"Other World" Catalog

MARSHALL LEVER had his first "Other World" experience as a small boy high in the Rocky Mountains. Caught in a summer rainstorm with his horse and his dog, he tried to assemble the makings of a fire. After repeated failures he slumped back against a tree, cold and dejected. Suddenly,

"Poised as we are in an age of uncertainty, your ability to touch upon an inner power is vital."

Marshall Lever

Come with us to that "Other World" dimension that will reveal special information about you. Discover . . .

- Your Future
  - Power Days
  - Your Life Goal
  - Your Karmic Lessons
  - Dimensions Beyond
  - Aura
  - Mystical Numerology
  - Your Life Partner
  - Past Lives
- . . . and the Hidden Door within to his utter amazement the wood burst into flames and from that day on Marshall became aware of an unusual inner voice that taught him of nature, perception and the mediumship of the 'inner voice.' This unique power is now available to you.

PRIZE-WINNING METHODS OF HYPNOSIS AND OTHER UNIQUE INDUCTION TECHNIQUES

Edited by Harry Arons

This is probably the most remarkable book on hypnosis ever published. It is a book of METHODS . . . ONLY methods . . . NOTHING BUT METHODS. And not just ordinary methods (these you can get in any hypnosis book), but methods that many professional hypnotists do not know. Here are just a few of the methods described in the book:

- Dr. Millikin's Non-Verbal Method, in which hypnosis is induced without speaking.
- Harry Arons' Non-Sensory Method, in which hypnosis is induced in one minute without communication via any of the five senses — en masse.
- Col. Ziglinski's Method for the Deaf.
- The "Telepathy" Method.
- The Proof-Positive Method.
- Dr. Bryan's Oriental Pressure-Point Method.
- Brain Wave Synchronizer — three methods.
- The H-Alpha Stimulator, a brand-new electronic method.
- Dr. Bryant's Head-Rotation Method.
- Japanese "Sleep" Machine.
- Dome Inductor Method.
- The Head-Spin Method.
- Harry Arons' Best Deepening Method, word-for-word.
- Self-Hypnosis Methods.
- The Shadow Method.
- And many others.

Detailed verbalizations — paperback.

THE
OUT
IN!

When you've sought for answers to life's mysteries from many sources and still experience only a quagmire of confusion, consider this:

The Only Way Out is IN.

There is a peaceful path, there is an Inner Way to the Eternal Quest. All the sages, saints, gurus and teachers from time immemorial have admonished: "Go in. Seeker, go in!"

But the Inner Light keeps vanishing and the restless mind refuses the quiet repose of perfect meditation. How do you "go in" to find the hidden "Kingdom of God"? Is there a lost key to the Gateway — a Lost Word to rend the veil to the Inner Temple?

Astara teaches of an inner way — a sure way, a safe way. Perhaps it is your way. Our free booklet "Finding Your Place in the Golden Age" may hold a new approach to an old, old quest. It is yours for the asking. We wait to honor your request for it.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

Jupiter's moons are invisible to the naked eye and therefore can have no influence on the Earth, and therefore would be useless, and therefore do not exist.

—Pronouncement made by Aristotelian professors who were contemporaries of Galileo's, circa 1610

WORLD catastrophes are part of our folklore. We are never lacking in catastrophic theories warning us that nature has had our earth in upheaval in the past and that it is reasonable to expect similar disasters in the future. Catastrophes are so pervasive, in fact, that some students wonder if they have not created folk memories to which we still respond.

The story of Atlantis is the story of a catastrophe. So is the biblical story of Noah's Ark and the Flood—which can be traced all the way back to the Sumerian Gilgamesh epic. Walter Alvarez and his group explain the great dinosaur extinctions by collision with an asteroid. Innumerable ancient legends describe the earth as nearly destroyed by flood, fire, earthquake, volcanism or other natural disaster. It becomes increasingly likely, as we gain knowledge, that similar disasters will occur in the future.

Dr. Victor Clube and Dr. Bill Napier of the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh, have written a book (published in the United Kingdom in July 1982) which confirms and enlarges on catastrophes descending upon us from space.

It is titled The Cosmic Serpent: A Catastrophist View of Earth History. In it Clube and Napier warn that the earth is seriously affected by the dark clouds it penetrates from time to time as our solar system wheels around the galactic center, and that these dark clouds feed 100,000 potentially dangerous comets. "A history of terrestrial catastrophism is implicit in our theory," they warn, "as is the need for some radically new ideas about the solar system and the galaxy."

UTTER DESTRUCTION

THese two are hardly newcomers. Long before Walter and Luis Alvarez's group at the University of California decided that an anomalous layer of iridium clinched the case for the dinosaur extinctions by meteor impact, Clube and Napier had proposed the extinctions were caused by a 10 km asteroid colliding with earth.

They paint a horrifying word picture. They estimate that celestial bodies of more than 10 km in diameter encounter earth on an average of every 100 million years. At 100,000 km/hr the impact would immediately destroy all life on half the earth. As far as 1200 miles from the point of collision wind speeds would reach an unbelievable 1500 mph. Hot ash would blow from the area and a pall of dust would envelop the world. Most of our atmospheric ozone would be destroyed and after the dust cloud finally settled the earth's surface would be exposed to devastating ultraviolet light. Ground waves alone would be as high as 30 feet or more.

If such a comet hit the ocean the waves would be miles high and would race hundreds of miles inland in many places. The continents would be shaken to their roots as they float uneasily on their tectonic plates and giant earthquakes would rend the world. Clube and Napier predict that cracks six to 60 miles wide could open in the earth's crust. There would be worldwide volcanic eruptions and new mountains would build rapidly. When the earth finally settled down again after millennia it would be far different from what it is today.

This is indeed a frightening picture but it is hardly a fanciful one. It not only could happen; it has happened!

DARK CLOUDS

THESE conclusions are the result of the relatively recent discovery that the sun periodically passes through dense clouds in space as it orbits the

From Heaven to Earth

What are heaven and life after death really like? Learn from those who know best—the spirits of history's greatest psychics, mediums, and geniuses.

In a set of 12 paperback books, Dr. Robert R. Leichtman finds out the facts, by interviewing the spirits of Edgar Cayce, Arthur Ford, the palmist Cheiro, Carl Jung and Sigmund Freud, C.W. Leadbeater, the psychic researcher Sir Oliver Lodge, Thomas Jefferson, William Shakespeare, H.P. Blavatsky, the electrical genius Nikola Tesla, Eileen Garrett, and Stewart Edward White, through the mediumship of David Kendrick Johnson.

As the title of the series—From Heaven to Earth—suggests, the purpose of these books is to explore the psychic planes of life and demonstrate that we need not be content with just an echo of great psychics and geniuses who have lived and died; their voices can literally be heard again. Moreover, they can help us become more familiar with the nature of life after death—and life here on earth, too. The books present many new ideas about psychic phenomena, mediumship, civilization, and the future of mankind—as well as plenty of good humor.

All 12 books are now in print and can be purchased as a set for $27, postpaid. Individual interviews can be purchased for $4 apiece, postpaid. Ohio residents, please add 5½% sales tax. Make checks or money orders payable to Ariel Press.

galaxy. Clube and Napier contend that as the sun does this, it renews an accompanying body known as the Oort cloud, a little less than a light-year from the sun. In the Oort cloud 100,000 comets ordinarily reside and the two men contend that the Oort cloud and its comets are captured by the sun as it passes through the spiral arms of the galaxy.

Clube and Napier also believe that most of the meteors which hit the earth probably come from this cometary debris rather than from the original belt of meteors which were part of the solar system in the beginning. They also believe the same is true of asteroids—that it is no longer reasonable to suppose that most of these come from the so-called asteroid belt. (They call them "Apollos," which they define as asteroids a kilometer or more in diameter that cross the orbit of the earth around the sun.) The point is that there are many more "Apollos" than anyone merely studying the asteroid belt might expect.

ANCIENT EVENTS

THE CLUBE-Napier ideas would explain many ancient events. In more modern times, they say that boulders from a meteor stream coming from the direction of Taurus regularly strike the moon in the month of June—the same time of year that the Tunguska meteorite struck Siberia in 1908. They think this was a fragment of Encke's Comet, which they believe was once much larger and which broke up fairly recently—they suspect sometime in the Third Millennium B.C. there would have been tremendous, awe-inspiring fireball activity.

adventures of Lord and Lady Dowding

The Psychic Life of Muriel, the Lady Dowding

(An autobiography)

Mysterious • Historical • Humorous • Adventuresome

She was married to Air Chief Marshal Lord Dowding, World War II hero who masterminded the Battle of Britain. They were both unusually sensitive to ESP phenomena. This is their story. It is also the story of Lady Dowding's childhood with a mother who had amazing powers as a healer and seer; of contacts with spirits of the departed; delightfully humorous episodes; meeting with the famous—Winston Churchill, Queen Juliana, Lord Beaverbrook. Plus this bonus: Lady Dowding describes how she founded the world-renowned, but not always popular "Beauty Without Cruelty" movement to curtail exploitation of animals for use in making cosmetics. WITH 18 PHOTOS.

They suggest the comet breakup might explain the story of the Flood—by creating a catastrophic inundation. New Scientist quotes them as saying that their theory might also explain the archetypal concepts of many cultures preoccupied with the “idea of cosmic cycles culminating in catastrophes, world end and rebirth. Such popular themes as the Phoenix rising from the ashes or the return of the Fire-god or Messiah were common currency. Christianity, for example, began at the end of what appears to have been a cometary cycle!”

They even defend Immanuel Velikovsky who “simply took the mythology of comets at its face value and, applying it to planets, came up with all sorts of impossible ideas.”

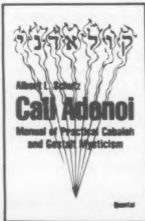

There is no doubt, they point out, that if the scenario they suggest is accurate—that asteroids colliding with earth bring about radical changes—it also adds a new dimension to the theories of evolution.

MAN AND DINOSAUR?

IT SEEMS reasonable to argue that if our civilization developed in less than the past 10,000 years, it is likely that similar civilizations also developed—only to be destroyed by forgotten catastrophes of the past. It becomes increasingly important to investigate the recurrent proposition that man and dinosaurs coexisted even though some of the claims are hard to swallow.

One story comes out of the desert of Ica in southern Peru where local treasure hunters have found thousands of carefully engraved stones. Dr. Javier Cabrera Darquea, a surgeon and cardiologist, is the custodian of thousands of these engraved stones which he keeps in a museum he founded. He estimates a million more are still in the ground.

Dr. Cabrera and his assistant Luis Lahua Acuna maintain these stones are actually a library depicting dinosaurs, flying reptiles and extinct species of fish, mammals and plants. Moreover, Cabrera insists that they are depicted in

The best things in life are free.

Take this cassette, for example. It's free for the asking and it is one of the finest things around.

It's a demonstration tape of the breathtakingly beautiful music by Steven Halpern.

If you're not familiar with Steven Halpern, this tape introduces you to a delightful world of sounds he has created — sounds that soothe and uplift, to help you tune into new dimensions of your Self. If you're an old friend, it lets you sample Steven's latest cassette and LP releases.

Steven Halpern has established a reputation of excellence for his pioneering work in composing and channeling heavenly music that can heighten your psychic sensitivity, deepen your meditations, and facilitate out-of-body experiences, if desired.

Each recording by this master musician features innovative combinations of grand piano, flute, harp, and electric keyboards.

His critically-acclaimed works are gathered under the title "Anti-Frantic Alternative™ Series" to underscore the inner calm and balance they can bring to your life — even if you don't meditate or want to leave your body.

But these words cannot begin to describe the beauty that is HALPERN SOUNDS; only an audition of Steven's music can do that.

To order this free demonstration tape today, simply write to:
HALPERN SOUNDS, Dept. F1, 1775 Old County Road, #9, Belmont, CA 94002. Please enclose $2.00 for shipping and handling (which is refundable on your first order).

their embryonic and adult stages and metamorphoses along with their reproductive systems and habitats and that this is documentation of their authenticity. He says the stones show the dinosaurs Stegosaurus, Triceratops and Tyrannosaurus.

We are indebted to the quarterly journal Planet Earth for much of this information and for permission to reproduce the accompanying drawings. While we cannot vouch for the authenticity of Cabrera's claims, the photographs of some of his stones show sharply incised engravings which are unquestionably the handiwork of skilled artisans.

Line etching from the stones of Ica depicts human being flying astride bird.

The article in Planet Earth was written by Annie-Sophie Mileweska, a Brazilian-born geologist. She includes Cabrera's "audacious" conclusions: "The stones were engraved by a civilization contemporary with the dinosaurs, which possessed highly advanced technical and scientific knowledge. With the sudden extinction of the dinosaurs and other life forms at the end of the

Now You Can KNOW!

How could you have known that things are not the way they appear to be?

- That sex can be the cause of death as well as life?
- That thoughts are living things which survive your body?
- That what you think and desire today literally constructs the reality on this earth that awaits you tomorrow?
- That every human once existed in a perfect, immortal, sexless physical body, untouched by pain or woe, or any of the problems that beset man?
- That every scripture, every myth, every call to spirituality is a reflection of man's need to know himself, find himself as the conscious self-in-the-body, and to regenerate his mortal body to one of permanence in the realm from which he has banished himself by his thinking?
- That it is the duty of every conscious self to awaken to the realities of re-existence, responsibility and regeneration, and to begin, in some life, the return trip "home" to the exalted state from which we have all fallen?

No science, no philosophy, no religion, no opinion means anything without the kind of key that this profound book offers. For anyone wishing to take the next step in human progression, THINKING AND DESTINY is the clearest, most complete guide. Without veils of obscurity, the truth about human destiny is now presented plainly as the science of man by Harold Percival, and in the language of our time. A course for a lifetime of study for a modest, one-time investment!

Mesozoic era (about 63 million years ago), he thinks this civilization also came to an abrupt end. Some people at that time, however, foresaw the impending global cataclysm and recorded their knowledge on the most eternal raw material available, rounded stones, in a language as universal as possible."

Obviously someone extremely knowledgeable should be studying these claims. We find it hard to believe that ancient engravers would depict human beings as looking so much like humans look today; however, Cabrera explains this similarity to modern man by saying they would be anatomically different in their proportions and hormonal functioning from modern Homo sapiens.

Another Ica line etching is believed to show human beings studying dinosaurs.

WORLDS BEYOND

A world exists beyond the one in which we live. This world of vast planes and wondrous realms is invisible to the physical senses. Yet, anyone who follows the path of ECKANKAR may visit at will any of the planes in this vast world.

In this book the great Tibetan adept Rebazar Tarzs gives a concise explanation of these worlds. He shows how to rise above the materialistic attachments of life, how to resolve problems which have faced every individual since the beginning of human existence and how to gain Self-Realization and God-Realization through ECKANKAR.

The Far Country is a matchless piece of literature of divine wisdom. There are few sacred writings in the world today which can equal it in its beauty and revelation of the God Worlds and what is contained within them. —The Far Country by Paul Twitchell

They had to be different, he points out, but perhaps we are their indirect descendants.

Particularly intriguing are the following claims:

- That 48 stones depict the reproductive cycle of the Megachiroptera, a giant bat. (Did Megachiroptera exist 60-odd million years ago?)
- That 205 stones show the reproductive cycle of Agnatha, a paleozoic fish, and that the paleozoological and paleobotanical details are so meticulous and complete that they could only have come from direct observation.
- That some stones show "human beings" killing or controlling dinosaurs and observing them through telescopes.
- That stones show a heart transplant operation using an "antirejection hormone" taken from the blood of a pregnant woman at a precise stage of pregnancy. (Recent research supports the existence of such a hormone.)

The lesson that Planet Earth preaches, of course, is that this ancient civilization may have been destroyed by the same human-induced ecological cataclysms that some believe now threaten our own civilization.

FALSE RELICS

IN considering claims made for relics 160 million years old we are brought up short by realizing that even relatively modern claims can be bogus.

At Vladimir, an ancient Russian Orthodox religious center near Moscow, and at nearby Suzdal, another important religious center in the Middle Ages, some bones have been preserved and venerated for centuries. They supposedly were the remains of three Russian

IN LESS THAN 40 HOURS YOU CAN LEARN TO USE YOUR MIND TO DO ALMOST ANYTHING YOU WISH....

It has been said that Einstein used only 10% of his mind, and the average person uses only 3%. That's what Silva Mind Control is all about, learning to use more of your mind. There is no limit to how far you can go, there is no limit to what you can accomplish, because there is no limit to the power of the mind.

Students report simple things like—relieve nervousness and tension headaches, improve memory, overcome insomnia, stop smoking and excessive drinking, control weight, enhance intelligence, improve creativity and develop ESP and using the mind to set goals, get information and solve problems.

Over three million people in fifty-seven countries have taken Silva Mind Control and so can you. To find out how, we invite you to call for dates, but a word of caution—it will change your life.

saints who miraculously shielded their communities from the Mongol hordes who overran Russia in the 14th Century.

Now, according to the Washington Post, the newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya reports that these sacred bones have been discovered to be the bones of their Mongol adversaries. There is no doubt that the three saints, Bishop John, Euphemia and Euphrosinia, lived; their lives have been historically established. But these long-revered bones are not theirs. Anthropological examination has proved that the bones belong to Mongol invaders.

Ironically, according to Dusko Doder, writing from Moscow, "The ability of these holy men and women to exercise protective influence is at the center of a deeply rooted Russian belief that no one can conquer this vast country." When the German army was only 15 miles from Moscow in December 1941 Stalin invoked the memories of these old saints rather than those of Marx and Engels.

Of course it is conceivable that the saints could act without their bones.

"THE BIRDS"

WHEN William Clark, 20, broke into Pet Plaza on Route 117 in Bedford Hills, N. Y., last May, he had in mind feathering his nest by stealing a gaggle of exotic birds. He began his misadventure by choosing a rare $3000 cockatoo but the bird's hooked black beak was too much for him.

Clark next tried for a more docile parrot but succeeded only in hurting its leg and pulling out some tail feathers.

James Norman describes what happened next in the New York Post:

EVERYTHING YOU'VE EVER WANTED!

LET THE GODDESS OF FORTUNE SMILE ON YOU!
GET LOVE, MONEY, POWER, HEALTH, AND HAPPINESS WITH THE GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

Yes, Friends,

Now you can finally join all those lucky folks who just sit back and rake it in. Yes, at last you can stop working so darn hard and still enjoy the life you deserve—as a person of wealth, power, and confidence. I guarantee it.

Ever notice how some people work and work, but never get anywhere? While other people do hardly anything—yet still seem to get whatever they want! What's their secret? They're no smarter, and they sure don't work any harder than you do. The answer is that they are just plain lucky! Well, now good luck can also be yours—just for the asking.

I never thought I'd be lucky in life, but look where I am today. Thanks to the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET, I have a huge ranch, a gorgeous house, a pool, servants, a devoted family, and enough money so I don't have to ask the price of anything I want to buy! And that's not even the best part. I also have perfect health, unlimited self-confidence, and a spiritual outlook on life that has given me true peace of mind.

Did I say it was all yours just for the asking? You bet I did! A few years ago, I stumbled on the secrets of how to get good luck, and I've given it to my family and all my friends, and it's worked for every one of them. So there's no reason it won't work for you! I absolutely guarantee that you'll be lucky in love, lucky in business, lucky wherever you go, beating the odds of life at every step—or your money back.

THE SECRET OF GOOD LUCK

You wouldn't believe it to look at me now, but I was a loser for most of my life. I worked my butt off, but I never got paid enough to get out of debt. I was shy and timid, and wasn't very good-looking, so I could never get a girl to go out with me more than once. I had a six-year-old car that always broke down just when I needed it most. My health was always a problem, I had terrible migraines, but I never could afford a really good doctor. I always lost at the track.

THE GODDESS OF FORTUNE SMILES

When I unpacked, I was surprised to find a very strange-looking object in my suitcase. I'd never seen anything like it before, and I had no idea where it came from. Then I remembered the "dream." "Nahh, it couldn't be real," I thought. But there was the amulet, so I pocketed it and went for dinner to a fancy restaurant. There was a famous TV actress and a big Hollywood producer sitting right at the next table. It was that kind of place. Out of nervousness, I put my hand in my pocket and fingered the amulet. Suddenly, I felt bursting with confidence, and I casually struck up a conversation with the actress. In no time flat, I had a date for the next evening!

GOOD LUCK GUARANTEED— OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

I know most people are skeptical, just like I was at first. That's why I'm giving you a 100% money-back guarantee—just to try to GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET for yourself. I know that once you've tried it, you won't part with it for anything in the world. You can't lose. This is a completely unconditional guarantee, with no strings attached. I'll refund your money—including the postage—at any time, for any reason. You won't pay even one penny if you are not completely, totally satisfied with your GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET.

FREE BOOK

Still not convinced? Okay, I'll even send you a free book. This is not just a pamphlet or mimeo—it's a real book that I discovered in my research on the Goddess of Fortune, and it's yours for free—just for trying the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET. It tells you all about the forces of karma that control good luck, and why the Goddess of Fortune smiles on people. Best of all, it's free, and yours to keep, no matter what.

ORDER RIGHT NOW

The fact is that you will never see such a good chance to get whatever you want. You can't buy the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET in any store, and those who already have it will not sell theirs at any price, no way.

So don't wait another moment to start the golden ball of good luck rolling your way. You can't lose because you have an iron-clad money-back guarantee that even includes and when it came to cards, forget it! All that changed when I entered an ad in the paper.

A big pharmaceutical company needed guinea pigs for a research project in India, had nothing to lose, and when I heard how much they were paying, I applied just for the heck of it. I never expected to get the job, so you can imagine my surprise when they called and said to get ready—we were leaving in three days!

We flew to Calcutta, and drove by jeep to Navadrip, where the roads ended and we had to back our way through the jungle. After two days my health was at an all-time low. I was so wiped out that I fell behind the main party—and with my usual bad luck, nobody noticed.

Finally, I had to stop and rest. That's when I heard a hiss, and suddenly felt the fangs of a giant snake in the back of my neck. I reached back with both hands, grabbed the snake by the throat, and with all my remaining strength I pressed my thumbs into its throat. The snake let go of my neck and I whipped its heavy long body over my shoulder and smashed it on the ground, over and over, while it struck at my hands. The last thing I remember as I fell to the ground and lost consciousness, was seeing a whole web of snakes under a rock—about two feet from my face, squirming over each other to get me.

