And for our weary, way-worn feet
(Aided by thy Spirit's power.)
A light to guide from hour to hour.

To turn the sinner from his sin,
We know thy holy Word can do;
Back to the fold the wanderer win;
The Christian's trembling hope renew;
Comfort the weary and the sad,
And hourly make thy children glad!

—Lisa A. Fletcher, in the Cleveland Evangelical Messenger.

THE STORY OF A HYMN.

More than half a century ago a young girl was preparing for a grand ball, soon to be given in her native town. Full of gay anticipation, she started out one day to her dress-maker's to have a fine dress fitted for the occasion. On her way she met her pastor, an earnest, faithful man, and in the greetings that passed between them he learned her errand. He reasoned and expostulated, and finally pleaded with her to stay away from the ball. Greatly vexed, she answered, "I wish you would mind your own business!" and went on her wayward course.

In due time the ball came off; and this young girl was the gayest of the gay. She was flattered and caressed; but after dancing all night, laying her weary head on her pillow only with returning light, she was far from happy. In all the pleasure there had been a thorn, and now conscience made her wretched. Her pastor had always been a loving, cherished friend, and her rudeness to him rankled in her mind. More than all, the truth of his words came to her heart, impressed by the Holy Spirit, and would give her no rest. After three days of misery, during which life grew almost insupportable, she went to the minister with her trouble, saying:

"For three days I have been the most wretched girl in the world, and now, oh, that I were a Christian! I want to be happy. What must I do?"

We need not be told that the pastor freely forgave her for her rudeness to himself, nor that he joyfully directed her to the true course of peace.

"Just give yourself, my child, to the Lamb of God, just as you are."

This was a new Gospel to her. She had never comprehended it before.

"What! Just as I am?" she asked. "Do you know that I am one of the worst sinners in the world? How can God accept me just as I am?"

"That is exactly what you must believe," was the answer. "You must come to him just as you are."

The young girl felt almost overwhelmed as the simple truth took possession of her mind. She went to her room, knelt down, and offered God her heart, guilty and vile as it was, to be cleansed and made fit for his own indwelling. As she knelt, peace—full, overflowing—filled her soul. Inspired by the new and rapturous experience, she then and there wrote the hymn, beginning:

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me,
And that thou bid'st me come to thee,
O Lamb of God, I come."

Little did Charlotte Elliott think of fame, or of the immortality of the words she had written. It was simply putting her own heart on paper; and therefore the hymn, born of a mysterious experience, appeals to other hearts needing the cleansing power of the blood of the Lamb.

Charlotte was possessed of literary gifts, and when the editor of the Literary Remembrance died she took charge. In making up her first number, she inserted several of her own poems anonymously; among them was "Just as I Am." It immediately attracted attention, was widely copied, and passed into the hymnology of the Christian church.

It seems as if the hymn had been permitted to have a peculiarly holy and tender mission. A few examples may not be uninteresting.

A poor boy once came to a city missionary. Holding out a bit of paper, all torn and dirty, he said:

"Please, sir, father sent me to get a clean paper like that."

Straightening the paper, the missionary found it was a leaflet with the hymn "Just as I am, without one plea." Inquiry brought the story.

"We found it, sir," said the boy, "in sister's pocket after she died. She used always to be singing it while she was sick, and she loved it so much that father wants to get a clean one, and put it in a frame and hang it up. Won't you give us a clean one, sir?"

The hymn had been given to the little girl by some unknown hand. By the blessing of God it brought her to Christ, and her ransomed soul gained a free entrance into the home of the redeemed.

Mr. Gough told a touching story of that same hymn.

He was in church in a strange city, and the sexton showed him into the same pew with a person whose looks impressed Mr. Gough very unfavorably. His face was like mottled soap; his face twitched as if a sheet of lightning had run all over it, and every now and then his lips would twist and give utterance to a strange, spasmodic sound.

Mr. Gough could not imagine what ailed the man, and got away from him as far as he could. We will let him finish the story in his own words:

"Presently a hymn was given out, and the congregation rose to sing

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me."

"I saw that the man knew the hymn, and said to myself, 'He can't be so disagreeable, after all.' I got nearer. He would sing. It was awful, positively awful. I never heard anything like it. And occasionally he would make that strange noise with his lips. Then he would commence again, and sing faster to run ahead. They came to the next verse. He had forgotten the first line, and while the organist was performing the interlude, he leaned toward me and whispered, 'Would you be kind enough to give me the first line of the next verse?'"

"I did so.

"Just as I am, poor, wretched, blind."

"That's it," said he. "I am blind. God help me!"—and the tears came running down his face and the eyelids quivered. "And I am a paralytic."

"And then he tried to sing:

"Just as I am, poor, wretched, blind."

"At that moment it seemed to me I had never heard a Beethoven symphony in my life with as much music in it as that hymn, sung by that poor man, whom Christianity had made happy in his lot."

When the saintly Bishop McIlvaine lay dying, he requested his friend to read to him this hymn. After listening to it till the last word fell on his failing hearing:

"That hymn," he said, "contains the whole of my theology."

Charlotte Elliott's work is not yet done. While there are human souls to feel the need of salvation, and of a guiding finger to the only way of hope, her hymn will win for her stars in the crown of rejoicing.—National Baptist.

SMALL, SWEET COURTESIES.

It was only a glad good-morning, as she passed along the way,
But it spread the morning glory over the livelong day.

The words of the little poem came forcibly to my mind one summer day, as I stood talking with a quaint Scotch neighbor over her bit of a garden. A blithe-faced young girl came tripping by, pausing to give with the morning greeting a smile as cheery as the sunshine. "Bless her bonny face," said the old Scotchwoman, looking fondly after her; "it's a gude sicht for sair e'en. It aye heartens me up for the day."

We have all known people whose coming into the room was like a burst of sunlight; there was something so cheering and inspiring in their very presence; others, too, we have known, whose faces were like a thunder-cloud, full of smoldering gloom, lowering and dark with discontent and sullenness. We do not often stop to think how much of ourselves we carry in our faces and manners, or the subtle influence we exert on those around us. Even strangers, the people we pass on the street or meet in the cars, or transiently in places of business, are affected by our atmosphere as we by theirs, and "so the whole round earth is bound around by chains of sympathy"—a sympathy all the more pervading that it is often unconscious and unexpressed. A brief glance, a smile, a gesture, will haunt the memory, and weave a subtle spell long after the one bestowing it has passed out of our sight, perhaps out of our life; and the least touch upon the electric chain, by which we are all bound together in a common humanity, may have as far-reaching an influence as the tiny pebble that ripples the water into ever-increasing circles.

It is not always those most free from care and trouble who wear the sunniest face; oftentimes it is "the serenity of conquered sorrow" which lights the eye and lends its sweetness to the patient mouth, and the gentle speech, and it is such as these that most move our admiration and our sympathy. Our petty worries fade away under their bright smile, and we are ashamed to let discontent or ill-nature sway us.

"I want to thank you here and now for the good you did me years ago," said one woman to another, recently, in the midst of a cosy talk. "I don't suppose you ever dreamed of it, but you were a living example to me, when we boarded together. I had got into a bad habit of retiring into myself and giving short answers when I came home tired and out of tune, and I was very apt to be that way. I couldn't see why I should make myself agreeable when I didn't feel like it, and I was determined not to be drawn out of my shell. In fact, I was fast becoming sour and crabbed when you came. Your bright way of speaking, and your pleasant smile for all, were a revelation to me. They made me ashamed of my selfishness, and I began to try and take an interest in other people. I soon found that I felt the better for it, and it wasn't such a task to be agreeable. So you see what an influence you had without knowing it."

"I am so glad to have you tell me that," said the other, with tears in her eyes. "That was such a hard-trial time to me. I was under a terrible strain through my sister's long and painful sickness, and it was a constant effort for me to seem cheerful. I used often to feel afraid that I had been cross or impatient, or appeared indifferent to others. It is a relief to know that I did not make others unhappy through my distress and anxiety."

"We could have forgiven you if you had; but it was your brave cheerfulness that made me the more ashamed," returned her friend. "And I am sure that others felt the same."—Boston Traveller.

THE SIMPLICITY OF PRAYER.

Prayer should be simple in its spirit. Self-importance destroys the true spirit of all asking for favors or blessings. It should be simple in its desires and petitions. Simple, childlike conditions of mind are what God is pleased with, and such a mind will only ask for simple blessings at the hand of God. Prayer should be simple and confident in its faith. Like the children of whom Dr. Newton speaks, we should be as simple as a child.

A mother one morning gave her two little ones books and toys to amuse them while she went upstairs to attend to something. A half an hour passed away, when one of the little ones went to the door of the stairs, and in a timid voice cried out:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling."

"All right," said the child and the play went on. After a little time the voice again cried:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling."

"All right," said the child again, and once more went on with her play.

And this is just the way we should feel toward Jesus. He has gone upstairs, to the right hand of God, to attend to some things for us. He has left us down in this lower room of the world to be occupied here for a while. But to keep us from being worried by fear or care, he speaks to us from the Word, as the mother spoke to her little ones. He says to us, "Fear not; I am with thee." Jehovah Jireh—"the Lord will provide."

Simplicity of desire and purpose will save from a great deal of trouble. The ambitious spirit is a great foe to communion with God. Be simple and content with what God makes of you. Seek not to undo what God has done by seeking to make of yourself more than God has made of you. Simplicity of heart and mind will lead to simplicity of manners and conduct. Ostentation and demonstration are great enemies to meditation and prayer. An unfaltering trust in God brings a meek and gentle spirit. In such a frame of mind you can pray. But he who is heady and high-minded must feel that he is sufficient in himself, and therefore hath no need of God.—Anonymous.

BABES IN THE CHURCH.

Rev. B. Fay Mills says: "I would not want to have it on my heart or conscience that I had aided in bringing children into God's kingdom only to be starved or frozen to death by the side of a frigid mother." Can babes live when thrust into a snow bank? Take heed that the heart of the church is warm, its hand cordial, its lips free from all words that sting. Make it a home, full of light and cheer and love. Then will Christ's little ones be drawn to the church, and when taken in will not fall back into the world again. Is your church such a home? If it is not, that may be the reason why God does not give it new-born souls.—Congregational News.

THE MOTHER'S CHAPTER.

"The fourteenth chapter, read, of John."
The mother said, while lying on Her couch of weariness and pain.
"I'd like to hear it once again;
So full of comfort, love and peace,
For weary souls who wait release.
The flesh is weak, and well He knew
The heart would oft be troubled, too."

And so the child, with trembling voice,
Began to read the mother's choice
Of all the chapters in the Word.
And as she read she faintly heard
The mother o'er and o'er repeat:
These words Christ spake, assuring sweet,
"The Father's house," "The mansions there,"
And place he did for her prepare;
"That where I am, there ye shall be."
O, precious words. Soon I shall see
His glory, and his face behold;
Shall walk with him the streets of gold.
Then, with a face illumined bright,
The mother passed from faith to sight.

Years have gone by. The child still bears
The mother's words through all her cares;
Her chosen chapter stops to read
In times of anxious care and need.
And now the days so shadowy seem,
Waiting his coming, oft a gleam
Of heavenly light falls softly on The mother's chapter found in John.

—Susan Teall Perry.

TEMPERANCE.

THE SALE OF LIQUOR AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

It is announced that permission has already been granted for the sale of liquor at the World's Fair. The concession has been made to foreigners (Germans) who wish to conduct a typical German beer garden on the grounds, as one of the indications of the progress of civilization which the world has made since the days of Columbus! Whether an inebriate asylum is also to be on exhibition we have not heard.

There is just one way in which there seems to us to be any chance to prevent the sale of liquor at the World's Fair. Petitions will not do it, though they be sent in by the shipload. All the protests that the church papers can publish will not do it, and the resolutions that church conferences and synods may pass will not do it. These are all well enough in their way, and if they accomplish nothing else, will register a protest against the shame of placing on exhibition before the world the progress in drunkard-making.

One thing would probably call a halt to the program, and that is the announcement next November that one million votes have been cast for the Prohibition candidates for President and Vice-President. The "petition" to circulate is the "Million Voters' Agreement." The protest to make is the Prohibition ballot. The resolutions to adopt will be in the Prohibition platform to be adopted June 30, 1892, at St. Louis.

So long as the voters of this nation, including about four million who call themselves followers of Christ, continue to vote for the legalization of drunkard-factories in their own cities and States, so long will their paper protests against the sale of liquor at the World's Fair be disregarded. And they ought to be, what is more. If we were the World's Fair Commissioners, and protests came in to us from voters whom we knew to be voting for license parties, we would have them—the petitions, not the voters—fed into the flames at the earliest possible opportunity.—The Voice.

FARM PRODUCTS AND DISTILLED LIQUORS.

The Report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the year ended June 30, 1891, gives a table showing the materials used in the production of distilled liquors, and a table showing the number of cattle and hogs fed at registered distilleries, with total increase in weight. We show our farmer readers just how much they are "indebted" to the distilleries. A market is furnished for 26,347,641 bushels of grain, and this amounts to about $10,000,000. This produces 114,178,077 gallons of spirituous liquors, which retails at $6.00 a gallon, or $685,068,462, an amount which if turned into the channels of legitimate industry would go largely for breadstuffs, wool, cotton, leather and other materials the farmer has to sell. The 26,347,641 bushels of grain produces also about an equal bulk of distillery refuse, which is either thrown upon the market to compete with the farmer's good grain as feed, or is fed by the distilleries to the 80,595 cattle and the 39,655 hogs, which are thrown upon the market to poison the people that eat them and to depress the price of beef fed on wholesome materials.—The Voice.

INCONSISTENCY REBUKED.

A good story is told of a minister and a saloon-keeper who live in Decatur. The saloon-keeper, who had amassed considerable money in his business, built a commodious residence. An old party preacher, during its erection, took occasion to make some very caustic remarks about the saloon-keeper, berating him and his business. The next day they met, when the following conversation occurred:

Saloon-keeper: I hear that you gave me a drubbing in your sermon yesterday.

Old Party Preacher: Yes, sir; I said some pretty hard things, but they were true.

S. K.: Did not you and I attend the same election in this city, and vote for the same candidates?

O. P. P.: Yes, that's true.

S. K.: Were not those candidates elected and did they not grant me my license?

O. P. P.: Yes, I must admit that.

S. K.: Did not we support the same candidates for the Legislature, and don't they leave the law on the statute book which authorizes the granting of the license?

O. P. P.: Yes, that is true, but—

S. K.: Never mind your buts. You support a party which approves of, or at least does not repeal, the law which legalizes the saloon business. You vote for candidates with me who take my money and grant me a license to sell. You then abuse me and my business. I think you are a hypocrite. Good day.—Selected.

A SCATHING REBUKE.

Honorable F. M. Hubbard, district judge of the eighth judicial district of Iowa, in passing sentence upon some liquor dealers for violation of the prohibitory laws of the State, said: "While there are greater crimes known to the law which are punishable with great severity, there are none which involve more of those qualities known as despicable meanness and audacity than the selling of intoxicating liquors. One can have no adequate conception of a cataract until he has seen Niagara, nor of the terrible fury and grandeur of a storm in mid-ocean, until he has witnessed one; no one can know the utter degradation and total depravity to which his species can be brought, until he looks upon the desolate ruin caused by your hellish traffic. You are persistent, defiant law-breakers, and shamelessly boast that in defiance of the law and moral sense of the community, you will continue in your wicked and criminal practices. It has therefore now become the imperative duty of this court to let fall upon you so heavily the arm of the law that you shall either be driven from your nefarious traffic or ruined in your fortunes of wicked prosperity. You have become a stench to the nostrils of the community, and all good men are praying that you be speedily reformed or summarily destroyed. By the providence of God and the favor of this court, these prayers shall be speedily answered by signal and exact justice for your crimes. And finally, let me entreat you, if you are not lost to every sentiment of humanity, to desist from your criminal, vagabond traffic and betake yourselves to some honest calling for a livelihood, that you may yet become virtuous, useful citizens and entitled to the respect of a Christian community."—Exchange.

SECRET TEMPERANCE ORDERS AND THE W. C. T. U.

We have always believed that the W. C. T. U. as a whole is opposed to secret methods. We were sure of it when we saw the utter lack of enthusiasm with which the fraternal delegates from the Sons of Temperance and Good Templars were received by the Convention. Even Mother Stewart, personally beloved and honored as she is, could scarcely elicit a solitary hand-clap for the Good Templars, whom she represented. W. C. T. U. women as a rule have too much of the spirit of Him who in secret said nothing to want to fight even rumsellers with the dark lantern methods of the lodge.—E. E. Flagg, in National Home Guard.

"SIGNAL" LIGHTS.

The Maine prohibitory law is prohibitory. People will begin to believe this after awhile. The largest seizure, a whole carload, of liquors ever made in the State, was effected December 14, in the town of Lewiston. The consignment was made to a bleaching factory, and the cases containing the liquor were made after the fashion of those containing cotton cloth to be bleached. On measurement it was estimated to be 988 gallons, which at retail prices would amount to $5,000. Maine has officers loyal to her statutory laws, and they find it as easy to enforce a prohibitory law as any other. Prohibition does prohibit every time, when the officers are in sympathy.

The Irish Temperance League is striving to enroll 1,000,000 in the Band of Hope. It says: "The children—the to-morrow of the cause." A grand temperance banquet held recently expressed the following sentiments: "A faithful Christian church, the liquor traffic's deadliest foe." A man to be a true church member must not support the liquor traffic. How many communicants in the past have helped to send to Parliament, and will do so again at the general election, scores of men who have opposed empowering the people to veto the liquor traffic? If true church members may do this, what may they not do?"

Mr. W. S. Caine, in the Alliance News, organ of the United Kingdom Alliance, says the legislation demanded by the British Temperance party is "Sunday closing, direct veto and no compensation. We do not greatly concern ourselves about the constitution of the licensing authority; all we contend for is that no licensing authority, however constituted, shall force upon the community any liquor shops against its direct will." American temperance workers send the Britishers hearty sympathy in their local option struggles, out of which we have grown into Prohibitionists.

A fine new schoolhouse in Ellingham county, Ill., has been named for Frances E. Willard, because it is situated just across the road from a big spring that gushes in an unfailing stream from the hillside and forms a rivulet that never runs dry.

Milwaukee, in her anxiety to attract visitors during the World's Fair, has received a proposition from one of her citizens to the effect that the seven big brewers of the city erect a mammoth beer mug on the City Hall square and keep free beer on tap for all visitors.—Union Signal.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON VI.—First Quartér, 1892.—February 7.

SUBJECT.—The Gracious Call.—Isaiah 55: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55: 6.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Isa. 55. T.—Ezek. 18: 25-32. W.—Hos. 14. Th.—Joel 2: 12-17. F.—Prov. 1: 20-33. S.—Matt. 11: 55-39. S.—Rev. 22: 10-17.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The free invitation.—vs. 1-5. This is one of the most precious invitations which the Bible contains, and is strikingly similar to Rev. 22:17: "Let him that is athirst, come." The "waters," here put in the plural to indicate the inexhaustible fullness of the Gospel, may be taken as meaning the joys of salvation in its broad and general sense. Only a pardoned sinner can know what these joys are, and yet there is a deeper and more complete bliss to be attained by those who will seek after it. It is these spiritual delights of the Gospel which are here typified by "wine" and "milk," to be bought without money and without price. It is only in the King's highway of holiness that we find a spiritual Canaan flowing with milk and honey. The water is to give life; the wine and milk is to nourish and cheer. The first part of the invitation appeals to the sinner consumed with longing for something more satisfying than mere earthly good; the latter to the Christian who "having tasted that the Lord is gracious" desires to know yet more of the heights and depths of such wonderful love. To give a man perishing with thirst a cup of cold water is not enough. It may bring him back to life, but that life cannot be sustained by water alone. Delicious as is the first draught from the cool waters of salvation, we must have the living bread, too, before we can grow into the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. The worldling recognizes this need, or he would not "spend money"—not literal money alone, but his time, strength and all those faculties which go to make up his capital as a human being, for things which cannot feed the soul. The marginal reading "weigh" for "spend," suggests any important thought. The worldling knows the value of what he is throwing into the scales, but he does not "weigh" the husks which are given him in return. Also notice the antithesis: The devil always exacts full payment; God gives without money and without price. In all buying and selling there must be two parties. Rev. 3: 18 represents Christ as counseling the lukewarm Laodicean church to buy of him "gold tried in the fire," "white raiment," "eye-salve," etc. Only in him can the soul's needs be supplied. Thus we see the importance of antagonizing every system of false worship that keeps men away from Christ, and substitutes human works and mere morality for faith in him.

2. The exhortation to repentance.—vs. 6-10. There are times when the Lord comes especially near us; in seasons of revival, or when some word written or spoken has peculiarly touched our hearts, or his providence is speaking to us in some unlooked-for joy or discipline of trial. Hence the exhortation to "seek the Lord while he may be found," for nothing so surely builds a barrier of separation between the soul and God as neglect to heed his gracious call. "Let the wicked forsake his way," etc. Heart holiness is necessarily an after-work. The forsaking of wicked ways will naturally go before the forsaking of those more subtle forms of sin which consist in "unrighteous" thoughts. At the same time no one who is sincerely penitent for sin will stop with the mere negative part of religion, but will pray and labor for heart-cleansing. The "wicked" may also refer to flagrant and open transgressors; "the unrighteous" to those who sin more in thought than in outward conduct. "Let him return," repent—make a radical change. He has been going from God. Let him turn about and go to God. "Abundantly pardon." Literally, "multiply to pardon"—in proportion to the sins repented of. "For my ways are not your ways." God is not governed by human procedure in dispensing his grace. "His ways are from everlasting, and the thoughts of his heart to all generations." Our Lord, in his merciful treatment of fallen women, showed that God judges from an infinitely higher plane, and may often see in "the sinner," so-called, a more hopeful condition of heart than in many who are outwardly pure and virtuous.

3. God's Word sure to be fulfilled.—vs. 10-13. We know that in the natural world the seasons will succeed each other with cold and heat, storm and sunshine, rain and snow. His promise in this respect has stood firm for six thousand years. Is his Word less sure in other things? As the rain comes down in showers of blessing, and even the snow covers the ground with its protecting mantle, and helps to make it more fruitful, so no word of his shall be lost. The penitent sinner can appropriate his every promise, and be as confident of its fulfillment as of any of the ordinary operations of nature. What an incentive to labor undiscouraged for truth and righteousness! If the message we speak is God's word, it will not return void, but will prosper; and somewhere, either in time or eternity, we shall see the fruitage.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

—The stated meeting of the board of managers was held at the Bible House on Thursday, January 7th, 1892, Hon. Enoch L. Fancher, LL. D., President, in the chair. The decease of Mr. Francis T. King, of Maryland, one of the oldest vice-presidents of the society, was announced. Letters were presented from Dr. Mateer and Dr. Wheeler, of China, respecting the successful meeting at Shanghai of the three companies of translators appointed to prepare the Standard Chinese Bible; from Turkey, with numerous instances of unjust and unlawful interference with the work of the colporteurs of this society; in some cases the books were confiscated and the colporteurs imprisoned. Issues from the Bible House during the month of December, 108,200 volumes; issues since April 1st, 1891, 735,969 volumes.

BAPTIST.

—The Gospel car, which the Baptists have had built by the Pullman Car Company, is a great success. It is attended not only by the dwellers of the prairie towns in the Northwest, but by the train hands and passengers upon trains to which it is attached.

—Rev. Willard Robinson, pastor of the First Baptist church of Brooklyn, has resigned, having come to the conclusion that immersion is not essential.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

—Christian Endeavor Day (February 2, 1892) marks the completion of the eleventh year of the Christian Endeavor movement. There are over 18,500 societies, with over 1,100,000 members. The organization was never spreading so rapidly in every land and every evangelical denomination as at present.

"CHURCH ARMY."

—The Church Army of England, an organization, under the Church of England, for practical work of various kinds, has long been interested in social movements, and had a social scheme in operation six months before the appearance of General Booth's "Darkest England." It recently observed its second anniversary under circumstances which brought out very forcibly the great value of its work. It commenced by opening small labor homes in as many parishes as possible, and seeking to reform even the most depraved criminals. These are brought into the homes, and given lodging and food, then are put to work; and, in addition to receiving their board, washing, and lodging, a bank-book is given to each, in which a certain sum is placed to their credit each week. If, after two or three months, the experiment works well, a situation is found for the man or woman, either in farm life or abroad. There are fifty mission nurses employed, and 170 officers—evangelists. During the past year there have been some 40,000 outdoor meetings and 50,000 in-door meetings held, with an attendance of fully 7,000,000 persons. Without undertaking accurate statistics, they report that about 6,000 adult converts have been confirmed, and some 1,200 persons have been reformed. The subscriptions in donations received at headquarters are over $32,500, while the local receipts and expenses, mostly in working-people's pence, amounted to over $70,000 during the year.—The Independent.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Congregationalist took a census of church attendance in eleven wards of Boston on a recent Sunday. Out of a population of 172,441 there was an attendance of 71,069. Of this number 21,576 were Protestants, 49,311 Catholic, and 182 Jewish. On the same Sunday it found that about 40,000 people went to the suburbs, and 350,000 people traveled on the street-cars.

—The evangelist, B. Fay Mills, has been conducting a very effective series of evangelistic services in Elizabeth, N. J. On January 23 he began similar services in Cincinnati, O., for which careful and thorough preparation had been made by an organization of the city, a religious census and preliminary meetings. Seventy-five churches of all denominations are enlisted in the work.

—The Rev. John McNeill, the popular London preacher, has resigned his pulpit in Regent Park, in order to join Moody and Sankey in evangelistic work in Scotland. After a remarkably successful three-year pastorate in London, he preached his farewell to his people at the close of the year. His engagement in Scotland is for twelve months.

—In one of the Mills' revival services, out of 1,600 people present, 1,400 said that they had been converted before twenty, 180 before thirty, and only one person after reaching fifty.

MENNONITES.

—Mennonite churches number twelve divisions, with a total membership of 41,541, the largest body being the Mennonites, proper, with 17,078 members, and the smallest, the Apostolic Mennonites, with only 209 members.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Methodist preachers gave a majority of 451 for the women to be eligible to the general conference, out of a total of 10,753. In favor, 5,602; against, 5,151; majority in favor, 451. Of the whole number cast (10,753), three-fourths would be 8,067; in favor, 5,602; failed to carry by 2,465. Membership vote for, 735,148; membership vote against, 183,694; majority for, 51,454.

—The membership of the M. E. church, South, is rapidly increasing.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The catalogue of Princeton Theological Seminary, recently issued, shows a total of 182 students, as follows: Graduate students, 9; senior class, 44; middle class, 58; junior class, 66; special students, 5.

—Rev. Dr. W. E. Moore, secretary of the committee for the revision of faith of the Presbyterian church, which met in New York, Jan. 12, received the following reports from 200 presbyteries: Twenty-seven approve without asking for any change; 114 approve with amendments proposed; fifteen ask that the work of revision be discontinued; thirty-five ask for a new formula of doctrine under various designations and for various uses; no report received from forty-four presbyteries, and three disapprove entirely. Those not answering are, as a rule, foreign presbyteries, and will be entitled to vote when the general assembly convenes in Portland, Oregon, the latter part of next May.

—Princeton Seminary has lately received a legacy of $21,000. The donor originally willed this property to Union Seminary, N. Y., but on account of the endorsement of Dr. Briggs' (claimed) heretical views changed the gift as above.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—The late Joseph Armour bequeathed $100,000 to establish a mission enterprise in a neglected part of Chicago. The carrying out of this bequest was committed to Mr. Philip D. Armour, who, although not a member of any church, or even a professing Christian, has added to his deceased brother's benefaction the sum of $900,000 in the erection of a commodious building for the mission and another for an industrial training school. Both these structures are perfect in all their appointments, furnishing every facility and convenience for carrying on mission work. Over 2,000 persons of all ages are here under the instruction of faithful teachers in the Sunday-school, the kindergarten, and the night schools.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

—A New York Catholic lately purchased when abroad two rosaries for $8. He sent them to Rome for the Pope's blessing, which cost $4 more. On his return to New York 40 per cent duty was assessed on the rosaries, and 35 per cent on the Pope's blessing as an article "not otherwise provided for."

—The next National Catholic Congress is to be held in 1893, and a program has been prepared which was approved by the Cardinal and Archbishops at their meeting in St. Louis during the time of the golden jubilee of Archbishop Kenrick. The topics are chiefly on the questions of labor and capital, and related subjects, such as pauperism, charities, workingmen's societies, life insurance, pension funds, strikes, colonization and the drink traffic.

THE GREEK CHURCH.

—The first orthodox Greek priest to settle in this country arrived at New York City recently. He received a call from the Athena Society, which numbers one thousand. Arrangements are being made to build a church, and they will have services in the Greek language.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—According to the United Presbyterian Manual, they have lost over three hundred and fifty ministers. Thereby the Presbyterian church gained 214; unspecified denominations, 42; deposed and suspended, 32; Dutch Reformed, 21; Congregational, 9; Canadian secession, 7; Baptist, 5; Plymouth Brethren, 3; Episcopal, 3; Methodist, 2; Spiritualists, 1; Covenanters, 1; Unitarians, 1; Skeptics, 1.

—The City Temple congregation, New York City, which was received into the U. P. church from the M. E. church in 1890, has withdrawn, it is reported, and entered the Protestant Episcopal church. Rev. Jarvis Worden, pastor, goes with the congregation.

WINEBRENNERIANS.

The Church of God, sometimes known as the Winebrennerians, has a total membership of 22,511.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

About three years ago, in a private and confidential interview with the late Rev. Joseph Travis, the undersigned agreed to undertake the work of editing and publishing a volume containing a certain number of sermons and a sketch of his life. Owing to ill health the sermons were not prepared, and the plan agreed upon has necessarily been delayed. I have, however, agreed with Sister Travis to take what material she has on hand, with what can be gleaned from others, and from this compile a book of about 200 pages. If this plan is carried out I must have the co-operation of his many friends and admirers. I, therefore, make the following requests:

1. All persons who have letters written by him to them, containing matters of note or interest, and who may have incidents connected with his ministry, will please send them to me at their earliest convenience.

2. In order to provide some means to undertake the publishing of this volume, I would like to secure the names of two hundred persons who will agree to take a copy of the book when finished at 75 cents a copy. The proceeds of the book will be for the sole benefit of Sister Travis. Brother Travis was a preacher of marked ability. He was a master builder and a wonderful thinker. He had many admirers. Will they kindly assist me in this matter, as above indicated? The plan proposed cannot be carried out without the co-operation of all parties interested. There will be a portrait as a frontispiece.

A. W. PARRY.

105 Lincoln Ave., Aurora, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Ice choked the inlets at all the cribs Thursday morning, and caused a serious water famine.

Miss Frances E. Willard has telegraphed to President Harrison advocating a pacificatory attitude toward Chili.

Charles White of Dunkirk, N. Y., has been appointed consulting engineer by the Society for the Prevention of Smoke.

Several firms and railroad companies were fined for violating the city's smoke ordinance.

Plans and specifications for a contagious-disease hospital to cost not more than $30,000 were ordered. The county board approved the contagious-disease-hospital plan.

Hannah Boyd, disappointed because her lover refused to marry her, has been lodged at the detention hospital a raving maniac.

District Attorney Michrist has gone to Washington to consult with the Attorney General's department with a view of prosecuting the whisky trust.

Michael Morarity has been found guilty of the murder of Officer Schlinger and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The Lincoln Park Commissioners concluded arrangements with the property-owners and will extend the North Shore drive ten blocks southward.

Plans have been ordered for two additional stories to the Court House.

COUNTRY.

The Rio Grande frontier was last week covered with snow, for the first time ever known.

Cedar Bluff College, at Franklin, Ky., was burned Thursday. The sixty female students escaped.

Owing to overproduction and difficulty in arriving at a satisfactory agreement in regard to freight rates, ten tint-glass houses closed down at Pittsburg, Pa., Thursday. Ten or twelve more are expected to put out their fires this week. It is a matter of conjecture when they may be started running again.

New York promoters of the World's Fair will ask for a hearing before the legislative committee, at which time it is hoped that arrangements will be made for an appropriation of $500,000.

Texas cattlemen, it is estimated, will lose $1,000,000 as a result of the blizzard.

The output of anthracite coal in 1891 was greater than during any previous years.

Governor Boies, of Iowa, was inaugurated for his second term Wednesday at Des Moines.

Friday the jury in the criminal libel suit of Senator M. S. Quay against the Pittsburg (Pa.) Post Publishing Company returned a verdict of guilty.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Jan. 18 to Jan. 23:

S B McGrew, E Blackburn, F A Armstrong, A W Austin, Rev G M Weng, M Woodward, A N Peters, H Hulbert, B Blachly, W B Graham, Rev D Morrow, R Stewart, W Skinner, Rev C R Hunt, J W Modlin, R P McGee, S Du-bois, G W Cooper, Mrs M Bryan, A Alexander, J Brand, A H Dornbier, J A Haines, J Killough, Mrs M Stegner, A S Aikin, Eld A D Freeman, S Dodge, C Johnson, B Tunnickliff, O N Hull, G J Graham, D W Cromer, A J Kniesley, H F Douthort, Ira Green, Mrs H C Smith, Rev O Newell, Mrs H W Hodgman, J P Phelps, Mrs S J Fletcher, W Hutchins, J Remington, T Fletcher, C F Grunewald, T Freeman, Mrs A B Richey, Miss M T Brown.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table with market reports for Chicago including Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rye, Bran, Hay, Butter, Cheese, Beans, Eggs, Seeds, Flax, Broom corn, Potatoes, Hides, Lumber, Wool, Cattle, Hogs, and Sheep.

NEW YORK.

Table with market reports for New York including Wheat, Corn, Oats, Eggs, Butter, and Wool.

KANSAS CITY.

Table with market reports for Kansas City including Cattle, Hogs, and Sheep.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help to those who are to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago I

MEN MAKE MISTAKES—FIGURES NEVER FAIL. ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR

—WILL— PREVENT MISTAKES, RELIEVE THE MIND, —SAVE— Labor, Time and Money, —AND— DO YOUR RECKONING

A READY CALCULATOR, BUSINESS ARITHMETIC and ACCOUNT-BOOK Combined.

This is unquestionably the most complete and convenient work on Figures, for PRACTICAL USE, ever published. It contains nearly all the SHORT CUTS known; Hundreds of Simple Rules and Original Methods for "Easy and Rapid Calculation," and Millions of Accurate Answers to Business Examples and to Practical Problems.

It sifts and Simplifies the whole science of Arithmetic, retaining only the Cream, in a nut-shell, as it were. Its Tables, Rules and Methods are all extremely simple, eminently useful, practical, and fully abreast with the age of steam and electricity.

Every one who prefers to take the Simplest, the Shortest and the Easiest way for doing his work, should possess a copy of this useful and convenient Pocket Manual. It will enable Everybody to become Proficient and Quick in Figures; and to many a young person, it may prove to be a stepping stone to a successful business career.

NO FARMER, MECHANIC OR BUSINESS MAN SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT, BECAUSE

IT WILL SHOW AT A GLANCE, WITHOUT THE USE OF PENCIL, PEN OR PAPER,

- The exact Interest on any sum, for any time, at any practical rate per cent. The equivalent of two or more discounts; as for instance, 33 1/3, 10, and 5 off, equals 43% off. The per cent of gain when goods are bought at a certain discount from, and sold at list prices. The per cent of gain or loss, when goods are sold at a discount from the marking price. The marking price, from which a certain discount may be given, and yet realize a certain % on cost. The per cent of gain, when buying, and selling again, at certain discounts from same price list. The Day of the Week, for any date in 300 yrs., besides hundreds of other very useful things. It gives all the Latest and Shortest methods known, besides many published for the first time, viz.: an Easy and Unerring process for "Adding long Columns;" Short Cuts in Multiplication and Division. Problems in Fractions, Interest, Percentage, Mensuration, etc., are usually solved with less than one-third the figures and labor, required by ordinary methods.

It is neatly printed on fine paper, and elegantly bound in "Pocket-book" form. The No. 2 binding contains a Silicate Slate and a practical "Account-book," which has self-instructing "Formulas" for recording Receipts, Expenditures, Purchases, Sales, etc. In fact, all about "Book-keeping" that is needed by the people. It will commend itself to every thoughtful and progressive mind, for its originality, simplicity and usefulness.

Hundreds of testimonials like the following have been received: "A new publication that must prove of incalculable benefit to the commercial world—unless the book itself can calculate its own worth—for it calculates almost everything."—Chicago Times

PRICES OF DIFFERENT STYLES OF BINDING.

- No. 1, Bound in Waterproof Leatherette, Beautifully Embellished in colors.....$ 50. No. 2, Fine Artificial Leather with pocket, Silicate Slate and Account-Book..... 75 No. 3, Am. Russia or Morocco, with pocket, Slate and Renewable Account-Book, 1.00 No. 4, Fine Russia or Mor., Gilded, " " " " 1.50

This valuable hand-book, No. 1, will be sent FREE to every CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBER who, with his renewal, sends a NEW subscription, BOTH AT REGULAR RATES.

Or it will be sent to any subscriber who pays $1.70 for the paper and the book. No. 3 and the paper for $2.00. No. 4 for $2.25.

No. 1 will be sent to any one sending two new subscribers; No. 3 for three, and No. 4 for four new subscribers, all at regular rates.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail price sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defense," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages: cloth, $1.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Give Ear to the plain facts about Pearlina, and then give Pearlina a chance to prove them, by giving it a fair trial. Nothing else will give the same result. It washes safely, as well as surely; it cleans carefully, as well as easily. It is as cheap as soap and better. Anything that can be washed, can be washed best with Pearlina. It lightens labor and does lightning work. As nearly as we can figure, about eight millions of women use it. Do you? You will sooner or later. Beware of imitations. 237 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

HOME AND HEALTH.

INJURY FROM WEARING VEILS.

Veils are sometimes hurtful in consequence of the coloring matter which they contain, and this peculiarity is not confined to crape and other black veils, as many suppose. Not long ago a young man from London sent as a present a wedding veil to his betrothed, but unfortunately the wedding did not occur at the time set. The young lady, however, adjusted the veil and wore it for a few hours and the result was an inflammation in both eyes which became so intense that it was finally necessary to remove one eye and she nearly lost the sight of the other. It was found upon investigation that the veil was saturated with poisonous matter. Other similar cases have occurred. There are other ways in which veils are harmful. Sometimes they contain little spots or dots which strain and trouble the eyes in the efforts to see through them or around them, and oculists tell us that this sometimes results in serious diseases of the eyes.—From a Lecture by Dr. J. H. Kellogg.

HOW TO DRINK MILK.

Some complain, says a contemporary, that they cannot drink milk without being "distressed by it." The most common reason why milk is not well borne is due to the fact that people drink it too quickly. If a glass of it is swallowed hastily, it enters the stomach and forms in one solid, curdled mass, difficult of digestion. If, on the other hand, the same quantity is sipped, and three minutes at least are occupied in drinking it, then, on reaching the stomach, it is so divided that when coagulated, as it must be by the gastric juice, while digestion is going on, instead of being in one hard, condensed mass, upon the outside of which only the digestive fluids can act, it is more in the form of a sponge, and in and out of the entire bulk the gastric juice can play freely and perform its functions.—Scientific American.

SAWING FOR EXERCISE.

I know from practical experience it invigorates the whole muscular and vascular system of chest and stomach, and by the hard breathing that it creates fully inflates the lungs. A son of ten years of age had a head largely out of proportion to his body, and his head was so liable to suffer or be affected from excess of blood or some other cause, I was alarmed, fearing some serious brain affection unless his body could be built up in proportion to his head. To accomplish this, I bought him a small wood-saw and buck, which he began to use, and continued to exercise with those and afterward with larger tools, and it was not long before his chest and body expanded and became in good proportion to his head, and he became a strong, robust, and well-formed young man. I had two other boys who exercised with the saw and buck to the great advantage of their health and strength. I also, in my youth and early manhood, used the wood-saw and buck with great benefit to my permanent health and muscular strength; and, though now at an advanced age, I have through life been exempt from all manner of diseases—never had a fever of any kind or any need of physicians. I therefore have a grateful feeling to the wood-saw and buck. I think every family ought to have a wood-saw and buck on their premises, and use it an hour or two every day, and I am sure they will find it the best doctor they ever had. Every boy and girl and man and woman should have some way to take that kind of exercise. If they do not want to saw wood, let them go through the wood-sawing motions with as much energy as possible.—Western Rural.

LAUNDRY NOTES.

The use of table mats and carving cloths will work wonders in the saving of table-cloths. Often a beautifully laundered damask cloth must be sent to the washtub after once using, because of one unlucky streak or stain. If hot dishes are never set upon the cloth, such accidents can usually be prevented. Palmetto mats can be bought for a trifle, or prettier ones can be crocheted of heavy crochet cotton. Carving cloths are now made beautiful with embroidery and drawn work; but quite good enough for home use are those made of butcher's linen, with a plain hem, neatly hemstitched.

Some one has wisely suggested that the reason towels so soon become soiled is, that soap and water and the wash-cloth have not performed their several functions properly. If none but perfectly clean hands and faces were dried on the bath-room roller, it could remain in its place twice as long as it does now, and be washed with much greater ease. And if the wash-cloth is thoroughly rinsed after each use, a good scalding is all it will need when wash day comes.—Exchange.

From the North to the South Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the preventive of colds.

An Ohio lady was so frightened by a snake that her glossy black hair turned white as snow. It was soon returned to its original color by Hall's Hair Renewer.

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato; P. R. Harris, Abbot, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 3/4 oz., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8 1/2 in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 12 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent, after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. If started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. This year I offer $500 Cash to any person producing a 3 1/2 lb. tomato. (It can be done.) Full directions how Mr. Harris grew his, with each order. Plant some, you may win the prize. All my seed is saved from large specimens.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE Is all head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP Is the earliest in the world, easy grown, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors.

My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $500 for a pansy blossom; $300 for a bean plant with 100 pods, and above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection will receive Free packet "FINEST IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO," and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onandaga Co. N.Y.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind. Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tire all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Sold by all druggists, $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar

WANTED! WANTED! WANTED!

Twenty Thousand Agents

FOR THE "AMERICAN HANDBOOK AND CITIZEN'S MANUAL."

The book is purely documentary, a whole library of startling information, a regular arsenal of facts and evidences, an all-round exposition of an active, aggressive and wide-spread movement, every item a text and every chapter the outline for a powerful sermon, speech or lecture. Influential journals, whole churches and strong organizations are interested in its successful career and extended circulation. It embraces the opinion of more than 100 well-known papers, as found before the public, and men and women high in church and state are thrown on the witness stand. The attitude and expression alone of such an array of powerful newspapers, eminent statesmen, learned divines, and noted reformers as are introduced to the reader would herald any publication and insure a wide hearing on any national question. The book will contain some 200 pages close print, more matter than many works of twice or thrice the size with larger type, pictures and wide margins. Price 40 cents, paper cover, postpaid; 35 cents by the dozen; and 25 cents by the hundred. Address orders to M. N. Butler, Avalon, Missouri.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20
Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20
The Royal Invitation. 20
Loyal Responses. 20
Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John Mc Neil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design1.25
Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons. 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons. 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 50
Twelve New Year Sermons. 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons. 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.
Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."
Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.
Separate volumes may be had if desired.
The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest, Ned Franks. White Bear's Den, Sheer Oil. Fairy Spider's Web, Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods, Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed, Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set2.10
Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set4.20
Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80
Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

[From the "Farm, Field and Stockman."]
HORTICULTURAL.

Have you looked at the apples lately? How are they keeping?

If it were in my power to speak a word in the ear of every farmer I would would say, give the boys a chance.—Leviston Journal.

A farmer in Missouri grafted a tomato into a potato vine and got two crops, one from the top and the other from the bottom.

The quality of vinegar from apples in a very dry season is no doubt better than during a very wet season when apples are more juicy.

There is no public expenditure in New England where so much money is wasted as in road repairing.—E. C. May. How is it in your neighborhood?

Ohio horticulturists ask the State Legislature to pass a law compelling owners of plum and cherry trees affected by black knot to destroy the infested branches.

If there are plenty of apples in the cellar, let the boys (girls too) have free access to them. They will preserve them "They" and "them" in this case may refer to "boys" or "apples" as suits you.

A Missouri subscriber asks how he can exterminate the moles that infest his lawn. We know of no better way than to set traps in their runs and give them hearty meals of corn soaked in arsenic.

Trying to grow two crops where only one formerly grew means that two shovelfuls of manure should be given instead of one. To secure the highest yield the land must be fed accordingly.

Country schools, if properly conducted, might impart a taste for country life. Instruction to children about animals, plants, flowers and fruit would interest them, and timely instruction as to the vagaries and absurdities of fashion would show them that country life was happier, in the main, than city life.—Ploughman.

A Wilcox, Pa., subscriber asks: "Is manure which has remained in a pile in the open air four or five years, free from drainage, thoroughly rotted, as valuable as manure which is not rotted?" If of equal quality when fresh, and has been under cover, we would take the well-rotted for garden crops on ordinary soils; otherwise the fresh. If for clay land, take the fresh.

AGRICULTURE.

To make a success of farming avoid extremes.

Texas has the largest wheat crop ever produced.

Ohio produced 45,063,480 bushels of wheat last year. Oats, 26,668,380.

Are you doing anything to have better roads in your neighborhood?

While the snow is on the ground is a good time to get up next year's wood supply.

Answering the Auburn, Ill., subscriber, will say that sweet clover will grow and stand the winters in Central Illinois.

A subscriber says he finds a grub hoe the best thing for prying off boards in tearing down barns, sheds and other structures.

You cannot change your system of farming at a bound—you must do it step by step. If your system is wrong take the first right step now.

We would not advise the Loami, Ill., subscriber to sow alsike clover on his meadow, or oats in the spring unless he harrows or rolls it, or both.

The total amount of grain harvested in the United States last year is 3,537,475,800 bushels, an excess over the previous year's crop of 1,036,822,800 bushels.

A Kansas subscriber asks which is the cheaper, for a farmer to burn corn at twenty-eight cents a bushel or coal at $7 per ton, without stating what kind of coal. If good bituminous lump coal, coal is, for corn at twenty-eight cents

FOR THE TOILET

There is no more useful or elegant article than Ayer's Hair Vigor—the most popular and economical hair-dressing in the market. It causes the hair to grow abundantly and retain the beauty and texture of youth; prevents baldness, heals troublesome humors of the scalp and keeps it clean, cool, and healthy. Both ladies and gentlemen everywhere prefer Ayer's Hair Vigor to any other dressing for the hair. Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, E. Pitts-
Ask For ton, Me., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time, and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and falling hair, so that I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor, my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor to any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair." *

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

$1.75 ONLY

The CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE one year and

ALL AROUND THE YEAR 1892.

Entirely New Design in Colors, by J. Pauline Sunter. Printed on heavy cardboard, gilt edges, with chain, tassels, and ring. Size, 4 1/4 x 5 1/2 inches. Boxed. Price

50 CENTS, SENT POSTPAID.

As fresh in design—even outshining its brilliant host of predecessors, which have been sent out each year to the calendar-loving world—as it is fresh in the fair whiteness and the soft delicacy of its workmanship. Each month contains not only the calendar, but a design both charming and appropriate, and an equally timely sentiment. See editorial comment on page 6 Cynosure Nov. 26th.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

per bushel is ten dollars a ton, and he has the cobs left, which may be used with the coal.

An Albany county farmer placed on each bale of hay shipped the information that it was grown on gravelly loam and was free from dust and chaff—with name and address, and for this got $1.50 above the market price.

"Quizz" asks if Mammoth clover sown in the spring will give a profitable crop in the fall. We think it would be better for the land and the succeeding crops to let the first year's growth remain uncut, though quite a bit of hay might be obtained in the fall of the first year.

A Monmouth subscriber says he finds the following a handy and rapid way to take up fence posts: Place a "horse" or trestle near the post; hitch a chain about the post near the ground; hook a crowbar into this, and with the horse as a fulcrum the post has got to come.

The benefit which a beet sugar factory confers upon a community is not confined alone to the sugar which it makes. A beet sugar factory is a veritable experimental station. By compelling farmers to adopt scientific methods of culture for beets, it induces them to adopt scientific culture for every other crop.—Industrial American.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pros. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

DECISIVE Baking Powder Tests

The United States Official

Investigation of Baking Powders, made, by authority of Congress, in the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., furnishes the highest authoritative information as to which powder is the best. The Official Report Shows the ROYAL to be a cream of tartar baking powder, superior to all others in leavening power (U. S. Dept. Agriculture Bulletin 13, p. 599).

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The nude in art will be suppressed at the coming annual exhibition of the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts.

George Theodore Berthon, a celebrated Canadian portrait painter, died Tuesday at Toronto, aged 86.

Tuesday, M. H. DeYoung was elected president of the International Association of Press Clubs.

Luke Tiernon, a St. Louis tinsmith, claims one-fifth of a billion dollars' worth of real estate in the heart of Chicago.

Christopher F. Cranch, the painter, of Cambridge, Mass., died Wednesday.

Near Port Huron, Mich., Wednesday, several barns belonging to F. A. Beard burned, together with eighteen horses and thirty head of cattle. Loss $12,000; partly insured.

Robert Barnett, a prominent Democrat of Massachusetts, who spent two years in Chili, says that it would take not fewer than $50,000 soldiers to produce any effect whatever on Chili.

Congressman Mills, of Texas, has resigned his chairmanship appointments in a letter to Speaker Crisp.

The Oregon Pacific railroad was sold Wednesday at Sheriff's sale for $1,000,000.

The total production of pig-iron in 1891 was 8,279,870 gross tons against 9,202,703 gross tons in 1890. The total production of Bessemer steel rails was 1,218,874 gross tons, a decrease of 577,615 gross tons from the production in 1890.

A woman aged 62 years, who claims to be the daughter of General Patterson, of Pennsylvania, a millionaire, and to be the woman who carried the American flag over the walls of Chapultepec in the Mexican war, is living in destitute circumstances in Sioux City, Iowa.

Associate Justice Bradley, of the United States Supreme Court, died Friday at Washington.

Three hundred mules and sixteen horses were burned Friday in Sparks Brothers' mule market at Kansas City. Loss about $35,000.

Successful tests of a new war explosive called terrorite have been made at the Presidio Military Reservation in California.

The committee appointed by the Presbyterian General Assembly to revise the confession of faith adjourned without a day Friday.

Two Japanese World's Fair Commissioners arrived at San Francisco Friday en route to Chicago to secure space for the erection of a national building.

Thousands of cattle are starving to death in the hills of Southern Idaho.

William McHenry a traveling salesman of Cleveland, Friday received four telegrams within an hour, each announcing the death of a brother.

On account of his recent illness, Sir Edwin Arnold has been obliged to cancel all of his engagements outside of New York.

The details of a new process for making fuel gas from coal at a cost of not exceeding 5 cents a thousand, have been made public in Springfield.

FOREIGN.

Several severe shocks of earthquake were felt at Rome, which caused a panic in the more crowded quarters of the city. At Civita Lavigna the Lanuvium of the ancients), eighteen miles southeast of Rome, where there are a number of Roman antiquities, the historical tower fell.

Rudyard Kipling, the well-known story-writer, and Miss Balestier, sister of Wolcott Balestier, the young American novelist who died recently at Dresden, were married Monday in London.

Dr. Bredermann, director of the chemical laboratory in the University of Berlin, killed his betrothed Tuesday, and then committed suicide.

Chancellor Von Caprivi announced in the lower house of the Prussian diet Thursday that the state on military grounds would never relinquish its control of the railways.

During week before last 531 deaths were reported in Vienna as compared with 221 the preceding week. The increase was due to influenza. In Copenhagen 954 new cases and 57 deaths were reported. The disease is raging at the Cape of Good Hope, and is increasing in virulence in Paris.

The obsequies of Cardinal Manning took place Thursday morning in Brompton Oratory, London, and were attended by distinguished personages. The interment was in Kensal Green Cemetery, thousands of persons walking in the procession, among them representatives of labor unions. Hundreds of ecclesiastics took part in the ceremonies.

During week before last 3,206 deaths occurred in London. This is double the average prevailing from October to the middle of December. The increase is due mainly to the respiratory diseases. The number of deaths attributed directly to influenza is 271.

The funeral of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, late heir apparent to the throne of England, was held at London, Wednesday.

The government of Russia is about to close all the Catholic churches and convents in the provinces of Podolia and Volhynia. They add that the authorities have already closed the Franciscan monastery at Dederkda and the Carmelite convent at Dubno, dissolved the congregations of monks and nuns, and conveyed all the inmates of both institutions to Warsaw. Fourteen hundred emigrants from the famine-stricken provinces recently arrived at Tiomen, Siberia, en route to Tobolsk, which lies 120 miles to the northwest of Tiomen. These unfortunates are in a most desperate plight. Their money is exhausted, they lack food and clothing, and many of them are suffering with different diseases.

A German expedition, under the command of Herr Oscar Borchert, is about to start from Zanzibar for the Victoria Nyanza.

John Couch Adams, F. R. S., the well-known astronomer, died in London Thursday.

French troops in the Soudan had an engagement with the tribe of Samory January 11, in which the natives were defeated with a loss of several hundred killed. The French loss was six killed and 30 wounded.

At Dieppedalle, in the department of Seine-Inferieure, France, Friday, a section of rock 150 yards long fell from the top of the precipice upon some houses below. Two women were crushed to death and eighteen other persons were injured.

Fifty persons were killed or injured by the falling of a church roof during services at Slobodskoi, Russia, Friday.

The way to cure Rheumatism is to purify the blood. And to do this, take the best blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla. Hosts of friends testify to cures of rheumatism it has effected.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, effective, do not cause pain or gripe.

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

$3.50 PER DAY ALL WINTER

Can be made easy by any energetic person selling "CHAMPION PASTE STOVE POLISH." No brush ready for use. An article every housekeeper will buy. 216,000 packages sold in Philadelphia. Exclusive agency for one or more counties given competent person. Write to-day enclosing stamp for particulars. You will never regret it. Address, CHAMPION CO., 46 N. Fourth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN ME yet? Better write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Still Another Factory at HARVEY

A. J. SWEENEY & SON'S IRON WORKS from Wheeling, West Virginia, have agreed to move their extensive works to Harvey and employ men to whom first year's wages will be $180,000.00. Their location is just west of Academy Addition. This will bring hundreds more of mechanics to Harvey, and add largely to value of lots. Always buy Real Estate from first hands. Save commission to agents. Be sure you get a straight Warranty Deed.

Do not fail to secure plat of this wonderful Temperance town with our price lists of lots around the Academy—THE EDUCATIONAL CENTER—at once if you have not already done so.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots
WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. I. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 21

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,136.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	SELECTED:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Is the Bible the Word of God?..... 3
The Imbroglia With Chili. 8	Masons Please Answer... 3
Wanted—A General Revival of Law and Order..... 8	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
Reform in Politics..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Masonic Glorification... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Masonic Intolerance... 8	Is This a Christian Nation?; From a Colored Reformer; Which is Worst—The Saloon or the Lodge; The "Cynosure" in the Indian Territory..... 5,6
The Lodge Upheaval... 9	LITERATURE..... 6
A Word With You..... 9	OBITUARY..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
An Interesting Mission. 1	THE N. C. A..... 7
The Higher Criticism... 2	THE HOME..... 10
From the Fuhkien Province, China..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Saved by a Song..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
REFORM NEWS:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
From the New England Agent; From the College Agent; Notes by the Way; From Bro. Wm. Fenton; The Washington Agent in New York; A Reformer in Iowa..... 5,6	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
	MARKETS..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

A dispatch from Alton, Ill., January 26, notes the opening there, on that day, of "the first Masonic school of instruction which has been held in this vicinity for years," by the "Board of Grand Examiners." Complete instruction in Masonic rituals—forty-eight degrees, guaranteed work—can be obtained at this office for $2.50—less than the railroad fare to Alton.

Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts has reduced his reasons for making Sunday a legal day of rest to seven, as follows: 1. Because it is a law of nature. 2. Because it is a law of the State. 3. Because it is a law of the church. 4. Because it is a law of apostolic example. 5. Because it is a law of Christ. 6. Because it is a law of the world's Sinatic Constitution. 7. Because it is a law of Eden, where "the Sabbath was made for man."

Will friends who send obituary notices to the Cynosure for insertion kindly make them as brief as possible? It is not every reader who becomes interested in the loss of a good man or woman, whatever claim he or she may have upon us all for tender remembrance; and sometimes the space given to a verbose biography might be advantageously used in preparing the living for leading better lives before their own obituaries are written.

Miss Willard not only telegraphed to President Harrison her own desires to have the Chilian emeute settled by arbitration, but through her instrumentality, in one day, telegrams were sent to presidents of the W. C. T. U., in forty-four States and five Territories, urging them to add the protest of their respective constituency against a resort to arms in bringing Chili to terms. "Blessed are the peacemakers!" It was well done.

An intelligent correspondent of the New York Voice makes a very pertinent suggestion in relation to the proposed Sunday opening of the Chicago Columbian Exposition of 1893 for the benefit of the working people. This is what he says, and it seems to leave nothing more to be said: "One of the excuses for Sunday opening of the Exposition is that the laboring people of Chicago cannot visit it on any other day. They limit this excuse to Chicago people, knowing how absurd such a plea would be as regards the laboring people of the rest of the United States. I have been young, but now I am old, yet have I never seen a circus without patrons from the laboring classes because they came on a week-day afternoon. Have you?"

The Sunday opening of the World's Fair is still a living topic of discussion, and is occupying a fair share of public attention. The belief that the closing of the Fair on Sunday would entail loss upon the management is the principal reason for the antagonism with which the movement is meeting; but former experiences in this class of enterprises do not sustain the opponents of this Christian measure. An open Fair on Sunday, with unlimited liquor-selling at the Fair restaurants, would be a national disgrace.

A professedly Christian church organ in St. Louis seems to wonder why the Cynosure should so persistently oppose secret societies, "especially as long as they are doing some good and no harm." The editor says: "We are not a member of any secret society, never have been, and do not expect to be." Then how does he know that these societies do "no harm and some good?" Very many of the writers for the Cynosure have been members of these secret orders, and, from their experiences, are familiar with the evils which they denounce. Their testimony ought, therefore, to be accepted as final.

The Voice of Masonry for February contains these three brilliants of the first water: "Freemasonry has no affiliation with wrong, in any form; it associates only with good, and hence all Freemasons are to be 'good and true.'" "The Cynosure is incurably false, and will never quit slandering and libeling Freemasonry. It knows nothing of the meaning of truth." "If Masons practice all the sublime teachings of the Masonic degrees and orders, then the future of Freemasonry is second only to that of pure and undefiled religion." Who says that Freemasonry murders its recalcitrant members, supports its respectability by prevarication and hypocrisy, or perpetuates pagan worship in its lodges? A cloud of witnesses.

The announcement of the death of Rev. Chas. H. Spurgeon at a late hour on Sunday evening last, although not unexpected, brings sorrow to many hearts in many lands. Aside from his sacred calling, in which he had labored long, earnestly and effectually, he had also conferred honor upon English literature by the force and purity of his writings. The influence of his personal magnetism upon all who came within its circle was of a kind to inspire cheerfulness and courage in those who were striving to serve God. In his religious teachings the skeptic and the worldly-minded received but little encouragement. As the servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, he ever manifested unswerving fidelity to his Master, in plainness of speech and sincerity. His death is a loss to the entire religious world.

No church is better than its creed; no secret society is better than its obligations. If the church requires the worship of any deity other than God the Creator and Preserver of mankind, it promotes and perpetuates a false worship. If it ignores the divinity of Christ as one with God the Father, it is not a Christian church. Hence, we are not surprised to find a Unitarian pastor in this city exchanging pulpits with a Jewish Rabbi last Sunday. Romanism again and again sacrifices Christ in the mass, and exalts his mother to his mediatorial office, and so teaches a spurious Christianity—the worship of a dead Christ rather than a risen, living, all-efficient Saviour. Freemasonry perpetuates a host of monstrous pagan mysteries, teaches salvation without Christ, and banishes his name from its rituals, while its obligations require its adherents to murder their brethren who reveal its secrets. Now what fellowship can a true Christian have with such churches or such societies? Yet the N. C. A. and the Cynosure are blamed by the church and the world for warning the unwary against these abominations!

On the third page of this issue we reproduce from the Chicago Congregational News an article by Rev. J. Blanchard, asking and answering in his own felicitous manner—"Is the Bible the Word of God?" It is matter for congratulation that so many readers of the Cynosure can heartily respond to his earnest utterances in the affirmative, and testify by their personal experiences to the genuineness of the Word and the gracious enlightenment of its Author, whereby they are enabled to walk in God's way of holiness, in finding which "wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err." We suppose that even that most foolish of wayfaring men, the one who figures so prominently in the exaltation ceremonies of the Master Mason's degree, could discover this excellent "way" much more easily than the friends of "Hiram Abiff" can by his directions find the Master's rubbishy grave. But, seriously, what a comfort have those who accept the Bible as the Word of God, believe it and obey it, in the fact that they will have far less to unlearn in the future world than those who have habitually rejected its claims to divine authorship! The time wasted in criticising the Bible, if spent in searching it with a heart-felt desire to understand it, would make thousands wise unto salvation who now halt between not only two but a dozen erroneous opinions, religiously befogged.

AN INTERESTING MISSION.

BY HUGH CORK.

I am Lumbermen's Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Wisconsin, and the work of myself and assistant, just now, is visiting the logging camps, distributing papers, tracts, Bibles and Testaments. The needs of this work are very great. These men are warm-hearted, and work like slaves. It makes my heart ache to think that the saloon-keepers are to get the most of their hard-earned money.

After supper we take our little organ, play and sing for the boys; then talk to them of Him who came to give joy and peace and comfort to weary humanity. Never have I seen men listen so attentively. Every pipe is laid aside, every oath is silenced, and often, as we sing some old familiar hymn, they heartily join us. These men, whom all effort seems impossible to reach in the summer, can be touched easily here. Yesterday morning one man did not wait till we were dressed before he sought to tell us he wanted to come to the Lord.

This morning, while studying the Word by ourselves, the shanty boss, a Canadian-French Catholic, came to us and told us he could find no help in the Romish church to enable him to overcome the terrible habit of strong drink. His friends had told him to "go often to the confessional," but it did him no good, he said. "And now," said he, "if there be a God, and I know there is, I want to go to him, for then I can tell him my troubles myself, and maybe he'll help me." The Spirit enabled us to reveal the truth to him, and gladly did he accept a Bible, and, best of all, accepted the dear Saviour as his helper.

The men thank us for our visits and the reading matter is highly appreciated, especially the tracts. There ought to be twenty men in this work among these 1,000 camps, instead of two. We need money for tracts. These silent messages are doing marvelous things here. Has not some servant of the Lord at least a few cents to help us in tracts? If so, send it to me at Eau Claire, Wis., care of Y. M. C. A. May we have your prayers?

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER.

The Bible has been received, as a supernatural revelation from God, by his people in all ages. Under the Mosaic dispensation, the inspiration of the prophets was confirmed by miracles, again and again; and sometimes messengers were sent to them, directly from heaven, to make known God's will.

In the Gospel dispensation, Jesus Christ, the great Author of it all, was one that had always been a resident of heaven; who, with supreme wisdom and divine power, laid the foundations of the New Testament. And the inspiration of its writers was also attested by many miracles.

The Bible, then, is God's book. He is the Author of it, and as such, his people receive it. And the true child of God desires to understand it, as he gave it. But it comes to men in human language, and is, therefore, liable to be misunderstood by finite minds. And a vast variety of explanations, and a great discord of voices, has arisen, both in the church and out of it; and many critics have gone to great extremes to sustain their theories of interpretation.

The common criticism accepts the Bible as a real revelation, to be received for just what its Author said and meant.

The naturalistic criticism rejects inspiration and miracles, and holds the Bible to be like any other book, written by man.

The higher criticism holds to the inspiration and miracles of the Bible; but, at the same time, it teaches that the Bible is full of imperfections and mistakes, thus impairing the credit of the prophets and apostles, and the confidence of mankind in the Lord Jesus Christ. And this view is proven mainly from the historical romances and the legends of the ancients. It assumes, also, a high judicial tone as to what is rational or reasonable, calling the common Christian view the lower, and its own the higher, criticism.

The higher criticism appears to me to operate much as a land surveyor who lays down his compass and chain, and goes up in a balloon, with a parachute, to find the corner of an old survey. It may be very well to observe the general outlook, and to mark the noticeable points of the landscape: but we want the actual facts—the proof of compass and chain, before removing the old landmarks. The real evidence we would always receive. To meet the restless and skeptical tendency of our time, God has, providentially, brought to light many things hidden from past ages. Thus, geology fully confirms the order of creation, as given in the first chapter of Genesis. Petrifications of the earliest creation lie in a lower strata, and things created later in the upper ones, in their order. The discovery of the tombs of the Pharaohs, and the cuneiform tablets, has done much to confirm the veracity of Moses, and to explode the theories of the higher criticism. And the remains recovered from the ancient ruins of Assyria have accomplished much the same result for the later history of Israel. And it is now admitted by the best scholars "that the chief promises of the higher criticism, as to the New Testament, have failed." But it has done much harm in arousing a restless spirit of disbelief.

There is quite a serious discussion agitating the Presbyterian church, at this time, about the teaching of Prof. Briggs, of Union Seminary, New York. While he admits the inspiration of the Bible, the Professor magnifies the many errors that he finds in it. Indeed, if his theories were generally received, it would tend to break up the foundation of Protestant orthodoxy.

Prof. Briggs teaches that there is no probation for mankind in the present life. When man fell, probation ended, and there was no more free choice, and only election and reprobation remained. This is hard to believe, when we remember the continued invitations and warnings of the Master and the Gospel proclamation, "He that believeth shall be saved."

Prof. Briggs, in his doctrine of an intermediate state, may be said to really teach a probation after death. His words are: "Believers who enter the middle state enter sinless, but they are the same persons, with all the evil habits of mind, disposition and temper they had when they left the world." Of course, they must be purified from all these things before they are admitted into heaven; and what is this but a purgatory? The catechism of the Presbyterian church says expressly: "The souls of the righteous are, at their death, made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory."

FROM THE FUHKIEN PROVINCE, CHINA.

BY REV. M. C. WILCOX, MISSIONARY.

Since I last wrote to the Cynosure this old empire, as is well known, has been pretty thoroughly stirred up by riots in several parts of the country. The principal disturbances took place in the Yang-tse Valley, fully 500 miles north of the mission field in which it is my privilege to labor; yet we naturally felt a keen interest in our sister missions that suffered so much. Moreover, for a time it seemed as if we in this part of the land were not to escape these troubles. As in Central China, so on the streets in Foochow—our provincial capital—vile placards were posted. But the placards were immediately torn down, soldiers were stationed at exposed points, and at the repeated request of the various consuls of the port the imperial edict was published far and wide. To make everything doubly secure, the consuls telegraphed for gunboats, which promptly came but were not needed, as the evil had been "nipped in the bud."

It is difficult to say what were the real causes of these uprisings, but the opinion of the best informed here is that the Ko Lo Hwoi, a strong and widely extending secret society, is the offending party. It is said that this society had at its origin a benevolent aim, but now it has become a powerful agency for political agitation and will not rest satisfied until the present Manchu dynasty is overthrown and the empire ruled by sovereigns of Chinese blood. It is feared by many that the end of China's troubles has not yet been reached, for, as some assert, this Ko Lo society contains men of all ranks and orders. Even some of the highest officials are suspected of sympathy with its objects, while others are thought to have actually joined it. The opinion of the well-informed is that this society is seeking to involve the government in endless troubles in order to take advantage of its embarrassments and throw off the yoke of the hated Manchus.

Thus far no serious injury has been sustained by Christian missions in this land. On the other hand, we have been furnished with a striking example of God's power to make the wrath of man praise him. The imperial edict, before alluded to, contains a strong commendation of Christianity and several explicit declarations concerning the rights under the treaty of missionaries and of native converts. One of the difficulties in securing the rights and protection of native Christians has been the tendency on the part of the mandarins to evade points clearly stated in this edict. Notice a few of these points: "The right of foreign missionaries to promulgate their religions in China is provided for by treaty and in decrees which were previously issued; the authorities of all the provinces were commanded to afford them protection as circumstances required," etc.

"The religions of the West (Christian countries) have for their object the inculcation of virtue; and though people become converts, they still remain Chinese subjects and continue to be amenable to the jurisdiction of the local authorities."

"There is no reason why there should not be harmony between the ordinary people and the adherents of foreign religions; and the whole trouble arises from lawless ruffians fabricating baseless stories and making an opportunity for creating a disturbance. These bad characters exist everywhere."

Certainly it is a glorious victory for the truth to have the high and mighty Emperor of China, under his great seal, say such things of Christianity and of its enemies. For many years a foul tract, entitled, "A Death-Blow to Corrupt Doctrines," has been scattered broadcast over the empire. Ten years ago a Christian ship-captain showed me a translation of this tract, which he carefully kept under lock and key. The vilest paper in Europe or America would not dare to publish that abominable production. Yet, though it was scattered throughout this beautiful "Flower Kingdom," and was one of the most serious obstacles to mission work, the authorities never took the slightest pains to refute those horrible and vile stories until the riots they provoked compelled them to take action. Now read again what the Emperor's proclamation, as above quoted, says about the "lawless ruffians," etc.

The government of this old empire has an extraordinary stability, and cannot be easily overthrown. I believe a brighter future for mission work is near at hand, and that the next decade will show a marvelous advance. The Foochow Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has just been held. During the eight months and a half since our last meeting we have had an accession of 887 members and probationers, whereas the first ten years' labor and expenditure of the Methodist mission and that of the American Board—from 1847 to 1857—resulted each in but one conversion. The Gospel leaven is working in this great mass of heathenism with an accelerating activity. Pray for China and for all who are here trying to scatter the precious seed of Gospel truth!

Kucheng, China, Dec. 3, 1891.

SAVED BY A SONG.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

I am a native of New England; was born and spent my early years—that is, from childhood to early womanhood—among the White Mountains. I had taught the district school in the town where I lived for several terms, when I suddenly received a letter from an uncle in Kansas, inviting me to go and spend the summer with him. The incident I am about to relate occurred during the second week of my arrival. I remember it well; it was the first week of my school.

Auntie and uncle went away to town, ten miles distant, and left me alone all day. It was Saturday. Ah, that prairie! All around it was like a sea—not a tree, not a hill, not even a knoll. I stood and watched the carriage until it disappeared from my sight. "Don't be afraid, little girl," uncle had said; "we will be back by 10 o'clock." It was a long and weary day. At last, night drew on, and I sat in the door of the cabin, watching the sun and the waving sea of prairie grass. Soon the evening came. I was weary, and entering the little room where we lived I laid down on the bed and fell asleep.

When I awoke it was nearly dark. The windows were open, and through the thin muslin curtains that hung before the bed I could see the stars in the sky. Suddenly a shadow fell across the floor, and, looking up, I felt a thrill of horror. A large, heavily-built man sat in the window. One leg was thrown over the window-sill; his left hand was raised, shading his eyes as he peered into the room. His right hand held a rifle at "right shoulder shift;" his sombrero was pushed back, disclosing a dark and handsome, but sinister, face. He was a picturesque-looking fellow, but, somehow, I did not feel pleased to see him just then. He waited a moment; then slipping through the window, he seated himself in the rocking-chair that I had occupied all the afternoon. What were my feelings as I lay there I cannot tell. I waited, but the man did not stir.

As I lay there trembling, I looked towards the foot of the bed and saw the white teeth of my organ gleaming through the darkness, and a sudden inspiration seized me. Stepping carelessly from the bed I walked to the instrument, sat down and ran my fingers lightly over the keys. I felt rather than saw the man start with surprise as I stepped from the bed. As my fingers pressed the keys my courage rose, and the next moment there burst from my lips and sprang from the keys the wild, wailing melody of James G. Clark's song, "Marion Moore":

"Gone art thou, Marion, Marion Moore!—
Gone, like the bird in the autumn that singeth;
Gone, like the flower by the wayside that springeth;

Gone, like the leaf of the ivy that clingeth
Round the lone rock on a storm-beaten shore."

I wonder if James G. Clark ever sang that song at his concerts with half the pathos and power that I gave it that night. My voice must have sounded like the wailing of a lost soul.

A moment of stillness; my fingers wandered lightly over the keys, and I sang softly, scarcely above my breath, Samuel Lover's song: "My Mother Dear." Tenderly I sang the refrain:

"My mother dear! my mother dear!
My gentle, gentle mother!"

Was it fancy, or did I hear a sob behind me? A few moments of stillness, and then my fingers fell upon the keys with strengthful pressure, and the silent room rang with the sweet, thrilling melody: "Jesus, lover of my soul." Never before had I sung as I did that night. All the horror and loneliness of my situation found vent in my voice.

As I sang the lines, "Cover my defenceless head with the shadow of thy wing," my voice faltered and broke; my head dropped upon my breast; my hands fell from the keys, and I felt the tears raining down my cheeks. Then I heard a step behind me; a heavy hand was laid upon my shoulder, and a deep voice said: "Madame, God bless you, whoever you are! You have saved me from a fearful crime. I came here to rob the master of this house, and to murder him if he showed fight; but, God bless you! I would not harm a hair of your head! I have shot down many a man in fair fight, but, God be praised! I never yet stained my hands with the blood of women and children. I have a dear, old mother among the New Hampshire hills, and for her sake I mean to lead a different life. God bless you!" The hand that rested upon my shoulder was lifted and placed gently for an instant upon my head. I felt his moustache brush my cheek, and the next instant he sprang through the window and was gone!

Steamburg, N. Y.

IS THE BIBLE THE WORD OF GOD?

This question now stirs the churches in Europe and America. Christian and Jew, Protestant and Papist are drawn into the whirlpool of its discussion. Dr. Harper, Baptist, backed by millions of money; Prof. Curtis, Congregationalist, of the Chicago Theological Seminary, and Herrick Johnson, Presbyterian, of the McCormick Seminary, with a learned multitude on both sides of the Atlantic, meet in "Biblical Institutes, for Bible study, under the pretentious name of Higher Criticism. They thus by their acknowledged piety and learning eclipse our theological seminaries which have been endowed to teach us the Bible, and under pretense of Bible study, they attack the hitherto supposed authorship and inspiration of the books which make up our Bible. Christ taught the Bible to "unlearned and ignorant men;" and Paul, though excelling in learning all the other writers of the Scriptures, except perhaps Moses, "came not with man's wisdom," and warned his hearers to "beware" of being spoiled by "philosophy." Yet these brethren summon us to the bar of a "criticism" "higher" than the seminaries of Christendom; and promise to unsettle and resettle facts which Ezra and his associates, men guided by God himself, substantially settled 2,500 years ago, and which have been acted upon with high and holy advantage ever since! We object to the course of these respected brethren.

1. It is irrational. It is as if members of a legislature, assuming that nothing had been settled by the reports of committees of revision adopted and acted upon perhaps for centuries, should propose to take up the whole body of the law, and settle by historic criticism what is law and what is not, instead of legislating to meet the present wants of the people. Ezra, Nehemiah and their compeers, aided by men called "prophets" by Christ himself, put together most of the thirty-nine books which make our Old Testament; and, in the face of a world of idol worshipers, they have sent us down through the ages a Bible whose ideas now govern, or would govern if men who believe it were consistent, two-thirds of our whole globe! Now these beloved brethren have nothing like this to show us by which to challenge our belief in their "Higher Criticism." They stand at this end of the ages. They were not there when the books were put together; and if they were as capable and holy men as Ezra, he has immensely the advantage of them in Bible making. The most they can do, all they will do, is, to cast suspicion upon and tear down what has been done. Their cause is, therefore, irrational.

2. But it is worse than irrational; their method is absurd; as absurd as for political "higher critics" to deny the divine guidance of the 11 majority in a little convention of 121 men in Albany, N. Y., who started the Liberty party in 1840. These political critics would speak against our fifty years' national success. True, Myron Holley, who started anti-slavery politics, failed in business. Gerrit Smith was in some things erratic, and Abolitionists often blundered. All this and more is true. But the slavery party hung the United States with black crape, while anti-slavery voters have covered it with flowers slowly fading into fruit.

Eleven eminent British scholars, led by venerable Archdeacon Farrar are out in a book on "In What Sense is the Bible the Word of God?" These distinguished writers speak highly of the Bible; and one of them, Principal Cairns, believes it as we have it, a divine book, while the rest consider it mixed. American Congregational churches, in receiving members, commonly read to them: "We believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are given by inspiration of God." And but for these books, Europe and America to-day would, like Africa, be eating snails and worshipping devils. And spite of errors in translation and mistakes of copyists, these books give us, as they stand, supreme love to God and equal love to man, and Christ's mission, "glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good will to men." And these will yet heal the nations.

3. But we object to these respected brethren that their method is not Christ's. Christ's "Biblical Institutes" were for "unlearned and ignorant men;" theirs for "higher critics," who, as a rule, do not apply their learning to removing "the strongholds of Satan," which is the intent, object and end of Bible warfare and "weapons." In this they follow neither Christ nor his apostles. Fifty years ago there were millions of people in the United States, colored and of mixed hue, who were not married, with the known and terrible consequences to morals and religion. The theological seminaries of this country at that time refused their students leave to have a monthly prayer meeting to pray for the removal of slavery. At that time the Taylor and Tyler controversy moved the churches of New England, and "the Albert Barnes Case" kept the whole great Presbyterian church engrossed about doctrinal "criticisms," which are now forgotten. That was the devil's method of keeping the churches from removing slavery and preventing the war. Sabbath-breaking, narcotics, lodges, and liquor, now obstruct the Gospel as slavery did fifty years ago. Are we to have another deluge of learned criticism to shelter "the strongholds of Satan" by keeping the best men and best minds of the country busy about Biblical trifles?

What, then, is the true method? How shall the American masses rest their faith in the inspiration of the Bible on clear and substantial ground? The answer is, not by drag-nets drawn over antiquity, but by Christ, and by him alone! The soil of the United States from Plymouth Rock to the Pacific Bluffs is owned by deeds dated "in the year of our Lord." And infidels, even, admit that he was the truth. And he proves our Bibles to be "the Word of God." Our Old Testament was the Bible endorsed by Christ and treated by him with the most profound reverence. Both Jews and Christians have had that same Bible ever since. They have the same now. And if either party had altered it materially, the world would have heard of it. Christ told the Sadducees that "God" spoke to Moses (Mark 12:26) and that Moses "wrote" of him. (John 5:46.) And throughout the Old Testament, God everywhere appears speaking; and Christ endorsed all that, when he said "The Scripture cannot be broken;" and, in the same verse, he calls that "Scripture" "the Word of God" (John 10:35). Why should these critics query and question whether the Old Testament is the "Word of God" when Christ, in express terms, calls it so? Is their learning to outweigh the words of Christ?

So much for the inspiration of the Old Testament; the very thirty-nine books which the Jews had when Christ was teaching in Palestine, and which we have now!

But are the twenty-seven New Testament books also the Word of God? Answer, Yes. Christ told his apostles, they should receive power to be "witnesses;" that is, power to tell and write the truth (Acts 1:8), and that power came down on them from God at Pentecost. That made their words "the Word of God." He also told them when taken before magistrates: "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you." (Matt. 10:20.) And these men all endorse the Old Testament as what "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And these very books, as we now have them, have brought Europe and America from skins and acorns to the clothing and food we now have!

"But then our books are translations, and not the original Chaldaic, Hebrew and Greek in which they were inspired."

Ans. So the laws of England were once written in Latin; but they were translated into English, and were laws of England still, and England went on till now her realm never sees the sun set.

The Old Testament endorses the New, and the New the Old; and Christ is the Author of both. Before his crucifixion he taught his disciples the Old Testament, and after his resurrection he "opened their understandings" and taught them that the New was fulfilling it, thus making them one book—The Bible. Hence, one hour with a Reference Bible, comparing Scripture with Scripture, and aided by the Holy Spirit, will teach an ordinary man more about "the Word of God" than a age with "higher critics."

"But unless we heed our Biblical scholars, Christianity will sink into popular contempt from the ignorance of its teachers."

The answer is: The German universities have done more to make the Bible contemptible than all other causes since Luther rescued it from the convent of Erfurt. Dr. Paulus, born in 1761, made the Bible ridiculous by his simple, flat Rationalism. Rosenmuller, a few years later, commenting on the Gospel, according to Luke, who says of Christ in the desert, "In those days he did eat nothing," curtly remarks, "Radicius et baccis, sustinetur non dubie." (He lived on roots and berries, no doubt.) Tholuck, who was born forty years later (1799), was in the reaction from Paulus' shallow and shameless "Historico-Criticism," and was accounted evangelical. But no revival followed. He supplied himself and guests freely, after dinner, with wine and tobacco; and his pupils fought duels while preparing for the pulpit. And these men, and others like them, have originated our schools of "Higher Criticism." The term, I think, originated with Dr. Paulus. Mormonism itself can scarcely be more fatal.—J. Blanchard.

MASONS PLEASE ANSWER.

According to Masonic rituals and resolutions, departed Masons are uniformly represented as having entered "the grand lodge above." What are cowans to understand by such talk?

Will some Masonic minister or high priest please answer the following queries, and so enlighten very many who are "wondering after this beast."

1. Are all Masons saved? If so, on what ground are they saved?
2. Is the grand lodge above a separate department of "the house not made with hands," an upper story with tiled doors and standing due East and West, etc., furnished after the manner of the craft and for their exclusive use?
3. Will the obligation to always conceal and never reveal, taken here, be perpetuated in the lodge above? Will it defy government there as it does here by saying, "No law of the land can effect it, no anathema of the church can weaken it?" Will it still be irrevocable?
4. Will the same spirit of enmity against Anti-masons and seceders that is cherished here still continue to reign above? Will it be decided there who the liars are in this controversy? What think ye?
5. Will the same regalia be used in the lodge above that is in vogue here?
6. Will all the lodges exist there, or only the Grand Lodge?
7. Will they still continue to do work and initiate candidates there as here? You can see at once that this is a very important question as it involves another, viz.:

8. Will there be an after-death probation for Anti-masons and others who have had no opportunity of receiving the mysterious degrees in this world?

9. Will they still adhere to the Christless ritual and to Christless prayer in the lodge above?

10. Will you, like other Christians, use the song of Moses and the Lamb up there, or will you continue to use the Christless hymns of the lower lodge?

11. Will there be a Grand Lodge below in the future state?

The eschatology of Masonry is evidently a neglected subject, so that a candid answer to these questions might do much to enlighten Masons themselves as well as others.—Culdee, in the U. P. Midland.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The Chili matter.—A story for the Peace society.—Colored dolls versus white ones.—Mrs. Howe.—A possible danger to the prohibition cause.

The Chili matter is a good illustration of both the weak and the strong points in our national character. No one who is aware of the real strength of the peace sentiment among the Christian people of our land, and with what irresistible force it could be brought to bear on the government should it allow itself to be hurried into a costly and inglorious war with a sister Republic, will be much troubled by the sensational dispatches in the daily press. Some of our public men seem to have nothing better to do than to help on "the war-flurry" by their injudicious and un-Christian talk. Our failure to give satisfaction to Italy in the New Orleans affair, and the fact that there are portions of our country where we cannot, or do not, protect the lives of our own subjects, let alone those of other nations, makes us a poor example for them to copy; and the sober, reflecting class of the people are by no means proud of the attitude which we have been made to assume before the world. We ought to be great enough to pocket an affront from a power so inferior as Chili without making so much talk about it. I am reminded, as President Lincoln would say, of a little story, which, though the actors were "only dogs," carries with it a moral that I am sure the Peace Society would say ought not to be lost.

The writer used to know a tiny black-and-tan terrier, whose extreme pugnacity of temper was unbalanced by a single ounce of Falstaffian discretion, and on one occasion, when an unusually big and dignified Newfoundland trotted past, Gyp flew in his face, snapping and snarling in his most provoking and uncalled-for fashion. The Newfoundland, whom the suddenness and violence of the assault took by surprise, stopped short. His doggish code of honor forbade him to whip a brother canine smaller and weaker than himself; and yet the provocation was almost too much for any self-respecting dog to stand—especially from so insignificant an enemy, that he could have swallowed whole or annihilated with a single blow of his paw. Here was a dilemma, but it was soon decided. Quick as thought, he seized the intruder between his teeth, but without hurting him in the least, gave him a gentle toss to one side, as one would brush away a troublesome fly, and quietly pursued his way, while the astonished small dog gathered himself up and stared in amazement, and I really think with no small degree of respect, at the retreating figure of his magnanimous foe. Is not here a lesson for our great and glorious American nation? If it had been England instead of Chili, would there have been so much of this foolish, undignified bluster? It only puts us in a false light before the world. No amount of provocation can excuse it at this late day, when all national differences can be submitted to arbitration and receive equitable adjustment.

Bishop Turner, of the African Methodist Episcopal church, tells all good missionary workers who send dolls to the little heathen in Africa, that yellow, brown or black ones are preferred to white ones by the mothers, who sometimes travel hundreds of miles to get them for their children. By the mothers, very likely, but I am not sure about the children. If the good bishop will notice with what fond care a little blue-eyed, golden-haired Anglo-Saxon will cherish some battered "Dinah," without the least feeling of incongruity between its dusky complexion and her own fair skin, I think he will be inclined to newly investigate the subject. Well does the writer remember the huge colored "rag-baby," black as the ace of spades, and hideous as a Hindoo idol, about which cluster some of her own happiest infantile memories; and it would not be surprising if the little African, with her kinky hair and jetty skin, should be equally fond of the pink-and-white Caucasian-featured doll which comes to her through the friendly medium of the "missionary barrel." Anyway, here is a subject for the psychologists to explain. Does it prove that "colorphobia" comes entirely of education? and is there in it a hint of that divine truth which we grow away from when we leave the heavenly simplicity of childhood behind us: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men."

Mrs. Sarah E. Howe, who swindled so many confiding members of her own sex through the Woman's Deposit Bank, has at last gone to her eternal account, which I have no doubt she will pass with as much credit as the officers of the endowment orders who seem to have borrowed from her their wonderful system of financiering. In like manner she contrived to pay the large dividends promised to the earlier depositors from the money paid in by the later ones, thus staving off for a time the final collapse. I do not remember that the women swindled by her found much sympathy from the sterner sex, who, I fear, looked upon their unfortunately-placed confidence only as a fresh proof of female gullibility and the general ignorance which prevails among women regarding the mysteries of business; but surely men have proved themselves in this respect fully their match. Mrs. Howe stands by herself, a unique specimen, luckily, of woman-kind, while the supreme presidents and treasurers and secretaries who are wanted to answer to charges of defalcation and embezzlement are legion. It may also be said in her favor that she died penniless. She did not steal all the funds and skip to Mexico like the officers of the Rising Sun, or vote herself a fortune per annum, on which to live in the coming rainy day. She was surely not so wise in her generation as Darius Wilson and others of that ilk.

The liquor-dealers lately indicted at Belfast, Maine, evidently had one or more lodge brothers among the grand jurymen, or officials of the court, for they were given the alarm in time to get away before the necessary warrants could be issued for their arrest. Things like this are occurring perpetually in attempts to prosecute liquor-dealers, and yet how many prohibitionists are perfectly blind to the secret telegraphy which the lodge establishes between criminals and our—often misnamed—courts of justice.

The petition now being circulated by the W. C. T. U., to abate the druggist nuisance by refusing to grant licenses of the sixth class in prohibition towns, and, instead, appointing salaried agents who will sell pure liquors at cost to be used for medicinal, mechanical and other necessary purposes, is thought by some of our most active temperance workers to be open to grave objections. There is surely a chance that these agents will be appointed for merely political reasons, and not, as they should be, on the ground of character solely; and dishonest and corrupt agents may be harder to deal with than the druggists. The Lowell dispensary revelations afford some hint of what might go on under the new regime. Doctors have had their private prescriptions put up at the dispensary (supposed of course to be run in the interests of pure charity) without cost to themselves, but not forgetting to charge their patients the usual price. In 1890 the liquor-sellers of that city were paid $386.56 from the paupers' department; in 1891 the liquor bill was $448, of which it is said that fully 25 per cent was used for other than medicinal or charitable purposes. In New Hampshire the plan of salaried liquor agents has been tried and found wanting. It may be better for the temperance people to keep on worrying and being worried by the druggists and rather "bear those ills they have than fly to others that they know not of."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

Don't sell liquor. I would rather see any young man become a tramp and beg from door to door than to sell liquor for a living. There is no meaner or more contemptible way of getting a living than by selling rum.—Rev. Father R. F. Barry.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 27, 1892.

The submission of the diplomatic correspondence with Chili and President's Harrison's message thereon to Congress, opened this week with much excitement, and on Monday fears were expressed on all sides of the imminent danger of war; but the publication, yesterday, of a cablegram from Chili, saying that the government of that country had partially acceded to the demands of our government, although it lacks official confirmation has had a very quieting effect upon public opinion here, and has resulted in greatly strengthening the ranks of the peace party in Congress. By peace party I mean those Congressmen who believe that this country should not go to war until every other laudable method of satisfying the national honor shall have failed. If the expressed opinions of Senators and Representatives count for anything, Congress will not vote for war if it can with honor be avoided, and the impression now appears to be that it can be.

Speaker Crisp, who was taken sick on the day that Congress adjourned for the holiday recess, this week resumed his duties as presiding officer of the House of Representatives, and the Chaplain of the House made this feeling reference thereto in his opening prayer yesterday: "We render thee devout and hearty thanks, Almighty God, that thou hast raised from the bed of sickness and brought back to his place in the chair thy honored servant, the Speaker of the House. Confirm and establish him in perfect health of body and spirit, and support him in the discharge of his manifold and onerous duties and responsibilities."

Rev. P. J. Moore and his wife, who have been engaged in missionary work in Japan, interested a large audience last night, in one of the local churches, by graphic descriptions of how they lived and what they did in that country, illustrating their talk by means of the stereopticon.

It is seldom that one man unites in his person the functions of a Christian minister and the governor of a great State, but Gov. Chase, of Indiana, who preached the anniversary sermon, last Sunday, to the Woman's Christian Association, at the Garfield Memorial church, does it. Very fittingly he chose the life and character of Ruth as the subject of his sermon, during which he said: "There are as good women nowadays as were those who watched at the sepulchre. I know thousands of women just as good, who will wear as bright crowns." . . . "The work these women are accomplishing will live ages after they have passed away." . . . "Men want fame; they want their names written over what they do; but women, like Ruth, will do what they can because it is right and noble." The speaker referred to Ruth's speech to her mother-in-law as never having been excelled since letters were written: "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee, for whither thou goest I will go; where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried."

Petitions against the opening of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day continue to pour in upon Congress. Let the Christians of the country see to it that the stream is kept up, for in no other way can the object sought be attained.

The Senate Finance Committee has made a favorable report upon the joint resolution providing for the holding of an international monetary conference with such countries as the President may see fit to invite to join with the United States in trying to fix an international bimetallic standard.

The influence of the wealthy Mormons of Utah Territory, which has more than once made itself felt in national legislation, is again at work here. It seeks the passage of the bill which has been introduced into the House and Senate for the admission of Utah into the Union as a State. It may be true, as claimed, that polygamy is no longer openly practiced by the Mormons of Utah; yet, if so, it was not conscience that caused its abandonment, but fear of the iron hand of the Federal law. If the Territory be admitted as a State, and a majority of its people should be disposed to make polygamy legal in the State, the Federal Government would be powerless to prevent it. That is argument enough to keep Utah under Federal control as a Territory until it is absolutely certain that a majority of its citizens are opposed to the practice of polygamy; and, unless our reports are greatly at fault, that is not known to be the case at the present time.

The President and Mrs. Harrison held the second official reception of the season last night. It was in honor of Congress and the Judiciary, and was largely attended.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

B. & A. R. R. TRAIN, Jan. 29, 1892.

The second of what is intended as a series of meetings "for women only" was held yesterday at 218 Columbus Ave., Boston. There were twelve present. Mrs. Powers conducted the opening religious services. Mrs. Stoddard presented the teachings of Masonry by Masons touching the treatment and "protection" of women by the order. Two hours were occupied in the services, and very much interest was shown. A much larger attendance is anticipated at next Friday's meeting, when Mrs. Powers continues the discussion. In my absence Bro. Ezra T. McIntire, a former member of the Encampment (York Rite) and Lodge of Perfection (Scottish Rite), will give the regular Monday evening "Parlor Talk."

J. P. STODDARD.

FROM THE COLLEGE AGENT.

OBERLIN, Ohio, Jan. 27, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—While stopping here for a season to recruit, I looked, one day, into the college library. They have a large, separate building for it, with a well-furnished reading-room, and a fine museum of natural curiosities. I found a good many anti-secrecy books in place; some given by President Finney, and some by citizens of Oberlin and other reform friends. I furnished Mr. A. S. Root, the librarian, with a few volumes of our later publications, which he received very cordially. And he said he would like the back numbers of the Christian Cynosure, to bind in yearly volumes, to place in the library, among other public records. Mrs. Rev. Geo. Clark has furnished the first year's issue, and that is all he has. Now, if any of our anti-secrecy reformers can help in this, it will be thankfully received by Bro. Root and other friends here. Let them send the papers direct to him at Oberlin, O., and so help on the good cause. Yours for the Master,

S. F. PORTER.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BARABOO, Wis., January 28, 1892.

Leaving Chicago January 16th, my first stop was at Evansville, Wis., where I was most kindly received and entertained by Prof. Coleman, of the Evansville Seminary. This institution, under its excellent management, is doing well.

I preached on Lord's Day to a good congregation, and on Monday night addressed the students and others on the secret lodge system. All listened attentively, and were nearly all in cordial sympathy.

The next day I went to Madison and called on friends, and at night went up to Baraboo, where I found our stalwart reformers still "strong in the Lord."

I made arrangements here for future work, and then went to Ironton, where I had formerly lived and labored. I was most cordially entertained by Bro. O. C. Blanchard, who has stood for years as the representative of positive Anti-masonry. Here I found the M. E. church, which owns the only house of worship, not prospering; but the Christian people, irrespective of denomination, are holding meetings at private houses, which are well attended and deeply interesting. There has been a progressive revival of religion, and a number of persons have been converted or reclaimed. Though the only religious organization here is wholly dominated by the lodge, yet the active Christian workers are decidedly opposed to its influence.

I preached twice on the Lord's Day for the Wesleyans at Bethel and at Valton, where I had good congregations, who welcomed my testimony against a worldly and compromising religion. I also attended four meetings for prayer and conference.

On Tuesday, the 26th, I had one of the most satisfactory meetings I have held in the State, in the Free Methodist church at La Valle. The congregation was large, thoroughly respectful, and attentive. This was the more remarkable when we consider that many of them were Free-masons and Odd-fellows, and that almost the entire village is under their control. The Masons were members of the Ironton Lodge, and most of them old neighbors. Opportunity was given for reply, but there was no response. I was most kindly entertained by the Free Methodist people, who, though few in numbers, are strong in spirit.

Next day I came down to Baraboo, and last night lectured in the Free Methodist church. For various reasons the attendance was small, but I was much pleased with their consistency, faithfulness and courage in maintaining their testimony against the strong Masonic influence which has practically controlled the other churches of this city.

I go, to-day, to Columbia county, where I am expected to preach and lecture in several churches.

H. H. HINMAN.

FROM BRO. WM. FENTON.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 27, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In the days of the prophet Isaiah, "Truth had fallen in the streets, and equity could not enter." To-day, truth has fallen in the churches, and the truth cannot enter them.

Before leaving the city of Chicago, last week, I had an interview with the pastor of one of the largest churches in the city. He informed me that he never has joined the Masons; that, therefore, he knows nothing about Masonry, but he says that some of the best members of his church are Masons (?) He also says that he has read Pres. Finney's "Character and Claims of Masonry," and other literature of the same sort; that he despises the methods of Anti-masons in fighting against Masonry, and that he has read an exposition of Masonry, but does not know that it is true. And he further states that all his experience in this line has confirmed his favorable opinion of Masonry; that now he intends to join the Masons, and has his application made out for that purpose. He also says that he has no respect for a man who breaks an obligation.

We must, therefore, infer that he would have lost his respect for Herod had he refused to grant the request of that dancing huzzy, to behead John the Baptist. For a man who can fall in love with Masonry as he has done, must be more in sympathy with Herod than with John the Baptist. [And yet the Masons claim John the Baptist for one of their greatest "patron saints!"—EDITOR]

Surely nothing less than the regeneration of the Holy Spirit can stop such a man from joining the Masons; and, so far as his own soul is concerned, in its present state, it makes no difference whether he joins the Masons or not, save that by joining the Masons he will perjure his soul by the false swearing and seal his soul to a lie by an "obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose," i. e., the devil, the god of the lodge, who makes Masons liars and murderers like himself, "is stronger," according to the lodge language quoted above, "than human hands."

What will that pastor do with that church if he can? Will he not do with it as President J. Blanchard declared concerning a pastor like-minded: "Sink it in hell if he can?"

Real Masons are real Masons before they join the lodge, and reading exposes of Masonry but sharpen their appetite to join the lodge. They are liars before they join, and sworn liars and murderers after they join.

I have purposely avoided mentioning the name of this church or its pastor, lest it might be a matter of exultation to the Masons to have so distinguished a lodge pal so near their doors. And yet I think he will help the devil's cause better by remaining outside of the lodge, for many members of his church are Anti-masons, who might join issue with him if he joined the lodge, and, in the end, defeat his purposes. "Jack-Masons" can, and do, perform more effectual work against Anti-masons than the Masons themselves.

JANUARY 29.—St. Paul's College is a new and flourishing German theological school having 175 students, located in a suburb of this city. Last evening, by invitation of the president, Rev. Franz L. Nagler, D. D., I spoke in the college chapel on the subject of secret societies, all the students being present, with a few citizens of the suburb. I think it was made plain to the students that no one can be a Mason without personating the prince of devils, and becoming like their father, the "Grand Master of the Grand Lodge above," the devil, a liar and a murderer. It is noteworthy that this lecture was injected into the midst of a revival, evangelical services being held every evening in the same chapel in which the lecture was delivered. Any revival that cannot bear the whole truth to be spoken concerning Christ's kingdom and the souls of mankind must be a revival of a spurious religion, a religion reminding me of a Baptist evangelist of some notoriety, who said to me: "If I ever get such a hobby on Masonry as you have got I hope I shall have sense enough to get out of the ministry." Now, whose ministry is it, I ask, that can be in silent fellowship with devils, and partners with

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

IS THIS A CHRISTIAN NATION?

IRONTON, Wis., Jan. 26, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Rev. W. J. Coleman has published a small tract, entitled: "Is the Constitution of the United States Christian?" It is an able paper, and goes thoroughly into the merits of the subject. His conclusion is, that it is not Christian, and that the first and highest duty of all good citizens is to labor that it may be so changed that it shall render due honor to God and to our Lord Jesus Christ. Until such amendment is secured, it is held to be wrong to vote or accept office under the Constitution.

I am sorry to dissent from so able and good a man, especially as I think he is partly right. It seems quite evident that a fuller recognition of Christianity, and especially an express acknowledgment of God and his Word as the source of all authority and all law, would be in accordance with the best interests of the people, and in obedience to the divine command as addressed to nations.

But I do not believe that the Constitution is essentially un-Christian. At least, it is not so in the sense that a vote given to support it is an un-Christian vote. I do, moreover, believe that the underlying thought of this nation, notwithstanding all our iniquities, is and always has been in favor of Christianity. About one-fourth of the people are members of professedly Christian organizations and a large majority of the rest give a nominal assent to Christianity. This does not prove that they are servants of Christ, but it does show the general drift of opinion. In this sense we are a Christian nation.

It seems to me that the arguments used to show that the Constitution is un-Christian, though plausible, are misleading. Perhaps the strongest argument is that drawn from our treaty with Tripoli. During Washington's administration we made a treaty with that government, which declares that "the government of the United States is in no sense founded on the Christian religion." This was ratified by two-thirds of the Senate. But we are to consider that this is not a part of the Constitution. It is only the opinion of men put forth under stress of circumstances, when it was eminently desirable to secure peace with a semi-barbarous people. We are to consider, too, what was the exact meaning they intended to convey. This government is not founded on Christianity in the sense that the government of Tripoli is founded on Mohammedanism. With them the Koran is the declared law; and no religion is tolerated but the Mohammedan. Our government tolerates all religions. This was doubtless the leading fact our government declared.

But the argument drawn from the analogy with slavery is still more inconclusive. The writer says that "when our present Constitution was framed, it recognized, and so far as the general government was concerned, guaranteed the existence of slavery." Is this true? The word slave or slavery did not appear in the Constitution until the adoption of the thirteenth amendment at the close of the war. It is true that slavery was sustained by the general government and, as it was claimed, in conformity to the Constitution. But there was not a word in the Constitution that by necessary or rightful interpretation meant slavery. For it is always to be assumed that all legal enactments were intended to establish justice, even when this is not expressly affirmed. This is an established rule of legal interpretation. Even Shylock's bond for "the pound of flesh" was to be interpreted with such strictness that he could not take "one drop of Christian blood" or more or less than exactly a pound. By this rule of interpretation, there was nothing in our national compact to sustain slavery. This is further evident when we remember that the objects of the Constitution are set forth in the Preamble. These are primarily "to establish justice and secure the blessings of liberty." Slavery might have been abolished without any change of the Constitution if there had been a disposition to do so. Strictly construed it was an anti-slavery document. It was doubtless well that it should have been amended and that there should be a very clear and positive prohibition of slavery. So it is doubtless true that our Constitution, which at present will bear a construction in favor of Christianity should be so changed that there shall be no room for doubt as to its meaning. But it does not follow that in the meantime we are to regard it as un-Christian or to withhold our assent from it because it is defective.

That our Constitution and general government are based on Christianity, is evident first from the fact that the system of English Common Law underlies our whole system of jurisprudence and was confessedly drawn from the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament. Second. All our great jurists, both English and American, affirm that Divine Law, as revealed in the Christian Scriptures, is the basis of all our laws, and that those enactments that are contrary to fundamental morality are in their nature void.

Third. There are in the Constitution many incidental references to Christianity. I mention but one, the date of the Constitution, "in the year of our Lord, 1789." This, though inadequate, is an evidence that the framers intended to recognize Christianity as the existing system of religion. If our Constitution had contained an express repudiation of Christianity, or if it had required an assent to any other religion, it would be our duty to reject it. But it contains no such repudiation nor anything incompatible with our being a Christian nation. Doubtless we ought to labor to make our nation more thoroughly Christian and to make our Constitution more outspoken in its Christian character, but meanwhile we need not fail to recognize what is good in our Constitution and laws, but rather to use them as the fulcrum by which to lift the nation out of its practical subjection to iniquity.

H. H. HINMAN.

FROM A COLORED REFORMER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 13, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—1891 was a year that brought many sore trials and tribulations to the little (colored) church—St. Matthew's Baptist—of which I am pastor, as well, also, as many blows and merciless strokes to myself personally; yet we have every reason to give God thanks that we have been enabled to stand as a faithful few contending for the right. Twelve members have been added to the church by letter, experience and baptism since January 1, 1891; $927 has been raised from all sources, while $1,058.23 has been expended. Of this latter sum, $121.71 has been given or paid to me for services rendered as pastor.

You can readily see that our disbursements have very far exceeded our receipts. More than $100 of our expenses has been donated to the church, through my earnest appeals, by friends in this State, Mississippi, and in the North, for which I am very grateful to them. Still, I have been unable to raise enough to pay off all our indebtedness and finish the church. [The church was burned last summer.—EDITOR.] We yet owe, all told, on the church, $562.75, and it will take fully $250 to finish the work as it now stands. Very many of my acquaintances advise me to cease preaching and talking against secrecy, and then my church will rapidly increase, both spiritually and financially; but as a watchman on the wall, I cannot see where a surrender to the powers of darkness will benefit the church of Christ.

My total membership is 41; of whom 9 are males, 32 are female, 4 are children, and 8 are very old and feeble. Of the remaining 29 younger ones, 10 are very inactive, thus leaving but 19 loyal and earnest ones to bear our financial burdens; but then I consider that one on the side of the Lord and right is a power for good. Our cause is a righteous one, and though our numbers are few, and the road seemingly a "rough and rugged" one, all we have to do is to be strong and very courageous, and God will give us the victory by and by.

A few weeks ago, a very prominent secretist, who pretends to be a personal friend of mine, called on me and advised and persuaded me to take down a placard which hangs on the wall of my front room, and which reads: "My judgment and feeling are both strongly against the secret lodge system." He argued that this placard was detrimental to my standing in the community, and would certainly hurt my church financially; that he did not object to my privately opposing secrecy, but there could be no good accomplished in a public denunciation of it. I informed him that I would make no Satanic compromises.

(Rev.) F. J. DAVIDSON.

WHICH IS WORST—THE SALOON OR THE LODGE?

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 14, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We greatly admire the courage and enthusiasm of the N. C. A., in its seemingly unequal battle for Christ and his righteousness. We greatly enjoy the visits of the Cynosure, and always take hope and courage at every perusal. We have not lost faith in the ultimate outcome of the present struggle, but for the present it does seem as though we were justified in seeking a more vulnerable point of attack on the works of Satan than his lodge breastworks.

The saloon is more open and exposed, its malignity is more apparent, and its doom does seem more certain and nearer. Is it not good generalship to strike our best blows here, to concentrate our fire on this place until we have affected a lodgment? Then, with Satan's rum traffic in retreat, can we not turn our forces on the Satanic lodge with better hope of victory?

We believe the rank and file of the prohibitionists are the very material who are to carry our reform to success if it ever triumphs; especially the women. Should we not now place them under such obligations to us in their battle, that they will gladly help carry ours?

Yours for no back-down in anti-secrecy, but for greater energy and vigilance in prohibition,
H. D. WHITCOMB.

THE CYNOSURE IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

DARLINGTON, Ind. Ter., Jan. 9, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Your kindness in sending your paper to this association has been truly a benefit to many.

For myself, I am glad of the opportunity of having read your articles, especially about a year ago. Particular pressure had been brought to bear upon me, as General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., by Masons, to join them, as they wanted my influence. I refused, because I thought it a loss of time; but shortly after I saw a copy which you sent to the office at Salina, Kan., and then had my eyes opened to the sinfulness of secret oaths; for which enlightenment, through your columns, I thank God, as I, like thousands of others, had not looked into the matter. Suffice it to say, you made a sound convert of me to allegiance with and hearty work in the anti-secret-society reform.

I have distributed your paper among many, and have several men here thoroughly awakened on this subject. Our reading-room for Indians, however, has not proved a success, as they do not, in their natural surroundings here, care for much reading, rather to my surprise. I am now giving my time to general mission work among them, traveling from tepee to tepee, telling the story of salvation through Christ, without salary, trusting in the Lord for support.

Thanking you very much for your past kindness, and praying for your noble work, I am, yours for the lost,
F. F. CARRUTHERS,

Sec'y Y. M. C. A., State Committee of Kansas for the Indians.

LITERATURE.

The Ladies' Home Journal for February is almost entirely made up in prose, verse and fiction by daughters of famous parentage, some of the "daughters" being famed themselves. Thirty "daughters" are represented, each by an article, story or poem, and a more curious and successful innovation in magazine literature has not been made for years. Hawthorne's daughter, Mrs. Lathrop, has an excellent story; Mildred Howells, the novelist's daughter, writes a sweet poem; the daughters of Charles Dickens, Thackeray and Horace Greeley all write of their famous fathers; President Harrison's daughter, Mrs. McKee, surprises by writing a very strong article on "The Training of Children"; Gladstone's daughter tells "How a Woman's College Began" of which she is Vice-Principal; General Sherman's daughter tells a clever war story; Julia Ward Howe presents three literary daughters; ex-Senator Ingalls' clever daughter, Ethel, sketches Mrs. Leland Stanford; Jefferson Davis's favorite daughter, "Winnie," portrays "The American Girl" Who Studies Abroad," from her own experience; and these are followed up by the daughters of Sir Morell Mackenzie, "Mrs. Alexander" and Richard Henry Dana; Miss Bradley writes of the "Queens of Westminster Abbey," of which her father is Dean. And as a fitting complement to the fore-part of the issue Julia Ward Howe, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney and other famous mothers tell "How to Train a Daughter." None of the Journal's departments are omitted, the "famous daughters" occupying the fore-part of the magazine, while Dr. Talmage, Burdette, Margaret Bottome and all the other Journal editors form the rear-guard. Published, at one dollar per year, by The Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia.

The February issue of Scribner's Magazine, rich, as usual, in illustration and variety, is well abreast of most of its more pretentious contemporaries in literary excellence. William A. Coffin's second paper on "American Illustration of To-day," furnishes the beautiful full page frontispiece of this number—a child's portrait of surpassing beauty; there are also several other fine specimens of painting and drawing by numerous artists. Station Life in Australia, by Sidney Dickinson, copiously illustrated; A Model Working-girl's Club, by Albert Shaw, with many engravings; The Revenue-Cutter Service—its work in the relief of vessels in distress; and some typical rescues by the revenue cutters, by Percy W. Thompson, U. S. R. M., and Samuel Wood; and Washington Allston as a Painter—unpublished reminiscences of Henry Greenough—are all articles to well repay perusal. Other contributions and authors are as follows: The Wrecker, by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourn, continued; If it Could Be! by Octave Thanet; Illusions of Memory, by Wm. H. Burnham; Asleep upon the Grass, by Eliza Woodworth, illustrated; so it is true! by Rose Hawthorne Lothrop; An Adventure in Philanthropy, by Edward C. Martin; the Arctic Highlander, by Benjamin Sharp, Ph. D., illustrated; the Complete Dutch Kitchen-Maid—a picture of Holland a century and a half ago—by Cornelia J. Chadwick; Comfort of the Fields, by Archibald Lampman; The Commonest Possible Story, by Bliss Perry; with editorials. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, 25 cents.

Number 19 of the "Human Nature Library, Devoted to What Most Concerns Body and Mind," edited by Nathan Sizer, President of the American Institute of Phrenology, and H. S. Drayton, A. M., M. D., editor of the Phrenological Journal, and published quarterly by the Fowler & Wells Co., 775 Broadway, New York city, contains an illustrated treatise on "Character Reading from Photographers," by Nelson Sizer. The photographs presented, with deductions of character drawn therefrom, are those of Gen. B. F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy; Gov. J. P. Richardson, of South Carolina; Geo. G. Rockwood, eminent photographer of New York; Lester A. Roberts, a member of the Fowler & Wells Co.; Mary A. Ward, author; Henrietta H. Skelton; B. Mozoomdar, Hindoo scholar and teacher; Harriet Hosmer, the sculptor; Dinah Mulock Craik, the author, and many others of strong peculiarities and marked features. Altogether, with the letter-press descriptions, and rules for judging the character of each individual, this collection of photographs possesses much of interest and utility.

St. Nicholas for February is fully up to its usual degree of charm, copiously illustrated, and contains several articles that will instruct older readers, while there is abundant amusement for the smaller ones. Mary Shears Roberts contributes the first of an illustrated serial about Historic Dwarfs—Sir Jeffrey Hudson, with a portrait; A South American Hunt, by Herbert H. Smith, is an exciting narrative of adventure; The Great American Desert, by Chas. F. Lummis, describes a "strange corner of our country" that is disappearing before the tides of irrigation and immigration. Electric Lights at Sea, by J. O. Davidson (illustrated by the author) is a sketch of an important application of modern science. Tom Paulding, by Brander Matthews, is continued, as is Two Girls and a Boy, by Lieut. Fletcher; and pictures and verses and sketches in great variety, appeal to the tastes and instincts of the little ones of the household. Published by the Century Company, New York. Price, 25 cents.

OBITUARY.

MONTGOMERY MERRICK.

The following summary of the active career of the late Montgomery Merrick appeared in the Daily Herald, of Syracuse, N. Y.:

"Montgomery Merrick, one of the pioneer residents of this city, died last evening of blood poisoning at the family home, No. 718 East Washington street. He had been ill only three days and his death was unexpected.

"Mr. Merrick was born April 17, 1812, at Cazenovia and was named after General Montgomery. His father, Sylvanus Merrick, lived to be ninety-six years old, and died six years ago at Montgomery's home. The old gentleman was in the war of 1812. His slavery abolition views were shared by his son, Montgomery. The father, assisted by his sons, Montgomery and Charles, was among the foremost in the Jerry Rescue affair of 1851.

"Montgomery was reared in South Onondaga and received his education at the Onondaga Academy. More than fifty years ago he moved to this city and had since been a resident. On March 25, 1842, he married Miss Jane Shoudy of DeWitt, who survives him. During most of his career he was associated with his brother Charles in the building contract business, and was interested until two years ago in the largest concern of brick manufacture in this city. He was one of the foremost in the establishment of the Wesleyan Methodist church, and was afterward one of its most active members. He was also identified for more than twenty-five years with the Wesleyan Publication Society.

"Besides a widow he leaves five children, Luther S., ex-Supervisor; Mrs. William H. Jacoby and Miss Emma M. Merrick, a teacher in Putnam school, all of this city, and George H. Merrick, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, and Mrs. Frank Adams of New York."

To the foregoing it seems proper to add that Mr. Merrick was the uncompromising foe of oath-bound secret societies, supporting this unpopular reform by every means within his power.

The funeral services were conducted at his late residence, the text of the discourse being selected from Prov. 10: 7, "The memory of the just is blessed." Very appropriate and touching remarks were made by Rev. D. P. Rathbun.

J. B. KNAPPENBERGER.

RESOLUTIONS ORDERED BY THE CHURCH.

WHEREAS, In the course of Divine Providence, our beloved brother, Montgomery Merrick, has been removed from our midst by the hand of death; therefore,

1. Resolved, That in his death we have lost one of Christ's most faithful disciples, a generous friend, a genial companion, a man of true and honest purpose, of pure mind, of sound judgment, prompt in action, faithful in matters of trust, an earnest Christian worker, and an ardent lover of the church of his choice.

2. That we treasure the memory of his Christian life, his wise counsels, his faithful warnings, and his zeal for the cause of Christ.

3. That our sorrow at the separation from one so long and highly esteemed is softened by the joy of the assurance that in departing he has gone "to be with Christ, which is far better."

4. That it is not alone the recollection of his qualities as a Christian that we shall cherish with affectionate regard, but also as an upright man he had entrenched himself in the hearts of this community, and the fond remembrance in which he is held by all will form the silver lining to the dark cloud which hangs over us.

5. That we tender our sincerest sympathy to his esteemed wife and family, praying that in this hour of sore affliction they may find the Saviour near, and that "they may put their trust under the shadow of his wings."

JOHN STRATTON

was born at Vestal, Broome county, N.

The casting out of the devil of disease was once a sign of authority.

Now we take a little more time about it and cast out devils by thousands—we do it by knowledge.

Is not a man who is taken possession of by the germ of consumption possessed of a devil?

A little book, on CAREFUL LIVING and Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil will tell you how to exorcise him if it can be done.

Free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. 31.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Y., June 4, 1810. He died at Fair Play, Mo., Jan. 2, 1892.

He was converted and joined the M. E. church in early manhood. His parents, Jonathan and Elizabeth Stratton, were Presbyterians, being married and received into that church at South Kensington, L. I., by Rev. Lyman Beecher, father of the celebrated Beecher family. His connection with the M. E. church continued through his life, except for a short time when he left it for the Presbyterian on account of secretism.

He removed to Barton, Tioga county, N. Y., in the spring of 1842, where he married Rachel T. Mills, who soon died, and he was afterward again married, to Elizabeth Huler, in 1849. At that place he joined the Washingtonians, and with his customary zeal labored in the temperance cause. An Abolitionist in principle, he joined the Republican party at its formation, and did what lay in his power to promote its interests.

He inherited from his father a dislike for Freemasonry, which was intensified by the death of Morgan, till he grew to hate it with a free and undisguised hatred; and though persecuted and threatened for it, he did not alter his course or falter in the advocacy of Anti-masonry or any other reform.

He had been a subscriber to the Cynosure more than 20 years.

He was attacked with la grippe near the last of November; having partially recovered, he started with the family for Stocton, Mo., where he intended to make his future home. Arriving at Fair Play on the 24th, he exposed himself, took cold and died within a week. At peace with God and all the world, he fell asleep in hope of a glorious immortality.

E. S.

A note from his daughter, on the 21st instant, brings us the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. J. H. Canfield, of Jackson, Mich., by pleuro-pneumonia complicated with disease of the heart, the result of a relapse after an attack of la grippe. His death was sudden, but those nearest and dearest to him know that he was blessedly ready for the change. An earnest, true, faithful and consistent Christian, his life was a beautiful example for those around him. As a reformer he was in harmony with the teachings of the N. C. A. and the Cynosure.

Shakespeare will please excuse us if we modify him thus: Thrice is he clad who hath his system strengthened with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and he but naked, though arrayed in furs, whose blood is poor or with disease corrupted. An incomparable medicine!

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 10. A Pastor's Confession.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underhill, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOKS,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William B. Auchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kit Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Faris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $3.50 for dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Sold in any quantity at

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1892.

THE IMBROGLIO WITH CHILI.

The President's candid statement of our difficulty with Chili, embodied in his message to Congress on Monday of last week, had the effect of satisfying public sentiment on the situation, and of bringing our recalcitrant neighbor to terms.

It has not been very generally considered good policy to resort to the arbitrament of arms in obtaining a settlement with Chili; it would have been the last expedient consistent with our national honor. The authorities and people of the South American republic seem to have been harmoniously stubborn in delaying an adjustment, and this served to complicate a situation that a mutual resort to arbitration would have soon mitigated. As it was, too much "jingoism" was manifested on both sides, as if either country was an enemy not to be feared, but rather despised.

If war had ensued, Chili could have blamed no one but herself. This is shown in the present readiness of the United States to settle the pending trouble on the peace basis. She had done us a wrong, and was disposed to add insult to injury.

The plain language of President Harrison, however, served to dispel any fanciful view of the result of actual contest with us, and the effect is plainly seen in the concessions which have already been forwarded to Washington.

With the alleged political complications in the case, the allegations that money, ambition and war "buncombe" were impelling motives on the part of the administration in bringing the matter so prominently before the people before arranging a settlement, the Cynosure has at present nothing to say. We are on the eve of an important national election, and "wars and rumors of war" (especially the rumors) may perhaps be justly classed among the expected tactics of the politicians of all parties during the coming campaign.

WANTED—A GENERAL REVIVAL OF LAW AND ORDER.

There were more than 240,000 retail liquor-dealers in the United States in the summer of 1890, and it is not probable that in the intervening months this number has been at all reduced. On the contrary, the number to-day may confidently be estimated at a quarter of a million.

We do not know how many of these saloons are supported in the city of Minneapolis, Minn., where the Republican National Convention is to assemble in June next; but the figures of the last census inform us that the average number of arrests per capita for her 164,738 population was 2.84, which for "one of our best-governed cities, with strong repressive laws against Sunday traffic," it must be admitted, is too large a percentage.

Some facts have recently come to light that are not, with all this restraining power, very creditable to the great "flour city." An exchange lets on the light as follows: "Minneapolis prohibits the opening of saloons on Sunday, and has plenty of officials, high and low, sworn to the enforcement of the laws of the city. Yet, on a recent Sunday, it is stated, there were found to be as many as 10,000 persons in the various saloons of Minneapolis." The inference is that, "as in many other cities, larger and smaller, the oath of office does not amount to much in face of the organized criminality of the saloon power."

This startling condition of affairs has aroused a proper degree of indignation among the better class of citizens, and the result is the organization of a Law-enforcement League, which has a strong backing from the clergy of the city. On the 17th of January these gentlemen united their voices, in numerous pulpits, in support of this judicious association, as against these police-protected saloons.

The argument of the mass of citizens, when apologizing for the remissness of the authorities in not restraining the saloons, was on this line: "That when officers were elected to enforce the laws, their responsibility ceased, and if the officials did not enforce the laws, it was none of their affair."

But the law-and-order people would not accept this dogma, believing it to be the duty of every good citizen to see that the laws were properly enforced. Personal responsibility of each citizen in this direction is energetically advocated, and in the present revival of good sense and municipal reform, it is expected that individual accountability will be maintained in putting down the saloon power, which is now branded as "the most insolvent conspiracy—the worst enemy with which the American people ever had to contend."

This revival of law and order against the saloon and its official tools cannot too soon become as general as the evil which it has to fight for the salvation of the country.

REFORM IN POLITICS.

By invitation of Miss Frances E. Willard, representatives of the National Reform, the Prohibition and the People's parties met for conference last week in the Sherman House, Chicago, with a view of concentrating their respective forces in an alliance against other existing political parties, with the hope of eventually defeating them at the polls. Reporters were excluded.

Prominent delegates were as follows: Miss Willard, of the W. C. T. U.; George F. Washburn, of Boston, secretary of the People's party; Rufus N. Ramsey, of Carlisle, Ill.; A. Wardell and H. L. Loucks, President of the S. D. Farmers' Alliance; General Weaver, greenbacker and labor reformer; Mrs. Anna Diggs, of Kansas, a prohibitionist; Professor Samuel Dickie, of Albion, Mich., a well-known prohibitionist; E. J. Wheeler, editor of the Voice, and last, but not least, H. E. Taubeneck, chairman of the national committee of the granger political organizations. Lady Somerset was there also, as a guest of Miss Willard. The representatives of the National Reform party, which was organized about a year ago, but which has never had a ticket in the field, were W. H. Evans, of Buffalo; G. W. Miller, of Chicago; S. H. Comings, of Michigan; and Gilbert Delemater, of Ohio.

Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota, was also present.

Miss Willard presided over the deliberations of the conference, and G. F. Washburn, of Boston, who is a member of the National Executive Committee of the People's party, was chosen secretary. After a statement from Miss Willard of the objects of the meeting, it was decided that each of the three parties represented should go into caucus and embody its ideas in a report to be presented to the conference.

The reports of the three parties were in unison as regards the abolition of the national banks as banks of issue, governmental control of railroads, telegraphs, etc., and limitation of land ownership, but upon prohibition and the suffrage question there was diversity of opinion. The People's party also wanted free silver advocated, and had a solution of the liquor question of their own. This was presented by G. F. Washburn in a paper of some length, and was an advocacy of nationalization of the liquor traffic, leaving the adoption of restrictions to the various States, according to the temperance sentiment in each State.

Having heard the reports, a committee was appointed to draw up an address which would be acceptable to all present.

The address, as reported to the conference, embodies only opinions; and none of those who formulated it or voted for it considers himself bound by it. Such was the understanding formally expressed before the conference transacted any business. It will be presented to the meeting of the various trades organizations of the People's party, which has been called to meet in St. Louis, Feb. 22.

It reads as follows:

The undersigned, expressing a consensus of opinion of an informal voluntary gathering of members of the People's party, the Prohibition party, and the National Reform party, held the 27th day of January, 1892, at the Sherman House, Chicago, arrogating to themselves no right to speak authoritatively for any one but themselves, or to dictate the future course or platform of any organization, but perceiving the absolute necessity which exists that the people, rising up in their primal capacity as citizens and voters, should wrest the government of the State and the Nation from those who have so long misgoverned both, hereby put forth the following suggestions to the people of the United States, upon which we ourselves are substantially agreed. We are in favor of a consolidation of all political elements in behalf of these issues, to-wit:

1. That money should be issued by the general government, without the intervention of any private institutions, in sufficient quantity to carry on the business of the country, and such money should be a full legal tender for all debts, both public and private.

2. That the saloon is the great enemy of reform in these matters. As the chief fountain of corruption in our politics we denounce its pernicious influence upon our country and demand its suppression.

3. All means of public transportation and communication should be controlled by the government to obtain for all the people equal and equitable advantages in such services; and if the effort to so control said means of transportation and communication shall prove impracticable, then we favor government ownership of the same.

4. We are opposed to speculation in land, and alien ownership of the same, and we demand a reasonable limitation of the amount of land that can be owned by any corporation or individual.

5. We favor municipal suffrage for women with an educational qualification. IGNATIUS DONNELLY; FRANCES E. WILLARD; J. B. WEAVER; E. J. WHEELER; G. M. MILLER; E. EVANS; H. S. TAYLOR.

The address was adopted without a dissenting vote. "If accepted by the People's party in St. Louis," said Dr. Harry S. Taylor, of Englewood, chairman of the Cook county Prohibition committee, "it means the formation of a party that will sweep the country and land a reform President in the White House." We await the result with patience.

MASONIC GLORIFICATION.

Last week, at a "special session of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States," held in Chicago, the Masons conferred the thirty-third degree ("Sovereign Grand Inspector General") on Hon. Thos. W. Palmer, President of the Columbian Exposition National Commission. Barring the long-winded titles required to make this announcement in "proper form," it is not worth printing (so far as its importance is concerned), except as a mere matter of personal news.

Masonically, it is "a big thing" for the order, for it must have cost Mr. Palmer a good round sum, besides the exalting influence which such an event must necessarily bestow upon the institution. And there is no other institution that seems to require so much artificial bolstering to keep it in good standing before the public, as Freemasonry. If one wishes to know how fulsomely the order is exalted by its adherents, at every opportunity, to blind the uninitiated as to its intrinsic demerits, a careful reading of the various Masonic addresses and reports in the Voice of Masonry, from time to time, will reveal some very ingenious literary work in this line. Something of a similar "high-faluting" sort of commendation also frequently finds its way into the secular newspapers of the day. It is the pabulum on which Masonry fattens, and by which its novitiates are basely deceived.

Mr. Palmer, of course, and as gracefully as possible, no doubt, drank his initiation wine out of a human skull, was embraced by the conventional dead-man's skeleton, vowed allegiance to his country and the order, and went through all the rest of the Masonic rigmarole attached to the highest degree of the Scottish Rite. It is a marvel if he knows to which he owes the strongest allegiance, the Masonic empire or the government by whose favor he holds his high office in the World's Fair Commission.

MASONIC INTOLERANCE.

The intolerance of Freemasonry is no new topic for the discussion of the candid reformer. It is only the continuous outbreak of that intolerance outside of the lodge that makes renewed and frequent mention of it necessary.

Several weeks ago, as then noted in these columns, Rev. Wm. Fenton, one of the most devoted and intelligent agents of the N. C. A., visited Evanston, Ill., and publicly announced a lecture, for a certain evening, at the Free Methodist church, upon "The Claims of Freemasonry as a Religious System"—a subject which Mr. Fenton is abundantly able to present in all its fullness.

The lecture was freely advertised before the time of its delivery, which happened to be either on a lodge night, or some other equally important occasion of the secret empire, and previous to the hour announced, the Evanston Press (run in the interest of Freemasonry) also gave the lecturer a critical notice, pre-judging him as a "fanatic with an India rubber spear who was going to assault the stone wall of the lodge." In addition, the editor of the Press took up his own free lance (probably a steel pen) in defense of Masonry and "the scores and thousands of ministers who are brethren of this order, and know it to be heartily in accord with all the principles of Christ's teachings, and a most efficient handmaid and coadjutor of the Christian church;" and much more Masonic balderdash of a similar import.

Mr. Fenton, however, delivered his lecture as advertised, notwithstanding this attack, to an appreciative audience.

Rev. W. P. Ferries, pastor of the church in which Mr. Fenton lectured, not liking the illiberal spirit of the attack made by the Press, soon afterward addressed a calm, gentlemanly letter to the editor, defending Mr. Fenton and his lecture, and asking that the columns of the Press might be opened to discuss the merits and demerits of Freemasonry "in a spirit of fairness and candor."

The editor of the Press had the grace to print the letter from Mr. Ferries; but the principles of Freemasonry being entirely foreign to fairness and candor, he flatly refused to concede the favor which it requested, on the ground that neither Mr. Fenton nor Mr. Ferries had any personal knowledge of Masonry; advised them to mind their own business and "denounce apparent evils in the community, rather than seek to pry into the affairs of others," etc. In his peroration, after this exordium, he announced that "the Press will respectfully decline any further communications of a controversial nature regarding it"—Masonry.

This is a plain statement of the case, and it is so in harmony with the intolerance of Masonry that it need excite no surprise.

That a Mason should, with tongue or pen, exalt the order to which he belongs to the highest pinnacle of goodness and usefulness, is to be expected. It is as much a part of the Masonic system which he has embraced as are those horribly murderous obligations to which he fully subscribed when he became a Mason, and which require him to lie outright, or prevaricate to any degree, whenever the alleged virtues or secrets of the order are impugned. For this reason our lecturers and writers will never find fairness and candor in their opponents.

THE LODGE UPHEAVAL.

In renewing his subscription, an earnest reformer in Maine takes the opportunity to review the situation as follows: "I like the Cynosure better as it grows older. I believe the cause it advocates is slowly gaining ground; but it is enough to startle reflecting people, to see what a sway the secret societies are carrying with them in the election of town affairs, in State and national politics. I am indebted to the Cynosure for opening my eyes in regard to their effects. But, once opened, I cannot help seeing that we are ruled (or misruled) by them. Our courts are a perversion of justice; our towns are managed, not in the interest of the tax-payers, but for the benefit of prominent secret society leaders. I can say nothing new to you about them; but I am the only Anti-mason who dares shout 'Mah-hah-bone' to them on the street, and repeat to them, in no low tones, their oaths. Hoping for your continued success," etc.

"The times are very evil," and "the enemy comes in like a flood;" so that vile men prosper and the truth is despised. It is only by "eternal vigilance" that human integrity can rise above the threatened overflow. Watching and praying, and working along the Lord's line of operations, have become an imperative duty.

A WORD WITH YOU.

What we need just now is more money to suitably carry on the work in which we are engaged. That it is good work we have abundant evidence. That it deserves a liberal support is sufficiently proved by its character. That it has a claim upon those who are indebted to us on old subscriptions, whether the amounts are large or small, is equally evident. The aggregate sum due us from delinquent subscribers, if we had it now in hand, would greatly aid in meeting our heavy current expenses. A dollar here and a dollar there, in your pockets when it should be in ours, makes a great difference to us—far more, probably, than it would to you. Will you not try and pay what you have owed us so long? We do not like to dun you, or to resort to worldly methods of obtaining what is due to us. We merely appeal to your consciences to do what is right.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

the crime of tearing the name of Christ out of the Bible, or treating the resurrection of Christ as a legend, and even that inferior to the Masonic legend of the resurrection of Hiram by King Solomon? Is it not the ministry of devils? I do not say that a pastor or an evangelist should allow his work to be interfered with by another; but I do say that a pastor or an evangelist that deliberately rejects the truth about secret societies, or any other form of iniquity, and will neither preach that truth himself nor allow others to preach it from his pulpit, is a fraud, an imposter, a real "crank," according to the dictionary. And the sooner he is lifted out of his ministry the better for the world.

Next Monday evening I am to speak at the Augsburg Seminary (Lutheran) at Minneapolis.

W. FENTON.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT IN NEW YORK.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Jan. 29th, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I reached this city again last evening; find some encouraging letters. My last week has been spent in Delaware county. It has been both pleasant, and profitable to our cause. Though much of the time the weather has been very unfavorable for canvassing, I secured some twenty-five new readers for our paper, and spoke three times. Sabbath was spent with the church of which Rev. Mr. Doig is pastor at West Kortright. This brother made me very welcome. A collection of six dollars was given by his people. It was thought one-half the congregation was detained at home by sickness and death.

There was no lack for entertainment. One night was spent with Mr. A. S. Gilchrist. Mr. W. H. Rice provided for my temporal wants, and gave shelter from the storm one very cold night.

Rev. J. O. Bayles, pastor of the Covenanters church, at West Kortright, conveyed me among the people that I might give them the privilege of subscribing for the Cynosure.

Rev. Mr. Wade, pastor of the U. P. church, at Kortright, did what he could to get the people to hear me on Tuesday eve. But as self-preservation is said to be the first law of nature, but about twenty-five came out, and that was more than I expected, as the wind blew and the night was bitterly cold. Both Rev. Messrs. Wade and Bayles expect to be at our convention. Rev. Mr. Smeallie, pastor of the U. P. church, at North Kortright, regretted he could not come to the convention. An important church meeting prevents I have an invitation to address his people.

When walking from Delhi to Andrew Gilchrist's I was overtaken by a Scotchman, by the name of Spear. He gave me a partial history of his life. When in the city of Glasgow, Scotland, he joined a secret society of Cotton Spinners. Not long after, the secret society bosses ordered a strike of the Cotton Spinners. Men who lived from hand to mouth were kept out of work for twenty weeks; starvation stared them and their families in the face. One poor fellow, who tried to work in spite of the orders given by the bosses, was waylaid and shot. Said Mr. Spear, "that was enough of secret societies for me." "If I had not had a little money in the bank, I do not know what would have become of me and my family." When he landed in Castle Garden, N. Y., with his family, he had just 95 cents in money. He started up the street and asked a man he met if he could direct him to a Methodist minister. "Keep straight ahead," was the reply. He next saw some firemen running with a hose cart. He asked, where is the fire? The reply came, "In London!"

He finally found a minister; left his library and watch as security for $30, which took his family to Delaware county, N. Y. As we rode up to a fine, large farmhouse, he remarked, "That is my house; I own 170 acres of this land; won't you go in and stay over night with me?" I had to decline this kind offer. Mr. Spear did not find it necessary to join a secret society to find help when traveling. He found a Christian heart which responded to his need, as only a Christian heart will.

On the train, yesterday, a man came into the car where I sat, from the smoker, and took a seat beside me. He was well-dressed, but his face was sadly marked from dissipation. A Masonic-pin was attached to his watch-chain. He began conversation about the weather, etc. He asked if I was a traveling man. I replied in the affirmative, and gave him a notice of the convention at Binghamton. After reading, he laid it down, remarking: "It seems strange men talk most about a thing they know nothing about." I replied that people sometimes made up in talk what they lacked in brains. It would at least do no harm for us to consider the sayings of Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, U. S. Grant, and other like men who have spoken on the lodge question. They, at least, had the reputation of being thinking men. He then began a lot of questions, which sounded very strange if he believed, what he inferred, that I knew nothing about Masonry. Unless he gets converted to Christ, and leaves the ways that are dark, to walk in the light, he will soon be a subject for a Masonic parade, to be sent to their "Grand Lodge (so-called) above."

Everything seems favorable for our convention. If the Divine Spirit be with us, it will be good, whether the number attending be few or many.

W. B. STODDARD.

A REFORMER IN IOWA.

SCHALLER, Iowa, Jan. 27, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am ready to send the books to you in as good shape as when received; and I am glad to report that I was enabled to do good work with them. I gave a public discourse on the evening of January 19th (last week) in a public hall. Am glad to say that a full house was in attendance. A good many of the Masons were out. There are forty-two members in this lodge. I heard several times that there were seventy-five or eighty; but a Mason told me that there were just forty-two, but that a few more had applied. This discussion may hasten some into the lodge, but it will confirm more in their determination to remain out of the lodge. I stood upon an original right to discuss any question which had any bearing upon human weal or woe. Our Pilgrim fathers sought these shores to obtain the free enjoyment of that right. I called attention to the fact that Christianity shuns no investigation. She has nothing to conceal. Her Founder said, "In secret have I said nothing." He had held back no important truth, certainly no fundamental one. He did not have two classes of teachings, the exoteric for everybody, and the esoteric only for his disciples, and to be by them forever concealed. Never.

I gave, then, my standpoint of opposition from the Gospel of Christ, using three texts: Acts 4: 12, Phil. 2: 9-11, and Col. 3: 17. After considering some preliminaries, I took up the main line of argument, namely:

1. Freemasonry is a religion.
2. It is not the religion of Jesus Christ.
3. It is the religion of the natural man.

I proved these propositions with overwhelming testimony from the books I received from you, and from some of my own. I was given good attention. There were many surprises in store for both Masons and non-Masons at some of my disclosures. I nailed everything with the books, from which there was no escape. I spoke from 7:30 to 9:30.

After meeting was dismissed the Masons came forward immediately to discuss some points. Everything was courteous but pointed. We had thus a hand-to-hand discussion for a half-hour. Many points were brought out, and some very strange doctrine from a Christian Mason—good Masonry, but not good Christianity! Such is the influence of Masonry! There is quite an interest in the subject now. No objection has been taken to the manner of my discussion.

I may be called over to Sac City, soon, to discuss the question there. Sac City is our county seat, and is quite over-run with secretism,—worldlings, churchlings, and all. There are sixteen secret societies in that town of 1,200. A small town of 400, ten miles east of us, has ten secret societies. Our town of 450 has not so many—three or four. I shall report progress.

(Rev.) W. C. PADEN.

—We regret to learn of the recent death of Mr. Geo. Brokaw, of Washington, Iowa, an old and valued friend of the Cynosure. At present we are without particulars of his last illness and departure, but hope soon to publish a fitting obituary notice. His loss will be deeply lamented.

THE HOME.

THE OLIVE TREE.

Said an ancient hermit, bending
Half in prayer upon his knee,
"O! I need for midnight watching;
I desire an olive tree."

Then he took a tender sapling,
Planted it before his cave,
Spread his trembling hands above it,
As his benison he gave.

But he thought, the rain it needeth
That the root may drink and swell;
"God, I pray thee, send thy showers!"
So a gentle shower fell.

"Lord, I ask for beams of summer, Cherishing this little child."
Then the dripping clouds divided,
And the sun looked down and smiled.

"Send it frost to brace its tissues,
O my God," the hermit cried;
Then the plant was bright and hoary,
But at even song it died.

Went the hermit to a brother
Sitting in his rocky cell;
"Thou an olive tree possessest;
How is this my brother, tell?"

"I have planted one and prayed,
Now for sunshine, now for rain;
God has granted each petition,
Yet my olive tree hath slain!"

Said the other: "I intrusted
To its God my little tree;
He who made knew what it needed
Better than a man like me.

"Laid I on him no condition,
Fixed not ways and means; so I
Wonder not my olive thriveth,
Whilst thy olive tree did die."

—Sabine Baring Gould.

BURDETTE'S MESSAGE TO BOYS.

My boy, the first thing you want to learn—if you haven't learnt it already—is to tell the truth. The pure, sweet, refreshing, wholesome truth. The plain, unvarnished, simple, every-day, manly truth, with a little "t."

For one thing, it will save you so much trouble—oh, heaps of trouble—and no end of hard work, and a terrible strain upon your memory. Sometimes—and when I say sometimes I mean a great many times—it is hard to tell the truth the first time. But when you have told it there is an end of it. You have won the victory; the fight is over. Next time you tell that truth you can tell it without thinking. Your memory may be faulty, but you tell your story without a single lash from the stinging whip of that stern old taskmaster—conscience. You don't have to stop to remember how you told it yesterday; you don't get half through with it and then stop with the awful sense upon you that you are not telling it as you told it the other time, and cannot remember just how you told it then; you won't have to look around to see who is there before you begin telling it; and you won't have to invent a lot of new lies to reinforce the old one. After Ananias told a lie his wife had to tell one just like it. You see, if you tell lies you are apt to get your whole family into trouble. Lies always travel in gangs with their co-equals.

And then it is so foolish for you to lie. You cannot pass a lie off for the truth, any more than you can get counterfeit money into circulation; the leaden dollar is always detected before it goes very far. When you tell a lie it is known. "Yes," you say, "God knows it." That's right; but he is not the only one. So far as God's knowledge is concerned, the liar doesn't care very much. He doesn't worry about what God knows—if he did he wouldn't be a liar; but it does worry a man or boy who tells lies to think that everybody else knows it. The other boys know it; your teacher knows it; people who hear you tell "whoppers" know it; your mother knows it, but she won't say so. And all the people who know it, and don't say anything about it, talk about it to each other and—dear! dear! the things they say about a boy who is given to telling big stories! If he could hear them it would make him stick to the truth like flour to a miller.

And finally, if you tell the truth always, I don't see how you are going to get very far out of the right way. And how people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of our sight. We never say, "I wonder where he is? I wish I knew who he is with? I wonder why he doesn't come home?" Nothing of the sort; we know he is all right, and that when he gets home we will know all about it and have it all straight. We don't have to ask him where he is going and how long he will be gone every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him "solemnly promise" the same thing over two or three times. When he says "Yes, I will," or "No, I won't" just once, that settles it. We don't have to cross-examine him when he comes home to find out where he has been. He tells us once and that is enough. We don't have to say "sure?" "Are you sure, now?" when he tells anything.

But, my boy, you can't build up that reputation by merely telling the truth about half the time, nor two-thirds, nor three-fourths, nor nine-tenths of the time; but all the time. If it brings punishment upon you while the liars escape; if it brings you into present disgrace while the smooth-tongued liars are exalted; if it loses you a good position; if it degrades you in the class; if it stops a week's pay—no matter what punishment it may bring you—tell the truth.

All these things will soon be righted. The worst whipping that can be laid on a boy's back won't keep him out of the water in swimming time longer than a week; but a lie will burn in the memory fifty years. Tell the truth for the sake of the truth, and all the best people in the world will love and respect you, and all the liars respect and hate you.—Ladies' Home Journal.

JOHN WANAMAKER TO YOUNG MEN.

To live for Christ is far better than nursing the bonds of a railroad, or the stock of a bank, or listening to the hum of the wheels of the mill. A single shake of the telegraph wire may unsettle a man, and make a rainy day for him and a heavy heart. It is well worth while for a man to have before him as a dream a fine country-seat, a garden, quietness, a splendid position in the city; but if that is all he has got, what little satisfaction it will be to him when he comes to that time when he will go upstairs and say: "I am not very well to-day; I guess I won't go to the office;" and the next day: "Perhaps you had better send for a doctor." He lies with his face to the wall; and all the great stores he has built, all the great activities that have felt the touch of his fingers, fade out of his eyes; and he thinks of the other shore, and of what treasures he has laid up beyond the stars. I tell you, then, young men, we want something more than the things of the present life. What a splendid picture that is of Mr. Gladstone going into the little church and reading the lessons! Is he less great because he believes in God and because he witnesses for his name? I think the greatest wreck of all in this world is the loss of a young man. When he goes down, the world is poorer than for anything else that could be lost.—The Young Man.

A PRACTICAL WORKING-GIRLS' CLUB.

Perhaps the most complete and practically successful working-girls' club that has yet been organized, is one that has been provided through the generosity of a good man and his devoted wife. It is in London, at the West End, in Langham Place, just beyond Regent street, and adjoining the well-known Langham Hotel. It is commonly known as the "Girls' Poly," to distinguish it from an institution with which it is closely allied, the Young Men's Polytechnic Institute, which is universally known among young people in London as the "Poly." The more precise name of the club in question is the "Young Women's Institute."

The fees for Institute membership are very small—eighteen pence per quarter, or five shillings ($1.25) per year. The establishment is open in all its parts for the benefit of the members, from 6:30 to 10:00 in the evenings. The membership fee gives free use of sitting-rooms, library, reading and music-rooms, recreation-rooms, and grounds, and numerous other advantages, and also entitles the fortunate young women to admission at low tuition rates to an immense range of classes and entertainments.

The purely club features of the place are highly prized by the girls. It is no small thing for them to have a bright, cheerful establishment, that they regard as their own, where they may resort in the evenings, and in connection with which they have access to so much that is diverting and instructive. It is needless to emphasize the importance of such a privilege, to anyone who knows how the average young workingmen and women of our great cities are obliged to live. In the refreshment-rooms the member may procure her cup of tea and light lunch, at a cost decidedly less than elsewhere. And for a year or more past there has been served in the capacious dining-rooms an excellent and substantial dinner, in courses, at sixpence. For fourpence, a very good but less bountiful dinner may be had by the more economical young woman of business. These privileges are, of course, limited to members. The Institute dining-rooms are vastly more pleasant than the cheap restaurants or lunch-rooms to which the girls might otherwise be compelled to resort, and the food at the Institute is incomparably better in quality and cheaper in price. All the influences of the place are home-like, wholesome, and improving. There seems to be a tacit understanding among the young women who meet in these agreeable quarters that they must be on their best behavior—must "live up to their blue china," so to speak. From "A Model Working-Girls' Club," by Albert Shaw, in February Scribner.

FROM WINNIE'S WINDOW.

He was walking along the street gathering the fresh white snow into balls and throwing it, boy-fashion, in any and every direction. When he came across poor ragged, forlorn Carl, who had been trying to gather up a little fuel from the streets and alleys, he pelted him as he had done everything in his way (except well-dressed pedestrians), and laughed to see the miserable fellow cower against the wall.

"Why doesn't the simpleton throw back and not just stand there and take it?" he laughed.

It is only sport to him, well clothed, warm and vigorous, but to the half-fed, half-clad Carl, suffering already from the stinging cold, every dash of the snow was torture. But his persecutor did not seem to realize it until suddenly a sweet, childish voice called from the window near:

"Ain't you 'shamed to take what God sends from heaven, and use it to make folks down here feel bad?"

The well-dressed boy looked up, laughing in an embarrassed way, but dropped the last ball he had molded and examined his victim a little more attentively, as if struck with a new thought.

"Did I hurt you?" he asked, with careless good nature. "I didn't mean to do that. Here is a quarter; you can buy yourself some mittens or—something." Then he strolled comfortably on, and Carl sped away in an opposite direction.

"That makes it some better," said Winnie, reflectively. "But wouldn't it have been nice, aunty, if he had given the money without throwing any balls?"

I looked at the wistful face of the little preacher and thought how often the gifts God sends us from heaven are used to "hurt the folks down here;" how riches become the pomp and splendor that lift us away from those we might help; how influence is used to lead astray instead of to guide aright, and "God's great gift of speech abused," wounds and stings where it should bring blessing. Surely the silver would have been better apart from the blows, little Winnie. We learn to find a deep meaning in the Bible words so often repeated, of God's "loving kindness" and "tender mercy," when we begin to realize how much of earth's kindness is careless, not loving, and its mercy so very far from tender.—Selected.

HOW THE SHIP WAS SAVED.

It has often been proved that a wonderful power resides in Christian character. Patiently to follow in the Lord's footsteps is to grow into his likeness, and none can be winning that rare soul-beauty without discovering it to those about them. It equips with a strange influence. A notable instance is found in the story of a mutiny on board the Orwell, the ship which carried finally back to China, Robert Morrison, the pioneer of Chinese missions. It was not a first-class vessel, but Dr. Morrison had a special regard for its captain. And the missionary pastor was to be the instrument of a great deliverance. The crew were a rough set, and they contracted a grudge against their officers. A conspiracy to seize and slay existed, and only just in time rumors of the danger reached the captain's ears. There was a hurried and grave talk, at which Dr. Morrison was present, and leave was given him to address the rebels. The missionary went to the fore-castle and remonstrated with the crew, and such were the dignity of his bearing and the gentleness and force of his words that, although the plot was fully formed and only awaited execution, he saved the ship. Morrison's personality mastered the men; they could not stand out against his persuasions. Soon work was resumed, and orders were once more obeyed. The sweetest part of his success to Dr. Morrison was that one of the mutineers was led through the episode to think upon eternal things, and to pray humbly for salvation.—Quiver.

DANGEROUS PRAYERS.

"I want you to spend fifteen minutes every day praying for foreign missions," said the pastor to some young people in his congregation. "But beware how you pray, for I warn you it is a very costly experiment."

"Costly?" they asked in surprise.

"Ay, costly," he cried. "When Carey began to pray for the conversion of the world it cost him himself, and it cost those who prayed with him very much. Brainerd prayed for the dark-skinned savages, and after two years of blessed work it cost him his life. Two students in Mr. Moody's summer school began to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more servants into his harvest; and lo! it is going to cost our country five thousand young men and women who have, in answer to this prayer, pledged themselves to the work. Be sure it is a dangerous thing to pray in earnest for this work; you will find that you cannot pray and withhold your labor, or pray and withhold your money; nay, that your very life will no longer be your own, when your prayers begin to be answered."—Forward.

PARENTAL SOWING AND REAPING.

The Word of God often speaks of sowing and reaping. The meaning of these terms is so easily applied to the life of man that all can understand and apply it. We shall reap some of the harvest of last year's sowing during this year. We shall, if we live, continue to reap, day by day, in other years until life shall end, and then will be the "harvest." What have we sown? "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "What shall the harvest be?"

It is not likely that any of us who are of the household of faith have intended to sow bad seed; but that is not the point. If we go into our field with the full intention of sowing clover seed, and by mistake or carelessness sow timothy seed, our intentions will not make clover grow in place of timothy. I have seen the parent hold out the tempting toy to the child, and just as the child was about to take it he snatched it away. Be careful! Are you not teaching the child to distrust you? When the child attempts to go into another room he would say: "Come back! there are bears out there and they will get you." Could you give them a better lesson in deceit and falsehood? Or could you distress their nerves more by other means? Notice a family brought up in this way, and see if they are just as careful about telling the truth and giving respect to their parents as they ought to be.

What shall we sow this year? Shall we sow an angry thought and reap an ungovernable temper? Shall we sow malice and reap hatred? Shall we sow covetousness and reap discontent? Shall we sow the seeds of unrighteousness and reap a harvest of everlasting woe? Remember the unchangeable laws of nature's God. "Shall men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" Let us sow love. Let us sow every good seed as we have opportunity. "The field is the world; the reapers are the angels." May God help us.—B. P. A., in the Christian Conservator.

In New York last year 1,434 husbands procured divorces from their wives on the ground of drunkenness. During the same year 12,432 wives procured divorces from their husbands on the same charge.

OBSCURER MARTYRS.

They have no place in storied page,
No rest in marble shrine;
They are passed and gone with a perished age,
They died and made no sign,
But work that shall find its wages yet,
And deeds that their God did not forget,
Done for their love divine—
These were the mourners and these shall be
The crowns of their immortality.

Oh, seek them not where sleep the dead,
Ye shall not find their trace;
No graven stone is at their head,
No green grass hides their face;
But sad and unseen is their silent grave--
It may be the sand or deep-sea wave,
Or a lonely, desert place;
For they needed no prayers and no mourning bell--
They were tombed in true hearts that knew them well.

They healed sick hearts till theirs were broken,
And dried sad eyes till theirs lost light;
We shall know at last by a certain token
How they fought and fell in the fight.
Salt tears of sorrow unheheld,
Passionate cries unchronicled,
And silent strifes for the right—
Angels shall court them and earth shall sigh
That she left her best children to battle and die.

—Edwin Arnold.

TEMPERANCE.

THE MENTAL EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL.

Dr. Norman Kerr, the famous temperance physician of London, testifies as follows to the mental effects of alcohol: "The reason I have insisted so strongly on the physical part of the question is that, in making observations on dead bodies, I have constantly found in the skulls of those who drank certain conditions. Now, the brain is a set of thinking cells, set in a tough framework or tissue. All goes well as long as these two kinds of tissue—the outward envelope and the inward contents—are in proper proportion to each other and to the size of the skull. Alcohol, however, has the effect of thickening the binding and connecting tissues, thereby diminishing the space allotted to the thinking cells, so that they shrink and become unable to do their work. Thus, if you come from a port wine or champagne or, still worse, a beer-drinking ancestry, you do not possess the conditions of brain which God intended you to have, and the result cannot be modified at once, though in course of time it may be done. I do not care in what shape spirits are used, the effect is the same."—Selected.

CURES FOR DRUNKENNESS.

A credible citizen of Kansas reports that many of the reformed drinkers in that State, whose reformation was largely due to the difficulty of obtaining liquor under the prohibitive legislation in that State, have taken to such stimulants as antipyrine and quinine. It is a well-known fact that there are slaves to the "ginger habit" no less firmly shackled than the rum slave himself. Even the number of those who are addicted to very strong tea—made, contrary to all cookery canons, by boiling the tea and water together—is fast increasing; and they are apparently so bound to that kind of tea that tea properly "drawn" is not what their appetite craves.

Now all of these substances are injurious to the human mind and body, and through them to the morals of this class of habit-slaves. While they do not intoxicate, it is certain that their habitual use is debasing. The serious question arises: If the drinker abandons his alcohol and flees to these habits, has he really reformed? The answer must be in the negative.

After abandoning the alcohol, the only proper substitute is well-cooked, nutritious food: not only bread and beef and milk, but also special food for the nerves to strengthen the will-power and induce sleep in season. The artificial and transient stimulation of alcohol must be supplanted by the stimulation of healthful food, clean, well-aired apartments, and regular rest, at proper intervals, for mind and body. Nature will assert her supremacy if artificial hindrances are removed. The young and middle-aged habitues of alcohol have, on this view of the case, no excuse whatever for relapse. The farce "reform" of giving up one species of excessive artificial stimulation and adopting another, is probably the most serious obstacle in the way of curing the drink evil. In the case of older habitues it must be—though regretfully—admitted that as they have lived they must continue to live—stimulant of some kind they must have. They are past the stage of nature in which physical upbuilding is sufficiently active to eradicate a life-long craving and to partially repair the natural waste of the body at the same time. Hence, healthful food, drink, fresh air and rest—nature's stimulants—will not be sufficient for them.

In a word, cure of drunkenness supposes nature assisting in the reform. In addition to this, temptation must be avoided. The victim must suffer for awhile, and must expect to suffer; to be strong against his failing; to feel an aching void; to tear himself away from his former life; to be calm, and watchful, and patient. Unless he intends, at the beginning of his struggle, to do these things, it will be useless for him to enter upon it. No matter what the "cure" may be—in these matters the patient must minister unto himself.—Once a Week.

THE USE OF WINE BY STUDENTS.

The Youth's Companion in an editorial advises students against the use of wine. After speaking of the temptations in the direction of wine drinking to which students are exposed, the editorial concludes: "Nothing has been more certainly demonstrated than that the use of alcoholic drinks by young persons in our keen, exciting climate is a mistake, and is to no class so injurious as to students. To them, more than any other class, wine increases the difficulty of every duty and adds alluring force to every vice. This is not preaching; it is simple fact, and known to be such by all honest investigators. Students need the best of food that civilization can supply, and that food should be eaten in the best manner known to civilized life. But when it comes to intoxicating drinks, there is only one wise and safe rule, which is expressed in one word—abstain."

WHAT RUM COSTS IN NEW YORK.

Fourteen thousand people—a large city of itself of these unfortunates; and yet a little less than one in a thousand of the population, as the city is a million and a half, but this diseased part is growing quite as fast as the city. Ten hospitals, three lunatic asylums, two workhouses and almshouses, a penitentiary on the islands and prisons in the city jails, and what a kingdom under the commissioners of charities and correction!

They employ a regiment of helpers, 11,000 strong, and money, almost $2,000,000 a year, a large business certainty, but without margins.

Shall we call it a vast college, with vast piles of buildings, requiring a half million a year to keep them in repair. What pupils; what students—what graduates, rather; what kitchens and provisions and other supplies! Thirty-seven thousand tons of coal in one purchase; 3,500,000 pounds of meat; 10,000 barrels of flour—these repeat twice in the year. What piles of coffins; what suits of clothes to the discharged prisoners, and each five dollars pocket money. Many, many of these the products of the rum trade.—Progressive Age.

BRUTALITY OF LIQUOR DEALERS.

The doings of the liquor dealers at Old Town, Maine, as recently reported in the papers, show the real character of this most ruinous, lawless, and demoralizing traffic. A Congregational minister preached a temperance sermon, and in consequence was driven from his boarding-house. Saloon rowdies thrust liquor in his face on the street and demanded that he drink, and when he refused they set the dogs on him and egged him. The Methodist pastor was similarly treated. An Indian girl was made drunk and left naked at the church door as the people were coming out. The belfry of the school-house was made a resort into which the boys were enticed to drink and gamble. These are only some of the fruits of the saloon. Its work is evil, and that continually, without one redeeming consideration.—Christian Standard.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON VII.—First Quarter, 1892.—February 14.

SUBJECT.—The New Covenant.—Jeremiah 31:27-37.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.—Jer. 31:34.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jer. 31:27-37. T.—2 Sam. 23:1-5. W.—Ps. 89:20-37. T.—Isa. 59:16-21. F.—Jer. 32:36-44. S.—Ezek. 37:21-28. S.—Heb. 8:6-13.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The precious promise.—vs. 27-30. Sorrow and calamity formed the burden of most of Jeremiah's prophecies; but the verse preceding our lesson shows that he was not a prophet of evil from choice. Like a glint of sunshine in a dark and cloudy day, comes this chapter telling of Israel's happy restoration, when her cities should be built again and Judah should be "the habitation of justice," "the mountain of holiness;" and, waking as from a happy dream, he says: "And my sleep was sweet unto me." "Behold the days come." This refers primarily to Israel's restoration, but it also includes the great ingathering of nations, Greek and barbarian, Gentile and Jew; for in Christ race distinctions are to be finally obliterated, and all will be considered as forming one peculiar people, God's spiritual Israel. People calling themselves Christians, who now draw the color-line, may well stop and question their own claim to a part and lot in this glorious coming kingdom. A line will be drawn there which will go far deeper than the color of the skin, and all such persons, unless they repent of their wicked and senseless prejudices, will be liable to find themselves on the wrong side of it. The very sentence of exclusion which they now pass on so many of their fellow-beings, will rise against them in that day and bar them out. "As I have watched over them." For a little moment God had seemed to be their adversary. Now he would be their everlasting Friend. What must it be to have the Lord himself watch over us for good? What matter, if this be so, that our devotion to truth makes us enemies who are watching over us for evil? Their plans will surely rebound against themselves. This is the blessed assurance which whole-hearted consecration of all that we have and are to God gives us a right to claim. Then why be anxious about worldly matters, as if anything could go wrong for us with such a Friend watching to see that they go right?—though seated at so infinite a height above mortals, circumstances may often look very untoward to us when he sees that they are only working out our eternal bliss. "The children have eaten sour grapes." This was a proverb among the exiles born in Babylon, by which they meant that they were suffering for their fathers' sins, not their own. This may have been true in a sense; yet it was only a half truth. At best, it was a proverb born of skepticism and unbelief. Yet there are many now who think what is its equivalent:—that because they are the victim of some hereditary vice or appetite they cannot break away from it. Says Pentecost on this point: "Any individual descendant may break the heredity at any point he pleases by turning to the Lord." A higher law can set aside or annul the workings of a lower one, and the law of grace is infinitely higher than the law of nature.

2. The new covenant.—vs. 31-34. This prophecy refers to the covenant of the New Testament, in distinction from the old covenant given on Sinai. God had been faithful; but from the very first, when they took advantage of Moses' long stay in the mount to lapse into calf-worship, it was being perpetually broken by the Israelites. It was a covenant of works:—"This do and live." It was written on tables of stone and on the borders of their garments, but the new covenant was to be written in their hearts. We are said to know anything "by heart" which, by memorizing, we have made a part of ourselves. But this is only a low and earthy illustration of a high and spiritual truth. A prince is not obliged to have a written law before him commanding him not to conform to the manners and habits of beggars and other social outcasts. So one who is truly a member of the heavenly household will not be troubled with questions of how far he can conform to the world in matters of dress, amusement, or anything else; for they will all be settled by a law written in his heart. And thus he will demean himself on all occasions as one who is and knows himself to be "the child of a King."

Under the old covenant, sacrifices were offered that could not of themselves remove sin; but now Christ having been offered once for all, we stand complete in him. Our sins and iniquities are remembered no more. This is the "holiness" or "perfection" which we are to seek after, and which every Christian may have on the simple condition of abiding in him.

3. The strong assurance.—vs. 35-37. God is not obliged to give us any pledge that he will keep his word. His simple promise ought to be enough; and yet, because we are so weak and faithless, he takes those things in nature which seem most firm and unshaken, the sun, the stars, the sea, as images of his own unchanged and unchangeable word. The God of nature is the God of revelation, and the more reverently we study his handiwork, though in the humblest weed that grows, the more convinced we shall be, not only that he is, but that he loves and cares for us with an eternal love.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—During 1891, in Wisconsin the church work was very encouraging; including the erection of twelve new church edifices, three enlarged and remodeled, and one new parsonage, adding over $40,000 to the property value of our churches in the State. Five churches reached self-support. There were 1,158 baptisms. The aggregate contributions amounted to $178,000. Nine new churches were organized. Nineteen new pastors were welcomed to the State. Then to crown all $32,500 were added to the endowment of Wayland. Wisconsin also raised for Missionary Union, Foreign Mission, Publication and outside Ministerial Education Societies, over $12,000. The total value of church and educational property belonging to the denomination in the commonwealth now aggregates $860,000 and the church membership 13,694.

—Besides the great work of the Home Mission Society, spread over forty-nine States and Territories, three Canadian provinces and six States of the Mexican Republic, most important service has been carried on among the foreign population of Illinois—Germans, Danes, Norwegians, Swedes, Bohemians, Chinese, etc. During the past year twenty-three of these missionaries were at work the whole or a portion of the year.

CHRISTIAN.

—The Church of Christ of the Christian denomination of Elgin, Ill., has passed resolutions making prohibition part of its creed and refusing fellowship to those who vote otherwise. It is said to be the second church in the country to do this.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The religious statistics of Wheaton (Ill.) College for the term just closed were about as follows: Whole number of students in all departments of the Institution about 220; number in College and Academy a little over 190; whole number professing students in College and Academy, 160; number of persons professing conversion during the term, 16; number of persons now connected with the Volunteer Mission Band, 32; number of persons preparing for the Gospel ministry, 26; number of students now preaching in neighboring churches, 2.

—A census of the "religious preferences" of the entering class of 504 Cornell students, shows that 284 are church members and 146 are church-goers, but not members, thus leaving only 74 who are indifferent. A majority belong to the Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Methodist, Congregationalist, and Baptist denominations. The New York Sun says: "Notwithstanding the agnosticism about which so much is heard, religion is still a controlling power in all the institutions of learning in the United States. The youthful students of to-day are not infidels."

EVANGELICAL.

—The Evangelical church of Italy is making encouraging progress. It has received the recognition of the civil authorities and is now on a footing with other denominations as to legal rights. Not only among the laity is it carrying the Gospel, but it is gaining the ear of priests, not less than thirty of whom have recently sought to be admitted.

FREE METHODIST.

—The sisters at the Humboldt Park Free Methodist church, Chicago, have organized a society called the "Master's Willing Workers," with Rev. T. B. Arnold as president. The object is practical home missionary work. The work is divided into three departments; a yoke-fellows' band for visiting, a sewing school, and the distribution of religious tracts, papers, etc.

—The work at Olive Branch Mission, 95 South Des Plaines street, Chicago, is really very encouraging. Since Nov. 22 over two hundred seekers have come to the altar. Many of these have been clearly saved and they must be looked after, encouraged, watched over with a careful eye. Sister Bradley needs hearty Christian co-operation and material aid to meet current expenses—and deserves it. Her work is an important one.

JEWS.

—The Jews are estimated to number 6,400,000. In the United States there are about 500,000. In Chicago there are 40,000. Among all these millions the Protestant churches have 377 missionaries. This gives a missionary to every 16,976 Israelites—a larger number in proportion than among the heathen. And now the sympathies of all classes of the humane go out in behalf of the multitudes of Israelites who are suffering from persecution as well as from famine in Russia. The example of one of their own number is most commendable. Baron Hirsch, worth from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, made largely in a railway contract with Turkey, is pouring out his wealth in providing for those of his race in Russia who through persecution are being expelled from their homes.

LUTHERAN.

—Robert G. Bernethy, a member of the Lutheran church, of Carthage, N. Y. (?), fell dead a few weeks ago, while in the act of changing his will so as to give Carthage College the bulk of his estate, estimated at $15,000. The changes were not made in time to receive his signature, and stand in the courts. Accordingly, it is not at all likely that his last wishes can be carried out.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—In meetings at Buffalo Fork church, on the Burt (Iowa) charge, 71 were at the altar and arose for prayers; 45 were converted; 34 united on probation, and 2 by letter, and 11 have not yet united with any church.

—Bishop C. B. Galloway of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will preach the annual sermon before the foreign missionary society of the British Wesleyan conference. He is the first American, it is said, to be thus honored.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—Bishop Hare, writing from the Rosebud Agency, Dakota, says: "We have just closed the convocation of our Indian deanery, which, despite the late disturbances, was the largest in numbers and offerings we have ever had. Over 1,500 people camped around in an open circle. The women, representing thirty-six local branches of the Woman's Auxiliary, presented in cash $800, and the young men $170 for all sorts of charities, among them being work in Japan and China, missions in South Dakota, the Episcopate fund, the native clergy fund, and other objects."

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

—The Sunday-school work is advancing in Europe. The first great Sunday-school Convention was the German Jubilee in October at Berlin. Germany has now more than 3,000 Sunday-schools, with 30,000 teachers and 300,000 scholars; France has more than 1,100 schools, with 4,500 teachers and 115,000 scholars; Switzerland, 1,500 schools, 6,522 teachers and 97,890 scholars; Holland 1,400 schools, 3,800 teachers and 150,000 scholars; Sweden and Denmark in nearly equal proportion.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—A letter from Allegheny Seminary says: "We have just been having a course of lectures on the distinctive principles of the United Presbyterian church. Dr. Greer dealt with Psalmody and Anti-Secret-Societyism in such a tremendously strong way that it seemed as though there was nothing left for an imaginary opponent to do but die or surrender."

—South Side Mission, in Chicago, under the care of Rev. W. M. Howie, has organized a society of Our Young People with twenty-seven members. Others are expected to unite soon. We are glad to learn of the prosperity of this important mission station.

—Tarkio (Mo.) College building burned down on Sabbath morning, Jan. 20, at 5 o'clock. The fire caught in the furnace rooms, in some unaccountable way. Being heated with steam and lighted by electricity, it was regarded as almost safe against fire, and only $5,000 insurance was carried on it. There was about $5,000 worth of furniture in the college beside the steam heating apparatus, including the rare and valuable libraries of Prof. Ed. Reid and Dr. Wm. Johnston, three new pianos, $1,000 worth of apparatus, the restaurant furniture, and the bell. Nothing was saved except about a dozen chairs and some paintings from the art room.

WESLEYAN METHODIST.

—The winter term of Ohio Wesleyan University has opened with the largest enrollment in its history. The attendance for the year will be between eleven and twelve hundred.

—The Wesleyans who were arrested at Eastbourne, England, recently for holding open air meetings, were fined by the magistrates one shilling and costs. It is now proposed to test the constitutionality of the law under which the fine was imposed.

Y. M. C. A.

—The association has just closed one of the most prosperous years in its history. During the year 1,257,000 invitation cards were distributed, and as a result of this wide distribution of cards, 94,200 attended the religious meetings of the association. The present membership of this department is 4,858; 1,921 new members joined during the year; 1,133 young men visited the rooms in a single day.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

President T. W. Palmer, of the National Commission, was initiated into the thirty-third degree of Masonry.

