The joy and gratitude that comes with discovery of TRUTH is one of Life's most illuminating blessings. Daily affirmation of this magnificent experience is thankfully expressed in truth testimonials from which the above excerpts were taken.

You, too, will experience this joy as you read the Pearls of Wisdom directed to us from the Darjeeling Council of the Great White Brotherhood and sent each week from our American headquarters in Colorado. No ordinary "treat" is this, but manna from heaven, spiritual food for the beginner or the most advanced. Current items of spiritual interest are wedded to the old and familiar. The Masters' words come to you in meaningful cadences, ranging from the tenderness of Saint Francis of Assisi's beautiful prayer, "Lord make me an instrument of Thy Peace", to the thundering tomes of Master Morya El, Director of the first of the Seven Rays.

With authentic teachings of the Ascended Masters to guide you, the wonderful pieces of the Cosmic jigsaw, the pattern of the Divine Plan, will be yours to mentally assemble bit by bit. There is no substitute for Reality, and finding that, in Reality, Life is your beautiful opportunity to be one with Nature and Nature's God becomes a thrill and delight in a measure you scarcely realized, when you first began to sup at the Lord's Table.

True religion is the basis of all Creation, and none need ever be ashamed to investigate the marvelous teachings of the Masters of Wisdom from the Far East. When the sparkling wit of the Ascended Masters is known to you, with poignant jabs that goad us all to new heights, you will experience the Masters' presence enfolding you as your dearest friend. You will know true happiness that comes with the association of these Blessed Ones whose desire is to serve mankind's spiritual needs.

Join hands with thousands of others who search for spiritual growth beyond the realm of the ordinary. Write today. Let the Pearls of Wisdom show you how to get more out of life, to master circumstances and to produce miracles in your life and the lives of others.

"No words can express the blessing of the Pearls of Wisdom, the Keeper of the Flame lessons, the decrees and every letter" . . . Mrs. E. D., Johnson City, N. Y.

"Dr. H insisted and continues to insist God did the operating. He also insists that a miracle happened - but this was later when I had a need for Archangel Michael and called him" . . . A. S., Washington, D. C.

"As for the dictations, no words that I can think of would convey the privilege we have in being permitted to be within the radiance of the classes" . . . Mrs. A. W., Los Angeles

"I appreciate all the love and light sent my way in the last great lesson . . . and the privilege to call to the great Masters for help . . . B. W. S., Tuscon, Ariz.

"Am very grateful to the Great Ones and the messengers for this source of illumination" . . . Mrs. L. B., Los Angeles

"Students are very privileged as we accept this way of life, and this philosophy never leaves but is carried on into our homes, environment and work" . . . O. C. J., Williamsville, N. Y.

"The Golden Ray of love from my Heart's Flame enfolds all at Summit Lighthouse for your services to the Light" . . . Mrs. E. M., Roseville, Mich.

"It seems so wonderful to have found a study and way that gives to me the joy, peace, comfort and understanding to grow into the Christ" . . . E. C., Minneapolis

□ THERE IS A RIVER

The original biography, written during Edgar Cayce's life-time by a distinguished author who owed his life to medical data supplied by the "readings", and who made a deep study of their philosophy. Paperback, 364 pp. $1.10

□ THE UNFETTERED MIND

Varieties of ESP in the Edgar Cayce Readings. The author cites an impressive list of the many forms of ESP to be found in the "readings," and enlivens the text with numerous arresting and authentic case histories. By Doris T. Patterson. 77 pp. $1.50.

□ MEDITATION — Gateway to Light

Procedures for meditation found in the Cayce "readings" are outlined, the influence of the endocrine glands (spiritual centers) is explained, and guidance through dreams is touched upon. By Elsie Sechrist. 60 pp. $1.25

□ SYMBOLS AND THE SELF

By Violet M. Shelley. How symbolism surrounds us and enters into our lives on every hand, and how to use it to enrich our understanding. We must be alert to recognize symbols, learn their meaning and differentiate them from the literal. 61 pp. $1.25

□ A SEARCH FOR GOD

This two-volume set is a careful compilation of many "readings" on the development and use of psychic ability, prayer, and meditation, in the search for a balanced, purposeful and Christ-oriented life. Basic source books for the serious seeker. Hardback, 2-vol. $4.50

□ THE REVELATION

A Commentary on the Book

Twenty-six interpretative readings by Edgar Cayce, given for the first Study Group. The material itself and the accompanying notes compiled by a group, shed completely new explanatory light on this most obscure book of the Bible. 200 pp. $5.00

□ A TRILOGY ON CREATION

Based on the Edgar Cayce Readings. The story of our spiritual birth as companions of the Creator, our acceptance of the gift of Free Will, our entanglement in material bodies, and the struggle to regain our birthright as Sons of God. By Eula Allen. Three Volumes, Soft-bound. $7.50

□ THE CALL TO ISRAEL, by Robert W. Krajenko

The word "Israel" means "those who seek." Searching study of the Edgar Cayce readings compared with the Bible has produced this arresting interpretation. Far from confining "Israel" to one race or region, this book points out that we are all Israel—seekers. 61 pp., $1.25

□ 22 GEMS, STONES and METALS

A study of the physical, mental and spiritual influences of mineral objects on humans. Based upon research in the readings by a trained mineralogist. 56 pp. $1.25.

□ EARTH CHANGES

Past, Present, Future. Recent findings bear out the "readings" predicting major changes in earth's configuration. A professional geologist here confirms many of the prophecies, and includes a new chapter on the fascinating possibility—"Atlantis at Birmini?" 80 pp. $1.50

□ 123 QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Atlantis, Time and Space, Sex, Reincarnation, Food Values, Continuity of Life, the Fourth Dimension — these are only a few of the subjects touched upon in this anthology of selected questions and answers. A wonderful introduction to the scope of the Edgar Cayce readings. 66 pp. $1.25

□ GOD'S OTHER DOOR

Not only a study of the Edgar Cayce readings on life after death, but transcripts of Mr. Cayce's illuminating dreams on the subject, together with a lecture given by him on the continuity of life. Revealing glimpses of the Beyond. 48 pp. $1.25

Do your friends come to you for answers to their questions?

Do you seem as destined as I am to be sought out by those who are puzzled, or troubled, or who need advice?

"When the Barkers came to me they were desperate. They had talked to many people and read many books without being helped.

"Then I remembered a point in the Astara lessons I was studying which gave me the insight to see and explain the cause of their problem. And in a few moments they thought of the solution themselves.

"It made such a profound change in their lives that they never stopped thanking me, and they're always telling others what I was able to do for them.

"My own gratitude goes to Astara's Book of Life, the Degree Lessons I've been studying. The day I sent for them was a golden one for me."

EXACTLY WHAT IS ASTARA?

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

Come northward to the Residence immediately . . . Leave (everything?) and bring this pygmy with thee, which thou has brought living, prosperous and healthy from the land Akhtin for the dances of the god to rejoice and gladden the heart of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt Neferkere, may he live forever. When he (the pygmy) goes down with thee to the vessel, appoint trusty people who shall be about him on each side of the vessel; take care lest he fall into the water. When he sleeps at night, appoint again trusty people who shall sleep about him in his tent: inspect 10 times a night. My Majesty desires to see this pygmy more than the produce of Sinai and of Pwenet. . . .

duce new findings which in turn raise new questions.

There seems to be a sharp difference of opinion among archaeological theorists which parallels what is going on in other sciences. There are more archaeologists at work than ever before; they have better tools and more money to work with. More important, perhaps, as knowledge has accumulated the framework of looking at things has become vastly more sophisticated.

Many of the romantically-inspired archaeologists of yesterday — such as Schliemann — look like amateurs today. Yet some of the outlandish theories of the pioneers and even of the crackpots are being reconsidered seriously by men of reputation.

Such a one is Dr. Cyrus Gordon, professor at Brandeis University, who states that peoples from all over the world immigrated to Central and South America long before the first Indian appeared. Gordon declares that early figurines show the heads of Scandinavians, Mediterraneans, Negroes, Japanese.

"Ancient American history as taught now might just as well be about another planet because it is completely divorced from any old world ties," Gordon stated.

He said that his viewpoint is supported by documents found in the ruins of Carthage and the early Minoan civilizations which refer to colonies founded in some vast land with navigable rivers to the west.

Gordon is convinced that the high civilizations of early Central America resulted from immigrations of African Negroes, Scandinavian Vikings, Mediterranean whites and the Ainu, a pre-Japanese population which still exists in northern Japan.

The earliest Aztec, Yucatan and Peruvian legends and writings refer to white men with beards who came from the east, Gordon points out.

southern United States and remnants of their tribe still reside in Oklahoma. The Yuchi are an example of what Gordon is talking about.

He recently reported deciphering for the first time a stone tablet found in Columbus, Ga., in 1966. The stone tablet, Gordon says, indicates the Yuchi migrated from the south across the Gulf of Mexico after originating in Europe. He says that the deciphered stone has signs identical with those found on Aztec stones and among early Minoan hieroglyphics.

The Yuchi are very different from other American Indians, Gordon says. Members of the tribe still living in Oklahoma celebrate an ancient festival that is described in exact detail in the Bible—in the 23rd Chapter of Leviticus.

The 23rd Chapter of Leviticus is very long and prescribes certain rituals such as the Passover ritual, a harvest ritual, a ritual of atonement and others. The rituals include animal sacrifices and offerings of bread and meat.

NOW! With my simple, safe method of Foot Reflexology!

You Can Get Almost Immediate Relief from Aches and Pains ALL OVER THE BODY!

My name is Mildred Carter, professional Reflexologist, and — although I am not a doctor — I have brought relief to countless suffering people through Foot Reflexology. Over the past 14 years, I have watched their joy of regained health and vitality, when all hope had seemingly been lost. Foot Reflexology is a method you, too, can use to relieve aches and pains all over your body!

WHY FOOT REFLEXOLOGY WORKS

Foot Reflexology is a method for healing the whole body. If you've ever suffered from foot trouble you know that it's the feet that make the whole body ache. By rubbing and pressing gently on certain areas of your feet, I can show you how you may get almost immediate relief in other parts of your body.

The feet contain Reflexes, which lead like telephone lines to all parts of the body. By pressing them, you help restore normal circulation and health to congested areas. No one can guarantee a cure, and Foot Reflexology is not a medical substitute, but I have seen truly remarkable results in countless cases:

Arthritis sufferers restored to former health!
Hemorrhoid pain stopped almost instantly!

Headaches and backaches eliminated in seconds!

Liver, gall bladder and stomach trouble relieved!

Stuffed sinuses cleared!

Bladder troubles, burning and itching, eliminated!

YOU MAY RESTORE NORMAL CIRCULATION AND HEALTH TO ANY PART OF YOUR BODY!

Sufferers of varicose veins, leg cramps and pains, even internal disorders have found lasting relief through my simple, easy-to-follow method. Foot Reflexology has brought women blessed relief from many disorders which have been troubling them for years. It has brought relief to men in every case of prostate trouble I have ever treated. Reflex Massage of the liver has saved people from having an operation. No matter what the nature of heart trouble, my circulation-building method can help.

One patient who suffered from ulcers, kidney trouble, hay fever and constipation received complete relief through Reflexology! Another, suffering from cataracts, regained much of her lost vision after a few short treatments.

FEEL YOUNG AGAIN

Reflexology rejuvenates the entire body, giving new life to glands and cells. Blood flow slows over the years. Glands and cells become sluggish. Reflexology stimulates a new flow of blood to these tired places, clears glands and cells of accumulated waste, brings them new life!

"During my forty-eight years as a Physiotherapist in my own Treatment Centers . . . I have had every opportunity to observe the amazing benefits of manual massage. As a means of rehabilitation where physical trauma is involved, it ranks high in the annals of Medicine.

The techniques described in Mrs. Carter's book have been developed by experts in the field of reflex massage, and we have no hesitation in recommending them. . . . For the relief of pain, we know of no other means short of opiates to achieve this objective."

—CLARENCE R. MUNROE

will agree with Dr. Gordon, whose simple reply to their skepticism is, "But have you translated the documents?"

One who disagrees with Gordon has to be Ian Graham, a British archaeologist who has been roaming Central America and photographing inscriptions there for the past 10 years. Mayan writing, in Graham's view, shows no evidence of influence from either Asia or Europe.

However, the Mayan ideographs do resemble Chinese writing in one aspect, he says. Their meaning can be modified by the addition of a suffix.

Only three Mayan Codices survive, all in European museums. All the many others were destroyed by the Spanish Bishop Landa who suspected the writings were heretical and had them gathered up and burned. When the Spanish reached Central America the Mayan civilization was in decay but extensive libraries still survived. This destruction is a tragedy akin to the burning by other ignorant barbarians of the great Library at Alexandria.

Now Ian Graham has developed an ambitious plan to scour all the Central American jungles and the museums of the world to gather copies of every known Mayan inscription. It is hoped that with all this information assembled in one place cryptographers can unravel the Mayan historical records, translate the Mayan documents and discover why the civilization fell.

Mayan, according to Dr. Graham, is the only writing in the Americas that "was more than rudimentary." As a result there is no hope of finding a spectacular key such as the Rosetta stone, the key that opened the way to translation of the Egyptian hieroglyphs.

WISHFUL THINKING

ONE OF THE criticisms of archaeology in the past, and apparently some of the same sort of thing exists today, is that many archaeologists are hunting only for evidence that supports their preconceived theories—rather than looking at the evidence and saying, "This is what seems to be the case."

A blatant example of political interference with scientific archaeology has been under way in Rhodesia where the white political leaders refuse to accept the findings of archaeologists: that in the past there have been great Negro cultures.

Specifically the Rhodesian attack has been on the conclusion that a Bantu people must have built the great stone temples and citadel at Zimbabwe between the 11th and 15th Centuries — and possibly even later. Carbon 14 dating seemingly has destroyed the myth that Zimbabwe was linked with ancient Egypt, Phoenicia, the Sabaeans or India. At any rate, government officials such as Col. George Hartley, deputy speaker in the legislative assembly, are attacking archaeologists and the whole notion that a black people could have built Zimbabwe.

CRETE AND THE VOLCANO OF THERA

ON ANOTHER level, but apparently still deeply involved in wishful thinking, is the theory that the great Minoan empire was destroyed by a gigantic sea wave and a deposit of volcanic debris accompanying the eruption of the volcano of Thera in the Aegean Sea.

Seventy-six scientists from 17 countries, including archaeologists, volcanologists and geologists attended a week-long symposium late in September as guests of Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, inspector-general of Greek Antiquities. Their purpose was theoretically to determine what catastrophe brought about the destruction by fire of the great Minoan cities. In fact the meeting well may have been con-

MONARCH OF THE JUNGLE SUPPORTS A PERFECT CRYSTAL
BALL — and both are yours for only $5.95

In ancient days seers and crystal gazers used carved images of elephants to hold small crystal balls employed to make special readings. Today, antique collectors pay $100 and more for these artifacts—but the Venture Bookshop has assembled an authentic, modern crystal ball set which is yours for only $5.95.

The elephant and its bone-ivory tusks were hand-carved in Kenya, Africa, by the Akamba tribe. The oil-rubbed carvings average about 2" high. The crystal is optical-quality virgin acrylic, 1 3/4" diameter, manufactured to highest standards of precision.

The crystal nestles safely into a hand-shaped hollow carved into the back of the elephant—exactly as shown in this unretouched photograph.

vened to confirm Marinatos' own theories. If so it was a failure because most of the scientists present remained neither convinced nor unconvinced.

By coincidence, we (both Fullers) were in Athens and on the Aegean at the time this meeting was under way. We visited both Crete and Thera (also called Santorini). There is no doubt that the explosion of Thera destroyed Minoan cities on that island because some have been excavated and others still are covered with 150 feet of pumice.

But the question of Knossos is another matter. Professor Marinatos took the visiting scientists to Akrotiri on the southern tip of Crete where archaeologists are digging a large and perfectly preserved city from what is described as 12 feet of volcanic ash which was deposited there during an eruption of Thera about 1420 B.C.

One of the scientists invited to Greece for the symposium was Bruce C. Heezen, professor of geology at Columbia University, who had coauthored a paper in 1965 theorizing that the Thera eruption had caused the downfall of the Minoan civilization. It is Heezen's theory that the fall of volcanic ash and not the tidal wave (correctly called "tsunami") had made it impossible for the Minoans to survive.

$ A MONEY MIRACLE CAN COME TO YOU, TOO!! $

When you are Magnetized for Money.

Join this new Prosperity Movement! Write today for free information.

Properly magnetized, any human being can summon a Money Miracle. For of all miracles, the Money Miracle is most common. They occur every day. Money is not an artificial, man-made institution, but an abstraction of a basic energy of Nature! Prosperity begets prosperity. When your neighbor makes big money, this does not deprive you, but instead increases your chances of getting rich. The more money YOU make, the more everyone makes. There is no limit to human prosperity, save those limitations placed on it artificially by wrong thinking. An individual — you — may be energized, magnetized and polarized to attract the flow of money, for money is an energy, like electricity, and flows according to set patterns of polarity. The Midas Touch bursts upon you when you are fully magnetized. When enough Americans have learned the principles of the Midas Touch, and the techniques of controlling the energy of Nature that manifests itself through the medium of Money, a new national concept of prosperity is to begin. We are authorized now to find the first few people who will be energized, magnetized and polarized to attract the money flow. By radiant example, these trained, enlightened Money Magnets will launch this move toward Prosperity Unlimited. If you are interested in being a guinea pig for Money Miracles, and believe you can handle larger amounts of money than you have ever seen, write for details about this new Prosperity Movement right now. In a discussion of the conference in the December 6 issue of the Saturday Review, Heezen comments: "Although the paper authored by Ninkovitch and myself was cited by Marinatos as one of the reasons for calling the International Scientific Congress on the Volcano of Thera, the congress produced no evidence of even a superficial search for ash on Crete during the four and one-half years subsequent to publication of our ideas."

As things stand, therefore, it is still unproven that the eruption of Thera destroyed the Minoan civilization.

SOUTH AMERICAN PYGMIES

ALL KINDS OF odd archaeological and anthropological findings continue to turn up, confounding the most orthodox and solemn beliefs of the Establishment.

For years vague tales of aboriginal pygmies have circulated in Venezuela and Colombia. Pygmies in the Western Hemisphere? It seemed impossible. But last January a group of Capuchin missionaries found the home of dwarf Perijas in the Socorpa Valley, 500 miles west of Caracas.

Some are even smaller than African pygmies. They range in height from three feet four inches to four feet nine inches. From a distance they look like children. But close up, according to the Caracas report, "their bodies appear normal from the waist up but the lower torso and legs are stunted—possibly because of rickets, malnutrition and protein lack. Whatever their nutritional deficiencies, however, they apparently attain considerable longevity, often reaching 90 and 100 years of age."

However, malnutrition cannot be the sole reason these people are stunted. There must be reasons of heredity as well. One strange genetic characteristic is that the shortest of the pygmy people can produce children of normal size but the taller members tend to produce children who will grow less than three and one-half feet tall.

These pygmies raise yams, yucca and tobacco, use herbal medicines and ferment corn into a strong liquor. They play flutes and whistles. They make crude pottery and harvest wild cotton which they make into robes.

The reason they have remained more legend than fact, says UPI, "is that they are good marksmen with arrows and spears and until recently used poisoned arrows against white intruders as well as enemy tribes."

PRIZE-WINNING METHODS OF HYPNOSIS AND OTHER UNIQUE INDUCTION TECHNIQUES

Edited by Harry Arons

This is probably the most remarkable book on hypnosis ever published. It is a book of methods . . . only methods . . . NOTHING BUT METHODS. And not just ordinary methods (these you can get in any hypnosis book), but methods that many professional hypnotists do not know. Here are just a few of them:

- Dr. Millikin's Non-Verbal Method, in which hypnosis is induced without speaking.
- Harry Arons' Non-Sensory Method, in which hypnosis is induced in one minute without communication via any of the five senses — en masse.
- Col. Ziglinski's Method for the Deaf.
- The "Telepathy" Method.
- The Proof-Positive Method.
- Dr. Bryan's Oriental Pressure-Point Method.
- Brain Wave Synchronizer — three methods.
- The H-Alpha Stimulator, a brand-new electronic method.
- Dr. Bryant's Head-Rotation Method.
- Japanese "Sleep" Machine.
- Dome Inductor Method.
- The Head-Spin Method.
- Harry Arons' Best Deepening Method, word-for-word.
- Self-Hypnosis Methods.
- The Shadow Method.
- And many others.

WORST FOOT FORWARD

NOT TO BE outdone by the UPI's report of South American pygmies the rival Associated Press says that in Africa's Zambezi Valley which runs between Rhodesia and Mozambique there lives the primitive Vadoma tribe, rarely seen by white men. Many of the Vadomas have only two toes which are shaped like lobster claws and set at an angle of about 90 degrees.

D. P. Abraham, a former lecturer in history at the University College of Rhodesia, is familiar with the tribe and says that "they show elements of very ancient Stone Age features with strange wedge-shaped faces. They have heavy broad cheekbones and unusually large and lustrous eyes. They are graceful and slender but have no relation to the Bushmen."

A Portuguese scientist named Dos Santos wrote a paper on the Vadoma stating that the two-toed feet are hereditary and the people are quite happy with their deformity. They can run and climb trees faster than their five-toed brothers. Only about one in four of the Vadoma are afflicted with the two-toed condition, however. A Rhodesian expedition was planned to visit them late in 1969 but we have no news of this at this writing.

RAPID EVOLUTION?

MANKIND could be changed by evolution in 10 generations or even fewer, Harvard zoologist Dr. Edward O. Wilson told a Smithsonian Institution symposium in May.

Dr. Wilson is not talking about physical changes or about cultural evolution but about human behavior such as our tendencies toward dominance and aggression, our ability to be introspective, our aptitude for athletics.

"Suppose that manifestations of aggressive behavior — such as anger over small daily impositions or the capacity to be hostile toward supposed enemies — suppose they actually convey an advantage toward survival as most people say they do. Then it's probable that these traits are maintained on a century-to-century basis by evolution," he suggests.

This is important because it is involved in the convictions of many observers that man will destroy himself, given atomic toys, because of his aggressive behavior. If the world were sufficiently peaceful and unified for a generation or two, aggressive behavior could become a liability and evolution could favor non-aggressive behavior. Then, the implication is, man still might be saved from self-destruction.

According to John Leo in a special report to the New York Times, Dr. Wilson really was refuting recent best-selling authors who argue that man's development is severely limited because his animal origins doom him to permanent aggressiveness. Dr. Wilson doubts this.

Among the books he is challenging are Desmond Morris' The Naked Ape, Robert Ardrey's African Genesis and The Territorial Imperative and Konrad Lorenz's On Aggression.

BODY ANTENNA?

AN EXAMPLE of continuing research was reported at the Los Angeles symposium last year, 1969. A paper read for I. M. Kogan of the Popov Institute for the Study of Radio Electronics and Communications in Moscow offers a theory that the human body may serve as both antenna and power generator for transmitting telepathic messages by extremely long electromagnetic waves.

The idea that telepathic communication must be by waves and that those waves must be within the electromagnetic spectrum is a personal hang-up of Soviet researchers. They apparently are required to fit their theories within acceptable (Soviet) scientific boundaries.

The fact is Kogan and his col-

SPLURGE

The exciting game of chance inspired by Las Vegas. A single board game combines such popular games as blackjack, poker, craps, etc.—as well as several new card and dice games. Players play against the house, each other, and engage in wild side-betting. Presented in cooperation with ten of the most famous Las Vegas hotels.

SEDUCTION seeks to challenge and captivate the sophisticated and fun-loving adult. The game matches two couples in a witty game of strategy. leagues never have been able to identify such waves but he now offers mathematical calculations showing they are possible. Their crests would range from 16 to 600 miles apart and Kogan's calculations show also that "telepathy via the electromagnetic field is possible in theory over any distance." He said calculations indicate that the human body already generates four to five times the amount of electrical energy necessary to send messages up to 1,800 miles.

Kogan, like other parapsychologists, faces the dilemma of describing phenomena he cannot explain. He described one long-distance test between Moscow and Novosibirsk 1,800 miles away. A human transmitter tried to project images of six objects. "The receiver correctly described the main attributes of four," he said — far beyond what could be expected by chance or guessing.

As we see it this is the persistent problem of parapsychology — no acceptable workable model to explain it has yet been offered. Still, no one who has looked into the matter dispassionately for any length of time can deny that psychic events do occur.

And where there is an effect there must be a cause. The immediate problem of parapsychol-

In this vastly impersonal world, increasing numbers of men and women are seeking a way to renew their spiritual energies in a meaningful and invigorating manner. Without conscious realization, all of us are seeking a source of spiritual energy—for it is this inner strength that keeps our physical and mental powers in balanced stability.

There is a solution to the problem of maintaining mental steadiness; and there is a source for renewed and increased spiritual energies. It is in the philosophies and rituals of the secret order of the Great Brotherhood of God (G..B..G.*.).

INDIVIDUAL OR GROUP STUDY

THE COMPLETE MAGICK CURRICULUM OF THE SECRET ORDER G..B..G.. is a book by Louis T. Culling that contains the actual plan of occult study and work used by an American secret order that was directly descended from the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley's A..A.*.