HEAVEN ON EARTH

When I woke up, I thought I had died and gone to heaven. There I was, lying in a beautiful native bed, surrounded by the most heavenly girls I'd ever seen. An old woman with glowing, golden skin came up and said, "Today your luck has changed for good." She slipped something in my hand and softly said, "Take this. Use it and share it with others like yourself. The more you share it, the more the Goddess of Fortune will smile on you, and the more good luck you will have." She passed her hands over my eyes and I slept.

The next time I woke up, I was on a plane back to the States. The man who had hired me to go to India was sitting next to me. He told me what a miracle it was that the research group had found me—unconscious but seemingly okay. He apologized for the group having lost track of me and begged me not to sue for negligence. He said they would be glad to give me $250,000 just to avoid the publicity. I couldn't believe this was happening to me! Then I remembered the snake, the bull, and the old woman with the glowing skin. I knew I must have had a fever, and dreamed the whole thing. After all, I had no scars, so I didn't mention it to anyone. Back in the States, I got my big check from the company, and checked into the finest hotel in the city.

It didn't take much more to convince me of the power of the amulet. Even with the economy getting worse, within two weeks I had made a small fortune in the stock market, and had been offered a management position with a big manufacturer. The actress and I had fallen in love, and my migraines had disappeared forever.

WORKS FOR ANYONE

Soon, my family and my old friends wanted to know how I had become a changed man and an overnight success. Most of them laughed when I told them the truth—they thought I was pulling them in. There were a few, though, who believed my fantastic story—and they wanted to be on the amulet and try it out for themselves. I didn't want to send it out, but I did have some copies made, and I gave them away. I could hardly believe the results myself!

Marge F. and her family went on a famous TV game show and won the big prize, over $10,000!

Henry S. got a promotion at work, won a new car in a church raffle and got back his ex-wife, all in the same week.

My own grandmother, bed-ridden for over three years, got up out of bed and started taking care of herself again—right after I gave her a GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET.

Jim T. was mad because even though he used the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET to save his job, he got fired anyway. But the very next day he became partners with someone in a new company and he has now retired to a life of luxury.

DON'T MISS OUT

I could go on and on about all the people who have been smiling on by the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET. I've heard about fantastic winnings, beautiful grannies, miraculous cures, skyrocketing careers, families brought together, changed lives, new cars, new homes, etc. etc. You name it. There's no limit on how much you can get, once you start using the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET. Yes, now you really can get everything you've always wanted! But you must hurry! I don't mind sharing the secret of good luck—because the dream said that the more I share it, the more good luck I get. So I've turned it all over to a non-profit organization, and I've instructed them to make the price as low as possible, just to cover the costs of advertising and mailing. That's why the GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET is now available at a price everyone can afford. Just $4.95!

I've also set it up so you can get some for your friends, too—at a special reduced price for the additional amulets. Just like I did. You can get 2 for just $7.95 (only $3.98 each), 3 for just $8.95 (only $2.98 each), 4 for just $9.60 (only $2.40 each), 5 for just $9.95 (only $1.98 each), or 10 for just $14.95 (a mere $1.50 each).

the postage. And just think of how much you could gain! Like others, you could easily wind up with everything you've ever wanted: money, love, power, good health, happiness, whatever your heart desires.

All you have to do is pick up a pen, fill out the coupon, and send it today. Your GODDESS OF FORTUNE AMULET will be quickly rushed to you, so you can sit back and begin enjoying the unlimited blessings of the Goddess of Fortune right away. Don't miss out on this once-in-a-lifetime no-risk chance to change your luck for good!

"Clark went for tamer quarry, such as parakeets and finches." But . . . "swarms of canaries, parrots, finches and parakeets swooped from their lofts" and attacked him. "In a scene reminiscent of Alfred Hitchcock's 'The Birds' the spunky creatures battered, bruised, and pecked the thief as he tried to make off with several exotic birds.

When Westchester County police responded to the commotion they found Clark fleeing in terror from the store, his arms scratched and bleeding, his legs scraped, bruised and cut by broken glass, Norman reported. They also found a small blue parakeet in the glove compartment of Clark's car.

Asked if he thought the thief had gotten hold of the cockatoo, owner Charles Neville, who was summoned by the police, said "It sounds to me as if the cockatoo got ahold of him."

A GAGGLE OF MONSTERS

FROM New Delhi comes a story, unconfirmed at this time, of an unidentified five-ton sea monster that was dragged up on a beach in southeast India. The Press Trust of India reports:

"The creature, with ears, eyes and mouth resembling those of an elephant, has a tail-like projection measuring about 27 feet in length and 15 feet in girth."

The animal was pulled out of the Coromandel coast waters with huge nets—whether dead or alive we don't know. It supposedly took 500 fishermen to drag the huge creature ashore. Surely this figure is a bit exaggerated because that would average only 20 pounds per person if the animal weighed five tons.

We received the above story in June;

RAINBOWS FALLING ON MY HEAD

(THE MAGIC OF THE GREAT GOD PAN)

NOT A BETTER MOUSE TRAP, BUT A WONDERFULLY BETTER SELF-HELP BOOK!

At long last there is a useful answer to the burning question, "Isn't there a better way?" If you have just a reasonably open mind and a willingness to experiment, I can show you a happy path to riches, success, love, health and fulfillment. It is a better and easier way to make truly "miraculous" progress in all areas of your life and enjoy every part of it! The trick is to harness the literally omnipotent power of your basic human and animal drives with simple magical practices which irresistibly attract success, and indeed your heart's desires.

THE SECRET POWER IS IN PAN'S MAGIC

In this book AL G. MANNING shares his years of research and practice of natural magic which he has come to call THE MAGIC OF THE GREAT GOD PAN. You will learn the simple techniques that put you in touch and attunement with the primordial creative forces of the Universe, and make them your lifelong friends. From then on, you simply dance and play with your nature spirit and elemental friends while they power your personal magic and make the whole world your loving play-pen. How can there be any opposition to the power of nature itself? Nor can there be to you when you are in tune and letting the RAINBOWS of happiness, love, riches, health and joy fall delightfully on your head, too.

POSITIVE SENSUALITY AND NATURAL MAGIC

You are about to embark on a happy adventure as you apply yourself to the existing techniques given in this book. It should be the greatest adventure of your life this far because it involves you in a warm and tender love affair with every living being. Sure, any love affair worthy of the name is SEXY, but we'll keep it in good taste as we show you how wonderful, yet completely practical, a love affair with the elemental and natural expressions of life can be.

So I've said everything and nothing! From here it all depends on your open mind and the strength of your desire to make a richer and better life for yourself. Way down in the depths of your innermost beingness you know that there must be a better way to get ahead than your present struggling. That better way is here for you now! Don't wait another moment — order your copy today! Then just read and apply the simple truths and happy magical practices it will bring you, and win, and win, and WIN!

by July 1 a follow-up report from R. Srinwasan, head of the Tamil Nadu, India, fisheries department, said his staff examined the "sea monster" and discovered it was an ordinary sperm whale that apparently swam 6000 miles to the Bay of Bengal from its normal feeding grounds off the coasts of Japan and the Soviet Union in the north Pacific Ocean.

FOR confirmed Loch Ness monster fans, a different theory comes along every month. One not so new has recently resurfaced in a three-part article by Dr. Maurice Burton, formerly of the British Museum (Natural History), in New Scientist. The Loch Ness monster, Burton assures us, most likely is a single ordinary-sized otter, a single giant-sized otter, or a family of otters seen swimming along in single file.

Last June 24 Burton wrote that two photographs really started the modern furor. One was taken by Kenneth Wilson, a London surgeon, in April 1934. It shows what appears to be the long neck and small head of a plesiosaur-type animal. Burton says that in 1962 he interpreted the photo as showing the tail of an otter disporting on the surface. Gavin Maxwell agreed with him.

"Since then," Burton writes, "I have studied films of otters playing at the surface and this leaves no doubt in my mind that this is the correct interpretation: an otter, not a plesiosaur."

The Hugh Gray photograph, taken in November 1933, had a problem; the original negative was lost. But in 1963 Burton came upon two contact positives of the original negative in the form of

Don't be a Victim of Psychic Attack!

THINGS DON'T JUST HAPPEN!

We all know people who seem to attract the very things they fear most: it's as if their very fears are invitations to disaster! Something that triggers reactions from the unseen world around us.

INVISIBLE FORCES

We know, as scientists are beginning to admit, that the UNSEEN WORLD AROUND US is seething with powers & forces of all kinds—some of human origin, some not—many set in motion by people with no occult knowledge or even conscious intent: just ordinary people filled with desire, bitterness, hate, jealousy, greed.

ASTRAL VAMPIRES

We know besides, that there ARE astral vampires and trouble making entities that thrive on people's drink or drug problems, sex frustrations, impulses to violence their fears & hatreds, envy & pain.

AND . . . THE EVERYDAY WORLD

And what about the visible world we live in? How come you buy things you don't really want or need, fritter away your time with activities that don't really interest, help or even amuse you? or get involved with people you don't even like?

VICTIMIZED

or, how do previously sane, normal, good people get hooked into the toils of a Jim Jones or a Charles Manson? Or caught up in mob violence? Or victimized in weird scams or even obvious frauds?

PSYCHIC SELF-DEFENSE . . .

These are just some of the problems dealt with in this new book. With these easy-to-apply techniques, you can build into your aura an actual psychic shield to protect you! Not just from deliberate psychic attack, but even from weaknesses and psychic traumas within yourself!

. . . AND PSYCHIC WELL-BEING!

This book doesn't stop with "defense"—this knowledge and program also brings you positive psychic strength & well-being. Simple exercises balance and clear your aura and bring the Light of the Higher Self—your Holy Guardian Angel—so that no psychic harm can reach you and you are guided to fulfill your spiritual destiny.

DEFENSE FORMULAE

Yes, this book gives specific rites and formulae to protect yourself, your home, family, and others against harm; and powerful meditation pictures and chants (based on secret knowledge of the Psalms) builds your spiritual defenses against every kind of psychic injury, and even physical harm.

WRITTEN FOR YOU . . . NOW

This book was written by occult adepts at the publisher's request to help people in these difficult times. What you learn from this book should be taught to every young person to properly prepare them for a active and successful life. Here's basic knowledge about the aura, the astral plane, the structure of the psyche, ritual, the making of an amulet, the power of blessing, dietary and ethical considerations, learning to listen to the instincts, the world of occultism, etc. It's all here, now, for you—and for those you care for. ORDER NOW, AND DEFEND YOURSELF!

HOW TO WIN — OR WIN BACK — THE PERSON OF YOUR DREAMS!

At last — for the first time — there is a book devoted exclusively to the subject of winning, or winning back, love. This book "How to Win — Or Win Back — The Person of Your Dreams", an exclusive from Finbarr's, is the result of 15 years of experience and research by two proficient marriage counsellors who are also master occultists! George and Beryl Marsh know the secrets of successfully catching the person of one's dreams. These secrets have been partially covered in other books, but this book gives the story in full and its sole purpose is to get love into the reader's life, in very real and definite terms!

If you are sick of being alone and neglected then this is the book for you. And if you have been jilted, or think that your loved one may leave you for another, then you simply cannot afford to be without this book. This book is a "love saver"! It holds all the keys to securing love in your life and making sure you never lose it!

In this exciting book you will learn:

- HOW TO MENTALLY SEDUCE THE PERSON OF YOUR DREAMS!
- MASTERFUL BUT EXTREMELY SIMPLE OCCULT TECHNIQUES THAT COMPEL THE PERSON OF YOUR DREAMS TO COME TO YOU!
- SECRETS OF SENSUALITY!
- HOW TO DEVELOP IRRESISTIBLE POWERS OF CHARM AND MAGNETISM!
- POTENT TECHNIQUES THAT PREVENT ANYONE FROM STEALING YOUR LOVED ONE AWAY FROM YOU!
- HOW TO IRRESISTIBLY COMPEL A STRAYING PARTNER TO RETURN!
- HOW TO ENSURE THAT HE OR SHE NEVER STRAYS AGAIN!
- DEVASTATING "MIND-SEX" TECHNIQUES!
- HOW TO INSPIRE TOTAL DEVOTION AND LOYALTY IN YOUR LOVED ONE!

... and more in this remarkable "get love and keep it" book. Buy this book and practice its simple techniques, say the authors, and you will never want for love or admiration again!

lantern slides. "When projected onto a screen the slides show an otter rolling at the surface in characteristic fashion," Burton asserts.

Burton's theory sounds fairly convincing — except for one thing. He has been so determined to disprove the existence of the "monster" that he keeps coming up with different arguments to prove his point. In his book The Elusive Monster, published in 1961, he concluded that the Loch Ness creature "is a mixture of gas-filled vegetable mats, turbulence caused by gas escaping from faults in the bed of the lock, commonplace objects including boats, birds . . . waves . . . otters . . . doubtless other things besides."

Now most of this is forgotten in favor of his new observation that "when two or more family parties of otters swim behind the other, they resemble the coils of a huge sea serpent, especially when the leading adult rears up out of the water to take stock, looking like the head and neck of a serpent."

Well and good, although it is a bit difficult to imagine two or more families of otters joining in such a serpentine line. However, Burton leaves us again when he discusses the size of northern hemisphere otters. He says they average three or four feet in length but that records show they may attain 5½ to six feet, with one record of a 7½ to eight-foot otter. Some otter!

more wonderful. Consider, for example, the amazing abilities of some animals to generate their own electricity. Creatures like the African electric catfish and the South American electric eels are so well known that we don't stop to think how wonderful and diverse nature is, to have produced such marvelously strange abilities.

It seems there are about 250 species of fish in Africa and South America which generate subtle electrical fields which serve quite different purposes from those served by the relatively powerful shocks of the electric eels and catfish. Their abilities became known only about 30 years ago when H. W. Lissman classified them as the "weakly electric fish." They not only generate their own electrical fields of only a volt or two but have developed a sensory system based upon electricity.

Their electrical discharges have a "rich and varied social significance." Apparently by picking up the electrical discharges of other fish they can tell whether it is young or old, male or female, threatening or wary or wishes to mate.

The African electrical fish are called mormyriforms and they have special receptors in their lateral line systems called knollenorgans. These receptors are tuned to different frequencies. One species shifts its frequencies up or down to avoid interference with broadcasts from other fish.

In a sense these fish could be described as small living radio broadcasting stations which carry their own receiving sets around with them. They can prevent their frequencies from being jammed and although their electrical conversations with each other must be

MINDS IN CONCRETE

NICHOLAS Wade, a science writer for the New York Times and formerly on the staff of Science, seems to be as skeptical as we are about scientists' receptivity to new ideas. A month or so ago we commented on the difficulty physicists have in considering a possible error in Einstein's theory. The University of Arizona scientists say they are 95 percent certain they have disproved Einstein's theory of relativity.

Wade comments: "Fat chance."

He adds, "It's not that the Arizonans are necessarily wrong . . . [it's] that even if the challengers are right, physicists will continue to believe Einstein's theory."

Wade asks why this is and concludes that theories don't collapse because of facts but because of other theories.

"Theories are never lightly abandoned. They, after all, explain the world, whereas facts merely describe it. Some theories even determine the facts that can be observed."

Einstein's theories always have held the upper hand over refractory or contradictory facts, Wade says. When expeditions studied the eclipse of 1919, to test the general theory of relativity by observing how the gravitational field of the sun bends starlight, three measurements were taken. Only one measurement exactly confirmed Einstein but the scientific committee that considered the matter omitted mention of the measurement that particularly contradicted it.

Again in 1925, D. C. Miller, president of the American Physical Society, described 20 years of experiments in which he had "established overwhelming evidence of certain small variations in the speed of light, an intolerable embarrassment for Einstein's theory of special relativity."

Philosopher Michael Polanyi wrote: "By that time they had so well closed their minds to any suggestion which threatened the new rationality achieved by Einstein's world-picture, that it was almost impossible for them to think in different terms. Little attention was paid to the experiments, the evidence being set aside in the hope that it would one day turn out to be wrong."

THE DOWSING PENDULUM

Shining and sparkling like enormous diamonds, some women prefer to wear these jewel-like ornaments as pendants—or in smaller versions as earrings. Their mysterious dowsing powers may be due to their greater resonance with the Universe. Heavy 32% lead crystal pendulums 50MM long. Only $5.45 each, plus $1.00 postage & handling.

Only recently have scientists begun to understand why crystals seem to have magical properties. Previously crystals have been looked at only as physical objects with points, lines, planes, symmetry and mysterious lattice structures.

But advanced theorists now suggest that the entire universe may be immersed in a crystal-like matrix and that this explains many occult mysteries. When one part of the Crystal-line Universe is affected all other parts are instantly affected because all other parts are linked together within the matrix.

This may explain why thought waves are believed to travel faster than light, how telepathic signals are transmitted, and many other occult observations.

If this theory is correct, these gorgeous lead crystal creations have a special resonance with the Universe. This may explain why they work so well in dowsing and divining, for example. The research is still too new to know for sure but the symmetrical shining beauty of these crystals offers exciting opportunities for their users.

Feats at Hindu Festival . . . “NO BLOOD WILL FLOW”

Honoring Lord Subramian, six-headed deity who vanquished evil, devotees celebrate their ability to triumph over pain.

Jostling crowd recognizes danger of touching long slim skewer which pierces Thaipusam devotee's cheeks. Skewer is a Chinese spirit medium's thangka.

MY FRIEND Rami Shiva is a Hindu, 34 years old, who lives in Singapore and teaches in a primary school. When I visited her in 1981 I met Deva, her charming husband, and her two young sons. They are a fine modern Asian family living in an up-to-the-minute home. Thus I was somewhat taken aback when Rami began to tell me about the Thaipusam Festival to be celebrated in February. As we sat in her tastefully decorated living room she told me she was going to participate in rites which sounded to me like something out of prehistory.

Kavadi-bearing devotee has spokes inserted in his chest and skewers in his tongue and cheeks. Kavadi means gift carried on the shoulders; it need not be elaborate.

"Of course, as an American, you can't have any idea of the meaning of our Thaipusam Festival," she said, adding sadly, "The real pity is that many of our English-educated Hindus sneer at the event and are embarrassed by the image which they fear the Indian community is presenting to the other ethnic groups in Singapore."

The reason I was upset by Rami's plan to participate concerned the rites themselves. The cheeks, tongues and foreheads of the apparently entranced devotees are pierced with silver skewers or small spearheaded javelins. Spears or metal hooks may be inserted into the men's chests and backs. (For modesty's sake women do not have their chests pierced.) Limes or small brass vases may be hung from these hooks. Although it would seem that the weight of these objects would rip flesh, I was assured that this does not happen. "If the devotees are pure," I was told, "no blood will flow."

Thaipusam is celebrated every year in February in South India, Malaysia and Singapore. The festival honors Lord Subramanian, the six-headed Hindu deity who symbolizes the triumph of good over evil. Despite the seeming multiplicity of gods, Hinduism is not a polytheistic religion. The Hindus believe in one Universal Spirit who is called the Three-in-One God because He has different forms: the Creator, the Preserver and the Destroyer. Other attributes of the Triune God are symbolized by lesser "gods." Thus Subramanian is believed to be a reflection of some of God's attributes.

Shortly before the festival I attended a lecture given by Dr. Ruth Inge Heinz, Fulbright-Hays Research Fellow at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies. She discussed Thaipusam and attempted to explain the unusual phenomena:

"Skin resistance increases when a [person] is in trance. In addition, the chemical changes which occur in the body during altered states of consciousness protect the body against infection and blood poisoning."

Many persons in the audience had been Thaipusam devotees in past years. They were young and well-dressed and engaged in the usual urban professions — engineering, sales, accounting — and they discussed their feats openly and matter-of-factly. I learned that the devotees have to purify themselves for a period of 48 days, or as long as possible, limiting themselves to a vegetarian diet and foregoing alcohol, cigarettes and sex. In this period they do not shave or cut their hair and they are supposed to sleep on the floor. Above all, they are to think of God.

When someone commented on the values of self-immolation and penance a number of former devotees protested.

"Being pierced is not to be interpreted as suffering," one of them said. "It is an act of faith. If one is pierced in faith and in a spirit of joy and trust in his God, being pierced will not be painful."

Another young man agreed: "The gentle trances make us peaceful and hopeful." Then he added, "I recently read that some University of California scientists say that a hope-filled brain can cause the secretion of chemicals that kill pain."

"Yes," Dr. Heinz agreed, "they're morphinelike chemicals called endorphins."

A few members of the audience brought up the fact that self-mortification is not essential to the Thaipusam ceremony. All that is required is the symbolic pilgrimage and the offering — a kavadi — to Lord Subramanian. In Tamil kavadi means more than a gift; it means a gift carried on the shoulders. Over the centuries the rite has developed into a form of thanks to the Lord for granting past and future requests.

A former devotee laughed suddenly. "The tourists who watch the Thaipusam procession think that the devotees are devoutly religious all year long," he said. "They gawk at the participants. If only they knew that many of the devotees are not particularly religious during most of the year! It doesn't even matter if you are not usually observant of God if you are totally mindful of him during your preparation period."

"You can spend thousands of dollars on a puja [offering] at the temple," another man added, "or you can simply offer a flower, a fruit, even a blade of grass, providing there is love in your heart. And another thing, Thaipusam ignores caste, class and sex. For one day, the kavadi-carrier is godlike. Being a devotee brings him to the level of his superiors — even permits him to rise above them — for that one day."

* * *

A FEW DAYS before Thaipusam Rami surprised me by asking if I would like to meet her at the Temple early in the morning while she was being "prepared."

"I certainly would," I said.

"Just wear long sleeves and a long skirt or slacks," she advised. "Women are supposed to dress modestly for religious ceremonies." Then she looked at me thoughtfully. "I am happy that you will come but there is one thing I'm worried about. Eleanor, you must be sincere. If you think that you might look down on anything you see, it would be best for you not to come. I haven't seen anything bad happen myself but I heard about a man who went blind because he regarded the things he saw in a contemptuous manner. I don't want anything bad to happen to you."