On the prosecution of the Citizens' League Adam Seufert, a saloon-keeper at No. 1,103 West North avenue, was fined $50 for selling drink to a habitual drunkard.

The Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association has inaugurated a crusade against druggists for the violation of the liquor laws.

Postoffice officials have been informed of an extensive "green goods" conspiracy.

The coroner's jury which investigated the causes of the late Blue Island wreck declared the system of car inspection of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company to be imperfect.

The Democrats are trying to get the Inter-State Exposition Building for their National convention.

The addition of several more notable names to the faculty of the University of Chicago is announced.

Thieves broke into the box office at the Auditorium, one morning last week, and stole $1,800 worth of tickets for the Patti concerts.

COUNTRY.

The America Beet Sugar Producers' Association was formed at San Francisco Monday, Henry T. Oxward president.

The total wheat stock of the Northwest is estimated at $29,561,120. A year ago it was $22,587,000.

Judge Johnson, of Topeka, Kan., Monday, decided that indorsers of promissory notes are not liable.

The Hon. Charles F. Loring, Supreme Regent of the Royal Arcanum and a member of the Governor's Council of Massachusetts, died at his home near Boston at noon Tuesday.

The Association of Iron and Steel Sheet Manufacturers was formed Tuesday at Pittsburg, Pa. J. G. Battelle, of Piqua, Ohio, was elected president.

A relief expedition for Lieut. Peary and party is to be sent out by the Academy of National Science, of Philadelphia, the cost to be mainly raised by subscription.

Sir Edwin Arnold has cancelled all of his engagements on account of illness.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's articles on her husband's labors in Indianapolis in the '40's are declared to be erroneous by many persons who were members of the Second Presbyterian church at that time.

George Hanlon, of the Hanlon Brothers Theatrical Company, has decided to enter the ministry.

The Salvation Army held a revival meeting in a saloon at Galena, Ill., Monday night.

J. I. Case's will was filed for probate at Racine, Wis., Tuesday. Most of his estate, valued at $1,100,000, is bequeathed to his widow and children.

Nebraska women are asked to submit designs for the hammer with which Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, will drive the last nail in the women's building at the World's Fair, Oct. 12 next.

Street cars were run in Pittsburg, Pa., on Tuesday without interference from strikers.

James Beck was fined $25 and costs for selling newspapers on Sunday at Pittsburg, Pa.

Harrison Parker's store at Millen, Ga., was blown up with dynamite Monday night. The wreck caught fire and with an adjoining store burned, causing a loss of $10,000. The motive for the crime is unknown.

Two drifting scows were brought to harbor at New York, Thursday. Two more are missing and are believed to have sunk with their crews of fourteen men.

Seven flint glass factories in Pittsburg shut down Thursday rather than comply with the demands of their employees.

The board of trustees of the Chautauqua Assembly held their annual meeting Wednesday at Buffalo. Lewis Miller was TREASURER'S Statement.

THE MORNING ADVERTISER.

TREASURER'S OFFICE, 29 PARK ROW, NEW YORK, Dec. 24th, 1891. DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

DEAR SIR: Out of gratitude to you, I wish to add my testimony to the value of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, as a cure for "La Grippe," which I have had in a very aggravated form. After three weeks treatment with different medicines, without apparent relief, I was persuaded to try a bottle of your Cherry Pectoral, and was almost entirely relieved in three days, and cured before the bottle was half used up.

Yours very truly, GEO. D. SUTTON.

La Grippe

Promptly yields to treatment with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It subdues inflammation, relieves the soreness of the lungs, loosens the cough, and promotes expectoration.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral Prompt to act, sure to cure chosen president; Clem Studebaker, chairman of the executive committee, and Dr. W. R. Harper, principal of the Chicago scheme of education.

A German manufacturer will erect a factory for making white enamel at Dubuque, Iowa, next spring.

At Burlington, Iowa, early Wednesday morning, incendiaries made two attempts to burn the city.

Solomon Hanks, a cousin of Abraham Lincoln, died Wednesday near Wapakoneta, Ohio, aged 92 years.

England, as reported, has decided to test the feasibility of using the Canadian Pacific for transporting soldiers across North America.

Dr. Wesley Newcomb, one of the leading conchologists of the world, died Wednesday at Ithaca, N. Y.

In December five American missionaries were murdered by natives at Boma, in the Congo Free State. Seven native converts met a like fate. The mission buildings were burned.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Jan. 25 to Jan. 30:

J G Stauffer, E J Chalfant, A A Adams, Rev S L Short, G J Graham, W Ralston, J A Stegner, W J Poyer, J W Fifield, D J Prince, D F Campbell, A I Yoder, S R Coyner, Rev A Green, F E Hoverland, P D Kizer, W L Enlow, Mrs E Stratton, Rev J H Schneider, H H Hinman, A C Lemm, Rev H Y Leeper, J Compher, Rev J S Colvin, Rev J M Knox, E L Dille, A Knox, Mrs C Kennebrough, A H Leach, J P Shattuck, O H Harrington, J Rideout, S Dodd, O Tlchevor, W D Clay, D S Ervin, R Canning, J W Sell, E A Washburn, D C Benjamin, G Bovard, Mrs P B Shaw.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.	Selltn Price.
FIVE CENTS.
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. $.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. $.05
SIX CENTS.
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Olerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. $.06
TEN CENTS.
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveller. Paper, 51 pp. $.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. $.10
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. $.25
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. $.50
TWENTY CENTS.
$.	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. $.25
FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. $.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price. NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge. Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents; The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.
Wheat—Spring No. 2.....	85 3/4 @	86 1/4
Winter No. 2.....	82 @	89
Corn—No. 2.....	38 1/2 @	38 3/4
Oats—No. 2.....	28 3/4 @	32 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	82 @	82 1/2
Bran per ton.....	13 00	13 25
Hay Timothy.....	10 50	12 00
Butter, medlum to best....	26 @	31
Cheese.....	09 @	13
Beans.....	1 50 @	1 75
Eggs.....	17 @	23 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 12 @	1 25
Flax.....	90 @	95 1/2
Broom corn.....	04 @	07 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	25 @	37 1/2
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 @	6 1/2
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	4 75 @	5 50
Common to good....	3 50 @	4 00
Hogs.....	4 15 @	4 50
Sheep.....	2 50 @	5 25
NEW YORK.
Wheat, No. 2.....	1 01 1/2 @	1 04 1/4
Corn.....	49 @	50 1/4
Oats.....	35 1/2 @	38 1/2
Eggs.....	24 @	25
Butter.....	18 @	32
Wool.....	21 @	24
KANSAS CITY.
Cattle.....	1 50 @	5 00
Hogs.....	3 80 @	4 35
Sheep.....	4 00 @	5 65

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20
 Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests..... 20
 The Royal Invitation..... 20
 Loyal Responses..... 20
 Sunlight Through Shadows.... 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quart size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John Mc Neil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25
 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant.....2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
 Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons,..... 50
 Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection..... 50
 Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
 Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 30

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.
 Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."
 Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.
 Separate volumes may be had if desired.
 The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
 An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest.
 Ned Franks. White Bear's Den.
 Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web.
 Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods.
 Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed.
 Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.10
 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death.
 No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20
 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke.
 Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Parables. Little Bullets from the Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80
 Cassy. King's Servant.
 Lost Gip. Aloac in London.
 Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children.
 Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

WOMAN'S HAIR.

Young girls of the present day completely destroy their hair by crimping it with irons, and twisting it up tightly with thick, hard hair-pins. This treatment may make the hair look pretty for the time being, but no thought is given to the ultimate result and the appearance it will present a few years hence. The hair should be well brushed every night and morning with a moderately hard brush—brushes made with short, unbleached bristles are the best—and on retiring to rest the hair should be drawn back lightly over the ears, plaited in one long plait, and allowed to hang down the back; it should not be fastened up with hair-pins, nor should any cap or covering be worn on the head. This method makes the hair bright and glossy without the aid of oils or pomades, which are best avoided. The fewer hair-pins and ties used in dressing the hair the better; and twisted hair-pins are injurious. It is not well to continue the same style of dressing the hair for too long a period, as that is apt to make it thin in some places; a little change is a relief to the head and otherwise advisable. Cutting the hair occasionally is necessary, and should not be neglected.—Herald of Health.

"GOING TO BED" ETIQUETTE.

It is always a debatable point of etiquette whether hostess or guest make the first movement to go to bed, and thus break up the evening gathering. The guest may be overcome with fatigue from a day's journey; the host may be fidgeting under the strain of entertaining, and longing for the guest to show some signs by which he can gracefully and hospitably suggest "that it is growing late," yet neither quite like to appear, as they think, impolite. In fact, many visitors have suffered agonies in trying to be agreeable, while the host and hostess were doing their best to suppress their yawns and to "make conversation," until chance offered a solution of the difficulty. There is, however, but one rule to be followed in this relationship of host and hostess, and the hour of retirement. The host or hostess must always take the initiative and say an appropriate word as to the lateness of the hour and the desirability of going to bed.—Boston Beacon.

A MUSTARD POULTICE.

Make a paste just thick enough to spread well, of Graham flour and water (cold or warm, but not hot), and spread over a piece of cloth of the size of the poultice needed. Upon this paste spread the prepared ground mustard, until well covered. Place a piece of thin muslin, moistened with warm water, over the poultice, and apply. The paste will keep the poultice moist for hours. The thin cloth between the poultice and the flesh will prevent blistering unless the flesh be very tender, and several thicknesses of cloth laid between the poultice and the clothing, will keep one's garments from getting soiled by it.

HOW TO COOK A STEAK.

There are ways and ways of cooking steak, every householder adopting the method which she likes best or finds the most available under her circumstances of living. The perfectly-cooked steak will almost "melt in your mouth," and the process of cooking which will yield this result is the process to be acquired. "An old butcher" gives the following as one process: "Now, if you only knew how to cook a steak to make it good, that would do; but it always makes me sick to see a woman cook a steak. She invariably puts her frying pan on the stove, and puts in a chunk of grease as big as my fist, and when it is hot enough to begin to crackle she puts in her beef, and never thinks of covering it. The smoke and steam from it goes to the very ceiling. After she cooks it in this way until it begins look like on old rubber shoe-sole she calls it done. When you go to eat it there is no more taste to it than a chip. Now, if you want a good bit of steak, have a clear, hot fire, set your clean, empty pan on a spot, cover it up, then pound your steak, and when your

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: 'In one store where I went to buy Hood's sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Get

Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

pan is very hot, lay in your steak, and cover quickly. As soon as it has crisped enough to let go its hold on the pan, turn over and cover quickly; turn again, as at first, and continue to do so about every two minutes until you have turned it about six or eight times. Have a hot buttered dish ready for it and lay it in; add a sprinkling of pepper and salt, and cover tightly. Now, if you wish a gravy, put a bit of butter in your pan. When hot, rub in a pinch of flour, add a small teacupful of boiling water; let it boil a few minutes, then put in a gravy-boat, instead of putting it over your beef to draw out the juice. Now try this plan just once, and you will see you women know nothing about cooking a steak."—Anonymous.

So say we all of us! Salvation Oil is the greatest cure on earth for pain. Only 25 cents.

It is a great misfortune for the young and middle aged to be gray. To overcome this and appear young, use Hall's Hair Renewer, a reliable panacea.

MEN MAKE MISTAKES—FIGURES NEVER FAIL.

ROPP'S

COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR

—WILL—PREVENT MISTAKES, RELIEVE THE MIND,
—SAVE—Labor, Time AND Money,
—AND—
DO YOUR RECKONING
In the TWINKLING of an

A READY CALCULATOR, BUSINESS ARITHMETIC and ACCOUNT-BOOK Combined.

This is unquestionably the most complete and convenient work on Figures, for PRACTICAL USE, ever published. It contains nearly all the SHORT CUTS known; Hundreds of Simple Rules and Original Methods for "Easy and Rapid Calculation," and Millions of Accurate Answers to Business Examples and to Practical Problems.

It sifts and simplifies the whole science of Arithmetic, retaining only the Cream, in a nut-shell, as it were. Its Tables, Rules and Methods are all extremely simple, eminently useful, practical, and fully abreast with the age of steam and electricity.

Every one who prefers to take the Simplest, the Shortest and the Easiest way for doing his work, should possess a copy of this useful and convenient Pocket Manual. It will enable Everybody to become Proficient and Quick in Figures; and to many a young person, it may prove to be a stepping stone to a successful business career.

NO FARMER, MECHANIC OR BUSINESS MAN SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT, BECAUSE

IT WILL SHOW AT A GLANCE, WITHOUT THE USE OF PENCIL, PEN OR PAPER,

- The number of Bushels and pounds in a load of Wheat, Corn, Rye, Oats, or Barley, and the correct amount for same, at any price per bu.
- The exact amount for a lot of Hogs or Cattle, from 1 lb. to a car load, at any price per Cwt.
- The correct amount for a load of Hay, Straw, Coal or Coke, from 25 cents to $20 per ton.
- The exact value of a bale of Cotton, at any price per lb. Also the Toll for ginning it.
- The correct amount of articles sold by the Bushel, Pound, Yard or Dozen, from 1/4c. to $1.
- The exact Wages for any time, at various rates per month, per week, and per day.
- The equivalent of Wheat in Flour, when exchanging same, from 25 to 40 lbs. to the bu.
- The only correct Rule and Table for estimating the exact contents of Logs of all sizes.
- The exact contents of Lumber, Cisterns, Bins, Wagon-beds, Corn-cribs, Cord-wood, and Carpenters', Plasterers' and Brick-layers' work.

It is neatly printed on fine paper, and elegantly bound in "Pocket-book" form. The No. 2 binding contains a slate and a practical "Account-book", which has self-instructing "Formulas" for recording Receipts, Expenditures, Purchases, Sales, etc. In fact, all about "Book-keeping" that is needed by the people. It will commend itself to every thoughtful and progressive mind, for its originality, simplicity and usefulness.

Hundreds of testimonials like the following have been received: "A new publication that must prove of incalculable benefit to the commercial world—unless the book itself can calculate its own worth—for it calculates almost everything."—Chicago Times.

PRICES OF DIFFERENT STYLES OF BINDING.

- No. 1, Bound in Waterproof Leatherette, Beautifully Embellished in colors.....$ 50
- No. 2, Fine Artificial Leather with pocket, Silicate Slate and Account-Book..... 75
- No. 3, Am. Russia or Morocco, with pocket, Slate and Renewable Account-Book, 1.00
- No. 5, Fine Russia or Mor., Gilded, " " " " " 1.50

This valuable hand-book, No. 1, will be sent FREE to every CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBER who, with his renewal, sends a NEW subscription, BOTH AT REGULAR RATES.

Or it will be sent to any subscriber who pays $1.70 for the paper and the book. No. 3 and the paper for $2.00. No. 4 for $2.25.

No. 1 will be sent to any one sending two new subscribers; No. 3 for three, and No. 4 for four new subscribers, all at regular rates.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

331 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper 25cts.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligau, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquillette. 25 cents each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages: cloth. $1.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

FARM NOTES.

POINTS IN BEE-KEEPING.

Leading bee-keepers recently specified what they considered the principal points in bee-keeping in the American Bee Journal:

Professor A. J. Cook—Strong colonies at dawn of harvest.

E. Secor—Bees, pasturage, a bee-master.

C. H. Dilbern—The beekeeper, strain of bees, hives and fixtures, location, market and shipping facilities.

G. M. Doolittle—The man, the location, strong colonies at the time of honey flow, best strain of bees and a hive adapted to the wants of the man and bees.

Mrs. L. Harrison—Winter well, vigorous queens, strong colonies, good hives, good judgment in managing bees and selling the product.

R. L. Taylor—Perfect wintering, plenty of food during the spring months, unlimited nectar-yielding pasturage during surplus gathering, a man who will give the proper space for surplus.

The Editor—In bee-keeping the principal requirements are good bees, plentiful pasturage, suitable climate, proximity to a good market and an energetic bee-keeper who understands how to manage bees and market the product.

BUYING A HORSE.

When examining a horse with a view to purchase, always have him led down a steep or stony descent at the end of a halter and with no whip near him. Many horses when brought out of the stable are excited by the presence of strangers, and becomes more so at the sight of a whip. A slight lameness may therefore be momentarily overlooked by the horse himself, just as a man under strong excitement will sometimes forget a sore foot. Leading the horse down a slope will show any defect in his fore-quarters, and turning him back will develop any weakness that may exist in his hind legs. Horse sharpers know these facts as well as anybody, so if the horse is in the least affected, they will generally avoid a hill when showing off a horse to a probable purchaser.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WAIFS AND STRAYS.

The man who can't manage a farm so as to clear taxes, has to use better management to get rid of his debts.

A farmer isn't as often broken up by what he feeds his stock, as by the way he has to feed the lawyers.

The Romans possessed an abundance of forcing-houses, in which they produced early grapes and peaches.

When the bank breaks, the depositors get all the sympathy; the directors all the blame: the cashier all the money.

Confucius, five hundred years B. C., was the first man on record who admired and popularized the chrysanthemum.

The snow that is worth millions to the wheat grower, costs the rich speculator in wheat thousands to shovel off the street.

A peculiar feature of strawberry coloring is that whilst the berries in the open air ripen from the stem, extending to the point, those grown under glass ripen at the point first.

Consider dust a foe to plant growth, as well as to their neat appearance, and see that the foliage is kept free from it by frequent showerings and by carefully covering them for protection from dust accumulations, while sweeping.

Plants in high latitudes produce much larger and heavier seeds than in warm regions near the equator. This effect is attributed to the prolonged influence of sunlight. Many flowers white in southern climates become violet in the north.

Nitrate of potash is a good thing for potted flowers, it is said.

Potatoes will likely be high in price before spring. It is just as well not to be in too much of a hurry to sell.

Let the children have all the fruit they want. Children are pretty "hard" on fruit, but no matter, let them eat.

The fruit-grower ought to be able to

The Superior remedy for all diseases originating in impure blood;

the

MEDICINE

which may always be relied upon to give the best satisfaction, is

AYER'S Sarsaparilla
Cures others, will cure you

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

$1.75 ONLY

The CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE one year and
ALL AROUND THE YEAR 1892.

Entirely New Design in Colors, by J. Pauline Sunter. Printed on heavy cardboard, gilt edges, with chain, tassels, and ring. Size, 4 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches. Boxed. Price
50 CENTS, SENT POSTPAID.

As fresh in design—even outshining its brilliant host of predecessors, which have been sent out each year to the calendar-loving world—as it is fresh in the fair whiteness and the soft delicacy of its workmanship. Each month contains not only the calendar, but a design both charming and appropriate, and an equally timely sentiment. See editorial comment on page 6 Cynosure Nov. 26th.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

teach his boy the science of fruit-growing, but he can get that ability only by study.

The winter horticultural meetings will be in session during the rest of the season, and there can always be a great deal learned at them.

To make good grafting wax take one part tallow, two parts bees-wax, four parts resin. Melt all together and thoroughly mix.

In the recent plant-potting contest at the Madison Square Garden, George Martin potted 1,277 cuttings in an hour and won the first prize.

At the Chicago Flower Show 1,268 persons voted for the goldenrod for our National flower, 390 for the rose, 243 the chrysanthemum and ninety for the sunflower.

A subscriber says that moles are very fond of potatoes, and that if they are poisoned before being put where the moles can get them, they will "get them."

There is no wisdom in suffering with a cold, when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowc. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revolution of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10ct each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

At Elton, Pa., Wednesday night Samuel Kring, aged 79 years, and his wife, aged 83, were burned to death in their home.

John I. Riffin, a brother of Charles W. Riffin, one of the sailors who was killed at Valparaiso by the Chilians, will file claims for damages with Secretary Blaine.

Agents of the coal producing companies met at New York Thursday and decided to advance prices 25 cents per ton.

United States Commissioner John S. Bradford died at Springfield, Ill., Thursday.

Dr. W. A. Haskell, of Alton, was elected president of the Illinois State Board of Health at Springfield Thursday.

The wheat crop of North Dakota for 1891 is estimated at 64,713,328 bushels, or 22.58 bushels to the acre.

President Harrison sent a message and correspondence to Congress on Thursday, intimating that the difficulty with Chili could be settled diplomatically, and that action by Congress was not now necessary.

Garza, it is said, has crossed over into Mexico with a force of about 5,000 men. It is claimed that he will soon have three-quarters of the population on his side.

The Hon. Mr. Bayard, of Delaware, Secretary of State in the Cleveland administration, expresses gratification over the prospects of an "amicable and honorable adjustment of the Chilian Controversy."

Near Jones's Mills, Pa., Friday morning United States revenue officers captured five moonshiners and destroyed two illicit distilleries.

Henry Dowd, alias "The Slasher," who has committed several murders in New York, was acquitted Friday, on the grounds of insanity.

Cyrus W. Field is likely to die at any moment, his physician says. He is much worse than at any time since he was taken ill.

Friday the Fall River County Bank at Oelrichs, S. D., made an assignment. The liabilities are $28,000; the assets considerably less.

B. R. Musgrave, of Terre Haute, Ind., who attempted to swindle insurance companies by burning a log cabin containing a skeleton, was convicted Friday and sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and be confined in the penitentiary ten years.

At Boston, Friday, the "Autobiography and Personal Reminiscences of Major General Benjamin F. Butler" was issued.

Frank Zano, aged 20, was married Wednesday to Rosa Cooke, aged 17, at Rockford, Ohio. His father-in-law had him arrested on the charge of perjury in swearing that the girl was of age. Friday Zano shot himself while in jail, inflicting a fatal wound.

FOREIGN.

It is said that peasants in the department of Voronzeh Russia, exasperated by their sufferings from hunger and sickness have turned their resentments against the doctors for their failure to effect cures. The physicians are fleeing in terror.

Deaths in London week before last numbered 2,761, or 1,762 above the average during the past decade. Medical Adviser Smee, addressing a meeting of life insurance directors, stated that the epidemic of influenza had cost the company two and one-half times as much as did the cholera epidemic of 1842.

Influenza is decreasing in violence at Copenhagen.

At Vienna Friday the Schneiders, man and wife, convicted of murdering and robbing eight servant girls, were sentenced to death.

Succi, the faster, Friday abandoned his attempt to go without food for fifty-two days at London. He had fasted to within a few hours of forty-four days. He has lost 37 pounds since his fast commenced.

The sectarian education bill is under discussion in the lower house of the Prussian Diet. Chancellor von Caprivi Friday made a speech in favor of it.

Grand Duke Constantine, of Russia, died Monday.

Negotiations for the cession of Cuxhaven to Prussia are nearly concluded.

A detachment of the Salvation Army was attacked by a mob at Eastbourne, England, Tuesday and a number were seriously injured.

John Dillon, in a letter published Tuesday, shows that the McCarthyites in the past year have expended £45,220 for the benefit of evicted tenants.

Work for 250,000 men in the famine districts of Russia will be furnished this winter by the Board of Public Works.

Influenza has increased the death rate in Paris 100 daily.

ASTHMA CURED

DR. TAFT'S ASTHMA CURE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. in. made with a pack of 60 splendid Silk pos, assorted, bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. $1. Agts. Wanted. Lemarle's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT B 34 CHICAGO, ILL.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO

$3.50 PER DAY ALL WINTER

Can be made easy by any energetic person selling "CELESTION PASTE STOVE POLISH." No brush required. No hard labor. No dust or dirt. Always ready for use. An article every housekeeper will buy. 216,000 packages sold in Philadelphia. Exclusive agency for one or more counties given competent person. Write to-day enclosing stamp for particulars. You will never regret it. Address, CHAMPION CO., 46 N. Fourth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & Co., Homeopathic Chemists,
London, England.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts

WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

JOHN G. FEE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

will stimulate the faith of hundreds who will see in it how God can work in moral reforms, his wonders to perform, when state, church and nation oppose their combined power. Buy it for your boys and girls and you will not fail to read it yourself.

Cloth, 211 pages, illustrated, $1.00.

Postage, 10 cents extra. Address

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N

221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help if that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Still Another Factory at HARVEY

A. J. SWEENEY & SON'S IRON WORKS from Wheeling, West Virginia, have agreed to move their extensive works to Harvey and employ men to whom first year's wages will be $180,000.00. Their location is just west of Academy Addition. This will bring hundreds more of mechanics to Harvey, and add largely to value of lots. Always buy Real Estate from first hands. Save commission to agents. Be sure you get a straight Warranty Deed.

Do not fail to secure plat of this wonderful Temperance town with our price lists of lots around the Academy—THE EDUCATIONAL CENTER—at once if you have not already done so.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart.

Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 22

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,137.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	SELECTED:
Notes and Comments.... 1	Why Do You Call the Bible the Word of God? 3
The New York Convention..... 8	Freemasonry in France.. 3
The Famine in Russia... 8	Anti-secrecy in New York..... 5
End of the Louisiana Lottery..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The Good Templars in Politics..... 8	Our New York Letter; Some Necessary Reforms; A Letter From an Old Friend.....5,6
A Suggestion for Wheat-on..... 8	LITERATURE..... 6
CONTRIBUTIONS:	OBITUARY..... 7
He Careth for Me (Poetry)..... 1	LODGE NOTES..... 7
Beware of False Prophets in Lambskin Aprons..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
A Dangerous Heritage... 2	THE N. C. A..... 7
A Bible Reading..... 3	THE HOME..... 10
"Some Figures and an Opinion"..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
NEW ENGLAND LETTER... 4	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
WASHINGTON LETTER... 4	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 13
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

This is New York Convention number.

Again we have to ask the indulgence of our numerous correspondents the publication of whose favors is delayed by the present crowded state of our columns.

Miss Emma Hilman and Miss Rose Myers, two talented and devoted young ladies, were in Chicago last week on their way to New York City. From thence they go to Sheptone, Port Natal, Southeast Africa, to labor in the Fairview Mission, established by Rev. A. D. Noyes and his wife, assisted by Miss F. Grace Allen.

The health of Rev. T. H. Hanna, D.D., pastor of the United Presbyterian church at Monmouth, Ill., we regret to learn, is in so precarious a condition, that he has been warned by his physician to relinquish his arduous duties and take absolute rest, or subject himself to the danger of a permanent breaking down. His many friends will certainly rejoice if he succeeds in thwarting the threatened catastrophe.

For a reform town, ably governed, having its Sabbath laws strictly enforced, and with a rich vein of public morality visible throughout its entire domain, Toronto, Canada, is to be highly commended; and as an example for other towns and cities, it is unrivaled in the United States. At a recent municipal election a majority of 7,000 citizens voted against running street cars on Sunday; three ladies were elected school trustees, and it was decided to furnish school-books to pupils of the public schools free of charge. Furthermore, a pronounced temperance man was elected mayor. Happy Toronto!

One of the latest secret societies organized in the West is called "The Knights of Abraham Lincoln." Its objects are to perpetuate the present public school system; to restrict immigration; to bring about the compulsory education, in the English language, of all children in the United States; to tax all property, and to oppose the election to public office of any but native American and non-Catholic citizens. We think that if it would drop its element of secrecy, it might secure a respectable following. Apparently there is very little in its alleged objects of which it need be ashamed. The supreme council of the order was recently in session at St. Joseph, Mo.

A pious brother in the gospel ministry at the East suggests "that all Christians, when they engage in the public worship of God, 'and draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith,' should have permission given to them to take part in the meetings by speaking or praying. If it is not possible to grant more than a moment to each one who wishes to speak or pray, let that time be given to them; and by all means encourage the habit of confessing Christ before men and telling what the Lord has done for the soul." The brother is right, and the custom which he recommends is quite generally followed in the West. The old-fashioned "prayer and conference meetings" of the churches are still in vogue, and especially so in the evangelical missions in this city and elsewhere. It is a very desirable feature and full of instruction. Singing is another form of worship that is very acceptable.

We are in receipt of the first and second issues of the Gospel Witness, a large and comely monthly of sixteen quarto pages, published by Rev. A. S. Worrell (who also is its editor), at La Grange, Cook county, Ill. Its object is "to teach the whole Gospel, and to teach it in God's order." The editor is a Baptist clergyman, of undisputed piety, and there is sufficient tact manifest in the numbers before us to promise a worthy periodical all the year round. Mr. Worrell has secured the services of two able associate editors, and a corps of special contributors. The spirit manifested throughout its columns is eminently pious, and well-abreast with the best evangelical teachings and reforms of the day. We commend it alike to pastors and people as a living testimony to the truth of the Scriptures and the power of God to save to the uttermost all who come unto him. It should be in every family. The subscription price is $1 per annum.

At Allentown, Penn., Mr. Henry J. German, a well-known lawyer, and a member of several prominent secret societies, died in the latter part of January. Rev. Dr. G. F. Spieker, pastor of a Lutheran church, who was engaged to conduct the obsequies, being very strongly opposed to what he calls "oath-bound organizations who are trying to become a substitute for the church," expressed a wish that the lodges should not turn out in funeral form; but they came, notwithstanding, ready for service. At the cemetery the carriages passed through the ranks of the lodges; but Dr. Spieker and the mourners on foot, before reaching the men in regalia, turned aside and took a short route to the grave, where the religious services were completed, and the minister departed without waiting for the lodges to perform their rites. The affair, it is said, created considerable feeling among the lodge-members; but most of the Cynosure readers will appreciate the strategy of the clergyman.

Col. Elliot F. Shepard, proprietor of the New York Mail and Express, recently applied for space in the Columbian Exposition, in which to print a daily edition of his paper, during the Fair, simultaneously with the New York issue, exhibiting to the public the various operations by which a great newspaper is manufactured. His application was favorably received by Director-General Davis; but (Colonel Shepard alleges) publishers of Chicago daily papers interfered, with the objection that he is not the manufacturer of the presses, etc., which he proposed to exhibit; he complains that he has been ill-used in the matter, and that his proposition is likely to be defeated by the jealousy of his local contemporaries. Chicago publishers can afford to be more generous than this charge seems to indicate. Col. Shepard is a conscientious editor, formerly of Chicago; and, as compared with a large proportion of the current secular papers, the Mail and Express is exceptionally clean.

Some of our brethren who have renounced the dominion and practices of the secret orders into which they were misled through misrepresentation, have yet a very strong conscientious disinclination to speak openly of the lodge and its secret work, as if their public reference to these works of darkness, which they were sworn to conceal and never reveal, should involve them in the sin of perjury. The Bible is very explicit in making this sort of revelation a solemn duty. We quote from Leviticus 5: 4, 5: "If a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil"—as in Masonic initiation—"or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these. And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing." To make his confession complete, he should tell all that he knows concerning the abominations into which he has been entrapped, in order to warn others against committing a similar indiscretion and sin.

HE CARETH FOR ME.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

And doth He care for me?
Oft at the midnight hour I've seen, in dreaming,
Its foreground black and bare, its background bright;
And just half-way between, a cross is gleaming,
Blood-stained and dim upon my wildered sight;
He careth for me.

And doth He care for me?
Oh, heart of mine, be still! sweet rest he giveth;
His angels bright have left the gates ajar:
'Midst all I know that my Redeemer liveth
And I shall dwell in that bright land afar;
He careth for me.

And so, He careth for me!
Bright be the waves upon that sparkling river
And bright the billows on that jasper sea;
Bright be the glory in that grand forever,
And bright that crowning pledge for aye shall be.
He careth for me.

Steamburgh, N. Y.

BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS IN LAMBSKIN APRONS.

"A beautiful system of morality veiled in allegory" should develop beauty in the personal morality of the adherents of such a system. But both in theory and practice this Masonic system of morals is too heavily and darkly "veiled."

Yet many are inclined to persist in the claim that Masonry, considered merely as a moral system, is a perfect one, and that harmony in belief and practice with the moral tone of Masonic obligations would sanctify and perfect the ordinary Christian.

In testing the claims of ostensible promoters of Christian morals, it is surely in order to apply the test provided by the Author of Christian morals himself. His rule is, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

I offer a few specimens of fruit that have fallen into my own hands, hoping that unperverted tastes will try their flavor.

When I was initiated, the superintendent of my Sunday-school was chaplain. He was a reformed drunkard, who seemed to have become a Christian. In a conversation, afterward, I spoke of the murder of a Mason, when he declared that a man who would take such obligations and break them was "well out of the way."

This was one of my first tastes of fruit from the Masonic tree. Its flavor smacked of thorns. I said to myself at once that if all I knew of Masonry was that it had power to warp the moral sense and twist the judgment of such a man so far as to make him the advocate and defender of that flagrant crime, this alone would condemn Freemasonry.

In the same conversation this Sunday-school superintendent denied the third point of fellowship in the oath of the third degree, and declared that it referred exclusively to the Masonic secrets of that degree, and not to secrets that were personal.

Months later, in another conversation in which he admitted that he had taken the Royal Arch degree, he said that if he saw a murder committed by a Mason, he "would keep it as long as ever he could." On the witness stand, under oath, he would tell; but "nothing else would get it out of him."

It was much like saying that he would let me hang and leave my child an orphan, or wear out the last day of my life in prison as the victim of erroneous suspicion, rather than tell the truth about a villain who happened to know how to give the grand hailing sign. That taste of fruit from the Masonic garden suggested thistles.

A good while after this I was talking with an old Methodist minister who had for many years been in the lodge. He thought I must have taken my initiation in a wrong spirit; and when I admitted that I did not suppose it to be serious, and saw it on the ridiculous side chiefly at the time of my initiation, he declared that his own was "one of the most serious transactions of his life." When I instanced the penalty as unfit for such men as we were to utter, and something I would never say in earnest with the understanding that it had any meaning, a strange look, solemn, hard and stern, came over his face as he defended Masonic assassination, declaring that if a man broke such obligations, "no punishment was too severe."

Yet this man went from our conversation to the church of Jesus Christ of which he was pastor, and went there to meet a company of innocent children. The taste of this fruit was very bitter indeed.

I add a sample given me by Rev. S. C. Kimball, editor of the Christian Witness, published at Newmarket, N. H.: A Methodist pastor declined to subscribe because the paper opposed secret societies. Mr. Kimball explained that the Christian Witness did this, believing that these societies injured the religious interest of young men. "Not at all," replied the clergyman; "the reverse is true. When I have been low in my mind, I have been with the presiding elder to the Masonic lodge and had my mind greatly refreshed."

His wife was listening, and Mr. Kimball remarked that it was "a pity she could not go to the lodge with him and obtain refreshment for her soul."

"I wish she could," replied her husband; "there is nothing to hinder."

"Do you mean to say," asked Mr. Kimball, "that you would be willing to have your wife initiated in due form into Ancient Craft Masonry, in the presence of strange men?"

"Certainly; I should be glad to have her."

Mr. Kimball immediately took an authentic exposure of Freemasonry from the grip-sack he had brought with him and opened it, if I remember rightly, to a picture of the candidate stripped for the third degree. At first the clerical Mason tried to hedge by representing this exposure of Masonry as incorrect; but presently, overwhelmed with proof, gave in, exclaiming, "What did the man do with his oath who wrote that book?" "He broke it," said Mr. Kimball, "as every honest man should."

It is obvious that this remark did not apply to "present company," for that Methodist minister was not an "honest man." The "beautiful system of morality" had been too heavily "veiled in allegory" to accomplish much in making him a "better Christian." Is not this fruit exceeding sour?

If the constant fruitage of Masonic teaching and training are murder and falsehood, with other sins and crimes, we shall do well to turn from the advocates and oracles of this false religious system and listen to Him who gave us the simple rule, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

CRUCIFER.

A DANGEROUS HERITAGE.

I was in England, visiting one of her most distinguished authors and his family, at their suburban villa, amid the surroundings of which was gathered all that tends to make life pleasant and home desirable.

It was during my stay in this agreeable retreat that London was startled by the first of the Whitechapel murders, the barbarity of which horrified the entire civilized world. It had been for a day or two a topic of conversation in the family, and the two other guests and myself had discussed the crime as a social event of more than ordinary depravity.

We had all gathered in the drawing-room, after dinner, with our host, his amiable wife and daughters, and his only son, of whom the family was justly proud. Presently the host arose, and, without any prefatory remark, quoted the passage in the Decalogue, "Thou shalt do no murder." Having by this expression secured the attention of the company, he briefly referred to the Whitechapel murderer; and as he spoke he stepped towards the door, beckoned with his hand and exclaimed, "Here he comes!"

The effect upon us was magical. The next instant a servant entered, ushering in a little boy, certainly not more than seven years old, clad in coarse and tattered garments, barefooted, and extremely dirty wherever his person was visible. On his head was a cloth cap, of rude fashion and faded material, which was not removed when he came among us. A sinister smile lighted up his features, and a boyish self-confidence was manifest in his bearing as the servant seated him in a chair, facing the company. A wild light shone in his eyes, which resembled those of a snake, as at a signal from our host he began to speak. His utterance was too guttural to be easily understood, and his words were uncouth and jumbled together; but with that continuous smile upon his lips, he told us how the sight of blood delighted him, while the light in his eyes gleamed with increasing fierceness as he rolled them about in a sort of ecstasy, until we could see the intensity of enjoyment which he would experience in cutting all our throats at sight, merely to satisfy his craving for blood, and we began to realize the raptures of cannibalism. As soon as he had ceased to speak, our host silently motioned the servant to remove him from the room, and when the bloodthirsty elf had disappeared, he thus addressed us:

"In this little boy we have seen an illustration of at least one motive with which great crimes have been many times committed, and why they frequently become impenetrable mysteries. I knew his father well—a cruel and vicious boy at school; a ruffian before he became a man, nearly killing several of his companions, and a murderer at twenty-three—his victim being his concubine, the mother of this lad—and an executed convict within six weeks after the commission of this crime. In his brief career he seems to have passed heartlessly through every gradation of vice, and died as unfeelingly as he had lived. I would have placed his boy among better influences and promoted his interests, but the law of consanguinity and the courts handed him over to the care of an uncle, who was hardly less vicious than the father. You have seen for yourselves the dangerous disposition that the boy already exhibits; and the influences to which he is constantly exposed, and the neglect from which he constantly suffers, sufficiently foreshadow the destiny that awaits him.

"From the beginning of our race; from the day when the first man born into the world shed the blood of his brother and mingled it with the dust, down to the period of the Whitechapel murder, there have been monsters among men, in whom the sight of blood induces a relentless insanity. The worst example of modern times was seen in the great French Revolution, when all Paris indulged in a carnival of violence and bloodshed terrible to remember, and not reconcilable with any normal condition of the reason. It was one of those mental aberrances that develop the worst passions of lower animals, bringing the patient into harmony with all that is diabolical, and worse than all, is incurable and insatiable.

"This thirst for blood has its origin in either a morbid depravity of the moral nature, affecting the mental functions, and intensified by fortuitous circumstances, such as continuous association with criminals, or in the inheritance of this unhallowed passion from depraved parentage. In the case of the little boy whom you have seen, the latter condition prevails, but his disposition to gloat upon the wasting life-blood of a fellow-being is no less manifest than in the mind of a vengeful murderer.

"Mr. Dickens has depicted in 'Barnaby Rudge,' the posthumous and idiotic son of a murderer, a sickening and crazing at the sight of blood. This is another phase of hereditary mental disease, derived from the terror-stricken mother after passing through the scene of murder in which her husband was the principal actor. But we may reasonably believe that had Mrs. Rudge, instead of her husband, been at that particular period the murderer, a more terrible ante-natal impression might have been made upon the mind of her offspring, and that in after-years he would have displayed in his nature all that you have witnessed in the little boy to-day.

"A mother's methods of thinking, and even her habits of life for months before childbirth, as well as the natural traits of the father, are often reflected in the child. If the family has lived temperately and enjoyed a large degree of domestic happiness, or even of peace only, and its circumstances and surroundings have been agreeable throughout, the child should be correspondingly amiable and happy from its birth. On the other hand, if the parents have been continuously drunken and quarrelsome, the child's life will probably be marked by discontent, ill-temper and recklessness, with an unquenchable thirst for intoxicating beverages. At least, this result is so common that it has become quite firmly established as an element of medical jurisprudence.

"There may be, however, a duplex nature in the same individual—a subversion of the mental and moral character that must cause absolute suffering. Suppose, for instance, a child is born whose parents widely differ in temperaments, habits and morals; the one exhibiting a tender conscience, a love of good order, amiability, and refinement, while the other manifests directly the opposite of these desirable traits. It is possible that the child may discover many of the characteristics, physical, mental and moral, of its progenitors. In some cases the worst might be modified by a preponderance of the best; but it is also possible that the two classes of propensities might be so evenly balanced that neither would be neutralized; and this double possession, then, might create a mental and moral struggle, marked by contrary emotions and intense anxiety. The virtues of the mother (let us assume) continually war against the vices of the father for supremacy, and as the youth approaches manhood his better nature revolts at the grossness which he discovers within himself. Happy indeed is he if he can successfully combat the evil and maintain the excellence for which he strives. If his two natures are more equally poised, the inward warfare must become a source of great distress. In this connection it would be interesting to trace to this cause numerous applications for divorces and certain suicides for which no apparent motive exists. If the father has been an habitual drunkard, and the mother a pure woman, their offspring, should the mother-nature prevail, will look upon intoxication with disgust, and vice versa.

"There are circumstances attending the commission of this Whitechapel crime which to my mind indicate one of two murderous conditions of the slayer. Either he was a man filled with the spirit of revenge for some real or fancied offense—for there is no appearance of intended robbery in the assault—the work was too elaborately done for that—or there was a morbid disposition to destroy life without the temptations that ordinarily instigate deeds so startling and foul and I believe that if the perpetrator is ever discovered, he will be recognized as the victim of a nature perverted by circumstances over which he has no control, and for which no responsibility morally attaches, although the law may justly hold him guilty.

"The remedy in these morbid cases is not found in the infliction of corporeal punishment, beyond the sequestration of the individual from society. Confinement and human treatment are requisite, involving the removal of all external temptations that can incite the diseased mind to indulge in its proclivities for shedding blood. The man may be otherwise perfectly sane, but he is not to be trusted if exposed to whatever may arouse his dormant desire to take life; and not unfrequently his disease terminates in suicide, because there is no one else to slay."

"But, Mr. —," I asked, as our host turned to seat himself, "suppose that he is 'a man filled with the spirit of revenge,' as you have suggested, and thoroughly sane—what would you do with him then?"

"Hang him," he said. MAT. HAWTHORN.
Chicago, Ill.

A BIBLE READING.

"THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT."

Luke 24: 49-52. Acts 1: 4, 5.

Commands to tarry for "the promise of the Father, which (saith Jesus) ye heard of me."

Returning from the ascension to Jerusalem, full of rejoicing and praise, they awaited the Pentecost. Acts 2: 1-4.

The promise of the Father of which Jesus spake, on the evening before his crucifixion (John 13: 30 and 18: 12), while Judas was on his errand of betrayal, viz: John 12: 31, 32; 14: 16-20; 15: 26, 27; 16: 7-14.

Promised to penitent Jews at Pentecost (Acts 2: 37-39), when the table of the Lord was extended to 3,000 souls. Acts 2: 41, 42.

Bestowed at Samaria, one year after Pentecost. Acts 8: (5-8), 14-17.

Eight years after Pentecost first fell upon Gentiles (Acts 10: 34-44), when the fellowship with the apostles (as at first, Acts 2: 41, 42), was extended to the Gentiles. Acts 10: 45 to 11: 18.

Twenty-two years after, Pentecost was bestowed upon twelve persons at Ephesus. Acts 19: 1-6.

Promised to "believers." John 7: 37-39. N.

"SOME FIGURES AND AN OPINION."

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Under the above caption, the Milwaukee Sentinel, in a leading editorial, gives the subjoined statistics of population, together with the percentage of arrests, in the principal cities of the United States:

	Popula- tion.	Arrests per cap.
New York.....	1,515,301	4.92
Chicago.....	1,099,850	3.63
Philadelphia.....	1,046,964	4.78
Brooklyn.....	806,343	3.52
St. Louis.....	451,770	3.91
Boston.....	448,477	7.33
Baltimore.....	434,439	6.12
San Francisco.....	298,997	7.83
Cincinnati.....	296,908	4.72
Cleveland.....	261,353	2.87
Buffalo.....	255,664	4.36
New Orleans.....	242,039	6.20
Detroit.....	205,876	3.45
Milwaukee.....	204,468	1.75
Washington.....	202,978	8.76
Newark.....	181,830	3.18
Minneapolis.....	164,738	2.84

These figures indicate (apparently) that Milwaukee has a smaller number of arrests, and, as we might infer, a better state of morals than any other of our large cities. The Sentinel says that they have 1,400 saloons, besides an immense business done by the breweries; moreover, the saloons are all open on the Lord's day. The inference is, that the taking away of all restraints, and making the sale and use of liquor ABSOLUTELY FREE, is the reason why the morals are better than elsewhere. Its argument is as follows:

"We have more than 1,400 saloons all wide open on Sundays, and we have half a dozen theaters and an art gallery open on Sundays. We depend on education and moral suasion and good sense to keep people straight—with very severe handling if they become disorderly without the provocation of oppression. Men are mostly disposed to conduct themselves with sobriety if they are not nagged."

It ought to have occurred to the editor that these statistics prove too much, and really disprove the "opinion" which he so confidently affirms. Thus, San Francisco has most nearly the same conditions, so far as legal restraint is concerned, as Milwaukee. There is absolutely no Sunday law in California, and San Francisco abounds in saloons; yet the percentage of arrests to population is 7.83, next to the largest of any city in the Union. If free whisky makes Milwaukee a moral city, what does it do for San Francisco?

The two cities that stand next to Milwaukee in the smallness of the number of arrests, are Cleveland and Minneapolis. According to the editor's theory, there ought to be, in these two cities, more than ordinary freedom to sell liquor and run theatres on seven days of the week. But, on the contrary, they are among our best-governed cities, with strong, repressive laws against Sunday traffic. If restraining laws cause drunkenness and crime, there ought to be more than the average in their criminal statistics.

Then, too, the city of Washington disproves the theory of the editor. This city leads all others in the number of arrests, being 8.76. It has practically open saloons on the Sabbath. All the large hotels have open bars, and sell at all times without restraint. A few of the saloons close their front doors on Sunday, but the more than 1,200 saloons run, as a rule, seven days of each week. If open and free saloons favor morality and good order in Milwaukee, they surely do not in Washington, and they certainly do not in New Orleans. The truth is, that the universal testimony of all civil governments is, other things being equal, the amount of crime will be in proportion to the freedom with which people buy and use intoxicating drinks; and that where the Sunday laws are best sustained by public opinion, and best enforced, there is the least crime. If the editor's "opinion" is correct, then all laws against gambling and licentiousness, and all other laws that are but imperfectly observed, ought to be repealed. But none except the worst of men would desire this.

WHY DO YOU CALL THE BIBLE THE WORD OF GOD?

This we consider one of the very important questions of the catechism. Concerning it, every catechumen should "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope" (faith) "that is in you, with meekness and fear." That the Bible is the Word of God every Christian is firmly convinced. Perhaps there is no other truth of which we are so "fully persuaded," and which seems so clear, so evident to us, and yet there are but few things of which it is so difficult for us to convince others, and to make plain to others.

That which so firmly convinces us that the Bible is the Word of God, and makes this truth so clear to us, is the testimony of the Holy Spirit, in our hearts, which testimony reaches our heart through the Word itself. That which makes it so difficult for us to convince anyone of this truth, which is so evident to us, is the absence of this testimony of the Holy Spirit. Indeed, it is impossible for us to convince anyone that the Bible is the Word of God, so long as that person will not hear the Word, and accept the testimony of the Holy Spirit. The very moment one truly accepts the Word of God, and the witness which the Holy Ghost bears through it, he is convinced, becomes a believer, is converted, not by our arguments, but by the words and power of the Holy Spirit. Thus it becomes apparent that no man can ever claim the honor of converting another, and that it is most certainly true, as our catechism says in another place, that "The work of conversion . . . is solely the gracious work of the Holy Ghost."

We believe the Bible is the Word of God, "Because God gave it in writing through the prophets in the Old Testament and the evangelists and apostles in the New." "Moses and the prophets" wrote the books of the Old Testament, but they are not, on that account, thoughts, or words, of Moses and the prophets; "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," 2 Peter 1: 21. Nor are the thoughts, or words, of the New Testament, the thoughts, or words, of the "evangelists and apostles," because written by them, as it is written, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." 2 Tim. 3: 16.

By this we learn that the Holy Spirit worked upon the hearts and minds of those "holy men of God," and made known to them the thoughts which God wanted them to write, and also the words in which he wanted them to express these thoughts, and that these men were obedient to the directions of the Holy Spirit, so that the thoughts and words are not the thoughts and words of the men who wrote them, but of God who gave them. If a friend would ask you to write a letter, and would tell you just what to write and the words in which to write it, the letter would not be your letter, but the letter of the friend who asked you to write it.

Thus the Bible is not the Bible of the prophets, evangelists, and the apostles, but of God, who chose them to write it; this is why we call the Bible the Word of God.

Those who do not believe that "the Bible is the Word of God," will ask you why you believe that God directed those men what to write, and that the Bible is of God. Now, there are more than ten thousand answers that could be given to this question, but we will mention only one, and that we consider the very best one of all, and that is because God's Word says so.

In the two verses quoted in this article (2 Peter 1: 21 and 2 Tim. 3: 16) you will see that the Bible does say that it is of God, and that it is the very best proof that a Christian can have, or give, and as long as people will not accept this proof, they will not accept any. We have other reasons for thinking that the Bible is the Word of God, but we know that it is the Word of God, because the Bible says so.

To all who truly accept the Bible as the Word of God, it becomes the deciding authority, and only rule in faith and life, and an unfailing fountain of consolation, and "gives us strength for all the strife, and all the toil and pain of life." May it ever be all this to each of us.—Lutheran Chimes.

FREEMASONRY IN FRANCE.

"The evolution of modern history, and especially of the history of Freemasonry," says an article in the New York Catholic Review, "has progressed far more rapidly within the last few months than could have been anticipated, even by the initiated. Indeed, it may be fairly presumed that the developments are far from satisfactory to the members of the secret organizations."

"The bold accusation made against the French government by M. Boissard, the eminent counsel for Mgr. Xavier Gouth-Soulard, the Archbishop of Aix, that the French government was under the control of the Freemasons, contributed much, no doubt; to stir up the anger of that resentful body. The bold defiance so fearlessly yet so provokingly hurled at the attorney-general, had much to do with the foolish and ill-considered assertion of M. Floquet, President of the French Assembly, that His Holiness, Pius IX. was a Freemason, was intended, if allowed to pass unchallenged, to silence the Catholics on that subject and give a temporary triumph to the prince of falsehoods. The lie given in the Chamber to M. Floquet did not disturb him. He is not sensitive on that score. He accepted the insult which he had not the manhood to resent.

"The provocation, it will be admitted, was strong. According to L'Univers:

M. Boissard had addressed the attorney-general, personifying in him the government and the Freemasons, as if they were the accused.

"'You are prosecuting the government,' exclaimed the president.

"'I am prosecuting the government,' replied M. Boissard.

"In the course of his powerful defense of the archbishop, which was really a bold philippic against the government, he returned to the charge:

"'The truth is,' he said, 'that among the men who govern us there is one sentiment which dominates all others; entire submission to the orders of the Freemasons. The truth is, that, with them, hatred of the Catholics exceeds everything, even the love of country.'

"Here the president interrupting, asked:

"'Do you speak in your name or that of your client?'

"'I speak in the name of my client and in my own.'

"The president—'Your professional oath does not permit you to directly attack the state."

"I do not attack the state, sir, but I use my right to censure your acts. To summarize my full thought, I say the great misfortune in this case is, that the men who rule us have the hearts of Freemasons rather than the hearts of Frenchmen."

The spirit that actuates these lodges is further exemplified by the action of the French Masons of Toulouse.

The Encyclopedique lodge of the Orient, of Toulouse, has put itself in advance of all the others by asking the lodges to unite with it in order to pursue "Clericalisme" which, it says, "is audaciously raising its head." The Encyclopedique "asks that all the religious congregations be dissolved, that their property be given to the public institutions and that they be prohibited from ever again re-organizing; the right of union and of association to be reserved to the Freemasons alone."

It demands, besides, that the wearing of the soutane in the streets, be prohibited; its use to be allowed "only to bishops, priests, vicars, pastors, or rabbis who are salaried from the Department of Public Worship, and to these only in the exercise of public worship."

"That it shall be the privilege of Masons only, to display, in public, their distinctive badges, such as the aprons, etc., which they wear at the funerals of their F. F. . ."

"Various penalties, as fines, imprisonment, deprivation of civil and political rights, should be decreed against all persons supposed to encourage or to favor the congregations in any way."

This is not the first time that the Freemasons of Toulouse have claimed the right of half a million to govern and persecute thirty-six millions of Frenchmen.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The Woman Suffragists and fairs—American literary life. Singular state of affairs at Deer Island.—The hearing on the poll-tax question.—The "Congregationalist" on Temperance.—One way of stirring up antic-secret sentiment.

It has been a matter for wonder to me that Woman Suffragists should favor holding fairs as a method of raising money. Fifty years, or even a quarter of a century, ago there was some excuse for it. Woman had not then come to her majority and was content with childish things;—had indeed, in many cases, no other resource. But now that all this is changed and she has come to the front among the world's workers, and is demanding a recognition of her equality with man, it would be far better for the cause to drop all such weak and womanish expedients. Mrs. Ellen B. Deitrich, at the late Woman Suffrage Convention in Boston, spoke some timely truths on this subject that I hope will be duly pondered by their executive committee. She calls it very truly a "wasteful method," and "pernicious in teaching that a woman's time is of no value." Leave fairs to Daughters of Rebecca and other "foolish women," who are taught by their lodge masters that "woman is reached through her affections, while man is reached through the understanding." Of course, women who are destitute of understanding, as this distinction delicately implies, may just as well furnish "Rainbow" tables, and make cake and ice-cream for fairs as do anything else. Their time must be of small account. But let all those who believe that the woman is just as responsible as the man for her time; that it is of equal consequence for her to make all her moments, as well as all her faculties, count to some worthy purpose, steadfastly set her face against all that thus tends to belittle her sex and help on a frivolous tendency. I predict that the time will soon come when fairs as a means of raising money will be as antiquated as the old-fashioned sampler and marking stitch.

"Our literary life is trivial for the most part." This is the mournful refrain of an article in one of our leading magazines. "There is no solidarity in our American literary society, and little that can be called serious literary society at all. . . . The earnest individual literary workers among us . . . find their most nourishing and respected companionship in the merchant, and the shoemaker, and the printer, oftener than in their own guild." Couple this with the fact that a few weeks ago a newly-found paper of Emerson's, published in the Atlantic, was generally conceded by the critics to surpass in profundity of thought and beauty of style anything else which has appeared in the magazines of late, and one very naturally asks the reason why. If American literary life has grown "trivial," there must be some cause for it. How often we see the inquiry, "Does literature pay?" Imagine John Milton asking a question like this! Such men have counted literature as a profession too sacred ever to be made the mere vehicle of winning their bread and butter. If they got the bread without the butter they were satisfied. I do not know anything that will redeem American literary life from this charge of being trivial, except for writers to cease from writing about trivial things for trivial people, and offer their pens to serve some righteous reform, some noble principle, some undying truth;—in a word, to write from that deep religious conviction which is the spring of all that is grandest in the literature of our mother tongue. The trouble with American authors of recent years is that they have begun to worship too much the mighty dollar, and so it is not strange that what they write has so often a brassy sound to ears accustomed to the ring of the genuine gold;—such, for instance, as the following passage from the article by Emerson just alluded to: "It is the property of the religious sentiment to be the most refining of all influences. No external advantages, no good birth or breeding, no culture of the taste, no habit of command, no association with the elegant,—even no depth of affection that does not rise to religious sentiment—can bestow that delicacy and grandeur of bearing which belong only to a mind accustomed to celestial conversation." There are too many literary triflers, mere carvers of cherry-stones, so to speak; but they are the ones who win the prizes in literature, and their example causes many a young writer who is capable of a deep and serious work, to leave it and go to carving cherry-stones too.

If reports are not grossly exaggerated, the city's institutions at Deer Island need a thorough overhauling. Thieving, gambling and drinking go on unchecked, so that to be "sentenced to the Island" can have but little terror for people who are addicted to these diversions. The disgraceful fact has leaked out that at the opening exercises of the new Chamber of Commerce in Boston, a number of the guests were sent there for drunkenness by order of the city authorities. One can understand, in view of the license permitted, why one of them who was from St. Louis should say to the officer who arrested him that "If he had to be locked up anywhere he would prefer to be locked up on Deer Island."

The Committee on Election Laws, at the recent hearing on the poll-tax question, found themselves confronted by 150 keen-witted, bright-faced women who were ably represented by Henry B. Blackwell, Mrs. Brockaway, Mrs. Cheney, and others. No opposition to the bill was offered, and perhaps by another year women can vote for school committee without being hampered by miles of red tape. The wonder is that so many have voted at all under such discouraging circumstances. The fight on giving woman municipal suffrage will be a hard one. The saloon and other powers of evil that rule our cities and towns may be depended on to contest every inch of ground, and bring every force of bribery and intimidation to bear, so that its most ardent advocates scarcely dare to cherish any hope of victory. Still, the unexpected sometimes happens.

The Congregationalist is supposed to be the organ of the orthodox churches of New England. Isn't it about time that they let their voice be heard in condemnation of the extraordinary attitude which that paper assumes on the temperance question? To say that the Bible "everywhere condemns drunkenness" but "nowhere enjoins total abstinence," reminds one of the peculiar kind of temperance that is taught in the Masonic lodge-room; but to say that Christ "habitually drank" wine that was intoxicating, and continued to do so till men called him a wine-bibber," strikes me—and I think it will every Christian who sincerely loves his Lord—as little short of blasphemy. I am glad that its position is being assailed from so many quarters, especially by a telling broadside in the Traveller, from its brave and fearless editor, Dr. Dunn.

One of the best methods of getting Christian people to consider the subject of secrecy is by a well-conducted Bible-reading; and the writer had the pleasure last Sabbath of listening to one in her own home given by the wife of the New England agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard. About fifteen were present—godly, earnest men and women—who listened with the deepest attention, as she unfolded, in her own peculiarly interesting and happy way, the teachings of Scripture in regard to secret associations. Sister Stoddard is now open to engagements for Bible readings, and also for lectures to ladies on Adoptive Masonry, and the lodge as it affects women and the work of the W. C. T. U. Write to Mrs. A. E. Stoddard, 218 Columbus Avenue, Boston, and see how much good can thus be done in a very quiet, yet effective way. She is developing more and more the qualities of a born leader in this new and hitherto much neglected line of work among women. Enlighten the mothers of our land, and the lodge Babylon will soon fall;—at least we shall find it no longer entrenched in the church, and sheltered behind the argument used by unthinking Christian women, "that so many good men and ministers belong to it." ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3, 1892.

The good people of the country whose influence it was that caused the last Congress to enact the law closing the United States mails to all printed matter of the lottery companies, and also shutting out newspapers that published lottery advertisements, are to be congratulated. The constitutionality of this law, which was attacked by the ablest lawyers that money could employ, has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court, without a dissenting voice. This is all the more gratifying because of the rareness of unanimous concurrence in the decisions handed down by that court. In delivering the opinion, Chief Justice Fuller said: "We are constrained by the circumstances under which we find ourselves placed by the death of Mr. Justice Bradley, to whom the preparation of the opinions in these cases was committed, to postpone for the moment any elaboration of our views, and confine ourselves to the expression of the general grounds on which our decision proceeds." The decision is just as strong as though it were supported by the most elaborate argument ever made, and that is all the people care to know about it. The highest court in the land has built a mighty bulwark to support the charge made on the corruptionists by the great army of moral reform, from which the next forward movement can be made.

The work of the W. C. T. U. in a commendable reform has evidently been felt, as Senator Carey, of Wyoming, and Representative Curtis, of New York, this week introduced a bill in the Senate and House providing for the erection of a reformatory and house of detention for women charged with and convicted of crimes and misdemeanors in the District of Columbia.

A very interesting temperance mass meeting was held Sunday afternoon by the W. C. T. U., the principal speaker being Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, of Mississippi, who told some bitter truths about the manner in which the progress of the South is hampered by intemperance, and expressed the belief that the women of the section, who were gradually being aroused to the danger of the situation, would eventually bring about a change for the better. Mrs. Alden ("Pansy") read a paper on the man who drinks "occasionally," Judge Moulton spoke of the attempt of the liquor dealers to secure the repeal of the law prohibiting the sale of liquor within one mile of the Soldiers' Home, and offered a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, asking Congress not to repeal the law, but to pass one absolutely prohibiting the sale of liquor in the entire District of Columbia.

Two well-known members of Congress—Representatives Morse, of Massachusetts, and Cooper, of Indiana—were among the speakers at an anniversary meeting of a Christian Endeavor Society held here Sunday night, and both gentlemen made good speeches and marked impressions on their hearers. Mr. Morse made one remarkable statement; said he: "Since I have been in Congress, eighteen of my fellow-members have died, and I am convinced that the deaths of ten of them were directly attributable to the use of tobacco." He urged his hearers to include tobacco in their total abstinence pledges.

Congress has not been very interesting this week. The Senate has been devoting its time to the routine business on the calendar, while the House is still debating its new code of rules, which was reported from the Committee on Rules more than a week ago.

The "preacher Senator," as some people call Senator Kyle, made a most interesting speech today on a very important subject—one in which everybody is more or less interested. He spoke in favor of his bill providing for a constitutional amendment to make a uniform system of marriage and divorce laws throughout the United States. Senator Kyle is not what the world calls a great orator, but he knows how to make a strong, straightforward, business-like statement, and that is about what he did. He cited many facts proving the urgent necessity for a reform and for a plain law, which shall cover every spot under the control of the United States.

President and Mrs. Harrison gave a diplomatic dinner last night. Among the guests were Senator Mott, the Chilean Minister, and his wife; and their smiling faces, as they cordially shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, spoke volumes for their satisfaction in the peaceable outcome of the late threatening complications between their country and the United States. *

ANTI-SECRECY IN NEW YORK.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ANNUAL CONVENTION AT BINGHAMTON.

INAUSPICIOUS WEATHER, BUT AN EARNEST CHRISTIAN GATHERING.

FORCIBLE RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 4, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The State Convention has come and gone. It will be long remembered by many because of the manifest presence of the "All-Powerful One." We were indeed "assembled with one accord in one place." United prayer went up to God for his blessing and help. As the rain came down from heaven, so the Divine Spirit came "our souls to greet, and glory crowned the mercy seat." Owing to the cold driving rain which fell at the opening session, the attendance was not large, but a goodly number braved the storm.

Every speaker on the program reported for the first session. The interest and attendance increased till the close. Notwithstanding the closing session was on prayer-meeting evening, every seat in the hall, I believe, was occupied. But few left before the adjournment, which was not until 10 o'clock.

The secretary will send you a more complete report than I could here give of the proceedings. I may simply note, in passing, some indications that come with this gathering that God is leading on to victory in the Empire State.

The Utica Globe said, in announcing the Convention: "Binghamton probably has more secret societies to the square foot than any city of its size in the State, and will be a fertile field for the meeting."

Notwithstanding the subtle powers of darkness are to a large extent controlling both church and state here, the newspapers have generally been disposed to give us a fair report. But few sneers have been flung at us. Papers whose columns are filled with advertisements and praise of the spawning secret broods that are daily hatching to catch the simple, have told their readers of our gathering. The Republican has been especially courteous. May not this be an indication that God is working on the hearts and consciences of these men? May it not be that underneath the desire for popular favor and gold there is a wish that this thing of darkness was banished. Let us so hope.

The New England agent came on last Saturday. I had been advertised to preach in the Free Methodist church on Sabbath evening. But believing, so far as possible, that "the elder should serve the younger," I gave way to father. He presented the truth with power, aided by the Holy Ghost. Deep conviction for sin rested on the hearts of many. When the opportunity was given, five whose tender hearts had been touched came forward for prayers. He speaks in the same house again to-night.

So great was the interest of the Convention that by special request father will address those who may gather at the W. C. T. U. Hall, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The expenses of the Convention were amply met in the collections. The total amount collected was $70.46. This includes $25 given by the N. C. A. to the State; $10 more was promised in the near future. Others said they would help the State work financially, but were not prepared to tell to what amount. The expenses of the Convention aggregated $49.75, leaving a balance in the treasury to start a State fund to aid the work here.

Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton, was elected State Treasurer. All funds for the furtherance of State work should be sent here. Will not those whom God moves to aid the work in this State send their pledges or contributions to Bro. Woodruff at once?

A State committee, composed of the treasurer, Dr. L. D. Stone, and Rev. W. H. Clark, was appointed to secure what work it could, and appropriate State funds in the furtherance of the work.

Rev. S. G. Shaw extended a hearty invitation to the friends to hold the next annual convention in his city, Walton, N. Y.

The addresses, which were delivered with marked freedom and power, will largely be sent to you for publication.

I feel that truly our God is moving on. Having put on the armor, dear friends, let us not lay it off until all evil shall be subdued under him "whose right it is to reign." W. B. STODDARD

NOTES OF THE CONVENTION.

The meeting of the New York State Christian Association at Binghamton was a time to be long remembered by those privileged to attend its sessions.

Opening most inauspiciously, as far as the pouring rain and flooded streets could render it thus, and which prevented the presence of many whose hearts were with us, the attendance steadily increased until the close, when the hall was well filled with an intensely interested and respectful audience.

The presence of warm-hearted Christian workers, with earnest convictions, who love the light, nor fear to come to the light; and, above all, the presence of Him who said, "I am the light of the world," made not only the hours of devotion, but all the hours of the convention, rich in instruction, comfort and strength.

It was eminently a light place. Stirring truths were fearlessly uttered, and at the hands of that veteran in the work, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the dark things "done of them in secret" were brought out into a noonday of revelation, and exposed, to the astonishment of the ignorant and the discomfiture of the initiated.

Though the great evils of the day were "handed without gloves," and the startling dangers to home and church and state from secret foes were plainly set forth, all was done in the spirit of faithful love which wounds to heal, and met not the approval of conscience only, but surely of Him who said, "If any man follow me he shall not walk in darkness."

The committee on "State work" advised, and the convention voted to hold, another State Convention within a year; and arrangements were instituted for prosecuting a more vigorous campaign against the "Secret Empire," long too little disturbed amid the delusion of its adherents and the destruction of its enemies.

Long live the workers! Long live that veteran of the field who graced and enlightened our assembly with his venerable presence and words of wisdom! Long live the son whose weeks of earnest labor culminated in this convention, and when dropped in ascending flight may the falling mantle of the father descend upon the son, with an endowment of power for fiercer battle and grander victory over the "secret-sworn, invisible" foes of "God and home and native land."

"And they strengthened their hands for this good work."

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

The annual meeting of the New York State Christian Association was held in the W. C. T. U. Hall in Binghamton, N. Y., on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 2, 3, 1892.

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

BROOKLYN, February 2, 1892.

When it is remembered that there are 950 secret societies and benefit associations in Brooklyn, it requires some frankness to rebuke secrecy. At the installation of Rev. A. F. Newton, last week, over the Rochester Avenue church, there was some plain talking in the sermon and in the charge to the people. The leading thought of the latter was the need of an exalted idea of the function of the church of God as a church of his thought to the race and as an agent in his work of the redemption of man and the reconstruction of human society. The people were warned of all that cheapens its influence in the eyes of the world; unbusiness-like ways of conducting its affairs; puerile methods of raising money which excite pity, and scandalous means that arouse indignation, even among the godless. It was added, "make church membership a privilege worth possessing. Something really valuable in our own thought, and enticing to those who are without. Let no man say that he finds a closer fellowship, a warmer atmosphere, a more considerate regard for his social instincts, and a more tender sympathy in time of need, outside the church, in some club or secret clan, curtained in mystery, bound by oath, and silent to all else. Ye are children of the light; Walk in the light as he is in the light, then shall we have fellowship one with another. The blood of Jesus Christ and the solemn vows we have individually spoken over the emblems of his broken body and shed blood surely should cement us in a deathless bond, unspeakably holier and firmer than any other earthly tie."

It were well if such wholesome teachings often came from the pulpit.

Dr. Behrend's text was: "The Scripture cannot be broken." He has been known as very favorable to what is known as "higher criticism," but latterly has become conscious of the perilous extremes to which it has now come in its destructive activity. Last Sunday Dr. Lyman Abbott is reported as saying distinctly, when referring to Mr. Chadwick's welcoming him to the ranks of Unitarians: "I do not say that Jesus Christ is God." If this statement is accurately set down it disposes of the whole question—not, indeed, the question whether Dr. Abbott is right or wrong in his view; not the unending conflict between Trinitarianism and Unitarianism as a theological dogma. But it leaves no doubt (observes a Brooklyn editor), as to whether the second Plymouth pastor is orthodox or not. The orthodox say that "Jesus Christ is God." Without explaining how or why, without making, usually without trying to make, the paradox comprehensible, they have clung to this article of faith as unquestioningly as if convinced that without it the whole Christian fabric would crumble. So when a man refuses to say that "Jesus Christ is God," there is an end to that matter.

At the installation referred to, Dr. Behrends remarked that we practically destroyed the authority of God's Word by denial, by half-truths, by divorcing the New and Old Testaments or setting them in opposition, and by ignoring the warnings in dwelling on the promises. On the last point he spoke tenderly, solemnly, but without ambiguity, on the fact of future remediless suffering. He might personally wish it were not so, but the shadow of hell was there. Whether there were but one, or whether there were a million occupants, the fact remained. So of other doctrines he spoke with old-fashioned emphasis. He is known to disagree with Mr. Abbott and his ilk in their utterances. He is second to none of our Congregational theologians as a scholarly thinker and profound student. He does not edit a paper and travel as a lecturer, but gives days and nights to study, even vacations, to his Hebrew Bible. He is a pastor, too, and knows by contact with men what the dangerous trend now is.

The paper of Dr. Kincaird on the Atonement, read last week before the Manhattan Association, was another timely declaration of the scriptural ideas of grace as opposed to German rationalism, the animating spirit of much of this pen-knife criticism. The proposed union of the Manhattan Conference with that in which Mr. Abbott's church is enrolled seems less likely since his utterances grow more and more audacious. A society is, however, about to organize in this city in the interests of church union. A great many feel that it is time for all who do hold the truth as it is in Jesus to declare their unity and co-operation, in view alike of the attacks of infidels and narrowness of sectarians. Not long ago the Bishop of Chester declined to preside at a foreign missionary conference in England, because informed that it was to be undenominational, and expresses his lofty disdain for all sects, except his own sect, as follows: "Undenominationalism is the great imposture of our day, the offspring of bad logic and worse theology, the smooth-faced minion of a designing secularism." Continuing his sonorous sarcasm, he adds: "A practically unlimited aggregation of perpetually subdividing religious organizations cannot be substituted for the One Holy Catholic Church," by which he means the Episcopal denomination, and nobody else. To this petty pride and narrowness, the writer of the rejected invitation calmly says: "To a man who has lived in a country where the people worship cows, monkeys, snakes and devils, the little things that separate Christians are the small dust of the balance." May God hasten the day when bigotry may cease and the people of God see eye to eye in regard to the fundamental facts of Christian truth and fellowship.

OCCASIONAL.

SOME NECESSARY REFORMS.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 22, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On this coast the battle between darkness and light rages with great fierceness, and sometimes it seems as if the darkness is so great that the light can never penetrate it.

I have never investigated the Masonic darkness very much, but am opposed to Masons on general principles, because they do their work in secret, not even admitting their wives and daughters to their councils. Great danger to our free institutions is likely to ensue; for men are too weak to forego the opportunity thus offered to perform deeds of which they would be ashamed in public.

I am told by one well-informed, that a prominent official who embezzled funds here was, two or three years ago, cleared from punishment by Masonic influence.

I am pleased with your attitude on the liquor question. Here the field seems almost given up to the enemy. This city was consolidated last June, and it was hoped that something might be done in the way of Sunday-closing of saloons. All other places of business are closed on that day, but the saloon does more than on all the other days of the week together. A petition signed by 4,000 men has been presented to the city council, but, so far, nothing has been done.

How much we need a union of all the reform forces on a platform broad enough to take in temperance, secret societies, the labor question, the money question, transportation, and all the problems that are now agitating men's minds! Then a party could be formed strong enough to sweep the country and drive the enemy from the field. How this union is to be consummated is not yet clear; but, I think, if all reformers should confer together more, and broaden their minds so as to take in more than one reform, it could be accomplished. This is certain: Our beloved country will sink into ruin, as did ancient Rome, if these reforms are not effected, and that speedily. Yours in the cause of all reforms,

S. I. LYMAN.

A LETTER FROM AN OLD FRIEND.

CHICAGO, January 25, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—My first arrival in New York was nearly sixty years ago. Fortunately I have been favored with good company; and when I first knew of the Cynosure, there was at once a bond of sympathy formed between us, for "the merry Masons" were not much esteemed in my early home, where the Holy Scriptures was daily in use. So when they marched with the open Bible before them, and went to their old-fashioned carousals afterwards, their proceedings did not prejudice this boy in their favor.

The large-hearted founder of the Cynosure—the esteemed and venerable Pres. J. Blanchard—is entitled to the gratitude of the whole country for his faithful labors, not only against lodgery, but against other evils—slavery, for instance—for which he had the honor of being often persecuted for righteousness' sake. May he henceforth enjoy every divine blessing!

But slavery is dead, and who dares defend it now? There is this difference between slavery and lodgeism. Slaveholding was supported by the government. The master could buy and sell the different members of a family, under our civil law—a fact which must leave its hateful stamp upon the history of our country. The secret empire is a law unto itself, independent of all other constitutions and laws, and a man's oath-bound foes may be those of his own household!

Yes, the Cynosure is right in testifying against the lodge, its religious pretensions and its promotion of assassination. Believers in the Lord Jesus Christ may learn from your columns the true character of the pseudo religion of the lodge. Its very principle of secrecy is opposed diametrically to the light of Christianity, whose command is: "Go ye into all the world," and make it known openly and freely, without money and without price. Church members can only be justified, as members of the lodge, as Judas was among the apostles.

On one's returning birthday among the seventies, it is natural to review the traveled path, and I may say that the Old Cynosure has been a welcome weekly visitor at my home for twenty years. Its excellent lessons upon the principles and practices of lodgeism in general, and Freemasonry in particular, have become widely and best known to your readers. Masonry was thought by many to be in harmony with Christianity; but now it may, with equal propriety, be based on Mohammedanism or Buddhism, and almost any other false system of religion extant. It professes to unite men (but no women) in the religion of Masonry, but refuses to let them pray to heaven in the name of our Redeemer. Hence its religion is spurious, its morality shallow and assumed, and its obligations criminal. It tolerates the admission of Christian ministers to its pagan mysteries, requires them to surrender, within its walls, their faith in Jesus Christ, "the only name whereby we must be saved;" and yet many ministers of the Gospel and the members of Christian churches are found in full fellowship and accord with this abomination!

What folly!

SENEX.

LITERATURE.

RUM, RAGS AND RELIGION: "In Darkest America, and the Way Out." By Rev. O. M. Owen. Illustrated. Published by the author at Binghamton, N. Y.

Rev. O. M. Owen, the author of this book, is at present pastor of the Free Methodist church at Binghamton, N. Y. His name as a sterling preacher and a writer for the press has been known to the public for many years. This, his latest work (we believe), with its quaint title presents a shocking picture of depravity and wretchedness as it exists in the slums of our cities, the homes of the improvident and dissipated, and in the realms of the saloon-keepers and gamblers. The picture of the lower strata of our social life, as drawn by him, is an impressive one, and the causes which lead to this distressing degree of degradation and misery, as set forth in this pamphlet of 125 pages, should awaken to activity for its suppression every effort on the part of our philanthropists and lawmakers to overcome the evils which it exposes. It is a twice-told tale, it is true, but it cannot be told too often, nor too strongly urged upon the better classes of society. The remedy is in their hands, if they will be faithful to (not neglectful of) the interests of our common country. "In the way out," he claims that the church should lead; then that our immigration laws should be amended, to restrict the influx of dissipated, vicious aliens; then the suppression of the liquor traffic, and the proper regulation of labor. At present we are suffering, as a nation, from opium dens, the worship of wealth and the unhallowed strife to obtain it; the ill-paid, half-starved working-classes, driven to crime by poverty and despair; prostitution and gambling; the evil influence of the papal religion, and all the quicksands of the devil to ruin young men and women. The book deserves a wide and careful reading. It can be obtained of the author.

Every page of Our Day for February is replete with written thought, or that which will beget earnest reflection in the mind of every intellectual reader. Prof. E. J. James has an able paper on University Extension in the United States, a subject that is just now receiving considerable attention in educational circles. Jesuit Aggression in the Minnesota Public Schools embodies the official report of a committee of Minneapolis Union Ministers' Meeting upon the recent educational movement in Faribault and Stillwater, which the editors introduce as follows: "The following trenchant and powerful report . . . deserves a national circulation. It illustrates the peril of any compromise with the Roman Catholic clerical party in its official attitude of determined hostility to the American common-school system. Ministers' unions in every large city of the land may most profitably imitate the example of the Minneapolis meeting by speaking out boldly in support of moral and educational, as well as religious, reform. This report is the production of the eloquent preacher and reformer, the Rev. S. L. B. Speare, of Minneapolis, and was adopted and printed by unanimous vote." Robert Browning's Theology is a remarkable paper copied from the London (Eng.) Spectator. The conclusion is, that "he was a heterodox Christian, no doubt, with certain Pantheistic leanings, but he was a Christian of the utmost intensity. He believed, from his heart, that Christ revealed God, and was personally the Divine Son of God, in a sense a great deal deeper and a great deal more vivid and personal than most orthodox Christians." Perhaps so. College Students as Rumsellers, includes Wm. Lloyd Garrison's recent Open Letter on the D. K. E. initiation of his son at Harvard University and extracts from comments of such newspapers as the Boston Herald and the Philadelphia Press, concluding with a letter of thanks to Mr. Garrison, from Henry W. Putnam, "a graduate and overseer of Harvard, and the father of boys preparing for college." These strictures are both timely and just. An article on the Rights and Wrongs of the Red Men is based on the platform of the ninth annual conference of the friends of the Indians at Lake Mohonk, which outlines a desirable course for the better education and care of these wards of the nation. Joseph Cook's Monday Lecture shows that Fruitful Faith is Identical in All Ages, no synopsis of which can do it justice. It must be read in its entirety, and may then be re-read with increased pleasure and advantage. Reviews of Sir Edwin Arnold's "Seas and Lands" and of Helen Hetherington's "Paul Nugent, Materialist;" President Harrison's "Our Chief National Danger"—a corrupt majority of voters; Missionary Statistics; Herrick Johnson's recent sermon against Sunday opening of the Columbian Exposition; Prof. Virchow on Darwinism; the approaching unity of nations; our population and its distribution, and questions for specialists, answered by Henry B. Blackwell, are among the minor papers of this very excellent number of Our Day. Published at 161 La Salle street, Chicago; $2.50 per annum.

The Century opens its February issue with a full-page frontispiece, a fine copy of Titian's "La Bella," from the picture in the Pitti palace at Florence; illustrating Stillman's Old Italian Masters. Other illustrated articles are as follows: The New National Guard—our modern militia—Francis V. Greene; The Jews in New York, continued; Recent Discoveries Concerning the Gulf-stream; Pioneer Days in San Francisco; De Hant er Buzzard's Nes; Original Portraits of Washington. There are, also: A paper on Characteristics, by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, continued; one on Richard Henry Dana, one—perhaps the most important of all—on The Australian Registry of Land Titles, by Edward Atkinson; a new installment of the Naulahka, by Kipling and Balestier, a review of the Charitable Career of the Louisiana Lottery—the degradation of a State—by Clarence C. Buel. Topics of the Time include the same subject—the Louisiana Lottery; A "Cheap-Money" Handbook, and the Metropolitan Museum. There are, also, the customary Open Letters, and half-a-dozen articles in "Lighter Vein." A very good number. New York: The Century Company $4.00 per annum.

The Cosmopolitan for February presents a full-page portrait of Wm. Dean Howells, who will shortly become a co-editor of this magazine. The contents for the month are of considerable interest. The following articles are finely illustrated: Love and Marriage, by Sir Edwin Arnold; The Petroleum Industry, by Peter Macqueen; The Columbus Portraits, by Wm. E. Curtis; Leading Amateurs in Photography, by Clarence B. Moore; Peppercorn by Afghans, by Archibald Forbes; Relation of Invention to Conditions of Life, by Geo. H. Knight; The Rise and Fall of Fonseca, by Rob't Adams, Jr.; De Juventute, by Dan. C. Gilman; Pets and Sports of a Farmer's Boy, by Murat Halstead; Trailing Yew, by Patience Stapleton; In a Dove-Cote, by C. H. Crandall. H. H. Boyesen contributes a sketch of Mr. Howell and His Work; there are also poems, social problems and book notices. Published in New York City; $3.00 per annum.

The Outlook, heretofore published as a quarterly in the interest of Sunday observance, has just been changed into a monthly magazine and otherwise made more acceptable to the mass of religious readers. It is now published at Room No. 100 Bible House, New York City, under the title of the Sabbath Outlook, and is furnished to subscribers at 50 cents per annum. It will treat all phases of the Sabbath question as they arise, giving special attention to original research and ultimate facts. The subject grows in importance continually.

OBITUARY.

DANIEL HYDE,

who departed this life at Oxford, Sumner county, Kans., January 16, 1892, was born in the State of Ohio, June 28, 1809.

Two years ago he had a stroke of paralysis, from the effects of which he partially recovered; but it left him almost helpless. He bore all with Christian fortitude, and only waited with patience for the Master's call. Three years ago his beloved companion was also afflicted in a similar manner.

Mr. Hyde's young days were passed on a farm with his parents. There he learned those lessons of industry and honest economy that afterward served to bridge over many of the dark channels of his life. In 1834 he removed to Hiram, Ohio; from thence, in 1836, to Delaware, Ohio; from thence to Allen township, in Indiana, in 1841; thence to Sunfield, Mich., in 1861; and in 1880, to Sumner county, Kans., where he resided until his death.

At Ravenna, Ohio, in 1835, he was married to Miss Hannah Furman. This union was blessed with seven children—three boys and four girls—all of whom, except one, survive him. The mother died in 1888, having passed through years of trouble and affliction with cheerfulness and devotion to the welfare of her family.

The early married life of this worthy couple was one of hard work and struggle for success in new settlements, with sickness and privation to contend with. But better days came at last.

At the age of 38, Mr. Hyde was converted, united with the Baptist church, and lived a faithful follower of Christ, his Bible being his daily companion. For twenty years he was a subscriber to the Christian Cynosure, and in the spirit of its teachings, he opposed all secret societies and advocated equal rights for all men. In politics he voted with the Republicans until after the war, when he became associated with Christian reformers.

His funeral was held in the Baptist church, and attended by a goodly number of relatives and neighbors. There a sermon was preached from Exodus 33:14—"And I will give thee rest."

COMMUNICATED.

LODGE NOTES.

WHAT MASONIC PAPERS SAY.

James G. Blaine is a loyal Mason.

London, England, has over 360 Masonic lodges.

The Grand Lodge library, Pennsylvania, contains 5,000 volumes, of which 3,500 are Masonic works.

The 103d annual session of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut, assembled in Hartford January 20th. There are 111 subordinate lodges in the State, with a total membership of 16,000.

Rev. John Wesley, the father of Wesleyan Methodism, was a Freemason, having been initiated in Downpatrick Lodge, No. 367, October 30, 1738. This fact is fully established.

The use of stereopticon views to illustrate the lectures of the various degrees, is becoming almost a necessity with those who would be up in the work. In no other manner can the work be so efficiently performed.

In March, 1859, there met in Supreme Council, in the city of Charleston, South Carolina, Albert Pike, Grand Commander; Albert G. Mackey, Secretary-General; Achille Le Prince, Treasurer-General; Benjamin Rush Campbell, Henry Buist, and Secretary-General Webber—the latter three receiving the 33d degree at the hands of the three former, nearly 33 years ago. Webber only survives.

It is still claimed by the Mason friends of Wm. J. Florence, the actor, that he died a Mason. A secret proclamation issued by the Imperial Council of the Ancient Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine shows that the order considered the comedian a full member at the time of his death. The proclamation was Consumption carries off many of its victims needlessly. It can be stopped sometimes; sometimes it cannot.

It is as cruel to raise false hopes as it is weak to yield to false fears.

There is a way to help within the reach of most who are threatened—CAREFUL LIVING and Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

Let us send you a book on the subject; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

read in Mecca Temple of New York of which the actor had been one of the original members, and commended the order during the period of three crescent moons to drape its altars. So certain are the Masonic orders that the comedian died a Mason that it is said the Northwestern Masonic Mutual Aid Association will give his widow $5,000 from its treasury, and that the Knights Templar Association will pay her $5,000.

The oppositio of Hon. Thaddeus Stevens to Freemasonry, during the Anti-masonic excitement of years ago, can be accounted for by the fact that he had been black-balled on an attempt to become a Mason. The birth of the opposition of many other opponents of the craft may be traced to a similar source.

"Never speak of lodge matters in unseemly or improper places." How often matters pertaining to the lodge and its transactions are talked in the presence of those who should not be permitted to know of them!—and how often are the most solemn obligations violated by such indiscretions! The most vigilant care should be exercised in this matter.

People who use arsenical preparations for their complexion, do so at the risk of their lives. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is guaranteed free from any injurious drug, and is, therefore, the safest as well as the most powerful blood medicine in the world. It makes the skin clear.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).
The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale, Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant-General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton Lodge.

25 CENTS EACH

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paul, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfan, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Ver non; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Paris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $0.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Sent in any quantities.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1892.

THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

We make room, this week, for the official report of the proceedings of the annual meeting of the New York State Christian Association, opposed to Secret Societies, held at Binghamton, N. Y., last week.

Of this convention, Rev. W. B. Stoddard, the Washington agent, to whose energy and activity this convention very largely owes its success, writes: "The effect is going to be lasting, I think, and will give a new impetus to the work in New York State."

Besides the report, we are promised, for early insertion in the Cynosure, several of the able addresses delivered by the principal speakers at the convention.

We also give place to several letters from ardent friends of the cause who were unable to be present at the convention, which breathe the spirit of encouragement and fellowship with the active workers in the anti-secret reform.

The resolutions adopted by the convention, which we print in full, have the ring of true Christianity and patriotism. They should meet with general approval and endorsement.

THE FAMINE IN RUSSIA.

An esteemed correspondent in Iowa, referring to the frequent reports from the famine in Russia, thinks that if these reports are true, the benevolent people in this country should certainly do something towards relieving the famishing "half-heathens;" and, if they are not true, the people should be so informed.

Russia is a peculiar country, governed by a tyrant, who is accustomed to control the affairs of his great empire according to "his own sweet will," and who would resent any interference in them by the governments or people of other nations. On this account he is not inaptly likened to a bear. It is true that early last fall it became apparent that the empire was threatened with a severe famine, and it is also true that the Czar took active measures to meet the emergency. The failure of crops in the Western provinces was a leading factor in the situation. He therefore not only forbade any farther exports of rye from Russian ports, but reduced the rates of freight on grain, and instituted other measures to encourage the importation of food-products from other lands and from those provinces in the empire that were bountifully provided. Relief work in the construction of public buildings and roads (it is alleged) was extensively inaugurated; the department of agriculture was authorized to purchase grain for seed and for food for the poor, and free firewood from twenty inland provinces was ordered distributed. Other means, of more or less importance, were also provided to relieve the suffering in the famine districts. The amount expended for these charitable purposes by the government up to this date is about $38,000,000.

Another method of relieving his people's sufferings was not so creditable to the Czar, and that was the withholding from the Jews in the empire the benefits of his charitable provision for his other subjects. Persecution, neglect and expulsion marked his course towards the ancient people of God, multitudes of whom experienced his inclemency. Providentially, Baron Hirsch, whose possessions are estimated at over $100,000,000, took these Jewish sufferers under his care and protection; and by his efforts they have been either greatly relieved in their Russian homes, or enabled to emigrate to more congenial lands. Large numbers have left Russia forever, and, probably, in the near future there will be but few Israelites remaining in the empire.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg, February 3, gives this account of the present condition of the famished provinces: "The mayor of Moscow, who recently went on a tour through famine-stricken regions of the empire in behalf of the czar and the central famine committee of which he is president, has returned here. He reports that, judging from as far as his investigations went and what he saw in Saranoff, Orenburg, Samara and Ufa, accounts of the famine are much exaggerated. He says business is brisk in the regions he visited. He adds that there is plenty of grain in the hands of speculators, but that its distribution is difficult, owing to the bad condition of the roads. He reports that snow is preserving winter-sown corn. He will soon start on another tour to last three months."

In the meantime, although there has been no exciting or general public movement looking to the relief of the Russian sufferers, an immense amount of food-products, etc., have been contributed for this purpose by parties, corporate and individual, in the United States. The value of these benefactions is not announced, but the amount required to pay the freight upon them to Russia will probably reach $100,000, perhaps more, so that the contributions must have been liberal.

It is stated that Congress refuses to appropriate the necessary funds to transport these contributions to the sufferers. It is probably true, for we notice that subscriptions have been called for in England to pay the expense of transportation of breadstuffs collected in the United States for the famished Russians.

It is also stated in advices from St. Petersburg, that in addition to the $38,000,000 previously appropriated from the imperial treasury to prevent starvation, as much more has recently been assigned by the government for the same purpose.

The number of sufferers is variously stated at thirty to thirty-five millions. The inhabitants of numerous villages, we are told, having nailed up their huts, are now scouring the country begging for work in return for food. In one district 37,000 hungry people are wandering about in misery; in another 50,000 more have petitioned the Government to allow them to emigrate anywhere; while tens of thousands are making their way to China. The famine-stricken area is said to extend over a territory three thousand miles long, and from five hundred to one thousand miles broad. The "hunger-bread" on which millions of men, women and children are now supporting life, we are told, is most disgusting, resembling a lump of hard black earth covered with mould, and for six months already the people have been subsisting on this sickening stuff. Families are selling their chairs, beds, and samovars for a tithe of their value to purchase such food; and, even a single measure of pigweed costs three times as much as a strong, well-fed colt. Says a parish priest: "Many of my parishioners have had no bread for two or three weeks, and are sustaining life as best they can on grass and the foliage of trees." He found people who had lived for a month on the powdered leaves of lime trees, and during the space of two days administered the last sacraments to sixteen persons dying of hunger. Driven to extremities, many kill themselves.

END OF THE LOUISIANA LOTTERY.

The pressure which has been so forcibly brought to bear during the past year upon the management of the Louisiana Lottery by public opinion, the postal laws and the decision of the United States Supreme Court, seems to have now borne fruit in the downfall and suppression of this great and evil institution.

The president of the lottery company has published the proposal of himself and his colleagues to abandon all further attempts to transact their illegal business, and to decline a new charter from the State on any terms, when the present one shall have expired.

The voters of Louisiana have been confronted with the question whether a new charter should be granted to the company for a term of twenty-five years, in consideration of the payment of a license fee of $1,200,000 per annum. With this question comes peculiar conditions and inducements to accept the proposition of the company. The population was of such a character that the laws were very imperfectly respected; the State was heavily cumbered with debt, and the minds of the people were strongly biased in favor of the lottery. The anti-lottery postal law had been promulgated and enforced, but the friends of the lottery had persisted in evading it in all possible ways. The Supreme Court decision, affirming the validity of the law, had the effect of checking the defiance of the management, and of drawing from the president of the lottery the formal abandonment of the enterprise.

As it now stands, it would seem that the surrender is complete, and that the majesty of the law is fully vindicated.

THE GOOD TEMPLARS IN POLITICS.

At the September (1891) session of the Illinois Grand Lodge of Good Templars, at Decatur, the Committee on State of the Order submitted the following resolution, which had been referred to them, and recommended its adoption: "Resolved, That in view of the widespread interest in the temperance cause, and the aggressive spirit of all temperance workers, we deem it wise and best that all voters give their support by franchise to such parties as express themselves positively in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic." This resolution was defeated in the Grand Lodge; and a good many people would like to know why.

The report of the Grand Secretary of the order, at the same session, showed that during the year its membership had increased to the number of 1,472, and at the date of the report aggregated 11,249, represented in 289 lodges. Had it consented to the adoption of the foregoing resolution, it might have become a valuable auxiliary to the Prohibition party.

It is well known that individual Good Templars have claimed in their political speeches, and otherwise, that their order was the organizer of the Prohibition party. How false is this claim may be seen from the following, which we copy from the Grand Secretary's report: "We are rapidly approaching another Presidential election, and before this Grand Lodge meets again will be in the whirl and excitement of another national contest. We have never failed, in the past, during these times, to lose some of our earnest workers, and some of our good lodges, on account of political strife entering our lodge rooms. Ours is not a partisan organization, and the strife of party politics has no more rightful place in our meetings than any outsider. I hope that to be forewarned will be to be forearmed, and that we will absolutely forbid the entrance of this intruder within our sacred circle."

In the same report it is virtually claimed that if all the temperance people of the State should unite with the Good Templars, their combined influence would have the effect of making prohibition a success. How this can be, since "ours is not a partisan organization," and the discussion of political questions is not allowed in the lodges—how, it is natural to ask, can men and women become convinced of the rightfulness and virtues of prohibition? Open agitation is necessary in all other reforms to command success, and if prohibition ever succeeds, it will not be through the adoption of any rat-hole policy in its behalf. If it depends upon lodge tactics, a hundred years will elapse before we shall have effective prohibition.

A SUGGESTION FOR WHEATON.

Mrs. Emma Willard was the pioneer of the higher education of women in this country. The Female Seminary established by her in Troy, New York, was opened in 1821, sixteen years before the more celebrated Mt. Holyoke Seminary began its work under the care of its founder, Mary Lyon. Emma Willard is well known to many of the Cynosure readers as author of a history of the United States, which neither ignores or blinks the Masonic murder of William Morgan in Niagara river, September, 1826. Her reference to this event is probably the most truthful and fearless of any account published in a popular history of our country. An organization has been formed of the graduates of Troy Seminary whose object is a memorial befitting the character of a noble woman. Their plan is at once practical, economical and appropriate. It is to establish Emma Willard scholarships in every institution in America where possible. The privileges of these scholarships will form a monument of infinitely greater value than granite or bronze.

In view of Mrs. Willard's contribution to our reform, what could be more fitting than the founding of such a scholarship for Wheaton College. Will not Pres. C. A. Blanchard inform us what will be the cost of a perpetual scholarship, and to whom contributions for such a purpose may be sent?

K.

The Ridge, Auburn, Cal.

ANTI-SECRECY IN NEW YORK (Continued from 5th page).

The convention was called to order by Rev. W. B. Stoddard, on Tuesday, Feb. 2, at 2 o'clock P. M.

On motion, Rev. S. R. Wallace, of Syracuse, N. Y., was elected chairman of the convention, and Rev. W. H. Clark, of Binghamton, N. Y., was chosen secretary.

As announced in the program, a meeting for prayer and consecration followed, which was led by Rev. N. Callender, of Montdale, Pa.

At 3 o'clock, the convention listened to an interesting address of welcome by Rev. O. M. Owen, of Binghamton, to which a brief response was given by the chairman.

On motion, the following committees were appointed:

On nomination of officers for State Association—Rev. S. G. Shaw, Rev. W. H. Clark, R. H. Morey.

On finance and suggestion for State work—Rev. B. Winget, Lucius Woodruff, Dr. L. D. Stone.

On resolutions—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. N. Callender, Rev. O. M. Owen.

On correspondence and publications—Rev. O. D. Seward, Rev. W. B. Stoddard, Rev. M. N. Downing.

At 3:30 P. M., the convention listened to an illustrated address on Freemasonry by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, of Boston, and at 4:30 adjourned until 7 o'clock P. M.

SECOND SITTING.

The convention met according to appointment, and the usual service of prayer and consecration was led by Rev. O. D. Seward, of Stevens' Point, Pa.

At 8 o'clock, Rev. S. G. Shaw, of Walton, N. Y., was introduced and gave a forcible address on "Why secret societies should be opposed."

At the close of Bro. Shaw's address, Rev. S. R. Wallace, chairman of the convention, gave a clear and interesting address on "The oaths required by secret societies."

On motion, the speakers were requested to prepare copies of their addresses for publication in the Christian Cynosure.

Interesting remarks by Rev. J. P. Stoddard followed, and the convention adjourned to meet at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

THIRD SITTING.

The convention was called to order at the hour appointed.

The service of prayer was led by Rev. W. H. Clark; after which the time until 11:15 was occupied by the members of the convention in brief remarks in regard to various features of the lodge system and narration of personal experiences in connection therewith.

The report of the committee on nomination of State officers being called for, the following names were presented, and on motion each nomination was separately confirmed.

For president, Rev. A. R. Dodd, of Houghton, N. Y.

For secretary, Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse.

For treasurer, Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

The committee on finance gave a partial report and were continued to complete their work.

At the appointed hour the question-box was opened and the contents tersely and conclusively answered by Rev. J. P. Stoddard; after which the convention adjourned, with prayer by Dr. L. D. Stone, of Binghamton.

FOURTH SITTING.

The fourth sitting of the convention came to order at 1 o'clock P. M.

A short Bible-reading and prayer service were conducted by Rev. J. P. Stoddard.

The committee on resolutions reported as follows:

WHEREAS, God demands that his people shall be a peculiar people and separate from the world; and

WHEREAS, Secret societies ignore this command of separation, and seek to yoke believers with unbelievers, in religious worship from which the name of Christ and his atonement are excluded; therefore,

Resolved, That in faithfulness to God's Word and our consciences, we are compelled to eschew connection with all secret societies having an oath or pledge of concealment as a condition of membership, and to warn others to have no fellowship with them.

Resolved, That in fidelity to God's ordinance of civil government, and the home which he has instituted, every Christian patriot should use his political and social influence for the entire abolition of the lodge.

Resolved, That the rum-traffic is inimical to all the interests of our State and we pledge ourselves to use all lawful means to abolish this evil.

Resolved, That the excise bill now pending in the Legislature of this State is destructive to the Sabbath, the home, and the peace of our cities, and we will do all in our power to prevent it becoming a law.

Resolved, That the employment of bar-maids in the saloon is offensive to the moral and Christian sense of our citizens, and we call for the united efforts of all Christian people to prevent this curse from coming upon us.

No Republic can stand permanently which permits its subjects to owe their first allegiance to a foreign potentate. The Jesuits, driven from every other nation under the sun, are flooding America.

That this organization is a deadly enemy to our government, and to its free institutions, may be seen from part of the Jesuitical oath: "I do renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince, or state, named Protestant, or obedience to any of their inferior magistrates or officers."

Our Constitution requires obedience to the laws of the United States; the Jesuits demand loyalty to the Pope—the papal flag first,—the stars and stripes second.

This secret foe is driving the Bible from our free schools, and putting in Catholic teachers who teach Romish superstitions at public expense, manipulating our elections, filling the army, navy, and the civil service system generally with their officers; in short, pushing hard for a union of church and state.

In many of our cities secret societies of papal soldiers are drilling regularly, preparing for a slaughter of heretics.

Oswald Keatings, LL.D., who is well-posted on Roman affairs, says: "The secret societies directly under Jesuitical control are combined under the name of the United States Volunteer Militia, and number seventy thousand men, all well-armed, well-drilled and absolutely obedient."

"American Protestants, what do you think of that?"

The conflict with this foe has actually begun, and the struggle will be fierce and long. Our danger lies in two facts: First, the persistency, aggressiveness and intolerance of the enemy. Second, the apathy and indifference of the American people. While Americans sleep, the Jesuits are steadily but surely sapping the foundations of this great nation. The pulpit and press are to a great extent muzzled.

In view of the foregoing, and a multitude of other alarming facts,

Resolved, That we, as Christians and patriots, will do our utmost to banish Jesuitism from the nation; that not only will we pray for the perpetuation of our liberties, but we will vote as we pray, never being guilty of voting for any person for an American office who owes his first allegiance to the Pope, and to the United States second.

Resolved, That we will preach, work, labor and pray for the enlightenment of the American people and help free our land from the clutches of Jesuitism.

To defend American principles, we, with the brave men who signed the Declaration of Independence, "pledge our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

Resolved, That we extend to the W. C. T. U. and to the citizens of Binghamton who have so generously furnished entertainment to friends from abroad; to the daily papers for their candid and faithful reports of our meetings, and to those not present, but who have aided in the work of the convention by prayers and contributions, our most sincere and hearty thanks.

On motion, the above resolutions were unanimously adopted.

OTHER PROCEEDINGS.

Rev. W. B. Stoddard reported for the committee on correspondence and publications, reading a communication from the President of the State Association.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That we hereby express our sympathy for our President, Rev. A. R. Dodd, in his affliction, and pray for his speedy recovery and restoration to his post of active and efficient service in the Master's cause."

The report of the committee was adopted.

Rev. N. Callender, of Montdale, Pa., being introduced, addressed the convention on "Objections to be met in Anti-masonic work."

At the close of Bro. Callender's address, the chairman introduced Rev. B. Winget, of Cortland, N. Y., who also addressed the convention on "The needs of the times and of the work."

At the close, the convention requested the speakers to prepare copies of their addresses for publication in the Christian Cynosure.

The report of the committee on State work was given and on motion adopted.

In harmony with the suggestion of the report, the convention proceeded to elect two persons, who, with L. Woodruff, of Binghamton, are to constitute a committee to arrange State work, and to appropriate funds secured for such purpose.

On motion, Dr. L. D. Stone, and Rev. W. H. Clark, of Binghamton, were elected.

Remarks were made by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. N. Callender, and others. The question-box was opened. Announcements were made and the convention adjourned with prayer by Rev. N. Callender.

FIFTH SITTING.

Order was called at 7 o'clock P. M., and a prayer and consecration service was led by Mrs. E. S. Clark, of Binghamton.

A resolution was offered by L. Woodruff, and adopted, thanking the convention for coming to Binghamton where its influence is so much needed; also expressing a grateful appreciation of the earnest labors of Revs. J. P. and W. B. Stoddard and others who have labored in the interests of the convention.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard then gave an exceedingly interesting and instructive address on the "Secret Empire."

On motion, the convention requested Bro. Stoddard to furnish a copy of his address for publication in the city papers, and also in the Christian Cynosure.

The committee on finance reported the amount already received and proceeded to take a collection to meet the present deficiency, and also pledges for funds to carry on the State work.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard then gave a chart lecture on the mysteries of the Masonic lodge, which was listened to with the deepest interest until its close.

The minutes were read and approved, and the convention adjourned sine die.

W. H. CLARK, Secretary.

LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE CONVENTION

VARICK, Seneca Co., N. Y., Jan. 21, 1892.

REV. W. B. STODDARD:—Your kind letter of January 12th is before me. I am glad to learn that there is an effort being made to get up another anti-secret convention in New York State, and think it would be to the glory of God to have one each year, as the years roll around. But some of our best workers have passed over into glory; thus our ranks have been depleted.

In the death of Bro. Capwell, the cause lost a true friend, and one whose place cannot be easily filled. Yet we must not be discouraged, for the God of heaven is behind, moving it on.

Now, with regard to my being there; it looks doubtful, from the fact that we had arranged to commence a revival meeting, the last of the month. We have secured Bro. W. J. Houghton to be with us on Feb. 1, and from the way it now looks, we shall not be able to be there, unless Providence should order otherwise. I very much regret it.

You wished me to come and take up and discuss some phase of the subject. If I were there, I should be much pleased to do so; but I would not dare to send my topic unless I was sure of being present; nevertheless, I will assure you one thing: you will have my good wishes and prayers. From my pulpit, last Sunday, I announced your convention, and prayed God the best I could to give you a good time. I will write to some others and urge them up to the work. Your brother in Christ,

G. L. PAINE.

W. KORTRIGHT, N. Y., Feb. 2, '92.

BRO. STODDARD:—I received your card. Without were fightings, and within were fears, as to attending the convention, and not attending. But some of us are not very well. The long drive in the uncertain winter, and the grip; and feeling the Covenanters would be so well represented by Bros. Wallace and Shaw. I am at home, and yet I like to stand up and be counted among those struggling in a good cause. I trust you will have a satisfactory convention.

It is too bad that no U. P. brother is on hand. Yours,

J. O. BAYLES.

Several letters stand over till next week.

Suppose your lot is hard, my brother, may it not be in this way that God is drawing your heart nearer to him.

THE HOME.

PSALM 104: 10-18.

Down through the valleys, 'mid the hills,
Thou sendest springs, whose flowing rills
All creatures' thirst allay.
The birds of heaven above them dwell,
And from amid the branches swell
The songs that greet the day.

Out of thine upper rooms, with rain
Thou waterest every hill and plain;
With fruit dost fill the field.
Thou makest grass for pasture grow,
And herbs to serve man's need bestow,
That earth his bread may yield.

The gladdening clusters of the vine,
And oil to make his face to shine,
Thou dost for man prepare.
Thy trees with rain are satisfied—
The cedars of old Lebanon's pride—
Which thou hast planted there.

The little bird there builds its nest,
And on the fir-tree's lofty crest
The kindly stork abides.
The wild goat climbs the mountain peaks,
And in the rocks the coney seeks,
A refuge where it hides.

—Edward A. Collier, in New York Observer.

"MY BOY."

I am a business man and a church member. I take a Sunday morning paper—at least I did until to-day—but I have just written to stop it. What brought me to the point was that boy of mine. He's a bright boy if he be mine, and his father is his authority in all things.

As soon as prayers were over Sunday morning, which would be about nine o'clock, I used to say: "Jack, go out on the piazza and see if the paper's come!" Then I glanced it over, not taking much time for it, say fifteen or twenty minutes. It doesn't take long for a man who reads many papers to get the gist of things, and I seemed to feel more comfortable if I knew how politics and business affairs were going. What harm could that morsel of time do to anybody? The instant I threw down the paper, my boy would catch it, settle himself in his own chair, taking my attitude precisely, even to the way I cross my legs. I often smile at my miniature presentiment.

He couldn't read so fast as I did, and pretty soon his mother would call out, "Jack, have you learned your Sunday-school lesson?"

"Not quite, mamma; just a minute; till I've seen the paper. I miss the paper so if I don't read it."

My very words! So it went until church time was perilously near, and it came to be a rule that Jack never had his lesson perfectly. That was the first result I noticed.

Of course I take our church paper and read it through from beginning to end. But that doesn't occupy more than an hour and a half at the utmost. I have an afternoon nap. Still there are a number of hours left; even if I go to evening service, which I don't always do. We take several of the best periodicals, those suited to my wife and me, and two or three for my boy and girl. I've not been in the habit of reading them on Sunday—that is, I wasn't brought up to do so; but of late it has seemed to me that my father and mother were a bit Puritanical about keeping Sunday. It grew easy, as time went on, to relax a little and turn over the magazines, confining myself to the travels and scientific articles, nothing you call light.

I own I was shocked when I caught my wife reading a downright novel one Sunday night; moral and high class, to be sure, but undeniably a novel. I remonstrated with her. I said: "Consider our children, my dear; what an example for them!"

"My love," she said sweetly, "the children have gone to bed, so my example won't hurt them; and I think this book is infinitely preferable to the Sunday paper which you read every week in their presence."

We had had some words before, good-natured words always, and I incline now to believe that my wife meant to give me an object lesson that night; in fact, I was half convinced of it then, when she continued: "Did you notice that Jack had out all his papers this afternoon, and was looking over the premium lists and calculating how he could get this tool chest or that steam engine? I think it was while you were asleep, though. I tried to dissuade him gently, but he quoted 'papa,' and what could I say?"

Well, this put thought number two in my head, and made me a trifle uncomfortable, but it soon passed away.

My wife is interested in missions, as I think a woman ought to be, and I always gladly subscribe to the missionary magazines. I haven't been in the habit of reading them myself; they're not always as ably edited as they might be—at least, that's the way I explain my lack of interest. Sometimes, when she has urged me to read them, I have said: "I know enough about missions to give when the collection comes around, and that's all a business man needs to know." I must say, however, I was a little chagrined a few weeks ago, when, in New York, I was invited to meet some old college friends at dinner. They weren't all ministers by any means; there were a doctor and a lawyer, besides other callings. You may imagine my surprise, when a chance remark turned the conversation on missions, to hear the lawyer say he knew of no subject which broadened and deepened the mind more than that.

It was about the first time I ever had to take a back seat, for I am rather proud of my general information. Still such a thing might occur only once in a lifetime.

But one day I heard our little girl asking her brother about some far-off heathen land, which she was trying to find on the map. He answered in a most lordly fashion: "You musn't expect me to know about the heathen. Your magazine is decidedly slow. [Where did the boy pick up the slang?] Of course, as you're a girl, you like such things; but men have something else to do."

Myself with a vengeance, and I laughed; it was so amusing to listen to my double. Then there drifted to my ears one more sentence: "When did you ever see papa even look at one of them?"

Now that was certainly putting it rather strong, and I didn't laugh any more. Thought number three came and couldn't be shaken off. "If my boy exaggerate my foibles in this fashion now, what will he do when he grows up?" I confess I didn't like the prospect; and, besides, it emphasized a change in myself of which I was half conscious.

When I really set out to trace causes, I couldn't shut my eyes to the fact that the Sunday paper was the principal one. It had kept me in touch with week-day life; it had deadened the interest I ought to feel in aggressive Christian work; its constant tendency had been to make the whole day secular, except the few hours spent in church, and even those hours it had tainted. So much for me. Suppose I, pretty well balanced as I think myself, could stand it, there was Jack. What would the accumulative force of such an education do for him?

There may be higher reasons which others can show, but the one which has influenced me to stop my Sunday paper is my boy.—Congregationalist.

JENNY LIND.

Jenny Lind, the woman, was greater than Jenny Lind, the singer. "I would rather hear Jenny talk than sing—wonderful as it is," wrote Mrs. Stanley, the wife of the Bishop of Norwich, in whose palace the great singer was a guest while in that city. The bishop's son, subsequently Dean Stanley, who had no "ear for music," and on whom, therefore, her singing was wholly lost, wrote that she had "the manners of a princess, with the simplicity of a child, and the goodness of an angel." Her character showed itself, he added, "through a thousand traits of humility, gentleness, thoughtfulness, wisdom, piety."

She looked upon her natural faculty as a gift of God, and never sang without reflecting that it might be for the last time.

"It has been continued to me from year to year for the good of others."

This feeling was no fine sentiment, but a religious principle. While she was the bishop's guest she begged Mrs. Stanley to allow her to take three of the maids to a concert where she was to sing.

At a service in the cathedral she was moved to tears by the singing of the boy choristers, and had places reserved for them at her concert the next morning. When she came on the platform she greeted them with a smile of recognition, which the boys never forgot.

She gave to charitable objects thousands of pounds gained by her wonderful voice. While singing in Copenhagen, such was the excitement that court and town begged her to give them one more day of song. A gentleman of musical culture had, with his wife, anxiously looked forward to her visit. When she came he was on a sick bed. Jenny Lind heard of his desire, and found time to go to his house and sing to him and his wife.

When she went to London Mendelssohn asked her to sing to a friend of his, who had long lain upon a bed of sickness. She went and cheered him with songs, the remembrance of which is still cherished by the family.

Again and again, when the opportunity offered for such an act of kindness, she sang to invalids who could not be present at her concerts. The gift of God within her was a trust to be administered for the good of others.—Anonymous.

LINCOLN AND THE KITTENS.

President Lincoln was as sensitive to external impressions as the test paper of the chemist. The results of a battle pained him as though he himself were among the wounded, or had lost a brave son. This sympathy, that is, his power of putting himself in another's place, extended even to animals.

The day on which Grant's army began the final advance, the President sat in a small telegraph office at City Point, receiving telegrams and examining a pocket chart. Three little kittens were running about the hut, in which was the office. The President of the nation whose fate was in the scales, picked up the kittens, placed them on the table, and said:

"You poor, little miserable creatures, what brought you into this camp of warriors? Where is your mother?"

"The mother is dead," answered the colonel in charge.

"Then she can't grieve for them," said the President with a sigh, "as many a poor mother is grieving for the son who has fallen in battle. Ah, kitties, thank God you are cats, and can't understand this terrible strife."

"There, now, go, my little friends," wiping the dirt from their eyes with his handkerchief; "that is all I can do for you. Colonel, get them good milk, and don't let them starve; there is too much starvation going on in this land, anyhow; let us mitigate it when we can."

The great President, even at such a crisis, could, as Admiral Porter says, "find time to look at God's creatures, and be solicitous for their comfort."—Manford's Magazine.

PLEASURES OF THE DEEP.

The enthusiastic boy, after finishing the last chapter of a book called "Pleasures of the Deep," pleaded with his father to let him ship aboard a small schooner.

The father smiled a grim smile, took the case under consideration, and in a few days the boy was on the rolling deep, as a greenhorn on a vessel in the coal trade.

The next week he appeared at home, lame and stiff, his throat sore, one eye nearly shut, and a feeling of humbleness running all through him.

"What, back again!" cried the father as the boy entered the house.

"Yes, father, I want to saw all the wood for winter, bring in all the coal, clean out the cellar, and paint the barn, and you needn't give me but two meals a day."

"Don't you like sailing?"

"Father, you don't understand anything about it. The captain sailed away on Sunday the same as any other day, and I believe he swore even harder. He wouldn't give me an umbrella when it rained, he made me sit up most all night, and two or three times called me up at midnight and made me haul rope and drag old sails about. There wasn't a single night when all of us got off to bed at nine o'clock, and there wasn't a day that he did not bully us about and stop us every time we got reading anything good. I like land, father, and I wished I owned a farm."

The father chuckled, and the boy turned away from Peter Simple last week with a shudder.—Philadelphia Times.

A HANDSOME SOUL.

One day a boy, who was taking his lesson in the art of sliding down hill, found his feet in too close contact with a lady's silk dress. Mortified and confused, he sprang from his sled, and, cap in hand, commenced an apology.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am; I am very sorry."
"Never mind that," exclaimed the lady; "there is no great harm done, and you feel worse about it than I do."

"But your dress is ruined. I thought you would be angry with me for being so careless."

"O, no," she replied; "better to have a soiled dress than a ruffled temper."

"O, what a beauty!" exclaimed the lad, as the lady passed on.

"Who, that lady?" returned his comrade. "If you call her a beauty, you shan't choose for me. Why, she is old, and her face is wrinkled!"

"I don't care if her face is wrinkled," replied the other; "her soul is handsome, anyhow."

A shout of laughter followed, from which he was glad to escape. Relating the incident to his mother, he said:

"O, mother, that lady did me good. I shall never forget it; and when I am tempted to get mad, I will think of what she said, 'Better to have a soiled dress than a ruffled temper.'"—S. W. Christian Advocate.

No man can say with such a depth and tenderness of meaning, "My brother," as he who feelingly says, "Our Father."

A CHEERFUL ACQUIESCENCE.

Christ never asks of us such busy labor
As leaves no time for resting at his feet;
The waiting attitude of expectation,
He oftentimes counts a service most complete.

He sometimes wants our ear, our rapt attention,
That he some sweetest secret may impart;
'Tis always in the time of deepest silence
That heart finds deepest fellowship with heart.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord doth place us
Within a sphere so narrow, so obscure
That nothing we call our work can find an entrance;
There's only room to suffer, to endure.

Well, God loves patience; souls that dwell in stillness,
Doing the little things, or resting quiet,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight,

As they who grapple with some giant evil,
Clearing a path that every eye may see.
Our Saviour cares for cheerful acquiescence,
Rather than for a busy ministry.

—Anonymous.

TEMPERANCE.

WHY A PROHIBITION PARTY IN KANSAS?

This inquiry is often made, by persons who favor such a party in license States, and whenever the platforms of other parties do not endorse prohibition. But in Kansas, they say, the case is different. "The Republican party is a prohibition party." It gave the State constitutional prohibition, and has always endorsed and enforced it. What more can you ask? Why organize a Prohibition party, when there is one already in existence and in power? Misled by this sophistry, many who have voted the Prohibition ticket in other States, when they come to Kansas, vote the Republican ticket, honestly believing that they are voting for prohibition in State and nation.

In answering this inquiry, let it be remembered that the Republican party never gave Kansas prohibition. True, the Legislature that submitted the question to the people was largely Republican. It might have enjoyed that high honor. But its members were divided on that question, and it required the votes of six Democrats and sixteen Greenbackers to secure the necessary majority in the House. The Republican platform said not a word in favor of prohibition until after the adoption of the amendment. Then it recognized it as "adopted by the people without respect to party." It has since endorsed it in its platforms, and at the same time endorsed the action of the National party, that has employed its power in fostering and upholding the liquor traffic, both at home and abroad. In words, they have declared for prohibition in Kansas, while by their votes they have endorsed and perpetuated the drink traffic in the nation. If they have honestly believed in prohibition, they have either been too selfish to aid others in securing its blessings, or have cared more for the success of party than for principle.

How the Republican party in Kansas can consistently claim to be a prohibition party, while in full fellowship and hearty accord with a national organization that is unalterably opposed to it, is beyond my comprehension. The party leaders favor prohibition because it is popular. The majority of the people believe in it. It is an element of power, and essential to party success. But whenever its endorsement and enforcement stand in the way of party triumph, they will sacrifice it unhesitatingly. This has been shown by the failure to enforce it in so many localities. It has been caused by the opposition of anti-prohibition Republicans. In some of our cities this element holds the balance of power. It must be coddled and placated, or the party will be defeated. This has led to deals and compromises that have weakened the law and rendered it almost powerless. This has been true to such an extent, under Gov. Humphrey's administration, as to call forth emphatic protests from leading Republican papers in the State. The Leavenworth Times says: "We speak from what we know to be true, that the State officials of Kansas for six years have not encouraged the officers of the law to enforce prohibition in any of the leading towns in the State. They support it only so far as it seems necessary for them to do so, and retain control of the party." It asserts that they are in league with the liquor-sellers; and points, in proof, to the recent removal of the police commissioners of that city, who attempted to enforce the law, and the appointment of those who connived at its violation. One of these commissioners said to a friend, in private conversation, "that they were appointed with the understanding that they were to manage the liquor business to suit the people of Leavenworth." He said "they proposed to make it a source of revenue, and every man who sold would have to pay a monthly fine."

According to the Lawrence Record, there are 170 joints running on that basis in Leavenworth to-day. The Record also declares that Atchison, Kansas City, Kans., Wichita, and many other towns are practically licensing the sale of liquors, in violation of State law. It says: "The cities under the supervision of police commissioners, appointed by the governor, make it their business not to exclude the traffic, but to control it for revenue only. It is time to know where we are, and what we intend to do. It is time for Republican prohibitionists to decide whether they endorse the damnable policy of this State administration, in maintaining, under the eyes of its special officers, cities full of saloons. It has come to be the case that municipalities that desire to obtain money from the sale of liquors ask for the metropolitan police system, sure of their revenue if they obtain it." The Record claims to be loyal to the Republican party and to prohibition. It closes its scorching editorial with these emphatic words:

"There is more liquor sold and drunk in Kansas to-day than at any time since the passage of the amendment. Deny it, who dare?" We have not seen or heard of any denial. The Topeka Capital complains of an alarming increase of drug-stores in that city, and calls on the probate judge to do his duty.

At the Ottawa Chautauqua Assembly on Temperance Day an audience of 4,000 of the most intelligent citizens of the State passed strong resolutions, calling on Governor Humphrey and the attorney-general to enforce the prohibitory law in our large cities.

It is not pleasant to publish these facts; but their bearing upon the question whether a Prohibition party is needed in Kansas must be obvious to all. Our State administration not only tacitly sanctions the violation of the prohibitory law, but the governor has done more than any other man in the State to undermine and nullify it, by pardoning those convicted of its violation. During his first term he pardoned 105 liquor-sellers—many more than either of his predecessors. In

Douglas county, from January, 1891, to July, 1891, through the efforts of a Democratic sheriff, there were 22 convictions in our District Court (with sentences varying from $100 fine and 30 days' imprisonment to $400 and 120 days), and yet in not a single case has a full penalty of the law been inflicted. Executive clemency has remitted the penalty, either wholly or in part. Such is the man whom thousands of prohibitionists were persuaded to vote for, in order to save prohibition. Yet the party he represents has a prohibition plank in its platform, and claims to be the god-father of constitutional prohibition! Is it strange that a party with such leadership cannot be trusted to enforce prohibition? No matter what it promises. Between promise and fulfillment there is an impassable gulf. The party is composed of antagonistic elements. To harmonize them there must be compromise. So prohibition Republicans get the platform and the anti-candidates. The prohibition plank is simply a "decoy duck" to catch prohibition votes. It was inserted in the Iowa platform this year for no other purpose. A party's platform must be interpreted by the sentiments and character of the men whom it nominates.

There is no State where a Prohibition party is more needed than in Kansas. If prohibition is to be maintained and enforced, it must have a party behind it composed only of those who desire and demand its enforcement. Republican politicians in Kansas are no better than those in other States. With them pledges and promises are as the small dust of the balance, when compared with party success. Allied to a National party that is unalterably committed to high license, it is unreasonable and absurd to expect them to be true to prohibition.—A. M. Richardson, ex-chairman of the Kansas Prohibition State Committee, of Lawrence, in the New York Voice.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Young man, are you a total abstainer from intoxicating drinks? If not, will you take time to ask yourself seriously and candidly why you are not? Do you drink because you are fond of the drink and its effects? Then your reason is the same as that of the hopeless drunkard. Do you drink because you dislike to admit to yourself or others that you fear that you are in danger of losing your self-control? Let me ask you if you have not partially lost it already. Are you sufficiently independent to be safe? If in the absence of temptation you experience physical discomfort or mental depression from which you find relief in drink, you may be sure that the destroyer has begun his work upon your physical organization.

Stop it while you can. It may already be more difficult than you suppose. A trial may bring to you very unexpected and unwelcome evidence of your danger. Remember that it is by neglecting to use the power to refrain that the power is lost; that self-confidence with an underestimate of the power of habit, and of the stealthy undermining power of alcohol, are the hidden rocks upon which the great mass of drunkards have made shipwreck of life.—Observer, in Red Bluff Sentinel.

"Let me tell you how much a gallon of whisky cost," said a judge after trying a cast. "One gallon of whisky made two murderers, it made two wives widows and eight children orphans."

A correspondent of the Voice (New York) is tired of the prohibition work, and now proposes a new "Abolition" party, whose aim will be to abolish the saloon from every part of the Union. Among the colored people of the South, he thinks, such a party would obtain a heavy following; old prohibitionists would be re-invigorated, and one of the two G. O. Ps. would soon swing around the circle to join it. We should like to see it tried.

Cardinal Manning was quite abstemious in his habits. When a guest at the most splendid banquets he would dine off a potato, a bit of meat and a glass of water. Wine he never drank. He was greatly interested in the temperance cause, and said spirits did more to destroy homes of the poorer classes than all else combined. "The Englishman drinks from brutality, the Irishman from joviality, and it is much easier to reform an Irish drunkard than an English," said the cardinal.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON VIII.—First Quarter, 1892.—February 21.

SUBJECT.—Jehoakim's Wickedness.—Jer. 36:19-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—To-day if ye will hear my voice harden not your hearts.—Heb. 3:15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jer. 36:19-31. T.—Jer. 36:1-10. W.—2 Kings, 23:36 to 24:7. T.—Neh. 9:24-31. F.—Jer. 26:1-7. S.—Matt. 21:33-41. S.—Heb. 3:7-15.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The roll destroyed.—vs. 19-23. A public fast had been appointed in view of the impending attack on their city, so that the hearts of the Jewish people seemed in a favorable condition to hear the word of God, through Jeremiah, read by the faithful Baruch. We are not told what effect, if any, it had upon them, but the princes to whom the roll was, at their request, read privately, were much troubled, and wisely decided that the king ought to be made acquainted at once with a message of such momentous import to the whole nation. They seem to have been well-meaning, though rather weak men, who would not have stood in the way of a national reformation had Jehoakim been like his father, good King Josiah, who on a very similar occasion acted so differently. (2 Chron. 34:15-33.) Their advice to Jeremiah and Baruch to remain in hiding, and their caution in not taking the roll with them, shows that they well-understood the temper of the king. A verbal report of its contents, however, did not satisfy Jehoakim, and he sent Jehudi to fetch it. Though of good family, as we know by the fact that his pedigree is so particularly mentioned, he seems to have occupied a subordinate position in the royal household, and been a mere creature and tool of the king. "There was a fire"—simply a brazen vessel with coals in it—burning on the hearth; and with a deliberation and cool hardihood of which his most wicked predecessors hardly furnish a parallel, Jehoakim cut out the roll, portion by portion, as it was read to him, and flung it into the fire till the whole was consumed. We have here an illustration of the way nations may be wrecked or saved according to the character of their rulers. What different consequences might have followed had Jehoakim resembled his father. The nation had chosen, several hundred years before, to have a king over them, instead of remaining a theocracy, under God's direct rule; and now their kings were the instrument of dragging them down to national ruin. They were thus indirectly responsible; but how much greater must be the degree of personal responsibility which attaches to every American voter who knowingly helps to elect to office men who have not the fear of God before their eyes.

2. A subservient court.—vs. 24-26. "Yet they were not afraid." The king and his courtiers heard all those terrible words unmoved, and doubtless the reading was frequently interrupted by their scoffs and jeers. But three of the princes were of a different heart, and made intercession with the king not to burn the roll. It was also by their kindly advice and connivance that Jeremiah and Baruch found a safe hiding-place from the wrath of the king. The phrase, "God hid them," does not mean that he employed no human instrument. What sweet encouragement in these three short words for all who are fighting against evil. While this dispensation lasts, "they who would live godly in this world" have no warrant that persecutions for righteousness' sake will cease. The enemies of truth will try to defame us if they can do no more, but we have the precious promise, "Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues." Ps. 31:20; Job 5:21. These princes were not, like Baruch and Jeremiah, the stuff of which martyrs are made. Still, their protest against burning the roll was a brave act, as they ran thereby the risk of bringing down on their own heads the wrath of the king. They were, like Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea, friendly to the cause of truth and its advocates, and their action stands out in bold contrast to the subserviency of the rest of the court. It takes peculiar courage to oppose wickedness in high places; but it is very easy to keep still, as did the rest of the courtiers who gave their silent assent to the king's blasphemous act. We have many public men to-day who are like them—silent acquiescents in the political corruption around them.

3. Wickedness baffled.—vs. 27-31. Bibles without number have been burned and destroyed by the enemies of God's Word; yet that Word has been kept alive. The preservation of the Bible through all the dark ages before printing was invented is of itself a standing miracle. Pagans, papists and infidels have spent their rage upon it, only to find themselves perpetually baffled. What did Jehoakim gain by his act of impiety? Only this: that the roll was re-written by the express command of God, with much additional matter. Every assault of its enemies has only made the Holy Book more impregnable, so that to-day, though the canon of Scripture remains the same, the world was never so full of commentaries and books written about the Bible; and never before was its influence so potent on the lives of individuals or of nations.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

ASSOCIATE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The building of Erskine College at Due West, S. C., has been burned. The value was $25,000 and there was no insurance.

BAPTIST.

—The London Baptist Social Union has voted in favor of the proposal to hold a Baptist ecumenical conference in Chicago in 1893.

—The Baptist Union Theological Seminary at Morgan Park, Ill., is overcrowded with students. The total enrollment for the first session is 158.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Twenty-five per cent of the Congregational churches of Massachusetts now have free pews, and twenty-five churches in the State have recently changed from rented to free pews, and they report increased receipts, while thirty churches now renting desire to change to the free pews.

—The grand Congregational mass meeting in the Chicago Auditorium on Feb. 18, will be one of the most remarkable, and certainly the largest assembling of Congregational forces that the city has ever seen. The chorus of five hundred voices led by the great organ will be an inspiration in itself. Dr. Gunsaulus is to speak on What Congregationalism has Done in the Past; President Gates of Amherst on Congregationalism and Americanism; and Dr. Smith Baker of Minneapolis on What Congregationalism should do in the Future. Eighty churches in Chicago and vicinity will be represented in this great congress.

—Rowland Bailey Howard, a brother of Gens. O. O. and C. H. Howard, died in Rome, where he had gone to attend the International Peace Congress, as a representative of the American Peace Association, of which he was secretary. He was born in Leeds, Me., in October, 1835. He graduated with honor at the Albany Law School, but afterward took up the study of theology, and held pastorates in Harpswell and Farmington, Me., Princeton, Ill., Orange, N. J., and Rockport, Mass. In 1875 he became editorial correspondent of the Advance, which he continued until '82.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—The Evangelical Association has 26 conferences, 2,062 churches, and 150,234 members. This church is also known as the Albright Methodist.

JEWS.

—The number of Jews in the Holy Land is gradually on the increase. Three new colonies were lately formed in Jerusalem. Hundreds of new buildings are being erected for them. Fifty years ago there were only 8,000 Jews in Palestine. Now there are 100,000, of which 40,000 live in Jerusalem.

LUTHERANS.

—There are 1,187,854 Lutherans in this country, an increase during the past year of 34,642.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—A deaconess home was opened by Baltimore Methodists in their city Feb. 2.

—Rev. G. K. Flack of Halsted street (Chicago) church has inaugurated a new feature of mission work which promises good results and extended popularity. He has a mission wagon equipped for dispensing hot coffee, which makes a daily circuit of the lumber yards in the vicinity and offers the grateful beverage at a nominal sum. Many are taking kindly to the new dispensation, and already the wagon is rivaling the popularity of the saloon with corresponding beneficial results.

—Bishop Haygood of the Methodist church South, lately transferred sixteen preachers from Georgia to the two conferences of his denomination in California.

—A convention of representative Methodist laymen will be held in Pittsburg, Pa., March 16th, to consider the problem of more aggressive work for their churches in the large cities.

—The annual receipts of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Church Extension have averaged $262,610.55 during the past four years.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Cincinnati is in a union revival with evangelist B. Fay Mills. The city has been divided into four districts, which will be successively dealt with. All churches are co-operating heartily.

—The committee of the Baltimore Council appointed to make preparation for the International Catholic Congress, has decided to issue a call for the Congress to meet on Sept. 3d, 1893, in Chicago. An effort will be made to secure the attendance of the Pope to open the Congress. It is expected that 5,000 delegates will be present.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—Since the union in 1876, forty new congregations have been added to the Presbyterian church of England, and the membership in these is about seven thousand.

—The General Assembly, at its meeting last May, took under its care a new Theological Seminary for the West, which has since been located at Omaha, Nebraska. It was opened September 1st, with a faculty of five professors and a junior class of nine students. The faculty had applications for admission to the other classes, but were not prepared to start, and began with a junior class alone. Next year they hope to organize other classes. The work in the lecture-rooms has gone on very satisfactorily, and the directors and faculty are endeavoring to get the institution thoroughly established.

—Through the recent munificent bequest of $300,000 from Mrs. Stuart of New York, the Princeton Theological Seminary has become the wealthiest Presbyterian Seminary in this country.

—The new Free Methodist church at Gardner, Illinois, will be dedicated Feb. 14. Rev. B. R. Jones will preach the dedicatory sermon.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—Mr. Geo. W. Childs, of the Philadelphia Ledger, Jan. 24, presented a beautiful memorial window to the St. James' Protestant Episcopal church of that city, in memory of Dr. Henry Jackson Morton, late pastor of that church, and who for over 56 years served as rector of that parish. The window, which is twenty-five feet high and twelve feet wide, is made of opalescent glass, and is strikingly artistic.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Since last Synod (8 months ago), the following ministers have united with other churches: Revs. J. J. Huston, S. D. Johnston, N. M. Johnston, E. M. Milligan, J. R. J. Milligan, J. S. T. Milligan, O. B. Milligan, J. K. McClurkin, H. P. McClurkin, A. W. McClurkin, H. W. Reed, W. L. C. Samson, E. M. Smith, J. A. Speer, H. W. Temple and John Teaz; total, sixteen, or about one-eighth of the entire number. These all, and also Mr. Burnett, licentiate, connected with the United Presbyterian church, except Messrs. N. M. Johnston and E. M. Smith, who went to the Presbyterian, and H. W. Reed, who united with Rev. N. Woodside. The loss in membership does not exceed 600, or not one-eighteenth of the number reported at last Synod. Four presbyteries, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, Ohio, Iowa and Vermont, have had no decrease from this cause, while Pittsburgh, as was to be expected, has suffered most.

—Mrs. J. I. Swander, of Fremont, Ohio, has given $10,000 to the Theological Seminary of the Reformed church, at Tiffin, Ohio.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Tarkio College expects to have its building completed in time to open it for the first session of next year, September 1. About $40,000 have already been subscribed, nearly all in the community. No such subscription has ever before been raised in any locality for any college.

—The report of the correspondent of the Home Mission Board says: "On the first of January the financial condition of the Board was as follows: Receipts from all sources, including 'special' collection, since the 30th of April, last, $46,000; expenditures, $32,238; amount falling due to the missions Dec. 31, fully $15,000. The balance on hand was not sufficient to meet these matured claims. There has been a remarkable increase in the income from legacies, $11,100 this year against $2,000 to the same time a year ago."

—October 14 the commission appointed by Presbytery met and organized the First United Presbyterian Congregation of Seattle, Wash., consisting of twenty-one members. Three elders and three trustees were elected.

WESLEYAN.

—The statistics of the Wesleyans of England, just published, give a total membership in Great Britain of 424,303, which shows a net increase of 688 in the year, with 28,095 on trial for church membership, and 62,416 young persons meeting in junior society classes.

—The British Wesleyans are organizing an Epworth teetotal league, by the terms of which every member is pledged to be a teetotaler; to pray daily for the spread of teetotalism, and to work according to his or her opportunity for the extension of temperance.

—The corporation of Eastbourne, England, at whose instigation a Wesleyan open-air meeting was suppressed and its participants fined in the courts, has withdrawn its objections to these meetings, provided there is no instrumental music connected with them.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Near West Kearney, Neb., Monday two boys found a dynamite bomb on the Union Pacific track.

A preliminary meeting was held Monday at Wheeling, W. Va., of leading glass manufacturers not in the United States Company to organize a similar combine with Wheeling as headquarters of all factories now unorganized.

Monday the United States Supreme Court affirmed the anti-lottery law enacted by the last Congress.

C. N. Caspar, of Milwaukee, Monday, pleaded guilty to a charge of mailing obscene matter and was fined $500.

John H. Mellon and William H. Porter, of the Beaver (Pa.) Star, convicted of libeling Senator Quay, Monday were sentenced to six months' imprisonment and fined $600 each, and ordered to pay the costs of prosecution.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of the local court in the lard case of 1883, and ordered a new trial.

Pullman car porters are said to be engaged in smuggling liquor into Kansas.

Captain Joseph Humphrey, an old settler of Milwaukee, Wis., died Tuesday.

Jacob P. Leese, the first white settler in California, died Monday at San Francisco.

At Appomattox, Va., Monday the court-house was burned. The McLayne House, in which General Lee signed the terms of surrender to General Grant, was threatened.

At Albany, N. Y., Tuesday, the Legislature passed a bill allowing newspaper men to witness electrical executions and publish the details thereof.

Moses Hopkins, a capitalist of San Francisco, died Tuesday.

W. P. Boyd, of Arcola, was elected president of the Illinois Board of Pharmacy at Springfield Tuesday.

At Ocean City, N. J., Tuesday, the House of Rest Hotel, said to be the property of Postmaster General Wanamaker, was attached by the sheriff.

At Newark, N. J., Tuesday night an alcoholic condenser exploded killing four men.

An earthquake shock, the most severe known in the city, was felt in Portland, Ore., Wednesday night, at 8:30. Little damage was done.

Earthquake shocks at Omaha Wednesday night, caused a bank of earth to cave into the street, crushing a house and fatally injuring one of its inmates, it is believed.

A street-car at Pittsburg filled with non-union employes was blown up by strikers early Wednesday morning. The vehicle was wrecked, but its occupants escaped, although many were wounded by flying glass.

The case of Brown, Steese & Clark, failed woolen merchants of Boston, which has been before the insolvency court for two years, was virtually settled Wednesday by the acceptance by the creditors of 7 per cent on the liabilities amounting to $3,000,000.

Seven mail pouches disappeared, it is supposed, from two mail wagons while on a ferry boat en route from New York to Hoboken, N. J., Wednesday. Subsequently some of the pouches were received at Buffalo, N. Y., their destination.

At a meeting of Philadelphia citizens Wednesday, $2,100 was raised for the relief of famine sufferers in Russia.

Diphtheria is so serious at Mooresville and Brooklyn, Ind., that children under 16 have been ordered to stay off the streets and business is practically suspended.

S. V. White and F. W. Hopkins, representing the firm of S. V. White & Co., stock brokers of New York, which failed recently, were reinstated by the Stock Exchange Thursday.

There seem to be some grounds for the story that the University of Illinois is about to take to itself the School of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago, also a dental school of that city, and that the University of Illinois authorities contemplate the early establishment of a law school in Champaign, Ill.

Advices have been received from John W. Young, now in London, that an English syndicate has agreed to furnish the money to build the Mexican Northern Pacific Railroad.

Mrs. Catherine Sharp of Philadelphia, celebrated her 114th birthday, having been born Feb. 6, 1778, in that city. Her husband, who served in the war of 1812, died fifty-three years ago, but the youngest of her four children still survives at the age of 73.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Feb. 1 to Feb. 6:

A Merrill, D E Walker, A Teter, Miss L H Rublee, R A Waldo, W R Boomer, R Montgomery, S Bushey, S Milligan, H Preston, Mrs R Leggett, C Banford, J Bittinger, Rev S R McClurkin, Rev O O Sando, R Stewart, S C Cover, G B Van Pelt, R Ingram, J Gowans, Mrs S Olney, A Lull, F G Orr, Rev G Bent, J Buckley, R Wiester, J M Smucker, C H Interman, R J Hill, J S Harnden, J T McCormick, F Blish, O Peterson, F Hadley, Mrs R S Smith, A W Austin, D W Beverly, D Esch, R J Crampton, A E Michel, D H C Salisbury, C Denham, E. F Waring, D G Foster, H Mathews, H Curtis, T Hodge, W A Shattuck.

WANTED.—Good, Christian men and women to sell lots in the choicest Temperance suburb of Chicago.

Address "LAND OWNER," Care Publisher of this paper.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table with market reports for Chicago, listing items like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rye, Bran, Hay, Butter, Cheese, Beans, Eggs, Seeds, Flax, Broom corn, Potatoes, Hides, Lumber, Wool, Cattle, Hogs, Sheep with prices.

NEW YORK.

Table with market reports for New York, listing items like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Eggs, Butter, Wool with prices.

KANSAS CITY.

Table with market reports for Kansas City, listing items like Cattle, Hogs, Sheep with prices.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON, AT THE Conference of Christians CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3.

No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1.

A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacher, Martin Luther, John Knox, and a host of others.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D.

This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 8vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50.

This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony.

This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works ON SECRET SOCIETIES FOR SALE BY THE National Christian Association 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C.O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail price sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masbury, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, vander cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages, cloth, $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. K. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRYPTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

There is no place like home—when Pearline is used in it. There is no place about home where Pearline can't be used. Pearline takes the hard work and drudgery out of—keeping a home clean. It is next to having the washing and cleaning done for you, and well done at that.

It washes everything that can be washed. It cleans paint, marble, carpets, hangings—in fact everything cleanable. It is a luxury in the bath. It is emphatically without harm to person or things. With Pearline you have rest; it rests with you to have Pearline.

Beware of imitations. 233 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

HOME AND HEALTH.

To fumigate a room, heat an iron shovel and drop vinegar on it. Have the doors and windows open.

Carelessness in measuring or preparing a dish is often the cause of failure. When a receipt is found good, it should be followed exactly.

It is not only an economy for home-makers to keep an account book, but it is a great satisfaction to know, from year to year, exactly what has been expended.

It is convenient to have an iron-bolder attached by a long string to the band of the apron when cooking; it saves burned fingers or scorched aprons, and is always at hand.

The excellence of baked potatoes depends upon eating as soon as they are done, and not before. They are worthless till cooked, and dry rapidly as soon as baked through.

A kitchen knife to be kept nice and sharp must never be put into grease. Stir and turn greasy cooking with an old, broad-bladed butcher knife or common, dull case knife.

In washing knives and forks, never drop them into hot water. Good handles are ruined in that way. Use a tin-pot just high enough to wash the blades without wetting the handles.

Never let the whites of eggs stand during the beating process, even for a moment, as they will begin to turn to a liquid state and cannot be restored, and thus they will make a heavy cake.

What is more disagreeable to use than a rusty flat-iron? Rub them with fine emery dust and sweet oil. If you cannot make them smooth, send them to a factory and have them ground.

If the stove is cracked, a good cement is made for it as follows: Wood ashes and salt in equal proportions, reduced to a paste with cold water, and filled in the cracks when the stove is cool. It will soon harden.

Save stale pieces of bread, and when an easy day comes, dry them thoroughly in an open oven, and with a rolling-pin crush as fine as dust. These then will always be at hand for preparing oysters, cutlets, croquettes, etc.

Go to bed at night to sleep, and not to think over the troubles of to-day nor the anticipated trials of to-morrow. One woman said: "I plan my next day's work each night after retiring." Poor, little, nervous thing, she looked it.

When one is fatigued, tea is an efficient restorative. It forms an agreeable, warm drink, which is neither heating to the blood, nor oppressive to the stomach, particularly if taken slowly when one is sitting quietly. Large quantities, however, induce nervous disorders.

Paper or pasteboard may be rendered waterproof as follows: Mix four parts of slaked lime with three parts of skimmed milk, and add a little alum; then give the material two successive coatings of the mixture with a brush and let it dry.

Keep celery fresh by rolling it in brown paper sprinkled with water, then in a damp cloth, and put it in a cool, dark place. Before preparing it for the table, submerge it in cold water and let it stand for an hour. It will be found very crisp.

When furnishing a home, do not neglect to purchase pictures. They serve to recall pleasant memories and scenes, and when hung to harmonize with the furniture and in keeping with the use of the room, they are highly ornamental. Buy good ones or none.

For burns, sweet oil and cotton are standard remedies. If they are not at hand, sprinkle the burned part with flour and wrap loosely with a soft cloth. Don't remove the dressing until the inflammation subsides, as it will break the new skin that is forming.

Ask your educated women never to rest until every little public school girl in this country is taught how to give her father and her brother and her husband and son such a good breakfast in the morning that he will not need to have his grog to help him until dinner time.

It sometimes happens that a fish-bone accidentally swallowed will remain in the oesophagus and be troublesome. In fact, death has been occasioned by the great irritation of a fish-bone. In such cases, says the Herald of Health, as soon as possible take four grains of tartar emetic, dissolved in one-half pint of warm water, and immediately after the white of six eggs. This will not remain on the stomach more than two or three minutes, and probably the bone will be ejected with the coagulated mass. If tartar emetic is not convenient a spoonful of mustard dissolved in milk-warm water and swallowed will answer every purpose of the emetic.

The days of colds and Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup are at hand. Price 25 cents a bottle.

To keep the beard from turning gray, and thus prevent the appearance of age, use Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers, the best dye made.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato; T. R. Harris, Abbot, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 3/4 ozs., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8 1/2 in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 18 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent; after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. If started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. This year I offer $500 cash to any person producing a 3 1/2 lb. tomato. (It can be done.) Full directions how Mr. Harris grew his with each order. Plant some, you may win the prize. All my seed is saved from large specimens.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE Is a head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP Is the earliest in the world, easy to grow, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors.

My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $200 for a pansy blossom; $300 for a bean plant with 100 pods, and above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection, will receive free a packet FINEST IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. R. MILLER, P.O. Box 111, Onandaga Co., N. Y.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass

100 Doses One Dollar

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations, $2.00. "A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa. He who wants to know what missionary effort means in these days may well learn from this volume. * * * The reader who goes carefully through will have a good bird's eye view of recent events in Africa, with all the results of modern travel. * * * The work contains solid information of use to all who are interested in the future of this wonderful country. The many illustrations throw light upon savage customs and costumes."—Graphic.

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth, $1.50.

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. * * * We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America. 1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled...2.00 2. Beveled boards, full gilt...2.50 3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges...2.50 4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges...4.00 5. Persian calf, padded and embossed, gilt roll and r. g...5.00 6. Crushed levant, elegant...6.00 7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors...7.50

Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall. Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use. 20

My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children. 20

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses; Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion" and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servants. 20
Royal Dainty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20
The Royal Invitation. 20
Loyal Responses. 20
Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant.....2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
Twelve Striking Sermons. 50
Twelve Soul Winning Sermons. 50
Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 50
Twelve New Year Sermons. 50
Twelve Christmas Sermons. 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Bear's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. Lark in the Woods. Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed. Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hessa Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.10
Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20
Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Bataala.

The Hessa Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80
Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

[From the Farm, Field and Stockman.]

HORTICULTURAL.

A valuable sort is worth more than merely a handsome tree.

Spread out the roots nearly equal on all sides, so as to brace the tree well.

If frozen roots are thawed in compactly pressed mellow earth, the tree may be made to live.

If the roots of a tree are frozen, and then thawed out of the ground or in contact with the air, the tree will be killed.

A small, thrifty tree, with good roots when set out, will be a good bearing tree sooner than a large one with mutilated roots.

If needed, this is a good time to haul out manure on the lawn. Wood ashes or fine stable manure can be used to advantage.

Now that the ground is frozen, mulch should be applied wherever needed, and also give extra covering to fruit and vegetable pits.

Trees should always be set about as deep as they stood in the nursery or two or three inches deeper, to allow for the settling of the earth.

Parsley, pepper and tomato plants can be kept growing all winter if put in boxes or pots and treated the same as window or house plants.

In pruning make all cuts slanting and smooth, and if liable to hold water, paint over with shellac or linseed oil. Clean up the litter and burn as soon as the pruning is done.

If not done before, it is not too late yet to finish clearing up, especially in the orchard. Old boards, brush, weeds and stalks serve as a harboring place for vermin and insects during the winter.

Close planting of pear trees is now believed to be advantageous, as they protect each other. For standard trees eighteen feet apart is considered a good distance, and about ten for dwarfs.

With many the failure to secure a thrifty growth with house plants is because the air in the room is kept too warm and dry. Keeping a vessel filled with water on the stove is a good remedy.

A quarter of an ounce sulphide of potash dissolved in a gallon of water and applied on the affected plants with a fine rose syringe, will destroy mildew on roses, chrysanthemums or other greenhouse plants.

Grow more fruit. Brewers in Philadelphia ascribe the falling off in the consumption of beer last year to the abundance of fruit. It was particularly noticeable when watermelons were in such great supply.

DAIRY.

Even a strong market doesn't call for "strong" butter.

A good, well-grown heifer may come in at two years old.

Good butter makes many kinds of food "go down" easily.

The skim milk is an important by-product in the butter dairy.

Cheese should have butter fat in it to make it good to sell and to eat.

Linseed meal added to the skim milk makes a good ration for calves or pigs.

The Illinois State Fair will be held at Peoria, Illinois, September 26-30, 1892.

The cow that turns out the most butter or cheese for the least feed is the most profitable.

Hoard's Dairyman declares that mature bulls, from three to eight years old, make the best dairy sires.

Strong butter never forces its way to the front. It shows its strength by forcing customers away from it.

The difference between making good butter and bad is the difference between knowledge and ignorance; between carefulness and carelessness.

If milk cannot be sold profitably, try selling fresh, delicious articles made from it. A Massachusetts man has been selling his milk for fourteen years from his wagon to private customers in two-ounce

DON'T DELAY TO

Stop that cough! Else the bronchial tubes will be enlarged and the delicate tissues of the lungs exposed to injury. No other medicine is so speedily operative in throat and lung troubles as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few doses have been known to break up an obstinate and distressing cough. Sufferers from asthma, bronchitis, croup, consumption, sore throat, and whooping cough find a sure relief in the use of this preparation. It soothes the inflamed membrane, promotes expectoration, and induces repose. Don't be without it in the house. Sallie E. Stone, Hurt's store, Va., writes: "I have found, in my family, that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was always a certain cure for colds and coughs."

"Five years ago I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and had been given up by my physicians. I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was completely cured."—Anga A. Lewis, Ricard, N. Y. *

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

creamery cheeses. Any person tasting one invariably wants more, and it pays to supply them. This is legitimate and progressive.

If we learn how to make dairying pay a small profit when feed is high and dairy products low, then when the ordinary conditions prevail we can make it pay a big one.

Those who have plenty of corn and clover hay can avoid buying much milk feed this winter. Cut clover hay, wet and mixed with corn meal, makes a very good butter ration.

The manufacture of oleomargarine increased in the United States over 12,000,000 pounds during the past fiscal year. What are our butter makers about, to allow this to progress thus?

In season and out of season, morning and evening, through summer's heat and winter's cold, the good cow works; gentle, patient and uncomplaining, asking only to be furnished the raw material to work on.—Jersey Bulletin.

The well-fed and well-bred milk dairy herds of cows seldom give milk that furnish less than three per cent fat, the standard below which no milk should fall. Milk used for butter making should not yield less than four per cent fat.

In a creamery handling 10,000 pounds of milk per day it is easy for a careless or poor manager to lose $1,500 a year on the quality of the butter, $3,000 a year on the quantity, $150 on the consumption of coal and $40 on that of oil.—Dairy World.

When a cow is due to calve, put her in a box stall a few days before the calf is expected, so that she will get used to her new quarters. If she is excitable after she calves, don't go near her often than is necessary, and don't allow a stranger to go near her at all.

If you go out early in the morning, you may catch rheumatism; Salvation Oil cures it.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hab-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 539 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshipped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 89 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The sympathizers of the Dubs faction of the Evangelical church at Akron, Ohio, which was given into possession of the Bowman faction by the court Thursday, broke into the edifice and retook possession.

Telegraphic reports have reached Knoxville, Tenn., that the miners have surrounded the militia at Coal Creek, and that a battle is expected at any moment.

Profits of the National Cordage Company (twine trust) for the past year as shown by the report of the Comptroller were $1,406,313. The assets of the company are $23,419,120.

Twenty-five saloon-keepers at Ottumwa, Iowa, were arrested Thursday for neglecting to cancel the stamps on empty liquor casks.

The iron-beam pool, composed of most of the large firms in the United States, collapsed Thursday.

Russell Sage, Jr., nephew of the noted New York financier, died Thursday, aged 53 years.

Mr. Lyman J. Gage, of Chicago, will soon leave New York for the South, where he will remain a short time and then return to Chicago.

Andrew Carnegie wrote a letter under date of Jan. 13, to a manufacturer at Hamilton, Ontario, favoring the annexation of Canada to the United States.

California sugar is likely to be excluded from Eastern markets on account of an advance in rates by the railway companies.

At Des Moines, Iowa, Thursday, C. F. Duke swallowed a spoonful of hot lye, thinking it was soup. He will die.

At Madison, Wis., Thursday, the Wisconsin Sunday Rest Association adopted a resolution opposing the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

Survivors of the Johnstown flood will give their incomes for the 31st of next May, the third anniversary of the disaster, for the purpose of erecting a group of statuary in the public square of Johnstown to commemorate the event.

W. S. Eaman, of Jones Station, Ohio, took morphine Thursday because his father insisted that he support himself. He is likely to die.

Grover Cleveland, it is alleged, will meet the prominent members of the Democratic party at Detroit on the 22d inst., when the question of his candidacy will be settled.

Miss Bridget McCaffrey of Bridgeport, Pa., died Friday, at the age of 110.

Engineers began at St. Louis the survey of the Chicago and St. Louis Electric Railway Friday.

Spotted fever is raging near Dangerfield, Texas. Five deaths have occurred.

John Hogan, who laid out the site of the city of Chicago, died at St. Louis Friday.

J. M. Gates, of Chicago, Friday said that the barb wire trust had been dissolved.

Thomas Mellrose, a farmer living near Grantsburg, Ind., Thursday received information that he was heir to an estate in England valued at about $1,000,000.

At Salt Lake, Friday, the Liberal Territorial Convention adopted a memorial to Congress protesting against the admission of Utah as a State.

It was decided to hold the Wisconsin Prohibition Convention at Madison May 31 and June 1.

On Saturday night last the Hotel Royal, in New York City, was destroyed by fire and many persons lost their lives.

FOREIGN.

It is reported that the government of Italy is about to resume full diplomatic relations with the United States.

Extensive transactions in port wine are reported at Oporto. One London broker purchased wine valued at £500,000. The payments are to be made in silver.

Spurgeon's funeral was held Feb. 11 at London.

The tide in the Elbe river at Hamburg was the highest for twenty-two years, Sunday. Some of the suburbs of Hamburg were inundated.

Alexander Rizo-Rhangabe, the Greek poet, archæologist, and statesman, died Monday, aged 82 years.

Robbery by starving peasants is becoming frequent in Russia.

Twenty anarchists were arrested by the police of Berlin Monday. A quantity of incendiary literature was seized.

The Chinese Government is paying indemnities for the killing or injury of foreigners and the destruction of property in the recent uprisings.

When off Fecamp the French steamer St. Andre collided with and sank the Danish brig Thor. All the crew of the Thor save one boy were drowned.

Workmen out of employment raided a number of bake-shops in Lisbon Wednesday. Many were arrested.

Dr. Morell Mackenzie, the distinguished English physician, died on Wednesday.

Natives of Dahomey have ravaged the country around Popo in Sengal, capturing 3,000 slaves. Trade is at a standstill.

Influenza is on the wane in Berlin, but is increasing at Breslau.

Twenty women who were stricken with influenza in the prison at Agram, Austria, became delirious and so violent that men had to be summoned to restrain them.

A judicial inquiry at Nensatz, Hungary, resulted in the indictment of three old women for the murder of ten peasants. The inquiry also revealed the existence of a class of professional poisoners living in Southern Hungary.

The Danube has overflowed its banks in the Pesth district, causing serious floods.

Owing to disorders consequent upon the authorities refusing to allow the students of the Ecole Centrale des Artes et Manufactures of Paris to hold their annual procession, the principal has dismissed the students and closed the school.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PIANOS $175. ORGANS $18. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

$3.50 PER DAY ALL WINTER

Can be made easy by any energetic person selling "CHAMPION PASTE STOVE POLISH." No brush required. No hard labor. No dust or dirt. Always ready for use. An article every housekeeper will buy. 216,000 packages sold in Philadelphia. Exclusive agency for one or more counties given competent person. Write to-day enclosing stamp for particulars. You will never regret it. Address, CHAMPION CO., 46 N. Fourth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN

DE yet 1 Better write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue of this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Arrangements are being made whereby

HARVEY

Will be enabled to accommodate thousands of WORLD'S FAIR visitors.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION,

Who founded and platted the whole town, are now selling lots at original prices, and at figures that will be advanced very materially March 1st.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION

- Have choice property
- Near the factories.
- Near the schools and churches.
- Near the hotels and in the business district.
- Nine factories in operation, others will soon be running.
- Seventy passenger trains daily.
- Twenty-five minutes' ride to the World's Fair Site.
- Forty-five minutes to Union Depot.

BETTER CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT THAN ANY SUB-URBAN TOWN IN THE VICINITY OF CHICAGO.

In addition to our three large hotels one new hotel, "The Transit House," is just completed on 148th Street near Marshfield Avenue. Plans for another large hotel on the main boulevard near the Illinois Central Depot are reported by a strong company. Build your own cottage; you can either rent it or sell it at a handsome profit. Send to us for plans. Sent free.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INVEST.

Send at once for our new pamphlet that will tell you what you want to know about the most successful temperance manufacturing town in the world. Send all communications direct to us and save commissions to agents.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION,

819 to 825 THE ROOKERY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Still Another Factory at HARVEY

A. J. SWEENEY & SON'S IRON WORKS from Wheeling, West Virginia, have agreed to move their extensive works to Harvey and employ men to whom first year's wages will be $180,000.00. Their location is just west of Academy Addition. This will bring hundreds more of mechanics to Harvey, and add largely to value of lots. Always buy Real Estate from first hands. Save commission to agents. Be sure you get a straight Warranty Deed.

Do not fail to secure plat of this wonderful Temperance town with our price lists of lots around the Academy—THE EDUCATIONAL CENTER—at once if you have not already done so.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 23

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,138.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:		REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments....	1	Rev. H. H. Hinman in Wisconsin; Rev. Wm. Fenton in Minnesota; Echoes of the New York Convention; Letters Received by the Convention.....	4,5,9
To Aid the Starving Russians.....	8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The Christian Denominations and the Anti-secrecy Reform.....	8	The Unmentionable Lodge; Are we a Christian Government; "The Responsibility of Nations".....	5,6
Indian Education—An Appeal.....	8	THE HOME.....	10
Masonry Described by Masons.....	8	TEMPERANCE.....	11
CONTRIBUTIONS:		BIBLE LESSON.....	12
Words for Music (Poetry).....	1	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
Orangeism.....	1	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
The Oily Man.....	3	MARKETS.....	13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.....	4	HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4	FARM NOTES.....	15
LITERATURE.....	6
OBITUARY.....	7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.....	7
THE N. C. A.....	7

Life insurance must pay a very large percentage on the enormous business which it transacts. President Beers of the New York Life has resigned his office, but continues to draw a stipend of $37,500 annually during his life as an "adviser." Somebody is paying liberally to support this lucrative position.

The case of Edward M. Field, the wayward son of Cyrus W. Field, is a sad one, inasmuch as his own criminality is not only surely leading him to condign punishment, but it is hastening the gray hairs of his honored father to the grave. Analysis of his career could hardly fail to teach some object-lessons of great importance to all young men. He is now under indictment for forgery.

The Ohio State Farmers' Alliance is a non-secret body. It met at Zanesville, lately, and decided to allow such local bodies as wished so to do to adopt the secret work proposed by the National Alliance. A late meeting of the National Alliance refused to become a secret lodge, but commended to the local alliances desiring to become such that they adopt what is known as the "Nebraska" work. This is probably the ritual noticed by the Ohio Alliance. One can but be amused at the bland and childlike confidence of the Alliance, if as an open body it recommends a ritual that is really secret; or, on the other hand, at the contradiction of calling a ritual secret which is voted by an open body. The evil effect of tampering with any kind of a secret ritual is seen in the report of a decrease of the open Alliances in the State of nearly one-sixth.

Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota are moving grandly in making collections of provisions for the starving Russians. The Russian Charge d'Affaires at Washington was formally notified Thursday that over 5,000,000 pounds of flour had been contributed by the millers of the United States and the people of Nebraska and Minnesota for the relief of famine sufferers in Russia. The flour will be forwarded from New York in March.

The Iowa Russian Relief Committee, operating in all ninety-one counties of that State, on Friday last began the shipment of shelled corn in carloads. The grain is consigned to Miss Clara Barton. A cargo will be made up at some Atlantic seaport, and be accompanied to Russia by proper agents. All railroads between the Missouri river and the Atlantic coast carry certified donations free and furnish every facility for prompt handling. The movement for the relief of the Russians appears to be becoming quite general, and liberal in degree. The necessity is also very great and very urgent. We print the appeal in another column.

Mormonism, afraid of defeat in its secret longing for supremacy, and anxious to perpetuate its peculiar dogmas and practices untrammelled by the restrictions of Statehood, is now endeavoring to obtain, through Congress, a species of "home-rule" that shall give it independent powers in its civil and religious government. While most Americans are satisfied to pledge cheerful obedience to the Federal Constitution and laws, and to frame their State charters and statutes in accordance therewith, the Mormons seem disposed to live under an oligarchy, such as was established by Joseph Smith at Nauvoo, in this State, and by Brigham Young after their removal to Utah. We all know what kind of a government that was, resulting in crime and bloodshed, because antagonistic to our Federal rule, and in harmony only with their peculiar religious tenets.

Words of encouragement are great promoters of fidelity in the reform work. A subscriber, writing from New England, incorporates these kind expressions in his letter: "The Cynosure is a weekly joy to me. I esteem it very highly for its unflinching attitude in regard to Masonry, and, if possible, more so for its bold and noble defence of the grand doctrines of Christianity, especially at a time when so many are trying to undermine its very foundations. Besides, it contains more general information, in a nut-shell, than any other publication of its kind that I know of." Another correspondent, nearer home, writes: "I rejoice in seeing the blessed work of opposing the deeds of darkness, progressing. It is a noble work you are carrying on, and a work that will bring you much of trouble, judging from my own experience and observations; but if God be for us, who can be against us?" We greatly enjoy these kind expressions.

Bi-chloride-of-gold cures for intemperance have produced another "fad," in the shape of "bi-chloride-of-gold clubs," which are this week holding a national convention at Dwight, Ill. Whatever the object of these institutions, they are only an indication of the modern disposition to turn everything into a source of social enjoyment. In the meantime, other parties are advertising other methods of curing alcoholism in the individual not consonant with Dr. Keeley's system, and the number of "sobering-off" resorts is numerously increasing. How we are to reconcile this classing of drunkenness among curable diseases with the declaration of the Bible (1 Cor. 6: 10), that it is a deadly sin which will keep a man out of heaven, is a peculiar problem. Still, if the various "cures" for habits of intoxication will tend to close up the saloons, they should be encouraged. But we fear that if the "cures" become general, the temptation to contract the disease will increase in a similar ratio, and the saloons enlarge their business accordingly.

It is but recently that a lodge of the Knights of Pythias was organized in Wheaton, and very properly in the Masonic Hall, with an initiatory membership of thirty-four. The College Record suspects, with some show of reason, that they are all Masons; for "Freemasonry, since its beginning, about 180 years ago, has been the mother of all the other lodges which have sprung up around it, and which exist largely for it." The danger to be feared from this lodge of K. of P. in our beautiful suburban town arises from its fascination for "young men who like uniforms, feathers and swords." The College Record closes its item with the following just and significant reflection: "Of course the men who make up this new lodge will be those who do not go to prayer meeting and who have no hope beyond the grave. They may perhaps get a few professing Christians to aid them in their work, but unless they differ from all the rest they will simply be one method of amusing men, keeping them away from the house of God, and by sending them into the grave without any faith in Jesus Christ. All enlightened Christians should use their influence against such a rival to the church of God."

WORDS FOR MUSIC.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

When the golden rule withered, and spirits were grasping,
When man against man fought with treason and pain,
When church and when state hands with sinners were clasping,

To send the black slave to his master again;
So a common cause falls not in vain on the billow
That the feet of our Lord caused to hush and be still;
And David's harp hung not for long on the willow,
For its music was heard over valley and hill.

When the morning is breaking, and heroes and sages
Are coming and going, like meteors afar,
So the light from God's mountains shines down through the ages,
Like the fire that rained downward from Bethlehem's star;

So we yearn for thy love, that is sweeter and dearer
Than any the pleasures of earth can bestow;
And we pray for the light that is brighter and clearer
Than any we sorrowing mortals can know.

Oh, soul of the Orient! peerless and tender,
Reflecting a light that is bright as a star,
My soul would expand till the fire of thy splendor
Enshrouds with its glory the mountains afar.
Thy love and thy peace, like a swift-flowing river,
Shines down from the hills that the angels have trod;
And our souls shall awake 'neath the breath of their Giver,
Till they bloom like the bowers in the lowlands of God!

CHORUS:--

Soft shine the sunbeams on lowland and highland;
Light blows the wind over valley and hill;
Sweet be the music that sings to life's island,
When the voice of our God bids the tempest be still.
Steamburgh, N. Y.

ORANGEISM.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE ORDER, AND AN EXPOSITION OF THE ROYAL ARCH DEGREE.

BY A SECEDING ORANGEMAN.

When the Lord let the light of his glorious Gospel shine into my dark heart, I was willing to take up every cross and follow Jesus in the way he had marked out in his Gospel. I soon found his truth verified; I found foes among those who had previously been my friends. I found a cross that went crossways on everything that was selfish, worldly or un-Scriptural. If I would enjoy the fullness of God's love as taught in the Scriptures, I saw plainly it meant death to carnality. The cry came to me, "Go ye forth, unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach." I was fully convinced that the secret lodge and the Gospel of Jesus were at enmity; and fearing lest I should again be brought into captivity, to sin and death, I abandoned the lodge forever. Prominent men in the lodge said that "if we but lived up to our constitution we could not miss heaven." We were told, while receiving a degree, that the institution of the lodge sought not only the welfare of the body, but the salvation of the soul also; and in the scarlet degree the sacrament was administered.

This was shown to me to be un-Christian. Jesus said of those who would say that he was in the secret chamber, to believe them not. He is our example, and he said: "In secret have I said nothing." In Leviticus 5: 4, 5, we see how fore-swearing was treated under the law of Moses. If a man foreswore himself, and afterwards he saw that he had done wrong, he would remain guilty until he confessed it. But to follow Jesus will save us from all these snares. He says: "Ye have heard by them of old, thou shalt not fore-swear thyself; but I say unto you, swear not at all."

Those who have been guilty must repent and confess ere they can become clear of this crime, regardless of what man may think or do. If we follow Jesus fully, some of us may yet conclude that they are not all dead who would even kill us and think they were doing God service.

I remember a man who joined the lodge. One said that they thought him not firm enough to keep the secrets. I asked him what they would do with him if he should happen to tell these secrets; he said "they would soon get rid of him."

Jesus said: "He that will save his life shall lose it; but he that loseth his life for my sake and the Gospel, the same shall save it." "He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God." Now, I am convinced that he who will stand out abreast of the iniquities of this present age, "in the name of the Lord," will be hated of all men who disobey the admonitions of the Lord.

The lodge, although it professes to seek the welfare of the souls of men, is unlike Christ's Gospel in many ways. Jesus Christ seeks the salvation of all. He died for all, women as well as men—the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the unfortunate creatures whom I have seen come to the lodge, endeavoring to better their condition, but have been blackballed—Jesus Christ waits with outstretched arms to receive them, if they will come. The lodge, being unlike Christ's holy institution, rejects them all; and with an inside tyler and an outside tyler, with drawn sword, would apparently slay them should they enter.

I do not believe that King William III., Prince of Orange, knew anything about the ungodly performance in the Orange lodges of to-day. In Ireland the order is quite different; the working of the Arch degree is not nearly so ridiculous as on the American continent. King William III. was called Prince of Orange. The first degree ("the Orange") is merely an obligation, wherein the candidate promises to stand true to the Protestant faith and to die, "if needs be," for his king and country, rather than bow to the Roman yoke.

