OUR CHARITIES.

THE importance and magnitude of the Masonic Charities must be our excuse for again returning to the subject. It cannot be too widely known to the outer world, as well as to the brethren, that the practical work of the Order is assuming gigantic proportions. Some theorists, indeed, who, it is needless to say, are not Masons, have ventured to question the propriety of relieving the distressed and the afflicted. The views of Malthus and his followers are not, however, regarded as of any importance by the Fraternity. We are not likely, in these days, when great practical results can be shown as the sum of the labour of years, to turn aside from the watchwords of the Order to study crude theories which have never had much fascination for the English people generally. We notice that during the past ten years £148,949 has been subscribed for the maintenance of the Institutions for Boys and Girls, and in the same period £66,500 has been contributed towards the support of the Benevolent Institution. These facts speak for themselves, and they go far to prove that English Masonry is intensely practical, and truly benevolent. During these eventful ten years hundreds of friendless children have been fed, clothed and educated, and thousands of aged or unfortunate brothers have received help which has never had the effect of pauperising the recipient. We observed, with some regret, that although, at his installation, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales laid great and very proper stress upon the watchwords of the Order, yet at the banquet which followed, the Masonic Charities were not included in the programme of the toasts. The omission probably was a mere slip, but it was an unfortunate one. The eyes of the world were fixed upon the distinguished persons who were gathered around His Royal Highness, and a few words in response to the toast of the Charities, detailing their action, and summing up the magnificent results which we have referred to above, would have been carried to the ends of the earth. It is, however, useless to dwell upon this little slip, however acutely some of the most active workers in the cause of Masonry may have felt it at the time. We are satisfied to dwell upon the fact that our Charities possess such enormous inherent vitality that they do not require to be advertised. Masons are not incited to give by the fascinations of a prosperous balance sheet, and, unlike some of the donors whose names figure in the lists of ordinary benevolent institutions, they care little or nothing for the false glory of publicity. Yet when a legitimate opportunity occurs for the display of the results of years of active work and anxious thought, they are not so priggish as to desire to hide their light under a bushel.

We ought, in justice to two zealous and worthy officers, to notice that the marked increase in the revenues of the Girls' School and the Benevolent Institution has been coincident with the appointment of Bro. Little to the Secretaryship of the former, and Bro. Terry to that of the latter. These gentlemen have spared no efforts to improve the Charities to which they have devoted their energies, and, for our part, we regret that some honorary mark of distinction has not been conferred upon them in recognition of their zeal. Some of our brethren had suggested that these officers should be representatives of Grand Lodge, and we confess that we were somewhat surprised that, on the appointment of officers in April last, they were passed over. It is indeed argued that no paid officer should have a seat in Grand Lodge. The rule may be a wise one, but in so far as it is practically adopted it strikes a blow at one of the cherished principles of Masonry—Equality. Every Mason is, theoretically at least, on a footing of perfect equality with his brothers. But if the practice of Grand Lodge is to be regarded as a fundamental rule for the guidance of its business, we shall be constrained to confess that our equality has its limits, and we shall be compelled to regard paid officers somewhat in the light of servants, and, therefore, of inferiors. We think it rather unfortunate that Grand Lodge should have imposed any limits upon its freedom of action. It is unfortunate, to say the least of it, to raise a question as to the status of any member of the Order, but when eminent Masons are excluded from honorary rank because they are salaried officials, the policy which has prompted such exclusion is likely to produce some little discontent. The assumption, that an energetic Secretary, such as Bro. Little or Bro. Terry, can be adequately remunerated by mere money payment, is purely gratuitous. Enthusiasm and zeal for the cause such men have at heart can only be fairly recognised by such honorary rewards as Grand Lodge has to bestow, and with the greatest deference and respect for our chiefs, we venture to express a hope that a rule which is likely to cause some heart-burning may be re-considered.

THE THERAPEUTÆ AND JEWISH ASCETICS.

(FROM THE FRENCH OF J. L. LAURENS.)

WHILE the Essenes were fervently enthusiastic, they were, nevertheless, very scrupulous in their choice of adepts; very formal, and even austere in their ceremonies of initiation, terrible in their receptions. With them the door must be closed against low and vulgar folk, firmness and a certain energy were indispensable, and it was necessary these qualities should have been exhibited ere any one was admitted into their order. It was only owing to a strict observance of this delicacy, and to exercising such discretion in the choice of members, that the Essenes so rarely saw vice enrolled among them. By such wise and salutary precautions it was that virtue found itself invariably the sole companion of virtue. It was this elevation of thought which rendered them so strong, and enabled them to exercise so firm a control over their passions, that they became immovably stedfast amid all human vicissitudes, inaccessible to fear and the common frailties of man. Such is the picture which Josephus and Philo have handed down to us of this sect.

But it matters not to what height of moral dignity a man may arrive, what is only the work of this world can never attain that stability which is only to be met with in institutions of divine origin. In spite of the purity of man's intentions, human weakness becomes, sooner or later, apparent, even in the most finished of his works. Time, that absolute master of this world, impresses its penetrating and distinctive mark on whatever is submitted to its control. Soon the zeal of the Essenians diminished, the spirit of proselytism took the place of scrupulous care in initiating members, and the desire to increase the number of initiates introduced a blind facility, which opened the door to the enemies of the pure system of the Essenes. Already a diversity of views was at hand, and threatening the very foundations of that respectable body, and the original unity of principles disappeared before the tumult of pretensions and self love. This is what gave rise to so strange a revolution.

Those among the Jews of Egypt, whom the spirit of commerce had kept in the great cities, had made themselves famous by their knowledge of calculation, and by their commercial ventures. To the administration of corn at Alexandria, and of the tolls on the Nile, they united every kind of business and of trade. Their love of wealth had stifled in them every feeling of sensibility and delicacy, their possession of various monopolies, and the most crying exactions had become familiar to them. Public hatred aroused itself against them; soon the complaints of the people burst forth with violence, and they thus incurred the indignation of Ptolemy Philometor, who drove them from all those employments which they had so seriously damaged by conduct irregular and even indecent. Proscribed by a prince whose protection had been so serviceable to them, detested of the people, all the sources of their fortune were exhausted, public odium and misery became their lot. In this time of humiliation and distress, impostnre and hypocrisy, the common resources of wickedness and knavery, seemed to them the readiest means for recovering what they had lost by their misconduct. Witnessing the virtues of the Essenes, jealously eager to share with them that consideration and respect to which the latter had earned so just a title, they resolved to adopt their system, and even to surpass them in reputation. A life in common and retired, macerations, continual praying and all those external practices which delude people who are ready to be deluded, all these were put in force by those hypocrites whom history has named Therapeutæ, and whom Josephus and Philo, and after them M. Pinquet, has confounded with the Essenes properly so-called, but improperly, for the two widely differ from each other. The latter were purely philosophers, whose aims were directed towards moral perfection, and only looked to outward practices to a just and proper extent, while the former, entirely strangers to spiritual thoughts and moral perfection, assumed an outward austerity only, so that they might the better impose on those credulous people whose suffrages they hoped to secure.

What rendered the Therapeutæ celebrated was their manner, till then unknown, of interpreting the Bible—an interpretation which contained the most extraordinary, and even preternatural revelations, and all those reserves which have given rise to that cabala, the source of those errors and illusions, whose sole merit among men has consisted in flattering the imagination, and in extending the dominion of hope, that grand moving force of the world, without which man would only find nothingness in the current of his ideas. Magicians, astrologers, and, above all, daring impostors, the Therapeutæ, brought back the remembrance of that famous science, the aim of which is the creation of that metal which has caused so many crimes, and stifled so much virtue; of, in one word, that science, the end of which is a grand problem that has occupied all speculative philosophers, and which still troubles the deluded minds of men destined to nobler occupations.

But far from studying that science by fixed and regulated principles, the Therapeutæ confined their secret operations to the mysterious use of vague words, to prayers superstitiously contrived, and to strange customs, which, by the magic clothing with which they know so well to embellish them, were capable of attracting and deluding the multitude, so naturally prone to credulity. Such was their sole aim, and it is not surprising that they were much sought after. People are always sure to excite admiration, and bend the minds of others to their own purposes, when to intense effrontery they can unite the art of knowing how to impose by the hope of something which excites others' cupidity, especially when that hope is sustained by means of illusions the cause of which is hidden. Thus the Therapeutæ succeeded in eclipsing the Essenes, and in causing the esteem in which their virtues and philosophy were held to be lost sight of. Some of these latter, deceived by fictitious appearances, found themselves happy in being associated in the labours of the former. Error was preferred by some men, either weak-minded or naturally disposed to corruption, and the defection of the Essenes would have been complete if truth had not made its stern voice heard, and had not rejected, with the energy of conviction, these dangerous innovations of error and of vice. Hence that schism between the Essenes and those of their brethren who had lent a ready ear to the silly, but seductive, teachings of the Therapeutæ; hence that rivalry between the two Orders, which, by nourishing their differences, shocked the wise and temperate maxims of the one, and made them almost forgotten, while, on the other, it conferred a certain reputation on the errors of the other.

Those revolutions which unceasingly agitate the world, those passing changes which unite and divide men, eventually confounded the Essenes with the Therapeutæ, so far as their establishment of sects, but it is certain that the philosophy of the Essenes triumphed over all these agitations. There is no doubt it preserved itself in all its purity, for the truth is unchangeable. Probably that philosophy which the Essenes had derived from the priests of ancient Egypt, those usages, and practices which formed its allegorical emblem, these have survived all those political disorders which have so long desolated the world, which have been dissolved and renewed at the same time, those different associations which are destined to perpetuate its remembrance, and hand down knowledge of it.

The Therapeutæ disappeared in a manner of which history renders no account. They were succeeded by the Ascetics, that is, by a kind of Jewish monks, who, though devoted to a purely contemplative life, preserved amongst them opinions which suffice to prove they had received from the Egyptian priests and Essenes that spirit of true philosophy which neither new dogmas nor even superstitions had been wholly able to denaturalise. Christian monks succeeded in turn to the Jewish Ascetics. The Bishop of Siout, according to M. de P——, author of "A Voyage in Egypt," showed the traveller Vansleb the ruins of a Coptic monastery, where, he said, three hundred and sixty monks were devoted to seeking, without rest, for the "philosopher's stone."

I shall not stop to inquire if the assertion of the Bishop of Siout is correct—it is, in fact, very unimportant to learn what was the nature of the occupation followed by these three hundred and sixty Coptic monks. But what is, historically, more important to know is, that these Coptic monks, who exist in Egypt even in the present day, are the immediate successors of the Egyptian priests and Essenes. This connecting link having been established so clearly, it is evident the spirit and philosophy of these priests and Essenes are not lost, seeing that these different bodies have been continued by an unbroken succession till the present day.

SOME STATISTICS OF FREEMASONRY IN FRANCE.

ACCORDING to Le Monde Maçonnique, the Grand Orient of France has just published a calendar for the past year, from which it appears that there are 308 Lodges and other Masonic bodies which owe it allegiance. These are Lodges 260, Chapters 35, Councils 11, Consistory 1, Grand Council 1. They are distributed as follows: In Paris there are 41 Lodges, 6 Chapters, 2 Councils, and the Grand College of Rites. In the Department of the Seine are 8 Lodges, and in the other Departments 70 Lodges, 19 Chapters, and 6 Councils. Algeria comprises within its limits 9 Lodges, 1 Chapter, and 1 Council. In the French colonies are 8 Lodges, and 3 Chapters, while in foreign countries there are 24 Lodges, 6 Chapters, 2 Councils, and 1 Consistory, which are under the jurisdiction of the Grand Orient of France.

SPENCER'S GREAT LIBRARY.

SECOND NOTICE.

THE first authors who expressed clear ideas upon Freemasonry, says Dr. Findel, were Lessing in "Ernst und Falck," Herder, Fichte—Einsichten des 19ten Jahrhunderts, Krause, Fessler, Funkhänel, Marbach and Seydel. The works of all these authors are, we believe, presented to us in due order by Messrs. Sotheby, and even all the editions of their works. Krause's Drei Urkunden, Mossdorf's, Matthelsungen and Lessing's Encyclopedia are all become scarce, and the valuable Materialien of Schröder is a bargain of the past. In lot 183 we find, with surprise, the author's own copy of the Acta Latomorum and its reputed third vol. the Histoire de la fondation du Grand Orient, the former having proof etchings in various stages of preparation. Of Monitors and Manuals published in the U.S. there is a goodly show, comprising Hardie's, Town's, Townshill's, Webb's, &c. That first scarce and valuable edition of the Signsdstern in lot 164, appears with 1 vol. wanting (erroneously catalogued, we are informed, as 2 wanting). Bro. Spencer informs us that a complete series of these rare vols., each a work in itself, has never passed through his hands. Hall'sistell's Early History, lot 220, now seldom to be picked up at half-a-guinea. The Memoir of Sir James Burrow (the generous knight whose memory is yet green in India), together with his Addresses, has not been sold for many a day. A useful book of reference is the Calendrier pour les Hauts Grades (lot 222), and we note a fine copy of Rschellini de Schio's Theory of Masonry, with its beautiful and erudite plates in lot 225. In lots 226 and 233 the investigator may learn something of the so-called Egyptian Rite of Misraim, in lot 236 that of Memphis. Two useful works of Rodarte' in lot 229, and Dr. Kloss' valuable histories in lot 232, next meet our eye, but we must not pass without notice a rare tract, interesting to Irish Masons, in lot 230. The scarce writings of that unprincipled charlatan, Finch, crop up next, and then we come to the unrivalled series of our Constitutions.