When I had assured her of my genuine interest in the festival she said, "You can meet my family at the bus stop on Orchard Road. I won't be able to talk to you but Deva will explain things."

Daylight was barely breaking over the city when I met Rami's husband and mother and numerous cousins and friends who were her "supporters." We proceeded to the temple and found the preparations taking place in the courtyard. Incense pots were lighted and Tamil music came from loudspeakers while supporters fussed over their devotees.

Evident everywhere were different kinds of kavadis, the most elaborate being dome-shaped contraptions topped with tall clusters of peacock feathers. These are constructed of metal strips and may be festively bordered with plastic roses, ball fringe, ostrich plumes and illustrations or statues of the deities. Deva pointed out a particularly gruesome kavadi: its entire weight rested on skewers thrust directly through its bearer's waist and hips. Simpler kavadis rest partly on supporting metal rods.

Rami's kavadi was quite simple — a semicircular wooden frame with a crosspiece designed to support the structure on her shoulders. It was decorated with palm leaves, flowers and peacock feathers. At either end were two brass pots filled with fresh milk, a gift carried on the shoulders.

I watched a bare-chested man inserting skewers through a young woman's cheeks and tongue. Before each insertion he stamped his foot and his face contorted as a tremor passed through his arm. I remembered Sir James Frazer's The Golden Bough and recalled the descriptions of medicine men possessed by spirits. But then I turned around to see casually dressed men calmly inserting rows of hooks into young men's chests and backs as if their flesh were mere fabric. And the devotees sat almost as calmly as if their shirts, not their flesh, were being pierced. Deva explained to me that long lancelike spokes, small javelins and silver needles in the faces, bodies and tongues of the kavadi-carriers serve as reminders of the spears which Lord Subramanian used to vanquish the forces of evil.

Soon Rami took her place in front of a man who was to prepare her. He first drew three lines across her forehead with sacred ash which represent the three gods of the Indian trinity. (Of course Rami already had the red dot in the center of her forehead — the kumkum, the eye of wisdom of Lord Siva.) My heart started to beat very fast as Rami closed her eyes and seemed to go into trance. The man spread more holy ash on her cheeks, then held her mouth open and started to push a skewer through her cheek.

I looked toward Deva and his two sons watching their mother but I saw no fear or horror in their eyes even as the man forced the skewer through her opposite cheek. Rami remained perfectly still while a second skewer was inserted through her tongue. More ash was spread around the areas near the skewers and a tiny javelin-shaped pin was inserted between her eyebrows. The entire procedure took only a minute or two and when Rami opened her eyes she showed no more concern than if she had received some commonplace inoculation.

With infinite grace Rami lifted her wooden kavadi onto her shoulders and entered the ongoing procession. Deva walked backwards in front of her, facing her, and chanting "Vel, vel," in rhythmic encouragement. (Vel is the short spear with a heart-shaped head which is held in the hand of images of Lord Subramanian and signifies victory over evil.)

Some of the devotees' ankles were ringed with ropes of bells and their jangling mingled with the chanting and the festive sounds of the bongo drums and tambourines. Deva had told me there had been controversy over the use of drums, particularly bongo drums. Purists feel that only the classical Indian drum, the tabela, should be used. But the young people prefer the bongos and somehow the rhythmic beat seems important to the devotees' maintenance of their trance state.

The Tamil Indians willingly share their special festival with other racial groups. I saw several kavadi-bearing Sikhs and a few Chinese in the procession. One devotee had a Chinese spirit medium's thangki, a long steel pole, piercing his cheeks. The crowd was dense and I feared someone might jostle him and jam the rod against his teeth.

Along the way the kavadi carriers stopped to drink. It was high noon and the sun was merciless. I watched as water was poured directly into the mouths of the devotees, past the skewers. Not one of the drinkers choked or coughed as the liquid washed down his throat. One young man asked a question of a devotee whose cheeks and tongue were pierced — and the devotee answered. He was the only person with skewered tongue and cheeks whom I heard speak.

When we reached the second temple, the devotees and their friends entered the main gate, one group at a time. Inside, the skewers, hooks and spears were removed. When they emerged from the temple the only way one could tell who were the devotees was that they still had ash on their faces. Aside from that, no signs of their ordeal remained, no indications of wounds on cheeks, foreheads, chests or backs.

The line of devotees was long so it took awhile before Rami came out of the temple. She ran down the steps toward us, moving like a 16-year-old, not like a woman in her thirties.

"I saw you with my family!" she exclaimed, grasping my hands. She had not expected me to join the procession.

"Rami," I asked, "is your tongue sore?"

"Not a bit," she replied.

I looked at her cheeks. They were still smudged with holy ash but showed no sign at all of the tiniest wound.

* * *

ALTHOUGH Rami had emerged from the experience full of energy and showing no physical sign of the recent trauma, not everyone was so lucky. Several individuals lost control of themselves and ran wildly through the street with tongues protruding. Almost immediately, each would be taken in hand by a man who would press his thumb tightly against the kumkum, the red mark on the forehead. Or he might dig his fingers into the person's scalp while others sprinkled holy water and ash. Within moments the disturbed individual would appear to be normal.

"Are they special holy men?" I asked Deva as one of them dug his thumb firmly into the kumkum on a woman's forehead.

"No," he replied. "Anyone can pull a person from a bad trance with the powder. However, this 'cure' is not always lasting. Sometimes the agitated state recurs. I've seen devotees fall into a trance and even go into convulsions a couple of days after Thaipusam."

I must have looked toward Rami worriedly because Deva hurried to reassure me. "Don't worry. Rami will be all right." Then, grinning, he said, "You'll never guess what she's going to do now."

"What is that?"

"She's going to vote."

"Vote?" I couldn't believe him.

"Didn't you read yesterday's paper? Today we have local elections. Voting is compulsory here so we were advised to adjust our time so that we could take part in the Thaipusam ceremonies and still be able to cast our votes."

"That's what our government calls 'harmony,'" Rami smiled. "We are urged to live a balanced life. We have to find time for our religious duties, our professional duties, our civic duties, and" — she squeezed her husband's hand — "our family pleasures."

CACTUS MAKES NEWS

NEAR PHOENIX, Ariz., a man shot a giant saguaro cactus and it killed him. Sheriff's deputies said David M. Grundman, aged 27, fired a shotgun at least twice at a 27-foot cactus in early February 1982. The pellets severed a 23-foot section of the cactus which crushed Grundman.

The Pendulum and the Ripper

The message came five weeks before the murderer's arrest:
"Kills 13. Kills no more. Arrested 2day. Works BL."

By Joan Cearnal

AFTER MY husband Martin and I left Connecticut to live in the south of England in July 1979, I began to take an interest in psychic phenomena. It may have been the fogbound atmosphere of Hindhead, Surrey, that influenced me — or the proximity of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's property, now called the Undershaw Hotel.

Throughout the years of my teaching career in various parts of the United States, I had occasionally warned my students against such phenomena — ghost stories and the like which sometimes captivate adolescent imaginations. Finding myself speculating on the supernatural, the paranormal and the nature of psychic faculties, I thought, "If my students could see me now!"

Always a champion of the rational outlook I nevertheless began to create a little room on my mental shelf for the "unexplained." Before long I found myself wanting to experiment. I fashioned a homemade pendulum, a circle of alphabet letters and the numbers one through 10, all the while wondering if I had any natural dowsing ability and whether the pendulum would move or hang motionless. To my great surprise it almost immediately began whizzing around the circle, indicating letters or numbers by swinging back and forth above them.

I have always had a keen interest in psychology so I quickly leaped to the conclusion that my subconscious mind had found a relatively easy way of speaking to the "reality-based" side of my personality. In other words, by some means my subconscious mind was influencing the pendulum. I believed that the pendulum worked in the same way as the Rorschach inkblot test works, simply giving the creative imagination free reign to express itself by projecting onto something outside itself. I believe I would have held to that interpretation if I had not chanced to begin asking questions about the Yorkshire Ripper.

At that particular time, the end of 1980, England was caught up in a frenzied search for the man who had killed 13 women, attacked several more and eluded authorities for more than four years. The press called him the Yorkshire Ripper in keeping with his similarity to the infamous Jack the Ripper of an earlier century. Both had brutally slashed and mutilated their victims who were frequently prostitutes — although of late the newest incarnation of the Ripper was attacking innocent schoolgirls and respectable mature women as well.

No woman felt safe — and that included me. Although we lived in the south of England and thus far all the killings had taken place in the industrialized north, who could say when the Ripper would change his tactics once again? I wanted to see him captured — but it never occurred to me that I might obtain any information about him through the pendulum.

Nevertheless, I had nothing to lose by posing questions about the Ripper's identity. It might even help to free up some subconscious fears engendered by this horrific situation. The date was November 28, 1980, five weeks before the police finally captured Peter William Sutcliffe, the man they were calling the Yorkshire Ripper. At the time the country was reeling under the shock of yet another murder, this time 20-year-old student Jacqueline Hill. Fortunately I kept a record of the questions I posed and the answers obtained because I was to refer to them many times in the weeks after the Ripper's capture and even months later during his trial. I still ask myself, "Who or what gave me this information?"

My first question was, "Is there anyone there who has information about the Yorkshire Ripper?" The response came unhesitatingly, "Emile."

I was so surprised that I nearly forgot what my question had been; I also took a completely wrong tack, wondering if the Ripper were a Frenchman named "Emile." I held to this absurd premise for a while as I continued to ask questions.

"What is his name?" The reply was, "Williams." Then came something not quite clear (which I transcribed as "Hirshfield" but could never quite clarify — unless it was a misperception of "Sheffield" where the Ripper was eventually apprehended). Now the whizzing pendulum spelled out "near Leeds" and something like "Agatha," although it might have been "agony."

"Who are you?" I asked. The reply: "3 victim." I thought this meant three victims of the killer and asked for names of others. "Susan R" and "Vera" came the response. "What should I do with this information?" I asked. The answer was relatively expansive for this type of communication: "Too late. Arrest him 2 day."

When I asked, "What do you mean? Today? Tuesday? A date with a two in it?" all I received was a reiteration of "2 day."

What had I gotten into? I paused to wonder if I was doing something dangerous or unwholesome. Customarily I let my conscience be my guide and my conscience felt clear. I continued.

The pendulum went on to spell "Kills 13. Kills no more. Arrested 2 day. Works BL." British Leyland, the English automobile manufacturer? I began to picture the killer working in an automobile factory or having something to do with vehicles. In fact he turned out to be a long-distance truck driver but his connection with "BL" proved even more solid.

The messages continued to materialize beneath my fascinated fingers. "I'd 4get killer, kills 13, arrested, kills girls no more. His wife. . . ." Wife? You mean this guy is married? I was so startled I lost the sense of the questioning and that was all I could get that day.

I started over on December 3. "Can you give me any information about the Yorkshire Ripper?" The responses were, "Emile Williams - foreign MD - BL Leeds." Now I was certain this experiment was degenerating into nonsense or possibly something worse, outright lunacy. I was conjuring up a mental picture of the Ripper as Emile Williams, a foreign M. D. who had something to do with British Leyland cars. Trying to get back to something factual I asked for the killer's age and nationality; I was still hoping to rule out that improbable Frenchman. The answer was, "35. Vow killer Limey, 2L only little, grisly sodomy on urs truly. Killer murderer 5 iron."

At this point I had had enough. I didn't want to venture further into those shadowy menacing areas of my own or anybody else's subconscious. I closed up shop and had nothing more to do with the subject until the Ripper story broke on Monday, January 5, 1981.

* * *

ON FRIDAY night, January 2 ("2 day") police arrested Peter William Sutcliffe in a V8 Rover built by British Leyland. With him was a prostitute named Olivia Reivers. The message "kills 13, kills no more" proved correct. Except for the timely intervention of the police, Olivia was to be the 14th victim. Fortunately for her and the rest of the female population of the British Isles, the game was up. Because a sharp-eyed policeman spotted a stolen license plate on the BL Rover the law finally caught up with the Yorkshire Ripper.

As the officers approached the car, Sutcliffe whispered to the girl beside him, "Tell them your name is Susan. Say you are my girl friend." I had that name in my notebook but none of the victims bore that name. One of the mysterious names out of nowhere was "Vera" and Vera Millward was victim No. 10.

When police asked Sutcliffe to identify himself, he responded, "Peter Williams from Rotherham." Williams. I had that name as well, several times. If Sutcliffe gave that name so readily to the police, isn't it likely he may also have given it to one or more of his victims?

As the newspapers began to reveal more and more details of the macabre killings, my notes began to look less like demented ramblings and more like pieces of a puzzle, scattered and disconnected but ready for reassembly. Consider "Emile 3 victim" and "near Leeds." Mrs. Emily Jackson was the killer's third victim and her body was dumped near a derelict schoolhouse in Leeds. That grisly crime had taken place in 1976, long before I had moved to England and before the killer was being called the Ripper. It is remotely possible that my subconscious mind retained this scrap of a long-forgotten newscast but at the time of my pendulum inquiries, the press was not publishing any recapitulations of the crimes, apparently waiting for the capture of the Ripper before retelling the whole grim story in detail.

In fact, on the advice of the police, the press was withholding quite a bit of information — notably, specifics about the murder weapons. Victims were described as “slashed” or “mutilated” but apparently the police did not want to provoke any copycat killing by disclosing too many details of the killer’s methods. Therefore the British people were suitably horrified to learn eventually that the most frequent implements of death were ordinary household tools. Was that the meaning of the phrase “2L only little,” a phonetic representation of the word “tool”? The press revealed — after keeping the information quiet for nearly five years — that Emily Jackson had been stabbed more than 52 times with a Phillips screwdriver.

The phrase “grisly sodomy on urs truly” was never explained but the police admitted that a piece of wood was propped suggestively close to Mrs. Jackson’s body. The mysterious “5 iron” was never explained either but a lot of testimony concerned a crisp new five-pound note which was found in victim Jean Jordan’s handbag. It was actually traced back to the bank which issued the pay packets to the trucking firm where Sutcliffe worked. Most British people would have referred to the note as a “fiver.” Perhaps I came close to that but did not recognize it; it would not have been in my vocabulary at the time.

Other parts of the message proved evidential. The killer’s age was given as 35 and in fact the first press accounts said Sutcliffe was 35; later ones amended it to 34.

One could argue for many different interpretations of these cryptic messages, up to discounting them entirely, but one small fragment is hard to quarrel with because the truth of the matter was not known to the police, the public or even the victim herself until after the arrest of Sutcliffe and his subsequent confession. That is the term “foreign MD.” It didn’t seem to fit into the story at all. The doctors involved in the trial in May 1981 were court-appointed psychiatrists and all of them were undeniably British.

During the course of his interrogation, however, Sutcliffe admitted that on the night of September 24, 1980, he had deviated from his usual pattern and used a rope in an attempt to strangle his victim. She had lost consciousness and had never seen her attacker. Something had gone wrong and Sutcliffe had been scared off; his intended victim survived. Because of the deviation from the “normal” pattern, police were never certain that this had been a Ripper attack until Sutcliffe himself admitted it. The victim was Dr. Upadhyya Bandara, a doctor of medicine from Singapore.

Why did Sutcliffe kill? Nobody can answer that question, possibly not even Sutcliffe himself. The attorneys tried to make out that he was dominated and “emasculated” by his wife Sonia. Yes, that part of the message was correct; he did have a wife — but I see her as yet another of his victims, her life, her teaching career eclipsed forever by her association with this man.

Sometimes I look over the hastily written phrases in an old worn notebook, jotted down at a time when Britain lived in fear of a ruthless killer, and reflect on my feelings of relief that he is safely behind bars. I wonder where this fragmented information in my possession really came from. I wonder whether the sense of relief that permeated the whole of the British Isles upon the capture of the infamous Yorkshire Ripper extended further, into regions we are as yet only dimly acquainted with.

FOSSIL FIND DELIGHTS SCIENTISTS

THE NATIONAL Science Foundation announced in March 1982 that scientists have discovered a treasure trove of animal fossils in Antarctica, including the first bones of a land mammal ever found on the frozen continent. The find ranks as one of the most significant scientific discoveries in recent years. Also found were fossils of a rare land lizard, skeletons of giant sea reptiles called plesiosaurs and the bones of many man-sized penguins.

An American research team made the discoveries early in March on Seymour Island which is located off the north-eastern tip of the Antarctic peninsula. The team was headed by Dr. William J. Zinsmeister of Ohio State University who said, "The confirmed presence of land mammals in Antarctica clearly shows that Antarctica and South America were attached during the late Cretaceous and early Tertiary Periods, about 65 million years ago.

Scientists have thought that mammalian fossils existed in Antarctica because the continent is believed to have been connected to Australia on one side and to South America on another, Zinsmeister told Associated Press.

"Antarctica most likely was connected to South America by a land bridge," he said. Seymour Island is about 800 miles from the tip of South America, he added, and millions of years ago Antarctica was a warm continent covered with forest and surrounded by tropical waters.

The mammalian fossils found at the base of a large mesa consist of the jawbones and teeth of a small rodentlike marsupial. Other jawbones, which represent at least two individuals, are from a berry-eating animal called polydolopus which was about the size of a large rat.

Similar fossils have been found in South America.

The Old-Fashioned Mediumship of Paul McElhoney

As observers watch, psychic produces ectoplasm, apports flowers, bends metal and transmits spirit messages.

By Anita Gregory

ON AUGUST 22, 1981, England's Psychic News announced in a dramatic headline, ROSES AND ECTOPLASM APPEAR AT MATERIALIZATION SEANCE.

"The age of psychic phenomena is not over," the article proclaimed. Psychic News editor Maurice Barbanell went on to recount a seance with a young materialization medium named Paul McElhoney, who Barbanell said was also a gifted healer and an accomplished metal-bender. Three pictures reproduced on the front page showed a clothlike emanation which looked very much like old-fashioned ectoplasm. In two of the pictures this material was streaming from the medium's mouth. A description of a seance followed.

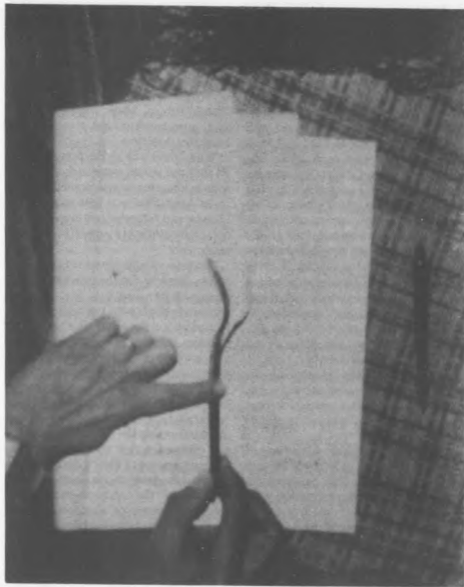

According to the story, the medium's guide "Cirrus," said to be a 16th-Century Italian, "took over" Paul, greeted the sitters and asked for a more complete blackout of the room. During the second part of the seance "Cirrus" gave a lengthy philosophical talk. The guide (presumably Paul under the control of "Cirrus") then walked around the room. He approached Barbanell, took his hands and told him he had a present for him.

"Momentarily there was a sound as if Paul was about to retch," Barbanell reported. "Something hit the floor. Later I found a rose." It measured about 6½ inches from bloom to stem.

When Paul revived, a camera was loaded, as "Cirrus" had earlier instructed. After Paul went into trance again, Barbanell wrote, "A stream of dazzling white ectoplasm had gushed from Paul's mouth and lay at his feet. It was not opaque; the texture looked thick. It did not have a muslinlike quality."

Barbanell assured his readers that he had thoroughly searched the room and all other relevant areas and that no material the medium might have regurgitated later could have been hidden anywhere. He described other phenomena allegedly produced by Paul and asked readers to note that "Paul does not give private sittings. His mediumship is basically still in its experimental stages."

In presence of Anita Gregory and Julian Isaacs, Paul McElhoney produced deep bend in fork apparently by simple stroking. Bent fork is compared with a normal fork.

to devote large amounts of space in the newspaper to Paul's phenomena. These articles contain vivid eyewitness descriptions of ectoplasmic emanations and apported flowers. On one occasion "Cirrus" asserted that his name should be "Ceros." He was not, he said, a cloud!

I had been introduced to Paul by Julian Isaacs, a parapsychologist who is working with "metal-benders" for a doctorate at Aston University in Birmingham, England. Julian had rung me in September 1981 and asked me if I would like to serve as a witness to his metal-bending experiments with Paul, provided that Paul agreed. Paul kindly invited me along and even called me the night before I was to visit him. He was distressed because a sealed tube with a metal specimen in it, which Julian had left with him, had just "exploded."

I arrived about 10:00 A.M. on October 1 and Paul welcomed Julian and me cordially. He said he had been up until the early hours transcribing the tapes Ceros had dictated. He showed us a page of these teachings which consisted of the usual admirable ethical admonitions.

Paul gave me an informal account of how his talents had developed. He told me he is the son of conventional Catholic parents. From his earliest years he has heard a "voice" which gives him advice. He feels certain the voice has been with him from the time he was five years old or younger.

Once the voice told him not to go past a department store called Brown's because he would be in danger. When he went anyway, he found the store was on fire, although the fire did not endanger him in any way. Another time he was told that Cherry's, a little shop in Liverpool where he then lived, was "going to close next week." It had been there as long as anyone could remember and when he told his mother the shop soon would close, she told him not to be silly. It did close the next week, nevertheless, and he remembers saying, "I told you so, Mum." It was not, he said, a premonition but a voice in his head that told him.

When Paul was 16 the family decided that the voices were such a sign of serious abnormality that something had to be done. Paul was sent to a mental hospital and subjected to a large number of excruciatingly painful shock treatments.

He was vividly aware of the split within himself. On the one hand these people were doctors, the experts, educated people who knew about sanity and about the mind. But then they told him also that he would feel nothing and it would not hurt; but it did — indescribably — again and again. His voice urged him to lie and say he no longer heard it. Paul, agreeing only reluctantly, told the attending psychiatrist that the voice had gone. He was released within seven days.