I believe King William was Prince of Orange; but I believe some other king, or person, actuated by the prince from the lower regions, added the additional degrees.

Paul says: "It is a shame to speak of those things that are done of them in secret." You should think it a shame for a professor of religion or a professed minister of Jesus Christ to take the following in the secret chambers of the Loyal Orange Lodge of British America.

ROYAL ARCH DEGREE

THE RITUAL:

Before entering the preparation-room the candidate is securely hoodwinked with several thicknesses of cloth, so that it is impossible for him to see a ray of light. He is led by two guards, one on either side, who hold him by the arms, to the preparation-room.

Here he is informed that he must take off his hat, coat, vest, shirt ("or shirts, as the case may be"), his shoes, socks, etc. He is completely naked, except the portion of his body which his pantaloons, or drawers, cover after they are rolled up high above his knees; and, when in this naked condition, a pack of old rags in a sack is put on his back; a cane is put into his right hand; he is told by the guides that he will have a rough and rugged road to pass over, and that he must cling to the staff and bag, as he will have to account for them. The two guides then lead him to the second door.

Here they make three distinct raps, which are answered in the same form from within, by the Worshipful Master, who says, in a loud voice: "What vain or profane person has come to disturb the harmony of this most worshipful lodge, erected to God, and dedicated to Joshua?"

The Guides.—"No vain or profane, but a true, and worthy brother, desiring to be admitted, or initiated, into the mysteries of the Royal Arch degree."

Master.—"Has he the pass?"

Guides.—"No; but we are his sureties, and have it for him."

[The pass is given; the password is: "The great I am that I am."]

Master.—"If he has his guides and sureties, let him enter; but let him take heed upon what he enters."

They step inside, and the candidate is received at the point of a sword placed at his breast, which is held by the Worshipful Master, who gives him three sharp pricks—sometimes blood is drawn.

Worshipful Master.—"What feelest thou?"

Candidate.—"Three sharp pricks."

[The guides tell the candidate all the answers he is to make.]

Master.—"Pricks of the flesh, or pricks of conscience?"

Candidate.—"Pricks of the flesh."

[If he told the truth, he should say, "both flesh and conscience."]

Master.—"So shall they be to your conscience if ever you divulge or reveal the whole, or any part, of the signs, words, or tokens, which are about to be communicated to you. Step forward, kneel down, and repeat the Lord's prayer."

The candidate does as instructed. After prayer:

Master.—"Lead him to Mount Horeb."

The guides lead the candidate around the circle of the lodge-room, which is strewn with sticks, bricks, stones, stove-pipes, etc. As he is being led around the circle, he is switched on the calves of the legs at every step; the pack is jerked from his back; the staff is gone, and in the excitement he forgets them and his promises to keep them. When he arrives at the door, the guides throw the candidate on his back on the floor.

The Master now strikes the floor, by the candidate's head, with the butt of the sword and in a loud voice says:

Master.—"Death!"

Instantly, "bang" goes a gun, or pistol. All is silent for a moment. Then the Master stoops down, places his hand on his left breast, and says:

Master.—"He yet breathes; lead him on his journey. Guides, take him around again."

The candidate's legs smart, and his feet are sore, till he arrives again at the door or starting point, when he is again thrown on his back.

Master.—[With a loud voice:] "Judgment!"

Then, placing his hand on the left breast of the candidate,—

Master.—"He yet breathes; lead him on his journey."

Guides take the candidate around the circle again. He is treated as before, until he once more arrives at the door. There he is thrown, for the third time, on his back on the floor.

Master.—[Striking the floor:] "Eternity!" [To the candidate:] "You have had three great and mighty falls, with your face to the heavens, and your back to the earth. Arise!" [To the guides:] "Lead him to the river."

The guides lead the candidate to the middle of the room, where his foot is plunged into a tub of water, representing the River Jordan, with twelve stones in it, representing the twelve tribes of Israel. The candidate picks out the stones and counts them till he is sure that he has them all—as the guides play tricks on the hoodwinked man, and fool him.

Master.—"Lead him up the mount!"

The candidate ascends three steps of a ladder, called Jacob's ladder. The first step, he is informed, is faith; the second, hope, and the third, charity.

Master.—[Explaining:] "First, by faith, you are saved; second, by hope you ascend; third, by charity you are brought home to God. Where is the staff we gave you?" [Candidate cannot tell.] "You must suffer the penalty of being pitched into Gilgal."

The candidate is lifted from the ladder, and placed on a canvas, in which he is repeatedly tossed, by several strong men, nearly to the ceiling.

[In the early days of this country, the Arch degree was given, on one occasion, in a barn. Those who handled the canvas were filled with fire-water, and the poor fellow was tossed so high and so carelessly that he missed the canvas, fell, and was crippled for life. The Grand Lodge subsequently granted him a pension.]

The candidate, on coming from the canvas, is compelled, or commanded, to kneel upon a coffin and receive the obligation. The coffin is a concealed part of the lodge furniture.

In this position the candidate swears that he will conceal, and never reveal, the whole or any part of the signs, words or tokens of the order; that he will not cut, print, stamp, stain, or cause them to be stained; that he will be true to every brother, and never see him in want while it is in his power to aid him; that he will never give the Arch to any one who has not first paid the initiation fee.

Master.—"Have you paid yours?"

Candidate.—"No."

Master.—"What will we do with him?"

Some one says: "Throw him out of the window!"

Master.—"Some brother will lend him the fees."

Some one hands the fees to the candidate, to whom the remainder of his obligation is then dictated. He swears that he will answer all signs from an Arch man; that he will not be present at the making of an Arch man where there is less than a quorum, and that he will never marry a Roman Catholic or Papist; adding: "So help me God, and keep me steadfast in this my Arch obligation."

The candidate is then led to "Mount Horeb" (on the platform), where he is told to kneel down and asked if he would fight for the Bible. A Bible is held in a place difficult to be grasped by a blind man; and while he is striving to reach it, he is whipped on the fingers with switches. At length he is enabled to grasp it; and while he holds it, the Master asks: "Who beguiled Eve?"

Candidate.—"The serpent."

Master.—"Who beguiled the world?"

Candidate.—"Eve."

Master.—"What would you do with the serpent if you had him?"

Candidate.—"I would bruise his head."

Master.—"Search for him; he may be closer than you think."

The candidate is then led forward and is branded on his left breast, near the heart. The hissing of the burning flesh and the pain of this operation remind him forcibly of a real serpent's bite. The brand is larger than a 50-cent coin; bears the image of King William III. on horseback; the date 1690; the district and number of the lodge; and is so burned into the candidate's flesh that it can be distinctly seen on his body after he is dead.

Master.—"Did you find it?"

Candidate.—"No, but it found me."

This is the main test of an Arch man.

Master.—"Lead him under the Arch."

The candidate is asked "what he most stands in need of?"

Candidate.—"Light."

Here the chaplain reads from the Bible: "God said, Let there be light; and there was light." Instantly the hoodwink is removed, and the candidate beholds three lamps held up before his eyes.

Master.—"On being brought to light, what did you first behold?"

Candidate.—"Three great lights."

Master.—"Lights; they represent sun, moon and stars; the greater light to rule the day; the lesser lights to rule the night. On being brought to light, what else did you behold?"

Candidate.—"Death in all its horrors, swords being drawn across the bowels, breast and throat."

Master.—[Explaining with a drawn sword, and drawing it, first, across the throat:] "This signifies that your throat will be cut from ear to ear, and your tongue torn out by the roots; the sword across your breast signifies that your heart will be cut out, burned to ashes, and thrown to the four winds of earth; the sword across the bowels signifies that your bowels will be cut open, torn out, and the fowls of the air devour them; your body will be sunk to low-water mark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice every twenty-four hours —if ever you divulge or reveal the whole or any part of the signs, words and tokens."

THE SIGNS.

The candidate, looking over his right shoulder, beholds the warrant of the lodge; which, if asked by a brother how far he had gone, "and where was the warrant when you was made," he would look over his left shoulder and say: "Not under my feet."

The sign: Right hand is drawn across the throat; the answer: Draw the left hand across the throat.

Sign of distress: Hands held over the head, somewhat apart.

The grip: Press the third finger with the second finger.

The pass: "The Great I Am."

[We are promised a full exposition of Orangeism, of which the foregoing is but one degree.—EDITOR.]

THE OILY MAN.

BY JONATHAN W. MOSS.

Just now the most popular man about these parts is the agent of the oil companies. One of that sort has just passed through this section, paying the rentals on the leases that were made last fall,—his first visit. His popularity is owing to the fact that the recipients of the various little sums given out look upon their little piles as pure gifts, costing them nothing. And as long as they have a taste of their little mess of pottage left, they cannot be made to realize that to get it they have sold their birthrights.

The territory lying between Washington, Pa., and Sistersville, W. Va., on the Ohio river, is believed to be in what is called an oil belt. These lands have now been about all covered by leases. The prices paid for leases have ranged from twenty-five cents to a dollar per acre per annum. An occasional lease, however, fetches a good sum—several thousand dollars. The leases are so drawn that the oil companies can hold the lands one year gratis, except the few dollars which, in some cases, they give as bonus, at signing the lease; with the further privilege of surrendering the lease for cancellation at any time; making it possible for them to hold at least two years without rental. In one clause of the leases taken about here, the oil men agree to pay the stipulated rental, either directly to the lessor, or to deposit it to his credit in some bank named. No immediate use is made of these leases for boring oil wells, except that here and there a well is fooled with but never put down. The first use to which they are generally put is to be sold out at a big profit to other companies. In fact, the lands are not needed for oil production. All the oil which it is advisable to throw upon the market, is now being thrown out by the wells in the districts already "developed". The big scramble is how to get all the rest of the whole earth to speculate on; in all cases, as much as possible, to get everything securely in their grasp before the stupid farmer has learned the true value of what he has surrendered—while he is still willing to sell out for a song what ought to yield him big returns.

Most of the leases here are taken for five years, or, "as much longer as oil or gas is found in paying quantities." The companies agree to pay for all damages done to growing crops. Of course, they don't omit to covenant for universal right of way to go and come as they please.

When the leasing agent lights upon a neighborhood, he is a persevering creature. Shoo him away, and the next day, or the day after, behold! he is back again, as cheeky as ever. No selfishness about him. No. He is working for the good of the country. He wants it "developed," and the farmers to get rich and have their heels greased with our mighty spurting forth of the hidden wealth of the "oil belt," instead of the slow and toilsome way of oats and corn, "kail and potatoes." At last he goes off in triumph, with a lease in his pocket, and the farmer has bound himself, "his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns;" but the agent covenants for himself only, and keeps quiet about "assigns," etc.

When the agent came around this fall and winter, to pay the pittance bargained for as "rentals," he was loud in his praises of the charity of the company in being at the trouble and expense of sending the pay (it came mostly in checks) to the farmers, instead of depositing it in the banks named in their leases. Well, it did look a little tender-hearted of these fellows; but their bumps of benevolence had been "developed" by the setting-maul of Jubelum (for they are Masons to a man), so we might expect something charitable. It would be about as much trouble to go to the banks to get the checks cashed as to go for the deposits. But one of these fellows showed me a handful of his receipts just signed. Every receipt was, first, a receipt in ordinary form, including date of lease, where recorded, and every other specification likely to be of any use to the parties. Here it might have stopped. But it didn't. Right here was added a few lines of fresh agreement which were evidently meant to blot out the five-year limit in the original lease, and make it perpetual, unless the company should find no oil, and voluntarily surrender the lease as something not worth holding. That was the trick. The agent could sign every receipt as witness, and these could be recorded, and the farmer thrown and tied, when he could be skinned at leisure. The added words were cunningly inserted. No separate paragraph; not a period, semicolon, or comma. No, not even a capital letter to satisfy the fastidious eye of the grammarian, showed the starting point. But it got its work in all the same.

I mentioned what I had noticed to the agent, but his cheeky reply was, that the company had need to look for themselves, and if the farmers were not sharp enough to take care of themselves in bargaining, the proper thing to be done would be to send them to the lunatic asylum. Well,—yes,—perhaps. But when we think of the mighty muster roll of names attached to the leases, I opine it would be necessary for that useful institution to put up an extra wigwam or two to hold us all.

The leases are all gotten up with an eye single to the aggrandizement of the oil man, and full of serpents' teeth to be raised and set for the farmer as soon as they get ready to devour him.

The best, or, as I should say, the most crafty legal talent is employed on the part of the oil and gas men in the framing of the leases; and it is ever the aim to hold the farmer fast in the spider's web, and for the cunning oil spider to be ever loose himself. In one of these leases which I looked over last fall the closing covenant was that the "party of the first part," that is, the farmer, bound himself not to bring suit in any court for any breach of the foregoing covenants on the part of the "party of the second part,"—the oil man.

The oil men all having been well trained to "charity" in the secret lodge, it is meant that the leasing farmer should receive in the speculation simply what the charity of the company should see fit to give him,—and no more.

A business man with whom I lately talked on the subject said he never saw an oil lease that hadn't a catch in it.

As to the covenant to pay for all damages done to "growing crops," it may be said that when the oil men light upon a district in earnest, or after they have got done fooling away at their so-called test wells, there will be no "growing crops" to bother anybody. The fences thrown down, the lumbering wagons everywhere plowing their ways, and the layers of pipe lines weaving their net works, will appall the farmer who may have thoughts of corn or wheat. Not even sheep or cattle can be kept upon the land where the blight of the oil and gas curse has fallen. The fruitful field is turned into a desert.

True, the oil man gets more out the land that gives out oil and gas than the farmer would be likely to get. But who gets it? Once in a while the farmer gets a good haul, but generally he is tricked or bullied out of everything worth speaking of.

About three years ago I spent a few days on a visit at the house of a friend on the Monongahela river, above Pittsburg, Pa. They were having a well put down on their farm, and were so excited over their big expectations, that the money to come in was talked of in the family almost constantly. The well proved one of the biggest gassers in all the region. Meeting with members of the family afterwards, I inquired about the gas well. They avoided the subject. This awakened my curiosity; so I brought it up again and again. Finally I was reluctantly told that owing to some catch that was in the lease they couldn't get anything. True, there was something to which they were entitled, but to get it would involve routine and difficulties more than would pay for it. In a word, this hopeful old farmer had been tricked out of all. And, as men so tricked generally are, he was induced to cover up his hurt and be silent about it. But the man who pulls in a few shekels, crows loudly over it, and the oil-producing neighborhood, as a whole, sounds out a song of prosperity, while its wounds and bruises and putrifying sores are carefully hid under a cloak of shame. But who is willing to proclaim himself a fool?

The farmer is the foot-ball that is kicked about and trodden under foot in the oil and gas game; but let it not be thence concluded that the oil rogues, though they be all sworn brothers in the lodge, are all faithful turtle-doves to one another. The gang of wolves is a co-operative union against the flock of sheep, but still they sometimes feast upon one another.

Some six or seven years ago a vast scope of territory was leased about the neighborhood where I live. The agent who took the leases turned most of them over to his employers. But the cunning fellow held back in his own name leased properties scattered at intervals all over the leased district. He then managed to get his cousin and friend the position of locating geologist. They put their heads together and located the test wells on the agent's own leases. The wells were put down till oil in some places (and gas in others) was touched, and the character and depths of the strata ascertained. Then the agent came on with orders to take their derricks off his territory. They fussed and surveyed awhile, and it turned out that the oil company was caught napping for once, and were glad to hand over thirty thousand dollars as a compromise.

The leasing agents that swept this and a not far-distant neighborhood last fall were father and son. I have been told that the father sold a part of his leases (taken, of course, in his own name), for seven thousand dollars, and the son sold his to another company than the one that employed him, making in the operation thirty-five thousand dollars, clear.

So far as I can see, the purchasers of these leases might as well have given this large sum of money to the farmers at the outset, as to buy the leases second-hand at this liberal advance. But so it is; the farmer is the mud turtle on whose back the world rests, and not even the Farmers' Alliance can lift him on top.

The agent tells me of a sharp trick which the companies play on the farmers in the matter of oil delivery when this is bargained for. A rival refining company may offer ever so much more than the farmer is getting for his share of the oil. They will not allow him to sell it there, but will deliver it, or pretend to deliver it, to their own refinery or the most distant market, if that is the lowest market; and thereby make a big saving in what they graciously allow the lessor. But the farmer is helpless at any rate. The other fellows have all the machinery, and all the working force that handle the produce of the wells, and the money and lawyers to fight at law. And what can he prove, and what can he do to help himself? Nothing.

When the well was sunk that supplies the town of Cameron, W. Va., with light and fuel, the gas men played one of their tricks with entire success. As soon as a fine flow of gas was secured, the drillers stopped off, pretended to abandon the well, and complained that the well yielded nothing of any account. Meanwhile the lessor was beset to surrender his rental and the further right to gas for domestic use, the two worth to him, perhaps, a thousand dollars a year.

Finally the man consented; and now the oil company, who had driven a sufficiently hard bargain in the first place, are shouting over their "second blessing" as they pull in the shekels from the pockets of their Cameron patrons. The leasing farmer, who has always heretofore appeared to be a shrewd man in business, sees matters in a new gas light.

In conclusion, I would say when the fellow comes round to wheedle or bully you out of a lease of your little patrimony, don't be in a splutter; take time to think twice; be sure you are right before you go ahead.

Cameron, W. Va.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

February thoughts—A blazing star—Prof. Townsend's late bomb-shell—An Odd-fellows' savings bank—A long-term endowment order in trouble.

I hold that February is in many respects the most attractive of our winter months. She has, for instance, a very delightful way of giving us, towards the middle or close, a few days that hold in solution as it were the very essence of the springtime. No matter if the ground is still covered with snow as with a winding sheet. All nature seems to feel the resurrection throb of the new life. Yesterday we were treated to the unusual phenomena of a snowfall—a snow shower, rather—while the sun was shining brightly. Every flake as it fell was transfigured into fairy-like beauty. The scene was dazzling; perhaps a trifle weird, but altogether enchanting. If there are worlds in which there is no winter their inhabitants must lose a great deal. Take some of the finest poems in our language and observe how much our English literature is indebted to winter. Even the Bible, through an Oriental book, has plenty of imagery borrowed from this same source. "He giveth snow like wool." Could any word better describe its soft, fleecy fall? Now, as in Solomon's day, the careful housewife "is not afraid of the snow for her household," and the keen irony of Job is just as appropriate to the skeptic who rejects revealed truth because he cannot understand it, when the commonest everyday phenomenon around him is equally a sealed book: "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?"

A new and strange star, "enveloped in flames caused either by an explosion, or collision with some other heavenly body," is the last astronomical "find." One thinks instinctively, when reading about it, of a time when the telescopes of some other planet may be turned on our own little earth; when "the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." One stands awe-struck at the thought of this fiery globe careering through space. Is it only the fiery tomb out of which shall rise a renovated world; a sinless, deathless Paradise for some race that has, perhaps, like our own gone through the discipline of probation? We can wonder, and conjecture, and dream over the mystery, but the heavens hold fast their own secret; and, after all, of what real use would it be for us to know? Nature seems generally ready to let us into her secrets when the knowledge of them is likely to do us any good, to make our sojourn here any pleasanter, either for ourselves or others; but, this limit reached, the veil descends, and a frowning sphinx guards the portal for them who would pry beyond it.

The bomb-shell lately sent into the Methodist camp by Prof. Townsend, is a bomb-shell indeed, and the smoke of the explosion will have to clear away before we can know its full effect. This address, delivered before the Boston Preachers' Meeting, is a remarkable and most scathing arraignment of the sharp and unsanctified practices of "the ecclesiastical politician." The Methodist church is unfortunate, as Prof. Townsend admits, in having a government which is capable of being subverted to their own personal ends by these clerical wire-pullers, and where all the power may come to be lodged in the hands of those least worthy to rule. Some of the best preachers in this sect, wearied out with an evil from which they suffer without any power to prevent it, are contemplating (according to Dr. Townsend) an exodus into the Congregational church; so that if Methodism would retain such in her pulpits she must mend her ways. A New Hampshire minister writes: "Dr. Townsend's remarkable denunciation of Methodist wire-pulling is imperfect in that it does not expressly state that lodge oaths are at the bottom of it." The doctor may not himself be thoroughly aware of the grip which Masonry has on the church of the Wesleys, but the mystery is, that knowing so much he should not know a little more, and unhesitatingly place the blame where it belongs. It is said that no other denomination has so large a proportion of Masonic ministers as the M. E., and lodge preachers, when they want ecclesiastical promotion, can be safely trusted to use lodge methods. It is possible that in very self-defence, Methodism will have to arise and purge herself from this destroying canker of the lodge. Congregationalism, with its more democratic and simple form of government, does not allow of lodge methods being used on so large a scale; but it is a sad fact that Masonry holds the key to the majority of her churches, and that no measure looking towards her purification from this evil can be pressed by an anti-secret member. His or her efforts will be constantly thwarted by that subtle, malign, all-pervading influence. There is many a story of this nature, which if written out would make interesting reading. So Congregationalism cannot throw any stones at Methodism. It is to be hoped that Prof. Townsend will not stop here, but will pursue his investigations to their legitimate end, remembering that there can be no effect without a cause.

Springfield, Mass., is going to have an Odd-fellows' savings bank. The only institution of the kind in the country is said to be one which the Masons have in Louisville, Ky. According to the laws of Massachusetts, every savings bank is obliged to receive deposits from any one that offers, so that it will be impossible to make it an institution entirely for Odd-fellows. But the public ought by this time to have a lasting jealousy of any financial schemes run by the lodge.

The long-term endowment orders seem to have generally escaped the cyclone which has overtaken the short-term orders, although the principle is the same, and they must in the long run, equally with the others, suffer a collapse. But a ten-year-endowment order is now in trouble,— "The Knights and Ladies of Protection." Its name, however, has failed to protect the members from very unknighly conduct on the part of the officers. The policies contained a clause that after one year the holder might surrender it if he desired, and would be paid a proportion of the face value of the certificate based on the time it had run. This seemingly fair agreement, however, has not been carried out; and now the certificate-holders want their money. It was chartered in July, 1888; but, notwithstanding all its specious promises, must go the way of the more ephemeral orders, and be placed in the hands of a receiver. The officers have been levying assessments lately, ostensibly for sick benefits, but the money having not been so applied it has led to an investigation, and revealed as usual "something rotten in Denmark."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10, 1892.

Senator Proctor, under whose administration of the War Department the first Indians were regularly enlisted in the United States army, regards the experiment as being entirely successful in civilizing and keeping the Indians out of mischief and in making just the class of soldiers needed to perform many of the duties devolving upon the troops at the Western posts; and he has introduced a bill to increase the number that may be enlisted in the army to 3,000.

The first session of the joint commission on the Behring Sea question, which was called for yesterday, was postponed until to-morrow. This commission, composed of representatives of Great Britain and the United States, must prepare and agree upon a treaty before the arbitrators can be appointed. It is expected that it will require several weeks for the commission to complete its work. They are to hold their meetings in the State Department building.

The Canadian reciprocity commissioners, Sir John Thompson, Hon. George E. Foster and Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, have arrived here. No one seems to know upon what basis they will ask to open negotiations, but the impression exists that they will accomplish nothing in the way of commercial reciprocity between Canada and the United States by their visit.

Instead of abolishing the "post canteen" at army posts, as thousands of temperance people have by petition asked, Secretary Elkins has issued an order changing the name to "post exchange." The secretary thought the name "canteen" entirely too suggestive. It would have been well had he thought at the same time that the sale of intoxicating liquors to the soldiers was entirely too injurious, and prohibited it in the same order that changed the name of the place in which it is sold.

The House of Representatives has adopted a resolution authorizing the Committee on Appropriations to investigate the expenditures of the World's Fair Commission, and to report to Congress whether it has been extravagant in its management.

The House Committee on Banking and Currency has favorably reported a bill to promote the safety of National banks by prohibiting the loaning of money to employes or officers of the bank, except when authorized by the vote of a majority of the board of directors. The House has adopted a resolution for the investigation of the National bank failures at Philadelphia and Boston.

Miss Clara Barton and ex-Gov. Hoyt, of Wyoming, are to address a meeting of the Woman's National Press Association, this evening, on the necessity of arousing public sentiment in favor of sending aid to the starving Russians. Miss Barton is trying to raise by private subscription enough money to charter vessels to carry the grain which has been contributed in the United States to Russia.

Again, the bill against that seductive form of gambling known as dealing in "options" and "futures" on grain is exciting much interest, and the House Committee on Agriculture, before which the bill now is, has been giving hearings to both sides. The bill would have been passed by the last Congress if it could have been got to a vote, but those who opposed it succeeded, by methods of which the least said the better, in killing it by delay.

The oldest Methodist church in Washington celebrated its ninetieth anniversary last Sunday.

This week a series of Gospel meetings under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is being held here. The attendance is large, and the interest great.

Special services in memory of the great English preacher, Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, were held in several of our churches on Sunday. At one of them Indian Commissioner Morgan and ex-Minister to Spain Rev. J. L. M. Curry, made feeling addresses, and at another Rev. F. D. Power preached an interesting memorial sermon. Thus the work of a truly good man is felt around the whole world, and his death is a loss, not only to the denomination of which he was a member, but to Christianity at large.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster was the principal speaker at a mammoth temperance meeting, held Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the non-partisan W. C. T. U. A resolution was unanimously adopted requesting Congress not to repeal the law prohibiting the sale of liquor within one mile of the Soldiers' Home.

REFORM NEWS.

REV. H. H. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

From Baraboo, Wis., a livery team took me thirteen miles over the hills and through forests, where deep snowdrifts nearly upset our carriage and stopped our progress. But at last we reached the Scotch settlement in Caledonia, where I was most kindly received and entertained by one of the elders of the United Presbyterian church. I preached here on Lord's day morning to a good congregation, notwithstanding the badness of the going and the weather, and, at night, attended the meeting of the Society of Christian Endeavor, which is well sustained.

Monday night was very dark and rainy; nevertheless, there was a fair audience to hear my lecture on the secret lodge system. All were attentive, and nearly all were in sympathy. There is, also, in this township a Free Methodist church that opposes the lodge.

This place lies on the south side of the broad Wisconsin river valley, eight miles from Portage. The intervening country is largely marsh, and much is not very productive. Nevertheless, these Scotch people are liberal in their giving. I received a more generous contribution here than elsewhere in the State.

From Portage I went to Rio, where I gave my first anti-secrecy lecture, eighteen years ago last fall. I found warm friends and generous hospitality, but no opening for a lecture.

From Rio I went to Poynette, twelve miles south of Portage. Here I found the Poynette Scientific and Biblical Academy, a flourishing institution, under the care of Prof. Robb. Its distinguishing feature is that it lays great stress on doctrinal instruction. The Bible, as interpreted by the Westminster Confession, is the standard.

No modification, toning down, or "higher criticism," for them. They receive Presbyterianism as it was, only modified a little by premillennialism. I was greatly interested in the young men, several of whom are beginning to preach. I was invited to address them on the lodge question, and spoke forty minutes. I felt confident that a good impression was made. At night I gave a lecture on Africa and its missions, in the Presbyterian church, to a quite full congregation.

A call on the M. E. minister was received very kindly. He had belonged to several orders, including the Masons, but did not attend any. He was aware that Masons and Odd-fellows often made their lodge systems their religion, but he did not see the way open to oppose them.

The Presbyterian pastor had never joined or approved of any of the orders. It was to him I owed the opportunity of speaking to the students.

From Poynette I went to Arlington, a railroad station, where there are two saloons, but no house of worship, nor any organized religious society. It is in the midst of one of the finest prairies I have seen in Wisconsin. Outside of the village, the people seem intelligent, religious and fairly prosperous. Indeed, I have seen nowhere else in the State such fine farm-houses and such beautiful surroundings.

A ride of two and a-half miles brought me to the house of Mr. Andrew Mair, an elder in the United Presbyterian church, where I have found a most pleasant and hospitable home. They have a fine house of worship, and recently called Rev. J. B. Galloway to be their pastor. I preached twice for them on the 7th of February, and had good congregations of attentive hearers. I was especially pleased with the large number of young people in the congregation, who are organized in a Young People's Society. I lectured on Monday night (the 8th), to a full house, with the best of attention, and received a generous contribution. Truly the Lord has some faithful witnesses in Wisconsin.

H. H. HINMAN.

REV. WM. FENTON IN MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 6, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On last Monday evening, the 1st inst., the students of the Augsburg Seminary, of Minneapolis, about 300, assembled in the Seminary chapel to hear a lecture on "Secret Lodge Worship." As those who have the love of God, no doubt, they rejoiced in the truth about the secret lodge demon worship that was exposed. But how different with some other seminaries! For instance, the Baptist Union Theological Seminary of Morgan Park, Illinois. Will they allow the same truth to be uttered in their chapel? My past experience with that seminary would prompt me to reply, no. And witness, if you please, the action of the First Baptist church of this city. Its pastor, Rev. Mr. Buttrick, has embraced Blue Lodge Masonry, and he declared to his church that the mention that was made of Masonry—a simple statement of a Masonic oath and penalty, with a question proposed to him in public in regard to the truth of the statement—was an insult to him, and such an insult that if allowed to be repeated he should leave that church. The Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Tallmadge, agreeing with his pastor, offered a resolution to protect him from future insult. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Drake, and Mr. D. D. Merrill spoke in its favor. The pastor called for the vote of the church, which adopted the resolution and so retained its pastor. The resolution is to the effect that no member of that church, and no visitor to that church, shall ever say anything about Masonry in any of their meetings.

A former pastor of that church declared from its pulpit that: "The voice of the church is the voice of God," which in matters of discipline, with Christ in the church, according to his promise recorded in Matthew 18: 15-18, is undoubtedly true. But to charge such a resolution as that before us upon God as being his voice is to insult Christ and disgrace a church that can pass such a resolution. According to common law, "it is a crime to conceal a crime." The Bible offers no salvation without confession of sin. But here is a society calling itself a church that makes it a crime to expose a crime, and that crime the crime of its pastor; he, as a Freemason, having sworn to have his throat cut if he ever fails to conceal the lying abominations of Masonry; for he has said that he has taken the Masonic obligations; and everybody may know that the lodge work of Masonry is a lying abomination. Does not the action of this society, calling itself a Baptist church, suggest the admonition to beware of committing the sin that is in "danger of eternal damnation?" True mental science agrees with the Word of God that there can be no forgiveness while sin lies concealed in the soul. That resolution makes the church two-fold more the child of Masonry than Mr. Buttrick, its pastor. For the two precious jewels of secret societies are "silence and secrecy." That resolution preserves them both, while Buttrick lost the first—silence. A deacon of that church, who is a Freemason, says: "Buttrick got his foot in it by taking notice of the question; he ought to have passed it by in silence." The deacon is ordinarily a brighter Mason than his pastor; he is an adept in "silence."

February 10.—Last evening the Y. M. C. A. of this city elected D. D. Merrill, the man who spoke in favor of the above mentioned resolution, for their president. The retiring president is a Freemason.

February 11.—Last Monday evening, the 8th inst., the First Swedish Mission House of this city was opened for a testimony against the lodge, and the truth had a fair hearing by a large audience. The pastor, Rev. S. W. Sundburg, was pleased with the presentation of the truth that exposed the spiritual scoundrelism of the lodge. And he expressed surprise when informed that such truth would not be suffered to be spoken in the majority of the Protestant churches—their pastors being "blind leaders."

Last evening, the 10th inst., I spoke in the Swedish Baptist church. After the lecture, the pastor, Rev. O. P. Peterson, addressed his flock in their own language, in a very earnest manner. And the people manifested their appreciation of the truth about the dark and infamous spirituality of the lodges.

W. FENTON.

ECHOES OF THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

The State Convention at Binghamton has been so fully reported that I need add nothing more than a brief note of indorsement. Beginning in a storm of sleet and snow, it was succeeded by a faultless day. Beginning in humility, with a majority of vacant seats, it closed in triumph, with a full house.

Meeting my "first born" at the depot, at 9 p. m., on Saturday, I was soon comfortably housed and canvassing the situation. Much and effective work had been done, as the sequel showed, and I may perhaps be pardoned for indulging a fatherly pride in the wisdom, energy and ability with which the uninviting fallow-ground had been broken for the sowing.

The school for Bible study, at 9:30 A. M., in the Free Methodist house of worship, followed by a radical Gospel sermon from the pious and gifted pastor, Bro. O. M. Owen, and an hour in class leading by the amiable and sweet-spirited wife of the pastor, were a fitting and helpful prelude to succeeding services.

At 4 o'clock P. M. we gathered, with a goodly company of the saved and the unsaved, in the W. C. T. U. Hall, for a gospel temperance meeting. Preliminary exercises were simple and spiritual, when the topic specially advertised was taken up and ably discussed by one of the Baptist pastors of the city, who enumerated some of the causes which had occasioned the terrible Sabbath desecration so much deplored by all good people. Opportunity was then given for testimonies, and a number of clergymen present spoke freely and forcibly of the danger and its remedy. Your Washington agent called attention to the desecration of the Sabbath at a Masonic funeral of re-

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE UNMENTIONABLE LODGE.

AUBURN, Cal., February, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The late Republican banquet in your city serves us for a lesson. The magnificent Auditorium Hotel was opened to the entertainers and their guests. It was an important occasion, a President-making affair. The report filled the morning papers by the page. General Alger, Michigan's "favorite son," ambitious and wealthy, was a prominent name in the list of banqueters. He is thirsting to drink for a term or two at the Presidential fountain. Two hundred and fifty were counted at the glittering feast. But they were all men. The ladies meekly participated as spectators, fenced in behind a screen. After "cigars had been lighted," the after-dinner speeches began, and the quartette sang "Annie Laurie" for the benefit of the people behind the screen.

Miss F. E. Willard, who is taking Miss West's labor as editor of the Union Signal, during the six months' vacation of the latter in California, uses this party incident to draw, though not unkindly, a sharp contrast between the management of the Republican and Prohibition parties. The late banquet of the latter at the Sherman House, and its State and National conventions, where wives sat with grace and honor beside their husbands, is the beginning of the new era in the political life of our nation.

"Meanwhile," says the Signal of our American women—none are nobler—"at Republican banquets they sit 'behind the screen' in the gallery, inhaling the tobacco smoke of their lords, and at Democratic banquets they are not present at all. We have not a harsh thought of our brothers who exclude women that they may include cigars. They are 'in their conditions,' that is all. But we of the new world cannot but smile in contemplation of these fading glories of a world that hastens to be gone. Buoyant with the sturdier life of the society and politics that have banished alcoholics and tobacco, those two great separatists between women and men, we can but bewail the condition of those fume-bewildered ladies 'behind the gallery screen.'"

True as it is that the sinful indulgence in liquor and tobacco breaks the dearest and strongest ties that bind our race, by the same reasoning we may prove the lodge a most subtle and powerful co-agent. The lodge, liquor and tobacco are the three legs of the devil's Gatling machine always aimed at the citadel of the God-ordained family, splitting its united head with dark secret oaths, as well as smiting the man with the blight of inebriacy and all its train of hereditary evils. It may be safely said, as well, that but for the secret lodges and the convivial habits they beget, and the contamination of their ill-assorted "brotherhoods," the alcoholic and narcotic slaughter would mightily abate. Let us put the lodge in its place in the catalogue of human pests: κ.

ARE WE A CHRISTIAN GOVERNMENT?

BLANCHARD, Ia., Feb. 5, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In your issue of Feb. 4th, Bro. H. H. Hinman is, I think, in serious error when he says: "That our Constitution and general government are based on Christianity;" and when he says: "If our Constitution had contained an express repudiation of Christianity, or if it had required an assent to any other religion, it would be our duty to reject it; but it contains no such repudiation, nor anything incompatible with our being a Christian nation."

By a simple comparison of the Constitution with some plain Bible statements, it will, I think, be evident to any candid mind that the Constitution expressly repudiates some of the fundamental principles of Bible Christianity. One of those principles is, that government is ordained of God; see Romans 13: 1: "For there is no power (or authority), but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God." This is repudiated in the preamble of the Constitution when it says: "We, the people of the United States," without a single reference to God, "do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America." The form of oath prescribed for the President in the Constitution, Art. 2, contains no reference to God, and this is in conflict with the Bible requirement: "Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God and serve him, and shalt swear by his name." See Deut. 6: 13. Again, in Art. 6, the Constitution declares itself to be the supreme law of the land, and this without any reference to God's law, which must necessarily take a lower place, because there cannot be two supremes. This brings the Constitution in collision with the Bible, which every true Christian is bound to take as his supreme rule. Again, the Constitution is in conflict with the Bible when it declares, in Art. 6, "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States." The Bible says, Ex. 18: 21: "Moreover, thou shalt provide, out of all the people, able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness, and place such over them to be rulers," etc. Again, the Bible says, 2 Sam. 23: 3: "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." Would it not be a religious test to require of a President, or a candidate for Congress, that he must rule in the fear of God? Again, the Constitution, in the First Amendment, forbids Congress from prohibiting the free exercise of religion, and this without a word to distinguish false from true religion. This certainly brings the Constitution in conflict with the example of the righteous kings of Israel, who prohibited the false religion of Baal. It is in conflict with what the Cynosure asks our government to do, to prohibit the oaths of Masonry; for who will deny that Masonry is a religion? What is the difference between the Masonic oath and the oath to the United States Constitution? It is true, they differ in their penalties, and one is a secret obligation, and the other is open. But both swear their candidates to supreme allegiance to a system that ignores Christ and his law, and substitutes another supreme. To my mind, it is great inconsistency to oppose Christ-rejecting lodges, and accept of Christ-rejecting constitutions, when we are sworn supreme allegiance to the one as much as to the other. Bro. Hinman's argument, that so many of the people are members of Christian churches, reminds us of the "good man" argument in reference to the lodges. He is seriously in error again when he says: "There was not a word in the Constitution that by necessary or rightful interpretation meant slavery." Abraham Lincoln, who came through the fires of the anti-slavery conflict, is the most reliable witness on this point. In his first inaugural address, he said: "There is much controversy about the delivering up of fugitives from service or labor. The clause I now read is as plainly written in the Constitution as any other of its provisions." He then read in Art. 4, Sec. 2: "No person held to service or labor in one State under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered upon claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due." Mr. Lincoln then added: "It is scarcely questioned that this provision was intended by those who made it for the reclaiming of what we call fugitive slaves; and the intention of the law-giver is the law." Mr. Lincoln then declared his determination to carry out this provision of the Constitution, and that he took the oath without mental reservation. I have always admired the consistency of Garrison and Phillips in refusing to vote under the Constitution until slavery was blotted out of it by the Thirteenth Amendment. As long as history is written, their names will stand out as the heroes and leaders of the anti-slavery reform.

M. A. GAULT.

"THE RESPONSIBILITY OF NATIONS."

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 30, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A meeting was held in the United Presbyterian church of Boston, Rev. John Hood, pastor, in the interests of National Reform. By previous arrangement, your correspondent spoke on "The Responsibility of Nations." The fact that God holds nations accountable for their character and conduct should give us pause, when we think of the moral desolation that is being made by the liquor traffic; the secularization of the Lord's day by the railroads and postal service; the Sunday newspaper, which has invaded the home and the sanctuary; the wrecking of 328,000 homes by sneedy and easy divorce in the past twenty years; the octopus of the Louisiana lottery, which threatens that State with suicide and the nation with humiliation and shame; the hundreds of thousands of secret orders which absorb the time and money which rightfully belongs to the church and the home, and administer oaths which dishonor God and blight the souls of the members, and the political corruption which is becoming a stench in the nostrils of Christian citizens—we cannot help repeating the threat of God against backsliding Israel: "Shall not my soul be avenged upon such a nation as this?" God judicially abandoned Israel. In the time of Christ they were so wicked that the prophet exclaims: "Who can describe this generation?" John calls them "a generation of vipers." Our Lord calls them emphatically "this wicked generation." Paul says, "they pleased not God, and were contrary to all men." Josephus, their own historian, says: "I cannot say it without regret, yet I must declare it is my opinion, that if the Romans had delayed to come against these wretches, the city would have been swallowed up by an earthquake, or overwhelmed by a deluge, or else been consumed by fire from heaven as Sodom was; for it bore a generation of men more wicked than those which suffered such things." "To reckon up all their villainies is impossible; and, in a word, never did any city suffer so great calamities, nor was there ever, from the beginning of the world, a generation more prolific in wickedness." Privileges unimproved produce judicial blindness. Judicial blindness leads to immorality. That is the road our nation is traveling. May God save us!

J. M. FOSTER.

LITERATURE.

SOCIETY OF LOYAL VOLUNTEERS: Its Founders and Organizers; Military and Naval Records; Prospectus and Constitution. Pamphlet. 8 vo. pp. 40. Washington, D. C., 1892.

The subject of this pamphlet is so important to the American people that the objects of the society by which it is published will surely interest many readers in its behalf.

The Society of Loyal Volunteers declares that impairment of ability to earn a support by manual labor is a false basis for pensions. The Society demands a revision of the pension laws on the basis of impairment of earning capacity, without regard to the method in which a support may be earned, and that no man shall be allowed to draw a pension when not in need, or if he is earning a comfortable living in any public or private capacity. For those who cannot earn a respectable living in any public or private occupation that may be found for them, the Society demands an abundant support. Such a pension law cannot fail to meet with the approval of every honest citizen when he fully understands its meaning and effect.

The first work of the Society will be to ascertain by a personal canvass how many Loyal Volunteers of 1861-1865 approve of the objects of the Society. It is confidently believed that a majority of all such volunteers of good military or civil record will become members of the Society when they have heard an intelligent explanation of its principles, although many of them are drawing pensions which will be cancelled if the basis for pensions advocated becomes a law. That this hope is well-founded needs no further proof than the fact that the movement was originated and is being developed by just that class of men.

An enormous burden is being fixed upon the taxpayers of this country to pay pensions to persons who are not in need, or are as perfectly able to earn as good a living now as they ever did. The Pension Office is now issuing certificates at the rate of 30,000 per month. The law allows pension attorneys to collect $10 for each claim they can obtain. In this way the Government is hiring men to do all they can to increase taxation. This $10 is deducted from the first payment on the pension. The average annual value of these pensions is $131.99, as reported by the Commissioner of Pensions, for the year ending June 30, 1891. At this rate the expenses of taxpayers for pensions payments is being increased by $3,959,700 per month, or $47,516,400 per annum. For their work in getting claims to create this enormous burden, pension attorneys are authorized to take $300,000 per month, or $3,600,000 per year, out of the money appropriated for pensions. The amount paid to pension attorneys for fees, for the year ending June 30, 1891, was $2,769,200.70.

The Loyal Volunteers cannot tax the people for the expenses of a canvass to ascertain how many soldiers of good record are rightly represented by this disgraceful looting of the treasury of the nation they fought to defend. Their success means to them a personal loss of what they might legally enjoy. A movement like this, inspired by the purest loyalty and patriotism, based on honor, honesty, and justice, the people of this country cannot afford to allow to be hindered for want of funds. An ample fund should be raised at once by popular subscription to enable the Society to make an actual canvass of all soldiers of good record at the earliest possible date, so that its result may be laid before Congress early in the session. The spontaneous raising of such a fund will have a moral effect—of greater value than the fund itself—in causing those who enact laws to understand that pension legislation must be based on honesty, honor, and justice.

The address of the treasurer of the Society is, Harrison Diugman, Washington, D. C. Persons wishing copies of the publications of the Society can obtain them, without charge, by addressing Geo. A. Priest, Secretary, Washington, D. C.

The Review of Reviews is more than usually American in the topics discussed at length in the current number. Beginning with the church, under the general title, "The Laymen's Movement," there are presented a powerful protest against sectarianism, and various plans for the mitigation of its evils and the overthrow of its power. This power is understood by some to be somehow connected with the so-called "clergy" who are in too broad a sense a class by themselves. A "Brotherhood of Christian Unity" is a society advocated by Theodore F. Seward, the well-known musician and composer. "Denominationalism on the Frontier" is a very emphatic protest by R. B. Hassel of S. Dakota. President Hyde of Bowdoin College writes of the recent movement for denominational co-operation in Maine and New England; and Mr. W. T. Stead, the English editor of the Review, is represented by an address recently made at Newcastle, entitled "The Next Step toward the Civic Church." In politics we have a double view of the most prominent candidate for the Democratic nomination at the convention in Chicago next June. David B. Hill, who is thus set forth by the pen of friend and foe, is one of the men to be most dreaded by every true American. His career in New York is a public comment on the shrewd, selfish, ambitious, domineering, unscrupulous character shown by his portraits. The famine in Russia, and what we are doing in America to relieve it, is a theme of universal interest. Of equal value are the current comments with numerous portraits, while the whole world of magazine literature is reproduced as if by photograph for our convenient study. The Review of Reviews is as notable in its management as it was remarkable in its conception.

American Gardening for February presents the following illustrated articles: Horticulture at the World's Fair; A Winter Window; Trenching in a Garden; Transplanting Large Trees; The Gift of Tongues in Trees; Taste and Tact in Arranging Grounds; A Rock Garden; The Evening Primrose; Picea Pungens; Passiflora Edulis; Ornamental and Practical Gardening; Variegated Oleasters; A Mailing Case; Japan Pears Fruiting in Iowa; An Iris Garden; A Hand-weeder; Home-Made Garden Roller; Economic Plants of Japan; The Persimmon; New Conservatories at Lincoln Park, Chicago; Coconut Growing in Florida; A Cellar-way Plant Pit; The White Comet Aster; Staking Roses. Quite as important are a large number of seasonable papers for the instruction and guidance of florists, horticulturists and gardeners. The amount and variety of this class of literature in this excellent magazine is remarkable. The Rural Publishing Company, Times Building, New York City.

The Arena (Boston, Mass.) for February opens with a full-page portrait and biographical sketch of Herbert Spencer, by Wm. H. Hudson. The other contents are as follows: Danger Ahead—a plea for the election of government officers and representatives by general ticket, with the right of cumulation,—otherwise known as "minority representation"—by Robert S. Taylor; The Railroad Problem, by Hon. Lionel A. Sheldon; The Solidarity of the Race, by Henry Wood; Hypnotism and its Relation to Psychical Research, by B. O. Flower; Inspiration and Heresy, by P. Cameron, B. C. L.; The Sub-Treasury Plan, by C. C. Post; The Atonement, by Rev. Burt E. Howard; The Last American Monarch, by James Realf, Jr.; A Spoil of Office, continued, by Hamlin Garland. $5 per annum.

The Cup Bearer is a new illustrated monthly magazine for young people, edited by Helen VanAnderson, assisted by a corps of talented writers. It is the only magazine of the kind, and is an improvement upon the usual juvenile literature. Its stories, poems, are bright and inspiring. Has a Kindergarten department, and reviews good books. Every family should read the Cup Bearer and see how delightful, interesting and profitable children's literature may be. Just what parents want, and children need. $1.00 for a year. Address New Era Publishing Co., 358 Burling St., Chicago.

Vick's Illustrated Monthly Magazine, which boasts a circulation of 250,000 copies of each issue, in its February number assumes more of a general literary character than formerly, opening with an English prize story—The Parchment Roll, by Mrs. Geoffrey Graham. Flags for Schools; Sanitary Precautions, and a host of suggestive and instructive brief papers on various horticultural and floral topics, make up an interesting number. The illustrations are numerous, timely and attractive. Rochester, N. Y.: Vick Publishing Co.; 50 cents per annum.

OBITUARY.

REV. WILLIAM G. KEIL died at his home near Senecaville, Ohio, on the 18th day of January, 1892, in the 93d year of his age. He was born in Strausburg, Va., on the 7th day of August, 1799, and came to Ohio about 65 years ago. For nearly that length of time he was a citizen of the community where he died. He was a regular minister of the Evangelical Lutheran church for the space of seventy years, or thereabout, having entered the ministry before leaving the State of his birth. He labored in the active work of the Gospel until the infirmities of age came on and ended his active labors. For many years he was the pastor of the various Lutheran churches in this section of the country, and labored hard for their upbuilding, having been the organizer of several different ones.

He was a married man nearly sixty years, and leaves behind him the companion of those years, who keenly feels her loss by his death, and four grown children, located in three different States, together with several grandchildren.

He was a pronounced and positive man in his convictions touching moral issues, and had the courage to speak out plainly against what he believed to be wrong in the sight of God and his law.

He was an open and avowed enemy of the saloon, the secret lodge, and tobacco-using in all its forms. He was not careful to conceal his convictions on either of these questions, but denounced these evils most freely and plainly. It was no trouble to tell which side Father Keil was on. He had the honesty to embrace the truth and the courage to tell it.

He imbibed sentiments of enmity against the lodge system in early life, while yet in his native State, to which he adhered strictly until the day of his death, being satisfied of its enmity to the principles of our holy religion and the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Christian Cynosure was esteemed by him very highly, and was eagerly read as long as he could do so, which was well toward life's close. He informed me that he had taken it regularly from the time of its establishment. So intense were his feelings on this question that he did not wish a Mason to have charge of funeral services over his body when he was gone. This request was strictly complied with on the occasion.

The funeral took place on the second day after his death, from his private residence, at which we tried to speak words of admonition and comfort to the friends and others who were present; after which his body was carefully laid away in the Senecaville cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just. Peace to his memory, and blessings on the friends.

(Rev.) EVANS THOMPSON.

MR. GEO. BROKAW

died at his home in Washington, Ia., January 3, 1892, after a brief illness. He was born Jan. 1, 1811, in West Alexander, Pa.; removed to Ohio when quite young. In 1841 he removed from Harrison county, O., to Washington, Iowa, where he has since lived. In early life he connected with the Presbyterian church, and in 1849 he connected by certificate with the Associate Presbyterian congregation of Washington, Ia. He continued faithful to all the distinctive principles of his church to the day of his death. Soon after he came to Washington he was elected justice of the peace, and later served as county recorder, and for many years was a leading dry goods merchant here. He was a zealous anti-slavery man, when it was unpopular to be so. Also, he was an uncompromising opposer of all secret fraternities as inconsistent with Christianity. He was a protester against the unauthorized introduction of instrumental music in the worship of God in the United Presbyterian church, contending that God should only be worshiped in ways and by means of his own appointment. He was an active worker in and liberal supporter of the church and all the reforms of the day.

His family—two daughters, children of his first wife, and his present wife—survive him. His wife has been an invalid

The old saying that "consumption can be cured if taken in time" was poor comfort. It seemed to invite a trial, but to anticipate failure. The other one, not so old, "consumption can be cured," is considered by many false.

Both are true and not true; the first is prudent—one cannot begin too early.

The means is careful living. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is sometimes an important part of that.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING—free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

33

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. Madison St., Chicag

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge. terms and usual. 25cts each.

for several years, and is left to mourn the loss and care of a tender-hearted husband. At his death he leaves to the church, the community and the world an example of faithfulness to his religious profession; of integrity, honesty and uprightness in all business matters. He was kind, benevolent, charitable and liberal in all the walks of life—an example of life worthy of imitation.

J. DAWSON.

To the question, Which is your favorite poem? there may be a great variety of answers; but when asked, Which is your favorite blood-purifier? there can be only one reply—Ayer's Sarsaparilla, because it is the purest, safest, and most economical.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 10. A Pastor's Confession.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

AND COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK 1884,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter) AND OFFICE OF

The Christian Cynosure, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republic from government by corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATION

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. J. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Plunkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Counterterm, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paul, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. V. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Row, Gifford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfar, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Paris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $0.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Sold in any quantity at

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1892.

TO AID THE STARVING RUSSIANS.

A circular letter to the clergy of America has been issued from the office of the Russian Famine Relief Committee of the United States, 732 Fourteenth street, Washington, D. C., in behalf of "the millions of Russian peasants now suffering the horrors of starvation, aggravated by fierce cold and famine fever," and entreating the clergymen of this country to give the matter their "immediate and earnest co-operation."

The victims of the famine in Russia is stated at "some twenty millions," and their condition "demands that effort for their relief shall be instant, energetic, liberal, and universal." "The one pressing demand of the hour is for money to pay the cost of ocean transportation, and for the purchase of further supplies" for the sufferers. "Grain in large amounts is gladly offered by the farmers of the West; railway corporations are ready to carry it without charge to the seaboard, and Russian railways... are waiting to do the work of distribution without distinction of race or creed."

"The authorities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia are moving, but there is need of help from all who can give." The churches are especially appealed to to interest themselves in the work; to encourage public meetings and the establishment of canvassing committees for systematic work, and continue their labors in this cause until the necessity which demands them has passed.

Money contributions may be addressed to Clara Barton, or to Riggs & Co., bankers, all of Washington, D. C. What is done should be done at once.

The circular is signed by John W. Hoyt, chairman of the Russian Famine Relief Committee of the United States, in behalf of Levi P. Morton, Vice President of the United States; Hon. Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice of the United States; Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore; Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the World's and National W. C. T. U.; Hon. John Sherman, U. S. Senator, Ohio; Bishop John F. Hurst, of the M. E. church, Washington; Bishop Talbot, P. E., of Wyoming and Idaho; Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. Wayland, Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. Wm. Alvin Bartlett, Washington, and many others who are interested in this charitable work.

THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATIONS AND THE ANTI-SECRECY REFORM.

The relation of the professing Christian churches to this reform is widely different. It is at least five-fold in its moral aspect.

First, there is that great body of ministers and churches that wholly ignore this question, and regard it as purely irrelevant and an element of discord, to be carefully avoided. This view results from ignorance—often, willing ignorance—of the nature and magnitude of this question. It also results from the underlying rule, that denominational peace and growth must be the primary consideration.

Second, there is a large number of inexperienced ministers who profess great liberality, and are in favor of an ample discussion of this and many other questions, but who do not propose to take any positive position. This course would, at first, seem easy to maintain, but is, in fact, exceedingly difficult. The secret lodge system does not court investigation. It does not ask to come before the church and to be allowed to defend itself on Christian principles. It simply asks to be let alone. It regards all discussion of its character and influence as an impertinence that is not to be tolerated; and hence all those religious teachers who profess liberality have to take sides either against the lodge system, or against all discussion of its character.

Third, there is a class of ministers and churches that have a general testimony against secret societies, yet do not make membership in such societies a bar to membership in the church. This, too, is regarded as liberal. But it usually happens that such testimony becomes wholly inoperative and void. Any opinion, however tenaciously held by a portion of the members of any church that is not considered in the reception of members, will soon cease to have any influence over the body as a whole; and any church that receives to its membership the members of the lodges will soon come under their control.

Fourth, there is a class of ministers and churches that seek to discriminate between the different kinds of secret societies—excluding some and admitting others. This course would, at first view, seem to have much to commend it. Surely, there is a difference between the various orders which is just as real as the difference between lager-beer and whisky, or between stealing and murder. The man who drinks the milder fluid, or who commits the lesser crime, does not so great a wrong against society as the one who repudiates all restraint. But it is found practically impossible to tolerate the one kind of evil and prohibit the other. In principle they are alike. The toleration of one implies the toleration of all. The Wesleyan Methodists commenced by excluding Freemasons and Odd-fellows. They found, ere long, that they could not maintain their law without making it apply to all secret societies, and so they amended it. The United Brethren began with a rule excluding all secret orders, but a majority desired to admit the minor lodges. The result was a division, and a toleration, by the majority, of the very orders which they had proved to be un-Christian. The position is wholly untenable.

The fifth position is, that of non-fellowship with all members of all secret lodges. It is easy to see why such a position should not be popular, and why some should regard it as harsh and sectarian. They so regarded the churches that said their members must not hold slaves. There was a great outcry against such churches. So there was against those who first declared that they would not tolerate the use of intoxicating drinks. But it was the only course which was effective as a remedy for either slavery or intemperance as they stood related to the church. The truth is, these are not simply questions of opinion; they are questions of morals. On such questions the Christian church has no right to be indifferent, or to take any other position than that of prohibition of the evil. Ere long the Christian world will indicate the course of those who take the only tenable ground on this question.

INDIAN EDUCATION—AN APPEAL.

Mr. Herbert Welsh, corresponding secretary of the Indian Rights Association, 1305 Arch street, Philadelphia, forcibly appeals to the citizens of the union to exercise prompt and energetic action in behalf of the cause of Indian education. He believes an effort will be made in Congress, during the present session, to reduce by two millions of dollars the government appropriation for the education of these wards of the nation.

"Such a policy," he says, "while taking the color of economy, is in reality dangerous extravagance. Indian education means extinction of the Indian as a savage, and his re-birth as a self-supporting man. It is the cheapest as well as the only humane and honest solution of the problem."

Enemies of the Indian assert that "they propose to cut down the appropriation bill. . . . on the ground that the Indian is not worth saving, because the experiment of saving him has cost us an immense amount of money, and especially in Indian schools, which have only made all Indians worse who have gone back from the schools to the reservations." To repel this false charge, Mr. Welsh submits a flattering official record of returned Indian pupils from the Hampton, Va., Institute, to February 1, 1892:

"The record brought up to date shows that of our 336 returned Indian students now in the West, or a few of them pursuing studies or trades in the East, 79 are 'excellent,' 151 'good,' 57 'fair,' while but 39 are 'poor,' and 10 'bad.' In other words, 85 per cent are doing from fairly to exceedingly well. To the above record may be added 18 (7 girls and 11 boys) who are now members of the school for the second time, having made good records at home and come back to us at their own desire for further education. Many have done the same in the past."

The Indian Rights Association therefore appeals, as follows, "to the serious and patriotic people of this country for judgment in this grave emergency. Against their decision, when it shall have been fairly expressed, Congress will do nothing. It was by public sentiment, and by it alone, that appropriations for Indian schools have been lifted from $20,000 in 1877 to $2,291,650 in the current fiscal year. Shall this policy of education, which was created by popular demand, be sustained until every Indian child has been given a chance for self-support through mental, moral, and physical training, or shall it be abandoned and the Indian be remanded to ignorance, pauperism, and permanent dependence on public charity? We rest assured that we do not make this appeal in vain, and that the friends of education and of religion will so instruct their Senators and Representatives in Congress, both personally and through the columns of the public press (an invaluable ally heretofore), that appropriations for Indian education shall not only suffer no loss but that they shall be increased."

The importance of this subject is its best claim for earnest attention. The United States has not treated the Indian as he deserves, and it sometimes seems as if God may yet have a controversy with this nation in his behalf. We can hardly do less than to educate and Christianize them as well as feed them while they remain with us.

MASONRY DESCRIBED BY MASONS.

From a minister of the M. E. church:

"I renounced Masonry in September, 1874; was a third-degree member for three years. Reason—Was rebuked for using the name of Christ in conducting the religious service for the chaplain."

From a lawyer—a deist:

"I have taken sixteen degrees in Masonry, and wish I had my money back, as I regard it absurd."

This one believes in Masonic salvation:

"Freemasonry is a religion, and, if its rules are followed out, will lead its members to heaven; I prefer to use the words: to the Grand Lodge above."

This one's faith is misplaced:

"I believe I can go into any regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons in the United States and use the name of Christ in prayer, in harmony with Masonic usage."

The originals of the above are in this office.

—From S. W. Straub & Co., music publishers, 243 State street, Chicago, the Cynosure has received a new sacred song (solo for soprano or tenor), entitled: "O Father, Keep Us." The words are by Maria Straub; the music by S. W. Straub; price 30 cents. It will be found a welcome addition to church or home worship.

—Messrs. Henry Gaze & Sons, of New York, announce that the recent quarantine against Palestine, which was established last fall on account of an outbreak of the cholera at Damascus, has been raised, so that parties intending to go to the Holy Land can now visit it in safety. Hitherto tourists have been detained about ten days by the quarantine.

—The Canadian Government has prohibited the use of its mails for the transportation of newspapers containing advertisements of a positive, or even a comparative, degree of licentiousness. The growth of this class of literature, in both city and country periodicals, is so great that the need of a postal censorship will soon be quite as necessary in the United States as in Canada.

—A note from J. Franklin Browne, formerly a lecturer for the N. C. A., and a warm advocate of the anti-secrecy cause, who has recently been teaching in Kentucky, brings the news of the death of his little boy, born in January, and of his removal to Berea, in that State. The sympathy of his many friends among the readers of the Cynosure will be heartily extended to him and his wife in their affliction.

—It matters little what any society calls itself, or what pretensions to benevolence and charity it may make; if its designs or its obligations are evil, all the sophistry that can be expended in its defence will not commend it to the good and just. If it forswears its members to secrecy, or binds them to absolute allegiance to its authority; if it contemplates treason or antagonism to the established government of the country; if it fosters false worship; if it does not promote supreme love to God and charity towards all men, in accordance with the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; if its methods of reform and instruction are manifestly selfish and cruel, or in any way injurious to the interests of all who do not belong to it,—it should not be tolerated. It is dangerous to the state and the community.

—On a recent Sunday, at Bartlett, Ill., members of the secret orders of Modern Woodmen assembled in a room over a saloon and indulged in considerable sociality, which was intensified by the inspiration of a barrel of beer. It is also credibly reported that the members of this order, at least in the country towns of this State, comprise a low class of infidels, scoffers, drunkards and other men of doubtful character. The trail of the serpent seems to be over all the lodges.

—Rev. T. K. Tyson writes to the Voice, from Nebraska, of the inconsistency of the Good Templar order in that State, of which he is a member. He says it is "painfully evident" that not nearly all the members of the lodges are clear of the blood of the victims of high-license, and sometimes local lodges use their influence strongly against party prohibition. The general success of the prohibition movement would take from the order all its pretense of virtue, and—its vocation gone—what would its grandees do for their swelling titles and their salaries?

—Congress continues to receive petitions from all parts of the country, asking that no further appropriation be made to the World's Fair except upon the condition that its gates shall be closed on the Sabbath. There is more unanimity among Christian people upon this subject than was at first apparent, and so great is the pressure upon Congress in this direction that it will probably have a good effect in determining the Sunday-closing question. It is too soon, however, to relinquish any efforts to accomplish the desired object. Petitions should continue to flow into Congress, and there should be no abatement of interest exhibited until a conclusion is reached and the bill passed with a Sunday-closing proviso incorporated.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

cent date in Binghamton. Extra trains, from neighboring cities, brought crowds of "fraters" and irreverent "gazers," who formed in line and, headed by a brass band, paraded the streets for hours, and then thronged the hotels and restaurants until they were literally "eaten out" and their "choice brands in stock" materially reduced. One car brought, among its motley piebald crew, two saloon-keepers and a minister of Christ—or the devil—which?

This home thrust and scathing arraignment of Masonic diabolism over the corpse of one of its members who died by his own hand, was well received, and even indorsed by hearty amens.

Mrs. Brigg, and the noble women gathered about their president, have great grace and the courage of their convictions, and are doing a grand work on all lines of reform, and to them our cause is greatly indebted for sympathy and co-operation in the convention.

The disciples of Christ in Binghamton ecclesiastically know that Free Methodists are a very spiritual people, and with them we enjoyed a time of refreshing in the evening.

Monday A. M. I spoke briefly at the ministers' meeting, giving them some account of our work, especially in New England, and invited them to the convention. If any of the brethren accepted this invitation I failed to note their presence in the audience.

At the close of the convention proper, a desire was expressed for "further light," and a meeting was arranged for 2 o'clock P. M., on the 4th. A goodly number of "choice spirits" came in, and I gave an hour and a-half on what in our New England work we would call a "parlor talk." This was followed by a meeting of about forty-five or fifty children, upon whose minds I endeavored to impress some useful instruction.

Even after the protracted strain on people and speaker, we met a fair audience in the sanctuary where our Free Brethren in Christ worship, last evening, closing services with the doxology and many hearty hand-shakes.

I may be indulged in a word of thanksgiving to Bro. Owen and family, and to Bro. Woodruff and household for personal favors, while saying of Bro. Moorey, Sister Potter and each and every one of the brothers and sisters, "They did what they could." J. P. STODDARD.

LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE CONVENTION.

YORK, Pa., Jan. 29, 1892.

FRIEND STODDARD:—I wish you all success at the Binghamton Convention. The enclosed is

AN OPEN LETTER, which I desire you to read to the convention, or to induce some one to do so.

I regret that I cannot attend the convention, and I hope to see a good report of it.

Yours, etc., EDWARD J. CHALFANT.

THE OPEN LETTER.

YORK, Pa., Jan. 28, 1892.

To the New York Anti-Secret Convention, Binghamton, N. Y.—

DEAR FRIENDS:—All citizens of the United States who are opposed to the secret lodge system from religious, moral, social, political, or other reasons, should hereafter have an opportunity to express their opinions and sentiments through the ballot-box, at all elections. And in order that they may be able to thus make known their principles, it will be necessary to establish and maintain a national, State and local political party, or organization.

In the past, we have designated our political organization as the American party, or as the American Anti-Secret party. But time and experience have shown us that these designations were misunderstood by the people of the United States, many supposing that we were "Know-Nothings," exclusive natives, or revolutionary schemers who were anxious to overturn things generally. So it seems to be highly important that we adopt an appropriate political designation, which cannot be misunderstood by any class of the American population; and I now suggest that we call our political organization THE CONSTITUTIONAL PARTY.

It is now a well-established fact that the secret societies which we are opposing form the Jesuitic secret empire of the United States; and that this powerful secret empire is working daily and nightly, in the most sly, cunning, and crafty manner, to subvert the Constitution of the United States, thus depriving us of all those inalienable rights which have been bequeathed to us, and which we should transmit to posterity for all time to come.

The preamble to the Constitution of the United States declares that "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America." But we can now see that the "more perfect union" was nearly overthrown by the Jesuitic rebellion of Jefferson Davis; that justice no longer exists in our courts; that indulgences (high licenses) are sold by Jesuitic Republican statesmen to Romish saloon-keepers to "insure domestic tranquillity;" that when the Rebellion was inaugurated the "common defense" was almost defenseless, the arms and ammunition having been sent South by secret society conspirators; that the "welfare" of certain classes has been promoted at the expense of the tax-burdened people of the United States; and that the "blessings of liberty" are monopolized by an oligarchy of conspirators who control the Jesuitic secret empire of the United States.

The Constitution declares that "No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States: and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state." But we now see that three-fourths of the higher office holders are Royal Arch Masons, Princes of the Royal Secret, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, or Jesuitic Knights having all the high-sounding titles of nobility to be found in the catalogue of Romish kingcraft and priestcraft.

We need not be surprised at President Harrison reviewing the Knight Templar army, at Washington, D. C.; for after discarding the Constitution, he had just as much right to do so as Jefferson Davis had to review the army of the Confederate States of America, at Richmond.

The Jesuitic conspirators of the Tammany Ring meet in secret and plunder the unsuspecting and unsophisticated tax-payers of the State of New York; but the account is balanced by the Royal Princes and High Priests of the Jesuitic Temples at Philadelphia, who plundered the Keystone Bank, the Philadelphia treasury, and the State money chest at Harrisburg.

Rum, Romanism, rebellions, rings and secret societies all depend upon the Jesuitic conspiracy for existence, aid and success. And if the secret societies—the Jesuitic schools of murder, plunder and treason are to exist and flourish, the Constitution and the Republic must perish. But a powerful party, based upon the Constitution of the United States of America, might make a forced march to the rescue, as the Sixth Corps did at Gettysburg, and arrive on the battlefield in time to prevent the complete overthrow of civil and religious liberty, the Constitution and the Republic. Yours, etc., EDWARD J. CHALFANT.

BUSHNELL'S BASIN, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1892.

DEAR BRO. STODDARD:—The Lord be with you and bless you in your God-given work! You are fulfilling this Scripture: "When the enemy comes in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against them." Our prayer is that God will direct you in this battle. "The battle is not yours; it is the Lord's;" therefore victory is sure.

We wished to come to your convention, but, not being able, we write. We want to help what we can in this very necessary work. [Money enclosed.]

We are glad to find so much written on this subject. Through the kindness of Bro. Sydney Wilder, we have the Cynosure and some tracts. We want to spread this literature all we can.

The Free Methodist church is the only one I know of that takes the right stand on this subject. God will bless them for it.

The words of Jesus Christ on this subject are the sword of the Spirit, that will destroy this work of the devil. Yours in the love of Christ, MRS. JOSEPH McCOORD.

HOUGHTON, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1892.

REV. W. B. STODDARD:—I wish to say a word to you and all the dear friends who meet in the convention in the interests of reform. I pray that the blessing of God may be with you; and that in all your deliberations his Spirit of love and wisdom may guide you. Should be glad to be with you, and participate in your deliberations were it possible. I am in hopes the convention will be a grand success. How much light is needed on this subject of darkness. The churches, especially, need stirring up in regard to it. The secret empire is at war with the religion of Jesus Christ. It is anti-Christ. I wonder how ministers of the Gospel can go into these pagan societies which reject Jesus Christ and his atonement? The god of this world hath certainly blinded their eyes.

I feel sure that good will come to the cause of Christ from this gathering.

Wishing you great success in your labors of love in the cause of our blessed Master, I am yours for Christ and his kingdom,

A. R. DODD.

Feb. 3, 1892.

To the Chairman:

DEAR SIR:—I take this opportunity, as the only one available, to express myself in reference to the secret lodge question. I was present at this morning's session, but did not wish to take time that might be used by some one more competent to discuss the question.

However, I feel that I must give this small expression of sympathy with this cause and this convention. I am not a Mason, nor have I long been of sufficient age to become one. But for several years I have had an unconscious leading against this diabolical combination. My father was a Freemason, and I believe that his connection with this order was the means of robbing him of the power that he might have had for God and the church.

I thank God that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ I have been led to a height in the Christian life from which I can look down with disgust upon and not up with reverence upon a power which I believe to be wholly of the devil. Believe me yours in sympathy,

EDWIN A. GREENE.

THE HOME.

PRAY FOR WHOM THOU LOVEST.

"Pray for whom thou lovest; thou wilt never have any comfort of his friendship for whom thou dost not pray."
 Yes, pray for whom thou lovest; thou may'st vainly, idly seek
 The fervid thought of tenderness by feeble words to speak;
 Go kneel before thy Father's throne, and meekly, humbly there
 Ask blessing for the loved one in the silent hour of prayer.
 Yes, pray for whom thou lovest; if uncounted wealth were thine—
 The treasures of the boundless deep, the riches of the mine—
 Thou couldst not to thy cherished friends a gift so dear impart,
 As the earnest benediction of a deeply loving heart.
 Seek not the worldling's friendship; it shall droop and wane ere long
 In the cold and heartless glitter of the pleasure-loving throng;
 But seek the friend who when the prayer for him shall murmured be Breathes forth in faithful sympathy a fervent prayer for thee.
 And should the flowery path of life become a path of pain,
 The friendship formed in bonds like these thy spirit shall sustain;
 Years may not chill, nor change invade, nor poverty impair
 The love that grew and flourished at the holy time of prayer.

—Selected.

THE READING OF THE WORD.

A few striking incidents have recently come to our knowledge from over the sea, of how simple reading of the New Testament, without a word of comment, has been blessed to the conversion of individuals of God's ancient people, the Jews.

A young Israelite in the Crimea, a highly cultivated man, and thoroughly instructed, in his own faith, became acquainted with several Christian families, and conceived the idea of writing a novel in which the families of the Jews and Christians should be contrasted. The better to understand the latter, he bought a New Testament, and had not long studied it before he became convinced that Jesus was the promised Messiah of his people.

In Berlin, a Hebrew artist, desiring to find new subjects for his pictures, began to search for them in the New Testament. As he read, the moral beauty of the Saviour made a deep impression upon him. The more he read the deeper was the impression, until he came to the profound conviction that Jesus was the Son of God.

Such, when once they begin to study it, is the influence of the New Testament upon those who have never known it. And yet how many of us Christians, who fancy we know it well, fail to find any decided evidence in our lives that we are gaining anything from it. We read it, but we do not grow by it. Is the reason that we are looking in it rather for doctrines, for truth, perhaps we may call it, than for Jesus Christ, who is the truth? To know him, this is life eternal.—Christian Observer.

THE SINGING COBBLER.

One fine summer's evening, while crowds of people passed through the streets of Hamburg on their way to hear the music in Altona, a shoemaker, sitting under a shade before his shop door, was busily engaged with a shoe. He rested from his work, singing one of the most beautiful psalms in old German, scarcely lifting his eyes from the sole, which occupied his whole attention, and quite indifferent to the crowd that passed before him, when a young man stopped suddenly and addressed him: "Well, my friend, you seem quite happy and contented."

The speaker was a student. His marked features, his black eyes, his high nose and his dark complexion showed that he belonged to the Hebrew race. The cobbler lifted his eyes and answered, cheerfully—

"Happy and contented I am, in truth, sir: why should I not be so?"

"I don't know; but all are not as you. Your poverty might distress you. I suppose you have only to provide for yourself?"

"You are mistaken there," he answered. "I have to feed a wife and seven children with the work of these hands. I am a poor man, it is true, but I can sing and do my work."

"I must confess," said the young man, "that I am very much surprised to see a poor fellow like you so contented with his lot."

"Stranger," said the cobbler, putting down his work and taking hold of his arm, with a serious expression, "I am not so poor as you think. I am the son of the King."

The student turned his head and went away, saying to himself, "The poor man is evidently mad. It is his madness that makes him so happy. I thought I should hear from him the secret of his happiness, but I have lost my time."

A week passed by and the student, having again occasion to pass down the same street, found the cobbler sitting in the same place, singing as cheerfully as before. The young man, in passing, lifted his cap with a sneering salutation, exclaiming, "Good morning, Mr. Prince."

"Stop, my friend," said the cobbler, putting down his work. "A word of explanation, if you please. You only left me so suddenly the other evening because you thought I was mad."

"I must say I believed it," answered the other. "Well, my friend, I am not mad. What I said I said in earnest. I am a son of the King. Would you like to hear a song on my royalty? I will just sing one."

The young man did not doubt that to accept the offer would afford him some amusement and great satisfaction to the poor man, and he therefore asked him to sing. The cobbler began to sing a hymn on this verse: "Thy kingdom come." When he finished he asked the young man if he understood it; but he seemed still to be under his old impression.

"I must, then," said the old cobbler, "explain to you in detail concerning the kingdom of Christ and the glory of the King."

He began, then, with the Divine promise made in the beginning, at the banishment from paradise, that the seed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent. He showed him this promise, increasing in light from age to age throughout the prophecies, revealing always with clearer evidence the Redeemer's kingdom. He showed him how all things which are written in the law of Moses, in the Prophets and in the Psalms about Jesus Christ have been fulfilled—how it behooved Christ to suffer these things and enter into glory—how all power in heaven and earth was committed to him, and how he actually established a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and uniting in holy fellowship Jews and Gentiles. And with eyes glistening with hope and love, he showed the young man, in language which the depth of his feelings made eloquent, how the subject of this glorious kingdom is a child of God, an heir, a joint heir with Christ, the King, and how he shall reign with him forever and ever.

"Now," said the cobbler, taking the hand of the young Jewish student who sat beside him, whose whole mind was filled with things he had heard for the first time in his life, about the old promises made to his forefathers. "Now don't you see how I could say, 'I am the son of the King,' and why I am happy and contented? It is because I believe in Jesus and love him. And it is the sacred Scriptures which tell me that all things are mine, whether life or death, of things present, or things to come, all are mine, because I am Christ's."

Then, looking the young Israelite in the face, the old Christian said:

"Believest thou the prophets? I know that thou dost; because I see by thy features that thou descendest from those who believed in the prophets. Then, my son, if you believe in the prophets, you must believe in Him about whom the prophets have spoken."

The young man listened in silence. Strange thoughts crossed his mind. At length he timidly asked this question—

"Where may I learn more of these things, because I see that you believe and that you have peace? Oh, that I might have it also! for as yet I do not possess it."

"Here," said the old man, handing him a volume of the Holy Scriptures, "this book you must read attentively at home; and whilst you battle with the enemies of your soul, I shall, as Moses on the mount, pray for you without ceasing; and you shall also ask somebody to pray for you; somebody whom you don't know yet, but who knows you, and who is greater than Moses, who is above all."

The young Jew took the book, and pressing with gratitude the old man's hand, took off his cap and saluted him with respect.

"Oh, that the Lord Jesus," said the old man, lifting his eyes toward heaven, and taking to his work again, "may also graft this one on his own olive tree!"

The story does not end here. The old shoemaker's prayer was heard.

The young Jew was converted to Christianity and has since distinguished himself by his zeal and success as a missionary amongst his own people.

There are many lessons in this story, and here is one addressed to every reader. The cobbler's joy is one everybody must find for himself. It is the sweetest thing under the sun to partake in God's work in the salvation of souls and enter into the joy of the Lord. A king cannot command this joy, and yet a beggar may find it. Riches cannot purchase it. This joy will follow us to heaven, and will be increased there by the presence of those we have been the means of leading to the better land.—Anonymous.

OCCUPATION FOR OLD PEOPLE.

When people get old, the question as to what shall be their occupations may be more important than it has been at any previous period of their lives. They may only stay out their existence, with the consciousness that they are superannuated members of society, who have fallen out of the procession which is marching along with the progress of the world and have been left behind to die, as beasts and some savage tribes of men abandon the exhausted of their members. Such old people, pitiable in their decay, may be sustained by appropriate regard, but they do not represent the true dignity of age. They are dropped behind, when they might have gone ahead. They have accounted themselves supernumeraries in society, when really they might be among its most important and useful factors, if they would only forget their age, as measured by years alone. They have put themselves on the retired list, when they are still fitted for active service. Their faculties have fallen into decay simply because they do not exercise them. No matter how young a man may be in years, he can produce for himself the same result in the same way. Physicians can report many cases wherein are manifested all the symptoms of age at the very beginning of manhood, and so also they can point out examples of physical and intellectual youth even at a period exceeding the Psalmist's limit of life. Run through history yourself, and more especially the history of our own time, and you can make out a long list of men distinguished in statesmanship, science, literature and the church, whose intellectual prowess has been displayed up to four-score years and beyond. They would not grow old; they would not allow themselves to be counted out of the world of thought and accomplishment. They remained in the competition to the last. Life was not mere animal existence for them after they had passed the limit where conventional age begins. Longevity did not bring rest, for they kept the intellectual machine bright with the friction of continued use. It only gave them time to learn more and to do more, with the advantage of a training and an experience so much prolonged. Consciousness of decay brings depression, but discovery of the ability for growth gives youthful exhilaration. Nothing is so delightful as finding out that the machine has not worn out after all, but is ready for use to good purpose even to the end. What men want in both youth and age is the recreation afforded by an interest in occupations that make them forget themselves. It prolongs their lives, for the foundation of youth is not exhausted. A variety of occupations furnishes far better recreation than the mere pursuit of pleasure for itself. Even a hobby serves the same purpose more effectually than any direct chase of the happiness—so elusive is the prize when you go hunting for it, instead of waiting for it to come to you while you are seeking only to make the best use of your life.—Charitauquan.

It is refreshing to see the enthusiastic indignation with which the better class of newspapers and the majority of the religious weeklies resent the action of the local directors in voting for the sale of alcoholic liquors on the World's Fair grounds. The so-called "prohibition cranks" are not fighting this battle alone. The alert moral sentiment of the entire country is with us.

MOSES FROM AN OLD MANSE.

The minister's wife had just finished her chores,
By calling on all the church people;
And some she'd found open as both the church doors,
And some she'd found stiff as the steeple.

For while all the deacons had slept on the wall,
A committee had come like a lion;
And by giving her husband a generous call,
Had shaken the bulwarks of Zion.

For years they had paid him who taught them the Word,
About six hundred dollars or seven;
For they felt that a preacher should "trust in the Lord,"
And grow fat on the "manna from heaven."

And so the cash question had come to annoy,
Which with so many ministers rankles;
For the Lord hath sent children: three girls and a boy,
And the boy—hollow down to his ankles.

Sister Blodgett, the wife of a "pillar," had cried,
(They supported a carriage and horses),
"Beware! lest you sin against God," she had sighed;
"A rolling stone gathers no mosses."

The preacher looked up from the book which he read,
And his merry eyes twinkled with laughter.
"Why didn't you tell Sister Blodgett," he said,
"That moss isn't what we are after?"
—Rev. Dr. Geo. T. Dowling, in the New York Independent.

TEMPERANCE.

NATIONAL INTEMPERANCE.

1. Drunkenness is our national sin and peril. Sins become national in two ways. First, by their general prevalence among the people; second by being committed or approved by the people's chosen representatives. The guilt of our nation accumulates along both lines. By the revenue and license systems the liquor traffic is made a national institution. The President has Scotch whisky shipped to him by the cask; the Vice President derives an income from a liquor-selling hotel; the Secretary of State lends his official influence to brewers and distillers to extend their infernal commerce to foreign nations; the Congress withholds its approval from the Brussels treaty, which aims to suppress the importation of intoxicants into Africa. By these and many similar facts the guilt of this awful curse is fastened upon our beloved land.

2. Our nation is sinning against light. The enormities of this business have been fully exposed. The temperance organizations, especially the W. C. T. U., the Prohibition party, the prohibitory amendment campaigns, the temperance journals, have placed the facts before the public mind, and the perpetuation of the business is the nation's deliberate choice of a known evil.

3. The nation is ripe for divine judgments. God bore with slavery as long as the people of the North were ignorant of its diabolical character. But Uncle Tom's Cabin, Helper's Crisis, the Fugitive Slave Law, John Brown's raid, and such like revealed the character of the system; and when with this knowledge, the nation, the political parties and the Christian church continued their league with the slave power, the wrath of Almighty God swept down upon our land and deluged it with blood. The guilt of the liquor traffic is greater than that of slavery. The light has been fully thrown upon it. The decision to perpetuate it has been more deliberately made and expressed by the people. And the day of its doom probably lies inside of this century. It will be a dark day for America.

4. This sin lies at the door of the church. There has been a very general protest against the fearful arraignment of the church by the New York Voice's "Four Million Christian Murderers." Nothing hurts like the truth. It is very sad that the cause of religion suffers this dishonor. But it is the sin and not the exposure of it that is dishonoring to the name of Jesus. Let those who are lifting up their hands in holy horror at this charge make sure that there are no blood stains on the hands they are holding up.

5. There is a grave responsibility on religious teachers. It is a solemn thing to reflect what a few able and influential ministers, now dead, are still doing for the perpetuation of this traffic.

"Their works do follow them." There are a few others, yet alive, whose names are being used to bolster up this system of death and damnation. May they wash their hands from this infamy before it is too late.

6. Beware of the first step toward the drink habit. Dear boys and girls, pledge yourselves over this lesson, to God and to one another, to be TOTAL ABSTAINERS. There is a legend that Noah planted the vine. And it grew but it did not flourish. An evil one told him to water it with the blood of a peacock. He did; and it grew and flourished but it did not blossom. He was told to water it with the blood of an ape. He did; and it grew and flourished and blossomed, but it did not bear. He was told to water it with the blood of a lion. He did; and it grew and flourished and blossomed and bore fruit, but the fruit did not ripen. He was told to water it with the blood of a hog. He did; and it grew and flourished and blossomed and bore, and its fruit ripened. The teaching of the legend was this. When a man takes his first glass of liquor it makes him as proud as a peacock; the second glass makes him as silly as an ape; the third glass makes him as fierce as a lion; the fourth glass makes him as beastly as a hog. Beware of the first glass.—Christian Nation.

THE DRINK CURSE IN FRANCE.

The following is a translation of an article which appeared in the issue for July 13 of Le Petit Journal, which is the most largely circulated of Parisian daily newspapers, its sales averaging something like 900,000 copies per day. An article in so widely circulated a journal certainly must tell the truth:—

"It has been said with truth that, of all the dangers menacing our agricultural population at the present day, the gravest and most difficult to fight against is alcoholism. No one can have been a resident of a country district without being struck with the development of this scourge during the last thirty years, the deplorable effects of which are everywhere visible. The habit of saving, that was so long the strength and the glory of our tillers of the soil, is gradually disappearing. The money-box of the liquor-seller swallows up, sou by sou, the wages that formerly, in the form of silver pieces, were hidden away in some corner of the clothes-press, to be brought out when enough was accumulated to buy a little piece of ground. The peace and harmony of families is seriously impaired. In the villages the women are reduced, like the wives of workmen in the towns, to haunt the doors of the drink shop in order to rescue the bread of their children from the alcoholic gulf. In most of our hamlets the drunkard, who was formerly the exception, has multiplied by contagion. Once the peasant never entered the cabaret except on a Sunday to leisurely sip a few litres of wine and play a long game of cards or bowls for the scot. To-day, when idle and when going to work, whether it be holiday or not, the rural laborer never meets a comrade without inviting him to take a glass—a glass of brandy, be it understood. One glass means two; for it is only common civility to call for another, and if, as often happens, friends drop in, each one treats in his turn, until the man, who came in just to take a nip, goes away charged with a half-pint or pint of spirits, almost always adulterated. This guzzling of spirits (and what spirits! for the country tavern-keepers do not hesitate to sell the most frightful mixtures for gain) is not a rare occurrence. Repeated daily, it becomes pernicious in the last extreme. When a young man begins drinking, only to do like the rest, habit soon makes it a necessity, and rapidly he becomes imbruted. The agricultural laborer is only willing to work for the sake of procuring the pleasures of new carousals. Deprived of liquor, he is stupid and brutal; when drunk, he is transformed into a savage beast. Tied to this animal, who covers her with blows and even refuses to give her food, the unhappy wife loses courage and sometimes takes to drink in her turn. So much the worse for the children! They will follow the example of their parents."

No more terrible picture was ever drawn from actual life than the above. It seems that a revolution is going on in France—a revolution which is destroying the one class of her people who have been her stability, and the foundation-stone on which she has built the magnificent structure of a mighty nation. The agricultural class referred to above are the ones who, going to their secret hoards, poured into the lap of the nation those milliards of francs which were required not only to meet the expenses of the war with Germany until the capitulation of Paris, but then to pay the unexampled war indemnity which that country exacted as the price of peace. Great as was the rapidity with which the United States recuperated after the civil war, and paid off the larger portion of her immense war debt, it was but child's play in comparison with what France did after the Franco-Prussian war. No other country ever had a rural population who could respond to such enormous demands by pouring into the nation's purse their accumulated savings. If the article above quoted from Le Petit Journal be true,—and we have, unfortunately, no doubt but that it is correct,—the rum curse has fallen upon this industrious and saving class. From a nation of thrifty and frugal and hardworking men, they have become drunken and debauched, working only to obtain money wherewith to continue their potations, and even starving their wives and children to do so. In place of the peasant's wife having laid up, in some snug corner, bulky accumulation of silver coins, saved piece by piece, wherewith to purchase a bit of land and become an independent freeholder, she is obliged to go and wait at the door of the village wine-shop, in order to waylay her husband and obtain money for the bare necessities of life, before he goes within and wastes it in drink. No longer, it seems, can the French peasants be pointed to as an example of a people who can indulge in drinking their light native wines as freely as we drink tea and coffee, without becoming sots, and without losing their well-earned reputation for industry and frugality. From drinking wine they have gone to drinking brandy, and that of a most abominably adulterated kind. In place of being economical, they are spendthrifts; in place of being industrious, they are loafers. The consequences, it is not too much to say, will prove fatal to France.—Toledo Blade.

NUGGETS.

A woman who made her thirty-ninth appearance for drunkenness before the Sheffield magistrates asked them if they objected to people getting drunk, why they issued licenses for the sale of intoxicants?

All but nine States out of the forty-nine in the United States now make scientific temperance education compulsory in their common schools. There are between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 children in America to whom it is required that this instruction be given.

"License or no license," has been the burning question in many towns in Massachusetts for some time past. The following cities of that State are now under a no-license regime: Worcester, Haverhill, Chelsea, Brocton, Somerville, Cambridge, New Bedford, Marlboro, Fitchburg, Newton, Malden and Quincy. The cause is gaining ground.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Muskogee, Indian Territory, is erecting a neat and commodious structure, the lower story of which will be used as a school-room and assembly hall and the second as a library and reading-room. The cost of the building when completed will not be far from $2,000. It is their ambition to form a school for boys, and as there are several schools for girls and none for boys in this town it will be seen that no better location could be found. Teachers will be employed under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. The books used and the course of study will be under their control.

Rev. Dr. Peters has been making an analysis of the best glass of beer he could buy in New York, and found that it contained, "pepper, ginger, vinegar, capsicum, cream of tartar, acetic acid, nitric, citric, tartaric, sulphuric and prussic acids; nitric, sulphuric and acetic ether; spirits of nitre, the oil of cloves, japoic extract, bitter almonds, orris root, graius of paradise, Spanish juice, black auts, dried cherries, orange peel, coriander seed, white oak bark, tannic acid, fennel seed, cardamon seed, wormwood, copperas, alum, sulphates of iron and copper, liquorice, opium, gentian root, quassia, cocculus indicus, tobacco, saltpetre, logwood, marble dust, egg shells, hartshorn, nutgalls, potash and soda."

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON IX.—First Quarter, 1892.—February 28.

SUBJECT.—Jeremiah Persecuted.—Jeremiah. 37: 11-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I am with thee, saith the LORD, to deliver thee.—Jeremiah 1: 19.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jer. 37: 11-21. T.—Jer. 37: 1-10. W.—Jer. 26: 8-15. T.—Jer. 1: 13-19. F.—Luke 6: 20-26. S.—Jas. 5: 7-11. S.—Heb. 10: 30-39.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jeremiah falsely imprisoned.—vs. 11-15. Israel had the misfortune to be situated between the two great contending powers, Egypt and Assyria. A strict neutrality might have been difficult to maintain, but without question it was the only safe or wise policy. Zedekiah and his ministers made a fatal political blunder when they broke their faith with Assyria and sought the protection of Egypt; but do our own political leaders who seek to ally our nation with the saloon power act less foolishly or wicked? Jeremiah was a marked man. He had gained the hatred of the ministry then in power by his constantly repeated counsel to surrender to the Chaldeans, while all the other prophets prophesied smooth things that were flattering to the national pride. It had made him enemies on every hand, who were watching for an occasion against him, and this was soon found in his temporary withdrawal to his own village of Anathoth for the purpose of receiving his share in the annual distribution of the tithe of the produce which fell to the priests. The words translated "separate himself" means literally "to take his portion." It was certainly a very natural and proper thing to do. In thus seeking to provide himself with future sustenance he showed that he believed his own prophecy, that the invading army which through fear of the Egyptian king had for the present raised the siege, would soon be back. If they had been still investing the city he would have had a possible motive in deserting to the enemy—to save his own life—but now that they were probably many miles distant and in full retreat, the charge was ridiculous on its face. The officer who arrested him was a grandson of Hananiah, the false prophet whose death Jeremiah had predicted (Jer. 28: 15-17), and doubtless in making him his prisoner he gratified a feeling of personal ill-will. Not even the form of a trial seems to have been allowed him by the princes, but on the assumption that he must be guilty, they proceeded at once to pour upon him a torrent of abuse, and sentenced him to the Jewish punishment, suffered afterwards by Paul, of "forty stripes save one;" after which he was remanded to prison. All this he might have avoided by a little more of worldly prudence and policy, but men who feel that they are God's messengers and must speak the word he gives them are not apt to be prudent or politic. They are men of one idea—that of doing their present duty. Results they leave with God.

2. A weak king.—vs. 16-19. Zedekiah was as different from Jehoiakim as the men who surrounded him were different from the princes who had befriended Jeremiah in the former reign. He was of a weak, yielding disposition, the mere puppet of that faction which had now gained complete control of the government, and forced him into what proved the fatal step of his life, the Egyptian alliance and the revolt against Nebuchadnezzar. And now he did not dare to consult Jeremiah openly, great as was his desire to hear some favorable word from the Lord. It seems strange that he could have expected any; and yet how many while persisting in a course of sin hope that in some way his eternal word will be changed, so that they shall not "reap" the fruit of their doings. But he had to deal with a man who, even to save his own life, would not compromise the truth an iota. What an example we have here for those weak-kneed ministers who refuse to say anything against popular evils for fear of losing their pulpits, or for the public men afraid to do their duty because it may cost them their offices! Jeremiah knew that he was speaking God's own word to the king, and strong in the consciousness of his own integrity he asks wherein he has offended, and points to the utter failure of the false prophets to realize their own predictions. What if every minister was as brave as Jeremiah to denounce false worship and Egyptian alliances of every kind? How soon we should see the rising tide of spiritual life in our churches. 3. A brave adherence to truth will win favor.—vs. 20, 21. Jeremiah was not a stoic. He seems to have had that keen, nervous sensibility which loves life and shrinks from pain. He was willing, in an honest, manly fashion, to ask that the rigors of his imprisonment be lightened, but not to change the message God had given him a hair's-breadth in order to secure this favor. Yet the fact that he did obtain it shows how often men compromise principle when they would have lost nothing, even in a worldly point of view, by taking a bold stand. It is always safe to speak God's truth, whether men hate or love us for it. The only danger is when through fear of man we leave the straight path of obedience and fall into a snare.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The African Methodist Episcopal church is a much larger body than is commonly supposed. It was organized in 1816 by a number of colored people who withdrew from the parent body that they might have larger privileges and more freedom of action among themselves, than they believed they could secure in continued association with the whites. The Rev. Richard Allen was elected the first bishop. The growth of the church was slow until after the war, being chiefly in the Northern States. Now it is widely distributed, the largest membership being in South Carolina, where there are 88,172 members, considerably more than the whole membership in 1866. There are in the denomination 2,481 organizations, with a total membership of 452,725. Of the congregations, 2,450 own their own churches, which have a total seating capacity of 1,160,838, and a valuation of $6,468,280.

—The first church built in this country for colored Methodists was at the corner of Sixth and Lombard streets, Philadelphia, and was occupied in 1794. The site is still used by the congregation, which a couple of years ago erected a church worth $50,000.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

—The American Bible Society has decided to make an exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 similar in many respects to that at Philadelphia in 1876, when specimens of Bibles were shown in over 200 different languages.

BAPTIST.

—Racine, Wis., with a population of 21,000, has four Baptist churches, with 900 members, which during the past year raised over $12,000 and added 200 persons to the membership.

—The summary of statistics for Baptist churches throughout the world, issued at the close of 1891, gives a total of 42,650 churches, 27,858 pastors or missionaries, and a membership of 3,786,603.

—The Baptist churches of the South have lost one of their most prominent men by the death, from pneumonia, of Dr. Basil Manley, Professor of Old Testament Interpretation and Biblical Introduction in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, of which he was one of the founders. He was born December 19th, 1825, near Edgefield, S. C., the son of the late Basil Manley, President of the University of Alabama.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The first of the Swedish Free Mission churches in Chicago to become Congregational, was recognized by a council Jan. 31. The services were participated in by Drs. F. A. Noble and Willard Scott, Professors M. W. Montgomery and Reinert A. Jernberg, and the pastor, Rev. J. J. Johnson, of the Swedish department of the seminary. The church is located in a neighborhood of 200 Swedish families.

—Oberlin has another well-bestowed gift, that of $40,000 from Miss Julia Dickinson of Coldwater, Mich., who died recently at Nassau, on the Bahama Islands. Of this amount $20,000 is for the endowment of the chair of the principal of the Ladies' department, and $20,000 for the department of Physical Culture of Young Women.

—The Chicago City Mission Society, besides the great work which it is doing directly, is doing a good services, in provoking others to good works. Both the Methodists and Presbyterians have pointed to it in recent meetings as examples of what they ought to do.

—Rev. Joseph Cook opened his annual course at Tremont Temple the first Monday in February, and was greeted by an unusually large audience, not very clearly indicating any special growing disfavor towards him in Boston. He came on to the platform escorted by Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., who offered prayer after the prelude, which was a glowing eulogy upon Mr. Spurgeon. The lectureship discusses this year, in six sessions, "Strategic Scriptures." The first lecture was upon "Unshaken Columnar Truths of Scripture." During the course Mr. Cook will have as topics, "Merits and Defects of the Higher Criticism," "The Religious Infallibility of the Bible," "Dr. Abbott's New Progressive Orthodoxy," and "Fast and Loose Theories of Evolution."

Dr. Abbott's Lowell lectures have prepared the way for this series of the lectureship.

LUTHERANS.

—The entire Lutheran Communion in the United States includes the General Synod, the United Synod in the South, the General Council, the Synodical Conference, twelve independent synods, and several independent congregations. Taking all the organizations holding the Lutheran faith, they have 8,427 churches in the United States, with 1,199,514 communicants, and church property valued at $34,218,234. In nationality or language there are 198,997 communicants in synods using the English language wholly; 232,512 communicants in synods using partly the English and partly the German language; 454,005 communicants using wholly the German language; 190,154 communicants who are Norwegians, 88,700 Swedish, 13,674 Danish, 1,991 Icelandic, and 1,385 Finnish.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The thirty-seventh annual report of the Wesleyan Chapel Committee shows a total expenditure during the year on cases of erection, enlargement, etc., throughout Great Britain, returned as completed, of £298,730. The total amount of debt paid off during the same period has been £56,970. Toward relief of debts grants have been made amounting to £3,808, and loans £7,215; toward new chapels—grants £3,565, loans £4,520, making a total of £18,198.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Pittsburgh Synod reports five classes, 63 ministers, 131 congregations, 14,346 members, 898 infant baptisms, 94 adult baptisms, 700 confirmed, 605 by certificate, 11,852 communed, 388 dismissed, 212 erasures, 286 deaths, 112 Sunday-schools, 9,139 Sunday-school scholars, 16 students for ministry, $42,197.00 for benevolence, $74,527.00 for contingencies, 1,050 church papers, 3,240 Sunday-school papers. This shows a very good year's work.

—The fifteenth report of missions in Japan shows 54 missionaries, 49 wives, and 51 other ladies, a total of 154. Of the five presbyteries, the two in Tokio are the largest, including 41 of the 73 churches, and 6,346 of the 10,961 church members. It is interesting to note that in the larger of these two, the Dai Ichi Presbytery, the membership includes 1,735 men, 1,425 women and 478 children. There are 70 theological students in the five schools for boys and young men, and of the 120 pupils in the Meiji Gakuin 87 are Christians. There are also 26 schools for girls, young women and children, with 1,774 pupils, of whom 315 are Christians.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

—Hoffman's Catholic Directory places the Catholic population of the United States at 8,647,221. This is 2,250,045 more than that given in the United States census of 1890, but this is accounted for on the theory that the census did not enumerate in church schedules those under 9 years of age who had been baptized. The Catholics estimate that these children make 15 per cent of their church membership and claim that they should be counted. The church has 9,062 priests, 8,042 churches, 3,552 stations, 1,683 chapels, 223 orphan asylums with 25,518 inmates, 54 theological seminaries, 138 colleges, 655 academies, and 3,406 parochial schools with 700,753 pupils. These are figures that will illustrate the strength of the Catholic church in this country.

—It is reported that a Catholic hierarchy will be established in Egypt, the Pope intending to name English bishops to the new Sees, on condition, however, that the British government shall establish full and open diplomatic relations with the Holy See.

SHAKERS, ETC.

—There are in this country seven communistic societies, of which the Shakers is much the largest, having a membership of 1,728. Next is the Amana, with 1,600 members. The Harmony Society, or Economites, numbers 250. Altogether there are 4,176 persons in the "all things in common" organizations.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The people of Tarkio have raised $20,000 to which amount Honorable David Rankin adds another $20,000 for new college buildings. Now it is asked of the church people outside of Tarkio to raise $5,000 more to which Mr. Rankin will add $5,000, making $50,000 in all. The whole amount is needed.

—The United Presbyterian church, which has been in Egypt and India less than forty years, has now 24 ordained native ministers, 39 congregations organized, and 10 native licentiates. This is a remarkable showing, and is worthy of our admiration.

—The following shows the proportion of church members in Monmouth College this year: Seniors, 97 per cent; juniors, 100; sophomores, 92; freshmen, 89; senior preparatory, 86; junior preparatory, 83; English department, 100. The per cent in collegiate department, 94, and in the entire college, 91.

—There is a new thing in Chicago, the "Third United Presbyterian church" for, so the presbytery decided that the South Side Mission should be named. According to arrangements, presbytery met January 26, at Douglass Hall, and there christened the young congregation. There was a full attendance at the meeting and a very pleasant and profitable session.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Baron Von Holleben, the German Minister, who succeeds the late Count Arco-Valley at Washington, registered in Chicago, en route to New York, where he will remain several days before going to Washington.

There is trouble between the students of Rush Medical College and the faculty of the institution. The middle class is contemplating secession, and the college is in a fair way of being without a graduating class in 1893.

The Library board decided upon the design of the building which will hold the city's literary treasures for years to come.

Three boys were drowned while skating in Humboldt Park.

George Kennan lectured at Central Music Hall on the "Horrors of Russian Exile."

Secret service agents have received intelligence that confidence men are using the "trick toy clothes-wringers" to swindle people.

The Drainage Board will confer with the State Board of Health with reference to contagious diseases in Chicago.

The Congregational ministers passed resolutions eulogistic of Mr. Spurgeon.

By way of defense to the charge of running a place of amusement without a license, Miss Jennie Moore attempts to prove that her spiritualistic seances are religious meetings.

Twenty-second street will have a horse-car line.

COUNTRY.

Fifty-three horses at Woodard & Shanklin's sale at Lexington, Ky., Monday, brought $158,735, an average of $2,957. Palo Alto Bell brought the highest price, $15,100.

Plans are on foot to ship grain by water from St. Louis directly to Europe.

Owing to the continued depression in the iron trade the Chesapeake nail works and the puddling department of the Central iron works at Harrisburg, Pa., shut down, throwing between 200 and 250 men out of work.

An examination of the vaults of the Merchants' Bank at Moorhead, Minn., shows that they contain only $619. The bank owes depositors $169,000, the Chase National Bank of New York $14,600, and the First National Bank of St. Paul $14,200.

At Goshen, Ind., Josie Kane filed suit against Sylvester W. Shumard for $10,000 damages, on the ground that the defendant unlawfully sold liquor to her husband, thereby causing the breaking up of her home.

The Hon. Milton M. Morrill, a prominent attorney, died at Nauvoo, Ill., aged 76. He was a brother of the late Gov. Lot M. Morrill, of Maine.

At Toledo, Ohio, John Malloy killed his wife and committed suicide. Both were over 70 years of age. Malloy was insanely jealous.

Union Veteran Legion, Abe Lincoln Post, G. A. R., the Ladies' Auxiliary, U. V. L., and General G. W. Dodge, and the camps of Sons of Veterans at Council Bluffs passed resolutions condemning the action of Father O'Rourke, the Catholic priest, severely for his action in refusing to admit the National emblem into his church.

The Northern Pacific road will move its chief engineer's office from St. Paul to Chicago March 1.

The first meeting of the Johnson County (Iowa) Russian relief committees pledged 2,599 bushels of corn and $436.75 cash to the Russian relief fund.

For releasing an alleged swindler for whom a requisition had been issued, District Attorney Nicholl, of New York, indignantly declares that the Michigan governor has violated the Federal constitution.

The Mesaba Central Land and Exploration Company sold 800 acres of its holdings at Duluth to the Great Northern Iron Company for $600,000. The Northern company on the strength of that purchase raised its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000.

The heirs of Anneke Jans held a meeting in New York to take steps to prove their title to the Trinity church property, amounting to over $25,000,000.

The great Hukill lumber plant, valued at $1,250,000, located in Randolph and Tucker counties, West Virginia, was sold by the commissioners appointed by Judge Hoke for $110,000, and the sale was at once confirmed by the judge.

The saloons of Minneapolis won a victory in the common council which was so unexpected that it dazed the Prohibitionists and set the whole town a talking.

Thomas Crosby, aged 75, one of the first white settlers of Wisconsin, died at Beloit.

The application of ex-Senator John J. Ingalls for membership in the G. A. R. has been accepted.

A call has been issued for a national convention of retail furniture dealers to be held at Cincinnati July 13.

Charles McIlvaine, a murderer, was killed by electricity by the law's decree in Sing Sing, N. Y., prison, Monday.

It is reported that all the rumsellers in Bangor, Me., over 200 in number, have been indicted.

Six inches of snow fell in Southern Idaho Tuesday. Thousands of cattle have died and many farmers are short of feed.

Representatives of the International Artificial Rain Company of Kansas Tuesday entered into contracts with farmers in the vicinity of Huron, Cal., to furnish rain for the season's crops.

The liabilities of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., of New York, are estimated at $2,151,842; actual assets, $39,329.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Feb. 8 to Feb. 13:

J H Marshall, W Porter, H E Hunter, H H Shepard, H Kyle, S T Osgood, B S Culter, L M Chapin, T W Berkley, A Logerquist, T J Williams, Mrs S H Nutting, J A Conant, W N Perrin, A Austin, Mrs H E M Foote, Dr J Mattinly, J Lindsay, J H Patton, A Lindsay, M M Marling, A Barkley, Rev E L Harris, Rev J Excell, D Quick, Mrs M Ritchie, C Coleman, J A Turbett, R Moore, Mrs W C Walston, J Hart, A W Bill, T C Kirkwood, T C Radabaugh, P Bacon, G Richey, J R Alcock, W T Wilson, J Ralston, D Brooks, Rev L Allen, Mrs S E Logan, J F Icke, J Duncan, J Morrow, Mrs M Gaddis, Rev P Beck, Rev A Overstreet.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2.....	87 1/2 @	87 1/2
Winter No. 2.....	90 @	91
Corn—No. 2.....	39 1/4 @	40 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @	32 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	81 @	82
Bran per ton.....	13 50	14 50
Hay Timothy.....	9 00	12 00
Butter, medium to best....	26 @	31
Cheese.....	09 @	13
Beans.....	1 50 @	1 75
Eggs.....	22 @	23
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 20 @	1 22
Flax.....	90 @	95 1/2
Broom corn.....	04 @	07 1/2
Potatoes, per bush.....	25 @	37
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 @	6 1/2
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	4 60 @	5 35
Common to good....	3 25 @	4 00
Hogs.....	4 05 @	4 85
Sheep.....	4 25 @	5 45

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	1 04 1/2 @	1 08 1/2
Corn.....	48 @	51 1/2
Oats.....	36 1/2 @	41 1/2
Eggs.....	30 @	31
Butter.....	18 @	31
Wool.....	21 @	24

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 25 @	4 25
Hogs.....	4 10 @	4 45
Sheep.....	4 00 @	5 65

PIANOS $175. ORGANS $33. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servants. 20
 Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests..... 20
 The Royal Invitation..... 20
 Loyal Responses..... 20
 Sunlight Through Shadows.... 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrations of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box. Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25
 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors..... 2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant..... 2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
 Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons,..... 50
 Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection..... 50
 Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
 Twelve Christmas Sermons.... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.
 Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures."
 Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each.
 Separate volumes may be had if desired.
 The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
 An Eden in England. Lie in Eagle's Nest.
 Ned Franks. White Bear's Den.
 Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web.
 Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods.
 Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed.
 Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each or per set.....2.10
 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death.
 No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4 20
 Clarendon Tales. A Wreath of Smoke.
 Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab.
 Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80
 Cassy. King's Servant.
 Lost Gip. Alone in London.
 Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children.
 Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations.$2.00
 "A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa. He who wants to know what missionary effort means in these days may well learn from this volume. * * * The reader who goes carefully through will have a good bird's eye view of recent events in Africa, with all the results of modern travel. * * * The work contains solid information of use to all who are interested in the future of this wonderful country. The many illustrations throw light upon savage customs and costumes."—Graphic.

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth,.....$1.50

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. * * * We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America.
 1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled.....2.00
 2. Beveled boards, full gilt.....2.50
 3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges,.....2.50
 4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges...4.00
 5. Persian calf, padded and emossed, gilt roll and r. g.5.00
 6. Crushed levant, elegant..... 6.00

Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall.

Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use. 20
 My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children..... 20

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Standard Works.

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order, as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Revised Odd Fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate, with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50c.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50c.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

USEFUL HINTS.

Egg stains can be removed by rubbing them with common table salt.

Ease tired feet by bathing them in warm water in which a few lumps of saleratus has been dissolved.

Use a wire frame for boiling potatoes, and see how much of vexation it saves and how satisfactory the result.

To remove stains of blood, saturate the spots in kerosene and let stand a time; afterward wash out in warm water.

To keep flies off gilt frames, boil three or four onions in a pint of water, then apply with a soft brush to the frames.

By rubbing with a flannel dipped in whitening the brown discoloration may be taken off cups which have been used for baking.

In making cream custards, constant stirring is necessary, after putting in the thickening ingredients, to get a smooth, creamy result.

When whalebones have become bent, they may be used again by first soaking them in tepid water for a few hours, and then drying them.

A pretty lamp screen may be made by sticking an ordinary palm-leaf fan into a long-necked bottle and covering the whole with some bright-colored figured silk.

A simple cough remedy is made of an ounce of flaxseed boiled in a pint of water, a little honey added, an ounce of rock candy, and the juice of three lemons, the whole mixed and boiled well.

To remove iron rust from linen: Saturate the spot with a strong solution of lemon juice and salt, and hold over the nose of the tea-kettle filled with boiling water, when the spot will almost instantly disappear.

Lamp-wicks must be changed often to insure a good light, as they will soon become clogged, and the oil does not pass through them freely. A clear flame will be certain if the wicks are soaked in vinegar twenty-four hours before using.

When washing windows, looking glasses, etc., be sure to put a little ammonia in the water. This will save labor, and clean them much more effectively, giving as well a much finer polish. For general cleaning, ammonia in the water will remove dirt, smoke, grease etc., much better than anything else.

A safe way to use kerosene oil for lighting fires is to roll up rags from the scrap-bag into rolls about the size of your thumb, drop them into a can for the purpose and pour on just as much oil as they will absorb; then all you have to do is to lay one in front of the kindlings and light it; an old fork will do for this purpose.

CLEANING HINTS.

A housekeeper asks, "How can I clean pans which have been smoked on a coal-oil stove? I have tried soap and water and it only makes them worse," and Mrs. Grayson replies in Table Talk: "Mineral soap is recommended for this, but I have found it easier to wipe off as much as possible with a piece of soft, dry paper, then with a clean piece of soft paper or rag dipped in vinegar; and then the sandsoap to brighten it. When using an oil stove myself, I have never had anything smoked; but some servants are not so careful to keep the wicks turned low. This treatment will also remove soot and smoke from the mica in the doors of stoves when a fresh fire is lighted with kindling wood."

Another one asks how to keep the zinc under the stove bright, and sandsoap is again recommended; but a cloth moistened with kerosene will polish zinc as bright as silver. A scrubbing-brush is kept in my bath-room, and each person is requested to scrub the tub after bathing; but once a week I have it scrubbed (after it is thoroughly dried with a soft towel) with a cloth which has been dipped in coal-oil.

Another one complains that her dish towels smell badly, notwithstanding the fact that "they are washed out every day." If they are washed as I have seen them done, in the rinse water, I do not wonder they are disagreeable. They should be

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

washed, after each time of using, in clean, cold water, with plenty of soap and plenty of rubbing, then well rinsed, also in cold water, two or three times, if need be, to get all the soap out, and hung in the open air, when practicable, to dry. Silver and glass should never be rinsed but wiped.

Some one else says: "I have seen it stated that milk-pans should be washed in cold water. Is not this something new?" It often happens that people read carelessly, grasping only part of an idea. Pans, bowls, pitchers and tumblers that have had milk in them should be washed first in cold water, then in hot, soapy water, then scalded with clean, boiling water and wiped with a clean, dry towel. Many persons dry their pans by setting them on the back part of the stove, but this is always risky, as they are apt to be forgotten, and so injured by the melting of the solder; or if lined with granite or porcelain, the lining will be likely to crack and peel off. Nor is it a good plan to fill kettles or pans with water and put them on the stove with the idea of loosening substances which have adhered to them in cooking; it will only make them harder to remove. They should be filled with cold water and stand in the sink or on the table, with a small piece of washing soda or a few drops of ammonia in each. This will soften and make it easy to scrape out whatever sticks to them. When possible to do so, it is better to wash cooking utensils as soon as you are through using them; it is not only easier to do, but it is better for the hands.

It's the best selling thing on our shelves, is what druggists say of Salvation Oil. 25 cts.

Attention! If you desire a fine head of hair of a natural hue and free from dandruff, Hall's Hair Renewer is the best and safest preparation to accomplish it.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3.

No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1.

A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacker, Martin Luther, John Knox, and a host of others.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D.

This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 8vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50.

This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony.

This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Association

331 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper 35cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 328 pages, cloth, $1.00

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPOTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the CHRISTIAN RELIGION. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

[From the Farm, Field and Stockman.]

ASPARAGUS PLANTING.

A Connor, Kansas, subscriber writes: "I want to put out an asparagus bed. How far apart should the rows be and how deep should the plants be set? How long does it take the plants to grow from seed before they are ready for transplanting?"

Answering the last question first: It depends on the care given in the seed bed, as often cared for it takes two or three years, but if the seed bed is made as early in the spring as the soil can be worked, which should be prepared by being well pulverized and enriched with well-rotted manure, and the seed sown in rows a foot apart and carefully hoed and freed from weeds, the plants will be in fine condition for transplanting one year from seed.

The permanent bed should be made very rich and the soil loosened at least eighteen inches deep—the old method used to be to trench and put in a two or three inch layer of well rotted manure as each layer of soil was turned over. Now the same result is obtained as is indicated above.

The soil best suited for asparagus is a deep rather sandy loam.

For private use or marketing on a small scale the beds may be made five feet wide, three rows planted in each, one in the middle and one on each side a foot from the edge; the distance of the planting in the rows nine inches.

In planting set a line and make a slanting cut with spade six or eight inches deep, according to size of plants. Lay the plants against the side of this trench, nine inches apart, taking pains that the roots are properly spread. The crown or top of the plant should be covered about three inches.

A few days after planting, go over the bed lightly with a sharp steel rake. This will destroy any venturesome weeds and help all around, on the principle that good cultivation pays. Let this raking be kept up at intervals of a few days until the plants begin to show themselves above ground. Then the hoe or hand-cultivator may be used between rows and plants.

The first and second seasons after planting no asparagus is cut. A partial crop ought to be had the third season. In the fall of each year, when the plants have fruited, mow the bed and burn the mowings with such rakings as may be gathered in clearing the beds of them. After cleaning the bed each fall, give a heavy dressing of manure, which should be spaded in with three or four pounds of salt to the square rod, in the spring, before the shoots begin to show themselves.

Cut all shoots as they appear till the time of final cutting, which will vary from the middle of May to the middle of June (or your fondness for the plant), but do not cut too late. Especial care in this regard should be taken the first season or two that cuttings are made.

TO BLANCH CELERY.

While some are enjoying nice blanched celery this winter, others are going without or else had so much work and trouble in getting it into condition that they do not get enough enjoyment or money out of it to feel paid for their pains. To such the following taken from Farm and Home, will be pleasant information. The writer says:

The method of blanching and storing celery in a cellar for winter's sale is a simple process. If the cellar is moist, so much the better. It is supposed that the celery has been properly handled, so that all leaves stand upright. Remove all decaying leaves with a sharp knife down to the roots. Begin at the cellar wall and set a row of celery upright. Place some moist earth around the roots and put another row against the first one, always close together. Put earth around the roots again and continue until you have a bed eighteen inches wide.

Now put a wide board upright against the celery, and against this place another row of celery; continue in this manner until all is stored away.

COSTIVENESS

If not relieved by judicious and timely treatment, is liable to result in chronic constipation. As an aperient that may be used with perfect safety and satisfaction, Ayer's Pills are unsurpassed. Unlike most cathartics, these pills, while they relax and cleanse, exert a tonic influence on the stomach, liver, and bowels, causing these organs to perform their functions with healthy regularity and comfort. Being purely vegetable and free from mineral drug of any kind, is not attended with injurious effects. Good for old and young of every climate, Ayer's Pills are everywhere the favorite. G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main street, Carlisle, Pa., says: "Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and I deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. I would not willingly be without them." *

Cured by

Ayer's Cathartic Pills
Every Dose Effective.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

To blanch celery, all light must be excluded. Cover with boards or darken all windows.

Having an upright board every eighteen inches, keeps the plants from heating, and also enables you to cover them up easily.

For early winter use blanch in September. Put in sections every two or three weeks until November.

HORTICULTURAL.

The willow, elm, poplar or locust should never be planted close to wells or drains.

Before setting out trees of any kind, mark off the ground carefully and set a stake where each tree is to be planted.

In timbered sections many fail to properly preserve their timber lots. It is not necessary to destroy the timber lot to get wood.

A few dollars spent in trees, flowers and shrubbery, and a day's time spent in setting them out, will enhance the value of many farms.

Do not gauge the value of trees by their size; young and thrifty trees of moderate growth are always better than overgrown ones.

The "angry tree," a woody plant which grows from ten to twenty-five feet high, and which was formerly supposed to exist in one State in the Union, Nevada, has recently been found in eastern California and Arizona. If disturbed, this peculiar tree shows every sign of vexation, even to ruffling up its leaves like the hair on an angry cat, and giving forth an unpleasant sickening odor.

There's hardly a point on the continent where Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is unknown.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 15th page).

William Guy Peck, professor of higher mathematics and astronomy at Columbia College, died at his home in Greenwich, Conn., Sunday, aged 72 years. He was the author of twenty-three text books on mathematics and physics.

General Henry H. Bingham, of Philadelphia, will deliver the address at Gettysburg June 2 next, at the unveiling of high-water mark monument.

Charles Maginnis was tried at Muncie, Ind., Wednesday on the charge of stealing an overcoat. He was acquitted, and after the verdict was rendered he confessed the crime.

During the last year the Great Northern railway earned $5,309,462. The earnings of the previous year were more than a million less.

Official estimates of farm animals in the United States show an increase of each kind of 3 to 4 per cent. Sheep and swine are more valuable and horses and cows cheaper.

Eleven Chinamen were indicted by the United States Grand Jury at Deadwood, S. D., Wednesday, for using the mails for the transmission of lottery tickets and literature.

Dr. O. M. Stoddard, emeritus professor of natural sciences in Wooster (Ohio) University, died Wednesday. President Harrison was a pupil of Dr. Stoddard when the latter was an instructor at Miami University.

Thursday the Michigan World's Fair forestry committee voted to raise $10,000 for a forestry exhibit at the fair. The State had previously appropriated $3,500.

H. A. Bruns, president of the Merchants' Bank of Moorehead, Minn., was arrested Thursday on a charge of defrauding depositors.

A bill was introduced in the New Jersey Legislature Tuesday, appropriating $10,000 toward the erection of a monument at the World's Fair to commemorate the emancipation of slaves.

American millers and the people of Minnesota have contributed 3,000,000 pounds of flour and 1,000,000 pounds of corn to the Russian relief fund.

Emma Abbott's ashes, Tuesday, were sealed into the monument erected by herself before her death in Oak Grove cemetery, Boston.

Many persons are afflicted with diphtheria at Hillsboro, Ill.

An enormous "spot" is reported on the sun's disk at the present time.

John Jay Knox, President of the National Bank of the Republic, of New York, died Tuesday, aged 64. He was comptroller of the treasury from 1872 to 1884.

At Springfield, Ill., Tuesday an incorporation license for a Baptist hospital at Chicago was issued to Judge C. C. Kohl-saat, Jesse A. Baldwin, and Frederick A. Smith.

Bench warrants have been issued by Judge Nelson, of the United States Court at St. Paul, Minn., for the arrest of all the principals of the Mississippi River Valley Lumbermen's Association, the corporation recently indicted for maintaining a lumber trust, Injunctions were ordered against fifteen saloon-keepers at Dubuque, Iowa.

Forty-six Russian Hebrew immigrants were found suffering from the typhus fever in lodging-houses in the crowded Hebrew quarter in New York Thursday.

Thursday, Ceylon voted £8,000 for an exhibit at the World's Fair.

Patrick Cummings, of Chicago, Thursday was chosen High Chief Ranger of the Orders of Foresters at Streator, Ill.

John Cook was released Thursday from the penitentiary at Lincoln, Neb. Years ago he committed a murder, for which he was hanged and shot by lynchers, but recovered after being cut down on trial, in view of the violence he had suffered, was given but a life sentence. Commutation and good conduct secured his liberty.

Two of the victims of the Hotel Royal fire at New York were identified Thursday as Mrs. Woods, of Boston, and Julia Martin, a chambermaid. Eight bodies remain unidentified, and were buried in Potter's field.

Colored people of Little Rock have incorporated a stock company, with a capital of $2,500,000, to establish and operate business houses for the colored people.

Surveys at the Isthmus of Panama demonstrate that the Atlantic Ocean is six and a half feet higher than the Pacific. It was formerly thought that the Pacific was 100 feet higher than the Atlantic.

Preparations are under way at Scranton Pa., for the re-union of the Army of the Potomac June 15 and 16.

FOREIGN.

The body of Charles H. Spurgeon lay in state in the Metropolitan Tabernacle in London Tuesday. The funeral was held Thursday. Business was suspended in the vicinity of Metropolitan Tabernacle and along the route taken by the funeral procession.

Miss Mattie Mitchell, daughter of Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, was married Thursday to the Duke de la Rochefoucauld at Paris.

Railways in Austria have been so seriously blocked by avalanches that it will require a month to reopen them for travel. In the Tyrol the snow is seven feet deep.

Mount Nagashoe, a volcano in New Zealand, is in a state of violent eruption. The eruption is accompanied by earthquakes.

A new epidemic prevails in Vienna. Physicians attribute it to the effect of influenza and bad drinking water.

In reply to a question in the House of Commons Wednesday a government representative announced that Great Britain and the United States had agreed that France, Italy, and Sweden should act as arbitrators of the Behring Sea dispute.

Eight thousand London coal porters struck Wednesday because of a dispute in regard to wages.

M. Ribot, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, said Wednesday that the commercial negotiations between France and the United States were virtually concluded.

Joseph Chamberlain, member of Parliament for Birmingham, was formerly elected leader of the Liberal Union party in the House of Commons, Monday.

Heavy snows have fallen in Russia, enabling the government to distribute supplies in the famine-stricken provinces.

The London Times' Santiago correspondent says, that the Spanish and Portuguese speaking countries are deeply incensed at the position assumed by the United States in regard to Chili.

Parliament was opened at London Tuesday.

Three emigrants were killed, ten wounded, and a number taken prisoners in a conflict with gendarmes on the Russian frontier. Black small-pox and spotted typhus fever prevail along the frontier, and Russian authorities are endeavoring to prevent the spread of those diseases into Germany.

The Rt. Hon. Sir James Caird, P. C., K. C. B., LL. D., F. R. S., died at London Wednesday.

The Empress of Germany is suffering from an attack of influenza.

In England, a bill which will be supported by several members of the government proposes to establish a labor department, under a minister of labor, as a special division of the government. The government also proposes to appoint a committee to examine Mr. Chamberlain's and other suggested schemes for old-age pensions for the working class.

The spread of the foot and mouth disease among cattle is creating a panic in the agricultural districts.

A congress of non-conformists, including delegates from Wesleyans, the Presbyterians, the Congregationalists, the Baptists, and others, has been arranged to meet in Manchester.

General Booth reviewed a procession of Salvationists a mile long.

The Rev. Donald Frazer, M. A., D. D., is dead. For the past twenty years he has taken a leading part in the Presbyterian church of England, and was twice moderator of the synod.

Admiral Sir Provo Wallis K. C. B., aged 100 years, the senior admiral of the British navy, is dead.

Prof. Virchow, of Germany, has published a protest against the doings of a man advertising in Cincinnati papers as "The great German physician, Karl Virchow Schick, who has just arrived from Berlin." Prof. Virchow says he has carefully kept lists of German graduates as physicians, and that his lists do not contain such a name. He wants the American papers to expose the man.

Numbers of Jews and Poles from Russian Poland are now passing through Cracow. They are making their way to the coast intending to embark for the United States and Argentine Republic. Relief grain only arrives at Samaria, Russia, in small quantities and is of bad quality, and insufficient for the needs of the people. The hospital overflows with cases of typhus fever, and another is being erected.

No Other Sarsaparilla possesses the combination, proportion and process which makes Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar to itself in merit and curative power. Be sure to get Hood's.

For a dinner pill and general family cathartic, we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

ASTHMA—CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO

HAVE YOU WRITTEN WE yet f Better write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. in. made with a pack of 60 splendid Silk pcs, assorted bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. st. Agts. Wanted. Lemarie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT B 34 CHICAGO, ILL.

WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homeopathic Chemists, London, England.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine
D. D., Pastor of the Centenary
M. E. Church, St. Louis,
Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.
Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 15th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Still Another Factory at HARVEY

A. J. SWEENEY & SON'S IRON WORKS from Wheeling, West Virginia, have agreed to move their extensive works to Harvey and employ men to whom first year's wages will be $180,000.00. Their location is just west of Academy Addition. This will bring hundreds more of mechanics to Harvey, and add largely to value of lots. Always buy Real Estate from first hands. Save commission to agents. Be sure you get a straight Warranty Deed.

Do not fail to secure plat of this wonderful Temperance town with our price lists of lots around the Academy—THE EDUCATIONAL CENTER—at once if you have not already done so.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 24

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,139.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments....	1
Enforce the Civil Rights Law.....	8
"The Jackasses of Science".....	8
Orangemen--An Inquiry.....	8
Those Masonic Murders.....	8
What Congress Found in Chicago.....	8
Congregationalism, Like John Brown's Soul, Marching On.....	9
The Case of Dr. Spicker.....	9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The New York State Convention.....	1
SELECTED:
What is Higher Criticism, and What its End?.....	3
Edison's Electric Fort.....	3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER.....	4
WASHINGTON LETTER.....	4
LITERATURE.....	6
REFORM NEWS:
From the New England Agent; Rev. W. Fenton in Minnesota; From the Washington Agent.....	5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Clap-trap Insurance Companies; The Shams of Freemasonry Unmasked; Wayside Notes.....	5,6
The Emma Willard Scholarship.....	9
IN BRIEF.....	7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.....	7
THE N. C. A.....	7
THE HOME.....	10
TEMPERANCE.....	11
BIBLE LESSON.....	12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	13
MARKETS.....	13
HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
FARM NOTES.....	15

The letter of our Washington agent in this issue is of unusual interest, as he is about engaging actively in the work of getting up an Anti-Secrecy Convention under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State Anti-Secrecy Association, of which Rev. Nathan Callender is president. Bro. Stoddard, as an organizer of State conventions in the interest of the anti-secrecy reform, has proved himself very successful, and we believe the Pennsylvania gathering, if left to his management, will be no exception. We hope to print the official call, with time and place, in our next issue.

We begin, this week, the publication of the several addresses delivered at the recent New York State Anti-Secrecy Convention at Binghamton. To-day we print that of Rev. Nathan Callender, of Montdale, Penn., on "Objections to be Met in Anti-masonic Work," which we heartily commend to the perusal of all anti-secrecy reformers. Next we purpose to present the forcible address of Rev. S. G. Shaw, of Walton, N. Y., on "Why We Oppose Secret Societies." These addresses and others are printed in the Cynosure by the special request of the convention. Our readers will enjoy them.

The action of the Faculty of Heidelberg (Reformed Church) University at Tiffin, Ohio, in ridding the institution of Greek-letter secret societies, by subjecting their members to discipline and then expelling those who were contumelious, is worthy of all praise. Briefly, the story of the case is as follows: Early in the fall session (1891), determined rebellion was manifested among the students. It grew out of a great desire on the part of certain students to unite with the Greek-letter fraternities. The Faculty protested, but neither the rules of the University, nor admonition, nor argument prevailed. A fraternity was organized, and a grand banquet at a hotel was given by the incorrigibles, at which open defiance of the Faculty found free expression. Later on, the fraternity students were invited to meet a committee of the Faculty. These interviews resulted in an invitation to twenty-nine of the rebels to withdraw from the University—a practical expulsion of seniors, juniors and freshmen, sons of honored alumni of the institution, including ministers and laymen of the Reformed Church. The Faculty, in its action stood 17 to 1 on the vote for expulsion. At last accounts but one of the expelled students had been re-instated, and that only on his promise of entire submission to the rules of the University. It was a great victory.

Appropos of the article on the eighth page of this issue, "Enforce the Civil Rights Law," the last number of the Baptist Vanguard, of Little Rock, Ark., has this paragraph: "While the black folks were at church in Pine Bluff last Sunday night worshipping God, the whites were out in the streets uttering fiendish yells, tearing down jail doors and lynching men who were only suspected of crime. Moral: The white man is outgrowing the Christian civilization, especially in the South, and more especially in Arkansas and Mississippi."

Chicago ministers of all Protestant denominations met in the First Methodist church, one day last week, and decided to form a "quarterly general conference" of all the pastors in the city. Rev. Dr. F. A. Noble, Congregationalist, presided, and Rev. J. R. Gow, Baptist, of Hyde Park, was chosen secretary. About two hundred gentlemen, clergy and laity, were present, representing nearly all local sects. After due deliberation an alliance was formed on the basis of the following document: "Convinced that a more general interchange of thought and co-operation of action between the pastors of the different evangelical denominations of this city would result in great benefit to the cause of religion and morality, and in view of the fact that the approaching Columbian World's Fair will necessarily impose on this city's responsibilities and create dangers which will call for the best wisdom of Christians of every name, the pastoral conferences of this city hereby agree to unite in joint session, at some place hereafter to be determined, the Monday following the second Sabbath in the months of February, June, September and November, for the consideration of such matters as shall be brought before them by proper committees." The organization was fully perfected, with the following board of officers, as "The Pastoral Alliance of the City of Chicago:" Rev. F. A. Noble, D.D., President; Revs. Moses Smith, W. H. Hindman, F. M. Bristol and H. O. Rowlands, Vice Presidents; Rev. J. R. Gow, Secretary. Among those present, who addressed the conference in reference to the work of the alliance, were Hon. C. C. Bonney, Chairman of the World's Fair Committee on Congresses, Rev. J. H. Barrows and Rev. Dr. S. I. McPherson. The Alliance has a great work before it.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate notes a "remarkable revival" in the Ohio Wesleyan University, 242 of whose 900 students at the opening of the present term were unconverted—not even church members. In noting the progress of the revival, the report says: "February 6 all the classes, many of the literary societies, and most of the fraternities (secret societies) held special prayer meetings. In six fraternities all the members save one are now Christians. The nine Greek-letter fraternities united Feb. 9 in what was probably the first pan-Hellenic prayer meeting ever held in America. In the senior class over ninety-five per cent are now Christians. Feb. 8 a third day of prayer was observed and proved still more effective. Over 200 of the 242 unconverted students have begun the Christian life." This is cheering news, if the salvation of these young men is genuine and lasting. The test will be found in them when the question is presented to their consciences, "Shall we continue to fraternize in our secret orders, or shall our fellowship with Christ make these societies and their follies distasteful to us?" If they forsake the lodges, we shall believe that they are saved from sin; if they continue to attend the fraternity meetings and participate in their proceedings as before, and still pose as Christians, it will be safe to deem them only saved in sin. Hundreds of Southern Negroes profess to have been converted, but their neighbors' chicken-roosts are not considered any safer from invasion than when these people served the devil openly. We shall see.

Now that the letters of trustworthy correspondents of religious papers are received and printed, a fair conception of the terrible earthquake in Japan last October may be formed. Extending from Tokio, near the Eastern Pacific coast, to Toyama, on the western coast, the shock was felt through 16,000 square miles of territory, while its greatest destructive power was confined to a space of about 4,400 square miles. Its duration there was seven minutes, and one observer says that he saw a street rise and fall in waves about eighteen inches high, and from eight to ten feet apart. The injury is estimated at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000; 10,000 persons were killed, and 200,000 were left homeless. Both the Japanese government and the citizens contributed freely to the aid of the sufferers, all classes included. The government appropriation was about $2,500,000. The district was a stronghold of Buddhism, and the people were bitterly opposed to Christianity and to foreigners generally; but the earthquake has greatly removed their prejudices. The foreigners not only raised money promptly for the relief of the natives, but nurses and physicians as promptly and voluntarily offered their services to the sufferers. The effect upon the religious situation of the district promises well for Christianity.

THE NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

ADDRESS OF REV. NATHAN CALLENDER, OF MONTDALE, PA.

[On the afternoon of Wednesday, February 3, 1892, Mr. Callender addressed the convention. His subject was: "Masonic Objections to Anti-masonic Work Stated and Answered." The convention immediately requested a copy of it for publication in the Christian Cynosure. The address was never fully placed in manuscript before its delivery; but Mr. Callender spoke nearly as follows:]

D. L. Moody and Joseph Cook took the position that oath-bound secretism should be kept out of the churches. In harmony with their position, I am here, I suppose, as the representative of the only regular Baptist church in Pennsylvania which bars secretism from fellowship. Had you a room stored with sweetmeats and resolved to keep out the rats, you would close every avenue against them. You would hardly say to the rat fraternity, we have in that room stores of sweet things of which rats are fond, and would prefer you would just keep out, and let them be. No, you would stop every hole through which a very young rat or mouse might crawl. Though the whole squeaking fraternity should join to hold an indignation meeting and disturb your repose. You would say, "Put (not turn) the rascals out."

The Masonic objections to be here considered may be counted on the fingers of one hand.

"You are making Masons," is the first, and perhaps the most prominent. Perhaps we ought to thank our accusers for the compliment. We had almost thought that our Masonic friends believed us too insignificant to be a cause to any effect, however inferior thoughtful men may view it. But by this statement we are doing something. Causes and effects are multiform, and vary from the most minute and insignificant to those of the grandest and the greatest.

So now we come to consider the magnitude and character of the work ascribed to us: "making Masons. Is there any personage on this round earth equal to these august beings? Have they not exhausted all the lofty words in all languages in describing these sublime kings? If the divine names and regal titles lavished on these awfully majestic beings are not misapplied, surely we have the greatest possible reason to be proud of our work.

Please next to view our sublime work in another aspect.

By the best Masonic authority, we are assured that every true Mason is emphatically of necessity a true Christian. Such is the claim of most, if not all, the books on Masonry. It is written in the Bible that there is in the "presence of the angels of God rejoicing over one sinner that repenteth." As to the repentance of the initiate, we do think he has the best of reasons to repent in "dust and ashes" till "he comes to light" and gets on his clothes. But we are told that we make Masons in whole batches, so that we create a great demand for "the Masonic robe" and lambskins up to a grand boom. Surely the Masonic furnishing houses ought "pass a vote of thanks" in our behalf. But devote a thought to our sublime mission! Making Masons, that is Christians, and so recruiting the lodges. Once more; we are making Christians who cannot "fall from grace." Once a Mason always a Mason; once a Christian, always a Christian. If these things are so, oh, ye Anti-masons, be diligent, "always abounding in the work of the" lodge.

At this point we must confess that we are making Masons. Our land is overflowing with counterfeits. Speculative Masonry—what is it? It requires no material, no real work—only lodge-traps, such as compass, square, gavel, etc., and a poor candidate, "neither naked nor clothed," who, after he gets on his pants, comes out a full-fledged Mason. But we do not make this sort of Masons. We claim to have made many more Masons than our most zealous accusers claim, and of a superior type. The simple little prefix "anti" designates the genuine Mason—the real operative Mason. Of these the N. C. A. has made a million. They have a wide range—a broad field of material. Of "eaves-droppers and cowans" they can make them by the ten thousands—of men, real men, women and children—of speculative Masons, repelled and sent out of the lodges by force of an enlightened Bible conscience, by tens of thousands. In 1826 to 1830 we had the honor to make from 50,000 Masons, 45,000 genuine ones, and drive the remaining 5,000 to the land of the slaveholders' rebellion, to nestle in dens of Ku Kluxism, and other dark places. Such was the work of Anti-masons sixty years ago. Passing now from this Masonic objection to another, we will "take a collection" from our liberal accusers, in part compensation to us for our timely and very efficient service in filling the lodges with "free and accepted Masons."

Brother, how much can you afford in helping on the work? Surely you will not refuse to help us in helping yourselves.

2. The second objection to be considered, is: "We don't like your methods of opposition to the orders." There is a right way of doing things. If you would do your work wisely and judiciously, we Masons and sympathizers with the craft will not complain; but we despise you and your methods."

Allow us to thank our accusers for the tacit admission that there is a right way of opposing lodgery, only we are not in possession of that secret. To "cowans," it seems mysterious that there is a right way of opposing righteousness. Of course they would have us believe that Masonry is the "center of truth," and of all goodness.

Again, we cannot see why our methods and ways should be so cruelly censured, since we are such a help to them, and that in spite of our intentions to do the exact contrary—to help them to disband, and surrender their charters, as we did sixty years ago. It would seem that our methods and ways are bound to succeed, despite our intentions to overthrow the lodge. Will not the sublime orders show us how to do this work? Just here some evil genius has suggested that we are to follow Masonic examples as to methods, and ways. Should we adopt their methods with Morgan, Miller, Samuel D. Green, Forgie and Rathbun, perhaps they would esteem us more highly for our work's sake. We are assured on good authority that the "Masons do not mean to kill any more," and in any case we feel a strong repugnance to all such methods and shall utterly fail to come up (?) to the example of that divine fraternity. We think it would not be "for the good of the order." We prefer to "let on the light" as our method of operation, and leave the result to God.

3. A very prominent objection to our work is that we divide the church, etc. In answer to this, much could be said and many things ought to be said. H. W. Beecher has said: "The church was built to disturb the peace of man," but often it does not perform its duty for fear of disturbing the peace of the church. What kind of artillery practice would that be which declined to fire for fear of kicking over the gun carriages or waking up the sentinels asleep at their posts." The church needs separation from the world. With the world in the church as at this time separation is a necessity. As D. L. Moody has said, we need a thousand men to go through the land and cry, separation, separation. As Sam Jones has remarked, "Better save a splinter of the church by Bible separation than lose it all." If the church continues to fellowship the anti-Christ of secretism for fifty years to come, as in the thirty years past, nothing will remain worth saving. Already it has, in a "large degree, lost its savor," and is henceforth fit only to be "cast out and trodden under foot of men." Already it is trodden under foot by profane and ungodly men, ministry and laity. One-third of the membership of so-called churches fully devoted to God—"walking with God,"—would have ten-fold more honor than the church of today.

But what means this lamentation over a divided church, by those who affirm the lodge to be as good or better than the church? On this base assumption, let the inferior give place to the superior institution. What do Christless men in the lodges care for the institution of Jesus—the church? With three lodges to each church, cannot the lodges furnish homes for all, and so land them in some "grand lodge above?" On such a presumption, let the churches go. About as well that the churches, honeycombed by lodgery, should go if they cannot be divided, "the precious from the vile." But what would be done with the nine out of every ten who cannot join the lodge? Let Masonry and its legion hordes answer.

But who divides the church? Does the man of God, who refuses to fellowship a Christless false worship, and makes his honest protest against "the unfruitful works of darkness," divide the church? Is not the church which admits the lodge anti-Christ into its fellowship divided in the selfsame act? What is our hope, but Christ within? Let anti-Christ in, and you are divided. How? By the presence of another element—another master. This is also true of the heart. It is divided in the act of admitting the rival. The Ark of God would not stay over night peaceably with Dagon, a Masonic deity. It broke his neck. No man can live in fellowship with anti-Christ, and not suffer by spiritual contamination. Mark well the fact, the schismatic is the one who brings in the element which antagonizes Christ and the purity of his church. We have a right, we are bound, to resist an anti-Christ in the fold of the Lamb of God. The man who raises the breeze of opposition to Baal is not the church-divider. The church was divided when Baal entered. Ten thousand examples in the history of the church illustrate this truth. I am in a peaceful home. No dividing cause is within, till a highwayman enters to rob and kill. I rise to the emergency, and a grand fracas ensues. I turn the rascal out, but break up the furniture and damage the house indefinitely. My very peaceful neighbors blame me for raising a rumpus in my house. Lay all the blame to me, but turn the robbers out, though you break the clock, turn the piano upside down, and stave to atoms all your china ware.

Did Moses divide the church when he made inquiry—"Who is on the Lord's side?" Did Gideon divide the church when, by God's own command, he selected his 300 soldiers to take the city? Did Josiah divide the church in purging

Israel of its Baal worships, and destroying her legions of idols? Did Elijah divide the church when he put Jezebel and her false prophets to the test, and then slew them all? Did John the Baptist divide the church when he said to the proud and self-righteous Pharisees, "Generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?"

Did Jesus divide his own church in separating a spiritual church from a proud and Christ-hating people, much like the Christless, lodge-ridden legions of to-day? Were Luther and Bunyan and Wesley and Whitefield church-dividers? Was Jonathan Edwards a schismatic, when for his own devotion to truth and righteousness he was driven by a profligate church away to a God-honoring mission to the wild Indians? And how about slavery? Was it the godly souls who resisted the "sum of all villainies" or slavery and its criminal hordes, that divided the churches fifty years ago? So now is it the anti-lodge people, or, is it oath-bound secretism which is disturbing the peace of Zion? Let candid people answer.

4. But we must hasten to the next objection. We are reminded that the lodge is twin sister to Christianity! What heaven-daring arrogance!

First, let us ask, has Christianity anywhere on earth, or in heaven, even, a brother or a sister, much less a twin-sister? To abate the claim we are told that the lodge is the handmaid to Christianity!

There can be no comparison between Masonry and Christianity, save that of the boldest contrast. I cannot conceive of two things that, to me, look so little alike. No one by comparing them would even dream of them as related. The contrast is so bold and well-defined that we are almost tempted to put the two into two pictures, but our space is too short, and I must forbear.

Could I conceive of two institutions less alike, I would name them. Of course, the lodge is not pure and undisguised malignancy, though in its organic laws it is worse than its worst members. Few, if any, could be found in the lodges, or out of them, who would be bad enough to literally execute its laws—not even among savages. We know what we affirm here, and do it deliberately. However, Satan is not a fool. He offers to men no cup of pure and unmingled poisons. He is a malignant fisher of men, "seeking whom he may devour." He mixes to suit the taste, as the fisher chooses his bait. Hence in the legions of secret orders, while all contain poison enough to damage if not to ruin the victim, some contain more of the Masonic virus, and some less. Masonry is archetypic, so to put it; the embryonic cause of all secretism; a sort of bioplast of all the Masonic progeny of all sorts. Were I put to the test to find a twin-sister of Masonry this side of the abyss of all the doomed, I should say the liquor saloon is that sister—as closely related as the "Siamese twins." So much for the twin-sister or, the twin-brother, of speculative Freemasonry.

5. We come, finally, to notice the last objection noted in this discourse. "Let Masonry alone, and it will die of itself."

Though Masonic in its bearings, this objection is made more by those we designate as Jack-masons. Real Masons would hardly admit that their pet institution can die. In their view, it is immortal, as well as very ancient. Masons, however, want to be let alone, and so did the demons of our Saviour's day. Let us now look at the logic of this Masonic prayer, "let us alone, etc. Why will not this apply to all the bad things of this or any other age? Let all the bad things alone, and they will die the sooner. This doctrine would have given us no Elijahs, no Pauls, no John the Baptist, and indeed, no Jesus Christ. Demons knew too well that Jesus came not to let vice alone, but as the man of war against evil. "Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, has anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." No being on earth, or in heaven, is as aggressive against all badness as the Son of God. He bated it more intensely, and more impartially, than the best of earth or the best in heaven (save the Father and Holy Ghost,) and for that reason, is the most aggressive character against bad institutions, and bad beings, in the universe. With the let-alone theory, we could have no moral heroes, the real jewels of all the past and present in history. No Wycliffe and Tyndale of Bible translations. No Luther, no Bunyan, no Wesley, no Whitefield, no C. H. Spurgeon, no Wm. Lloyd Garrison, no Wendell Phillips, no Sumner, no Lincoln, no loyal army, to conquer the slaveholders' rebellion. No C. G. Finney, no Joseph Cook, no A. J. Gordon, and many more, to grapple with the lodge mania of to-day.

By this theory of leaving evils of our time to die of their accord, we are reminded of Paddy and his dog. The story is that Paddy had a dog with bark enough to run a tannery. He kept his master awake nights. Provoked by his ceaseless noise, he sprang from bed, and in his night-clothes, on a bitter cold night, seized his dog and held him fast. Not returning to his couch, his wife Maggie came to the window and cried to Pat to come in from the cold. He replied: "Hush, Maggie, and get into bed, till I finish my job. I'm just going to hold the creature and let him freeze to death." The sequel was a sad one. Next morning Maggie found herself a widow, while the dog, true to his calling, stood, still barking, at his master's frozen body, with bark enough left to last him a lifetime.

An American Indian, when asked what is "original sin," answered, "laziness." This let-alone theory will fit lazy men exactly. It would convert the mental and the moral world into a dead sea broader and deeper than any ocean, to swarm with all sorts of reptiles, and creeping things, more numerous than Egyptian idols, portrayed on the walls of the temple in Jerusalem in the days of Ezekiel. All the great men of the ages have been developed, if not made, by an honest and heroic tug against the sins of the age in which they lived, while the let-alone classes have formed the parasites of society.

WHAT IS HIGHER CRITICISM, AND WHAT ITS END?

In taking up this question, which is of vital interest to all who believe in the church of God, there are several possible misapprehensions which should be most carefully avoided. Our question is not whether the Bible will stand all friendly or adverse criticism. Nor is it whether God will overrule that movement which styles itself higher criticism, to the glory of his own name and the good of his believing people. Nor is our inquiry whether men have a right to use their reason in judging of the Bible's claim to the faith and obedience of men. Voltaire's dwelling became a depot of the Genevan Bible Society; Drew Theological Seminary occupies a park which was adorned by a man who hated all Christians in general but the Methodists particularly; and the Y. M. C. A. of Peoria are now housed on the lot where Robert Ingersoll wrote his speech on "The Gods." Of course higher criticism will not harm God or the Bible, nor those who let it alone. The question is whether this method of handling Holy Scripture will help or harm the men who become its disciples. In short, is the movement a scholarly, reverent, thoughtful one? are its results thus far true? and are its tendencies encouraging?

The question at issue is one of logic, and not one of grammar or rhetoric. President Harper freely admitted this in his recent address in Farwell Hall, Chicago. It is claimed by some critics that modern scholars of German, English and American birth are better equipped in Oriental scholarship than the Jewish and Christian students of former times. This is probably a mistake. It is doubtful if any American Hebraist could write a page of Hebrew without idiomatic errors which would be instantly detected by an intelligent Jewish lad of fifteen. But if we admit that modern critics know the Hebrew and related tongues better than older scholars, it would not follow that their conclusions are correct, or that ordinary people cannot judge of them. If a certain phrase occurs six times in one part of Isaiah, and sixty times in another, the question is, What does this prove? If one part of the book deals in threatened judgments and another in promised mercy, the same question recurs. And the best judge will be the man who has the broadest mind, the most common sense. The mere specialist, that is the man of narrow training, is least competent to form an opinion from the facts. Prof. Ladd says ("What is the Bible?" p. 300): "It is, of course, impossible to give to the reader of the Bible, who is not familiar with the Hebrew and with the facts and laws of historical criticism, a satisfactory statement of the evidence upon which the tradition of the Mosaic origin of the Pentateuch has been abandoned." If this is true, it is simply because there is no satisfactory evidence; the satisfactory statement is the easiest thing in the world, if the evidence is at hand. It is not scholarly to avoid submitting arguments to the test of common sense on the pretense that a person must be a Hebraist in order to appreciate them.

It is also proper to bear in mind the fact that this self-styled higher criticism is no new thing. It has a history. It began among German rationalists; assaulted first the New Testament; was defeated and then turned to the Old Testament, using on it the very methods which had already been discredited when applied to the New. This would not prove that its methods are unreliable and its conclusions profane and sacrilegious; but it is one reason for regarding it with suspicion and following it no farther than reason warrants. It should also be said in this connection that the habits of German scholars are not conducive to the clearest, best thinking. If anything has been proved by science, it is that the use of alcoholic and narcotic poisons is inconsistent with the finest intellectual and spiritual work. I would not speak unkindly of that noble German race from whom we are all descended, and to whom we owe so much, but brains continually under the influence of tobacco and beer are certainly not to be followed without serious misgivings. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. Professors employed by the State to teach theology, because of distinguished attainments in Semitic tongues, who continually subject the mind to the active poisons above indicated, may lead us right; but then we should require evidence aside from their own opinions. We need also to reflect that the churches in the land of higher criticism have ceased to influence the mass of the people, except as they may do so indirectly. The men who come to us from this land are largely atheist. In their own country those who go to church in the morning, usually spend the afternoon in the beer-garden and the evening in the theatre. I do not condemn them for so doing. I do not discuss those customs at this time. I content myself with saying that if critical treatment of the Bible produces in our country the results which have in some way obtained in that one, those who love the Christian American community will have no reason to be gratified.

It is well, also, to bear in mind the fact that higher criticism, so-called, is one in principle and is likely to stand or fall as a whole. The earnest and devout Christians who have been allured into its beginnings shrink from its conclusions. Yet if the premises are sound the conclusions must follow. Prof. Ladd says ("What is the Bible?" p. 401): "The autograph copies of the New Testament writings had perished so that no trace of them appears, before the individual books had come to be received as of canonical value. It is not likely that either their authors or readers regarded them with anything approaching the interest we should bestow upon them. Their authors, or the amanuenses who wrote for them, were liable to any of the mistakes which occur in the construction of all ancient manuscripts. . . . Indeed, so close is the relation which exists between the revelation and inspiration of the Biblical writers, and the revelation and inspiration of the discoverers of poetic or scientific truth, that the differences between the two concern chiefly the nature of the truth divinely imparted." ("What is the Bible?" p. 429.) "There is abundant reason to believe that many other books were written by the authors of the canonical writings, and by other authors than they which were as truly inspired as are the canonical writings themselves." (Ibid. p. 439.) Rev. Page Hopps says (Inspiration: a Clerical Symposium, p. 81), "The prophets claimed the 'Word of the Lord' for all kinds of trivialities, and I must add, for not a few absurdities." Most of the critics, while denying the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch or Hexateuch, as they seem proud to iterate, admit that he furnished some of the material for it, especially the Ten Commandments. Wellhausen, however, seeks to prove that he did not furnish even these, while Kuenen thinks that the law in general was Mosaic, though it may be needful to reject some of the commands as non-authentic. It is only a step farther to charge Jeremiah with forging the book of Deuteronomy and the priests with inventing a code and palming it off upon the Jews and the world as having come down from the times of the Exodus.

Now from the beginning of this "free," "fearless," "candid" criticism to the end of it there is only one principle involved. It is that men of this age have a right to guess what God would reveal to certain men at certain times; whether he can or would reveal anything at any time, and then put their guesses against the unbroken testimony of more than three thousand years. It is clear to any thoughtful reader of these "critical" writers that they desire us to accept their suppositions or declarations in the face of all testimony, and then to make sure that we will do so, some of them tell us that they cannot explain to common people the reasons for rejecting the belief of the church because we are not well equipped in Hebrew and the laws and facts of historical criticism.

We have not the slightest concern as to the end of these writings which charge Jeremiah with forgery, deny that Moses wrote of Jesus, and that David sang these songs which echo and re-echo through the hearts of Christians of all ages since his time. If we can learn anything from history, these theories are destined to the intellectual rag-bag, and will within twenty-five years share the repose of the theories of Strauss and Baur. Nor do we think that these guesses would injure the church if our teachers of theology and preachers would simply look at them in their historical relations and submit them to the test of common sense. But if they are viewed with an awe-struck reverence which belongs, not to them, but to the august documents they so carelessly handle; and if we accept some of their unhistorical views and endeavor to deny others equally well vouched for, the higher criticism will destroy the usefulness of a whole generation of preachers and the peace of many Christian hearts before it goes to its own place.—Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard, in the Advance.

EDISON'S ELECTRIC FORT.

Thos. A. Edison furnishes the following description of his new invention for either killing or conquering an army by electricity. It should revolutionize the art of war.

"It is simple as A, B, C. I have never spoken or written about it before. With twenty-five men in a fort I can make that fort absolutely impregnable as far as assault is concerned, and I should only need twenty-five men in the fort to do it. This is not guess-work, but a matter of absolutely scientific certainty. In fact, twenty-five men would be a very liberal garrison. Some years ago, when the wires, loaded with heavy electric charges, began to go up everywhere, I predicted that there would be danger of the firemen receiving deadly shocks by the electricity running down the streams of water which might cross the wires. The insurance people laughed at the idea. But I tried it on a cat, and the cat and I found my theory to be true. That is to say, I did, and the cat found it out if there is another world for cats. He never knew anything about it in this world.

"In each fort I would put an alternating machine of 20,000 volts capacity. One wire would be grounded. A man would govern a stream of water of about 400 pounds pressure to the square inch, with which 20,000 volts of alternating current would be connected. The man would simply move this stream of water back and forth with his hand, playing on the enemy as they advanced and mowing them down with absolute precision.

"Every man touched by the water would complete the circuit, get the full force of the alternating current and never know what happened him. The men trying to take the fort by assault, though they might come by tens of thousands against a handful, would be cut to the ground beyond any hope of escape. Foreign soldiers undertaking to whip America could walk around such a fort as mine, but they never could go through it. It would not be necessary to deal out absolute death unless the operator felt like it. He could modify the current gently so as simply to stun everybody, then walk outside his fort, pick up the stunned Generals and others worth keeping for ransom or exchange, make prisoners also of the others, if convenient, or if not convenient turn on the full force of the current, play the hose on them once more and send them to the happy hunting grounds for good."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Dr. Gordon on the life of Spurgeon.—A visit to the Boston W. C. T. U.—Anti-secret meetings for women.—A double surprise.—Song in the anti-secrecy movement.

Boston can never cease to hold her own unique place among American cities. This is not because she is one of the oldest, for St. Augustine (Fla.) is older still, with historic remains that date back more than half a century beyond the time when the streets of our New England Athens, in all their narrow, bewildering crookedness, were what tradition affirms them to have been originally—just cow-paths, and nothing more. I am afraid those Puritan cows were not orthodox, else they would surely have made straighter paths for their feet. And isn't it really strange, when one comes to think about it, that men who morally and doctrinally abhorred all devious ways should have tolerated such a labyrinth?—as winding as the trail of the old serpent, and as mazy as the evolutions of the Higher Criticism. It is her past that makes Boston stand out from other cities. She has always held fast with a curious tenacity, which the shock of the Revolution hardly disturbed, to the traditions of her birth-place; and as one illustration of this, Sir Edwin Arnold's remark may be cited, that, Boston people speak the purest English in the world with but one exception, and that is in the County of Lincolnshire, of whose old seaport town of Boston the Hub is the famous daughter and namesake. Her early divines, her Eliots and Cotton Mathers, breathed the same air with Baxter and Bunyan and Henry, the very sound of whose names comes as snatches of holy hymns out of the darkness. Every historic memory that adds to her renown seems to stretch a shadowy hand across the water to find its double on English soil.

I was reminded of this last Sabbath, as I sat in Dr. Gordon's church and heard him preach on the Life of Spurgeon;—sympathetically, as one only could who personally knew and loved the great preacher, and eloquently, as one never can unless he feels in himself that affinity which comes of striving after the same ideal. I never can hear Spurgeon, but now I am thankful to have had the next best thing.

After giving a brief sketch of his conversion, and the many institutions that, with no endowment behind them, he carried on at immense cost, looking to the Lord alone to supply his needs, Dr. Gordon said: "He could take this attitude because he invested himself and all he had in the work. Even when a testimonial of $25,000 was presented to him, he said he should give it all away; and he did. Worldly people might call it foolish, imprudent, to save nothing for himself, and live from hand to mouth. But it was from God's hand to his mouth. Blessed is the man who, either for himself or for those dependent upon him, is obliged to say, 'Give us this day our daily bread.'"

He also spoke of his apostolic simplicity; of the great Tabernacle, with no organ, no choir, but where, as the sound of many waters, the Psalmist's ideal of worship was realized and all the people praised God; of his prayers, childlike, brief, yet so wonderfully comprehensive that he seemed to take up the griefs and woes of every individual present in the arms of his mighty faith; and he gave the opening sentence of one which illustrated his power to put volumes of theology in a few words:—"Oh, Lord, have mercy upon us. Thou knowest that before we were regenerate we lived in sin and loved it, but now, though we sometimes lapse into sin, we loathe it." "Do not Christians fall into sin?" was asked him at one of his meetings. "Yes, they do; but a Christian is like a man at sea. He may often fall on deck without falling overboard." "Cannot a man attain sinless perfection?" Ans.: "I have seen a good many people who thought themselves perfect, but their neighbors did not think so; and I have seen a few whom their neighbors thought perfect, but the trouble was they did not think so themselves." "The Gospel lives by being killed, and prospers through defeat." "God builds no ships but what he intends to send to sea." His sermons were full of such wonderful gems. Dr. Gordon said, in closing, "that he believed tremendously;" and after quoting R. W. Emerson's remark before he died, that "what New England wants is more Puritanism and less of dapper liberality," he added: "If we sneer at Martin Luther for believing so strongly in the devil as to throw his inkstand at him, it is a great deal better than to use your inkstand to prove there is no personal devil." Altogether, it was a noble and every-way fitting eulogy on the great preacher; but the best of it was that, unlike most eulogies, it left the hearer thinking not so much of the greatness of Spurgeon as of God who worked so mightily through him.

Mrs. Gordon presides with grace and dignity over the Boston W. C. T. U., where her consecrated spirit and fine executive ability have a grand sphere in which to work. I had the pleasure, on Monday, of attending, for the first time, one of its sessions. It is like a beehive with no drones. The very air seems laden with the spiritual electricity engendered by so many earnest, busy women coming together, each with some plan or item, a psalm or a doctrine, to contribute to the general store. At the president's request Mrs. Stoddard conducted the devotional exercises, giving a remarkable inspiring and helpful Bible reading on Courage. This single visit was enough to convince me that her quiet work, together with that of her faithful ally, Sister Powers, has resulted in a strong under-tide of anti-secret feeling among the ladies of the Union, which is there and potent, even if it does not often come to the surface. Dear Mother Rockwood's face was (as it ever is) a benediction. Mrs. John G. Wooley, a sweet-voiced little woman, read an account of the Minneapolis convention. Mrs. Osborne Harris, of course, sang beautifully. Some touching testimonies were given pertaining to rescue work, and the intense interest manifested impressed me with a fresh sense of that ever-throbbing heart of motherhood which from the first beginning has been the essential soul of the white-ribbon movement.

The anti-secret meeting "for women only," on Friday afternoon, in Mrs. Powers' pleasant parlor, was well attended, considering that various causes combined to keep some away who had hoped to come. I addressed them on the subject: "Why every woman should investigate the lodge question for herself." Mrs. E. Trask Hill, of the Woman's Voice, who was present with her daughter, spoke a few words expressive of her warm sympathy and interest. Mrs. Stoddard is now holding a similar series of meetings in Newton every Saturday afternoon. Wherever they are held, they attract a class of thinking women who, once converted, will lead others into the light. The idea of holding them was a happy inspiration, which may well be followed in other places, North, South, East, or West.

Joseph Cook's lecture at Tremont Temple must lay over till another time; for so crowded with good things were the few days I have just been spending at the Hub that it is impossible to put them all into a single letter; and when writing one's impressions of Boston's Monday Lecturer, especially if heard for the first time, one wants space that is in some degree commensurate with the man. "No pent up Utica" will do when one sets out to describe Joseph Cook.

I have found out to my satisfaction what I have always dimly suspected, that people outside the lodge can keep a secret about as well as any who are inside. Surely no candidate for initiation into Masonic mysteries was ever more effectually blindfolded than was your New England correspondent last Monday evening. She had certainly noticed that secrecy was in the air; but being given to understand that a testimonial was to be presented to Sister Ella Carter, whose rare gift of song has so often enriched our gathering, it never struck her as having the smallest personal bearing. On the other hand, Miss Carter—and let all lodge men who tell us that the female sex can't be made Masons because they can't keep a secret, behold and consider what two artful women like Sisters Stoddard and Powers are capable of in the way of hoodwinking their innocent and unsuspecting victims—was led to believe the same thing about myself, while she remained in a similar state of blissful ignorance regarding her own personal share therein. When Bro. Stoddard, in behalf of friends of the cause, presented me with an envelope containing $67.56, it was indeed a genuine "suprise;" and no less so to Sister Carter, when Mrs. Powers, in appropriate words in which she tenderly and touchingly alluded to her mother, the evangelist, Mrs. Carter, now deceased, presented her also with a substantial token of love and esteem "from her many friends." She thanked them in a pleasant little speech, in which she said that she "was not versed in the etiquette of surprises, this being the first she had ever had in her life." And for me—what could I say except to thank from a full heart the dear friends who have so kindly "ministered to my necessities?" I wish I could answer personally every one in that package of letters which Bro. Stoddard put into my hand, the reading of which almost brought the tears to my eyes as I felt how undeserving I was of so much kindness. But, dear friends,—for I feel as if this letter was to every one of you individually—let me say this: You have so surrounded me ever since I entered upon this work with your prayers and your loving sympathy, that, like one shod with asbestos who walks unhurt over red-hot plowshares, the defaming of the enemy has fallen on ears that did not hear, and if sometimes "the way has been desert," its weariness has not been felt. God bless you, every one!

One very pleasing feature was the singing by Miss Carter of an Anti-secret Missionary Hymn, dedicated to Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and written by Mrs. Daniel Powers. A reform that can sing itself into the hearts of the people is sure of victory. Already we have, in Mrs. Powers, one to write, and in Miss Carter one to sing, the songs of anti-secrecy. God may yet use their consecrated gifts as his most effectual instrument in making the walls of the lodge Jericho to totter and fall.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17, 1892.

A unique address delivered by Mr. A. A. Stagg, the Yale College athlete, who is often spoken of as the "pitcher-preacher," was listened to by an audience which filled every seat in the Y. M. C. A. hall on Sunday afternoon. "I am going to say some things," he began, "this afternoon which go to make up the successful athlete and the successful Christian." Then he made an interesting comparison of the athlete and the Christian, enlarging upon what he considered necessary in both, the first requisite being enthusiasm. "One must be enthusiastic in every sport to succeed. To be successful Christians you must have the same enthusiasm. To follow Christ one must be enthusiastic. Perseverance is the second requisite for the successful athlete and Christian. It is a long word and has a long history dating back to the early days. To the perseverance of Christopher Columbus is due the discovery of America. Jacob worked seven years for a wife, and then he didn't get her. He did not give up, but worked seven years more. . . . Men cannot do anything without this quality. The successful athlete is not made in a day, nor is the successful Christian. We must fight the things that are in us and break down the evil to get near to God." The third element the speaker said was "head work, good judgment, common sense," and the fourth and last "courage," without which success in life is impossible. He closed with a strong exhortation to his hearers to ask God to give them courage to do right. An enjoyable feature of this meeting was the singing, led by Mr. F. M. Lamb, the widely-known gospel-singer, whose rendition of "In the Crimson Flush of Morning" was sublime.

Considerable feeling has been shown by those who have been given hearings for and against the bill to prohibit the sale of "futures and options," which is now before the House Committee on Agriculture. The farmers represented by the several organizations with which they are connected, are practically a unit in favoring a bill, and the brokers, whose business it will affect, are opposed to it.

The Senate has passed a joint resolution providing for an immediate joint investigation by the Senate and House Committees on Immigration of the recent introduction of typhus fever in New York and Brooklyn by the admission of a number of Russian-Hebrew immigrants, supposed to have been done in violation of the immigration law enacted by the last Congress.

Senator Paddock's pure food bill, which was before the last Congress, has been taken up by the Senate, and will be the regular business of that body until it is disposed of; that is, it will be taken up at 2 o'clock on every day that the Senate is in session until a final vote is taken on it. Senator Kyle introduced a resolution directing the Commissioner of Labor to make a full investigation in all cities of 200,000 or more inhabitants of the occupations, earnings, sanitary surroundings and essential facts necessary to show the condition of the residents of what are known as the "slums" of those cities. The active workers in our home missionary organizations are already in possession of much of this information.

The Canadian Reciprocity Commissioners returned home this week; and although no official announcement has been made by the State Department, it is not believed that they accomplished anything by their visit.

Rev. Dr. Butler preached last Sunday on the work and objects of the Christian Endeavor Society, the occasion being the fourth anniversary of the society of his church.

The Behring Sea Commission continues to sit daily. It is expected that its work will be completed within a few days, although there seems to be a doubt about the conclusion being entirely satisfactory to either side. *

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE WASHINGTON AGENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Having attended to personal and N. C. A. interests here, I plan another visit to Western Pennsylvania, with a view to arranging and holding, if the Lord shall open the way, a State Convention in the Keystone State.

I have written to several friends in that section, and all replies received thus far are favorable.

A letter has just come from Rev. Z. S. Weaver, a Presbyterian minister, in which he says: "I will be glad to help you at any convention you may arrange." That means a speech and an account of his present conflict with the powers of darkness in his own church. Bro. Weaver found that when the lodge and the church prayer-meeting were held on the same evening, the lodge men attended the former. Like an honest shepherd, he "cried aloud" and warned the people. He gives the result in his letter thus: "My sermons here had a good effect, and though they stirred up some bad blood, they brought out of the order the most prominent man in it, and put the matter in such bad repute that church people, at least, who are out will remain out."

Bro. Nathan Callender, President of the Pennsylvania State Anti-Secrecy Association, spoke of his desire for this convention when attending that in New York State. He will issue the call as soon as a suitable time and place is arranged. Any in Western Pennsylvania who may desire such a convention in their town will please write to me at once, as I expect to visit Pittsburg soon after this reaches the Cynosure readers.

That brother in Cameron, W. Va., who wrote for the last Cynosure about Masonry and "The Oily Man," will, I trust, come to this convention and help look into the tricks that are dark.

Another newly-married couple are to favor us with a visit next week. They will be readers of the Cynosure, so that the wife need have no fears of the lodge getting her husband.

W. B. STODDARD.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, Feb. 16, 1892.

A very pleasant event in the line of our Parlor Talks occurred last evening. Miss E. E. Flagg being in the city, the friends took it as an occasion to give her a kindly greeting, along with a more substantial though not less acceptable token of their regards. Several of her friends at a distance had been notified of the prospective event, and had testified to their approval by kindly words and generous offerings. The footing showed, at the bottom of a column of 48 names, just $75, which was a perfect surprise, but was received with a neat little speech, in which the absent donors were remembered with those present in hearty thanks.

Miss Ella Carter, of Newton, who is warmly enlisted in every good word and work, and whose musical talent, instrumental and vocal, has added much to the interest of our meetings, was surprised with a merited tribute of $10 from friends here. Mrs. Daniel Powers accompanied this tribute with words, "fitly chosen," to which a tender and feeling response was made by the recipient. A song by Bro. Wm. F. Davis and Bro. Williams followed, when brief impromptu remarks were in order. Bro. Gunn spoke of his interest in the work, and told how in his pastoral and evangelical labors he had found the secret societies a serious obstacle in church and mission work.