Comment upon these is needless, in booksellers' retail price-lists we have seen some of them figuring at £3 3s, £2 10s and £3 3s, perhaps indifferent copies at even that, whereas these are selected from those which have passed through Bro. Spencer's hands. The Masonic Benefit Society (lot 254) we do not remember to have heard of before, though there are some tickets, we believe, connected with it, among the scrap books at the end of the sale. The old folio, Rules and Orders of the Antients, we never saw before this occasion; they are real historical mementos of a dissidence which, we trust, may never recur in this country. The MS. Bye Laws and Songs of White's Lodge, Gibraltar (held by the Royal Tyrone's), show the members to have been of a free and easy sort, in a manner which can find no parallel at the present day. Our American brethren will doubtless make a bid for the early Constitutions of Worcester (Mass.), and for that of S. Carolina (lot 278), of which Charlestown, S.C., would seem to be the legitimate home. Lot 281 is composed, we should imagine, of works as rare as any in the list—a series of the early Statutes of the G.O. of France. We regard it as a great prize. Hardly less so is the quarto, Constitutions of the Hague, 1735. The following lots, down to 292, are all rare—seldom brought together on one shelf. What shall we say of lot 294—Editions of the Pocket Companion? Singly, they are for the most part scarce enough, and as a series, certainly have never been matched before. Another curious Collection of Masons' Marks is in lot 316. Fisch's Initiation à la Philosophie de la F.M. (lot 326) was discontinued after the first vol. It contains highly-illuminated plates of the insignia of the first degrees of almost every rite, and would have been the greatest Masonic Manual of Ritual ever produced. The accounts of the Grand Masters' Lodge, of the Lodge of Friendship, and of the Lodge of Emulation, with their interesting biographies and historical notes, are not generally procurable, having been printed for circulation among the members only.

Lot 338 begins the collections of Masonic Speeches, Charges, &c. from 1744, including a sermon to the African Lodge, Boston, relative to which Lodge there is other matter elsewhere. Of the enthusiastic Lodges in Paris, during the reign of Napoleon I., there is a series of historic mementoes. Bye-laws (lot 365) are interesting, and, of course, exceedingly scarce. There is a capital series of the Proceedings of the Grand Orient of France from 1802, with lists of Grand Officers, &c. from 1822. About twenty volumes, with a large collection unbound, of Proceedings of Grand bodies in the U.S.A. next follow, and lot 386 is an unrivalled (except by Grand Lodge, London) collection of the communications of the Grand Lodge of England, including many pieces of both Ancients and Moderns before the Union, from 1795. These ought to go to the library of some foreign Grand Lodge. A very rare book is in lot 412—Hoy's Templaria. The Round Church of Little Maplestead, and Burne's Knights Templars, are now both scarce, the latter valuable. Lot 418 ushers in the chemico-theosophic mystic books of the mediæval Rosycrucians, with Baruch's rare and curious Domus Dei, 1611. Various editions appear of the Fama, Andreæ's Chemical Wedding, &c. The tracts which follow are well known to Rosicrucian bibliophiles, though many of them by repute only. Lot 428 (two bound in one), from the library of the Duke of Sussex, is, if possible, scarcer than the foregoing, and a better printed, handsomer work: even so lot 430. We note next works of Starkey, Fludd, Böhmen, Heydon, Richard the Englishman, and the paradoxical discourses of the great Van Helmont, Gemma Magica, Aula Lucis, the Golden Fleece, Key to the Art of Zoroaster, Herr Mogenis' Spagyric Apocalypis, spagyric fountain and magical firestaff arrest attention and excite our covetousness, though dissertations on the meaning of comets make us smile. The gem of the following lots is 450; this is very seldom met with in a complete state, and we have seen it, without the allegorical introduction, realise £3 3s. It consists of numerous folio coloured plates, which show, in a remarkable manner, the sources whence compilers of the "hauts grades" derived their symbolism, only that the latter appear devoid of a hidden meaning, which we believe we can detect in those under review. It concludes with rude out and mystical metrical commentary of the great Emerald tablet, which few men living know to be the sum of a knowledge of natural philosophy, in which the ancients were certainly not behind the moderns. Amongst ancient commentators on this tablet were men who understood animal magnetism, and who anticipated Darwin in expounding the "origin of species."

In lot 454 we find one of the books of the most famous Compagnia della Lesina, which flourished at Venice early in the 17th century, whose object was the reformation of morals by means of a Masonic speculative system, the details of which were, we believe, not disclosed. Many curious details concerning the customs of the Jews and the speculative application of their Temple and Tabernacle may be picked up from Godwyn's and Gregory's works, in lots 455 and 456. The controversy upon the Eastward position in worship (lot 457) comes à propos at the present time; in these tracts, 150 years ago, it was exhaustively discussed. Masonic symbolism dug out of the hieroglyphics and secret writings of the ancients is expounded in the following lots (458 to 477.) Many of these works are extraordinarily scarce, and will fetch a capital price, without reference to Masonic bidders, especially Taylor's and Ouseley's Eleusinia, Newton's 3 Enigmas, Higgin's Celtic Druids, Dalloway's Discourses, and O'Brien's Round Towers; not less useful and interesting are Schumacher's Works (lot 458), Costa Repos, Mesmonicus, Mystères de l'antiquité (lot 461), Hammer's Alphabets, Spineto's Hieroglyphics, Portal's symbolic colours, and Egyptian symbols, Wathen's Ancient Egypt, La Masse et ses mystères, and Griffith's natural system of Architecture.

We must conclude this review in our next issue.

FREEMASONRY.

ITS ORIGIN, ITS HISTORY AND ITS DESIGN.

FROM THE NEW YORK HERALD.

THE public ceremonies which are to be inaugurated during the ensuing week, by the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New York, will very naturally attract the attention of what Freemasons call, in a technical and not offensive sense, "the profane world," to the history, the character and the objects of the Masonic institution. But there needs no occasional event, however interesting may be the circumstances connected with it, to secure to the Masonic Order a valid claim to public consideration. To say nothing of its antiquity—for it is by far the oldest secret organisation in existence—nor of the humanitarian objects which it professedly seeks to accomplish, its universality alone clothes it with a peculiar interest that does not appertain to associations more circumscribed in their relations. Computing, as it does at this day, in the United States alone, a population of half a million of active members, Freemasonry boasts, as did the Emperor Charles of the extent of his Empire, that there is not a civilized country of the world, whether Christian or not, in which its Lodges are not to be found. From frozen Siberia to torrid Africa, and across the wide continents of both hemispheres, the institution is actively in operation. Everywhere substantially the same in its organization, its members governed by the same laws, and inspired by the same principles, it presents the remarkable spectacle of an association which, under no contingency, has been subjected to change of character by the influences of the language, the political government, or the religious belief of the people among whom it has been introduced. In Protestant England, in Catholic Italy, in Mohammedan Turkey or in Brahmanic India—under the shadow of the Cathedral of St. Paul, or the Basilica of St. Peter, or the Mosque of St. Sophia, or the thousand temples of Benares—Freemasonry is, for all practical purposes, one and the same institution. No external pressure has ever succeeded in affecting the identity of its form and organization. In the most bigoted hierarchies it has maintained its principle of toleration; in the most despotic autocracies it has inculcated freedom of thought and speech, and in the most liberal republics it has preserved the dogma of obedience to constituted authority.

This universality of its identity has authorised that doctrine of its ritual which declares that "in every land a Mason may find a home and in every clime a brother." The links of a Catholic brotherhood do, indeed, form a continuous chain that girdles the whole earth. Hence, the Rev. Salem Town, one of the most learned and distinguished members of the Fraternity in New York, has said, in reference to this cosmopolitan character, that "were he to travel into a foreign country he should consider his Masonic relations the surest safeguard, aside from divine protection, that could be thrown around him." When such an institution becomes the subject matter of investigation there are two prominent topics that arrest the attention of the inquirer—its history and its design—where and when did it arise, and what are the objects for which its existence has been continued. Each of these topics we propose succinctly to discuss.

The question of the origin of Freemasonry as a Mystical Association has, for more than a century and a half, attracted the attention of many scholars of Britain, Germany, France, and America, and a body of treatises and essays on the subject have been published, the extent of which would surprise any one not familiar with Masonic literature. At the present day, the historians of Freemasonry, who are engaged in the discussion of this question, may be divided into two schools, which may be appropriately distinguished as the mythical and the authentic. The former of these is the older, for the latter has become prominent only within the last three or four decades. Masonic opinion is, however, very steadily, and, indeed, rapidly, moving in the direction of thought that has been adopted by this latter school.

Digitized by Google

The differences between these two schools are very strongly defined, and are, in some respects, entirely antagonistic.

The mythical school of Masonic history was inaugurated, about the beginning of the last century, by James Anderson and Theophilus Desaguliers, both doctors of divinity, and who had been mainly instrumental in elaborating what has been called the revival of Masonry by the establishment, in 1717, of the Grand Lodge of England. Dr. Anderson was a man of acknowledged learning, the minister of a Scotch congregation in London, and a writer of some reputation. Dr. Desaguliers was recognised as a distinguished scientist and a popular lecturer on experimental philosophy. But it is Anderson who is really to be considered as the founder of the school, since he first promulgated its theories in the "Book of Constitutions," which he published in 1723, by order of the Grand Lodge.

Unfortunately for the interests of truth, Anderson was of a very imaginative turn of mind, and instead of writing an authentic history of Freemasonry, he accepted and incorporated into his narrative all the myths and legends which he found in the manuscript records of the operative Masons. According to him Masonry began with Adam, and, extending through the line of antediluvian patriarchs to Noah, was by him communicated to his descendants of the new world. Being transmitted successively through Abraham, Moses, Joshua, and David, it at length reached Solomon, who, by the aid of the Freemasons, built the Temple at Jerusalem. After the death of Solomon the institution was patronised by his successors and by the Kings of Babylon, Assyria, and Egypt, until it was finally transmitted into Europe.

The Masonic writers of England who immediately succeeded Anderson, have not insisted on that part of his narrative which traces Freemasonry to the Garden of Eden. But they more fully developed his theory of the establishment of the Order at the Temple of Jerusalem, the division of the Craft into Lodges, with degrees and officers, and, in short, an organisation precisely such as now exists. This scheme was accepted, and continued to be acknowledged as the orthodox historical creed, by the Fraternity during the whole of the last, and the greater part of the present century. It was incorporated into the ritual, much of which is founded on the assumption that Freemasonry is to be traced, for its primitive source, to the Temple of Jerusalem. The investigations of the more recent or authentic school have very nearly demolished this theory. Scholarly men, at least, among the Craft no longer concede even its plausibility. Yet the influence of its prevalence for so long a period is still felt, and, perhaps, while the organisation continues in its present form will never be wholly overcome. The Temple still holds its place in the Ritual as the type of every Masonic Lodge, and its Master is recognised as the representative of the King of Israel, while important events, transmitted, it is said, by oral tradition, are commemorated as having occurred during the construction of the edifice. But all of this is now explained, not historically, but symbolically. And so important, and, indeed, essential to speculative Masonry is the Temple of Solomon as a symbol, that to eradicate it from Masonic symbolism would be equivalent to destroying the identity of the institution. The ground floor, the middle chamber, and the holy of holies are familiar places in every Lodge, and the brazen columns of Jachin and Boaz, which stood at the porch of the Solomonic Temple, are still indispensable decorations to every room or building which is exclusively devoted to Masonic purposes.

The theory of the origin of Freemasonry that is now beginning to be most generally accepted by intelligent members of the Order is, that of the authentic school of Masonic history. This school might rather be called the iconoclastic, and indeed its disciples have not unfrequently been denominated the iconoclasts of the Order, because of the sturdy and effectual blows they have inflicted on the extravagant images of the legendary or mythical school.

The leaders of the authentic school in England are Hughan and Woodford, in Scotland Lyon, and in Germany Findel. If a prodigality of credulity has been the weakness of the mythical school, their rivals may be charged with having sometimes exercised an excess of the credulity. They decline to accept any statement whose authenticity is not supported by some written or printed record, and a few of them have gone so far as to circumscribe the history of Freemasonry within the narrow limits of that period which commences with the revival, or, as they prefer to call it, the foundation of the Grand Lodge of England, in the beginning of the eighteenth century. Others, however, have been more liberal, and now, as a general rule, their theory of the origin of Masonry has been accepted by the more intelligent members of the Fraternity, while the fanciful and legendary speculations of the old writers are gradually giving place to the well supported statements and the logical deductions of the authentic school. By most of the leaders of this school the complex question of the origin of Freemasonry is being solved in the following way:

There existed in Rome from the first days of the kingdom, and all through the times of the republic and of the empire, until its final decay, certain guilds or corporations of workmen, which are well known in history as the Roman colleges of artificers.