The narrative of Paul's development becomes confused at this point, perhaps because of the amnesia that often follows a course of electroconvulsive therapy. When I pressed him about the emergence of his physical mediumship, he had difficulty explaining it. Even as I was talking with him, he said, the memory was coming back to him and he was suddenly recalling that he had not heard the voice at all for four or five years after he left the hospital. He said it was odd that it had been there all the time he was in the hospital but afterwards it left him — only to return later.

Later, much against his inclinations, Paul attended a Spiritualist seance. At the time he was in love with a girl who was a Spiritualist although he remained a strict Catholic and hoped in time to be a priest. But one day someone said to him, "You have in your hands the greatest healing gift the world has ever known." He laughed. He was then 24 years old.

Apparently Paul got married and divorced — he was vague on this point in our conversation. This, together with his unconventional, chaotic life, has led his family to think to this day that he is mad.

Paul is not a professional psychic; he has a responsible managerial position. He also runs a market stall on weekends where he sells all sorts of miscellaneous oddments. What with his job, his stall, his mediumship and related activities, Paul struck me as overcommitted, harassed and overworked. Indeed, when I met him, he was just recovering from an illness.

Paul has been conducting seances for a number of years. It is unclear just when these began. Paul told me he thought it might have been about 3½ years ago, sometime in 1978 or 1979. He also said that Ceros had "taken over from Silver Birch," Maurice Barbanell's controlling guide.

Paul said that the physical manifestations had shocked even him. At first he was not in trance and the seances were illuminated by a 100-watt red bulb. He himself saw the trumpet as it whizzed around the room and heard the voice of Ceros issuing from it. Apparently it was only at this stage that Paul thought to connect Ceros with his own inner voice.

Eventually he went into the trances that have characterized his mediumship ever since. He was, he said, unaware of his own "ectoplasmic" manifestations until shown photographs of them. Paul thought he must be a fraud without realizing it himself or else someone was hypnotizing him and doing the faking.

He held most Spiritualists in contempt. He considered them a credulous lot who are not above covering up psychic fraud. He even complained to me that so-called researchers do not impose strict enough conditions or conduct adequate searches of his room.

THE PRINCIPAL scientific objective of the October 1 session was metal-bending. We were concerned with three sets of observations: the bending of metal objects in a sealed glass tube, the attempted bending of stainless steel cutlery, and the affecting of a piezoelectric strain-sensor incorporated in a suspended metal spoon while being monitored continuously on a chart recorder.

The sealed glass tube, which I have already mentioned, had been given to Paul previously and had exploded the night before our meeting. I examined the break carefully although I have no expertise regarding glass fractures. The break was at one end — the blunt end, not the one where the tube had been sealed. The glass was fairly thick, I should judge nearly 2mm (.08 of an inch). There was a jagged hole with the damaged sloping edge facing outside, as if the tube had been banged or possibly shot (!) from the outside. It did not look as if there had been an explosion from within. For the moment all I can say is that the tube was broken, ostensibly from outside, and that Paul expressed considerable annoyance about this.

The next part of the experiment was designed to see if Paul could bend the implements which he himself supplied. They were of moderately poor quality but stout enough. Manual bending of a fork from the batch required considerable force and took 19 vigorous manual bendings by Julian to break it. The forks were similar although not identical to each other when I matched them up. But in no case was there a difference in angle or more than about one degree between stem and prong-bowl of a given set of two forks.

After selecting the fork Paul was to bend paranormally, I took charge of a "control" fork which I carefully compared with the experimental one. With the control fork I imitated whatever Paul did with the experimental fork. The one I had selected for Paul had a tiny flaw in its surface. I pointed out the flaw to both Julian and Paul; since no other one in the batch had just such a flaw, in my view any possibility of substitution can therefore be ruled out. The fork-bending incident was recorded on videotape which is currently in the possession of Julian Isaacs along with the audio record of what was said during video recording.

Paul washed his hands under Julian's supervision in very hot water. We began work at 10:50 A.M. Paul began by lightly stroking the fork, either with one finger or with two. I took my control fork and imitated as closely as I could what he was doing. We paused at 11:13 and put our still quite similar forks on a pad on which I was making notes. We chatted while Paul smoked.

Julian asked Paul to put his fork under his sweater. He did so for two or three minutes and at the same time I placed my fork under my own sweater. I watched him carefully and he was relaxed all the while. I am not sure what Julian had in mind when he asked Paul to do this. Meantime a rather formidable Jacobean piece of furniture was delivered and placed in the room under Paul's direction, disrupting things for a while. During that time our forks remained on the pad where I could observe them throughout.

At 11:33 the forks still looked the same and we resumed experimenting. I put down my fork and held up the "experimental" fork in front of the video camera. I could tell with complete certainty that Paul was not exerting any force that might account for any bend that might appear.

At 11:44 the fork seemed to bend "backwards," i.e., in the direction of the curvature of the prong bowl. I was holding it as lightly as I could at top and bottom while Paul was stroking it gently between thumb and forefinger.

By 11:45 there was a substantial curvature in the fork and I made a number of rough drawings, using the experimental and control forks and other forks as templates. Paul also took one or two photographs of the forks against a roughly prepared sheet.

These photos show that there is a considerable difference in angle between the control and experiment forks, which it is not possible to express exactly in degrees because of the curvature of the implements. The difference in angle is clearly about six or seven times as great between the two forks.

This was my first experience with ostensibly successful metal-bending and I was frankly surprised. I had not expected anything. If belief and hope play any part in such occurrences, they were not mine! I might add that Paul repeatedly expressed his disdain for metal-bending.

Later that afternoon, before television reporter Mike Brennan, Julian and me, Paul bent a spoon in a like manner. But in this instance there was no video record of most of the session although a photograph was taken of the bent spoon; the spoon was never out of our sight. Paul took the photographs in Julian's and my presence. I took home the signed backing sheets against which the photographs were taken.

But even as I was typing up my notes a few days later, I was beginning to question what I had seen. Some seven months later, as I write this, these doubts have grown. Rereading my notes I can see possible loopholes in the experiments — a notable one being the period the fork was out of sight and under Paul's sweater. But I frankly don't believe these loopholes are sufficient to explain what happened. I must stand by what I concluded then: that I cannot see how the fork could have bent in any normal way, nor do I believe that Paul is a skilled magician. Even if he were, I did not allow my attention to be deflected for any length of time sufficient for him to bend the object manually. I also know that the fork that was bent was the same one I personally had chosen to be the experimental one. Perhaps I was mistaken but I cannot tell how.

Our last experiment that day was to see if Paul could affect a suspended spoon, attached to the piezoelectric strain-sensor. This was in turn connected to a three-channel chart recorder which registered (a) fluctuations in the mains, (b) changes in the strain-sensor and (c) changes in the strain-sensor magnified 10 times. During the course of this experiment we noted the following:

(1) Only when Paul mentally tried to influence the suspended spoon did irregularities appear on the chart record. These did not coincide with mains fluctuations.

(2) When we went out to lunch and left the room locked at my insistence, there was no activity recorded on the charts.

(3) When Paul was present but not "trying" to influence the spoon, nothing happened on the chart.

(4) However much I personally tried to affect the spoon, nothing happened.

Paul was never actually touching the spoon when the deflections occurred, but his hand was at varying distances from it. The least distance was about 10cm (3.9 inches) but frequently a 20cm (7.8-inch) or more distance lay between his hand and the suspended spoon. The least touch of the target spoon resulted in a piercing electronic noise from our equipment. At no time did we hear this noise during the bursts of recorded activity which accompanied Paul's PK attempts. Nonetheless banging of the windowsill on which the spoon setup was standing did produce deflections similar to the ones Paul produced through his "distance-influencing" attempts.

One of the problems involved in working with piezoelectric sensors is that they are sensitive to sound and we were talking during the experiments. A skeptic might object that our own voices might have set off the device. Julian has now devised methods of overcoming this objection in future experiments.

I later asked Paul how he felt while he was trying to bend. He said this was difficult to put into words. He just "tried" with his whole being, thought with great effort and "commanded" the spoon to bend. He said he kept up the strain all during the trial. He felt nothing special when the actual deflections occurred. They were just as much a surprise to him as they were to us. Some muscular tensing seemed involved, however. (It appears generally true that high muscular tension or high level of arousal over a period of time is needed for PK to work.)

ON OCTOBER 20 I attended one of Paul's Tuesday evening seances. When I arrived, Tony Ortzen was already there. So was Alan Cleaver, a Psychic News reporter who is also an amateur conjurer. Terri, Paul's fiancée (they have since married), joined us as well. Other sitters, including Helen Yeomans, Don Hatch, Gwen and Bert Byrne, and eventually Patrick Webb, gradually arrived.

While we were waiting, Paul said he had a "weird" experience while he was sitting in his office. The telephone had rung and a man with a deep foreign voice had said something like, "There will be a link with Köln — Köln far away — and only one person at the sitting will understand. There is a cathedral linking to that person." The voice mentioned a foreign name which Paul could not remember.

I acknowledged that the message might be intended for me. I was so forthcoming because I had gone to the sitting in quest of a possible materializa-tion rather than for clairvoyance or for spirit communication, and I was therefore quite happy to help things along on a friendly informal basis. As things turned out, this slip in caution on my part deprived what happened subsequently of any value as evidence.

Tony and Alan insisted that individuals should be searched before the sitting. Alan was to search the men, particularly Paul, and I was to search the women. I insisted on being searched myself although I must admit our mutual searchings were somewhat diffident. Alan did not have himself-searched. None of the female members of the party had anything suspicious on them that any of us could discover.

At about 8:25 we all took our seats. I asked to sit next to Paul. As it turned out, "Ceros" (in the person, of course, of Paul) walks about the room in the pitch dark; therefore there was no particular point in sitting next to Paul.

Ceros greeted us all in a cheerful foreign-sounding accent and soon got up, turned toward me, patted my head and asked me to give him my hands, which I did. There appeared in my right hand an object which, when the light subsequently came on, I discovered to be a tiger lily bud. Apparently he also placed a number of such buds in Alan's hands.

After about 15 minutes the light was put on and Paul was clearly pleased with the buds. Alan assured us these could not have been on Paul's person; he had searched him far too thoroughly. More buds were discovered on the floor. Since several of us had thoroughly searched the room beforehand, we all laughed and said they must have come from Alan, the only person or object present not to have been searched. Alan joined in the laughter and opened his waistcoat to show there was nothing there — and out fell four more tiger lily buds.

During this interval we all milled around the entire apartment, so no one was under control.

When the sitting was resumed at 9:22, Ceros again turned to me first and asked for my hands. A metallic something, square and fairly heavy, suddenly appeared in one of them. I did not feel it fall, nor did I feel it was pushed there. When I explored it with my fingertips, it felt like a replica of a church.

Ceros said the gift to me was linked to a "man with glasses and no hair." My father was bald, wore glasses and lived in Cologne for a time. But I cannot see how any significance can be attached to so general a message.

When the lights came on, however, we could see that the metal object was a replica of Cologne Cathedral, embossed with the words Dom zu Köln! It weighed 275 grams (9½ ounces) and it is now in my possession. Tony Ortzen took it at once to the British Museum for an expert opinion and it was judged to be a late 19th-Century or early 20th-Century tourist's souvenir.

The next day, when I telephoned Tony and Alan, I observed that, however sincere everyone involved had been, the security precautions were not likely to satisfy any skeptic, conjurer or psychical researcher. Because Alan had not been searched, he could easily be suspected of being the repository for the flowers. Furthermore, I explained that it's pointless to search a room and the people in it if later on everyone is allowed to roam freely, especially in a house crammed to bursting with merchandise for a market stall and personal effects. I had already acknowledged my link with "Köln" before the sitting; I had taken it to refer to Cologne because of the allusion to a cathedral.

* * *

WHAT ARE we to make of the evidence? My own involvement was too brief to permit a definite assessment. At this writing I have not been asked to another sitting. I am told Ceros is giving up materializations and apports and intends increasingly to confine himself to spiritual teaching. Nonetheless apports of small bronze figures were reported in Psychic News for April 24, 1982, and the June 19 issue describes physical phenomena Paul produced in the course of a recently-concluded three-week tour of Australia.

Were the original materializations genuine? I don't know. The fact that some threadlike structure is discernible in some of the original photographs is neither here nor there. Such threadlike structures have been observed in other cases in which the manifestations have seemed authentic.

What about the "apports"? In my own seance the buds could have been introduced normally; so could have the Cologne souvenir. If so, did Paul hear these effects? I doubt it, since he strikes me as sincerely devoted to Ceros and his messages.

Could Paul have done it in a dissociated state? Perhaps. Paul himself does not appear wholly averse to some such view; at least this is how I interpret his telling us that at one point he had suspected himself of fraud. But I believe him when he says he regards his religious mission as paramount.

I must admit, though, that I am unable to explain his metal-bending. I do not understand how Paul could have bent that fork using only a touch as light as a feather and operating under the conditions we improvised.

But I am certain of one thing. If we are to advance further in this difficult field, we must learn to combine two sets of attitudes that are all too often regarded as incompatible. We must approach our work as sympathetic and reasonable human beings and at the same time maintain a cautious scientific attitude and critical vigilance.

TO WHOM AM I SPEAKING?

A TELEPHONE operator at Zurich (Switzerland) County Hospital suspected a hoax when a caller said, "This is the Pope."

"If you're the Pope then I'm the Empress of China," she replied tartly.

But it was indeed Pope John Paul II making a direct call from the Vatican to inquire about the condition of his close friend Bishop Andrea Deskur of Poland who had undergone surgery to alleviate a paralysis of his left side.

The Pope called him almost daily and after the sharp-tongued response to his first direct call, he went through the Vatican switchboard.

LADY KILLERS

Ida M. Pardue

A FRAID OF the bogeyman? How would you like to have to watch out for the bogeylady as well? Our ancestors did.

Ancient Greece had Scylla with 12 feet and six heads, each with three rows of sharp teeth. She lived in a hollow in a reef in the Straits of Messina and she lived on oarsmen picked from passing galleys six at a time, one for each mouth.

Easier on the eye but just as nasty were the "nixies," Germanic manhating water sprites who changed into beauties to lure victims to death by drowning. Anyone who escaped their clutches went mad.

Bogeylady of ancient Rome was "Lamia." In revenge for the loss of her own children she became a cannibal and ate every baby she could tear from its mother's arms.

Melanesian mothers threatened their naughty children with Dogai, a murderous thin-legged monster with ears big enough to sleep on or under. Although extremely ugly, Dogai could turn into a beauty long enough to get close to misbehaving youngsters.

The "pot tilter" of the Crow Indians was an ever-present danger. All she had to do was tilt her always-simmering pot and the victim was magically sucked in to its depths.

The Irish banshee had two faces, one beautiful, one gruesome. When she came she cried and when she left someone died.

The Annamese Con-tinh were soul-snatchers. These evil spirits of girls who had died young hid in trees ready to snatch the souls of any unwary person going by and laughed uproariously as they did it.

A GIANT TV SCREEN

By Ralph De Santis

ONE NIGHT during the summer of 1973 I jumped out of bed about 1:00 A.M., awakening and frightening my wife Liz. I had had a nightmare and it took me a long time to get back to sleep. When I got up at seven in the morning, the nightmare was so vivid that I checked the morning paper's obituary column looking for the name of my friend Al Snyder.

I had dreamed that I saw Al's station wagon heading south on Highway A1A in Ormond Beach, Fla. The sun glaring on his windshield prevented me from seeing him but I knew he was behind the wheel. As he passed the Happy Whale Restaurant and the Ormond Beach fishing pier the station wagon suddenly veered left and crashed into a concrete post. As if on a giant TV screen the words "Al Snyder Killed" came across the bottom from right to left.

At the time I worked for the Daytona Beach Area Chamber of Commerce and all that day I could not get the nightmare out of my mind. I heaved a sigh of relief when Al telephoned that day but I said nothing about my dream. In the course of the extremely long day my nerves were on edge. What was wrong with me? Was it really only a nightmare? Was I being told to do something? If so, what? By whom? I needed help.

That evening I called Mary Miller, a clairvoyant in Virginia, and told her what had happened. She said enigmatically, "Your awareness education has begun."

"Mary, are you trying to tell me I looked into the future and saw my friend's death?"

"Yes," she replied. "It is a warning and only you can save him."

"How do I tell a person I saw him killed in an accident?"

"You don't," she said. "You tell him everything except the final outcome. Trust your psychic ability and you will know when the time has come to warn him."

The next morning, Tuesday, most of the pressures of the day before were gone. I thought about how to approach Al. Wednesday passed. Thursday I became restless and uneasy and by Friday all of Monday's symptoms were back. I knew the time had come to talk to Al.

I knew that he played golf with clients on Friday afternoons. I parked next to his car and waited for him to finish his round. He was surprised to see me and perhaps even more surprised when I said, "Do you have faith and trust in me?"

"Of course I do," he said.

Then I told him about my dream, carefully picking my words and omitting the part about his name flashing across the screen. As I spoke Al's face turned white.

"Al," I said, "I saw the accident. I beg you not to drive on A1A. Take John Anderson Drive home and have your station wagon checked out."

"Ralph, I just had the wagon worked on last Monday, the day you had the nightmare. It cost me $159.00. Everything on it is sound."

"No, it's not. Something's wrong with the car. Please have it checked again and stay off A1A."

Al said resignedly, "Okay, Ralph, if it means that much to you I will. I'll let you know if they find anything."

At that moment a tremendous weight lifted from my shoulders.

I didn't see Al until the following Friday. I had decided not to say a word about the incident; he could bring up the subject. As he was getting into his wagon he suddenly turned to me and said, "Remember the dream you had last week? I had the car checked out from bumper to bumper and everything was still okay except a thorough check showed something wrong with the left front end. Something about the steering was hanging on its last thread and if it had come off the wagon would have pulled sharply to the left."

Now I knew Al was safe and I told him the rest of the story. When I mentioned his name flashing across the giant TV screen he asked, "Why did you have the precognition? Why not someone else?"

I said, "Anyone else would have dismissed it as a nightmare and said nothing. Whoever brought me the dream knew it would trouble me until I sought help. In other words, Al, I was an instrument to help you avoid a tragic accident. Accept it as I have." — Holly Hill, Fla.

THE TEAROOM

By Joan W. DiNatale

ON AUGUST 9, 1952, I became the bride of Raymond Rahn, a soldier with whom I had been corresponding for about a year. I returned with him to California, where he was stationed at Camp Cooke (now Vandenberg Air Force Base). A little over a month later he died of a sudden illness. Soon afterwards I returned home to my parents.

One day that November, in a depressed state of mind, I took the train to New York City and walked around Times Square and up around 58th Street. I saw a building with a large window on the second floor. A sign painted on the window read, "Tearoom."

There was a door below and to the right of the window there was a red door. It also had a sign which read "Tearoom — One Flight Up" and "Fortunes Told." I decided to go inside.

The tearoom was pleasant. I took a table near the window I had seen from the street. A waitress brought me tea and muffins. She asked if I wanted my fortune told. I said that I did and she told me that when I had finished my tea, I was to place the saucer on top of the cup and someone would come to my table.

Later a woman dressed as a gypsy joined me. She studied the tea leaves and read them. She also read my palm. She described my immediate past, including my wedding and the details of my husband's illness, death and burial, with amazing accuracy. She said I would meet a man and marry again within a few months. I would travel extensively. I would have six children and many grandchildren.

All of these things have come true.

About 11 or 12 years ago my husband Tom DiNatale and I went to find the little tearoom. The building wasn't even there. I inquired at the neighboring business establishments which had been there at the time I'd had my experience and I was told there had never been such a place, much less a building such as I described. Somehow I was not surprised. — Mesa, Ariz.

THE BLOOD RAN RED

By Heather Rowland

THE BLOOD ran red; it was easy to see from a few feet away. My friend Jennifer Hogue had fallen from her bucking horse onto an upright pipe which pierced her abdomen. Someone helped the girl to her feet and she struggled toward the house behind the horse ring. A few minutes later a small crowd gathered around a vehicle of some sort while Jennifer was eased inside.

Heather Rowland

This was the dream I described to my mother Bonnie Rowland and we both laughed at the violence in my unconscious mind and the way the dream treated Jennifer. I told Mother it wasn't an ordinary dream where everything seems out of sync. I felt the crunch of dirt under my feet and the railing I leaned against was cool. I watched the accident passively and no one seemed to notice me. Except for the accident the dream reflected my everyday life during the time two years earlier when I had kept my mare at Jennifer's stable in Valinda, Calif.

I had the dream in the summer of 1978 and about four months later my parents were on vacation and my sister Eve and I were home alone. She came home from school one day and told me she met a boy who knew Jennifer. He told her she had had an accident with her horse and described the exact scene I had witnessed in my dream. Her horse threw her, a pipe cut her and she lost a lot of blood. — West Covina, Calif.

MURDERED BY A MADMAN

By the Rev. Ronald Adkins

AT THE TIME I had the dream, in June 1939, I was a curate in North London. In the dream I was sitting in a strange room and opposite me sat a very big man. He was smiling but suddenly his smile changed and a savage look came over his face. Slowly he rose from his chair, his huge hands outstretched, and announced very slowly, "I'm going to kill you."

Petrified with fear, I could not move. But as he came toward me, I sensed there was a large bucket of water nearby. If I could reach it, I could throw the water over him — but the bucket was in another room. Then I felt his hands around my neck.

At that moment I woke up, sweat pouring down my face.

A few months later, in October, I left my London curacy for one at Black Torrington, North Devon. The rector found some lodgings for me and when I entered the cottage I felt as if I had been there before. Suddenly it came to me. I had seen the room in my dream. But there was no man there, just a sweet old woman, my landlady.

I settled in very happily and forgot all about my dream — and then one day in March 1941 my landlady told me about her son. She had had him before her marriage and he was her only child.

More than 30 years before, he had fallen head over heels in love with a village girl. Unfortunately his love had not prospered. Rightly or wrongly he decided that the girl's woman friend had turned her against him.

He knew the two went to chapel every Sunday afternoon. Hiding a gun under his overcoat — it was in the middle of winter — he stationed himself outside the chapel and when they came out he fired at the woman. He was so distraught, however, that his aim was affected and he hit not the woman but the girl he loved. She fell down screaming, "I've been shot! I'm dying!" My landlady's son, overcome by what he had done, fled back to the farm where he lodged.

