sense. Rather he should be likened to those occult magicians of the Middle Ages who performed such astounding feats demonstrating the apparent power of mind over matter that they generally were forced to work in secret lest the authorities accuse them of being in league with the devil.

Uri Geller does not acknowledge the power of the devil nor any other nether force. He says such power as he has comes from God and must be used for good. This is why he cooperates with scientists trying to help them unlock the secrets of alchemical laws that may change our concept of the nature of matter and of the universe . . .

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

Nineteenth-Century German scientist Hermann Ludwig Ferdinand von Helmholtz said, "Neither the testimony of all the Fellows of the Royal Society, nor the evidence of my own senses, could lead me to believe in the transmission of thoughts from one person to another independently of the recognized channels of sensation. It is clearly impossible."

EVERY ONCE in a while a portion of this column is devoted to the topics of skepticism and the nature of reality. Today I desire to compare the views of one Owen Rachleff, painter, playwright and religion teacher at New York University, to a marvelous cartoon published by the old Life Magazine in 1915.

The cartoon, reproduced on a following page, shows that some of the romantic searches during our 25 years of publication still are romantic searches; but many others have reached a solution — some of them long since.

The 1915 cartoonist pictures the "Reality Club" as a castle with high walls and formidable gates where all manner of strange ideas are seeking entrance. If FATE had been published back in 1915 many of these subjects would have made articles for our pages. Others, like moon landings today, would have been almost old hat even then.

Listed as recently admitted to the "Reality Club" in 1915 are Mr. Aeroplane, Mr. Radium, Herr X-Ray, Mr. Dreadnaught, Mr. Automobile, Mr. Phonograph, Mr. Wireless, Mr. Telephone, Mr. North Pole (?), and Mr. Spineless Cactus. Up for election were Mrs. Woman's Suffrage, Mr. Panama Canal, Mr. Color Photography, Mr. South Pole. All these, of course, have since joined the club, along with many far more sophisticated scientific and tech-

MIRACLE MAN of JAPAN

The life and work of Masaharu Taniguchi, one of the most influential spiritual leaders of our times.

Here is a fascinating story of a world teacher and his far-reaching ministry. Dr. Masaharu Taniguchi founded Seicho-No-Ie, (The Home of Infinite Life, Wisdom and Abundance) over 40 years ago and today the membership exceeds three million. There is a reason for this—he teaches that man is a spiritual being, therefore, it is natural for one to enjoy health, fulfillment and spiritual insight.

Miracle Man of Japan, by Roy Eugene Davis, is a full-length biographical account of Dr. Taniguchi's life, his teaching (including healing and meditation) and the global impact of an inspired consciousness.

nological developments. The cartoonist had a bit of fun announcing that Mr. Zeppelin Dirigible was "suspended for conduct detrimental to reputation of club"—since Zeppelins were that moment bombing Britain.

Clamoring for admission were Plan for Signaling Mars, Haunted House, Fourth Dimension, Japanese War Scare, and then as now, Captain Kidd's Treasure, Fountain of Youth, A Sure Win Betting System, Philosopher's Stone, Gold from the Sea, Perpetual Motion, the Hoop Snake, and the Shakespeare-Bacon Cryptograms.

DEBUNKING THE FUTURE

IT IS fascinating to see how the mad dreams of 1915 have since been admitted to the Reality Club. Those that have not have been pretty well dismissed. Today few people are looking for Captain Kidd's treasure, for the Philosopher's Stone or a Perpetual Motion Machine. Although we must admit millions still hope for the Sure Win Betting System no one takes seriously such myths as the Hoop Snake.

So now let us compare this cartoon with the views of Owen Rachleff who recently was interviewed by Phillip Nobile of the Gannett News Service. Rachleff regards himself as a "psychic

Here is a book as complex and individual as you are. It's not light reading because it's your life, your astral biography, from the details of your inner feelings to your outermost ambitions.

Sun-Moon polarity, as the connection between conscious drives and unconscious feelings, is discussed at great length.

The ascending sign and its rulership position is interpreted as your personality, as your approach to life. Each house of the zodiac is described in terms of planets, rulerships and aspects.

This is not a vague report based on generalities. From your exact time, day, year and place of birth our IBM 370-155 sorts out 24,000,000 bits of astrological information. The result is a 12,000 word personal biography revealing secrets that even your closest friends would not dare talk about.

How is this possible? An astrologer does basically the same thing, but it takes longer and costs more. The computer is simply a memory bank. Only the information that applies to you and only you is drawn from the bank.

All this is yours for only $10. It's the best buy there is in computerized horoscopes. Plus a money back guarantee if your Astral Portrait isn't what you expected.

Think of it as a reference book, to be studied from time to time. We've got the best available, anywhere, at anytime...and at any price.

detective," according to Nobile, and spends a great deal of his time debunking everything occult.

According to Webster the word occult means "not revealed; secret; abstruse, mysterious; not able to be seen or detected; concealed; of or relating to supernatural agencies, their effects and knowledge of them."

Some proselytizers seek to convert people to beliefs in religion, science and the like, but Owen Rachleff tries to persuade them away from the occult. He says occultists "are inhibited by ancient, ignorant and unscientific ideas." He takes off specifically on astrology, palmistry and precognition.

He concludes, "I have come to the following deduction: Psychic events invariably happen to those who believe in psychic events. As the skeptical Sigmund Freud observed, 'All my life I've waited for the spirits to contact me, but they never have.'"

"ANCIENT AND IGNORANT"

RACHLEFF'S conclusion can be reversed: "Psychic events invariably do not happen to those who do not believe in psychic events."

And he distorts Freud's view. Freud clearly had telepathic experiences. Were these "occult"?

Would Rachleff debunk them?

As modern man makes his painful way toward understanding this complex world he has come to distrust increasingly the sterile rationalism of men like Rachleff. Man need not believe in hoop snakes to conclude that there may be something to those "ancient, ignorant and unscientific ideas." Carl Jung saw in these forms of archetypal behavior a deep and meaningful reality.

If Rachleff's viewpoint were universally accepted what would become of parapsychological research? What would happen to psychosomatic medicine and the more advanced views of healing? To acupuncture, and other esoteric therapies? To electrical field research which has shown us auras surrounding living things?

When Simon Newcomb, the greatest American astronomer of the 19th Century, proved the airplane was impossible he was only presaging the skeptics who knew man never would walk on the surface of the moon.

In some ways Life's 1915 cartoonist had the wrong concept. Perhaps "haunted houses" never will be accepted into the Reality Club in exactly the sense he intended but many psychical researchers are convinced something can haunt a house, although it may not be a ghost in the traditional sense. And it appears that science is undermining the very walls of the Reality Club, as visualized in 1915, so the strange ideas which come to knock on the gates may find no gates remaining because our concepts of reality have changed so much in the past 58 years.

And it is important to understand that they may change even more in the next 58 years. Who and what will be in the reality club in 2031? Alas, we ourselves will not know unless someone discovers that Fountain of Youth — fast.

EARLY SEAFARERS

WE HAVE read serious essays proving prehistoric man could not have journeyed across the oceans — although it is well known the Polynesians did it regularly in open canoes. When we pointed this out to one authority he replied, well, he was talking about the Mediterranean peoples and, given what he knew about their ships, they couldn't possibly have crossed the Atlantic. We replied that the Phoenicians certainly had circumnavigated Africa and obviously had used certain Spanish ports to embark for Britain, the Canaries and points unknown.

Now Dr. Thomas W. Jacobsen of Indiana University reports unmistakable evidence that ancient residents of Greece were sailing the Aegean at least 9,000 years ago — more than 1,000 years earlier than was previously believed.

Jacobsen, with archaeological trainees from the University of Pennsylvania, draws his conclusions from excavations in Franchthi Cave, the largest cave in Greece, which was occupied by humans without interruption between 20,000 B.C. and 3,000 B.C.

The discovery of obsidian tools is one proof that residents of Franchthi were seafarers or at least traded with seafarers because tests show the obsidian came from the island of Melos, 75 miles southeast and then uninhabited. The layers of earth in which the obsidian was found are dated to 7,500 to 7,000 B.C. Additional evidence exists in the fish bones found at Franchthi. For millennia the fish eaten at Franchthi had small bones; then suddenly the size of the fish bones changed — they had to come from large fish which must have been caught by deep-sea fishermen.

The excavations at Franchthi show the life of prehistoric man in great detail. We learn that between 20,000 B.C. and 9,000 to 8,500 B.C. Greece had a steppe-like climate caused by the ice age; horses and wild goats thrived; but around 9,000 B.C. the climate changed to become one of damp woodlands. Then many red deer lived there while the horses and wild goats became extinct. The Franchthi cavemen did some fishing and ate berries and nuts but apparently did not domesticate either animals or plants. Then there was another sudden change. About 6,500 to 6,000 B.C. the hunters, fishermen and food gatherers were replaced by shepherds and farmers who came upon the scene fully trained — there is no sign of a culture being evolved. Pottery appeared. New types of tools were used. Cyprus, Crete, and the eastern seaboard of Greece were populated for the first time. History began!

NEWEST THEORY OF MAN'S ORIGIN

THEORIES of man's origin are being upset by discoveries in Border Cave, between Swaziland and Natal in Africa. Here anthropologists Adrian Boshier and Peter Beaumont have unearthed strong evidence that modern man existed on earth at least 100,000 years ago.

It generally has been believed that modern man appeared on the scene about 35,000 years ago, displacing Neanderthal man. And he supposedly appeared in Europe — not in Africa. But at least 300,000 artifacts and charred animal bones, some from creatures long extinct, have been dug up in Border Cave.

Arrowheads have been uncovered from strata that has to be more than 50,000 years old, while the earliest arrows in Europe date back only to 15,000 B.C.

Heretofore, archaeologists and paleontologists generally agreed man probably originated in southeast Asia and drifted westward into the Middle East and Europe. But this idea seems pretty well destroyed by the work of Prof. Raymond Dart and Louis and Mary Leakey who found manlike creatures lived in Africa at least two million years ago.

Now added to these findings, says Ronald Schiller in the Chicago Sun-Times, are the discoveries in Border Cave that show Homo sapiens sapiens, our own species, lived and thrived in Africa 65,000 years before he was known in Europe. Therefore, for the time being at least, our ancestors must be thought of as coming from Africa, and not from Asia.

Why, then, did Africa not keep pace? The reasons are probably multiple, including historical and cultural accidents, but it is theorized that those humans who migrated north were forced to cope with the harsh climate of the ice ages, and then to deal with a variable climate, to domesticate animals and crops, to trade.

Meanwhile the Sahara dried up and formed a cultural barrier to fresh ideas and technology

FOOTNOTE TO ATLANTIS

WE RECENTLY reported that the Spanish government had blown the whistle on Maxine Asher's much publicized expedition to find and photograph Atlantis beneath the waters off Cadiz, Spain. Mrs. Asher, on the staff of Pepperdine University, had gathered together a group of 40 persons, mostly students, who each paid $2,800 to follow psychic clues which she believed would lead to Atlantis. Then the Spanish navy issued subpoenas for Mrs. Asher and others, who they said had dived in violation of their orders.

Stewart Slavin, one of the expedition scuba divers, who turns out to have been a vacationing UPI reporter from Los Angeles, tells what really happened:

Mrs. Asher called Slavin away from his dinner in Cadiz, Spain, and said, "Stewart, you wouldn't believe it, Atlantis is only two miles off the coast — I know exactly where it is."

She gave Slavin a map and he and two other divers rented a small cabin cruiser and searched the sea bottom where Mrs. Asher had indicated. They found a few seashells and some fish. Slavin asked their Spanish skipper if he knew of a place where there were rocks on the bottom. He took them a mile closer to shore where, in about 30 feet of water, they found broken pieces of a Roman column but no Atlantis.

The next day the AMRA (Ancient Mediterranean Research Association whose leader is Mrs. Asher) issued a news release stating that "Three scuba divers have found traces of what is believed to be the lost continent of Atlantis . . . about 16 miles offshore."

It was after this the subpoenas were issued and the entire expedition moved to Dublin, Ireland. Mr. Slavin says he returned to New York with $10 in his pocket.

So endeth that particular search for Atlantis.

predict earthquakes. Now some clues have been discovered in Hawaii which might at least give a few hours' warning of such impending disasters. The only problem is, the men who discovered the warning effect have no idea why it took place.

Last April 26 an earthquake centered offshore about 12 miles northeast of Hilo and an estimated 35 miles deep, registering 6.2 on the Richter scale—a reading nearly identical with that which destroyed Managua, Nicaragua, recently.

About an hour before the quake occurred, according to Dr. Augustine S. Furumoto of the University of Hawaii, the radio wave-reflecting layer of the ionosphere some 50 miles above Oahu suddenly disappeared and did not reflect radio waves sent up from the ground. Also, Furumoto told Associated Press reporter Frank Carey, the Navy's Omega Navigational System, a sophisticated system of long wave radio signals which help ship navigation, suddenly began drifting, "and not making any sense."

Immediately after the quake the ionosphere again began reflecting and the Omega system, which reached its maximum drift at the time of the quake, began to recover.

These clues were an unexpected outgrowth of university

HUNTING HELICE

IN 373 B. C. a tidal wave and earthquake destroyed the thriving Greek city of Helice. The site sank beneath the waters and its exact location is not known but Greek and American archaeologists have hunted it seriously for the past 10 years.

Its discovery now is believed near. Calculations based on old accounts suggest it must lie within a half mile stretch between the mouths of the Rivers Selinus and Cerynites. Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, Director General of Antiquities in Greece, says if it is found it can be one of the most exciting archaeological discoveries in history because it is believed the disaster was so sudden that no one had a chance to escape. For the first time we might have a complete picture of city life during Greece's Golden Age.

Pausanias, the Roman traveler, spotted traces of the city on the seabed centuries ago, and 500 years earlier fishermen com-

ATLANTIS, MOTHER OF EMPIRES

by Robert B. Stacy-Judd

The author, who personally explored the Mayan ruins in the Yucatan, gives a masterful presentation of his theory that the Mayas and other peoples of South America and Africa were descendants of the inhabitants of Atlantis who fled when that island-continent sank into the Atlantic. This important volume has been out of print for over ten years, and is now again available in a limited-edition reprint. Profusely illustrated from the plates and engravings of the original edition.

THE EARTH SLOWS

THE ROTATION of the earth—and hence the length of the day—varies by milliseconds over a period of years. The speed of the earth's spin slows and then regains its former speed for reasons not understood. Overall, however, scientists say the earth is slowing up a thousandth of a second a century. If this is true, then in a million years the average day (the time it takes the earth to make a complete turn) will become 10 seconds longer. In a billion years it will become more than two hours and 45 minutes longer.

Surprisingly, during last year's giant sun storm which we mentioned in this column, the speed of rotation slowed more than 10 times as much as would have been expected during that season. The storm erupted August 4, 1972, and by August 8 the length of the day had increased. A few days later, however, the earth settled back to its normal rate of spin.

Scientists wonder not only how the sun storm could alter the rotation of the earth but what made it speed up again.

SYNCHRONICITY

NASA HAS sent all those expeditions to the moon hoping they would find ancient rocks that would give clues to the origins of the moon, the earth, and the universe itself.

And now it turns out we needn't have gone to the moon at all for this purpose.

A meteorite fell in Mexico in 1969 and it is 600 million years older than any scrapings our astronauts have brought back from the moon — 4.6 billion years old, in fact.

The meteorite is a carbonaceous chondrite and burst in the atmosphere over the little town of Pueblito de Allende in northern Mexico on February 8, 1969.

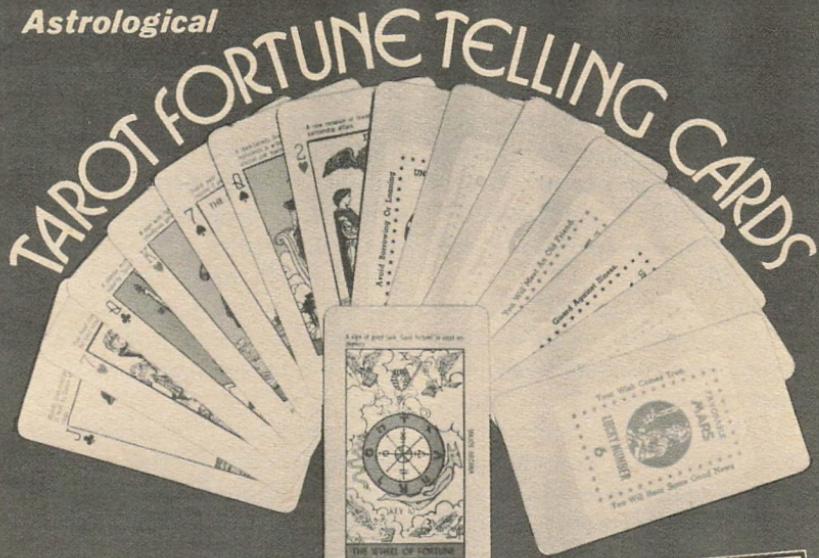

Dr. Gerald Wasserburg of Caltech says, "It's the earliest thing condensed out of the solar nebulae that we've found yet."

ly believed. This is indicated by a radar probe of Saturn conducted by two Caltech astronomers. The solid material indicated by the echoes received probably are boulders one meter (3.3 feet) in diameter or "possibly much larger" and would be dangerous to any spacecraft, the report said.

• The idea that the earth's spin axis has changed in past ages is given new credence by the Mariner 9 photographs of Mars. Photo-maps of Mars seem to indicate that its axis has changed. They show concentric circles surrounding both poles but some of these concentric circles are centered on points which are displaced from the present north and south poles. This suggests the poles have drifted.

• For centuries moon-watchers have reported seeing bright flashes on the moon. It now is suggested these flashes possibly are eruptions of gas from the interior which glow through some unknown process. Apollo 15 has shown that there are emissions from the crater Aristarchus. This huge crater is 25 miles across and light flashes often have been reported from its rim.

Now to find out what "unknown process" causes this unknown gas to glow.

WHITE RIVER MONSTER

THERE HAVE been persistent reports of a large finned creature living in the depths of northern Arkansas' White River. Several residents along the river claim they saw it this summer for the first time in several years.

Ernest Dinks says it was more than 40 feet long and weighed over a ton. "It looked like it could eat anything, anytime, anywhere."

Cloyce Warren of Newport says he saw it surface briefly. "It was between 30 and 40 feet long with a spiny ridged backbone and splashing all around." — Curtis Fuller.

THE ILLUMINATED MESSAGE BOARD

AYE-SEE is a custom-made psychic appliance offered only to the readers of FATE. AYE-SEE is not mass-produced. It is manufactured only in limited quantities by the Venture Bookshop.

WHAT IT IS

The essential parts of the AYE-SEE are the all-wood Table, the Planchette, and the Light Beam. The Planchette is a disc of translucent styrene bearing the letters of the alphabet, numerals and symbols in gold relief. The Light Beam streams softly from a lens in the center of the Table.

HOW IT WORKS

Touch the Planchette lightly with your fingers and as it moves about the Table, the Light Beam illuminates the appropriate letter or symbol as your message comes through.

OPERATES IN DIM LIGHT

AYE-SEE has a unique advantage by providing its own light. AYE-SEE can be used in bright light if you wish — but it is especially valuable in the dim light of seance-room conditions.

DEVELOPED BY SENSITIVES

The superior features of AYE-SEE are the product of careful experimentation by sensitives adept at using message boards. From coast to coast, accomplished psychics have contributed suggestions which now emerge as AYE-SEE.

ALL-WOOD BOARD

The entire Table is built of wood because psychics have advised that wood produces the strongest vibrations. The furniture-quality construction has a sandalwood finish, protected by a coat of Tung Oil, and polished with carnauba wax — all natural materials.

URI GELLER

SPACE AGE "MAGICIAN"

Scientific study of young Israeli's feats may revolutionize our most basic concepts of the nature of the universe.

By James Crenshaw
Photographs by Robert R. Michelson

PART ONE

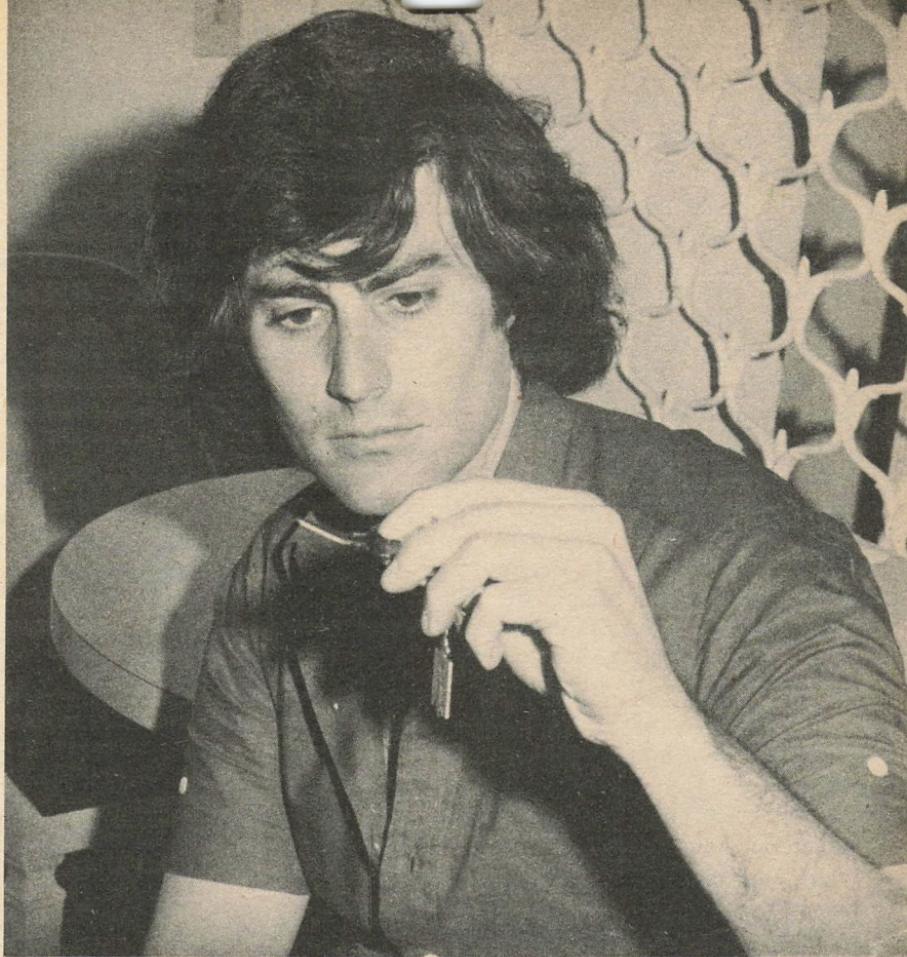

URI GELLER has been derisively called a magician. He is, but not in the conventional sense. Rather he should be likened to those occult magicians of the Middle Ages and before who performed such astounding feats demonstrating the apparent power of mind over matter that they generally were forced to work in secret lest the authorities accuse them of being in league with the devil.