Numa, who is said to have founded these guilds, established only nine, but their number was subsequently greatly increased. From the Roman writers who have treated of the form and organization of these colleges we learn enough to show us that there was a great analogy in their government to that of the modern Masonic Lodges, and this especially in their character as a secret society and in the initiations and esoteric instructions to which candidates for admission, and the younger members were subjected. Of these guilds the one to which Masons particularly refer is that which consisted of architects or builders. The authentic school of Masonry does not claim, as the mythical most probably would have done, that the Roman colleges of architects were Lodges of Freemasons. They simply contend that the facts of history exhibit a regular and uninterrupted derivation of the Freemasonry of this day from these Roman guilds, although the course of the succession was affected by various important changes. But these changes have not been sufficient to altogether obliterate the evidence of the relationship. This relationship is thus indicated. From a very early period, the Roman people were distinguished by an active spirit of colonization. No sooner had the victorious legions subdued the semi-barbarous tribes of Spain, of Gaul, of Germany, and of Britain, than they began to establish colonies, and to build cities. To every legion which went forth to conquer and to colonize, was attached a guild or college of architects, whose members, taken from the great body at Rome, marched and encamped with the legion, and when a colony was founded, remained there to cultivate the seeds of Roman civilization, to inoculate the principles of Roman art, and to erect temples for worship, and houses for the accommodation of the inhabitants.

When in time the corrupted empire was threatened with extinction by the invasion of its Northern enemies, the legions were recalled to sustain and defend the central power, but the guilds of architects and builders most frequently remained in the towns and cities which they had assisted to erect, and where they had acquired a citizenship that they had probably lost at home.

In the course of time the proud mistress of the world became extinct as a power of the earth, and the colonies which she had scattered over the continent became independent kingdoms and principalities. The descendants of the Roman colleges of artificers established schools of architecture, and taught and practiced the art of building among the newly enfranchised people. A principal seat of this body of architects was at Como, a city of Lombardy, where a school was founded, which acquired so much reputation that the Masons and bricklayers of that city received the appellation of Masters of Como, and architects of all nations flocked to the place to acquire the correct principles of their profession. From this school of Lombard builders proceeded that Society of Architects who were known at that time by the appellation of Freemasons, and who, from the tenth to the sixteenth century, traversed the continent of Europe, engaged almost exclusively in the construction of religious edifices, such as cathedrals, churches, and monasteries. The monastic orders formed an alliance with them, so that the convents frequently became their domiciles, and they instructed the monks in the secret principles of their art. The popes took them under their protection, and granted them charters of monopoly as ecclesiastical architects, and invested them with many important and exclusive privileges. Dissevering the ties which bound them to the monks, these Freemasons (so-called, to distinguish them from the rough masons who were of an inferior grade, and not members of the corporation) subsequently established the guilds of stonemasons, which existed until the end of the seventeenth century in Germany, France, England, and Scotland.

These stonemasons, or, as they continued to call themselves, Freemasons, had one peculiarity in their organisation, which is necessary to be considered if we would comprehend the relation that exists between them and the Freemasons of the present day. The society was necessarily an operative one, whose members were actually engaged in the manual labour of building, as well as in the more intellectual occupation of architectural designing. This, with the fact of their previous connection with the monks, who probably projected the plans which the Masons carried into execution, led to the admission among them of persons who were not operative Masons. These were high ecclesiastics, wealthy nobles, and men of science, who were encouragers and patrons of the art. These, not competent to engage in the labour of building, were supposed to confine themselves to philosophic speculations on the principles of the art, and to symbolising or spiritualising its labours and its implements. Hence there resulted a division of the membership of the brotherhood into two classes, the practical and the theoretic, or, as they are more commonly called, the operative and the speculative. The operative Masons always held the ascendancy in numbers, but the speculative Masons exerted a greater influence by their higher culture, their wealth, and their social position.

In time there came a total and permanent disseverance of the two elements. At what precise period this event occurred we cannot say, but it was somewhere between the middle and the close of the seventeenth century. At the beginning of the eighteenth century there were several Lodges in England, but for a long time there had been no meeting of a general assembly. In the year 1717 Freemasonry was revived and the Grand Lodge of England established by the four Lodges which then existed in London. This revival took place through the influence and by the exertions of non-operative or speculative Masons, and the institution has ever since preserved that character. Lodges were speedily established all over the world—in Europe, America and Asia—by the Mother Grand Lodge at London, who, for that purpose, issued provincial deputations or patents of authority to introduce the Order into foreign countries. No important change has taken place in the organisation of the association since that period. As soon as a competent number of Lodges had been established in any independent State a grand Lodge was at once constituted: and now in every kingdom of Europe, with two exceptions, in every State of the American Union, in the Dominion of Canada and other British provinces, and in each of the South American republics there is a Grand Lodge exercising sovereign Masonic power, while in some colonies, which have not attained political independence, provincial grand lodges have been invested with slightly inferior prerogatives.

This brief sketch of the origin and progress of the Institution prepares us for a still briefer review of its design.

It is evident from what has been said that the Freemasonry of the present day is a philosophic or speculative science, derived from and issuing out of an operative art. In denominating it a science, we should be more precise were we to say that it is a science of symbolism. This science of symbolism, once so common as to have been deeply studied by the ancient philosophers and by the modern Gnostics, Rosicrucians and Alchemists, is now maintained and cultivested in all its perfection by only two institutions—the Roman Catholic Church and the Order of Freemasonry. One of the authoritative definitions of Freemasonry is that it is "a science of morality, veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols." But a more correct definition would be that it is "a system of morality developed and inculcated by the science of symbolism."

Its original descent from an association of builders has given to its symbolism a peculiar character. All the labours of operative or stone masonry, its implements and its technical language, have been seized by the speculative Freemasons and appropriated by them as symbols, each of which teaches some important moral or religious truth. The cathedrals which their predecessors erected, some of which still remain as proud monuments of their surpassing skill in architecture, have been replaced, for esoteric reasons, by the Temple of Solomon, which has become, with one exception, the most important and significant of the symbols of the Order.

As all these symbols are applied to religious purposes, and receive a religious interpretation, we must conclude that Freemasonry is a religious institution.

It is not a religion. It makes no such claim. It does not profess to offer the renovating efficacy or the spiritual consolations which make religion so necessary an element in the healthful life of man. But it does inculcate some religious truths, without any attempt to define theological dogmas. It demands of its initiates a trusting belief in God and in the immortality of the soul, and its ceremonies and its symbols impress these truths with all the moral consequences that a belief in them implies. It recognises all religious truth, and tolerates, but does not accept, sectarian dogmas. It repudiates nothing but atheism. Around its altar, consecrated to the Grand Architect of the Universe, men of all creeds may kneel in one common worship, each holding in his heart with all tenacity his own peculiar faith, the brotherhood around neither asking nor condemning by word or look. Incidental to its organization as an association of men engaged in the same pursuit we find other characteristics common to it with all similar human associations, but which it possesses and practises with greater perfection because of its universality and its numerical extension.

Such is its social character. In the Lodge all artificial distinctions of rank and wealth and power are for the time suspended, and Masons meet together on the great level of equality. The prince and the peasant, the bishop and the layman, sit together and join hand in hand in the same symbolic labour. It is but the other day that the heir apparent of the British crown was seen kneeling at the feet of one of his subjects, and giving to him his oath of Masonic allegiance and fealty.

So, too, it is eminently a benevolent institution. There is no other institution that has built and endowed more asylums for the aged and decayed, or hospitals for the sick, or houses for orphans, or done more to clothe the naked, to feed the hungry, or relieve the poor, and in granting eleemosynary aid to the distressed brother or his destitute widow. It hallows and sanctifies the gift by the silence and secrecy with which it is bestowed.

Such is Freemasonry—venerable in its age and beneficent in its design. And when in a few days its disciples shall appear in the performance of one of its religious commemorations, in all the gorgeous display of its paraphernalia, its banners and its symbols, every one of which is deeply significant to those who have learned the lesson of some great religious or moral truth, let the people who look on the scene know that they are beholding a venerable relic of the olden time, which yet has no decay, but whose age "is as a lusty winter," combining with the good old conservatism of the past, all the practical utilitarianism of the present.

Obituary.

BRO. W. BULLEY, OF BIRKENHEAD.

THE funeral of Bro. William Bulley, an old and respected resident of Birkenhead, who died on Wednesday 16th June, took place on Saturday, the 19th ult., at Flaybrick-hill Cemetery. Bro. Bulley was one of the oldest Freemasons in the hundred of Wirral, and at the time of his death was Junior Grand Warden of the province of Cheshire. He also held many other high offices in the Order. By the members of the "mystic tie" he was greatly esteemed for his many amiable qualities, and his funeral was attended by a large number of the brethren. The funeral cortège left the residence of the deceased in Clifton Park shortly before two o'clock, the chief mourners being deceased's two sons, his brother, Mr. Henry Bulley (chairman of the Oxton Local Board, and a well known Freemason). Mr. Hoffman, &c. Amongst the Freemasons present were Bros. J. M. Radcliffe P.M. 605, T. E. Hignett P.M. 537, J. P. Platt P.P.G.W. 537, Thomas Platt P.P.G.D., Dr. Spratley P.P.G.D. 537, Dr. Wilson P.M. 537, E. J. Haddon W.M. 605, Matthew M'Nerney S.W. 605, T. Leighton P.M. Sec. 605, Robert Gracie P.M. 477, Donald Fraser W.M. 477, F. K. Stevenson P.M. 537, Ellis Davis P.M. 605, Samuel Jones P.M 477, Thomas V. Evans 292, William Clements 605, T. C. Thorburn, of the Joppa Mark Lodge 11, L. Ellis W.M., and A. Lowe, of Rock Ferry, Edward Parsons 537, N. Hall 537, W. Worrall and — Griffiths, Chester, F. Sanderson, John Lamb, &c. The interment took place in the Church of England portion of the cemetery, the service being performed by the Rev. John Henderson. At the grave the sons of the deceased placed three or four beautiful wreaths of flowers upon the coffin, and sprigs of acacia were also deposited upon the lid by nearly all the Freemasons present.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE distribution of prizes took place, under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Balfour of Burleigh P.G.W. President of the Board of Stewards for the Anniversary Festival, at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Wood Green, on Wednesday, 30th June, when a numerous attendance of the Stewards, brethren and ladies were present. This gathering, despite the disadvantage of bad weather, was a great success, and those who were present must have been proud to see the Institution in so flourishing a condition. Throughout the building cleanliness was predominant.

The following programme, consisting of recitations, dramatic selections and vocal and instrumental music was given, and listened to with feelings of great pleasure:—

Overture—Piano Duet	"Favourite Airs."
Latin	"Virgil," Extract from Æneas and Latinus	J. Jones.
Part Song	"The Merry Spring Time."
Shakspere	"The Seven Ages of Man."	J. Jones.
Glee	"Lightly tread, 'tis hallow'd ground."
German	Speech of King Frederick William III. of Prussia on the declaration of War against France in 1813.	R. N. Carter.
Piano Duet	"La fille de Madame Angot."
French	"Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," scene from.	J. and F. Lane*
Glee	"Lordly Gallants."
Latin	"Virgil," Extract from Æneis and Turnus	G. Shaw.
Part Song	"Farewell to the Forest."
German	"Das Lied von der Glocke."	W. Beaumont.
Part Song	"You stole my Love."
English	"Poor Richard's Wisdom," Advice to Old and Young	W. Bruford and F. Hawes.
Reading	"Death of Dean Swift."	Sweet.
Song	"Ye Mariners of England."	Oates.
Glee	"Here's a Health unto Her Majesty."
English Recitation	"Victor Galbraith," by Longfellow	V. Lang.
Do. Do.	"A Child's Work," (by Angus M. Mackay, 5th Master)	E. J. Robinson.

Concluding with the National Anthem.

Mr. W. H. Holmes was the Musical Instructor.

Between the programme the noble chairman distributed the prizes. Several of the pupils who, by close attention to their studies, had qualified themselves for competitive examination, received the Cambridge Scholarship. The chairman announced that the first young gentleman on the list, in addition, had presented to him £2, and £1 each to the remainder. The names of those successful were as follow:—E. Moss, Lane, Hustler, Cloud, Walkington, Burkitt, Hawes, Bruford, Smith, and F. D. Lane. The noble chairman, who was supported by Bros. C. Horsley, Hunt, Dubosc, Rosenthal, W. Pass, Spiers and Roebuck, then rose, and said, It was one of the most pleasant recollections in Freemasonry to be present on so important an occasion, one that would never be forgotten by him. He had a proposition to make, and he hoped it would meet with the concurrence of all; and that was to thank the masters and the committee for the admirable manner in which this noble Charity is conducted. He had inspected many buildings and various institutions, but he had never seen one like the Boys' School; so well conducted, with such order and cleanliness. He then addressed the boys, in terms that it is hoped will never be forgotten by them, as to the advantages of study. He would like to be a schoolboy again, for that period was the happiest of their lives. He hoped they would work with energy to compete; for competition would give them energy to be successful, and if they were unsuccessful this year they might be in a prominent position the next.

Bro. Roebuck then proposed, and Bro. Rosenthal seconded, that a vote of thanks be accorded to Lord Balfour, not only for his able presiding this day, but also for his kindness in occupying the position of President of the Board of Stewards. The noble chairman suitably responded, and the company adjourned to refreshments, which were served under the supervision of Bros. F. Binckes, Pass, Webster, &c.

The following programme of music was performed, during the day, by the pupils' band:—

1. Grand March	Blue Beard	10. Valse	Belle of the Ball
2. God Bless the Prince of Wales		11. Ballad	Auld Lang Syne
3. Quick March	Fal lal la	12. Polka	Mulligan Guards
4. Ballad	Blue Bells of Scotland	13. Quick March	British Grenadiers
5. Polka	Ladies	14. Valse	Model
6. Hymn	Russian	15. Selection—Ours	M. S. B.
7. Quadrille	Medley	16. Galop	Mazeppa
8. Ballad	Mrs of Hartech	17. God save the Queen
9. Varsoviana	Silver Lake

The whole of the pieces were capitally played, and reflected great credit on Mr. W. J. Ison, bandmaster.

