remedy with as much satisfaction as he would take milk. Physicians are prescribing it everywhere. It is a perfect emulsion, and a wonderful flesh producer. Take no other

DON'T KNIT but buy Home-Made
Hosiery. It is close knit from all wool yarn, with double heels and toes. A pair of the BEST
SOCKS, post-paid 42 cents; a good pair 28 cents.
Discount to clubs. Samples and price list FREE.
WM. C. COLEMAN, Sabetha, Kan.

LISTEN Have you written to us yet? If you haven't, you better at once. You don't want to miss YOUR OPPORTU-NITY. Read our illustrated advertisement in the first issue of this month, of this paper. MONEY to be made rapidly, by any industrious person of either sex. Even beginners are easily earning from $8 to $10 per day. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Can devote all your time or spare time only to it. We instruct and show you how FREE. Easy to learn. We start you. Write and learn all FREE by return mail. Address at once,
H. Hallett & Co., Box 1750, Portland, Maine

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

boil with one or two blades of mace and some whole red peppers; pour it hot over the onions, after draining them well from the brine. Small cucumbers or gherkins are steeped for a week in strong brine; this is then poured off, heated to a boiling point, and then poured again on the cucumbers. The next day these are drained on a sieve, wiped dry and put into bottles or jars with some spice, ginger, pepper or cayenne and covered with strong pickling vinegar. Mixed pickles from white cabbage, cauliflower, French beans, onions, cucumbers, etc., are made in the same manner, with raw ginger, mustard seed, long peppers and a little bruised turmeric added to each bottle.

Citron Preserve.—Most delicious citron can be prepared from watermelon rind, quite equal, in fact, to that from the citron proper. Choose thick, sound rind; cut it in lengthwise strips an inch and a half wide, take off the green outer rind, and pare all soft parts inside. Drop it in strong brine, where it must stay at least three days, a week being better; then soak in clear water, changing it often until perfectly fresh. Wash clean, and scald for five minutes in weak alum water; then boil in ginger tea until a straw will pierce it. Now make a syrup of three pounds of sugar to each two of rind; add to each three pounds a pint of fresh ginger tea and the strained juice of three lemons, along with the shred peel boiled tender, as before directed; boil until it ropes, skimming constantly; then add the rind, and cook until clear all through. Take care not to scorch it, and keep at hand a kettle of boiling water; pour in a little from time to time as the syrup grows too thick. When the rind turns a pale translucent green through and through it is done. Skim it out carefully, and fill glass jars with it. Boil the syrup almost to candy height, and pour over.—Harper's Bazar.

"Save who can!" was the frantic cry of Napoleon to his army at Waterloo. Save health and strength while you can, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is advice that applies to all, both young and old. Don't wait until disease fastens on you; begin at once.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Church. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 303 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 333 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

AMOUNT OF SEED-WHEAT NEEDED.

Experiments in seeding with different quantities of wheat were begun on the farm belonging to the Ohio State University several years previous to the establishment of the Experiment Station. These experiments have been continued on the same farm by the Station, and the tenth experiment has recently been harvested.

In this experiment two varieties of wheat were used, Dietz and Velvet Chaff (Penquite's Velvet). The land on which they were sown had borne nine successive crops of wheat, having been dressed three times with barnyard manure during that period.

The land occupied by the Velvet wheat lies upon a gravel knoll, sloping to the west, the gravel coming in some places to within two or three feet of the surface. The wheat on this knoll has for several seasons been less vigorous than in any other parts of the field, and this season especially it was badly infested with the wheat midge, commonly known as red weevil.

The Dietz wheat grew upon land of a little better quality, and sloping to the east instead of the west. It was but slightly injured by insects. The results for this year are given in the following table, the yield being given in bushels per acre. The plots were exactly one-tenth acre each in size:

Quantity of Seed Per Acre.	Yield per Acre.
	Velvet. Bush.	Dietz. Bush.
2 Pecks.....	21 9	26 0
3 ".....	22 1	26 3
4 ".....	23 3	28 6
5 ".....	22 0	28 6
6 ".....	23 5	28 8
7 ".....	23 1	28 7
8 ".....	22 9	27 2
9 ".....	22 2	26 3
10 ".....	23 6	26 3

It will be observed that while the yields of the Velvet are irregular, they do not favor very thin seeding. In the case of the Dietz, however, the results are decisive. Every time the seed falls below four pecks or rises above seven there is a falling off in yield.

The following table gives the average results of this series of experiments for ten years:

Quantity of Seed Per Acre.	Yield per Acre.
2 Pecks.....	29 1 bushels
3 ".....	33 9 "
4 ".....	34 0 "
5 ".....	35 9 "
6 ".....	35 1 "
7 ".....	36 5 "
8 ".....	33 9 "
9 ".....	33 1 "

In the long run, seeding at from five to seven pecks has given a larger harvest than when less or more seed was used.

FATTEN YOUNG SWINE.

There is no question as to the economy of fattening hogs while young—making pig pork. The excessive cost of producing pork on hogs over eight or ten months old, or after they will dress 175 or 200 pounds, is emphasized by Professor Sanborn's experiments. He shows that the average Missouri hog is kept to such an age that he consumes food worth at least $3.50 in the bare effort to keep alive beyond the period at which he should have been killed. This makes a loss on all the hogs of Missouri of from $12,000,000 to $16,000,000, according to the number kept. Since the market demands light hogs, the folly of keeping pigs to twice the age at which they should be killed must be apparent to all.

GOOD AND POOR FERTILIZERS.

At a farmers' institute in Western New York, Mr. E. F. Dibble said that he had found from personal inspection that there are first-class fertilizers which would analyze all they claimed, and there were other brands which would not analyze half the value claimed. In purchasing fertilizers he advised to buy always on a contract that the article shall contain a given amount of each of the elements named, and have an analysis made, and if it is found that the article is short the buyer can demand a reduction from the cost price; also be sure to find out from what source the nitrogen is derived. Muriate of potash is more to be desired

CROUPY SOUNDS

At night, from baby's crib, are distracting to parents who are at a loss for a medicine equal to the emergency. Not so with those who have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. A dose of this medicine affords certain and speedy relief. To cure colds, coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, and the various disorders of the breathing apparatus, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal. It soothes the inflamed tissue, expectorates, and induces repose. Cap. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children were subject."

Call For

"I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequalled as a remedy for colds and coughs."—J. G. Gordon, M. D., Carroll Co., Virginia.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; Price $1; six bottles $5.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOHN G. FEE.

An Autobiography.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, postpaid, $1.00.

President J. Blanchard says: "Of all the books which the fall of slavery has produced, none surpasses this little biography of Mr. Fee, the instruction it affords as to the nature of slavery and its workings in families and churches, and, finally, in the war of States."

Until the first of November next, old or new subscribers to the Cynosure can secure this remarkable autobiography and the Cynosure one year for only $2.00.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

and is worth more than the South Carolina rock. Test your own fields and see what forms of fertilizers are required the most, and buy these. He uses complete fertilizers for wheat, and uses all the crops on the farm to make manure, as far as they are available; and we have a yield, he said, of twenty-six bushels of wheat per acre on an average.

Fertilizer at the stem of a plant is not as valuable as if mingled in the soil around it, a foot away or more, according to the size of the growing plant above ground. For trees it should extend even further than the largest branches.

DO NOT COOP THE HENS.

When a fowl is closely confined in a coop it will lose flesh instead of gaining, due to the desire to be at liberty, and also to perpetual fear. It seems to realize that it is a prisoner, and the effect on the fowl will be that its appetite falls. To fatten fowls, keep them in small yards, where they can move about. Even when fattening them they need some exercise, which promotes appetite and keeps them in health.—Exchange.

FATTENING CHICKS.

Just before sending chicks to market, put them in a small yard, not a coop, and feed them four times a day for a week, and they will sell at a much higher price. Give a variety of anything they will eat, but give a full meal twice a day of a mixture of corn meal and milk, and they will make rapid gain. Mirror and Farmer.

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS. ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escape-ments, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgia movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00
With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50
" " " (11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00
With the Cynosure one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer head, horse head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00
With the Cynosure one year, hunting case..... 23.00
With the Cynosure one year, open face..... 19.75

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The OFFICIAL REPORT of Gen. Hurst, Ohio Food Commis- sioner, shows Royal the Purest Baking Powder in the market.

Every other baking powder tested contained impurities—from 10.18 per cent. to 86.23 per cent. of their entire weight.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The receipts of the government since Sept. 1 amount to $28,385,000, being an excess of $4,287,000 over ordinary expenses during the same time. The net cash balance in the Treasury, inclusive of fractional silver and deposits in National banks, is stated at $42,000,000.

In the nine months of the year 1891 just closed the failures in the United States number 8,828, with liabilities of $136,000,000, as against 7,581 failures and $100,000,000 of liabilities for the three corresponding quarters of 1890.

The first snow of the season fell at Asinaboine, N. W. T., Wednesday.

At Indianapolis, Wednesday 300 Indiana saloon-keepers met and organized the Licensed Saloon-keepers' Union.

Threshers are in great demand in the Northwest.

Wednesday, the first National bank of Houtzdale, Pa., suspended payment on account of the embezzlement of $45,000 by the teller. It is said the depositors will be paid in full.

At a jubilee in Dubuque, Iowa, Wednesday, Bishop Hennessy attacked the public school system, saying that it was a monster which is fast devouring the Catholic youth.

At Shoals, Ind., Wednesday, Joseph Crabtree and William Walters were indicted for the murder of Stanford Freeman, Oct. 8, 1885.

Early Wednesday morning special American Express train No. 31 was robbed by two masked men between Little Falls and Utica. A package containing $5,000 was overlooked.

William Allen, aged 86 years, who spent a small fortune and fifty years of his life in efforts to ameliorate the condition of workingmen, was sent to the county poor-house at Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday.

Fire at Tomahawk, Wis., Wednesday, did $12,000 damage.

Bird & Wells' saw-mill at Wausaukee, Wis., was burned. Loss, $100,000; insurance about $50,000.

McCartney's Exchange Bank at Fort Howard, Wis., was robbed Tuesday night, $40,000 in cash and bonds being secured.

Near Kent, Ohio, Wednesday morning a passenger train and a freight train were in collision, resulting from the disobedience of orders of the crew of the freight train. Two men and a woman were killed and twenty-two persons were wounded.

The Chrisman (Ill.) Bank is closed and its principal officers are reported missing. The liabilities may reach $100,000, while the assets are very small.

During a heavy gale Monday night the tug Bertha Endress went down near Point Iroquois, Mich., with six men on board, and all perished.

Frank Sweeney was elected Grand Master of the Switchman's Mutual Benefit Association at Philadelphia, Tuesday.

Fire destroyed the Rockford oatmeal factory Tuesday. Loss, $40,000; insurance, $37,300.

Ed. Powell and James Leper were hanged at Gatesville, Texas, Tuesday, for the murder of John T. Mathiason.

Many persons are reported killed at the opening of the new land in Oklahoma.

The steamship Teutonic, of the White Star Line, reduced the eastward record Tuesday by making the trip from New York to Queenstown in 5 days 21 hours and 22 minutes.

Ignatius Donnelly, President of the Minnesota Farmers' Alliance, said Tuesday that he was in favor of the farmers holding their grain for thirty days more. He has recently issued a circular to that effect.

The Ulster County Bank at Kingston, N. Y., closed its doors on account of the stealings of $463,000 by Treasurer Ostrander and Matthew T. Trumbour, Assistant Treasurer.

Saturday morning Mrs. Grover Cleveland presented a little daughter to the ex-President.

Horace Hamlin drowned himself and three children at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Mrs. Frank Leslie was married in New York City, on Sunday evening, by Rev. Dr. Deems, to Wm. C. K. Wilde, of London, son of Sir Wm. Wilde, and brother of Oscar C. Wilde. The event was a surprise to New Yorkers. The happy pair will reside in the United States.

Leland Stanford, Jr. University, at Palo Alto, Cal., was formally opened Thursday, with an enrollment of 440 students.

Ten thousand railroad coal miners in the Pittsburg district struck for increased wages Thursday. Journeymen job printers of Pittsburg and Allegheny City struck for 7½ cents increase and shorter hours.

Friday, the Minnesota Supreme Court decided that dealing in grain futures is illegal.

FOREIGN.

The funeral of General Boulanger of France, took place Saturday. An immense crowd assembled hours before the time fixed for the interment ceremonies.

Official estimates place the yield of wheat in France at 81,889,070 hectoliters and of rye 21,152,317 hectoliters. A hectoliter is 2½ bushels.

Captain Younghusband, the English explorer, is reported to have been killed by the Russians in Pamir.

An eccentric South of France lady named Cabouret has left $1,500,000 to any Frenchman who penetrates further into the wilds of Africa than any one has before with 500 or more compatriots on condition that one-half of the caravan returns safely.

Advices from China report that the riots in the interior and at the North continue. Pirates have attacked villages and in one instance drove out the inhabitants and burned the houses.

An uprising against President Barillas is reported from Guatemala. Fighting in the capital continued for three days, during which time five hundred citizens and soldiers were slain. It is alleged that Barillas has stifled the revolt and has declared himself dictator.

Frosts destroyed the barley crop, the chief food product in the interior of Russia. Cattle are dying of the plague and famine threatens the inhabitants.

Advices from Russia say that in many provinces the peasants have no other food than chopped straw, bran, the bark of trees, and weeds. Many villages have been destroyed by fire and thousands of cattle have died of the plague.

Germany's wheat crop is 884,733 double quintals shorter than it was last year.

An insurrection in British Burmah has begun. Several minor conflicts have already occurred.

The great National Liberal Federation Congress formally opened at Newcastle, England, Thursday.

General Boulanger committed suicide by shooting himself through the head at the tomb of Mme. de Bonnemain at Brussels Wednesday.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

FREE OF BOYS & GIRLS UNDER 18
WORTH $45

If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle, (26 inch wheels), worth $45.00 they can obtain it free, without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1000 or more. We deliver Bicycle free anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

WANTED Women to take crochet work to do at home. City or country. Steady work. L. White & Co., 210 State St., Chicago, Ill.

TO YOU

FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or

SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or

SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or

McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of ½ cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The

Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart.

Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 5

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,120.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Notes and Comments... 1	REFORM NEWS:
Our Theological Seminaries..... 8	From the New England Agent; Bro. Fenton at Naperville; The Washington Agent in New York; Anti-Lodge Meeting in Elgin.....5,9
Sabbath Degeneracy... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Disgraceful Initiations at Galesburg..... 8	The Lodge God Rampant in Missouri; The Church and the Rum Traffic; A Question From Crank Windlass; From Arizona.....5,6
Masonry is Blasphemous 8	LITERATURE..... 6
Personal Mention..... 9	OBITUARY..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	IN BRIEF..... 7
Chorus of Levites (Poetry)..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
Stock-Gambling and Other Social Evils..... 1	THE N. C. A..... 7
His Majesty..... 2	THE HOME.....10
Three Questions..... 2	TEMPERANCE.....11
SELECTED:	BIBLE LESSON.....12
Terrible Conditions of the Jews in Russia... 2	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
Sophomoric Brutality... 4	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
Rev J. P. Stoddard..... 3	HOME AND HEALTH.....14
Acknowledgment..... 3	FARM NOTES.....15
The Situation in New England..... 3
To Our Readers in Wisconsin..... 9
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4

The seismic disturbance at Napa, California, last Sunday evening, was no respecter of property. People took to the streets in their night-dresses, chimneys toppled, drug-store fixtures suffered greatly, several buildings were shattered, including the fine Masonic temple, and the patients in the State Insane Asylum were almost uncontrollable with excitement. An earthquake is no trifle; it is sudden, short and decisive; and the worst of it is no special preparation for it can be made.

S. C. Kimball, Secretary of the New Hampshire Christian Association, gives notice, through the Christian Witness (New Market, N. H.), that the fifteenth annual meeting of the Association will be held at Alton, in that State, commencing Friday evening, November 20, and closing Monday evening, November 23. Further particulars are promised in the early future. Bro. Kimball asks that much prayer be made that this convention may be a season of refreshing from on high, and that the Lord may direct it in all things.

The Cynosure has often commended the New York Witness as a journal whose views of the lodge were uniformly Christian and patriotic. But a late issue of that paper quotes with understood approval from the Pacific Rural Press, urging every farmer to join the grange. We could wish the article had found a place in the Witness through some oversight. But its prominence precludes such a charitable judgment. The Witness should remember how this secret order swindled millions of farmers fifteen years ago; how it was led by known demagogues like Sol. Smith, of Illinois; how it accumulated millions of the farmers' money by which its nominal organization has been kept up in many States by a few officials who knew the value of salaries; how in the same State of California, whence the advice comes, the grange has influenced legislation to the hindrance of the churches, and keeps up its Saturday picnics, to the wide desecration of the Sabbathday. But these incidents are a trifle to the demoralization caused by its secret worship, foolish initiations, and familiarity it begets with paganism. God forbid that the Witness should become such an attachment to the secret lodge system as John B. Finch attempted to make the Prohibition party, but was stopped by the hand of God.

The New York Catholic Review of October 4th makes a curious admission: "Why," it asks, "should Catholics in the United States submit to the sneers and the calumnies of their enemies and refuse the powerful aid of the daily press as a weapon of defense? They claim to be eight or ten millions and cannot support one daily paper." "Catholics are without energy, they are weak, timid, shamefaced and influenced by human respect and a dislike to acknowledge that they are members of the Holy Roman Catholic, Apostolic Church." And no wonder, when they compare it with the more enterprising, energetic vitality that the Protestant religion gives the true worshiper.

CHORUS OF LEVITES.

[From the new Oratorio of "Israel in the Wilderness." Copyright, 1891, by Henry M. Hugunin. Printed by permission.]

To thee, our Father and our Guide,
Let praise arise;
Praise for thy love, whate'er betide,
From earth and skies!

Thus far thy gracious hand hath brought Us on our way,
Amid the wonders thou hast wrought
From day to day.

For these let all thy children bow
In prayer and praise,
And oft renew their solemn vow
In grateful lays.

Lord, we are weak, but thou art strong—
Our foes o'ercome;
And though, for sin, the way be long,
Oh, bring us home!

Chicago, Ill.

STOCK-GAMBLING AND OTHER SOCIAL EVILS.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

In the current number of the North American Review, Hutchinson, the Chicago wheat speculator, defends dealing in futures, namely, stock-gambling. He holds these speculators up as public benefactors, inasmuch as they stimulate the markets and advance prices. He admits that the benefits do not go to the producer, except to a limited extent, and the consumer pays a higher price. The only advantage accrues to the middle-men, who wish to have large incomes without working.

President D. S. Jordan, of Leland Stafford University, has an article in the October Forum on "Agricultural Depression and Waste of Time," in which he affirms that idleness and scandalous waste of time are the cause of a decline in farmers' incomes; "the presence among us of the yawning, relentless horde of men who would gain something for nothing." This is the dry-rot on our work-a-day life.

Last Monday the Ministers' Union of Baltimore discussed "The Enforcement of Sabbath Laws." Dr. Courtney, of the Madison Square M. E. church, read the paper. It was a masterly effort. It took high ground against the Sabbath

ANTI-SECRET STATE CONVENTIONS.

Members of the National Christian Association and all friends of Anti-Secrecy Reform are hereby invited to attend and participate in the approaching State Conventions in behalf of the cause:

KANSAS

The Kansas State Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will meet in Annual Convention on the 14TH OF OCTOBER, 1891, at DENISON, JACKSON COUNTY, KAN., beginning on Wednesday evening and continuing through Thursday, including the evening of that day. Delegates from other States will be cordially welcomed, and free entertainment will be provided. Rev. C. F. Hawley, the Western Agent, is engaged in furthering the interests of this Convention. Let there be a large attendance.

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin State Anti-Secrecy Convention is to be held at VERNON, WAUKESHA COUNTY, in the Reformed Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Isaiah Faris is pastor, beginning on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29TH, and continuing through the following day. Rev. H. H. Hinman is now in Wisconsin, endeavoring to create a general interest in this Convention among the friends of anti-secrecy reform, to whom a cordial invitation to attend is extended.

IOWA

The Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will hold its Annual State Convention on TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, THE 10TH AND 11TH OF NOVEMBER, at CRAWFORDSVILLE, WASHINGTON COUNTY. Rev. John V. Potts, the new Agent in Iowa, is laboring faithfully in behalf of this Convention in that State. A large attendance is desired.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND

The New England Annual Convention will be held at Boston on WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention is Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stalwart Reform preacher. Rev. J. P. Stoddard is exerting his influence to make it a notable gathering of the friends of reform throughout the Eastern States.

ILLINOIS

At present nothing seems to be definitely settled as to the location and date of the Annual State Anti-Secrecy Convention, but it will be held AT AN EARLY DAY. Due announcement of all necessary details will be made soon. Rev. William Fenton, of Minnesota, is now engaged in creating an interest in its behalf.

profanation of the times. The "Sunday train," "Sunday paper," "Sunday saloon," "Sunday theatre," were alike denounced as enemies of the Sabbath. He insisted that judgment must begin at the house of God. Until the professed followers of Jesus are willing to honor the Sabbath, we need not expect the world to regard our testimony. There was one weak point. He said we must insist upon our civil Sabbath; not because it was proclaimed at Sinai as God's law, but because it is a law of nature, man's physical, mental, moral and spiritual being demanding one day in seven for rest, in addition to the rest of sleep. It is strange that he did not reflect that the decalogue is simply a record of the law of nature written on man's heart. Every precept of that law has its necessity in the very constitution of our nature. And unless we put the authority of God behind the law, it will not bind the conscience.

Minos, the lawgiver of Crete, claimed to be the son of Jupiter, and to have received his laws from his reputed father, Lycurgus. The Spartan lawgiver claimed the oracle at Delphi as authority for his laws. Numa claimed the nymph Egeria as authority for his laws. These facts indicate that there is an ineradicable conviction in the human soul that laws will not find the conscience unless they come from God. Unless the authority of Sinai be placed behind the Sabbath law it will be disregarded. That truth needs to be emphasized to-day. This is a materialistic age. If a man steals, the whole community is aroused to capture and punish the thief. But the Sabbath is desecrated without any protest. Everybody knows it; nobody cares. Man's rights are all in all; God's rights are nothing at all. Before the war, the man who pleaded the rights of the slave was rotten-egged. Now, the man who pleads God's rights is forsaken.

"He's a slave who would not be
In the right with two or three.
He's a slave who would not choose
Hatred, slander, and abuse,
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth he needs must think."

The Grand Jury, two weeks ago, advised the licensing of houses of ill-fame. One week ago, the M. E. preachers' meeting protested against the iniquity and appointed a committee to bring a formal report expressing their indignation. Yesterday the committee reported and their report was unanimously adopted. It reads: "We protest vehemently, and in the name of purity and chastity, against any law, or license, or tax, or an insufficient fine, that would regulate, instead of suppress, the revolting social evil prevailing in the city." That has the true ring. We say, Amen. But why is it that while men recognize the complicity in the crime of adultery in licensing the "social evil," they do not see that licensing the liquor traffic makes them particeps criminis in that sum of all villainies? Vigorous protests were made from pulpit and press, all over this land, against licensing the Louisiana lottery. Well, if it was such a monster crime for Louisiana to collect $1,250,000 license fee from the lottery, why is it not a greater crime for Ohio to collect $4,000,000 tax, and Pennsylvania $5,000,000 license from the saloon? People look at the "social evil" and the lottery through the telescope, but at the saloon, they reverse the instrument and reduce the object to the vanishing point. If the State should prohibit one public moral evil, then it is under obligation to prohibit all public moral evils. If the brothel should be wiped out, so should the saloon. If the lottery must go, so should the gambling-den. If it is a crime to steal $50, it is that much greater a crime to rob the public of $5,000,000 by running a corner on the markets. If the State should punish the thief, it should not be permitted to let the stock-gambler escape. If it is a punishable offense for a poor woman to sell good books on the Sabbath, it is a tremendous crime for millionaires to run their railroad trains on that day. If it is wrong for the farmer to plough on the Sabbath, it is wrong for the newspaper company to issue the Sunday paper on the Sabbath day. The Saviour severely rebuked the Pharisees for making moral distinctions which did not exist, and he will not suffer our infamous procedure to go unrebuked.

Last Sabbath afternoon I preached in the Hampdon Methodist Protestant church, Rev. J. W. Gray, pastor. This was a union service, the

M. E. and Presbyterian congregations uniting. On Monday I addressed the M. E. preachers' meeting. There were about 100 in attendance. They had no topic selected, and kindly gave me the full hour. At the close "a rising vote of thanks and God-speed in the work" was given. We regarded this as providential; thanked God, and took courage. Our program for the week is as follows: Wednesday evening, lecture in the Presbyterian church of Waverly; Thursday evening, at Gilford Avenue M. E. church, Rev. J. Fred Heisse, pastor; Friday evening at Faith Presbyterian church, Rev. J. H. Campbell, pastor; next Sabbath afternoon before the Y. M. C. A., and on Monday morning at the Ministers' Union of Baltimore. So you see the door is wide open.

Baltimore, Md.

HIS MAJESTY.

BY TANCHICANAH.

This is a common expression, to address to earthly beings, but among those connected with the household of faith, generally known as Christians, the appellation properly applies to the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who is the Supreme Ruler over all, and one who has no successor. His character, though the greatest known among the children of men, arose in poverty and continued as such, even through his earthly pilgrimage, till death closed, in a bodily form, his most noble career. He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and, like a tender plant, he grew in dry ground, but being full of compassion, every affliction was banished by his expressions, and comfort followed in their wake. Where can brevity express a nobler emphasis than his addressed to the widow of Nain: "Sister, be of good cheer" (implying, be of good faith), and causing the bier to halt. Touching it, he addressed the dead young man, saying: "Young man, arise;" and he arose, as did the body of Lazarus, and also the daughter of Jairus, who arose at his expression: "Talitha, cumi," or "Damsel, arise."

Faith—most noble, giant faith—can accomplish everything, from the passing of a camel through the eye of a needle to removing mountains, etc.; and, taking these expressions as standard, are they not worth living for and even dying for? God says that he will try man "as gold tried, seven times, and as fine silver." Who, I ask, is willing to stand the first test? Man may boast of belonging to earthly associations, but who is willing to live and to die for Christ is the question. Echo answers who?

THREE QUESTIONS.

BY REV. T. C. MOFFATT.

"If the average of power in the pulpit is high, or if men are willing to follow a leadership that is not fully trained, why did nearly one hundred of our churches die last year?"

"Why are about eighteen hundred of them dependent, in part, upon the Home Missionary Society?"

"Why are there so large a proportion of our ministers whose terms of service are so short as to involve all the evils of the itineracy with none of its advantages?"—Pres. C. A. Blanchard.

The death of churches is, to be sure, a melancholy subject. Any one, however, who will carefully investigate the matter will find, I think, that the training, or lack of training, of their ministers has little to do with the case. Many churches die simply because they ought never to have been born. Some have arisen out of quarrels in other churches, and when the stimulus of anger has partially been withdrawn, they decay and die. Many a church, too, in this Western country, has been started where there was little hope of growth, and if it has not died it has still remained in the care of the Home Missionary Society. More than this, so uncertain have been the prospects of our communities, that even where it seemed to the most careful men wise to start a church the event has proved them mistaken; the anticipated growth has not come; the towns have lost population, and business failures have weakened the ability of the churches to do work.

Take the case, for instance, of this town. A few years ago we had over 1,200 inhabitants; the last census gave us 729. This is a fair sample of the shrinkage of towns in this Western country. The cause was the building up of the towns beyond the capacity of the country to support them; overdoing it, as it is called. Three years ago we had a Baptist church here, with perhaps thirty members, many of them good workers. But they scattered, some going to Oklahoma, some to Colorado, and some elsewhere to get a livelihood. A neighboring minister came, succeeded in getting together three members who gave fifteen letters, and the church "died". This is the story of many churches, Congregational and others. What advantage would the fullest ministerial training be in such a case? These members scatter, some never to help any more in Christian work, and some to be gathered in at a phenomenal rate by some "successful" minister in some booming new town elsewhere. Church enterprises are subject to the same exigencies as other enterprises, and no ministerial training can arrange it otherwise.

Theological training is an excellent thing, but it is far from being the only important element in ministerial success. There are two great qualifications which in the practical field go farther than all others put together to ensure success. They are personal magnetism and eloquence. Whether or not these qualifications can be gotten by any training is an interesting question, but they are certainly the things needed. Until our seminaries can equip their men with these qualifications, I suppose those will be rewarded with the success who have them by nature; and it must be said that if there is not an adequate supply of efficient ministers, it is because the Lord has not created an adequate amount of raw material.

There is, of course, always an abundance of unconverted people about our communities, and to the casual on-looker it seems as if the churches, especially the home missionary churches, might gather them in and so be built up. Can the theological seminaries give us some recipe for converting hardened infidels? Can they tell us how to produce conviction for sin in men who say that they have never done anything they are sorry for, or, if so, that it is so very slight that it will not be taken into the account? This is the material upon which we have to work if we are to get the churches out from under the care of the Home Missionary Society. Please tell us where we shall get the training for it?

Douglass, Kan.

TERRIBLE CONDITION OF THE JEWS IN RUSSIA.

The condition of the Jew in Russia is even worse than the reports which have come to us. A foreign correspondent of the New York Times, who has just taken a two months' journey through Russia, extending from St. Petersburg in the north and Nijni-Novgorod in the east to Odessa in the south, declares from what he saw that the persecution of the Jew is just beginning. They are banished to Poland by the thousands. The writer concludes: "New-comers and natives wrestle together here in a confused nightmare of despair for very existence, like rats imprisoned by a rising flood. Out of this tragic hurly-burly some three or four thousand are able each week to fight their way over the tops of the others and escape over the frontier. This panic-stricken stream of fugitives is all that Europe sees of the persecution. Of the horrors which remain behind, it has hardly the vaguest ideas."

Some figures recently published in the Chicago Tribune contained food for thought. The following table shows the number of inhabitants to each office holder, saloon, etc.:

Office-holders.....	120
Saloon.....	217
Grocery.....	377
Lawyer.....	450
Doctor.....	700
Meat Market.....	770
Cigar store.....	900
Drug store.....	2,000

It would seem that Chicago is in no danger of a dearth of office-holders. There need also be no drought with a saloon to every 217 people, men, women and children. Right here is to be found the one fruitful source of poverty, crime, licentiousness and anarchy which are making the city notorious. The license fee is $500.

REV. J. P. STODDARD.

BY EX-PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

The above name is familiar to the readers of the Cynosure. In 1836, Israel Stoddard and wife, with their five children, made their way from Goshen, Conn., to Lafayette, Stark county, Ill. They arrived in the month of March. It would be interesting to know how they made that long journey in the winter season, when there were no stages or railroads. Like thousands of others at that day, they must have made a moving home of a covered wagon, with all-out-doors for a kitchen, cooking their meals by the roadside, where there was any road, and piloted by an exploring committee where there was no road. An aged grandmother went with them; and little James Philemon, their five-year-old—then taking his first lessons in life—was the infantry of this prairie vanguard. They put up a log-cabin in the grove, where the boys shot grey squirrels. The parents must have accumulated some money in Connecticut, as a respectable cottage home soon rose in the prairie near by, where plenty of "chickens" were to be had by their musket, without the trouble of "setting the hens."

Dear old Grandma Stoddard, a Quakeress, insisted on occupying their grove-cabin alone after the family had built and moved into the "new house." Mrs. Stoddard was a Rhode Island Baptist. She died lately at Galva, Ill., where she lived with her children till near a hundred years old. At the age of 95, she sent five dollars to the National Christian Association, and wrote prose and poetry against the secret lodge altars.

"Little Jamie" grew to be a large young man. By that time the prairies grew large crops of grain, and threshing machines followed. Young Stoddard, yet in his teens, commanded a gang of hands and team of horses, and made money at threshing. He added forty acres to their small farm; built a barn, and spent fifty dollars in one winter in fandangoes, before he ever entered a meeting-house with pews.

He was now 21. The Galesburg College Colony had started in the adjoining county the year his parents came into the prairies; and schools growing up around him began to make ignorance disreputable. Stoddard had spent his money, but he had hands and heart, and an aspiring temper, inherited from his mother, and religious convictions from a Quaker and Baptist ancestry. He left home on foot and walked to Geneseo, where there was a small academy; but as it did not fill his conceptions, he walked on till he came to Galesburg and entered the preparatory department of Knox College. This was in March, 1853. He there found Christ as his personal Saviour next year, and united with the First Church of Christ in that place.

After completing three years of college study at Knox, he went to Wheaton College in 1859; entered Senior, and graduated with its first class. He preached and pursued theological study for a year, and then became pastor of the Congregational church in Byron, Ill., where he remained some ten years; when, on the invitation of the Executive Committee of the National Christian Association, he commenced lecturing against secret lodges, and has continued in connection with that body ever since.

By his persevering endeavors the Carpenter fund was raised, and the Carpenter building in Chicago secured to the cause; and, by his agency, the building in Washington, D. C., was procured, the importance of which, though vast, is yet but imperfectly realized. Rome knows the importance of having men at that post.

Mr. Stoddard was married in 1863 to Catherine Lucretia Blanchard, who was killed by the cars June 21, 1876, leaving him an interesting family of six children. His eldest son is agent of the N. C. A. in Washington, D. C., and his eldest daughter, Mary Irene, is the wife of a young clergyman preaching in Chicago, Rev. Mr. Field.

After nine years of single life, Mr. Stoddard was married a second time, to Mrs. Anna E. Tanner, who is now associated with her husband in the New England agency for the N. C. A., and the readers of the Cynosure have, weekly, the pleasure of reading of their progress and rejoicing in their success.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

BY REV. J. P. STODDARD.

Thoughts may be expressed in words by one who has the rare gift of setting "apples of gold in pictures of silver," but the emotions of the soul belong to a higher realm. Without question, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," but the "abundance" of a full heart is unspeakable by either tongue or pen. The soul, stirred with deep emotions of joy, sorrow or gratitude, is powerless to express that which is known only to itself and God. The recipient of favors often realizes the poverty of language when attempting to convey the grateful sentiments of the heart, and afterwards regrets that the word spoken was not truer to the feeling prompting it.

In acknowledging the generous offering of our New England friends, I may not hope for an exception to this inexorable rule. May I not, however, rely on the good-will that prompted the giving to excuse the defects of an honest though imperfect expression of gratitude for the gift.

A plan, started several weeks ago, culminated, on the evening of Sept. 24, in a perfect surprise to Mrs. Stoddard and myself. While laboring in Vermont we were summoned home by a dispatch: "Cancel all engagements and come home at once." The occasion for so peremptory a message we could only conjecture, but deemed it best to take the first "express" for Boston. A kindly greeting awaited us on our arrival, and we were assured that nothing serious had occurred, and appearances indicated nothing unusual in our home. We accepted an invitation to take tea with a friend, and were surprised, on returning to our rooms, to find our table spread with articles of value and surrounded by a score or more of happy faces, each smiling a cordial greeting, while extending the hand of welcome. To Bro. A. A. Hoyt, of the Independent Christian, had been delivered the key to unlock the mystery. After a few pleasant and well-chosen sentences, he called attention to different articles on the table, suggesting their proper use, and then, producing a package containing gold, silver and greenbacks, he presented to Mrs. Stoddard and myself $104.75 in cash, along with other valuables, as a free-will offering in aid of our efforts to bring to light the hidden things of dishonesty. The surprise was complete. Neither of us had anticipated anything of the kind, or had the least suspicion of the real purpose for which we were recalled until confronted by the smiling faces of our friends and the table with its contents.

Friends remained to pass a pleasant evening in chat and song, which all seemed to enjoy, and departed, leaving with us increased responsibilities and added means to meet them.

Dear friends, we accept your offering with gratitude, and assume the trust implied, in humble reliance upon Him who has helped us hitherto, for wisdom to employ it in warning men of their danger and saving some from the snares spread in secret for the unwary.

By special request, the names of some of the donors are withheld, but we trust that all are written in the Lamb's book of life. Without the slightest reflection upon others, we may credit Brother and Sister Powers and Sister Flagg with taking the laboring oar and successfully engineering the scheme, to which others gave hearty and liberal support. Our earnest prayer is that the major blessing promised to the giver may be richly bestowed upon each donor, and that you will aid us by your prayers and counsels in our endeavor to warn men against the delusive pledges of the lodge and point them to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Respectfully and gratefully your fellow laborers,

J. P. and Mrs. A. E. STODDARD.

THE SITUATION IN NEW ENGLAND.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 3, 1891.

Permit me, while waiting for a boat, to say a word in reference to New England.

The Annual Meeting of the New England Christian Association will (D. V.) be held in Boston Dec. 9 and 10, 1891. Accommodations have been kindly tendered, but the church where the sessions are to be held will be announced later.

Clouds hang about our work still, but they are becoming luminous, and prospects beckon us on to a signal victory "in the name of the Lord."

1. Godly men and women, deeply concerned for the welfare of Zion, are praying and laboring for an ingathering of the people and an outpouring of the Spirit, such as we have never witnessed at any previous convention.

2. The "fallow-ground is broken up," and the subject is fairly before the people, many of whom have tasted the sweets of secret benefit orders: that is, orders through which the few are "benefited" (1) by robbing and swindling the many.

3. Besides a considerable number of prominent business men, there are more than a score of ministers in Boston who understand and admit: (a) That the 684 secret societies given in the Boston Directory are rivals of the prayer and social meetings of the church, and that their practical effect is to dissipate the spiritual energy of Christ's body. (b) That the religion of the older and more thoroughly organized secret orders, such as the Jesuits, the Freemasons and the Odd-fellows, is a false religion, in which many are trusting to the great peril if not the final perdition of their souls. (c) That God's Word is set at naught when "believers" become "unequally yoked together" in covenant bonds of brotherhood with the profane and unbelieving in secret conclaves. (d) That the "bride of Christ" is plundered of her resources, by being robbed of men, energy, and means, which Christ needs to spread the Gospel of his kingdom.

To all who believe that there is no pope divinely commissioned to lord it over God's heritage on earth; who believe that the dram-shop should be abolished and our public schools remain; to all who believe there is one Master of the conscience and Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, and repudiate the many masters, worshipful masters and supremes of the lodge; to all who recognize their responsibility to God as supreme, and to their fellow men as equals, and have courage to face a wily and dangerous adversary—a most cordial invitation is extended to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

God's call is for brave men and women. Let such respond in person whenever it is practicable; if not, by letter; that his convention may be filled with the valiant, shielded by faith, and armed with the Word, while the "fearful and unbelieving" remain silent at home.

J. P. STODDARD,
New England Sec. N. C. A.

HON. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Speech in the Senate: "Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow men. Swear, sir! I, a man, an American citizen, a Christian, swear to submit myself to the guidance and direction of other men, surrendering my own judgment to their judgments, and my own conscience to their keeping! No. No, sir. I know quite well the fallibility of my own judgment, and my liability to fall into error and temptation. But my life has been spent in breaking the bonds of the slavery of men. I, therefore, know too well the danger of confiding power to irresponsible hands, to make myself a willing slave."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The Catholic question—A woman's beer saloon in Boston—The decay of sectarianism—The Epworth knockings repeated.

It is noticeable that the Republicans of Massachusetts are beginning to discover that the public school question is really an issue; but the Democrats, with the proverbial blindness of their party, cannot (or will not) see it, although their platform—and, by the way, I wonder how many Democratic voters have stopped to read that very long and intricate document—declares for "free schools supplied with free text-books." This is a trifle ambiguous. Their statement, further on, that "our system of public education is dear to the hearts of all our people—a sacred trust to be most jealously guarded," sounds clearer. But when they "denounce the attempt to drag it into the arena of politics, at this time, as a wicked device of unscrupulous partisanship, to raise a false issue on the subject in regard to which all the people are united," the cloven foot is revealed. Their attempt to charge the men and women who are so nobly resisting the encroachments of the Jesuits on our schools, with "dragging into the arena of politics" a question that the Catholic party then selves first forced upon us, is the old fable of the wolf and the lamb. But when it comes to the question of Prohibition, the two old parties present only a choice "between the devil and the deep sea." At the headquarters of the Democratic Convention at Worcester, wine and beer, as well as the harder drinks, flowed like water. So much for one of the great parties that is bidding for the people's votes; and as for the other, the preliminary scenes attending the Republican Convention at the Hub are said to have been equally disgraceful.

The Woman's Voice calls attention to the existence of a Woman's Beer Saloon in the very heart of the city of Boston. It bears the innocent-appearing sign over the door of Ladies' Dining Room, and only by a personal visit could one learn that it was a saloon where throngs of young women go to drink larger beer and be started on their way to ruin. Immense quantities of this drink are said to be sold, but little or no food. If such places cannot be suppressed, there might at least be a law forbidding them to masquerade under false colors. Did this place in question purport to be on its sign what it really is—a Woman's Beer Saloon, it would not be half so dangerous to unwary girls and women, while some of our careless Christian (?) voters might, as they read it, be wakened to realize, as some one has so pertinently put it, that "low license asks for their sons, but high license wants their daughters, too."

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, the English evangelist, now in Boston, bore very strong testimony at the People's church in favor of unsectarian work. Speaking of his labors in London, at the West End, he said: "I did not try to make the people Methodists, but Christians. . . . We can never do the great work that awaits us as Christians unless denominational lines are subordinated to the great cause of the evangelization of the world." And the applause which followed this remark was a proof how the great heart of humanity is beginning to thrill, as the sublime words of our Saviour's prayer, "that they may be one, even as we are one," are slowly growing to be no longer a distant vision but a near reality. There is not only a revolt against sectarianism, but against the sectarian machinery which has hitherto been thought necessary. "Our missionary boards have done a grand work, but their usefulness is on the wane," remarked an aged Congregational minister to me a short time since. "The Lord is showing unto the people a more excellent way." The fact that of all the thousands of faith missionaries now in the foreign field, none have, to my knowledge, complained of insufficient support, shows what a decided reaction has taken place in favor of more apostolic methods of giving.

Is it to show us in what low esteem Providence holds riches, that they are distributed in such seemingly hap-hazard fashion? It seems as if they were regarded in that upper realm much as we would look upon a heap of glittering tinsel that we toss to a group of children, without any care how it is appropriated. The Hopkins-Searles will case affords food for a good many moral reflections kindred to the above. Surely, if the spirit of the late Mark Hopkins is a witness to the contest going on in the courts over his millions, the most blatant anarchist would hardly wish him a sorer punishment. Mrs. Searles' spiritualism seems to have been the weak-minded vagaries of a woman who had come into the possession of enormous wealth without the least moral or mental fitness for such a responsibility. It was one with her craze for building vast palatial residences, knowing not who should occupy them after her.

Speaking of spiritualism: We are all familiar with the strange doings at the Epworth parsonage—the mysterious knockings that drove sleep from the eyes of the Wesley household, and other occult performances that to this day remain a well-attested but unaccounted-for phenomenon. I heard a story, the other day, of something curiously similar in the experience of a dear friend who was one of the first teachers to the freedmen, and who in future years, when her biography gets written, will be known as the Mary Lyon of the colored race. Her life of prayer and faith sounds more like romance than sober reality; but the noble institution of which she is principal, the only school for colored girls at the South which is modeled on the Mt. Holyoke plan, is its practical outcome. The following strange experience happened one vacation, when she was left alone in the school building, her only companion being a young lady, also a teacher, from Indiana. On the second night of the latter's stay, both had retired, their sleeping-rooms being separated by a wide hall running the entire length of the house, when Miss D— was startled by the appearance of her guest on the threshold, pale and agitated, and begging to share her room with her as she could not possibly sleep in her own, being disturbed by a constant knocking kept up on the walls as by invisible hands. The noises finally extended into the hall and Miss D—'s own room; but a woman who had faced the Ku-Klux was not to be frightened by spooks, or any spookish manifestations. Going deliberately to a corner of the hall where the mysterious rapping was loudest, she called out, in clear, distinct tones: "What is this? What does this mean?" The only reply was the instant jerking of two chairs that were standing there upward towards the ceiling. Claspng her trembling friend in her arms, Miss D— had recourse to the weapon of All-Prayer, and in an hour or two the uncanny noises ceased, dying away as inexplicably as they had begun. But the mystery, after all, lies here: Granting that it was a manifestation of demon power, what object could possibly have been gained by frightening two lone women and breaking up their night's rest? It is like the foolish mischief of school-boys. This utter lack of any adapting of means to ends, or of what we should call the reasoning faculty, leads one to think that if spiritualism be indeed the work of evil spirits, they must be of a very low grade of intelligence.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7, 1891.

The opening of the Ecumenical Conference in this city to-day is regarded as one of the most important and far-reaching events that have taken place in the history of the Methodist church on the Western Hemisphere. All branches of the Methodist church, with a single exception, are represented at the Conference. The single exception is the Evangelical Association, which, according to the apportionment of delegates made by a joint committee presided over by Bishop Foss, would have had nine delegates. These it asked to be excused from sending, on the ground that its General Conference would be in session at the same time as the Ecumenical Conference. Fears are expressed here that the internal difficulties of the Association may have had something to do with its not being represented at the great gathering of the followers of John Wesley.

The Conference, which is composed of 200 foreign and 300 American delegates, was formally called to order this morning in the Metropolitan church. When the first Ecumenical Conference was held, in London, ten years ago, the Lord Mayor of that city entertained the delegates at his residence by tendering them a reception. One of Washington's ex-Mayors—Mr. Matthew G. Emory—now a prominent and wealthy business man, and for many years a member of the Methodist church, has tendered the delegates a reception, which will be held this evening, and those of the delegates who were fortunate enough to have attended the first conference will be able to make a comparison of the hospitality extended by the chief official of royal England's principal city with that of a private citizen of the capital of this Republic. The delegates are all being handsomely entertained here: the foreigners from a general fund, and the Americans at private expense. This conference has no legislative functions, its sole object being to promote fellowship. There are to be two sessions daily, except Sunday, during the two weeks beginning to-day, and admission to the public is to be by ticket only, the tickets being issued under the supervision of the local church authorities.

It is pleasant to chronicle the fact that Rev. Dr. T. S. Hamlin, President Harrison's pastor, delivered an able sermon last Sunday against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. He takes issue with the gentleman whose opinion I quoted last week, as follows: "In the discussion in the religious press and on the platform, it is presumed that the managers of this Exposition want the doors opened on Sunday, and that they intend to open them. In other words, it is taken for granted that the members of the board are antagonistic to our American traditions. This is unfair. These men ought to be given credit for reflecting, fairly and honestly, the wishes of the people, whose will should control in the decision." The speaker called attention to the fact that the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia was a great success, although it was not opened on Sunday. He contended that the argument used about opening the gates on Sunday to give the workmen a chance to visit the Exposition was a fallacious one, as all employers would allow them time to visit it during the week. But here is the most significant statement made by Dr. Hamlin: "I have heard it stated by a gentleman, who vouched for its truthfulness, that the brewers of Chicago offered to subscribe half a million dollars to the guarantee fund conditioned upon the Exposition being opened on Sunday. It is a significant and pitiful fact that not one of you regards this statement as incredible. It is precisely in line with things the men engaged in the manufacture and sale of liquor are constantly doing."

The annual meeting of two local organizations—the District of Columbia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the Young Men's Christian Association—which are making themselves important factors in the struggle for the moral reformation of the national capital, were held this week. Good showings were made by both of them for the year's work just closed, although the members of both are not entirely satisfied with what has been actually accomplished, and it is well that they are not; for with satisfaction would have come lethargy and stagnation, whereas what is needed is increased energy.

Mrs. Harrison has returned to the White House which has at last been evacuated by the force of painters, frescoers and decorators who have had possession of it for several months, and the old house is, for the first time in many years, as clean and bright as a new pin from cellar to attic. This week there has been an unusual number of visitors, as the Washington people are all crowding it to examine and pass their criticisms upon the new decorations in the green room, the dining-room, and the ceiling over the main lobby. The criticism is mostly favorable, but not entirely so.

SOPHOMORIC BRUTALITY.

The Independent does not seem to have much faith in the efforts of college faculties to prevent the Sophomores hazing the Freshmen, declaring "that discipline does very little good, and that talking is often throwing only leaves instead of stones." More force is seen in the work of the officers of the law, and the suggestion is made that such offenses as assault and battery and the destruction of property be punished by civil processes, adding that "striped clothes will do more to make hazing disreputable than rustication or expulsion." If so, let them be put on, for the brutal habit referred to ought to be stopped. Students should be taught that they have no license to be inhuman and barbarous.—Christian Standard.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, October 8, 1891.

While I write, the closing session of a six days' convention is in progress. The meetings, from first to last, have been in the Spirit, and many have been lifted higher in the mount of blessing.

To-day's meetings were with special reference to missions, home and foreign. I cannot say positively, but think, there were ten or more who enter foreign mission fields, expecting to sail to different posts before the close of this month.

When a call was given for those who wished to consecrate themselves to God in work at home or abroad where he should assign them fields of labor, more than a score came forward, and were made the subjects of prayer, with the laying on of hands. One who had been "entered, passed and raised" as a Mason made a clean breast of the whole thing during the convention, and entered upon his work a free and accepted man in Christ Jesus. The lodge was spoken of with just as much freedom as any other sin during the entire convention, and no word of objection was given; but, on the contrary, HEARTY AMENS were heard on every hand.

Bro. A. A. Hoyt, who has labored assiduously in arranging for and carrying on the meetings, was not a little surprised by the presentation of a suit of clothes and an overcoat, the gift of twenty-one of his friends, who not only spoke but gave as "they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The clothing house of Shuman & Co., corner of Washington and Winter streets, Boston, was the largest contributor, in a reduction of $7.50 on the price of the goods.

A feature of the meeting worthy of note was free entertainment for all. As I am on confidential terms with the lady who had this department in charge I could give many details, but it is sufficient to say that there was very little in sight when they began, but answered prayer brought enough and to spare for every meal, so that when the seventy-five or more had eaten to their full of the last supper, there were baskets of fragments and whole loaves left. Moved by some power, people would come in and inquire: "Is anything needed? If so, what?"—and were informed that very thing came. It was wonderful and blessed.

Many who attended this gathering are hoping to be present at the New England Convention Dec. 9th and 10th, and our earnest prayer is that the blessed Holy Spirit may be with us in yet greater power at our annual meeting.

J. P. STODDARD.

BRO. FENTON AT NAPERVILLE.

Arriving at Naperville, Illinois, on Thursday evening, the 8th inst., a cordial greeting in the name of anti-secrecy awaited me in the person of Rev. Henry F. Kletzing, Professor of Mathematics in the Northwestern College. Prof. Sindlinger kindly entertained me at his home during my sojourn in the village. The chapel was well filled with students and a few citizens. The president, Rev. H. J. Kiekhoefer, introduced the exercises of the evening, and the theme was, the blasphemy of the Masonic assumption that Christ was a Freemason, and its analogy to that accusation of the Scribes that Christ had an "unclean spirit"; which accusation led the Saviour to utter the warning against the fearful crime of blaspheming the Holy Ghost.

This interesting college, of between 200 and 300 students, with its theological department, is tolerably well fortified against secret societies, there being none of the Greek-letter fraternities in connection with it, and the faculty a unit against secretism. Yet there are among the students a few Odd-fellows, reminding one of Milton's description of Satan: "squat like toads at the ear of Eve," the very name, Odd-fellow, being suggestive of outlawry, and is self-confessed devil-worship of the ancient mysteries; the lodge worship being borrowed from that particular form of ancient diabolism. (See "Odd-fellows' Manual.")

On Friday morning I had the pleasure of a visit with the President Emeritus of the college, Rev. Augustine A. Smith, who, although 85 years of age, still retains his mental vigor and buoyancy of spirit and teaches his class of sixty students, giving them two lessons a week in elocution. He is fully alive to the great importance of instructing the people in regard to the true character of secret societies, and their pernicious and wicked effect upon society. WM. FENTON.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT IN NEW YORK.

SCHUYLER'S LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Though I have not reported for some weeks, I have not been idle. There is necessarily much sameness about an agent's work. Reading a report of details is at times tedious and uninteresting. The last part of September was spent at home. I visited a number of our colored friends and others in the interest of our paper, and spoke in some meetings.

Mr. J. S. Sloane and wife, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., made us a visit, on their wedding tour, which we enjoyed very much. They are both Christians, and members of the Covenanters church. Mr. Sloane subscribed for the Cynosure, as all young married men should.

While looking after N. C. A. interests in Vine-land, N. J., I was privileged to meet several who remembered the mobbing of Pres. C. A. Blanchard, for speaking against lodgery in that place.

A night was spent with friends Edwin Sellw and wife, Philadelphia. Their hospitality still holds good, though tested many times. I regretted that time did not permit a call on our many friends in the "City of Brotherly Love." Eleven hours' ride from Philadelphia brought me to Richfield Springs, N. Y., where I got a stage for this place. This is my second visit to Schuyler's Lake. My first is well-known to all newspaper readers in this section, as it was extensively reported in the Richfield Mercury. The correspondent from this place, Dr. Fitch, being a Mason, and not a Christian, used language in reporting me which hurt himself more than any one else.

He was very wrathful, and his time proved to be very short, as he is gone now. So far as I can learn, the lodge has not had a candidate for two years, unless the drunkard-maker on the corner has been acquired within that time. He is thought to have been the latest catch. This man sends men reeling out of his murderous establishment daily. Two men lay dead-drunk near the school-house a few days since. I have been watching Schuyler's Lake ever since I have known it. It is a good example of what Masonry, whisky and Universalism can do. There was a time, I am told, when the churches here were well-attended; but as the lodge has gone up, the churches have gone down. Vice and immorality of almost every description flaunts itself in public. Cards are played on the street-corners. Profane swearing, gambling, dancing, Sabbath desecrating, etc., are carried on here without, seemingly, a blush of shame.

Two years ago I found but one regular religious service, and that in the M. E. church. That church was then open for preaching and lecturing against the lodge. It was found that thirteen dollars paid by Masons outside of this church to its support has since been withheld, professedly because of my lectures, as they have hard work to raise one hundred dollars per year for their pastor. Some of the brethren of this church feel that it would not be wise to offend lodge men any more by further lectures. The doors of the Baptist church have been open since I was here, and Elder Garlick, an elderly gentleman, has attempted the task of revivifying it. We hope and pray he may be successful. Some are already angry with his preaching, I am told. If he continues preaching as he did last Sabbath, there is hope of conversion, which is the only hope of the church. His text, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," was applied to Schuyler's Lake. He said he sometimes thought he preached about Adam and Eve too much, and not enough about Schuyler's Lake. He then spoke of the terrible harvest being reaped in Schuyler's Lake as the result of the sowing of other years. He mentioned a long catalogue of vices being practiced by citizens here. Though he did not mention Masonry, he condemned profane swearing and many lodge vices which any one so disposed could apply to it. Next Sabbath he urged that there be a large attendance as he purposed to answer the question "Who is to blame?" referring to the sad and heart-sickening condition of affairs here.

The elder said he would have no objection to my speaking against the lodge in his church, but referred me to the trustees. As some of the trustees were Masons, and not members of the church, and as much of the elder's meagre support came from these men, I was told very emphatically that the church would not be granted for anything that would be likely to offend Ma-

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE

"THE LODGE GOD RAMPANT IN MISSOURI."

[In the Cynosure for September 24, 1891, was printed a letter with this title from L. Raymo, at Chula, Mo., detailing an attack upon him by a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church in that town, for opposing lodge evils. In the following, Bro. Raymo resumes his narration.—EDITOR.]

CHULA, Mo., October, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The elder reported the Masonic brother to the preacher, and lo, the preacher, also, was a Mason; then one of his elders was sick; another was away, threshing, and something else was the matter with the third, so he could not get them together. I saw him, (the preacher,) at his house. I asked him if he intended to call them together and examine the matter; he said he did not know whether he would or not; he said he had talked with Bro. Parkhurst (the old gentleman who abused me) about it, and they had given him a Cynosure, and he thought I was as much to blame as Bro. Parkhurst.

He (the preacher) said: "The Cynosure is the most detestable and abominable paper that is published." He also said that a man could know nothing about Masonry unless he joined the society.

Now, I would like a little information. I notice that it is conceded that Masons can be Christians. Can a man be a Christian and be a willful violator of all of God's commands? Can a man be a Christian and be a willful violator of any one of God's commands? The Bible says that "all liars" and "whosoever loveth or maketh a lie, shall be cast into hell," and "No murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." Now, all Masons are under oath to conceal the secrets of Masonry, and have bound themselves to be a party to murder, if they fail to do it. Now, every Mason does his best to keep his oath. Consequently, Masonry having been revealed, every Mason is a living, walking, every-day liar among men, and he can't help himself so long as he is true to his oath.

If a man can be a Christian and be a liar, he can be a Christian and be a thief; he can be a Christian and be a blasphemer; he can be a Christian and be an idolater; he can be a Christian and be guilty of anything the Bible forbids.

Please explain to me how a man can be a Christian and a Mason at the same time. And then, if you please, make the same application to all violators of God's law. I am of the opinion that all that is necessary is for men to profess Christianity, hold up their heads, and do as they please—only so they keep their worst deeds hidden from public view, and they are ostensibly Christians(?); "having men's persons in admiration," "they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God."

May God help some men to recognize the fact that God is true, though all men should be liars. Yours truly,

L. RAYMO.

THE CHURCH AND THE RUM-TRAFFIC.

DE KALB, Iowa, Sept., 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The article in the New York Voice, copied into the Cynosure of the 17th inst., says, among other good things: "The ungodly league between churches and saloons must be broken."

The article is a very strong argument that many of the churches possess not the "pure and undefiled religion" of the Bible; else they would not be in league with saloons. It is a Christless religion that would be "in league with saloons."

The Voice should know that a large part, especially of the male membership of those churches, worship at the altar of Baal in the lodges. "No servant can serve two masters;" and those who try it are of no force in temperance reform. Jesus said: "Without me ye can do nothing."

The Voice article, quoted by the Cynosure, says: "The attitude of the churches of America is the bulwark of the rum-traffic." Certainly, then, it must be because of Christless religion; and it has been proven very many times, by overwhelming evidence, that lodges are places of Christless worship having altars and prayers. Professed Christians meet on the level, there, with saloon-keepers, distillers and brewers, in worship. The lodge is not "the bride of Christ," but a harlot of the rum-fiend and "every evil work." She deceives the churches to the extent of the Voice complaint. "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." CYRUS SMITH.

A QUESTION FROM CRANK WINDLASS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I'm in a difficulty, and want you to help me out of it if you can. I've been attending an Evangelical church, though not a member of it, that "baptizes in water," and it has rented a hall from one of the secret orders which has altars on the floor and pictures on the walls staring at you on Sundays during the whole service. Now, sir, the question is: Should I, as an anti-lodgeite, leave this meeting and go to the kind that sprinkles, or should I stay and every time be reminded of the lodge-worships, past and present? I suppose many good people think there is no harm but only good in lodges, as well as in churches, but I'm not able to swallow that when I read Matt. 24: 26,—what our Jesus said of the secret-order Christs; and when I read our Christ's commission, that is our authority, after he had been "buried and risen;" and Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, and the one to Cornelius, etc., afterwards, and Paul's buried and risen talk to the Romans, Colossians, etc.

Now, please help me out of my quandary, and then shall I (you know me), C. W., feel more spry and very much thank the Cynosure gent for his answer. But don't say there's no harm in lodgery or sprinkling or in either a charm, for I think that in each there is cancer! Yours truly,
CRANK WINDLASS.

[We suppose that the closing sentence of the above inquiry refers to the heathenish rites of lodgery and sprinkling as "cancers." In the first we can agree with him; but we can assure him we do honor sprinkling as Scripture baptism, whilst we do not condemn "baptism in water," by which he evidently means immersion; that mode also being baptism, as we view it. Hence, if the case were our own, we would prefer to worship where no lodge methods are suggested. Our friend, however, must judge for himself and abide by his own convictions.—EDITOR.]

FROM ARIZONA.

FLAGSTAFF, A. T., Aug. 19, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been at this place for a few weeks.

The general impression is that Arizona is but little more than a great barren waste. Truly there is enough of this, and yet, without doubt, here are some of the most fertile and desirable spots in the known world, especially for health. At this point the elevation is nearly 1,000 feet, and the country for miles is covered with a dense pine forest, which is rapidly being utilized.

Vital Christianity is a secondary matter. Lodgery predominates. One of the most prominent church members stated to me, as an apology, or excuse, for being a very high-up lodge-ite, that Christianity does not fill its intended mission in providing for the wants of the poor and otherwise afflicted, as ordained by the Saviour and his apostles; but that the lodges do; therefore, the latter are a necessity, and preferable. A man's duty (he went on to say) is to look out for his financial interest, and leave the church, if either it or the lodge seemed to require such a measure.

In this place the Good Templar craze has caught the church as well as the world; and possibly this is due to the financiering of the Masonic fraternity, as the Templars occupy the Masonic hall, making it a good feeder for the older order.

The summer climate here is the most desirable of any I have ever found, and, without doubt, the whole year is simply grand. I am of the opinion that Arizona is destined to become the greatest health resort of America. Any of your lecturers passing through here would do well to stop off for a little rest and a few lectures.

H. W. FOWLER.

OPINIONS OF PUBLIC MEN.

CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL was the intimate friend and biographer of Washington, and was himself a Freemason in his youth. Marshall left the lodge in 1793. He had then for some sixteen years been acquainted with Washington, who died six years later. Marshall wrote to Hon. John Bailey from Richmond, Oct. 18, 1833, of Washington and Freemasonry: "I do not recollect ever to have heard him utter a syllable on the subject."

JOHN MARSHALL: "I never did utter the words ascribed to me, nor any other words importing the sentiment they convey. I never did say, 'Freemasonry is a jewel of the utmost value, that the pure in heart and life can only appreciate it fully, and that in a free government it must, it will be sustained and protected.' The fact mentioned in the resolution, that I have been in a lodge but once, so far as I can recollect, for nearly forty years, is evidence that I have no disposition to volunteer in this controversy, as the zealous partisan which this language would indicate."—Letter to Hon. John Bailey, Oct. 18, 1833.

GEN. HENRY SEWELL, a Companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'Perfect Rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its character appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion, deism, because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity, unsustainable; its titles, tulsome; its rites, barbarous and absurd; its oaths, extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken; and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

LITERATURE.

THE MOUNTAINS OF OREGON. BY W. G. STEEL, Fellow of the American Geographical Society. One Volume, 8vo. pp. 112. Illustrated. Portland, Oregon: Published by David Steel, 169½ Second street. Price $1.00.

This is undoubtedly the most correct and popular description of Mount Hood and the other noted mountains of Oregon that has yet been printed, as it contains the personal explorations and experiences of the Oregon Alpine Club of Portland. The author informs us that this volume "was not begun with the intention of publishing a book, but in response to numerous requests for descriptions of Crater Lake and Mt. Hood. As it was impossible at the time to answer them satisfactorily, it was decided to print a letter on each subject and issue it as a small pamphlet. Before this was accomplished the discovery was made that the space allotted was entirely inadequate; so, acting on the advice of friends, this form was adopted." The work includes, besides considerable information relating to the Alpine Club, descriptions of Crater Lake; the illumination of Mt. Hood on the 4th of July, 1887; Josephine County Caves; Mt. Ranier, and a night on its summit; Our Mountains in War, etc. The illustrations, in half-tone, comprise portraits of club members, and various views of mountain scenery. Altogether it is a work designed to interest a large number of readers.

THE CHURCH AND POVERTY: A Lecture delivered March 18, 1891, in the Catholic University at Washington, D. C., by John Brisben Walker, editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Price 10 cents.

Mr. Walker is a Roman Catholic and spoke to an intelligent audience. "His lecture," said the Washington Evening Star, "was in some respects a remarkable effort in the boldness with which he brought home to clergy and laymen their responsibility for many of the social difficulties that beset our civilization." It has been somewhat harshly censured for its plain-speaking by Catholics, who object, among others, to the following paragraph, which is, indeed, although just, a severe arraignment:

"Why do Catholic writers seek to cover up the horrors of St. Bartholomew, the cruelties of an inquisition which burned the flesh of human beings made in God's likeness, or the self-sufficient wisdom which refused to recognize the truths discovered by Galileo? Let these stories be told in every child's text-book; let them stand, the monuments they are, to the folly, the blunders, the superstition, the weakness of human souls who, in their arrogance, refused to interpret God's Word except to suit their own passions—yet deemed themselves acting as his servants, advancing his interests."

The Century for October opens with a full-page portrait of Rudyard Kipling, the rising young English author, of whom Edmund Gosse furnishes the accompanying sketch. The other contents are as follows: My Last Days in Siberia (illustrated), by Geo. Kennan; Was it an Exceptional Case? by Matt Crim; Aerial Navigation—The Power Required (illustrated), by Hiram S. Maxim; Besieged by the Utes—The Massacre of 1879 (illustrated), by Col. E. V. Sumner; On a Blank Leaf in "The Marble Faun," by Ella W. Peattie; A Water Tournament (Play in Provence, illustrated), by Elizabeth R. Pennell; In Answer to a Question, by Lilla C. Perry; The Press and Public Men, by Gen. H. V. Boynton; An Escapade in Cordova, by Hopkinson Smith; Masks, by Richard E. Burton; Pro Patria—In Memoriam, by R. W. Gilder; The Story of a Story (illustrated), by Brander Matthews; The Wood-Maid, by Helen T. Hutcheson; Who was Eldorado? (illustrated), by Lieut. H. Rowen Lemly; The Robber, by Jas. B. Kenyon; Italian Old Masters—Lorenza di Credi, Perugino, by W. J. Stillman (illustrated); Love, by Wm. W. Campbell; Tarrying in Nicaragua—To California in 1849, by Roger S. Baldwin, Jr. (illustrated); Lincoln's Personal Appearance, by John G. Nicolay; A Summer Pool, by Ch. G. D. Roberts; The Faith Doctor, by Edward Eggleston—concluded; Lowell; Topics of the Time—A Cheap-Money Retrospect, etc.; Open Letters; Bric-a-Brac. This number concludes the 42d volume. Numerous important features are in preparation for 1892. Published by the Century Co., 33 E. 17 St., New York City.

The Cosmopolitan for October has several excellent papers, capially illustrated (as usual), and is in every way very attractive. The number opens with Three Women of the Comedie Francaise—Madam Baretta-Worms, Mademoiselle Bartet, and Mademoiselle Reichemberg—portraits of whom form the frontispiece, and otherwise nicely embellished with engravings—by Elsie Anderson De Wolf; In a Ruin after a Thunderstorm (poem), by Louise I. Guiney; My Ideal (poem, illustrated), by Laurens Maynard; Some Great Storms (illustrated), by Wm. A. Eddy; Modern Women of Turkey (illustrated), by Osman Bey; The New Desert Lake (Salton—illustrated), by John Bonner; Cincinnati (illustrated), by Murat Halstead; Las Cartos de Calamidad (poem—illustrated), by Ella L. Dorsey; Lady Clare (illustrated), by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen; An Oyster Village (illustrated), by Jenny L. Hopkins; The Massacre of the Peace Commissioners (illustrated), by Harry L. Wells; According to St. John (illustrated), by Amelia Rives; Superstition (a poem), by E. F. Ware; Social Problems, by Edward Everett Hale; Certain Recent Foreign Fiction, by Brander Matthews; The Violet Bank, by Clinton Scollard. Published in New York; $3.00 per annum.

The October Review of Reviews has a group of articles apropos of the great Methodist international conference that opened in Washington last week. Besides a general account of the conference, in which some thirty different Methodist denominations participate, and a remarkable article by Mr. Stead upon the progress and influence of Methodism, there is a very brilliant character sketch of that young Boanerges of British Methodism, Rev. Hugh Price Hughes of London. These articles are illustrated with portraits of more than fifty prominent Methodists of the present day, all of whom are expected to participate in the work of the conference at Washington. The illustrations include all the bishops of the Northern church, ten Southern bishops, eleven of the most prominent visiting clergymen from Great Britain, and various others. Published at 13 Astor Place, New York City.

The number of The Advocate and Ensign of the Reformed Presbyterian Church in North America—July 28 to Sept. 30, 1891—is wholly filled with the Minutes of the General Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church, which convened at Philadelphia in May last. As the official publication it is an excellent pamphlet for preservation and reference. Published at 1914 Christian street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Our Animal Friends is a monthly journal published by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, at 100 East 22d street, New York, for $1.00 per year. The receipt of a periodical of this excellent character, once a month, in a growing family cannot fail to inculcate the most humane and lasting sentiments. The influence of such literature can hardly be over-estimated.

MUSIC.

From J. Fischer & Bro., New York City, we have received the following Christmas Anthems, words and music, the latter by the favorite composer, John Wiegman, selected from Fischer's Octavo Edition of Sacred Music for Christmas, Easter, and Other Festivals: "Your Voices Raise Ye;" "The Star of Bethlehem;" and "Awake, My Soul, to Joyful Lays." The above are sold by Lyon & Healy, Chicago, or may be ordered from the publisher. The music is arranged for church chorus, quartette clubs, etc.

OBITUARY.

Died in Jay county, Indiana, on September 18, 1891, WILSON MILLIGAN, aged 79 years.

He was one of the pioneer settlers of the county, and at an early day espoused the cause of Reform. He was a friend of the Cynosure, and a strong opponent of the lodge. A staunch Prohibitionist, he had the courage to sometimes vote alone. He was a true friend to every good cause; was a member of the United Brethren church, and in his early life felt a strong conviction that he ought to preach the Gospel of Christ; he was ordained at one time for the ministry; but while God buries his workmen, his work goes on. The undersigned conducted the funeral services in the M. E. church, near his home. A. WORTH.

IN BRIEF.

God's mercy now broods over the world as the Spirit of old brooded over primeval chaos. Evil is temporary, but the love of God is eternal. God's flood of grace bears the ark of humanity safely on to peace.—G. N. Webber, D.D.

Travelers say that it is noticeable in England, and America especially, that the young women are, as a rule, taller than the young men. Query:—How is this to be explained? One gentleman who was speaking of it, said he thought it was the use of tobacco among men.—On Duty.

Imaginary terrors are apt to beset those who have no trust in God. If we fear him, we need have no other fear; but if we have not him for our anchorage, we shall be driven by gusts of passion and terror. The unseen possibilities of attack and defeat may well terrify a man who has not the unseen God to keep him calm.—Dr. McLaren.

Bro. Kent, of the Banner, has a sharp way of saying some good things. Speaking of the conversion of Africa, he says: "To work up charity balls and fairs, festivals, grab-bags, ring-cakes, and calico neck-ties for socials is not the demand for Africa yet. The foolish, empty twaddle of the average young people's meetings will never convert and redeem the cannibal kings of Africa."

The real Sunday-school idea is the salvation of the children and the training of them for Christ. All other purposes in this great modern system of child-training are embraced in the one final idea—for Christ and heaven. It is an idea broad enough and important enough to absorb all the powers and energies of the thousands who are now engaged in pushing forward this glorious work.—Missionary Visitor.

A cotemporary is reminded of a neighbor, a very capable woman, who was fond of managing not only her own affairs but other people's as well; she was also very sure her own way was the only way. In attempting to dictate to another neighbor one day she received the following rejoinder, "Well, Mrs. —, I claim I have quite as good a right to manage household affairs according to my best judgment as you have to manage similar ones and then come to tell me how."

Delsarte was the exponent of the theory that upon action, and not upon tone, depended expression. He contended that with the acquisitions of grace of motion, a corresponding increase of soul and mind would be acquired. To so fine a point did he reduce his theory that he taught his pupils seven hundred and twenty-one motions of eyelids alone, to express different varieties of sentiment. The original Delsarte has been dead about twenty years. His son is now teaching his system in Paris.

An excellent preacher at one of our camp meetings in the East, as was his custom, commenced his discourse in a most deliberate way and in a moderate tone of voice. Some one cried out, "Louder, brother, louder." He looked up so meekly and replied, "You would not have me thunder before I lighten, would you?" That is it. Some think if they only thunder a great work will be done whether there is any lightning or not. It is the lightning that does the work; thunder does not kill.—Messiah's Herald.

In a certain locality the Lord's Spirit was being poured out among the Methodists. A Second Advent church in that place was cold and lifeless. A zealous Adventist went over to the Methodists; saying, "I have come and brought my children because I want them converted;" and so they were converted and went back to the other church with some of the fire, and the revival broke out among the Adventists also.—Ibid.

The best and surest dye to color the beard brown or black, as may be desired, is Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers. It never fails.

OUR PREMIUM!
THE EMPRESS
Sewing Machine
For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled. It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work.

It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments,

put up in an elegant case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1-Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00.
With Christian Cynosure 1 year..$22.00.

For further particulars address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).
The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnotson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John G. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOKS,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonee.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revue, Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Friendship and the Grange, with advantages, etc. Over 250 cuts, 92 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1891.

OUR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

It was a cunning and effectual device of ancient savage warfare to pollute the fountains of a land and poison its wells. Satan uses similar methods. The Mosaic Institute was a theological seminary holding three sessions a year of some four weeks each, including the journeys to and from their great festivals, and they gave lectures and lessons in theology along the road and while they were there. Their frontlets, fringes, and phylacteries were covered with Scriptures, which children and adults coned.

The end and object of this teaching was to keep up Abel's religion and to keep out Cain's.

Abel's religion was Christ's; Cain's was self-manufactured; and while the Jews kept to Abel's worship of the true God "by faith," through a "lamb," which meant a Messiah or Mediator, they towered above other men, so that literally "one chased a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight."

To keep out the infiltration from lodge altars of heathenism, Moses executed three thousand dancing worshippers. Elijah slew eight hundred and fifty priests of false altars who were supported by Jezebel. Nehemiah drove out the Ammonites and Moabites, who hired Balaam, the trance-preacher, to curse Israel, and debauch the Jews. And "the schools of the prophets," presided over by such men as Samuel, Elisha and others who adhered to the decalogue and denounced religious shams, were national seminaries to sift out idolatry from the religion of their Messiah-Christ.

Christ came and gave his disciples a "three years' course" of the same religion; and his apostles followed his example. Peter denounced Simon Magus (the magician), and Paul said to Elymas, "O, full of all subtlety and mischief! thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?"

The teaching of these sorcerers was precisely that of our Masonic lodges; a compound of Jewish "traditions," which Christ denounced, (Mark 7,) as making the law void and worship vain; mixed with sorcery and devil-worship (Acts 8 and 13:6).

No one who has but a superficial knowledge of standard works on Masonry needs further proof than is given by their lexicons and cyclopedias of the identity of the false systems encountered by Christ and the apostles and the lodge systems of the present day. If any one doubts, let him read the speeches of such men as Joseph Cook, Dr. Goodwin and a host of others.

And, such as they are, Boston has 590 lodges to 243 churches; Chicago 1,088 lodges to 364 churches; and so throughout the United States.

Now, with rare and noble exceptions, our theological seminaries are decidedly derelict in giving instruction to their students respecting these secret lodge-worships. Dr. McCosh, of Princeton, drove college secret societies out of the college of New Jersey, and, along with Drs. Hodge and Paxton, indorsed the call for the Chicago Christian Conference on the subject. President Fisk gave a copy of an anti-secret address to each of his students, in the Chicago Theological Seminary. The Oberlin faculty appointed Prof. King to lecture on lodgery before the college. But the great mass of students who enter theological seminaries this fall, unless there is a great awakening to the importance of this subject in their faculties, will leave their seminaries as ignorant as they enter them, concerning truth and duty on the gravest, most difficult, and most important question of this age. The young men of the theological seminary at Evanston are moving bravely, but they move without their faculty. Andover faculty, and that of McCormick, here in Chicago, have refused to permit men of the highest respectability and indorsement to address the students on secret societies. Superintendent Roberts, an able and observing man, attributes this silence of our seminaries, colleges, press and pulpit to a fear of the god of the lodge. He says: "We are under a reign of terror." And there may be something in this. Shakespeare makes Queen Anne exclaim:—

"———What! are ye all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not, for ye are mortal;
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil!"

Let us hope for a change. Let the faculties be petitioned to break silence; to follow Scripture precedent and the example of Christ and the apostles, especially that of Paul on Mars Hill.

SABBATH DEGENERACY.

Every true Christian has reason to deplore the growing sordidness that serves to promote the general infraction of the Sabbath laws, and to reduce that sacred day to the level of secular holiday. But this is the tendency of the times, and, in spite of Christianity and its great and glorious Founder, this result seems inevitable unless the interference of divine power shall be interposed to prevent it.

The directors of the Milwaukee Fair open their Exposition on Sunday with the preamble of "Whereas so many workmen are unable to visit the Exposition except on Sunday." "An honest resolution," says the Northwestern Christian Advocate, "would have declared that 'since we prefer the receipts of seven days to the profits of seven days, therefore we propose to pocket the larger amount, because it will pay better.'" That is the reason in a nutshell. "If the World's Fair," continues the Advocate, "is opened on Sunday, forty-two States and an average of eighty counties in each of the forty-two States, may consider the example of the World's Fair directors authoritative, and thus open seventy-five times forty-two additional annual fairs as centers of evil influences. We shall not envy our Chicago directors their responsibility if they open the World's Fair on Sunday." "What's the reason," asks the Indianapolis Ram's Horn, "it isn't as mean to steal a Sabbath as it is to steal a horse and buggy?" The difference is infinitesimal.

We are under obligations to some kind friend for a copy of the "Journal of the Thirtieth Session of the North Ohio Annual Conference of the United Brethren in Christ, held at Maysville, Indiana," in September last, among the resolutions adopted at which we find the following pungent declaration: "That we, as a Conference, earnestly request the managers of the 'World's Columbian Exposition' to be held in Chicago in 1893, to arrange to have that Exposition closed on the Sabbath day, and thus show to the nations of the world that this is a Christian nation and has due respect to divine law. Should the earnest request of the great majority of the Christian people of this country be unheeded, and the gates of the Exposition be allowed open on Sunday, we hereby declare our purpose to remain at home and have nothing whatever to do with the Exposition, and we shall urge our people to do the same." Who can blame them?

DISGRACEFUL INITIATIONS AT GALESBURG.

The Republican-Register, the leading Galesburg (Ill.) print, of Oct. 8th inst., gives the following facts:

"The High School has for years allowed new comers to be 'initiated' by the older boys. Youths of spirit have resisted. Several 'famous struggles' have occurred; the door of the room or den in the basement where the initiates were 'chucked in,' has been kicked down, and one boy struck a severe blow in the face."

"This term," says the Register, "all the juniors but three had been imprisoned."

The uninitiated were "Will Miller, John Johnson and Herman Murry." Young Miller warned the boys to "let him alone;" that he was armed and should use a knife in self-defense; and the principal, Mrs. Gettemy, warned the boys to desist. But they surrounded and seized him. Young Fuller "whirled him down stairs, called for help and threw Miller on the floor." We give the out-come in the Register's words:

"As soon as he was released Miller went up stairs and told the principal, Mrs. Gettemy, what had happened. His trousers were torn, his coat dirty, and he had sustained a number of bruises. Subsequently he went with Mrs. Gettemy to Superintendent Steele and rehearsed the story to him.

"Meanwhile Fred Calkins, Ed. Akson and Fred Smith kindly assisted the injured lad to a doctor's office. It was there ascertained that Fuller had sustained a number of severe cuts. The one in the right thigh was three inches long and extended clear to the bone; another wound was in the right knee; another in the hip; another near the top and front of the thigh; and one on the left forearm, a diagonal cut that severed a bunch of muscles working the fingers. The wounds bled freely. After the wounds were dressed the boy was taken to his home."

"Sup't. Steele says that up to this time Miller has been noted for his gentlemanly deportment in the school-room and his good scholarship. Never before in his school career has he done anything that would bring reproach on his good name or that of the school." Yet, notwithstanding this record, and the fact that he did nothing but resist a crowd who violently assaulted him, he was suspended from the school.

Of course, we cannot vouch for any of these statements. We do not know that Miller was a worthy young man, or that he warned the rowdies who wished to initiate him, or that they seized him as reported, or that he resisted their assaults as described. But if the facts are as given above, we say without hesitation that he was right throughout, and that, instead of being suspended, he deserved commendation. The humiliations and indecencies of initiations are bad enough when invited; when they are forced on young men it is lawful to resist, and those who so do are entitled to praise rather than blame.

Galesburg, Illinois, where these sad events occurred, was settled by Christians, who were temperance men and opposed to secret societies. For years liquor shops, gambling hells, lodges and similar resorts were unknown in that prairie town. Dr. Roy, of Chicago, Dr. Warren, of San Francisco, Judge Craig, of our Supreme Court, Judge Smith, of the Circuit Court, and Judge Wells, of Colorado, graduated from Knox College when there were no secret societies among its students. Now all is changed. The city has many lodges and dram-shops; the fraternity system is established in the college. Monmouth College was infected from the Knox College orders, and even the president of Knox is claimed as a Mason.

The hazing initiations of the Galesburg High School, if they were as reported, were simply mild imitations of the Masonic performances carried on by the men of the city. It seems incredible that they should have been permitted by authorities who were not themselves members of lodges. And the suspension of the young man who in self-defense used his knife is like the arrest of a man for assault who knocks down a burglar who is entering his house. The ministers and teachers of this beautiful city have power to put an end to these lodge outrages on quiet unoffending boys. If they do so, there will be no necessity for recording such sad events as the one above related. Sup't. Steele's remarks to the High School afford some ground for hope that these "initiations" are at an end.

MASONRY IS BLASPHEMOUS.

There is no limit to the wicked presumption of Freemasonry. Time and again, by the strongest evidence, its claims to antiquity have been shown to be delusive. Its arrogance in asserting the truth of the story of Hiram Abiff (which has no historic foundation, but is like the tradition that mankind once had caudal appendages, and hence men were once monkeys), and its absurd assumption of a relationship to Christianity, have long since been exploded; and yet, in the following article by Dr. Tanner, from the Kansas City (Mo.) Times, there is a boldness and blasphemy that defies common sense and the truth of sober history:

"I may shock the nerves of some who bitterly oppose secret societies in my statement that Jesus was a Freemason—not in name but in principle. Nominally he was an Essenean, which brotherhood in principle and practice were Masonic. With the exception of Paul all the apostles were without doubt born Esseneans. Peter's statement that 'Nothing common or unclean had ever entered his mouth,' is the equivalent of an acknowledgment that he was an Essenean. All the apostate Jews were flesh eaters. History says that the Esseneans, ancient Masons, lived in great purity of body and soul, bathed the whole body every morning at sunrise, and were pledged to have no earth rulers save their rabbi.

"The following were a few of their many exalted doctrines: Thou shalt keep the Ten Commandments of Moses; thou shalt not engage in war or abet war; thou shalt eat no flesh of any animal or fish or bird or fowl or creeping thing created alive; thou shalt dwell in families after the manner of the ancient Israelites, who held all things in common; thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, and do unto thy fellow man as thou wouldst have him do unto thee; thou shalt return good for evil; if a man strike thee on one cheek, turn to him the other also. It is in evidence that Jesus scrupulously lived up to the letter and spirit of the Essenean doctrines."

To refute both the spirit and the letter of Dr. Tanner's far-drawn conclusions, it is only necessary to refer the Christian reader to John's Gospel 6: 5-13, and 21: 3-10—from which it is very evident that the Saviour did not object to feeding the multitude and his disciples with fish, giving it to them with his own hands, in the first instance, and cooking it for them in the later one.

TO OUR READERS IN WISCONSIN.

But little has been done in the last few years for the promotion of the anti-secrecy reform in this State. The lodges are thriving and arrogant, and the attention of Christian reformers has been largely directed to other and not unimportant ends. But a partial canvass of the State makes it evident that the interest in our cause has by no means died out. The Old Guard are still true and valiant for the moral welfare. This is an "off year" in politics, and is especially favorable for a renewed discussion of this question. Let us have ONE MORE RALLY AT VERNON, WIS., ON OCTOBER 29 AND 30, 1891, and remember that the burden of responsibility rests alike on all who know the truth. Much labor and expense is involved in even a partial canvass of the State. Let all those who cannot attend the meeting send their contributions for this work to Bro. W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison street, Chicago, and let all pray for God's blessing.

PROGRAM OF THE STATE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE AT VERNON, WIS.

The Wisconsin Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will, D. V., meet in the Covenanter church at Vernon, Wis., on Thursday evening, October 29, at 7 o'clock, and, as far as practicable, the following program will be adopted:

7 P. M., call to order, with devotional exercises for half an hour.

The appointment of committees.

An address by Rev. J. B. Galloway, on the Relation of Secret Societies to the Christian Church, followed by a brief discussion.

Friday, October 30, meet at 9:30 A. M., and have a half an hour of devotional exercises.

Report of committees and completion of organization, including plan for State work.

Miscellaneous business.

Friday P. M., meet at 2:30 o'clock. After a season of worship a report of the committee on resolutions, to be followed by discussion or brief addresses.

Friday evening, 7 o'clock, address by Rev. Isaac L. Faris on the Relation of Secret Societies to Civil Government, followed by an address by H. H. Hinman—Is the Grand Army of the Republic a Beneficent Institution?

Persons coming by the Wisconsin Central railroad will stop at Vernon station. Those who come by the Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R. or the Northwestern R. R. will stop at Waukesha, and, in either case, will write to Rev. J. B. Galloway, of Vernon, Wis., and arrangements will be made to convey them to the meeting. H. H. HINMAN.

—We are indebted to Bro. John A. Murray, Secretary of the Wisconsin Annual Conference of the Free Methodist church, for a manuscript copy of the Report on Reforms, adopted by that Conference at its recent session. It is a strong document, and we propose, in a few days, to present it to our readers in a complete form. Lack of space prevents its insertion in this issue.

—Bishop Fava (Roman Catholic) is in favor of republican government—on a Roman Catholic basis, of course—and says, also:—"Let Catholics but unite, and the reign of Freemasonry will be at an end." In other words, Freemasonry will decrease and the order of Jesuits will increase. Somehow, in this unholy fight, the rest of us seem to be between Scylla and Charybdis, waiting for the glory of God to be manifested in the destruction of both of these gigantic and evil societies.

—This week we commence the publication of the temperance lecture delivered more than sixty years ago, in Vermont, by ex-Pres. J. Blanchard, before he had completed his eighteenth year. It needs no apology for its reprint in the Cynosure, which he has been so largely instrumental in bringing to its present high standard in the work of reform. It speaks for itself and the cause it supports.

—Royal Hammond, of Galesburg, Illinois, one of its old and wealthy citizens, in a private letter, intimates that the interests of the city are seriously handicapped by the liquor interest and secret societies, who hold the leading influences in that community. This fact will account, in part, no doubt, for the disgraceful initiations described in the editorial columns of this issue of the Cynosure.

—Especial attention is directed to the third page of this issue, on which appears the portrait of Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the efficient secretary and agent of the N. C. A. for New England. Ex-Pres. J. Blanchard furnishes a graphic life-sketch of our esteemed co-worker, who supplements it with his grateful appreciation of the high estimation in which he is held by his many friends, East and West, accompanied by a brief review of the present condition of the work in which he is engaged. The portrait and sketch are inserted to gratify our numerous patrons, and both are a deserved tribute to Bro. Stoddard's faithfulness and industry in the cause.

—At an early day, possibly in the issue of the Cynosure for October 22, we shall begin the publication of a serial article, running through three or more numbers of the paper, and reviewing, carefully and exhaustively, the political and religious character and tendencies of the Farmers' Alliance, showing it to be, unmistakably, an un-republican institution and a false, un-Christian form of religion. The author is a preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist denomination, who, several months ago, was requested by one of the leading members of a local Alliance in Kansas to lend his influence in behalf of the order. Too wary to be misled into the support of a secret organization without further knowledge of its character and tendencies, he asked several pointed questions. The replies were guarded, and their platitudes are in this article fully controverted. It will repay a careful perusal.

—There is nothing resembling compromise in the Report on Secretism adopted by the Free Methodist Annual Conference of Wisconsin at its recent session. "Another form of evil entrenched in the selfishness of the hearts of men," it says, "and one antagonistic to the principles of Christianity and all moral government, is oath-bound secretism." In support of its position, the committee quotes freely from Joseph Cook's address in Chicago on this subject, and also from General Grant and John Quincy Adams, and then adds: "In view of these statements of fact and appeal, while we are fully conscious that there are great odds against us, our duty to God and man demands that we, as a church, both ministry and laity, take a bold and fearless stand against all such organizations." Would to God that every other church in the world had the will to utter such sentiments, and to work zealously in their support!

—The question of opposition to secret societies came up in the deliberations of the closing session of ministers and elders of Indiana Yearly Meeting of Friends at Richmond, in the last days of September. S. A. Wood read a portion of Scripture concerning the duties of watchmen to see the approach of the encroachments of the evil upon the church, and especially warned the church against being swallowed by organizations that are not religious, but put on a semblance of religion. One can not be a member of an oath-bound society and be obedient to Christ's command, "Swear not at all." Jacob Baker said the oaths of such societies are not so much secret as blind. The discussion was not prolonged, and ended in an especial commendation of the clause in the Friends' Discipline, advising their youth against entangling alliances with any of these oath-bound organizations. The Friends are our firm allies in the war upon the lodge system.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—This office was favored, last week, with a call from Elder I. J. Rosenburg, of Covington, Ohio, the general missionary agent of the society of Dunkards, who has been spending two months in Iowa, but is now on his way Eastward, via Illinois and Indiana, to his home in Ohio.

—Bro. S. F. Porter, the College agent, who has been visiting several places in the West, expects to be in Chicago soon. In the Methodist church at Montevideo, Minn., on Sunday evening, the 4th inst., he led a Ladies' Union Temperance meeting, with a full house, which gave him an enthusiastic hearing.

—On Tuesday evening of last week, at Elgin, Ill., an anti-secrecy meeting was held in the Free Methodist church, of which Rev. Mr. Spaulding is the newly appointed pastor. The attendance, despite the rain, was very fair, and the interest well maintained. To Rev. George R. Milton, of Elgin, an old friend of the Cynosure, and one of the present directors of the N. C. A., much credit is due for his zealous efforts in preparing the way for the success of the meeting. It is to be regretted that Bro. Milton's lameness, arising from a fall last year, seriously interferes with his personal labor in the cause of Reform.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

sons. In short, some of the members of this feeble church are trying to save its life by a compromise with wicked men. Unless the truth, as presented by the pastor, takes hold of them, and they learn better things, there is no hope for this church.

What people need in Schuyler's Lake is thorough converting. If the church fails in her duty, a dreadful scourge may be necessary to bring this about. Many a father is being scourged to-day by a drunken son.

I preached Sabbath morning in the M. E. church, by invitation of the pastor, and addressed the Baptist Sabbath-school by invitation of the superintendent.

Our friends here are hopeful. The lodge has evidently reached its zenith. Its decay seems evident. Our literature has been put into nearly every home for three miles in every direction. If the young men can be saved, the old ones will die, and there will be a better state of things. Oh, what a terrible harvest sowing to the wind will reap!

I go to Fly Creek, Cooperstown, and other points south in this county. I hope to arrange with friends for meetings at Binghamton, Chenango Bridge and other points, soon. As ever,

W. B. STODDARD.

ANTI-LODGE MEETING AT ELGIN.

ELGIN, Ill., Oct. 8, 1891.

For some days previous to Oct. 6 we had been expecting to have Bro. Wm. Feuton with us on that date and give us the "Religion of Masonry" as taught in their own books. In this, however, we were disappointed, Bro. Feuton being necessarily absent. But brethren W. I. Phillips and Rufus Smith came up to the help of the Lord.

Bro. Phillips spoke on "Odd-fellowship as a Religion," quoting from their own manuals, and thereby proving that Odd-fellows consider it a religion. Their god is "one Supreme being," but not the Triune God—Father, Son and Holy Spirit; hence, these Odd-fellow worshipers are idolaters, and so are all they who worship at the altars of the various secret societies.

Bro. Smith interested us from the words: "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." He maintained that no one could be a good Mason and a true husband, or a true Mason and a true Christian. A large portion of the audience agreed with him. Bro. Smith is full of fire, heavenly fire, and keeps his hearers most thoroughly interested.

Never has this country stood more in need of men and women to be faithful to God and to the souls of men than at the present. In this city nearly all the English-speaking ministers are members of one or more of the secret societies here, of which there are upwards of forty. May God pity these poor deluded ministers and their poor deluded hearers.

Yours truly, GEORGE R. MILTON.

THE HOME.

"THE WHITENED FIELDS."

So many idle, folded hands,
And the harvest-fields are white;
Low droop the heavy heads of wheat
That wait the reaper's weary feet,
The sickle in his willing hands,
For "the harvest fields are white."

So many here that sit at ease,
While 'neath yon darker skies
The wretchedness and misery
Even angels well might weep to see,
How can we dare to sit at ease
Beneath these golden skies?

So many gay and careless feet,
That dance the hours away,
While there, with heavy steps and slow,
Adown the paths of sin and woe
Stray all too surely other feet,—
And life glides fast away.

So fleet, so few the moments be
For binding up the sheaves!
The Master calls; do not delay,
But haste some fruit to win to-day;
For soon our only joy shall be
In bringing home the sheaves.

—Meta E. B. Thorne.

MR. MOODY IN HIS CHURCH.

The Chicago Avenue church was filled yesterday at both morning and evening services as Dwight L. Moody alone seems to be able to fill it. Advancing years lessen none of his vigor of speech, nor does his power decrease.

His morning theme, "Thou Art the Man," furnished him a basis for a forceful talk to the Christian world and to Christian ministers. His evening sermon was a powerful and effective plea to those who are not believers.

"I want to tell you to-night," he said, "how to find God and how to keep in the path of right. I want to stir you powerfully to-night, and if I put the knife in deep, don't squirm. There are five things that flow out of true repentance. Repentance is the A of God's alphabet. Now, we don't repent all at once. You're doing things all the time that you should repent of, and if you haven't found it out your wife or neighbors have. That's the mistake ministers make. They think they repented a long time ago and don't need to do it again.

"The five things that compose true repentance are conviction, contrition, confession, conversion and confession to Christ. There's no true repentance without all five.

"If a man is not convinced of his sin, you can't help him. God Almighty can't help him. The Jews when called upon to repent boasted of Moses, the law, and the prophets, and from that they were going to establish their own righteousness. It's just like the small boy who, while his father had gone to church, stole $5 out of a drawer and ran away to squander it.

"'Johnny,' says papa when he returns, 'did you take that $5?'

"'No, sir.'

"'Didn't you take it and go with that Brown boy and spend it?'

"'No, sir.'

"Then Mary, the servant, comes in and tells how she saw Johnny take the money; so papa says:

"'Johnny, what have you to say to that?'

"'Yes; I took it and spent it.'

"'Are you sorry?'

"'No, sir.'

"'Will you do it again?'

"'Yes, sir; every time I get a chance.'

"'Could you forgive that boy, fathers? No! Neither can God forgive an unrepentant sinner.

"Conscience and the Holy Ghost produce conviction. Adam and Eve were not judged by the Bible. They were judged by conscience. Then, perhaps, you say, why not do without the Bible? Because your conscience convicts you after a wrong is committed, but the Bible tells you what is wrong.

"'Thou shalt not steal,' says the Bible.

"'That's all right,' you say. Well, then, I tell you there is no trouble about the law; the trouble is with yourself. Be convinced of your sin; that is the first step toward conversion. You married men who are unfaithful; you young men who forget the purity of the dear mother and sisters you have left back East, be contrite and then confess your sin. You seem to think that you can do things in Chicago that you cannot in your own peaceful village home. Sin is sin. If an act is sin here it is sin in London. How was it with David and Solomon? Both had sinned against virtue. You ask if David did not fall deeper. He was lifted higher. When the voice of God found him he fell in contrition, but 'Sol' said 'honor me before the people.' You don't find that Solomon wrote a fifty-first Psalm. David was a first-class sinner, and he was also a first-class repentant. Mothers, if your son repents as David did could you find it in your heart not to forgive him?

"Confession comes next. I believe there is more downright sham in confession than in anything else. Men pretend to confess, but they don't half confess. They sing and shout hallelujah louder than anybody, to give the impression that they are great Christians. If you want to prosper confess to God. Don't go to the priest; he has all the sins he can attend to. As long as you sin you cannot prosper, and your sins will descend to your children. Straighten out your record when you commit your sin. Confess to God, for that leads to conversion, and he gives you a new life and a new nature. Confess fully. So many converts amount to nothing because they don't half confess.

"People talk about two roads in life. There's only one. At one end is heaven. What is the other? The Bible calls it hell, so you'd better put it down so."

The speaker told a story of a slave becoming free as soon as he came under the Union flag and exhorted the slaves of sin to come under the banner of Christ to be freed.

"Why?" he asked. "Because you owe it to him, because you owe it to Christians, because you owe it to the world, and because you owe it to yourself."—Inter-Ocean, Oct. 5.

HABITUAL PRAYERFULNESS.

We do not mean by this title the custom of praying at regular hours or in specific forms of speech. It may include these. It certainly includes much more. We mean by it a permanent attitude of the soul toward God, a habit become so much more than an ordinary custom as to be "second nature," as we often say. To be prayerful in this sense is to turn to the heavenly Father naturally and almost instinctively. It involves an assurance on our part of his affectionate, unflinching interest in us and in all which concerns us, and of his ample power and ready willingness to keep us in whatever manner he sees that aid can best be rendered us. It involves mutual sympathy and confidence between him and us, the purpose on our side to govern all our relations with human society and conduct upon the basis of his actual concernment with them, and on his side the purpose to guide and assist us in so doing.

They who are habitually prayerful in this sense do not find themselves disposed to neglect prayer at particular times. Nor do they even reject forms of prayer. The value of these becomes increasingly evident continually. But they learn to look up to God so often, so naturally and so simply that these, with all their value, prove insufficient. The heart learns that a true prayer may be independent of position, place or circumstance. It is simply the communion of the human soul with the divine. It can be experienced as truly and rewardingly in a throng as in a desert, at the desk or the work-bench as in the prayer meeting, in the hour of deepest sorrow as in that of most jubilant delight. It may be only an uplifted thought, hardly shaped in words at all.

The value of this habitual prayerfulness lies not so much in the direct, definite responses which it obtains as in the reverent consciousness of oneness of spirit and interest with the Almighty. He may not see fit to grant the former. Often he refuses them in the form in which we desire them, and, no matter how earnestly we desire them, we soon learn that he knows best what is good for us, and that all will be well in the end if we leave everything to him. Therefore our one, true, comprehensive prayer always must be, "Thy will be done." It is not wrong for us to plead habitually for those things which we suppose ourselves to need. Indeed, we are commanded to pray for them. But such petitions, after all, must be qualified by frank and full submission to his all-wise judgment.

Let it be remembered, also, that the spirit of habitual prayerfulness is the best possible defense against temptation. It renders the soul more difficult of access by evil. It helps to check the desire to do wrong and diminishes the apparent attractiveness of every form of sinful pleasure. It is the best safeguard of the young Christian, and to the more mature, none the less, it is as a tower of strength and refuge.—Congregationalist.

DO "COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE"?

We give below what appear to us the most wonderful utterances of the late eminent Dr. Crosby, just before his death:

The following is a partial report of a sermon, delivered by Dr. Crosby a few days prior to his last illness, published in the Religious Telescope:

"But many Christians fear death." Well, they ought not to fear it. All who are in Christ ought to look upon what is called death (using the common phraseology and meaning the death of the body), we ought to look upon this with the greatest delight. What is death to you and to me! "I go to prepare a place for you [it is our Lord who speaks], and if I go to prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Now, is the coming of the Lord Jesus to take me unto himself, to take me unto his own eternal home to dwell there with him forever—is this a thing for me to fear? Is it not something for me to hail with delight? Ought I not to look forward to it as the greatest joy in existence? If I am found dreading death I am showing myself a coward, and I am insulting my Lord. Death to me should be a thing longed for. The thought of death should be to me an ecstasy of joy.

"But the pain attending death makes me shrink from it." I can say this in answer to such an objection: Every one of us, no doubt, has suffered from disease a bodily pain ten times more severe than we shall feel in dying.

I have been by a hundred deathbeds, and in all death was easy. A disease of three or four days, from which one recovers, often causes far more pain than the departure of the soul from the body. The sting of death is gone from us. Our sins have been blotted out. No condemnation is written against us; the law has no punishment recorded against us. There is nothing in our way. Why should we not rejoice and give thanks when we see death approaching?

Note one thing stated here about the body. "This corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality." In the second epistle to the Corinthians, fifth chapter, we read this: "Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon." In one sense my present body is to be raised. If it were raised it would be a corruptible body; but I am to put on an incorruptible body. My identity is to be preserved in some way. I don't know how, but God knows. I know this much: I know that there is not an atom in my body to-day that was there thirty years ago, and I know that my identity has not been altered in the least these thirty years. The power of God raises the body from the grave, not man's invention, and in some way the identity is retained, though not a particle of the body is the same. It is the same body, and not the same. It is the body corruptible made incorruptible, made like unto the glorious body of our Lord. You know how the apostle represents this in figure. The seed is sown and springs up according to the kind sown; and yet in one sense the seed dies before the fruit can come forth. It is the same and not the same.

I think there is more than this. I think we are right in thinking that we shall never be without a body. As soon as this earthly tabernacle be dissolved we have (not "shall have after a long period" of waiting) a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. In some way, we cannot now tell, we shall have a body before our present body is raised from the grave to be forever joined to the soul. We shall never be found naked, never be without a body. That we cannot understand the method does not trouble us. We know in whom we have believed; we know that he has almighty power and almighty wisdom: and we know that we are safe, body and soul, in Jesus Christ.

Ought we not to chant pæans of victory every day? If we would think less about our present condition and more about our future glory, would we not be daily singing the triumph song, "O death, where is thy sting! O hades, where is thy victory! Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ?" And then with our eyes fixed upon our heavenly home and our hearts full of longing for its holiness and for the companionship of our dear Lord, would not our cry, also, be, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly?" All that is sweet, all that is lovely here on earth shall be ours there, and he shall be the center of all. Without one regret, without one sorrow, with rapturous joy, we should run to meet, not death, but our dear Lord.

This is our privilege. We Christians have nothing to do with the world's thoughts and feelings about death. We parted company with the world when we began to walk in the ways of righteousness. We breathe a different atmosphere from the world: we have learned some things the world cannot know. Why should we go the world's poets or to the world's philosophers to get their ideas about death? Let us go rather to the Bible and hear the Lord telling us that for us death is changed to victory. The world talks about looking down, about the pall, the coffin, the grave, the blackness of death. We have nothing to do with such thoughts. To us death means looking up, means brightness, joy, glory, Christ. Let us live up to our high privilege.

JAMIE.

"In a small village there lived a little Scotch boy named Jamie. His mother loved him, and he loved his mother. The little boy wanted to be a sailor. His mother did not like the idea of losing her little Jamie, but he had read so much about sailors and about foreign lands, he said, 'Oh, mother, I do want to be a sailor!' And his mother at last said, 'Jamie, you shall go.' She gave him her blessing, and added, 'Jamie, wherever you are, whether at sea or on land, never forget to acknowledge your God; and give me a promise that you will kneel down every night on shipboard and say your prayers and trust in God. Little Jamie looked up to his mother, the tears trickling down his cheeks, and said, 'Mother, I promise you I will.' The boy went on board a ship bound for India. The first night, when the sailors had gone to their berth, seeing little Jamie kneel down to say his prayers, a sailor went up to him, and, giving him a box on the ear, said, 'None of that here, sir!' Now, among the crew there was another sailor, a swearing man, who said to the man that had struck the boy, 'Come on deck and I will give you a threshing,' and they went on deck. Now, I am not approving of the fight, but these men did fight, and the swearing sailor beat the one who had boxed the little fellow. Then they came back again into the cabin, and the swearing man said: 'Now, Jamie, say your prayers, and if he dares to touch you I will dress him!' Well, the next night Jamie said to himself, 'I don't like to make any disturbance on board ship; I will say my prayers in my berth; I won't kneel down before the sailors; I will get into my hammock and say my prayers to myself.' Mark the effect of this on the swearing sailor. The moment he saw little Jamie get into the hammock without saying his prayers he went up and took him by the neck and dragged him out of the hammock, and said: 'Kneel down at once, sir. Do you think I am going to fight for you and you not say your prayers, you young rascal?' During the whole voyage back to London Jamie had in that reckless, thoughtless sailor or a man who looked after him like a father, and every night saw that he knelt down and said his prayers. Now, let me tell you a part of little Jamie's history. Some years ago the largest steamboat ever seen was built—the Great Eastern. Who do you think was the captain of that great ship? They wanted the cleverest captain they could find in England, and they selected little Jamie. When the great ship came back after fulfilling her mission, the captain knelt before Queen Victoria, who said: 'Rise, Sir James Anderson,' and Sir James Anderson was none other than the little boy I have told you of."—Guild Review.

