DO GUIDES I EAVE MEDIUMS?

FROM time to time criticisms are made of mediums who meeting with some measure of success, come to be looked upon with somewhat jealous eves. After struggling for some years, and acting faithfully in response to the influence of their guides. they emerge, through the quality of their work, into the blaze of publicity. As soon as this happens the tongues of busy bodies get active and comments, often tinged with malice, go the rounds, and it is said, "So-1 and so is not what he or she used to be,' or 'So-and-so's guide has now left his sen-!

guides are the most patient and faithful of friends. Mediums may make it very difficult for their guides to co-operate with them but guides do not readily distert sensitives. If a medium, acting under the influence of his guide, meets with success which brings him a little more of this world's goods, are we to suppose that because the sensitiveaccepts what the world gives, and even perhaps loses a little humility, his guides cast him aside? To suggest they do is to say they are capable of acting in a manner which is very despicable.

Why should mediums be grudged, as they often are, some little comfort, and looked upon as departing from the way of life because, through the exercise of their gifts, life has become a little easier for them?

Of course, it will be argued "their lack of humility keeps their guides from them. That lack of humility does make it difficult for their continuance and close contact is true, but we ought not to be so ready with suggestions. In the case of mediumship it is the integrity and faithfulness of the sensitive which brings success; why then condemn them when it comes?

What we need is a wise charity; and where mediums do deteriorate, instead of condemnation there should be sympathy. We can be sure that if any sensitive persists in going against the wishes of his guides and does not act uprightly the law of compensation will operate, and he will crash It is inevitable.

But even so, his guides will not desert him. They will stand by with patience, waiting the return of their sensitive to a better frame of mind, ever ready to help him up the hill. Spirit guides are more charitable than those people who so easily declare that they desert sensitives, and we may be thankful they are so.

SELF-IMPORTANCE

After hearing an address by a certain well-known speaker, at Buffalo's largest Spiritualist Church, located in Hotel Statler, an insignificant reporter wrote a story for his paper in which he said neither the Now, it is true that sometimes success' speaker nor anyone else could prove the truth of Spiritualism to him. This young cention. The manner in which anyone. fellow rather slatters himself that anybody medium or otherwise, acts under success is is seriously concerned as whether he acaltest of real worth. If they remain humble cepts Spiritualism or not. His verdict, either for or against us, will not affect a world-shaking revolution. Why do some so-called journalists think they are so important in the scheme of things? In any which people lightly declare that the guides case, the reporter should have been accurate, of a medium even when the sensitive does for among other things, he speaks of the act come up to expectations are said to 75th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism:

FREDERIC HARDING

There is a beauty about Lily Dale that answers so fully certain cravings of my inmost soul. That beauty is of several sorts, varied to meet the differing desires within me.

There is the beauty that is Nature's. The quiet charm of the spreading lake-water, sunspangled or star-reflecting; the good air, clear, cool and stimulating; the majestic height of the grand old trees, toward the "Stump," cloistered aisles of God's outdoor home, pillars in His natural temple, allowing through their leafy lattice far on high, green-toned sun-shafts to filter down with a gentle loveliness finer and less artificial than the light-colors through Cathedral glass.

Here may the Soul revive! Here may the Good, the Beautiful and the True be sought and found,—a seeking done in mutual aid with our kindred Spirits and Teachers. Closer to Life's fairest Thought is lovely Lily