THE SURREY MASONIC HALL LIMITED.

ON Wednesday, the 14th July, this Hall is to be designated, and "The Surrey Masonic Hall Lodge" will be consecrated, by Lord Skelmersdale M.W.D.G.M. P.G.M. Lancashire, and other Grand Officers. The following are the officers designate:—M. S. Lanham W.M., W. Ramsey S.W., T. L. Green J.W. Bro. E. Clark P.M., of 19 Buckingham Street, Strand, is the architect, and H. A. Dubois P.M. 1423, P.G.D.C. Middlesex, is the Secretary.

* Lane, at the conclusion, received an extra prize for elocution.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

The Constitution and General Statutes for the Government of the Ancient and Primitive Rite of Freemasonry in and for the Continent of America, also a Complete History of the Rite from its Establishment in America down to the present time, together with translations of Original Manuscripts. Illustrated. Issued under the auspices of the Sovereign Secretary, 33 and last degree, as compiled and amended June 1874. New York: The Excelsior Printing Company, 81, 83 and 85 Centre Street, 1874.

THIS is a handsome volume, bound in maroon and gold, with the portrait of the M.I.S. Grand Master, General of the A. and P. Rite, Alexander B. Mott, M.D., New York, and various other dignitaries of the Rite; also engravings of the seals, jewels, and decorations. It is printed in superior style, on good toned paper, with a red border, and altogether does great credit to the Excelsior Printing Company. Attached to the Constitution is a History of the Rite, and a selection of the names of above 1,500 members, many of them of high Masonic position. Archæologically we differ with the writers in some historical details, they conclude their labours thus: "In conclusion, we cannot refrain from stating that, to the Masonic Fraternity, we have presented in this volume much valuable information, heretofore unwritten, which, we trust, will be of service and accepted by the Craft, and, although our beloved Rite is comparatively young in America, it has all the sterling merits that recommend it to the brotherhood. Its vigour, beauty, and connecting links render it unsurpassed, and its authenticity is undisputable. It is the only Rite in this country that possesses a bond fide Charter, vivé by the Grand Orient of France, the head and highest Masonic authority in the old world."

Veritas. Revelation of Mysteries, Biblical, Historical and Social, by means of the Median and Persian Laws. BY HENRY MELVILLE. Edited by F. Tennyson, and A. Tudor. London: Published for the Author, by A. Hall and Co., 25 Paternoster Row. 1874.

THIS work is written, perhaps purposely, in such an obscure style, that it takes no little pains to follow the author and unravel his meaning. It is a large sized work, with numerous well executed maps and illustrations, and encloses a smaller pamphlet of the working of the laws. The difficulty of mastering the author's views is perhaps one reason why the late Bro. Melville's discoveries have been so unfavourably received; added to this, the author has enthusiastically ridden his hobby to death. Bro. M. imagines that he has discovered in the triple tau, and double equilateral triangles of a Royal Arch Mason, the keys to unlock the symbolism which the ancient hierophants mapped out upon the Celestial Atlas; we do not believe these are Craft Symbols at all, but may have been introduced as such by the Ashmolean Astrologers. Nothing is now better authenticated than the fact that the Cosmogonical account of Genesis and the fall of man are the tradition of old Babylonian Hierophants, and as they did really record such matter in Hieroglyphics, of which the initiates only had the key, it is quite conceivable that Bro. Melville may have discovered the key to unlock the hieroglyphical symbolism of the old Celestial Atlas; but he has made the mistake, we think, of carrying his theory beyond all the bounds of reasonable criticism. The work is dedicated to Mrs. Maria Lane, of Frank Fief, Jersey, widow of the late General Lane, who did so much for Bro. Melville, and we sincerely hope a few members of our brotherhood will push the sale of the work, for the sake of the widow of Bro. Melville, who is quite dependent upon its sale; so we have understood.

MAGAZINES OF THE MONTH.

WE cannot commend too highly the new serial in Blackwood, "The Dilemma." It has reached its third part already, so that enough has been written to show the character of the story. The principal personages, as we have previously remarked, are admirably drawn, and especially the young Subaltern Yorke, whose bold, yet secret aspirations to the hand of Miss Cunningham receive a, to him, unexpected check in the present instalment. "A Sketch of Canada as it now is," and the conclusion of the "Abode of Snow," are among the most important of the other contents, save and except Colonel Grant's Letter on recent African Discoveries. The growing influence of Canada is a subject of congratulation, not only to herself, but to the mother country. The feeling of loyalty in the colony becomes stronger every year. Her most pressing need is immigrants—but of the right sort—hardy, willing to work, and with something to back them at their first start, and these should be forthcoming from among us. We are over thickly populated, and competition in the labour market becomes therefore keener and keener every day. We think a home in Canada—or be it said, rather in the Dominion, for our North American Colonies are now united into one grand dependency—must be preferable in the eyes of a true Briton to a home in the United States or other foreign country. He does not so completely sever himself from all his old associations. He still lives, and in the fulness of time, no doubt, will prosper, under the same old flag. For other reasons this description of Canada is likely to prove of great service. We have a glimpse at the Afghan Border, in this concluding portion of the "Abode of Snow," and sorry are we to part with a writer whose sketches have been so interesting and so instructive. Following this are a series of reviews of current literature, and then comes Colonel Grant's letter, in support of the late Captain Speke's claim to be the true discoverer of the sources of the Nile. Colonel Grant adduces a number of reasons to show this, and that Dr. Livingstone, for whom a writer in the last issue of the Quarterly claims this honour, was never nearer the region traversed by Speke and himself, than when, in company with Mr. Stanley, he inspected the northern extremity of Lake Tanganyika. Colonel Grant, of course, does full justice to the labours of Dr. Livingstone. To students of geography the letter cannot be otherwise than interesting.

We have so often spoken of the merits of the serial fiction in Tinsley's, as being above the usual standard, that we may safely leave our readers to follow their progress. But this is not the only conspicuous feature in this magazine, the poetry is invariably fluent and graceful, and of poetical contributions, not the least deserving are the "Troubadour Songs" of Dr. Maurice Davies, of which one—"The Persuasive Parrot," closes this number. In his Social Status Quo, too, he writes chattily, and his criticisms are generally sound. "The Last Sixpence," and "Mabel," are both pathetic stories, but the latter is painful in its denouement, and, seemingly, without assignable reason. Why might not Mabel and her husband, Ernest Grey, have lived happily ever afterwards? The tale, as told, is more dramatic, perhaps, though truth is often stranger than fiction, but we fancy real live people, as a child would say, would have taken such crossings in life somewhat less demonstratively and less violently. Of the other articles, Mr. W. W. Fenn's "Speaking Walls," and the account of Prince's, are worth reading. We transcribe "To a Robin," by D. G. Potter; it reads so prettily.

Dear Sweet Robin, perched upon a tree,
To me so near;
You seem to love, yet, being free,
You seem to fear.

Who gave you intimation kind
That mortals love—
Reciprocate where love they find
Like souls above?

You sing—as heralding some theme
We should conceive
With greater ease than what a dream
Makes men believe.

We cannot yet translate your words,
Though centuries old;
But one great truth your life affords
As rich as gold.

It is that Nature, sometimes hard,
Gave high behests
Of love she never will discard
On which faith rests.

It is interesting to watch the steady progress of Jabez Clegg towards fortune in the "Manchester Man," the first of the current serials in Cassell's Family Magazine. But the progress, though steady, is far from being uneventful, and Jabez evidently has many serious difficulties to overcome ere the position intended for him is achieved. But pleasant as are this and Mr. Gift's "Pretty Miss Bellew," we value those papers, which are of purely domestic interest far more highly. A Navy Surgeon's "Cure for Sea-Sickness" will be specially welcomed by those who are about holiday seeking on the Continent. "How to keep things Bright," is an important element in kitchen economy. "Savoury Dishes" contain some very sensible suggestions for what may be described as seasonable feeding. The ladies will find much to interest them in "Chit-chat on Dress," while the items which "The Gatherer" has picked up by the way, are readable and sensible. The other contents are equally attractive, but the interest attaching to them is somewhat more ephemeral.

Belgravia takes a high rank, and justly so, among our light periodicals. The serial fiction is invariably good, as evidence of which we may draw our readers' attention to Miss Braddon's "Hostages to Fortune," which has been current for some months past. "Hugh Melton," concluded in the present number, is another case in point, as also is "Sea-Bank Farm," of which we have eight chapters, and in which is manifest a considerable power in depicting characters, both male and female. But it is not to the fiction only that praise is due. The short tales and articles are always lively and interesting. Mr. Sala, for instance, is a writer whose style is justly popular, and his contribution this month—"Left behind at Signora,"—is written more suo; need we say more to show our appreciation of its merits? The author of "Tom Bulkley of Lissington" describes in his paper, headed "Tommy Atkins," the daily routine of life of a private soldier in the British Army. The picture is well drawn, and Tommy now-a-days, at all events, is not the least happy of mankind. He lives well, works hard, and has just leisure enough on his hands to enjoy himself like a reasonable being. Of course "Tommy Atkins" is not always a reasonable being, and not unfrequently comes to grief through his own folly. But there is no just cause or impediment to his getting on well. He is respected by his officers, if not always by the British public, and only a little more is needed to reconcile him perfectly to the condition of life he has chosen to follow. "Predatory Instincts," and Mr. Compton Reade's "Art in the Universities," are both articles worthy of commendation.

REPORTS OF LODGE PROCEEDINGS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—A correspondent in your last issue reminds us that to publish Lodge proceedings is unconstitutional. The point, I venture to think, is debateable. Of this, however, there is no doubt, most of the reports are a great deal too circumstantial. We are pretty frequently doomed to read repetitions such as these: "The Lodge was opened," "The Lodge was called off," "the candidate was entrusted and retired," "The Lodge was closed," &c., &c. To publish our proceedings with all details is, to say the least, impolitic. A general outline is, I think, sufficient for the initiated; and the outside public, who may perchance peruse any of the reports, ought not to be presented with a too lucid description. The idea seems to prevail that to make a report interesting it must occupy a large portion of space. We may, however, take it for granted that, in nine cases out of ten, lengthy accounts are never read. Whereas, a concise statement in general terms is much more likely to be perused, and, besides, possesses the merit of being in accordance with the constitution.

A propos of reporting: I noticed, in the last number of the Sunday Times, under the heading of "Crime and Disaster," that the United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, hitherto held at the Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Brixton, has been removed to the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell Road, and that Bro. P. S. Latham was the preceptor: Poor Brother Latham! Is it a crime or a disaster to be preceptor of a Lodge, or does the announcement refer to the calamity of its removal from its former quarters?

Perhaps reporters, professional or amateur, will take note and be cautious.

Yours fraternally,

E. GOTTHEIL.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK MASONIC HALL.

THE stockholders of this Company, which proposes to build a Masonic Temple in St. John, met in the Masonic Hall, Ritchie's Building, on Monday 7th June, and elected Directors. The architect submitted a front elevation, and gave very full details as to the interior arrangements of the building. It is to be erected on the lot on Germain-street, which lies immediately to the north of Trinity Church. This lot, which has been purchased by the Company from the trustees of the late Benj. Smith, for 18,000 dols., is 100 feet on Germain-street, and extends back 200 feet. It includes what is now known as Smith's Alley. The Company propose to erect a Masonic Temple upon this lot, with a front of 83 feet on Germain-street and to extend back 100 feet. This will leave an alley of 17 feet to the north of the building, or 9 feet wider than the present one. This alley is to go clear to the rear of the lot, a distance of 200 feet. Behind the Temple, and 100 feet from Germain-street, will be a cross alley 20 feet wide, leaving a block 80 feet by 83 in the rear of the lot, of which, while the Company propose to retain the freehold, they intend to lease, for a period of 21 years, to a party who will erect a building there, for warerooms and a clothing manufactory.

The Masonic Temple itself will be four stories in height, built of brick, with handsome stone trimmings, and a flat roof, with a tower on the south-west corner. The entrance, twelve feet wide, will be under this tower, and on the second story will be the Grand Secretary's suite of offices and reception parlour. There will be four stories of Germain-street, extending back the full depth of the building, with ware rooms or show rooms above on the second story, corresponding in size with the shops below. The first two stories will be each 14 feet in height. The two upper stories will be each 30 feet in height. The first of these, which is the third story of the building, will contain a large hall, about 50 by 80 feet, which will be for the meetings of the Grand Lodge and the subordinate Blue Lodges holden under it in the city. In the same story will be a hall devoted to Royal Arch Masonry and to the Grand and Subordinate Councils of Royal and Select Masters and appendant Orders. The fourth story will contain a hall devoted to the Chivalric degrees; the Knight Templars will also have armories in connection with this Hall for their paraphernalia and accoutrements. The remainder of the stories will be fitted up into apartments for the degrees, conferred under the authority of the Supreme Council, of the thirty-third or last degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Royal Order of Scotland, and for the Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, and Knights of the Holy Sepulchre. These apartments will be elaborately fitted up, in accordance with the rituals of these high Orders. The building is to be a substantial and handsome structure, both externally and internally, and worthy of the Order to whose purposes it will be devoted.