NOT I, BUT CHRIST.

Not I, but Christ be honored, loved, exalted,
Not I, but Christ be seen, be known, be heard;
Not I, but Christ in every look and action,
Not I, but Christ in every thought and word.

Not I, but Christ in lowly, silent labor,
Not I, but Christ in humble, earnest toil;
Christ, only Christ, no show, no ostentation,
Christ none but Christ, the gatherer of the spoil.

Christ, only Christ, no idle word e'er spoken,
Christ, only Christ, no needless bustling sound,
Christ, only Christ, no self-important bearing,
Christ, only Christ, no trace of 'I' be found.

Christ, only Christ, ere long will be my vision,
Glory excelling, soon, full soon I'll see,
Christ, only Christ, my every thought fulfilling,
Christ, only Christ, my all in all to be.

—Selected by Bessie Kellogg, Auburn, Cal.

TEMPERANCE.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

HOW THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION WAS VIEWED IN OLDEN DAYS.

[An address which was delivered at Saxton's River, Vt., by J. Blanchard, and published in the old Intelligencer September 11, 1830.]

During a brief but pleasant call from J. Blanchard, of Wheaton, Ill., who makes an annual tour to the old home town, says the Bellows Falls (Vt.) Times, mention was made of an address which he delivered when a youth before the Rockingham Temperance Society, which was deemed of sufficient importance, even in those crude days of temperance thought, to be reproduced in the old Bellows Falls Intelligencer, published by Thomas Green Fessenden. The Times asked the favor of a review, which was granted by Mr. Blanchard, and the old reprint, yellow with age, was duly received, together with a personal letter from the author giving many facts of an interesting historical nature, which we hope to give in some later issue. The address, though lengthy, is given entire, as much to show the trend of thought in earlier days, as because the Times, the continuation of the Intelligencer, may hereby safely lay claim to the teaching of prohibition for eleven years more than a half century. Mr. Blanchard was born on the hills above Saxton's River, and at the date of this address was a student at Middlebury College. He was for many years president of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., only giving place by reason of advancing years to a son whom the old gentleman proudly tells us "makes a better college president than his father ever did."

THE ADDRESS.

Over the human character, custom exerts a dominion unlimited and unremitting. Tyrants control but outward actions;—custom bribes the will, allies to her interest the inclination, and leads captive the whole man. Whether the scene of our observation lie in the extreme regions of the earth, where the sun looks aslant on seas ever congealed, and on mountains of ever-during ice, receiving annually new accessions from concrete masses of frozen vapor, regions o'er whose sterile plains the white bear and moss-fed reindeer stalk, the sole representatives of the brute creation, or beneath the perpendicular rays of a vertical sun, where the flowers of spring and the fruits of autumn are blended in delightful proximity, and the deep green drapery of the forest never gives place to the sear leaf and naked branches of more inhospitable climes; whether the scene of our observation lie among the enlightened Europeans, or the debased Hottentots of South Africa; whether we survey man in his most exalted state, where his perfections approximate the Deity; or in his most abject and degraded condition, where guilt is his pastime, and vice and obscenity his morality: this truth, graven in legible characters on the surface of society, everywhere meets our eyes—that custom or habit exercises a powerful and incalculable influence or control over the conduct of mankind. It is the force of habit, all-powerful and all-pervading, that endears to every individual of the human family that mode of life to which from infancy he has been accustomed. Under the magic influence of habit, the storm-beaten seaman clings with unyielding tenacity to a life of toil and of peril upon the ocean, and sickens of the inactivity and listlessness of those who depend for subsistence on the cultivation of the earth. The eagerness with which the mountain-bred Swiss follows his favorite diversion of hunting the rock-goat, in the pursuit of which over the ice-clad summits of the Alps, where a single step, misplaced, plunges him into depths unfathomable, he braves dangers in form more terrific than the fabled furies of a heathen pandemonium, owes its origin solely to the mysterious power of habit. The same power reconciles the females of one nation to the arduous and fatiguing labors of the plough; and in another nation almost disqualifies them for the discharging of those domestic duties which civilized society seems to require at their hands. Such being the influence of custom on the mental and corporeal constitution, it is no wonder that he who attempts to effect a change in the condition of mankind, which involves in itself an alteration or a retrenchment of practices to which they have been habituated from earliest life; it is no wonder, I say, that he has difficulties to encounter like to him who braves the fury of the current, to bring to land the boat which the loss of its rudder has left at the mercy of the waters. In view of the obstacles that lie in the way of an essential change in the habits of a community, no man, in his right mind, would attempt the execution of such a plan, unless impelled by the constant goadings of conscience, and incited by the deafening cries of bleeding humanity. Such, I trust, are the causes which have impelled and incited those here assembled to decisive action for the suppression of a custom which has long obtained among this people, more treacherous in its nature than the Egyptian Sphynx, and more deadly in its effects on the human constitution and human happiness than the summer blight on the vegetative world. Conscious that great and desirable purposes are never attained by feeble and remitting effort; conscious, moreover, of the opposition which those must confront who aim at a change in the customs of society, it is hoped that you have given your hands and your hearts to this work from no other motive than that which human misery affords the merciful; and no hope of reward, save that which the god-like act ever brings to the bosom of its author.

Animated by this hope, and relying on the patience of this audience, I shall, in the following remarks, in the first place, notice some of the effects which the use of ardent spirits produces on the interests of this town. Secondly, I shall endeavor to establish the position that ardent spirits are in no case absolutely and indispensably necessary; whereas, in every instance, except when the system is under the influence of disease, or sudden exhaustion, they are directly injurious.

While we speak, however, of the effects of ardent spirits on this town, from want of authentic information in regard to the quantity consumed, for the sake of comparison, a more general view of their influence will be taken. And here I would remark, after the untiring investigations of philanthropists, exhibited in the statistics with which our public journals have teemed for the last few years, it scarce seems necessary to speak of the pecuniary loss to which our country is subjected from the prevalence of the use of distilled liquors. Wherever careful examination and deliberate calculation have been resorted to, the taxes which this government has been paying for intoxicating liquors have swollen to an amount which the visionary, in his wildest flights of imagination, had never fancied. So enormous a tribute has this vice exacted from his votaries, that its computation, though couched in naked truth, seems to have borrowed the garb of romance, and, though clad in sober facts, to have assumed airs of fiction.

True, the precise amount which this town pays per annum for distilled spirits cannot be ascertained. Enough, however, may be discovered by calculating from information which may be obtained, and making such deductions as to fall short of the true amount, or at least to keep within the pale of truth; from such a course as this, I say, enough may be discovered to startle any sensibilities but those of adamant, and to awaken the sympathies of all, unless it be of those whose tender mercies are cruel.

(To be continued.)

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON IV.—Fourth Quarter.—October 25.

SUBJECT.—Christ Comforting his Disciples.—John 14: 1-3, 15-27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.—John 14: 16.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 14: 1-3 and 15-19. T.—John 14: 20-27. W.—John 13: 31-33. T.—John 16: 22-33. F.—Eph. 1: 3-13. S.—Eph. 3: 14-21. S.—Heb. 2: 10-18.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The many mansions.—vs. 1-3. One of the strongest desires of the human heart is for a home, and this always means some local habitation. In this promise of our Saviour we find the longing fully met. He will not gather his redeemed into some huge "institution," as it were, but the sacred individuality of the home-life will be preserved; for, "in my Father's house are many mansions." Jesus has gone before to prepare them for us to occupy. Does not this imply that the individual tastes of each will be tenderly regarded by him who knows us altogether, and never thinks anything of small moment which concerns the happiness of his loved ones? But this is not all. "I will come again and receive you unto myself." We shall not be left to make the journey to those heavenly mansions alone, but when they are ready our Lord will come in person for us. We know not the day or the hour of his appearing, but all prophecy points unmistakably to its near approach. Why, indeed, should we let our hearts be troubled when we can keep this glorious hope continually before us? Home does not merely mean a shelter, nor grand surroundings, nor fine furniture. It can never be home in any true sense without some dear one waiting there for us whose presence makes it home. So heaven would not be heaven without Jesus. How full of tenderest understanding of the heart's deepest needs: "that where I am, there ye may be also." We may be lonely here;—sad for friends who have left us, and homes that have been broken up by the destroyer death; but how soon our lonely hours will be over and their very memory swallowed up in the joy of ever being with Jesus!

2. The Comforter promised.—vs. 15-21. The disciples were troubled over their approaching separation from one with whom they had linked all their highest hopes, nationally and individually; and that they did not know in just what way this separation was to take place, added to their trouble the element of mystery and uncertainty. The habit of telling Jesus all that concerned them; of taking to him all their troubles and difficulties, and relying on his divine power to help them in every perplexity or danger, had become fixed. How could they ever forego his constant presence? But he promises not to leave them thus orphaned, but to send a divine Comforter. He who was the Truth must needs leave them, but the Spirit of Truth should come in his place. "Which the world cannot receive." They who reject Christ make it morally impossible for them to receive the Spirit with his comforting and illuminating influences. "But ye know him." Where Christ has been accepted, the Spirit comes, not as a stranger, but as one with whom we have already been made acquainted. "At that day ye shall know," etc. The epistles written by these very men who seemed now so stupid and earthly in their interpretation of Christ's words, abound in the clearest teachings of the deepest spiritual mysteries, which shows how this promise was fulfilled. True love is always one with obedience. It is the unfailing test of discipleship, known and read of all men; and the only certificate that will win us an entrance into heaven when we leave this world.

3. The manifested Christ.—vs. 22-24. Christ's promise that he would manifest himself to them was not to the world, seems to have perplexed them. He was (not Iscariot), but perhaps he only expressed a difficulty that was in the minds of all the rest. They had not yet given up their dream of a temporal kingdom, to which the very idea of a king who did not manifest himself to the world, seemed antagonistic. Christ answers them by asserting, in unmistakable terms, that he refers to a spiritual and not to a bodily manifestation of himself; and that it is not his own word which he speaks but the word of the Father which had sent him. As he rested content with his Father's will, so must they if they would be his true disciples. The indwelling Spirit is the same thing as the indwelling Christ, as the indwelling Father. It is the companionship of the whole Trinity which is thus promised. God dwells in the true believer, and he in him. (1 John 4: 15.)

4. The farewell.—vs. 25-27. We come now to the last touching words of farewell. Jesus had given his disciples glimpses into deep spiritual truths, and yet how little they had really understood, either about himself, or his work, his kingdom, or the way in which it was to come. The Holy Spirit must complete his instructions by enlightening their minds to remember and discern the real import of the things which he had said while he was yet with them. So the truths which we but dimly comprehended at our conversion will be made clear to us as we go on in the Christian life, if we give ourselves up to the Spirit's teachings. "Peace I leave with you," etc. This peace, which was Christ's parting legacy to his disciples, is only retained as well as maintained through this same conserving power. "Filled with the Spirit," we shall also be filled with Christ and with his peace, which, unlike the peace the world gives, is abiding; for it is dependent on no temporal or outward condition, but on the simple fact of a living union with him.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—The Baptist work in Holland began in 1845, when Bros. Kobner and Oncken, from Hamburg, visited that country and baptized seven brethren and organized them into a church. At present there are in Holland sixteen Baptist churches with a total membership of about one thousand. The smallest church has seventeen members and the largest 224. The smallest salary or support which a married pastor receives is about seventy-five dollars, and the largest about $275.

—In Bohemia, with some 6,000,000 population, there is only one little Baptist church, with eighty-two members. This church is in Prague—a city made sacred by the memories of John Huss, who because he loved truth was hated and murdered by the Romish church.

—The Standard says that the new Chicago University site comprises four blocks of ground. The deed to three of these was made first to the American Baptist Education Society. The society has now deeded to the University and these deeds have been recorded. The fourth block is deeded to the University directly by the seller. On the 21st of September the common council of Chicago passed an ordinance vacating the streets and alleys running through the site, giving the University one solid block 1,261 feet long and 802 feet wide, making the area inside the block lines between twenty-three and twenty-four acres, and immensely increasing its value for the purposes of the institution. This action opens the way for the board to carry out its plans for covering the site with a beautiful group of buildings.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Forty years ago Minnesota had no Congregational churches; to-day 200, with 173 Sunday-schools, and 60 meeting-houses. It is doing work among the Germans, Scandinavians and Bohemians. The average pastor's salary is $1,022, and $37,000 is paid in the year to the seven missionary societies.

—Rev. A. W. Parry, having resigned his Congregational pastorate at Spring Valley, Ill., has united with the Free Methodist Conference recently held at Morris, Ill., and has received an appointment as pastor of the church at Aurora, Ill.

—Crescent City, Ill., has refitted and re-seated its church building. President Blanchard of Wheaton College, preached the dedication sermon.

—Rev. D. W. Wise, of the College church, Wheaton, is to give a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Success in Life," to the students. On a recent Sunday evening he spoke on "Where to Begin." The audiences fill the church to its capacity. Pastor Wise finds a grand field for usefulness in this College church.

—Congregationalism in Montana, though yet in its infancy, is slowly gaining strength. The four churches of a year and a half ago have "gained other four." Still another will soon follow, but for lack of funds a cry from a rapidly developing and churchless region as large as the State of Delaware must meet with no response.

LUTHERAN.

—Twenty-five years ago there were only one or two churches along the line of the Norfolk & Western R. R. in Virginia. Now there are congregations at Vinton, Salem, Radford, Pulaski, Wytheville, Crocketts, Rural Retreat, Atkins, Marion, Bristol, Meadow View and Roanoke.

—Salem German Lutheran church, which has been meeting in a hall over a beer saloon in Chicago, for some time, will soon purchase a lot and begin the erection of a church. Rev. J. D. Severinghaus, D.D., is the present pastor.

—Rev. Holmes Dysinger, D.D., President of Carthage, Ill., College, will deliver the sermon on Education at the next meeting of the Synod of Northern Illinois.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—A great Epworth League meeting is to be held in Washington in connection with the Ecumenical Conference.

—The Rock River lay electoral conference was unanimously opposed to the opening of the Columbian Exposition on Sunday; asked the general conference to authorize the official recognition and appointment of duly accredited persons, ordained or unordained, to evangelistic work; instructed its delegates to work and vote for equal representation in the general conference; and reaffirmed the teaching of the discipline in regard to temperance and prohibition.

—A daughter of Bishop Tanner of the African M. E. church is the first woman of any race to pass the Alabama State medical examination. She passed credibly, and is now resident physician at the Tuskegee (Ala.) Institute.

—De Pauw University opens the year with the attendance in every department the largest on record. The freshman class will reach 150. The newly-elected professors are on the ground; greatly increased facilities have been provided.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—Priest Phelan, editor of the Western Watchman, says, "We would draw and quarter Protestantism. We would tear it with pincers, and fire it with hot irons. We would fill it with molten lead, and sink it into hell fire a hundred fathoms deep."

—Father Conry, of Faribault, Minn., recently surprised the school board of that city by proposing to surrender his school building with its three hundred pupils to them and abolish the Catholic parochial school. He asked that his pupils be divided up among the different ward schools of the city, the same as Protestants; and this, too, when he knew that in these schools the Scriptures are read regularly and the Lord's Prayer is recited each day at the opening of the school. His offer has been accepted by the school board, and his parochial school is no more.

—The ecclesiastical authorities of Treves have stolen a march on all the possessors of rival holy coats. The Bishop of Argenteuil, who had intended to exhibit his this autumn, will now, it seems, abandon the show. Other places where holy coats are preserved are, says the Berlin correspondent of the Standard, Locom in Hanover, Safod near Jerusalem, Santiago, Ovie do, Mayence, Ghent, Mantua, Mallorca, Halle, Cologne, Frankfurt-on-the-Maine, Friaul, Moscow, and the Lateran in Rome. The natural inference is either that Christ had more coats than it is customary for carpenters to possess, or else some of the holy raiment advertised is not authentic. —N. Y. Sun.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Rev. Dr. Marvin R. Vincent, Professor of Sacred Literature in the Union Theological Seminary, delivered the opening address to the students in that institution on Sept. 24. He spoke on "Exegesis," and took practically the same view of Biblical criticism as that held by Prof. Briggs.

—The Minutes of Kansas Synod show little progress, but commendable diligence—a net increase in the Synod of 16 members, with a total contribution of $10.22 per member to all purposes.

—The Synod of Pittsburgh will hold its thirtieth annual meeting in the Sixth United Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, on the 20th of October.

—Dr. Briggs has returned and now occupies the chair in Union Seminary which the General Assembly said he should not fill. The New York Presbytery meet shortly, and before that body he will be arraigned on the 4th of November for heresy.

WESLEYAN.

—The General Conference is to commence October 21, 1891, and will meet at Grand Rapids, Mich. Grand Rapids is a large and growing city. Opening sermon by Rev. N. Wardner, of Syracuse, N. Y.

—Of the men who entered the British Wesleyan ministry half a century ago or earlier, no less than twenty-seven died last year. There now remain one whose work dates from 1825, one from 1826, one from 1828, two from 1829, three from 1830, four from 1832, four from 1833, eight from 1834, ten from 1835, eleven from 1836, eight from 1837, eleven from 1838, eleven from 1839, twenty-three from 1840 (a remarkable date as pointed out twelve months since), nine from 1841, eight from 1842, thirteen from 1843, twelve from 1844, seventeen from 1845, seventeen from 1846, twenty from 1847, seventeen from 1848, twenty-seven from 1849, and twenty-four from 1850.

—Statistics of the Wesleyan Annual Conference of North Michigan, Rev. H. D. Inman, presiding: They have 33 ordained elders, 8 licentiates, (not that many fields). They have 781 members. They paid their ministers during last year $3,810.88. This would be nearly $5 per member. They raised $126.61 missionary money. This would be about 16 cents per member.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The unveiling of the great equestrian statue of General Grant on Wednesday, at Lincoln Park, was a showy affair, largely participated in by secret societies, and calling together, probably, 100,000 persons. A naval display and speeches by Mayor Washburn and other prominent gentlemen, were among the attractions. Mrs. Grant was present.

The Grand Lodge of Masons of Illinois held its annual meeting here last week, with a good attendance.

The Society of the Army of the Tennessee was also in session here several days last week, and enjoyed the usual banquet.

The Republican campaign committee organized, with J. J. Badenoch chairman, and Alderman Noble secretary.

George Meredith, of Baltimore, disappeared mysteriously in this city last Friday.

The West Side Park Commissioners filed a petition in the Circuit Court praying the restoration of important records destroyed at the time of the big fire.

The winter term of night schools commenced with a success that predicts great things.

COUNTRY.

Frost Sunday night destroyed late corn and vegetables in Illinois and Iowa.

Samuel Bernstein, manufacturer of silk ribbons, of New York, failed Monday. Liabilities $30,000.

Fire partially destroyed John P. Squire & Co's packing establishment in East Cambridge, Mass., Monday night. Loss, $150,000; fully insured.

The Rev. Philip H. Garret was sentenced to one year's imprisonment Monday at Reading, Pa., for fraudulently obtaining $250 on a life insurance policy.

The Greenlee and Forst oil well at McDonald, Pa., has been drilled deeper, increasing the flow to 14,400 barrels per day, making it the largest oil well in the world.

At New York Monday, Mrs. Annie Murphy, Miss Kate Dunn, John Toohey, and Martin D. Toohey, were burned to death in a tenement fire.

Edwin Drestell, of Altoona, Iowa, was killed Monday while riding in a funeral procession, by a team running away and overturning his carriage together with several others. Four other persons were fatally injured, and many were more or less hurt.

Total collections of internal revenue during the first two months of the present fiscal year were $26,135,133, an increase of $632,557 over the corresponding period of last year.

Charles H. Ritter, a defaulting bank teller at Evansville, Ind., was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary Monday.

Hogs are dying of a strange disease in the country northwest of Goshen, Ind. The animals are usually sick two or three weeks before dying.

Fire destroyed the Greenwood 120-stamp-quartz mill, near Deadwood, S. D., Saturday night. The loss was $150,000 and the insurance but $10,000.

The Rev. Samuel Benedict, rector of St. Paul Protestant Episcopal church at Cincinnati, Ohio, was almost instantly killed Tuesday evening in an elevator accident.

The trial of Dr. Briggs, on the charge of heresy, was set Tuesday for Nov. 4, in the Scotch Presbyterian church, at New York.

Miss Elizabeth Bisland, the "globe trotter" and rival of "Nellie Bly," was married to Charles W. Wetmore, a New York lawyer, Tuesday.

General Franz Siegel delivered an address Tuesday at the German day-celebration at Fort Madison, Iowa.

From Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 2,829 miles of new railway track have been laid in this country.

Bishops Esher and Bowman, of the German Evangelical church, were found not guilty of charges against them Tuesday by a committee appointed by the conference at Indianapolis.

More than half of the business part of Columbus Junction, Iowa, was burned Tuesday. The loss is estimated from $130,000 to $150,000. It is nearly covered by insurance.

The supply of natural gas at Springfield, Ohio, is so low as to be of no value.

Mme. Zazel, a performer with a circus, fell from a wire a distance of fifty feet at Las Vegas, N. M., Tuesday. No bones were broken, but she was badly shaken up.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Oct. 5 to 10:

S Heaton, E Pennock, Mrs M J Olney, R R Pinkerton, D W Farnham, S Beseker, J McLean, J W Moss, R D Nichols, C C Martin.

"Not all is gold that glitters" is a true saying; it is equally true that not all is sarsaparilla that is so labeled. If you would be sure of the genuine article, ask for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and take no other. Health is too precious to be trifled with.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	97 3/4 @	98
Winter.....	98 @	99
Corn—No. 2.....	53 3/4 @	56 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	26 @	29
Rye—No. 2.....	84 @	84 1/2
Bran per ton.....	12 50 @	12 75
Hay—Timothy.....	9 00 @	11 50
Butter, medium to best....	19 @	23
Cheese.....	06 1/2 @	09 1/4
Beans.....	1 65 @	1 85
Eggs.....	18 @	18 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	75 @	1 12
Flax.....	95 @	96
Broom corn.....	4 @	05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	25 @	35
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 3/4 @	5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	6 00 @	6 40
Common to good.....	3 40 @	4 25
Hogs.....	4 65 @	5 25
Sheep.....	4 00 @	4 75

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 05 @	1 09 1/2
Corn.....	60 3/4 @	62 3/4
Oats.....	33 1/4 @	34 1/4
Eggs.....	21 @	22
Butter.....	13 @	27
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @	5 75
Hogs.....	2 25 @	4 65
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 50

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors a gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, 50

Address, W. I. PHILLIP, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago 1)

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Loggott. 25cts each.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Never use water from a stone reservoir for cooking purposes.

Cook oatmeal in a double boiler, or in a covered pail set in a kettle of water. Be sure to salt it.

A sponge may be cleansed by letting it lie covered with milk for twelve hours and then rinsing in cold water.

Salt will curdle milk; therefore, in preparing milk toast, sauces, scrambled eggs, or anything of which milk is the foundation, do not add the salt till the pan has left the fire.

Melted paraffine poured on top of jellies, jams, etc., also on the top of canned fruit when the covers are discolored, will be all the covering necessary, excepting a cloth or paper to exclude dust. One can use the paraffine many times.

Any one who doubts as to the best way to have clear jelly, is assured, on strong evidence and many proofs, that to allow the juice to drain through a flannel bag without squeezing it, will render this matter easy and satisfactory.

To poach eggs nicely, lay muffin rings in a spider of hot water which has a little salt in, then break each egg by itself in a saucer, and pour into the rings as you break one. They can be lifted out by the thin slice which you use to turn griddle cakes.

You will find empty salt bags very convenient for straining starch, for fruit, juices, etc. One lady of my acquaintance keeps them especially for covering pots of butter. They are washed, cut open, laid smoothly over the butter, and covered with a half inch of salt. The pots are then tied down with several thicknesses of paper.

Apropos of the subject of caring for nice dishes, it seems to me that a practical way out of the difficulty for most housekeepers is to wash them themselves. We know that is the practice of many English ladies who keep servants; and a late traveler in Holland, who visited a wealthy family, speaks of a pretty domestic custom of his hostess, which was to have a bowl of hot water, towels, etc., brought to her, and sit and wash up the delicate china while her guests and family yet sat and chatted at the tea table.

Apple Ice, etc.—Grate, sweeten and freeze well-flavored apples, pears, peaches, or quinces.

Baked Quinces.—Wash and core ripe quinces, fill with sugar, and bake in baking dish with a little water.

Peach Custard.—Equal parts rich sliced peaches, green corn pulp and water, sweeten to the taste and bake twenty minutes.

Ripe Tomato Pickles.—Pare ripe, sound tomatoes (do not scald), put in a jar, scald spices (tied in a bag) in vinegar and pour while hot over them.

Grape or Plum Jam.—Stew in a little water and press the fruit through a colander or coarse sieve, adding a little water to plums to get all the pulp through, add sugar, and finish as in other jams.

THE SUNSHINE OF SMILES.

There is one kind of sunshine which it is needful to bring into every home, and that is the sunshine of smiles. Next to the sunlight and warmth of heaven is that of a cheerful face. No one can long withstand its influence; no one can mistake it. A bright eye, an unclouded brow, a sunny smile, a loving word, all tell of the peace and joy that dwell within. One glance at such a face has lifted the mists and shadows from many a heavy heart and scattered the fogs from many a burdened spirit. A bright, warm, cheerful face inside the house will drive away gloom and render it impossible for it to exist. The germs of disease, which may lurk at times in the most elegant furnished room if kept dark, will vanish away before the bright and cheery sunlight. Open, therefore, the windows of your heart and let the sunshine in.

GUM CHEWING.

Our young lady readers will be interested to learn that gum chewing has been subjected to a scientific examination, with the very gratifying result that the scientist makes the assertion that in this pro-

SCROFULA

eczema, tetter, boils, ulcers, sores, rheumatism, and catarrh, cured by taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It purifies, vitalizes, invigorates, and enriches the blood.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES of Lime and Soda

Is endorsed and prescribed by leading physicians because both the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites are the recognized agents in the cure of Consumption. It is as palatable as milk.

Scott's Emulsion is a perfect Emulsion. It is a wonderful Flesh Producer. It is the Best Remedy for CONSUMPTION, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Coughs and Colds. Ask for Scott's Emulsion and take no other.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

LISTEN

Have you written to us yet? If you haven't, you better at once. You don't want to miss YOUR opportunity. Read our illustrated advertisement in the first issue this month, of this paper. MONEY to be made rapidly, by any industrious person of either sex. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 per day. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Can devote all your time or spare time only to it. We instruct and show you how FREE. Easy to learn. We start you. Write and learn all FREE by return mail. Address at once, H. Hallett & Co., Box 1750, Portland, Maine cess "the masseter muscles which move the jaw are abnormally developed, and the fatty substance which produces fair, plump cheeks is deteriorated." Those young ladies who are anxious to develop big and ugly muscles in the face, and to gain a lean, pale appearance, with a kind of staring out of the eye, will take special interest in this decision. But those who long for fair, plump cheeks and rosy lips will stop the disgusting habit of chewing gum. Health and beauty and decency all unite in demanding that the young ladies abandon a practice so unbecoming.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS. ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escapements, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgin movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00 With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50 (11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. Tho Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer-head, horse-head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00 With the Cynosure one year, hunting case..... 23.00 With the Cynosure one year, open face..... 19.75

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

ODDS AND ENDS.

New York is still the leading dairy State of the Union. Iowa stands a good second.

Remove and burn all limbs of plum trees affected by black knot.

As the weather becomes cooler more corn may be fed to the young fowls.

Fumigate the granaries with sulphur burned in an iron pot before putting in new grain.

The farm home should be made as pleasant as possible with flowers and shrubs.

White specks in butter can be traced to a temperature too high or skimming too close.

Grass is the most important crop on the farm, and serves not only to provide a supply of food, but it is also a renovator of the soil.

Bran is an excellent element in the cow's ration. If we have the conveniences for keeping bran in good condition, the mills have plenty of it to sell just at this time.

What to do with a kicking cow, is a question that frequently comes up. Get rid of her, unless she is exceedingly valuable. A kicking cow is a nuisance of large proportions. A very simple contrivance, effectual in some such cases, is this: Simply set two posts alongside of a building, the cow's length distance apart. Put a couple of rails in it. Fasten up the place at the head. Drive the cow in and put up a bar at the rear. The average cow thinks she is fast and will not kick.

Seth Fenner says: "The clover plant has two functions, one of a feeding value and another of a manural value, and if we judiciously combine them we shall certainly solve the problem of hard times. Every farmer, if his pocket-book will permit, should feed his clover to some kind of live stock on the farm, and thereby obtain its great feeding value and return it to the farm. It is a most valuable manure. If the live stock cannot be obtained, plow it under while in bloom, or spread it on the farm as a mulch, and then plow under. The manural value of clover is nearly $9 a ton."

The hogs are now ready to begin the process of fattening. If they have been kept over the second year, which has always been our practice, the strong, bony frames will begin to show the result of feeding from the start. It should never be forgotten that the process of fattening is in a sense an unhealthy one in its tendencies. We are building up one side of the system, and usually we utterly neglect the other side. We are engaged in clogging up the organs with fat accumulation and heating the blood. The fat animal is in a sort of a feverish state all the time. If we really do neglect totally the feeding of the bone and muscle, while fattening the swine, it should never surprise us if the system breaks down. But if we furnish some bone and muscle forming food, while feeding corn, the animal will not only keep growing but will be more likely to retain its health. By thus feeding we have always kept our swine growing all through the period of fattening.—Western Rural.

POULTRY NOTES.

If your fowls do not have range see that they have green food and meat or insects every day.

One of the reasons why people that try to raise poultry on a large scale fail in their undertakings is because they try to carry on the business on too little capital. Small flocks may be kept without any outlay except for the fowls themselves, but this rule does not hold good with the large flocks.

With spring chickens selling at fifteen cents per pound, old hens at ten, and old roosters at five, is it profitable to keep the cockerels and feed them sixty-cent corn to sell next spring or summer at five cents?

"There is one thing about hens that looks like wisdom—they don't kackle much until after they have laid their eggs. Sum pholks are alwus a bragging and a kackling what they are agoling tew do beforehand."—Josh Billings.

The other day we saw on South Water street a "box" made of inch boards

(cleats across the bottom) that was ten inches deep, fifteen inches wide and five feet long. The cover was also of inch stuff, and nailed so there were three cracks, each an inch wide. What do you suppose such a box contained? It was crowded full of live spring chickens, and shipped from Wisconsin. When it reached here there were seven of the chicks dead and several more nearly so. The shipper will, of course, blame the commission man that the chicks weighed out so light, and the express company will be charged with making excessive charges. The shipper was to blame for the heavy weight upon which charges had to be paid and for the light weight from which he received pay. Worse than all he had this request nailed to the death trap: "Please return the box to ———, Wis." Don't ship live chicks in tight boxes. Don't use inch boards in making shipping coops unless you are willing to pay heavy toll.—Farm Field and Stockman.

As soon as the crops are beyond the reach of injury from poultry, the hens should be allowed full freedom on such spaces, not only for exercise, but in order that they may assist in the destruction of insects. They can do no harm scratching, but will pick up quite an amount of food that may be serviceable, and which will be better for the hens than to remain on the ground.—Exchange.

SHIPPING EGGS.

Eggs in market at this season are very closely examined, as the supposition is that during warm weather they are liable to be stale. Before shipping them, use care that all the eggs are strictly fresh, as a single stale egg among a lot will impair the sale of all. Suspicion always rests on eggs, and confidence in the shipper is quite a factor in selling them. Always assort the dark eggs from the light ones, so as to take advantage of the preferences of buyers.—Mirror and Farmer.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Sellin Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
	SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
	TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.25
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumm. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

I have Tried

the new five cent package of Pyle's Pearline and like it—decidedly—economical for use—economical to hand to servants—no waste by upsetting.

I know Pearline is never peddled—gives no prizes—is a prize in itself; and further I know, when a grocer tells me "this is just as good as" or "same as" Pearline, he does not know the truth, or else is not telling it.

Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

BICYCLES Given Away FREE. WORTH $45. FREE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE. WITHOUT ONE CENT OF MONEY.

If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle they can obtain it free without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1,000 more.

DESCRIPTION OF BICYCLE: The wheels are 26 inches with crescent steel rims and molded rubber tires, and run on hardened steel cone bearings, adjustable to wear; geared to 46 inches; detachable cranks; four to five inches throw; frame finely enameled, with nickel trimmings. Each machine is supplied with tool bag, wrench and oiler. Equal in quality to those sold on the market for $45.00. We have both boys' and girls' styles. We deliver the bicycle free of all charges anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscrip't'n price.	Our price for both.
The Voice (N. Y.)	$1.00	and Cynosure $2.50
Union Signal (new subscribers only)	.50	" 2.00
Cosmopolitan and premium (see premium offer)	3.50	" 4.80
North American Review	5.00	" 5.50
Popular Science Monthly	5.00	" 5.50
Century Magazine	4.00	" 5.00
Harper's Magazine	4.00	" 4.50
Harper's Weekly	4.00	" 4.75
Scribner's Magazine	3.00	" 4.00
Independent	3.00	" 4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN G. FEE.

An Autobiography.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, postpaid, $1.00.

President J. Blanchard says: "Of all the books which the fall of slavery has produced, none surpasses this little biography of Mr. Fee, the instruction it affords as to the nature of slavery and its workings in families and churches, and, finally, in the war of States."

Until the first of November next, old or new subscribers to the Cynosure can secure this remarkable autobiography and the Cynosure one year for only $2.00.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

TO YOU FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,

Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or

SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,

Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or

SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,

Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or

MCCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,

In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The

Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lobbess Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd Fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 89 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

IT COSTS MORE to make Royal Baking Powder than any other, because its ingredients are more highly refined and expensive. But the Royal is correspondingly purer and higher in leavening strength, and of greater money value to the consumer. Attempts may be made to substitute other powders for the Royal by the grocer, because of the greater profit in them to him. Send them back.

The chemist of the department of Health of Brooklyn, after examining the various powders, said: "The Royal is superior to all baking powders with regard to leavening power, economy in use, and healthfulness."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The United States steamer Dispatch went ashore in a heavy gale on the As-teague Shoals on the east coast of Virginia, about sixty miles northeast of Cape Charles.

Pearls of rare beauty have been discovered in great quantities in shells in the Cottonwood River near Guthrie, O. T.

Senator Baranoff estimates that no fewer than 32,000,000 peasants in Russia are now destitute and must be provided for for the next ten months. It will require 320,000,000 poods of grain to feed them.

At the next meeting of that body it will be settled whether the Trades and Labor Assembly shall longer exist.

The October crop reports show the wheat crops better than was expected.

Four hundred men in St. Louis were victimized by an insurance company.

The trial of John B. Woods, charged with the murder of Alexander S. Brown at the commencement exercises of the Hiawassa (Ga.) Institute last May, has resulted in his conviction.

The appeal to the Masons by American women to take action on behalf of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman now in an English prison convicted of the murder of her husband, is taking shape.

The town of Dwight, Ill., was partially destroyed by fire.

The Twenty-first Annual Congress of the National Prison Association opened in Carnegie Hall, Allegheny, Pa.

William Canfield confessed at New Lisbon, Ohio, Tuesday, that he wrecked the train at New Palestine, Ohio, a few weeks ago in which three men were killed.

Forty per cent of the wheat crop in North Dakota is said to be in the shock and a large proportion is sprouting, so that it it will be worthless.

Robbers are reported to have plundered a stage Wednesday between Linkville and Lake View, Oregon.

At Lima, O., Wednesday, fire started in the Daily Times office, which was wholly destroyed. The warehouse of Ewing & Emerick, hardware, sash, door, blinds, also burned. The Holmes Block was partly consumed. The total loss is $92,000; insurance $73,000.

On Wednesday, at Peoria, Ill., the malt house at the Manhattan distillery was destroyed. It contained 13,000 bushels of barley. The building and contents were valued at $18,000, fully insured.

At Washington, Ohio, fire in the Court House damaged the building and destroyed valuable records; loss, $5,000; incendiarism suspected; insured.

On Wednesday, at Anderson, Ind., the box factory of Abe Hopper & Son burned. The loss on building, stock and machinery is $6,000. There is $1,500 insurance.

Fire destroyed the Kankakee (Ill.) Crystal Ice Company's ice houses Thursday. Loss, $15,000; insurance, $10,000.

Fire in the attic of East Divinity Hall, Yale College, New Haven Conn., damaged the buildings to the extent of about $10,000. About sixty theological students who roomed in the building suffer a loss of from $100 to $250 each on books, furniture, clothing, etc.

William Kissar, an aeronaut, of Louisville, Ky., was killed at Greenup, Ill., Thursday, while making an ascent.

Mrs. M. F. Hinman was elected president of the Iowa W. C. T. U. at the Creston convention Thursday.

Fire Thursday, at Montgomery, Ala., destroyed Hunter & Co.'s compress and 2,500 bales of cotton, causing a loss of $125,000. At Mayfield, Ky., six acres of ground were burned over. The loss is placed at $100,000, with but little insurance.

The case against Private Detective D. C. O'Malley, who was charged with bribing the Hennessy jury, was dismissed Thursday at New Orleans, La.

The house at No. 101 Fifth avenue, New York, owned by Mrs. Haywood Cutting, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, was burned Thursday, Loss, $200,000.

Rivers in Oklahoma, swollen by the heavy rains, have destroyed the property of "boomers" and washed out railroads.

Anson H. Hamilton, proprietor of the Cape House, Shoreham Hotel and other property at Cape May, N. J., has failed for $100,000.

Exports of barley from Canada to the United States for the year ending July 3 were 4,800,000 bushels, as compared with 10,000,000 bushels for the preceding year.

Governor Campbell, of Ohio, has filed two suits for damages against the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, each for $50,000, for defamation of character.

Fire at Ottawa, Ontario, Tuesday destroyed Barkerville Bros' wholesale grocery warehouse, and Kennedy McDonald's agriculture warehouse. The loss, $30,000, is covered by insurance.

James McGuire was burned to death at Braddock, Pa., Tuesday in a fire which consumed six houses.

FOREIGN.

Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish leader in Parliament, died at Brighton, Eng., Wednesday, after a brief illness, aged 45 years. His funeral occurred on Sunday last, near Dublin.

Karl I., King of Wurtemberg, died Tuesday at Stuttgart, aged 68 years.

Tuesday the Rt. Hon. William Henry Smith, First Lord of the Treasury and government leader in the House of Commons, died at London.

Brigands attempted to wreck a train at a desolate spot on the Haidar-Pachala-mid Railway in Turkey Monday for the purpose of robbery. The obstructions were discovered in time and the brigands decamped.

While citizens were in the Pantheon at Rome for the purpose of placing a wreath on Victor Immanuel's tomb Sunday, a number of radicals mounted some of the altars and made violent speeches denouncing the Vatican.

Troubles among the dock laborers at Wapping, London, continue. A number of non-union men have been stoned.

Advices from the continent in regard to the sugar beet crop are less favorable regarding quality.

The German Bundersrath considered the projected law to repress drunkenness, the pet measure of the Emperor, but only one member defended it.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M Stanley, accompanied by Mrs. Tennant, the mother of Mrs. Stanley, have started on a tour of Australia.

The London Times publishes a final estimate of the state of the crops in Great Britain, and says that it anticipates a bad yield and of indifferent quality.

Richard C. Jebb, the famous Greek professor of Cambridge University constituency, has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the Rt. Hon. Henry C. Raikes, late Postmaster General.

The operatives of every bottle factory in France, with the exception of those at Planzy, have struck, in obedience to the orders of the Glass-workers' Union.

Sir James Ferguson, Postmaster-General, was elected to Parliament for North-east Manchester, defeating the Liberal candidate by 150 votes.

Rioting has begun in Amoy and Shun King, China.

Prices of food are rising rapidly throughout the Russian Empire.

Rioting began from some unknown cause in a Rio Janeiro theater Thursday night and soon spread to the streets. It became necessary for the cavalry to charge the mob repeatedly. Several persons were killed and many injured.

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocos, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure food and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London, England.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

PROHIBITION

All because of millions of money invested in manufacturing enterprises in millions more seeking locations there now.

HARVEY.

NOW

Is the time to secure lots in ACADEMY ADDITION—

BEFORE PRICES ADVANCE.

WE HAVE

the only Plat showing

THE WHOLE OF HARVEY

as originally proposed, and send it

FREE

to all readers of this paper.

UNSOLICITED

testimonials come from all quarters.

"It is not often that the publishers of any paper have the opportunity to heartily indorse with full confidence a real estate advertisement. We can do that very thing for the new temperance town of Harvey. We ask the attention of every reader of World-Wide Missions to the advertisement of Walter Thomas Mills & Co."—From World-Wide Missions, July, 1891.

LARGE PROFITS

are being made by those who purchase lots. ACADEMY ADDITION HAS THE STRONGEST PROHIBITORY CLAUSE EVER USED IN ANY DEED ANYWHERE, and is near the WORLD'S FAIR SITE.

FREE TRANSPORTATION from our office to all who desire to investigate. Special rates are being made on all Railroads to Chicago Exposition. Large numbers of people are taking advantage of these rates. You do the same, and come direct to our office.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,
161 La Salle St., - - Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA POSITIVELY CURED

By the Swedish Asthma Cure. Sample mailed free. Address COLLINS BROS. DRUG CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defense," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 6

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,121.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments....	1
The Kansas Convention..	8
Rev. O. P. Gifford in Chicago.....	8
The Iowa Convention....	8
His Salary.....	8
The York Rite.....	8
The State Christian Conference at Vernon, Wis.	8
The Union of Church and Lodge.....	8
An Open Letter.....	9
The Knights of Pythias..	9
Personal Mention.....	9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Impromptu Lines (Poetry).....	1
The Farmer's Alliance..	1
A neat a Barrel of Whiskey.....	2
Wisconsin Free Methodists	3
SELECTED:
Converted by the "Holy Coat".....	3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.....	4
WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4
REFORM NEWS:
Bro. Hinman in Wisconsin; The Washington Agent in New York; Bro. Fenton in Wheaton and Chicago.....	4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Dr. Thwing's Hospital in Alaska; The Sabbath Laws in Baltimore; New York Letter.....	5,6
LITERATURE.....	6
OBITUARY.....	7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.....	7
THE N. C. A.....	7
THE HOME.....	10
TEMPERANCE.....	11
BIBLE LESSON.....	12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
MARKETS.....	13
HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
FARM NOTES.....	15

The report published in the Daily News of this city, a few weeks ago, that the Farmers' Alliance had developed anarchism, seemed to lack confirmation at the time; but the article on the Alliance, which begins on this page to-day will indicate how readily such a charge might be made against the order and possibly sustained. Its anti-republican and un-Christian dogmas are ably handled by Bro. Boardman.

The Republicans of Kansas hold their honor very cheap. At the recent meeting of the four hundred delegates of their State League at Topeka, formal recognition was given to the bogus "Knights of Reciprocity." This secret lodge began life away in the barren region of Southwestern Kansas, and its swindling character was exposed in the Cynosure at the time. But it has grown into such power that the Republican League now takes it into fellowship and receives delegates from its lodges. Of course, such a combination had nothing to say in favor of prohibition in Kansas, so gallantly won by the valiant St. John.

Official notice is given by the Attorney General of the State of Washington that "the Bible cannot be read in the public schools without violating certain provisions of the State constitution, and says that, from an examination of the provisions on the subject of religion found in the United States Constitution and in the constitution of several States, the people of this country declare with unanimity against the union of religion with government, and that the First Congress declared that Congress should make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting a free exercise thereof." In conclusion, he says that Bible reading is strictly a religious exercise within the meaning of the section providing that no public money or property shall be appropriated for religious worship or instruction. But then this is not final.

The value of the so-called "newspaper directories" lies wholly in the correctness with which they state the circulation of the various journals which they list as suitable mediums for advertisers. Any suspected fraud in overestimating or reporting the number of copies circulated of any paper should be adjusted before the list is given to the world; but the publisher of any newspaper who swears to its circulation should be protected against the malevolence of the directory-maker, and his sworn statement should be accepted as the truth. Upon such statement of facts, the present publisher of the Saturday Blade and the Chicago Ledger has sued Geo. P. Rowell & Co., newspaper directory publishers, for an alleged and injurious reduction of the number of copies of the Saturday Blade as furnished by the publisher, who lays his damages at $50,000.

IMPROMPTU LINES.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALBEXANDRA STONE.

It is not very long
That we shall wander here,
Though heart and hand be strong
To do the Master's will, yet, yet, I know this still,
'Twill not be very long
That we shall wander here.

So that we do our best,
Helping the weak, making the mourner glad
With cheering words, with kind words to the sad;
E'en as He spake them, let us do our best,
And leave to God the rest.

The Father knoweth all!
The weary way we tread, the aching heart,
The dark temptation, and the fondering bark
In which we sail, the shroud, the bier, the pall—
Fear not, fear not, though foes o'erclimb the wall—
The Father knoweth all.

Steamburg, N. Y.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

A REVIEW OF ITS POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS CHARACTER AND TENDENCIES.—AN UNREPUBLICAN INSTITUTION AND A FALSE RELIGION.

BY REV. WILLARD C. BOARDMAN, OF KANSAS.

[This article will be printed in three or more issues of this paper, reviewing carefully and exhaustively the political and religious errors of the Farmers' Alliance. The author is a preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist denomination, who, several months ago, was requested by one of the leading members of a local Alliance in Kansas to lend his influence in behalf of the order. Too wary to be misled into the support of a secret organization without further knowledge of its character and tendencies, he asked several pointed questions. The replies were guarded, and their platitudes are in this article fully controverted. It will repay a careful perusal.—EDITOR.]

I received your letters some time ago, and was very glad to obtain the information from you that I did. I also received the papers, and was pleased to get them, for they have been a great help to me.

You may think that I am working against the farmer and laboring man; but I am not. I was brought up on a farm, and have a warm feeling for the farmer, and will do all I can to help him; and never will I do anything, knowingly, to injure him.

Let me say, right here, as I have often stated, both publicly and privately, that you need not blame any man, conference, or church, for what

ANTI-SECRET STATE CONVENTIONS.

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin State Anti-Secrecy Convention is to be held at VERNON, WAUKESHA COUNTY, in the Reformed Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Isaiah Faris is pastor, beginning on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29TH, and continuing through the following day. Rev. H. H. Hinman is now in Wisconsin, endeavoring to create a general interest in this Convention among the friends of anti-secrecy reform, to whom a cordial invitation to attend is extended.

IOWA

The Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will hold its Annual State Convention on TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, THE 10TH AND 11TH OF NOVEMBER, at CRAWFORDSVILLE, WASHINGTON COUNTY. Rev. John V. Potts, the new Agent in Iowa, is laboring faithfully in behalf of this Convention in that State. A large attendance is desired. The program is as follows:

FIRST DAY.—Nov. 10, 1:30 P. M. Call to order. Roll made out. Organization effected. 2:00. Address of welcome by Rev. F. J. Wilson of the W. M. church. Response by the president, Rev. S. A. Gilley. 2:30. Personal experiences in the anti-secret work; open to all. 3:30 Appointment of committees. Adjourn.

Evening Session.—7:00. Devotional exercises. 7:20. Address, "Our Duty in Relation to National Evils," by Rev. M. A. Gault. 8:20. Discussion of foregoing in five-minute speeches. 9:20. Adjourn.

SECOND DAY. Morning Session.—Nov. 11, 9 A. M. Religious services. 9:30. Business. Report of committees. Agent's report. 10:30. Address, "Correlation of the Trinity of National Evils—Rum, Romanism and the Secret Empire." 11:30. Discussion of the above. 12:00. Adjourn.

Afternoon Session.—1:30. Religious exercises. 2:00. Business. 2:30. Address, "Methods of Work," by Rev. J. V. Potts, State agent. 3:15. Discussion of above. 3:45. Business-Election of officers. 4:30. Adjourn.

Last Session.—7:00 P. M. Religious exercises. 7:20. Business. 7:45. Address by Rev. J. B. McMichael, president of Monmouth College.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND

The New England Annual Convention will be held at Boston on WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention is Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stalwart Reform preacher. Rev. J. P. Stoddard is exerting his influence to make it a notable gathering of the friends of reform throughout the Eastern States.

ILLINOIS

At present nothing seems to be definitely settled as to the location and date of the Annual State Anti-Secrecy Convention, but it will be held AT AN EARLY DAY. Due announcement of all necessary details will be made soon. Rev. William Fenton, of Minnesota is now engaged in creating an interest in its behalf.

I say; for I speak my convictions, and, as I must meet them at the Judgment, by the help of God I gladly stand by them.

I have great respect for your order, and especially for the stand you have taken. I believe you are honest, and that you really think that your cause is right and well-pleasing to God; but I think that you are mistaken.

While your order may have many good things about it, yet I believe that the method is wrong, and that the final result will be ruinous to all.

I am glad to hear that the order does not believe in retaliation. You misunderstood my meaning as to the "Southern move." But it was my mistake, and therefore your criticism was just. I heartily indorse the sermon, "The Blue and the Gray." A "move" like that before the "Rebellion" was what I meant. And such a "move" should be watched with the same caution, no matter where it originates—East, West, North, or South; and when I hear that your president, at the opening of the battle of Gettysburgh, ordered a company of defenceless Union soldiers, after they had surrendered and were received, to be shot down in cold blood, right contrary to the rules of war, just simply to prevent them from falling back into the Union lines again, I am afraid that he is a dangerous man. I may be mistaken, but that is the way it looks to me.

We come now to consider the method of secrecy.

The Republican party, or the Democratic party, may have a few secret gatherings, but it cannot be maintained that either is equal to the Alliance. They have no organized system of secrecy, no grips, pass-words, or oaths, but the Alliance has. They may do wrong, and often take advantage, by their secret conventions, if they have any; and the very fact of going into secrecy, if such be the case, creates suspicion; and it ought to. It is therefore a presumption against it. If secrecy is a good thing, why does your order try to make out that there is only just a little bit of secrecy about it? It won't do. I belong to neither of the "old" parties, and never expect to belong to either. Neither do I ever expect to uphold secrecy—never.

Read the Bible, search history, and you will find that God carried on his entire system of work openly, and he has had worse men to deal with than our parasites or devourers (money men); and if we take the right course he will rebuke the "devourer" for our sakes. (Mal. 3: 8-12.) You will also find that Satan has carried on his work through deception and secrecy, or darkness.

Which method will we pursue? I see that your motto, the one you laud so high, is, "Equal rights to all, and special favors to none." Good! That suits me. The railroad man, lawyer, merchant, laboring man, etc., are all to have equal rights.

I find the same thought brought out in the preamble of the Constitution of the United States by two words: "Establish justice." That's right.

I go next to the Bible and find the same thought, where Christ said, "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things which are God's." Good! That's what we want and must have.

I believe that the laboring man ought to have a just remuneration for his work, and no more. The capitalist should have a just remuneration for his capital, and no more. We are speaking of methods, now, and not of abuses. We need both classes and must have them, and both should have "equal rights."

For example: A, B, and C own different kinds of machinery, or farms, and rent them out to D, E, and F, respectively, who have none. The former should receive a just reward for their capital, and the latter for their work. Both parties should agree on the prices, rent, etc., or, in other words, make the laws. It would not be just, or equal rights, for the former to enter into a secret society, or "trust," and fix the prices; neither would it be right for the latter to do the same; but in either case it would be wrong and entirely unjust, even if one class were to make proper laws, for it would be depriving the other class of the rights that sacredly belong to them.

All should have a voice in public matters, for it belongs to all; otherwise it would not be "equal rights to all," but, "special favors to some" and, in some cases, "robbery." I see by your papers that even your own men bring this out far stronger than I have done, when they speak of "robbery by trusts," etc., etc. But where does the wrong lie if not mainly in the method of secrecy, and the method is what we are now considering?—and, let me say, right here, before I forget it, that those who believe in secret societies ought not to complain, nor even be surprised, when they hear about the great wrongs, "robbery," and the like, for it is just what they should expect from such a method.

"Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" (Matt. 7: 16.) "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit; neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." (Matt. 7: 18)

It is just what they should expect. I heartily say with you: "Away with the wrongs, robbery, and unjust dealings; away with the bad fruit." And I also say: "Away with that evil, poisonous tree." Cleanse the fountain and the streams will be pure, in this loathsome fountain is where the evil lies. God never sanctioned such a method. Never. Now it would be folly and the spirit of war for both parties to retaliate by combinations, and especially if they were secret, for then they could take more advantage of each other, and, as they say, "Make the others come to time." And this is just what our wicked, ungodly "trusts," etc., which your order so bitterly condemns, are doing. But is this not just the spirit of the Alliance, and what the Alliance, on the other hand, is doing?—shutting out a large class of people and trying to keep them from assisting in making the laws, thus forming one vast monopoly? Is that granting to the capitalist the same rights that you do to the farmer and laboring man?

Nay, verily. But I forget, the order does not believe in "retaliation," but in "equal rights to all, and special favors to none." It won't do. You must either stick to your method and abandon your motto, or else stick to your motto and abandon your method.

Your motto is right. Your method is wrong. The old adage is, "An ounce of experience is worth a ton of theory." And this world has had experience enough to know that the darkness of secrecy doesn't pay, and many of the best statesmen and great public teachers have been awakened to the fact.

Notice carefully the following: "The real people, occasionally assembled to express their sentiments on political doctrines, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem or finally overturn the established order of things."—George Washington. This I believe to be true; and the other day, when I was reading in your papers about "trusts," etc., I almost came to the conclusion that the latter part of the prophecy of our beloved Washington was rapidly being fulfilled; and woe to us when it is fulfilled. And yet each organization says: "All the other branches of business combine, and are working against us, so we must combine also to protect our rights." All adopt the same method to protect their rights and thus wrong each other.

Are such methods right?

I will mention only a few more who were opposed to the underhanded workings of the darkness of secrecy:

Alexander Hamilton (the friend of Washington), assisted in writing the "Farewell Address," and quoted it against secret societies.

"I am opposed to all secret associations."—John Hancock. (President of the Continental Congress.)

"In secret have I said nothing."—Jesus Christ.

"I am decidedly opposed to all secret societies whatever."—Samuel Adams. (Father of the Revolution.)

"He (J. Q. Adams, sixth President of the United States) was the Congressional advocate of anti-slavery and a bitter opponent of secret societies."—Barnes' U. S. History, p. 174 (foot-note).

"Secret oaths are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government."—Joseph Cook.

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather prove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."—St. Paul.

"Organized secrecy, in a voluntary society, is the evidence of iniquity."—Thaddeus Stevens.

"For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be manifested that they are wrought in God."—Jesus Christ.

In the foregoing quotations, no acts are named; only methods are mentioned. The method of secrecy is wrong. If it be said: "We must do this because all the rest do the same," then the answer is evident: "Two wrongs don't make a right." Or; "We must do this to bring about a good result and 'remove the cause of so much sin by making right laws.'" This would be like Satan casting out Satan; but mark one thing: Satan would be sure to come out ahead every single time. It won't do. The method is wrong. "Equal rights to all, and special favors to none," must prevail. "There is no respect of persons with God." (2 Chr. 19: 7; Rom. 2: 11; Eph. 6: 9, and Col. 3: 25.)

To be Continued.

ANENT A BARREL OF WHISKY.

BY REV. JOEL SWARTZ, D.D.

Having some business with the freight agent at the depot, I entered his office, but finding him engaged, I walked back among the goods awaiting delivery, and found, among other things, a number of barrels of whisky consigned to various well-known liquor-sellers in our town. While meditating upon the problem, how many headaches and heartaches, brawls, fights, wife and child beatings, and murders there were in one of those barrels, I stooped down to read the large government stamp, on which there was a recognizable vignette of grand old General Scott. I thought what an unspeakable shame, to stamp that old hero's face upon a whisky barrel, and that, too, by the authority of the government which he honored by his distinguished services!

But it soon occurred to me it was a greater shame to find on the stamp the capitals; "UNITED STATES: INTERNAL REVENUE;" and that this meant that the government shared in the profit of this liquor business to the extent of 90 cents per gallon. Suppose, thought I, that instead of United States...revenue, the inscription, "St. James Evangelical Lutheran Church Revenue," were on the head of this whisky barrel, whose deadly contents were to be drunk in our town, and that the pastor's salary, the furnishing and running expenses of the church were all paid for out of this revenue, then what a reproach such a stamp would be to the church. Just at this moment the agent came back, to whom I reported my meditations; whereupon he boldly affirmed that the sale of that liquor by the saloons and hotels in our town was a perfectly legitimate business; that the renting of buildings to liquor-sellers, even by our church members, and the signing of applications for license by the same, whilst held to be disreputable and worthy of church discipline, so far as the State is concerned, are all perfectly lawful, and made so, in part, by the votes of our Christian people.

"Suppose," said he, observing the impression his bold remarks made, "St. James church was reaping a revenue of 90 cents a gallon on the sale of all the liquors sold in our town, and a proposition were made by the pastor and some others to cut off this revenue, do you not suppose plausible objections would be raised against it? Some might say the liquor will be sold and drunk any way, and we cannot help that. Would it not be well to turn some of the money into a channel for the glory of God and for educating the people from the pulpit against intemperance? Moreover, the amount paid in revenue increases the price of the whisky, renders it less profitable, and so is a real temperance measure. Taking off the revenue would give us 'free whisky,' and that would be bad; then the true policy is to put the tax very high. Some there might be who would say this would interfere with 'personal liberty,' be of the nature of a 'sumptuary law,' and so, undemocratic. No doubt there would, however, be a majority of the members, especially if the women were allowed to vote—and why should they not, as they vote on all other Congregational matters?—who would totally and uncompromisingly oppose the taking of revenue from the liquor traffic for the support of the church. They would argue that to share in the gains of the business is to share in its sins and crimes; and this would be true irrespective of all considerations about restriction, free whisky, personal liberty, sumptuary laws and what not. You would find," continued he, "there would be high-stamp, low-stamp, and no-stamp people in your church."

About this time I discovered that my friend, the agent, was a crank; a regular prohibition crank. I left him, but have since thought much about the talk over the whisky barrel. He, the agent, is right. The whisky business is legitimate, for it is done under sanction of law. The saloon business is legitimate, despite its unspeakable horrors and crimes. Those who ask a share in its gains are as much in the business as those who make and sell. All who vote with the high-stamp or low-stamp factions are in the business. Only those who vote no-stamp can claim to have no share in the accursed traffic. Then, thought I, if this would be true of St. James, why not of the town, the State, the country? If the high-stamp and low-stamp voter in the church were a disgrace to the Christian name, is the high-license or low-license Christian voter, whether Republican or Democrat, any better? Is it true, then, that the Christian church is in the liquor business to the extent of the votes given to the business by its members? If this is not so, will some one show how and why it is not so? If all the Christian voters of both the dominant political parties were to withdraw and vote only to prohibit the liquor business, a clear majority for prohibition would at once be secured. Until then, they are in the liquor business, and share in the awful crimes and sins which arise out of it. Their denunciations of it in synods, conferences and presbyteries, or otherwise, are in vain, and, moreover, are chargeable with inconsistency, if not with downright hypocrisy.

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Gettysburgh, Pa.

WISCONSIN FREE METHODISTS.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON REFORM.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" was the insolent question of the murderer Cain. "I am debtor both to the Greek and to the Barbarian, both to the wise and to the unwise," was the sympathetic cry of the God-fearing Paul. "God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." Acts 17:26.

Therefore the interests of all men are our interests, and everything in church or state, in public or private, that injures our brother in body, soul, or spirit, or robs him of his God-given liberties, we must uncompromisingly and forever oppose.

The present state of society demands a reform in about every department of life.

Many forms of evil, gigantic in influence, prevail. Among these, drunkenness is one of the most prominent and destructive. Public attention is being drawn, as never before, to the fact that the liquor traffic is the greatest evil of the age and the world; that the saloon is the relentless enemy of the church, the home, the state, the nation, and of all human progress. Men who neither fear God nor regard man oppose the liquor traffic with great energy, from the principle of self-preservation; how much more should our position towards the liquor traffic be that of uncompromising hostility?

We would reiterate and emphasize the statement: "It can never be legalized without sin;" we would teach and urge voluntary total abstinence from all intoxicants as the true ground of personal temperance, and complete total prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating drinks as the duty of civil government.

Another foe threatening the liberties of every free people, and whose motto is Semper eadem, i. e., "Always the same," is the Roman hierarchy.

A convention of women, assembled at Chicago Sept. 10, 1891, issued the following resolutions:

"WHEREAS, The Catholic Congress lately assembled in Berlin passed resolutions declaring the time had arrived to convoke a great international congress to consider the restoration of the temporal power of the pope of Rome; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the loyal women of American liberty, sympathizing with the people of other nations, look upon this movement with distrust; as an attempt to abridge and interfere with the liberties of the Christian world.

Resolved, That every effort should be made by us, as an association, to educate the people and warn them of the danger of the concentration of power by the Catholic hierarchy; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, in full sympathy with the convictions of this association, we look with distrust upon the declaration of the Berlin congress, and pledge ourselves to use all just means to enlighten the people concerning the fixed intentions of Rome to subjugate the world to papal authority.

Another form of evil to be deplored is the growing disregard of the Christian Sabbath. We cannot look but with alarm upon the growing tendency all about us toward its violation and secularization.

It does not require extraordinary vision to see that if this tendency is not soon checked, our Sabbath will be gone; and, in its stead, we shall have a continental Sabbath, which is but a semi-heathen holiday, a day for revelry and the worship of Bacchus.

We do deplore the running of Sunday trains and excursions; the distribution of Sunday newspapers; the patronizing of cheese factories, creameries, and milk-wagons on the Sabbath; the holding of Sunday picnics, base ball, and other games; the opening of saloons and other places of trade of all sorts; Sunday travel upon the cars, both street and rail, and steamboats; Sunday visiting, and the carrying and distributing of United States mail on the Lord's day.

And we pledge ourselves, before God, to use all lawful means to overcome these evils and secure to ourselves and our people the unspeakable and God-given privilege of this day of Sabbath rest, both for the body and the soul. We also most earnestly deprecate the probabilities of a general desecration of the Sabbath by the opening of the World's Fair on the Lord's day, and most respectfully petition the managers of the Columbian Exposition, that as the best exhibition of the gratitude of a God-fearing nation, as well as the truest sentiment of our Republic, they do not permit the wholesale desecration of the Christian Sabbath by opening the Exposition buildings upon that day.

Another form of evil entrenched in the selfishness of the hearts of men, and antagonistic to the principles of Christianity and all moral government, is oath-bound secretism. Joseph Cook's summary of an address on this evil is all-comprehensive. He declares that it can be shown that (1) secret oaths have often led to crime; (2) are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to society at large; (3) are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions; (4) are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government; (5) are condemned by the severe denunciations of many of the wisest statesmen, preachers and reformers; (6) are opposed to Christian principles; (7) are forbidden in some portions of our Republic by civil law, and ought to be in all portions; (8) are forbidden to church members by some churches, and ought to be by all.

U. S. Grant said that "All secret oath-bound parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles that bring them together."

John Quincy Adams boldly declared: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man that Masonic oaths, obligations, and penalties, cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

Joseph Cook, in a splendid address on this question, concludes with these words: "Let those who are outside of oath-bound societies stay out. I exhort you to stay out, in the name of personal independence. Stay out in the name of patriotism! Stay out in the name of Christianity! And to those who are inside oath-bound organizations, I say, come out as patriots! Come out as Christians! Come out as unmanacled men!"

In view of these statements of fact and appeal, while we are fully conscious that there are great odds against us, our duty to God and man demands that we, as a church, both ministry and laity, take a bold and fearless stand against all such organizations.

Another question not to be neglected, is the matter of adornment. While we are glad to note a disposition on the part of our people to conform to the Bible standard on dress, yet we would make the following suggestions: (1) That we guard against anything slovenly or unclean in our dress and habits, and set an example of neatness and cleanliness. (2) That we no less carefully avoid the wearing of gold and all superfluities, and dress in neatness and modesty, as becometh persons professing godliness.

We would also urge our people and all Christians to join in creating a public sentiment in favor of the same standard of social purity for both sexes; and also do all in our power to elevate and sanctify the marriage and social relations.

We are also EQUALLY opposed to formality and fanaticism; extravagance and slovenliness; ecclesiastical oppression and insubordination; to political corruptions of all kinds; un-Christian corporations and trusts; ungodly teachers and preachers, and to all haters of that which is good.

We are also zealously opposed to the using, or handling in any way, of narcotics and impure literature, both of which poison the mind and soul and aid in filling our asylums.

In fact, we uncompromisingly hate, and intend to hate, all that God hates, and love all that God loves.

Then we believe there is much room for reform among us as Free Methodists. We need to know and live up to our Bible and Discipline more fully. We fear there is not that deep, intelligent inward holiness among our members that there should be; and while we ought to love our church peculiarly, are we not too often exclusive in our love? Do we not, too often and too largely, confine our affections to our own society or to those we believe are renewed in love alone?

John Wesley said: "Let not party or sect be our Shibboleth, but let us love all men, and let Christ be all and in all." Do not some of our people give too much importance to secret impulse, and underestimate reason, true wisdom and the Word of God as revealed? Do not some of us attach too much value to the peculiar in experience or life, and give too little to the common salvation, forgetting that love, the energy of divine love out of a pure heart, is the highest and best gift of God? Are we not given too much to praying at our brethren, and too little to praying for them? Are we not given too much to public correction, and too little to loving, personal reproof? In short, do we do all to the glory of God as much as we ought? Do we keep God before us and in our thoughts as much as we ought? Above all, we need to remember that true and lasting reform begins at the heart, and comes from God alone, and that in all our reformatory efforts the flesh can accomplish no lasting good. We have men and women who believe in, and defend, nearly all of these questions, who are without God, working for God (so to speak) without God. We may be as strict as Pharisees, and no less Pharisaical; we may be as orthodox as Satan, and no less devilish. We may be as clean externally as a saint, and inside full of dead men's bones. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornication, thefts, false witness, and blasphemies. These are the things that defile a man. We may never touch a woman, and yet be an adulterer; we may never touch forbidden gold, and yet be a thief; we may never take a life, and yet be a murderer. We need a faith that works by love and purifies the heart—a hidden life that springs from God and bears fruit in its season, for the end of the commandment is love out of a pure heart, of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned.

CONVERTED BY THE "HOLY COAT."

Professor Winnchel, of Leipsic University, had his religious sensibilities terribly shocked by the "Holy Coat" exhibition, and the church that sanctioned the affair has grown less sanctified in his imaginations because of it. He has now given Rome more or less of a shock by turning Protestant. If Professor Winnchel has been drawn out of Catholicism wholly by honest convictions and a real zeal on behalf of truth his action is a serious one to the Catholic cause. But if, as will be the general suspicion, his apostasy is a bid for notoriety, the sensation he has created will be short-lived. He has not grown old under Roman patronage without swallowing much that was quite as unpalatable as the "Holy Coat" to intelligent and conscientious Christianity.—Exchange.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

An Oriental entertainment—A comparison of the Orient and the Occident.—An obelisk at the World's Fair.—An unprecedented season.

"Half the world does not know how the other half lives." This is a familiar saying, whose truth we seldom fully realize until in some way we can make the acquaintance of that other half. So I thought to myself on an evening recently, while enjoying an "Oriental entertainment" with a company of invited friends in our own quiet little parlor. Our good missionary brother, Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, was the manager, and his witty, graphic descriptions, illustrated with living tableaux, made us almost see social existence as it goes on day by day in the Turkish Empire; that weak, degraded, miserable power which yet by a singular irony of fate holds the key of Europe so that Great Britain and Russia dare not do anything more than scowl at each other across the Bosphorus like couchant beasts of prey.

What do we women of America, who, as Mr. Z. well said, "are queens," know of the way half our sisters live?—of the untold sufferings and indignities to which they are subjected in the lands where Mohammed reigns instead of Jesus? Ours is indeed a lot more enviable, in many respects, than that of literal queenship, for we fill a throne that no revolution can shake, and carry a sceptre that in the hands of every true woman only has a wider and more gracious sway when she leaves the fairy realms of youth behind her. And all this she owes to the Christian religion! Surely the American woman who is "not interested in missions," must have either a shallow mind or a hard heart.

I have always been conscious, and I doubt not many other people, too, of a strange fascination in the very name of the Orient. Is it a yearning after the far-away birth-place of our first ancestors? I am inclined to think so. At the same time, perhaps, we are apt to arrogate too much to ourselves as if we had in every respect the advantage. They who still linger about the old homestead of the race while the more enterprising sons of Japheth are exploring the remotest corners of the earth—trading in all the products of land and sea, and trying to solve the problem of "rapid transit," till, with electric cars and fast-sailing steamers, the belt around our poor little world, like the waist of a fashionable belle, is every day being drawn tighter—are certainly delivered from that condition of feverish haste and worry in which we poor Occidentals are doomed to pass the most of our lives. And even in the matter of dress, how well they understand the true artistic effect. What painter would be willing to see the Greek maiden exchange her gaily embroidered jacket and jaunty head-dress for a French bonnet and a waist elongated in the ugly and unnatural style which modern fashion now decrees? Ruskin has said that "of all God's gifts to the sight of man, color is the holiest, the most divine, the most solemn. . . . And the purest and most thoughtful minds are those which love color most." The Greek priest, in his red cap and gown of brightest blue, was a figure whose imposing beauty would have been lost entirely in a black stole; and as for the followers of Mohammed, in his white turban and flowing red robes, he must be a very symphony of color, seen under those gorgeous Eastern skies, against the gray walls of some mosque rising from groves of date and tamerisk trees; and, perhaps, far away a long, dim line that tells where the shifting desert sands begin. But the poor countrywoman of Turkey! wrapped from head to foot in a piece of coarse, white cotton cloth—her life is like her dress, bare, colorless and unlovely. Heaven pity her, and speed the day when the religion of Christ shall raise her to such a royal height as American womanhood, "born in the purple," treads so serenely and unconsciously. Altogether, it was a charming entertainment, bringing Eastern life much nearer than through the medium of the printed page. God bless this dear brother and his wife as they go back to the field of labor which they have tilled so long and well.

I see that somebody has suggested an obelisk to be erected on the site of the great World's Fair in Chicago; but America had better remember a certain homely old adage. In the line of inventive art, in sewing-machines and watches and steam ploughs, she can leave every other nation far behind; but in the obelisk business old Egypt can beat her without putting forth the least effort. And as to repeating the Central Park experiment, and buying another one, I cannot conceive of anything more melancholy and incongruous than one of those wonderful monoliths of the Pharaohs, torn from its natural setting under the rainless skies of the Nile, and planted in the midst of a modern Babel, to bear the fierce changes of our American climate, which must crack and wear its stony structure, and look so thoroughly and completely disconsolate and out of place as to give anybody with a true æsthetic taste the shivers.

This has been a wonderful year in New England, as well as at the West. Even about Boston there have been no killing frosts as yet, while in Vermont they held off till the first week in October. The maple sugar crop of this State is the largest ever produced. All her industries have prospered, and her aggregate harvest will be the largest produced in any season since the war. Perhaps we shall not hear so much talk about "abandoned farms," now that they have proved how well they will sometimes pay the tiller who is content with small and sure returns. But what is God intending to teach us, or prepare us for, by a year of such unprecedented abundance, while Europe is suffering the horrors of famine? Is he proving us to see whether we will recognize his hand in all this wonderful prosperity, and be "willing and obedient," and generous to the poor outcasts of other lands; or whether we shall go on disregarding the Sabbath, sending rum to Africa (Lawrence & Co., of Medford, Mass. shipped 737,650 gallons in one year, and this Mr. Lawrence is a good Republican as well as Mason), and otherwise adding iniquity to iniquity? Surely we ought to be a better nation; and if we are not,—what remains when blessings have failed to melt us but the devouring fires of judgment?

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14, 1891.

The pulpits of Washington have been graced at times by the presence of most of the noted divines of the world, but on no single day have so many world-famed pulpit orators been heard here as were listened to by Washington congregations last Sunday. Not only were all the Methodist pulpits filled by the distinguished delegates to the Ecumenical Conference, but many of those of the Baptists, Presbyterians, and other denominations were thrown open to them. Among those who preached were: Bishop Newman, who took John Wesley for his theme, and so well did he handle the subject that every delegate to the conference hopes to carry home with him a printed copy of the memorial sermon; Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, who is often spoken of as the English Talmage, who took for his text: "Be more Christ-like;" Rev. W. J. Dawson, for many years of Glasgow, Scotland, but now of Southport, England, who made his sermon a eulogy on the life and work of John Wesley; Rev. Dr. Thomas Bowman Stephenson, president of the Wesleyan Conference, who took occasion to deliver a most spirited revival exhortation based upon the twenty-sixth verse of the eighth chapter of Acts; Bishop Joyce, who took the sermon that Christ preached on the shore of Lake Gennesareth for his text; Bishop Warren, who occupied the pulpit of the church that President Harrison belongs to, preached from: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness;" Rev. Dr. L. R. Fiske, president of Albion College, Michigan, who undertook to prove, and did prove, that there is a hereafter; Rev. J. Smith Spencer, of England, who was for some years a missionary in Africa, who talked about the many-sided work of the Christian church; Rev. Dr. A. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist church of Canada, who took for his text: "The strength of sin in the law;" Rev. T. G. Selby, who made the prodigal son the basis of an appeal to wayward young men, and Rev. Henry Evans, the celebrated Irish Methodist, who is Commissioner of National Education and Examiner for the Government Board of Intermediate Education for Ireland, besides being pastor of a large Dublin church. He prefaced his sermon by a few interesting remarks on the condition of the church in Ireland, and stated that there was not a single minister in the Wesleyan church in that country who touches beer, ale, porter or liquor of any kind, nor is there a single tobacco-smoker among them. His text was: "That thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed."

On Monday President Harrison held a special reception in honor of the delegates to the conference, and it was largely attended and a very pleasant affair.

The three hundred and ninety-ninth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus fell on Monday of this week, and it was celebrated by a special service arranged by the Ecumenical Conference, and held Sunday afternoon. Bishop Hurst presided and delivered a short address, being followed by Rev. Drs. Carman, Stephenson, Earle, Cranston, Clinton and Fitzgerald.

One of the most interesting debates yet held by the conference was on the relation of the press to the church. Many and divers were the opinions expressed as to the secular press, but most of the speakers seemed to imply, and some of them said, that the church did not recognize the full value of, nor properly support, the religious newspapers.

Mrs. Hugh Price Hughes and Mrs. Bamford Slack, wives of delegates to the conference, have been telling the Washington ladies of the work done by the West End London Sisterhood in the slums of the great metropolis, and a most interesting and inspiring story it is.

The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union presented a memorial to the Ecumenical Conference, asking it to issue an address to the world for the suppression of the liquor traffic. No action has yet been taken upon it.

An extra evening session of the conference was held this week, for the introduction of fraternal delegates and addresses of greeting and responses. Among the speakers, not Methodists, were: Rev. Dr. Talbot W. Chambers, Chairman of the Western Section of Reformed churches; Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New York, who is one of the most prominent ministers in what is popularly known as the Presbyterian church, North; Rev. Dr. W. U. Markland, of Baltimore, representing the Presbyterian church, South, and Rev. Dr. S. H. Green, representing the Baptists of Washington and vicinity.

Bishop Newman, assisted by Bishops Andrews and Hurst, officiated at the laying of the cornerstone of a new M. E. church this afternoon, and many of the Ecumenical delegates attended.

Probably the largest meetings ever held simultaneously in the same city in the interest of the Epworth League, were held here last night. There were three of them called to order at the same hour, and they filled to overflowing three of the largest churches in Washington. *

REFORM NEWS.

BRO. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

WEST BEND, Wis., October 12, 1891.

Madison, the beautiful capital of Wisconsin, is not less favored in its lovely surroundings than in its excellent institutions of learning. The good and evil are here brought into juxtaposition. Saloons abound, and there is a strong aggressive sentiment in favor of prohibition. The good people, to a large degree, dislike and often abhor the secret orders; but the First Presbyterian church have sold their house of worship to the Freemasons, who are fitting it up for a Masonic Temple.

From Madison I went to Janesville, where I was most kindly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. And. Stevens, formerly of Footville, and who still bring forth fruit in old age. Here I learned that ex-Governor Hoard had come to Janesville to take the degrees of Masonry, and the fact was heralded for "the good of the order."

Though there is marked intelligence and much enterprise in this beautiful little city, yet, like other places in the State, it is ruled by the lodge and the saloon.

From Janesville I went to Milton Junction, where I spent two Sabbaths in succession—the seventh and first days of the week. A majority of the Christian people here are Seventh-day Baptists, and Seventh-day Adventists, with each a good house of worship. Beside these, there is a small M. E. church. I was most kindly entertained by Elders Hill and Wardner, of the Seventh-day Baptist church, and Bro. Crandall, of the Seventh-day Adventists. I lectured on Saturday night in the Baptist church, and on Sunday night in that of the Adventists. Each night I had a good audience of mainly sympathetic hearers; and though there are several Odd-fellows in the Seventh-day Baptist church, the ministry have not ceased to bear testimony against the lodge system. The Advent church is quite clear from all complicity with lodgism.

There are no saloons in this beautiful village, nor at Milton, where I attended worship on the 4th, and listened to that remarkable man, William Walker, who has spent a great part of his life directly under the equator, at Gaboon, West Africa, and who now, in his eightieth year, retains a vigorous manhood.

Our Seventh-day brethren boast, with some reason, that all the reformers that come among them, and listen to their arguments for keeping the seventh day, are convicted, and they argue that it is but a question of time when the entire Christian world will agree with them as to the day to be observed. Possibly they are right. I honor them for their steadfast adherence to principle. I have but one criticism to make. In their great zeal for the rights of conscience (in which they have my earnest sympathy) they are willing to join hands with those who hate all laws, and all restraints, apparently forgetting that should this anarchistic element come into power, it would utterly root out every vestige of religious liberty. Doubtless, all Sabbath laws should provide for the rights of conscience of those who keep the seventh day rather than the first; but the men who plead for the open theatre and open saloon on the first day of the week are not the men who will be the conservators of morality and religion. "Oh, my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be thou not united."

From Milton I went to Delavan, where I found the Baptist State Convention in session, and that it was impracticable to have a meeting. A visit to Elder E. S. Harris and others showed them to be "strong in the Lord," though aged and feeble.

From here, after a visit to Mr. Daniel Whitmore and Mrs. M. R. Brittain, who have abated not one jot of their hostility to the lodge iniquity, I went to Waukesha and spent the night with Rev. J. B. Galloway, of Vernon, preaching for his people in the morning, and at the Free Baptist church at Prospect at night. The latter discourse was on the relations of the lodge system to Christianity. There was, in both cases, a fair audience and an attentive hearing. The youthful pastor, Elder Kennon, expressed his hearty sympathy, and will be a reader of the Cynosure. Among the interested listeners was Dr. Ingersoll, a brother of Robert G. He is a professed Christian, and was educated at Oberlin.

After a visit to Milwaukee and a call on the Free Methodist preachers, who are holding up a light amidst abounding moral darkness, I came here and enjoyed a moonlight walk of three miles to the hospitable home of Bro. William Hamlyn, who has not forgotten the cause for which we have so long labored, and who will try to attend our State meeting. H. H. HINMAN.

BRO. FENTON IN WHEATON AND CHICAGO.

On Sabbath evening last, Oct. 11, I spoke at the College church of Wheaton. This, to the readers of the Cynosure, may seem like retiring within the fortifications and far from the range of the enemies' guns and beating the air; but the prince of devils, Beelzebub, alias Hiram, confederates and martials all sin against the hosts of God. And it is said that at least two or three Masons were seated in the congregation. The Masons have a lodge in Wheaton, where the devil, alias Hiram, shoots his arrows in secret and lays snares privately to entrap God's people and "vex them with their wives, wherewith he anciently beguiled them in the matter of Peor"—a point within a circle—the Freemason's god-symbol.

Pastor Wise thinks it too much to say that one-half of the pastorate of Protestant Christendom is in the coils of the cunningly devised demonology of the lodge. If that is true, perhaps it is not too much to say that seven-eighths of this pastorate observe the identical "silence and secrecy" essential to the existence of lodge demonology.

What about these cliques and clans organized in the churches by the names of "Kings' Sons," "Kings' Daughters," etc.? Are they anything like the "eages of unclean birds" that Bro. Moody found it necessary to purge out of his church on Chicago avenue? What can be said in defence of these petty sects within sects? So long as it is as easy to practice Masonry in the name of Christ as in the name of Hiram, we must expect sects—the work of hypocrisy.

Last Thursday evening, Oct. 15, I spoke to a large congregation in the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, corner of Market and Oak streets, Chicago. The pastor of this church says that they obviate the excuse of insurance as a necessity for the existence of secret societies by the formation of a mutual insurance society in their own congregation. What shall we say to this? Those who do not belong to the mutual clan will surely be regarded by the carnally minded that do as of an inferior status. It is an interference with the commandment of Christ—to "give, hoping for nothing in return." It indicates a lack of faith in Him who provides for the sparrow. It is not a means of God's appointment. The obligation to give, though self-assumed, may preclude the blessing of him who loveth a cheerful giver. There is nothing like it in the plan of Christ or the apostles, and therefore it brings in a foreign element to the congregation and looks like a mark of the beast, an adoption of the plans of the pagans in their lodges.

At the close of the lecture the pastor announced to the audience the innocence of the pastorate of the Swedish M. E. church of the demonology of the Masonic lodge. It would be happy for the American M. E. church if as much could be said for it. Our Swedish brethren ought to let their light shine so as to illuminate the whole denomination:—"No man lighteth a candle and putteth it under a bushel." And it was Cain who said, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

WILLIAM FENTON.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT IN NEW YORK.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 14, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—This town is situated at the foot of a lovely lake surrounded by gently rolling hills, whose frost-bitten trees present an ever-changing scene, beautiful to behold. Satan found his way into the garden. Lodgery and liquor reign here. Though the town has but about 2,500 inhabitants, there are no less than 23 places where liquor is sold. Masonic and other lodge symbols glisten on the watch-chains of most of the aristocratic, beer-bloated fellows one meets in the street. The culture of hops seems to be the chief industry of the farmers of this county, and I suppose they feel morally bound to drink much beer, that their hops may bring a better price. As there is not a hotel in the place that does not traffic in liquor, I looked for a private boarding-house, and have found a very pleasant place with Mrs. Bassett. I learn that her husband was a Congregational minister in New England, and that we have mutual acquaintances.

I have spoken six times since my last writing. Near Oakville, in a school-house, I unveiled the mysteries to a goodly number, who gathered and gave eighty cents in a collection, on Saturday evening.

Sabbath morning I filled the pulpit of the Presbyterian church the best I could, and at 3:30 spoke of the anti-Christian character of the lodge. The afternoon audience was large. It was supposed that most of the Masons in the community were present. It was reported that one would be there to reply to me. As I spoke till after five o'clock, and the farmers were anxious to get home for their chores, I did not invite a reply then, but stated that if any reputable person in the community wished to discuss the question with me, I should be happy to divide the time with him some evening. No one has as yet accepted my proposal. Some felt angry, which of course was their privilege, but I felt happy, as I was conscious of having tried to do my duty.

After this service I walked three miles, and found a waiting audience in the Union church at Toddsville. By vote of those present, I spoke the second time there, on Monday evening. As but few if any in Toddsville knew of our work, they were naturally aroused, and I was assured that good was accomplished.

My visit to Hartwick Seminary was very satisfactory. I first called on Monday, and found the principal, Rev. Mr. Hull, absent. I announced my business and wish to address the students. A council of the professors was held. Dr. Hiller knew but little of secret societies, and but little of our work. Prof. Kistler, being called, said he had read Finney on Masonry, and our paper. His favoring my addressing the students decided the question. The address was given last evening. After speaking for over an hour, I invited questions. Many were asked, and thus the interest was increased till a late hour, when it seemed best to adjourn. Most of the young men studying here are looking forward to the ministry. I esteemed it a privilege to give them what information I could.

As the Rev. Mr. Hull's youngest daughter is to be married to-day, he was necessarily detained from meeting with us. He has belonged to four secret societies. From our brief conversation, I conclude he does not take much stock in them, but does not regard them so dangerous as some think. The ex-principal, Rev. Mr. Pitcher, thought the Good Templars' lodge, of which he is a member, a good thing; but he did not favor the Masons. He thought I did not prove my point that Masonry was a religion. I had read from Mackey, and other authentic Masonic writers, showing its claim to being a religious institution—its creed: "A belief in a God and the immortality of the soul." An institution, he thought, might be religious and not be a religion. He wished to know if anywhere Masonry said it would save its members. He had heard Masons say that while Masonry was a religious institution, it did not profess to save its members. I explained, that the fact that Masonry claimed to be a religious institution would indicate that it either manufactured or adopted some kind of religion. It would be impossible to have a religious institution which taught no religion. If Masonry had not given us its creed, or explained its religious teachings, we might be in the dark, but its creed was as clearly defined as that of any Protestant church: "The candidate must believe in the existence of a Supreme being." "The religion, then, of Masonry is pure theism."—Mackey. If the religion of Masonry is pure theism, one who understands this, and yet joins this Masonic church, must announce himself a pure theist, as much as he who joins the Baptist church must announce that he believes in immersion. By the ceremonies which are administered, Mr. Mackey says, the candidate is professedly fitted for heaven, or as it is termed, "the grand lodge above." When Masonry offers another way, a different creed from any other, to fit mau for heaven, we must admit that it is more than a religious institution.

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE

DR. THWING'S HOSPITAL IN ALASKA.

SITKA, Alaska, Sept. 24, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Aside from and independent of the Presbyterian mission here, Dr. Clarence Thwing and his associates have established a charitable enterprise known as the Alaskan Maternity.

The hospital building erected at Sitka for the St. John's Maternity is now approaching completion and will be ready for occupancy in October. The funds for the building and a part of the furnishing have been provided by friends of the enterprise in various parts of the country, and the hospital will be, for its size, very convenient and well finished. This institution is the first and only one of its kind in Alaska. It is entirely unsectarian in its management, and will be free to deserving cases without reference to religious belief. The hospital is a private charity, and dependent for support upon voluntary offerings. Among the needs not yet supplied in the way of furnishing are kitchen ware, dishes, lamps, chairs, widow shades, floor rugs, bed clothing, and occasional garments and medicines for patients. Dr. Clarence Thwing, of the Presbyterian Mission Hospital, has supervised operations so far and will act as attending physician. It is expected that the ladies in the village will be interested in visiting the Maternity and overseeing the domestic arrangements. A native woman is to be employed at the outset as resident nurse and housekeeper, but it is hoped that means will be provided, ere long, for the engagement of a trained nurse and missionary, who would be very useful in visiting the natives and instructing them in home nursing and cooking for the sick.

The need of a lying-in hospital for the natives has been shown repeatedly within the past few weeks by the comparatively great mortality among parturient women and their newly-born infants. It is not an uncommon experience, in the practice of the missionary physician, for either the mother or her offspring to perish before the arrival of medical assistance, or in spite of careful professional attention, on account of the exposure in the cold, damp huts, or shanties, used as "lying-in chambers" (more properly lying-out rooms), or else because of the absence of a skilled nurse and cook to attend to the wants of these helpless sufferers.

Visitors and correspondents alike have expressed surprise that this much-needed charity has so long been conspicuous by its absence. The gifts, small and large, for the beginning of the enterprise have been accompanied by earnest good wishes and cordial sympathy with the project. The trustees wish to express their thanks for the help so promptly given and trust that the natives will show an appreciation of the benefits offered by making frequent use of them. Any remittances for the maintenance of this charity may be sent to Dr. Thwing, Sitka, Alaska, who will acknowledge their receipt. YUKON.

THE SABBATH LAWS IN BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Md., October 5, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—On Wednesday evening lectured in the United Presbyterian church, Biddle and Madison streets, Rev. Chas. H. Robinson, pastor. This is a congregation of 175 members. One of the elders, Mr. Thos. T. Anderson, said: "You are too late entering the field. The enemy has been sowing tares too long. Church members buy and read the Sunday newspaper, use the Sunday train, and the street cars and postoffice on the Sabbath. When the church suffers her members to do all this unrebuked, it is hypocrisy for her to protest against Sabbath-breaking. The church must be purified. Judgment must begin at the house of God." Of course we say amen to that.

On Thursday evening the Y. M. C. A. of Baltimore held their opening. A great company gathered to hear Dr. Wharton's address. He said: "There are two words in the Bible that make up the whole of our duty: 'Come' and 'go.' We are to come to Christ, and go work in his vineyard. When we come to Jesus, he gives us new life. In the exercise of that life we go and work. If a locomotive could talk, and you were to ask, 'What makes you move so rapidly?' it would say, 'I don't know; there is something in me that makes me go. I can't help it.' So the believer has something within him that lays upon him an irresistible necessity to work. Paul went everywhere preaching Jesus because the power was within him. He could not help going. Sometimes we will not use the power. A man had a balky horse hitched to a wagon with a load of straw. It would not move. A friend came by, and offered to make him move. He took an armful of straw and put it under the horse and then struck a match and kindled it. The horse moved. Sometimes God moves us by the fire of affliction when we will not work. God's people must bestir themselves and rescue the perishing."

The Y. M. C. A. here has 2,500 members. They expect to have 3,000 before the winter is over. They have a large central building on Charles and Saratoga streets. There are five branch associations in the city. All the advantages of the Association can be had for $5 per year, free from all the evil associations and tendencies of the modern club. A Sabbath-school teachers' class is conducted here on Saturday afternoon by Mr. Joseph Bowes. He is a success in this work. Some 300 gather to hear him. He was born and raised a Covenanter, and until this wave of liberalism passed over the church was an ardent member of the congregation here. He now worships with the Presbyterians.

On Sabbath afternoon I preached in Immanuel Baptist church, North avenue, Rev. C. H. Fulton, pastor. This is the former charge of Rev. Dr. Dixon, now of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Last week the Grand Jury gave the city authorities their orders as to enforcing the Sabbath laws. So on Saturday the police visited every saloon, grocery, meat-shop, bakery, confectionery and tobacco-store, and warned them that unless their doors were kept closed on the Sabbath they would be arrested. The drug-stores were also notified that nothing could be sold except by a prescription from the physician. Even the soda fountain and ice cream parlors were proscribed.

But what is so passing strange is, the Sunday newspaper is made an exception. Why selling the paper benefits society, while selling medicine, food and luxuries injures, I fail to see. Of course, the street-cars are excepted. But this is also unnecessary. In Toronto, Can., the street-cars are tied up every Sabbath—a city of 140,000 and scattered over a wide territory, and the people get to church very well. They could do the same in Baltimore and every other city. The railroad and U. S. postal service are excepted under cover of interstate regulations. Connecticut passed a law that no unnecessary trains should run in their State on the Sabbath. The first Lord's day they emancipated 10,000 railroad men from Sabbath toil. But the express trains, carrying the U. S. mail, ran right through the State on the Sabbath, and the Legislature was powerless to prohibit it. That overpowered the law. It soon became a dead-letter. Either all public work must be prohibited, or all allowed. Either all amusements must be proscribed, or all allowed. A grand excursion left Baltimore Union depot last Sabbath morning. Why should that be allowed, and the theatre prohibited? Such exceptions defeat the law. J. M. FOSTER.

NEW YORK LETTER.

The wild utterances of the Voice on the church as an ally of the saloon continue to elicit severe censure from representative prohibitionists. Dr. Herrick Johnson says it is preposterous to ask us to turn our back on the church of Christ, to exalt a method to the place of a principle, and repudiate churches that will not adopt the third party methods. "You confound things that differ, and shut four million professed followers of Christ out of heaven." He despairs of the success of prohibition by such mischievous methods. Rev. Prof. Wilkinson says that the Voice will repel serious-minded men. They will think that it has lost its head, to say "if you do not vote with the Prohibition party you cannot be a Christian." The editor adds: "We recall nothing." We reiterate all we have said." To the charge that it advises the rupture of churches to win votes for its party, it says: "Great denominations were sundered over the question whether a Christian man could give his support to slavery, and are not yet united." Mr. Miner, the well-known Universalist, of Boston, indorses every word and frantically cries: "Strike on. Strike often. Cut deep. Draw blood." Thus the little band of Prohibitionists are divided.

The removal of Rev. Dr. Burchard, by death, takes away a stately figure from the midst of us. He has served long and well. When a youth, it was thought that he would die of asthma; and in 1853, after a fearful surgical operation on the abdominal organs, he was again and again pronounced dead. But his wife persisted that life remained, and after a while nature rallied. He was brave and self-forgetful in peril. When others fled from the cholera at Danville, Kentucky, in 1832, he nursed the sick, cared for the dying, and buried the dead. He lived to enter his eightieth year. It seemed but yesterday since I had him an eager listener at Van Norman Institute to the story of my travels among Asiatic people, and received an invitation to come again to his hospitable home. Thus the line grows slenderer every year as old associates drop out of the ranks. Earth to us grows poorer, but God will see to it that the church suffers no permanent loss. He buries the workmen, but the work goes on. It is a suggestive fact that popular interest centers in Dr. B. not as a successful pastor of forty years' service, not as an educator, or author, but as the man who thoughtlessly uttered the historic alliterative, "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion," and defeated the hopes of Blaine, as many believe. Not a few remember Dr. Bevan, the handsome preacher at the Brick church a few years ago, not because of any of his excellencies, but simply for that incautious reproof he administered in church to a lady whose coughing annoyed him. On his visit here, this summer, the papers identified him by this trivial but never-to-be-forgotten incident. This shows the importance of our unstudied works and words, for by them alone are we sometimes judged at the time and always remembered in subsequent years.

The Church of the Pilgrims has always avoided publicity. Not till recently have the Sunday services been announced in the daily press of Brooklyn. Latterly, Dr. Storrs has given out his evening theme. A week ago he yielded still further to prevailing tastes and took an odd form in which to couch a commonplace theme: "An if to be avoided," and spoke on the regret of Martha which the absence of Jesus caused at the time of Lazarus' death. This week his theme was: "An if to be thoughtfully heeded."

The oldest Protestant Society of Brooklyn, organized in 1660, dedicated their suburb church edifice, on Prospect Heights, on the 27th inst. It received a quarter of a million for the property formerly occupied, contiguous to the city, and put it into this Gothic cathedral-like sanctuary, the most ornate, perhaps, in the "City of Churches." OCCASIONAL.

LITERATURE.

NATIVE LIFE IN INDIA: Being Sketches of the Social and Religious Characteristics of the Hindus. By the Rev. Henry Rice, Madras. Revised Edition. Oakland, California: Pacific Press Publishing Co. 1891. Price, 60 cents.

India is a land of wonders, view it in whatever light we may. Its climate and productions, its people, manners and customs, so varying from our own, are full of interest; and while there is much to admire in the land itself, its people are children of superstition and evil propensities, and actual crime abounds among them. In this great field of wickedness, earnest missionaries for more than a century have been endeavoring to awaken a wide-spread interest in the Gospel of Christ, and have in part succeeded in bringing the people out of pagan darkness into the light of Christianity; but that which has been done, as compared with that which remains to be done in this direction, is but as a drop in the bucket. Many zealous workers in behalf of the cross have laid down and died on the field of their labors, and many more will follow in their footsteps and also die in harness before the gospel truth shall have penetrated the darkness in which the nations are still involved. Such is the country in which Mr. Rice has lived for eighteen years, moving freely among all classes of the people in various localities, taking notes of his observations and experiences, and the result of these is found in this little book. The geography, climate and language in the Madras Presidency; castes and sects; manners and customs; native religion and worship; Hindu women and their position; traits of Hindu character and education, are pleasantly and intelligently described, and finely illustrated with engravings. The last two chapters relate to the evangelistic work now in progress, and the best methods of performing it, together with the present state of the converted and the outlook for the future. "What is needed is a Pentecost," says the author; "a long, slow season of preparatory work, and then suddenly, when the fullness of time has come, a great harvest. We may expect to hear of whole tribes and communities abandoning their superstitions and embracing Christianity. There is no exaggeration in forming such anticipations. They rest on solid grounds. Great and efficient preparations have been made for securing them." This is encouraging news, indeed. The book will find interested readers.

The American Garden for October is replete with matters of great interest to horticulturists, especially grape-growers and gardeners. Full-page illustrations of luscious grapes are given, and other branches of horticulture and noted localities are handsomely embellished. Among the leading articles are: Possibilities of our Native Grapes; Galveston; A Garden of Delights; At a Spanish Horticultural Show; Chrysanthemums; Ferns of the Wisconsin Dells; House Plants, their Culture, etc.; Hints for Winter Success with Flowers; Wooton, the Home of Geo. W. Childs; The Tomato and its Culture, etc., etc. New York: The Rural Publishing Co., Times Building.

The November Century will contain two frontispieces, both engravings by Timothy Cole of Michelangelo's "Sibyls," in the Sistine Chapel. With this number, and those immediately following, this series of engravings of the Old Masters, made directly from the originals by this modern master of wood-engraving, will reach their most interesting point. Four of Raphael's most famous pictures will be reproduced in the December Century.

OBITUARY.

Died, at her home in Galesburg Ill., September 26, 1891, MRS. JULIA TRACY WELLS, one of the oldest residents of that city, aged 94 years.

Mrs. Wells was a native of Middletown, Conn.; daughter of Ebenezer and Mariah Tracy. Her mother was a daughter of General Artemas Ward, of Revolutionary fame. In middle life she was married to John H. Wells, an Englishman. They lived for a while in Oswego county, New York, but in 1839 they removed to Illinois. Their first place of abode was Weathersfield, where they remained for six years. Mr. Wells died there in 1844; and in 1845 and 1846 Mrs. Wells removed to Galesburg with her family.

Soon afterwards she united with the First church, and to the day of her death was closely identified with its interests. "She had," says the Galesburg Republican-Register, "strong and earnest convictions on moral questions. In slavery times she took a strong stand against human bondage. It is recalled that on one occasion a fugitive slave was concealed in the garret of her home. She was allied in principles with such men as Dr. Jonathan Blanchard, John West and George Davis, and belonged to a noted group of reformers now nearly passed away. Her advocacy of the temperance cause was very decided. Until bodily infirmities prevented she was active in church work, and belonged to the several societies of the church. She impressed one by her mere personal appearance as a woman of dignity and strength of character. She retained her faculties nearly unimpaired until last March. Her life has been a long and useful one."

Forty-five years ago (1846) the writer found Mrs. Wells in the village of Galesburg, to which she has ever since been a moral and spiritual light. She was "a great woman," in the Bible sense of the term. Her mother belonged to that class of women who distinguished New England in the times of the Revolution, whose sons were the Adamses, Shermans, Wards, etc.; who gave the key-note to the United States, and originated its free institutions.

Mrs. Wells was left by her husband's death when the prairies furnished chickens without feeding or raising. She sent her five children to Knox College. Three sons went to the war, and their mother's prayers and strong sense brought them through unscathed by physical or moral wounds. Two of her sons have been judges, and a third was lately candidate for Judge of our State Supreme Court. The fourth son made and donated a telescope to Wheaton College; bore his mother gently in his arms to her 88th year; managed the home with business ability; and, like his mother, made Reform respected when Masonry had poisoned the college, and reformers were hated by the masses, misled by apostate and non-committal ministers. Her daughter is an exceedingly capable woman on the Pacific Coast.

"Mark the perfect man; and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." J. B.

The great Dr. Boerhaave left three directions for preserving the health—keep the feet warm, the head cool, and the bowels open. Had he practiced in our day, he might have added: and purify the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; for he certainly would consider it the best.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

OUR PREMIUM! THE EMPRESS Sewing Machine For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled.

It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its big arm gives ample room for any kind of work.

It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments, put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Sbirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Tbread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00. With Christian Cynosure 1 year..$22.00.

For further particulars address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of Washington. John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lobbous Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart.

Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

- 3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill. Rev. H. H. Hinman, Borea, Ky Natban Callender Montdale Pa.

J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa. T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind. H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.

J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa. A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

J. B. Crossinger, Sullivan, O. W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo. Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn. Rev. E. Mathows, Long Island City, N. Y.

E. Barnctson, Haskinville, N. Y. Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich. A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland Sept. 5th, 1835

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underhill, Lieutenant-General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St. Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

The Christian Cynosure, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle velle; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowo, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdalo; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chaffant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteen degrees of the York Rite), Adaptive Masonry, B. V. O. Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, The Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Liberty and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1891.

THE KANSAS CONVENTION.

I am just in from Kansas, the once "bleeding Kansas." On Sabbath evening I preached in the M. E. church at Beloit, Kansas, to a crowded house with full-seated aisles, and some standing about the door. This was by the procuring of Mr. Samuel Blanchard, now near eighty-seven years old, whose speech to his neighbors was given in the Cynosure a few weeks ago. The pastor, Rev. Mr. McDowell, is understood to be a Mason, but he is a man, a Christian and an American. All such men are quitting the lodges. My brother and myself went from Beloit to the Denison, Jackson Co., Anti-Secret Convention. It was a noble meeting. Dr. Milligan has long preached there and shone with a steady light. He presided with ability, and the first evening we had a respectable audience, and on the second a large one. W. L. Enlow, Esq., of the Free Press, Iowa, made a very sensible, practical speech. And the speeches by Rev. Messrs. Coulter, Trumbull, Wiley and others were admirable, calm, solid English; and they were listened to as they deserved. Rev. Mr. Moreton (Seventh-day Baptist), from Chicago, spoke wittily and well; and "Grandpa Blanchard," as he is called, from Beloit, Kan., spoke feelingly of the cause in Mitchell Co., from which nothing has been heard till now. The "weight of years" gave weight to his few observations concerning his neighbors, whom he is trying to enlighten, and over whose condition, so bewildered and bewitched with lodge-sorcery, the aged patriarch "—shed tears feelingly and fast."

But the meeting reached its climax when a Methodist preacher came in for wool and went out shorn. He is one of those ministers who are not ashamed to say: "I know nothing about Masonry;" "an ignorance," said John Quincy Adams, "which they are careful to preserve." Yet he was willing to speak "on the other side," of which side he professed himself ignorant! He spoke against the opponents of the dark lodges, seeking to find small holes in our coats, while the judgments of God are slumbering about the mercy-seat over the altars of Baal that are now filling and cursing our beloved land. He reminded one of a mousing owl seeking to pick up a dinner of small mice, while the horizon is darkening with cyclones and tempests.

Our Mr. Hawley replied to him; and, though not myself present, I heard the echoes of his words in the report of those who were present, and felt the jar of his clear, close reasoning. The meeting closed at night with some remarks of my own.

The weather was propitious, the air bland, and the moonlight bright. Everybody seemed pleased. The Masons themselves, though still "possuming," were present in numbers, and begin secretly to "rejoice to see the curse removed."

J. BLANCHARD.

REV. O. P. GIFFORD IN CHICAGO.

The friends of Reform in and around Chicago are to be congratulated. A few weeks ago, the congregation of Emmanuel Baptist church, of which Rev. Dr. Lorimer was recently pastor, tendered a call to Rev. O. P. Gifford, of Brookline, Mass., to succeed him in the pulpit. After some delay, his services have been secured, and his early removal to this city to assume the duties of his new pastorate is assured.

While Dr. Lorimer was a warm adherent of the Masonic lodge, and subject to its erratic influences, his successor is a pronounced opponent of the secret empire. At the present time he is in his forty-second year. Starting in life as a clerk in a hardware store in New York City, he also became a member of the Pierrepont church in Brooklyn. During one of the meetings of that congregation, he showed so much ability in oratory that a number of the members persuaded him to study for the ministry. Having been graduated at Brown University as a preparation for his profession, he entered Newton Theological Seminary, where he finished his academic studies. Subsequently he served as pastor of the Pittsfield (Mass.) Baptist church, and, since then, of the church at Brookline. It is expected that he will preach his first sermon in Chicago, November 15.

In the fall of 1889, Rev. O. P. Gifford was one of the many pastors in Boston whose names were attached to a call for the New England Anti-secrecy Conference, which, a few weeks later, assembled in the Tremont Temple in that city. On the evening of the first day's session, also, addresses were made by Rev. David McAllister of the Reformed Presbyterian church at Pittsburgh, and Mr. Gifford, who was then officiating at the Warren Avenue Baptist church. On that occasion, said the Cynosure's report, December 19, "they frequently called out hearty applause, and the latter (Mr. Gifford) aroused the special enthusiasm of the conference, when it was remembered that he was making his maiden speech upon this subject."