The local policeman was summoned. Fortunately the girl turned out not to have been badly hurt but now the assailant had to be arrested. He was a man of such strength that the policeman summoned four strong men to help him make the arrest. It took all five of them to take the young man into custody.

At his trial he was found to be mentally defective and was sent to Broadmoor, a hospital for the criminally insane in Surrey. After spending nearly 30 years there, he was now working on a farm a few miles away from his mother.

The following Sunday he came to see her. As soon as I set eyes on him, I knew he was the man in my dream.

Yet talking with him, I found it very hard to believe that he would attack me.

He seemed a friendly sort of fellow and I quite took to him. After a time my landlady went to bed and left the two of us together.

We stayed on talking but I could not forget my dream. I thought about that bucket of water. The cottage had no water laid on and from time to time I would fetch a large bucket of water from the village pump which was kept in the kitchen. I decided to bring it into the living room and placed it carefully behind my chair.

The two of us continued our conversation — and then my nightmare happened.

It was very late and I became terribly tired. In my tiredness I spoke very foolishly about a man I knew who was not a good shot. It must have brought back memories because suddenly his smile vanished. In its place came a devilish scowl. Just as I had seen in my dream, he got to his feet saying, "I'm going to kill you."

He moved toward me, his enormous hands outstretched. My weariness abruptly vanished. In a flash I slipped behind my chair, seized the bucket of icy cold water and threw the contents over the madman.

The effect was magical. He changed completely. All desire to kill left him and once again we were friends.

If it had not been for the warning I had received in that dream, I might have been murdered by a madman. — Gunnislake, Cornwall, England.

WHAT STOPPED ME?

By Lenore Herman

IN 1936, with my 12-year-old brother George Combes, I was driving to Kinzua, a ponderosa pine mill town in eastern Oregon where my father had a store. We were moving there so that I could help him. Numerous household articles were crammed into my car and seemed to cause strange noises as they rubbed together. At least that was what we decided.

The road led seven miles down a mountain into Kinzua. When we passed through a town called Fossil a young man whom we both knew was looking for a ride — as many persons had to do during the Depression. We did not stop for him but he told us later that he heard the noise the car was making. If we had stopped he would have investigated.

But that was later. As I drove along, something said to me, "You had better slow down." I have never believed that people hear "voices" so I tried to blot out the message by driving along at the same speed. The voice kept at me, becoming more emphatic when I did not slow down.

I found myself slowing the car and feeling a little foolish about it. I heard the voice six times, slowing down each time until we were going about five miles an hour — and suddenly the engine died. The car came to rest on the axle when a wheel came off and went crashing down the mountainside. — Aberdeen, Wash.

LASTING LOVE

By M. M. Savoie

IN THE 1960's I was a technician working the afternoon shift at Fairchild Semiconductors in Portland, Maine. I lived in Sanford and made the 36-mile drive morning and night. Going to work one afternoon I noticed a lot of construction going on. There were several detours on my customary route. That shift was grueling and I was more tired than usual when I drove home. A light rain made the unfamiliar detour even darker.

Suddenly in front of me my grandmother Laura Rivard appeared holding a lamp. She had died in June 1956. This so startled me that I immediately jammed on my brakes. The instant I stopped the vision disappeared. Frightened, but eager for another glimpse of my grandmother, I stepped out into the dark rain. I walked ahead in the glare of my headlights, only to find that I was no longer on the designated detour. In fact, I wasn't on any road at all. I had stopped my car about a yard from the edge of a rocky cliff alongside the ocean. Thoroughly shaken, I walked around to get my bearings, then returned to my car to slowly pick my way back to the road.

Thanks to my grandmother's lasting love I made it home safely that night. — Houston, Tex.

GETTING THE MESSAGE

By David P. Marciniak

MY BROTHER Dennis called with the news at 5:15 on a Monday afternoon in April 1978. Our father Joseph Marciniak had died. He had been dead for three days before his building's owner found him — and for three days I had felt that something was different. Not wrong, just different.

Through the years Dad and I had drifted apart — although we both lived in Milwaukee, Wis. He lived a loose and independent life and I had taken up the middle-class nine-to-five work scene, with two cars in the garage. Occasionally, not often, we saw each other from time to time but didn't intrude on each other's life.

As the days passed after the funeral I sensed Dad's presence growing stronger. I had read my share of books on life after death, near-death experiences and tales of rushing down tunnels and meeting old friends and relatives. It was all very intriguing but, for me, hardly personal proof that passing through death's door wasn't the end. One of the life after life books that hooked my interest was The Tibetan Book of the Dead. I didn't understand the book with its blood-drinking deities and "mirrors of awareness" but I thought I might learn something about this feeling that Dad was still near. Perhaps something was wrong and he was asking for help.

On a quiet afternoon two weeks after his death I sat reading the book. I had just called out Dad's name, as the book suggested, in an effort to contact him when a rattling caught my ear. I looked up and saw my lampshade trembling rather noisily. Then into my head came a thought — not in words — but bright and clear: "I'm okay. Everything's fine. Don't worry about me." In the next instant I felt my father's presence and just as quickly it faded away. The lampshade slowed its shaking until it stood completely still. Something felt very tingly and warm. It was I.

Only weeks later did Dad's message become clear. He wasn't trying to communicate trouble but rather, he was trying to answer a question I had often wondered over. — Calumet, Mich.

THE BEING IN WHITE

By E. June Smith

IN 1927, when I was a small child, I caught pneumonia. After an emergency summons our family doctor in South Avis, Pa., performed a thorough examination, then sadly told my father Clair Fritz, "When I come back from my medical convention next week, she'll probably be dead." As soon as he left, my parents threw out all the bottles of medicine he had prescribed and changed doctors.

E. June Smith

I remember vividly being carried in my father's arms along our upstairs hallway from the bathroom to the bedroom. Suddenly I knew I was dying. In apprehension I threw my head back and stiffened my body.

At that moment a beautiful being in a flowing white garment appeared before me. Her presence, although it surprised me, also comforted me. I relaxed and basked in her warm aura.

She did not touch me but she smiled and said two words: "Go back." Then she disappeared.

I knew then that I would not die for a long time to come. — Largo, Md.

FILMING HALLUCINATIONS

Russian researchers who believe visions are radiations from the psyche have found a way to capture these emanations on film.

By Hellmuth Hoffmann

VISIONS, whether perceived as optical illusions or hallucinations, are relatively common. The Gallup Institute has established that nearly nine in 100 people have visions at least once in their lifetimes. They sometimes occur in mystical or religious ecstasy or they may be artificially induced by hallucinogenic drugs.

For more than 10 years, a group of Physicist V. Skurlatov believed that a hallucination forms on the retina and could be "beamed" from eyes onto photographic plate. The method was unsuccessful.

Experimenters obtained a measure of success using skin-diving goggles (without glass) attached to an extendable bellows which prevented light from reaching the subject's eyes. A camera lens is seated in bellows' narrow end.

Russian researchers led by G. P. Krokhaliev, a Soviet psicotronica* scholar, has been attempting to provide tangible evidence that hallucinations are not illusory, that they are projected into space by radiation from the psyche. That is, the researchers are attempting to photograph hallucinations by capturing the radiation on film.

More than 100 years ago Russian psychiatrists observed that optical hallucinations follow the patterns of light refraction and, although this is practically unknown in the West, succeeding generations have done quite thorough research into the phenomenon.

When Dr. Jule Eisenbud of the University of Colorado began his experiments with Ted Serios in 1964, the resulting psychic photographs received international attention. In a report on these experiments Dr. Heinz C. Berendt states: "The radiation came . . . from a 'projection' of an interior image emanating from Ted Serios' person."

Krokhaliev says, "The experiments with Ted Serios can be explained on the basis of the Avramenko and Nikolayeva hypotheses; in other words, the beginning of the 'holographical connection' occurs in the hypersphere and is related to some sort of 'psyche-waves.' R. F. Avramenko, D. V. Balubova, V. J. Nikolayeva and V. N. Puschkin believe that 'not only atom molecules and particles, but all macrobodies, can be described as stationary waves; in a conclusive world they function as written testament of a reflection of oneself.' In this hypothesis psychotropic images are not found in a specific location but fill the entire universe. . . ."

The Serios pictures were not, however, the first or the only available psychophotographs. Years of experimentation have produced hundreds of these images which represent the direct action of the psyche on photographic material. In an attempt to explain psychographs, or thought photography, Russian psychiatrists hypothesize that the psyche has the ability to radiate electromagnetic energy into space in the form of perceptible images.

This hypothesis had been put forth 80 years earlier by a French scientist who suggested that the human mind is capable of giving off enough radiation to affect photographic material. This made such an impression on a French naval officer named Darget that he set about performing some practical experiments.

"For one half hour I stared intensely at an empty cognac bottle," he recorded, "while my right hand was placed over an opaque envelope containing film." When the film was developed it showed an outline of a bottle. Another experiment using a photograph of an eagle produced similar results.

The first Russian to hypothesize that hallucinations radiate from the brain was the physicist V. Skurlatov. He believed that a hallucination forms on the retina of the eye like a photographic representation, and it would be attainable only by illuminating the eyes and reflecting these rays onto a screen.

Following this line, Krokhaliev and his collaborators began trying to obtain photographs of hallucinations. Skurlatov's method proved of little use and many other techniques also failed. Gradually, however, the group began to get results.

Krokhaliev explains the process: "The photographs of the optical hallucination . . . were obtained with the use of skin-diving goggles from which the glass had been removed. In its place an extendable bellows was attached. A camera lens was connected to the narrow part of the bellows. . . to photograph the patients' optical hallucinations. [The bellows] would impede any possibility of light reaching the patients' eyes. . . . Black and white film was used. . . taking eight to 16 photographs per second."

It is possible to make out head, body and legs of an "elk" facing to the left. But just as the interpretation of electronic voice phenomena requires an expert ear, psychography demands an eye trained to interpret the fuzzy representations on film.

Photographic material used in the experiments was carefully protected from any source of light contamination. Impressions on the film came exclusively from radiation which, researchers say, originates in the psyches of the experimental subjects. These were patients under treatment for psychoses who were frequently tormented by hallucinations.

"We got photographs of the optical hallucinations," Krokhaliev comments, "which were shown to the patients after they had settled down. The patients confirmed having seen 'those images' at the time they were having the hallucinations."

Just as the interpretation of electronic voice phenomena (EVP) requires an expert ear, psychography demands an eye trained to interpret the thought pictures.

Where in space do the hallucinatory images exist? Krokhaliev says, "A. M. Mostepanenko set forth the hypothesis that visible images produced by hallucinations are located in a definite space (so-called hallucinatory space) and that they have a certain succession in time. These hallucinatory images should occur in measurable topological space, although this is most probably not Euclidean space . . . . The hypothesis we hold to explain spatial optical hallucinations is that the brain radiates in the same manner [as the technique which creates] holographical representations. The reality of photographing optical hallucinations in space with . . . photographic apparatus . . . and with film in opaque envelopes . . . confirms this hypothesis."

The enigma of hallucinations and visions is by no means resolved. Roman Catholic doctrine looks on religious visions as natural events inspired by God or provoked by a demonic influence. The creativity of many artists — among them Socrates, Goethe, Luther, Dickens, Gounod and de Maupassant — has been attributed to vivid hallucinatory experiences.

Krokhalev concludes, "The mystery of the creativity of certain great personalities who have furnished their works from their hallucinatory experience is resolved. . . . Our experiments permit us to do an objective diagnosis of optical hallucinations and represent them with the help of photographic and cinematographic cameras. It has also been demonstrated that it is possible to transmit hallucinations with the help of a photomultiplier and television, following the dynamics of the hallucinations within a certain distance from the patient. Perhaps in the future we will have some success in transmitting the hallucinations onto a screen or picture tube or on color holographic film. The simple method of photographing the hallucinations. . . can be easily implemented in any psychiatric institution and a more complete diagnosis of the patient can be made."

While the Western world does not take this research very seriously, the Soviet experiments are continuing. If Krokhalev and his colleagues can repeatedly capture hallucinations on film, they have taken a giant step forward in the study of optics and the workings of the human mind.

MY SON, THE GHOST

IN MAYSVILLE, N. C., relatives gathered around Martha Burton after she received word that her son had died in a traffic accident. But their sadness turned to joy when he walked in on the mourners.

"I thought I had seen a ghost," Mrs. Burton said. "When they tell you they've found your son's driver's license and all in a wrecked car with a body — well, I just don't know."

The accident occurred near Jacksonville, N.C., early Wednesday, May 12, 1982, when a car registered in Mrs. Burton's name left the road and struck a tree, instantly killing the driver. Two driver's licenses — one expired and one current — were found in the car, one in the glove compartment and the other in a wallet beside the body. Both licenses had been issued to Richard C. Burton.

After hearing of the accident, a grieving Mrs. Burton refused to view the body and went to her brother-in-law's home in Maysville where relatives gathered and where Burton, 23, showed up safe and sound.

Burton explained that he had loaned his car to a relative, Jasper William Hill. Burton returned home at 2:45 A.M. Wednesday and went to bed, thinking his mother was asleep.

Hours after the accident, Mrs. Burton said she was still shaky and in shock.

CAN SCIENCE RAISE THE DEAD

The spectators began to feel uneasy. They had seen a killer die on the gallows — but was he coming back to life?

By Paul B. Thompson

IT WAS a dreary night in November that I beheld the accomplishment of my toils. With an anxiety that almost amounted to agony, I collected the instruments of life around me, that I might infuse a spark of being into the lifeless thing that lay at my feet. It was already one in the morning; the rain pattered dismally against the panes, and my candle was nearly burned out, when, by the glimmer of the half extinguished light, I saw the dull yellow eye of the creature open; it breathed hard, and a convulsive motion agitated its limbs . . . .

Thus does Mary Shelley describe the animation of the monster created by a scientist in her immortal novel Frankenstein. This tale, whose plot is known to millions who have never read the book, has become an integral part of Western culture, an archetypal fable of the risks men take to advance the borders of human knowledge.

But consider the theme itself. Is it possible to create a living being? Is it possible to revive a dead being? In the past 300 years attempts have been made to apply the powers of science to the eternal problem of mortality and no attempt was more remarkable than the experiments that took place in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1818 — the very year Mary Shelley's monster first appeared in print.

In that year, a noted Scottish scientist who was also a doctor of medicine, Andrew Ure, obtained the corpse of an executed murderer for use in certain experiments. Dr. Ure wanted to explore the effects of recently discovered galvanic electricity (produced by chemical action) on the terminated vital functions of the human body. The story of his work is one of the strangest in the annals of medical science.

Ure was one of those rare multitalented men who devote their lives to a wide spectrum of scientific investigation. Before the Glasgow experiments he had followed with keen interest the electrical tests on human subjects done by the Italian scientists Vassali, Julio and Rossi in Turin. These men were allowed to experiment on the bodies of criminals who had been recently executed by decapitation. Testing the responses of organs under electrical stimulation, they discovered that galvanic shocks produced various reactions. Vassali reported excitation of the limbs, lungs and intestines but oddly, no reaction from heart tissue.

In England, the Newgate Prison authorities allowed a Dr. Aldino to experiment on an executed felon. Aldino's electrification of the head and face produced remarkable (if ghastly) contortions in the dead man's muscles.

All of this work during the period from 1799 to 1818 was organized into a formal theory by an English medical researcher redundantly named Alexander Philip Wilson Philip* who held that electricity was the force that made animal tissue live and motile. He pinpointed the central nervous system as the conduit for the "bioelectric fluid."

*A. P. Wilson Philip was a successful physician for more than 30 years and a Fellow of the Royal Society. He contributed numerous scientific papers to learned bodies concerning his medical researches. He fled from England to France in 1842 or 1843 to escape debts he had incurred by faulty investment. It is believed he died in Boulogne in 1851.

Before this most medical theorists had stimulated muscle fibers, not nerve fibers.

With this earlier work as his basis Dr. Ure decided to test the validity of Wilson Philip's theory on the first suitable cadaver. And in November 1918 the future subject of his experiments, Matthew Clydesdale, was standing on the gallows before Glasgow Gaol with a rope around his neck.

CLYDESDALE (Clydsdale or Clysdale in some accounts) lived in New Monkland parish in the county of Lanark with his wife and children. He was a weaver by trade but often worked in the local coalpits as a collier. By all descriptions he was a thorough brute of a man, hard-muscled by years of labor and possessed of a sullen Celtic temper.

Clydesdale, for some reason, had nurtured a long-standing enmity against a neighbor named Andrew Love (one source calls him "Alexander"), an 80-year-old man "of the most peaceful and industrious habits." On a Sunday morning in early October 1818 Clydesdale happened to meet the old man near a coalpit. He attacked Love with a pickax, inflicting several terrible wounds on head and torso. Despite his grievous injuries Love lived for four days after the vicious assault.

Matthew Clydesdale's murder trial was the sensation of Glasgow — indeed, of Scotland. Love's own son had witnessed the brutal crime and the murderer made no attempt to defend himself or deny the charge. The jury returned a unanimous verdict of guilty and because of the extreme callousness of the crime, Lord Gillies, the presiding judge, gave Clydesdale the worst sentence available to Scottish justice: a public hanging — after which his body would be delivered to the professor of anatomy at Glasgow University for immediate public dissection. Thus the murderer was denied even the consolation of knowing his body would receive a proper burial. According to the London Times, "The prisoner heard this sentence with the utmost apathy."

On November 4, 1818, Clydesdale and another man (Simon Ross, who was to be executed for burglary) began their deathwatch. At 2:00 P.M. they were bound and allowed to pray before they were led to the gallows. A large crowd gathered to observe the rare double hanging. At 3:05 P.M. the drop fell.

Clydesdale remained on the gallows for an hour until a cart arrived from the university. His body was cut down, placed in a coffin and taken away. Many people followed the cart and packed into the university's dissecting room where anatomy professor Dr. James Jeffray was waiting.

Knowing that Ure was eager to test Wilson Philip's bioelectric theories on a human subject, Jeffray had notified him of the impending execution. Ure brought one of his smaller voltaic machines, a battery of 270 four-inch plates with long probes for insertion into specific points in the body. In preparation for the experiments the voltaic battery was filled with dilute acid to activate its full operational strength.

Actual dissection of the body was done not by Dr. Jeffray but by an assistant named Marshall who made incisions at various points indicated by the two doctors. The first cut was made into the nape of the neck to expose the spinal cord. A second incision was made in the left buttock at the site of the sciatic nerve. When Ure touched the polarized probes to these two points the corpse began to tremble, then to convulse, in a startlingly lifelike manner. Ure shifted the lower probe from the hip to the left heel and Clydesdale's left leg, having been bent at the knee, kicked out with such force as to topple the assistant responsible for keeping the leg in place!

Ure and Jeffray applied electricity to various nerve endings and junctions, each time producing a semblance of life. Stimulation of the nerves serving the diaphragm resulted in perfect expansion and contraction of the lungs as in normal breathing.

The spectators began to feel uneasy. Having seen a killer die on the gallows, they were disturbed when he no longer seemed dead.

When Dr. Ure next laid open the forehead so that he could touch his electrodes to the facial nerves, the onlookers were horrified, for . . . "every muscle in [Clydesdale's] countenance was simultaneously thrown into fearful action: rage, horror, despair, anguish and ghastly smiles united their hideous expression in the murderer's face . . . . At this period several of the spectators were forced to leave the apartment from terror or sickness and one gentleman fainted."*

As if this were not shocking enough, the last experiments, involving the corpse's hands, were worse. Influenced by the electric current the dead Clydesdale's hands and fingers flexed and clenched in a fashion so realistic that several witnesses swore he had come back to life. Application of the current to specific nerve endings resulted in Clydesdale's appearing to point at some persons in the room. The impact of this spectacle cannot be imagined.

Considerable hue and cry arose in the town, the people charging that Ure and Jeffray had attempted to restore life to the criminal Matthew Clydesdale. In his report on the Glasgow experiments Dr. Ure did not speak directly to this charge but simply pointed out that Marshall's incisions into the spine and across major arteries in the neck precluded any return of vitality to the corpse. Had it not been for this, Ure admitted he believed "life might have been restored." Anyone who saw the voltaic energy's effects on the corpse would agree. The doctor added, laconically, that to restore Clydesdale to life would have been "little desirable" and "perhaps contrary to law."

The Glasgow experiments largely confirmed the theories of A. P. Wilson Philip. Electricity did play a vital part in functions of the human body; the nervous system was indeed a pathway for electrical impulses. But these humble truths were submerged by the sensational nature of Dr. Ure's exhibition. The contortions of Matthew Clydesdale's dead face and hands would haunt Glaswegians for a long time. And perhaps Ure was haunted too; he never again performed medical experiments. His subsequent work was chiefly in the field of pure and applied chemistry; he was honored for this and elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1822.

Today, 164 years later, electricity has a common place among the tools of medicine. All manner of cardiopulmonary stimulators and resuscitators trace their inspiration to the pioneering work of A. P. Wilson Philip, Andrew Ure, et al. Despite this honorable heritage, it is unsettling to review the Glasgow experiments. As if by some incredible manifestation of synchronicity, life was imitating the art of Mary Shelley's novel. It might have been Andrew Ure and not Victor Frankenstein who bestowed life upon a dead form that dreary November day. It might have been Matthew Clydesdale who cried, "Cursed, cursed creator! Why did I live? Why in that instant did I not extinguish the spark of existence which you had so wantonly bestowed?"

FOUR-LEGGED FIRE ALARM

WHEN A fire started in the home of Christine Fackrell of Bristol, England, the smoke got to Zoe Blue, a Persian cat lying in his sleeping basket. Instead of fleeing for his life, the cat made for his sleeping mistress and licked her awake, enabling Mrs. Fackrell to save herself, her husband and her two sons -- and the cat, of course. Mrs. Fackrell, who works in a candy factory and has to get up early to get to work, explained that she had taught the cat to be a "four-legged alarm clock" and to lick her awake around dawn. When he awoke her much earlier Mrs. Fackrell knew right away that something was wrong and jumped out of bed. — Harold Helfer.

GHOST CAR NO. 42 STILL RACES

As driver Tak Asano maneuvered his car to the starting line before Japan's first postwar Grand Prix race, he had an inkling he would win or die in the attempt.

The car had crashed and the driver was dead but there was one more race to run.