It is expected to cost 70,000 dollars, exclusive of the land, but the Company has been incorporated with a capital of 100,000, which they propose to have fully subscribed, and as there are three thousand Masons in the Province, and this will be a Provincial affair, no difficulty is anticipated in realising that amount. In fact, the Masons residing in St. John and adjacent parishes, if they took stock to the extent of 100 dollars each, or five shares, could raise the full amount of the capital, for there are about a thousand members of the Order in this vicinity. The sum of 25,000, is already subscribed, although little or no effort has yet been made, and any deficiency here will be easily made up, for leading Masons in other parts of the Province will contribute largely to the building, and indeed the whole Craft throughout the Province will feel that their interests are identical with the successful completion of this New Brunswick Masonic Temple. The Directors elected at the late meeting of stockholders were John V. Ellis, Robert Marshall, B. L. Peters, Edward Willis, James Domville, James McNichol, Henry Duffell, E. E. Kenny and W. H. A. Keans. The architects of the Temple are Messrs. McKean and Fairweather, and they are now busily engaged with the working plans. The tenants of all the buildings in this large block have been notified that their leases will terminate on the 1st May 1876, when active operations will be commenced on the Temple. It is thought the completion of the New Brunswick Masonic Temple will occupy about two years from that date.

THE DRAMA.

"The Ticket of Leave Man" at the Olympic—The French Opera Company at the Gaiety.—Close of the "Hamlet" Season at the Lyceum.

THERE is always a trump card in reserve in Mr. Neville's hand; in the event of the failure of any of his new pieces he can always revive The Ticket of Leave Man. It is difficult to understand how this piece has so long retained its popularity, it is certainly a well constructed and effective drama, no less could be expected from the hands of Mr. Tom Taylor, who, amongst our dramatic authors, is probably the best judge of stage effect. But, many other dramas, equally well written and equally realistic, have long since been consigned to oblivion. Its exceptional success must be attributed to the remarkably brilliant way in which it was at first played. Nearly every character in the piece was made a study in itself, and no playgoer is likely to forget the Bob Brierly of Mr. Neville, the Hawkshaw of Mr. Horace Wigan, the Melter Moss of Mr. Vincent, or the Jem Dalton of Mr. Atkins. Although the drama has been revived several times in the last ten years, it has generally been arranged so that the principal characters have been played by their original exponents, and the present is the first occasion on which any wholesale change has been made in the cast. Mr. Neville, of course, still plays Bob Brierly, the part in which he established his reputation, and a flavour of which has hovered about all his subsequent creations. Mr. R. Soutar is still the "Trotters," and, although Miss Farren was not the orginal office boy, an honour which belonged to Miss Raynham, she has played the part oftener probably than any one else. But Mr. G. W. Anson now represents the brutal Jem Dalton, and contrives to add new interest to the part which was so well played by Mr. Atkins. Mr. Eldred makes a successful first appearance at this theatre as Melter Moss, but he can hardly hope to efface the memory of Mr. Vincent's marvellous make-up and acting in the same part. In playing a character like that of May Edwards, Miss Fowler is attempting something for which she is unfitted, both by nature and training; she is a good actress in light comedy, but is out of place in melodrama. However, the revival is quite successful, and will, no doubt, run as long as the manager may think necessary.

The most notable incident in the doings of the French company at the GAIETY has been the appearance of M. Tournié. His début in England was made under circumstances which were to some extent disadvantageous to him; for some time past flaming rumours have been in circulation concerning his abilities, and it was impossible that his performance could surpass the promises made on his behalf. It is greatly to his credit that, under these conditions, he has so well satisfied all expectations, and any disappointment felt at his performance must not be attributed to want of ability on his part. M. Tournié appeared as the Zampa of Hérold's opera, a part which Mr. Santley played at the Gaiety some years ago. He possesses a clear, pleasant voice, and a good presence, and has considerable dramatic ability; his singing, however, is not free from that tremolo which is so common amongst French singers, and which is rather distressing to English ears. M. Tournié made a good impression, and will no doubt become a great favourite. We must again call attention to the admirable way in which this company works together. Although they are playing under the embarrassments of a strange theatre and a foreign audience, there is a completeness and finish about their performances which would not be expected, and certainly would not be seen in most English theatres.

On Tuesday night last, Hamlet was played at the LYCEUM for the two hundredth time, a length of run to which this drama has never before attained. Although the performance cannot be said to have lost any of its attractions, Mr. Irving has wisely determined not to prolong the run at the risk of wearying the public, and accordingly Tuesday was the last night. It was natural that, at the close of such a successful experiment, Mr. Irving should wish to address a few words to his many faithful supporters; and in a sensible, graceful speech, he thanked his audience for their favour, alluded tenderly to the lamented death of Mr. Bateman, and gave a slight sketch of future intentions at the LYCEUM. Next season Macbeth will be produced, Mr. Irving, of course, playing the chief character, and afterwards Mr. Tennyson's just published drama, Queen Mary, will be played, with the valuable help of Miss Kate Bateman. All playgoers will wish success to a management which has done so much to elevate the tone of the English drama.

In the days when the Dramatic Fête was celebrated at the Crystal Palace, it was one of the most enjoyable events of the year. A more pleasant exercise of charity did not exist, but in course of time the occasion was abused, and little of the money spent found its way into the proper channel, and, therefore, the Fête was discontinued. It is, however, revived this year, and will be held to-day at the Alexandra Palace. Selections from popular plays will be given, in which all the leading actors and actresses of the day will assist, and the objectionable features of the old Fêtes will be discontinued.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Friday, in the House of Lords, an interesting conversation on the subject of training naval cadets, in which the Earls of Camperdown, Shaftesbury, and Lauderdale, the Duke of Somerset, Lord Hampton, and others took part, was followed by a debate on the second reading of the Ecclesiastical Fees Redistribution Bill, to which the House ultimately agreed. Soon after, an adjournment took place till Monday, when the Endowed Schools Act (1868) Continuance Bill was read a third time. The Duke of Richmond then moved the second reading of the Public Health Bill, a proposition to which, after a brief discussion, their Lordships assented. Lord Waveney having asked a question relating to the Militia, and the Earl of Cadogan having replied, the House soon after rose. There was only a brief sitting on Tuesday. On Thursday, the Pollution of Rivers Bill was discussed in Committee almost clause by clause, and other Bills having been advanced a stage, the House adjourned.

In the House of Commons, on Friday, Mr. Disraeli having offered a few remarks as to the state of public business, Mr. Stacpoole, on the motion for going into Committee of Supply, moved an amendment to the effect that an humble address be presented to Her Majesty, requesting that proper steps might be taken for providing a suitable residence in Ireland for Her Majesty. The debate that followed was, in all respects, satisfactory, save in this, that Dr. Kenealy's speech was, as might be imagined, in singularly bad taste. The amendment was withdrawn. A motion, concerning the Opium Trade, was then proposed by Mr. M. Stewart, seconded by Mr. Pease. Several members took part in the debate, but Lord G. Hamilton, on the part of the Government, resisted the proposition, and it was defeated by 94 to 57. The House then went into Committee of Supply, and several votes were agreed to. The second reading of the Employers and Workmen Bill occupied the early part of Monday's sitting. Nearly all the speakers, among whom were Mr. Lowe, Lord Elcho, Mr. Macdonald, Mr. Forster, and Mr. Burt, congratulated the Home Secretary on the character of this measure, Lord R. Montagu being almost the only dissentient. Mr. Cross gratefully recognised the compliments which had been paid him by both sides of the House, and the Bill was read a second time. The National Debt (Sinking Fund) Bill passed its third reading, soon after which the House went into Committee on the Land Titles and Transfer Bill. An amendment to clause 41 was resisted by the Attorney-General, and, on division, the Government carried their point by 86 to 46. Progress was then reported, the House resumed, and soon afterwards adjourned. There was a morning sitting on Tuesday. On the motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply, Mr. Lowe interposed, in order to call attention to the position of Civilians in India, but he did not press his motion. Lord Elcho then asked a question of the Secretary for War as to the Army Reserve and the approaching Autumn Manœuvres. Mr. Hardy having replied, the House set to work, and passed several votes. At the evening sitting, Mr. Holmes having risen to make a motion on the subject of Army and Navy Expenditure Audit, a count out followed. On Wednesday, Mr. Butt took the sense of the House on the second reading of the County Boards (Ireland) Bill, but he failed to carry his measure at this stage by 182 to 125. On Thursday, Physical Education occupied the first portion of the sitting: the subject being introduced by Mr. Butler-Johnstone. After a short discussion on Governor Eyre's pension, the House went into Committee, when Lord Sandon moved the Education Vote for England and Wales. The speech was a long and able one, and drew encomiums from several members. The Vote was agreed to, as also was the vote for the Science and Art Department. On the House resuming, Mr. Sclater-Booth moved the second reading of the Poor Law Amendment Bill, but the debate was adjourned.

Hurlingham offered one of the most brilliant scenes of the season on Saturday, the attraction being a contest at Polo, between the Horse Guards Blue and the 12th Lancers, for a cup, presented by the Prince of Wales. Besides their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their two sons, the Princes Albert Victor and George, and the Duke of Cambridge, there were present the élite of the fashionable world. The contest was exciting. Only an hour-and-a-quarter were allowed to determine which of the gallant regiments should prove the victor, and it was only after a tremendous contest, in which Fortune seemed to divide her favours with a pretty even hand, that, at last, by a supreme effort, the Blues secured a goal. Time did not admit of any further play, so the cup was awarded to the gallant representatives of the Household Regiment, and was handed to the Hon. C. Fitzwilliam by the Princess. On this occasion the weather was all that could be desired, but on Thursday, when the Prince was to have given a garden party at Chiswick, nothing worse could be well imagined, reminding us of the old Fete days in the Chiswick gardens, when a gleam of sunshine at intervals during the pouring rain was generally looked upon as quite a godsend. In consequence of this over pouring obstacle to al fresco enjoyment, the party is postponed till Monday. The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh embarked, at Woolwich, on board the "Osborne," for a visit to Russia. They will spend a few days at Copenhagen, en route, and then go on to St. Petersburgh, where their visit will extend over several weeks.

On Monday there was a grand field day at Aldershot, some 20,000 men being inspected in the Long Valley by H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief and the Prince of Wales. There were present on the ground the Empress Eugenie, the Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the Sultan of Zanzibar, Mr. G. Hardy, the Secretary of State for War, and many of the nobility and gentry. The force was divided into two army corps, under the command of Major-General Sir H. De Bathe and Major-General Sir John Douglas respectively. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge, on reaching the centre of the line, were received with a Royal salute, the bands playing the National Anthem, and the effect being very imposing. The force then marched past, the Horse Artillery of the first corps leading, followed by the Cavalry, then Artillery, and lastly the Infantry, and then Sir J. Douglas's corps in the same order. A few simple movements, the nature of which were easily comprehended, even by civilians, were then executed, after which the whole line advanced and gave a Royal salute. The Royal party afterwards made a move to the Queen's Pavilion, and having lunched, returned to town by 5 p.m. The Prince Imperial was on duty with Colonel Warde-Ashton's Battery of 16-pounders, to which he is attached, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught was employed on staff duties as Brigade-Major. The military attaché of the French Embassy, and a German Officer of Hussars were on the ground in full uniform.

The same day one of the most attractive matches in the cricketing season was commenced at Lord's. Oxford and Cambridge met to test their relative strength in this national game, and after one of the toughest contests on record, the former secured the victory by six runs only. The weather, the first day, was anything but favourable, but the ground, about the wickets, had been protected by tarpaulin, thus securing a tolerably firm foothold for the batsmen, but not so for the unfortunate bowlers. Play was not commenced till two o'clock, when there may have been some 5,000 spectators assembled. Oxford won the toss, and elected to go in, the result of their performance, till stumps were drawn, being 188, for the loss of only seven wickets. Of these, A. J. Webbe made 55, T. W. Lang 45, A. W. Ridley 21, W. W. Pulman, not out, 19, and F. M. Buckland 22. On Tuesday, play was resumed shortly after 11, and the Oxford innings closed for 200. Cambridge then took its turn, and put together 163, or 37 less than their opponents. To this total, F. G. Greenfield contributed 12, A. F. Lucas 19, G. H. Longman 40, W. Blacker 19, Hon. E. Lyttleton 10, [illegible] successful in their second attempt, being 6h 0m for 174. Of these, Webbe made 21, Pulman 30, Briggs 12, Boole 21, and W. H. Game 22, H. G. Tylecott, not out, 12, and W. Ford-Kelcey 11. This left Cambridge 174 to win, towards which, before stumps were drawn for the day, 4 were made. On Wednesday, of course, the excitement was very great, and as the innings of Cambridge progressed the chances seemed strongly in their favour, 168 of the required number having been obtained, with two wickets yet to fall. But fate had ordained it otherwise; the score was not increased, and thus Oxford proved victors by the small number of six. In the second innings of Cambridge, F. G. Greenfield 18 runs, Longman 23, Hon. E. Lyttleton 20, Sims 39, W. S. Patterson 18, C. M. Sharpe 29, and H. A. Hamilton 11, were the double figures. Thus Oxford has carried off, this year, nearly all the honours, having beat her rival on the river, at athletics, and at Lord's. Next week there will be another grand attraction at Lord's. Eton and Harrow play their annual match on Friday and Saturday next, and lovers of excitement will find ample to satisfy their craving if they visit the renowned headquarters of the M.C.C. on either or both of these days. Those, however, who prefer scientific cricket should visit Lord's on Monday or Tuesday, when the Gentlemen and Players meet for the second time this year. Let us hope the weather will be more auspicious than it was on Thursday, the opening day of the same match at the Oval.