Mr. Gifford will receive a hearty welcome from the friends of the Reform cause in the West if he has not retroceded from his faith in its righteousness and success.

THE UNION OF CHURCH AND LODGE.

Three preachers of Chicago, eminent for eloquence, intellect and social elevation—men whose churches are filled with their respective admirers, and whom we could name were it necessary—have developed a phase of devotion to their lodge associations that is thoroughly consistent with the character of lodge policy and derogatory to themselves as preachers of the Gospel of Christ, as well as inharmonious in the extreme with the teachings of that Gospel.

There may be other preachers in Chicago and elsewhere who display these same characteristics in a greater or less degree; for it seems to be the nature of the lodge system to manifest this peculiar feature of exclusiveness, both in and out of the lodge-room. Thus, in politics, business and religion this principle is developed—the very embodiment of selfishness—the spirit of which is to assist, benefit, and aggrandize whatever is connected with the lodge and their lodge-associates, and to deprecate, neglect and repudiate whatever and whoever is not linked to them by the blood-curdling, secret oaths which they have each and all taken.

These men—these preachers to whom reference has been made—often preach special sermons to the secret societies to which they belong; throwing open the doors of their respective churches, inviting them to attend "in a body," and then lauding their assumed "charity" and works of "benevolence" as evidences of the Christian spirit of their organizations.

To the ordinary classes of society—those who cannot distinguish between true Christianity and its many imitations,—those who do not know the hollowness of the lodge's pretensions to benevolence and charity—those who are dazzled by the gold lace and waving plumes, the tinsel and "frogs" of the lodge regalia, and are deceived by the beautiful sentiments displayed in gilt letters on their silken banners—this dress parade on a Sunday afternoon carries with it a pomp and glory that in the unsophisticated mind breeds an awe which is almost religious in its intensity and effect. The glory of the lodge is to inspire the outside world with this species of awe and admiration, and it rarely fails in its design. Hence, the lodge is benefited by its influence upon the masses.

Strange as it may seem, persons belonging to the churches where these special sermons to secret orders are preached, or even ministers preaching to professed Christians in neighboring churches, is known to protest against this surrender of the church to the lodge; hence, the influence of the "secret empire" is visibly felt and acknowledged.

Again, certain men, filled with scriptural wisdom, and not only professing Christianity but enjoying the fellowship of Christ, and seeing in the lodge system the spirit of opposition to his church and kingdom, and desiring to make known its evil effects upon mankind, are sometimes led to ask for the use of the churches of which one or more of the three preachers referred to are the pastors, for the privilege of lecturing on secret societies. Their requests are coldly received, and nearly always refused, for such preaching would be unseemly in houses where Masons preach and Masons pay the pew-rent. The idea is so preposterous that the desired favor is withheld. The lodge has the church by the throat, not figuratively, but in reality.

It grows more and more evident, day by day, that the lodge and the church are becoming more closely united in unholy alliance. Masonry and Odd-fellowship stand confessed religious organizations, but they are, so far as the religion of Christ is concerned, but pagan institutions that no true Christian can indorse or join without forfeiting his claims to salvation. Masonry offers salvation to men without Christ, and is therefore fully established in its antagonism to the Gospel of Christ. Citations from Masonic publications, by accepted Masonic authorities, show what Masonry claims for itself as a religious system, and reveal the plan of salvation which it substitutes for the inestimable love of Christ.

YORK RITE MASONRY.

In answer to a correspondent who refers to the names and number of degrees belonging to the York Rite of Masonry, we would say that it includes the first three degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry—the Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft, and Master Mason; the four "Chapter" degrees:—Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master, and Royal Arch; and the six degrees of Knights Templarism, to-wit: Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta.

Scottish Rite Masonry has no connection with the York Rite, except that both spring at the same root—the Blue Lodge Master degree, and then branch off in separate lines. Members of both the York Rite and the Scottish Rite must be Master Masons before they can unite with and advance in either.

THE IOWA CONVENTION.

We publish on the first page of this issue the official program of the proceedings of the Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, which is to commence on the 10th of November at Crawfordsville. A large attendance from all parts of Iowa, and from other States, is desired, as there is great necessity for united and effective action in noble Iowa, which has manifested so great a degree of reform in abolishing the saloon, and should be foremost in suppressing the lodge system. Good speakers have been secured, and the cause in which the N. C. A. and the Cynosure are so earnestly working will, we trust, receive a most encouraging support in this convention. The officers of the Iowa State Association are as follows:

President, Rev. S. A. Gilley, of Marengo. Vice Presidents: Rev. C. E. Harroun, Rose Hill; Rev. James Parker, Cedar Rapids; Rev. D. McKee, Clarinda; Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Isaac Gibson, Salem; John Dorcas, Shiloh; Rev. W. H. Hilton, College Springs; Geo. Heaton, Fairfield. Secretary, Rev. T. P. Robb, of Linton. Treasurer and Financial Agent, W. L. Enlow, of Birmingham.

THE STATE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE AT VERNON, WIS.

The Wisconsin Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will, D. V., meet in the Covenanter church at Vernon, Wis., on Thursday evening, October 29, at 7 o'clock, and, as far as practicable, the following program will be adopted:

Seven p. m., call to order, with devotional exercises for half an hour.

The appointment of committees.

An address by Rev. J. B. Galloway, on the Relation of Secret Societies to the Christian Church, followed by a brief discussion.

Rev. Samuel H. Schwartz, pastor of one of the Chicago M. E. churches, will speak upon Odd-fellowship, especially from the standpoint of personal experience.

Friday, October 30, meet at 9:30 A. M., and have a half an hour of devotional exercises.

Report of committees and completion of organization, including plan for State work.

Miscellaneous business.

Friday p. m., meet at 2:30 o'clock. After a season of worship a report of the committee on resolutions, to be followed by discussion or brief addresses.

Friday evening, 7 o'clock, address by Rev.

Isaac L. Faris on the Relation of Secret Societies to Civil Government, followed by an address by H. H. Hinman—Is the Grand Army of the Republic a Beneficent Institution?

Persons coming by the Wisconsin Central railroad will stop at Vernon station. Those who come by the Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R. or the Northwestern R. R. will stop at Waukesha, and, in either case, will write to Rev. J. B. Galloway, of Vernon, Wis., and arrangements will be made to convey them to the meeting.

AN OPEN LETTER

TO PROFESSORS IN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES AND PRESIDENTS OF COLLEGES THROUGHOUT THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD.

DEAR BRETHREN:—For many years, here in the United States, secret societies have existed, and at this time they are rapidly increasing in number. Some of these organizations seem to us, in their principles and practical workings, hostile to the home, the church and the state. They appear to be simply modern paganism growing up in the midst of Christian communities. We have for years undertaken to show, from their own publications, that they are religions which deny Jesus Christ, which do not require the abandonment of sin, and which encourage wicked men to hope for life eternal without any change either of heart or life. Some of those whose opinions we value, and whose aid we greatly desire, have felt that we were extreme in the view above stated.

We accordingly, at this time, take the liberty of printing herewith extracts from the Voice of Masonry for October, which seem to us to plainly indicate that our churches must shortly abandon their efforts to secure a male membership, or else teach our young men the actual character of Freemasonry and kindred pagan orders.

We request that you read carefully the extracts herewith submitted, and that you then write to our office, 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Illinois, offering your advice as to what Christian colleges, seminaries and churches should do in view of the prevalence of this order and others constructed on the same lines, and doing the same work.

The italics in these extracts are ours:

Voice of Masonry, October, 1891, page 774: "Are not all the teachings of Masonry as pure and as exalted as those of any religious society which announces itself a 'church,' with a descriptive prefix? If Freemasonry taught its members to avoid church membership, it would teach a grievous error. It should not teach them to prefer any society before itself, either. This committee believes in church membership, and accepts church membership, and advocates the upbuilding of churches. It also believes in lodge membership and advocates the perpetuity of Freemasonry. If any brother will not join a church, then we bid him God-speed in his devotion to the morality inculcated by the Ancient Craft. His soul's welfare is a matter between himself and his God. Labor with brethren to join your church, but do not be disturbed if some refuse your persuasions. Do not exhibit unnecessary clerical sensitiveness; it is your friend who may possibly lose, not you.

"Masonry is a religion, handmaiden of Christianity, if you will, but still a religion. The word religion is from religare, to 'bind fast,' not from religere, 'to reconsider.' Masonic symbols, morality, ceremonials and requirements tend to bind the soul fast to God, the Creator and Ruler of the universe. The foundation of all religion is the belief in the existence of God. On that foundation, Masonry is builded. Let us not adopt that nervous dread of sectaries that Masonry may some day attempt to supplant certain forms of worship and thereby deprive us of the comfortable belief that Freemasonry is a religion, and that its ceremonies can be observed on the Lord's Day acceptably to him who appointed that day."

From the same, page 784:—"Religion and Masonry. I differ from those Masonic writers and orators who purposely abstain from mentioning religion in connection with Freemasonry, or who frequently make the statement that there is no religion in our institution. I boldly proclaim with all the force of language at my command that there is religion in Freemasonry. Not the narrow religion of sect or creed, but that broad religion which teaches 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me;' that religion which teaches us from childhood to old age reverently to say, 'Our Father which art in heaven;' that religion which teaches us to protect and preserve the Great Light in Masonry which is given as a 'rule and guide for our faith and practice.'"

From the same, page 774.—"And why not allow lodge meetings on the Christian Sabbath? Masonic lodges are dedicated to God and opened in his holy name. The accepted definition of Freemasonry is: 'A beautiful system of morals, veiled in allegory.' There is nothing in our rituals, known to this committee, that is improper to be used on the Lord's Day; if there was, we would advocate its elimination. Now, why is it improper to open a lodge in the name of God upon his own day, and impart to a seeker after light our instructions in friendship, morality and brotherly love? Can it be a desecration of the Sabbath to teach temperance, brotherly love, relief and truth, while lifting our heart in supplicating prayer to God and reading his Holy Book? If the churches of certain denominations may hold business meetings on the Sabbath, and not be charged with irreverence, why may not Masonic lodges meet on the same day for the purpose of education in morality and brotherly love?"

We publish the above extracts, not because they are different in tone from multitudinous extracts which we might make from Masonic publications, but because they are recent, and are the utterances of Grand Lodge officers of our own time. The lodges are already keeping hundreds of thousands of men out of the Christian church. Their bands of music and excursion-trains clash and roar and thunder over our land and across the broken law of God. Their dancing and drinking are leading their members away, not simply from the church, but from the delights of home and the excellencies which even men of the world ought to attend. They now propose, as you can see, to use the Christian Sabbath for Masonic gatherings; and for years lesser secret orders have appropriated that holy day. We trust that all can see that either this country will become a lodge country—that is, a pagan land—or that we shall return to the religious life of our ancestors, the primacy of the church and the prayer-meeting.

We desire the advice of all the religious leaders to whom this writing may come, as to the best method of warning our young men against these organizations, which propose to help men in business, in time of sickness, in case of violated law, and at the same time to assure them of a home in the grand lodge above.

Will not each one addressed take the time to write to us, at the street and number above given, his opinion as to the duty of the church in the present emergency?

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

A correspondent at Houston, Texas, writes to us: "What are your objections, if any, to the Knights of Pythias? Please answer in the Cynosure." Our answer is this:

Like Masonry and Odd-fellowship, this order makes use of the Bible; but like the former it puts the implements of the order on top of the Bible (the first rank excepted). The fact that the very name "Book of the Law" is the term which the great apostle of Masonry, Albert G. Mackey, applies to the sacred book on the altar which he says, "is that volume which by the religion of the country is believed to contain the revealed will of the Grand Architect of the universe," (Mackey's Jurisprudence, p. 33,) gives good reason for the conclusion that this term was chosen in order that the Bible may be conveniently replaced by any other sacred book, when the order is established in heathen or Mohammedan countries. For several years the order was used by political tricksters, nine-tenths of them Masons, to such an extent as to thoroughly disgust its most intelligent members in many localities, so that its managers were forced to admit a loss of nearly 6,000 members in one year. The order was founded in Washington, D. C., Feb. 23, 1877, and its originator was J. H. Rathbone. It has been popular as an insurance, "benevolent" society—one of those in which the members pay beforehand for the "benefits" which they hope to receive at some future day. The order has recently decided to make a new ritual.

—Two train robbers assailed a train in the San Joaquin valley, California, last February, and killed a fireman, but secured little or no booty. One of them was tried and found guilty July 6 and the sentence was to be pronounced September 12. But a postponement of three weeks was ordered and meantime he escaped from the Visalia jail with plenty of evidence of outside help. The California press cries out at the travesty of justice; at the manifest collusion of officers of justice, as if the criminal was to understand that every opportunity to escape would be given. The editors who are so provoked at this incident should visit Visalia and mark how frequent the lodge pins are displayed about that town. Their indignation would be focused upon the secret orders that provide so many such cases. Let them consider, for instance, the McGarigle bath-room incident, under the management of our lodge-entangled Sheriff Matson.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. J. G. Fee, who has been quite feeble and indisposed, writes that he is now regaining his normal health and strength, which will be pleasant news to his many friends.

—The deaths of the past week include Mrs. Allen G. Thurman, widow of Vice President Thurman, and James Parton, the historian. Mrs. Annie Demund died at Woodland, Mich., aged 105 years.

—Bro. S. F. Porter, the College agent, has returned to Chicago, and will visit the seminaries and colleges in and around the city. Then he proposes to pursue his work among the institutions of learning in Southern Indiana and Ohio.

—A little contribution in last week's Cynosure, under the nom de plume of "Tanchicanah," and entitled "His Majesty," should have been credited to Dr. C. B. Dickson. Those who have it by them, and cannot recall its tenor, will, on turning to it, find it an earnest plea for unflinching, undying faith in the Saviour.

—While visiting his aged brother, Samuel, at Beloit, Kans., on his way to the Kansas State Anti-secrecy Conference, ex-Pres. J. Blanchard preached Christ vs. the Lodge to a very crowded congregation in the Methodist Episcopal church—some standing at the door, while the aisles were seated full with chairs. The sermon was well received, and may leave some beneficial impressions upon the minds of those who heard it.

—Rev. Dr. E. P. Goodwin, pastor of the First Congregational church in Chicago, returned from his European tour on Tuesday of last week, much improved in health by his summer vacation. His sermon at the Congregational International Council in London, in June, has also added materially to his reputation as a preacher; and he returns home the acknowledged champion of Puritanism in America, its orthodoxy, and its success as a Christianizing element in our civilization. His welcome home, last Sunday, was a joyful one.

—Ex-President J. Blanchard returned on Saturday last from the Kansas State Anti-Secrecy Conference at Denison, in good health and spirits. He reports the conference (as the old farmer said) "better than Providence could have expected." Consequently, it may be classed among the satisfactory gatherings of anti-secrecy Reformers. It is too soon to estimate the amount of good that will result from its deliberations, but the spirit that pervaded them promises well for a successful and general advance upon the battlements of the "secret empire."

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

tution, teaching a religion other than its own. It is a separate and distinct religion. It is not necessary, as the professor seemed to think, for an institution to say in so many words that it is a religion to make it a religion. If it offers all that any religion offers, we can not justly infer that it is anything but a religion.

Prof. Kistler and his wife gave me the best of entertainment, subscribed for the Cynosure, and ordered a book for the library. I could very naturally give him a first-class recommendation which he would not need where he is known. After completing my canvass of the ministers and the distribution of tracts here, I go (D. V.) to Milford and Oneonta. W. B. STODDARD.

THE HOME.

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If we sit down at set of sun
And count the things that we have done,
And, counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That cheered the heart of him who heard,
One glance most kind
That fell like sunshine where it went—
Then we may count the day well spent.
But if through all the livelong day
We've eased no hearts by yea or nay;
If through it all
We've nothing done that we can trace
That brought the sunshine to a face,
No act most small
That helped some soul, and nothing cost—
Then count that day as worse than lost.

—Anonymus.

TRUST HIM THROUGH.

Sometimes we have an experience that seems like walking through a long, dark tunnel. The chilling air and the thick darkness make it hard walking, and the constant wonder is why we are compelled to tread so gloomy a path while others are in the open day of health and happiness. We can only fix our eyes on the bright light at the end of the tunnel, and we comfort ourselves with the thought that every step we take brings us nearer to the joy and the rest that lie at the end of the way. Extinguish the light of heaven that gleams in the distance, and this tunnel of trial would become a horrible tomb.

Every week a pastor has to confront these mysteries in the dealings of a God of love. To the torturing question, "Why does God lead me into this valley of the shadow of darkness?" we can only reply: "Even so, Father, for so it seems good in thy sight." We are brought into the tunnel, however we may shrink back. There is no retreat; we have nothing left to us but to grasp the very hand that brought us there and push forward.

When we reach heaven we may discover that the richest, and deepest, and most profitable experiences we had in this world were those which were gained in the very roads from which we shrank back with dread. The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that as the lesson and rod are of his appointing, and that as his all-wise love has engineered the deep tunnels of trial on the heavenward road, he will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert him.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

THE CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT IS WRONG.

Because it does not avoid the appearance of evil.

Because it is never prayed for by name in the sanctuary.

Because it never points anyone to the cross of Jesus Christ.

Because it creates two parties in every church where it is engaged in, one for and the other against it.

Because it is not done mainly and only for the glory of God, as everything engaged in by Christian people should be.

Because it steals the hearts of the people and turns them away from the Lord, as Absalom did the hearts of the people of Israel.

Because it robs the church of unity and harmony.

Because it teaches the people to think lightly of the promises of God in regard to the blessedness of giving.

Because it robs people of the joy of giving by teaching them to be stingy.

Because it weakens the influence for spiritual good of those who engage in it.

Because it kills the revival spirit in every church that upholds it.

Because it leads an army of young people into captivity to the world and its follies.

Because it robs religion of its good name and makes the church a beggar.

Because it brings in strife and discord and drives out Christian fellowship.

Because it perverts the truth, by teaching that there is a better way of raising money than God's way.

Because it is robbing God of the great power of influence that the church might have for him.

Because it is offering to God that which has upon it the image and superscription of Cæsar.

Because it steals into the church services and kills the spirit of worship with its announcements and begging appeals for patronage.

Because it violates the entire spirit of worship, by offering to God that which has in it no life or sacrifice, and sets at naught all the teachings of the Bible in regard to giving.

Because it disregards the admonition of Christ to take no step where the entire influence shall not be continually, unmistakably, and altogether upon the side of God. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." No man is ever led to glorify God by anything he sees at a church entertainment, gotten up expressly and only for making money.

Because it leads ungodly people to believe that they can buy the favor of God with money.

Because it makes the church take lower ground than God ever intended that it should take. This is the mountain-top of selfishness upon which God expects every Christian on earth to plant his feet: "If meat maketh my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth."—The Ram's Horn.

HINTS TO YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

Never neglect daily private prayer; and remember that God hears your prayers.

Never neglect daily private Bible reading; and remember that God is speaking to you, and that you are to believe and act upon what he says.

Never let a day pass without aiming to do something for Jesus; every morning reflecting on what Jesus has done for you.

If you are ever in doubt as to anything being right or wrong, consider whether you can do it in the name of Jesus, and ask God's blessing upon it.

Never take your Christianity from Christians; but ask yourself, "How would the Lord have me to act?" and follow him.

Never trust your feelings, or the opinions of men, if they contradict the Word of God.—Exchange.

DO WE REALIZE IT?

A traveler visiting a channel light-house, said to the keeper, "But what if one of your lights should go out at night?"

"Never! Impossible!" he cried. "Yonder are ships sailing to all parts of the world. If tonight one of my burners were out, in six months I should hear from America or India, saying that on such a night the lights at this light-house gave no warning, and that some vessel had been wrecked. Ah, sir! sometimes I feel when I look upon my lights as if the eyes of the whole world were fixed upon me. Go out! Burn dim! Never! Impossible!"

With how much dignity can enthusiasm invest the humblest occupation! Yet what a lesson to us as Christian workers! It is no romance which makes the Christian a spiritual light-house for the world, with the eyes of the whole world upon him. Is our light full and bright and clear? The moment we neglect it, and leave our lamp untrimmed, some poor souls, struggling amid the waves of temptation, for lack of it may be dashed upon the rocks of eternity.—The London Friend.

A REMARKABLE BIBLE SENTENCE.

Some time ago I heard the venerable and Rev. George Nestor, D. D., give a description of a complete sentence of the Holy Bible, which was remarkable indeed. He said there was a sentence in the Holy Scripture which contained sixteen verses, with four hundred and sixty-eight words, and seventy-six commas, and but one period. The first verse of the sentence, he said, has twenty-five words, and the sixteenth and last verse has twenty-four words, but the fourteen other verses in the sentence have thirty words each, and each verse begins with the same word. After I had heard all these things, I asked him if there was certainly such a complete sentence in the Bible. He answered, Yes, there is. Then these words of Dr. P. T. Laishly came into my mind, who said once after hearing Dr. Nestor preach an annual conference sermon: "That he is a living and walking concordance of the Holy Scriptures." Brother Nestor said the sentence referred to stands recorded in the third chapter of the Gospel according to Saint Luke, beginning at the twenty-third verse and extending to the thirty-eighth verse inclusive.—Rev. G. M. Wade.

HOW QUARRELS BEGIN.

"I wish that pony was mine," said a little boy, who stood at the window looking down the road.

"What would you do with him?" asked his brother.

"Ride him; that's what I'd do."

"All day long?"

"Yes; from morning till night."

"You'd have to let me ride him sometimes," said his brother.

"Why would I? You'd have no right in him if he were mine."

"Father would make you let me have him part of the time."

"No; he wouldn't."

"My children," said the mother, who had been listening to them, and now saw that they were beginning to get angry with each other all for nothing, "let me tell you of a quarrel between two boys no bigger nor older than you are, that I read about the other day. They were going along the road, talking together in a pleasant way, when one of them said:

"I wish I had all the pasture land in the world."

"The other said, 'And I wish I had all the cattle in the world.'"

"What would you do then?" asked his friend.

"Why, I would turn them into your pasture land."

"No, you wouldn't," was the reply.

"Yes, I would."

"But, I wouldn't let you."

"I wouldn't ask you."

"You shouldn't do it."

"I should."

"You sha'n't."

"I will." And with that they seized and pounded each other like two silly, wicked boys as they were."

The children laughed; but their mother said, "You see in what trifles quarrels often begin. Were you any wiser than these boys in your half angry talk about an imaginary pony? If I had not been here, who knows but you might have been as silly and wicked as they were?"—Sunday Afternoon.

PRAYING FOR APPLES.

"I don't know, grandpa; I've prayed and prayed, and it don't seem to do much good. I've got almost discouraged." And Archie hung his head, and looked downcast enough, indeed.

"I wouldn't," said grandpa; "I think apples are going to be plentiful this year."

"What if they are?" asked Archie, in surprise.

"Why, I thought you liked apples as well as any boy."

"So I do, grandpa; but what in the world have apples to do with a fellow's prayers? 'Pears like none of you can understand how hard it is for a boy to do right; you would not make so light of it if you did."

Grandpa was just about to laugh at Archie's aggrieved tone, but he turned and said to him, "Let me finish what I was going to tell you about apples, and then see if I don't understand more than you think. I think apples are going to be plenty, because I just now passed Mr. Miller's orchard, and he was out praying for a good crop."

"Out praying! Not out in the orchard, where every one would see him, surely!"

"Yes, he was out in the orchard; and I don't think he cared who saw him. He is there yet, I presume, and, if you want, you shall go and see him yourself."

Archie was too surprised to answer, but he took grandpa's hand and went with him in the direction of Squire Miller's.

When they got where they could look over the high hedge and see what was going on in the orchard, there was old Mr. Miller following the plow, and turning furrow after furrow of the smooth green sod under, while the boys were hauling manure with the cart and spreading it in the furrows.

Archie looked on in amazement. "I thought you said Mr. Miller was —"

"Praying for apples? Exactly; he has not had a good crop off the old orchard for several years now, for the sod needed breaking up and the trees enriching by fertilizing. Don't you think that after he has done all he can to make the right conditions for fruit-bearing, he can go to God and finish his prayer, with the feeling that all now rests with the Lord of the harvest?"

"Finish his prayer?" echoed Archie, in amazement; "if that is finishing his prayer, then I guess I have never begun some of mine."

"May be so, may be so," answered grandpa, softly, as though speaking to himself. And then he added: "It would be hard for Squire Miller to pray a good crop of apples on those trees unless he made the soil richer first, eh, Archie?"

"Forgive me, grandpa," Archie answered, "for what I said a minute ago about not understanding how hard it is for a boy; I was the one who didn't understand it was hard, and now you have shown me. I'm going to begin some of my prayers that I finished a long time ago. I'll quit playing with James Barnstone and read my daily passages more, and see if I can't get the soil for my resolutions a little richer."—Rev. J. F. Cowan, in the Lutheran Sunday-school Herald.

TEMPERANCE.

HOW MY BOY WENT DOWN.

It was not on the field of battle,
It was not with a ship at sea;
But a fate far worse than either
That stole him away from me.
'Twas the death in the ruby wine-cup,
That the reason and senses drown;
He drank the alluring poison,
And thus my boy went down.
Down from the heights of manhood,
To the depths of disgrace and sin;
Down to a worthless being,
From the hope of what might have been;
For the brand of a beast besotted,
He bartered his manhood's crown;
Through the gate of a sinful pleasure
My poor, weak boy went down.
'Tis only the same old story
That mothers so often tell
With accents of infinite sadness,
Like the tones of a funeral bell;
But I never thought once when I heard it,
I should learn all its meaning myself;
I thought he'd be true to his mother;
I thought he'd be true to himself.
But alas for my hopes, all delusion!
Alas for his youthful pride!
Alas! who are safe when danger
Is open on every side?
Oh, can nothing destroy this great evil!
No bar in their pathway be thrown,
To save from the terrible maelstrom
The thousands of boys going down?

—Selected.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

HOW THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION WAS VIEWED IN OLDEN DAYS.

[An address which was delivered at Saxton's River, Vt., by J. Blanchard, and published in the old Intelligencer September 11, 1830.]

(Continued from last week.)

Through the kindness of one of our merchants, whose shop, compared with the remaining six in this town vends less than an average quantity of goods, I ascertained that his Boston bills for ardent spirits, exclusive of the freight, which is no inconsiderable sum, amount, in one year, to between $500 and $600. That we may avoid all possibility of transcending the fact in the case, let this sum be placed at $500, and the sum paid in Boston per year by the seven merchants of this town will be $3,500! This sum, it is but reasonable to suppose, they receive at the hands of our citizens. As you perceive, we have deducted the freight and the profit necessary to the support of the merchant, for the quantity which may be purchased by individuals of the adjacent towns, aside from the fact, that many citizens of this, obtain their supplies from neighboring towns, and even from Boston. We have, then, in the beginning, a tax of $3,500. Allow, then, the ten public houses in this town to realize a profit, apart from the original cost of the liquors, from the inhabitants of this town, of one dollar each per week, $520, and the above sum becomes $4,020. Are any disposed to cavil at this computation, I remind them of spirits procured from distilleries of a kind of tax we pay our merchants, who, to live, are obliged to receive large profits on their goods in consequence of bad debts, most of which stand to the account of those whose estates are swept away by this meagre fiend of desolation. I remind them of these, all of which have been thrown out of the account, for the simple reason that a tax of $4,020 per year, on a population of but little above 2,000 and that for the gratification of a taste which the god of nature never gave them—is, as before hinted, sufficient to move the sympathy of any except those in the scale of whose judgment human happiness hangs doubtful, though balanced by a grain. Had this sum been applied, the three churches which stand among us might have been supplied by it with able ministers of the Gospel, permanent instructors supported for school district, our library (which, if it exists, is but a volume of reproach to us,) had been furnished with books that would have attracted our youth, and awakened in them a thirst for knowledge, instead of containing a few neglected obsolete books, perused only by bookworms; all this might have been effected, and still a surplus would have remained. If the tax paid yearly by this town for ardent spirits were levied by our government on this State, with a population of between 200,000 and 300,000, and should they be offered no other equivalent than we receive, there is not a church bell among our mountains that would not ring "to arms!"—nor would they cease, unless the act were revoked, till they had tolled the death-knell of liberty! Yet the tyrant custom yearly receives this exorbitant tribute from this single town, with an eagerness paralleled only by the insatiability of the grave, and a malign joy at beholding his increasing revenue, well pictured in the line of Milton:

"And death grinn'd horribly a ghastly smile!"

Wherefore, then, in the language of the prophet, "Wherefore do you spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

But that ardent spirits are a direct tax on the people, far greater than is required for the support of our government and education, is a consideration comparatively of small moment. Wealth is of no value only as it conduces to the happiness of mankind. But the influence of the "cup of trembling" on all that renders society delightful, or life itself desirable, so transcends all its effects on the estate and substance of man, both in degree of misery produced, and nature of the wretchedness it generates; so much more fearfully subversive of human happiness is it, in its effects on the social circle, and by the domestic fireside, than in its influence on the pecuniary interests of man, that the latter fades into light shades and sketchings while the former stands in dark relief, shedding sepulchral gloom over the whole picture. Look at the effect of stimulus on the character of him who still is able to perform the duties of his vocation or that his relations to society impose on him. He has never yet merited the epithet of drunkard, and is one of those men of whom his acquaintance say, "a few years since he performed acts of benevolence. At a certain time he exhibited in his deeds unusual powers of intellect." Sometimes his friends even breathe a sluggish wish that he might use a little less strong drink, observing at the same time, "he is not the man he once was." But let us come near and look at the nature of the change which has passed over his character. Was he irascible, under its influence he becomes fractious and quarrelsome. Was he mild, his dram renders him fond and disgusting. If naturally taciturn, he becomes morose, austere, and sullen. Is there a blemish on his character, each repetition of the unearthly potiou, urging his system with unnatural vigor, the spot widens in extent, and deepens in its dye. If there is but the embryo of a hateful passion lurking in his bosom, nourished and pampered by the guilt-inspiring draught, it comes with hasty approaches to usurp entire dominion over his heart. For a time pride of character struggles against the demands of an unnatural and tormenting appetite, and he maintains respectability abroad by a studied dissimulation, and returns to the circle of his family and friends to give full vent to the promptings of an overheated brain and a morbid temper. I have seen the partner of such a man, still retaining affection for him knowing that her own, and the respectability of her children, depended on the course he pursued, watching with feverish anxiety the progress of the accursed habit that pursued him through all his walks, as the gaunt snake intent on his victim; I have seen her patiently enduring her first lessons of abuse, and assiduously secreting his brutal conduct, hoping, by appealing to what of man remained, he might be restored to his family, to society, and to himself; and when hope, that had long flitted around her heart,

"As o'er the dying lamp th' unsteady flame, Still flickering hangs, unwilling to depart,"

has taken its final leave, the look of desponding which settled on her brow seemed to say, "It must be so; not my happiness alone, but all my dreams of satisfaction this side of the grave are ended." And this is the worst of all. The confirmed sot rends the feelings of his connections callous to their disgrace and his infamy. I have within the last two years seen a miserable wretch in prime of life, whose besotted head had never yet disgraced a gray hair, stretched on a mattress within the walls of a jail; his throat cut with his own hand, so that his rum-polluted breath rattled through the incision; cut, too, with the instrument he had prepared for the murder of his wife; and cut in a fit of rage that the arm of the law kept him from his purpose. And although but few years before, in the possession of character and property, he had been united to that wife, young and interesting, under the most favorable auspices, he had long been an outcast from society now, and his partner had settled down into a moody, reckless indifference. Even this sight, spirit-freezing as it was, utterly failed to awaken in my bosom those thrilling emotions of sadness which I have experienced on witnessing the anguish of a female, who had long held the hope of comfort and respectability for herself and children by the frail tenure of a husband's promise of reformation, on seeing that tenure frequently sundered, and her last hope forever flown. In the one case, my feelings resembled that placid melancholy we experience on beholding the body in which the vital spark is extinct. In the other, the throbs of interest we feel on seeing a fellow being sinking reluctantly in the iron embrace of death. Were I to select an instance in which inebriating liquors were productive of the most misery to mankind, I would point to the family where no individual would perhaps be called intemperate, but where the husband, by habitual use of ardent spirits, becomes, as it respects the finer feelings of our nature, transformed into the brute. And when all hope of his escaping this worse than Circean influence was lost, I would point to the last lingering, despairing look of agony depicted on the countenance of her whose all depended on him, which seems to utter the forlorn wish,

"Now melt, ye elements that form'd in vain
My troubled pulse and visionary brain;
Fade, ye wild flowers, memorials of my doom,
And sink, ye stars, that light me to the tomb."

And do we find difficulty in supplying instances from recollection compared with which the above is but a feeble representation? Do we not rather shudder at the number of miserable objects that pass before the eyes of our minds? Shall we then any longer harbor this viper which, though stifened with cold and apparently harmless, invariably "bites like a serpent and stings like an adder."

(To be continued.)

TEMPERANCE NUGGETS.

The first election in Illinois under the new Australian ballot law was held at Berlin, a little village of about 300 inhabitants in Sangamon county, lately. The issue at the election was that of license or no license, and the latter won the day.

In the new scheme for carrying on the "People's palace" in London, it is provided that "no intoxicating liquors shall be introduced, nor, except with the special permission of the governing body, shall any dramatic representation or dancing take place in any part of the premises."

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON V.—Fourth Quarter.—November 1.

SUBJECT.—Christ the True Vine.—John 15: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.—John 15: 8.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 15: 1-8. T.—John 15: 9-16. W.—1 John 2: 4-11. T.—1 John 2: 24-29. F.—Rom. 12: 1-5. S.—Eph. 4: 11-24. S.—Matt. 7: 13-20.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The grafted branch.—vs. 1-6. Palestine was a land of vineyards, and in the prophets no simile is more common than that of a vine by which to describe the house of Israel. In spite of all God's careful training through such mixed blessing and discipline as never fell to the lot of any other people, they "brought forth only wild grapes." Nothing more could be expected from them, and now a new Israel, which was to be after the spirit as the other had been after the flesh, was to be established on an altogether different basis. God knew that his ancient people would be a failure; and yet in that very failure his purposes were fulfilled; one of which was doubtless to show humanity what a poor thing it is, until it can be in some way vitally connected with a higher life outside of itself. Only when grafted into the true Vine can it bring forth fruit to perfection. But something more is required. We must abide in the Vine. As the sap from the literal vine must flow into all the branches before they can bear fruit, so that spiritual life which is in Christ must permeate our whole being, making us one with him before we can truly live, much less bear "much fruit." A few small, feeble clusters here and there show a weak and imperfect union, which may cease altogether. Then nothing remains for the dead branch but to be destroyed. "Men gather them," etc. Even sinners have no respect for a hypocrite. While we have here a primary reference to the fires of the last day, it may also bear a secondary one—to that judgment which the world is sure, sooner or later, to mete out to those whose daily conduct belies their Christian profession.

2. The joy of abiding in Christ.—vs. 7-11. Christ said in his prayer to the Father, "I know that thou hearest me always." In v. 7, he teaches us that we may claim the same privilege on the condition of simply abiding in and being one with him, as the branches are one with the vine. We may ask what we will, and it shall be done to us. Abiding in Christ, we possess with him the Son's privilege. But this does not mean any power to dictate or control divine Providence. To abide in Christ implies that we have the mind of Christ; and being thus guided by his Spirit we shall not pray for anything that is opposed to the Father's will. "Herein is my Father glorified." The owner of a vine upon which he has bestowed great labor, will naturally take both pride and pleasure in the bountiful yield of fruit which rewards his careful culture. The admiration and praise with which visitors regard the vine is really given to the proprietor. He is, therefore, in a certain sense, glorified thereby. Christ says: "My Father is the husbandman;" and so, in an infinitely higher sense, he is glorified in the fruitfulness of all the branches. But there is more to come. To abide in Christ means to be a partaker with him in his Father's love. When Jesus "rejoiced in spirit," it was because of a new and overwhelming manifestation to his human nature of that divine love. He has been called the Man of Sorrows; yet the greatest thing he could ask for his disciples, the climax of the blessings which would follow their living union with him, was that his joy might remain in them, and thus their joy might be full.

3. Other privileges of union with Christ.—vs. 12-17. "This is my commandment"—that is, it includes all others—"I have given you, that ye love one another." But Christ does not stop here. He adds: "as I have loved you." Be willing to do in your measure for others what I have done for you. The apostles literally obeyed this injunction, and so have many others since their day, by giving up every home comfort, and even life itself, to carry salvation to the perishing. While few, comparatively, are called to make such a supreme sacrifice, the same spirit may be carried into the most quiet existence. This is the important thing. We may give our bodies to be burned, but without this spirit of love in our hearts it profiteth nothing. We make friends of those who are congenial, who have the same aims and desires with ourselves. This introduces us to another privilege consequent on a living union with Christ. He calls us no longer servants, but elevates us far above the slavish condition implied by the word as it stands in the original Greek, into that of a companion and confidant. He chose us first, which not only makes another link in the chain which binds us to him, but should keep us humble under the most exalted spiritual privileges. It might argue some natural merit in us, some goodness of our own, had we chosen him first. But he has not only chosen; he has ordained, or appointed, us to a great and important work;—which is to bring forth fruit to his glory;—fruit that shall "remain"—continue to bless the world after we have gone from these earthly scenes. Have we such an abiding union with Christ that our works will not die with our death but live after us?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—President Harper, of Chicago Baptist University, during his visit to London, has secured the following to fill various chairs in the new institution: Rev. Wm. F. Moulton, D.D., the famous New Testament scholar and translator of the Apocrypha; and Prof. Robert Lubbock Bensley, LL.D., the noted linguist, lecturer on Hebrew at Cambridge, professor of Arabic, one of the revisers of the Old Testament, and a celebrated orientalist and Latin scholar.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Congregational Total Abstinence Society is arranging for a conference to be held in the Memorial Hall, London, this month, with a view to federating the various temperance works conducted by the leading Non-conformist bodies.

—One thousand Chinese members of the Congregational church in California and Oregon have sent two missionaries to their native land, and have also contributed $2,200 to home missions. Lun Foon, a member of the Methodist church in San Francisco, has given up a good business, and returned to China to do missionary work at his own charge. He has built a mission property, with preaching hall and school-rooms.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—The episcopal differences which have been the occasion of so much feeling and dissension in the Evangelical association, have resulted in the deposition of Bishop Dubs and his expulsion from the ministry and membership of that church. This result was reached at the recent conference in Indianapolis. The trouble began in a dispute over family matters between two of the bishops. The feeling was allowed to affect their administration; sides were taken, and the unity of the church seriously threatened.

—The Evangelical "Band," organized only a few years ago in Germany for the purpose of combatting the aggressiveness of Roman Catholicism, has had a wonderful growth, indicating that the Evangelical churches in the land of Luther are being aroused on the dangers of Ultramontaniam. The association now numbers 74,000 members, an increase of 14,000 in one year. Its chief strength is in the Rhine districts where the Roman Catholics are especially demonstrative. The literary activity of the association is great, one of their journals appearing in an edition of 23,000 copies, another in 25,000.

LUTHERAN.

—By direction of the General Synod a committee is making arrangements for the establishment of an Invalid Lutheran Ministers' Home, in the Garden of the Gods, near Colorado Springs, Col.

—Rev. M. J. Alleman, who has been the organizer of four Lutheran churches in York, Pa., is now the pastor of two of them, viz., St. Matthews and St. Peters. He preaches in the morning in one, and in the evening in the other.

—The Lutheran Synod of Maryland numbers 84 ministers, serving 105 congregations. Last year it had 35 students preparing for the ministry. It numbers 17,925 members and has 19,692 children in the Sabbath-schools. It gave last year to Home Missions, $3,951.54; to Foreign Missions, $3,822.70; to Church Extension, $4,159.61; to Beneficiary Education, $2,687.89. To all benevolent causes, about $75,000. This is the work of one synod.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The "Bible College" is a movement started by the Epworth League of Chattanooga, Tenn., and vicinity. The arrangements include regular meetings at a central point for a thorough study of "the Book," and lectures on allied topics by prominent clergymen. A journal will also be published monthly to provide a series of required readings.

—The Ecumenical Council of Methodists in Washington, D. C., is the second meeting of the kind in that church. Representatives from twenty-nine divisions of the Methodist church were present. No delegate or organization is bound by any action of the Council, but it is probable that as the result of it, there will be a union among the various bodies.

—Bishop Newman, of the Methodist Episcopal church, while at Chautauqua recently, remarked that the question of the Epworth League would constitute an important feature, among many things, in the business of the General Conference next May. In saying that he favored denominational societies, with an interdenominational convention every two years, he takes precisely the position taken by the United Brethren in organizing the Young People's Christian Union.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—At Jaffna College, Ceylon, the students have in the last year attended in a body the sessions of two conferences, one being the Young Men's Christian Association at Nellore. Fifty per cent of the students are Christians and church members.

—The evangelical churches on the west side of Chicago are making extensive preparations for a union revival campaign under the leadership of Rev. B. Fay Mills. The campaign opens Nov. 3, and promises to be one of unusual aggressiveness and profit.

—Since 1868, the year in which freedom of worship was guaranteed to Protestants, 12,000 citizens of Spain have left Rome for the Gospel. The Spanish Protestants have 120 houses of worship, 100 schools with 160 teachers and 6,000 pupils, 60 pastors and 40 evangelists, 6 church papers, 3 orphanages and 2 hospitals. A large number of Protestant periodicals, printed in Spain, are sent regularly to Mexico, Chili and Argentine.

—Friends of Italy will hear with delight of the diffusion of the Scriptures in Rome. It is said that during the first six months of 1890, 21,000 copies of the publications of the Bible Society were sold in Rome and its environs. An especially encouraging circumstance is the introduction of the Bible into Italian schools. Schools where other languages are taught have, it is stated, adopted the New Testament as a reading-book.

MORAVIANS.

—The Moravian Missions. By the rescue of 1,500 souls from heathenism in the course of the past year, the number of converts reaches nearly 90,000. The income was £8,866 in 1890. There are 135 stations of the missions in Greenland. Labrador, among the North American Indians, in the West Indies, America, South Africa, Australia, Northwest India, Thibet, and Alaska; the congregations numbering 87,263, of whom 40,000 are British subjects; of European and native missionaries, 355 are employed in the several fields. In 113 Sunday-schools are some 15,000 scholars, and in the 235 day schools 20,629 children are under instruction. Four young Moravian missionaries are on their way to the newly established station on Lake Nyassa.

MORMONS.

—The general conference of the Latter Day Saints, in session Oct. 6 at Salt Lake City, Utah, adopted resolutions declaring the official report of the government's Utah commission to be untrue and misleading in many important particulars. The church does not dominate its adherents in political matters, says the conference, and every Mormon is at perfect liberty to chose his political party without disadvantage ecclesiastically. Plural marriages no longer exist, and the manifesto of President Woodruff forbidding polygamy was adopted in all sincerity and good faith.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—Last year Union Seminary, in which Dr. Briggs is a professor, matriculated forty-nine new students; but this year only forty. Last year Princeton Seminary, which teaches the infallibility of the Scriptures, matriculated fifty-four new students; but this year this orthodox seminary matriculated one hundred and six new students.

—It is reported that Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., formerly pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian church in Philadelphia, and editor of the Missionary Review, has been invited to take charge of the Metropolitan Tabernacle in London during the illness of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. He was to leave this country for London on the 14th of October.

—The Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, South has recently sent out twenty-four missionaries, seventeen of them going out for the first time. There are three others also under appointment. Five go to Japan, nine to China, two to the Congo, eight to Brazil. The receipts of the board for the first quarter of the year show an increase of $9,309.

—Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, whose trial for heresy is set for Nov. 5, is charged by the Presbytery of New York with holding doctrines which deny that "the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are the only infallible rule of faith and practice," and with "teaching doctrines of the character, state and sanctification of believers after death which irreconcilably conflict with, and are contrary to, the Holy Scriptures and the standards of the Presbyterian church."

—Rev. J. C. K. Milligan, D.D., for thirty-three years pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, has been summoned to appear before the Synod of that church on Oct. 29, and defend himself upon a charge of heresy. Dr. Milligan, in order to save his people from all trouble in this controversy, resigned his pastoral charge, and by a bare majority the resignation was accepted.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

On Thursday morning at Crete, Ill., through the agency of a misplaced switch, the fast train on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois road, was wrecked. Engineer James Clark and three attaches of the Inter-Ocean, who were riding on the engine, named Leonard D. Washburne, Frederick W. Henry, and Frank A. McCafferty, were all instantly killed.

Lawrence P. Boyle, attorney for the Board of Election Commissioners, gave an opinion that no woman can register and vote except those who received certificates of naturalization prior to Jan. 1, 1870.

Mary Allen West, editor-in-chief of the Union Signal, is building a fine house at Harvey, on property she purchased through Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

COUNTRY.

It is estimated that the total yield of corn in Iowa the present season will be 300,000,000 bushels.

Customs receipts at New York during the first ten days of October were $4,588,386 less than they were during the corresponding period last year.

A motion is soon to be argued in the United States Supreme Court for the release of the anarchists, Fielden and Schwab, now confined in the Joliet (Ill.) Penitentiary, on technical grounds.

Commissioner Morgan has ordered an inspection of the Indian contract schools, especially with regard to the text-books used, the alleged slanders of regular government schools, and the courses of study. In certain contingencies the contracts will be revoked.

The Michigan crop report for October gives the total wheat crop as 30,411,730 bushels.

It is estimated that about four hundred square miles of territory in Wisconsin were devastated by the recent tornado. The loss of pine timber is great.

Towns within 150 miles of Chicago are to have improved mail facilities in the near future.

The United States Supreme Court met at Washington, Monday, for the October term. Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Bradley and Gray were absent.

At Pittsfield, Mass., Tuesday, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions began its eighty-second annual meeting. The total cost of missions for the year was $824,048, and the receipts $824,825. The field reports were encouraging.

Tuesday, the one hundredth anniversary of Presbyterianism was celebrated at Uniontown, Pa.

The Hon. Rutherford B. Hayes was re-elected President of the Prison Congress at the convention at Pittsburg, Wednesday.

Earthquake shocks were felt at San Francisco and Petaluma, Cal., Wednesday.

The Ecumenical Methodist Conference at Washington, Wednesday, offered a resolution asking the authorities of the World's Fair to close the Exposition on the Sabbath.

Rutherford B. Hayes was re-elected Commander-in-chief of the Loyal Legion of the United States at Philadelphia Wednesday.

A Chicago woman, respectably connected, applied at the Keeley institute for inebrates at Plainfield, Ind., Wednesday, to be cured of drunkenness. She is the first female applicant.

In Trinity Church at Boston, Mass., Wednesday, Dr. Phillips Brooks was consecrated bishop of the Episcopal church.

At Galesburg, Ill., Wednesday, the Brotherhood of Trainmen changed the constitution so that the Grand Master can not discharge a Grand Lodge officer, vesting that power in an executive board.

At the Methodist Ecumenical Conference at Washington, Thursday, a prolonged scene of disorder followed the introduction of resolutions favoring the federation of the various branches of the Methodist church. The forenoon was given up to a discussion of Romanism and the afternoon to temperance.

At the Evangelical Association Conference in Philadelphia, Thursday, it was recommended that an institution of learning be established near Chicago.

Monday, at San Francisco, M. B. Curtis, the actor, was held for trial for the murder of Policeman Grant.

John Hoey was deposed of his position as president of the Adams Express Company, Monday, for malfeasance in office.

By the bursting of a fly-wheel in mill No. 7 of the Amoskeag Corporation at Manchester, N. H., two persons were killed and eight injured.

Business failures for last week number 259, compared with 270 the previous week, and 227 in the corresponding week of 1890.

At Des Moines, Iowa, Thursday, the Iowa Alliance before adjournment voted against fusing with the Southern Alliance.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Oct. 12 to 17:

G Paliester Sr, W W Nicholas, Deacon A Chamberlain, Mrs J Haire, J W Snively, Mrs J Cleaver, W T Peters, T Keppel, E L Walker, J Ackart, Rev W G Waddle, S Graham, H Vanblarcom, R H Buttermore, J Walters, B Harper, W C Padgett, R A Paden, A Overholt, Miss C S Lowrey, L D Hollingsworth, J W Riner, A Warner, A Warner, Mrs A Lewis, Rev J S Amidon, N P Eddy.

Deserving Confidence.

There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs and Colds should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	96 @	97
Winter.....	96½ @	96¾
Corn—No. 2.....	54 @	54¾
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @	30½
Rye—No. 2.....	84 @	84½
Bran per ton.....	12 50	13 00
Hay—Timothy.....	9 00	11 50
Butter, medium to best....	22 @	30
Cheese.....	06 @	10¼
Beans.....	1 55 @	1 85
Eggs.....	17½ @	19½
Seeds—Timothy.....	65 @	1 20
Flax.....	99 @	1 00
Broom corn.....	4 @	05½
Potatoes, per bush.....	20 @	28
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4½ @	5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	6 10 @	6 45
Common to good....	3 35 @	4 40
Hogs.....	3 75 @	4 80
Sheep.....	3 50 @	4 90

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 04½ @	1 07¾
Corn.....	61½ @	63
Oats.....	34½ @	34¾
Eggs.....	22 @	23
Butter.....	14 @	32
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @	5 80
Hogs.....	3 25 @	4 55
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 50

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
48 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

JOHN G. FEE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

will stimulate the faith of hundreds who will see in it how God can work in moral reforms, his wonders to perform, when state, church and nation oppose their combined power. Buy it for your boys and girls and you will not fail to read it yourself.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, $1.00. Postage, 10 cents extra. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

TO YOU FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or

SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or

SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or

McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of ½ cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Between Two Opinions. OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages: cloth, $1.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grauge," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cts each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW GIRLS GET INDIGESTION.

Many girls lay the foundation of indigestion and its train of attendant evils, during their school days. They sit up late at night, and, consequently, do not want to get up in the morning. When they do rise, being already late for breakfast, they do not take time for a thorough sponge bath, which would open the pores and make them feel fresh and brisk. They come down stairs pale and languid, eat a few mouthfuls of oatmeal, or, perhaps, push it away untasted, play with a hot roll, swallow two or three pieces of steak, without masticating it, drink a cup of strong coffee and then say, "Mother, I can't wait for any more breakfast; can't I go?"

Sometimes it is, "Mother, I am not hungry, this morning; I don't want any breakfast;" and the mother who would shrink with horror from letting her child go into the street with her bare feet, calmly says, "Very well, dear, you may go," and sends her out with an unfortified stomach.—Home Journal.

BREVITIES.

Equal parts of cream-tartar and salt-peter make an excellent remedy for rheumatism. Take one-half teaspoonful of the mixture and divide it into three doses. Take one of these doses three times a day.

A simple method of stewing apples is to cut them into quarters and put them in a thick earthen pudding dish. To every quart of apple quarters pour over a half cup of water and add a cup of sugar. Cover the pudding dish with a thick earthen plate, and set it in the oven for one hour. At the end of this time the apples will be found clear and transparent, thoroughly cooked and almost unbroken in form.—N. Y. Tribune.

People who are subject to catarrhal ailments have special need to be particular in regard to their feet covering; they should see to it that their feet are always comfortably clad. Their shoes should have substantial soles, and should come well up the ankles, and not be laced or buttoned tight. Light merino stockings or half-hose may be sufficient for warmth, but whenever by reason of much exercise the feet have become damp, and especially if the leather has absorbed wet, it is wise for a change to be made in both stockings and shoes.—Exchange.

A delicious dessert is made as follows: Four cups milk, four eggs, one cup sugar, four tablespoonfuls grated chocolate, two teaspoonfuls vanilla. Put the chocolate over the fire in a double boiler with part of the milk, and let it cook until smooth; add the rest of the milk, and, when this is hot, pour it upon the sugar mixed with the beaten yolks of the eggs. Return to the stove, and cook until the custard begins to thicken; when cool, pour into glasses or small cups, and heap on the top of each a meringue made of the whites of the eggs whipped stiff with a little powdered sugar. Or it may be served in a large dish. An agreeable variation may be made by substituting for the chocolate half a cup of strong coffee.—Boston Budget.

Fricassee Chicken.—Cut the chickens into pieces. Put into a pot with cold water to cover. Boil slowly for an hour for an ordinary chicken—twice as long for an old one. Thicken the gravy and pour it over the chickens. The water should be salted when the chickens are put on, pepper added after they are dishd. Add butter if the chickens are very young, with a little thyme if it is liked.

Chicken Potpie.—Prepare and cook as above. Fifteen minutes before serving, drop into the pot pieces of ordinary biscuit dough, rolled thinner than for biscuits, and cut into squares. If put in immediately after mixing, and cooked without removing the cover, they will be light. Thicken the gravy and pour over the chickens and dumplings.—Good Housekeeping.

Roast Chicken.—Stuff the crop and body with a mixture of bread crumbs, butter, salt, and pepper. The stuffing may be moistened or put in dry as pre-

DON'T DELAY TO

Stop that cough! Else the bronchial tubes will be enlarged and the delicate tissues of the lungs exposed to injury. No other medicine is so speedily operative in throat and lung troubles as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few doses have been known to break up an obstinate and distressing cough. Sufferers from asthma, bronchitis, croup, consumption, sore throat, and whooping cough find a sure relief in the use of this preparation. It soothes the inflamed membrane, promotes expectoration, and induces repose. Don't be without it in the house, Sallie E. Stone, Hurt's store, Va., writes: "I have found, in my family, that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was always a certain cure for colds and coughs."

"Five years ago I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and had been given up by my physicians. I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was completely cured."—Anga A. Lewis, Ricard, N. Y. *

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
	SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
	TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.25
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicag

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

ferred. Be careful not to get it too moist. Pour half a cupful of water over the chicken, and roast an hour for an ordinary fowl—longer for an old one. Boil the giblets, cut fine and add with the liquor in which they are boiled to the gravy. Thicken the gravy, and add a sliced hard-boiled egg to it, and serve in a gravy bowl. The chicken should be basted frequently while roasting.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greenc. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tic, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church, 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disaffiliate from secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

FARM NOTES.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS.

It is always a good plan to have some work laid out ahead for a rainy day, so that neither yourself nor your hands will be forced to remain idle. A commodious workshop, well provided with tools, is the best provision that can be made against such a contingency. There will then be always plenty of necessary work to engage you in the way of painting, repairing, etc., and it is work that will pay as well as any done out of doors. If you have not such a one, build it this fall, and you will be in better shape for next spring's work, so far as tools are concerned, than you ever were before.

A number of subscribers have sent inquiries about field bean culture. We are glad to note an increased interest in the bean crop, for we believe it deserves more attention by our farmers. There are thousands of farmers in the East devoting all their energies to the production of wheat, oats, barley, etc., at a positive loss. The average yields are small, and the crop costs more in many instances than it brings. In the East a yield of anything less than twelve or fifteen bushels of wheat per acre leaves the farmer without profit, if not in debt; yet on these same lands a crop of beans might be obtained at from $10 to $20 or more clear profit per acre.

It is a common practice to keep hogs barely through spring and summer and then begin to feed high, often on concentrated food. Such abrupt change is apt to produce bad results. A sudden change from all grass to all grain overtaxes the digestive organs, and leads to more serious results than the loss of food, for the animal sustains a loss of vital force, which it is slow to regain. Let the hog have the run of a wide pasture, if possible, where he can supply himself to a great extent with his natural foods, as grass, herbage, roots, etc., but daily feed him a liberal allowance of the best food of the kind adapted to his wants, and then he will be kept in a thrifty, growing condition.

Calves intended for the dairy should be kept growing through the winter, kept warm in pens and fed properly. Fine hay, part clover, with a little bran and crushed oats, and an occasional feed of pulped roots, are desirable rations. Skim milk is good if it can be spared. Keep the young things growing.

The outlook for export beef, whether under the refrigerator system or as live cattle, is certainly brighter at present than at any other time in the history of the American cattle trade. Now is the time for the producers in Uncle Sam's broad domains to show that they can raise cattle of such quality as will be relished by their English cousins. If you have grown a good crop of roots and have not cellar room in which to store them, and yet want them handy for feeding in the winter, build an "up-ground" cellar; that is, a cellar partly above and partly below the ground. This is better than to bury them in pits, for then when the ground is frozen or when it is very muddy it is difficult to get at them.—Christian Statesman.

POULTRY NOTES.

Don't give your children money as though you were bestowing charity upon a tramp. Why not treat them like ladies and gentlemen, and pay them wages for the work they do? If somebody else's boy does a day's work for you, you pay him what it's worth.

"I'm afraid I was not cut out for a tragedian," acknowledged Mr. J. Roscius Hamme.

"How did you find that out? Did the little birds tell you?"

"They might have been birds if they had been allowed to hatch."

"Don't crow too loudly," is a gentle reminder addressed to any one who has been unusually successful, or vanquished his opponent, and of whom it may be said as Shakespeare puts it, "His lungs begin to crow like chanticleer." The allusion is to cocks, who invariably crow when they have vanquished an adversary, and proved themselves "cock of the walk." The warning is often needed,

If you have a COLD or COUGH, acute or leading to

CONSUMPTION,

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA

IS SURE CURE FOR IT.

This preparation contains the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites and fine Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. Used by physicians all the world over. It is as palatable as milk. Three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil. A perfect Emulsion, better than all others made. For all forms of Wasting Diseases, Bronchitis,

CONSUMPTION,

Scrofula, and as a Flesh Producer

there is nothing like SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is sold by all Druggists. Let no one by profuse explanation or impudent entreaty induce you to accept a substitute.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago for the loudest crows invariably get beaten.

According to Dr. Edward Smith, in his treatise on "Food," an egg weighing an ounce and three-quarters contains 120 grains of carbon and 17 1/2 grains of nitrogen; or 12.25 per cent of carbon and 2 per cent of nitrogen. The value of one pound of eggs as food for sustaining the active forces of the body is to the value of one pound of lean beef as 1,584 to 9,000. As a flesh producer, one pound of eggs is about equal to one pound of beef.

Roup may generally be traced to want of cleanliness, improper ventilation or undue exposure, and the poultryman who has provided against these causes is reasonably safe against the roup. But it sometimes happens that the cause is obscure and difficult to find. In such cases the wants of the fowls should be carefully looked after, and a little tonic given in the food, with a few drops of acetic in the water.

The itching of the scalp, falling of the hair, resulting in baldness, are often caused by dandruff, which may be cured by using Hall's Hair Renewer

OUR POPULAR PREMIUMS. ELGIN WATCHES

These standard Elgin goods are on the market the world over, at double the prices quoted below. You can see them in any jewelry store. They need little description.

OUR LADY FAVORITE.

This watch is a beauty. The works are made by the Elgin National Watch Company. You can see them in any jewelry store in the country, either in eleven or thirteen jeweled movement. They have quick trains, straight-line escape-ments, and are perfect time-keepers.

The case is a Favorite Gold-Filled 14 K., guaranteed by the manufacturer to wear twenty years.

Engraved as you see in cut, or in beautiful landscape figures. You can get no better unless you buy solid gold.

OUR ELGIN MONARCH.

This watch contains the celebrated G. M. Wheeler Elgin movement, fifteen jewels.

(four pair in settings), patent regulator, etc. The case is the Monarch pattern, gold filled, 14-K., hunting case with full box joints and handsomely engraved with deer, locomotive, or landscape figures. With each case is the manufacturer's guarantee that it will wear twenty-one years.

Retail value.....$35.00 to $40.00 With the Cynosure one year (13 jewel) 23.50 (11 jewel) 19.50

FAVORITE NO. 2.

This is a good, serviceable watch. The movement is the seven jewel Elgin. Always a reliable time piece. Perhaps more of this grade of ladies' watches are in use than any other. The case is gold filled, beautifully engraved in landscape.

Retail value.....$30.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 16.75

THE NEW LADY ELGIN.

A little beauty. The movement has just been completed and placed on the market by the Elgin Co. It is No. 0 size, 7 jewel, and a good time keeper. The Case is gold filled, the exact size of cut. This is the best cheap watch yet. With care it will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$25.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 15.50

Retail value.....$50.00 With the Cynosure one year..... 31.75

THE BOSS ELGIN.

This is a dandy. Either the size of cut or one size smaller. The fifteen jewel G. M. Wheeler movement, in a "Boss" gold filled case, engraved with a deer-head, horse-head, or landscape figures. This watch is good enough for anyone, and will wear a life time.

Retail value.....$35.00 With the Cynosure one year, hunting case..... 23.00 With the Cynosure one year, open face..... 19.75

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The United States Official Report

Of the Government Baking Powder tests recently made, under authority of Congress, by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., furnishes the highest authoritative information as to which powder is the best. The Official Report shows the ROYAL superior to all others in leavening power; a cream of tartar powder of highest quality.

The Canadian Tests:

"The strength of the Royal is shown to be 23 per cent. greater than any other.

"As a result of my investigations I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength.

"F. X. VALADE,

"Public Analyst, Ontario,
"Dominion of Canada."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Henry Sanford, of Bridgeport, Conn., was chosen president of the Adams Express Company Tuesday to succeed John Hoey. Frederick Lovejoy was chosen vice president.

J. W. Lyons & Co.'s rag shop at Brooklyn, N. Y., was damaged $50,000 by fire on Monday. Several women were badly injured by jumping to escape the flames.

The wife and mother of Joe Coe, who was hanged by a mob at Omaha, Neb., Friday night, claim that Coe was innocent of the crime with which he was charged.

R. Hansen, of Hansen, Wis., is alleged to have forged the name of George Hiles, of Milwaukee, to notes aggregating from $15,000 to $45,000. He has disappeared.

Commodore Nathaniel Duncan Ingraham, of the United States Navy, died Friday at Charleston, S. C.

Nearly one hundred delegates to the W. C. T. U. State Convention at Bradford, Pa., were taken violently ill, Friday, after eating a dinner tendered by the McKean county organization. Six of the victims are in a serious condition.

It has been established that C. G. Washburn Post, of Madison, Wis., is the oldest G. A. R. post in the world.

An annual conference for Japan was created Thursday at Indianapolis, Ind., by the German Evangelical Conference.

Negotiations have been completed by which the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians cede to the government 1,100,000 acres of land in Wind River Reservation, Wyoming, for $600,000. The country is well watered and the soil is rich.

Alderman H. M. Rice, of Lincoln, Neb., left home Sept. 17 last, and has not since been heard of.

Three children were burned to death in Mississippi near Helena, Ark., Friday.

Fire, Friday, destroyed the foundry of George S. Meeker, at Evansville, Ind., causing a loss of $40,000, on which there was $11,500 insurance. The stable of

W. M. Morgan, breeder of trotting horses, at Sabina, Ohio, burned, destroying thirteen horses. The total loss is $75,000, with no insurance.

Alexander Neveau, who killed his 16-year-old wife, was sentenced, Friday, at Bay City, Mich., to life imprisonment.

Cleaver & Letcher, hardware dealers of Gainesville, Texas, made an assignment Friday. Assets, $235,000; liabilities, $200,000.

Mrs. L. H. Field, of Jackson, Mich., was elected president of the Michigan Young Women's Christian Association, Friday.

William Rose, a murderer, was put to death at Redwood Falls, Minn., Friday morning.

Dr. John Hall has resigned from the directorate of Union Theological Seminary, New York.

President Harrison addressed the Ecumenical Conference at Washington.

Forged paper for amounts aggregating $25,000 is now known to have been uttered by M. R. Hanson, of Milwaukee, who signed George Hiles' name to promissory notes, and more forgeries are expected to turn up.

The stallion St. Blaise was sold at New York to Charles Reed, of Fairview Farm, Gallatin, Texas, for $100,000.

The great ship-building firm of Harrison, Loring & Co., proprietors of the City Point Works, South Boston, assigned to ex-Alderman Charles H. Allen, of Boston, and the Hon. George W. Quintard, of New York.

FOREIGN.

At an informal meeting of Parnellite members of Parliament at London, Monday, it was decided not to accept any overtures for a coalition with the McCartyites.

It is reported that the Russian government is negotiating for the purchase of large quantities of breadstuffs in the United States. Fourteen million persons are said to be in need of immediate help.

The gale which raged throughout Great Britain, Tuesday, continued Wednesday, doing much damage in seaports and to shipping. Pedestrians were injured by flying bricks and tiles, traffic of all kinds was suspended, and a theater at Wellingborough was blown down.

A gang of seventy-five robbers was arrested at Rome, Monday. The depredations committed by the gang so far as known amount to £25,000.

Charles H. Spurgeon is soon to go abroad for rest and a change of scene. Dr. Pierson will fill his pulpit in his absence.

Count Ludwig von Arco-Valley, the German Minister to the United States, died at Berlin, Thursday.

The gale which had raged for two days throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland continued Thursday with unabated fury. The coasts are strewn with wreckage.

James Dredge and Sir Henry Wood, of the Royal commission to represent Great Britain at the World's Fair, have prepared a report eulogizing the prospects and arrangements for the fair and urging active participation by the people of Great Britain.

Arthur E. Smithers, managing director of the English bank of the River Platte, was arrested at London, Friday, charged with stealing $35,000.

A despatch from Odessa says: Orders have been received here for the suspension of the operation of the anti-Jewish measures. Emigration from South Russia is diminishing.

Six peers, representing the coal, iron and tin interests of Great Britain, are going to the Chicago exhibition as a committee of the Lords and Commons.

Herr Wermuth, Imperial Commissioner for Germany to the World's Fair, has arrived in Berlin from Chicago. The reports which he has already sent will give great encouragement to the German exhibitors.

Dr. John, of the Berlin Ethnological Museum, who was in Chicago at the same time with Herr Wermuth, is preparing plans for the construction of an old Prussian town and a mediæval village on the fair grounds.

LISTEN Have you written to us yet? If you haven't, you better act once. You don't want to miss YOUR opportunity. Read our illustrated advertisement in the first issue of this month, of this paper. MONEY to be made rapidly, by any industrious person of either sex. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 per day. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Can devote all your time or spare time only to it. We instruct and show you how FREE. Easy to learn. We start you. Write and learn all FREE by return mail. Address at once, H. Hallett & Co., Box 1760, Portland, Maine

FREE TO BOYS & GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE.
Worth $45
If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle, (26 inch wheels), worth $45.00 they can obtain it free, without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1000 or more. We deliver Bicycle free anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

A Woman's Company

OWNED AND OPERATED BY WOMEN FOR WOMEN.
Our plan is to establish 100 factories in the United States, with money derived from sale of capital stock. Then we can easily employ 5,000 women, who will earn for us a net profit of $1,180,000 annually, assuming 75 cts. per day to be the net profit for each employe, which is a very low estimate. Our stock, now offered at $25 per share, on a basis of 8% per annum, will then be worth about $365; $25 invested now will, we confidently believe, eventually be worth $365.

WHY WILL IT INCREASE SO MUCH?

BECAUSE we have the only scientific process for canning and preserving food; no poison; no chemicals; never spoils; cooking unnecessary; flavors retained, and it solves the communion wine question by furnishing the pure juice of the grape unchanged at all seasons.
BECAUSE women only are employed in our factories; they are surrounded by Christian influences and paid wages which make them independent stock is sold only to women, who will, by their interest in the company, influence grocers to sell our goods, thus benefiting us.
BECAUSE the women running this company are excellent business women (demonstrated by their individual successes), and, with the aid of every Christian woman in the country, are certain to make this the greatest financial success ever accomplished by woman.

Checks for the annual dividends mailed in March to all Stockholders.

Stock sold if desired on monthly payments of $2.50 per share.
All money received after 4,000 shares are sold will be returned to parties sending it, as price is then advanced 20% above par.

HOW MANY SHARES WILL YOU TAKE? THEY ARE $25 EACH, PAR VALUE.

OFFICERS AND COMMISSIONERS.
Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL. Isabella Beecher Hooker, sister late Henry Ward Beecher, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
Mrs. Demorest, Pub. Demorest's Magazine.
Mrs. M. Louise Thomas, Pres. Sorosis Club, N. Y.
Mrs. A. M. Dolph, wife of Senator Dolph, Washington, D. C.

Sample sent on receipt of 25 cts. for express charges. No charge for the sample. This advertisement appears in forty papers this month, and less than 4,000 shares are now for sale. We will reserve any number of shares for you until you have time to investigate. Say how many you want held. Full information sent free. ADDRESS ORDERS AND MAKE CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO WOMAN'S CANNING AND PRESERVING CO., 161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
Grocers Supplied by THURBER, WHYLAND & CO., New York, and SPRAGUE, WARNER & CO., Chicago.

All because of
PROHIBITION
millions of money invested in manufacturing enterprises in millions more seeking locations there now.

HARVEY.

NOW

Is the time to secure lots in ACADEMY ADDITION—

BEFORE PRICES ADVANCE.

WE HAVE

the only Plat showing

THE WHOLE OF HARVEY

as originally proposed, and send it

FREE

to all readers of this paper.

UNSOLICITED

testimonials come from all quarters.

"It is not often that the publishers of any paper have the opportunity to heartily indorse with full confidence a real estate advertisement. We can do that very thing for the new temperance town of Harvey. We ask the attention of every reader of World-Wide Missions to the advertisement of Walter Thomas Mills & Co."—From World-Wide Missions, July, 1891.

LARGE PROFITS

are being made by those who purchase lots. ACADEMY ADDITION HAS THE STRONGEST PROHIBITORY CLAUSE EVER USED IN ANY DEED ANYWHERE, and is near the WORLD'S FAIR SITE.

FREE TRANSPORTATION from our office to all who desire to investigate. Special rates are being made on all Railroads to Chicago Exposition. Large numbers of people are taking advantage of these rates. You do the same, and come direct to our office.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,
161 La Salle St., - - Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take crochet work to do at home. City or country. Steady work. L. White & Co., 210 State St., Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.
WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 7.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,122.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	The Western Agent in Religion of Odd-fellow	Kansas; Bro. Fenton at ship..... 8	Evanston and in Ohio. 5
His Salary..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
A Useless Innovation.... 8	A Letter From Boston;
"Current Reform"..... 8	Romanists vs. Freemas-
Personal Mention..... 9	sons; A Letter From
CONTRIBUTIONS:	New York..... 5,6
The Farmers' Alliance.. 1	Wisconsin State Confer-
The Counsel of God..... 2	ence—Special Notice.... 9
A Voice From Over the	Anti-Secret State Conven-
Allotted Line..... 2	tions..... 1
Everyday Philosophy... 3	OBITUARY..... 7
SELECTED:	LODGE NOTES..... 7
"The Elevation of Man-	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
kind"..... 3	THE N. C. A..... 7
Should Freemasons Lay	THE HOME..... 10
Corner-stones on Public	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Buildings..... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Which is Right?..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
What is the Bureau of	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
Catholic Indian Mis-	MARKETS..... 13
sions?..... 3	DONATIONS..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
WASHINGTON LETTER.... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15

ANTI-SECRET STATE CONVENTIONS.

WISCONSIN.

The Wisconsin State Anti-Secrecy Convention is to be held at VERNON, WAUKESHA COUNTY, on the Wisconsin Central railroad, in the Reformed Presbyterian church, of which Rev. Isaiah Faris is pastor, beginning on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29TH, and continuing through the following day, to consider the relations of the secret lodge system to the Christian religion and civil liberty. The following is the program:

Thursday—7 P. M., devotional meeting, conducted by Rev. Isaiah Faris; 7:30 P. M., address; subject, "Relation of Secret Societies to the Christian Church," Rev. J. B. Galloway, pastor U. P. church, Vernon; 8:15, P. M., address; subject, "Odd-fellowship—How Should it be Regarded?" Rev. Samuel H. Swarts, D.D., pastor M. E. church, Chicago; 9 P. M., adjournment.

Friday—9:30 A. M., devotional meeting; 10 A. M., appointment of committees; reading of letters; testimony meeting; 11 A. M., report of committees, including plan for State work; miscellaneous business. 2:30 P. M., devotional meeting; 3 P. M., discussion on the report of the committee on resolutions; 3:30 P. M., five-minute speeches or discussions of the addresses of the previous evening; 7 P. M., prayer; address; subject, "The Relation of Secret Societies to Civil Government," Rev. Isaiah Faris, pastor R. P. church, Vernon; 8 P. M., congregational singing; address; subject, "Is the Grand Army of the Republic a Beneficent Institution," Rev. H. H. Hinman, agent of the National Christian Association; 9 P. M., adjournment.

ILLINOIS.

It has been determined that the Annual State Anti-Secrecy Convention will be held at GALESBURG, in the Brick Congregational church, beginning THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 12TH, and continuing through Friday, the 13th.

The program will be given in our next number.

Write whether you will go or not, but if you do not write, do not fail to attend.

Pres. Charles A. Blanchard has promised to attend and speak.

IOWA.

The Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will hold its Annual State Convention on TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, THE 10TH AND 11TH OF NOVEMBER, AT CRAWFORDSVILLE, WASHINGTON COUNTY.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND.

The New England Annual Convention will be held at BOSTON ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention are Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stalwart Reform preacher; Mrs. M. E. R. Gleason, prominent in W. C. T. U. work, and Mrs. E. Trask Hill.

Interference with the business of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, by the Typographical ("Typographia") Union No. 9, in this city, has caused the arrest of two members of that secret society, Theodore Gerbracht, president, and Henry Borck, who are charged with conspiracy. There is a principle involved in this case in which every employer is interested—the right of any labor association to conspire against the peace and rights of business men who propose to conduct their own affairs as they please. It is time that this question of lodge interference should be permanently settled.

Indictments have been returned by the Federal Grand Jury in South Dakota against the officers and directors of the notorious and nefarious Louisiana State Lottery, for the transmission in the United States mails of advertising matter relating to the lottery. If the anti-lottery law is valid, this will be a fine opportunity for testing it. The Louisiana Lottery is a State institution, evil in all respects, and so hedged in by strong local political influence and wealth that only the Federal Government can successfully combat it. Its sister vice, polygamy in Utah, had to undergo heroic treatment by the Federal Government before it succumbed, and it is sincerely hoped that similar influence and persistence may be brought to bear upon the Louisiana nuisance.

Mynheer Vuylsteke, a brewer at Brussels, Belgium, in explaining why so few Belgians emigrate, recently stated that the principal incentives to emigration, common among the European countries, were not met with in Belgium. Fear of serving in the war, and a tyrannical government, drives many foreigners to seek other countries, but these disadvantages do not bother the countrymen of Mr. Vuylsteke. He says Belgians, in leaving for America, are placed under oath by the secret societies not to send back word as to how they are making money and like the country, as encouraging reports would stimulate emigration. In other words, the lodges have the Belgians under their thumbs. In still other words, the emigrants are the slaves of an evil system, at home or abroad.

The Wabash Conference (Ind.) of the Free Methodist church, at its recent annual session, made this specific declaration:

"Believing that secret societies are not in harmony with pure religion, and that their oaths are of the nature of blasphemy and cannot be kept without disloyalty to God and our country, and that its institutions are opposed to civil and religious liberty; therefore,
"Resolved, That we will continue to lift up our voices and exert our influence against secrecy in all its forms."

The strange thing in almost all the synods, presbyteries, conferences and other annual gatherings of the orthodox churches in this country, is the absence of similar or, indeed, any testimony against the lodge iniquity which now abounds. Some few evangelical denominations, however, have washed their hands of this glaring religious and political evil, and have spoken against it in unmistakable terms. All Christian men should honor them, for surely they are in God's order.

It has been frequently remarked that Masons are not in favor with the Romish church—probably because the religion of Freemasonry is "pure theism," and not at all in harmony with the dogmas and discipline of the papal hierarchy. Now comes the public allegation that "Catholics will not be allowed to join the Independent Order of Good Templars." The Templars are not as tolerant as the Masons, for any "respectable" Catholic can join their fraternity. As for the religious element in either of the three, Christianity can have no fellowship with it.

The recent emence in the streets of Valparaiso, in which United States parties were involved, is deemed, at Washington, an insult to the honor and flag of the United States, calling for the most vigorous diplomatic treatment. It is understood that the President insists upon a proper redress for the supposed insult to our national honor, and that unless it is given within a reasonable time, Minister Egan will be recalled and all diplomatic relations with Chili suspended. Here is an opportunity for the Peace societies to exert their benign influence and avert a war.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

A REVIEW OF ITS POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS CHARACTER AND TENDENCIES.—AN UNREPUBLICAN INSTITUTION AND A FALSE RELIGION.

BY REV. WILLARD C. BOARDMAN, OF KANSAS.

[This article will be printed in three or more issues of this paper, reviewing carefully and exhaustively the political and religious errors of the Farmers' Alliance. The author is a preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist denomination, who, several months ago, was requested by one of the leading members of a local Alliance in Kansas to lend his influence in behalf of the order. Too wary to be misled into the support of a secret organization without further knowledge of its character and tendencies, he asked several pointed questions. The replies were guarded, and the platitudes are in this article fully controverted. It will repay a careful perusal.—EDITOR.]

[Continued from last week.]

I asked, in my former letter, and I still ask: "Is it a true or a false religion?" If true, I will at once abandon the Christian religion and accept it; for I know that I can't have both, and I never will try to do what I know I can't do. "No man can serve two masters: [why?] for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other." (Matt. 6: 24.) Good reasons; I'll not try.

Now, if it is a true religion, why not make it prominent? Why keep it in the dark? Why is it that many do not discover it, even some of its members, themselves?

The Christian religion is the "light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." (See Matt. 14: 15.) It does not light its candle and put it under a "bushel," no matter what its main aim, purpose or design may be. That is not the question.

The question is: "Is it a religion?" And if so, what kind? where will it end? and what will be the final result?

Let us first see what religion is: "Any system of faith and worship."—Webster. The Alliance requires the belief in the existence of "a Supreme Being," and it also has a system of worship; it is, therefore, a religion.

Moreover, when you come to investigate it closely, I think you will find that it is claimed to be a religion.

I received a letter from Pres. Polk. the other day, admitting the fact. He said: "Our order is not a religious body, further than it inculcates pure moral principles, and recognizes the existence of a Supreme Being." Just enough. It is a religion, then, that far. It is not always what a religion contains, but sometimes what it does not contain, that condemns it. Theophilanthropism was the name given to the religion of infidelity, which existed at the time of the French Revolution, and lasted for about three years (known in history as "the reign of terror"); and yet this religion was very simple in its belief and worship, but very dangerous. To describe it a little, I will give a few brief extracts from Dr. Goodwin's famous reply to Ingersoll's lecture on Thomas Paine, which is as follows: "They did what Mr. Ingersoll would be glad to have the Congress of the United States do. They abolished Christianity by vote. . . . They struck the Sabbath out of the calendar, and made the week consist of ten days instead of seven. They wrote over the gates of the cemeteries, 'Death is an eternal sleep.' . . . They stripped the churches of everything used in worship, and made bonfires in the streets, and then instituted the rites of the old pagan religions where their altars had stood. . . . Worse than this, all distinctions of right and wrong were confounded. The grossest debauchery was inaugurated, the wildest excesses prevailed and were gloried in. Contempt for religion and for decency became the test of attachment to the government. . . . To accurse one's father was the best proof of citizenship; to neglect it, was denounced as a crime, and was punishable with death. Wives were bayoneted for the faith of their husbands, and husbands for that of their wives. . . . Mr. Ingersoll admits that 17,000 perished in the city of Paris during this combined reign of infidelity and terror; but he forgets to add that throughout France not less than 3,000,000 lives were the costly price of establishing the new religion. (Mistakes of Ingersoll, pp. 97-99.) While they declared that there was no God, yet they established the rites of the old pagan religions, which acknowledged many gods; and they named their religion, Theophilanthropism."

Now, take the rites of the old pagan religions, Theophilanthropism, and the religion of the Alliance, and place them all under a powerful microscope, and you will see that they are closely akin to each other. What does the word "Theophilanthropism" signify? "Love to both God and man."—Webster. What is the religion of the Alliance, except to "inculcate pure moral principles, and recognize the existence of a Supreme Being," thus signifying love to God and love to man, but no Christ in either case.

I don't pretend to say that the religion of secrecy (all societies) is as bad as Theophilanthropism was; but once let it take the place of Christianity,—and rapid strides are now being made in this very direction; many are leaving the true church of God rather than to give up their dear and sacred (?) false religion when they see that they cannot "serve two masters" (Matt. 6: 24),—and see what then would be the result in five, ten, fifteen or twenty years from that time. And do not be deceived by the phrase, "To inculcate pure moral principles." Ingersoll is a great advocate of morality, yet his aim is dangerous.

Now, from the above description, from Webster's definition, and from Pres. Polk's statement, we must conclude that your order, the Alliance, is a religion.

The next question is: "What kind of a religion is it?" It can't be true; then it must be false; for there are only two kinds—the true and the false. And I am sorry to say that it is one branch of infidelity.

What is infidelity? What does Webster say it is? How do our best writers and historians treat it except to show plainly that it is unfaithfulness to Christ? The word "infidel" comes from two Latin words: "in," meaning un, or not, and "fidelis," meaning faithful. Hence unfaithful to Christ, or disbelieving in Christ.

Now, your constitution is very unfaithful to Christ by setting him aside and placing "a Supreme Being" at the head, thereby denying or rejecting him. We could extend our argument to almost any extent, on this line, but space and time forbid. Enough has been said to show that it is at least one branch of infidelity.

I will now briefly notice the rest of my questions and your answers:

Third question—"Is Christ at its head?"

Answer—"I think that he is at the head of all good." So do I.

Let us turn to history and see if this is true. The Jews were once the true people of God; and while they were true, God was at their head and led them; but after a while they became corrupt, rejected Christ, were soon overthrown by the Romans, and to-day are hissed at throughout the land.

Pagan Rome tried to crush out Christianity, but where is Rome to-day?

When the Catholic church became so corrupt that Christ could not have his way, she plunged into the most atrocious crimes, some of which, such as the massacre of St. Bartholomew, the world will never forget.

Again, when the infidels tried to remedy this and "remove the cause of so much sin," by making laws (as they claimed) that were just and equal, and yet established Theophilanthropism instead of Christianity, they plunged into a night full as dark, a brief description of which has already been given.

On the other hand, wherever Christ has stood at the head, and has been duly honored, "good" has been the result. With the above answer, "I think that he is at the head of all good," I most heartily agree. But we have undeniable evidence that Christ is not at the head of the Alliance; therefore the conclusion is irresistible that it is not "good."

The method of secrecy and of rejecting Christ is wrong.

Fourth question—"Are many of the different religions or churches upheld by the order?"

Answer—"Yes, they are all upheld, and all that is good. It is the wrong and the evil that they are denouncing."

I will agree with you that they are all upheld; but would you call the religion of the Jews, and the religion of infidelity, "good?" I will admit that some of your members think that infidels cannot join the Alliance; but this is a mistake, for we have positive proof that they can. The very fact that the religion of the order is infidelity instead of Christianity, is enough to prove that infidels can join.

The phrase in your constitution, "believe in the existence of a Supreme Being" (Art. 4, Sec. 1), will admit of all but atheists.

To find out positively whether the above view of the phrase was correct or not, I wrote to Pres. Polk, asking if a company of men who believed in the existence of a Supreme Being, but not in Jesus Christ, could form a lodge without accepting the ritual; and he wrote back, saying: "The constitution of our order simply requires that an applicant for membership shall 'believe in the existence of a Supreme Being.' The form of prayer in the ritual is simply suggestive, and its use is not mandatory." This proves clearly that all but atheists can join.

What is the difference between an infidel and an atheist? "Atheist—One who disbelieves or denies the existence of a God, or Supreme intelligent Being."—Webster. "Infidel—One who disbelieves in Christ, or the divine origin and authority of Christianity."—Webster. Many of the worst skeptics known in history, such as Voltaire, Paine, and others, believed in a God, but not in Christ.

From the above, we can clearly see that atheists cannot join, but infidels, or unbelievers, can.

Fifth question—"Are the members all banded, or joined together, and do they work in unison?"

Answer—"They are all banded together, and are expected to work in unison, and they seem to be doing it nicely."

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."—Bible. Why?

We have now asked each other questions, and here St. Paul asks us both five very important questions; and as they are inspired, they will meet us at the Judgment, for they are bearing directly on this subject, as the religion of secrecy, including the Alliance, embraces unrighteousness and infidelity, and can embrace those who worship idols or Belial; and is one great system of darkness.

These are St. Paul's questions:

1. "For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?"
2. "And what communion hath light with darkness?"

3. "And what concord hath Christ with Belial?"

4. "Or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?"

5. "And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" (2 Cor. 6: 14-16; read also, vs. 17 and 18.)

How shall we answer these inspired questions? But, some may say, why did not the Bible say something about it through prophecy? That is the very next point we wish to consider.

"I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth." (Isa. 45: 19.) "I have not spoken in secret from the beginning." (Isa. 48: 16.) "Then, if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there, believe it not; for there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers, believe it not." (Matt. 24: 23-26.)

[Concluded next week.]

THE COUNSEL OF GOD.

BY CYRUS SMITH.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly," Psa. 1: 1. It is clear that if we do not "walk in the counsel of the ungodly," that we will walk in all the "counsel of God" as far as we know right from wrong. Then God holds us as a little child, not accountable for much we do not know. But God will hold us accountable for being ignorant if we are not diligent students in the school of Christ. We are to have "the mind of Christ," "the light of the world." The sin of ignorance will damn the soul if we are negligent in reflecting the light of the truth of Christ (even when it is not willful). Christians are "the light of the world, the salt of the earth," only as they reflect the light and salvation of Christ; only as they do not "walk in the counsel of the ungodly." Christians love the truth—the light of Christ—on every subject. "Men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil;" because they walked "in the counsel of the ungodly." To walk right is to "walk in the light as he is in the light." Then we receive or have "the love of the truth" and grace every day to stand by it. We will then search diligently for more of the light of truth, even on such an unpopular subject as the secrecy question is with many. To many new beginners it is a heavy cross. But it is duty, and cannot be separated from the cross of Christ.

Whatever relation the law of God has to secretism will be found by the real student in the school of Christ. "In his law doth he meditate day and night," so interested is he in the truth. The contrary is to walk "in the counsel of the ungodly." Prove all things," i. e., learn the truth in regard to all things. Investigate them. The fact that a society is secret shows that it shuns investigation; shows that it is founded upon the principles according to those who walk in "the counsel of the ungodly," "and not after Christ." A part of the righteous counsel of God on the secrecy question is: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."

De Kalb, Iowa.

A VOICE FROM OVER THE ALLOTTED LINE.

BY R. W. LYMAN.

I am eighty-two years old and past, and, as a matter of course, must soon step off the earthly stage of activity; but I intend to blow the trumpet of warning while I remain here.

With Isaiah, I am ready to say, and do say, that, "For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth." Surely facts show that the present condition of the Church of God is that of being overshadowed by the powers of darkness. Some of her ministers, "in the chambers of (their) imagery," bow down at heathenish Masonic altars, and offer blasphemous and Christless formulated prayers to a strange god of their own imagining. Ministers of the Gospel and members of professedly Christian denominations vote, directly or indirectly, (at all events effectually) to sustain and defend the saloon in the doing of its hellish work; they also, by their practice, sustain and perpetuate schisms in the family of Christ; yet many that are truly Christ's disciples mingle with and fellowship—as though they were Christian brethren—these evil doers. In this way, almost the entire true Church of Christ well-nigh loses its identity and becomes carnal. It becomes editors of Christian periodicals, and all true Christians, to take to heart a consideration of the situation, and with loyalty of heart, inquire, individually, at headquarters, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?—and collectively, what shall we do? For an answer let us turn to our manual—our Book of instructions. We find there directions to "cease to do evil, learn to do well."

As to our intercourse with those who transgress, it is clearly the duty of the loyal to yield obedience to the Master's command—"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord; touch not the unclean thing." And then, being separated, there rests upon the obedient the farther duty to "cry aloud," with trumpet clearness, warning the guilty, by obedience to flee from God's avenging wrath. (Judges 5: 23.)

My brethren, let us not incur the curse pronounced against Meroz, by failing to come up "to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Arcade, N. Y.

EVERYDAY PHILOSOPHY.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

Never forget:

That the fairest flowers fade the soonest.

That knowledge leaves no room for chances.

That pride is never so offensive as when in chains.

That when men are lonely they stoop to any companionship.

That the darkest cloud often contains the most fruitful showers.

That a sealskin sacque does not always keep the heart warm.

That the pure worship of a pure heart does not always keep the feet in the right path, unless the heart is inspired and made pure by the spirit of prayer.

That there may be loyalty without love, but never love without loyalty.

That a golden key will often find the way to open many a secret drawer.

That death is a sleepless messenger, and life a wakeful handmaid of creation.

That the finest-feeling, velvety paws of the kitten often cover the sharpest claws.

That "doing as well as you know how," is all right, if you always know how to do well.

That it is often more difficult to obliterate drops of spilled ink than drops of spilled blood.

That those who are honest, and earnest in their honesty, have no need to proclaim the fact.

That it may be well to test the condition of the cat's claws before stroking its fur the wrong way.

Finally, that the truest help we can render to an afflicted man is not to take his burden from him, but to call out his best strength that he may be able to bear the burden.

Steamburg, N. Y.

"THE ELEVATION OF MANKIND."

Every secret society claims to be working to secure this end. Over and over again in the lodge-room have we heard it asserted that the great purpose of the lodge was to elevate human character. Does it do this? Most emphatically, "No." Is there anything elevating in late suppers, and in dirty stories? In some organizations the supper is not held until after the lodge meeting has closed, but in open lodge the writer has again and again heard stories which ought never to have fallen from human lips. Again we ask, What is there elevating in all this? Is there anything elevating in seeing a half drunken man act his "part" in working one of the degrees, in which degree some part of the Word of God is dramatized? I have seen men so intoxicated that they could scarce get through their part acting as one of the Bible characters—Moses, David, Saul, or one of the characters in one of the parables spoken by our Lord. Such impious handling of the Word of God cannot be elevating to human character. True elevation comes through a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, but he is completely ignored by all secret societies. Where does the "elevation" boasted of come in? We fail to see. Does the lodge make one more of a man? Some of those from whom we have suffered most have called us brother. Does it make a man treat his wife and children better? Is he treating them better when he takes the money they need for food and clothing and turns it into the lodge? Is he becoming more elevated when he refuses to pay his honest debts that he may have money to go to banquets and attend excursions? And yet these things are being done over and over again, and although the lodge knows it, it is silent. The fact is, the pretension that the lodge elevates human character, is all a humbug. It cannot elevate, because it is fundamentally wrong. To every one we say, Do not be deceived by this false argument—which is truly the argument of the devil.—Rev. J. F. Packard, in the Independent Christian.

SHOULD FREEMASONS LAY CORNER-STONES OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS?

It is a well known fact that our government, if acting according to the spirit and letter of the Constitution of the United States, cannot and will not give undue preference or special prominence to any religious or semi-religious association. On this account, citizens of our Republic may justly expect that no representatives of any religious or semi-religious association should "officiate" at the laying of corner-stones of our public buildings. Still this public honor is quite frequently—we are almost tempted to say usually—delegated to the semi-religious or rather pagan institution of Freemasonry. It is obvious that this is by no means part of an impartial administration of public affairs on the part of our government. Nevertheless, thousands and thousands in our "Land of the Free" being slaves to lodgery, the daily papers fettered by the influence of secretism will keep silence on this subject. Only once in a great while they will furnish some interesting reading on this matter. Thus the Minneapolis Times, of July 22nd, contains an interesting communication on this subject, called out by the fact that only a few days before the Freemasons had officiated at the corner-stone laying of the new court-house at Minneapolis. The writer of that communication says:

"Freemasons are a Protestant religious denomination that makes a show of mason work and uses the tools of the mason's trade as symbols, but that is all sham—it is their peculiar sham. They are not architects, brick-layers, stone-masons, stone-cutters, or sculptors. They are simply cranks with an eye to business and a hearty hatred of the Catholic church. One of the points on which this denomination of Freemasons show their crankiness, is that because they have a lot of twiddle-twaddle about square and plumb and trowel; they have an inherent right to lay corner-stones of public buildings for the people of the United States in general, and of every State and town in particular. Now the Constitution of the United States has the singular defect that it does not say a word about this peculiar right of the Masonic sect. It nowhere makes Masonry the established religion of the United States, or any State; in fact, the Constitution of the United States says something or other which deprives Congress of power to make the religion of the Masonic sect or any other sect the established religion."

There is a great deal of truth embodied in this short communication. Still we cannot but most emphatically object to Freemasonry being characterized as a "Protestant religious denomination." This is palpably untrue. Freemasonry denies Christ. It denies Christ in its secret work, in its religious ceremonies, in the religious worship in its "Temples." It cannot, therefore, be characterized as a religious denomination of Christians, Protestant or Roman Catholic. It is merely a more recent outgrowth of old-fashioned paganism of obscure and barbarous ages long gone by. The earliest traces of its existence reach back to the dark mediæval age of no-newspaper, no-rapid transit, no-telegraph, no-mail service. Taking this into consideration, it is perfectly natural that they should be intent upon hiding their work of darkness from the public gaze of our age.

As for the laying of corner-stones of public buildings, if there should be any ceremony at all on such occasions, the honor of "officiating" does undoubtedly belong to the President of the United States, and the governors of the individual States, or to some other high official they may delegate.—Rev. C. Dreyer, in the Lutheran Witness.

WHICH IS RIGHT?

The opposer of secret societies is often met with the statement that, as good men are divided in opinion regarding these societies, it is better to avoid a discussion which is likely to lead to alienation.

Now if this was merely a matter of expediency, the above position would be right: but if membership in these societies violates both the letter and the spirit of Scripture;—if secret societies are non-Christian in origin, un-Christian in their character, and anti-Christian in their tendencies, then it follows as a self-evident truth that Christians should understand and oppose them.

Now if you will read the last paragraph again, commencing at "but," and omitting the "ifs," you will find a statement of facts which can be proven, and which I defy any secretist to disprove.

One says, "Do not condemn secret societies because I do, but examine the evidence and know for yourself that secretism is wrong." The other says, "Look at me! Do you think I would belong to an order such as you describe?" He asks you to take his unsupported word, to forget that he is under obligation not tell you what he knows, and that he may utterly fail to comprehend the principles of the system which he defends. Many who have left these orders for conscience sake, testify that for a long time they did not understand their true character.

Strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless a fact that the leading and accredited writers in Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship insist that these institutions embody the philosophy and substance of the ancient heathen mysteries.

Multitudes of the ordinary members of these orders assert that they furnish all the religion needed, and that they are as good or better than the church of Christ.

Many men have left these orders because they found them contrary to Christianity.

An examination of their rituals and religious services shows conclusively that they are systems of religion, and rivals of Christianity.

The evidence of these statements is conclusive and open to all who desire to know the truth.

Now can a Christian consistently sustain or approve institutions which supply men with just what the natural heart craves—a religion without Christ, repentance or atonement?

Can any temporal benefits conferred by them make such systems right?

But one answer is possible.—L. E. Lincoln, in the National Guard for October.

WHAT IS THE BUREAU OF CATHOLIC INDIAN MISSIONS?

This is a powerful organization for promoting Catholicism among Indians, and to this end it seeks to secure the largest possible number of Catholics in the Government Indian service. As a result of these efforts, many Indian agents, securing the control of their clerks and other employes, are Catholics. It has made a special point of securing as many Government schools as practicable, several of which are entirely officered by Catholics, and are as absolutely parochial schools for the distinct propagation of Catholicism, as if they were supported by church mission funds instead of public funds. The Roman catechism is the basis of all the instruction, the mass is celebrated in some of them, and special pains are taken to drill the pupils in all the rites and ceremonies of the Catholic church. This Bureau has accomplished its greatest work perhaps in procuring immense sums of public money for the support of its mission schools. The growth of these appropriations is seen in the following exhibit. The amounts secured have been as follows: 1886, $118,343; 1887, $194,635; 1888, $221,169; 1889, $347,672; 1890, $356,957; 1891, $363,349.

The Bureau is in close contact with the cardinal and all the hierarchy, and can summon to Washington at short notice very powerful support—archbishops, bishops, priests, and influential laymen to wait upon the President or to lobby with Senators and members of Congress in order to carry through any scheme it has on hand, such as securing new legislation, influencing appointments, or defeating measures which they regard as in any way detrimental to the interests of Catholicism.—Dr. James M. King, quoted by Congressman McCord, of Wisconsin, in the House of Representatives last winter.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The Salvation Army—Nationalism.—The Andover House Association.—An autumn thought.—Emily Dickinson.

Anyone who has reached adult years can remember when the Salvation Army was looked upon with the very scantest favor, and good orthodox Christians, when praising the results of their work, were careful to put in enough qualifying "ifs" and "buts" to clear themselves from the slightest suspicion of indorsing their peculiar methods. Now all this has entirely changed. They find themselves cordially and heartily approved by such men as Phillips Brooks and Drs. Hale and Moxon; Mrs. Ballington Booth talks in a Fifth Avenue parlor to the most aristocratic and fashionable women in New York society; and even the cheap story-papers are beginning to make capital out of the popular interest in this once-despised organization. Only the other day I picked up one whose leading serial had a pretty Salvation Army lass for its heroine. Like the early Methodists, they must have their day, first of vilification, and then of an almost equally false and misrepresenting notoriety. A generation hence they will begin to take their true place in history. But, meanwhile, when that time comes what kind of a figure will Boston cut? Boston, with its wonderful "city ordinance" that is such an effective engine of oppression in the hands of Romanists and rumsellers? She has the unenviable reputation of being now the only city in the Union which forbids Salvation Army parades, and it is to be hoped their reasonable and just petition for a right which is freely allowed secular organizations will receive attention. They can of course ask for a "permit," with the satisfaction of knowing that the authorities whom they humbly petition having been given by this same "city ordinance," a stretch of arbitrary power hardly known outside of Turkey, can refuse or ignore it as they choose. And yet in a thousand ways these men and women are checking the tide of vice and crime, and making the work of repressing it easier, as Dr. Plumb very forcibly showed in his address on their behalf before the Board of Police. The Salvation Army might well labor with the city government which desecrates the Sabbath by keeping gangs of men at work on the streets all through the sacred hours of that holy day, disturbing the quiet of church services, and grieving to the heart thousands of Boston's best citizens.

The labor organizations, shut out from the public parks, have been long clamoring for a forum where they can hold their outdoor meetings. Oakland Garden has been promised them by the Mayor for this purpose. This, if purchased, will cost the city a handsome sum; and with land enough on the Common and other public grounds to be amply sufficient for all such needs, it looks like one of those strokes of "economy" for which Mayor Matthews' administration has become famous. To allow labor meetings on the Common would create a precedent for allowing religious meetings there, too; a privilege the City Council is too much dominated by Rum and Romanism to permit. Hence its solution of the difficulty by taking $130,000, more or less, out of the pockets of the taxpayers, without any really adequate reason.

The People's Party held a rally at the Cradle of Liberty last week, addressed, of course, by Bellamy, whose clever work of fiction brought him so suddenly into notice. "Looking Backward" reduces every individual's life, by a kind of political arithmetic, to the same terms, Whole numbers; fractions, proper and improper—it does not matter which—they must be all brought down to a common form of expression. One cannot help wondering, when reading such socialistic dreams of the future, if it is not a doubtful gain to crush out all monopolies, if with them all our personality must be crushed out, too. Of one thing I am certain; such a state of society will produce numberless men and women of mediocre cleverness, many almost geniuses. The average of human attainment will be much higher than now, but the giants will be nowhere. "The plain is mistress of the age," says Michelet, "and makes war against the mountain;" but the Michelet of such an era can say that the battle is over, the commonplace has prevailed. The great trouble with the Nationalists is that their basis is too purely secular. It, therefore, becomes of interest to note the starting of another organization which is non-political, and in the spirit, if not exactly on the plan, of those started in England by Maurice, Kingsley, and other advocates of "social Christianity." It is called the Andover House Association; and, as the name implies, is an Andover movement, starting with the alumni of the seminary, but taking in any others who wish to join in its work. It proposes to investigate abuses, bringing them to the attention of the proper authorities; organize clubs for social improvement; teach classes in elementary and advanced subjects; and "do direct religious work as occasion may offer, when it may be carried on without interfering with the churches." This last will be found a delicate matter, for the churches that are the most careless and neglectful of the spiritual needs of the communities in which they are placed are exactly the ones that are most apt to consider such work as "interference." Just in proportion as a church is thoroughly alive and filled with evangelical zeal, will it co-operate with all good agencies; and, on the other hand, a cold, formal, worldly church will be jealous of any work or workers outside of its own particular guild. There is no sadder sight on earth than such a spectacle—but every one engaged in evangelical or reform work has had at times occasion to observe it—of a church trying to close the doors of Christian effort, perhaps against some in her own communion, who are honestly endeavoring to do good, but without the red tape of boards and their ecclesiastical paraphernalia.

Think of Massachusetts with an army of 9,000 child-laborers in her mills and factories when able-bodied men lack employment! Of $17,000,000 taxes dodged by her wealthy citizens annually, when the poor man has to pay every iota of his disproportionate share. But the taxes that rum and tobacco levy,—they can never be dodged. More's the pity. When shall we have a grand reform party, based on Christian principles, that shall gather in one all these separate issues; whose ticket every honest man (and woman too, for I am firmly persuaded these Utopian dreams of Mr. Bellamy and others will never be realized until she has the ballot) can vote fearlessly?

Why cannot human beings fade out of life as beautifully as the leaves? Some of them do, and there is no reason why this should not be the rule instead of the exception. The autumn coloring is unusually brilliant this season, owing to the singularly mild, sunny weather which has made the change a very slow and gradual one. So, perhaps, to fade beautifully, we should keep the frosts of age off as long as we can,—off our spirits, I mean. Let them whiten our heads, but not chill our hearts. Let us keep an even balance between our attachment to this dear old home planet, and a joyous looking forward to the better home waiting us just a step beyond.

"When I was a little girl," writes Emily Dickinson, in those wonderful letters of hers, "I had a friend who taught me immortality, but, venturing too near himself, he never returned." I used to think Sylvester Judd's "Margaret" was a mere creature of the imagination, but how wonderfully like she is to the strange, shy, elusive being revealed in these letters. There is the same abruptness, the same queer mingling of the child and the pedant, the same quaint wisdom alternating with an equally quaint ignorance of what everybody is supposed to know. Such a character, either in fiction or in reality, could scarcely be evolved outside New England. I am glad that one of her biographers has taken the pains to inform the public that there was "no love disappointment" at the bottom of her recluse existence, for this is the conclusion to which society in such cases is always so prone to jump. It is well to remember that when Nature creates a woman all spirit, like Emily Dickinson, she knows that in the very nature of things there can be no mate for her, and wisely makes her sufficient for herself.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21, 1891.

"Noble by birth according to the worldly tenet that grants the right of one person to be born superior to another, but made nobler by her earnest and enthusiastic work in the great cause of moral reform," is the language used by a Washington woman in speaking of Lady Henry Somerset, the distinguished president of the British Woman's Temperance Association and vice-president of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who made one of the strongest temperance speeches ever listened to here, at a memorable meeting held last night under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., in the same church in which the Ecumenical Conference came to a close yesterday afternoon. The meeting was presided over by Bishop Hurst, and the attendance was only limited by the seating and standing capacity of the church. Among the other distinguished speakers were Bishop Carman, of Canada, and Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, of England, who is widely known from her connection with reform and religious work in London. Lady Somerset, who is young, wealthy and handsome, has overturned all worldly theories on the subject by willingly giving up her place in the frivolous social entertainments of the British nobility for the sake of aiding in the philanthropic work which has done so much to lighten the darker side of life in the world's metropolis of late years, and which she hopes will do still more in the future. In the eyes of many she has made a great sacrifice, but she does not so regard her action. Lady Somerset is identified with many organizations, but she is best known in this country through her connection with the White Cross Purity Army, and the Blue Ribbon temperance movement. She comes to the United States at this time for the purpose of attending the annual conference of the World's W. C. T. U., which will be held in Boston Nov. 10 to 18. She has been overwhelmed with invitations to visit and speak in different sections of the country, and the invitations from Philadelphia and Chicago have been accepted.