Dr. Dorman told how he was induced to become a Mason; something of what he learned of its work in the army; of the impressions he received when looking upon the silly performances inside the lodge-room, and the display of feather and regalia before the public. He has long been averse to the lodge, but felt bound by his obligation until Sister Powers called his attention to Leviticus 5: 4, when he felt that the Lord had set him free, and he proposes henceforth to use his liberty as "free in Christ." The doctor, in closing, said: "I have enjoyed more real pleasure in the sociability of this evening, than in all my experience in the lodge."

Bro. McIntire gave his experience as a servant of sin and of his deliverance from bondage into the glorious liberty of a child of God. A brief "talk" by your N. E. agent, on the work and methods, was followed by Bro. Davis in his elegant and emphatic style. His arraignment of unscriptural methods in Christian work, the maladministration of civil affairs, the assumption of titles and the blasphemy of the lodge and the terrible guilt of all, and especially of ministers in complicity with this system of pagan iniquity, will not soon be forgotten by those who listened to his words. The opening song, by Miss Ella Carter, was written by Sister Powers for the occasion.

After the reading of Psalm 121, Bro. Gunn led in prayer, and at 9:30 the exercises closed with the doxology and benediction; thus consigning to the past one more among the happy events that have so frequently characterized our work here in New England. J. P. STODDARD

REV. W. FENTON IN MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 17, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The devil's imps are quite busy with the churches, and even with the Salvation Army.

When about to enter a church, on last Sabbath evening, there stood in the pulpit a Presbyterian pastor, under oath to have his throat cut if he did not forever conceal the lying blasphemies of Freemasonry. I turned away and went to the Salvation Army meeting, and there found the devil, or his angels, on the platform, and heard and saw the truth hissed off. The captain gently reproves the hissing, and while bidding the truth depart, encourages the venom of asps beneath the tongue that hisses. The acting sergeant major, who leads the street marches, sat on the middle of the platform and hissed most loudly and most bitterly. He belongs to a secret society, advocates it amongst the Army soldiers, and others have joined. He had induced one to pay the $5 entrance fee, but the wife of the latter and others prevailed upon him to sacrifice his $5 rather than join.

That society, so one of its members told me, has an altar, a system of worship, uses the Bible, has a chaplain and a burial service. In short, he told me it was a religious society, with an insurance attachment, so that his widow will get $2,000 when he dies. And that is the religion that generates the venom that made the hissing on the platform last Sabbath evening, when the infamous secrets of Freemasonry were mentioned.

Some time ago the Cynosure said, in relation to the Salvation Army: "All is not gold that glitters." If it is going to play second fiddle to the lodges, to find favor with the world, what will its end be? It has remodeled the Bible—leaving out large portions—so as to adapt it to its methods. It also repudiates the two ordinances, baptism and the Lord's Supper, to conciliate diverse opinions. There is a saying that "There is no royal road to geometry." So it will be found that there is no "royal road to heaven." "Adulteresses, know ye not," saith the apostle, "that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God."

I will add that while the hissing was going on, Freemasons quietly left the hall; they knew better than to hiss; probably they feared they might be called upon to verify the truth uttered, by being asked for a denial of it in public. The most vexing part of it is, that they had the sympathy of the captain. The captain was expostulated with, and an expose of the principles of Masonry offered, but it was declined.

Boasted liberty, while conscious truth through fear of man is suppressed, is bondage to hell. The world crucified the truth on Calvary; but that crucifixion makes its utterance possible and liberty demands it. W. FENTON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GLAP-TRAP INSURANCE COMPANIES.

GOSHEN, Ind., Feb. 11, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Secret societies, or, more properly, societies with secrets, have grown and multiplied beyond all possible expectation of the casual observer. Men who stop to think are simply astonished at the way they multiply. The thoughtful and studious Christian goes to the prophecy of God's Word, and there he finds it all made plain.

The beast power and his image, spoken of in Revelation, found it expedient, in order to control the worship of the inhabitants of the earth, to first secure control of the business of the world. So they decided that no man should buy, or sell, or do business successfully, unless he would comply with the terms and conditions ordained by the beast and his image.

To most successfully secure control and service to himself, he causes to be organized insurance societies, with some secret signs and words by which to know their particular society and to keep themselves unknown to every other. This gratifies human curiosity. And the advantage to them who receive the particular mark or sign of that particular order—offering its (supposed) superior advantages over every other to that particular class who bite at or take the bait and are drawn in, but who cannot all be caught with one kind of bait. However, nearly all make the bait attractive by the money insurance clause, or the benefit to be derived from the particular organization designated by that particular mark or number, or name, whatever the beast or image-power of prophecy may please to give to its devotees.

We believe that to the thinking and reflective mind in these things are shown most clearly the fact that these insurance and benefit societies and associations are simply matured developments of that anti-Christ power spoken in Revelation. How often do we hear it said by the forlorn mechanic: "It is no use; you can't get work unless you are one of them." Christian, what shall we do? Shall we allow ourselves to be drawn into them and become a part of them?

Better, far better be one alone with the living God for our God. Rather let me be one of those who bear testimony for Jesus and confess him, that he may own us. A.

THE SHAMS OF FREEMASONRY UNMASKED.

MT. WASHINGTON, CHELSEA, Mass., }
February 9, 1892. }

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The enclosed article (addressed to the editor of the Advertiser and Review, Norwood, Mass.), written by request of a friend, in accordance with the editor's promise to publish it if I would write, is returned to me, as I insisted on their printing it as it stands, if they used it. This the editor would not do. He would print it only on condition that he be allowed to alter it in certain ways, which I refused. If you choose to publish it, use it. W. F. D.

Editor of the "Advertiser and Review," Norwood, Mass.:

In the issue of thy journal of the 26th ultimo, an attempt is made to defend Freemasonry, by a correspondent who signs him(?)self "Orient." The marks which characterize that article suggest a few comments.

1. The writer subscribes no name by which he (?) can be publicly and legally identified, although he (?) publicly attacks preacher Loder for criticising oath-bound, secret societies. It is as if some one should shoot at a man on the street from behind a bulletin-board marked "Orient," thus hoping to escape public identification and responsibility.

Perhaps this writer never knew that it is a mark of a coward to assail a man from behind the ambush of a pseudonym. But abundant evidence, as in the case of the murder of Wm. Morgan by the Masons, is at hand to prove that cowardice is an original landmark of Freemasonry, which trains its troops to fight in ambush and not in the open field.

2. It is also noteworthy that no proof of the truth of the many statements as to what Freemasonry is, contained in the article signed "Orient," accompanies said article. Perhaps the writer instinctively felt that public statements on a mooted question, which were unaccompanied by proof, and therefore worthless as arguments, were fit antecedents to a signature by which the general public could not identify the writer, and which was therefore worthless as a signature.

But candid and intelligent men, who have attentively read the records of public events within the present century, are not surprised that anonymous lodge apologists run out, clad in little white aprons and masks, equipped with pails and brushes, eager to daub a fresh coat of whitewash over their unsavory institutions, when some faithful public servant warns the people against those whited lodge sepulchres filled with dead bones, where false religions teach men to utter blasphemies and to sear their consciences as with a red-hot iron.

3. But worthless as is the article signed "Orient" for purposes of public discussion, it follows the rule of all such utterances. All public vindications of Masonry when it is attacked by men who still adhere to Masonry, are shams and masks manufactured for the occasion. Let non-Masons understand that Masons cannot keep the oaths by which they belong to the Masonic confederacy without concealing the truth as to the real inwardness of Masonry, from all who have not taken those oaths, or have repudiated them, and the brazen hypocrisy of all attempts by Masons to publicly defend Masonry will be evident.

An affiliating Mason who ventures upon a public defence of Masonry, is like a man, who, blindfolded, bound and nearly stripped, stands upon the carcass of a stolen sheep, and imagines himself able to defend his mutton from the combined assaults of an armed soldier on the one hand and an African lion on the other. Suppose the adhering Mason, when Masonry is attacked, attempts a public defence of it. Should he dare in that defence to reveal to the public the things which were committed to him in the lodge under the most rigorous oaths enjoining secrecy, instantly the whole Masonic confederacy will pounce upon him with the cry, "perjured villain!" If on the other hand, he talks "taffy," and tries to make people who are not Masons believe that Masonry is a harmless, goody-goody institution, "the handmaid of Christianity," and all such stuff, one discharge of the gun of an upright soldier of truth, who has loaded up with cold facts, will let daylight through the poor fellow's skull, and his reputation as a witness is ruined. This is why thy correspondents who try to defend in print their oath-bound secret societies, by general assertions, of their goodness, sign "Tut," "Orient," and "Royal Arch."

The whole swarm of them cannot furnish from their ranks of boasted eminent men twenty, ten, five, two, or one, who dare publicly champion the cause of Masonry and kindred institutions in fair, open debate, either on the platform of some cosmopolitan hall, or in the columns of some widely circulated cosmopolitan newspaper.

Every pretended public defense of Freemasonry and its kindred conspiracies is, and necessarily must be, worthless, because of the ignorance or the hypocrisy of its author.

If any man doubts this statement, and will afford Anti-masons a fair chance to defend it, he may be perfectly sure he can be accommodated on reasonably short notice to his heart's content.

Since these things are so, and are known by both Masons and Anti-masons to be so, it is the duty of every man who wishes to be saved to keep out of these soul-destroying organizations, on pain of eternal punishment if he does not. For God is a jealous God, and will destroy with consuming fire those who are willing partners in these spurious religions, which dare to graft the hoary harlotries of heathenism upon Christianity.

Thy servant in the Gospel of Jesus Christ,
WM. F. DAVIS, (per R.)
Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass., 1st mo., 30th d., A. D., 1892.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

GATHERED FROM LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE EDITOR.

WORK OF THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

"I have come into possession of signs, grips and passwords, etc., of the Alliance lodges. I have tested the grip and passwords, by writing them in a conspicuous place where I knew that they would be seen by some of the lodge members. I tell you, they were soon erased. I also drew a picture of the grip and laid it by the secret words, and that was removed also. I am being assailed by the order, branded as a thief, etc., because they cannot find how I came in possession of these secrets and the obligation of the Alliance, which you have already received from me. They say there is no other way to find it out but by stealing them; but thanks be unto the Lord, I did not steal any part of them; but the copy of the ritual of the Alliance, which I had ready to send to you for publication was stolen from me, right from under lock and key. It happened, however, that I had an extra copy of the obligation, which was in another place. I write thus that you may know what is the spirit of this Alliance, as well as of those other oath-bound orders. I have been solicited, time and again, to join the Alliance. One man said that they wanted me to join for my influence; that there were others watching me who would join if I would; if I wouldn't they wouldn't. I replied: 'Well, if I have that much influence, it will go on the side of Christ and religion—not to secret societies.'"

[The Cynosure is in possession of the Alliance grips, signs and passwords alluded to in the foregoing letter, and proposes to publish them soon.—EDITOR.]

TO PRESERVE THE CHURCH.

"I feel that to save that branch of the church with which I am connected—the United Presbyterian church—she should be stirred by the faithful from one end to the other before the enemy can have time to destroy her testimony and life. I have begun again to preach, and, if God is willing, I shall try to shake the U. P. church loose from this sin of silence."

MASONIC FAIRY TALES.

"Some do not believe that what is published against Masonry is true, and others are afraid to do anything against it for fear of injuring themselves. Some say that if it had not been for the Masons we would not have any Bible now; and I am sorry to say that some preachers say that the Bible was preserved by the Masons."

[We should like to see the evidence in support of these assertions.—EDITOR.]

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

"When Thursday's mail comes, I am disappointed and feel lost if the Cynosure has been delayed. It is one of the best religious papers of our land. I am not afraid to let my children read all of it; but I do shudder when they happen to get hold of some other so-called religious papers. Their stories, puzzles, etc., are death-traps for hell."

TAKING CARE OF THE SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS.

"I retired from the pastorate of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church in Brooklyn last April to devote myself to securing a better support for aged and retired ministers. I have traveled a circuit from Boston to St. Paul, and from Detroit to Baltimore. I have spoken upon an average four times a week in our most prominent churches. I am endeavoring through the religious and secular press to awaken a Christian sentiment that will do away with this evil and shame. I find it in all denominations. All that is needed is to call to the attention of the church the sad condition of these honored veteran ministers and the laity will cheerfully and liberally respond and provide a generous support. For no cause will they give so abundantly as this when they are made fully aware of the sad condition of these aged servants of the church. I am seeking the best plan to project a movement that will touch all denominations in this interest. Will you join such a movement?"—JAY BENSON HAMILTON, Hackettstown, N. J.

HAVE NO USE FOR CHRIST IN THE LODGE.

"I refuse to give my support to a minister who will spend my money in the secret chamber, in the dead hour of night, where he cannot take his family, but on the Sabbath can come into the house of God and try to work for Jesus, to whom he practically said, a few nights previous, 'Go out of the lodge room; wait until Sabbath.' Am I justified? I believe I am. We are in the midst of this lodge-ridden curse, especially in the church, where it has swallowed up some of our ministers. May God bless the reform movement. I have not been able to do a day's work for nine years, but, thank God! I am able to take the Cynosure."—GEO. SHRYOCK, Rhodes, Iowa.

THE LODGE AND THE SALOON.

"I live in a wonderfully lodge-ridden place. A short time ago there was an Odd-fellows' lodge organized here, and one of the leading spirits was a Methodist minister. On the day appointed for the organization, quite a number came from the country round about, and as there was a saloon in our town, it was well patronized. When the time came to install the lodge officers, they were taken into the church, and the biggest saloon-keeper in the country was the man who went into the pulpit and installed the preacher."—E. L. DILLEY, St. Joe, DeKalb county, Ind.

HE KNOWS THE LODGES.

"Last night the Lord led me to speak" (in a revival of the U. B. church) "of the secret combinations of our land. The lion was aroused in his den, and the devils of secrecy are howling furiously. When the light of God shines on the straight lines of reform, the secretists are mad and set up a terrible cry. Having been a member of many of these orders, I know whereof I speak, and can give them effective blows. Pray for all who have left the lodge and are now working for the freedom of those who are bound by chains and death-penalties."—G. W. SMITH, Gallen, Mich.

A BRACE OF OPINIONS.

"For its vigor and its truthfulness we like to read the Cynosure above all other papers."—JAMES HART, Monroe, Iowa.

"The Christian Cynosure, published at Chicago, is a determined and persistent foe of secret societies. It will, for a consideration, send an expose of any secret society in the country."—Peabody (Mass.) Reporter.

LITERATURE.

HISTORY OF TWELVE YEARS' WORK IN THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS—1879 to 1891. By C. B. Ward, Missionary of the M. E. Church. 1 volume, 16mo., pp. 90. Bombay, India: 1892.

Beginning his Christian life in the Halsted Street Mission, Chicago, the Lord early laid it upon Bro. Ward to go to India and preach the Gospel to the heathen; and this is the record of what he and his co-workers have accomplished in that field of labor, especially in that part of it known as "the Telugu Mission." This mission "was born in a prayer meeting held in Goolburga, 300 miles by rail from Bombay, Feb. 22, 1879. Three persons were present—Jehovah, a padri and an engineer. The padri was a Methodist pastor at Bellary, Central Southern India." Its first fruits were the rescuing and caring for about 180 native orphan children from the "famine district." Since then the work has been steadily maintained as a self-supporting mission, rich in good works. The balance sheet for the twelve years is a record over which the workers in the mission may rejoice, and by it appeal to the esteem of the entire Christian world. Let Bro. Ward sum up the account.

"We have pioneered a native Christian community out of heathendom and orphanhood, and that at starvation's door, into a self-supporting body of Christians, who are now actively helping to propagate the Gospel. The Lord hath led us by ways mysterious, but we have at last a mission home, which, when completed later, with Eurasian orphan cottages, well, garden, etc., will be worth 15,000 reals; and our village, the home of our Christian colony, is worth another 15,000 reals. We are proud (humbly) of our living epistles, and tangible acquisitions, and of our glorified dead. We have learned to work and pray, and pray and work, and with a faith that sees the 'triumph' all along. We closer grip our Saviour's loving hand, and press on to greater things. A dear friend has dubbed us the 'Faith Works Mission.' Well, 'self-support,' and 'faith and work' index our missionary politics. May thousands rise to do more and better, and to Christ be all the glory."

The work has had its many vicissitudes of sorrow and joy, of defeat and triumph, but its success through all forms an interesting chapter in the annals of the world's missions.

The Missionary Review of the World for March has for its leading article "The Story of the Salvation Army," by Frederick Perry Noble. He likens General William Booth to Great-Heart in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and follows the progress of the great religious-military organization from its first beginning in 1861 to the present time. Other timely and interesting articles in the department of "Literature of Missions" are: "London and Its Missions," by Arthur T. Pierson, who is serving Mr. Spurgeon's former congregation; "Persecution of the Russian Stundists," by James E. Mathieson; "The Reflex Influence of Missions," a paper read by Mrs. Ethan Curtis before the New York State Branch of the Woman's Board of Missions last May; "The Cuban Mission," by Rev. A. J. Diaz; "Missionary Fellowship," by Rev. William H. Lisle; "The Boys' Brigade and the Missionary Cause," by Rev. J. Q. Adams, president of the organization; "Go Forward," by Rev. A. P. Hopper; "The Enthusiasm of Jesus Christ," by Rev. A. C. Murray; "Central American Missions," by Rev. Joshua H. Tobey. The other departments are not less timely. Published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York, $2 per year,

IN BRIEF.

Since Patagonia was divided between Chili and the Argentine Republic, it has been developed into a wonderful country for sheep raising.

It is stated that over 3,000,000 acres of land in Europe are devoted to beet sugar cultivation, which, with an average of twelve tons of beets to the acre, would give about 7,300,000,000 pounds of sugar.

There are about thirty thousand locomotives in the United States. One-half of these are used in hauling freight trains. It is pretty accurate to say that the locomotives cost an aggregate of $450,000,000.

A red-letter day is a holiday, a lucky day, a day to be remembered with delight. It came to be so called because of the custom, in making almanacs and calendars, of printing saints' days and holidays in red ink and other days in black.

Efforts are being made in Japan to supply the street railways with cars of home construction instead of importing them from the United States. Some elaborate cars have been built in Hita at a cost said to be less than one-third the price of American cars.

If you want a lovely odor in your rooms break off branches of the Norway spruce and arrange them in a large jug well filled with water. In a few days tender, pale green branches feather out, soft and cool to the touch and giving the delightful health-giving odor.

Pettenhoffer, the German chemist, made experiments which led him to the conclusion that gas could and did pass through any cement. He used cement of ordinary thickness, however. Probably gas would not pass in any appreciable quantity through a layer of cement several feet thick.

The demand for platinum for use in science has raised its value to three-quarters that of gold. Three years ago it was worth $80 a pound. It now costs $160, or eleven times more than silver. It is found in small quantities in Peru, Colombia, Brazil, the Ural Mountains, California, Oregon, and Borneo. The yearly output has never been more than four tons, and is now three.

Some of the biggest dams in the world are in California. The Merced dam is 69 feet high, with a capacity of 5,500,000 gallons, spread over 650 acres. The Sweet Water dam, near San Diego, is 90 feet high, and has a capacity of 6,000,000 gallons, covering 725 acres, and the Bear Valley dam is 60 feet high, with a capacity of 10,000,000 gallons, covering 2,250 acres.

A Norwegian farmer has devised a lock, in which the bolt is released by a stroke from a pendulum bob. The pendulum, invisible from the outside, is moved sufficiently by blowing sharply several times through a hole in the door, but the puffs of air can be given at the proper time only by swinging a key pendulum previously adjusted to vibrate in unison with the lock pendulum.

A dealer in watches of thirty years' experience says that he has known many men who have tried to wind their watches every morning instead of at night, but he has never known one to succeed. There are men who wind their watches at a fixed hour every day. But men in general are accustomed to wind them just before going to bed, and they seem unable to change that habit.

In July, 1881, there was discovered in the ancient city of Thebes, the mummies of Egypt's mighty Pharaohs, among them that of Rameses the Great. There were also found seals, coins, statuettes, preserved food, and a few rolls of papyrus, some of the latter being of great value, curiously bound together, and notwithstanding the mould and mildew of ages upon them, as easily read as if written yesterday.

The stand taken by women against the slaughter of birds is making itself felt in a practical way. The Birds' Protection Society of England has just published its first annual report. In it the statement

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is an easy food - it is more than food, if you please; but it is a food—to bring back plumpness to those who have lost it.

Do you know what it is to be plump?

Thinness is poverty, living from hand to mouth. To be plump is to have a little more than enough, a reserve.

Do you want a reserve of health? Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. 31.

34

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

is made that a professional wild-fowler declared he had not shot a single Kittiwake gull or sea swallow this year, because there was no demand for them, though the year before he had filled an order for 8,000 of them to one dealer alone.

Gen. Sir Henry Ponsonby, the queen's private secretary and keeper of her majesty's privy purse, finds his position no sinecure. Wherever the queen goes he must accompany her, and as she is an indefatigable worker, he has very few hours he can call his own. Upon him devolves the responsibility of inquiring into the genuineness of the many appeals made to the queen for charity, and his, too, is the duty of bestowing her benefactions.

According to the latest report of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, 1,621 persons have been arrested, and of these 1,123 have been convicted or have pleaded guilty; more than 43 tons of obscene matter and 14 tons of gambling materials have been seized and destroyed; 48,199 pounds of books and sheet stock, 27,189 pounds of stereotype plates and 1,516,832 circulars, catalogues, songs, poems, etc., have been destroyed. A more detailed statement can be obtained by writing to Anthony Comstock, general secretary of the Society, room 85, Times building, New York.

Women who suffer from nervous and physical debility find great help in the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It produces the rapid effect of a stimulant, without reaction—the result being a permanent increase of strength and vigor, both of mind and body.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 10. A Pastor's Confession.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL
With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the
SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 5th, 1835

Compiled and Arranged by John U. Underwood
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK (2000)

ALSO AN
Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.
25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,
321 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Woeller, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfan York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Verona; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Parls; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 841 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 50¢ per dozen. Paper covers, 50¢; $4.00 per dozen. Sold in any quantities at

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1892.

ENFORCE THE CIVIL RIGHTS LAW.

The accumulation of offenses against the public laws of the government and of the several States is constantly increasing, and these infractions of established civil rights are not as promptly suppressed and punished as they deserve. In very many cases they have resulted in brutal acts of a serious character, while in every instance they have developed in their conception a reckless disregard of constitutional restrictions and the civil rights of individuals that amounts to little less than treason against the government and an outrageous ostracism of citizens.

It is only a few days ago that firearms in considerable numbers were shipped to Louisiana from other States, to have a part in the approaching election in that State. This intelligence was published as an item of news; but there is no mention of any governmental interference with this murderous transaction.

The Constitution plainly provides that no other than a republican form of government shall be maintained in any State. This means that the votes of a majority of the citizens in any State shall determine the election of State officers, each State being a republic in itself, restricted in its powers and operations only by the Federal Constitution and laws.

The civil rights bill, which became a law April 9, 1866, made the Negroes who were emancipated in 1863 citizens of the United States, and gave them the powers of legal resort in case their rights were infringed. The right to vote at all elections as freely as white citizens was bestowed upon them July 28, 1868, when the Fourteenth Amendment became a part of the Federal Constitution.

Of course, the white ex-slaveholders, and especially the white politicians in the Southern States, resented this newly-acquired equality under the law with peculiar malignancy. They could not legally prevent the Negro from going to the polls to vote for whom he pleased, but they could ascertain for whom he desired to vote, and then kill him on the slightest provocation before he could cast his ballot.

The result of this infamous practice, which has been systematically pursued in several of the Southern States ever since the civil rights law went into effect, has well-nigh turned the former republican government in those States into one of imperious tyranny wholly at variance with the design of the founders of the Union and the constitutional provisions thereof. Scores of Negro voters have been killed for expressing an independence of political opinion and preference, and those who were not killed have been either persecuted for trying to vote, frightened away from the polls, or driven out of the State.

The worst feature of this lawlessness is that the perpetrators have seldom been brought to justice. Either they have been able to secrete their criminal connection with these murderous affairs, or have escaped conviction through lodge or some other equally evil influence.

That the hand of the Almighty was visible in the emancipation of the Southern slaves, no true Christian for a moment doubts; that he cares for the Negro as tenderly as he does for his white brother, is manifest in his Word and in a thousand instances of daily life; that he looks with anger upon these persecutions to which the Negro is subjected, is equally evident from the same testimony; and that he will hold this entire nation responsible for the accumulated wrongs which the Negro has suffered at its hands, is among the certainties of the future. How long before he will avenge these wrongs, and in what shape his judgment will fall upon this land and people, no one knows; but if the wrongs are not speedily righted by those in whom the power and authority are vested, the stroke of vengeance will not be long delayed.

The sins of the slaveholders and of their Northern political coadjutors brought on the War of the Rebellion and cost the nation a million lives and billions of treasure. When the Negro came out of bondage, helpless and ignorant, the Almighty made him the ward of the nation, to feed, clothe, educate and protect him. But the nation has been unfaithful to its trust. It cannot be denied. The laws enacted for his support and protection are sufficient to meet every emergency; but the neglect to enforce them has kept the Negro down to the level of slavehood without the estimation which ownership of his person formerly bestowed upon him. True, it was the same sort of valuation that attaches to a useful horse; but even that no longer exists since he became his own master.

What can be done? Must we of the North stand longer inactive and see the Negro shot down like a dog because he wishes to vote for whom he pleases? Are we to see him persecuted for daring to assert his manhood and his equality with other men? God forbid! Let us have this question of civil rights settled at the next election, or let those who ignore it bear the vengeance which they deserve.

"THE JACKASSES OF SCIENCE."

For more than sixty years, German critics have applied their knowledge to the removal of none

"Of the ills that flesh is heir to."

They have used science as the honest donkey carries gold: not knowing how to benefit others by it, it only burdens himself.

ORANGEMEN—AN INQUIRY.

No. 56 PINKNEY ST., BOSTON, Feb. 13.
REV. J. BLANCHARD:—Will you tell us through the Cynosure, what are the objections to the Orangemen's lodge. It is secret, oath bound and uses funds which ought to go elsewhere. Is it wicked? Does it exclude Christ? Does it belong to the same list with Masons, Odd-fellows, etc.? Yours,
J. M. FOSTER.

ANSWER.

The Orange lodges were first formed soon after the battle of the Boyne, where William III. of England, called Prince of Orange, an old principality of France, which he inherited, rode down into the Boyne, saying to his troops:

"God must be our king this day,
And I'll be general under."

The battle of the Boyne was fought in 1690; two years after William was called from Holland to be King of England, in place of the Roman papist, James II., the last of the Stuarts, who threw the mace into the Thames and fled to France. The French called him "the simpleton who lost three kingdoms for a mass."

William crossed the Boyne, and defeated the Roman Catholics under Tyrconnel, whom the papist James II. had appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

This popular battle was followed by two secret lodges. The Irish papists called theirs "the Ribbon Men," and the Protestants called theirs "Orange Lodges;" their sole declared object being to defeat the Ribbon Men and defend the Protestant religion. They have done neither. They were the same sort of thing, only one wore green ribbons, the other orange.

As soon as a secret society has an altar and an oath, it becomes a false worship, inhabited by evil spirits, opposed to Christ, who "in secret said nothing." The Orange lodges, now near two hundred years old, paid no heed to the pretended object of their origin, which was only to suppress the Ribbon Men. They chartered lodges all over Canada and the United States; and Christian churches are found weak and wicked enough to allow their lodges to parade on the Sabbath, to draw gapers and starers, women and children, and occupy the houses of God; to draw in and swindle young men out of dues and degree-fees.

The names of their degrees are copied with variations from the Freemasons.

In 1843 I was shown the house where the then Duke of York shot one of his servants who objected to his seducing the footman's young and handsome wife. That infamous Duke of York had been Master of the Orange lodge, and they had become so vile and abominable that in 1836 the order was dissolved by Parliament, but still worked on in secret, and came out again openly in 1845. Its processions are still forbidden by law in Ireland. "Any organization which requires an oath or pledge to conceal its proceedings, as a condition of membership, is thereby different from and opposed to a church of Christ and a republican State." This was voted by the Illinois State Congregational Association in 1846, at its meeting in Farmington, Ill. Yet there are ministers who are Masons, many of them from Methodist and other denominations, now crawling into local Congregational associations in contempt of the action of the associations declaring the lodge un-Christian and devil-worship. Freemasonry, like lodge-worshiping Judah, has "a whore's forehead." Jer. 3:3. But the Spirit of God is lifting up a standard against these abominations. They must and will fall before Christ.

THOSE MASONIC MURDERS.

In the issue of this paper for January 14, 1892, we printed the details of two horrible Masonic murders in a neighboring State; but some of our readers were not sure, judging from the statements therein made, that the perpetrators of the crime were Masons. By parties conversant with the truth of the events related—persons whose affidavits are now in our possession—we are assured that the landlord of the hotel in which the murder was committed was a well-known and leading Freemason, and that the other two men mentioned as seen with the landlord in the little room engaged in murdering the New Yorker were also leading Freemasons in the village; also that the coroner who held the inquest upon the victim of this Masonic assassination, and most or all the jury summoned by him, were also Freemasons. This is known to be true by these men having been seen taking part with Freemasons in the burial services of their lodge brethren. Furthermore, our informant says that he had met these same men in public meetings of the Masonic lodge. He also says, speaking from his own personal knowledge of the Masonic institution, that the murder of the New Yorker in the hotel was in the nature of a Masonic execution ordered by Masonic authority, in exact accordance with Masonic law, but for what offence he cannot now tell. The money forwarded to the same hotel, after the murder, (about $600), and secured by the landlord, our affiant verily believes was sent to pay the executioners for "removing" the offending brother.

Comparing these statements of our affiant with the evidence of several murders previously committed by Masons for lodge offences, and comparing them also with the penalties attached to the obligation taken in the first degree of Masonry by all Masons, there is sufficient evidence to fasten the crime of assassination upon the parties involved, and to prove, as we have frequently remarked, that Freemasonry promotes assassination.

WHAT CONGRESS FOUND IN CHICAGO.

Washington's birthday, this week, was marked by the visit of a large proportion of the National Congress to Chicago. The reception of the city's guests was hearty, and distinguished by the customary profusion of hospitality, and their brief sojourn here was no doubt both instructive and gratifying.

They found here, in this city of second position in this great republic, a population of nearly a million and a quarter, nine-tenths of whom comprise persons of foreign birth and their offspring; they found a city of 6,000 saloons and only about 300 churches; a people nine-tenths of whom do not regularly attend any form of public worship; a city of wonderful energy and enterprise; a city of immense social advantages; a city controlled by the saloon interest and the lodge power; a city of pitfalls and traps for the innocent and the unwary; a city of wealth and fashion; a city of poverty and crime; a city with all its characteristics so prominently developed as to create wonder in all who behold them—a city, in short, that may well cause the Christian philosopher to pause and ask: "What shall the harvest be?"

If the visiting Congressmen took the trouble to seek them, they found here several hundred educational, philanthropic and beneficial institutions, in which the young are fed, clothed and taught, the unfortunate are relieved, the sick are healed, and the Gospel is preached to the poor—the redeeming feature of this great and wicked metropolis.

On the other hand, they might have seen, had they looked, 1,200 secret lodges of various names and degrees, in which the godly and ungodly meet with fraternal equality and engage in works of darkness, in which prominent church-members regularly participate, dividing their interest and affections between the pagan rites of the secret empire and the church of Christ.

Many more things might Congressmen have found here to set them thinking seriously about the needs of the nation, with the result, let us hope, of reforming, by proper legislation, the thousand evils that wax greater and abound among us.

CONGREGATIONALISM, LIKE JOHN BROWN'S SOUL, MARCHING ON.

From five to seven thousand people crowded the great Auditorium in Chicago at the call of the Chicago Congregational Club on Thursday night last; the largest religious gathering ever had in this city. Jas. H. Moore, of Dr. Goodwin's church, presided. Dr. Gunsaulus, of Plymouth church; Pres. Gates, of Amherst College, and Dr. Baker, of Minneapolis, spoke. Our great Chicago dailies give fair and full reports; the myriad American press will copy and reach our readers before we can; and doubtless the speeches will be given to the public in pamphlet; so, advising and urging all its readers to get these speeches for themselves and their children, the Cynosure will give what this great meeting didn't do, but ought to have done, with some salutary information and advice to the speakers and our readers concerning them.

Dr. Gunsaulus is an extraordinary young man, 36 years old; with an outramer look; pastor of the Plymouth church, Chicago. Among the prominent speakers now before the public, he is facile princeps. Some six thousand people, last Thursday evening hung on his lips as the bees of Mt. Hybla are said to have hung on the lips of Mentor to catch the sweetness of his oratory. Yet it was unpretentious and matter of fact, exhibiting a grasp of intelligence and sweep of memory unequalled since Daniel Webster spoke at Plymouth Rock. Let us pray that Webster's end may not be his.

We are told that Gunsaulus was a young Ohio Methodist, but that harness fitting too close, he broke in among Congregationalists, where men believe in Christ's religion; but not till, like Washington, he had been roped into the Masonic lodge, which ignores Christ and worships "the devil and his angels." These are but floating rumors. God grant that, if true, Gunsaulus, like Washington, may abhor, forsake and testify against the lodge. The whole trend of his mind is Anti-masonic and pro-reform. And this is the secret of his power.

He has yet much to learn. He was too young to know Henry Ward Beecher's and William Lloyd Garrison's early history, who were neither Puritans nor Pilgrims. Wendell Phillips was both. Beecher shunned and spurned Abolitionists till Jefferson Davis' letters of marque had turned loose the world's pirates on American commerce. That converted Van Buren and Wall street; and then Mr. Beecher discovered that "a minie rifle was a divine institution." As for Mr. Garrison, his whole life is condensed into two lines by Ireland's poet, speaking of another:

"For this alone exists, like lightning fire,
To speed one bolt of vengeance and expire."

President Gates, who followed Gunsaulus, is the son of a Puritan statesman with a Pilgrim spirit—Hon. Seth M. Gates, who was member of Congress; friend of Gerrit Smith; a Mason of three degrees, when all Western New York belonged to the lodge; seceded when Masons murdered Morgan; and this son has, of course, read his father's history and testimony, in his old age, that the lodge swore him to have his throat cut if he did not conceal their proceedings! Yet President Gates declined the Presidency of Oberlin, whose Faculty opposes the lodge, and went to Amherst, where, the last time we were there, we counted seven houses built and owned by secret societies, with money drawn by students from their parents and guardians.

President Gates is understood to approve of those secret dens of buffoonery and blasphemy which students must swear into and conceal their doings from their fathers and mothers, or be held at a discount by their fellows.

Yet President Gates' speech affected reform and condemned intemperance, and lauded Christ whose churches here in Chicago are outnumbered by secret lodges, three or four to one; and only five young men in a hundred belong to those churches of Christ. And in those lodges this temperance president well knows that saloon-keepers are Masonic saints. May God pity Amherst College and its president!

Rev. Dr. Smith Baker, of Minneapolis, made the closing speech, and held the audience, though it was already past 10 o'clock. The speeches should all be read, and we hope President Moore will see that they are in pamphlet.

Dr. Baker, like Gunsaulus, skipped the lodge, though Bradshaw's Apology (Neal, vol. 1, page 238) shows that Puritans and Pilgrims held and proclaimed, as did Christ and his apostles, all the doctrines now taught by the Cynosure. "They hold," said Bradshaw, "that all rites and mysteries invented by men should be excluded from the exercises of religion." But neither Gunsaulus, nor Baker, understands the secret lodge. President Gates does understand it; and though his speech was learned and brilliant, it had the feebleness of a man conscious that he was not speaking what he knew, but, like Ananias and Sapphira, was keeping back what he ought to have spoken.

Dr. Baker was whole-souled and fearless. He said: "We Congregationalists have our God and our Bible, which is His word; and we fear no critics, high or low." He compared the Bible to a good, old, sweet apple-tree whose fruit has fed parents and children from the home orchard. A worm gets into one of the apples, which turns red and ripe, and is really an "advanced" apple. This comparing "Advanced Criticism" to a wormy apple was applauded. "But," he continued, "that advanced apple soon disappears, and the good old tree goes on feeding children and grandchildren as it has fed parents and grandparents before."

Dr. Gunsaulus and Dr. Baker are both fearless Christian men; and as soon as our Congregational papers cease "shunning to declare the whole counsel of God," we may hope these men will become fit leaders of the "sacramental host" in the field of Armageddon, in the battle-day of God. But they shrink from fighting with foes in their rear. This, however, they ought not to do.

THE CASE OF DR. SPIEKER.

We had occasion, in the issue of the Cynosure for February 11, to notice a little stratagem whereby Rev. Dr. G. F. Spieker, of Allentown, Pa., while conducting the funeral of a prominent citizen, rid himself of the pomps and vanities of a Masonic funeral, by taking a short cut to the grave with the corpse, while the Masons were making ready; and before they could assemble to perform the last lodge honors, he had finished the burial service and departed. According to later statements made in the Allentown Chronicle, Dr. Spieker is alleged to have denied any intention to snub the societies. He says he did not see the Masons formed in open order, and did, therefore, not deliberately avoid passing between the ranks. As to his departure at the conclusion of the religious exercises at the grave, he said that at the suggestion of friends, two of whom are leading members of the Odd-fellows, he went home on account of the severe cold.

The doctor is also reported as saying that while, if his personal wishes were consulted, he would not like societies of the secret order to enter his church, yet he never, directly or indirectly, made a request, expressed or implied, that the organization of which Mr. German was a member be persuaded not to attend the funeral in a body.

Dr. Spieker, however, frankly stated his reasons for his opposition to secret societies, and as a citizen of a free country he thinks he is entitled to his opinion. He said: "My views against secret societies are very pronounced. I do not oppose any on personal grounds, but on general principles. There are many good features in these organizations and as my father was an Odd-fellow I would be the last person to cast a stone at his memory. I can't approve of oath-bound societies; I am opposed to them from principle, because I don't believe in secret organizations dragging religion into their workings. I don't believe in a quasi church alongside of the church. Many of these societies live as the church, and as long as the church remains the divine institution I shall not approve of them."

The doctor is right.

THE EMMA WILLARD SCHOLARSHIP.

We observe in a recent issue of the Cynosure a suggestion from Bro. Kellogg that the friends of the Cynosure and Wheaton College should raise a memorial scholarship to Mrs. Emma Willard, the first great leader in education for women in the United States. Mr. Kellogg asks the question: What amount of money will be required to establish such a scholarship? Of course the answer to this question would be determined by the answer to another one, namely, What is the scholarship designed to cover? If, as we suppose, it were intended to cover board, room-rent and tuition, the amount required would be in the neighborhood of twenty-five hundred dollars. We should be very glad indeed to have our friends unite in honoring the memory of a good woman, in assisting the educational work which is going forward here, and in making a place for the training of some worthy young woman. If they are inclined so to do, we will be very glad to receive and receipt through the columns of the Cynosure any sums, large or small, which the readers of this paper feel disposed to devote to this purpose. If the W. C. T. U.'s which are represented among our readers should choose to undertake and carry forward this effort to completion, they might easily arrange for some method of designating the incumbent of the scholarship which should thus be created.

Should there be questions which our friends would like to ask concerning this matter, we will gladly answer them so far as we are able.

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.

—Rev. Wm. Fenton writes from Omaha, Neb., on Saturday last: "I spoke to the young people of the First Swedish Lutheran church last night. I find here an Anti-masonic acquaintance of ten years ago. I shall probably speak again in this city." Omaha, as we understand it, is sufficiently lodge-ridden to make it interesting for a man of Bro. Fenton's attainments.

—In the February issue of the Bible Standard and Gospel Record, published by the Wesleyan Methodists at Syracuse, N. Y., is an interesting paper, by E. Trowbridge: "Is the Position of Our Discipline in Regard to the Minor Secret Societies Tenable?" The question is ably answered, both logically and scripturally, in the affirmative. All honor to the churches which do not affiliate with the hidden things of darkness, whatever name they bear!

—Our energetic contemporary, the New York Voice, the principal advocate of Prohibition in the United States, is having trouble with the postal authorities—trouble similar to that which disturbed the early publishers of the Cynosure, and which the present ones are liable to encounter almost any day. The Voice is certainly obnoxious to the saloon interest and its encroachments, and carries the fearlessness of its convictions into its expressions in every issue. Therefore we are not surprised to learn that bundles of that paper have been returned to the office of publication because postmasters refused to deliver them. Had the matter ended here, the Voice would have sufficient grounds for complaint; but these self-constituted censors of the press, adding insult to injury, actually destroyed letters of investigation in order to cover up the criminality of the first offence. The end is not yet. The Republican party will certainly be held responsible.

—The double number of the Journal published by Heidelberg University at Tiffin, Ohio (January and February, 1892), is almost wholly devoted to secret societies and their evils, both in original and selected articles. Among these, we notice: Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby's "My Objections to Secret Societies in Colleges," from the Congregationalist; Hon. Wm. M. Evarts on "College Fraternities," from the Hartford (Conn.) Courant; Wm. Lloyd Garrison's Letter to the President of Harvard, on College Fraternities, with comments from several sources; "Undergraduate Morality," from the Cleveland (Ohio) Leader; "The Significance and Tendency of College Fraternities," by a Heidelberg Alumnus; "Initiation Ceremonies of College Secret Societies," from the New York Sun; "The Temptations of Fraternity Life," by Pres. Charles A. Blanchard (address before the N. W. University at Evanston); and a sketch of the late fraternity movement in Heidelberg. The University stands fully justified in its action.

THE HOME.

THE GOLDEN TIME.

When is the golden time? you ask—
The golden time of love,
The time when earth is green beneath,
And skies are blue above;
The time for sturdy health and strength,
The time for happy play.
When is the golden hour? you ask;
I answer you, "To-day."

To-day, that from the Maker's hand
Slips on the great world-sea,
As staunch as ever ship that launched
To sail eternally.

To-day, that wafts to you and me
A breath of Eden's prime,
That greets us, glad and large and free—
It is our golden time.

For yesterday hath veiled her face,
And gone as far away
As sands that swept the pyramids
In Egypt's ancient day.
No man shall look on yesterday,
Or tryst with her again;
Forever gone her toils, her prayers,
Her conflicts and her pain.

To-morrow is not ours to hold,
May never come to bless
Or blight our lives with weal or ill.
With gladness or distress.
No man shall clasp To-morrow's hand,
Nor catch her on the way;
For, when we reach To-morrow's land,
She'll be, by then, To-day.

You ask me for the golden time.
I bid you "seize the hour,"
And fill it full of earnest work,
While yet you have the power.
To-day, the golden time for joy,
Beneath the household eaves;
To-day, the royal time for work,
For "bringing in the sheaves."

To-day, the golden time for peace,
For righting olden feuds;
For sending forth from every heart
Whatever sin intrudes.
To-day, the time to consecrate
Your life to God above;
To-day, the time to banish hate,
The golden time for love.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

A HAPPY MARRIAGE.

I see by the papers that a good many of our young men and maidens are getting married. I am glad of it; though, not being a pastor, I don't get any of the fees. God made men and women not to live alone, but with and for each other. The true unit of the race is the dual unit. The family is the basis of society. God did not say in Eden, "A man may get married if he chooses to follow Adam's example, or he may refuse to woo and wed his Eve;" but he said, "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife." Some people who read Genesis 2: 24 think that Adam said that. But if they will turn to Matthew 19: 4, 5, they will learn better. Christ said: "He (God) made them male and female," etc. Is not that "shall" as imperative as the "shalls" in the Decalogue?

But we are told that marriage is a failure—that the courts are crowded with applications for divorces. There is a reason for this, and it is not hard to find. People woo and wed with wrong ideas as to the basis of a true and happy marriage. What that basis is I will try and tell my readers by reprinting an old story. It was written by my friend, Senex Smith, several years ago, and is as follows:

"Jane Jenkins is a sensible girl. She is engaged to Tim Tompkins. Tim is a good fellow, but not as smart as he might be. Some of Jane's friends do not like the match. They think that Tim is not good enough for her. One of these well-meaning busybodies went to her the other day to tell her of a great blunder Tim had made. She thought that Jane would be either mortified or indignant. But, to her surprise, after listening patiently to the story, she said: 'I am glad that you told me this, Susie; I am glad that it happened, too.'

"So you are going to break off the match, are you, and not marry a man so thick-headed?"

"No, indeed; I shall marry him just the same.

But I shall be surer of being happy with him than if I had not heard this.'

"How so?"

"Don't you see that when a woman really loves a man she is tempted to think that he is perfect? Tim is so fond of me, so thoughtful for me, that I cannot realize that he has any faults. But I know that I have a good many, and I shall require a husband to be very charitable if we are going to live in harmony. But how could I ask or expect my husband to be constantly overlooking my blunders if he never made any? The idea of being associated so intimately with a perfect being quite appalls me. Even if he never chided me for my faults, nor seemed to notice them, the consciousness of them, in contrast with his faultlessness, would make me miserable. No, no. The basis of domestic harmony is not mutual admiration, but mutual charity. We take each other as we are, bear with each other's infirmities, and try to do each other all the good we can. I want to be disenchanted before marriage. I want to know that my husband, though the best of men, is yet a man; and that I will have the opportunity of showing how I love him by being patient with his faults and helping him to correct them.'

"Susie went away considerably crestfallen; and she tried to get even by telling all over that Jane was going to marry Tim just because he was a notorious blunderer. But though Jane may have been sharp enough to answer Susie as she did, in order to rebuke her impertinence, yet there was a good deal of truth in what she said. A great many marriages turn out badly because the parties enter into them with extravagant ideas of each other. During courtship they are on their best behavior. Their faults are carefully concealed, and love throws a glamour over both the wooer and wooed. When the honeymoon is over the month of disenchantment comes. And that is a trying time. If they can accept Jane's idea, that domestic happiness depends more upon mutual charity than upon mutual admiration, they will do well. But if each, though conscious of imperfections, is irritated because the other is not perfect, they will live in misery, or seek relief in the divorce mill."

And this demand for mutual charity is universal. It is the great principle upon which God would reconstruct society. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." "If any man be overtaken in a fault, ye that are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." The grace which we are to exercise is the grace that we ourselves will need. And the more charitable to others we are, the more watchful we will be over ourselves. The way to approximate perfection in this imperfect world, is to throw the mantle of love as far as possible over the faults of others. It is both easier and better to reform a man by patient kindness than by denunciation and abuse.—Occident.

A BUNCH OF GRAPES.

It is not of the luxurious cluster which was carried "between two upon a staff" in the days of Moses that we speak, but of another cluster carried by Christian hands a few weeks ago in the city of New York. The one reminds us of the other. The grapes of Eschol were brought as proof that there truly was a "good land flowing with milk and honey" which the Lord God would give to his people as soon as they were ready to go up and possess it. This other cluster we hold up now to view as proof that there is a goodly spiritual possession ready for all who are "able" to take it; one already enjoyed by those who, like their Lord, are among us "as one that serveth." But let the royal purple fruit tell its own story of royal ministry.

We quote from the little paper published in the interests of the deaconess work in New York City:

"The day before Thanksgiving a little box of fruit came as a private gift to the superintendent of the Deaconess Home. Picking out a delicious bunch of grapes, she said to me, 'You may do what you like with that.'

I had a woman in my mind's eye all ready for it, a good, angelic, old German washerwoman, to whom I never dared take anything before, because she was neither sick nor very poor. But these grapes were mine. So I hurried off to her, and after receiving her surprised thanks and blessing I said, 'Now you must eat them all up on Thanksgiving day.'

"Her face clouded. Must she eat them? Could she not give them away? There was a mother so sick down stairs. Oh, she herself would enjoy them so much more if she might give them to her. Of course I consented, and moved by curiosity called on the sick mother in a few days. She said: 'Those grapes were so good! My little girls ate three of them, and took the rest of the bunch to a sick little boy in the rear.'

How many people did that bunch of grapes make happy! And we add, not only how many people did that bunch of grapes make happy, but also what a proof it brings us of the reality and the blessedness of unselfish service for others, even in little ways. The joy of sharing with another was sweeter than the taste of the luscious fruit to the feverish lips of that sick mother. Instances of loving thoughtfulness are not uncommon among those who have little of the good things of life. Those who visit among the poor meet many such touching exhibitions of unselfishness. It is a good land, a land flowing with milk and honey, a land of delights, wherein this kind of fruit is found. Not every one is able to go up and possess it. Love of ease, too many possessions, too much of self, too little of the Spirit of Christ—these are the hindrances. Blessed are they, whether the rich or poor, the high or lowly, who enter in and feast upon the fruit thereof! —Christian Advocate.

IS LOVE THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD?

And now I am told that there has been or is a controversy about Prof. Drummond's answer to that question. I am thankful to say that I have seen nothing of it, for I do not want to know what men can say to belittle love. How strange it is to me. I did not know men could differ about that. But then, what is there that polemical theologians dare not dispute about? When love is the greatest thing to God, who himself is love; when Paul said in just so many words that it is the greatest thing; when John said, he that loveth not, knoweth not God, I thought that question at least would be settled for everyone. So I have been puzzled about minds who could doubt it. But my baby has helped me out.

My baby is five years old. He is the last of a number, and I cling to him. He lives on love. He hungers for it as his stomach craves bread. I do, too. So he and I have great times feeding each other on love. We discourse about it a good deal. Sometimes we philosophize about it. Of course, he always leads off, as thus: "Papa, I love you." "Yes, Blessed." "Do you know why?" As in duty bound, I say, "No." "Cause you love me." And I reply, as I should, "Why do I love you?" "Cause I love you." And thus we send love back and forth. We might keep it up forever. For what needs could be added to that? It is the perfect love which has cast out fear. It knows the reason of its being and is satisfied. I turn within and say: O God, thou lovest me, and I love thee. What more need be said between us? Sometimes we have sweet disputings about it, and little trials of faith, as thus: "Papa, you don't love me." "Yes, I do, Blessed." "Oh, no, you don't." "Yes, I do." And so it goes on for a little while, until he feels it has gone far enough, and then he says suddenly: "Oh, yes, papa, I know you love me; you know I was only fooling." Then love is triumphant, and faith is vindicated. And I turn within and say: "Father, it does look at times as though thou didst not love me any more. Thy hand is heavy on me, and I cannot see thy face. But surely I know that thou lovest me, and I shall trust thee unto the end." "Love never faileth."

But the other evening my baby crawled into my arms before he went into his sweet sleep, and began thus: "Papa, I love you more than you love me." I said, "No, Blessed, I love you more than you love me." He again: "No, I love you more." And I: "No, I am bigger and can love more." Then he replied: "But I know more." Then I said, "Tut, tut, papas know more than babies!" And he answered solemnly: "Papa, you know more about things, but I know more about loving." I was silent. I dared not dispute with the child about that. Whether it were literally true or not is one of the secrets which only God can read. But I knew from it for certain that by God's grace the little child had the instinct of knowing what is best worth the knowing. And I remembered how the Master had said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." And how he also said to his polemic disciples who were disputing among themselves who of them was the greatest—the wisest, the most orthodox: "Except ye be converted and become like little children, ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."

And then light broke in upon me, and once more strength and praise went forth out of the mouth of a babe. Is love the greatest thing in the world? The answer will depend on the man who answers, and is determined by what he knows about loving.—Pulo, in the Christian Intelligencer.

HE MADE A DISCOVERY.

The moral of this little tale which the Chicago Tribune tells is so evident that it needs no elaboration:

After dinner had been finished, the woman of fashion seated herself comfortably in an easy chair and said:

"Well, we will have a quiet evening."

"No one expected?" asked her husband.

"Not a soul," replied the wife. "Every one is at the Browns, and I sent regrets, you know."

"Where are the children?" he asked.

"Upstairs in the nursery," she replied languidly.

"I'd like to see them," he said. "Suppose we let them come down."

"O, dear, no," she exclaimed. "They're not dressed to come down stairs. They have their nursery clothes on, you know, and they'd want to play here and get everything topsy-turvey. It wouldn't do at all."

"But no one is expected," he protested.

"Yes, dear, but some one might drop in, and, besides, we mustn't get them in the habit of coming down here when they are not properly dressed and prepared to behave themselves as well-trained children should."

"When they are on parade," he suggested.

"Joseph!" she said sharply, "don't talk like that! They have a nurse and a room to themselves, and you certainly can't expect me to let them come down here except when they have been properly attired. Besides, they enjoy themselves more in the nursery."

"I presume they do," he said quietly.

"If you had seen what I saw to-day," she went on, "you would understand. I called on little Mrs. Fernwood, and when I went in, the floor of the library was just covered with blocks and toys, and her two children were playing on the floor. Why, she had to have the folding doors shut when she came into the reception room, and then some of the blocks and toys were left on our side of the door, and we could hear the children laughing and talking all the time I was there. Why, it looked—"

"It must have looked like a home and not one of the parlors of a fashionable hotel," he interrupted, as he got up from his chair. "Perhaps she went a little too much to one extreme, but it is better than going too much to —" He noticed a glitter in his wife's eye and stopped. "Never mind," he said, "I'm going to the nursery."

Half an hour later, when his wife sent for him to see a caller, the servant found him sitting on the floor and building block houses.

"Say I'm engaged," he said; "and tell her confidentially," he added, "that we've got a couple of mighty bright and interesting children. I never had a chance to find it out before, and may be she doesn't know it."

REMEMBER THE GOOD POINTS.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points that make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories that you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life—they will come, but they will only grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday, start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things that are lovely and lovable.—Lutheran Observer.

PRAYER-MEETING CHRISTIANS.

The prayer-meeting Christians, those who are found at the mid-week service right along, are the Gideon's band of the church. Other members may give a good deal of money and do a variety of other necessary things, but a pastor very soon comes to have a different feeling for the prayer-meeting Christians than for any others. He knows that he can depend on them, and that they are the link between the church and the throne of God. Revivals usually start among the prayer-meeting Christians. The time, the toil, the care the pastor spends in leading his church to support the prayer meeting, are a profitable spiritual investment.—Watchman.

TRUE GREATNESS.

The rule has been to count him best
Who wrote his name above the rest,
And not inquire with too much care
By just what means he wrote it there,
Nor yet, what better men were curst,
That he might seem to stand the first;
For all the powers of the night
Proclaim the adage, "Might makes Right."

Bnt, oh, how different is the thought
Which Christ our Lord both lived and taught,
That he who aims to be the best
Must write his name beneath the rest,
And bending to the mighty weight,
Must lift them to a better state,
For souls aglow with heavenly light
Prove by their lives that Right makes Might.

—A. A. Bennett.

TEMPERANCE.

THE MILLS.

A saloon can no more be run without using up boys than a flouring-mill without wheat, or a saw-mill without logs. The only question is, whose boys—your boys or mine—our boys or our neighbors'?

A FIVE HUNDRED DOLLAR FUNNEL.

A high licensist believes in putting whisky into a boy through a $500 funnel, and then putting the boy into the gutter; a prohibitionist believes in putting the whisky into the gutter, and saving the boy.

LET THE CHURCHES FIGHT THE SALOONS.

If it is not a fact that the church voters have been drawn by wily politicians into complicity with the saloons, thereby supporting them by their votes, then they should be defended and not lie under the disgrace of such a charge; but if it be a fact that the church voters and respectable citizens of the country are mostly in alliance or complicity with the saloons, in the sense of supporting them by their ballots, then they should own up the truth and change their politics or justly come under the same condemnation, politically, as do the liquor dealers, bummers and thugs.

If any evidence is necessary to prove the complicity of the church with the saloons, the following links in the chain of evidence will make it plain. It is well-known that the great body of the American church cast their ballots either with the Democratic or Republican parties, which is the first link in the chain of evidence. It is equally certain that these political parties stand for licensing the drink curse, and consequently for the perpetuity of the saloons, which is the second link in the chain. Everybody knows the liquor power controls both parties including the saloon, which is the third link in the chain.

And this vote of the church and its friends with license parties makes it possible for the saloon to exist and flourish as never before, carrying on its diabolical work among men, which is the fourth and last link in the chain of evidence. Hence these four propositions, or links in the chain, which cannot be broken or disproved, show conclusively that the church, in its citizen capacity, is in alliance with the saloons.

Now, my brothers, let us look at this complicity with the saloons squarely in the face. Who that votes with license parties will affirm that they are not involved in this saloon alliance? And who will continue to vote thus and then say that they are not responsible in their measure for the awful consequences of their ballot?

Oh, brother, break away from your complicity with the saloons by voting and doing just what the liquor power does not want you to do, and not doing what it wants you to do, and you will be about right in politics.—J. G. Pingree, in the Geneva (Ill.) Patriot.

Just as soon as the churches, the preachers and people take hold of this temperance question, as they should, it will triumph. In the past, many have held aloof from it because it was not popular, at least in its most aggressive forms. They seemed to forget that almost all truth receives crucifixion before coronation. The Truth, Christ Jesus, received his bitter crucifixion, but to-day the world increasingly adores him and the diverse nations of the earth hasten to crown him. As a rule the heroes who have fought in earth's greatest moral conflicts have not been popular while in the fight, but, the conflict triumphantly completed, the heroic warriors have been grandly crowned.

It usually costs to be faithful to the highest duty, but afterwards it pays gloriously in honor and blessing to ourselves as well as to others.

To-day the churches increasingly take hold of this temperance question. Christians are fighting in the heroic prohibition ranks as never before, and the omen is not only for good but for victory. A great statesman said, "If the great evil of intemperance is to be dealt with and the question settled, it is no use for you to look to the world or to the legislature; you must ask the Christian church to take it up." While the writer of this article fully believes it is the duty of the world and of legislatures to take up and settle as far as they can this "gigantic crime of crimes," the liquor traffic, yet he would join most emphatically in the call, the exhortation and the demand to every church and to every member thereof to rise at once and go forth to the help of the Lord and of humanity in this great fight against the mighty abomination of the liquor traffic and habit.

We believe in law and gospel, and in both fighting in their respective departments for good and for God, for humanity's highest welfare.

Rev. Canon Wilberforce, the distinguished descendant of the illustrious Wilberforce, speaking of the organization and machinery of the church of England, said "if the National church could once be brought to bear upon the intemperance of England, the battle would be well nigh won."

The same is equally true concerning the churches of this great American Commonwealth. While rejoicing in the great advances made by many churches in reference to this great reform, much room still exists for the loudest possible calls to many churches and people that are still apathetic, and alas! in some cases, antagonistic to the great movement for man's benefit and God's glory to which devout Prohibitionists are directing their efforts.

Let all the churches rise. Let all their people rise, and not only stand up to be counted, but while building the walls of their Zion with one hand, let them fight against the mighty Philistine giant of liquor, the enemy of God and man, with the other.

If the churches of Los Angeles would enter into a holy crusade against the liquor traffic within its borders, and continue the crusade with unabated fervor even for three months, the terrible saloon iniquity would be practically destroyed. The same is equally true of almost all, probably of all, the cities, towns and villages of California. The churches have much food for thought in this fact. Would to God this fact might awaken and euthuse them to necessary and suitable activity to secure so desirable, necessary and grand a result.—Rev. Geo. Morris, in the California Voice.

The increase in the manufacture of beer in New York City alone in the year ended April 30 last was more than 3,000,000 barrels. New York City now consumes annually a trifle more than 30,000,000 barrels of beer. At the present rate of increase the consumption in the city ten years from now will be 50,000,000 barrels.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON X.—First Quarter, 1892.—March 6.

SUBJECT.—The Downfall of Judah.—Jeremiah 39: 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—Matthew 23: 38.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jer. 39: 1-10. T.—2 Kings 25: 1-7. W.—2 Kings 25: 8-15. T.—Ezek. 12: 8-16. F.—2 Chron. 36: 11-21. S.—Jer. 5: 10-18. S.—Isa. 1: 1-9.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jerusalem taken.—vs. 1-4. The siege lasted a year and a-half, except a brief interim during which the fear of Pharaoh had caused Nebuchadnezzar to raise it. Lamentations gives us some idea of its horrors; and as in the case of the second siege under Titus, the Jews, by their insane obstinacy, brought it all on themselves. "Sat," expresses military occupancy. Zedekiah had refused to believe Jeremiah, or at least to act upon his counsel. What must have been his feelings when he saw the enemy had taken actual possession of the city. He had been afraid to obey God; afraid that his nobles would mock and deride him—perhaps rise in open revolt. How much better it would have been to run this apparent risk. Had his only fear been not to obey God, how different would have been the sequel. Zedekiah's great fault was his moral weakness. Instead of asserting his kingly rights, he remained to the last the mere puppet of his ministers. He had his good qualities. He seems to have been of kindly disposition, with some respect for the true religion, but all this did not save him from the consequences of his disobedience. How often a young man thinks he can take a social glass now and then without any permanent harm, or go into bad company and escape its vile influence. Like Zedekiah, he will wake up to see the enemy sitting in the gates;—to find that all is lost,—his friends, his reputation, his soul. The whole course of one's life, whether for good or evil, is often determined by resistance or non-resistance to what seem small sins. There is especial danger with those who have had a religious education in the breaking loose, though in ever so slight a degree, from early restraints. Little by little the forces of evil gain a foothold, and the citadel of character is broken up. Zedekiah might have made friends with the Chaldean king had he followed Jeremiah's counsel, and then his life would have been spared. So we can, if we will, make friends even of the last enemy, Death; so that when we behold him sitting in the gates we can meet him without fear, sure of an eternal life beyond.

2. Zedekiah's punishment.—vs. 5-7. "Gave judgment upon him;" i. e., tried him not as a king but as a common criminal. One of the saddest things in connection with Zedekiah's tragic doom was that he involved his sons with him, so that their bleeding corpses was the last sight he beheld. "No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself." Philosophy and history, as well as reason and Scripture, all teach this solemn truth. Adam involved the whole race in woe by his disobedience, and no one can tell how far the mysterious chain of heredity may or may not extend. Had Zedekiah feared God instead of his nobles, he might, by his obedience, have even saved their lives, or, at least, would have cleared himself of all responsibility in their death. When we make the choice to serve God, or not to serve him, to do our duty, or not to do it, the eternal interests of others besides ourselves are sure to be involved in the decision. "And bound him with chains." This is the liberty which Satan gives those who serve him; that in the end they will find themselves bound with fetters they cannot break,—fetters that their own cowardice or obstinacy has forged.

3. The poor and humble favored.—vs. 8-10. One ray of light rests on this dark picture. The conqueror not only spared the lives of the poor of the land, but gave them the confiscated estates of the wealthy nobles whose oppression of their poorer brethren had been so severely denounced by the prophets. The Mosaic law dealt very tenderly with the poor, even when of alien race. It made special provision for the stranger, the widow and the fatherless; but the wealthier classes, in their pride and covetousness, cared nothing for the rights of the poor, and seemed bent on reducing them all to a state of serfdom. (See Isa. 30: 12; 33: 15. Zech. 9: 8; 10: 4.) The Scriptures pronounce a woe upon the oppressors, and the pulpits and the religious press should feel that a duty is laid upon them to speak out in relation to this sin. We may gather from this incident one or two important lessons. (1.) It may be considered a type of the blessing pronounced upon the poor in spirit: "They shall inherit the earth." (2.) Poverty has its compensations. A lowly position in life is in itself a shield against the vicissitudes of fortune. (3.) It is a blessing, because it stimulates to exertion. Nearly all the men of genius, the poets and sages, have been children of poverty. She is the nurse of all greatness. She has cradled prophets and apostles, and even our Lord himself. Blessed indeed are the poor whom "God has chosen rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he has promised to them that love him."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

AMERICAN BOARD.

—The American Board of Foreign Missions has been in existence eighty-one years. During that time its 2,000 missionaries have organized 500 churches with a present membership of 120,000. The total receipts have been $25,000,000. The present force, now occupying 97 stations and 1,136 out-stations, numbers 183 ordained missionaries, of whom 11 are also physicians, 19 physicians and other men not ordained, and 337 female assistant missionaries, four of them physicians, making a total from this country of 539. The native force is nearly five times this number—a total of 2,648, of whom 757 are native pastors and preachers.

CHRISTIANS.

—If we sum up the encouragements to hope, founded on the success of Christian work, the figures are as follows: Three centuries after Christ there were 5,000,000 Christians. Eight centuries after Christ there were 30,000,000. Ten centuries after Christ there were 50,000,000 Christians. Eighteen centuries after Christ there were 174,000,000 Christians. Now there are 450,000,000 Christians. The followers of the three religions, Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism, all combined, are less in number than the Christians alone.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—Since General Conference a considerable number of suits have been entered by both sides in Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and some other States. Comparatively few, however, have been tried. So far as these cases have been tried, the result has been highly gratifying. The church has secured injunctions against the seceders in the Hiawatha, Kansas, case (Judge Thompson), the Kunkel case (Judge Blodgett), the Akron, Pa., case (Judge Patterson), the Anita, Iowa, case, the Peotone, Ill. (Judge Stipp), and the Nelson and Clay Center cases, Nebraska, and the Husser case, Chicago (Judge Shepard). Of these the Hiawatha, the Kunkel and the Husser cases were obtained upon full and final hearing, and are perpetual injunctions. The other cases are preliminary. In all seven cases in our favor. Now over against this the seceders have nothing to show except Judge Shaw's opinion, and that was merely preliminary, and was no decision proper at all. No order or decree was entered. The court record simply says, "Decree refused and case dismissed, without prejudice and without cost."—Evangelical Messenger.

FRIENDS.

—A marvelous work of grace has been in progress at Carthage, Ind. At a recent quarterly meeting at Walnut Ridge, near Carthage, the power of the Spirit was wonderfully manifest. Among the young there was great spiritual life and interest. A letter written Seventh-day, says that 27 were converted the day before, making 108; and accounts sent Second-day morning say the number was increased to 140. Meetings were to have closed, but such was the interest that they concluded to remain a few days longer.

—The foreign mission committee of Western Yearly Meeting have purchased a lot at Matehualla, Mexico. The parcel of land comprising several acres is divided between this board and the women's board. Upon that owned by the former there are buildings which the board desire to repair and improve and are seeking to raise $1,000 for the purpose.

LUTHERANS.

—The Lutheran church in America has doubled its constituency within the last seventeen years. Now it numbers 61 synods, 5,028 pastors, 3,388 congregations, 1,187,854 confirmed members. It controls 22 theological seminaries, 26 colleges, 35 orphan homes, and publishes 96 religious papers in 10 or more different languages. Its Sunday-schools number 3,748, with an attendance of 39,183 teachers and 358,178 pupils. Many of the German and Scandinavian congregations where there are good congregational schools, do not have any Sunday-schools, but instead a Christenlehre on Sunday afternoon, with religious instruction by the pastor in catechism, Bible history and the like.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The question of union among the Methodist churches of this country is one which commands the interest and sympathy of every true lover of the church. The chief issue which divided the church north and south no longer exists; the issues which separate us from the other Methodist branches are not fundamental. Of course the primary question is, will union conserve the effectiveness of the churches to be united?—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

—Statistics of the Chicago Home Missionary and Church Extension Society:

	1891.	1892.
Church members.....	3,335	4,147
Sabbath-school children.....	8,299	9,215
Pastor's support.....	$21,007	$26,630
Parent missionary society.....	957	1,502
Paid on church property.....	34,855	72,840
Conference claimants.....	251	406
Other collections.....	957	1,549

The society since its organization in 1885 has aided fifty-six missions at an outlay of $85,337, and its receipts for last year were $17,258.

—According to the London Methodist Recorder, unless there is an exceptional spring within the next six weeks, no great connexional increase can be expected in the next annual returns. There are larger congregations, a revived spirituality, and comparative financial ease, but there is no general ingathering on a scale commensurate with the efforts put forth.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

—“We maintain that the Roman church is intolerant, that is to say, that she moves all her means within her reach to uproot heresy, but her intolerance results from her infallibility. She alone has the right to be intolerant, because she only has the truth. The church tolerates heretics where she cannot do less, but she hates them with a mortal hatred, and makes use of all her powers to annihilate them. If the Catholics succeed once in counting any considerable majority in this country—and this must come in time—then the religious liberty of the United States will touch its end. Our enemies know how the Catholic church treated heretics in the middle ages, and how they treat them to-day where she has dominion.”—St. Louis paper.

—The “Catholic Directory” for 1892, just published, furnishes some very striking statistics in regard to Romanism in Great Britain. The total number of priests in England and Scotland is given as 2,929, only 356 of them being stationed in the latter country. The Roman Catholic population of the United Kingdom is stated to be about 5,250,000, including 3,549,956 in Ireland and 343,000 in Scotland. The hierarchy in England has seventeen members; and that in Scotland six. Of the fifty-eight cardinals only four are British subjects. There are forty Roman Catholic members of the upper house, five Roman Catholic members of parliament for English constituencies, and seventy-two for Irish.

SALVATION ARMY.

—The Salvation Army's annual report states that there are 3,154 corps and 10,893 officers. The circulation of its newspapers and magazines in all the world has reached 45,000,000. The self-denial week produced £40,122.

—The work of the Salvation army in France is conducted at 216 stations and outposts, in twenty-three of the departments of France, and ten of the Swiss cantons. There are 430 French and Swiss officers, aided by 300 local officers. Three Salvation papers (two in French and one in German for North Switzerland) are issued, and 24,000 copies are weekly set before the people in every possible way. The hymn-book recently published has reached a sale of 84,000 copies in the year.

UNITARIAN.

—Dr. James Martineau, one of the most polished as well as distinguished of English Unitarians, has withdrawn from that body, saying that he sees no use for a Unitarian denomination. It took Dr. Martineau a long time to discover what Christians generally have known and believed for years.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The total reported membership of this church is 106,385. Of these 592 are in Canada, and 1,828 in foreign countries, leaving 95,965 in the United States. The amount contributed by the whole church for foreign missions in 1891 was $77,217, and for home missions, $53,577, an average of $1.20 per member for both, 60 cents for each.

—The persons recently received into the church at Cambridge, Mass., chiefly from the Covenanter church (Rev. J. M. Foster's) in Boston, have been formally organized as the United Presbyterian congregation at Cambridge, Mass. On Sabbath, Jan. 31, Dr. R. A. McAyeal preached to this people on “The Love of God,” and persons were set apart as elders and deacons.

—On account of the position taken by the last Synod of the Reformed Presbyterians, forbidding the members to vote at political elections, 8 ministers and more than 400 laymen have left that church and united with the United Presbyterians.

Y. M. C. A.

—Fifty Brooklyn churches threw open their doors Sunday night to the Young Men's Christian Association of that city, for the celebration of its thirty-eighth anniversary. It was the best possible testimony to the sympathy with the army of young men whose home have been cast among them, and to the work of the Association in their behalf.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The City Council passed the ordinance limiting the height of buildings to 150 feet.

The class of '93, of Rush Medical College, threatens to leave the institution in a body.

The annual meeting of the Congregational Club, held at the Auditorium, was addressed by Dr. Gunsaulus, of Plymouth Church; President Gates, of Amherst College, and Dr. Smith Baker, of Minneapolis.

Prominent citizens want Mayor Washburne to veto the ordinance limiting the height of buildings.

The Western Alumni Association of Amherst College held its thirteenth annual banquet at the University Club.

An important conference was held between city and railway officials concerning viaducts, proposed grade crossings and elevation of tracks.

Count Tolstoi's daughter has written to the W. C. T. U. acknowledging a gift of $200 to the famine sufferers of Russia.

COUNTRY.

A case of typhus fever was discovered at Pittsburg, Pa., Tuesday.

It is said that the Western brewers' war has been settled and that prices will be advanced.

The bill appropriating 3,250,000 francs for the Chicago World's Fair was signed Tuesday by the French President.

A Frenchman named Fred Fontanelle, of Des Moines, Iowa, has been advertising extensively for a wife, and, not receiving any satisfactory answers, became despondent and shot himself.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Feb. 15 to Feb. 20:

Mrs S McNow, F L Osborn, A W Hall, O Breed, J McLelland, C L Woods, J Crabs, R Park, W H Bussard, G Holmes, Rev B F Worrell, A S J Phelps, A Sargent, J Zumbro, J Squier, C O Lindroth, A Baldrige & Co., Rev T A Kitchen, E J Chalfant, L Wood, Rev J B Galloway, B Appel, P D Miller, I M Pidgeon, Rev B Brown, B A Bailey, J W Presby, Rev M Wright, Rev R T Wylie, Rev W P Hamilton, R Goveley, L M Brooks, D Griffith, Mrs H Rumery, J W Field, J E Wilson, A Lagerquist, Rev G L Paine, A R Elliott, P Guthrie.

Free excursions over all railroads from all parts of the U. S. to Chicago and return for next 30 days. For full particulars read carefully the advertisement of Walter Thomas Mills & Co., on the last page of this paper.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table with market prices for various commodities like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rye, Beans, Eggs, etc. in Chicago.

NEW YORK.

Table with market prices for various commodities like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Eggs, Butter, Wool in New York.

KANSAS CITY.

Table with market prices for Cattle, Hogs, Sheep in Kansas City.

The New World of Central Africa.

By Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, with a history of the first Christian mission on the Congo. 12mo., 530 pages with maps, portraits and numerous illustrations, $2.00. A conscientious piece of work, and gives a very clear account of what has been done by the Protestant missions to evangelize the barbarous races of Central Africa.

In the Far East.

Letters from China by Geraldine Guinness, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor. Very fully illustrated. Quarto cloth, $1.50.

This book was scarcely written—it was lived; for the breath of life is in it from cover to cover. We have never read so wonderful an account of successful missionary effort.—Presbyterian

We easily understand how this edition is the fifteenth thousand. It is a very remarkable book.—The Golden Rule.

Frances Ridley Havergall's Poems.

Author's edition complete. The only unabridged authorized edition published in America. 1. 12mo., 880 pages, cloth, beveled, $2.00. 2. Beveled boards, full gilt, $2.50. 3. Half white vellum, gilt top, uncut edges, $2.50. 4. French morocco padded, roll red under gold edges, $4.00. 5. Persian calf, padded and embossed, gilt roll and r. g., $5.00. 6. Crushed levant, elegant, $6.00. 7. Full German calf, padded, elegant, gilt, rd. cors., $7.50.

Miss Havergall stands without peer in the English language in the department of religious poetry.

"The book in paper and binding is all that could be desired."—Publishers' Weekly.

Small Books by Miss Havergall. Bound in elegant illuminated board covers. Kept for the Master's Use. 20

My King; Daily Thoughts for the King's Children. 20

The Open Secret.

By Hannah Whitall Smith. A series of practical Bible readings by a most popular author. 320 pages, cloth, $1.00. "All who have read the exceedingly popular work, 'The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life,' will not be disappointed in expecting to find in this new volume a fullness and sweetness in the unfolding of God's Word, in its application to the practical and daily duties of Christian living, such as few writers are capable of presenting."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William McNary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

PIANOS $175, ORGANS $88. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

The Blue Bell.

The Mountain Daisy.

Daily Text books for a year. Dainty little souvenirs, only 1 1/2 inches square, elegantly and neatly bound in leather, with silk marker, gilt edges, round corners, each net. 25. Illuminated paper covers, each 10.

Birthday Memorial Text-Book. An Autograph Text-book. Text for each day and space for autographs. 32mo., Cloth. 25.

Daily Comfort in Four Fold Links.

The most popular Wall Roll published, and deservedly so. Every page is an effective sermon. The striking character and particular value of this new Wall Roll is in the remarkable arrangement and selection of the Scripture Texts.

A constant monitor in the Christian household.

A silent teacher for the school.

A comforting messenger for the sick-room, as well as being suitable for the office, the store or the shop.

Printed in beautiful large, clear letters, easily discernible at a distance of 10 to 15 feet. Mounted on rollers, with cord, to hang up in usual style. 31 pages, size 14x22 in. 75

The Secret of Success; or

Finger Posts on the Highway of Life, by John T. Dale; introduction by Hon. John V. Farwell. 416 pages, 12mo., full cloth, $1.50. A book for the aspiring. Written in a fascinating style and full of incidents and illustrations which hold the interest of the reader spell-bound.

"It may be true, as has been said, that 'books are sold, not bought'; but this, at any rate, is a book which, if brought to one's attention, he will wish to own."

Such a book in every intelligent family in the land—how much (in showing so clearly, so wisely, so persuasively the secret of success,) it might do toward helping to solve the countless aching, burning questions of the time.—The Advance.

Prof. Henry Drummond's Booklets.

The Perfected Life. (The greatest need of the world.) Bound in chaste style, vellum paper. 20

Love the Supreme Gift. (The greatest thing in the world.) Uniform with Perfected Life. 20

AT FIFTEEN CENTS EACH.

AS WHITE AS SNOW. PATHS OF PEACE. HEAVENLY GRACES. SOWING. REAPING. Each 16 pages and cover, 4 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches. Charming booklets. Monotint and gold are here combined, together with suitable poems and texts.

AT TWENTY-FIVE CENTS EACH.

HEAVENLY DEW. SPRINGS OF COMFORT. Two handsome booklets in colors, bound in boards, illuminated. Illustrated throughout with exquisite designs in colors, floral and landscape.

AT THIRTY CENTS EACH.

HOME, SWEET HOME.—Payne. A LAKELAND STORY.—Kendall. GRAY'S ELEGY.—Thos. Gray. HOMES OF ENGLAND.—Heman's Size, 4 3/4 x 5 inches. Cloth, gilt, round corners, 30 cents each; white enamel gilt, round corners, 60 cents each. THREE.—By Charlotte Murray. Scripture texts and poems for a month. By Charlotte Murray. A most charming book, illustrated in chromo-lithograph and monotint, 36 pages, bound in board covers, illuminated. Size, 5x4 1/2.

AT FIFTY CENTS EACH.

FORWARD. An illuminated board bound booklet, exquisitely illustrated in color. Poems by various authors. An exceptionally beautiful work. KEY-NOTES FOR LIFE'S ANTHEM. Illuminated board cover, 36 pages, 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches. A text-book for a month, with choice selections from our most gifted poets. Alternate pages illuminated in monotint and chromo-lithography.

Art Etched Booklets.

Each of the series contains full-page etchings printed in various tints on the finest Whatman paper, representing portraits and scenery in connection with the choicest selections from the universal favorites. Each part contains:

- THE HOME OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. THE HOME OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. THE RICHES OF THE YEAR. Illustrative of the seasons.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servants. 20. Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20. The Royal Invitation. 20. Loyal Responses. 20. Sunlight Through Shadows. 20.

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarter sizes, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price, 1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design. 1.25. Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors. 2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant. 2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols., 4.00. Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth, 1.00. Twelve Striking Sermons. 50. Twelve Soul Winning Sermons. 50. Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. 50. Twelve New Year Sermons. 50. Twelve Christmas Sermons. 30.

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set, 9.00. An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Ben's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods. Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed. Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set, 2.10. Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christians Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set, 4.20. Claremont Tales. A Wrenth of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batna.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set, 4.80. Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

"Better is a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." Prov. 15: 17.

Plain food, pure air, exercise, healthful thought; these are the stones by which the wall of health is to be built up.

Stale bread is much more digestible than the newly baked. The day after baking is time enough to begin eating the last baked loaves.

Do not let vegetables decay in the cellar. Carefully sort the apples, potatoes and other fruits or vegetables. Take all the bad ones out of the cellar, and keep it clean and the air pure by proper ventilation.

The use of salt in excess is hurtful. While salt exists in the tissues, and is doubtless necessary to a limited extent in the food, if more than sufficient to keep up the repair of the tissues is used, the surplus becomes an irritant.

Corn-meal mush makes a very good dessert when well cooked. This is easily and nicely done by making it in the ordinary way, then turn it into a pan and steam for two or three hours. Served with milk and sugar, or fruit juice, it is excellent.

Half-decayed fruit is unfit for use. It is not economy to eat anything unfit for food. The effect of such improper articles is often found in diarrhoea, colic, and like ailments. Look over your fruit carefully, and if it is likely to spoil, have it canned for future use.

Oranges at this time of the year are reasonably cheap, and can be used for sauce with little expense. One orange makes a good dish of sauce at a cost of two or three cents each. These are said to be very beneficial, and are not to be regarded as a mere luxury.

It is particularly hurtful for children to eat meat, hard eggs, or spiced food at night. In saying this we do not want it understood that we think it healthful for grown people to eat such things for supper. It is bad for anybody, but worse for children than grown people.

Practical housekeeping is one of the great accomplishments of the present day. Every girl needs careful training under a faithful mother in all that pertains to practical life before she is an accomplished woman. Home training in place of so much school life is the great need of our girls.

The habit of early retiring and early rising, formed in childhood, is apt to go with the person through life, and has much to do with its success or failure. Let the child have all the sleep it needs, but put it to bed early and let it wake up of itself. It will soon fall into regular habits of sleep, which have much to do with its health and good nature.

Poor teeth are frequently the result of bad diet. Children are fed on fine flour, meat and sweets. Such a diet is ruinous to the teeth. Give them oat-meal and graham plenty, all the brown bread they will eat, with abundance of good fruit and vegetables and milk to supply the need of animal food, and if they are properly cared for otherwise, they will have good solid teeth.

The doctor in our neighborhood has five children. You can see them almost any fine day, if you should pass that way, playing, romping in the large yard. They are each the picture of health. You can see it written on their faces, rosy cheeks, bright eyes and pure rich blood throbbing through their veins. I asked the doctor one day what he gave his children to make them so healthy. He said, "Good apples, pure milk, sunshine and fresh air."

Often persons have to be brought to straitened circumstances before they will curtail table expenses down to what is most sensible and best for health and happiness. The following from a private letter is to this point: "Our present ideas on health food have come largely by reason of our straitened circumstances. We never enjoyed such good health. We never enjoyed our finest food as we now do our plainest fare, put on in a simple manner. I believe more ought to

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad no other preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research has developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. Be sure to get only

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato; T. R. Harris, Abbott, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 3/4 ozs., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8 1/2 in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 18 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent; after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. If started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. This year I offer $500 Cash to any person producing a 3 1/2 lb. tomato. (It can be done.) Full directions how Mr. Harris grew his with each order. Plant some, you may win the prize. All my seed is saved from large specimens.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE Is all head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP Is the earliest in the world, easy grown, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors. My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $500 for a pansy blossom; $300 for a bean plant with 100 pods, and a above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending $1.00 for above collection, will receive Free a packet, FINCH'S IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. B. MILL'S, S. Rose Hill, Onandaga Co. N. Y.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.
For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.
Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.
Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts.

be said on simplicity of meals, as well as about what we eat. I cannot feel that it is right to do so much needless work just to gratify the eye. I have things for my table that I use no more, and don't know as I ever shall use them again."—Vanguard, St. Louis.

The chief dependence of those liable to sudden colds is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. 25c.

Be wise in time. You have too many gray hairs for one so young looking. Use Hall's Hair Renewer, the best preparation out to cure them. Try it.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1. A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacker, Martin Luther, John Knox, and a host of others.

The Bible Text Cyclopedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75. More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D. This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 8vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50. This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony. This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guarantee that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 325 pages cloth. $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPOTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid. 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the CHRISTIAN RELIGION. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

SMALL FRUITS ON THE FARM.

Charles A. Greene, of Rochester, N. Y., has written as follows, in the New England Farmer, on raising small fruits. He says: "The competition in the production of farm products, caused by the opening of the vast tracts of land in the Northwest and West, leads the farmer to ask himself, 'What can I do to increase the revenue of my farm?' It is clear that the Eastern farmer must produce crops that do not require large tracts of land and that cannot easily be shipped great distances. Nothing covers these objects sought after so completely as fruit growing, one acre of small fruits often yielding more revenue than ten or twenty acres of ordinary farm crops. My experience has been with all fruits, both large and small, and I lean towards the small fruits, owing to the fact that they come into bearing very soon after planting and bear more regularly every year, whereas apples and pears have their off years. Raspberries, strawberries, blackberries, grapes and currants bear almost every year with great uniformity. The small fruits also are not so fickle as regards peculiar soil, doing well on almost any good farmland, whereas the large fruits require select sites and elevations. Small fruits, also, do better on some soils than others, and all, both large and small, do better on elevated sites than on low lands.

"I am often asked what particular branch of fruit culture would I advise a farmer to follow. My experience would indicate that it would be more profitable to grow all the leading small fruits in preference to selecting any one, for the reason that, should failure occur in one variety, the others would make up the loss. Further than that, one makes customers in the neighborhood for his strawberries, and the same patrons would be glad to purchase his raspberries, blackberries, currants, and other fruits, and he would hold their trade better by having an assortment, one following the other in season, thus supplying them continually. His equipment in wagons, baskets and crates for strawberries, would answer for all the other small fruits.

"Another advantage in growing small fruits is that the fruit-grower may propagate plants from his strawberries, raspberries, etc., and sell them at a price that will often surpass the returns received from fruit from the same farm.

"I advise all beginners to start in a small way, planting a few each of the different species, and thus gaining experience without taking any large risks. One can learn nearly as much about strawberry-growing by cultivating one-quarter of an acre as he can in cultivating one hundred acres; and the same of grapes and other fruits. If he makes mistakes, as we all do in beginning, the loss incurred will be small, and can easily be borne; while if he begins in a large way, mistakes would be disastrous."

GRAPES FOR WINTER USE.

Under this heading a New England writer avers that the Concord is about the poorest keeper on the long list of cultivated grapes. Yet thousands of farmers grow no other variety, or only the still older Isabella. This also is not a first-class keeper, though better in this respect than the Concord. Isabellas we have kept in fair condition until the middle or last of January. The Catawba is a better keeper. But the best keeper of all in our acquaintance are the Rogers grapes, that ripen late, Barry, Wilder, and Agawam. The two first named are large, black grapes, better than the Concord, and not having its fault of cracking the skin or dropping from the bunch. No grape that cracks or that does not cling to the stem can keep well. The Iona is another late grape that is a good keeper. It will bear more moisture than most others, as its tendency is not to mold, but to shrivel and dry with abstraction of moisture. This is partially prevented by dipping the end of the stem in sealing wax, thus excluding evaporation from the stem. The Salem grape is too sweet to keep well. Though it looks all right, protection against sudden changes in the weather is to purify the blood with

THE BEST

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It vitalizes and enriches the life-current, and makes the weak strong.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. Madison St., Chicag

it turns insipid when over-ripe, and is not so good for late keeping as the Agawam, which much resembles it, but is later.

We heard a mechanic say that he would not be without Salvation Oil. Kills pain. 25c.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greenc. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies." communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get those thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The State of Georgia has within two months paid $400,000 in Confederate pensions, and expects to pay $200,000 more within a month.

Elijah Hoffman, 65 years old, living near Red Oak, Iowa, returning home late at night recently was attacked by a pack of wolves, and succeeded in wounding one with his knife after a desperate encounter, when the pack turned and devoured the dead beast, thus permitting the old man to escape.

An inmate of the Mississippi Hospital for the Insane, at Jackson, set the main building on fire Tuesday and perished in the flames. The other inmates, 600 in number, were saved. The buildings were half-destroyed, causing a loss of $200,000.

The Associated Keeley Bi-chloride of Gold Clubs was organized at Dwight, Ill., Tuesday. It includes fifty clubs, with an aggregate membership of 3,500.

Three men were killed by the explosion of a boiler in a saw-mill, near Lima, Ohio, Tuesday.

John C. Matthews, Democratic city clerk of Saginaw, Mich., removed by the City Council of that city on eight charges of malfeasance in office, took possession of the office Wednesday and had to be forcibly ejected. He has been found guilty by the City Council of using money belonging to the city.

Two burglars, named Silver and Lannon, escaped from the Burlington (Iowa) jail early Wednesday morning by digging a hole in the wall.

The Hartford (Conn.) Board of Trade Wednesday appointed a committee to attend a convention of manufacturers to arrange for proper representation for Connecticut at the World's Fair, the city of Hartford being pledged for $10,000.

A new bank has been organized at Atwood, Ill., with a cash capital of $25,000.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad Company has advanced the wages of freight conductors and brakemen 30 and 10 cents per day, and makes a day's work seven and a half hours.

John Birkinbine was elected President of the American Institute of Mining Engineers at Baltimore Wednesday.

A new placer gold field has been discovered on Portland Creek near Ouray, Colo.

A vein of copper was discovered a mile and a half west of Washburn, Wis., Wednesday.

Wednesday at Milwaukee the Grand Royal Arch Masonic Chapter of Wisconsin elected officers, Charles V. Bardeen, of Wausau, being chosen Grand High Priest.

The National Real Estate Congress convened at Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday.

At Lincoln, Neb., Thursday, Chief Justice Maxwell, of the Supreme Court, handed down an opinion holding that General Thayer had no right to hold the office of Governor, and that when forced out by Boyd his tenure ceased, and the Lieutenant Governor should have held the office pending the test of Boyd's citizenship.

The Plutus mine at Idaho Springs, Col., has been sold for $250,000.

Thursday morning, in a hotel at Cannes, France, Mr. Edward Parker Deacon, an American, killed M. Abeille, a French diplomat, whom he found in the apartments of Mrs. Deacon.

H. J. Noyes, of Richland, Wis., was elected President of the National Dairy and Cheese Makers' Association at Madison, Wis., Thursday.

The Wisconsin Anti-saloon League, a non-partisan temperance organization, was formed at Madison, Wis., Thursday.

Mrs. John Nazro, at one time prominently identified with charitable work in Milwaukee and a leading member of society, died at Pasadena, Cal., Wednesday.

Myra Laurence, an old settler of Chattanooga, Tenn., died Thursday. She had masqueraded for years as a man, calling herself "Henry Armstrong."

Thursday the New York Senate adopted a resolution to investigate the recent anthracite coal combine.

The ice gorge in the Allegheny River extends from Red Bank to Foxburg, a distance of twenty-nine miles.

General Horace Porter was elected president of the Grant Monument Association at New York Thursday.

Two new cases of typhus and one death were reported at New York Thursday.

The American bark Tamerlane was wrecked on the rocks off Puna, Sandwich Islands, Feb. 2, and the captain and seventeen men were drowned. The officers had lost their reckoning.

Four men were fatally burned by molten steel at the Edgar Thomson steel works at Pittsburg, Pa., Thursday.

The cases of five of the six alleged murderers of Sheriff Dunn have been set for trial Feb. 23 before Judge Botkin at Arkalon, Kan.

Diphtheria is raging to such an extent in Pleasant View, Wis., that the school of the village has been closed.

St. Louis hotels Thursday declined to give apartments to Sarah Bernhardt unless she would forego the company of her snakes, dogs, parrots, etc.

The membership of the League of American Wheelmen now numbers 23,680, of whom 619 are women.

Monday at San Francisco, James G. Fair made a will bequeathing $200,000 each to the Catholic orphan and Protestant orphan asylums, and $100,000 to the Hebrew orphan asylum.

Civil war is imminent in Mexico, according to a dispatch from Monterey. President Diaz is practically a dictator.

Monday the school board of Council Bluffs, Iowa, passed a resolution to fly the National flag from every school building in the city.

Frederick Hoisington, a farmer near Three Rivers, Mich., went crazy over religion and voluntarily went to a hospital for the insane for treatment.

Twenty-two cases of leprosy are reported in the lazaretto at Tracadie, New Brunswick. Six new cases were admitted during the year.

The Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank is to be started at Freeport, Ill., with a capital of $100,000.

Twenty-two claims aggregating $1,135,000 have been sworn to by sailors of the United States steamship Baltimore for injuries suffered at the hands of the mob in Valparaiso, Chili. Ten more claims are yet to be filed.

A commission has been appointed by the Mexican Government to assist in the work of preparing its representation at the World's Fair.

Placer mines have been discovered near Lathrop, Mo.

Investigation discloses the fact that the building in Pittsburg, Pa., occupied by Saitta and Fergassi, Italian fruit dealers, which burned six weeks ago, was set on fire and that an Italian employe perished in the flames. P. A. Saitta, a member of the firm, and John Mazza, an employe, were held Monday on the charge of manslaughter and arson.

It is reported that the Louisiana lottery will be moved to the City of Mexico after 1893, under arrangements with President Diaz.

Four new cases of typhus fever were discovered in New York Monday. One of the victims is a woman and the three others are children from 7 to 12 years. They are Russian Hebrews. No deaths have yet occurred among the typhus patients. The health department believes the disease is under control.

Five cases of typhus were discovered at Velatie, N. Y., two at Trenton, N. J., and one at Pittsburg, Pa., Tuesday. All were immigrants who came over on the steamer Massilia.

Steel-workers in the Columbia iron and steel works, at Uniontown, Pa., have refused a reduction of 25 per cent in wages, and a strike may be the result.

The Western window glass manufacturers, at a meeting Tuesday at Cleveland, Ohio, decided to advance the price of window glass 5 per cent on March 1.

The coroner at Indianapolis says the verdict of the jury in the recent holocaust will exonerate the management of the surgical institute from the charge of not taking proper precautions in providing means of escape in case of fire.

FOREIGN.

Disturbances have broken out in the State of Clara, Brazil, and the Governor has been driven from the capital.

Small-pox is epidemic in Bombay. Twenty-five deaths occurred from the disease the past week.

Five men lost their lives in an attempt to rescue a person from a burning building at Lille Wednesday.

Gladstone has entirely recovered from the effects of the attack of influenza from which he suffered in England, and is now in the enjoyment of vigorous health.

Trains bearing physicians, medicines, and disinfectants have been sent to the provinces in Russia in which typhus and black small-pox are raging.

Michael Davitt says that Irish properties are mortgaged to English bankers to the extent of £160,000,000.

Sixty persons suspected of being anarchists have been arrested in Berlin.

All the members of the French ministry tendered their resignations to President Carnot Thursday.

An epidemic of small-pox prevails in Corfu. One hundred and forty-three cases are reported.

Snow fell in Paris to the depth of five inches Wednesday night. Traffic was almost entirely suspended Thursday.

At Cadiz 192 anarchists are in custody. They will be tried by court martial in March.

As a result of the prohibition of the importation of cattle in order to prevent the introduction of pleuro-pneumonia and the foot and mouth disease, prices of meat in London are advancing.

Eighteen Pounds of Blood is about the quantity in your body. To keep it pure and free from disease, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and strength builder.

Hood's Pills cure jaundice, biliousness, sick headache, constipation and all liver ills.

PIANOS ORGANS AND MUSICAL GOODS of all kinds at Wholesale. Send for catalogue and price list free on application. THOMPSON MUSIC CO., 259 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN? ME get 1 Better write to-day, if you haven't. Seemingly larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, term by term. 25cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

FREE HARVEY FARE.

Are you aware what is going on at this wonderful temperance town? FEW REALIZE IT, even after all the advertisements they read, until they come and see that millions are being invested at HARVEY. We want every reader of the Christian Cynosure to visit HARVEY during the next 30 days. To insure this, we will make the following offer: We will pay your actual railroad fare from your home to Chicago and return to the amount of not exceeding 2½ per cent of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. This gives you an opportunity to come and see for yourselves. New developments are being made every day. We have a new illustrated circular which we send free to all.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co.,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 25

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,140.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Notes and Comments... 1	NEW YORK LETTER..... 4
The Fallacies of Odd-fellowship..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The National Industrial Convention..... 8	That "Pan-Hellenic Prayer Meeting;" A Mason's Opinion of Masonry; Wayside Notes..... 5,6
More Brutal College Students..... 8	LODGE NOTES..... 7
A Thorough Demagogue. 9	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
Wheaton College..... 9	THE N. C. A..... 7
Miss Willard's Platform. 9	THE HOME..... 10
CONTRIBUTIONS:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
The New York State Convention..... 1	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Where are the Men?... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
The Methods of Reform. 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	DONATIONS..... 13
REFORM NEWS:	MARKETS..... 13
From the New England Agent..... 5	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

The National Committee of "the People's party of the United States," appointed by the mongrel convention at St. Louis last week, has issued a call upon qualified voters who endorse its platform to send delegates to Omaha, Nebraska, on the Fourth of July next, to nominate candidates for President and Vice President of the United States. Secret societies and anti-prohibitionists furnish the material, principally, of this political party. Its platform is printed in another column.

In addition to the $1,600,000 previously bestowed upon the new Chicago (Baptist) University by John D. Rockefeller, of New York, that gentleman last week gave the institution the munificent sum of $1,000,000, "as a special thank-offering to Almighty God for returning health." Few colleges in the United States ever commenced the work of higher education with a more liberal endowment or a faculty of greater literary and scientific attainments. It seems to be a specially favored university.

The attempt in the Iowa Senate, last week, to restore the sale of intoxicating liquors in that State by a license law utterly failed, what is known as the "Schmidt bill" not receiving a constitutional majority on its final vote. The ballot, which was witnessed by crowded galleries, stood 25 to 23—a strict party vote. Twenty-six votes were required to pass the bill, but two Republican Senators were absent, and it is thought that the movement will not be revived. It is another victory in favor of prohibition, whatever the motives that controlled the ballot. Probably it was providential.

Contrary to all expectations, and for reasons unknown to us on the eve of going to press, we have no further information relative to the proposed State Anti-secrecy Convention in Pennsylvania. Rev. W. B. Stoddard, at last accounts, was working in the interest of such a gathering, and with his usual zeal and good management as an organizer, there need be no fears of a failure. We anticipate full particulars in season for the next issue of the Cynosure. Let us possess our souls in patience, trusting in the Lord to manifest his approval of this convention in his own good time and for his glory.

A mob of fanatics, members of the Greek church at Athens, Greece, recently attacked, pillaged and partly burned the Protestant church in that city. They also wrecked the parsonage, and everything belonging to the ministers residing in it was destroyed. The chief minister is agent of the British Foreign Bible Society, and intends to claim compensation for his losses from the government of Greece. Several members of the church, during the attack, fled to the British consulate, and were pursued to its very doors by the fanatics from whom they had escaped. Defeated in overtaking them, the mob demanded their surrender by the Consul, but, of course, in this they failed. They then waited at the Consulate to assault any who might leave it to return to their homes; but in this they were also foiled. The wrecked church was built with money subscribed by both Englishmen and Americans; and no reason can be assigned for its destruction except the virulence of sectarian prejudice.

The St. Louis "National Industrial Convention," the platform of which is printed in another column, has significance principally as the forerunner of what may form a disturbing factor in the coming Presidential contest. As a political party, the adherents of this platform should carry no weight or influence, principally owing to the heterogeneous character of the associations which it is designed to harmonize, but which is likely to disintegrate it long before the November election. Such a combination of selfish men, members of secret orders and open political cabals, certainly cannot be depended upon for stability. The interests at stake are too various; and it is probable that the one of the two dominant parties in the approaching campaign which makes the best offer for affiliation to either of the associations represented in the St. Louis convention will obtain its votes. No Christian man can support such a time-serving, irreligious party without sully his piety.

Owing to the efforts of the Socialists, the seventh-day professors, the secret societies, the politicians, the saloon men and the great mass of people who have no conscience in the matter, there is little hope that the Lord's day will be respected in the deliberations of the World's Fair management. On Sunday of last week the delegates to the St. Louis "Industrial Convention" made their entry into that city in crowds, and the air was filled with the unhallowed spirit of preparation for the pending gathering: Frequently, too, it is not unusual to see the Sunday railroad trains crowded with delegates and visitors to distant conclaves, councils, conventions, etc., discussing, in anticipation, the work to be done and the enjoyment to be reaped during the week. The secret fraternities, also, find Sunday an opportune time for formulating plans and giving instruction in their pseudo-benevolent affairs. Altogether, unless the Lord shall interfere, it looks as if his Sabbath will have to go.

There is a paragraph in our New England letter, this week, that should interest our Masonic friends quite as much as it will the advocates of the anti-secrecy reform. We refer to the statement made by an ex-Romish priest, that all the secrets of the Masonic institution and most, if not all, of the other fraternities, including the "patriotic" orders, are perfectly known by the managers and prelates of the Roman Catholic church, through the confessions to the priesthood of those who are members in good standing in both the church and the lodge. One fact is thus patent to every thoughtful observer, which is that the secrets of all these occult orders are not secrets to the Roman priesthood, and may be used at any time for the discomfiture and injury of the fraternities. The speaker might have gone still farther in his statement, without falsifying the record, by adding that Roman Catholic espionage and the confessional are continually putting the "infallible" church in possession of important secrets of the state, the social system, the family, business associations and the individual, wherever members of the Catholic church are employed in public and private institutions. Hence the growing dislike to employing this class of assistants, lest disastrous results should follow.

"Congress shall have no power to abridge the freedom of the press." So says the Federal Constitution; yet, in the face of this positive statement, Federal postmasters, created by act of Congress, to the number of twenty-seven or more, persistently refuse to deliver the New York Voice (prohibition organ) to its subscribers at their respective offices. The flimsy excuses offered by these derelict officials, that the subscribers of the Voice refuse to longer receive it, are denied by more than 100 of these defrauded individuals. To increase the aggravation of the misdemeanors of these public servants, the Postoffice Department is tardy in its investigation of their acts, although it has promised to bring the guilty parties to justice. The evidence in these cases has been laid before the Postmaster General, upon whom devolves the duty of inflicting proper punishment on the guilty parties. The penalty in each proven case is dismissal from office, a fine not exceeding $500, and imprisonment for not more than six months. These overt acts, it is believed, originate in the malignancy of the liquor interest toward the prohibition principles advocated by the Voice. It is a dastardly outrage, that should serve to more strongly cement the prohibition element of the whole Union, and give it greater political strength.

"He that handleth a matter wisely shall find good; and whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he."

THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

ADDRESS OF REV. S. G. SHAW, OF WALTON, N. Y.

[At the session of Tuesday, Feb. 2, 1892, Rev. S. G. Shaw addressed the convention. His subject was, "Why We Oppose Secret Societies." The convention immediately requested a copy of it for publication in the Christian Cynosure.]

We are instructed to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." If by the term "darkness" we understand that which covers up, conceals, we do no wrong by applying it to those orders that hold their meetings at dead of night in rooms on the third story, behind curtained windows and guarded doors. Then we may ask, what have they done for humanity or for God? What has Masonry done, for example? This, probably the greatest of the secret orders, has built a grand temple here and there, in New York, Philadelphia and other cities; it has laid the corner-stones of many public buildings, and buries its members with wondrous pomp and ceremony. This closes the list of the fruits of this vast association, as they are manifest to an outside observer.

I speak of Masonry here, because it is in many ways the most important of the secret orders; because it claims to be the oldest, and is probably the original, of all of its class. I shall not confine my remarks, however, to any one of the oath-bound fraternities, but design to include them all in one general condemnation. I do this, believing that I am fully justified by the Word of God. Simeon and Levi avenged their sister's wrongs, by entering into a secret conspiracy against her betrayer; but dying Israel reproved them for their iniquity, saying, "O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united." The prophet Ezekiel, describing the wickedness of the Jews, spoke of secrecy as being its chief feature. He digs through a wall, opens a secret door and discovers the "wicked abominations that they do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery, for they say, The Lord seeth us not." Our Saviour plainly testifies against secretism as hostile to right. He says, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogues and in the temple whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." Paul likewise condemns the "secret empire" as un-Christian and heathenish. His words are, "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light; let us walk honestly as in the day." Upon high authority, therefore, we condemn secret societies; and on the following grounds:

1. They are unnecessary.

There are three great institutions in the world founded on truth, and existing by divine authority. These are the family, the state, and the church. Out of each of these we find others growing, as branches from a central trunk. Around the family we have the circle of relationship, and the sphere of friendship. The state has its different departments—the legislative, judicial and executive. Within the church we have praying circles, missionary societies and associations of reform. Outside, however, of all these and distinct from them all, having no connection directly with any of them, but in many ways hostile to every one, we have a host of secret oath-bound orders. Now I claim that if these were swept out of existence, the whole of them—Masonry, Odd-fellowship, Knights of Pythias, Red Men, Elks, Royal Arcanum, Grand Army, and after them the trades unions, whose name is legion, and the Grange, the Good Templars, and other secret temperance societies, and finally the swarm of college fraternities—all sunk as a stone in the depths of the sea, humanity would lose nothing, society would lose nothing, but, instead, the family, the state and the church would be the better for the clean riddance. All the good that such associations ever do could be done as well in the way that God has appointed and by the means that he has devised. Homes would be happier and more prosperous, if the husband and father spent his evening hours with his family, and his earnings in supplying their wants, instead of attending the lodge meetings, and spending his money in the payment of dues and assessments, and in the purchase of new degrees. The state would be immensely benefited, if these bitter enemies of all government, save that of their order, were cast out. The church, too, would renew her strength, if this dry-rot of secretism was checked. If we distinguish those of the less objectionable class from the others, it is hard to see what is gained by their secrecy and sworn obligations—why they could not accomplish all the good they do, yet remaining open and voluntary. We believe that these things, secrecy and the oath, are features of the lodge system, for certain reasons that we may notice a little farther on. Will you not allow me to say, that secret oath-bound orders are not necessary; that the good done by them needs not the oath to "conceal and never reveal;" and that, through the divinely-appointed institutions of the family, the state and the church, man can find full scope for all his philanthropic purposes and humanitarian efforts. Besides, there are thousands and tens of thousands of men living happy, prosperous and useful lives who have never seen the inside of a lodge-room.

2. Secret orders are eminently selfish.

I by no means deny that they afford their members certain advantages. It is said that Masonry demands three-fourths of the public offices. Our Presidents, with a few exceptions, have been Masons. One of the candidates for the governorship of the State of New York at the last election was widely advertised by the organs of his own party as a thirty-third-degree Mason, and a member of three other secret societies. It is becoming questionable whether any man can reasonably hope to attain to any high political honors unless he has the sworn allegiance of one or more of the great orders. Take, for an example of the selfish spirit of secretism, the obligation of a Master Mason. He promises that he will not wrong a brother of this degree to the value of one cent; that he will not speak evil of a brother, but will aid all poor Master Masons, their wives and orphans wheresoever disposed around the world. These are excellent resolutions; but observe their narrowness: "a Master Mason," "a brother of this degree," "all Master Masons, their wives and orphans." The obligation is restricted; room is left for defrauding thousands of other men. The selfishness of the obligation is apparent. In contrast with this, take the grand command of the law, big as the heart of God, and wide as humanity, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The advantages that members of secret orders obtain through their association, come through disregarding this command and taking from those outside to bestow upon brothers within. I challenge you to name a secret fraternity of any kind that is not seeking, first and foremost, "the good of the order." I shall not take time to speak of those so-called "benefit" societies, in which the few in high office, like vampires, are fattening on the life-blood of the poor. These orders, one and all, are in direct opposition to the wide, free, unselfish spirit of Christianity. Among the higher orders no pretensions are made to anything else than self-interest. They do not even receive into membership the poor, and the disabled. Those only are sought after who by their means or influence will advance the fame and power of the lodge.

3. They are hostile to good government.

It has been made plain that in the case of Masonry and other similar orders we have a government within the government. Not only so, but in many ways it might be shown that the lodge binds men more closely together, and holds them with a sterner hand, than the state. I spoke a moment ago of the fact of the secrecy and sworn obligations of the lodge; but then deferred enlargement upon the fact. I will speak of this now. Secrecy and the oath are found to be necessary, that the empire of darkness may live and perpetuate itself. Secrecy is the bait to draw men in; the oath is a whip of scorpions to compel submission. Masonry undoubtedly has a hold upon the consciences of men. It is a government in which there is a union of church and state; and hence it has a strong hold upon its members—stronger than that of the state upon the citizen. That such a government must work disaster to the government within which it exists, needs no argument. Then look at the Master Mason's oath again: "I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secrets, given to me in charge as such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election." Let him pass through the Royal Arch, and the oath runs, "murder and treason NOT excepted." Suppose a Royal Arch Mason to be guilty of murder, or to have committed the crime of treason, and he is brought before a jury of which even one member is a Mason, what hope is there of a just verdict? The fact of being a Mason ought to disqualify for jury service. It has been declared that the ultimate design of Masonry is the overthrow of both the state and the church, and the establishment in their stead of a Masonic government and a Masonic religion. This brings me to the fourth ground of our opposition to secret societies.

4. They stand opposed to the Christian religion.

This is the gravest charge that I, as a minister of Christ, have to bring against them. If they concerned themselves with matters of business or politics; if the members of the various orders amused themselves with street parades, or even passed the night hours in ultra-questionable pleasures, leaving religion alone, I would not find so much fault. Many of these orders are religions, mixed religions, containing heathen, Jewish and Christian elements. They have their temples, prophets, high priests, chaplains; they have baptismal forms, communion service and ritual for the burial of the dead. Many a man has said that Masonry was a good enough church for him. An Odd-fellow said to me, a few days ago, that if a man lived up to the obligations of Odd-fellowship he would be a good man. It is well known that the very name of Christ is dropped out of Masonic ritual and prayer, and the same may be said of the ritual and service of other orders. This omission of the Saviour's name is not all. The atonement is practically denied; and salvation made to depend upon good works, or, I should say, good standing in the lodge. Some may say that I should exempt the Grand Army from these charges. It is true that in the public services held by this order the name of Christ is used; but I cannot withdraw the second charge: a practical denial of the atonement of Christ. I took these words from a program recently prepared for Decoration Day observances. Listen: "This day is sacred with the almost visible presence of those who, out of prison-pen and hospital, from camp and battlefield, have joined the innumerable company of those who muster to-day on the parade-ground of heaven." What do such words mean? They seem to mean that the souls of those who died fighting for their country, went from the field of conflict to heaven. We would infer from the words that no matter what the character of the man may have been, whether he were a believer or an infidel, the manner of his death insures his salvation. God's Word says that he that believeth on the Lord Jesus Christ shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned. The Grand Army says that faith and unbelief have no place in the matter of salvation; all that the old soldier needed was to be pierced by a bullet at Antietam or Gettysburg. This, you will observe, is in perfect accord with the doctrines of Masonry. These are to the effect that the Free and Accepted Mason, when he dies, passes from earth to "the Grand Lodge above," no matter what his character or manner of life may have been. Get the password to the lodge, and you have the password to heaven. We all know what the character is of some members of these fraternities. They are vile men. Still they are good Masons; and good for the Mason's heaven, whatever that is.

Now, turn from such teachings to the Bible, and you are met by the declaration concerning heaven, that "there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie." The dispute lies between the Masonic ritual and God's Word. I have this additional charge to bring against secret societies: They unite Christians and infidels in unholy rites. The church is paralyzed by secrecy, many choosing lodge ceremonies to church ordinances; revenues that ought to go into the treasury of the Lord's house are being diverted to the coffers of secretism, and the pulpit is growing mute on certain truths that ought to be proclaimed on the house-tops.

5. My last ground of opposition is of a kind somewhat different from the others. It is this: While the more respectable of the secret orders remain, it is unreasonable to look for the suppression of those that are generally condemned. Joseph Cook divides the oath-bound fraternities into the "gilt-edged" and the "guilty-edged." The guilty-edged are as roundly condemned by members of the gilt-edged as they are by the free and untrammelled citizen; but how shall the republic be saved from the guilty-edged, as long as the gilt-edged remain? If good men, Christian men, and even Christian ministers in Binghamton, may be Freemasons, Odd-fellows and Knights of Pythias, how shall we rid New Orleans of the Mafia, Chicago of the Clan-na-Gael, and San Francisco of the Highbinders? I would recommend this to members of secret orders, as a subject for discussion at next lodge meeting. In the guilty-edged we have a class of secret orders of which I have taken no account in my remarks till now; but these must be considered before the question of secretism is fully discussed, and finally settled. I am persuaded that if these reprobated orders are allowed to increase, they will soon have even Masonry by the throat.

In closing, I will answer two objections that are commonly made. The first is, that there are good men in the lodge. I admit it. There are good men in the lodge, admirable men; but I dare say the lodge did not make them good. As far as my experience goes it leads me to say that, as a rule, the better man the worse Mason. There are Masons who have only a nominal connection with the lodge. They pay their dues, but are not heart and soul in the work of the order. Besides, we must distinguish between certain men who are identified with the system, and the system. This even Masons themselves will allow. I have been dealing with the system, not with men. The second objection may be put in the often-asked question, "What are you going to do about it?" I am aware of the vast proportions of the secret empire; but, brethren, I have never thought that it was my duty to overthrow this or any other great wrong. I have my part to perform, however, as you also have; the issue is in God's power.

WHERE ARE THE MEN?

BY REV. ALEX. THOMSON.

In conversation with a Methodist clergyman, lately, I urged the fact that the churches in these days are largely women's churches, not only the females greatly preponderating in numbers, but constituting, in many places, the whole working force of the church. I urged this fact as a cause for serious thought, and suggested the question, if the lodge is not at the bottom of this most anomalous condition. The clergyman to whom I spoke was gray-headed, and gray-headed in the service of the Master. He was evidently in earnest about the Gospel he had to preach, for I knew he was putting forth more effort, even then, to preach the Word in an out-of-the-way place than could have been expected of one of his age. But he said: "No, it is not the lodge," and proceeded to give other reasons. When I further urged that Masons had told me personally that their lodge was "religion enough for them," he replied: "They state what they know is not true." But the good old gentleman said he had not been in a lodge for some time. This is one side of the story.

Sometime before, I had spoken with another Methodist clergyman, also an old man, who was both a Mason and an Odd-fellow. The subject of our conversation was the same as the foregoing. How different the reply! "All that you have said," he replied, "is true, and truer than true; but I do not leave the lodges, because, being inside, perhaps I can do some good which I could not do by leaving them."

Last summer I attended a prayer meeting in a Congregational church. It was, as usual, a ladies' meeting, with perhaps three or four men in the audience. After the meeting I walked down the street with the pastor, a man of age and much experience—a man with a clear, well-cultivated mind. Standing by his gate, with the stars of God looking down upon us, we talked about the interests of our Father's kingdom; but the subject that in recent years has been often on my mind I called up, to hear what this good servant of the Lord would say about it. I knew he was a Mason—a Knight Templar; but I knew, also, that he was a man of God. "Our prayer meeting, to-night," I said, "was a fair sample of what they are in most churches. Has the world come to believe that the religion of Jesus is an unmanly thing, that men have so little interest in it; or, is the lodge at the bottom of much of this?"

I ask the careful attention of the reader to his reply, which I will give as nearly as possible: "I wear on my person," said he, "this Knight Templar's jewel, because it was given to me by a very dear friend just before he departed this world. But if I had my life to live over, I would keep out of these societies; not that they are immoral, but because they do this very thing you say—they keep men out of the church of God."

I believe these interviews show the general thought of ministers in these societies. But they by no means show the thought of the ministers who, outside of the secret empire, have made a study of its working, unobscured by the vapors of the lodge-room. I believe that to most of us who have done this there has come a sense of alarm at the imminence of the danger. The church of the living God is the pillar and ground of the truth. There are two mighty questions that the church must find a way to settle in the near future, or see the ship of civilization wrecked on the sharp rocks that lie just before. These are the saloon and the labor question. If ever the church needed the earnest support of strong men; if ever there was a time when men and women, alike, should bow at the feet of the strong One for strength to do that which human strength cannot accomplish, it is now, when the evil one, by a master-stroke of policy, has shut up our men in the lodges.

I do not deny that here and there men can be found who are lodge men, and yet faithful to all Christian duties. But I do say that so far as my observation goes they are the exception; but I do know that the lodge love is as strong as the church love. And that is all that need be said, for the Lord will not give his glory to another, nor share with lodges the labor and affection due to his church.

What is to be done? The question is a difficult one—one of the most difficult ever presented to the mind of man. What is to be done—what measure inaugurated—that shall be wise and yet harmless? Said one of our evangelists of national reputation to me recently: "I find the lodge strong everywhere—so strong that the man endangers his usefulness who speaks a word against it in public." It is a sufficient vindication of its power that I do not give the name of this party, knowing well he would be grieved if I did so. To force this subject upon the unwilling attention of many churches would be simply to disturb the churches; to let things go as they now are is to make the church powerless against the world, and to invite disaster.

To me there are two things clear. First, that it is the duty of every pastor to make clear the lodge danger—to hang out the danger-signal faithfully before his people. The Lord said to his disciples that he had many things to say to them, but they could not bear them. We must go to God for that wisdom that will help us to say the right things, and to say them as frequently as the people will bear them. Secondly, I believe there should be a consolidation of forces against the lodge, wherever this is possible, so as to secure the discussion of the subject in ecclesiastical bodies and church papers. We must force the leaders of the people to show their hands, by all gentleness and Christian ways open to us. Apart from the means now being used, I see nothing more that can at present be accomplished.

Brethren, the night draws on apace, and unless the church rises in the strength of her Divine Master to grapple with the present evil, we shall soon have a darkness that will only be cloven by the bolts of judgment.

Washburn, Wis.

THE METHODS OF REFORM.

Between "Morgan times" and now some influential mistakes have been made. Finney saw this, confessed it, and made a powerful effort to correct his own; but he was almost too late, and far too much alone. The old mistakes are daily repeated and perpetuated with constant injury to the great reform.

It is too late to do the work of forty years ago. Where are we now, and what must now be done?

First, let us see what material we have to work upon. In all cases a reform finds a certain class ready and waiting. I do not say that the waiting is always conscious, but some sort of readiness is nevertheless actual. Some men are conscientious, keenly susceptible and prompt to respond. As soon as the voice cries in the wilderness they are attentive and responsive because they have ears to hear. Others have caught glimpses of sin on the one hand or holiness on the other. They are restless, are unseated and stand waiting for a voice to call in darkness or at dawn. Still others have clear knowledge and strong feeling, but they will not fall into rank till some leader gives the word of command. They will never be leaders; they will be privates in the ranks or nothing. But there they are waiting, and by them the needed ranks of common soldiers will be filled.

As to all the rest, those who do not care, others who cannot see, others still who do not dare to look and see, or if they do are afraid to show they care, the reformer has little present use for them. Plenty of recruits will come from them by and by after the most pressing need of recruits is over. For the present it is a waste of time to do anything but let them alone.

The first thing to do is to organize and drill the nucleus of an army that we have. Conscientious, intelligent, active and courageous men are the first to work upon. All after-movement will take impulse from their momentum. Every long train starts with its first cars, and these help the engine by their momentum to start the rear ones.

All fires start with something ready to kindle. All popular movements begin with the people who will move. Once the reformer gets them he is no longer alone.

Now our search is for our prepared class. How is it to be found?

This is asking virtually who are they whose principles antagonize those of Freemasonry? This again can be turned round into an inquiry as to what Freemasonry antagonizes. A comprehensive answer is government and religion.

Our class therefore naturally includes two typical men, the intense, high-minded patriot, and the devoted Christian. These two are the natural enemies of Freemasonry. It is to these then that we must first give our attention.

But the patriot and Christian are, in a large proportion of cases, not two men but one. Moreover, the principles dearest to any patriot are largely those vital to every Christian.

Hence, while our range widens into the domain of patriotism whenever the shifting battle carries us that way, still, the plan of the campaign is simplified, because the conflict between Freemasonry and reform is, virtually, a conflict between sin and holiness, and between what is anti-Christian and Christianity.

This guides the choice of weapons. We are to wear the armor of the soldiers of Jesus Christ, and our appeal is to be made to the consciences of already conscientious men.

To change the figure, or rather to drop it, I want an audience that cares whether Freemasonry is right or wrong. Let me speak to men who will be indignant, either toward the thing I attack, or else toward me, when I charge it with being wicked. Give me men who would not hear Freemasonry slandered if it were good, and by the same quality of heart and mind will be quick to start when I unveil it as a sin and crime.

These are men of moral force, who, once roused, and well combined by the fusing power of one moral enthusiasm, will carry surprising masses of otherwise indifferent drift along with them, and accumulate a momentum beyond their own, even from the most inert and useless matter that the first reformer did well to let alone.

In an emergency a ship's captain cried, "Man me a boat with the Christian sailors." In our present emergency Christians are our men.

Let us then press most constantly and warmly the reasons that appeal to Christians. Our strength lies there. Our success must begin there. This is the necessary fountain; patriotism even will drink here.

The warfare is Christian, and so it must be waged by Christians. The Christian reformer will therefore take counsel of common sense if he recruits Christians and does it by Christian methods.

Freemasonry degrades and variously abuses the Bible, and Christians should know it. They are opposed to all other agencies that do so, and will oppose Freemasonry when they are shown that it is to be classed among them.

Christians wish to make the most and not the least of the Master's name. They sing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Let all Christian men and women know that in the lodge that name is tabooed.

Christians abhor profanity and sacrilege; they are shocked by levity and the juxtaposition of things sacred with things low and shocking. Make them see what, alas, we who have been there have felt, and they must recoil from this wicked thing.

Thrust the lance home to the heart of Christian sentiment and feeling. Trust conscience where you find it; where it is wanting trust nothing else and waste no time. He that hath ears to hear let him hear; do not preach to the morally deaf. Give no more than a second place to secondary matters, but go straight to the mark and fight this, like every other sin, as a wickedness that hates God and that God hates and sends you in the name and by the truth and grace of Jesus Christ to uproot, break down and destroy. Christian motives influence Christian men; therefore appeal to them, for Christians are our allies, the soldiers of that Great Captain who came "to destroy the works of the devil." CRUCIFER.

The devil is never afraid of the men who stand around with their hands in their pockets and say, "I told you so."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Joseph Cook in his 225th Monday lecture.—Rev. J. M. Foster on the Bible.—An interesting discussion.—The tide turning.—The cigarette triumphant.

When the next hundred years shall have reached its waning point—provided the world stands so long—there are men filling a very large place in the public eye to-day who will look very small; and events which, though they made a good deal of noise at the time of their happening, will not send even the ghost of a whisper down the vestibule of the vanished century. Look back through the spectacles of Thackeray at the great wits of the Queen Anne and Georgian periods, and analyze the general impression left on one's mind. Is it not of a society false and unreal?—of jests made to order?—of a play with painted puppets for actors? Nothing like the lens of Time to make little-great men dwindle down to pygmies; but in what proportions the few really great men loom up! Very likely they would not know themselves; nor, it is to be feared, would many of their contemporaries know them.

Astronomers have discovered new stars before discerning them through the telescope. They reasoned, from known laws of celestial mechanics, that such heavenly bodies must exist even if hidden from view; and in like manner any one reasoning from the law that every poison supposes an antidote might expect that in this age, when Bible truth suffers more from the attacks of its professed friends than from open infidelity, God would raise up such a champion of revealed religion as Joseph Cook. There is something sublime in the sight of Tremont Temple packed at the busiest hour of the day with earnest, thinking men and women. It is in itself phenomenal, and there must be something phenomenal in the man who can draw together such an audience at such a time. Everywhere Joseph Cook would attract attention. Distinguished men are often given a very insignificant personality; but when the Boston Monday Lecturer rises to speak there is no sense of incongruity between his leonine face and voice, and the words that he utters. His 225th lecture, on "Fresh Lights From Ancient Monuments," well illustrates the secret of his power. It is no voice from the tombs that we hear, telling of the Hittites and days of Melchisedek and Chedarlaomer, but a living man whose grasp is on living questions, and who makes our English Bible, that has seemed to so many like a dead book under the scalpel of the mis-called Higher Criticism, to throb with life once more as the light from those old monuments is focussed on its pages. I doubt if the men whose liberalism of opinion is making such a stir to-day will be remembered when the twentieth century is in its last decade. The quicksands of doubt make treacherous footing for a would-be immortal; but when genius and scholarship combined plants itself on the pedestal of Truth it commands the ages, and will look loftier to a succeeding generation than to its own. A pungent paragraph for those to ponder with whom all the orthodox truths are "old-fashioned," and they who believe them "only fogies," is this: "Our fathers were not all fools. If they were, what are we? He who has no respect for yesterday, simply because it was yesterday, can have no true respect for to-day, because to-morrow to-day will be yesterday. Nor can he have a true respect for to-morrow, because the day after it will also be a thing of the out-grown past."

Mr. Cook's Prelude, on the 22d of February, took up a subject which should be of the deepest interest to every one with a spark of patriotism in his bosom. It was a noble protest against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday, and the selling of liquor on the Fair grounds. It is filled with sentences that are moral thunderbolts. If such a national sin and disgrace is allowed through the apathy of the American people, one does not need to be a prophet or the son of a prophet to hear the foot-falls of approaching judgment.

Rev. J. M. Foster's recent lecture before the Y. M. C. A. on "The Bible; its Study and its Use," was reported with considerable fullness in the Traveller. To praise the felicity of his style as a lecturer,—the research, the logic, the deep grasp on world-wide problems of religion and public morals, would be superfluous to anybody who has heard him, or read his book, "Reformation Principles." Though Bro. Foster does not believe in voting for himself, these able, fearless lectures must have influenced a great many other men to vote, and vote right. Job, the old Ironsides in Mrs. Charles' story, who declares that in spite of their non-resistance tenets no people have more fight in them than the Quakers, reminds me of the equally curious fact about our Covenanters brethren:—that while they refuse personally to exercise their political rights, they have given to the world some of its sturdiest champions of governmental reform.

That is an interesting discussion which is going on in the columns of one of our exchanges, on "The Confessional not Secret." According to Cardinal Gibbons, the secrets of the Confessional are inviolate and inviolable—even by a priest who afterwards becomes a Protestant. This sounds very much like the statement that Masons so often favor us with:—that "the secrets of Masonry can never be revealed,"—one ardent lodge-man even going so far as to add the clause, "drunk or sober!" Bishop McNamara, Rev. P. A. Seguin and others assert, from personal knowledge, that the secrets of the Confessional are constantly being betrayed; and Prof Rudolph, in his letter, adds the following bit of information: "The Jesuits have utilized their knowledge of Masonry and other so-called oath-bound societies which they obtained through the Confessional. The Jesuits are in possession of every secret of Masonry." While this cannot be exactly in the nature of news to any thoroughly-posted Antimason, it is not often that we see such an assertion in print, and made by one whose former position as a Romish priest has given him every opportunity of knowing whereof he affirms. Our Masonic friends, who still assert that under no circumstances can the secrets of Masonry be revealed, will do well to look into this. "Other oath-bound orders" is significant, and those patriotic societies who rely on secrecy as a weapon to fight Rome should wake up in time to the fact that it is already in her possession; and when the day of battle comes they will find it turned against them by hands that know far better than they how to wield it. If the Jesuit priests can obtain a knowledge of their grips and signs, all the rest of their secrets—their plans and purposes—will be an open page. Rome has the key and can manipulate the patriotic orders at her will, just as the rum-power has manipulated the temperance orders to oppose prohibition.

But the tide is rising. At a debating club in Charlestown, a spirited debate was recently held on the question: "Resolved, That secret societies should be suppressed." "The silent vote, the roll-call, and the report of the jury were all in favor of the affirmative." It may be interesting to know that the president of the club is a young man who has but lately received light on this subject through a conversation with the publisher of the Home Guard. And he is only one of many whom by her lectures and by personal conversation she is leading in her gentle, womanly way to see the truth as regards this great question.

The Committee on Public Health has reported as inexpedient any legislation looking towards prohibiting the manufacture and sale of cigarettes within the limits of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The omnipresent tobacco-fiend rejoices and all his allies, but the W. C. T. U. are not disappointed nor cast down. I imagine, however, that some of them begin to see a little more clearly than they ever did before that until woman can have a place among our law-makers, and sit on Public Health committees herself, this kind of thing will continue to go on with little hope of abatement. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24, 1892.

The temperance cause was sadly in need of a champion on the floor of the Senate yesterday. The bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic, which has passed the Senate seven or eight times, but never the House, was reached on the calendar, and it was thought that it had passed, but a Senator demanded that a vote be taken, and then another Senator demanded an explanation of the bill, and because no Senator then on the floor—many of the Senators were on the excursion trains from Chicago, which did not arrive until this morning—could or would make it, the bill was laid aside. Words of good cheer are what Madame Tel

Sono, of Tokio, Japan, has brought her American sisters. She is a vice-president of the World's Christian Temperance Union, and has traveled half around the world to tell in her own way of the work the Union is doing in Japan. She began an interesting lecture with an apology for not speaking better English, and the statement that she only began to study our language four years ago. As a specimen of her style, I quote: "I want to tell you about how good the Woman's Temperance Society is doing in my country. It is the custom in my country to drink on all occasions; at a funeral, or party, or marriage, everybody drinks, sometimes all night. This is bad, very bad, and the temperance society with the white ribbon is doing, oh! so much good. . . . But, my dear friends, I want to tell you what pleasure I have in Jesus Christ and the Holy Father. I am a White Ribbon woman, and am willing to work to save people from the awful drink which is the custom of my country." She has a very earnest way of speaking and her peculiar manner of pronouncing English is very pleasant to hear. She may lecture here again.

Postmaster-General Wanamaker is being rather sharply criticised by church members because he allowed his daughter to give a leap-year dancing party at his residence here last Monday evening. They say, and probably truly, that his action will cause many a Christian man to allow his daughter to do likewise, who would not have otherwise done so, and that it will be a long time before Christian fathers hear the last of: "Why cannot I have a dance? I am sure if so good a Christian as Mr. Wanamaker allows his daughter to give one, there can be no harm in it."

Mrs. Harrison made her first appearance as a public speaker this week, when she delivered an address of welcome to the members of the first Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which she is president, and which is now in session. She read the speech from type-written sheets, and, although she lacked that easy confidence characteristic of the practiced speaker, the impression she made upon her hearers was altogether pleasant.

In spite of the unfavorable sentiments which have been expressed of the project by leading members of both House and Senate, the Mormon influence is still hard at work, hoping to get favorable action from Congress on the bill for the admission of Utah to the Union as a State.

Great is the power of song over human emotions! Last Sunday night, which closed a series of evangelistic services in one of the local churches, hundreds of people shed tears as Rev. M. F. Lamb sang with great feeling, "Where is My Wandering Boy To-night?"

Boys who make a practice of visiting pool-rooms were given a terrible warning here this week, in the murder of one boy, seventeen years old, by another of eighteen. They had spent Monday (Washington's birthday) together, and were both under the influence of liquor when the tragedy occurred. Think of that, ye friends of the dramshop! Notwithstanding the law against the sale of liquor to minors, these boys purchased it. They had a quarrel while playing a game of pool, and one of them crushed the skull of the other with a billiard cue, and he died from the effects of the blow yesterday morning. Think of this! two more broken-hearted mothers; two more broken-hearted fathers; one promising boy cut off suddenly from a life of usefulness, and the other on his way to the gallows for murder. And, mind you, this is not a heathen community, but the capital city of the most powerful civilized nation on the globe,—a nation which claims to lead the vanguard of freedom and right; and yet the infernal traffic which is responsible for this murder and a countless number of others, is legalized to please the liquor dealers.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24, 1892.

The winter is waning. Lent puts but a slight barrier to the rush of pleasure-seekers. The churches feel the power and pressure of its pleasure-loving members. Dr. Cuyler has truly said that "it is the mark of a baby to be everlastingly crying for amusements," and not a few professed disciples seem to think that the church is a bureau of amusements, and so are inventing all kinds of parties, theatricals, suppers and entertainments, "to pass away evenings" and please the young folks, as if time were a burden rather than a priceless boon, and life a jest rather than a solemn trust. Dr. John Hall remarks: "If it be said that some are thus drawn to, or held in, the church, the reply is, that such bring no spiritual good and rarely receive any. There are secessions from our congregations which, at times, strengthen their position before God and in the judgment of conscientious men."

The booklet recently published by A. W. Hall of Syracuse, N. Y., on "Ecclesiastical Amusements," ought to be in the hands of all Christians. Mrs. Stowe lays down the axiom that "the need of amusements is felt less and less precisely in proportion as we have solid reasons for being happy." The church of Christ never was a more heroic and sublime power in the world than when—not amusements drew, but—the sword and the state stood before its narrow entrance. No grander and more exhilarating life can be conceived than that of a loyal, consecrated toiler for Christ in the salvation of men.

A notable career this week has closed. To-day the dust of Michael Dunn is laid away, his funeral eliciting expressions of grief more genuine than that of many a man of wealth and position. Born of drunken parents in the slums of Manchester, England, 65 years ago, a thief at 7, a prisoner at 8, and thirty-five years behind the bars in England, Australia, Canada and the United States; converted in 1878 at Water Street Mission, he has since given his life to saving released prisoners and is remembered as the earthly saviour of multitudes living and dead. Romance and tragedy mark his chequered course from the time when he, with other little children in jail, was flogged with the cat till the blood flowed down his back, as a kind of parting warning on leaving prison, to the time he was fearfully flogged on an American war vessel at Brooklyn navy yard—the last victim under the old regime—a career that illustrates the hardening influence of cruelty in dealing with offenders. He lived these thirteen years a conspicuous witness to the power of the Gospel to redeem and keep a man from falling; an effective argument to show skeptics that the grace of God can do what pledges and the Keeley cure can never insure. Chaplain Bass, of the county penitentiary, conducted the services at the Home of Industry, and several other clergymen, professional and business men, with a crowd of the humbler classes, were present. Homes in New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and San Francisco have been founded by Mr. Dunn, centers of good incalculable.

A temperance conference was held to-day at Broadway Tabernacle, to stir up churches to form, once more, Total Abstinence societies in the churches and to promote the study of temperance. Dr. Cuyler, the president of the National Temperance Society, Secretary Stearns, Drs. McArthur and Day, Chaplain Steele, Peter Carter, Dr. Lambert, the physiologist, and Prof. Thwing made addresses. The latter was president of a boys' teetotal society in Boston fifty years ago, when but 11 years of age. He referred to observations in the East which showed the need of a temperance sentiment here to vitalize that of American residents in Oriental lands, whose example is often a disgrace to their country.

The Roman maxim about learning from an enemy, "Fas ab hoste," etc., is recalled by the criticisms of the secular press upon the destructive methods now in vogue by theological disputants. The N. Y. Sun says that these objectors juggle with words and pretend that unbelief is only a more enlightened belief; apparently do not want to be understood by anybody; beat about the bush and dodge the consequences of their arguments; while the defenders of the supernatural "say exactly what they mean, in terms which cannot be mistaken; are clear, consistent, honest and straightforward." This is just the impression made on the minds of worldly men, and it is a noteworthy fact. When a preacher or lecturer delights in ambiguous, cryptic or Delphic phrases, that mean much or nothing, we at once lose faith in his honesty. No one questions the right of denial to any man, but is it fair when one has renounced the faith of his fathers, the creed of his associates, to say so and go to his own place? This is just the feeling of on-lookers. It is the view of all impartial minds. OCCASIONAL.

No man will ever feel right until he believes right and behaves right.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, Feb. 25, 1892.

Ever since the fires of 1826 to 1832 were rekindled in the West, under leadership of Pres. J. Blanchard and Philo Carpenter, Esq., "of the chief women not a few" have stood by the cause "not loving their lives," that they might overcome the wicked one "by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony." Of these "some remain unto this day, but many have fallen asleep." As one after another rests from labor, others ready to "contend for the faith" come to fill the ranks, and so the lamps are kept filled and burning, while we tarry for the Bridegroom's coming.

A wise Providence is so ordering that New England seems destined to furnish her full quota of women whose names will go down in history with deserved honors. Permit me to mention a few among those who are constant in their devotion to Christian reforms.

Mrs. Deacon Washburn, of Worcester, so well and widely known as a philanthropist and quiet benefactor of the worthy, at whose home the pioneers in Abolitionism, Prohibition, and Anti-lodge work have found a welcome and a "friend in need," who "is a friend indeed," remains steadfast in the evening time of a long and useful life. Associated with the name of Mrs. E. B. C. Washburn in Worcester are the names of Mrs. David Manning, Sr., Mrs. Rev. Wm. J. White, and Mrs. Timothy S. Bliss, whose companions in life "rest from their labors," but who honor their departed husbands and seek to bless the living by perpetuating their principles and helping on the cause in which they were so deeply interested.

The gifted authoress of Wellesley needs no introduction to those likely to read this sketch. Her newsy, spicy, graceful New England letters have been complimented by recognized literary judges and have won for her both friends and admirers wherever the "Polar Star" of our reform is read. To her is instinctively awarded the honored position of literary standard-bearer in New England, and so brave, and true, and trusty, and discreet has she proved in these years of conflict that not friends alone, but the enemy as well, look for the "Flagg" in the fore-front of every encounter with the lodge, the saloon, and with her whose "house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death."

Mrs. M. E. R. Jones, in whose counsels and co-operation the anti-secret reform has long had a helper, and by whose generous consideration we obtained a footing for work in this city of lodges, resorts and saloons, has the satisfaction of seeing the work she helped to inaugurate going quietly but steadily onward, indorsed by some of the foremost clergymen and Christian people of Boston. Deserving of special mention is the name of Mrs. Daniel Powers, to whom, with her devoted husband, Mrs. Stoddard and myself are greatly indebted for words of cheer and timely generous acts. Theirs is "a house of prayer," and it has pleased the Master to make it "the gate of heaven" to precious souls. Her first glimpse into the system of iniquity amazed and appalled her. She at once opened her parlors and invited her neighbors to gather weekly for prayer, conference and the study of the secret lodge system. Though delicate in health, she has been indefatigable in labors and it is to her faith, perseverance, planning and efforts that the cause is largely indebted for its substantial growth during the two past years. These parlor meetings have continued without intermission for seventy weeks, and while general information has been diffused among the people, several have been brought out from bondage in the lodges.

A recent feature of the movement is afternoon meetings for "women only." Addresses at these meetings have been: One by Mrs. Powers, one by Miss Flagg, and three by Mrs. Stoddard. Mrs. Stoddard has also spoken to women three times at Newton, once at Wellesley and once at the home of Mrs. A. M. Paull, Riverside, R. I.

Miss Ella Carter, by her musical talent, has been a great help in our meetings. Having "counted the cost," she has entered heart and soul into the work, resolved to emulate the courage and self-denial of her now sainted parents, in her devotion to Christ and Christian work, at any cost.

Mother Rockwood, whose presence is a perfect benison, brings to the cause rich treasures of sunshine, courage and wisdom, gathered from years of experience in the vanguard of the anti-slavery, the anti-liquor, anti-Romanist and anti-lodge hosts. When she has a "Thus saith the Lord," and knows she is right, no power on earth can disturb her equanimity or dissuade her from uttering her convictions. With David, she may say of the Lord, "Thy gentleness hath made me great;" and all who know her will say, Amen.

Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason, National and State Lecturer and W. C. T. U. department organizer, finds time from her pressing duties for an occasional greeting, and showed that her heart is in the right place by leaving her work in New Hampshire and coming to Boston at her own expense to give that admirable address at our annual convention which appeared in the Cynosure of Jan. 21st last. Only the occasion is required to bring her polished blade from its sheath, and woe betide the luckless "son of Hiram" whose temerity dares provoke an encounter. "Better had it been for him if he had never been" so presumptuous.

Mrs. E. Trask Hill walks in the light as it is given her, and but few women are better known in Boston, or are in positions to do more for reform than the General Manager of "The Woman's Publishing Company," and the editor of their organ, Woman's Voice, and Public School Champion. Her arraignment of the secret order of Jesuits at our December convention was brimfull of facts that the people ought to know. Mrs. H. L. Hastings, Mrs. A. J. Gordon, Mrs. Wm. F. Davis, Mrs. Richard Cone, and many others are in sympathy with the cause, but are overtaxed with labors in other lines of reform, and as yet have found but little time to give to anti-lodge discussion.

When the friends met to ask for corporation papers, one-third of those present were women; and of the two elected on the Board of Directors of the New England Christian Association, one was chosen Secretary of the Board. It is proposed by New England friends to give the women an open field and an equal responsibility and voice with the men, and to calmly but firmly appeal to the intelligence and Christian conscience of the people and to "God the Judge of all," to vindicate his and our common cause.

J. P. STODDARD.

When the devil wants a man for his service he is just as apt to find him in the front pew as the last.

The man who thinks he is the best preacher in his denomination is not the man God uses to perform his work.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THAT "PAN-HELLENIC PRAYER MEETING."

BARABOO, Wis., Feb. 23, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I clip the following item from the Union Signal of Feb. 18:

"The Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware is enjoying a remarkable revival. More than two hundred students have been converted, and the interest is deepening each day. The nine Greek-letter fraternities united February 9 in probably the first Pan-Hellenic prayer meeting ever held in America."

If this statement means anything, it is that all the Greek-speaking people of the earth have met, either personally or by their accredited representatives, at Delaware, Ohio, U. S. A., and held a general prayer meeting for the first time in the history of America.

To one who has been acquainted with the Greek-letter fraternities in our modern colleges, it means that a portion of the students who are banded together in secret societies, and who hide themselves behind certain letters of the Greek alphabet, have so forgotten their normal condition of rivalry, for a time, as to attend a prayer meeting on Feb. 9, which, so far as we are informed, did not break up in a row. If it did not, it was because college fraternity matters were carefully excluded. It is in no wise likely that there was a genuine "Hellenist" within five thousand miles of Delaware at the time; and yet, with the most consummate effrontery, some one penned the above paragraph.

Of what unutterable yearnings after notoriety some secretists are possessed!

"Pan-Hellenic!" Yes, yes!—and yet it is not likely that a single "Hellenist" there could get through an ordinary lesson in Greek without a pony to ride on.

"Pan-Hellenic" indeed! indeed! It will be observed, further, that this happened at the Ohio Wesleyan University.

The Wesleyans are a people who are constitutionally opposed to secretism; but this great university, which is under the control of the Methodist Episcopal church, is literally honeycombed with secret societies. There are nine of them. The whole brood of Greek fowls finds lodgment in their branches. The above item hurts me at two different points. I am grieved at the state of things in the university.

I am offended at the "Pan-Hellenic" falsehood contained in it.

I will rejoice at the conversion of the 200 students if, at the close of their Greek prayer meeting, they will disband their fraternities and henceforth stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made them free. J. W. Wood.

A MASON'S OPINION OF MASONRY.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Freemasonry is a unique institution. It is, par excellence, the great secret society of modern times. It is imitated by many but neither excelled nor even equaled by none. It is unquestionably the only institution in the world to-day that embraces within itself every rite and ceremony and doctrine of the ancient mysteries—both the lesser and greater—that for ages had been practiced among the pagan nations of antiquity. It is paganism, pure and simple, from the preparation-room to Hiram's grave; and though, as I have said, it is imitated by many, yet it stands alone, and must always stand alone, so long as it stands at all, as the only true and legitimate revival of the old sun-worship.

Now, surely, this is a great deal to be said in favor of Freemasonry at this late date of the nineteenth century, and to be said, moreover, by one who has given it such hard knocks as I have during the last eighteen years. But the truth must be told, and the truth is, that Freemasonry is the most ancient as it is the only real pagan system of religion now in the world. But Masonry possesses many other rare qualities besides its antiquity and its paganism; and as my former brethren are almost unanimous in declaring that it is a good institution, I shall now proceed to show in what its goodness consists, and what ought to be a certificate of merit to recommend it to the favor of every minister, at least, in the land. I shall begin at the beginning:

On the night of his initiation the preacher is ushered into the preparation-room and is there met by the secretary of the lodge and one or two other brethren, when the secretary propounds, among others, the following questions: "Do you seriously declare upon your honor before these gentlemen that unbiassed by friends and uninfluenced by mercenary motives you freely and voluntarily offer yourself a candidate for the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry?" and the poor preacher-candidate answers: "I do." Now the best, or the worst, of all this is that nobody believes it. From the Master in the East to the Junior Deacon or Steward in the preparation-room, not a member of that lodge believes that preacher's "I do," and neither does he believe it himself. Every man, preacher or otherwise, joining Freemasonry now-a-days does so for a purpose more or less mercenary, and hence, at the very threshold of the institution, and from the very nature of the question put to him, the candidate is forced to lie in order to gain admission and become a sharer in "the rights and privileges." But, again, the secretary proceeds: "Do you seriously declare upon your honor that you are prompted to solicit those privileges from a favorable opinion preconceived of the institution, a desire for knowledge, and a sincere wish of being servicable to your fellow-creatures?" and again the candidate-preacher must reply, "I do." Now if any one had met this same gentleman a week or ten days before this and spoken to him on the subject of Masonry, he would have declared that he knew nothing whatever about that institution; that he was not a member of it, and had not the remotest idea as to whether it was good or bad; and yet here you find him in the preparation-room declaring upon his honor that he has a preconceived favorable opinion in regard to it; that it will store his mind with useful knowledge, and that through connection with it he will have a larger scope for services to his fellow-creatures.

And now, Mr. Editor, how would you really designate a man who would act as our clerical friend in the Masonic preparation-room is now acting before us? Would you not say that he was at least acting both the part of a knave and a liar? Certainly you would; and yet in all other matters pertaining to the ordinary affairs of life this preacher is just as honest and truthful as any other man; but in order to become a Freemason he must at the very outset act the low, mean part of a scheming trickster and liar, and from the very constitution of Masonry he is compelled to do this.

Here permit me to say that in this respect again Freemasonry is pre-eminent. There is no other institution in the world that will so readily force a man into a position where he dare not speak the truth as Freemasonry. The first lesson a man learns in that night-school of Satan is to lie, and during his whole life afterwards, as a Mason, he is compelled, under the very circumstances of the case, on no occasion to speak the truth when Masonry is the subject of conversation.

But the candidate is now stripped of his clothing, even to his inside shirt. He is handed an old pair of dirty drawers which he puts on. The left leg of this is rolled above the knee, the left breast of his shirt is turned back, and the left sleeve turned up above the elbow, a hoodwink is safely fastened over his eyes, a blue rope is tied around his neck, and an old loose-fitting slipper is on his right foot. Can anything be more degrading or debasing than this barbarous burlesque of ancient pagan worship, or can anything more revolting be conceived that a minister of the Gospel of the blessed God could be guilty of? And yet this is Masonry—the very threshold, or the very A. B. C. of it; and I now come back to my first proposition, that it is indeed a unique institution.

It is the only institution of its kind in the world that compels a man at the very outset to act the part of a liar, a knave, a trickster and a buffoon. Just imagine, if you can, a doctor of divinity in his old drawers, and hoodwink, and cable-tow, and slipper, trotting around there for the silent jeer, and laugh, and coarse remark of the Masonic rabble assembled in that lodge-room, and then tell me, if you can, that there is any other secret society on earth that can compete with Masonry in turning an otherwise honest man into a knave and a buffoon on such short notice. I am really afraid the brethren will never forgive me—that is, the Masonic brethren; but then you know Masonry is such a good institution that I cannot help telling what it is good for; and so perhaps when I get through praising it all I can, they may at last see that I'm doing them good, and unanimously vote me a good fellow.

And now I must leave our beloved friend, that poor impecunious preacher, to shiver and shake in the preparation-room, and return at a future day to put him through the rest of the delightful performance, until at last we shall find in him a smelling stiff in the grave of Hiram.

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master Keystone Lodge, No. 639.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

GATHERED FROM ORIGINAL AND SELECT SOURCES.

CATHEDRALS.

Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer has written an article on St. Paul's Cathedral for the March Century, which will be illustrated by a great number of Mr. Pennell's best pictures. The paper is of unusual importance in the English Cathedral series because of St. Paul's prominence as the one great church of the Renaissance period in England. In view of the fact that New York is planning to build a great cathedral, Mrs. Van Rensselaer's argument from St. Paul's that "a dome is the noblest crown a great city can bear," is worth consideration.

PERSECUTION OF NEGROES IN THE SOUTH.

"I am now sixty-two years of age; I entered the vineyard in the year 1852, preaching the Gospel of God; was bound in chains 33 days for preaching, and can show many stripes. Men in secret orders have signs and grips, but my sign can be seen in my stripes. Any man who belongs to a secret order is as dangerous, in my sight, as a lion; and will do more harm than a lion. If my son belongs to a secret order and kills your son, and I help him away, I am as bad as he."—(Rev.) HENRY WOODSON, Lake Village, Ark., Feb. 15, 1892.

[From the Little Rock (Ark.) Baptist Vanguard, edited by colored men:]

Two black men were lynched in Pine Bluff Sunday night while the colored people were at church. The scene, from the description, was barbaric in the extreme.

Every black man ought to be prepared to die. In a year or two they will be mobbing Negroes for stealing chickens or asking for their pay when they have done a day's work.

If what the American citizen would make us believe is true, that Africa is hell, does that necessarily make the black race descendants of the devil?

Miss Kate Castleton, an actress, offended the dignity of the white society in Meridian, Miss., sometime since by making some disparaging remarks about the social ethics of this delectable Southland, and also by eating at the same table with her Negro lady's maid. Had she been a man, we would have hated to have her life insured with our company.

They want to give us heaven to ourselves. From the way things are going on, if the Almighty does not wipe the black man out of existence or turn him white, the "intelligent and superior" whites of the South will go back on him entirely. A Texas paper says "The majority of the people in Texas would prefer to go to hell in white company rather than enjoy the odoriferous presence of a colored man on through journey to the realm supernal." That speaks pretty bad for the churches and preachers. Well, gentlemen, you are well on the way, but we are extremely sorry to inform you there are some black folks going there too. If you can hire the devil to give you separate apartments after you get there, however, you'll be in it.

Then Virginia—the gentle and aristocratic Virginia, reaches across the Father of Waters and shakes hands with Texas. Rev. Dr. Corey, president of Richmond Theological Seminary, an institution which labors to teach the young colored ministers how to preach the Gospel, took rooms at the Valentine House. Whereupon fifty Southern Anglo-Saxon followers of the meek and lowly Jesus declared they would not eat at the table with the Rev. Dr. and his accomplished wife. No other cause for this humiliating proscription than that the Dr. was teaching Negroes the Gospel. The white man is going back on God, sure. We are not uneasy, however. Our God is able to take care of himself, and he will do it.

LAWS WHICH THE SOUTH IGNORES.

April 9, 1866, the civil rights bill, which had passed Congress, March 15, and had been vetoed by President Johnson, March 27, was again passed by the House of Representatives over the veto, by a vote of 122 to 41, and became a law. It had passed the Senate, April 2, by a vote of 33 to 15. This bill made the emancipated Negroes citizens of the United States, and gave them power to resort to the courts in case their rights were infringed. It did not, however, give them the right to vote. This right was subsequently bestowed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, July 28, 1868. It reads as follows:

"SEC. 1.—All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

"ART. xv.—Sec. 1.—The right of citizens of the United States shall not be denied nor abridged by the U. S., or by any State, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

"Sec. 2.—Congress shall have power to enforce this Article by appropriate legislation."

Under these amendments and the Civil Rights law, the Negro citizen should rank equally with the white citizens. The only trouble is that the Federal government and those of the several Southern States do not enforce them.

It is time that the Negro should receive the protection to which he is entitled under the law.

FROM A MASON'S WIFE.

"The signs of the last days are upon us—the multiplying of the worship of Baal. It is certainly impossible for a man to be a true worshiper of God in the church and also worship in a secret lodge. I know men who let their wives and children go half-clad and poorly fed, and are regular worshipers in both the lodge and the church. There is in Masonry no lifting or Christ-religion. Just hear their hollow prayers, as empty as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. They have the woodshed and kitchen degree ('Rebekah') of the I. O. O. F., here, and the foolish women get up a supper occasionally for the benefit of the dear brethren. Through green-eyed jealousy, their nicest and smartest Becky has seceded from the order."

LODGE NOTES.

The Royal Arcanum in the United States, last year, made fifteen assessments upon its membership, aggregating over $3,000,000. Its membership now exceeds 125,000. Death benefits paid in 1891, $3,096,250.

The annual report of Northwestern Council Royal Arcanum No. 315, of Chicago, for 1891, shows that from a membership of 751 at the close of the year, there was collected for "the widows' and orphans' fund," $18,000; that there was "given to the sick and needy," during the same time, $300. No other expenditures are mentioned. What became of the rest of the funds?

Founded in Washington, D.C., February 19th, 1864, the Knights of Pythias now enters its twenty-eighth year of existence with a splendid army of more than 300,000 brave men and true, marching steadily forward under the tri-colored banner of Pythianism. One year ago, 263,000 names were enrolled on the rosters of membership; within the past twelve months, this number has increased to 308,000, making an increase during the year of 45,000. There are over 4,000 lodges whose financial reports show that the order is on a sound basis.—Mystic Tie.

Oriental Consistory has announced that during the Columbian Exposition it will entertain every worthy Scottish Rite Mason who may visit Chicago. Its doors will be ever open, while the illustrious brethren who comprise Oriental Consistory, and they are nearly all of the elite of Masonry in Chicago, will spare neither time nor money to prove to their brethren from every part of the civilized world that in the "Royal and Military Order of the House of the Temple," located in Chicago, the religion of humanity without creed, and politics without party, are most studiously cultivated and exemplified.—American Tyler.

Odd-fellows:—The 4th of March will be the 50th anniversary of the introduction of the order in Georgia, and the brethren are arranging to properly celebrate the same. In conning over details the following pleasing facts were noted: The order is steadily increasing in New Orleans and the urban lodges are gradually absorbing good material. The new temple at Baltimore is to be dedicated April 26th, 1892. One-sixth of the Odd-fellows of America are represented by lodges in Pennsylvania. William White has been Grand Secretary of Kentucky for thirty-eight years. Chicago Odd-fellows are agitating that the Sovereign Grand Lodge for 1893 shall meet in the Windy City. "A member of a lodge at Sudbury, Canada, travels thirty-five miles to attend lodge." Dollars to cents there is a girl living near that lodge-room.—Mystic Tie.

Harrisville, W. Va., Dec. 30.—S. S. Stewart, editor of the Ritchie Revue, was expelled from the Knights of Pythias lodge without a trial some time ago, on charges preferred by J. S. Singler, a fellow member, editor of a rival newspaper, the Review. The quarrel between them was of a political nature. Stewart carried his case to the Grand Lodge of the State, and that body reinstated him and censured the subordinate lodge for taking cognizance of political matters. Stewart entered his lodge last night on the occasion of the annual banquet, presented the decision of the Grand Lodge, and demanded recognition. The Chancellor refused to recognize the Grand Lodge's authority, and ordered Stewart ejected. Stewart warned the officers to desist, but they seized him, and after a desperate struggle, succeeded in getting Stewart into the ante room and closing the door. Then Stewart began to bombard the door with his revolver, and after he had shot it full of holes the lodge surrendered, and he was permitted to enter and participate in the banquet.—World.

The safest means of getting rid of a bad cough is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. 25 cents.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

The hypophosphites of lime and soda combined with cod-liver oil in Scott's Emulsion improve the appetite, promote digestion, and increase the weight.

They are thought by some to be food; but this is not proved. They are tonics; this is admitted by all.

Cod-liver oil is mainly a food, but also a tonic.

In Scott's Emulsion the cod-liver oil and hypophosphites are so combined as to get the full advantage of both.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 123 South 5th Avenue, New York.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
- John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
- James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
- Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
- Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
- Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
- Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
- John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
- Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
- William Wirt, Attorney-General.
- John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
- John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
- Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
- Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. Madison St., Chicag

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound). The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

- Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
- New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
- Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
- Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

AND COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John J. Underhill, Lieutenant-General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOKS

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING (The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Counterline, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdalo; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Paris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 65¢ per dozen. Paper covers, 50¢; $4.00 per dozen.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1892.

THE FALLACIES OF ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

The anniversary of the founding of an Odd-fellows' lodge, twenty years ago, at Galesburg, Ill., was made the occasion of a Sunday evening jubilee by that fraternity, February 15. The performance was held in the Methodist Episcopal church, under the auspices of the lodge chaplain, with the usual accessories of fraternal fuss and feathers. The chaplain and the choir were the principal actors.

The chaplain prayed for the lodge and the choir sang, but in whose praise the local paper neglects to state. Then the chaplain read the scriptural lecture of the "covenant of friendship" (1 Sam. 20:14, 15), for a text, and proceeded to glorify the principles and alleged good works of the order in a discourse more pathetic and eloquent than truthful; but then, every Odd-fellow is bound to uphold his lodge and its charitable pretensions.

But they all forget to tell their hearers that the Christian religion authorizes even a better sort of charity and benevolence, with a scope not confined to any secret order, but as wide as the world and the whole family of man. No lodge requires so full and free a benevolence of its members as the Lord demands to be practiced in his name by all who call him Father. The lodge can add nothing to his gracious requirements, while it confines its works of charity to only those who pay their dues for its support. And that is all the charity to which Odd-fellowship can lay any honest claim. All the sophistry of the lodge advocates "hath this extent—no more."

Let the chaplain be heard for himself:—"Those who say that it is a religious institution are mistaken. It is a beneficent institution. It teaches morality of the highest type. No man can be a true Christian without being in a large sense a moral man. If any man observe strictly the teachings of Odd-fellowship, he will be a better man. Nor is it an irreligious or anti-Christian institution. It inculcates a belief in a Supreme Being, the creator and ruler and preserver of the universe. The peace of the members is not disturbed by theological discussions. There is a judicious toleration and freedom and broad fellowship. Again, the charge of the chaplain at the grave shows that the organization is not anti-Christian, but is scriptural as touching the questions of mortality and immortality. And in the same line the accusation that the chaplain cannot use the name of Christ in the prayers of the lodge is untrue."

1. It is not "a beneficent institution." In the case of sickness or accident, from the lodge, long run a member can obtain money benefits, in but he has previously deposited that money in the lodge, as in a savings bank. He is only receiving his own.

2. "It teaches morality." So does common sense, as a stepping-stone to respectability. There is no virtue in that. The Christian religion teaches a better condition than morality, even "of the highest type."

3. "If any man observe strictly the teachings of Odd-fellowship, he will be a better man." And if he will leave the lodge and "observe strictly the teachings" of Christ in his "Sermon on the Mount," he will be a very much "better man" than Odd-fellowship ever made.

4. "No man can be a true Christian without being in a large sense a moral man." True, but he would have made the expression stronger by saying that "a true Christian is a perfectly moral man."

5. "Nor is it an irreligious," etc. That is, it is pure Deism, not Christianity. Christianity is a vital religion; Deism and Odd-fellowship are not. Their beliefs cannot save a man from sin and eternal woe. "Theological discussions are not permitted in the lodges," therefore "the peace of the members is not disturbed" by them. Pure Deism is free from excitement, because it is a weak and unauthorized religion, without special requirements of duty, while it tends to induce moral lethargy. It is not Christianity. It inculcates a dangerous liberalism, leaving each member to form private religious opinions ("judicious toleration," the chaplain miscalls it),

"with freedom and broad fellowship." Socialism claims nothing more, and even less, for it does not pretend to be a religion—merely a worldly reform.

6. "The organization (Odd-fellowship) is not anti-Christian, but is scriptural as touching the questions of mortality and immortality." It needs no Scripture to teach the mortality of man. The evidence of it is in every home. Plato taught the immortality of the soul; but he was human. Christ taught mankind to fear "him who is able to cast body and soul into hell," intimating that immortality in eternal punishment is not desirable; and he also taught that "this is eternal life, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." This description applies only to Christians or followers of Christ, and no one else. Is it not better to enjoy eternal life in and through Christ than to experience a painful immortality out of him?

7. "The accusation that the chaplain cannot use the name of Christ in the prayers of the lodge is untrue." The action of the Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows in Newport (N. H.), October 15, 1891, sets this question at rest. It clinches the nail so closely that no individual or even State Grand Lodge can extract it. We quote verbatim from the report: "Vigorous resolutions were adopted petitioning the Sovereign Grand Lodge to reverse its action and the decision of the Grand Sire, that the name of Christ CANNOT be used in lodge-rooms." That ought to settle it with every chaplain of the order.

THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONVENTION.

A motley collection of politicians met at St. Louis last week, to form an alliance for campaign work in the coming Presidential contest.

The official report seated 264 delegates from the Farmers' Alliance, 53 F. M. B. A., 82 Knights of Labor, 97 National Farmers' Alliance, 25 National Citizens' Alliance, 97 Colored F. M. B. A., 27 National Citizens' Independent Alliance, 75 Patrons of Industry, 25 Patrons of Husbandry; total, 677. The Farmers' Alliance was given 25 delegates-at-large, and 13 minor detached organizations and individuals were given a representation of 58. In addition, Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Somerset, Clara Hoffman and F. H. Ingalls were admitted to the platform as delegates of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union.

President Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance, after objections from Powderly of the Knights of Labor, was elected chairman of the convention. Ben Terrell, of Texas, and Miss Willard were chosen vice-presidents; the latter, responding to the call of the convention, was enthusiastically received and made a ringing address of congratulation. John W. Hayes, a Knight of Labor, was selected for secretary.

The daily papers fully reported the proceedings of the convention, which, from the incongruity of the elements composing it, the various aims and ambitions of the parties represented, and the personal prejudices of the delegates, were certainly inharmonious. Conferences and mass meetings, however, brought the delegates into better temper before the second day's session, and the work proceeded more smoothly. Still there was considerable friction manifested at times.

At length the platform of the convention was completed and adopted. Stripped of much of its verbiage, it goes on to say:

In order to restrain the extortions of aggregated capital, to drive the money changers out of the temple, to form a perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity, we do ordain and establish the following platform of principles:

1. We desire the union of labor forces of the United States, this day accomplished, permanent and perpetual. May its spirit enter into all hearts for the salvation of the Republic and the uplifting of mankind.

2. Wealth belongs to him who creates it. Every dollar taken from industry without an equivalent is robbery. If any will not work, neither shall he eat. The interests of rural and urban labor are the same; their enemies are identical.

3. We demand a National currency, safe, sound, and flexible, issued by the general government only, a full, legal tender for all debts, public and private, and that without the use of banking corporations, a just, equitable means of circulation, at a tax not to exceed 2 per cent, as set forth in the Sub-Treasury plan of the Farmers' Alliance, or some better system; also by payments in discharge of its obligation for public improvements.

4. We demand free and unlimited coinage of silver.

5. We demand that the amount of circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

6. We demand a greater income tax.

7. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence, we demand that all National and State revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government, economically and honestly administered.

8. We demand that postal savings banks be established by the government for the safe deposit of the earnings of the people, and to facilitate exchange.

9. Your sub-committee upon land plank beg to submit to your approval the following: The land, including all the natural resources of wealth, is the heritage of all people, and should not be monopolized for speculative purposes, and alien ownership of lands should be prohibited. All lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of their actual needs, and all lands now owned by aliens, should be reclaimed by the government, and held for actual settlers only.

10. Transportation being a means of exchange and a public necessity, the government should own and operate the railroads in the interest of the people.

11. The telegraph and telephone, like the postoffice system, being a necessity for the transmission of news, should be owned and operated by the government in the interest of the people.

12. We demand that the government issue legal-tender notes and pay the Union soldiers the difference between the price of the depreciated money in which he was paid and gold.

Resolved, That we hail this conference as the consummation of the perfect union of the hearts and hands of all sections of our common country; the men who wore the gray and the men who wore the blue meet here to extinguish the last smoldering embers of civil war in the tears of joy of a united and happy people, and we agree to carry the Stars and Stripes forward forever to the highest point of National greatness.

Such is the platform which will be considered by the future convention for the nomination of President and Vice President of the United States.

Miss Willard had prepared for this platform a couple of planks—one demanding universal suffrage without distinction of sex, and the other advocating prohibition of the liquor traffic by the national government. It will be observed that neither plank was incorporated in the general platform.

On this subject Mrs. Helen Gougar expressed herself as follows, and it probably voices the opinions of all prohibitionists in the Union: "It is the grossest insult to womanhood that I ever witnessed in any convention. The People's party does not hesitate to use the women to help win victories, but that is all the use they seem to have for them. No woman with any self-respect or dignity will identify herself with such a party."

Miss Willard will survive her defeat in this convention, and neither lose prestige as a courageous reformer, nor the esteem of the people as an earnest Christian woman.

MORE BRUTAL COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Westminster College, a classical and scientific institution, established at New Wilmington, Pa., in 1852, was recently the theatre of student brutality seldom if ever experienced in a respectable seat of learning. It is, however, only another example of lawlessness, or impatience of restraint, nurtured by an unhallowed ambition to excel rather in brute force than in mental acquirements. How far the "athletic" sports permitted in these institutions as sources of rivalry are responsible for this growing recklessness and partisan malice, the educational authorities of the country must decide. The frequent repetition of these disgraceful acts can only tend to depreciate the value of college courses.

The story as told by a newspaper correspondent at New Wilmington is as follows: "A fierce feud is raging at Westminster College here between the freshmen and sophomores. The freshmen have their flag floating from the college building and resist all attempts on the part of the sophomores to haul it down. Several fierce encounters have occurred, during one of which the sophomores captured five freshmen and tied them hand and foot. They then took two of them out in the country and placed them in a smoke-house, where they remained for eight hours, and were nearly frozen when found by a farmer. One of the others was thrust into a sewer and two were put in a cellar, where they remained until morning. These men are now confined to bed suffering from bruises and exposure. Sunday night the least of the college buildings was destroyed by dynamite. Last night the police were out in full force, but were powerless to do anything. Both classes are armed with revolvers, clubs and knives, mounted on horses and in wagons and all disguised, so that it is impossible to identify them. The faculty have ordered the classes placed in jail in a body and several arrests have been made. The faculty have the names of the dynamiters and if the mob does not surrender every one will be suspended."

"Suspended" is too mild a term to use in this connection. Something more severe should be substituted for a punishment that attaches to far less reprehensible offences against the peace and dignity of colleges.

A THOROUGH DEMAGOGUE.

If any reader of the Cynosure has ever considered T. V. Powderly, the leader of the Knights of Labor, in any other light than that of a demagogue, he has greatly mistaken the character of this pestilent politician.

At the "National Industrial Convention," held in St. Louis last week, Mr. Powderly executed a series of maneuvers that fully testify to the untrustworthiness of his political character.

Hitherto he has expressed himself greatly in favor of prohibition, and by his exertions in its behalf had induced Miss Willard to depend upon him as a firm coadjutor in her temperance work.

At the convention, however, instead of giving aid and comfort to Miss Willard and her associates by advocating the adoption of her prohibition and woman-suffrage resolutions, he persuaded Miss Emma Curtis, of Colorado, to propose the following substitute: "We demand that the question of universal suffrage be submitted to the legislatures of the different States and Territories for favorable action."

"Some one," says the Inter Ocean's report, "immediately demanding the previous question, the substitution was made by a crushing majority amid volleys of cheers, Miss Curtis blushing like a rose and laughing heartily at the success that had crowned her efforts. Miss Willard, seated upon the platform, looked sober, as if attending a funeral.