The great value of the Work of the Order is that you don't have to perform the rituals in a group—they are just as effective when performed singly or as a couple.

MAGICKAL POWERS in NATURE

The Work of the Order leads to the development of Magickal Powers that aid in the aspirant's Great Work, which is the attainment to the Higher Self.

The philosophy of the New Aeon works with Nature's forces to release Man's presently repressed root-powers. Sex Magick is taught as a Personal Alchemy where the subconscious is merged into the conscious personality and transmuted into the Higher Self.

The aspirant is also instructed in rituals designed to reconcile the balance of a well-integrated personality. These rituals include Lunar Trances, Dream Recall, Magickal Identity, Magickal Alphabet, Calypso Moon Language, Tree of Life and Ritual Divination using the I Ching.

SEX MAGICK RITUALS

Sex Magick is undoubtedly the most energizing Magick and the most effective Magick technique available to a man and woman studying the occult together. Sex is used as a ritual for spiritual advancement and illumination. Alchemy precedes Dianism, and the highest Magick in the Rite of Diana brings the "Borderland" state of consciousness that is half the technique of Magick.

In the third level of Sex Magick, Qodosh, the climatic ecstasy of sexual union becomes the Magickal Fire for desired human qualities—love, wisdom, beauty, power—into inspired realization. The still higher realization is the "Magickal Child"—a physical or psychic offspring.

RESERVOIR OF SPIRITUAL ENERGY

This is a complete and detailed Magick Curriculum and a proven system of occult training. Whether you, the aspirant, study these teachings singly, with a partner, or in a group, there is no limit to the Magickal attainment you can reach. And, in the midst of our chaotic environment, who can afford to ignore the potential of the G..B..G.*. philosophies and rituals to strengthen our reservoir of spiritual energies?

GRAVITY WAVES DISCOVERED?

WHEN ALBERT Einstein published his General Theory of Relativity in 1916 he predicted that gravity waves, analogous to electromagnetic waves would some day be discovered.

On June 14, 1969, Dr. Joseph Weber, a physicist of the University of Maryland, reported that with instruments he had detected gravity waves coming from somewhere in space. These are believed to be the first evidence of the gravitational fields Einstein predicted.

The waves Dr. Weber detected seem to lie in the same direction as the Milky Way and to be close—from an astronomical viewpoint. Dr. Weber assumes that the waves pass easily through the earth. As the earth turns on its axis, Dr. Weber's detectors scan the entire heavens. The discovery that the pulses are detected at specific times in the earth's sweep implies there is one or more primary source.

Physicists had despaired of ever being able to observe gravity waves because they were

The Secret is YOU!

Howard W. Zoufaly, M.G.A.

Since 1965, Mr. Zoufaly has helped thousands find a new way of life through greater understanding of self. He has prepared over three thousand analytical reports in addition to speaking engagements throughout the United States and Canada.

"The trouble with most people," he states, "is that they just don't understand the basic drives which motivate and control them. In my years as a handwriting expert, I have yet to find a single person who did not have hidden ability which could be put to use."

This is your opportunity to uncover those talents and abilities.

DOWN through the ages, wise men have expounded the wisdom of self-knowledge, proclaiming that man should know himself. Yet, until now it has not been possible to understand the inner workings of the human mind and related emotions without long years of metaphysical or psychological study. Texts and sages hinted; but none could walk with you down life's multifold pathways.

Now, Howard W. Zoufaly, M.G.A., offers you an opportunity for self-examination and understanding which can bring to your life new realization and success. For over two thousand years, learned men have recognized the value of handwriting analysis as a true revealer of personality and character, but only in the last few years has scientific handwriting analysis been shown to be the most accurate of psychological tools.

A page of your handwriting reveals to the expert your mental and emotional processes as well as thousands of other traits. Mr. Zoufaly will personally prepare an analysis, oral or written as you prefer, which will point out to you those qualities of self which you can use for your advantage. Your analysis will relate you to the objective world, so that you can understand better why people see you as they do, and the reasons behind your own actions.

Consultation, through the written or spoken word will prove invaluable to you. Open this door of self understanding today. You have everything to gain.

WRITTEN REPORTS

A special analysis of your handwriting, running about sixteen pages, covering all major areas of personality and character. Mailed to you in plain, sealed envelope by first class mail.

ORAL ANALYSIS

The spoken word brings to you so many advantages that Mr. Zoufaly has become the first consultant to offer taped reports to those who cannot consult him in person. This report, which will run about one half hour, can be played on all standard tape recorders. Fee includes taxes on the tape.

thought to be so weak. Some of Dr. Weber's colleagues still are skeptical about his results and the university itself predicts that his reports will "open wide a vigorous controversy in modern physics."

Although Dr. Weber estimates that there is 100 times as much gravitational energy in the universe as nuclear energy he is not able to envision how or if it ever could be harnessed. He does believe it could be used to explore the universe in ways not now possible with optical or radio telescopes.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO THE "RA"?"
THOSE READERS who followed in newspapers Thor Heyerdahl's attempt to cross the Atlantic in the Ra, a boat built of papyrus, may have wondered why the boat broke up and was abandoned near the West Indian Island of Barbados.

Heyerdahl explains this in the Saturday Review.

A large number of ropes on the starboard side were torn off, which resulted in loss of much of the papyrus that kept the boat floating like a raft. Therefore, there was a strong list to starboard, the side on which the boat was taking the wind and the sea. In addition, the stern was weak and bent downward, forming a ramp over which the waves came pounding in.

But as for the possibility of such boats having successfully carried ancient Egyptians to the Americas, Heyerdahl stated: "When we left the Ra not a single reed of papyrus had broken or disintegrated."

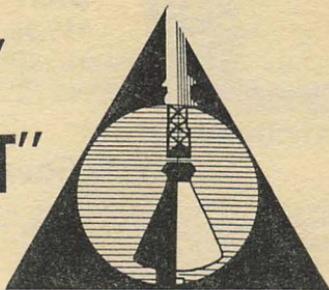

PLATINUM RUSH

BILL CAIN, writing in the Weekly Free Press of Escondido, Calif., reports that the mountain community of Julian, Calif., in northern San Diego County, may be in for another stampede like the gold rush of a century ago.

Dowsing started it all, according to John Collins, 75, and his partner Howard Luhning. Collins is secretive about how his particular dowsing device works but according to the fragmentary description that Bill Cain gives us, it seems to be a variety of the familiar dowsing device with a hollow chamber in the handle and a sensitive spring at the end. Whatever material is to be dowsed is placed in the handle and if the claims are true the action of the spring indicates whether the material in the handle also exists in the earth below.

Collins told Cain, "I can't tell you how it works except that it

Ted Rabouin — New England WARLOCK

By Raymond A. LaJoie

MODERN-DAY WITCHES — whose numbers are growing — generally do not seek publicity but sometimes find it thrust upon them. This has happened to Theodore Rabouin, a New England warlock who practices white magic. Paradoxically, Ted, 36 years old and a bachelor, springs from the very seat of the world's most celebrated — and infamous — witch trials, Massachusetts.

One rainy evening in April, 1969, I interviewed him in his small, black, dimly-lit cottage on Bowman Street in Westboro. He greeted me warmly — and I guess this surprised me. I didn't know what to expect of a warlock but I soon learned Ted is innately kind, warm and generous.

By way of getting started, I commented, "What an unusual color for the exterior of a house!"

"It's my favorite color," Ted replied. "I'm a nocturnal person. Look around the interior, if you wish."

The warlock had planned his decor with “devilish” skill. Shingles cover the inside walls. Amid a profusion of antique bottles and jars, witchcraft symbols are prominent. One corner holds a witch’s broom and cauldron; a large honeybee cone hangs from a rafter; dried witch grass in a vase contrasts starkly with a pure white china bowl. His furnishings include a number of rare New England antiques, notably a spinning wheel and a grandfather’s clock. And he has one of the finest occult book collections I have ever seen. From the kitchen comes the aroma of pine and maple burning in an old Franklin stove.

“Would you like a witch’s brew?” Ted asked smiling.

I nodded and as he handed me the potion I sank onto a divan. Instantly the remarkable top of the coffee table caught my eye. It was a heavy slate gravestone that dated back more than 200 years. Ted saw my interest and said, “It was carved for a little English girl two years old who died in New England in an Indian massacre.”

At one end of the gravestone table an authentic, hideously smiling skull serves as a candle holder. When I could drag my eyes from its toothy grin I noticed the coffee table is supported at either end by two magnificent antique iron owls.

Jolting back from this "other world" to the business at hand, I asked Ted about himself.

Theodore Rabouin was born in Worcester, Mass., of French and Irish lineage. He attended primary and secondary schools there but did not go to college. Having lost his father two years previously, when his mother died Ted had to go to work to support the younger children. He prides himself on having kept them all together until most of them were married. He always has done hospital work of one kind or another in Massachusetts and briefly in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and incidentally, he loves to assist at autopsies.

At St. Vincent's Hospital in Worcester Ted has been a pathology assistant and surgical technician and he was the first in this general area to work as an inhalation therapist. Today he is a guidance counselor* at the Rehabilitation Center, Westboro State Hospital, where he works with five or six patients at a time in a psychotherapy program designed to prepare each of them to return to his rightful place in society.

Ted thinks of himself as pretty much self-made when it comes to the higher levels of his development. He reads omnivorously on occultism, psychology, philosophy, sociology and religion and believes his hospital work has given him unusual insight into the human psyche.

*Among Ted's friends is Dr. Moses Grimberg, the noted psychiatrist. Dr. Grimberg came from Castro's Cuba to his present position at Westboro State Hospital. As well as practicing psychiatry, Dr. Grimberg collaborated with Lincoln Franzen, psychologist, to originate an unusually successful rehabilitation program. It has been in operation about two years and has received wide publicity in the popular press and medical journals. The program puts an average of three persons a month back into society and not one of them has returned to the hospital.

Some aspects of the program are these:

Patients are formed into small self-governing groups. They set up grievance committees to air their problems with orderlies, nurses, doctors and other hospital personnel.

No patient is forced to do anything against his will. The desire and motivation must come willingly and gladly from within.

"Reality" keynotes the plan Dr. Grimberg and Lincoln Franzen devised. For example, "play money" is used in games of life to teach patients how basic and necessary money is, what to do with it, how to achieve the most for it, and how to get along with it gracefully. Ultimately, of course, this is a keystone in the foundation that enables a patient to take care of himself intelligently.

The methodology of the plan is far more complex than I can detail here. It suffices to say that the Grimberg-Franzen plan now is being widely copied in mental hospitals throughout the country.

Ted Rabouin's particular role in this program is in stressing daily work habits, personal discipline and motivation. Through association in the hospital Dr. Grimberg learned about Ted's background and now is working to obtain a federal research grant so that he may investigate Ted's preternaturally high ESP and clairvoyance.

THAT TED Rabouin became a warlock is no quirk of fate.

"Three of my great-great-grandfathers were burned to death as witches," he told me. "I believe witchcraft is hereditary; I've always known I would become a warlock. As a child I felt a supernatural force within me and I knew my life would not follow conventional patterns."

His psychic perception developed early. He frequently startled his mother by stating matter-of-factly that a visitor would arrive or an accident would occur — and these things happened. He played at fortunetelling with the neighborhood kids as his "clients" in a makeshift tent. But perhaps more unnerving for his mother were the contented hours he spent roaming graveyards.

"Cemeteries and the specter of death always have intrigued me," Ted went on. "About seven years ago I was seated alone in the lounge of a Florida restaurant. I prefer being alone but when a woman from a group at an adjacent table approached and asked me to join her group I agreed. When I was reseated and after introductions one of the women asked me if I were an undertaker. She told me I 'reeked of death.' The conversation turned to witchcraft and everyone at the table seemed extraordinarily interested in it.

"Not long afterwards I was informed that I had been investigated, had passed the coven requirements and was invited to join a coven."

Ted was ordained a warlock and when I talked to him had been practicing for more than six years.

What does a warlock do?

"Well, he tries to help people," Ted said in a thoughtful voice.

On February 23, 1969, Ted advised a woman not to take a particular airline flight from northern New England. He foresaw that the plane would crash killing all aboard. Because she followed his advice she is alive today, for the plane did crash.

Ted frequently is asked to locate missing persons and he has helped the authorities find 14, pinpointing their whereabouts on the basis of exact descriptions of the persons and his own ESP. (Two were military AWOLs, one was sought on a criminal charge, seven were missing husbands, two were teenagers who had left home and two were missing wives who had gone off with lovers.)

Rabouin also investigates haunted houses and exorcises disturbing or harmful ghosts with a special ritual and incantations. In the fall of 1968 he investigated a haunted house in Hopkinton, Mass. He uncovered three ghosts and described each one, revealing the period in which they lived in the house and why each manifested as it did.

"I wasn't exorcizing them," Ted insisted. "They actually had done no harm. The owners of the house, Mr. and Mrs. George Doren, simply wanted to know more about them in order to live at ease with their phantasmal friends."

Ted Rabouin's card readings for friends and clients average 15 each evening. Occasionally he holds seances.

On June 15, 1969, I participated in one of his seances. He seated four of us at a round table, then enclosed us in a symbolic circle by passing the tip of an antique scimitar along the grey bricks flooring the seance room. Two large candles in red glass containers burning at either side of a makeshift altar provided the only light in the room.

Ted then knelt on the flat side of the scimitar, opened a book of ancient prayers and incantations and read from it. He spoke in a low voice but I distinctly heard him invoke the gods of witchcraft for protection against evil spirits. He drank a small vial of some herb brew, then rose and sat down with us. We held hands in a circle, each of us touching our neighbors with the little fingers of each hand. As Ted went into semitrance he sniffed dried herbs.

Suddenly he began a fast scribbling, like automatic writing, and after a few minutes started to speak haltingly, explaining what he had received. The messages were for Richard Burch, a 32-year-old Worcester social worker, whose father had died three years previously. Ted passed on personal comments which had meaning only for Mr. Burch. By this time tears of joy were streaming down his cheeks.

The seance had lasted about 30 minutes when Ted performed another ritual with the scimitar to break the circle.

WHEN HIS schedule permits, Ted appears on television and radio talk shows. In October, 1968, he appeared on Boston's TV program "Contact" which has a large New England audience, and in March, 1969, on NBC's Joan Rivers show originating in New York City and featuring Agnes Moorehead. Two months later he had two radio dates in Worcester — on stations WNEB and WTAG. Popular demand brought him back to WTAG on July 21. Betweentimes he was heard on the Garry Moore portion of NBC's "Monitor" on the last Sunday in June.

In the spring of 1969 he lectured to psychology classes at Kingston and Westboro high schools and when I interviewed him he was scheduled to lecture at Roger Williams College in Providence, R.I. on August 18. He has had wide publicity in newspapers of Boston, Worcester, Hartford, Framingham, Westboro and other New England cities.

Needless to say, these appearances, interviews with reporters and his hospital work are not allowed to interfere with regular meetings of his coven in the vicinity of Ipswich or occasionally near Salem. He will not say exactly where they meet any more than he will tell the name of another witch or warlock.

"My coven has publicly proclaimed me, for it is my destiny to publicize witchcraft. My work is to help wipe out the fear, prejudice, ignorance and superstition associated with it. Persons who want to practice these ancient rites — or this religion, if you will — should be allowed to do so openly and freely."

He continues, "It's my duty, you see, to rectify what happened to my ancestors. One example of injustice? During the Salem witchcraft trials many Salemites had what is called 'Huntington's chorea,' a peculiar twitching mannerism. Because of this affliction dozens of innocent persons were accused and cruelly treated. Those who confessed to witchcraft were not executed. Those who did not were put to death."

TWELVE PERSONS and one high priest or priestess, Ted told me, comprise a coven. In their meetings individual witches and warlocks report their activities and results and propose the coven's consideration of requests for help from deserving friends and clients. The 13 members then concentrate to put into motion the psychical aid required to benefit the supplicant.

The coven makes authentic amulets for persons seeking good luck, love, money, power or success. At Ted's request the coven is making a good luck amulet for me which will contain ground rock dust from a Ninth-Century haunted Scottish castle. About seven weeks is the time needed to make one and special incantations are required for each.

They also create doll-images of persons with whom clients wish to communicate. Usually a photograph of the person is attached to the image, then pins are stuck in the doll's temple and special prayers are uttered to assure that person will get in touch with the client seeking the communication.

Covens also perform rituals — sometimes in the nude — to sharpen their occult powers and to experience the heights of mystical ecstasy. Contrary to benighted rumor these are not sex orgies. These ceremonies — sometimes including singing and dancing — invoke the powers and assistance of the gods of witchcraft, especially the Moon Goddess Diana, the witches' patroness from time immemorial.

Ted told me that some aspects of the rites performed in the motion picture "Rosemary's Baby" were "quite realistic."

The use of animals or fowl as blood sacrifices is anathema to white magic witches. They are against taking life in any form.

It is the duty of each member of a coven to observe the activities of psychic individuals in their respective communities with a view to inviting them into official witchcraft.

Within the coven the most advanced high priest or priestess gives psychic counsel to the other members and each witch or warlock practices constantly to achieve attunement with his fellows.

More than this about the activities of the coven Ted could not tell me. The secrets of the highest rites cannot be revealed or profaned — just as Masons, Rosicrucians, Knights of Columbus and other groups are sworn to secrecy. If the oath is broken by a witch severe punishment will follow.

According to Ted more than 1,000 practicing witches live in New England alone. Covens meet regularly at full moon in quiet places and shy away from fanfare but they occasionally do hold conventions. Ted has attended two of these, as well as other gatherings of covens, and he has arrived at his census-of-witches figure by personally making head counts and matching his figures with those kept by his coven's record-keeper.

TED'S FIRST familiar was a black cat named Neygro whom he dearly loved. He had him for four years and when the pet died Ted could not bear to part with his little friend. Ted also is a taxidermist (believe it or not) so he embalmed and stuffed the little corpse. Neygro now sleeps his long sleep in a little basket near Ted's rocking chair. When I casually glanced at him I could not believe he wouldn't get up and stretch at any minute.

His second familiar is Niko, a very-much-alive Siamese cat of prideful grace and beauty. Niko has been with him for about two years, always uncannily on hand during readings. She participates in the seances as well and Ted says he derives instant thought patterns through her.

I asked Ted for some general conversation about ghosts, ESP and such phenomena as astral projection.

"My theory is that ghosts develop when the soul is too restless to progress to its final state," Ted replied. "They have too great a love to leave or they are possessed by great sadness or possibly great happiness. But whatever it is, something binds them. The state doesn't last forever and after a time they do go on."

He said ESP is in all of us and simply needs cultivation. With it comes the ability to prophesy which Ted says is like looking through a window: what must be will be.

As to astral projection Ted has quite a story. His schedule would not permit him to attend a witches' convention in Chicago a few years ago. Therefore he made himself go astrally, although he finds this accomplishment exhausting. Arriving early in the day Ted had extra time and decided to visit a Chicago friend whom he said we must call "Mr. Smith." The city was strange to him but he concentrated until he arrived at the Smith apartment.

Ted found his friend at home and attempted to make himself known. The attempt failed because Smith, Ted said, is extremely materialistic and has no sensitivity to mysticism or the paranormal. However, Ted gave him the suggestion they meet at a certain bar at a given hour.

On his return from Chicago that night Ted received a telephone call from Smith asking him why he had not kept the date. Ted told him he had failed purposely — to prove his astral form had been in Chicago. Then he told Smith the hour and moment he had been shaving, what he was wearing, his movements around the apartment, the street clothes he finally put on and named a few objects he had picked up and put down. Ted told me, smiling wryly, "I think Smith's unbending materialism was shaken to its foundations that night!"

TOO MUCH CRABMEAT?

By Carl D. Cato

OFFICIALS ON the island of Salamanca, Colombia, are mystified as to why their island was chosen for a crab invasion in the spring of 1969. On-the-scene reports estimate that at least 50,000 crabs participated in the silent invasion. For some time the crabs by sheer numbers threatened wildlife in an animal park and forced authorities to take emergency measures to fend them off. Tractors were pressed into service to clear one roadway.

One official described the spectacle as "frightening," explaining "We had crabs on the beaches, in the huts and even in the trees."

Not everyone was frightened and unhappy about the eerie crustacean invasion. The local fishermen had a field day.

"I Was the Last to See DICKEY ALIVE ...

... I flubbed an easy on-target pass in an important football game as a scary vision unfolded — but they didn't believe me."

By John W. Campbell

IT WAS DURING a noontime recess and a "grudge football game" between the fourth and fifth grades at a parochial school in Tulsa, Okla., late in January, 1937, when I was shocked by a mental picture of my friend, Dickey L., walking on dangerously thin ice more than a half mile away!

A perfectly-thrown forward pass slammed into my midsection, bounded away and was recovered by the feared and despised fifth grade opposition. I had known the pass was coming, had known where it would be, yet I was hit as if I were blind. My teammates, of course, were quick to point out this apparent fact. Their derisive phrases applied to me, other than "bone-head," were too salty and uncouth to be printed here. I was embarrassed. My stock had plummeted.

Instead of seeing the football I had seen stark tragedy.

Dickey was my lifelong friend. We were both nine years old and nearly the same size, although he was frailer and quite often sick with colds. He wasn't a member of our class football team and on the day of the accident had left school at noon to walk the three short blocks to his home for lunch.

The ice-covered pond on which I had seen him walking was on a private estate about eight blocks from the school. It was a familiar and popular recreation site for most of us who lived in the neighborhood.

Back on the playground the picture in my mind was clear, its meaning unmistakable — at least to me. During that infinite measure of time the image of that familiar pond had flashed in perfect detail across the inner screen of my mind. The winter sun at noontime shone weakly through a slight overcast. I saw evergreen shrubs and the leafless dormant skeletons of other bushes on the far bank of the pond. The little rowboat, its pale green paint chipped and peeling, was lodged precariously in crusty-looking ice near the center of the pond and my friend Dickey was stepping cautiously toward it. He was about as far from shore as he was from the boat when the scene faded — to be instantly replaced by a big brown egg-shaped thing-in-flight and on a collision course with my anatomy.

I did not see the ice crack or break. I did not see my friend go under but somehow I knew he had. Even today it's difficult to explain but I knew. I was afraid to tell the other kids for fear of more ridicule. They would have thought I was crazy.

My faulty play did not result in our losing the game but neither did we win. The score remained tied as the bell rang calling us back to classes.

Dickey didn't answer the roll call as I had known he would not. I yearned to tell the stern-faced Sister what I had seen but fear again kept me silent. The day dragged by and grew darker. After school I hurried home, hit the front door like a charging beast and breathlessly told my fearsome tale to my mother.

For a moment she appeared deeply saddened, then she smiled and said, "Why, Jackie, you're imagining things. Dickey's mother probably kept him home for another reason."

I tried to persuade Mother that something terrible had happened. First I asked permission to go to the pond — then to Dickey's house. I was turned down on both requests. We didn't have a telephone in those days and for reasons I couldn't fathom Mother refused to let me out of the house. My pleas and ploys were of no avail. Again time lay heavy upon me. Darkness fell.

My dad came home from work.

Shortly after dinner Dickey's father came to our house asking if we had seen his son. The worried parent said that Dickey had not come home from school that afternoon. Then from me he learned that his son had not shown up for studies that afternoon following lunch. Haltingly, I told the anxious man of my fears that Dickey perhaps had gone to the pond. I said nothing of actually seeing Dickey there in my mind.

A search was hurriedly organized. The fire department was called to drag the pond. Their efforts were unrewarded. A city-owned lake nearby also was dragged but Dickey still was missing. All efforts to find the boy met with failure.

Later that same night Dickey's father returned to see if I could think of any place else the boy might have gone. It was then that I told him of my strange vision. Thereupon my dad, along with Dickey's, took me to the neighborhood fire station and had me repeat my story to the fire captain. The big red-faced man immediately started dragging operations again at the original site.

A large crowd converged on the floodlighted area. Nervously, I walked completely around the small pond, then took my stand in the position from which I believed I had seen it in my vision. Then I yelled, "Hey! The boat isn't there!"

The small craft had been beached during the first operation and now lay on the bank to my right. Hurriedly, the men pushed it back into the ice water. With a long pole they steered it into the position I wanted. I studied the scene. With the lights it was as bright as the picture had been in my mind at noon. Only the shadows were different. At noon there had been none. Again I saw the evergreens. This time just off the boat's starboard bow. I pointed.

The big hooks on the long lines went out . . . one, two, three, four passes were made without result. Then on the fifth try and when they were about 20 feet from shore one of the firemen yelled, "We've got him!"

It was about 11:00 P.M. when the body was brought up. The authorities said Dickey had been in the water from about midday.

At the time of my vision we had finished lunch, in this instance a sandwich wolfed down, and gone onto the playground for that football game. Looking back I estimate it was about a quarter to one when I saw Dickey stepping out on the pond. I expect the timing of my vision is more nearly correct as to the time of Dickey's death than the officials' guess.

But I never have known why I was chosen to witness the tragedy.