Of other noteworthy events during the past week, we have to record the visit to Dublin of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, accompanied by Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Ellis and Mrs. Ellis. The Lord and Lady Mayoress of York had previously crossed the Irish Channel. It is almost needless to add, that the civic dignitaries of London and York received a hearty welcome from the Lord Mayor of Dublin. The good people of Dublin, also, were very enthusiastic at the arrival in their city of these important functionaries, who were cheered to the echo as they passed in state through some of the leading streets of the Irish capital. We may add, also, that the American team of riflemen, who came over from the United States a short time since for a friendly trial of skill with an Irish rifle team, have proved victorious in the struggle by 38 points. The conditions were 15 shots at each of the three ranges, 800, 900, and 1,000 yards. At the first range the Irish headed their opponents by one point, the aggregate score being, Ireland 338, America 337. At the 900 yards, however, the latter took a decided lead, scoring 327 to the Irish 291, thus beating them by 35. The contest was very close at 1,000 yards, but here again America increased her lead, though to a very slight extent, the scores being 302, while Ireland was close at her heels with 299. Thus the total of the scores at the three ranges were America 967, Ireland 929, majority for the former 38. We believe the American team have accepted an invitation to Wimbledon. They will be sure to meet with an enthusiastic reception, and we trust a farther opportunity may be offered them of showing their skill with the rifle against an English or a Scotch eight. A Canadian team have already arrived, and as probably some Belgians will put in an appearance at the annual meeting of the National Rifle Association there ought to be no difficulty in arranging terms for another International match.

Digitized by Google

There is a dearth of political news, Royal and Imperial visits being almost the only matters to record, save that hostilities are being carried on in Spain, but apparently without result. But if there is little worth mentioning in politics, there is one terrible calamity which cannot be passed unnoticed. The fearful inundations which have destroyed a great part of Toulouse, and caused such fearful loss of life and property both in that city and in its neighbourhood, are almost unexampled. The scene, as described by the correspondents of the various daily papers, must have been heart rendering, and the floods rose so rapidly, there was no time to organize measures for preserving life, much less property. St. Cyprien, a suburb of the famous old city, is entirely swept away. Some hundreds of lives have been lost, while the damage to property is incalculable. The chief loss will fall, of course, upon the crops, and it is estimated that the number of people who will have to be provided for during the next few months will fall little short of 60,000, of whom one half belong to Toulouse and its immediate neighbourhood. President MacMahon deserves the highest credit for the promtitude with which, on the news of the disaster reaching Paris, he set out for the scene of the disaster in order personally to superintend the labours for rescuing life and property. The Assembly has already voted a credit of two millions of francs towards relieving the immediate necessities of the sufferers, and, doubtless, subscriptions will flow in from all quarters. Now is a grand opportunity for Germany to prove to the world, by the readiness of her contributions towards these poor sufferers, that the illwill, bred of the late war, is political only. If she is generous now, she will do far more to secure peace and the goodwill of France than ever she can hope to do by large armies and overbearing diplomacy. We gladly note that our French brethren were among the first to send aid to the sufferers, and we trust that London will not fail in her duty towards a nation who was, not so many years since, our firm ally. Nor should we forget to mention that His Holiness the Pope has remitted 20,000 francs towards the relief fund, and has expressed, through the Papal Nuncio at Paris, the grief which he feels at the disaster that has overtaken one of the most fertile parts of France.

A meeting of the Board of Stewards for the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Monday, the 28th ult., at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, the R.W. Bro. Lord Balfour of Burleigh P.G.W. in the chair. Bro. F. Binckes, the Hon. Secretary, read the minutes of the former meeting, which were confirmed. Final arrangements were then made. Bro. J. Rucker P.G.D. proposed a cordial vote of thanks to the noble chairman. The meeting was then dissolved, and Bro. Webster, &c., proceeded to ballot for places. There were present Bros. J. Rucker, Taylor, Palmer, Parsons, H. Massey, Webster, Montague, J. Abrahams, Cox, H. M. Levy, Barfield, Sabine, Bingeman, Braun, Lane, G. Verry, Hose, &c.

The Chairman of the Officers and Clerks Committee, Bro. Thos. Beard P.M. 101, entertained the members at a banquet, at the Alexandra Palace, on Friday evening, where the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor, Bro. D. H. Stone, G.J.W., and the Lady Mayoress, Mr. Alderman Sydney, Sir Robert W. Carden, Bros. E. Hart, Pannell, Roberts, Harris, &c., were present.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

THE 77th Anniversary Festival will be held at the Alexandra Palace, on Wednesday, 7th July 1875. The general arrangements, as approved by the Board of Stewards, Wednesday, 2nd June 1875, are as follows:—

The Stewards to be divided into two bodies:—

1. Distinguishing colour of dinner tickets, badges, &c. Pink.
2. Ditto " " " " Blue.

(The distinctive colours will be maintained through all the details.)

1. Stewards, Ladies and Brethren, with Pink tickets, will meet in the large Saloon on the right of entrance—marked A.

The Ante-room to be reserved for the use of the Stewards of the Pink Division.

2. Stewards, Ladies and Brethren, with Blue Tickets, will meet in the large Saloon on the left of entrance—marked B.

The Ante-room to be reserved for the use of Stewards of the Blue division.

The badges for each division will be distributed in the respective rooms by a Steward entrusted with their charge; the ground colours being respectively Crimson and Purple.

Wands will be borne by Special Stewards only.

On the arrival of the Chairman, he will be received by the Officers of the Board and conducted to the room at the west of Saloon A, where presentations, if any be necessary, will be made.

The Chairman may then—should he either approve or desire it—be introduced formally to the company assembled in Saloon A; pass through Stewards' Ante-room, and be similarly introduced to the company assembled in Saloon B.

At a given signal the Stewards and their friends in Saloon A will pass up the staircase—on reaching the corridor on first floor, turn to the right and enter the Banquet Room by the two doors lettered C and D, and take their seats at the tables numbered 2 to 9 on the left of the Chair.

That done, the Stewards and their friends in Saloon B will proceed similarly, turning to the left on reaching the corridor, and enter the Banquet Room by the two doors lettered A and B, and take their seats numbered 10 to 17 on the right of the Chair.

The company seated, the Chairman will enter, accompanied by the House Committee of the Institution, the Officers of the Board, and the Grand Officers, for all of whom seats will be provided at the long table.

A Private Drawing Room at the western end of the Banquet Hall, known as the "Western Tower Saloon," will be reserved for the exclusive use of Ladies.

The General Drawing-Room, in which the Evening Concert will be given, will be the large Saloon on the Ground Floor letter B—colour, Blue.

In the Saloon on the Ground Floor—letter A, colour Pink, Light Refreshments—Tea, Coffee, Lemonade, Ices, &c., will be served throughout the evening after the Banquet.

The Room on the Ground Floor—in which the Chairman was received—will be reserved as a Smoking Room.

Special trains will be provided, leaving the Palace Station for King's Cross at 9.30 and 10 p.m.

For those driving to the Festival, accommodation for horses and carriages will be found in the Palace Stabling, &c., on payment of one shilling per horse.

The Institution at Wood Green, distant one mile from the Palace, will be open throughout the day for inspection by visitors to the Festival.

The following are the regulations as to Masonic Clothing and Jewels:—

Full Masonic Craft Clothing and Jewels to be worn.

By Special Command of H.R.H. The M.W. GRAND MASTER—

No Masonic Clothing or Jewel of any kind shall be worn either on going to, or returning from, that portion of the Palace set apart for the Festival—nor during the Festival in any balcony, or place, in sight of the Public.

Brethren will clothe after entering the Saloons A and B.

Stewards are particularly requested to be most careful in enforcing the rigid observance of these regulations.

By order,

FREDERICK BINCKES,

Hon. Sec. Board of Stewards.

The R.W.P.G.M., Viscount Holmesdale, M.P. has arranged that the Provincial Grand Festival of Kent be holden at Gravesend, on Tuesday, 6th of July next. The arrangements of the Committee at Gravesend, for the Festival, are: Breakfast to Provincial Grand Officers, past and present, and W.M.'s, P.M.'s and Wardens of Lodges, at the Clarendon Hotel, at 10 o'clock; Lodge at the Milton Hall at 12; Church Service at the Parish Church at 1.30; Banquet at the Assembly Rooms at 4. Application has been made to the Railway Company to grant Return Tickets at a Single Fare.

The "Hall by the Sea," Margate, is now open, under proprietorship of Bro. Sanger, and under direction of Mr. Arthur Reeve. Several additions have been made to the rare specimens of birds and animals, including four elephants. The dens are illuminated at night. There is a very excellent concert, the Bros. Wills, Mr. Brooks, Miss Eliza Ward, and a capital band, under the direction of Mr. E. Crosse. A ball is given every evening, at 8.30. An anticipatory ball is given at the Assembly Rooms, Margate, under the management of Bro. Edwin Villiers. Bro. Jarvis is the M.C.

A committee has been formed for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Bro. Thos Meekham P.M., in recognition of his services as one of the Masters of the Ceremonies, for many years, at the Licensed Victuallers' School and Asylum Balls, the Protection Society Ball, &c.

The fifteen sections were worked by Bro. Crawley, Preceptor, in the Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction, meeting at the Approach Tavern, Approach Road, Victoria Park, on Friday last, assisted by Bros. Ashburner, Henry Lloyd, Cronch, Crane, Gross, Wallington, Allen, Christian and Horsley. There was a good attendance of brethren. Young members are recommended to pay a visit to this Lodge, where they will receive that instruction so ably given by the worthy Preceptor.

On Tuesday, the 22nd ult., Bro. Frostick, of Westgate-on-Sea, who had been initiated in the Old Concord Lodge, and, by the courtesy of the W.M., was passed and raised to the 3rd degree in the Union Lodge, No. 127, entertained the W.M., officers and brethren at the King's Head, High Street, Margate, at a very sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Smith. The meeting was a very agreeable and social one. Some very eloquent and appropriate speeches were made, by Bros. Frostick, J. Compton P.M., Teakins P.M. and Hennah.

Bro. Captain Boyton will cross the Firth of Forth in his life saving dress, and with the aid of a paddle and a sail, on the 17th inst.

A grand concert will be held in St. George's Hall, Langham Place, on the evening of Thursday, the 15th instant, for the benefit of the widow of the late Bro. Richard Limpus. Our late respected brother was the founder of the College of Organists, and had held the position of honorary secretary and treasurer from its commencement to his death. It was mainly owing to his exertions that the Benevolent Fund attached to the College was established, and not only so but through his efforts it is that the College has attained its present high position. Bro. Limpus was a man of eminence in his profession, and had filled the post of Organist to St. Michael's, Cornhill, for over five-and-twenty years. He was also Prov. G. Organist for Middlesex. His death occurring prematurely, it was out of his power to make provision for his widow. Hence, the subscription lists which have been opened under the auspices of the College of Organists. Hence, too, the concert fixed for the 15th instant, when many distinguished artistes have freely offered their services. We trust both the testimonial and the concert may be productive of good.

MASONIC ORIGIN OF "BROTHER JONATHAN."

THE Grand Secretary of Ohio claims to have discovered the origin of "Brother Jonathan," and glories in his discovery, because it is connected with Freemasonry. The hero of his romance is Jonathan Belcher, a Boston boy, the son of a merchant, who obtained his father's consent to visit Europe. The author says:

"In the spring of 1700, in his twentieth year, young Jonathan bade good-bye to his indulgent parent, and the ambitious youth sailed for the port of Liverpool [more likely Bristol or London]. On reaching London, his social position and graces gave him entrée into the refined society of the city, and the universities [what universities?], and to the court of King William III."

"This monarch had been privately initiated into Masonry by the venerable architect, Sir Christopher Wren, and became enthusiastic in what now was termed the royal art, so much so as to preside in a Lodge specially erected for him in the regal apartments of Hampton Court, where he and his favourites spent many festive hours."

"Young Yankee and old Architect affiliated admirably; Young Curious and Old Curiosity became consorts at once."

Young Jonathan in Holland, during King William's visit there "was a card among the burgomasters; he also visited the Electress at Hernhausen, where she studied philosophy in the garden, and became a great favourite of herself, her son, and grandson, afterward George I., and II., who, by the bye, were both Masons."

"Six years were spent in travels, the most impressive of the experiences of which were those of Holland, and in fraternal relations with the young Elector of Hanover, and in England with Sir Christopher Wren. * * *

"In 1702, the year Jonathan became a Mason, the King having fallen from his horse in Bush Park, died, and the court were in mourning. Of those in the funeral array, none attracted more attention, as, clothed with a Masonic collar and jewel, he left Kensington Palace for the sepulture of royalty in the chapel of Henry VII., Westminster. The people eagerly pointed out the American. 'That is Bro. Jonathan, so familiarly called by the old King.'

"The aged Christopher Wren never attracted so much attention as on the funeral occasion of King William, who had received the Masonic degrees at his hand" [at a period when there were no degrees].

Glory to the Grand Lodge of Ohio and its Right Worshipful Grand Secretary, who was inspired with a revelation, out-revealing the Revelation of a Square! For the first time we are informed procession, attended by Sir Christopher Wren and brother architects, clothed in Masonic paraphernalia. And to substantiate the fact of Brother Jonathan's Masonization in 1702, the R.W. Ohio brother cites from a letter of Jonathan Belcher, addressed to a Boston Lodge in 1741, as follows:

"It is now thirty-nine years since I was admitted in the ancient and honourable society of Free and Accepted Masons."