"Powderly hurried to the platform and held a hasty conference with Miss Willard. Soon afterward, before the roll-call, which was demanded, could be taken, the announcement was made in Powderly's name that Miss Curtis' proposition had been withdrawn, as part of the platform, to be offered later on as a simple resolution. To the surprise of everybody, and the chagrin of Powderly, General Weaver and other leaders, Miss Curtis arose and declared she had done no such thing.

"It was now apparently the purpose of Powderly, having kept Miss Willard's minority report out of the platform, to placate her and her friends by having the convention adopt the Willard plank as a resolution in place of that of Miss Curtis.

"When a roll-call was finally reached on what had now become Miss Curtis' minority platform report, the vote was taken by States. Secretary Hayes declared the minority report carried, 254 to 246, counting the Knights' organization as voting solidly yea. Meanwhile Miss Willard and Lady Somerset had slipped out of the hall unobserved, and did not return."

Afterwards, when the woman-suffrage question was again brought before the convention, the acting chairman announced that it had nothing to do with prohibition. Washburne, of Massachusetts, insisted that Miss Curtis' resolution was a substitute for both of Miss Willard's minority resolutions concerning prohibition and woman-suffrage, the idea being that wherever throughout the nation woman-suffrage was secured, prohibition would soon follow. The previous question was called, and Miss Curtis' resolution, now thoroughly separated from the platform, was adopted without further opposition.

Since the foregoing was written, the Inter Ocean prints an interview between an Associated Press reporter and Miss Willard, from which we make the following excerpt:

"Do I think Mr. Powderly acted in the convention in entire good faith? Indeed I do," said Miss Willard with warmth. "I have great admiration for Mr. Powderly, and so far from believing that he or the Knights of Labor in the convention acted in bad faith, I think they stood squarely up for the women till they saw that it was going to put them greatly at odds, when they decided it wiser to vote for suffrage as a separate resolution.

"Mr. Powderly told me that he was not the author of the Colorado resolution, and that the use of his name in attempting its withdrawal was wholly unauthorized by him."

Well, notwithstanding Miss Willard's whitewashing of Mr. Powderly in this ardent manner, we are still of the belief that the adoption of Miss Curtis' resolution by the convention as a separate principle and no part of the platform, in no wise relieves him from the taint of demagoguism; and henceforth the Prohibitionists will do well to ignore advances of himself and his knights as friends of the cause which they support.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

The addition to the building is being completed. The Spence heating system has just been put in and works satisfactorily.

The Junior class are using the chemical laboratory which has been fitted up almost entirely at their expense, with the help of Prof. Whipple. Each chemical student has a table with shelving, compartment drawers, gasoline burner, hot water faucet and drainage. Principal J. W. Roberts, of the Tacoma High School, Washington, has offered to donate a gross of re-agent bottles, so that each student may be supplied with a set of re-agents. The remainder of the first floor will be used by Prof. Whipple as his recitation room and the cabinet of natural history. The second floor is to be used as a library and reading room. The third floor will probably be devoted to the musical department, and the fourth floor will contain two society halls.

Some of the young men have organized a senate, which meets every Saturday morning from ten to twelve A. M. They propose to discuss such questions as are pending before the United States Senate, or are otherwise of public interest. The young gentlemen of the Preparatory School have organized a literary society known as the "Kreitonian."

Mr. J. G. Brooks, of the Junior class, delivered an oration in the Belden Avenue Baptist church, Chicago, Feb. 22. The day was observed at the College by the students at a meeting beginning at 3:15 in the afternoon. The program was entirely an extemporaneous one and a number of the students are evidently learning to think while facing an audience and to utter their thoughts.

J. W. Fifield, of the class of '89, was chosen to represent the students of Chicago Theological Seminary at a meeting of the seminaries in and about Chicago. Possibly many of those who see this note may remember that Edgar Wylie, also a graduate of Wheaton College, filled this same appointment last year.

MISS WILLARD'S PLATFORM.

When an Associated Press reporter, after the St. Louis mongrel convention adjourned, asked Miss Willard, "What will the Prohibitionists do now?" she replied emphatically:

"You may just put this down as what I think they will do. On the 29th of June in the city of St. Louis will be held a national convention of the Prohibition party, the delegates to which will be from every State and Territory in the Union, with a fair sprinkling of women among the delegates, and that convention will hew out a platform, heart of oak every plank, sound on economic principles, treating of government ownership of all highways and means of communication, also of monetary reform, ownership of land, prohibition and woman suffrage. The platform will mean what it says and say what it means.

"Candidates will be chosen for President and Vice President, and we will have the spectacle presented of two tickets in the field among the divided reform forces who seek the people's good."

We believe in Miss Willard and the Prohibitionists; but when it comes to mixing them up with Powderly and his secret societies, his predilections for Roman Catholicism, and his demagoguism, the Cynosure stands aloof.

—Since the surrender of the Louisiana State Lottery to the majesty of United States sovereignty, as previously reported, the management of that peculiarly iniquitous institution, it is said, contemplate its early removal to the sunny clime of Nicaragua, where a milder degree of moral restraint and a greater postal freedom may be enjoyed. Its emigration will not be regretted.

—In the New England Letter of last week the amount so generously raised by friends for the New England Secretary was wrongly stated, owing to a mistake in the footing. It was $75, as given in Bro. Stoddard's report.

—It is now stated that thousands of United States pensioners are living in foreign countries, with no intention of ever resuming their residence in this republic. A member of Congress who thinks that such persons should not receive these stipends from the government, has introduced a bill providing that no more pensions be paid to them. The measure seems to be an equitable one. If America is not good enough for these Americans, they have no right to look to her for their support. The pension list, even so far as it is legitimate, is a very heavy burden on the taxpayers.

—A note from John G. Fee, Berea, Ky., Feb. 23, brings cheering reports of a religious revival in progress at that place: "Twenty-two persons here, in church on last Lord's day, made a profession of faith in Christ. The work has been going on for two weeks. We hope to have it continue and override the commotion Eugene Fairchild and W. C. Wright have made by what is called 'the New York paper'—an effort to control testimony against sect. I had la grippe for three weeks, but am now able to preach, visit, work, and help in meetings every day and every night. Pray for me."

—The Law Times, a standard legal authority, calls attention to the fact, not always remembered by lawyers when drawing up wills, and seldom known by other persons who with their own hands attempt to bestow their property on their heirs, that in disposing of real estate the word "devise," is appropriate, while "bequeath" applies more particularly to the disposition of money and personal property. The misplacing of either word may so invalidate a will as to leave a loop-hole for crafty lawyers and dishonest heirs. A word to the wise may save their executors and administrators a world of trouble.

—John B. Alden, 57 Rose street, New York City, announces the publication of Strong's Bible Concordance and Lexicon, which shows every word of the text of both the Old and New Versions, and every occurrence of each word, a feature that carries a very forcible idea of the completeness of the work, especially as it also embraces a comparative concordance, presenting all important differences between the two versions. It includes, also, the peculiarities of the Bible language as exhibited in the English, Hebrew and Greek tongues; also, a Hebrew and Chaldaic Dictionary-Concordance, and likewise a Greek Dictionary-Concordance. The whole work will contain about 1,720 quarto pages, bound in fine cloth, red edges, price $5.00; half Russia, price, $6.00; half Turkey Morocco, very strong, price $7.50. Specimen pages sent on application.

—A noon prayer meeting, held daily from 12 to 1 o'clock, has been established at 221 West Madison street (the Cynosure building), in which a Christian spirit pervades the exercises, and to which all persons are invited. Quite recently one attendant has become soundly converted and is now actively engaged in city missionary work. On Tuesday, also, a converted mariner, Captain McNeil, who led the services on that day, testified that by the help of our good brother, Rev. William Fenton, he had been induced to forsake Freemasonry, and is now warning people to avoid the lodge and its evils. He said that as a seafaring man he had visited many climes and addressed Masonic lodges; but when he was converted, the Holy Spirit restrained him from further visits to those places. He encountered one difficulty, however, and it has probably affected other Christian men in the same manner. He had heard so much of God's Word mixed up in the rituals of the order (and he might have added, in a mangled form), that the devil had blinded him to the enormity of its evils; but when Bro. Fenton had enlightened him, he saw the abomination as it is, and is now freely giving his testimony against it.

THE HOME.

HE LEADETH ME.

In pastures green? Not always; sometimes He Who knoweth best, in kindness leadeth me
In weary ways, where heavy shadows be—

Out of the sunshine, warm and soft and bright—
Out of the sunshine, into darkest night;
I oft would faint with sorrow and affright--

Only for this: I know He holds my hand,
So, whether in a green or desert land,
I trust, although I may not understand.

And by still waters? No, not always so;
Ofttimes the heavy tempests round me blow,
And o'er my soul the waves and billows go.

But when the storms heat loudest, and I cry
Aloud for help, the Master standeth by,
And whispers to my soul, "Lo, it is I."

Above the tempest wild I hear him say,
"Beyond this darkness lies the perfect day:
In every path of thine, I lead the way."

So whether on the hill-tops high and fair
I dwell, or in the sunless valleys where
The shadows lie—what matter? He is there.

And more than this; where'er the pathway lead,
He gives to me no helpless, broken reed;
But his own hand, sufficient for my need.

So where he leads me I can safely go:
And in the blest hereafter I shall know
Why in his wisdom he hath led me so.

—Anonymous.

THE GIRL IN THE HOME.

A bright, sweet, intelligent young girl in the house, enlivening its prosaic duties, adjusting her youth to its environments, bringing new ideas to its life and arrangements, is something exquisitely charming. She is like a beautiful bookmark, silken and perfumed, between the leaves of a sometimes hackneyed, commonplace volume.

To the house, when she comes in, she brings the breezy air, the nerve and dash of a new generation. It is she who ties the bows on the backs of the chairs, paints the sketches in water-colors on the walls, does the Kensington embroidery on the "throws," and fills the little cabinet with her china cups and souvenir spoons. It is she who attracts other young lives to the house, and fills it with the sparkle of joy and mirth, as a magnet draws filings of steel. To her is the home indebted for its music and song, and its attitude of being—socially—abreast with the times.

How jaunty and tasteful are her garments, constructed with all the innocent exaggerations allowable to riotous, blooming youth! Her plumed hat and reefer, as they hang on the rack in the hall, give an indescribable suggestion of all for which they may stand! Yet she, herself, is the real blossom and adornment of the home, its spell and enchantment.

The young girl should consider that, though the outside woman is the exception, the woman in the home is the rule. The home is the enduring institution of the highest civilization and Christianity. The woman who is there situated, with no divine call to a mission outside of it, must there find her happiness. If she fails to do this, she will never find it elsewhere. Let the young girl "ponder these things in her heart."

What is it that goes toward the creation of a home from which true happiness may spring? and what measure of power and responsibility, concerning such issue, is vested in her?

The melody of home is like that of music. It has certain properties, dependencies and relations of tones which produce harmony. From time immemorial the task of their adjustment has been delegated to woman. The young girl is the woman of the future; and she cannot learn too early in life to assist in such artistic adjustment; for, though artistic, it is an art which springs from the recognition of morals and principles antecedent to all art. It involves the exercise of patience, forbearance, unselfishness and sweetness of temper, and willingness to yield in matters non-essential. It requires enthusiasm, courage, fortitude, and love, which are the "fulfilling of the law;" above and beyond these things, a thorough appreciation of the fact that this present life is but a stepping-stone to a better and happier beyond.

What a comfort may such a daughter prove to parents facing life's shady side! What a help and inspiration to brothers and sisters with whom she is associated! What a promise for the home of which, in future, she may become the sacred center!

And how may a weak young girl become armed and equipped and "sufficient" for undertakings so strenuous and important?

By that same power which enabled the apostle to say: "I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me."—Exchange.

THE ROYAL JEWELS IN THE TOWER OF LONDON.

The coronation crown of Queen Victoria occupies the center, and the highest place in the case. It was used for her coronation when she ascended to the throne in 1838. It is considered as being the most gorgeous and tasteful crown in Europe. It weighs three pounds and a quarter, and is adorned with no less than two thousand seven hundred and eighty-three diamonds. A brief description will no doubt be interesting.

The band or circlet which forms the base of the crown, and which fits the head of the Queen, is of pure gold, studded with many brilliant diamonds. It is apparently about an inch and a half wide, and inside of it is fitted a crimson velvet cap, bordered with royal ermine. Rising from the band, and supported by it, are four golden branches which meet together and form two arches, thus making the upper part of the crown. From the center of the arches rises an orb, or globe, of about two inches in diameter, made of diamonds of the first water. From the center of the globe rises a cross, also composed of diamonds, with a magnificent sapphire in the center. On the band, or circlet, at the points from which the arches rise, are four Maltese crosses. The first is on the front of the crown, and contains seventy-five brilliants, surrounding the ancient, famous ruby which was given to the "Black Prince" in 1366 by the King of Castile. The other crosses are set with an emerald center, and surrounded with diamonds. The band is edged above and below with two hundred and forty-one beautiful pearls. In front and immediately under the large ruby, set in the circlet, is a magnificent sapphire, surrounded by smaller sapphires, emeralds and small brilliants.

There are set in the crown 2,783 diamonds, 277 pearls, 17 sapphires, 5 rubies, and 11 emeralds, forming altogether one of the richest, most magnificent and dazzling crowns in the world. It far exceeds anything in the goldsmiths' art that we ever looked upon. We had visited and examined the rich collection of jewels in the green vaults in Dresden, a description of which is given in Europe and Bible Lands, and we also saw some of the jewels of the pleasure-loving kings of France, but nothing to compare with the gorgeous crown of England's honored Queen.—D. L. Miller, in the Gospel Messenger.

WHAT IS LIFE?

One day, when the birds had sung themselves quite weary, a long pause ensued, broken at last by a philosophical chaffinch in these words:

"What is life?"

They all were rather startled at this interruption, but a little warbler answered at once:

"Life is a song."

"No, it is a struggle in darkness," said a mole, who had just succeeded in getting his head above the ground.

"I think it is a development," said a wild rosebud, as she unfolded her petals one by one, to the delight of a butterfly who came to kiss her, and who exclaimed:

"Life is all enjoyment!"

"Call it rather a short summer's day," hummed a little fly as it passed by.

"I can not see in it anything but hard work," was the lamentation of a small ant, as she struggled on with a straw ever so much too big for her.

The magpie only laughed to cover his own poverty of thought. The general indignation at such levity might easily have produced a quarrel, had not at that moment the rain began to fall, whispering sadly:

"Life is made of tears."

"You are all mistaken," called out the eagle, as he sailed through the air on his majestic wings. "Life is freedom and strength."

Meanwhile it had grown dark, and a practical-minded bullfinch proposed that they should go to rest. And the night wind rustled softly through the leaves:

"Life is a dream."

Silence lay over town and country, and the dawn was near, when the scholar in his lonely room extinguished his lamp and sighed:

"Life is but a school."

While the youth, returning from a night of revelry, moaned in his heart:

"It is one long desire, ever unfulfilled."

"It is an eternal mystery," whispered fitfully the new-born morning breeze.

Then suddenly a rosy light spread over the horizon and tinged with its glow the tips of the forest trees, as it rose into the sky. And as the morning kissed the awakening earth, a mighty harmony rang through the world:

"Life is a beginning!"—Woman's Herald.

THE STOLEN SERMON.

A minister had been preaching one evening in a village at some distance from his home, when on his return he was stopped by a footpad, who presented a pistol and demanded his money. The minister allowed him to take his watch and money; and the thief feeling some papers in his pocket took them also away with him, saying, that for anything he knew there might be banknotes among them. These papers were, however, manuscript sermons, written out at length in a fair and legible hand. Some months afterwards, a respectable man called upon the same minister, recalled to his recollection the robbery, stated that he was the robber, restored the watch and a sum of money equivalent to that which he had taken away, and stated that the cause of his making restitution was, that upon looking over the papers he found a sermon with the words, "Thou shalt not steal." The singularity of this circumstance induced him to read it, and the impression produced upon him by its warnings was so powerful that he abandoned his profligate course, became an altered man, devoted himself to industrious labor, and took the earliest opportunity of restoring the property he had stolen.—Anonymous.

SOME QUEER CRADLES.

What queer cradles some little folks have! The Indian baby is strapped to a board and hung up in a tree or carried on its mother's back. He has no toys; and if the sun shines in his face or the storm beats on his head, it does not matter.

In Lapland the cradle looks something like a big slipper. The baby is laid in it, covered up with a sheet. There are holes in each side of the cradle, and through these a stout cord is laced across to keep the baby from tumbling out. When the Lapland baby's mother attends church she leaves him outside to keep warm in a hole made in the snow. Sometimes several cradles are left in a cluster, and then the children set up such a chatter that they disturb the meeting.

When the Laps are traveling from place to place, these cradles are slung on the mother's shoulders. And they go through some dreadful storms and snow-drifts.—Sunbeam.

OUR BOYS ARE WHAT WE MAKE THEM.

Every moralist hard up for a theme asks at intervals: "What is the matter with the sons of our rich men?" The question is followed by statistics concerning the wickedness and bad endings of such sons, bringing in just now, as the most recent example, the case of young Raum, son of the pension commissioner.

The trouble with the moralist is that he puts the question wrong end first. There is nothing wrong with those foolish sons, except that they are unlucky. But there is something altogether wrong with their fathers.

Suppose that a fine specimen of an old deerhound, very successful in his business, should collect untold deer in a small park, fatten them up, and then say to his puppies—"Here, boys, I've had a hard life catching these deer, and I mean to see you enjoy yourselves. I'm so used to racing through woods and hunting that I can't get out of the habit, but you boys just pile into the park and help yourselves." Such a deerhound as that would be scorned by every human father. The human would say to such a dog—"Mr. Hound, you're simply ruining those puppies. Too much meat and no exercise will give them the mange and seventeen other troubles, and if dis-temper doesn't kill them they will be a knock-kneed, water-eyed lot of disgraces to you. For their sake and yours, keep them down to dog-biscuit and work them hard."

That same human father does with great pride the very thing that he would condemn in a dog or cat. He ruins his children, and then when he gets old, profusely and sadly observes that he has done everything for them, and yet they have disappointed him. Mr. Raum, who gives to his son an office which he has not deserved and enables him to disgrace his father and his friends, deserves no more sympathy than any Mr. Fagin deliberately educating a boy to be dishonest.

The fat, useless pug dogs which young women drag wheezing about at the ends of strings are not to blame for their condition, and the same thing is true of rich men's sons. The young women who over-feed the dogs, and the fathers who ruin the sons, have themselves to thank.

No man would advocate the thing, perhaps; but who can doubt that if there could be a law making it impossible for a man to inherit anything but a good education and a good constitution, it would supply us in short order with a better lot of men.—N. Y. Sun.

LIVING FLOWERS.

If you could kiss the rose's velvet mouth,
To charm the cruel canker worm away,
And cry, "Awake, O North wind, come, thou South!
Breathe on my flowers to-day,"

Would you not love to save them from the blight,
And flush them into beauty fresh and new?
To bring them gifts of fuller life and light,
Sunshine and limpid dew?

This you can do for fairer flowers than these,
Flowers that have thoughts and feelings like your own!
Whose stems are broken by the stormy breeze,
Whose freshest tints are blown.

Out in the darkness of the miry street
Those bruised lilies in their weakness lie,
Down-trodden by the tramp of reckless feet—
Left there alone to die.

Go, raise them gently, wash away the stain
On their white petals with your tender grief;
Your tears shall fall like showers of precious rain,
Cleansing each sullied leaf.

Oh, give those human blossoms human love!
Uplift the fallen seventy times and seven;
Save these sweet living things to bloom above
In the fair land of heaven.
—Sarah Doudney, in Night and Day.

TEMPERANCE.

AN UNGODLY SCHEME.

A bill prepared, it seems, expressly for the liquor-sellers, has been introduced in the Assembly of New York. On this bill the excise committee of the Assembly was to give a hearing Feb. 11. The bill proposes to destroy the civil damage law, the Sunday law, and to permit an all-night ball license where "public necessity" requires. The police are to be forbidden to detect illegal selling under pain of criminal punishment, and the bondsmen of licenses are to no longer need real estate qualifications.

This is only additional proof that the whole rumsellers' tribe belong to the swine family; and if any of the Gadarene herd of swine survived the plunge into the sea, these are their true lineal descendants, for they are exceedingly devilish in their thirst for the happiness and blood of helpless women and children.

During the last ten years we have thought that before the end is reached it would come to something like this, when the rum power would demand all the good life-blood of the nation. Surely they are rapidly approaching that time. This bill is a league with Sabbath desecrators, outlaws, prostitutes, murderers, thieves and devils. We hope it will not pass. We hope the American people, and especially the citizens of the Empire State, will come to their senses on this question without being scourged by such madness as this. But, if not, we say let it come, and when the flames kindled by this rum demon shall devour every decent man's home; when rum-soaked hands shall spoil his daughter of her virtue; when the rum-inspired thief shall steal his silver and gold; when the rumseller shall drink up his blood, perhaps then churches and respectable citizens will arise and put away this monster. God help us.

—Wesleyan Methodist.

TIMELY WARNING.

The following are extracts from an address given by Prof. L. W. Parish of the Iowa State Normal School, and published in the Iowa Messenger.

"Every Christian girl should require total abstinence as one of the essentials to the winning of her love.

"If this were indeed the rule, what a reform should we witness in American society, and what a heavenly brightness would there be in the sky of many a family where now the dull clouds of anxiety overhang, and even the lurid light of the swift tornado fills with mortal terror.

"Oh, the pity that every generation of young women has to learn for itself, and often through bitter experience, the fact that a man who will not give up a bad habit before marriage for the sake of her he loves, seldom does so afterwards to please his wife or even save his children.

"Oh, that our American girls had always the wisdom and courage to show their unconquerable aversion to this and other evil habits of young men by declining any intimate friendships with those who refuse to be worthy of it! I believe that a W. C. T. U. of our girls with this as a fundamental principle would work more of a reform among our young men than is well realized.

"And you young men, strong and brave, who glory in your strength and feel confident that you have the will-power to control the dangerous habit; who despise the weakness of those who yield their wills to the seductions of drink; oh, young men, are you stronger and more gifted than those great and noble souls, the Goughs, the Wirts, the Woolleys, who in the pride of their youth went down before this insidious destroyer until their pride was in the dust and their manhood reduced to the level of the brute; it is true, in weary middle life they struggled back again to decency and final usefulness, but only after years that might have been beautiful with prosperity and usefulness, all black and blasted with scenes too dreadful to remember? Are you stronger than they to resist, if some unforeseen temptation or discouragement adds its unexpected influence to the already dangerous power of the social glass? Or if you fall, dare you hope, like them, to rise again? Have you not known many a man of stronger will and brighter intellect than yours, who have failed! Oh, the anguish, the despair of that word for those who have thus wrecked their lives!

"Young man, the danger you are courting is like the deadly quicksand, innocent to look at, but subtle, cruel and implacable.

"If you would know the meaning of this struggle read the life of any man who by the grace of God has come out of it in his right mind.

"Listen to the words of one of our most brilliant lawyers, John M. Woolley, of Minneapolis, who describes his own despair. 'Oh, young men! for your sake and the sake of your children, see to it that you have not in your life history a page like that from the life of John D. Woolley.'"

CIVIL DAMAGES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

There is a statute in Pennsylvania which does not seem to be very widely known, but which could be made very effective in the hands of men determined to see it enforced. It is the law which provides that saloon-keepers shall be held responsible in damages for injuries resulting from their sale of liquors to intoxicated persons. The Supreme Court of the State has lately made a decision which sustains the law as constitutional and equitable. A poor widow sued a liquor-seller because he sold liquor to her husband until he was unable to guide his steps homeward, fell into a gutter, contracted pneumonia and died. A jury gave the widow substantial damages, and upon appeal the Supreme Court sustained the verdict and the law. It brushed away without much ceremony the pleas made for the saloon-keeper, that pneumonia, and not liquor, was the immediate cause of death, and that the man took the liquor voluntarily. The court replied to the last plea: "Every drunkard not only takes liquor voluntarily, but whenever he can get it, and because of his weakness the law makes the saloon-keeper responsible for selling to such persons. He has not the will power to resist the temptation, and for this reason the sale to him is forbidden." A very good, brief temperance lecture delivered from the Supreme bench.—Presbyterian Observer.

AN IDEA FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Editor of the Voice, New York: Inasmuch as the brewers and distillers propose to make at the World's Fair in 1893 an extensive exhibit of the process of making beer and liquors, and to open a German beer-garden to sell their wares, why wouldn't it be a capital idea for the Prohibitionists to secure space near the liquor exhibit and open a building, labeled, say, "The Beer-Whisky Annex, Showing the Finished Products of the Liquor Business," and in this have exhibited life-size pictures of those twenty St. Louis murderers, with the story of each, with similar collections from other cities; flashlight photographs from the dives and slums of New York, Chicago and other cities; pictures from the wards of insane asylums where alcohol patients are confined and from the haunts of misery in the drink-cursed districts, etc. A chamber of horrors based on fact and true to life? It seems to me this would be more practical and more effective than to attempt to boycott the Fair.
R. E. MINISCO.

New York City.

It is doubtful whether the managers of the Fair would for one moment entertain the proposition, having allied themselves with the distilling and brewing interests. If they are willing, however, there is originality enough in the scheme to insure it the patronage of the temperance element in attendance at the Fair; but it would be unpopular and the recipient of much animadversion, because of its truthfulness, among the liquor-sellers and drinkers.—EDITOR CYNOSURE.

SALOON MALICE.

Under the headings—"Hired to Do Murder—Another Iowa Haddock Case," a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, writing from Ottumwa, Iowa, February 15, relates the hiring of two thugs by whisky dealers to assassinate two witnesses who were ready to testify to their unlawful sales of liquor. A more dastardly outrage it is difficult to imagine, and one of the assaulted men was nearly killed. Robert Yates and John Erickson, members of the Ottumwa Temperance Council, have recently signed the pledge, and were witnesses against several saloon-keepers in important suits now pending. The two witnesses had just left a saloon, which they had casually visited, when they were overtaken by two men named Charles Cody and "Dick" Gallagher, who struck them on the head with heavy iron pins, rendering them unconscious. They pounded Yates until they thought him dead and then dragged him to a railroad track, where they left him to be killed by a passing train. Erickson meanwhile recovered consciousness and reported the affair to the officers, and Yates returning to consciousness dragged himself to his home near by more dead than alive. Gallagher, it is alleged, will turn State's evidence on the trial, exposing the whole murderous scheme. His testimony, it is hoped, may lead to the punishment of all the guilty parties.

Rum makes trouble everywhere. There is great agitation in England because the government proposes to compensate liquor dealers for pecuniary loss in retiring from the business. But there is no talk of compensating families for the losses which the liquor traffic has inflicted upon them.

Sake drinking, according to a writer in the American Antiquarian, is one of the great curses of Japan. In 1889 the amount of rice converted into sake amounted to 15,000,000 bushels. Pledges to abstain from the habit are frequently among the picture offerings in Japanese temples.

Of the 90,207 arrests in New York City last year, according to police reports, no less than fifty thousand were attributable to the liquor traffic. Nearly forty thousand were directly credited to the traffic by police.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON XI.—First Quarter, 1892.—March 13.

SUBJECT.—Promise of a New Heart.—Ezek. 36: 25-38.

GOLDEN TEXT.—A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you.—Ezek. 63: 26.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Ezek. 36: 25-38. T.—Ezek. 11: 14-20. W.—Deut. 30: 1-5. T.—Jer. 24: 4-10. F.—John 3: 1-5. S.—Tit. 3: 1-5. S.—1 Cor. 2: 6-16.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. A new heart.—vs. 25-27. The doctrine of regeneration was plainly taught in the Old Testament, though in our Saviour's time it was not understood even by "masters in Israel," like Nicodemus. There is one infallible test by which we can always tell a true work of the Holy Spirit. It is a cleansing power. "From all your filthiness and from all your idols I will cleanse you." How can a man be truly "born again" and remain in the lodge? The new nature will be at war with its worldly associations and Christless ceremonies. A revival that doesn't take men out of the lodge, nor cleanse them from the tobacco habit; that does not write, "All for Jesus" on the pocketbook and over their places of business, is a spurious one, and will only cumber the church with worldly, useless members. When God puts his Spirit within us, then we have the mind of Christ; then we "shall walk in his statutes and keep his judgments." The old nature cannot love God; the new nature cannot help loving. All that is hard and distasteful to the natural heart becomes easy and delightful when the new heart is given. There will be no need then of pledges and resolutions; no need to be in a state of chronic perplexity regarding God's will as it stands related to our daily conduct, for his law will be written in our hearts, as the laws of harmony are written in the soul of a Beethoven.

2. A blessed restoration.—vs. 28-31. "And ye shall dwell." The partial restoration of Israel was an earnest of their entire and permanent restoration in the latter days. But the promise has another and more individual meaning. Along with the clean heart and the new spirit comes the joy of being restored to all those privileges which have been forfeited by sin. "I will also save you from your uncleanness." All sin is unclean. We may not realize this because society to-day would not tolerate the grossness of many practices that were allowed two or three centuries ago. We have made clean the outside of the cup and platter; but how is it within? The Jews in our Saviour's day had renounced idolatry. For hundreds of years no visible idol could have been found in any Jewish home; and yet, as in Ezekiel's time, they had "set up their idols in their hearts;"—in that which should have been the temple of the living God. To these idols they elung, rejecting the blessed Jesus, and their house was left unto them desolate." The history of the Jews is of no more importance to us than the history of any other nation unless we appropriate to ourselves those practical lessons which God designs to teach us. Are they clean of soul, clean of hands, who vote to license the liquor traffic, the very fountain of uncleanness? Tobacco is not only filthy in itself but leads to all manner of moral filthiness. Are they clean who sell it, though members or even officers of the church? But the time will come when she will be purged from her uncleanness; when the pruning knife will be applied, and her dead branches cut off. It will be a fiery cleansing whose "fearfulness" will "surprise" all "hypocrites." "I will call for the corn," etc. "As a master calls for a servant. All the powers and production of nature are the servants of Jehovah." Many would come out from the lodge, but they think they cannot afford to lose the money they have put in. They would quit selling tobacco, or keeping their places of business open on the Sabbath, but they fear to lose their custom. But the silver and the gold are his. How much better to trust God in simple faith to keep his promise, that if we seek righteousness first, all that we need will be added unto us.

3. For his name's sake.—vs. 31-38. Nothing melts the heart like a sight of the cross. The self-righteous must always miss what he who feels his vileness is freely given.—a sight of God's wonderful grace and goodness. "Not for your sake." In the prayer, "Hallowed be thy name," how much is included of which those who use it never stop to think. If we trust God he will give us our daily bread, and deliver us from evil,

"for his name's sake." He will not allow it to be profaned by the taunting unbeliever, as if he was not able or willing to fulfill his word. "Then the heathen . . . shall know." Nothing so honors God in the sight of the world as simple faith on the part of his children, and it is the thing which our Saviour has told us will be most lacking at his second coming. "I will yet . . . be inquired of." God had said, before this, that "he would not be inquired of by the house of Israel." Their sins had cut them off from communion with him. Only by repentance could that communion be again restored. Another thought is pertinent here. The desolate land will not become as the garden of Eden, nor the ruined cities be built again without hands. "The Gospel must first be published to all nations," said our Lord; "and then shall the end be." If we are anxious for his coming, shall we not give freely both our money and ourselves to evangelize the world, and thus fulfill the conditions?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Probably the best attended theological seminary in the United States is that of the Baptist denomination, situated at Louisville, Ky. There are 225 students in all.

CHICAGO BETHEL.

—There are 300,000 men and boys employed on vessels on the inland waters of the United States and Canada, the Western rivers and the great lakes, and twice that number of longshoremen, such as freight-handlers, lumber-shovers, grain-trimmers, coal-heavers and ore-shovelers. Looking after the spiritual interests of this vast army of workmen, their wives and families, is the Western Seamen's Friend Society, which has recently entered upon the sixty-second year of its work in their behalf, and is now reaching about 300,000 of these men and boys, carrying to them the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and gathering regularly into Sunday-schools 6,000 children. The work in Chicago is in charge of Rev. S. Shinn, superintendent of the Lake Michigan district, and his assistant, the Rev. Malcolm McNeil, a converted sailor. During the past season of navigation these gentlemen addressed open-air meetings when the weather was favorable, and when it was stormy a religious service of preaching, song and prayer was held nearly every day in the Bethel reading-rooms, at the northwest corner of Franklin and South Water streets. To those who attended these meetings, religious tracts were distributed and received with gladness. This winter it has been proposed to establish in Chicago a floating Bethel, anchored near the Northwestern railroad bridge, large enough to accommodate a fair congregation. Appeals have been made to various churches for material aid to build this Bethel, which will cost $12,000, or more. Plans have been drawn, and as soon as the subscriptions will warrant, it is expected that the Bethel will materialize. The field is a promising one, and should be a fruitful one under the management of these earnest and devoted brethren.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The American Congregational Church Union, at its thirty-ninth annual meeting in New York City, changed its name to the "Congregational Church Building Society." It has done a large work in the past and advanced from year to year. Ten years ago the union aided in erecting forty-eight buildings for church uses; last year one hundred and ninety-two. In ten years the receipts and the work have quadrupled.

—Prof. Henry E. Gordon, who has been for eleven years at the head of the Tillotson Academy at Trinidad, Colo., one of the schools of the New West Education Commission, writes: "God is with us. We have had a most remarkable demonstration of the power of God. Every scholar in the Academic Department but one boy has made the decision for Christ. Twenty-two conversions since Dec. 18. The city is stirred as never before in its history, and nearly fifty have professed conversion. Nearly all the churches are holding special meetings."

EPISCOPALIAN.

—Whittaker's Protestant Episcopal Almanac for 1892 reports a membership in the Episcopal church in the United States of 530,288. The clergy number 4168; parishes and missions 5685, and for the last year the contributions were $13,418,053.34.

JEWS.

—Rabbi Samuel Sale, of St. Louis, has created somewhat of a commotion in Jewish circles at home by proposing a change of the Judaic Sabbath to the day observed by Christians as Sunday.

—The British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews has had an existence of forty-eight years, and its income according to the last report has reached $31,620. The field of operations includes not only the British Isles, but Germany, Austria, Turkey, and Russia as well. In Wilna Hospital 24,000 were treated last year. And in all, as the report states, "thousands of Jews have been drawn to the Cross and throne of Jesus."

LUTHERANS.

—The practical seminary at Brecklum, in Schleswig, Pastor Dr. Jensen, director, has already prepared forty young men for the Lutheran ministry in the United States.

—It is reported that so soon as the funds are forthcoming a German Lutheran bishop will be appointed for Jerusalem. The German emperor is interested in this movement.

—In the year 1780, there were only 70 ministers, 300 congregations, and probably about 30,000 members of the Lutheran church in this country; in 1823, 175 ministers, 600 congregations, and 45,000 communicants; in 1853, 850 ministers, 1,750 congregations, and 200,000 communicants. The statistics at the end of 1891 show 5,028 ministers, 8,388 congregations, 1,187,854 communicants. That is in round numbers six times as many ministers, five times as many congregations, and six times as many communicants as there were less than forty years ago.

—Census reports on the Lutheran church in the United States are of prime importance. The most powerful factor and force in the development of the Lutheran church in America, particularly in the Northwest, has been her system of parochial or congregational schools. The bulletin mentioned reports an attendance of 141,388 in these schools. Of these 13,716 are in the North-Atlantic Division of States. The South Atlantic States report only 1,271. The stronghold of the system and of the Lutheran church are the North Central States, the attendance here being 122,463. The South Central States report an attendance of 3,316. The Western Division reports 622.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—Reports of the Book Concerns are highly gratifying. The sales at New York and its depositories for 1891 were $1,061,076.38, with a net profit of $133,412.68, while the sales of the Western concern were $1,141,038.02 with a net profit of $171,074.13. The business at Chicago alone increased $90,674 over the previous fiscal year. Of the Eastern concern, the net capital is $2,000,618.21, while that of the Western amounts to $1,130,337.83. In 1880 the capital of the Western concern was $330,000; it had then $1.54 for each dollar of indebtedness; in 1888 it had $4.06 for every dollar of liability, and now it has $8.47 for every dollar it owes. With a united net capital of $3,130,956.09, with enlarged facilities and improved presses and machinery, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the presiding elders, pastors, and people, the outlook for the publishing interests were never brighter or more flattering for the future.

—Bengal conference met Jan. 14 in Calcutta. Bishop Thoburn presided. This conference was set off from the South India conference five years ago. It has thirty-one members and eight probationers. Twenty-three were present. During the last four years the number of members and probationers in the different stations and circuits of the conference has very nearly increased threefold. There are now 4,414. The leaders of the conference are tried men of long experience.

—There is a great religious revival along the coast of Hancock county, Me., this winter, the enthusiasm at West Tremont having reached such a pitch that a new dance hall has been turned into a Methodist church.

—Rev. Ross Taylor announces that the treasurer of the Bishop Taylor African Fund, also the African News, are now permanently located at 210 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—During the five years' pastorate of Rev. Dr. J. L. Withrow over the Third Presbyterian church, Chicago, 1,082 members have been enrolled, of whom 533 were received on profession of faith.

—No less than twenty-one members of the senior class in McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, have devoted themselves to foreign missionary work.

—There are 105 German Presbyterian churches in the United States, with a membership of 11,000.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. J. C. McFeeters, of Philadelphia, has been in collaboration with other R. P. ministers, preparing a sort of Covenanter Church Manual. It will contain about 200 pages and be issued early in March.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

—The Seventh-Day Baptists return, for 1891, 8,748 members, 1,796 of whom are non-residents, or live remote from churches of their denominations. There are 5,395 members of Sunday schools. The missionary society returns a revenue of $11,939 for domestic and foreign missions.

UNITED BRETHREN.

—The influence of a Christian college on the community in which it is located is shown in the following: Nineteen ministers of the Christian denomination reside at York, Neb., the seat of York College. Recently they organized a ministerial institute, which meets weekly, with Rev. Prof. A. B. Stratton as president. The church house in that city having become too small to accommodate the increased congregations, the trustees sold the church property to the German Methodists, and have purchased a lot on which will be erected a more commodious church edifice.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Edward Burling, the well-known architect, died Feb. 22.

Attorney Goodrich, of the Drainage Board, believes that the Sanitary District has no legal power to afford relief to the city by increasing the capacity of the Illinois and Michigan Canal.

The Illinois Central Road dismissed its general freight agent, Horace Tucker, after thirty years' service.

Banks Cregier, son of ex-Mayor Cregier, filed a bill in the Superior Court charging fraud and illegal action on the part of City Electrician Barrett and other officials in the purchase of fire and electrical apparatus.

On a banner stretched across the stage over the Stars and Stripes Sunday night, the audience at Central Music Hall read these words: "The Government of the United States Is Not, in Any Sense, Founded on the Christian Religion." This was the text upon which the Socialist speakers of the evening based their remarks in favor of keeping the Columbian Exposition open on Sunday.

COUNTRY.

J. Painter & Son's west end mill at Pittsburg, containing thirty puddling furnaces, has been shut down owing to dullness in the iron trade.

Whitecaps assaulted Robert Underhill, a simple-minded mute, near Branchville, Ind., Thursday night, shooting him in the head, inflicting a serious wound. The whitecaps were driven off by Underhill, his wife, and sister-in-law, two of them being badly hurt.

President Harrison and family went to Virginia Beach, Va., Friday, for a week's recreation.

Peter Smith, colored, of Springfield, Ohio, has patented a self-binder that uses straw instead of twine for binding.

Weightman Thompson was found guilty at Raleigh, S. C., Friday, of the murder of W. W. Pearson, wife, and two children near Goldsboro last December, and sentenced to be hanged April 14.

A shipment of 20,040 pounds of tin, valued at $4,200, from the Temescal mines in San Bernardino county, California, was made to New York Friday.

President W. W. Tracy Friday, called a meeting of the Illinois Republican League for Springfield March 10.

Wheat in Southern Minnesota is in bad condition, it is said, on account of a lack of snow. Many fields will be plowed this spring.

Hiram Sweet, for fifty years a resident of Wabash county, Indiana, died last week, aged 82 years.

Hiram Case, one of the oldest pioneers in Michigan, died Thursday night at Three Rivers, aged 95 years.

Each county in South Dakota will be canvassed for donations for Russian peasants.

Negroes at Nashville, Tenn., are making preparations to emigrate to Oklahoma.

The executive committee of the People's party will meet at Omaha May 11 for the purpose of perfecting the arrangements for the holding of the National convention of that party on July 4.

The Newmarket (N. H.) Savings Bank suspended Friday. The deposits are about $191,000.

John P. Sutton has tendered his resignation as Secretary of the Irish National League of America.

At Pittsburg, Pa., Tuesday, Charles Rodrus shot and probably fatally wounded his wife because she refused to share a recently inherited fortune with him.

An appeal for funds is made by the executive of the Irish National League to Irish Nationalists and friends of home rule in America.

Fifty thousand dollars additional for the World's Fair was appropriated by the New Jersey Legislature Tuesday.

Charcoal burners at Emerson, Mich., thrust a dissolute woman into a charcoal kiln and left her there five hours.

Though the fire was not hot enough to burn her, the woman was overcome by smoke and never regained consciousness after being taken out.

The annual meeting of the Michigan Patrons of Industry opened at Grand Rapids Tuesday. Fifteen thousand members were represented by the delegates present, against 50,000 last year.

Eastern capitalists are said to be plotting to secure most of the mining lands at Creede, Colo., where rich discoveries of gold were made recently.

The United States and Brazil mail steamship Advance is detained at quarantine at New York. She left Santos on Jan. 23 and Rio Janeiro on Jan 25. An epidemic of yellow fever broke out on the Advance, and seventeen of the seamen were stricken. Three of them died.

One death from typhus occurred at New York Tuesday and four new cases were discovered, making a total of 103 up to date.

While returning from a dance Tuesday morning three men were struck by a train at Hawkins Station, Pa. Two were killed almost instantly and the other fatally injured.

Grover Cleveland held a reception at the Hotel Cadillac in Detroit Tuesday evening. It is estimated that 15,000 persons grasped the hand of the ex-President.

Unless rain falls in Arizona within the next three weeks the losses to cattle-owners will be immense, it is said.

The fifteenth annual convention of the National Electric Light Association opened at Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday.

The Kenosha Watch Case Company, of Kenosha, Wis., and the Rockford Watch Case Company, of Rockford, Ill., have consolidated, with headquarters at the latter place.

A number of farmers of Livingston county, Ill., are to move to points in Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota.

President J. W. Collins, of the California National Bank, which suspended recently at San Diego, was arrested Wednesday, charged with the embezzlement of $200,000.

Major A. M. Sevier, formerly railroad commissioner of Missouri, died Wednesday at Neosho, Mo.

Violent earthquake shocks were felt at San Diego, Santa Ana and Los Angeles, Cal., Tuesday night.

The Congressmen and newspaper representatives who visited Chicago Friday returned to Washington Wednesday. Everybody was delighted with the excursion and enthusiastic about the World's Fair and its undoubted success.

The Rt. Rev. William J. Frost, D.D., LL. D., died at Carlyle, Ill., Wednesday aged 82 years.

Charles T. Wills has foreclosed a mechanic's lien on Dr. Talmage's Tabernacle in Brooklyn, and the structure will be sold by the sheriff.

Dr. W. C. Roberts, president of the University of Lake Forest, Ill., it is said has accepted a call to the Senior Secretaryship of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions.

The Boston and Albany will soon build the nicest depot in New England at Boston. It will cost about $1,000,000.

Colonel R. G. Ingersoll will begin suit against the Rev. A. C. Dixon, of Brooklyn, for slander, the latter having said that Ingersoll advocated the dissemination of obscene literature.

In the case of Dr. Scott Helm, Surgeon General of Arizona, well-known in Chicago and St. Louis, on trial for criminal malpractice at Phoenix, A. T., the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty Wednesday.

The outlook in the iron and steel trades is reported to be not so good as it was a few months ago.

Governor Winans Thursday nominated George H. Barbour, of Detroit, as a member of the Michigan World's Fair Commission.

Mortgages and notes worth $200,000 belonging to W. W. Townsend, of Minneapolis, have been lost in the mails.

The package was mailed Jan. 14, it is said, since which time nothing has been heard of it.

At San Francisco, Cal., Thursday, the jury in the Curtis case again reported that they were unable to agree and were finally discharged. They stood ten for conviction and two for acquittal.

Professor William McAdams, of Alton, Ill., Wednesday dug up a bundle of fossilized vegetation which he estimates had been buried nearly 2,000 years.

At Philadelphia Thursday the Rt. Rev. Ignatius Hortsman was consecrated Roman Catholic Bishop of Cleveland.

L. F. Thierson Thursday was elected Grand Patriarch of the Wisconsin Independent Order of Odd-fellows.

One death from typhus and two new cases were reported at New York Thursday.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

Southern Ministers' Fund:

Lewis Roberts	$ 50
F F Dresser	15 00
Elder A B Lipp	1 85
Previously reported	201 12
	$218 47

Free Tract Fund:

S H Moore	$ 85
Previously reported	7 70
	$8 55

Current Expense Fund:

M S Hutchinson	$ 1 00
J W Baird	50
J P Baird	50
J W Reed	50
R G Reed	1 00
J Kennedy	1 50
J A Reid	1 00
R J Armstrong	50
E Whipple	2 00
Mrs E Yerkes	1 50
A Hamilton	2 00
J B Dodds	6 00
R M Stevenson	50
T Kingsnorth	3 50
M L Worcester	10 00
Miss Etta Allen	10 00
Ira Green	20 00
A C Higgins	10 00
Jno Compher	4 50
R Ingram	1 50
Rev J M Paris	1 00
Dr H McCreary	5 00
Prof J Johnson	2 00
Prof J A Gray	1 00
R Hammond	10 00
Rev J W Logue	5 00
J A Conant	19 00
Miss Julia Hulbert	5 00
W T Wilson	50
J H Patton	50
Jno Crabs	3 50
H G Hanson	7 00
D S Dean	8 50
Estate of Jno Hays Gray	37 50
" " Mary M Kauffman	25 00
Previously reported	962 92
	$1171 42

W. I. PHILLIPS, Sec'y and Treas.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Feb. 22 to Feb. 27:

Wm Meredith, Rev T Epps, T Hembrough, W Heldman, Rev J J McClurkin, J Forbes, Dr M Veenber, I Leadbetter, Rev J T McMahan, Rev H Woodson, A Arend, Rev W F Brooks, C D Coppock, E Williams, J W Modlin, J Marks, Mrs M Taylor, R Lynu, H G Hanson, S McClay, D S Dean, W D Johnston, L C Livesay, Rev F Fresselt, J S Pope, W T Peters, Rev M Frykman, L Miller, J L Wadsworth, W. T. Warnock, J A Rouser, H H Carter, L E Reynolds, Miss E E Flagg, J McClung, G Jamison, B M Sharp, J B Crall, Rev. H Best, J A Thompson, H Gilmore, Rev R A Padep, J R Yoes, B A Bailey, Mrs C M Candee, J O Diesburg, J Glass, Rev H H Hinman, T Coggsball.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2	87 1/2 @ 89 1/4
Winter No. 2	93 1/2 @ 95
Corn—No. 2	40 @ 40 1/2
Oats—No. 2	29 1/4 @ 30 1/2
Rye—No. 2	84 @ 84 1/2
Bran per ton	14 00 @ 14 50
Hay Timothy	11 00 @ 12 00
Butter, medium to best	18 @ 24
Cheese	09 @ 13
Beans	1 40 @ 1 55
Eggs	15 @ 15 1/2
Seeds—Timothy	1 18 @ 1 23
Flax	93 1/2 @ 99
Broom corn	04 @ 07 1/2
Potatoes, per bush	28 @ 33
Hides—Green to dry flint	4 @ 5
Lumber—Common	10 00 @ 13 00
Wool (washed)	24 @ 29
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 75 @ 4 85
Common to good	4 00 @ 4 70
Hogs	4 53 @ 4 55
Sheep	4 25 @ 4 75

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2	1 04 1/4 @ 1 09 1/4
Corn	49 1/4 @ 52
Oats	36 @ 38 1/2
Eggs	16 1/2 @ 17
Butter	18 @ 30 1/2
Wool	21 @ 24

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 25 @ 4 65
Hogs	3 90 @ 4 65
Sheep	4 00 @ 4 55

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20
Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20
The Royal Invitation. 20
Loyal Responses. 20
Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price, 1.50

Our Darlings.
The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design 1.25
Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors. 2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant 2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50c.

HOME AND HEALTH.

COMPLICATIONS OF INFLUENZA.

The grippe or influenza itself is not particularly dangerous, according to a writer in the London Lancet, but its complications are serious, and its sequels are of a peculiarly low and depressing type. The attack is commonly very sudden. The first symptoms are a chill, nausea, and a feeling of general illness, followed quickly by severe and persistent headache, break-bone pains in the limbs and trunk, fever and great prostration.

A violent paroxysmal, irrepressible and harsh cough with soreness in the chest, is common. Coryza—running at the nose—may or may not attend it. When the disease is uncomplicated, the worst is over by the third day, and the fever by the fourth or fifth, though the debility may continue for weeks or months.

The most serious complications of the disease is acute bronchitis. This may appear early or late. The breathing becomes rapid and difficult. A spasmodic cough is almost constant. The expectorations are glairy and tenacious. With all this there is the peculiar prostration of the grippe.

A more common complication is pneumonia, of which there are three varieties—croupous, congestive and bronchopneumonia. Although these complications are dangerous, yet recovery is the rule under prompt and careful treatment.

A third complication of the grippe is connected with the heart. If patients sit up, they become faint. Some die of simple failure of the heart; others are saved from death only by careful attention on the part of the nurse. After the grippe has passed off, a tendency to faintness and neuralgic pains may remain for weeks or months.

Another complication shows itself in a diarrhoea; still another affects the nervous system, and is characterized by pains in the head or elsewhere, or by weakness in certain parts of the body, such as the hands or arms.

As to treatment, the doctor must decide in view of all the symptoms. But the patient should in every case take to his bed. To keep about is exceedingly dangerous, especially as exposing the patient to the above complications.

PURE AIR IN COLD WEATHER.

As the cool weather compels us to close doors and windows and seek artificial heat, we women, who are confined so much to the house, ought not to forget that headaches and nervousness are but nature's protests against pure air. To walk briskly for almost half an hour will almost invariably cure either of these ills; or where a walk is impossible, a good draft of fresh air through all living rooms for five or ten minutes will have the same effect. Frequently in the evening, when reading or in ordinary conversation one feels dull and sleepy, to thoroughly purify the air of the room will rouse one, mentally, in a surprising manner.—Arkansas Traveler.

HOW TO RESTORE HEALTH.

Whoever would perform efficiently the difficult task of nursing the sick, says Hermine Welten in the Chautauquan, must first curb his belief in marvelous cures. In extraordinary means, and hearken only to the voice of reason; for what is necessary for the preservation of health is indispensable for the sick; and only he who exactly follows the best directions for a general care of the health,—always of course with modifications in various cases of sickness,—can make pretensions to a noble fulfillment of duty.

Seven things are absolutely necessary to maintain or restore health: fresh air, light, warmth, rest, cleanliness, the correct seclusion and well-timed offering of food and drink. The lack of only one of these requisites may hinder the exercise of a physician's skill and bring to naught both good-will and wisdom.

HOME ECONOMICS.

Taking cold is usually the result of carelessness. Running out in the cold without a wrap, perhaps with the sleeves up while washing, to hang out the

Rev. William Hollinshead

Of Sparta, N. J., voluntarily says:

"To Whom it May Concern:

"Unasked I deem it my duty to a suffering humanity whose bodies and soul: I would have healthy, to tell them of the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla. While living in Ohio one of my children was greatly

Afflicted With Boils

having 30 on her limbs, and being unable to walk. I had heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and bought a bottle, half of which cured entirely. Two years after, another child was afflicted as badly. I used the other half bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla with like results. About four years after, the child first afflicted was again tormented like Job, and I bought a bottle (on Sunday at that) and again a cure. I gave some of the medicine to a poor woman and two children; they were helped as were mine. Through a testimonial sent to C. I. Hood & Co., inquiries came from all the country, asking if it was a 'bona fide' testimonial, and of course I wrote all that it was, and have the knowledge of

Scores and Scores

Of persons helped or cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mild cases of rheumatism have yielded to it. Bilioussness and bad liver have been corrected in my own family. This is the only patent medicine I have felt like praising. I speak not for C. I. Hood, but for the Jobs who are impatient and are tormented beyond endurance. Nothing I know of will cleanse the blood, stimulate the liver, or clean the stomach so perfectly as

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Any person wishing to know more, enclosing a stamp will be informed. Yours for the health, happiness and virtue of humanity." WILLIAM HOLLINSHEAD, pastor of Presbyterian church, Sparta, N. J.

Hood's Pills cure habitual constipation.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. I. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent at all. 5cts each.

clothes, and going in the wet without rubbers, are some ways colds are brought on which often result in severe sickness, and death. Keep warm and dry as far as possible, and there will be less colds and better general health.

Never let the feet become cold and damp, or sit with the back toward the window, as these things aggravate any existing hardness of hearing.

As a remedy for throat diseases and catarrhal fever, the following is recommended: Beat the white of an egg or two to a froth, and mix with lemon juice and granulated sugar, taking a teaspoonful every hour until cured.

The oil of white birch bark, which gives to Russia leather its peculiar aromatic and lasting qualities, when dissolved in alcohol is said to be excellent for preserving and waterproofing various fabrics. It renders them both acid and insect proof, and in no way destroys their pliability.

It is quite probable that you may need the services of a physician some day; but you can postpone the time indefinitely by keeping your blood pure and your system invigorated through the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Prevention is better than cure.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage and express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3½. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

host of others.

This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony.

This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order, as a guarantee that books will be taken. Books at retail price sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Prescribed in the New Berlin Trials." 320 pages, cloth, $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPOTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post 5 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

WISCONSIN PRODUCTS.

The corn, wheat and oat crop of Wisconsin during 1891 was marvelous in its amount. There were 3,581,059 acres under cultivation, and from these crops of the above cereals were gathered an amount aggregating 83,109,000 bushels whose estimated value was $37,849,322. The tobacco crop was also large. With this weed 13,813 acres were planted, which produced 12,846,000 lbs., whose valuation was $1,220,379. In addition to the above, 100,000 of our farmers are interested in dairy farming, where 876,264 cows last year yielded the enormous product in value of $26,287,920. Truly this is a great State. The assessed valuation of its property is $600,000,000. If its people were only won to Christ, what a power they might be in his cause.—Chicago Standard.

SOME POINTS IN POULTRY-KEEPING.

Flaxseed is an excellent condition corrective and egg producer as well.

Hens should never be overfed. If gorged with food, it makes fat instead of providing elements which go to make up an egg.

Lime is a purifier, and should be used often for washing coops, perches and nest boxes. Sprinkle the places most frequented by them with air-slaked lime.

Poultry-keeping can be made an auxiliary to other pursuits, without infringing upon the time of the keeper, and will bring in a handsome return for the food and care given them.

Take special note of the following: Be sure that the ground floor in the poultry house is enough higher than the surrounding ground to keep it perfectly dry. Damp floors are very productive of disease.

Hen's nests must be occasionally removed and kept clean. Straw is better than hay. Tobacco stems covered with straw are an excellent preventative of insect breeding, especially when the hens are sitting.

Corn consists almost wholly of starch and oil. While it is a good food for fattening, it is one of the worst for producing eggs. No one food contains all the necessary elements, therefore, a variety should be given. Let the poultry-keeper make a study of feeding in a scientific way.

Do not be alarmed at the idea of the scientific part of it, for science is nothing more than perfectly right and exact practice, and a sensible person need not be afraid of it. Oats, wheat and buckwheat should enter largely into their diet, with an occasional feed of fresh meat, if possible.

An egg is rich in various elements that is not generally understood. For instance, it contains a large portion of sulphur, oil, phosphorus, lime and nitrogen. The shell is nearly all lime, and hence the character of a hen's digestive apparatus is to be considered. It must be necessary to furnish her with a supply of gravel, and if this consist of limestone it will serve the purpose of nutriment as well as to perform the mechanical action in the gizzard.

A few rusty nails kept in the vessels from which fowls drink daily will be found very conducive to their health.—Miss H. M. W., in Farm, Field and Stockman.

SALTING BUTTER.

A great deal of the finest butter made is spoiled before sold to the retail dealers through insufficient or careless salting. Salt is a preservative, but if applied too freely it may make the butter rancid and spoil its flavor. Upon opening the tubs of butter the scrapings around the edges are thrown away or used for second-class purposes, which is due either to the lack of salt or too much of it.

The salt should be added to the butter after the churn has performed its work, either by mixing it dry with the mass or by means of brine. The brine salts the butter more evenly, and for butter that is to be consumed within four or five months it is the best way of salting it.

CROUPY SOUNDS

At night, from baby's crib, are distracting to parents who are at a loss for a medicine equal to the emergency. Not so with those who have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. A dose of this medicine affords certain and speedy relief. To cure colds, coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, and the various disorders of the breathing apparatus, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal. It soothes the inflamed tissue, expectorates, and induces repose. Cap. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children were subject."

"I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequalled as a remedy for colds and coughs."—J. G. Gordon, M. D., Carroll Co., Virginia.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; Price $1; six bottles $5.

The somewhat fanciful picture above was suggested by the genuine pleasure and high spirits shown by one of Allen's workers. When he applied to me he was making just a living, or very little more. I taught him. I caused him to go to work in his present situation, and he quickly began to earn money at the rate of Over Three Thousand Dollars a Year. Is there a lesson or suggestion here, for you, reader? Probably you can make just as much money as he. Why not try? I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing, unless successful above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a year, each. Here is something new and solid. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Those who feel interested are invited to write at once. I promise you my special, personal attention. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Usos of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each

A good brine for heavy salting is made by adding one pound of salt to one quart of water, and allowing the butter to remain in it for one hour. For mild salting the butter should be allowed to remain in a brine of one-fourth pound of salt to one quart of water for twenty or thirty minutes.

Why is it that people take Salvation Oil? Answer: Because it is good and cheap. 25 cents.

Man is often deceived in the age of a woman by her gray hair. Ladies, you can appear young and prevent this grayness by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

PIANOS $175. ORGANS $33. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Hart, Washington, N. J.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revolution of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

A bar of gold bullion worth $73,440 was shipped from Phoenix, A. T., Thursday. It is the result of a six weeks' run of the Harquahela mine.

C. N. Vaughan, of Denver, Colo., is insane from the effects of treatment for drunkenness at Dwight, Ill. He was attacked suddenly and drove people from a hotel in their night clothes.

Conductor Robert Duffy, of the Omaha road, died at West Superior, Wis., Thursday, as the result of injuries received. His father dropped dead when told the news.

Lewis Asher, a farmer who lived at Edenton, Clermont Co., Ohio, died Wednesday, as the result of a hog bite received nearly a year before.

FOREIGN.

De Cobain, member for East Belfast, Ireland, charged with immoral conduct, is likely to be expelled from the British House of Commons.

Tuesday, near Zacapa, General Enriquez and party were ambushed by a company of soldiers sent out by the Guatemalan Government, and shot to death.

C. A. Fyffe, English author and historian, is dead.

Melting snow has caused destructive floods in Spain and Portugal.

Washington's birthday was celebrated in Paris by a banquet and a reception by the wife of Minister Reid. American flags were freely displayed throughout the city.

In the British House of Commons Tuesday disestablishment of the Welsh church was voted against by a majority of only 47.

Official announcement is made that Germany has abandoned her colony in Southwest Africa.

Minister Reid has secured from the French Government permission for the authorities of the Columbian Exposition to send free to France stereotypes of pictures, and other matters to be used in French journals to stimulate interest in the Fair.

In the house of a Spaniard at Paris, Tuesday, a quantity of explosives was found. The police believe that an attempt is to be made to blow up the Spanish Embassy.

The chimney of a factory at Checkheaton, Yorkshire, England, fell Wednesday, burying a number of young women. Fire broke out, and added to the horror. Eight bodies have been recovered.

There were more encounters in Berlin between the police and mobs, and many rioters received severe wounds. It is thought that one effect of the demonstrations will be that efforts will be made to furnish work to the unemployed. Already the Socialist members of the Council have proposed that a special meeting of that body be held to discuss an urgent motion that employment should be found for the needy by starting public works. Berlin is not alone in her troubles. Distress is prevalent in every populous center of Germany, and the cry for bread is clamorous. During the week bread riots have occurred in Dantzic and Brunswick. Meetings of the hungry poor have been held in Hamburg and Breslau.

A body of 4,000 unemployed men in Berlin, after listening to inflammatory speeches, marched to make a demonstration before the Emperor's castle. When near the castle they were met and, after a fight, routed by the police. Sixty of the workmen were wounded and eighty taken prisoners. Another body of 2,000 workmen while marching down Unter den Linden was attacked by police. A number were wounded and the leaders were arrested.

It is likely that the proposition to erect a monument to James Russell Lowell in Westminster Abbey will be carried out.

The editor of the Volkspreste and Herr Frey, a socialist, were arrested at Vienna Friday for feeding starving workmen.

E. S. De Cobain, a fugitive from justice, was expelled from the House of Commons Friday.

It was announced to a committee of the Reichstag Friday that Germany intended to abandon the possessions in Southwest Africa.

Three directors of the Australian Mercantile Loan Association were each sentenced to seven years' imprisonment for frauds in connection with that institution.

The steamer Forest Queen was sunk in collision with the Loughbrow in the North Sea, off Flamborough, Friday. The captain alone was saved.

In France, M. Loubet, who was summoned to undertake the task, has succeeded in organizing a cabinet which is made up as follows: M. Loubet, President of the Council and Minister of the Interior; M. De Freycinet, Minister of War; M. Ribot, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Bourcois, Minister of Public Instruction and the Fine Arts; M. Rouvier, Minister of Finance; M. Develle, Minister of Agriculture; M. Pocher, Minister of Commerce; M. Richard, Minister of Justice and Public Worship; M. Viette, Minister of Public Works; M. Cavaignac, Minister of Marine.

One hundred and fifty thousand bushels of corn have been received at Torron, Mexico, from the United States for distribution among the half famished people of this section of the State of Durango.

Changes in Health

Why a Spring Medicine is Necessary.

Of all the seasons in the year, the Spring is the one for making radical changes in regard to health. During the winter, the system becomes to a certain extent clogged with waste, and the blood loaded with impurities, owing to lack of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated shops and homes, and other causes. This is one of the causes of the sluggish, tired feeling so general at this season, and which must be overcome or the health may be Entirely Broken Down.

The old-time domestic remedies are now generally discarded in favor of the standard blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has attained the greatest popularity all over the country as the favorite Spring Medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla soon expels the accumulation of impurities through the bowels, kidneys, liver, lungs and skin, and gives to the blood the purity, quality and tone necessary to good health. It gives nerve, mental, bodily and digestive strength.

Spring Medicine.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family for the past four years, and for a thorough blood purifier it has no superior. It is invaluable as a spring medicine; it invigorates the whole system and tones the stomach. I always take it in the spring." L. U. GILMAN, Aurelia, Iowa.

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small World's Fair Buildings, laws being invested in prizes at Harvey. There actual railroad fare to the amount of not exceeding 2 1/2 per cent of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. Illustrated Plats and Circulars free to all.

A Sensible Woman

She's putting the washboard where it'll do some good. She has suffered with it long enough; broken her back over it, rubbed the clothes to pieces on it, wasted half her time with it. But now she knows better. Now she's using Pearline—and when a woman uses Pearline, the only way to use the washboard is in the kitchen fire.

There's no more hard work, no more ruinous rubbing, but there's washing that's easy and economical and safe.

Millions of women are just as sensible as this one. Are you? Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back.

ASTHMA CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE. THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. yds. made with a pack of 60 splendid Silk pcs, asstd. bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. st. Agts. Wanted. Lemsie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

PIANOS ORGANS AND MUSICAL GOODS of all kinds at Wholesale. Send for catalogue and price list free on application. THOMPSON MUSIC CO., 259 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 6 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT B 34 CHICAGO, ILL.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp. LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL. A School for Men and Women. SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue. CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homeopathic Chemists, London, England.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N. 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO. Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON, AT THE Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatise on a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 26.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,141.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	Letter From the Wash-
Misusing the Bible..... 8	ington Agent: Rev.
The "Home Rule" for	Wm. Fenton in Nebras-
Utah..... 8	ka; From the College
An Interesting Event... 8	Agent..... 5,9
Dr. Gunsaulus' Poetry... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Dr. Lym an Abbott's	The Saloon, the Lodge
Heretical Dogmas..... 9	and the Church; Can
The Southern Ministers'	Masonic O a t h s be
Fund..... 9	Evaded?: The "Home
CONTRIBUTIONS:	Rule" Scheme in Utah. 5,6
A Missionary Hymn	OBITUARY..... 7
(Poetry)..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
The New York State	THE N. C. A..... 7
Convention..... 1	THE HOME..... 10
SELECTED:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Anti-secret Society	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Meetings for Women.. 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Masonry..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER... 4	MARKETS..... 13
WASHINGTON LETTER... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
LITERATURE..... 6	FARM NOTES..... 15

By a unanimous vote of the Faculty of the Union Park (Congregational) Theological Seminary, in this city, President Charles A. Blanchard, of Wheaton, has been invited to address the students of that institution (about two hundred) on Friday, the 18th inst., upon the subject of secret societies. In the history of the anti-secrecy reform this event is deemed one of the most important that has as yet occurred.

Several months ago we presented the readers of the Cynosure with a portrait of Rev. James P. Stoddard, together with an interesting sketch of his career as a reformer, from the pen of ex-President J. Blanchard. Quite recently we have come into possession of the above "counterfeit presentment" of his well-known features, which much more satisfactorily portrays them. In this connection, we wish to call attention, more particularly, to Bro. Stoddard's work in New England as the active agent of the N. C. A. His continuous labors there during the past two years have been fruitful in extending the anti-secrecy reform among ministers and laymen; a great local organization for consolidating and augmenting the work has been formed; two very successful district conventions have been held under his auspices, at which some of the best talent in New England has been exhibited in opposition to the evils of the lodge system; a faithful band of men and women have been set at work in extending this reform, and a series of weekly parlor meetings at his home are producing the very best results in turning away the steps of the unwary from the haunts of secrecy, and of reclaiming some who had already been misled into taking the horrible obligations exacted in the Masonic lodge. This is but a brief sketch of what Bro. Stoddard has accomplished in the cause. Thousands of tracts have been widely distributed throughout New England with the best effect, and the light is beaming brightly from his office at 218 Columbus avenue, Boston. The past numbers of the Cynosure contain a very fair summary of his labors, and the results of them are written to his credit, and that of his co-workers, in the records of heaven.

REV. JAMES P. STODDARD.

Mr. Stoddard about the year 1872 entered the field of organized opposition to secret, oath-bound societies, and became the Corresponding Secretary and General Agent of the National Christian Association. This position he retained until June, 1890. During this period of service, through the beneficence of Philo Carpenter, the Christian Cynosure was presented with a valuable and permanent home at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, the present headquarters of the Association. By Mr. Stoddard's aid and influence, also, an agency was established at the national capital, over which his son, W. B., now ably presides. Since Mr. Stoddard's connection with the Association a corps of competent lecturers upon the evils of the lodge system has been organized, and millions of pages of anti-secrecy literature—expositions, tracts, etc., have been distributed far and wide. Whatever of prosperity the work of the Association has enjoyed has been witnessed and shared and augmented by his efforts.

A good sister, writing from Brookville, Pa., says: "Our town is ruled by lodge and saloon, and strangers say it is the worst for its size they have ever been in; and for these very reasons it is the place for stirring anti-secrecy reform work." It is gratifying to learn, however, that there are good men and women living there, and the Pennsylvania State Convention, this month, might arrange to move upon Brookville with possibly the best effect. It seems to be an unturned field, ripe for the breaking-plow.

A MISSIONARY HYMN.

DEDICATED TO REV. JAMES P. STODDARD.

BY MRS. DANIEL POWERS.

(Air: "From Greenland's Icy Mountains.")

Have courage, Christian soldier, the battle is the Lord's;
Your years of patient service doth merit rich rewards;
His hosts around you rally to spread your work abroad,
And reap a golden harvest for the glory of our God.

Speed on, thou mighty chieftain—with burning truth go forth,

Inva de the works of darkness, from south to farthest north,
Till o'er our blessed nation the lamp of light shall shine,
To lighten every Mason, illum e each pagan shrine.

Down with Masonic altars and every secret clan,
With all their idol worship to curse their fellow-man:
No secret gag-law bondage will honest men endure
When once they've been deceived inside the tyled door.

Press on, thou godly leader of anti-secret cause;
Long thou hast faced the danger of mad Masonic laws;
For the sake of truth and freedom, for right against the wrong,

For homes, for wives and children, for church and state,
Be strong!

THE NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

ADDRESS BY REV. J. P. STODDARD, THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

"No man can serve two masters."—Matt. 6: 24.

This is true equally in civil and religious services. No man can be loyal and obedient to two governments that are not in harmony, any more than he can worship idols and serve the living God at the same time. If any man would be a disciple of Christ, he must not only follow him, but he must forsake all others. So, too, if a man would be a dutiful citizen in a Republican or Democratic State, he must sever every tie and annul every obligation to any government, home or foreign, civil or ecclesiastical, secret or open, that is inimical to an undivided allegiance.

There are not only two religions, the true and the false; but two governments: the open and the secret, both appealing to the American people for their countenance and support.

The one is constitutional, and ordained of God. The other is a human device, without the Divine sanction.

One is for all alike; the other for the initiated and obligated only. The one requires its officials to do justly and walk humbly before God; the other makes lofty pretensions, bestows the most superlative and grandiloquent titles, and obligates, or swears, its officers and members to partiality and proscription. The one recognizes the inalienable right of all men "to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness;" the other demands the surrender of "private judgment," under penalty of ostracism, persecution and (in some cases)

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CONVENTION,

AT PITTSBURGH, MARCH 21 AND 22, 1892.

The State Anti-Secret Christian Association of Pennsylvania, auxiliary to the National Christian Association, will hold a General Convention in the SECOND UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Sixth Avenue, near Smithfield Street, PITTSBURGH, MONDAY and TUESDAY, MARCH 21 and 22, beginning at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon.

The Address of Welcome will be delivered (D. V.) by the pastor of the church, Rev. D. S. Littell, D. D.

Bro. W. B. Stoddard is exerting himself manfully in the effort not only to make this Convention a grand success, but to have it surpass in numbers, interest and importance, even the recent New York State Anti-Secrecy Convention, and is much encouraged by the prospect.

Arrangements will be made for the entertainment of all who may attend.

Friends of the cause in Western New York and Ohio, and all those in Pennsylvania, are cordially invited to attend this Convention.

Good speakers are being engaged, and the entire programme of the Convention may be expected in next week's issue of the Cynosure.

Bro. J. P. Stoddard and his Celebrated Lodge Chart will be present.

death. The one is an ordinance of God, antedating the creation and fall of woman, open as the starry canopy, of which Jehovah is the Supreme Sovereign and only Head; the other held its first congress of rebel apostates in hell, where the "secret empire" organized for aggressive warfare, under the Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander, and made its first victorious assault on this earth in the garden of Eden. It is a government of strife, despotism, and blood, of which Satan, that old serpent, the devil, is the supreme sovereign and only head.

In the twelfth chapter of Revelation we read, "There was war in heaven;" that "Michael and his angels prevailed;" that "the great dragon was cast out;" that peace was restored in heaven, and the arena of conflict transferred to this earth. "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea, for the devil has come down to you having great wrath." Defeated and banished from heaven, the devil, attended by his retinue of malignant angels, aspired to the government and God-ship of this world. That the "seat" and dwelling-place of Satan is on the earth is twice asserted in the 13th verse of the 2nd chapter of Revelation, by "Him who hath the sharp sword with two edges." As indicative of his royal power, Christ speaks of him in the 12th and 14th chapters of John as "the prince of this world;" and Paul, in his Epistle to the Ephesians and "to the faithful in Christ Jesus," warns them "against the wiles of the devil." Aside from Scripture proofs, there are abundant evidences of the presence and ceaseless activity of the devil and his angels in the struggle that is being waged.

Admitting, as we must, the existence and antagonism of these rival kingdoms, we are prepared to investigate that department of the Satanic empire in which some learned and careful students of the subject find the image of the beast of Revelation (13th), and to decide intelligently the question, Should adhering members of the Masonic and other secret orders be recognized as worthy of citizenship and official trusts, by granting charters for their lodges; or should both members and orders be held and treated as foreigners whose avowed principles are hostile to the purposes of a God-ordained, constitutional government, administered by divine right for the common good of all?

It is a significant fact that our most eminent statesmen and philanthropists have never employed the secret lodges in promoting their beneficent plans, nor have they spoken or written in their praise. On the contrary, they have condemned the whole system as selfish, clannish, un-American and anti-Christian. Washington, although once inducted into Masonry, absented himself from all lodge meetings during the last forty years of his life. His "Farewell Address" to the people is a faithful testimony and warning against the insidious principles of the whole system.

John Quincy Adams said: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

President Millard Fillmore united with over thirty other distinguished citizens, jurists and statesmen in an address to the American people, in which they affirm that "the Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Thaddeus Stevens, Charles Sumner, Charles Francis Adams, Wendell Phillips and Ulysses S. Grant, of our own country, and Lord Beaconsfield of England, all political leaders and sagacious statesmen, have left faithful warnings against secret societies, which, in the words of Disraeli, "have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre." If warnings like these pass unheeded, we have just cause to fear that the people would "not believe though one rose from the dead" to sound the alarm. Let us not incur the awful penalty pronounced upon "the fearful and the unbelieving."

As citizens, we have but one interest, and as patriots we should have but one opinion.

The question should be relieved from all party environments and dispassionately tested by the facts. What are the facts?

First. Both the Grand Lodge of Masons and of the Odd-fellows in Massachusetts are incorporated under the statutes of the Commonwealth. I have this statement from Charles Endicott, the present Commissioner of Corporations. This is an indorsement by the State which makes every citizen of the Commonwealth a party to the work of every subordinate lodge under the jurisdiction of the two chartered grand bodies, and you and I are compelled by our legal representatives to give countenance to their existence, and, if subject to military duty, we might be ordered to fight in their defence. What the State charters, the State must protect in case of peril; and the people, of which we are a part, constitute the body politic and must respond when called upon to preserve order or protect any corporation or interest upon which our law-makers have set the great seal of State.

The law-makers of Massachusetts have only followed the example of our general government. The Masonic Hall Association of the District of Columbia holds a charter from Congress, granted in the spring of 1864. The way in which this charter was secured will give us an insight into their peculiar methods. The official records are kept in the Senate library in Washington, and can be read by any respectable citizen.

Senator Grimes, of Iowa, was chairman of the Committee on the District in 1864. On the 24th day of March he presented Senate bill No. 130, asking that it pass without change. This bill, drawn up by Masons, and presented by Senator Grimes at their request, provided for the incorporation of the Masonic Hall Association of the District of Columbia, and was so worded as to include all Masonic bodies then existing, or that should at any future time be recognized in the District. It provided, in detail, "that the officers and members of the several Masonic bodies named" in section first be created and made separately and individually bodies politic and corporate, by their individual names, to use and exercise separately and individually all the rights and privileges incident to such corporations. "It provided, further, that any Masonic lodge, chapter, council, commandery, or consistory, not herein named but which may exist or hereafter be instituted in the District of Columbia, may enjoy all the rights, powers and privileges granted to the Masonic bodies collectively or individually by the several sections of this act."

The spring of 1864 was one of the most critical periods in our nation's history. Patriotic statesmen were engrossed with grave questions of civil war, and this bill, having no immediate connection with the contest, seemed destined to a safe and speedy passage. A trivial incident, however, arrested its progress, and led to a careful analysis of its provisions. Calling attention to certain initial letters, Senator Morrell asked if in passing the bill they were not liable to confer titles of nobility prohibited by the Constitution of the United States. A lengthy discussion followed, in which the whole nefarious plot was exposed.

Senator Doolittle remarked: "It is the most comprehensive section I ever saw put into a law, I believe. It says the officers and the members of the several Masonic bodies named in the first section of the Act are hereby created and made separately and individually bodies politic and corporate, and gives to each power to hold personal and real estate and make their own rules. There is no limit as to stock and no limit as to real estate; and under this bill the corporation created might buy the city of Washington, run all its hotels and, perhaps, all the banking establishments in the District."

Of course the unmasked bill did not pass. Congress and the country were in no condition to meet opposition. It was a critical juncture in the issues of the fratricidal and bloody combat, and to avoid further dissension a modified bill was passed, authorizing a single corporation, with limits and powers well-defined. This modified act passed the Senate April 15, and the House of Representatives April 22, and was signed by the President April 26, 1864. It is a recognized act in the District, under which valuable franchises are held by the District Grand Lodge of Masons. The emissaries of the secret empire, who drew the original bill, signally failed in their purpose, but a conspiracy is just as clear as it could have been in the event of success. The attempt of Benedict Arnold to betray his country failed. Aaron Burr was unsuccessful in his ambitious schemes. Jefferson Davis suffered defeat, and the Masonic plot to obtain a charter broad enough to cover the entire District of Columbia proved abortive; but Arnold, Burr and Davis were traitors, conspirators and rebels, though each was intercepted and thwarted in his devilish scheme, as were the sovereigns in the "secret empire." All were alike conspirators and should share equally the odium attached to the crime of constructive treason, attempted betrayal, and relentless foes. Vallandigham and his compeers were execrated for confederating with the Rebellion, while men professing loyalty were scheming and plotting in the halls of Congress to enthrone a despotism in the very heart of the nation.

Why treat Masonic traitors more leniently than Ku-Klux leaders or Knights of the Golden Circle? Foiled in this attempt to capture the nation's capital for Masonic purposes, by direct legislation, the next recourse of the craft to win position and power was to more indirect methods. The time was auspicious for schemes of all sorts, and the army presented an ample field for operation. Signs, grips and passwords became the passports to favoritism in the army, and furloughs were given or refused as applicants gave the shibboleth of some secret order; and the impression widely prevailed that the highway to military promotion lay directly through the Masonic lodge. Scores and hundreds of instances, well-authenticated, are at hand, showing that this was not a vague conjecture, but an actual fact; and thus the army that crushed a gigantic rebellion was ambushed and captured by the "secret empire." Regarding obligations given in secret cabals as paramount to military or civil law, avowed traitors were shielded by their accomplices in the mystic brotherhood. This was the boast of Confederates, and often urged by Union men as a valid reason for joining the lodge. Prisoners were released, or allowed by their guards to escape, and criminals on the gallows were rescued on exhibition of the grand hailing sign of distress. Thirty thousand soldiers were drawn up in line to witness the execution of a number of men sentenced to be hung, when General Butler was in command at New Orleans. Butler was a Mason and some of the condemned were his brothers. A Mason who stood in that line of witnesses, stated at a public meeting in Putnam, Connecticut, that a reprieve had confidently been expected, and they were not disappointed. After the condemned were placed in position, a messenger from Butler's headquarters arrived with an order from the General, whereupon every brother was removed and only such as belonged to the "cowan," or common herd of humanity, were executed.

In the Grand Lodge report of Louisiana for 1863 you may gather facts of deep and solemn import. Take a single case officially given by the Grand Master: When the city was closely invested by the Union army, it was necessary to obtain information for Masonic purposes, from beyond the lines. Brother Driver (says the Grand Master,) volunteered to execute this hazardous commission. On approaching the enemy he found a brother in command who understood and recognized his duty. Brother Driver was received with the utmost cordiality and treated with that respect due to an honorable member of our ancient fraternity. His papers, bearing the Grand Lodge seal, were not opened or examined. He was furnished free transportation for himself and baggage to and from all points he wished to visit, and he returned in perfect safety, having executed his mission without the slightest inconvenience on account of the disturbed condition of our country.

I do not give the precise words, but the exact facts as officially published in the Grand Lodge report.

This is certainly a remarkable, though probably not a rare, instance of subordination of military law to the behests of the secret empire; and be it remembered that this was not the act of an ignorant, hot-headed Masonic zealot, but the deliberate betrayal of sacred trusts by an army official who understood his duty to a brother Mason, and promptly performed it.

Doubtless, clemency was shown by rebels in many instances to Union soldiers; but does any one suppose that rebels bestowed favors without expecting as much and more in return? A comrade of my boyhood, whom I met many years afterward in Iowa, said: "I would like to join the Masons, but an injury received in the army prevents me." When asked why he desired to be a Mason, he replied: "They always protect and help each other." In proof, he said: "I was in charge of a supply train, and suddenly we were surprised by a band of guerillas. Hostilities at once began, and several on both sides were killed. The guerilla commander rode up to me and asked, 'are you in command of this train?' 'I am,' was the prompt reply. 'What are you killing my men for?' 'When attacked we have a right to defend ourselves.' 'I will show you, you — of a —! Give me your pocket-book.' Receiving and opening the pocket-book, he found a Masonic jewel which had been sent by an army officer for repairs. 'Is this yours?' he asked. 'It is,' I replied. 'I advise you to wear that pin where it can be seen, if you want to avoid trouble.' He ordered a retreat, and soon disappeared in the mountains, leaving me to bury my own and the rebel dead."

An educated colored man in Rockford, Ill., said to me: "I am going South to teach, and I am thinking of joining the Masons." "Why do you do that?" I asked. "They tell me the Ku-Klux and night-riders are very bad down there, and that if I join the Masons they will protect me." This was doubtless true, for the Ku-Klux and night-riders were, many of them, Masons acting under other names. But the strange thing is that it seemed never to have occurred to Bro. Wilbro or Bro. Searls that they must give as well as receive protection. They must cover their brothers with the mystic shield if they would be sheltered by it. What they receive from the guerilla or the night-rider, the guerilla or night-rider had a right to demand of them; and upon their prompt response depended their own security.

You say, perhaps, these are incidents of war, which is itself a repeal of ordinary restraint; we may expect better things of the secret orders in peaceful times. Granting that there is some truth in this claim, it is not in reason to presume that an agency so potent in war should become entirely inactive in time of peace.

What, then, is the post-bellum record of this ancient brotherhood, whose ambition finds expression, and whose members catch inspiration from their popular stanza?—

"Onward, and all earth shall aid us;
Ere our peaceful flag be furled
Masonry at last shall conquer,
And its altar be the world."

Freemasonry claims an affiliated membership of 617,832, and a non-affiliated membership of 382,543, or a total in the United States of 1,000,375. It is not an easy matter to obtain reliable statistics of the minor orders, which are the junior members of the same family. Boston, with a population of 448,477, reports, in the Business Directory for 1892, 853 lodges. In 1889, Washington, D. C., with a population of 203,459, reported 316 lodges. Of the Boston lodges only 78 are named Masonic, leaving 775 distributed among the satellites in the system.

The United States Congress of 1888-9 contained 409 members. Of 272 who were interviewed, 155 belonged to the Masons, and 20 to other secret orders. If, as is fairly presumable, the same proportion existed among the 137 members not seen, then that fraternity which Millard Fillmore, Wm. H. Seward, and more than thirty others, denounced as "a conspiracy trampling upon the rights of the people and defying every government it cannot control," had a voting majority of 64 members in our national Congress in 1888-9.

But do you say these men are not conspirators—they are patriots? I reply, there is room for an honest doubt so long as they hold allegiance in a government that declares them to be "aliens and foreigners to every government save that of Masonry," and adds: "We are a nation of men, only bound to each other by Masonic ties as citizens of the world, and that world is the world of Masonry; brethren to each other all the world over, foreigners to all the world beside." Jefferson Davis said that the great mistake of his life was when he withdrew from Congress, instead of remaining where he could have done more for the Southern Confederacy than in the open field. Perhaps these men have learned wisdom from their illustrious brother, and do not propose to repeat his mistake. The man who supposes the secret empire capable of an honest, open contest is grossly ignorant, or he has studied their manual of tactics to little purpose. Let him read and ponder the utterances of Brainard, who in his day was the honored orator of the craft. Speaking of lodge emissaries, he puts the case fairly: "They are in almost every place where power is of any importance. They are distributed, too, with means of knowing one another and the means of keeping secret and the means of cooperating in the desk, in the legislative halls, on the bench, in every gathering of business, in every party of pleasure, in every domestic circle, in peace and in war, in every enterprise of government, among enemies and friends, in one place as well as in another." If these honorable members of Congress are patriots, they should cease to occupy the places of janissaries and spies for the secret empire; and until they do come out from their hiding-places we have a right, and it is our bounden duty, to regard them with grave suspicion.

Coming a little nearer home, I close with one or two practical cases. A Mr. Keep was county superintendent of schools in Rock Co., Wisconsin. He employed Mr. Gould as his assistant, who did most of the work. Mr. Keep removed to Minnesota, and Gould was told that those who had the appointing power had made out papers for him, and they would be delivered when he became a Mason. Bro. Gould refused the conditions, and of course did not get the appointment.

Brother Stark renounced Masonry at Ashley, Ill., where I was holding meetings some years ago. He gave as his reason for joining the order that he had an important suit pending, and his lawyer told him that as his opponent was a Mason he could not succeed unless he took as many degrees as the other man had taken. He was "entered," "passed," and "raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason," and won the suit.

With multiplied scores of such instances in the highest and lowest places of power, it is no marvel that the keen-sighted, far-seeing patriot, Wendell Phillips, wrote: "Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of our nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and effectively they can use any secret organization, such should not be allowed to exist."

In brief: We have learned—

1. That no man can serve two masters.
2. That Satan, "the prince of this world," is the god and supreme head of the "secret empire."
3. That the whole lodge system has been strongly and repeatedly condemned by the purest and most patriotic statesmen in our nation.
4. That the Legislature of Massachusetts has made every citizen of the commonwealth a party to the secret empire by chartering the Grand Lodges of Masons and Odd-fellows.
5. That Masonry conspired, at the most critical period in our civil war, to capture the District of Columbia, by smuggling a bill through Congress, which Senator Doolittle declared would put all the personal moneyed interest of Washington within the grasp of the brotherhood.
6. That civil and military law was superseded by the Masonic bond of protection and relief.
7. We are told that a Mason is "a foreigner to every government save his own."
8. We find in the Congress of 1888-9 a probable voting majority of 64 linked in the bands of the secret fraternity.

9. We find them rendering verdicts in the courts, and withholding or granting certificates to teachers, and practically farming out the legislative, judicial and educational powers, prerogatives and privileges among their number.

10. Lastly, we hear their grand orators boasting of having secret spies "at every point where power is of any importance;" and are such men safe custodians of the people's liberties, or worthy to receive the votes of freemen? Nay; the rather, should not the nation arise in the spirit of '76 and sweep the whole system from the court-rooms and legislative halls of the land? Will they do it? Never, so long as Christians support Masonic preachers with their money, or fellowship oath-bound lodge members at the communion table. Never, so long as Christians join with the reckless throng in voting these sovereigns of the secret empire into offices of state. Never, no, never! The work of reform and the nation's redemption must begin at the house of God. The time has come for the disciples of Him who ever spake openly to the world, and for every patriotic citizen who has given countenance to the lodge, or withheld a testimony against it, to "right about face" on this question. Will the church and the nation do this? They ought to, but will they? The future must answer to God, and the nation's fate must wait the decision.

Let others do as they will, but shall we delay to put on the invincible armor, and battle valiantly with weapons not carnal but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds?—knowing full well that He who has said: "These mine enemies bring hither and slay them before me," shall not fail or be discouraged, until "all principalities and powers are subjected under Him whose kingdom is everlasting, and of the increase of whose power there shall be no end." AMEN.

ANTI-SECRET SOCIETY MEETINGS FOR WOMEN.

The anti-secret society meetings held Friday of each week at 218 Columbus avenue are proving of great interest and benefit to all who are aiming to remove hindrances in the way of the advancement of Christ's kingdom. Each week a paper is read on some particular phase of the work. On last Friday the speaker was Miss Elizabeth E. Flagg of Wellesley, well-known for her literary efforts both as editor of the Home Guard, newspaper correspondent, and the author of valuable books on the evils of Freemasonry.

Her paper was carefully prepared, and showed clearly the necessity of women becoming better acquainted with the oaths, the requirements and the harmfulness of secret societies. The chief objections were shown to be the necessity of taking solemn oaths which bound the oath-taker in such a way that it was possible for him to be brought into most trying circumstances, especially if he is a Christian man.

It was also shown that the tendency of the lodge is to draw men away from church influences, the lodge many times taking the place of the church; and its devotee claims that the religion of the secret society is equal, if not superior, to the religion of any church.

The harm to home-life was also spoken of, and the speaker thought it was to be deprecated that men preferred the associates found in lodge rooms to the company of their wives and children.

The large sums of money taken from the amount which would otherwise be used for the advancement of church or home interests was another evil of secret societies, the speaker said.

She claimed that it could be clearly proven by those who had withdrawn from lodges that the lodge was demoralizing in its tendencies; that indulgence in intoxicants proved a snare to young men who became members; and were the whole system of secret societies done away with it would be well, their influence being harmful to civilization, rather than helpful, the whole foundation it was claimed being contrary to the Christ example, as our duty is to treat all with whom we come in contact with a fraternal spirit, and the wife, daughter, mother or sister of a lodge member is no more worthy of protection than are women who are not connected by such ties to organizations.

The man should be so broad and large-minded that he would scorn to wrong any woman or refuse to give her aid or protection be she connected by male relatives with lodges or not.

Miss Flagg gave her thoughts with an earnestness born of conviction, and the listener was made to feel the importance of not only arousing herself to take definite action, but also to endeavor to awaken other women. The meetings are held every week, and all are cordially invited to attend.—Woman's Voice, Boston.

MASONRY.

With the light that is shining on the system of Freemasonry, it is difficult to see how any honest inquirer after truth can fail to discover that that system is totally and thoroughly bad. The only consistent thing for a Christian to do, is to renounce forever the Christless institution.

It being the obligation that makes a Mason, one does not cease to be a member until he fully renounces all allegiance to the fraternity. So long as one is bound, to any extent, by Masonic obligation, he has not renounced. The Word of God forbids all fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.—Free Methodist.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A pleasant occasion—A colonial peacemaker—The Conant ancestry—Some more testimony on the endowment orders—A timely answer to Dr. Townsend.

Any occasion which helps to restore the fading colors of New England's early history, is one to gratefully make a note of. Such an occasion was the recent dedication of the new church presented by Hezekiah Conant, Esq., of Pawtucket, R. I., to the Congregational Society of Dudley.

Behind the pulpit is a memorial window representing neither angels, virgins nor apostles, but a simple, God-fearing man of the olden times without any halo around his head, engaged in the blessed work of making peace between two combatants, who are also dressed in the garb of colonial days. Over it is inscribed the legend, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." On the right and left, respectively, are the Scripture texts, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven," and, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets." This Puritan saint, who has waited two hundred and sixty-eight years for posterity to canonize him, was Roger Conant, the ancestor of Mr. Conant who donated the church, and also of our own J. A. Conant, the honored president of the New England Christian Association. He is represented in the act of preventing a quarrel between the doughty Captain Miles Standish and a certain Captain Howes, of the Cape Ann colony, in regard to the use of a landing stage to which the Plymouth colony possessed a prior right. The dispute between the two ran so high as to threaten to terminate in bloodshed, when through Roger Conant's timely interference peace was restored. Doubtless this ancient worthy would have been much astonished to know that his brave and Christian act would have been thus commemorated to future generations; but I perfectly agree with the donor, who said in his letter of presentation that "he preferred it to any picture of celestial beings." It is to be hoped that no occasion will ever arise when the church at Dudley will need such an object lesson, but I am sure that if it ever should be so unfortunate, this picture of Saint Roger, "the first citizen and the first governor of the Salem Colony," will be more potent to check strife in its beginning than all the allegorical charities that were ever painted.

The address by Frederick Odell Conant, Esq., of Portland, Me., was rich in historic lore. The Conants came from Devonshire, in the southwestern part of England—

... "Sunny Devon, moist with rills,
A nunnery of cloistered hills," as sung by Elizabeth Barrett Browning. The first of the family of whom there is any authentic record was John Conant, born about the time of the Reformation. He had a grandson, John, who went to Oxford and achieved collegiate honors at a time when such honors were a distinction indeed, and became a minister of the Established Church. During the civil war, however, he ranged himself on the Puritan side, and was one of the divines appointed by Parliament to draw up the Confession of Faith, Longer and Shorter Catechisms, and Directory of Worship still used by Presbyterians and Congregationalists in England, and, in the early part of the century, in America also. A mingled flavor of piety and scholarship runs through these old family records. This Dr. John Conant must have been a rare character. One of the best Oriental scholars of his day, and Regius Professor of Divinity at Oxford, his sermons and lectures had to be published posthumously because he was too modest to allow it to be done during his life-time; while so generous was he that when left the larger part of his father's estate, he at once turned it over to a younger brother who was burdened with a large family, while for twenty years he constantly bore the expense of the schooling of from twenty to forty poor children. Grand old Puritan divine! Surely heaven seems brighter and better worth striving for when we think of meeting there such a sweet and sturdy spirit as yours.

The younger sons, Christopher and Roger Conant, sailed for the New World in 1623. The former either returned to England, or fills one of those nameless graves on Burying Hill—so pathetic as we remember with what breaking hearts those early settlers of Plymouth must have laid away their precious dead, knowing that even the mounds must be leveled flat, for fear the Indians would see and count them. How could they have borne it, save through their "hope of a better resurrection," their faith, which "endured as seeing Him who is invisible?" But Roger Conant, mentioned in Hubbard's early annals as "a pious, sober, and prudent gentlemen," was destined to leave his mark on his day and generation. He died in what is now Beverly, on his estate of one thousand acres, in 1679, having been Selectman, Representative to the General Court, one of the Justices of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and really the first Governor of Massachusetts, for he filled all the duties of that position three years before Endicott arrived from England to take it; and whether he was ever given a commission from the king, or not, he had one direct from the people, which is enough to make every true Republican grant him the honor without stopping to ask what the antiquarians think about it.

The cut of the church in the Webster Times shows an edifice not only very substantial, but chaste and beautiful in design. It was given by Mr. Conant as "a monument to perpetuate the memory of his ancestors, and a tribute of affection to his parents, Hervey and Dolly Conant, who were born, lived and lie buried in this town." It is "dedicated to the service of God, to the cause of Christianity, to the promotion of science, and to the best interests of mankind."

Mr. Conant's letter of presentation is a noble document, and one to which we can imagine the old Puritan, Roger Conant, subscribing with hand and heart. Alluding to the fact that some people seem to think that there is a natural antagonism between religion and science, he says: "Ignorance is the mother of crime. . . . Christianity and science must go hand in hand. . . . I believe the farmer is called to his farm, the manufacturer to his factory, the mechanic, the carpenter and builder to their constructions, the doctor, lawyer, preacher and teacher, each to his profession, and they will each win a reward in proportion as they have been of service to the world. . . . They have toiled and suffered to feed, clothe and shelter God's creatures and relieve suffering humanity, and have at last come up before the Great Judge of all the earth. Their hands are clean and their hearts are pure, their faith is good, but, unable to show it otherwise than by their works, it will be as with Abraham of old, counted unto them for righteousness." This is the true Gospel of labor, which makes all work sacred because it is done for the King.

Long may the donor live to see his gift enjoyed by a grateful people; and when he and all the Cynosure readers have become "Shadow shapes of memory,

Joined to that vast multitude
Where the great are but the good,"

may Saint Roger still preach from its blazoned window the Beatitude of the peace-makers.

Lawyer Fay, who has been appointed receiver for the Bay State League, presented some startling facts in the Supreme Court, the other day, that ought at least to make the legislature which could charter such a fraud mortally ashamed of itself. He found, on trying to take possession of the offices of the corporation at 74 Tremont St., the doors locked, the safe secured by a combination lock, and the Supreme Officers out of the way. They were forced finally to make their appearance, and surrender the papers of the corporation to Mr. Fay, but they have not been seen since. Investigation showed that many of the books had been destroyed or stolen, or else the accounts falsified; and in some instances numbers of pages had been torn out. Mr. Fay states it as his firm belief that French and Hamilton, the secretary and the treasurer, bought them official positions for the express purpose of plundering the certificate holders. Thus these poor working people—a majority of them women—have been cruelly robbed of their hard-earned savings; and all this has been done under the great seal of Massachusetts! "Many, many families have been brought to poverty through the influence of these orders." This is the testimony of Mr. Stokes, of the Associated Charities of Boston. Lawyer Anderson says the Golden Lion is the most honest of all the orders with which he has come in contact, but out of thirteen assessments which it levied, eleven were illegal. Its Supreme Chaplain, who had been a wood-worker at $10 a week, was voted a salary of $7,500 a year, which is nearly $150 a week, and certainly better pay than most ordained ministers receive. Lawyer Fay said he had found that the men who engineered these schemes were fugitives from justice. These testimonies were given at a recent hearing before the Legislature, when—oh, the pity of it!—ex-Gov. Robinson appeared as counsel for these defendants. He would not have disgraced an honorable name more had he appeared as counsel for the Louisiana lottery.

Rev. Lucien L. Kimball, the nephew of Elder S. C. Kimball, of Newmarket, N. H., has written a most able article to the Traveller, in reply to Dr. Townsend's "Bombshell," in which he supplies what the latter so strangely left out—"the demoralizing and corrupting influence of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship," which has brought about this sad state of affairs, not only in the Methodist church, but in other denominations. I am sorry to see a violent attack on this brave young minister in the Morning Star, and very likely he will be the victim of others, for he has spoken too much truth, and said it too well, not to stir up the enemy; but, however bitter and uncalled for these attacks may be, every one who loves Christ and is jealous for the honor of his Bride, will thank and congratulate Bro. Kimball for the heroism with which he has stepped into the lists.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2, 1892.

The signing of the treaty for the arbitration of the Behring Sea dispute by Sir Julian Pauncefote for Great Britain, and Secretary Blaine for the United States, which occurred here this week, was an event of more than passing interest to the English-speaking world, although the treaty must be ratified by both the British Parliament and the United States Senate before it can bind either country; but no doubts are expressed of its prompt ratification.

Although the proceedings of the arbitration commission were secret and will not be officially made public until the Senate acts upon the treaty, it has become known that the board of arbitration will have seven members—two representing this country, two Great Britain (one to be a Canadian), and one each from the neutral governments of France, Sweden and Italy. It is surmised that the questions to be arbitrated will in substance embrace what exclusive jurisdiction Russia exercised in Behring Sea prior to the transfer of Alaska to the United States; whether Great Britain recognized such rights; whether Great Britain obtained any rights in Behring Sea by her treaty with Russia in 1825; whether Russian rights passed to the United States with Alaska; what are now the rights of the United States in Behring Sea? What shall be done to protect the seals? When two such powerful nations as the United States and Great Britain agree to submit their disputes to peaceable arbitration, it exhibits an object-lesson in international affairs that will not be lost upon the weaker nations of the world.

Many important decisions were handed down by the United States Supreme Court upon the resumption of its sittings after the regular February vacation. Among them were a decision in favor of the United States in the Sayward case, brought by the Canadian authorities for the purpose of getting the Supreme Court to pass upon one phase of the Behring Sea case; one upholding the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff law, including the sugar bounty and reciprocity clauses; one against the release of Fielden and Schwab, the Chicago anarchists, from prison on writs of habeas corpus, and one reversing the decision of the lower court fining Trinity church of New York city $1,000 for having brought an English clergyman to this country under contract, to serve as rector, in violation of the alien contract law. Justice Brewer, who announced the latter decision, said that while the services to be rendered by the rector to the church might come within the letter of the law, they certainly did not come within its spirit. Other decisions affirmed the constitutionality of the anti-lottery law, and the constitutional right of the Speaker of the House of Representatives to count members present and not voting as making part of a quorum. Owing to the large number of persons —nearly 3,000—employed in the Government Printing Office, and the fact that the building in which the work of that office is carried on is considered to be in a very bad condition from every standpoint, its walls being cracked and shaky, its fire-escapes entirely inadequate, and its sanitary arrangements primitive and deficient, much interest is felt in the effort which is being made to get Congress to provide a new fire-proof building. Every year the question comes up, and every year Congress goes away without having settled it; and the Government, instead of setting a worthy example to private employers by properly housing its employes, brings shame upon Senators, as was testified to by Senator Gallinger in a speech to the Senate, when they visit the great newspaper offices of the country, and note the accommodations provided for their employes and think of the present Government Printing Office.

The local temperance people are greatly pleased at having obtained promises from both Senate and House committees that an unfavorable report would be made on the bill introduced at the request of the liquor-dealers to repeal so much of the law prohibiting the sale of liquors within one mile of the Soldiers' Home as applies to the city proper; in other words, to allow the re-opening of a number of bar-rooms that the law closed. In view of the boasts made by the liquor-men of their ability to have this bill passed, the temperance victory is one to be proud of.

Mme. Tel Sono, the high-caste Japanese lady, of whose lecture I spoke last week, has so interested temperance and religious circles that a local Tel Sono Association has been formed and already has a considerable membership. Mm. Tel Sono will enjoy the privilege of being able to reach the high-caste Japanese women, in her missionary work, which no foreign missionary has ever been able to do, and the result is expected to be very gratifying. She spoke here this afternoon on home-life in Japan, and as she spoke to women only she told many things not touched upon in her lectures to mixed audiences. *

REFORM NEWS.

LETTER FROM THE WASHINGTON AGENT.

FLATTERING PROSPECT FOR A GRAND GATHERING
MARCH 21 AND 22, AT PITTSBURGH.

WILKINSBURGH, Pa., Mar. 3, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—"Large bodies move slowly." "In the multitude of counsel make war." I have observed the first, and endeavored to be governed by the second of these proverbs during the week past.

Reaching Wilkinsburgh last Thursday, much of my time since has been given to selecting the best location for our coming State Convention. I had thought of Washington county, but I found roads there very uncertain at this season of the year. A convention would be well-sustained there, if held at a season when farmers could generally reach it. Pittsburgh or Allegheny seemed, all things considered, best located for a general gathering in this part of the country. The matter of place, finance and entertainment, comes in for consideration, and might cause one unacquainted with the people to hesitate. But I find the same genial, warm-hearted sympathy that has made conventions here, in other days, a marked success. Though many who have stood in the front of the conflict have fallen by the way, God is raising up others to stand in their places. Unless I entirely misread the feelings of the people, those who recognize the danger to which the church and nation are subjected because of this undermining evil, are ready and anxious to meet, and, if possible, form some plan by which the people may be informed, led to turn, and thus avert the calamities toward which we are drifting. As surely as water unrestrained runs down hill, God is opening the way, and I am trying to walk in it.

The time for our convention is March 21st and 22d, opening at 2 P. M., on the 21st.

The place, the Second United Presbyterian church, Sixth avenue, near Smithfield street, Pittsburg.

I have written to some friends, stating the time as March 28 and 29, one week later. The reason for this change is not to conflict with the convention of the American Sabbath Association, which is to be held at the time first selected. Y. M. C. A. and other gatherings make it seem inexpedient to place the date later. Though the notice is brief, we remember reformers are "minute men."

The church, the hospitality of which has been so cheerfully and kindly granted us, has a seating capacity of 900 or 1,000.

Rev. D. S. Littell, D. D., the pastor, promises the address of welcome. Those who know the Doctor's way of doing things know what this means.

It is suggested that our convention proper close with the Tuesday afternoon session, and that a mass meeting be called in the City Hall or one of the large halls. It is believed that in this way many more could be reached. There are eighteen Lutheran churches in and about Pittsburg, which require their members to keep out of the lodge. Their testimony does not allow that they unite in religious exercises in churches other than their own. They antagonize the lodges for the same reason that the N. C. A. does. I am assured that they will encourage this convention as far as their testimony will allow.

I had the pleasure of meeting ten Lutheran pastors yesterday, and talking over the situation freely. Rev. J. H. Schuh, of Allegheny, though extremely busy has promised a brief address.

If I am able to carry out my plans regarding this convention, one hundred dollars or more will be needed to meet the expense. A committee should be appointed at the convention to audit all accounts. Any moneys placed in my hands to aid in this matter will be duly handed them. Should more than enough be received for the present need, it will be used for the furtherance of the cause, as the State committee may direct. Though I have had but little time to look for pledges and money, a liberal disposition has been manifest. God has plenty of money in the Keystone State, and if his stewards will do their duty reforms will not lack for support.

Committees have been appointed in some of the churches to see what can be done toward entertaining those who will attend. There will be no lack. Those expecting to attend from out the city should write me a postal at once, that they may be assigned for entertainment. There will be plenty of speakers. The Boston agent will show the royal road to Hiram's grave with his chart. We shall expect President C. A. Blanchard to discuss the American Mechanics and the minor orders the first evening.

The official call of the State President, next week, will doubtless give the program.

The following is taken from the Pittsburg Times, February 29, 1892:

A Decisive Effort Made to Have the United Presbyterians Permit Members to Join the Grand Army and Junior Mechanics.

At the next session of the United Presbyterian Synod, embracing the churches of Western Pennsylvania, an effort will be made to secure decisive action relative to the recognition of the Junior Order United American Mechanics and the Grand Army of the Republic. The United Presbyterian is, numerically, one of the strongest denominations in this section. There are thirteen churches in Pittsburg alone. Antipathy to secret societies is one of the rules of the denomination. It happens, however, that the two orders named have nowhere as firm a footing as in Pittsburg, Allegheny and the other towns of Western Pennsylvania, where the United Presbyterian church's chief strength lies.

For years past United Presbyterian ministers have observed the increasing growth of the Grand Army and Mechanics from among their flocks. Efforts to check it have failed. Men will not leave the church for the orders, but there is a growing tendency to strain the point of objection to secret societies, join them in spite of the church and conceal, as far as possible, connection with the orders from the church officials. It is to avert this defiance of ecclesiastical authority that an effort will be made to harmonize with the organizations named.

I have not been able to find the author of this statement. It may have had its rise in the restless brain of some news-gatherer, or in the wish of some non-United Presbyterian in that body. It is a significant fact that similar notices appeared simultaneously in several of the daily papers. If the statement be true, the party or parties making it evidently think that they have a strong case, or fail to recognize the situation. It is rare that law-breakers in the church thus publish themselves and express their hopes. If the author of this, or any one favoring making the United Presbyterian church the foster-mother of oath-bound secret societies, will make their desire known, they will be given an hour in the convention to give their reasons. The pastors of the U. P. churches are too sensible a body of men not to see that the real question involved is, whether they shall now give up the testimony they have so long borne, for which the fathers have labored and prayed, or whether they will maintain the same.

Will this lodge take one of them into its secret meetings without he is initiated? Can the church analyze the teaching of every lodge that may gain prominence in certain localities, before entering, to see whether she may adopt it or not? A church attempting this would be in a continual strife. It is Masonry, Clan-na-Gael, Ku-Klux, Orangeman, or any lodge that may come along, or it is none. Satan did not ask Eve to murder—only to eat what God forbade. But murder followed. Let us have a fair and frank discussion of this whole matter. All who love Christ will desire to act for his glory in all things.

My P. O. address, till after the convention, will be box 292, Wilkinsburgh, Pa.

W. B. STODDARD.

REV. WM. FENTON IN NEBRASKA.

OMAHA, March 2, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In compliance with a request to say something about the people of Omaha and other cities of Nebraska, I would say that the First U. P. church of Omaha heard the testimony of the Masonic fraternity publishers in evidence of the false swearing practiced by Masons in their lodge-rites of devil-worship; this testimony was, of course, privately denied by a Mason who heard the evidence.

The secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Omaha, Mr. Hollander, cheerfully allowed the Y. M. C. A. Hall to be used for an exposition of the many evils of Freemasonry.

The doors of the First Lutheran church were opened twice for testimony against secret societies. The Lord has many friends in Omaha who hate secret societies as they hate the devil. One pastor, at least, the rector of All Saints, whom the editor of the Midland calls "the presumptuous corrector of the world," is a Freemason, and writes letters in the Omaha Bee in advocacy of Masonry; he calls the testimony to the existence of hell in the future state "Calvinism," and not the place for Masonry but the church.

At Humboldt, Mr. Bissell is zealous in behalf of truth that exposes lodgery. Elder Babcock, pastor of a church four miles from Humboldt, is an ex-Mason. At the close of an Anti-masonic sermon he testified that if he had heard one-hundredth part as much about Masonry as he heard in that sermon before he united with the Masons, he never would have joined hands with them. He called upon the congregation for a rising vote as to their opinions of Masonry, and the entire congregation arose in testimony against the institution.

Elder G. W. Hawley, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Humboldt, cheerfully welcomed an Anti-masonic preacher to preach in his

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SALOON, THE LODGE AND THE CHURCH.

BIGGS, Cal., Feb. 18, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In yours of Feb. 4, I find an article headed, "Which is Worst, the Saloon or the Lodge?" Well, I will say that the lodge is as much worse as can be. I imagine so, for the reason that the saloon does not profess to be a medium by which good can be accomplished. It is bad, beyond comprehension, and its principles and supporters know and acknowledge it; but the lying lodges come to us in the shape of deception. They profess to know and serve God, but in practice they deny him. They tell us to join them and it will make us better, when the tendency is to make men worse. Instead of leading to God, they lead from God, and by their deceptions they give a false respectability to the saloons by patronizing them and by taking in the proprietors and parading them with the full marks of the beast in the streets. Then, to cap it all, comes in a sin-cursed church, with its hypocritical ministers, and they join this motley crew and put to shame the cause of God and his people, deceiving the simple-minded by covering up the deformity of the mystery of abomination. If the church would divorce herself from the lodge and saloon and put on her purity, then the lodge and saloon would hide their deformed heads, and sink in their own corruption. Purify the church, and you will kill the lodge; for then you come in the strength of Israel's God, and this gives you Gospel temperance, which is the medium through which God intended to destroy the works of the devil.

Oh, for an uncompromising separation, and then we shall have the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Then the church would shine forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners.

GARRET KEPPEL.

CAN MASONIC OATHS BE EVADED?

SCHALLER, Iowa, March 1, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I heard a Masonic brother not long since employ a subtle method of endeavoring to evade the force of the Masonic oaths. He admitted that a man joined Masonry without knowing before-hand to what he had to swear, what he was to swear to conceal, and what he was to swear to do, and that he did all this upon the assurance of the officer administering the oaths and representing Masonry, that he should find nothing that should interfere with his duty to himself, to his family, to his state, or to his God.

The subtlety was this: He maintained, therefore, that if something should be required of him that he considered wrong he was not bound by his oath in its intention, and thus still kept his oath and maintained good standing in Masonry.

The stern question arises: "Is that true?" Are Masonic oaths given and taken in that sense? Are not the Masonic oaths carefully framed to thwart any such mental reservation? The candidate for the Master Mason's degree promises and swears that he will help a brother Master Mason who is in trouble under all circumstances, murder and treason alone excepted, and that at his own option. Now, there are a great many degrees of meanness and wickedness short of murder and treason that get men into trouble. A Master Mason swears to help him out of these.

The candidate for the Royal Arch degree swears that he will help a Royal Arch, who is in trouble, whether right or wrong. How can a Royal Arch Mason evade that oath and still keep it, and retain his Masonic standing?

The fact is, the matter is taken out of his hands and mind, and his duty is defined for him in terms that hold him with bands of steel to do that which does violence to himself, his family, his state, his fellow-men and his God.

He can truly refuse to do those things, break the wicked oath, dissever the artful net, and step out among freemen. That is his remedy. Truly yours,

W. C. PADEN.

THE "HOME RULE" SCHEME IN UTAH.

OGDEN, Utah, Feb. 24, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In the Cynosure of February 18, on the first page, is a short reference to Utah affairs, the first sentence of which is: "Mormonism, afraid of defeat in its secret longing for supremacy, and anxious to perpetuate its peculiar dogmas and practices untrammelled by the restrictions of statehood, is now endeavoring to obtain, through Congress, a species of 'home-rule' that shall give it independent powers in its civil and religious government."

The "home-rule" scheme for Utah is Democratic rather than Mormon. The man who drafted the bill, and to whom all agree belongs the honor, if such it be, of that plan of legislation for Utah, never was a Mormon. He was once a member of the Idaho legislature, and one of the foremost men to push through the "Idaho test-oath," by which all Mormons in that State are disfranchised. When he came to Utah he put himself at the head of the Liberal party, and was one of the political managers who secured for Ogden the first anti-Mormon municipal government. He has always been known as an anti-Mormon, and his law partner is often called "a Mormon-eater." But this plan was a Democratic scheme to push through Congress legislation which might give a limited statehood, because there was no hope of getting statehood, and they preferred half a loaf to no bread. This measure is engineered by the Democrats, and opposed by the Liberals.

Another bill, called the Teller bill, is also before Congress. This bill provides for statehood. The Liberals are opposed to this measure, but the Republicans favor it. Mormon Republicans are canvassing the Territory in the interests of it.

The Utah lobbyists in Washington are not all Mormons. It may not be safe to pass any measures in regard to Utah which depend on the sincerity of the Mormons; but it would be more in harmony with facts to oppose Utah legislation because of the insincerity and the scheming of politicians, regardless of their religion. The Mormon church in Utah is no safer in the hands of the politicians than is the cause of Christ and good morals, as supported by the evangelical churches. The fact is, professional politicians, who are tinkering Utah politics, care very little for religion, true or false, or for morals which stand in the way of their ambition. Let Congress be wary of the Mormons, but more wary of the politicians. Bad men, like corrupt trees, do not bring forth good fruit. Yours truly,

AMOS JUDSON BAILEY.

LITERATURE.

Our Day for March is, as usual, a strong number. Its leading article, "Signs of the Times in German Theological Faculties," by Rev. G. R. W. Scott, D.D., of Andover, Mass., is a capital review of the religious aspects in Germany, and indicates the value of reforms instituted under the present emperor. "Under his rule the empire is making steady material advance . . . and under his influence piety is coming to the front. The signs of the times show that the fatherland is having a spiritual uplift." This is very cheering. The whole article will repay a careful reading. A statistical paper on "The Congested Districts in American Cities," by Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, copied from the Popular Science Monthly for February, is filled with significant facts and figures, and is a timely presentation of the evils of over-populated towns and cities and the benefits of dispersing the surplus denizens to suburban homes. "Legalized Robbery in the Louisiana Lottery" is the title of a valuable paper by Judge Frank McGloin of the Louisiana Court of Appeals, transferred from the pages of the Forum for January last. It is a brave arraignment of the most gigantic gambling institution of the day. Rev. Joseph Cook's Review of "Mr. Spurgeon's Character and Career" forms the first Prelude of his 223d Boston Monday Lecture, delivered February 1, and received with the heartiest sympathy by the audience. There is nothing finer in this number of Our Day. At the same lecture was also sung "Evermore," the current Boston Hymn, by Mr. Cook, printed with the Prelude. Whether the lecturer "drops into poetry," or confines himself to prose, one never loses sight of the genius that is sure to pervade both. "Book Notices" by no means form an insignificant feature in this periodical, if one would know the value of the better class of literature of the day. "Vital Points of Expert Opinion" cover the "Decadence of Caste in India," by Rev. Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost, in the Independent, and "Obstacles to Reform in New York City," by Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell, in the Christian Statesman—two choice selections. "Questions to Specialists" possess more than ordinary interest for Christian educators; and the editorial notes deal with current topics of importance agreeably treated. Published at 161 La Salle street, Chicago, and 28 Beacon street, Boston. $2.50 per annum.

Scribner's Magazine for March opens with a poem "On a Bust of General Grant," believed to have been the last written by J. Russell Lowell, with a fac simile of his penmanship—a graceful tribute to the great American warrior and president. The more important illustrated prose articles are as follows: The Water Route from Chicago to the Ocean, by Chas. C. Rogers, Lieut., U. S. N.; Small Country Places, by Samuel Parsons, Jr., Superintendent of Parks in New York; The Wrecker (continued), by Stevenson and Osbourn; American Illustration of To-day (concluded), by Wm. A. Coffin; Paris Theatres and Concerts—The Opera, the Opera-Comique, and the Conservatoire, by Wm. F. Apthorp. Other contents include: A New England Kismet, by Alice M. Earle; Reflections of a Married Man, by Robert Grant; Two Portraits, by Lloyd M. Garrison; Speed in Locomotives—The Limitations of Fast Running—Train Speed a Question of Transportation—A Practical Experiment, respectively by M. N. Forney, editor of the Railroad and Engineering Journal, Theodore N. Ely, General Superintendent of Motive Power, Pennsylvania Railroad, and H. Walter Webb, Third Vice President, N. Y. Central—a valuable symposium on this important topic; A Girl of Pompeii, by Edward S. Martin, and editorials. The illustrations are very fine, and the entire number especially attractive. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York.

The March Century fairly excels its always acceptable issues in the aggregation of literary and artistic charms which it presents. The description and many views of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, contributed by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, is a feature seldom surpassed in interest and execution. This paper is of unusual importance because of the prominence of St. Paul's as the one great cathedral of the Renaissance period and because of the undying reputation of its builder, Sir Christopher Wren, who needs no other monument to commemorate his genius. Next in importance is the illustrated article by Richard Rathbun on the United States Fish Commission and some of its work. "The Italian Old Masters" introduces Giorgione and three magnificent specimens of his genius. Paderewski, the celebrated musician, forms the subject of a critical study by William Mason, a biographical sketch by Fanny M. Smith, with a portrait and a description of his professional practice by Richard W. Gilder. The Naulahka, by Kipling and Balestier, and Characteristics, by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, are continued. Two new serials—Ol' Pap's Flaxen, by Hamlin Garland, and the Nature and Elements of Poetry, by Edmund Clarence Stedman—are begun. Other minor attractions are found in the portrait of Miss Beatrice Goelet; Gay's Romance, by Mrs. Burton Harrison; Middle Georgia Rural Life, illustrated, by Richard M. Johnston; Our Tolstoi Club, illustrated, by Dorothy Prescott; The Village Romance, illustrated, by Viola Roseboro'; The Farmer and Railway Legislation, by Henry C. Adams; An Acquaintance with Hans Christian Andersen, by Boyesen; with poems by Aldrich and others, and the usual well-filled and pleasant departments. New York: The Century Company. $4.00 per annum.

The Cosmopolitan for March is rich in embellishment and variety of letter-press. Among the most attractive papers in its pages are the Columbian World's Fair, by M. H. DeYoung, U. S. Fair Commissioner, and Elizabeth Bisland's graphic sketch of the Cathedral at Cologne, both finely illustrated. The full-page frontispiece, "St. Valentine's Morning," is copied from an artistic water color by Leon Moraa. Literary and dramatic interest clusters around the following articles and their accompanying engravings: Fair Imogene upon the Stage, by Chas. E. L. Wingate; Strawberry Hill and the Countess Waldegrave, by Adam Badeau; An Episode in Mexico, by Eleanor S. Sea; From an ex-Guardsman's Notebook, by Henry A. Herbert and Thomas Donnelly; Trailing Yew, by Patience Stapleton; A Night with a Leopard, by MacMahon Challinor; The (English) Cartoons of John Tenniel—reminiscences of old political eras, from Punch and other periodicals, by E. C. Reynolds; The Touch of the Wand (poem), by Wm. Waterfield; The Archbishop's Unguarded Moment, by Oscar Fay Adams; Problems of Aerial Navigation, by the editor; Social Problems, by Edward Everett Hale; A War Time Postscript, and American Fiction Again, by Brander Matthews. New York: $3.00 per annum.

The March installment of the Ladies' Home Journal (Philadelphia: The Curtis Publishing Co.) maintains its character for versatility and unfailing interest in the advancement of woman's kingdom. Ella Wheeler Wilcox contributes the initial poem—"March," a sonnet. Many of the articles are illustrated. The general list comprises the following papers and contributors: A Royal Recluse, by Ada C. Bond; Are Women Inconstant? by Junius Henri Browne; Her Infinite Variety—a poem, by Harry Romaine; Unknown Wives of Well-known Men—Mrs. Chas. H. Spurgeon, by Frederick Dolman; The Lost Star—a poem, by Samuel Abbott; Clever Daughters of Clever Men—Gabrielle Greeley Clendenin, by Francis E. Smith; Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him, (continued), by Mrs. Beecher; Artistic Ideas in Ribbon Embroidery, by Maude Haywood; The American Girl who Studies Abroad, by Varina A. Davis; Are Our Girls Too Independent, by Mrs. Frank Leslie; A Brief Prelude, by Margaret B. Snow; The Brownies Through the Year, (continued) by Palmer Cox; and the usual departments, conducted by the editor, Rob't J. Burdette, T. DeWitt Talmage, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Miss Parloa, and others.

We welcome with much pleasure the first number of a deserving periodical, which we trust will succeed in weathering all the difficulties of a new enterprise. It is "Historia: An Illustrated Monthly Magazine of Historical Stories, for Young People; Vol. I., No. 1. Conducted by Frederick B. Cozzens. Published by the Historia Company, Chicago, Ill. Price $1.00 per year." This initial number bears date of this current month, and contains the following articles, written in a direct and simple style to suit the capacity of the class of readers for which it is intended: "Old Ironsides" and Her Victories, by Geo. L. Moulton, illustrated; Fierce Battle in Mid-air, by Harold Bernard; Fighting the Mexicans, by Lieut. J. Harmon, illustrated; General Marion and His Men, by Joseph Q. Chancrod, illustrated; How Richard Cœur de Leon Earned His Name, by Albert T. Sawyer; Questions of the Day—full of interest.

St. Nicholas for March is very well-filled with its customary attractions of stories, pictures and verses. The frontispiece shows us two fine-looking boys of Holland—nice honest faces that one likes to look upon and love. There are continuations of Tom Paulding, Two Girls and a Boy, When I Was Your Age, and the Admiral's Caravan, with a great variety of equally pleasant matters for younger and older readers. Altogether it is a number to make a boy forget his troubles, and possibly his duties; but no boy can read it without profit as well as pleasure. Grown-up people will also find something in it to interest them; and it is no wonder that it has become a favorite in the families which it regularly visits. New York: The Century Company. $3.00 per annum.

OBITUARY.

DANIEL G. FOSTER

died at Delavan, Walworth county, Wisconsin, February 18, 1892, at the ripe age of 90 years.

He was born in New Hampshire in 1802. When two years old his parents moved to Otsego, Co., N. Y., where they lived about fourteen years; from there they came to Cayuga Co., remaining ten years. Their next and last residence in the State was Perry, Genesee Co.

He was married Dec 25, 1829, to Miss Caroline Braynard. Five children were born to them in Perry and two in Delavan, three of whom have already passed over the river.

In the fall of 1837 Mr. Foster, having imbibed the Western fever, at that time somewhat prevalent in Perry, came on a prospecting voyage around the lakes to Milwaukee. From Milwaukee his journey to Delavan was made on foot, with only an Indian trail to guide him. After a short visit with old friends he made a selection of a tract of land on Sec. 21 and returned for his family. In June following he came and took possession. After six years he changed his location to sections 6 and 7, where he succeeded in subduing and cultivating a beautiful farm of 300 acres, continuing his work until age and infirmity compelled him to retire from active toil. His closing hours were spent at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Judson Foster, in this village.

Religiously, Mr. Foster was a Baptist and was one of the constituent members of the Delavan church, there being now but one left. At what period he embraced religion we are not informed, but those who have known him for more than forty years are willing witnesses to his unswerving fidelity to Christian principles. He was a man of positive convictions and possessed the courage of those convictions, so it was not difficult to find his position on all moral questions. The following truthful tribute to his memory is furnished us by his Bible-class teacher, showing the esteem in which he was held by those best acquainted with him:

"Our Brother Foster, while in health, was ever a faithful member of the class, and remained with us some time after he lost his hearing, cheering us by his personal readiness to help. Of his Christian character no one who knew him could doubt. His life-long steadfastness bore testimony of the truth and of his faith in Christ. Naturally of a timid, shrinking disposition, yet he was bold and decided in maintaining the right, without regard to numbers or popularity. He was in the front ranks in the temperance and anti-slavery interests in the day when it cost something, and was hard to bear the scorn and obloquy heaped upon those who took the unpopular side of these questions.

"His convictions of oath-bound secrecy were deep and strong, and while he acknowledged that he could not see how they were to be overcome, yet his faith was strong that God in his own good time and way will accomplish it. It only remained for him to do his duty. As he could not reconcile the obligations of those secret oath-bound organizations with the Christian's obligations to Christ and his church, when the church threw open its doors to them he withdrew his active walks with them, claiming that the original charter was annulled. His testimony has been given; his stewardship ended; he rests in peace."

E. L. H.

CONRAD YOES,

of Crawford county, Arkansas, quietly passed away November 2, 1891. Born in December, 1799, he lived about seventy-five years in the State where he died. For over sixty years he preached the Gospel, refusing all compensation for his labor. Over hills and through valleys, in heat and cold, he freely carried the messages of grace. He believed in a union of God's people, and prayed and contended for it. He was also strongly opposed to secret societies. At the last he expressed a desire to live no longer, and was ready to go.

Ask your doctor what happens to cod-liver oil when it gets inside of you.

He will say it is shaken and broken up into tiny drops, becomes an emulsion; there are other changes, but this is the first.

He will tell you also that it is economy to take the oil broken up, as it is in Scott's Emulsion, rather than burden yourself with this work. You skip the taste too.

Let us send you an interesting book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato. T. R. Harris, Abbott, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 3/4 ozs., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8 1/2 in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 13 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent; after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. It started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. This year I offer $500 Cash to any person producing a 3 1/2 lb. tomato. (It can be done.) Full directions how Mr. Harris grew his with each order. Plant some, you may win the prize. All my seed is saved from large specimens.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE is all head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP is the earliest in the world, easy grown, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors.

My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $500 for a panny blossom; $500 for a bean plant with 100 pods; and above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection, will receive Free a packet of TURNIP'S IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. B. MILLER, S. Rosa Hill, Onondaga Co. N. Y.

He leaves two sons and five daughters to mourn his loss. JAMES R. YOES.
Carthage, Mo.

Dr. E. T. Miller, of Cross Plains, Wisconsin, has expressed the opinion that, for obstinate cases of syphilis and scrofula, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is unquestionably the most effective remedy known to pharmacy. Wonderful cures have resulted from its use.

Premature gray whiskers should be colored to prevent the appearance of age, and Buckingham's Dye is by far the best preparation to do it.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

PIANOS $175. ORGANS $35. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Reedy, Washington, N. J.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 10. A Pastor's Confession.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835

Compiled and Arranged by John S. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Plunkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Plunkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paul, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Faris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Monomone; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 841 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $2.00 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1892.

MISUSING THE BIBLE.

There are certain classes of men, under various names, who make it a business to tinker the Bible to make it fit their own notions of what is right, what is wrong, and what is inspired, and consequently what should be believed and followed, and what, also, is not of divine origin, and therefore unworthy of credence.

First, there are the Swedenborgians, who get their primal existence as a church from the writings of a human philosopher, whose voluminous dogmas are believed with the strength of faith with which orthodox Christians receive the teachings of the Holy Scriptures; and this is the way in which they treat the Bible:

"The books of the Word are all those which have the internal sense; but those books which have not the internal sense are not the Word. The books of the Word in the . . . New Testament are the four evangelists—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, and the Revelation. The rest have not the internal sense."

"In the Word there is an internal sense, which is spiritual, for the angels, and an external sense, which is natural, for men."

"The Word in the letter cannot be understood, but by means of doctrine drawn from the Word by one who is enlightened; for the literal sense thereof is accommodated to the apprehension of even simple men; wherefore doctrine drawn from the Word must serve them for a lamp."—The New Jerusalem, pp. 59, 60.

Now here we have thrown out, as not possessing a spiritual sense, the Acts of the Apostles, all of Paul's Epistles, with those of James, Peter, John and Jude. The disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ, ever since the second century began, have thought that the "internal sense," the spiritual exposition of all the New Testament which the Swedenborgians accept as genuine, is found in the very epistles discarded by them. All of us now believe, on the best authority, that God as surely speaks to us in the Epistles as in the Gospels; and it is very certain that they, with the Gospels, are inspired by the Holy Ghost. We would not like to doubt this, for the "internal sense" in all is the same, and appeals with the same force to our hearts as an inspired message from our Father's throne.

Secondly, there now comes the Roman priesthood, who tell us that the Bible is the source of all heresies. Do they know whose book it is which they thus accuse? But is the Bible to blame for heresies? Yes, if the Protestant religion is a heresy; but not otherwise. Christ said to the Sadducees (Matt. 22: 29), "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." He makes ignorance of the Scriptures the source of heresies. He does not agree with the Roman priesthood. The Bereans, too (Acts 17: 10, 11), were more noble than the Thessalonians because they sought the Scriptures daily, and were thus prepared to oppose all heresies that might spring up to thwart the religion of Jesus Christ. That would seem to settle the question whether "the Bible is the source of all heresies."

The Mormons, also, were not satisfied with the accepted versions of the Bible in our own time, and so Joe Smith made a translation (or claimed to), to better fit their understandings and beliefs. It is something like the "King James Bible," only they have made changes in it not authorized in the Hebrew or Greek Scriptures. This much may be said its favor—that it apparently bears more marks of ignorance concerning the "internal sense" of the Bible, than malicious alterations of the text.

Even the elder Booth, head of the Salvation Army, took the "King James Bible," threw away a large portion of it, and printed the rest as a good-enough Bible for his army.

The men who wrote the degree lectures for the Masonic fraternity cut out of the Scriptures which they incorporated in their rituals whatever reference to Christ and his salvation they found therein.

The Romanists say that the common people must not read the Scriptures for themselves, but receive them, at second hand, through the priesthood. God says they are so plain that a wayfarer man, though a fool, shall not err in getting at the truth from them. So much for the dogma against the private interpretation of the Scriptures.

Peter says of Paul's obscure writings—those that are hard to understand—that they do no harm except to those who are both unlearned and unstable, and that they do them no harm unless they wrest them—that is, do absolute violence to them. (2 Peter 3: 16.)

What shall we say then of Ingersoll, Thomas, Abbott, Swing, Briggs, et al., who skip over those texts in the Bible from which they dare not let the light shine upon their dogmas, lest its effulgence should divulge their shame and dissolve their false doctrines "into air, thin air?"

The truth is, when a church or a society falls into practices which the Bible condemns, it is much easier to wrest the Scriptures in their behalf than it is to reform their evil practices. Hence they hail with gladness any teacher with a silver tongue who can fill their itching ears with comforting words—who will cry "peace" instead of repentance and reform. Thus they misuse the Bible and deceive themselves.

THE "HOME RULE" FOR UTAH.

With all due respect for the opinions of our esteemed correspondent in Utah, whose letter we print on page 6 of this issue, there is evidently more Mormonism in the proposed "Home Rule" for that Territory than he is disposed to admit. We do not believe that he is prejudiced in favor of Mormon religion or politics, or that he designs to misstate the position of affairs in Utah; but there is certainly a discrepancy between his statements and those which we receive from other trustworthy sources.

Our first reference touching the scheme for "Home Rule" for Utah, printed February 18, charged the origin of the measure upon Mormon influence in Congress. Our correspondent attributes its conception to an anti-Mormon, backed up by the Democratic party in the Territory, by whom, he says, it is being engineered.

Leaving the reader to follow out the details of our correspondent's letter, and to form his own opinion of their correctness, we turn to a well-written article by R. F. Clay, in the Christian Standard of February 13, which gives an apparently truthful version of the political situation in Utah.

Referring to the alleged public abandonment of polygamy by the Mormons, he says: "The meaning of it is to deceive the people of the East, and especially Congress, and thus secure statehood; and when statehood is secured the suspended practice will be restored by the Mormon State of Utah. Last year, in a single night, the Mormon political party, or, as it is called here, 'The People's party,' was disbanded, and it was said they would divide between the Democrats and Republicans. But when the August election came on, it was seen that there was not enough division to deceive any one in this city. The Liberal or Gentile party beat both the so-called Democratic and Republican parties in this city election. There was probably one-tenth of the Mormon votes that stood with the Republicans, the other nine-tenths being Democrats. If the Lower House of Congress had been Republican so would this nine-tenths have been Republican.

"At the time of this so-called division of the People's party, it was published that there would be no effort made to secure statehood for Utah at this time; but Congress had hardly assembled before John T. Caine, the Mormon delegate to Congress, introduces a bill [the Home Rule measure] to give them control of the Territory, and thus prepare the way for Mormon statehood; while Senator Teller, of Colorado, offers a bill to give them statehood. The so-called Democratic and Republican parties here are clamoring for the passage of one or the other of these bills, while the Liberals [the anti-Mormon citizens] are solidly opposed to both of them."

With reference to the ostensible abandonment of polygamy by the Mormons, the writer in the Christian Standard remarks: "In view of these facts, it behooves everyone at all interested in the welfare of this Territory to 'go slow' in accepting these professions of Mormons. It is safe for Congress to leave Utah as she is until there are enough Americans in this Territory to control it. Then it can come into the Union as an American State, and not as a Mormon State. If statehood was granted now, Mormon judges would be elected, and they would see that any law they might pass in their Legislature was not enforced against either the principle or practice of polygamy."

For the present this will suffice.

AN INTERESTING EVENT.

Sunday, March 20, will be celebrated as "Reminiscence Day" by the patrons, officers, teachers and scholars of the Chicago Avenue Sunday-school at the Chicago avenue church, corner of La Salle street. This Sunday-school, originally founded by Dwight L. Moody more than thirty years ago, has a remarkable record in the history of the religious institutions of the city, and has enjoyed an immense popularity as shown in the continuously large number of its attendants. The amount of good which it has accomplished; the boys and girls it has rescued from immoral and vicious practices; the hearts that have been comforted, and the souls that have been saved through its instrumentality—these are written in the archives of heaven, although but imperfectly known upon earth. The material records of the school were destroyed in the great fire of 1871, and have never been replaced. The "Reminiscence Day," however, is designed by Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, who for more than twenty years has been the faithful superintendent of the school, and his associates, to bring together as many as possible of the former and latter attendants, and others familiar with its past history, and from their recollections of by-gone years collate a fund of information that can be obtained in no other manner, and which may be preserved as a memorial of the worth and usefulness that this work has always developed. In this respect it will be an occasion replete with intense interest. All the old friends of the school are invited to be present and participate in the exercises. The special services will begin in the church at 3:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon and continue until 6:00 o'clock in the evening. The customary Sunday-school hour (from 3 to 4 o'clock) will be filled with brief addresses by some of the first superintendents, interspersed with the Sunday-school music of thirty years ago. At 4 o'clock the children will be dismissed, while the adults will remain to listen to the experiences of old officers, teachers or scholars. At 5:30 a plain lunch will be served in different parts of the building, affording an excellent opportunity for renewing acquaintances of the cherished past. Altogether, it bids fair to be a notable reunion.

DR. GUNSAULUS' POETRY.

Since I expressed warm admiration for Dr. Gunsaulus' speech on Congregationalism in the Auditorium, I have received the following poetry attributed to him, and clipped from the organ of a secret insurance club, the Royal Arcanum, which name means "the king's secret." The name is exceptionable. The poetry is inferior as literature, and worse as religion. I give it to the Cynosure readers, as I wish never to mislead their opinions of men or things.

Once in my life I attended a theatre. It was the Tremont, in Boston, started by professed Christians, who promised the public it should exclude drabs and liquors, and be indeed and in truth a school of morals. I saw in that theatre, that night, all that an honest man and Christian should loathe, and have entered no theatre since, except Brigham Young's, at Salt Lake City, when the building was undergoing repairs, and no play was on.

In the Tremont, that night, the afterpiece presented an old, gray-haired, brandy-blossomed deacon, who was made to enter a whisky-shop to cure his colic, and made an assignment with a poor flower-girl, on the stage, before the would-be elite of Boston! The religion of Jesus Christ was personated in that deacon. Dr. Gunsaulus (if he wrote it), has done a similar thing in the limping rhymes below. I hope there is some mistake.

From the age of sixteen to eighty, I have carefully observed professing Christians. In Pennsylvania I attended seven camp-meetings one year—Methodist, Albrights, Winnebrenarian, and one or two others. I have studied and communed with Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Lutherans and Free Baptists; and if Dr. Gunsaulus' "Deacon Frisbee" is intended to represent any class of church officers, it is gross falsification; if not, it violates all rules of just poetry. What does he think of the saloon-keeping "Deacons" of Freemasonry? I hope there is some mistake. J. BLANCHARD.

ASHES ON THE SLIDE.

BY REV. DR. GUNSAULUS.

When Jim and Bill and I were boys, a many years ago,
How gaily did we use to hail the coming of the snow!
Our sleds, fresh painted red, and with their runners round and bright,
Seemed to respond right briskly to our clamor of delight,
As we dragged it up the slippery road that climbed the rugged hill
Where perches the old frame meeting house, so solemn-like and still.

Ah, coasting in those days—those good old days—was fun, indeed!
(Sleds at that time, I'd have you know, were paragons of speed!)
And, if the hill got bare in spots, as hills will do, why, then
We'd haul on ice and snow to patch those bald spots up again;
But, oh! with what sad certainty our spirits would subside,
Whon Deacon Frisbee sprinkled ashes where we used to slide!

The deacon he would roll his eyes, and gnash his tooth-less gums,
And clear his skinny throat, and twirl his saintly, bony
thumbs,
And tell you: "When I wuz a boy they taught me to eschew
The godless, ribald vanities which modern youths pursue!
The pathway that leads down to hell is slippery, straight and wide,
And Satan lurks for prey where little boys are wont to slide."

Now, he who ever in his life has been a little boy
Will not reprove me when he hears the language I employ
To stigmatize as wickedness the deacon's zealous spite,
In interfering in the play wherein we found delight;
And so I say, with confidence, not unalloyed with pride,
"G'd darn the man who sprinkles ashes where the youngsters slide!"

But Deacon Frisbee long ago went to his lasting rest—
His money well invested in farm mortgages out West;
Bill, Jim and I, no longer boys, have learned through years of strife
That the troubles of the little boy pursue the man through life—
That here and there along the course wherein we hoped to glide,
Some envious hand has sprinkled ashes just to spoil our slide!
And that malicious, envious hand is not the deacon's
now—
Grim, ruthless Fate! that evil sprite, none greater is than thou!
Riches and honors, peace and care come at thy beck and go—
The soul, elate with joy to-day, to-morrow writhes in woe!
And till a man has turned his face unto the wall and died,
He must expect to get his share of ashes on the slide!

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT'S HERETICAL DOGMAS.

A singular discussion has been recently conducted between Dr. Lyman Abbott, of the Christian Union, and the Inter-Ocean, of Chicago. Dr. Abbott, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, takes the ground that the Ten Commandments do not require prayer, public or private; do not prohibit vulgar and obscene language; do not prohibit selfish indifference to, and carelessness of, human life, and do not prohibit gambling or perjury.

The Inter-Ocean takes issue with the Christian Union on each one of the points named, and says that, so far as it remembers, Colonel Ingersoll never has made such preposterous statements concerning the Decalogue. We are entirely agreed to the doctrine of the Inter-Ocean, both positive and negative. We believe that the Ten Commandments are a perfect law of life, and that the assault which Mr. Ingersoll has been making on the Bible and the Christian religion for years is, in almost every particular, more decent and Christian than the writings in the Christian Union to which we above refer. It is singular that such blindness can come upon a professed Christian minister as to lead him thus to write.

THE SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

But little has been said in this paper, for several months, concerning the Southern Ministers' Fund, which was created for the special purpose of furnishing preachers in the South with the Cynosure as an anti-dote to the lodge power. The work has progressed, however, and there is reason to believe that it has proved beneficial, especially among the colored congregations. Last week we received the following from a pastor of the African M. E. church in the Indian Territory:

"I am more than thankful to you for sending me the Cynosure. It saved me from the lodge, and through its teachings I have saved two of my fellow-ministers, and put a halt to many more" (who were inclined to join the lodge). "I am a young minister, a graduate of the theological department of Howard University, at Washington, D. C. My wife and self are teaching school here, and we find there is a great work to be accomplished here among my people, who were formerly slaves to the Indians. There are three colleges here for the whites and Indians, but none for the brother in black. I still desire to have the Cynosure sent to me, and if any brother will send it to me, it will be as bread cast upon the waters. I am not able to pay for the paper."

With such testimony as this from the very people for whom the Southern Ministers' Fund was established, there is certainly a strong appeal to the readers of the Cynosure and all friends of the anti-secrecy reform to donate liberally for its maintenance. A few dollars, now and then, judiciously expended in this work is sure to bring about gratifying results. The Negro is tractable and conscientious, and may be, in this way, kept from forfeiting his soul's best interests in the secret places of iniquity. Donations for this fund may be forwarded to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

—A dispatch from East Tawas, Mich., last week, indicates a fresh outbreak of sectarian rancor and its inevitable consequences. The trouble originated in the formation of a branch of a secret organization supposed to be opposed to Roman Catholics, and it is stated that the social, business and political circles in the city are bitterly divided against one another. Political lines are ignored, and the approaching city election will be fought solely on the religious issue. The trouble caused by this affair already manifests itself. Several prominent attorneys, physicians and merchants have been identified as members of the order, and a complete boycott has been declared against them. One cigar manufacturer, whose wares are sold all over the country, cannot find a market for his product. Dealers in the city who have heretofore purchased cigars from him, have not only refused to purchase more, but have destroyed the cigars they had on hand, refusing even to sell goods of his manufacture. The whole affair shows the folly of creating secret societies for sectarian or political purposes. The truth never needs concealment in a just cause, and the exposure of any evil goes a long way towards its suppression.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

pulpit on Sabbath evening. Freemasons were not comforted in that sermon, but in a way that none unacquainted with the principles of Masonry would recognize Masonry in the sermon.

On Monday evening a fair-sized audience attended an Anti-masonic lecture in the Christian church. Elder E. S. Eyerly, of Kansas, was present and took part in the exercises, testifying to the bad character of Masonry.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Bissell opened his house for a further presentation and discussion of Masonry.

One pastor in Humboldt refuses to allow anything to be said in his church against secret societies, and indeed it seems as if it is his church. All of his official members are said to be Masons. The superintendent of the Sabbath-school is a Mason, and said to head a gang of secret society rowdies. He talked of riding somebody on a rail. This is the place in which Bro. Stoddard and others were pelted with rotten eggs some years ago. But the Mayor, who ordered the arrest of Rufus Smith for preaching in the open air, is said to have come to an untimely end.

The pastor of the church that rejects the truth expresses his sympathy with Masonry in a very substantial way, and intimated that he belongs to a secret society, and when asked to name the society to which he belongs, declined to do so, proving himself to be an adept in secrecy, not daring to come to the light lest the works of darkness be reprov'd.

When "truth has fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter, and he that departeth from evil giveth himself for a prey," it shall "displease the Lord, and his own arm shall bring salvation." There is a problem with the M. E. church: The Bible teaches to "deliver such a one to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord." But the M. E. church seems to have turned the key on the charnal house of the lodge. For example, an Anti-masonic pastor of an M. E. church sees a Mason in the church, and knowing him, therefore, to be a child of the devil, a sworn enemy of righteousness, if he takes up Christian labor with him to recover his soul from the snare of the devil, he may be morally certain that he will meet with enough Masonic diabolism in almost any M. E. conference to protect the Mason and defeat the good intentions of the pastor. The following clipping from the Humboldt Enterprise of January 29, 1892, indicates the heaven-daring infamy of the lodge in Humboldt, and may suggest a word of comment from yourself. How long will it be before Christian Indians are preaching the Gospel of Christ to "pale faces?"

Lodge notice of the pagan Indian Sun worshippers:

RED MEN:—Regular council of Seminole Tribe No. 7, on the sleep of the 3d sun of every seven suns.

E. W. Tucker, Sachem.
W. H. Ungles, C. of R.

Is it not time for the "stones to cry out" when Christian churches are so corrupt that they cannot reprove such worship practiced by their members?

Resolutions adopted by Seminole Tribe No. 7 to Bro. F. M. Williamson:

"26th Sun of Cold Moon G. D. 401 Hunting Grounds at Humboldt, Neb., Wigwam of Seminole Tribe No. 7, to Chief and pale faces, greeting:

"WHEREAS, The Great Spirit in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to send the white-winged messenger to the private Wigwam of our beloved Brother F. M. Williamson and wife, and borne away in its white canoe across the dark river the spirit of his two sons and one daughter,

"Resolved, That this Tribe extend to Brother Williamson and his wife our heartfelt sympathy in their affliction.

"Resolved, That while we extend to them this brotherly sympathy, we also share with them the promised assurance that when the messenger comes to bear them away, it will be to a re-union with them in the Happy Hunting Grounds reserved for all the faithful.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to our bereaved brother and his wife, and also be spread upon the records of this Tribe, and be published in our city papers and in the American Red Men. E. A. Tucker, J. F. Stevens, J. A. Waller, Committee; W. H. Ungles, C. of R."

W. FENTON.

FROM THE COLLEGE AGENT.

OBERLIN, O., Feb. 24, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On Tuesday last, I visited Adelbert College of Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O. This institution was located for many years at Hudson, Summit Co.; but its position and surroundings were not favorable. Finally it was thought advisable, and it was removed to what is called here, the East End. Since that, the college has prospered greatly. The buildings are large and commodious, there is a fine library, and they have a full faculty of able professors, with Dr. Thwing at the head, as president. And they have upwards of 700 students in course, at the present time.

I was received very kindly, while I presented the object of our reform work; and the president and Prof. Platner, the librarian, agreed, without hesitation, to receive our anti-secrecy books. In looking through the library I found J. Q. Adams on Masonry, and four or five volumes printed in 1828 and 1830, in connection with the discussion of Capt. Wm. Morgan's revelations.

This city has advanced wonderfully since I first saw it in 1835. Then it was only a village, with a pier and a lighthouse, for lake navigation. Now it has 300,000 inhabitants and covers a wide territory.

S. F. PORTER.

THE HOME.

THE CLOCK.

The old clock stood on the mantel shelf
('Twas constantly talking to itself);
And these were the words it seemed to say,
As it ticked on loudly night and day—
Tick, tick, tick, tick, how the moments fly;
Use well each one as it hastens by.

When hearts were heavy, and hands were weak,
From "its small corner" it seemed to speak
Of the strength that comes from duty done,
The weakness from trying work to shun;
Work, work, work, work, for the moments fly;
Improve them now, for they hasten by.

When quick, sharp words to the lips would rise,
And tears of anger would fill the eyes,
The old clock ticked from its corner shelf,
Be true, be true to thy better self;
Check the angry word, for moments fly;
And never return, when once gone by.

When joy was filling the heart and home,
And days of sunshine and light had come,
It merrily ticked the hours away;
Rejoice, be glad, while the light doth stay;
Give thanks to God: for the moments fly,
And joy, like sorrow, will soon pass by.

Through the days of weariness and pain,
The clock ticked on in a cheerful strain;
The days of sunshine too quickly go;
The days of darkness are hard, I know;
"One tick at a time," I tick the day,
"One day at a time," you live away.

Strength will be given to thee to-day:
Thy Saviour will be thy strength and stay;
And balm there is for thy aching heart;
Thy father doth know each bitter smart;
Trust on, hope on as the moments fly,
For sorrow, like joy, will soon pass by.

Tick, tick, tick, tick, how the moments fly;
And now thy life hath passed nearly by;
"The hour of death," with its chilling gloom,
Has come to thee in this quiet room;
Trust on, pray on with thy latest breath;
And rejoice! for Christ hath conquered death.

Tick, tick, tick, tick, fast the moments fly;
For the eternity's dawn is nigh;
There time shall cease in an endless day;
The things of time shall have passed away;
Rejoice, rejoice! In that bright home
Not a thought of pain or death shall come.

It was this I heard the old clock say,
As it ticked the days and hours away;
O mortals! hasten the time to use,
Nor thy golden gift from God abuse;
Do well thy work ere thy days shall cease;
And working for God will bring thee peace.

—Mrs. M. L. J. Hadley.

"NOT GOING TO CHURCH."

There are excuses and excuses, and explanations and explanations, and reasons and reasons for not attending church, a few of which Burdette "shows up" in his characteristic way:

So you are not going to church this morning, my son?

Ah, yes; I see. "The music is not good;" that is a pity; that's what you go to church for, to hear the music. And the less we pay, the better music we demand.

"And the pews are not comfortable;" that's too bad—the Sabbath day is a day of rest, and we go to church for repose. The less work we do during the week, the more rest we clamor for on Sunday.

"The church is so far away; it is too far to walk, and you detest riding in a street car, and they are always crowded on Sunday." That is indeed distressing; sometimes when I think how much farther away heaven is than the church, and that there are no conveyances on the road of any description, I wonder how some of us are going to get there.

"And the sermon is so long, always." All these things are indeed to be regretted. I would regret them more sincerely, my boy, did I not know that you will often squeeze into a stuffed car with a hundred other men, breathing an incense of whisky, beer and tobacco, and hang on a strap by your eyelids for two miles, then pay fifty cents for the privilege of sitting on a rough plank in the broiling sun for two hours longer, while in the intervals of the game a scratch band will blow discordant thunder out of a dozen misfit horns right in your very ears, and come home to talk the rest of the family into a state of aural paralysis about the "dandiest game you ever saw played on that ground."

Ah, my boy, you see what staying away from church does? It develops a habit of lying. There isn't one man in a hundred who could go on the witness stand and give, under oath, the same reasons for not going to church that he gives to his family every Sunday morning. My son, if you didn't think you ought to go, you wouldn't make any excuses for not going. No man apologizes for doing right.—Robert J. Burdette.

SPURGEON AND THE LITTLE BOY.

The death of Mr. Spurgeon—London's celebrated preacher—recalls the many branches of his noble work, and reminds us of a pretty story gleaned from a gentleman connected with his well-known orphanage. One holiday when it was customary for the friends of the boys to take them out for a few hours, and treat them to cakes and goodies, the great man was sitting in the garden surrounding the Home—a lovely spot situated in one of the many suburbs of the metropolis—and, as he meditated, a little fellow of some seven summers approached, and timidly plucking at the sleeve of the man who to him was the embodiment of all that was good, said, "Mr. Spurgeon!"

"Yes, my child."

"If you knew of a little boy who had no father and no mother, would you be sorry for him?"

"Why, yes, my child, you know I would."

"And, Mr. Spurgeon, please, if on a holiday when all the other little boys had some one to play with and friends to take them out and give them cakes, while that little boy had none, would you still be sorry for him?"

"Of course I would, my child;" and a humorous twinkle gleamed in the eye of the great man.

"But, Mr. Spurgeon, if that little boy stood before you, would you be so sorry that you'd give him a penny to buy cakes with?" and the little lips quivered, and the big tears stood in the earnest blue eyes.

But before they could drop, the small boy was on the great man's knee, with a bright, shining sixpence pressed tight in his little hand, and soon shouts of laughter could be heard as Mr. Spurgeon, in his own inimitable way, chased back the tears and brought sunshine into the eyes and the heart of the little orphan boy.—Pacific Methodist.

SCHOOL LIFE IN SWITZERLAND.

The system of education in practice among the Swiss is enlightened and far-reaching. Not only are pupils under a strict and kindly discipline while at school, but they are also made to feel that the warning and protecting care of their tutors is over them, whenever they are outside of the father's house. As soon as the child is in the street, he has passed from the circle of his home, and that moment begins the school's authority. Regulations, printed on slips and dropped in every house, contain, among a score of others equally sensible, the following rule relating to out-door manners:

"Delay of any kind between the scholar's home and school is not allowed. No whooping, yelling, throwing stones and snow-balls, teasing children, or ridiculing age and deformity can be endured. Grown persons shall be met with civility as they pass. Thus shall honor be reflected on the school."

Once in the class-room, the pupil is taught deportment, as well as his "three R's;" he is told how to walk, stand and speak, and a blot upon his book and a smudge on his face are regarded as equally bad. "A book befouled is wasted," said a teacher to the author of "The Swiss Republic," "and our economical habits will not suffer such loss. Turn over any of our books in daily use, and you will find none of them torn or defaced by scribbling." The same rule applies to the school-building and furniture. The desks look as if they received daily washing and polishing; not a spot of ink is to be seen on their surfaces, not the slightest evidence of the mischievous boy's knife. The corridors and stairways show neither spot nor scratch; the walls are free from finger-marks, and no bits of paper litter the floor. The children, representing all grades of society, from patrician to peasant, are neatly and comfortably clad. None are dirty, ragged, or shoeless. "If a child goes to school with his face begrimed, or his clothes torn," says a teacher, "he is washed and mended, and then sent home. The mother is ashamed on finding that some other person has had to wash her child, and the child is so mortified, that it never becomes necessary to repeat the experiment."—Youth's Companion.

SUN SPOTS.

We are yet in ignorance of the constitution of the sun; but the generally accepted theory accords with the other theory of the solar heat. The sun is believed to be, in the main, a mass of intensely heated gas and vapor, powerfully compressed by its own gravity. The central part is entirely gaseous, because its temperature being from physical necessity higher than that of the photosphere, or inclosing envelope, is far above the so-called "critical point" for every known element. No solidification, no liquefaction even, can therefore occur in the solar depths. But near the surface radiation to space is almost entirely free, the temperature is lowered below the "critical point," and, under the powerful pressure of gravity, condensation of the vapors begins and thus a sheet of incandescent cloud is formed. And here is where the spots come in. These "spots" are supposed to be shallow cavities in this sheet of cloud, depressed several hundred miles below the general level, and owing their relative darkness to the cooler vapors that fill them. Astronomers think that they are caused by descending currents from the upper regions of the solar atmosphere. They are visible almost continually, but at intervals of eleven years they seem to burst out with excessive violence in great numbers. A curious fact, hitherto unexplained, is that they never have been seen on any part of the sun except in the region within forty-five degrees of the equator.

One thing is pretty certain, and that is that the sun spots are in some way connected (probably in a causative manner) with magnetic storms on the earth, and with electrical phenomena such as the recent extraordinary aurora borealis. Some scientists, too, are inclined to believe that there is a connection between solar disturbances and earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, but this has not been clearly shown. It is clear, however, that man knows very little of the universe that he inhabits.—Chicago Evening Journal.

WORKING FOR JESUS.

All the bright summer afternoon Mary sat busily sewing. Her companions were playing upon the lawn. Why did she not join them? She was making a dressing-gown for papa, and wished to have it finished upon his return home. It was almost dark when the last stitch was taken, and Mary carried it to papa's room, and placed it on a chair by his bedside, with a little slip of paper pinned to it, on which was written: "For my dear papa, with the love of Mary."

"Mary, Mary!" called the girls.

"Yes, I am all ready," she answered; and away she ran to join them.

"How happy you look; after sewing all the afternoon, too! Do you like to sew for so long a time?" asked Annie.

"No; but I have been working to-day for papa, and it has seemed very pleasant. I love him so much that nothing seems hard that I can do for him."

"That is what Miss Alice, our Sunday-school teacher, told us," replied Annie. "She said love makes labor light."

"And she also said that it was just so in working for Jesus," added Fanny.

"Working for Jesus! What do you mean?" asked Carrie.

"That if we love Jesus we shall seek to please him. If we are kind and loving, and try to do good to others, this will be working for him."

"Will Jesus be pleased with us if we do so?"

"Yes," said Mary. "More pleased than papa will be when he sees the gown I have made for him."

"You cannot help loving him if you will only think how much he loves you," said Fanny. "He died for you."

"I think the more we do for those we love, the better we love them. And if we will try every day to work for Jesus in every way that we can, we need not fear but that we shall love him."—Exchange.

FLITTING WINGS.

A BOSTON MONDAY HYMN.

Birds that seeks a sunnier sky,
On thy heart thy wings rely:
Over land and over sea,
God his promise keeps with thee;
Never faithless, nature brings
Fitting climes to flitting wings.

Soul that fears God's judgment bar,
Truth thy instincts see afar.
So has feared each balanced soul,
Since the orb began to roll.
Souls are God's work. We shall see Judgment in Eternity.

Doom looks through the door of death.
Evermore thy conscience saith:
I am, God is, and in this
Double truth is woe or bliss.
Thou from God canst never flee,
Friend or foe of his must be.

Breath of God enkindles man,
Instincts match their Maker's plan;
Wing to air he mates aright,
Inborn faith to fadeless light.
While we live, or when we die,
God in man can speak no lie.

Southward speed, through storm and calm,
Out of snows to groves of balm:
Wing, my soul, thy certain flight,
Through the noontide and the night;
Over land and over sea,
God his promise keeps with thee.

—Joseph Cook

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION IN THE BRUSSELS TREATY.

Telegrams from W. C. Wharton, Assistant Secretary of State, and a letter from Hon. James G. Blaine, in response to inquiries from the Union Signal office, have elicited the information that the gist of the famous Brussels Treaty, as far as prohibition is concerned, is stated thus: "In the districts of this zone where it shall be ascertained that either on account of religious belief or from some other causes, the use of distilled liquors does not exist or has not been developed, the powers shall prohibit their importation. The manufacture of distilled liquors shall be likewise prohibited there. Each power shall determine the limits of the zone of prohibition of alcoholic liquors in its possessions or protectorates, and shall be bound to make known the limits thereof to the other powers within the space of six months. The above prohibition can only be suspended in the case of limited quantities intended for the consumption of the non-native population and imported under the regime and conditions determined by each government."—Union Signal.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION.

The drink system here and in other lands stated concisely is: A poison appetite ignorantly formed, fed by a conscienceless traffic defended by law—because the majority, the law-making power, want to drink the poison. Its victims fill the poorhouses, the madhouses and prisons. Their graves are often dug with the hangman's shovel at the foot of the gallows. If all the heartaches, the cries of sin and misery that are the result of this thing should be voiced in one, it would be a wail outcriing all other sorrows combined.

What is the Department of Scientific Temperance doing to overthrow this gigantic evil,—this awful drink system?

It is undermining its foundations, it is taking out its corner-stone. The ignorance of the masses as to the inherent perils of beginning to drink is the darkness that leads to ruin, the bulwark of the traffic that fattens at this feast of death. This department is dispelling that ignorance. It is letting on the light. It is teaching the future men and women of our nation with the steady drill of the schools that alcohol is the product of a fermentation that changes food to a narcotic poison. That it is the nature of a little to create an imperious, uncontrollable and destructive appetite for more, and the consequences of that awful appetite to the three-fold human system, mental, moral, physical, are destructive. Nearly thirteen million children in this country are already under temperance education laws.

Are these laws being enforced? Are the children getting this warning instruction? Four things in the school-room are absolutely essential in order that they shall:

1st. A series of well-graded text-books that contain the whole truth against alcoholic drinks and other narcotics, together with the general laws of hygiene, three different grades of books for ungraded schools and four for graded.

2d. A course of study ordered by school boards, or whoever marks out the curriculum, that shall require at least three lessons per week for fourteen weeks of each school year, and lessons as regularly learned and recited with text-books in the hands of all pupils able to read, as in the case of other studies.

3d. The same examinations and tests for promotion in this as in the case of other branches.

4th. The interested teacher.
We shall never take the world for Christ until we have taught all people God's law of abstinence from the brain poisons that harden the heart at his command—"Come unto me."—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

DRINK AND THE DEATH-RATE.

The relation of drink consumption to the death-rate formed the subject of a communication recently made to the Manchester Medico-Ethical Association, by Mr. Meacham, district medical officer. The reporter recorded it as his experience of thirty years of work among all classes of the people, that a very large percentage of disease is directly attributed to the influence of alcohol. In congested parts of the city this was especially the case, and he urged on the association the duty that rested on it, doing all that lay in its power to aid the corporation of Manchester in the efforts that were being made to promote temperance principles among the masses. Mr. Meacham attributed twenty-one per cent of pauperism met with to the hereditary influences resulting from drink excesses. He had compared the children of drunkards with those of temperate parents and found that the latter possessed vast advantages over the former in respect to healthfulness and freedom from disease.—Med. Press and Circular.

THE CONVENTION CITY.

A short time ago a number of the aldermen and prominent local Republican leaders of Minneapolis held a secret meeting at which it was decided to amend the existing liquor ordinances so that saloons could be open on Sunday, as well as removing a number of the restrictions on other days. The newspapers learned of it and freely commented upon it, so when it came up in the Common Council for action it was defeated. The only reason given for wanting the saloons open on Sunday was that the city should have a metropolitan air about it during the National Republican Convention next June, and that the present law against Sunday liquor selling would inconvenience many of the delegates to the convention who might wish to drink on Sunday.

A YOUNG WOMAN'S STAND FOR TEMPERANCE.

A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

At a large boarding house in the South, a guest was asked at dinner if she would have some plum pudding with wine sauce. "I will have some of the pudding, but none of the wine sauce," was her reply. Her friends laughed at her and insisted that she should take some, but she replied, "I decline upon principle; I take no alcohol in any form."

The conversation turned to other topics, but after dinner, a young man, whom she had noticed sitting opposite her and requesting a word with her, said: "I want to tell you how much good you did me to-day by your prompt and decided rejection of the wine pudding sauce. I had been deliberating what I would do, being strongly tempted by the smell of it, which reached me. I think I should have yielded to my desire, and the solicitation of my friends, who called my resolutions a whim, if I had not heard your refusal. That gave me the courage to resist the temptation. I have an inherited appetite for liquor, but by the grace of God I have been enabled to control it, but if I had got a taste of wine to-day, I feel confident I should have fallen again."—Worcester Times.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR ON BEER.

What explanation will those give of the efforts of Kaiser Wilhelm to secure laws against drunkenness, who have insisted that beer was a temperance drink and pointed to Germany as a proof of it? The kaiser says that drunkenness has become a national peril, and is using all his influence for its repression. But the tenacity with which the people hold to their idol Gambrinus, may be seen in the almost unanimous vote by which the bundesrath the other day rejected the kaiser's bill. The dispatch says the rejection had "a sobering effect on the kaiser," but the pity is that it will likely have an opposite effect upon the nation.—Christian Standard.

NUGGETS.

A temperance society has been established in Harvard College.

Seventy women in New York are said to be engaged in the saloon business.

Neal Dow is still living in a house that he built in Portland, Me., nearly 65 years ago. He is 87 years old.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright, the well-known statistician, is authority for the statement that for every dollar paid in by the saloons for their licenses, about twenty-one dollars is paid out by the people.

Grow more fruit. Brewers in Philadelphia ascribe the falling off in the consumption of beer last year to the abundance of fruit. It was particularly noticeable when watermelons were in great supply.

Josephine Eltzholtz, M. D., Hyderabad, India, writes that the Mohammedan begums (princesses), who, as a rule, are much more orthodox than the men, have an idea that there is brandy in all English medicines, and will take no prescriptions from a physician except for powders and pills.

Out of 70,000 British troops in India, 18,000 are teetotalers. Sir Frederick Roberts himself says that "for every 5,000 teetotalers enrolled, the strength of the British army is practically increased by another battalion." The authorities in India make an annual grant of 8,000 rupees for temperance work.

The Excise law now under consideration by the Mississippi legislature is being stoutly resisted by the liquor trade, which is organizing all over the State to prevent the passage of the bill. The license varies from $700 in small towns to $1,500 in towns of more than 2,000 inhabitants, and the local option and restrictive provisions of the law are very effective.

Ex-Governor Hoyt, of Wyoming, says: "At our first election, before women voted, we had a perfect pandemonium. The streets were filled with men partially intoxicated; all were armed with knives and pistols; it was dangerous to pass through them; the bullets were flying at random. At the next election women voted, and perfect order prevailed at the polls, and has prevailed ever since."

Perhaps the worst feature of the plan to sell intoxicating liquors at the World's Fair is the probability that under this guise the dreaded and demoralizing barmaid will be introduced into our country as a permanent institution. Petitions should be sent to the Congressional and State commissioners on this subject, also on the general one of intoxicants at the Fair and Sunday-closing. The local directorate in Chicago is by no means a finality on any of these questions. Let us remember this and act accordingly.—Union Signal.

The Department of State at Washington, in response to the request of the National Temperance Society, has instructed every consul of the United States to procure information to be used at the World's Temperance Congress on the quantity and kind of intoxicating liquors produced in the country where he is stationed; the government mode of dealing with the liquor traffic there; the relations of intemperance to poverty, immorality and crime; and the efforts, if any, being made to discourage the manufacture and sale of intoxicants.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON XII.—Subject.—Quarterly Review.—March 20, 1892.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55: 6.

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Isa. 11: 1-10. T.—Isa. 26: 1-10. W.—Isa. 37: 14-22, 33-38. T.—Isa. 55. F.—Jer. 31: 27-37. S.—Jer. 37: 11-21. S.—Ezek. 36: 25-38.

Lesson I.—The Kingdom of Christ.—Isaiah 11: 1-10. Golden Text:—He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.—Ps. 72: 8.

Central Truth:—Jesus Christ is the promised Messiah and his kingdom will bring peace and salvation to all the earth.

Lesson II.—A Song of Salvation.—Isaiah 26: 1-10. Golden Text:—Trust ye in the Lord forever; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.—Isa. 26: 14.

Central Truth:—God's goodness and justice call for the fullest expressions of gratitude.

Lesson III.—Overcome With Wine.—Isaiah 28: 1-13. Golden Text:—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Prov. 20: 1.

Central Truth:—Intemperance is an overflowing scourge, leading to untold evils.

Lesson IV.—Hezekiah's Prayer and Deliverance.—Isaiah 37: 14-21, 33-38. Golden Text:—The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them.—Ps. 34: 17.

Central Truth:—God is the hearer and answerer of prayer.

Lesson V.—The Suffering Saviour.—Isaiah 53: 1-12. Golden Text:—The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.—Isaiah 53: 6.

Central Truth:—Jesus Christ, by his life, sufferings, and death, has made atonement for the sins of the world.

Lesson VI.—The Gracious Call.—Isaiah 55: 1-13. Golden Text:—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55: 6.

Central Truth:—God invites all men to come to him and be saved.

Lesson VII.—The New Covenant.—Jeremiah 31: 27-37. Golden Text:—I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.—Jer. 31: 34.

Central Truth:—The way of salvation is through a new heart bestowed by Jesus Christ.

Lesson VIII.—Jehoiakim's Wickedness.—Jer. 36: 19-31. Golden Text:—To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.—Heb. 3: 15.

Central Truth:—The word of our God abides forever, against every effort to destroy it or prevent its fulfillment.

Lesson IX.—Jeremiah Persecuted.—Jer. 37: 11-21. Golden Text:—I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee.—Jer. 1: 19.

Central Truth:—They that suffer with Christ shall also reign with him.