A SPIRIT'S INDELIBLE SIGNATURE

HOLLYWOOD personality Sal Mineo proposed a seance as entertainment for a party in the fall of 1969. One of the guests, an admirer of James Dean, wanted his spirit to come forward. Through the use of an Ouija board Dean's spirit manifested but his admirer was skeptical. The spirit said he would prove his identity.

Dick Kleiner, the Hollywood reporter, wrote, "The radio was on low and the spirit said in exactly five minutes it would turn the volume up. It did—and nobody had touched the radio." The guest, whom Kleiner called Dee, still didn't believe it. The spirit began insulting Dee, calling him names and otherwise irritating him until Dee and his girl friend stood up and left.

They were back, pale and trembling, two minutes later. Now Dee believed it was Dean's spirit that had been in the room and that a look at his car would convince anyone who still might doubt it.

Mineo and the rest trooped out to find Dee's Jaguar had hit a tree. Dee said as he was driving slowly away the initials "J. D." had appeared in red on his windshield startling him so that he lost control of his car.

The "J. D." seemed to be an integral part of the glass and couldn't be washed or scraped off. Eventually Dee had to get a new windshield.

HUMPHREYS AND WALLACE CLASH

TWO NATIONALLY prominent names made page one of the Antelope Valley Ledger-Gazette, Lancaster-Palmdale, Calif., on Thursday, June 19, 1969.

Highway patrol officers reported that Hubert Humphreys, aged 74, driving a pickup truck, made a left turn in front of a motorcycle which hit the truck, bounded off and struck a parked car registered to George Wallace, a local resident.

One patrolman commented "It's been a bad year for Hubert—and for George, too."

"I COULDN'T SIGN . . ."

By Nora Ann Kuehn

MY HUSBAND John Richardson and I were elated when we discovered the big white house and surrounding 80 acres near Woodland, Wash., especially when we learned the place was for sale. The owner agreed to take our small paid-for house in town as the down payment and everything seemed to be going without a hitch. Our two teen-aged children bubbled with plans: now they could have a horse, join the 4H Club and raise lambs.

Two days later when the time came to sign the papers I couldn't do it. I simply refused. The children were disappointed and unhappy. My husband couldn't understand what had come over me and said so, angrily. I couldn't blame him. I didn't understand it myself. I wanted to keep peace in the family but something deep inside me said, "Don't sign."

Twice we went back to look at the place, the comfortable old house and the peaceful countryside. I'd think, now I'll stop being silly! I'll go with John tomorrow and sign the papers. But with that resolve came a churning in my stomach, an unexplainable fear. As soon as I admitted to myself that I couldn't go through with it the churning in my stomach would stop and I would feel at peace. John and the children had to give up their dream.

When John was killed a month later in a logging accident I knew that Providence had warned me not to make the move that would have brought even greater disaster to my be-reft family. When all the bills were paid we had nothing left but the house but it was paid for. If we had traded it on the farm we would have lost everything.

THE VOICE AND THE VISION

By Ann J. Victory

CLARA MUSACCO, my mother, often said I had been born "with seven veils." Although I didn't understand I never asked what she meant — but I found out in a terrifying way in the summer of 1932.

One afternoon in our home near 83rd Street and South San Pedro in Los Angeles I was washing dishes while my four-year-old brother Sammie was taking his nap. Suddenly a strange feeling came over me. I was so frightened I trembled. Then I heard a voice — which seemed to come from within me — warning that Sammie was in danger. I was not to let him outside under any circumstances, the voice admonished, continuing, "He will be in a car accident."

I called Mother and told her this. Calmly she took me to the bedroom.

"See? Sammie is sound asleep. How can anything happen to him?"

I went back to the kitchen to finish the dishes but the inner dread persisted. As I tried to control my trembling hands a vision unfolded before me as on a movie screen. I saw Sammie standing on the curb at the intersection of 83rd and South San Pedro Streets. Coming up fast was a big black car. Suddenly the driver lost control, the car veered in Sammie's direction and struck him! I saw his bloodied face as clearly as if he were in the room. I screamed for Mother and told her again Sammie was in danger. We looked into the bedroom to find him gone!

We raced outside where we were met by a neighbor who said, "Sammie's been hit by a car!"

He suffered a concussion and a bad cut under his chin where the car's headlight struck him. To this day Sam Musacco carries the scar. — Huntington Park, Calif.

THE LIFELINE

By Helen B. Walters

IN THE GREY dawn of a December morning in 1963 I awakened from a dream which left me trembling with alarm. I had seen my son Jim's face against a black sky but nothing of the rest of his body. His blue eyes were wide with horror and a thick rope ran down alongside his head. The vision lasted only a few seconds but left me apprehensive for my son's safety.

All I knew of Jim's whereabouts was that he was on a yacht somewhere in the Pacific. I had no way of communicating with him. Therefore I made a note of the time and date to tell him about it when he returned.

He came back to our Los Angeles home a few months later and I asked him if the incident had any meaning for him. He looked amazed as he replied:

"In the middle of the night sometime in December a squall came up. I scurried on deck to change the sails and do whatever else was necessary for safety in the approaching storm. As I grabbed a rope the ship tipped onto its side and I swung out over the water. I knew if I let go I would disappear into that black water forever! In an instant the ship righted itself and I was slammed against the mast. The wind was knocked out of me and I lay there I don't know how long wondering if this was the end."

Apparently in those moments I picked up the picture of his face against the black sky along with the lifeline to which he clung. — Santa Susana, Calif.

ASTRAL ESCAPE FROM PAIN

By Janet Schneider

ON NOVEMBER 1, 1948, my husband Ed took me from our home in Eggertsville to Buffalo, N.Y., for admission to Deaconess Hospital. I was taken at 10:00 P.M. to the delivery room, for the birth of our child seemed imminent. However, unexpected complications arose and the birth was delayed many hours. The pain reached such an unbearable point that I begged the Lord to let me die.

Janet Schneider

It must have been about dawn when a fierce whizzing noise started and crescendoed until it seemed to engulf all my nerves. I remember thinking, when this noise breaks I will be dead. But instead I suddenly found myself looking down on my body and the doctors and nurses. I heard my doctor, R. C. Alford, tell the nurse to inform my husband that I was "fading fast." He feared losing us both but possibly could save me if he took a chance on damaging the infant.

I watched the nurse approach my husband and give him the doctor's message. Ed told her to tell the doctor to save me. Ed was crying. I wanted to comfort him but I also wanted to watch the doctors. When Dr. Alford heard my husband's decision, he literally pulled my son into this world at 5:30 A.M. November 2.

Now I was back in my body and the nurses were slapping me. I lost consciousness and according to the record I was unconscious for eight hours. Nevertheless, I knew all that was happening and I struggled constantly to speak — to no avail — until a nurse said, "She's coming to. Her lips are moving. I believe she's trying to speak."

Dr. Alford finally said, "Bring the baby in and hold him in front of her. Maybe it will help if she knows he's all right."

It did. By the next day I had enough strength to tell my doctor that I had left my body during the time he was preparing to take my baby. He told me that I had only imagined the whole experience, hearing the voices and so forth and that I should wipe it from my mind. My husband's attitude was the same as the doctor's but I could not forget the events of that night. I have kept silent until now but I have relived the experience many times. — Pompano Beach, Fla.

UNSAFE AT ANY SPEED?

By Otto J. Ernst

EARLY ONE morning in 1942 I set out for Chicago accompanied by my oldest daughter Susan who would visit friends while I transacted business with my home office. We planned to return to our Michigan home in the evening.

It was dusk when we left the city homeward-bound. At that time the lightly traveled roads were dark and narrow and progress comparatively slow. Midnight was at hand as we entered a brief stretch of four-lane highway between Holland and Grand Haven, Mich.

I was terribly weary and home still was 40 miles away. Here, perhaps foolishly, I decided to increase my speed. I was driving a limited series Twin Six Packard which easily cruised beyond 70 miles an hour but I had just passed a lone slow-moving car when the lights failed! Blinded, I applied the brakes and fought to keep the car on the pavement. Suddenly the lights began to blink on and off at measured intervals and I could see enough to come safely to a halt on the shoulder.

Badly shaken, with flashlight in hand, I stepped out to investigate. Now the headlights were burning steadily and brightly but I heard a faint hissing, then the left front tire burst.

After composing myself and changing the ruined tire, I proceeded toward home much more cautiously.

The following morning I lost no time taking the car to Loren Mason, a mechanic who had had factory training at Packard Motors. I told him what had happened and asked him to check the entire wiring system. He explained that the car was fitted with a thermal circuit breaker as a safety factor instead of conventional fuses. This system protected the wiring from short circuits and caused the lights to wink rather than go out.

His careful inspection revealed that the entire system was in perfect condition and he could think of no possible explanation for the momentary failure of the night before.

However, aware of the blown tire, Loren jokingly commented, "Looks like your guardian angel was on the job. Ain't a damn thing wrong with the wiring." — Montague, Mich.

"DADDY CAN'T COME HOME"

By Frances Besneatte

ON MONDAY afternoon in the second week of August, 1961, my three-year-old daughter Denise and I were alone in our home in El Modena, Calif., about 40 miles from Long Beach, where my husband, Hallard F. Maxwell, was serving in the navy. He was on duty aboard the U.S.S. DeKalb County, an LST docked at Terminal Island.

As I prepared for his return for dinner, I noticed a restlessness in my usually calm daughter. Often she dropped her toys and went to stand before the telephone. I pondered her odd behavior but said nothing.

When the clock struck five I asked Denise to pick up her toys and put them away, explaining it was almost time for her father to come home.

Her blue eyes darkened as she said in a matter-of-fact tone, "My daddy can't come home today."

Startled, I asked the child, "Why do you say that?"

She continued in a strange monotone, "He fell down the steps on the boat and he can't walk."

I knelt before her to search her face, hoping she wasn't ill. She seemed to be staring through me as she said, "Daddy is in the hospital."

I was shaken not only by Denise's words but also by the eerie chill that now pervaded the room. I scrambled to my feet and went into another room to compose myself. Within minutes after I had left the tiny figure standing near the telephone, it rang sharply. I answered it.

My husband's voice was reassuring but he was in the hospital. While trying to close a hatch from below he had slipped off the metal ladder and broken his leg in two places. — Long Beach, Calif.

VISION OF DEATH

By Henry Richardson

AFTER WORLD WAR II ended I went to work for Rohm and Hass in Bristol, Pa., one of the largest chemical plants in the United States. I was a still operator until my retirement a few years ago.

I had built a home near the ocean 10 minutes from Atlantic City where my wife and I spent weekends and days off. On one of our stays there in late 1956, knowing I had to get to work the next day, we retired early — but I awoke from a dream about 1:30 A.M. feeling very troubled. As I lay there wondering what had disturbed me a picture came into my mind.

I saw a section of the plant where I worked and on the floor in front of two tanks (which were mine for the storage of distilled materials) two men lay on the metal floor and a nurse was working over them. I couldn't get the picture out of my mind and slept fitfully the rest of the night.

The next day when we reached our apartment near the plant we heard the news on TV. Two men on the midnight to 8:00 A.M. shift had met death by asphyxiation while cleaning a process kettle. (These kettles are large vats, some of them as large as an ordinary room.)

The men had ignored the safety standards taught all employees by attempting such a task without the gas masks rigidly prescribed by the company. But how did the vision of their tragic foolhardiness travel from Bristol to my oceanside home? — Pleasantville, N.J.

PERMISSION GRANTED

JACK ELLIS appealed to the Town Council to change the number on his house in Hucknall, England, from 13 to 11-A. He said, "Normally, I am not superstitious, but something has to be done."

Since moving into the home about three years ago he and his wife have been flooded out twice. He broke his arm and began to suffer arthritis. His wife sustained a serious cut on her hand, wrenched her neck and now has a slipped disc in her back.

Permission to have the number changed was granted.

“WE STRUGGLED with FORCES OF EVIL . . .

. . . but our clairvoyant friend Ivor left us in no doubt that we had brought these happenings upon ourselves.”

By Cyril Denham

SPIRITS RUN rampant and witchcraft is rife—so the story goes—in the county of Cheshire, England, especially around Alderly Edge, a few miles from a house we occupied in Cheadle. There for two months in 1966 a succession of bewildering and frightening events thoroughly disrupted our lives.

My wife Marian and I blame ourselves for what we went through and we are thankful that our three children were spared the most unpleasant of our experiences. Whether matters would have taken the same course of their own accord we cannot be sure, but we believe that our naïve experimentation unleashed forces we neither could understand nor control.

In February of that year, for no better reason than to satisfy our curiosity, we visited Ivor Norton, a clairvoyant who lives in the nearby city of Manchester. His accurate reading of our past and present so astounded us that we readily accepted his forecasts for our future—a promising future but marred by a shadow.

Without comment we had handed Ivor a photograph of my father which I doubt would have imparted

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

“CYRIL DENHAM” is the pseudonym used by a police officer who has had a number of free-lance articles published in his own country. However, the experiences in his Cheadle home related in this article have not been published previously. He and his family now live in Maidstone, Kent.

As a police officer Denham has trained himself to observe analytically and to recognize those features of an incident that are evidential.

Since the incidents related here occurred Mr. Denham and his family have continued their psychic investigations. They have been collecting accounts of other persons' psychic experiences—especially among fellow-policemen and their families—and these have been assembled in a book to be published soon.

much information even to a trained medical observer. But Ivor said regretfully that he felt it his duty to forewarn me that my father's death was imminent.

“He'll not live to see Christmas.”

I could not and would not accept this. My father did have a serious heart condition but he seemed so well of late that all who knew him believed he had many years to live. But Ivor was right. My father suffered a sudden heart attack and died on March 18, 1966.

This shattering fulfillment of the prophecy decided us to take a deeper look into ESP, spirit communication and kindred subjects.

In the early stages we confined our research to reading and to information Ivor—who had become a friend—gave us. But there is a limit to what can be learned from others and the time came when we felt we must experiment for ourselves. We knew no one with similar interests; whatever we chose to do would have to be done alone.

As it happened, when we traveled 150 miles to Tynemouth in Northumberland on April 15 to spend a few days with Marian's family, we discovered that her mother, Mary Link, and her sister, Mrs. Jane Cameron, had been using a wine glass and alphabet to receive "spirit messages." If their claims were justified, this could be the method of investigation we were seeking.

That evening they gave a demonstration for our benefit and we later joined in. Much of what was spelled out was known to one or more of the participants but we dismissed any suggestion that deliberate direction of the glass took place. By substituting sitters we insured that anyone conversant with the subject matter of a particular message was prevented from physically aiding its transmission. The results of that evening's proceedings were of little significance except toward convincing us that such phenomena did occur.

The following evening Marian, her mother and I held a brief sitting. Communications came—purportedly from two persons in the "spirit realms." I refrain from mentioning the identity claimed by one communicator, for it was a famous personality.

"Barbara Riley," a name unfamiliar to us, was the other. She claimed to have lived in the 11th Century! Her message contained unimportant information and advice of a personal nature. However, the name itself we were to hear again.

The third evening saw our introduction to another name and personality we were to meet again. This "spirit," Ronald Lund, had been Jane Cameron's acquaintance and he had lost his life in a tragic road accident some three years earlier. Jane did not recognize his name immediately but when it did come to her that they had been members of the same tennis club she removed her finger from the glass. Although she was the only sitter who had known Lund the communications continued unbroken. From her recollection the facts he gave were correct in most details.

Ronald Lund became an embarrassment. His messages and the jokes he made were personal and in bad taste—characteristic of him, Jane told us. He monopolized the proceedings and refused to allow others to communicate. The only way to bring this annoyance to an end, it seemed, was to close the proceedings entirely, a step we reluctantly had to take.

The next evening's experimentation was terminated for the same reason after Lund's repetition of his previous performance. That was the last occasion for almost a month that Marian and I felt the glass move beneath our fingertips, for on the following day, April 19, we returned home.

THIS IS NOT to say that our sessions ceased, however. On the contrary, the time we sat with fingers poised on a wine glass increased to some part of everyday—but to no avail. The wine glass remained motionless.

We persevered, however, and May 13 found us still hopefully trying. That evening Ivor and his brother John visited us. We told them of our fruitless efforts and were politely admonished for what they regarded as "unwise dabbling." According to them our efforts had not been totally unsuccessful. In the room in which we held our "glass and alphabet" sessions they said they could see clairvoyantly a gathering of "spirit forms."

They strongly advised against continuing this practice without proper guidance. We appreciated their advice, we said, then foolishly chose to ignore it. The next day, once more patient and hopeful, our fingers rested on a motionless glass.

Finally disheartened by our failure Marian and I had about decided to give up when my mother came from nearby Stockport on May 15 to visit us. That evening, hoping that a third person might make a difference, we thought we would make one last attempt. Mother was willing to assist for, unknown to me, she had been interested in the subject in her youth.

After about 15 minutes the glass began to move, slowly at first but then gathering speed. Following a meaningless jumble of letters a steady stream of writing began. The messages had little evidential value but they made sense and the facts given were accurate. From then on we had no difficulty getting the glass to work. The messages flowed and the correspondents were many. Through its medium came the words of the famous as well as the unknown, people we had known personally and some we had known only by name.

Conspicuously absent was my father, the person I most wanted to contact. Thus I believe, had our results been simply the products of our own minds, one reasonably could expect our minds to oblige by providing pseudo-contacts with those in the forefront of our thoughts. This did not occur.

Ronald Lund reappeared on May 20, to our dismay. Again he made a nuisance of himself and monopolized the proceedings. When we threatened to end the session the glass spelled out an apology and a plea: "Marian, Marian, please!" Did he need help? The only way we could think of assisting was to offer a prayer and so we did. That was the last time Ronald Lund communicated through the glass.

We retired about 11:30 P.M. and what Marian experienced that night is best described in her own words. She was wide-awake and I am convinced that neither dream nor imagination played any part in her vision:

"I got into bed having first switched out the light. The moonlight filtering through the curtains placed the room in a half-light. Suddenly, only a few feet from the bed and suspended midway between floor and ceiling, appeared a man's face. He seemed in his early thirties. The face was oval and rather full, his nose longish and hair light brown and wavy. From beneath bushy eyebrows shone eyes of a brilliant blue and the whole face appeared to be illuminated from within, like a color transparency held before a bright light. There was a suggestion of radiant health. The brightness of the face contrasted dramatically with the velvety blackness framing it. It remained just long enough to allow me to take in its features. I turned away and as I did so, Lund's Christian name came instantly and forcefully to mind, as though I were meant to associate his name with the face I had seen. When I returned my gaze to where the face had been, it was no longer there."

We do not claim that the face Marian saw was actually Ronald Lund's but when she later described and sketched the features for her sister, Jane noted a resemblance to the man she had known.

* * *

AT THIS TIME I worked as a police officer on the Manchester force and had night duty on May 23. Returning home at 2:30 A.M. I was surprised to find all the house lights on. I opened the door not knowing what crisis awaited me. Marian was sitting in the living room and never have I seen her so distraught. Slowly she composed herself enough to tell me what had caused her distress:

"Not long after you left for work, I felt an uncontrollable urge to try the 'glass' on my own. Unable to resist, I set out the alphabet and sat before it, my finger resting lightly on the upturned glass. It moved slowly at first but soon built up into a steady speed. The writings were of little moment and the communicator refused to reveal his or her identity.

"After about half an hour I was startled by a loud crash from upstairs. Upon investigating I found lying on the floor of our son's room a heavy quoit board which only this morning I secured to the wall. It would have been impossible for it to fall unaided and yet it apparently had done so. How this could happen baffled me but I was not unduly concerned.

"Undisturbed by the noise, the boy slept peacefully on. I decided to check on the other two children. On entering their bedroom I was met by a most unpleasant smell which pervaded the whole room, a smell I can only describe as like acrid oily fish. As theirs was the only room affected, I presumed the smell must be coming through the open window from somewhere outside and to the rear of the house. But I discovered the air outside was quite fresh. After I had done what I could to rid the room of its cloying odor, I returned to the 'glass sitting.' The interruption had broken the thread, and the subsequent results proved disappointing.

"I felt an overwhelming fatigue sweeping over me but I refused to quit. Why I should have struggled so to keep the glass in motion, I can't understand, for it was against my better judgment and not as though the results were in any way encouraging. The glass acted like a strong magnet and I was powerless to resist. Eventually, however, I realized that my energy was being drained from me and that I must break away. With a tremendous effort I stood up and walked unsteadily away from the table.

"Passing a mirror, I caught sight of my reflection and stood appalled at the change that had come over me; my face was pale and drawn and I seemed to have aged. I made a hot drink hoping it would serve to revive me and took it into the living room before going up to bed. Whilst sitting in front of the fire, I sensed that I was not alone. There was no sound, nothing visible, just an inner feeling that someone else was in the room. I argued that it was my imagination and finished my drink.

"It was close to midnight so I made my way to bed, making another check on the children on the way. All three were fast asleep. The odor which earlier had filled the back bedroom had vanished completely. Greatly relieved, I went into my own bedroom and undressed for bed, folding my jumper and placing it on the table beside the bed. I settled down between the sheets, picked up the book I was currently reading and found my place.

"Hardly had my eyes begun to follow the print when I was aware of a movement near the bedside table. Turning to investigate, I found it hard to believe what I saw. As I watched, the sleeve of my jumper shot with remarkable speed into an upright position. It remained posed momentarily until by some uncanny means, it folded over and the cuff tucked itself into the top of the shade of the bedside lamp. At first, I could do nothing but stare at the sleeve held firmly in the top rim of the lampshade. The thought that its closeness to the hot light bulb could be dangerous made me snap out of my daze and reach over to remove it.

"The room, I noticed, seemed suddenly to have become icy cold. Whether this was due to an actual drop in room temperature or a result of my body's reaction to my fright I don't know. Shivering violently, I pulled the covers around my shoulders and tried to get to sleep but I did leave the light on.

"I lay shivering and unable to sleep and after a while decided to get something warm to put on over my nightdress. I started to swing my legs over the edge of the bed but checked my movement when a gruff voice sounded from the region of the partly open bedroom door. In guttural uncultured tones, it shouted my name and followed this with a few words of abuse. This hostile outburst from unseen lips was immediately succeeded by the appearance of a shadowy form on the wall alongside the door. I watched as the form—making brisk dancing movements—moved from wall to wall before vanishing from my sight.

"I was by then in no doubt that I was being treated to a very convincing display of supernatural phenomena for which the only purpose could be to terrify me, a purpose well and truly served. Snatching my dressing gown I dashed downstairs to the greater comfort of the living room and the friendly warmth of its fire.

"Although a firm believer in God, I have never been of a religious turn of mind but found myself thinking that the Bible would provide powerful protection against those unseen forces bent on terrorizing me. The nearest we had to a Bible was a revised form of the New Testament and this I found with all haste and held it aloft as though it possessed some magical power. Prayer had never been a practice of mine but that night my prayer for help could not have been more meaningful; my nerves were at breaking point with no telling what might happen next.

"Then, as though in answer to those prayers, a brilliant blue flash of light appeared against one of the small panes of glass in the sliding doors. It vanished instantly but for a moment left behind it an aura of white light. Whatever the light may have been it seemed to have a comforting effect and I stayed down here waiting for you."

I was astounded. Marian was calm now and we discussed whether the weird happenings might be directly associated with our sessions at the glass. If we were correct it seemed fitting that we should go to the glass for enlightenment. We were anxious to discover why these things had happened and how to prevent a recurrence.

Within minutes the glass began to move and we posed questions about the voice, the movement of the jumper, the unpleasant odor, the falling quoit board and the dancing shadow. What answers were received came with painful slowness and seemed misleading. We soon abandoned our attempts to obtain explanations by this method when we realized we had no way of distinguishing lies from truth. For that matter, we might be seeking advice from the very being who had brought about the earlier manifestations.

WE WERE BOTH tired and it was well after 3:00 A.M. before we got to bed. Even so, we were able to snatch only moments of sleep and we arose early.

The house had developed an unfriendly depressing atmosphere which had nothing to do with the weather. It seemed airless. We felt we needed advice and assistance and we needed it quickly. There was only one person to whom we could turn—our clairvoyant friend Ivor.

He was surprised to receive our unannounced visit but he listened intently to our account of the events of the night before. Without reproaching us unduly, he left us in no doubt that we had brought these happenings upon ourselves through indiscriminate use of the glass, a practice he had warned us against more than once.

Was he suggesting we consciously wished these things to happen? He explained that both Marian and I were developing an immature form of mediumship. Entities he called "forces of evil," aware of the psychic power being generated, were using it against us. He feared more mischief was yet to come. We were reluctant to ask him to devote any more of his time to us but at his own suggestion Ivor came home with us to see what he could do.

A tour of the ground-floor rooms made no impression on him but he said he sensed that the place was not as settled as it had been on his previous visit. The first room he visited upstairs was the small bedroom at the front of the house which our 10-year-old son Bob occupied.

On entering this room Ivor was satisfied that he need search no farther. He asked to see a photograph of our boy. In the snapshot we produced he saw clairvoyantly a monk in an old brown habit standing behind the boy. The monk's face, partly shadowed by his cowl, was yellowed, wizened and seemed evil. According to Ivor, the monk planned to make his "home" in the room. So far, no harm had come to our son but Ivor felt the boy might be in danger.