Uri Geller does not acknowledge the power of the devil nor any other nether force. He says such power as he has comes from God and must be used for good. This is why he cooperates with leading scientists in various parts of the world, trying to help them unlock the secrets of alchemical laws that may change our most basic concepts of the nature of matter and indeed of the nature of the universe itself.

Uri insists he does not know, does not use, does not even understand the usual paraphernalia of stage magic. Neither, say those who know him best, has he the ability to do sleight of hand or ordinary stage magic and in fact resents any suggestion that he is a trickster with a new bag of gimmicks designed to dazzle a befuddled public.

Yet it is hard not to feel some incredulity upon hearing that he can mend broken watches, bend iron bars and make objects disappear and reappear merely by focusing the power of his mind.

My own experience is typical: I handed him a key ring on which there were two keys, a small one not involved in the experiment and a larger one that fit the front door lock of our home in Hollywood. Actually the keys belonged to my wife Brenda and it was fortunate that I had a duplicate set in my pocket. Otherwise we would have had to call a locksmith to open the front door when we got home.

Without removing either key from the ring, Uri placed the larger one in the center of the palm of his left hand so that the smaller key and the ring lay on the edge of his palm. He held his right hand, palm flat, slightly above the left. Almost imperceptibly he moved his right hand up and down one or two times; then he made a very small circular motion with it. He appeared to be concentrating but there was no evidence of strain on his face. Certainly there was none in his hands — no twisting, no contortions of any kind — only a relaxed effortless motion.

In a matter of seconds he showed us the key. It was bent, probably as much as 30 degrees. He handed the key to Brenda. It was still on the ring with the other key. However, by now the angle of bending had increased to practically 45 degrees.

Did the force which caused this bending continue after he removed his right hand to show us the keys? Of course we cannot be sure, because visual observation can be deceptive, but it appeared to do so.

While we were with him Uri demonstrated two other feats of "mental magic" somewhat typical of his repertoire, one involving his reported ability to mend broken watches merely by holding them in his hands and the other a simple demonstration of thought transfer that nevertheless was impressive. These will be described later.

Meanwhile we visited a Hollywood locksmith to obtain another door key, using mine for duplication. When we showed him the bent key, the locksmith said it was made of a "cheap" aluminum alloy that might bend if lateral force were applied when it was only partially inserted in the lock.

We explained that this had not happened and asked him if the key, although not of the best metal, could have been bent by someone using only their bare hands. He seemed surprised.

"It would require a very powerful force," he replied. He admitted he would not be able to do it himself.

Our experience with a second locksmith was similar. This time we went to the key section of a well-known chain department store where we had originally obtained the now bent key. The locksmith acknowledged that it was made of an aluminum alloy and said, yes, it could be bent by placing it in a vice and applying sufficient force!

We bought a duplicate key, again copied from my key, but only after being assured that it was of exactly the same material and strength as the bent one. Incidentally, it was not "cheap." It cost more than the first duplicate.

I asked the key man if he could bend it with his bare hands. He said he could not. I, and others, have tried since to bend it by hand without being able to do so. The second locksmith was as amazed as the first when we told him how the allegedly cheap key had been bent.

"There must have been some kind of gimmick," he insisted.

This was by no means a sci- en-tific experiment, for which spe- cial observational equipment and precise methods of analysis would be required. However, it was primarily for the purpose of scientific observation and analysis that Uri was brought to this country. Apparent demonstra- tions of the psychokinetic power of mind over matter have intrigued parapsychologists for years, including efforts to control the throwing of dice and the long recorded phenomena of levitation.

Apartment key seemed to bend even after Geller handed it to author's wife Brenda.

(Uri, although he speaks quite good English, asked us, "What means the word 'apparent'?" Obviously it has haunted him whenever cautious scientists have attempted to describe their observations. However, the definition did not seem to perturb him. He dismissed it with a nod and a shrug of the shoulders.)

It is because of the current scientific interest in Uri Geller that he has received so much public attention in recent months. Both the Max Planck Institute in Munich, Germany, and the Stanford Research Institute in Menlo Park, Calif., the latter a center for a wide variety of government research projects, have designed experiments to test his psychic and psychokinetic abilities.

So, who is Uri Geller?

URI IS A former Israeli paratrooper who saw action and was wounded in the six-day war of 1967. He was discharged from the army in 1968. He worked as a translator in a clothing factory in 1969, handling Hebrew, English, Hungarian and Greek correspondence.

Previously he had attended school in Cyprus, where he lived for a number of years before returning to Israel for military service in 1965.

He was born in Tel Aviv on December 20, 1946. At the age of seven he made an astounding discovery: he could move the hands of a wristwatch merely by willing them to move. What's more, he could do this repeatedly.

He also found it was easy to "guess" what others were thinking. But because he was ridiculed and considered strange and different, he decided to keep his mental gifts to himself in order to be accepted as "normal." He kept his secret until after he was 22. It came out only because he was thrown in contact with actors, actresses and other show people whom he met while working as a model.

Uri is a tall, handsome young man with dark wavy hair and soft, dark brown eyes. He appears warm and friendly and is an easy conversationalist with an air of total sincerity. He can flare up at any challenge to his integrity, however, as for instance when I asked about a statement in a national publication that he had left his country in disgrace after becoming widely known for his "magic" shows.

"That's a dirty lie!" he exploded.

His first performances were the result of his contacts with show people for whom he demonstrated his powers as a mentalist. At first he performed only for small private parties, beginning in March 1970. Within a month he was working on the stage and in army shows, presenting what some called his "tricks." These consisted of simple demonstrations of telepathy with numbers and drawings, breaking metal objects by "willpower" and moving clock hands. Israeli audiences were fascinated. Uri (pronounced oo-ree) became a popular entertainer.

Then he came to the United States. The true story of his leaving Israel and his alleged disgrace is related by one of America's leading researchers in the field of parapsychology, Dr. Andrija Puharich.

Andrija Puharich, whose Yugoslavian first name is translatable as Henry, is a medical doctor who has had wide experience as a physical scientist, electronics expert and inventor. He has researched the environmental and physiological conditions related to telepathy and his results have been published in more than twoscore articles and in his own two books, The Sacred Mushroom and Beyond Telepathy. As a member of 14 scientific societies, including the New York Academy of Sciences and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Puharich has organized research and advisory committees of leading scientists for the study of unusual phenomena of the type displayed by Uri Geller and others.

"This young man is really the answer to all of our prayers in bringing about a whole new consciousness," Dr. Puharich told me. "Therefore we have to measure out these studies very carefully."

He first heard of Uri through two Israeli army officers whom he met in New York. After they returned to Israel they wrote to Dr. Puharich about certain amazing abilities of a remarkable former paratrooper. A long period of correspondence followed and in August 1971 Puharich made the first of three trips to Israel for the specific purpose of studying and observing the Geller phenomena.

Both in laboratory experiments and at Uri's public presentations Puharich carefully studied the evidence and weighed the potentialities of the phenomena, which he decided to call "direct brain action" (DBA). He decided that if what he saw proved verifiable and repeatable under strict test conditions in the laboratory, the impact upon scientific thinking — especially upon the concepts of the nature of matter and energy — would be incalculable. A whole new theory encompassing the power of mind over matter would have to be formulated.

Between August 17 and 25, 1971, Dr. Puharich reports that in Israel Uri Geller demonstrated the following DBA tests "under rigid scientific control":

(1) Breaking, solely by mental concentration, a gold ring held in another person's clenched fist.

(2) By concentrating on a pair of bimetal-type thermometers, Uri was able selectively to make the temperature rise six to eight degrees F. on one or the other instrument.

(3) He started broken clocks and watches solely by concentration.

(4) He moved the hands of a watch forward and backward without physical contact with the watch.

During this same period Dr. Puharich conducted a series of telepathy tests (direct brain perception or DBP). He would think of three-digit numbers and Uri would pick up the numbers telepathically. Uri was 90 percent accurate.

"The results were sufficiently impressive to warrant a more intensive study," said Puharich.

He again flew to Israel in September, conducting further tests from the 20th through the 29th of that month.

"Each test was replicated five times," the doctor reports. "The DBA tests were 100 percent repeatable. The DBP tests (telepathy) showed 90 percent overall accuracy on the part of Geller, using different subjects as telepathic agents."

Puharich made further tests and observations of Uri's stage performances between November 17, 1971, and April 14, 1972. This is a summary of his findings during that period:

(1) DBA. Breaking metal objects. Repeatability — 98 out of 102.

(2) Moving clock hands by DBA — 51 out of 56.

(3) Repairing broken watches — 28 out of 36.

(4) Moving compass needle — 25 out of 30.

(5) Dematerialization of metal objects — 15 out of 20.

(6) Rematerialization of objects (in above tests) — 12 out of 20.

"There is no question in my mind that Uri Geller possesses a power of true action at a distance, which is called direct brain action," reports Puharich.

With this background and a number of startling personal experiences that fortified his resolve, Puharich set about formulating a research program that would include not only further testing of Geller but also of other persons who might have similar ESP and psychokinetic abilities.

"My policy is to stay out of all of the publicity that is occurring around Uri as much as possible," he said. "My role is to get him into research situations, but I want him to be a person by himself aside from me. All kinds of research programs are being considered, however."

THUS IT was that Uri was introduced to Harold E. Puthoff, Ph.D., specialist in quantum physics, parapsychology and paraphysics, and to Russell Targ, physicist specializing in laser and plasma research as well as parapsychological and paraphysical phenomena. Both men are at the Stanford Research Institute.

After a preliminary series of experiments with Geller and with Ingo Swann, a New York artist who also has a degree in biology, on March 10, 1973, SRI issued a carefully worded statement concerning the findings of its researchers:

"Our scientists have drawn no conclusions as to the nature or indeed the existence of psychical powers. They are prepared to suggest only that further investigation of this subject is warranted and that it is a legitimate subject for scientific inquiry. Any published reports to the contrary are clearly a distortion of the facts."

Despite the cautious phrasing, this was a major concession for a scientific institution with the standing of SRI. The statement continues:

"Throughout mankind's history there has existed a folklore that certain gifted individuals have been capable of producing physical effects by means of some agency generally referred to as psychic or psychoenergetic. Substantiation of such claims by accepted scientific methodology has been slow in coming, but recent laboratory experiments, especially in the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia and more recently in our own laboratory, have indicated that sufficient evidence does exist to warrant serious scientific investigation."

From the evidence, said SRI, they concluded that not only is further research warranted but that accepted scientific procedures may uncover a pattern of cause and effect relationships. These could lend themselves to the type of analysis and hypothesis with which physical scientists are familiar. Their aim would be to compile much more than a catalogue of interesting events. SRI promised to depart from the usual experimental routines of parapsychologists, saying:

"As scientists we consider it important to examine various models describing the operation of these effects so that we can determine the relationship between extraordinary human functioning and the physical and psychological laws we presently understand.

"It is not the purpose at SRI to add to the literature another demonstration of the statistical appearance of these phenomena in the laboratory, but rather we seek to achieve an understanding more compatible with contemporary science and more useful to mankind."

Scientists Puthoff and Targ said they were not reaching any "sweeping conclusions as to the nature of these phenomena or the need to call them psychical." But they added, "We have observed certain phenomena with the subjects (Geller and Swann) for which we have no scientific explanation."

With Swann they observed an apparent ability to "perturb" the operation of a shielded magnetometer by what Puharich would call direct brain action (DBA).

The controlled experiments done with Uri included tests of both clairvoyant or psychic abilities and physical action at a distance — with these results:

DICE EXPERIMENT: This was a "double blind" experiment in which a single die was placed in a closed metal box and shaken vigorously so that neither Geller nor the experimenters knew which face of the die was uppermost. Without touching the box, Uri would call out which die face he believed was uppermost. He was right eight times out of eight. (There were 10 throws of the die inside the box but Uri passed twice because he said his perception was not clear.)

HIDDEN OBJECT: Ten identical film cans (cartridge type) were placed in a row. An outside assistant not associated with the research would place the cans in random position and put a target object into one of them. After putting caps on all of the cans he would leave the experimental area and notify the experimenters. Uri would either pass his hands over the row of cans or simply look at them. Then he would call out the cans he thought were empty and they would be removed one by one from the row. When only two or three remained Uri would select the one he believed contained the target object. He was right 12 times out of 12. On two occasions he declined to answer.

Two targets seemed to stump Uri; one was a paper-wrapped ball bearing; the other was a sugar cube. He had no difficulty identifying water, ordinary steel ball bearings and small magnets.

PICTURE DRAWING: Simple pictures were drawn on three-by-five file cards at a time when Uri was not at SRI. The pictures were put into double sealed envelopes and into a safe by an assistant not associated with the experiment. The experimenters selected one envelope at a time from the safe, opened it to identify the picture, resealed it and went on into the experimental room. Uri drew seven almost exact reproductions of the target pictures without error.

BALANCE EXPERIMENT: A precision laboratory balance which measures weights from one milligram to 50 grams was placed under a bell jar. This balance generates an electrical output voltage in proportion to the force (weight) applied to it. A one gram weight was placed on the pan before it was covered with the jar. A chart recorder then continuously monitored the force applied to the pan.

The experimenters report that on several occasions Uri was able, apparently by mental effort, to cause the balance to respond as though a force were being applied to the pan. The displacements, as shown on the chart recorder, were 10 to 100 times larger than could be produced by striking the bell jar or the table or jumping up and down on the floor.

MAGNETOMETER EXPERIMENT: A gauss meter was used to determine if Geller could perturb an instrument sensitive to magnetic fields. The instrument was set to a full scale sensitivity of 0.3 gauss. Uri moved his empty hands near the instrument in an effort to cause a deflection of a chart recorder monitoring the magnetometer output. And in carefully filmed experiments he was able to perturb the magnetometer without touching the measuring head of the instrument.

The scientists labeled as "unsatisfactory" or "inconclusive" some other experiments including Geller's attempts to bend or manipulate objects such as rings or spoons without physical contact.

"In these cases physical effects were observed but it was unclear without further instrumentation how Geller changed the physical appearance of the objects, since he was permitted to touch them," the SRI report states.

Puthoff and Targ make it clear that these experiments are only preliminary and that more sophisticated methods of testing and recording are being designed. A spokesman for SRI has stated:

"We are well aware that this area of research is one of the most controversial topics in modern science, in part because of its history of charlatanism and fraud. However, we do not feel that controversy should deter us from what we believe is a legitimate subject for scientific inquiry.

"Our work is being performed within the framework of a research organization dedicated to the pursuit of knowledge and its application rather than from a position of advocacy. Our role in this area, as in all other areas of research we undertake, is to be neutral and objective.

"Questions raised about the background of subjects with whom we have worked have been taken into account. Our scientists are well aware that many persons who claim psychic abilities can seem to have extraordinary powers while actually employing only sophisticated deception. We do not discount or minimize the possibility of trickery. Indeed, we proceed on the assumption that any subject could seek to circumvent laboratory safeguards and try to fool our researchers.

"Whenever it was felt that any experiment could have been influenced by trickery or subterfuge — whether we had any proof of that or not — that experiment was summarily dismissed from consideration.

"On that basis, we feel our work should be judged on its merits. If there is an area here that can be explored to the benefit of mankind, it should be explored without prejudice."

WHAT ABOUT the multitude of reports that Uri Geller can bend, break and twist metal objects with the power of his mind? What about the astonishing stories of watches, pens and other objects that disappear and reappear in his presence?

Dr. Andrija Puharich assures us these phenomena also are being investigated under rigorous conditions. Whether the phenomena always can be produced on demand in the laboratory is uncertain. Yet some of the stories read like chapters out of a modern version of the Arabian Nights.

Uri himself is the first to admit his limitations, however.

"I ask myself why I could do little for a national magazine which was very important for me to be presented in a positive way," he complained. "Yet, for a little magazine published by a group of young people everything happened — materializations, things bent and broken and all the things I can do well. There must be a reason."

He only knows his power is greater when he is with people who are enthusiastic and sympathetic. Still, he can do the cold laboratory experiments and welcomes them, because he says he is as anxious as anyone to understand his power.

But if he is just another trickster, why can't he make his tricks work at will? A television crew visits him to record his phenomena and little of significance happens (except that the video equipment for some unexplained reason breaks down). But on another occasion he can bend a seven-inch railroad spike merely by stroking it gently with one hand. Why?

(This is Part I of a three-part series. Next month Mr. Crenshaw will tell us, among other things, how Uri Geller apparently stopped a cable car simply by willing it.)

BOMB THREAT PROVES DUD

A WRONG number proved costly to a West Virginia prankster, reports Associated Press. John Litton of Beckley entered a phone booth in nearby Charleston, W. Va., to telephone a bomb threat against United Airlines. Litton asked the operator to connect him with the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington and was still talking 20 minutes later when FBI agents arrived to arrest him. The operator misunderstood his request and connected him with the FBI. Unaware of the mixup, Litton had proceeded with his bomb threat. The agent had the call traced while he detained Litton in conversation.

TRAVELING TOMCAT

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Tippy was bored with life and decided to go home. Nothing unusual about that — except that home was 400 miles away and Tippy the tomcat walked the whole way. Normally Tippy is uncrowned king of the Mack Kitchen household in Concord, Calif. But 16-year-old Nancy Kitchen went on a vacation to Central Point, Ore., in July 1972 and took Tippy along. Apparently homesick for the Kitchen kitchen the bored feline headed south, reports the San Francisco Chronicle. Two months and 400 miles later Tippy showed up in Concord "matted and dirty" but otherwise none the worse for his experience. Apparently the tomcat has had enough of roaming; now he just "stays in the house all the time and he doesn't want to go anywhere at all," reports Mrs. Kitchen.

the mysterious ways of the wild — the uncanny communication between beasts and their instinctual "knowing" that is beyond human ken.

A man can make friends with all manner of wildlife — even the fish are friendly. Once while living beside a small lake, for several months I fed crumbs to a school of trout. Eventually all I had to do was stamp my feet on the dock and their small gleaming bodies would break water and dart in all directions seeking the crumbs — although they had plenty of natural food.

rounding wilderness. He thrived on daily repasts of fruit — the mountain teemed with huckleberries, blueberries, raspberries, cranberries and many-prickled gooseberries — supplemented by canned milk and rarely, a piece of fried ham. Canned milk was rationed in those days but I was able to get a supply by stretching the truth a bit and saying that I had a baby with me at the lookout. The "baby" grew from a 10-pound pup to a gentle, understanding 85-pound friend.

The army had given me a hatred of all weapons. Killing, even for food, was repugnant to me. Somehow sensing I had no firearms, the wildlife — bear, grouse, deer, coyotes, marmots, ground squirrels and birds of all kinds — wandered near my home without fear. Gunnysack became as used to the sight of black bears as a city dog is to automobiles. I once saw Gunny lying down while a covey of fledgling grouse walked all over him. Whenever I left the lookout to trek to the nearby settlement for supplies Gunny rushed down the trail ahead of me barking furiously to clear the way of bears and announce that his friend was coming.

That fall of 1944 I left Gunnysack with friends while I went south to the coast. There I met and married a lovely girl. After our marriage I was horrified when Florence announced she disliked dogs, especially Airedales. But when I had Gunnysack shipped to our home in Barkerville, B.C., it took him approximately 10 minutes to win my wife's heart and a further two or three days to convert her into a dog lover. For his part Gunny was so infatuated with Florence that I felt left out.

Lindsay adopted Frosty after her original owner "couldn't be bothered with" the Alsatian, later the mother of nine pups.

Eleven years passed and we grew older together. Gunnysack developed gray hairs in his black and gold coat, yet his leonine ruff stood up as proudly as when he was in his prime. His eyes were just as understanding and his great heart just as responsive to our every mood. Then in 1955 we moved to the outskirts of Quesnel where there was traffic, industry and many people. Late that year Gunnysack, naïve in the city, wandered onto the highway and was killed by a truck.

I wrapped him in a white linen sheet and buried him with his favorite ball lying between his paws. I buried him with tears streaming down my face, with a tightness of heart and throat and with him I buried a part of myself.

Weeks later Florence asked me if I had heard the strange noise in the front room about three or four every afternoon. She remarked, "It sounds just like Gunnysack yawning." I thought this was a little farfetched and I figured the noise she heard probably was due to the movement of the upright post that supported the electric power line entering the house. It moved ever so slightly in the wind and made a faint squeaky groan. I shored up the post with shims to eliminate the sound.

Shortly thereafter on a warm still June day I was sitting in the front room reading — and I heard Gunnysack yawn. There was no mistaking that eerie sound. I knew my old friend was in that room and doing his level best to get through to me. It was not illusion nor the product of wishful thinking; Gunnysack was there.

* * *

A HOME with neither pets nor children is a barren place indeed. So early in 1957 we acquired another pup, a white Alsatian whose owners "just couldn't be bothered with her." What a wonderful friend was Frosty, as dainty and vibrant as a young fox, as knowing as a vixen and as lovable as a young girl. She romped and played, chasing every shadow, rustling leaf and waving blade of grass.

Then nature stepped in and Frosty ceased to be a puppy. One day when I inadvertently left the car window open she slipped out into the great unknown. After some searching we found her and took her home — but within a few weeks it became obvious that she was pregnant. Not long thereafter she delivered a litter of nine pups.

We kept the pups in a large kennel in the backyard. By the time they were old enough to eat from a dish they were swarming under, around and on top of the kennel. I advertised the pups for sale at a modest price and we managed to sell all nine — after Florence had inspected each prospective purchaser as to his fitness to own one of Frosty's pups.

In the meantime Frosty caught a form of distemper. For weeks her coat was without sheen. Her plume of a tail hung between her legs; her eyes were dull and her once perky ears drooped listlessly. Still when I talked to her she licked my hand and her tail beat a weak response. No medicine helped her, not even penicillin. Steadily her condition worsened until one day while bending over her I felt the wings of the dark angel and knew my friend was leaving me. Then just before her last farewell, what a transformation! Her eyes shone brightly, her ears perked up and her plume lifted. She made a small happy whimper and was gone.

Frosty's passing left another hole in our lives. I dug a grave among the trees where she used to lie when the summer heat was oppressive. I buried her and carefully replaced the turf. Now she rested among fern and flower in the shadows of a grove of fir and pine.