Local interest in the Ecumenical Conference was kept up to the last, notwithstanding the absence this week of quite a number of prominent delegates, who had either started for home or gone to visit elsewhere. There are no actual accomplishments to show as the result of the coming together of the representatives of a church which has, according to the report of the conference committee on Methodist statistics, 6,494,399 members and 25,378,104 adherents, but it must be a very careless observer of the proceedings of the conference who has failed to see that much good seed has been sown, which will in due time bear fruit. Some things have been said that it would have been better to have left unsaid, but their proportion is too small to interfere with the effect of many of the good and timely things said. Let those disposed to harshly criticize words used by any of the delegates, try to recall any gathering of five hundred men, where every man was at liberty to say what he pleased as he could get the recognition of the presiding officer, in which fewer mistakes were made. In fact, it is remarkable, when one takes into consideration the many and diverse kinds of men composing this conference, that more mistakes were not made. The conference adopted a resolution for the holding of an ecumenical week of prayer, beginning Nov. 15. In its pastoral address it gives much good advice regarding co-operation among Methodists; argues that the foreign missions are among the foremost objects of the church, and says of the liquor and opium traffic: "Against the trade in spirits and the trade in opium, which are doing so much to defeat and discredit our missions in Africa and China, we shall never cease to raise our voice." Many think that this last paragraph should have been made both broader and stronger, and that the manufacture of and traffic in intoxicating liquors should have been denounced, wherever it might exist.

Administration circles are much pleased by two official announcements made this week; one that Italy had repealed the decree prohibiting the importation of American pork, and the other that the temporary government of Chili had agreed to allow the sympathizers of the late Balmaceda government, who had been given asylum by the American minister, a safe conduct out of the country.

Sunday afternoon a large meeting under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was presided over by Mrs. Dr. Riley. Among the most notable speakers were Miss Gibson, of France, who gave a good account of the growth of the work in that country, and Mrs. Amanda Smith, a colored woman born in New York State, who gave the meeting a most interesting account of some of her experiences during the twelve years in which she had been engaged in missionary work in India.

Chaplain Isaacs, of the navy, presided over a temperance meeting in the interest of temperance work among the enlisted men of the army and navy Sunday afternoon; and Rev. R. W. Allen, chaplain in the British army, delivered an interesting address, telling of the good such work had accomplished in the British army and navy.

At the same time the W. C. T. U. held an immense temperance mass meeting, which was addressed by prominent speakers, men and women, from at home and abroad. Sunday was a big day for the temperance cause. *

REFORM NEWS.

THE WESTERN AGENT IN KANSAS.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—From Shenandoah (Iowa) I went to Atlantic, where I met with some success in canvassing for the Cynosure.

I then went to Malvern, and was conveyed by Mr. Aaron Lewis to Glenwood, the county seat of Mills Co., where I spoke twice in Orchestra Hall.

I then went to Winchester, Kansas, and called upon Rev. Dr. Coulter, pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian church of Winchester, and an officer of the Kansas Christian Association. I did some canvassing for the Cynosure and the N. C. A., and then went to McLuth and did some canvassing there, speaking twice in the Friends' church. I then returned to Winchester and continued my canvass for donations to the N. C. A., and subscriptions to the Cynosure. I met with a generous response from Dr. Coulter's people. The Covenanters, as a class, "materialize well." They are not mere sentimentalists, but are ready to sacrifice to maintain their principles. I am filled with admiration for their sturdy conscientiousness.

On Tuesday night, October 13, a Reform meeting was held in Dr. Coulter's church, which was addressed by Dr. C. D. Trumbull, of Morning Sun, Iowa, and the agent of the Western Department of the N. C. A.

The next morning, Doctors Coulter and Trumbull, and myself, went to Denison to attend the convention of the Kansas Christian Association.

While there I was entertained by the president of the Association, Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, and by Mr. Torrence, the treasurer.

Addresses were given on the first evening of the convention by President Milligan, followed by Dr. Coulter, myself and Rev. Mr. Wiley, the moderator of the last Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church.

Thursday forenoon was devoted to business, and to a general "love-feast" meeting, in which the brethren spoke of their experiences with secret societies. Many interesting incidents were related by the speakers. A Methodist minister was present, who desired to express his dissent from the utterances of the convention, and the afternoon was set apart to hear him. I was appointed by the president of the Association to reply to his address.

The debate was continued through the afternoon session, and certainly on the part of one Methodist brother was conducted with a degree of ingenuity and skill that was admirable. The lodge could not have desired an abler apologist.

Humbly depending upon Christ for help, your agent did what he could to maintain and defend the truth.

I leave it for others to say what measure of success the Lord gave me.

The convention was addressed the second evening by Dr. C. D. Trumbull, Mr. Eolow, of Birmingham, Dr. Morton, of the Seventh-day Baptist church, and Dr. Jonathan Blanchard, the eminent reformer and ex-college president, who, until he was constrained by the weight of years to resign, so ably edited the Christian Cynosure. He spoke with vigor, and his address called forth the heartiest applause.

Your agent was heartily welcomed, and his work commended by a vote of the convention, as were also the Christian Cynosure and the Birmingham Free Press.

The local attendance at the convention was good, and the addresses were excellent.

The venerable Samuel Blanchard (brother of ex-President Blanchard), who is nearing his 90th year, was present and gave us interesting reminiscences of the stormy times that followed the abduction and murder of Captain Wm. Morgan.

Your agent will remain and work a little longer in this beautiful part of the great West before returning homeward.

Hoping that you will not neglect to pray for the success of the work, I am yours for Christ and the coming of his kingdom,

C. F. HAWLEY.

BRO. FENTON AT EVANSTON AND IN OHIO.

After the lecture at the Swedish M. E. church, I departed from Chicago on the 10 o'clock train for Evanston, a seat of learning of 2,000 students, more or less, where, it is said by some of its citizens, "Satan's seat is"—having reference to secretism. Handbills were distributed announcing a lecture for Saturday evening, at the Free Methodist church, on the religion of Freemasonry as antagonistic to Christianity—proclaiming salvation without Jesus the Christ.

Upon this bare announcement, before anything else had been said, the Evanston Press of Saturday, Oct. 17, took occasion, in anticipation of what was to come, to denounce the lecturer as a "fanatic," in the category of "detractors," "backbiters," and "slanderers," led by "ignorance and bigotry," "to denounce an institution of which he can have no possible knowledge;" and charging the lecturer with the probability of proving that "the scores and thousands of ministers who are brethren of this order and know it to be heartily in accord with all the principles of Christ's teachings, and a most efficient handmaid and coadjutor of the Christian church, are hypocrites and false teachers."

On Monday morning, Oct. 19, I called on the editor at his office. He is a Freemason, proud of his fellowship with those of his brother Masons that are pastors in Evanston, and boasts of having been one, I think, thirty years; and yet he knows nothing of Masonic rituals, not even Mackey's Masonic Ritualist. When "Ecce Orienti," a book printed by the fraternity for the use of Masons to work their degrees by in the lodge, was placed in his hands, it was a real surprise to him; and when I read passages to him, especially that part of the obligation in the first degree in which the candidate is sworn not to write or print the secrets recorded in this very book under "no less a penalty than that of having his throat cut and his tongue torn out," he repudiated it, and declared that it was not Masonry. Intelligent Masons will be amazed at his ignorance of Masonry. When I drew my hand across my throat, he said, in the presence of us all, that he understood the allusion. But doubtless he was endeavoring to manage the conversation "prudently, for the good of the worshipful fraternity," according to his lodge instructions.

Even Rev. Dr. Ridgeway, D. D., LL. D., president of the Biblical Institute, would not for one moment allow the supposition that Masonry might be a cunningly devised system of lies and devil worship, scandalizing the Bible. Of course he declined a personal invitation to attend the lecture; but one of the theological professors who did attend thanked the lecturer and said that he learned from it about Masonry what he had failed to learn from the Encyclopedias, and wished that the lecture could be repeated in the largest church in Evanston. Of course the Masonic information given in these Encyclopedias is manipulated for the good of the worshipful fraternity.

Calling on a Baptist pastor to ask him for his opinion of Masonry, he said that he had read all about Masonry, specifying Morgan's book; but that one of his deacons is a Freemason, and he has assured him that there is nothing in Masonry that any Christian can take any exception to; and that he knows many whom he reveres as better men than himself that are Freemasons. And it is just in this way that the whole denomination is spellbound by the great Masonic delusion.

Our thanks are due to Rev. W. P. Ferries, pastor, for the use of the church; to Bro. De Jong, a student of the college, for his assistance in advertising the meeting among the students and citizens; also, to Bro. Freeman for his generosity and sympathy in the cause of truth.

In regard to the editorial referred to in the Evanston Press, I should add that if I did not say that Freemasonry is a cunningly devised system of lying and devil worship, I should be untrue to simple absolute truth and false to Christ, who died to redeem me. Besides, I remember the Scripture: "He that saith unto the wicked, thou art righteous, him shall the people curse; nations shall abhor him." (Prov. 24: 4) Therefore, I dare not call a Freemason a Christian.

There was a large representation of students in attendance at the lecture, some of whom ex-

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

A LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., October 17, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On last Wednesday we witnessed the consecration of Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D., as bishop of Massachusetts, in Trinity church, of which he has been pastor for twenty-two years. The brother of Dr. Brooks, whose parish is in Springfield, Mass., kindly gave me a ticket of admission, because I "belonged to the Scotch Covenanters." The church will seat 1,620.

The exercises began at 11 A. M., and closed at 2 P. M. Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, presided. Bishop Potter, of New York, preached the sermon. It was a masterly production. It was eloquent, scholarly, clear and profound. The thoughts were, God selects his instruments, and prepares them for his work. Peter was a leader, Paul the logician, John the apostle of love. He endows them with a holy enthusiasm that laughs at impossibilities. These gifts are conferred through the organized body of Christ. As Jesus was God incarnate, so the church is the Holy Spirit incarnate. We have to do with the visible church. So far we agreed with him; but when he came to insist upon the historic order of Episcopacy as the God-ordained medium of communicating ministerial power, we silently protested.

Bishop Walker offered the invocation. Owing to the intense and prolonged strain, he fainted while the queries were being put to the candidate. He soon recovered, however. The imposition of hands is the same as in all the Reformed churches. The bishops were seated around the table, on which were displayed the communion service. The clergy were robed in white gowns, and occupied the platform outside the chancel and the body of the church. After the consecration, the bishops took the communion, and then the clergy.

I could not help feeling, all the while, there is so much form and ceremony that the religious life can get little chance to flourish.

Dr. Brooks received $20,000 salary as pastor. As bishop, he will receive $3,000. So much for the honor. He has preached to a large audience through his printed sermons. His audience now will be larger still. At the close of the sermon Bishop Potter pronounced a fine encomium upon the personal worth of Bishop Brooks. He is, without doubt, a man of the highest type of Christian manhood.

The eighty-second annual meeting of the American Board was held this week in Pittsfield, Mass. Their report was exceedingly gratifying. Their receipts for the current year were upward of $824,000. They re-elected Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, president. His address was full of hope. Here is one passage: "Our aim is to brighten humanity, by making the heavenly temper universal among mankind; to make every house on earth a Christian home, and every community a Christian community, a perfect, vital, social organization. But some may say this is a day-dream of the devout. But was not everything in the world first a day-dream—the abolition of slavery, the first mission, the Reformation? The ideal is the only thing which, under the rule of God, is sure to be realized in the history of mankind. It has been the idea in God's mind from the outset that the heavenly life should finally be experienced throughout the earth, until heaven and earth blend at the horizon, and the heavenly Jerusalem be founded on the earth. We may not hope to see these things from earthly levels, but we will see them in celestial lands, and can say: 'I struggled for these with all my will, spirit and prayer.'

The Methodist Ecumenical Council, at Washington, is discussing such questions as Romanism the Foe of Civil and Religious Liberty; The Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic; The Necessity for the Pulpit to Apply God's Law to Politics and every other Human Interest; The Sabbath God's Day, etc. They boldly affirm that the church is responsible for the existence of the evils of our day. If the people of God demanded it, the liquor traffic would go; so would Sabbath papers, Sabbath trains and Sabbath mails.

They had nothing to say about secret, oath-bound fraternities. But the principles laid down will effectually root out that great curse, and presently their eyes will be open to see it.

In 1717, when the first missionaries went to India, it took fourteen months to go. Now the voyage can be made in less than one month. Then Nova Scotia was further from Boston than China and Japan are now. This marks the progress that is being made in the material world. It can be gone around in forty days. The moral progress is equally startling. The better day is coming.

"Through the shadows of the globe
We sweep into the brighter day;
Better fifty years in Europe
Than a cycle in Cathay."

We have arranged with Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., of the Reformed Episcopal church, for a sermon in his pulpit; also with Rev. John Adams, D.D., of the Columbus Avenue Presbyterian church, for a whole day in his pulpit. To-morrow we preach in the East Cambridge prison, and occupy the pulpit of the Second Boston R. P. church. J. M. FOSTER.

ROMANISTS VS. FREEMASONS.

BOSTON, Oct. 16, 1891.

The Boston Traveller, of the 10th inst., has a suggestive article head-lined "Masons and Catholics." It details a collision between "Rev. Fr. Crosby, of St. Ann's Roman Catholic church, in Nyack, N. Y.," and certain "High Masonic officials." The occasion of the rupture, though trivial, seems to have led to serious complications in business, in domestic and political affairs. A Mr. Wm. Hooley was announced to sing at a Masonic fair. His spiritual father objected, and, like every dutiful son of his priest, he obeyed. This, of course, displeased the Masons, and Rev. J. Riley Johnson, pastor of the Nyack Universalist church, and a Mason, attacked the "Rev. Fr." in the press.

To show proper resentment the Masons refused to patronize a fair held in St. Ann's church soon after. Strife between the "potsherds of the earth" being fairly inaugurated, Masons stopped dealing with Catholic merchants, and the Catholics retaliated. Many Masons' wives have declared a boycott against Catholic help in their houses, etc. The feeling of enmity spread from public fairs to business; thence to the employment of domestics, and threatens to become a factor in Rockland county politics. The report says: "Ex-Assemblyman George Dickey will be the Democratic candidate for the Assembly. He is Past Master of Rockland Lodge. If he runs, it is said Catholics will cut him. If, however, 'Tom' Finnegan of Haverstraw is nominated, as he hopes to be, it is expected that he will be scratched by members of Stony Point Lodge, Haverstraw; Rockland Lodge, Nyack; Wawayanda Lodge, Piermont; and Ramapo Lodge, Suffern. At least 600 Masonic votes are cast in Rockland county—more than enough to decide the fate of a candidate."

This is simply a contest between the Catholic Sullivan and the Masonic Kilrairie, for "gate fees;" but it will be cited in proof of a conflict between the two, and we shall be counseled to desist from our exposition of the lodge and to unite with the Masons to protect our schools and government from the incursions of a foreign enemy.

The staple objection to our work in New England is, "Masonry opposes Romanism." "In opposing Masonry you are helping the Catholics," etc. This is not a true statement of the case; but if correct, it would supply an additional reason for pushing on the investigation. When Paul and Silas preached the Gospel at Berea, the inhabitants of that city were highly commended, not simply for receiving the word, but because they "searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so." Would not Dr. L. B. Bates, Deacon B. F. Bradbury and other brethren, who look upon Masonry as an ally in the anti-Romanist movement, commend this example of the Bereans as worthy our emulation? Before confederating with a secret society of such magnitude, is it not the bounden duty of every Christian at least to know its history, its religion, its government, and whether it elevates or debases its own members? Can any one suggest a better or safer method than to take the facts as furnished in standard publications of the order, proclaimed by its orators, officially given in its Grand Lodge Reports and furnished by Charles G. Finney, Elder David Bernard, Eld. Nathaniel Colver, and other godly men who were once received, but afterwards renounced and unveiled the inner mysteries of the lodge, and then apply the test of Scripture, and Christ's example and teachings, to determine whether it is a covenant with God, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, or a league with the devil? However praiseworthy the motive, is there not danger that without proper care believers may become unequally yoked with unbelievers, and God's own people to-day, as in the time of Isaiah, go into "captivity for want of knowledge?" I think our brethren will admit that sound business principles, and much more the Word of God, demand that the man, the Christian or the church of Christ, know the individual or the organic body to whom fraternal greetings and the hand of fellowship is extended. Let us remember, it is written: "Say ye not, A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy;" woe unto them also that "strengthen the hands of evil doers," and "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," and so come up with open Bibles to an open door, and in the fullness of the Spirit, to the annual meeting Dec. 9 and 10, to listen to the testimonies of those who have explored the mystic recesses, and a discussion of this question by some of the clearest minds and ablest men and women in New England; and when you have listened to the discussion you will be better able to determine whether Masonry is a safe ally for the church and free government, in their conflict with the papal power and the church of Rome, or not. Stand with Christ wherever he is in the conflict, and victory is sure. J. P. STODDARD.

A LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 10, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The New York Presbytery of the Presbyterian church resolved, last Monday, by a vote of 64 to 62, to bring Dr. Briggs of Union Theological Seminary to trial. The 4th of November is the date set for the trial. Dr. Briggs stands for a liberal party in that body; and it seems those two wings, the conservative and the liberal, must "have it out." The leading charge is, the inerrancy of the Scriptures. Here is a sample:

When God made a covenant with Abraham, he said that his seed should be afflicted in a strange land 400 years. Moses said, in Exodus, that the time of Israel's sojourn was 430 years. This seems to determine that the period of Israel's abode in Egypt was 430 years. We know that from the time that God made the covenant with Abraham until Jacob went down into Egypt was 215 years. We also know that the law was given three months after the exodus, i. e., the same year. So that from the making of the covenant with Abraham until the giving of the law was 645 years.

Now Paul says, in Galatians, that from the confirming of the covenant with Abraham until the law was 430 years. There, say the critics, Paul was mistaken 215 years. Paul's inspiration did not keep him from mistakes. But let us see. Paul did not say, from the making of the covenant with Abraham until the law was 430 years, but from the confirming of the covenant, a very different term. The word for make means to divide, to cut in two. When Abraham divided the victim, placing part over against part, the smoking furnace and the burning lamp passed between them. That is the word for making a covenant.

The word for confirming a covenant means to swear an oath. After God had made the covenant, he confirmed it unto Isaac with an oath, and established it in Jacob for a law, first at Bethel, then at Padanaran, and again at Bethel, just before he went down into Egypt. So that the period of confirmation extended over 215 years. Now Paul said, from the period of confirmation of the covenant, which covered 215 years, till the law, was 430 years. Paul stated what he meant, and he told the truth. Where are the critics?

Here is another example: In 1 Kings 6:1, we are told that from the exodus until Solomon laid the foundation of the temple was 480 years. Scholars are now generally agreed that the period embraces 645 years. So that passage contains an error of 165 years. But let us see. The chronological tables of the Bible are not intended to be accurate measures of time. In Matthew, first chapter, we are told, that from Abraham to David was fourteen generations, from David to the captivity in Babylon was fourteen generations, and from the captivity to Christ was fourteen generations, in all forty-two generations. But we know that from Abraham to Christ was seventy-two generations, at least. In examining the tables, we find that sometimes the father, son and grandson bear the same name; so that these tables were not intended to be accurate measurements of time. In these tables two lines are followed: the kingly, from David, and the high-priestly, from Aaron. The second is referred to in the passage named. And from the anointing of Aaron till Solomon began the temple was 645 years. But during the Judges, the people apostatized, and for seven generations there were no high priests. That period was left out of God's reckoning. It is as though it had not been. It covers just 165 years. Omitting that, there were just 480 years of high priests' administrations from Aaron to the laying of the foundation of the temple. So that the inspired writer stated just what he meant, and he accurately stated the facts.

These will indicate the sandy quagmire upon which Dr. Briggs is building his theory.

Madison Square Garden is hastening to completion. The spire is 364 feet high. It is the largest play-house in the world. It will combine theatre, saloon, beer-garden, dance-house, gambling den, and what is worse? Men are willing to spend millions in the devil's service. How they put God's people to shame in the half-hearted service they render to Christ.

The M. E. church gave about $1,000,000 for missions last year; but that only meant 50 cents per member. The Reformed Presbyterian church gave $1.50 per member last year; and the Second church raised the funds for a young minister and his wife to work in the island of Cyprus. They sailed this morning for their new field. Let any one read the life of Rev. John G. Patten, the Scotch missionary from this church to the New Hebrides, if he would have his soul made a pillar of fire.

The down-town churches here suffer by emigration. The families upon whom they depend move up-town. Often the church has an endowment, from which the pastor is supported, and he stays and preaches to empty pews. One would think, here is his golden opportunity to do missionary work; but he does not fill his church. The poor have a regard for such churches, and their pride cannot be overcome. It is a law of Christ's kingdom that a congregation must have life that is self-sustaining and must grow; else it is not blessed. An endowment is a millstone hung about the neck of a congregation that is not self-sustaining without it. Better it had been left in poverty. Then the people would have worked, and that would attract the poor. In no other way can the churchless masses be brought into God's house.

The tunnel under the East River hastens slowly. It was begun some time ago. The work stopped for lack of funds. It was taken up by English capital. It is proposed to have six railroad tracks. It will cost $40,000,000. The B. & O. Railroad is digging a tunnel under the city of Baltimore. It is two miles long, and will cost $10,000,000. Men of the world spare no expense to remove difficulties. Thus they are preparing a highway for King Jesus to carry forward his kingdom to completion. J. M. FOSTER.

OBITUARY.

In the death of Mr. Abner Tuttle, of Bristol, Conn., quite recently, the Cynosure has lost a continuous subscriber, and the Reform cause an earnest supporter. But he had passed the four-score period, and in his day had seen the triumph of the old-time Abolition party, to which he belonged and for which he labored. As a Prohibitionist, he was firm to his principles, and active in their promulgation. He was also a strong opponent of secret societies, especially of Freemasonry, and freely gave expression to his reasons for antagonizing them. He was engaged in no active business for many years, but has lived quietly upon a moderate income from his former accumulations. As a citizen he was highly respected and as a neighbor he will be greatly missed.

LODGE NOTES.

So of the Odd-fellows and Freemasons. You will not have much Holy Ghost power until you get out of them. Why don't you say amen to this? ("Amen!" cried a few.) But you couldn't say amen until I reminded you of it. One man told me he belonged to seven lodges. All his time was given to them. He had none for meetings.—Moody.

"To-day's session of the mysterious P. E. O. Society was highly interesting to the lady delegates. Many more have arrived since yesterday and the convention is in full blast. All attempts on the part of the reporters to learn the mystery of the letters P. E. O. are indignantly repulsed. The society is certainly a success as a secret order when taking into consideration the proverbial difficulty a woman has in keeping secrets."—Telegram from Fairfield, Iowa, Oct. 15.

A question of great interest to the Roman Catholic church and its relations to secret societies has been raised by a dispatch from Addison, N. Y., stating that one Dennis O'Keefe of that place is at once a Catholic, entitled to all the privileges of the church, and an Odd-fellow in good standing. It is stated that the question as to raising the ban against certain secret societies had been referred to Archbishop Corrigan. The archbishop is at present out of town, but Father Lavelle, his secretary, said that while he could not say positively as to Archbishop Corrigan's decision in this particular case he believed that it was no longer against the law of the Roman Catholic church to be an Odd-fellow.—New York Telegram, Sept. 22.

Mrs. Ralph Emerson writes in the Home Missionary among other incidents of a trip through Mexico that in its capital city her husband was introduced to a leading Mexican of great intelligence and refinement. On asking him about the relative strength of the various religions in Mexico, he with great dignity remarked: "There are two leading religions in Mexico: one is the Roman Catholic, the other is Freemasonry." Mrs. Emerson adds: "This was said in the most earnest, matter-of-fact way, as an assertion not to be gainsaid. Now as we women are not allowed to be Freemasons it is not surprising that most of the worshipers in their churches were females. In the most fashionable churches we saw very few men of any education or refinement of countenance." And this is Roman Catholic Mexico!

Mr. J. Sykes Rymer, ex-Lord Mayor of the ancient city of York, England, and Mrs. Rymer were the guests of ex-Lieutenant Governor General John C. Smith, of No. 65 Sibley street, last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Rymer came to Chicago Thursday from Washington, where he was a lay delegate to the ecumenical conference of the Methodist church. They were accompanied on their western journey by Alderman Quibell, ex-Mayor of Newark, England, and Mr. Calvert Coates, of London. Among those who met the ex-Lord Mayor at General Smith's residence at dinner, and afterwards, were ex-Lord Mayor Cregier, the Hon. Clarke Varnum, Mr. Gil W. Barnard, George W. Warvelle, and James B. Bradwell, an honorary member of Ancient Ebor Preceptory, of York, England. These gentlemen are all prominent in the Masonic fraternity, and Mr. Rymer himself is Past Grand Officer of the Provincial Grand Lodge of York. General Smith is himself the highest in rank in the Masonic fraternity in this State, being not only a thirty-third degree Mason and an Active Member of the Supreme Council, but the Grand Deputy of that body for the State of Illinois. Most of the gentlemen were accompanied by their wives, and a pleasant, social evening was passed.—Chicago Legal News, October 17.

The publisher has received the following letters and takes pleasure in making them public, as it is a satisfaction after publishing a large advertisement to know that it not only paid the man who inserted the advertisement, but also gave great pleasure to every one who replied:

PARK ST. CHURCH, BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 1, 1891. J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., GENTLEMEN:—The "Chautauqua" Lamp is here and supplying the light for me to write this letter. "The most graceful and elegant lamp I ever saw," the lady says.

The soap and toilet articles are greater in quantity and better in quality than I expected.

You may use this letter in any way you think best.

With best wishes, I am sincerely yours, (Rev.) EDWARD GRIER FULLERTON.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Va., Sept. 28th, 1891. J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.,

GENTLEMEN:—I read your large advertisement of Sept. 24, and believing that this excellent publication would not publish an advertisement that was not all right in every way, we accordingly sent you our order, and the lamp and great box have been safely received.

I cannot refrain from writing you this letter expressing my perfect satisfaction with the goods you have sent. My wife is greatly pleased with the "Sweet Home" soap and various toilet articles, and the Chautauqua Piano Lamp is certainly most beautiful and useful.

If you can use this letter in any public way to your own advantage, you are welcome to do so.

With best wishes for the success of Chautauqua and the "Chautauqua Piano Lamp," I remain very respectfully, (Rev.) R. L. NANTON.

JOHN G. FEE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

will stimulate the faith of hundreds who will see in it how God can work in moral reforms, his wonders to perform, when state, church and nation oppose their combined power. Buy it for your boys and girls and you will not fail to read it yourself.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, $1.00.

Postage, 10 cents extra. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN Ass'n, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages: cloth, $1.00.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

- 3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

- Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Hamp.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED.

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, April 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOK

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each

For Sale by the National Christian Association

321 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF The Christian Cynosure, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Egin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Nowfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chaifant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART, AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A 'NUT-SHELL'"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts in color and paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secret Societies, 321 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1891.

RELIGION OF ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Our correspondent at Melbourne, Iowa, D. S. Thompson, who objected to the statement in the Cynosure that "the Independent Order of Odd-fellows teaches universal salvation on the basis of good works, ignoring entirely the Son of God, and that Jesus Christ is a prohibited name in the lodge," and to whom we replied by printing an extract from the Massachusetts I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge Report for Feb. 14, 1889, p. 336, is not satisfied with our position. On this point he says, in a later letter: "Now, if that Report from the Grand Lodge is all the argument you have, you had better lay down your pen," etc.

On October 14 (about two weeks ago), in the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire (forty-eighth session, at Newport), "vigorous resolutions were adopted, petitioning the Sovereign Grand Lodge to reverse its action and the decision of the Grand Sire, that the name of Christ cannot properly be used in lodge-rooms."

So it seems that it was not the Massachusetts Grand Lodge only (previously quoted by us) that made this distinct decision, but the Sovereign (National) Grand Lodge and the Grand Sire. Our correspondent may as well succumb gracefully to the evidence in hand.

That Odd-fellowship claims to be an institution for the salvation of men, is unequivocally declared in Grosh's Manual of the order, where (p. 90) we read: "What regeneration by the word of truth is in religion, initiation is in Odd-fellowship;" and this is an emphatic rejection of the mediation of Christ.

Since the above was written, we have received the following upon this subject from the New England agent at Boston, confirming all that the N. C. A. claims for Odd-fellowship as a religious institution:

"THE CLOVEN FOOT WILL OUT."

BOSTON, October 20, 1891.

Strenuous efforts have been made by some church-member-Odd-fellows in these parts to evade the odium of being Christless and pagan in their secret worship. When confronted with the decision of the Grand Sire at the head of the Supreme Grand Lodge of the World, and the action of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Feb. 14, 1889, ratifying the action of its superiors, they would say, "You misinterpret. You do not understand the meaning. We use Christ's name in the lodge, and you are all wrong," etc., etc.

The action of the Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows, in Newport, New Hampshire, October 14th inst., as reported in the morning issue of the Boston Journal of the 15th, sets this question at rest. It clinches the nail so closely that no individual or even State Grand Lodge can extract it. I quote verbatim from the report:

"Vigorous resolutions were adopted petitioning the Sovereign Grand Lodge to reverse its action and the decision of the Grand Sire, that the name of Christ cannot properly be used in lodge rooms."

There are several noteworthy points in this single paragraph. 1. The disaffected subject prostrates itself as a humble petitioner at the feet of its "Sovereign Grand" dictator, to use that "name which is above every other name," in its temples and at its altars of worship. 2. It confirms the absolutely despotic government of the order, extending its decrees beyond the consciences of its subjects and assuming to annul the plain commandments of God by its own higher law. "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name he will give it you." 3. "The name of Christ cannot properly be used in the lodge room." When used by some over-zealous or scrupulous brother in prayer, or otherwise, it is a gross impropriety. In other words, it is an act of contempt for the authority of the "Sovereign Grand Lodge," and the decision of the "Grand Sire."

The humble "petition" of New Hampshire Grand Lodge is a confession that it is a violation of the fundamental law of Odd-fellowship to use the name of Christ, and that it is so interpreted and applied to all lodges, and of course all members of lodges, under the jurisdiction of the "Sovereign Grand Lodge of the World."

Doubtless many good men, "blinded by the god of this world," who are in the lodge will await future developments on this question with the deepest interest; but while the law remains as it is, there is but one alternative for them: either to remain in the lodge and deny Christ, and incur the penalty of being denied "before his Father and the holy angels," or else to "come out from among them." Which will you do, gentlemen—worship a god out of Christ who is "consuming fire," or God who is "in Christ reconciling the world unto himself?"

In either case, if you do not aspire to discredit your own intelligence or integrity, let us hear no more about using the name of Christ in lodge rooms, after this action of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, lest you become an object of pity or derision in the eyes of every well-informed Odd-fellow. "Renounce the hidden things of dishonesty," I beseech you in Christ's stead; and "come out from among them," as you value your soul.

J. P. STODDARD.

HIS SALARY.

Those men of the world whose household and other private expenses run up into thousands of dollars every year, and whose incomes range from $80 to $100 per day (and this class of citizens is becoming quite numerous in Chicago and elsewhere)—will hardly appreciate the poverty and hardships which the earnest, sincere preacher of the Gospel of the lowly Jesus is called to bear, and is yet able to stand up with a willing heart and a joyful spirit, unmoved by the discouragements with which he is confronted in his Master's service.

In our intercourse with the followers of our Saviour we are often brought into communion with these unselfish, consecrated saints of God, and are able to bear testimony to their earnestness and devotion. One sending his tribute-money writes as follows:

"Enclosed, please find $1.00 as the Lord's amount for the year. . . . I am one of the number that adheres to the old U. B. church, and as our membership in the East is not large, we must necessarily endure hardships of different kinds, and small salaries—mine being less than $150 last year. But as I have for years had a 'Lord's treasury,' there remains something to help you. . . . I am indeed anxious to help so noble a cause as you are engaged in. May the great Head of the church stay this tide of iniquity."

"S. C. W."

How precious to such souls must be the promises of the Gospel!

A USELESS INNOVATION.

The metric system of computation, which its adherents are endeavoring with a good deal of energy to bring into general use in Europe and America, seems hardly less complicated to the ordinary uncultured mind than algebra.

The arguments advanced both for its adoption and rejection are thus summed up, and present a very fair view of the question in a nutshell: "The advantages of the metric system are that it is a settled measure, in use by more people than any one other, and that its divisions correspond with what must always remain the notation of the educated world. It was made compulsory in France in 1840, legal in England in 1864, and in the United States by act of July 28, 1866. Its friends have as yet failed to render it acceptable to the nation, and apparently from misconception of the wants and prejudices of the populace. They have not decided upon any neat or consistent way of expressing its abbreviations, so that draftsmen and printers are either unwilling or unable to use them. They have neglected to make for workmen comparative tables giving its equivalents in the measures daily in use by them, and they have never succeeded in giving to the public a few brief rules for interchanging quantities, not necessarily exact, but near enough for hourly use. It is plain that a sudden change in the whole system of measures of a country involves loss of time, with perplexity and expense."

Reference is now made to this subject, in consequence of an effort to force the metric system upon the people of the United States, by an act of Congress, on and after July 1, 1893. Petitions for this legislation are now being distributed by the American Metrological Society, which offers as a precedent for its action the following resolution adopted in August last by the quinquennial session of the Geographical International Congress, held at Berne, Switzerland:

"The Geographical Congress entreats Englishmen of science to desist in future from the use of their ancient units of weight and measure in scientific and technical publications, and to employ those of the metric system only."

Another objection to the new system of weights and measures lies in the fact that mathematics, in its present condition, is a finished science. Its methods may be changed, as in the case of the metric system, but it can neither be improved nor further simplified for common use.

"CURRENT REFORM."

Every new issue of Our Day, edited by Joseph Cook, seems to carry with it the impression that "current reform," of which it is the vigorous exponent, has taken another step in advance, and that the world does move in a cycle from which truth and wisdom have not yet been eliminated.

Leaving out of the question all personality (for the magazine would be quite as good, but perhaps not quite so influential in molding public opinion if it were shorn of the names that appear in the roster of editors), it has strong claims upon the attention of intellectual men and women; and it would be difficult indeed to name any purely literary periodical in the country that ought to more deeply interest the truly Christian reader.

There are five topics of general interest carefully treated in the October number. Rev. W. E. Blackstone, of Oak Park, Ill., pursuing his indomitable charity for the down-trodden Jews, discusses the question of governmental intercession by the United States for these oppressed people. God and humanity are interested in this question, which he argues with Christian energy, and sums up on the affirmative side. "Something," he says, "must be done. What shall it be? No other people can boast of such high authority for the title to their earthly inheritance" (the Land of Palestine). "It is rooted in the Holy Word, which all Christian nations receive as the foundation of their religion, and the rule of their practice. Israel gave this Word to us; and in it God says: 'I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and they shall bring my sons in their arms.' Does not the present dire extremity of Israel, and the quickening of their national sentiment, and the expression of Gentile sympathy, and the Providential openings toward the land, all point to the uplifted hand of God?" . . . "In conclusion, let it be remembered that the memorialists ask our government, not for a crusade, not for intervention, but only for peaceable diplomatic intercession. Happy is the people that shall intercede in Israel's behalf, for God hath said, 'I will bless them that bless thee.' Frederick the Great laid it down as an axiom that 'to oppress the Jews never brought prosperity to any government.'"

Rev. L. Albert Banks takes up the "crimes against working-girls," based on impressive facts and figures that show conclusively the squalid and disheartening condition of these girls, who suffer under the greed and tyranny of oppressive employers. The story has often been told, and should be re-told in all its hideousness, until the needed reforms are made effective. The testimony of inhumanity in this direction is overwhelming. "It is impossible," writes Mr. Banks, "to turn these incidents aside as exaggerations. They are horrible, I know, but the most horrible thing about them is, that they are true." . . . "Nothing is more foolish than for us to keep still, hoping that in some way these wrongs will remedy themselves. Shall we look to the sweater, the chattel-mortgage shark, the lecherous merchant, to reform themselves? They do not care how long, nor at what a pittance, men and women work, or to what fearful extremities they are driven. Reforms will never come from the gold-box of Mammon. We must cry aloud and spare not until these devilish cruelties and unblushing crimes are impossible in our fair city."

Rev. W. F. Crafts presses the Sunday closing of the Columbian World's Fair with his usual energy and forceful arguments, relating in detail the sentiments expressed in the recent convention, in Chicago, of the American Sabbath Union, and the Memorial adopted on that occasion. The subject cannot be advocated too aggressively.

Joseph Cook's Monday Lecture—No. 4, 1891—deals with modern science in the discussion of the resurrection, and especially in the coming of our Lord from the realms of death. "I am," he says, "an anti-Swedenborgian, and an anti-Spiritualist," but he does not sneer at the assertion of the objective reality of apparitions. He will not admit that strictly scientific proof has yet been given that apparitions are really objective—that is, that they are realities existing outside of the mind that seems to see them, and are not the result of delusions. "I should not object to scientific proof being given of the reality of spiritual appearances; but I do not admit that it has ever yet been given." And thus he closes this interesting lecture: "If infidelity grants what I have shown you it does now concede, and if the gospels after eighteen hundred years stand as impregnable rocks in the field of current criticism; if this is the only explanation that science can give, that apparitions of our glorified Lord appeared, we have a right to stand on the record of the gospels, and maintain, with the most unshaken confidence, that Christ rose from the dead."

The other papers, editorial notes, reviews, etc., in this issue fully sustain the high intellectual standard adopted by the management.

WISCONSIN STATE CONFERENCE—SPECIAL NOTICE.

Those who wish to attend the Wisconsin State Conference will remember that VERNON, the place where the meeting is to be held, is near Waukesha. It is on the Wisconsin Central Railroad.

It would be well for all delegates intending to be present at the Conference to address a letter at once to either Rev. J. B. Galloway, or Rev. I. Faris, at Vernon, Wis., and stating as nearly as possible the time when your train will arrive at Vernon, that they may meet you at the depot.

TO ALL OUR READERS.

If Reform work could be carried on without money, there would be many more reformers in the field; but the divine law of missions includes, also, the law of beneficence, in which, we are taught, "God loves a cheerful giver." Without money the wheels of progress in Reform are delayed, the work remains undone, and the cause suffers in a corresponding ratio. Now the National Christian Association is engaged in a great and good work. It has many willing hearts and hands numbered among its agents and lecturers; but for want of funds, as it has no endowment to fall back upon, its work is sadly hindered unless those who hold the Lord's money in trust come forward and invest it freely in his service. The work before us, during the approaching winter, may be made prosperous and glorious in the name of our Lord, if with open hearts and purses our numerous friends will come up to the help of the mighty. We need the money; every little that is received counts for its full value in our work and in the Lord's treasury. Those who wish to aid us and have more time than money can do so by canvassing for subscribers to the Cynosure and for purchasers of our publications.

—In Friday's session at Watertown, New York, last week, the Presbyterian Synod adopted a resolution urging Congress not to loan the city of Chicago, or other interested parties, $5,000,000 for the promotion of the Columbian Exposition, unless the management of the Fair shall consent to have it closed on the Sabbath. A similar gathering in Ohio recently adopted a resolution to boycott the Fair unless it is decided to close it on that day. The Sabbath-closing advocates are resorting to earnest and vigorous measures to accomplish their ends. They are right in their premises, at all events, whatever may be thought of their action.

—A friend of the Cynosure, living in Iowa, "hits the nail on the head" in writing to us as follows: "Anti-secrecy men and women should all be workers. If we were all aggressive, which we must be in order to show our faith by our works, reform would not be the weakest, but the strongest and best-supported influence of Christianity. Does not the Word of God apply to us, and is it not easy to see whether it condemns our action—our non-action, rather—on the secrecy question? Let every reformer determine to be more diligent, because the dead faith of a drone has no force in reform. Let us come up to the Bible standard of reform gloriously." Let us not be drones.

—Heidelberg University, at Tiffin, Ohio, has a faculty, with the exception of one individual, who are unanimously opposed to secret societies. Of course, there is a strong effort on the part of secretists to gain a foothold for their pernicious assemblages in the University. Last week, one of the organizers of college societies made a special visit for this purpose to the University; and lest the students should be misled by the glowing statements of this visitor, Prof. Lowe has ordered, for distribution among them, copies of the address on "College Societies," delivered last spring by Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard before the "Massasoit" society of the Northwestern University, where it was favorably received and exerted a healthy influence. It will be good reading for the students at Tiffin.

—Referring to the case of E. A. Underwood, condemned in Georgia for murder, the Atlanta Constitution notices the approaching argument for an appealed trial, and remarks, incidentally, that "he is a member of several secret organizations, the members of which are using their influence to avert his doom." This influence in the lodge-ridden South is so potent that we shall not be surprised to learn of the prisoner's new trial on the most flimsy of pleas in his behalf. "I furthermore promise and swear," says the applicant for the Royal Arch degree of Freemasonry, "that I will assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty, and will espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same, whether he be right or wrong." The probability is that Mr. Underwood will get his new trial and be acquitted.

—The Day and Week of Prayer for Young Men will this year occur November 8-14, by appointment of the American International Convention, and the World's Conference of Young Men's Christian Associations. The committee, in making this announcement, say: "The outlook gained over the entire Association field indicates decided progress in work among young men. Not only have the American associations grown in strength, numbers and useful work, but in other lands and continents similar advance is noticeable. To the World's Conference were brought encouraging reports of progress in Great Britain, Germany, France, Switzerland, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Italy. In India a national organization of the associations has been effected, and to the committee of the World's Conference were added members from India and Japan." The committee urge the importance of a unanimous and faithful observance of the day and week indicated.

—The time was Sunday afternoon. The place was Pittsburgh, Pa. The occasion was the laying of the corner-stone of the new St. John's Protestant Episcopal church. The audience numbered about 4,000. The ceremonies of the occasion were Masonic. McCandless Lodge No. 390, F. A. M., had charge of the arrangements. Members of other Masonic lodges were present. Rev. W. N. Webbe, rector of the church, who is a Mason, read the first part of the Masonic ritual. J. W. Brown, Acting Right Worshipful Grand Master of Pennsylvania, laid the stone. Other members of the lodge went through the Masonic ceremonies usual upon such occasions. Rev. J. C. White, of St. Andrew's church, started the religious exercises. He made an address, giving the history of the church. The new building is to have a Sunday-school room, a kitchen, and a dining-room. No mention is made of an amateur theatre in the church. Perhaps there is none. Possibly some reader of the Cynosure may see something that seems strangely inconsistent in this union of church and lodge. Not so. Both the Episcopal church and Freemasonry are confessedly religious institutions. But for all these things God will no doubt bring them into judgment. Probably they will deserve it.

Of ten deaths which have occurred in the membership of Oriental Lodge No. 97, Ancient Order of United Workmen, in this city, since its organization, six were due to violence—accidents or suicide. This record is rather remarkable.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Among recent visitors to the office of the Cynosure were Rev. W. P. Ferries, of Evanston, and Rev. J. D. Marsh, of Peoria, both stalwart pastors of Free Methodist churches in their respective districts. These esteemed brethren are strong in the faith that distinguishes true Christians, and both are hearty in their denunciations of the lodge system, and strong in their advocacy of every reform that will hasten the coming of the Lord and his glorious kingdom.

—Another interesting visitor at our office was Bro. James G. Laughlin, of College Springs, Iowa, a staunch Reformer, over whose venerable head the storms of eighty-six years have rolled without destroying his enthusiasm in the contest against slavery, rum and secret societies. Old as he is, with good health and spirits, he travels from place to place alone, strong in his Christian faith and the resolution that has brought him safely thus far through his long and eventful life.

—Names are arbitrary, and when written amiss are often printed wrong. Such was the case, last week, in the notice of the Kansas Anti-Secrecy Conference, where Rev. Mr. Morton, of this city, appears as Rev. Mr. Moreton; and in the program of the coming State Christian Conference at Vernon, Wis., where Rev. Mr. Swarts, pastor of a Chicago Methodist church, figures as Rev. Mr. Schwartz,—which for an English preacher smacks too strongly of German orthography.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

pressed their appreciation and consequent antipathy to secretism. The Swedish and Danish theological departments are totally and heartily opposed to secret societies.

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Oct. 23, 1891.

En route for Canada via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, I arrived in this city last evening, just in time to attend the prayer-meeting of the Covenant church. There I expressed my readiness to lecture this evening, but the way did not seem clear to them to open their church. When the stars seem to fight against a man he had better be calm and as good-natured as possible, and let the Spirit and the Word of God do the fighting. Jesus said: "I have many things to say to you, but ye cannot bear them now." Had Peter known the character of Judas Iscariot as Jesus did, he never would have tolerated his company. A man might lose his reason fighting for the truth against the stars.

At Tiffin, Prof. Lowe did all he could to open the way for a presentation of the truth; and President Peters, of the Heidelberg College, cheerfully offered the chapel of the college for that purpose; but Freemasonry is the power behind the throne, and put its veto upon the good desire of the president. A thirteen-degree Mason is the pastor of "Grace Reformed Church," and the dominant spirit of the college, if not of all the Protestant churches of Tiffin. His name is Hibshman. He officiates at Masonic funerals, and assembles his brother Masons in his church, when he can, and preaches in favor of Masonry.

I devoted the day (Thursday) in Tiffin to the distribution of tracts and visiting. I met Sister Coe, who was 25 years old at the time the Masons murdered Capt. Morgan. She, with her family, are wide-awake in their appreciation of the iniquity of Freemasonry, and she will by no means do anything to countenance a pastor who is a Freemason. She manifested her sympathy for truth by contributing to its material support. Prof. Lowe likewise placed in my hand what he would have put in the contribution box had there been a lecture.

The people of Mansfield with whom I have talked, see and feel the power of secretism over the churches and society, as do the people of other places. But who shall fight against the beast of secrecy without the presence and manifest power of the Almighty? WILLIAM FENTON.

In a special report on the operations of the weather bureau Chief Harrington shows that on Sept. 30 there were over 1,200 weather signal display stations in operation, a decrease of 100 per cent in less than three months. In addition there are over 2,200 voluntary observers reporting to the weather bureau.

THE HOME.

THE DROP WHICH GREW INTO A TORRENT.

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE.

"I will make the dry land springs of water."

All my soul was dry and dead
Till I learned that Jesus bled,—
Bled and suffer'd in my place,
Bearing sin in matchless grace.

Then a drop of heavenly love
Fell upon me from above,
And by secret, mystic art
Reached the center of my heart.

Glad the story I recount,
How that drop became a fount,
Bubbled up a living well,
Made my heart begin to swell.

All within my soul was praise,
Praise increasing all my days,
Praise which could not silent be;
Floods were struggling to be free.

More and more the waters grew,
Open wide the floodgates flew,
Leaping forth in streams of song,
Flowed my happy life along.

Lo, a river clear and sweet
Laved my glad, obedient feet!
Soon it rose up to my knees,
And I praised and prayed with ease.

Now my soul in praises swims,
Bathes in songs, and psalms, and hymns;
Plunges down into the deeps,
All her powers in worship steep.

Hallelujah! O my Lord,
Torrents from my soul are poured!
I am carried clean away,
Praising, praising all the day.

In an ocean of delight,
Praising God with all my might,
Self is drowned. So let it be;
Only Christ remains to me.

—C. H. Spurgeon.

THE BLESSED LIFE.

There is a Christian life which, in comparison with that experienced by the majority of Christians, is as summer to winter, or as the mature fruitfulness of a golden autumn to the struggling promise of a cold and late spring.

And the blessedness of this blessed life lies in this: that we trust the Lord to do in us and for us what we could not do; and we find that he does not belie his word, but that according to our faith so it is done to us. The weary spirit which has vainly sought to realize its ideal by its own strivings and efforts, now gives itself over to the strong and tender hands of the Lord Jesus; and he accepts the task, and at once begins to work in it to will and to do of his own good pleasure, delivering it from the tyranny of besetting sin, and fulfilling in it his own perfect ideal.

This blessed life should be the normal life of every Christian, in work and rest, in the building up of the inner life, and in the working out of the life plan. It is God's thought not for a few, but for all his children. The youngest and weakest may lay claim to it equally with the strongest and oldest. We should step into it at the moment of conversion, without wandering with blistered feet forty years in the desert, or lying thirty-eight years, with disappointed hopes, in the porch of the house of mercy.

The first chamber in the King's holy palace is the chamber of the new birth. By nature we are destitute of life—dead in trespasses and in sins. We need, therefore, first, not a new creed, but a new life. The prophet's staff is well enough where there is life; but it is useless on the face of a dead babe. The first requisite is life. This is what the Holy Spirit gives us at the moment of conversion.

We may remember the day and place of our new birth, or we may be as ignorant of them as of the circumstances of our natural birth. But what does it matter that a man can not recall his birthday, so long as he knows that he is alive?

As an outstretched hand has two sides—the upper, called the back; the under, called the palm—so there are two sides and names for the act of entrance into the chamber of the new birth. Angels, looking at it from the heaven side, call it being born again. Men, looking at it from the earth side, call it trusting Jesus. "Those that believe in his name are born." "Those that receive him have the right to become the sons of God." If you are born again you will trust. And if you are trusting Jesus, however many your doubts and fears, you are certainly born again, and have entered the palace. If you go no farther, you will be saved, but you will miss untold blessedness.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

HOW SOME BIRDS LEARN TO SING.

A wren built her nest in a box on a New Jersey farm. The occupants of the farmhouse saw the mother teaching her young to sing. She sat in front of them and sung her whole song very distinctly. One of her young attempted to imitate her. After proceeding through a few notes its voice broke and it lost the tune. The mother recommenced where the young one had failed, and went distinctly through with the remainder. The young bird made a second attempt, commencing where it had ceased before, and continuing the song as long as it was able, and when the notes were again lost the mother began again where it had stopped and completed it. This done the mother sung over the whole series of notes the second time with great precision, and again a young one attempted to follow her. The wren pursued the same course with this one as with the first, and so on with the third and fourth, until each of the birds became a perfect songster.—Musical Messenger.

CHRISTIAN OLD AGE.

Old age, we admit, has its disabilities. At this period of life the dearest earthly friends are often gone. At the morning and evening meal stands a vacant chair; companionship ordained of heaven has been smitten by the fell destroyer, and the future walk is one of loneliness. Children may be far away, battling in the conflicts of life, or may have been translated to the unseen world. A new generation are upon the stage, most of whom are unable to appreciate the labors that have been performed, or the inevitable infirmities of advancing years. The plaintive cry of David has been the experience of many since his day: "The days of my years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow."

Sanctified old age has its many lessons. We are taught in it the divine reality of religion. Enter that lowly cottage; see suspended from its walls such mottoes as "God bless our home!" "Thy statutes have been our songs in the house of our pilgrimage." Mark how piety fills the dwelling with richest fragrance, a piety matured under the varied processes of a life-long discipline. Happy will it be if, like an aged saint, we may pass the closing days of life in contentment, anticipating the eternal Sabbath in the immediate presence of God.—Anonymous.

NEVER HAD ANY TROUBLE.

"I once asked an aged man in regard to his pastor, who was a very brilliant man, 'Why is it that your pastor, so very brilliant, seems to have so little tenderness in his sermons?' 'Well,' he replied, 'the reason is, our pastor has never had any trouble. When misfortune comes upon him his style will be different.' After awhile the Lord took a child out of that pastor's house, and though the preacher was just as brilliant as he was before, oh, the warmth, the tenderness of his discourses! The fact is that trouble is a great educator. You see sometimes a musician sit down at an instrument, and his execution is cold and formal and unfeeling. The reason is that all his life has been prospered. But let misfortune or bereavement come to that man, and he sits down at the instrument, and you discover the pathos in the first sweep of the keys.

A young doctor comes into a sick room where there is a dying child. Perhaps he is very rough in his prescription, and very rough in his manner, and rough in the feeling of the pulse, and rough in his answer to the mother's anxious question; but the years roll on and there has been one dead in his own house, and now he comes into the sick room, and with tearful eyes he looks at the dying child, and he says, 'Oh, how this reminds me of my Charlie!' Trouble, the great educator! Sorrow—I see its touch in the grandest painting;

I hear its tremor in the sweetest song; I feel its power in the mightiest argument."—Epworth Herald.

THE LOVE OF SOULS.

A minister who loves the souls of men loves them just as much at nine o'clock Thursday morning as he does when he is delivering the most eloquent passage at the close of an appeal in a revival. If he does not, he is an actor, and not a preacher of the Gospel. Of course, if a minister or devoted layman is attending to a business transaction in a bank on Thursday at eleven o'clock, he will not manifest his love for sinners as he will in a revival service specifically designed to lead them then and there to Christ. But the love will be as deep, and the desire as great to do good, and if he should walk out of the bank accompanied by the clerk with whom he has just transacted business, and there should be a favorable opportunity to speak to him on the subject of religion, he would do it with as much genuine feeling as if addressing a thousand attentive hearers.—Christian Advocate.

BOYS!

Treat your mother as politely as if she were a strange lady.

Be as kind and helpful to your sister as to other boys' sisters.

Don't grumble or refuse to do some errand which must be done, and which otherwise takes the time of some one who has more to do.

Have your mothers and sisters for your best friends.

Find some amusement for the evening that all the family can join in, large and small.

Be a gentleman at home.

Cultivate a cheerful temper.

If you do anything wrong, take your mother into your confidence.

Never lie about anything you have done.—Selected.

THE LITTLE HOUSEHOLDER.

"Oh, yes; I have all kinds of tenants," said a kind-faced old gentleman; "but the one I like best is a child not more than ten years of age. A few years ago I got a chance to buy a piece of land over on the west side, and did so. I noticed that there was an old coop with a house on it; but I paid no attention to it. After a while a man came to me and wanted to know if I would rent it to him.

"What do you want it for?" said I.

"To live in," he replied.

"Well," I said, "you can have it. Pay me what you think it is worth to you."

"The first month he brought me two dollars; and the second month a little boy, who said he was the man's son, came with three dollars. After that I saw the man once in a while, but in the course of time the boy paid the rent regularly, sometimes two dollars and sometimes three dollars. One day I asked the boy what had become of his father.

"He's dead, sir," was the reply.

"Is that so?" said I. "How long since?"

"More'n a year," was the reply.

"I took his money, but I made up my mind that I would go over and investigate; and the next day I drove over there. The old shed looked quite decent. I knocked at the door, and a little girl let me in. I asked for her mother. She said she did not have any.

"Where is she?" said I.

"We don't know, sir. She went away after my father died, and we've never seen her since."

"Just then a little girl about three years old came in, and I learned that these three children had been keeping house together a year and a half, the boy supporting his little sisters by blacking boots and selling newspapers, and the elder girl managing the house and taking care of the baby. Well, I just had my daughter call on them, and we keep an eye on them. I thought I wouldn't disturb them while they were getting along. The next time the boy came with the rent, I talked with him a little, and then I said, 'My boy, you are a hero. Keep on as you have begun, and you will never be sorry. Keep your little sisters together and never leave them. Now look at this.'

"I showed him a ledger in which I had entered all the money he had paid me for rent, and I told him it was all his with interest. 'You keep right on,' said I, 'and I'll be your banker, and when this amounts to a little more I'll see that you get a house somewhere of your own.' That is the kind of tenant to have."—Chicago Herald.

DON'T YOU SEE?

The boy who on the corner stands
With open mouth and listless air,
Who in his pockets thrusts his hands,
And shows no signs of thought or care;
Who idly dreams—who rarely works—
Who needful task or duty shirks;
Though kind in manner he may be,
There's much that's lacking—Don't you see?

The boy who will neglect his book
For game of chance, or bat and ball,
For gun and dog, or rod and hook,
Or for a dance—for one or all—
Will find he's made a grand mistake.
Can games the place of knowledge take?
When on the top round he would be He'll find he's lacking—Don't you see?

The boy who smokes a cigarette,
Or drinks with friends a social glass,
Is forming habits to regret,
Whose ills all others ills surpass.
Though solid rock is near at hand,
That boy is building on the sand.
With scoffing mates and boisterous glee,
His course is downward—Don't you see?

The girl who at the window waits
With idle hands and dreamy look;
Who, by her actions, says she hates
The household work of maid or cook!
Who lets her mother work away
While she indulges in a play!
Howe'er refined that girl may be,
There's much that's lacking—Don't you see?

The girl whose recitations show
No earnest work—no careful thought;
Who fails in what she ought to know,
When skillful test of work is brought;
That girl will fail to win the prize—
Will fail while earnest workers rise—
A grand success she'll never be—
There's too much lacking—Don't you see?

When one would build a house to stand,
He builds upon the solid rock.
He takes the best at his command;
He piles the granite, block on block.
No soft, shale rock shall have a place
In inner or in outer face.
Well-tested rock shall polished be
For lasting structure—Don't you see?

Build thou for time—on solid rock,
Give thought and care; build broad and deep.
Then, tempest wild, with rudest shock,
Shall harmlessly around thee sweep.
With knowledge gained, and purpose grand,
The ills of life thou canst command,
From all their pow'r thou shalt be free;
Thy power the greater—Don't you see?

—John M. Morse, in Boston Courier.

TEMPERANCE.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

HOW THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION WAS VIEWED IN OLDEN DAYS.

[An address which was delivered at Saxton's River, Vt., by J. Blanchard, and published in the old Intelligencer September 11, 1830.]

(Continued from last week.)

Having considered this engine of the wrath of heaven in its influence on the pecuniary interests of the community, and on the peace and happiness of society, let us, for a moment, examine its effects on the health and lives of those who partake of it. Here again the truth seems vested in the trappings of novelty. It has been computed, and that, too, with not a possibility of overrating, that 40,000 of the inhabitants of the United States are each year wafted into eternity on this ocean of woe unutterable. Are we disposed to discredit the assertion? Look for a moment on the population from which the 40,000 are supplied. No one is so blind as not to perceive, or so unyielding as not to admit, that those who are in the habit of frequent beastly intoxication, uniformly hasten their doom, and forestall the king of terrors. The number of these souls of wretchedness varies from ten to thirty in each town in

New England; let the average be but ten, and this State contains 2,460, and New England, calling Vermont a mean proportional, 14,760 common drunkards. The State of New York will furnish as many more; and from this moderate calculation, we shall arrive at the conclusion that the confirmed drunkards of the United States are a proportion sufficiently large to furnish its 40,000 victims for yearly immolation on the altar of Bacchus.

But abandoned sots are not the only contributors to this human sacrifice. Hear on this subject the learned Dr. Twichell, president of the New Hampshire Medical Society: "All," he remarks, "who have paid proper attention to the subject, will agree with me in saying that their effect on the human constitution, even when used in a temperate manner, is to dispose to almost every kind of chronic disease; and there is scarcely a chronic disease to be named that has not been produced by their habitual use." And again: "From the attention which I have paid to the subject, in watching its effects on the human system, and in investigating the remote and prominent causes of disease, I have come to the conclusion that more than one-half of the diseases amongst us, especially in adults, have been produced in one way or another by the use of ardent spirits." And is it so? Do the hard times of which our citizens are justly complaining; do poverty, and pauperism, and wretchedness, and woe, and disease, and desolation, spring up around this fountain of livid death, with a rapidity that mocks the prolific increase of the reptiles of venom that swarm around the stagnant, putrid pool? Do the effects we have noticed follow in the train of this essence of despair, with an aspect infinitely more fierce and fearful than the dogs of Russia pursued the devoted army of Napoleon? And do we want arguments to induce us to dash from our lips this chalice of bitterness—this cup swimming with the misery of hell? If so, then have we reason to doubt our sanity; if so, then have we reason to tremble, lest this shall soon be the ill-fated place where, in the language of the poet,

"The starless night of desolation reigns."

If in view of these facts, we can hesitate, not merely to abstain entirely and eternally ourselves, but to give our whole influence to induce others to do so; if we can hesitate to do this, we have the strongest reason to expect this place to become, in the language of Dr. Young,

"Death's capital, where most he domineers,
With all his chosen terrors frowning round;
Wide opening and loud roaring still for more!"

With the effect of ardent spirits I have now done, having, in all the calculations made on this subject, stated so far short of the realities which exist, that incredulity itself must be convinced of the truth of the assertions. And this I have done, fully persuaded that the individual whose philanthropy is not alarmed, whose sympathy is not awakened, at the beholding this vice, demanding from the inhabitants of this town the sum of $4,000, would look coolly on, even if the true cost of this practice should be discovered, which in all probability exceeds double the sum; fully persuaded that he whose spirit is not moved at beholding the anguish of abused mothers, sinking by inhuman degrees from respectability to squalidness and dejection, would still remain quiet and unsolicitous, though each house among us should be converted into a sty of contention; though famine itself, the "meagre fiend" that "blows mildew from between his shriveled lips," should grin with ghost-like countenance, at the multitudes daily subjected to his withering grasp.

As was proposed, I shall now briefly attempt to establish the position that ardent spirits are of no possible benefit, used in any way, or any quantity. And this I conceive will be accomplished if the arguments in favor of their use can be shown to be unfounded and spurious. What then are the considerations urged in justification of this habit? That they must assist in the performance of labor? That doctrine, though clung to by the advocates of distilled liquors with infinite security, has been utterly exploded. No man, who is acquainted with the affairs of our country at all, has the hardihood to allege this as a palliation of his conduct. The lie has been given to this assertion, by experiment and observation, particular and universal. But with an air of triumph I am told, in case of sickness, they are not only necessary, but indispensably so. Hear again the president of the New Hampshire Medical Society: "I am aware," he asserts, "that the celebrated Dr. Rush mentions two cases in which ardent spirits may be administered with safety and advantage. 1st. When the body has been suddenly exhausted of its strength, and a disposition to faintness is induced. 2d. When the body has been a long time exposed to wet and cold. But in the first case, the water of ammonia, or sulphuric ether, will answer every purpose; and in the latter, a cup of warm tea or coffee, and at the same time rubbing the surface with a warm flannel, or bathing in tepid salt water, would be far preferable to the use of spirits." And he adds with emphasis: "In curing diseases, spirits are unnecessary. In every instance, other remedies might be substituted with advantage and perfect safety." Dr. Potter of Portland, after almost sixty years' extensive practice, in answer to the question, how much ardent spirits might be safely used in sickness, replies, "None at all necessary. When the society was formed in Portland, I disliked this exception, as giving toleration to the use of liquors under this pretext." Still some one replies: "From experience I know, to a person who feels a little ill, the use of stimulus affords freedom from pain." Yes, as the huge serpent in the isles of the equator mollifies with slime the victim which is soon to glut its maw.

Another sentiment advanced by those opposed to societies for the promotion of temperance, is this: Such, they say, is human nature, that if ardent spirits were annihilated, still men would be intemperate, and run headlong to excess. The use of tea is adduced as an example establishing this position. This consideration, though often urged with apparent honesty, I apprehend, was never alleged by any individual from any other motive than to silence the upbraidings of conscience, or to escape censure. Indeed, it does not deserve a serious refutation. I only ask the person who makes this objection: Would you not consider him a dolt who, when you should see his child devouring poison, and you should snatch the envenomed vial from his lips, should command you to forbear, because, forsooth, if the child did not swallow the venom it might at some future period endanger his health by too free use of water? Such, and such only, is the force of your objection, admitting the fact that other habits might prevail, equally detrimental to the interests of men, temporal and eternal, with this. But the truth is, the whole universe of God cannot produce another instrument so well adapted to the subversion of human happiness as inebriating liquor. It literally burns up body and soul. The wildest, most infuriated maniac will give indications of pity, when objects of extreme suffering are presented to his view; but the man under a fit of intoxication, while abusing his family, often witnesses the most heart-rending spectacles with a malignant satisfaction, only equaled by that of the prince of darkness when he saw our parents weeping a wretched farewell to the garden of paradise, doomed to a world of trouble and of toil.

But the most frequent objection we hear avowed is, "I can live a temperate man, without joining a society, or wholly abstaining from the use of spirits." So thought every wretch that ever polluted with his infected breath our atmosphere. But, admitting the truth of your assertion, where, I ask, is the philanthropy, where the fellow-feeling, where the public spirit of the man who, because he apprehends no danger for himself, because he imagines he shall steer clear of the vortex of intemperance, will not unite with a society and with all his powers second its exertions, the object of which is, to alleviate the burden of human misery, and to dispel the cloud of disgrace that has so long brooded in ill-omened blackness over this nation, staining its character, threatening corruption to its councils, and ruin, utter and inevitable, to its institutions? Nor is it an objection to the cause of temperance, that many in different parts of the United States, as we learn from the factious character of our papers, and hear every day trumpeted by the loud lip of common report, have yielded to temptation and forfeited their obligations of abstinence. Even this is often affirmed as a reason why individuals do not unite in promoting the cause. But it is only an additional reason why every one who has a heart to fear for himself, or feel for others, should unite with the society, and with assiduous exertion and unflinching zeal, labor to hasten that period when those who will drink can find none of this baleful essence, except in the phial of the apothecary, where it may possibly be of some use as a substitute for arsenic or laudanum. Driven from every refuge, and goaded on by the stings of a diseased appetite, the votary of this liquid death now goes to the Word of God, to find sanction for a practice which peoples hell! Yes, goes to the Word of God, and from it he shall be answered. He finds in the writings of Solomon the expression, "Give strong drink to him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more." But those words were used by the mother of Lemuel, to induce him to abstain from the practice, which now he labors to defend. In the verse preceding, as if holding up examples for his imitation, she says: "It is not for kings to drink, O Lemuel, nor for princes, strong drink;" and then adds: "Give strong drink to him that is ready to perish." As if she had said, "Let rather the woe-begone wretch, whose misfortune or whose guilt has brought him to the borders of the grave, let him partake of the oblivious beverage; but thou, meddle not with it." The advocate for distilled spirits forgets that the strong drink here mentioned was the fermented juice of the grape, no stronger than that of the apple. Yet such is the testimony of Parsons and Fisk, and all who have visited the region of Palestine. Of this kind, also, was the wine the apostle Paul recommended to Timothy; and even then he saw fit to use the restricting word, little. Paul had never dreamt of the simoom about to sweep over the face of the earth,

"Before whose breath earth's blighted charms should fly,
All life should wither and all living die."

(To be concluded next week.)

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON VI.—Fourth Quarter.—November 8.

SUBJECT.—The work of the Holy Spirit.—John 16:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT.—He will guide you into all truth.—John 16:13.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 16:1-15. T.—Joel 2:28-32.
W.—Acts 2:14-21. Th.—1 Cor. 2:9-16. F.—Rom. 8:23-28.
S.—Gal. 5:22-26. S.—John 15:17-27.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The disciples warned.—vs. 1-4. This was not the first time that Jesus had warned his disciples of the persecutions awaiting them, but he had never before entered into such minute detail. They would be put out of the synagogue,—excommunicated; already they had seen one such instance in the blind man. They would be looked upon as renegades and outlaws, the killing of whom would be considered as doing God's service. These things men would do to them because they were ignorant both of the Father and the Son, knowing nothing of the power of the Gospel. Ignorance is the real source of all persecution, and yet persecutors have in every age claimed a monopoly of religious truth. "These things have I told you," etc. When the hour came, what a strengthening cordial to their faith would be the thought of Christ's divine foreknowledge! Knowing all things from the beginning, there could be no failure of his plans and purposes concerning them, and therefore all they had to do was to follow the leadings of his Spirit, however dark and forbidding the way might look to the eye of sense. And let us remember that the same sweet thought is for us as much as for the first disciples; for though we may never be persecuted to the same extent as they, "even unto prison and to death," the fact remains that "all they who will live godly in this life must suffer persecution" in some form or another.

2. The spiritual presence of Christ by means of the Comforter more to be desired than his bodily presence.—vs. 5-11. This is a thought which many of us find it difficult to grasp. To "know Christ after the flesh,"—to be able to touch him, see his face and hear his words, we feel must be the greatest possible privilege; and, like the disciples, it is hard for us to comprehend that through the Holy Spirit we are called to a higher communion with him than through the medium of flesh and sense. How few out of the millions that then peopled the world ever saw Christ! How few, comparatively, could see him now if he was on the earth and subject to humanity's physical conditions! Crowds of people might take long and expensive pilgrimages to catch a glimpse of his face, and many would have to die without the sight. Yet there is not a moment, day or night, that the humblest believer, whether he live in Asia, Africa, or America, cannot have personal communion with Jesus through the medium of the blessed Comforter. "None of you asketh me," etc. None had in direct words pressed him with those eager, intelligent questions that he longed to answer. They shrank from doing so. Their hearts were too full of sorrow and dread. But how much they may have missed, and perhaps the whole Christian Church. When we give ourselves up to fruitless grief, instead of listening to the holy lessons God means to teach us through the ministrations of a great sorrow, we are losing opportunities to grow divinely wise that may never come again. But the Holy Spirit has a two-fold mission. To the disciple he is indeed a divine Comforter; to the world, a convicting power. This was manifested when Peter talked to the people on the day of Pentecost, and they were pricked to the heart and cried, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" The most halting, stammering speech, accompanied by the Holy Ghost, may start a wonderful work of grace; while we may speak with the tongues of men and of angels without him, and our words be like the empty wind. His mission is to "convict" or "convince" the world of three things: First, "of sin, because they believe not on me." Not of what the world considers sin, but that which is really the root and essence of all sin—unbelief. But this would do no good if he did not go farther and "convince the world of righteousness;"—that is, of a remedy for sin in Christ, by whose perfect life and resurrection from the dead, and his exaltation to the right hand of God, there to plead his sacrifice for sinners, they only can be saved. But even this is not enough. He must convict the world of "judgment, because the prince of this world is judged," and his power forever broken by the death of Christ;—the very means by which he hoped to establish his dominion. It would be little comfort to the convicted sinner to tell him of salvation and at the same time leave him under the power of inbred sin; but the Holy Spirit, having convinced him of his lost condition, and pointed him to the cross of Christ, shows him that he can be redeemed not only from eternal death, but he can be fully emancipated from the bondage of Satan, and brought into the perfect liberty of the sons of God.

3. The divine Guide.—vs. 12-15. The disciples received the truths which Christ came to teach, only partially. While he was with them they continued to cling to their erroneous notions of an earthly kingdom; but when he was removed from them, then they understood the things that they could not bear now because still fettered by their Jewish ideas. "He shall receive of mine." The Spirit's mission is to show Christ to us, and thus we may test every revelation. Does it center about Christ, and his mission of salvation? or does it show us another Christ and another Gospel? Then we may know it is from Satan.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AMERICAN REFORMED CHURCH.

—The old Dutch Church of Fishkill, N. Y., has just celebrated another of its memorial days, the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of its organization. This church is among the oldest in the denomination, having been organized in 1716. Its first house of worship was not built until fifteen years later. The historical address, by the Rev. A. P. Van Gieson, D. D., of Poughkeepsie, evinced careful research, great familiarity with the old Dutch language, from which portions had been translated, and was most effectively delivered.

BAPTIST.

—Preparatory to the coming of the new pastor, Rev. O. P. Gifford, work on Immanuel church building, in Chicago, progresses. The main auditorium, it is hoped, will be ready for occupancy by Nov. 15, or at latest by Nov. 29, when the new pastor will be present. The Sunday-school room will be greatly improved.

—Reports to the Iowa State Baptist annual convention show that there has been a large gain this year over any year of the past. In 1887 the receipts were larger than any year then past. They were $5,914.16. In 1888 they were $6,974.69. In 1889 they were $7,628.49. In 1890 they were $8,460.56. In 1891 they are $9,430.96. Sixty-two missionaries have been employed, five of them being district missionaries. Considering the unprecedented strain upon churches in the educational canvass, it is a cause of great gratitude that there is no debt this year.

—The services beginning Sunday, Oct. 11, were of great interest to the Baptist church in Ballston Spa, N. Y. They were held in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of this church. The centennial sermon Sunday morning was preached by Rev. Norman Fox, D.D., of Morristown, N. J.; his father, Rev. Norman Fox, was pastor of the Ballston Spa church for twelve years. The sermon in the evening was by Rev. W. Clark, D.D., of Hightstown.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Second Scandinavian church of Chicago was organized with twenty members Oct. 4 in Doremus Chapel. This church was gathered by Mr. N. N. Bormose, a graduate of the Dano-Norwegian department of Chicago Seminary. The services were conducted by Prof. R. A. Jernberg and Supt. M. W. Montgomery.

—The Ridgeville, Ind., Free Baptist College has been offered to the Congregationalists. Its founder, Rev. John L. Collier, is now pastor of the Congregational church at Huntington, West Virginia. The buildings are in excellent condition and cost $25,000. There is a net endowment of upwards of $20,000.

HEBREWS.

—The magnificent new temple of the Congregation Beth-El at Fifth avenue and Seventy-sixth street, New York City, was recently dedicated with elaborate ceremonies. It is believed that in massive architectural beauty it cannot be surpassed by any of the synagogues of the world; it is, at least, confidently asserted that it is the finest Hebrew temple in this country. Having a frontage of 102 feet in Fifth avenue, and of 150 feet in Seventy-sixth street, its location is commanding, and its exterior is chaste and imposing, being of Indiana limestone, rock faced, and the style Romanesque.

LUTHERAN.

—Christ Lutheran church at York, Pa., founded in 1733, and therefore now 158 years old, and the mother of over 200 Lutheran congregations and over 60 Lutheran ministers, is still vigorous and youthful.

—A new English Evangelical Synod—the "Synod of the Northwest"—has recently been formed. The ceremonies occurred at St. Paul; and the territory embraced in the new Synod will embrace Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. The next session will be held at Duluth, Minn., next June.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—At the Methodist Council in Washington, the privileges and place of women in the church being under discussion, Dr. Hoss began by inviting anybody who had a higher estimate of women than he had to show his face. Whereupon, the speaker came near to being nonplused a whole host of delegates suddenly rising to their feet amid general applause.

MISSIONS.

—The Church Missionary Society of England has just sent out a company of 107 missionaries, fifty of whom go to the foreign field, now, the first time, twenty-nine of these being ladies. Their respective destinations are as follows: Eleven go to North India, nine to the Punjab and Sindh, eleven, five of whom are ladies, to mid-China, three to West Africa, two to Yoruba, eight to Eastern Equatorial Africa, two to Egypt, six to Palestine, one to Persia, four to South India, two to Ceylon, three to Travancore, four to Japan. Others have not been located.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Wisconsin Synod met this year at Racine. The sessions began Tuesday, Oct. 13, and continued for three days. The statistics for the year are: Churches, 161, ministers and licentiates, 152, communicants, 12,233, Sunday-school membership, 17,345, total additions to churches, 1,581, baptisms (?) infants, 600, adults, 284.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—The fourteenth meeting of the Episcopal Church Congress, which will convene in Washington, D. C., November 17th, will be presided over by ex-Senator Edmunds. Among the topics of discussion are Evolution and Theism, Socialism, Relation of the Clergy to Politics, New and Old Parochial Methods, Catholic and Protestant Tendencies in the Life of the Church, the True Policy of Diocesan Missions, Personal Religion.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—The number of curious pilgrims who have gazed upon the "holy coat" of Treves, is stated to be 1,925,130. The coat has been re-inshrined and awaits another foolish generation.—Standard.

—There is now a settled distinction in Italy between the words Vatican and Catholicism, and this distinction exists, less generally, perhaps, between the words Roman Catholic and Catholic. This has become necessary by the events of the past quarter of a century as never before. The State church is the Catholic church, but it is not the Vatican. It is Catholic, but not Roman Catholic. This distinction is constantly prominent in legal enactments, in newspaper discussion, and in the mind of patrician or plebeian, because the Vatican is Italy's political enemy. To be a patriot is almost necessarily to break with the papacy. Leo XIII. yet demands supremacy.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Three men were killed and one mortally wounded by the explosion of the boiler of a locomotive near St. Clair, Pa., Monday evening.

At New York Monday a summons was served on John Hoey, the deposed president of the Adams Express Company, in a suit to recover $700,000 alleged to have been misappropriated.

Mrs. O. A. Burgess, of Indianapolis, Ind., was elected president of the Christian Women's Board of Missions at the session at Pittsburg, Pa., Monday.

In the early part of December the cases of Anarchists Fielden and Schwab, now in Joliet Penitentiary, will be heard by the United States Supreme Court.

Articles of incorporation of the Artificial Rain Producing Company at Goodland, with a capital of $100,000, were filed with the Secretary of State of Kansas Monday. The company expects to produce rain by Melbourne's plan.

George Smith, the Negro who was lynched by a mob at Omaha, Neb., recently, had his back broken in three places and sixteen wounds on his head. Notwithstanding these facts, the coroner testified in court that Smith died of fright.

At Armourdale, Kan., Monday the Allcott Packing Company made an assignment. Liabilities, $100,000. The assets are supposed to be in excess of that figure.

Monday the annual State convention of the Baptist Association began at Bloomington, Ill.

On Monday the Hanover National Bank, of New York; the Commercial National Bank, of Chicago, and the National Bank of the Republic, of Chicago, were appointed reserve agents for respectively the First National Bank, of Batavia, Ill.; the State National Bank, of Logansport, Ind.; and the First National Bank, of Clarion, Iowa.

Spreckel's refineries sold granulated sugar at Philadelphia Tuesday at four cents. Other houses met the cut.

An explosion of natural gas Tuesday morning in the cellar of the building occupied by George Suaman at No. 133 Federal street, Allegheny City, injured five persons, two fatally, and started a fire that caused a loss of $100,000.

The Illinois tax rate was computed Tuesday by Governor Fifer and Auditor Pavey and fixed at 33 cents on each $100.

Attachments aggregating $6,000 were put on the stock of the Snook Glove and Manufacturing Company at Fayetteville, N. Y., Monday. Liabilities, $62,000; assets, $12,000.

Ambrose O. Winters Tuesday was appointed receiver for the lumber firm of Collins Wight & Son, of Dayton, Ohio. Assets, $152,660; liabilities, $58,253.

A woman about 25 years old committed suicide by throwing herself from the top of the Washington monument at Baltimore, Md., Tuesday.

China has reduced the duty on kerosene from 40 to 20 cents a case.

Isaac Marston, ex-chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, is dying at his home near West Bay City, Mich.

Four persons were killed and twenty-three injured in a wreck on the C. B. & Q. R. R. at Monmouth, Ill., Tuesday night. Some one had opened a switch and extinguished the light.

Women of Hiawatha, Kan., tore the posters and lithographs of the London Gaiety Girls from the bill-boards and denounced those who attended the performance as social outcasts.

Fire Wednesday at Louisville, Ky., damaged Hirsch Bros. & Co.'s vinegar works and A. Urbansky's clothing factory $20,000, fully insured; destroyed the Bain Stove Works at Charleston, Ill., causing a loss of $40,000, insured for $14,000, and damaged the Wallabout market at Brooklyn $65,000.

The Kansas World's Fair Board of Managers met Wednesday and issued an address urging the people of the State to subscribe the balance of the $100,000 for the Kansas exhibit. Fifty thousand dollars have already been subscribed.

Near St. Johns, Md., Wednesday, a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train was wrecked by the spreading of the rails. Two were killed and three fatally and one seriously injured.

Frank H. Hooker, of New Haven, Conn., was elected President of the National Carriage Makers' Association at Cincinnati Wednesday. A report was read showing that 336,000 vehicles were built in the ten largest manufacturing cities of the United States in 1889.

Locke & Jewell's carriage factory at Amesbury, Mass., and a machine-shop burned Wednesday. Loss, $90,000; partly insured.

Sylvester Franklin Wilson, of New York, the projector of female base-ball teams, was sentenced to five years imprisonment Wednesday for abducting a 15-year-old girl.

Officers of the Illinois Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias were elected Wednesday at Springfield as follows: Grand Chancellor, Fitch C. Cook, Peoria; Vice Chancellor, C. A. Barnes, Jacksonville; Prelate, Charles Burgoyne, Chicago; Keeper of Records and Seals, Harry P. Caldwell, Chicago; Master of Exchequer, John Gabriel, Chicago.

Testimony was adduced Wednesday in the libel suit brought by Ignatius Donnelly against the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press to the effect that on several occasions Donnelly had accepted bribes while in Congress.

The Illinois F. M. B. A., at Springfield, Wednesday, adopted resolutions demanding the free and unlimited coinage of silver; a graduated income tax; the election of all officers from President to postmasters by a direct vote; the extension of the free mail delivery to the country, and denouncing government subsidies.

Major General Schofield in his annual report to the Secretary of War recommends the reorganization of the army. He also recommends that the enlistment of Indians be continued.

Earnings of Michigan railroads for the first six months of 1891 were $43,033,616, against $42,785,583 for the corresponding period of 1890.

The twelfth general conference of the Epworth League began at Topeka, Kan., Wednesday.

At Natural Bridge, Vt., Wednesday the Forest Hotel burned. Loss, $50,000.

Fire destroyed the Glendale, (Mass.) Woolen Mills Wednesday. Loss $200,000; fully insured. At Castle Rock, Minn., E. T. Archibald & Co's elevator burned. Loss $30,000; partly insured.

Fire Wednesday night destroyed the Minnehaha hotel at Hot Springs, S. D., causing a loss of $52,000, on which there was $14,500 insurance.

NEW FACTORY AT GRIFFITH.

Jay Dwiggin & Co. have just closed a contract with G. G. Williams to locate at Griffith his woodenware factory, working thirty to forty hands. It will be in operation by Dec. 1, 1891. Eight carloads of machinery and material have already arrived, and the construction of his two-story 60 by 80 factory building is under way. The site selected for this factory is just across Junction avenue, west of block 3, Dwiggin's addition, and on the line of the Chicago & Erie and Michigan Central railroads. Contracts have also been let for the erection of a store and boarding-house and residences, and several more will go up soon. Negotiations are now being held with several other manufacturing concerns who contemplated coming to Griffith, where three trunk lines and a belt line offer superior shipping facilities. The two pipe lines of the Standard Oil company also pass through the place. Among the concerns looking for sites at Griffith are a stove and range works, a sash, door and blind factory and two furniture factories.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS.

Do you want an Organ, Telescope, Bicycle, Shot Gun, Safety Rifle, Watch, Silverware, Set of Beautiful Dishes, Sewing Machine, Farmers' Blacksmith Outfit, Sleds, Books, Bibles, etc., etc., the Cynosure can save you money. Rev. T. C. Moffatt, Douglas, Kan., who took advantage of one of our premium offers, writes:—"The watch came to hand all in good order. Mrs. M. says it is a beauty. I do not see it is furnished."

We will also send you one of the best reform papers published. We insert a few of the many letters which come to hand unsolicited speaking of the merits of the paper:

"I am more than pleased with the Cynosure and the way things are moving."—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, N. E. Agent, N. C. A.

"I like it very well, God willing, when I get settled fully in my new field, I will write for the Cynosure."—Rev. Alex. Thomson.

"Please continue to send the Cynosure as it is a very welcome guest in the family—a paper that is sound on all the moral and religious questions of the day—reasoning of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come."—J. H. Cone.

"I had thought sometimes that I would change for the ———— this year, but in warring against any evil, it is safe to keep in use the best implements of warfare, and I think the Cynosure the best."—Geo. McCullough.

"The Cynosure pleases me in every respect. I have taken it from the first—thus it often seems the last paper is the best."—John Hogue.

"The Cynosure is of such value and interest to me that I should feel lost without it."—Dea. J. B. Wells.

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

Peter C Housel.....	$ 2 00
Collection at Elgin.....	1 32
Ira Mettler.....	5 00
Rufus Day.....	4 00
Rev W G Waddle.....	5 00
Holland Church, Mich.....	10 84
A J Mansfield.....	5 00
Rufus Park.....	10 00
Sedgwick Vastine.....	2 00
Previously reported.....	661 99
	<hr/>
	$707 15

For Foreign Fund:

R D Nichols.....	$ 2 00
Previously reported.....	5 00
	<hr/>
	$ 7 00

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

N P Eddy.....	$ 50
Previously reported.....	111 33
	<hr/>
	$111 83

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Oct. 19 to 24:

Mrs M B Park, J Longbridge, E Avery, Rev D Shuck, E M Curtiss, S Alexander, R Stewart, A M Bennett, A H Bennett, T O Patterson, A Lent, S H Moore, Mrs E C Capwell, J Kirkpatrick, Rev J Parker.

BEATTY Pianos, Organs, Bargains. Catalogue free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. ft. made with a pack of 60 splendid silk pcs, each bright color, 25c.; 5 pks $1. Agts. Wanted. Lemarie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

LISTEN Have you written to us yet? If you haven't, you better do so. You don't want to miss YOUR opportunity. Read our illustrated advertisement in the first issue of this month of this paper. MONEY to be made rapidly, by any industrious person of either sex. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 per day. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Can devote all your time or spare time only to it. We instruct and show you how FREE. Easy to learn. We start you. Write and learn all FREE by return mail. Address at once, H. Hallett & Co., Box 1750, Portland, Maine.

FREE BOYS & GIRLS UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE.

Worth $45. If any boy or girl under 18 wants an elegant High Grade Safety Bicycle, (26 inch wheels), worth $45.00 they can obtain it free, without one cent of money. We shall give away, on very easy conditions, 1000 or more. Write for a free bicycle free anywhere in the U. S. If you want one write at once to WESTERN PEARL CO., 234 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The

Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal fate by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London, England.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	94 @ 94 1/2
Winter.....	94 1/2 @ 95
Corn—No. 2.....	55 @ 55 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	29 1/2 @ 33 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	88 1/2 @ 88 1/2
Bran per ton.....	12 50 @ 13 00
Hay—Timothy.....	9 00 @ 11 50
Butter, medium to best....	22 @ 32
Cheese.....	06 @ 11 1/2
Beans.....	1 50 @ 1 85
Eggs.....	17 @ 20 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	75 @ 1 20
Flax.....	86 @ 97
Broom corn.....	4 @ 05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	18 @ 32
Hides—Green to dry flint....	4 1/2 @ 5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @ 13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @ 29
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	6 00 @ 6 50
Common to good.....	3 30 @ 4 00
Hogs.....	3 80 @ 4 30
Sheep.....	2 50 @ 4 75

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 00 1/2 @ 1 07 1/2
Corn.....	65 1/2 @ 67
Oats.....	30 1/2 @ 37
Eggs.....	23 1/2 @ 25
Butter.....	14 @ 32
Wool.....	14 @ 39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @ 5 95
Hogs.....	3 25 @ 4 25
Sheep.....	2 50 @ 4 50

FARM NOTES.

BRIEFS.

The cleaner the land the easier to grow the crop.

Trees will grow where other things will not.

Less ground and more product is a good rule.

Skimming the "last wrung drop" of fat from the milk injures the quality of the butter.

Six or more cows that turn no profit are not as valuable for the dairy as one that does.

The land is the only permanent possession, and that we can occupy only a little while.

If crops are grown in the orchard a corresponding amount of manure should be applied.

Land well cultivated and kept clean year after year has fewer weeds and is easier to cultivate.

Every man makes mistakes. The difference is that some men learn by them, while others do not.

Modern "improvements" in agriculture are due largely to the invention of machinery and tools.

Thorough harrowing after planting corn keeps down the weeds and prepares loose soil for a mulch.

Take pains to destroy all the caterpillars' nests you see, whether on your own grounds or by the roadside.

The facts brought out by the experiment stations ought to be given to the public in clear and terse English.

Remember to use only well-ripened potatoes for seed. This is of more importance than the cutting of the seed.

One ounce of sulphide of potash to four gallons of water will destroy all mildews on plants if they are thoroughly sprayed with the liquid.

Many of the so-called "improvements" of the day have no more intrinsic value than the change of the cut of your garments in accordance with the dictates of fashion.—Mirror and Farmer.

Don't be surprised that you do not get as much cream as your neighbor though your cows are the same breed as his, if yours are on slough pasture and his are on tame grass, fed hay and some grain. Feed has much to do with the quality of milk.

There is quite a difference in trees that have been properly pruned and those that have been allowed to grow too much wood, so far as the thrift of the trees are concerned, as the trees that have been cut back will produce more new wood, send out more rootlets and be in better condition for producing a crop of fruit the next bearing season.

If clover seed is to do anything on an already seeded field it must be sown while the ground is still soft and spongy. It is not advisable where other grass has obtained a foothold, but only on bare spots where the seeding failed. If a little commercial fertilizer is sown with the seed, it will help the catch, as also will a top dressing of manure after sowing, if the manure can be spared.

Clover forms almost a perfect ration for all kinds of stock, and particularly for young animals. For universal American farming it is as well entitled to the kingship of forage and fertilizers as cotton or corn ever was to prominence in crops. Farmers may possibly scratch along without clover, but none should be so unwise as to attempt it. There is no other well-known plant which so completely fills the purpose of forage for stock and fertilizers for the ground.

At one year old the colt should be perfectly gentle, and familiar with the halter, bridle, saddle and the different parts of the harness, and should be accustomed to follow readily when led by either the halter or the bridle, and to stand tied either in company with other horses or alone. A good beginning will now have been made, a foundation laid on correct principles, and what remains to be done, though it is a great deal and very important, will come almost in the eczema, tetter, boils, ulcers, sores, rheumatism, and catarrh, cured by taking

SCROFULA

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It purifies, vitalizes, invigorates, and enriches the blood.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

GAIN ONE POUND A Day.

A GAIN OF A POUND A DAY IN THE CASE OF A MAN WHO HAS BECOME "ALL RUN DOWN," AND HAS BEGUN TO TAKE THAT REMARKABLE FLESH PRODUCER,

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL WITH Hypophosphites of Lime & Soda IS NOTHING UNUSUAL. THIS FEAT HAS BEEN PERFORMED OVER AND OVER AGAIN. PALATABLE AS MILK. ENDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. AVOID SUBSTITUTIONS AND IMITATIONS.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

natural order of things. The colt should be tied occasionally by the side of some old and steady horse in the shafts, at first walking along the road in this way for half a mile or so, says a writer. When this has been done a few times, so that he has become used to the shaking of the harness and the motion of the wheels, the pair may be put to a slow trot on some level piece of road. Under such discipline he will soon learn that he is not to be hurt, while his former experience will not leave him in any doubt as to the necessity of submitting to what is required of him, and thus he will soon learn to regard these movements as quite in the line of his duty.—Western Rural.

When grass is allowed to produce seed it exhausts the soil more than when a crop of hay is cut before the seeds are permitted to appear. When seed heads form the plant has fulfilled its mission, and has stored in the seeds a larger proportion of the mineral elements than remains in the stalks of the plants, in many cases, as the green plants, when cut down early, consist largely of water. A grain crop and a crop of seed from grass deprive the soil of a proportion of all the fertilizing substances existing therein.

Fret not your life away because your hair is gray, while young, as you can stop all grayness and can beautify the hair with Hall's Hair Renewer and be happy.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 13th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandagua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

The Secret

Of the greatness of the Royal Baking Powder lies in the conscientious care employed in its manufacture; in the unvarying strength and purity of its ingredients; in the accuracy with which they are combined; in its assured freedom from every and all improper or detrimental substances.

The Secret of its marvelous success (its sale being greater than that of all other cream of tartar baking powders combined) lies in the wholesome, delicious food its use insures; in its uniform, perfect, never failing work, and in its satisfactory use for a quarter of a century which has won for it the implicit confidence of the public.

Return to the grocer all substitutes sent you for Royal Baking Powder. There is no substitute for ROYAL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

W. C. Sherer and John Nuveen, of Chicago, were elected president and secretary respectively Friday of the Illinois Union of Baptist Young People organized at Bloomington.

Fire, Friday, destroyed the Palouse City (Wash.) Milling Company's mill. Loss, $70,000; partly insured.

The Sherman (Texas) Oil and Cotton Company's gin burned Friday. Loss, $60,000; fully insured.

A government distillery in Gilmore county, Georgia, has been stolen by moonshiners.

Two brakemen were killed and two engineers fatally injured in a collision of freight trains on a branch of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, near Lake City, Iowa, Friday.

Friday the United States Grand Jury, at Sioux Falls, S. D., returned eighteen indictments against officers of the Louisiana lottery.

Commissioner of Pensions Raum says it is not necessary to send pension certificates in making application for increase of pension.

A Texas steer escaped from the stock yards and ran through the streets of Pittsburg Friday, goring five persons, one fatally.

The Anaconda mines and smelters, at Anaconda and Butte, Mont., were re-opened Thursday, giving employment to 3,000 men. The mines had been idle for seven months.

The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the total value of the exports of merchandise during the twelve months ended Sept. 30 was $928,091,136. The value of the imports was $824,715,270.

Diphtheria is prevalent at Danville, Ill.

It is alleged that Senator Leland Stanford, of California, is aiming to secure the Alliance nomination for President next year.

General Walter Bartlett Chapin, of New York, is suing Frank A. Smith and J. T. Ferguson in the Memphis (Tenn.) courts for $79,000 damages for alleged misrepresentations regarding patent rights.

Thursday the trans-Mississippi congress at Omaha voted, 102 to 45, in favor of free coinage of American silver only.

The opera-house and five other structures at Lancaster, Ky., were burned on Thursday. The insurance foots up $26,000.

A collision of freight trains on the Illinois Central near Milan, Tenn., set the adjacent forest on fire. The total loss is $200,000.

Burglars secured $3,600 in stamps, money orders, and cash Thursday from the postoffice at Crookston, Minn.

FOREIGN.

It is announced that a "league of peace" is to be formed including Russia, Servia, Montenegro, Greece, Sweden, Denmark, and France.

Rains are falling in Southern Russia insuring good crops next season.

Reports of damage by floods continue to come from all parts of England.

The official German crop report shows 12,000,000 bushels less rye and 6,000,000 less wheat than in 1890.

The Czar has given 3,000,000 roubles to the famine fund. It is reported that the Russian Government is about to prohibit the export of oats, buckwheat, and millet.

Several lakes near Bangor, Wales, have burst their banks and flooded neighboring slate quarries, throwing 1,000 workmen out of employment.

Influenza is raging in Galicia. Four thousand cases are reported at Lemberg. The disease has appeared in a virulent form in the department of Charent in France.

Siberia is threatened with famine. The starving people have begun rioting in portions of European Russia.

ASTHMA POSITIVELY CURED
By the Swedish Asthma Cure. Sample mailed free. Address COLLINS BROS. DRUG CO., St. Louis, Mo.

A Woman's Company

OWNED AND OPERATED BY WOMEN FOR WOMEN.
Our plan is to establish 100 factories in the United States, with money derived from sale of capital stock. Then we can easily employ 5,000 women, who will earn for us a net profit of $1,180,000 annually, assuming 75 cts. per day to be the net profit for each employe, which is a very low estimate. Our stock, now offered at $25 per share, on a basis of 8% per annum, will then be worth about $365; $25 invested now will, we confidently believe, eventually be worth $365.

WHY WILL IT INCREASE SO MUCH?
BECAUSE we have the only scientific process for canning and preserving food; no poison; no chemicals; never spoils; cooking unnecessary; flavors retained, and it solves the communion wine question by furnishing the pure juice of the grape unchanged at all seasons.
BECAUSE women only are employed in our factories; they are surrounded by Christian influences and paid wages which make them independent. Stock is sold only to women, who will, by their interest in the company, influence grocers to sell our goods, thus benefiting us.
BECAUSE the women running this company are excellent business women (demonstrated by their individual successes), and, with the aid of every Christian woman in the country, are certain to make this the greatest financial success ever accomplished by woman.

Checks for the annual dividends mailed in March to all Stockholders.
Stock sold if desired on monthly payments of $2.50 per share.
All money received after 4,000 shares are sold will be returned to parties sending it, as price is then advanced 20% above par.

HOW MANY SHARES WILL YOU TAKE? THEY ARE $25 EACH, PAR VALUE.
OFFICERS AND COMMISSIONERS.
Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL. Isabella Beecher Hooker, sister late Henry Ward Beecher, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
Mme. Demorest, Pub. Demorest's Magazine.
Mrs. A. M. Dolph, wife of Senator Dolph, Washington, D. C.
Mrs. M. Louise Thomas, Pres. Sorosis Club, N. Y.

Sample sent on receipt of 25 cts. for express charges. No charge for the sample.
This advertisement appears in forty papers this month, and less than 4,000 shares are now for sale. We will reserve any number of shares for you until you have time to investigate. Say how many you want held. Full information sent free.
ADDRESS ORDERS AND MAKE CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO
WOMAN'S CANNING AND PRESERVING CO., 161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
Grocers Supplied by THURBER, WHYLAND & CO., New York, and SPRAGUE, WARNER & CO., Chicago.

All because of PROHIBITION millions of money invested in manufacturing enterprises in millions more seeking locations there now.

HARVEY.

NOW Is the time to secure lots in ACADEMY ADDITION—

BEFORE PRICES ADVANCE.

WE HAVE

the only Plat showing THE WHOLE OF HARVEY as originally proposed, and send it

FREE to all readers of this paper.

UNSOLICITED testimonials come from all quarters.

"It is not often that the publishers of any paper have the opportunity to heartily indorse with full confidence a real estate advertisement. We can do that very thing for the new temperance town of Harvey. We ask the attention of every reader of World-Wide Missions to the advertisement of Walter Thomas Mills & Co."—From World-Wide Missions, July, 1891.

LARGE PROFITS are being made by those who purchase lots. ACADEMY ADDITION HAS THE STRONGEST PROHIBITORY CLAUSE EVER USED IN ANY DEED ANYWHERE, and is near the WORLD'S FAIR SITE.

FREE TRANSPORTATION from our office to all who desire to investigate. Special rates are being made on all Railroads to Chicago Exposition. Large numbers of people are taking advantage of these rates. You do the same, and come direct to our office.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE TICKETS TO THE WORLD'S FAIR.

To the first twenty who read this advertisement through, then cut it out and send it to us asking for our free Griffith holder with full particulars of our

GRIFFITH LOTS FOR $100 AND UPWARD,

Over 600 lots Sold in three months Write to-day

We will send a credit of $10, good on any real estate bought of us. To the next ten we will send a free admission ticket to the World's Fair. Try us and see if we don't do just as we say. Cut this out sure, and you had better send $2 deposit with it to secure the best unsold lot. Balance $4 to $10 monthly. The best lots going fast! WITHIN A SHORT TIME, WHEN THE FACTORIES ARE RUNNING, LOTS WILL BRING FIVE TO TEN TIMES PRESENT PRICES.

GRIFFITH has FOUR RAILROADS ALL NOW BUILT and in operation, crossing in a single acre. You've seen this "starfish" before, haven't you? It is a correct drawing of the railroad tracks now constructed and in use at Griffith.

Three of these are GREAT EASTERN TRUNK LINES—namely, the Chicago & Erie, the Michigan Central and the Grand Trunk.

The fourth road is the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Great Outer Belt Line, encircling Chicago and intersecting TWENTY-SIX OTHER LINES OF RAILROAD, giving Griffith the Chicago rates of freight to and from all points of the world on carload and less than carload lots.

The Standard Oil Pipe Line runs through Griffith, bringing crude petroleum for fuel from the Ohio Oil Fields, supplying it to factories at TWO-THIRDS THE COST OF COAL.

GRIFFITH is the coming GREAT MANUFACTURING SUBURB OF CHICAGO. Now we want to hear from you by return mail. Send your deposit of $2 per lot now by check, draft, express or post order and we will reserve the BEST UNSOLD LOTS FOR YOU. A day's delay may make a great difference in the lots you get, as the best ones are going fast. 300,000 others are now reading this, too!

Say about what priced lots you want. They range from $100 for residence lots to $450 for business lots. Monthly payments from $4 to $10 per lot. We will select good ones. IF YOU ARE NOT SUITED YOU MAY EXCHANGE for any others unsold. We refer to the Columbia National and the Metropolitan National Banks of Chicago, and to the Chicago Real Estate Board. Look us up. Mention Cynosure.

JAY DWIGGINS & CO., 409 Chamber of Commerce, Chicago.

Supplement to the Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1891.

AN OPEN LETTER

TO PROFESSORS IN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES AND PRESIDENTS OF COLLEGES THROUGHOUT THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD.

DEAR BRETHREN:—For many years, here in the United States, secret societies have existed, and at this time they are rapidly increasing in number. Some of these organizations seem to us, in their principles and practical workings, hostile to the home, the church and the state. They appear to be simply modern paganism growing up in the midst of Christian communities. We have for years undertaken to show, from their own publications, that they are religions which deny Jesus Christ, which do not require the abandonment of sin, and which encourage wicked men to hope for life eternal without any change either of heart or life. Some of those whose opinions we value, and whose aid we greatly desire, have felt that we were extreme in the view above stated.

We accordingly, at this time, take the liberty of printing herewith extracts from the Voice of Masonry for October, which seem to us to plainly indicate that our churches must shortly abandon their efforts to secure a male membership, or else teach our young men the actual character of Freemasonry and kindred pagan orders.

We request that you read carefully the extracts herewith submitted, and that you then write to our office, 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Illinois, offering your advice as to what Christian colleges, seminaries and churches should do in view of the prevalence of this order and others constructed on the same lines, and doing the same work.

The italics in these extracts are ours:

Voice of Masonry, October, 1891, page 774: "Are not all the teachings of Masonry as pure and as exalted as those of any religious society which announces itself a 'church,' with a descriptive prefix? If Freemasonry taught its members to avoid church membership, it would teach a grievous error. It should not teach them to prefer any society before itself, either. This committee believes in church membership, and accepts church membership, and advocates the upbuilding of churches. It also believes in lodge membership and advocates the perpetuity of Freemasonry. If any brother will not join a church, then we bid him God-speed in his devotion to the morality inculcated by the Ancient Craft. His soul's welfare is a matter between himself and his God. Labor with brethren to join your church, but do not be disturbed if some refuse your persuasions. Do not exhibit unnecessary clerical sensitiveness; it is your friend who may possibly lose, not you.

Masonry is a religion, handmaiden of Christianity, if you will, but still a religion. The word religion is from religare, to 'bind fast;' not from religere, 'to reconsider.' Masonic symbols, morality, ceremonials and requirements tend to bind the soul fast to God, the Creator and Ruler of the universe. The foundation of all religion is the belief in the existence of God. On that foundation, Masonry is builded. Let us not adopt that nervous dread of sectaries that Masonry may some day attempt to supplant certain forms of worship and thereby deprive us of the comfortable belief that Freemasonry is a religion, and that its ceremonies can be observed on the Lord's Day acceptably to him who appointed that day."

From the same, page 784:—"Religion and Masonry. I differ from those Masonic writers and orators who purposely abstain from mentioning religion in connection with Freemasonry, or who frequently make the statement that there is no religion in our institution. I boldly proclaim with all the force of language at my command that there is religion in Freemasonry. Not the narrow religion of sect or creed, but that broad religion which teaches 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me;' that religion which teaches us from childhood to old age reverently to say, 'Our Father which art in heaven;' that religion which teaches us to protect and preserve the Great Light in Masonry which is given as a 'rule and guide for our faith and practice.'"

From the same, page 774:—"And why not allow lodge meetings on the Christian Sabbath? Masonic lodges are dedicated to God and opened in his holy name. The accepted definition of Freemasonry is: 'A beautiful system of morals, veiled in allegory.' There is nothing in our rituals, known to this committee, that is improper to be used on the Lord's Day; if there was, we would advocate its elimination. Now, why is it improper to open a lodge in the name of God upon his own day, and impart to a seeker after light our instructions in friendship, morality and brotherly love? Can it be a desecration of the Sabbath to teach temperance, brotherly love, relief and truth, while lifting our heart in supplicating prayer to God and reading his Holy Book? If the churches of certain denominations may hold business meetings on the Sabbath, and not be charged with irreverence, why may not Masonic lodges meet on the same day for the purpose of education in morality and brotherly love?"

We publish the above extracts, not because they are different in tone from multitudinous extracts which we might make from Masonic publications, but because they are recent, and are the utterances of Grand Lodge officers of our own time. The lodges are already keeping hundreds of thousands of men out of the Christian church. Their bands of music and excursion-trains clash and roar and thunder over our land and across the broken law of God. Their dancing and drinking are leading their members away, not simply from the church, but from the delights of home and the excellencies which even men of the world ought to attend. They now propose, as you can see, to use the Christian Sabbath for Masonic gatherings; and for years lesser secret orders have appropriated that holy day. We trust that all can see that either this country will become a lodge country—that is, a pagan land—or that we shall return to the religious life of our ancestors, the primacy of the church and the prayer-meeting.

We desire the advice of all the religious leaders to whom this writing may come, as to the best method of warning our young men against these organizations, which propose to help men in business, in time of sickness, in case of violated law, and at the same time to assure them of a home in the grand lodge above.

Will not each one addressed take the time to write to us, at the street and number given below, his opinion as to the duty of the church in the present emergency.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"As to the question of the attitude of Christians toward the secret orders, two or three things seem to me very plain. One of them is this: that the whole movement of things on the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement on the line of Scripture and Christianity."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

"God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and his service, and to the church by depleting her of her male membership, THAN ANY OTHER ONE ENEMY OF CHRIST. There never was a time when the cry, 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Bible Studies, 1889, p. 389.