Having found the source of the trouble, Ivor offered a solution, exorcism, a service he often had performed. First he asked Marian to leave us and when she was out of earshot he commenced. With a palm leaf cross he made passes, some of them like the sign of the cross, in the vicinity of the bed. The words he uttered seemed directed at a person standing alongside the bed. Sincerely and strongly, Ivor gave the unseen being a lecture on how and how not to behave and concluded by telling him where to go and what would happen if he failed to obey. The points he made were punctuated with profanity, obviously the reason he had asked Marian to leave. Unorthodox as our friend's approach may have been, the exorcism produced the desired effect—if only for a short time.

After a meal we took Ivor home. On the way we asked whether there were other steps we could take to protect the children. He suggested we had ought to buy Bibles to be kept in their rooms.

On the return trip we stopped in the village of Cheadle to buy the Bibles. Marian remained in the car with our baby girl Jean and I went into the shopping center. Now it was my turn to experience something quite out of the ordinary.

Once in the stationer's shop I began to search for the section containing religious books. As I walked between the counters one foot continually turned in the path of the other in a way that caused me to change direction and on occasion I nearly tripped and fell. At first I was fascinated by this involuntary phenomenon and experimented to see what would result if the force were unchecked. Of course I found myself traveling in a circle. Next I discovered the force became strongest when I tried to approach a particular corner of the shop. It took tremendous physical effort but I did resist the force and I arrived at the corner shelves near the window. There I found a large display of Bibles. I made my selection and left the shop. Whatever caused me to spin in my tracks was not as strong as it had been but it was noticeable and remained so for a day or two.

* * *

OUR MAIN CONCERN had been for Robert's welfare, for he was the occupant of the room where, according to Ivor, the malefic influence had found a home. Accordingly, after he had gone to sleep that night we entered his room to be sure all was well. There a new astonishment awaited us. An indescribably beautiful flower fragrance permeated the room. Its source was as mysterious as that of the offensive odor in the back bedroom had been but we took the pleasant scent as a sign that the exorcism had been successful.

It might be suggested that the flower scent was an illusion resulting from the relief of our tensions. However, the children, who had been kept in ignorance of the supernatural activity around them, also noticed the overpowering fragrance and inquired about it, for it remained in the house for a few days.

Before retiring that night we took our dog, an eight-year-old Alsatian, for a last walk around the block. I soon became aware the dog was not behaving normally. Usually a very obedient dog, in fact a winner of a number of obedience competitions, he would walk to heel. This night nothing I could do or say would coax him to walk near me. He either dragged behind or went uneasily ahead of me.

When we came to a crossing and had to stop at the curb to let a car pass the dog stepped forward into the road almost in the path of the oncoming car. He responded immediately to my command to stop but if he had not I'm sure he would have been killed. What puzzled me was that he had stepped off the curb as if I had commanded him to do so. He has never stepped out of his own accord before nor since. And only that night has his behavior been abnormal.

The only access to the rear of our house is through the attached garage and we took that route on reaching home in order to kennel the dog. Marian entered the garage first and started toward the kitchen door while I closed and secured the garage doors. A distance of 15 feet separated us when she asked if I had touched her. Of course I had not, but she had felt a firm touch on her shoulder as she reached the rear of the garage.

This incident and the atmosphere in the house the next morning—again unfriendly and airless—made us unpleasantly aware once more that we and the children were not its only inhabitants. During the morning while Marian was wheeling the pram into the dining room from the garden, one-year-old Jean lay happily laughing up at her. Suddenly the child stopped laughing and stared beyond her mother, her eyes fixed. Then she started to scream. Marian sought in vain for anything that might have given the child such a fright. We could conclude only that her unusual outburst was in response to something terribly unpleasant which only she had seen.

Now, I thought desperately, time is running out. We need help.

(To be concluded next month.)

WE TOLD

TED SERIOS—

OF PSYCHIC PHOTOGRAPHY FAME—

"IN ROTTERDAM

THERE IS A TOWER . . ."

Snapped before skeptical, knowledgeable witnesses, another rare evidential psychic photograph spans time and space.

By John F. Luttmer

IN 1962 AT the time the first report on the psychic photography experiments with Ted Serios was written by Mrs. Pauline Oehler, Research Officer of the Illinois Society for Psychic Research, and published by FATE Magazine, I had the pleasure of entertaining Ted Serios and another friend a number of times in my home throughout the winter of 1964-1965.

In those days many persons were asking Ted to demonstrate his unusual ability to take psychic photographs so I did not want to ask him to do this for us. At the same time I was very skeptical about this taking of pictures of places where he was not.

My wife and I always enjoyed Ted's visits and our talks and although he did not impress us as someone who would deliberately "fake" things it still was hard to believe that those pictures we had heard about were truly psychic pictures of something that existed far away. Besides, to my knowledge, this specific type of psychic photography never had been done nor heard of before. Nevertheless, our impression of Ted was that he was honest, sincere and very serious about the psychic pictures he was taking. He wanted the world and science to recognize his ability. Ted used to say, "I am not cheating. I really can make pictures and I'll show them something! Then they will have to believe me." He always became very excited about this and was more than anxious to prove his abilities to anybody who could help him get the recognition he craved.

Target for tonight: Rotterdam City Hall.

Knowing that I was somewhat skeptical probably led Ted to "announce" on one of his visits that he was going to take a psychic picture especially for me because, as he put it, he felt

"hot" — meaning he was in the right mood and condition.

During those days our first satellite was on its way to Mars and Ted's heart was set on getting pictures of Mars before the satellite could send them back. I think he had some idea of comparing his pictures with the satellite pictures.

He tried several pictures but the results were vague round cloudy-white spots on the Polaroid film. Ted was very disappointed. Someone remarked on how nice and clear the tower pictures he had made sometime Author Luttmmer, away from Rotterdam for 30 years, thinks this psychic picture (also obtained among others the night discussed in text) might be any tower. However, it invites comparison with cupolas on City Hall and tower itself.

First two tries produce increasingly better shots which look like corner of massive building but these cannot be dismissed if compared with City Hall on which Ted was zeroing in.

before were, whereupon Ted said they should not have said this because now his mind was drawn away from Mars.

So we asked him to get a tower picture for us.

Ted agreed to try and asked what kind of tower picture we wanted.

I said to him, "Ted, in Rotterdam (The Netherlands) where I come from there is a nice tower downtown. It is City Hall, the place where my wife and I got married. It looks to me just the right one to try once."

Ted never had been there, never had seen the place. But my wife and I had been familiar with it for 25 years.

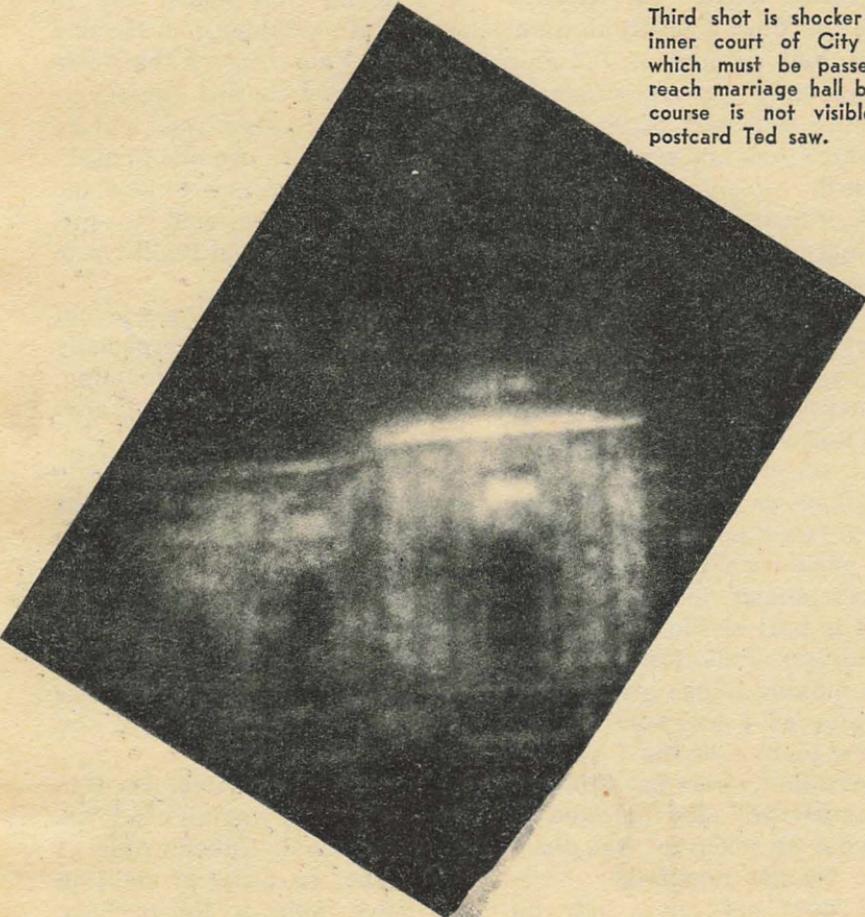

Ted asked to see a postcard or picture, something to show him what the tower looked like. We showed him a postal card. Ted asked us to hold this up across the room where he could look at

it. But the camera, of course, remained pointed at his head.

He started concentrating, his expression changed and then he snapped the picture. This first try produced only some light and shadow which looked like part of a building but nobody could tell for sure what it was.

A second try gave a slightly better picture and then, of the third picture, when it was pulled from the camera, my wife and I said in union, "Yes, this is it. But it is a different part of that building!"

We were surprised. We recognized the architecture but the part of the building photographed by Ted was not shown on the postal card we had held up for him. We recognized that part of the City Hall which is an inner court and which must be passed in order to get into the marriage hall.

Third shot is shocker — an inner court of City Hall which must be passed to reach marriage hall but of course is not visible on postcard Ted saw.

This was remarkable indeed. After looking at the front of a building shown on a postcard — a building across the Atlantic Ocean in downtown Rotterdam — Ted had pointed a Polaroid camera at himself and produced a picture of a part of the building which was not visible on the postcard.

Ted, of course, did not know at first that he had produced a true picture and was very excited when we told him so. But he cannot explain why or how he gets those photographs.

Sometime later old friends from Rotterdam came to us for a visit. We were curious to hear what they would say about this picture taken by Ted. And right away when we showed it to them they exclaimed, just as we had, "That is part of the entrance to the marriage hall at City Hall!"

On thinking things over later I remembered I had said to Ted "take a picture of the City Hall in Rotterdam where my wife and I got married." And he gave us just what we asked for: the place where we got married.

Ted does not know how he takes these pictures. He does not always know when he has taken a picture. He only knows he has to be in a certain state of mind, a trance-like condition.

* * *

TED DEMONSTRATED an entirely different type of sensitivity another time he visited us.

Knowing I am much interested in dowsing Ted asked me to show him a divining rod. He said he did not know how a thing like that looked. I showed him several types of divining rods and he wanted to try to use one himself. So I showed him how to hold the rod and then he said to me, "Hide a quarter and I will try to find it."

I explained to him this was not an easy thing to do, especially without experience or training, but he insisted on trying anyway.

So my wife and Ted went into the kitchen. I was sitting on the couch in the living room and in front of me, on the coffee table, was a package of cigarettes in which I hid the quarter — making sure the package was exactly in the same place and position as before and looked exactly the same.

At the signal Ted returned to the living room waving his dowsing rod around. Unbelievable as it may be, he came straight to the coffee table, to the package of cigarettes and found the quarter.

This was too easy. This could not be true. I did not believe it. Psychic experiments usually don't work out that easily and I thought for sure I had overlooked something. Therefore, I asked Ted to try once more. Ted again went into the kitchen where my wife made sure he did not peek.

This time I put the quarter in my vest pocket behind some papers.

When Ted reentered the living room with his dowsing rod he came straight in my direction, to where I still sat on the couch.

This time, however, I was determined to make the test as difficult as I could. When he was quite close to me I said, "Wait a minute, Ted. I'll move away from here. Then you can look better at this place."

And so I moved, thus moving the quarter with me (in my vest pocket).

I sat down on a chair across the room. Ted looked around at the couch where I had been sitting and said he had lost it — he would have to start all over again.

He started from another side of the room and again came toward me in my new place in the room. For the sake of the experiment I was not going to give up yet. While Ted walked straight toward me I concentrated, without looking at it and with my eyes closed, on a vase which stood in the window. And this time I threw him off the track. He stopped and asked me if the quarter was in the vase. I said, "No."

Surely this was telepathy pure and simple.

But my victory was short-lived for he soon pointed the rod at my vest pocket and said, "You must have that quarter there in your pocket."

Ted's psychic abilities are truly extraordinary.

AN EARTHQUAKING PUTT

ON MARCH 16, 1940, two men were playing a match on the golf course of the Victoria Country Club, Riverside, Calif. Alfred Bellows had to sink a long putt on the last hole to win. His ball stopped on the lip of the cup and he resigned himself to a play-off. Just then a mild earthquake occurred and his ball plopped into the cup. There was nothing in the rule book to say nay so Bellows was declared the winner over his opponent, Harold Sutherland. — Raymond C. Otto.

PRECOGNITIVE PIG IN A PALACE

Seers' beyond-chance accuracy leads parapsychologists to turn to quantum physics for explanation of precognition.

By Walter J. McGraw

A CERTAIN MRS. Atlay has become the center of a recent controversy among psychological researchers simply because of her relationship with — of all things — a pig. Not much seems to be known about her other than that she was the wife of the Bishop of Hereford and that in the late 1800's she and her children lived in fairly plush circumstances in a bishop's "palace" with a governess and other servants.

Mrs. Atlay's story first was reported in the Proceedings of the British Society for Psychological Research as she told it to F. W. H. Myers:

"I dreamt that the Bishop being from home, we were unable to have family prayers as usual in the chapel, but that I read them in the large hall of the palace, out of which, on one side, a door opens into the dining room. In my dream, prayers being ended, I left the hall, opened the dining room door, and there saw, to my horror, standing between the table and the sideboard, an enormous pig. The dream was very vivid and amused me much.

"The Bishop being from home, when I dressed I went down into the hall to read prayers. The servants had not come in, so I told my governess and children, who were already there, about my dream, which amused them as much as it did me. The servants came in and I read prayers, after which the party dispersed. I opened the dining room door, where to my amazement, stood the pig in the very spot in which I had seen him in my dream."

Myers solemnly assured the SPR members that he personally

WALTER J. MCGRAW has pioneered in drawing public attention to parapsychology through radio broadcasting. For the Westinghouse Group W stations he developed a 17-part series, "ESP, the Way-Out Frontier," bringing to millions of listeners their first comprehensive exposure to the ESP spectrum. He has produced award-winning documentaries for NBC and CBS, especially penetrating studies of prison conditions. His "Crime and Punishment in the Sixties" won him the American Bar Association's coveted Gavel Award.

had investigated the case; had questioned extensively the govern-ness who confirmed both the prior story of the dream and the subsequent advent of the pig; and that he had found that the pigsty was a considerable distance from the house. The story since has become one of the minor classics in parapsychology literature, usually cited as an example of how trivial cases of precognition can be.

Mr. Atlay's story came into the realm of recent controversy through an article in the SPR Journal by W. G. Roll, Jr., project director of the Psychological Research Foundation of Durham, N. C., and editor of Theta. Prefacing his introduction of the pig story Bill Roll states that one great problem faces all parapsychologists today: How are we going to make parapsychology respectable enough that orthodox scientists will look upon us as scientists?

He points out, ". . . much of the reluctance of . . . members of the scientific community to consider seriously the findings of psychical research is due to the absence of an explanatory model, and more particularly a model that makes sense to them . . . Attempts to talk sensibly about psi are frustrated by the phenomenon of precognition, the 'cognition of a future event which could not be known through rational inference.'" His solution: eliminate precognition from the ESP spectrum and admit that no one ever has foreseen the future. The future is made, he hypothesizes, by people willing it.

He then claims that all the laboratory work on precognition with cards could be explained by psychokinesis (mind over matter) or "PK," i. e., the subject calls the cards and then wills that they come out his way. Results of more sophisticated testing are determined either by mental control of temperatures somewhere at some future date or by the supposedly random decisions of computers or both. Roll postulates that PK could affect thermometers and that "the human brain contains a (powerful) calculating machine . . ."

He then turns to spontaneous cases of precognition and takes on Mrs. Atlay and her pig. According to Roll, Mrs. Atlay did not in her dream foresee the future. She brought about the whole incident. With the Bishop away, Roll conjectures, life must have been pretty dull for Mrs. Atlay. He says:

"A pig in the palace might be a welcome diversion. But how can psi elements, whatever their origin, have brought about the animal's escape into the dining room? Nonexperimental cases seem to present a stronger physical force than we encounter at the PK machines. For a short period of time it appears that Mrs. Atlay applied as great PK abilities as an alleged poltergeist agent."

Subsequent issues of the Journal contained heated replies, among them Prof. C. J. Ducasse's biting analysis:

"One has to suppose, purely ad hoc, that (a) Mrs. Atlay was bored; (b) this caused her to desire unconsciously that a large pig should be found (c) the next morning (d) specifically between the table and the sideboard in the dining room; (e) this unconscious highly specific desire caused her dream; (f) it also caused, psychokinetically, the gardener to leave the gate of the sty imperfectly secured; (g) her same potent desire then caused psychokinetically the pig to push it open; (h) it then psychokinetically caused the pig to enter another enclosure, the palace, rather than to employ — in the manner natural to a pig — the unaccustomed freedom from confinement it had won; (i) Mrs. Atlay's unconscious desire then caused the pig to proceed to the dining room rather than to some other room; and finally, (j) caused it to place itself precisely in the spot she unconsciously had desired . . ."

It seems to have taken Roll a full year (March, 1962, to March, 1963) to answer this onslaught. He called Ducasse's account "farfetched" and restated his theory that once "the dream image was formed, a resultant change of the psi field surrounding Mrs. Atlay's body automatically took place and consequently in the psi field of the objects in her surroundings . . . As the plan for the oak tree is in the genes of the acorn, directing its germination and growth, so a desire is imprinted on a person's psi field and under favorable circumstances may mold his environment into conformity with . . ."

This is a poetic and perhaps convincing explanation for PK but Ducasse made the point that Roll's theory "is seen not to advance at all our understanding of the modus operandi of precognition."

Mrs. Atlay's was not the only case discussed but the other two did little to clear up the picture. One was the Levyns case.

On February 28, 1949, at 3:00 P.M., J. E. Levyns was driving through a South African town. Just as he passed a bus a child ran from between two houses toward the bus. The only way Levyns could see of avoiding her was to speed up—which he did, barely missing the child. In a fright, he said to his companion in the car, "My God, I nearly hit that child."

Five days later he returned home from his trip to be greeted by a worried Mrs. Levyns. It seemed that on February 28, at 2:00 P. M. (one hour before the near-accident) she had heard her husband's voice saying "My God, I nearly hit that child."

Accounting for Mrs. Levyns' apparent precognition through PK was not easy. It had to be postulated that Mrs. Levyns' psi field had set up all the circumstances; that the girl herself may have had self-directed or masochistic aggressions which triggered the whole chain of events; or that some outside unknown agent triggered it all to teach the girl a lesson. Even Roll was unhappy with this case and suggested "further work" was needed.

The other case comes closer to supporting Roll's theory. It involves Robert Morris, Sr., the father of the Robert Morris who helped frame our Constitution.

As agent for a shipping firm his duties took him aboard ships when they arrived bearing cargoes with which his firm was concerned. It was customary for the ship's captain to entertain his client and then, as the client left the ship, compliment him with a cannon salute.

The elder Morris had experienced this procedure many times. Then one night he dreamed he would die from an accidental wound incurred as a result of one of these salutes. The dream bothered him so that the next day he refused to make his usual visit to a newly-arrived ship. When the captain demanded an explanation of this breach of custom, Morris described his dream. On the captain's assurance that no salute would be fired Morris consented to go aboard.

At the end of their visit the captain told Morris the crew was unhappy about the change of procedure because it meant they would not be served the round of grog that customarily followed the cannon shot. Morris relented but insisted that no shot be fired until he was well away from the ship. The captain agreed to accompany him to see that he was safely ashore before giving the cannoneer the signal.

Halfway between ship and shore a fly landed on the captain's nose. Instinctively he brushed it away. Aboard the ship the cannoneer, waiting for the captain to raise and drop his arm, mistook the captain's movement for the prearranged signal and fired. A moment later some wadding from the cannon struck Morris on the arm, breaking the bone and lodging in the flesh. Blood poisoning set in and he died on July 12, 1750.

Roll held that the dream was not precognitive; that it was self-fulfilling; that Morris' belief in his dream had set off the psi field in his environment to accomplish what he believed would happen. But from Dublin, G. F. Dalton pointed out that if Roll's theory were correct, "precognitionists have been responsible for (among other things) one stroke of lightning, one volcanic eruption and two world wars. If PK is really operating on this scale, no one is safe."

C. D. Broad commented on "the futility of attempting to placate orthodox scientists by loose talk of this kind, or of imagining that they will swallow the prima facie evidence for precognition, if it can be made palatable only with a thick coating of PK. Any orthodox scientist who would allow himself to be caught with chaff of that kind would be too callow a bird to be worth catching."

ONE OF THE great short stories of our time concerns the man who was granted his wish to receive copies of his daily newspaper 24 hours before it was published. He devoted the first two days of his lead on the rest of the world to making money betting on the horses and playing the stock market. On the third morning his fun was spoiled. While leafing through the next day's paper he found his own obituary. This story is an excellent dramatization of the ambivalence most of us feel about knowing the future.

Perhaps Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt might be cited as an exception. It has been documented and often recounted that in 1945 he asked Mrs. Jeane Dixon to visit him at the White House and tell him what she saw in his future. She told me later:

"He wanted to know how much longer he had to finish his work and it was shown that his time was short — not as long as he would like — and of course he understood. I think he was very intuitive himself and I think he was just confirming something that he felt. I think he knew that things were coming up in advance. I don't believe he knew how he knew, but he knew."

It is interesting to compare this with her precognition about Pres. John F. Kennedy. In 1952 she had predicted the election in 1960 of a blue-eyed Democrat who would be assassinated while in office. In March of 1963 I reminded her of this prediction.

"There is a dark cloud over the White House," she said, eight months prior to the shooting in Dallas. "But I may have interpreted my symbols wrong. There is still a symbol that I would say means the death of a very important person in the White House."

This touches on a point I had discussed with Mrs. Dixon before. She had told me all her visions were correct. When her predictions were wrong, she said, it was because she had interpreted incorrectly the signs and symbols she saw. If for the sake of argument we grant that she interpreted all her symbols correctly, would that mean that whatever she predicted would have to happen?

Surprisingly, her answer was, "No, not always." She went on to say that neither Dag Hammerskjold nor Carole Lombard, whose deaths in airplane accidents she had predicted, need have died when they did if they had stayed out of airplanes.

She then told of another vision in her crystal ball of a plane going down in flames which caused her to telephone her husband and advise him to go to Chicago from Detroit by train. The plane he had planned to take crashed at 65th and Cicero in Chicago and all on board were killed.

Jeane Dixon says she sees two types of visions: those that can be changed (Hammerskjold's death and Mr. Dixon's life saved) and those where the future is already operative. F.D.R.'s death, she believes, was already partly a fact at the time she read for him and she thinks too that Kennedy's death was inevitable. When she told Roosevelt, who was already very ill, of his impending death it already had begun; she was confirming an event partially consummated. But in 1952 when Mrs. Dixon first saw the assassination of a then unknown Democratic president between the years 1960 and 1964, what elements of the event were then in existence?

These ideas raise questions that make precognition hard to accept.

(1) Since it seems precognition may be both right and wrong at the same time, what if Carol Lombard and Hammerskjold had heeded Mrs. Dixon's warnings? We then never would know if her precognition was correct. (Or would the planes have crashed without these illustrious passengers?) How can we conclude that a heeded predictive warning shows true precognition or merely shows that the subject involved is superstitious?

(2) If precognition implies that the future already exists and if there are, as Mrs. Dixon says, two kinds of precognition (one of a future that can be changed and one that cannot) does more than one future exist at the same time?

(3) Finally, can determinism and "free will" coexist? If, as Mrs. Dixon says of Kennedy's assassination, certain events in the future cannot be changed, how does this affect the concept of personal responsibility? If it can be perceived that in the future I am going to hold up a bank, does this mean I have no choice? That I must hold up the bank? This would hardly give you the basis for a good legal defense the next time you heist the local First National even if you can get your friendly neighborhood fortune-teller to go on record with such a prediction.

These questions have led to much discussion and no satisfactory answers. How can we eliminate precognition from the ESP spectrum as W. G. Roll would have us do in striving for an "explanatory model" to present to orthodox scientists, when a Dixon has been correct so often and in such detail? When through the centuries many cases of precognition have been documented and new cases are reported constantly? (In fact, the most common single form of psychic experience appears to be the precognitive dream. — Dr. Louisa E. Rhine.)

AS HAS BEEN said so many times before in FATE, the parapsychologist seems the least likely to come up with Roll's needed "model." If an explanation is to be forthcoming it seems most likely physics and neurophysiology will be the bearers of the glad tidings, according to British scientist H. A. C. Dobbs. In a recent interview Dobbs told me he saw no reason to throw precognition out of the GESP (General Extrasensory Preception) spectrum. He would throw out Mrs. Atlay's psychokinesis as a cause, labeling this a "magical hypothesis."