About this time we heard reports that one of the buyers of Frosty's pups was mistreating the two he had taken — the pick of the litter. He had sounded like an ideal owner, having a large estate in the country and several children. But I learned that he kept the pups, Chief and Chum, tied up and that they were not properly fed. Indignant, I brought them home. After finding a good home for Chum I decided to keep Chief.

So it was that four-month-old Chief came to live with us in the summer of 1958. The kennel seemed forlorn and lonely without his brothers and sisters but I kept him there a week or so until he became accustomed to us. Then I turned him loose.

Chief was exuberant at this new freedom. The garden was his special delight. I was kept busy replanting what he had dug up until he tired of this game and went farther afield. He chased the changing shadows and the errant bugs and found delight in the rustling leaves and whispering grasses. I watched him one day while he gamboled about chasing his tail. Then yipping furiously he pursued a June bug which lumbered awkwardly in front of him. His chase led him to the grove of trees where his mother's grave was located, although grasses, lichens and stag moss had overgrown the mound and made it difficult to distinguish from the rest of the forest floor. In his happy sport he chanced to run directly over Frosty's grave.

Abruptly he stood stock-still, his tail straight out, his ears perked forward. Then from his small throat came a yapping and frenzied barking of happiness that defies description. Chief reared onto his hind legs, his forefeet clinging to something beyond the reach of human eye or understanding. Back and forth he danced, his tail wagging furiously. Then the dance ended and Chief chased something around and around, barking ecstatically. Then as suddenly as he had started he stopped.

Chief came to me all wiggles and waggles and sat at my feet whining softly, trying to convey some message which my dumb human brain could not comprehend. Never again did he show any excitement when walking across or in the vicinity of Frosty's grave.

* * *

IT IRKS me to hear men say that animals have no souls. The hereafter would be stagnant and barren with only human spirits. Those friends I had belie such beliefs. Gunnysack and Frosty and Chief are waiting somewhere beyond the last frontier to welcome me, to race with me across some Elysian field where the flowers never wither, the grasses never grow sere and the years will not betray.

MAN DEFEATS NATURE

By Chris P. Brown

SAD AS IT seems, human beings frequently undo the best efforts of Mother Nature. One of the saddest cases concerns the skeleton of a Neanderthal teenager unearthed by Otto Hauser on August 8, 1908, in Le Moustier, France. One of the finest remains of Neanderthal man known at the time, the skeleton was dated at not less than 100,- 000 years old. Hauser sold his find to the Berlin Ethnological Museum for about $25,000.

This prized specimen was one of the casualties of World War II. An Allied bomb destroyed the skeleton completely; not a single fragment was recovered. Nature had preserved the remains for more than 100,000 years; man preserved it less than 40 years.

A "HAPPENING" AT LILY DALE

By Ronald N. Brien

IN THE SUMMER of 1970 I was employed as gatekeeper at the Spiritualist community known as Lily Dale in upper New York state. One evening late in July my friend Ted Williams and I were invited to dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schaffer, longtime residents of Lily Dale who are well known for their work in psychic healing and mediumship. Their conversation consisted mainly of stories about the many spirits who regularly visited their house. I had learned long since to take such stories with a grain of salt but I was happy to be spending a pleasant evening with friendly people in a peaceful environment. But it turned out that things were not so peaceful after all and the spirits not quite so friendly.

After dinner I went to the restroom which was at the top of a long steep staircase. On the way back down the stairs I had my first encounter with a mischievous spirit; a sudden push on my back nearly sent me sprawling. I apologized to my hosts for my clumsiness and the incident was soon dismissed from their minds — but not from mine. Ted, who is quite psychic himself, shared my feeling that something was amiss. At 11:45 P.M. we bade our hosts good night and left.

I worked from midnight to 8:00 A.M. and Ted occasionally kept me company the first few hours of my shift. He did so that night. We discussed the events of the evening and agreed that some negative force must be at work in the Schaffers' house; we hoped it had not followed us to the gate shack.

Nevertheless, we felt some apprehension when a fierce wind came up, followed by lightning and thunder. Soon we were feeling like a couple of kids reading Edgar Allan Poe. We had agreed to change our conversation to a subject far removed from spirits and negative forces when suddenly my attention was diverted by the sight of a man standing about 50 yards from the gatehouse on the bank of the channel which joins two of the three lakes surrounding the village. Ted asked me what I was looking at and by the time I had told him the figure had disappeared.

We stood silently staring toward the channel. Finally I exclaimed, "Dammit, Ted, we've let this thing bother us since we left the house and it's three o'clock in the morning. I'm not going to let it bother me all night! I'm going to meet that man face to face."

Ted said I was crazy but I was too angry to listen to him. I started out along the channel and walked the whole distance to where I had seen the figure. The blackness was terrifying but I had to go on. After what seemed an eternity I finally returned to the gatehouse where I found Ted writing something on a scrap of paper. As I closed the door behind me he put the paper in his shirt pocket and stared up at me. "What happened?" he asked.

"I felt like something was following me but when I turned around there was nothing but the darkness and the wind. I wanted to walk closer to the water but I couldn't see very well and I was afraid of falling in."

Ted's eyes widened; then he handed me the slip of paper from his pocket. He had written on it these words: "I saw the form of a man following you all the way. He was trying to get you to go nearer to the water so he could push you in." —Lakewood, Ohio.

EERIE VISITOR

By Warren L. Wagner

ST. JOSEPH'S Hospital in Lewistown, Mont., is a three-story red brick structure built on the side of a hill. It towers over the town and at night gives the impression of floating in space.

In August 1960 I was in training there as a male nurse. My room was in the sub-basement, formerly the nuns' quarters; near the old autopsy room. A door near the autopsy room led outside and could be opened only from the inside.

Each time I entered the bathroom adjoining my room I would hear footsteps out in my room and each time I peeked out the bathroom door I could see no one. No one could be there anyway because the only entrance to my room was locked. I almost convinced myself that I was hearing footsteps from the floor above.

Also, each night as I studied, I would hear footsteps come down the stairway, down the hall and stop at my door. I would wait for a knock — but no knock ever came. I would open the door — but no one ever was there.

Then one night when I answered a knock at my door I was shocked to see a white figure standing in the darkened hallway. However, this turned out to be one of the sisters calling me for emergency duty in the hospital.

One night in 1961 towards the end of my residency I went to my room and dropped onto my bed exhausted. This time the footsteps came down the stairs, down the hall and towards my door. To my horror they did not stop at the door but continued right up to my bed. Something cold and clammy touched my face! Then the footsteps went back through the door and away down the hall.

The following day I rushed to tell the Mother Superior, Mother Monica, my story, expecting disbelief, but she paled and reprimanded me for not telling her about the footsteps sooner. She told me that the sisters had the same experience in this room and that's why the new convent for the Daughters of Jesus had been built. — Clearwater, Fla.

ASK AND YE SHALL RECEIVE

By Daisy M. Forbes

AFTER TWO years of wallowing in grief and self-pity because an errant husband had left me for a rich widow, I finally awoke one day to find that I was free of all that had bound me to him. I had turned to a higher Power for solace and my prayers had been answered.

Now, here I was, past middle age and alone in Sacramento, Calif., on a gloomy Sunday afternoon in May 1965. I settled in a comfortable chair and closed my eyes preparatory to deep meditation and commanded over and over, "Speak to me! Tell me what You want me to know!" My consciousness soared into a vast limitless universe, oblivious to time and space.

Suddenly, in an exquisitely melodious tone, a voice replied, "You will find your love and happiness in Long Beach." Stunned, I opened my eyes. I knew I had not been dreaming. I jumped up and pleaded, "Oh, give me a sign to prove that what I heard is true!"

Later that evening as I was leaving the home of a dear friend, she said, "Why don't you leave this town and go somewhere else and make a new life for yourself?" There was the sign I had asked for.

I moved to Long Beach the following month. A new apartment, a new job as a floral designer at the Rose Flower Shop and new friends renewed my faith.

Then in August I met John Forbes. In the joyful days that followed our love unfolded and came into full bloom. We were married one year later.—Orange, Calif.

PHONE CALL FROM TINIAN

By Robert C. Ferrara

DURING WORLD WAR II, I served as a forward observer for the artillery unit attached to the Fourth Marine Division. I had celebrated my 20th birthday December 13, 1943, in San Diego, Calif., and along with many others in my outfit was looking forward to combat. We hadn't many months to wait. In February 1944 the Division landed on the Marshall Islands, some 2,000 miles west of Pearl Harbor. Following the victory and our first taste of battle we returned to the Hawaiian Islands for 30 days of further training and to replace equipment.

In June 1944 both the Second and Fourth Marine Divisions landed on Saipan and 28 days later that battle was over. This time we rested on Saipan only a week before attacking the island of Tinian three miles away. All during that week the navy and air force shelled and bombed Tinian and we expected the invasion to be a breeze. But on the morning of the second day, July 25, a Japanese artillery shell landed a foot or so from my foxhole and exploded.

At 2:00 A.M. that same morning in Sacramento, Calif., my mother Helen C. Aunger rose from her bed and went to the phone. When she returned my stepfather Elmer asked her what she had gotten up for.

"Robert just called from Tinian," was her reply.

"He couldn't have, not at this hour," he protested.

"It was a poor connection," she replied. "All I could hear was 'Mom, it hurts; Mom, it hurts; Mom, it hurts,' and then he hung up."

On Tinian just before I passed out, those were the only words I could say. I repeated three times, "Mom, it hurts." — Napa, Calif.

APPORTED ADDRESS BOOK

By Marjorie K. Holmes

ON JUNE 15, 1969, I flew to Calgary, Alberta, as my first stop on a trip across the Canadian Rockies. Having once forgotten to take my address book on a trip, I took particular pains to pack it this time. That first night in the Pallister Hotel in Calgary I consulted it and I also used it at my next stop, the Mount Royal Hotel in Banff. My third stop was the Deer Lodge at Lake Louise.

When packing to leave Lake Louise on June 19 I could not find my address book. I could have sworn I had not taken it from my room. I was certain I had had the book with me when I arrived at Lake Louise but just to be certain my mind was not playing tricks on me I had the hotel housekeeper phone back to both Calgary and Banff. My book was not to be found.

I was very upset because the book contained not only addresses but phone numbers, birthdays and much more information. As it was a good quality loose-leaf type I suspected it had been stolen. I called upon my spirit guide to find it and possibly return it to me.

I continued on to Vancouver, Alaska, California and Hawaii and returned home to New York in September. At home every time I glanced at the empty space in my bookcase where my address book had been I felt renewed resentment at whoever had stolen it. But one day about two weeks after my return, when I looked over at the bookcase my address book was in its accustomed place!

When I next had an opportunity to talk with my spirit guide through a medium, I asked her why it had taken three months to find the book. She explained that the book had fallen to the floor while I was writing some cards in the Deer Lodge lobby and I had not missed it. A bellboy found the book and put it in his pocket, intending to turn it over to the Lost and Found desk. But he forgot it and hung his coat in his locker. When he went to use the coat again a long time later, he discovered the address book. Ashamed to turn it in after so long a time he simply placed it on a table in the lobby. My spirit guide found it there and apportioned it to me in New York.—New York, N.Y.

OUR PRIVATE MIRACLE

By Bernice Windsor

IN 1940 MY husband Jesse and I with our three small children lived on a ranch near Roswell, N. Mex. We had bought the place and started out with very little money but we did have a herd of fine blooded cattle.

Things went smoothly until the second year. In 1941 a long drought dried up our surface tanks and the grass withered and died. Jesse said we would have to ship the cows to another state where they would have grass and water or we'd lose everything. We didn't have the money to pay for the shipping and he said we'd have to borrow it.

One blistering hot day in July we started to town to try to get money to ship the cattle. On the way Jesse was complaining about the lack of rain and using some pretty strong language. I had been raised in a Christian home and taught not to take the name of the Lord in vain; so I said, "Honey, if you want it to rain you'd better stop swearing and start praying."

Jesse looked at me strangely and said, "If you believe that, why aren't you praying? I should spank you."

"You'll see rain before we reach town." I don't know what made me say such a thing. It seemed I just opened my mouth and God put the words there for me to say.

Jesse looked at the sky. Not a cloud was in sight and it was so hot you could see heat devils on the pavement. We drove on in silence for a few minutes and then suddenly it was raining so hard we had to pull off the road. We couldn't see a foot in front of us. Without thunder or wind the rain just came. Jesse and I looked at each other and we knew God had backed up my words. It was our own private miracle. The downpour lasted only about five minutes and then the day was bright again. As we drove on we noticed that the cars we met weren't wet. It had rained only on us!

"I don't know if you are an angel or a devil," Jesse said, "but this must be a sign that the Lord will send rain."

Needless to say, we turned around and went home and in a week we had plenty of rain. The drought was over.—Aspermont, Tex.

An Apparition WARN'S * the Baby-Sitter

"Three-year-old Ella didn't see her mother in our path — but I did and I knew she was telling me. . ."

By LaVenia Jones

THE DAY I instinctively heeded a mysterious warning I was only 12 years old — but more dependable than some 18-year-olds, my Aunt Jane always said. Otherwise she never would have left her three little girls in my care as often as she did.

We lived on a farm about five miles southeast of Marshall, Ill., and on this particular morning in April 1907 when Aunt Jane and Uncle John went to the barn to do the morning chores, the children were still asleep. It wasn't quite daylight and I left the light burning where Edna, five years old, and Ella, three, were sleeping. In the adjoining room the baby Louisa, a year old, slept in a cradle beside her parents' bed.

When I was caring for the children I was not expected to do any work but sometimes, as on this occasion, I could keep an eye on them and do small tasks in their rooms. My aunt had a real horror of fire and I always stayed with the children as long as the lamps were burning. As I worked I went over in my mind the other things that I must always remember in caring for the children.

"Don't let Edna keep you from doing what you think you ought to do for the other children," Aunt Jane always said. "She is big and strong for her age and so smart about most things that she may try to boss you. Be firm with her. She will mind you if she sees you mean business. Ella has to be handled in a different way. She is frail and afraid of many things. I don't think Edna is afraid of anything, not even snakes, but Ella is terrified of even a harmless little garden snake. But I know you will do fine. I saw what you did yesterday before you took them out to play!"

What I had done was take a fallen branch and beat the grass and bushes to be sure no snakes were in the yard where the girls were going to play. I'll do that every day, I promised myself.

By the time I had finished straightening up the two bedrooms the sun was up and I could blow out the lamps and go into the sitting room to work. But as I was leaving the bedroom Ella woke up and asked for her mother.

"Mama is helping in the barn, honey. Tell me what you want."

Ella was only three but she talked as plainly as a six-year-old. "I want to go to the toilet," she whispered.

"You mean your little chair by the bed," I coaxed. But no, she did not mean her chair—she meant the outdoor toilet. All my whispered arguments were in vain. I suppose if I had been firm with her as I often had to be with Edna I could have prevailed. But unless it was absolutely necessary I never contraried this frail child. After all, there was no reason I couldn't take her out as I always did in the daytime. Edna and Louisa certainly would be safe for the few minutes it would take.

We started for the toilet, carefully staying on the path because of the heavy dew. About halfway to the toilet I raised my eyes from the ground and found Aunt Jane standing beside the path. She was wearing her shawl over her head like a scarf, holding it tightly under her chin and slowly shaking her head. I stopped in my tracks, holding Ella beside me, and waited for Aunt Jane to speak. But she didn't say a word, just continued to shake her head. She didn't look angry but seemed very determined. As I hesitated she stepped into the middle of the path. I understood that she didn't want me to take Ella any farther and I turned back immediately. As I hurried the protesting child toward the house I realized that she hadn't seen her mother. The message had been for me alone. I felt peculiar, as if a breeze from an unknown world had touched me.

I had no time to wonder about the unusual happening. I had to think of a way to appease the angry little girl as I hustled her into the house.

"I think Edna and Louisa are still asleep," I said. "If you will use your toilet chair I will let you help me clean out my dresser drawer."

Those were magic words, for my dresser drawer was forbidden territory and I could always get Ella to mind me by promising to let her explore it.

While I waited for Aunt Jane and Uncle John to come in I wondered whether I should tell them what I had seen. I decided I must — and somehow it didn't surprise me to learn that Aunt Jane never had left the barn and certainly had not come like a ghost to meet me in the path. Uncle John listened to me but as soon as I finished he dismissed the whole incident.

"You imagined it, girl. You were half asleep and you just thought you saw somebody on the path."

Aunt Jane took me more seriously. "I think you may have felt guilty about taking Ella out so early. Maybe when you got part way to the toilet you realized I wouldn't like it and thought about it so hard that you imagined seeing my disapproving face."

"No, no, it was nothing like that," I protested. "I thought I was doing right. Wasn't I, Aunt Jane?"

"Of course you were, dear. So it isn't that. It had to be a warning. I've heard of people being warned of impending danger. There was something down that path that might have hurt Ella or you."

"Fiddlesticks!" Uncle John said — but he got up from the breakfast table and hurried outdoors. He was gone quite awhile and when he came back he was pale and visibly shaken.

"I take it all back," he said slowly. "There was the biggest, meanest-looking spreading adder I ever saw coiled just inside the toilet door. I don't understand it at all but there's no doubt in my mind that whatever you saw was a warning not to go near that toilet door."

"Thank God you minded the warning, dear," said Aunt Jane. "Even if neither of you had been bitten just the sight of that snake would have done terrible things to Ella's nerves."

It was several years before I learned that the spreading adder is not a poisonous snake. Nevertheless, I believe the warning I was given that morning was valid, for if we had suddenly come on the snake Ella would have been more than frightened. Any damage to the little girl's nervous system would have been my fault. No matter how the relatives tried to comfort me I would have blamed myself.

INTERNATIONAL REPORT:

By Stanley Krippner, Richard Davidson and Nancy Peterson

THE SUCCESS of the June 1971 paper by Stanley Krippner and Richard Davidson before Moscow's Institute of Psychology (see "New Books" January 1972 FATE) — the first talk on parapsychology ever presented to that Soviet organization — encouraged Soviet parapsychologist Edward Naumov to plan a more ambitious international conference to be held in Moscow in July 1972 with special emphasis on bioenergetics (Soviet term for psychokinesis) — both methods of study of bioenergetics such as Kirlian photography and practical applications of bioenergetics such as psychic healing.

On Tuesday, July 18, 1972, approximately 60 persons assembled at Moscow's May Day Club for the parapsychological conference. Participants included distinguished parapsychologists Viktor Adamenko, Hans Bender and Douglas Dean as well as students, psychic sensitives, scientists and laymen from Canada, England, the United States, Austria, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, the Irish Free State and West Germany.

Edward Naumov opened the session with a history of Soviet research in psychoenergetics beginning with Pavlov's student Vladimir Bekhterev, who founded the Institute for the Study of the Brain and Nervous Activity in the early 20th Century. Psychic research was interrupted by World War II and following that war it was denounced as "idealistic." In 1955 the official Soviet 1972 Moscow conference represents a significant step toward helping man understand his own potential for using psychic energy.

Biological ENERGY

Encyclopaedia described parapsychology as "the nonscientific idealistic consideration of supernatural abilities."

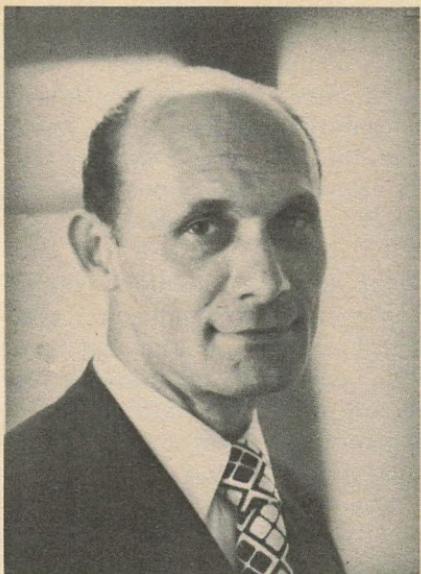

In 1968, however, parapsychological laboratories were organized in Leningrad and Moscow with government support. The most recent Soviet Encyclopaedia describes parapsychology as "biophysical research dealing with the informational and energetics possibilities of living organisms." In line with this emphasis on the biophysical approach Russians refer to psi phenomena as "psychoenergetic phenomena" and telepathy as "bioinformation."

The next speaker, Dr. Viktor Adamenko of Moscow's Institute of Radio-Physics, has pioneered in studying bioenergetic phenomena. He showed a film of Nina Kulagina performing her well-known PK (psychokinetic) feats and explained how the film had inspired his wife Alla also to attempt PK. A school psychologist, Mrs. Adamenko is known professionally as Miss Vinogradova. Dr. Adamenko showed a film of Alla moving objects at a distance and then introduced his wife to the audience.

Miss Vinogradova explained she always has "thought with her body" and suggested that this kinesic method of thinking (nonlinguistic body motion such as blushes, shrugs, waves, etc.) is essential for successful PK. She said she seems to work best when in a highly emotional state and in the presence of nonhostile witnesses. She can roll cylindrical objects such as cigar tubes greater distances than she can "push" rectangular objects such as matchboxes. She tries to concentrate her energy first in her fingertips and then onto the object she is trying to move. She practices yoga to keep in good physical condition and limits her PK work in order to avoid strain.

Dr. Adamenko then told how he has studied Vinogradova's acupuncture points by means of the tobioscope and the biometer. The tobioscope, the size of a small flashlight, is held in one hand while the experimenter's other hand is placed on the patient. When the tip of the tobioscope comes in contact with the subject's skin it completes an electrical circuit from the base of the device, through the experimenter's body to the subject's body, then to the tip. As the tip is moved over the skin with slight pressure, various locations of low electrical resistance corresponding to the acupuncture points will cause a light to appear near the middle of the tobioscope. When the light is dim, poor health is the diagnosis; a bright light shows good health.

Soviet parapsychologist Edward Naumov initiated plans for the 1972 meeting.

Nina Kulagina, the Soviet Union's best-known psychic, levitates a ball.

The biometer consists of two electrodes, an outer zinc cylinder and an inner copper rod, separated by dielectric material and connected by insulated flexible wires to a measuring device. The experimenter presses the cylinder into the subject's hand and completes the circuit by pressing his other hand onto the subject's body. An electrode is used at the point of the device to probe the skin. The indicator needle of the micrometer deflects when an acupuncture point is touched. The strength of the current which is conducted varies with the subject's health. Using both the tobioscope and biometer Dr. Adamenko has detected rapid shifts in the electrical conductivity of acupuncture points during Vinogradova's PK sessions.