"I do not see how any Christian, most of all a Christian minister, can go into these secret lodges with unbelievers. They say they can have more influence for good, but I say they can have more influence for good by staying out of them, and then reproving their evil deeds. Abraham had more influence for good in Sodom than Lot had. If twenty-five Christians go into a secret lodge with fifty who are not Christians, the fifty can vote anything they please, and the twenty-five will be partakers of their sins. They are unequally yoked with unbelievers. 'But, Mr. Moody,' some say, 'if you talk that way you will drive all the members of secret societies out of your meetings and out of your churches.' But what if I do? Better men will take their places. Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges the sooner they get out of the churches, the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God, and if only one or two go with us it is all right."—Address by Dwight L. Moody in Farwell Hall, Chicago, 1876.

Of all I wish to say of secret societies, this is the sum:

Secret oaths—

1. Can be shown historically to have often led to crime.
2. Are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to society at large.
3. Are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions.
4. Are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government.
5. Are condemned by the severe denunciations of many of the wisest statesmen, preachers, and reformers.
6. Are opposed to Christian principles, especially to those implied in these three texts:
"In secret I have said nothing."
"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."
"Give no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed."
7. Are forbidden in some portions of our Republic by the civil law, and ought to be in all portions. Many European governments hold Freemasonry under grave suspicion as a mask for conspiracies against throne and altar. In Prussia, Poland, Russia and Spain Freemasonry is prohibited by law.
8. Are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all.—From address of Joseph Cook to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE CHURCH.

PASTOR FISCH, of Paris, 1873:—The church in America must stand as one man against Masonry or be destroyed.

REV. JOEL SWARTZ, D. D., a renouncing Mason:—Its (Freemasonry's) religion is anti-Christian . . . Its prayers are blasphemous. . . Its use of the Bible is sacrilegious. . . The whole is a compound of Judaism and paganism.

MOSES STUART, Professor in Andover Theological Seminary, Mass., 1834:—For a long time I neither knew nor cared about the subject; but recent attention to it has filled me with astonishment; and as to somethings contained in it, with horror. The trifling with oaths and with the awful name of the ever blessed God, is a feature which I cannot contemplate but with the deepest distress.

JOHN WESLEY, June, 1773:—I went to Ballymena and read a strange tract that professes to discover "the inmost recesses of Freemasonry," said to be "translated from the French original lately published at Berlin." I incline to think it is a genuine account. Only if it be, I wonder the author is suffered to live. If it be, what an amazing banter upon all mankind is Freemasonry.—N. Y. Christian Advocate, February, 1884.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL:—I know no Temperance, Odd-fellow or Freemason fraternity that does not recognize a brotherhood with the world. "They are of the world, they speak of the world and the world heareth them." Christians, though in the world, are not of it. Any union, then, for moral purposes with the world that brings us to commune religiously with it, by the laws and usages of the institution itself, is opposed to the law and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

CHARLES G. FINNEY:—God demands and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion.

NATHANIEL COLVER, former pastor Tremont Temple, Boston:—I am free to say that it is my deliberate opinion that the vicious character of Masonry and its guilt-concealing and barbarous oaths are such, as not only to release all from their bonds, but also to lay upon them the solemn obligation to tear off its covering and expose its enormity. I regard it as Satan's masterpiece, a terrible snare to men. It sits at this moment as a nightmare on all the moral energies of our government, and utterly paralyzes the arm of justice.

DWIGHT L. MOODY:—Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges the sooner they get out of the churches the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God and if only one or two go with us it is all right. Do not let down the standard to suit men who love their secret lodges or have some darling sin they will not give up.

HENRY TATEM, an eminent Baptist pastor, Providence, R. I., 1832:—It was about fourteen years ago that I was first initiated into the lodge. Within a few months after, I advanced to the Royal Arch degree, and sometime after I took the degrees of Knighthood, as they are called. I well remember the horror of my feelings when the bandage was taken from my eyes and I found myself partly naked, with men standing around me pointing at me the implements of death, and a human skull was handed me to drink from, and I was required to repeat words, awful in themselves, and which I cannot distinctly recollect, but which I believe to have been the same I find given in the explanation of that ceremony in Bernard's Light on Masonry. From that time I absented myself from the lodge and chapter. My mind was afterwards led by degrees to an examination into Masonry, which I am now satisfied is repugnant to the spirit of the religion of Christ.

JOSEPH COOK:—I do abhor the selfish, clannish spirit of secret societies.

WILLIAM OTTERBEIN, founder of the church of the United Brethren in Christ:—A Freemason cannot be a Christian.

BISHOP WARBURTON:—Each of the heathen gods, beside the worship paid to him in public, had a secret worship to which none were admitted but those who were prepared by previous ceremonies.

RICHARD S. STORRS, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn:—My judgment and feeling are both strongly opposed to the secret lodge system. I heartily agree with what Dr. Howard Crosby has so forcibly said about it.

CARDINAL McCABE, Dublin:—Secret societies, which seem to possess a fatal charm for our people, have from time to time drawn thousands of misguided youths within the fatal circle from which there is no escape.

REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG:—Among the various stratagems of Satan in opposition to God and holiness, and for the purpose of destroying the souls of men, the institution of speculative Freemasonry holds a pre eminent rank.

HENRY G. LUDLOW, pastor Spring St Presbyterian Church, New York, 1829:—I can hardly think that any candid and intelligent Master Mason can seriously assert that Masonry should be kept up. For my own part I have ever been disgusted with its nonsensical ceremonies, and ashamed of myself for submitting to them.

GEORGE F. PENTECOST, D. D., pastor of Tompkins Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, editor of "Words and Weapons":—I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the "grip" of Masonry and all other secret and unchristian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence.

H. L. HASTINGS:—Freemasonry is the one institution of this country that will not bear investigation. Schools are inspected; churches throw their doors open and invite the strictest scrutiny; political parties are examined, searched and ridiculed if anything like corruptness is seen or suspected in connection with them; all these institutions simply ask a fair field and no favor.

REV. J. E. ROY, D. D., Secretary American Missionary Association:—A man is not fit to be a jurymen who has taken these Masonic oaths and holds to them. Such a man is not competent to be a constable or a justice of the peace. He has disqualified himself practically and really, for he has by these oaths perjured himself for the one side or the other, and so is unable to do justly in his official relation between man and man.

REV. JAMES H. BROOKES, D. D., editor of the "Truth," and pastor of Washington Avenue Presbyterian church St Louis:—It would give me pleasure to aid you in your work of seeking to bring Christians out from entangling alliances with secret societies. It seems to me that the positive injunction of the Holy Ghost, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," applies particularly to those disciples of our Lord who have been led into such societies.

THE BISHOP OF BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND:—Freemasonry is built upon the basis of a natural religion having for its foundation the honor and worship of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, but excluding the divine Incarnation and the mysteries of human redemption. Whilst using the sacred Scriptures, as Freemasonry it ignores the divine doctrines of the Christian faith. Pretending to a special and progressive illumination, it resembles, and through several of its writers even claims descent from the secret societies of Pagan Egypt, Greece and Samothrace.

REV. HENRY JONES:—On what then does the whole superstructure of Freemasonry rest but a base fabrication of wicked men, who in some dark and apostate age of the world, have risen up, united into a secret society and darkly handed down their inventions to flatter us to believe that their institution is good as having originated among wise and good men; and being ignorant of the manner in which their false pretensions would be exposed, have told us that it was established on certain specified facts and events, which by looking at them carefully, and comparing them with our Bible, we find never had existence?

CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH:—Whosoever worship is paid to any but God is paid to devils.

PETER CARTWRIGHT:—Masonry originated with the devil and will end with the devil.

BISHOP DAVID EDWARDS:—Membership in such societies is deserving of the discipline of the church, in the case of any of her own members, who, after due admonition, persist in clinging to their fellowship.

DR. WM. PALEY, the author and philosopher:—Promises are not binding when the performance is unlawful. When the promise is understood to proceed upon a certain supposition, and that promise turns out to be false, the promise is not binding.

DAVID R. KERR, D. D., editor of the United Presbyterian:—How can any man in good conscience swear to keep secret what, for anything he then knows, ought to be exposed? How can any man in good conscience swear to obey a code of laws yet unknown to him, and what for anything he knows, may be in conflict with the law of God? Such oaths are in their very nature essentially immoral.

REV. M. W. FAIRCHILD, Plymouth church, Lansing, Mich., address published by Genesee Congregational conference:—These secret societies tend to weaken Christian fellowship, and diminish interest in church institutions, church services and church work. The lodge not infrequently entirely supplants the church. The testimony to this effect is overwhelming. The very nature of these orders necessarily damages church fellowship.

REV. J. T. COOPER, D. D., Philadelphia:—I wish to set before your mind, the glaring inconsistency in which professing Christians involve themselves when they become members of the society of Masons or Odd-fellows. Nothing is more sure, nothing is more susceptible of a demonstration, than that the religion of these societies rises no higher and extends no further than simple deism. They have no Christ, no mediator, not even in their prayers.

NATHANIEL EMMONS, D. D.:—I am convinced by the highest and most irresistible moral evidence, that the Masonic institution itself is the darkest and deepest plot that ever was formed in this wicked world against the true God, the true religion, and the temporal and eternal interests of mankind.

The Library of Universal Knowledge says of Dr. Emmons, who was one of the greatest of the Congregational clergymen: "When Masonry was popular he zealously opposed it."

REV. JAMES WILLIAMS, renouncing Mason and presiding elder M. E. Church, 1875:—While Christianity has its hundreds of institutions of charity and education, yet with all its boasted age you may travel from Maine to Oregon, from Dakota to Florida, from Palestine to North America, from Asia over the islands of the Pacific to Great Britain, and not find one home for the friendless, one orphanage, one asylum for the poor, or one hospital for the afflicted built or sustained by Masonic charities.

REV. WM. DELOSS LOVE, D. D., Milwaukee, report to Presbyterian and Congregational convention of Wisconsin:—Now if Masonry neither had, nor claimed to have a religion, we should have nothing to object on that point. But since it does claim to offer to men the true religion and the way to heaven, we have decidedly to say, that the society that fellowships in religion alike the heathen Chinese, the Mohammedan Arab, the American pagan savage, and the nominal Christian, is not itself Christian, does not illustrate the Christian religion nor show the way to heaven.

REV. JOHN MARSH, D. D., of the National Temperance Society, New York:—Secret temperance organizations are but stepping-stones. Young men here learn the language, forms and degrees of a temperance Masonry; and while they gather weekly in a secret lodge for, as they say, business, improvement and enjoyment, they easily slide into the more artful, deistical and dangerous Masonry, which has once and may again fill us with terror and give us blood to drink. From such a connection we say, the Lord deliver us. We plead with our temperance brethren to look at their responsibility, and at once cut loose from all connection by abandoning everything pertaining to secrecy.

ALBERT BARNES, 1849:—Any good cause, I think, can be promoted openly; any secret association is liable, at least, to abuse and danger.

REV. THOMAS H. STOCKTON, D. D.:—Religion is as open as the sky and bright as the sun. As a man, an American, and a Christian, I love true manhood, true Americanism and true Christianity too well to approve of secret institutions of any kind.

L. L. HAMLINE, Bishop M. E. church, in his diary, 1848:—"North Ohio Conference has progressed very rapidly till this time, but Masonry and Odd-fellowship have arrested us." At another time: "I have enjoyed and suffered much during its session. Masonry and Odd-fellowship, a bane in the midst of us, have done us much evil."—Life, pp. 323, 4.

A. M. MILLIGAN, D. D.:—Thus I have shown that Masonic oaths and obligations are not obligatory; that God has no part in them; that they are a profanation of his ordinance of the oath, and a usurpation of the prerogative of government under the wrath of an insulted God and the ban of outraged society: a great sin to make them but no sin to break them.

REV. J. P. LITTLE, D. D.:—We could fill a volume with extracts of the same tenor, showing, as these have shown, that Freemasonry is a distinct and positive religion with a promise of salvation; yet rejecting and denying the Lord Jesus; a religion which claims to have borrowed its principles and rites from those heathen institutions so abhorrent to God and corrupting to men.

REV. JOSHUA BRADLEY, a renouncing Mason:—A lying spirit is abroad, and speaks through all Masonic presses, and this spirit influences all who hate the truth, and will make them wax worse and worse, till sudden destruction shall overwhelm those workers of iniquity, to the astonishment of every beholder. Then Masonry will rise no more to trouble Zion, and spread delusion and death amid civilized nations.

C. B. WARD, missionary in India:—When men get saved out here they get out of the lodge of necessity. We are personally acquainted with a barrister, a doctor, a locomotive fireman, a station-master on a railway, a principal of a high school, a commissary officer, a military officer, and others who when saved at once quit the lodge for Christ's sake without any one saying much to them. The evil of the institution is too apparent to need pointing out in India.

JOSEPH S. CHRISTMAS, Pastor Bowers Presbyterian church, New York, 1830:—If these remarks should meet the eye of any follower of the Redeemer who still worships at the altar of Masonry, I beg him once more to consider whether, imposed on by the mock solemnities of the lodge and the pompous pretensions of the craft, he is not really attempting to effect a concord between Christ and Belial; and whether he does not owe it to the souls of Masons, to the honor of the church of Christ, and to the good of mankind, to come out and be separate.

DRS. LEONARD WOODS, EBENEZER PORTER AND THOMAS H. SKINNER, Professors at Andover to the Massachusetts Legislature:—Praying for a full investigation into the nature, language, ceremonies, and form of rehearsing extrajudicial oaths in Masonic bodies; and if found to be such as the Memorialists describe them, that a law may be passed prohibiting the future administration of Masonic, and such other extrajudicial oaths, as tend to weaken the sanctions of civil oaths in courts of justice; and pray also for the repeal of the charter granted by this Commonwealth to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

REV. MOSES TATCHER:—Our Saviour declared to the Jewish high priest, "I spoke openly to the world; and in secret have I said nothing." What now would be thought of the church if she should "tyle" her doors, impose obligations in secret, and place a perpetual seal upon the lips of her members? Would it any longer be believed that her sole object is to promote the religion of the Gospel? Now if the church, which is the purest body on earth, could not and would not be trusted as a secret society, who can blame conscientious and judicious men for drawing the conclusion that any secret society, of whatever description, is altogether unnecessary and cannot exist without becoming an object of suspicion, if not an engine of wickedness.

CHARLES C. FOOTE:—What would the introduction of Christ into Mohammedanism be, but its annihilation? And thus would it be with Masonry.

REV. JOHN TODD, Pittsfield, Mass.:—Unhesitatingly I give my decided disapprobation of what I deem secret societies in college and elsewhere. I have never known any good results from them which could not have been attained in some other more appropriate way, and I have known great evils resulting from them.

HOWARD CROSBY, Chancellor University of New York, 1870:—We have no hesitation in writing secret societies among the quackeries of the earth.

Idem, 1886:—The secret lodge system belongs to despotisms and not to democracies. Whatever in it is not babyish is dangerous.

REV. MATTHEW L. R. PERRINE, D.D., Auburn Theological Seminary, REV. JOEL PARKER and REV. CHAUNCEY EDDY:—Having formerly associated with Freemasons, we deem it our duty, publicly to declare that the system of Freemasonry is in our judgment, of a tendency on the whole pernicious to the moral habits, and dangerous to the civil and religious institutions of our country.

REV. LEVI CHASE, Fall River, Mass.:—The question has been asked by Masons, who wish to asperse the characters of those who have renounced Masonry, "Why did not they renounce it before?" For one, I will give them the reason why I did not. The Masonic oaths locked my tongue in silence—death, in all its horrid shapes and frightful forms, stared me in the face—I considered the oaths binding.

REV. C. D. BURLINGHAM, in history of the Genesee M. E. Conference, 1860:—This new element of discord (Odd fellowship) began to introduce itself in our church, professedly as a mutual insurance company against temporal want, and a newly discovered and remarkably successful Gospel appliance for bringing the world, reformed and saved into the church. But our people very naturally looked upon it with suspicion, dreading its power as a secret agency acting through affiliated societies, and doubting its utility as a financial scheme. They feared it would drag the church, debased and corrupted, into the world.

REV. JOEL MANN, a renouncing Mason:—Although portions of the Gospel are interwoven with its forms, I conceive that Masonry presents false grounds of hope; leads men to depend on their own defective righteousness;—to expect the favor of God without the interposition of a Redeemer, and even without repentance; and thus has a most injurious influence on their eternal interests. Under the most favorable circumstances, which in any place, have attended Masonry, it has occasioned a great waste of time and money, which might and ought to have been employed for better purposes. And furthermore, it interferes materially with domestic religious duties.

REV. AARON LELAND, formerly Lieut. Governor of Vermont and Deputy Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge (to a Baptist association):—He stated that the first objection which presented itself to his mind was the practice of praying for the soul of a brother Mason after he had been dead two, three, and sometimes four days—that he persisted in the practice for a short season to the injury of his conscience—that it was a Romish custom, and he never would preach at the burial of a Mason when Masonic forms and customs were attended to—that he never would preach to a lodge of Masons as such, and that he was ashamed that he had ever participated in the principles and practices of the institution.

ELDER DAVID BERNARD:—I solemnly renounce all fealty to Masonry, and do most earnestly beseech my brethren in Christ Jesus, of every name, to come out and bear unequivocal testimony against it. Think, O think, dear Christians, that hundreds and thousands of precious and immortal souls will be lost forever, unless they return and repent, but that the name of the precious Jesus is rejected, your Saviour, your precious and adorable Saviour taken away—the cause of your bleeding Redeemer injured—the hands of the wicked strengthened, and the Almighty God dishonored! And O, let me entreat you in the mercy and bowels of Jesus Christ, to reflect that you have to answer for the blood of those who shall find also, when it shall be forever too late, that Masonry is not a Saviour!

PRES. E. F. REID Ohio Central College.—We believe secret societies to be anti-republican as well as anti-Christian.

REV. A. L. CHAPIN, D. D., Beloit.—It has been the uniform policy of Beloit College to exclude secret societies.

REV. JOHN G. STEARNS, well-known author:—Masonry will by no means die of itself; nor will it separate itself from the church of God. No; it will cling to it, like the deadly scorpion to the victim on which it fastens. The church must therefore separate from that.

REV. JUSTIN EDWARDS, D. D., author and head of Andover Seminary:—Whenever the cause of temperance is veiled in darkness and secrecy, it must lose its hold on the public confidence and sympathy.

REV. M. BENNETT, long presiding elder M. E. church—I am pleased to be counted in for the movement which is being inaugurated against tyrannical organizations and factitious distinctions in society.

DR. THOMAS SCOTT, the great commentator:—Rash oaths are above all things to be avoided; but if men are entangled by them, they ought rather to infringe the sinful oaths than to add sin to sin and ruin to their own souls.

REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN, editor of "Our Banner":—Through such silence, secret connivance and horrid oaths "ever to conceal and never reveal," the state of our country is rapidly becoming such as to alarm every Christian philanthropist.

REV. B. T. ROBERTS, editor of the Free Methodist:—For us to keep silent respecting Masonry, and thus tacitly endorse the idea that a man can both accept Christ and deny him—that is, be a good Mason and a good Christian at the same time, would be treason to Christ.

JOHN G. FEE, Brea College, 1868.—It is Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and kindred associations that have spawned and now lend respectability to "Regulators," "Ku Klux Klans," and other bands of midnight assassins now ranging through Kentucky and other portions of the South.

REV. J. P. LITTLE, D. D.:—Masonry has damned all who ever trusted in it for salvation. It is now leading away thousands from the church, and from paths of virtue by association with the intemperate, unclean and profane, and is dragging them down the road which leads to the chambers of eternal death.

REV. EDWARD BECHER, D. D.:—If on such anti-Christian grounds, prayers are framed, rites established and chaplains appointed, ignoring Christ and his intercession, God regards it as a mockery and an insult to himself and his church. In it is revealed the hatred of Satan to Christ. By it Christ is dethroned and Satan exalted.

REV. W. W. PATTON, D. D., 1869:—However secret societies may differ among themselves, yet they are all anti-republican in their tendencies; and are all leading to the same results, viz., a substitution of worldly and selfish innovations for moral and religious influences, and, ultimately, to the theoretical and practical neutralization of Christianity.

REV. JAMES H. FAIRCHILD, D. D., Pittsburg address:—The point is not that the working of a secret organization may be perverted to selfish ends, but that in its very nature it strongly tends to such perversion. A worthy institution may be perverted, but an institution in which the tendency to perversion is inherent and constitutional, is not a good institution.

REV. DR. JAMES B. WALKER, author of "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation".—There is probably not one in a thousand who enter the lodge, who know, when blindfolded they take the terrible oaths, that Masonry is an anti-Christ and one of the most powerful enemies of Christ that exists. But this is put beyond the possibility of a doubt by the highest Masonic authorities.

REV. NATHAN BROWN, Editor "Am. Baptist" and missionary to Japan.—If Freemasonry had existed in the days of Christ, and in the same form that it exists with us, he could not have condemned it more distinctly than he did in his Sermon on the Mount: "If ye do good to them that do good to you, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans the same?" The Gospel is at war with every system of clique or clan, caste or combination that seeks to create distinctions in the human family.

BY THE MOST EMINENT EDUCATORS.

PRESIDENT F. H. M. HENDERSON Bowdon College, Ga.:—I regard all secret societies as extremely liable to be perverted.

PRESIDENT NOAH PORTER, Yale College:—That there are serious evils connected with them cannot be questioned; that they accomplish some good is equally clear.

PRESIDENT HITCHCOCK, Amherst College:—These, at different periods, have been fruitful sources of excitement, jealousy, and heart burning among the students.

JOSEPH MOORE, President Earlham College:—The fact that Freemasonry often thwarts every effort to enforce the law against an offender who is of the fraternity, shows it to be an obstacle to moral and civil progress.

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D., Chancellor University, New York:—Thirty years ago I was a member of a college secret society, and while I had upright fellow-members, and we encouraged literary culture, I found the association was chiefly a temptation to vice.

PROF. J. R. JACQUES, Illinois Wesleyan University:—Among college students, at an age when most susceptible, secret societies tend to breed that secretive disposition which is the very opposite of the truly candid, generous, and magnanimous character.

DR. BEYS HLAG, Professor in the University of Halle:—Never entertain the idea to join the lodge for popularity's sake. It is utterly degrading to imagine pastors, men who have to deal with Christianity, the most universal and open thing in the world, wrapped up in the mummeries of Freemasonry.

PRES. J. BLANCHARD:—There have been civil and ecclesiastical pests ever since there was a government and religion; and Freemasonry is one of those pests. The Gains of humanity have rejected Christ and worshiped nature, and Nimrods have denied justice and practiced oppression. But both are combined in the lodge.

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D. D., Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary:—But my strongest opposition to Masonry is because of its rivalry with religion. It steps in before the church, and is a false, an idolatrous religion, a religion without a Saviour and, therefore, a delusion and a snare to all who engage in it, or rest their hope upon it.

PROF. BURT G. WILDER, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.:—I am willing to hazard my position . . . upon the truth of the proposition that secret societies are unknown in heaven, but that they form a prominent and essential feature of life in the other locality. Light versus darkness; openness versus mystery; mutual confidence versus suspicion and distrust.

PROF. S. C. BARTLETT, D. D., Chicago Theological Seminary:—There are certain other wide spread organizations, such as Freemasonry, which, we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God.

PROF. J. G. CARSON, D. D., Xenia, Ohio:—These associations are inconsistent with the genius of Christianity, because the secrecy which they affect, and to which they bind their members by promise or oath, is unnecessary and so unwarrantable, dangerous, and ensnaring to the conscience, and, therefore, utterly opposed to that openness and publicity which Christ enjoins on his disciples both by example and precept.

PRESIDENT C. G. FINNEY, of Oberlin, 1868:—We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. In our judgment we are forced to the same conclusion, we cannot escape from it, we wish it were otherwise, we therefore sorrowfully but solemnly pronounce this judgment.

REV. WM. M. BROOKS, Pres. Tabor College.—Our faculty is a unit in opposition to secret societies, not excepting those formed for literary culture.

PRES. L. H. HAMMOND, Lebanon Valley College.—My conviction is firm that the influence of Freemasonry is baneful in whole and in part; that, religiously, it is a stumbling block; and that, socially and politically, the benefaction it offers to one is a robbery of others.

PRES. E. K. HILL, Washington University.—I have long regarded the secret conclaves as unnecessary to any good cause, and dangerous from their irresponsibility. Especially do I think that Freemasonry, from its nature, record and prevalence, is an enemy to the political purity and social morality of our country.

PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D. D., Geneva College.—No man can, at the same time, be a lover of Christ or a Christian, and a sworn member of a Christ-dishonoring and disowning fraternity, provided he know the true character of that fraternity. No man can be innocent in going into such a fraternity without knowing its true character.

PRESIDENT J. H. FAIRCHILD, Oberlin:—The tendency to organize in secret bodies, political, social, religious and literary, seems to indicate distrust of the ordinary institutions of society, and will surely generate the distrust from which it seems to spring. The very idea of a secret combination implies a barbarous age, or a state of social anarchy in which such arrangements are necessary for safety. There is no place for it in a Christian civilization.

REV. JOSIAH BRADLEY, Principal of Rock Spring Seminary, Illinois, 1829:—Masonry is a human, and cunningly formed system of deception. Is it not rightly named "Speculative Freemasonry?" Millions have been drawn within its veil, and led away captive by its false pretensions and exhibitions of morality, charity and brotherly love. And many may still rejoice for a season in their delusions, despise reproof, and perish without remedy.

PRES. L. N. STRATTON, D. D.:—One other fact worth naming is, that the oaths and secret workings of Freemasonry are out and well known to the world. They are published in the reports of several State legislatures, and in Wendell's Supreme Court Reports of the State of New York, Vol. XIII, pp. 9-26. Their oaths are no less murderous than those taken by the Mollie Maguires, for obedience to which latter twenty-one have been tried and hung in the State of Pennsylvania.

LEONARD WOODS, D. D., Professor in Andover, 1829:—Now I have never seen or heard of any evidence, of any kind or degree, in support of the pretended antiquity of Freemasonry; and I suppose the same is true of all others. What then can we do, consistently with reason and common sense, but to withhold our belief. As to probable evidence; it would be very proper to inquire, whether it can be reconciled to the acknowledged character of Solomon, and of the twelve apostles to suppose, that they belonged to a society, established on the principles and practicing the rites of Freemasonry. If these principles and rites are what the community at large understand them to be, and what Freemasons themselves understand them to be, an answer to this inquiry would be no very difficult thing.

PRES. TIMOTHY DWIGHT, D. D., in a Fast Day Sermon, Yale College.—These [the doctrines of Illuminism] were: that God is nothing; that government is a curse, and authority an usurpation; that civil society is the only apostasy of man; that the possession of property is robbery; that chastity and natural affection are mere prejudices, and that adultery, assassination, poisoning and other crimes of a similar nature are lawful and even virtuous. A large branch of the Masonic Societies in Germany and France had already adopted the same objects, as the great and controlling ones of all their personal and united labors. Here secrecy furnished the most advantageous opportunities for the formation of every design and the most advantageous opportunities for its successful execution.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

BY THE MOST EMINENT EDUCATORS.

PRES. THOMAS HOLMES, Union Christian College.—I am the uncompromising foe of secret societies in any form whatever.

REV. JAMES W. STRONG, D. D., Pres. Northfield College.—We do not favor secret societies; hope there will never be one in this institution.

REV. P. M. BARTLETT, D. D., Maryville College.—I believe that secret societies, generally speaking, are fraught with mischief and should be discouraged, especially in our institutions of learning.

PRES. JOSEPH MOORE, Earlham College.—The fact that Freemasonry often thwarts every effort to enforce the law against an offender who is of the fraternity, shows it to be an obstacle to moral and civil progress.

REV. ALEX. BURNS, Pres. Simpson Centenary College.—Although a Mason myself, I have not a very exalted notion of the importance or influence of Masonry. In fact I don't see much necessity of secret societies of any kind.

REV. S. B. ALLEN, D. D., Westfield College.—Deeming them (especially those best known) injurious to all the best interests of mankind and destitute of all moral right to an existence, we cannot but pray and labor for their overthrow.

PRES. A. M. WESTON, Eureka College.—No human institution has the right to exact oaths. Even the church has, formally, none, and civil governments, if they require them, can only do so because they themselves are ordained of God. Freemasonry has no such right, having no divine origin.

PROF. BASCOM, Williams College.—Bind not the corrupt to your very bosom with bonds of secrecy, and hope to escape their influence. That breath of pollution, the breath constantly on you, which you draw into the seats of life as if it were air, is malaria, ready to creep stealthily through soul and body.

PROFESSORS EDWARDS A. PARK, ABNER PHELPS, E. P. BARROWS and EGERT SMYTHE, Andover Theological Seminary, to the American Tract Society, Boston, 1865:—Asking for "a judicious and carefully prepared tract, tending to dissuade the members of the churches of Christ from joining secret societies."

REV. E. H. FAIRCHILD, D. D., Berea.—Secret societies are of two kinds, those which aim to secure special and unequal advantages for their members, in social, civil, political and business relations; and those which seek to promote some moral, social, or political reform. The first among which Freemasonry is the most prominent, we regard as selfish in their nature and essential aim, and hence antagonistic to the Christian religion.

HORACE MANN, the American apostle of Education.—Why do all languages ascribe an open countenance to a brave and high-souled man, but a close, shy, disguised, secretive one to villains? To what class do the secretive animals belong—the fox, the tiger, the cat, the snake? Should brutes imitate men as in Belp's time, would not those form the secret societies? . . . Where do gamblers live? Where do counterfeiters ply their trade? Where does licentiousness breed its pollutions? Do these seek daylight, the open street, the market place, the common resorts of virtuous men? No, they all belong as by the tie of natural affinity, to the order of secret societies.

REV. RANDALL ROSS, Pres. Lincoln College, Mo., 1873.—Take the report of the Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows for the year from which it appears their revenue amounts to $4,291,071.12. Of this sum only $1,503,471.40 has been spent in "relief and charity." Only about one third of their revenue is thus expended annually. This leaves an immense sum of money unexpended by the order every year, which must in a few years become a dangerous power in the hands of the order. And this is but an illustration of all the secret orders of the land; and hence we look upon the power of such an immense amount of money in the hands of a power whose workings are in the dark, in secret, as far more dangerous to the financial affairs of the country than all our much talked about railroad monopolies.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley:—I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals.

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

Philo Carpenter:—This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being "ensnared"

Hon. Heman Lincoln, ex-Governor, Mass.:—Freemasonry, as a distinct, independent government within our own government, and beyond the control of the laws of the land, by means of its secrecy and the oaths and regulations which its subjects are bound to obey under penalties of death, has occupied much of the attention of the committee. . . . We believe, in the language of the Edinburgh Review, that all secret societies are justly deemed odious, wherever the government is tolerably free, and can only be excused where the existence of arbitrary power, foreign or domestic, leaves no other means of escaping from hopeless slavery.

Gen. Henry Sewall, a companion of Washington:—I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this "perfect rule of faith and practice," during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religious deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsustainable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and infamous.

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, perceiving law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation.

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant:—All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together.

Myron Holley of New York:—"Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind"

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Abolitionist:—Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed.

William H. Seward: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thadæus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merrick (a seceded Mason):—If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state; and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be "torn from his bosom," his "vitals plucked from his body," and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be "burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds."

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883:—"There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion," all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, "In secret have I said nothing."

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that "a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon."

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an even letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

Hon. Ezra Butler, ex-Governor of Vermont:—One Masonic obligation requires that a Mason shall vote for a brother in preference to any other person of equal qualifications. Is not this political Masonry? The Masons in Vermont are about one-twentieth part of the freemen, and they hold about three-fourths of all the important offices in the State. Is this owing to their superior fitness, or to political Masonry?

Horace Greeley:—Many persons were brought to trial on account of the murder of Morgan, but no one was judicially found guilty of murder. It was established by seeing Masons that the oaths—at least in some of the highest degrees—that were administered, and taken by those admitted to Masonic lodges, disqualified them from serving as jurors in any case where a brother Mason of like degree was a party, and his antagonist was not.

Hon. Cadwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.:—It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason.

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction I heartily approved the law, lately enacted in the State of which I am a citizen, for abolishing all such oaths and obligations."

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 8.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,123.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
Notes and Comments.... 1	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
The Farmers' Alliance... 8	REFORM NEWS:
The Tenacity of Error... 8	From the New England
Administer on Your Own	Agent; Bro. Hinman
Estate..... 8	in Wisconsin; Bro Fen-
Lodge Malevolence..... 9	ton at the East; The
CONTRIBUTIONS:	Washington Agent in
The Farmers' Alliance... 1	New York..... 4,5
The Foe We Fight—III... 2	LITERATURE..... 6
Satan Worship..... 3	LODGE NOTES..... 7
SELECTED:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
Secret Temperance Or-	THE N. C. A..... 7
ders Among the Col-	The Wisconsin Christian
ored People..... 3	Association Conference 9
The Secret Societies in	THE HOME..... 10
China..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
The Kansas Alliance... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
CORRESPONDENCE:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Revelation and Secret So-	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
cieties; Ronayne on Ro-	MARKETS..... 13
nanne Et Al; Progress	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
of Reform in Boston... 5,6	FARM NOTES..... 15

A Roman priest in St. Louis, known as "Father Powers," has had the temerity to publicly state (in substance) that the parochial schools of his church do not meet the requirements of modern progress, or turn out broad, liberal, and fully fledged American citizens. This opinion has led to a good deal of indignation on the part of the church authorities, and there are rumors that they will make it unpleasant for him if he refuses to retract, or properly explain his position. Any one acquainted with the advantages of the free school system, as compared with private primary or grammar schools, or those controlled by sectarian influences, must confess that the former, if properly managed, is in every way the most beneficial, as best reaching the masses and educating them in the practical, intellectual demands of the present age.

Rev. H. H. Hinman has undertaken to deliver anti-secrecy lectures at Roseland, Aurora, and Wyand, this week, previous to attending the Illinois State Conference at Galesburg, next week. Let him be heartily welcomed.

The Lutheran pastoral conference of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania was recently held at Zelienople, which has been a stronghold of that denomination since 1826, and where the old stone church erected in that year is still standing. The brethren, on this occasion, also celebrated the twenty-fifth year of the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Butz over this Zelienople church. On the first day the conference, with considerable spirit, discussed the question whether members of secret societies should be admitted to the communion of the Lutheran church, and finally adopted the following declaration: "1. The sacrament of the altar, being the Lord's Supper, God's Word alone decides who is to be admitted to communion, and to this the pastor's conscience is bound in all cases. 2. Lodges, which in their principles, forms of service and usages deny Christ, are contrary to the Gospel, ungodly and anti-Christian."

The Catholic Review states that "the United Order of American Mechanics" (a secret anti-Catholic order) "is beginning to work local mischief in various parts of the country.... Where their voting strength is known, it is impossible for a Catholic to secure either election or nomination from his party, no matter what his services have been, or what may be the uprightness of his character." The Review proposes that the entire Catholic vote of any locality be cast against the opponents of a Catholic candidate, wherever the question of his religion is raised. But this is a rule that will work both ways, and would inaugurate a civil-religious contest between the lodge and the Catholic church that would benefit neither. The less said about the merits of either, the better it will be for both.

Elsewhere we print a report of the Anti-Secrecy Conference of the Wisconsin Christian Association, held at Vernon, Waukesha Co., Wis., on the 29th and 30th of October, to consider the lodge system and its relations to Christianity and civil liberty. In every particular, although the attendance was smaller than anticipated, the proceedings were harmonious and of special interest. Rev. Messrs. Galloway and Faris, the resident pastors, did all that lay in their power to make the conference a success. All express great satisfaction at the address, Thursday evening, of the Rev. Samuel H. Swarts, of Chicago, on "Odd-fellowship—How Should it be Regarded." The influence of Bro. Hinman's labors in Wisconsin for several weeks, and the results of the conference, indicate a healthy and gratifying growth in the spirit and work of Anti-secrecy Reform in that State.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

A REVIEW OF ITS POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS CHARACTER AND TENDENCIES.—AN UNREPUBLICAN INSTITUTION AND A FALSE RELIGION.

BY REV. WILLARD C. BOARDMAN, OF KANSAS.

[The author is a preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist church who, several months ago, was requested by one of the leading members of a local Alliance in Kansas to lend his influence in behalf of the order. Too wary to be misled into the support of a secret organization without further knowledge of its character and tendencies, he asked several pointed questions. The replies were guarded, and their platitudes are in this article fully controverted.—EDITOR.]

[Concluded.]

Every now and then a man arises, claiming to be Christ; but the one great and most dangerous Anti-Christ is this vast system of secrecy throughout the land that is setting aside Christ and placing some indefinite God at the head.

"He is Anti-Christ that denieth the Father and the Son. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father."—1 John 2: 22 and 23. Now, in your answer to the seventh question, you have the same as admitted that the Constitution of your order denied, or set aside, Christ; therefore your Constitution is Anti-Christ. The same is true with other lodges.

I know, as you say, that the "ritual admits of Christ, and in their prayers thanks God for the redemption offered through him;" but as it is "simply suggestive, and its use is not mandatory," it is deceptive, and by it many think that Christ is duly recognized, when, in fact, he is not; and it would be better if it was not used at all.

Again, this system of secrecy is clearly pointed out in Revelation; now comes in the next question and answer.

Sixth question: "Do the members have a sign

ANTI-SECRET STATE CONVENTIONS.

IOWA

The Iowa Anti-Secret Christian Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A., will hold its Annual State Convention on TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, THE 10TH AND 11TH OF NOVEMBER, at CRAWFORDSVILLE, WASHINGTON COUNTY. Rev. John V. Potts, the new Agent in Iowa, is laboring faithfully in behalf of this Convention in that State. A large attendance is desired. The program is as follows:

FIRST DAY.—Nov. 10, 1:30 P. M. Call to order. Roll made out. Organization effected. 2:00. Address of welcome by Rev. F. J. Wilson of the W. M. church. Response by the president, Rev. S. A. Gilley. 2:30. Personal experiences in the anti-secret work; open to all. 3:30 Appointment of committees. Adjourn.

Evening Session.—7:00. Devotional exercises. 7:20. Address, "Our Duty in Relation to National Evils," by Rev. M. A. Gault. 8:20. Discussion of foregoing in five-minute speeches. 9:20. Adjourn.

SECOND DAY. Morning Session.—Nov. 11, 9 A. M. Religious services. 9:30. Business. Report of committees. Agent's report. 10:30. Address, "Correlation of the Trinity of National Evils—Rum, Romanism and the Secret Empire." 11:30. Discussion of the above. 12:00. Adjourn.

Afternoon Session.—1:30. Religious exercises. 2:00. Business. 2:30. Address, "Methods of Work," by Rev. J. V. Potts, State agent. 3:15. Discussion of above. 3:45. Business. Election of officers. 4:30. Adjourn.

Last Session.—7:00 P. M. Religious exercises. 7:20. Business. 7:45. Address by Rev. J. B. McMichael, president of Monmouth College.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND

The New England Annual Convention will be held at Boston on WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention is Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stalwart Reform preacher. Rev. J. P. Stoddard is exerting his influence to make it a notable gathering of the friends of reform throughout the Eastern States.

ILLINOIS

It has been determined that the Annual State Anti-Secrecy Convention will be held at GALESBURGH, in the Brick Congregational church, beginning THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 12TH, and continuing through Friday, the 13th.

Addresses are promised from Rev. Henry A. Bushnell, pastor of the Brick Congregational church at Galesburgh; Rev. O. F. Carlson, pastor of the Swedish Baptist church at Galesburgh; ex-President J. Blanchard, Wheaton; Rev. A. Hyde, Galesburgh; President Chas. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College; Elder H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; and Rev. Wm. Pinckney, pastor of the Wesleyan church, at New Windsor, Ill.

in their right hand (grip), or some word retained in their memory, whereby they recognize and protect each other?"

Answer: "Yes, they have a sign in their right hand, and also a pass-word retained in their memory."

"And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand or in their foreheads."—Rev. 13: 16. Could this passage be fulfilled any more plainly? This certainly has reference to secret societies. Revelation, chapter 12, clearly points out old pagan Rome. Revelation 13: 1-10 clearly describes the Catholic church; and Revelation 13: 11-18 describes the other great system of secrecy quite as clearly.

Seventh question: "In Art. 4, Sec. 1 of your Constitution, why was the clause, 'believe in the existence of a Supreme Being,' used instead of, 'believe in Jesus Christ?'"

Answer: "I do not know, unless they did not think it right to disbar Jews and others from assisting in the work."

There is no doubt in my mind but what your answer is correct. It is the same as in other lodges. But can it be possible that secret societies are doing what Mr. Ingersoll, by his materialistic theory, tried but failed to do? In one of his most blasphemous works I read the following: "When we abandon the doctrine that some infinite being created matter and force, and enacted a code of laws for their government, the idea of interference will be lost. * * * The Bible will take its place with the Shastas, Puranas, Eddas, Sagas, and Korans, and the fetters of a degrading faith will fall from the minds of men."—"Ingersollia," p. 70.

A traveler, eating at a hotel, once said: "Waiter, if this is tea, bring me coffee; and if this is coffee, bring me tea." And so we say: "If this is a living faith that brings infidelity, or a false religion, give us a 'degrading' one; but if a 'degrading' faith brings atheism, infidelity, or the false religion of secrecy, or any false religion, I care not what kind it may be, forever give us a living faith—the living faith of the Bible."

What Ingersoll meant by the Bible's taking its place with the Korans, etc., was simply to place it on an equality with them; i. e., to let each one believe in the one he wanted to believe in, but not to dictate to the rest. This is just what secrecy is doing, by placing an indefinite god at the head and thereby placing Christ on an equal with Mohammed and others; thus causing Christianity to "take its place," so to speak, with Judaism, Mohammedanism, Theophilanthropism, etc.

Now, isn't it just as ruinous for the lodge to place Christ on an equal with Mohammed and others, as it is for infidelity to try and place the Bible on an equal with the Koran and other books of the same kind? Can we not say, with St. Paul, that "it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret?" If it be said: "We all recognize some God, and we want it so that we can differ on all these points and yet work for the same end on other questions," we answer that this is about what Ingersoll wanted to accomplish by his infamous lecture, entitled "The Mistakes of Moses."

In the first few lines of that lecture we find these words: "I want it so that we can differ upon all these questions, and yet grasp each other's hands in genuine friendship." Yes, that sounds well; but he can't catch us by that trap. We can heartily shake hands with each other now, without swallowing any, or being swallowed by them or their religion. So we can all go to the polls and vote for principle without embracing a false religion.

We have now spoken at length in regard to secrecy, and we have also shown that it is a religion; it cannot be a true religion; then it must, of necessity, be a false religion; and there only remains one more point to consider, and that is the great argument that we so often hear. It can all be summed up in a few words, viz.: "There isn't but just a little bit of secrecy about our order, and so far as the religious part is concerned, it never will do one particle of harm. In fact, both parts are as harmless as a lamb."

That sounds well; but "be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Galatians 6: 7.

And no nation or party can sow the seed of a false religion, be it ever so small, without reaping A PAINFUL, BITTER HARVEST.

But I forget; St. John, the Revelator, vividly answers this far better than I can, in Revelation 13: 11: "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb; and he spake like a dragon."

Who can deny that this very argument, which we hear so often, is the fulfillment of that prophecy? Hear we have the two horns, denoting the religious and the political, or policy parts, of the lodges. And they are "like a lamb," having a fair appearance and causing many to think that it is harmless and all right, thus deceiving many; but when we look around us and see the misery it causes, the underhanded advantage that it takes, how it escapes justice, how it controls matters in our courts of law, the strikes and mobs it raises, how it dictates to public opinion, the great extent to which it injures the cause of God, the many souls that are being ruined by it, how it shapes and controls the politics of our land until we groan under the curse; and when we read their iron-clad oaths, which Christ has plainly forbidden (Matt. 5: 33-37), we are compelled to say that he speaks "LIKE A DRAGON." It may seem all right, but remember "that there is a way that seemeth right unto a man;" (what about the end?) "but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Proverbs 14: 12. But where does all this evil come from?

"And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness." (Ah, there is where the evil lies; the method of the darkness of secrecy is wrong.) "And they gnawed their tongues for pain." (Revelation 16: 10.)

Now, don't think for one moment that we who have taken a decided stand against the darkness of secret societies do it to be obstinate, build up sect, or anything of the kind; but we do it because we know that it is right, and we feel for our fellow-men. And, without joking, or anything of the kind, when we see our fellow-beings going around with "a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads," gnawing "their tongues for pain," our hearts bleed within us; we actually pity them; but who, oh, who is to blame? God is not, Christ is not, St. Paul and the rest of the apostles are not, and all the true people of God, from that time to this, are not to blame for this great curse.

The Bible has warned us to keep out of it. It has squarely and emphatically forbidden us to have anything to do with it. It has severely condemned it through prophecy, and shows to a great extent what harm it would do. God has sent his true servants into the world, who have met with the severest of persecution in speaking against it. Morgan was killed; Bro. Rathbun, a minister of the Gospel, and a man with whom I am personally acquainted, was mobbed seventeen times; a man in a small village of the State of New York, who had not spoken but a few times against the system, was one day vividly warned to leave the place at once, with a severe threat that his life would be taken if he did not. And this is only a type of what has occurred elsewhere. Persecution has followed persecution; threat has followed threat; mobbing has followed mobbing, and murder has followed murder, until it is not often safe for a man to take a decided stand against it; and many, if not all, of our public speakers who lecture against it are in danger of their lives.

It looks "like a lamb," but speaks "like a dragon." (Rev. 13: 11). But all this we expect, "for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." (Eph. 6: 12). I have read much in the papers you have sent me, and also in other papers. I have conversed with members of different orders and informed myself a little on this subject; and when I see the spirit of war that is manifested between the different societies; when I hear of strikes, riots, mobs, and murders; when I read of injustice, wrongs, "robbery by trusts," etc., and when I see so much faultfinding, murmuring, and complaining, I say, in Bible language, "Surely, they are gnawing 'their tongues for pain.'"

Alexander the Great once said to Alexander, the coward: "I want you to either change your name or else your manner of fighting." And so we say to all secret societies, "That with all due respect to your orders, we would respectfully suggest that you either stop so much of your complaining, grumbling, threats, and faultfinding, or else adopt God's method of procedure instead of Satan's." It won't do. The method of secrecy and of rejecting Christ Jesus IS WRONG. Oh, kill the fiery serpent, cut down the evil tree, cleanse the vile fountain; then and not till then, can you "remove the cause of so much sin by making right laws."

I have charity and great sympathy for many who belong to secret societies, for I realize that many are deceived, as Christ said they would be.

I have great respect for you and I think that you mean to be a true Christian, but, as I must meet it at the Judgment, I believe you are mistaken. I have endeavored to write this in the spirit of meekness and of kindness, and still I have aimed to present it in such a light as to vividly bring the truth to your comprehension.

Let others do as they may, but as for me I cannot and will not lend my influence to help on this institution, or any institution that shamefully rejects Christ and embraces a false religion. I never will build, or help to build, upon that foundation. God never sanctioned such a method. Never!

Right here, we, as a church, take our stand, entreating all who see fit to join us in this glorious struggle; "for," as St. Paul says, "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 3: 11). Let me say, in conclusion, that religion is not a secondary matter, and no nation, tribe, party, or people, can sell Christ for gain, without paying the penalty. Never!

I have said and still say that the great system of secrecy and of rejecting Jesus Christ is wrong and extremely dangerous both to the government and to religion. I cannot indorse it; and I will not in any way knowingly encourage it, but my influence and my all must tell on the side of Christ.

Here I take my stand firmly, believing that in all things Christ should and must "have the pre-eminence." (Col. 1: 18.) ON THAT ROCK I STAND.

THE FOE WE FIGHT.—III.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

The secret empire will stand, because there is no massing of forces against it. It is true that God is against it, and that it, like other anti-Christian systems, will finally be consumed by the brightness of the Lord's own presence; but during this dispensation God is pleased to work through human instrumentality. He has commissioned the church and civil government to be a light and a terror to these evil-doers; but, like Israel of old, both are and will be faithless to their trust.

The church, we may say, is the only available force—"the light of the world—the salt of the earth," but the light may become darkness, and the salt may lose its savor,—and what then? Aye, what now?

Is it not plain that the church is weak, not only in numbers and in faith? but worse still, it is divided up into sects or parties, among which there is no agreement with regard to this common enemy; but, worst of all, the great sects, or the major part of Christendom, are in virtual alliance with the enemy in this conflict. They have bowed the knee to Baal!

This "mystery of iniquity" is already in the church; and does it not look as if it would leaven the whole lump? In the great divisions of the Lord's army every gun is spiked by the enemy; every fort, or pulpit, is silent. What, therefore, can a skirmish line do against the hosts of darkness, unless supported by flaming artillery and heavy battalions all along the line? Herein lies the weakness of our Christianity. If we were all of one mind, we would be of one mouth, and with a uniform testimony we would be invincible by any force which the enemy could bring against us.

If any reformer believes we have misrepresented the present state of things, let him try to get a hearing on the lodge question in any of the popular pulpits of the land.

There are two mysteries in the world—the mystery of godliness and the mystery of iniquity. No doubt the lodge system belongs to the latter. Both of these end in manifestation; the one heads up in Christ and forms the everlasting kingdom; the other heads up in the personal Anti-Christ of the last days, whom the Lord destroys, root and branch, by his personal coming, in flaming fire taking vengeance; thus clearing the scene for his holy kingdom, when he shall have universal and loving allegiance from the whole earth. This is the divine optimism clearly taught us in the Word of God, and is very different from that commonly received by men in these days.

But will such a view not tend to discourage all effort in the line of reform? By no means. Those who believe it are the most active workers on the globe to-day.

No man is prepared to grapple with an enemy of the nature, power and endurance of which he is entirely ignorant.

President Lincoln, with his first call for 75,000 volunteers, was simply an object of contempt in the eyes of the great Rebellion. Its power and tenacity had to be known before it could be put down.

Men do not commonly think of this lodge iniquity as being animated by Satan himself. He is doubtless saying to his synagogues what Christ said to the true church: "Because I live, ye shall live also."

This iniquity will disappear with him in the bottomless pit. Amen.

Vernon, Wis.

SATAN WORSHIP.

BY RAY RAND.

The blessed Messiah began his ministry with a forty days' personal encounter with the devil. Think of that old serpent leading the very Christ himself into an exceeding high mountain and placing him on a pinnacle of the temple in Jerusalem! But Christ came to destroy the works of the devil, and the apostles and disciples were commissioned and commanded to continue the war. They, like their beloved Master, went about casting devils and evil spirits out of fallen men and women. The Jews said it was done by Beelzebub, the prince of devils.

Christianity is death to incantation, superstition and sorcery. Simon the sorcerer yields to the truth. (Acts 8: 9.) The false prophet Elymas withstands the truth; is smitten with blindness. (Acts 13: 8.) The damsel of divination bows in humble submission at the name of Jesus. (Acts 16: 16.) Even the vagabond Jews, the seven sons of Sceva, exorcists, abjured evil spirits in the name of Jesus, only to be left naked and wounded. (Acts 19: 13.) And in the 24th verse of the same chapter we learn of one Demetrius, who made shrines to the great goddess Diana. He and his craftsmen raised a terrible uproar at the preaching of Paul. Then, up at Mars Hill, this same Paul points from all the gods of paganism to Christ.

These early reformers did not lie down in the lap of the world and cry "peace" and "fraternity" with evil doers. They tackled Satan in his strongholds. So did Luther, Calvin and Wesley. They were not so careful of their precious reputations as are our modern D.Ds. They did not follow up reforms on a five or twenty-thousand-dollar salary. And this great battle will be carried to the very gates of heaven. The great red dragon and his angels will even make war in heaven. Driven thence, they will continue to destroy and deceive all whose names are not written in the Lamb's book of life. His last stand will be as a Babylon of mystery and iniquity. And woe unto those who shall have adored the beast or his image, or who shall bear the mark or the number of his name. In the meantime we are in the midst of the wonderful scenes so vividly foretold in Holy Writ. Let him that readeth understand; and the true followers of Christ need make no mistake in this matter, nor will they. With this very brief glance at Satanism as mentioned in the New Testament, we pass to the discussion proper, of Satanism in our own day and generation.

Avalon, Mo.

It is reported that Senator Stanford ordered the expulsion of 200 students at Leland Stanford, Jr., University, who recently stole a flat car and ran it down a hill to Palo Alto, Cal., station, but that he was persuaded to change his purpose by Mrs. Stanford.

SECRET TEMPERANCE ORDERS AMONG THE COLORED PEOPLE.

In an address on Temperance Mission Work among the Colored People of the South, by J. C. Price, published in the current number of the National Temperance Advocate, the conclusion is rightly reached that "we are getting to a humiliating state in our Christian civilization when the open saloon is permitted to rival the Church of God, and by its work of unrighteousness interfere with the attendance in its sacred precincts on the Lord's Day." The points of a thoroughly organized and persistent campaign of education are given. It might have been well to have included in the survey, at least an incidental reference to the secret lodge as a co-factor with the saloon in hindering the good influences of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The American Missionary several months ago said: "We unite with the Congregationalist and other influential religious journals in deprecating the increase and the dominating influence of secret societies. We recognize the evil especially among the colored people of the South, to whom the tinsel, the parades, the ceremonies and the secrecy of these orders are very attractive. In most cases these people spend time and money that are needed for their families and for the support of their churches; and the danger is that the lodge will usurp the place in their confidence that is due to God and his ordinances. The evil grows, and where is the remedy? This Association uses all the legitimate influence it can exert to discourage secret societies in its schools and churches in the South."

In a copy of the journal published in the interest of the Good Templars of Canada, I read, a year or two ago, an editorial strongly deprecating the tendency of many lodges to turn their sessions into occasions of frolic. Nearly at the same time, however, the same paper announced "a public effort which promises to be unique, comical and overflowing with fun" under the auspices of a certain lodge which is named. "In addition to an excellent musical and literary program, the company will give a burlesque initiation ceremony, full of mirth-provoking situations, but arranged so as to exhibit the marching, fancy and physical drill movements of the Knights." This "public effort," which must obviously have necessitated a large amount of private preparation, seems very much like a parody on temperance work. Some might bluntly, and withal not uncharitably, speak of it as tom-foolery.

Similarly, and as offering late inferential testimony in the like direction, the report for 1891, of the "Grand Chief Templar" of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of the State of New York, says:

"How frequently the good of the order is trifled with. Each member of a lodge should feel a personal responsibility to make the weekly meetings as interesting and profitable as possible. Do not turn it into a disgusting farce by the use of low, common plays, songs and recitations, which should be grasped as an opportunity for cultivating the mind, refining the tastes," etc.

Of course "our brother in black" is not slow to imitate this foolishness and unrighteousness.

In an address upon the subject of secret societies among the colored people of the South, John G. Fee, president of Berea College, Kentucky, deplored the fact that the orders abstract large sums of money and greatly impoverish the people, without giving them any real benefit in return. He instanced an interior town in Kentucky, where eight times as much was spent by the colored people for lodgery as for religious purposes. Further, Pres. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, in an address which was delivered at Saratoga by way of a plea to induce secret temperance lodges to drop what little secrecy they have, "that all may unite in open work after the example of Christ," testified that "the ex-slave population are crazed with the secret orders, although previous to emancipation it is believed they did not exist among that people. Thousands on thousands of colored mothers now take in washing and toil to feed their children and board their husbands, whose wages are devoured by the secret orders, one man often belonging to from one to twenty of them."

I conclude with the expression of the hope that J. C. Price, who has so commendably endeavored to instruct the colored people of the South in the ways of sobriety, will not omit, as occasions arise, to discourage their affiliating with all secret societies, including those which may have for their declared purpose the advancement of the cause of temperance.—Josiah W. Leeds, in the Christian Statesman.

THE SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

Another important factor is the secret societies of China. We are not a little surprised in searching through the best books on China within our command to find that this element of Chinese society is conspicuously absent from them. The most prominent political secret society in China was the White Lily Society, which originated in Hupeh, and spread into other States. It was a Buddhist vegetarian society, which read Buddhist books and avoided animal food. But designing men admitted to it converted it into a political sect. Besides the societies having a Buddhist basis there are the Planchette Societies of the Red Light and the White Light—a sworn brotherhood of men, which may or may not be political. They are Taoist rather than Buddhist. They cut off the head of a cock and drink the blood mixed with wine on taking the oath of fellowship. They are subject to organic direction as to when they are to resist civil or political authority, whether expressed in the military or police power. They are organized for mutual protection. They may be patriotic.

One of these non-Buddhist societies comes in for a prominent place in the study of the present situation. It is known as the Kolao Hui, and is a military organization, originally benevolent only. It is recognized as the most dangerous of the existing sects. It consists exclusively of soldiers. It is a proscribed society, being esteemed a secret conspiracy. It was found extensively among the army of the time of the Taiping war. In that army were a great number of men from the province of Honan. They had a constitutional fondness for a roving, restless life. They were naturally a turbulent community. They won a name in the time of the Rebellion, and are still known as the "Honan Braves." They had, to a great degree, saved the country. They have been the centre of disaffection. During the recent disturbance in Foochow, on account of which missionaries removed to a place of safety at the mouth of the Min River, under advice of those in authority, there were from two to three thousand of these discharged Honan soldiers from the Yangsti valley present in Foochow, and about eight thousand men from Honan under arms in the employ of the Tartar general. A number of the regular standing army have joined the Kolao Hui. Thus the army on which the Government has to rely is itself sown with organized conspirators. These cannot be relied on to subdue any disturbance fomented by the Kolao Hui. These men have been among the most earnest antagonists of the reduction of the total bulk of the original pension fund. Government has therefore been wellnigh powerless to resist the continuance of this recognized corruption. It has, however, recently brought pressure to bear on it, with the result of stirring up the opposition of these men to the administration. This is held by some to be the chief cause of the present outbreak.—Missionary Review of the World.

THE KANSAS ALLIANCE.

If the report made by its late President, Mr. McGrath, be true, the Farmers' Alliance in Kansas is in a process of speedy disruption. A reduction of membership from 140,000 in 1890 to 60,000 in 1891 betokens dissolution.

If it be true, as Mr. McGrath affirms, that the Farmers' Alliance in Kansas now has fallen under control of men who are "atheists, anarchists, and free lovers," its duration will be short. We know the men of Kansas too well to suppose that the domination of such men as are described by Mr. McGrath will be tolerated. The farmers of Kansas are moral, law-abiding, and intelligent. They will never give support to men to whom church, law, marriage, and home are by-words of derision.—Inter-Ocean.

The Chino Valley beet sugar factory at Pomona, Cal., has manufactured 825 tons of granulated sugar already this season.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Boston and London.—The moral degeneracy of New England's cities and towns.—Does not want to debate with a woman.—A lesson from the life of Professor Phelps.

It can hardly be a pleasant thought to the dweller at the Hub that parts of Boston are more depraved than Whitechapel. Yet this is what Rev. Hugh Price Hughes quotes another English minister as saying; while Mrs. Ballington Booth, in a comparison between New York and Boston, gives the latter the worst showing. "I did not expect," she says, "to find the so-called Hub of the Universe so dirty and depraved." Perhaps we have been a little too much like the Pharisee, thanking God that we are not as other men are, and this rude shock to our self-complacency may do us good. The Salvation Army, which, by the way, has had its petition granted for right to parade on the street, whatever may be its faults, has the virtue of thoroughness. It does not do things by halves; but it goes into the slums in dead earnest, with the natural result that it unearths a great deal which is calculated to shock the nerves of an easy-going Christian public. The sad case lately found by two of the Army lasses, of a sick woman who had been for three days without food, alone, and surrounded by conditions of filth and squalor hardly to be uttered in ears polite, is one to which even London could not furnish more than a parallel.

Yet other New England cities are not far behind. Rev. Dr. Greene, of Lowell, in his last Sunday's sermon, stated that in the city of spindles one million dollars are annually spent in gambling. If true, these are appalling figures and show that the laws against this vice are as poorly enforced as the laws against liquor-selling. But what can be expected? As Dr. Greene well asks, what kind of a common council has Lowell, when thirteen of its members are applicants for a liquor-license? About the same quality with Boston's city council, it would appear. New England cities have reached a pitch of moral degradation sad to contemplate. It is true the remedy is with the people; but when only half the people—and that not the best or purest half—are allowed to have any say in municipal affairs, the saloon with its Satanic allies will continue to rule. The doctor fearlessly placed the endowment orders in the same list with the rum shop and the gambling den. To have said this a year or two ago, when the endowment craze was at its height, would have earned one the reputation of a first-class crank. Utterances that yesterday were the extreme of radicalism become the sober truths of to-day. But how many poor, deluded victims are profoundly wishing that they had also been cranks when the smooth-tongued agent of the Order of the Gullibles tried to convince them that two and two made five, or six, or eight, as the case might be. The "freezing out" system; that is, forcing a majority of the members to lapse by extraordinary and illegal assessments—is helping a little to delay their final end. The long term orders are meanwhile preparing for the fight, and giving the Republican leaders in Massachusetts no little trouble to forecast their possible action. Gov. Russell has already, like a good and faithful Democrat, cast his bid for their votes by adverse remarks, in one of his late political speeches, on Commissioner Merrill, whom they all hate so cordially. Meanwhile Major Merrill himself takes quite a cheery view of the situation, being comfortably conscious, no doubt, that he is secure of retaining his office until 1893. He estimates that the 50,000 members or more whose losses through the endowment orders will foot up to nearly three millions of dollars, will prove, if the matter is made a political issue, quite as much a factor in the case as the other side.

The appointment by Gov. Russell of a rum-seller of twenty-two years standing, and one who has been himself arrested several times for violating the law, as trial-justice at Brookfield, shows how dominant the liquor power has become. The first jury at the session of the Superior criminal court in Springfield acquitted every single rum case brought before them, while from a second jury only one conviction was secured. The great argument against prohibition with our high-license friends has always been that "it can't be enforced," but in the light of facts like the above it remains with them to prove that license laws can be enforced any better. If so, why is it not done?

The debate at Tremont Temple between Rev. Hugh Montgomery and Sam Small, on the question whether prohibition can be most easily obtained through the third party, or by acting in connection with one of the old ones, promises to be interesting. Mr. Montgomery was invited to debate with Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, but declined, on the ground that he did not wish to debate with a woman. Why didn't he say such a woman;—eloquent, logical, and ready at any moment to pierce the joints of an adversary's armor with one of her unexpected witticisms, or pungent statements of facts. It may well be said of Mrs. Gougar what was originally said by Napoleon of Madame de Stael: "She carries a quiver full of arrows that would hit a man were he seated on a rainbow." Mr. Montgomery cannot be blamed for declining to meet her only for giving so frivolous and unworthy an excuse. Perhaps if the scales of his lodge affiliations could fall from his eyes, his political sight would be clearer.

I wonder when the march of intelligence and common sense will save us from reading, as I did the other day in a report of the Y. M. C. A. convention, that "there were several lady ministers present." Reverse it and see how worse than absurd gentlemen ministers would sound. The Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair is another ridiculous relic of old-time conventionalities. In the term Woman Managers there would have been real nobility and strength.

The Nationalists might have found an object lesson—alas, how many more pitiable ones might be furnished—in an aged, thinly-clothed woman, going away the other day in tears from a shirt-factory in a neighboring town. She explained to a sympathetic inquirer that a dollar had been deducted from her scanty wages for not putting on "the tags" with which her employer had failed to supply her. One would have to work for such scanty pittance as hers to know what this meant to her;—how much of diminished comfort one dollar could cover. The tears of this poor sewing woman God will remember; aye!—and of thousands like her—but who would willingly be in the place of her oppressor when his reckoning day comes?

There is a remarkable sentence in the Life of Prof. Phelps, quoted by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton at the recent meeting of the Y. M. C. A., which ought to be engraven on the heart of every young man: "I resolved that I would not ask God for an easy life, nor the means of making it so; that I was willing to be poor. I was willing to toil night and day throughout the hungry years if only he would give me success in my profession for which I had prayed from the bottom of my heart." Let such a noble ambition be instilled into the minds of our youth, instead of holding up the careers of great money kings for their emulation; and much that is going wrong to-day might be set right by the next generation.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 28, 1891.

Unjust criticism seldom, if ever, fails to react in some way injurious upon those who father it, however well-meant it may be. Nearly every person with whom I have talked upon the subject, thinks that the criticism to which President Harrison has been subjected in certain quarters because Mr. Andrew Carnegie saw fit to ship him from Scotland a keg of whisky as a present, is unjust. It is probable, nay, I might say certain, that the first knowledge Mr. Harrison had of this present was obtained from the newspapers. Where, then, does his culpability come in? Should Mr. Carnegie announce that he had shipped a similar present to any prominent temperance worker, would that be accepted as sufficient ground for charging that it was the intention of the temperance worker to drink the contents of the keg? Of course it would not. When this liquor arrives at the White House, which it has not yet done, it will probably be stowed away with the hundreds of other things which are constantly being sent there. These things are oftentimes accepted merely because Mr. and Mrs. Harrison do not wish to appear discourteous to those who have sent them, and so it will probably be with that keg of whisky. Mr. Harrison has lived in the searching light of publicity for many years without being charged with being a whisky drinker, and he has proven himself to be too good a friend of temperance, religion, and all branches of moral reform, to have such a charge now made, even by implication, based upon nothing more tangible than supposition.

The tenth annual session of the Board of Lady Managers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church will begin here to-morrow. This society is at present supporting sixty missionaries on our frontier, and seventy-five in organized city work. The home mission field is divided into sections, each section being under the care of a bureau composed entirely of ladies. In the South there are five of these bureaus; in the Western States and Territories, five; in city work, two; one each in charge of literature, young people's work, and the distribution of supplies. It has under its supervision eleven model homes, or industrial training schools, in the South, fifteen missions among the Mormons, six among the Indians, and five among the Spanish Mexicans. Delegates from all parts of the United States will attend the conference, which will remain in session until Nov. 4.

Nearly all of the Washington ministers made some allusion in their sermons last Sunday to the Ecumenical Conference; and it is greatly to the credit of all concerned that the allusions were in every case complimentary.

The Central Union Mission, which celebrated its seventh anniversary at Foundry church, Sunday evening, is composed of workers from nearly all of the Protestant denominations of Washington; therefore it is not surprising that the capacity of the church was insufficient to allow all who wished to attend. To give an idea of the work that is being done by this mission, I append a few figures from its secretary's annual report: Total number of meetings held, 1,721; total attendance at meetings, 191,726; visits made, 6,493; lodgings furnished, 4,762; meals furnished, 3,335, and employment obtained for 19 persons. The attendance at meetings would have been much larger if the mission had a larger hall, and efforts are now being made, which promise to be successful, to secure donations sufficient to build one that will be spacious enough to accommodate all who may wish to attend.

It is gratifying to note that appearances now indicate that the trouble arising from the attack made upon American sailors by a mob of Chilians in the streets of Valparaiso may be settled satisfactorily through the ordinary channels of diplomacy, although for several days it was feared that it might be the cause of war between the United States and Chili.

The success which has attended the setting aside of one Sabbath in each year as "Children's Day," suggested to some ladies, members of Hamline church, in this city, the feasibility of also having an "Old People's Day" every year. The idea was such a good one that it was acted upon, and the attendance last Sunday, which was the first "Old People's Day," was such as to make it certain that the custom has come to stay; and it will be strange indeed if it is not adopted by other churches. It is said that there were in attendance at the old fashioned "love-feast," which was the second of the three services held during the day, nearly 400 persons over 60 years of age. Carriages were provided for those who were invalids or who were too feeble to walk to and from the church, and in this way many old friends who, although living in the same city, had not seen each other for years were brought together. Was it not a happy and God-given thought? And isn't it worthy of being imitated everywhere? *

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, October 28, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—For a variety, it may interest your readers to know how we spent Sabbath, the 25th inst., in Boston. After family devotions, we met Bro. Wm. F. Davis of Chelsea, Sister Smith of Cambridge, with others, in Bro. Powers' parlor, for a "sweet hour of prayer." From 10:45 to 12:00 o'clock, noon, we listened to the fourth in a series of discourses on the Holy Spirit by Pastor A. J. Gordon, of the Clarendon Street Baptist church. His simplicity of style, perspicuity of thought and Scripture proofs, all showed that the secret of the Lord was with him as he spoke in the Spirit's power. For the benefit of the many who could not hear these discourses, I hope they may be printed in some inexpensive form for a wide circulation.

At 3 p. m. we listened to Bro. J. M. Foster, pastor-elect to the Chambers Street R. P. church, who spoke with special reference to the communion service soon to be held. Bro. Foster is so widely and well-known that I need only say of his sermon that it was characteristic of the man—instructive, forcible, orthodox, and spoken in a spirit of love and power.

At 6:30 we held a forty minutes' service, with some seventy or more young ladies, in the chapel of the Y. M. C. A., on Berkeley street. At 7:45 we were in Howard Street Baptist church, listening to Bro. R. D. Grant, who closed his sermon with the simple sentence: "Farewell; these are my last words to you as pastor." I have often heard Bro. Grant, but until that evening I had no just conception of his eloquence and power as a preacher of the Gospel or platform speaker. Returning home I remarked to Mrs. Stoddard: Bro. Grant is probably the most tired man in Boston to-night, and may be the bluest to-morrow, for I know the effect of such a tax on brain and heart when the reaction comes.

J. P. STODDARD.

BRO. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

VERNON, Wis., Oct. 29, 1891.

Since my last I have visited Waupun, Byron, Oshkosh, Neenah, Ripon, Sussex and Vernon.

At Waupun I found the old guard all faithful and willing to aid in the work, but found no opening for lectures. The Wesleyans near there seem to have lost heart and practically given up.

At Byron I found a cordial greeting from the Wesleyan brethren. They had just closed their annual conference, which seems to have been harmonious, and several of the preachers still remained. Bro. Martin, the pastor, was holding a protracted meeting, and by request I preached twice on Sabbath. Our Wesleyan brethren in Wisconsin have been sadly weakened by a want of harmony, but may still be greatly blessed in the work of God if they study those things that make for peace, and by which they may edify one another.

At Neenah I visited Bro. A. Austin, whose generosity helped me in my work. I also found a pastor who told me that he had been promised a good congregation and ample support if he would join the Odd-fellows; but who abhorred the system and declined to secure success by such means. Of two pastors, at Menasha, one has been an Odd-fellow and has renounced it, but says that nearly all the male members of his church are Masons. Another has been a pronounced Anti-mason but such are his environments that he must be as dumb as though he belonged to the order.

At Oshkosh there are one small Wesleyan and two Free Methodist churches. One of the latter has a good house of worship, and the other is building. The Wesleyan pastor was away, but the Free Methodist ministers, Bros. Wolfe and Flower, received me very cordially. I lectured in the F. M. church, on the evening of the 22d, to a full, attentive and sympathetic congregation. Pastor Wing, of the Lutheran church, also attended, and expressed hearty approval. There are several other Lutheran pastors in the city who are strongly opposed to the secret orders, but who do not like the position of the Cynosure on prohibition. The German and Welch Methodist pastors are heartily with us and will read the Cynosure. The Congregational and M. E. ministers are said to be Masons. At Ripon, where just eighteen years before I met the friends of this reform in convention, I had a pleasant visit with Bro. James Allen and family, and found others who were faithful and true. But I was pained to find that this beautiful little college town, originally settled by the best class of New England people, is now ruled by the saloon and the lodge. Surely the good people here must have come short of their whole duty or they would not have so utterly lost their grip on the public sentiment.

At Sussex I was most kindly entertained by pastor Turner, of the U. P. church. I preached for him on the morning of the 25th, and lectured, at night, on the religion of the lodge. I found much sympathy and material aid among his people, but was sorry that some of them raise barley and sell it to the brewers.

An attack of rheumatism prevented my going to Mukwanago previous to our convention, which meets to-day. I think Wisconsin a most hopeful field for the promotion of our reform, and hope that an effort will be made to keep a laborer constantly in the field.

H. H. HINMAN.

BRO. FENTON AT THE EAST.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., October 29, 1891.

On Tuesday evening last, October 27, Bro. Eakins, pastor of the Free Methodist church of Vineland, N. J., cheerfully opened the doors of the church and welcomed the truth forbidden by its mother-church and most of the other denominations—truth that exposes the lodge blasphemy fellowshiped by those denominations. A liberal collection was volunteered, and more truth was asked for,—according to what is said of the Free Methodists: "They will hear all the truth told them about the lodges, and ask for more." But, alas for the blind leader of the M. E. church of Vineland; he belongs to no secret society; yet he cannot believe what he reads or what is told him about Masonry, and methodically persists in saying that he knows nothing about it. He probably sees, very plainly, that his Methodism depends upon his assertions of his ignorance.

Thanks are due to brethren Ingraham and Dr. Welch for their cordial sympathy and material aid in the dissemination of the truth. Also to Professor Wilson, for so kindly entertaining the writer at his magnificent and home-like hotel—the Grove House—free of charge.

I find an interesting codicil in the will of Rev. Orrin Wilbur, a Baptist minister, that ought to make the Baptist denomination blush for shame, and would, were it not that it is incapable of discerning the truth. No doubt it will say, as was once said in the presence of the writer by the assembled students of a Baptist theological seminary, under similar circumstances: "Let him keep his money; we don't want it." Dr. H. L. Morehouse, the secretary of the Baptist Home Mission Society, refused to send an acceptable teacher to teach in a Baptist University, for no other reason than that that Baptist minister's Anti-masonic sentiments would be offensive to Baptist Masons and Jack-Masons. The following is the codicil of the will:

"CODICIL 2.

"I, Orrin Wilbur, formerly of Louisville, New York, now of the township of Landis, Cumberland county, State of New Jersey, being of sound mind and memory, do, make, declare, ordain and publish this as a codicil to my last will and testament, which was executed March 2d, 1875, and to which will this codicil appended forms a part.

"Whereas, by careful inquiry, I have reason to believe that the Board of the American Baptist Home Mission Society are not accustomed to discriminate in making appropriations in aid of their mission work, as to whether those who receive the patronage of the board are members of any oath-bound secret societies; now, therefore, resting in the full conviction that all such societies are opposed to the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and destructive of the souls of men, I hereby change the provisions of my will as follows, to-wit: Let the one-fourth of my estate directed heretofore to be paid to the Baptist Home Mission Society, be equally divided between the Baptist Missionary Union and the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies; making to each of these societies three-eighths, instead of one-fourth to each of these societies. Dated March 20, 1878." WILLIAM FENTON.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT IN NEW YORK.

BOVINA CENTRE, Oct. 22, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am now in Delaware county, N. Y. If Otsego county is noted for its hops and beer, Delaware is for its butter and temperance.

I do not remember to have been in two adjacent counties so diverse in products. This county is settled largely by the Scotch-Irish. There are several of the Psalm-singing churches.

As I have been climbing over the green pasture-hills, I have thought of the words of the Psalmist: "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters." Surely, nowhere could one sing those beautiful lines with a greater realization of what the Psalmist meant than in this place. The wooded regions present an ever-changing beauty. Nature's artist cannot be excelled. The leaves seem to cling to the trees with unusual tenacity, as if loth to return to mother earth.

I spoke on Sabbath morning and in the evening in the West Delhi United Presbyterian church, to good audiences. A Psalm-singing collection was taken for our cause, which, as usual, contained more of silver than of baser metal. Ten members of the Congregation became readers of the Cynosure, and others doubtless would, had I been able to see them. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Tarr, showed me much personal kindness. I learned the value of his horse during a drive of seventeen miles. As I left West Delhi, the rain began. After rather a stormy trip of some miles I arrived at Mundale. My rubbers were torn on the stones, and my umbrella showed the effects of a battle with the elements.

The people here, as elsewhere, were very kind. Rev. Mr. Chalmers, known to Cynosure readers, was pastor of the church located here, until failing health compelled him to resign. As he bore

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

REVELATION AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

DELAWARE, Iowa, October, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A great many suppose that because they do not belong to the Freemasons or Odd-fellows, they are not under the same condemnation as those, if they do belong to some secret organization of another name.

A person was once somewhat in a cloud in regard to the true state of those belonging to temperance societies, etc., and they went to the Lord in prayer about it and asked for light. The Lord Jesus, according to his promise, gave the desired information, through a vision.

This person was led into a spacious building. This building was divided into several large apartments, and each department had its own peculiar rules and regulations, and were subject to a head ruler. This person was led from one department to another until he came to a large room at the end of the building. This room was fitted up in the most costly style. At the end of the room was a throne, and on the throne sat a woman reveling in all the luxuries that earth could produce. On her forehead was written "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." The person was given to understand that this was the "great whore that sitteth upon many waters," or ruleth many people. The person asked the woman if she believed in and accepted the supreme power of Jesus Christ as ruler over all. She replied: "That she acknowledged no power or authority higher than herself; that she reigned supreme over all the different departments in their secret enclosure, and that she was queen over everything under the canopy of the great building." The person replied: "That he was a servant of Jesus Christ, and therefore could not stay under her authority, nor in her society." Whereupon she frowned with rage upon him and sought to destroy his life, as she had many others; but the Lord Jesus took him out of her den of iniquity, and he was safe.

All through the different apartments were men of all ranks and conditions of life, excepting the poor and maimed, the halt and blind. These were left to take care of themselves, for they wanted nothing in their enclosure but whatever would bring in good revenue for the "great whore." Freemasonry, etc. If they ever made a public show of charity, it was for some selfish end; and on every occasion (Pharisee-like) they blow their trumpets long and loud, to entice the servants of Jesus Christ into their enclosure and in the embraces of the "great whore," where they are polluted and defiled, no longer fit for a servant of Jesus Christ or a resident of the kingdom of glory.

In the last two apartments were a great many who called themselves preachers of the Gospel. These the whorish queen used as decoy ducks to draw others into her embraces and to eternal death.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ brings light and liberty; the work of the devil is darkness, secrecy and bondage. No matter in what form it is presented to you, and how good and virtuous the deceiver may make it appear to you, that moment you take the oath or promise of secrecy to any secret order, you enter under the canopy of condemnation, and God alone is your judge to what depth of sin you go into. The nearer the embraces of the "great whore" you live, the greater the condemnation.

May the Lord help many to forever leave the fold of these sinful, polluted, and degraded institutions of Freemasonry, Odd-fellows, and kindred organizations, and seek rest and comfort in Jesus Christ, who loves you and invites you to come and take of the water of life freely.

E. L. MEADER.

RONAYNE ON RONAYNE ET AL.

104 MILTON AVE., CHICAGO, }
Oct. 23, 1891. }

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Your note and enclosed newspaper slip are just received. No, I am not the Ronayne mentioned in the slip as being "General Secretary" of the Clan-na-Gael society. That gentleman is a New York lawyer, having his office in Chambers street, I believe; and from what I have read about him he has been identified with what is known as "the triangle" in Clan-na-Gaelism since its organization. I have no sympathy whatever with the murderers of Dr. Cronin, nor with Camp 20, in which that foul crime was planned, and by some of the members of which it was subsequently carried out. And while it was conclusively proved at the trial that Dr. Cronin's murder was the result of a conspiracy hatched in Camp 20, yet, through the miserable sniveling (or worse) of a jurymen, the supposed arch-conspirator was acquitted, while his tools and fellow-conspirators were sent to Joliet for life. These men the Ronayne gang are trying to liberate through the Supreme Court. No, sir, I have no sympathy with that crowd; and now, as for the Clan-na-Gael society in general, I may briefly say that it is the "physical force" branch of that part of the Irish people who are endeavoring to secure "home rule" for Ireland. But what does Irish home rule really mean? Ireland is now ruled by the English government, and, aside from landlordism, has the best laws in the world; but under home rule, as recent events have clearly proved, Ireland would be ruled by an Italian dago and his domineering, tyrannical Irish priests. Home rule really means popish rule, priestly rule; and, as a result, the rule of superstition, ignorance, and crime for Ireland.

I am as much opposed to Irish landlordism as any man can be; but God forbid that Ireland should ever come under the rule of the Pope and his superstitious Irish priests; and this surely would be the case were Ireland granted absolute home rule. Popery and popish priests have been ever the curse of Ireland; and not of Ireland alone, but also of every country where they have had the ruling power. Popery is unchanged; it is incapable of change, and it is the same to-day that it was in the days of the Inquisition and the Auto de fe; and giving Ireland absolute home rule would be only placing it under the absolute power of Rome; and when Clan-na-Gaelism to-day resorts to assassination, as in the Phoenix Park murders in Dublin, and the murder of Dr. Cronin, in Chicago, it only proves to us what the result would be were Clan-na-Gaels the law-makers and rulers of Ireland. Yours as ever,

E. RONAYNE.

PROGRESS OF REFORM IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., October 26, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—All great movements must have a leader. Bacon writes: "The people create no danger to princes, except it be where they have great and noble leaders. The anti-secret movement in New England, in general, and in Boston, in particular, has found a suitable leader in Rev. J. P. Stoddard. He is inaugurating a movement which will by-and-by ring out the death-knell of secretism in the East. Dr. John Leighton has beautifully remarked: "In a world like ours, where truth is fallen in the street, and where millions combine to tread righteousness in the mire, there is no recovery unless some living character comes to the rescue, marshals the well-disposed, and thus brings strength out of weakness. Among the once-free citizens of Rome, wrong and disorder continue rampant till Cincinnatus leaves his plough. Captive Israel pines on the banks of the Euphrates till Ezra stands forth before the court of Cyrus. It is to no avail that Europe of the Middle Ages groans under priestly corruption and oppression, till Luther nails his theses to the door of the church. In the Europe of modern times, thousands of helpless men rot in dungeons, and many thousands more look on without bringing aid, till Howard strikes open the iron gates, and gives utterance to the sighing of the prisoners. In confirmation of this truth, we may appeal to the history of all reforms, restorations, revolutions, and changes for the better that have passed over the face of the world. That whole record shows, indeed, that mankind can, in any and all respects, run down rapidly, and very far, without any leading spirit to guide the downward way. But it assures us no less that if things have gone wrong in society, or a nation, or even in an individual heart, a living leader must ever stand forth to check the disastrous tide, and to retrieve what is lost. Israel sinks low and groans in the brick-kilns until a Moses appears to embody and vitalize their sense of oppression. And emancipated Israel again consents to wear the ignominious yoke of Midian till Gideon gives the signal to strike it off. The glory of Solomon's kingdom is forgotten amid the degeneracy and irreligion of a following generation, nor is there an aspiration after the glory lost until this is warmed and energized in the bosom of a Joash. This same truth is verified in all modern times, and alike in all departments of human affairs. It was only in the person of William Tell that the long-endured sufferings of the Swiss cantons and their suppressed indignation found effectual utterance. What must have become of the nationality of Scotland but for the patriotism of Wallace and the perseverance of 'Bruce of Bannockburn.' Where would have been the liberties of the Dutch Republic had not 'William the Silent' appeared to stretch forth his hand before his people?"

We all know that the first two years of the war of the rebellion were a failure because no one came forward who could lead our armies to victory. As Carlyle says: "A king or leader, then, in all bodies of men there must be, be their work what it may."

Last Sabbath a week we preached in the East Cambridge prison to 500 inmates, at 8:30 A. M. Rev. D. McFall, the former pastor of the Second R. P. church of Boston, was the chaplain here for twelve years. At 10:30, and again at 3 o'clock, we preached in the Second R. P. church. At 7:30 P. M. we preached in the United Presbyterian church, Rev. J. Hood, pastor. On Tuesday evening we preached in the Scotch Presbyterian church, Rev. Mr. Gunn, pastor. Yesterday we had a very refreshing time in the public worship in the Second church. Bro. Stoddard and his wife favored us with their presence at both afternoon services.

My sermon on "Political Dissent" was printed last week in the Boston Traveller, from the Baltimore American. The Boston Journal reported my Sabbath afternoon sermons, the past two Monday mornings.

J. M. FOSTER.

LITERATURE.

MARTIN LUTHER: Germany's Great Reformer. Illustrated. By Emma H. Adams, author of "The Tonga Islands," etc., etc. One vol. 16 mo. pp. 159. Oakland, Cal.: Pacific Press Publishing Co. 1891.

The story of Martin Luther should be told and retold, and heeded, as long as the world stands; and never can it be told more opportunely than at the present time, when Romanism is so arrogantly pressing its claims to pervert and govern the civil and religious interests of our Republic. It was at such a time, when the Roman church had become so corrupt and aggressive as to oppress the nations, that Luther came out from amidst the general corruption and denounced the wickedness and follies that characterized her priesthood. As the instrument of the Most High God, he came forth, armed with the Bible and the sword of the Spirit, and laid bare to the gaze of a wondering world the antagonism which his mother church harbored against the teachings and the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. The world felt his power; and the Romish beast, overwhelmed with the enthusiasm which Luther and his fellow-reformers had everywhere aroused, retired to its lair, cowed but unchanged. The world should never forget this signal victory of the Cross over the triple crown. The lessons then so earnestly and effectively taught need to be repeated, and the same enthusiasm aroused. The foe is the same; the enmity and the blasphemy of the beast are still manifested, and only await their opportunity again to oppress the nations. This story of Luther is designed for youthful readers—youths who may yet have to pass through trials and persecutions that were rife in his day. It possesses the interest of a romance, and the spirit of the church of the first-born. It should be widely welcomed.

In the current number of the Missionary Review of the World, Rev. J. T. Gracey, D.D., explains the causes of the recent social or religious disturbances in China. This is done after a patient study of the situation, and is summarized so as to make the subject very plain. The disturbing elements, he says, are: A Pensioned Army—the sustenance of about a million extra soldiers called out by the Taiping rebellion, living in idleness and roaming about the country, frequenting opium dens and other haunts of vice, and burdensome to the government and the people. The Secret Societies, which by some are considered the chief cause of the troubles. We shall print his review of this subject in another column. A Foreign Government—one of Tartar origin, and unpopular as not being Chinese in its character. Foreign Commerce and Displacement, which has seriously interfered with the prosperity of the native vessels and their trade. Superstitious Prejudices, which widely abound and are deeply rooted, creating unpleasant incidents and sentiments. The Imperial Army, which is feeble and rebellious, honey-combed with the secret society of Kolao Hui. The other articles of the Review are varied and interesting for all who find in the missionary efforts of the day the trend of a reform that leads to a more glorious day in the kingdom of our Lord. Published by Funk & Wagnalls, 18-20 Astor Place, New York City.

The November Cosmopolitan opens with a retrospective glance, fully illustrated, of the Massacres of the Roman Amphitheatre, by C. Osborne Ward, the translator and librarian of the Government Department of Labor at Washington. Other papers of considerable general interest are: The Evolution of the Safe Deposit Company, illustrated, by Thos. L. James; The City of the World's Fair, illustrated, by Charles King, Harry Fenn and A. F. Jacassy; Gen. Sherman's Letters, edited by his daughter, illustrated; Alfalfa Farming, illustrated, by John Brisben Walker. Lighter articles are as follows: A Bit of Melody, illustrated, by Robert N. Stephens; Batalha and Alcobaza, illustrated, by A. S. Crowninshield; An Outing with the Queen of Hearts, illustrated, by Albion W. Tourgee; Five Friends, illustrated, by Louise Chandler Moulton; Militia Service, by Horace Porter; A Midnight Landscape (poem), by Archibald Lampman; Among the Windward Islands, illustrated, by William H. Rideing; Mr. Halstead's Current Events; Social Problems, by Edward E. Hale, etc. Published in New York City. This number begins a new volume.

Scribner's Magazine for November contains several important papers, including Carl Lumbholtz's Explorations in the Sierre Madre, illustrated; The Federation of Australia, by Hon. Alfred Deakin, M. P., of Victoria, Aus.; The United States Naval Apprentice System, illustrated, by Lieut. A. B. Wyckoff, U. S. N.; The Ocean Steamer as a Freight Carrier, illustrated, by John H. Gould; The Picturesque—Figures and Costumes—of Holland, illustrated, by Geo. Hitchcock; The Proposed Trans-Saharian Railway, illustrated, by Napoleon Ney; with continuations of the Wreckers, illustrated, by Rob't Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osborne, and Adventures among Books, by Andrew Lang; Mr. Lowell as a Teacher; and Poems, by Julian Hawthorne, and others. A good number. Published by Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York City.

St. Nicholas for November, beginning Vol. 19, will please the young folks at home by the emphasized renewal of the many features with which it is accustomed to entertain its readers. Frederick Schwatka describes, with illustrations, A Dash with Dogs for Life or Death. C. H. Palmer, The Sea-fight off the Azores; Lucie A. Ferguson, To the Summit of Pike's Peak, illustrated David Kee, Russian Children in the Ural Mountains; and there is an abundance of lighter reading, stories, verses and pictures for the smaller children. Published by the Century Co., 33 East 17th street, New York City.

The Ladies' Home Journal for November has continuations of Mrs. Beecher's descriptions of Henry Ward's early days; A Thanksgiving Story; with well-filled Ladies' Departments, social, literary, biographical, instructive and amusing. All the usual specialties, with novelties galore, make up an interesting number. Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia; price, 10 cents.

LODGE NOTES.

James G. Blaine is a loyal Mason, says the Mystic Tie.

There is talk in Rochester, N. Y., of building a Masonic Temple, to cost about $300,000. There are 2,000 Masons in Rochester.

We Pythians of Louisiana have ample cause to congratulate ourselves on our increase of membership. From Jan. 1 1891, to June 30, 1891, we have enrolled over one thousand newly-made knights in our ranks.—Mystic Tie.

When Masonry was first planted in Nebraska in 1855, that Territory contained only 13,000 inhabitants; now it boasts of over 800,000, and still they come. There are now 163 lodges and over 7,000 affiliated Masons in the jurisdiction.

The brotherhoods in Italy are very numerous. It is said there are 8,487, and that their total wealth is $20,000,000. The interest of the vast sum is used almost entirely for processions, festivities, and show, only one-fourth being used for charity.

Dr. A. G. Mackey spent twenty years of research and ten years in writing his Encyclopedia of Freemasonry, yet he never said that there was "nothing to learn." A man may grope a long time in the light of Freemasonry and not learn anything worth knowing.

"Freemasonry is founded upon a rock."—P. G. M. McCalla, of Pa. Yet it is only a vain "system of morality," for it is not founded upon "the Rock Christ Jesus," the "Head-stone of the corner," who will destroy all false systems of worship when he shall fall upon them.

"Masonry has stained no pages of history with records of crime and blood."—Grand Master Mercer. "I assume as a historical truth . . . that William Morgan was . . . murdered in cold blood, by men holding a respectable rank and standing in society."—Hammond's History of New York.

The Master rules the lodge. If he is intemperate in any respect, the entire lodge suffers. And in how many ways it is possible for him to be intemperate—in speech, in spending money too lavishly, in permitting too much liquid refreshment. Brethren, let temperance always prevail in the East, and it will prevail everywhere.—Keystone.

Don't be too severe when one dies soon after initiation. In one large life insurance company sixty-one died within twelve months, twenty-nine in six months, twelve in three months, four in one month, and one in three days. Their examinations were rigorous, and the parties were doubtless good risks as far as could be judged.—G. O. Journal.

We have seen Templars, on gala days and parade occasions, go into saloons "in full Masonic regalia." They received "free drinks," we presume, as they drew after them enough of the curious crowd to make even a heartless saloon keeper smile. Such out-of-place displays of "Masonic regalia" are disgraceful.—Masonic Mogul. Isn't the drinking quite as disgraceful?

Rev. Dr. James B. Walker, author of "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation," said: "There is probably not one in a thousand who enter the lodge, who know, when blindfolded they take the terrible oaths, that Masonry is an anti-Christ and one of the most powerful enemies of Christ that exists. But this is put beyond the possibility of a doubt by the highest Masonic authority."

There are many reasons why certain orders do not grow more rapidly, but the principal reason, in many cases, is the lack of harmony among the supreme officers. Objectors, of course, have their place, but a chronic kicker, who protests against everything and everybody on principle, is better out of the supreme body; his place can be more usefully filled. The man who is always harping on expenses is a nuisance, anyhow.—Secret Society Paper.

"Masonry is no creed, no dogma of faith, no ritual of empty forms; it simply accepts God as the Infinite Father, and his divine Word as the revelation of truth and rule of life."—Grand Master Mercer, of Nebraska. In this respect it in no wise differs from Judaism; but it rejects Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Saviour of men, as did the Jews, and for this sin God has (to speak Masonically) scattered them to the four winds of heaven. What will he do with the Masons? Their "pure theism" will not save them from his wrath.

The publisher has received the following letters and takes pleasure in making them public, as it is a satisfaction after publishing a large advertisement to know that it not only paid the man who inserted the advertisement, but also gave great pleasure to every one who replied:

72 HEYWOOD AVE., ORANGE, }
N. J., Sept. 28th, 1891. }
J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.,
GENTLEMEN:—The Combination box with the "Sweet Home" soap and various other articles ad libitum, together with the "Chautauqua Piano Lamp" with the beautiful red shade and all of the trimmings as promised, has come safely to hand (See ad in Christian Cynosure of Sept. 24), and certainly do not regret that I sent you my order. Very respectfully, (Rev.) S. C. LEONARD.

531 JERSEY ST., QUINCY, Ill., }
Oct. 2nd, 1891. }
J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.,
GENTLEMEN:—The Combination box with the Chautauqua lamp safely received. I am greatly pleased. The Chautauqua Piano Lamp is the handsomest one I ever saw. Enclosed please find $10.00 for another box. Very respectfully,
Mrs J. W. KOCH.

JOHN G. FEE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

will stimulate the faith of hundreds who will see in it how God can work in moral reforms, his wonders to perform, when state, church and nation oppose their combined power. Buy it for your boys and girls and you will not fail to read it yourself.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, $1.00.
Postage, 10 cents extra. Address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 3 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" Vol 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 9th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound). The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnettson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL
With Eighteen Military Diagrams
As Adopted and Promulgated by the
SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE
OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS
At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John G. Under-
Lieutenant General.
WITH THE
UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.
ALSO AN
Historical Sketch and Introduction
By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College
25 cents each.
For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjolom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Reo. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathaniel Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN PARTS AND YOU HAVE 'EM HERE
"NUT-SHELL"
SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Sec. Soc. Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1891.

LAST WEEK'S ISSUE OF THE CYNOSURE was sent to 138 theological seminaries, to 357 colleges and universities, and to 720 professors in these institutions.

Besides the usual amount of reading matter relating to the Anti-Secrecy Reform, that issue also contained a four-page Supplement, sent to the above parties, in which is printed "An Open Letter to Professors in Theological Seminaries and Presidents of Colleges Throughout the English-Speaking World," on the false religion of Freemasonry, together with the testimonies of seventy-two eminent divines, thirty-six noted educators, and thirty-five statesmen, against the evils of the lodge-system.

This Supplement will also be supplied, in any quantity, as a tract for general circulation and sent to any address for two cents per copy, which includes the postage.

It is desired to send this Supplement, free, to the 1,200 or 1,500 secretaries of Young Men's Christian Associations of the United States and Canada; and this will be done if some of our Reform friends will generously donate the necessary funds for that purpose—$20 or $25.

This Supplement is printed on fine book paper, presenting an attractive appearance, and in such form that it may readily be preserved for reference, or distributed by mail.

Its value as an educator in the warfare against the Secret Empire, which is rapidly increasing in numbers and evil influence, is very great—a hundred-fold greater than its price.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

In this issue we conclude the article on the Alliance contributed by Rev. Willard C. Boardman, of Kansas, which we are sure has thus far met with the approval of our readers.

The reputation of this secret political and religious society (for such Bro. Boardman has shown it to be), if the secular press may be credited, is very bad—even treasonable to the government under which it flourishes. But nothing less than this was to have been expected of an organization which has chosen for its presiding officer an ex-Confederate soldier who, during his warfare against the Union, manifested his bitter hatred and cruel instincts.

How bad this reputation is becoming is shown in a dispatch from Loup City, Neb., dated October 29, and printed in the Inter-Ocean of the following day. It reads as follows:

"The Alliance lodges of the State held a political meeting here to-day. An incident of the occasion so insulted the Union veterans of the city that thousands will now desert their ranks. The American flag was hoisted stars down by R. Taylor, the local Alliance store-keeper. The citizens took this as an insult to the flag and sent a committee of two to have it either taken down or put up right, giving him one hour to change it. Three-quarters of an hour passed when the son of an old soldier climbed the ladder and adjusted it properly."

Respecting the sentiments of the president of the Alliance, the following telegram, from Norfolk, Va., October 29, is printed also in the Inter-Ocean:

"Colonel L. L. Polk, president of the Farmers' Alliance, in speaking at Elizabeth City to-day, said in part: 'They talk about politics. The Alliance is as full of politics as an egg is full of meat. Yes, sir; we are into politics, and in there to stay. They talk about party; what is party? It is a nice little collar with a chain. I don't care who is nominated. I will vote as I please.'

"Polk then spoke of the sub-treasury bill, and said that there were eighteen States pledged to stand by this scheme."

Mr. Polk evidently proposes to be a law unto himself and the order of which he is the head. In this respect he reminds us of Rob't G. Ingersoll.

In one of his lectures, Ingersoll was very bitter upon the leaders of Christian denominations, and warned his hearers to be led by no man or set of men in their religious belief. Then, remembering that his sweeping denunciation might, in that respect, include himself, he, in substance, and very adroitly, suggested that they might safely trust in him for leadership! It was a fine combination of theologian and pettifogger. So with Mr. Polk: He abjures party, but professes to be a partisan leader, if he can be supported by the Alliance.

From whence does the Farmers' Alliance derive the power, which it claims, to turn and overturn existing institutions and customs? From the same fountain at which Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and all other important secret societies receive their hidden strength—the iron-clad, secret obligation which each of these orders requires of every one of its adherents. Here is the oath which every member of the Alliance must take when he enters its treasonable empire—for such must every association be which binds a man to uphold its constitution and obey its rulings without reference to the Constitution and laws of our country or of the respective States in which the order is maintained. It comes to us, with the explanation that it was copied from the official ritual of the Alliance:

"I, ———, in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses, do solemnly promise and affirm that I will never reveal any of the secrets of the order to any one not entitled to receive the same.

"I will never, under any circumstances, write, engrave, indite, or print, or in any way make any impression, picture, or design, that would convey any idea of the secret work, signs, or passwords, of this order.

"I will faithfully support the constitution and laws of the order." [Even if the order is treasonable, he makes this unqualified promise, and subjects himself to the authority of the lodge. If he has ever sworn to support the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of any State, he now places himself in the hands of an order that may at any hour, or on any occasion, require him to ignore his allegiance to his country, and antagonize it, or undergo the penalties of the order if he refuses to acknowledge its supremacy over himself or the civil government.]

"I will never wrong, or defraud, or deceive, a member; nor will I permit it to be done, if in my power to prevent it. In my intercourse with a member, I will always speak the truth.

"I will not oppose the admission of any one to membership solely on account of a personal matter," [his personality is now sunken in the lodge;] "nor will I propose any one whom I have reason to believe is an improper person, or who would be an improper member." [That is, when measured by the lodge's standard of excellence, without regard to his ordinary moral and religious qualifications, or his good citizenship; in other words, will he submissively obey the mandates of the lodge?—as he must, or take the consequences.]

"I further solemnly affirm that should I be expelled, or dismissed, from the order, I will faithfully keep this obligation as sacred out of the order as when a member." [There is no release in that war.]

"SO HELP ME GOD!"

This is the society that is everywhere endeavoring to corral the honest farmers of the country and subject them to its unhallowed influences. In its professions, it promises great benefits to the agriculturists and their interests as tillers of the soil; in its practices and teachings it engenders selfishness and promotes interference with the rights of others who do not move in its unhallowed circle. The evidence of this is at hand.

"The town council of Ladonia, Texas," says the New York Witness, "impounded three horses of an Alliance farmer for running at large in the corporation limits. The Alliance has boycotted the town until the horses are returned and the stock law is amended." The rule of the lodge thus overrides the town law—and a very reasonable law. Carry the principle farther, and what civil law will be permitted to stand before the Alliance?

"Think on these things."

—When renewing his subscription to the Cynosure, last week, A. J. Thompson, of Wyocena,

Wis., kindly wrote: "We would not like to be without the paper, it is so independent and outspoken in all things."

THE TENACITY OF ERROR.

"A three-fold cord is not easily broken," but a lying legend that has been wrought into the convictions and literature of a people is still more enduring. Take, as an illustration, the so-called "Blue Laws of Connecticut." It has been proved beyond all question, that there were never any such enactments, but these so-called "laws" were invented by an English writer to ridicule the people of the colony of New Haven. They existed nowhere but in his imagination; and yet we are constantly told, from the press and the platform, that they were actual laws, and all the denials have been powerless to dispel the popular delusion.

Another lying legend is that of the "ascension robes" of the Millerites. It is well known that the disciples of William Miller expected our Lord to appear in October, 1844, and that at that time there was intense interest and much excitement. It is falsely affirmed that those who were waiting for his coming prepared for themselves "ascension robes," and went out and stood in the graveyards. Now this has been most earnestly denied, and has no warrant in fact, and yet is constantly affirmed and very generally believed. A recent writer in the Evangelical Repository says: "Let me try once more to correct a popular fallacy, that the Millerites were generally provided with ascension robes. My father was a leader in the movement. If any one had the facts upon this subject of ascension robes, he had. Father Miller did his best to disprove the ascension robe report. He requested, through the journals of the movement, that if any knew of the existence of robes, they should let him know. Search was made, and none were ever found. An old night-gown on a clothes-line was the nearest approach to it." It is not strange that men should believe a lie, but it is strange that wise and good men should repeat it.

Recently, there was printed in a leading journal the statement that President Finney taught the damnation of infants, and repeatedly declared that "there were infants in hell not a span long." It is not to be believed that such a statement or doctrine can be found in the teachings of any American divine. Surely it cannot in the writings of President Finney. Why will sensible people repeat such falsehoods?

In view of these absurdities, we should not think it strange that Masons repeat, and people believe, that Solomon was a Freemason, and that a Masonic lodge was held in the Temple; but it is little harder to account for the very common opinion that "we owe to Freemasonry the preservation of the Christian Scriptures." There is variation in the statement. Sometimes it is affirmed that it was in the days of Josiah, the good King of Judah, that Hilkiah found the Book of the Law, which (it is alleged) the Masons had saved from extermination; and sometimes it is said that it was during the dark ages of the Christian era that they kept the sacred records. All such twaddle is worthy of the lying system it is meant to uphold, but unworthy of the good men who sometimes believe and repeat it.

ADMINISTER ON YOUR OWN ESTATE.

If you do not, the lawyers will, and the heirs presumptive, rather than the heirs apparent, will share in what is left after the legal sharks are satisfied.

Samuel J. Tilden, shrewd and talented as he was, and a great lawyer besides, made a will devising his estate as he wished to have it distributed after his death. He had accumulated a large fortune, and supposed that he had the power to dispose of it. But he was mistaken. He left liberal allowances to his heirs, and funds in trust, to a large amount, for charitable purposes; and ever since the contents of his will were made public, it has been attacked by the strongest judicial batteries until now, when the court decides that the entire estate must be divided among his legal heirs, while his charitable bequests are lost to the chosen beneficiaries forever.

Had Mr. Tilden administered upon his own estate, near the close of his life, and scattered it among those whom he intended to benefit by his will, all this trouble and expense would have been averted and the sordidness of his survivors defeated.

It is getting to be so that wills are of but little account. Time was when they were sacred, quite as respected as the memory of the generous and benevolent devisors; but in these days the memory of the dead is no longer honored, his wishes are despised, and the principal interest centers in his estate, with the question: "How much did he leave, and who gets it?"

If any of the Cynosure readers have any money to bestow upon the cause of Reform in which it is engaged, or upon any missionary or other worthy enterprise, we advise them, before they go hence, to know that their property is safely placed where it will do the most good and in accordance with their respective wishes. If they leave it for posthumous distribution, the devil is far more likely to get it than is the Lord.

At present the National Christian Association is paying 6 per cent annuities on several sums of money which have been bequeathed to it. At the death of the devisors, these annuities will cease, and the investment funds will then become the property of the Association. This plan of investing money in the work of the Association benefits the investor and materially aids the cause of Reform during the life-time of the devisor. In other words, it carries with it a double blessing—"it blesses him who gives, and him who takes," and nobody but the legal shark is disappointed.