In a recent SPR paper Dobbs disagrees with one of C. D. Broad's hypotheses which postulates that precognition does not exist; that merely a form of psychic forecasting exists; that pre-cognitive experiences deal with conditions which past experience suggests will occur.

Dobbs proposes an explanation for all of GESP.

It begins with what he has called psitrons, particles of "imaginary rest-mass which . . . are conceived to be emitted and absorbed by particles of mathematically real rest-mass rather as are photons which quantum physics holds to be constituents of the electromagnetic field surrounding a charged particle such as an electron." Psitrons, according to Dobbs, are not part of the electromagnetic field, however.

Quantum physicists tell us there are "imaginary" particles that travel faster than the speed of light and have real effects on real particles. Dobbs points out that if we accept something like these as the basis for psi-ability, we have "one possible explanation of the comparative immunity of ESP to distance and to screening by buildings and structures such as Faraday cages."

He then quotes neurologists who by means of EEG tests have found that there are certain parts of the brain "in such a delicate state of unstable equilibrium that their discharge can be triggered by . . . small 'extraneous' influences" and that "mental processes involve such small amounts of energy that quantum mechanical factors may play a predominant physical role." Something like the quantum physicists' "imaginary" particles, Dobbs suggests, could be the "extraneous influences" that trigger our central nervous system.

"The neurosurgeon, Wilder Penfield," Dobbs told me, "has indicated that by actual experiments with patients who had their cortex exposed during operations under local anaesthesia, he can induce hallucinations, visions and feelings rather similar to certain feelings which occur in some paranormal situations. This can be produced by straight physical interaction with the cortex, in this case by the application of fairly small amounts of electric voltage."

In telepathy, psitrons ("imaginary" particles) "are generated by some spurt of emotion in the sender, travel with a velocity faster than the speed of light and affect the receiver," suggests Dobbs.

But what about precognition?

In answer to this Dobbs again turns to quantum physics which along with "imaginary mass and energy" postulates "imaginary time." This is a time that co-exists with "our time"—time as we know it—but this "imaginary" time may have a different velocity. Dobbs points out that when one has a precognitive experience, "it is rather as if we were perceiving what are 'not quite' events by means other than light or electromagnetic radiation. It so happens that the theory of relativity provides for exactly this situation in the case of any physical influence which carries energies between material bodies with a velocity greater than the velocity of light."

And just as "imaginary particles" have their effects on the real particles of this world, "imaginary time" affects us. Thus the psitrons, living as they do with "imaginary time," are not controlled by our time and so can trigger us either before the event takes place in our time (precognition), while it is happening (telepathy and clairvoyance) or after it has happened (retrocognition).

Going back to Broad's theory, Dobbs agrees that the ostensible cause (Mrs. Atlay's pig getting out of the sty) may already have happened in "imaginary time" before the ostensible effect (Mrs. Atlay's dream) occurred in "our" time.

Incidentally, Dobbs will speak only of "ostensible precognition" since, he points out, the quantum physics Uncertainty Principle teaches us that nothing in the future "is absolutely certain to happen. However, there are situations in which a human being may apprehend a future state of affairs which is overwhelmingly probable to happen. In that situation I would suppose that the precognizer was affected by certain physical occurrences (which were, in fact, probabilities) which were coming from the whole configuration of the (then) present."

It seems then that scientist Dobbs agrees with Jeane Dixon that Kennedy's death, like F.D.R.'s, in some mysterious way was already in the process of culmination at least eight years before its advent. Perhaps what quantum physics suggests can happen in the realm of small particles (an explosion comes first, then is followed by its cause) also can happen on a much broader scale than we have yet realized in the realm of human activities.

As a result of Einstein's Theory of Relativity A. H. Reginald Buller wrote this for Punch:

*There was a young lady named Bright
Who traveled much faster than light.
She started one day
In the relative way
And returned on the previous night.*

THOROUGHLY PSYCHIC MILLIE

She lost touch with the reality of everyday living to enter another dimension — she kept the score for death!

By Garrett Manker

TRULY A southern belle, Mildred W—— was vivacious, entertaining and exceptionally pretty — a stand-out in the social life of the younger set in Pensacola, Fla. Handsome young naval officers vied for her attention throughout the wartime fever of gala balls, Sunday afternoon picnics and sedate beach parties. But Millie had her eye on a young ensign just out of Annapolis and a “hot-throttle” pilot stationed at the naval air base.

In 1917 wartime aviation was in its infancy and the young naval aviators flew water-cooled single-engined biplanes — wooden crates covered with doped wing-fabric. Many of them lost their lives in training exercises but the ever-present risk only added to the devil-may-care liveliness of off-duty hours.

Millie was the daughter of a prominent physician with whom she lived alone, her mother having died some years earlier. After her “coming out” the young debutante was a popular hostess in their lovely home on Palatox Hill.

With Dr. W——’s blessing Millie and the young ensign announced their engagement and soon everything was in readiness for a Tuesday afternoon summer wedding. On Monday morning, her fiancé’s plane crashed in the Gulf of Mexico and he became another statistic in a brutal insensate war.

Millie, too, was a war casualty. For her there were no more parties, no more blithe dancing. Her world had come to an end.

Once gay and lighthearted, the pivot of the cotillion, she became all but unrecognizable. No longer the flippant debutante flirting with the officers, Millie sank into despondency — but she was far from passive. Her peculiar behavior began to affect the neighborhood and soon came to the attention of the police.

I was 11 years old and ran with the usual group of little ruffians, hoydenish girls and noisy boys. I had heard that Millie would interrupt the younger children playing hopscotch simply by squatting in the center of the marked area, refusing to budge. She interrupted our games too saying haywire things we thought were frivolities. For instance, once she shouted, "Two planes are crashing head-on. They are two-seaters and all die!"

MY GRANDFATHER, John Garrett Wood, was the junior partner of Northrup and Wood, morticians, and he helped to administer a funeral home and livery stable on Intendencia Street in Pensacola. His establishment had a contract with the United States government to receive the bodies of deceased naval personnel. Granddad was the principal embalmer and worked on every body that passed through the mortuary. After his work was done, the bodies were placed in caskets and at the foot of each serviceman a folded American flag was placed.

Granddad paid me 25 cents a week to keep the front of the livery stable clean. It seemed a never-ending job of sweeping up but the thrill of walking downtown with Granddad every morning made up for everything. He wore a Prince Albert beard and invariably a red rosebud in his label.

As an "employee" I had access to all parts of the establishment. I got along fine with the men who groomed the horses and cleaned the livery equipment, soon becoming their "mascot." "That's the Old Man's grandson," they would say.

From the stable proper there was an entrance to the casket room which always was kept darkened so the sunlight wouldn't fade the silk linings. Quite naturally, boyish curiosity led me to check out Millie's precognitions which she broadcast among the children more and more frequently — and in every instance she was right! After I had entered the casket room and checked her accuracy a few times — by counting the folded flags — I started telling my grandfather that he would have two or one or possibly four bodies from the naval station waiting to be embalmed in his funeral parlor.

At first he ignored me, but later his bewhiskered face would wrinkle jovially and he would ask, "How many today, Garrett?" Millie was so accurate in her predictions that Granddad could count on my answer. And as a child will, I came to take Millie's odd behavior as a fact of life.

Then one morning early she came to our house on LaRue Street looking for me. She grabbed my arm and said, "Seven today — seven!" At breakfast when Granddad caught my eye I feigned great interest in my hominy grits and gravy. However, on the walk downtown I couldn't dodge his question, "How many today, Garrett?"

I stuttered something but Gramps demanded, "Come on now, how many?" Then I told him.

"Son!" — it was forever that when he was angry — "Son, this time you're wrong. Captain Snell told me last night there were only two on the slabs." The captain was a retired sea captain who often helped out when my grandfather was overloaded.

But Millie had been right as always. A navy ambulance reached the livery stable entrance just as we did and the sailors unloaded five bodies. I watched while the old man counted.

* * *

AFTER America's entrance into the First World War the training pilots and their planes were pushed beyond endurance. While Granddad never said it in so many words I knew his business was good.

About this time Millie got worse. She began to prance and gyrate in front of the small fry holding her arms high as if she were dancing with an invisible partner. One morning she advised us, "No planes in the air today. There's a bad storm coming up."

That evening a hurricane came off the Gulf of Mexico and the city of Pensacola sustained quite a lot of damage.

The next day Millie said, "Didn't I tell you? Didn't I tell you?" I knew she was talking about the storm which now had abated. The other youngsters looked at her blankly.

Soon afterward Millie became uncontrollable. She interfered with our games and one day when we protested she casually disrobed — that is, she took off her only piece of clothing, a filthy purple dress. We all looked on and giggled. Then, her dress over her arm, Millie went prancing across a vacant lot to her home. We thought it quite a lark but some of our elders felt different about it and we saw Millie no more.

Missing the "status" her daily predictions had given me, I asked Grandma Wood about her.

"People can't run around without clothes, dear. They put her away," was her response.

Afterward I often looked longingly up Palatox Hill at the white two-story house that had been Millie's home. I missed her and wondered why they had put her "away" when she had such an unusual talent — she could foretell the future. Others — the folks who had caused her to be banished — didn't have an ounce of her ability.

Granddad missed her, too.

A ONE-IN-A-MILLION FIND

By Sally Remaley

NOT LONG AGO I was a guest of Sally Duprea, a writer engaged in a monumental work on the prophets of the Bible. I was invited for dinner in her lovely old home at Holmes Beach, Fla.

Sitting on her immense patio overlooking one of the most picturesque views on the entire Gulf of Mexico, we both relaxed after a day of "slaving over our hot typewriters."

As we talked Sally told me she is researching her family's history and has been digging hard to close some gaps in the records, particularly a "missing link," an ancestor named Nancy Felton on whom Sally could find no information.

Finding herself with a little time to kill between planes in Boston while on a countrywide trip, Sally wandered around the city until suddenly about 4:45 P.M. she came upon a small neighborhood library.

"On a hunch, intuition or whatever, I went in. A sweet little elderly woman librarian asked if she could help me and I told her I was looking for some books on genealogy in the hope of learning more about my family tree."

"I don't believe there's time to hunt up much in that line for you right now," the librarian said. "We close in 15 minutes — but if you give me some of the names of the books you want I can have them ready for you tomorrow."

"I'm sorry but I'm only passing through Boston," Sally told her. "I won't be here tomorrow but thank you just the same." She turned to leave.

"Oh, just a moment," the librarian called after her. "I have a few books here you can look at. They may not be anything you want but then again you may find something." She took three well-worn books from a shelf behind her and laid them on the counter.

Sally said that as she stepped toward the counter her eyes were drawn as if by a magnet to the title on the front cover of the top book.

"It was," she said, "A History of Genealogy by Nancy Felton, my long-lost ancestor!"

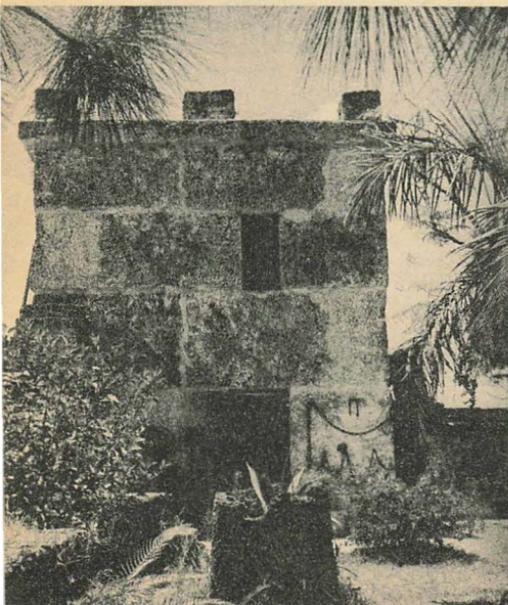

Ed Leedskalnin uses pulley system to lift one of smaller coral blocks. But how was he able to lift 35-ton slabs?

Florida's CORAL CASTLE MYSTERY

This slight 100-pound man raised stones weighing 35 tons. "I have discovered the secret of the Pyramids," he explained. But no one today understands what that secret was.

By Vincent H. Gaddis

Leedskalnin built two-story tower for living quarters and workshop but no one was allowed in while he was alive.

HOW COULD one man, weighing about 100 pounds, working alone in secrecy, quarry and raise into place coral rock slabs weighing as much as 35 tons? This is the mystery of the so-called Coral Castle and its courtyard of gigantic carved stones that baffles engineers and thousands of visitors annually.

Surrounded by an eight-foot-high wall, it lies south of Miami near Homestead, Fla., along U.S. Highway 1. To enter the enclosure you turn a triangular block of coral. It weighs three tons but is so perfectly pivoted and balanced that it can be swung with one finger.

You are now in a bewildering

Coral garden was part of strange construction the eccentric created over 30-year span.

wonderland of rocks hewn into hundreds of shapes and objects. Again, with just a finger, you can set in motion rocking chairs weighing thousands of pounds. There's a 15-foot-long table with its top carved into the shape of the state of Florida. Another table has the form of a heart from which a flowering centerpiece blooms. There are couches, beds and a bathtub all sculptured from solid coral slabs.

At one corner of the enclosure is the "castle"—a two-storied tower with a total estimated weight of 235 tons. Several of the oblong blocks which form the walls weigh nine tons. Near the center of the rear wall around the courtyard there is another stone door weighing nine tons and so perfectly balanced on a center pivot that a child can move it with ease. And it is so closely fitted into the wall that there is barely a half inch clearance between it and the stones framing it.

All of these wonders—and there are many more—were created in the hope that a dream would come true. It never did but Edward Leedskalnin, in addition to being a brilliant eccentric, was a very stubborn man. He preserved his futile faith until the end of his life.

It began long ago when Ed was a young man living in a village near Riga, Latvia. He fell in love with a 16-year-old peasant girl. They became engaged and Ed was happy. Then, just before the wedding, his world fell apart. The girl tearfully told him she loved someone else. Heartbroken and humiliated, he fled from his home and the village. But he still loved her.

America was the land of opportunity. There, perhaps, he could accomplish something so unusual that he would gain the world's attention. He would become famous, his name would be known everywhere. Then the girl would realize her mistake. She would leave her simple peasant life and come to him. He would forgive her and together they would start a new life in the New World. During the rest of his days Ed always referred to his lost love as "Sweet Sixteen."

So Leedskalnin came to the United States. For the next decade he wandered across the country from New York to California, a lonely man working at odd jobs, living simply and saving most of his money. His leisure hours were spent in reading scientific books and conducting experiments in physics.

It was while working in Texas that he discovered his secret. Now he knew what he must do. He would build a monument that would be one of the wonders of the modern world. The project would require much time and hard labor but fame eventually would be his and Sweet Sixteen would return to his arms. Since he would have to work outside the year 'round, he moved to Florida.

Nine-ton coral stone door in rear wall is so perfectly balanced on its center pivot it can be swung with one finger.

Engineers remain mystified as to how these simple tools could move giant stones.

Ed was 31 years old in 1918 when he settled on several acres of isolated land near the village of Florida City. He cut down some pine trees and built a log cabin. His few neighbors found him friendly but secretive about his activities. At first they thought he was a treasure hunter. He quarried rock and from it made his own furniture for the cabin and began to carve some of his exhibition pieces.

Several years passed and then a real estate developer began to build homes close to his cabin. If he was to attain fame, Ed knew his working methods would have to remain mysteries. He located a 10-acre tract north of Homestead several miles away, abandoned the cabin, and with the assistance of Bob Biggers who owned a heavy-duty truck, he moved his rock furniture to the new site. At that time, in the early 1920's, the nearby road was only a trail. Today it is the heavily-traveled four-lane approach to the Florida Keys.

First, Leedskalnin built a wall of stone slabs, each weighing several tons, to a height of eight feet around his courtyard. Then he erected his two-story tower or castle. The first floor was his workshop and storehouse. He lived on the second floor which was furnished with a rocking chair, a bed which could be pulled to the ceiling, and a legless table which projected from the wall. Ed had a passion for neatness and he didn't want anything in the way when he swept the floor.

Now he went to work on his endless creations of mammoth stone.

"I have discovered the secret of the Pyramids," Ed said in later years. "I have found out how the Egyptians and the ancient builders in Peru, Yucatan and Asia, with only primitive tools, raised and set in place blocks of stone weighing many tons. The Pharaohs had thousands of slaves but I can do it alone." Modern engineers who have viewed his work will testify that his claim was certainly not an idle boast.

Although no one ever saw Ed quarry the coral rock, a study of the tools he left gives some idea of his methods. He apparently drove one end of a wire cable several feet into the rock with an iron stake. The other end of the cable was attached to an apparatus that he moved back and forth in a sawing process until the cut reached the depth of the driven cable end.

A similar parallel cut would be made at a distance determined by the size of slab he wanted. Next he cut a trench between the parallel cuts several feet in depth and set a row of flat chisels down. By hammering each chisel in succession with a sledge the block of stone would eventually crack free from the bedrock.

Setting up a tripod of logs to support a hoist, Ed would sling a cable around the slab and gradually raise it out of the ground with the aid of jacks and wedges. Finally, with the use of wooden rollers and an undetermined arrangement of pulleys, he gradually would move the slab to the location where he dressed it and set it into permanent position. It was hard tedious labor but Ed was a man of infinite patience. Moreover, it was his proud boast that he never had ruined a stone.

As to his method of raising weights as great as 35 tons, it is known that Leedskalnin discovered improved ways of using the principles of pulleys and levers. He even showed visiting experts the type of equipment he used — heavy chains 15 feet in length, wheels from the railroad handcars salvaged from junk yards, steel cables and logs. What mystifies the engineers, however, is how equipment of this nature and size could possibly be enjoined to support the tremendous weights that Ed raised in the air to high levels or stood upright. There is no doubt that Ed applied some principle in weight lifting that remains a secret today.

For example, Ed single-handedly quarried, moved and raised an obelisk that is 27 feet high — three feet higher than the central trilithon at Stonehenge, England.

Another obelisk — 25 feet high and weighing nearly 30 tons — is part of Ed's lensless polaris telescope. It has a circular hole bored through it near the top. Within the hole are wires crossing at right angles like a gun-sight. A similar hole with crossed wires is in another, much lower, stone several feet away. From this stone, by lining up the wire cross-points in it and the obelisk, one finds he is looking directly at the North Star. Ed's interest in astronomy is also evident in the coral representations of the moon and planets that are lined along the rear courtyard wall.

Ed's mirror for washing and shaving was a small, rectangular stone, hollowed out to a depth of about two inches. The bottom was darkened with pitch which, when covered with water, gave a perfect reflection. At night, after a hard day's work, he would relax in what he claimed was the first contour chair — a massive three-ton throne with a curved back.

One of the most astonishing of Leedskalnin's creations is a unique sundial which gives the time to within two minutes of accuracy all year around. On the curved base — a large, semi-circular slab of smoothed stone — are a series of long loops that correspond to the sun's apparent course throughout the seasons. On June 21, when the sun is at its northernmost position, the shadow of the pointer falls along the bottom of the loops; on December 21, the sun's southernmost position, the shadow moves along the top of the loops. The loops are numbered for even and half hours. Thus at any period of the year the pointer's shadow will give the approximate time. A more accurate time can be obtained by measuring the distance of the shadow's point from the sides of the loop it happens to be moving in.

Through the years Edward Leedskalnin lived a Spartan existence. A small allowance from a relative's oil business in Texas covered his meager living expenses. A bicycle was his means of transportation and he frequently rode to the public library at Homestead where he would spend hours reading books and magazines.

Ed permitted, but did not seek, visitors. Usually he was friendly and would lead his guests through the grounds, patiently explaining his creations in a heavily-accented voice. At no time would he allow anyone to enter the tower. No fee was charged but he did accept donations if they were offered.

But Ed was a proud man. If a visitor questioned the fact that he had done all the work by himself, he would glare at the skeptic and shout, "I did it, all of it, alone!" then turn and march angrily away. Such questions, he believed, reflected on his honesty and talent.

It was Ed's theory that magnetism is the fundamental energy, the key to the mystery of the physical universe, and the force that activates all organisms including the human body. He wrote several booklets which he published at his own expense. With one exception, all of them were on magnetism, outlining his theory and explaining simple experiments with magnets, automobile batteries and similar objects. The exception was called A Book In Every Home which presented Ed's views on politics and sex. There were no references to the Coral Castle or his building methods in any of the booklets.

Despite his unique accomplishments, Ed considered himself a failure. His lifelong dream never became reality. He did not attain international fame. Sweet Sixteen never came across the sea to brighten his days and bear his children.

For long, weary hours and years he had labored in anticipation of her arrival. From the coral he had carved twin beds that would furnish their home, a pair of children's beds, a cradle and a small crib. But not one of these objects would ever know the warmth of a family.

He had hewed a "Forgiveness Heart" — a half-ton stone chiseled into a heart shape. "When Sweet Sixteen comes," he would tell his neighbors, "there will be times when one of us has our feelings hurt. We can sit here until the hurt heals and the heart will remind us of our love."

He had built a "Repentance Corner" where the children would be sent for punishment. "I believe in discipline," he explained. "My children will be good kids. I will raise them to be fine useful citizens."

Most poignant of all was the patio that he called the "Grotto of the Three Bears." It contained three chairs of varied sizes, a table and a huge coral porridge bowl. "This is where the kids will play," Ed said — and sometimes there were tears in the old man's eyes.

For well over three decades he worked beneath the Florida sun, hoping, dreaming, waiting. But Sweet Sixteen remained only an image of his youth, a vision forever fixed in the stardust of memory.

After Ed died in 1951 at the age of 64, the authorities and the curious looked over his possessions. They found the pulley system dismantled with no clues as to how it had been assembled. In a drainpipe in the tower they found his life's savings — $3,000 in $100 bills.

No, Ed Leedskalnin did not gain world fame. But today Coral Castle is marked on maps of the state of Florida. Each year thousands of visitors walk through his castle and look at the massive hewn objects and wonder. The mystery remains. And Ed's creations in stone probably will decorate his courtyard and memorialize his lost dream for years and years to come.

HYPNOSIS OF THE DEAF

By Chester Geier

AT FIRST THOUGHT it seems unlikely that deaf persons could be hypnotized because of their difficulty in understanding a hypnotist's spoken commands. By the use of a pioneering technique, however, deaf persons can become ready subjects for hypnotism. This recently was proved to an overcapacity crowd in a New York City auditorium during a demonstration arranged by Richard Myers, Eastern Vice-President of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf, and sponsored by the New York Civic Association of the Deaf.

For more than two hours, two professional hypnotists held the audience spellbound as they displayed an amazing ability to put deaf subjects, chosen at random, into a trance state.

The practitioners, Lt. Col. Joseph H. Ziglinski, U.S. Army (Ret.), Research Director of the Washington Hypnotic Guild, and

James E. Casey of Silver Spring, Md., have developed an effective method of using sign language in hypnotizing the totally deaf. By this means they bridge the "communication gap." Mr. Casey is skilled in the language of signs, for his own hearing is slightly defective.

As the audience watched, Mr. Casey and Colonel Ziglinski showed that deaf subjects respond to suggestions made through sign language while under hypnosis. One young man who had admitted that his shyness made it difficult for him to speak to others delivered a skillful "pitch" as a used-car salesman. A dignified matron, a conscientious housekeeper, got down on her knees and gave the floor an energetic scrubbing with a nonexistent brush. A deaf man who had dreamed in his youth of becoming a musician gave an inspired performance with an imaginary violin.

I never saw her — in life, that is — but I had heard Grandma Sarah had been "unusual." Her capacity for patience I learned firsthand.

THE RAIN POUNDED down as thunder broke loudly overhead and pealed along the mountains. I watched in fascination as a lightning flash illuminated the front yard all the way the mountain farm located about halfway between Valley Bend and Mill Creek, Va., owned by my grandfather, John W. Smith. Usually one or more of my seven sisters was there too — a delight-to the corral. I was not afraid. I loved a storm!

Then in a bold burst of lightning I caught sight of a dim figure standing on the porch roof outside my window! Grandma Rena never used curtains so nothing blurred the white-draped image moving slowly into view. I rubbed my eyes and looked again. It was still there. I closed my eyes and counted to 10. Now it hovered in the center of the window, no longer moving. In the pitch-darkness of the storm the figure stood out snow-white.

I was alone in the bedroom directly over my grandparents' bed-sitting room. I was 14 years old and spent every summer at ful vacation for us while we kept Granddad company — but that summer the rest of the family was coming later from our home in Cascade, W. Va., a small mining town 100 miles north of the farm.

I turned my head to the wall, telling myself the apparition must be a reflection . . . but there were no lights. In 1936 electricity had not yet invaded the hills and the kerosene lamps had been put out hours ago. I looked again. The figure was still there. Now I began to be frightened. The storm continued loud and furious, but still the sight in the window remained. I watched it all night.

The storm abated in the early morning but the figure remained, fading only in the first rays of dawn.