Dr. Adamenko also showed color photographs of Vinogradova's fingertips taken by the Kirlian technique (see FATE, September 1962). The flare patterns emanating from her skin are more concentrated when she is practicing PK than when she is in a relaxed state of mind. In addition to the ordinary blue-green flares red blotches appeared during PK experiments. Dr. Adamenko interprets these results as demonstrating the psychological concentration and focus of attention necessary for successful PK.

The third speaker, Dr. Viktor Inyushin, worked for many years with Semyon and Valentina Kirlian at Kazakh State University in Alma-Ata. Dr. Inyushin first became interested in bioenergetics because PK phenomena are unknown in traditional physics. He feels the PK effect is analogous to a surface accidentally charged by lightning and that biological energy represents the interaction of an object's electrostatic and electromagnetic fields with the fields of the human operator.

An additional variable, however, is the amount and nature of the operator's bioplasma, a previously overlooked state of matter consisting of electrons and other subatomic particles associated with living objects. Inyushin speculates that bioplasma interacts with solids, liquids and gases, perhaps from time to time transforming itself into them just as water becomes steam or ice. Inyushin suspects the bioplasma is associated with PK, acupuncture and other phenomena currently considered paranormal. He feels that someday the bioplasmic system will be considered an important component of the body along with the circulatory, lymphatic and nervous systems. Kirlian photography records bioplasmic electrical activity on film. Dr Inyushin currently is studying the effects of the voluntary control of internal states, through yoga and biofeedback, upon bioplasma.

The final three speakers of the day were all Americans concerned with healing physical disease through bioenergy. Dr. Irving Oyle, director of a free medical clinic in Bolinas, Calif., offers his patients osteopathy, herbal medicine, Do-In (a massage based on acupuncture) and psychic healing as well as traditional medicine. He reported several instances of successful psychic healing and postulates that these occur only when both healer and patient believe in the effectiveness of the treatment. Dr. Oyle also described how he developed "positive imaging" in a group of 20 individuals through autogenic training and fantasy techniques. The group enters an altered state of consciousness and visualizes the healing of a patient in a distant hospital, often with successful results, he reported.

Dr. Frank A. Salisbury, a psychic healer from Irvine, Calif., reported he has practiced "non-medical healing" for 20 years. He contends that when the individual human consciousness is "in tune" with universal consciousness it can be directed toward healing. Salisbury attains this state of mind through daily meditation. Alexander Everett, director of Mind Dynamics of San Rafael, Calif., agreed that an altered state of consciousness is necessary for psychic healing and described his program for training persons to become psychic healers.

THE MORNING sessions on Wednesday, July 19, were held in a suite in the Ukraine Hotel. Dr. Stanley Krippner reported on the way in which Kirlian photography has been useful in measuring psychokinetic effects. He described an experiment in which a teen-age student at the Foundation for Gifted and Creative Children built a Kirlian device with which he took photographs of a leaf every few minutes. At random intervals a psychic sensitive in an isolated part of the building attempted to affect the leaf's energy field at a distance. The Kirlian photographs indicated that the leaf's energy field actually was wider and brighter when PK was being attempted than during the control periods when the sensitive was resting.

Krippner also reported on research he and Kendall Johnson of UCLA conducted with Manhattan artist-psychic Ingo Swann. Using a Kirlian apparatus designed by Johnson, Krippner and Johnson asked Swann to attempt to change the type of photographs they were getting of his fingertips. Swann was able to do this, especially when he imagined heat coming from his fingers. The resulting photographs then showed flares around his fingertips that were absent on control pictures.

In conclusion Krippner discussed Soviet psychologist A. S. Presman's theories that the electrostatic and electromagnetic fields which surround living things are informational in nature. Presman feels that these fields function as relayers of information from one part of the organism to another and from other organisms and their environment. Krippner called upon parapsychologists to apply the techniques of information theory (as defined by mathematicians, this theory utilizes statistical techniques to analyze the efficiency of signal transmission between men [and their machines]) to the data being produced in Kir-

The afternoon meeting included a film by Austrian parapsychologist Gunter Lieb showing psychic surgery in the Philippines. The film appeared to show the psychic surgeons thrusting their hands into the patients and pulling out diseased tissue. The openings seemed to close immediately, leaving no scars, but Dr. Hans Bender urged a cautious approach to the phenomena, citing several ways in which clever magicians might fake the phenomena, even fooling the camera. Swiss scientist Hans Naegeli, who has traveled to the Philippines to witness the surgery, took a different position. He argued that psychic surgery is theoretically possible from the standpoint of recent advances in modern physics.

DR. YURI Vassilchenko presented a paper on the use of acupuncture in cases of sexual dysfunction during the morning session on Thursday, July 20. He has found acupuncture especially helpful in cases of enuresis, frigidity and impotence. However, instead of using needles Soviet physicians usually stimulate the acupuncture locations with massage, ointments, lotions, mild electrical impulses or laser beams. Noting that some acupuncturists suggest meridians conduct bioenergy through the body while other practitioners suspect acupuncture works on principles similar to hypnosis, Dr. Vassilchenko concluded, "To me the empirical results are more important than theoretical speculations."

Following this address Dr. Krippner introduced the American psychic Tina Johnson, who has been an outstanding subject in clairvoyance experiments at the Maimonides Dream Laboratory. Miss Johnson told how she used automatic writing to obtain information about pictures concealed in sealed envelopes. While engaged in this automatic writing her brain wave pattern was characterized by high-amplitude theta waves (four to eight cycles a second). The less conscious control she felt over the writing, the higher the percentage of theta waves appeared in her EEG record.

Estonian psychiatrist Ilmar Soomere reported on several hundred cases of spontaneous psi phenomena he has collected over an eight-year period. Sixty percent of his cases come from men and 40 percent from women, whereas the reverse is true of other such collections. He reported that the optimal age for psi appears to be between 21 and 25 years old and more psi cases take place in dreams than in the waking state. When the dream concerns someone's death, the dreamer is more likely to awaken immediately than if it concerns another kind of event. He made one interesting observation about the fulfillment time in precognition cases. Dr. Soomere found that when the prophetic information was realistic and direct the foreseen event usually took place within 24 hours. However, when the precognition occurred in symbolic form the fulfillment typically occurred in from one to four weeks. His collection contains a significantly greater number of cases from the war years of 1940-1945 than from other years, with another peak at the time of political turmoil in the 1960's. The cases before 1940 show a regular series of peaks every three years. Dr. Soomere has no theory as to why this pattern appears.

The remainder of the day's sessions were devoted to the humanistic psychology movement with lectures and demonstrations by Dr. Myron Arons of West Georgia College, Vivian Guze of the Institute for Bio-Energetic Analysis in Manhattan and Dr. Carmi Harrari, the chairman for international development for the Association for Humanistic Psychology. A reception that evening featured a film produced by James Hickman and Allayne Scott of New Mexico State University showing several hundred brilliantly-colored Kirlian photographs accompanied by music ranging from the Beatles to Ravi Shankar and the voices of Buckminster Fuller, Alan Watts and Stanley Krippner. The goodwill of the reception was symbolized by the final frame of the film — a dove with the word "peace" in English and in Russian.

THE SOVIET popular science magazine Technology For Youth invited Stanley Krippner, Hans Bender, Giorgi Albert, Robert Nelson and a few other parapsychologists to its offices to meet with Viktor Adamenko and Alla Vinogradova on Friday, July 21. After the film of Vinogradova's PK was repeated, she sat down on a chair near a transparent plastic cube table to give a demonstration.

Dr. Adamenko placed a cigar tube on the table. Vinogradova put her right hand to the side of the tube and it began to move across the table. When it reached the edge, she shifted her hand to the other side of the tube and it moved back. She moved the tube back and forth in this manner several times. When Dr. Adamenko removed the cigar tube and substituted a heavier tube, she moved it in a similar manner. But before attempting to do so she picked up the tube and rubbed it briefly. This appeared to initiate immediate movement once she returned it to the table. However this heavier tube rolled across the table in choppy movements rather than smoothly as the lighter tube had done.

Dr. Adamenko next placed a Ping-Pong ball in front of her and Miss Vinogradova moved her hand in a circular motion a few inches above it. The ball obediently followed her fingers. She rubbed her hands briskly before attempting this feat. Next Adamenko placed a Marlboro cigarette on the cube table. Alla rubbed the cigarette lightly but seemed unable to move it. She asked for another cigarette, which was supplied by one of the onlookers. Without rubbing it she placed it on the table and it followed her right hand back and forth several times. Apparently the Philip Morris cigarette she used was more tightly packed, thus more cylindrical, with less friction. Imagine the advertising potential of such a characteristic if PK ever becomes popular in the United States!

Vinogradova next worked with a film cylinder. Despite its uneven surface it rolled fairly well across the table. When she placed it on end to try to push rather than roll it, it was apparent immediately that she had to exert much more effort on the pushing motion and did not propel it as far. After Alla had rolled another tube, the longest and largest yet, Dr. Adamenko then took a small light bulb and touched the bottom of it to the cube table. The bulb lit up for an instant, a clear indication that an electrostatic field somehow was involved in Vinogradova's PK feats.

Finally, two tubes were placed before Vinogradova. She held her hand above them both and Dr. Adamenko pointed to one of them. With only a slight hand movement she was able to move the specified tube while the other remained still. Her ability to move objects selectively indicates a certain volition in the phenomenon. Adamenko then took away one tube and Vinogradova rolled the remaining tube back and forth.

At this point she announced that it might be possible for someone else to move the tube. Stanley Krippner came to the table and using hand motions identical to those he had watched Vinogradova make was able to roll the tube several inches. For about 30 seconds he could move it back and forth but the decline in its motion was obvious as time passed. After Vinogradova "activated" it again, Friedbert Karger of the Max Planck Institute was able to move it and so was Brigitte Rasmus, a colleague of Hans Bender.

Krippner later reported that for the next two hours he felt a tingling in his right hand. Although Miss Vinogradova's demonstration was not a laboratory experiment, the conditions seemed to rule out any sleight-of-hand techniques such as concealed magnets or hidden threads. Upon returning to the United States Stanley Krippner and James Hickman built a similar plastic cube table with the help of Jean Mayo. They were able to replicate the effects with metallic objects but not with nonmetallic items such as cigarettes. They concluded that their results can be explained by electrostatic principles.

ADAMENKO'S PAPER on bioenergetics was presented at two August meetings in Tokyo by Stanley Krippner as Adamenko was unable to go to Tokyo himself. This not only marked the first occasion when a parapsychological paper was accepted at an International Congress of Psychology but also the first time a Soviet paper was presented by an American.

In his paper Adamenko reported that the intensity of the electrostatic field induced by Vinogradova on the objects varied but sometimes reached 10,000 volts per centimeter as measured by voltmeters. The distance between the objects and her hand also varied but at times was as much as 50 centimeters (two feet). She has moved sliding objects as heavy as 10 grams and rolling objects as heavy as 100 grams.

During the experiments Vinogradova's pulse rate increases rapidly. She works best when her skin is dry and when she feels confident of her abilities. She finds it easiest to move objects on starry nights when there is a full moon. Whether this relates to environmental differences or simply to her enjoyment of the moon and stars is not known.

After Vinogradova has successfully moved an object and a heavier object of similar appearance is substituted, she often will succeed in moving the heavier object. However, she frequently fails to move the heavier object if she is told it is heavier.

We have concluded that the most important Soviet contribution to the field of psychoenergetics is their work in biological energy. This would seem to have practical application in medicine and healing. The major American contribution, on the other hand, has been the implementation of rigorous experimental designs. Soviet parapsychological reports rarely present conditions that rule out sensory-motor "leakage," employ control conditions or use sophisticated statistical analysis. International cooperation, including cross-cultural studies of psychics and cooperative research programs, would greatly aid the introduction of psychoenergetics into the mainstream of science and also would contribute to man's understanding of his own potential. The Moscow meetings of July 1972 represent a small step toward accomplishing this giant task.

A "SPIRIT" WHO WAS ALIVE

By Hereward Carrington

A MOST remarkable instance of a "spirit message" being received from a living person occurred in September 1882 and first was recorded by Miss H. A. Dallas in the Occult Review of July 1924.

A Colonel and Mrs. Nicholson were visiting an unnamed vicarage in Nottinghamshire, England. On the evening of September 13 they decided to entertain themselves with table-tipping. At about 11:15 P.M. the colonel asked the table to tilt if a spirit were present and the table did so. When he asked whose spirit, the table spelled out: ARUNDEL MACKENZIE.

The message continued: "Where is he?" HIS SOUL IS HERE.

"What is his body doing?" PLAYING BILLIARDS.

"Who is with him?" FATHER.

"Who is winning?" SON.

"How many games have they played?" Two, came the reply.

"What has he been doing during the day?" SHOOTING.

Colonel Nicholson was intrigued when the vicar remarked that a Mr. Arundel Mackenzie-Ashton, who only recently had adopted the last name and who lived some 130 miles away, had visited the vicarage a few days previously. The colonel acquired the address of Mr. Mackenzie-Ashton and without informing him of the table-tipping "message," wrote and asked him what he had been doing on the evening of the experiment.

Mr. Mackenzie-Ashton replied: "I had been shooting during the day and in the evening I had two games of billiards with my father. I won both of them and after that I lay down on a couch in the billiard room and fell asleep. Then I had a dream that I was back in W... Vicarage."

My VIGIL and My VISION ...

In my dream I had saved my son through sheer willpower.

Could I now do the same in real life?

By Daisy Forbes

IN SEPTEMBER 1970 I had the most vivid dream I can recall. In it I was sitting in a light-colored chair on the edge of a precipice. Beside me was a similar chair, except that it was black, in which sat a male figure whose face I could not see. We sat in silence facing a great yawning chasm while flashes of red lightning created an eerie glow.

Suddenly the figure beside me leaned forward and started to fall. I made no effort to reach out—but I felt an electric force shoot out from my eyes directly at his slowly falling form. By sheer willpower I drew him back. Here the dream ended abruptly. At this time I did not know the meaning of my nightmare but its memory remained with me.

At 11:00 P.M. on the night of October 10, 1970, my telephone rang. When I answered it I heard the voice of my son Eric's former wife Analee. "Get hold of yourself," she began with an unsteady voice. "I have bad news. Eric was hurt terribly in a motorcycle accident; the girl who was with him was killed."

Stunned, I asked for details but Analee knew little more than she already had told me. She promised to go to the scene and let me know as soon as possible where Eric was and what had happened. The accident had occurred near Placerville, Calif. not far from Sacramento. We learned later that Eric had been riding his motorcycle at a fast clip on a winding mountain road and when making a curve had crossed the white line into the oncoming traffic. A car had run over him, killing his rider instantly.

The girl who died was Eric's new wife Betty, whom he had married only the month before. He never had told me of his remarriage, probably because I openly had expressed disapproval when he divorced Analee. I had grown very fond of Analee and their young son Bobby and I felt Eric was foolish to break up their marriage. I also was distressed when he purchased the red and black motorcycle; those colors suggested death and destruction. Alas, my feeling now was proven prophetic!

On October 12 Analee called to tell me that Eric lay in a coma in Roseville Community Hospital. He was not expected to live. As soon as I could manage I took a plane from my home in Orange, Calif., to Roseville and hurried directly to the hospital. I was allowed to see Eric in the intensive care unit. But I hardly was prepared for the sight of him so battered and bruised with both legs broken and in traction and with needles, tubes and instruments attached all over his body. My heart sank as I approached his bed.

Gazing down at him I suddenly realized: This was the meaning of my dream! The chasm was death and destruction; the black chair and red lightning were the colors of his cycle. In the dream I had managed to draw him back. Could I save his life in reality?

Although visitors to the intensive care unit were supposed to stay for only 10 minutes every two hours, no one asked me to leave as I stood near Eric's bed all through that night. I held his left hand tightly in my right so that the life-giving strength from my body might flow into his. I placed my left hand at the base of his skull in the manner of magnetic healing. I knew that whatever healing power flowed through me came from some universal supply, not from me.

As the evening wore on, the lights were lowered and patients were put under sedation. Still no one asked me to leave. Except for the occasional approach of the night nurse to check instruments there was neither sound nor movement in the room. In the dimness my attention riveted upon Eric's swollen eyelids and the ugly stitched gash across his nose and forehead. Silently I prayed for mercy for my rebellious son. Over and over I asked God to send his healing angels to bring him back from the shadow of death.

Gradually a sensation of great peace entered my heart, followed by a surge of electrical currents that engulfed me like an ocean wave. In the heavy stillness I do not know if my eyes were open or closed as I directed my attention to the foot of his bed. A dazzling light appeared, expanding and becoming brighter than the noonday sun. Within its brilliance I saw the radiant face of Jesus. From Christ's outstretched hands flowed forth sparkling golden flames blended with iridescent blue, purple and pink. A violet mist of pulsating energy filled the surrounding atmosphere.

All at once I became aware of yet another force. Opposite me from white cloud-like forms streamed rainbow-hued rays that sparkled as they swept downward and enveloped the unconscious form on the bed. Next a tiny light appeared over the head of the bed and spread out like a fan in glowing rays of delicate blue intermingled with pink and gold. As if hypnotized I watched in wonder as the shining rays played over Eric's body.

How long this heavenly drama lasted I cannot tell. Gradually voices and activity around me brought me back to my surroundings. A day nurse came to replace the night nurse. She checked Eric's chart and then the instruments. Looking oddly at me, then at Eric, she called to the departing night nurse. After a whispered consultation the night nurse hurried off and I was asked to leave.

In a daze, I went outside and sank into a chair by the door. Presently, I saw the nurse returning down the hallway with Eric's physician, Dr. Clayton Overton. Both of them looked concerned as they passed me and entered Eric's room. I stood up and watched them through the doorway. They went directly to Eric's bed and began to look at his chart. Dr. Overton bent over him and raised his eyelids, then felt his pulse. Loudly he asked, "Can you hear me, Eric?"

I saw Eric's mouth open to speak but no words came out because of the tube in his throat. His head moved slightly. Dr. Overton stared at him for a moment, then turned and walked over to me.

"Will he live?" I asked tremulously.

He shook his head in disbelief and exclaimed, "Wouldn't have given a plugged nickel for his chances yesterday! Don't know what happened during the night—except a miracle. He'll live all right. But there's plenty of patching to do. He'll be needing repairs for a long time."

The following months were filled with suffering and remorse. Betty's death haunted him and Eric's will to live was weak. But gradually he mended and his outlook improved. After rehabilitation training he was able to go to work repairing machines although he still feels pain if he has to stand for any length of time. I know that somehow his ordeal will pass into forgetfulness; not until it does will his healing be complete. But the glory of my transcendent vision while I kept my nocturnal vigil will never be forgotten.

UFOs MARK 26th ANNIVERSARY

By George D. Fawcett

JUNE 24, 1973, marked the 26th anniversary of the first modern UFO sighting and UFOs and their occupants have been seen frequently in recent months. Advanced science and technology appear to be involved in the current global wave of UFO sightings being reported from all 50 states and more than 30 foreign countries.

Hundreds of landing impressions and ground markings such as burned 20- to 30-foot circles, tripod landing-gear marks, background radiation increases, chemical soil changes, denuded vegetation and dehydrated and depressed areas have been found at various sites over the 26 years. Consistent features of UFOs are being reported independently by witnesses thousands of miles apart. Metallic and nonmetallic elements such as magnesium, tin, iron, zinc, calcium, copper, nickel, potassium, phosphorus, titanium, aluminum, silicon, sulfur and boron have been found at UFO landing sites around the world. Increases in ground salinity also have been noted.

UFOs appear to utilize lasers for guidance and communication and in defensive mechanisms. Ultraviolet and microwave radiations have been detected and ultrasonics seem to play an important part in UFO appearances.

Both friendly and hostile UFOs seem to be involved. Over six dozen cases of UFOs being fired upon have been reported to date and 160 different cases of eyewitnesses being burned, blinded, paralyzed and injured by UFOs in close encounters have been documented.

SWITCH OF CURRENT FLOODS JAPAN

JAPANESE weather experts have finally discovered the cause of Japan's unusually high tides. The Seattle Times reports that the meteorologists blame the baffling tides on a change in the ocean current known as Kuroshio. Normally passing well to the northeast of the island nation, the current now has approached Japan's Pacific coast. A branch of the Pacific equatorial current, the Kuroshio is known in English as the Black Current, suggested by its dark blue waters. Though still baffled by the switch, the scientists feel there is no cause for alarm.

Over 400 years ago Francisco de Orellana named a mighty river for fierce female warriors. But are the Amazons more than a legend?

A GERMAN expedition sponsored by the University of Goiás in Brazil went into the Mato Grosso jungle early in 1971 to study the lives and culture of the Galeras, a little-known primitive Indian tribe. In a few months the members of the ex-

Von Puttkamer was astonished by the drawings on the walls and by numerous other objects he saw in the caves. Soon thereafter he left the Galeras and returned within a few days with a team of experts. Most prominent among these was Dr. Altair pedition succeeded in gaining the friendship and confidence of the Galeras and even made some progress toward learning their difficult language.

One day some of the Indians communicated to Jesco von Puttkamer, the German ethnologist who led the expedition, that they had something to show him, something no man like him ever had seen before. Von Puttkamer, intrigued, followed them into the jungle some miles from the Indian settlement where they took him inside a series of caves.

Sales, a renowned anthropologist of the University of Goiás.

The investigation of the caves is not complete but their principal significance has emerged. Apparently they were inhabited by tribes of warrior women who may have been the original South American Amazons.

The origin of the Amazon legend lies in Greek mythology. According to Homer, Herodotus and Strabo, the Amazons lived in great walled cities, cities without men. Once a year, to procreate, they invaded the territories of neighboring tribes. The male children resulting from their unions were put to death and the female children were raised as Amazons.

Armed priestesses were not unknown in ancient Greece and in fact often guarded the temples on Crete. However, they do not account for the Amazons. Many friezes in the Parthenon in Athens show beautiful, voluptuous women locked in mortal combat with men.

The legend of the Amazons came to life again in the 16th Century when Francisco Pizarro fell upon bad times in his search for El Dorado, the "golden city." The Spanish conquistador's expedition was nearly out of food, short of ammunition and shorter on morale. So that his lieutenant, Francisco de Orellana, might go down the Curaray River for help, Pizarro ordered the Spanish soldiers to build a small boat—which they did by hacking down trees, using hammered horse-shoes for nails and caulking the timbers with their ragged shirts.