LODGE MALEVOLENCE.

"The Bible Mode of Baptism," ex-Pres. J. Blanchard's forcible little tract, which was recently noticed in the Cynosure, is now for sale at this office—price, 6 cents, including postage.

The N. C. A. has experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining copies sufficient to meet the demand for it, from the house which publishes it. It has been hinted in some quarters, in consequence of its author's previous experience in this direction, (but we hope not) that its distribution has been hindered because of the following paragraph printed in it. Speaking of sprinkling and immersion, the ex-President says: "Christ blesses both modes of baptism; for his command includes both. Both are purifying with water. No other denomination has excelled Baptists in fearless fidelity to the Bible and reforms. Bernard, Stearns, Pease, Colver, and others, bared their bosoms to the vilification and vengeance of the secret altars in 1826-32. And Gordon, Gifford and Grant, in Boston, with hosts of Baptists, North and South, are rallying for Christ against the same altars of Baal."

It seems almost incredible that so slight an allusion to the lodge as this should stir up its adherents to interfere with the circulation of so worthy a little tract; but it may be so—Christianity finds no fellowship in lodge worship, and the lodge has no fraternal interest in Christianity or anything else that opposes it.

Some years ago ex-Pres. Blanchard wrote another religious tract, of which a certain publishing house undertook the issue. Considerable time elapsed, and no one seemed to know aught of its publication; it was not to be found in its natural channels of distribution. Mischief was suspected, on account of an unfavorable expression against the lodge system which it contained; and the ex-President undertook a personal investigation of the causes of its non-publication. An incognito examination revealed to him that nearly the whole edition had been relegated to seclusion—withdrawn from the market.

—“Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer cloud,
Without our special wonder?”

—Rev. J. M. Foster, our active co-worker and correspondent, recently residing in Cincinnati, Ohio, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Chambers Street Reformed Presbyterian church in Boston, and entered upon his duties there. His present postoffice address is 516 Pineknay street, Boston.

—The Christian Conservator notes the fact that efforts are being made by the United Brethren church to procure sufficient land at Harvey, Ill., on which to erect a church. By the generosity of Walter Thomas Mills, the denomination is enabled to purchase a suitable site for a reasonable sum, and the Conservator calls upon the friends of the church to respond liberally to the demands of the occasion. If possible the building will be begun this fall. A part of the projected movement is the establishment of a church publishing house at the same point. The Cynosure wishes the enterprise success.

THE WISCONSIN CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE.

The State Christian Association of Wisconsin met in the Reformed Presbyterian church at Vernon, Waukesha county, October 29, at 7 P. M. Rev. Isaiah Faris conducted the devotional exercises; after which an able address was delivered by Rev. J. K. Galloway, on the Relation of the Secret Orders to the Christian Church. He was followed by an admirable address by Rev. Samuel H. Swarts, D.D., of Chicago, on How Shall we Regard Odd-fellowship? The attendance was not large, but thoroughly sympathetic and appreciative.

Next morning, at 9 o'clock, the conference again met.

After a season of devotion, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. J. K. Galloway, of Vernon; Vice-President, Rev. Isaiah Faris; Secretary, Rev. W. W. Ames, of Menominee; Treasurer, J. W. Wood, of Baraboo.

Committees were chosen on Finance, on Resolutions and Enrollment, and much discussion took place as to work in this State.

At the afternoon session, letters were read from J. Griffin, Hortonville; E. Padden, Hudson; E. E. Browne, Martin; M. N. Butler, Avalon, Mo., and the Baptist church at Menominee, Wis.

The Committee on Finance reported all expenses of the convention paid, and $10 on hand, to be used for State work.

Elder W. W. Ames was engaged as State lecturer for the coming year, and brothers W. W. Ames, D. S. Dean and J. W. Wood were chosen a committee to call future meetings.

The Committee on Resolutions presented the following, which, after due discussion, were adopted:

WHEREAS, The secret lodge system, though heathen in its origin, is world-wide in its prevalence; and,

WHEREAS, In our land its influence is manifest in the corruption of public morals, the perversion of religion, and the impairment of civil authority; and,

WHEREAS, The recent developments of its power in China show it to be there the uncompromising foe to Christianity—murdering missionaries, destroying their property, and successfully defying the efforts of the government for their protection; and,

WHEREAS, In all its forms there is a manifest unity in its essential characteristics; therefore,

1. Resolved, That as Christians and as citizens, we renew our earnest protest against all forms of organized secrecy, as injurious to the cause of Christianity and hurtful to the general welfare.

2. Resolved, That we earnestly entreat our Christian brethren of every name to examine this subject in the light of God's Word, and to follow the example of him who said; "I ever spake openly; in secret have I said nothing."

3. Resolved, That while we are in hearty sympathy with all Christian efforts to suppress the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating drinks, we deplore the existence of the secret temperance orders, as out of harmony with the simplicity of the Gospel of Christ, and not well calculated to secure the proposed end; and we further believe that the secret lodge system is one of the greatest obstacles to the promotion of the temperance reform.

4. Resolved, That we do not believe that the interests of the farmers, or the welfare of the old soldiers, require that they unite in secret combinations; and that as such organizations are purely selfish in their nature, they are liable to be used for evil purposes, and to be hurtful to the welfare of all classes of society.

5. Resolved, That for the prosecution of this reform, we urge the increased circulation of the Christian Cynosure, and we recommend the employment of Elder W. W. Ames, of Menominee, as the agent for the National Christian Association in this State; and we pledge him our sympathy and support.

The evening session was devoted to an able address by Rev. Isaiah Faris, on the Relations of the Secret Orders to Civil Government, and the reading of a paper by Rev. H. H. Hinman on the question, Is the G. A. R. a Beneficent Institution?

The churches and people of Vernon were thoroughly sympathetic and very hospitable. It is believed that much good was done, and that Bro. Ames will have before him a most encouraging work. Pledges to the amount of about $35 were taken for State work.

H. H. HINMAN.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

a faithful testimony on all reforms of the day, ours was not new to this people.

Going toward Walton I was entertained over night by Mr. McDonald, who lives in what was the Covenanter parsonage occupied by Dr. McAllister for many years. After consultation with friends, it was thought best to have a lecture in Walton, and the City Hall has been engaged for that purpose. Rev. Mr. Dickie, who is supplying the U. P. church in Walton at present, kindly offered to make the preliminary arrangements, advertise, etc. I am to return and give the address on Thursday evening, Oct. 29th. I am writing in the study of Rev. Mr. Pressley, "dominie" of the U. P. church in this place. [All the ministers through this county are called "dominies."] I shall give one or more addresses here, but details are not yet arranged.

I regret exceedingly that I shall not now be able to meet those friends who wrote in response to my letters, inviting me to their towns for work. I shall not forget you, friends, but, if spared, will try and visit your towns and do what I can.

I have a strong attachment for the Empire State. I recall with gratitude to God my acquaintance with F. W. Capwell and others, who, being dead, yet speak. Their self-sacrificing lives have done much to cheer in times of adversity.

WALTON, N. Y., Oct. 30, 1891.—I am reminded that a week has passed since I addressed you. Only as we improve the opportunities of the fleeting moments do we accomplish good.

The past, as previous weeks, has been filled with labors abundant. I have spoken four times to attentive audiences. Sabbath morning I addressed Rev. Mr. Getty's people, at New Kingston. My reception there was most cordial. Rev. Mr. Getty is not large in stature, but his earnest and untiring work in the Master's cause has won him a large circle of friends and supporters. His people have shown their regard for him by twice refusing his resignation, tendered because of poor health. At a meeting of his elders, it was decided to invite me to lecture on Tuesday evening. Though that evening proved dark and stormy, a good congregation gathered. One old gentleman came five miles.

On Sabbath evening I spoke at a Union service in the Covenanter church at Bovina Centre. Because of previous engagements, Rev. Mr. Allen, who was supplying this people with preaching, had to be away. Rev. Mr. Pressley, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, opened the service, and gave me a first-class recommendation to the people. I am indebted to Domonie Pressley for much personal kindness. Though differing widely in our views of church work, we discussed our differences in a friendly way.

Mr. Miller, an elder in the Bovina United Presbyterian church, conveyed me to and from my Sabbath morning service, driving over sixteen miles. My visit with him was very pleasant.

I found one Mason in Bovina Centre who felt much hurt by my address. As he asked half a dozen questions, almost in the same breath, it would have been folly to have attempted an answer. I told him how he could get his questions answered if he were an honest inquirer, and left him to his own reflections. As well might one attempt to reason with Niagara Falls as with an unreasonable man. Nothing but the grace of God can do him any good.

I spoke in the Town Hall here last evening, to an audience of some two hundred. As politics are in the air, and political meetings the order of the day, it was evident that some of the unregenerate came to the lecture, not understanding its nature; after they had withdrawn and gone to the saloon, or wherever they might find congenial companionship, I found myself with an appreciative audience, who listened attentively to the truths I had to bring. Several belonging to the Masonic lodge remained during the entire lecture and contributed in the collection. An exceptionally good number of young gentlemen and ladies were present.

I am to preach, by appointment, in Mundale on Sabbath, and return home next week. Wife writes that our little girl "wants papa to come home." As she is but a little over a year old, she does not yet see the necessity of Anti-masonic lectures.

W. B. STODDARD.

THE HOME.

LIFE'S VOLUME.

Open before my wondering eyes,
Great God, life's mystic volume lies;
I wait to see thy hand define
The fadeless record of each line.

No leaf once closed may I retrace
To add a word, or word erase;
Nor may I guess the joy or gloom
Inscribed on pages yet to come.

The past in light I clearly count,
Judge their intent, tell their amount;
But hid in clouds I cannot see
The history yet awaiting me.

But knowing this, that, great or small,
My Father's hand will write it all;
I trust the future, and submit
To what is past—what's writ is writ.

But hear this prayer, O Power Divine!
Thou lift'st each leaf, and writ'st each line,
That where my hands have left a stain
Christ's blood may make all pure again.

Where the last sentence hath its end
In mercy, Maker, Father, Friend,
Write for the sake of thy dear Son,
"Servant of Jesus Christ, well done!"
—Charles F. Deems, D.D.

OUR ROCK.

The sea ebbs and flows, or roars with rage, but Christ, our Rock, remains unmoved. Why, then, need we heed the changes all around us? Why need we dread the impotent foaming of the maddened billows? Why need we fear when the wicked rage and our foes imagine vain things? Why should our hearts quail if all hell should seem let loose against us? The towering waves may strike against our Rock with terrific force and thundering sound, but only to recoil upon themselves. For a moment our Rock may seem to shake beneath our feet, or we may fear that we shall be swept from its crest; but in another instant we shall find that our cowardice was groundless. Let us stand firmly and fearlessly, till the storms of life be overpast. Eternity will soon dawn on our darkness. The meridian splendor of that cloudless day shall speedily chase away the storms that now threaten us. The unruffled sea of glass shall succeed the raging billows that now threaten to engulf us. Be of good cheer!—Exchange.

WRITE HOME.

Night in the city, at least so your watch says, though the light of the electric lamps makes it hard to believe. But far above shine the stars, careless that a brighter light than theirs is serving us. Look up, young man, at their pale, steady gleam, and think of the far-away home where your mother waits and, looking at the evening star, thinks, "It shines on my boy, too."

How long since you have written home? Was it last week, last month, or, alas, last year? You are engrossed in business, and the rush and worry of the great city so fill your mind that the old people are almost forgotten, though occasionally you pull yourself up and say, "I must write home. When I have achieved something great, I will write and tell them of my success."

Sad error. The world cares only for your success, but that dear old heart at home will be interested in failure as well as success; only let her hear from you often. Oh, if the Billys and Johns and Tommys could realize how their mothers' hearts hunger for news, they would take time to write often and regularly. Give up the play tonight—even a visit to your sweetheart, if necessary, that mother may have a letter. Your sweetheart's lips may be riper, her cheek fairer, yet her love is less unselfish than the dear mother's who gave you all she had freely, when but for her care you would have perished.

Stop and think. Don't you remember how mother gave up the black dress she had planned to get that you might have a new coat? Or was it a watch? You will remember something, I know, of sacrifice for your benefit. Then repay it now; and sometimes at Christmas, or, better yet, on a birthday, send home some little gift. Even a handkerchief or pair of gloves will be valued far above their actual worth if sent to mother by the boy she loves. Get your photograph taken and send it home so mother can say, "Billy sent me his picture last week," and show it to the neighbors as proof positive that she is not forgotten. How the mother's heart dreads to admit forgetfulness. A thousand pitiful excuses are made for the absent one ere she will admit it herself; and then she carefully conceals it from others.

I heard a young man in one of our western cities refuse to attend a game of ball because he would not have time to write his weekly letter to his mother. "Nonsense; who cares for that? Let it go for once," was his companion's reply. But the young man answered bravely, "No, not for a dozen games. Mother would surely think I was sick, and I don't want her to worry. She is not very strong, you know." I longed to take his hand and express my admiration for his decision, but they passed on, and I thought there was one mother at all events whose son did not forget to write.

God bless the boys in their new homes, and give them all success, but grant that their hearts may turn toward the old home and that they may write often.—Victor Gage Kimbert.

A SHOP PAPERED WITH THE BIBLE.

A correspondent of the Friend of Missions in Japan tells the following interesting story of a lady who went into a cake shop to buy some cakes for her children. While waiting for the cakes she saw that the walls were papered with leaves from the Bible. This was so strange that she asked the old woman about it; and she told the lady that one day, passing by a book shop, she saw a pile of papers thrown away as useless. As her shop needed papering, she thought this was just the thing, and took some of it home, and pasted it over the walls. One evening her grandson came in, and began reading aloud from the paper on the wall. The old woman was so interested in what she heard that she listened eagerly, and got all who would to read it to her. One day a young man came to ask her if she understood it, and whether she was a Christian. She told him how much she enjoyed hearing it, but she did not understand it much; so he promised to take her to church the next day. After this she attended regularly, and became an earnest Christian. She now keeps a stock of tracts by her, and into every bag of little cakes she drops one. Is not this encouraging? All that good came out of leaves of the Bible thrown away, which were considered of no use.—Western Christian Advocate.

A SONG IN THE DARK

A suburban family has a canary which has been a cherished inmate of the household for fifteen years. The bird has been completely paralyzed as to one leg and one wing, and holds his poor withered leg close to his body; but he would hop about cheerfully enough on the other leg were it not for the fact that he has become totally blind with age. Not a ray of light can he see, and he has to summon the family when he wants to mount his perch, and he does not hesitate to summon them on such occasions by a call they have no difficulty in understanding. Whenever the sun comes out and the bright light strikes his cage, he bursts forth into a song as joyous and musical as any canary ever sang. Some gleam of the brightness penetrates the film over his old eyes, and he pours out his torrent of vocal rejoicing as if he could see far out over the fields illuminated by the sunlight. His cheerfulness, amid tremendous discouragement, has been an example of bravery that has carried more than one human being through seasons of trouble and despondency.—Anonymous.

WHY A PARROT DIED BROKEN-HEARTED.

Dr. Charles Dunlap tells a very good parrot story. The parrot was an ordinary green bird, with a bright yellow head, filled with brains of an extra quality. When it arrived at the doctor's house it looked much the worse for wear, with dirty feathers and a generally dilapidated appearance. It soon commenced to make up for its deficiency in personal appearance by its extraordinary intellectual qualifications. It would sing the "Girl I Left Behind Me," altered to the "Poll I Left Behind Me," words and music perfectly. It would play hide-and-seek with the doctor, and when anything funny was told at the table it would be the first to laugh, and laugh in a boisterous manner. It would imitate anything it heard. Its favorite in the house was a servant girl who was always very good to it. This girl, when she was peeling apples or peaches, always remembered Polly, and was so good to the bird that it contracted a violent affection for her. Some time afterward the girl left; when she was gone Polly underwent a complete change. It became sad, silent and melancholy. It refused to be comforted, and would not say a word to any one. It walked around the house with drooping feathers and an air of deep dejection. Some weeks afterward the girl came back, and Polly brightened up from the first day it saw her. It commenced to talk and laugh again, and seemed its own self once more. The girl only remained a day or two, however, and when she left poor Polly again drooped. Nothing seemed to revive it, and in a few weeks it sickened and died, literally of a broken heart. There was great grief in the household when Polly died, and its place has never been filled. Dr. Dunlap says that "Polly Hamilton," as the bird was called, was the only parrot he ever saw which would talk "on demand," that is, whenever you wanted it to.—Selected.

SYMPATHY WITH CHILDREN.

There is no time when young children are more deserving of tender attention than when death invades the home circle. When a little brother or sister is taken away it is the parents who are the objects of special sympathy. Friends call and speak consoling words or offer comfort through letters. Flowers and other favors testify in silent ways that they are held in loving remembrance by many hearts. If Christians, they are sustained by faith in the Saviour's words and a sweet sense of his presence. Meantime, in too many cases, the very young members of the household are left to suffer silently. There is no willful neglect, but no one, unless having had a similar experience in early life, seems to understand how deeply their childish sensibilities are wounded. There is something pathetic in the intensity of a child's grief. Older persons, who are sustained by a hope of reunion beyond the grave, fail to appreciate how, in a child's estimate, years are as an eternity. To him the separation is final. If adults realized how these little ones cower and sob in the dark, how they brood in silence over the imagined terrors of the grave, more pains would be taken to caress and cheer them during these painful experiences from which no home is exempt.—The Congregationalist.

POLITENESS.

"Oh, he's just as polite!" said little Mabel, ecstatically. "He picks up things, and runs for things, and says, 'Excuse me.'"

"Who?" I asked.

"That Carver boy," she said, pointing to a handsomely dressed little fellow across the room.

"That boy," I cried. "Why, I'm visiting at his house, and he bangs the door and whistles while his mother is talking, and says 'Don't bother me,' when she asks him to shut the window. Are you sure it is that boy?"

"Yes," answered Mabel, mournfully. "Though folks do say his manners are all put on away from home."

"Just so."

When do you put on your manners? And when do you take them off?

A FATHER'S LESSON TO HIS SON.

One day Robert's father saw him playing with some boys who were rude and unmannerly. He had observed for some time a change for the worse in his son; and now he knew the cause. He was very sorry; but he said nothing to Robert at the time. In the evening he brought from the garden six rosy-cheeked apples, put them on a plate, and presented them to Robert. He was much pleased at his father's kindness, and thanked him. "You must lay them aside for a few days, that they may become mellow," said the father; and Robert cheerfully placed the apples in his mother's store-room.

Just as he was putting them aside, his father laid on the plate the seventh apple, and desired him to allow it to remain there.

"But, father," said Robert, "this apple will spoil all the others!"

"Do you think so? Why should not the fresh apples rather make the rotten one fresh?" said the father. And with these words he shut the door of the room.

Eight days afterward he asked his son to open the door and take out the apples. But what a sight presented itself! The six apples which had been so round and rosy-cheeked were quite rotten, and spread a bad smell through the room.

"Father," cried he, "did I not tell you that the rotten apple would spoil the good ones? You did not listen to me."

"My boy," said the father, "have I not told you often that the company of bad children will make you bad? Yet you do not listen to me. See in the state of the apples that which will happen to you if you keep company with wicked boys."

HOW TO LIGHTEN OUR LOT.

Take kindly all that is kindly meant;
Be first to thank, be last to resent;
Give smiles to all who give smiles to thee,
And those who come frowning, feign not to see;
And, oh! believe me, this is the plan
To lighten, to brighten, the lot of man.

Seem blind when the faults of a friend appear;
Seem deaf when the slanderer's voice you hear;
Seem dumb when the curious crowd you meet,
And they bid you the slanderous tale repeat;
And, oh! believe me, this is the plan
To lighten, to brighten, the lot of man.

—Anonymous.

TEMPERANCE.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

HOW THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION WAS VIEWED IN OLDEN DAYS.

[An address which was delivered at Saxton's River, Vt., by J. Blanchard, and published in the old Intelligencer September 11, 1830.]

[Concluded.]

But the esteem in which strong drink was held by the inspired writers, even in that comparatively harmless state, is best inferred from their own language. The prophet Isaiah exclaims, while denouncing the fierce judgments of God, "Woe to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty is as a fading flower, which are on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome with wine." And again, "Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue till night, till wine inflame them." And in another place, "Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink." Solomon exhorts us to "be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh." St. John, the divine, in the Apocalypse, speaks of the river of the water of life; but what is the figure into which he introduces wine? "And these shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation." These, and other similar passages, I apprehend, clearly evince the rebuke which the use of wine, except in cases of extreme debility, ever received at the hands of the men of God.

Thus have we hastily considered some of the effects, legitimate and inevitable, of ardent spirits on the interests of this town, and the well-being of man; and briefly noticed some of the reasons why many of the enlightened and celebrated, as well as the philanthropic and humane, maintain that they may and ought to be rejected by the laborer at his toil, spurned from the social circle, and even abandoned by those writhing in disease. It now remains for us, seriously and with strictest impartiality, to come to the solemn inquiry: At whose door lies the cause of all this misery? This is a question of most tremendous moment; and one the correct decision of which we should seek with the most intense, the most thrilling interest. There are but two classes concerned. The one claim to be temperate and rational beings; the other, truth has branded with the title of unreasonable, intemperate and ruined men. On the shoulders of which class must the guilt forever rest, of entailing on a community a curse feebly figured in the language: "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish?" Methinks I hear a response from the graves of thousands frozen in immature death, THE TEMPERATE! And do not our utterances echo to the sound? I know that for ages past the wise and good, as oft as they have deplored the prevalence of this vice, have thought only of those who had thrown off all moral restraint, as the authors of this evil. But they have been ever under mistake. The fountain from which the devastating floods of intemperance have issued has, till within a few years, been hid in obscurity more impenetrable than the darkness which cursed the Egyptians; and the bleeding shoulders of the drunkard have been laden with a cross which belongs to other necks. Render every drunkard in the United States immortal; let them reel through our land till the angel shall swear that "time shall be no more," and they will not have added one individual to their ranks through their own influence. The influence of sots, and their influence directly and powerfully, too, goes to induce people to abstain from a practice which will assimilate them to themselves. Drunkards receive their recruits ready drilled for duty from among the temperate. It is preposterous to reproach the drunkard with being the procuring cause of this affliction. A disease preys on his organs, which, to use the expression of the prophet, "enlargeth his desire as hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied." As well might we blame the scathed wretch attacked by the burning plague that once strewn with dead carcasses the streets of Athens, for rushing into the cooling fountain which softened his pain and sealed his death, as blame the drunkard for flying to his bottle to still the gnawing in his bosom. Neither is it on his account that inebriating liquors are manufactured and vended. Let the temperate abstain, and where is the merchant who could bring to his shop this article for a class of people of whom it may be said, "they never make payment but by tender of their bodies." Think not then of casting the crime off from yourselves upon the drunkard. Arise, then, and shake off the imputation. Do ye not resist the idea of being slaves, and of lying down in abject servitude? Acknowledge no longer the unlimited and galling sway of the tyrant Habit. When you meet your friends, and in your moments of pleasure, use not the accursed potation which banishes from this world all that deserves the name of friendship. At your funeral ceremonies, above all, abhor to insult the departed spirit of your friend by using over his coffin that which sends to be his companions in the grave millions of his fellow mortals. At all times and all places forbear indulgence in a habit which needs but to become general and then—

* * * * * "The sun grows pale;
A mournful, visionary light o'erspreads
The cheerful face of nature; earth becomes
A dreary desert; and heaven frowns above."

Gentlemen and ladies of the society which I have the honor to address:

As an auspicious omen, as the harbinger of better days, I hail the organization of your society. Endeared as this place is to me by recollections at once the most interesting and permanent, by all the dreams of childhood and the enchanting visions of infancy that cluster around the place of our birth, bright as the sunlit clouds of evening, or the dew-spangled hedge at morn, I cannot but rejoice at the prospect that the cup of woe, which many, oh, too many of our citizens, have drained to its very dregs, is about to be stripped of its allurements and enticements and appear in its native deformity, grim and ghastly, as the fabled monster that guarded the gates of hell! I cannot but rejoice that we have the slightest reason to hope that the day is about to dawn when there shall not be a house among us whose walls daily echo the sighs of the disconsolate mother, the cries of squalid and frightened children, and more than all, the muttered curses of the abandoned and besotted husband. Such a state of things, be it remembered, is in your power to produce. Assert your independence. Partake no more of that which nothing but habit has caused to seem necessary. Make but the exertion and the spell is broken. Let your motto be, "bellum exterminandi," and if there be an addition let it be this: "Palsied be the hand that places the name to our constitution and the cup to the lips of the same individual." Thus firmly established on the principles of entire abstinence, be assured you shall not want helpers. The sage predictions we hear frequently of the final failure of the cause we advocate, if they prove anything, but prove the ignorance of their authors. Whether we live or die, this cause will prevail. It acknowledges no party; it is the pander of no sect. The Catholic and Protestant, the infidel and Christian, prompted by humanity and fellow-feeling, which virtues in the human soul alone remain unmarred, have united to banish from existence this common enemy of man. Although the exertions for the suppression of this worst of evils are yet in their infancy, the success which has attended them has far outstripped the most sanguine expectations. Not one year has elapsed since the Rev. Mr. Fraser visited Scotland, where he found but one society of this kind, one small society at Greenock, and that struggling for a doubtful existence amid the deafening clamors of opposition. Through his exertion, seconded by Prof. Edgar, of Belfast, Ireland, when he left the country, societies had been established at Glasgow and Edinburgh, which had enrolled thousands of those who had pledged themselves to use no more ardent spirits. At the time he embarked for America 100 societies were existing in Ireland, and many in different parts of England. The same gentleman, Mr. Fraser, stated in a temperance meeting in New York the present season that all these exertions in England, Ireland and Scotland originated in their receiving a report of the American Temperance Society. When we look at our own country, prospects animating in the extreme everywhere are presented. From our own beloved New England to the United States garrisons in the distant West, we constantly receive reports that augur of success. Long has it been affirmed that vessels at sea never would be navigated unless their hulls carried the bane of seamen. They have been considered a refuge to which intemperance, though expelled from the land, might safely retreat, and forever brood over its victims and devotees, as the night-raven feeds with impunity on the corpse that floats on the surface of the deep. But, thank heaven! this question is put beyond the reach of controversy or of cavil. Already sails bend to every breeze over hulls that bear on their prow the motto, "We have no rum aboard." And soon may we hope for that period, when the stars of Liberty that now reflect the sunbeams of every clime, will no more be robbed of their lustre by the prevalence of a habit that does more to enfeeble our navy, and destroys the life of more of our mariners than the united wars of seven Englands! These are the facts on which is grounded the assertion: whether we live or die, this cause must prevail. But I should feel guilty of an insult upon this society should I urge the success of a cause like this, as a reason why we should become its strenuous supporters. 'Tis the cause of all that is desirable in happiness, in opposition to all that is fearful in woe. With this constantly fixed in our minds, it is impossible that any of us should prove recreant to his obligation, and a traitor to the cause. Conscious that the eyes of the friends and enemies of the object we aim to accomplish are fixed upon us, let us go forward. And though the nation beside lie down in abject slavery under this most cruel of tyrants, as long as this society shall have a member among the living, let not the cause of temperance want an advocate. And though the Sun of Freedom, faint and sickly, should set in an ocean of ardent spirits, let us, while we live, remain steadfast, immovable; and when time with us shall have become Eternity, let this epitaph be found at our heads: Here lie those who died free!

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE BRETHERN CHURCH ON TEMPERANCE.

The committee on temperance reported the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Indiana conference of the Brethren church affirms its devotion to the principles and policy of prohibition, believing it to be the only effective method of dealing with the liquor traffic.

2. As Christ came not to regulate, but to destroy the works of the devil, we believe that destruction instead of regulation of the liquor traffic is the only policy which Christians can consistently endorse.

3. We maintain that the license of an evil is an agreement with death and a covenant with hell.

4. We deprecate the attempt of any party to maintain the legalized saloon in our States, and believe that such party is an enemy of the home, the church and the state, and in alliance with the dangerous elements that menace the purity of our home, and the safety of the commonwealth.

5. We believe it monstrous mockery to pray, "Thy kingdom come," and then vote for the devil's mightiest agency, the licensed saloon.

The report was adopted by a large majority.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON VII.—Fourth Quarter.—November 15.

SUBJECT.—Christ's prayer for his disciples.—John 17: 1-19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He ever liveth to make intercession for them.—Heb. 7: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 17: 1-10. T.—John 17: 11-19. W.—John 17: 20-26. Th.—1 Peter 3: 8-13. F.—Col. 3: 1-15. S.—Jude 20-25. S.—Heb. 7: 19-25.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Christ's prayer to be glorified. Vs. 1-6. Alford mentions it as unusual with John to describe our Lord's appearance or gestures; but on this occasion there must have been something peculiar and wonderful in his upward look which made an indelible impression. "Glorify thy Son." We are told to seek the glory which cometh from God alone, and Christ, who is our pattern, never sought any other. Only as the Father should thus honor him by sustaining and upholding him through this last dreadful hour, could he bring those to glory for whom he was now to lay down his life. We may seek the glory which comes from God without any selfishness. We may strive and pray for it with the same earnestness with which we crush out all desire for that which comes from men. "That thy Son also may glorify thee." All the glory that God puts upon us in acknowledging and blessing our work must return to him again as its fountain-head. But Christ here speaks of a reciprocal glorifying between equals; and indeed all through this wonderful prayer it is his divinity which is manifested. He is shown to us as one with the Father, having power over all men to give eternal life to all who will be his disciples. Perhaps no expression of Scripture has been more misunderstood than this. Many think of eternal life as a mere continuity of existence. If this were all, it would be a poor gift indeed to humanity. Christ, who is the Truth, says that eternal life is to know God and himself. When we have in our souls the desires, the affections, the capacities that only eternal life can satisfy we have the earnest of it; but it is only through the knowledge of God in Jesus Christ that we can be lifted out of our low natural plane of being into that higher one where we thirst for spiritual joys. To know God is to know him as a friend, and thus grow continually into his likeness, until we have insensibly lost our grasp on temporal things, and yearn only after that which is abiding. Eternal life and the capacity to enjoy only what is fleeting and temporary cannot exist together. The two things are self-contradictory. It follows, then, that the life eternal must begin here in its undeveloped germ, like a seed hidden in the ground; though it must have its full fruition in a higher sphere.

2. Christ's prayer for his disciples. Vs. 7-17. "I have manifested thy name." This he had done in his character and in his life. He had "worked the works of God." So in our measure we are to manifest Christ. If all who call themselves Christians would do this, how soon the world would be won to God! The disciples, as we know, were very slow to believe, full of Jewish prejudices, and even, sometimes, of bitter childish rivalry. They thought the kingdom was one of "meat and drink," instead of "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," as they afterwards learned. But Christ makes no mention in this prayer of their frailties and imperfections. It seems as if he would cover them all over with the mantle of his divine love, as a mother would hide the faults of her child. Our hearts may condemn and Satan accuse us for many a short-coming, but if we truly love our Master, "we have an Advocate, Jesus Christ the righteous," who "will present us faultless" before the throne of his Father. Not that we are perfect as yet; but Christ sees in us what we shall be when all his work shall be finished in us. "I pray not for the world." Not because his heart did not yearn over the hopelessly lost, but because it would be no use to pray for those who deliberately rejected his reign and preferred to be under the dominion of Satan. The blessings which he was asking for his disciples would not be suited to or be desired by the world at large. Heavenly joys, heavenly victories, heavenly progress, are blessings only to the heavenly minded. "I am no more in the world." He seems to have lost sight for the moment of the death awaiting him, and speaks as if his work were already accomplished. Three specific things Christ prays for, embodying his last and tenderest wishes for his disciples. (1) That they may be one. The 23d verse shows that only through this unity of his disciples will the world be convinced. This proves what experience is now teaching us: that sectarianism is one of the greatest foes of missions. (2) That they may be kept. Nowhere else is the expression Holy Father, implying that only a perfectly holy God can keep us holy, used. (3) That they may be sanctified. The Christian is not a fossil but a growing thing, and sanctification refers to growth. We are to be sanctified by the truth. It may come to us through nature, through revelation, or by Providence. If we are obedient to it, we "shall grow thereby." "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world." The world is our post of duty until God calls us home. Christ would not have his disciples bury themselves in monkish retreats, but go forth and fight bravely against all evil, remembering that one has prayed for them who never offered a single petition that his Father did not answer.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Mr. Spurgeon's works have been translated into the Norse language. At Christiana colporteurs have circulated upward of 87,600 copies of his sermons alone. His British Colportage Association reports that there are ninety colporteurs now engaged. Last year they sold $50,000 worth of literature, and took part in 10,246 services or meetings.

—Dr. Arthur T. Pierson began his supply of Spurgeon's pulpit on Sunday, Oct. 25. Mr. Spurgeon was greatly gratified when Dr. Pierson accepted the invitation to stand in his place until his health was restored.

BRETHREN.

—In the Michigan conference of Brethren churches, the following question came up for discussion: "Since the New Testament, our creed, positively forbids the taking of oaths, can this conference tolerate Freemasonry or any oath-bound secret organization?" After a full and free discussion, upon motion it was decided to defer the question for an indefinite time.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The First Church of Chicago gave Dr. and Mrs. Goodwin an enthusiastic reception at the church parlors Oct. 20. There was a very large gathering, with representatives from most of the other churches of the city. Mr. H. H. Kennedy made an address of welcome on behalf of the young people and the Sunday-school, and Prof. G. N. Boardman on behalf of the church, saying that in bidding him welcome they gave endorsement to the principles he had uttered from City Temple, in London.

—Rev. B. Fay Mills is conducting a series of union Gospel meetings in this city. This week he is preaching at Union Park Congregational church every evening. Fifteen churches of various denominations unite in this movement.

—At the meeting of the Northwestern Association at Osborne, Kan., Mrs. Susan P. Buck was licensed to preach for one year. She accepts the invitation of the church in Lenora to supply them until April.

—November 22, the Sunday before Thanksgiving, has been designated as Sunday-school Home Missionary Day.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—The unfortunate trouble in the Evangelical Association (Albrights) continues and even intensifies. There seems to be no hope of reconciliation. Two general conferences now seem to be inevitable—the party headed by Bishop Dubs meeting in Philadelphia, and the followers of Bishop Bowman and Esher at some other point. This month is the time. Each general conference will claim to be the legal conference.

FRIENDS.

—The evangelistic committee reported to the recent Kansas Yearly Meeting as follows: Number of sessions of revival meetings, 2,131; conversions, 1,009; sanctified, 304; renewed, 451; added to the church, 534; ministers acknowledged as pastors, 27; supporting themselves, 5; partly supported, 19; wholly supported 3.

—The statistics of the Indiana Yearly Meeting show: Whole number of members, 22,408; males, 10,630; females, 11,038; families, 5,647; non-resident members, 2,700; under 21 years of age, 6,942; removed to other yearly meetings, 92; disowned, 128; resigned, 172; established meetings, 165; recorded ministers, 246; ministers recorded the past year, 12; ministers deceased, 5; meetings without recorded ministers, 45; number of members in college, 213; number of members teaching, 247; number pursuing systematic reading, 183. The total membership is smaller than it was last year.

LUTHERAN.

—The "English Evangelical Lutheran Synod of the Northwest," is the name of a newly-organized synod, composed chiefly of pastors in connection with the general council who are engaged in mission work in the Northwest. All the present members are graduates of the Philadelphia Seminary. Pastor G. H. Geberding, of Fargo, Dakota, is president, and Rev. W. K. Frick, of Milwaukee, is secretary. A constitution was adopted, and application will be made for admission to the general council. The next convention will be held at Duluth.

—Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota synods have decided to unite and organize a "General Evangelical Lutheran Synod of the Northwest." The old bodies remain as districts. The present institutions will continue the property of the respective districts. The general body is to maintain a theological seminary, and a college with preparatory schools; it will also publish a church paper, a theological journal, a school periodical, an almanac, and other church and school books. Inner mission work will also be in charge of the general synod.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Bible used by John Wesley at Epworth forty years, and now owned by Rev. Dr. Boole, of Staten Island, was exhibited at the Methodist Council in Washington.

—Bishop H. M. Turner, of the African Methodist church, has been appointed missionary bishop to Africa, being the first colored minister to act in that capacity.

—The report of the committee on statistics of the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, made Oct. 19th, shows that in the entire Methodist connection there are 42,695 ministers and 6,494,399 members, with about four times as many "adherents." Under this last head are included probationers, members of families not church-members, and such persons as by natural tendencies, etc., may be considered as belonging to the Methodist connection.

—The report of the secretary of the Sunday-school board of the Methodist Episcopal church of Canada shows 233,047 scholars enrolled, an increase of 8,997 during the year. The number of officers and teachers is 29,204, an increase of 846, and the number of schools 3,048; 32,507 scholars are reported as studying the Methodist catechism. The expenditure of the Sunday-school aid fund during the year reached the large sum of $4,357.78.

—Rev. Otis Henry Tiffany, A. M., D. D., died at his home in Minneapolis, Minn., at 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, Oct. 24, aged sixty-six. He was always in great demand as a lecturer and as a speaker on special occasions. He has for many years held high rank as an orator.

MISSIONS.

—Within the last ten years the evangelical churches, and other missionary organizations of Christendom, have opened up about 50 new missions and sent out about 500 workers into new fields. Estimating that these workers have reached, on an average, 10,000 persons with the Gospel, and that an equal number have been reached through missions before established, then the evangelical forces of Christendom, with their enormous wealth and millions of men, and with all the facilities of the age, have, in the ninth decade of the 19th century, reached with the Gospel, less than ten million out of the ten hundred millions of the heathen world.

MORMONS.

—During the trial of the church cases at Salt Lake City, Utah, President Geo. Q. Cannon testified that the entire membership of the church in the Territory of Utah and surrounding cities and Territories is upwards of 200,000, and that the income of the church on a cash basis, last year, or the year before, was "probably $300,000 or $400,000." Thirty thousand dollars was appropriated for the poor in the church.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The session of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Presbyterian church (New Light) in Philadelphia was opened on the 7th of October with an address by Rev. M. Gailey. The faculty consists of Rev. David Steele, D. D., Professor Gailey, and Rev. James Y. Boyce.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The United Presbyterian church has just sent out the largest band of missionaries in her history. This is encouraging. Such a large force as is being employed in Egypt and India makes heavy drafts upon the liberality of this small denomination. It is gratifying to know that the drafts are honored by the people with promptness.

—On Wednesday, the 7th of October, a band of sixteen missionaries sailed for India and Egypt—a promising and important accession to the U. P. missions.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Sioux City will build a corn palace in Chicago in 1893.

Judge Tuley denies Mrs. Emma Wakeley's petition for an injunction to restrain election judges from preventing her vote being cast.

It has been decided to build a press building at Jackson Park.

Work on the Newberry Library will be commenced at once.

The story is told of a Dwight graduate who is now doing all in his power to induce other men to visit Dr. Keeley's town.

COUNTRY.

On Monday Minister Egan demanded of the Chilian Junta an explanation of the recent murder of sailors of the United States steamer Baltimore, and reparation for the injuries inflicted.

Fire at Evansville, Ind., Monday night did damage to the extent of $80,000.

John Mattei, a Connellsville, Pa., striking miner, cut a vein in his finger and fed his babe on blood to keep it from starving.

Fire partly destroyed the Brittain Pork Packing Company's plant at Marshalltown, Iowa, Monday. Loss, $50,000; insured.

Sunday night about fifty men attacked and destroyed the harness store of John Miller at Garrett, Ill. They intended to lynch Miller, but he escaped. He had been terrorizing the citizens.

Lee Green, who murdered the family of Farmer Lowe near Queen City, Texas, was taken from jail Monday, fastened to a tree and burned alive.

At Belknap, Ill., Thursday, a man named Hartline killed a Miss Thurman, to whom he had been paying attention, and then committed suicide.

At Boston, Tuesday, Maria Kultberg, a store-keeper, sued a Catholic priest for $5,000 damages for ruining her business by placing a boycott upon her store because she refused to send her children to the parochial school.

Theodore Doerflinger was arrested at Omaha Tuesday for embezzling $35,000 as treasurer of the Pittsburg school board.

Prairie fires in Oklahoma Territory are destroying crops and farm buildings.

An explosion Tuesday in the building of the United States Mine Supply Company at Cleveland, Ohio, caused the destruction of the building by fire, and the burning to death of three young men.

Five ice-houses belonging to Sullivan & Nunan at Buffalo, N. Y., were burned Tuesday. Loss, $50,000; insured.

At Glenwood, Minn., Monday night, O. E. Holmes, Fred Renn, Conrad Prince, Brazil Lyle, and John Coffin were killed in a collision on the "Soo" road.

Fire destroyed the New England Card and Paper Company's plant at Springfield, Mass., Tuesday. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $35,000.

Field fires are burning in Clark county, Ind. Near St. Joe 4,000 bushels of corn standing were destroyed.

The judgment of the lower court in the contest of the will of Samuel J. Tilden was affirmed by the New York Court of Appeals Tuesday. By the terms of the decision the Tilden trust is rendered void and the estate of $8,000,000 is to be divided among the seven children of Governor Tilden's brother and sister.

Ten head of horses and several buildings burned Tuesday at Hamilton, Kan. Loss, $25,000; insurance small.

It is said that Mexico will make another appropriation for the World's Fair in addition to the $50,000 already granted. The different States will also make exhibits.

A loss of $35,000 was caused by fire at Braceville, Ill., Wednesday. The total insurance was $5,500. The Paxton, Ill., canning factory burned, causing a loss of $10,000, on which there was $3,000 insurance.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Oct. 26 to 31:

Mrs J Campbell, L A Brown, W L Willard, J M Crobarger, Mrs L M Wylie, Prof S W Mack, A Sullivan, E S Bunce, J W Wood, D S Dean, H Johnson, J Pollock, C N Fox, T R Griffin, J A Rouser, M F Eaton, Rev J O Tasker, Mrs M A Hanson, A J Townsend, Miss L Garland, Mrs J Bradford, Rev J P Dyas, A Chamberlin.

FOR SINGING SCHOOLS, AND CHOIRS.

Victory of Song.

By L. O. Emerson. 192 pages. 60 cents, prepaid; $6 a dozen, not prepaid. Emerson's latest and best Singing Class Book for 1891-1892. Glee, Part-Songs, Choruses, Hymn Tunes, Anthems, Chants, and 4-part Songs; with Rudimentary Exercises, Lessons and suggestions on note-reading, articulation, etc. A superb book.

The Graded Singing School.

By D. F. Hodges. 60 octavo pages. Price 50 cents, prepaid; $4.50 a dozen, not prepaid. Mr. Hodges' thorough knowledge of singing school needs is revealed in this unexcelled collection of 4-Part Songs, Glee, Hymn Tunes, etc. The progressive course of Musical Notation, with 56 pages of simply explained Elements, renders it an invaluable book for every school.

Song Harmony.

By L. O. Emerson. 184 pages. Price 60 cents, prepaid; $6 a dozen, not prepaid. For Singing Schools, Musical Institutes, Conventions, etc. A fresh class book of newly arranged material for the learner. 100 pages of "Elements" with illustrative songs and exercises, specially arranged with reference to practice and instruction.

Emerson's Royal Singer.

By L. O. Emerson. 192 pages. Price 60 cents, prepaid; $6 a dozen, not prepaid. This book contains an improved setting of Scales and Exercises. One page of Manual Signs, 3 pages of Musical Notation, 47 pages of Review Lessons, 64 pages of Glee and Part Songs, 72 pages of Hymn Tunes, Anthems, Choruses and Chants.

Any book mailed postpaid on receipt of price. Convention Conductors, and Singing Class Teachers are invited to correspond with us before purchasing their needed supplies.

LYON & HEALY, Chicago, Ill.

OLIVER DITSON CO., BOSTON.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	93 1/2 @	94
Winter.....	94 @	94 1/2
Corn—No. 2.....	54 1/4 @	55
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @	30
Rye—No. 2.....	89 @	90
Bran per ton.....		13 00
Hay—Timothy.....	10 00 @	11 50
Butter, medium to best....	20 @	32
Cheese.....	09 @	11 1/2
Beans.....	1 50 @	1 65
Eggs.....	17 @	20 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	90 @	1 15
Flax.....	94 1/2 @	94 3/4
Broom corn.....	4 @	05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	22 @	30
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 1/2 @	5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	6 00 @	6 50
Common to good.....	3 30 @	3 90
Hogs.....	3 50 @	4 20
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 60

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 03 @	1 08
Corn.....	70 @	71
Oats.....	36 @	36 1/2
Eggs.....	23 1/2 @	25
Butter.....	14 @	31
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @	3 65
Hogs.....	3 25 @	4 00
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 50

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revolution of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

GOOD HEALTH AND HOW TO KEEP IT.

One of the best ways to keep in good health is not to think or worry too much about it. If you feel strong and well, don't imagine that some insidious disease may be secretly attacking your constitution. Many people are like the inexperienced traveler, who anxiously inquired about the symptoms of sea-sickness, and how he should know when he had it. One generally knows when he is sick; and frequently many supposably alarming symptoms prove, upon investigation, to be perfectly natural occurrences, or of very slight importance.

Eat and drink what you desire, as long as it agrees with you. Your stomach knows pretty well what it can digest. Plain, simple food is desirable as a general thing, but the luxuries of the table, in moderation, will certainly do no harm.

Take all the sleep you can get, but remember that the necessary amount varies greatly for different persons. Some must sleep at least nine hours, while others thrive under six. Only don't rob yourself of what you really need. The "midnight oil" is a terribly expensive illuminant to burn either for purposes of labor or study.

Always treat a common cold with great respect. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred it will get well any way; but the hundredth cold, if neglected, may lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, or consumption. It is best to take no such chances.

If you are sick enough to need any medicine at all beyond the simple remedies familiar to all, you are sick enough to need the attendance of a physician.

By all means, take as much exercise as you can, and be in the open air as much as possible. Outdoor life is the natural condition of mankind, and the more one can have of it the better. The practice must not be carried to extremes, however. There are many days when one is much better off in a warm, comfortable, well-ventilated house than trying to take outdoor exercise in a midwinter storm or under a July sun; and no one ever strengthened his constitution by sleeping with his bedroom window open with the outside temperature at zero, or allowing the snow to drift in on his pillow.

Fresh air, sunlight, good and sufficient food, pure water, outdoor exercise, temperance in all things, and a cheerful disposition are the chief remedies in nature's dispensary, and are worth more than all the drugs and medicines of the shops. Dr. Holmes has truly said that if nine-tenths of all the medicines, patent, proprietary, and otherwise, in the world were poured into the ocean, it would be all the better for mankind and all the worse for the fishes; and the best physician can do little without good nursing, and thus aid nature in throwing off disease.—Medical Bulletin.

AIRING CLOTHING.

Never sleep in clothing worn during the day, and let that worn at night be exposed to the air by day. Three pints of moisture, filled with the waste of the body, are given off every twenty-four hours, and mostly absorbed by clothing. Exposure to the air and sunlight purifies the clothing and bedding of the poison which nature is trying to get rid of, and which would otherwise be brought again into contact with the body.

SALT FOR ALL KINDS OF ACES.

Now is the season for colds of all sorts contracted through carelessness or recklessness. If your family physician is not accessible, and you intend being your own doctor, here is a remedy to be recommended. It is no more or less than common table salt. It is perfectly harmless, always available and has great curative properties. Moreover, it has this great advantage over more pretentious remedies, that if it does not cure it will not kill, and the chances are that it will cure.

If, with your very best boy, you gaze at the stars far into the night, watching the moon until it wanes or goes sailing in the gloaming, the probabilities are that a toothache, earache, neuralgic headache or some other distressing ill will be the result next morning. Applications of a strong, hot solution of salt in water and

Stop that CHRONIC COUGH NOW!

For if you do not it may become consumptive. For Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility and Wasting Diseases, there is nothing like

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES Of Lime and Soda.

It is almost as palatable as milk. Far better than other so-called Emulsions. A wonderful flesh producer.

Scott's Emulsion

There are poor imitations. Get the genuine.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON, AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

vinegar act like magic, and before many hours have passed you will forget you have ever had an ache or a pain.

For any kind of a cold that takes the unpleasant form of sneezing and influenza, a vapor of heated salt and alcohol will afford almost instant relief. If a sore throat constantly threatens you, there is no better remedy than a spray of warm water and salt. It is almost a sure cure.—New York Advertiser.

"One touch of Nature makes the whole world kin." Diseases common to the race compel the search for a common remedy. It is found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the reputation of which is world-wide, having largely superseded every other blood medicine in use.

Veni, Vidi, Vici! This is true of Hall's Hair Renewer, for it is the great conqueror of gray or faded hair, making it look the same even color of youth.

The Blue Bell. The Mountain Daisy.

Daily Text books for a year. Dainty little souvenirs, only 1 1/2 inches square, elegantly and neatly bound in leather, with silk marker, gilt edges, round corners, each net 25
Illuminated paper covers, each 10

Birthday Memorial Text-Book. An Autograph Text-book. Text for each day and space for autographs. 32mo., Cloth..... 25

Daily Comfort in Four Fold Links.

The most popular Wall Roll published, and deservedly so. Every page is an effective sermon. The striking character and particular value of this new Wall Roll is in the remarkable arrangement and selection of the Scripture Texts. A constant monitor in the Christian household. A silent teacher for the school. A comforting messenger for the sick-room, as well as being suitable for the office, the store or the shop.

Printed in beautiful large, clear letters, easily discernible at a distance of 10 to 15 feet. Mounted on rollers, with cord, to hang up in usual style. 31 pages, size 14x22in. 75

The Secret of Success; or

Finger Posts on the Highway of Life, by John T. Dale; introduction by Hon. John V. Farwell. 416 pages, 12mo., full cloth.....$1.50
A book for the aspiring. Written in a fascinating style and full of incidents and illustrations which hold the interest of the reader spell-bound. "It may be true, as has been said, that 'books are sold, not bought'; but this, at any rate, is a book which, if brought to one's attention, he will wish to own. * * * Such a book in every intelligent family in the land—how much (in showing so clearly, so wisely, so persuasively the secret of success,) it might do toward helping to solve the countless aching, burning questions of the time."—The Advance.

Intelligent family in the land—how much (in showing so clearly, so wisely, so persuasively the secret of success,) it might do toward helping to solve the countless aching, burning questions of the time."—The Advance.

Prof. Henry Drummond's Booklets.

The Perfected Life. (The greatest need of the world.) Bound in chaste style, vellum paper..... 20

Love the Supreme Gift. (The greatest thing in the world.) Uniform with Perfected Life. 20

The Open Secret.

By Hannah Whitall Smith. A series of practical Bible readings by a most popular author. 320 pages, cloth,1.00
"All who have read the exceedingly popular work, 'The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life,' will not be disappointed in expecting to find in this new volume a fullness and sweetness in the unfolding of God's Word, in its application to the practical and daily duties of Christian living, such as few writers are capable of presenting."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,
Old Age and How to Enjoy It.
A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP
Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help if that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago I

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

OUR PREMIUM! THE EMPRESS Sewing Machine

For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled. It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work. It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments,

put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00.
With Christian Cynosure 1 year.....$22.00.

For further particulars address
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart.

Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FARM NOTES.

BRIEFS.

Never skim milk for cheese.
Keep the dead wood cut out.
Scatter your slops over the soil.
Be generous to your hired help.
Even Paris green is adulterated.
Keep the stables clean and well aired.
Try keeping account with every crop.
Soil has much to do with the flavor of fruit.

The real dairy farmer grows his own feed.

Sell as direct to the consumer as possible.

The West complains of a scarcity of hogs.

Pigs properly kept bring quick returns.

Strawberry plants require plenty of fertilizing.

Don't omit cornmeal from the milk ration.

Turn all very rich milk to butter making.

If you have low, wet land, reserve this for ducks and geese.

You can't always judge the quality by the quantity.

Look on the under side of the leaves for insect eggs.

Let the boys go hunting or fishing once in a while.

Where there is plenty of pasturage turkeys can be raised with profit.

If you are going to plant grape vines get a southern or southeastern slope, if possible.

The good prospect of better prices should encourage farmers to extra efforts in crop productions.

Butter makers are warned to soak and not steam their tubs. When steamed it is difficult to get the butter out.

Horticulture should be taught in some form in all the public schools, even if it be only as reading lessons.

Skimmed milk can be kept sweet for from twenty-four to forty eight hours by heating it. It must be heated to 150 degrees.

Some people are so careless that they fold and tie wool when it is damp with the almost certain result of its becoming heated.

THE WORLD'S FAIR LIVE STOCK SHOWS

A committee of live stock experts has apportioned the cash premiums to be awarded in the Exposition Live Stock Department, amounting to $150,000, as follows: For horses, $52,000; cattle, $30,000; swine, $15,000; poultry and pet stock, $10,000; dogs, $4,000. This leaves a contingent fund of $19,000, which Chief Buchanan says should be held for special breeds of animals that may have been overlooked. The dates for holding the various live stock shows during the exposition have been decided upon by National Commission. The period devoted to the exhibition of animals for awards in the following divisions for live stock will be as follows: Cattle, Sept. 11 to Sept. 27; horses, jacks and jennets, Aug. 24 to Sept. 27; sheep and swine, Oct. 2 to Oct. 14; kennel show or dogs, June 12 to June 17; poultry, pigeons, pet stock, etc., Oct. 18 to Oct. 30. Exhibitors of horses and cattle must accompany their application with written evidence as to the pedigree of the animal offered for entry. This written evidence implies a description or pedigree in the standard live stock record books. Animals unregistered, but which have some peculiar historical value, may be exhibited, but may not compete for any prizes or medals which may be offered.

TAMING POULTRY.

To old breeders this item will be of little value, but that it relates to important work I think they will agree. As the time it takes is the only expenditure, and but little of that is required, you will find it pays. In feeding grain, let the chickens eat a few kernels out of the hand. If they are wild, but one or two will make the venture the first few times, but the others will grow bolder, and soon edge in to grab a choice morsel. Fresh meat is one of the dainties for them, and may be used to good advantage in forming closer acquaintance with the flock. Be careful about strangers going among

CROUPY SOUNDS

At night, from baby's crib, are distracting to parents who are at a loss for a medicine equal to the emergency. Not so with those who have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. A dose of this medicine affords certain and speedy relief. To cure colds, coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, and the various disorders of the breathing apparatus, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal. It soothes the inflamed tissue, expectorates, and induces repose. Cap. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children were subject."

"I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequalled as a remedy for colds and coughs."—J. G. Gordon, M. D., Carroll Co., Virginia.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; Price $1; six bottles $5.

TO YOU FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or
SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or
SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or
McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sheridan's Memoirs, 92 oz.—46 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

them, and particularly children, as an energetic youngster can spoil a flock of chickens in short order. Let them be fed regularly, and, if possible, by the same person at all times; handle them carefully, and enough to gain their confidence, and you will soon find the cross sitting hen a thing of the past, thereby enabling you to persuade Bidly, if necessary, to change her place of business for more secluded quarters without breaking a large percentage of the high-priced eggs. Then if desirous of catching a bird you can do so without knocking half the skin off the back of your hands and frightening the subject into trying to get through a one and one-half-inch mesh netting. But at all times be careful in handling, for if once hurt they will look out for you.—American Poultry Journal.

Deserving Confidence.

There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs, and Colds, should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servants. 20
Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20
The Royal Invitation. 20
Loyal Responses. 20
Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box. Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25
Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant.....2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons. 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons. 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 50
Twelve New Year Sermons. 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons. 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.
Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."
Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired.
The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest.
Ned Franks. White Bear's Den.
Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web.
Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods.
Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed.
Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hessa Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.10
Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death.
No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20
Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke.
Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab.
Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hessa Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80
Cassy. King's Servant.
Lost Gip. Alone in London.
Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children.
Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations. $2.00
"A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa."
He who wants to know what missionary effort means in these days may well learn from this volume. The reader who goes carefully through will have a good bird's eye view of recent events in Africa, with all the results of modern travel. The work contains solid information of use to all who are interested in the future of this wonderful country. The many illustrations throw light upon savage customs and costumes."—Graphic.

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth,$1.50
This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America.
1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled.....2.00
2. Beveled boards, full gilt.....2.50
3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges,2.50
4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges.....4.00
5. Persian calf, padded and emossed, gilt roll and r. g.5.00
6. Crushed levant, elegant.....6.00

7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors.....7.50
Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall.
Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use. 20

My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children. 20

AT FIFTEEN CENTS EACH.

AS WHITE AS SNOW.
PATHS OF PEACE.
HEAVENLY GRACES.
SOWING.
REAPING.
Each 16 pages and cover, 4 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches. Charming booklets. Monotint and gold are here combined, together with suitable poems and texts.

AT TWENTY-FIVE CENTS EACH.

HEAVENLY DEW.
SPRINGS OF COMFORT.
Two handsome booklets in colors, bound in boards, illuminated. Illustrated throughout with exquisite designs in colors, floral and landscape.

AT THIRTY CENTS EACH.

HOME, SWEET HOME.—Payne.
A LAKELAND STORY.—Kendall.
GRAY'S ELEGY.—Thos. Gray.
HOMES OF ENGLAND.—Heman's
Size, 4 3/4 x 5 inches. Cloth, gilt, round corners, 30 cents each; white enamel gilt, round corners, 60 cents each.
THINE.—By Charlotte Murray.
Scripture texts and poems for a month. By Charlotte Murray. A most charming book, illustrated in chromo-lithograph and monotint. 26 pages, bound in board covers, illuminated. Size, 5 x 4 3/4.
BRIGHT PROMISES.
HEART WHISPERS.
Floral designs in chromo colors and monotints, with lithographic texts and selections. 20 pages and cover. Size, 7 x 6 1/4 inches.

AT FIFTY CENTS EACH.

FORWARD. An illuminated board bound booklet, exquisitely illustrated in color. Poems by various authors. An exceptionally beautiful work.
KEY-NOTES FOR LIFE'S ANTHEM. Illuminated board cover, 36 pages, 3 1/2 x 5 1/4 inches. A text-book for a month, with choice selections from our most gifted poets. Alternate pages illuminated in monotint and chromo-lithography.

Art Etched Booklets.

Each of the series contains full-page etchings printed in various tints on the finest Whatman paper, representing portraits and scenery in connection with the choicest selections from the universal favorites. Each part contains:
THE HOME OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.
THE HOME OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.
THE RICHES OF THE YEAR. Illustrative of the seasons.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

An unguarded express car on the Central Branch at Leonora, Kan., was robbed of the safe, which contained a large sum of money, Tuesday night.

Joseph Howell, convicted at Trenton, of the murder of Mrs. Minnie Hall and her four children, Wednesday was sentenced to be hanged.

Wednesday the Supreme Court of Canada declared unconstitutional the act of the Manitoba Legislature abolishing separate schools.

Bushnell & Bushnell, real estate dealers, of St. Paul, Minn., made an assignment Wednesday. Liabilities about $450,000; assets the same.

Five hundred kegs of powder exploded Wednesday in the glaze-mill of the Ohio Powder Company at Youngstown, killing two men and wrecking the building.

The balance in the National Treasury is reported to be increasing. The figures on Wednesday were $143,771,051.

Fire Wednesday destroyed Ball Brothers tin stamp works and damaged an adjacent building at Muncie, Ind., causing a loss of $55,000, partly insured, and the four-story building at No. 50 Fulton street, New York. Forest fires are destroying timber, crops, and farm buildings in Southern Indiana.

Fire at Kenton, Ohio, Thursday, burned property worth $150,000.

At Franklin, Tenn., Thursday, property worth $30,000 was burned. Insurance, $20,000.

Fire at Rice Lake, Wis., Wednesday, did damage to the extent of $50,000.

Arthur Retan, a merchant at Adrian, Mich., was awarded $30,000 damages for the loss of both feet, which were cut off by a Lake Shore train last Spring.

Captain Thomas H. Wackman, one of the first railroad engineers who ever ran out of Chicago, was killed by a train at Oakland, Cal., Thursday.

Marshes in the Upper Kankakee Valley in Illinois, are burning. Hundreds of tons of hay have been destroyed.

Fire at Lodi, Ill., Thursday, burned the entire business part of the town. Loss, $75,000.

The steamer Oliver Bierne burned at 3:30 A. M. Thursday at Milliken's Bend, La. About a dozen lives were lost; the exact number is not known.

Simonson & Weiss, cloak manufacturers of New York, failed Friday, with liabilities estimated at $180,000.

Business continues to improve according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Money markets are well supplied for legitimate purposes.

Fire Friday destroyed the Nashville, Tenn., Gas Company building, causing a loss of $35,000; H. Mueller & Co.'s malt warehouse at Cleveland, Ohio, causing a loss of $100,000; nineteen buildings at Clinton, N. J., causing a loss of $100,000, and the turnbuckle factory at Brazil Ind., causing a loss of $40,000.

The R. B. Cotter Company, wholesale lumber dealers at Louisville, Ky., assigned Friday with liabilities of $200,000 and nominal assets of $400,000. The Louisville Store and Lumber Company also assigned, with liabilities of $50,000 and assets of $75,000.

At Bismarck, N. D., Friday night, the wind blew at the rate of fifty-five miles an hour, and snow fell.

The schools at Danville, Ill., were closed Friday on account of diphtheria.

At Linden, Texas, a mob took a Negro charged with murdering a family of whites, chained him to a tree and burned him to death.

Prairie fires are reported as burning buildings stocked with grain, and fences, in Gray and Ford counties, Kansas.

Prairie fires near Independence, Mo., Friday, destroyed sixty acres of corn, thirty tons of hay, besides several sheds, board fences, etc.

Property worth $25,000 was burned at St. Louis, Mo., Thursday night.

By a decision of the Secretary of the Interior 60,000 acres of land in Minnesota claimed by two railroads were thrown open to settlement, neither road having a valid claim. One hundred and twenty sections of land claimed by another road were also added to the public domain.

Wind and snow storms raged Friday in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

FOREIGN.

Great excitement was caused in Dublin Monday evening by an apparent attempt to blow up the office of the National Press, the organ of the McCarthyites. The report of the explosion was heard distinctly two miles away.

Two boys were arrested at Croydon, England, Tuesday for trying to wreck express trains. They said they wanted to see a train wrecked.

At Teheringoff, Russia, fifty Jews were killed and hundreds wounded in riots. The woods are filled with starving refugees. The government has threatened with arrest any one who attempts to form relief societies in the famine-stricken districts.

Tuesday the Chamber of Deputies voted $240,000 for the relief of flood sufferers in the south of France.

The Reichsanzeiger, of Berlin, Tuesday, by order of Emperor William, commented editorially in strong terms upon the prevalence of vice in Berlin and the necessity of measures for its suppression.

In a railway disaster Monday, near Moirans, France, eight persons were killed and thirty seriously wounded.

The steamers Boston and Charlwood were in collision in the English Channel, resulting in the loss of nineteen lives. The Charlwood went to the bottom.

Anarchists at Barcelona, Spain, are preparing to celebrate the anniversary of the execution of the Chicago anarchists.

Majunga, an important seaport of Madagascar, has been almost entirely destroyed by fire. The loss was $200,000.

It is reported that a plot has been discovered in Cork to assassinate William O'Brien, the McCarthyite candidate.

Friday the French Senate agreed to the removal of the prohibition upon the importation of American pork and to fix the duty at 25 francs.

Severe earthquake shocks were felt along the southern coast of Nippon, the principal island of Japan. Hundreds of houses were destroyed.

Italian Liberals are opposed to the election of Cardinal Gibbons to succeed the present pontiff, an event which is thought to be probable.

There were numerous election fights in Cork Wednesday night, in which several thousand persons were engaged. Many were seriously injured. John Dillon was attacked and severely hurt.

It is said that a mob at Melbourne, Australia, became incensed at the production of the "Beauty Show" and tore down the theater.

A secret society in China recently placarded the walls of a large city on the Yang-tse-Kiang with posters announcing that all missionaries will shortly be exterminated.

PLATS of the whole of
HARVEY.
sent free to any reader of THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURES, showing the purchase of many prominent buyers, among them that of the Evangelist. There is more building in progress now at Harvey than ever before in its history.
D. L. MOODY,

PROHIBITION
in Every Deed is the cause of the immense Financial Success of HARVEY.

BUY LOTS NOW
before prices advance.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,
161 La Salle St., - - Chicago, Ill.

PLAYS Dialogues, Speakers, for School, Club and Parlor. Catalogue free.
T. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago.

WANTED Women to take crochet work to do at home. City or country. Steady work. L. White & Co., 210 State St., Chicago, Ill.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 eq. pack of 60 splendid Silk pcs, assorted, bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. $1. Agts. Wanted. Lemarie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

"THE NEW METHOD" for good health cures all chronic diseases.
Rev. A. Albro, D. D., Utica, N. Y., writes, "One of the greatest boons to mankind in modern days." Indubitably better than the Hall System. Half the price. Send for testimonials.
HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 BROADWAY, N. Y.

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

CANDY GOOD We will give free to every boy or girl in the United States who will do us a slight favor, 4 1/2 Pounds of Candy, French Mixed, Broken and Chocolate Creams. It will not cost you a single cent; we just give it to you for advertising purposes, and we send it prepaid anywhere in the U. S. If you never had as much candy as you wanted all at one time this is your great big sure chance to get it free. It will be great for Christmas, if you don't eat it before. If you want it send us your name and address at once.
TOP BOYS GOOD BOYS WESTERN PEARL CO., Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.
For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.
Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

LISTEN!
Do you want gold? You can get it, and in goodly quantities. Money to be made, rapidly and honorably, by any industrious person of either sex. All ages. You can do the work and live at home wherever you are. Even beginners are easily started. You can start for $10 a day. After experience, many make a great deal more. We show you how Free, and make you start? Why not? No risk. And great earnings are sure. You can give spare time only, or all your time to the work. Capital not required. All is comparatively new and really wonderful. It's the best opportunity ever known by laboring people. Every worker earns big money, and falls entirely unknown among them. Write and see. No room to explain here, but those who write to us will learn all by return mail, free of cost. Unwise to delay. Address H. Hallett & Co., Box 1756, Portland, Maine.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

BEATTY Pianos, Organs, Bargains. Catalogue free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 9

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,124.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	SELECTED:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Facts in Mormonism.... 3
"Sublime" and "Supreme" Masonry..... 8	The War on the Lodge System..... 3
The Liberation of Criminals in Tennessee..... 8	A Week of Prayer..... 3
Masonic Imposition..... 8	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
Bro. Roberts on Secret Societies..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
The Masonic Temple..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Getting Right on the Record..... 9	Some Alarming Statements; How Long was Israel in Egypt?; A Misconstruction Corrected; The Growth of Minor Orders; A Masonic Symbol in a Church..... 5,6
Telling Discourses by Dr. A. J. Gordon..... 9	Letter from Brooklyn... 6
Reform Discussion in Canada..... 9	LITERATURE..... 6
CONTRIBUTIONS:	IN BRIEF..... 7
A Mason's Experience— I..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
Secret Societies and the Church..... 2	THE N. C. A..... 7
REFORM NEWS:	THE HOME..... 10
From the New England Agent; From the College Agent; The Western Agent in Kansas; The Washington Agent En-route; Bro. Fenton in the East..... 5	TEMPERANCE..... 11
	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
	MARKETS..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

ANTI-SECRECY CONVENTIONS

THE ILLINOIS CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Will meet in the BRICK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, GALESBURG, Rev. Henry A. Bushnell, pastor, ON NOVEMBER 12TH AND 13TH, 1891, to Consider the Relations of the Secret Lodge System to the Christian Religion and Civil Liberty.

PROGRAM.

THURSDAY, 7:00 P. M. Devotional Meeting.
7:30 P. M. Address of Welcome, Rev. H. A. Bushnell.
Response by the Chairman.
8:15 P. M. Remarks, Rev. N. C. Mallory, D. D., pastor Baptist church, Chicago.
Address, subject: "Odd Fellowship—how should it be regarded?" Rev. Sam'l H. Swarts, D. D., pastor M. E. church, Chicago.
9:00 P. M. Adjournment.
FRIDAY, 9:30 A. M. Devotional Meeting.
10:00 A. M. Appointment of Committees.
Reading of Letters.
Free Parliament.
11:00 A. M. Address, subject: "Is the Grand Army of the Republic a Beneficent Institution?" Rev. H. H. Hinman, Agent of the National Christian Association.
2:30 P. M. Report of Committees.
3:00 P. M. Address, by Rev. Wm. Pinkney, pastor Wesleyan church, New Windsor, Ill.
3:30 P. M. Address, subject: "What I Knew of Masonry in Early Days," Rev. Azariah Hyde, Galesburg.
7:00 P. M. Prayer.
Remarks, Rev. O. F. Carlson, pastor Swedish Baptist church.
8:00 P. M. Congregational Singing.
Address, subject: "Lodge Influence on the Destiny of Nations," Pres. J. Blanchard, Wheaton College.

9:00 P. M. Adjournment.

OHIO.

The Ohio State Anti-Secrecy Convention will be held (D. V.) on DECEMBER 10TH AND 11TH, AT NEW CONCORD, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Rev. H. H. Hinman and Rev. C. F. Hawley will be at work in this State before another Cynosure reaches you. Preliminary work for lectures by these agents has already been done in several places.

It is hoped that Rev. W. G. Morehead, D. D., of Xenia, and Prof. Joseph Moore, of Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, will be among the speakers at the Ohio Convention. Let churches elect delegates, and by providing for their expenses insure a larger attendance.

DISTRICT OF NEW ENGLAND.

The New England Annual Convention will be held at Boston on WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, THE 9TH AND 10TH DAYS OF DECEMBER NEXT. Among the speakers promised at this Convention is Rev. A. J. Gordon, the stewart Reform preacher.

Rev. J. M. Foster, now of Boston, writes to the Christian Statesman, of Philadelphia, respecting this convention: "I have been asked to speak on the 'Relation of Civil Government to the Lodge.' The time is near at hand when the lodge will be regarded as a public evil, a foe to the Republic, more dangerous than the liquor traffic, more hurtful than speedy and easy divorce. It is the Goliath of the enemy's camp defying the army of the living God. And until our New Testament David slays him we may not hope for victory."

Bro. Hinman, writing from Princeton, Ill., Saturday last, says: "I expect to lecture in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Bureau on Sunday night, and will try to have a meeting here on Monday evening."

Bro. Fenton, after visiting Philadelphia and Brooklyn, has gone to Canada to participate in the delivery of a series of anti-secrecy lectures, in various places in the Dominion. A good report may be expected from him in our next issue.

The indictment of the managers of the Louisiana State Lottery by grand juries in several States for illegal use of the mails, is met by them with sneers and threats. But the strong hand of federal law is about to be laid upon them—not before the local petit juries of a town or county, but before the highest tribunal of the Union, where sneers and threats will be of no avail. When any corporation, secret or open, reaches that degree of arrogance that produces defiance of constitutional law, it is time to squelch it.

If a special telegram to the Inter Ocean, from Minneapolis, October 29, is to be credited, the Roman Catholics are rapidly transferring their parochial schools to the public schools of Minnesota, by which operation the latter will pass under the control of the Roman church. "One or two parochial schools in St. Paul and all of those of Fairbault and Stillwater," says the dispatch in question, "had already been transferred, and the Rev. G. T. Morrill went to Fairbault to see how things were working. On his return he preached a sermon, charging that pictures of Pope Leo were on the children's desks as of old, and that the teaching of the Catholic religion was part of the curriculum. A meeting of the Patriotic Sons of America was called at once, and last night's gathering was of a thoroughly anti-Catholic hue. Before adjourning $1,000 was subscribed and paid into the hands of the State treasurer to take action. Legal proceedings will begin with the service of an injunction upon the financial officials of the State, county and city restraining the payment of any money to the school boards of Stillwater or Fairbault." The result of this affair will have a wide-spread and important influence; for although the contest above indicated is between only a secret society and a local branch of the Roman church, the principles involved are national, and will affect every community and public school in the Union.

In our Letter from Brooklyn, in another column, Dr. Cuyler puts in a plea for the extension of the Sons of Temperance, which he claims "is in no sense a secret society," and in charity "has the same value as that which has been claimed for Masonry." Whatever may be "claimed" for it, Masonic charity is a humbug; and if the "Sons" can find no better exemplar, their charity begins at home and stays there. If the secret obligation of the "Sons" has really been annulled, the society is no longer an "order," but a good-natured social club of men and women.

Musgrave, the Knight of Pythias, who, several months ago, being heavily insured, endeavored to defraud the insurance companies by a stratagem, has been arrested, and will be taken to Terre Haute, Ind., for trial. He will be remembered as the fellow who lived in a hut, in seclusion, obtained a skeleton, set fire to the building and escaped, leaving the impression that he had been burned to death. The scheme was exposed by a relative, and detectives worked up the case with the foregoing result. He seems to have been an adroit operator. His confederate has also been arrested.

A MASON'S EXPERIENCE—I.

BY JOSEPH HOPSON, OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

[The following article, which will appear in a few consecutive issues of the Cynosure, needs no apology. The author was a riding-master, or teacher, in the British army stationed at Secunderbad, India, about the time of the Morgan murder in America. After his death the manuscript was forwarded to this office, for examination and publication, by his son. Only a part of the manuscript will be printed in the Cynosure; but that will possess interest for all who desire to see Freemasonry as it is. The Masons of England gave permission, many years ago, to perpetuate the order in the Indian army, so that the work there differs but little from that in Great Britain.—EDITOR.]

NOTE.—Hopson was initiated on Saturday evening, January 27, 1827, in Lodge No. 7, Unity, Peace and Concord, at Bangalore, Madras Presidency, India. After the degree of Entered Apprentice had been duly conferred upon him, there was a banquet, in which considerable revelry, with wine-drinking, was developed. At this point we take up his narrative:

I had a misgiving that, making every allowance for the sportiveness of the several members, there was something intrinsically wrong in the institution and in the working of its members. I had also a singularly hot and heavy pain in my breast where I had received the touch of the sharp instrument on entering, or rather on being led, into the lodge, and I felt a growing anxiety of which I could not define the cause. It was a feeling of the soul as distinct from the body. I nevertheless hoped it would wear off in a few days; it did not, but, on the contrary, time only added to its intensity, after a short intermission that I experienced on the morning after my initiation.

I lay down after reaching my room and, contrary to my expectation, had a sound sleep, and awoke refreshed, with not the least symptom of the pain and misgiving that I had experienced the evening before.

My comrades, Sergeants Hobday and McDicken, were curious to know what I had to say about Freemasonry, and they called on me, Hobday first, to hear my opinion of it. I told them that I liked Masonry very well; that there was none of the pride of rank or birth in it that was to be seen outside; that they were as a Christian assembly ought to be, that is, without respect of persons; but that it was unfortunately corrupted, as every other good institution was, by the levity of its members. They expressed themselves glad to hear it; and I had no doubt that I should, in the course of a month or so, have them initiated. This was on Sunday, the 28th day of January, 1827.

As the day advanced, my misgivings and pain returned, accompanied with an inward tremor and a sensation of fear and anxiety. Freeborn (who had proposed Hopson for membership) visited me in the course of the forenoon and asked how I felt after my initiation. I told him of the pain I had in my left breast. He said he felt the same after being initiated; that so did every one, but that it would wear off in a few days. I believed him, because of the many Freemasons I had seen, they were to all appearance of all men the freest from care and pain; and I set myself, as well as I could, to disregard and forget it.

The next day, Monday, the 29th of January, he visited me again, and inquired how I did. I did not much complain. We walked about, conversed on various subjects, and, for our better amusement, he proposed a game of nine-holes, which we played with a six-pound ball. Beswick and others joined us, and we took an occasional dram of arrack as one or the other won the game. On one occasion, as Freeborn and I were playing alone, the conversation turned on Masonry. What a simple thing it is, said he, as we walked backward and forward, to think that it has never been revealed! Is it not astonishing that it has been kept so long a secret from the foundation of the world? Would you not think that some one, in his unguarded moments, as when merry with liquor, or even in his sleep, would have revealed it? I observed in reply: It may have been revealed, but who would believe that such things formed part of Masonry? A person has no means of proving that what he relates of it is the truth. Aye, said he, that is the thing; but even allowing that he had a way of proving it, it has never been divulged. I said: In that case it was wonderful, indeed. But how, said I, was it that I could not be initiated with nails in my shoes? Ah, said he, I can not tell you that now, but you will know by and by. But I will tell you a more strange thing than that; where, said he, do you think they got the skull and thigh bones that they have in the lodge? Why, said I, have they got a skull and thigh bones in it? Oh, yes, said he, there can be no lodge without them. Well, said I, I suppose they got them out of the graveyard. Oh, no, said he, laughing at my simplicity, it is not every skull and thigh bones that will do; they must be those of a Knight Templar. What do you think of their bringing them all the way from Asia? That is very strange, I replied. Yes, he resumed, when the regiment was on its way from Prome to the coast there was much sickness among the men of the regiment and several of them died, and among them a man of the grenadier company who was a Knight Templar. He was buried, as usual, in the evening, and as soon as it was dark Spence and Railden, two high Masons, disinterred him, cut off his head and his thigh bones, separated the flesh from them, and spent all the night in boiling them to have them sweet to take with them on the following day; and these are the bones they have now in the lodge. Well, and what use do they make of them? said I. Ah, said he, I can not tell you that yet, but you will see in course of time. Why, said I, I think there is something bad in Masonry after all. A person would think so at the first, said he, but the higher you go the more you will like it. It is impossible that so many would adhere to it if it was a bad thing. We can not advise anyone to be initiated; but Railden, one of the highest Masons in the lodge, assures me that although many do things that ought not to be done, yet a good Mason is a good man.

We were now joined by Beswick. Freeborn appealed to him for the truth of what he said of the character of Freemasonry. He agreed with Freeborn, that the higher a person went in Masonry, the better he would like it. It could not, he said, be a bad thing. Could any one be supposed to adhere to a thing that he knew to be bad? The highest of the nobility and gentry, many of the clergy, and even the king himself, George the IV., are Masons. No, no. Masonry afforded the most sublime contemplations ever inspired by God or conceived by man. What do you think, said Beswick, of St. John the divine being still on earth? I said I doubted it. He positively affirmed that he was, and to add to my surprise, he added: And what do you think of Enoch, Elijah, and St. John the Baptist being the same individual? I said, I thought it would be hard to prove that. Ah, said he, but we have a way of proving it, and a great deal more that I could tell you about. You will know all by and by. We at length separated to our respected duties, and I was left to my reflections for the rest of the day.

What I had learned from my brother Masons added greatly to the pain in my left breast, and to my apprehensions; nevertheless, I slept tolerably during the night.

Next day, after the duties of the morning were done, we met again for play; but this day my friends were not so communicative; they had perhaps told me as much as they could venture to tell me on the previous day, and they could hardly avoid seeing that I was not in such good humor as I was then. We drank more, for drink is the Mason's cure for the troubled mind; but all that I drank did not in the least raise my spirits. The pain in my breast had increased, and my apprehensions were fearful; and their society could not dispel them.

Play ended, I was left to myself, and had then leisure to review my bodily and spiritual condition. The pain in my breast was most unaccountable. I had never heard or read of such a thing. It was a burning pain, accompanied with a feeling of weight and tightness or compression in my breast, about my heart, which by its unremitting continuance became so tiresome that I was often obliged to heave up my chest and draw in as much breath as possible to relieve myself of its weight. But all this was nothing in comparison with the pain of my mind. It was a disorder of the soul, of which my body was in a great measure insensible. An internal distress arising from the apprehension of some impending danger, for which I could see no sufficient reason, took possession of my soul, of which my inability to discover the cause rendered my distress the greater. I was perplexed and terrified. I often tried to rally and subdue my feelings, but in vain. In this case the flesh was willing to be subjected to the powers of Freemasonry, but the spirit recoiled in distraction and despair; and often I did wish that the soul had some more distinct way of communicating with the body than through the feeling or impressions.

When the duties of the day were over I set myself to discover the cause of my ailment, and earnestly prayed the Almighty to assist me in my search and direct my steps. I began by considering one by one the several particulars of Masonry that had come to my knowledge, if possibly there might be anything in them that had escaped my observation that might be the cause of it. The conversation that I had with Freeborn and Beswick on the previous day put me in possession of the knowledge of several points of Masonry of which I had before no certain information. And reviewing them in connection with the unconditional surrender of my entire being, required by the declaration of which I had before expressed my doubts; the degree of subjection signified by submitting to be haltered, blindfolded, led three times round the lodge, bowing next to prostration in the ceremony of initiation; the conduct of the Master and brethren during the lecture, and at the festive board, their songs, and their mode of repeating the oath and penalty after every glass, and the remote period from which Masonry is dated; reviewing all these circumstances, the conviction arose in my mind that I was not merely on the brink of perdition, but had, blindly, by the advice of treacherous friends, plunged headlong into it. I found that I had, by word and by deed, or by word and sign, as the Freemasons term them in the ceremony of initiation, severed my connection with God and heaven, and had bound myself, body, soul, and spirit, for ever and ever, a slave to the infernal powers, in violation of all other vows, baptismal, eucharistical, and devotional, and assented, on oath, to submit to the penalty of death in the event of my disobedience in the least particular.

On a view of my condition, my first wish was to retrace my steps, but this appeared to me impossible. I had sworn not only to conform, but to conform cheerfully, to all the ancient usages and customs of the order. I had been informed that it was my duty to obey all summons when within three miles of the lodge, unless prevented by duty, sickness, or imprisonment, and this duty my oath of conformity bound me to perform; and I felt convinced that when once within the guarded door it would be in vain to object to any part of their proceedings, and dangerous to decline taking my part in them. Above all things, I abhorred the several devices by which I was constantly reminded of the oath and penalty, as in the Master's salute, and in drawing the glass across the throat after drinking. And I felt the utter subjection to the authorities of Masonry I had placed myself in to be intolerable. It was an authority which indeed with fiendish vehemence said, stoop, stoop, stoop, lower, lower, lower, lower, yet lower; and I saw in these words, as addressed to myself, such an air of fiendish exultation, accompanied with such malignant imposition, as told me more forcibly than words can express it: "I have you now, and serve you shall, whether you like it or not." Had the oath been simply administered, without any means being devised of constantly reminding one of it and its penalty, I could perhaps have proceeded in Masonry with less disgust. But such is not the genius of Masonry; it is an ever-working institution; its very existence depends upon its members incessantly renewing and strengthening their bonds, nay, their allegiance to Satan, and widening the breach between them and God.

What to do I knew not; to unite with them heartily was impossible. I could not conceal my dislike of the institution, and I consequently dreaded the thought of again entering the lodge; yet I saw no possibility of avoiding it. Hell I saw to be the destination of the whole Masonic body, the ocean to which the current of Masonry uninterruptedly flowed. The terrors of hell stared me in the face. I felt all the woe which a soul sensible of its lost condition may be supposed to feel. Each attendance at the lodge, I saw, would, as designed, sink me deeper and deeper in perdition, by continually renewing and strengthening my bonds to Satan, and widening the breach between me and God. I was now fully awake to the eternal danger of my situation; yet neither my imagination nor my fears could keep pace with the inner anxiety of my soul to escape from the dangers of the institution, and the only way I could see of avoiding them was to destroy myself. I felt myself already lost, as sold to Satan beyond redemption; and I considered it better to go to hell as I then was, than to go on heaping sins upon my head and increasing my torments; imagining that my punishment would be in proportion to my sinfulness. Yes, said I, a day or two before the next meeting takes place I will destroy myself. But it presently occurred to me that if death was certain, as I believed it to be, it would be better to die by the hands of others than by my own. And I instantly resolved to break through all their bonds, to eject everything of theirs from my breast, and to attend their meetings no more, come what would. A reprieve to a criminal on the scaffold could not have been more lightening and refreshing than was this resolution to me. It was as life from the dead, aye, many times better; it was a change from certain perdition to a hope of everlasting happiness.

To be Continued.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE CHURCH.

A TRACT.

"Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken; I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. Ah, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupted: They have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger. Bring no more vain oblations. Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil." So spake the Lord to an idolatrous children in Isaiah's day. So speaketh he to the present generation.

Because we love folly better than wisdom, truth is rejected and error courted, the allurements of Satan in worldly pleasures and sensual delights are preferred to the gift of the Son of God, is a spiritual dearth come upon the church. In this day and generation, pastors, as well as people, wearying of the simplicity and beauty of the Gospel, are turning to other attractions (?) for the gratification of their pride and self-love. In secret societies, apparently, they are found—oath-bound orders, given to silly and degrading rites; senseless and pompous titles; mysterious and profound nothings, abounding in costly degrees, extravagant paraphernalia, and whose charities are selfish and isolated, and with whom no Christian men or women can identify themselves without sacrificing their self-respect and the highest principles of their calling.

It is the concurrent testimony of educators, statesmen, and divines, that secret societies are inimical to the interests of the church. The Presbyterian church, through its representatives in convention assembled, recently declared that: "Secret societies are the aids of Satan;" "the deadliest foe of the church," and that "it was the duty of the church to take its members out of them."

So have said, in former days, the Baptist, the Congregational, the Methodist households of faith; but now not only are these evils winked at, but what was once a solemn and beautiful form of dedication, is now converted into the veriest farce by the mummeries of lodgeism, on such occasions as the laying of corner-stones of church edifices in the above-mentioned denominations. For shame, O pastor—for shame, ye people,—that ye thus desecrate God's house because of your mercenary natures and love of vain display.

Apropos of this subject, a learned editor writes: "Of the impropriety of Christian men joining any nominally moral society but the Christian church, we have many very instructive and alarming proofs. Their affections are very apt in all cases to be divided; and if the rival claims of the two associations happen to conflict, they are generally apt to cleave to the human rather than the divine institution; or to show more respect for the brotherhood of the human than for the brotherhood of the divine fraternity. I contend, and will contend, that it dishonors a Christian man to desire any connection with any such an association. He has a nobler, holier, and more dignified alliance."

It is no wonder, then, that we observe the once strong and zealous man of God, after emerging from the lodge-room, where new pledges have been taken, new allegiances made, and a new form of worship inculcated, now become supine, fruitless, and comparatively worthless in the moral vineyard of Christ.

Besides, among the many ministers of the Gospel who have spoken in no uncertain terms against this evil, such names may be found as Wm. H. Seward, Chief Justice Marshall, John Quincy Adams, Millard Fillmore, Thurlow Weed, Chas. G. Finney, the first president of Oberlin College; Edward Everett, Chas. Sumner, Wendell Phillips, Lord Beaconsfield, Thaddeus Stevens, Seth M. Gates, Alexander Campbell, Dwight L. Moody, President J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, and numerous others.

Brethren, brethren, doth not reason and experience teach you that secret societies are hostile to and subversive of the religion founded and established by the Son of God, who himself hath said, "In secret have I said nothing?"

How long will ye hold your peace and preserve a smiling neutrality in the face of this evil, ye remnant of Israel that hath not bowed the knee to Baal? Engrossed in proselytism, bolstering up waning creeds, and waging a war of profitless words with rival denominations, the modern shepherd, unmindful of the apostolic character of his calling, permits his church to be sapped to its foundations by this monster iniquity, with never a word of warning or protest to his misguided flock. Beloved brethren, may it not be said of many of his ministers that love of ease, of this world's goods, and the applause of men, hath sealed our lips, when, opening them at the right time, the ever-to-be-adored Son of God would have been glorified and his kingdom built up on earth. How long will his piteous plea stand against us: "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold?" O, dear brethren, let not the Holy Spirit say of us, in this enlightened day: "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone." Rather let us throw off this moral incubus and woo the blessed presence and power of the Holy Ghost in oneness with God in Christ, in a consecrated ministry and laity. Awaken, O sleepy consciences! Be ye revived in his love, ungrateful hearts, and return to your God in a united and mighty endeavor to win to him all classes and conditions of humanity; "for the night cometh when no man can work." Cusn,

[One of the house of Ham.]

FACTS IN MORMONISM.

The following has recently been issued by the Home Board:

Notwithstanding all the disgust and opposition which has been everywhere awakened, Mormonism has steadily grown, through sixty years of dishonor to our country, from its first church organization of six members, in Fayette, Seneca county, N. Y., to a membership in the Rocky Mountains of 200,000 deluded souls, besides its adherents in all parts of the world not yet "gathered to Zion."

This iniquity has all the time grown faster than the nation itself. The Mormons control a territory almost as large as the area of the States of New York and Pennsylvania combined, and have a controlling influence in a tract of territory as large as that of New England and the Middle States combined. For sixty years they have sent out an average of eighty missionaries a year, and for the last twenty years have sent out from Utah an average of 130 each year.

Perhaps nowhere do the Mormons reap a greater harvest of converts than among the poor whites of the South. From four counties in Alabama 500 converts during the last four years have been sent to Utah, Arizona and Idaho, and 200 more were expected to be sent soon. At the present rate it is only a question of a few years when the Mormons will almost depopulate several sections of Alabama. In Alabama and Tennessee they have flourishing mission stations.

A young Indian girl writes from the Indian Territory, that they want a missionary teacher or a minister badly; adding: "The only minister we have is a Mormon minister, and I do not think he is a good one."

We point to the far West and the great Northwest, and ask you to find the State or Territory that is free from this foul American invention called Mormonism.

Large importations from foreign countries are being made each year, to make good any loss from the ranks; and thus Mormonism, as it has been tersely put, is being fed through Castle Garden while it is being fought in Utah.

Testimony of a very remarkable character has been given in one of the courts in Salt Lake City, relative to the tenor of oaths taken by Mormons in passing through "the endowment house." These oaths pledge the persons taking them not only to the most entire subserviency to the Mormon priesthood, but, as declared by one who had passed through this ordeal, in the endowment house he solemnly swore in the presence of Almighty God to avenge the blood of Joseph Smith, the first president and prophet of the Mormon church, on the American nation, and that he would preach the same to his children and his neighbor's children; and that he would henceforth and forever begin and carry out hostilities against the nation, and to keep the same a profound secret.

The penalty for failing to keep this oath was "death by cutting the throat from ear to ear, and cutting out the tongue and heart, and disembowelment."

The women are the most superstitious, bigoted and devoted class. They hold the system together—polygamy included. There are twenty male apostates to one female. Women glory in their shame, and boast of the bondage that degrades them and their children—socially, morally and intellectually. This is one of the saddest features of the system.

Why do women go into polygamy? Because the better class of Mormon women actually believe that their consent to polygamy is necessary to their salvation; or at least to any exaltation in the future life.

It is because of woman's willingness to sacrifice for her religion even the dearest instincts of her heart, though her heart breaks, and it sinks her life into misery and hopelessness. Brigham Young's first and only lawful wife, said to a Gentile guest: "It is a great trial for us to have our husbands married to another wife, but we submit to it because our religion requires it."

A very intelligent and trustworthy gentleman who has resided in Utah for a score of years, says: "The worst is, these young Mormons do not seem to understand that those things are wrong, and have no higher sense of virtue. A broad and marked distinction should be drawn, in this regard, between the older generation of Mormon women who have been brought up with higher notions and in a different atmosphere, and those who were born here, and have never known anything better. The Mormon men have far less difficulty in persuading the young Mormon women of to-day to enter into polygamous relations, than their mothers and grandmothers who had seen purer society, and known higher standards.

"Startling and shameful as these facts here stated are, yet the more vile doctrines and facts are withheld. They are too indecent for print, or speech, or thought. The chief difficulty in writing about Utah is to disclose enough, and yet keep within the bounds of propriety. The vulgarity and obscenity of Mormon preaching, in the presence of hundreds and sometimes thousands of women and children, is shocking."

The public school system of Utah, until recently, has been entirely in Mormon hands. The great Christian denomination has felt that school work is as important as church work in Utah. The educational work is carried on almost exclusively by Christian women, and is the stepping-stone to the Americanization of Utah, and the right arm in this work of evangelization. The children and youth are being lifted out of social, mental, and moral bondage, and the light of Christian hope is being carried into hundreds of homes. Good men and blessed women are there, scattering with willing hands the germs of a higher civilization than Mormon bishops and elders ever dreamed of. They are summoning souls and spirits from ignorance and superstition, into the joy of sanctified affection, and the blessedness of rational belief.

Great as is the value of intellectual culture, it is great for good only when accompanied by a quickened sense of right and wrong, that springs from a proper realization of the responsibilities of life. The Gospel of Christ is the "power of God unto salvation" even in Utah, and, after all, is the mightiest lever for the redemption of this people.

THE WAR ON THE LODGE SYSTEM.

The war against secret associations seems to be kept up this fall with unusual vigor. There are conventions being held in leading States to discuss and expose the shams of the secret orders. There are no means of knowing just what power is exerted in this way. But there is no mistake that it is an effort in the right line. The brave men who are fighting the monster, Secrecy, are fighting the Lord's battles and cannot fail of a glorious reward, whether they break down the evil or not. But so numerous have secret orders become, and so diversified are their objects, it seems impossible that there should be smooth sailing for them much longer. The universal dissemination of light will be the death-knell of all that can only live in darkness. The oath-bound secret order is the child of darkness, and lives only by blinding the eyes, and nursing some delusions that are handed down from age to age. Let people wake up to their danger and their duty in this great practical matter. There should be conventions in every State, and in every county and school house in every State, to arm against the secret empire that threatens the interests of the world.—Phila. Christian Instructor.

A WEEK OF PRAYER.

The following call to prayer has been issued by the Ecumenical Council of Methodism. It is signed by the senior bishop of each denomination: "Believing that the great need of the Church of Christ is a plentiful baptism of the Holy Spirit; that such a baptism would give energy and efficacy to all our agencies and organizations, and that without it all our efforts must fail of their one high purpose—the salvation of men; believing, moreover, that such a baptism may certainly be secured by those who will humbly and diligently wait upon God for it in persistent and faithful prayer, we earnestly and affectionately invite the ministers and members of the Methodist churches to devote the week commencing on Sunday, November 15, to special supplication for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. We earnestly beg that such prayers be offered in private, in the family, in day and Sunday-schools, and in such social or public services as may be arranged by the authorities of the several churches."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Election day.—Andover Hill.—Prof. Stilliman on journalism.—Chumming with a fairy, and other matters.—Is the missionary spirit declining.

Election day dawned bright and clear, and in consequence a heavy vote was cast, especially in Boston and vicinity, though the result is at the present writing undecided. The liquor men, perhaps realizing that their time may be short, were unusually active in getting out as many voters as possible; but the Australian system of balloting is no small hindrance in their way.

Andover Hill—and he that does not know Andover Hill proclaims himself unknown—is meeting the problem, which, now that the electric cars are extending their lines everywhere, is growing to be more or less of a serious one in our suburban villages, with a tact and wisdom worthy of emulation. The Sabbath stillness is often broken by noisy, disorderly foreigners, who come from contingent cities and manufacturing towns to enjoy their brief holiday, careless of the annoyance they may inflict on quiet citizens. But this "school of the prophets" saw its opportunity. "They established open-air meetings at the end of the route," says the Boston correspondent of the Worcester Spy, "and by means of excellent singing and preaching, leavened with common-sense and tact, attracted the mass of social drift-wood thrown into their midst." One great objection which suburban residents have to electric cars is that they are too convenient a means for bringing in the rabble. But the experiment at Andover Hill shows how they can be made efficient agents in home-missionary work. The result, if faithfully tried, will be either to Christianize the rabble, or lead them to steer clear of such localities.

Prof. J. Stilliman, in the last Atlantic, has been giving some bad advice to young writers, and it is surprising that it should be so generally quoted without a word of protest. Men and women of genius and principle—the very ones so urgently needed on the daily press—he warns away from a journalistic career as fatal to the highest art, as well as to "all individuality and freedom of research," and subjecting them to "the passions and perversions of partisan politics." The newspaper press is now largely given over—as even Prof. Stilliman will hardly need to be reminded—to men of small brains, a low standard of literary culture, and a still lower standard of moral principle. What will it be when entirely surrendered to their control? The process of deterioration is one that never stands still, so that by another decade decent people would have to exclude the daily newspaper from their centre tables as rigorously as they do Zola's novels. As it is through journalism primarily that every righteous cause must win the public ear, how is any evil to be reformed, or wrong resisted, if all our bright young writers are taught to despise the daily press as a field unworthy of their ambition or their talents? Prof. Stilliman's main argument seems to be that the journalist can never hope to achieve anything permanent in literature; but if he is thoroughly conscientious, and imbued with the high dignity of his calling, he is much more likely to write for eternity than the one who makes this his sole aim and purpose. He who seeks literary immortality is very sure to lose it; he who voluntarily loses it in the effort to serve well his day and generation will find it, though his articles live no longer than the occasions that gave them rise, in the thousands who will act more nobly and think more righteously because he has lived and written.

Fashion has at last so far heeded the indignant protests both of humanity and good taste as to hold out some hope that people of sensibility will no longer be shocked—at least not to the same extent as in former seasons—with the display of dead and dismembered birds in the milliner's show windows. The idea of a woman wearing a bonnet with half-a-dozen humming birds on it! And, by the way, I wonder how many people ever made the intimate acquaintance of one of these living jewels of the air. No one, I am sure, who was willing afterwards to wear its defunct body. There is a general belief that they are very shy of human companionship. I believe this is a mistaken notion, and that they respond very readily to overtures of friendship. I remember that one unusually cool, almost frosty, morning in August, some years ago, one was brought into the house which had been found lying on the ground, evidently chilled through. He was laid on a bed of freshly-picked flowers and a fly-cover put over him to make a miniature cage. In an hour or two the heat had so revived him that he began to thrust his tiny beak into the heart of the clovers and morning glories. It occurred to me to vary his diet by giving him some sugar syrup; and then, as an experiment, offering him a drop or two on my lips. After a moment of hesitation he eagerly sipped it, and then, like Oliver Twist, clamored "for more." From that moment he grew confiding and fearless. It was a delightful experience; certainly a rare one—this "chumming," not "with a savage," but with a fairy. When he had completely recovered, which, was in a few days, I set him free;—not without a lingering hope that he would return, which, I am sorry to say, as it would have made a very pretty ending to my story, he never did.

Bishop Brooks, to change the subject, has a case on his hands which will be likely to try what mettle he is of. The late Bishop Paddock, who so grandly withstood Father Ignatius in his attempts to introduce monkish doctrines into his diocese, would settle it in short order. Episcopal tyranny in England is not very different from papal tyranny in Rome. In the present case, the "Cowley Fathers," a kind of monkish order, having its headquarters in London, has recalled the rector of the Bowdoin Street Mission church, Rev. C. F. Hall, back to England, for no other reason than because he approved of Bishop Brooks' election. This religious order is under the control of one presiding officer, called the Superior, from whose action those under him can no more appeal than a Mason from the decision of his superiors. When the beast, Romish or Masonic, always shows the same stripe, the mystery is that it should ever fail to be recognized in its true colors by any intelligent, thinking man.

The Andover case is settled, and Prof. Smythe retains his seat. Most people are glad that a fruitless controversy is over, even if it has not ended quite to their satisfaction. The recent meeting of the American Board was, as the Springfield Republican puts it, "happily free from theology," and no points of dispute arose to divert attention from their main object—the presentation of the claims of the heathen world on the American churches. Rev. Dr. Webb, who preached the annual sermon, has a fine voice and presence, which added to the weight of his plea for more liberal giving. But it is hardly fair to the churches to make the financial condition of the various missionary boards the test of their devotedness to the cause; for every year the number is increasing of those who prefer to give their money directly to missions instead of through a board. At the Convention of Christian Workers, held recently at Cambridgeport, under the leadership of Rev. A. A. Hoyt, gold watches, finger-rings, jewelry of all kinds, were laid on the altar, in an ardor of consecration worthy of apostolic times. The spirit of missionary zeal is alive, but more and more it is refusing to be confined in the old denominational channels, and the American Board must sooner or later recognize the new situation.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4, 1891.

Missionary work, home and foreign, has been the theme upon which many eloquent men and women have given their views to large and interested audiences in Washington during the week just ended. It is at all times an interesting subject, but it has been made doubly so by the personal relation of the actual experiences of those who have willingly made it the work of their lives. Nobler work it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find.

The tenth annual session of the Lady Managers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church closed its week's sitting to-day. It is gratifying to note that all of the reports submitted showed progress in the good work over which the Society has jurisdiction, and the enthusiasm displayed by the delegates makes it reasonable to predict that greater progress will be made during the coming year. One of the most interesting events of the meeting was the visit of all of the delegates to the recently-established Lucy Webb Hayes Memorial Home for Deaconesses. Last Sunday, the eleventh anniversary of the organization, was made memorable by the addresses delivered by the delegates, in the various M. E. churches of the city. Among the speakers were Mrs. J. K. Burney, superintendent of the prison department of the World's W. C. T. U.; Mrs. J. R. Woodcock, Mrs. J. E. Gilbert, Mrs. J. H. Bayliss, Mrs. Isabella Spurlock, Mrs. Col. Springer, Mrs. G. W. P. Wells, Miss Margaret Brownlee, Miss B. F. Freeman, Mrs. Mary E. Griffith, Mrs. H. C. McCabe, Miss Josephine Corbin, Mrs. E. L. Albright, Mrs. E. E. Marcy, Mrs. R. W. P. Goff, Mrs. L. C. Aldrich, Mrs. W. G. Williams and Miss Rudy.

"Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest." The echoes of the Missionary Society will scarcely have died away in Foundry church, where its sessions were held, when, four squares away, on the same street, in the First Congregational church, the Sixth Annual Convention of the International Christian Workers' Association, which meets to-morrow, will be called to order. The object of this convention, which embraces nearly all denominations and organizations engaged in Christian work, and which would probably gladly embrace the workers of all denominations and Christian organizations, is to bring Christian workers nearer together, make them acquainted with each other, and give them an opportunity to profit by each other's experiences, in future work. The first session will be devoted to addresses of welcome by Postmaster General Wanamaker, Rev. Dr. S. H. Greene, of Calvary Baptist church; Rev. S. M. Newman, of the First Congregational church, and Mr. B. H. Warner, one of Washington's most prominent business men and Christian workers. The reply will be made by the chairman, Rev. Dr. Torrey, of Chicago. Last year this convention met at Hartford, Conn.

The local members of the Order of Rechabites, upon whom will devolve the duty of entertaining the visiting delegates to the semi-centennial celebration of the introduction of the order into America, which will occur August 2, 1892, have begun operations, by asking for donations to a fair, to be held for the purpose of raising the necessary funds, from December 7 to 16.

The writers of the secular press, who have, in their eagerness to create a sensation, been engaged in predicting a war between the United States and Chili, as the result of the existing diplomatic complications between the two countries, appear either to have forgotten or to have willfully overlooked what presents an almost insurmountable barrier to the horrors of war between the United States and Chili, or any other country; and that is, the one magic word—"Arbitration." President Harrison is on record, in a message to Congress, in favor of the settlement of international disputes by arbitration, instead of war, when the usual diplomatic methods have failed; and Secretary Blaine, more than ten years ago, when a member of President Garfield's Cabinet, committed himself to the policy of arbitration; and while a member of the present Cabinet, when presiding over the deliberations of the well-remembered All-American Congress, he again stated his sentiments on the subject. At the time it was stated here that the adoption of the resolution favoring arbitration by that Congress was very largely the result of Secretary Blaine's influence. In view of these facts, am I not justifiable in saying that arbitration presents "an almost insurmountable barrier" to war?

Mrs. Booth-Clibborne, one of the Salvation Army, addressed several meetings here this week, telling of her missionary experiences in France and Switzerland during the last ten years, and appealing for funds to enlarge the work. She said that when she went to France, ten years ago, she had to begin work in the slums and under all sorts of discouragements, but so great has been the progress, that where she began laboring alone there are now 453 missionaries at work. She announced her intention to continue the work the rest of her life.

—*—
Eloquence is truth looking up to heaven.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, Oct. 31, 1891.

Papers report the appointment of committees to arrange and conduct a ball in Odd-fellows' Hall, on Tremont street, December 9. The order excludes Christ from its worships, and members hold high carnival and dance on the very threshold of the Judgment, and yet men often claim that the lodge is better than the church, and "good enough religion for them." This is the date of the New England Annual Convention, and it will give every Odd-fellow in Boston an opportunity to choose between the devil's dance and Christ's disciples in his name. Until recently I had hoped to obtain the use of the vestry in a church near Odd-fellows' Hall, in which to hold our meetings, but adverse counsels prevailed and we must look elsewhere. It is not an unusual thing for the "star chamber" counselors of the lodge to close the doors of churches against any discussion of their orders, even where nine out of every ten of the church members and the pastor would approve and participate in the discussions.