Hence, he was made a Mason in 1702, and hence Bro. Jonathan was entitled to wear the Masonic collar and jewel, and to march in Masonic procession in company with Sir C. Wren at Bro. William's funeral in 1702. This wonderful discovery I have already seen reprinted in a Masonic paper, and ere this communication appears the Bro. Jonathan story will probably appear in other papers, without any challenge. It is a pity to spoil such a fine story; but I am of opinion that Masonic history is already overloaded with such stories, and can do very well without new additions. Briefly then, the letter of Gov. Belcher, above referred to, does not state "thirty-nine years since," but thirty-seven years since; hence, Jonathan Belcher was not initiated until 1704, or two years after the funeral of William III.

I must here relate a very curious fact in connection with the romance of King William's initiation in a private Lodge, as above stated. The Rev. Bro. A. F. A. Woodford is undoubtedly the most accomplished scholar, and one of the most assiduous Masonic students, now contributing to the Masonic press in England. At my interview with that distinguished brother last year, Bro. W. informed me, that some few years ago he was invited to deliver a Masonic address before a Lodge in the town or neighbourhood where he officiated as pastor of the Episcopal church. To prepare himself for the required task, he took up Anderson's History of Masonry, and the story of King William's initiation in a private Lodge in his palace made him pause. "I asked myself," he said, "Is there any foundation for this statement of Anderson? And upon careful enquiry I came to the conclusion that it was apocryphal; this inquiry impelled me to continue in my researches, and was the cause of my becoming a Masonic Student."—Bro. Jno. Newton.

We extract the following items from the Ottawa Weekly Citizen:—

Arrangements are being made for a grand Masonic moonlight excursion down the Ottawa, on the steamer Pearl-ve. The date has not yet been fixed: the mere fact of its being a Masonic Excursion will ensure its success.

At a meeting of the Builders' Lodge, held last evening, the following were elected as officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. S. Rogers W.M., T. Kean S.W., W. Mills J.W., W. D. Wilson Treasurer, W. Rae Secretary, McCarthy Tyler.

Rodda 105 P.P.G.R., C. Rodda 105, W. Laxon 1905, J. K. Lord P.M. and T. 1247, J. May P.M. 223, E. Martin I.P.M. 1212, F. A. Thomas P.M. 1247 P.G.S.D., H. S. Hill 223 J.D., R. Franklin P.M. 1 (Ireland), W. Harries S.W. 1205, J. W. Cornish P.M. 223, &c., &c. The Lodge having been opened by the W.M., with that promptness which has distinguished his year of office, and the minutes (containing a grant to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, at the forthcoming Festival, of which Bro. Curtois had previously intimated his intention of acting as Steward) having been confirmed, the ballot was taken for Bros. Eldin and Laxon as joining members, and for Messrs. Holmes and Coombes, as candidates for initiation, and it proving unanimous in their favour, the last named gentlemen were admitted to light, the ceremony being performed by the W.M. in his wonted correct and impressive style. This pleasing duty having been concluded, the W.M. said as that would be the last occasion on which it would be his good fortune to address the whole of the brethren present, in the position he then occupied, he thought it would not be out of place if he addressed to them a few remarks as to the events which had signalised the past year, which had been a most auspicious and eventful one for the Craft generally, and especially for the brethren of the Province of Devon, for, in the first place, they had had the opportunity of attending the great, grand, and glorious reception which the Masons of Devon and Cornwall had given his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, when he opened the New Guildhall at Plymouth, such a spectacle as few Masons up to that time had witnessed, and again many had had the proud privilege of being present at a yet greater, grander, and more magnificent assembly of Freemasons when his Royal Highness was installed in the high and dignified position of M.W.G.M. It had occurred to him that such occasions as these should not pass unnoticed, or without some permanent memento of them being in the Lodge; with this object the members who had attended Grand Lodge on the 28th of April last, had a photograph taken, which, as enlarged, he begged to present to the Lodge. In conclusion, he thanked his officers for the zealous and efficient manner in which they had assisted him during his year of office in the duties of his important situation. The photograph having been unveiled, Bro. Rodd, the senior Past Master, paid a high tribute to the zeal, ability and courtesy that had characterised Bro. Curtois' conduct in the chair during the past year, holding him up as an example for others to imitate, and proposed a resolution, not only recognising his important services, but thanking him for his very elegant and timely gift. This was seconded by Bro. Latimer I.P.M. in the most cordial terms, and the motion was carried by acclamation. Bro. Rae P.M., Secretary of the Lodge, then gave notice of his intention to move, at its next regular meeting, that a P.M.'s jewel, or some other tangible recognition of his services, be presented to the W.M., and in so doing took occasion to remark that, in Lodge Sincerity, such a presentation meant more than it did in many other Lodges, where jewels were regularly voted whether the W.M. had worked well or not; but there could be no doubt that Bro. Curtois had worked as unexceptionally as his year of office had been distinguished by events which it was impossible should occur again in the lifetime of the brethren present. The Lodge was then passed and raised to the higher degrees, and Bro. Latimer was duly installed according to ancient custom in the chair of K.S., the work being performed in a faultless manner by the retiring Master, who had won the admiration of all by his highly successful realisation of the beauty and impressiveness of the ceremonial, and a spontaneous burst of hearty applause greeted him on his taking his seat. The newly installed W.M. invested his officers as follow:—J. E. Curtois I.P.M., T. Waldo How S.W., J. E. Moon J.W., T. S. Bayly Treasurer, R. H. Rae Secretary, Rev. T. W. Lemon S.D., G. Jackson J.D., C. Croydon I.G., Col. Fitzgerald D.C., Horton O., T. W. Hussey and J. Fouracre Stewards. At the conclusion of the ceremony the brethren adjourned to an adjoining room and partook of a cold collation. The speeches following were hearty, cordial, and brief. "The Queen," and "The Prince of Wales, G.M. of England" having been honoured, the W.M. gave in terms fully appreciative of their high qualities, "The P.G.M. and the D.P.G.M., of Devon, Provincial Officers past and present." W. Bro. I. Latimer made the response highly eulogising R.W. Bros. Hayshe and Metham for that work and example which would outlive them many a year. The toast of the evening, "The newly installed W.M." was given in a few complimentary sentences by Bro. Curtois, and Bro. A. Latimer, in his response, spoke of the confidence he felt owing to the presence in the Lodge of such efficient Past Masters and officers. Bro. Curtois and the W. Bro. from Ireland responded for "The Past Masters, and Bro. Rodda, in a suggestive speech, for "The Visitors." At the suggestion of P.M. Rodd the officers of "Sincerity" Lodge were toasted, the respondents being Bros. Rae, How, and Moon, and with "Our newly initiated brethren" and "Our poor and distressed brethren, wherever depressed; speedy relief to them" a very pleasantly spent evening was brought to a close.

Devonshire Lodge, No. 625.—Lodge meeting held on 23rd of June, at the Norfolk Hotel, Glossop. Present—Bros. George E. Cox W.M., Joseph M. Stafford S.W., John Hardman J.W., William H. Irlam S.D., Joseph Collier J.D., John Nield Steward, David Davis Winterbottom Treasurer. Past Masters Bros. John Hall, William Dawson. Visitors, Bros. Robert Taylor P.M. Secretary 287. Business transacted:—The Lodge was opened and the minutes were confirmed. Mr. R. J. Lees and Mr. J. T. Armitage was ballotted for, and approved. Bro. J. Hadfield was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The ceremonies were delivered in a very impressive manner by the W.M., and all the officers were perfect.

St. John's Lodge, No. 795.—A meeting of this summer Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 22nd ult., at the Ray Mead Hotel, Maidenhead. Bros. C. W. Moule W.M., J. H. Sadler as S.W., C. Gammon P.M. Treasurer, H. H. Hodges P.M. Secretary, J. R. Foulger P.M. S.D., G. A. Terry I.G., C. Nowell Tyler; Past Masters T. A. Carr, C. N. Harvey; Bros. J. J. Ewer and R. Turner. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. Bro. D. W. Bell, 90, was elected a joining member. Messrs. A. P. Leite, W. H. C. Sharpe and T. Slater were initiated into the Order, by the courtesy of the W.M., by Bro. T. A. Carr P.M. Three brethren were proposed for initiation. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren partook of an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Lewis. Bro. Moule W.M. presided. The usual toasts followed. The visitors were:—Bros. Dr. Ramsey Prince of Wales's Lodge, Nos. 259 and 778, and E. Harfield P.M. 185.

Mid Sussex Lodge, No. 1141.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Monday, the 21st of June, at Assembly Rooms, Horsham. Present—Bros. J. O. McCarogher W.M., W. G. Sharp S.W., Alfred Agate J.W., E. Taylor Secretary, W. Linstott Treasurer, Geo. Bishop S.D., T. Harms D.C., T. W. Thorpe Steward, C. Hilton I.G., W. Randall Tyler. Past Masters Bros. W. Challen, H. Figg, T. Oliver, Visitors, Bros. E. Booty, Royal Clarence Lodge, Brighton; W. Read W. M. Howard Lodge, Arundel, No. 56. Business:—Installation of W.M., appointment and investiture of officers.

Egerton Lodge, No. 1392.—A meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 23rd June, at the Stanley Arms, Bury. In all likelihood there will be no summer vacation this year—in fact the present meeting was of an extra character—in consequence of the amount of business to transact and the aim of the officers to keep their work well under hand. At this meeting there were present Bros. Richard Pilkington W.M., William Brown S.W., Jos. Metcalf J.W., William Burgess S.D., Wm. Hutchinson J.D., Thos. Shaw I.G., Geo. Brown Tyler, Wm. Shaw Treasurer, Jos. Barlow Secretary and P.M., J. W. Crossley P.M.; Visitor, Bro. J. Randle Fletcher P.M. 191, and nearly a score of other brethren. Mr. John Agar, watchmaker, &c., was initiated into Masonic mysteries by the W.M., the charge being given by Bro. Shaw I.G. There were two propositions for initiation. The Lodge was afterwards opened in the second degree, when Bro. Fred. Wilkinson was crafted by the W.M. A substantial supper was afterwards discussed by 28 brethren.

Hamer Lodge, No. 1393.—On the afternoon of Tuesday,

22nd June, the periodical installation in connection with the Hamer Lodge, No. 1893, took place at the Clarence Hotel, Everton-road, Liverpool, when Bro. Henry Jackson was placed in the chair of W.M., having been elected to that office by the unanimous vote of the members. The other officers invested were Bros. R. H. Evans I.P.M., J. M'Carthy S.W., E. Datch J.W., C. Tyrer Treasurer, T. Large Secretary, T. Sammons S.D., R. Price J.D., R. Leason I.G., J. Price D.C., T. Brown S.S., C. Phillips J.S., and H. Hindle Organist. The brethren dined in the evening at the "Harrington," Harrington Street.

Hyde Park Lodge of Instruction, No. 1425.—A meeting was held at the Westbourne Restaurant, Craven Road, Bayswater, on Monday, the 28th June. Present—Bros. Gellion W.M., Stiles S.W., Savage J.W. Alais S.D., Longhurst J.D., Death I.G., Read P.M. Preceptor and Secretary, and Bros. Cole, Cragg, Dykes, Bullock, Aitchison, Urry, and Crattenden P.M. The Lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer, and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was ably rehearsed. Bro. Cole candidate. The first and second sections of the first lecture were worked by the brethren, under the direction of Bro. Savage J.W., and the third and fourth section of this lecture were also worked by the brethren, under the direction of Bro. Read Preceptor. Bro. Stiles S.W. was unanimously elected W.M. at evening meeting. The Lodge was closed in due form and perfect harmony.