The swift current swept the little craft into the headwaters of the Rio Negro. When de Orellana and his few men beached the craft and went ashore in search of food they were attacked by Indians whom they identified—to their amazement—as women. Orellana named the great river where they fought their battles “Amazon” for the legendary female warriors he remembered from his classical studies. The mightiest river in the world has borne the name ever since.

Christopher Columbus also had reported that Indian warrior-women were encountered during his expedition to the Antilles; another Spanish adventurer, Nu-nó de Guzman, had heard similar stories in northern Mexico. Both explorers had chroniclers who spread reports of these phenomenal creatures—so different from the demure women of Spain.

Orellana had his chronicler too, probably the most famous of all the scribes who accompanied the Spanish expeditions. He was a Dominican friar, Fr. Gaspar de Carvajal, and upon his return to Europe his story of the fighting women was given wide credence.

Examining the remarkable drawings in the caves Jesco von Puttkamer discovered the most prevalent motif was a symbol consisting of an inverted triangle with a vertical line drawn through it. This same symbol has been found on jewelry discovered in the Amazon basin in the centuries since the time of the conquistadores and it has come to be recognized as representing the female sexual organ. The Dominican friar, Father de Carvajal, returned to Europe with a piece of emerald bearing the symbol.

Also found on the cave walls were drawings of masks. Von Puttkamer and Sales believe these represent the masks worn by Amazon women on their raids for husbands. The horrifying aspect of the masks makes it apparent the women intended to terrify their male prey, this rendering them less likely to resist.

Other wall drawings show flutes and woodwind instruments which are believed to have been used for their hypnotic effect. Some Indian tribes today specifically forbid women to use such instruments in the fear that the ancient practices of the Amazon women might be revived.

Among other finds in the caves, rocks with basins carved into their tops are of particular interest. Carved channels run into the basins from all sides. Dr. Sales postulates that these were used to collect the blood of slaughtered infants—the unwanted male children. But the purpose of collecting the blood is not clear. Drinking human blood is not known to have been a custom among the Amazons but many primitive warrior tribes did it, believing the blood would keep them young and vigorous.

Women in South American cultures always have played completely submissive roles, raising children and preparing food. This makes the reversal all the more startling, for the creatures who inhabited the caves appear to have had all the characteristics of the warlike women who loosed their arrows on the Spanish conquistadores and then fought them ferociously hand-to-hand.

Another remarkable thing about the caves is their location. The great ruined cities of South America — Machu Picchu, Chan Chan, Tiahuanaco, Cajamarca and others are spread along the west coast of the continent. There the terrain and the climate fostered the development of large communities and the building of cyclopean stone structures. Yet many authorities believe the Amazon basin contains the richest of all archaeological treasures, that from there the mother civilization of South America spread through the continent spawning the Maya, the Inca, the Chimú and the Aztecs.

The riddle of the original race is unsolved but recent attempts to unravel it have led to the establishment of links between America and Asia minor. Greek accounts dating from 3000 to 2500 B.C. have been found which refer to ocean journeys of more than a year's duration in 200-foot, triple-decked ships. Stone tablets uncovered in Peru bear inscriptions in characters positively identified as languages used in Asia Minor. The tablets came from buildings similar in engineering and stonework to ancient structures in the Near East. The two cultures shared the same calendar system, the same standards of linear measurement and the same knowledge of medicine and surgery and had similar religious, social and governmental systems.

All in all, it seems reasonable that the culture of Greece-Asia Minor somehow spread to South America and it is equally reasonable that the subculture of the Amazon women made the same journey.

Our HAUNTED Parsonage

Eerie noises, invisible "guests" and a hateful apparition combined to make us feel like intruders.

By Gloria Vittner

EVERY HOUSE seems to have its own aura. My husband Don is transferred fairly often in his ministry and I have become sensitive to the "feel" of houses. As soon as I step into one I have a pretty definite feeling about it and my first impressions usually prove accurate.

In early fall, 1965, we learned that Don was to be transferred to a church in Albany, N.Y., and that October I went to look over the parsonage. The two-story, quite ordinary-looking white house stood on a fairly busy street. Mrs. Spoor, one of the churchwomen, showed me through. The house had stood empty for two years. From the front door a long hall ran the length of the house, both upstairs and down. A long creaky staircase rose upward near the entrance. The whole time I was in the house, while Mrs. Spoor apologized for its run-down condition, I felt distinctly uncomfortable. Upstairs I felt almost as if I were a resented intruder. Frankly I was glad to leave—but this was the house provided by the church and I had to talk myself out of my misgivings. The house surely was big enough for our family. Sheryl, our oldest girl, would soon turn 14 and a few days later Candace would have her 12th birthday. Bonnie was then eight and baby Jonathan was two and a half.

We moved in just before Christmas 1965—not without trepidation on my part. I couldn't stand the dismal wallpaper in the bedrooms so Don painted each one a light color. We also painted the downstairs and Don filled the gaping holes in the plaster in the halls. This lightened the atmosphere in the house but did not lift my spirits.

From the beginning I heard noises—odd bangings and clangings—at night. And the bed shook gently every night. I generally retired fairly early and assumed that truck traffic on the street was responsible for this shaking. But when I began to listen for the trucks I noticed that the shaking didn't coincide with trucks passing. Besides, nothing else shook. But it was months before I began to understand what was happening.

In early June 1966 we had our first houseguest, Harry Krein, a teacher from Loudonville (N.Y.) Christian School. Since we had no guest room Harry had to sleep on the sofa in the living room downstairs. The next morning he asked casually, "Was anyone working upstairs last night?" I replied that we all had gone to bed early. I knew he must have heard something for which he couldn't find a logical explanation. I was relieved that someone besides myself heard unexplained noises in the house.

Just the weekend before Harry's visit I had awakened at two o'clock in the morning feeling vaguely apprehensive. I heard footsteps go down the hall away from our bedroom, past the children's bedrooms and towards the study at the end of the hall. The bathroom was at the opposite end of the hall and I assumed one of the children had used the bathroom and was returning to bed. But as I listened I heard no door open, no bed creak. Without fail my children always left the bathroom light on at night. I could see from my bed that the light wasn't on. I was disturbed and had trouble going back to sleep.

The next morning I asked the girls who had been up during the night but they all shook their heads. I began paying more attention to the noises in the house although Don remained a disbeliever.

"It"—as I began to call the source of the noises—seemed especially fond of the study. One night I shook Don because I could hear the drawers of his desk opening and closing. He grumbled, not fully awake, and asked why on earth I couldn't let him get a good night's sleep. So he slept on while I listened to the drawers.

Don's skepticism was in for a jolt, however. Over Labor Day weekend 1966 Don foolishly climbed the wild plum tree in the yard, fell and hurt his knee. The pain bothered him quite a bit. One night, unable to get comfortable in bed, he went downstairs to sleep sitting up in an armchair. He had a difficult time sleeping even there. The next morning he mentioned to me that he had heard rats in the ceiling of the playroom which is right next to the living room. With a straight face I asked what he meant. Well, he heard a tapping noise.

"Oh," I said. "Well, rats can't go between the second and first floor ceiling. It isn't insulated; there's no room. Besides, we have no rats. I know what you heard. I've heard it too." We did not discuss it further.

The children, strangely enough, seemed to take the disturbances in stride although at times they saw and heard things I did not. When little Jonathan was about three we took a trip away from the house for a few days. As soon as we returned to the house Jonathan ran upstairs to his bedroom, opened the closet and exclaimed, "Where is he? Where is he?" I asked whom he meant. All Jonnie could say was, "Boy, boy." He definitely was looking for someone he had seen.

One Sunday morning before church Jon ran excitedly to the front door and said, "Let him in; let him in!" I went to the door and looked out into the foggy gray morning. No one was in sight.

The happenings seemed to become more frequent and diverse during our last year in the house. Bonnie, then 10, told me she heard someone singing in her room. Aside from the study, the room where she and Jon slept seemed the most haunted; it was the room in which I had felt most uncomfortable on my first visit to the house.

About five o'clock one afternoon in September 1967 Sherry, now 15, and I were alone in the house. I was sprawled across my bed resting when from the hall came a gasp and a short scream. Sherry, in her room with the door closed and the radio on, heard nothing. This got me up, however, and I left the house to run some errands. Sherry, now alone in the house, was running water for a bath when she heard someone crying. She said it had been quite loud so she had turned off the water and searched the house — but found nothing.

At the beginning of January 1968 I came down with the flu and for three days felt pretty miserable. On the fourth day I had the strangest experience of all. I awoke early in the morning. Don had gone to the bathroom to shave and I turned over to go back to sleep. As I was drifting off I became aware that someone was standing near the bed staring at me. I felt a definite, horrifying sensation of pure hatred emanate from a vague figure, the feeling "it" ardently wanted me to die. Now wide-awake I struggled for breath and stared back. The figure was very white, whiter than anything I'd ever seen. I could not make out a face. Even as I stared in disbelief the figure faded and I found myself staring at the ceiling. I hope I never again experience the feeling of terror I felt at that moment. It was too real to have been a dream.

Toward the end of January after I was well over the flu Don and I shared another mysterious experience. At exactly 3:05 A.M. by the bedside clock the front doorbell rang, loud and clear. Naturally I turned over and shook Don, who climbed out of bed saying, "Don't you answer it." I followed only to the head of the stairs while he went down to the door. I certainly wasn't going any farther. Who on earth would be ringing doorbells at this hour? All the time Don was making his way to the door the bell kept ringing. He almost had reached the door when the ringing stopped. He opened the door but there was no one in sight on the dark, quiet street. For once Don had little to say and even admitted he too had a hard time getting back to sleep.

This was not the first time the doorbell had rung when no one was there. It had happened several times during the day after we moved in and before I began to realize what was going on. I later learned that when I was not home Don had answered the door several times to find no one there.

In late February 1968 we moved from the spacious old house. I confess I had no regrets. The house had seemed to have a mind of its own; it had fought us at every turn. Where Don patched the plaster in the hall, bit by bit the new plaster crumbled. Each day I swept up a small pile of plaster from the floor and the cracks kept enlarging. After we left I learned that a former pastor had died in the house from severe burns suffered while he was trying to repair a heater in the church. Perhaps he resented anyone moving into his house.

Whatever "it" was in the house, "it" definitely preferred us not to be there. Now the empty house once more belongs to itself alone.

FRANKENSTEIN GETS HIS WAY

A RADIO ANNOUNCER in Wilmington, N.C., following a Frankenstein movie commercial, quipped, "If you hear of anything happening to WHSL, you'll know that Frankenstein has destroyed our station."

A transmitter fuse blew immediately after he had finished speaking and the station was off the air for 30 minutes.

PART THREE

IN PARTS one and two of this three-part series we learned that Mary Folsom Hayes had shown remarkable healing gifts since childhood but these became more pronounced in 1825 when she first was possessed by the "Power" that then gave her guidance for the remainder of her life. In addition to healing power and psychic diagnosis the "Power" advised her on financial and investment matters. During the winter of 1883 Mrs. Hayes had the psychic impression that untold wealth in iron ore lay in the lands to the east of Ashland, Wis., where she then was living with her sons Jay and Everis, both prominent lawyers. Although experienced miners tried to discourage them, the Hayes family proceeded despite the wildness of the unsettled terrain in exploring the land and establishing two mines, the Ashland mine near Ironwood, Mich., and the Germania mine just to the west of it in Wisconsin. The "Power" continued to supervise the mining operations but nevertheless all was not smooth sailing.

NOW THAT the two mines were thriving Mrs. Hayes felt impressed that the family should live nearby. They selected a homesite on what was called Germania Hill just below the mine and when the house was finished in the summer of 1886 the Hayes family moved in. The Chynoweths also built a home on Germania Hill and moved in that fall.

Mrs. Hayes was distressed at the lack of facilities for the 350 miners then working at the two properties. After their long working day there was no recreation other than the saloons in the small mining town nearby. So in January 1887 Mary Hayes announced to the miners that she would establish a school and library for them; six weeks later these services were in operation with members of the Hayes and Chynoweth families and their friends serving as teachers and librarians. Mrs. Hayes offered a college education to any of the miners who were prepared for it; six men eventually took her up on this offer.

Scarcely had they settled in their new home and established the school at the mines than Mary's Power directed them to make their permanent home in California. Consequently in the spring of 1887 the Hayeses and the Chynoweths traveled together to California. The Power directed them to choose a homesite on which they all agreed. They found a tract of 240 acres seven miles south of San Jose, Calif., on which stood a beautiful oak grove. The property was not for sale but nevertheless they approached the owner John Tenant and offered him a good price for the estate. His telegram accepting their offer awaited them on their return to Wisconsin.

sin. The family moved in September 1887.

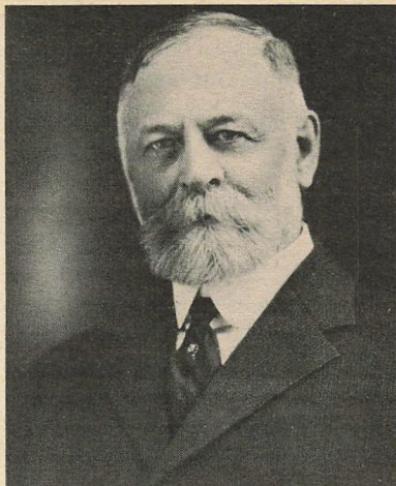

The Tenant house at Eden Vale (as they named the estate) was not large enough for the growing family and Mrs. Hayes had two adjoining houses built, one for Jay and his wife and one for Everis and his family. The Chynoweths purchased an adjoining tract of land and Mr. and Mrs. John Wetmore, close friends of both families, also settled nearby.

A few months before the move to California T. B. Chynoweth, Ellen's older brother and a prominent Madison lawyer, had become alarmed by his failing eyesight. Although he had known Mary Hayes only casually he had heard such glowing accounts of her healing powers from members of his family that he journeyed to Hurley, Wis., near Germania Hill, to consult Mary about his eye problem. Mrs. Hayes not only cured his failing eyesight but won his heart. In 1889 when T. B. followed the family to Eden Vale Mrs. Hayes accepted his proposal and the couple were married that July. For the rest of her life the new bride was known as Mary Hayes Chynoweth.

In the spring of 1890 the peaceful life in California was shattered by news of a disastrous fire that was raging in the Germania mine. The alarm had sounded at midnight on March 18. The flames leaping from No. 2 shaft rose higher and higher until they lit the country for miles around. Three hundred men were trapped in the mines below. Mine superintendent Darwin W. Smith later wrote this account of the fire:

"All knew that the flames were past control and the one thought possessed us — can the men below be saved? Brave and noble work was done but in spite of all efforts five perished, two of them in the brave and heroic attempt to rescue their comrades. Every effort to reclaim the bodies of those who had perished having failed, the shafts were finally closed and banked in the hope of smothering the fire. Vain hope! The fire had spread into the levels where there were hundreds of thousands of feet of dry timbers and none could predict the end. The next day a desperate and successful effort restored the bodies of the dead to their friends. But the opening of the shafts for this purpose had furnished the fire with fresh air, creating a terrific current, and the flames were again pouring forth with terrible force. It was with great difficulty and danger that we again covered and banked No. 2 shaft. Then hours lengthened into days, days into weeks and weeks into months and still we fought the fire with all the appliances and in all the ways that human skill, ingenuity and experience could suggest.

"There were seven levels, some of them a thousand or even 1500 feet in length, upheld by heavy timbers. The mine was 600 feet deep. The pumps of course were useless either to fight the fire or to prevent the water from rising but we poured down the shafts all the water that we could through the agency of the waterworks. We forced down all the live steam that two batteries of boilers could generate. We opened the shafts, made desperate efforts to get near enough to the fire to fight it with hose but were baffled and forced back by the heat and smoke and poisonous gases. . . . What were we to do? We had exhausted our last resource.

"The solution was at hand. Tidings came that Mrs. Chynoweth was on her way east. . . . When she came she verified our expectations. She had come to put out the Germania fire There was a burning mine filled with steam, smoke, fire and more deadly and dangerous than all, poisonous gases, a stealthy subtle invisible foe. There were falling timbers and walls, caving levels and crumbling pillars; constantly changing currents bearing gas and smoke and flame in such bewildering ways as to baffle judgment and render any regular order or plan impossible. . . . Yet in the very teeth of all these conditions Mrs. Chynoweth told us in her calm loving way and with the knowledge of God that if we were obedient and faithful we should surely succeed and that 'not a person should be injured.'

"We believed and under her direction we went forth to victory. For five successive days and nights we worked while she walked the surface over our heads in prayer to the great God for our success and safety. We walked in heat so intense, smoke so dense, gases so foul, that I marvel now as I write that a single soul survived all the hardships and dangers. . . . We climbed ladders where rocks were so delicately balanced that seemingly a breath would send them crashing down and crushing to instant death those below. At other places the timbers supporting some part of the level were burned out and under ordinary circumstances no mortal would have risked his weight upon that level for the ransom of a world. . . . We laid pipes along the edge of the footwalls that were crumbling with heat and placed timbers and planks across chasms with not more than three inches lap on the crumbling edges; yet we passed back and forth for days carrying timber, pipes and tools and dragging hose.

"An ascent was made up the ladderway at No. 3 shaft from the fourth to the third level upon partially burned and burning ladders through heat so intense, smoke so dense and gases so foul as under any other circumstances must have proved fatal. . . . The second day from this event a victorious ascent was made up No. 3, the gallant men having worked for hours in a temperature of over 145 degrees, spiking hose to partially burned ladders and redeeming burnt timbers. Night Captain Robert

King drove spike after spike in pitch-darkness without a single miss. The heat and gas were so great that the lanterns would not burn. . . .

"But where was she who had been our source of strength, wisdom and inspiration? Gone back to her sunny home in the West, telling us the day she started that her mission was accomplished, the fire was under control and that it was but a matter of detail and continuance on our part of faithful work for two days longer and all would be well. And all was well and not a single man had been harmed."

* * *

IN THE winter of 1891 Mary Hayes Chynoweth began construction of a chapel on the Edenvale estate. Once it was completed regular Sunday services were conducted there by Mrs. Chynoweth. So many requests came for copies of her teaching that they began to publish a journal, The True Life. But, alas, the first issue had barely come off the press when T. B. Chynoweth suddenly died on February 28, 1891.

Perhaps to take her mind off her personal loss Mary now entered into her most active period of healing. So many came to Eden Vale seeking guidance and healing that Mary set up Tuesdays and Fridays as regular visiting days for healing and sometimes saw as many as 150 persons a day. Numbers were assigned patients so they could be taken in order. The registry record shows that in the two years following her husband's death Mrs. Chynoweth gave over 7,000 personal treatments, not counting absent healing given in response to letters.

After the birth of her third child Everis' wife Nettie's health began to decline. In the spring of 1892 Mrs. Chynoweth told her son that Nettie had a dangerous tumor that required immediate surgery. Physicians were called in and they unanimously agreed that Nettie was pregnant. They said the patient's life depended on taking the child but Mary answered them, "Gentlemen, this is not a case of pregnancy and I cannot have her tormented by such a mistake. She has three tumors and unless you can operate successfully for tumors, you cannot save her." The medical men remained convinced of their diagnosis and confidently awaited the birth of a child that never came.

Nettie began sinking rapidly and one day as Mary leaned over her, asked, "Is this death?" Mary sadly answered, "Yes, it is." Shortly afterwards the end came. The physicians suggested an autopsy to determine whether their diagnosis or that of Mrs.

Chynoweth had been correct. The autopsy revealed a central cancerous tumor slightly attached to the ovary and another double tumor toward the left side. Although they maintained that the advanced cancer had been incurable anyway, the doctors were forced to admit that Mrs. Chynoweth had been correct.

The tranquil but active years at Eden Vale were further shattered by the disastrous money panic of 1893. Business was so depressed that iron ore sales fell off to nothing. The Ashland and Germania mines continued operations but the unsold ore simply accumulated in stockpiles. In August 1893 the Germania mine shut down and the Ashland workings were forced to cease the following January. The stockholders had borrowed large sums to keep the mines going that long and the Hayes brothers had endorsed the notes. At the height of the depression the two brothers owed over $650,000. In the midst of this bleak situation Mrs. Chynoweth gave them unequivocal assurance: "You shall lose nothing! None of your property shall be permanently injured or taken from you!"

In the summer of 1894 the sales agents for the mines who had loaned large sums of money during the previous year insisted that the iron ore must be sold. Over 200,000 tons of ore were shipped to Cleveland but the receipts from its sale scarcely covered transportation and interest charges. With the collateral for the loans now gone the creditors moved against the mining corporations. The Hayes brothers were forced to sign over their stock to creditors and resign as officers. The estate at Eden Vale had been mortgaged to pay off some of the creditors and now to avoid foreclosure on the mortgage the family deeded the property to the mortgage holders and were forced to lease it to remain on the land.

In the midst of the most trying times the brothers desperately needed $25,000 to meet immediate obligations. When they asked their mother where they might possibly obtain a loan she replied, "Go to Mr. Abbot." Jay and Everis were aghast. E. H. Abbot, a wealthy Boston lawyer, was their largest creditor and was reputed to be cold-blooded and unsympathetic in his business dealings. As they already owed Mr. Abbot $207,000 with no prospects of repayment they hardly expected him to loan them anything more. Mrs. Chynoweth repeated her impression, however, and the two sons headed for Boston. Jay and Everis were dazed when the supposedly hard-nosed Mr. Abbot almost immediately advanced them the $25,000.

By June 1898 the recession was relieved sufficiently so that the Hayes family sought to regain control of Ashland mine and put it back into operation. The mining lease was now held in the names of J. M. Longyear of Marquette, Mich., and Frederick Ayer of Boston, Mass. These two gentlemen were friendly to Jay and Everis but hesitated to try to force the creditors to permit the mine to be reopened. The creditors stubbornly refused to allow the Hayes family to have any say in the operation of the mine in which only two shafts were still being worked.

Jay Hayes went to live with Judge Lyon in Madison in order to be closer to the various creditors and their attorneys. On a winter morning in 1899 Mrs. Chynoweth telegraphed Jay, "Do not under any circumstances let them take Number Six shaft pillar." This pillar contained 160,000 tons of very fine ore but removal of it meant destruction of the two remaining shafts. Jay hurried to Boston to find that the creditors had secretly offered to allow reopening of the mine if Longyear and Ayer would agree to let them take Number Six shaft pillar. Jay arrived just in time to prevent the deal.