I am not bringing accusations against God's elect, but simply calling attention to facts. I am by no means cast down or in the least disheartened by this seeming rebuff. That God who was with Israel is now in Boston, and will find a place for those whom he calls to meet, if only by the "Manger," or in some upper chamber like that where the "despised and rejected" Nazarene met his disciples and commissioned them to conquer the world. Brethren, count it not strange, neither be discouraged, since when "he came to his own, his own received him not," but the rather rejoice in the approach of great changes, of which such things are the prophetic harbingers. Many a righteous cause has knocked for admission at the door of that house which is called by his name, to meet with a rebuff, and fare little better than its divine Leader.

In this we may rejoice greatly. The lines are being drawn, and men are being tested; church bodies are nearing the point where they must choose between Christ and the men who carry the bags containing the wealth, honors and applause of this world. May God help us, and lead some in our approaching gathering to choose "the better part that shall not be taken from them."

J. P. STODDARD.

FROM THE COLLEGE AGENT.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Having a few days of leisure, I concluded to visit the theological seminaries of Chicago, in the interest of Reform. These seminaries are located in different parts of the city, and are mostly quite remote from each other. And, first, I went up north to the terminus of Halsted street, to the Presbyterian Seminary, and found the large and commodious McCormick buildings, facing on that street. I called on Dr. Herrick Johnson, and heard Prof. Currier's class recite, awhile, in Hebrew. Then I looked into the library, but found no Reform literature there; so I furnished them with some anti-secrecy volumes to put on their shelves, and departed.

My next call was at Union Park Theological Seminary, which is Congregational. It is located on Ashland boulevard, not far from West Madison street, and appears to be in a flourishing condition. Prof. S. Ives Curtiss is librarian. I found quite a number of anti-secrecy books in the library, to which I added a few volumes of a later date; and so passed on.

The Baptist Theological Seminary is situated a number of miles south, at Morgan Park. To reach it I took the Rock Island steam cars, one afternoon, and found a fine set of buildings, in good order. I visited the library and explained to the president and librarian the nature of our Reform work; and, with their consent, put on their shelves seven or eight anti-secrecy volumes. They were very cordial, and thanked me heartily for the donation.

There now remained only the seminaries at Evanston for me to visit. So, taking the steam cars on the Milwaukee road, I arrived there in good season, and inquired my way to the Garrett Biblical Institute. This is the Methodist Episcopal Theological Seminary; Dr. H. B. Ridgeway is president, and Dr. Terry is librarian. I soon arranged to send some anti-secrecy volumes to their library; and then had a pleasant conversation on "Biblical Criticism," with Prof. Terry, who has published a work on that subject, I believe. His views appeared to be much like those I have published in my tracts.

The Swedish Theological Seminary at Evanston is near the Observatory, on rising ground that overlooks the lake, like a beautiful summer resort. Rev. Albert Erickson is the president, and is evidently doing a good work in preparing ministers for our Scandinavian population. They have not a large library yet, but they are evidently advancing, and I made arrangements to supply them with a few Reform books, which will no doubt be well-received, as I understand that they have no secret societies among them. As ever, yours,
S. F. PORTER.

THE WESTERN AGENT IN KANSAS.

ESKRIDGE, Kan., Oct. 30, 1891.

Last night I gave a lecture on the Relation of Freemasonry and Kindred Orders to the Christian Religion. We had a rousing time. The meeting was held in the Covenanter church, and Baptists, Methodists, and a band of holiness people were out, with the Covenanters, as were also the Masons, Odd-fellows, and other secretists.

I go to-day to Idana, Kan. I will spend a short time there and at Tabor Congregation, near by, and then go to Superior, Neb. From there I will go to Brush Creek, Iowa, and then return home.

C. F. HAWLEY.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT EN ROUTE.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

PENNSYLVANIA, Nov. 3, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As our train whirls on toward Harrisburg, I will express a few thoughts suggested by passing events. How like a trip by rail is one's life! How swiftly the stations are passed! The "welcome home" of the Christian well repays the fatigue of travel! The golden opportunities for impressing reform truths on the minds of those who will live after us, come but once. Let us improve them.

The other day I chanced to come where a number of men had gathered to raise the frame for a barn. The timbers lay as dead and motionless as "a can't-do-anything" reformer. But the pike-poles were there, and plenty of Scotch-Irish muscle to push them. We all took hold, and, at the word, unitedly pushed, but the heavy beams refused to move. We re-adjusted our poles, getting in positions to work at better advantage and the frame went up, slowly at first, but the nearer the horizontal, the faster.

The pike-pole of truth, and the muscle of Reform, should be used to raise the fallen timbers in our national liberty frame. Let us all lift together!

I met a man who replied, when I asked what he thought of the lodge: "I know one thing, if you have never belonged to a secret society, you know nothing about it." I answered: "If all your knowledge is the same as the sample, it will be useless for us to converse." These men who think they know everything, and yet know but little, are almost always unprofitable conversationalists. This man began the usual flood of stuff. Solomon was a Mason. Every family is a secret society. It was all founded on the Bible, etc., ad nauseum. I am frequently told that the family is a secret society. Is this true? What is there in any well-regulated family which is not common and hence known to all well-regulated families? The lawful relations of each member are well known and recognized by the State. Should one of these relations be violated, the State investigates. If the State is suspicious that there is a secret society formed in the family, it has the right to come in and make the fullest investigation. If it thinks there are stolen goods concealed, it may open every door in the house. If a second woman is thought to be robbing the wife of her lawful dues, the most searching questions must be answered. What need could there possibly be for a secret society in a family living in accord with divine and human laws? Surely a blasphemous oath to conceal from all outside what is transacted in such a family would be worse than useless, for there would be nothing but what is well known. Were it possible to conceive of an individual not belonging to this so-called family secret society, then it might be to him a secret society. But no such a case ever existed.

I spoke last Sabbath morning to a large audience in the Mundale (N. Y.) United Presbyterian church, and had a pleasant time. The elder, in paying, handed me $10 and asked if that was enough; so I guess the people were not displeased with my efforts.
W. B. STODDARD.

BRO. FENTON IN THE EAST.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31, 1891.

I leave this city, where Satan has a Masonic Temple and deceives the whole city. Having spent some days in visiting and distributing tracts, I went out to the Evangelical Lutheran Theological Seminary, at Mount Airy. One of the professors read to me the resolutions that the denomination had passed condemning the principles of secret societies, but they receive secret society members to their church fellowship, and in these respects are like the English Lutherans, Winnebrenarians, and others, who are like the woman that with her eyes wide open marries a libertine under the pretext of reforming him; but of course, as soon as she is married she is like Herodias, who would chop a man's head off for saying anything against libertinism in her husband's house. Those who shut their doors against the truth may find the "door shut" when the Bridegroom comes.

Dr. Talmage had just been preaching in his Tabernacle at Brooklyn about Egypt, when I said to him: "Doctor, do the Egyptians worship Isis and Osiris now?" He replied: "Some of them." The crowd pressing behind me to shake hands with the doctor prevented more being said about it.

The Grand Lodge of the State of New York boasts of 703 ordained clergymen of that State who are affiliated Masons; that is to say, these 703 pastors not only practice the bare worship of Isis and Osiris, but embellish that form of devil-worship with lying and scandal—scandalizing God's holy Word and his holy prophets and apostles, and even the Lord Jesus Christ himself. And, strange as it may seem, the majority of all the uninitiated pastors are treating that overwhelming blasphemy as a joke. But the Lord Jesus is equal to the occasion—"the day of vengeance" is his; and it is yet to come, as he said: "The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all; even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

On Sabbath afternoon I visited Baxter street, and the place where I was accustomed to preach the Gospel in the open air ten years ago. A policeman informed me that there is no preaching in the open air at that place now. The street was full of people and likewise all the windows of the tall buildings on each side of the street were full of the heads of people projecting therefrom. I was met by a young man with a Bible and

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

SOME ALARMING STATEMENTS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In a recent number of the New York Catholic Review, I find the following astounding statements, which appeal directly and strongly to the interest of every lover of his kind and country:

"But few people have an adequate conception of the magnitude of the liquor traffic in the United States, or of the vast amount expended yearly in the consumption of intoxicating beverages. It seems incredible that the aggregate sum paid by consumers should exceed the total cost of bread and meat required by our whole population of sixty, or sixty-five, millions, yet such is the fact, and the official census is the authority for the statement. According to the statistics collected by the government officials no less than nine hundred millions of dollars go into the tills of the dealers in all kinds of alcoholic drinks every year, while the bakers and butchers receive but eight hundred and eight millions, or ninety-two millions less than is paid to the liquor trade.

"A further comparison of the census returns is no less suggestive. Thus we find that the liquor dealer outstrips the dry goods merchant, the clothier and the boot and shoe maker in the race, and comes out ahead with a difference of two hundred and fifty-seven millions of dollars in his favor over all of these.

"As to the matter of education it is hardly deserving of mention, for the liquor interest exceeds it in the proportion of over ten to one—that is, the drinking public pays to the bar-keeper ten dollars to every one that is paid to the school-teacher.

"But still more astounding is the comparison between the expenditures for spiritual and spirituous dispensations. Thus it appears that the total salaries of the clergy of all denominations is less than twenty millions of dollars, or at the rate of one dollar to every fifty-five which goes into the pockets of the liquor dealer."

MAT. HAWTHORN.

HOW LONG WAS ISRAEL IN EGYPT?

WAUKESHA, Wis., Nov. 2, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been reading Rev. J. M. Foster's opinion in regard to the children of Israel being in subjection 430 or 645 years—from the giving of the covenant to Abraham until they came out of Egypt. I think that Paul knew just what he said about it. Now, how will our friend Foster reconcile what is said in Numbers 26: 59 with the 430 years in Egypt—Levi, Joehabed, Moses? Exodus 6: 20. It seems to me that these texts are enough to prove that the 430 years must have begun when the Lord established the covenant with Abraham. Even Joseph was permitted to handle the child of Machir, who was Gilead, the grandfather of Zelophehad, who perished in the Wilderness. (Num. 27: 1-3.) Let us seek for the facts. O. TICHENOR.

A MISCONSTRUCTION CORRECTED.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I find that some of our excellent brethren of the Seventh-Day Baptists in Wisconsin have felt aggrieved at what I wrote for your issue of the 22d ult. I surely meant no disrespect; but on reading it over, I find that it admits of a construction far different from what was intended. I surely did not mean to say that the cause of religious liberty would be unsafe in the hands of our Seventh-Day brethren. What I meant was, that it would be unsafe to trust our religious rights to the hands of saloon-keepers and anarchists—the men who hate all restraint upon their passions. As this immoral class largely outnumber the Seventh-Day Christians, they would, if power were put into their hands, quickly destroy all liberty of conscience, and repeal all legislation that protects us in our right to worship God. Our first danger is lawlessness.

H. H. HINMAN.

THE GROWTH OF MINOR ORDERS

ALEXANDRIA, Neb., November, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We see more and more, every day, the need of Christians being enlightened in regard to the evils of the secret lodge system.

This week, in one little town, a lodge of Modern Woodmen was to be organized. This order is lauded as being much better than the "Workmen," because the insurance is so much cheaper. Some one has said that these new lodges are doing more harm than the older orders, and we see that more Christians are drawn into them. Oh, that men would trust the living God, and not an arm of flesh! May the all-wise Father bless and guide you all in your great work of spreading the light and truth on these vital questions. Yours in faith,

MARTHA B. PARK.

A MASONIC SYMBOL IN A CHURCH.

SEYMOUR LAKE, Mich., Oct. 12, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—When God took me out of the lodge, he took away the signs, tokens and grips. But there is one thing that disturbs me very much. It is one of the devil's signs used by our church.

I am a Free Methodist, through and through. Ever since I joined the church, at all camp-meetings the committee on order wore the five-pointed star—one of the strongest Masonic emblems—a badge of authority, which, our church claims, is the only legal badge.

Will the Cynosure, through its columns, help me out of this vexed question? Must our members put on the star to show the legal authority of the church?

The Masons make light of a church that preaches against Masonry and whose members wear one of its strongest symbols. The star represents "the five points of fellowship" "from a dead level to a living perpendicular."

When I represented the star, I was dead in sin; when the blood of Christ was applied, I was made alive, and the last stain of Masonry was washed away. Glory to God!

DEWITT C. BENJAMIN.

[The brother is too sensitive, but otherwise quite right. The F. M. badge which he mentions is a policeman's star. It is evidently not intended to represent a Masonic symbol, and need not necessarily take that shape. A round or square badge would be quite as effective, although general custom adopts the star.—EDITOR.]

LETTER FROM BROOKLYN.

Rev. Dr. Cuyler pleads for the extension of the order of the Sons of Temperance, with which he has been connected for forty-four years. He says that it is in no sense a secret society, and as for help to needy members, it has the same value as that which has been claimed for Masonry. Dr. Cuyler's advocacy of the Democratic candidate for Mayor offends the temperance people. Excellent as Mr. Boody is as an individual, as an instrument of the Tammany ring it is believed that he will not only be powerless to carry out his own preferences, but be bound to do the will of his masters in the rum interests. In a recent corner-stone laying, Dr. Talmage remarked that while he never had been a Freemason he extended a welcome to all philanthropic orders of all sorts. Some of us, on the other hand, feel it a gross impertinence to have Masonic services thrust in upon us at funerals, and laying of the corner-stones of public buildings or monuments paid for by public funds. One of our Episcopal rectors yesterday addressed the Legion of Honor on the benefit of these secret associations. He is the same pastor who organized a "smoking club" among his young parishioners, as if the nuisance and abomination itself was not ruining the bodies and souls of youth fast enough already. Yellow colored circulars of the "Supreme Lodge" are scattered about our streets, inviting investments of money and referring for information to "deputy supreme presidents in the vicinity," whatever those bombastic terms mean. Massachusetts papers have exposed the frauds of this kind over and over again, but to no effect.

Gipsy Smith, from England, an itinerant evangelist, is drawing crowds to his Gospel services. He is a young man and reminds me somewhat of Gough in his dramatic descriptions and actions. He was born in a gipsy tent, and converted in a gipsy tent. His story of the death of his mother on a pile of straw, her burial at midnight, with her new-born babe beside her, in the corner of an English graveyard where refuse was flung, is told in vivid style. Exhortations to repentance are scattered along at intervals in the story, and several persons were persuaded to come forward to the anxious-seat.

Wholly different is the impression of McNeil, another English visitor, who has just returned home from a visit here. He has more of thunder and lightning than Spurgeon, it has been well said, but whether he will continue to shed for forty years as abundant rain, remains to be seen. He received a warm welcome, and did good where ever he went; not by any new ideas, perhaps, but rather by freshening stale ones, and by his warm and hearty enthusiasm in the truth he preached.

Sir Edwin Arnold has arrived, and will give readings from his poems in different places. One person in New York pays Maj. Pond $2,000 for Sir Edwin's services for one evening, hoping to make as much more for a charity he is promoting. If the poet is in as good voice and spirits as he was at Tokyo, when I heard him, last year, read from his "Light of the World," he will win golden praise.

The American Board meeting, at Pittsfield, was a notable one. Twenty-five years ago the venerable Dr. Anderson laid down his work, and

Dr. Clark became secretary. Now the latter is a venerable patriarch and cannot expect to toil many years more. Then, in 1866, I remember, Dr. John Todd, and others whose faces are no more seen, were present in that goodly gathering. Then the word Japan was not used; now it is in every mouth. The presence on the platform of thirteen seminary students who hope to go abroad was a solemn yet encouraging sight. Yet a good doctor of divinity beside me remarked: "It is a useless thing; not in good taste;" which only illustrates how utterly antipodal our views are of the same act or word, according to our temperament or education. The grand revival of giving was another hopeful sign. With the continuance of Dr. Storrs' services as president, the Board begins its eighty-third year under favoring auspices.

OCCASIONAL.

LITERATURE.

EX ORIENTE, a study of Asiatic Life and Thought. By Dr. E. P. Thwing. Brooklyn. Svo. $2.00.

The aim of this volume is to show the breadth as well as value of Oriental studies. The people of to-day are of greater importance than the ruins of past centuries, and the equipment of missionaries should include a knowledge of Eastern life and sociological questions. This volume is elegantly printed in large type, on fine, heavy paper, bound in red and orange, with crimson edges and Oriental decorations. Only 300 copies are printed of the author's edition. There is, also, a small edition, in paper covers, 50 cents each, for students and for general circulation. Address the author, 156 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn. Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs, president of the American Board, says: "In thought and style it is fresh and animated, full of interest, abounding in suggestions, with an Oriental color upon them which quite fascinates the eye."

From the same source, by the same author, we have received a 24-page tract, "Marching Orders," an exemplification of what has been accomplished since the Saviour sent his disciples forth to "preach the Gospel to every creature," and an appeal to continue the good work in every place, under the same "marching orders." Dr. Thwing also sends us another interesting tract—"The Spanish Gipsy," by Marie Sibree, a narrative designed to awaken a proper religious spirit in the hearts of its readers.

The Century for November begins the forty-third volume of this popular monthly. W. J. Stillman's Italian Old Masters introduces the story of Michelangelo Buonarroti, illustrated, the frontispiece reproducing this great artist's "Delphian" and "Cumæan" Sybils. A portrait of Isaac Walton, from the painting of George H. Boughton, is accompanied by a sketch of the artist, by M. G. Van Renssalaer. Other illustrated papers are as follows: A Great German Artist: Adolf Menzel, by Carl Marr; The Players, by Branders Matthews; How Old Folks won the Oaks, by J. J. Eakins; The Autobiography of a Justice of the Peace, by Edgar W. Nye; A Rival of the Yosemite: King's River Canon, by Judge Muir; Lowell's Americanism, by Joel Benton, with a letter from Mr. Lowell; The Major's Appointment, by Julia Schayer; San Francisco Vigilance Committees, by Wm. T. Coleman. Among other contents are the following articles and authors: Southern Womanhood as Affected by the War—Wilbur F. Tillett; India—Florence E. Coates; The Naulahka (A Story of West and East)—Rudyard Kipling and Wolcott Balestier; Sursam Corda—Edith M. Thomas; What are Americans Doing in Art?—Francis D. Millet; The Hunger-Strike—Elizabeth W. Fiske; Bronte—Harriet Prescott Spofford; Mazzini's Letters to an English Family—Edited by Stephen Pratt; In the Pauses of Her Song—Orelia K. Bell; A Theft Condoned—Gertrude Smith; A Song for all Seasons—James H. Morse; The Food Supply of the Future—W. O. Atwater; Folk-Song—Sylvester Baxter; The Sonnet—Edith Wharton; James Russell Lowell—George E. Woodberry, etc., with the usual departments—the whole replete with capital entertainment. New York: 33 East 17th street—The Century Co.

In the Arena for November, Henry Cabot Lodge's Portrait and his discussion of Protection, or Free Trade—Which? occupy a prominent place; Edgar Fawcett writes up Wall Street as a Paradise of Gamblers; Emilio Castelar sketches Bismarck in the German Parliament; Edwin C. Pierce discusses the True Politics for Prohibition and Labor; Wm. H. Armstrong pleads for a Seventh-Day Sabbath and the opening of the World's Fair on the Christian's Sunday—which is a very selfish thought on the part of the Seventh-Day people. Other articles are conspicuous principally for their religious and political liberalism—as if Christianity had ever been the bane of mankind instead of a blessing to it. Boston, Mass.

IN BRIEF.

The remains of about a hundred elephants have been found at Mont-Dall, in Brittany, where they are gathered on a surface of about nineteen hundred square metres.

It is easy to see faults in others, and to criticise them. Such criticism may do good, or it may not; it depends largely upon the spirit which prompts it. Did you ever try a few words of sincere approval? They will help scholars in their tasks, and children in their obedience, and employes in their work. They will put courage into the fainting heart and strength into the weary hand. Many a one with whom we have to do is hungry for a word, or tone, or look of approbation.—United Presbyterian.

Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson, of London, remarked in his pulpit the other day that the miscellaneous character of the population of that city is almost as marvelous as its stupendous number. "Not a creed or religion or superstition on the earth," he exclaimed, "that has not its representatives here. More Roman Catholics than in Rome, more Jews than in Palestine, more Irishmen than in Dublin, more Scotchmen than in Edinburgh, and it is said—although that cannot be possible—more rogues than in America."

Oak timber loses about one-fifth of its weight in seasoning, and about one-third its weight in becoming dry. Gradual drying and seasoning are considered the most favorable to the durability and strength of timber. Kiln drying is particularly serviceable for boards and pieces of small dimensions, and unless performed slowly is apt to cause cracks and impair the strength of the wood. If timber of large dimensions be immersed in water for some weeks, it is improved, and is less liable to warp and crack in seasoning.—Scientific American.

One man can build an eight-wheel passenger locomotive for a standard gauge railroad in 1,500 days; it will require 1,650 days' work for him to build a consolidated ten-wheel locomotive for a standard gauge. The average cost of the required labor would be $4,635, and the cost of the necessary metal is usually estimated at about $2,000. The profit may be put down at another $2,000, which would include the expenses of sale and delivery. This would make an engine, when absolutely ready for service and complete in every way, worth about $8,635.

Sir Dietrich Brandis, F. R. S., states that North America has about 412 species of forest trees, distributed as follows: Atlantic region, 176; Pacific region, 106; common to both, 10; Rocky Mountain region, 46; Florida tropical species, 74. Europe has only 158 species. At least six of the North American species are also indigenous in Europe. The extremely rapid destruction of American forests is not only an alarming waste of resources, but has resulted in great loss from the appalling floods that are clearly traced to the removal of the trees from the hill sides.

No greater triumph in medicine or chemistry has been recorded than Hall's Hair Renewer to revivify and restore gray hair to the color of youth.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

WINTER TERM OPENS JANUARY 5th, 1892.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

OUR PREMIUM!
THE EMPRESS
Sewing Machine
For $22.00.

Retail Price $45.00.

One of the Best Sewing Machines in Use.

Have all the parts made of the finest metal, and with the utmost care and precision, and are subjected to the test of an accurate steel gauge before being assembled.

It is simple in construction—having few parts, no complication, and not liable to get out of order.

Its high arm gives ample room for any kind of work.

It has a self-setting needle, thereby saving the operator much annoyance.

It does a wide range of work, either fine or coarse, and both equally well.

It has the Fish Patent Loose Balance Wheel—nickel-plated—with Patent Stop Motion, the most complete arrangement of the kind in use.

All the running parts of the machine subjected to wear are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, thereby insuring great durability.

A Complete Set of Attachments,

put up in an Elegant Case, consisting of 1 Ruffler, 1 Tucker, 1 Quilter, 1 Shirrer, 1 Braider, 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Binder and 1 set of Hemmers; also the following accessories: 6 Bobbins, 1 paper Needles, 1 Foot Hemmer, 2 Screw-Drivers, 1 Gauge, 1 Gauge Thumb Screw, 1 extra Throat Plate, 1 Oil Can and Oil, and 1 Instruction Book.

WARRANTED FIVE YEARS.

Furnished in either Black Walnut or Antique Oak Woodwork at Same Price.

Retail value.....$45.00.
With Christian Cynosure 1 year..$22.00.

For further particulars address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The
Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Doxter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Bonjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbous Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to Be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter
Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball,
New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underwood
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow
Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I
Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook
Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A
Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitch cock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alex ander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Wo rell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A 'NUT-SHELL'"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd Fellowship, Good Templarism, the Tenets of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with addresses, etc. Over 200 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents. Sent post paid by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Quack Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1891.

"SUBLIME" AND "SUPREME" MASONRY.

True Masonry, it would seem, is confined to the Blue Lodge work, despite the avidity with which the so-called higher degrees are sought by those who desire novelty and are willing to pay for it. The Master's degree, with the Entered Apprentice and Fellow Craft preliminary degrees, contains the gist of the order. We speak by the card: In the annual conclave of the Iowa Grand Commandery of Knights Templar, Grand Commander "Sir" James A. Guest said:

"It has become the crying evil of the order of Knights Templar, that as soon as a candidate is made a Templar he takes his dimit from his Blue Lodge, and severs his connection with that ancient and most honorable institution, the corner-stone of the order The Right Worshipful Grand Lodge of Iowa has also legislated, by severe enactments, against a class of Masons in open rebellion to her authority—a class who, I am sorry to say, place a higher value upon a false system of so-called higher degrees than they do upon Ancient Craft Masonry, upon which all systems bearing the Masonic name are founded."

Coming from one who has taken upon himself the obligations of some of these "so-called higher degrees," these words possess a large significance. As for himself, he undoubtedly retains his connection with the primary branch of the order, for, farther on, we find him saying:

"The only course left this Grand Commandery is to sustain the Grand Lodge in its efforts to purge itself of unworthy Masons; to require all of its members to be Masons in good standing; to legislate against all non-affiliated Master Masons and Templars. In other words, to require all affiliated Templars to be also affiliated Master Masons."

This candid endorsement of Blue Lodge Masonry as the "corner-stone of the order," "upon which all systems bearing the Masonic name are founded," is also an unanswerable argument against the evils attributed to the order by its opponents. The worn-out plea that the farther or higher a man goes in Masonry the better he will find it, seems in these expressions of "Sir" James to receive a quietus, for he plainly intimates that the system of degrees above that of Master Mason is a spurious one, and unnecessary for the better understanding and practice of true Masonry.

We have never before seen a doubt thrown upon the superiority of these "supreme" degrees; and if "Sir" James means what he says, they are not genuine ashlar in the Masonic temple. If this is so, what becomes of the thirty degrees of the Scottish Rite, the four Chapter degrees, the six Knights Templar degrees, the five Adoptive (female) degrees, the Order of the "Eastern Star," the "Mystic Shrine" and all the other "side lights" of Masonry? Shorn of these, Masonry stands before the world as it did when denuded by Pritchard, Morgan, Bernard and Ronayne—a murderous, hypocritical institution, clad in old lodge drawers and tethered by a cable tow. Where, then, are their swords, their plumes, their priestly robes, regalia, paraphernalia and fol-de-rol ceremonies? All, all, are only parts of "a false system of so-called higher degrees"—parasites upon the body of Freemasonry.

THE LIBERATION OF CRIMINALS IN TENNESSEE.

The recent liberation of about 500 State prisoners by the miners of Tennessee was an act of defiance to the civil authority, and such a terrible blow to the peace and well-being of society, as to occasion widespread horror and alarm. Not since the firing on Fort Sumter, has there occurred within the limits of our nation so desperate and so dangerous an assault on the constituted authorities. This was, doubtless, the work of a miners' secret union, and shows the power of such organizations, and the danger that it may be used to subvert civil authority.

The Scriptures tell us (2 Thess. 2: 3-9) of the coming of the "lawless one;" and there is, perhaps, no danger more imminent than the growing disregard of all law, both human and divine,

Doubtless, these poor miners had strong provocation; doubtless, the Legislature of the State had very wrongfully neglected to take proper care of its criminals, and very unjustly put their labor into competition with, perhaps, the poorest-paid labor in the State; but this was no excuse for letting loose on society those who had proved themselves its dangerous enemies.

But, terrible as it was, there will doubtless grow out of it at least one good result. It will bring the people of Tennessee, and of the South generally, face to face with the terrible lessee system that is so widely prevalent. By this system, State prisoners are farmed out to those whose "tender mercies are cruel," and who have all the power of slaveholders, with none of the restraints either of self-interest or of public opinion. Wherever it has been tried, its cruelties have been most conspicuous, and most appalling. It is doubtless a difficult problem to learn what to do with our vast and increasing number of criminals. It is still more difficult to put a stop to the creation of criminals; but Tennessee and all other States should know that the dearest and worst way of disposing of them is to commit them to the hands of irresponsible despots.

MASONIC IMPOSITION.

"MT. VERNON, Sept. 25th, 1798: SIR:—* * * The same causes which have prevented my acknowledging the receipt of your letter, have prevented my reading the book hitherto, viz.: The multiplicity of matters which pressed upon me before, and the debilitated state in which I was left after a severe fever was removed, and which allows me to add little more than thanks for your wishes and favorable sentiments, except to correct an error you have run into, of my presiding over the English lodges in this country. The fact is, I preside over none—nor have I been in one more than once or twice within the last THIRTY YEARS. * * * With respect, I am, etc.—GEORGE WASHINGTON."—Letter to Rev. Mr. Snyder, at Fredericktown, Maryland.

Yet, in the face of this positive denial, the American Tyler (Detroit, Mich., October 29, 1891) has the assurance to print the following on its title-page, with a full-length portrait of Washington standing on the tessellated floor of a lodge room, in full Masonic regalia, with jewels and gavel:

"Washington was born February 22, 1732; initiated an Entered Apprentice Mason in Fredericksburgh Lodge No. 4, Virginia, Nov. 4, 1752; March 3, 1753, passed to the degree of Fellow-craft; and on August 4, 1753, was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason in due and ancient form. On the 28th of April, 1788, he was appointed Master of Alexandria Lodge No. 39, by the Grand Master, Edmund Randolph, Governor of Virginia, and remained an active member of that lodge until his death, December 14, 1799. The above design represents him as Master of the lodge, wearing the apron made for him by Madame Lafayette in Paris."

BRO. ROBERTS ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Rev. B. T. Roberts, one of the General Superintendents of the Free Methodist church, and editor of the Earnest Christian, in the current number of that periodical, gives its readers copious extracts from Joseph Cook's grand address before the general Council of Anti-Secretists in Chicago, last spring, introducing them with these felicitous remarks:

"Secret societies will destroy the spirituality of any church that admits the members of them to its fellowship. It cannot be otherwise. If for no worse reason, they are secret because they are selfish. True benevolence never dreads the light. It courts investigation. But Christianity is not selfishness. It is one great system of benevolence. Its motto is Peace on earth and good will to men.

"Secret societies are conspiracies against the civil government. He who administers an oath usurps the authority of the civil officers elected for this purpose. Joseph Cook, in his address at Chicago to the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, shows this, and many other things objectionable in secret societies. This address should be read by every man in America. It is clear, logical, sound, patriotic and convincing. It shows that secret societies should be suppressed by law, as is done in Vermont, from the statutes of which he quotes."

Bro. Roberts is a man who never uses vain words.

THE MASONIC TEMPLE.

The cope-stone of the Chicago Masonic Temple, which is twenty stories high, and will cost a million or so of dollars, was laid on Thursday afternoon of last week, with Masonic honors and "solemn rites." In the street parade, with flaunting banners, gay regalias, and other insignia of "Masonry divine," were one "consistory, 32," six "commanderies," thirty subordinate lodges, several bands and a delegation from the State Grand Lodge. At the Temple there was the usual "fuss and feathers," the measuring and plumbing of the stone, its baptism of corn and wine and oil, and the customary glorification of the order by trained speakers. It is a "big thing" and was a "big time," much as a lot of boys might have over a costly toy for which they paid.

The tout ensemble of the Temple is massive, with scarce a charm of architecture to relieve its double front; and there is a general air of gloominess about its exterior, as if art declined to bestow her beauties upon an object so purely sordid and clannish as this structure is designed to be. The points of the two little gables at the corners resemble ears of a wolfish pattern, and add nothing to the dignity or beauty of the building.

The objects of the the Temple are, as we have said, purely sordid and clannish. Beginning at the top of the building, we find upper chambers set apart for the secret and foolish "work" of the order—high above the haunts of men—far from the regions of "eaves-droppers, cowans and the profane"—where the so-called "solemn," "supreme" and "sublime" mysteries of Masonry may be enacted in the profoundest secrecy. On the floors below, eighteen or nineteen in number, will be stores and offices, at a high rental, the profits of which will be devoted to perpetuating the existence and enjoyment of the order in Chicago. It will be the home of a pagan religion and the resort of mammon.

Dr. Clinton Locke, rector of a church consecrated to the cause of Jesus Christ, the Mediator, Saviour and Advocate of men at the throne of God, without whose instrumentality none can be saved, made the opening prayer, invoking the blessing of the Masonic God upon the fraternity and the Temple, without once alluding to the gracious Master to whom he had vowed continual allegiance when he entered the service of the Episcopal church. Masons have no use for Jesus—for theirs (they claim) is a religion of salvation without his aid. And the Masons responded: "So mote it be."

But as the coping-stone over which this Christless prayer was said topped the wall of the Temple, after it had been bathed in wine and oil, so Dr. H. W. Thomas capped the occasion with a fulsome oration, into which were crowded the usual falsification of the antiquity of the Masonic order and the familiar exaggeration of the benefits bestowed by the order upon mankind.

The Dr. is an eloquent speaker, and by his reading, such as it has been, has become the apostle of a system of theology that eminently fits him for a Masonic orator. That he enunciated anything new or original in favor of the order on this occasion, we think no one will claim. Like the science of mathematics, the advocacy of Masonry is finished. Changes can be rung upon its self-styled charity, its spurious elevation of mankind, morally, intellectually or religiously, and all the rest of the balderdash that has been expended upon it during the few hundred years of its existence, but it is the same disreputable institution that "it was in the beginning, is now, and ever will be" as long as it exists. Masons claim that Masonry cannot be improved in its character and objects; if this is so, they ought to be ashamed of it.

"Freemasonry," said Dr. Thomas, "has its mysteries. Like all organizations it has its obligations; but these are not the secret of its abiding power." The Doctor, surely, cannot believe this platitude. Take from Masonry its secret work and its murderous oaths, and it would go to pieces as rapidly and completely as did the Romish Inquisition at Avignon when the cannon-balls of Napoleon penetrated its dungeon walls. There is nothing in Masonry that can stand the exposure of its perfidy and follies in the light of Christianity—when it is illuminated by the Holy Spirit of God.

Well, the Temple is so far completed. The shrine is not yet erected; Jachin and Boaz, and Jubela, Jubelo, and Jubelum, are not yet installed in their new secret upper chambers; but they will be there in due time. In the meantime the mystery of iniquity will be perpetuated in the thirty lodges, the six commanderies, and the one consistory that "assisted" in placing the coping-stone on this pagan resort. But the end is not yet.

SOCIALISM IN THE ALLIANCE.

Like a wheel within a wheel, for evil is ever ready to beget evil, there are indications that a part of the Farmers' Alliance, at least in Missouri, has formed a new secret order, called the "Anti-Monopolists," which was, some time ago, reported to be "rapidly increasing in numbers." The Kansas City (Mo.) Star, and a telegraphic dispatch to a Chicago paper, form the principal source of information concerning it that has yet been given to the country.

The Star says that intelligence of the new order was made public during the recent State meeting of the Alliance at Warrensburg, Mo., when it was announced that the sub-organization intended to use force to attain the objects of the Alliance. The defeat of a "sub-treasury resolution" in the meeting was attributed to this force element, which numbered forty-eight delegates. One of these is reported to have openly said: "If the minority will not do what the majority wills, it is high time for the majority to hang the minority. If ballots won't do this business, bullets will, and there are a lot of us pledged to go that far."

The doctrines of the new order are described as those of the radical socialists, and every effort is being made to convert other members of the Alliance to a belief in their theories. Other members of the Alliance are earnestly opposed to its operations, which are certainly of an alarming character.

TELLING DISCOURSES BY DR. A. J. GORDON.

In a private letter from Bro. J. P. Stoddard, October 12, we gain the following idea of the grand work performed by Rev. Dr. Gordon in his home ministrations at Boston:

"Dr. Gordon is preaching a series of sermons on the Holy Ghost. Yesterday his theme was the 'Sealing of the Holy Ghost.' The house was filled, and for one hour not a sound was heard, save the clear, calm voice of the great preacher, as he poured the simple, loving Gospel into the ears and hearts of the hundreds who bent forward to catch not only the words but the Spirit that inspired the speaker. He gave a clear testimony and warning against secret societies as destructive to the spiritual power of Christ's body. The series of discourses is to continue for two Sabbaths; and for two weeks, still continuing, there has been daily an 8 o'clock morning prayer meeting in the church for the baptism of the Holy Ghost."

GETTING RIGHT ON THE RECORD.

The Central Illinois Synod of the Lutheran church met in annual session at Washington, Ill., last month, and during its proceedings the following preamble and resolution were presented, and, if we understand the record, were also adopted:

"WHEREAS, In consequence of the very large immigration of late years to the United States, and of the increasing tendency to Europeanize America, a disposition has become manifest to attach to the Lutheran denomination in this country the stigma of hostility to the American free schools, and to other institutions and ideas that are distinctively American; therefore,

"Resolved, That the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Central Illinois deems it prudent and right to put on record its dissent from all imputations which imply antagonism on the part of American Lutherans to the free schools, the proper observance of the Lord's day, the prevalence of the English as the language of the nation, and other institutions and ideas distinctively American, and not inconsistent with the teachings of Christianity."

REFORM DISCUSSION IN CANADA.

Bro. Silas W. Mack, Principal of Dunham Academy, Dunham, Province of Quebec, Canada, in a private letter, calls attention to a discussion of secret societies which is now taking place in the columns of the Montreal Daily Witness. "Among the defenders of the lodge is an Odd-fellow, who brings in his record in the Sunday-school as a certificate of character. Saturday's issue contains an article from my pen on 'The Church and the Lodge.' Wishing you Godspeed in your efforts, I am, etc."

The Reform side of the pending discussion is in good hands. "Thrice armed is he who hath his quarrel just."

—Bro. Hinman, writing from Wisconsin, says: "I have met much less than usual opposition, and think the time very favorable for the consideration of the secrecy question." Wisconsin is a noble State, and the seed sown there, both before and during the conference, promises a good harvest. The brethren met with a grateful spirit of toleration that is of recent growth. Our friends feel greatly encouraged.

—The New York Independent of November 5, noticing the "Autobiography of John G. Fee," published by the National Christian Association, and for sale at the office of the Cynosure (price $1.00), kindly refers to its venerable author as follows: "Books like this are scarce enough, and good enough, to be worth reading. Mr. Fee's life has been given to serving God as his conscience impelled, and this without regard to consequences to himself. His adventures as an Abolitionist and a missionary in Kentucky during the most trying period of our national history are replete with moral heroism."

—The New York Presbytery met on Wednesday of last week for the purpose of trying Prof. Chas. A. Briggs, for heresy, the charge being based upon the language used by him in his inaugural address in Union Theological Seminary. Dr. John C. Bliss presided as Moderator. After the introduction of a protest by the defendant and a long discussion of a motion to dismiss the case on technical grounds, a resolution was offered and adopted dismissing the case, by a vote of 94 to 49; 71 ministers and 23 elders voting in the affirmative and 26 ministers and 23 elders voting in the negative. This action, however, does not end the controversy, as it will undoubtedly be taken before the New York Synod.

—Cyrus Teed, of this city, founder of a peculiar religious sect called Koreshans, and who makes pretensions to the Messiahship, has had his doctrines indorsed by the Celibate Society of Economites, of Pennsylvania—another peculiar sect, founded many years ago, about twenty miles from Pittsburgh—and it is reported that Teed is to assume control of their spiritual and temporal affairs. The wealth of the Economites—which is a communistic society—is estimated at $150,000,000. Barnum was right when he said that people like to be humbugged. A religious delusion, especially, is to many a source of delight. This is only a fresh instance of a very reprehensible practice, which began in the Garden of Eden, and is engineered by the same delusive spirit of evil.

—The Freeman's Journal, of Cooperstown, N. Y., of a recent date, makes this significant remark: "There are three church prayer meetings held each Thursday evening in this village, and for several months past, as we are credibly informed, the attendance of men on all of them has not averaged thirty. The attendance of women is probably five times as large. Scarcely any men of this village attend Lenten service except on Sunday in the churches that hold them. What is the matter?—why this falling off? Even the Sunday evening congregations that usually assemble in the five Protestant churches could all be comfortably seated in one of them, and at least three-fourths of those are women. Where are the men and boys who used to attend these services?" The comment of the brother who sends us this item is: "Effects of secret societies." These four words contain a volume of truth. The lodge has its hands upon the throats of the Christian churches, and is strangling them.

—The Advance for last week was a special number, devoted to the work of the American Missionary Association (Congregational) in the cause of the Negro, the Indian and Chinaman within the limits of the Union. It is a most creditable record. Among the many honorable names included in this work we find that of one of the Cynosure's oldest and highly-valued friends, Amos Dresser. "More than fifty years ago," says the Advance, "on the public square of Nashville, he received thirty-nine lashes upon his bare back by order of the vigilance committee, for the crime of having some anti-slavery newspapers wrapped around the Bibles which he was selling in his vacation, as a student from Lane Seminary, to secure funds for the prosecution of his studies. He is still a hale and hearty home missionary in Nebraska."

—Dr. David C. Kelley, Prohibition candidate for governor in Tennessee, in a recent address, thus gives the cold shoulder to the attempt to unequally yoke the Prohibition party with the Farmer's Alliance; and he ought to have a large and hearty indorsement from every true Reformer: "I am irreconcilably opposed to any oath-bound, secret, star-chamber organization, such as the Farmers' Alliance acknowledges itself to be, coming into control of the affairs of this State. Any organization that excludes from membership, or from any knowledge of its internal affairs, a large portion of the best citizens of this State, has no right to demand that it be entrusted with the government of those citizens. The affairs of government, and the motives and principles that are the mainspring behind them, should be open and above board, free to the inspection of everybody."

—A new non-fraternity club was formed at Northwestern University, Evanston, on Wednesday of last week, including all male students not connected with the existing secret societies of the institution. Fully 200 students will unite with it. The following are the officers chosen: President, J. Maily '92; vice presidents, E. B. Fowler '93, E. Masslich '94, J. Potter '95; secretary, S. Heil '95; treasurer, Bayard Payne '94. No antagonism will be shown the "frats" unless they commence opposition first. The new club will try to work in common with the "frats" in general affairs requiring the assistance of the students as a whole. The institution (it is said) will control the Northwestern and the Arrow, the two college periodicals. The movement shows a desire on the part of the members of the club to be entirely freed from the exactions and irregularities of the local lodges, and, so far, deserves encouragement and support.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

hymn-book under his arm. He was a student of the Union Theological Seminary. We went to a lodging-house on Mulberry street, and spoke to an assembly of about 75 inmates.

In the evening I spoke to a crowd in the street from the steps of a church as an introduction to the evening service on the inside. Afterwards I attended a Salvation Army meeting, in which the main part of the audience consisted of about sixty young men between the ages of 18 and 25. The captain told them that a policeman had informed her that they were some of the worst thieves and cut-throats in the city of New York, and the responsive "Oh, ohs," that came from the persons addressed would have made you think of your pockets if you had anything valuable in them. I could not help thinking that these young men would be the right kind of material for adepts in Masonry and Odd-fellowship. God willing, my next letter will be from Toronto.

W. FENTON.

An agent of the Progressive Benefit Order was recently arrested in Newark, N. J., charged with swindling, and on Saturday last Thomas Crane, secretary of a branch of the Order of the Shield, was arrested in Jersey City on the complaint of W. F. Gibsou of having embezzled $24 of money received as assessments from members and which he is said to have neglected to turn over.—N. Y. American Advertiser Reporter, Oct. 21.

THE HOME.

"LED BY GOD'S HAND."

"I journey on, 'not knowing,'
I would not if I might;
I would rather walk in the dark with God
Than walk alone in the light;
I would rather walk with him by faith
Than walk alone by sight.

"I know not the way I am going,
But well do I know my Guide;
With a child-like trust I give my hand
To the mighty Friend at my side;
And the only thing I say to him
As he takes it is, 'Hold it fast;
Suffer me not to lose my way,
And lead me home at last.'

"As when some helpless wanderer,
Alone in an unknown land,
Tells the guide his destined place of rest,
And leaves all else in his hand.
'Tis home, 'tis home that we wish to reach;
He who guides may choose the way;
And little we heed what path we take
If nearer home each day."

—Selected.

THE SYMPATHY OF CHRIST.

It has always seemed to us that this trait which was so prominent in the character of Jesus goes very far to establish in our hearts the truth that he was more than man. We are acquainted with many founders of religion, but where is there one whose nature was of such an exalted dignity, and yet robed in the most exquisite tenderness and humility. There was dignity in these men, it is true, but it was of such a character as had no sunny side towards the sinful, the tempted, the struggling and sorrowful. The very fact that these men were cold and selfish, and expressed their regard for the race in such doubtful terms, is sufficient to convince any one that they were but men, with the feelings and thoughts of men.

It is not always the case that greatness of character and spirit are manifested in great acts. We look upon men, and judge of them by their great deeds. When men give thousands of dollars to the cause of bettering the race, we are ready to say this is benevolence, this is true sympathy, and yet it may be nothing of the kind. The relation of those men to their fellows in every-day life will the better declare their love and sympathy. There are a thousand things men may do that will indicate their greatness and tenderness of soul much more than by the great acts of their life. But with Jesus Christ there is no doubt at all. His sympathy is so evident, and so tender, that we cannot help but admire it. He uniformly exhibits the tenderest appreciation of the difficulties and weaknesses of others. He sympathizes with every aspect, and every condition of men. Though in him was the most exalted dignity, yet there is nothing too humble for him to stoop to in the work of doing good. His greatness of character is not more conspicuous than in his greatest acts of humiliation. Pass before you in review all the great characters of the world, dwell upon their excellencies, and yet you cannot help but conclude that among them all Jesus is the greatest, that he is the most accessible, and the most sympathetic.

Take but that one case of the interview of Christ with the woman of Samaria. What tenderness Christ showed to the poor, ignorant creature who came there to draw water. Had any of the great moralists known her as Jesus knew her, they would have turned from her in disgust; but Jesus saw there a struggling soul, and he sympathized with her, and made himself known to her as he perhaps never revealed himself to any one. Looking into her face with great tenderness he said, "I that speak to thee am he." He could look into the human heart and see all its wants and struggles, and that he sympathized with it is shown in a thousand acts of mercy, and declared as it never could be in any other way in those blessed words, "Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest." We must know Jesus truly if we would know in all its fullness the sympathy of his deep loving heart. He loved us as no one ever could love us, and his sympathy consisted not merely in words. Almost every foot of ground over which he passed could bring some testimony of this trait of his character. Jesus is the same now, even though he has ascended on high. Every struggling soul to-day has the assurance that he is with it, and that he deeply sympathizes with it. No one need be discouraged; the tender regard of such a friend as he is can calm the most troubled heart, and make it feel that there is indeed one that sticketh closer than a brother.—Christian World.

PATIENCE AND ITS WORK.

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations."—James 1: 2.

This seems to be one of the difficult places for the Christian to become reconciled to, because his experience, he thinks, does not always harmonize with the apostle's language, but we must hear him a little further, before we pass hasty judgment upon the case. He continues by saying: "Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." The benefit comes to the one who is exercised thereby, in the trying of the faith which worketh patience. Then the additional instruction is to this effect: "Let patience have her perfect work."

The great benefit is to be derived largely from the exercise of a little patience. When a teamster finds that his wagon is stuck in the mud, he is then, in so far as the case and environments are concerned, in a proper condition to have the benefit of patience in the full force of all its grace. This all depends, however, upon whether he will allow patience to have her perfect work. Patience has no chance to do anything, where there is no provocation to the contrary, and there is something here that I wish to notice a little further. The Saviour says, "In your patience possess ye your souls." It would seem from this, that, in the absence of patience, the soul might be lost. If this noble grace were more largely exercised and cultivated, oh, how many bitter tears and sorrows and heart-burnings would be avoided. Many hasty words and violent actions would be entirely avoided, and many hearts would be beating in unison, where sorrow, and grief, and even hatred (in some cases) now reign supreme.

Bitter words are the result of a lack of patience. Hasty words, and words not seasoned with grace, have alienated hearts that otherwise would have been true to each other for life, and this lays the foundation for some very hearty repentance, or if this is not indulged in, then the way is open for the final end, which is destruction. Jesus says, "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12: 37.

I suppose that there are few persons who do not need a little more patience at times than what they find on hand, at the particular time, and the reason it is not found when most needed, is because we do not stop long enough to look for it, or call it in. There is a large supply always at hand, if we will only allow it time to put in its perfect work. This applies even to preachers. Let us see what Jesus has to say about this matter: "Without me ye can do nothing."—John 15: 5. Paul says, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able," etc.—1 Cor. 10: 13. God is always ready, when we are willing to take his counsel.—A. Hutchison.

WRECKER-LIGHTS.

The theatre, the dance, and the card-table—a trinity of evil—still exert an alluring influence on many professed Christians. All of them are tolerated in some professedly evangelical churches. True orthodoxy is, however, that of the heart rather than of the head. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you," is the text Christ offers. These three forms of dissipation are individually responsible for the shattering of many homes and hopes, the blasting of many characters and the damnation of many souls. Can a Christian habitually attend the theatre? No! for he will soon cease to be one, as he imbibes the irreligious and often directly immoral teachings of the stage. Can a Christian dance? No! First, if he is a Christian, he has no time for such an amusement; second, the devotees of the dance will lose every Christian thought and purpose in its whirl, and often have the way to hell made as slippery for him as the floor on which he treads. Well, is there any harm in a game of whist? Stand with me beside the card-table. See the despairing faces of men who have staked and lost their last dollar. Hear the crack of that pistol as some lost soul is hurried by his own hand to the bar of a just God, when hope had been crushed by fortune's wheel. Think of the quarrels and murders which stand to the account of the cursed pack of cards. Is there any harm in them? Yes! they reek with human blood, they are smirched with blackened characters, they are heavy with the doom of men. A Christian is one whose whole purpose and trend of life is away from such things. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." We cannot have the world and Christ. Which shall we choose?—Selected.

LIVING ON A TRACT.

Before any missionaries had visited the Karens, one of the tribes of India, a small tract found its way into one of the homes.

The man and his wife who possessed this tract had never heard of our Bible, and knew nothing of a heavenly Father or a loving Saviour. They studied the tract carefully; they followed its directions, and gave their hearts to the Lord Jesus.

Year after year they tried to serve God, living just as faithfully as they knew how. And they had no guide to heaven but their tract. The old Hindoo man at last lay upon his bed dying, and, as he knew he must soon pass away, he said, "When I am dead put the little tract near my heart, and bury it with me. It has told me of Jesus; has shown me how to live and how to die." So, when the good man was laid to rest in his coffin, beside him was placed the tract which led him to Christ.

This tract was the means saving two souls, and they of saving many others.

COURAGE IN LIFE.

Life is not entirely made up of great evils or heavy trials, but of the perpetual recurrence of petty evils and small trials in the ordinary and appointed exercises of the Christian graces. To bear with the failings of those about us—with their infirmities, their bad judgment, their ill-breeding, their perverse tempers; to endure neglect when we feel we deserve attention, and ingratitude when we expected thanks; to bear with the company of disagreeable people whom Providence has placed in our way, and whom he has perhaps provided or purposed for the trial of our virtue—these are best exercises of patience and self-denial, and the better because not chosen by ourselves. This habitual acquiescence appears to be more of the essence of self-denial than any little rigors of our own imposing. These constant, inevitable, but inferior evils, properly improved, furnish a good moral discipline, and might, in the days of ignorance, have superseded penance.—Hannah More.

LITTLE GIRL AND HER GRANDFATHER.

A little girl, whose grandfather was an inmate of an asylum in the west of England, was permitted often times to visit him there. The old man's sight had failed him, so that he was quite unable to read. But the little grandchild, when she visited him, would read portions of the Scriptures to the aged and dying man. One day she sat reading the first Epistle of John. As she finished the words of verse 7, "And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," the aged man stopped her, and, raising himself, earnestly inquired, "Is that there, my dear?"

"Yes, grandpa," answered the child.

"Then read it to me again; I've never heard the like before."

She read again—"And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

"You are quite sure it's there?"

"Yes, quite sure."

"Then take my hand, and lay my finger on the passage, for I should like to feel it."

So the little girl took the blind man's hand, and placed his bony finger on the seventh verse.

"Now read it to me again;" and again the child, with her soft, sweet, gentle voice, read the precious verse.

Then the old man said, "If any one should ask how I died, tell them I died in the faith of those words—'And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all (all) sin.'" And then the old man drew his hand from the book, his head fell softly back on the pillow, and he silently passed away into eternity.—Selected.

IT MAKES ALL WRONG.

"Please, father, is it wrong to go pleasuring on the Lord's Day? My teacher says it is."
 "Why, child, perhaps it isn't exactly right."
 "Then it is wrong, isn't it, father?"
 "Oh, I don't know that—if it is once in a while."
 "Father, you know how fond I am of sums!"
 "Yes, John, I am glad that you are; I want you to do them well, and be quick and clever at figures. But why do you speak of sums just now?"
 "Because, father, if there is one little figure put wrong in the sum it makes all wrong, however large the amount is."
 "To be sure, child, it does."
 "Then, please, father, don't you think that if God's Day is put wrong now and then it makes it all wrong?"
 "Put wrong, child—how?"
 "I mean, father, put to a wrong use."
 "That brings it very close," said the father, as if speaking to himself, and then added: "John, it is wrong to break God's holy Sabbath. He has forbidden it, and your teacher was quite right."
 "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."
 —Kind Words.

HE KNOWETH ALL.

The twilight falls, the night is near,
 We fold our work away,
 And kneel to one who bends to hear
 The story of the day.
 The old, old story, yet we kneel
 To tell it at thy call,
 And cares grow lighter as we feel
 That Jesus knows it all.

Yes, all! the morning and the night,
 The joy, the grief, the loss,
 The roughened path, the sunbeam bright,
 The hourly thorn and cross.
 Thou knowest all—we lean our head,
 Our weary eyelids close,
 Content and glad awhile to tread
 This path since Jesus knows.

And he has loved us; all our heart
 With answering love is stirred,
 And every anguished pain and smart
 Finds healing in the Word.
 So here we lay us down to rest,
 As mighty shadows fall,
 And lean confiding on his breast
 Who knows and pities all.

—Anonymous.

TEMPERANCE.

THE CHURCH AND THE POLITICAL ACTS OF ITS MEMBERS.

The following thoughtful letter comes to us from a Methodist minister who has been a prominent member of many sessions of the General Conference and an editor of one of the church advocates:

Editor of the Voice:—I see you are receiving some plain talk about your editorial dealing with the league between the church and saloon. I do not think anybody can blame earnest temperance men for criticising with much severity the practical attitude of church members touching their ineffectual opposition to the saloon. But it must not be forgotten that the church is a corporate body with limited authority, limited by the ends she seeks, and her reasonable convictions as to the best methods for attaining them. How far that authority should extend in controlling conduct is a matter of the utmost consideration and demands the utmost practical wisdom in determining. Protestantism cannot infringe too far upon individualism without self-contradiction and stultification. She seeks, indeed, the cultivation of individualism to the fullest extent compatible with that corporate relation which is indispensable to the successful execution of the work committed to the Christian church. To attempt to control by stress of legislative and judicial proceedings the voting of her members would be the annihilation of individualism in one of the most important and comprehensive spheres of action in which men are called upon to act. And if she is to arrogate to herself authority for doing it in one case of political policy, who shall define the limitation to be put on the exercise of this power?

Do you not see that this theory logically tends to the ultimate domination of the church over the state? And this would commit us to the repetition of a history of darkness for the world and sorrow for the race, from which all recoil as from the unendurable.

Your advice to all prohibitionists to come out from the churches which suffer its members to vote for the political parties that adopt license in any of its forms, seems to me exceedingly unfortunate. It brings to memory the "come-outism" of forty or fifty years ago, and the havoc it played with some of the churches of Northern Ohio, and the harvest of infidelity that ripened in its breath. And no good came of it to the slave, or weakening of his bonds.

As to your charging the church as being the bulwark of the saloon, do you not put yourself in the position of an inconsequent reasoner? True, if all the churches of the land would demand that that monster diabolism, the saloon, should depart and never return, it must obey. Would to God they would do it at once. But cannot the same thing be said of other classes than members of churches? Can it not be said of the Republican and Democratic parties? Can it not be said of the farmers, as a class, or the merchants, or even lawyers? And are each of these a bulwark of the saloon? And all of them?

It is not legitimate reasoning to make one class in society responsible for a great wrong, that may with equal logical force be placed to the account of other classes also.

You are doing a brave, an heroic work, one that must succeed, at last, or virtue fall from off the earth, and I am anxious that you alienate no natural allies indispensable to the accomplishment of the mighty task. Fail you must without the church on your side.

For one brief, flickering moment, the hope came to us, on reading the above, that here was something that would change our conclusions, and relieve us from a duty that has been one of the most painful we have ever performed. The hope has vanished, the duty remains. Truth and logic are inexorable, and they declare in tones that the nation must hear, that the responsibility for countless murders rests upon four million church members and upon the churches that suffer them to persist in their sin unrebuked.

The authority of a church over the conduct of its members is, of course, limited. Individualism must, of course, be carefully guarded. The political course of the individual should not be dictated by a church. All this we readily concede. The church should not tell a man whether he shall live in New York or Brooklyn, whether he shall practice law or medicine, whether he shall remain single or get married, whether he shall live in a house of his own or in a flat, whether he shall vote for the tariff or free trade; but the church should say to the individual, whether you live in New York or Brooklyn, whether you practice law or medicine, whether you are single or married, you shall not persistently and deliberately pursue an immoral course. Has a church authority on matters of judgment? No. On matters of expediency? No. On mere fiscal or financial matters? No. On scientific matters? No. But on matters of morality—yes! If a church is not ready to enforce the decrees of morality, then it ought to be buried under a load of public contempt.

We demand that the churches shall enforce the decrees of morality upon their members. We declare that they are not doing it. When these decrees of morality extend into politics, the church must pursue them there. The things a man cannot do of himself without violating moral law he cannot do by union with others in a political party without violating the same law. What a man cannot do personally, as an individual, without sin, he cannot politically, as a citizen, authorize another to do without committing the same sin. The laws of morality are not abrogated by co-operation and co-partnership in sin. If, as the Methodist church, by its discipline and its official declaration, asserts, it is a moral wrong to stand behind a bar and sell liquor by the glass, then the conclusion immediately follows that it is a moral wrong to engage with others in establishing such a sale. To cry politics makes no change in the matter. Whether in the realm of politics, or business, or professional life, a moral wrong demands rebuke from a Christian church; and a church that does not administer that rebuke, countenances the immorality and has become an immoral organization. Most of the Protestant churches (as well as the Catholic church of America through the Plenary Council) have recognized the business of drunkard-making as a moral wrong. And now to allow their members to do by co-operation in a political party what they have declared to be immoral, is confessedly and unavoidably to countenance organized immorality. There is no escaping the conclusion.

We don't ask the church to determine how a man shall vote on the tariff; on free silver; on national banks; on civil service reform; on ballot reform. It has never declared that it is immoral for a man to run a national bank, or to collect a customs duty on imports, or to appoint a public officer for partisan services. But if it were a clear case of immorality to do these things, as an individual, it would be equally immoral for the individuals to band together and authorize their doing, and the church that countenanced the deed would be a recreant church. We ask no union of church and state; but we insist that the church enforce the decrees of morality, not only in the home life, the social life, the church life, but in the business life and the political life—in the whole life. We demand, not the domination of church over state, but the domination of moral precepts over the whole life, political as well as social; and the church that does not demand the same is making politics dominate over morals, and dethroning God in order to crown a political party or a political leader.

As for Garrison, Phillips, and the other Abolitionists, they were fighting for a recognition by the church that the keeping of slaves was an immoral act. That the churches were blinded by years of sophistry and prejudice was not, perhaps, so remarkable. But had they recognized the keeping of slaves as immoral, declared it to be so in official manifestoes, and then allowed their members to continue the practice without rebuke, then what justification could a single Christian conscience have found for such churches? Then constitutional questions clouded the duty and responsibility of the citizen. There are no such questions to cloud duty now. The constitutional right of the citizens of a State to prohibit the liquor traffic has been established for forty years. The immoral character of the traffic has been very generally conceded by all churches. What justification, then, can a Christian conscience find to-day for a church that allows its members to establish by political combinations an iniquity which they would not be allowed to participate in personally? It is an outrage on reason, an outrage on common sense, an outrage on conscience.

As for other classes, such as lawyers, farmers, etc., they are not organized bodies of men. The attitude of the church is in a peculiar sense the bulwark of the liquor traffic, because it is an organization from which the community has a right to expect moral guidance. That is an inseparable part of its professed mission. Other organizations and other classes may sanction or tolerate an immoral practice without inflicting nearly so much demoralization as comes from this sanction or toleration by the church.

We demand that the churches of America enforce the clear precepts of morality. They are not doing it. We don't refer to such disputed matters as card-playing, theatre-going, dancing; but to such immoralities as stealing, lying, cheating, and murder. The man who steals as a member of a corporation and the man who murders as a member of a political party must be rebuked by the church of which he is a member, or the church must stand before the bar of God as sponsor for the sin.

Prohibitionists of America, the time has come for a new warfare. The ungodly league of churches and saloons must be broken, if the churches have to be split from turret to foundation-stone in order to do it. Listen to your own conscience. Move when it tells you and not before. But on your peril refuse to move then.—The N. Y. Voice, Oct. 22.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON VIII.—Fourth Quarter.—November 22.

SUBJECT.—Christ Betrayed.—John 18: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.—Mark 14: 41.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 18: 1-13. T.—Zech. 11: 7-13. W.—Matt. 26: 14-25. T.—Matt. 26: 47-56. F.—Matt. 27: 3-10. S.—Luke 22: 54-62. S.—Mark 14: 33-42.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Christ betrayed.—vs. 1-4. The highest and purest natures are the most fond of retirement. To this quiet garden we are told that Jesus "ofttimes resorted." He could forget for a time, resting in its shadows, the turmoil of opposition and hate which he had left behind him; while it gave him a chance to teach his disciples in private such spiritual truths as they were able to comprehend. Yet Judas could use his knowledge of a spot so hallowed by every tender and sweet association as the instrument of his cold-blooded treachery. There are no holy places to a heart into which Satan has entered; while to the heart in which Jesus dwells all places are holy, for it can sing with Madame Guyon in the Bastille:

"Where'er we dwell we dwell with thee,
In heaven, on earth, or in the sea."

Some have tried to extenuate Judas' guilt by the fanciful supposition that he only meant to do evil that good might come, and took this desperate way to force on Christ the temporal sovereignty, never supposing that he would allow himself to be put to death, but would, instead, work such a miracle as would convince friend and foe alike of his Messiahship. But this whole narrative is against such an hypothesis. His securing a band of soldiers that there might be no possible chance of successful resistance on the part of the disciples; the bringing of lanterns and torches, although it was full moon, so that the most shadowy recesses of the garden might be searched out; and, lastly, though John does not mention it, the kiss by which he sealed his treachery, all show the cold-blooded deliberation which characterized his every act in the terrible drama. Yet there is some danger that in our detestation of Judas' crime we shall forget that he was human, like ourselves. Out of the first church which Christ organized on earth, with twelve members, one was found to be a traitor. Is it possible that any such proportion exists in the churches of to-day? We trust not; and yet, what is this spirit of compromise with the world, so terribly prevalent among professing Christians of all denominations, but treachery to our blessed Redeemer? He that will sell the truth for money or for office has reason to fear that he would sell his Lord in the same way if opportunity offered.

2. Christ arrested.—vs. 5-9. How futile were their lanterns and torches in the presence of him who was the Light! It seems strange that they should persist in their attempt to take him after such a display of his divine power, but it illustrates the fact that God may work the greatest signs and wonders before the eyes of men without converting them, unless accompanied by the Holy Spirit. They will still refuse to be convinced. The whole scene brings out wonderfully the mingled courage and tenderness of Christ's character. While he showed the sublimest fortitude in thus boldly confronting his murderers, a deeper and higher chord was struck when he stipulated as a condition of his freely surrendering himself, "let these go their way." Their hour had not yet come. "Of those whom thou hast given me have I lost none." Christ makes allusion to this same prophecy in John 17: 12: "Not one of them is lost but the son of perdition." The allusion here seems to point to a double meaning in the prophecy, as if it had a primary reference to their spiritual, and a secondary one to their temporal, salvation. It proves that Christ, who is "the same yesterday, to-day and forever," holds the lives of his saints "precious in his sight" as well as their death, and the one cannot happen to them until the other has continued long enough to work out all his divine purposes for them. How much would have been lost to the world had the disciples perished then with their Master! How much to the disciples themselves!—even if their faith in him had been firm enough to stand the test of martyrdom.

3. The healing of Malchus.—vs. 10-13. By some rash act or speech we can easily put our Master in an equivocal position before the world. Peter did not stop to think that by his assault on the high priest's servant he was giving color to the accusations of Christ's bitterest enemies. So the holy religion of Jesus has in all ages suffered most from the misguided zeal of his friends. We need not go back to the wars which have been waged, or the persecutions which have been carried on in his name. The religious controversies of modern times, in their heat and acrimony and bitterness, ecclesiastical feuds and denominational rivalries, have often led men to discredit his mission. It does not prevent the mischief that those who engage in such controversies do so from a real but mistaken zeal for his cause. "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" Even his most loving disciple had no right to stand in his way to the Cross. How often human love seeks to prevent the drinking of some cup of sorrow, not realizing that to do so would hinder the divine plan, and perhaps work untold evil.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BRETHREN.

—At the Brethren convention held at Enon, Iowa, on the 13th and 14th of October, the ministers present took the preliminary steps to form a ministerial association of the Brethren church. The Pennsylvania constitution and by-laws were adopted. It is requested by the association that each minister in North and South Dakota, Iowa and Illinois send a certificate of membership and a credential as a minister in the Brethren church to the secretary, Z. T. Livengood, Lanark, Ill.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Congregational Year Book for 1891 gives the number of members of the churches of that name in the United States as 506,832. Massachusetts has one-fifth of that number.

—Prof. Smyth, of Andover Theological Seminary, was expelled from his Chair of Ecclesiastical History, some five years ago, by the Board of Visitors. The ground of his removal was that he "taught heterodoxy, especially respecting the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and a probation after death of some souls that have not had the Gospel in this life." The Professor appealed from the decision of the Board to the civil court. The lower court sustained his appeal, and the case was taken to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. That court last week announced its decision. It sustained the lower court on a legal technicality—that is, because the Board of Trustees was not made a party in the process against Prof. Smyth. Chief Justice Field dissented in a long opinion. The decision of the court does not touch the merits of the theological controversy, but it is regarded as a triumph for Prof. Smyth.

—Secretary Smith, discussing the work of the twelve missions of the American Board in Asiatic Turkey, the Chinese Empire, Africa, and the Pacific Islands, said: "Under the care of the Board, through twenty-one missions planted amid great population, giving access to more than one billion souls, and encircling the globe, comprising more than one thousand great cities and strategic points where the Gospel is regularly preached and Christian schools are maintained, employing 538 missionaries, seconded by a force of 2,648 native preachers and teachers, including 410 churches, with 38,226 communicants, gathering an army of 46,403 pupils in schools of all grades, from the theological seminary and college on the one hand to the common school and kindergarten on the other, ministering medical relief to one hundred thousand patients, and distributing the Scriptures and Christian literature by millions of pages annually, the work of evangelizing the pagan nations is moving forward."

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—The General Conference of the Evangelical Association, at its recent session at Indianapolis, passed a resolution to hereafter admit no candidate to the ministry who is addicted to the use of tobacco.

FREE METHODIST.

—Mrs. R. A. Bradley, who for years faithfully conducted a mission church on North Wells street, Chicago, has recently opened "Olive Branch Mission," at 95 South DesPlaines street, Chicago, in a very "tough" neighborhood, where there are eleven saloons in one block, and where dangers surround her on every side; yet she declares it "the grandest field," and is doing good work for the Master. She wishes to be remembered by all who love the Lord.

FRIENDS.

—The actual position of Quakerism throughout the world is given in the following numbers: Ireland has 2,687 members, who are reported as not increasing; Canada claims 1,109 members, who are increasing. The number of Quakers in the United States is given as 81,000, but they are much divided. The scholars now in the Friends' Sunday-schools in England and Wales are:

Adults, 22,735; Juniors, 12,514. The number of schools is 199, and of teachers 1,900.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The third week in November is set apart as a week of prayer by all the Methodist bodies in England for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

MORMONS.

—Judge Charles S. Zane, the chief justice of the Supreme Court of Utah, has presided at the trials of all the Mormons who have been tried for polygamy. He has reached the conclusion that, when the president of the church and his advisers formally renounced polygamy (President Woodruff having had an inspiration that the church no longer required polygamy as a doctrine), they were sincere, and that this institution is now dead forever. In the November number of the Forum he explains the slow process by which the rulers of the church were forced to come to this conclusion, and he shows their conduct and subsequent events that prove their sincerity.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Presbyterian Presbyteries are generally deciding in favor of adopting the report of the General Assembly's Committee on Revision. Some are advocating more extensive changes. December is the limit set for the consideration of the question.

—Frank Russell, secretary of the Sunday-school Association, of New York, gives the whole number of Sunday-school members at 20,078,595, more than half of whom are in the United States.

—Rev. Dr. Aaron Lindsley, well known in Oregon and the Pacific northwest as a Presbyterian clergyman and an organizer of Presbyterian churches, died recently at Portland. He was educated in the East, and began his useful life with missionary work in Wisconsin, a long pastorate at South Salem, New York, following. He also held a pastorate of eighteen years at Portland, Ore., and organized twenty-two churches in that vicinity. After that he founded the evangelical missions in Alaska.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—The fourteenth meeting of the Episcopal Church Congress, which will convene in Washington, D. C., November 17th, will be presided over by ex-Senator Edmunds. Among the topics of discussion are Evolution and Theism, Socialism, Relation of the Clergy to Politics, New and Old Parochial Methods, Catholic and Protestant Tendencies in the Life of the Church, the True Policy of Diocesan Missions, Personal Religion.

—The Rev. Isaac Lea Nicholson, D.D., has been ordained and consecrated to the office of bishop in the Protestant Episcopal church. His diocese will be Milwaukee. The services were much more High Church and ritualistic than were those held at the ordination of Dr. Phillips Brooks in Boston a short time ago. The sermon on the occasion was preached by the Right Rev. Dr. Grafton, bishop of Fond du Lac.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Reformed Presbyterian Synod branch—East End, Pittsburgh congregation, recently entered a suit for an injunction to restrain Rev. O. B. Milligan and the trustees from using the church property. The bill recites that Rev. O. B. Milligan was suspended by the R. P. Synod, and that he afterwards withdrew from the R. P. church and joined the U. P. church, taking a large portion of the congregation, and that they now hold the church property.

—The New York Presbytery (Synod) has acquitted Rev. J. C. K. Milligan, D.D., and Rev. J. F. Carson of the charges upon which they were libeled by Rev. D. McAllister, D.D.

—It is reported that Rev. M. N. Johnston, one of the four ministers indicted by the R. P. Synod, for the publication of sentiments not in harmony with the theoretical practice of Synod, has decided to locate in the Presbyterian church at Mahoningtown, Pa.

—Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa., opens with most flattering prospects. Last year 123 students were in attendance, and that enrollment will be exceeded this winter. Every effort will be made to bring this college to the highest point of excellence.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—If all the Catholic emigrants to this country and their descendants had continued faithful to the church, the number of members would be 20,000,000 instead of only 8,500,000. This is very remarkable; but it is only the legitimate result of the intelligence fostered by our public schools. Rome and general intelligence never could prosper together.—Religious Telescope.

UNITED BRETHREN.

—Central College, located at Enterprise, Dickinson county, Kansas, will be dedicated by Bishop J. Weaver, D.D., Nov. 29.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Synod of the A. R. Church South met at Statesville, N. C., Oct. 22. Rev. J. L. Hemphill was elected moderator. The vote of the Presbyteries on the overture to repeal the rule against instrumental music was in favor of repeal, 80 ayes and 52 nays, and the Synod declared the rule repealed by 50 ayes and 22 nays.

Woman's Canning and Preserving Co.

STOCK TO BE ADVANCED $10 PER SHARE.

Less than 2,000 shares are now offered for sale at $25 per share, and when sold prices will be advanced to $35 per share. Six weeks ago we offered 4,000 shares of our stock at par, since which time hundreds of ladies have thoroughly investigated our statements and purchased stock. At the present rate of disposal it will only be a short time before the unsold shares will all be sold. To the ladies who wish to become identified with this company, and MAKE MONEY FOR THEMSELVES, we make the following offer: Send a deposit, no matter how small, to show us you are in earnest. Say how many shares you would like, and we will reserve them for you until you have time to investigate.

You can lose nothing, and you may make a great deal. Full information is contained in our illustrated pamphlet and by-laws, which we send free. Stock ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE. No liability beyond amount invested. Present price $25 per share Par Value, payable, if desired, in monthly installments of $2.50 per share.

$2.50 per mo. secures 1 share or $ 25	$ 25 per mo. secures 10 shares or $ 250
5.00 " " 2 " 50	100 " " 40 " 1,000
10.00 " " 4 " 100	500 " " 200 " 5,000

STOCK SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN

Money derived from sale of stock is applied toward increasing factory facilities, whereby we add to our assets and thus the value of stock is advanced. Profits derived from sale of canned goods goes toward paying dividends to stockholders. Each additional factory means a larger output of goods, hence larger dividends to stockholders. Would you not like a safe and profitable investment? We have the only scientific process for canning and preserving food; no poison; no chemicals; never spoils; cooking unnecessary; flavor retained, and it SOLVES THE COMMUNION WINE QUESTION by furnishing the PURE JUICE OF THE GRAPE unchanged at all seasons. OUR PLAN is to establish with the money derived from the sale of our capital stock, one hundred or more factories in the United States. Then we can easily employ 5,000 women who will earn for us a net profit of $1,180,000 annually, assuming that 75 cents per day, will be the net profit for each employee, which is a very low estimate. Our stock which we offer at $25 PER SHARE, figured on this basis at the rate of eight per cent per annum, WILL THEN BE WORTH ABOUT $365 PER SHARE. FACTORIES being distributed over the country, we save the enormous sum that otherwise would be paid for freight charges.

ONLY WOMEN EMPLOYED IN OUR FACTORIES

They are surrounded with Christian influences and their wages are fixed at such rates as to insure their comfortable and honorable maintenance, with a reasonable and, so far as consistent with business success, a generous margin of profit. Many prominent ladies are identified with this movement. The officers and managers are EXCELLENT BUSINESS WOMEN, demonstrated by their individual successes, and who will, with the aid of every Christian woman in the land, make this the Greatest Financial Success ever accomplished by women.

In owning stock you not only reap the benefit of the large dividends that will be paid stockholders, but you also profit by the rapid rise in the value of the stock. TWO FACTORIES now running, another under contract; others will be built as rapidly as money is received from the sale of stock now offered. Each additional factory adds to the value of stock. Stock now costs $25 per share. In a very few weeks it will cost $35 PER SHARE. In a few years it may cost you $365 OR MORE PER SHARE.

LADIES WHO FULLY INVESTIGATE INVARIABLY BUY STOCK.

Have your shares reserved, then investigate fully. Our printed matter tells the whole story. IT IS SENT FREE. As this advertisement appears in about forty papers this week, and less than 2,000 shares are now for sale at $25 per share, all money received in excess of this amount WILL BE RETURNED TO THE PARTIES SENDING THE SAME. Sample can be sent on receipt of 25 cents for express charges. No charge for sample.

Officers and Commissioners:
 Mary Allen West, Editor of the Union Signal.
 Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
 Mrs. M. Louise Thomas, Pres. Sorosis Club, N. Y.
 Isabella Beecher Hooker, sister late Henry Ward Beecher, Lady Mgr. World's Fair.
 Mme. Demorest, Pub. Demorest's Magazine.
 Mrs. A. M. Dolph, wife of Senator Dolph, Washington, D. C.

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS FOR STOCK, AND MAKE CHECKS, DRAFTS OR MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO

WOMAN'S CANNING AND PRESERVING CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Grocers supplied by THURBER, WHYLAND & CO., NEW YORK, and SPRAGUE, WARNER & CO., CHICAGO.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The new fast mail system for suburban towns was successfully inaugurated. The American Library Association was entertained in Chicago. The Presbyterians discussed a reorganization of their creed. Member of the Board of Education Charles S. Thornton reports that "loose methods" prevail at the Normal School.

IN GENERAL.

Henry G. Bryant, of Philadelphia, and Professor Kenaston, of Washington, have returned from a trip to the Grand Falls of Labrador. The water makes a sheer descent of 316 feet, and the column of vapor ascending can be seen at a great distance. General Beauregard, of the Louisiana lottery, says that if he has been indicted by a United States grand jury in South Dakota, he will "make them smoke for it."

The Supreme Court of Illinois unanimously holds the female suffrage bill unconstitutional.

At Terre Haute, Ind., Friday, Charley Trout, the accomplice of Bob Musgrave, who tried to secure $35,000 accident insurance by burning up a cabin in which he had placed a human skeleton, was arrested on receipt of news of the arrest of Musgrave in St. Paul Thursday night.

Two executions, aggregating $501,000 were issued against the New York Cable Railway Company Friday, but the deputy sheriff could not find any property belonging to the company.

A package of lottery tickets sent from New Orleans via Ireland was seized Friday at Kalkaska, Mich.

Thomas Fortune, the colored editor of the New York Age, was awarded $325 damages from a restaurant keeper Friday, who refused to sell him liquor and afterward assaulted him.

It is said that a Georgian has invented a machine that performs perfectly the work of picking cotton.

Masked miners Sunday night released 156 convicts at Oliver Springs, Tenn., making a total of 486 released since Friday.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Nov. 2 to 7:
 J Lantz, E R Atwood, S L Cook, J Griffin, Roswell Dow, W B Guild, A J Foord, J P Winslow, E D Tillson, R Fraser, Miss E Fahs, Mrs M G Strong, J F Helin, M R Bell, Robt Burk, J C Telford, Mrs F Lloyd, W S McCullough, J W Matthey, W Northrop, C R Morsman, W R Sterrett, P J Robidoux, Mrs M McFarland, J Jones, J Motter.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	95 @	95 3/4
Winter.....	95 1/4 @	96 1/4
Corn—No. 2.....	56 @	57 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	32 @	33
Rye—No. 2.....	92 1/2 @	93 3/4
Bran per ton.....	13 50 @	14 00
Hay—Timothy.....	9 50 @	11 50
Butter, medium to best....	26 @	32
Cheese.....	09 @	11
Beans.....	1 60 @	1 75
Eggs.....	18 @	22 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 10 @	1 35
Flax.....	94 1/2 @	95
Broom corn.....	4 @	05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	22 @	34
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 1/4 @	5
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	5 90 @	6 30
Common to good....	3 15 @	3 75
Hogs.....	3 75 @	4 05
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 75

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 06 1/2 @	1 09 1/2
Corn.....	69 @	72 1/2
Oats.....	38 1/4 @	39
Eggs.....	23 1/2 @	24 1/2
Butter.....	14 @	30
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @	3 95
Hogs.....	3 00 @	4 00
Sheep.....	2 50 @	4 50

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords. 15cts each.

BEATTY Pianos, Organs, Bargarins. Catalogue free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

JOHN G. FEE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

will stimulate the faith of hundreds who will see in it how God can work in moral reforms, his wonders to perform, when state, church and nation oppose their combined power. Buy it for your boys and girls and you will not fail to read it yourself.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, $1.00.

Postage, 10 cents extra. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

TO YOU FOR THIRTY CENTS,

GEN. GRANT'S MEMOIRS,
 Two volumes. In Original $7 Edition;

or
 SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS,
 Two volumes. In Original $5 Edition;

or
 SHERIDAN'S MEMOIRS,
 Two volumes. In Original $6 Edition;

or
 McCLELLAN'S MEMOIRS,
 In Original $3.75 Edition;

Provided you accompany your order with one year's subscription to the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan magazine for $4.50, total, $4.80, and postage or expressage on Memoirs.

The postage on the books, at the rate of 1/2 cent per ounce, must be remitted with the order: Gen. Grant's Memoirs, 96 oz.—48 cents; Gen. Sherman's Memoirs, 84 oz.—42 cents; Gen. McClellan's Memoirs, 48 oz.—24 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grango," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 15x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
	SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Olerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
	TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.25
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that Collego for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.
 NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

HOME AND HEALTH.

When the ankle has been severely sprained, immerse it immediately in hot water, keeping it there for fifteen or twenty minutes.

There are very few people who are not at times annoyed by an aggravated twitching of the muscles of the eye. This is a danger-signal indicating abuse of the organs or extreme fatigue of the whole system, and the remedy is at once the simplest and the most difficult to apply—perfect rest.

A good way to scallop tomatoes is to put a layer of bread crumbs in a pudding-dish, with bits of butter, then a layer of sliced tomatoes, salt and pepper, with a very little onion juice to give flavor to the dish, and a very little sugar.

By the exercise of a little care and the adoption of a few simple rules, a great deal of rheumatism could be prevented. Abstemious living, free exercise, frequent bathing to keep the skin active, a liberal use of fruits and the drinking of water in large quantities are sure preventatives.

In this country only is the turkey found in a wild state. It is very fitting, therefore, that in the Thanksgiving dinner it should be the principal dish, writes Maria Parloa in her department in the Ladies' Home Journal.

OUT OF DOORS IN WINTER.

It is worthy of note that as a people we are again taking hold of the pleasures of out-of-door winter sports. The healthfulness of skating, sleighing, snow-shoeing and the like is as patent as the benefits to be derived from tennis or riding in the summer.

SLEEP IN SICKNESS.

Concerning sleep, in connection with sickness, there is a good deal of heresy regarding the matter, among otherwise well-informed people. "Don't let her sleep too long!" "Be sure to wake him when it is time to give the medicine; it will be a great deal better for him not to sleep too long at one time."

THE BEST

protection against sudden changes in the weather is to purify the blood with

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It vitalizes and enriches the life-current, and makes the weak strong.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts.

often, even how almost invariably, does the "change for the better" for which anxious friends are waiting so prayerfully, come during sleep—making its first manifestation when the patient awakes with brightened eye, stronger voice, a faint tinge of returning health mantling the features, in place of the wan hue of threatened death!

Coughs and Colds.

Those who are suffering from Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, etc., should try BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES, a simple and effective remedy. They contain nothing injurious, and may be used at all times with perfect safety.

BEATTY PIANOS only $175.00, worth $750.00. $75.00 ORGANS for $45. $150.00 ORGANS at $35. Other Bargains, Beautiful Birthdays, Wedding or Holiday PRESENTS. Latest Illustrated CATALOGUE FREE. Address Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, New Jersey

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo, 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations, $2.00. "A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa."

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth, $1.50.

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. "We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort."—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America. 1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled...2.00 2. Beveled boards, full gilt...2.50 3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges...2.50 4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges...4.00 5. Persian calf, padded and embossed, gilt roll and r. g...5.00 6. Crushed levant, elegant...6.00 7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors...7.50

Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall. Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use. 20

My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children. 20

The Open Secret.

By Hannah Whitall Smith. A series of practical Bible readings by a most popular author. 320 pages, cloth, $1.00. "All who have read the exceedingly popular work, 'The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life,' will not be disappointed in expecting to find in this new volume a fullness and sweetness in the unfolding of God's Word, in its application to the practical and daily duties of Christian living, such as few writers are capable of presenting."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON, AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20 Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20 The Royal Invitation. 20 Loyal Responses. 20 Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box. Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John Mc Neil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price, 1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design...1.25 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors...2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant...2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols. 4.00 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth...1.00 Twelve Striking Sermons. 50 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons. 50 Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 50 Twelve New Year Sermons. 50 Twelve Christmas Sermons. 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set...9.00 An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Bear's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods. Silver Keys. Seven Perils of Faith. Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set...2.10 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set...4.20 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set...4.80 Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

SHEEP AND BEES.

For a fruit-grower to antagonize bee-culture argues the most stolid ignorance and stupidity: but there are numerous cases on record where much opposition has come from that source. We have had one instance in this State, even, of a sheep-raiser who went to law with his bee-keeping neighbor, alleging that his bees injured the clover in the pasture in which the sheep grazed.

It is perfectly well known to bee-keepers that bees not only do not injure the plants or fruit which they visit in gathering honey, but the bees are almost indispensable to the fertility of the flowers. Many bee-keepers are engaged in fruit culture also, and regard the presence of bees as a great benefit to the product of fruit, rather than a damage to it. One of our most enlightened and progressive bee-keepers is a sheep-raiser, and has no fear that the little busy bee, while improving each shining hour (as Dr. Watts says), visiting the clover blossoms of the sheep pasture, will withdraw aught of their nutritive property.—Dr. J. W. Vance in Wisconsin Farmer.

THE FUTURE FOR SMALL FRUIT.

What is the outlook for profit from strawberries? is the question often asked. During the five or six years previous to 1890 very little money was made in the business. Although the crop averaged small, the acreage was so large that the markets were well supplied at only moderate prices. The causes which led to this state of things were that from 1880 to 1886 every agricultural and horticultural journal in the country had constantly urged farmers to raise small fruits. Besides this hundreds of nurserymen, in their anxiety to sell plants, had enormously overestimated the profits. This, together with the depressed state of farming in other departments, led to an over-production, and consequently lower prices. A great reaction then came and large numbers of growers became discouraged and left the field. The acreage was so reduced that those of us who struck made large profits in 1890.—Allegany Gazette.

TIMELY HINTS.

Don't starve the cats. Kill the surplus. A warm stable and a good blanket will save grain and give horses more "get up."

If horse-owners would discontinue the use of blind bridles there would be fewer skittish horses.

W. A. Randolph sold a four-year-old gelding last year for $300. The horse went to Chambersburg, Pa., and was there trained. He showed a mile in 2:20½ on July 30, and was sold for $5,000 to B. C. Bingham, of Hartford, Conn.

A writer in National Stockman gives this as a good, cheap feed for horses in winter time: One hundred pounds oil meal, 100 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds bran, and says a mixture of this kind will furnish feed for two horses about three weeks, and they will thrive on it.

Popular Gardening, Buffalo, N. Y., and the American Garden, New York City, have been consolidated and will hereafter be published at New York, under the editorial management of Mr. Long. The combined magazine will contain the strength and merit of both at the price of the cheaper.

Horses kept in warm stables with a good bed and blanketed do not look rough, nor do they eat as much grain as those kept in cold, cheerless stables. Have your stables in shape for winter? It is not necessary to have them dark to have them warm; in fact, light is good. If need be, put a double sash to the windows.

A writer, in speaking of the successful breeding of mules, says: "I should never purchase a jack less than fourteen and one-half or fifteen hands high, standard measure, well proportioned, and with plenty of life. The best color is black, with mealy nose and belly. A gray or dark blue are not objectionable colors, but I would avoid all others."

Once in a while you will find a man who does not groom his horse in the winter time, claiming that the horse is "Rather lean on inward worth than outward show." If you trust to Pearline you can do both. It will show its worth in washing clothes and cleaning house, with half of the labor and none of the usual troubles. You will only be "tried" if you try to do without it. Nothing can suffer if you use it; everything will suffer if you don't.

Beware

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." ITS FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 223 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homeopathic Chemists, London, England.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

warmer without it. We are not a horse, so cannot say, but our personal experience is that a "cleaning up" doeth good, like medicine, in winter as well as summer. To off-set the claim of the non-groomer is the claim that a good groomer is half a feed of oats.

Careful estimates of Indiana's wheat yield for this year place it at 63,441,049 bushels. Some conservative judges think that this is too low an estimate by several millions of bushels. This is the heaviest wheat yield since 1879, when the State produced over 51,000,000 bushels. Gibson county heads the list this year with 2,000,000 bushels. Of the northern half of the State the following counties produced from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 bushels: Allen, Cass, Clinton, Grant, LaPorte, LaGrange, Howard, Kosciusko, Miami, Tippecanoe, and Tipton, while Madison reached 1,800,000 bushels.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

Both air and water abound in microbes, or germs of disease, ready to infect the debilitated system. To impart that strength and vigor necessary to resist the effect of these pernicious atoms, no tonic blood-purifier equals Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Bad Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshipped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disaffiliate from secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The United States Official Report Of the Government Baking Powder tests recently made, under authority of Congress, by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., furnishes the highest authoritative information as to which powder is the best. The Official Report shows the ROYAL superior to all others in leavening power; a cream of tartar powder of highest quality.

The Canadian Tests:

"The strength of the Royal is shown to be 23 per cent. greater than any other.

"As a result of my investigations I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength.

"F. X. VALADE,
"Public Analyst, Ontario,
"Dominion of Canada."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Snow is reported to have fallen Sunday and Monday in parts of South Dakota and Minnesota.

It is estimated that there are 5,241,500 bushels of wheat in the elevators of Minneapolis and the two Dakotas.

Asa P. Potter, president; Colonel Jonas H. French and Thomas Dana, directors of the Maverick National Bank, were arrested Monday night, the former at his summer residence in Cohasset, and the two latter at their residences in Boston, charged with embezzlement. It is charged that the three made away with $2,000,000.

The Maverick National Bank, of Boston, was closed Monday morning. Its liabilities are $8,000,000 and the cash on hand $1,400,000. Other National banks voted an assessment of 3 per cent, amounting to $4,000,000, to relieve the necessities of depositors.

A statement prepared at the Treasury Department shows that the increase in circulating medium for October was $33,810,125; increase in bullion and money in the Treasury, $9,182,403.

The gist of the comment of the press is that the result of the election is favorable to the Republicans, and promises victory for the party in 1892.

Revolutionary tactics in Brazil have so alarmed the authorities in Washington that one or more United States gunboats will be sent to Rio de Janeiro.

It is stated that the Iowa Legislature will be Republican on joint ballot. Boies is re-elected Governor.

In Kansas the Alliance party elected about sixty officers out of a total of 424. The Republicans elected the remainder.

At Milwaukee, Wis., about seven hundred laborers working for the Villard syndicate on electric railway lines struck against a reduction of 25 cents in their wages Wednesday and work on the railway improvements is at a standstill.

FOREIGN.

It said that the Pope prepared his religious will in October and that his temporal will is now in preparation.

Two volumes of poems written by John Ruskin between the ages of 7 and 26 have been published at London.

Emperor William has appointed Professor Hermann Helmholtz, the distinguished physiologist and natural philosopher, to the position of Privy Councillor.

Five thousand bootmakers were locked out in London Monday. Twenty thousand will ultimately be treated in like manner. The cause was a strike by the employes of two firms.

There is said to be an increased demand in English markets for American flour and spring wheat.

The export of potatoes and all cereals, except wheat, has been forbidden by the government of Russia.

Sandringham Hall, the residence of the Prince of Wales, was badly damaged by fire Monday.

A commission has been established in Brazil for the summary trial of persons suspected of being enemies of the republic. All such upon conviction are to be immediately banished.

Advices from Rio Grande Do Sul declare that the army and navy compelled President Da Fonseca to assume the dictatorship of Brazil, and that there is considerable agitation in the Province of Rio Grande Do Sul, where the late events at Rio Janeiro are considered to be but a prelude to the restoration of the empire.

The condition of the St. Petersburg money market is causing apprehension. Ruble exchange and government stock continue to fall steadily and everything indicates that a crisis is impending.

Cadiz, in Spain, has been inundated. Large numbers of cattle in the surrounding country have been drowned.

At Cork there was another serious election fight at midnight Wednesday between the Parnellites and McCarthyites. Many people were injured, Mr. William O'Brien, Thomas Condon, and John Gilhooley, members of Parliament, among the number.

It is reported that the Russian Ministry of Finance has made overtures to the Bank of France for the purchase of silver bullion to the value of $100,000,000 rubles. This amount of silver is wanted by the Russian finance ministry for coinage into rubles for the state redemption of Polish treasury obligations.

Inquiry into the suspension of the banking firm of Hirschfeld & Wolff at Berlin led to the arrest Thursday of Herr Wolff. The Empress of Germany, Prince Henry of Prussia, and many aristocratic families lose heavily by the failure.

Cholera is increasing alarmingly at Damascus.

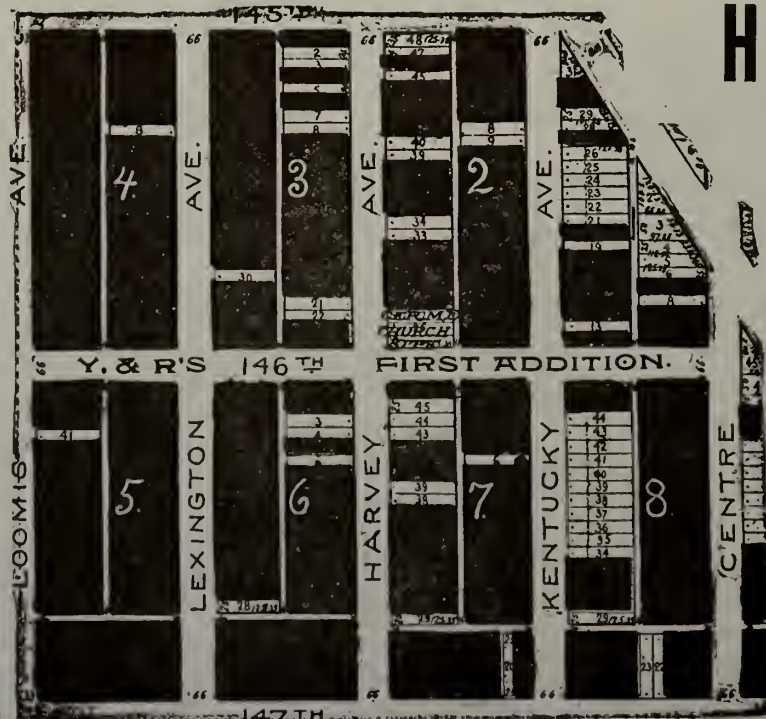

Our contract for the sale of lots in the following Eight Blocks

EXPIRES ON NOVEMBER 30

We have had a contract on this property which cannot be duplicated, and our friends who wish to take advantage of the present low prices must make their selection and get a deposit made on same on or before Nov. 30th.

THE TIME IS SHORT: ACT AT ONCE.

The property in these Eight Blocks is worth to-day more than double what it was when we made our contract. The location of immense factories close by; the building of the Harvey Academy, laying of sidewalks, main sewer already in and paid for, and other improvements have attracted a large number of people to this tract, which is one of the most desirable places about this wonderful TEMPERANCE MANUFACTURING TOWN of

HARVEY,

and which is being built on rapidly. ONLY THE FOLLOWING LOTS in these BLOCKS ARE UNSOLD—CHOOSE FROM THESE.

Block 1		Block 4
Lot	Price	8.....	$350
2.....	$475	Block 5
3.....	500	41.....	350
4.....	410	Block 6
5, 6 and 8.....	425	3 and 4.....	375
13, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25		28.....	350
and 26.....	each 300	Block 7
28, 29 and 31.....	400	6.....	350
Block 2		37, 38, 39, 43 and 44, each	300
6, 7, 8, 9 and 19.....	each 300	45.....	350
33 and 34.....	275	Block 8
47.....	350	22 and 23.....	each 475
48.....	400	29, 31, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38,
Block 3		39, 40, 41, 42, 43 and 44	325
2.....	325
5, 7, 12, 21 and 22, each	300
30.....	350

If possible come at once and see us, but if you cannot come at once, send a deposit of $10, and we will select the best lot remaining unsold at the time your letter arrives and for the price you wish to pay. Every lot in this list is a bargain. Plats mailed free to any address.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co

161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

This plan shows the unsold lots in blocks 1 to 8 on Nov. 1st. Less than 30 days more to purchase on present contract.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 10.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1,125.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	Reform Work in the South; Pres. Blanchard at Roseland; Bro. Fenton in Canada..... 4,5
Anarchism Squirring... 8
The Work in New Hampshire..... 9	CORRESPONDENCE:
Republicans vs. Masons. 8	An Open Letter..... 5
The Knights of Labor on Education..... 8	LODGE NOTES..... 7
Personal Mention..... 9	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	THE N. C. A..... 7
A Mason's Experience—II..... 1	New England Anti-Secrecy Convention..... 9
Stop, Look, Listen!..... 3	THE HOME..... 10
SELECTED:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
No Sects in Heaven.... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
The Mormon Question... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Who Can Express His Faith Better?..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.... 4	MARKETS..... 13
WASHINGTON LETTER.... 4	DONATIONS..... 13
LITERATURE..... 6	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION,

IN THE

United Presbyterian Church, corner Berkeley and Chandler Streets, Boston, Mass.,

DECEMBER 9TH AND 10TH, 1891.

[SEE OFFICIAL CALL, ON PAGE 9.]

OHIO STATE CONVENTION.

The OHIO STATE CONVENTION will be held in the College Chapel of Muskingum College, NEW CONCORD, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, beginning on TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 8TH, and closing on the 9TH.

Agents Hawley and Hinman and probably Rev. W. Fenton, will spend the time preceding the convention in different sections of the State and working towards New Concord. A program and list of speakers will appear in a following number.

Bro. S. F. Porter, the College Agent, is at present visiting colleges and universities in Indiana, and placing anti-secrecy publications in their libraries.

Bro. Stoddard writes from Boston, November 14: "We are all head and heels in the W. C. T. U. meeting, just now, and Boston is finding out that the 'rim' is bigger than the 'hub,' for she has no room large enough to accommodate even half of the crowd that have gathered from 'the isles of the sea and the uttermost parts of the earth.'" All such conventions should come to Chicago, where there is room enough and to spare.

The issue of the Christian Cynosure for November 26 will present some special features, in commemoration of the national Thanksgiving day. Among others, it is proposed to present our readers with a portrait of Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., pastor of one of the most prominent Boston Baptist churches, one of the editors of the Missionary Review, and a thorough-going advocate of all worthy Christian reforms. Accompanying the portrait will be an article from his pen. These, and other matter appropriate to the occasion, will tend to make the next issue attractive and desirable.

The American Tyler, a Masonic paper published in Detroit, says that its delinquent patrons owe $5,000 for their subscriptions. This doesn't speak well for Masonic integrity, when the secret obligations of the order bind a member never to defraud another member, even to the amount of one cent. But then Masonry, although Masonically "divine," is not always infallible, especially when money is at stake. Other people, not Masons, experience a similar difficulty at times.

President Harrison has issued a proclamation of general interest, appointing Thursday the 26th inst. a day of general Thanksgiving; "among the appropriate observances of which are rest from toil, worship in public congregations, the renewal of family ties about our American firesides, and thoughtful helpfulness toward those who suffer lack of the body or of the spirit." The universal observation of such a day in a proper manner is a national duty and an individual privilege. Let us be thankful.

The spirit of the meeting of the Illinois Christian Association, last week, was excellent. There was more than an ordinary willingness on the part of members of the fraternity to listen to the arguments of those who opposed them, and to reply. The special point urged against Odd-fellowship, that it is a religion, and yet not a Christian institution, was fully conceded. To those who have no decided interest in Christianity, this may seem an unimportant matter; but to the Christian it should be an insuperable objection.

Goldwin Smith, last week, in a lecture at Toronto, announced his intention to immediately retire from the political arena as a lecturer, and to devote the remainder of his life exclusively to literary pursuits. The occasion was distinguished by some remarkable expressions from the speaker, among which the following are reported by the press: Characterizing as folly the methods used to infuse a martial spirit into Canadian youths, it insisted, he said, of lessons inculcating little less than animosity to the United States. Touching on the trade question, he spoke strongly in favor of unrestricted reciprocity between the two countries, and went further than this—declaring it to be his conviction that the future of Canada was not only commercially but politically bound up with that of the United States. The union of Ontario with Quebec was unsatisfactory and could not endure. The best solution to the problem of freeing Ontario, he continued, was union with the United States. As an Englishman himself, he would dislike to see the last link between England and Canada severed, but having the futures of the Canadas in mind, he had no hesitation in pronouncing for political union with the United States. The ultimate result of such a union to the United States, Mr. Smith does not appear to have discussed. The problem is a weighty one.

If we properly understand the language of the New York Catholic Review, the past and present decrees of the papal authority declare condemnation of the order of Freemasonry and excommunication from the church of all Catholics who unite with it. "The only plausible pretext for asserting that a Catholic may become an Odd-fellow or Knight of Pythias is found," it adds, "in the fact that these societies are not considered as condemned by the present decrees of the Holy See, under the pain of excommunication to be incurred ipso facto. But they are looked upon with suspicion. They are offshoots of Freemasonry, and though without its evil traditions, are inspired by its spirit. They have certainly adopted its methods; secrecy, ritual, oath-taking, fellowship to defeat justice if necessary, are the well-known features of all. They certainly will never have the favor of the hierarchy, and at any moment may be struck with its condemnation. Catholics should avoid them—and so should Protestants. The ban of the church on Freemasonry is absolute, because it opposes auricular confession, while over the other secret societies it is merely suspensive—ready to be revealed when they interfere with the mandates of the church. We never hear of the church condemning the Society of Jesus, or the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and very seldom of its censuring the Clan-na-Gael; their members are in harmony with the interests and practices of the church; and, whatever Protestants may think of these societies and their iniquities, the church will defend them.

Elsewhere we print the official call of the president and secretary of the New England Christian Association for the annual convention to be held at Boston on the 9th and 10th of December, 1891, in the Berkeley Street United Presbyterian church.

Important business, it will be seen, is to be discussed and an effort made to place the Association on a legal and otherwise more substantial basis for the furtherance of the work in New England.

In reference to this work and the convention, Bro. J. P. Stoddard writes as follows:

"In announcing the annual meeting of the New England Association for December 9th and 10th, it gives me great pleasure to report a steady progress during the year. God has smiled upon our endeavors, and given us an earnest of richer blessings, in the friends whom he has raised up, and in some who have been saved from the snare of the 'foe in hiding.' At the same time the opposition has given abundant evidence of vigilance and activity."

For these reasons let the work be everywhere encouraged and aided by the friends of reform.

A MASON'S EXPERIENCE—II.

BY JOSEPH HOPSON, OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

NOTE.—The "declaration" referred to in the following opening paragraph was the one always required by the lodge from the applicant before accepting him, and which read as follows: "I, (name), do declare that being free by birth, and unbiased by the improper solicitation of friends, I do freely and voluntarily offer myself a candidate for the mysteries of Masonry; that I am uninfluenced by mercenary or other unworthy motives, and that I will cheerfully conform to all the ancient usages and customs of the order." To this, before signing it, Hopson added this clause: "Understanding that the due observance of the same does not interfere to the rejecting any part of, or the imposing anything contrary to the established religious tenets of individuals." In his case it was a "saving clause."

My fears and gloom now vanished, and to strengthen my mind and to add to my joy, the condition that I had added to my written declaration, and which all this time had never entered my thoughts, now presented itself to my mind, and I decided on standing on it; and, further, it occurred to me that I got initiated on the understanding, produced in me by repeated assurances, that Masonry was a good thing, and I felt that my initiation was no further valid than were those assurances correct. I now felt myself possessed of courage enough to attempt anything, and was ready to meet death in any shape. I was at first dubious of the validity of my written condition in my present case, as I did not stand on it when sworn previous to my initiation, although I was sensible at the time that they were not dealing fairly with me; yet from the consideration that any objection to the oath at that time would prevent my initiation, and so debar me from gaining any knowledge of those mysteries; and encouraged, also, by the example of others, I allowed it to pass, as if such a thing had not been in existence. But now I saw I could stand on it. I had given it in writing. Freeborn, my proposer, repeatedly assured me that it would not prevent my initiation, which was equivalent to his assurance that I was accepted on it. It was still in existence. I was never asked to cancel or recall it, nor did I, although there was much discussion in the lodge about it, and much murmuring on the part of my proposer for departing from established rules. In fact, it had driven the fraternity to the wall; if they had rejected me on it, I would be at liberty to say that their institution was a bad one; and if they had received me on it I would be in possession of their secrets without being bound to conceal them or to conform to any of their rules. So they took a middle course; they laid aside my condition as a thing that had no existence, and initiated me as if I had subscribed to their declaration without adding any condition to it. They, however, took the precaution to make me swear to the same declaration, omitting my condition as no part of their forms. This was certainly a breach of faith on their part, and they could not reasonably expect that I would keep good faith with them to my injury after discovering their perfidy. But they trusted in the initiation taking effect, and that the terrors of their penalties would hold me in subjection to their rule. This would most likely have been the case had I lived in habitual indifference to the salvation of my soul, to the inestimable advantage of keeping God's commandments, and had been forsaken by his Holy Spirit.

But no oath treacherously imposed can bind a man to adhere to a compact which, unknown to him, makes him a party to his own destruction, or to his eternal perdition. For keeping faith with devils bent on our destruction there is no law. Our Lord did not keep faith with the devils that sought to drown him and his disciples in the lake when, at their request, he permitted them to go into the herd of swine with the understanding on their part that they were to retain quiet possession of them. He granted their request to their confusion and torment; for the whole herd, with the devils in them, ran violently down a steep place into the sea and perished in it; and in it, doubtless, the devils were laid, for it would have been to no purpose to send them into the sea if they could immediately escape from it. They had a presentiment that they would be sent into the deep, and their presentiment was realized in the way they thought to guard against it. My transaction was with the prince of devils through his human agents, and I had a right to neutralize his fraudulent efforts.