Never had I been so grateful for daylight. I looked out the window half afraid the figure still would be lurking on the porch roof. The world outside was washed fresh and clean by the storm but there was no sign of my nocturnal visitor.

Granddad was having his coffee when I slipped into the chair beside him. He looked at me curiously but said nothing until Grandma Rena went out to milk the cows. Then he demanded to know why I had not slept all night. I looked down at my plate in silence.

"Did you hear something?"

I shook my head.

"What, then?" No answer would come. I almost cried.

Granddad leaned forward, his grey eyes sterner than usual.

"Did you see her?"

I nodded.

"Confound it, girl, how many times must I tell you? There's nothing to be afraid of. She just wanted to talk to you, that's all. She's your grandmother with as much right here as you. Being afraid is the same as being rude!"

The "she" he referred to was his second wife, Sarah, who had died before I was born. She and Granddad had built the farmhouse and raised their family there. Before her death in 1920 Sarah Rosencrans Smith had earned quite a reputation as an unusual woman. At a time when the world wasn't talking about extrasensory perception she could locate lost items, anticipate Sunday guests and heal an occasional toothache.

My mother, Hattie Mae Smith, told us she once had a dime in her apron pocket and while playing with the children in the meadow, she lost it. She didn't try to find the dime in the field of thick clover. Instead she ran to the house and told her mother of her loss. The older woman didn't say a word but after she finished straining the milk she went to the edge of the field, paused for a minute and then walked directly to where the children had been playing. She stopped, bent over and picked up the coin!

Another time she bought a pig, intending to raise it for meat. Granddad was annoyed and stated firmly he didn't want any pigs on the farm. He soon sold the animal to Mr. Johnson who owned the neighboring farm. Sarah was furious. She turned to the prospective owner, "Cleat Johnson, if you buy this pig, it will die before you get home!" The two men laughed and completed their transaction and the new owner started off with his purchase. About halfway home the pig died. It might have anyway or perhaps the day was too hot to take a pig for a walk. Nevertheless, on such stories as these Grandma Sarah's reputation grew.

She had supervised every nail in the construction of the farmhouse and she deeply loved the beautiful farm and the surrounding hills covered with pink and orange honeysuckle, with laurel and tall pines green the year around. So when Grandma Sarah died, it is no wonder that Granddad thought it quite reasonable that she preferred not to leave her home. On the other hand I could not accept the experience I had had as the perfectly natural visit of a grandmother to her granddaughter.

Granddad did not discuss my experience with Grandma Rena. As the day wore on I longed to talk to her but I recalled she always seemed indifferent anyway to stories of the active presence of her predecessor. Nevertheless many persons in the family had heard and felt the influence of the past mistress of the house.

During the unusually cold winter of 1933 Aunt Blanche and Uncle Goff Wratford had been living at the farm. Aunt Blanche had a large collection of prized house plants. Fearing they might freeze, Uncle Goff sat up all night to keep the wood fire going. About four in the morning he heard heavy footsteps come down the stairs, cross the dining room and stop behind his chair. Then he felt gentle hands pat him on the head! He sat up expecting to see Aunt Blanche — but no one was in sight. Then the steps continued past him to the door between the dining room and Granddad's bedroom. The old-fashioned wrought iron lift latch slowly depressed and the door swung open. Seeing this Uncle Goff hurried off to bed and left the plants defenseless against the cold!

Every member of the family at some time had heard the slow footsteps, watched the door open and felt the gush of air as if heavy skirts were sweeping past. On the sitting room side of Granddad and Grandma Rena's bedroom the door latch had a small bar that lifted out of a slot. On the dining room side, a thumb-impressed lever had to be pressed down to open the door. I had seen Granddad file the slot deeper — but that didn't prevent its opening. When the family gathered at the farm for holidays, the mysterious door always came up for discussion. The men tried to discover an uneven wall or draft to explain its behavior but they never found a logical answer.

The first evening following the storm I fought sleep and avoided going back up to that room alone. Finally, as my grandparents prepared to retire, Granddad turned to me and said angrily, "Well, sleep down here if you want to!" Without a word I crept into the small bed in the corner of their room. It was a bed Granddad had made for visiting children. It was too short for me but I pulled up my knees and slept.

The next night I lay awake for a little while and I saw a secret thing happen. Granddad was snoring heavily and dear Grandma Rena slipped out of bed, opened a small drawer in her night stand, took out a piece of string and tied the lift-latch door shut! Early the next morning she must have removed the string. Since she was always up first, no one ever knew! Then I remember my mother and Aunt Blanche talking about the time Rena came to the farmhouse as a bride. She couldn't take a nap in the afternoon without having the bed coverings yanked and pulled off as if someone were under the bed playing pranks!

When my father, Sam Smith, brought the rest of the family for the Labor Day weekend my sister Mary demanded to know why

I was sleeping in the "baby bed." When I told her she said, "You dreamed it or made it up."

So that night Mary and I slept in the upstairs bedroom and our parents and younger sisters in rooms across the hall. When we were almost asleep we heard the slow footsteps coming up the stairs. "Mary, here she comes!"

Mary listened and then smiled, "You dumbbell! That's Grandma Rena coming to see if we're asleep. Let's scare her!"

She slipped out of bed and stood by the door with her hand on the knob, waiting. When the steps reached the top of the stairs and stopped outside our door Mary swung it wide open — only to see an empty hallway! With a choked scream she slammed the door and leaped into bed, pushing me between her and the door.

The next day Mary told Mother and Grandma Rena what had happened. I watched Grandma Rena closely, thinking of the door-tying incident. She chided, "Now all of you know Granddad wants you to act perfectly natural and just treat her like a member of the family."

"Do you suppose there is money hidden here? Or did she die trying to say something? You know they say that's why a lot of these things happen . . ." Mom's voice trailed off.

Grandma Rena shook her head, "Granddad says there never was any money. She just wants to see the family."

In the summer of 1946 Granddad became very ill. As is customary in our part of the country friends and neighbors gathered each evening of that week to "sit with" Granddad. On one of these nights, Cleet Johnson, who had been there all week, decided to go home to rest. He started walking the short distance to his farm only to return breathless a few minutes later. When we asked why, he said he had changed his mind. "I had to come back. This is his last night!"

Then he told how as he was crossing the bridge Granddad joined him, accompanied him a short distance and then faded from sight. Cleet was correct in his interpretation of this event; it was Granddad's last night. A few hours later Granddad was gone.

Aunt Blanche and Uncle Goff inherited the farm. Grandma Rena continued to live with them. The section of the house where the footsteps most often had been heard was torn down and modernized. Needless to say, no money was found.

But the house is quiet now. The door stays closed. Presumably, Grandma Sarah had what she had waited 26 years for — Granddad!

KWAN-YIN

BROKEN ARROW

The Goddess of Mercy is a benign friendly idol — "but with the arrow in her hand she acted almost alive and certainly angry . . ."

By Elmer L. Kline

IN THE FALL of 1961 when I was managing the Tutti Galleries on Allen Street on New York's lower east side, an image of the Buddhist Kwan-yin, the Goddess of Mercy, came into my possession. About 20 inches tall, this Kwan-yin was Japanese and carved from wood, its once-gleaming surface showing only a residue of paint and gilt. One hand extended upwards, delicately-carved fingers pointing to the heavens. The other hand grasped a golden lotus leaf, separately carved and in a bad state of repair. My knowledge of other Japanese works of this school led me to believe the Kwan-yin dated from about 1300 A.D.

I sent the lotus leaf to a specialist for regilding. The night before I was to pick it up I took the Kwan-yin from the gallery to my Greenwich Village apartment. I planned to take the image to a Japanese art expert for authentication the next morning as soon as I had it repaired.

I held the Kwan-yin in my lap for the 20-minute taxi ride and noticed for the first time that it had stone eyes. They gave the image a look of severity—whereas the Kwan-yin always is a benign, friendly figure, analogous in many ways to the Virgin Mary in medieval European art. But this one had a different air, almost as if it were an evil idol posing as Kwan-yin. I didn't like it — although I knew it must be worth well over $1,000.

I carried the piece into my apartment and placed it on a table among the odds and ends of a typical antique collector's parlor.

That evening a friend, Tom Young, came to see me. When he entered my reception hall, he hesitated, then said, "You have something new in here tonight and I don't like it."

"What's wrong? I asked.

"There's something in the house that is disturbing," he replied, adding, "It not only is disturbing but it's almost indignant about being here."

He walked into the parlor and despite the dust and clutter he immediately spotted the Kwan-yin.

"How do you like her?"

"She's a beauty — but evil," he replied.

"I have the same feeling about her," I said, "but tomorrow she goes uptown and if she's O.K., I have a buyer for her and she'll be out of my life."

He shrugged his shoulders and we proceeded to our evening's business. As Tom was leaving he noticed the Kwan-yin's hand, empty of the lotus leaf. Taking a small African iron-pointed arrow from my curio cabinet, playfully he slipped it into the idol's hand.

"Never let a woman go around empty-handed," he said.

After he had left I studied the image in the light from the fireplace. With the arrow in her hand she looked almost alive and certainly angry.

Soon I put out the fire, turned off the lights, retired to my bedroom and quickly fell asleep. In the early hours of the morning a loud crash in the parlor awoke me. My first thought was that I had left my windows open and a storm had knocked my huge Empire mirror from its precarious balance on the mantel. But when I entered the living room I saw in the early morning light that the windows all were closed, the Empire mirror was in its usual place and the Kwan-yin stood as I had left her. Sleepily I returned to bed, not overly concerned about the crash. I had noisy neighbors.

When my alarm awakened me a few hours later I walked into the living room to find my glasses which I had left on the table next to the Kwan-yin. I looked at the statue carefully. Something about it was different, not damaged or broken, but some change had taken place. Suddenly I saw that the arrow was missing from her hand. I looked for it on the floor but it had not fallen directly beneath the statue. The arrow lay beneath a chair 11 feet across the room, its bamboo shaft broken and the iron point separated from the shaft.

Needless to say I was delighted to deliver the Kwan-yin to the Japanese expert the next day. When I told him the story of the iron arrow he was amused but he did not seem surprised.

"You cannot blame the Kwan-yin for casting the arrow," he said. "After all, Buddhas are opposed to weapons of war."

I have retold this story many times and as yet I have received no better explanation of the arrow-casting than his. One scientifically-oriented friend suggested that I experiment to see if the Kwan-yin would throw the arrow again. I rejected the idea, first as sacrilegious, and second, if an arrow can be propelled across a room by some unknown power why can't it turn corners and go through doors?

I was happy to sell the Kwan-yin a few days later. Her new owner kept her only a few weeks and then sold her again. I now have lost track of the idol.

In my years in the New York art and antique world I have heard of no comparable experience but the Kwan-yin taught me that dealing with old stuff sometimes can bring mystifying new experiences.

"MR. JOSEPH" SCORES AGAIN

By David Techter

CHICAGO'S "psychic hair-dresser," Joseph DeLouise, who already had achieved a certain amount of fame through two startling predictions—the West Virginia bridge disaster and the Illinois Central train wreck south of Chicago—has scored again. As printed in the "Midwest" magazine section of the Chicago Sun-Times for December 29, 1967, DeLouise stated, "I see tragedy involving water around the Kennedys." This, of course, could refer only to the recent tragic events surrounding Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Dr. Annette Wilson, who typed up DeLouise's prophecy, says that as this prediction was originally submitted to the newspaper it specifically mentioned the death by drowning of a woman. This was toned down by the Sun-Times for fear readers would assume it applied to Jackie Onassis.

DeLouise's other prophecies, as published in the same Sun-Times article, concern great difficulties for the stock market, the Cubs winning the National League pennant, and further illness and retirement for Elizabeth Taylor, two of which appear to be accurate.

Prophecies still to be fulfilled are the birth of a son to Mrs. Onassis, an earthquake disaster around Bolivia, S.A., and the replacement of Johnny Carson on the "Tonight" show.

To Be or Not to Be . . .

VICTIM OR VICTOR?

DOES PSI DECIDE?

By Jule Eisenbud, M.D.

First published in Zeitschrift für Parapsychologie und Grenzbereiche der Psychologie, Vol. VII, No. 1, 1964, under the title, "Sein oder Nichtsein — oder ist Psi notwendig?" and The Psychoanalytic Review, Winter 1966-67.

PART TWO

HOW IS IT, if a person has the wide range of latent cognitive capacities that are assumed under the psi hypothesis, that he does not use them to achieve wealth or other advantage, or to gain knowledge of facts that would permit him to avoid disaster or even death?

This is the question Dr. Eisenbud explores in this article. In Part I he demonstrated that in all axes of life psi operates on an unconscious level and its goals often are at variance with those consciously espoused — but that psi is operating cannot be doubted.

The behavior of animals and human beings appears continually to reflect a latent predator-prey relationship, an age-old drama which repeats itself endlessly as if each step were planned and controlled by a master choreographer: the man who allows himself to be duped or swindled (all the while insisting he has been victimized), the masses who ignore the simple basic requirements for maintaining health (as if seeking self-destruction), the mouse that sacrifices itself to the nursing cat, the tarantula that plays host to the eggs of the digger wasp?

LET US ASSUME for the moment that this is so and try to imagine how a system of such finely balanced and precisely meshing interspecific need-dispositions might work. Clearly needed would be some form of effective communication, not just between the two animals of

THE AUTHOR

DR. JULE EISENBUD's extensive writings on psychiatry and psychology have been widely published in professional journals in the United States and abroad. In parapsychology his specialty — telepathy in the psychoanalytic situation — has led to ever-deepening research in psi. Born in New York City in 1908, he received doctorates in medicine and medical science from the Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons. Since 1950, he has been Associate Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at the University of Colorado Medical School. In Denver he researched and wrote the recently-published book, "The World of Ted Serios" (New York: William Morrow & Co., 1967).

a predator-prey pair but also between these animals and the larger systems, some ecologically overlapping, in which they are functionally imbedded. The thing that would most efficiently fit this bill would be some kind of universal unconscious psi linkage, supplementing the conventionally conceived-of set of sensorially mediated signs and symbols which are, simply because of the wide variety of subcategories that can be pressed into service mechanistically, generally accepted as adequate in themselves.

According to this model, an individual animal's role at any particular time in a given ecological context would be determined not only by the complex interplay of the numerous conditioning factors operating according to current biological concepts but would be overdetermined by an animal's genetically and historically conditioned inner need and drive structure communicating itself psi-wise to the environment. Schematically, thus, given x number of possible prey within an area of potential contact with a needful (let us say, nursing) predator, the one that would respond to the "call" going out (we would have to assume some sort of centralized inter- and trans-specific organizing and control principle, which I'll discuss later) would be that which, for its own historically conditioned reasons, would have the greatest relative need-readiness at that moment, all other factors being equal, to cash itself in.

How would such a potential "need" arise? Quite apart from genetic variations which might in some form predispose toward the development of such a latent pattern, it can be shown experimentally that marked variations in individual animals' social behavior vis-à-vis other animals in respect to passivity and aggressiveness, as well as in respect to degrees of alertness, are the outcome of what in nature might be the accidents of the neonatal and nursing period — the mother's presence or absence at critical times, the amount of primal need satisfaction, the presence or absence of physically or psychologically induced special stresses or traumata, and so forth. One may presume, therefore, that there would be in any animal population a reservoir, constantly being fed by the springs of normally variable life experience, from which potential prey of varying relative "death need" valences could be recruited to meet the ecological requirements of a given time and place. This is not very different, up to a point, from a type of population "cropping" mechanism now known to ecologists.

An animal thus could fulfill in one instinctively triggered-off act the high-priority survival needs of a member of an ecologically competing species and at the same time the local population-limiting needs of its own species, the mechanism of which, as a matter of fact, is still not wholly satisfactorily explicable according to even the most ingenious post-Darwinian hypotheses. Animals on the roam would thus constitute something like a fleet of automobiles radio-dispatched through a series of automated central control boards. As roving vehicles, they would have relative freedom to cruise and a relative degree of exposure to "random" calls, all the while however remaining subject to the requirements of their district control centers operating hierarchically in interlacing systems with mutually geared feedback mechanisms.

The objection no doubt will be raised that once we introduce the notion of psi-mediated intercommunication at all it is difficult to leave room for randomness to operate anywhere, and that we would soon find ourselves compelled to conceive of everything bound together in a pervasive, essentially push-pull type of unconditionally fixed determinism. But I hardly need point out that this problem exists apart from psi. The main difference is that without psi or something of the sort we don't have even a plausible mechanism by which "randomness" — for which in any case we have no absolute concept and can conceive of only in a relative sense — can operate in the first place without going completely haywire. This is simply the other side of the coin that I tossed out in connection with probability theory. The point of pertinence here is that the psi-mediated system of intercommunication I sketched rather schematically above — and which may still be conceived of, if one prefers, as probabilistically regulated — is, whatever else its shortcomings, essentially no more complicated and certainly no more farfetched than the conventionally accepted system of natural selection and ecological adaptation, under which biologists sometimes have considerable difficulty in tracing out the means whereby the necessary information is conveyed between component parts of mutually interdependent systems. This difficulty is both unwittingly acknowledged and also puzzlingly glossed over by ecologists who sometimes invoke the concept of physiological homeostasis as a model of how buffered systems in nature work. But the one thing that physiologically balanced organisms have (apart from the indispensable factor of central nervous system organization and control, for which, I suspect, no concept less than some kind of overall regulating principle in nature will do as an equivalent) is an efficient neurohumoral means of interorgan and inter-system communication of information. The ultimate inadequacy of conventional ecological communication mechanisms, no matter how subtly spun out in terms of sensory signs, signals, releasers and what not, in matching the efficiency of physiological homeostatic systems is apt to be dealt with by the implied assumption that what is not quite apparent when a limited number of animal or animal-plant interrelationships are scrutinized closely for what it is that enables them to work together without breaking down and coming to a dead halt at critical junctures, will somehow get safely into the situation when the great number of the interrelationships that actually exist in nature start influencing each other, as if the sheer complexity of large numbers or the repetitive incantation of magical terms like "organismic" and "holistic," with perhaps a vague invocation of General Systems Theory as an ace in the hole, could miraculously introduce the missing harmony and control. But we are in fact left with the same unbridgeable gap between initial bottom layer randomness and top level overall law as we are in microphysics and genetics and indeed, as I have indicated, in probability theory itself.

THEORETICALLY, THUS, if something like psi — something we might term a "raw" or perhaps ur-psi principle — didn't exist to provide at least the basic framework for the necessary intercommunication between organisms and events in nature, it would have to be invented, which is in effect exactly what natural philosophers from Aristotle to Whitehead have done. Biologists and probability theorists have been able to get along to date simply because they unwittingly have been carrying on a kind of double-entry bookkeeping whereby assumptions which appear to be not on the books in actuality come in, like Ulysses clinging to the underside of his kine, masked by natural events that seem — one merely has to look at them with a slight squint — to provide no end of perfectly sufficient reasons why they should happen. And as to the dovetailing “motivational” patterns we have posited (one assumption would seem now almost necessarily to entail the other: if psi, then these, and vice versa) here too, perhaps, we can forgive the biologists for not having discerned such vectors in nature — on the fly, as it were — behind the predator-prey relationships which seem, like legalistically interpreted rape cases, to require no further explanation.

But we should not be so easy on ourselves. After all, we parapsychologists know — not from one crucial experiment or the outstanding work of one school, perhaps, but from the interlocking, mutually supportive data provided by hundreds of reporters and checkers and investigators working from a dozen different approaches — that there is such a thing as psi. It has been said that this work behind psi — several generations of it — often enough has been bumbling and naive (but often enough not, let it also be said). Very well, then. Call psi an assumption, an hypothesis, if you wish, and be as sophisticated and as cautious with it as you like. But at the same time we should leave ourselves enough slack to let our hypothesis out to go places and do things. We should deploy it forcefully and penetratingly, pushing it into bold powerful generalizations and not keep it merely the poor little rich kid who is not allowed to mix with the rest of science’s problem children. If we are timid with it we will wind up where the great biologist and philosopher Driesch did, on one hand exposing with great lucidity the gaps in the conventional biological picture, on the other writing a fine and thoughtful treatise on psychical research but at the same time hardly daring to bring together his two great areas of competence and insight.

PERHAPS I MIGHT begin right here, apropos this and other considerations touched on, by throwing into the ring a bold but yet-to-be-seen-how-powerful exploratory generalization which if applied ought to keep the psi hypothesis fairly busy outside the house for quite a spell. I shall term it the principle of confluence, according to which "psi" — some basic psi manifestation, that is, not just telepathy or PK, for example — like other great process-abstractions in nature (e.g., electromagnetic or, queer as this sounds, "the unconscious") is an integral component in all events (change of state of definable systems, let us say) and as such represented in some measure as a determinant of the final common pathways of these events. It seems to me, shamelessly anthropomorphizing, that nature hardly would be so foolish and wasteful as to contrive a great "force" and then not use it economically (in accordance with its well-tried and highly efficient principle of least action, perhaps) in the same manner a thrifty housewife, who never would allow a smidgin of anything to go to waste if she could help it, skillfully uses leftovers in every dish she throws together.

Now this is far from using the concept of psi as a theological blank check, nor is it becoming ensnared in the perennial — and perennially circular, it seems to me — controversy between so-called vitalism and so-called mechanism. It is merely taking our bird in hand — our knowledge of psi and its ways — and by virtue of our "declaration of relevance" (for this is what our principle amounts to) employing it tentatively but firmly wherever we see glossed-over anomalies or paradoxes, or taken-for-granted steps or connections that just don't hold together, in domains to which psychical research or its latter-day heir, parapsychology (a far too restrictive term, I am beginning to suspect) ordinarily is held to be not germane. Analysis and inference-making in order to make sense and achieve consistency, let it never be forgotten, is a kind of testing procedure, with definite possibilities for prediction. Instead of being hung up and discouraged because we cannot seem to conjure up the so-called repeatable experiment in parapsychology proper, perhaps this kind of forced analysis can lead to otherwise unanticipated observations in the field and other types of "predictions" where the assumption of psi can supply the missing link, just as data from other disciplines — for instance, those of psychoanalysis, biology, physics — can support inferences making for the resolution of some of the anomalies and paradoxes that surround the psi hypothesis.

Which brings us back to the paradox with which we began:

How is it, if a person has the wide range of cognitive capacities that are assumed under the psi hypothesis . . . and so forth? The question has been a productive one. By way of trying to close in on it we seem to have flushed some very fancy birds out of some very thorny bushes. A good question indeed.

ALVARO OBREGON'S WARNING

By Bert Groth

MANY YEARS before Alvaro Obregon reached eminence as president of Mexico (1920 to 1928) he and his older brother Alexander, who was 21 at the time, were working some 45 miles from their home at an isolated ranch called "Three Brothers," miles from the nearest telegraph station and without either telephone or regular mail service.

Each evening the two brothers customarily read aloud to each other. The night of Friday, August 27, 1897, about an hour after they had finished reading and gone to bed Alvaro, then 17, was awakened by his brother. In great excitement Alexander cried, "I have just seen my mother! She is dead and placed on a table."

Alvaro tried to calm him but Alexander insisted it wasn't just an ordinary dream. Alvaro tried to reassure him and finally got him to return to bed. Alvaro had hardly settled down when Alexander, even more agitated, awoke him again. He said he couldn't get rid of the dream; when he got back in bed he saw the tragic scene again.

Alvaro began to wonder if his brother was suffering from some mental ailment. But Alexander became calmer as they discussed the dream and Alvaro eventually asked an old servant at the ranch to get some medicine to ease his brother's mind. Alvaro himself moved to a room in another part of the house. He was not disturbed again but the dream still preyed on Alexander's mind.

The next night while Alvaro was reading aloud, Alexander stopped him and asked if he heard a galloping horse.

"Here comes a messenger and he is connected with what happened last night!" said Alexander.

The horse was reined up before the ranch and a man entered with a telegram for them which had been received at the telegraph station 18 miles away. The message, from their brothers at home, told them their mother had died the night before.

MY FRIEND, DR. VOOR

By W. C. Behen

I WAS DISCHARGED from the army after World War I in Coblenz, Germany, on September 19, 1919, to join the American Red Cross. As a doctor my first assignment was to help fight a typhus epidemic which had spread throughout Serbia. My headquarters would be Chuprya, about halfway between Belgrade and Nich.

My roommate and colleague there was Dr. John Voor of Louisville, Ky. In our living quarters we had to keep cans of oil under the bedposts so that the typhus-conveying lice couldn't crawl from the floor into our beds.

I left Dr. Voor in Chuprya in 1920 to return to the United States for postgraduate work at the University of Pennsylvania. During my second year in Philadelphia, I shared an apartment with Dr. Francis I. Fitch. Our housekeeper was a Mrs. Norton who with her daughter lived in an apartment below ours.

Her daughter often told us Mrs. Norton could go into trance and communicate with people in the next world. Dr. Fitch told her he would like to witness this and asked if it would be all right. The daughter agreed to call us the next time her mother went into trance.

One evening in the fall of 1922 the daughter came running to let us know that her mother was in a trance. We went immediately to the Norton apartment and waited until she came to so that we could ask her what she had seen.

While Mrs. Norton remained in trance I had a sudden distinct impression that someone had put his arm around my shoulders (a gesture typical of Dr. Voor when he was in a particularly happy mood). I looked around to see who was embracing me but there was no one.