Lesson X.—The Downfall of Judah.—Jer. 39: 1-10. Golden Text:—Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—Matt. 23: 38.

Central Truth:—The way of transgressors is hard.

Lesson XI.—Promise of a New Heart.—Ezekiel 36: 25-28. Golden Text:—A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you.—Ezek. 36: 26.

Central Truth:—A new heart and a new life are the need and the hope of the world.

LESSONS FROM THE LAST DAYS OF JUDAH.

Sin is the sure road to ruin.

There is no escaping from the ruin without forsaking the sin.

The end comes slowly to give motive and opportunity for repentance.

God sends messengers to warn and entreat.

He not only warns, but encourages and promises.

When there is no other remedy he cuts down the old tree that a new shoot may grow from its roots.

God's kingdom is sure to come at last. There is a dawn of a new day beyond the darkest night.

Two truths stand out prominently in the portions of Scripture studied this quarter. First, the natural perversity of the human heart. Left to itself it will follow after evil. Secondly, the wonderful forbearance and mercy of God. He will save, if it can be done, the soul from its own folly.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

ASSOCIATE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The minutes of the Associate Reformed Synod of the South show 81 ministers, 121 churches, 9,086 communicants, net gain of 546 last year, 687 teachers, and 6,448 scholars in the Sabbath-schools. Total contributions of the church last year $47,539.17. There are 27 Young People's Societies, with a membership of 831; 67 Women's Missionary Societies, with a membership of 1,654. The synod has a prosperous mission in Mexico, where two foreign ordained ministers and their wives, two unmarried foreign female missionaries, five male and three female native workers are laboring. There are ten stations, with 232 communicants, 19 Sabbath-school teachers and 178 scholars.

BAPTIST.

—Close communion among American Baptists is said by the Independent to be dying out. That paper regards this result as due in large part to the influence of Mr. Spurgeon's rejection of the doctrine of close communion. The Independent adds: "We do not mean to say that the considerable majority of the great and grand Baptist denomination do not still hold to that practice, in obedience to a shrewd syllogism against whose authority their hearts rebel; nor do we doubt that the pressure of that practice is still driving as many as ever out of the Baptist body; but the wall is breaking down on every side, and Christian fraternity is asserting itself in both theory and practice."

—The Baptist May meetings in Philadelphia promise to be great mass meetings. The lowest estimate of attendance is 25,000 and the largest 125,000.

BRETHREN.

—It is estimated in the Evangelist that 2,000 members have been added to the church within the past three years, and that the probable total membership is 10,000 or 11,000. Unanimity on doctrinal points is as quite satisfactory, and the church is in the enjoyment of peace.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The death of Prof. Lewis French Stearns, D. D., of the Bangor Theological Seminary, removes one of the most gifted of theological scholars and teachers in this country. He was the son of the late Dr. Jonathan F. Stearns, so long the honored pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Newark, N. J., and nephew of Dr. George L. Prentiss, of the Union Theological Seminary. He was the brother-in-law of President Scott, of Rutgers College, whose wife is a younger sister. His life was largely devoted to teaching, as professor of history and belles-lettres in Albion College, Michigan, and since 1880 as professor of systematic theology at Bangor. He was in the pastorate only three years. On the resignation of Dr. Shedd, he was called to the vacant chair in Union Theological Seminary, but declined it. His paper before the Congregational council in London last year on "The Present Direction of Theological Thought in American Congregationalism," was declared the ablest theological paper which was presented to the great International Convention.

—The new Manual of the Union Park church, Dr. Noble's, is out; and from it we gather the following facts: The net gain for the year in membership has been fifty-three, making the total number at the last annual meeting, Dec. 9, 1891, just 1,106. There were thirty-six baptisms administered during the year; eleven children and twenty-five adults baptized on confession of faith. There was a great ingathering in January of the current year; but these additions will go into the next report. The total benevolences of the church were $21,134. Of this sum $2,714 went to foreign missions.

—Dr. Cuyler, Prof. Thwing and Dr. McArthur addressed a meeting at Broadway Tabernacle, New York, Feb. 24, in behalf of the formation in churches of total abstinence societies.

—B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, is to begin work in Portland, Ore., on March 12th.

EPISCOPALIAN.

—The Living Church has a report of the Eastern Convocation of the Episcopal church in Massachusetts. It says: "The liturgical paper by Rev. W. Williams upon the subject: 'The Forms of the Administration of Baptism,' denied infant baptism as a custom coincident with the early days of Christianity, and spoke of immersion as the rule and custom of the church, thereby indorsing the views of the late Dean Stanley in the Nineteenth Century."

FRIENDS.

—The Friends are said to number about 100,000 in England and America. Their largest mission work is in Madagascar, where they began work in 1868, and now have eighteen missionaries, fourteen native pastors, 370 other native assistants, and 230 societies with 4,000 members.

LUTHERANS.

—The First Swedish Lutheran church of Rock Island, Ill., has a membership of 3,077.

—The extraordinary growth of the Lutheran church in this country is said to be a surprise to the census authorities. Its reported membership is now 1,200,000, and its members are found in every State and Territory of the United States. So this church has really attained national proportions, and its determination to nationalize its character is a strong movement.

—Pastor Ewald's Swedish church, in Chicago, numbers 1,800 members, with 1,000 Sunday-school children.

—There are 474 Lutheran parishes in Russia, some of which are as large as whole American States. The pastor of Irkutsk in Siberia lately traveled 600 miles over dangerous roads in order to visit 99 Lutherans. The 49 churches in Caucasia, a province as large as Ohio, have only one pastor!

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The Quadrennial General Conference of the Methodist church will convene in Omaha, May 1, 1892. Five hundred delegates will be present from all quarters of the earth. The conference will continue in session one month.

—The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal church has, during a little more than a quarter of a century, aided in the erection of eight thousand churches, nearly one-third of the whole number of churches in the denomination.

—The Japan Mission of the Methodist Episcopal church was commenced in 1872, and reported in 1890 23 foreign male missionaries, 41 female missionaries, of whom 19 are wives of missionaries, 2,815 members, and 718 probationers. In all of the Japan Protestant missions the first of this year there were reported 175 married and 39 unmarried male missionaries, 189 unmarried female missionaries, and 32,380 members.

—A remarkable revival has been in progress for three weeks in Delaware, Ohio. Five Methodist and one Presbyterian churches have joined in the work. Over 500 conversions are reported. Sanctification was accepted by scores, and great enthusiasm was aroused in the great number of ministers who met there weekly.

—The sales and profits of the Methodist Book Concerns, East and West, for the past year were very large. A dividend of $125,000 has been declared for the support of superannuated ministers and of the widows and children of dead ministers. This sum will be divided among the annual conferences.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—Biddle University, at Charlotte, N. C., is the only school of its grade, under the auspices of the Presbyterian church, south of the Mason and Dixon line. It is situated in the midst of an impoverished and aspiring people, eager for the advantages of a Christian education. It has now 54 candidates for the ministry.

—Pres. W. C. Roberts, of Lake Forest University, has accepted a call to be senior secretary of the Presbyterian board of home missions.

—Rev. Dr. G. F. Purves, of Pittsburgh, has been called to the chair of New Testament Literature in Princeton Seminary.

—Dr. Simon J. McPherson, of Chicago, has recently announced some startling facts. One of them is that the Presbyterian Social Union spends more money for its monthly banquets than it does for city mission work. Another is that if all the churches and chapels of all the Protestant denominations in Chicago were crowded to the doors they would not hold one-fourth of the population of the city.

UNITED BRETHREN.

—The United Brethren year book for 1892 is filled as usual with denominational statistics, together with a complete Ministerial Directory, date of conference meetings, etc. The following are the statistics for 1891: Conferences 48; organized churches 4,103, being a decrease of 100; itinerant preachers 1,476; local preachers 484; members at the end of the year 199,265, being a gain of 2,142; Sunday-schools 3,429; scholars and officers 247,824; conversions in Sunday-school 8,913; amount raised for preachers' salary, $520,780; church expenses, $376,529; total collected for missions $68,026.02, an increase of $14,985.39; for church erection fund, $6,098; Sunday-school general fund and children's collections, $3,609; educational beneficiary fund $1,554; colleges, academies and U. B. Seminary $53,826.15; total amount raised for all purposes $1,114,035.15, an increase over last year of $141,738.72; number of church houses 2,753, valued at $4,146,994; number of parsonages, 518, valued at $443,674. The necrological report shows the death of 23 ministers.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The new buildings of Tarkio College, Tarkio, Mo., will be on a more beautiful site than the old one—in a campus of twenty acres, extending over the prairie hills, but within easy reach of the village. The new location, writes one, seems designed by nature for this very purpose. The proposition of the Hon. David Rankin to give $20,000 if the citizens of Tarkio would also raise $20,000, was accepted, and the money has been raised, twelve thousand of it within twenty-four hours.

—For a long time the Sabbath-schools have contributed to church extension, but it is only five or six years since the plan of building Sabbath-school memorial churches was adopted. The following are the memorial churches and the amount given by the schools for each: Second San Francisco, $2,401.85; Colfax, Wash. $2,121.11; Horton, Kan., $3,181.75; Colorado Springs $2,131.51; Pueblo, Col., $4,748.49; a total gift of $14,584.71; that is a good record.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

William Henry Bradley, the venerable Clerk of the United States Circuit and District Courts, fell dead while taking a bath in the Athenaeum Building.

Dr. Henry M. Scudder, Jr., who is confined at the detention hospital on suspicion of insanity, and who is also charged with murdering his mother-in-law, had his examination deferred a week.

The Drainage Board adopted the route for the channel, which was proposed and advocated by Chief Engineer Williams.

The body of Dr. Robert G. Mitter, who has been missing since Christmas, was found in the river at the Twelfth Street bridge.

A number of new electric lines will be built by the Chicago City Railway Company.

W. J. Carpenter was chosen President of the Chicago and Illinois road.

COUNTRY.

At Quincy, Ill., Edith Bolinger, 17 years old, was adjudged insane. Several weeks ago, in the absence of her parents, a number of friends went to her home for the purpose of giving a masquerade surprise party. The sight of masked persons frightened the girl so as to throw her into brain fever, which left her devoid of reason.

One thousand four hundred and forty sparrows were killed in Morgan county, Ill., during the time the statute was in force.

R. C. Thompson was given a verdict of $1,100 in the United States Circuit Court at Madison, Wis., against the Northern Pacific railroad company. Thompson was assaulted by a conductor and brakeman at Superior.

At Omaha, Neb., ex-Councilmen Morearty and Madsen, and Councilman Madsen and Street Commissioner Flanagan were arraigned in the District Court charged with soliciting and accepting bribes.

Secretary Blaine has given official notice of a definite agreement for the establishment of a commercial reciprocity treaty between France and the United States.

Des Moines, Ia., contains over 200 places where liquor can be bought, it is said.

At Springfield, Ill., Monday in the case against J. M. B. Kehler and Milton Knight, of St. Louis, for alleged violation of the inter-state commerce law, Judge Allen decided that Congress had no power to make any law regulating railway rates between points in the United States and points in foreign countries.

Hiram Lee, of Fairmount, Ill., died of starvation. The rapid accumulation of wealth unbalanced his mind.

Ten seal hunters are said to have been frozen to death Saturday off the Newfoundland coast. Three others are missing.

John Anderson, a Dane under arrest at Cleveland, is said to have over thirty wives.

Monday the United States Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois in the cases of Samuel Fielden and Michael Schwab, the Chicago anarchists.

Binding twine has been advanced in price from three to four cents a pound, it is said.

Matthew Bland Harrison, World's Fair Commissioner for Minnesota, died at his home in Duluth Monday, aged 26 years.

President Greenhut, of the whisky trust, was arrested at Joliet, Ill., Monday, on the indictment found against him at Boston, and released on bail.

Congressman Springer, of Illinois, is confined to his home by a complication of diseases, including acute erysipelas.

The ceremonies attending the dedication of the Columbian Exposition buildings, Oct. 11, 12, and 13, 1892, are to be very elaborate and impressive. The committee having the matter in hand will devote $300,000 to that purpose. It is expected that the President of the United States and his cabinet, many of the Senators and Congressmen and Governors of the States, numerous representatives of foreign governments, and 10,000 militia and several thousand regulars will be present.

Charles F. Blackmeir died of leprosy at San Francisco, Monday. His body could hardly be held together.

Three shocks of earthquake were felt at The Dalles, Oregon, Monday.

Eleven gambling houses were closed at Milwaukee, Monday.

At St. Paul, Tuesday, articles of incorporation were filed by eleven iron mining companies, having a total capital of $21,500,000.

The Supreme Court of Ohio rendered a decision in quo warranto proceedings against the Standard Oil Company, prohibiting it from fulfilling trust agreements.

At Milwaukee Tuesday afternoon the Watertown local, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, ran into the rear end of a train loaded with employes of the road, killing seven men. A switchman forgot to close the switch.

At a special meeting of the Chicago Junction railway and the Union Stock Yards company at Jersey City Tuesday, an agreement with Messrs. Armour, Swift, Morris, and other packers was ratified which practically establishes a trust.

Judge Shipman, of New York, Tuesday, upheld the patent of Charles F. Brush, obtained in 1879, and granted a perpetual injunction against the United States Electric Lighting company.

Iowa Masons will build a $65,000 temple at Cedar Rapids.

Archbishop Ireland, who was recently summoned to Rome by the Pope, will be appointed cardinal prefect, it is said.

Gold has been discovered in the Humburg district in Arizona, the ore of which, it is said, runs from $600 to $800 a ton.

At Indianapolis Tuesday night, the State Woman's Prison and Reform School for Girls was burned.

William Boone, of Hudson, Mich., celebrated his 100th birthday Tuesday. He claims to have seen George Washington at Philadelphia in 1797.

At Monroe, Mich., Tuesday, damage suits aggregating $170,000 were begun against the Flint and Pere Marquette and the Lake Shore road on account of the rear-end collision near the Toledo tunnel Nov. 28.

Storms in the region about New York, Tuesday, wrought damage to shipping and to property along the beach at summer resorts and prostrated telegraph wires. At Atlantic Highlands, N. J., the tide was the highest ever known. At Lancaster, Pa., a snow of worms was reported.

The Rev. D. M. Van Horn, aged 55, was arrested at Athens, Ohio, Wednesday, charged with forging promissory notes.

Charles Kepple, aged 11 years, hanged himself at Freeport, Pa., because his father reproved him.

Father James Cregan, of New York, was arrested Wednesday, for obtaining money under false pretenses.

John L. Woods, of Cleveland, Wednesday, gave the Western Reserve University $50,000.

Graduates of the University of Illinois will no longer be required to take part in commencement exercises.

Three more cases of typhus fever were reported Wednesday at New York.

It is estimated that fully forty of the sealers who were driven off Newfoundland coast Saturday, have perished.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Feb. 20 to March 5:

Y M C A New York, J Lamb, W Knight, R A Hayes, B Gaddis, A M Paull, S Wardner, E Whipple, J B Coffrin, Rev W H Turkington, Mrs D Church, S Bingham, W P Clark, O A Chillson, T Hudson, M L Miller, W B Margerum, Rev J K Glassford, S Shuh, C Reynolds, R A Cullor, W H Stevenson, G Bullard, J Gray, W A Kindel, Mrs R. Dunlap, I K Morris, J G Berg, G Durfee, D F Campbell, N P Eddy.

NEW EDITION.

The Carradine Sermon; Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

Over 10,000 printed within a year. Every one reads it. Especially good for distribution among church members and the better class of citizens.

During this month the N. C. A. issues its second edition. To encourage a wholesale circulation, it offers them postpaid in lots of 50 for one dollar, or less than wholesale prices. It is a 20 page pamphlet with neat cover. If on receipt of pamphlets you are not satisfied, return them and get your money.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Table with market prices for various commodities like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Beans, Eggs, etc. in Chicago.

NEW YORK.

Table with market prices for various commodities like Wheat, Corn, Oats, Eggs, Butter, Wool in New York.

KANSAS CITY.

Table with market prices for Cattle, Hogs, Sheep in Kansas City.

DROPSY TREATED FREE. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousands cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp. LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING, 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN? ME yet! Better write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. I. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arra of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20 Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20 The Royal Invitation. 20 Loyal Responses. 20 Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarters, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John Mc Neil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant.....2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00 Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons, 50 Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection 50 Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50 Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00 An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Bear's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods. Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed. Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hesba Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.16 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hesba Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80 Cassidy. King's Servant. Lost Glop. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N., 231 W. Madison St. Chicago.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DIPHTHERIA.

Diphtheria is one of the most deadly and contagious diseases known. Cases are cited where it has been communicated by airing contaminated clothing many months after the death of the person to whom the clothing belonged. Dogs and cats are said to carry the germs of this disease from house to house in their fur. Like fur, woolen clothing is a good vehicle for the carrying of the poison, and it is probable that the disease is oftenest conveyed in this way. As it is a disease which for the most part attacks children, the safest way for those who have families of children would seem to be to keep as far away from infected houses as possible. Many people suppose that after nine days have passed from the date of exposure without serious consequences all danger is over. This popular notion, without doubt, is largely responsible for a carelessness which tends greatly to the spread of the disease, for good physicians recognize that it often appears as late as three weeks from the date of exposure, and sometimes even at a more remote time.

KILLING GERMS WITH CINNAMON.

After prolonged research and experiment in Pasteur's laboratory, M. Chamberlain is reported to have come to the conclusion that no living germ of disease can resist the antiseptic power of essence of cinnamon for more than a few hours. It destroys microbes as effectively if not as rapidly as corrosive sublimate. Even the scent of it is fatal, and M. Chamberlain holds that a decoction of cinnamon ought to be taken freely by persons living in places affected by typhoid or cholera. There is nothing new in this. In the oldest known medical prescriptions for infectious diseases cinnamon was a prominent ingredient, and it was in great request during the plague of London. There is no reason for doubting that the physicians of those early days were as familiar with its medical properties as with its odor.—New York Post.

OVERCOMING STOVE GAS.

Of the most recent novelties one is a house stove introduced in England. The grate is swung on trunnions, and can be reversed. After fresh coal has been added at the top, the reversal is made, and the green coal is thus brought to the bottom in an easy manner, to answer the purpose in question, namely, the gases from the coal, passing upwards by means of this arrangement through the red portion of the fire, previously at the bottom, are almost consumed before reaching the chimney.

NAMES FOR THE GRIP.

In the Congregationalist a physician writes interestingly about the grip. In Jackson's day his opponents called the disease "Jackson's itch," and Tyler's opponent called it the "Tyler grippe." The Russians call it the Chinese catarrh, the Germans often call it the Russian pest, the Italians call it the German disease, the French call it the Italian fever and the Spanish catarrh. The Italians invented the term influenza in the seventeenth century and attributed the disease to the influence of certain planets.

REMEMBER:

A brisk walk in the open air is good for headache, also a light and very wholesome diet is very beneficial.

Don't forget to expand the lungs more or less every day. Take long and deep inspirations and it will help against taking on disease.

Fevers are often induced by exhaustion, and may be relieved by restoring normal conditions to the body and taking plenty of rest.

Loss of appetite is one of nature's ways of saying "don't feed me any more till I can take care of the surplus food that has been forced upon me."

Time taken for needed rest is not wasted. Stretch out on the bed, close the eyes and lie still, and the tired nerves and muscles will rest, even if there is no sleep.

Miss Lettie Huntley,

Is the sister of Mr. W. S. Huntley, of Cortland, N. Y., a well known carpenter and builder. Her frank statement below gives only the absolute truth concerning her illness and marvelous recovery by the aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She says:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sir: Twelve years ago I began to have hemorrhages and four years ago became so low that the physicians told me

There Was No Hope

and I should soon die. I could not be moved from my bed. Under my face were napkins continually reddened with blood from my mouth. I could eat nothing and had no action of the bowels for a week. The doctors said the cause was ulcers in the stomach. At this time my mother said she wanted to make one more trial, and asked if I would take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I told her it would be

A Waste of Money

but finding it would comfort her, I began taking it. In a few days the bloating began to subside, I seemed to feel a little stronger, but thought it only fancy. I was so weak I could only take ten drops of Sarsaparilla at first. In two weeks I was able to sit up a few minutes every day. In a month I could walk across the room. One day I asked what they were to have for dinner, and said I wanted something hearty. My mother was so happy she cried. It was the

First Time I had Felt Hungry for Two Years

I kept on with Hood's Sarsaparilla and in six months was as well as ever in my life. It is now four years since I recovered, and I have not had a day's sickness since, nor any hemorrhage. If ever a human being thanked the good Lord on bended knees it was I. I know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, and that alone, unquestionably saved my life."

Messrs. Sawyer & Jennings, the well known druggists of Cortland, say that Miss Huntley "is a highly respected lady; her statement of what

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has done for her is worthy the highest confidence." Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills.

The early part of the night is the best time for sleep. One hour before midnight is said to be worth two after that time, as it is nature's time for rapid recuperation.

Much sickness would be avoided if houses were better ventilated. Hot stoves and lamps burn up oxygen rapidly. Fresh air must be supplied from out-doors and the bad air carried off.—St. Louis Vanguard.

WATER PURIFIED BY ELECTRICITY.

The Webster method of purifying waste water by means of electricity has been tested by Dr. Fermi in the Hygienic Institute, at Munich, Germany. During the course of the experiments it was found that the water became purified in about fifteen minutes, the organic substances being reduced by about one-half, and the suspended substances being precipitated to the bottom. The smell of the water was perceptibly improved. While the results of the test show that electricity does not at the present time realize the ideal of water purification, it has two great advantages; first, that very little iron is precipitated and its removal is not so difficult as in the case of purification by chemical means, and second, the dissolved organic substances, which are not precipitated by any of the known chemical methods hitherto employed, are at least partially removed by the electric current.

Why suffer with asthma when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure you? Costs but 25 cents.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3.

No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1.

A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacher, Martin Luther John Knox, and a host of others.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D.

This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 3vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50.

This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony.

This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 324 pages, cloth, $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPOTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A new pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

DOINGS AT THE EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

A trial of silage made from apple pomace as food for pigs resulted unsatisfactorily at the Illinois station. The pomace kept well, and chemical analysis of it showed an apparently good composition for feeding purposes, but the pigs ate very little of it.

At the Georgia station nitrogen was found to be the most effective element in fertilizers on oats; cotton-seed meal was the only substance that paid a good profit. The Fultz made the largest yield of any wheat grown, though the Walker, which is a week earlier, is considered the most trustworthy, one year with another.

At the Illinois station two trials were made, in each of which two pigs were fed soaked corn and two others dry corn, with no other feed. The pigs fed soaked corn ate more and gained more than those fed dry corn. In one trial they gained more and in one less in proportion to food eaten than those fed dry corn. The differences were not great in either case.

The first of a series of experiments with rye grown for green forage in the winter has been reported from the Florida station. The rye was planted broadcast and in drills on three plots on poor, sandy soil, fertilized with manure and commercial fertilizers. On one plot the crop was cut for fodder and on another seven cattle and two colts were pastured. A considerable amount of green forage was easily and cheaply produced during the winter and early spring.

THE AMERICAN HEN.

The time has come when the importance of the poultry interests should be recognized in this department.

The poultry products of the United States had a farm value of at least $200,000,000 last year, and no less than 16,000,000 dozen eggs were imported at a first cost of fifteen cents per dozen, or nearly $2,000,000, while the average annual value of such importations during the past four years has been $2,216,326.

Such facts emphasize the necessity for encouraging the increase of domestic fowls of all kinds, and they further indicate beyond question that this industry is important enough to demand the special consideration of this department.—Secretary Rusk.

CARE OF CALVING COWS.

A great deal of trouble is experienced with cows when calving because of sheer carelessness. This is a process of nature, and there should be no trouble; but if we antagonize nature in other directions, we cripple her all around. Many a cow has no special attention paid to her either while she is carrying her calf, or at calving time. She is permitted to get along the best way she can; and not unfrequently the system is in such a weakened condition that to expect her to calve with safety is foolish.

But she should not be killed with kindness. She should not be fattened, for instance. She should simply be kept in good condition, and every one's judgment will suggest what that is. Milk secretion should not be greatly encouraged before calving.

The animal's food should consist principally of the bone and muscle-forming varieties. And after calving great care should be taken that she does not get cold, and her food for a few days should be of a non-stimulating character. The system for a time needs opportunity to recuperate, and until it has had a chance to do that no additional strain should be put upon it; for a time the machinery should be run at a low speed.—Farming World.

POULTRY POINTS.

In fowl-culture, nothing can take the place of a "keen eye" and a "quick mind" to see that "all is well."

Gather your eggs as soon after laying as may be. They are liable to be broken in the nests and eaten by the hens, thus laying the foundation of a very bad habit.

The farmer must breed white fowls. They are just as good in every respect as dark ones, and better in this feature, viz.:

SCROFULA

eczema, tetter, boils, ulcers, sores, rheumatism, and catarrh, cured by taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It purifies, vitalizes, invigorates, and enriches the blood.

Has Cured Others will cure you.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

their appearance upon the meat stand in market is fine and clean, their pin feathers being white, are not noticed, whereas every dark pin feather is sure to stand out in bold and ugly relief.

Book-keeping is just as necessary in poultry-keeping as in ordinary mercantile business. Debit the hens with all food, buildings and general labor in their behalf, and credit them with all eggs, poultry, and stock sold. Then, at the end of the year, or in fact any time, your financial standing will be readily discovered.

Absorbents are of great value to the poultry house. Dry loam, muck, coal ashes, etc., are splendid for "taking in" not only moisture and dampness, but also the various noxious gases, such as ammonia and carbonic acid gas, which are always present in greater or lesser quantities. A pure, dry atmosphere is essential to health.

Perhaps your flock of poultry needs new, fresh blood for its invigoration. If so the sooner the matter is attended to the better. A good male bird has considerable value, and therefore it is folly to expect to obtain such, save by the payment of a good price. A real good fowl is cheaper at $5.00 than a poor one is at seventy-five cents or $1.00.

Bulk is a great desideratum in grain fed to poultry. This is obtained by mixing bran with cornmeal, and feeding oats rather than much corn. Cornmeal alone is far too heavy. The digestive organs cannot extract all the nutriment contained in such solid substances. Mix the same, however, with light bran and the case is entirely different.

There is nothing like keeping fowls busy. Idle hens as truly as idle boys are sure to "get into mischief," which in the case of the hens consists very often in the acquisition of that very annoying and troublesome habit "egg eating." Keep the hens scratching most of the time, thereby giving them something to do and promoting their general health and prolificness.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

You can't make a new arm with Salvation Oil, but you can cure the bruises with it. 25 cts.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book reprinted. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times;" and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 1 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Governor Boyd, Wednesday, removed Director General Greer, of the Nebraska World's Fair Commission, and appointed Joseph R. Garneau, of Omaha, to fill the vacancy.

During the four months ended March 1 the packing-houses of the West packed 7,750,000 hogs against 8,173,000 for the corresponding period last year.

The Rev. Harrison Thompson, aged 72 years, of Lebanon, Ill., committed suicide Wednesday, by jumping into a cistern. He was deranged by grip.

Dr. Nathaniel Ware Hawes, of Boston, is said to be under indictment charged with tampering with the United States Grand Jury and endeavoring to prevent the indictment of whisky trust officers.

Wednesday the New Jersey Senate passed a bill appropriating $1,000 toward the National monument to be erected at the World's Fair in commemoration of the emancipation of slaves.

The Rev. Edgar Pinkerton, a missionary from Cincinnati, died at Bahai, Brazil, Thursday, of yellow fever.

Dr Ira Remsen, professor of chemistry in Johns Hopkins University, has been offered a position in the faculty of Chicago University.

Governor Boyd, Thursday, removed Sam Brass, of the Nebraska World's Fair Commission, and appointed M. F. Weiss, of Hebron, to fill the vacancy.

Duluth, Minn., offers a substantial bonus to any one who will erect a factory for smelting iron ore in that city.

Thursday J. W. Collins, president of the California National Bank at San Diego, committed suicide by shooting.

Michigan railroads earned $96,472,-329.60 from Jan. 1, 1891, to Jan. 1, 1892. They earned $93,075,802.67 during the same period in '90-91.

At the annual Methodist conference of the Kansas district at Kansas City, Mo., Thursday, the Catholic church was attacked for meddling with public affairs.

Mrs. Justina Heinzman, of Bay City, Mich., was taken to an asylum Thursday, having been made insane by the news that she had been granted a pension.

It is reported from Ottawa that the difficulties between Canada and Newfoundland are in a fair way of adjustment.

The Iowa State Republican Convention will be held at Des Moines March 17.

Mary Galvin, of Duquesne, Pa., followed her husband into a neighbor's house Wednesday night, and threw a bucket of lye in his face. Galvin will die. Mrs. Galvin was jealous. Two children were also fatally burned by portions of the lye.

Emil Barthel, a section foreman, has been found responsible by the coroner's jury for the collision at Milwaukee, Wis., Tuesday. He left a switch open.

Wednesday night the Coldwater (Mich.) National Bank was robbed, about $20,000 in cash being taken; also a private deposit of $40,000 Philadelphia and Reading deferred bonds. One thousand dollars reward is offered for the arrest of the robbers.

Articles of incorporation of the Chicago, Lake Geneva and Northwestern railroad, with a capital of $2,000,000, were filed at Madison, Wis.

Noah Porter, ex-President of Yale College, died at New Haven, Conn., Friday, aged 81 years.

Friday the Baltimore Methodist conference voted against admitting women as delegates.

Mrs. George Bansworth, Dubuque, Iowa, died Friday, having eaten biscuits raised with arsenic instead of baking powder.

Postmaster General Wanamaker is investigating a system of locating and numbering country houses with a view to extending the free delivery of mail.

Friday the Nebraska Prohibition Convention at Lincoln adopted a platform declaring for government ownership of railways, telephones, and telegraph systems and woman suffrage.

Gold ore which assayed $30 a ton is said to have been found at the foot of Spanish Peaks, near La Junta, Cal. The vein is eight miles in length.

Five men were fatally burned by an explosion of fire-damp in a mine near Mahanoy City, Pa., Friday.

FOREIGN.

Two dynamite bombs were exploded in the entrance of the princess Sagan's residence on the Foubert St. Germain, Paris, Monday. No one was hurt.

Parnell's estate at Avondale is to be sold at auction.

Thirteen men were injured by the fall of a scaffold in Liverpool Tuesday, eight fatally.

The free distribution of bread at the Volkspreste office to the poor of Vienna, Tuesday, ended in a riot because there were not loaves enough to go around.

Rioting is reported in Tripoli, the result of the issue of a firman by the Sultan making natives liable to conscription.

Immigration has been prohibited by the government of Queensland, Australia.

Charles Foster, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, arrived in London Wednesday.

Mr. Ross, claim settler of the National Marine Insurance Company, has been appointed British arbiter in the Behring Sea case.

A mob of hungry men, chiefly of the criminal class, raided the butcher shops and bakeries of Dantzic, in West Prussia, Friday. The police finally dispersed the rioters.

An attempt was made by anarchists to blow up the gendarmerie at Saint Ouen-sur-Seine in France with dynamite bombs Friday morning, but rain extinguished the fuses.

The French commercial expedition under the command of M. Muzon has failed to reach Lake Tchad, and is now returning to the Congo.

Whitelaw Reid, the United States Minister to France, and M. Jules Roche, Minister of Commerce, have arrived at a definite agreement for the establishment of a commercial treaty between France and the United States.

Twenty thousand people in Northern Hungary are reported to be starving, the government refusing them aid because they are of the Slav race.

It is reported that thousands of people are out of work in Vienna, Austria, and are starving. As a result of the McKinley law, 12,000 pearl workers are thrown out of employment.

It is rumored that a bargain has been made between the Roman Catholic church and the Conservative government at Ottawa, Canada, by which the church has pledged itself to give Conservatives the entire Catholic vote.

Threatening letters have been received by the King of Greece in consequence of his dismissal of the Delyannis Ministry.

The price of coal continues to advance in England.

Numbers of Portuguese fishermen were drowned during a recent storm, most of the victims being married men.

M. Loubet, the new Prime Minister of France, accompanied by his Ministry, made his appearance in the Chamber of Deputies Thursday, and announced his policy.

From Friend to Friend

Goes the story of what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done and is doing, and this continual report of never-ending success constitutes by far the most valuable advertising in behalf of this popular medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla demonstrates its

Peculiar Merit

in the scrofulous and impure blood made rich and pure, in the relief it gives from the itching and burning of salt rheum, in the satisfaction at meals experienced by the former dyspeptic, in the happiness of those cured of malaria and catarrh, in the buoyancy of spirits and the good appetite enjoyed by those recently

Weak, Tired and Run Down.

It is by such results as these that Hood's Sarsaparilla makes its hosts of friends. Is not its record of cures and the good it has done others sufficient to warrant your giving this excellent medicine a fair trial?

It Supplies Needed Strength.

"I have found Hood's Sarsaparilla supplies the elements that we need for strengthening and building up, so each spring myself, wife, and children all take it for a couple of months, and it is rare that we need any medicine the balance of the year. My wife considers it the best thing on earth to build her up after severe illness." - R. H. FINDLEY, West Peabody, Mass.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.
SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicag

FREE

provided you exhibit it to your friends and use your influence in securing us future orders. Cut this out and return it to us with your photograph, with your name and address back of photos, so we can ship your portrait accordingly. CODY & CO., 755 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

REFERENCES, all Banks and Mercantile Agencies in New York City or Brooklyn.

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small idea of Chicago, the idea of Chicago, the World's Fair Buildings, and the millions of dollars being invested in manufacturing enterprises. There are prizes at Harvey. Therefore we offer to pay your actual railroad fare to Chicago and return to the amount of not exceeding 2½ per cent of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. Illustrated Plans and Circulars free to all.

HARVEY

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

PIANOS

ORGANS AND MUSICAL GOODS of all kinds at Wholesale. Send for catalogue and price list free on application. THOMPSON MUSIC CO., 259 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicag

For 30 days, in order to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS in your vicinity, and thus create a demand for our work, we make you the following bonafide offer: Send us a good photograph, or a tintype, or a daguerreotype of yourself, or any member of your family, living or dead, and we will make you one of our finest CRAYON PORTRAITS free of charge. Use your influence in securing us future orders. Cut this out and return it to us with your photograph, with your name and address back of photos, so we can ship your portrait accordingly. CODY & CO., 755 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING.'—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 27.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,142.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	The Pennsylvania Convention; From the New England Agent; Bro. Fenton in Nebraska and Colorado; Progress of Anti-secrecy in Nebraska; Progress of the Work in Iowa; Rev. H. H. Hinman in Wisconsin.....5,6
"Nobles of the Mystic Shrine"..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
A Warning From Joseph Cook..... 8	Question and Answer; Berea College, Kentucky; Wayside Notes.....5,6
The Lodge Demon in the Home..... 8	LODGE NOTES..... 7
Colored Masons in the South..... 9	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	THE N. C. A..... 7
Ruled Out of Order. Signs, Grips, Passwords and Oath of the Farmers' Alliance..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
Orangeism—Again..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Unity Through Separation..... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
SELECTED:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Anti-Secrecy in Canada..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
Methodists Speak..... 3	MARKETS..... 13
Neal Dow..... 3	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
LITERATURE..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7

By a unanimous vote of the Faculty of the Chicago (Union Park Congregational) Theological Seminary, Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard is to address the students (about 200) on the subject of secret societies, in the seminary chapel, between 5 and 6 o'clock P. M., on Friday, March 18. This will be an important event in the history of the anti-secret reform.

The visit of Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. C. Paden, of Schaller, Iowa, to Sac City, in that State, recently, in the capacity of lecturers opposing the secret lodges, as set forth in our correspondent's letter in another column, was an event that promises to do good by stirring up the minds of the people on this important subject. The influence of the addresses delivered was such as to cause a deep impression upon the community, and while the truth was welcomed by many, it aroused the antagonism of the lodge adherents to a degree that resulted in their sending for Rev. F. W. Evans, a strong advocate for the Masons and Odd-fellows, to come to Sac City on the 22d, 23d, and 24th instant and lecture in their behalf, to neutralize the growing opposition to the lodges. Pres. Blanchard speaks very favorably of the labors of Rev. Mr. Paden in the reform work.

The Free Methodist prints a very fair summary of the proceedings of the New York State Anti-secrecy Convention at Binghamton, last month, and adds: "We believe great good was done by this gathering of Christian people to confer together as to how to tear down this modern Moloch, organized secrecy, which swallows up the spirituality of all who enter its embrace." The Free Methodist element in the convention was represented by a strong delegation of ministers of that denomination, which is in very close harmony with the work of the N. C. A. Why cannot other churches have the same light and walk therein?

Teed, the Koreshan prophet of the Church Triumphant, or some similar religio-financial office, met with a severe set-back when he attempted to control the Economites, and is now reported to be seeking a combination with the Shaker Society at Mt. Lebanon, Columbia county, New York. The Shakers, however, are suspicious of his movements, and his advances are not warmly received. The opinion of Elder Frederick W. Evans, governor of another Shaker community, is thus given in the daily press: "The opinion I formed of Dr. Teed was that he is a schemer. From his propositions to our society, I was led to the conclusion that Dr. Teed desired to amalgamate the societies, with himself at the head. Besides, his plans are too visionary." It is likewise stated that the Shakers have received an intimation that Dr. Teed, after moving his San Francisco society to Chicago, will send two men and two women to Mount Lebanon, presumably to become members, but really to proselyte in his favor. They do well to doubt his integrity.

Complaints are frequently made by subscribers to the Cynosure that in publishing the crimes committed by Freemasons the names of the guilty parties and their victims are withheld by the editor. The reason must be obvious to every thoughtful mind. It is no part of the Cynosure's duty to subject interested but innocent parties connected with these criminal offenses to persecution and violent death for making known the truth. We are not warring with individuals, but with the evils of the secret systems to which they belong; and while we would rejoice to see the guilty ones brought to sincere repentance, and saved, we would like, also, to see the implacable offenders brought to merited punishment. If Freemasons are accused of heinous crimes and misdemeanors in these columns, our readers may rest assured that the evidences of their guilt, and the names of the guilty, are in the possession of the N. C. A., together with the addresses of our informants, upon whose statements we have no reason to cast a doubt.

Elsewhere in this issue we print the Official Call for the Pennsylvania Anti-secret State Convention at Pittsburgh, March 21 and 22, with a most encouraging letter concerning it from the Washington agent, and on this page the authorized program of the proceedings during the two days' sessions. A letter from Rev. Nathan Callender, President of the Pennsylvania State Anti-secret Association, from which issues the official call, makes these timely suggestions: "There is, in my judgment, no issue before the country that more vitally concerns us than the lodge question. It concerns us in every single interest known to us. I do not think the saloon question is paramount to it. We are deeply responsible for its progress and its very existence among us. Nothing can be more important to us, as a free people, than organized work. Our coming convention is to organize us for business, much as an army is organized, both for defense and for work. It deeply concerns all classes, politically, socially and religiously. No man can be a true reformer and ignore the anti-secret question. Let every lover of purity and freedom in Pennsylvania rally to this convention. Nothing but my age and pressing infirmity could keep me away. My prayers shall be for this very important gathering."

RULED OUT OF ORDER.

BY REV. J. P. STODDARD.

I was not present, but am credibly informed that, during the past week, when a candidate for assistant pastor in one of our Boston churches was being examined, the question was asked: "What are your views upon secret societies?" The pastor in the chair immediately ruled the question "out of order," and so it passed. The pastor is a Mason; and when I called on him he declined to give me his views on the subject, or to allow me to distribute Mr. Moody's tracts at the door of his church to a retiring audience. The assistant pastor is not a member in, and has no fellowship with, the secret societies. Is this yoking up a Mason and one who has no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness in pastoral labor according to 2 Cor. 6: 14? I simply ask the question.

FRUITS.

Accepting an invitation to meet a pastor and a few male members of his church on Monday evening, Feb. 29, the subject of secret societies was freely considered. By request I opened the discussion with brief informal remarks, and then, in the old-fashioned Methodist style, each one was called upon for remarks. Of some twenty who spoke, four favored lodges to which they belonged. Four gave clear seceders' testimony against societies of which they had once been members, and the system had not a single apologist among those who had never belonged.

"I have no personal knowledge of secret societies," said one young man, "but, whether good or bad, I have no time to give to them. Since I became a Christian, Christ and his service are my chief delight, and I have neither time nor taste for anything outside of Gospel work." This was the prevailing sentiment among the young men

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CONVENTION,

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will be held in the SECOND UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Sixth Avenue, near Smithfield Street, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, MARCH 21ST and 22D. OPENING SESSION at 2 P. M.

PROGRAMME.

2:00 P. M. Devotional. 2:30. Address of Welcome—Rev. David S. Littell. 3:00. Appointment of Committees. 3:15. Address "The Lodge Opened"—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Boston, Massachusetts.

EVENING SESSION—7:30. Prayer and Scripture Lesson. 7:45. Address—Rev. Wm. Dillon, editor Christian Conservator, Dayton, Ohio. 8:15. Address—President C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College, Illinois.

TUESDAY MORNING—9:30. Devotional. 10:00. Question box and five-minute speeches. 11:00. Reports of Committees on Enrollment, State Work, Finance.

AFTERNOON SESSION—1:30. Prayer. 2:00. Addresses, fifteen minutes each—Rev. J. L. Weaver, Burgettstown, Pa.; Rev. J. Schuh, Allegheny, Pa.; J. M. Moss (attorney at law), Cameron, W. Va., and others. 3:30. Reports of Committees on Resolutions, Correspondence, etc.

LAST SESSION—7:30. Prayer, followed by two addresses, probably Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Boston, and Prof. W. J. Coleman, Beaver Falls, Pa. Subjects announced at convention.

The public are cordially invited to attend any and all sessions. Entertainment will be furnished those from a distance. Churches in sympathy are requested to send delegates. All expecting to attend or desiring further information, should address

W. B. STODDARD, AGT N. C. A., WILKINSBURG, PA.

who spoke, and it showed that a faithful pastor had been instructing them out of God's Word; that the seed had taken root, and that already the fruits appear.

"LET NO MAN TAKE THY CROWN"

finds a ready and determined respondent in the venerable Dea. Leadbetter of Auburndale. Leaning upon his staff, like Jacob of old, he looks without misgivings or clouded vision to the not to him "far away" but near at hand "home of the blest." Bro. Wm. F. Davis, or some other competent person, ought to gather and arrange the events of his long and useful life, to be given as a legacy to those who come after him. The storm was raging without, but within was the tranquil and holy joy and hearty fellowship of a Christian home. The unwelcome "grip" which came unheralded and seized husband, wife and brother, had so far relaxed his grasp as to leave all comfortable and in prospect of speedy recovery when I bade them farewell on Thursday last. He spoke of Bro. Davis' letters and a recent visit as having given him courage and much comfort in time of trial. May the Lord spare our faithful brother and his estimable companion for many years of service and reward in earth before they go hence.

SIGNS, GRIPS, PASSWORDS AND OATH OF THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

[I have come into possession of signs, grips and passwords, etc., of the Alliance lodges. I have tested the grip and passwords, by writing them in a conspicuous place where I knew that they would be seen by some of the lodge members. I tell you, they were soon erased. I also drew a picture of the grip and laid it by the secret words, and that was removed also. I am being assailed by the order, branded as a thief, etc., because they cannot find how I came in possession of these secrets and the obligation of the Alliance, which you have already received from me.]
—The correspondent who sends us this contribution.]

THE CRAZE FOR SECRECY.

The average human being delights in mystery; and nothing pleases him or her so much as the possession of knowledge, even though it be of the most trivial character, which is denied to the bulk of his associates. It is this fact which gives the various secret societies so strong a hold upon the popular mind, and nowadays no organization, no matter what its object, is considered perfect which has not its secret work and rituals, its grips and signs and passwords.

All classes of society are pervaded with this craze for secrecy, the latest candidate for the support of lovers of the mysterious being the Farmers' Alliance, that order being equipped with a full outfit of "signs and wonders" for the mystification of the bucolic mind.

PRELIMINARIES.

Before a member can enter the lodge-room he must go through a set form of procedure. Two barred doors interpose between the awful secrets of the lodge and the outside world. Approaching the first of these the visitor, if he be one of the elect, gives two distinct knocks with his knuckles and pauses, and immediately follows with a single knock. When the doorkeeper throws open the door the member whispers in his ear these words: "Sustain the union." That gets him to the second door, which opens directly into the lodge. The second sentinel receives these whispered words:

"SUSTAIN THE UNIT."

As soon as he is past the barriers the member

SALUTING THE PRESIDENT.

advances to the vice president, clasps his hands over his stomach as if testifying to the fact that he has had a good supper, then unclasps them, and brings the right hand with a sweeping gesture down to his side. Having gone through this performance with all due solemnity the member is then allowed to take his seat. What the penalty is for neglecting to go through with the whole rigmarole is not stated, but nothing less than an instant appeal to the chief executioner could be commensurate with the vast importance of the occasion and the heinous character of the crime.

When a brother wishes to challenge another, to ascertain if he be of the elect, he gives him a grip, which consists of putting the small finger between the third and fourth fingers, and then there is a shake twice and a pause, and then one shake. The dialogue with the grip is:

THE GRIP.

Question: Hello, I ought to know you.

Answer: Why so?

Question: Why, don't you remember?

Answer: Why? Oh, yes—yes.

This part of the program seems to have been taken verbatim from the stereotyped dialogue of the bunco steerer and his hayseed victim, and it was doubtless selected as a part of the ritual because of its familiarity with most farmers.

Before using the grip, however, if an Alliance man falls into conversation with another and wishes to ascertain whether he be a brother, he allows his right hand to stray toward his neck in the region of the collar band, somewhat as though he were in search of a flea. If the auditor be in fact a brother, he is supposed to respond by making a dive with his hand for the back of his own neck in sure-enough flea-hunting fashion. These signs and gesticulations are so entirely frequent and commonplace that the outsider, ignorant of their real meaning, is certain to set them down as merely the insignia of unusual hunger on the part of pulex irritans, or mayhap of a demonstration by cimex lectularius. The importance of having such a code of signals in a community where all are Alliance men cannot be over-estimated, and can be appreciated at a glance by the initiated.

SIGNS OF RECOGNITION.

THERE ARE SEVERAL SIGNS OF DISTRESS

by which the need of assistance may be expressed. Thus, if a brother be in need of help he must cross his hands in front of his body and rest them on his stomach, in about the same attitude and with much the same expression that he would assume after partaking too heartily of cucumbers or unripe apples—in other words, as if he had an attack of the stomach-ache. Between his hands he must always hold some object, a pencil, or a crowbar, or a four-horse wagon. Thus, if he falls into the water and be in danger of drowning and a man be on the other shore who may be a brother, the one in the water must quickly put his hands on his stomach and keep them there until he is rescued. If the proverbial straw be not at hand to hold between his hands, the best thing to do will be to swim ashore and get a stick, or a plank, or any other handy object. Having obtained this, he may then resume his former position in the water and silently appeal by his posture for aid. If the observer be not a brother and does not understand the signs, the Alliance man should make up his mind to drown as gracefully as possible.

IN DISTRESS.

WE HAD ALMOST FORGOTTEN

one portion of the formula. Having obtained the object and clasped it over his stomach with both hands, the person in danger must say, very slowly and deliberately, "Hello! hello!" Then pause a few seconds and remark again in the same calm tone, "Hello!" In reply, if the person appealed to be a brother, he must respond, also slowly, "O. K., O. K.," then pause and again remark "O. K." Having done all this according to order, the process of rendering assistance may be entered upon.

THE IMMENSE VALUE

of such a system of recognition can be appreciated by a man who, for instance, happens to fall into the hands of the Indians and is about to have his skull smashed with a tomahawk and his scalp torn off. It may be necessary for him, in the agitation of the moment, to consult his manual in order to make certain of the exact order of using the various signs, but, of course, the gentle savage will suspend operations until the proper course of procedure can be carried out.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

may be given in other ways. Thus, if it be after dark and the persons whose attention it is desired to attract be at a distance, a lantern may be used. It must be swung in the air twice, and then, after a pause, once again. A cow bell may be rung in the same way, or a revolver or gun fired, always, however, remembering the pause between the first two shots and the third. If this pause be not made the person in need of assistance is no true member of the order, and, of course, no help will be extended to him. The vast importance of care in using these signals is thus seen. Burglars may be in the house, white-caps may be preparing to flog or maltreat, or other danger may threaten, but there will always be time to give these signals with due deliberation and with the proper pauses.

A NIGHT SIGNAL.

THE OATH OF THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

[Copied from the official ritual.]

"I, _____, in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses, do solemnly promise and affirm that I will never reveal any of the secrets of the order to any one not entitled to receive the same.

"I will never, under any circumstances, write, engrave, indite, or print, or in any way make any impression, picture, or design, that would convey any idea of the secret work, signs or passwords of this order.

"I will faithfully support the constitution and laws of the order.

"I will never wrong, or defraud, or deceive, a member; nor will I permit it to be done, if in my power to prevent it. In my intercourse with a member, I will always speak the truth.

"I will not oppose the admission of any one to membership solely on account of a personal matter, nor will I propose any one whom I have reason to believe is an improper person, or who would be an improper member.

"I further solemnly affirm that should I be expelled, or dismissed, from the order, I will faithfully keep this obligation as sacred out of the order as when a member.

"SO HELP ME GOD!"

ORANGEISM—AGAIN.

[The seceding Orangeman who contributed the article on "Orangeism," and the ritual of the Royal Arch degree of that order, to the Cynosure for February 18—which exposure is vouched for by another seceding Orangeman—sends us the following additional proceeding pertaining to the conferrance of that degree:—EDITOR.]

I omitted what I should have mentioned. In the Arch degree, when the candidate is thrown on the floor, the Master strikes on the floor, and says, "Death!" Then, after the gun has been fired, while the Master places his hand on the candidate's heart, the Master of Ceremonies says:

Is there yet life in him?

Master: There is yet life in him.

Master of Ceremonies: Can he be raised?

Master: Yes. The Lion of the tribe of Judah hath prevailed on his behalf. We (or I) will raise him by the grip of the Lion of the tribe of Judah. He is then raised by the grip, which is afterwards explained to him.

You mentioned, editorially, a friend who verified the truthfulness of my exposure of this degree, but who objected that it did not go far enough. I gave it to you in as few words as possible, as it takes one hour to be initiated into the Arch degree. The Master of Ceremonies, or the Worshipful Master (whoever presides), is reading almost constantly while the candidate is being bamboozled, delivering what must sound to a spiritually-minded man like a jargon of unintelligible gibberish, as it is a mixture of Scripture and devilism. THAT SEEDER.

UNITY THROUGH SEPARATION.

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

It is pleasing to find the Christian churches of England in all the large centres of population drawing closer together, establishing local councils for directing political, educational, social and philanthropic work; starting local magazines for the spread of religious literature; and in many other ways fraternizing in efforts to reach the masses of the people. The day of denomination-ism seems to be setting, and a day of wide Christian sympathy and effort to be dawning. Ministerial fraternals abound almost everywhere, a thing which twenty years ago was almost unknown.

The deaths of Mr. Spurgeon, Cardinal Manning, Dr. Donald Frazer, and others, have produced in many places, and fostered in others, a unity of spirit such as few thought to be possible. The Established churches and the Nonconformists have felt the losses to be national, and have unstintingly acknowledged their indebtedness to each other. The passing away of Mr. Spurgeon has called forth universal recognition and sympathy to an extent that was never seen before. In this case, pre-eminently, death, which is regarded as a divider, has been a uniter. Around his grave all sects and all sorts and conditions of men were gathered. If he had been measured by some of the doctrines he had preached, especially in the early years of his ministry, few would have followed him to the grave; but so wide were his sympathies, and so intense and passionate his love for his fellow-men, that the creed vanished like a phantom before the grandeur of his own personality, and the preacher stood forth as the ambassador of God to men. Mr. Spurgeon always held and taught the great central verities of the Christian religion—salvation through Jesus Christ, the incarnate Lamb of God; life through the Holy Spirit, and faith in the Lord Jesus, the Shepherd and Bishop of souls.

Mr. Spurgeon's funeral was the testimony of a nation, not to the might of the sword, nor the brilliancy of the pen, nor the sagacity of the statesman, but to the life of faith in the Son of God. It was a testimony to Christian character, and a child-like love which has rarely been equaled. On the day preceding the funeral, from eleven o'clock in the morning to midnight, an unbroken series of meetings was held in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, each of which was crowded. The afternoon meeting consisted almost exclusively of ministers and students of all denominations. The sight of fully 5,000 men of all phases of Christian thought gathering round the bier of one of their number, was a scene which will not soon be forgotten. Bishops, together with the highest dignitaries of all the churches, have vied in expressing their admiration for his character and his work—a character which has never been sullied, and a work of incalculable magnitude and worth. Never in the history of the nation has there been such a wide-spread sympathy and enthusiastic admiration for a Christ-like life. The death, like the life, will be rich in imperishable influences, which will gather strength as the world grows wiser and better. God is using death as well as life for the educating and perfecting of Christian brotherhood.

Retford, England, Feb., 1892.

ANTI-SECRECY IN CANADA.

Canada is an inviting field to the anti-secret reformer. Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Foresters, Orangemen, etc., are found everywhere, and the Patrons of Industry are "roping in" the farmers. Orangeism prevails, and has for years played a notable part in political matters. Most of the influential citizens, many of the leading church members, and hundreds of ministers of the Gospel belong to one or more orders. Most of those outside of the lodges have never taken the pains to examine their principles and workings, and are content to say, "I see no harm in them." They would change their attitude if they only knew the truth. A remarkable instance of this kind came to our ears recently. A Presbyterian minister, located southwest of this, was asked, a few years ago, what he thought of Masonry. He replied that he knew very little about it, but saw no harm in it. Some time after he attended a Masonic funeral. He noticed that there was no reference to Christ in the first prayer, but thought it was an oversight. Perceiving the same omission in the second prayer, he stepped up to the chaplain and asked: "Have you no intercessor? Do you not pray in the name of Christ?" The chaplain replied: "You have heard it all." Then and there—in the midst of the funeral ceremonies—he administered a scathing rebuke and condemned their Christless order. From that day he began to purge his church of secretists, and, we understand, was so happy as to win from the lodge all who had been led away by it. Light is what is wanted.

Early in the winter Dr. Parsons, of Toronto, read a paper before the Presbyterian council, touching upon this subject, that excited some discussion. He did not take as high a stand in opposition to secret orders as we do, but his utterances fell like a bomb into their camp. The friends of secrecy in the council rallied to their defense; correspondents deluged the papers with communications; society papers flew to arms in defence of their respective orders; lodges passed resolutions condemning Dr. Parsons' representatives; and many pulpits discussed the subject pro and con. The agitation has now died away, but it is to be sincerely hoped that it was not without a good effect.—Associate Presbyterian Magazine, Chesley, Ontario, for March.

METHODISTS SPEAK.

In the Western Christian Advocate of December 10th, 1891, is found a letter from an anti-secret Methodist. And even though the editor of that paper discounted it in the appended note a small per cent, it still has value, and should have gone not only at par, but at a premium, for sober facts.

"AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

"I have just read the article 'An Itinerant Clubbed,' in the Advocate at hand, and want to say to you that, in my judgment, the responsibility of the Methodist Episcopal church for the secret societies of the land is fearful. There is no justification for one of them. As a parody on the religion of Jesus Christ, they are as a swarm of lice on his spiritual body. Their existence argues a failure on the part of their adherents to apprehend the real nature of the kingdom of Christ. The evidence of this, as it has fallen under my observation, is conclusive. I can point to men, for example, who have shown that their secret society has a deeper hold on their moral nature than the blood of the atonement; and for me to say therefore that the moral virus that is thus running in their veins must be purged by that blood or they cannot be saved, is putting the case mildly. I affirm, after forty years of experience in the Christian life, and in which I have been an observer of men and things, that I know nothing of that blood, or what I state is the truth. I have for long years witnessed with the deepest distress that the adherents of secret societies turn their backs on Christ in their ultimate choice between the one and the other. I am speaking of people having the obligation of the Christian name upon them. I have already referred to these societies as a miserable 'parody' on the religion of Jesus Christ. Every one of them plants itself under the shadow of this religion, and in this regard is a devil's trick to win. It is a reflection upon and a supplanter of this religion. As I have often said, the religion of Christ is everything or nothing. If it is everything, there is not the slightest need of one of these parasites, a secret society, to a Christian man or woman, and the conclusion is inevitable that the existence of the swarm argues an ignorance of, and an alienation from, the blood of Christ on the part of their adherents. How illustrative is this of the Scripture, that the heart of man in his natural state is the heart of a leper!

"I have said that the responsibility of the Methodist Episcopal church for these societies is fearful. They are baptized by her from her pulpits, in her sanctuaries, so that in the eyes of the common people there is no difference between them in their holiness, which is a lie, and the missionary societies, for example, which are also baptized from her pulpit as the offspring of the Lord Jesus Christ. Now, shall we have, or are we ever going to have, a reform in which every plant which the Father hath not planted shall be cast out, and Christ shall be all in all? Fraternally yours,

"Mansfield, Ohio."

"GEORGE ANGEL.

The above is an ultra view; but will serve all the better as a caution against excess on the other side. There is great danger of belonging to too many societies. Keep the cause of God first: "Every one in his own order."—Ed. West. Chris. Advocate.

We recently rode on a train with a Methodist preacher and made allusion to non-affiliating members of secret orders. He said not one in fifty of the ministers that have joined the orders act with them. As piety comes up in the Methodist Episcopal church the orders will go down. The religion of Christ cleans the orders out of Methodists as light comes to them as well as other Christians. God has but one set of morals for men of all churches. We hail with gladness every dawn of day and ray of light that comes to bless any church.—Christian Conservator.

NEAL DOW.

Neal Dow, who was born in 1804 at Portland, Me., shows so decidedly his great age that news of his decease at an early date would not be surprising. He lives in the city where he was born. His parents being Quakers he was educated in that faith. In 1839 he was chief engineer of the Portland Fire Department. Twice, in 1851 and 1854, he was mayor of his native city. The Maine liquor law, which was passed in 1851, was drawn by him, and his name is known chiefly as that of its author and the staunch defender of prohibition principles. In 1858 and 1859 Mr. Dow was a member of the Maine legislature. He was in the Union army from December, 1861, to November, 1864. In 1857, 1866 and 1874 he made oratorical temperance progresses in England. He "ran" for the Presidency in 1880, and received more than 10,000 votes. The chief principles of the Maine liquor law were incorporated in an amendment to the Constitution of the State, accepted by a vote of three to one, 1884.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A Jacobite club in Boston.—No license in Medford.—Long pastorates.—The power of the pulpit; is it waning?—Other matters.—The Carney Hospital.

It may surprise some people—it certainly did the writer—to learn that on the anniversary of the execution of Charles I. there were enough zealous and enthusiastic Jacobites in the city of Boston to gather together at one of her hotels and drink a good many toasts in strong Scotch ale to the memory of the royal martyr, and that cross between a scapegrace and an imbecile known as Charles Edward, the Pretender. Their object, however, is not the restoration of the house of Stuart to the British throne, but the purely esoteric one of clearing their memories from the scandal which they consider has been heaped upon them by partisan historians. These men, befuddling their brains with Scotch ale to do honor to a defunct royal line whose infamous record is enough to make even the muse of history blush, should have been born a few centuries earlier. What could be more anomalous, more ridiculously out of touch with our modern life, or our Republican institutions, than a Jacobite club in America?—and of all places, in Boston!

The story that Lieutenant Peary has discovered the descendants of one of the vanished Norse colonies in Greenland, of whom the world had lost all knowledge for six hundred years, lacks confirmation; but if it is true, they may possess traditions which will shed light on the early Norse occupancy of New England, and silence the sneers of skeptics who refuse to believe in Prof. Horsford and his mystical Nurebega. Not a breath of all the great world's doings;—of its changes, its discoveries, its wars and revolutions, can have reached this colony since the time of the Crusades. Think of it! What a find for the antiquarians!

Medford, whose name has gone out to all the ends of the earth on the barrels of rum shipped from her distilleries, is to emerge from her chrysalis and become a city;—it is to be hoped a prohibition city. To this end many of her citizens are earnestly working. The churches of Medford, however, have a serious difficulty to contend with, in the fact that they have accepted "the price of blood" to carry on their charitable and religious work. The Mystic church, for instance, where Gen. Lawrence, the head of the Lawrence distillery, attends, derives a large part of its revenue from his ample donations. Such a church needs some very earnest praying for, unless indeed it has reached that stage where prayer is of no avail. The reports from the town-meetings show a great and most encouraging gain for no-license, but little Dracut, undeterred by the shameful story of her past experience with high license, has again clutched at the $3,000 bribe, and voted in the saloon. There must be a great deal of what the old theologians used to talk so much about—total depravity—in Dracut's town government.

I see that Dr. Edward Robie has just completed a forty years' pastorate over the Congregational church in Greenland, N. H. It is said that no other living New Hampshire clergyman has had so long a pastorate. Those who met him at one of the recent State conventions at Dover, will remember the Doctor's genial face, and the sound Gospel sermon which he preached. I think it will generally be found that where a minister, in these days of short pastorates, develops such qualities, he is remarkable in other respects. "staying" Rev. Edmund Dowse, of Sherburne, a few miles from the writer's home, can boast a still more noteworthy record, for he was born and has lived all his life in the same parish where he lately completed half a century of ministerial service. Soundly orthodox, holding every jot and tittle of the faith delivered unto him from his forefathers, with his kindly smile and well-preserved face and figure, which does not seem to me to have altered any since I heard him preach in my childhood, he looks as if a picture of one of New England's old divines had stepped out of its frame. Many people now look upon the pulpit as playing second fiddle to the press; but I doubt this, even though it may not be the stern censor of morals, the umpire from whom in questions of religion or ethics there was no appeal, which it used to be in olden days. So long as the Lord has chosen "the foolishness of preaching" to be his most effectual instrument, not only for the conversion of sinners, but for their warning and reproof, I believe it will continue to be such to whatever height the power of the ubiquitous, omnivorous press may reach. It is certainly a fact that no newspaper attack on Masonry will begin to rouse up the lodge like a sermon against it from the pulpit; and even when it is not a noted or in any way distinguished clergyman who preaches it, he will wake to find himself as famous the next morning as the combined power of the lodge can make him. The press teems with prohibition articles—well-written, full of unanswerable logic, damning facts and stinging satire, which have no more apparent effect on the saloon monster than pelting a crocodile with roseleaves; but let the pulpits of the land unite in preaching against the licensing of this hoary evil in any form or shape, and the realms of King Alcohol would feel in their most secluded corner and to their utmost limits the shock and jar of the cannonade. The wrath of Tammany against Dr. Parkhurst shows how sensitive even the vilest men in office are to public condemnation of their acts from the pulpit, especially from one filled by a noted or popular clergyman. Surely this would not be so if the power of the pulpit had suffered any perceptible diminution. Bro. Stoddard, in seeking first to rouse the ministry of New England to give their testimony against the lodge, is building the work on a stable foundation, and even now the result has more than justified the wisdom of his course.

The prison labor laws are making trouble in the Cambridge House of Correction, where discipline, health and morality suffer from the enforced idleness of the convicts. It seems to me marvelous that men with any pretensions to common sense should blunder and boggle so over a problem which admits of such a very easy solution. In this matter let the State step in and forbid any contracts for prison labor made with manufacturers who refuse to pay as much as to honest men outside the prison. Then let all, or at least the largest share, of the prisoners' earnings go to support their families, instead of leaving them, as is so often the case, a charge on public charity. Where they have no families, their wages can go to support the expenses of the institution; and where there are indications of genuine reform, a part can be laid up to be used and held in trust as a fund for their needs when their terms of imprisonment have expired. What could be more just and equitable?—and, on the other hand, what more wasteful and morally ruinous than the present system?

The typhus fever, brought by Russian Jews to Middlefield, is emphasizing afresh the dangers to which even country districts are exposed from the ignorance and filthy habits of this class of emigrants. They landed from the Massila, and were hired in New York by the proprietor of the Church mills, to take the place of some New Hampshire hands that had struck. It was impossible to make them understand the meaning of quarantine or red flags; but as the air of New England is fortunately not much more favorable to typhus than to yellow fever, it is hoped the germs of the dread infection will not spread; but when will our law-makers stop higgling over questions of tariff and currency and take hold of problems which are fast beginning to mean life or death to the American people?

The Carney Hospital matter still continues to stir the public mind, and there have been two or three excited hearings before the Legislature. Shall a sectarian institution receive $10,000 from the State funds? This is the burning question. Dr. Miner, Rev. Thomas E. Leyden, and Mrs. E. Trask Hill have made matters lively for the opposing side, which has Gov. Russell for counsel, and is seeking, but with very bad success, to prove that Carney Hospital, where Catholic sisters have the entire management, and only Catholic priests are allowed, is not a sectarian institution.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9, 1892.

The Associated Press, the leading one of the great newsgathering associations of the country, claims to be perfectly fair and strictly impartial in reporting the news which it furnishes to hundreds of daily papers, in every section of the United States, and in the main it lives up to its claim. It is for that reason all the more aggravating that its reports of Congressional proceedings show a disposition to underrate the importance of the movement on the part of the Christians of this country to prevent the opening of the World's Fair on Sundays. For instance, I quote from the opening paragraph of its report of the Senate proceedings on Monday, which was published in most of the morning papers of the country yesterday: "The first half-hour of the Senate was consumed in the presentation of petitions, most of them of the stereotyped character, from religious associations for the closing of the World's Fair on Sundays." Now this is, I protest, not a fair report of the presentation to the Senate of petitions against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday, signed by thousands of men and women known in their own localities as leaders in every movement to better the condition of their fellow mortals. If the Associated Press will not speak in favor of the movement, it should not speak slightly of it.

A very large and enthusiastic audience attended the fifty-eighth annual meeting of the Congress, Temperance Society, Sunday evening, but, to their shame be it said, there were very few members of Congress present—the new Senators and members have almost to a man forgotten or neglected to join the society. Representative Dingley, of Maine, the president of the society, for the tenth time presided over the annual meeting and made the opening address. He said that it was desirable that such an organization should be maintained at the capital as a witness that we are a Christian nation, and that in God's time this cause, in which rests the safety of the homes of the nation, shall conquer. Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, made a strong and earnest speech, closing with these remarks: "It is a grand thing to have a pleasant home, but during the nights of this bleak and freezing winter the cry of the neglected wife and the ill-treated child may be heard from one end of the land to the other. God save me from meeting the man who can look upon the misery of this land and not want to rise up and join anybody to crush out this great social curse. Call me crank, call me fanatic, call me what you will, but as long as I have a heart I shall raise my voice for temperance and for the protection of society." A resolution against the sale of liquors in connection with the World's Fair was adopted, and Representative J. B. Taylor, of Ohio, in a few remarks, said it would be a lasting national disgrace if saloons should be allowed in the Columbia Exposition, or the Sabbath be desecrated by its opening; and his faith in Congress caused him to believe that not a dollar would be appropriated until steps had been taken to prevent either of those evils.

Rev. Dr. J. L. Nevins, who has been doing missionary work in northern China, is here endeavoring to secure additional missionary workers for that field. He says that the number of converts in the province of Chan Tung, with a population of about 40,000,000, has increased within thirty years from about thirty to nearly 40,000, and that about 10 per cent a year is being added to that number, a percentage which he thinks might be largely increased if more active workers are placed in the field.

The House of Representatives adopted the resolution setting apart March 22, 23 and 24 for the consideration of the bill for the free coinage of silver, by the decisive vote of 190 to 84.

The Senate this week passed a bill prohibiting the sale of firearms and ammunition to Indians residing upon reservations.

The President yesterday sent the treaty, signed last week, providing for the arbitration of certain questions relating to rights of the United States in Behring Sea which are disputed by Great Britain, to the Senate without recommendation. It is expected that he will in a few days send a special message to Congress concerning the refusal of the British government to renew the modus vivendi, which will expire May 1 next, together with copies of the correspondence.

A joint committee, composed of seven Representatives and three Senators, left here this afternoon, in charge of the remains of the late Representative John W. Kendall, of Kentucky, who died suddenly Monday night from the effects of a stroke of apoplexy, for West Liberty, Ky., where the interment is to be made.

Representative Springer is somewhat better, although not yet considered out of danger. Representative Mills is suffering from a relapse of erysipelas in his ankles, brought on by his attempting to walk too soon. Secretary Blaine is confined to his bed with an attack of the prevailing malady.

REFORM NEWS.

THE PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION.

OFFICIAL CALL BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE STATE ANTI-SECRET ASSOCIATION.

In harmony with plans and ways adopted under the effective agency of W. B. Stoddard, our Washington agent, and his father, the venerable J. P. Stoddard, and many others in our noble State, I, as President of the Pennsylvania Anti-secret Association, issue

THIS CALL TO ALL REAL REFORMERS of this State, and as many in other States as can favor us with their presence, to meet in convention in the Second U. P. church in Pittsburgh, Pa., on MARCH 21 AND 22, instant.

This convention is called to effect a more permanent and aggressive union of our strength and effort in overcoming the "Secret Empire," which combines in antagonizing every single interest of church and state, and the Christian home.

Let such men be elected to fill the various offices as can fill them better than we have done; and our prayers shall be that God may direct you to the wisest and best measures. Yours, in God and truth,

NATHAN CALLENDER,
President.

Montdale, Pa., March 9, 1892.

WILKINSBURGH, Pa., March 11, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As would be naturally expected, as the time of the convention approaches, the interest increases. On Monday I attended the United Presbyterian ministers' meeting. There were about thirty present. Time was given your agent to speak of the convention. I requested that they assist me in the circulation of notices, and entertaining friends from a distance. Several promised to ascertain who in their congregations would entertain and report.

Learning of a conference of the Missouri Synod Lutheran pastors on Wednesday, I looked them up. Though in the midst of their deliberations as I came in, they stopped and voted me the five minutes I requested to speak of the convention. They expect to attend and will give notice in their churches.

About $75 has been pledged, or paid, toward the expense. Ten thousand programs are being mailed as fast as I can superintend the work. My hope is to secure enough to meet the expense of the convention before we gather, that contributions at the convention may go toward the State fund. Pennsylvania should have a live agent constantly at work. There is plenty of money here to support such a man. If each who may read this will do his or her duty, there will be no lack.

Those expecting to attend, who have not done so, should drop me a card at once, that entertainment may be provided.

The convention proper does not open till 2 p. m. There will be a gathering for prayer and conference at the church at 10 a. m. Shall we not pray earnestly, dear friends, that God may bless this gathering to the conversion of some in error, and the furtherance of his glory in the earth?

The latest lodge news I have seen in the daily papers was an account of a row at a funeral. A man belonging to some half-dozen lodges died. The wife wished all the parade possible, and so invited all the lodges to participate. The I. O. O. F. and K. of P. wished a prominent part, but the Masons purposed to do all or none. The former lodges did not purpose to hang on to the little end of the kite, and so indignantly refused to fly their banners. They evidently have not learned the duty of good children. It would certainly seem appropriate for the parents to go ahead.

Can not this funeral business be fixed some way so if a man desires to damn his soul, and destroy his body, by belonging to forty different lodges his remains can have all the honor they can give with their flags and brass-band parades? Surely a man should have what he has paid for!

Since last writing I have talked with Dr. Reed, editor of the United Presbyterian. He knew nothing of the effort which the daily papers said would be made to change the law regarding secret societies, and did not believe that any proper steps had been taken in that direction nor that a change was generally desired. The Doctor, though a very busy man, expects to attend the convention.

The large attendance of United Presbyterians should put to silence any who may be misrepresenting the church in this matter. Let us all "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Address, till after the convention, Wilksburg, Pa. W. B. STODDARD.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

BOSTON, March 10, 1892.

Hindrances and obstructions have at length been overcome, and the following certificate of incorporation was this day received:

No. 4862. Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Be it known: That whereas James M. Foster, Lewis E. Lincoln, Ezra T. McIntire, Anna E. Stoddard, Abby A. Rockwood, James P. Stoddard, William Gay, John A. Conant, Samuel A. Pratt, Elizabeth E. Flagg, Francis A. White, Eunice H. Powers, Stephen Grover, and John B. White, have associated themselves with the intention of forming a corporation under the name of the New England Christian Association, for the purpose of promoting and maintaining the principles and practice of the Christian religion by educating the people, through the medium of public lectures, the dissemination of literature and other lawful means, in regard to the nature and dangerous influence of all anti-Christian organizations, institutions, customs and movements; and having complied with the provisions of the Statutes of this Commonwealth, in such cases made and provided, as appears from the certificate of the President, Treasurer and Directors of said corporation, duly approved by the Commissioner of Corporations and recorded in this office; now, therefore,

I, William M. Olin, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, do hereby certify that (here the names above are repeated) their associates and successors are legally organized and established as, and are hereby made, an existing corporation under the name of The New England Christian Association, with the powers, rights and privileges, and subject to the limitations, duties and restrictions which by law appertain thereto.

Witness my official signature hereunto subscribed, and the seal of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts hereunto affixed, this tenth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two. WM. M. OLIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

[Seal]

The officers elected were: President, James M. Foster; Clerk, Elizabeth E. Flagg; Treasurer, Lewis E. Lincoln; Corresponding Secretary, James P. Stoddard.

J. M. Foster, S. A. Pratt, A. A. Rockwood, E. T. McIntire and Mrs. A. E. Stoddard were elected a Board of Directors until the annual meeting in December, 1892.

JAMES P. STODDARD.

BRO. FENTON IN NEBRASKA AND COLORADO.

COLORADO SPRINGS, March 10, 1892.

EDITOR OF CYNOSURE:—The U. P. church of Superior, Nebraska, rejoicing in the publicity of the truth about secret societies, opened its house of worship on short notice for the manifestation of the truth. Its pastor, Rev. E. S. Martin, who is a son of Dr. Martin, late President of the Ohio State Association, opposed to secret societies, was most cordial in his sympathy. The pastor of the Presbyterian church adjourned the prayer meeting of his church to attend the lecture. When all the people know the whole truth about Masonry, the Masons will be put to shame. Though the Masons do not fear God they will fear the people.

The Free Methodists of Denver were holding a conference of ministers of Colorado when I arrived, and they bade the truth a most cordial welcome; and a lecture was delivered in their church on Monday evening last.

The Reformed Presbyterian church, Rev. J. M. Wylie, pastor, participates in the work, and a lecture was delivered in his church on last Tuesday evening.

In this city, Colorado Springs, arrangements are made for me to speak this evening; and then, to-morrow, I proceed over the mountains to the Pacific coast.

Yesterday morning it was snowing in Denver, and a fur overcoat was very comfortable here last evening; to-day it is bright and sunny.

W. FENTON.

PROGRESS OF ANTI-SECURITY IN NEBRASKA.

HUMBOLDT, Neb., March 5, 1892.

It may interest you to know that Rev. Wm. Fenton, while on a lecture tour in Nebraska, took in Humboldt, and did some good work against the lodge, although he was with us but a short time. His first lecture was given in the Seventh Day Baptist church, four miles from town, on their Sabbath, Feb. 28. In spite of too short a notice and bad roads, a fair audience gathered and a good degree of interest was awakened by the startling things said on the great subject. At the close of the lecture, the pastor, who has been a Master Mason, though now non-adhering, gave a noble testimony before his people. He said it was his purpose, if anything he knew to be untrue was said, to tell them so plainly; but he had nothing of the kind to say; it was all true, so far as he had knowledge. He had learned much that he did not know before, and added, that had he known a tenth or even a hundredth part of what the brother had told them, he never should have entered the lodge. In appreciation of the lecture, he proposed a rising vote of thanks. It was unanimous, and most hearty.

On the following Lord's-day evening, Bro. Fenton preached in the M. E. church, from 1 Kings 16: 31. It was a telling discourse, without any direct mention of Freemasonry, but with much that pointed straight to it. So some of us thought at the time, and have so said since. One lady-hearer said to me, that she saw points in the sermon that made her think of Freemasonry. To say the least, some eyes were partly, if not fully, opened to receive the light.

The second lecture, on Monday evening, in the Christian church, occupying two full hours, was all that could be desired. Elder E. S. Eyrely, of Nortonville, Kansas, who was present, sat as chairman and conducted the opening exercises. These over, Bro. Fenton announced as his subject Freemasonry as a religious system, and proceeded at once to turn the idolatrous thing inside out. He did it in a masterly style, using the Bible and Masonic authors. A goodly number of of Masons were present to see it done, while others, not present, were well-represented by their wives, more willing, it may be, to hear than they. They seemed to give thoughtful attention, but whether any of them received the truth and are now rejoicing in it, I have not yet learned. Others of them, "lewd fellows of the baser sort," probably, were there and made fun of the occasion, but not in a way to cause a disturbance. For the time, they saved their indignation, but as soon as out of the church, gave full vent to it.

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

KINNEY'S CORNERS, N. Y., March 2, 1892.

There are Christians—earnest, devoted lovers of Jesus—who say, when approached on the subject of Masonry and kindred societies, "We do not believe in them, but are not you Anti-masons too radical? Do you not go too far when you make men mad at you and cause disturbance in church and society, by your continued protests against secret societies? Would it not be better to say and do less in that direction and concentrate your energies in purely Gospel work and in doing what you can for the cause of Christian holiness?"

I answer: Holiness in heart and life is precisely the thing for which, as Christian Anti-masons, we are contending. It is because our High Priest is "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens," that we oppose Masonry, which in many respects, from the Bible standpoint, is unholy, unclean, and harmful.

I would not longer endure the persecutions of the lodge, but that the powerful address of Dr. Carradine in the Centenary M. E. church at St. Louis, Jan. 9, 1891; the unanswerable arguments of Joseph Cook at the Chicago Anti-secret Convention of Christians in 1890, and the exposure of Masonry by Edmond Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No 639, Chicago, all showing the anti-Christian character of the secret lodges, leave me no alternative but to stand shoulder to shoulder with those who are for freedom and Christianity as against the despotism and idolatrous ceremonies of Masonry.

It is said that Savonarola, upon being offered the red hat of a Cardinal, if he would cease his attacks upon the errors of the Romish church, replied: "I will have no hat but that of the martyrs, red with my own blood."

If one could speak like that, in the dim light of centuries ago, shall not those "whom Jesus hath made free" be faithful to the trust reposed in them by the Master in these last days, and bear witness against sin of every name and nature wherever found. CHRISTIAN.

BEREA COLLEGE, KENTUCKY.

LIND, Wis., March 7, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Berea College (Berea, Ky.) is passing through a crisis similar to that which occurred in the history of Wheaton College some twelve or fourteen years ago. The causes and character of movement are similar. The venerable founder and ex-President of Berea is being assailed with a hostility and bitterness much like that which was bestowed on the (then) President of Wheaton. The objects in both cases is manifestly to suppress Christian testimony against popular iniquities, and the astonishment is that, in either case, fair-minded men should have lent themselves to an undertaking so unreasonable and unjust.

The occasion of this attack was the publication of the Autobiography of Mr. Fee, in which certain personal convictions, for which he desired to be solely responsible, and which he had never sought to have endorsed by the college, are made the ground of an attack on "his mental and moral character, and of an attempt to subvert the original purposes of the college."

The attack commenced in the Congregationalist of November last, and was followed up by a private circular sent from New York City to the patrons of Berea College, requesting them to withhold their benefactions until such changes should be made in the board of trustees as should be acceptable to what was assumed to be "the wishes of the donors." This circular was followed by another, bearing date February 10, equally replete with misrepresentation and injustice. The reading of these papers has filled me with astonishment, sorrow and indignation. I am strongly reminded of a similar deliverance made by an ex-parte council at Wheaton, in which a venerable college president was condemned on partial, perverted and false testimony.

Mr. Fee is assailed because of his private opinions about baptism. With equal propriety they might have issued a screed against Dr. Gordon, of Boston, or the late Mr. Spurgeon, for Mr. Fee has never attempted to make either the college or the church of which he is pastor responsible for his views. He has only sought to vindicate the well-known principles on which the college was originally founded,—that it should be "opposed to slavery, caste and sectarianism." These features have from the first been a part of its constitution and by-laws.

That there was no just occasion for this attack is evident, when we consider that no change in the constitution, by-laws or policy of the institution was suggested. The change proposed by the New York circular is, that Berea shall become like Oberlin and Amherst—non-committal on the question of schisms in the Body of our Lord. Such a change is not in harmony with the constitution or the original purpose of the founders of Berea College. The real innovators are the authors of the New York circular.

Among the utterly groundless charges set forth in this circular, I quote the following: "Mr. Fee's distrust of Congregational churches is in striking contrast with his sect which he has been instrumental in forming, which is called the Christian Missionary Association of Kentucky." Again: "He has established a missionary board, under his special control, and, so far as his influence goes, has cut off the work at Berea from close fraternal sympathy with all other bodies of Christians."

Supposing this were all true, it constitutes no good reason for an attack on the college; for the college is in no sense responsible for Mr. Fee's private opinions. Nor is it a just occasion for assailing a venerable servant of God who seeks to do good in a different way from the men who signed this circular. The fact is, that these statements have but a small element of truth. I helped organize the Christian Missionary Association of Kentucky, and am as competent to speak of its character and history as the editor of the Congregationalist. Mr. Fee has never had, or sought to have, "exclusive control" of this association. It was organized to aid some feeble churches, mainly in the mountain region of Kentucky, that could be best aided by those who were on the ground and best knew their history and necessities. It does not represent churches, but simply a few individual Christians, and in no sense constitutes a sect. Those who represent it as such do so through malice or ignorance.

So far from Mr. Fee's having sought to cut off the work at Berea from close fraternal relations with other Christians, he has sought only to keep it from exclusive sectarian relations, and to bring it into intimate relations with all Christians. The unpardonable sin (?) of Mr. Fee is, that he had spoken against a denominational system that prefers peace to purity. He was unwilling to endorse a minister and a church that defended Freemasonry. Trusting that the good men who signed those circulars will soon see their mistake, I am yours in Christ, H. H. HINMAN.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

GATHERED FROM ORIGINAL AND SELECT SOURCES.

THE ANIMAL HAS TEETH.

"Our faithful witnesses who went through the Morgan-murder campaign are fast leaving us; and where are the young men to take their places? Nearly all the sound and healthy ones are drawn into some one of the hundred lodges, as soon as old enough, and many of the younger still are training as cadets in the minor temperance scouts and relief-corps. How can we expect it will be otherwise, when no word of warning from the pastors of our churches ever falls on their ears? 'Our pastor,' they say, 'never says anything against our joining.' 'It cannot be very bad.' 'He preaches against intemperance and other evils.' I am glad to say that two young Masons in our village are using their influence to keep their friends out of the lodge, and have sent, they say, to your office for Finney's book for this purpose. I have admonished them concerning the dangers of the secret empire, as the animal has teeth."—E. L. HARRIS, Delavan, Wis.

IDLENESS, OPIUM AND SECRECY.

Referring to the missionary massacres and other troubles in China, last year, Dr. J. T. Gracey traces the origin of the riots to the fact that a large number of the government ex-soldiers, living on pensions, with nothing to do, form a restless community, wandering over the country, loafing at opium dens and fomenting disaffection and disorder. Another factor in the riots was found in the secret societies of the empire, the existence of which he thinks has been too much overlooked. "So it appears," says the Student of Haverford (Friends) College, Penn., that war was at the beginning of the trouble in creating soldiers to draw pensions which would permit them to live in idleness, smoke opium (forced upon China by other wars), and then to plot together in secret lodges against the government."—JOSEPH W. LEEDS.

SHARP BUSINESS MEN.

"Besides the religious aspect of the Anti-masonic reform, I think it well for you to give some space to show how Masons cheat and bamboozle the rest of the world in ordinary business transactions."—J. W. MOSS, Cameroon, W. Va. [The subject is a prolific one, surely, and as capable of demonstration anywhere as the simplest problem in geometry.—ED.]

FROM A LODGE TOWN.

"Our town is a hotbed of secret societies, of almost all kinds. Last night I handed the Cynosure to our minister (Presbyterian) to read your Washington agent's letter about the convention in Pennsylvania. After he had read it, I asked him if he thought it advisable to try to have the convention. He replied, 'No,' and gave a few flimsy reasons, which I met in short language, to his utter surprise. All our ministers (some society men) are afraid to tackle the secret empire. I hope that some day a lecturer will drop in here and surprise the stronghold of old 'Subtle.' We are exceedingly well supplied with lodge and liquor and nominal Christianity. A. F. Houser, a Baptist evangelist from Duluth, a converted Catholic, labored here with great success; but he knows nothing, or very little about secret societies. He said to my daughter that if he should talk against secret societies, it would spoil his revival work. At the presentation of a flag to our school by some of these patriotic orders, recently, he prayed for a blessing on them. All our ministers seem to be afraid to do or say anything against the secret system—rather the reverse."—A. BONNET, Brooksville, Pa.

THE WORK IN ARIZONA.

"We are having a grand victory over sin and the lodge. The Free Methodists have organized a church here. All the Anti-masons, nearly half of the M. E. church, have come into the new building; and some Masons, and also some Odd-fellows, have renounced their lodges, and have been saved; and still the work goes on. We will have here a good field for the Cynosure. God bless the good work! May it never cease until all the 'widows' sons' are saved."—(Rev.) J. K. GLASSFORD, Phoenix, Ariz.

KIND WORDS.

"I am not a subscriber of the Cynosure, but I like it—think it is the best edited paper in the country, but I am absolutely too poor to subscribe for it."—(Rev.) D. OGLEBY, Richview, Ill.

GOOD WISHES.

"I like the Cynosure very much. I get about eight papers; but I think the Cynosure is THE paper. I read it, and then send it out to some of my acquaintances. Were I able, I would like to send it to hundreds of persons. If the people were enlightened on the evils of secretism, as the Cynosure exposes them, they would soon forsake them and help to expose them. I think the liquor traffic and secretism are the two great evils of our land, and I have been talking, praying and voting against them for the last twenty years. I expect to continue to do so while I live, if they are not banished before I die. Wishing you abundant success in proclaiming the right, I remain yours for a speedy victory."—GEO. W. PRITTS, Scottdale, Pa.

LITERATURE.

We have received from the American Tract Society a little book entitled, "Evidences of Christianity." It comprises Jenyns' Internal Evidences, Leslie's Method, Lyttleton's Conversion of Paul, Watson's Reply to Gibbon and Payne's Comments of Hume on the Miracles, and an extract from West on the Resurrection. It is a well printed, compact volume of nearly 600 pages, and is sold by the Tract Society for 70 cents. It will not be specially valuable to ministers or others who have large libraries including some or all of the separate treatises mentioned as contained in this book; but for a person who desires to know a little about the evidences for our faith, and who has not a large number of books, it is a most excellent work. In this day, when the foundations seem reeling on every side, most Christians would be helped and comforted by the reading of such a book as the one above named. We hope that it may have a circulation commensurate with its real value and the needs of the church. The Tract Society's store is at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Madison street.

Rev. E. P. Marvin, of Lockport, N. Y., is the author of a thin volume, in paper covers, entitled "Ecclesiastical Amusements," which has reached a circulation of over 40,000 copies. It is founded on 2 Cor. 6: 14-18, and is a testimony of great strength, by reason of its truth and convincing spirit, against the frivolity and worse that enters into the entertainments of the church for pecuniary advantage or social recreation. The style is pleasing, almost colloquial; and the proof-texts and the numerous opinions of the great and good introduced by this author show the folly and danger of being lovers of pleasure rather than of God, even though the amusements of the church are ostensibly for purposes that should be for his glory, but, as conducted, are more frequently to the injury of his cause and the shame of the church. Mr. Marvin's little book is commended to the reader by Rev. Drs. John Hall and Howard Crosby, and by leading Christian newspapers. It is published by A. W. Hall, Syracuse, N. Y. Price 25 cents.

The strong personality of the late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon always stamped itself upon his writings, and appeared, perhaps, no more strikingly than in the quaint and frequently unique manner in which he would, in a brief sentence or two, sum up his criticism of the many publications sent to him for review. A notable instance occurs in "New Notes for Bible Readings," by S. R. Briggs, published by the F. H. Revell Co., Chicago.

An article on "Social Life in Chicago," by Mrs. Reginald de Koven, the daughter of Senator Farwell, is to be one of the features of the April number of the Ladies' Home Journal. Mrs. de Koven takes up in her article many of the prevalent misconceptions regarding society in Chicago, and it is said that her paper is one of the best presentations of Chicago's social advantages which has ever been written.

The Household Companion for March, published at 220 Washington street, Boston, contains four pages of fine sheet music. "Love's Old Sweet Song," for voice and piano, and a very full and varied repertory of literary and social papers for the home circle. $1 per annum.

OBITUARY.

MRS. AMANDA BASSETT BANKS

died on the 8th of February, 1892, at Northville, Wayne Co., Mich., in the 81st year of her age.

Mrs. Banks was born in Eaton, Madison Co., N. Y., 1811, of Puritan ancestors, of whom she learned the true principles of truth and justice.

While a young girl, the tragedy of Morgan was enacted in a neighboring county, and the impressions made by it upon her mind were never effaced. On the contrary they were strengthened and developed by after-years of research and the study of whatever was available and authentic in regard to organized secrecy in various forms.

In 1833 she was married to Freeborn H. Banks, who, at the age of 88 years, survives her. For fifty-eight years they dwelt together.

Soon after their marriage they removed to the (then) Territory of Michigan, settling near Walled Lake, where they entered upon a pioneer life, the trials of which we of the present day have but little idea. Six children were born to them, four of whom remain to mourn her loss.

Before the Cynosure was issued, she became a subscriber to it—fully twenty years ago; and it has been her great pleasure to read and circulate it, and not it alone, but very many tracts and books (Miss Flagg's especially), given and loaned, that all who would might read and have light on the works of darkness. The publishers of these publications can no doubt recall her orders for them, which she scattered abroad among neighbors and ministers.

In 1874 the family removed from the farm to the town of Northville, Wayne Co., Mich., where the remainder of her life was spent, and where her heart and home were ever open to the orphan and the afflicted. Her willing hands unconsciously builded a monument of gratitude in the hearts of suffering humanity.

Her last illness was only of a week's duration, and comparatively free from pain; as she expressed it, she was "only tired." Though carefully attended by her daughter, Dr. Gertrude Banks, a physician of long practice, earthly help proved vain.

Her earthly career was an exemplification of her Redeemer's command, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

LUCIA BANKS SIBLEY.

Wixom, Mich.

LODGE NOTES.

What is credited as being a piece of the pavement of King Solomon's Temple has lately been made into a scarf-pin to adorn the breast of an American Mason.

The New Hampshire Odd-fellows' Mutual Relief Association, of Manchester, was organized Feb. 3, 1890. It now has 960 members, and has paid to the beneficiaries of deceased members the munificent sum of $58,000, in less than two years.

At the close of the year 1890, Ohio had 81 defunct Rebekah Lodges out of 324, leaving 243 active lodges. Were these 81 lodges alive, with the average of 40 members to the lodge, Ohio would have, with the natural increase, about 18,000 members in the Rebekah Lodges.—American Odd-fellow.

The Watchman says of the coming conclave of the Knights of Pythias: "It is probable that a majority of the citizens and business men of Kansas City are not aware of what a meeting of this kind means for the city, with from 15,000 to 20,000 Sir Knights in camp, and from 100,000 to 200,000 strangers in the city. It means every hotel and boarding-house filled and over one million dollars spent during the week."

The legislation of the Sovereign Grand Lodge requiring every lodge to pay at least $2 per week benefits is meeting with considerable opposition, and an effort will be made to have the legislation repealed. A solution of the problem of requiring lodges to do their full duty to

We pay the printer to give you good advice about health and to lead you to careful living.

Our reason is that Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is so often a part of careful living.

If you would go to your doctor whenever you need his advice, we might save our money. He knows what you need.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

37

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
 - John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
 - James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
 - Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
 - Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
 - Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
 - Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
 - John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
 - Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
 - William Wirt, Attorney-General.
 - John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
 - John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
 - Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
 - Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
- Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

needy members is still needed. Too many lodges haggle over paying benefits and some resort to very questionable methods to deprive members of their just and legal dues.—National Odd-fellow.

It is the mission of Odd-fellowship to bridge over and heal the differences existing between the various creeds, in order to unite those in a bond of common brotherhood who otherwise would have remained at perpetual distance from one another.—The Companion. ["Bridge over" is good, but evasive. Odd-fellowship "skips" the religion of Christianity, cannot use the name of Christ in its lodge prayers, and "harmonizes" the other creeds by ignoring all.—EDITOR.]

Each season has its own peculiar malady; but with the blood maintained in a state of uniform vigor and purity by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla little danger need be feared from meteorological influences. No other blood medicine is so safe and effective.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underway, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDRESS,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermeine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kit tery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Faris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $1.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1892.

"NOBLES OF THE MYSTIC SHRINE."

There has been considerable curiosity manifested in relation to the new secret order of which is known commonly as the "Mystic Shrine."

On page 7 of the issue of the Cynosure for January 14, 1892, was printed an extensive and apparently truthful history of the origin of the "Shrine" and its introduction into this country, several years ago, by the play-actor, Wm. J. Florence, who died last fall. At that time the order was considered not a burlesque, but rather as a fanciful adjunct to the Masonic institution.

On the 1st of the present month of March, in Chicago, was given a "reception and ball of Medinah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at the new First Regiment Armory," the first of a series of annual festivities to be given by this order. From the description of the affair in a daily paper we make the following extracts:

"The order numbers among its members many of the most prominent business and social men. The organization is nothing if not exclusive. Only thirty-second degree Masons or Knights Templars are eligible to membership, and at to-night's affair only Nobles of the Mystic Shrine and persons who have been vouched for by some member will be permitted to enter the sacred precincts of the temple.—It is a purely social organization."

From this description it is evident that the "Mystic Shrine" is simply a Masonic side-show, very exclusive, very social, and very convivial for those who delight in "passing from labor to refreshment." Of which more anon.

The order has temples instead of lodges. Members are familiarly known as "Shriners." The officers of a temple, collectively, form a "divan." Their titles are as follows: Illustrious Potentate, scherif Sultani; Chief Rabban, scherif al Sahib; Assistant Rabban, scherif al Alam; High Priest and Prophet, scherif al Iman; Oriental Guide, scherif al Ayn; Treasurer, scherif al Miri; Recorder, scherif al Katib; First Ceremonial Master, scherif al Ezra; Second Ceremonial Master, scherif al Wakil; Director, scherif al Wakil; First Assistant Director, scherif al Maugwin; Second Assistant Director, scherif al Hagin; Marshal, scherif al Amal; Captain of the Guard, scherif al Rays; Outer Guard, scherif al Hafiz; Musical Director, scherif al Geena; Medical Director; scherif al Sayhad; Alchemist, scherif al Muhalim; Grand Lecturer, scherif al Mudarris; Master of Wardrobe and Stage Manager, scherif al Azra; Electrical Director, scherif al Wakif; Captain of Arabs, scherif al Rays; First Lieutenant of Arabs, scherif al Hafiz; Second Lieutenant of Arabs, scherif al Muzair; Captain of Arab Escort, scherif al Mohn. Amid such a redundancy of "scherifs," one cannot help wondering whether there are any but officers in the temple. All these, when on duty, must wear the temple uniform. On parade, there is, besides, an Arab Patrol, which, dressed "in beautiful costumes," follows the "noble shriners." All the latter wear the national red fez cap of the Arabs.

In the Chicago show, the other day, the "Imperial Recorder and his wife" led the parade. The Pullman Military Band and Orchestra, with fifty instruments, supplied the music.

Among the "star acts" of the evening was an exhibition drill given by the Arab Patrol of Medinah Temple, consisting of thirty select men from the drill corps of St. Bernard Commandery, Knights Templars. At the conclusion of the drill there was a "grand march" of the entire company, which the press reporter describes thus in advance: "The word grand is totally inadequate to express the sight to be presented at this juncture. Under the varying colors of the calcium lights, the long columns of marching nobles, dressed in the gorgeous robes of the order, and bedecked with glittering diamonds, will present a sight never before seen in this city. For the first time the officials of the order will appear at the head of the marchers in their oriental robes of state. No prince or potentate ever donned prettier robes than these. They were made in Arabia especially for the officers of this organization. Even Solomon, were he to gaze upon the march to-night, would envy the officers' good luck."

In the language of the enthusiastic Frenchman, who could not find words to otherwise express his admiration, on another occasion, "it was all grand, magnificent—pretty good!"

The order, although comparatively young in the United States, has grown with remarkable rapidity since its introduction. Mecca Temple, the first established, and the largest in the country (Medinah Temple, of Chicago, being next in point of membership), claims nearly 1,400 "shriners." In the United States and Canada are more than 18,000 members. The principal temples in the Union are: Mecca of New York; Aleppo, of Boston; Lu Lu, of Philadelphia; Moslem, of Detroit; Saladin, of Grand Rapids, and Osman, of St. Paul. There is but one—Salaam Temple, of Olney—in this State besides Medinah Temple.

The fraternity observes the ancient Arabic custom of burning incense within the mystic sanctuaries of their shrine during the ceremonies of a deceased brother. We might add that its general religious character is on a par with that of Blue Lodge Masonry.

The word "convivial" in a preceding paragraph is not unadvisedly introduced in this connection. It covers a large portion of the "work" of the shriners.

The Masonic American Tyler of February 25 contains a very suggestive illustration of the objects of the Mystic Shrine in a large cartoon, representing a cage on wheels filled with shriners, and drawn by a camel over a railroad. The portraits of the fellows in the cage might suggest to some humorously inclined beholder the aptness of keeping them sequestered in more permanent quarters for a term of years. They seem, however, to be quite jolly, even in confinement. They are evidently on a pilgrimage over the desert sands of an imaginary Arabia. Preceding the cage, and immediately behind the camel, is a small car, labeled "Provisions," above the top of which are visible demijohns and bottles inscribed "extra dry," etc., with boxes marked "cigars" and "cakes," for some of which one of the captive shriners is ineffectually reaching through the grates of the cage. On top of this unique conveyance lies a model of the Egyptian Sphinx, and at each end is, respectively, a brakeman and a "guard" with a metallic horn for giving signals, or for enthusing the camel and his driver. These officials are clad in the oriental raiment of the shrine, big diamonds and all. In the distance are seen palm trees and a pyramid. If the whole is not a burlesque, it is something of which the order ought to be thoroughly ashamed. But it won't.

This cartoon serves to introduce to the Masonic reader the progress of a "Moslem Caravanary" on a desert trip to visit some distant temple of shriners. The fanciful journey is between Detroit, Mich., and Wilkes Barre, Penn., and the description of the pilgrimage is quite in keeping with the cartoon,—too frivolous to be reproduced.

For all these things somebody will be brought into judgment in the great and terrible day of the Lord.

A WARNING FROM JOSEPH COOK.

Joseph Cook was greeted by a full and appreciative audience in Tremont Temple, Boston, at his recent one hundred and twenty-eighth appearance in the Monday Lecture course. Among the many and excellent things said, there was none received with more hearty applause than his condemnation of "guilty-edged secret societies." The following paragraphs were most loudly cheered by the audience:

"It is certain that in the immigration of late years there has been evidence of the existence of secret societies dangerous to law and order and hostile to every theory of American institutions. (Mr. Lodge's speech on Immigration, H. of R., February 19, 1891.) China is saturated with secret societies. So is Southern Europe. Very startling facts have been legally ascertained and officially published concerning the Mafia of New Orleans. Murders are increasing, and it is believed that not a few of them are committed in compliance with orders of secret societies. Any society that employs assassination as a weapon ought to be made an outlaw and driven from the face of the earth.

"It will not be understood that distinctions of color or race can be safely introduced into any scheme for sifting immigration. Let us erase the color line decisively and permanently, not only from our citizenship but from our immigration laws. Let us not make John Chinaman a victim of the hoodlums of the sand lots. Let us have one rule for East and West. There are many more dangerous immigrants who come to us from Europe, especially from Bohemia and Italy and Poland, than have reached us as yet from beyond the Pacific.

"Let us resolve that America shall be neither a hermit nation, nor a Botany bay. Let us make our land a home for the oppressed of all nations, but not a dumping-ground for the criminals, the paupers, the cripples, and the illiterate of the world. Let our republic, in its crowded and hazardous future, adopt these watchwords, to be made good along all our oceanic and continental borders—Welcome for the worthy, protection to the patriotic, but no shelter in America for those who would destroy the American shelter itself, and no ballot for the man who takes his politics from any alien power."

These are strong and brave words, but no more energetic and just than the exigencies of the times require.

THE LODGE DEMON IN THE HOME.

Many years ago a reputable correspondent of the Christian Cynosure became acquainted with a lovely maiden, living in her father's house, whose strange experiences we here give to our readers.

She was a member of an old, respectable and wealthy family, beloved for her many virtues and kindness of heart.

She grew to womanhood among many friends and admirers. Her father's hospitable home was the centre of attraction for persons of intelligence; and in due time the happy daughter of the household was wooed and won by a young gentleman in every way worthy of her affection.

After their marriage they took up their abode in a neighboring city, where they lived in ease and comfort. Children were born to them. The husband prospered in business, money poured into his coffers and soon he became a man of wealth.

But sickness and death entered this happy family, first removing the father, then all the children, and the once joyful wife and mother was left in lonely widowhood.

She continued to live in luxury, on the income of her estate, for more than an entire decade, spending much of her time in traveling in her own and other lands, seeking comfort in her loneliness.

Many sought her society, and, among others, a man of education, who possessed but few of this world's goods, but what he lacked in property was, to outward appearance, made up in intelligence and respectability.

After counseling with friends, she married him, sharing with him her beautiful home.

The honeymoon had scarcely ended when she made the unpleasant discovery that her husband wished her to set apart several thousand dollars for his special use. Her suspicions were aroused, and soon her peace of mind vanished. She would not consent to a division of her estate, and this determination became the cause of many disagreeable interviews between them.

They had not been long married when, one night, she complained of weariness, and retired earlier than usual. About midnight she awoke with a terrible sensation of smothering, and, on arousing herself, she beheld in the gas-light her husband standing over her, holding a sand bag, with which he was trying to kill her.

Failing in his attempt, which awoke her, he looked like a fiend. He seized her by the throat, and tried to choke her. In her agony she struggled out of bed and across the room, coming, at length, to an outer door, which in the contest was broken.

At this juncture, she in her desperation seized and plucked from his face a handful of his whiskers. This drew from him a cry of pain, which at once aroused the servants and brought them to the scene of the struggle. When he heard them coming, the cruel husband released her and ran out of the house.

The servants found their mistress sadly bruised and battered, but the only fracture of her bones was in one finger. A tooth was also found broken.

The husband, leaving the house, immediately went to a police station and surrendered himself, saying that he had killed his wife.

Having been placed in confinement, he being a 33-degree Mason—and the members of that fraternity being sworn to aid and protect each other,—he sent for three other high-degree Masons, for consultation.

In the course of time, he underwent a so-called trial for his offence, but under the influences by which he was surrounded, he was acquitted on the plea of insanity. An expert physician, from a distant place, who was engaged to watch the husband for a while, pronounced him sane; but the Masons lost little time in sending him off to some sort of an asylum for demented persons.

During the excitement attending these events, two Masonic friends of the wife were sent to her residence to obtain some bottles of medicine, which she had formerly taken to cure the dyspepsia, but into which her husband had introduced poison. Failing to kill her in this manner, however, he had resorted to the sandbag.

Friends came from far and near to offer to the unfortunate wife their sympathy. The newspapers were filled with the details of the attempted wife murder, and in one or two of them some striking headlines appeared in connection with their reports of the crime, such as "Cleared by Masons!"

The terrible ordeal, and the publicity given to her, well-nigh crushed the unhappy wife. Said she, in a letter to our informant, "Every night I live over again the scene of that terrible life-and-death struggle."

As soon as she was able she secured a decree of separation and resumed the name of her first husband.

She has evidence that her second husband had a mistress, who at one time desired to marry him, and for whose comfort he endeavored to provide by destroying his wife.

Three years have passed, and the recreant husband is still in the asylum, and (it is alleged) feigning insanity. There he enjoys great freedom, it is said, receiving his Masonic friends—he has no other,—who drink and play cards with him, while he is clothed and fed at the expense of the State. His friends know that if he were released he would be tried for the assault, and they keep him there, hoping that his victim will die.

This truthful story is given to the public with the desire that it may open their eyes to the terrible evils that are committed by men sworn to protect one another.

Here the matter rests. The wife is at peace after her troubled life; her lawful protector is a murderer at heart, a prisoner who dares not seek release, but who is protected by an oath-bound society, sworn to assassinate its own members when they prove recreant to their obligations, but which virtually confers liberty upon all its adherents to commit every manner of crime against all who are not Masons.

COLORED MASONS IN THE SOUTH.

A correspondent of this paper, living at Knoxville, Tenn., the other day, made some interrogatories as to the character of the colored Masons in the South, suggesting, among other things, that the lodge system followed by them might not be genuine Masonry, but an imitation gathered from the expositions of the work of the fraternity published by the N. C. A., and that they were working under no better authority than their separate lodge associations. To a certain degree his letter carried plausibility; and to settle the question we addressed a note to Rev. R. N. Countee, a colored business man in Memphis, asking for the facts in the case. The following is his reply:

"The colored secret societies are not imitations, but are just such institutions as the whites have, using the same oaths, pass-words, grips, and, in fact, are as deceitful in every particular. I myself worked Masonry, before I renounced it, with some of the leading white Masons of the country, and was always recognized by them as a great luminary in that constellation, which, I have since found out, is all darkness. I am glad to say that our work here against the iniquity of the lodge is becoming more and more potent. A large number of Masons have left the lodges, and now in the parade they can hardly raise 100 men, when, heretofore, their parades would bring out from 300 to 500. Pray for us."

Such testimony as this may be freely accepted in making up the record of evil in the lodges. East or West, North or South, Masonry is the same, in arrogance and falsification, and equally exclusive in its benevolence. It is probable that, were it possible, the color line would be as strongly marked in Masonry as it is in social life at the South. But the oath is stronger than blood.

TO OUR NEW ENGLAND READERS.

Special notice is hereby given that a pastor who has taken and bestowed the degrees in Odd-fellowship will (D. V.) present his views of that order from a Christian standpoint, at the regular Monday evening meeting in Suite 1, Hotel Howland, No. 218 Columbus Ave., Boston, March 22. The meeting will open at 7:30 with a prayer and praise service; lecture at 8 o'clock P. M. All friends in Boston and vicinity are cordially invited.

JAMES P. STODDARD.

—"The Lodge Demon in the Home," in another column, is an authentic narrative sent to us from an Eastern State. The names, if published, might startle our readers by their prominence.

—Rev. G. W. Hyatt, the popular secretary of the American Missionary Association, whose office was recently at Cleveland, Ohio, has received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church in Kalamazoo, Mich.

—The exposition of the lodge signs, grips, and passwords, which is printed on page 2 of this issue, with illustrations, relates to only the secret bands of the Farmers' Alliance, such as flourish in Kansas and Missouri, and which form the basis of Rev. Willard C. Boardman's excellent articles printed in the Cynosure last fall. There is reason to believe that our correspondent holds the key to the secret work of the Alliance as set forth in this exposition.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

There was loud, angry growling and "gnashing of teeth" at the lecturer, declaring him a hypocrite and his lecture a "pack of lies." Less than this could not have been expected. That nothing more hurtful occurred, is a marvel, accounted for only by the restraining power of truth and the presence of God with his faithful servant, speaking fearlessly in his name. With this small exception, scarcely worth a passing notice, I am glad to say, as I can with absolute truth, that the lecture was well received, and by some believingly. Good judges speak of it as able and convincing. As some express it, "Good seed has been sown." Of the three pastors—all there are at present—two attended the lecture and manifested a commendable interest at the time, but have shown a deeper interest since by word and action.

Tuesday evening a few Christian friends met at my house for parlor services, conducted by Bro. Fenton, who gave us further light on idolatrous worship as taught and practiced by Masons. It was an occasion of much interest. One of the pastors, alluded to above, was present. At the close he purchased my Freemasonry Illustrated—seven degrees—as he said, to inform himself more perfectly.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail." Saith the Lord, by the prophet, "My word shall not return unto me void," and in this case it did not. Yours joyfully,

WILLIAM C. BISSELL.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK IN IOWA.

SCHALLER, Ia., Feb. 29, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Two interesting anti-secrecy meetings were held last week at our county-seat, Sac City, Sac Co., Ia. On Wednesday evening, the 24th, I lectured on the relation of Freemasonry to Christianity and to Christian Duty, to a fair audience of 175 or 200. You will doubtless hear from this meeting from another correspondent. After the lecture was over, the only reply that was brought to the front was the old argument in regard to the family being a secret society. Thus men still fail to draw the plain distinction between things private and things secret. The family has its private affairs, but they are open secrets. Whenever a family begins to have secrets, things that must not be mentioned under penalty, then they begin to have skeletons in their closets.

On Thursday evening Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., gave an admirable address on "Secretism." Not an unkind word was spoken, and yet his words went down to the bottom. He carries a knightly lance that no secretist can stand against. He gave the freedom of the floor to any man who found objection to any of his facts or who found objections to any of his inferences from admitted facts. He paused frequently in his discourse to give any who desired it the opportunity to speak. Several took advantage of his offer and endeavored to divert attention and switch off the discussion upon minor issues.

Most objection was taken to the President's affirmation that the segregation of either men or women into separate organizations for any lengthened time led to deterioration. In substantiation of this he instanced the army. Of course, the argument was that the separation of men into secret permanent organizations from which women are forever excluded leads to deterioration. The lecturer also instanced colleges exclusively for either sex. No objection was taken to this instance; but some soldiers present took occasion to dispute the other position. It seems strange that any man who has read any of the world's history outside of his own country, or has had any experience in army life, should fail to observe that army life is beset with dangers to moral life and character, which are not found in civil life, where men are set in families, and that to these temptations thousands and tens of thousands yield who would not do so under the usual circumstances of civil life. This historical fact and the inference remain impregnable.

The President's argument clustered around three points. There are three, and but three, institutions ordained of God; namely, the family, the state, and the church.

He charged secretism with striking at each and all of these. Secretism takes time and money from the family; secretism defeats the ends of justice; secretism puts men on the wrong scent for the salvation of their souls. Take it all in all, it was a trenchant and courteous discourse, and eminently designed and fitted to cast a flood of light into some of the dark places of the earth. The whole effort will do good. Yours for reform,

W. C. PADEN.

SAC CITY, Iowa, March 3, 1892.

On the evening of February 24, the Opera House having been secured for that purpose, Rev. W. C. Paden, of Schaller, Ia., gave us a grand lecture.

His subject was: "The Relation of Freemasonry to Christianity and Christian Duty." For about two hours the words which fell from his lips were good, interesting and pointed. He proved that Freemasonry is a religious institution by its standard rituals, and he also proved that Freemasonry is a Christless religion. So plainly did he present these facts that all could understand, and no small stir was created by them among the Masonic brotherhood in and around Sac City.

Bro. Paden is a young man, full of life, and earnestly opposed to secretism. He is lifting his voice in opposition to the evils of the lodge which is now so prominent in the world; that is blighting our home relations; interfering with our civil government, and crowding the (so-called) orthodox churches with Christless men. Our prayer is that the Lord may help Bro. Paden to do his work unflinchingly, and not to fear friend or foe.

REV. F. I. WATERS.

REV. H. H. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

LIND, Wisconsin, March 8, 1892.

I have recently given a lecture to a full house in the Free Methodist church at Pardeeville, and in the Wesleyan church near Tomah. In each case much good seemed to be done. At Tomah I continued to preach for ten evenings. Then, after meetings at Hortonville and Dale, I came here, where I have labored with the Wesleyan people for a time. Though there are some that would like to make an exception in favor of the G. A. R. and the Good Templars, they tolerate straight Christian doctrine. I expect to stay with them some days longer. H. H. HINMAN.

THE HOME.

JOY AND PEACE IN BELIEVING.

Sometimes a light surprises
The Christian as he sings;
It is the Lord who rises
With healing in His wings.
When comforts are declining,
He grants the soul again
A season of clear shining,
To cheer it after rain.

In holy contemplation,
We sweetly, then, pursue
The theme of God's salvation,
And find it ever new;
Set free from present sorrow,
We cheerfully can say,
E'en let th' unknown to-morrow
Bring with it what it may.

It can bring with it, nothing,
But He will bear us through:
Who gives the lilies clothing
Will clothe His people too.
Beneath the spreading heavens,
No creature but is fed;
He who feeds the ravens,
Will give His children bread.

The vine nor fig tree, neither
Their wonted fruit should bear,
Though all the fields should wither,
Nor flocks nor herds be there;
Yet God the same abiding,
His praise shall tune my voice,
For, while in Him confiding,
I cannot but rejoice. —Wm. Cowper.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE.

Study the Bible with an obedient spirit. This is not simply a rule of life, it is also a rule of interpretation. Jesus said, "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God." One must love the truth and hold himself subject to it if he would learn the truth. Nothing blinds the understanding and warps the judgment like a perverse will. When men are determined to do wrong they can persuade themselves that wrong is right. It is doubtful whether there has ever been an error that has not had its honest advocates. When men will not obey the truth which is offered them they are given over to believe a lie. A sort of moral blindness falls upon them, and they lose any capacity they may have had to perceive the truth. Of course this blindness exists in varying degrees, just as men obey the truth they know with greater or less faithfulness. But no man can rightly interpret the Bible unless he comes to it with an obedient spirit. A film will be formed over his eyes by any lurking purpose in his heart not to obey its precepts, if they should happen to cross purposes he has already formed.

The law is not arbitrary, it is a law of the human mind. Christ's saying does not mean that the obedient man will have the truth miraculously revealed to him. He means that an obedient spirit is a necessary condition of knowing the truth. There is a sort of sympathy which one must have with the truth in order to know it. We must love the beautiful and have a cultivated taste in order to appreciate works of art. We must love a man if we would really know the best that is in him. In some such way the organ of spiritual knowledge is an obedient spirit which proceeds from love of the truth.

For example, suppose an unregenerate man begins the study of the Bible. He does not go far before he finds that he is commanded to repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. He realizes that to obey will involve a complete change in his life. If he obeys he will find that God has other truth for him which he will make plain. If he disobeys he cannot expect to interpret aright any portion of the Scripture beyond this precept. Simple matters of fact—truth such as the intellect can apprehend—he may understand; but he will have no power to discern the spiritual. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; * * * neither can we know them, for they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2: 14.

This law applies with equal force to the Christian. If he will not do the truth he shall not know the truth. Men have found in the Bible justification for war, polygamy, slavery and other social evils because they wanted to practice them. Worldly amusements, the use of intoxicants, alliance with men of the world, devotion to fashion, Sabbath-breaking and kindred habits, lead to many false interpretations of Scripture. Those who do such things want the Bible on their side, and will misinterpret whatever condemns their habits. And the worst of such perversions is, that those who indulge in them come after a time to believe that they are true interpretations. They lose their capacity to know the truth.—Rev. A. E. Waffle, in the Interpreter with the Bible.

A DAUGHTER WORTH HAVING.

Two gentlemen, friends who had been parted for years, met in a crowded city street. The one who lived in the city was on his way to meet a pressing business engagement. After a few expressions of delight, he said, "Well, I'm off. I'm sorry; but it can't be helped. I will look for you to-morrow at dinner. Remember, two o'clock sharp. I want you to see my wife and child."

"Only one child?" asked the other.

"Only one," came the answer tenderly; "a daughter. But she's a darling."

And then they parted, the stranger in the city getting into a street-car bound for the park.

After a block or two, a group of five girls entered the car. They all evidently belonged to families of wealth; they conversed well. Each carried a very elaborately decorated lunch-basket; each was well dressed. They, too, were going to the park, for a picnic. They seemed happy and amiable until the car again stopped, this time letting in a pale-faced girl of about eleven and a sick boy of four. These children were shabbily dressed, and on their faces were looks of distress. They, too, were on their way to the park. The gentleman thought so; so did the group of girls; for he heard one of them say with a look of disdain, "I suppose those ragamuffins are on an excursion, too!"

"I shouldn't want to leave home if I had to look like that. Would you?" This to another girl.

"No, indeed! But there is no accounting for tastes. I think there ought to be a special line of cars for the lower classes."

All this was spoken in a low tone; but the gentleman heard it. Had the child, too? He glanced at the pale face and saw tears. He was angry.

Just then the exclamation, "Why, there is Nettie! Wonder where she is going?" caused him to look out upon the corner, where a sweet-faced young girl stood beckoning to the car-driver. When she entered the car she was warmly greeted by the five, and they made room for her beside them. They were profuse in exclamations and questions.

"Where are you going?" asked one.

"Oh, what lovely flowers! Who are they for?" said another.

"I'm on my way to Belle Clark's. She is sick, you know, and the flowers are for her."

She answered both questions at once, and then glancing toward the door of the car, saw the pale girl looking wistfully at her. She smiled at the child, a tender look beaming from her beautiful eyes, and then, forgetting that she wore a handsome velvet skirt and costly jacket, and that her shapely hands were covered with well-fitted gloves, she left her seat and crossed over to the little one. She laid one hand on the boy's thin cheeks, as she asked of his sister, "This little boy is sick, is he not? And he is your brother, I am sure."

It seemed hard for the girl to answer; but she finally said, "Yes, miss, he is sick. Freddie never has been well. Yes, miss, he is my brother. We're going to the park to see if 'twon't make Freddie better."

"I am glad you are going," the young girl replied in a low voice, meant for no one's ears except those of the child. "I think it will do him good; it's lovely there, with the spring flowers all in bloom. But where is your lunch? You ought to have a lunch after so long a ride."

Over the little girl's face came a flush.

"Yes, miss, we ought to, for Freddie's sake; but you see, we didn't have any lunch to bring. Tim—he's our brother—he saved these pennies so as Freddie could ride to the park and back. I guess, mebbe, Freddie'll forget about being hungry when he gets to the park."

There were tears in the lovely girl's eyes as she listened; and very soon she asked the girl where she lived, and wrote the address down in a tablet which she took from a bag on her arm.

After riding a few blocks, she left the car; but she had not left the little ones comfortless. Half the bouquet of violets and hyacinths were clasped in the sister's hand, while the sick boy, with radiant face, held in his hand a package, from which he helped himself now and then, saying to his sister in a jubilant whisper, "She said we could eat 'em all—every one—when we get to the park. What made her so sweet and good to us?"

And the little girl whispered back, "It's because she's beautiful as well as her clothes." The gentleman heard her whisper.

When the park was reached the five girls hurried out. Then the gentleman lifted the little boy in his arms and carried him out of the car, across the road, and into the green park, the sister, with a heart full of gratitude, following. He paid for the nice ride for them in the goat carriage, and treated them to oyster soup at the park restaurant.

At two o'clock sharp the next day the two gentlemen, as agreed, met again.

"This is my wife," the host said proudly, introducing a comely lady; "and this," as a young lady of fifteen entered the parlor, "is my daughter."

"Ah!" said the guest, as he extended his hand in cordial greeting, "this is the dear girl whom I saw yesterday in the street-car. I don't wonder you call her a darling. She is a darling and no mistake, God bless her." And then he told his friend what he had seen and heard in the horse-car.—Religious Herald.

ON SAYING "YES."

I think there are parents who might say "yes" to their children much more frequently than they do. It is very touching to see a family of children who are planning for themselves some little treat or pleasure, select the youngest, because he is the pet or the one whom they suppose to be for some reason the most in favor, to go and ask papa or mamma, as the case may be, to give the coveted permission; as if papa and mamma were two dread tyrants, who must be approached with the utmost tact and discretion and taken in a genial mood, or the little petitioners would not obtain the desired boon.

Many a time I myself have been approached by some small friend and requested to "ask mamma for me; she would do it for you, I know, but she would say 'no' right away to me." And I, feeling that this would probably be the case, have exercised whatever tact I possessed with the mother, and when I have won the coveted permission I have gone with the happy sentence: "Yes; mamma says you can do it," to gladden the heart of the little petitioner waiting without.

Surely this is all wrong. It is true that a wise mother is obliged during the course of a day to refuse more than she is able to grant, but every child ought to have an assured confidence that these refusals are all the result of no tyranny or caprice, but that they are given in a spirit of perfect kindness and truest love. Often a busy mother has no time to explain her reasons for a refusal; sometimes it is best not to explain; in either case the child must accept the decision, and he will do it cheerfully if he is absolutely sure that mother would gladly say "yes" if she could. That is just the trouble. Why should Polly wear the blue frock instead of the garnet one? Why must Jake's new hat be a derby when he wants a soft felt? Why will you make ginger-snaps when the children prefer cookies? Why cannot their tastes, ideas and preferences be suited when it would do no harm? Many people seem to think that the proper way to bring up a child is to cross it as much as possible.

Sometimes it is an excellent plan to allow a child to have its own way even when you know the result will not be in accord with the best judgment. A young girl of my acquaintance went once with her mother to purchase a pair of gloves. She selected a pair which were of a delicate pearl-color, while her mother thought it best that she should have brown.

"Mamma," said the girl, "I do want the pearl-colored ones very bad."

"It is true," answered the mother, "that they are prettier, but they will not be so durable."

"Mamma, do you say that I must get the brown?"

"Oh, no," replied the mother. "I wish you to use your own judgment; only remember if you buy the pearl-colored ones that they will soil easily, and yet you must wear them as long as you would if they were brown, for I cannot afford to get you an extra pair."

"Mamma," said the girl, "I will be very careful of them; and they are so very pretty that I think I must have them."

So they were bought and the happy girl went home with her treasure; of course they soon grew soiled and shabby, still Bertha wore them until they were worn out.

"Mamma," said she, when at last she had another pair, "you were right and I was wrong about those old pearl-colored things. Your judgment was better than mine, and you were so sweet about it. You did not scold me a bit, or say 'I told you so' once, but I have learned my lesson. I never will be so silly again."

"That is all I want, my child," answered her mother, smiling as her daughter gave her a kiss and ran gaily out of the room.

Sometimes parents say "yes" in such a rude and grudging way, that the granted pleasure is more than half spoiled.

"Yes; take it and be satisfied."

"Yes; go if you want to."

"Yes; go along. I am glad to be rid of you."

"Yes; take yourself off, do, and I'll have a little peace and quiet for a time."

Have not these sentences a familiar sound? Ah, fathers and mothers, say "yes" whenever you consistently can. The day will surely come when it will be out of your power to make your children happy any more; and when you say "yes," say it cordially, with all your heart.

"Yes; you may go, and I hope you will have a beautiful time."

"Yes; you may take one. Doesn't it taste good?"

"Yes; you may have that. Mamma loves to give it to you."

Such little sentences as these make every privilege twice joyous. They sweeten the cake, make the dress still prettier, and the party more delightful than it could be otherwise to the loving, sensitive childish heart, and it is just such little things like these which turn the tide for good or evil in an impetuous child nature.—Christian at Work.

WIVES AND PROPERTY.

I never knew an Indian to sell his wife's ponies, or anything belonging to her, without her consent. I have known him to receive from a white man a good offer, which he is anxious to accept. He merely replies, "The horse is not mine; I must ask my wife." He goes home and asks her simply if she will sell, making no attempt to influence her decision. She says immediately, "No; I will not sell." He tells the white man, "My wife does not wish to sell;" and nothing further is said.

More than this, an Indian will very seldom sell a horse, or anything valuable of his own, or make any important decision, without consulting the partner of his joys. It is a very common reply to an offer or suggestion of any kind—concerning a change of residence—the acceptance of a position—sending the children to school—"I must first ask my wife."

An Indian woman makes and sells a pair of moccasins. The money is hers. She uses it as she sees fit. If she wants to buy ear-rings while the family is in need of bread, or give it all to the church, of which her husband is not a member, she is at liberty to do so. On the other hand, if the man earns money from the sale of his crops or his cord wood, he often—I do not say always—puts it into his wife's hands to spend for the family necessities, or perhaps insists upon buying her a new dress or shawl.—Elaine Goodale Eastman.

GLADSTONE'S HOPES.

"I must speak a word of congratulation and hope in regard to the temperance question. Although the Parliamentary proceedings on the subject in 1890 were negative and not affirmative; although they appeared to consist substantially only in the rejection of a bad plan and not in the adoption of a good one, yet they had this effect: they dispose for all time of the monstrous and enormous claims for the compensation of publi-cans which the present government acknowledged. If upon the foundation bill which the government introduced it had been possible to make these claims they would have proved an impenetrable fort against every attempt to deal effectually with the drink traffic. There were some positive results also. In various parts of the country new life and a more equitable spirit has been infused into licensing boards. Those approaching my period of life may not witness it, but many of you will see a thorough and effective reform of the laws connected with the traffic in alcohol, with the acknowledgment of the right of local populations to settle the question whether within their borders public houses shall exist."

SIGNS OF SPRING.

Sounds of gusty driving rain
When we wake at midnight hour,
Ice-tipp'd branches on the pane
Beating music to the show'r.

Crows that caw from steaming woods,
Robins piping in the glades,
Buns that from their winter hoods
Peep and blush like pretty maids.

Grateful odors of damp earth,
Boist'rous glee of muddy rills,
Shouting, brawling, in their mirth,
Down the bare flanks of the hills.

Here and there a crocus' head
Thrusting up to dare the cold,
While its sisters, warm in bed,
Stir their coverlids of mould.

Spring is coming; spring is near;
She is whispering in the air.
Soon the blithe nymph will be here,
Shaking blossoms from her hair.

—James Buckham, in Harper's Bazar.

TEMPERANCE.

INTEMPERANCE IN NORWAY.

There is lamentation and woe among the advocates of temperance in Norway. The official report concerning the consumption of alcohol in Christiania during the last twelve months is just out, and shows that the consumption of brandy in that town has been larger during the first six months of the last year than has been the case for the same period for many years past. In 1890 Christiania had been drinking 179,975 litres of alcoholic drinks by the end of June; last year the figures has risen to 188,836 litres. With regard to the whole country the report is almost as bad, for it shows that more "braendevin" has been consumed from January to July, 1891, than at any equal period during the last decade. Is it the severe winter which has to answer for these facts, or it is that the revival of interest in their own poets has caused the Scandinavians to act upon the advice of so many of their skalds, ancient and modern, whose drinking songs belong to the gems of the poetry of the North? Who knows but the good Bishop Franzin, with his inspired drinking songs, is really as much at the bottom of the mischief as the publicans and sinners themselves?

PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

The Iowa State Temperance Alliance, at its recent session in Des Moines, adopted the following resolutions:

"1. It is the sense of this convention that the sentiment of the people of Iowa respecting prohibition is as strong to-day as ever, and that the election of a Democratic Governor is not justly attributable to prohibition, but to the fact that undue importance was given to other issues during the campaign; and that while the Democratic party made prohibition the chief issue, the Republicans too often virtually ignored it.

"2. Any government which for a consideration licenses a business that debauches all who engage in it, and produces poverty, insanity, and crime everywhere, not only surrenders its God-appointed place as the protector of the innocent and helpless, but becomes a bribed partner of the criminal classes.

"3. We regard the question of prohibition in Iowa as paramount to any political issues now at stake, and will hereafter give our suffrages or influence to no individual or organization that is not true to prohibition.

"4. If any change is made in the prohibitory law we earnestly demand that our Legislature provide for better enforcement, to the end that all peace officers shall file information and prosecute for violations or be removed from office.

"5. We hold that the States respectively have full authority to legislate concerning the sale of intoxicating liquors within their borders; therefore, when the people have by law interdicted or restricted the sale thereof, it is the duty of the Federal Government to respect their action and collect no revenue from the traffic within such State except from persons permitted to sell under State authority; and whenever the laws of any State shall prohibit or restrict the sale of intoxicants we demand that Congress, in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce among the States, shall forbid under proper penalty all persons, except those duly authorized by local authority, from transporting liquors into such States.

"6. We look with abhorrence upon the proposition to raise money by the licensed sale of intoxicating liquors at the Columbian Exposition, and we believe Sunday-opening of such exposition would be contrary to the moral sense of the majority of the people of this country."

A TABLE OF HORRORS.

A well-known New York newspaper has collected the doings of rum as reported in the daily newspapers for the months of December and January. It presents a most horrible story. Ninety-two killings, fatal cuttings and shootings, sixty-seven serious woundings, twelve cases of inhuman brutality, twenty-seven deaths from the effects of alcoholic poisoning. The names, dates, places, are all given in the awful three columns of closely printed matter. What is the dreaded typhus in comparison with this hydra-headed blood-thirstiness! We would like to compel every apathetic and complacent member of our churches to read this table of horrors, and re-read it until his hardened soul would become an agony of earnestness to overthrow this curse of curses tolerated among us.—Charles Roads, in Phila. Methodist.

NUGGETS.

A temperance society has been established in Harvard College.

Eighty-five towns in the province of Manitoba have local option.

A man should be in sober earnest when he swears off from drink.

Unfermented wine is used in all but two of the churches in Oklahoma.

Nevada is to have scientific temperance teaching in schools for two years.

Liberia imports 70,000 gallons of intoxicants for every missionary it receives.

The W. C. T. U., of Orange, N. J., own their headquarters, costing $26,000.

It is said that one-tenth of the many suicides in France can be traced to alcohol.

Seventy-eight thousand voters of Glasgow, Scotland, declare themselves in favor of local option.

In 1889 there were 171,368 retail liquor dealers in the United States; last year there were 240,797.

Avoid smoking. "It's the devil's leading-string, commencing with a hair and ending with a cable."

Auburn, Me., with 13,000 inhabitants, has one day policeman, and three at night. Prohibition prohibits in Auburn.

Mr. Gladstone writes to a correspondent: "Our present licensing system is a discredit and a calamity to the country."

One who has kept a record says that 2,000 women have been murdered by drunken husbands since the beginning of 1891.

In Kentucky they have local option in more than half the counties, and this was brought about by temperance organizations.

Gojumra in Japan is a total abstinence village, and each house has a motto on the door, "Frugal in all things; liquors prohibited."

The value of the food products of our country for a single year is about $600,000,000. The cost of alcoholic drinks is about $1,485,000,000.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE GREATER PROPHETS.

LESSON XIII.—First Quarter, 1892.—March 27.

SUBJECT.—The Joyful Coming of Christ's Kingdom Foretold.—Isaiah 35: 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.—Isaiah 35: 10.

| Open the Bible and read the lesson. |

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. A rejoicing creation.—vs. 1, 2. When Adam fell, the earth was cursed for his sake and grew thorns and thistles, but the second Adam will restore it as it was before the curse. For this blessed day the whole groaning, travailing creation waits. When Christ comes to reign in glory, then our lost Paradise will be regained. The birds in uninhabited islands of the sea explored for the first time are said to be tame and fearless, and the noxious weeds are unknown that trouble us in civilized lands. A regenerated humanity would of itself make a regenerated earth.

2. The blessings of Christ's kingdom.—vs. 3-7. Paul tells us to comfort one another in tribulation with the blessed hope of Christ's appearing, "and the more as ye see the day approaching." We make too little of the Christian duty of encouraging each other; of strengthening weak hands that they may fight the good fight of faith. Example goes a long way. Courage and cowardice are both alike contagious. The atmosphere around a brave, earnest Christian will be charged with spiritual electricity. No one can come within its range and keep from feeling the subtle influence. We owe it to others to take a firm stand for the right, for by failing to do so we may find the blood of souls upon our garments at the last day. "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong. Fear ye not." These fearful hearts abound in the churches to-day. They will follow the lead of a stronger spirit in questions of reform when they would never have the courage to strike out independently for themselves. "Fear not." Why? Because God will save us from all the wrath of the enemy if we but put our trust in him.

"He will come with vengeance." It is said that in preaching Christ to outcast and oppressed races, the missionary who dwells on his meekness and gentleness, to the exclusion of those other and more masculine qualities which make him, as a human being, the most manly man that ever lived, will not gain so many converts; for they cling to the idea of a Christ who will be a Protector, and to whom they can look to redress all their wrongs. When we think of the abuses existing in the world; of the untold miseries inflicted by the liquor traffic on the weak and helpless; of the rich who oppress the hireling in his wages; of the tyranny of secret societies, and the manifold ways in which they are perverting justice; and then reflect how weak are our individual efforts to stem this great tide of iniquity, we may well find comfort in the thought that when Christ appears the second time it will be as a Judge to right the wrongs of those who have no helper. "He redeemeth the souls of the poor and needy;" he will also "avenge them speedily." He will "come with a recompense." The humblest service done for him shall not pass unrewarded. "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened," etc. Spiritually and literally this was accomplished, though only partially and on a limited number, at Christ's first advent; but when he comes to reign as universal King, then this prophecy will be fulfilled in all its completeness. The rejuvenated earth will not contain, as now, vast areas of desert land, nor will there be spiritually any waste soil in his vineyard. In the average church of to-day the drones are many, the workers few. The great majority of professed Christians are the receptive kind, always absorbing but never giving out. The purified, redeemed Zion will be very different, for it will be full of beneficent, never-ceasing activities in which all will bear their part.

3. The highway of holiness.—vs. 8-10. A highway is a traveled road,—one that has been cast up by the labor of many hands. So the way of holiness is one that the feet of saints and martyrs have trod, and "they of whom the world was not worthy" have helped to build it. There is always an attractive power in true holiness to draw others the same way. Genuine holiness will take away the stumbling-stones that there be nothing to cause the unwary to fall. It will not shrink from unpopular crusades against evil. It is owing to this lack of genuineness in so many "holiness" professors, that this way is practically unoccupied, and the great mass of the people are walking in by-ways of error and sin. "It shall be for those; the wayfaring men, though fools," etc. The true rendering of this obscure passage is: "even fools," that is, the simple, the unlearned, the babes in knowledge, cannot go astray, because he will be with them. Even if there is not another in one's own family or community to be his companion on this highway of holiness, he will not walk alone, for Christ himself will be with him. Who would not dare to stand alone against the world in such glorious companionship? "No lion shall be there." This follows from what has just been said. The adversary which goes about as a roaring lion will not dare touch the Christian who keeps close to such a Guide.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—A correspondent of the Standard, writing from Wisconsin, says: "Thirty-three of the largest cities in this State, with a population ranging from 4,359 to 204,468, contain one-fourth of the inhabitants of Wisconsin. In these cities are to be found one-fourth of the Baptist churches of the commonwealth, and one Baptist member to every seventy-two of the population, while the general average for the State is, one to every 122 of the people. Ten years ago in these cities we had one Baptist member to every forty-one of the population, so that we have failed to keep up with the procession."

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. Dr. Edward Robie recently completed a pastorate of forty years over the Congregational church at Greenland, N. H. Dr. Robie is in his 72d year, and no living New Hampshire clergyman has had so long a pastorate. The Greenland church is 186 years old, and has had but seven ministers, the first two covering a period of 97 years. It speaks well for the church.

—Noah Porter, D.D., LL.D., formerly president of Yale College from 1871 to 1885, died at his home in New Haven, March 4. He was born in Framingham, Conn., in 1811; graduated at Yale in 1831; was appointed tutor in the College in 1833; was pastor of the Congregational church in New Milford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., from 1835 to 1846, when he became Professor of Metaphysics and Moral Philosophy at Yale, continuing in this position for twenty-five years. In 1871 he succeeded Dr. Woolsey in the presidency, which position he retained until 1885. He was one of the most laborious of scholars, teachers and literary workers. He was one of the principal editors of the latest edition of Webster's Dictionary.

—Congregationalists in London, Eng., recently held what they called a "Self-Denial Week." This was proposed and observed as an initiatory incident of the "Forward Movement" in the work of foreign missions, under the London Missionary Society, felt to be an immediate and most urgent necessity. One result of it, as the cable reports, was that of special gifts amounting to $50,000.

—The First Church, Toledo, Ohio, pastors Dr. W. W. Williams and Rev. D. M. Fisk, has made a new departure. This church, always Congregational, after nearly forty years of Presbyterian association now unanimously and heartily seeks Congregational fellowship, and thereby adds greatly to denominational strength in north-western Ohio.

EPISCOPALIAN.

—The Church of England missionaries in Japan want fifty more missionaries during the next three years. Bishop Bickersteth, who has been visiting them, says: "If my life is spared, I will gladly bear the cost of one more European laborer as a thank-offering for what my eyes have seen and my ears have heard of the triumphs of the Gospel in Japan."

—Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Pittsburg, Pa., has accepted the bequest of $100,000 of the late John H. Schoenberger, on condition that free pews should be adopted and daily services held.

—The excitement in Belfast and neighborhood, says one of the Irish correspondents, over the election of a successor to the late Dr. Reeves, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, proved that the Irish Protestant Episcopal church is not by any means so united in doctrine and ritual as it was twenty years ago. The ritualists are making headway very fast.

LUTHERANS.

—In 1860 the number of Lutheran church buildings and chapels in Philadelphia was 10, and now it is 40. The gain from 1880 to 1891 has been 22 ministers, 18 congregations, and 3,940 confirmed members; so that there are now 62 Lutheran ministers, 46 congregations and missions, 12,277 confirmed members, and an estimated Lutheran population of 36,831.

MENNONITE.

—From the 4th Bulletin of Church statistics issued by the Census Bureau, Washington, we learn that there are twelve separate branches of the Mennonite church in the United States, claiming 550 organizations and 41,451 communicant members. From the same source we learn that the German Baptists or Dunkards (3 divisions) have 69,190 members.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—A great revival is in progress at Trinity church, Lima, Ohio, under the labors of pastor T. L. Wiltsee. Beginning with the week of prayer, the meetings lasted eight weeks. About 250 were at the altar, and up to date 220 have united with the church. Some were converted at their homes. The whole city has been moved; the end is not yet.

—The Methodist Episcopal church will soon be giving one million for foreign missions alone. Here are the figures:

Missionary society.....	$622,000
Woman's foreign missionary society.....	263,000

Grand total for foreign missions.....$885,000
An increase in the combined income of only $115,000 would bring it to a million. The American Board have fixed upon the million line as their goal; so have the Presbyterians.

—The New York Sun quotes from the Cincinnati Enquirer the following: "Bishop John M. Walden, the resident Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, was yesterday made a thirty-third degree Mason;" and comments thus: "We suppose that this raises the Right Reverend prelate to the exalted dignity of a Grand Prince Kadosh. Long may he live!"

—The ministerial vote on the question of the admission of women to the Methodist General Conference stands: Whole number of votes cast, 10,753; in favor, 5,602; against, 5,151; majority, 451; number required to change the restrictive rule, 8,067. It, therefore, fails to carry by 2,465.

—Bishop Newman reports Omaha Methodism busy preparing for the coming session of the General Conference. The new opera house has been secured, which is one of the handsomest in the country. The two galleries, with the boxes and space for 300 on the stage, will give accommodation for 1,500 spectators.

—Bishop Taylor's "self-supporting missions" in Africa received, last year, $29,359.90, and expended about the same amount. Bishop Taylor has just been on a hasty trip to London to complete arrangements for the building of a new steamer for the Kassai River, to enable the missionaries to reach the populous and healthy regions beyond.

—The great revival at Monroe, La., resulted in about 300 conversions and 239 accessions to the Methodist Episcopal church South.

—The movement in the Methodist church for the admission of women in the general conference has received among the ministers, a majority of 451 votes. But a change of this kind in the constitution, or "restrictive rules," requires a three-fourths vote. Out of 10,753 ministerial votes in the several conferences throughout the country, the proposed measure received 5,602; but that is 2,465 votes less than the required three-fourths. This does not necessarily end the question; but it at any rate postpones it until a very much greater unanimity is secured.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—Enrollment of scholars and teachers in schools of New York presbytery, 1887, 24,925; 1888, 25,346; 1889, 26,025; 1890, 26,178. Gain in four years, 1,253, or 5 per cent—1¼ per year. The Presbyterian Sunday-schools of New York City gave to the Board of Publication and Sunday-school work: 1887, $563; 1888, $516; 1889, $1,036; 1890, $1,141. Total, $3,256, or 3¼ per cent of the entire amount raised was given to support Sunday-school work in the United States. The Presbyterian Sunday-schools of New York City contributed to the Sunday-school committee of the presbytery, in four years, $1,319, or 1¼ per cent, was given to further Presbyterian Sunday-school work in the greatest Sunday-school home missionary field in the United States.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

—There are 151,614 Roman Catholic Negroes in the United States, the largest number of whom, 80,000, are in the Diocese of New Orleans, and the next largest, 35,000, is that of Baltimore. They have 27 churches for their exclusive use, and 33 priests; and there are 100 schools for colored children, attended by 6,460 pupils, with 8 orphan asylums, 1 foundling asylum, and 1 hospital. During 1890, 4,558 colored children and 590 adults received Catholic baptism.

—Dr. Barrows, editor of the Christian Register, made an extended trip into the Southland recently to study the condition of the Negro. He says: "When one goes through the South, and sees the vast number of Methodist and Baptist churches managed entirely by the colored people themselves, he finds very little indication that Roman Catholicism is making any headway, at least in the country districts, with the colored people. They are thus far essentially Protestant. In the cities, however, Catholicism is making some advance."

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST.

—The Missionary Society has arranged for the celebration of its Fiftieth Anniversary at Nortonville, Kan., Aug. 25, 1892, and for the commemoration of the William Carey Centennial at the same time and place.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Antonio Cribaro, a wealthy Italian, murdered his wife and then committed suicide.

Colonel Roswell Marvin Hough, the founder of the Stock Yards, is dead.

New England Congregational church adopted a memorial to the late William H. Bradley, who for twenty-seven years was a deacon of that church.

COUNTRY.

Fred Lappin was imprisoned at Fairfield, Ill., Sunday night for the murder of his father in Arrington township, Wayne county.

The first entry of goods to be exhibited at the World's Fair was made at New York, Monday. The articles come from Port Limon.

A formal waiver of the appeal from the decision in the Hopkins-Searles will case was filed Monday at Salem, Mass., in behalf of Timothy Hopkins and wife.

Gen. Russell A. Alger said in an interview Monday that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for President.

Kansas Democrats are said to be arranging a deal with the People's party whereby the former will gain three Congressmen in return for supporting the National ticket of the People's party.

The funeral of Noah Porter, ex-president of Yale College, was held Monday at New Haven, Conn.

Rufus T. Collins was convicted of wife-murder at Gordon, Ga., Monday. He paid a Negro $50 to shoot his wife.

The new bark Invertrossachs, insured for over $250,000, has been lost at sea, and it is believed that ten of her crew have perished.

Henry Nottingham, ex-superintendent of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway, was found dead in a Cleveland hotel, Monday.

F. W. Talbert, founder of the International Order of Mechanics, was killed at Florence, S. C., Monday, by two boys, one of whom he had cowbided for slandering his daughter.

Seven trunks belonging to New York and Chicago dressmakers filled with costumes valued at $6,000 were seized by customs officials, Monday, at New York.

Joseph Solomon Moore, the well-known writer on free trade topics, died at New York, Saturday.

Four persons were bitten by a mad dog Monday night at Springfield, Ohio.

Sidney Green, a farm hand living near Elgin, Minn., was tarred and feathered Saturday night and ridden on a rail. Last fall he eloped with another man's wife.

Three oil wells, each flowing 150 barrels of oil a day, were bored near Portland, Ind., during the past week.

Prof. Swift, of Rochester, N. Y., has discovered a comet that can be seen with an opera glass.

Fall River (Mass.) cotton manufacturers report an increase in dividends of $40,950 for the present quarter over the corresponding quarter in 1891.

Five freshmen and two sophomores were expelled from the University of Michigan, Tuesday, for dissipation.

Charles Wing, a leper, now in a hospital at Philadelphia, was a cook in the Peabody Hotel when he first came down with the disease.

At Pueblo, Col., Tuesday, Mansfield & Pollard's livery stable burned, together with twenty-three horses.

The elections, Tuesday, in the Province of Quebec resulted in the defeat of the Mercier party. De Boucherville's majority in the new House will be about thirty.

Presbyterians of Hiawatha, Kan., spent Tuesday afternoon at prayer to prevent the World's Fair from being kept open Sunday.

Trains were blockaded, telegraph wires prostrated, street car traffic stopped, and pedestrianism made almost impossible by a storm in the Northwest Wednesday night. At St. Paul many of the schools and stores were closed. The storm is said to be the worst since Jan. 12, 1888.

Wednesday the Iowa House of Representatives passed a resolution favoring the re-submission of the prohibition amendment to the people.

Housesmiths of New York are preparing to strike on May 1. Thursday the iron manufacturers and builders formed an "Iron League" to contest the strike.

Suits were filed in the United States Circuit Court, Thursday, against the city of New Orleans by heirs of six of the Italians lynched there March 14, 1891, claiming $30,000 in each case.

In a wreck on the Big Four railroad at Acton, Ind., Thursday, a conductor and a brakeman were killed.

The consolidation of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and its two principal competing companies is reported to have been effected.

Commencement exercises were held in the dental department of Iowa University, at Iowa City, Thursday.

Wednesday the commencement exercises of the medical department of Iowa University were held at Iowa City.

At Lansing, Mich., Wednesday, the Michigan & Mackinac Railway Company and the Cincinnati & Michigan Railway Company were consolidated.

Wednesday a bill was introduced in the Canadian Parliament prohibiting the importation of contract laborers.

Prof. Charles W. Scribner and J. P. Gordy, Wednesday, were elected to the faculty of the University of Illinois.

Waldo Adams, manager of the Adams Express Company, died Wednesday at Boston, aged 56 years.

Bishop Henry M. Turner, of the African Methodist church, says that the only way to settle the race question is to send the Negroes to Africa.

William B. Merrill, of Denver, Col., was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment at hard labor, Tuesday, for perjuring himself to secure a divorce.

The Standard Oil Company is said to possess all the gas leases in Indiana, with the exception of those of Peru and Kokomo.

Flour and cornmeal, worth $150,000, will be sent to Russia on the steamer Missouri.

J. D. White, a postal clerk, brother of the general superintendent of the railway mail service, pleaded guilty at Dubuque, Iowa, Tuesday, to robbing the mails.

Wednesday the State Bank of Evanston at Evanston, Ill., was organized, with a capital stock of $100,000.

Judge Borgett, of Lincoln, Neb., was shot, Wednesday, by a man named Warner, whom he had fined recently for drunkenness. Borgett's wounds are not likely to prove fatal.

Rob Musgrave, of Terre Haute, Ind., convicted of attempting to defraud insurance companies, was denied a new trial, Wednesday, and sentenced to the State prison for ten years.

H. A. George, of Eau Claire, Wednesday, was elected Grand Chancellor of the Wisconsin Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias.

Katie Pfluger was forcibly abducted from school at Punnettstown, Pa., Wednesday.

The New York Assembly Ways and Means Committee decided that the appropriation for the World's Fair should remain at $300,000.

Representatives of railway and lake lines met at New York and formed an agreement on rates on the same basis as last year.

Chauncey B. Welton, of Madison, was elected Department Commander of the Wisconsin Department, G. A. R., Thursday.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from March 7 to March 12: Z Graves Rev S A Alt, Geo W Pritts,

B Rohrer, Dr W M Miller, A Knox, Rev E J Buehrer, K Marsh, J P Stoddard, Miss E Merrick, J H Gray, J B White, H M Woodford, H S Halstenson, C Hoover Sr, H Van Blarcom, W H Ross, M Phillips, S C Taylor, S Kirkpatrick, S Dekker, R E Rose, H Rupers, Rev T M Chalmers, L Champe Sr, E W Hicks, W M Breden, F Byrer, Capt T A Willson, O Schreder, Mrs M A Hanson, J R Latimer, Rev Ad Bartling, Rev S A Bumstead, W Chestnut, A C Bundy, W L Enlow, S Creswell, Mrs M Carnes, I Ganoung, T M Chalmer, W Park, J M Johnson, Miss A Cozier.

NEW EDITION.

The Carradine Sermon; Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

Over 10,000 printed within a year. Every one reads it. Especially good for distribution among church members and the better class of citizens.

During this month the N. C. A. issues its second edition. To encourage a wholesale circulation, it offers them, during March, postpaid in lots of 50 for one dollar, or less than wholesale prices. It is a 20-page pamphlet with neat cover. If on receipt of pamphlets you are not satisfied, return them and get your money.

MARKET REPORTS.

Table with market reports for CHICAGO and NEW YORK, listing various commodities like wheat, corn, and oil with their respective prices.

Table with market reports for KANSAS CITY, listing commodities like cattle, hogs, and sheep with their prices.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD. For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid. Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. I. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servant's. 20 Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20 The Royal Invitation. 20 Loyal Responses. 20 Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c.

Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box.

Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John McNeil. The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design.....1.25 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors.....2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant.....2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

- Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00 Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00 Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50 Twelve Soul Winning Sermons,..... 50 Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection..... 50 Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50 Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00 An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest. Ned Franks. White Bear's Den. Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web. Braid of Chords. A Wreath of Smoke. Silver Keys. Lake in the Woods. Grace Vernon. Seven Perils Passed. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hessa Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.10 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Battle.

The Hessa Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80 Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N, 221 W Madison St. Chicago.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SOME HEALTH FALLACIES.

A writer in Lippincott's Magazine thinks that the health of the people would be brought up to a better condition if they were educated out of the following fallacies:

The idea that cold baths are healthy in winter and dangerous in mid-summer.

That rain-water is more wholesome than "hard" water.

That bed-rooms must be heated in cold weather.

That the misery of everlasting scrubbing and soap-suds vapors is compensated by the comfort of the lucid intervals.

That a sick room must be kept hermetically closed.

That it pays to save foul air for the sake of its warmth.

That "draughts" are morbid agencies.

That catarrhs are due to low temperature.

That even in mid-summer children must be sent to bed at sunset, when the air begins to be pleasant.

That an after-dinner nap can do any harm.

That the sanitary conditions of the air can be improved by the feto of carbolic acid.

That there is any benefit in swallowing jugfuls of nauseous sulphur water.

That rest after dinner can be shortened with impunity.

That out-door recreation is a waste of time.

That athletic sports brutalize the character.

That a normal human being requires any other stimulant than exercise and fresh air.

THE DEADLY COLD BED.

If trustworthy statistics could be had of the number of persons who die every year or become permanently diseased from sleeping in damp or cold beds, they would probably be astonishing and appalling. It is a peril that constantly besets traveling men, and if they are wise they will invariably insist on having their beds aired and dried, even at the risk of causing much trouble to their landlords. But, according to Good Housekeeping, it is a peril that resides also in the home, and the cold "spare room" has slain its thousands of hapless guests, and will go on with its slaughter till people learn wisdom. Not only the guest, but the family, often suffer the penalty of sleeping in cold rooms and chilling their bodies, at a time when they need all their bodily heat, by getting between cold sheets. Even in warm summer weather, a cold, damp bed will get in its deadly work. It is a needless peril, and the neglect to provide dry rooms and beds has in it the elements of murder and suicide.—Scientific American.

TREATMENT OF BURNS.

The doctor hears a great outcry as he nears a boarding-house, and some one calls: "Run for the doctor, quick;" but he is at hand, and goes within. A child had been playing near the stove while the breakfast was in preparation, and succeeded in depositing on its abdomen part of the contents of a dish of hot gravy. The result is a blister as large as a man's hand extending from umbilicus to epigastrium; child is 2 years old. Its writhings are very similar to convulsions, its screams arousing every one in the house. The doctor, cool and collected in that babel of confusion, takes from the shelf an unbroken package of saleratus, pours half of its contents into a tin wash-dish, adds enough water to this to make a thick paste, and covers the burn with the mixture, making the application half an inch thick. As soon as this is applied the child stops crying and is free from pain. Leaving orders to keep the child quiet all day, and not to allow the soda to become dry for eight hours, he quietly leaves the room.—Dr. C. S. Cope.

HOW TO TREAT CORNS.

Corns are somewhat a result of the constitution; but there is no question that the rubbing and slipping of an ill-fitting shoe is a frequent occasion of them. No

William A. Lehr

of Kendallville, Ind., says Hood's Hood's Sarsaparilla is

King of Medicines

And His Cure Was

Almost a Miracle

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"Gentlemen: When I was 14 years of age I was confined to my bed for several months by an attack of rheumatism, and when I had partially recovered I did not have the use of my legs, so that I had to go on crutches. About a year later, Scrofula, in the form of White Swellings,

appeared on various parts of my body, and for eleven years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed six years. In that time ten or eleven of these sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. Several times pieces of bone worked out of the sores. Physicians did not help me and

I Became Discouraged

"I went to Chicago to visit a sister, as it was thought a change of air and scene might do me good. But I was confined to my bed most of the time. I was so impressed with the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in cases similar to mine that I decided to try it. So a bottle was bought, and to my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better. This strengthened my faith in the medicine, and in a short time I was

Up and Out of Doors

To make a long story short, I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for a year, when I had become so fully released from the chains of disease that I took a position with the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since that time have not lost a single day on account of sickness. I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I endorse for it has been a great blessing to me, and to my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of all medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, No. 9 North Railroad st., Kendallville, Ind.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Hood's Pills cure Biliousness.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

radical cure for them has yet been discovered. They may be greatly helped, though, by being soaked for twenty minutes in warm water, then pared or scraped with a very sharp knife, and painted with iodine. Lunar caustic is excellent also, but not exactly safe, as it sometimes burns so deep as to leave a serious sore. A salve made of white or yellow wax, spermaceti and almond, or castor oil, in equal quantities, is excellent to rub upon corns and callousness. Apply just before going to bed, after bathing, but not soaking the foot, and rub in thoroughly.

Bronchitis yields at once to the influence of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It costs only 25c.

PIANOS $175, ORGANS $33. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3.

No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1. A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacker, Martin Luther John Knox, and a host of others.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D.

This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 3vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50. This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony. This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail price sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. E. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloan, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 30cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Free masonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 324 pages cloth, $1.00

Between Two Opinions; OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret! tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPOTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each

Freemasonry Contrary to the CHRISTIAN RELIGION. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

HEALTH ON THE FARM.

Much has been written with reference to healthful methods of living. The farmer has been warned against too free use of the pork barrel, over and over again; and while it seems to be true that our pork-eaters are as healthy and long-lived as our beef-eaters are, it is nevertheless true that a steady pork diet is not the best diet. If we were asked to lay down general rules for healthful methods of living on a farm we should say: First, a comfortable house with large airy rooms; a strict regard for cleanliness about the premises, that is, that all decaying matter should be scrupulously removed from any location near the house; good drainage; frequent bathing; as much labor-saving in all departments, in the house and out of it, as possible; and a variety of foods. The chicken is frequently drafted for the farm-table, perhaps too frequently, for fowl is hard to digest. Fresh beef in summer is not practicable, unless bought of a butcher. But—stating again what has been stated many times—the sheep furnishes an easy means by which the farmer can supply himself with fresh meat at any time of the year. With a flock of sheep one can be slaughtered at any time, and what is not needed of the carcass for home consumption can be disposed of. This feature alone is enough to commend sheep-breeding to the farmer.—Selected.

TO PROTECT TREES.

To prevent mice and rabbits from girdling trees use a wash made as follows:

Fresh lime slaked with soft water (old soap suds is the best). Make the wash the same thickness as to wash house or fencing. Where one peck of lime is used, while hot, add one gallon of crude carbolic acid, one-half gallon gas tar, and four pounds of sulphur. Stir well.

For summer wash, leave gas-tar out, and add in place of it one gallon of soft soap. Wash the last of May or June. If the miller has laid the egg which produces the borer, this wash is death to the egg. The millers, moths and beetles will not deposit their eggs in a tree thus washed.

It is claimed that this wash will prevent both apple and peach tree borers. Wash the trunk and limbs as far as the rough bark goes. A man or boy can wash 200 to 500 trees a day with a good flat brush.

A weak lye is a very useful and perfectly safe tree wash. Old soap suds will keep the bark smooth and the borers off, if the trees are washed two or three times in the summer season. If a pint of crude carbolic acid is added to fifteen gallons of old soap suds or lye it will keep insects off for months.

EVERYDAY MATTERS.

Keep watch of the price of cow feed, and when you can buy it cheap enough, lay in a supply.

The first step toward increasing the profits from your dairy will be to cull the herd. Look it over and see if this is not true.

Turn and rub cheese daily to keep them bright and free from mould. Carelessness never pays in making cheese, more than anything else.

When feeding a cow do not try to see how little you can give her and have her "do pretty well," but how much you can get her to eat and "do pretty well."

If you intend to build up a dairy herd it will pay you to feed your young heifers something besides corn—give them some oats. You will reap the good of it in their progress as well as in the churn.

Ploughing by steam is now a common practice on the Pacific coast. There are those who think that electricity will soon be used for the same purpose.

A Maine firm say they can buy for $1.50 per barrel to-day apples that they paid $3.50 for a year ago. Very fair apples are selling at $1 per barrel in the Maine markets.

The United States Department of Agriculture has distributed a large number of camphor trees, which are becoming domesticated in this century, giving

EVERY FAMILY

Should be provided with Ayer's Pills. No other aperient is in such general demand or so highly recommended by the profession. Mild but thorough in operation, these pills are the best of all remedies for constipation, biliousness, heartburn, indigestion, flatulency, loss of appetite, liver complaint, and sick headache. They break up colds, fevers, and malaria, relieve rheumatism and neuralgia, and are indispensable to travelers, either by land or sea. Sugar-coated and compounded of the purest vegetable cathartics, they may be taken with impunity by old and young. Physicians recommend these pills in preference to any other. H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark., says: "In 1853, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."

Needs

Ayer's Cathartic Pills
Every Dose Effective.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

promise that in time, camphor will be produced here in paying quantities.

Milk cans should be washed in cold or tepid water first, and then rinsed in boiling water before they are exposed to be aired. The addition of a little soda and borax to the hot water increases its cleansing properties.

If you carry milk to a factory or ship to market, it will pay you to cool it at once as soon as drawn from the cows. It don't make a man feel very good to have his milk rejected because "it is off" after he has spent time cooling it. But he did not do it soon enough.

More than any other of the stock quarters, the dairy barn must be kept free from impurities. Pure oxygen, and not poisonous nitrogenous vapors, is what nature has designed and provided to renovate the life blood. This principle works the same in animals as with mankind. Milk may be poisoned through bad air drawn into the lungs of a cow, or the bad odor will affect it in the pail after being drawn from the cow.

Have you ever tried Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain? Price 25 cents.

Falling of the hair is the result of infection of the glands or roots of the hair, or a morbid state of the scalp, which may be cured by Hall's Hair Renewer.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revolution of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE with the DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 390 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of the law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid. 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

A cream of tartar baking Powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 15th page).

A royal commission has been appointed to ascertain and report for the information and consideration of Parliament the fullest and most reliable data possible respecting the effects of the liquor traffic in Canada.

Thursday, the Board of Directors of the Standard Oil Company passed a resolution to dissolve the trust, it is said.

Ross Kells, superintendent of the motive power of the Erie Railway, died Thursday at Dansville, N. Y.

The National Department of Agriculture reports that farmers hold of last year's crop 171,000,000 bushels of wheat and 860,000,000 bushels of corn. The wheat reserve is the largest ever reported.

A bill now pending in the New York legislature substituting hanging for the electric chair will be favorably reported.

Men are working overtime at Mare Island Navy Yard to get cruisers ready in case they should be needed at Behring Sea.

John F. Winslow, a noted iron manufacturer, whose firm built the Monitor, died Thursday morning at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Prince John Zobieski, grandson of the King of Poland, was arrested at Mount Kisko, N. Y., Thursday, for stealing a horse and wagon.

At Grafton, N. D., a man and his team were frozen to death within the city limits in Wednesday's storms. Half a mile from Devil's Lake, N. D., William M. Griffin, a farmer, was found frozen to death. At Badger, Iowa, Thomas Oneson was blown from his wagon and instantly killed.

A. P. Wood, formerly editor of the Dubuque Tribune, died Thursday at Dubuque.

Gold in abundance is said to have been found in a decomposed quartz ledge near Cottonwood Springs, Cal.

The factories of the Boston Rubber Shoe Company will not be shut down as long as usual this spring, owing to the improved condition of the rubber trade.

Hereafter the rules against dealing in puts and calls will be strictly enforced by the New York Produce Exchange.

King Oscar II., of Sweden, in a letter to President Bonney, of the World's Congress Auxiliary, says that he may visit the World's Fair.

At Las Vegas, N. M., Wednesday evening the Rev. B. J. Chrevas, a colored Methodist minister, fell dead in a pulpit while preaching.

Mrs. Sallie Enos, of Morgantown, Ind., swallowed a needle when she was a child. Recently it was taken from her leg near the knee.

The Rev. James Gallagher, a Catholic priest of New York, was fined $5 Thursday for drunkenness.

At the Indiana State Republican Convention, Thursday, the following delegates at large to the National convention were elected and instructed to vote for the re-nomination of President Harrison:

Richard W. Thompson, of Terre Haute; ex-Congressman S. J. Peele, of Indianapolis; ex-Secretary of State Charles N. Griffin, of Hammond; N. T. Depauw, New Albany.

FOREIGN.

Advices for thirty centers of the Argentine Republic indicate that general trade is reviving.

German colonists on the Volga, in Russia, numbering 300,000 souls, are in an extremely destitute condition, it is said. They received less aid from the government than the Russian peasants.

Authors of London held a meeting Tuesday to consider the project of erecting a monument in Westminster Abbey to the late James Russell Lowell.

Vienna police have forbidden further free distribution of bread to the starving workmen of the city.

At Kolaschin, in Albania, a wedding party of Albanians accidentally wounded one of the party of Montenegrins, whereupon the Montenegrins fired into the party of Albanians, killing and wounding nineteen.

It is reported that the German steamer Messina foundered off the Scilly Islands Feb. 19, and that but one man out of a crew of twenty-five was saved.

Foot and mouth disease is spreading in Scotland.

The medical college at Lyons, France, has been closed on account of disturbances created by the students.

Snow fell to the depth of eighteen inches in Lancashire Thursday. In North Wales railway and telegraphic communication were greatly interrupted.

A meeting promoted by the Chamber of Commerce was held in London Friday to further arrangements for the World's Fair.

Thursday the French Foreign office announced that the commercial treaty with the United States had been concluded. The Senate of Spain approved the commercial treaty with the United States by a vote of 90 to 50.

George Woodgate Hastings, member of Parliament for the East Division of Worcestershire, pleaded guilty of embezzlement at the Old Bailey, in London, Friday, and was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

Three hundred miners were entombed by an explosion of fire-damp in a colliery near Charleroi, Friday. It is feared that nearly all perished.

Maitland Francis Moreland, an Oxford tutor, aged 65 years, was sentenced to ten years' penal servitude at London, Friday, for attempting to blackmail members of the nobility.

100 PER CENT BETTER.

Editor Rowell Talks Common Sense

PEOPLE NEED GOOD MEDICINE—HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA SUPPLIES THE DEMAND.

"There is to me no cause for doubt that every one living in our variable climate, particularly as we Americans live during the winter, eating meat, especially fat meat, needs something to cleanse the system and in the spring. The question then resolves itself into decision as to what's the best thing to take. For one, I have solved the question to my own satisfaction that Hood's Sarsaparilla completely fills the bill. After taking two or three bottles I always feel a hundred per cent better, and might say without exaggeration five hundred per cent better. The brain is clearer, the body in better condition for work, and the little troubles of life pass by unnoticed. I can heartily and honestly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to any one." A. S. ROWELL, Editor Lancaster Gazette, Lancaster, N. H.

Free a Clogged Liver

Sleep is Sweeter

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small idea of Chicago, the idea of Chicago, the and the millions of dol-manufacturing enter-fore we offer to pay your Chicago and return to WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Every Woman is an Unbeliever.

She can't believe, to begin with, that Pearline can do so much. She hears that everybody is using it; finally she tries it. It does all she's heard of; it saves all that she's been told. She takes comfort in using it. But

She can't believe that so much can be done safely. She consults those who have used it for years. She finds that Pearline has been tested and proved in a hundred ways; that it's harmless to hands or fabric; that it's as safe as good soap. Then

She can't believe that she ever did without it. She has less to do, she gets more done—and it's all done better. Her clothes last longer—they're not rubbed to pieces. Her housework is easy; her time is her own. She believes in Pearline, and tells her friends about it—(that's the most effective kind of advertising).

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back.

Beware

316 JAMES PYLE, New York.

ASTHMA—DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. in. made with a pack of 60 splendid Silk pcs, asst'd, bright colors, 25c.; 5 pk's. $1. Agts. Wanted. Lemarie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N. J.

PIANOS ORGANS AND MUSICAL GOODS of all kinds at Wholesale. Send for catalogue and price list free on application. THOMPSON MUSIC CO., 259 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. Buy a $25.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working, reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers' and agents' profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT. B CHICAGO, ILL.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp. LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN? ME yet I write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London, England.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts

WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women. SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue. CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N; 221 W. Madison St., Chicag

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 28.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,143.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	SELECTED:
Notes and Comments.... 1	Immorally Constituted Societies..... 3
Wanted—A Temperance Party..... 8	Sunday in the Orient... 3
"Patriotic Order Sons of America"..... 8	Be Free..... 3
"Independent Order of Calanthe"..... 8	REFORM NEWS:
Pres. Blanchard Talks to Students..... 8	From the New England Agent; Rev. H. H. Hinman in Wisconsin; Rev. Wm. Fenton in Colorado and Utah..... 5
A Champion of Odd-fellowship..... 9	CORRESPONDENCE:
A Blind Leader of the Blind..... 9	Southern Barbarities; Disgraceful Performance in a Church; Wayside Notes..... 5,6
CONTRIBUTIONS:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
The Age of Gold (Poetry)..... 1	THE N. C. A..... 7
Christianity in the U. S. Constitution..... 1	THE HOME..... 10
Garret or Parlor?..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
The Lord's Prayer and Lodge Prayer..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
LITERATURE..... 6	DONATIONS..... 13
LODGE NOTES..... 7	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

Pres. Charles A. Blanchard is in attendance at the Pittsburgh Anti-Secracy Convention.

As we go to press, Tuesday morning, the Pennsylvania State Anti-Secret Convention is in session at Pittsburgh, and in the next issue of the Cynosure we hope to give a full report of the proceedings. The program, as printed last week in these columns, is an excellent one, and there is every reason to believe that the exercises and the spirit of the gathering will make it a most encouraging event in the progress of the anti-secret cause.