No one is more sensible than Masons of the moral invalidity and nullity of the oaths which they impose; hence the penalty attached to each to guard against the breach of it; which penalty is the more horrible as it is always carried into effect in secret, and without any warning of what is forthcoming. He is summoned to the lodge in the usual way; he enters, but never again with mortal eyes does he behold the light. He is missed, but his absence is easily accounted for; he has fled to some foreign country; and Satan is so powerful as to render men indifferent to his fate.

They ascribe their silence as regards their secrets to the extraordinary sacredness of the Masonic oaths. But that is not the cause of their silence. No man living has less regard for an oath than a Freemason. A real Freemason must be perfectly unscrupulous as regards the commission of far greater sins than perjury—even of murder and of the unpardonable sin. The commission of the unpardonable sin is with the Freemason an indispensable duty. He can not feel himself to be as utterly separate, and cut off from God, which is his aim, unless he live in the habitual commission of it; witness their Jubela, Jubelo, and Jubelum, names by which they designate the persons of the Godhead, and which are three mere blasts on a trumpet of ram's horn, such as the Jews used in their Jubilee.

The Masonic oath, instead of being the most sacred and binding of all oaths, is in fact a perfect nullity as to any obligation it leaves a man under. It is usually administered in a farcical and sportive way, and when the person taking it is under the influence of liquor. And Freemasons have not the power of compelling the Almighty to ratify oaths so administered, and which in their performance require men to act against himself; to blaspheme his name; to labor to destroy his works; and, as far as in them lies, to overpower himself and set up Satan in his stead. Hence the necessity they are under of attaching the penalty of death to the breach of their oaths. If the oath of secrecy is really binding on the conscience, why attach the penalty of death to the breach of it, as if it was of no moral efficiency? Why, by threats of death, endeavor to compel a man to do the greatest possible injury to himself and others; an injury not confined to time, but extending to the endless ages of eternity; to go on to certain evident perdition, as if the death of the body was of more consequence than the eternal ruin of the soul? The oath is but a cloak to the Satanic and magnetic influence under which a man places himself by his initiation. That influence would be all the same in most cases if the candidate took no oath at all. An oath is not necessary to a person's most perfect magnetization. A skillful magnetizer can lay a person under a permanent disability of body or mind. He can cast a person into a deadly sleep; he can magnetize a person to death, or bring on him any disease he pleases which may result in death. The utmost that is required of the subject is his assent to be magnetized, and in susceptible cases even that is not necessary. A person who by sinning has placed himself under the power of Satan is equally under the power of the sorcerer and magnetizer, and every real Freemason is both. We have need then to put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not with flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of the world, against wicked spirits in heavenly places, (marg.) Eph. 6:11, 12. They ascribe to the oath what is really due to the magnetic influence. It is that influence, and that alone, that shuts the Freemason's mouth during his probation. After, his sympathy with Satan and his zeal in the evil cause, and the accomplishment of the "GRAND DESIGN," supply him with an additional motive for keeping their works secret, as publicity would certainly prove the abolition of their infernal institution.

Having decided on breaking with Masonry, I put out my lamp and lay down to sleep; but had only dozed off into a slumber when I awoke in a state of indescribable horror and alarm; and as I awoke an involuntary scream issued from my throat. I understood it to be the voice of the evil spirit that had entered into me as I swallowed the spruce beer in the liquor room, and I said to it: "Ah, devil, you found my breast too hot for you." I lay cold, and trembling with fear. I tried to sleep, but was roused by a strong impression of murderers being at hand. I got up and examined the bolt of the door to see if it was fast. I groped about every corner of my room and searched under my cot with a rattan. Being assured that there was no one in the room but myself, I lay down again, but horror and alarm had possession of every faculty. At times I thought of returning to Masonry and being at peace, but instead of peace I saw in that step a horror which I could not contemplate. It would be peace with the devil, purchased by the everlasting loss of my soul, by breaking friendship with God, my loving heavenly Father, and provoking him to exert his wrath upon me.

What I experienced during that night, the third after my initiation, was altogether unaccountable, except it be referable to the mighty efforts of Satan to secure my subjection to him, and so avert the injury to his earthly establishment which my hostility to him might occasion. If Masonic tradition be true, not a few have sunk under such influences. None, say they, can divulge our secrets and live. Certainly no reality in the prospect of death could create such horror, and, above all, such a tyrannously oppressive influence as I experienced that night; an influence that would compel me to act contrary to my clearest convictions.

Towards morning the strife began to cease, my horror and alarm to subside, and these were succeeded by an angry determination to resist, and to fight against all the powers of Masonry, regardless of consequences. This determination was confirmed by the strong conviction I was under of the really diabolical nature of Masonry; the audacious imposture it exhibited in its arrogant assumption of a right to ensnare, subject and exercise over fellow-men a power of life and death; in its absolute and tyrannical mode of governing by terror; in its bold denial of a right in others to call them to account for their lawless proceedings, or to inquire into the nature of their institution, under the plea that their proceedings did not concern them, while they at the same moment are plotting against the liberty of many, and the salvation of all mankind. But even had I not thus in my power to abandon the institution, I consider Freemasonry to be like a horse of a false character, which the confiding purchaser has not only a right to return to the dishonest seller of him, but also to prosecute him, and have him exposed and punished, for his perfidious conduct. Many would, no doubt, do as I have done but for the overpowering evil influence under which a man places himself by getting initiated.

Shortly after daylight I was surprised by a visit from Freeborn, my proposer; he never before had visited me at so early an hour. I was busy with my morning report, which I had to take to my troop commanding officer at 9 o'clock. After bidding me a good morning, he began the conversation with: Well, how do you feel by this time? Angry and vexed, I answered, I never passed such a horrible night in all my life. How was that? said he. I told him what I experienced. Did not I tell you, said he, that you would not like it at first? but it will all wear off in a few days. But, said I, what benefit am I to derive from it to compensate me for all the trouble and torment I have undergone? I am now a Mason; you promised that when I was initiated you would tell me everything. Now, what have you to tell me? All this while I was not aware that he was set over me to watch if my initiation had produced the usual effect of stopping my mouth, and rendering it impossible for me to speak against Masonry. And he saw from my tone that it had not full effect on me. His answers were consequently guarded and evasive. Why, as to telling you, said he, in answer to my question, you know that I have not gone much higher than yourself, and can tell you little more than I have told you already. But there is benefit to be derived from it; a Mason will never hurt another; they will always assist each other; and there are other benefits that I am not able to tell you about, but you will know them when you have gone through your degrees. What, said I, is the use of the horrible oaths that I have taken? I see nothing in the whole of it that is of sufficient importance to require an oath? Why, said he, in reply, you know that without oaths no society can be kept together. And is that all the use of them? That is all, said he. I was angry before, from the experience of the night, and this reply gave intensity to my anger, and confirmed me in my determination to oppose Freemasonry. After a pause he said: But is it not a wonder that such a simple thing has never been divulged or found out? This was said to sound me as to my opinion or my feelings towards the institution; but I was not aware of it at the time or I would have been more guarded in my answers. It is, said I, a wonder; but has it indeed never been divulged? No, never, said he. Would not a person think, said he again, that some half-drunken fellow would let it out, that is, the secret word Boaz, or that some one would even utter it in his sleep? A person would think so, said I; but what I most wonder at is, that some of those high-spirited young gentlemen that think so little of risking their lives in a duel would not have taken offence at it and exposed it, setting its bonds and penalties at defiance. Is it not a wonder? said he. It is, said I; and, continued I, now mark what I say: I will go to the bottom of it, and if I do not find in it a recompense for the sacrifices I shall have made I will expose the whole of it, let the consequences be what they may! This, or some such reply, apparently, was what he was sounding me for; and now, when he got it he was perfectly astounded; he leaned back in his chair pale, trembling, speechless, and almost breathless. He sighed as if from exhaustion, but was unable to utter a word. It was evident to him that my initiation had proved a complete failure. Had it been effectual my mouth would not only have been stopped as to anything I could say against Masonry, but it would have produced a degree of sympathy in me for Freemasons in general and would have given me a liking for them. After waiting to recover himself, he got up, evidently distressed, and, without making any remark on my resolution, he bid me a good morning, and walked out of the room.

To be Continued.

STOP, LOOK, LISTEN!

BY REV. JOEL SWARTZ, D. D.

I have just laid down my paper, in which I read of a terrible accident at a railroad crossing, where two fine horses were destroyed, a carriage was knocked to pieces, several of its occupants were killed, and others perhaps fatally injured.

It all happened because the driver did not regard the warning placed conspicuously at the crossing: "Stop, Look, Listen!"

Such things occur so frequently that it seems strange that if men will not regard the signal they will not be warned by the sad fate of those who suffer for their heedlessness or daring. And yet the persistent hazarding of life in the presence of the locomotive, in spite of both warning and example, is paralleled in a thousand of other ways and in more dangerous places. For every one killed at a railroad crossing, a hundred are slain in crossing the threshold of her whose "steps lead down to death, and whose feet take hold on hell." And for the hundreds slain here, thousands are slain in crossing the threshold of the saloon. These ways of death are not signalled. Experience, revelation, conscience—all have recorded their protests and warnings, and he who goes in disregard of them goes to his destruction with his eyes open, and like the unthinking ox to the slaughter.

It is certainly an act of humanity to put up the warning at the crossing of the railroad and make it as conspicuous as possible. Then, if men will not heed, the public is clear and the blood of the victim is on his own head. But what ought to be thought of a public that would allow a selfish man to spread decoys at such a place of danger, to employ all the arts of seduction to draw men upon the track, and to gather up the spoils of disaster, and thus make a living by the slaughter of his fellow-men? It seems insulting to human nature to suppose that such a business could be tolerated, and perfectly incredible that it should be licensed by law, no matter at what price.

Yet, when we know that statesmen plead for a more horrid privilege, when they ask that the saloon be licensed, it passes all understanding that Christian voters will stand by and support the awful enormity. The law of God, which says, "Thou shalt not kill," and commands love to the neighbor; the voice of reason, and the dictates of humanity, all cry out against the diabolical selfishness and barbarism of the saloon and combine to put up signals of warning to "Stop, Look, Listen;" yet good men vote to license this instrument of murder and make haste to pocket a share of the plunder.

The locomotive but crushes the body. It does not murder reputation; it does not damn the soul. But the saloon does all this. The public warns against the peril from the former. It countenances, encourages and defends the devilish work of the latter. Meanwhile, men of God are displaying danger signals and calling upon the exposed and heedless to "Stop, Look, Listen!" Stop before entering this slaughter-house of souls; look around upon the ruin wrought, the lives destroyed, the families scattered and impoverished; listen to the wail of widows and orphans, the curses and blasphemy, the quarrels and contentions of the besotted, and, if it may be, the shriek of lost souls coming up from the drunkard's hell. Nor must this work cease. Suppose it be ridiculed, opposed and hindered; and the faithful men and women who are holding high the danger signals in front of every saloon are insulted and persecuted as cranks and fanatics; yet, with the conviction on their consciences that they are their brothers' keepers, they must not be silent, else God will require the blood of the slain at their hands. They must still cry: "Stop, Look, Listen!"

Gettysburg, Pa.

NO SECTS IN HEAVEN.

BY MRS. ELIZABETH H. JOCELYN CLEVELAND.

Talking of sects quite late one eve,
What one and another of saints believe,
That night I stood in a troubled dream
By the side of a darkly flowing stream.
And a "churchman" down to the river came,
When I heard a strange voice call his name,
"Good father, stop; when you cross this tide
You must leave your robes on the other side."

But the aged father did not mind,
And his long gown floated out behind
As down to the stream his way he took,
His hands hold firm of a gilt-edged book.
"I'm bound for heaven and when I'm there
I shall want my book of Common Prayer,
And though I put on a starry crown,
I shall feel quite lost without my gown."

Then he fixed his eyes on the shining track,
But his gown was heavy and held him back,
And the poor old father tried in vain,
A single step in the flood to gain.
I saw him again on the other side,
But his silk gown floated on the tide,
And no one asked, in that blissful spot,
If he belonged "to the church" or not.

Then down to the river a Quaker strayed,
His dress of sober hue was made,
"My hat and coat must be all of grey,
I cannot go any other way."
Then he buttoned his coat straight up to his chin,
And staidly, solemnly waded in,
And his broad-brimmed hat he pulled down tight,
Over his forehead, so cold and white.

But a strong wind carried away his hat,
And he sighed a few moments after that,
And then as he gazed to the farther shore
The coat slipped off and was seen no more.
Poor, dying Quaker, thy suit of grey,
Is quietly sailing, away—away,
But thou'lt go to heaven as straight as an arrow,
Whether thy brim be broad or narrow.

Next came Dr. Watts with a bundle of psalms
Tied nicely up in his aged arms,
And hymns as many—a very wise thing,
That the people in heaven, "all round," may sing.
But I thought he heaved an anxious sigh,
As he saw that the river ran broad and high,
And looked rather surprised, as one by one,
The Psalms and Hymns in the wave went down.

And after him, with his MSS.,
Came Wesley, the pattern of godliness,
But he cried, "Dear me, what shall I do?
The water has soaked them through and through."
And there, on the river, far and wide,
Away they went on the swollen tide,
And the saint, astonished, passed through alone,
Without his manuscripts, up to the throne.

Then gravely walking, two saints by name,
Down to the stream together came,
But as they stopped at the river's brink,
I saw one saint from the other shrink.
"Sprinkled or plunged, may I ask you, friend,
How you attained to life's great end?"
"Thus, with a few drops on your brow;"
"But I have been dipped, as you'll see me now."

"And I really think it will hardly do,
As I'm 'close communion,' to cross with you,
You're bound, I know, to the realms of bliss,
But you must go that way, and I'll go this."
And straightway plunging with all his might,
Away to the left—his friend at the right,
Apart they went from this world of sin,
But how did the brethren "enter in?"

And now where the river was rolling on,
A Presbyterian church went down;
Of women there seemed an innumerable throng,
But the men I could count as they passed along.
And concerning the road they could never agree,
The old or the new way, which it could be;
Nor ever a moment paused to think
That both would lead to the river's brink.

And a sound of murmuring long and loud,
Came ever up from the moving crowd,
"You're in the old way, and I'm in the new;
That is the false and this is the true,"
Or, "I'm in the old way, and you're in the new;
That is the false, and this is the true."

But the brethren only seemed to speak;
Modest the sisters walked, and meek,
And if ever one of them chanced to say
What troubles she met with on the way,
How she longed to pass to the other side,
Nor feared to cross over the swelling tide.
A voice arose from the brethren then,
"Let no one speak but the 'holy men,'"

For have ye not heard the words of Paul?
'Oh, let the women keep silence all!'

I watched them long in my curious dream,
Till they stood by the border of the stream,
Then, just as I thought, the two ways met,
But all the brethren were talking yet,
And would talk on, till the heaving tide
Carried them over, side by side;
Side by side, for the way was one,
The toilsome journey of life was done,
And priest and Quaker, and all* who died,
Came out alike on the other side;
No forms or crosses, or books had they,
No gowns of silk, or suits of grey,
No creeds to guide them, or MSS.,
For all had put on "Christ's Righteousness."

THE MORMON QUESTION.

The recent Mormon conference adopted resolutions denying most emphatically the assertion of the Utah Commission that the church dominates its members in political matters, and that church and state are united. A declaration was adopted repeating the declaration by President Woodruff at the last general conference, that there had been no plural marriages during the period named, that polygamy had not been taught, and that its practice had been strictly forbidden. The commission's report of recent polygamous marriages is declared to be utterly without foundation in truth. On this point the Philadelphia Bulletin says: "This is the declaration given to the world. It would be valuable to know whether it is also given in the same form to the membership, or whether they are secretly instructed to disregard it and adhere to the old doctrine. If the former, it constitutes a radical change in Mormon tenets, and places that church on the same footing as other churches in the United States, a strictly religious body, with which the State has no concern. The Mormon church, as a church, has as much right to an unmolested existence in this country as any other church has. It is only when it upholds and practices polygamy that it comes in conflict with the law, and the law must be enforced. If it has in fact, as well as in word, renounced polygamy, its quarrel with the United States is ended. But the assertions of the Utah Commission are not yet disproved."

WHO CAN EXPRESS HIS FAITH BETTER?

At a dinner given to Victor Hugo, in Paris, some years ago, he delivered an impromptu address, in which he gave expression to his faith in the Infinite and in the soul's immortality.

This is what the distinguished French poet and philosopher said:

"I am rising toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. Winter is on my head and eternal spring is in my heart. There I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets and roses as at twenty years ago. The nearer I approach the end the plainer I hear around me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me.

"It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale and it is historic. For half a century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and verse, history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all, but I feel I have not said a thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say, like many others, I have finished my day's work; but I cannot say I have finished my life. My days will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight to open on the dawn."—L'Univers.

The Keeley cure for intemperance, by bi-chloride of gold mixture hypodermically injected, is the sensation of the day both in the world of temperance and of medicine. Dr. Keeley, its discoverer, is a millionaire. Contrary to the code of medical ethics, he has kept his formula to himself; nor will he treat any patient for a less sum than $25 a week. It remains to be seen whether his cures are permanent. Meanwhile there are people who believe more in the great Physician who cured such wretched inebriates as Gough and Wooley and Sam Small, without money and without price, than they do in Dr. Keeley.—Exchange.

*All seen in the dream.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Matters Political.—The failure of the Maverick Bank.—Prof. Horsford's discoveries.—A peculiar situation.

This is an age which imperatively insists on knowing the reason for everything that happens—especially if it be of an adverse nature; although I never could understand why the cause of things going right was not just as legitimate a subject for inquiry as the cause of their going wrong. The re-election of a Democratic governor for Massachusetts being almost unprecedented, of course the leaders on the other side are busily searching for the why and wherefore; and indeed so many different reasons have been advanced that it would seem as if anybody might be accommodated with one to their mind. No unbiased student of the situation can fail to see, however, that it is another case of "political suicide." The Republicans are following in the steps of the old Whig party, by truckling to the saloon as that did to slavery. It seems to be a heaven-sent madness;—sent on purpose that it may be destroyed and room made for another party with the courage of its convictions. At the same time, it has been given space to repent. They have a large majority in both the House and Senate, who, by simply doing their duty, can put a Democratic victory next year out of the question.

Meanwhile the Prohibitionists are wondering at the large falling off in their own party vote. They had many adverse elements to contend with; neither can it be denied that the management of their leaders was not altogether free from mistakes. There is a story that Boston came near being "no license" another year. All the liquor dealers voted solidly for Russell, even when their political affiliations were with the other party, frightened, it is said, by the threats of the Democrats that should Allen be elected they would make the city "no license" when election day came round. This would have been an interesting state of affairs, and much too good ever to come true; for, unfortunately, the Democrats are much better at making such threats than they are in the actual performance.

The failure of the Maverick Bank, and the arrest of its president and two of the directors for embezzlement of the funds, has pointed another moral lesson for the press and the pulpit. The mystery is why men already rich enough to command every reasonable luxury, want to be richer. Pres. Potter's salary was $25,000; but his whole income is said to have been three times that amount. There is far more excuse for the common pickpocket and burglar than for such men; yet how differently the law treats the two classes of criminals!

The officers of the "Golden Seal Endowment Order" have agreed to pay back sixty per cent of the money taken from their deluded dupes, and wind up its affairs; but all are not going to do even as well as this. By some legal trick, such as transferring their property to their wives, these "supreme" officials will contrive in many cases to elude the claims of certificate holders and keep their ill-gotten money.

Prof. Horsford still continues to give his critics, who refuse to believe that he has succeeded in actually localizing the mysterious Norumbega of tradition, some hard nuts to crack. In the museum of the Essex Institute, at Salem, there is a tablet of fine brass, about four inches long, that was found in a grave on the northern shore of Massachusetts Bay, in company with a human skeleton and a brass shield. It was along this coast, says Prof. Horsford, and near Provincetown, that Thorwald, according to the old Sagas, was wrecked in the year 1004; but being a man of resources, he extemporized a ship-yard on Cape Cod, hauled up his vessel and made a new keel for it; of which operation the Professor considers this tablet to be a pictorial record. The vast area of country which the Northmen are supposed to have occupied was called by the Indians, in the days of our forefathers, "white man's land," though it was then an unbroken wilderness—thus pointing unmistakably to traditions of a former settlement by Europeans, many years before. Altogether, it is a fascinating subject, and I may as well confess, though it mark me out as a Goth and a barbarian, that I am much more interested in Prof. Horsford's industrious delvings after some historic remains of those early settlers of New England, whose stay on these shores was so full of romance and tragedy, than I ever can be in the excavations of old Troy. How it makes even the landing of the Pilgrims seem almost a thing of yesterday when one goes back, back, through the silent centuries to the year of our Lord 1,000! I suppose when that grim old Viking Eric the Red, first sailed into the "land-locked bay, salt at flood-tide and fresh at ebb," the trailing arbutus smiled up in its delicate beauty from the depths of Plymouth woods, and the gentian's "blue and quiet eye," on sunny fall days,

"Looked through its fringes to the sky;"

and Nature was the same in all her sweet, gracious economies of sun and shower, rosy dawns and dreamy, tranquil sunsets. What is it to her—this coming and going of the races of men upon the earth? She gathers them all to her bosom, great eternal Mother; and prince or peasant, red or white, they are all equal at last.

I have hopes, after reading Dr. Fulton's recent address to the Loyal Women, that he will yet be converted to the principle of equal rights for all without distinction of sex. He said on this occasion, that he not only "owed much to women himself," but "he did not believe there was a minister in Boston who was not influenced by some grand woman in his congregation, to whom he looked for inspiration." This is truly encouraging. I repeat, there is hope for Dr. Fulton—hope that he will see the inconsistency of bidding these "grand women" hide their lights under bushels, and, when the safety and purity of the home is threatened, refusing them their only weapon of protection, the ballot.

One of the most peculiar features of woman's status, at present, is the fact that so many are called upon to help on the platform in political campaigns, while denied the right to vote. We are too near to see how funny it looks, but I am sure that our children's children will appreciate the exquisite humor of the situation.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11, 1891.

The convention of Christian Workers, which has been in session here during the week ending with to-day, has unquestionably been a most pronounced success,—a success which will increase the number as well as the enthusiasm of those who elect to work among those who seldom or never attend church. At the convention and in outside meetings, the visiting delegates have told about the demonstrations of practical Christianity in their several localities. Some have told of the great good which has been accomplished in the worst quarters of our large cities by the persistent work of Christian men and women who have stifled their natural repugnance to disagreeable and, in some cases, disgusting surroundings, in order that by precept and example they might show these degraded fellow-beings the great love felt for them by the Master. Some, of the helping hand extended to fallen women by their pure sisters. Miss Fincan, of Toronto, Canada, is an enthusiast on this subject, and she proves its practicability by pointing to the actual reformations it has within her own personal knowledge brought about. Some, of the work among children. Dr. Torrey, president of the convention, asserts that he would rather convert a boy of five than a man of forty-five. Others, of work among criminals and loafers; and one, of the establishment of a mission in Minnesota for intemperate men who are willing to try to conquer the liquor demon.

All of this is very encouraging; but looking over the speeches and talks at this convention, made up of those who devote so much of their time to the dissemination of practical Christianity among the occupants of the world's lower stratum, if such an expression be allowable, I was struck by the fact that nobody told of any success attained in spreading practical Christianity among the occupants of the world's upper stratum. Now, stop a moment, and think about this. Large sums of money and the time of thousands of noble men and women are being freely given to maintain missions and mission-workers among the worst quarters of our large cities. This is worthy of the highest commendation, and should be increased instead of decreased; but what of the unbelieving occupants of the best quarters of our cities?—the men and women who devote their time to selfish occupations or pleasures, ignoring not only Christianity but even God; men and women who are respectable, well-educated and, in many cases, refined, but who never see the inside of a church unless it is to attend a funeral or a marriage. What of them? Are not their souls as valuable as those of the ignorant and vicious frequenters of the slums? This class is recognized by the thoughtful as being among the most insidious foes of Christianity existing in the present age, and it stands in greater need of Christian missionaries than almost any single class in our midst; but if the fact be recognized by the Christian workers it was not made conspicuous at their convention. That this class cannot be reached by ordinary methods is obvious, but it will not do to be stampered by the difficulty of the task. There is a way, and if it be sought for with sufficient diligence it will certainly be found.

This is the Y. M. C. A. week of prayer throughout the world, and at the Y. M. C. A. building in this city daily services, specially for young men, have been held, beginning with Sunday, and continuing during the rest of the week.

The Court of Claims has decided that the claim of the States of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, against the general Government for 2 per cent of the proceeds of public lands sold in those States to aid in the building of the National or Cumberland road, is barred by the statute of limitations.

The U. S. Supreme Court has assigned the second Monday in January for the argument of the lottery case, which involves the constitutionality of that section by the anti-lottery law permitting persons to be tried in the district into which a lottery letter is sent.

Hon. W. H. Holland, ex-Mayor of Toronto, Canada, presided over a meeting held Monday night for the purpose of beginning the work of Christianizing the police force of Washington.

President Harrison held a special reception this afternoon in honor of the delegates who have been in attendance upon the Christian Workers' Convention.

There is reason for rejoicing in the announcement that an agreement has been affected with England providing for the arbitration of the disputed questions concerning Behring Sea, that only needs the ratification of the Senate to go into effect.

REFORM NEWS.

REFORM WORK IN THE SOUTH.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 7, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Recently I made a very pleasant visit to the country, and preached at the following churches: Zion Travelers', Baptist, at Bayou Fardoche, Rev. J. Gibbs, pastor, who was holding a special meeting, at which $216.65 was collected to build a new edifice. Elder Gibbs is wide-awake. I found the Cynosure on the table in several homes. The elder prizes it as an excellent treasure. I also preached in Bright Morning Star and New Home, Baptist churches, at New Texas, La. Rev. Mr. Gibbs has employed a teacher (Miss R. Hall, of New Orleans), and opened a day-school for colored youth in that section of country, for several years past. The lodge has, as yet, no foothold in that vicinity. Rev. Messrs. Gibbs, of Viva, La., and Lewis, Racomci, are as dynamite to secretism in their respective localities.

I came down to Donaldsonville, and preached in the Nazarene Baptist church, of which that amiable and intelligent young divine, Rev. Jno. W. Adams, is pastor. He is a seceder from both Masonry and Odd-fellowship. His church is sorely afflicted with secrecy; still they very good-naturedly listened to my lecture on Modern Popular Evils. Rev. Mr. Adams is an earnest and faithful minister, but his foes have been many and his trials at times severe. He seems to relish the Cynosure.

I purpose to commence a series of sermons on the first Sunday night in December (running through three Sundays), discussing the effects of unjust class legislation. The lodge also will not be forgotten as one of the chief instruments in bringing about these unpatriotic, un-American, ungentlemanly and un-Christian legislative enactments.

The lottery and anti-lottery men are having their "ins and outs," just now; each faction revealing the corruption of the other, making true the saying: "When rogues fall out, honest men get their dues."

If I could only succeed in raising funds sufficient to pay off all debts and finish my church, I could discuss many more of the needed reforms of the day from my pulpit, with much ease, and in a more practical manner. Pray for me.

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

PRES. BLANCHARD AT ROSELAND.

ROSELAND, Ill., Nov. 11, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Our meeting, last night, was not as large as it could have been, owing partly to the weather. I judge there were about three hundred there, and those whom I have seen were well-pleased with the lecture which Pres. Chas. Blanchard gave us. I do not suppose that the few members of secret organizations who were present were as greatly gratified.

May God grant that we hold the banner of our Lord and Saviour high against all the evils of our day. The struggle against secret societies is a hard one, and (the way we look at it) not to be overthrown; but the Almighty Lord is able to cast them down, and will do it at the end of the world, when he alone shall reign, and his people with him—when all the works of darkness will be ended, and Jesus will be glorified forever.

S. DEKKER.

BRO. FENTON IN CANADA.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It would seem that since Captain Morgan was murdered by the men of the "Mystic Fold" on the other side of the lake, and the consequent upheaval of the American nation subsided, the secret society beast has held undisputed possession of church and state in this city. It is almost amusing to American Anti-masons to see the over-awed timidity of the people here towards the society beast. It is high time that something was done to relieve the people of their terrorism, and the power of Christ to sustain the truth asserted.

Recently Rev. Dr. Parsons, pastor of Knox church, introduced the subject of secret societies in a public meeting; but from one who attended that meeting I learn that the discussion was all on one side, the secretists turning out in large numbers and occupying all the time in blinding the people by throwing sand in their eyes about

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

AN OPEN LETTER

TO MEMBERS OF MASONIC AND ODD-FELLOWS' LODGES

"The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1: 17.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, Can., Nov. 1, '91.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MASONIC AND ODD-FELLOWS (B. U.) ORDERS:—Your Mr. Charles A. Poland, editor of the Masonic Journal, and Mr. D. J. Dickson, Secretary of the Odd-fellows (B. U.), appear to have been possessed with the weapon of Satan when confronted with "the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Christians have no other weapon to use, and Christ used no other when confronted by Satan.

Their allegation relating to my dear old parents' family and self, was of Satan, and uncalculated. Certificates proving the untruthfulness of the same have been filed with the editor of the Christian Cynosure, as I deemed it unnecessary to have them advertised.

I do thank God that I became foolish and weak in the estimation of the world, so that I may become wise and strong in the Lord. Paul says, "But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world (Christians) to confound the wise (unconverted of the world); and God hath chosen the weak things of the world (Christians) to confound the things which are mighty (of the world)." 1 Cor. 1: 27.

I can sympathize with you, friends. All Christians were possessed with the "old Adam" before being born again; but through the grace of God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ alone, you can be saved; "and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2: 8, 9.

Now, friends, as I have received the precious gift myself, and not being selfish, but possessed with the law of Christ, which is love to God and man, I am desirous to see you all saved from the law of sin and death, and serving in the newness of the Spirit. If I was possessed with Satan's spirit, as you suppose I am, I would naturally be indifferent as to your souls' salvation, and be resigned to Satan's will, to see you go down to eternal destruction (Satan's hereafter).

Through the guidance of the Spirit I will be enabled to point you to the truth (Word of God), which, indisputably, teaches us that your systems, the principles of which can be publicly learned by outsiders through your constitution, are inconsistent with God's present way of salvation.

Freemasonry professes to teach its members the Commandments, or law, and each will be obliged by his tenure to obey the moral law; and if he rightly understands the art, he will never be a stupid atheist or an irreligious libertine.

Odd-fellowship professes to remonstrate with those who wander from the paths of rectitude, or trespass upon the rules of morality; also seeks to improve and elevate the character of man, to imbue him with proper conceptions of his capabilities for good, and also to spread abroad the light of morality and knowledge. Again, the Odd-fellows' Pocket Companion, page 27, says that the instructions, or doctrines, of the order "lead him (the Odd-fellow) to obedience of the commands of his divine Maker, in which he cannot fail to be blessed in life, death and eternity;" and, again, on pages 41 and 42, "he who practices and teaches it to others shall be crowned with honor and come down to the grave in peace, with the full assurance of a blessed future."

Therefore we find that both systems profess to improve the flesh, and prepare men morally for the kingdom of heaven, through obedience to the Commandments, or law, thereby frustrating the power of God's grace; "for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21. "For the law was given by Moses; but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." John 1: 17.

Oh, friends, this is a false doctrine, to impress upon the minds of men that they are improved or justified through the law, thus perverting that for which the Commandments, or law, is required; as we find that the law is only intended to give us a knowledge of what sin is, (Rom. 3: 20,) and is required for the wicked, to keep them under subjection. "Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient; for the ungodly and for sinners; for unholy and profane; for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers; for man-slayers." 1 Tim. 1: 9. "Because the law worketh wrath; for where no law is, there is no transgression." Rom. 4: 15.

Now, friends, like others, you have been zealous of the law too long. Why do you remain as servants under the law, and be classed as ungodly, sinners and outlaws?—for the law cannot improve the flesh or your "old Adam" nature; and we read of no man being fitted for, or as having gone to heaven justified by the law since the atonement of Christ. Read Heb. 11, in full. "For there is verily a disannulling of the Commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof; for the law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope (Christ) did; by the which we draw nigh unto God." Heb. 7: 18, 19. "If, therefore, perfection were by the Levitical priesthood (for under it the people received the law), what further need was there that another priest (Christ) should arise after the order of Melchisedec and not be called after the order of Aaron?" Heb. 7: 11.

In referring to Heb. 9: 4, we find that the ark of the old, or first, covenant of the law contained the tables of stone; and Paul says, "But if the ministration of death (the law), written and engraven on stones, was glorious, which was to be done away, how shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious?—for if that (law on tables of stone) which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth (the covenant of grace) is glorious." 2 Cor. 3: 7-11. Again, "he (Christ) taking away the first (covenant of ordinances, sacrifices and law) that he may establish the second (the covenant of grace), by the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all," Heb. 10: 9, 10,

We are now fully convinced that Christ has fulfilled all on the cross, "having blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against and contrary to us, nailing it to the cross." Col. 2: 14; "for if that first covenant (of ordinances, sacrifices and law) had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second (covenant of grace)," Heb. 8: 7; therefore why not accept of the new way of salvation provided for us through the blood of Jesus Christ? for through the obedience of Christ suffering for us on the cross many shall be saved. "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4. All that is required of you to-day is simply to believe in Jesus Christ, that he is all-sufficient to save you from being a servant to the law any longer. "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness." Rom. 6: 16. Since the faith of Christ has now come there is no more excuse, for we are no longer under a schoolmaster, Gal. 3: 23, 25; "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified," Gal. 2: 16; "therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." Rom. 3: 28.

We are now brought to realize that it is simply our faith in Christ alone that is needed. I therefore beseech you, friends, in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, to flee from the curse of the law; "for as many as are of the works of the law, are under the curse," Gal. 3: 10. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree," Gal. 3: 13. Why should you who are Gentiles, represent yourselves as Jews? The truth says, they do lie who say they are of Israel and are not of Israel, Rev. 3: 9.

God has enabled us, through the Old Testament truths, to realize the weakness of those who were under the law, previous to the atonement of Christ, and how little they could do for God. Now God intends to let man see what he can do for us—for "those that are the sons of God are led by the Spirit," Rom. 8: 14; "for the letter (law) killeth, but the Spirit giveth life," 2 Cor. 3: 6; "and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." 2 Cor. 3: 17. When you get the Spirit of Christ indwelling in your soul, you will have no further trouble about "squaring," or trying to improve yourself by the law of sin and death, for you will have the new law of Christ written in your soul, which is perfect love to God and man. Then you will be led by the Spirit to teach others how to obey unto righteousness, Heb. 8: 10. God intended some of you, if not all, to be pointing others unto the way of salvation, long ago; but still you are found rejecting the truth. Through the law, you have received a good knowledge of what sin really is; and why remain in sin, when there is a way to escape? If you were enclosed in a large burning building, and knew of a fire-escape connected therewith, I am certain you would not hesitate long in seeking the same.

The law is just and good when used lawfully by any administration; and we are aware that most countries are governed by the same to a certain extent; but Christ says: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you: that ye also love one another," John 13: 34; "for love is the fulfilling of the law," Rom. 13: 10; therefore we have through Christ alone the law of perfect love to God and man, which makes us free from the law of sin and death, and we are enabled to serve God in the newness of the spirit. God has sent forth his son Jesus to redeem us from the law of sin and death, and why not come out and be free from bondage under the elements of the world. "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage," Gal. 5: 1. We must all first be convicted, and consider ourselves in the same state as Nicodemus, who was a teacher and servant to the law, but Christ told him he must be born again; because we have all been born in sin, John 3.

Again, your systems deny Jesus Christ as your head and Mediator; in another respect, by honoring adopted Christless prayers, that are not of ferred up through Christ's name; whereas Christ says: "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name; ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full," John 16: 24; "and whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that I will do," John 14: 13; "that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name he may give it you," John 15: 16. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name he will give it you," John 16: 23; and Paul says: "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ," Eph. 5: 20; "and whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, giving thanks to God and the Father by him," Col. 3: 17; "for there is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus," 1 Tim. 2: 5.

Now, friends, we must be fully convinced that all things done in word or deed must be done through Jesus Christ, as he is our mediator between God and man; be not deceived in the offering of "strange fire" on God's altar, for Christ says: "I am the way, and the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me," John 14: 6. Remember how Aaron's two sons were struck dead, because they offered "strange fire" unto the Lord. Let this be a warning, friends; for you know not the hour that God's wrath may come upon you. Now, let us see what Christ says will be the result of our denying him as our mediator: "But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God." Luke 12: 9. John says: "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father." 1 John 2: 23; and Paul says: "If we deny him (Christ), he will also deny us." 2 Tim. 2: 12. Some of you may make an ignorant excuse by saying, "I pray through Christ's name in the lodge." Then why did you pledge and swear yourselves to abide by the constitution, etc? Oh, friends, how can you encourage and uphold a system that denies our blessed Lord Jesus?

By denying Christ (the Light of the world), you encourage darkness and must be living in it. We must accept the Light (Christ) or perish in darkness. "No man can serve two masters." Christ says: "I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness." John 12: 46. Again, "I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John 8: 12. Therefore, Christians cannot be yoked in fellowship with any systems that encourage the works of darkness. Paul says: "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them; for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." Eph. 5: 11. The sun that shines above us is a beautiful and an appropriate symbol of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, for where the sun shines all is bright, and no darkness—nothing hid; and so it is with Christ (the Light). When the Spirit of Christ is indwelling in your soul, you are a witness of the light; all is light and sunshine, and you are anxious to let the light shine on those about you; no more dwelling in darkness or secret places, and no more hiding away from God, as Adam did. The carnal-minded man naturally has the same desire as Adam had, after he sinned, to be hiding and closeted away in some secret place, because he is born in sin after the image of Adam; but when he is born again there is no more alarm about letting the world see his works; "and this is the condemnation that light has come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil; for every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reprov'd." John 3: 19-21.

We find that when a son is born to Adam, he is born not in the image of God, as was Adam, but in Adam's own and now sinful image; and from Adam's day until the present, man has begotten children (not in God's image but) in his own image; an image fallen and marred by sin, ever since Adam sinned and fell. Therefore, all mankind, by nature, are born in sin, and "shapen in iniquity." Psalms 51: 5; and we are now enabled to see why God has provided a Saviour (in Christ), as we are unable to improve our Adam state by trying to keep the law or making resolutions; consequently, there is no other way of escape from sin, or the wrath to come, except through our Saviour Jesus Christ.

Again, your systems administer oaths, and you have all partaken of the same, and are oath-bound; whereas Christ says: "Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne: nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be yea, yea; nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." Matt. 5: 34-37; and James says: "But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea and your nay nay, lest ye fall into condemnation." James 5: 12.

When Christians get yoked with the world, whether in social or professing systems of religion, they are sure to become losers in their own souls. "What part hath he that believeth with an unbeliever?" 2 Cor. 6: 14, 18. We find all around us, at the present time, vast religious systems formed of mixed principles of Christianity, Judaism, and heathenism, maintained and carried on to an enormous extent by unconverted men, or by converted and unconverted together. Thousands are led astray by the devices of Satan, who clothes worldliness with religious titles, or introduces a little religion, to make worldliness go down better.

Now, we find that Christ gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world (Gal. 1: 4) in its religious, as well as in every other form. Christ says: "They (Christians) are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." John 17: 16. John says: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him; for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes and of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." 1 John 2: 15, 16.

This is plain and simple. Christians are responsible, then, to refuse the world and the things in it, in whatever form Satan may present them to our hearts, whether wicked, worldly, social or religious; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith" (in Christ). 1 John 5: 4. You may lose your soul by taking up some useless kind of religion which has not Christ Jesus as the principal object or head. All theories about God being merciful without Christ, and excepting through Christ as your head, are baseless and empty. Remember, if we make a mistake about our salvation here, we can never come back to rectify it.

Now, in addressing those of you who may have tasted of God's grace, at one time, but, according to your fruits, have fallen from grace, I do beseech you, in the name of Jesus Christ, to come out and separate yourselves, and be not in bondage of soul. God cannot deal with you, because your body is the temple of God, for the indwelling of his Holy Spirit; and if your body is dwelling inside the "camp"—denying Christ, you grieve the Spirit, and the Spirit is not quickened in your soul. You are shut out from being guided into the truth; therefore, you cannot worship God in spirit and in truth, and grow in his grace. Christ himself suffered outside the "camp," and it behooves you to do the same; then the door will be opened, and Christ says: "I will come in and sup with you, and you with me." Just realize the food that awaits your soul; "for if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Heb. 10: 26.

Friends, be not deceived in measuring and comparing yourselves by some distinguished persons, who are, or may not be, of your number; we are not justified in saying that a man has been born again, because he has been to college and received a great education. Paul says: "But they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." 2 Cor. 10: 12.

These are the days in which so many are falling away and becoming anti-Christ, upholding and adhering to systems that are anti-Christ, simply because your hearts have become yoked to an obstructing idol. That idol may be ambition, honor, pride, influence, learning, money, or an empty profession of religion; all of which will vanish away ere long, and would avail nothing in saving you from the eternity that awaits you.

Friends, if that handwriting which appeared to Belsazzar on the wall were now to appear for you, and God were to say: "This night thy soul shall be required of thee," to be weighed up, in God's holy, righteous and just balance, would you be found wanting? If so, you would be found wanting forever.

God grant that it may never have to be said of you, as was said to that enlightened and privileged one of old: "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone."

I am yours very respectfully,

JOSEPH W. MATTEY,

Ex-Freemason and Ex-Odd-fellow, (B. U.)

P. S.—I trust that Mr. Chas. A. Poland will extend the same courtesy in publishing the above, as is conferred through the editor of the Christian Cynosure in publishing his letters, as there may be some one desirous of making a reply. M.

LITERATURE.

LIFE ON THE KONGO. By Rev. W. Holman Bentley, Baptist Missionary to the Kongo. One Vol., 16 mo., pp. 158. Illustrated. Oakland, Cal.: Pacific Press Publishing Co. Blue and gold. Price, 60 cents.

This pretty volume is the sixth and last of the Second Series of the Young People's Library, published by the above company. The Congo, or Kongo River, in Africa, has been for several years a center of interest, adventure and discovery, and is becoming one of the best-known and important districts of the "Dark Continent." Livingstone, Stanley, Emin Bey, and others have made it famous by their descriptions, and more recent explorers and actual dwellers along its banks continue to rivet public attention to its advantages and attractions.

Among these is the author of the book before us, which is the product of personal observation on the part of himself and other persons who have traversed the country and know whereof they write. The narrative is plain, but comprehensive, being more especially designed to interest the young, while older readers will find much in its pages to attract and instruct them. The story of the discovery of the Kongo; descriptions of its physical features, vegetation, climate and inhabitants; their home life, religious ideas, cannibalism, Freemasonry, and charms fill several chapters; which are followed by sketches of Christian missions in Central Africa and on the Kongo, a view of Londa Land, and scenes of missionary life in those remote regions. There are, besides, a dozen illustrations of scenery and incidents along the Kongo, and a map showing the location of missions in Central Africa in 1885.

As is well known, the Kongo Free State is set apart by the united consent of the European governments which have been contending for superiority in Africa. Its independence has the pledged protection of all the governments that control adjoining territory, and their very rivalry is the best security their pledge could have. The freedom of its government, and of the trade of that vast region, render it a most favorable territory for missionary work. It is well watered, well timbered, comprises the richest of soils, and, with the completion of two railway lines, now being constructed, will be easy of access, and open to a high degree of civilization.

The American Garden, that most excellent horticultural magazine, as noticed in our paper of last week, has been consolidated with another, Popular Gardening, recently published at Buffalo, N. Y., and the two, as one, will be published in New York City. The combined periodicals, it is designed, will contain the strength and merit of both, and will be furnished at $1.00 per annum. Address the Rural Publishing Co., Times Building, New York City. The first issue of the united magazines (for November) is very attractive in its new cover, its letter-press and its illustrations. The best features of both appear to have been preserved, and the current number is replete with a wonderful variety of fresh horticultural intelligence, comprising 136 distinct and classified articles. Principal among these we notice the following: Quick Growth in Trees, illustrated; Pines, Hemlocks and Spruces, illustrated; Taste and Tact in Arranging Home and Other Grounds, illustrated; The Economic Plants of Japan; My Grapes in 1891; Strawberry Growing at Norfolk; How to Grow Strawberries Profitably; Possibilities of Our Native Grapes (concluded); The Horticultural Building at the Columbian Exposition, illustrated; Various Lilacs for the Lawn; Some Handsome Native Lobelias; Electro-Horticulture, illustrated; Notes From the Editor's Garden; Gladiolus Raising From Seed; Asparagus Facts, etc., and the following departments: Buds, Blossoms and Fruits; Light From the Societies; Questions Asked and Answered; Current Garden Lore, illustrated, etc. A capital number.

LODGE NOTES.

The Great Council (Imp. Red Men) of New York pays the Great Sachem a salary of $600 per annum and the Great Chief of Records $1,200. They have 9,639 members, a gain of 1,460, and 29 new Tribes instituted for the year, and five Councils of the Degree of Pocahontas.

The Order of the Knights of Maccabees have a membership in the United States and Canada amounting to 60,000. They are strongest in Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and the Province of Ontario, Canada, numbering therein, respectively, about 36,800, 9,200, 4,500, 1,000, 700, 4,200 and 1,700.

Several Fraternal Orders have made application for membership in the National Fraternal Congress during the present year, the last one to apply being the Independent Order of Foresters of Canada. The next meeting of the Congress, which is to be held in the City of Washington next month, promises to be one of special interest.

Knight of Pythias notes from the N. O. Mystic Tie, November 1: Kentucky has a membership of 4,619. New York has 16,247 members and 221 active lodges. Wisconsin has seventy-four Subordinate Lodges. Aldine Lodge of Chicago has a membership of 483, and $5,825.94 cash on hand. Dispensations have been granted for seventeen new lodges in Ohio since May.

The annual assemblage of the Supreme Castle of the Knights of the Golden Eagle met in Springfield, Ohio, and adjourned after a successful session, to meet in Atlantic City, New Jersey, the fourth Tuesday in May, 1892. Irving W. Kelly, Esq., of New Jersey, Supreme Chief, presided. There were present representatives from fifteen States—about 2,000 Knights. The order has not been very strong in the South, but is now growing and branching out all over the country. There is one Castle in Atlanta, five or six in Savannah and a few in other places in the State.—Lodge Secret.

Five men out of ten join secret orders for the benefits derived while in distress, and in hopes their widows and orphans will be cared for; four of the remaining five join for political and business purposes, and the remaining one joins from curiosity—i. e., to learn what kind of an order it is. The last five mentioned join all, or nearly all, the orders they can get into; the first five mentioned can't afford to belong to but one. Therefore, when we sum the matter up, we find that there is much truth in the saying, that men join secret orders with some object in view; and it don't require any great length of time to learn the object of every man who joins a secret order, if you will only watch him.—Southern Lodge Secret.

It is not exactly an open secret, that, at the meeting of the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, thirty-third and last degree in Masonry for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States of America, held in Boston in September last, Hon. Thomas W. Palmer, President of the Board of Commissioners of the World's Columbian Exposition, was, by the unanimous vote of all the Sovereign Grand Inspectors General in attendance, elected to receive the thirty-third and last degree in Masonry; and, by a like vote, Most Illustrious Henry L. Palmer, of Milwaukee, Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander, was empowered to call a special meeting of the Supreme Council at Chicago some time during the coming winter, for the purpose of conferring the degree, advancing ex-Senator Palmer from the thirty-second to the thirty-third and last round in the Masonic ladder. General John C. Smith, active member of the Supreme Council and Grand Deputy for Illinois, will arrange for the ceremony; and when he finds that the ex-Senator can be present in Chicago, he will notify Commander Palmer and the special meeting will be called. Illustrious Charles Thompson McClenahan, Grand Master General of Ceremonies, of New York, will transport the paraphernalia of the Supreme Council from the Grand Orient at Boston to Chicago, where the ceremony will be performed in due and ancient form, upon the completion of which Prince Palmer will be crowned with the wreath of laurel, the highest honor which can be conferred upon a Mason.—Chicago Legal News.

[Any one who has a curiosity to see what this wonderful thirty-third degree is, may read all about it (ritual included) in "Scottish Rite Masonry," for sale at this office. Price, in paper, $1.00; in cloth, $2.00.—EDITOR.]

A faded or gray beard may be colored a beautiful and natural brown or black, at will, by using Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
	SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
	TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.25
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman and William Fenton; address, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

- Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
- New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
- Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
- Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. May, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOK,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thom-son, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hlatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Counterline, Hlawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Pault, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Manchester.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Millor, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isiah Faris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen $5.00. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1891.

OUR NEXT NUMBER—SPECIAL NOTICE.

The number of the Christian Cynosure for next week, November 26, will contain special features calculated to create renewed interest among our many readers.

Foremost in the present plan, as the date of the next issue falls on the day appointed by the President for national Thanksgiving services and festivities, it has been deemed a fitting occasion to present the readers of the Cynosure with a portrait of Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, who is eminent in reform work, literature and pulpit eloquence, together with a characteristic article from his pen.

Secondly, it is the intention to make it essentially an ILLINOIS NUMBER, containing full proceedings of the Illinois Christian Association's Convention at Galesburgh, Ill., last week, with reports of the several papers read, the speeches made, the discussions following them, and whatever else of interest occurred during the two days' session. This, in itself, will occupy considerable space, and show the progress of the reform work in our own State.

Another feature of similar interest, which we hope to present in the same issue, is a report of the proceedings of the recent Iowa Christian Association's Convention at Crawfordsville.

There will also be selections from current literature, which will give additional zest to its "Home" columns.

Single copies of this SPECIAL ISSUE will be furnished to non-subscribers for five cents each, containing, besides, our four-page Supplement, in which is printed "An Open Letter to Professors in Theological Seminaries and Presidents of Colleges Throughout the English-Speaking World," on the false religion of Freemasonry, together with the testimonies of seventy-two eminent divines, thirty-six noted educators, and thirty-five statesmen, against the evils of the lodge-system. In quantities of ten copies, and over, the special number, with the supplement, will be supplied for three cents per copy. Send in the orders at once.

ANARCHISM SQUIRMING.

The red flag and envenomed fangs of the Anarchists were conspicuous features of Chicago life last week. On Sunday, the 8th, they paraded the streets, previous to visiting Waldheim Cemetery, where they went to celebrate the anniversary of the execution of Parsons, Spies, Engel, Fischer and Lingg, displaying red flags, red sashes and red bouquets, and a spirit of bravado that should never again be witnessed in any civilized city. Twenty-one labor unions and socialist and anarchistic societies were represented, and carried banners glorifying the memory of the dead anarchists.

At the cemetery the speakers manifested the same lawless spirit that laid their quondam leaders low in the dust, and emblems of mourning and defiance were visible. A red flag flaunting from Lucy Parsons' house was summarily removed by the police. United States mail wagons were impeded on their way to depots by the procession; and, altogether, it was a disgraceful and dangerous demonstration.

On the following Wednesday evening the Anarchists met again in Twelfth Street Turner Hall, to commemorate the execution of their leaders four years ago. About 1,500 men, women and children were present. The hall was decorated with red flags, and hung with streamers of black and white. In the center of the speakers' platform stood a French liberty cap, and just back of it was a medallion of Spies. At either end of the platform stood busts of Parsons and Spies. On the rear wall hung pictures of the men who suffered death for being responsible for the Haymarket riot, and above them in large black letters was "Murdered, but Not Dead." Other red flags and revolutionary mottoes were conspicuous.

The proceedings were anarchistic in the highest degree. The speeches, several in number, were bitter denunciations of the American people, press and institutions, and a glorification of everything dear to the heart of an Anarchist. The first speaker was Henry Weisman, of New York, who in the course of his tirade said: "The American flag has been dragged in the dirt by those who have not law, but force, behind them, until it has here no place. We refuse to stand under it, as it has been prostituted by those who should have been its defenders."

Police Inspector Hubbard, who stood near him, informed the speaker that there must be no more abuse of the American flag. "I have listened to your remarks," he said, "and you say that the American flag has no right here. Now, this meeting will not continue until the American flag is unfurled. I do not like this lavish display of red. I will no longer allow you to stand there inciting men to revolution."

While the Inspector spoke, he was saluted with hisses and jeers, but these did not move him, although threats and defiance were rife all around him. A squad of policemen then ranged themselves in front of the Inspector, quiet, firm and armed. Then the Inspector said: "This meeting will not continue until an American flag is unfurled, and if there is a repetition of the recent scene of disorder I will declare an adjournment."

In a few moments the American flag was unfurled amid mingled hisses, groans, and applause from a few in the rear of the hall. Mr. Weisman promised to be more choice in his remarks, and was allowed to continue his speech. However, he had lost his enthusiasm. He concluded by saying that he would accept the American flag when the blood of Parsons and Spies had been washed from its folds. However, there was no further disturbance.

On Thursday evening a secret meeting of the most rabid Anarchists of the West was held at Grief's Hall, on West Lake street, where were gathered many of those who were leaders in the ranks before the Haymarket riot of May 4, and enthusiastic speeches were made, of a viperous and revolutionary character. The police, however, were well aware of all that was going on in the hall, and in a body raided the incendiary headquarters. Discipline, courage and promptness distinguished their movements, and the meeting was summarily dissolved. Twenty-five of the Reds were arrested and taken to the Desplains street station. Seventeen men were mulcted in fines, ranging from $10 to $50 each. They will be watched.

THE WORK IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

This evening, and until Sunday evening next, the fifteenth annual meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association will be in session in Muzzey's Hall, Alton. Rev. J. Phillips, of Gilford Village, as we learn from the New Market (N. H.) Christian Witness, will be the leading speaker on Mission Work; Rev. E. B. Pike, editor of the Bible Christian, on Bible Holiness; Wm. F. Davis, of Boston, on Temperance; Rev. A. A. Hoyt, editor of the Independent Christian, on Divine Healing; Rev. J. P. Stoddard will speak for the National Christian Association, and Mrs. J. P. Stoddard for the W. C. T. U. Other able and consecrated speakers will assist on all these topics. The most encouraging intelligence relative to the work of Reform comes from New England, as well as from other districts. The eyes of the people are being opened to the glaring evils that beset our social, religious and political life. Let the good work go on.

REPUBLICANS VS. MASONS.

The recent election in Worcester, Mass., if we may credit the Telegram of that city, has resulted in creating bad blood between the local Republicans and members of the Freemason lodges. It grew out of the boasts of some members of the fraternity that they had defeated a certain candidate, adding: "He will find that there are a few votes in town that can get square with Anti-masons."

The Telegram thereupon comments as follows:

"Mr. Manning" (the defeated candidate) "and many other Republicans who do not happen to be Masons, have for many years been voting and working for Republican tickets bearing the names of Masons almost from top to bottom; that is the 'kind of Anti-masons' they are. There are a few thousand men in the Republican party who are not Masons, who want to know if Republican candidates are to be butchered with faked stories bearing a grip and a password."

Of course, as a local quarrel between politicians the incident is unimportant; but as indicating the animosity of Masons towards the opponents of its underhanded, secret work, and its disposition to override the rights and interests of all who do not belong to the fraternity, it possesses significance. "It is the obligation that makes the Mason"—makes him clannish, selfish and hypocritical; and the frequent display of these characteristics has the effect, also, of making Anti-masons. If Masonry will come out openly and boldly, and show its hand in whatever it undertakes in business, religion or politics, it will soon find its level; but it never does, and never will.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR ON EDUCATION.

A dispatch from Toledo, O., announcing the opening of the fifteenth constitutional general assembly of the Knights of Labor in that city on the 10th instant, stated that a majority of the delegates were Roman Catholics, and intended to discuss the public school system of the country. One, described as "a prominent delegate and a member of one of the most important committees, a Roman Catholic," is quoted as saying (November 9):

"We will take action on the public school system. The Knights believe in education as the only safeguard of this and all other liberty-loving nations. It is the duty of the state to see that the child is educated, leaving to the parents the selection of the school or method of such education. It is the parents' right and privilege to educate his child in a Catholic, Lutheran, private, or public school, just as he sees fit; but it is the duty of the state to look after the child and see that it is educated. We are in favor of compulsory education, so that the state can legally and authoritatively say to the parent or guardian, 'Educate your child, I don't care where. I leave that with you, but you must educate him, or I will.' That is the position of the Knights of Labor on the school question, and that resolution will be adopted in the general assembly, it is believed, without a dissenting voice."

The supervision of the state should be so extended, however, as to compel tuition in all sectarian and private schools to be equal in grade to that in the common schools, in all ordinary branches of education, and the English language.

—The spirited old poem, "No Sects in Heaven," which is printed on another page of this paper, needs no apology for its reproduction. It may be frequently read, with pleasure by true Christians, and with profit by theologians, as an antidote to sectarianism. The Church Union has reprinted it often, and proposes to do so "until another pen shall sing the joys of union and the evils of sectism with more impressive notes."

—On Tuesday evening of last week, Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard lectured in the Christian Reformed church at Roseland, in this county, on Secret Societies. About three hundred men were in attendance, with a few ladies, and the lecture appeared to give general satisfaction. Several members of secret organizations were present, including a representative from Chicago lodges, who came to see what was going on. Before the meeting closed a collection was taken for the benefit of the N. C. A., which netted $11.26—a freewill offering that is duly appreciated by the Association.

—The September number of the Bombay India Watchman—a spirited Christian periodical, edited by Bros. Gladwin and Ward—contained copies of religious tracts, which, by this means, receive a better circulation throughout the missionary district in which the Watchman is printed. One of the tracts brought to us in this way was by Bro. J. P. Stoddard, and issued from the Cynosure office—a sort of corollary, as it were, upon the mo-dition to cast our bread upon the waters and it shall return to us after many days. This is not exactly the true scriptural intent and meaning of the text; but here the tract is, after its long journey to Bombay and return, lying on our desk. Bros. Gladwin and Ward are indefatigable, earnest and discreet missionaries, doing good service in the anti-secrecy cause in lodge-ridden India, and deserving every encouragement from their fellow-Christians in all lands.

—A note from Bro. Milton Wright, publishing agent of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, at Dayton, Ohio, disclaims any knowledge of the report printed in the Cynosure of the 5th instant, that his denomination contemplates the establishment of a publishing house at Harvey, Ill., in connection with the proposed new church edifice in that thriving suburb. Our informant was a gentleman connected with the interested real estate firm. Bro. Wright is entitled to this correction.

—"The Masonic fraternity," said Dr. H. W. Thomas, the other day, in his oration at the Masonic Temple in Chicago, "is a great fact. That it has been long in the world is not doubted, but how long is not certainly known. It is older than Mohammedanism, older than Christianity. It was old when the soldiers of Cæsar landed on the shores of Great Britain; old when Alexander carried the civilization of Asia to Europe. It ante-dates Rome, Athens, the years of Confucius, Buddha, David and Solomon, and our brothers of the long ago may have laid the foundations of the pyramids of Egypt." This is all very pretty and extremely fanciful. But he should have gone to the beginning, and told us how Diabolus held the first grand lodge in Eden and initiated Adam and Eve into the mystery of iniquity. Habiliments and regalia were scarce on that occasion, but there was all the baleful deception on the part of the "grand conductor" that has been a distinguishing feature of Masonic lodge-work ever since. For "he was a murderer and a liar from the beginning,"—and he is nothing better now. The moment that Eve, and then Adam, believed him rather than their Creator, they became his disciples, and so instituted the devil-worship that is perpetrated in the Masonic lodges of to-day.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Persons desiring to correspond with Rev. J. M. Foster, who has recently removed from Cincinnati, Ohio, may address him at 56 Pinkney street, Boston.

—Rev. Louis Auger, of the Baptist church, who has been for several years engaged in active missionary work among the French residents of Detroit, Mich., called at this office, last week. He now goes to Menominee, Mich., where he designs to labor for several months among the French Roman Catholics in that vicinity. The field is a fruitful one, and Bro. Auger takes with him an earnest, self-sacrificing spirit that promises success, and the best wishes of his Christian friends.

—Bro. H. L. Kellogg, writing from California (Placer county), Nov. 9, says: "There is work enough in this country to satisfy the most ambitious. Yesterday I had to speak an hour and a half in three meetings, walking five or six miles besides. Bessie, our eldest, had to take charge of a Sunday-school for me, clear across the county, and next Lord's Day we hope to organize another Sunday-school. But as fast as God raises them up we get local and resident workers into the traces, so that the wheels will keep on turning, and I can step aside." Bro. Kellogg's many friends, we are sure, will not fail to pray for his success.

—The Cynosure office was favored last week with a visit from one of its earliest friends and patrons, Bro. S. Bingham, of Newark, Ill. A lad, living in Northern New York at the time of the Morgan murder, and dwelling amid the excitement which followed that dastardly Masonic crime, he became thoroughly imbued with the prevailing spirit of Anti-masonry, which is yet as strong within him now as in his youth. For his earnestness and boldness in the cause of reform, he has several times suffered from Masonic vengeance, but this experience only served to establish him more firmly in his opposition to secret societies as a great public evil.

NEW ENGLAND ANTI-SECRECY CONVENTION.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 9 AND 10, 1891.

THE OFFICIAL CALL.

The Annual Meeting of the New England Christian Association will be held (D. V.) in the United Presbyterian church, corner of Berkeley and Chandler streets, Boston, Dec. 9th and 10th, 1891. Dr. A. J. Gordon, Mrs. M. E. R. Gleason, Mrs. E. Trask Hill, Rev. R. A. McAyeal, Rev. J. M. Foster, and Rev. I. A. Mesler, are among the speakers engaged. Joseph Cook has also agreed to speak, if within reach at the time. A number of seceders from Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and other branches of the secret empire will be present and testify from personal experience in the orders. Friends in New England are urgently requested to attend and aid, by their counsels, and their prayers, and contributions, in carrying forward this great work.

Beloved in the Lord, there are practical questions confronting us in the work we have undertaken in behalf of the church of Christ. Ought not these questions to be met at a meeting where they may be carefully considered? One of these is the question of Incorporation. Would it not be well for those who desire to co-operate by prayer, by counsel or by contributions, to meet and confer on the advisability of becoming known in law as a corporate body, thereby assuring greater efficiency and permanence in our work?

Ten o'clock A. M., December 9th, would be a convenient time for such a conference in Boston, preceding the opening of the convention on the afternoon of the same day. The laws of Massachusetts relating to such corporations and other required documents could be in readiness, and if, after due conference, it should seem best to incorporate, legal forms could be expeditiously complied with. Believing that whatever action the brethren might deem wise in the matter, such a conference would be helpful in our work, I hereby request that all who can, meet in the U. P. church, Boston, at 10 A. M. Dec. 9th, to consider the wisdom of incorporating the N. E. C. A., according to the laws of the State of Massachusetts.

We have given some thought to this matter and will state a few reasons why an incorporation would be helpful:

1. It would give legal existence to the Association, which must otherwise remain unknown in judicial proceedings.

2. It would be accepted by the public as evidence of permanence and an intention to conduct business upon a responsible basis.

3. It would encourage individuals and churches, favorably disposed, to put the Association's work on the list of home missions, to receive regular contributions.

4. It would facilitate negotiations for funds, and enable the Association to accept trusts and bequests in aid of its work.

5. It would give legal competency to hold so much real estate and other appliances as are necessary in the prosecution of its work.

The importance of having a local habitation becomes more and more apparent as the work advances, and the efforts of the opposition to checkmate our movements and hedge up every way and close every church door possible against it, is revealed in the results of their underhanded methods. Let us seek heavenly wisdom and come together in the spirit of the Master, in the full assurance that ultimately the "will of God will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

J. A. CONANT, Pres.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG, Sec'y

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

caring for widows and orphans, burying the dead, etc., adopting the plan of that arch-fiend of Germany, Weishaupt, in the 18th century.

Mr. Robert Jones, of Eglinton, a suburb of Toronto, in behalf of the cause of anti-secrecy, received your agent cordially. He tried to get the truth into the church of which he is a member, but his pastor raised a row about it and forbade the utterance of truth in his pulpit against alleged Masonic criminals in his church. It is said that this pastor says that he has been an Orangeman, and that "Orangism is next to the Bible." Who, for the sake of truth, Christ, and humanity, will give us the secrets of Orangism?

Do all that enter there "love darkness rather than light?" And, if they do, why? Certain Masons said that they should treat the subject of your agent's visit to Toronto with "silent contempt," and they did.

Bro. Jones hired a hall for two nights, printed, and caused to be distributed, 1,500 handbills announcing the lectures, and advertised them in the principal newspapers of the city. Your agent spoke on the two evenings to intelligent and appreciative audiences, although they were small. On the second evening, a number of young men manifested a great deal of enthusiasm and desired, at some future time, a most thorough ventilation, in the most public place of the city, of the systematic diabolism of the secret lodge swindle. Nevertheless, it must be that there are many people in this city who love God, because they respect his day so much at least that no street cars are allowed to violate his commandment in regard to that day. The Salvation Army, too, is greatly respected in this city, and is a great success. On one of the leading thoroughfares of the suburbs they have a building with a large sign on top, "Salvation Army Prison Gate." The building is occupied by ex-convicts—converts to Christ through the Salvation Army. They manufacture shoes, and have a bakery to keep them employed. They sleep in bunks fitted up as in the steerage of an emigrant ship. Their bakery supplies the Salvation Army training homes with bread. The sign on the building is a confession of their sin to all passers-by, reminding us of the Scripture, "He that confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall find mercy." What a testimony it would be for Christ if all liars, adulterers and thieves, and all of us, converted to Christ, should go about with a confession of our sins printed on our wearing apparel. It was said of Jesus: "This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them." Surely he can eat with none others of the fallen race to which we belong.

While in New York City I received a note of introduction to a prominent doctor of divinity, a Baptist, who, I was told, was an Anti-mason. I met him, and found him to be a real funny fellow. He said he had read Morgan's exposure of Masonry, but he seemed to regard it as an innocent piece of buffoonery. He is typical of a large class of his brother doctors of divinity. He asked me if I was an ordained minister. Upon being answered in the affirmative, he said to me: "If I regarded Masonry as you do, I would not accept the title of reverend." Before he said this he had advised me to let Masonry alone and fight against the sin of substituting sprinkling for immersion, he, apparently regarding sprinkling as a greater sin than Masonry.

Another Baptist minister, in the same city, said to me: "If I ever get such a hobby on Masonry as you have, I hope I shall have sense enough to get out of the ministry." Now, it would be in harmony with some people's notion of charity to call that preacher a fool; otherwise, he is riding the ministerial profession as a hobby-horse to serve the devil, and, the devil guiding his horse, what will become of him in the end? Such men admitted into heaven with their sympathy with Masonry, or its equivalent—their hate of Anti-masonry,—would turn heaven into Pandemonium, and if it met the approval of God would wreck the universe. The lodge demon, Typhon, chopped the body of the lodge Christ, Osiris, alias Beelzebub, the prince of devils, into fourteen parts. In Masonry, Typhon is represented by Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum, and the Masonic Christ by Hiram. All reverend Masonic doctors of divinity who have been ensnared into the lodge by Masonic promises and oaths, are under penalty of having their bodies chopped well-nigh into mincemeat and their souls doubly damned in the world to come, if they prove untrue to the lodge demonology. But Jesus of Nazareth is a swift witness against false swearers.

November 13, 1891.

I arrived in Berlin, Ont., to be disappointed, expecting to find appointments made for every night for two weeks to come. I was informed that none had been made, and, owing to denominational meetings that were imperative, none could be made before some time next January. Of this I might have known before, had the mails delivered the letters sent to me about it.

Yours truly,

W. FENTON.

THE HOME.

CHRISTUS CONSOLATOR.

Beside the dead I knelt for prayer,
And felt a presence as I prayed.
Lo! it was Jesus standing there.
He smiled: "Be not afraid!"

"Lord, thou hast conquered death, we know;
Restore again to life," I said,
"This one who died an hour ago."
He smiled: "She is not DEAD!"

"Asleep, then, as thyself didst say,
Yet thou canst lift the lids that keep
Her prisoned eyes from ours away!"
He smiled: "She doth not sleep!"

"Nay, then, tho' haply she do wake
And look upon some fairer dawn,
Restore her to our hearts that ache!"
He said: "She is not gone!"

"Alas! too well we know our loss,
Nor hope again our joy to touch
Until the stream of death we cross."
He smiled: "There is no such!"

"Yet our beloved seem so far,
Just when we yearn to feel them near,
Although with thee we trust they are."
He smiled: "And I am HERE!"

"Dear Lord, how shall we know that they Still walk unseen with us and thee,
Nor sleep, nor wander far away?"
He said: "ABIDE IN ME!"

—Rossiter W. Raymond.

"SMALL, SWEET COURTESIES."

Life is so complex, its machinery so intricate, that it is impossible that the wheels should always move smoothly and without friction. There is a continual straining of every nerve to gain and keep a place in this over-crowded, busy world. What wonder if in the hurry and pushing the rights of others are trampled or completely ignored, when every individual is in such haste that time fails for the "small, sweet courtesies of life!"

But it is the little offices of friendship—the encouraging smile, the appreciative word, the thought for our preferences, the avoidance of our prejudices—which make life easier, and which lessen in a marvelous degree all its worries and perplexities. For nothing prevents friction so perfectly as the exercise of what we sometimes disdainfully call the minor virtues. As though one should be endowed with truth, and yet, lacking prudence and delicate insight and circumspection, wound with sharp needle-pricks the sensitive hearer. We do not care to be constantly reminded of our failings. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend," but friends too often show a fondness for the scalpel, and lay bare our pet weaknesses in a truthful but exceedingly uncomfortable fashion.

A gentlewoman never fails in the small, sweet courtesies. Instinctively she respects the feelings of others, and having the golden rule by heart, it is from her heart that all lovely, love-compelling graces flow. "In her tongue is the law of kindness," and she has the ready tact which takes advantage of every opportunity to render the lives of others happier,

"And every morning, with 'Good-day,' Makes each day good."

Her winning smile and gentle ministrations, her soft voice and unfailing sympathy, insure her always a ready welcome, and, like the sun, she "finds the world bright, because she first makes it so."

The fairy tale of our young days has a peculiar charm and attraction. The courteous, cheerful maiden who draws water for the withered old crone, and who listens to her, and replies with amiability, is rewarded with the gift of uttering pearls and diamonds; and, in the less romantic German version, Frau Holle bestows gold pieces as the reward of civility and diligence with that delightful prodigality so characteristic of fairyland.

The small, sweet courtesies are so potent in their influence upon our daily life, softening its asperities, rounding its angles, and insensibly compelling imitation. For who could be churlish, or even cold and indifferent, when surrounded by an atmosphere of genial warmth? The little every-day and all-day thought for others is not hard to some gracious natures imbued with the rare virtue of self-forgetfulness; but to those who long for the admiration of their fellow-creatures, the practice of the small, sweet courtesies can be recommended as an unfailing means of gaining that approbation. Mr. Brownling expresses it thus:

"'Twas her thinking of others made you think of her."
In his exquisite portrait poem, "My Love," Lowell has translated into the diviner language of poetry the words of our text:

"She doeth little kindnesses
Which most leave undone or despise;
For naught that sets an heart at ease,
And giveth happiness or peace,
Is low esteemed in her eyes."

—Harper's Weekly.

A BLIND GIRL AND HER BIBLE.

A very interesting case of a blind girl living in Bureau county, Ill., has lately come to our notice. Quite a number of years ago she was found by a local Bible agent living in a rural neighborhood in poverty and sadness, cut off from nearly all that usually makes life so bright and hopeful to childhood and youth. But she had an ardent thirst for knowledge, and learned the alphabet from raised letters on tinware, crockery, etc. She was very anxious for the New Testament in raised letters, which was promptly furnished her by the Bureau County Bible Society, to her great joy. She learned to read it very readily, and through this means the way was opened to her to enter the asylum for the blind in Jacksonville. Here she made rapid progress and graduated with honor, and has since been trying to earn a livelihood by canvassing for books. She had received a copy of the Psalms in raised letters in addition to her first gift. But these were not enough. She wanted the whole Bible. Recently this one great wish of her heart has been gratified through the generous provisions of the American Bible Society. We give her views and feelings in her own words:

"It would be impossible for me to tell you my heartfelt gratitude in words, as much as I would like to do so. When my father came home at 1 o'clock he brought the box and opened it; then I knew the whole Bible was mine in raised print, so that I could read it all for myself. Well, I suppose you would like to know what I did then. I knelt down by the box and thanked our dear Father in heaven as best I could for the good gift, and asked him to richly bless and prosper the generous givers; and that he would help me to read and understand it all aright, and teach me in what way I could make it as good seed sown in good ground, that should bring forth an hundred fold. Then came to me the good suggestion that I should give one hundred Bibles to those who have not any in their homes. I have already found five homes where I shall place it. I give as many as I can each year from my earnings, and trust I may be prospered so that I can give quite a large number."—Exchange.

POSITIVE MEN.

The world is full of negative men. They are creatures of very tender feeling. They are extremely liberal. They have warm hearts, and love everybody. But they are timid. They shrink back from their own shadows. They would sooner sacrifice a principle than to wound the feelings of a friend. They are always in a stormy sea, and always afraid of being dashed to pieces on the rocks which lie on either hand. They have a well-marked chart, and know just where the rocks lie, but they live in mortal dread of them. They are moral cowards.

Such men are of little value to the world. They skulk away from the battle, and leave others to meet the tempest of wrath and win the victory. They carry no swords, and so bear no palms in their hands, and wear no crowns. Their souls are little. Their aspirations do not rise above their head. They are too insignificant even to be regarded with contempt.

This age needs positive men; men bold enough to take their stand on one side of every great question—men of courage, men of soul. A few such men are still living. They are not popular. Men hate them. They call them extremists. They withhold from them their love and fellowship, withhold honors and the praises of men. They try to put them down and crush them. Luther's record tells the history of their fierce hostility. Bunyan could rise from his grave, and tell how the world hates a positive man. But positive men have their value. They do not live in vain. They make their impression on the race. And grateful men, after they are gone, will build monuments to perpetuate their memory in the world.—Exchange.

CURIOUS BELIEFS ABOUT RAINBOWS.

The rainbow is frequently credited with great power for good or evil. It is a wide-spread belief that it hides great riches, or brings fortune or good luck with it.

In Suabia it is said to rest on bowls of gold; in Hungary, that cups of silver will be found where it touches the earth or water, and the finder will divine the future. It is quite likely that a shoe cast over it will fall on the other side filled with gold, as it is believed in Berne and among Suabian peasants. The difficulty is to get it over.

In Carinthia it is a hat. Czech tradition says that if iron or other base metal be cast into the rainbow it will turn to gold, and similar things are recorded of it in the Tyrol.

In Norway it is said that a cup and spoon, with a kind of gruel, will be found where the bow rests. It is also believed to bestow health. Among the Letts, if you can reach the bow and touch it you will have the healing power. The water found beneath the arch will, it is believed, cure those afflicted with demoniacity. Old women keep this water in trenches dug in the ground or in a hollow tree, but not in the house, where it will lose its force or bring some disaster to the household. It is also said that flocks should not be pastured where the bow rests, or they will fall sick.

In Bohemia, also, it withers up the herbage, say the peasants. In the Ukraine you must not put out your tongue at the rainbow or it will dry up. In Hungary there is a Vila or fairy sitting on the water where the rainbow touches it, and whomsoever she sees first will die. Esthonians say the bow is but the scythe used by the thunder to chase wicked souls. In Austro-Hungary the sick are not allowed to lie stretched at full length when the first bow of spring appears, for it is thought they will die if permitted to do so.

—Anonymous.

HOW EASY IT IS.

How easy it is to believe that our children are nicer than those of other people.

How easy it is to think that the things we want to do will be for our best.

How easy it is to see where other people ought to step.

How easy it is to believe that it is always the other man who is blind.

How easy it is to do God's will after we have learned to love him with all our heart.

How easy it is to find Christ everywhere in the Old Testament, when we search for him by the light of the Spirit.—Unknown.

OLD-FASHIONED HONESTY.

A new defalcation is announced almost every day. A bank president has been using the funds of a bank; a cashier has been dipping in the deposits; a teller has forgotten the distinction between his own and other people's money; a book-keeper has kept something beside the books, and something which he ought not to have kept.

All these crimes are committed in the undue haste to assume wealth, and the soul is risked for the sake of the body. The significant question is forgotten, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

The fruit of all this dishonesty is that unhappiness is brought home, not only to the man, but to his family. Pecuniary ruin brings with it, under such circumstances, moral destruction and disgrace which cut to the quick. Parents, children, brothers, sisters, friends—all suffer. How much better is old-fashioned honesty! Slow but sure, is a very safe motto. Nothing can ever compensate for doing that which, if known at the moment, would entail upon you dishonor and disgrace. Write honesty over your door; paste the word on the head of your bed; look at it the first thing you do every morning and the last every night. Abide by it, and it will help you in time and eternity.—N. Y. Ledger.

THE SUN IS ALMOST DOWN.

Two young men on one occasion had a warm dispute; and remembering that exhortation of the Apostle, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," just before sunset one of them went to the other, and knocking at the door, his offended friend came and opened it, and seeing who it was, started back in astonishment and surprise; the other, at the same time, cried out, "The sun is almost down." This unexpected salutation softened the heart of his friend into affection, and he returned for answer, "Come in, brother, come in." What a happy method of conciliating matters, of redressing grievances, and of reconciling brethren.—Anonymous.

DAN, A LITTLE HERO.

The patter of feet was on the stair,
As the editor turned in his sanctum chair,
And said—for weary the day had been—
"Don't let another intruder in."

But scarce had he uttered the words, before
A face peeped in at the half-closed door,
And a child sobbed out—"Sir, mother said
I should come and tell you, that Dan is dead."

"And pray who is 'Dan'?"—the streaming eyes
Looked questioning up, with a strange surprise;
"Not know him?—why, sir, all day he sold
The papers you print, through wet and cold."

"The newsboys say that they could not tell
The reason his stock went off so well;
I knew!—with his voice so sweet and low,
Could any one bear to say him 'No?'"

"And the money be made, whatever it be,
He carried straight home to mother and me;
No matter about his rags, he said,
If only he kept us clothed and fed."

"And he did it, sir—trudging through rain and cold,
Nor stopped till the last of his sheets was sold;
But he's dead—he's dead! and we miss him so!
And mother, she thought you might like to know."

In the paper, next morning, as "leader," ran
A paragraph thus—"The newsboy, Dan,
One of God's little heroes, who Did nobly the duty he had to do—
For mother and sister earning bread,
By patient endurance and toil—is dead."

—Margaret J. Preston, in S. S. Visitor.

TEMPERANCE.

STRONG TESTIMONY AGAINST STIMULANTS.

In that fascinating book of Arctic travels, "The First Crossing of Greenland," its Norwegian author, Dr. Nansen, takes the following stand against alcoholic and all kinds of stimulating drinks:

The idea that one gains by stimulating body and mind by artificial means betrays, in my opinion, not only ignorance of the simplest physiological laws, but also a want of experience, or, perhaps, a want of capacity to learn from experience by observation. It seems, indeed, quite simple and obvious that one can get nothing in this life without paying for it in one way or another, and that artificial stimulants, even if they had not the directly injurious effect which they undoubtedly have, can produce nothing but a temporary excitement, followed by a corresponding reaction.

Stimulants of this kind, with the exception of chocolate, which is mild in its effect and at the same time nourishing, bring practically no nutritive substance into the body, and the energy which one obtains in anticipation by their use at one moment must be paid for by a corresponding exhaustion at the next. It may, no doubt, be advanced that there are occasions when a momentary supply is necessary, but to this I would answer that I cannot imagine such a state of things arising in the course of a protracted sledge expedition, when, on the contrary, as regular and steady work as possible is generally the main thing to be aimed at.

To many, this will no doubt appear so plain and obvious that it is scarcely necessary for me to touch upon the subject. But at the same time it must be remembered that even in recent years Arctic expeditions have set out from home with large supplies, not only of tobacco, but of such fatal stimulants as alcoholic drinks. For the most characteristic example of this tendency one need only turn to the list of drinkables taken by the second German polar expedition on the two ships, Germania and Hansa. It is sad, indeed, when a wrong principle of this kind leads to such terrible consequences as it did in the Greely expedition, the last great tragedy in the history of Arctic exploration. When one reads, for instance, how the plucky Sergeant Rice, famished, frozen, and tired to death, imagines he can save himself by a dose of rum, to which he has even added ammonia, the very worst thing he could have hit upon, and then dies shortly afterwards in the arms of his friend Frederick, who is meanwhile stripping himself of his own clothes, down to his very shirt, in his attempts to thaw his comrade's stiffening limbs, one cannot but be moved to the very heart at the thought of so much energy, courage, and noble self-sacrifice being thus uselessly thrown away.

DR. TALMAGE FOR PROHIBITION.

Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, was questioned by a Voice reporter, Saturday, as to his attitude in the present political situation. To the question, would he support the Prohibition candidates this fall? Dr. Talmage said: "I have voted the ticket of the Prohibition party ever since its organization, and I intend to support the candidates of that party at the coming election. I have not been very active in the political line, because I believe I can do more from the platform. My church is where I can best express myself. But every one knows where I stand on this question. I believe that antagonism to this great liquor evil will grow and spread. Whether it will take the form of a great popular uprising or of a political party, I don't know as yet. But finally the people will demand the destruction of this evil, and their voice will be so vehement that it will be heard and prevail. The rum business is an institution in this country. When evil becomes an institution, then it becomes serious and dangerous. I believe in all the aspects of reform on this question, moral suasion and its annihilation by law. Some very good temperance Christians believe this annihilation can be accomplished through the agency of one of the old established parties, but I can have no such hope." —Voice.

AN IMPROVEMENT IN POLICE WORK.

Chief of Police McClaughrey, of Chicago, has appointed a Woman's Advisory Board of the Chicago Police Department. The duties of the board are to investigate the women's quarters in police stations, and all questions relating to the treatment of women while they are under arrest; to examine the police matrons, and determine upon the fitness of each for the position she holds, and to examine and pass upon all applicants for the position of matron at the police stations. There are now over thirty police matrons at the Chicago stations.

The new board is made up of ten women who have interested themselves for some time in trying to humanize police methods of treating women, and much is expected from the organization of such woman into a practical arm of the police department. Earnest and competent women are members of the new board, and Chief McClaughrey has placed all matters relating to women and children in police stations in their hands.

ONE MILLION VOTES FOR 1892.

Applications are flooding this office for blank Agreements on the Million Voters plan spoken of last week. We will fill orders as rapidly as possible. It will be necessary to have all blanks returned to some one place. The Voice will furnish these blanks for the entire nation free of charge; they should be returned to this office, and reports of the progress of the work will be made week by week; this report will be forwarded, in proof, to other Prohibition journals for publication simultaneously with the Voice. A list of the names sent from each State will be from time to time furnished to each State committee of the Prohibition party. On each Agreement there is a blank left for the name and address of the person securing the signatures and who vouches for their genuineness. We have great faith in this plan, and the responses coming in are well calculated to arouse enthusiasm. Work along this line will help, not hinder, the present campaign. Let it be a nation-wide movement. Here is the text of the Agreement:

"We, the undersigned, being profoundly impressed with the aggressive power of the liquor traffic and the overwhelming evils, political, industrial and moral, growing out of it, believe that a strong influence would be exerted upon public sentiment, and a long step taken toward the eradication of those evils, if the enemies of the liquor traffic would present as united a front as the liquor dealers present when their business is attacked, we therefore agree to vote, at the Presidential election in 1892, for the candidates of the Prohibition party for President and Vice-president, provided the signatures of one million voters be secured to this agreement." —The Voice.

SAYINGS OLD AND NEW.

1. The greed of the saloon is the peril of the people.
2. A saloon can no more be run without boys than a sawmill without logs.
3. Low license wants our boys; high license demands our girls also.
4. The doctrine that "The backs of our vices should bear the burden of our taxes," is based on the notion that we can serve ourselves by our sins and make coins of our crimes.
5. The saloon-keeper is the voter's agent whose ballot makes his business lawful.
6. What one does by his agent he does himself.
7. A state may never license an evil for the gain of it.
8. That which is morally wrong is never politically right.
9. The safety of the people is the state's supreme law.
10. It breaks this law when it licenses the few to injure the many.
11. Rum's license fees are the state's blood-money.
12. The patronage of the bar is the beggary of the family.
13. He who would not oppose the saloon because he fears it will injure his business, his party, or his popularity, is more of a coward than a hero, a paltrion than a patriot, more self seeking than self sacrificing, and is too greedy of gain to get the gain of godliness.
14. He who stands behind the bar will one day stand before the judgment bar. They who put him behind the one will stand with him before the other, and they who plead for him now will have none to plead for them then when gold hath lost its power and sin its charms.—Rev. Joel Swartz.

CAMPBELLITES FOR PROHIBITION.

The Church of Christ (Campbellite) has practically become a prohibition church. At Elgin, at the close of a meeting at which the Rev. J. S. Hughes of Chicago, late candidate for governor on the Prohibition ticket in Indiana, presided, the following preamble and resolution were adopted by a unanimous vote:

"Whereas, The liquor power has become the front and center of all offending to the social, religious and political well-being of the people of this nation; and

"Whereas, Great religious assemblies have in convention declared it to be the chief and deadliest enemy of Christ and his church, and yet that the churches have refused to purge themselves of complicity in its continuance; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this church will hereafter maintain in good faith the righteousness and glory of Christ against any and all complicity with his enemy, the saloon dragon, and that we will not offer Christian fellowship to any who uphold the license system in any manner, either by signing a bond, leasing property, issuing a license or by voting for a candidate or for a party that tolerates licensing the liquor traffic."

The New York World, in a recent issue, gives some facts as to the capacity of beer-drinkers for the consumption of liquor. It quotes one man who has the ability to drink 275 glasses a day, and tells of men who drink from 100 up to over 200 a day, and keep it up the year round.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

LESSON IX.—Fourth Quarter.—November 29.

SUBJECT.—Christ before Pilate.—John 19: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.—Rom. 4: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—John 19: 1-7. T.—John 19: 8-16. W.—John 18: 28-38. T.—Luke 23: 4-12. F.—Luke 23: 13-24. S.—Matt. 27: 24-31. S.—1 Pet. 2: 20-25.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jesus scourged and mocked.—vs. 1-3. Pilate had declared Jesus innocent of any crime. He had examined him personally, and had found nothing that could make him amenable in the slightest degree to the law. It was, therefore, a most outrageous act of injustice to order him scourged, and then deliver him up to the abusive mockery of the soldiers. Pilate's conduct is difficult to explain. If he did it as a kind of compromise measure, hoping thus to satisfy the Jews and escape the responsibility of putting Jesus to death, it failed, as a compromise with wrong and injustice always must. There is a deep truth underlying the old legends of men who, in order to gain some fancied good, made bargains with the evil one, but always found themselves outwitted by his superior cunning. How many political Pilates are willing to compromise with the liquor traffic? How many voters who call themselves Christian men vote for that "covenant with death and agreement with hell" called high license? And are they better than this weak, vacillating, cowardly Roman governor? Well does Dr. Geike call him, "the type of the politician in all ages, who forgets that only the right is the strong or the wise."

2. Christ before the mob.—vs. 4-7. Pilate's words, "Behold the Man," with his other utterance, "What is truth?" have become immortal, though nothing was probably farther from his thought at the time he uttered them. Yet what vast issues were involved in those three little words! He probably meant in this dramatic way to impress the mob with a sense of the absurdity involved in bringing accusations of sedition against this lone, defenseless man, bleeding from the stripes of the soldiers, and the butt of their cruel mockery. Could he, without followers, and seemingly without friends, be an object of fear to the Roman government, the mistress of the world, limitless of resource, and with armies that never knew defeat? All Pilate gained, however, was the sudden shifting of their charge to one of blasphemy "because he called himself the Son of God." "We have a law," they say, "and by our law he ought to die." This was a false statement. The Mosaic code made no provision whatever for the treatment of such a case, and there was, therefore, no penalty affixed. Only by a very stretched and false interpretation of their own law could they have inflicted death, even had they possessed the power, for simply claiming to be the Messiah. But between a cowardly, time-serving judge, and the blood-thirsty mob crying, "Crucify him!" what possibility for the voice of Justice to be heard?

3. Pilate's second examination of Jesus.—vs. 8-12. Pilate's superstitious fears had been first aroused by the message from his wife, who, tradition says, was a Jewish proselyte. This new accusation made him yet more afraid. Like other heathen, he believed that the gods often became incarnate in human form, and he proceeded at once to a second examination of Jesus. He would know his origin. "Whence art thou?" Why was Jesus silent? We know that he was ready enough to speak of himself as "from above," as existent with the Father from the beginning, having eternal life in himself, and able to give it unto all who should come to him; but it was not on every occasion, nor before every audience. It is possible that he did not wish, by answering, to admit Pilate's right to question him on a point that in his official capacity did not concern him. He was bound to do justice whether a man or a God stood before him, and in his legal capacity Pilate was concerned with Jesus only as a man. It was his part to acquit him and to let him go. Then only would his heart be prepared to receive the truth. We must do our duty first, "if we would know of the doctrine." Pilate, by his boast that he had power to crucify Jesus and power to release him, condemned himself. It is true the power was his, and yet, as our Lord reminded him, not his except it was given him from above. He had the power to do right, fearless of consequences, if he would; but, instead, he chose to act a slave's part and let the mob be his master. Many a man in slavery to his appetites or passions boasts of his personal liberty, when in reality he has abdicated that liberty and become the bond-servant of Satan. We also see how past sins often become an obstacle in the way of future right-doing. Had Pilate been conscious of a clean official record, he could not have been frightened from his duty by threats of reporting him to Cæsar. Resist the devil now, and we take from him most of his power to annoy us in the future.

4. Jesus delivered to be crucified.—vs. 13-16. Pilate's last appeal was really the final pleading of God with their deluded nation. Their fanatical cry, "We have no king but Cæsar," was a repudiation of all their theocratic traditions. It was not merely rejecting Christ, but rejecting the Father who had sent him. So the soul that refuses Jesus must accept a master of some kind. A choice is given us. Who shall be our King, Christ or Cæsar?—God or Satan?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Wm. F. Davis says Justin D. Fulton is "a bold soldier of Christ, who supposes himself to be a Baptist, when in reality he is a Christian."

—The Illinois Christian Endeavor Convention held at Peoria recently was very largely attended, and it is reported that over 2,000 delegates were present. Among those who delivered addresses Rev. Wayland Hoyt, D. D., was one of the foremost. The membership in Illinois is reported at 26,631; societies in Illinois, 633; denominations represented, twenty-one. Decatur was chosen as the next place of meeting.

—An immense mass-meeting for the Baptist Young People's Union of America was held in Tremont Temple, Boston, Sunday, Nov. 1, at 3 P. M. Hundreds were turned away, not able to get in.

—Revs. T. L. Johnson and R. L. Stewart left Chicago November 12, for England, where they tarry for about two months and then sail for Monrovia, Liberia, Africa. Mr. Johnson returns to Africa, authorized by the board of African missions of the "Baptist General Association of the Western States and Territories," to seek the cooperation of Baptists in Liberia to plant a chain of stations from the coast to the interior, having the Soudan as an objective point. It is the design to establish Baptist headquarters at Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, and from this point move into the interior. There are now about 3,000 Baptists in Liberia.

—According to Mr. Charles L. Hutchinson, who is one of the "six," the trustees of the new University of Chicago is composed of "fourteen Baptists, one Israelite and six Christians." Before the Exposition of 1893, $1,500,000 will be expended on the University.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Mills meetings which opened on Tuesday evening in the Union Park church, this city, have been a great success. They began with an audience which filled the church to overflowing, and with an interest which was prayerful, deep and expectant. The nearly twenty churches of various denominations which heartily unite in the movement are not the only ones benefited by it. Churches in other portions of the city are touched by it also, and are awakening in some measure to a larger and keener sense of the opportunity.

—Principal C. E. Fish has adopted the Princeton rule and excluded secret societies from Phillips Exeter Academy. They were found to be an intolerable nuisance, leading to insubordination, shielding evil doers, and fostering crime.

CHURCH UNION.

—A correspondent in England of the New York Mail sends the following: The Baptist Congress is distinguished by the display of a thoroughly developed spirit in favor of the union of the churches. Dr. Mackennal, the leader of the Congregationalists, declares that if the Baptists do not speedily amalgamate with the Congregationalists, the fusion of the Congregationalists and Presbyterians will come first. A letter from Mr. Gladstone is about to be published in which he expresses his approval of the plan. Several classes, as Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Baptists, says Mr. Gladstone, could unite readily, but Methodism, he thinks, would be hard to bring in, as it has a special field of its own which differs rather materially from the other denominations.

EVANGELICAL.

—Since January, 1890, the American Sunday-school Union has received in bequests, and in gifts from executors and heirs made as the result of intended bequests, $64,780.57, inclusive of the collateral inheritance tax of five per cent, required by the laws of New York and Pennsylvania.

—It is announced that many of the Chicago churches and the various departments of the Young Men's Christian Association have united in a series of special services for young men. Forty-three pastors have signified their intention of preaching sermons of special interest to young men on Sunday, and many of the churches have set aside their prayer meeting this week for the same general object. The week ending last Saturday was observed throughout the world as a special week of prayer and effort for young men.

—Mr. D. L. Moody makes an appeal to the benevolent for the support of students in his Chicago Bible Institute. There are many young men and women ready and willing to enter, and who, with the training received there, would do valuable work in home and many foreign fields, but they are entirely without means, and so are cut off from this opportunity. Mr. Moody estimates the annual support of one student at $150, which includes tuition and board.

—The third quarterly report for 1891 of the Bible Institute for home and foreign missions, of which Mr. D. L. Moody is president, shows an enrollment of eighty-three men and fifty-six women, with 1,542 professed conversions. Eleven denominations are represented in the men's department, and ten in the woman's. Many graduates are engaged in home and foreign missionary work.

LUTHERAN.

—The corner-stone of the "Pacific Lutheran University" near Tacoma, Washington, was laid on Sunday afternoon, October 4. The Rev. Mr. Harstad, President of the Minnesota District of the Norwegian Synod, is at the head of this work and is pushing it with great energy. The estimated cost of the institution is $50,000, and the buildings are to be ready by November 1, 1892.

—The Albert Lea Lutheran High School is the name of another new institution that was dedicated on the 6th of October, at Albert Lea, Minnesota. It is a fine structure 70x76 feet with a tower 100 feet high. Cost complete $30,000.

—The report made by the trustees of Carthage College at the last meeting of the Synod of Northern Illinois, was one of the most promising for years. The college roll of 1890-91 numbered 165, over against 144, the preceding year. At present the promise is still better for the year 91-92.

—The Missouri Synod has a church in Chicago, served by Rev. August Reinke, and has 753 male voting members over 21 years of age. The parochial schools of the church have 1,000 pupils. Recently a new church was dedicated capable of seating 2,000, and it is said to be crowded every Sunday.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society reports total receipts for the year $263,920.29. This is an advance over last year of $43,290.53. The society proposes to still further honor the faith of its constituency by fixing the estimates for next year at $368,000.

—At the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society in Washington, D. C., recently, officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. John Davis; vice-presidents, Mrs. W. F. Hoyt, Mrs. H. C. McCabe, Mrs. Bishop Walden, Mrs. J. F. Willing, and Mrs. W. G. Williams; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. E. Rust; treasurer, Mrs. A. R. Clark; recording secretary, Mrs. F. A. Aikins.

—Special services are in progress at Lemont, Ill., with a corps of helpers, including the Young Men's Christian Association of Joliet, Miss Bertha Fowler of Evanston, and several pastors.

—At Glen Ellyn, Ill., a Methodist class was organized a few months ago, and a church society of nine members was formed. Rev. William E. Catlin, a local preacher of Humboldt Park church, Chicago, was placed in charge, and under his care the society has been greatly prospered.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Presbyterian has been considering the action of the Presbyteries on Revision as far as they have reached conclusions. Among its inferences in the summing of results is the following: "Quite a number of Presbyteries, probably twelve to fifteen, profess to be very much discouraged by the results which the Committee of the Assembly has reached, and are now ready to go out of the business of revision. Some of these propose to lay the Westminster Confession on the shelf as a venerable antique, which it will be well to preserve, and occasionally to praise, but which will have no authority, and which no minister or elder will be bound to accept. They wish a very short creed, and particularly wish a very scanty flavor of Calvinism in it."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—A meeting was held in South Side Mission, Chicago, recently, to take the first steps in organizing a church. It was well attended, an excellent spirit prevailed and the members indicated their choice for ruling elders. The ordination and installation was appointed for Friday evening, Nov. 20th, communion to follow on the next Sabbath.

—A committee, consisting of one from each Presbytery, has been appointed by the Associate Reformed Synod, South, to confer with a similar committee from the U. P. church to prepare a basis of union between the two churches.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The largest and most successful capture of a well organized gang of safe-blowers, burglars, and jail-breakers known to the history of the city police was made by Captain Mahoney's detectives of the Desplains Street Station.

James Charlsen, a terra cotta worker, was hurled to death from the nineteenth story of the Masonic Temple.

COUNTRY.

The second of three competitive tests of armor plates manufactured in the United States for modern vessels of war was made at the Naval Department at Washington, American armor plate proving they were without a peer.

A remnant of Big Foot's band of Indians under Red Cloud, numbering some sixty families, is in open revolt against the authority of an agent at Cheyenne Agency.

Antiquarian W. W. Smith, of Montreal, has obtained conclusive evidence that trunks found on the schooner Marie Victoria which was wrecked at Bic, in the autumn of 1864, were the property of J. Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln.

General John Palmer, Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued an official order that every G. A. R. post must appoint a committee to collect money from the members for the National Memorial Hall to be erected at Decatur, Ill., by the order.

Mr. Azeez Musallem, an Ottoman subject from Mount Lebanon, Syria, called at the White House with an elegant portrait of President Harrison in silk, framed with native wood inlaid with mother of pearl, which he presented to the President. It is a fine specimen of oriental industry.

A mortgage for $6,000,000 was filed at the Suffolk County (Mass.) Registry of Deeds Thursday. It covers the property of the Boston Cordage Company, the Standard Cordage Company, and other cordage manufacturers, and is one of the steps by which the concerns are formed into a trust.

In the United States Supreme Court, on Tuesday, Attorney General Miller announced that it had been agreed to submit the controversy between the United States and England as to the Behring Sea seal fisheries to arbitration, and that the official announcement of that fact would soon be made.

The report of the director of the mints to the Secretary of the Treasury shows that during the last fiscal year the coinage at United States mints aggregated 119,547,877 pieces, the largest in the history of the country. The mines of the United States yielded during the year gold of a commercial value of $32,845,000 and silver of the value of $57,225,000.

Snowstorms were reported throughout North Dakota, Tuesday.

P. P. Palmer, in charge of the Cheyenne Indian Agency in South Dakota, is alleged to have swindled the government out of several thousand dollars by false entries.

George A. Wiard, of Montague, Mich., died Sunday after sleeping since May 1. He weighed fifty pounds at the time of his death.

A traveling salesman for a Cincinnati diamond firm left a gripsack containing $20,000 worth of diamonds in a car while he went out to get some lunch at Dayton, Ohio. When he returned the grip was gone.

Dr. Charles N. Palmer, the Raymond, Wis., physician who pleaded guilty to burglary, was sentenced to one year in the State penitentiary Tuesday. Dr. Palmer is about forty years of age.

The Brooklyn Bridge was operated at a loss of $75,155 during October.

Returns to the Department of Agriculture are not favorable for a good yield of cotton.

Fire early Tuesday morning in the office of the North Wisconsin Lumber

Company's warehouse at Hayward, Wis., caused an explosion of dynamite which was stored in the vicinity. The building was destroyed, glass in structures adjacent was shattered, and a freight train was blown from the track. Six persons were wounded by flying debris, two of them fatally.

Argument in the three cases involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act has been postponed by the United States Supreme Court until Nov. 30.

Statistics show that the corn crop of the past season was one of the best on record.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

J Griffin.....	$ 2 00
E E Brown.....	2 00
Amos Ellis.....	1 00
B Williams.....	1 00
Albert Gummer.....	1 00
H Frost.....	5 00
D S Dean.....	3 00
J W Wood.....	1 00
Rev S F Porter.....	12 00
Peter Guthrie.....	3 50
J McCullough.....	2 00
J H McGlade.....	2 00
J Comany.....	1 00
A friend (Oswego, N. Y.).....	5 00
Wm Huston.....	3 50
David Howder.....	2 00
Prest A A Smith.....	1 00
John Jones.....	5 50
A J Foord.....	2 00
Mrs Nutting.....	30
Peter C Housel.....	2 00
J Grove.....	1 00
Mrs H E Loveless.....	5 00
A A Johnston.....	2 00
Melville Beach.....	1 00
S Kirkpatrick.....	2 00
W O Norval.....	5 00
Previously reported.....	707 15
	$780 95

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

A friend (Avalon, Mo.).....	$ 1 00
Rev Samuel F Porter.....	50 00
Previously reported.....	111 83
	$162 83

For Foreign Fund:

Rev S F Porter.....	$15 00
Previously reported.....	7 00
	$22 00

For Free Tract Fund:

Mrs M G Strong.....	$ 50
Previously reported.....	2 75
	$3 25

W. I. PHILLIPS, Sec'y and Treas.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Nov. 9 to 14:

Mrs M B Park, J C Card, S Dekker, Geo Hiner, Mrs Mary Good, N Whipple, S Strother, W O Percival, Mrs R R DeLong, S. F. Clark, I R B Arnold, S Jackson, W M Craig, H L Gleoge, Mrs J M Byers, Mrs. M. J. Avery, A R Livesay, Mrs N R Weede, H H Cannady, W A Pratt, R Gardner, L Dorman, Miss N Jaquith, J P Hershiser, D. D. Tower, Rev J L Bush.

We desire to call attention to the advertisement of the Harvey Land Association on the last cover of this paper.

The progress in way of new buildings for the past year inside the village lines has been unprecedented.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. in. made with a pack of 60 splendid silk pcs, asstd, bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. st. Arts. Wanted. Lemar's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

BEATTY Pianos, Organs, Bargains. Catalogue free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

It is an old-fashion notion that medicine has to taste bad to do any good.

Scott's Emulsion is cod-liver oil with its fish-fat taste lost—nothing is lost but the taste.

This is more than a matter of comfort. Agreeable taste is always a help to digestion. A sickening taste is always a hindrance. There is only harm in taking cod-liver oil unless you digest it. Avoid the taste.

Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

THE NEW WEBSTER

Entirely New. Cost $300,000.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SUCCESSOR OF THE UNABRIDGED. Re-edited and Reset from Cover to Cover. A GRAND INVESTMENT for every Family and School. Work of revision occupied over 10 years. More than 100 editorial laborers employed. Critical examination invited. Get the Best. Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.

CAUTION is needed in purchasing a dictionary, as photographic reprints of an obsolete and comparatively worthless edition of Webster are being marketed under various names and often by misrepresentation. The International bears the imprint of G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages: cloth, $1.00.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring.....	93 @ 94
Winter.....	87 @ 87 1/2
Corn—No. 2.....	53 1/2 @ 54 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	31 1/2 @ 32
Rye—No. 2.....	92 @ 93
Bran per ton.....	14 25 @ 14 50
Hay—Timothy.....	9 00 @ 11 50
Butter, medium to best.....	23 @ 28
Cheese.....	09 @ 12 1/2
Beans.....	1 60 @ 1 80
Eggs.....	18 @ 23
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 15 @ 1 19
Flax.....	93 @ 95
Broom corn.....	4 @ 05 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	20 @ 28
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	4 1/2 @ 6 1/2
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @ 13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @ 29
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	5 85 @ 6 20
Common to good.....	3 15 @ 3 75
Hogs.....	3 80 @ 4 00
Sheep.....	2 85 @ 5 00

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 05 1/2 @ 1 08 1/2
Corn.....	55 1/2 @ 72
Oats.....	38 @ 38 1/2
Eggs.....	24 @ 25
Butter.....	15 @ 30
Wool.....	14 @ 39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @ 3 75
Hogs.....	3 00 @ 4 05
Sheep.....	2 50 @ 4 50

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