In May 1899 Mary Hayes Chynoweth and Everis traveled east to join Jay. Mary told Jay to make one last plea to Longyear and Ayer to sue for recovery of the property on the grounds that the creditors had nearly destroyed the mine through poor operation. Mary continued to give explicit instructions on each legal move to be made and assured Longyear and Ayer that the suit never would go to trial. Although the creditors threatened to fight the suit to the bitter end, once their attorneys had visited the mines and verified that the destruction was indeed as bad as the Hayes brothers charged, they recommended settling out of court. The creditors agreed to turn over control of the mine to the Hayes brothers in return for $7,500 which Mr. Longyear generously advanced them. In June a new company organized by Everis took control of Ashland mine.

The family immediately moved into the superintendent's house at Ashland mine and began planning to reactivate the operations. In the midst of this activity word came in July 1899 that the family home in Eden Vale had caught fire and burned to the ground. Mary Hayes Chynoweth's only words, when she heard the news about the complete destruction of the house, were "Thank God, no one was killed."*

Some 5,000 tons of ore was all that could be mined without extensive repair to the mine but this was sold for cash. The proceeds were used to pump out the two workable shafts and thus work could begin without the need to borrow further funds.

*The Eden Vale property has suffered greatly from fires over the years. The imposing mansion erected to replace the 1891 house was not completed until 1905. Subsequent fires destroyed the carriage house in 1929 and the original Tenant house in 1938. The chapel constructed for the True Life Church also burned down. The 1905 mansion now serves the San Jose Rescue Mission as a residential center for alcoholic rehabilitation. An illustrated history of the estate appeared in the magazine section of the San Jose Mercury-News on November 5, 1972.

The renewed operations were so successful that the Hayes brothers arranged to buy back the Eden Vale estate for $100,000 and by 1901 had completely paid off every creditor.

Back in California once more, Mrs. Chynoweth resumed her healing and preaching activities. The True Life Church was organized in 1902 to perpetuate her teachings and Mary remained active in its ministry until the spring of 1905 when heart trouble and the infirmities of age forced her to retire. On July 17, 1905, at the age of 80, she died peacefully in her sleep.

AMERICA'S FORGOTTEN SYMBOL

ON EVERY dollar bill is portrayed the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States. Although the eye-and-pyramid are familiar to millions of persons, the majority do not know how this Masonic symbol happened to be chosen for the Great Seal. According to the Aquarian University of Maryland (2405 Ruscombe Lane, Baltimore, Md. 21209), over 50 signers of the Declaration of Independence, including Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, were Masons and thus familiar with the symbology and esoteric teachings of that society.

In Masonry the eye in the triangle, portrayed as the pyramid's capstone, represents the "all-seeing eye of God" and symbolizes spiritual vision or clairvoyance. The Great Pyramid of Gizeh in Masonic tradition was an ancient temple of the mystery schools. Annuit Coeptis means "He prospers our undertaking" and reflects the founding fathers' belief that America was part of a divine plan. Novus Ordo Seclorum, "new order of the ages," refers to the rejection of a monarchy in favor of a democratic system of government.

NEW HORIZONS in HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS

Some experiences under LSD go beyond accepted reality into supernatural or extrasensory worlds.

By David Techter

PART TWO

FOR MORE than a decade Dr. Stanislav Grof of the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center has pioneered in the use of LSD in psychotherapy. During most of these therapy sessions, now numbering over 2,000, subjects have reported experiences that Dr. Grof designates transpersonal—“an expansion or extension of consciousness beyond the usual ego boundaries and the limitations of time and space.” When trying to analyze the bewildering variety of such experiences, he has found it convenient to classify them by content rather than by depth of experience.

His first major division is between those experiences that involve an accepted part of objective reality such as the subject’s embryonic development and experiences that go beyond accepted reality, for instance encounters with angels or deities. In the former case, even though the content of the experience may be objective, the ability of the subject to recall or be aware of that part of reality may go far beyond what we normally consider part of ordinary consciousness.

An extensive group of these “objective” transpersonal experiences Dr. Grof relates to the subject’s recall of his physical birth. Thus the tranquil existence in the womb prior to birth may be compared to the subject’s experiences of “cosmic unity.” Prior to the onset of labor the peaceful existence of the fetus is upset by chemical and physiological changes; this stage is paralleled by LSD experiences in which the subject feels threatened by an unknown and invisible force. At the onset of uterine contractions but before the cervix opens the fetus is in a "no exit" situation; numerous LSD subjects report a situation in which they experience suffering without hope of escape, often accompanied by a fear of death.

Labor continues with the opening of the cervix and the passage of the fetus through the birth canal. Dr. Grof compares this phase with the frequent death-rebirth experiences reported by his patients. The physical birth of the newborn is paralleled by the transpersonal experiences of rebirth and transformation. Dr. Grof groups these various experiences that seemingly correspond to the individual's sensations just before, during and immediately following his birth into his major category of perinatal ("around birth") experiences.

BESESIDES THESE perinatal experiences Dr. Grof suggests that numerous other experiences correspond to objective reality. Some patients claim to remember embryonic life before their birth. While many of these experiences should be considered fantasy rather than memory, in a few cases surprising confirmation was obtained. Dr. Grof tells of one patient who reported being within his mother's uterus, complete with sensations of immersion in fetal liquid, hearing his mother's heartbeat and experiencing his head as very large in proportion to his body. "Suddenly he heard strange noises coming from the outside. He felt they were distorted by the abdominal walls and the fetal liquid and had a strange echoing quality. He could hear laughing and yelling human voices and sounds reminding him of carnival trumpets." The young man later ascertained that just two days before his birth his mother had visited an annual flower mart in his native village despite strong warnings from her family against attending the carnival.

Many subjects have the sensation of exploring their genetic lineage and reliving events in the lives of their ancestors. For instance, a person of Scandinavian origin may see scenes from Viking days. Usually these experiences are generalized "racial memories" incapable of historic proof. A most interesting exception, however, was the case of a Czech female patient being treated for severe fear of cancer. During the course of four consecutive LSD sessions the patient saw scenes taking place in Prague in the 17th Century during the Thirty Years' War. What is now Czechoslovakia was defeated by the Hapsburgs and 27 leading members of the Czech nobility were beheaded at a public execution in Prague. The material revealed by the patient was checked against historical records and proved to be startlingly accurate. Many of the scenes she saw appeared to be episodes in the life of one of the unfortunate noblemen, including his execution. Dr. Grof tried to analyze the woman's visions in terms of her own life but could make no sense of them.

Two years later, after Dr. Grof already had come to the United States, he received a letter from this patient. She remarked that she just had visited her father whom she had not seen since her parents were divorced when she was three. Her father had invited her to dinner and later that evening had discussed his latest interest, namely the family genealogy. He showed her documents proving he was descended from one of the 27 beheaded nobility. The patient wrote Dr. Grof that she was convinced her LSD experiences were due to genetic memory. However, he noted that one of the most striking scenes of ancient Prague was her description of the execution of the noblemen, which must have taken place after the ancestor had passed his heredity on to the offspring. Dr. Grof admits being unable to explain this patient's remarkable visions.

Sometimes subjects describe vivid and dramatic scenes from another life, time and place. Dr. Grof remarks that the subjects frequently express the view they are reliving bad karma. At other times the subject will see scenes from ancient times without identifying with a previous life of that time. These scenes from the past nearly always belong to a foreign culture. Nevertheless, the details of life at those places, even the insights into religious and moral beliefs, are surprisingly accurate.

Sometimes the subjects regress even further and experience life during evolutionary history before man. Dr. Grof explains, "The identification is rather complex, complete and authentic; it involves the body image, a variety of physical feelings and physiological sensations, specific emotions and a new perception of the environment. Occasionally the subjects report insight into zoological or ethological facts that by far exceed the level of their education in natural sciences."

Occasionally subjects will claim that while under the drug they can voluntarily travel in time. Other subjects will claim clairvoyant knowledge of future events. Grof comments that some of these precognitions actually have resembled later events.

Another frequent experience is the subject's transcendence of his own ego to merge with the consciousness of others. Often this will be a sense of union with those persons present at the session or with members of the subject's family. At other times the subject will identify with a particular historical figure or even with an entire group, such as all the soldiers who have died on battlefields during all time.

In a similar fashion the subject may identify with other forms of life, plant or animal. "The subject can have, for example," writes Dr. Grof, "an illuminating insight into what it feels like when a snake is hungry, when a turtle is sexually excited or when a salmon breathes through its gills." This goes beyond the symbolic representation of the subject's emotional states—such as "becoming" a panther because of his own aggressive feelings—in that the subject knows detailed information about the creature's habits. The subject can distinguish this animal identification from mere symbolic representation and also relive his evolutionary history. All three experiences may occur in a single LSD session, Dr. Grof states, and the subject has no trouble telling them apart.

Plant identification is less common but does occur. The subject may identify with the consciousness of inorganic matter or with individual organs or cells within his own body. Conversely, his consciousness may expand to include the entire planet or beyond. Some subjects report experiencing consciousness of interstellar space which they characterize as the feeling of tranquility, purity, infinity and unity.

In the anecdotal literature produced during the 1950's as a result of the drug scene there were frequent claims of out-of-the-body experiences occurring during LSD "trips." The unanswered question is whether these experiences were drug-induced hallucinations or true projections. Dr. Grof agrees that subjects frequently claim an OOBE but the majority of these patients' visions never go beyond the experimental room. Sensations of traveling to other physical locations are much less frequent and only rarely does a subject bring back a sufficiently detailed description to verify the objectivity of his vision. Occasionally a subject claims to be able to project himself to any point in time and space. Dr. Grof quotes one such report which deserves reprinting here.

"I was preoccupied," writes the subject, "with the problems of time and space and the insoluble paradoxes of infinity and eternity that baffle our reason in the usual state of consciousness. I could not understand how I could have let myself be 'brain-washed' into accepting the simpleminded concept of one-dimensional time and three-dimensional space as being mandatory and existing in objective reality. It appeared to me rather obvious that there are no limits in the realm of spirit and that time and space are arbitrary constructs of the mind. Any number of spaces with different orders of infinities could be deliberately created and experienced. A single second and eternity seemed to be freely interchangeable. I thought about higher mathematics and saw deep parallels between various mathematical concepts and altered states of consciousness.

"In this situation it suddenly occurred to me that I do not have to be bound by the limitations of time and space and can travel in the time-space continuum quite deliberately and without any restrictions. This feeling was so convincing and overwhelming that I wanted to test it by an experiment. I decided to try traveling to the city of my birth which was several thousand miles away. After visualizing the direction and the distance I set myself into motion and tried to fly through space to the place of destination. This effort resulted in an experience of flight through space at an enormous velocity but to my disappointment I wasn't getting anywhere. I stopped this activity and reconsidered the situation; I could not understand that the experiment would not work in spite of my convincing feeling that such space travel was possible. Immediately I realized that I was still under the influence of my old concepts of time and space. I continued thinking in terms of directions and distances and approached the task accordingly. It suddenly appeared to me that the proper approach would be to make myself believe that the place of the session was actually identical with the place of destination. When I approached the task in this way I experienced peculiar and bizarre sensations. I found myself in a strange, rather congested space full of vacuum tubes, wires, resistors and condensers. After a short period of confusion I realized that I was trapped in a TV set located in the corner of the room of the apartment in my native city where I spent my childhood. I was trying to use, somehow, the speakers for hearing and the tube for seeing. Suddenly I understood that this experience was a symbolic expression ridiculing the fact that I was still hung up on my previous beliefs concerning space and matter. The only way of transmitting images at long distances that was conceivable and acceptable for me was based on the use of electromagnetic waves such as in the case of television broadcasting. Such a transmission of course is restricted by the velocity of the waves involved. At the moment when I realized and firmly believed that I could operate in the realm of free spirit and did not have to be restricted even by the velocity of light or other types of electromagnetic waves, the experience changed rapidly.

"I broke through the TV screen and found myself walking in the apartment of my parents. I did not feel any drug effect at that point and the experience was as sober and as real as any other experience of my life. I walked to the window and looked at the clock on the street corner; it showed a five-hour difference from the time of the time zone where the experiment took place.

In spite of the fact that this difference reflected the actual time difference between the two zones, I did not find it convincing evidence. I knew the time difference intellectually and my mind could have easily fabricated this experience.

"I felt I needed a much more convincing proof of whether or not what I was experiencing was 'objectively real' in the usual sense. I finally decided to perform a test, to take a picture from the wall and later check in correspondence with my parents if something unusual happened at that time in their apartment. I reached for the picture but before being able to touch the frame I was overcome by an increasingly unpleasant feeling that it was an extremely risky and dangerous undertaking. I felt suddenly the uncanny influence of evil forces and a touch of something like 'black magic'; it seemed as if I were gambling for my soul. . . .

"I started understanding the dangers involved in my experiment. I remembered passages from different books warning against toying with these powers before the individual overcomes his ego limitations and reaches spiritual maturity. There was, however, something that appeared even more relevant. I found out that I was extremely ambivalent in regard to the outcome of my test. On the one hand, it seemed extremely enticing to be able to liberate oneself from the slavery of time and space. On the other hand, however, it was obvious that something like this had far-reaching and serious consequences and could not be seen as an isolated experiment in voluntary control of space. If I could get confirmation that it was possible to manipulate physical environment at a distance of several thousand miles, my whole universe would collapse as a result of this one experiment and I would find myself in a state of utter metaphysical confusion. The world as I knew it would not exist any more; I would lose all the maps I relied on and felt comfortable with. I would not know who, where and when I was and would be lost in a totally new frightening universe about the laws of which I would have not the slightest notion.

"I could not bring myself to carry through the intended experiment and decided to leave the problem of the objectivity and reality of the experience unresolved. . . ."

THE OTHER major category in Dr. Grof's classification of transpersonal experiences, those which go beyond conventionally accepted reality, are nonetheless vivid and convincing to the experients. These include encounters with various entities recognized as being suprahuman. Sometimes these are perceived as spiritual teachers or guides; the subject may recognize them as Jesus, Sri Aurobindo, various saints, angels, etc. Other experients report science-fiction-like worlds peopled with strange and alien beings. Still another group of experients encounter blissful or wrathful deities, frequently recognized as Isis, Shiva, Baal, etc. Other subjects, even though unfamiliar with Jung's theories, will encounter entities corresponding to such archetypal figures as the Great Mother, the Buffoon and the like.

Another group of experiences resemble phenomena known from occult and Spiritualist literature. Dr. Grof writes, "The subject can, for example, exhibit signs of a mediumistic trance; his facial expression is strikingly transformed, his countenance and gestures appear alien and his voice is dramatically changed. He can speak in a foreign language, write automatic texts and produce obscure hieroglyphic designs or draw strange pictures and unintelligible squiggles."

Other subjects report encountering and communicating with spirit entities. Dr. Grof tells of a young Czech girl who regressed to 10 years old and witnessed the death of her father which she had in fact observed at that age. At first she merely watched his terminal agony but then started to experience it herself. Fully merged with her father's consciousness she approached his physical death. When father and daughter crossed the threshold of life and death, the subject went into a state of panic which made communicating with her impossible for the next two hours. Finally, when she came out of her LSD state, she described her experiences: "After we crossed the threshold of life and death I found myself in an uncanny and frightening world. It was all filled with fluorescent ether of a strangely macabre nature. There was no way of assessing whether the space was finite or infinite. An endless number of souls of deceased human beings were suspended in the luminescent ether; in an atmosphere of strange distress and disquieting excitement they were sending me nonverbal messages through some unidentifiable extrasensory channels. They appeared unusually demanding and it seemed as if they needed something from me. In general the atmosphere reminded me of the descriptions of the underworld that I read in Greek literature. But the objectivity and reality of the situation was beyond my imagination — it provoked sheer and utter metaphysical horror that I cannot even start describing."

Another quite different group of experiences resemble the teachings of kundalini yoga. Subjects familiar with the terminology of yoga often will describe their experiences in terms of the rising of kundalini and the activation of the various chakras. Even subjects unfamiliar with yoga will describe experiences that correspond to the awakening of kundalini.

The most profound experiences under LSD are experiencing the Universal Mind and encountering the Supracosmic and Metacosmic Void. In the former, the subject is convinced that he is experiencing the ultimate force in the universe, which he later characterizes as infinite existence, infinite wisdom and infinite bliss. Dr. Grof adds, "Occasionally the experience of Universal Mind is associated with interesting insights into the process of the creation of the three-dimensional world and into the Buddhist concept of the Wheel of Death and Rebirth."

A rather rare occurrence in LSD sessions is experience of the Supracosmic Void, the "primordial Emptiness and Nothingness which is the ultimate source of all existence. The terms supra- and metacosmic refer to the fact that this Void appears to be both supraordinated to and underlying the world of creation. It is beyond time and space, beyond any change, and beyond polarities such as good and evil, light and darkness, stability and motion, agony and ecstasy." This concept is more common in Oriental religion than in Western philosophy and its occurrence in LSD subjects with no Oriental background is interesting.

* * *

WHAT are we to make of this bewildering variety of extraordinary experiences? In his paper Dr. Grof merely sketches them out for purposes of putting them "on record." He remarks that the various experience types rarely appear in pure form and that perinatal experiences, for example, will be mixed with group identification, archetypal encounters and feelings of cosmic unity. "This seems to reflect deep intrinsic interrelations between various types of transpersonal phenomena," he remarks, "as well as the multilevel nature of the psychedelic experience."

At the annual conference of the American Academy of Psychotherapists in New York City in October 1972 Dr. Grof preceded his exposition of these transpersonal experiences with the observation that their occurrence in the course of LSD psychotherapy suggests to him that the transpersonal dimension lies latent within the individual and that no account of the psyche is complete that does not take the transpersonal potentiality into account. One is reminded of William James' famous statement that all about our normal consciousness, "parted from it by the flimsiest of screens, there lie potential forms of consciousness entirely different . . . No account of the universe in its totality can be final which leaves these other forms of consciousness quite discarded."

As foreign as many of these transpersonal experiences seem to our everyday existence our psyche is aware, if Weil is correct, of these deeper levels of consciousness and has the innate need to experience such nonordinary reality. The transpersonal elements that blossom forth in full force during the drug experience intrude in milder form into our dreams and into our waking consciousness in the form of psychic and mystical experiences. Yet many psychologists and psychiatrists try to deny the existence of nonordinary consciousness or brand it a sign of mental disturbance.

Dr. Grof concludes his paper with a call for dispassionate study of transpersonal phenomena. "Systematic research of these most unusual phenomena," he writes, "could dramatically change our concepts of man and be of unforeseen relevance to the psychiatry and psychology of the future."

IN A BED OF MUD

By Dora M. Pettinella

A DREAM warning came too late to save the life of Domenico Rocchi of Isola Sacra, a suburb of Rome, Italy. His 33-year-old son Antonio woke up early one April morning from a dream in which he had seen his father drowning in a bed of mud in the canal nearby.

Alarmed, Antonio quickly dressed and rushed out of the house to search for his father along the canal. Walking along Via Coni Zugna, he found his motorcycle, which his father had borrowed, half buried in the canal mud. He immediately called the police but Domenico had already drowned by the time the police located his body and pulled it out of the canal.

CHEATS DEATH FOR THIRD TIME

L AURIE CLARK of Lakeside, Calif., is only 17 but already she has narrowly escaped death on three different occasions. In 1962 Laurie survived a plane crash near Palm Springs that took the lives of her parents. Then in January 1972 she was one of 10 passengers in a motor launch that ran aground on a Mexican beach 750 miles south of San Diego.

Several passengers nearly drowned.

Just three months later Miss Clark was riding with a friend, Walter Slunaker, 42, of San Diego. As they passed a pickup truck north of Lakeside, their four-wheel-drive vehicle went out of control and crashed. Slunaker was killed but Laurie and the three riders in the pickup truck escaped injury.

ON GRANDMOTHER'S BIRTHDAY

By Judith Richardson

OF ALL my friends Sandra Flannagan is the most level-headed, stable and logical. This made it all the more astonishing to see her so shaken during her visit to my home in New Castle, Del., in early March 1964. She arrived on March 2 and we had a wonderful time until the morning of the fifth when Sandra came down to breakfast looking as if she had seen a ghost. I asked if she were ill. She didn't reply but just kept looking puzzled and upset. After I asked repeatedly what was wrong she suddenly spoke up, "When is your grandmother's birthday?"

This was startling coming from Sandra, for my grandmother Josephine Stolfa had been dead since 1959. Sandra had seen her occasionally but Grandmother had been bed-ridden for 16 years before she died, so Sandra really never knew her.

Sandra then asked about my grandfather's health. I couldn't believe my ears. Grandfather Frank Stolfa had been living with us since 1959 and although he had been ill Sandra knew he was doing well, for she had spoken with him often during her visit. I told her that he was only 64 years old and had many good years ahead of him.

By now I was quite concerned about Sandra. She was not behaving like her usual unflappable self. After more questions that served only to puzzle me Sandra finally explained. She had been awakened by my grandmother standing near her bed. Thinking she was dreaming Sandra got up and took a shower—but as she was getting dressed, fully awake, she saw Grandmother again. Still standing near the bed, Grandmother said, "I'll come for Frank on my birthday."

I told Sandra that Grandmother's

RETURN FROM DEATH

By Betty J. Myers

AS I LAY in the darkness trying to go to sleep I could hear the slow even breathing of my husband Harold and the kids. Everyone was asleep but me and I should have been. The night was silent and I was tired from doing the laundry that day. You expect it to be hot on August 21 but it had cooled down. Then why couldn't I sleep? I was comfortable enough although well overdue in my pregnancy. My baby sure was taking its time being born.

Boy, I needed another baby like I needed another head. I was 25 and already had four youngsters under six. We had a hard time providing the things they needed but they were loved and they knew it.

I happened to glance over at the dark mahogany paneling of our mobile home. It appeared to be bulging. That was silly: walls don't suddenly bulge in the middle of the night without making a sound. I noticed that the bulge was not mahogany in color but a shiny steel gray.

Silently I watched as a gray casket floated slowly through the wall, directly over my motionless body and out the other side of the room. I knew this could not be real for I had had psychic visions before. Somehow I knew this was my casket; I would die when the baby was born. Yet I wondered why I was not frightened. Still puzzled, I dropped off to sleep.

A month later I woke up early in the morning of September 21, 1955, with labor pains. The clock stood at 12:15 and the rain outside was coming down in torrents. What a night to rush to the hospital!

Just as I was mounting the steps of Morgan County Hospital in nearby

Martinsville, Ind., there was a power failure. Then we learned that my doctor, Dr. David Eisanberg, was out of town. By the time another doctor arrived the lights were on again and I was minutes away from giving birth. Dr. Jones administered ether and soon my baby boy — Harold Davis Johnson — was born. I looked up at the clock; it was one o'clock. Then the big bright lights over me slowly dimmed and darkness closed in on me.