Lady Henry Somerset, one of the talented co-editors of the Union Signal, has returned to England; that is, she is to sail April 13 from New York. On the 17th instant she addressed a meeting of miners at Pittsburgh; and is announced to address another at Portland, Me., in honor of Neal Dow and Mrs. Stevens, and still another in Boston, April 7, at the Tremont Temple, for Mrs. Livermore and the W. C. T. U. of that city. Her mission to England is in behalf of temperance work among women, in which she is to be assisted by Miss Helen L. Hood and Miss Florence Balgarnie, who will leave America within a few weeks. In the meantime Lady Somerset will contribute liberally to the columns of the Union Signal. The work of augmenting and perfecting the World's Christian Temperance Union, in the hands of these earnest and talented women, can hardly fail to prosper.

From all accounts, it is evident that the New England Christian Association, recently chartered in Massachusetts, enters upon its work of reform under the most favorable circumstances. In the words of a resolution passed at a preliminary meeting of its projectors in February, "it is not intended to interfere in any way with the National Christian Association, but to put ourselves in a position to more effectually co-operate in its noble work of enlightening the people upon the great evils of secret societies." A letter from Rev. J. P. Stoddard remarks: "Considering the ability of the N. C. A., its management has been generous to this part of the work, and I believe the brethren appreciate it. I am confident your New England secretary does." One thing is certain: "The field is the world," and so large, and the work so great, that there need be no clashing of interests. Rather, we may hope to be helpful coadjutors in the cause of reform. "So mote it be."

To those whose subscriptions have recently expired, we would urge their immediate or early renewal. We are pushing the anti-secrecy reform in the Cynosure to the best of our ability under divine strength and guidance, and tenderly appeal to every friend of the cause to be as liberal in holding up our hands in the great contest in which we are engaged as circumstances will permit. We need every dollar now due us to advance the work and meet our current expenses from day to day. Your indebtedness may be small, but the payment of a dollar or two from each of those who owe us would tend to encourage us greatly and send us on our way rejoicing.

The troubles in Germany, in which unemployed laborers have borne the most prominent part, are of a class to which any absolute monarchy may at times be subjected. Such a nation depends upon its military strength to enforce laws conceived in despotism—laws which would find no place in a constitutional government—laws which are liable to be accentuated and made more oppressive by a sovereign who lacks good judgment and prefers to rule by will-power. The Emperor has shown firmness and bravery, as, indeed, he well may with a great standing army to give emphasis to his policy, whether it be right or wrong. There is no doubt that he has overstepped the bounds of control established by the cooler and milder policy of Bismarck, and has, in consequence, aggravated the situation with which he was confronted. Let us hope that experience and more mature judgment will yet make him a wiser sovereign.

Last Sunday was a joyous day at "Moody's Church," corner of LaSalle street and Chicago avenue, in this city. Twenty years ago Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, one of the directors of the National Christian Association, became the acting and active Superintendent of "Moody's Sunday-school," and ever since, with unflinching zeal and energy, he has devoted himself to the responsible duties of that office. The close of his second decade in it was properly celebrated as "Reminiscence Sunday," and more than 2,000 men, women and children gathered in the spacious church. Among those present were business men, high in public office and esteem, who, in the "long ago," were superintendents, teachers and scholars in the mission. The reunion was full of the spirit of Christian love and benediction, and the hearts of those who participated in the exercises are lighter and better for the genial influences of the occasion.

T. T. Fortune, the originator of the Afro-American League, gives, as one reason for such an organization, the fact that nearly every secret society debars the colored man from its so-called privileges. Among the rest he mentions the Good Templars. The colored members did not ask for separate lodges; they did not desire them, he says. But the British and American branches re-united at Saratoga, N. Y., a few years ago, and the condition of union forced upon the British body by the sharp practice of Finch, now saint of the order, was an acknowledgement that its division of the lodge, eleven years before, because of the color-prejudice in America, "was odious and unsound in principle." This is the version of an intelligent and prominent colored man of the boasted action at Saratoga; and he is nearer correct than the patrons of this secret order, who claim that there is now no race line separating the temperance ranks, as any one with a grain of wit may see in the records of that meeting.

What leaders are the honest farmers allowing into their secret F. M. B. A. and Alliance? In a speech at Des Moines, Iowa, sometime since, which is in print, H. H. Haaf, farmer, lawyer, walking delegate, prohibition guerrilla, Ishmaelite, and what not, said: "Right there in Wheaton, Illinois, under the eaves of that college which has for its motto, 'All things secret are to be opposed,' I organized out of those men a lodge of F. M. B. A., and gave them the grip and password." He goes on to say that farmers must keep out the mere professionals, lawyers and walking delegates who sneak into their lodges, and ruined the Grange in 1876. They must keep their secret work to prevent this." But the fact about this lodge organizer is that he is of the very class on whom he demands the doors to be shut. He came two or three times to Wheaton, to organize his F. M. B. A. lodge, and brought one of the State officers; but the Wheaton farmers had too good sense to take all his statements for fact, and pointedly rejected his secret lodge, with its pagan altar and ritual. They organized an open Alliance, which is successfully maintained.

THE AGE OF GOLD.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

The stars are shining on the brow of God;
This day has faded in the crimson West;
The hills are tipped with sunset's stainless blood,
And all the world is sinking into rest;

Is sinking into rest, but ere long wakes
To walk the ways of earth with strife and care;
To usher in those restful days, when breaks
The light beyond, which never dawneth here.

And so I sit and wonder if that day,
By prophets sung and patriarchs foretold,
Will ever dawn, when night shall pass away,
And bring the long, long promised age of gold.

The world is sad with sorrow and with care;
Our feet press onward towards the churchyard mould
But faith still watches for the morning star,
When night shall end, and bring the age of gold.

We hear his footsteps on the hills of God;
He comes by way of heaven's unnumbered stars;
His lances flash like Israel's flaming rod,
And angel hands lift high the shining bars.

'Tis all for love, although the world be lost!
Love for the Lamb who leads us with his fold;
'Tis all for love, though he hath paid the cost,
And through his might shall dawn that age of gold.

Oh, glorious day! Oh, promise from afar,
By prophets sung and patriarchs foretold;
Our eyes shall see the blaze of Bethlehem's star,
When time rolls on and brings the age of gold.

Steamburg, N. Y.

CHRISTIANITY IN THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

BY J. C. K. MULLIGAN.

Brothers Hinman and Gault have given their views of the United States Constitution. The latter has shown that some of its features are not entirely "compatible with our being a Christian nation." The Christian is required to "acknowledge God in all his ways;" to "swear by his name;" and to choose rulers who "fear God and rule justly." Christian America, in its civil Constitution, fails to obey these laws of God, and thus mars the glory of our political institutions; and it does this in the face of Gospel light and mercies.

But Mr. Gault weakens the force of his argument, and is out of touch with many who would aid him in the reform he seeks, when he says, "The Constitution expressly repudiates some of the fundamental principles of Bible Christianity." He specifies the omission of all reference to God in the preamble and in the oath, the claim to be the supreme law, and the prohibition of a religious test. These are not an "express repudiation;" that is, a formal rejection, in so many words, of God and Christ and the Christian religion; but they are only a failure to recognize them. For, as Judge Story testifies, any attempt to reject Christianity would have been crushed by a storm of public indignation.

The omission of God's name in the preamble and in the oath does impugn the Christian intelligence of its framers; but it by no means "repudiates" God as the author of civil government, nor denies that his name gives sanction to the oath. Personal sins of ignorance or of omission are less guilty than those that are willfully committed or forced on others by making them a condition of civil rights and privileges. A Christian may carelessly or ignorantly pray only to God and never to Christ; yet who can justly call him an infidel, or say that he "repudiates" Christ? The book of Esther omits the name of God; but neither the noble queen, nor Mordecai, nor the writer of the book, "repudiated" God. The terms of communion by which the R. P. church tests its members and officers do not name Christ. Does that church, did Mr. Gault in entering it, "repudiate" Christ? Masonry is not condemned simply for omitting the name of Christ from its ritual, but for exalting the order above the church as a saving power, for humiliating the Christian to a level with the Jew, infidel or pagan, and for enforcing un-Christian, blasphemous and criminal rites.

The failure to recognize God as the supreme founder and ruler of the nations was sinful, and is a blot on the magna charta of American liberty; but this neglect did not prevent the constant practical recognition of God through all our history by the people and by public acts of worship in national and State courts, legislatures, prisons, ships and forts. However perfunctory may be the use of God's name and worship in these services, they are proof and demonstration that the failure condemned was not a repudiation nor prohibition of Christianity. To assert the contrary is a groundless speaking evil of dignities, and gives aid and comfort to infidels in their wicked effort to realize this atheistic repudiation.

The Constitution's claim to be supreme law does not "repudiate" Christianity. The framers of the Constitution meant only that the people, and not the king, had supremacy in government. They had suffered from kings who claimed that by the grace of God they had supreme authority and denied to the people any share in the administration of government. The advocacy of this claim by the church led to the reaction of French infidelity, and doubtless had some influence on Franklin, Jefferson, Madison and others. But far wider and deeper was the influence of English Puritans, Irish Presbyterians and Scotch Covenanters, whose heroic lives and martyr deaths had vindicated the rights of the people and demonstrated their authority under God to set up kings and dethrone them, to establish government and overturn despotic power by the sword. Those who were imbued with this Christian faith were not only dominant in, but were, the nation.

This deep conviction as to the rights of the people, the difficulties in the way of the development of their new departure in civil government, and especially the ignorance then prevalent in the reformation churches as to the divine prerogatives in government, are all essential to the explanation of the omission of God's name, of the claim that the people ordain the Constitution, and that it is supreme law. The Westminster Confession and all other reformation creeds are silent as to Christ's civil authority and dominion, and are strongly Erastian in the powers of the magistrate over the church and in matters of conscience. The R. P. and U. P. testimonies, dated in 1806 and 1858, even now stand alone in clearly presenting the civil authority of Christ as an article of Christian faith. Yet to say that the reformers of the Evangelical churches "repudiate" Christ and deny his kingly claims, would offend God's people and make ourselves false witnesses for Christ.

The silence of the Constitutional fathers was as innocent as that of the reformers and church fathers. In setting up this government they did not give due glory to God, nor own the supremacy of Christ; but these principles of Christianity were not then understood, and even now are in dispute among Christians. Yet the founders of the American government did "expressly" acknowledge God's supremacy over human governments in the Declaration of Independence and the Articles of Confederation; and even Jefferson and Madison never repudiated it in their infidel writings; much less did the Constitutional Convention mean to do so. No fair construction can make the omission to be a repudiation of God or his law. Besides, the substance of our civil jurisprudence is formally based on the Bible, and the supreme courts have over and over declared Christianity to be the common law of our land. These decisions authoritatively interpret the Constitution as Christian.

The Constitution is negatively rather than positively un-Christian; there is failure to require Christian morality, but there is no rejection of God or his law, no prohibition of religious worship or of any Christian duty, and no obligation to repudiate these. In fact, without a change in the Constitution, Congress might stop all national Sabbath desecration and complicity in the liquor traffic; might establish Christian marriage and divorce, and, with the President, might lift up the government administration to the high plane of loyalty to the Lord Jesus as the nation's King. There is no Constitutional basis giving permanence to such legislation and administration; but if public sentiment were awakened to elect Christian legislators and administrators, to enact express Christian laws, and to amend the Constitution so as to give them validity and permanence, there is nothing in the Constitution to forbid this desirable reformation.

The prohibition of a religious test was not intended to repudiate Christianity. The circumstances of its enactment show that it was only designed to guard against the Erastian union of church and state, a civil establishment of religion such as had driven our Pilgrim fathers into exile. Against this the National Reform represented by Mr. G. protests as strongly as does the United States Constitution. The relation of church and state was then a burning question, whose true solution was unknown. Virginia had established Episcopacy; Maryland was dominantly Catholic; Carolina and New Jersey and Pennsylvania were Presbyterian; New York was Dutch Reformed; New England was Congregational. Sectarian rivalry made union of the sections impossible, if any sect were to be preferred; hence a sectarian establishment was forbidden, and freedom to all was guaranteed.

But, unfortunately, instead of sectarian, they used the word "religious," which, in its primary sense, includes the recognition of God and obedience to his law, as well as conformity to the creed and outward rites of a sect. Hence infidelity and secularism have gained an ascendancy and interpreted the Constitution as forbidding any preference of Christianity over Mohammedanism or pagan idolatries. But even with this interpretation crystalized into supreme law by the now abrogated treaty of Tripoli, there is no power in the Constitution, or under it, to prevent the election of a Christian President, the selection of a Christian Cabinet, and the inauguration of a Christian administration. We have all this to-day, or might have, if the Christian sentiment of the nation would sustain the aspirations and aims of the Christian men who are heads of departments in the present national administration.

Christianity is put at a disadvantage by the silence of the Constitution and its religious test clause; and its present interpretation is incompatible with Christianity, as it ought to be in a Christian nation like ours. But that the Constitution repudiates Christianity, or forbids the enactment of Christian morality, is not sustained by the facts of our history, nor by the letter of the bond. It is defective in its Christian character; but the barrier to Christian government is not so much in these defects as in the refusal of so many Christian men to carry their religion into politics and to vote as they pray; it is in the antagonism of Christian voters to each other and to the Christian reforms that are imperatively needed, and in the sectarian or cowardly failure of Christians to stand together in asserting and maintaining their Christian rights and liberties.

New York.

GARRET OR PARLOR?

BY REV. JAY BENSON HAMILTON.

The garret is a storage-place for the refuse of the household. To its gloom and dust and cobwebs are consigned the broken, worn-out or useless articles which we do not care to destroy. I saw two old-fashioned spinning-wheels not long ago. One was in the garret. It was broken, and lay upon its side just as it had fallen when carelessly tossed aside many years before. The other was in an elegant parlor. Every broken part had been carefully repaired. Here and there were little touches of color and bright bunches of ribbon. The old wheel held the post of honor in the beautiful room. It wore its love-tokens as proudly as a gray old veteran might display his bronze medals of honor. The lady who saw me gazing at the old wheel said tenderly, "It belonged to my grandmother. Its music accompanying her voice was my mother's lullaby. The touch of her hands made it holy. My mother prized it above gold. She gave it to me. I keep it in my best room. It is one of my treasures. When I see it I think of my sweet mother and my dear old grandmother. Both are in heaven now."

May I introduce to you a saintly old man? He is an aged minister of the Gospel. He wears a crown of snowy hair. He sits in enforced idleness because of the touch of disease and the weight of years. He looks back upon a long life full of faithful and honorable service. He thought not of self, but with loving and heroic devotion sacrificed his own hopes and purposes that he might minister to others. He is poor, although he has made many rich. Does he sit in the parlor, surrounded with tokens of appreciation and affection? Alas, no! He sits in the garret, lonely, neglected and almost forgotten. Fellow-Christian, when your minister retires, shall it be to the garret or to the parlor?

Hackettstown, N. J.

THE LORD'S PRAYER AND LODGE PRAYER.

The question whether the absence of Christ's name from the "Lord's Prayer" does not justify its omission from lodge prayer, is plausible. But it misses the point in issue.

It ignores the principle contended for, and recognizes, only, a not indispensable formula.

In point of fact, the very name of this prayer associates it with the Lord Jesus Christ, and to use it is to recognize him as Lord.

This is as un-Masonic as the formula "for Christ's sake," or "In the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

The point is not that a certain word is omitted, but that it cannot be used. It must not be implied, recognized or understood. The real point is even something beyond this; if possible. It is the absolute ignoring of the one who cannot be ignored in prayer and religious services by any Christian, and whose relation to true religion is such that the formal utterance of his name is not a necessary thing, however natural and suitable.

The omission of his name from the Lord's Prayer does not secure the same effect, nor answer the same end, as the willful and intentional and necessary suppression of his name in the lodge. In fact, if the lodge used this very prayer it could not use it under its title, "The Lord's Prayer," for that would be as un-Masonic a recognition of Christ the "Lord," as the formula "for Christ's sake."

Either would be abhorrent to Blue Lodge Masonry. What we complain of, is not that the lodge omits a formula that we by no means claim to be indispensable to prayer. Yet the question that has been raised assumes that this is the sum of our criticism. We do not think it must always be used. But the other party claims that it must never be used, and that is another thing. Where a recognition of Christ is well understood, as it always is in a church, for example, the utterance of his name in a formal way may be unnecessary. But the case is opposite when it is well understood, as it is in the Blue Lodge, that he can have no recognition, and that this is the inner reason why the outward utterance of his name is impossible.

The question is one of fact and not of words. Against this fact, the prayer bearing the Lord's own name in its title makes no contention. Against this fact the lodge must contend or else surrender a cardinal principle. CRUCIFER.

IMMORALLY CONSTITUTED SOCIETIES.

Some social bodies are immoral in their very nature. Such are all secret, oath-bound societies, as the Freemasons and Odd-fellows. As a matter of course, no consistent Christian can have fellowship with these. They are in their very essence a perversion of the social nature of man. They are combinations for selfish ends; and so far as they introduce any aims that contemplate, professedly, the common good, they become necessarily the rivals of the social institutions of divine appointment, viz., the family, the state and the church. All beneficent aims are comprehended in the spheres of these institutions. If, because of their imperfection, any voluntary association is formed to supplement the deficient action of either the church or the state, such voluntary organization should only be a temporary expedient. And such voluntary societies should be in loyalty to the state and to the church and to Christ himself, who is King and Head of both.

But an organization that is rightful in its ground and principle, may be immorally constituted. Take the family, for example. This is a divine institution. But a Christian has no right to enter into the family relation in disregard of the authority of his Master. If a Christian man or woman should enter wedlock with even a tacit agreement that the family thus constituted should not be in loyal subjection, as a family, to Christ, that would be for a follower of Christ to be unequally yoked with an unbeliever.

In like manner the political society of a nation, or the governing body of citizens, may agree together in a written compact or covenant, usually called a constitution of government, that the political being thus constituted shall hold all religious truths and untruths on a level; that as a political organization it will pay no attention either to Christianity, or Judaism, or Mohammedanism, or infidelity. In other words, the state, which is a divine institution, decides in its constitution, as it is left by its Divine Author to determine its constitution for itself, that it will not stand in an acknowledged relation of loyalty and subjection to Christ, as the Ruler of nations. It places itself, in its very constitution, in this attitude of non-acceptance of the authority and law of Christ in national affairs. This is the immoral constitution of a social organization of divine appointment. And just as the consistent follower of Christ is to be separate from all organizations that are wrong in principle, so he is to be separate from all that are right in principle as God's ordinances, but wrong in their constitution in their want of acknowledged and practical loyalty and obedience to Christ.

We do not wait just now to show that, when the principles of the written constitution are destitute of loyalty to Christ, practical disloyalty will be sure to appear in the administration of the government. This aspect of the subject will be taken up at another time.

Just at present we point the application of the above argument. Our own nation, the creature of God, has not placed itself in right relations to the Author of its existence. It studiously ignores Christ and his supreme and authoritative law for national conduct. It is Christless in its constitution, and consistently Christless in many of the most important practical features of its government, as in the calls for the observance of a day of thanksgiving. It is thus an example of an immorally constituted social and political organization. In this case, therefore, the divine command will be heeded by every consistent and faithful Christian, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord."

This command, given originally to the Corinthian Christians, is one of the most fundamental principles of the ethics of all social relations. God herein expresses supreme law for all the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ to-day and for all time. If Christians at Corinth in the days of Paul were met with the practical question as to what social relations they might consistently hold with those who were not followers of their Master, how much more must Christians in these days of multiplied social organizations of every kind be confronted with this question? True, indeed, in our country it is not a question of separation from the worshipers of idols, as it was at Corinth. But that is not material to the spirit and substance of the divine command. Cultured infidelity may rule to-day, and in our land, just as completely in social relations as idolatry ruled in social relations in Greece in the times of the apostle to the Gentiles. The main point at issue is the attitude of the social organization toward Christ and his authority. If this attitude, on the part of any social body, is an attitude of disloyalty or hostility; or, rather, if it be not positively an attitude of obedience and loyalty, then the duty of the faithful follower of the Lord Jesus to-day is the same as that of his followers in Greece, or Rome, or Asia Minor, of old, namely, to come out and be separate, and to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.—Political Dissenter.

SUNDAY IN THE ORIENT.

Sundays are an exponent of national life. The Lord's day is a nilometer. As the Egyptian sees an augury in the rise or omen in the lack of supply in his sacred river, so we find an unerring register of the spiritual vitality of a people upon which we may predicate the health or famine which will follow. Man is the same in the Occident and Orient. His needs as an immortal being are the same. The channels through which we supply them vary, being suited to his environment.

Seven summers have been spent in Europe. I recall scores of continental Sabbaths spent in various places from Norway in the north to Spain in the south, both in Protestant and Papist lands. Morning service is held, but the afternoon and evening are generally given to pleasure and dissipation; it may be in the beer garden, bull fight, theatre or circus; it may be scenes less exciting. The Roman Catholic abbe says of his people in France: "The theatre is their church, licentious songs their sacred hymns, dances and shows engage them instead of instruction and prayer. The holy day is the day of the week most profaned." Even in Protestant Switzerland popular elections have been held on the Lord's day. Now America is fast adopting this continental Sunday. Europeans and Americans carry into the treaty ports of China and Japan, into Calcutta, and other great mercantile centres of India and into other cities of the East, their tastes as to Sunday-keeping. Some, there are, who carry their conscience with them. Some do not. Indeed, in short European trips I have known evangelical doctors of divinity from America to spend Sundays in pleasure travel by steamer and rail, and sight-seeing, which desecration they would heartily rebuke at home. These are exceptional, it is to be hoped. The law of God is not annulled in any latitude or longitude. One of them confessed to me that he was self-condemned.

In a year's absence, during 30,000 miles of travel in Oriental lands, I have had opportunities of seeing the observance and neglect of the day of rest. Never have I ridden from town to town on Sunday in a train of cars, and the jinrikisha and street-car also is ordinarily avoided. As the fruit of these wide observations it may be said that there are three classes, in the Orient as in the Occident: heathen who pursue their vocation day after day with no let up, or stated rest day; also those Europeans who make the holy day simply a holiday, and thirdly, those Christians, native and foreign, who give it more or less respect as a day of worship.

Antiquarians think that in ancient calendars China marked the seventh day with a character indicating rest. Le Place says that the septenary division of time is the oldest monument of human civilization. No such landmark among pagans is found to-day in the far East. The Oriental, of course, has festivals which diversify the year, and which furnish some release. But as a whole, the nations of the East live a calmer life than we, and are not wrought up to the intensity of excitement which is shown in our Western world. It cannot be said that the Chinese show any sign of physical decrepitude, although the wheels of labor have no Sabbath rest.

The influence of foreign residents on the heathen too often neutralizes all the instruction of devoted missionaries.

"Do you know when Sunday comes?" a heathen Cantonese was asked. "Oh, yes; it is the day when you Christians take an excursion to the White Hills." Had he lived at Hong Kong he might have known the return of the Christian's holiday by the eighty miles' steamer excursion made to and from Macao.

What would be thought of a church in New York that allowed the work of building to proceed on Sundays? How valuable would its testimony be on behalf of Christianity, so long as it suffered the law of God in this regard to be trampled under foot? Yet such has been the case the past year in the building of the union church place of worship at Hong Kong. No wonder that the question was put by a recently arrived missionary, "Shall we Christianize the heathen, or will they heathenize us?" The upshot of the matter is just this: the vitalizing of public sentiment at home is essential to the maintenance of our country's honor abroad. As law-abiding citizens we claim the day of rest for ourselves and our fellows. We demand that the law protect this privilege from abuse. It cannot enforce a religious observance of the day, but it can enforce an orderly enjoyment of the liberty of rest from toil.

One of the judges of our Supreme Court has said, "Where there is no Christian Sabbath, there is no Christian morality; and without this free government can not long be maintained." We are waging a war with alien influences. To yield this rest day is to undermine all other institutions that give to America its civic lustre and its social power. To yield this heritage of our fathers is to invite disorder, moral degradation and national ruin. To maintain Sunday as a civil institution is, on the other hand, a sure method of perpetuating our social prosperity and our national life.—E. P. Thwing, in the Christian Statesman.

BE FREE.

If a man wants to be a man he must be free. Slavery is the foe of manhood. A man who is subject to the will of another cannot use his judgment, his reason, his intelligence, his will, his conscience, his hands, his tongue; and can never while thus bound be such a man as God made him to be.

There are other fetters besides fetters of brass which bind men and hold them fast. There are men who, bound by agreements, bargains, obligations, pledges, oaths and vows, are not free, and never can be free till they cut these cords and kick themselves clear of these green withes and strong bands.

God would have his servants free. He has said to them, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." But how often persons allow themselves to be bound! They promise to keep secrets of which they know nothing; to obey commands, the nature of which they cannot even guess. They bind themselves, soul and body, with bands which they know not how to break. "The fear of man bringeth a snare," and in this snare they find themselves taken.

There are men who have guilty knowledge of the sins of others, who have been made the confidants of others' iniquities, who have become partakers of the wrong-doing of others through pledges and promises; who dare not rebuke iniquity because they are bound in its chains; who have pledged themselves not to expose things which should be exposed, and to cover up villainies which no Christian man should try to conceal.

All this is wrong. No man has a right to bind himself with such bands. When you see two or three boys in close conversation, and hear one say, "Don't you tell," you may be very sure that there is mischief and devilry on hand; and when men descend to such tricks it is certain that they have something on hand which needs covering up.

It is not necessary that a man should tell all he knows; it is not necessary that he should be a tale bearer, or an evil speaker; but it is necessary that he should separate himself from evil; that he should have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; and that he should keep a conscience void of offence toward God and man. It is necessary that he should be free from participation in other men's sins, and that he should be free to denounce, expose and rebuke wrong-doings; and no man should have the power by a wink or a word, or by laying a finger on his lips, to hush his voice of honest testimony or indignant rebuke.

Man of God, be free! Keep clear of every entanglement; make no blind promises; let no man entrap you; shake off the fetters which men have forged; go to God and ask him to break your bonds, and pray that you may ever have grace to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free, and be not again entangled in the yoke of bondage!—The Armory.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Two hundred years ago—Prohibition notes—A notable sermon from Dr. Gray—Our New England Christian Association incorporated—The Hub and Lady Somerset.

It seems well nigh impossible to think that just two hundred years ago the witchcraft delusion was one of the burning questions in every New England community. As this superstition was at that time universal in Europe, and the executions for this fictitious crime were as numerous as they were sanguinary—especially in Catholic countries—the wonder is, not that our forefathers believed in such a widely prevailing error, but, that they should have the sturdy good sense to recover from it so soon and acknowledge with sorrow their dreadful mistake. Indeed, this sad episode in our early history might never have occurred at all if the children whose mysterious sickness was the starting point of the excitement had been attended by a doctor wise enough to prescribe a dose of birch for their complaint, instead of ascribing it to the hand of Satan. As people in those days had not discovered that they had “nerves,” it must have been hard for the doctors when called on to diagnose a case they did not understand, for they could not call it “nervous prostration,” or hide their ignorance under any other name in the category of nervous ills. So, perhaps, we ought not to blame them for doing the best they could under the circumstances, and laying it all to the evil one. At the same time, we cannot help thinking that when Chief Justice Sewell held his solemn yearly fast to implore forgiveness for his share in the miserable business, that Salem physician might well have kept him company. It is of itself a high compliment to the Puritans that the few occasions on which they committed acts that their posterity would be glad to forget, look as black as they do. If their early annals did not show so white a page, their hanging of witches and persecuting of Quakers would not cast so deep and sombre a shadow.

What they would have said to see so many of their descendants diving into hypnotism and theosophy and such uncanny speculations, can only be imagined, but I think they would give their benediction to those of their posterity who are to-day fighting the devil in forms of which they never dreamed. The day after the recent town meetings in Massachusetts, whisky went down one cent a gallon. So reports the whisky trust. Those “republics in miniature” have spoken out with such a decided voice against the saloon that it is no wonder the whisky trust feels chilly over it. The rum-sellers of Worcester are holding secret meetings to consider the advisability of keeping their places open after the first of May, by laying in a stock of one per cent beer, and using it as a blind to sell something stronger; but if there is any sincere effort on the part of Worcester officials to enforce the law, their scheme will not work; still, such desperate expedients show that they are driven to the wall. There is talk of a branch Keeley cure in the rum-ridden city of Pittsfield, Mass. Think of licensing some one to scatter the germs of small-pox or yellow fever, and then laying on the tax-payer the burden of building and maintaining a free sanitarium for the treatment of the unfortunate victims!

In my last letter I mentioned the no-license fight at Medford. It has been crowned with a glorious victory, an overwhelming majority being found on the side of prohibition. What a pity that the name of this old historic town must continue to be associated with the rum mills in her midst which she can have no power to prohibit or remove because sanctioned by the national government!

Cambridge is agitated over the question of “annexation.” A great city is omniverous.

Many of her citizens, however, object to having their flourishing little municipality swallowed up by Boston—especially as it would nullify all the results of their noble fight for prohibition, and bring them once more under the rule of the liquor power. On the other hand, will this absorption of prohibition towns help Boston in her warfare for no-license and an honest government? That is a question; but if a glass of pure water is emptied into one of opposite quality, everybody knows the result: it will lose its own clearness, without purifying that with which it is mingled. This may be a fitting parallel or not. Anyway, it is worth considering by the citizens of Cambridge.

Last Saturday's Traveller copies in full a notable sermon by Rev. James M. Gray, of the First Reformed Episcopal church, on the “Relation of the Church to Social Problems,” in which he handles the subject from a new and original point of view. He believes that the cure of “Absenteeism” is “not in straining the Gospel,” but in proclaiming the Word of God; “following the people when they will not follow us.” “More street-preaching, more tract preaching, more preaching in halls and theatres... exalting the blessed Jesus as the only panacea for human ills, and waiting the day when He that shall come will come, and destroy that wicked one by the brightness of his coming.” He does not believe in trying to fill up the empty pews by any outside device or attraction, but insists that the church shall remain loyal to the terms of her original commission, and make it her first object to save souls. Still, Dr. Gray has no idea that the church should ignore social problems, but that the various clubs and organizations, formed for the express purpose of dealing with these questions, and led, for the most part, by Christian men and women—in many cases by Christian ministers—who have kindled from her altars the fires of their zeal and self-devotion, from the proper and sufficient channels for their discussion from a Gospel stand-point; thus leaving the pulpit on the Sabbath free for its legitimate work. These views, from one of Boston's most noted preachers, gain additional weight from the fact that Dr. Gray is himself a strong advocate of all the social reforms of the day, and has in his own church a Men's Social Union, meeting fortnightly for the express purpose of discussing these great problems. Nor has he, when occasion arose, shrank from alluding to these subjects in his sermons. He simply combats the idea of their usurping the place of Christ and him crucified, as if food and raiment were more than eternal life. I think no thoughtful mind can fail to see that Dr. Gray is right. A full Gospel, preached in the pulpit and practiced in the pews, would mean new life to every organization which has been formed for putting down evil, or ameliorating social wrongs.

Our New England Christian Association is at last an incorporated body. Its purpose is thus defined in the paper of agreement: “to promote and maintain the principles and practice of the Christian religion, by educating the people through the medium of public lectures, the dissemination of literature, and other lawful means in regard to the nature and dangerous influence of all anti-Christian organizations, institutions, customs and movements.”

This is a broad platform; broader, indeed, than the framers originally designed; but it was found that a more specific designation of the object would be a bar to incorporation; for secret societies being incorporated, too, to charter another society for the express purpose of pulling them down, was in the opinion of the State Commissioner too obvious an inconsistency to give it his seal of approval. But the law tolerates a good many inconsistencies that are quite as glaring, as, for instance, licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors, and then punishing men for drinking them. The platform, however, is none too broad for a subject so vast as the secret lodge system, which clasps hands with every other form of false belief; which shelters the saloon under its mantle, and connects itself with a good cause only to defile and destroy it; and so I consider this as only another instance in which the Lord has overruled the wrath of man and made it to praise him.

The Record and Herald have been making themselves ridiculous by publishing a list of Boston's 400, which is about as funny for some of the names it includes as for some it leaves out, some of her most distinguished men and women being among the excluded. Lady Henry Somerset has said some things lately which will not please the Anglo-maniacs. She says that “the very lowest of English manners and customs which all the truly respectable and cultured class of English people deplore and are ashamed of, are the ones they are trying to graft on American life.” “Boston,” she says, “is exquisitely refined, and amazingly hypercritical. It possesses more distinct literary taste than any city I have ever known—quite as if a coterie out of the heart of London had been picked up and planted here. It is the muse of America; but,” Lady Somerset adds, “it is not a progressive muse.” “Progressive” in this case, may bear a variety of meanings, of which the citizens of the Hub can take their choice.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 16, 1892.

“Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me,” was the text of a sermon which has resulted in the establishment of what is an entirely new branch of church work in Washington, although it has been successfully operated elsewhere. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Holmes, assistant pastor of one of the largest local churches, last Sunday evening, for the purpose of interesting the congregation in a new philanthropic enterprise to be called the “Boys' Club,” the object of which is the entertainment and instruction of boys belonging to the classes not usually reached by the church; the street waifs and such; and it succeeded not only in arresting the attention of the large crowd present, but in touching every one interested in the home mission work of all our churches. The keynote of the sermon was that it is the duty of the church to help the poor, the degraded—aye, even the disgraced and the friendless, to lead better lives; and a feeling reference was made to the recent adoption of a resolution by members of one of our churches approving the action of their pastor in officiating at the funeral of a fallen woman, for which he had been harshly criticised, notwithstanding he was but following the example set by Jesus Christ.

The “Boys' Club” is to be formally opened in two rooms on the ground floor of the church next Saturday evening, and thereafter it is to be open two nights in each week. Books, papers, etc., are to be furnished for all who may attend the meetings, and short talks on interesting topics are to be given from time to time, illustrated with stereopticon views. The new club starts with a hearty God-speed from thousands, and, if it meets with the success expected, will soon be duplicated in other churches in different sections of the city.

Before our people were through congratulating each other on the breaking up of the gambling known as pool-selling, which has been carried on at the Virginia end of the Long Bridge, ever since the Christians of the District of Columbia secured the enactment of a law by Congress shutting it out of Washington, the announcement is made that the gambling is again in full blast, the lawyers employed by the gamblers having advised them of a way to evade the law recently passed by the Virginia legislature prohibiting pool-selling in that State, and yet continue the same old business, only under a new name. It is expected that the Virginia authorities will make a test case in order to have the courts pass on the legality of the gambling conducted under the new method. It will be two years before the Virginia Legislature meets again, so that if the gamblers' lawyers' advice holds before a court, the young men of Washington will be in danger of catching the gambling fever from this pest-hole for two more years.

A protest from the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church against the enactment of further oppressive legislation against the Chinese, as tending to cripple missionary work in China through retaliatory measures, was this week presented to the Senate. On the same day the United States Supreme Court reversed the decision of the California U. S. Courts and decided that a Chinese merchant residing in this country had a right to visit China and return at his pleasure; and that the restrictions of the anti-Chinese laws applied only to those coming to this country for the first time.

The chaplain of the Senate made a most feeling allusion to Senator Morrill, who is dangerously ill, yesterday, in his prayer opening the Senate. He said: "Remember thy servant, our brother, in his sickness. We bless thee for his life—the true and pure and beautiful and useful life. If it please thee, spare his life yet longer. Preserve and strengthen him, and keep him in mind and purpose in thy peace. May the wings of thy protection overshadow his home, so that those who watch so tenderly may be sustained and comforted by thy grace."

The executive committee of the District of Columbia Red Cross Association, which is receiving contributions for the Russians, meets this afternoon to make arrangements for a mass meeting.

Several meetings have been held here this week under the auspices of the local Sunday-school Union, at which addresses favoring the organization of normal schools for the special instruction of Sunday-school teachers were made by Mr. William Reynolds, of Peoria, Ill., and Prof. H. M. Hamill, superintendent of Normal Sunday-school work in Illinois.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

PUTNAM, Conn., March 16, 1892.

I stopped off between trains, for a couple of hours, with our long-time friend, Bro. George Buck. He has for some time been confined to his house by an attack of the grip, or something resembling it. He seemed to be slowly regaining his strength, until about three weeks ago, when he suffered a sudden and serious relapse. For a time his condition was considered critical, but prayer, careful nursing and skillful medical treatment have resulted in a partial restoration, so that he is able to converse and sit up a part of the time. His confidence in Christ as his personal, present and eternal Saviour, is unshaken in this time of sore testing, and to his faithful wife he often says: "Oh, that these hours of weary waiting were over!" His interest in the true church of Christ and all reforms does not abate. He feels perplexed about his relation to the Congregational church in Putnam, and deeply grieved that its pastor, Rev. Mr. Sargent, should use his pulpit and the Sabbath-service to advocate secret societies and encourage their members by commending them to God for his blessing on their "good work." He had hoped better things from one who professes loyalty to Him who said nothing in secret, and assumes to be an ensample of the flock, and teach the way of truth and life by a godly walk and conversation. May the true Shepherd watch over and protect his own sheep in Putnam, and raise up our dear Bro. Buck to stand for the right, is my prayer,—one, I hope, in which many will join. J. P. STODDARD.

REV. H. H. HINMAN IN WISCONSIN.

LIND, Wisconsin, March 8, 1892.

There is probably more real opposition to the secret orders in Wisconsin than in any other State with the same number of people. This is due to the fact that it has a larger percentage of Germans and Scandinavians, who are either Roman Catholics or Lutherans, educated to look with disfavor on all secret combinations. But this opposition is largely latent, and confined to denominational lines. The fact that neither Romanists nor Lutherans co-operate to any extent with other Christians, restricts and almost neutralizes the scope of their influence. The Christian Cynosure has met with scant favor among them; first, because it has advocated prohibition, and, second, favored free rather than parochial schools. Large numbers of these denominations are beer-drinkers. Some are saloon-keepers, and nearly all oppose the prohibition movement. A few Lutheran ministers have taken the Cynosure, but they have largely dropped it in deference to the anti-prohibition movement in their churches.

The most needful reform among the foreign-born peoples of Wisconsin is a higher appreciation of temperance as a part of Christianity, and a diminution of that exclusive spirit that separates them from Christian brethren. If Lutherans held and practiced the principles taught by Luther to a far greater extent, and if all Christians believed more fully in the great doctrine of justification by faith, there would be a far higher and better condition of Christian morality in the world. What we want to-day is another Reformation—a modern Luther, or a John the Baptist, "to prepare the way of the Lord." Experience shows that no active aggression can be made upon any one form of evil while we practice or countenance an evil that is equally manifest. These Lutheran churches will never make any headway against the lodge system so long as their members visit the saloons. Neither will the American churches ever effect anything in opposition to the liquor traffic so long as they endorse or consent to the lodge system. All men hold that other people shall be consistent.

The Christians of Wisconsin, of American origin, are not different from those of other States. The churches that testify on the lodge question are the Free Methodist, the Wesleyan, and the United and the Reformed Presbyterian, which are not numerous or influential.

H. H. HINMAN.

REV. WM. FENTON IN COLORADO AND UTAH.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 16, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The deacons, other members of the Baptist church at Colorado Springs, and the pastor's father are Freemasons, all sworn under penalty of death to forever conceal the truth from us. The pastor belongs to no secret society, but, of course, while he assumes as Christ's minister to place men of bad character in fellowship with Christ, he cannot believe the truth, and therefore he persists in saying that he knows nothing about Masonry, while he is hearing the truth about it. But it is manifest that if he knew God he would know the truth. He is a sample of the majority of the pastors that I meet with.

The United Presbyterians of that city rented me their church for the purpose of an Anti-masonic lecture. The notices of the lecture, posted by permission in conspicuous places in the city, were soon torn down. However, a few attended the lecture, in which the diabolism of Masonry and the base ingratitude of Masonry to Christ was exposed. The landlord of the hotel, who is a Baptist and a Mason, attended. In the morning, as he lifted my valise into the carriage to take it to the depot, he commented upon its weight, and inquired if it contained nuggets of gold; upon being informed that it contained books filled with what he had listened to last night, he said, "Such stuff is not worth carrying about." But Masonic, Odd-fellow, Knights of Pythias and other lodge libraries are filled with such stuff as that; and Masonic publishing houses do nothing but print such stuff as that to fill men's hearts with. The landlord wears his Masonic badge and advertises the Baptist church in his office, reminding us of the blacksmith who had his wife belong to one denomination while he belonged to another, so that he could get the blacksmithing from both denominations. It would seem that the devil thinks he has got title-deed in fee simple of Colorado Springs.

Proceeding on my journey westward, and stopping for the night at Salida, 7,000 feet or more above the level of the sea, I attended the Salvation Army meeting in the evening; and in the morning, at 4:40, we ascended still higher, to Marshall Pass, 10,856 feet above the sea. Pausing at the summit, no sooner had the train stopped than the snowsheds at a distance of about 50 feet in the rear of the train fell upon the track. The sublimity of this mountain scenery, that of the Royal Gorge, and the Black Canon, all between Colorado Springs and Grand Junction, on the Denver and Rio Grand railway, has often been described; but the few people scattered in these cold snowy regions are not to be envied for their homes. Doubtless, it is pleasanter to travel over these mountains in the summer time. Let those travel this way in the winter time who are compelled to, but not others.

Arriving at Grand Junction too late to make the connection to reach Salt Lake City before Sabbath-day, I tarried there. Grand Junction has a population of 3,000, and its elevation is 4,594 feet. The people here are proud of their future, for it is discovered that this extensive valley of desert-like appearance is capable, by irrigation, of producing the finest of fruit; the soil being a rich yellowish loam, regarded as the best of soil for fruit. The secret lodges here are so blended with the churches that it is difficult to say to which the people devote the most enthusiasm.

The W. C. T. U. has a small free reading-room. The seven saloons pay an annual license of $1,500 each. On last Saturday night 80 gamblers were arrested. On Sabbath evening the streets are dimly lighted, while the saloons are brilliantly illuminated with electricity. The gin-shop religions of the lodges are proverbially no barrier to the saloon traffic. The Baptist pastor invited me to a seat on the platform at the evening service, but he did not invite me to preach; while he himself belongs to no secret society, many of his members do, he tells me; and he may have feared that I should have testified against the lodges had opportunity been given. However, a good-sized audience assembled in the main street to hear me preach, and thus my own soul was freed, and it is hoped that God's word that was spoken to their souls will not be in vain.

Arriving in this city on Monday last, I stepped, yesterday, into the Mormon book-store to purchase a book. I inquired for a Mormon Bible. Joe Smith's book was placed in my hand. I asked the salesman, a middle-aged man, if Joseph Smith found all of that engraved on plates. This dupe of the devil told me that he did. Crossing the street, I entered the Mormon Tabernacle, in which seats are provided for 8,000, and 2,000 more find standing room. Its roof is a prolate semi-ellipsoid, with transverse and conjugate diameters, respectively 250 feet and 150 feet; it rests upon nothing but the vertical walls of the building. There is no impediment to the sound of the speaker's voice but the gallery, supported by smooth, round pillars, and the acoustic properties of the tabernacle are so near perfection that the dropping of a pin at one end may be heard at the other. The attendant, whose business seems to be to inform visitors, and to sell books and pictures relating to Mormonism, says that the huge organ, said to be the largest in the world, was built by Mormon mechanics within the walls of the tabernacle, and almost wholly of native material. He offered to sell me a photographic likeness of Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism. The most striking feature in the debased human physiognomy is the great, cunning eye, full of undisguised laciviousness. It inspires the feeling that such an one is just the tool for Satan and his unclean spirits to accomplish a great undertaking like Mormonism. It is said that this cunning false prophet submitted the plates which he professed to have found to the distinguished classical scholar, Professor Anthony, who, seeing at once that they were but senseless, unmeaning scratches, reported accordingly; but the cunning prophet made capital out of even that by saying that their meaning was too occult for the distinguished professor to decipher. The "Liberals" (i. e., Anti-mormons) now have control of the municipal government, but perceive the necessity of earnest effort to maintain it. And it seems to be conceded by the Liberals that it would be unwise to confer Statehood upon Utah Territory at present.

They say that when one leaves Mormonism he joins a secret lodge, which, of course, merely changes the form of devil-worship, Masonry being the bond of Mormonism. If the national integrity of a righteous nation is to be preserved, Mormonism must be destroyed. True liberty cannot be conserved and goodness maintained without righteous laws founded upon the Ten Commandments. W. FENTON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SOUTHERN BARBARITIES.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 14, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We are still in the midst of Southern barbarities and the prejudiced Negro secretists; yet our "God is able to deliver." It seems as if Southern barbarism is continually increasing.

Politics in Louisiana is pretty warm just now, but in the interior parts the Negro must be careful how he "walks on the cross"—i. e., speaks of politics. The Democrats have three State tickets: the McEnery, or pro-lottery; the Foster, or anti-lottery; the Tallahan, or people's ticket. The Republicans have two State tickets, both claiming to be anti-lottery: the Leonard, or anti-Administration, and the Breaux, or Administration—Federal. The Tribune is supporting the Breaux faction, with hope of a unit being formed before election.

I herewith hand you a copy of the Report of the Committee on Lotteries and Southern Barbarism, which was presented to the First District Baptist Association of Louisiana, which met in Algiers, La., Feb. 22 and closed on the 26th. The report was unanimously adopted.

The Association, at its last annual session, elected an out-and-out solid anti-secret ticket, as follows: President, Rev. John H. Flemings; Vice President, Rev. Charles W. Williams; Recording Secretary, Rev. Francis J. Davidson; Corresponding Secretary, Mr. Rushian Johnson; Statistical Secretary, Prof. Jones Henderson; Treasurer, Rev. Henry C. Green; Historical Secretary, Dr. S. T. Clanton; Historian, Rev. A. S. Jackson.

The writer preached the missionary sermon to fully 400 delegates and spectators, from Numbers 13: 30, "And Caleb stilled the people, and said, Let us go up at once and possess it" (the Land of Palestine), "for we are well able to overcome it." The lodge received its share during the discourse. After the sermon many were the cheers and handshakings that greeted me, which made us feel that though little agitation of the anti-secrecy reform is going on in our churches, still God has many yet who have never bowed to Baal. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ, F. J. DAVIDSON.

THE REPORTS OF THE COMMITTEES.

INTEMPERANCE.

The influence of strong drink, and the baneful effect of the saloon, have been sufficiently reported on, and recommendations sufficiently strong have been already presented by the special Committee on Temperance.

SOUTHERN BARBARITIES.

With shame it must be admitted that prejudice against us on account of our color, our previous condition, and our weakness consequent upon that condition, has made us the most oppressed people, all things considered, who live in any civilized land at the present day. We are shot at, whipped, drowned, hanged, and even inhumanly burned, upon every pretext. Wherever and whenever that feeling of prejudice rises high enough, and without cause waxes hot enough, to demand Negro life, we have had, with seldom redress, to make the offering.

We cry unto the better element of the white people of the South; we cry unto the respectable portion of the Southern press; we cry unto the white Christians and their pastors in the churches of the South; we cry unto the people all over this country; we cry unto God, "How long" shall these things continue to afflict us so sorely, to reflect upon civilization, and to prejudice heathen nations against the Christian religion, which is sent them by missionaries who go from this land wherein these barbarities are practiced upon the weak and defenseless.

We would urge upon our people the wisdom of being careful to observe the golden rule—to continue to be patient and forbearing, and yet, as men, to ever remember that our homes, our children and our wives are sacred trusts committed to us, to esteem, cherish and defend. Respectfully submitted. A. S. Jackson, chairman; H. C. Green, W. Bazile, J. L. Dennis, and Frank Davis, committee.

REPORT ON LOTTERIES.

Gambling is a vice in all its forms, in all places, under all circumstances. Whether it is the gaming of an individual who wishes to replenish his purse; or an institution of charity, or a Christian church, eager for money for current expenses, for building, or for missions; or whether it be a commonwealth, even our own Louisiana, seeking by a gigantic game of chance to meet the expenses of government, gambling is a vice. (See Luke 12: 31-34.)

We again insist that the attitude of this body remain as it has been for the past several years; that we uncompromisingly set ourselves against games of chance being introduced into the plans of raising moneys for our churches and benevolent objects; that during the remaining brief period over which the charter of the Louisiana State Lottery is yet to run, we do, as zealously as ever, discourage and discountenance the patronage of our people to the iniquitous concern by sermons, and by the same course of discipline in this matter which has been in force for the past years in our churches.

We recommend that in every effective and proper way we do all we can, to the end that that Red Dragon, which seems to be now cowed by the recent decision of the Federal Supreme Court, be driven out of the State, and prohibited, by strong preventive laws, from entering upon its work of ruin among us again.

Your committee respectfully submit the above. A. S. Jackson, chairman; H. C. Green, Frank Davis, Walter Bazile, J. L. Dennis, committee.

DISGRACEFUL PERFORMANCE IN A CHURCH.

COVENTRYVILLE, N. Y., March 3, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Thanks for your paragraph, "Is Piety Becoming Extinct?" in your issue of Jan. 28th. It drew forth a sermon from me "On Church Entertainments," on Feb. 7th. Imagine my mortification when I learned during the succeeding week that several members of the Y. P. S. C. E. were practicing a drama to be performed in my church. I at once notified one of the trustees that such desecration, if effected, would be instantly followed by my resignation; to no avail, however, for I enclose you a "bill of the play." The program is one fit for a common concert hall, but when we consider that a stage, with its accessories of scenery, orchestra, etc., is erected for its production; that (as I am informed) the play comprehends a murder and is bristling with profanity; a stranger might well ask, "Is this a house of God?"

As making matters worse, I may state that on the evening previous the weekly prayer meeting is held; on the Saturday following, a sermon preparatory for the Communion on Sunday in the church is preached. Language fails to afford words in which sufficiently to condemn such inconsistency. The theatre has ever held the opposite extreme from the church, both in its aims and its effects. The world of non-professors are ready with jibe and jeer, to condemn the attempt to unite such opposing forces. Can the Gospel succeed which has to be eked out in such a way? Are we to believe that in making a ladder to heaven God borrowed a stick from the devil's plantation? If souls are to be won for the kingdom, it will only be done by or through the purity of the Christian life. In the increasing encroachments of the worldly (sinful) desire for amusement in the church, the words of St. Paul in 2 Cor. 6: 14-18, are worthy of attention. Let our churches be kept pure and sacred if they are to be considered houses dedicated to God. Yours for the Gospel, J. F. GEDDES,

(meanwhile) pastor, as above.

[The "bill of the play" accompanying the above letter, announces "The popular drama, 'Under the Laurels,' at the First Congregational church, Coventryville, N. Y., Thursday evening, March 3d, '92, with a 'cast of characters' and a 'synopsis of scenery.'" Then follows: "Among the musical attractions of the evening will be vocal selections, banjo solos, by Mrs. E. B. M—, Mr. Linn E—. Grand concert by the Coventryville band at 7 o'clock; drama at 7:30. Admission, 25 cents; children, 15." The pastor will probably resign.—EDITOR.]

WAYSIDE NOTES.

GATHERED FROM ORIGINAL AND SELECT SOURCES.

AN APPEAL.

A colored minister of the Gospel, B. F. Berry, pastor of the New Hope M. B. church, in Van Buren, Ark., writes to us, desiring to have some kind Christian friends send him Spurgeon's or other equally instructive books for his private study. Like most of his class in the South, he is too poor to purchase these helps, but will gratefully accept all that may be sent to him. Second-hand, half-worn, or thrown-aside volumes will be thankfully appreciated.

WORDS OF WARNING.

Republican form of government in our great cities is a practical failure, and it was so admitted by the framers of the Illinois Constitution of 1870. If we ever lose our liberties it will come through the evil influences of municipal misrule. Large cities are not favorable for the raising of good men and women. If you want to see where we are drifting I ask you to go to Chicago and other great cities, and there you will find the climax. Just so certain as I stand here this government will fall. Great increase in wealth leads to luxury; luxury to weakness, and weakness to lapse.—Governor Fifer, of Illinois, at Joliet, Feb. 20, 1892.—[And this "lapse" will be largely due to the saloons and the secret lodges; 6,000 saloons and 1,200 lodges to 300 churches—and this is the proportion in Chicago to-day—is a fearful strain on any municipal government.—EDITOR.]

A RELIGIOUS WAR THREATENED.

If the "patriotic" secret societies keep on opposing Catholics when running for public office, for the sole reason that they are Catholics, we shall begin to vote against their friends for the sole reason that they are the candidates of the Know-nothings. We shall not be the first to introduce religion into politics, but if the issue is forced upon us, depend upon it we will defend our rights to the end of time.—Catholic Review, New York.

MASONIC "BENEVOLENCE."

"Only a few days ago, a heart-sick Mason, who had been ill, and had paid into the lodge about $800, in the past, but who, in his sickness, had fallen behind in his dues one payment, was dropped by his lodge. The die was cast, he was getting old, and this single lapse on his part gave them an excuse to get rid of him. In vain he offered to pay all arrearages, but they absolutely now refuse to accept his offer. His age is in favor of his early demise, and in a few years his insurance would have been due to his heirs. When he found they would not restore him to his lodge standing, owing to his lapse, he pleaded with them to give him back a little of his invested funds. But no; they had his money; in his poverty and dotage these benevolent brethren have no further use for him."—A correspondent, who knows the sufferer.

THE LODGE IN THE CHURCH.

The Dayton, Ohio, Christian Conservator learns from a correspondent in Ontario, that a Liberal from the United States said in Canada that the Central Ohio Conference had fifty ministers, and there is not a member of a secret society among them. The Conservator knows certainly of one of their number who is an Odd-fellow; and if the full list is wanted, address Rev. B. W. Mason, Junction City, Ohio, and the list of Liberals with their respective orders will be given.

LITERATURE.

The Arena for March opens with a "Battle Hymn of Labor," by Nellie Booth Simmons; followed by these other articles: Psychical Research—Some Interesting Cases, by Rev. M. J. Savage; Full-orbed Education, by Prof. Jos. Rodes Buchanan; The Three-fold Contention of Industry, by Gen. J. B. Weaver; Revelation Through Nature, by Henry Wood; The Alliance Wedge in Congress, by Hamlin Garland; Buddhism and Christianity, by Chas. Schroder; The Telegraph and Telephone Properly Parts of the Postoffice System, by Hon. Walter Clark, LL.D.; Madame Blavatsky in India, by William Q. Judge; The War of the Roses, by Will Allen Dromgoole; A Prayer of the Heart, by Julia Ann Wolcott; A Spoil of Office, by Hamlin Garland. Editorials: The Dead Sea of Our Nineteenth Century Civilization—I.; Uninvited Poverty; Behind the Deed the Thought; Book Notices. Illustrations in this number: Portraits of Gen. J. B. Weaver, Judge Walter Clark; Jerry Simpson, and eight Farmers' Alliance Representatives in Congress—John G. Otis, John Davis, Ben. H. Clover and William Baker, all from Kansas; O. M. Kem and W. A. McKeighan, from Nebraska; Thos. E. Watson, from Georgia; K. Halvorsen, from Minnesota. Published at Boston. Price $5, per annum.

The March issue of American Gardening has a fine frontispiece—a view in the gardens of Monte Carlo, at Monaco, illustrating "an account of a little world of evergreens and tropical plants in a limited corner." Another beautiful full-page engraving represents a thrifty multi-grafted Lady Banksin Rose-stalk in a Charleston (S. C.) Garden, illustrating the opening article—A South Carolina Rose Garden. Other leading papers, with numerous illustrations, are as follows: Taste and Tact in Arranging Home and Other Grounds, continued; Some Promising New Fruits—Pears and Apples; The Filmy Ferns; Wild Flowers for Town Gardens; Palms for House Culture; Growing Specimen Ferns; also the following horticultural and floral departments full of practical suggestions and instruction: Fruit and Vegetable Notes; Buds, Blossoms and Fruits; Comments by Readers; Dictionary of Seasonable Garden Work; Questions Asked and Answered; Current Garden Lore, Gathered World-wide, and Light from Societies; also papers on: "Hard-Stemmed Greenhouse Plants; An Experience in Electro-Horticulture; How to Make a Hot-bed; The Frost-Killing of Fruit Trees; Timber-Tree Planting," etc., etc. A charming number. New York: The Rural Publishing Co.

Ex-Postmaster-General James has written an article on "The Ocean Postal Service" for the April Century. Mr. James advocates a letter-rate of two cents an ounce for ocean-postage, and a reduction in the rate on international money-orders. He thinks this reform more needed than that of a lower rate of postage on domestic letters.

Senor Castelar's "Life of Columbus" and the series of papers on the architectural problems of the World's Fair will begin in the May Century.

LODGE NOTES.

[From secret society publications.]

The Khedive of Egypt, who died recently, was a noble of the Mystic Shrine.

There are forty Mystic Shrine bodies in foreign lands, and about sixty in the United States.

The Masons of Cedar Rapids contemplate the erection next year of the finest Masonic temple in Iowa.

Grand Secretary King, of Ontario, reports 492 sisters and 423 brothers in the eleven Rebekah Lodges of that jurisdiction.

The Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Pennsylvania is in its 97th year, and is the oldest Royal Arch grand body in the world.

Nearly 21 per cent of the 78,000 Master Masons under the Grand Lodge of New York are Royal Arch Masons, and nearly 12 per cent Knights Templar.

The Grand Lodge of Texas is raising a fund of $100,000 to establish a Masonic Home for Widows and Orphans. About $28,000 has already been secured.

Rev. J. T. Smith, of Kansas, formerly of Virginia, has an apron that was worn by George Washington when Master of his lodge. Another old Masonic apron is owned in Marion.

In 1890 there were in North America 651,028 Master Masons, 154,898 Royal Arch Masons and 84,923 Knights Templar. The percentage of Templars to Master Masons is 13. In 1880 it was nearly 9.

All true Freemasons put their trust in God, and they neither formally recognize nor have any communication with a rite that is ignorant of God and disloyal to his rule as Grand Architect of the Universe.—American Tyler.

The religion of Odd-fellowship is of great simplicity. It is religiousness rather than theology, and consists in the practice of moral truth and virtue, in a system of practical duties rather than in a system of speculative theological tenets.

At the regular monthly banquet of the Daughters of Rebekah of Eldorado, Kan., about forty people were poisoned by drinking coffee. All were taken sick. Two doctors administered medicine and to-day all are better and none of the cases will prove fatal. What the poison is or how it got in the coffee no one knows.

Bro. Evan Evans died in Burlington, Iowa, Jan. 12, 1892, in his 86th year. He was one of the signers of the petition for the first lodge in Iowa, organized at Burlington in 1840. Of the eight original members of that lodge but two now survive, Grand Secretary Parvin of Cedar Rapids, and Bro. William Thompson of Bismarck, North Dakota.

Bro. Gen. Wm. P. Innes, for many years the highly esteemed Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Michigan, and Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Correspondence, has just been honored by being elected Grand Master of Masons in Michigan. We congratulate the craft in Michigan, and also our able and excellent Bro. Innes.—Keystone.

To the Uniform Rank (military branch) Pythian Knighthood of the present owes its vitality, vigor, success, power, influence, and, in a general way, its permanency and prosperity. The Uniform Rank has brought to the order a constant flow of the bright, active young men of the country. It has been indeed a great factor in the promotion of the interests of Pythian Knighthood, and it should have its full credit.

Members of a subordinate lodge of Freemasons having recommended a political candidate in their fraternal capacity, the Grand Master wrote: "The occurrence gives me the opportunity to say that Masonry is non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-political, and must remain so. I shall arrest the charter of any lodge in this jurisdiction that, in its lodge capacity, lends its aid for or against any aspirant for a political office."

The recent Minnesota Grand Lodge of Masons passed the following constitutional amendment: Any lodge which shall knowingly receive or retain any man who

Did you ever see a sickly baby with dimples? or a healthy one without them?

A thin baby is always delicate. Nobody worries about a plump one.

If you can get your baby plump, he is almost sure to be well. If you can get him well, he is almost sure to be plump.

The way to do both—there is but one way—is by CAREFUL LIVING. Sometimes this depends on Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

We will send you a book on it; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 137 South 5th Avenue, New York.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

daily or habitually uses malt or distilled liquors or opium to excess, or who possesses any habit which has a tendency to impair one's mental or physical condition, or who has gained admittance through misrepresentation as to age or occupation, or is engaged or shall hereafter engage in the business of saloon-keeper or bar-tender, shall, on satisfactory proof, be deprived of its charter by the Grand Lodge, if in session, or by the Grand Master, if not in session.

It is not the extremes of heat and cold so much as the sudden changes in temperature that cause certain climates to be unhealthy. When, however, the system is invigorated with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, these changes are rarely attended with injurious results.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
10. A Pastor's Confession.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John G. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countermine, Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isalah Paris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 241 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 65¢ per dozen. Paper covers, 50¢; $4.00 per dozen. Picked in any quantity.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1892.

WANTED—A TEMPERANCE PARTY.

It is evident that a large proportion of both the Republican and Democratic parties, upon one of which, in the present order of things, will undoubtedly fall the choice of the next President of the United States, are opposed to prohibition, and consequently quite as friendly to the perpetuation of the saloon. That is to say, there are those in both parties, if not saloon-keepers or bartenders, who are liberal frequenters of the "sample-room" and bestow upon it their patronage and influence.

The bulk of both these parties oppose total abstinence and prohibition. The nearest that a large proportion of either of them ever comes to indorsing the temperance cause is in its advocacy of high license, which would never reduce the sale of intoxicating liquor one gallon, but would concentrate the traffic in the saloons of those who could pay the increased license. The less saloons, the greater the patronage secured to each.

The majority of those who belong to the several minor political parties are a mixed crowd which largely frequents the saloons; and if, through any influence, they can be induced to forsake their own factions, it is very likely that they would sooner take refuge in the Democratic stronghold. At present, the Republicans need expect but little aid and comfort from seceders from the labor parties, the socialists, the green-backers, the farmers' alliances, or the free coinage men; for they were formed to combat both of the most prominent parties.

Consequently the approaching Presidential campaign bids fair to be the usual hand-to-hand fight between the Republicans and Democrats, while the other factions may be counted, as heretofore, mere skirmishers in the field, ready to join either party that offers the most promising inducements. But the saloon party, if any, will probably get most of the deserters.

The prohibitionists, embracing the most earnest temperance workers, and having the purest object in view, cannot, under the circumstances, consistently support either of the other existing parties, and, alone, cannot yet hope to win in any general campaign. Therefore it is better that they should maintain an independent organization, untrammelled by any of the usual restrictions of party machinery, and vote and pray in behalf of their principles, waiting patiently for the time when, under God, those principles shall triumph, as they must, and the liquor traffic shall cease to curse the country.

But occupying this pure and earnest position, growing stronger daily in the hearts and influence of noble men and women, there may come a time when the Republican party shall seek a coalition with the prohibitionists; when the weakness of the dogma of high license shall be revealed, and the necessity of other and stronger principles shall become apparent; when it shall be found necessary to save the country from becoming a nation of drunkards, with all the horrors of that catastrophe visible to the most thoughtless—then the power of truth will be felt, and the work of prohibition performed to the satisfaction of those who are now laboring for that blessed end.

Such a coalition, without a compromise of principle, occurred when the old Whig party and the Free-soilers united their forces against Southern slavery. That coalition brought on the crisis and the arbitrament of war, but it brought slavery to an end. Now let the successors of that noble political combination, the Republicans, casting away their partisan prejudices, unite with the Prohibitionists, and a similar result in our social condition would be sure to follow. There would be, no doubt, another bloody struggle, but the saloon would "go," and with it the increasing evils which its present encroachments are bringing upon this nation.

We do not urge this coalition of Republicans and Prohibitionists. The offer of it must come from the former party. The Prohibitionists should continue to work upon their present lines of warfare, strong and independent in the right, sure, at last, to meet with divine and human approbation if they remain true to themselves and the cause which they have espoused.

But the Republicans should be able to see the benefits to be derived from such a change of policy, in the additional strength and grandeur to be derived from it.

One important advantage to be gained by this union of Republicans and Prohibitionists would be the accession to the ranks of the new party of all the anti-saloon people who now vote with the Democratic party, if they saw in the new party the elements of strength and victory for the temperance cause. The existing issues between the Democrats and Republicans are not vital as compared with the destruction of the saloon power—a measure which every interest of the nation now demands.

"PATRIOTIC ORDER SONS OF AMERICA."

Of this growing order, Edmond Ronayne, in a private letter, says: "It is the old 'United Order of Deputies' society. I look upon it as a sort of political club, and nothing more. We can all understand how that cunning, scheming system known as Romanism is putting forth every possible effort to destroy the public school system of this country, and to bring our educational institutions, if possible, under the control of Rome. It (Romanism) works in secret, and, of course, directly through politics. The Bible has been cast out through the influence of a Roman Catholic woman, and our schools are filled with Romish teachers. The priests are busy, through the confessional, and are untiring in their efforts to gain complete control of our school system; and Americans—native and otherwise—fully understanding this, have set themselves to work to circumvent, if possible, the Jesuitical scheming of this priestly power. They can only accomplish anything successfully through politics, and hence they are banded together under the name of the 'Patriotic Order Sons of America,' to oppose the unpatriotic and designing priesthood of Rome. Their object is to try and keep Catholics from gaining such offices, either national, State, or municipal, as would give them an opportunity to work out the destruction of our public schools and other cherished American institutions. They are all republican in politics, and thoroughly American (patriotic) in principle, while, opposed to them, is the Catholic power—democratic in politics and Romish in principle. Rightly considering that Romanism must be beaten at its own game, and partly by its own methods, they have organized republican clubs throughout the country, and, of course, from the very nature of the case, they must work with some degree of secrecy, to effect their objects. . . . God has been using various agencies for that purpose since the Reformation, and who knows but that here, in our own beloved republic, he is now using the P. O. S. A. to defeat the wicked scheming and popish trickery of the Mother of Harlots."

"INDEPENDENT ORDER OF CALANTHE."

An attentive correspondent in a Southern State sends us nearly all the constitution and part of the by-laws of a society bearing the above name. To us it is a new institution, about which we could wish to know more, and any information concerning its secret work will be thankfully received and printed. It has some connection with the Order of the Knights of Pythias, but, it would seem, remotely, as we gather from the documents before us.

The Supreme Grand Lodge of the World, K. of P., was organized at Washington, D. C., August 11, 1868.

The highest body of the Independent Order of Calanthe is a "Supreme Court," and Article I. of its constitution provides that "the meetings of Supreme Court shall be at the place and time of the bi-annual session of the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, N. A., S. A., E., A. A."

The elective officers of the Supreme Court consist of a Most Worthy Supreme Counsellor, a Supreme Worthy Inspectress, a Senior Directress, a Junior Directress, a Register of Deeds, a Register of Accounts, and a Receiver of Deposits, who are selected by ballot at each stated meeting. The membership of the Supreme Court consists of the foregoing officers, the delegates present (active members of subordinate courts) who participate in its organization, and all Deputy Supreme Counsellors, Worthy Counsellors, Worthy Inspectors, Worthy Inspectresses, Past Worthy Counsellors, and Past Worthy Inspectors of the subordinate courts under its jurisdiction. All the appointive male officers of the Supreme Court are brethren chosen by the Most Worthy Supreme Counsellor, and all the female appointees are sisters selected by the Most Worthy Supreme Inspectress at the time of their installation.

The Supreme Court is the source of all true and legitimate authority in the order, wherever established, and possesses original and exclusive jurisdiction and authority, as follows: To establish, regulate and control the forms, ceremonies, written and unwritten work, and to change, alter and annul the same, and to provide for the safe-keeping and uniform teaching and dissemination of the same; to provide, print and furnish all rituals, forms, ceremonies, cards, odes, charts and certificates; to prescribe the form, material and color of all regalia, emblems, jewels, and charts, and to designate the uniform of the order; to provide for the emanation and distribution of all pass-words, and to regulate the mode and manner of using the same, and generally to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to secure the safe and easy intercourse and identification of the brethren; to establish the order in States, districts, territories, provinces, or countries where the same has not been engrafted; to provide a revenue for the Supreme Court by means of a representative tax on each court and charges for supplies furnished by it and dues under its jurisdiction; to provide for annual and semi-annual returns from each court; to hear and determine all appeals from subordinate courts, when the same are properly brought before it, in accordance with the regulations of the order, and to provide by legislation for the enforcement of its decisions; to enact laws and regulations of general application to carry into effect the foregoing and all other powers reserved by this constitution to the Supreme Court or its officers, and such as may be necessary to enforce its legitimate authority over the subordinate courts under its jurisdiction.

Vacancies that occur, except in the offices of Most Worthy Supreme Counsellor and Most Worthy Supreme Inspectress, are filled by the Supreme Counsellor or Most Worthy Supreme Inspectress, as may be required.

Each subordinate court is represented in the Supreme Court by its Worthy Counsellor, Inspector and Inspectress, or their proxies, each being entitled to one vote.

A quorum for business in the Supreme Court consists of representatives from any three subordinate courts under its jurisdiction.

In the sessions of the Supreme Court the Supreme Chancellor of the Order of Knights of Pythias has the supervision of the arrangement of the altar, or any other necessary floor work, and attests all warrants and policies.

Further information concerning this secret order will be printed in future issues.

PRES. BLANCHARD TALKS TO STUDENTS.

President Chas. A. Blanchard, having been invited by the able Faculty of Union Park Congregational Seminary to lecture on the secret lodge, the lecture was delivered in the seminary chapel, on Friday evening last. It is notable that the invitation was tendered by a unanimous vote, and the event has considerable importance in the progress of the anti-secrecy reform.

We are told that there are a few Masons and Odd-fellows among the students, though it is hoped that none of them receives aid from the Educational Committee, as both the Triennial Convention and the State Congregational Association have declared against aiding of fraternal students into our pulpits with the churches' money. At first, two or three of these students talked of "staying away" from the lecture; but that Masonic argument was doubtless given up, for the chapel was filled.

Dr. E. P. Goodwin and a few other prominent gentlemen were present, and Mrs. Case, Mrs. E. A. Cook and several other ladies occupied seats among the audience.

The students listened with marked attention, and the applause at the close was very loud, cordial and prolonged.

Pres. Blanchard's speech at the Evanston Biblical Institute (Northwestern University) was published at the Cynosure office, and speedily sold out. This new address, we learn, is soon to be printed and given to the public. A large edition should find ready distribution. It was exceedingly able.

A CHAMPION OF ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Rev. W. C. Paden writes from Schaller, Iowa, March 14:

"I received, Saturday, word from Rev. L. Mendenhall, of Fairfield, Jefferson Co., this State, that an Odd-fellow lecturer has challenged them for a debate. He offers to pay all expenses, and threatens to publish them if they refuse. They have, of course, accepted the challenge. The following is the statement of the question: 'Resolved, That Odd-fellowship is a Christian institution, and therefore in no way conflicts with the church of Christ, in its spirit or practice, or the duties of American citizenship.'"

The probability is, the fellow will back down at the show of opposition, and the debate be lost to the world.

A BLIND LEADER OF THE BLIND.

A Miss Sullivan, teacher in the Massachusetts School for the Blind, gives a little girl's, Helen Keller's, questions to the Boston Globe, and asks clergymen and others to answer them—such as: "Who made God?" "How do we know we have a soul?" etc.

This Miss Sullivan, a Christian (?) teacher in a Boston charitable institution, says that she has told her blind pupil "not to think of God as a person," and has not "allowed her to read the Bible, lest it should give her erroneous conceptions of God!" Some of the answers gathered by the Globe employ the common infidel cant of giving the name of "Calvinism" to the teachings of future retribution in the Bible, because it seems safer to sneer at a man than at the Bible. Dr. A. A. Miner, a hereditary Universalist, gives manly and Christian answers; and Dr. Meredith, originally a Methodist, writes Scripture and good sense. Several divines justly speak of poor Miss Sullivan as unfit to teach a little blind child. J. B.

—"Remember the sabbath (seventh) day, to keep it holy." All that this divine command requires is the observance of every seventh day to keep it holy, and the great majority of earnest Christians are obedient to it. The heathens called it Sunday, but with the true Christian it is the "Lord's day," and consecrated his worship.

—By a curious oversight, or a more singular association of ideas, the latest Missionary Review of the World prints the following paragraph among its items of "organized missionary work and statistics:" "More than 2,000,000 barrels of beer were brewed in Milwaukee last year." But it must be acknowledged that this item is certainly a plea for more active home mission effort.

—A correspondent favors us with information that Rev. Smith Baker, of Minneapolis, Minn., a prominent speaker at the recent Congregational gathering at the Auditorium in this city, when a resident of Lowell, Mass., was a great Masonic light. Perhaps a greater light has since illumined him, beside which the tallow-dip of the lodge altar seems dim and contemptible. Let us hope so.

—There are not only noon prayer meetings held at 221 West Madison street daily, in the committee-room of the N. C. A., but also evening meetings, at which old and young—Hebrew and Gentile—have found Jesus as their Saviour. The evening meetings are under the direction of Mr. R. A. Torrey, superintendent of the Moody Institute, who is in hearty sympathy with the objects of the N. C. A. The noon meetings are also frequently full of interest, and are led by various evangelists.

—A veteran reformer and subscriber, H. N. Waldo, of Arcade, N. Y., writes to us as follows: "I am now past eighty-six years old; voted against slavery as soon as there was any ticket of the kind to vote, and have lived, contrary to my expectation, to see slavery done away; but so long as ministers of the Gospel, and a large majority of professed Christians, vote with the Democratic and Republican parties, I do not expect to see the alcohol curse done away. We have, I think, nearly one hundred male members of Protestant churches, and the largest vote we have ever received directly against King Alcohol was 19. When will Christians learn to vote as they pray? How inconsistent it looks to hear professors talk temperance and vote with rum parties." We commend to our old friend a careful perusal of the editorial in another column, "Wanted—A Temperance Party." Such an organization is neither impossible nor inconsistent with the necessities of the times.

—The Christian Conservator tells of a man in eastern Ohio, who wished to build a barn. He had heard of the Masons, and in the innocence of his heart applied to some of them to erect the building, but found, to his surprise, that they were not that kind of Masons. Which reminds us that the Freemasons laid the corner-stone of the old Chicago Chamber of Commerce with their usual hifaluting ceremonies, but so stupidly that the practical masons were obliged to relay it before proceeding with the superstructure. The Freemasons are only good as "boss" builders.

—Are the readers of the Cynosure all supplied with review reading? There is but one monthly magazine in the United States devoted to reform, and that is Our Day, published at 161 La Salle street, Chicago, by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Joseph Cook and Miss Frances E. Willard head the editorial corps of this powerful publication. He has lectured on both sides of our globe, and she is the president of a union which surrounds it. The March number resembles "a sea of glass mingled with fire." No person who reads a review should be without it.

—The Christian Standard (Cincinnati) notifies its readers that it has recently "received a large invoice of baptismal pants." Aside from the bad grammar of calling India-rubber trousers "pants," one can hardly help asking what sort of pantaloons did John the Baptist wear when he baptized in Jordan, or the apostles, when they baptized 3,000 in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost? It may be all right to wear water-proof "baptismal pants," but it is a custom without scriptural precedent, and on a par with several other remarkable innovations of the modern church.

—The manager of a denominational publishing house at the East makes public his experience with a printers' union which attempted to interfere with the affairs of his office. The appointed functionary of the union asked the printers of the concern if they were union men, and when told that they were not, he ordered them to join the order within a given time or vacate their positions. Then the controlling spirit of the office appeared on the scene, and also received a similar command in behalf of his men from the lodge deputy. The answer was summary, and consisted of an open door and an urgent invitation to depart without standing on the order of his going. He went—and returned no more. The lodge was foiled.

—One of the professors at Wheaton College, speaking of the recent improvements made in the laboratory of that institution at the expense of the junior class, remarks that the new appliances are superior to those presented in the Bunson Laboratory at Heidelberg, Germany, where he was educated. This is gratifying testimony to the enterprise and commendable emulation of the students. The rooms in the east building of the college are fast approaching completion, and the entire building will soon be ready for occupation. The alterations appear to be in every way satisfactory to all concerned. It is hoped that the opening of the spring term will find this excellent institution enjoying the full tide of prosperity which it deserves.

—Unless one is very careful, when referring to "Old John Brown of Osawatomie," there is likely to be a good deal of confusion evolved. A correspondent of the Inter-Ocean writes: "There has been an error of long use in referring to Old John Brown of Harper's Ferry fame, as 'Osawatomie Brown.' There were two John Browns in Kansas. One, Old John Brown, who lived on the Pottawatomie, seven miles southwest of Osawatomie, and John Brown, a nephew, who lived in and kept hotel in Osawatomie, and to distinguish them apart he was spoken of as Osawatomie Brown and the famous Abolitionist as Old John Brown. I went to Kansas from St. Louis in 1857, and was told that Osawatomie Brown was on the boat and was very anxious to see him, but was told of the difference between the two. I also afterward stopped at the hotel kept by Osawatomie Brown in Osawatomie, Kan. I do not know as it makes much difference, but I thought I would let you know as a matter of history that there were two John Browns, and that the famous Old John Brown was not Osawatomie Brown." So it would seem that it is "Pottawatomie Brown" whose soul is still marching on. Verily, we live and learn.

—"Grandma Gilbert," of Oakland, Ill., writes to the Christian Standard, Cincinnati, Ohio, as follows: "I see in last week's Standard, in Bro. B. B. Tyler's New York Letter, about George Washington being immersed by John Gano. I have printed evidence of R. M. Gano, the great grandson of John Gano. He was living in Dallas, Texas, three years ago. He says his great grandfather, John Gano, baptized General Washington in the Potomac river. John Gano was chaplain in the Revolutionary war. He convinced George Washington that immersion was scriptural. He was the founder of the Baptist church in New York City. Washington and family were identified with the Episcopal church. He never severed his connection with that church." The item is one of more interest than importance; and if Washington was immersed, the event was in entire harmony with the practices of the Episcopal church, which leaves the mode of baptism to be selected by the individual upon whom the rite is conferred. It would not affect his standing in the church.

—In a recent sermon preached by Rev. J. L. Riley at Cynthiana, Ind., he used the following language: "Secret orders, or societies, have had their enemies, or opposers, who have not been slow to prefer grave charges, and these charges, when sifted, have amounted to mere quibbles, as a rule. One charge has been that they were planning the overthrow of our government, while the facts have proved the contrary." Mr. Riley is a Cumberland Presbyterian pastor. It has been conclusively shown by ex-Pres. Blanchard, in a previous volume of the Cynosure, that the Southern Rebellion was instigated in the secret councils of Masonic societies. Benedict Arnold, the greatest traitor of the Revolutionary war, was made a Mason at New Haven, April 18, 1765, R. W. Whiting being then Master of the lodge. And it is a matter of history that the Knights of the Golden Circle, which was a semi-military order, with oath-bound obligations and secret machinations, was among the worst foes with which the North had energetically to contend, on account of its sneaking methods.

—We are in receipt of the seventh annual catalogue of the course of study of the North American Normal University of Fostoria, Ohio, of which Alfred N. Kelly is the president. The spring term began on the 15th instant, with seventy-five students. The curriculum comprises penmanship, commercial instruction, shorthand, telegraphy, type-writing, common English branches, teachers' courses, science, liberal arts, Bible study, elocution and oratory, fine arts, and music. The college of Bible study is unique, and its design is to fit young men and women, free of charge, for active evangelical work. The intention is to afford every facility for a thorough knowledge of the Holy Bible as the Word of God and the only sure foundation of practical and spiritual Christianity. Mr. Kelly, who visited this office last week, is an earnest opponent of secret societies, and relates a most gratifying experience in this connection. The young men attending the commercial course, and perhaps others in the university, had been invited, from time to time, to unite with the secret orders in the town, but through the instructions of Mr. Kelly had been restrained. The lodge men, incensed, sent the president notice that if he kept up his opposition to the lodge, his school would lose heavily in patronage. Undeterred by these threats, he continued to lecture against the oath-bound secret fraternities, full of faith in God and the success of his work; and the result was an increased number of students at the next term. Religious services are held at the university twice each day, and a successful revival among the students was traced to these meetings.

THE HOME.

GOODNESS AND MERCY SHALL FOLLOW.

Pass over the mountains before thee,
Fear not, for God's kindness is o'er thee.
Though the path may be rough,
His strength is enough;
Listen not to a coward heart's pleading,
Be sure of the Spirit's wise leading,
Do thy duty, and be at thy best,
For God will take care of the rest,
And goodness and mercy shall follow.

Take the task that beside thee is lying,
It waits for thy strenuous trying;
Though it tax all thy skill
It will yield to thy will;
The brave heart is conqueror ever,
Then make but an earnest endeavor,
And do what the Master commands
With leal heart and diligent hands,
And goodness and mercy shall follow.

Speak the word that God gives to be spoken,
Break the bonds that God says shall be broken,
Nor shrink from the fight
To be fought for the right.
Obey him with true loyal meekness,
But hinder no cause by thy weakness.
Have faith, and work on to the last,
Let all doubtings remain with the past,
And goodness and mercy shall follow.

So often his help has been given,
So near is the present to heaven,
That no space for fears
Has been left by the years.
So, cheerily facing the morrow,
Go forward to joy or to sorrow;
The God who has blessed all thy days
Will be with thee in all the new ways,
And goodness and mercy shall follow.

—Marianne Farningham.

TWO PLAIN SISTERS.

One of our young sisters, who has spent a good deal of time and means adorning her mind and soul with gems of truth and usefulness, has been canvassing in some of our cities. We had the opportunity of reading a letter she wrote to one of her friends at this place. For the benefit of those who think they might as well be out of the world as to be out of fashion, we quote the following from her letter:

"Well, I wondered and wondered, before I started out, what people would think of me for dressing the way I do. I have been convinced since I am here that I have had as much respect, yes, more, shown me on account of my plain dressing than I would have received otherwise.

"One lady, after looking at my articles, said, 'Yes, I like them very much, but I like your bonnet better.' She said it was so neat and pretty. I asked her if she knew why I wore that kind of a bonnet? and she said 'No.' I said, 'The church to which I belong believes in plainness and uniformity, and we all wear that kind of bonnets and dress plainly.' The lady said, 'I get so tired of fashionable dressing and other things that society demands of people these days, and wish I could get away from it somewhere.' I talked with her a few moments, and she said she felt she had had a good little visit with me and thanked me for it.

"At another house, one of the finest in this town, the lady told me before I left, that she didn't usually admit agents, but my personal appearance was so different from most agents that she thought she would invite me in. She gave me her order, too.

"Sometimes silly young girls, who think themselves 'some,' but who are far from real ladies, will stare and chew gum and snicker. Such things are not pleasant, of course, but I don't care, for I think the poor things do not know any better. I tell you I believe if we stick to plainness, with neatness and cleanliness along with it, we are going to gain in the end. I think our church is the one church destined to carry out the truth of the Bible till the end of time. I hope I may always be an humble and faithful member of our church."

This reminds us of an intelligent young sister who, some years ago, received an invitation to a very fashionable wedding in an aristocratic family. At first thought it occurred to her that it would never do to attend the wedding in her plain attire, and she resolved not to go. But she finally decided that she would go, attired neatly and plainly, as becometh women professing godliness, and take her religion with her. She was kindly received and pleasantly entertained. The well-cultured guests—though in the height of fashion themselves—tried not to embarrass the young sister by staring at her, but labored to make her feel welcome. When the hour came for the vote of "honor," this sister was surprised to hear her name announced as the one elected. She was then led to the table, and occupied the seat of honor in harmony with Luke 14:10, which says: "But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher."

The sister returned to her home, feeling fully persuaded in her own mind that plain, neat Christian attire, accompanied by intelligence and good manners, was no hindrance in good society.—J. H. M., in Gospel Messenger.

A CHILD'S FAITH.

In a town of Holland there lived a very poor woman. One night her children asked her in vain to give them bread, for she had none. The poor woman loved the Lord, and knew that he was good; so with her little ones around her, she earnestly prayed to him for food. On arising from her knees, the eldest child, a boy about eight years old, said softly: "Dear mother, we are told in the Holy Book that God supplied his prophet with food brought by the ravens."

"Yes, my son," the mother answered, "but that was a very long time ago."

"But, mother, what God has done once, may he not do again? I will go and unclosethe door to let the birds fly in."

Then dear little Dirk, in simple faith, threw the door wide open, so that the light of their lamp fell on the path outside.

Soon after, the burgomaster (a magistrate or one employed in the government of the city) passed by, and seeing the light, paused, and thinking it very strange, he entered the cottage and inquired why they left the door open at night.

The widow replied, smiling: "My little Dirk did it, that the ravens might fly in to bring bread to my hungry children."

"Indeed!" cried the burgomaster; "then here is a raven, my boy; come to my home, and you shall see where bread may soon be had."

So he quickly led the boy along the street to his own house, and then sent him back with food that filled his humble home with joy.

After supper, little Dirk went to the open door, and looking up he said, "Many thanks, good Lord," then shut it fast again; for though no bird had come, he knew that God had heard his mother's prayer and sent them timely help.—Sabbath Reading.

TWENTY-FOUR GOLDEN RULES.

Some one has prepared the following rules for boys and girls, which is certainly worthy of very careful study. The young readers will find it very profitable to cut out these rules and put them where they can be often read. With an earnest and persistent effort to obey them there is no doubt but they will tell favorably on their future lives. Some of the eminent men of the past in early life adopted such rules, to which in after-years they attributed, in a large measure, their great success. I am sure at least of this, no one ever adopted and followed carefully rules like the following whose life was a failure. Success in its truest sense is doing right, and no one succeeds really who does not do right. I shall never know the number of boys and girls who will cut out these rules and carefully put them away in some book or drawer with the resolution that they shall be the rules of their lives. But I do know that there is One whose eye watches over all who will know and his blessings rest upon every one who sincerely endeavors to follow these golden precepts. Then, too, in keeping them to the best of your ability you will know that the smiles of heaven are upon you. Here are the rules:

1. Respect and obey your parents.
2. Love your brothers and sisters sincerely.
3. Never speak evil of one another.
4. Never strike, nor lie, nor cheat, nor steal.
5. Be strictly honest, even in the smallest matters.

6. Save what you can, so that you may be able to give to the poor.

7. Do not mock the deaf, the lame or the blind.

8. Always address the aged with proper respect.

9. Do not soil or injure your clothes.

10. If you find anything, return it to the owner.

11. Avoid the company of bad children or companions.

12. Never be cruel to any living thing.

13. Do not covet what is not your own.

14. Try to improve at school every day.

15. Guard against low and vulgar language.

16. Eat with thankfulness whatever is set before you.

17. Never chew nor smoke tobacco or other narcotics or drink any intoxicating drinks.

18. Be exact in your behavior at all times.

19. Put your clothes and playthings in their proper places.

20. Avoid eating any kinds of unripe fruit.

21. Always answer distinctly, correctly, and modestly.

22. Shun all kinds of gaming as great evils.

23. Become the young disciples of Jesus Christ.

24. Pray daily to God, and by your service praise his holy name.—Religious Telescope.

WHY, JESUS IS WITH YOU.

Many years ago a poor German emigrant woman sat with her children in the waiting-room of an Eastern station. A lady passing to a train, struck by her look of misery, stopped a moment to speak with her. The story was soon told. Her husband had been buried at sea. She was going to Iowa, and "it was hard to enter a strange world alone with her babies." The stranger had but one instant. She pressed a little money into the poor creature's hand. "Alone?" she said; "why, Jesus is with you! He never will leave you alone." Ten years afterward the woman said: "That word gave me courage for all my life. When I was a child, I knew Christ and loved him. I had forgotten him. That chance word brought me back to him. It kept me strong and happy through all my troubles."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

USELESS LIVES.

How useless our lives seem to us sometimes! and how we long for an opportunity to perform some great action! We become tired of the routine of home life, and imagine we would be far happier in other scenes. We forget that the world bestows no titles as noble as father, mother, sister or brother. In the sacred precincts of home we have many chances of heroism. The daily acts of self-denial for the good of a loved one, the gentle word of soothing for another's trouble, the care of sick, may all seem as nothing; yet who can tell the good they may accomplish? Our slightest word may have an influence over another for good or evil. We are daily sowing the seed which will bring forth some sort of a harvest. Well will it be for us if the harvest will be one we will be proud to garner. If some one in that dear home can look back in after-years, and, as he tenderly utters our name, say, "Her words and example prepared me for a life of usefulness; to her I owe my present happiness," we may well say, "I have not lived in vain."—National Presbyterian.

SOUR PEOPLE.

Sour people not only have a hard time in getting through the world themselves, but they make it hard for other people.

The more sour people profess to have religion, the harder they make it for the Lord to reach those who have much to do with them.

Sour people who claim to be Christians make sinners think that the Lord is opposed to anybody having a very good time in this world.

Sometimes people are sour because they have just enough religion to make them miserable, and not enough to make them happy, and sometimes they are born that way.

Sour people are very often made more so by brooding over their troubles, and thinking only of themselves and their disappointments, instead of meditating upon the goodness of God and his unfailling kindness.

Sour people ought to remember that a "merry heart doeth good like a medicine; but a broken spirit drieth bones."

Nothing can so quickly take the bitterness out of the heart and put a smile on the face that will keep sweet in any climate as to become well acquainted with the Lord Jesus Christ.

An insane man turned loose with a shotgun would not do as much harm as some people do with bitter hearts and long faces.—Christian Guardian.

LITTLE SERVICES.

I cannot do great things for Him
Who did so much for me;
But I should like to show my love,
Dear Jesus, unto thee;
Faithful in very little things,
O Saviour, may I be.

There are small things in daily life
In which I may obey,
And thus may show my love to thee;
And always, every day,
There are some little words
Which I for thee may say.

There are small crosses I may take,
Small burdens I may bear,
Small acts of faith and deeds of love,
Some sorrow I may share,
And little bits of work for thee
I may do everywhere.

—Anonymous.

TEMPERANCE.

THE MONEY SIDE OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

In any of the established departments of trade, in ordinary buying and selling, there should be an equal exchange. To this rule there may be many exceptions, such as auction sales and numerous special bargains, but the statement is one which will hold good in every application which I propose to make. For instance, you go to a dry-goods store and purchase five yards of black cloth, for which you pay five dollars. You now put down all the items of value:

1. The raw material.
2. The bringing of the raw material into its present condition.
3. The privilege of obtaining a small quantity.
4. The time, risks, abilities, and responsibilities of the merchant.
5. Any other items which may exist.

These, added together, should make exactly five dollars. But suppose that after giving to every item its full value, you only have four dollars, and that you have paid one dollar without receiving anything in return. Suppose the merchant knew that this was the case, that he deliberately put your dollar into his drawer without giving you anything for it; then you have a right to conclude that you have been cheated. If this merchant constantly acts in this way; if for every five dollars received, he only gives back four, he is certainly constantly guilty of defrauding his customers. If the dry-goods dealers in your town so transact their business that they take one dollar of every five which they receive from the people, and willfully agree among themselves that for it the people shall receive nothing in material, labor, risks, time, responsibilities, or in anything else, then the dry-goods business in your town turns out to be a serious imposition. Should this practice pervade the trade throughout the country, I think there would be no difficulty in convincing any reasonable person that, conducted in such a manner, it was an enormous swindle, and that something should be done to bring about a change.

What has been said of the dry-goods business, is equally true of the grocery business, the flour business, or the furniture business. Why should it not be true of the liquor business? Why should the grocer be called a thief when he charges one dollar for an article knowing that all the items represented in it can only aggregate fifty cents, while the saloon-keeper across the street, who is doing far worse, passes for an honest man? The rule which I have named ought to test the liquor business as well as any other, and tested by this rule, who will pretend to say that this traffic is not proved to be a gigantic fraud?

Here is a mechanic who works hard for six days, and on Saturday he receives fifteen dollars for his labor. With this he can get food and clothing for himself and family; but instead of going to the butcher or to the tailor, he goes to the tavern, and within the space of three hours he hands over to the tavern-keeper all he earned during the week. What does he get in return? Why is it that the man who stands behind the bar and who twirls the glasses, can take this money which represents days of hard toil? Does he possess some unusual talent which makes his time a hundred-fold more valuable than the time of the mechanic? Or, is there in the article he sells some peculiar value which renders it extremely costly? Put down every item of value which in any way may become connected with the intoxicating beverages which are given for this money. Make the most liberal allowance. If you choose to do so, you may look at the transaction as merely a matter of dollars and cents, but will you pretend to believe that this mechanic has not been cheated?

In the city of New York there were nine thousand liquor saloons, receiving, on an average, twenty dollars a day. This made the total average daily receipts one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. In a Western town, seven hundred dollars in new bills, which were so marked that they could be recognized, were paid to a number of workmen on Saturday night, and it was discovered that more than half of these same bills were deposited in the banks by the saloon-keepers before noon of the following Monday. Did the men who paid these amounts to the saloons get any equivalent in anything? Putting the very lowest estimate upon the work of the men and the very highest estimate upon what they received, can we by any legitimate process escape the conclusion that these saloon-keepers were a set of swindlers?

In one of our large cities, on one side of the street, within the space of about a quarter of a mile, I counted nineteen saloons, all apparently doing a thriving business. Probably there were as many on the other side of the street. Do the men who enter these places with their money in their pockets come out with anything which equals what they took in? And when we look, not simply at one street, but all over the city, over the State, and over the entire nation, what do we see? Supposing there is nothing more than an exchange of money and rum, is there not enough robbery even in this to brand the traffic as an outrage upon humanity, and to cause every one who believes in honest dealing to strike a blow which will help to destroy the abomination?

But the paying of money is only a very little part, and as long as our eyes are forced to look upon scenes of blood, and as long as our ears must hear the last wails of murdered souls, one might wonder that we should refer to it at all.—Rev. J. T. Michael.

TOTAL PREACHERS.

That so considerable a proportion of the ministry have become total abstainers is no less creditable to themselves than gainful to the community. We say this quite irrespective of the question as to whether total abstinence is or is not an extreme and abnormal human condition. Ministers and others actively engaged in religious and philanthropic work have to deal not so much with the healthy as with the diseased conditions of society, and it is for them to consider whether, in the effort to bring back the sunken and lost portions of the human brotherhood to whom they are especially sent, they are not called upon to make this sacrifice, and to assume what may seem to them an extreme position in order that they may, from its vantage ground, the better help those who are in extreme need.—Modern Church.

THE SLAVERY OF DRINK.

The terrible domination of intemperance and its evil effects are drawing attention in various parts of Europe. Our London correspondent gives the following: "One of the leading daily papers in London has opened its columns to the discussion of 'The slavery of drink,' and twenty letters are appearing in each issue upon the great national transgression. No one has attempted to justify the traffic; a few say they know how to drink; and that moderation is wise. But the burden of the advice is upon the remedies of the evil, and the overwhelming weight of the argument condemns drinking. One writer alleges that drinking is undoubtedly a disease, affecting the mind and the body, while another denies it is any more a disease than smoking, and that it is the habit that produces the disease. The drink and its component parts are severely handled. One writer declares that he knows a licensed house in London where the proprietor pays at the rate of one dollar and twenty-seven cents per gallon for sherry, and retails it at six dollars and fifty cents per gallon, giving him a profit of over four hundred per cent gross."—Presbyterian Observer.

DRINKING AMONG WOMEN.

One of the recent incidents in connection with the police records of this city, was the arrest of two elegantly dressed young women, costumed in silks and sealskins, who were intoxicated and disorderly on Broadway. They were accompanied by a well-dressed young man, and the three went into a well-known Broadway restaurant, and when the waiters refused to serve them in their condition, one of the young women tipped over a table loaded with china and silver. They were taken to the police station on West 30th street, escorted by four policemen and a large crowd of people. Their residence was given as Jersey City, and one of the young women had fifty dollars in bills in her pocketbook. It was said of them that both the women were married, and that they were near relatives of a prominent city official. With so much drinking as is still prevalent in so-called respectable social circles, it is not surprising that women as well as men become the victims of the drink habit with all the degradation which it involves. It is time for somebody to lead in an old-fashioned total abstinence revival, thus to stay the tide which is now bearing so many of both sexes to ruin.—New York Paper.

The pledges to the national fund of the Prohibition party amounts now to over $1,060 per month.

The Prohibitionists of Michigan will hold their convention at Grand Rapids, March 17th and 18th. Chairman Dickie is expected to be there.

Look not on the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup; when it moveth itself aright. "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

Some of the postmasters appointed by Wanamaker in Wisconsin are also saloon-keepers, and the postoffices are in some instances kept in the same room with the bar.

Chauncey M. Depew used to smoke twenty cigars a day, but finding it injurious to his health he quit the use of tobacco entirely. It is not too late for others to try the experiment.

In Nebraska, under high license, the beer consumption has increased since 1880 from 40,000 barrels to 108,000. In Kansas, under prohibition, it has decreased from 32,000 to 16,000 barrels.

The Chairman of the State Committee of the State of Illinois has apportioned the work of getting signatures to the Million Voters' Agreement among the counties. They expect to get 92,000 signatures.

Judge Tainter, of Hartford, Conn., decided that wholesale liquor-dealers located outside the State cannot sell liquor in Connecticut without taking out a license in each county where the liquor is sold.

The Scottish Temperance League directors, in view of the approaching general election, have resolved, in co-operation with other national temperance associations, to hold a national temperance convention early this year.

Illinois is said to be the stronghold of the whiskey power. The internal revenue collections of this State for the year ending in June were more than twice that of any other State—New York yielding $16,565,522, while Illinois paid $38,464,312.

Of the 90,207 arrests in New York City last year, according to the police reports, not less than 50,000 were attributable to the liquor traffic. Nearly 40,000 were directly credited to the traffic by the police. And the records also showed that crime of all kinds kept increasing in that city faster than the population.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE PSALMS AND DANIEL.

LESSON I.—Second Quarter, 1892.—April 3.

SUBJECT.—The Way of the Righteous.—Psalm 1: 1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.—Psalm 1: 1.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The blessing of the righteous.—v. 1. This may have been intended as a preface to the book of Psalms; it is certainly an epitome of its general teachings. We have no clue to the date when it was written, as the psalms are not placed in chronological order. It may have been one of the first that David wrote; it may have been one of the last. We can imagine him, when a hunted outlaw, finding solace in this beautiful composition; and, with even more likelihood, we can think of it as the product of his old age, when a life's experience had taught him how hollow and false is all worldly prosperity that has not its root in God. This beauty depends upon three conditions: (1.) Not walking in the counsel of the ungodly. Many people think this has reference only to taking the advice of the notoriously wicked, but it has a much broader application. To be conformed to the world so as to order our life by the world's customs and opinions instead of our own conscience and the Word of God, is to "walk in the counsels of the ungodly," just as surely, if not to such a degree, as if we took an infidel for our bosom friend. One sharp line separates the saint and the sinner, and we cannot choose our friends from the ranks of the neutrals any more than we can ourselves be neutral. This is a point not sufficiently thought of. They who listen to the voice of worldly prudence and compromise principle, are walking in the counsel of the ungodly; and it must be remembered that such counsel is most dangerous when it comes in this subtle and specious form. (2.) Nor standeth in the way of sinners. One who puts himself in the way of evil, fancying that he is strong enough to resist it, will be swept on with the tide. This is one of the objections to secret societies. To join them is to stand in the way of sinners. Infidels, saloon-keepers, vile and licentious men, are found more or less in all oath-bound orders. It has often been asked, "Can a Christian be a Mason?" Whether we answer yes or no, it is plain that he is in a very dangerous place when he calls such men "brothers," and swears to keep their criminal secrets, for this is surely to stand in the way of sinners. (3.) Nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. The road from God is always downward. It is first walking. He is on the move and can as easily go one way as another. Then he stands in the way of sinners, showing an increased delight in their company. Then he makes his deliberate and permanent choice and sits down with the scornful. He only is safe who shuns the first beginnings of evil by making the Bible instead of the world "the man of his counsel."

2. Characteristics of the righteous man.—vs. 2, 3. Delight in God's law is always a mark of his true children. A loving son will delight in reading over a letter from his absent father, which to strangers would possess very little interest. The Christian "meditates" in that law. The Bible is to him the Book of books, outweighing in interest, as well as importance, every other. "He shall be like a tree;"—not a dead fossil, but a living, growing thing. "Planted;"—rooted and grounded in the soil of God's Word, not carried about by divers and strange doctrines. "By the rivers of water." This means "canals for irrigation." By keeping his heart continually open to every spiritual influence, he is like a tree planted in well-watered soil; even the drouth does not affect it. So periods of spiritual drouth, which shrivels and dries up a superficial experience, will not affect the Christian who is daily nourished by prayer and the reading of God's Word. "He bringeth forth his fruit." Being in the Spirit he will bring forth the fruits of the Spirit. "In his season;" not always the same, but a variety of fruit adapted to different periods. Sometimes it is peace, sometimes joy, sometimes long-suffering under injuries, sometimes patience in trial; but never will the Master come seeking fruit and find none. " whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." This may not be always plain to the eye of sense. The righteous man often has to suffer financially for the sake of principle; but he is the child of a King. If earthly riches are denied him, he has treasure laid up in heaven. He is Christ's, and all things are his.

3. The curse of the ungodly.—vs. 4-6. Here we have the opposite picture. "The ungodly are not so;"—neither in their present condition, nor as regards their future lot, is there any point of resemblance. They are like the useless chaff scattered to the winds as soon as touched by the blast of death. Their place on earth will know them no more forever, and their names have never been recorded in the Lamb's book of life. "Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment," no matter how learned, or how great, or how wealthy he may be, or how much the world may think of him. "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous." "I know my sheep, and am known of mine." He will attend to and provide for all their wants, while "the way of the wicked shall perish." Their plans will be disappointed, their schemes brought to naught.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—Rev James Spurgeon, who was co-pastor at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, in London, it is understood, will continue his relation there while Dr. Pierson will be the preacher till his return to this country in June.

—At the new Chicago University there will be four quarters, each consisting of two terms, six weeks in each term. A student will be allowed to choose any two terms in the year for his vacation.

—An illustration of the world-wide influence of Mr. Spurgeon is found in the fact that the professor of homiletics in Doshisha University, Japan, has for several years used a volume of his sermons in the class-room for practical instruction in sermon-making.

CHRISTIANS.

—From the daily Mail (Nevada, Mo.) we learn that Nevada University has passed into the hands of the Catholic church. "The deed is given by Mrs. Moriarty, of St. Louis, to Father Ignatius Conrad, of St. Joseph. It may now be considered as thoroughly well settled that a fine school will be in operation there next fall." There was considerable talk at one time of Garfield University passing under the control of the Catholic church. Let the Kansas brethren see in the fate of Nevada University a note of warning.

—The great new church building at Dallas, Texas, will be formally opened June 19, and be used the week following for the State Missionary Convention. M. M. Davis, pastor, reports that he has recently baptized eight Chinamen.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Evangelist McCord closed a successful series of meetings in Morris, Ill., March 13, Rev. C. C. Warner, pastor. A fellowship meeting of unusual interest was held on Friday, neighboring pastors being present. Mr. McCord's next work will be with Plymouth church, Peoria, Rev. D. B. Spencer, pastor.

—The annual meeting of the Congregational Sunday-school Association of Chicago was held with the New England church, March 10, a large number of superintendents and delegates being present. In the evening the subject, How to secure a better preparation of the lesson by the scholar, was discussed by Mr. C. H. Case of the First Church Sunday-school and by Rev. David Beaton.

—The annual meeting of the various associations for mission and church work connected with the Fourth Church, Hartford, Conn., was held March 6. The reports showed that during the ten years of Dr. Graham Taylor's pastorate the membership has increased from 283 to 675, and that of the Sunday-school from 303 to 925. More than fifty men who had been confirmed drunkards are now active members of the church. There is an urgent demand for increased accommodations for all departments of work.

—Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, has just held out a helping hand to Yankton College in the shape of a conditional gift of $50,000. Dr. Pearsons has given his written pledge that he will build for Yankton a science hall, with perhaps a chapel in one of the wings, at an expense of $50,000, provided that by July 1, 1893, the college has become free from debt and has an endowment fund of $100,000. The building is to be called the Ward Hall of Science, in memory of the late Dr. Joseph Ward, the first president of the college. This makes over three-quarters of a million dollars that Dr. Pearsons has given to different institutions.

—Prof. Wm. S. Tucker, of Andover, has been elected to succeed President S. C. Bartlett, of Dartmouth College. Dr. Tucker is fifty-three years of age. President Bartlett has been invited to remain with the college as a lecturer at half his present salary.

LUTHERANS.

—At the Minnesota Conference of the Augustana Synod, held in West Superior, Wis., eleven new Lutheran churches were received. One is in Manitoba, Canada, one in Wisconsin, one in South Dakota, two in North Dakota, and six in Minnesota.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—A revival institute under the direction of Dr. S. A. Keen, will be held in connection with the Joliet district ministerial association, beginning April 5, at First Church, Aurora, Ill. The meeting will continue until Monday evening, April 11. Tuesday afternoon, the first day, will be devoted to missions. Every afternoon after that Dr. Keen will conduct a pentecostal service. The revival institute will be held in the forenoon of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday; evangelistic services every evening.

—After twenty-six years of arduous work as an evangelist, owing to impaired health, Mrs. Van Cott has been compelled to relinquish her chosen calling, and has returned to the business in which she was associated with her husband prior to his death.

—The tenth annual report of the board of managers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society shows that the society has seventy-one conference organizations, 2, 147 auxiliary societies, including circles and bands, and 63,264 members of all classes. The number reported last year was 1,925 societies inclusive, and 48,200 members. The increase during the year is encouraging—222 societies and 15,064 members. The society has invested in buildings and property for the accommodation of its work about $200,000. Its receipts up to date have been—cash, $488,400; supplies, valued at $299,159.

—Thomas H. Lynch, M. A., D.D., for forty-three years a conspicuous figure in the Southeast Indiana conference, was buried at Indianapolis, Ind., March 6.

—W. H. Mead, of Bishop Taylor's first party to Africa, and one of his best-known missionaries, died in Nhangue Pepo, Angola, Africa, Dec. 23, last. The wife and four children survive. The eldest child, aged fourteen, with native help, made the coffin, and Mrs. Mead read the burial office at the grave.

—The Methodist Episcopal hospital at Portland, Ore., was recently the recipient of a $10,000 donation from Father Hoffman, who is eighty-two years old.

—Nearly 2,000 Wesleyan ministers have signed a memorial to the English Government praying for the suppression of the opium traffic in India.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Presbyterians have established a new theological seminary at Omaha. It has a faculty of five professors and a junior class of nine members.

—The Presbyterians have three missions among the Indians, and to these tribes: Senecas, Dakotas and Nez Perces. The United Presbyterians have one, the Warm Spring, Oregon. They have also another projected, the Sinemesho, and have $3,700 in hand for it. $1,054 were expended on the Warm Spring Mission, '91. The Presbyterians expended $9,500 on the Dakotas; $3,770 on the Nez Perces; $2,750 on the Senecas; $16,020 in all. The Covenanter church expended on Indian missions $3,509.80.

—The Presbyterian church of Scotland is, next to the Moravian church, the missionary church. Last year from a membership of 185,000 in 570 churches it raised $400,000.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

—The missionary society of the Protestant Episcopal church has received a lot situated on the corner of Twenty-second street and Fourth avenue, New York City, worth $100,000, and $50,000 additional with which to build suitable headquarters.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

—Probably the largest congregation in America is that of the Church of St. Stanislaus Kostha, Chicago, which has 30,000 communicants. The number of attendants at the several masses every Sabbath frequently exceeds 15,000.

REFORMED CHURCH.

—The College of Northern Illinois, a struggling institution of the Reformed church, located at Dakota, Ill., called a public meeting for the purpose of considering the interest of the college. Taking advantage of the experience of Dr. Isaiah Villars, they pressed him into service. He delivered an address on "The relation of college and community," which was followed by pledges of nearly $900 toward the liquidation of a debt of $5,000. The Reformed brethren think that this is the beginning of the end of the debt.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Brooklyn congregation has become two bands. On Friday evening last Mr. Carson and his followers met in the old church and decided to call their organization the Central Presbyterian church. Some were for uniting with the United Presbyterians, but they were in a hopeless minority. Saturday evening's papers announced that Mr. Carson would preach, Sabbath, on their church's new creed and its mission.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The L. M. S. of Central Illinois Presbytery, will meet at Washburn, March 30, at 10 A. M. Business meeting, reports from societies, election of officers and unfinished business. 7:30 P. M. conference and other exercises.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The Council voted down Alderman Martin's repealing ordinance to the "compressed air" franchise.

The Council passed the South Side loop and cross-town line ordinances.

Articles of incorporation were filed at Springfield, Ill., Friday by the Chicago Union Elevated Railway Company. Capital stock, $17,000,000; board of directors, John Tyler, Thomas F. O'Malley, William M. Bell, George E. Scott, and George M. Eckels, all of Chicago.

Frank Poledna was recently found guilty in Judge Anthony's court of the murder of Dominick Gibbons, the jury fixing the penalty at death by hanging.

Jennie Moore and Sarah Gothard, who give spiritualistic seances, were fully acquitted of the charge of running a place of amusement without a license.

COUNTRY.

Joseph Leon died at Muncie, Ind., Monday of blood poisoning, superinduced by cigarette smoking.

Jacob Boehm & Co., wholesale liquor dealers at Denver, Col., failed Monday. Immediately afterward Boehm poisoned himself. After his death it was found that he was a forger.

Work on schooners is being pushed at Mare Island, Navy Yard, so that a formidable fleet can be sent to Behring Sea if necessary.

John W. Bright, a wife murderer, was hanged by a mob at Springfield, Mo., Saturday night. Deputy Sheriff George W. Williams was shot dead while trying to protect his prisoner.

The Mitchell G. A. R. Post received the most recruits of any post in Indiana last year.

Henry Briceland, a life prisoner in the Pennsylvania penitentiary, has applied for a pardon after twenty years confinement. He claims to be able to prove his innocence.

The lower house of the Missouri Legislature Monday passed the re-districting bill, giving the Democrats fourteen districts and the Republicans one.

In the case of the State against the Simmons Hardware Company, of St. Louis, Judge Sherwood Monday declared the Missouri anti-trust law unconstitutional.

New York brokers, it is said, have defrauded the government of $100,000 in customs duties by a system of underweighing and false entries.

Benjamin Page died in Bloomingdale, N. Y., Insane Asylum Monday where he had been confined twenty-seven years. At one time he was prominent in New York society.

Numerous iron mills at Pittsburg have discharged part of their forces as a measure of retrenchment.

E. E. Stevens and George D. Mitchell, New York attorneys, arrived at San Francisco Monday on their tour around the world on bicycles.

Thomas McCue fell eleven stories, 120 feet, down an elevator shaft in New York Monday, and was able to get up and walk about.

Eugene H. Clapp, a Prohibitionist leader and prominent business man, died Thursday at Boston, Mass.

It has been discovered that Plainfield, N. J., is built over a large and swift subterranean river.

The New York Central will incorporate a village under the name of "Depew" near Buffalo, N. Y. The company's car works will be located there.

Abraham Wanola and Mrs. Rainage were found frozen on the prairie near Winnipeg Monday night. It was ascertained that he carried the woman four days before she died.

Attorney General Hensel, of Pennsylvania, Tuesday filed a bill in equity, asking the court to declare null and void the deal by which the Reading Railway Company practically secured control of the anthracite coal business.

The Legislature of Texas Tuesday refused to invite Senator Hill to address both houses in joint session.

Near Ouray, Col., Tuesday a vast body of honeycomb quartz, running $60 in gold to the ton, was broken into in the Ironclad mine.

At Tiffin, Ohio, Tuesday, Walter Snyder shot Edwary Naylor, Burt Crobaugh and Thomas Downey. He then committed suicide.

Delaware sent six cars of native woods Tuesday to be exhibited at the World's Fair.

The nineteenth death from typhus took place at New York Tuesday.

The bill making it a felony to deal in lottery tickets was signed Tuesday by the Governor of Kentucky.

J. P. Downey, of Fall River, Mass., was elected President of the National Textile Workers' Association at New York, Tuesday.

Azel Grover, a noted victim of dropsy, died Tuesday at Beaver Dam, Wis. He had been "tapped" 310 times, the water drawn from him weighing 4,800 pounds.

Tuesday the Federal grand jury at Boston returned indictments against Asa Potter, formerly president of the Maverick National Bank, and Colonel Jonas H. French and Thomas Dana, directors.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

Collections taken by H. H. Hinman in October and November, 1891.

Robt Wilson.....	$5 00
Robt Spear.....	1 00
Collection in Free Methodist church, Aurora, Ill.....	1 00
Mrs Hodgman.....	2 75
Jno Bradley.....	3 50
Mrs E Hinsdale.....	5 00
Mrs Geo Clark.....	1 00
Rev D Yant.....	1 00
J Wilson.....	1 00
Collection at Senecaville, Ohio.....	1 65
Rev E L Harris.....	5 00
D Whitmore.....	50
O Tichenor.....	6 00
Rev J B Galloway.....	2 00
W Hamlyn.....	5 00
Mr Holt.....	5 00
D S Dean.....	1 00
G A Howland.....	5 00
W Young.....	1 00
D Andrews.....	1 00
A Austin.....	2 00
Chas A Webb.....	1 00
Jas Allen.....	1 00
W D McGill.....	3 50
Geo McKerron.....	5 00
J Gilmour.....	1 00
D S Faris.....	5 00
J F Icke.....	3 00
Collection at Vernon, Wis.....	5 60

$81 50

W. I. PHILLIPS, Sec'y and Treas.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from March 14 to March 19:

K I Moore, L D Brown, J A Jarvis, Mrs M Connet, A C Lane, C M Strickler, Rev W O Dinius, J A Conant, J R Willson, J S Hitchcock, Dea S Howard, W Stewart, T E Clark, D D Miller, M Shaw, H S Curtis, S Horine, E J Chalfant, I C Welcome, S R Turner, J Cation, W D Lowrey, T B McCorkle, W H Holcomb, Sr, Rev J McKelvey, H N Waldo, Mrs A Stone, J Shelly, L Wilson, A A Johnston, J R Thompson, Rev S O Irvine, A Sutor, J Collins, J M Adair, Rev R O Brandt, E H Collins, E B Webster, W Jenks, E A Cackley.

NEW EDITION.

The Carradine Sermon; Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

Over 10,000 printed within a year. Every one reads it. Especially good for distribution among church members and the better class of citizens.

During this month the N. C. A. issues

CURES OTHERS WILL CURE YOU

THE SUPERIOR BLOOD-MEDICINE

PURE BLOOD

CLEAR SKIN

HEALTH

MENTAL ENERGY

PERFECT DIGESTION

SOUND SLEEP

LONG LIFE

VITALITY

STRONG NERVES

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

FREE

For 30 days. In order to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS in your vicinity, and thus create a demand for our work, we make you the following bona-fide offer: Send us a good photograph, or a tintype, or a daguerreotype of yourself, or any member of your family, living or dead, and we will make you one of our finest CRAYON PORTRAITS free of charge. This offer is limited to one per person, and we will not ship your portrait accordingly. CODY & CO., 755 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

REFERENCES, all Banks and Mercantile Agencies in New York City or Brooklyn.

its second edition. To encourage a wholesale circulation, it offers them, during March, postpaid in lots of 50 for one dollar, or less than wholesale prices. It is a 20-page pamphlet with neat cover. If on receipt of pamphlets you are not satisfied, return them and get your money.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.
Wheat—Spring No. 2.....	82½ @	84
Winter No. 2.....	87 @	87½
Corn—No. 2.....	36½ @	37½
Oats—No. 2.....	27½ @	30½
Rye—No. 2.....	81½ @	82
Bran per ton.....	13 25	14 00
Hay Timothy.....	10 00	@ 11 50
Butter, medium to best.....	24 @	28½
Cheese.....	09½ @	13
Beans.....	1 45 @	1 70
Eggs.....	12½ @	13
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 16 @	1 26
Flax.....	97½ @	98½
Broom corn.....	04 @	07½
Potatoes, per bush.....	25 @	32
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	4 @	6½
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 60 @	5 10
Common to good.....	3 40 @	3 95
Hogs.....	4 70 @	4 85
Sheep.....	4 90 @	6 25
NEW YORK.
Wheat, No. 2.....	98½ @	1 02½
Corn.....	46 @	48½
Oats.....	34½ @	46½
Eggs.....	14 @	14½
Butter.....	18 @	20
Wool.....	15 @	30½
KANSAS CITY.
Cattle.....	1 75 @	4 20
Hogs.....	4 00 @	4 60
Sheep.....	4 00 @	4 50

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. I. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear arraignment of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Emancipation and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

HOME AND HEALTH.

WORSE THAN THE TYPHOID FEVER.
A reporter of the Chicago Tribune says, I called on a doctor to ask him what he thought of the talk about typhoid fever. He is one of those doctors who can afford to be brusque, and your brusque man is apt to be honest. He heard my question, and still looking over his book, never lifting his eyes, he replied: "There are worse things than typhoid fever stalking the streets of Chicago, and men are running after them instead of avoiding them. I mean the long dresses which fashion has ordered women to wear. A long dress on the street picks up the refuse of the walks, and the woman who wears one carries enough germ-life to her home to sicken the whole family. I would like to see these people who are always on the alert for epidemics take care of themselves and use a little common-sense. If my daughter wore one of those long dresses, which she does not to my knowledge, I would make her take it off in the out-house and have it cleaned before it was brought into her own room."

TAKE CARE OF YOUR EYES.

The eyes, like good servants, will work as long as they can possibly hold out for the tasks imposed upon them, even when the tasks are most unreasonable. The owner of the eyes, like a good master, should be careful not to put such strain upon them, lest they give way under it altogether. A writer in the Youth's Companion says: "The value of the sight is never fully appreciated until it is lost or impaired. Few persons realize that the eye is an intricate piece of mechanism, with a vastly more complex and delicate adjustment than the costliest watch. Even in our public schools the children and youth are allowed to abuse it in a most perilous way, the teachers seeming to be perfectly ignorant of probable disastrous results.

"It is a disgrace to our educational institutions that half of our students bring away from them myopic—short-sighted—eyes, and that, even in our grammar-schools, children who have hardly reached their teens become life-long slaves to spectacles, formerly regarded as the almost exclusive badge and burden of old age. And it must be remembered that short-sightedness is not a mere inconvenience, but a disorder that tends toward ultimate visual disorganization."

HOME ECONOMICS.

A large earthen bowl should always be used for stirring cake in.

To freshen leather chair seats, valises, bags, etc., rub them with the well-beaten white of an egg.

A rug under one's feet is restful when long standing is necessary, as in ironing or in washing dishes.

To prevent tin pans from rusting, rub fresh lard on them, and set in a hot oven until thoroughly heated.

If the kitchen-table has no castors, buy a set, and put them on. It is not a difficult matter, and will save a deal of strength.

Soak clothes, that fade, over night in water in which has been dissolved one ounce of sugar of lead to a pail-full of rain-water.

When washing fine white flannels, add a tablespoonful of pulverized borax to a pail-full of water. This will keep them soft and white.

To banish red ants from the pantries, strew whole cloves around the shelves. The same is also considered a good moth exterminator.

Clocks are too cheap for the tired housewife to spend her time and strength in running from the kitchen to some other room to consult one.

To keep flatirons clean and smooth, rub them with a piece of wax done up in a cloth, then scour or rub them on a paper strewn with coarse salt.

Oil of turpentine or benzine will remove spots of paint or varnish from cotton or woolen goods. They should be washed in soap-suds after the application.

Many vegetables are better for not hav-

Rev. James P. Stone of Lower Cabot, Vt., formerly of Dalton, N. H.

A Faithful Pastor

Is held in high esteem by his people, and his opinion upon temporal as well as spiritual matters is valued greatly. The following is from a clergyman long influential in New England, now spending well earned rest in Cabot, Vt.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "We have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family for many years past, with great benefit. We have, with confidence, recommended it to others for their various ailments, almost all of whom have certified to great benefit by its use. We can Honestly and Cheerfully recommend it as the best blood purifier we have ever tried. We have used others, but none with the beneficial effects of Hood's. Also, we deem Hood's Pills and Olive Ointment invaluable. Mrs. Stone says she cannot do without them." REV. J. P. STONE.

Better than Gold

Mr. Geo. T. Clapp, of Eastondale, Mass., says: "I am 82 years of age, and for 30 years have suffered with running sores on one of my legs. A few years ago I had two toes amputated, physicians saying I was suffering from gangrene and had but

A Short Time to Live

Eight months ago as a neighbor urged me, I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. The whole lower part of my leg and foot was a running sore, but it has almost completely healed and I can truthfully say that I am in better health than I have been for many years. I have taken no other medicine and consider that I owe all my improvement to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It is better than gold." "I cheerfully verify the above statement of Mr. Clapp, whom I have known 30 years." J. M. HOWARD, Druggist, Eastondale, Mass.

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable.

ing the skin cut before being cooked. For this reason, as well as ease in cleansing, a vegetable brush is a necessity.

Put a little pearline in the greasy pots and roasting-pans, and it will greatly facilitate cleaning them, especially if you stand them on the range to heat the water.

To set delicate colors in embroidered handkerchiefs, soak them ten minutes before washing in a pail of water in which a desertspoonful of turpentine has been stirred.

If paint has been spattered on window-panes, wet the spots with water, and rub thoroughly with a new silver dollar; or they may be washed with hot, sharp vinegar.

Not only have a high stool, which permits of your sitting to do many kinds of work, but an easy rocker, in which you can do many others, or can rest in an occasional odd moment.

When a stove is cracked, a cement may be made of wood ashes and salt, in equal proportions, mixed to a paste with cold water. Fill the cracks with this when the stove is cool, and it will soon harden. —American Agriculturist.

Troublesome throat diseases are rapidly and permanently cured by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Men and women prematurely gray and whose hair was falling, are enthusiastic in praising Hall's Hair Renewer for restoring the color and preventing baldness.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1. A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacker, Martin Luther John Knox, and a host of others.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75.

More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D. This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 8vo, fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50. This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony. This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 320 pages, cloth, $3.00

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done an aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated ("ADELPHON KRUPPOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post, 5 cents each
Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

HORTICULTURAL.

Select seed now.
Cut your cions before it is too late.
Get out manure while the ground is frozen. Spread it on grass land.
Get the sash for the hot-bed ready to use, that is, if you have not already started your bed.

If you wish summer blooms of pansies it is time the seeds were in. If you have not hot-bed or cold frame, start in window.

It is true in breeding as well as in growing crops, the man who weeds the closest and most intelligently is the one who grows the largest crop and at the least cost.

According to testimony at the Iowa horticultural meeting, Shaffer's Colossal, because of its shallow root, suffers from drouth, although it will stand thirty degrees below zero.

The cutting away of large limbs of fruit trees is murderous work. There would be no occasion for it if the trees were properly pruned when small. When large limbs must be cut away the stumps should be coated to protect the exposed wood.

Some people wait until they are all ready to set out trees, then make out their order and send it to the nursery to be filled, with a postscript at the bottom, "Fill at once as my ground is ready," forgetting that thousands of orders may be in ahead of them, and that they must be filled first, and their tardy order must take its turn. Order early.

Currants and gooseberries are easily grown in rows six feet apart; plants four feet in the row. Cultivate, manure, and apply wood ashes. Use Paris green or white hellebore to destroy the currant worm. Trim up the bushes and thin out so as to make the application of insecticides more convenient. Of varieties, Red Dutch, Victoria, White Grape and White Dutch are good. Fay's prolific is, however, the king of red currants, being an immense bearer, and of excellent quality.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

AGRICULTURAL.

Drain the roadways.
The first item towards good roadmaking is drainage.
Improve the roads, lessen the fences, save the manure.
How many acres do the fences on your farm waste?
How is the road along your farm? Can it be improved? How?
A road-bed with water seeping through it cannot furnish a good road-bed.
Potatoes are best kept in a cool place—just above freezing is a good temperature.
Poor roads are the heaviest tax most farmers bear. Reduce the tax by improving the roads.
Good roads, clean culture and few fences will help on the day when farming will be more profitable.

How did you find the school the last time you visited it? Any improvement since you were there before?
What did your fence corners produce last year? Are they going to be used the same way the coming season?
Did you ever figure on the amount of corn you could raise on the land used in fences and the waste land they make?
Money invested in permanent hard road improvements is as good an investment as can be made in the farmers' interest.
If you have bad roads one step towards improvement is to open up all ditches now so there is no standing water on the road-side.
With thoroughly good hard roads, farm horses would last longer, wagons and harness would last longer and a team would be able to haul twice as much on an average at a load
If you are in favor of good roads and your township or district will not build them by a money tax, see that men are elected as town trustees or highway commissioners that will see that every man works out his tax with an honest day of honest work. Elect men that have head and backbone.

So far as we know the University of Illinois is the first institute of the kind to provide for University Extension Lecture on subjects pertaining to agriculture and kindred topics.

Work for good roads, but don't borrow money to do it. A bonded debt is easier made than paid. Levy a tax, spend the money wisely, and build a certain amount of good road each year. Keep that in repair, and a very few years will see miles of good highways.

A farmer in Cavan county, Ireland, applied half a ton of salt to an acre of oat stubble in January. In spring he planted potatoes on it. The potatoes on this salted land were a good crop and free from disease, while those on unsalted land were hardly "worth lifting."

Among the premiums given at one of the most successful fairs in Kansas last year was a suit of clothes valued at ten dollars for the "largest collection of Kansas dogs all owned by one man, with speech or paper showing how owner makes a living." There were several entries.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

For rheumatism and neuralgia you cannot get a better remedy than Salvation Oil.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato; T. R. Harris, Abbott, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 3/4 ozs., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8 1/2 in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 13 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent; after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. If started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection, will receive free a packet FINEST IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY FINE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. B. MULL'S, POSE HILL, ONANDAGA CO. N. Y.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE
Is all head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP
Is the earliest in the world, easy to grow, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors. My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $500 for a pansy blossom; $300 for a bean plant with 100 pods, and above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection, will receive free a packet FINEST IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY FINE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free. F. B. MULL'S, POSE HILL, ONANDAGA CO. N. Y.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Order, terms and covenants. 25cts each.

PIANOS $175. ORGAN $300. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baul Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 639 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 333 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and MODERN, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

ROYAL

IS THE

Best Baking Powder

The Official Government Reports:

The United States Government, after elaborate tests, reports the ROYAL BAKING POWDER to be of greater leavening strength than any other. (Bulletin 13, Ag. Dep., p. 599.)

The Canadian Official Tests, recently made, show the ROYAL BAKING POWDER highest of all in leavening strength. (Bulletin 10, p. 16, Inland Rev. Dep.)

In practical use, therefore, the ROYAL BAKING POWDER goes further, makes purer and more perfect food, than any other.

Government Chemists Certify:

"The Royal Baking Powder is composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

"EDWARD G. LOVE, PH. D."

"The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

"HENRY A. MOTT, M. D., PH. D."

"The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge.

"WM. MCMURTRIE, PH. D."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Prohibitionists of Michigan began their State convention at Grand Rapids, Thursday. A resolution antagonizing fusion with the People's party was adopted.

The place of meeting of the Prohibition National Convention has been changed to Cincinnati—but the date remains the same, June 29-30.

Max Strakosch, the famous musician, died Thursday in the home for incurables at Fordham, N. Y.

The Iowa Republican Convention at Des Moines, Thursday, elected Harrison delegates to the Minneapolis convention, but sent them uninstructed.

A report antagonistic to the coal road combine was on Thursday presented by an investigating committee of the New York Senate.

The Straits of Mackinac are not likely to be open before April 1.

Mrs. Belle Shadinger, of Cincinnati, a passenger on the steamer Guiding Star, died of fright Wednesday night when the vessel was found to be on fire near Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Thursday Professor William J. Tucker, of the Andover Theological Seminary, declined the Presidency of Dartmouth College.

Charles J. Van Depoele, a famous electrician and inventor, died Friday at Lynn, Mass., aged 46.

An inquest was held at Cincinnati, Ohio, Friday, on the body of a child 2½ years old, the victim of "Christian Science" treatment.

Colonel J. B. Hart, of Aberdeen, S. D., Friday was elected Commander of the State Grand Army of the Republic.

Indiana banks may resist the collection of assessments under the new tax law. The National State bank of Logansport has already decided upon that course.

The Michigan Prohibition Convention was held at Grand Rapids Friday. The following delegates to the National convention at Cincinnati were chosen: John Russell, Samuel Decker, Mary T. Lathrop, A. B. Cheney, J. K. Johnston, Marion B. Baxter, Dr. Rena Medwolds, E. E. Bostwick, D. W. Gundon, and Dr. H. A. Reynolds.

Cattle are dying in large numbers in Indian Territory from cold and exposure.

Flax can be raised in any part of Texas with more profit than can cotton, it is said.

The delegates-at-large to the National convention, chosen by the Iowa Republican convention, are: D. C. Chase, John H. Gear, E. E. Mack, and J. S. Clarkson.

Two cases of sudden blindness caused by the grip are reported from Vicksburg, Miss.

Michigan Knights of Pythias Thursday elected W. H. Loomis, of Grand Rapids, Grand Chancellor of the Lodge.

Secretary Blaine continues to improve.

A. W. Adams, of Brownsdale, Pa., while sleeping in a hotel at Pittsburg Thursday night, arose, dressed himself, and went to a depot, where he had his pocket-book checked. He returned to the hotel and retired again, without awaking.

Friday the resignation of the Hon. Thomas A. Moran as Judge of the Appellate Court of the First Illinois District was accepted, and the Hon. Henry M. Shepard appointed as his successor.

Robert McClure, agent of the Law and Order Society at Pittsburgh, Pa., was indicted for perjury Friday. The charge was preferred by a newsdealer whom he had prosecuted for selling papers on Sunday.

At Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Richard Melrose, her daughters, Minnie, Katie, and Mattie, and her oldest son, David, were poisoned by drinking coffee containing arsenic. Mattie and Katie died and the others are in a critical condition. Robert, the younger son, is suspected of the crime.

Conductors and brakemen on the Canadian Pacific Railway struck Thursday.

FOREIGN.

Seven cattlemen were suffocated by gases from a stove in the fore-castle of the Spanish steamer Navarro, on her last voyage to London.

A plot to assassinate the Sultan of Turkey is said to have been discovered at Constantinople. Two alleged conspirators have been arrested.

Special bureaus will be established in Russia to report annually as to the condition of grain, so that measures may be adopted to avert famines in future.

J. E. Guenzburg, a Jewish banker at St. Petersburg, failed for 6,000,000 roubles (about $4,620,000) Monday, owing in part to the animosity of the government. The Berlin, London, and Paris stock markets were affected by the failure.

General Gourko asked permission of the Russian Government to expel all the inhabitants of Warsaw except 50,000, but it was refused.

At Raccor, Peru, an attempt was made to burn an aged foreigner, on the ground that he was a heretic.

The Italian steamer Colombo arrived at Genoa Tuesday from Brazilian ports with forty-four cases of yellow fever.

Much interest is being manifested in Germany over the coming exposition, and Commissioner Wermuth says more room will be needed.

Cape Colony proposes to make a complete exhibit of its products at the Fair.

Reports that the German Government is in financial difficulties are declared to be without foundation.

Seventy-five deaths from yellow fever have occurred at Rio de Janeiro during the past fortnight.

It is reported that the nihilists of Paris are preparing to attempt the assassination of the Czar.

Manager Moulton

Says "Hood's Sarsaparilla Puts New Life Into Me."

Mr. John S. Moulton, of Salem, is known all over the country. He was the originator and for many years manager of the Bennett & Moulton Opera Co., and is now manager of Mechanics Hall, Salem, as well as partner in the Moulton-Ericson Photographic Company. What he says will be of great interest:

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in the past, am using it in the present and probably shall in the future. When tired and run down it puts new life into me and makes me and the rest of mankind. There is no doubt of its being a most excellent article. It always increases my appetite and gives me a good night's sleep when I take it. I cannot comprehend how people can be humbugged into taking some of the worthless blood purifiers that I know are being sold, when they can get Hood's Sarsaparilla." JOHN J. MOULTON, Salem, Mass.

On Good Terms With Myself

"Six Weeks With La Grippe

Was my sad experience early in 1891, and I was even then very weak and unable to work over a few hours. Being urged to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, I did so, and in 10 days I could work, sleep well, had a good appetite, and gained in health and strength." CHAS. ERSWELL, Toledo, Ohio.

EUROPE: A select party sails April 16 for Holy Land. Best ticketing facilities. Choicest ocean berths. Send for "Tourist Gazette." H. GAZE & SONS, 940 Broadway, N. Y. (Est. 1844.)

"Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN? Better write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month, of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY
APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine
D. D., Pastor of the Centenary
M. E. Church, St. Louis,
Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.
Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
331 W. Madison St., Chicag

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small idea of Chicago, the World's Fair Buildings, and the millions of dollars being invested in prizes at Harvey. There-actual railroad fare to the amount of not exceeding 2½ per cent of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. Illustrated Plats and Circulars free to all.

HARVEY

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING.'—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 29.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,144.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	Pennsylvania State Convention..... 3
Notes and Comments..... 1	REFORM NEWS:
Cheap Silver—Cheap Money..... 8	Rev. Wm. Fenton in Mormondom..... 5
New York and Chicago..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The Sabbath-Question World-Wide..... 8	The Grand Army "Architect;" A High-Degree Mason Rumped; Wayside Notes..... 5,6
The Opium Vice..... 8	LITERATURE..... 6
CONTRIBUTIONS:	IN BRIEF..... 7
Our Redeemer (Poetry)..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
Need of Revival..... 1	THE N. C. A..... 7
An Open Letter to Bishop Walden of the M. E. Church..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
Faithful Unto Death..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
SELECTED:	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Extent of the Opium Vice in Asia..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Nineteenth National Conference of Charities and Correction..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9	MARKETS..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15

A novel scene occurred in the House of Representatives at Washington, one day last week, when the Jewish Rabbi Hirsch, of Chicago, was invited by the regular chaplain to open the morning session with prayer. The Rabbi accepted, and was received with general approbation. As Congress is a non-religious body, of course it is as non-sectarian and non-committal as a Masonic lodge.

The Behring Sea discussion, which has been in progress for some time between the United States and Great Britain, touching the right of the latter to capture and carry away seals in those waters, is likely to be amicably ended this week. A great deal of undue "jingoism" has been expended upon this vexed question; but the probability of a settlement of it by force and arms is gradually diminishing. It would be a very foolish war.

Last week the Grand Jury of the Criminal Court in Chicago startled the country by indicting nine members of the City Council on charges of bribery in the transfer of franchises and undue privileges to speculating corporations. The evidence against these men, all elected by Democratic votes, is very conclusive, so far as it has been made public, and when the cases come to trial, it is expected that a great flood of official corruption will be exposed. The Board of Education is also to receive juridical investigation, on suspicion of similar offences.

The demise of the livery-stable keeper from whose establishment the celebrated white horse and buggy went forth to carry Dr. Cronin to his death, a few years ago, leads a morning daily paper to recall the mishaps and disasters that have overtaken parties intimately connected with his assassination. The list numbers eight who are now dead. One fell from a ladder and was instantly killed; one was crippled permanently by a fall while on his way to a meeting of the Clan-na-Gael; another, a saloon-keeper, failed in business and left the city; one met with a violent death in a rolling mill, and another was shot down by a policeman from whom he tried to escape. Several other deaths have occurred among the less active but bitter enemies of Dr. Cronin. Altogether, the divine disapproval of that brutal murder by sworn and secret enemies of the doctor can be traced in the course of these occurrences.

The story of a benefit society that wasn't of much benefit to its adherents, comes from Cincinnati. If we knew the name of the society, we would publish it. A woman, the mother of four children, the wife of a man who had been confined to his bed with the rheumatism since last December, was recently committed to the Longview Insane Asylum, crazed by overwork. Compelled to support the entire family, the benefit society to which the husband and father belonged having suspended its payments to the unfortunate man, the burden of her increased cares rendered her hopelessly insane. Organized secrecy is not to be trusted when it comes to true and tried benevolence.

The Odd-fellow lecturer who challenged the anti-secrecy reformers of Iowa to meet him in debate, offering to pay all expenses, and threatening to publish them if they failed to accept his challenge, has backed down, and the debate is lost to the world. The question which he proposed to discuss was this: "That Odd-fellowship is a Christian institution, and therefore in no way conflicts with the church of Christ, in its spirit or practice, or the duties of American citizenship." His position was untenable, and Rev. W. C. Paden, of Schaller, was prepared to successfully combat it had the discussion occurred. We intimated, last week, that the retrocession of the Odd-fellow was to be expected.

Pres. Eliot, of Harvard College, declares that "polygamy is completely abandoned as a doctrine of the Mormon church, and has been made a crime by the votes of Mormons." Ostensibly, for the purpose of deceiving the government, this may be so; but if any one believes that the Mormons are any less polygamists in spirit and in truth than they were before the Federal courts interfered with their peculiar institution, let him read the letter from Rev. Wm. Fenton, in another column. The Mormon doctrine on this subject, delivered to Bro. Fenton by a Mormon, at Salt Lake City, no doubt reveals the true sentiments of the Mormon people, revealing a shocking degree of depravity in the Mormon heart.

We surrender a large part of this issue to a report of the proceedings of the Pennsylvania Anti-Secrecy Convention in Pittsburgh, last week. Whatever it lacked in attendance was evidently made up in the spirit of earnestness, vigor and wisdom exhibited at every session. The veterans of the reform, as usual, led the van, but they were ably supported by the cheering words and forcible arguments of the noble ministers of the neighboring churches who rallied to their aid. Altogether, in the language of the Washington agent, because of the good spirit manifested by these reformers, assisted by the power of God, "our convention was a success; this is why every convention guided by the hand that holds the universe will be a success."

Perhaps Rev. J. P. Stoddard may be criticised adversely for his reference to the Mormons in one of his addresses at the Pennsylvania Convention. Referring to the murderous and secret oaths of the Clan-na-Gael and the Mafia, he also spoke of the perpetrators of the Mountain Meadow massacre (by the Mormon horde of "Danites," who, he said, were bound by a similar oath, and it is a warning against secret societies. He then spoke of Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, having been a Freemason, and his lodge having rebelled against some order, it was expelled, and became the founders of the Mormon Endowment House, making some modifications in the Masonic rites. Mr. Stoddard, as usual, "spoke by the card;" but he was not so rude and abusive of the Mormons as is a recent issue of the Boston News. Speaking of Pres. Eliot's fulsome eulogy of these people, the News adds: "That he should have chosen as a theme for his ill-advised rhapsody on religious liberty the blood-stained, intellectually stunted, morally vitiated, debauchery contaminated Mormons is past all belief. Still further to put them on the same plane with the Puritan fathers, whom all the world reverences, is an outrage to common sense and decency and must seem like a jest even to thick-witted elders, to whom this fatuous drivel was directed."

OUR REDEEMER.

BY MRS. IDA M. WARD.

Go to yonder Calvary,
Where Christ dies upon the tree;
See the blood flow from his side
And the sun in darkness hide.

Rends the temple's veil in twain,
Making priestly rites in vain;
Christ atoned for man's great fall,
When he entered, once for all.

Go, then to that guarded grave,
Where the mighty One, to save,
When redemption's work is done,
Comes forth as this world's true Sun.

When you've done all this, you'll know
Something of that cross of woe;
Something of the wondrous love
Bringing Jesus from above.

If you cannot understand
Why redemption was so planned,
You can take the love most free,
He has offered you and me.

Walworth, Wis.

NEED OF REVIVAL.

BY REV. WM. WISHART, D.D.

That there is a very low and dead state of religion in the churches among us at the present time will, we think, be obvious to any one who will take a proper view of the state of society. The wheels of the church's progress drag heavily, or seem to stand still. The work of evangelization does not keep pace with the increase of population in our country. Look at our nation at the present time; and is it not true that iniquity greatly abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold? Infidelity,—cold, careless, inhuman, Christ-denying and God-defying infidelity—is boldly avowed by many. The precious truths of the Gospel are regarded and treated as the impostures of a past age, only calculated to enthrall the human mind. Such infidelity is wide-spread and on the increase. Like the flood cast out of the mouth of the dragon, it is poured into our large cities from foreign countries. And it is not only attempting to subsidize learning and science in subserviency to its dark designs, but diffusing its deadly influence, like a fearful contagion, among the illiterate masses in the dark lanes and crowded streets of our populous cities, triumphing in the misery which it inflicts and the ruin which it works.

Sabbath desecration, drunkenness, fraud, violence, and all manner of uncleanness follow in its train. Look at the church herself. And who will say, that she is not deeply affected by the atmosphere with which she is surrounded? How many of her members seem to be entirely taken up and totally occupied with the things of the present life? "What shall we eat and wherewith shall we be clothed?" They are pursuing wealth, pleasure or promotion, and their minds are so intensely occupied with these things, that the Word and ordinances seem to have but little effect upon them. They cling indeed to the forms of religion, but how often do they deny the power thereof. They do not tremble and weep and bow their heads when they hear the Word preached. Nay, they walk in the midst of ordinances and they touch, taste and handle them with the coldness of death. Is it not true that the churches at present are becoming more and more careless in relation to purity of doctrine, relaxed in discipline, and that they are seeking to accommodate their teaching to the ever shifting spirit of the age, and their practice to the taste and example of the world that knows not God? Is it not true that a spirit of rationalistic skepticism extensively prevails in the churches, which threatens to subvert the very foundations of our faith and hope, and that this spirit has become a lying spirit in the mouths of many who profess to be prophets and teachers in the church of God? Certainly, we have great need of a revival of religion. And why is it not granted? What is the cause? We answer—the cause is not in God—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—nor in the Word and other ordinances which God has appointed as the channels of his grace. For God is waiting to be gracious—his Son is pleading, and his Spirit striving with sinners, and there is no defect in his Word and ordinances as means of grace; they are still "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." But we must look for the cause in ourselves; it is not in a righteous God but in sinful man. And I might mention the inherent depravity of the human heart which always opposes itself to the power of the Gospel and the work of grace. I might mention the power and malice of Satan, who fills the minds of men with darkness and prejudice, lest the light of the Gospel should shine into them. I might also mention the cares, pleasures and possessions of this present world, which preoccupy the hearts and minds of men, and shut out the light of the Gospel. But these are hindrances common to all periods and states of society, while it is evident that there is some cause or causes of the withholding of the Spirit, peculiar to the times in which we live. What then are these causes? The inquiry is important. We must know the cause of the disease before we can apply the proper remedy.

1. Then is there not reason to fear that in the rush and hurry of these times many are thrust into the ministry who are not divinely called and sent. They may have the external call of the church but they have not the internal call of the Spirit. And it is not to be expected that the Spirit will give such a ministry any real success; that he will make it the means of converting sinners and of quickening and reviving his church. The language of God in regard to such ministers is: "I sent them not, nor commanded them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all." Jer. 23: 32.

2. The spirit of discord and division in the church is another hindrance to the work of the Spirit. It is true that for these divisions of the church those who depart from the truth, and not those who adhere to it, are responsible. Revealed truth is the only foundation of Christian unity. It is however equally true that these divisions are grievous to the Spirit and a great hindrance to his work.

3. The laxity of discipline is another hindrance. There is scarcely any offense so scandalous as not to be tolerated in some branch of the church. The mutual ambition of different denominations to excel one another in numbers, has led to the abandonment of scriptural discipline. The visible body of Christ is burdened and weighed down by dead members, which ought to be cut off in order to the health and activity of the body.

4. Another hindrance is the covetousness of the church as well as of the world. Large corporations, composed to a great extent of church members, refuse thousands of employes the time necessary to attend to, and improve the means of grace.

5. Finally, I may mention the want of faith in the possibility of a revival. God has promised to pour out his Spirit in these latter days. Do we believe his promise? "To him that believeth all things are possible." We pray for a revival of religion, but do we pray in the exercise of faith? "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer believing, ye shall receive." "We know that if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us." God will yet revive his church, but when he does so, it will be in answer to the prayer of faith.

Monmouth, Ill.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BISHOP WALDEN,
OF THE M. E. CHURCH.

BY REV. D. OGLESBY.

BISHOP:—The Central Christian Advocate of March 2 says that "Bishop Walden was made a thirty-third degree Mason at a special meeting of the Supreme Council, held at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, Cincinnati, on Monday of last week."

When I read this, Bishop, I was overwhelmed with mingled feelings of astonishment, humiliation, sorrow and shame.

What motive prompted you, Bishop, to take this step?

Did you suppose that you would learn anything valuable, or anything at all that you could not learn some other way? Don't you know that the secrets of Masonry have been revealed over and over, again and again, by as good and true men as live? You could have procured all the information, or foolish nonsense, which you obtained in climbing up or down into this den thirty-three degrees, for a dollar or two.

I am curious to know the motive that prompts a Christian and a Bishop to become a Mason.

Allow me to ask, Bishop, did you think it would give you more influence for good, and enable you to bring more sinners to repentance and to Christ? If so, what made you think so?

Have you ever known a Mason high up in the lodge—a 33-degree Mason—converted? Have you ever known any Mason converted? You must know, Bishop, that Masonry has no Christ in it. His name is excluded from its prayers. It is more than a mere social institution. It has its divinity (the Grand Architect), its altars, its devotions and prayers. It binds its devotees together by horrid oaths.

Millions of its deluded subjects have and do live and die saying, "Masonry is as good a religion as I want."

Your example, instead of leading men to repent and forsake their sins, will confirm very many in the delusion that Masonry is as good a religion as men need.

You must know, Bishop, that Masonry and Christianity are opposites, the zenith and nadir in motives and results. Christianity enjoins love to our fellow men, without any discrimination. The essence of Christianity is love. Christianity is supreme love to God and universal love to our fellows. Masonry is rooted and grounded in selfishness. It is a clique bound together, a selfish clan, by the most shocking and barbarous oaths.

They are sworn to keep each other's secrets; to defend and help each other; and, in some of the degrees, not so high as the 33d (and you ought to remember them, Bishop), they are to keep secrets, "treason and murder not excepted." How do you reconcile this with the Master's example? for he said, "In secret have I said nothing." How will you answer Him at his judgment bar?

These are awfully serious questions, Bishop. You may pooh-pooh them now, and do so at your peril.

Your whole influence is now, by this act, published to the world, on the side of sustaining and upholding this "work of darkness."

Your high position in the church gives you much influence. How many young preachers, seeing that Bishop Walden is a high Mason, will be "roped in." What a mighty lever it is in the hands of the fraternity! This is the reason why they could afford to call a "special meeting of the Supreme Council." They were going to catch big game, and then publish the news to the world. "Oh, Shame, where is thy blush?" "How are the mighty fallen?"

Seventy or eighty years ago, when candidates came up for admission in conferences of the M. E. church, Bishop George would ask, "Do you belong to any oath-bound secret organization?" If they answered in the affirmative, he would say, "Stand aside."

Now we have one of the Bishop's successors in office, proclaimed as a 33d-degree Mason by a "special meeting" of a "Supreme Council," in one of the chief advocates of the church. It is said that "there is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous;" and it strikes me most forcibly, Bishop, that you took that step to obtain the 33d degree in this system of darkness.

I would advise you to read Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong's sermon on the text, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them," etc. Mr. Armstrong, too, was decoyed down into this dark den until he reached the 33d degree. There were mitigating circumstances in his case. Masonry was not then exposed. He had no opportunity to learn, outside of the lodge, what was done on the inside. But now it is different. Any one may know all without swearing to cover it up.

Very few ministers ever go farther than the 3d degree. They don't care to talk even of that. Shame seems to haunt them whenever they think of it. But their tongues are tied, their mouths are closed. They dare not lift their voices against it. To do so now would be to "make themselves of no reputation" in the church. It would shut them out of the great stations and high official positions.

Is it any wonder that the church is losing its spiritual power? that churches now are but little more than places of entertainment? that four-fifths of its membership are women? that the old-fashioned class-meetings are dead? that most of the family altars are fallen down? that 90 per cent of the population of our country belong to no church at all? that vastly more than half never darken the door of a church? Oh, Bishop! if you would do as Mr. Armstrong did, you might counteract the great evil of your example; but if you keep silent, and by so doing, sanction the works of darkness instead of "reproving them," God only knows the fearful account you will have to give in that day when every man must give an account to Him who said, "In secret have I said nothing."

Richview, Ill.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

BY MRS. VICTORIA ALEXANDRA STONE.

It was night on a plantation in Southern Alabama. A party of young people were assembled, and music and the rhythmic tramp of merry feet fell upon the still, fragrant air of night. Suddenly a shout was raised, and the party rushed wildly out into the darkness. The house was on fire!

A strong wind was blowing from the east, fanning the flames, which burned with fierce intensity, illuminating the surrounding country, and even extinguishing, for the time, the very stars overhead. Suddenly a cry arose, and a woman's voice exclaimed: "My baby—my daughter!—Save her! She is in that upper chamber!"

The house was now wreathed in flames. They rose many feet above the roof—they burst from the windows—and the very air seemed alive with their steady crackle and roar. Not a man stepped forward—not a hand was raised—for who could enter that furnace of fire and live? It would mean death inevitable.

Suddenly a gigantic Negro stepped from the crowd, and mounting the ladder that still leaned against an open chamber-window, disappeared in the burning building. The people held their breath in suspense; a few moments more, and the building swayed and tottered; a storm of sparks and a cloud of black smoke swept upward. The roof had fallen in!

One beam still stood firm. Another moment, and the dark figure of the Negro was seen creeping upon it. He walked to the center, holding the infant in his outstretched arms. Three men stepped from the crowd, and, standing perilously near the burning building, the Negro flung the child into their arms—and the next instant the beam fell, and the Negro was buried in the fire!

Was he lost? It seemed so; and yet, in a few moments, from out the midst of the smoke and flame, his form was seen, creeping painfully on its hands and knees. Strong and willing hands lifted him from the fiery furnace and laid him gently upon the grass. Men gathered about him, and women wept aloud.

His master knelt by his side. "Do you know me, Tom?" The Negro turned his sightless eyes toward him, and his lips moved: "Hallelujah! Hallelujah!" Not a sigh, not a groan, not a murmur of pain escaped him; but always, "Hallelujah! Hallelujah!"

Men and women stood with pale faces watching the dying man, while the flames in the background still crackled and roared. A few moments more, and the Negro lay dead. Not a word had escaped his lips but, "Hallelujah! Hallelujah!"

A few rods from that spot, near the edge of a wood, is an old graveyard. Near the southwest corner is an old headstone, blackened by time and nearly covered with moss; and yet upon it the curious stranger may be able to decipher the inscription:

Tom, a Negro slave,
Died to save his master's child,
June 14, 1854,
Aged 26 years.
"Faithful unto death."

Steamburg, N. Y.

EXTENT OF THE OPIUM VICE IN ASIA.

It is not Hudson Taylor of the Chinese Inland Mission alone that is authority for the statement that "more than 100,000,000 of China are, directly or indirectly, sufferers from the use of opium." The writer of the article on opium in the last edition of the "Encyclopedia Britannica," states that the number of those who use it to be 100,000,000 or 125,000,000 as the population may be 300,000,000 or 400,000,000.

And now the British Government in India, to increase its revenue, has authorized the licensing of shops throughout India and Burmah for the free sale of opium. These licenses are issued in a very unusual form. Those who take the license come under obligation to sell a stipulated amount or to pay a forfeit! Thus the government almost compels the holders of the license to stimulate its subjects to consume a deadly poison! The door is thrown wide open for all the inhabitants of India to take that which at once destroys the body and the soul.

The unrestricted sale of opium is permitted in Java, with its 20,000,000 of population. It is also permitted in the French possessions in Southeastern Asia, with a population of 8,000,000 or 10,000,000. The vice is also carried by the Chinese immigrants into Siam and all the island of the Eastern Archipelago. If the populations of the various countries in Asia in which the free sale of opium is permitted are added together, the aggregate number is more than 600,000,000! In Europe and America the sale is restricted to medicinal use, by the direction of physicians, and the vials and boxes containing it, when thus given out by druggists, are carefully labeled "poison!"

So the laws of China once prohibited the sale and use of opium, the violation of which was punished by death. So earnest were the Chinese to prevent its introduction into the country that the government became involved in a costly war with England about it, at the close of which a treaty was made in which England recognized China's right to prohibit the introduction of opium, but left it with China to seize the vessels that smuggled it in and confiscate the vessels and cargo! But as the smugglers were Englishmen and ships English ships the Chinese were afraid to execute the law, and so opium was brought in English bottoms from India to China from 1842 to 1860.

After thus fighting the traffic for sixty years the Chinese Government, finding it could not stop the smuggling of opium into the country by British vessels, finally gave up the contest and submitted to legalize the horrible traffic which it could not destroy. And once admitting it into the country it could not enforce the laws against its sale and use, and shops were opened in every city and town and village in the empire. The next step was, as they could not keep out the opium from India, to begin the cultivation of the poppy in China itself. Now, the opium made from the native grown poppy is said to be three times as much in quantity as that imported from India.

In the districts where it is thus grown the price of the native opium is very cheap, and its consumption has spread among men, women and children, so that some resident missionaries in these districts say that sixty and seventy out of every 100 of the people are more or less opiumeaters. When I went to China in 1844 it was supposed that 2,000,000 used it. Before I left China I estimated that the 2,000,000 had grown to 40,000,000, while Hudson Taylor now puts the number of those who use it directly or indirectly at 100,000,000.

Now, let us sum up the enormous extent of this curse. The population of India and Burmah, according to the census taken last year, is 285,000,000; that of China is 350,000,000—some make it 400,000,000. The island of Java counts its 20,000,000, to which the French possessions in Southeastern Asia adds at least 10,000,000 more. The Eastern Archipelago has, say, 5,000,000, making altogether a total of 670,000,000. The curse of Asia has been saddled upon that continent by Christian Europe. For this terrible blight cast upon the greatest of the four quarters of the globe the British Government is chiefly responsible. A hundred years ago the East India company commenced to monopolize the production of opium for sale in China, and the government at home gave to the company the protection of the British flag. Since 1858 the British Government has had a monopoly of the production and sale of opium. Great Britain is thus directly responsible for the prevalence of the opium plague among the 670,000,000 people in Asia.—N. Y. Evangelist.

NINETEENTH NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

Until the present century the policy of Europe, in dealing with crime and pauperism, was the best possible if the object had been to propagate and increase them both. The States of the New World necessarily copied many of the methods of the old. Unfortunately, along with much that was true and wise, they copied and perpetuated many old blunders. But with the advance of modern thought, especially with the enormous widening of the sphere of scientific knowledge, have come new and better ways of dealing with the defective, the criminal and the pauper.

The National Conference of Charities and Correction, which meets annually in one or other of the chief cities of the nation, brings together a representative body of the people throughout the land, whose business it is to deal with the poor, the ignorant and the criminal, or who are devoted as good citizens to the work of private charity. Its object is the introduction of enlightened methods of grappling with the evils and misfortunes of life. It combines the best philanthropy of all creeds and all shades of political opinion, upon the broad platform of humanity. It does not conflict with any form of existing benevolence, but it aims to place before the country, by the aid of the press, such details of practical information, with the results of experimental altruism, as cannot but be helpful to all.

The 19th session of this important National organization will be held in Denver, June 23 to 30, 1892. The preliminary program has just been published and extensively circulated. It offers an attractive series of meetings; its topics include many of the important social problems of the day. It has standing committees upon State Boards of Charities, Reformatory Work, Kindergartens and Child-saving, Care and Classification of the Insane, Commitment and Detention of the Insane, Charity Organization in Cities, The Indian Policy in its Relations to Crime and Pauperism, The Colony Plan for the Feeble-minded, Immigration and Migration Between States, Defensive and Preventive Measures Against Pauperism and Crime, and the Co-operation of Women in the Management of Charitable and Penal Institutions. Each of these committees has charge of a general session of the Conference, and several of them will also conduct special or sectional sessions, in which they will discuss their subjects in detail.

The membership of this Conference is one of its unique features. It has no salaried officers and no selfish benefit to offer to any one, so its doors are opened to all the world; whosoever will may come in, on a footing of the most perfect equality. The fact that you are interested in its work, makes you a member, and entitles you to a seat and a voice in its discussions. Anyone desiring further particulars as to reduced railroad fare, hotel accommodations, etc., may address Alexander Johnson, secretary, Indianapolis, Ind., who will send circulars and answer inquiries.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CONVENTION.

THE ANTI-SECRECY RALLY AT PITTSBURGH.

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, held its first session on Monday afternoon, March 21, in the Second United Presbyterian church, on Sixth avenue, at Pittsburgh. About 200 persons were present.

The meeting was called to order by W. B. Stoddard, the Washington agent of the National Christian Association, who has labored faithfully to make this convention a grand success.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Collins, of Allegheny, was elected chairman.

The session was opened with devotional exercises.

Rev. David S. Littell, D. D., pastor of the church in which the convention was held, in welcoming the delegates, said:

"It is not a matter of formality with me, but from the depths of my heart I welcome you. This is a cause in which the U. P.'s, R. P.'s and many other 'P.'s' can unite. God has given us three brotherhoods: the brotherhood of humanity, the brotherhood of the family and the brotherhood of Christ. These are the only brotherhoods God gave us, but man has seen fit to organize other brotherhoods which are directly opposed to those which God gave us. These brotherhoods organized by man instead of uniting humanity divide humanity. They also divide both the church and the family. That they are bound to keep things from the church and bound to keep the husband from telling things to his wife makes them not Christ-like, and they are, therefore, not Christian. What Smith teaches is Smithanity and what Christ teaches is Christianity."

His sentiments were loudly applauded.

The following committees were then appointed: Committee on Enrollment—Rev. W. J. Golden, chairman; Rev. J. S. McKee and T. M. Slater.

Committee on State Work—A. B. Dickey, chairman; Rev. William Dillon and Rev. S. J. Shaw.

Committee on Finance—Rev. R. C. Wylie, chairman; Rev. W. B. Stoddard and Rev. A. W. Myers.

Committee on Resolutions—Dr. D. McAllister, D. D., chairman; President C. A. Blanchard and Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

Correspondence—Rev. D. S. Littell, chairman; Rev. W. J. Coleman and Rev. John Friday.

Entertainment—J. S. Arthur, chairman; Miss Ada Hick, Mrs. Dr. Collins and Mrs. Dr. Littell.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard, of Boston, delivered a lengthy address on "The Lodge Opened." He said: "I ought to know something about the lodge, as in my city there are 853 lodges." He then produced a chart illustrating the various degrees and scenes in a lodge. He stated that when a man became a member of one he threw away his rights. He then proceeded to describe the joining of a secret society. He said the "victim" is ushered into a room, where his left breast is laid bare and the point of a sharp instrument is placed against him with the warning not to divulge any of the secrets. The victim, he said, is then asked to swear that in the presence of Almighty God he will not divulge any secret confided to him. This, the speaker said, prevented the husband from telling his wife of any of his doings at the lodge. He then referred to a Boston lodge, where he said several of its members became intoxicated, and yet the husband could not tell this to his wife and receive her counsel and prayers in the matter of associating with them.

The wife (he added) has as much right to know what the husband is doing as the husband has to know what the wife is doing; yet if the husband tells his wife of his doings at the lodge he forfeits his life—has his throat cut. Secret societies part those whom God has joined together. Multitudes who are in those lodges to-day would have never thought of joining them had they known more of the inside.

Devotional exercises marked the opening of Monday evening's session, and were conducted by Rev. J. W. McGill, of the Sixth United Presbyterian church in Allegheny.

The first speaker was the Rev. W. J. Coleman, of Beaver Falls, Pa. He attacked secret societies and asserted that they are a menace to good society. Men, he said, join them to gain advantages over their fellowmen. They join to secure advantages in politics. Where is the benefit of the jury system when there are those on the jury who are sworn to obey the officers of their societies? The members of these societies have all that an honest man has and all that dishonesty and underhand measures can give.

Continuing, he said: "What does the lodge ask of the man? He swears to obey when he don't know what it is going to ask him. Taking for granted that it is honest, the man who takes that oath ought to know something about it. There are officers to govern, and the many must obey the few. It is of importance to a Christian who follows the Lord. He goes to the lodge and is asked to swear to do something, he knows not what. When a man buys a horse, if he has any revenue, he knows something about it. When he takes a wife to himself it is generally supposed he has had some acquaintance with her. But when he goes into a lodge he swears to something he don't know." As an illustration of the situation the speaker referred to the promise given by Herod to the siren, who pleased him—to give her whatever she would ask. She consulted her mother, who told her to ask for the head of John the Baptist. Herod was sorry, but he had blindly given his word, and had to keep it.

Professor Adler favored the convention with a solo.

President Charles A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, Illinois, then took the floor. He said the question had been asked why do secret societies multiply and flourish? A man said at a convention in Boston that they might as well try to take a census of the lice in Egypt as to try and count them. The reason they multiply, he said, is not because they lack the denunciation of some of the best men against them. Daniel Webster, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Charles Sumner, and others are on record as opponents of secret societies, and Freemasonry in particular. Many of the greatest evangelists, among them D. L. Moody and Dr. D. L. Munhall, say that secret societies are antagonistic to the spirit and teachings of Jesus Christ.

Take organizations such as the Friends and the Lutherans, and more than 700,000 people in the United States who are Christians say that secret societies are an evil. They say, he continued, that a secret society that admits a man and shuts out his wife, weakens the matrimonial tie and injures the home. It yokes good and bad men together, and the evil, or those who are not Christians, are in the majority. The Christian Freemasonry, the Knights Templar, at some of their conclaves have to carry away wine bottles by the wagon load. Put a good man into the lodge and he will be led into bad habits by the bad men in it. Put a sober man in it and when he leaves the lodge at 2 A. M., a bad man has a better chance to lead him to bad places than if they were not joined together in the same lodge.

Secret societies, he said, tend to subvert civil law. It is harder to punish a man for crime than if he did not belong to the lodge. If he belongs to the lodge he will get three months in jail, when if he did not he would go three years to State's prison. It gives an evil man the power over the jury, the sheriff, the witness, and sometimes the judge. As an indication, he said, in this country, where secret societies abound, there will be 400 murders and seventy-five executions. In England, where secret societies are much fewer, there will be 400 murders and about 375 executions. These are the charges, he said, and they are not answered. As to mutual assurance, it was all right, but there was no need for secrecy and whispering, "Don't say anything about it."

The speaker then turned to ridicule and said that it was not necessary for a man to secure the help of honest men if he was honest himself, to first swear that he would have his head cut off, or his body cut in two, or his skull lifted and his brains exposed to the scorching rays of a noon-day sun, if he revealed any of the secrets.

The reason they flourish, he supposed, was because of the avarice that makes men want to get something and give nothing, using the lodge's influence. Also the ambition to be a Grand Master, etc., and lord it over somebody. Another reason he set forth was the desire for a chapeau, sword, gloves, etc., to look fine when marching and dressed up. He concluded by urging his hearers to keep up the work against secret societies.

THE SECOND DAY'S SESSIONS.

At 10 o'clock A. M., on Tuesday, the convention resumed its discussion of the evils of secret societies, with Rev. Samuel Collins, of Allegheny, in the chair.

Twenty or thirty United Presbyterian ministers and laymen were present.

Before the regular hour for business a praise service was held. The prayers of some of the ardent opponents of secret societies and some 25,000,000 or 30,000,000 members thereof were stirring. "Show them," prayed the Rev. Mr. Milligan, "that we are the children of light, and give us strength to bring them out of the depths of darkness and perdition. Lord, let the blessing rest upon all those who are engaged in this work."

Rev. J. P. Stoddard suggested that the convention address a letter to Premier Gladstone requesting an expression of his views on the secret society. A motion to this effect was carried.

Five-minute speeches were next in order.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard arose and related an incident. He had been invited to speak in a New England church; but after the invitation was extended the attention of the minister of the church was called to the fact that a large number of members were Orangemen. The lecture was postponed, but he (the speaker) prayed, and later on he was invited to a meeting in the same church. He exposed the Masonic initiation ceremonies, and afterward, four men arose in the audience and attested to the fact that what Mr. Stoddard said was true. Then he proceeded to compliment these four men who had the courage to forsake their lodges and henceforth oppose secret societies.

The chair called for questions pertinent to the subjects under discussion. A woman in the audience asked why one secret society man will not trust another.

Mr. Stoddard replied that perhaps one had not performed what was required of him by his order.

Question two—Which is the more responsible, the major or the minor order?

Answer—They are all wrong; they are a menace to the government, etc.

Question—Are secret societies revolutionary in character?

Answer—All revolutions work through secret societies as do conspiracies.

To a similar question he proceeded to answer that during the late war he was in New Orleans when several Southern spies, some of whom were Masons, had been condemned to be shot by a court martial and approved by Gen. Butler, who is a thirty-three-degree Mason. The condemned were brought out, and before the shooting, Gen. Butler ordered their release.

Question—Is connection with an oath-bound secret society in keeping with Christianity?

Answer—The writer of this evidently has some strange views. I hope he will make himself known.

To another question he answered that as well permit the worship of Baal to our altars as to take in the secret society. I am even opposed to the Grand Army societies. The Grand Army is an insult to every man who joins it. Let any soldier approach any Grand Army door and he must swear to be loyal to the country he has saved; it's an insult to make a veteran take such an oath.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Stoddard spoke of ministers who were great camp-meeting speakers and who kept quiet regarding secret societies. As an instance, he spoke of a great Boston minister, Dr. Bates, a Methodist. He is a Mason, but the speaker thought from a conversation with him that he was opposed to secret societies at heart.

"Let the little snakes go where the snakes belong," was the way he expressed himself regarding the societies in which children were admitted. He was opposed to Good Templars, and all such societies, as detrimental to the church. He said that the god of Masonry was not the God and Father of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Regarding the disfellowshipping of church members who belonged to secret societies, he said: "All ought to lose their fellowship. Those who belong to secret societies are using a form of worship. It is false worship in the secret lodges." The question is, whether such worshipers should have communion with the church, and he thought not.

Rev. Mr. Temple thought the reason why young men went into secret societies was because there was not enough testimony against them in the churches. The young men do not come to the churches because the secret societies have already stolen them. He thought the time was coming when all secret societies would be blotted out. "We can't spare the young men from the church," he said. "Let us lift up our voices like trumpets against the secret societies. In my town there is not a minister who lifts up his voice against these works of darkness."

Then Rev. J. P. Stoddard went to the chart and said the name of Christ is mentioned in the Masonic ritual once in the final obligation of the Knight Templar degree. There, he said, a skull containing pure wine is given the candidate, and before drinking, repeats the oath, calling on Christ to visit upon him the sins of the human being of whom the skull was formerly a part, as well as his own, if he should ever reveal the secrets of the temple; during which horrible ceremony the Knights pointed their swords at the breast of the devotee.