When Mrs. Norton was herself again we urged her to tell us about her experience. Somewhat reluctantly she asked me if I knew anybody in

Do YOU have the dowsing gift?

Find out with the Vibrosopic DIVINING ROD

The Vibrosopic Divining Rod is an advanced design of instruments used by professional dowsers when they reportedly locate water, oil and valuable metals—including lost jewelry. Parapsychology views dowsing as a natural ability which is latent in many persons and instruments like the Vibrosopic Divining Rod are used merely to manifest or focus it.

Containing exclusive features of chambered handle and spring-jointed rod, the Vibrosopic Divining Rod sees use in a variety of fascinating party games. For example, the object may be to see whether one or more of a group can demonstrate dowsing talent by identifying one of several substances placed around a room from an unknown sample in the handle-chamber. Maybe you have the gift—and finding out can be great fun!

the next world who was six feet tall with blond hair combed straight back, a ruddy complexion, a large scar on his right cheek and one blue eye and one brown eye.

She had described Dr. John Voor perfectly. She told me he had been standing behind my chair the whole time she was in trance and he was smiling and appeared much interested in me.

I told her the description she had given fitted a man I knew but he was not dead. Nevertheless, I was so impressed by her description and the embrace I had felt that I immediately wrote to the American Red Cross in Washington to learn the whereabouts of Dr. Voor. In their reply I was told Dr. Voor had died in Churpyra from typhus fever at about the same time Mrs. Norton had seen him behind my chair. — Lansing, Mich.

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER'S MESSAGE

By Stella Lockyear

I WAS 11 years old when my great-grandmother Martha Bubb died in 1936. I had never seen a dead person before and I was very much frightened when the casket was brought into our home in Kansas City, Mo.

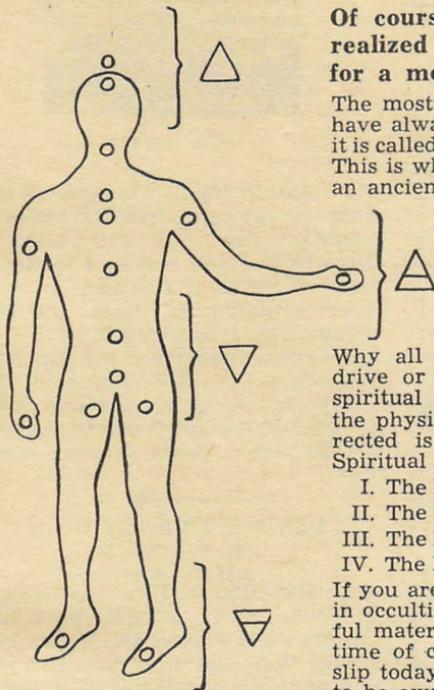

All the friends and relatives came and the rooms were full of people. It seems I was constantly pushed near the opened casket. I was so terrified I kept trying to get out of the living room and into the kitchen but Mother always shooed me back.

My grandmother Stella Richardson put some beads on my great-grandmother's hands and kissed her cold face. Then she turned to me and said, "Come and kiss her. This is the last time you will see her."

I was frightened just looking at her, let alone kissing her.

That evening my grandmother said, "Stella, you will have to sleep on the couch near the coffin."

Will you agree with us that a proper understanding of the sexual drive is of major importance in your spiritual life?

Of course it is—whether you have realized it or not. Think about this for a moment!

The most advanced teachers and initiates have always known that Sexual Magic, as it is called, is the Bridge to Spiritual Power. This is why Monastery of the Seven Rays, an ancient secret brotherhood of the Andes, covers this topic in the utmost detail. No other school has ever dared to reveal these secrets so openly. They have in the past been passed from Master to disciple orally with the highest vows of secrecy.

Why all of this? Because this powerful drive or energy within all of us has a spiritual side far more important than the physical side. This drive properly directed is the Foundation or Bridge to Spiritual Power.

- III. The Experimentation of Sexual Magic

Stella Lockyear

I began to cry so she sent me next door to my girl friend's house to spend the night. By nine o'clock we were in bed and just as I started to turn off the light I looked up to see Great-grandmother Bubb. She said, "Stella, don't be afraid!"

This only heightened my fear, for I knew she had died. But now after many years I realize she was trying to comfort me and prove to me there is life after death.—Santa Clara, Calif.

DEATH'S STRANGE LIGHT

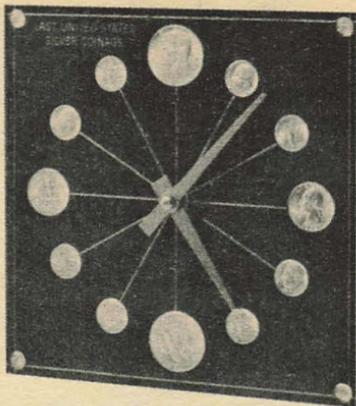

By Ann Young
 as told to Alice Hart

IN DECEMBER, 1945, we lived in Cooks, Mich., a small town in a remote rural area of the Upper Peninsula. We lived on a dead-end road and after a heavy snowfall it usually became impassable. That was the condition of the road on December 11, 1945.

We had all retired for the night when our two dogs set up a howl. I arose from bed, entered the living room and peered out the window facing the road. I saw a brilliant white light moving slowly down the road toward our house. I called my husband and children and we watched the light as it stopped at the entrance of our driveway, then began to move slowly but unwaveringly directly toward our house. It became brighter and did not seem to stop or diminish in any way as it passed from our view around the corner of the house.

We waited for a knock at the back door but none came. My husband took a lantern and searched the area around the house and driveway. He found no prints or tracks in the newly fallen snow.

When we returned to bed I was unable to sleep. I felt helpless and disturbed. What did the light mean?

On December 11, 1945, the early winter night shrouded the German countryside near Darmstadt. Through monotonously-falling snowflakes an army truck moved slowly over a winding icy road. Metal gasoline barrels, the truck's cargo, shivered and knocked against each other. As the long trailer crawled over the treacherous road, PFC Morton H. Young, my 30-year-old son, the driver, caught a glimpse of red and a row of perpendicular lights warning him of danger.

The truck moved on cautiously and suddenly with no warning a huge black shape loomed directly before his headlights. A crash of steel, then an explosion rent the silent night. In the conflagration that followed my soldier son died.

A few hours after his death when night had fallen in this country we saw the strange light. I believe it was the message that I was unable to read until one of Mort's friends told me the story of his accident. — Hobart, Ind.

long walks, always ending up at the local drugstore for ice cream sodas. To reach the drugstore they had to brave the heavy truck travel on 22nd Street at the intersection with Wood Street. Aunt Josie always took Alice's little hand tightly in her own to guide her safely across.

In April, 1925, Alice was 10 years old when Aunt Josie died suddenly. The next day Alice was sent to the drugstore to get some medicine for her little brother. When she reached the busy street she looked both ways, saw nothing coming and started across the street. When she was halfway across she felt a violent push against her back and found herself hurtling to the opposite curb. She was pushed with such force that she fell to her knees on the sidewalk.

A large truck, speeding around the corner, certainly would have crushed her if she had continued her normal progress across the street. She looked around to see who might have helped her but there was no one in sight. Who else could it be but Aunt Josie, getting her safely across the street that one last time? — Chicago, Ill.

"YOUR SISTER ON THE LINE"

By F. Reed Brown

ONE COLD dawn in 1942 when I was eight years old, I awakened to see someone moving alongside the large double bed I shared with my brother. I thought it was my mother at first. Dressed in a white flowing gown she was looking into the mirror and combing her hair. Then I realized that this woman's hair was auburn and my mother's hair was completely grey. My brother Whelker, now also aroused by our visitor, sat up and we watched her walk to the foot of the bed, look down at us, smile and then simply dematerialize.

At breakfast we told Mother what we had seen and with her help we concluded that our visitor must have

"I WAS DEPRESSED — I'd lost again. This guy joked that with $20 stakes he'd made $1516 profit, also $874 and $1082 other days. Then I found out he wasn't joking, he had PENCLIFF world's top race computer."

WHAT IS PENCLIFF?

The instrument has 6 predictors and a Master Director dial. You simply feed into the computer, age of horses, positions finished in last 6 races, weights etc. Then you add up the figures which appear on the predictors to make ratings. Higher the rating the better the horse is calculated to be by PENCLIFF. PERCENT OF WINS. Ron Hitchens first of all ran through the I.B.M. computer the results of 97,263 races to find out the best percent of wins possible with Pencliff. This was just under 47%. He then conceived the idea of feeding them in from an entirely different angle. To find out what computation brought the most PROFIT. Although it was lower—28%, the 'most winners' basis would have had to be approximately 5% higher to be as good from a PROFIT angle. The wins shown below in the panel are at principal tracks only, but PENCLIFF operates just as SUCCESSFULLY at ALL tracks everywhere.

INVENTED BY "ACCIDENT"

By Ron Hitchens. We were trapped in the engine room of my yacht the Titania. The hatch had jammed and although straining and hammering with every ounce of our strength we couldn't move it. It occurred to me that if we could radio, we could have called for help. Then I remembered that there were 12 other parts of the ship where we also could have been trapped, whereas from only one—the chart room where we had the radio—could we have called for assistance. Later, in thinking about another race computer, I remembered this incident. "12 places to radio from," I thought, "12 times the chance of safety, maybe 12 dials, and 12 TIMES the efficiency!" Experimenting on these lines I eventually found that the ideal number was 6 with 1 Master Director.

12 other Race Experts also contributed to the Pencliff invention, and Ron Hitchens gratefully acknowledges this, and for their many helpful suggestions throughout the years.

A GIANT I.B.M. COMPUTER

Is one of the main reasons why PENCLIFF is so successful. 97,263 races were fed into this amazing giant computer, and it actually individually examined all the entrants. Whereas 50 mathematicians working a 35 hour week would have taken over 3 years, this magnificent instrument had it all worked out in a total of 97 and one-half hours. The instrument was first placed on sale by us in April 1965. Since then the consistent wonderful results continue to delight not only us but thousands of satisfied operators.

INVENTED BY RON HITCHINGS, expert Handicapper with over 25 years of racing know-how. He has been actively engaged in horse race computer research for many years.

been the spirit of our great-grandmother who had died quite young.

About seven years passed and the incident was all but forgotten until one night Mother and I went to the Temple of Wisdom Spiritual Science Church in Baltimore, Md., where a visiting medium was to speak. When the medium, The Rev. Pearl Kerwin (then of Los Angeles), came to my mother, she said, "I want to speak to you for your sister in the spirit world."

Mother gulped and replied sheepishly, "I'm sorry but I don't have a sister in the spirit world."

The medium insisted she had mother's sister "on the line." Now rather indignant, Mother informed the medium that she was an only child.

"Lady, you may say you do not have a sister but she is here. I see her and I hear her. She looks like you except she may be perhaps 10 years younger and her hair is auburn. She tells me she materialized several years ago for your sons and that she was mistaken for a grandmother. She says she grew up in the spirit world having lived only a short time on the earth plane. She stresses that she did live and advises you to ask your mother to verify this message."

Immediately following the service we went directly to Grandmother Hooper's house. Mother asked, "Have I ever had a brother or sister?"

Grandmother, a proper and rather Victorian gentlewoman, seemed unresponsive. She didn't want to talk about it. However, when she realized Mother wouldn't give up until she had a definite yes or no. Grandmother replied:

"When you were about 10 I gave birth to a premature baby girl. She lived just long enough to be baptized — about 40 minutes — and then died."

CONVENTION CONTINUED

IN MY discussion of last August's convention of the American Association for Humanistic Psychology last month I skipped over one of the major panel discussions in the psychic area, a session devoted to discussing theory. To be precise, Dr. Lawrence LeShan presented his theory of the paranormal and others commented on it. Happily for those of you who missed the convention presentation, Dr. LeShan's treatise, Towards a General Theory of the Paranormal, Parapsychological Monograph No. 9, 112 pages, now is available from the Parapsychology Foundation, 29 West 57th St., New York, N.Y., for $3.00. Dr. LeShan, who is associated with the Rockland State Hospital in Orangeburg, N.Y., has subtitled his monograph "A Report on Work in Progress".

LeShan's theory actually is less an explanation than a description. He carefully studied the published writings of Mrs. Eileen Garrett, paying particular attention to those sections wherein she describes her subjective feelings while exercising her paranormal powers. He dubs the particular state of mind she enters at such times the Clairvoyant Individual Reality and finds that it differs from ordinary reality in four major ways: (1) in the clairvoyant state it is recognized that there is a better way of knowing than through the senses; (2) there is a fundamental unity and oneness of all things; (3) time is sensed as an illusion; (4) evil also is considered to be an illusion. LeShan points out that other sensitives have made similar observations concerning the paranormal state.

Next, LeShan tries to equate the clairvoyant's state with the mystic's view of reality. I found this the least persuasive part of his theory and was especially irritated by LeShan's efforts at "translating" into more comfortable ideas what the mystic actually reports. Concerning the statement—made nearly universally by mystics of all times and places—that "All is one," LeShan comments, "Taken literally, the statement turns out to be meaningless and therefore useless." Meaningless to whom? Useless for what purposes? I find LeShan's "translation" far less meaningful and less useful: "The mystic is searching for and perceiving new unities." He is able to equate mysticism with the paranormal state only by reducing mysticism to its lowest forms and inflating the paranormal to its highest.

Dr. Gardner Murphy, who also was present for LeShan's talk, spoke eloquently of the vast differences between the psychic and the mystic states.

PHYSICISTS CONCUR

IN THE MOST fascinating section of his treatise LeShan examines the findings of modern theoretical physics. Most laymen have little grasp of how far contemporary physicists have moved from the commonsense view of reality but LeShan provides quote after quote from such men as Oppenheimer, Eddington, Jeans, Reichenbach, Heisenberg and Margenau to illustrate how their statements echo the statements of the great mystics. Newtonian physics, which corresponds roughly to our everyday commonsense view of reality, now is seen to be only a special case of Einsteinian physics. And, LeShan argues, our normal sensory reality is merely a special case of clairvoyant reality.

The test of any theory, of course, is how well it fits the facts. The final portion of LeShan's argument is an exposition on how the special nature of the clairvoyant state explains many otherwise puzzling features of psychic phenomena. And he has a brief section on ways in which his theory may be tested.

At the convention session Dr. Stanley Krippner reported on an attempt to test one of LeShan's predictions based on his theory. LeShan had indicated that dreams in which the dreamer is an observer would be more likely to include paranormal material than dreams in which the dreamer is an active participant. When the extensive dream records obtained at Maimonides Hospital were examined with this in mind Dr. LeShan's prediction were found to be correct.

Admittedly, LeShan presented just the beginnings of a theory. He does not deal with physical phenomena at all. Indeed, what Dr. LeShan has done is provide a rather objective description of some of the basic presumptions of the spiritualist and the occultist. To those of you who have read The Unobstructed Universe, LeShan's material will seem rather elementary. However, LeShan has the advantage of the proper status and the prestigious backing of the Parapsychology Foundation so that at least a handful of parapsychologists must take him seriously, whereas Stewart Edward White was merely a writer and easily could be dismissed as a "dabbler in Spiritualism." Heaven forbid that a professional parapsychologist listen to anyone without the proper degrees!

PRO AND CON FROM CITY COLLEGE

ONE OF THE great advantages of a convention such as the one in Silver Spring, Md., is the opportunity to talk with persons doing important work in the field of parapsychology. I was able to talk, for example, with Dr. Gertrude Schmeidler of City College, New York, and thus clear up some of my questions about her recent book (Extra Sensory Perception, edited by Gertrude Schmeidler, Atherton Press, N.Y., 1969, 166 pages, $5.95 hardback, $2.95 paperback). She explained that the book is aimed at about college sophomore level and hopefully would be adopted as a text in psychology courses dealing with personality measures and the like. (Last August one school already was using it, even though the bulk of psychologists learn of new books through the reviews in professional journals and no such review had yet appeared.) Further, she explained, the rather broad title was the publisher's choice rather than her own, as she had focused pretty narrowly on personality variables and their effect on experimental ESP tests.

Most of the material in the volume, following a long introduction, is reprinted from the Journal of Parapsychology. One serious question is, why have this collection rather than simply assign students to read the original articles? On consideration, however, I began to see certain difficulties with the latter option. Not all college libraries would have copies of the Journal and few instructors would be knowledgeable enough to choose wisely the articles to be read. Another less obvious advantage is that Dr. Schmeidler has added brief comments at the conclusion of each article in the volume and I found her comments the most interesting material in the book. She writes with what I think of as good-natured brevity. Over the years I have known her I have been impressed by the way she avoids the petty backbiting so rampant in the psychic field. She is able to handle even the absurd extravagances of C.E.M. Hansel with grace and tact.

For the student wishing to get a quick cross section of modern laboratory parapsychology this collection is probably the best available on the market.

ART AND PRACTICE OF THE OCCULT Ophiel calls this his basic/basic book on the foundations of occult Knowledge for those who want to make real progress in understanding and working the forces that rule our Physical Cosmos.

This book is actually a self-study course in the practice of Magic. Ophiel shows you the Occult Way of seeing things—through the Qabalistic Tree of Life and its relationship to various combinations of the Elemental Forces. With this Occult Knowledge, you can analyze all the phenomena of this world and thus see things for what they really are!

Ophiel teaches you how to become a Gnostic—"one who knows"—and with this deeper knowledge comes Power over Nature.

ART AND PRACTICE OF ASTRAL PROJECTION

"Out-of-the-Body" travel—the most important Occult Technique you can learn—is the basis for developing the Power that every serious student seeks.

The practice of Astral Projection opens up sources of direct knowledge and experience—the real expansion of awareness—and enables you to penetrate the Inner Reality.

Ophiel teaches you not just one, but four different methods of Astral Projection so that you can try them all and decide which works best for you.

What you learn from this book and from your experiences on the Inner Planes give you valuable Occult Knowledge and Inner Perception. And this Knowledge is very practical, for you can only fully utilize the Physical Plane when you can control the Astral Plane phenomena! Illustrated. $4.95

ART AND PRACTICE OF GETTING MATERIAL THINGS THROUGH CREATIVE VISUALIZATION

Creative Visualization is the use of the Inner Mind to make things happen on the Physical Plane. It is an Occult Power that all students must master, and it is the technique that allows the acquirement of necessary material things so that you may prosper.

For the first time, this Occult Text comprehensively explains all the Ten Laws governing Creative Visualization. The Magical Work includes a Ritual using the Qabalistic Cross and Banishing and Invoking Pentagrams.

Ophiel has written this book for only one purpose—to show Occult Students how to develop and use their Creative Powers to enrich their lives.

Illustrated. $4.95

ART AND PRACTICE OF CLAIRVOYANCE

Everyone has Psychic-Occult Powers, but not everyone knows how to use them.

Clairvoyance is the extra sense that receives impressions from the Inner Planes in the form of feelings or symbolic pictures. You can learn to receive extraordinary amounts of knowledge through sources not connected with the usual Physical Plane senses.

In this book, Ophiel reveals the numerous secret methods of General, Special and Divine Clairvoyance; the semi-physical types of Clairvoyance such as crystal ball gazing; and physical Clairvoyance or Psychometry.

All Magic uses Clairvoyance—for how could you deal with an invisible future operation if you did not have some

A young psychologist in San Jose, Calif., is seriously considering founding a center like the College of Psychic Science in London. (I learned of this just a few days after writing my column bemoaning the fact that no such center exists in the United States.) He may be able to get some financial backing for the venture and has promised to send me word when the project is organized.

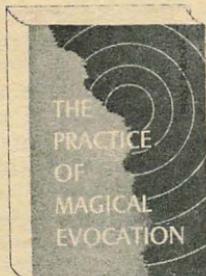

I was sorry my schedule did not permit me to stay in the Washington area a few days longer. Right after the close of the American Association for Humanistic Psychology meetings there was to be a symposium sponsored by the Society for the Study of Psychedelic Psychology with such persons as Ralph Metzner and Walter Houston Clark participating. The announcement mentioned that further information could be obtained from the Society c/o Dr. Ed Elkin, 1629 Columbia Rd., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. Aims of the Society were given as "furthering scientific and philosophical study of expanded consciousness and heightened awareness and . . . continuing the development of specific procedures and techniques for achieving the fullest realization of human potential."

Franz Bardon's unique second book on magic is now available in an English translation for the first time. It is a progress course for adepts only. (Beginners should start with his "Initiation Into Hermetics", a course of instruction in ten stages).

"The Practice of Magical Evocation" describes the little known subject of conjuratory magic—one of magic's darkest corners. It demonstrates that wonders and supernatural things exist only for humans deprived of the basic laws of nature—and thus incapable of penetrating into its supreme laws!

thor's arguments as to why she is important to all Christians. A psychologist would have pursued further Higgins' tentative admission that the Virgin assumed the role for pagans converted to Christianity that the Great White Goddess had fulfilled previously. But Paul is a Methodist minister, not a psychologist, and this book is a firm defense of traditional Christian doctrine. Not all readers will concur with Paul's views but those who have been privileged to meet him will testify to the sincerity with which he holds them and to the degree in which they are shown not merely in his words but in his life.

He presents his position with dignity and brevity and those interested in Christian theology will find this modest volume worthy of study.

THE PSYCHEDELIC SCENE

HIGH PRIEST by Timothy Leary, The New American Library, Inc., in association with The World Publishing Company, Cleveland, Ohio, 1968, 347 pages, illus., $7.95.

Timothy Leary invites his readers to "turn on, tune in and drop out."

"The turn-on," he suggests, "is God. All things are made from the turn-on and without Him is not anything made. In the turn-on is life, and life is the light of man. You tune in or bear witness to the Light, that all men might believe. And to tune in you must drop out . . . detach yourself tenderly, aesthetically, harmoniously from all that is a put-on fraud and do nothing but guard and glorify the Light."

Leary contends that traditional psychiatric methods are merely mind games, eccentric ego-building journeys on the part of psychologists, and that psychotherapy is an arduous, expensive, ineffective, unimaginative attempt to impose the mind of the doctor on the mind of the patient. As a remedy he advocates a "new" psychology encompassing the unfolding possibilities of mind-free consciousness and the liberating effect of spiritual rebirth that comes only through death of the mind. (He claims to have experienced some 400 death-rebirth trips since 1958, the first without drugs.)

The one-time Harvard psychotherapist considers himself now the High Priest of a revolutionary movement. It is his opinion that to middle-aged persons the use of drugs is synonymous with instant insanity but to most Americans under 25 the psychedelics mean ecstasy, sensual unfolding, religious fervor, revelation, illumination and contact with nature. This "expanding of consciousness" is known as the "trip."

Reading High Priest we join the author and his guides on 16 such trips and along the way learn something of his ideas on psychedelic yoga and psychedelic revolution. LSD to Timothy Leary stands for The League for Spiritual Discovery, a legally incorporated religion dedicated to the ancient sacred sequence of turning on, tuning in and dropping out. Its aim is to help recreate every man as God and every woman as Goddess. This book is the first of a four-volume account of the birth, structural growth, exile, return, persecution, redemption and flowering of the LSD religious cult. Among the parishioners we meet Aldous Huxley, Allen Ginsberg, Richard Alpert, and Susan and Jack, Leary's children.

NEW YORK—The Anti-Tobacco Center of America has just published a booklet which explains how 88,648 heavy smokers (of whom many are physicians) have stopped smoking without straining their will power. This booklet is available free of charge to smokers. All you need to do, to obtain it, is to send your name and address to The Anti-Tobacco Center of America, Dept. I have sought the testimony of psychologists, psychiatrists, physicians and many members of the LSD cult only to find controversy and conflict in relation to the merits of Leary's theories. I cannot concur; neither will I judge him. I only can go on knowing, ". . . THE SEEKERS: DRUGS AND THE NEW GENERATION by Jess Stearn, Doubleday and Co., Garden City, N.Y., 1969, 384 pages, $5.95.

The Seekers is a book about young people who use drugs, primarily the psychedelics, marijuana and LSD, but also narcotics and other types. Stearn spent five years in research, traveling to all parts of the country and visiting many of the places where drug-users congregate, such as Haight-Ashbury and Leary's Millbrook. The result is a series of dialogues between the author and a variety of interviewees: young drug-users, doctors and a few representatives of the Establishment. The discussions with drug-users generally are directed at the effect of drugs on their way of life with some emphasis on the sexual aspect.

Stearn's attitude throughout is anti-drug. In his view the drug-users are dropouts from life, young people with unexplored potential who have become failures by current standards and withdrawn from society. He finds them sexually promiscuous, predominantly homosexual and generally unclean about their persons and their abodes.

Their value system places love, sharing and personal freedom in opposition to work, education and material success. Stearn doesn't like these values but he does express

SCARABS—
Antiquity's Most Famous
GOOD-LUCK SYMBOL

For 2500 years this beetle was the world's most powerful symbol—conveying to its wearer the guarantee of good fortune in this life, and of rebirth after death.

This is a Scarabaeus sacer, the Scarab beetle. When ancient Egypt was in her glory, no man undertook a journey, no woman bore a child, and no soldier went into battle without a Scarab.