Somehow I was floating. I was dressed in an ankle-length snow-white gown with long puffy sleeves and cuffs at the wrist. I was floating slowly on my back in a sea of dark blue-gray space. As far as I could see there was nothing but that strange blue space. I was neither hot nor cold, just comfortable, no pain at all.

In the distance, oh so far away, I could hear Dr. Jones talking. "I can't even hear her heartbeat with a stethoscope," he said sadly. "She's gone."

Time did not exist. Suddenly I heard another voice, far away. It was the nurse. "Doctor, come quickly," she cried. "She just moved."

As my vision cleared the lights seemed very bright. I noticed the clock: it was 1:16. When I tried to move pain shot through me like a lightning bolt.

Later I saw my death certificate, completely filled out except for Dr. Jones' signature, in the wastebasket where he had thrown it.

He pulled up a chair and explained that apparently I was allergic to ether. My heart had stopped for 10 minutes and he considered it a miracle I had no brain damage. I had indeed died but it must not have been the proper time and I had been sent back. — Yucaipa, Calif.

REQUEST FROM BEYOND

By Howard E. Jackson

DURING THE fall of 1935 I returned to my alma mater, Colgate University in Hamilton, N.Y., to form a flying club. I was there a few months; the club never materialized but one of the young men interested in it was a fellow named Lee Alexander. I met him only a few times.

Then during the next year I received in the mail a Colgate News which stated Lee had been killed in an automobile accident. I was shocked and saddened but did not dwell on his death. The fact is I had put aside thoughts of flying clubs and students who were interested in them. After I left Hamilton I had gone to work first in Boston as a claim adjuster, then in Kansas City as a salesman for a firm of tree surgeons, and I had ended up in Kent, Ohio, as assistant to the employment manager of the Davey Tree Expert Company.

In thought, time and place I was far removed from Lee Alexander

Slimentalism Invites You to Learn

"PSYCHIC" WEIGHT CONTROL!

The "No Pill" . . . "No Starve" . . . "No Harm" . . .

Way to Lose Weight!

Since the Dawn of Time, there have existed a select group known as Masters who have stood out as ideals for all humanity. Among the secrets they are said to possess are such things as ESP, Out-Of-Body Travel, Moving objects without contact, Thought Projection and the ABILITY TO ALTER THE WEIGHT OF LIVING BODIES!

While early investigation of such claims suggested they were fantastic, current scientific research by Parapsychologists in the U.S. and Soviet Union demonstrates that the ability to alter the weight of objects is . . .

A PSYCHIC REALITY.

A careful examination of the Ancient Teachings clearly reveals mention of the ability of the Masters to alter their own or another's weight THROUGH THE USE OF THE MIND ALONE!

As all weight control is under the influence of the endocrine glands, known to the ancient's as chakras, learning to voluntarily control these centers means YOU CAN CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT! Fantastic as this may sound, this is something that has actually been done by . . .

A MODERN YOGI

Sri Yukteswar, a world renown Yogi, was able to gain fifty pounds in just a few days by following the secret instructions of his personal Master, D.D. Home, the famous 19th Century psychic, altered the weight of objects to the satisfaction of the eminent scientist, Sir William Crookes. All these facts suggest that the control of weight lies . . .

WITHIN YOUR MIND!

Seeking the 'key' to unlock the 'secret door' to Psychic Weight Control, SLIMENTALISM has gone into the ancient archives and carefully extracted only the genuine teachings. Each technique found has been carefully subjected to the understanding of modern science and psychology, and then actually tested in order to determine its effectiveness. Only those techniques which have passed this test have been combined into a totally unique . . .

HOME STUDY COURSE

Never before has the opportunity been offered outside the Ashram to:

- Participate in a program of this dimension
- Examine the 'Real' reasons why you eat!
- Receive personal encouragement and attention
- Learn to become 'Thin' by just 'Thinking'
- Avoid Regaining Weight Already Lost

If these goals are yours, we extend to you . . .

A PERSONAL INVITATION

If YOU are overweight and never have been satisfied with current systems which seek to DIET, MASSAGE or POUND each ounce of fat off, then you owe it to yourself to try SLIMENTALISM.

If you follow completely our instructions, we guarantee you will begin to lose weight, slowly and naturally, without pills or special diet, or you get your money back.

That's right . . . EITHER YOU LOSE FAT . . . OR YOUR CASH COMES BACK! So sure are we that you'll begin to lose weight by following our instructions, we'll send your money back if you don't . . .

BECOME THE REAL YOU!

Certainly, deep within your mind lies a mirror on which is reflected an image of the person you always wanted to be. You owe it to yourself to find that person NOW. Your very life could be at stake!

and yet in the fall of 1936 while I was eating lunch at my desk, with no one else in the room, he appeared before me. That's just what he did. There was nothing physical about him; yet I seemed to see his face and his bodily outline. He was as I remembered him. Recognition between us was instantaneous.

Lee's expression was serious and he immediately came to the point. He didn't speak aloud; yet I knew that he said, "I wish you would write to my folks and tell them I am all right."

"Sure, Lee," I answered . . . without saying the words.

With this he slowly vanished.

Only when Lee was gone, when I no longer felt his presence, did the full impact of his visit hit me. I had had an encounter with a nonphysical personality. I was seized by a desire to pursue this spiritual communication. "Come back, Lee," I willed—but knew that my request was out of order, that what I wanted had nothing to do with Lee's visit. He had been granted the opportunity to contact me, to request that I write to his parents to set their minds at ease.

It seemed perfectly natural for me to write to Lee's folks. (They lived in Drexel Hill, Pa.) I told them where, when and under what circumstances I had met their son, that I had read of his death, that he had visited me and asked that I write them.

Their reply said, "For months—ever since Lee's death—we have been worried and uncertain of his fate. We have sought solace in various ways, but nothing satisfied us. Your letter has set our minds at rest. It was just what we needed to assure us that Lee is all right." — Redwood City, Calif.

had to earn money of my own by baby-sitting the younger children in our family — although I was afraid of the dark and afraid of being alone.

All of the Coanettes — my father, my Uncle Bill and my Uncle Lloyd — farmed land near Crookston, Minn. They raised sugar beets. Part of each year they employed Mexican field workers who lived in little houses on Uncle Bill's farm. Some of these swarthy men were terrifying — in my 11-year-old mind.

In the summer of 1947 we lost my beloved grandfather, Joseph Coanette. One Saturday night shortly after his death I was baby-sitting for my Aunt Edith and Uncle Lloyd and as usual I was fearful about being alone and responsible for my young cousins Rodger and Jimmie. I was lying on the bed trying to read my comic books when I heard a truck stop at a crossroad near the house, then loud singing and the laughter of some of the workers. They sounded drunk. I quickly turned off the bed lamp and pulled the covers over my head, frightened to tears.

Suddenly it seemed as if the whole world became quiet. I peeked from under the covers to see a mist forming at the foot of the bed. The mist

I lost 43 years saying life will be better.

How many have you lost?

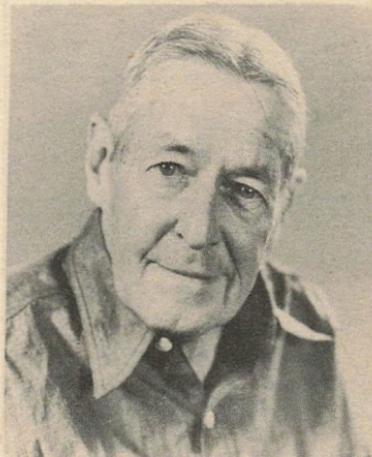

I was sure of myself the many times I said, "Everything will change, be better, life will become more meaningful." In this way the years passed; the opportunities, one's strength.

Little by little, friends stopped listening. Everyone knows that words don't count for anything. Something has to be done, some action taken. Today action is our opportunity to make life better and the world a place worth living in. In order to help others one must first help himself, for the whole is composed of many, many parts.

Monastery of the Seven Rays is an international brotherhood consisting of people that have reached this conclusion. It desires to do something positive for humanity through its labors.

The persons that make up its membership are the same ones that refuse to reach the ends of their lives with their hands empty. They have stopped talking and have taken the action that is making their lives better and more meaningful from the very first day.

Don't say life will be better. Make it so today by sending the below request for the Monastery's free brochure.

A BRIEF VISIT

By Faye G. Hetrick

I HAVE HAD many experiences that convince me we live on after our sojourn on earth—but my husband Lester was an unbeliever until a summer night in 1959 when we attended a Spiritualist church service. The medium, Linus Pettibone, told my husband that he soon would have an experience that few persons live to tell about.

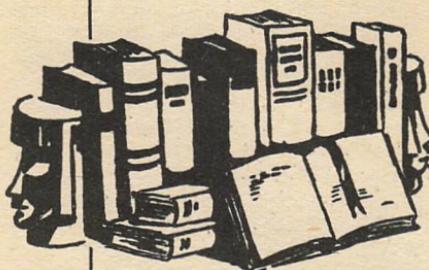

That fall Lester was working in New Albany, Ind., supervising a gang of painters. The morning of October 26, sitting in his truck waiting for the men to get to work, he was stricken with a severe heart attack. When the men found him they called the fire department rescue squad who took him to the hospital.

I arrived in New Albany from our home in Fort Wayne at eight o'clock that evening. When I talked with my husband I realized he had paid a brief visit to the spirit world before he had been revived in the hospital. He told me of seeing his own father and mother and he said words could not describe how beautiful it was in that other place.

Lester survived that heart attack and lived until January 1966 never doubting that when he left the earth plane he would find a beautiful life beyond. — Fort Wayne, Ind.

NEWS and REVIEWS

PROGRESS IN PALO ALTO

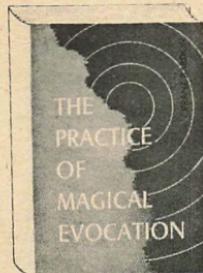

DURING A recent trip to California I visited Edgar Mitchell's new Institute of Noetic Sciences (575 Middlefield Rd., Palo Alto, Calif. 94301), which opened officially in August. Even before the formal opening the IONS was bombarded with questions about its program and activities. The Institute has prepared an informal newsletter to summarize its activities and will announce a membership program soon.

I could not help being impressed with what IONS has accomplished in the first few months of its existence, including the two films and the book which I mentioned in my September 1973 column. In the planning stage are courses, lecture series, a probable nationwide TV show and a counseling service to help persons with psychic or transpersonal problems. Mitchell's approach to the psychic field is refreshingly free from many of the dogmas of the academic parapsychologists. He seeks to relate psychic events to the broader fields of altered states of consciousness and expanded human potentials. Very few parapsychologists — with the happy exception of Stanley Krippner, who has just been elected president of the Association for Humanistic Psychology — have made any effort to establish ties with the expanding interest in noetics (the study of consciousness) and transpersonal psychology.

While the promise for the future is limitless, IONS has run up against the common stumbling block of research in the psychic field: inadequate financing. While I was visiting there two promoters were busily making arrangements for a large fund-raising banquet in Los Angeles. Meanwhile Mitchell has made a presentation to the National Science Foundation which may encourage NSF grants for specific projects. If only a small percentage of the funds expended, say, on electing the president of the United States could be diverted to noetics we might be able to get somewhere. IONS is to be commended for its promising start.

For Adepts Only

Franz Bardon's unique second and third books on magic are now available in accurate English translations for the first time! They make up a progress course for adepts only. Beginners should start with Bardon's earlier book:

Initiation into Hermetics

... a course of instruction of magic in 10 stages, its theory and practice plus the mystery of the first Tarot card.

The Practice of Magical Evocation

... describes the little known subject of conjuratory magic — one of magic's darkest corners. It demonstrates that wonders and supernatural things exist only for humans deprived of the basic laws of nature — and thus incapable of penetrating into its supreme laws. The book includes the mystery of the second Tarot card.

The Key to the True Quabbalah

... is the cosmic language in theory and practice. To speak in the quabbalistic way means to create things out of nothing. Through the ages the one who was called the "master of the word" was always the highest initiate, the highest priest and the true representative of God. The secret of the third Tarot card is always included.

CANDID COMMENTS

CZECH PARAPSYCHOLOGIST Milan Ryzl trods on a number of toes in his ESP In The Modern World (Milan Ryzl, Box 9459 Westgate Sta., San Jose, Calif. 95117, 1972, 167 pages, $8.50). He attacks with equal vigor the overcredulous amateurs and the hypercritical scientists. This approach will annoy many of his readers but has the virtue of enlivening his material.

The novice receives his share of abuse in the first "Old Heritage" part of the above paperback volume. Ryzl analyzes many famous spontaneous psychic experiences and points out the flaws in the evidence. He devotes a chapter to explaining how Ouija board communications, automatic writing and even trance communications are readily explainable in terms of conventional psychology without invoking the supernatural. He gives some hardheaded rules for evaluating sensitives and makes clear that his opinion of most professional psychics is not high. I feel he overstates the critical viewpoint at times, particularly in the long chapter in which he discusses evidence for postmortem survival. He takes the now-popular position that all such evidence can be explained away by extended ESP. I think the matter is not all that simple.

By far the most entertaining are the biographical chapters in the second half, "New Horizons." He even manages to lighten the grim story of his political persecution in Czechoslovakia with some delightful humor. Once he was established in the United States he found himself disillusioned with the state of affairs here. "I found credulous people eager to believe in everything," he writes. "I found fraud and impostors; I saw trashy literature on bookshelves in thousands and thousands of volumes." He found that parapsychologists were afflicted with "a lot of jealousy and less innovative imagination in research projects. I found the field petrified, conservatively clinging to old methods and past results." His criticism is certainly apt in regard to his own research. His experiments with Pavel Stepanek were highly praised but no American parapsychologist has been interested in trying the training procedure with which Ryzl brought out Stepanek's ability. (Only Dr. John Beloff of Edinburgh has shown interest thus far.)

Since completing this volume, Dr. Ryzl has joined the Silva Mind Control organization as director of parapsychological research. It well may be that Silva will give Ryzl complete control over whatever research he undertakes and Ryzl can operate as independently as if he were at a university. But the parapsychological establishment hardly will welcome this new affiliation and I fear Milan will be treated as a traitor from now on.

CHEMICAL CURES?

IN THE midst of the uproar over LSD some months ago claims were advanced, primarily by Humphrey Osmond and Abram Hoffer, that the psychosis-like effect of hallucinogenic drugs suggests that many forms of mental illness might in fact be due to natural chemical imbalance. This theory received support from the fact that tranquilizers, such as ritalin, that counteract LSD have proven useful in the alleviation of psychotic symptoms.

The opposition to this theory of the chemical origins of mental disturbance stemmed largely from the tremendous emotional investment in traditional Freudian doctrines. After all, hasn't the successful curing of psychosis by analytical techniques proven that mental disturbance has emotional origins? How could schizophrenia be due simply to chemicals? Thus the burden of proof is on the mavericks who argued in favor of chemical imbalance.

The recent volume, Orthomolecular Psychiatry (W. H. Freeman and Co., San Francisco, Calif., 1973, 697 pages, $17.00), is an impressive summary of the arguments in favor of the chemical basis of schizophrenia. Editors David Hawkins and Linus Pauling have assembled 30 pages dealing with theoretical considerations and with clinical experiments in using ascorbic acid, niacinamide, pyridoxine and other substances to treat emotional disorders. This imposing body of research is supported by the work of Soviet psychiatrist Y. S. Nikolaev who treats schizophrenia with fasting and diet (an article on his work will appear in a future issue of FATE). Certainly the problem of the origin of mental illness is far more complicated than conventional psychiatry would have us believe and the prospects for chemical management (and even cure) of mental illness are encouraging.

OTHER REVIEWS

UNFINISHED MAN by Raymond Van Over, World Publishing Co., New York, N.Y., 1972, $6.95.

The world of dreams, drugs and ESP has radically altered our view of man and his potentials and of the direction of his evolution. In this short book Raymond Van Over outlines the new explorations into man's mind as well as offering criticism of the staunchly behavioristic view of man often promoted by conventional psychology.

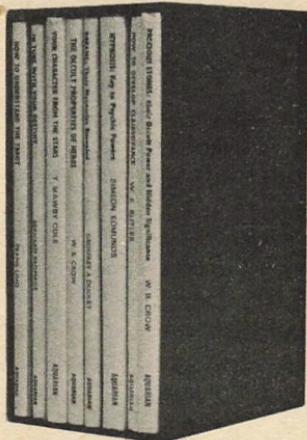

In his first chapter he builds a case against this prevailing view of man as no more than a programmed machine. Van Over argues that such human traits as inspiration, aesthetic aptitude and even social and emotional strivings go beyond the simple behaviorist model of man. Throughout the chapter he leans heavily on a collection of notable quotes from psychologists, philosophers and scientists, the most fitting of which is C. D. Broad's comment that behaviorist theories are "so preposterously silly that only very learned men could have thought of them."

Van Over's next chapters cover the three areas of inquiry that support his own position: dreams, drugs and parapsychology, all of which are part of the new humanistic trends in psychology. His chapter on dreams offers a good general overview of what we know about dreams and the psychology and physiology of sleep. However, he goes a bit further than most writers by including material on ESP in dreams, a topic overlooked by many dream theorists and researchers. Later he devotes a whole chapter to ESP and his material is both accurate and well presented.

Just as ESP illustrates the vast complexity of the mind, so do hallucinogenic drugs indicate that our entire view of reality can be altered drastically from how the brain commonly views it. With so much misinformation being spread about drugs Van Over's chapter is refreshingly accurate and unbiased.

A volume such as this is badly needed in a society where the old view of man is rapidly being replaced by a more humanistic one. Although this move toward humanism is often naïve, books such as Unfinished Man offer guidance to those persons confused by our rapidly changing concepts of man's place in the universe. One of my few criticisms of the book is its brevity; much more could have been included about mystical and peak experiences, biofeedback and numerous other relevant topics.

Nonetheless Van Over pulls together data and thoughts on a series of topics that are revolutionizing psychology, philosophy and science in general. Unfinished Man should be of interest to thoughtful persons of every field. — D. Scott Rogo.

HOW TO DEVELOP ESP IN YOURSELF AND IN OTHERS by Milan Ryzl, available only from Dr. Milan Ryzl, Box 9459 Westgate Sta., San Jose, Calif. 95117, 1972, 159 pages (paperback) plus two tape cassettes, $19.50.

Dr. Ryzl's reputation as a psychic researcher both in his native Czechoslovakia and in this country includes proven success in developing psychic ability in laboratory subjects. Little wonder then that his taped course is so well worked out and interesting. The large-format manual that accompanies the tapes explains some theories and beliefs about meditation and how it differs from hypnotism. Since the course might turn up people of unusual psychic ability and Dr. Ryzl wishes to contact all such individuals, the paperback includes tests for ESP that can be self-administered and mailed in to the author.

The two cassettes run a total of two hours. At first they must be listened to in order but later one may pick and choose the sections he wishes repeated. Some persons may wish to listen to them regularly but no dependency need develop.

Ryzl's technique is amazingly effective, due in part to the charisma in his voice. A strange hypnotic quality and a quiet intensity eventually overcome the problem of his thick accent. Although some persons may be unable to attune their ears to his speech patterns, the consensus of my friends who have used the tapes is that they'd rather hear Ryzl's voice than a perfectly trained but more ordinary voice.

As a prelude to mental relaxation and meditation Ryzl uses a series of isometric-like exercises to achieve "body-forgetfulness." Once the body is relaxed Ryzl suggests a boat trip down a long dark tunnel, floating and drifting on the river of eternity. Eventually he directs one's attention to a pinpoint of light at the end of the tunnel, which could be the focus of consciousness, of self-awareness, awareness of the universe or of God or perhaps a sudden intuition or psychic awareness — whatever the individual seeks or is ready for. Another trip takes you out into space, floating like a balloon with the body left far behind, forgotten. This too can lead to unexpected things.

Dr. Ryzl concludes the tapes with sharp instructions for coming out of the meditation feeling rested and alert. He gives careful instructions for handling any emergency that should arise during meditation. Nothing important is overlooked. The course is well worth the $19.50 investment, especially when one considers that a family or group of students can share both tapes and cost. Compared with other courses on the market Dr. Ryzl's is a bargain. — Ila Cole.

PARAPSYCHOLOGY TODAY: A GEOGRAPHIC VIEW edited by Allan Angoff and Betty Shapin, Parapsychology Foundation, New York, N.Y., 1973, 258 pages, $6.50.

This proceedings volume collects the papers presented at PF's 1971 summer conference held at St. Paul de Vence, France. The list of contributors includes Milan Ryzl, J. M. O. Wheatley, Joseph Rush, Hans Bender, Jarl Fahler, Emilio Servadio, D. J. West and Andrija Puharich. Each talk is self-contained and the areas covered extend from California to Japan, from Turkey to Switzerland. Besides giving the reader an overview of parapsychology in the world the proceedings fully demonstrate the prevailing academic and philosophical reactions to the science.

Milan Ryzl states "the widely read book Psychic Discoveries Behind The Iron Curtain . . . has dramatized and exaggerated the results of eastern European parapsychological investigations." Since coming to this country, he explains, his correspondence with eastern European parapsychologists has been limited, partly because they appear to be "split into several competing factors."

Another important chapter is the one in which physicist Joseph H. Rush gives an excellent accounting of "Parapsychology's Century of Progress." He makes clear where we have been and how far we have come.

Perhaps Andrija Puharich's chapter on "Protocommunication" is the most far-reaching in its implications. Dr. Puharich states, "Progress in parapsychology is dependent on solving the modus operandi of the following: (1) the origin of life, (2) replication in the life process, (3) sensory perception, (4) memory in the brain, (5) artificial perception and intelligence, (6) direct brain perception, (7) direct brain action, (8) memory in nature,

"How to Get What You Want"

Rev. Katherine Kimbrough, noted researcher, author and foremost exponent of "The Three Point Philosophy in Action," offers:

It is natural to desire the good things of life — and there is a way to get what you want. Science has proved that sound is the strongest known vibration. So every word you utter is "sound projected power." Certain words are believed to create certain vibrations that seem to overcome opposition and negative forces to bring into the user's life, from unexpected sources, a rich flow of abundance, health and love. Revealed to me years ago were "10 Power-Packed Words" which are used according to a certain formula to produce these dynamic vibrations for "getting what you want."

I will send you FREE these "10 Power-Packed Words," with full directions on how to use them — yes, FREE — when you order my beautiful Jeweled Ring, which is specially blessed. Objects worn or used are believed to become magnetized to one's own personal vibrations, and you will wish to wear the ring when saying the "10 Power-Packed Words."