Rev. S. M. Stewart was the next speaker. He had been a soldier, and he knew of the secrecy of orders for generals. He spoke of the counterfeit expositions of Masonry and of the Grand Army, and stated that there could not be a counterfeit unless there had been a genuine exposition, and that the exposures of Masonry were true.

Rev. Mr. Robertson was the next speaker. He said there was abundance of evidence that the secret societies were evil. His remedy was to overcome evil with good. He believed that thousands went to the lodges, not for the religion in them, but for other reasons—temporal benefits. He believed in brotherhood, but not in the brotherhood of Cain. The brotherhood of Christ was the only one that would benefit the world. His address was one of the best of the day, in that he proposed remedies that the church does not now offer. "Let the three great brotherhoods," he said, "of Man, Family and Christ, be promoted, and then we do not need secret societies. Lift up the workingman. Make your homes pleasant here on earth, and then we will have no need of secret organizations which claim to make life pleasant for members."

The Rev. Mr. Campbell, a Wesleyan minister, said that he had besought Stephen Collins, formerly councillor of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, to advocate the divinity of Christ in the lodge, but received the reply that it would do no good and might be harmful.

The Committee on Nomination of Officers of the State Association reported as follows; and the report was adopted:

President, the Rev. R. J. George, D.D., Beaver Falls; Corresponding Secretary, the Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, Pittsburgh; Treasurer, R. C. Wylie, Allegheny; Vice Presidents, E. J. Chalfant, York; the Rev. P. J. O'Connell, Philadelphia; and the Rev. N. R. Luce, Union City. It was also voted that a State agent be elected, at a salary of not less than $500 a year.

Rev. Mr. Wylie, for the Finance Committee, reported the expenses of the convention to be $124.24; balance in the treasury, $4.57; individual contributions, $110; convention collections, $36.92. The report was adopted. Mr. Wylie then called for subscriptions for State work.

At the afternoon session Rev. J. L. Weaver, of Burgettstown, Rev. J. Schuh, of Allegheny, and others made addresses upon the subject of secret societies. Mr. Weaver attacked especially the Masonic order, claiming that it was an obstacle in the way of Christianity, a temptation to young men, and a deception. He argued that a man could not be a good Mason and a good Christian, and claimed that 70 per cent of the Presbyterian ministry were opposed to secret societies. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Stoddard, who made a plea in behalf of temperance, but opposed the secret order of Good Templars.

Rev. Dr. McAllister claimed that the fault lay with the church. If it wished the suppression of secret societies it should work and not talk to accomplish this end.

The report of the Committee on Resolutions was presented by Dr. McAllister. The purport was that the Christian church was opposed to secret societies as they were inimical to the general welfare. The report was adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, (1) That God himself, as the Creator of man and the Author of society, has comprehended all social relations and duties for mankind in three institutions, namely: The family, the state, and the church.

Resolved, (2) That secret orders, instead of being in any way in harmony with or helpful to these divine institutions, are in necessary and inherent antagonism to them. Organized secretism is the deadly enemy of the confidences and happiness of the home; it corrupts the doctrines, worship and discipline of the church; and it strikes at the very foundations of all justice and right in the administration of the affairs of the state.

Resolved, (3) That it is the imperative duty of the church, as God's great reforming agency, to see that she herself, first of all, is free from this curse of secret societies, not only by maintaining a pointed testimony against them, but also by the faithful and uncompromising exercise of discipline, absolutely prohibiting her communicants from being members in them.

Resolved, (4) That while the church of Christ should keep her own skirts clear from all polluting contact with secret orders, the individual members of the church should lead the way in the political reformation that will put these selfish, unpatriotic and disloyal organizations under the ban of the civil law. The principles affirmed by the United States District Court in Utah in condemnation of Mormon oaths as disloyal, cover all such oaths as those of Jesuits and Freemasons. And when a civil court in any measure condemns these iniquities as destructive of the welfare of the state, shall not the members of the church, as Christian citizens, and particularly her ministers, take their appropriate place in the vanguard of anti-secret reform?

Resolved, (5) That to meet more effectively the specious arguments and false claims in favor of secret orders as benevolent societies making provision for the poor, we recommend that the churches give more systematic attention to such scriptural benevolent arrangements as will provide funds for special cases of misfortune, sickness and death, and thus remove all possible plea of necessity, as made by many Christians, for uniting with secret so-called beneficiary societies.

DAVID McALLISTER, Chairman,
S. COLLINS.

The convention closed with the evening session.

Rev. J. H. Schuh in a long address denounced the charitable secret societies, which he called a hollow pretense and a sham. It was simply lodge charity and not Christian charity.

Among the communications received during the meeting was one from E. D. Glenn, of Johnstown, Grand Chief of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, giving the qualifications for entrance into that order, but only extracts were read, in order that exceptions might be taken to it.

Mr. Stoddard, of Boston, again discoursed on the oaths of secret societies. He blamed all the massacres from Mountain Meadow to that of Chief of Police Hennessy, of New Orleans, on oath-bound secret societies. He called the members of societies wolves and sharks, and said the Mason's oath deprived a man of all private judgment, and that it was more menacing to civil liberty than that of the Jesuits. He spoke of the Chinese Highbinders, the Clan-na-Gael and others. Touching on the oath of Masonry, he said, no law of the land or anathema of the church can affect it. The covenant which makes the Mason unmake the man.

FROM THE WASHINGTON AGENT.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 24, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The convention has come and gone. Its echoes are still in the papers. A brother, in a recent ministers' meeting which I attended, said of a certain measure, "It must be right; the Pittsburgh Leader and Father O'Crackerty are opposed to it." Judging from the same standpoint, our convention must have been right. Had the father of lies written the report which appeared in that paper, it could scarcely have been farther from the truth. Many of the papers manifested a disposition to treat us fairly. A column was given on the front page of the Press which very fairly represented the facts. The Commercial Gazette had over one column that would have impressed the candid reader with the fact that we were more than a gathering of cranks to fight mullein-stalks

Indeed, considering the natural desire of editors to please their readers, we were generally treated with respect.

The sessions were all fairly well attended. The names of 118 delegates and friends were reported by the Enrollment Committee. The attendance varied from 200 to 600, President Blanchard having about the latter number to listen to him on Monday evening. A rain storm, and the return of some delegates to their homes, diminished the Tuesday evening attendance; but it was nearly as large as that of Monday evening. The attendance was not local. Many towns of western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio were represented. Among the churches distinguished by the attendance of members, I noticed the following: Lutheran, Free and Wesleyan Methodist, M. E., U. B., U. P., R. P., and Presbyterian; Friends (No Sect), Congregationalist and Baptist. A large proportion of the delegates were ministers. This was but natural, as they do not usually go behind screen-doors with bad men when seeking to learn "piety, morality and science." The addresses were generally concise and pointed. They differed as widely as the individuals presenting them. President Blanchard, as usual, hit the nail on the head at every stroke. Prof. Coleman's "Outside View" showed an "inside knowledge." Rev. Mr. Weaver brought words of courage and cheer. He believed that 70 per cent of the Presbyterian ministry were at heart opposed to the lodge, though but few were present to testify. Rev. Wm. Dillon's clear, loving, cutting address was received with applause. Rev. J. H. Schuh's address has been complimented by many. It was logical and convincing. I never heard the lodge charity claim so thoroughly answered.

The New England agent acted his part as "general all-around man," as usual. There was not time for brief replies to all the questions asked, or many of those who wanted only five minutes to speak. The resolutions presented by Dr. McAllister drew out much warm discussion.

The last resolution was not unanimously adopted. A report of the arguments presented, pro and con, would be of interest, but time forbids mention here. The Committee on Correspondence reported a shower of letters—some of them too long to read.

I shall not forget the warm and cordial welcome extended us by the pastor of the church in which we met. Dr. Littell left undone nothing in his power to show us that we were indeed, as he said, most cordially welcome. God will bless him, if the newspapers don't.

Cash and pledges, aggregating about $285, were secured to the State work. They will be duly reported by the treasurer-elect.

I secured Cynosure subscriptions about as fast as I could ask the friends to take it. How could they refuse, with God's spirit and love for the advocacy of truth urging them to do their utmost to overcome that which would destroy our free institutions.

There seems to be but one opinion of the friends regarding the convention. All unite in a belief that it has been a success. A success financially; a success as to attendance; and, above all, a success because God's Spirit was there in awakening, convincing, convicting and, I trust, converting power. To the one who looks by faith beyond the veil, the straws of clay and earth, called wealth, appear insignificant. What is it which makes a woman clad in calico stand at the street corner on the so-called St. Patrick's day for hours, shivering with cold and holding an infant of days wailing in her arms? You reply, "the brass band and men marching bedecked with green ribbons." No, that is not the secret of it. There is, down deep in that woman's heart, a longing for something better than she has ever found at home. She knows not the "joy that passeth understanding," and her longing heart grasps for earth's straws, if perchance they may bring relief to that troubled heart. Not so with the true reformer, if in his advocacy of truth God prospers him, send applause and gold, he may be thankful; but, believing the God who has given him every blessing he enjoys, he looks beyond the changing, fleeting things of earth, and while the multitude march by to kill the snakes on St. Patrick's day, or bury a dead Mason with a brass band, to be eaten with worms, he is willing, yea, glad, to meet with the few or many who may gather in God's house to calmly and thoughtfully consult as to what may be done to save the marching rabble. This is why our convention was a success. This is why every convention guided by the hand which holds the universe will be a success.

W. B. STODDARD.

REFORM NEWS.

REV. WM. FENTON IN MORMONDON.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
March 17, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—To-day is a Mormon jubilee, and about 5,000 people, ninety-five per cent being females, assembled in the Mormon tabernacle, nearly every woman having a child in her arms. Programs of the exercises were distributed. One of the exercises named was: "Prayer at high-noon," an expression belonging to the sun-worship practiced in Masonic lodges, scandalizing the Bible.

It seems to be a well-established fact that oaths with Masonic penalties, taken in the Endowment House, are the bonds that unite the people of Mormondom.

The Assembly Hall is a building 68 feet by 120 feet, about one-fourth as large as the tabernacle. It is used when the weather is too cold to warm the tabernacle sufficiently. As I went into the hall, a Mormon, 79 years of age, followed me. Some paintings on the ceiling of the hall attracted my attention. Pointing to one of them my attendant, the Mormon, informed me that that represented the prophet Maroni presenting the plates of the Book of Mormon to Joseph Smith; that Maroni had them hid in a hill at Palmyra, (New York); that by the help of Urim and Thummim, Smith was enabled to read as much of them as is printed in the Book of Mormon. After translating that, he returned the plates to the prophet, who hid them in the hill again; but, said the Mormon, they are bound to come forth again at the proper time; and he quoted the words of Christ to prove why they should be concealed for the time being, Acts 1: 7. I was interested, and an attentive listener. He went on to explain the other paintings on the ceiling. That, said he, is the three apostles, James, Peter and John, making Joseph Smith (who was represented kneeling at their feet) a priest after the order of Melchisedek; and (pointing to a third picture) he said: That is the apostle John blessing Joseph Smith. I asked him if Smith actually saw these apostles in the form of men. He assured me that he did, as certainly as Christ saw Moses and Elias. I asked him if he believed in a plurality of wives. He answered by saying that Jesus Christ was a polygamist. I asked him for the evidence of that. He said: If Judge Zane had half as much evidence against me as there is that Christ was a polygamist he would soon have me in the pen. And for proof that Christ was a polygamist he referred to the marriage at Cana, recorded in the second chapter of John; and by misapplications and interpolations of irrelevant passages of Scripture from other parts of the Bible, he undertook to show that at that marriage Christ was the bridegroom and Mary and Martha were two of his wives. For, said he: "Did he not call himself a bridegroom?" When I remarked that Christ was represented in the Bible as a bridegroom only in a spiritual relationship to the entire Christian church, as the bride,

(Continued on 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE GRAND ARMY "ARCHITECT."

G——, Ind., 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Does the Grand Army of the Republic, as such, in its religious devotions in any of its organized capacities, render worship to the same God that the religious portion of its members do when joining in religious services in their respective churches? Take this expression, used in resolutions of condolence for a comrade, or for a friend of a member of the Women's Relief Corps:

"WHEREAS, it has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to remove," etc.

The above is in keeping with all the kindred secret society orders.

It seems to the Christian mind a blasphemy to call the Eternal Jehovah by such names, and so lightly speak of him before whom angels veil their faces. But the irreverence comes from a want of a proper respect, and recognition, of the living and true God; and it will be so while all secret orders worship nature as God, or render homage to the creature, instead of the Creator. W.

A HIGH-DEGREE MASON RUMPLED.

[On the 13th instant, Rev. J. M. Foster, pastor of the Second Reformed Presbyterian church in Boston, preached an effective sermon in opposition to secret societies. The Boston Evening News, next day, printed a defective report of the sermon, which caused the writer of the following letter to express his dissatisfaction to Mr. Foster. We also print Mr. Foster's reply.—EDITOR.]

BOSTON, March 15, 1892.

Rev. J. M. Foster, pastor Second Reformed Presbyterian Church, Boston,

DEAR SIR:—I clipped the enclosed from the Boston Evening News, last night, and being a Freemason of high degree, and also a man who not only believes but also practices the golden precepts taught by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, I must say that I was astounded to find that a minister of the Gospel, who apparently is woefully deficient in the knowledge and practice of that ancient and honorable body of Freemasons, should make such wholesale charges without first making a thorough investigation. Let me propound a few questions to you: Are you aware that George Washington, the Father of his Country, was a prominent Freemason? Also Benjamin Franklin and President of the United States James A. Garfield; also, most of the prominent ministers of the Gospel of various denominations in this our beautiful city of Boston; also, that our present Governor, Wm. E. Russell (whose character is above reproach), have all been or are members of this ancient institution? Are you aware that the pillars of nearly every Protestant church in America and Europe are Masons?

Now, do you really and truly believe that all these are bad men and cut-throats? Or don't you think that either of these men whose names I have mentioned have even surpassed yourself in Christian work? Your remarks indicate that you have something very startling to reveal about Freemasonry. Pray, why did you not do it? Are you wroth because of not having gained admission to a lodge of Freemasons? If so, I regret that you have not more Christian forbearance. Kindly give me some of your evidence as to the wickedness you seem to infer, and when you are down town please call in and see me at my office, as I am always pleased to meet good men, whatever their belief or doctrine.

You probably have little conception how numerous the Masonic bodies are all over the civilized world, and not least in Boston, and that the churches would fare worse without Masons than they would without intellectually hospitable and Christianized teachers of the way of eternal salvation.

Hoping to hear from you, and also to have the pleasure of meeting you at an early date, I am

Yours in Christian brotherhood,

JOHN MATTSON.

MR. FOSTER'S REPLY.

56 PINCKNEY ST., BOSTON, Mass., }
March 17, 1892. }

BRO. MATTSON:—Your communication of the 15th inst. has been received. I am sorry you did not hear the sermon. The impression might have been different from that produced by the garbled report you have seen.

You are in error in designating Freemasonry as "an ancient order." It took its rise at the Apple-tree Tavern, Covent Garden, London, England, June 24, 1717.

It is true that Washington was initiated into the Masonic lodge. It is also true that he absented himself from all lodge meetings during the last forty years of his life.

The greatest statesmen have repudiated the lodge. John Quincy Adams said: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land." President Millard Fillmore and forty other leaders in politics, in an address to the American people, said: "The Masonic fraternity trample upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control." Thaddeus Stevens, Charles Sumner, Charles Francis Adams, Daniel Webster, Wendell Phillips, and U. S. Grant opposed secret societies. In Boston, Joseph Cook, Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, Rev. A. A. Miner, D. D., Rev. Dr. Plumb, Rev. Dr. Roberts, Rev. Dr. Bates, and others oppose the lodge.

Every Christian should repudiate the lodge, because secretism is opposed to Christianity; because the lodge administers oaths which are unlawful; because it uses the time and money belonging to the church and the family; because it is essentially selfish, and because it is idolatrous, worshiping not God in Christ, but "the god of this world." Yours, J. M. FOSTER.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

GATHERED FROM ORIGINAL AND SELECT SOURCES.

FARM HANDS WANTED.

A letter from Rev. C. G. Fait, at Monango, Dickey Co., North Dakota, says: "There will be great demand for farm-hands in North Dakota the coming season. About one-fourth of the wheat crop raised last season was standing in the stack, unthreshed (in January last). The failure to finish up the threshing last fall is attributed to a scarcity of both men and machines. All kinds of men can find employment on the farms at good wages. The undersigned would like to employ a man by the year who is a genuine reformer—free from the lodges, free from tippling, free from gambling, and free from profanity—a genuine Christian. From $2.00 to $2.50 per day was paid for hands from the commencement of harvest until late in the fall."

G. A. R. AND MASONRY.

In a preamble to some resolutions of condolence adopted by the "Howell Woman's Relief Corps, No. 32," in a neighboring State, the other day, the removal of a "sister" by death was attributed to "The Great Architect of the Universe." Now, will some one tell us whether the worship of Freemasonry and the G. A. R., to which the "Relief Corps" is auxiliary, is similar, and whether the two orders are not identical in many other respects? If the truth could be known, it is probable that close relations between them would be found.

MUNICIPAL CORRUPTION AND ROMANISM.

The (Chicago Baptist) Standard's New York letter notes the recent sermon of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, of the Madison Square Presbyterian church, exposing the municipal corruption in that city. As President of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, he touched upon the pernicious influence of Tammany in giving the people such disgraceful rulers. The correspondent thinks that "beneath all the evils of Tammanyism lies Romanism." Quoting the remark of John Brisben Walker before the Catholic University at Washington, that the Catholics (himself being one) of New York are "chiefly responsible for the existence of both these evils"—"corrupt city rule and the evils of unlimited drinking saloons"—the correspondent adds: "Tammanyism in this city is but another name for Romanism. Romanism is the root and trunk of the tree; Tammanyism is its flower and fruit. All New Yorkers were humiliated on a recent public occasion when Archbishop Corrigan appeared upon the platform, and Mayor Grant, who was presiding on the occasion, arose before the whole audience, knelt at the archbishop's feet and kissed his hand. Romanism controls this city, from the mayor down to the woman who washes the court-house steps. Romanism is entrenched in every saloon, and is supported in no small part by the income received as the price of permitting sin of every kind to abound. It would be possible to go into all these matters at great length and to prove every statement here made as well as to justify even stronger assertions than these."

THE JESUITS.

"The idea which the average non-Catholic has of the Jesuits, corresponds with his idea of a Satanic corporation. Consequently the critics are not prepared to admit that Loyola was anything less than a monster, crazy and tyrannical, who invented with the devil's aid a means of holding men a few centuries longer to the Catholic superstition." So says the New York Catholic Review; and it requires only a perusal of several books written by the Jesuits to confirm this idea. Out of their own publications do God and man condemn them.

LITERATURE.

DISTINCTIVE PRINCIPLES OF THE COVENANTERS. By Rev. J. M. Foster, pastor of the Second Reformed Presbyterian Church, Chambers street, Boston. Published by the author, 56 Pinckney street, Boston.

Rev. J. M. Foster is one of the truest and most practical reformers of the day, as his articles printed, from time to time, in the Cynosure abundantly testify. His activity in advocating the most prominent reforms of the day is only equaled by the depth and earnestness of his efforts for their adoption. A strong thinker, he does not often lack power and thoroughness in his work, and whatever he writes is worthy of perusal, even if it fails to convince the reader of its importance.

The pamphlet before us is a synopsis of the doctrines of the Covenanter church and the work which it is designed to accomplish. It consists of five distinct essays, as follows: "The Church Christ's Witness;" "The True Church;" "The Book of Psalms the Church's Manual of Praise;" "Our Political Dissent;" "The State and Secret Societies." Considered in the light of theological teachings; or as urgent pleas for social and political reform in several directions, these essays embody much wholesome thought and a safe course of action to be followed in the promotion of the best interests of the church and the nation. The following is his touching dedication: "To the memory of my father and mother, in the hope that their faith shall live in their children's children, this tract is dedicated."

The Review of Reviews for March fully maintains the extraordinary interest of its monthly portrait gallery. Its frontispiece is a fine picture of the late Mr. Spurgeon. In the "Progress of the World" the best of Grover Cleveland's new photographs is reproduced, as is also the newest and best of Postmaster-General Wanamaker. There is an excellent portrait of Mr. Blaine, a very fine one of President Harrison, another of Justice Fuller, another of the late Justice Bradley, of the Supreme Court. There appear the faces of Chairman Bland of the Coinage Committee; the late John Jay Knox; Judge Foster of Chili; the late Duke of Clarence; his brother George the present heir to the British throne; the late Benjamin Scott, for fifty years Chamberlain of the City of London; the young Khedive of Egypt; Anderledy, generalissimo of the Jesuits; Clemenceau, who has just overthrown the French Cabinet; of M. D. Freycinet, the defeated French premier; of M. Chadourne, lately expelled from France; of Lord Vivian, the new English minister to Rome; of the distinguished philanthropist, Lady Sandhurst, who has lately died; of Professor R. T. Ely, the head of Wisconsin's new School of Economics and Politics; and, what is rarely seen, a portrait of Mr. D. L. Moody. The character sketch of Mr. Spurgeon has a fine sitting portrait of Mr. Spurgeon in his library, and a full-page showing Mr. Spurgeon in the pulpit in the days of his prime, thirty years ago. The character sketch of Cardinal Manning has a large portrait of the late Cardinal, and the sketch of Sir Morrell Mackenzie has a sitting half-tone portrait of that eminent physician. In the leading Articles of the Month appear excellent portraits of Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, of the Christian Union; Editor Flower, of the Arena; Professor Virchow; the late Khedive; M. Durnovo, the Russian Minister of the Interior; and Heinrich von Sybel, the great German historian. Certainly this great array of fine illustrative portraiture is worth more than the price of the magazine. Published at 13 Astor Place, New York.

The Missionary Review of the World for April opens with a fitting tribute to Charles Haddon Spurgeon, by the editor-in-Chief, Dr. A. T. Pierson, who has been supplying Mr. Spurgeon's pulpit during his illness. Rev. James Johnston, of London, England, reviews "A Generation of Christian Progress in India," picturing graphically the advancement made in the last forty years in that country. Other articles of timely interest fill the department of Literature of Missions. Mr. Johnston's article is supplemented by three other most stirring ones in the International department, the first by Rev. Henry Mansell, D.D., of Cawnpore, on "The Great Pentecost in North India;" the second by Rev. T. J. Scott, D.D., principal of the Theological Seminary at Bareilly, "The Quick Baptism by North India Missionaries;" and the third by Rev. F. L. Neeld, of Bareilly, on "Hindu Puritan Reform—The Arya Somaj." The "Monthly Concert of Missions" also takes up India and Hinduism, and is ably treated by Dr. J. T. Gracey. The "General Missionary Intelligence" department, as usual, sums up the work in all the fields. Published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year.

An Australian pearl-diver will recount his experiences in the April Century. He says that one of the strange effects of diving is the invariable bad temper felt while working at the bottom of the sea; and as this usually passes away as soon as the surface is reached, it may be supposed to be due to the pressure of air inside the dress, affecting the lungs, and through them the brain. A diver often becomes so angry at some imaginary wrongdoing on the part of those in the boat above that he gives the signal to be pulled up, "with the intention of knocking the heads off the entire crew,"—only to forget what he came up for when the surface is reached.

Vick's Illustrated Monthly Magazine for March is replete with a great variety of good things of seasonable import, in literature, floriculture, horticulture and "garden-sass." The illustrations are numerous and expressive. Rochester, N. Y.: The Vick Publishing Co.; 50 cents per year.

IN BRIEF.

General Booth, while in India, was presented, by a woman penitent, with the nose ring which she wore. Other penitents gave up their gods. All these things he boxed, and brought to England as curios.

Not long ago in London a preacher indulged in this little bit of sarcasm over a small collection: "When I look at the congregation," said he, "I ask, Where are the poor? And when I look at the collection I ask, Where are the rich?"—Exchange.

The World's Fair buildings are rapidly taking shape. One million dollars a month is being expended in the buildings alone. It is expected to be ready to dedicate in October, 1892, the anniversary of the landing of Columbus at San Salvador. All the relics of Columbus and his party that can be procured will be brought to Chicago for exhibition.

Mrs. French-Sheldon, the explorer of Africa, headed a retinue of 108 persons, all black; and, starting from Zanzibar, went first to Mombasa, thence 350 miles into the interior through pathless jungles. In interviews with local chiefs, she always appeared in full court dress, which was not without its impression. Her purpose was to investigate the social condition of the natives, and her observations will be given to the public in a book.

Mrs. Potter Palmer will drive the last nail used in the completion of the woman's building in the World's Fair. The head of the nail is so made as to bear the coat-of-arms of Montana, reproduced in native gold, without a trace of alloy in its composition. The figures, which are to be in different colored gold, will be wrought separately, and then fastened together, making the task not only a delicate, but exceedingly difficult one, and one requiring much skill and patience, as the figures are to be wrought, not engraved. This is the work of Montana women. The women of Nebraska are going to contribute a hammer which shall be worthy of contact with the aristocratic nail. The hammer is to be made of native Nebraska woods, inlaid with gold, silver and pearl.

It is asserted that the electric heater is so nearly developed on a thoroughly practical basis that it can be available at a slight increase in cost over present methods, an increase which the electricians say should be more than made up in the superiority of cleanliness and convenience. In the broiling and wilting July days of the near future the housewife in her cool kitchen may press a button and have the strongest, hottest fire she needs at a moment's notice. The cooking done, a touch on another button will set the same power to work on the electric fans. On cold winter mornings the fire may be started by a touch on a button beside the pillow, and the domestic infelicities caused by discussions as to whose duty it is to get up and start the fire will be avoided.—Boston Journal.

The size of the biggest ball ever fired from a cannon was four feet in length and weighing 2,600 pounds. Such were the dimensions and weight of the enormous projectile fired from the largest cannon yet manufactured at Krupp's works at Essen, for the fortifications at Cronstadt. It is made of the finest quality of cast steel and weighs 270,000 pounds (about 135 tons). The caliber is 16 1/4 inches and the barrel 44 feet long, the core having been removed in one piece. The greatest diameter is six and one-half feet, and range about twelve miles. It will fire two shots per minute, each estimated to cost £300. At the trial the projectile was propelled by a charge of 700 pounds of powder and penetrated nineteen inches of armor, going 1,312 yards beyond the target.—London Tidbits.

The new metal, aluminum, which is now coming into such wide use, was not reported in 1880, 1881 or 1882; in 1883 the quantity reported was eighty-three pounds, valued at $875, or $10.54 per pound; the product increased in 1884 to 150 pounds, in 1885 to 483 pounds, in 1886 to 3,000 pounds, valued at nine

It is better to take Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil when that decline in health begins—the decline which precedes consumption—rather than wait for the germ to begin to grow in our lungs.

"Prevention is better than cure;" and surer. The saying never was truer than here.

What is it to prevent consumption?

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

39

The Washington Souvenir,
Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots
WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

- Washington.
- John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
- James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
- Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
- Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
- Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
- Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
- John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
- Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
- William Wirt, Attorney-General.
- John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
- John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
- Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
- Lebbeus Armstrong, founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
321 W Madison St., Chicago

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, terms and council. 25cts each.

dollars per pound; in 1887 the product was 18,000 pounds, valued at $3.28 per pound; in 1888 the production was 19,000 pounds, and in 1889 the quantity produced rose to 47,468 pounds, valued at $97,335 or 2.05 per pound. The reduction in the price has continued, until it is less than one dollar per pound; and it is claimed that it may be so cheaply extracted from clay in which it is abundant, as to be sold at a few cents per pound and still give the manufacturer a profit. If so, there is practically no limit to the uses to which it may be put.

It has been conjectured that the secret of antediluvian longevity was some method of keeping the blood pure, warm and vigorous. Moderns accomplish the same purpose by using Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best blood medicine ever brought to light.

Baldness ought not to come till the age of 55 or later. If the hair begins to fall earlier, use Hall's Hair Renewer and prevent baldness and grayness.

"Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children's Teething" softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain and cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

- 3. Address to American Pastors.
- 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
- 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
- 8. Modern Heathenism.
- 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
- 10. A Pastor's Confession.
- 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
- 15. Secrecy and Sin.
- 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
- 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
- 38. Masonic Oaths and Penalties.
- 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
- 42. Our Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry.
- 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
- 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- The Masonic Oath Itself a Perjury (40 cents per pound).

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4 1/2 St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

LECTURERS AT LARGE.—H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, Ohio; William Fenton, 74 So. Robert Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE AGENTS.

- Minnesota,* E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
- New Hampshire,* Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
- Pennsylvania,* Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
- Alabama,* Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin, O.
- Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnotson, Haskinville, N. Y.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Aurora, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams
As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1835

Compiled and Arranged by John U. Undersea,
Lieutenant-General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK BOOKS,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
321 West Madison St., Chicago

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions solicited from every friend of the reform

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., L. E. Lincoln, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton; Vice-Pres., Wm. Pinkney, New Windsor; Rec. Sec., Miss E. C. Pinkney, New Windsor; Cor. Sec., A. W. Parry, Aurora.

IOWA.—Pres., L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., Rev. C. H. Strong, Lawrence; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. L. Countertermine Hiawatha; Sec., Rev. D. H. Coulter, Winchester; Treas., Rev. B. B. Paull, Neosho Falls.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., E. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Charles L. Baker, Kittery Point, Me.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. S. R. Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., Lucius Woodruff, Binghamton.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. K. Galloway, Vernon; Vice-Pres., Isaiah Faris; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., J. W. Wood, Baraboo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $1.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1892.

CHEAP SILVER—CHEAP MONEY.

It is recorded of Solomon that "he made silver in Jerusalem as stones," and that "silver was nothing accounted of" in his reign. The obvious reason of the decline in value was the extreme plenteousness of the metal. It simply followed the law of supply and demand, and its commercial value became comparatively small.

Nor was this result on account of any demone-tization of silver, nor of any falling off in demand. In the greatly extended commercial relations with neighboring countries, the demand must have largely increased. It was merely because the supply was still greater.

Whether all, or any, of this silver was mined in Palestine, or whether it was all imported, we do not know, but in either case the result was the same.

Nor was this decline in commercial value regarded as a calamity. On the other hand, it seems to have been regarded as a great achievement of the great and wise king. The same process has been going on in our land, and throughout the world. The enormous production of silver during the last twenty-five years has reduced its commercial value about forty per cent, and, in spite of legislation, the decline must continue until the rapid accumulation is arrested—a result that is not at all probable. Ought we to regard this abundance and cheapness of silver as a calamity? Ought we not to regard it as a beneficent providence? We so regard the cheapness of other metals. The decline in the price of iron, and especially of steel, has added greatly to our individual and national prosperity. The fall in the price of aluminum from $200 to less than fifty cents per pound has made its use possible in innumerable instances in which human well-being will be promoted. Silver has many other uses than as a measure of value. Its use in the arts must greatly increase. Whether it will ever become to us "as stones" remains to be seen; but, whatever puts its use for common purposes within the reach of the laboring poor, who constitute the great mass of the people of this world, will be a most undoubted blessing.

Can free coinage arrest this decline? It does not seem probable. The present law, which requires the purchase of 4,000,000 ounces per month, and which provides for the consumption of nearly, if not all, that is produced in our land, has failed to keep up the price. It has, under this law, touched a lower point than ever before. Would free coinage diminish its production? No—it would increase it. Suppose this decline were arrested, and the commercial value of an ounce of silver were considerably increased, would it be a benefit to mankind? No—it would simply help the owners of silver mines, and it would help them at the expense of their fellow-men. The world is not suffering because of the cheapness of copper and steel. Why should it suffer because of a decline in silver?

But it is said that we need more money, and we need a cheaper material than gold out of which to make it. Well, if cheapness is the object, then paper is cheaper than silver, and as a medium of exchange is vastly more convenient. In neither case is silver or paper worth more than its commercial value. Silver dollars and paper dollars are in each case not actual dollars, but only our nation's promises to pay. Nobody will be made rich by their issuance, except as we can exchange for them our labor and its products.

Cheap silver will greatly benefit us as a people, but cheap money ought to be regarded as a calamity.

Since the above was written the House of Representatives at Washington has voted upon the reconsideration of the vote by which the House had previously refused to table Bland's free coinage bill. The vote was a tie, 148 members against 148; a result that amazed and tended to discourage the free coinage men. The opposition to the bill consisted of sixty-seven Republicans and eighty-one Democrats; the support of it consisted of seven Republicans, 132 Democrats, and the entire nine Farmers' Alliance or Independent members. This test is not final, but indicates a strong probability that the effort to flood the country with silver money will be defeated in Congress.

The "true inwardness" of free coinage of silver is easily understood. If the owner of a piece of silver that is actually worth only 70 cents had only to take it to a mint to get it made a legal tender for 100 cents, he has evidently made 30 cents on the transaction, minus the cost of transportation and the few cents charged by the government to cover the actual expense of coinage. The net profit could not be less than 25 per cent.

Dr. Koch, president of the Imperial German Bank, the great financial institution of Germany, thinks the passage of a free-silver law would have a very bad effect on American prosperity. Any sudden change in the currency would have a disturbing effect, and so much more the change to a baser metal. The result of such a step would be to turn the current of gold still stronger toward Europe, to lower American credit, and ultimately to hurt those who expected the greatest benefit from the law.

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO.

New York and Chicago are representative cities of the United States. New York, the oldest and largest, had a population, in 1890, of 1,515,301, and Chicago, of 1,099,850. The gain in the census in the latter within two years is probably 100,000. Possibly New York now contains 1,600,000 souls. These cities, aggregating, at a reasonable estimate, 2,800,000 inhabitants, make a remarkable text for a sermon on municipal morality. No man or woman who has love and veneration for our American institutions has much reason to take pride in the present status of either city, and, as patriots, cannot indorse their political government.

"At least one-third of the citizens of New York are Roman Catholics, of whom (says a periodical printed there this month) 7,000 are saloon-keepers, who employ at least 15,000 Roman Catholic bar-keepers to assist them, and these 22,000 have relatives and friends connected by marriage that swell the number of persons directly interested in the liquor traffic to the formidable list of 200,000. All are Roman Catholics." . . . "In the police force there are at least 2,000 Roman Catholics who are friendly to the saloon-keepers; and among the other thousands employed in the city government, nine-tenths are Roman Catholics." There are 9,000 saloons in the city.

How about Chicago? Nine-tenths of her population are foreign-born or their children born to them here. We have 6,000 saloons, with probably 140,000 bar-tenders and other persons directly interested in their support. We have a police force largely made up of Roman Catholics. We have a city government mostly run by foreign-born citizens. We have more than 1,200 secret lodges, and only about 300 churches, a large proportion of which cannot be classed as devoted to orthodox Christianity.

And these are typical American cities.

THE SABBATH QUESTION WORLD-WIDE.

The International Federation for the Observance of Sunday is an important association—a union of various national and local organizations in European states which are aiming to secure Sunday rest for all classes. Its chief office is at Geneva, Switzerland, and its secretary, E. Deluz, was also secretary of the Sunday rest congress, which was held during the Paris exposition. Last week the New York Sabbath Committee received a copy of a recent memorial from the Federation, in which these pointed passages occur:

"The closing of the Chicago Exposition on Sunday is, in our humble judgment, a duty of the highest order from whatever point of view it is regarded. The Exposition will employ a large personnel. To deprive them of their weekly rest for so long a period is to rob them of a right which they cannot lose without more or less injury to their health of body and mind, to their family and social life, and to their moral dignity. In our old continent we know too well the evils of every kind which accrue to the individual and all connected with him through the deprivation of that blessed halt which comes with every seventh day, to renew physical strength, to refresh the faculties of the mind and to satisfy the aspirations of the heart—that we feel bound to hold on high on such an occasion as this the banner of Sunday observance, just as the people of the United States have heretofore so nobly done at the expositions of New York and Philadelphia.

"It is certain that your decision upon the matter before us will have a serious influence upon our old Europe, where we are striving by means of congresses and our various associations to promote in all circles the wise use of Sunday. If your decision is on the side of Sunday closing the noble example which your country will once more give to the world will contribute to the progress of the cause of Christianity and humanity, which we are defending, and will put honor upon American industry."

In connection with this important question, we are pleased to learn that Pres. Charles A. Blanchard addressed a fine audience in the College chapel at Wheaton, last Sunday evening, upon this topic. The president takes the ground that "the Sabbath was made for man," and that its proper observance rests upon the divine commandment.

THE OPIUM VICE.

On the third page of this issue we print a startling paper on the extent of the opium vice in Asia, which appears to be assuming enormous proportions, and threatening to work immense injury to the people of that continent. If that were all, the danger would be sufficiently appalling, but the vice appears to be invading other countries to an alarming extent.

Giving credence to the statement of two Hindoo students who came to the United States from England, not long ago, and delivered lectures upon the evils of the opium traffic, there are about 10,000,000 ounces of this drug annually grown in their country, under the sanction and control of the Government of India. One-fourth of this product is consumed in that empire, and the balance is exported to China and other nations.

The debasement which this trade, said these Hindoos, has brought upon the very name of Christian nations in heathen lands, and the effect which it has had in almost paralyzing Christian labor there, is demoralizing. Among other fears expressed by these lecturers is that the continuation of the traffic in their country will bring the return of the plague, which formerly visited it. "Only fifty years ago," they said, "our grandfathers did not dream that opium would bring ruin upon us, and now from the statistical reports of the Government and from the history of the opium curse itself, we can prophesy with absolute certainty that this opium traffic will bring the like calamities, if not worse ones, to the other nations of the world, if it is allowed to continue longer." This prophecy may well be heeded. Let the opium vice get as firm a hold upon the citizens of the United States as has the drink-habit and the lodge, and this nation would be in a most deplorable condition. As a form of iniquity, it is more to be dreaded than the saloon and its influence. As a source of physical and mental degeneracy it is unsurpassed.

—The Prohibition National Convention will meet in Cincinnati, Ohio, June 29 and 30, instead of at St. Louis, Mo., as at first announced. It is desirable that every State and Congressional district should be represented on that occasion.

—There is a great difference between higher education and higher criticism. The one tends to build up the student to the stature and image of a perfect man, mentally and morally; the other is an iconoclast, whose tendency is to belittle the great and good in higher education, and to create doubt and suspicion as to the truths of God.

—Citizens of Philadelphia, last week, forwarded a number of memorials to the United States Senate, asking that Congress refuse any and all appropriations for the Columbian Exposition unless coupled with a restriction absolutely closing the gates of the Fair on the Sabbath. There is a strong undercurrent of similar feeling on this subject in other places besides Philadelphia, to which an early expression should be given. Opposition to the Sunday-closing of the Exposition ought to be promptly met.

—The pastor of a new religious society in Washington, known as "The People's Church," recently created a sensation among his auditors, by taking the ground that a man cannot, under the prevailing commercial methods, be a Christian and achieve great success in his vocation. In the course of his sermon he had the courage to say: "It is impossible to reconcile the principles of any Christian denomination with the sharp practices of commerce." The sermon has received a large share of unfavorable criticism, while many of his statements met with a candid acceptance.

—The recently-elected Bishop Brooks is rather independent for a churchman. He writes letters to the clergy on paper bearing his individual instead of his Episcopal monogram; he appears in public church services without his robe, and not long ago, went to an un-Episcopal meeting wearing a coat that was not black. To those outside of the Protestant Episcopal church these may appear to be trifles, but inside of it they are serious offences. Yet it would seem as if the new bishop is blessed with a very fair heritage of common sense.

—The Cynosure was evidently not far out of the way, the other day, when it designated Terence V. Powderly as a thorough demagogue. The St. Louis Vanguard says of him, that as the leader of a strong secret society and a pronounced Roman Catholic, he "cannot be expected to act contrary to his principles;" and we think that no one ever accused him of being unfaithful to them. On the ground that "a man is no better than his principles, and can be trusted no farther," whatever pretension Mr. Powderly may make to religious or political purity, he is only the wily leader of the blind whom he deceives.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A famous almanac.—Dr. Townsend's "bomb-shell" again.—A peculiar case in the Bromfield church.—A correction.—Some irregular doings of lodge cashiers in New Hampshire.

Happening to take down the "Old Farmers' Almanac" to-day for consultation, it struck me that the quotation from Whittier, for March, was peculiarly appropriate, considering the very un-spring-like character of the month ever since it came in:

"We wait for thy coming, sweet wind of the South."

Waited, indeed!—while the storm-blasts have raved without, and the white earth, under its chill covering, has looked as bare and dead as if the "yearly evancl" of opening buds and springing grass was never again to be renewed. But at last the cold, sleety patter of fast-falling rain-drops, accompanying an old-fashioned "line-storm," proclaim that the spell is broken. Do the flowers know it, I wonder?—May-flowers, and crocuses, and violets? Does a thrill go through the heart of Mother Earth as her babies stir in their sleep? and does she vainly try to hold them back when they want to peep up through the damp clod, with bug-bear stories of old Boreas and Jack Frost still abroad in the land?—which of course the silly things never believe till they have had their own way and suffered the consequences.

Speaking of the "Old Farmers' Almanac," is there a New Englander, "to the manner born and bred," who does not feel his heart warm at the sight of its yellow covers hanging up in the kitchen; or given a higher place of honor, as in the writer's own combined library, study and sitting-room, where, against the dark wood-work of the fire-place, it makes a bright bit of decorative color which I am so much of a Philistine as to prefer to all the spread fans and other exactly out-of-place monstrosities that many people now-a-days consider "so æsthetic." Fifty years ago it was one of the fixed institutions of every respectable New England home, held next in honor to the Bible; eagerly welcomed by old and young, when books and magazines were not as plenty as now, and read through with very little "skipping," from the notice of eclipses and other heavenly phenomena;—I believe I have not yet got over my childish wonder, why the most interesting of those seemed to be always "visible" in Africa or Polynesia, or some other out-of-the-way corner of the globe where only savages could have the benefit of the display, and "invisible" nearer home;—through all the bits of bucolic wisdom scattered along, to the "poetry, humor, and anecdote," at the close. What a never-failing fund of mysterious interest I used to find in the weather prognostications:—"cold, blustering, warm, fine again;"—nor would it be difficult to find among the aged dwellers in country districts not a few who still consult its oracle with undiminished faith, and a sublime ignoring of the weather bureau at Washington. Even the bits of verse, generally from some well-known poet, which headed every month, must have brought their iota of refining influence into the hard prose of the bookless, pictureless life of many a New England homestead. Surely, Robert B. Thomas, whose portrait, now in possession of the Antiquarian Society of Worcester, is shown in its centennial issue for 1892 as a very stately and white-headed old gentleman, with a cane which he looks much too straight and erect to need, and his hair tied in a queue behind,—when he realized the ambition of his life, and published the first copy of his famous Almanac, builded for immortality "better than he knew."

The effect of Dr. Townsend's "bomb-shell" has by no means subsided. A large attendance gathered at the Methodist Ministers' Meeting, at Wesleyan Hall, last Monday, to hear his reply to the criticisms which have been called out by the address on "Clerical Politics." Dr. Townsend remarked in the beginning that no retractions would be made by him from what he had said. He had expected agitation, and wrote for that purpose. Also, that his answer would consist mainly of letters received, none of which were anonymous, although for certain reasons their names for the present would be withheld; but as soon as he had begun to read them, he was interrupted by Dr. Chadbourne, and another member, who insisted that he should not be allowed to go on unless he would give the names then and there. This he refused to do, but offered to submit all correspondence to a committee of laymen, of which he would select one, his critics should select one, and the two should select a third. But this arrangement, though eminently fair, did not suit the opposing side, and an extraordinary scene of confusion ensued, with hissing and cries of "Shame!" Dr. Townsend finally offered, if given two weeks, to so prepare his address that it should contain only letters whose authors were willing to have their names known, and the matter has accordingly been postponed for a fortnight. The interruption may have been, as the doctor thinks, a premeditated plan on the part of his opponents; but they certainly have not gained much by their attempt to break up or delay his evidence. It will be likely to arouse more interest and hit harder when it comes. Their unministerial and unbecoming conduct cannot fail to carry its own commentary with it to the lay mind; and it will not be flattering either to their piety, their good sense, or their honesty.

The Methodist church is a house divided against itself. Her ministers have turned aside to become priests of Baal. The strange fires and unhallowed incense of lodge altars have polluted her holy places. Well may Bishop Foster preach in sadness and sorrow from the text, "Babylon is fallen!" Great was the church of the Wesleys; great is she even now in her shame, but greater yet may she become if she will repent of her sin, and cast from her the false worships that have wrought her ruin.

A rather novel case was the recent expulsion of one of the wealthiest members of the Bromfield Street church, on the charge of failing to attend or contribute to its support. His defence was that "there was trouble in the church with which he did not care to be mixed up; that he had been some of the time abroad, and that when at home he had been faithful to his obligation as laid down in the Discipline, by attending other Methodist churches, and giving liberally to the denomination at large." The eloquence of his counsel, Drs. Townsend and Ela, availed nothing, and his name was stricken from the rolls. An appeal, however, was made to the Conference, and the matter is not yet ended. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Crawford, in summing up the case, said that "the means of grace for Bro. Bishop existed only in the Bromfield Street church, to which he had sworn allegiance upon his admission to membership." This seems like a rather strait-jacket for a man or woman to don who has been made free in Christ. I do not pronounce on the merits of the case, knowing nothing of its true inwardness; but it looks, on the face of it, like another instance of that tyrannical power which the complicated machinery of Methodism allows her to use, and which has so often been manifested by the lodge power for the persecution of her worthwhile members.

Referring to my recent criticism of the editorial attack in the Star upon Rev. L. S. Kimball, for his article in the Traveller, a good brother writes me that it would have been well to have mentioned, as a matter of justice to the editor, his statement that "he is not a member of any secret order, and does not believe in them." I feel that an apology is in order for my neglect to do so. And yet, giving him all due credit, his position is not rendered more, but less, explicable thereby. If a Mason believes in the system, his attack on Bro. Kimball for simply stating facts that he has had exceptional opportunities for observing, could be better understood.

The following item is an interesting instance of the way in which the lodge takes care of the temporal interests of widows and orphans, when communities are foolish enough to entrust such to their charge:

"The New Market (N. H.) Savings Bank has failed, and Hon. Joshua Hall, of Dover, has been appointed receiver, to settle its affairs. The late cashier, Samuel A. Haley, was a prominent Freemason, and was buried with Masonic honors. His death revealed the unsound condition of the bank. This reminds us that all the great bank failures and defalcations in New Hampshire, for the past twenty years, have been caused by Freemasons. Storrs, of Concord, Lane, of Exeter, and Brackett, of Wolfboro, offenders in the three greatest bank catastrophes that have occurred in the State, were all Freemasons, and all escaped even arrest. Storrs and Lane were permitted leisurely to emigrate to parts unknown, and Brackett stood his ground, although widows and orphans lost half their property entrusted to his care. All these men were of the highest social standing, until their financial peculiarities were discovered."

The immunity from punishment which the officials of the defunct endowment orders enjoy is without doubt due to the same Masonic shield thrown around them. But the public is getting its eyes open, and the time will come when popular sentiment will echo the words of the brother to whom I am indebted for the above facts: "No Freemason is a suitable person to hold any public office or place of public trust. Their secret oaths disqualify them, however endowed by natural disposition."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

he flew into a passion and said that they, the Mormons, were sent to instruct and not to be instructed; that he was 79 years old; that he had 19 children, nine dozen grand-children, and nine great-grand-children. And, going away in a rage, he exclaimed: "All the harm I wish you, is that when you are as old as I am that you may be able to do as hard a day's work as I can."

The interruption was untimely, for otherwise, no doubt, he would have gone on and related much more of Mormon superstition and horrid blasphemy. He said enough, however, to settle the fact, in connection with the pictures on the ceiling of the Assembly Hall, that Mormonism is a fit companion of Masonry—a "master-piece of Satan," as Dr. Colver called the latter.

But Mormonism, like Masonry, corresponds to the after-times of which Paul wrote to Timothy, 1 Tim. 4: 1, 2: "Giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared as with a hot iron," leaving the "forbidding to marry" to apply to the Romish church.

Mormonism appears to be one stage in the fulfillment of 2 Thessalonians 2: 8-12. "And then shall that lawless one be revealed whom the Lord Jesus shall slay with the spirit of his mouth and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him whose coming is according to the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them who are destroyed by the wicked one because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

But we who are Christ's abide in the truth, while the Mormons, Masons and others turn that truth into a lie. Yours truly, W. FENTON.

THE HOME.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

O Sabbath! 'tis of thee,
Sweet day of liberty
And worshiping;
Type of the soul's repose.
Day when my Lord arose,
Blest at creation's close,
Of thee I sing.

Thou treasure-house of pray'r,
Thou halm for pain and care,
Thou fount of praise;
Thy mornings breathe release,
Thy evenings whisper peace,
Thy anthems never cease,
Thou psalm of days.

Forth on thy wings of white,
Plumed in celestial light,
Sweet Sabbath day;
Fly all the earth abroad,
Till all thy beauty laud,
Till all adore thy God;
All hope, all pray.

Merge heaven into home,
And where sad strangers roam
A friendship give;
Soothe ev'ry toiler's pain,
Wash every sinner's stain,
Hallow on land and main
All men that live.

Our Father's God to thee,
Author of sanctity,
To thee we sing;
May all the world revere
This day so old, so dear;
O bring thy presence near,
Great God our king.

—Henry Ostrom.

ONE PAGE A DAY.

One page of good literature a day, thoughtfully read, must produce beneficial intellectual results, even though the reader find it difficult to recall at will the full thought of the author, or to reproduce a complete sentence, in which that thought, or any part of it, was expressed. Of course, the results of one page a day will be scarcely appreciable. One day's toil will build no temple. But seven days make a week, and four weeks make a month, and twelve months contain three hundred and sixty-five days. One page a day will, therefore, grow in one year into a volume of three hundred and sixty-five pages.

Now, at three hundred pages to a book, one may read in ten years twelve stout volumes. He who in a decade reads, with interest and attention, twelve volumes, is no mean student; and if the reading in five minutes of a single page should stimulate thought that keeps hammering or digging or singing in the reader's brain during the day, when he is at work and his book is shut, at the end of ten years such a reader and thinker will deserve some reputation as a "scholar." He may be, in a sense, a master of twelve big books. And if they be the right books no master of a large library can afford to overlook the claim upon his recognition of this man who reads well one page a day.—Our Youth.

COMMON SENSE.

The application of plain common sense to the ordinary affairs of life is indispensable to success. There are many things with which conscience has nothing whatever to do. They come simply under the rule of common sense, propriety, the fitness of things, what is expedient, what is advisable. Of course, the underlying motives should be just, and right and true, and the intention pure; but that is not enough. We are endowed with reason no less than with conscience and faith and hope. Some excellent people have an idea that to apply the ordinary every-day principles of good business management to matters of duty and high principle is something of a profanation. But the most efficient church in any community is the one that is conducted on the soundest business principles, one whose pastor and whose officers possess sound common sense combined with genuine piety. The lack of common sense in many of his followers has often hurt the cause of Christ.

Those who have left a beneficent heritage of good deeds have been men and women not only of pure motives but of wise methods. They have made their investments of time, of labor, of enthusiasm, of money, with skill and forethought and deliberation. They have tested their methods at the bar of common sense, and have adopted such as the experience of the world has proven wise and efficient.—Christian Advocate.

RULES FOR USING BOOKS.

While books are numerous and cheap, that does not justify their careless use. The length of time which school and other books last depends on the way they are used. Some people by care keep books neat and in good condition for years, or even a lifetime, while others seriously soil or destroy them in a very little time. Children should be early taught how to handle books. The following rules are worthy of careful study, and their observance would, in a short time, greatly improve the appearance of the books in many households:

Never hold a book near a fire.
Never drop a book upon the floor.
Never turn the leaves with the thumb.
Never lean or rest upon an open book.
Never turn down the corners of leaves.
Never touch a book with damp or soiled hands.
Always turn leaves from the top with the middle or forefinger.

Always open large books from the middle, and never from the ends or cover.

Never open a book farther than to bring both sides of the cover into the same plane.

Never cut the leaves of a book or magazine with a sharp knife, as the edge is sure to run into the print, nor with the finger, but with a paper-cutter or ordinary table-knife.

Never hold a small book with the thumb pressed into the binding at the lower back, but hold it with the thumb and little finger upon the back.—Anonymous.

A SWEET VOICE.

There is no power of love so hard to get and keep as a voice. A kind hand is deaf and dumb. It may be rough in flesh and blood, and yet do the work of a soft touch. But there is no one thing that love so much needs as a sweet voice to tell what it needs and feels; and it is hard to get it and keep it in the right tone. One must start in youth and be on the watch night and day, at work and play, and get and keep a voice that shall speak kindly at all times. This is the time when a sharp voice is most apt to be got.

You often hear boys and girls say words when they are vexed that sound as if they were made up of a snarl, a whine and a bark. Such a voice often speaks worse than the heart feels. Often in youth one gets a voice or tone that is sharp, and it sticks to him through life. Such as these get a sharp voice from home use, and keep their best voice for those they meet elsewhere.

I would say to all boys and girls, "Use your best voice at home." Watch it by day as a pearl of great price, for it will be worth more to you than the best pearl in the sea. A kind voice is a lark's song to a hearth and home. Train it in sweet tones now and it will keep in tune through life. But the kind voice can only come from a kind heart. The inside of us makes the outside. The heart rules the life, and our looks and tones conform to our thoughts and feelings.—Selected.

* THE LION TAMER.

When Martin, the celebrated animal tamer, who died lately, had retired to private life, he made up his mind one day to pay a visit to his former large menagerie, which he had not seen for five years. It was in Brussels, and he started for that city from his country seat near Rotterdam. At four o'clock, the time for feeding, he entered the menagerie. It was winter time, and Martin was wrapped in a long cloak. He mingled with the crowd, and waited until the animals had received their food, for which they were waiting with wild impatience. While they were eating, he began to cough. Suddenly the animals stopped eating and listened. Then they broke into wild howls of joy, and tore at the iron bars, so that many of the timid visitors fled from the menagerie. The parrots, kangaroos, pelicans and monkeys began to screech and scream.

The hyena and the wolves howled. In short, it was a perfect bedlam.

Then Martin stepped forward. With a movement of his hand, and with his powerful voice, he commanded silence, and suddenly everything was quiet. He swung himself over the bars which separated the visitors from the animals, and put his hand in the cages and fondled the beasts. A big tigress showed more joy than any of the others. When Martin's hand glided over her magnificent fur, her limbs trembled nervously, she uttered weak, tender grunts, and through the iron bars with her rough tongue she licked the face of her former master. When he went away she lay down without eating any more food.

In one of the cages was a lion named Nero who had once bitten Martin in the hip, and had been severely punished. Ever after the lion had a terrible hatred for the animal tamer. When Martin approached his cage, Nero made no other motion than to lift his head and eye him intently. He remained in his place, lying still in the back of his cage when Martin came near. Martin spoke to him. He did not answer, but viewed Martin with apparent indifference. But when Martin was going away, the lion, with a mighty spring, entirely unexpected, threw himself against the grating, pushed his paws through the iron bars, and with his claws tore off part of Martin's cloak. By a quick movement Martin escaped any other injury by the animal. Animals remember kindness and unkindness in the way of treatment for a long time.—Goldthwaite's Magazine.

IT PAYS TO BE IN EARNEST.

A boy was once walking along a dusty road. The sun was very warm and oppressive; but, as was his usual way, he stepped along quickly, thinking that the faster he walked the sooner he would reach the end of his journey. He soon heard a carriage coming; and when it had caught up with him the driver reined in his horse and kindly asked the lad to ride, which invitation he gladly accepted. When he was seated in the carriage, the gentleman, a good Quaker, said, "I noticed thee walking along briskly, and so asked thee to ride; but if I had seen thee walking lazily, I would not have done so by any means."—Morning Star.

I KNOW A THING OR TWO.

"My dear boy," said a father to his only son, "you are in bad company. The lads with whom you associate indulge in bad habits. They drink, smoke, swear, play cards, and visit theatres. They are not safe company for you. I beg you to quit their society."

"You needn't be afraid of me, father," replied the boy, laughingly; "I guess I know a thing or two. I know how far to go and when to stop."

The lad left his father's house twirling his cane in his fingers, and laughing at the "old man's notions."

A few years later and that lad, who had grown to manhood, stood at the bar of a court, before a jury which had just brought in a verdict of guilty against him for some crime in which he had been concerned. Before he was sentenced he addressed the court, and said among other things, "My downward course began in disobedience to my parents. I thought I knew as much as my father did, and I spurned his advice; but as soon as I turned my back on my home temptation came upon me like a drove of hyenas, and hurried me into ruin."

Mark that confession, ye boys who are beginning to be wiser than your parents! Mark it, and learn that disobedience is the first step on the road to ruin. Don't take it.—Selected.

A BOY ADOPTED BY A COW.

A letter from Kansas has a surprising story. It tells of a cow which, when she had lost her calf, showed so much sorrow that it awakened the sympathy of her owner's fourteen-year old son, and he showed her some slight kindness. The grateful cow at once became fond of him, watched for him as she would for her calf, and since then she has shown her pleasure whenever he comes near her. Indeed, no one but this boy can manage the poor animal, and wonderful stories are told of her devotion to him. The Kansas papers say that lately the boy had occasion to go to a neighboring town, and as he remained away until after milking time, his sister not daring to approach the cow in any other way, decided to personate her brother. So she put on a suit of his clothes, and went into the barnyard. The girl succeeded in deceiving the cow until the boy was seen coming up the road, when instantly the indignant animal kicked the pail over, and made a bound in the direction of the youth, showing unmistakable evidences of delight.—St. Nicholas.

RECOMPENSE.

Brave little woman—trudging along,
Patiently, day after day—
Weaving a garment of shining light,
Out of the clouds of gray;
Boaring the burdens and vexing cares,
Like one of the saints of old—
Making the best of a dull, hard life,
With its miseries all untold!

Long have I watched her with wondering eyes,
Faithful,—and sweet,—and strong,—
Doing the work the Master sends;
Making of sorrow—songs;
Questioning never the wisdom that asks
Self-abnegation complete,
Willingly treading the pathway of thorns
That leads to the Master's feet!

I see not the gray cotton gown,
That is faded, and worn, and old—
But the shining gleam of a raiment white,
That glistens in every fold.
I see not the brow that is worn and lined,
From the anxious, toiling years—
But the hallow Divine, that glorifies,
Giving beauty—for ashes and tears!

Somewhere is waiting a fair, dear day—
Meet for such infinite grace;—
Somewhere—oh, somewhere—fruition shall be,
When the angel shall find her place—
Close to the Father, and hear him say,
As he tenderly bids her come,
Out of the valley of darkness and toil,
"My child, thou art welcome home!"

—Anonymous

TEMPERANCE.

TO EVERY LOVER OF GOD AND HUMANITY.

The following petition has already received more than a million of signatures, but before the opening of the Columbian Exposition we desire the number repeated, many times, if possible, that as we present the petition to rulers we may be able to say:

This represents the will of the people. Will you help us?

Please cut out the petition, paste blank paper across the bottom, and secure the signatures of as many women as you can. After adding the name of the town and the State where the names are obtained, send to Miss Alice Briggs, Office Secretary World's W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

For petition blanks, blanks for endorsement of men, churches, societies, etc., send to

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,
Secretary World's W. C. T. U.,
Ravenna, Ohio.

Petition of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the protection of the home. Addressed to the Governments of the world:

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in alcohol and opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits; and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society, and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the State from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

THE WORLD'S PETITION.

Let two petitions be circulated simultaneously; one without change or addition for the names of women as petitioners; the other for the names of men, churches, societies, or public gatherings, as indorsers.

Upon the upper margin of the latter write:

"The following petition is indorsed by the citizens of, State of, U. S. A., whose names are affixed thereto."

Secure as far as possible the names of leading citizens, in line with whose signatures should appear their profession or occupation, as:

"Wm. Strong, pastor church; James Jones, mayor."

All names are to be written on the face of the petition, that the back may be left free for pasting upon cloth, which will be done by Miss Alice Briggs, Office Secretary World's W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill., to whom all filled petitions are to be sent.

If the petition is to be indorsed by an association, a lodge, or convention, write upon the upper margin:

The following petition is indorsed by the of the town (or city) of, State of, U. S. A., to which the names of official members, with the specific office of each, are appended.

Paper can be added to either copy for signatures.

Send for blanks and instructions to Mary A. Woodbridge, American Secretary World's W. C. T. U., Ravenna, O.

IOWA STATE TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE.

The casual looker-on could but be impressed with the thoughtful earnestness, born of moral conviction, which characterized this representative body, in its late convention held in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian Association building in Des Moines, Iowa. Ministers, judges, lawyers, presidents of colleges, teachers, editors and business men of nearly every legitimate calling, and "elect ladies," to the number of nearly 300, from all parts of the State, composed the body. Many of them were men of prayer, accustomed to look for divine guidance, and whose convictions have crystallized into an intense hatred of the saloon. The impending crisis for prohibition, pending in the discussion of the Gatch bill in the State legislature, doubtless tended to intensify the feeling, and all realized that it was no time for trifling. There was but one voice, and that was that no backward step should be taken, and no compromise of the principle of prohibition should be made.

From reports of the work we learn that much has been done in the way of enforcement in many localities which was encouraging, while, on the other hand, from the influence of executive clemency, the results of the late election, and the uncertainty of legislative action, the enemy has been encouraged, rendering enforcement difficult, and "dives" and "holes in the wall" have increased in number. The address of Prof. D. R. Dungan on "High License in Nebraska" was a model specimen of sustained wit, showing that high license as a regulative measure is not a success. Among the many other fine addresses, those of Hon. D. C. Chase of Mahaska county, and Rev. Frank Evans on "The present status of prohibition," were notable, decidedly optimistic, full of humor and enthusiasm, and giving no uncertain sound. The singing by the Washington glee club of Washington, Iowa, and by the harmony male quartette of Des Moines, were active factors in making the convention a success. The delight of the vast audience was expressed by frequent encores.

The plan of work followed last year, "holding conventions and meetings for educating public sentiment and taking collections" which resulted in largely increased contributions for enforcement, was considered the best, and is to be followed this year. Of the resolutions presented by the committee on resolutions, the third, showing the attitude of the alliance toward the political parties, created the most heated discussion, which finally was crystallized by Judge C. C. Nourse into the following statement, which was passed unanimously:

That we regard the question of prohibition in Iowa as paramount to any political issue now at stake, and will hereafter give our suffrages or influence to no individual or organization that is not true to prohibition.

The Republican party in Iowa has nothing to fear if it is true to its pledges. The recent decision of the United States supreme court in the McKinley tariff case is full of hope for the temperance people of Iowa. In brief, "Justice Harlan held that the object of the journal required to be kept by Congress was not that it might be consulted to determine the authenticity of an act of Congress, but that there might be a publicity of proceedings. The signatures of the two presiding officers, and of the president, was complete authentication of a bill, providing the forms required had been complied with. The suggestion that there might be a deliberate conspiracy between the presiding officers and the president to make a law not passed by Congress the court said could not hold. The enrolled act the court held was conclusive." If this is true, it is believed that we have constitutional prohibition, and when we have the requisite legislation to meet the new conditions prohibition in Iowa will go out of politics.—Rev. B. D. Alden, in the Northwestern Christian Advocate.

APPEAL TO GOD.

As I was meditating upon the temperance work, the thought came forcibly to me that all Christian prohibitionists should take our grand and noble cause to the Lord in every prayer.

We hear occasionally some earnest member petitioning the Lord of hosts for force and power sufficient to capture and destroy Satan's most destructive field-piece which he has ever brought to bear upon the human race—the abominable, detestable and loathsome liquor traffic.

Christian co-laborers, we must arouse ourselves. We must petition Almighty God to eliminate from us the spirit of lethargy and repose, and to increase our courage, zeal and enthusiasm with which to push this great and holy work.

"The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much." "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything they shall ask, it shall be done of them by my Father which is in heaven." "Then ye shall call upon me and ye shall pray unto me and I will hearken unto you." What glorious promises these are, and they should be words of encouragement and consolation to every one of us.

If we have God on our side, who can successfully resist us? Victory will certainly be ours, if we but look to the Lord for help, and will put our whole soul, mind and body in the work. We will then be able to hurl ourselves against the enemy with such a force that knows no recoil, with such a force that knows no resistance.—R. L. Russell.

There are ten thousand tectotalers in the railway service of Great Britain, and twelve thousand among the sailors in the naval service.

John G. Whittier in a recent letter writes: "I feel a great interest in any effort to check the pernicious habit of tobacco using. It is not only a nuisance, but a moral and physical evil, and a shame to our boasted refinement and civilization."

An old colored man who recently addressed a temperance meeting, said: "When I sees a man going home with a gallon of whisky and a half-pound of meat, dat's temprance lecture nuff for me, and I sees it ebry day; I knows dat everything in his house is on the same scale—gallon of misery to ebry half-pound of comfort."

In the Hawaiian islands there are about fifty native temperance societies, with a membership of over two thousand. Their pledges includes opium and awa as well as alcohol. Awa is an intoxicant manufactured by the natives, and said to be more disastrous in its effects upon the human system than even the imported liquors.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE PSALMS AND DANIEL.

LESSON II.—Second Quarter, 1892.—April 10.

SUBJECT.—The King in Zion.—Psa. 2: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.—Psa. 2: 12.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Psa. 2. T.—Zech. 2: 6-13. W.—Mal. 3: 1-6. Th.—1 Tim. 6: 11-16. F.—Heb. 1: 1-12. S.—Rev. 19: 6-16. S.—Rev. 22: 1-7.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The impotent rage of Christ's enemies. Vs. 1-3. In Acts 4: 25, 26, the authorship of this psalm is ascribed to David. Though written fifteen centuries before Christ, it is an exact portrayal of the maddened rage of the Jewish rulers against him when they conspired together for his crucifixion. The parable of the nobleman (Luke 19: 14) is a good commentary on this psalm, "We will not have this man to reign over us." This was the cry of the unbelieving Jews; it is the cry of the unbelieving world to-day. "Why" do the people and their rulers "rage," when their utmost fury can avail nothing against Jehovah? "Why" do they "imagine a vain thing," and suppose that all their craft combined can defeat his eternal purposes? It can be through nothing else than the deceiving power of Satan, the prince of this world, who, St. Paul declares, "still worketh in the children of disobedience." "Let us break their bands asunder." They are cords of love by which Jesus seeks to draw the world to himself (see Hosea 11: 14); but he was rejected at his first coming, and he will continue to be rejected until he appears the second time in judgment. The wicked cannot direct their rage against him personally, for he is no longer in the flesh; but the same spirit which leads the managers of the Columbian Exposition to trample on the Sabbath, and license the sale of liquor on the Fair grounds, is identical with that described by the psalmist;—an arrogant, rebellious, defiant spirit, which would gladly throw off every vestige of respect for the divine authority;—which says of God and his Son, "Let us break asunder their bands and cast away their cords from us."

2. Christ enthroned as universal King. Vs. 4-9. God is here represented as laughing at the complete futility of all the efforts put forth by the wicked. The righteous are sometimes alarmed at the assaults of infidelity, but if Jehovah is not concerned for the result why should his people have any fear? Their part is to fight bravely for the truth, but not to count the forces of the enemy. "He shall speak unto them in his wrath." If men refuse the cords of his love they must be bound with the fetters of judgment. The only alternative of eternal life is eternal death. All the world-powers must bend to Christ, or be broken to shivers as an iron rod breaks the potter's vessel. We are reminded here of the stone which smote the image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, so that in an instant it became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor. Their destruction will be instantaneous and complete. "Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion." This was done in the counsels of Eternity, and now we are rapidly nearing the time for this kingdom to be established. Every Christian can hasten the day by giving himself and all that he has in whole-hearted service to Christ. When the Bride has made herself ready, then her Lord will come; but how little do the worldly, self-seeking professors who crowd the churches to-day realize that they are in the condition of the Laodicean church, needing all things, but practically denying that they need anything.

3. The final exhortation. Vs. 10-12. The psalm ends with a solemn exhortation, both to governments and to individuals, to submit to God's Son. "Be wise." Kings and rulers need especial wisdom, because on their action depends the fate of nations; but they are often only crowned fools like the Czar of Russia, whose barbarous and imbecile policy is working such misery to his own subjects and, indirectly, so much evil to other countries. But it is to America's rulers and legislators that the greatest light has been given. Is our government "wise" when it licenses the liquor traffic, thus binding upon its citizens the enormous tax which this curse entails? But the political unwisdom of such an act is a small thing beside the moral folly. Christ should be recognized in our government, and the principles of his religion should be the groundwork of all our laws and legislative acts. This psalm, written more than three thousand years ago, is enough to teach us that there can be no real recognition of God in government which does not include his Son; but so long as the Christless lodge religion is upheld by law, and professed by leading men, such recognition is vain to expect. "Kiss the Son," in loyal homage, before sudden destruction comes upon them. Like a sweet strain of music after the crash of the thunder, this psalm ends with a benediction: "Blessed are all they that put their trust in him;" that have submitted, and, being his, have no reason to be afraid even in the most troublous times. Shall we not all seek to be thus blessed, by beginning to live at once the life of simple faith in Jesus?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

BAPTIST.

—The church at Omro, Wis., has about 110 members. The pastor, who seems to be an energetic and systematic worker, has established thirty-six committees in the eight departments of his church work, and this arrangement not only makes every communicant an active worker, but some of them are employed on several committees.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

—One hundred and eleven Christian Endeavor societies were enrolled in one week recently; 24 of these were Christian (Disciples), 20 Presbyterian, 20 Congregational, 6 Methodist Episcopal, 6 Lutheran, 4 Baptist, 4 Cumberland Presbyterian, 2 Friends, 2 Free Baptist, 2 Reformed, 2 United Brethren, 1 Methodist Protestant, 1 Reformed Presbyterian, and 14 union societies.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Nebraska State Minutes for 1891 show a list of 174 churches and 140 pastors. The total membership is 10,280, a gain of 436. There have been added 1,054 on confession and 781 by letter. The membership in the Sunday-schools is 14,696. There are 84 Christian Endeavor societies with 3,026 members. Contributions for home expenses were $121,697, for benevolence, $17,155. Five ministers were installed and nine ordained. Ten new churches were organized.

—Dr. George F. Pentecost, returning from India, is to supply the pulpit of the First church, San Francisco, for several Sundays, possibly for a year, beginning about April 1.

—The work of Rev. B. Fay Mills in Oregon opens with great promise. It is probable that before his return to the East he will visit Tacoma, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, and possibly Helena, Mont.

—Rev. E. P. Hammond has been holding meetings twice a day in City Mission Hall, New Haven. Ministers and theological students are working with him, and find the children very impressible. March 14, Mr. Hammond addressed the ministers on the Conversion of Children.

—The church at Waukegan, Ill., is flourishing finely. This church has had a peculiar history and was nearly moribund when Dr. L. N. Stratton assumed the pastorate. It is now growing, and is recognized as one of the most potent religious factors of that thriving town. Four valuable members were just received, making thirty-five additions during the past fifteen months.

—The Washburn (Wis.) church, Rev. A. Thompson, has had a prosperous year in all departments. Twenty-two have just joined the church.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The annual commencement exercises of Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill., will be held May 1-5. On Sunday, May 1, the baccalaureate sermon will be given in the morning by Prof. C. J. Little, and in the evening the annual address by Bishop Hendrix of the M. E. church South. On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday following will occur the usual examinations and meetings, closing with the exercises of the graduating class on Thursday afternoon.

—The annual report of the Chicago home missionary and church extension society, just issued, shows that the receipts for the year were $16,706, including $2,483 from the parent missionary board. During the year fourteen places of worship were opened under the society's auspices, and ten churches erected. The membership of the churches organized by the society is reported at 4,192, and the Sunday-school enrollment at 9,215.

—The Methodist Episcopal hospital of Brooklyn, N. Y., has secured funds enough to warrant the managers in letting the contracts for the erection of the main or administration building. During the past year 1,045 patients were treated, and all expenses paid.

—There are in the Methodist Episcopal church more than 15,000 ministers, 14,000 local preachers, 100,000 official members, and 300,000 Sunday-school officers and teachers.

—Children's Day program for June 12, prepared by Dr. Payne of the board of education, is out in good season. It is entitled "The League of Honor," and presents an object lesson in the shape of a pyramid, on the several planks of which are placed as the service progresses, the mottoes, "Honor Yourselfes," "The Bible," "The Church," "The Sabbath," "Temperance," "Your Parents," "Truth," "Knowledge," and "Christ." The program has several original hymns, of which Dr. George Lansing Taylor and Dr. C. H. Payne are the authors. The new music is mostly by Professor Ford.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—There is an Anglican fraternity called the Order of the Holy Redeemer, which some people are trying to introduce into this country, whose published purposes are, among other things, "to labor, for the increase of the practice of Reservation of the Host and to oppose fellowship with other Christians." Full members must be unmarried, the grade of associate member being allowed to those who marry. And it imagines itself to be a Christian order.

—There are in Boston 251 Protestant churches and missions and eleven Jewish. There are thirty-four Roman Catholic churches.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL. I

—It has been decided that if sufficient money is at hand the corner-stone of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be laid on the festival of All Saints, November the 1st, 1892. The corporation of Trinity church have made a gift of $100,000 to the cathedral.

—The Churchman, in an editorial, says a bor. mot has been going the rounds of the clubs to this effect: "The Methodists say, 'You can believe what you like if you only do what's right,' and the Roman Catholics say, 'You can do what you like if you only believe what we tell you,' and the Episcopalians say, 'You can believe what you like and you can do what you like if you only go to church.'" The editor adds: "There is just enough truth in the sneer to give it a timely sting to our easy consciences."

REFORMED CHURCH.

—The First and Second Reformed churches of Albany on March 22 celebrated the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the first pastor of the old church from which they sprung, the Rev. Johannes Megapolensis, of Holland, who served from 1642 to 1649.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

—Our missionaries in Africa, says the Ave Maria, will have another friend in the person of Mr. Richard Dorsey Mohun, of Washington, D. C., whom President Harrison, on the recommendation of Mr. Blaine, has appointed commercial agent from the United States to Bomba in the Free States of the Congo, the head of which is the King of Belgium. At his request, it will be remembered, Leo XIII. placed them under the patronage of the Blessed Virgin.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

—It is well known by Christian workers that the first Sabbath in April for many years has been observed by the different Sabbath Observance Associations of the world, for special preaching and teaching upon the proper observance of the day. Therefore ministers and Bible-school workers and Christian Endeavorers are earnestly requested to remember the subject in some pointed teaching, as the Spirit of the Lord shall guide them, on the first Lord's day in April.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The total receipts of the Board of Home Missions last month was about $16,000, of which over $10,000 was from legacies.

—Over two thousand copies of "The State and Secret Societies," by Rev. J. M. Foster, of the Second church, Boston, have been distributed by the New England Anti-secret Association. It gives some ideas on a State as well as on secret societies.

—The Fourth Annual Institute of Our Young People will be held at East Liverpool, Ohio, commencing on Thursday evening, May 19, and closing on Sabbath evening, May 22. All local young people's societies by whatever name called, and all Presbyterian young people's societies are entitled to two delegates each. Delegates are requested as soon as chosen to report their names and addresses to Hugh R. Moffet, chairman, Monmouth, Ill., in order that the roll of members of the Institute can be made up in advance of the meeting.

—The Wisconsin Presbytery met at Lisbon church on Feb. 16. J. B. Galloway was re-elected moderator for the ensuing year. A call from Arlington congregation for J. B. Galloway was presented, and he asked the privilege of holding it till matters could be adjusted between Arlington and Caledonia congregations. These congregations were united in one pastoral charge, with two-thirds time at Arlington and one-third time at Caledonia. J. B. Galloway tendered his resignation of Vernon, and it was directed to take the regular order.

—Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., has recently had an unenviable amount of advertising in the press of the country. A good-humored struggle between the Sophomore and Freshman classes over a flag on a holiday has been made the occasion of the most extravagant and untruthful report. No evidence of the havoc described remains.—Pittsburgh Christian Instructor, March 17.

—Topeka, Kan., has a very successful mission, conducted by a committee of its Christian Endeavor Society, in which there are one hundred and fifty scholars and two societies of Christian Endeavor

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Five persons named Leahay were burned to death in a house near Springfield, Minn., Saturday night.

North Dakota is said to be receiving more from the sale of school lands than was ever received by any other State.

Injunction suits were begun against twenty saloons at Muscatine, Iowa, Monday.

Governor Fifer, of Illinois, has issued a proclamation designating April 8 as Arbor Day.

Monday four men were killed by the explosion of a boiler at St. Louis, Mo.

Monday permission was given to organize the Angus State Bank at Abingdon Ill., with a capital stock of $25,000.

Six men were killed at East Jordan, Mich., Monday, by the explosion of a sawmill boiler.

Walter C. Leighty, a postal clerk, was arrested at Hastings, Neb., Monday, charged with using the mails to extort money.

The People's party is to put a full ticket in the field in Georgia.

Monday the Standard Oil Trust was dissolved by the unanimous vote of the stockholders.

Governor Boies, of Iowa, has made the following appointments for the next biennial period: J. J. Dunn, Dubuque, State Oil Inspector; Labor Commissioner, J. R. Sovereign; Dairy Commissioner, A. C. Tupper, Osage; Pharmacy Commissioner, J. H. Pickett, Oskaloosa; Fish Commissioner, Judd Griggs.

Charles B. Ambs, Monday, confessed to having made the fraudulent change in the Illinois House Journal showing that Representative Norseworthy did not vote on the "cow bill."

Collectors of Canadian ports have been ordered to see that the pork products of American hogs slaughtered or cured in bonds be not branded and exported as Canadian.

Snow is eight inches deep in parts of South Dakota. Fierce storms have also prevailed in Illinois, Iowa, and Nebraska.

Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, one of the physicians who attended President Garfield, died Tuesday at Philadelphia.

Two dwellings at Anderson, Ind., were blown up Monday night by explosions of natural gas, causing a loss of $6,000. No one was hurt.

Tuesday the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City railroad system was leased by the Chicago Great Western Company for a period of ninety-nine years.

The Gatch license bill was defeated in the Iowa House of Representatives Tuesday by a vote of 52 to 46.

Professor John Williams White, of Harvard College, has decided not to accept the professorship in Chicago University offered to him.

Mrs. Andrew Reid, Jr., discovered a painting by Jean Baptiste Greuze in a second-hand store in Baltimore which she bought for $20. The painting is worth thousands of dollars.

The New York Senate Tuesday passed a bill appropriating $300,000 for a State exhibit at the fair.

Ex-Governor Thayer, of Nebraska, yesterday filed notice that on March 29 he would make application to have the gubernatorial controversy re-opened.

At Anderson, Ind., Monday night, Jasper Pastelle's house was wrecked by an explosion of natural gas, and he was fatally injured.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Tuesday decided that the apportionment of the State into Assembly and Senate districts, made by the Democratic Legislature of 1891, is a violation of the Constitution and therefore void.

Over 300 cabinetmakers at St. Louis, Mo., struck, Wednesday, for nine hours' work and ten hours' pay.

The Illinois winter wheat bulletin says the area seeded last fall, 1,895,146 acres, was 4 per cent larger than that of 1891. Very little damage has been done by cold

Beware of imitations, dilutions, and substitutes of Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines, offered at what pretend to be "cut prices." For the genuine, there's one price, and only one price—but, they're guaranteed. They're the cheapest medicines you can buy at any price, for if they fail to benefit or cure, you have your money back. You pay only for the good you get.

To prevent fraud and imposition by unprincipled dealers, these genuine guaranteed remedies are now sold only through druggists authorized as agents, and always at these long-established prices:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (for the Liver, Blood and Lungs), $1.00. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments), $1.00. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets (for the liver, stomach and bowels), 25 cents.

Refuse all medicines purporting to be Dr. Pierce's offered at any other prices. Suspicion naturally and rightfully attaches to them.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

A BEAUTIFUL CRAZY quilt of 500 sq. ft. made with a pack of 60 splendid Silk pcs, asatd. bright colors, 25c.; 5 pks. st. Agts. Wanted. Lemarie's Silk Mills, Little Ferry, N.J.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT B 34 CHICAGO, ILL.

weather in northern and central counties; but in the southern part of the State the crop will not be more than 50 per cent of that of 1891.

Over twenty bodies are said to have been recovered from a mine at Dunbar, Pa. The men were entombed June 16, 1890.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from March 21 to March 26:

S A Pratt, Rev N L Heidger, Miss M R Berry, W A Davis, H E Hunter, C Coleman, A J Yoder, S Rowley, J Hamilton, C S Allen, J Bradford, I Potter, L M Samson, I G Nelson, Rev R P McClester, A Gray, J H Jones, Dr H Neal, Rev B M Amsden, O A Chillson, S E Ross, J Shigley, L M Long, G Good ell, D L Garver, A Mayn, Dr A H Hiatt, Mrs J A Milligan, F C Dearborn, J W McPherson, T Fraser, W O Shaw, J H McGlade, D B Willson, W Tisdell, R B Bonar, J F Janney, J P Dops, Mrs S S Hamilton.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring No. 2.....	78 3/4 @	80
Winter No. 2.....	83 @	84
Corn—No. 2.....	36 3/4 @	38 3/4
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @	30 1/2
Rye—No. 2.....	79 @	80 1/2
Bran per ton.....	13 50	14 25
Hay Timothy.....	9 50	@ 11 00
Butter, medium to best....	24 @	28 1/2
Cheese.....	09 1/2 @	12
Beans.....	1 35 @	1 60
Eggs.....	12 @	12 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 15 @	1 25
Flax.....	96 1/2 @	97
Broom corn.....	03 1/2 @	07
Potatoes, per bush.....	26 @	30
Hides—Green to dry flint..	4 @	6 1/2
Lumber—Common.....	10 00	@ 13 00
Wool (washed).....	24 @	29
Cattle—Choice to extra....	4 50 @	5 05
Common to good....	3 45 @	3 95
Hogs.....	4 65 @	4 80
Sheep.....	4 60 @	6 10

NEW YORK.

Wheat, No. 2.....	95 3/4 @	1 01 1/2
Corn.....	47 @	49
Oats.....	34 1/4 @	40 1/2
Eggs.....	18 @	20 1/2
Butter.....	18 @	20 1/2
Wool.....	18 @	30 1/2

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 60 @	4 25
Hogs.....	3 50 @	4 60
Sheep.....	4 00 @	4 50

BEATTY Pianos $75. Organs $45. Want Agents. Cash FREE. Dan'l F. Beatty, Washington, N.J.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be followed by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pros. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 300 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disaffiliate from secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00

MRS. W. R. FRANCIS

Is the wife of one of the best known pharmacists in New Haven, doing business at 141 Dixwell Ave., and ex-president of the Connecticut Pharmaceutical Association. He says: "My wife was for several years in bad health, due to a complication of disorders. Friends persuaded her to take Hood's Sarsaparilla; she took 6 or 8 bottles and is certainly a great deal better since, in every way."

Mrs. Martha Reed of 1835 Ramsey street, Baltimore, Md., voluntarily says:

"For over 2 years I suffered with a

Complication of Diseases

till the summer found me a confirmed invalid, blood poor, appetite gone, bowels out of order, and I was miserable in mind and body. I read of such wonderful cures performed by Hood's Sarsaparilla that, at last, I thought I would try a bottle, as, if it didn't make me better, it could not make me worse. It did make me better, and on my third bottle I found myself almost

A New Woman

I will gladly convince any lady, as I have proved to myself, that purifying and enriching the blood, which Hood's Sarsaparilla does to perfection, is the best Constitutional Treatment, and in many cases, does away with all Local Treatment in the many diseases with which women are afflicted." Try it.

HOOD'S

Sarsaparilla is especially adapted

For Ladies

and will cure difficulties peculiar to the sex. N. B. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion. Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE CARE OF BOYS' CLOTHING.

When Jack's coat begins to be shabby it can be wonderfully freshened—if taken in time—with new braid and buttons, by neatly mending the lining, and by being sponged with ammonia and water. Good Housekeeping says if the collar is much soiled, lay it out flat and take a nail brush, a basin of warm water and a cake of castile soap and thoroughly clean it. When partially dry press in shape; first laying a piece of thin cotton cloth over it. If the whole coat, after it has been sponged with ammonia and water, is carefully pressed with a cloth laid over, it will look quite new; especially if the frayed lining at the wrists and the upper arm has been renewed with a nice piece of farmer's satin or of dark silesia.

Going from coat to vests, if the old buttons are ripped from vests and they are cleaned and pressed, and the braid renewed, the pockets looked after, and the lining neatly patched, they too, may have the frayed edges neatly overhanded, the buttons replaced, thin portions carefully and invisibly darned to a piece placed under to strengthen, then be pressed into shape, and look fairly well for a while. After that the prudent mother will cut them over for Johnny's school pants, with the blessed certainty that there will be plenty of patches. If, when the knees of Johnny's short pantaloons are mended, they are ripped up the sides, and the piece set in is nicely pressed at its join with the upper part, and then stitched and hemmed as before, the repairing will hardly show. Sometimes the lad comes in with the appearance of having been riding on a buzz-saw, and, certainly, he has been known to slide down a rough hemlock board—and then there are various damages to repair. The seam should be ripped, the patch set in as neatly as possible—taking care that the twill or check matches exactly—and be carefully pressed. When it comes to sleeves, a round patch on the elbow is never advisable; if the seams are ripped, a piece nicely fitted and pressed will be scarcely noticeable. At the first signs of wear a piece of the goods should be placed under the thread-bare spot, and it should be neatly darned with stout twist; nowhere does the traditional "stitch in time save nine" more than in this prompt darning of thin places.

BUTTERMILK AS A BEVERAGE.

From different parts of the world comes the common praise of buttermilk as a beverage. In fact, it is becoming quite a fad all over the world to drink buttermilk. The physicians recommend it, while its price is adjusted to the finances of the most unwealthy. In all hot climates it is drunk at meals and between meals, while now the northern cities of the United States have numerous wagons and stands along the street where buttermilk is sold by the glass, as often as low as three cents a pint. The material that goes by this name, however, is not what in warm climates would be called the genuine article. There are several grades of buttermilk. The real, rich article comes from the churn that has but half done its duty, and thereby left little lumps of butter and any quantity of cream globules in the buttermilk. To this is sometimes added a third of a glass of rich cream. This makes a truly delicious drink. The next grade of buttermilk is the pure article, but taken from the churn that has done its duty and got out all of the butter fat from the cream. When it is fresh it is very palatable with a chunk of ice in it on a hot day in summer. This is the genuine article of the farm, and makes a good drink in the hay-field or while at other hard work on the farm. The last and worst quality of buttermilk is the article usually sold in large cities, where the inhabitants do not know a butterfly from a bumble bee, and are in no sense experts on cow products. The third-class article is nothing but old sour milk or clabbered milk worked awhile in the churn to thoroughly mix it. This article sells readily on the streets and in restaurants for three cents a glass on hot days.—American Dairyman.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Cold Slaw.—Cut cabbage very fine, salt it, and pour over it a sauce made of two spoonfuls of whipped cream, two of sugar, and four of vinegar, all beaten well together.

Rice Waffles.—With half a pint of cold boiled rice mix four ounces of butter, and salt to taste. Add a quart of milk, mixed with the beaten yolks of five eggs, and a pint and a half of flour. Just before baking add the beaten whites of eggs; beat all well together.

Pickled Chicken.—Cut up two chickens and boil them till the meat drops from their bones. Add salt to taste. Put the meat into a jar, and pour over it a pint of spiced vinegar and a pint of the liquor in which the chickens were boiled. When cold cut in thin slices. This makes a nice supper dish and very appetizing sandwiches for children to take to school for lunch.

Parsnips.—Wash, scrape and cut in thin slices; put in a sauce-pan and nearly cover with water. Add a piece of butter, season with salt and pepper, and stew slowly with a tight cover on until the water is nearly all gone and the vegetable is tender. Stir occasionally. Remove the parsnips, add a little milk to the liquor left in the sauce-pan, thicken it with butter and flour stirred together; pour over the parsnips and serve.

"Tickling" in the throat vanishes with the uses of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Only 25 cents.

but they don't show it. For clothes washed with Pearlina last longer.

Beware

you an imitation, be honest—send it back.

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearlina." IT'S FALSE—Pearlina is never peddled, if your grocer sends 317 JAMES PYLE, New York.

CYNOSURE PREMIUM LIST

Books sent postpaid at 20 per cent discount from retail rates, if purchased in connection with a subscription to the Cynosure. Any book, however, can be purchased at retail rate named, but postage or express not paid.

Buy early while you can get what you want from a full stock.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. The Standard Edition, 12mo, 240 pages. No. 1. Paper cover, 50c. No. 2. Cloth, fine, 75c. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, $1. The Handy Classic Edition, 18mo, 292 pages, each in separate box, gilt edge, round corners except No. 3. No. 3. Cloth, full gilt edges, 85c. No. 3 1/2. Half white vellum, $1. No. 4. French morocco, seal, $1.50. No. 6. French morocco, rustic bands, $1.50. No. 7. White enamel, $1.50. Persian calf, broken glass pattern, $1.75. No. 10. Calf, plain, $2. No. 12. Best German calf embossed, $2.25. No. 14. Best German calf padded, $2.50.

The Bible Text Cyclopaedia, by Rev. James Inglis. A complete classification of Scripture Texts in the form of an alphabetical list of subjects. Large 8vo., 524 pages, cloth, $1.75. More sensible and convenient and every way more satisfactory than any book of the kind we have ever known. For some years we have had it in constant service in our Bible study; and our sense of its value has grown with the passing years.—Extract from editorial in Sunday-School Times.

Wonders of Prayer. Enlarged and Revised ed. 370 pages, bound in fine cloth, $1. A compilation of well authenticated and wonderful answers to prayer, as narrated by George Muller, D. L. Moody, C. H. Spurgeon, Newman Hall, D. D., Bishop T. Bowman, Chas. G. Finney, W. W. Patton, D. D., S. I. Prime, D. D., F. Krummacker, Martin Luther John Knox, and a host of others.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. "Workers Edition." Comprising its Antiquities, Biography, Geography and Natural History. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL.D. This work contains every name in the Bible respecting which anything can be said. 776 pages, 8vo., fully illustrated, cloth, $1.50. This work contains over 500 engravings, and is a complete guide to the pronunciation and signification of scriptural names; the solution of difficulties of interpretation, authority and harmony. This work contains a history and description of Biblical customs, manners, events, places, persons, animals, plants, minerals, etc., and comprises a most complete encyclopedia of Biblical information.

Address THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in a cloth for $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper 25cts.

FARM NOTES.

YOUNG CATTLE FOR BEEF-MAKING.

The English are adepts in the production of their favorite meat, and hence ought to be good authority on the subject. One of their writers advises us that the right kinds of cattle for beef-making are always young, not more than five or at most six years old, of whatever breed they may be. Barren heifers, or four-year-olds that have had only one calf, are as a rule the most satisfactory females to fatten, and are the best meat when fat. Each year after four will, as a rule, knock a half-penny a pound off the value of the beef. A perfect grazing animal should have a sound constitution, a good digestive apparatus, well sprung ribs, each of which is about two inches wide, a broad and level back, wide hips well filled with flesh, a loose skin that is slick and mellow in the hand, fine hair that touches like sealskin, a level flank filling one's hand, short legs, and fine bone, a placid countenance, graceful movements and a good length of body.

THE SCIENCE OF WOOL-GROWING.

This is a subject which should be more generally studied and better understood. A French contemporary directs attention to the influence on the quality of the fleece of the food which the sheep eats, and dwells on the following four points: (1) To obtain the right quality of good wool the sheep must be well fed; (2) if the sheep receives too much food, or food which is not sufficiently nutritive, the wool lacks strength, is destitute of grease, and becomes in consequence flabby, rough to touch, dry and harsh; (3) regularity in the distribution of the food is very important; faults in this matter affect the quality of the wool; (4) there is a difference of opinion about the action of certain food on wool. All, however, agree in ascribing a marked influence to fertile pastures. The wool of sheep that enjoy such pasturage is abundant; the fibre is long and is characterized by its softness, whiteness, luster, and strength. Sturm, who is a high authority on the subject, has proved that all the foods which promote perspiration produce fine wool.

FARMERS' WIVES.

Farmers' wives are in many cases sadly broken down, both in mental and bodily health, and there are in consequence many discouraged farmers. The fault lies as much in the manner of doing as in the quantity of work attempted. I have seen in the work of ironing much done that is unnecessary; every coarse towel ironed, even to the last inch, when folding and pressing so as to make it lie neatly in its place in the linen drawer would answer every purpose. So with undergarments—every seam and hem must lie as smoothly as the hems in the table linen, and all for naught; for John will be just as grateful for the clean towel with a few wrinkles in it, and the sleep of the babies will be just as sweet in the folds of the badly-ironed night-dress.

I hold that it is quite as important for a wife and mother to know how and when to "slight" work to advantage as it is to know how to do it well, for there will come a time in the life of every woman—more especially in the life of those whose circumstances will not permit of much hired help—when the art of slighting to advantage may save doctors' bills, the discomforts of general ill-health and time passed in hopeless invalidism. Study the art, sisters! Teach your children, if you will, "Whatever you do, do with your might; Things done by halves are never done right," but reserve for yourselves the privilege of doing with as much "might" only as health and circumstances will permit.

"Don't, let me beg of you, don't" let the work of the day linger along into the afternoon of the long summer days especially; let something go undone rather than make it a rule. There will be exceptional days when it will be an absolute necessity, but let these exceptions be rare.

And now after this prefatory "don't, let me divulge the secret of health for every farmer's wife. It is the afternoon

Take The Best

Use AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and no other, as a Spring Medicine and blood-purifier, during the months of

March, April, May

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is more successful than any other preparation for imparting to the machinery of life all the conditions necessary to Health and Strength. It relieves That Tired Feeling, gives tone and vigor to every tissue and muscle of the body, improves digestion, quickens the appetite, builds up the system, and makes the weak strong. The success of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, for the past 50 years, is due to the fact, that its curative powers may always be relied upon. It purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood; it cures Scrofula and Scrofulous diseases, Eczema, Chronic Catarrh, Rheumatism, General Debility, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla not only restores but it permanently maintains the health. Its use makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It does what no other blood-purifier in existence can do. It imparts renewed health and strength, to the aged and infirm, and thoroughly vitalizes and invigorates the system when it has become broken down or weakened by disease and overwork. Its curative properties have won for it the title of the Best, The Superior Medicine. Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, AYER'S only, and take it NOW. It Has Cured Others, and Will Cure You.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH COOK, OF BOSTON, AT THE Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

nap, or, as a neighbor of mine, a busy farmer's wife and model house-keeper, puts it, "Take a lie-down." "To sleep. Perchance to dream." What of it. You will feel that there is this piece of work I might be doing, or that article I would better be mending, or, I'm not very tired after all. Flee away such thoughts! Look to the results, which I assure you will be most gratifying both to yourself and to John, who, if he is the dear, good man I think he is, will appreciate the effects of "nature's sweet restorer" in the brightening eye, the restful smile and the freshened color of the cheeks.—Helicia in Country Gentleman.

You need not be afraid of the twinge of rheumatism. When it comes use Salvation Oil.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"THE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED," as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated." Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts

- Royal Commandments; or, Morning Thoughts for the King's Servants. 20
- Royal Bounty; or, Evening Thoughts for the King's Guests. 20
- The Royal Invitation. 20
- Loyal Responses. 20
- Sunlight Through Shadows. 20

Little Artist's Painting Book.

A Novelty for children, suitable for the Summer days or Winter evenings, in quarto size, with a limp varnished cover of artistic design. Price, 50c. Containing colored studies of children at play, illustrative of seashore and country life, in simple colors, the whole repeated in outline for filling in from the paint box. Children will be delighted with this painting book. It will interest, amuse and instruct.

Sermons of Rev. John Mc Neil.

The first volume of this "Scottish Spurgeon's" sermons. One large 12mo. volume of 416 pages. Price.....1.50

Our Darlings.

The Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories. An elegant volume, beautifully illustrated and printed. Nearly 500 pages and 1000 illustrations. Edited by Dr. T. J. Barnardo, F. R. C. S. Quarto, board covers, unique design1.25 Quarto, full cloth, gilt edges, elegant designed stamps in gold and colors..... 2.00

Pictorial Africa.

Its Heroes, Missionaries and Martyrs. Stirring narratives of their perils, adventures and achievements, with description of the peoples and countries of the "Dark Continent." Including portraits of all the most remarkable travelers that have visited Africa. Fully illustrated. Royal 8vo., 400 pages, cloth, elegant2.50

The book with its manifold illustrations will prove an attractive one both to old and young, and it strikes us as being the best descriptive book upon Africa, including an account of its explorers and eminent missionaries.—Missionary Herald.

Works of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

- Sermon Notes. Covering all the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. 4 vols.....4.00
- Feathers for Arrows. A volume of Choice Extracts, 12mo., cloth.....1.00
- Twelve Striking Sermons..... 50
- Twelve Soul Winning Sermons, 50
- Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection..... 50
- Twelve New Year Sermons..... 50
- Twelve Christmas Sermons..... 50

Notes by C. H. M.

On Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. Mr. D. L. Moody says of these books: "They have been to me a very key to the Scriptures." Deuteronomy is issued in two volumes, the others complete in one volume each. Separate volumes may be had if desired. The complete set in six volumes, covering over 2,300 pages, is offered at the reduced price of 75c per vol. or $4.50 per set.

A. L. O. E. Intermediate Library.

- Selected from the numerous productions of this world-renowned writer as being those of rare merit. 12 vols., 12mo., cloth elegant, each 75c; set.....9.00
- An Eden in England. Life in Eagle's Nest.
- Ned Franks. White Bear's Den.
- Sheer Off. Fairy Spider's Web.
- Braid of Chords. Lake in the Woods.
- Silver Keys. Seven Perils Passed.
- Grace Vernon. Hartley Brothers.

The Jessica Series. By Hessa Stretton. 6 vols., handsome bindings, cloth 50c each, or per set.....2.10 Jessica's First Prayer. Friends till Death. No Place Like Home. A Miserable Christmas Under the Old Roof. A Night and a Day.

A. L. O. E. Junior Library. Adapted to the young folks. 7 vols., 12mo., cloth, each 60c; the set.....4.20 Claremont Tales. A Wreath of Smoke. Christian Conquests. Pomegranates from Tales Illustrative of Punjab. Parables. Little Bullets from The Battle of Life. Batala.

The Hessa Stretton Series. 8 vols., elegant cloth bound, per set.....4.80 Cassy. King's Servant. Lost Gip. Alone in London. Max Kromer. Little Meg's Children. Storm of Life. Crew of the Dolphin.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W Madison St. Chicago.

The United States Government Both Endorses and Uses Royal Baking Powder.

Last year the Royal Baking Powder Co. sold to the United States Government over 80,000 pounds of baking powder—enough to supply both army and navy.

The last United States Government report shows Royal Baking Powder to be a cream of tartar powder superior to all others in purity and strength.

This purchase and this endorsement were made by the United States Government upon competitive tests of the various baking powders of the market.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Roger Q. Mills was elected United States Senator from Texas Wednesday to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John H. Reagan.

E. R. Sanborn, of Sanborn, N. Y., was elected Supreme Councillor of the Royal Templars of Temperance at Buffalo, N. Y., Thursday.

After April 1 the financial departments of the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific roads will be consolidated.

Dr. Edward J. James, of the University of Pennsylvania, Thursday refused the offer of Dr. William Harper to found a department of finance and economy in Chicago University.

M. H. Lake, of Michigan, Thursday was elected Supreme President of the Patrons of Industry.

Charles Fairfield was found dying in the poor-house at Owasso, Mich., Thursday by friends. He formerly lived at Toronto, Ontario, and during the last ten years has spent his entire fortune in searching for his wife, who eloped.

John Givin, superintendent of the Iowa division of the Rock Island railroad, died Thursday at Des Moines.

Superior Judge Troutt, at San Francisco, decided to admit M. B. Curtis, the actor awaiting trial on the charge of murder, to bail in the sum of $50,000, and he has been released.

Three safes were robbed at Rockford, Ill., Friday, during the noon hour.

Three members of the schooner Winnie Laurie's crew are said to have been eaten by their comrades. The schooner arrived at New York Friday, sixty days without food.

Mrs. Henry Lards and her two children, of Adrian, Mich., were fatally burned Friday by a gasolene explosion.

There is prospect of a tin mill at Duluth, Minn.

Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania, Friday, pardoned Editors Mellon and Porter, of the Beaver Star, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for libeling Senator Quay.

Friday the Legislature of Mississippi defeated the bill appropriating $50,000 for State display at the Columbia Exposition.

The Rev. Rodney D. Robinson, of Clarkston, Mich., was suspended from the Methodist ministry Friday, on the charge of immoral teaching and immoral conduct.

In executive session Friday the Senate practically completed consideration of the Behring Sea arbitration treaty. In view of the absence of a number of Senators, the final vote upon the ratification was deferred. It is understood that a resolution looking to the withholding of the exchange of final ratification until the modus vivendi is renewed, will accompany the treaty.

John W. Gorman, a museum freak known as James Kenndey, died at St. Louis, Mo., Thursday. At the post-mortem examination over a pint of nails, tacks, glass and screws were removed from his stomach.

The London Times' Buenos Ayres correspondent says that the Argentine Republic will refuse to accept the offer of reciprocity made by Secretary Blaine.

FOREIGN.

The Czar has bestowed a gift upon Captain Sargent, the commander of the steamer Indiana, which took a cargo of provisions from Philadelphia to Libau for Russian famine sufferers.

Louis Cartigny, the last French survivor of the battle of Trafalgar, died at Hyeres Monday, aged 101 years.

Arthur Thomas, the well-known writer of operas, committed suicide at London Monday by throwing himself under a train.

Peasants who were dissatisfied with the distribution of relief by the authorities at Orecho, Hungary, attempted to burn a burgomaster and his family, but were prevented by some farmers.

Buddhists in Eastern Siberia have revolted against forced conversion by Russian orthodox missionaries. Missionaries and Russian authorities have been forced to take refuge in fortresses.

The revolt of the Lushai tribe in Northern Burmah is spreading.

Recent movements of Russian troops, it is said, have caused considerable alarm in Austria.

The Reichstag Wednesday referred to a committee a bill providing for a supplementary credit of 2,500,000 marks to be devoted to the German exhibit at the Columbian Exhibition.

Engineers at the Hebourn colliery, Durham, were stoned and seriously hurt by strikers Tuesday because they refused to join the strike.

By a fire which destroyed four houses at Amsterdam, Wednesday, five persons were killed and twenty injured.

Ninety houses have been destroyed by a conflagration at Immenhausen in Hesse-Nassau.

Chancellor von Caprivi has been relieved of the functions of the presidency of the Prussian Ministry, it is said, but he will retain the position of Prussian Minister of Foreign Affairs. Count von Eulenburg, Grand Marshal of the Court, will succeed General von Caprivi as President of the Ministry. Dr. C. von Bosse has been appointed Minister of Ecclesiastical Affairs, Public Instruction and Medicinal Affairs to succeed Count von Zedlitz-Trutzschler.

Joseph Joyce, a Parnellite, was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of an anti-Parnellite.

It is said that famine-stricken provinces of Russia are now provided with food sufficient to last until May.

The Wood will case in which Mrs. Parnell, formerly Mrs. O'Shea, was left $1,000,000 by Mrs. Wood, which will be contested by Sir Evelyn Wood and six nieces, was settled in London Thursday.

Fifty-two Anarchists were sentenced to imprisonment for terms ranging from twenty-five days to two years and eight months at Rome, Thursday.

Drought prevails in South Australia. Sheep are dying by hundreds.

Captain Ponthier is conducting successful operations against the slave traders on the Congo, in Africa.

A decree has been issued dissolving the legislative chamber of Greece, and fixing May 15 as the date of holding elections.

The new extradition treaty between France and the United States was signed at Paris Friday by M. Ribot and White-law Reid, the American Minister.

Three leaders in the recent riots in Berlin were found guilty and sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from two to four years.

Balloons are said to be used by the Germans to spy upon the movements of Russian troops on the frontier.

The decree prohibiting the export of wheat meal from Russian ports on the Azof and Black Seas has been repealed.

All Used Up.

"That Tired Feeling" was No Name for it.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gives New Life and Energy.

That Mr. Whitman, who makes the following statement, is a faithful, reliable man, will be readily believed when we state that he has worked at tool making in the jewelry factories in Attleboro without losing a day, save holidays and Sundays, for 25 years:

"I can truthfully say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is one of the best medicines that I know of, if not the best. A year ago I found I was about used up, felt no ambition to do anything, with any relish. 'That tired feeling' was no name for the way I felt. I took a couple of bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which revived my flagging energies in good shape. This spring I took two more bottles and have had no return of the feeling of a year ago. My wife has also taken some of it with benefit. We think it cannot be praised too highly." G. L. WHITMAN, Laro street, Attleboro, Mass.

Could not Eat

EUROPE: A select party sails April 16 for Holy Land. Best ticketing facilities. Choicest ocean berths. Send for "Tourist Gazette," H. GAZE & SONS, 940 Broadway, N. Y. (Est. 1844.)

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN? Better yet! Write to-day, if you haven't. See my larger illustrated advertisement in the first issue for this month of this paper. I undertake to teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn $3000.00 a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment. Easy to learn. I teach you FREE. All ages. Sure success for every worker. Full particulars FREE. Why not write to-day? Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 1001, Augusta, Maine.

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small World's Fair Buildings, lars being invested in prizes at Harvey. There-actual railroad fare to the amount of not exceeding 2½ per cent of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. Illustrated Plats and Circulars free to all.

HARVEY

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR NEW 1892 FLOWER SEED OFFER.

A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS

200 Varieties, FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! THE LADIES' WORLD is a mammoth 50-page, 80-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile reading, etiquette, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send Free and postpaid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Stocks, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinks, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not satisfied. Ours is an old and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all the leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and naming the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one packet of the new and popular imported Love-in-a-Mist, a hardy, erect-growing annual, with bright green fern-shaped leaves, finely cut, and bearing a very pretty and curious blue flower. Plants grow about 12 inches high, and are the easiest culture, and very profuse bloomers. We will also send free one copy of our Manual of Floriculture, a book of great interest and value to all who cultivate flowers.

ANOTHER GREAT OFFER! Upon receipt of Thirty-five Cents (our regular subscription price) we will send The Ladies' World for One Year, together with our magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds above described, likewise one packet of "Love-in-a-Mist" and our "Manual of Floriculture." Address: S. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

5000 BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR DARKNESS AT DAYLIGHT or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 28th thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary. For We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freight. Outfit Free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

SPRING TERM BEGINS TUESDAY APRIL 5th, 1892.

Special attention will be given during the Winter Term to Book keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and other branches of like sort. College work proper continued throughout the year.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

The Bible Mode of Baptism.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

For many years President of Wheaton College and Editor of the Christian Cynosure.

Price, Six Cents, Postpaid.

Address - - W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover. Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING.'—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIV., No. 30.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1892.

WHOLE No. 1,145.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments.... 1	That Rumpled Freema-
A Negro Protest..... 8	son Again; The Mor-
Is the Seal Worth Preser-	mons Seeking State Do-
vation?..... 8	minion..... 5,6
A Missionary Tug-boat.. 8	LITERATURE..... 6
To Our Christian Friends 8	OBITUARY..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS... 7
The Church and the	THE N. C. A..... 7
Lodge..... 1	NEW ENGLAND LETTER... 9
The Church and Secret	WASHINGTON LETTER... 12
Societies..... 3	THE HOME..... 10
REFORM NEWS:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
From the New England	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Agent; Pennsylvania	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Anti-secrecy Conven-	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
tion; Rev. W. C. Paden	MARKETS..... 13
Hears a Masonic Lec-	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
ture..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15

There is a plausible rumor that the secret Farmers' Alliance in Kansas is seeking a political coalition with the Democracy of that State. Such a combination would be an anomaly, lacking adhesiveness; but if it can be kept together long enough, may result in a Democratic victory; for the Alliance, in that case, would play only second fiddle to the Democrats. Such a coalition might be a menace to the present prohibition laws of Kansas, and would certainly keep in power a very undesirable political element.

Rev. William Fenton, one of the most devoted anti-secrecy reform workers, is in California. This month he expects to visit San Diego, Riverside, Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Jose, and Sacramento; afterwards Portland, Ore.; Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane, Wash., and then home by the Northern Pacific, perhaps stopping at intermediate places. Whenever a good opening for an anti-secrecy lecture is found, Bro. Fenton will probably fill it and be heard. Friends on the Pacific coast will find him an influential speaker.

A source of much gratification is the unanimity with which the legislatures of several of the United States, and a few of the European nations, have voted liberally for placing exhibits in the Columbian Exposition, with the express understanding that their exhibition buildings shall not be opened on Sunday. This provision is made, perhaps, as much to save overworking their exhibiting agents as for honoring the Christians' holy-day; but, whatever the motive, the examples should not be lost upon the Fair Directory, or Congress, when it decides to bestow more money upon the Exposition.

We make room, in this issue of the Cynosure, for the address of President Chas. A. Blanchard before the students of the Chicago (Union Park) Congregational Seminary, on secret associations. It is a careful and exhaustive review of the evils of the lodge system, and the close attention with which it was received augurs well for the influence which it will have upon the lives and labors of these young men as they go forth to preach the Gospel of Him who said: "In secret have I said nothing," and in opposition to whom Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship are officially arrayed. It deserves a more extended circulation than the forum and the Cynosure can give it.

"The Masonic death-penalty," says the Voice of Masonry, "is expulsion." Yes, "expulsion" (of life), with throat cut across, tongue torn out by its roots and buried in the rough sands of the sea; with breast torn open, heart plucked out, to be devoured by the vultures of the air; with body severed in twain, bowels taken from thence and burned to ashes; with other brutal mutilations! "Expelled!" Really, one might as well be killed at once as to undergo "expulsion" under such unpleasant circumstances. What a humbug is every defense of Freemasonry!

The Free Methodist church in Illinois is placing itself nobly on the record of effective anti-secrecy work. This church has authorized groups of evangelists, who go from town to town to hold revival meetings and otherwise aid in the spread of Gospel truth. To these evangelists the respective chairmen of the various districts furnish anti-secrecy tracts, such as those by Moody, Roberts, Finney and Smith, for distribution in connection with their services. Among these earnest workers in the church, may be mentioned Miss Deborah Margretts, who is, at this writing, holding meetings at Winnebago, Illinois. The Free Methodist church long ago registered its earnest opposition to all secret societies, and is ever consistent in maintaining it.

Respecting the position of the Cynosure upon the question of Mormon Statehood, polygamy and other peculiarities pertaining to Mormonism, we ask a careful reading of the letter from Salt Lake City, from Rev. B. F. Clay, pastor of a Christian church at the headquarters of the "Latter-day Saints." The letter was written at our special request, in order to strengthen the case against the Mormons, and we have reason to be well-satisfied with the result. Our readers may be assured that the following, recently uttered by Joseph Cook in a prelude to a recent Boston Monday Lecture, is a true transcript of the charges upon which the people of these United States have arraigned the Mormons: "The Mormons have yet a majority of ten to fifteen thousand in the Territorial vote. They act under priestly control. Polygamy is not abandoned. The Mormon church publications contain the names of books that advise and champion polygamy precisely as heretofore. Mormon hymn-books yet eulogize social pollution:

"God bless the wife that strives,
And aids her husband all she can
To obtain a dozen wives."

"In spite of all disclaimers by the Mormons, President Harrison is justified in saying that Utah will bear watching. All the real experts in this discussion are of the same opinion."

The results of a general discussion of Sunday peculiarities and Sunday rest indicate the growth of a healthful sentiment among the more thoughtful of this country. Six States have voted not to exhibit their contributions to the Columbian Exposition on Sundays. It is stated as probable that trainmen on railroads running to the Columbian Fair grounds, or in connection with it, will strike rather than perform Sunday work. A judge at Atlanta, Ga., has decided that a prominent newspaper advertising agency cannot collect anything from a patron for Sunday advertising, because it is illegal. This fits several other States besides Georgia. The retail grocers in Philadelphia will make war upon all their class who violate the Sunday law to the injury of the rest. These are "straws" of considerable significance. The power of petitions upon Congress in the direction of proper Sunday observance may yet prevail.

THE CHURCH AND THE LODGE.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BEFORE THE CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, ON REQUEST OF THE FACULTY, BY PRESIDENT CHARLES A. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN:—It is the business of a minister to apply the Word of God to the ways of those to whom he preaches. If we have any call we have one from God. If we are to deliver any message, it is one from Jehovah to men. "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell his dream," but let the man who has God's Word speak it faithfully. Those professed preachers who have no word from God, or who, having one, refuse to apply it to the conduct of those to whom they preach, are enemies to the souls of men. It is important, also, to remember that if we deliberately refuse to test one institution by the divine Word we shall really apply that Word to none. If we say we will not judge slavery by God's Word, then we shall probably refuse also to judge by it the theatre which from every bill board flaunts its indecencies in the faces of honest men and women, or to the Sunday cars, which slaughter the bodies and souls of employes, and rattle and ring all through what should be the sacred quiet of the Lord's day.

The minister is called a watchman. It is the duty of the watchman to be on the lookout for dangers and to give timely warning of their approach. The minister is called the shepherd. It is the duty of the shepherd not simply to lead to the pasture, but to kill the wolf and fold the sheep, so that even while he sleeps they may be safe. The minister is to be a good soldier. It is the business of a soldier to fight. While he may at times be assigned to garrison duty, his chief business is war; and I think it needless to say that there is danger of our failing to keep in mind the profession which we make, the business to which we are called.

If this view of the case be correct, then certainly we have no right to be ignorant of secret societies; for whether they be good or evil, they are one of the characteristics of the age in which we live. Within a few weeks I gave an address in a town where there were three churches, all of them weak and living by permission of the world, while at the same time, in that town, there were said to be sixteen different secret orders. In another town where I recently spent the Sabbath, there were two churches, both of them largely sustained by men who do not profess Christianity, and ten secret lodges of various kinds. The Masonic order claims in the United States, more than six hundred thousand members. The Odd-fellows claim nearly as many. The Knights of Pythias claim more than half as many. These are but three out of scores of different orders, some of them professing good objects, most of them composed exclusively of men and all of them drawing money by hundreds of thousands of dollars from the earnings of the people.

In this very city there are reported in the directory something like a thousand lodges. There are, I believe, counting everything that pretends to be religious, only about three hundred churches. The figures in New York, Boston, New Orleans, Cincinnati and St. Louis will not differ materially. I think it safe to say to-day that in the United States there are four lodges to every church. I do not affirm this, for it would be difficult to make the count, but from facts known this would seem to be a fair inference. It seems needless to say that a man standing in a pulpit from seventy to one hundred times a year, addressing men who are continually solicited to unite with these orders—addressing men who, many of them, have already united with them, and are paying in their money year by year for their support—it seems needless, I say, to declare that the minister who preaches to such a congregation ought to know the character of these lodges which are continually bidding for his members, and, what is more, bidding for the men who ought to be his members, and who are not, and who are not likely to be.

Some ignorant and some untruthful people affirm that it is impossible for us to become acquainted with these orders without being initiated into them. This is so absurd a falsehood that it seems almost an insult to an intelligent audience to take time to refute it; but since the statement is frequently made, I perhaps ought not to pass it without brief remark. There are three sources of information open to all who choose to inform themselves, by which they may become thoroughly well-acquainted with these lodges. In the first place, while the societies are secret, they desire to be well enough known to secure the money and membership of those who are not at present with them. There are various means which they take to accomplish this end. One of them is the holding of public services for installation of officers, dedication of lodge halls, baptism of children, the burial of the dead and the laying of corner-stones. As is well known, they not only lay the corner-stones of their own buildings, but whenever they can do so they delight to advertise themselves at the corner-stones of buildings erected at the public expense. Any person who desires so to do is permitted to look on when these installations, baptisms, dedications, burials and corner-stone layings are in progress. He can hear the songs which they sing, the remarks which they make, the prayers which they recite; he can see the men who conduct these services; and while he will not be able from these alone to know all about these organizations, it is safe to say that he will know enough to form an opinion which will be of considerable value.

Still further, these organizations have all, or most of them, a literature, and in the aggregate this literature at the present time is considerable. Men who spend their entire time in building up these lodges and in administering their affairs, have, in encyclopedias, dictionaries, manuals, treatise-boards and treatises on jurisprudence, etc., declared what the orders are, what they propose to do, and, in large measure, how they propose to do it. Of course any one who chooses to take the time and spend the money can purchase and read these books, and, reading them, will know more about the organization than do a large majority of the members of them. For it is a sad fact that very few of the members of secret lodges are at all intelligent respecting the organizations to which they contribute their money and influence. A third source of information, also open to all, is in the testimony of those who have for conscience' sake abandoned these lodges. The little societies which are now being organized on every hand have not as yet lasted long enough, and done injury enough, to awaken the Christians connected with them to the duty of testifying against them; but Odd-fellowship, the Knights of Pythias and Freemasonry have for years been revealed, so that any one who will may know the ceremonies of initiation, the obligations and penalties, which persons uniting with these fraternities accept. Freemasonry, particularly, has been so thoroughly set forth by men like President Finney, of Oberlin, David Bernard, of New York, Mr. Edmond Ronayne, of Chicago, and hundreds, yes, thousands of others, that no public teacher is excusable for ignorance concerning it.

Thus far we have considered these points, namely: First. It is the minister's duty to know the forces which are acting upon the men to whom he preaches. Second. The lodges are among the most potent powers at present affecting the life of the church. Counting, as they do, their membership by hundreds of thousands, their revenues by millions, and their lodges, chapters, councils, commanderies, posts, camps, courts, wigwags, etc., etc., by tens of thousands, it is obvious that they are one of the great forces affecting men for good or ill. Third. It is apparent that these organizations can be known by persons who choose to inform themselves. The public services which they hold, the literature which they put forth, and the testimony of conscientious men who, having united with them in ignorance, have come out from them and borne their testimony against them, afford a full and complete guidance for every honest man who desires to know the truth concerning them and to act as Christian duty requires.

Availing ourselves of these sources of information, there are several facts which we think the candid observer will speedily arrive at. In the first place, he will see that while the names, rituals, forms of obligations and non-essentials generally of these different organizations vary, their principle is substantially one. There is no way in which a person can consistently justify one of them and condemn the rest. Even a secret temperance order involves all the essential principles of Freemasonry, and the man who is a faithful and enthusiastic member of one of these organizations cannot be a consistent enemy of the rest, nor of any of them. It appears, also, to one who considers the history of these organizations, that Freemasonry, next to the Society of Jesus, the oldest of present secret organizations, is practically the mother of the horde of secret societies which now crowd upon us as the frogs took possession of Egypt. In the history of the Grange, for example, we are told that the persons who organized that fraternity were Masons; the Knights of Pythias are, in our cities and towns in general, promoted by a little circle of Freemasons and Odd-fellows, and while largely different in membership from the Masonic order, they nevertheless have a little circle of influential men who are members of both organizations. This is true, so far as I am informed, of all modern secret orders.

Another fact which will very presently appear to the candid searcher after truth, is, that these organizations are religious in character. While this is true of all of them, it is in a marked degree true of Freemasonry; and as this organization is mother and model of other lodges, a detailed examination of its professions and claims in this regard seems needful. In the first place, the mere looker-on who had never read at all would arrive at the conclusion that Freemasonry was a religious organization. The various Masonic bodies have chaplains, prelates and priests. All of them have what they call an altar. One of them has a baptismal service, by which the children of members of the organization are in a sense inducted into it while yet in infancy. The burial services which are prepared for them in case of the death of members of the organization intimate that the person who has belonged to it and died is sure of an eternity of happiness, because of his relation to the order. So clear is this impression that ordinary Masons who have no interest in denying the truth, say without hesitation that the man who lives up to his Masonic obligations is sure of heaven. Or, as they more frequently put it, "Masonry is good enough religion for me."

These religious officers and implements, together with the impression produced upon common men by the services of the order, are two proofs that this lodge is religious in character. But the most decisive evidence is contained in the statements of the learned and influential men of the order. For example, we find in Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry, page 369, an article entitled "Prayer." The author says: "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer, because Masonry is a religious institution." Mr. Daniel Sickels, a 33d-degree Mason, who has occupied many if not most of the offices in the higher bodies in New York State, says, in his notes on the third degree: "We now find man complete in morality and intelligence, with a state of religion added, to insure him the protection of Deity and to guard him against ever going astray. These three degrees thus form a perfect and harmonious whole; nor can we conceive that anything can be suggested more, which the soul of man requires." These words are found in his "Freemasons' Monitor," on pages 97 and 98.

One of the most popular Monitors ever prepared for use in the Masonic order is that of Thomas Smith Webb. Many editions of it have been printed. One of them was published by Mr. John C. W. Bailey, of Chicago, and in addition to the Monitor, it contains a synopsis of Masonic law and usage, by Robert Morris, one of the principal Freemasons of Kentucky and one of the leading Masonic authors of the world. On page 284 of this Monitor, in the treatise on Masonic law and usage, the article "Religion" contains these words: "The meeting of the Masonic lodge is strictly a religious ceremony." "No lodge or Masonic assembly can be opened or closed without prayer." "So broad is the religion of Masonry, and so carefully are all sectarian tenets excluded from the system, that the Christian, the Jew and the Mohammedan, in all their numberless sects and divisions, may and do harmoniously combine in its moral and intellectual work with the Buddhist, the Parsee, the Confucian, and the worshiper of Deity under every form."

Robert Macoy is another prominent Freemason of the United States. He has edited the Cyclopaedia of Freemasonry, originally prepared by George Oliver, a distinguished English Freemason. In this Cyclopaedia, under the article "Builder Smitten," page 42, the author says: "The members of our society, at this day in the third stage of Masonry, confess themselves to be Christians. The veil of the temple is rent, the builder is smitten and we are raised from the tomb of transgression." The same writer, in the article "Faith," on page 102, says that "a true Christian faith is the evidence of things not seen, the substance of things hoped for. This, maintained and well-answered by walking according to our Masonic profession, will turn faith into vision and bring us to that blessed mansion above where the just exist in perfect bliss through all eternity, where we shall be eternally happy with God, the grand geometrician of the universe, whose Son died for us and rose again that we might be justified through faith in his most precious blood." Once more, in this same article, on the 74th page, in the article entitled, "Dancing," the writer says: "Dancing is not a Masonic accomplishment, although it usually accompanied the rites of spurious Freemasonry. . . . Notwithstanding this, some provincial Grand Master, instead of taking the brethren at their provincial meetings to church, as in the good old times of Inwood, Horn and Oliver, for the purpose of invoking the blessing of God on their labors, lead them to a ball in full Masonic costume, as the gentry of old used to exhibit their servants and archers at an Assize or county meeting, in blue coats and badges; whence, instead of a praying institution, as Masonry is, it becomes a dancing institution, which it decidedly is not." The same work, on the 48th page, under the title, "Cassia" says: "When the Master Mason exclaims, 'My name is Cassia,' it is equivalent to saying: 'I have been in the grave; I have triumphed over it by rising from the dead, and, being regenerated in the process, have a claim to life everlasting.'"

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry, once more, on the 16th page, under the title, "Acacian," says: "A term derived from akakia, and signifying the Mason who by living in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity is free from sin."

It would not be difficult to multiply quotations of this sort from the whole field of Masonic literature, but persons who will not be satisfied with these would not probably be convinced by any number of extracts which might be given.

It will be at once observed that some of these writers refer to the Lord Jesus Christ. Persons, however, who are conversant with the writings on this subject, will understand that while Masonry distinctly claims a religious character, and professes to send those who conform to its obligation to what they call "the Grand Lodge above," the organization is, clearly and distinctively, not only non-Christian, but anti-Christian. This is evident, in the first place, from the titles and regalia which are used by the fraternity. The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is humble, serving, and aspires to be useful to others. The religion of Freemasonry is proud, vain, and loves display. It is fairly stuffed with such titles as Worshipful Master, Grand Master, Grand High Priest, Grand King, Prelate, Prince, Sovereign, etc. Then, too, the regalia which is used by the fraternity belongs in the same category of anti-Christian characteristics. The aprons and collars which are used by the lower degrees might seem more a subject for mirth than serious objection; but as one advances toward the higher degrees, the ignorant and barbaric love of feathers and collars is continually manifested. The same thing is to be observed in some of the other orders which have sprung from Masonry; notably, the Knights of Pythias, who delight to parade in the garb of soldiers.

The fact that the religion of Freemasonry cannot be Christian, again comes out in the membership of the order. A man may unite with the church and be a bad man, but he must also be a hypocrite, for he must at least profess sorrow for his sins, love for God, love for his fellow-men, and a purpose to live a holy life. No church will receive a man unless he so covenants; but men are received into the Masonic church on the payment of the initiation fee and the taking of the oath, without any purpose expressed or understood to live a holy life. The prayerless, godless, profane, drunken members of the lodges do not break any part of their covenant if they continue in their vices and sins.

In fact, strange as it may appear, Masons seem quite proud to say that pirates, savages, robbers and murderers are members of their order in good and regular standing. The book entitled, "The Mystic Tie," containing facts and opinions illustrating the character and tendency of Freemasonry, edited by Albert G. Mackey, whose Lexicon of Freemasonry has already been mentioned, contains, we believe, something like nine different articles showing that pirates, savages, robbers, murderers, or men combining two or more of these characters, have been Masons in good standing and have promptly recognized their Masonic obligations when called upon to do so. It does not require argument with intelligent persons to show that an organization admitting persons of these classes, without any professed purpose to change their actions, is not Christian.

Still further, the explicit statements of the later Masonic writers contradict directly the earlier authors who claim that Masonic religion is Christian. Webb says, in the quotation above made, that Christians, Mohammedans, Jews, Buddhists, Parsees, Confucians and pagans in general, are all eligible to Freemasonry. Of course, if this be the case, Masonic religion cannot be Christian. On page 402 of Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry, above quoted, under the article "Religion," the authors says: "The religion of Freemasonry is pure theism, on which its different members may engraft their own peculiar opinions; but they are not permitted to introduce them into the lodge or to connect their truth or falsehood with the truth of Masonry." This statement is of high authority, and its purport is perfectly plain. The Christian who joins the Masonic lodge may engraft his belief in Christ on the deism of Masonry, but he must not introduce his Christianity into the lodge nor connect its truth or falsehood with that of Freemasonry.

The article, "Blazing Star," on the 61st page of this same Lexicon, says: "Formerly the blazing star was said to commemorate that light which appeared to guide the wise men of the East to the place of our Saviour's nativity; but as this allusion, however beautiful, interferes with the universal character of Masonry, it is now generally omitted and the blazing star is said to be an emblem of Divine Providence." That is, formerly the ritual of the lodge contained here a recognition of our Saviour, but as this would interfere with the universal character of Masonry, it is to be stricken out. In Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, on pages 207 and 208, the writer says: "The Jews, the Chinese, the Turks, each reject either the New Testament or the Old, or both, and yet we see no good reason why they should not be made Masons. In fact, Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible. If it was, it would not be Masonry. It would be something else."

If it be true that Freemasonry is a religion, and that it is not the Christian religion, it is evident that it is a false or idolatrous religion, and the hundreds of thousands of men who are forsaking the prayer-meeting, neglecting the Bible, profaning the Sabbath and attending to their lodges, are in danger of losing their souls. They are simply pagan worshipers in a Christian land. They share the advantages of a Christian civilization, but they do not contribute to the progress of the Christian faith which alone renders a Christian civilization possible. While it is true that Freemasonry is less than two hundred years old, it is also true that organizations essentially the same in character have been in the world for thousands of years. The mysteries of India, Egypt, Greece, were all of them similar in character to the lodges which are now meeting over stores, blacksmith shops, and in costly temples which their members have erected all over our land. The effect which these lodges are producing on society is like that which the old lodges produced on the society of their day; and it is certain, either, that the men of our nation will become separated from these secret pagan religions, or that our nation must cease to be Christian. It would seem to be almost unnecessary to ask what should be the attitude of the Christian ministry and the Christian church toward these rival and antagonistic religions which are springing upon every hand, and which are withdrawing members and money from the church. If it is a duty to seek to convert the heathen in Asia and Africa, it is certainly a duty to seek to persuade our neighbors and friends who are being deceived by similar false religions to abandon their lodges and attach themselves to the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. If the ministry and the church do not exist for this purpose, what are they for?

We know that thousands of worthy men have united with the legion of modern orders in ignorance of their real character, and with no intention of denying the Christian faith. None the less is it true that these lodges are rivals of and substitutes for the church of Jesus Christ. As Lincoln said: "This country cannot continue to exist half-slave and half-free;" so it is evident that it will not permanently continue half-Christian and half-pagan. An honest and intelligent protest on the part of the ministry of our land will save tens of thousands of young men from these snares, traps, and pitfalls, will strengthen the churches, and aid in forming the public sentiment which, in God's good time, will sweep the whole list of secret orders from the earth.

THE CHURCH AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

SERMON BY REV. J. M. FOSTER, PASTOR SECOND REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BOSTON, MASS., MARCH 13, 1892.

TEXT: "They sacrifice to devils, and not to God."—1 Cor. 10: 20.

There are two kingdoms in this world,—the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness; the kingdom of Christ and the kingdom of Satan. Ever since the announcement in the garden: "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head; it shall bruise thy head, but thou shalt bruise his heel," there has been war between these two kingdoms. And this war will continue until Satan is bound and cast into the bottomless pit. For, as Rutherford says: "The dragon will strike at Christ so long as there is one bit or portion of his mystical body out of heaven." God's people are by grace translated from the kingdom of darkness to the kingdom of light. The command is specific: "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." They are to stand aloof from the whole system of iniquity. "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light; let us walk honestly as in the day." "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

Secret, oath-bound fraternities, the whole system of secrecy, belong to the kingdom of darkness. The first secret society was organized in the garden of Eden, between Satan and Eve, the mother of us all. Its bitter fruits mankind has been reaping ever since. The controversy between Cain and Abel was the world-old conflict between the world and the church, whether the altar of worship shall be set up in honor of Christ or Satan; and that is the contention between the church and the lodge to-day. Israel, on his death-bed, sharply reprov'd Simeon and Levi for forming a secret association to avenge the betrayers of their sister, just as he would chide the Orangemen to-day, for entering into a secret conspiracy to oppose the aggressions of the church of Rome: "O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united." In a vision God revealed to Ezekiel how the priests and Levites had formed a secret conclave in the sanctuary to practice the abominations of the heathen, just as so many ministers and church-officers to-day are identified with the heathen worship of the lodge. "And he brought me to the door of the court: and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall. Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door. And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here. So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about. And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah, the son of Shaphan, with every man his censor in his hand: and a thick cloud of incense went up. Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chamber of his imagery? for they say, The Lord seeth us not: the Lord hath forsaken the earth." How striking the resemblance between this and the altar, coffin and regalia of the lodge? Rev. J. Blanchard, D.D., in a convention at Washington, D. C., asked this question: "What is the connection between the heathen altars set up in Israel by Solomon's wives and the altars of the lodge?" The question sent a thrill through the great audience. That question goes to the core. Every lodge has its altar. The altar is the symbol of worship. They sacrifice, not to God, but to devils.

The Saviour, by precept and example, repudiated the methods of the "secret empire." "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogues and in the temple whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." The whole trend of the New Testament is summed up in the injunction, "Put off the works of darkness;" "put on the whole armor of light."

The church should forbid her members belonging to secret oath-bound fraternities.

I. Because secrecy is opposed to Christianity. Joseph Cook distinguishes between "gilt-edged" and "guilty-edged" secret societies. The High-binders of California are imported from China. The flowery kingdom is honey-combed with these secret orders. Their chief weapon is murder. The government has tried in vain to suppress them. The Mafia, the Clan-na-Gael, and the Nihilists have been imported from Europe. They use assassination as a means of accomplishing their designs. The Endowment House of Utah and the Masonic fraternity have resorted to murder. These are very different from the Orangemen, the Knights of Labor, Sons of Temperance, and the G. A. R. But all are alike in the element of secrecy, and that is the badge of Satan's kingdom. Go to any prison, and you find criminals old and young, red-handed murderers, petty thieves, gamblers, adulterers, blasphemers and Sabbath-breakers. Some are vicious, others are kind and tender; some are dangerous, others are harmless. But all belong to one class known as law-breakers. So some secret societies endanger life and property, while others have no disposition to invade the rights of any man. But all have covered themselves with the dark mantle of secrecy. Darkness is the tent that incloses the kingdom of the evil one. Secret societies, one and all, are within that "tent of wickedness." God's people are required to come out of that tent and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.

II. Because the oaths administered by secret societies are contrary to the law of God.

What is an oath? It is a solemn appeal to God to witness the truth of what we say. It is a most solemn act of religious worship. It is to be distinguished from a vow, which is the solemn engagement of the believer to perform certain duties, and a covenant, in which the believer appropriates God's promises and swears allegiance to him, thus making a mutual solemn contract between God and the believer. In the oath God is called a witness.

But who has the right to administer the oath? As individual members of the social order we are forbidden to use the oath. "Swear not at all. Let your communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay." This was given by our Lord and repeated by his servant James. Its universality cannot be questioned. The oaths that are so freely used in careless, trivial talk, are an abomination. They are strictly forbidden. The use of the oath by the private citizen is a violation of God's law. The oath is to be administered only by the divinely appointed representatives of church and state. Civil officers were to administer the oath of expurgation when stock (certain beasts), committed by the owner into the hand of another for safe-keeping, had been lost. Ex. 22: 10, 11. The prophet Elijah confirmed his message with an oath when standing before Ahab. 1 Kings 17: 1. The Lord Jesus Christ took an oath before a magistrate. "The High Priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said." This was the Jewish mode of declaring on oath. Paul repeatedly appealed to God to witness the truth of his utterances. See 2 Cor. 1: 28; 2 Cor. 11: 31; Gal. 1: 20. The angel in the Apocalypse confirmed his declarations by an oath: "And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven, and swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, that there should be time no longer." Rev. 10: 5, 6. God himself is represented as confirming his declarations in swearing by himself, when he could swear by no greater. "As I live, saith the Lord."

Now of all these Scriptures this is the sum. God administers the oath. The angels who are clothed with the authority of "the thrones and dominions and principalities and powers in heavenly places" administer it. Jewish high priests, Old Testament prophets and New Testament apostles and ministers administered it. Jewish civil magistrates administered the oath, and it is the prerogative of civil officers in every age.

But the lodge is neither church nor state. It is not of God or his Christ. It is a purely human device, bearing many of the marks of the kingdom of darkness. It has no right to administer the oath at all. For it to administer the Bible oath is sacrilege. But to administer the oaths of the lodge is a crime in the sight of heaven. Think of the lodge administering to a professed follower of Jesus an oath "to ever conceal and never reveal their secrets, on pain of having his throat cut from ear to ear, his bowels torn out, his body burned and the ashes scattered on the rough sands of the sea!" Think of a Christian minister taking the Master Mason's oath: "I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secret, given to me in charge as such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election!" Think of a Christian minister taking the oath of the Royal Arch degree, which amends the above thus: "murder and not treason excepted!" Where is the safety for society when the men to whom it looks for counsel and guidance bind themselves by such oaths? But you say, these are Masonic oaths; surely the oaths of such an order as the Orangemen are less objectionable. The Orangemen originated in 1690, after the battle of the Boyne. Their object was to withstand the Catholic order called Ribbon men. They soon lost sight of this object. They chartered lodges in Canada and the United States. And all that any living man can see that they accomplish is to collect their dues, hold secret meetings and parade the streets in their glittering regalia. In the Cynosure for Feb. 18, '92, a page is devoted to the initiation of a candidate in the Arch degree. It is not unlike the folly of Masonry. At a certain point, after being stripped, blindfolded and led up stairways and through divers rooms, branded on the left breast near the heart, "the hissing of the burning flesh and the pain of the operation reminding them of the serpent's bite," and placed on a canvas in which he is repeatedly tossed, by several strong men, nearly to the ceiling (sometimes maiming him for life), "he swears that he will answer all signs from an Arch man; that he will not be present at the making of an Arch man where there is less than a quorum, and that he will never marry a Roman Catholic, adding, 'So help me God, and keep me steadfast in this my Arch obligations.'" Then, having swords drawn across his bowels, breast and throat, he is informed, "This signifies that your throat will be cut from ear to ear, and your tongue torn out by the roots; that your heart will be cut out, burned to ashes, and thrown to the four winds of earth; that your bowels will be cut open, torn out, and the fowls of the air devour them; your body will be sunk to low-water mark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice every twenty-four hours—if ever you divulge or reveal the whole or any part of the signs, words or tokens."

Now I affirm that for any man to take an oath with such imprecations is a crime. But for a Christian to do so is treason against the Lord that bought him. Do you say that this indictment applies to many good men. Be it so—many good men have sinned. David was a man after God's own heart. And yet in the matter of Uriah's wife he committed adultery and murder. God's-people fall into grievous sins. But, blessed be God, when they repent and forsake their sins he pardons them. Nothing, not even our sins, can separate us from the love of Christ. As "holy Rutherford" says, "unbelief may perhaps tear the copies of the covenant which Christ hath given you; but he still keeps the original in heaven with himself. Your doubts and fears are no part of the covenant; neither can they change Christ."

(To be concluded next week.)

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

Boston, March 31, 1892.

Friends in Pennsylvania and the Washington agent, who "blazed the way" for the recent convention in Pittsburgh, acquitted themselves creditably, and I need only indorse the full report just read in the "Polar Star" of the movement in opposition to rum, Romanism, rings, cliques, lodges, legalized Sabbath desecration and adultery. To meet with veterans remaining, and recruits filling gaps in the ranks left by those who have "fallen asleep," was cheering and inspiring. If earthly scenes are visible to the "spirits of just men made perfect," there must have been "joy in the presence of the angels of God" when the coming up of so goodly a company "to the help of the Lord against the mighty" was witnessed by those who rest from a finished work on this field of conflict.

The "grain of mustard seed" sowed in this field, has sent up its stalk, spread its branches, and put forth its leaves, prophetic of a harvest home in the gathering time. "The birds lodged in the branches thereof" are not of "ill-omen," but the eloquent in utterance and fearless in combat, the tireless in effort, and worthy successors of those dauntless women, "last at the Cross and first at the tomb" of Him who is Victor over "death, hell and the grave."

Monday, I supplied the Baptist and M. E. ministers with tract No. 7, N. E. series. Tuesday I visited the Y. M. C. A. rooms in Boston, Cambridgeport, Somerville, Charlestown and Chelsea, meeting a welcome, and leaving tracts Nos. 6 and 7, with the assurance that they would be distributed at the M. E. Theological Seminary. The "Dean" accepted copies of Bro. Foster's address on "The State and Secret Societies," with the promise to give one to each of the one hundred and more students in his care. Three training schools for evangelists have been supplied, and a number of reading-rooms in churches have received contributions with thanks. Some are yet timid, and I find an occasional specimen of the "baser sort," who think to hide their shame and protect their "ministerial character" by asserting: "If you say that the Masons publish any books, you are a liar, and you know it," etc. Such charges are rather tart and "Frosty," but to be expected when we remember the parentage of such "a crooked and perverse generation." With all the satanic art acquired by long practice, it is doubtful if any improvement has been made on what somebody has denominated "the first universalist sermon" by the father of this class of preachers in Eden. Dr. O. P. Gifford said at our convention in Tremont Temple: "The son, when mature, ought to know more than his father." Possibly this is the exception that proves the general statement.

Papal aggression is the ominous dragon by which all other reforms are hidden in the estimation of some excellent people in New England. Danger from other sources is like Prof. Totten's Star of Destiny, "hiding behind the sun," not visible to their gaze. They see only the apocalyptic woman on the scarlet beast, or the great red dragon of anti-Christ, forgetting that the beast on which the woman sat has its Image, and that the great red dragon and his filthy consort have a numerous progeny, to whom the power of their parents has been given. No thoughtful Christian can doubt that there is just cause for alarm by reason of the stealthy encroachments of a foreign anti-republican, anti-Christian power. Rome cannot be too carefully scrutinized, or too vigorously resisted in her schemes to subjugate and rule the world from the Vatican. Zeal to thwart the Jesuits, however, should not blind us to dangers from other quarters, or from the same source under another name; and if histories written by members of the order can be credited, the Scottish or Ruling Rite in the Masonic system is the legitimate child of the papacy, originated, inspired and sent out on its mission from Paris by Jesuits, in the hope of restoring papacy and monarchy in the English throne. Let the doubter read Rebold's History of Freemasonry in Europe, page 161: "The rite called Scottish is a bastard child of Freemasonry, to which the policy of the Stuart interest gave birth. It was introduced in France, between 1736 and 1738, by the Baron Ramsey, who was an instrument of the Jesuits." A. G. Mackey and Robert Macoy each corroborate this statement, and there is the strongest possible proof that the Scottish or Ruling Rite in the whole system was born in Clermont College, in Paris, and that its spirit, aims and methods of work are identical with those of its papal parentage. If failing to accomplish their object of reinstating the house of Stuarts and popery in England by this means, or from any cause, there have been feuds and rivalries between the parent and his child. It should be remembered that family quarrels do not change in-born natures or make peace in communities. As Christ's army is one, so also is the army of anti-Christ. Prof. L. T. Townsend stated that in Mexico he found a lodge where the four principal officers were Jesuits, which would indicate that in that country, cursed with ignorance and superstition, the breach has been healed, and the parent has taken his willing child back to his loving embrace, which is prophetic of what we may expect in this and every land when the struggle comes. Let no child of God trust in the lying vanities of popery or Freemasonry, or go down to Egypt for help, but in the living God, to whom all power of wicked men and devils shall soon be subject.

J. P. STODDARD.

PENNSYLVANIA ANTI-SECRECY CONVENTION.

APPOINTMENT OF A STATE WORKING COMMITTEE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 31, 1892.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In reading the report of the late Pennsylvania State Convention, I notice a very important omission. The Committee on State Work, in addition to nominating State officers, recommended that a State Committee of three be appointed, and empowered to employ, and pay from State funds, such agent or agents as they may secure to further the interests of the cause in the State. Such committee was appointed, by the convention, in the persons of Rev. R. C. Wylie, Wilkesburg, Pa.; Mr. A. M. Steele, East Liberty, Pa., and Rev. D. C. Martin, Etna, Pa. These brethren can easily meet in consultation. With what funds are in the treasury, and what the people will contribute when they see the work being pushed in the State, we may expect some telling work in the year to come. Those wishing to contribute to the State fund should send to Rev. R. C. Wylie, Treasurer, Wilkesburg, Pa.

W. B. STODDARD,

Washington Ag't.

REV. W. C. PADEN HEARS A MASONIC LECTURE.

SCHALLER, Iowa, March 29, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Masonic lecturer has come and gone. Rev. Frank Evans, an M. E. minister, of Des Moines, Ia., gave four lectures in our county last week. Three of these were given at Sac City, our county-seat, and the other at our town of Schaller. I heard none but the last one.

He gave an address of two hours in Hudson's Hall (the M. E. brethren would not allow the church to be used for that purpose), on Saturday evening, March 26. A good-sized audience turned out to hear strong reasons put forth for Masonry. But I am frank to say that the arguments were small, and the wit smaller. There was no earnest grappling with facts and principles in the whole performance. He employed the usual tortoise tactics; he withdrew into his shell, saying "Masonry is not this, and it is not that, but it is—hold, I shall not tell you; to find out, you must come in. It is very illogical for anybody to say he knows anything about Masonry unless he is in it. Nobody in Masonry has ever said anything against it." Such methods did not impress his audience, and his irony and third-class stories and mimicking of pioneer preachers gone home to glory, impressed his audience still less. I had gone there purposing to ask a question or two, or propose an objection; but I observed very soon that gravitation would take care of the discourse; hence I said nothing.

He said that some have the idea that Masonry is a charitable institution; but he denied that it constituted Masonry in any particular. Yet, before he was through, he was drawing on our admiration for Masonry because it came to the relief of the widows and orphans of deceased Masons. He did not specify what per cent of the money these Masons had paid in was given back to their widows and orphans. He denied that Masons stand by each other in crime. What kind of a Mason is he who denies that the Master Mason promises and swears to come to the relief of his brother Master Mason under all circumstances, murder and treason alone excepted, and that at his discretion? What kind of a Mason is he who denies that a Royal Arch Mason promises and swears to come to the relief of a brother Royal Arch under all circumstances, whether right or wrong?

He claimed that Masonry is a science; that it is an art; that it is an educational force; that its object is the development of the highest type of manhood. He claimed that there was a time when "Geometry and Masonry were synonymous terms." When was that interesting period in the history of the race? Does history speak of it? Masonry illustrates its instructions by means of architecture. Reference was made to the five orders of architecture. He did not give us the particulars in regard to the column called "Phal-las," or its beautiful teachings. Its lessons do have force. Are they in the direction of the highest type of manhood? "Oh, wisdom, thou hast fled to brutish beasts, and men have lost their reason!"

He made claims for Masonry in reference to the seven liberal arts—grammar, rhetoric, etc. Has Masonry fitted, by her instruction, one solitary man to teach the "deestric school?" What has Masonry done to advance science, or art, or anything else? In reference to all these things, why secret? In his last six sentences he denied the religious claims of Masonry. It is an auxiliary of the Christian religion. How is that to be reconciled, however, with the fact that it leaves Jesus Christ out of its prayers and Scripture quotations? Its prayers certainly indicate religion and religious claims. What religion?

I conclude this report with one single further reference. He strove to meet the objection that in Masonry good men were joined with bad men contrary to the injunction, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." He strove to meet it by referring to Christ's sitting and eating with publicans and sinners. To make the cases parallel, he should have it this way: The publicans formed a secret society, with grips and pass-words, and each one upon joining promised and swore that he would ever conceal and never reveal, and that he would render obedience to the mandates of the lodge. Would Jesus join such a lodge? But suppose he did as Masons do? In their secret conclave they consult about the taxes. They decide to increase them, though they are already too high. Jesus has but one vote. He is opposed to the measure; but they outvote him, and pass it, and he is bound to help carry it out. Jesus would thus be unequally yoked together with unbelievers and be entangled and sin. Was Jesus in any such relations to the publicans? No. Then the Masonic reference has no force.

Mr. S. R. Coyner, of Sac City, gives me some interesting details of their meetings over there.

Mr. Coyner raised some objections and obtained a hearing. The lecturer made the usual denial of Masons helping each other in crime. Mr. Coyner asked him if he would make oath that the Royal Arch Mason did not swear to help his brother R. A. under all circumstances. He really acknowledged that, by denying that the R. A. degree is Masonry! Mr. Coyner got permission to read some matter he had, and being called upon by the audience to do so he read the "New Berlin Trials," with telling effect. Mr. Coyner is an earnest and well-informed Anti-mason, and is doing good work for the cause.

The short of the matter is that the Christian Cynosure is felt in all this work, Mr. C. takes it. I subscribed for it as I came through Chicago last fall. It is a conscience quickener wherever it is found. We could not get along without it in our work out here. It is a storehouse of facts in this work and a constant inspiration. I am seeking subscribers for it. I bid you God-speed. Yours for truth, W. C. PADEN.

The League Journal, in a well-written article, on "Savings Banks and Temperance," indicates the "silver lining" to the "sable cloud" of drunkenness. It hails the increased number of depositors especially among youth and children in the savings banks of the United Kingdom as a bright and cheering sign for temperance reformers; and it claims that the temperance agitation has wrought a great change in the habits of the more intelligent workingmen, directly and indirectly.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DID CHRIST BAPTIZE WITH WATER?

RUSSELL, Kans., March, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Permit an old man and a twenty-years' subscriber to the Cynosure to ask a few questions of yourself, or of ex-Pres. J. Blanchard, or any of the Cynosure readers. First, Is water-baptism required under the dispensation? or is it plainly laid down in the New Testament that salvation is received by faith in Christ? This is confirmed by so many passages of Scripture that it is unnecessary to mention but few. Am I mistaken, or is the only baptism required that of the Holy Ghost? Did not John (the Baptist) say: "I indeed baptize you with water, but Him that cometh after me shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost?" Did not Christ say: "John baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost, not many days hence?" Are we not taught that there is "one faith, one Lord, and one baptism?" Now, is that baptism of water or of the Holy Ghost? Do not the Scriptures teach that "by grace are ye saved, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God?" If this is true, why bring in water as a part of the work of salvation? If we have to do a part of the work by having water applied, then how does Christ save us by faith in him?

[Our old friend will see by John 4: 1, that Christ, as well as John, used the water baptism; and the disciples and apostles, in many recorded cases, did the same. The baptism of the Holy Spirit followed the water baptism. The latter was the symbol of obedience; the former the seal of the covenant of salvation.—EDITOR.]

Is not this water baptism a Catholic doctrine, that it saves from original sin, and adopted by Protestants generally? [No, it is the express divine command, that repentant men should be baptized with water; there is nothing human in the ordinance beyond the human agents used in obeying the command.—EDITOR.]

L. LANDON.

THAT RUMPLED FREEMASON AGAIN.

BOSTON, Mass., March 22, 1892.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Last Sabbath a gentleman came to our church (the Second Reformed Presbyterian) and listened with the closest attention to our sermon.

After service he announced to one of our officers that he was a Mason, and had come for the special purpose of interviewing the pastor about that shocking sermon that he had preached a week ago, against secret orders. He introduced himself as Mr. Crimes, a high-degree Mason. "I read the report of your sermon last Sabbath, in the Monday Evening News. I wish to ask three questions: (1) Did you say the Masonic lodge is guilty of idolatry? (2) Did you say the lodge is guilty of blasphemy? (3) Did you say the lodge is inspired of the devil?"

I answered in the affirmative. Then he said: "I sat down in great wrath, last Monday night, and wrote you a letter, rebuking you for such shameful and calumnious accusations; but, after deliberating, I concluded to consign it to the waste-basket, and come and see you. As you belong to the Scotch Covenanters, I was sure you said these things from a sense of duty. Now, let me warn you against doing the like again. You have made a great mistake. You have done yourself much harm. Why, the Masonic order is older than Abraham. I have indisputable evidence to that effect. There could not have been a Messiah without a Judah. There could not have been a Judah without a lion of the tribe of Judah. There could not be a lion without a lion's paw. As Jesus was the Lion, Masonry was the paw of the lion. Now think of that?"

This man belongs to the Christian church, and is an evangelist.

The inclosed letter has been received in response to the one given before. [Published in last week's Cynosure.] It reveals the inwardness of the Masonic defenders:

"BOSTON, Mass., U. S. of America, }
"March 18th, 1892. }

"Rev. J. M. Foster,

"DEAR SIR:—I have received your postal card, pamphlet and letter. I will grant you an interview any A. M., between the hours of 8:30 and 9:00; but if you think you can convert me over to such ridiculous and insane notions as those of charging to the Freemasons everything that is wicked, you have overestimated your abilities tremendously. Any sane man who, without asserting any proof, says that the Masons caused the assassination of President Lincoln, surely ought to be sent to an insane asylum without delay (or else strung up to the nearest tree). You charge the lodge (sic) to be the mother of harlots! How is that? Where is your evidence? I firmly believe there are more whoremongers among the ministers than any other class of men, because their avocation is conducive to concupiscence, and the daily newspapers furnish ample proof of their guilt. Why did you not answer my questions? Those ministers you spoke of are almost as little known as yourself in this city, and none command much of any salary, which is the probable reason of their not being able to join the Freemasons. Good men and prominent and able ministers, such as Bishop Phillips Brooks, Lorimer and Savage, you do not find among the brawlers or sensational gabblers. Yourself and those of you ilk are simply talking of something that you absolutely know nothing about. You might as well try to stop the swift current of the Niagara water-falls as to do even the very least injury to an institution more ancient and honorable than any other extant. After your church has been established one-hundredth part as long as Freemasonry, no doubt your descendants will have common sense enough to mind their own affairs, to preach the Gospel instead of their fantastic illusions, and to be charitable, to feed and clothe the poor, nurse the sick, and try to clean out all houses of ill-fame within a stone-throw of their places of worship. Your statements are too absurd to need any contradiction. Why don't you preach sermons to teach people the sin of practicing the prevention of offspring—abortion, if you please? Also, that it is most essential to the city, to the State, and to the nation, that young damsels remain chaste and virtuous, so as not to have to imitate modesty to their duped husbands, the result of which is usually a speedy divorce, or misery for life? Another theme I would suggest to you, would be to remedy the present wrong of the several thousand young women employed in large dry-goods stores, etc., etc., whose remuneration do (sic) not allow of an honest living, but who, against their inclination, must sacrifice their honor to earn a livelihood by immorality. Who but the ministers and Christian press should look into such a degenerate state of existence as this? A certain good minister in New York City has recently spent much time in purifying that large city of prostitutes, houses of bad repute, and the like. Now, I strongly suggest to you to do the same here in Boston; and if Pinckney street is the same now as it was two years ago (when I happened to room at No. 57), I assure you there is great need of your commencing on the very street where you now live; not to speak of streets adjacent, and the section in which your church is situated, which is fully as bad as any part of New York, London, or any other large city, not even Paris excepted. Real genuine Christianity seems to be very scarce, just now. I have been listening to dry, worldly sermons by ministers of all denominations, and cannot comprehend why pastors so very generally talk about current events, happiness, imaginary wrongs of noted men, etc., so as to gain notoriety, instead of showing their congregations the simple and easy way of obtaining everlasting happiness by living strictly according to the Bible, and trusting in our only Saviour. I am yours truly,

JOHN MATTSON."

No one reading the above can help saying: Satan is still abroad! Yours, J. M. FOSTER.

THE MORMONS SEEKING STATE DOMINION.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 25, 1892.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Your favor with enclosed clippings is at hand. It may seem strange for me to say that there is not the contradiction between Mr. Bailey's letter and mine that was published in the Christian Standard, from which you quoted in your editorial comment, that at first seems to exist. Mr. Bailey and I did not have the same points before our minds when we wrote; hence what we said may be literally true, or so nearly so that one would hesitate to pronounce either untrue. You say: "Our first reference touching the scheme for 'Home Rule' for Utah, printed Feb. 18, charged the origin of the measure upon Mormon influence in Congress. Our correspondent (Mr. Bailey) attributes its conception to an anti-Mormon, backed up by the Democratic party in the Territory, by whom, he says, it is being engineered."

In so far as you have misstated the situation here,—which is a very slight misstatement of the facts—you have, I think, been misled by the use of certain words (in Mr. Bailey's letter) which do not mean here just what they do in the East. Possibly one statement in my article also had something to do in misleading you. I refer to the first paragraph you quote from my letter, and especially the portion italicized.

But now I will state the situation as it is understood by the Liberals, or Americans, of Utah.

About a year ago there was a conference between the leaders of the Mormon church and some of the leaders of the Liberal party—these last being Democrats in National politics, but heretofore acting with the Liberal party of Utah, which was made up of Democrats and Republicans, from the States, and of apostate Mormons. The result of this conference was, the Mormon leaders agreed to divide the People's party—Mormons—and these Liberal leaders of Democratic persuasion, few in numbers, be it understood, agreed to divide the Liberal party. The prize played for by these aforesaid Liberal leaders was the offices of the new State—if Utah should be admitted into the Union. The Mormon leaders could well afford to pay this price for Statehood, knowing that it need not be for more than one term.

These self-appointed leaders in the movement for division soon discovered that the Liberal party was not to be disrupted as easily as they supposed. In Salt Lake and Summit counties the Liberal ranks stood so firm that the movement failed so far as the Liberals were concerned, while the Mormons did not divide enough to hurt anything. It was promised, as I before stated, that Statehood was not to be asked for, but the herds were too hungry to wait longer.

During the Congressional vacation, Senator Faulkner visited this Territory. It was during this visit, or shortly after, that the now-famous Faulkner-Caine bill was prepared in Ogden, in the office of the man referred to by Mr. Bailey, Mr. H. W. Smith, an attorney, and a legislator of Idaho. He had assistance from his partner and an attorney of this city. These were all Democrats, of the new-division persuasion; but there is hardly a doubt but that it had the hearty approval of the whole Mormon church. These men were really lobbyists for the Mormons. While Mr. Smith was a rabid anti-Mormon in Idaho, and possibly for awhile after coming to this Territory, he is not to-day. While at Washington, a few weeks since, he grossly misrepresented the Federal officials of this Territory, and so notably in the case of Judge Miner, of Ogden, that the bar of Ogden telegraphed to Washington a correction of his statements.

The Teller bill is a so-called Republican (really Mormon) measure of similar origin, except that the ex-Liberals who fathered it were Republicans instead of Democrats. These Republicans thought the Democrats were going to get away with the spoils, and they rushed out to organize the Republican party of Utah, and like the Democratic ex-Liberals succeeded only in breaking their political necks.

This movement for division of the Liberal party upon national party lines only succeeded in taking off about 300 Democrats and Republicans in this city, which is less than 7 per cent of the Democrats or Republicans formerly in the Liberal party. It is, therefore, a misnomer to call the Faulkner-Caine bill a Democratic scheme, or to call the Teller bill a Republican scheme, unless we understand them as Mormon Democrats and Republicans. They are both Mormon, with a slight flavoring from the Democratic and Republican ex-Liberals. They are both Mormon political tricks, and, as you say very correctly, "there is evidently more Mormonism in the proposed 'Home Rule' for that Territory than he is disposed to admit." Of all the Evangelical ministers in Utah only two are in favor of the division of the Liberal party. Neither of these lives in Salt Lake City. One has been living in Ogden, and I understand the other one lives at Logan.

Since receiving your letter I called upon the best-posted man in Utah, so far as Utah politics is concerned, and showed him Mr. Bailey's letter and your comments. He said, with his finger on Mr. Bailey's letter: "That is in the main correct. It does not give all of the facts." Then touching the quotations in the editorial comments, he said: "That is absolutely true." He then gave me some of the facts I have related above.

A word more. I am not an admirer of all of the Liberal leaders here. Some of them I could not vote for, but they are no worse than the Mormon leaders; indeed, hardly so bad; at least they do not advocate doctrines near so dangerous to either state, society, or church. Some of these men are not partial to religion, it is true; but they do not publicly advocate corrupt political or moral principles. As to what they do in private I do not know.

The ministry of Utah, with the two exceptions mentioned above, are opposed to Home Rule, so-called, and Statehood, at this time. We do not think the time has come for either. Mormons still believe in polygamy. In this city, within the past month, several arrests have been made of men and women who were at the time of their arrest practicing it. Within the past ten days, testimony has been given by Mormons, in which they said they "believed more firmly in it than ever. It is an eternal principle." When asked, "How is it, then, the church went back on it?" the same witness answered: "The church will apologize for it yet."

This testimony was given March 22, 1892. Conditions are changing, but they are not yet changed. Until this change comes we ought not to have Statehood. This change will not be here until Mormonism is dead, or Americans are in the majority in Utah. Mormonism will not die soon, and the Americans will not have the majority for several years. What we ask for is to be let alone for a few years. Respectfully yours,

B. F. CLAY,

Pastor Central Christian Ch., Salt Lake City.

LITERATURE.

Our Day for April opens with a review of the progress of civilization in Japan, by Prof. Morihiro Ichihara, of Yale University, which is sufficiently exhaustive and encouraging to interest a large class of readers. Rev. John H. Barrows, D.D., chairman of the General Committee on Religious Congresses at Chicago in 1893, in connection with the World's Congress Auxiliary of the Columbian Exposition, devotes several pages to his first report to the president of the World's Congress Auxiliary. It enters largely into the favorable reception of the measure by prelates of all Christian denominations, college presidents and other persons of commanding influence, besides giving numerous details of the work to be accomplished by the congress. The report has the commendation of Hon. Chas. C. Bonney, president of the World's Congress Auxiliary. Rev. J. L. Atkinson presents a historical summary of United States treaties with Japan. Joseph Cook begins a new series of Boston Monday Lectures, season of 1892, the first of which deals with the "Unshaken Columnar Truths" in Scripture and their sufficiency to point out infallibly the way of life—the way of deliverance from the love and guilt of sin—even if skepticism could weaken the more vulnerable portions of the Bible. That any candid reader can doubt the plan of salvation set forth in the Scriptures after reading this lecture is a marvel surpassing belief. What seems to us by far the most important paper in this number is the Reply of the Rev. R. G. McNiece, D.D., of Salt Lake City, to the Question, "What are the newest aspects of the effort to make Utah a Mormon State?" We have room for only one brief paragraph, which very well indicates the tenor of the whole article: "The general feeling among Americans here is, that to grant Statehood or Home Rule to Utah while the Mormons have a majority vote, would be disastrous to the commercial progress of the Territory, to the public school system, and to the interests of free government." Book notices and brief editorial notes and comments conclude a very acceptable installment of this standard review. Boston: 28 Beacon street; Chicago: 161 LaSalle street. $2.50 per annum.

The serial articles continued in Scribner's Magazine for April are: Reflections of a Married Man, by Robert Grant; The Wrecker, by Stevenson and Osbourne (illustrated), and Paris Theaters and Concerts, by Wm. F. Aphorpe (illustrated). The frontispiece represents a socialist meeting on Sunday afternoon, in Hyde Park London, illustrating a new serial on the Poor in Great Cities, by various writers, begun in this number and enlivened with copious engravings. The first paper of the series is "The Social Awakening in London," by Robert A. Woods. The whole promises to be a most interesting symposium on the subject of urban destitution. Another paper of more than local interest is that on the new parks of New York City, by E. S. Nadal (illustrated). Parties who delight in explorations will be pleased with Frank Mandy's description of "Golden Mashonaland," in South Africa. Another pleasant paper is that introducing the cartoons of the artist Charles Keene in Punch, some years ago, which are here reproduced from the originals. Edmund I. Ross, ex-Senator from Kansas, recalls incidents in the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson, in 1868. There are also a poem by Thos. Wentworth Higginson, a story by Wm. M. Browne ("Of the Blood Royal"), and editorial notes. New York: Chas. Scribner's Sons. $3 per year.

The April number of the Cosmopolitan closes the twelfth volume of this deservedly popular magazine. Its contents, as usual, are multifarious and brilliantly illustrated. The opening paper is timely, relating to Genoa, the Home of Columbus, by Murat Halstead. Other illustrated articles are: The Rustic Dance, by Irving Bacheller (poem); A Romance of Old Shoes, by Elsie A. DeWolfe; Torpedoes in Coast Defence, by A. M. D'Armit; A Living Opal, by Ernest Ingersoll; Homes of the Renaissance, by Wallace Wood; When Day is Done (poem), by Charlotte L. Seaver; The Crew of a Trans-Atlantic Liner, by Wm. H. Rideing; The Rancho of Heavenly Rest, by Forbes Heermans; Princess Ratazanoff, by Casimir M. Podgorski; Marriage of American Women to German Noblemen, by Elizabeth Von Wedel. There are, also: Dumb (poem), by Katharine Lee Bates; A False Prophecy (poem), by Geo. Macdonald; Count Leon Tolstoi, by Madame Dovidoff; Nature's Alchemy (poem), by Clifford Howard; The Theater of To-day, by Cora Maynard; Echo and Narcissus (poem), by Sarah M. B. Piatt; Two English Men of Letters (Chaucer and Hogarth), by Brander Matthews, and Social Problems, by Edward E. Hale. New York: $3 a year.

The second (April) number of the new Chicago monthly for youth, Historia, is replete with stirring historical events, including the celebrated "Andrews raid," to tear up the railroad track between Chattanooga and Atlanta, in 1862, by Myron E. Farley; The Story of Macbeth, by Elmer Hay; Fighting the Mexicans (continued), by Lieut. J. Harmon; "Rose, the Flower of Rouel," who died for France, by Albert T. Sawyer; Tales from Josephus—Absalom, by Frank G. Soule; General Marion and His Men (continued), by Joseph Q. Chancered, and Questions of the Day. A very good number. Chicago: The Historia Company. $1 a year.

The Ladies' Home Journal for Easter (April), with its delicately tinted covers, finely illustrated inwardly and outwardly, is one of the best issues of this favorite periodical. There is neither lack of variety in its contents, nor of interest throughout. The list of noted contributors embraces Mrs. Beecher, Mrs. Wm. E. Gladstone, Mrs. Reginald DeKoven, Grace Greenwood, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Palmer Cox, Rob't J. Burdette, T. DeWitt Talmage, Foster Coates, etc. The usual home and art departments are well filled. Philadelphia: Curtis Publishing Co. $1 a year.

The expense of the maintenance of horses and mules in America during the periods of enforced idleness on account of impassable roads is estimated at eighty millions of dollars a year, and with hard, smooth country roads not half the present power would be required to draw loads. These facts, and many more about "Our Common Roads," will be brought out in a richly illustrated article in the April number of the Century.

The frontispiece of the April St. Nicholas is a copy of Couture's painting of "The Idle Student," a fine art specimen. The current serial stories present new installments, of more or less interest, and there are numerous new and fresh stories, poems, sketches and pictures, making a most entertaining visitor for the young folks. Published by the Century Company, 33 East 17th street, New York. $3 a year

OBITUARY.

HARRIET ELIZABETH KELLOGG

died at the home of her son, Charles A. Kellogg, Wethersfield, Ill., March 5, aged 79 years. Thus ended a life of singular devotion and usefulness.

She was born in Coventry, Conn. Her parents, Selah and Esther Howard Loomis, were grave and pious New Englanders whose lives were given to the church of God. Their children were early dedicated to God and were in their youth taken into the church, several of them under the ministry of the godly Dr. Calhoun. Harriet was acquainted with Harriet Newell and other early missionaries, and gave herself to the foreign work in those days of privation and martyrdom. A sudden death disappointed her hope, and other providences hindered her going abroad; the removal of the family soon afterward to Michigan was among these. In this new country her father kept the first temperance hotel between Detroit and Chicago; and here she was married to Adino Stanley, a young home missionary and graduate of Princeton. In their zeal and self-denial for the cause of Christ the spirit of these young missionaries was one. Mr. Stanley's labors and privations were severe and were over in a few years. A little son and infant daughter were about the same time laid in the grave.

In 1844 Albert B. Kellogg, a merchant of White Pigeon, Mich., took her to his home to be another mother for his six children, and to the family were added three sons and a daughter, who grew to mature years at Wethersfield, Illinois, whither the family removed with grandfather Loomis and his sons in 1850.