By Bob Dunham

THE MORNING sun was bright but a slight chill hung in the air — almost ominously, as if Death had set the scene and stood waiting in the wings for the play to begin. The “play” had been long awaited by actors and audience alike. Japan's first postwar Grand Prix race was being held May 5, 1963, at Nagoya's new Suzuka Circuit, one of the world's finest road-racing courses.

As the drivers warmed up their racing machines in the paddock area, the sounds promising excitement and action filtered up into the stands. The crowd favored Tak Asano, a hometown boy who had qualified extremely well the day before. They were especially impressed because his Austin Healey was actually inferior to the Jaguar XKEs in the competition.

When spectators looked at Tak

Asano's pure white Austin Healey, they were taken aback. The crowd-pleaser had chosen as his entry number the one number most Japanese shy away from: 42. The arabic numeral 42 translates as shi ni and this is a derivative of the verb shingu, to die. No wonder the number is considered unlucky. Still, Tak Asano had that sinister numeral emblazoned — almost defiantly — on his racer.

Not a man to tempt fate contemptuously, Asano nevertheless laughed at those who warned him against using 42. Dismissing their warnings as "old-fashioned superstitions," he countered, "Why not No. 42 for my car? Hell, I won 360,000 yen (then equal to $1000) last month on a 4-2 daily-double combination!"

Over a last cup of coffee at the paddock canteen, he said to me, "Got this weird feeling I'm gonna win this race — or die trying." With that Tak clipped the transparent face bubble on his Bell helmet and minutes later was belted into his impatient machine. With a squeal of tires he roared down the pit lane in a cloud of exhaust smoke and onto the track for the warm-up lap.

The Healey 2000 Sports was maneuvered into third position on the starting grid. Joining Asano's car before the main grandstand were six powerful Jaguar XKEs, a tired TR-3 and a lonely Datsun 2000 roadster.

The starter dropped the flag and 50,000 fans leaped to their feet as these nine gutsy machines roared down the straightaway and disappeared around the first turn. Tak's three-man crew waited impatiently, huddled behind the reinforced concrete pit wall. The distant high-pitched whines of engines screaming held the crowd entranced.

The long black asphalt ribbon between the stands and the pit wall was momentarily empty. Then, growing in intensity, the guttural sounds of the Healey engine came near. The crew's discerning ears picked them up immediately. One member leaned out over the concrete barrier and looked down the track. Abruptly the pure-white Austin-Healey burst into view with an ear-shattering roar.

"Hot damn," Tak's crew chief yelled. "Tak's in first place — three car-lengths ahead of the pack!"

At the sight of their favorite in the lead, the fans burst into thundering cheers soon buried beneath the staccato din of the nine high-performance power plants straining under full throttle.

The sleek Healey numbered 42 again disappeared around the first turn of the second lap, never to return — that day, anyway. At a speed in excess of 130 miles an hour, Tak Asano tried but failed to negotiate the final bend in the course, a treacherous right turn. Out of control, his machine shot off the asphalt onto the green safety belt on the left side, hit the guardrail, bounced back across the course and careened through the right guardrail and into a ravine. He was dead when officials reached him.

Several days later the race officials published their findings: "Driver miscalculation. The car was traveling at an excess speed, beyond its adhesion capabilities for that particular corner." Case closed? Not quite.

A few weeks later the Japan Auto Federation, which controls all motor sport activity there, banned the use of No. 42 on any competition vehicle (car or motorcycle) in Japan. Further, anyone attempting to use the number in any racing event would face not only disqualification in that particular event but also possible revocation of his competition license for one year!

* * *

IN MAY 1964 some 150,000 racing fans assembled at Suzuka Circuit for Japan's second Grand Prix, a 25-lap affair for cars in the racing sports class. This time, several foreign drivers had been invited to join the race.

During an auto race at a modern track like Suzuka, the control tower, the communications nerve center, is in constant touch with every point on the course. It is responsible for making immediate, concise decisions regarding safety, the dispatch of emergency vehicles and the official timing of the cars.

A specially qualified spotter crew works in the tower, feeding information to lap recorders. This system lets the course marshal know exactly how many cars are on the course, how many have retired, how many laps each car has completed and the position of each car at any given point in the race. The lap recorders also serve as reference in the event of an after-race protest over the number of laps a car ran, its finishing position or any other dispute.

The chief steward rechecks the spotters' and recorders' lap information so that official race records can later be published. To prevent problems two teams of spotters and recorders generally cover each race, then compare notes for accuracy.

During the race itself the spotters have no time to follow the actual competition. They can only call out the numbers of cars as they cross the start/finish line. In the heat of a race, especially with several cars on the track, the spotters call out the numbers and the recorders put them on tapes without thinking about the number or the car to which it belongs.

Imagine the chill of the Suzuka spotters and recorders when they compared notes after the race and found that both teams had recorded lap times in eight of the 25 laps for a car numbered 42!

To this day, one of the spotters, Mineo Shiozawa, swears, "I don't know what kind of car it was and I have no idea who the driver was. They go by so fast that I only watch for the numbers. But if I called out No. 42 for eight consecutive laps, you can damn well bet I saw a car with the number 42 on it crossing that start/finish line. Hell, even the other team recorded it!"

* * *

DEATH IS an ever-present factor in racing. Although drivers seldom worry about it outwardly, many carry religious charms or good luck pieces. Ukiya-san, a young Honda 800 Sports driver, carried one in all of his races — except one.

The young driver had been squiring around an attractive girl at several of the races he entered in the mid 1960's. Imagine his dismay when he found her necking with another driver during one of the practice sessions at Suzuka. Perhaps he should have cooled off before he got back into his car. Or at least he shouldn't have thrown in her face the little religious talisman she had given him.

Moments later, he died in her arms. His little racer had fallen victim to the same turn which had done in Asano two years earlier. "Death by concussion and multiple internal injuries" followed the accident which was caused by "driver miscalculation, overspeeding beyond the point of adhesion capabilities," according to the official findings.

Thus the simple case of the frustrated lover and the tragic accident was closed, right? Well, not quite.

Although it has never been officially reported, several night guards at Suzuka Circuit have heard more than once what they thought were hot-rodders using the track without permission. In each case, investigating the sounds, they found no sign of breaking and entering and no unauthorized cars or people within the confines of the course.

One guard, a man quite familiar with racing cars, describes the exhaust sounds as the high-pitched noise of a Honda 800 engine and the more guttural roar of a Healey engine. Further, the engine sounds move around the track as if they were coming from two cars racing the course, he said. Asano and Ukiya, perhaps?

* * *

DRIVER Hideo Sakai refused to give bad luck a chance. For one race at Suzuka Circuit, he had it all planned. His lucky number, seven, would do the work for him. His car was registered with the number 777 and he had chosen 14 (seven times 2) for his racing number in this, the seventh race of his career. He was ready to walk off with first prize. He even had the pole position.

For the first part of the race it looked like a shoo-in. Sakai held first place — until his car flipped in the hairpin curve. He emerged unscathed but he was puzzled. How could his lucky number have failed him? Easily:  $7 + 7 + 7 + 14 + 7 = 42!$

But Suzuka Circuit and 42 do not lie at the root of all of Japan's eerie racing occurrences. A few years ago at Fuji International Speedway, an amateur driver named Nagai was turning in rather slow times during the practice session before a big race. He decided to keep practicing for another hour after most of his crew and racing buddies had returned to their hotel.

Just before 4:30 P. M. Nagai's crew retired to the hotel's gigantic men's bath to soak away the frustrations of a hard practice session. The bath was so choked in steam that one could barely see the person next to him. Suddenly the door opened and a figure they would all later swear was Nagai called, "Kairimachita. Totemo ii timu tota deshita. (I've returned. I turned in some real good lap times.) Mo sukoshi hairimasu. (I'll join you all soon.)"

But he never did. He had died at 4:30 P. M. when his car crashed through the guardrail at the "hell's edge" turn.

THE SECOND COMING

IF JESUS comes back to earth he'll have enough money to get along on. Ernest Digweed, who lives in Portsmouth, England, stipulated in his will that if Jesus reappears in the next 21 years He should be given the proceeds of investments which would amount to about $615,000. There's a catch, though. To get the money Jesus must prove His identity. Two people have already tried and failed. — Harold Helfer.

Carol Clark and Pauline Cliff had been neighbors and close friends for five years when they discovered they had an even closer relationship. They were sisters. When their parents separated some 30 years earlier, Carol, aged five, and Pauline, an infant, were adopted by different families. When they were neighbors in West Midlands, England, many people commented on how much alike they looked, so the women investigated and learned the truth.

Some persons regarded it as a miracle but to Maria Venderell it was a catastrophe. After children said they saw the Virgin Mary in the Venderell backyard in San Juan, Puerto Rico, so many people kept gathering around that Maria had to sell her house and move.

In New York City a bank bandit grabbed a hostage to insure a safe getaway but the hostage was so hefty the two men got stuck in a revolving door. This slowed things long enough for police to nab the bandit.

Jewell Moon, injured in a private plane crash near Clarksville, Tenn., in which two people were killed, had to scream for help for 15 hours before she was heard and rescued. She might have been heard right away except for a combine harvesting machine on a nearby farm which drowned out her cries.

Gregory Martin of Long Beach, Calif., despondent because he was out of work, decided to commit suicide but a "last smoke" foiled his attempt. He turned on the gas in his apartment and when death did not come quickly he decided to have a cigaret. The lighted match caused the gas to ignite and passersby hearing the blast ran to the scene and rescued the would-be suicide.

Because their payroll checks had bounced, employees walked out on an Indianapolis, Ind., company which verifies checks for merchants.

A tornado which took the lives of three people in West Bend, Ind., saved an infant. The wind blew apart the second-story room where five-month-old Jason Clark was sleeping but scooped him up and carried him unhurt to the sidewalk in front of the house.

Mark Von Behren and Bill Simmons, teenaged pals in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, beat something like 50,000 to one odds when they won expensive sports cars in separate drawings.

and it flourished for almost 500 years. Yet until 20 years ago the world was for all practical purposes unaware of its existence.

Its capital was Cahokia, where a quarter of a million people lived, and the city exercised control of an area of 100 square miles. A vast trading network fanned out from the capital for the import of raw materials and distribution of manufactured goods as far west as the Rockies, south to the Gulf of Mexico, north to Lake Superior and east to the Carolinas.

How it began and how and why the ancient civilization dispersed remain mysteries but extensive ongoing study for the last quarter-century has uncovered the Cahokians' art, industry, massive mound construction and sophisticated astronomical knowledge.

THE ANCIENT Cahokians incorporated their scientific knowledge into the pattern of their city in fantastic ways. Orientation of the great mounds and the buildings located on their summits indicates a thorough, practical and applicable knowledge of astronomy. These engineers incorporated the information they gained from the "American Woodhenges" to orient the mounds' bases to north-south and east-west.

The Cahokians built conical and pyramidal mounds and six distinctive ridgetop mounds. These are typical earthen mounds with rectangular bases but instead of sloping gently to a flat summit, they slope dramatically upward to form long sharp ridges at their summits. Nothing could have been built on the ridge and these mounds could not have been used for any purpose other than marking a significant location. Dr. Melvin K. Fowler of the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, believes they were used to mark the boundaries of the city. Ridgetop mounds were found on the city limits to the north, south, east and west. A fifth, Mound 72, defined the main axis of the city.

The whole complex was built on a north-south axis extending 2.1 miles from the Kunneman Mound Group north of Monks' Mound, through that great mound, and terminating at Rattlesnake Mound on the south.* The east-west axis was set by Powell Mound to the west and a mound at Canteen Creek to the east. They were separated by almost three miles and the axis line also passed through Monks' Mound and the Woodhenge site.

The western ridgetop mound, called Powell Mound or Mound 46, was possibly the most symmetrical mound in the city. It was shaped like a haystack 310 feet long, 180 feet wide and 40 feet high. It was demolished in 1930-31 by Monks' Mound was named for the Trappist monks who lived there briefly; Murdock Mound was named for its last owner, a building contractor; and Pottery Mound was so named because mostly pottery was found in it.

Early houses were round but evidence of rectangular houses in later periods has been found. Grass-thatched facsimile now stands behind Cahokia Mound Museum.

a steam shovel opening ground for cultivation and the dirt was used to fill a low area. Even with modern technology it took two months to complete the demolition. Many burials were found, all covered by layers of marine shells (a total of 25,000) probably sewn onto robes now long decayed.

Monks' Mound, the largest prehistoric structure in North America, lies within the complex and the orientation of the great temple atop it is controversial. Archaeologists know that Temple Mayor, twin temples placed atop an ancient Aztec stone pyramid in Mexico, was skewed away from a direct north-south, east-west orientation so that the rising sun on the summer solstice entered the temple for seven minutes immediately after sunrise. Monks' Mound and most of the mounds at Cahokia were also purposefully skewed 7 1/2 degrees east of north, and Monks' mysterious second terrace, with its variety of levels and shapes, might have been used to produce a similar sunlight effect in its temple.

Another incredible city limit marker, which brought together both the north-south and east-west axes, was discovered almost by accident in an insignificant mound. However, this small mound — Mound 72 — contained the richest burial ever found on the North American continent. These finds resulted from a back-breaking project undertaken during the 1960's by the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee — the production of a comprehensive topographical map detailing the position of every mound at Cahokia.

On aerial photos taken in the 1930's most of the mounds — including many long destroyed — were located and accurately transferred to the map. The total number of mounds was known to be well over 100, with some estimates reaching 140, and information gleaned from the project indicated that the site was "much more complex and extensive than earlier thought," Dr. Fowler noted.

When Dr. Fowler received the map in 1967, he found one mound missing: No. 72, the Pottery Mound, located 950 yards southwest of Monks' Mound. He knew its location was important, although Mound 72 was only six feet high. It had been located directly on the north-south axis and was a ridgetop mound, the type that always marked a particularly significant location. Fowler decided to survey it himself and add it to the map. Unlike the rest of the mounds which are sited 7 1/2 degrees east of west, Mound 72 is skewed 30 degrees north of east.

Archaeologist Harriet Smith's discovery of the Cahokian Rod (CR) astounded the scientific world. Her diagram of the Murdock Mound shows that its construction utilized Pythagorean triangle and Cahokian Rod. (Fig. 72, Explorations Into Cahokia Archaeology, Bulletin 7, reproduced with permission of Illinois Archaeological Survey)

Dr. Fowler concluded that it had been used as an important city marker on the north-south axis but noted that it also connected with the east and west marker mounds by straight lines. All three of the most important lines crossed here — the north-south line, a line directly to the eastern ridgetop mound and one to the western ridgetop mound — and all three passed over one particular spot on Mound 72. Fowler decided to send an archaeological crew to excavate at that spot.

At a depth of eight feet the crew found a section of a huge pole three feet in diameter supported by cribbing constructed of smaller logs. It had to have been a tall pole and it must have been important, but archaeologists can only guess at its purpose. Radiocarbon dating placed its erection at A. D. 1000. They now consider this the most important point in the entire city, for here more geometry comes into play. A line can be drawn through the middle of Mound 62 and West Twin Mound and lines from each of these converge on the same point at Monks' Mound where the north-south line also crosses. These lines form equilateral triangles.

About A. D. 950 an early ruler died and was buried in this mound along with three young men and three young women who had been murdered so that they might accompany the chief in death. Five lay restfully on their backs but one of the three men had apparently decided not to go peaceably. He was found lying face down with his limbs contorted.

The chief lay on a blanket made of 20,000 pearl beads. Surrounding him were rich grave goods: two copper rods from the Lake Superior region, two bushels of mica from North Carolina, five clay pots purposefully broken and 15 "chunky stones," which are double concave, finely ground disks four inches in diameter used in a game. Also buried with the chief were bone harpoons and rare bone arrowheads, several covered with a layer of copper, and two caches of arrowheads in various styles chipped from flint from areas as far away as Wisconsin, Arkansas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. The arrowheads, totaling more than 1000, had been separated by style and place of origin. The excavation of these caches took a full two weeks.

Scattered throughout the rest of the mound were mass grave pits containing human sacrifices, mostly young women between the ages of 15 and 25 who had never borne children. One pit held 54 skeletons stacked three deep and others held 24, 22 and 19 skeletons. One particularly gruesome pit contained the remains of four men with their arms interlocked but missing their hands and heads. Another pit contained 40 individuals of mixed sex and age thrown in indiscriminately and on top of them 14 persons who had been carried to the grave on cedar pole litters. Over a period of several years, more than 300 persons had been interred here. Small mounds were raised over each pit, then the larger mound over them all, and finally the ridge was added to signify the importance of the mound. Whether all these people were victims of ritual sacrifice is impossible to tell; some may have died in war or from disease.

The reason for such a preponderance of childless females may go beyond the usual idea of servants or a harem sacrificed to serve the chief in the next life. Archaeologists hypothesize that human sacrifice may have been a crude, but effective, way of controlling Cahokia's population.

These burials and grave goods demonstrate a remarkably structured social system. A small number of individuals commanded great authority, including the absolute power of life and earth. Ethnologists are impressed by this social stratification and concentration of power and wealth in the hands of a few individuals.

Cahokian society's obsession with death is revealed by human sacrifice and the abundance of rich grave goods. Those slain were apparently intended to act as servants in the afterlife and possessions were to serve the same purposes in the next realm as they had in this one.

THE MOST incredible of all the discoveries at Cahokia came during excavation of Murdock Mound, also known as Mound 55. Just before the start of World War II, the mound was to be leveled to facilitate the construction of an extensive housing development. Archaeologist Harriet Smith (now on the staff of Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History) obtained permission to excavate the mound before it was demolished. She began June 11, 1941, but her work was interrupted when Pearl Harbor was bombed. Her report was not widely circulated until 1973 and then the results of her excavation and her conclusions resounded through the scientific world.

Mound 55 was 33 feet high and located 330 yards south of Monks' Mound and 190 yards east of the city's main axis. It was the sixth ridgetop mound. Its importance lay not in what was found within but the method of its construction. It revealed an incredible knowledge of mathematics never before encountered in the relics of any so-called primitive society. Smith discovered the ancient Cahokians' knowledge of geometry.

From measurements of all parts of the mound Smith determined that the ancient architects used a standard unit of measurement that equals 16 1/2 feet, which she called the "Cahokian Rod." Every dimension within Mound 55, and presumably in every mound in the vast city, proved to be either a quarter or a multiple of this unit. This standard unit can be compared to the Pyramidal Inch used in Egypt and the Megalithic Yard used in Stonehenge and other European megaliths.

The prehistoric architect-surveyor placed the Murdock Mound on the same east-west, north-south orientation given all of the principal mounds. And like the rest it was skewed 7 1/2 degrees east of west. Smith also found that the mounds were laid out with right triangles, specifically the 3-4-5 Pythagorean triangle which always contains a 53-degree angle (see illustration). The slope of the Murdock mound was found to measure 52 degrees and we may assume that 600 years ago it had another degree, since reduced by centuries of weathering and plundering. Smith also discovered that the horizontal slopes were three times the Cahokian Rod and the vertical slopes were four times this standard unit. The main slope of the ridge is five times the Rod. This leads to the inescapable conclusion that the ancient Cahokians thoroughly understood all the principles involving the Pythagorean triangle and other geometric figures.

TOWARD * * * Cahokia entered a time of great trouble, the nature of which we cannot know. About A. D. 1150 the people were forced to build a great wall, a massive stockade that enclosed the city's sacred inner area which was 400 acres in extent. In terms of labor this project was the greatest ever undertaken by the Cahokians. It demanded more labor than the construction of Monks' Mound which was erected over a period of 10 generations. The fort would have been useless unless completed so it must have been given priority over all else. Dire need for the stockade no doubt explains the stoppage of work on the incomplete Monks' Mound.

When first spotted on aerial photographs taken in 1933 by Dache Reeves (Col., USAF, Ret.) the stockade appeared as a series of dark pits. The path of the wall was traced on the ground by discolored circular areas where the dirt was darker, looser and coarser. James Anderson of the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, completed the excavations between 1966 and 1968 and determined the defensive nature of the stockade. He found four different lines of postholes close together and often superimposed on each other. The logs of which it was built lasted only about 20 years so the wall was completely replaced four different times, the last time in A. D. 1230. Anderson also found four different styles of bastions which evolved from round to square. The great city of Cahokia apparently lived under siege for 80 years.

Occupied land in the path of the great wall must have been condemned and destroyed. "In some places houses were abandoned with everything in them," said Dr. Fowler. "Pottery and flint artifacts were left in place. You get the feeling that people had been living in the houses until just before the demolition work started, that they were there — and then suddenly they weren't."

The wall, at least 7800 feet in length, was built of heavy timbers 20 feet long. Eight feet of the poles were buried in the ground and 12 feet towered above. Each of the four walls contained 15,000 of these logs cut from distant forests, dragged to the city and placed upright in trenches. When in place side by side they were plastered with clay to protect against attack by fire arrows and to prevent damage by insects and weathering.

Towers or bastions were built at intervals of 70 feet. These platforms, placed in front of the wall, served as watchtowers and enabled the defenders to shoot arrows in any direction and at any angle. (The distance between the towers suggests that an arrow's range was 70 feet.) L-shaped gates were placed midway between the towers, an ingenious defensive feature, for if attackers broke through they would have to traverse the right-hand turn while under heavy fire.

It seems incredible that any force could have challenged the awesome power of Cahokia but there is evidence of a deep, well-founded fear of some enemy. One part of the wall had been burned, despite the protective clay, and hundreds of arrowheads were found all along the wall. Fortress Cahokia was surely attacked but we shall never know the outcome of this prehistoric war.

An extremely large force might have been raised against Cahokia, perhaps an alliance of colonies jealous of the mother city's wealth and power or the army of an unidentified culture still unknown to history today. Or the enemy may have been internal. The people may have rebelled against despotic rule or the unreasonable labor required for public projects. Scholars do not know which of these enemies brought down Cahokia but the wall is contemporary with the last habitation of the site so the ruling class must have been destroyed. From carbon samples obtained from the last palisade, Nelson A. Reed of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., gives A. D. 1300 - 1400 as the time the Cahokian civilization came to an end. Also, across the midwestern and southeastern United States, other large village sites erected similar defenses and most of these fell as Cahokia did at about the same time.