Send only $10.00 for this wonderful ring and receive the "10 Power-Packed Words" as my FREE gift to you (money refunded if not satisfied). Use the Words as directed, then watch results. State for man or woman. My reliability may be judged from the fact that I have been in business at the same location for over 20 years. My students report amazing results. You may well find people asking what changed you so! Don't delay — act now to "get what you want!"

(9) precognition." To be sure, this is quite a bit to solve before we can proceed and not everyone will agree with Dr. Puharich's list. But his chapter brings a fitting close to this useful reference volume for all those persons with a scholarly interest in parapsychology. — Paul Dimmitt.

BODY 2, THE INCREDIBLE WORLD OF ESP by Chan Thomas, Emerson House, Los Angeles, Calif., 1972, 201 pages, $6.95.

Dr. Chan Thomas is an engineer who seems to have both an active mind and considerable ESP. In 1972 he taught ESP at UCLA's Experimental College and aroused a lot of interest. I can believe it. Body 2 is Thomas' term for the astral body, considered to inhabit the visible Body 1 during life and to persist after death. He ascribes a physical subatomic composition to Body 2 and is so definite in this assertion as to appear pseudoscientific although he does insert the word "hypothetical" at one point. He continues with the brief discussion of an apparatus he has devised to communicate with Body 2's, living and deceased. This device actually is a variant of the Ouija board although he does not mention the Ouija. The rest of the book — up to page 125 where the lengthy appendix begins — consists of a miscellany that the newcomer to the psychic field will enjoy if he is willing to believe Thomas without supporting references. This section includes a few ESP and communication experiences of the author, brief astral body and deathbed lore, a little on mediums, something on the afterlife, a short venture into UFOlogy, some highly bizarre "science" purporting to tell how Body 2's may cease to exist if they don't watch out, and finally a Hindu description of the end of the universe when "all souls are reabsorbed into the Infinite." Thomas is optimistic, however, and thinks that the more persevering Body 2's will seek and find a new universe.

The lengthy appendix is an amazing document. Some 20 pages are devoted to vocabulary test on the grounds that a good vocabulary is needed for communication whether with spirits or others. Probably even the author's most ardent disciples will skip over the concluding 50 pages, although in respectful awe. Here Thomas engages in daringly original theorizing on gravitation and its possible use as a means of mind-to-mind communication. This leads him to give alleged communications from extraterrestrials on the technology of spaceships and to discuss imaginary mass and the possibility of receiving communications from light-years away with negligible delay.

Clearly, this is a unique book.
— Harold Steinour.

THE SASQUATCH FILE by John Green, Cheam Publishing Ltd., Box 99, Agassiz, B. C., Canada, 1973, 80 pages, $4.00 (paperback).

This illustrated volume is John Green's third book about the mysterious hairy humanoids of north-western North America known commonly as Sasquatch or Bigfoot. A former journalist, Green now devotes full time to Sasquatch research. He freely admits "there are a number of reasons for not publishing reports of hairy giants" but explains that his current volume is not intended to convince anyone of the reality of Bigfoot but rather "to give anyone who is interested the means to look up what is on record for any place or time."

His book then is essentially a compendium of brief reports with references (usually lacking in most popular accounts), with maps of sighting locations and photographs of tracks and prints. The reports, beginning with the pre-1900's and moving right up to late 1972, cover mainly British Columbia, California, Washington and Oregon, with selected reports from other areas. Each case from the Pacific Northwest is keyed to a map. The reports vary from brief and sketchy to lengthy and detailed. A sample chosen at random, reads: "The Skamania County Pioneer, September 19, 1969, reports that two tracks 15½ inches long and nine inches wide were found at a logging operation on Stevenson Ridge, five miles north of the town. They were photographed and one was cast by Sheriff Bill Closner."

Green admits that recently there has been some deliberate faking of tracks and that other "people can see clear prints that to me are shapeless. They can see toes that I can't see at all." But he argues that the existence of spurious tracks does not prove that all tracks are spurious. We need only one real footprint to prove there is a maker unknown to present-day science. Green concludes his book with a somewhat critical look at John Napier's recent volume Bigfoot which he feels scants some evidence and misinterprets other material.

But Green's final summation and his recommendations leave me a bit breathless. He does not believe Bigfoot is a primitive humanoid. "Sasquatches are not human or near human," he writes. "I consider (it) to be an ape, probably the direct descendent of Gigantopithecus . . . It is an omnivore . . . a strong swimmer . . . a complete biped . . . (and) it must be very hard to kill . . ." I would be interested in the reactions of other scientists; other than his hairiness Sasquatch has no really ape-like features.

Green's recommendation to Sasquatch hunters is: kill one. Certain that the beasts exist by the thou-

LEARNING TO DIE by Jon Mundy, Spiritual Frontiers Fellowship, 800 Custer Ave., Evanston, Ill. 60202, 1973, 91 pages, $2.95 (paperback).

In this first publishing venture by Spiritual Frontiers Fellowship Jon Mundy has written a sensitive and needed book. (Readers will recall the Reverend Mundy's article in the September 1972 issue of FATE. He carefully tries to define our dilemma about death and also answer the age-old questions about who we are and where we are going. His low-keyed approach is delightful and deceptively simple. Along the way the author grapples with fear, time, freedom vs. security, expanding consciousness, being and becoming and other metaphysical concepts.

Despite occasional books and TV shows on the subject, death and its ramifications are subjects assiduously avoided by most people. Over the centuries traditional religions have added little to their set views on death and the hereafter and materialistic philosophy and behavioristic psychology have relegated death and the ultimate meaning of life to the bottom of the discussion list.

Researchers report that patients approaching death want to talk about this important topic but find relatives, friends, doctors and nurses reluctant or unwilling to discuss death.

Mundy does not intend this book as any kind of "proof" of his obvious conviction about immortality. He merely shows us many possible ways of regarding death as a transition to new adventures on our path. This book probably will have no appeal for the confirmed atheist or the fundamentalist Christian—yet I suggest they read it. Within his relatively short volume Mundy includes a wealth of appropriate quotes from many famous people about life, death and ultimate meaning and it is worth the price to have them for references.

Although he is a minister Mundy does not preach about heaven and hell or present any fear-of-God concepts. Apparently he conceives of hell as a state of mind that can be changed when one is ready. Life is just one of many experiences for growth towards some ultimate goal not yet known although glimpsed by prophets, poets and philosophers. Martin Ebon has contributed a thought-provoking preface and the book as a whole is a pleasant experience. — Paul Severson.

Report FROM THE Readers

IEWS ON ABORTION

I never have had a serious complaint about your magazine until I read Dr. W. D. Chesney's article "I Favor Abortion on Spirit Authority" (August 1973 FATE). I feel such bigoted personal appeals are entirely out of the usually unbiased context of your magazine. Dr. Chesney's views are better suited to your "Report from the Readers" column. To publish an article which has so little psychic-spiritual content is patently ridiculous. I protest against such propaganda leveled at your readers' moral sensibilities. — Kurt R. Reimel, Lexington, Mich.

To the doctor who favors abortion and those who agree with him, I say this: For thousands of years man in his egotism said woman did not possess a soul. She was put on earth to serve him and to bear his children. He could rape, murder or sell into slavery any human female he owned or captured.

Our history is forever blemished by the Christian captains of ships who excused the nefarious slave trade, declaring their black cargoes were soulless animals created by God to serve the white man. The Incas, Aztecs and American Indians suffered torture and death at the hands of the gold-seeking Christian conquistadors while priests and monks looked on, excusing these infamous acts against heathen infidels. It seems in those days it took the holy water of Christian baptism — rather than "the breath of life" — to create a soul.

Now we come to the doctor who declares the removal of the helpless human fetus from the mother's womb is not murder because he has it on the word of the late Arthur Ford that human life has no soul until it "breathes air."

Is there a retribution for aborted babies? I think so. In my native village two women were caring for a childless woman who was dying. In that period large families were the rule and the villagers pitied any childless woman. Suddenly she began to scream, "All of my dead babies are staring at me, each with a hatpin through it!"

Her two friends thought her delirious until she confessed that she had aborted every pregnancy by the hatpin method prevalent in those days. — Cecilia Fawn Nichols, Twentynine Palms, Calif.

Dr. Chesney's contention that abortion isn't killing because the unborn do not have "souls" is typical of the irrational religiously-bigoted pro-abortion platform. Ensoulment is a metaphysical question, not a scientific measure of human worth, and it can neither be proven nor disproven.

I don't buy Dr. Chesney's "spirit authority" either. Mediumistic "readings" invariably reflect the personal beliefs of the medium and let's not confuse "spirit authority" with religious opinion. To abort because the mother isn't aware or doesn't believe her unborn baby is alive is like embalming a body because you can't feel a pulse through five inches of clothing. It's not up to the potential victim to prove he's Nearly 2,000 years ago a mysterious white man walked from tribe to tribe throughout America . . .

WAS HE JESUS?

HE WALKED THE AMERICAS is the documented story of this pilgrimage northward through South and Central America, Mexico, and across North America. L. alive; it's the responsibility of the physician to prove he isn't. Opinions and guesswork are hardly adequate.

Dr. Chesney goes on to imply, in accordance with popular delusion, that unwanted pregnancies usually result in unwanted and battered children. Pro-abortionists use this allegation the way some fanatics quote the Bible without bothering to investigate the validity of their remarks. Dr. Edward Lenoski, Professor of Pediatrics at the University of California, in a continuing study of more than 500 cases of child abuse, found that 90 percent of the victims not only were wanted but planned pregnancies.* Using Dr. Lenoski's figures, we could conclude that the wanted, planned pregnancy is actually nine times more likely to result in a battered child.

Dr. Chesney concludes by saying that for every baby killed by abortion we may be eliminating a potential Hitler from the next generation. Curious that we should kill millions of members of that generation just to protect the lucky survivors from an unknown tyrant who may never turn up. The real irony of this statement, however, is that Hitler's success as an exterminator of Jews was in fact predicated upon the earlier success of pre-Nazi German physicians in open abortion and forced euthanasia projects. Hitler only extended an existing practice. Once a society has become conditioned to accepting the elimination of one group of persons because they are unwanted, bothersome or imperfect, it becomes easy to accept other mass exterminations.

When we speak of the "quality of life" or "meaningful life" as the determining factor in whether or not someone will be allowed to live, we are saying that the right to live is not absolute but subject to arbitrary conditions dictated by society. It was this very power to dictate the conditions which made the Hitlerian atrocities possible. From unwanted "heretics" to unwanted Germans to unwanted babies, our "solutions" unfortunately seem never to improve.

—Curtis Bargren, Tampa, Fla.

THE AUTHOR REPLIES:

A quotation from the Bible confirms the views of Arthur Ford and my own as expressed in my article:

"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." (Genesis 2:7) — W. D. Chesney, Janesville, Wis.

TOO MUCH FICTION?

Your story, "Mystery Airships of the 1800's" (May-June-July 1973 FATE), is just too full of fiction for me. I was five years old when the airship supposedly landed four miles due north of the town of Linn Grove, Iowa, in April 1897. My grandfather's place was five miles due north of Linn Grove and I lived one mile north of him. If any airship landed near his place I certainly would have known about it. Furthermore, I later became acquainted with the man who was owner, publisher and editor of the Linn Grove Independent at that time and I never heard him mention such an incident. — John F. Lundt, Paradise, Calif.

WALTER F. LIEHR

324 So. First St., Alhambra, CA 91802

THE VOICE OF THE AUTHOR

The October 1972 Journal of the American Society for Psychical Research contains Miss Rhea White's intense review of my book Animal Ghosts. I wrote twice to the ASPR to publish my reply to this adverse book review and I was turned down both times — although scholarly publications customarily allow authors to defend their positions. Thereupon I appealed to FATE to publish my response so that I might clarify what I feel are some of the mistaken points in the review.

Miss White did not, for example, approve of my lack of enthusiasm for the experimental work with gerbils, mice, rats and even cockroaches. I feel that much of this work is disputable and further, some has not been duplicated. In fact, in considering much of the statistical work in parapsychology I have grave doubts concerning the presumed findings relative to spontaneous or "objective" psychism. Having had considerable experience with objective phenomena — raps, psychokinesis of a major order, voice and light phenomena, visual effects, etc. — I align myself with Sir Alister Hardy who refers to statistical studies of telepathy, clairvoyance, etc. in Parapsychology in Relation to Religion: ". . . it makes one wonder if they are not showing something else, something quite different from what they were purported to show. Spencer Brown thought this . . . when he believed that they were showing something very curious about the nature of randomness."

The reviewer mentioned that I am guilty of making value judgments. Of course I am! If after a certain number of years of living, one has not compiled a set of values, a personal philosophy, then that person is not capable of rational thought. When Miss White expresses herself negatively regarding my book, is she not making a value judgment? Also, she insists that psi trailing is just as remarkable as are animal apparitions, but this is not an established fact but is merely an opinion and thus also represents a "value judgment."

Miss White criticizes the lack of references in my book. I challenge her to find another book, one not intended as an exhaustive reference, which contains such a large number of references.

Naturally, such phenomena as psi trailing, animal ESP of the quantitative variety, etc., were only briefly mentioned in my book. My main thesis was animal survival and introductory chapters were intended only to sketch in supporting phenomena. On the other hand, Miss White claimed that the stated purpose of the book is to present a picture of the various divisions of animal psychism. Her observation is in error. My purpose was to outline a general spectrum of animal psychism which culminates in effects which in my opinion demonstrate that animals do survive death.

There are several ways to approach a subject when writing a book, one of which utilizes a brief outline of effects pointing to the culminating position of the author. This does not imply lack of scholarship, superficiality or distortion; it is an often-used literary device.

Lastly, I insist on calling attention to the opinion of Dr. Robert Crookall, who thought well enough of my book to write a preface for it and to comment favorably on it. His opinion cannot be dismissed, for he is undoubtedly the greatest living theoretician in the field of parapsychology, a man who will rank with the greatest of all parapsychologists.—Raymond Bayless, Los Angeles, Calif.

the Thruston tablet ("Viking Saga in Tennessee" September 1973 FATE) it does not necessarily follow that one must accept everything author Clyde Keeler says it "proves." In particular, Keeler's suggestion "that the mysterious (sic) Mound Builder culture well may have arisen as a result of Viking migration" is wide of the mark, for this culture was already flourishing centuries before the presumed period of Viking contact—indeed, before the birth of Christ! And if, as Keeler speculates, "the Mound Builders were basically Vikings who had intermarried with Indian aborigines," this should be revealed by craniological examinations of skeletal remains.

Keeler comments on pre-Columbian European influence, asserting that "this evidence has been taken seriously only by amateur archaeologists while the professional archaeologists continue to worship the sacred cow of local cultural evolution as opposed to cultural diffusion." He is not being fair unless he recognizes that cultural diffusion, invoked uncritically as a panacea for problems of origin, is as much a "sacred cow" as local cultural evolution. (The journal Antiquity has recently published perceptive editorials by Glyn Daniel on this subject.)

While Keeler speaks of the need for objectivity he does not supply it; he sees bias in the approach of others but cannot recognize it in his own. He merely compounds this problem by presenting the question of the Thruston tablet as a confrontation between "amateurs" (wearing white hats, of course) and the fat-cat "professionals." — Edmund S. Meltzer, Brooklyn, N.Y.

THE AUTHOR REPLIES:

The statement that "the mysterious Mound Builder culture well may have arisen as a result of Viking migration" shocked me too!

The article on the Thruston tablet was the FATE editors' rewrite of two articles Ruth Verrill and I wrote and published in 1961-1962 in the Bulletin of the Georgia Academy of Science. Unfortunately, I did not have the opportunity to examine the editorial interpretation before it was published in FATE.

The offending statement must have been drawn from my reference to the local situation depicted on the Thruston tablet where a ray-eyed woman, apparently Viking, is smoking a pipe in a mud and wattle hut, and a face with an Indian eye shows behind her back. Also shown is an Indian girl fighting back to back with a ray-eyed man to ward off attacking Indian males.

As to Mr. Meltzer's comment about local cultural evolution vs. cultural diffusion, it is quite true that during the past decade (since our articles were written) professionals have come to view cultural diffusion more favorably. — Clyde Keeler, Millidgeville, Ga.

THE HIGH COST OF HEALING

In "Report from the Readers" in the August 1973 issue of FATE, Dorothy Ellerman praises and publicizes the healer Ruth Norman. I wrote to Mrs. Norman asking for help. To my astonishment, I received in the mail literature describing certain courses I was requested to buy before I could obtain healing from Ruth Norman. If I purchased all the lessons, books, tapes and the personal akashic record, I calculate the cost would be $966.00!

Mrs. Norman claims her late husband Ernest was the reincarnation of Jesus Christ and that an associate of hers is the reincarnation of Pontius Pilate.

I'm sure many healers do wonderful work and Mrs. Norman may be one of them — but have you ever heard one say that the afflicted must

MORE ADVICE FOR WITCHES

In the March issue of FATE ("Report from the Readers") you published the Hon. Rev. Richard De A'Morelli's "Guide for Would-be Witches." I suggest that anyone who needs realistic guidelines should get them from a legitimate witch, not from someone who has read some of the books published under the aegis of the "Christian Corporation." I wish to comment on the reverend's advice point by point:

(1) It is true that many pseudo-covens or devil worshipers who profess to be witches make false claims but legitimate witches believe that our own will find us.

(2) True witches do not approve of drugs and will not tolerate their use by coven members.

(3) We are very much concerned with the safety and well-being of our members. Our creed: "We take care of our own."

(4) No—and again no—we do not make any sacrifice of any living animal under any circumstance.

(5) Versed in the occult we are, but connected with any Christian organization we are not! Our religion is older than any other and eminent anthropologists have proven this. We want no part of the Christian charrade.

(6) If the learned reverend had any experience in the Craft he would know that no true witch ever charges for anything. Covens have no "admission fee" or annual dues. The Wicca gods are not the money-hungry Christian God—asking for "building funds, tithes to support the gospel, candy sales to pave the parking lot."

(7) It is true that becoming a member of a coven doesn't necessarily make you a witch. You need to study to learn the origin of witchcraft and to understand the persecution and murder of 9,000,000 men, women and children in the name of Christianity.

My final word: It is not the gifted nor the nongifted who are refused admittance to a coven. It is the thrill-seekers and those who think orgies are the order of the day.

I'll be happy to answer questions concerning the Craft and to refer FATE readers to books that give a complete picture. I am High Priest of my coven and my wife is the Priestess of a legitimate Celtic Coven. — Don C. Overstreet, 6019 Camellia, Houston, Tex. 77007.

"WALT'S WHITE THING"

In the November 1971 issue of FATE I found the True Mystic Experience written by Daphne Payne asking "What Have I Seen?" I'm sorry I didn't see this sooner because I think I can tell her what she has seen—or at least assure her that she isn't the only one to have seen this strange animal apparition.

It is called "Walt's White Thing," Walt having been the unfortunate fellow who first saw the creature. Also, it is an exclusively western specter and never has been seen in the eastern part of the country as far as I know.

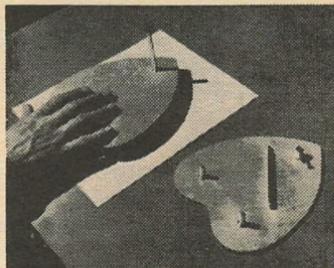

I remember a dramatization which was aired on the radio program "Death Valley Days" in the late 1930's or 40's depicting the sighting of the "thing."

Presumably in the 1870's or 80's "Walt" sighted the white animal while riding on the prairie one day. His terrified horse almost threw him. Walt emptied his six-shooter at point-blank range but to his surprise the bullets had no effect on the creature. Thoroughly frightened he wheeled his rearing horse and raced away. He later described it as looking like a small white dog with curly hair and he insisted it was no ordinary animal.

Soon thereafter Walt shot himself. From then on, all who saw the white thing referred to it as "Walt's White Thing" and it collected a macabre history as a harbinger of evil. All who saw it in the months and years that followed Walt's death either died or were victims of tragedy. Then suddenly the strange apparition vanished and I had not heard that it ever was seen again.—Samuel Sarkisian, Providence, R.I.

PROVE YOUR PSYCHIC POWERS WITH A PLANCHETTE!

THE PLANCHETTE IS USED AS A MECHANICAL MEANS FOR AUTOMATIC WRITING. IT AIDS MANIFESTATIONS WHICH HAVE NO OTHER WAY OF BECOMING CONCRETE.

Successful experimenters report finding the Planchette a highly effective aid to automatic writing and say they prefer it to any other method. They particularly find it much faster than the Ouija Board, which is used to spell out letters one by one. The Planchette is especially favored by those who prefer to work in meditative solitude. Our authentic Planchette, about six inches in length, is beautifully hand-crafted of smooth wood and given a high lustre with a wood-resin polish.

HOW THE PLANCHETTE WORKS:

Specially-fitted pencil forms one leg of planchette, the other two rolling free on ball bearings. These ball bearings permit the slightest indication of movement to take effect, the tiniest wisp of pressure transmitted through your hand. Only a superior product, an authentic psychic appliance, could have this expensive ballbearing feature. Complete instructions for use of the planchette, as well as for its care and protection, are included with this advanced psychic instrument.

WHAT HAS FATE IN STORE FOR YOU?

... A chance to explore the unknown . . . truths you find nowhere else . . . articles and stories to fire your imagination—that's what FATE has in store for you. Here is Editor Mary Fuller's report on stories planned for future issues:

∞ Is Satan responsible for psychic phenomena? An ordained minister answers the fundamentalists' claim that the Bible condemns ESP.

∞ Peruvian ayahuasquero Manuel Cordova first drank the "vision vine" extract some 70 years ago, beginning the training that led to his status as "the wizard of the Upper Amazon." F. Bruce Lamb recounts Cordova's life story.

∞ Are fairies merely legend or are they real? Jerome Clark reviews the astonishing facts that indicate a reality lies behind the age-old belief in "wee folk."

∞ The sands of Acambaro have yielded 32,000 artifacts of a mysterious unknown civilization. Now Charles Hapgood details evidence that these figurines may represent America's oldest culture.

MARY MARGARET FULLER

The Unpublished Facts of Life

THERE are some things that cannot be generally told—things you ought to know. Great truths are dangerous to some—but factors for personal power and accomplishment in the hands of those who understand them. Behind the tales of the miracles and mysteries of the ancients, lie centuries of their secret probing into nature's laws—their amazing discoveries of the hidden processes of man's mind, and the mastery of life's problems. Once shrouded in mystery to avoid their destruction by mass fear and ignorance, these facts remain a useful heritage for the thousands of men and women who privately use them in their homes today.