The Scarab was the symbol of the sun, which appears to die at sunset, only to be reborn at dawn. Thus the Scarab also became the symbol of resurrection—of life reborn.

The effectiveness of the Scarab was thought to be magnified if it was associated with a magic form such as a circle. Thus the Scarab was often fastened to a round base, just as this modern example is now embedded in a round disc.

The Venture Bookshop has just imported a limited quantity of authentic Scarabaeus sacer Scarabs which have been imbedded in hard, transparent discs to form permanent ornaments of rare distinction and meaning. Size is about 1 3/8-inch diameter—ideal for wear as an amulet.

sympathy with some anti-Establishment ideas of the younger generation (such as opposition to the Vietnam war).

The Seekers does not discuss those members of the younger generation who use such drugs as marijuana regularly without withdrawing from reality and society, nor does it mention cases of persons whom psychedelics have rewarded with insights they needed to become fully functioning without continued reliance on drugs.

The book reads like propaganda, heavy with loaded words. Every drug-user is portrayed as having something about him that is physically disgusting, while the nonusers all are healthy and beautiful.

Chapters on drug research make brief references to the beneficial uses of psychedelics while giving elaborate details on the detrimental effects. For example, findings of chromosomal damage due to drugs are reported in detail with emotional overtones. It is not stated that these same changes are brought about by many other substances such as artificial sweeteners and aspirin, and that these changes were investigated in the cells in the bloodstream, not in the reproductive organs.

The severest criticism of The Seekers is that it is poorly-written. It reads like an unedited assortment of interviews, with excessive repetition, so unstructured that the reader can start or end anywhere. Its errors in grammar and construction never should have survived proofreading.

Stearn speaks of drug-users as confused and sloppy, lacking judgment, creativity and a desire for accomplishment. One is tempted to apply these same criticism to his book.—Jane Myers.

MIND DRUGS, edited by Margaret O. Hyde, McGraw-Hill Book Company, New York, N.Y., 1968, 150 pages, $4.50.

From earliest times people have resorted to drugs to influence their mental and emotional states and to escape reality. Alcohol, for example, has been used since time immemorial to modify reality. Even the hallucinogens are not new. Psilocybin and peyote were used by the Aztec Indians centuries ago and cannabis, sometimes called Indian hemp, is thought to have been brought to Europe before 1500 B.C. It was introduced into the United States in 1920 as marijuana.

Some persons, with ample justification, call this the age of anxiety. The chronically anxious desire chronic comfort. It is little wonder there is an increase in the use of drugs which affect man's emotional life. The problem of drug abuse among youth has escalated to astronomical proportions in recent years and is compounded by the increasing availability of mind-affecting drugs. It is now apparent that more substances have a potential for abuse than previously had been acknowledged and the possibility exists that the number of such drugs will increase a hundred-fold over the next decade.

Mind Drugs contains articles by Margaret Hyde on alcohol and heroin; Dr. William McGlothlin, research psychologist, on marijuana; Dr. Duke Fisher, the neuropsychiatrist who established the clinic for "hippies" at Haight-Ashbury, on drug abuse and youth with emphasis on the effect of LSD; Drs. J. Martin Myers and Kenneth E. Appel, psychiatrists, on the who and why of drug use and dependency; Dr. Louise G. Richards, research social psychologist, on the relationship between drug abuse and social values; and Dr. Robert G. Clark, psychiatrist, on methods of "turning on" without resort to drugs—such as "trips" through transcendental meditation.

We don't have the final answers on the effect of LSD. Certainly there is

OTHER REVIEWS

THE MECHANISMS OF ASTRAL PROJECTION by Robert Crookall, Darshana International, Moradabad-19, India, 1969, 135 pages, $4.00.

Robert Crookall's latest volume is the ninth study by the eminent British scientist devoted to the phenomenon of astral projection. The actual text (66 of the 135 pages) takes the form of a rebuttal. As many parapsychologists know, one of the basic arguments against the evidence for astral projection is that the experience is merely an hallucination of a "body image," a phenomenon sometimes encountered with deranged persons. Of the many proponents of this generally naive theory Dr. Crookall has chosen one, Jean Lhermitte, a French physician, to debate in extenso.

To invalidate Lhermitte's theory (which was originally published in the British Medical Journal in 1951) one need only show that the human "double" has some degree of objectivity. Dr. Crookall presents over 50 points that are unanswerable by any subjective "body image" theory. Obviously, the fact that astral projectors have appeared as "apparitions of the living" and even have affected material objects (Sylvan Muldoon once was able to set a metronome in motion during a projection) immediately shatters Lhermitte's argument.

However, the most intriguing arguments against Lhermitte are the mechanistic phenomena of the out-of-the-body experience. If astral projection were only hallucination, Crookall argues, why do persons having the experience during illness or good health have a considerably different set of experiences on leaving and reentering the physical body than those caused by anaesthetics or shock? On this same line of reasoning why do the characteristics of astral projections of mediumistic persons differ from those of nonmediumistic persons? To illustrate, it is well known that persons having the experience often see a "silver cord" connecting the physical body and the astral body. Can "body image" explain why mediumistic persons see this cord connected to the solar plexus of the physical body while nonmediumistic persons see it connected to the head?

Hitherto most books on astral projection have been introspective studies—either autobiographical reports by habitual astral travelers or content analyses of collected spontaneous cases. Clearly it is time for adopting a more comprehensive line of study. And Dr. Crookall offers just this. If astral projection were a true phenomenon we should expect that the accounts of projectors should tally with observations made by clairvoyants and deathbed observers on what they have witnessed. To undertake such a task requires a wide knowledge of psychic literature and one must be awed by the incredible source references Dr. Crookall presents. He does prove that all these testimonies are concordant and he draws his proof from more than 150 sources.

Mechanisms is a complex book. Apart from its general thesis it presents a number of subordinate ideas which have value for psychological research: the relationship of astral projection to physical phenomena, "mystical" experiences and the question of life after death. Dr. Crookall shows that much we have deduced about astral projection tallies with data given in "spirit" teachings through such mediums as Mrs. Keeler and Cora Tappan when organized research was in its infancy!

Psychical research is a labyrinth of unsorted facts, observations and experiments. Dr. Crookall has done a masterful job of weaving them together and illustrating their evidential interrelationships. — D. Scott Rogo.

THE EDGAR CAYCE READER, under the editorship of Hugh Lynn Cayce, Coronet Communications, Inc., and Constellation International, New York, N.Y., 187 pages, $4.95.

This book contains so much of value that to get full benefit you may want to take notes, underline passages or do both. Many persons will reread it.

Paragraphs from Cayce's readings and extracts from his talks are included along with articles previously published in the A.R.E. Journal as samples of the research being done into the records of the 14,238 readings Cayce gave during his lifetime. Some chapters are written by qualified psychiatrists and medical doctors discussing mental, physical and spiritual subjects.

While some of the material has been discussed in greater detail in works previously written about Cayce, this book offers considerable new material and insights into LSD, telepathy, genetics, relationship with God, psychoanalysis, casting out fear, out-of-the-body travel and many other subjects.

Good philosophy, worth pondering and remembering, is contained here: "We always have with us an invisible audience for our acts—yes, even for every thought," Cayce said. Throughout his readings he reiterated that whatever a person has done or may do is permanently recorded. He told his listeners, "There is a purpose in life. It is not a haphazard thing," and added, "... we are to answer within our individual consciousness, 'Am I my brother's keeper?'" instead of asking only, "What does the world owe me?"

The Edgar Cayce Reader discusses how to pray correctly, how to develop ESP and telepathy, while making realistic appraisals regarding the use of hallucinogenic drugs. Holding that "each soul is a temple of the living God" the book explains why negative emotions and vibrations can influence the chemistry of the body and cause illnesses, including cancer. Cayce pointed out that on occasion emotions are residuals of past lives and his readings explain why fear aggravates bodily ills and prevents their healing.

Cayce did more than exhort on how to live righteously and harp on what's right and what's wrong. He repeatedly advised the need for a spiritual ideal and actions in accordance with that ideal. He urged people to use as a guide the wisdom that has been given mankind over the ages, to consider the body a holy thing—again, "a temple of God." He asked us to be patient, unhurried

Report FROM THE Readers

WHERE WAS DR. RHINE?

When I finished reading James Crenshaw's article, "ESP Comes of Age" (December, 1969, and January, 1970, FATE), I was dismayed. Where is there any mention of the greatest pioneer of them all—Dr. J. B. Rhine?

I realize Dr. Rhine has retired but the organization he founded, "The Foundation for Research on the Nature of Man," should not have been excluded from the UCLA Symposium. Did Rhine's group refuse to take part or weren't they invited?

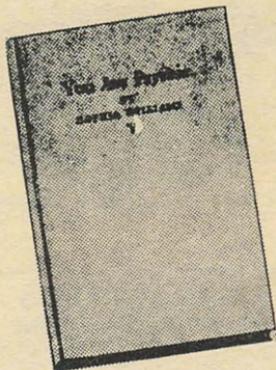

I too am thrilled at the progress parapsychology finally is making but let there be no mistake when plaudits are in order. The hard-core testing for ESP potentiality began at Duke University and continues today at the Durham parapsychology lab. And as the saying goes, "The hard work has all been done."

When we think of Salk we think of the discovery of polio vaccine. Rhine's name is synonymous with parapsychology. Although ESP has been in evidence since man first made his appearance it was Dr. Rhine and his dedicated staff who gave it an "air of respectability."—R. E. Goodman, Baltimore, Md.

THE AUTHOR REPLIES:

Dr. Rhine's pioneering work of course is recognized by all parapsy-

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. NELSON

Your September, 1968, issue contained an article entitled "How Astrology Helped Our Space Program" by Carl Payne Tobey. The author states that he "sat at the desk of John Nelson of RCA-Communications on Broad Street in lower Manhattan."

According to the October 24-31, 1969, edition of TV Guide (page A-6) "RCA personnel department has no record of a John Henry Nelson. . ." Spokesmen for RCA "were amused" at the idea that RCA uses astrology to predict magnetic storms.

Obviously someone is grossly mistaken as to the employment of John Nelson. I expect that FATE will examine RCA's denial of Nelson's work and discover who is feeding us a nice fat lie.

If it turns out that your article in FATE was incorrect or that Mr. Tobey was lying, I would expect an apology. If TV Guide or RCA is in error I would appreciate being informed.—Kenneth D. Kruse, Portland, Ore.

THE AUTHOR REPLIES:

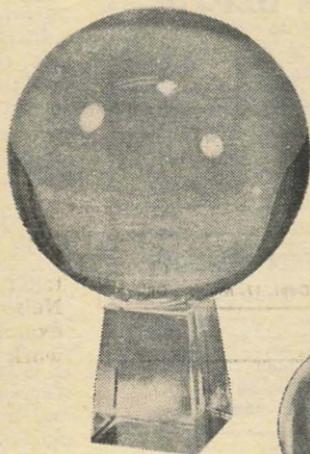

I seem to have made myself pretty clear when I stated that I sat at the desk of John H. Nelson of RCA-Communications, Inc., on Broad Street in lower Manhattan. RCA-Communications, Inc., the world's largest communications network, and Radio Corporation of America are two different corporations. Radio Corporation of America is not located on Broad Street in lower Manhattan, but John H. Nelson remains there at his desk where I last interviewed him. He is an engineer whose work has been written up in many technological journals over the last 20 years.

Tracking down the source of Mr. Kruse's misinformation I find that it stems from a letter written to TV Guide by Serena Ray wherein she fails to differentiate between the two companies and refers merely to "RCA." The Editor's Note in reply to the reader's letter (quoted in part by Mr. Kruse) shows that TV Guide inquired of the wrong personnel department.

Incidentally, my article in FATE was the first indication the public had that Russia was out of the race to put men on the moon. She is still out—and Americans have walked on the moon.—Carl Payne Tobey, Tucson, Ariz.

MORE THAN A PRODIGY?

The night of October 26, 1969, I saw a fascinating phenomenon on a Los Angeles TV channel. The nightly newscast presented a three-year-old Black girl who played the piano nearly perfectly. She had been playing, it was said, since the age of 16 months and now plays the works of the old masters unbelievably well although she never has had any training (in this life).

She can play a tune after hearing it only once and seems to know all the piano keys by some uncanny memory. Isn't this likely to be a case of reincarnation?—Wanda Lockwood, Bakersfield, Calif.

JESUS' LITTLE FLOCK

The December, 1969, issue of FATE carries a letter from E. L. Grosse of St. Louis, Mo., titled, "Setting the Record Straight."

Does he realize that most of the nations he mentions are heathen? The people of Turkey are the descendants of Esau and God told the prophet Obadiah that He was going to wipe the last one of them from the face of His earth. In rejecting the cross they reject Jesus Christ.

God even has placed "The Southern Cross" in the heavens. Does Mr. Grosse doubt His handiwork?

It's no wonder Jesus spoke of his own as a "little flock." Among the many millions who didn't choose to belong to that little flock there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. — A. M. Sanders, Charlotte, N.C.

* * *

The cross is a symbol of man's progression. This oldest of earth's symbols is emblazoned across the heavens, which were man's first Bible. It is formed by four cardinal signs of the zodiac, the vertical bars by Cancer to the north and Capricorn to the south and the horizontal bars formed by Aries to the east and Libra to the west.

The cross has been an object of reverence in primitive tribes and among highly advanced nations. The Tau Cross was sacred to the Hebrews. The cross was sacred in China, Persia and India and among North and South American Indians. The Druid temples in Ireland and Scotland were cruciform.

With these facts in mind I hardly believe Mr. Grosse has "set the record straight." — Mrs. F. B. Cailhouette, Blanding, Utah.

* * *

In my opinion Mr. Grosse's research into the history of the cross has been very shallow. The signs of the cross found in Egypt date back 2,000 years before Christ. Ancient fraternal orders, some having nothing to do with religion, used the symbol of the cross long before the Christian era. Even the swastika, a form of the cross, was a sacred symbol for thousands of years until the Nazis desecrated it.

Not all religious dogma is sound but it is less dangerous than unyielding ignorance and a closed unquestioning mind.—Lee Mills, Tuma-cacori, Ariz.

* * *

Why should anyone get shook up over a symbol? True, Christians are a minority group. But it is also true that no real Christian can help being humble and loving. The cross represents these two beautiful human attributes — humility and love.

"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." — I John 4:10.

"And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." — Philippians 2:8.

Someday Christians may have to go underground and use again the symbol of the fish. But in the meantime let's consider "The Golden Rule" (page 98, September, 1969, FATE) in Christianity, Confucianism, Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam, Sikhism, Judaism, Jainism, Zoroastrianism and Taoism. What a wonderful world this would be if The Golden Rule prevailed. — Mrs. A. C. Wohlgenuth, Mendham, N.J.

THE TRUE POWER

In December, 1969, FATE appears Mrs. Leona Mills' letter, "The Power of the Word."

Please print this in answer to her plea for help:

The Bible, God's Holy Word, was put here for all to use and enjoy and this hocus-pocus about passing the word from man to woman to man to woman is baloney.

The Lord said some persons will try to twist the meaning of the Scriptures to suit their own ideas. This male to female stuff is just that. All we need is faith. If we have faith the size of a mustard seed we can move mountains. — Ruby L. Mitchell, Houston, Tex.

PROOF FOR MEDIUMS

What information I have been able to find on the voice spectrogram or voiceprint leads be to wonder if any attempts have been made to identify or record the voices that come to mediums from the spirit world.

Consider the possibilities. We have recordings of voices of many persons who are now dead. Mediums claim they can speak with the deceased, A voiceprint might verify this claim.

Obviously, the major hindrance to exploring voiceprints in this connection is the expense of the equipment involved and the need for trained technicians. As expensive as it might be, it would be more rewarding to the welfare of man than space travel — just as it would be far cheaper and more rewarding to irrigate and cultivate the deserts of the earth than to attempt to colonize the moon. — Merritt Neulin, Hellertown, Pa.

THE EGYPTIAN CLOCK

The October, 1969, FATE carried the story by Louise Riotte titled "The Clock that Chimed But Never Ran." The story probably has had more far-reaching significance than you realize.

After I read the story and commented on it my children wanted to read it. It had such impact on them that they took it to school and reported on it in their "special subjects" classes. I am pleased to say they received special commendations for their reports.

For a number of years I have been an adult advisor to the Sons of the American Legion and these boys too have taken an interest in Mrs. Riotte's story and are preparing a project based on it.

I have written to Mrs. Riotte and received a number of informative letters from her. I have learned she

BLATANT ERRORS

On page 61 of the December, 1969, FATE, a short article titled "Our Earth Grows Larger" contains a couple of blatant errors.

First, "The red shifts of the light rays coming from galaxies millions of light-years distant and increasing with the distances may be compared, by analogy, to our red sunsets. . . ." There is no analogy. In the red shift of light coming from distant galaxies the spectral lines of elements are shifted slightly toward the red end of the spectrum. We see red sunsets simply because the longer wavelength of red can penetrate the dust and haze more readily than shorter wavelengths in the visible spectrum.

Second, "The red light rays have longer wavelengths and travel faster than the violet and blue. . . ." They do not travel faster. All electromagnetic radiation travels at the same speed in vacuum or air—that is, at the speed of light or about 330,000 miles a second.

I think an article such as this should be checked a little more carefully for scientific accuracy before reaching print.—Paul A. Smith, Chicago, Ill.

KNOWING THE TERRITORY

In a letter in your November, 1969, issue, John Bessor states, ". . . he respects the right of any ghost to remain where he wishes . . ." and he also implies he never has been in a haunted house.

I suggest he live in one before making statements concerning a subject on which he doesn't have firsthand knowledge.

I have lived in haunted houses and it can be very unpleasant. Some ghosts are "good" and others are hateful. The spirits of those who had mental problems in this life retain these same mental attitudes after death.

These souls need help to get to the other side and a new life, for they are bound here for any one of a number of reasons: (1) They can't accept the fact they are dead. (2) No one met them at the portal of death and they don't know where to go. (3) And some are just too ornery to leave.—Mrs. Robert Glover, Blue Lake, Calif.

THE SILENT WARNING

I have learned never to ignore that silent voice of warning. Driving to Kansas last fall, I approached an intersection marked by an amber flasher light. Something said to me, "Don't proceed." I stopped—and a motorist ran the red flasher light and crossed in front of me. On my return journey I stopped at a light and when it turned green, again that little voice said, "Don't go." I hesitated and another motorist made a left turn in front of me, my car being hidden from her view by a large truck on my left.

But my friend has had more experiences like this. She heard knocks on her door, then on her desk and when she retired she had terrible visions. The final happening was when she wakened she saw her deceased husband sitting at the foot of her bed. He said, "Don't be upset. I'll take care of you." She was alarmed by these manifestations and wrote to ask my opinion. I told her that from my experience, a death or serious illness was presaged.

About a week later she wrote to say two women friends had asked her to accompany them on a trip. As the day of departure came near she felt impelled to decline and did so. Later she learned that the two women had a terrible accident and both were in a hospital. Her next letter to me brought the news that she had attended the funeral of one of those women and visited the other in the hospital, where she was still on the critical list these many weeks later. She told me she had declined to go on the trip because of my interpretation of the manifestations. — Fern Canright, Westland, Mich.

PSYCHIC STUDY

I am making a study of natural psychics and I would like to hear from persons who have spontaneous psychic experiences.

I am interested in the psychic first and his or her experiences second. I believe the natural psychic has a tremendous value to offer society and I propose to form a central bureau to preserve their experiences and their essays on what they think on the subject of psychic phenomena.

I am a natural psychic myself (I do not use cards, crystal balls or any aids) and I am in a position to appreciate the barriers natural psychics construct around themselves.

A person who may have had only one or two spontaneous experiences may be called a "natural psychic." I would like to hear from anyone who believes he or she belongs in this category. I will send them details on my plans and convince them I have no ulterior motives. I believe the real ESP breakthrough will come from the natural psychics and not the parapsychologists. — Evelyn McKeever, 601 S. Vermont Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90005.

SEARCH FOR NEW PSYCHICS

My recent conversation with the noted Washington, D.C., psychiatrist and neurologist, Dr. F. Regis Riesenman, concerned an important new program which we believe FATE readers will be interested in.

Dr. Riesenman has been instrumental in getting several well-known psychics—Peter Hurkos and Jeane Dixon, for example—to work with various police departments in solving crimes and in locating missing persons.

Dr. Riesenman feels that the load placed on the well-known psychics makes it imperative that new psychics be located. FATE readers who have been involved in such work or who consider themselves sensitives or psychics are asked to send a complete résumé of their backgrounds with full detail as to their clairvoyant abilities.

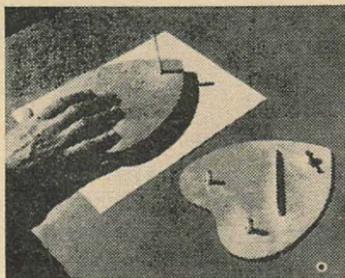

Applicants will be screened and those who qualify will be so informed by Dr. Riesenman. Any FATE reader who would like a brief history of Dr. Riesenman's work with psychics as "crime-busters" may have it by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to our society.—Timothy Green Beckley, Director, Extrasensory and Supernatural Phenomena Research, 3 Courtland St., New Brunswick, N. J. 08901.

IS MAN TO HAVE GILLS?

Recently I read that it would be scientifically impossible for an intelligent being to withstand the pressure exerted in the observed flying antics of UFOs: right-angle turns, sudden stops, abrupt reversal of direction and other unconventional gyrations, all during terrific acceleration.

But now comes evidence that liquid breathing animals have been found to survive acceleration forces up to 10,000 G's and that future astronauts, breathing liquids during takeoff, might be able to survive the lung-crushing acceleration needed to escape from large planets such as Jupiter. Is it possible that UFOs are manned by intelligent beings breathing some type of liquid solution? —Harold H. Griffin, Tulsa, Okla.

PROVE YOUR PSYCHIC POWERS WITH A PLANCHETTE!

THE PLANCHETTE IS USED AS A MECHANICAL MEANS FOR AUTOMATIC WRITING. IT AIDS MANIFESTATIONS WHICH HAVE NO OTHER WAY OF BECOMING CONCRETE.

Successful experimenters report finding the Planchette a highly effective aid to automatic writing and say they prefer it to any other method. They particularly find it much faster than the Ouija Board, which is used to spell out letters one by one. The Planchette is especially favored by those who prefer to work in meditative solitude. Our authentic Planchette, about six inches in length, is beautifully hand-crafted of smooth wood and given a high lustre with a wood-resin polish.

HOW THE PLANCHETTE WORKS:

Specially-fitted pencil forms one leg of planchette, the other two rolling free on ball bearings. These ball bearings permit the slightest indication of movement to take effect, the tiniest wisp of pressure transmitted through your hand. Only a superior product, an authentic psychic appliance, could have this expensive ballbearing feature.

Complete instructions for use of the planchette, as well as for its care and protection, are included with this advanced psychic instrument.

WHAT HAS FATE IN STORE FOR YOU?

... A chance to explore the unknown ... truths you find nowhere else ... articles and stories to fire your imagination—that's what FATE has in store for you. Here is Editor Mary Fuller's report on stories planned for future issues:

∞ Robert Crookall, psychologist, botanist, geologist and pioneering psychical researcher, marshals the evidence to show that astral projections, recorded since the dawn of civilization, are supremely important to us all—as evidence of survival.

∞ "To everything there is a season ... a time to plant and a time to pluck up that which is planted." Let the moon guide you, says Louise Riotte, to fruitful gardening.

∞ In the Himalayan foothills the Indian "devtias" dance—and heal. Rajendra Pathak has studied these fire-walking deities for many years but has no explanation for their incredible powers.

∞ Dr. Milan Ryzl, Czech physicist, chemist and parapsychologist, has conducted long-term experimentation to determine the value of hypnosis in inducing ESP. Brad Steiger reports in detail the methods and successes of this unique research.

MARY MARGARET FULLER

Each month FATE publishes more than 40,000 words of true articles on the strange, the unusual, the unknown. You can read such stories only in FATE because FATE is the only magazine of its kind in the world!

YOU MAY HAVE LIVED ON EARTH BEFORE!

New places, or people you pass in the street, may seem oddly familiar to you. Have you known them in a previous life?

You wonder why you are living on earth to-day and for what purpose you are here. Certain secrets of life and mental development cannot be divulged indiscriminately. If you sincerely feel the need for instruction in the use of your higher creative endowment, you have reached the stage where the Rosicrucian teachings will be of practical value to you in your everyday life. Learn how to quietly impress your personality on others, to better your business and social position.

Use your own naturally endowed powers to achieve results you now think unattainable in your present state of untrained and undirected endeavour. Simple Rosicrucian teachings enable intelligent men and women to soar to new heights of achievement, new freedom, new contentment in life.

Devoted to the attainment of the true Brotherhood of Mankind, The Rosicrucians are a Non-Religious; Non-Political, Non-Profit Making Fraternity.

You are invited, though not urged, to write for the free 32 page book—"The Mastery of Life," which has been written to give readers an outline of the world-wide scope and history of this non-commercial fraternity.

This invitation is not to be taken as an assurance that every applicant receiving "The Mastery of Life" will be approved for membership by the Dean of Students.