Are there any theories, other than military conquest or civil unrest, to explain Cahokia's abandonment?

There is a very real possibility that the Cahokians ruined their environment. Feeding the great population, the agricultural community may have depleted the soil, especially since they knew nothing about crop rotation or fertilization.

The four huge log stockades erected in less than 80 years and the enormous demand for wood for housing, public works, shipbuilding and heating and cooking may have devastated forests for miles around. If the forests were destroyed, wild game, a large part of the Cahokian diet, would also disappear. The society may have been forced to dissolve in order to survive.

Scientists tell us that about A. D. 1300 there was a climatic change — nothing drastic, but perhaps enough to destroy the fragile basis on which Cahokia was founded. The temperature turned a few degrees cooler and a few inches less rain fell each year. The cooler drier climate extended the prairie grasslands and the buffalo followed the prairie into Illinois for the first time. After 400 years of modern metropolitan living, Cahokians may have been forced to return to a migratory hunting existence. No longer could the city support a surplus population of artisans, traders and priests.

For whatever reason, Cahokia was abandoned and its thousands of buildings and the great wall slowly fell into ruins. In the several hundred years before frontiersman George Rogers Clark wrested the region from British control in 1778, forests grew up over the great mounds. Clark noted that mounds were as "numerous as the trees in the woods." Unfortunately, the mounds gave no testimony to the advanced civilization that had once existed here — a nation that had wielded control over most of ancient America.

Housing developments and shopping centers for the blossoming suburbs of St. Louis took their toll of mounds during this century and interstate highway construction in the early 1960's almost finished the job. Only belatedly was the tremendous importance of Cahokia recognized. Although a great deal of invaluable knowledge has been lost, we at least recognize the genius that existed in America while Europe lived out the Dark Ages.

World's Largest CRYSTAL BALL Selection

*Glowing pools of light . . .
Flawlessly beautiful*

When you look into the unfathomable depths of a flawless crystal ball, what do you see? A point of light on which to meditate? Psychic images? Or do you seek a self-hypnotic experience, a light trance state, a transcendental insight?

F. W. H. MYERS, the famed psychic researcher, wrote:

"Few phenomena are more fantastic than true crystal vision. Perhaps one man or woman in 20 will experience it. The vision often begins with a milky clouding of the ball, coming at the beginning of a series of pictures. . . ."

Perfection Quality balls in 4-inch, 3-inch, 2½-inch, and 2-inch sizes are now in stock for immediate delivery from the Venture Bookshop.

A At $16.95 this 2-inch ball with square-based stand of crystal-clear Acrylic represents an outstanding value for the new student.

B For $21.95 this impressive 2½-inch ball with square-based stand will effectively meet average requirements and provide beauty with pride of ownership.

C This 3-inch ball at $34.95 is suitable for almost all occult work and combines impressive size with Each ball is guaranteed free of any flaw, bubble, mold mark or cloudiness — and each ball is the finest now available anywhere at any price!

These Optical Acrylic Plexiglas crystal balls are the result of years of searching for a method of manufacturing flawless balls, and we believe they are exactly what is needed by the occult student. Order the ball that best meets your needs and begin your adventures in the age-old science of Visualization today.

NEWS & REVIEWS

by D. Scott Rogo

ARMCHAIR ASSAULT

THE LATEST in a recent flood of debunking books is James E. Alcock's Parapsychology: Science or Magic? (Pergamon Press, Elmsford, N.Y., 1982, 224 pages, $35.00 hardcover, $17.00 paperback). Dr. Alcock, a social psychologist at York University in Toronto, Canada, is one of parapsychology's prominent armchair critics.

Alcock, like so many other critics of the field, has never visited a parapsychology laboratory or attempted personally to investigate the way parapsychologists go about their work. If he had, he would not have written this book which, although supposedly an expose of the "myths" and "fallacies" of the field, turns out to be hackneyed, misguided and inaccurate.

It opens inauspiciously with the author's statement that he doesn't intend to cover any of the literature on parapsychology's great "gifted subjects" or any of the classic experiments in the field. He also warns his readers that his book is not meant to be a comprehensive treatment.

Consequently the book has the curious distinction of being a work on parapsychology that hardly discusses the field. Although 224 pages long, it doesn't even address the major findings until page 117. Instead it burdens readers with lengthy, elementary and often tedious chapters on magic and religion, the psychology of belief, the psychology of experience and the fallibility of judgment.

These initial chapters, which could have been condensed into one cautionary introduction, help cover the fact, which becomes clearer as one reads on, that despite his impressive references and bibliography Alcock is not as familiar with parapsychology as he pretends. His first major error appears on page three, where he asserts that Emile Boirac coined the word "parapsychology"; in fact it was Max Dessoir. Nor was Boirac a "mystic" as Alcock states but a highly respected French scientist and educator whose parapsychological work earned him an award from the French Academy of Sciences.

One example of how Alcock condemns parapsychology by talking around the subject comes when he discusses the subject's popularity. He cites all sorts of arcane reasons, including society's need for a new religious ethic, the breakdown of public trust in orthodox science, and the call for a more open-minded attitude toward nearly any idea. At no time does Alcock consider the more likely possibility that public acceptance of the paranormal constitutes a rational response to the exciting new evidence that has been forthcoming from this country's parapsychological laboratories. Any science that undergoes a dramatic transformation invariably captures the public's imagination. Oceanography had such a resurgence in the 1970's and today the media are promoting and romanticizing astronomy and physics. Parapsychology's time has come.

The irrefutability of the best evidence for psi is affirmed by Alcock's utter failure to build a convincing case against parapsychology in the only two chapters he devotes to it. Significantly, only once within its 224 pages does Alcock's book describe an experiment in any depth. Instead the author makes a series of ex cathedra pronouncements about the methodological problems of ESP and PK research that could apply only to a limited number of studies;

Have you lived before this life?

You've heard stories about past lives — freakish, alarming tales of deep trances and sudden recalls no one can account for. Maybe even you have been troubled by strange thoughts you cannot explain. Ever felt you have been somewhere before when you knew it was "impossible" . . . or you found an historical novel or movie deeply disturbing and you wondered why? If so, then you owe it to yourself and your potential happiness to find out the truth about past lives.

Have you lived before this life? You are the only one who can say for sure. You are the one who was (or wasn't) there. But before you make up your mind, read this free booklet.

he then leads us to believe these problems apply to all experimental work in the field.

Take the well-known sheep-goat effect: Dr. Gertrude Schmeidler of City College in New York discovered years ago that believers in ESP ("sheep") will outscore skeptics ("goats") if they are pitted against each other in an ESP card-calling test. This experimental finding has been repeatedly replicated. But Alcock dismisses the sheep-goat finding on the grounds that believers are simply more sensitive to sensory cues and information leakages provided by the experimenters than the skeptics are. Alcock doesn't explain how these cues occurred but he assures us they must have existed. Nor does he tell us that many sheep-goat experiments have been run under clairvoyant conditions in which no one, not even the experimenter, knew the order of the cards. Therefore cues couldn't have been provided by the experimenter.

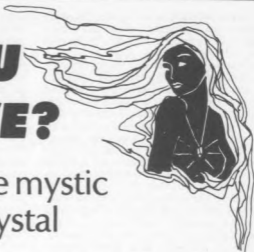

Alcock also rejects the sheep-goat effect because some such experiments have not been successful. Here he misses an obvious point. When you are dealing with a weak statistical effect, you don't expect 100 percent replicability. You expect only a certain percentage of replications within a larger body of chance results. What you don't expect are significant reversals. And no experiments have ever shown a significant reversal of the effect. Goats never outscore sheep. This very issue is discussed in a paper Alcock cites in his reference but he doesn't bother to address it in the body of his book.

Alcock criticizes parapsychology for lacking a repeatable experiment. This is a reasonable point; most parapsychologists recognize this as a major problem. But Alcock weakens his case by distorting the issue of the level of replication in parapsychology.

This distortion emerges when Alcock discusses ganzfeld-ESP tests, during which a subject sits in an isolation booth with spheres taped over his eyes and gazes at a light while white noise is played into his ears. (Subjects in this state often daydream and these images can be manipulated to carry ESP information.) Alcock cites only one admittedly flawed experiment and ignores many more tightly controlled replications of the effect. Then he argues that there have been just as many failures to replicate the ganzfeld ef-

Secrets of the mystic powers of crystal

Since the dawn of mankind, natural, clear quartz crystal has been used for its phenomenal powers. Crystals were treasured above all amulets by the Ancients, who carried crystal points with them at all times. Legends say the Ancient races lived extraordinary lives, knowing the secrets of long life, prosperity and serenity . . . a serenity we long for today in our world and personal lives.

Today, we are waking to the age old magic of crystal. The fables of the gleaming crystal palaces of the Gods, the use of the crystal ball for thousands of years and the legendary great crystal of Atlantis . . . could they be MORE than fables? Does crystal in its natural form carry secrets long forgotten?

Science knows that crystal has a measurable electronic charge. It is said this charge enhances the mental powers of the wearer, balancing and healing the aura, and bringing a flood of energy.

As part of a test program, we are offering the crystal to the readers of this publication in a limited number. We want you to wear the magic crystal and send us your commentaries on the benefits you receive. Feel the astounding charge in your life as the powerful protective aura of the Ancients surrounds you with the good fortune in life you deserve. We believe the widespread use of crystal could change the lives of millions.

Each crystal is unique -- nature makes no two alike. You may specify if you wish a smaller one or a larger one. The energy field exists in all crystals, regardless of size. Please indicate if you wish a gold tone chain enclosed as a free gift.

Because crystal is being used so extensively today for healing, it is increasingly hard to find. When our limited supply is exhausted, orders will be returned unopened.

Orders received by December 1st will be processed to you by Christmas. Nothing could be a more thoughtful gift.

Send $10.95 plus $1.25 postage and handling for each crystal. Satisfaction guaranteed.

fect as to substantiate it. Not so. There are many more replications of the effect than failures to replicate, as anyone who has read the literature will attest.

Coming from a psychologist who presumably should know better, Alcock's treatment of the ganzfeld literature is rather bizarre. He asks why a ganzfeld setting is needed to induce ESP since the experimenter could get the same effect just by putting the subject in a darkened room. Has Alcock never studied cognitive psychology, which makes considerable mention of ganzfeld stimulation? Only when a subject stares in to a homogeneous field while white noise is provided as an auditory backdrop will he actively produce mental imagery. The ganzfeld is used to activate imagery, not just to put a subject in a position of sensory isolation.

Alcock includes still more general criticisms which are demonstrably incorrect. On page 120 he argues that parapsychologists are theoretically immature and that they lack anything resembling a theory or competing theories. In reality all parapsychological experimentation today is guided by various theoretical schools of thought about the nature of psychic phenomena. One group holds that ESP is a psychobiological information processing procedure, another that it is an acausal synchronistic phenomenon. Another debate centers on whether ESP is an ability spread widely among the general population or a talent limited to a relatively few persons. The emergence of competing theoretical models is one of parapsychology's most notable features.

In similarly naive fashion Alcock attacks the concept of the experimenter effect, which contends that some researchers get good ESP results during their tests while others, however hard they try, do not. Alcock says the experimenter effect is a "catch-22," a convenient way of dismissing parapsychology's poor replicability record. Yet again he fails to mention that the experimenter effect has been experimentally demonstrated over and over again in the lab. Some tests have pitted two experimenters, one with a history of successes and another without such a history, against each other, each using the same subject and methodology. The results show the objective existence of an experimenter effect.

AT LAST . . . THE ULTIMATE ASTROLOGY COURSE

A home study course in astrology that can take you — even if you're the most hesitant beginner — to a level at least equal to that of most practicing professionals. You can then begin to earn money in one of the most interesting professions you can imagine . . . or you can use this marvelous tool to enhance and enrich your own life — and those you care about. The horoscope can be a remarkable psychological mirror. See yourself!

The course is written and designed by Ove H. Sehested whose "Basics of Astrology" has delighted thousands. In this new course, as in his renowned books, Mr. Sehested has combined his expertise in astrology with his unique ability to make a complex subject so easy to understand and learn. A drawer full of letters from delighted readers of his books say "Thank you for making it so easy!"

Mr. Sehested's new correspondence course uses modern teaching techniques like programmed learning, creative visualization; it covers both natal and the progressed chart.

There's no technique, however, quite as effective as doing; hence the prime feature of this course is having you actually do charts (after you've learned all the fundamentals in the first part of the course).

First you will follow the step-by-step analysis of a chart in the text of the course — including, where appropriate, the reasoning behind the step. Then, as a lesson assignment you will delineate another chart entirely on your own. As quick as first-class mail will allow, you'll get your analysis back with a full critique by your instructor. In this way you'll end up doing twelve charts. Nothing remotely like this has ever been offered to the student of astrology before!

This moderately priced course offers a time payment plan if you're short of cash at the moment. Write for further details today; on any piece of paper, print your name and address and write "course info, please." Alcock claims that parapsychologists do not predict in advance what type of ESP effect they expect to achieve: psi-hitting, psi-missing or displacement effect onto future or past targets. If Alcock were to read the publication policies of the major parapsychology journals, he would discover that all such periodicals require the experimenters to state in advance exactly what effects they expect to find and what statistical tests they plan to use to find them. Post hoc analysis is not acceptable and a paper that relied on it probably would not be accepted for publication.

The issues relating to the use and abuse of statistics Alcock raises are too complex to go into here. Suffice it to say that he offers nothing that wasn't brought up in the 1930's and '40's during the great controversy spurred by the Duke University work. All of Alcock's points have been answered adequately and repeatedly. Parapsychology did not invent probability theory or its empirical applications. The field merely borrowed accepted statistical models and procedures from academic psychology. If Alcock wishes to reject as invalid the statistics parapsychologists use, he must also acknowledge that the statistics used by experimental and social psychologists are likewise invalid.

Alcock criticizes authors and publishers who have profited from the psychic movement while bemoaning the fate of "legitimate scientists" who can't get published. He cites the complaint of a disgruntled psychologist who asserts that authors who write on the paranormal "possess multiple estates, yachts and luxury automobiles."

If only this were true! If it were, maybe I wouldn't still be driving my 1974 Capri. On the other hand I haven't seen paranormal-debunkers Carl Sagan and Isaac Asimov hawking pencils on the street corner.

EYE OF THE BEHOLDER

IF YOU'RE wondering why a so-called man of science would write a book like Parapsychology: Science or Magic?, you may wish to read Frames of Meaning by H. M. Collins and T. J. Pinch (Routledge & Kegan Paul, Boston, Mass., 1982, 210 pages, $27.50). The authors, researchers at the University of Bath in England, have long been interested in the borderlands of science. Several years ago Collins and his associates

For Adepts Only

Franz Bardon's unique second and third books on magic are now available in accurate English translations for the first time! They make up a progress course for adepts only. Beginners should start with Bardon's earlier book:

1. Initiation into Hermetics

... a course of instruction on magic in 10 stages, its theory and practice plus the mystery of the first Tarot card.

Only $17.95

2. The Practice of Magical Evocation

... describes the little known subject of conjuratory magic — one of magic's darkest corners. It demonstrates that wonders and supernatural things exist only for humans deprived of the basic laws of nature — and thus incapable of penetrating into its supreme laws. The book includes the mystery of the second Tarot card.

3. The Key to the True Quabbalah

... is the cosmic language in theory and practice. To speak in the quabbalistic way means to create things out of nothing. Through the ages the one who was called the "master of the word" was always the highest initiate, the highest priest and the true representative of God. The secret of the third Tarot card is always included.

got caught up in the "metal-bending" craze that swept England after Uri Geller appeared on the psychic scene. They tested several young mini-Gellers to see if such an effect could be documented and filmed. The results were more complicated than they expected. They soon discovered that "truth," like beauty, is often in the eye of the beholder.

The experiments were unique. Collins and his team asked several young metal-benders to demonstrate their powers before scientific observers who were secretly instructed to slacken their guard now and then. The youngsters didn't know that the tests were being monitored not only by the observers in the room with them but by a film crew on the other side of a one-way mirror.

The results were predictable. Almost all of the children faked or tried to fake when they thought the experimenters were looking elsewhere.

Collins' team also found that while some of the resulting films showed obvious attempts at fakery on the children's part, more sympathetic viewers were unconvinced by them. The researchers learned the old lesson that when it comes to the paranormal one sees what one expects or wants to see. Collins was also fascinated by the way the skeptical press exaggerated his findings out of all proportion in order to use them for propaganda purposes.

But metal-bending is not the only subject with which the book (subtitled "The Social Construction of Extraordinary Science") is concerned. Collins and Pinch write that the question of whether or not psychic phenomena are compatible with modern physics is very much a matter of just which "authorities" you read. They also discuss the nature of the sociology of science and scientific change, although these sections of

Prove YOUR Psychic Power — Spin the ENERGY WHEEL*!

Designed by Gerald Loe

Using the Energy Wheel* you may be able to display psychokinesis — the ability to move matter with the mind. It also is used to increase bioenergy, the source of healing power. Test your ability! The sensitive aluminum rotor turns freely on the point of a needle. Following the instructions included, practically anyone can spin the wheel — even at a distance and direction of spin can be mentally controlled. A repeatable psychokinesis experiment — for fun as well as serious life energy research! Comes in plastic case to carry anywhere. Only $3.95, plus $1.00 postage-handling from:

Frames of Meaning will probably appeal more to the sociologist or philosopher of science than to the casual reader. Collins and Pinch's main point is that one's prior prejudices and world view determine how one views the case for psychic phenomena.

The authors never take a stand on the existence or nonexistence of PK and psi, although they obviously are sympathetic to parapsychology. They are much more interested in the social psychology of believers and disbelievers than by the actual phenomena the two camps are debating. In a way one can hardly blame them.

OTHER REVIEWS

MAGICK AND THE LAW by Nelson H. White, The Technology Group, Box 3125, Pasadena, Calif. 91103, 1981, Volume I, 42 pages, $9.00; Volume II, 95 pages, $15.00; Volume III, 118 pages, $15.00; Volume IV, 56 pages, $13.00, paperback. THE WIZARD'S APPRENTICE by Nelson and Anne White, The Technology Group, Pasadena, Calif., 1982, 74 pages, $15.00, paperback.

The Technology Group is a small occult publishing concern headed by Nelson and Anne White who also direct the temple of Truth, a Hermetic Magickal Order, and the associated Cabalistic Church, the Light of Truth Church. For over a decade they have been writing magick books, all of which have grown out of their experience as leaders of their own magickal group operating in a rather hostile environment. While claiming no particular magickal lineage, possibly an asset these days, the Whites have mastered the vast literature of the occult.

The four volumes of Magick and the Law should be of value even to those of us who are not involved in magick. My own study of the history of the psychic world in the United States has convinced me that its major problem has been the many legal barriers raised against it. While trying to establish some kind of control over fraudulent mediums, legislatures and city councils have heavy-handedly outlawed any kind of public psychic activity. Not long ago, for example, Schaumburg, Ill., outlawed psychic readings of all kinds.

Once the Whites set up their own Church and Magickal Order and made the decision

WARNING!

THE GOVERNMENT BANNED THIS INFORMATION!

IN 1957 THE U.S. GOV'T. CONFISCATED AND BURNED ALL BOOKS, DEVICES AND RESEARCH DEALING WITH RADIONICS! WHY? HERE ARE THE FACTS
---JUDGE FOR YOURSELF.

Radionics involves a simple appearing device, based on quantum physics and which any average person can operate, that appears to give the user tremendously advanced psychic abilities! Although it sounds like something straight from a science fiction novel, thousands of users from all over the world claim to be able to:

- Send telepathic impressions with startling ease!
- Kill insects and household pests with the power of thought!
- Diagnose and treat the ill from miles away!
- Locate & analyze valuable ore and oil deposits...from the comfort of their homes!
- Re-arrange the genetic pattern of trees and plants!
- Locate missing persons and objects!
- And much, much more!

As unbelievable as this sounds, radionics is based on the empathetic resonance of quantum physics. Boiled down to it's basics, here's what it means:

Quantum theory has shown that all matter is simply pure energy 'vibrating' at a particular frequency. If you likened it to a radio, than an atom of iron might be at 560 on the dial, while an atom of copper was at 1150.

Because thought too, is composed of a wave frequency, it can be superimposed or modulated with the signal of the atom! A radionic device was thus devised that tunes to the frequency of the sample put into it, then acting as a focal point for the thought of the operator, modulates this sample frequency and broadcasts it. For example, if a sample from an insect infested area is put into the Box, and the device is tuned to this frequency, the operator can insert a tiny amount of poison or insecticide-concentrate, and the resulting signal thus broadcast will cause the insects to either leave the area being treated or drop dead on the spot! The astounding thing is --it seems to work!

Experiments conducted at prestigious centers worldwide- including the University of Pennsylvania, Duke and Columbia University, The Soviet Academy of Sciences- even Dow Chemical, were not only successful, but some of them went far beyond theory into practical application.

In Europe and the Iron Curtain countries where Radionics was allowed to flourish unhindered, such huge strides were made that in England alone, the medical aspects were so phenomenal that an entirely 'new' branch of medicine is now successfully operating under the licensing and blessing of the British government!

Here in the U.S. work has again been resumed and organizations founded by well known people, such as the famous physicist Wehrner Von Braun and the astronaut Edgar Mitchell, were quickly formed to investigate this fantastic discovery.

Some of the results of all of this has appeared in the form of devices that are used to treat huge tracts of farmland for insect irradiation- one that was used to monitor the health of the Apollo astronauts without Nasa's knowledge (and which received the information faster than the space center did!) - even a 'Black Box' that was reportedly used to receive mysterious radio signals from deep space!

Almost every day new and amazing applications are being found for this truly mind boggling discovery. And all of it from a simple to construct 'little Black Box'! And it really is simple. As a matter of fact, if looks aren't important, the average person, with no prior knowledge of electronics, could put one together in a few hours and with only about $30 worth of parts!

Obviously there isn't enough room here to explain in detail all of the fantastic aspects of radionics and the marvels it can accomplish, so we've put together a 116 pg. book entitled, 'The Black Box and Other Psychic Generators' which not only explains how radionics works and shows you step by step how to assemble one of these devices both cheaply and easily, but also reveals startling government experiments with photos of the past- how researchers have already controlled atoms with thought alone!- and many more surprising facts and accomplishments that never made the newspaper headlines.

to go public with both, they faced local harassment from defenders of other true faiths and various government-instigated obstacles which made it difficult to establish themselves as a legal entity and tax-exempt organization. They fought their way through both and now offer a detailed guide to persons engaged in similar struggles.

Volume I will tell you how to organize your church legally as a not-for-profit tax-exempt religious corporation. It contains sample government forms and basic information about corporate law. As a church you do not have to incorporate but the law is such that incorporation is the easiest route for any occult group that expects to grow.

Volume II deals extensively with harassment both formal and informal. When any occult or psychic group comes out of the closet, it may face hostile "Christian" neighbors and unethical fellow-occultists. White suggests defensive steps which are legal, effective and nonaggressive. If you are harassed by government officials, such as your friendly IRS agent, there are simple steps you can take to alleviate at least some of the problems.

Volumes III and IV deal with a variety of issues ranging from copyrights on written material to lawsuits. Together with Volumes I and II, these afford a good basic understanding of legal situations you might encounter. They are certainly no substitute for a lawyer in complex situations but they will get you through most routine matters.

The Wizard's Apprentice is the last of a three-volume set on basic magick; the first two were Secrets of Magick Revealed (reviewed in October 1979 FATE) and Working High Magick. The Whites have set themselves the task of removing the veil of secrecy that has shrouded the occult orders and of dispelling the mass of misinformation about their hidden workings. The three volumes provide almost everything you need to get started in magick. The tools of magick are described in some detail along with instructions on how to make them. You will learn how to formulate a ritual and how to use older tested and true rituals.

The Wizard's Apprentice focuses on the philosophical and theoretical issues with which one involved in magick must necessarily deal. For example, magick is concerned with power and many enter the magickal realm in order to gain "instant" power. How one learns to handle power largely determines the quantity and quality of his magick.

The publication of this and the two earlier books in the series raises another essential magickal issue, the role of secrecy. Is secrecy essential to magick? Will magick survive when all secrecy is destroyed?

Already we have reached a time when no occult secrets remain unpublished and unavailable to the general public. The well-read student can find any occult teaching, technique, process or hidden wisdom on the shelves of his local occult bookstore. But now even the inconvenience of having to peruse a multitude of books to learn these secrets has been removed. The esoteric has been made mundane. — J. Gordon Melton.

THE PSYCHIC LIFE OF MURIEL, LADY DOWDING: AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY, Quest Books, Wheaton, Ill., 1982, 273 pages, $6.95, paperback.

The early parts of The Psychic Life of Muriel, Lady Dowding reminded me of Eileen Garrett's early years. Young Eileen saw auras; young Muriel saw fairies. Both experienced turmoil due to family upsets. And both ultimately embarked on lifelong quests for understanding of spiritual realities.

Muriel never became a trance medium like Eileen Garrett and indeed the psychic material in her book is lightweight and anecdotal. The book is best read as the biography of a perceptive, sensitive English woman growing up during the 1930's and England's war years.

She exhibits a typical British reluctance to discuss her personal emotions and her first marriage is presented pretty much as if a newspaper reporter were covering it for the society pages. After her husband Max is killed in the war, Muriel marries Lord Hugh Dowding, head of the Royal Air Force and the man chiefly responsible for winning the Battle of Britain.

Her major attention following her second marriage is given to animal welfare and she establishes Beauty Without Cruelty. The latter strikes me as an appealing method of operation. Instead of simply decrying unnecessary pain to animals in production of furs and cosmetics, Muriel and her colleagues championed synthetic furs and natural cosmetics as alternatives.

While hardly profound or important, this autobiography is a well-written account of a likable and intelligent woman. She sounds like the sort of person one would like for a friend and I think most FATE readers would enjoy her story. — David Techter.

Life after "Death" a Reality Scientists Hail Instrumental Communications

The Summit (The National Spiritualist) a monthly scientific, religious, philosophical magazine published continuously since 1919, presents facts which substantiate "life after death."

This year a team of scientists announced a breakthrough, with demonstrations of undeniable evidence, that we can communicate with those in the spirit world through an electromagnetic, etheric device known as Spiricom. This confirms a basic truth which Spiritualists have proclaimed for 134 years. Man is at last realizing the extent and magnitude of his own potential, and the unfoldment of his psychic abilities keynotes the new enlightened age.

People realize that life encompasses much more than its material expression. Life extends to other dimensions of consciousness where our loved ones survive the so-called death, still retaining their identity, memory, and personality. From this plane come messages of love, to aid and assist man's progression.

As early as 1916, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stated, "We have reached a point where further proof is superfluous, and where the weight of disproof lies upon those who deny."

The Summit is your source for this information, and much, much more. Soon a Television Program, Satellite Seances, will be aired across the Western Hemisphere. Untold millions will finally have an opportunity to find the facts which have so long been available, but with only limited access.

Summit subscription for one year - only $7.00. Sample copy $1.00.

REMEMBER: "YOUR MONEY BACK . . . IF MY PREDICTIONS DON'T HAPPEN!"

Jessup's book The Case for the UFO to the Office of Naval Research. Subsequently the Texas-based Varo Corporation reproduced the annotated Case, prefacing it with a commentary which appeared to take seriously "Allende's" assertion that he knew of a secret navy experiment in which a ship and its crew were rendered invisible; he also hinted that he possessed secret information about the origin and purpose of UFOs.

Over the years numerous legends grew up around the "mysterious Carlos Allende" and several books, most prominently Moore and Berlitz's The Philadelphia Experiment: Project Invisibility (reviewed in October 1979 FATE), were written about him and his allegations. Speculations about who "Allende" might be were frequently bizarre. One book suggested he might represent "an extraterrestrial power which took root on Earth centuries ago and has long since established an underground subculture."

But in 1979 Goerman, who had a mild interest in the affair, discovered quite by accident that he had known Carl Allen's parents all his life. He learned (and so reported in FATE) that Allen is no more than a chronic drifter, yarn-spinner and eccentric whom his family has always regarded as its black sheep.

Dossier is a brief account of what happened after the article appeared, complete with reproduction of a letter from Allen in which he informs Goerman he would "LOVE to shoot you at first sight . . . with a 12 gauge shot-gun at a 5 foot range." On a less dramatic note Goerman reports that promoters of the Allen/Allende affair responded with a predictable lack of enthusiasm to his baring of the mundane facts behind the colorful fiction.

Goerman's own prose is overwrought (although next to Allen's it is the soul of restraint) but the man has managed to keep his sense of humor through it all — no small achievement when someone is writing you to say he would "be too delightedly happy & in fact exultantly over-joyed . . . to blow your empty stupid head off." — Jerome Clark.

HELL'S ANGELS DEFENDED

"Uncle Al Came Through" by Vivian M. Meyer (August 1982 FATE) contains blatant errors.

The Hell's Angels colors (patch worn on jacket or cutoff vest) do not remotely resemble her description: "an emblem similar to the air force symbol, but there is a circle between the wings." The Hell's Angels insignia is a skull with a single wing to the right with "Hell's Angels" emblazoned over the top and the state the club belongs to inscribed below.

Hell's Angels do not "hang out" in an area. They have their own clubhouses and favorite bars and they have better things to do with their time than to sit in Mobil stations waiting to pounce on every passing motorist. Hell's Angels leave people alone if they in turn are not bothered. To the best of my knowledge, there have been no cases in recent years of Hell's Angels attacking anyone without severe provocation.

I have been riding motorcycles for more than 30 years and have logged over 350,000 miles in all kinds of weather. I have a respectable job in civil service and have been involved in the study of the occult and alternate religions for the last 40 years. Therefore I am astounded that a teacher of psychic development, as she styles herself, would submit an article that not only is poorly researched but also, by pure sensationalism, tends to identify all motorcyclists as murderous thugs.

— Daniel E. Campbell, Jr., Camarillo, Calif.

REINCARNATION vs. RECALL

I know little about reincarnation but I am fascinated by supposed evidence for it. On a radio talk show a year or two ago a young woman gave a "firsthand account" of having been a sailor who was killed at Pearl Harbor in 1941. As I remember it she reported that all the details of her account were checked out with the sailor and his family.

But even if you accept that someone can speak from the point of view of a deceased person and provide accurate details of his life and times, isn't it a long leap to say that these are different incarnations of the same individual? Aren't other inferences possible? Also how in the world can reincarnationists put any credence in "memories" of lives in Atlantis, remote times or even the future — for which there exist absolutely no corroborating data?

Last year Sherry Rindt, a writer for the New London (Wis.) Press-Star, reported that she could "remember" the death of her great-grandfather and described the details of the room and who was present. In her "recollection" she was two years old — but her great-grandfather had died 20 years before she was born! The family had to conclude that there was no "normal" way she could have remembered the event. The two-year-old through whose eyes she had observed the deathbed scene must have been a since-deceased relative.

So we have obvious proof of reincarnation, right? The only problem is that the two-year-old who was present at the deathbed was in fact Sherry Rindt's own father — who is still very much alive.

Only one negative example is required to disprove something. I think that Rindt's tale demonstrates that "past-life recall" does not necessarily have anything to do with reincarnation. If there is such a thing as reincarnation, to prove it will require a totally new kind of evidence. — Richard W. Heiden, Milwaukee, Wis.

ON THE WAY "HOME"

Thank you for printing my request for oldsters' out-of-body experiences in the June 1982 issue of FATE. But I was disappointed to see it under the heading "The Collectors." I tried to word my request as concisely as possible but perhaps I should have been more specific and explanatory.

There is a certain distressful period when a son or daughter witnesses an aged parent, once an omnipotent figure, talking incoherent nonsense. It may not be that. I would like to help educate young people who may not understand that out-of-body experience is a fit subject for public discussion. To do that, more and more people must learn that the experience is not unique. If people could be persuaded to open up and relate their experiences with aged people (most often their own parents, although nurses and doctors have a whole collection of such experiences) a big step could be taken to get the subject out in the open as a recognized aspect of human experience.

As it is now, most of what older people relate of their experiences as they enter a transitional period (leading to death) they can hardly believe themselves. Most often, they and those to whom they relate their experiences pass them off as hallucinations at best or senility at worst. Occasionally a theological interpretation comes forth: "It's the devil's work." Needless suffering can be eliminated when middle-aged children of aged parents, doctors and nurses taking care of them and others realize that OBEs are a natural part of this transitional stage.

To that end, I need to collect reports of such events, to nudge people to tell the story they are holding in because of present cultural conditions, to tell them it's okay and to start a dialogue with aged people — to let them know we are ready to listen to those who are on their way "home." — Myron Newman,

14019 Peach Grove St., Sherman Oaks,
Calif. 91423.

ASTROLOGY VINDICATED

In "World's Oldest Astrological Record" (June 1982 FATE) author David Lane is a somewhat uncertain champion of astrology. Like many others, he seems not to realize that astrology is the measure of time and thus fully vindicated.

The truth and reality of time eludes present-day irreverent scientists. But time is the measure of events, the measure of movements: the rotation of the earth for one day, its orbit around the sun for one year and the moon's monthly cycle around the earth. With the inclusion of the cycles of the planets the solar system becomes one whole. Astrology is the measure of the solar system and has been for some 5000 years.

The great achievement of the ancient astrologers was to learn the true length of the year: 365 days plus 1/4 day. For this purpose they built Stonehenge, the pyramids, Karnak, Temple and Stone Avenues in Brittany and many other sacred places.

All civilization is founded on this astrological time — all science, commerce and industry. All religions are founded on the solstices and equinoxes. The Christian religion calls the winter solstice Christmas and the spring equinox Easter. The Jewish religion depends on the spring equinox for Passover and the autumn equinox for New Year holy days. An exception is the Moslem religion, for Ramadan, the ninth month of the Moslem year, is founded on the moon cycle and wanders all around the solar year.

Time as we know it is singular to the solar system and does not exist outside it. Time is astrology and it is predictable, for the movements of the planets in the solar system are measurable. Astrology is the foundation of civilization. — Judith Gee, London, England.

BE PATIENT WITH UNCLE SAM

In the July 1982 issue of FATE Curtis Fuller discusses the U. S. Supreme Court's refusal to release the secret UFO-related national security documents. I agree with the court that studies made in the interest of national security should not be made public. I believe our right to be protected is more important than any right to pry into methods of intelligence-gathering or the information gained thereby. I speak as one who has been mostly engaged in classified work since 1941, one who knows that time and again the release of some seemingly unimportant piece of information may have cost us millions of dollars to say nothing of American lives.

The mission of the United States Air Force is to protect the nation against all threats from the atmosphere or outer space, whether unknown craft or experimental military devices of another nation or of our own. Regardless of how one views UFOs, documents relating to them might refer to something that does pose a real threat to our own nation, directly or indirectly. An observation device can be as much a threat as one that carries explosives or people.

I believe it is better to have too much security rather than too little. Let's have some patience with our government agencies and hope that they are doing the right thing for all of us. — E. J. Ramaley, Denver Colo.

THIS IS A TALL ONE. . .

FATE readers may be interested in a phantom hitchhiker who appeared to one of my students. As in the case investigated by Michael Goss ("Yes, There Are Phantom Hitchhikers," June 1982 FATE), this phantom did not speak but made a powerful impression on the man driving the car, a college philosophy professor.

The incident happened during my June 1980 workshop for developing psychic awareness, held at the Feathered Pipe Ranch in Helena, Mont. I had the group form a circle to activate what we called "healing energy." On the spur of the moment I asked them to visualize an American Indian who would hand them a symbol important for their personal development. I had never done this before and I don't know what prompted me — unless it was the history of American Indians in Montana.

The next morning I was telling one of the students about a case in South Africa in which a six-foot, four-inch American Indian materialized at a seance. A few minutes later the college professor-student arrived. After apologizing for his tardiness, he told us a remarkable story. The night before, driving the three miles to town from the ranch, he encountered a six-foot, four-inch Indian-standing at the roadside, hitchhiking.

The professor slowed down but did not stop. To his astonishment the tall Indian suddenly materialized in the backseat of his car where he could be seen in the rearview mirror. The Indian rode silently for two miles or so and suddenly vanished.

The professor was shocked and embarrassed by the incident and did not report it to his family. He also did not plan to tell the class but driving back to the ranch the next morning, when he came to the stretch of road the phantom had traveled in his car, he suddenly felt the strong personality of the Indian. The feeling stayed with him throughout the whole stretch of road and it was this second encounter that prompted him to tell us.

Having talked about synchronicity the day before, I remarked on my simultaneous conversation about a phantom six-foot, four-inch American Indian who materialized during the seance in South Africa.

How to explain this? Did our group's psychic energy exercise somehow create a thought form of the tall Indian which manifested to one of the students? Or did our psychic energy enable a "spirit" Indian to become visible for a short time? — Alan Vaughan, Glendale, Calif.

ST. CHRISTOPHER'S AID

Driving home from work on May 19, 1982, about 5:45 P. M. I stopped for a red light. When the light changed I started slowly across the intersection, then heard a car coming toward me from the left. A woman driver was running the red light a good 10 to 12 seconds after it changed. She hit my big Ford LTD so hard that my car was completely totaled. First she hit the left front and when my car fishtailed she hit the rear.

After the crash I couldn't believe I wasn't injured. I got out of the car and looked at the damage. If I had left the light a second or two earlier she would have hit me broadside; the crash might have killed me.

After I reached home two of my friends, Rita and Mary, came over to see me. We were sitting in my living room when Mary saw an object on my carpet; she thought it was a dime. When she picked it up, it proved to be a St. Christopher medal. No one knew where the medal came from or to whom it might have belonged.

MORE TRUTH ABOUT THE ARK

In a letter in the July 1982 issue of FATE, Karola Kautz revives the claim that the Ark of the Covenant was an electrical condenser. I suggest that any interested reader consult Chapter III of Crash Go the Chariots by Clifford Wilson to lay this myth to rest once and for all.

If Karola Kautz is correct, then there are only two possibilities: either Clifford Wilson and his electronics consultant are liars and incompetents or the Bible is inaccurate about the Ark's construction.

As to the ultimate fate of the Ark, the fact that it is variously placed at Mount Sinai, Rome and heaven merely proves that its final resting place is truly unknown. — Kim L. Neidigh, Austin, Tex.

Karola Kautz claims that the Ark was a condenser.

A condenser is two plates of metal separated by an insulator. The Ark was made of two plates of gold plus the wood. What Kautz overlooks are the four rings of gold attached to the Ark by some kind of bolts or rivets. Naturally these too would have been made of gold and would have shorted out by grounding the gold plates, thus eliminating the condenser action of the Ark.

REPORT FROM THE READERS

municator through Leonore Piper: "What does the word Lethe mean to you?"

The purpose was to learn if Myers-Piper would recall a translation he once made (on this side) from the poet Virgil about "Lethe, the River of Forgetfulness."

The reply contained a mix of cryptic words: Sybil, Iris, Ceyx, Sommos and so on which could not be related to Virgil or Lethe or anything else.

A year later a classical scholar noted the words, with a reference to "Lethe," in a story about "Ceyx and Alcyone" in the works of Ovid! — B. Fox, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE REAL MONSTER

Jerome Clark's "Update" (August 1982 FATE) contains a small error in the item on Champ, the Lake Champlain denizen. He wrote that Champ animals have been seen hundreds of times since 1619. The Champ animals were first reported by the French explorer Samuel de Champlain in 1609.

Whether the intrepid French explorer-cartographer saw a sea serpent or a large fish is heatedly debated among historians and researchers.

Further serious investigation into this cryptozoological mystery will surely lead to protection for these shy and passive animals. The real monster is not Champ but Homo sapiens for his lack of concern with the earth's ecosystem. — Joseph W. Zarzynski, Wilton, N. Y.

MORE ON KIRIN

Reading Paul Steiner's filler "Harbinger of Good Things" (April 1982 FATE), I was happy to learn that at last someone has bothered to look up what Kirins are all about. Having been brought up in Japan and Hong Kong I have been exposed since childhood to many popular Asian mythological creatures. I am quite familiar with this one.

According to legend the Kirin appeared before the birth of Confucius and it is strictly considered as a "harbinger of saints," not necessarily of all good things. Of course, with the coming of a "saint" we can also hope for other good to come but there are other creatures which have the role of "harbinger of good things."

Kirinji, a Japanese word meaning "child of Kirin," is used to characterize a child of exceptional qualities, like those of a saint.

According to the Japanese and Chinese (as well as the reference books) the Kirin is said to be shaped like a giant deer with a tail like a cow's, hooves like a horse's with a mane of five colors; its overall fur is yellow and it is said to have flesh-covered horns on top of its head. The creature is especially known to avoid trampling growing vegetation (a habit we should all learn to emulate) and it does not eat things of the "flesh," a fact vegetarians should appreciate.

Does the description remind you of any animal that walks the surface of the earth right now? The Japanese use the same word, "Kirin," to name their tall, swift, gentle vegetarian animal with yellowish fur — the giraffe! And the constellation associated with the Kirin in Asia is a synonym for the genus Giraffa. — Erika Wagatsuma Miller, Kenet Square, Pa.

FASTER THAN OUIJA BOARD!

Smooth-rolling ball bearings speed flow of automatic writing — end awkward pauses.

THE PLANCHETTE

Finely hand-crafted of smooth wood.
Wood-resin polish gives a high lustr.

Many experienced automatic writers learned with a planchette, and still find it the only way to obtain manifestations. Once you have acquired the gift, you will agree that the planchette is far superior to the Ouija Board. It is particularly favored by those who prefer to work in meditative solitude.

HOW THE PLANCHETTE WORKS:

Specially-fitted pencil forms one leg of planchette, the other two rolling free on ball bearings. These ball bearings permit the slightest indication of movement to take effect, the tiniest wisp of pressure transmitted through your hand. Only a superior product, an authentic psychic appliance, could have this expensive ballbearing feature. Complete instructions for use of the planchette, as well as for its care and protection, are included with this advanced psychic instrument.

WHAT HAS FATE IN STORE FOR YOU?

... A chance to explore the unknown ... truths you find nowhere else ... articles and stories to fire your imagination—that's what FATE has in store for you. Here is Editor Mary Fuller's report on stories planned for future issues:

∞ Can you learn to fly? The people at Transcendental Meditation say you can and they'll tell you how — for a price. They even have photographs to prove it can be done.

∞ Persons experiencing near-death see visions of what may be the afterlife, but some of them are also given information about the future of the human race. A medical scientist reports on a startling new dimension to the "life after life" phenomenon.

∞ Under hypnosis many persons recall past lives and describe astonishingly accurate information about other eras. A Finnish psychiatrist's investigation has produced a breakthrough in our understanding of this perplexing phenomenon.

∞ For three centuries theorists have speculated that the Chinese discovered America. New archaeological discoveries in California have revived the question.

MARY MARGARET FULLER

Each month FATE publishes more than 40,000 words of true articles on the strange, the unusual, the unknown. You can read such stories only in FATE because FATE is the only magazine of its kind in the world!

The Empress Lives...

Forget Me Not

The True Story of Elisabeth of Austria and the Mysterious Hapsburg Curse

Share her secrets. From the Imperial Palace to a romantic Austrian countryside. A book written in love and passionate wrath. The unforgettable story of the most beautiful princess of the nineteenth century. Where subtle twilight shadows of the supernatural cast the spell of death on a noble dream of life. The saddest which has ever been the portion of an imperial lady. But death is not the end of her story. It never is. The Empress lives. The same elite soul reincarnated in this century. You will never forget FORGET ME NOT.

Use these Extrasensory Powers

WHY LIMIT YOURSELF TO FIVE SENSES? Seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, and tasting reveal only a part of life and reality. There is a world of perception—of greater realization behind your outer self.

Impressions of these extrasensory powers occasionally arise in your conscious mind. The strange feeling of an impending danger—that intuitive flash or hunch with its forceful clarity—or receiving the thought of another before he has spoken it—these are telltale indications of your unused potentialities.

No longer are these something to just wonder about and not to discuss. They are not supernatural or weird, but natural phenomena. To understand, develop, and direct them can transform your whole personality. They can provide greater insight and power of personal achievement.

Challenge these remarks! Write to the Rosicrucians, a worldwide cultural organization (not a religion) for the facts about your extrasensory powers. Stop denying the greater part of yourself!