Sir Watkin Lodge, No. 1477.—On Monday, the 21st of June, Brother Horatio Lloyd P.M. P.S.G.W., Cheshire, county court judge for North Wales and Recorder of Chester, was installed W.M. of the Sir Watkin Lodge, No. 1477, at Mold. In consequence of the general respect and esteem in which Judge Lloyd is held, a dispensation had been obtained for holding the Lodge in a large room in the Market Hall, where a large number of members and visitors could be accommodated. Since the present W.M. has been appointed county court judge for the Principality, he has taken up his residence near Mold. The Sir Watkin Lodge has only been established about a year and a half, during which time Bro. J. Salmon P.S.G.B. North Wales, and P.G.S.D. Cheshire, has been the W.M. Upon this occasion the retiring officers of the Lodge were Bros. J. Corbett J.W., S. Beresford Sec., Rev. Edwards Chaplain, Alderman Potts S.D., J. Williams J.D. G.E. Org., J. E. Birch I.G. There was an excellent attendance of members of the Lodge and of visiting brethren. Among the latter were Bros. A. F. Watts P.M. (Abergele), W. Johnson W.M. 721 (Chester), Robert Jones 241 (Merchants' Lodge, Liverpool, and G. Bradley 1,836 (Wrexham), R. J. Simcox W.M. P.G.S. 1143 (Denbigh), E. B. Smith W.M. 1433 (Oswestry), J. O. Robinson W.M., J. M'Hattie S.W., T. Wood P.M., S. Spencer P.G.S. 425 (Chester). The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. Salmon, the retiring W.M., in an exceedingly appropriate and solemn manner, the W.M. elect being presented by Bro. Dr. Spratley (Liverpool). The installed W.M. then appointed as his officers, Bros. J. Corbett S.W., A. Potts J.W., J. Williams S.D., J. D. Birch J.D., and Rowlands I.G. The Secretary, Organist, and Chaplain were reappointed. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. presented P.M. Bro. J. Salmon with a handsome and valuable P.M.'s jewel, accompanying it with an expression of thanks to him, on the part of the Lodge, as one of its founders and chief workers. The brethren retired for refreshment to the Star Hotel, where an excellent banquet was served. The W.M. presided, and the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The health of Sir W. W. Wynne M.P. R.W.G.M., and the rest of the Officers of the P.G. Lodge, was responded to by Bro. Simcox. "The W.M. and Officers of the Sir Watkin Lodge," and "The immediate P.M. and Installing Master" were responded to by Bros. H. Lloyd and Salmon. On Tuesday, the 22nd June, a large party of ladies and gentlemen—the latter being members of Masonic Lodges in North Wales, Shropshire and Cheshire, but principally belonging to the Sir Watkin Lodge, Mold—visited Wynnstay Hall, the seat of Bro. Sir W. W. Wynn M.P. R.W.P.G.M. By the kindness of the worthy baronet, the apartments were thrown open to the visitors, and the inspection of the paintings, sculptures, tapestry, &c., afforded a fine treat to the excursionists. A banquet was served in the park, near the gate leading to the village. Afterwards, Bro. Edwards, chaplain, presented Bro. Salmon P.M. P.G.S.B., in the name of the Sir Watkin Lodge, with a valuable gold chronometer watch and a lady's gold chain and locket. In doing so, the reverend brother said that Bro. Salmon had been everything to that Lodge while it had existed, and had conducted its ceremonies in a manner second to none in the Province. (Loud applause). Bro. Salmon, in acknowledging the gift, said he had but done his duty; and he would have experienced great difficulty in getting through the work had it not been for the services of a younger but more able Mason than himself—he alluded to Bro. J. Worrall P.M. P.Z. P.G.S.B. He had great pleasure in presenting Bro. Worrall, in the name of the Lodge, with a handsome tea and coffee service. (Loud applause). Bro. Worrall, in thanking the Lodge for the presentation, congratulated it on having so distinguished a Mason and so respected a judge as Bro. Horatio Lloyd for their W.M. The party afterwards visited the various localities of the park and neighbourhood, returning to tea in the evening, and leaving at a comparatively early hour.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1507.—A meeting was held at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville Road, Kings Cross, on Friday, the 25th June. Present—Bros. Kingham W.M., Shand S.W., Dawkins J.W., Shankland S.D., Read J.D., Carter I.G., Adams P.G.P. Preceptor, Stiles Secretary, and Bros. Scales, Jones, Michael, Reepe, Caret, and Tittenborn. The Lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer, and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Bro. Caret offered himself as a candidate for passing, and having duly qualified himself, was entrusted and withdrew. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Caret passed to the degree of F.C. The W.M. called off from labour to refreshment, and afterwards called on from refreshment to labour. The Lodge was resumed to the first degree, and the ceremony of initiation ably rehearsed, Bro. Carter candidate. Bro. Dawkins J.W. unanimously elected W.M. at ensuing meeting, in consequence of the S.W. stating his inability to attend. The Lodge was closed in due form, and perfect harmony.

Chislehurst Lodge, No. 1531.—A meeting of this Lodge, lately consecrated, was held on Saturday, the 26th ult., at the Bull's Head Hotel, Chislehurst, Bro. J. Coutts P.G.P. W.M. in the chair, Bros. G. S. Guest S.W., W. Kipps J.W., F. Walters P.G.P. Middlesex Treasurer, J. Griffin P.M. Secretary, H. Gloster S.D., J. Mason J.D., W. Hardman I.G., J. Fox W.S., Hutchings D.C., S. Abbott P.M. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of the consecration meeting were read and confirmed. The following brethren were balloted for and accepted as joining members:—J. Mason 1423, J. Hutchings 147, Fox 1275, Hunt 79 and Abbott P.M. 192. Messrs. E. Kipps, J. R. Hooker and R. C. Crick were initiated. The Lodge was then closed, and a 1878 summonses banquet followed, after which the brethren [illegible] down. The visitors were Bros. C. Mallet S.D. 141 and 1326, and J. W. Reed 13.

THANET CONCLAVE, No. 121, MARGATE.

THE consecration of this Royal and Imperial Conclave of Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine will take place on Wednesday, the 21st July, at the Freemasons' Hall, Margate, at one o'clock precisely. The M.P.S. Designate, Sir Knight Mannering W. Bolton, and the Eminent Kns: Designate, Sir Knight T. Morant Compton, will be installed by Col. Fras. Burdett, the Grand Viceroy, assisted by Sir Knight R. Wentworth Little, G. Treas., and Sir Knight H. A. Dubois, A.G. Treas., and other officers of the Grand Council and Senate. A banquet will afterwards take place, at 4.30, at the King's Head Hotel, Margate, where Sir Knights of this illustrious order can obtain tickets. We understand that so many as twelve M.M.'s of high repute, residing in Gravesend, Rochester, Sheerness, Dover, Broadstairs, Ramsgate, Guildford, and Woking, are candidates for installation, and this new Conclave is likely to become one of the most numerous and flourishing in the Order.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Thousands of testimonials bear witness to the wonderful ease and comfort obtained from these safe remedies. The Ointment, rubbed diligently into the surface of the bowels, is especially serviceable in assuaging the sufferings from abdominal cramps, and in allaying the nausea and vomiting of Diarrhœa, Dysentery, and choleraic complaints; the Ointment is materially aided and assisted by the judicious use of the Pills internally, which removes all morbific matter from the intestines and puts the system, in the quickest manner possible, into a fit condition for any work that may be required of it. All sufferers from piles, fistulas and chronic sores, will find the very greatest comfort from the use of them.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

THE REV. SIR E. R. JODRELL, BART. TO MESSRS. FELTOE & SONS, 27 ALBEMARLE STREET, W.

WHEN at Sall I received an Analytical Report of your "SPECIALITE" SHERRY, and you must forgive me for saying that at first I regarded the whole matter as a most egregious piece of humbug. Having, however, tasted the Wine in question, and found it most agreeable to the palate, I determined, on my own responsibility, to have it analysed for myself, having fully also determined previously to expose any hoax, pro bono publico, or to give you the benefit of the analysis, should it turn out in your favour. I have the pleasure to forward you Professor Redwood's (of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain) Analysis, which says more than I can express. I am very particular as to the wine I drink, and as I have been hitherto buying every-day Sherry at 60s per dozen, I am rejoiced to find now that I can purchase Wine of equal strength and superior bouquet at half that price. This should be known to the general public, and you can make any use you deem proper of this letter, and also of Professor Redwood's most elaborate Analysis.

21 Portland Place, London. Yours faithfully, (Signed) EDWARD REPPS JODRELL.

AN OLD SONG RE-SET.

OUR attention has been drawn to sundry remarks in a recent issue of the Universe, which appears to be a thorough-paced exponent of the extremest ultramontanism. We say "appears," for we know absolutely nothing of the journal, or the influence it exerts on public opinion. We imagine, however, it finds readers among that narrow-minded section of Roman Catholics who are nothing if not bigoted; who, professing Christianity, daily and even hourly violate all the fundamental principles of the Christian faith; to whom the love, truth, and honour which the Divine founder of that Holy religion sought ever to inculcate in the minds of its followers, are as unknown as is Christianity itself to the aborigines of central and unexplored Africa; who, proposing to throw light on holy things, are themselves in the profoundest depths of ignorance as to the true meaning of holiness. This being so, it will not unnaturally be urged, Why trouble yourselves to resent an attack from a journal so worthless? Masonry is strong, and all the canting jesuitical venom of the political priest and his minions can do it no injury. Be it so, but the attack in this case has not been levelled directly at our Order, but in the first instance, at a most respectable organ of Christian Roman Catholicism, an organ which has exhibited what is now-a-days described as "the courage of its opinions." No long time since, this journal —which bears the very honourable title of Catholic Opinion, and is doubtless far more universal in its influence on the Catholic mind than its pretentious contemporary, the Universe—Catholic Opinion, we say, not long since, took the Universe to task for disloyally suggesting that in future the health of the Prince of Wales, "should be omitted from the list of toasts at Catholic dinners." It argued, "as loyal subjects of the Queen, we drink the health of the Prince of Wales as the heir apparent to the throne of England, not in his capacity as Grand Master of the Free-reasons." And it followed up this distinction by pertinently asking, "Is our contemporary (the Universe) anxious that Mr. Gladstone should have some grounds for his accusation of the disloyalty of Catholics?" These reasons must carry weight, and, indeed, naturally suggest themselves to every high minded English gentleman, be he Roman Catholic or Protestant. But what is natural in the sight of men of honour, is contemptible, nay, even beneath contempt, in the eyes of the Universe. It rejoins — "Our answer is that 'we deeply regret' that a contemporary, long supposed to be friendly to the Pope, should thus show a mixed allegiance. The Prince of Wales is not a sovereign, he is only a subject; he does not in any way represent our Queen; he may never reign, and we owe to him, as yet, no allegiance whatever." From this we are justified in drawing these two conclusions. 1st. The loyalty, if any, which the Universe feels towards its sovereign is a mere lip loyalty, 2nd. It would be loyal enough to the Prince of Wales—according to its feeble idea of what loyal means—if, while yet remaining patron of a "society which encourages murder"—so the Universe describes Masonry—he became our sovereign to-morrow. Our first deduction is reasonable. How can any man, or body of men, be loyal to their sovereign who honour not her family, and foremost among them, her eldest son and heir? Literally true is it, perhaps, that neither Catholics nor Protestants owe any allegiance to the Prince of Wales, "who is only a subject," and "who may never reign." But this is only a quibble, which none but a Jesuit or an Ultramontane would have disgraced himself by indulging in. It is clear Catholic Opinion makes no secret of its dislike for Freemasonry, or it would hardly have drawn a distinction between the Prince of Wales as "heir apparent to the throne," and the Prince of Wales as "Grand Master of the Freemasons." Nevertheless, it feels and declares it is incumbent on all loyal subjects of the Crown to respect the Queen's son and heir, and English subjects will cordially endorse this view so creditable to Catholic Opinion.

But, says the Universe, "there is no use in Catholic Opinion pointing out how to try and serve God and Mammon." This means, if anything, that an English Catholic who serves an Ultramontane Pope serves God, while he who honours the Queen's son serves Mammon. This monstrous doctrine may have found support in some countries in what are known as the dark ages, and even then the practical common sense of the unlettered English revolted against such absurdity. We can more easily imagine than describe the wrath of some grim old Anglo-Norman or Plantagenet Sovereign on hearing this laid down. Still more easy is it to conceive of the disingenuous ruses by which the Universe would have sought to evade the consequences of its treason. But, fatuous indeed must this journal be if it imagines that a nineteenth century Englishman, who is not an idiot, will "swallow"—to use a vulgar, but expressive word—such nonsense. But this is not all. "The Prince of Wales," we read, "(as the Pope's journals in Rome say) has disgraced himself by heading a society which encourages murder. The Pope says that Freemasonry, in a certain country (meaning England), under its own name, 'does guilty battle with the Church;' and his Holiness emphatically adds, that the 'nefarious character of the sect being known, there is no honest man who does not turn from it with horror.'" A careful analysis of these two sentences seems desirable. What must first strike the impartial reader is, the knavish cowardice of the Universe, who dares not venture to say directly that the Prince of Wales has disgraced himself by joining the Freemasons, but throws the onus of the statement on "the Pope's journals in Rome." But reading between the lines, and having regard to the hope expressed in a subsequent paragraph, that the editor of Catholic Opinion "will 'read, mark, and inwardly digest' the letter of the Pope to the Bishop of Orleans," from which the above assertions of his Holiness are extracted, there is but one inference for us to draw. The Universe fully accepts, as gospel, what "the Pope's journals in Rome say," and as fully endorses what the Pope affirms. Now we need not be very squeamish in dealing with such statements as these. We will not disgrace ourselves by taking shelter under the wing of a contemporary, or of any journals in England or elsewhere. We lay it down as indisputable, that to say that the Freemasons are "a society which encourages murder," is a lie told deliberately, and with malice prepense. "The Pope's journals in Rome" know it for a lie, and the Universe which approves this statement is aware it is approving a lie. There have been Freemasons who were criminals. There have been Christians who were criminals. As reasonably may we argue that Christianity "encourages murder," because there have been Christian murderers as that our Order is "a society which encourages murder" because there have been Masonic murderers. But it were worse than useless to argue with bigots or the exponents of bigotry. We have, perhaps, done the Universe too much honour in noticing its malicious attempts at aspersing the character of Freemasonry. But ours being a mysterious brotherhood, to which the bulk of society is a stranger—though any reputable person is admissible to its ranks—it cannot so well stand by and meet every accusation that is hurled against it with a Virtute med me involvo. As in the dark ages, already referred to, those who knew more than their neighbours were looked upon as magicians, necromancers, witches, so now among the vulgar, Masons may be pointed at as murderers, revolutionists, atheists, as guilty, in fact, of all the crimes denounced in the written and unwritten laws of God and man. But such accusations as these, if they are to have any weight, must come from those who are acquainted with our secrets, or, in other words, from renegade brothers, whose treachery alone must deprive them of all credence. Who we are, may be easily learned—in Britain, at all events—for the names of all members are registered in accordance with the law. What rules of conduct, moral and religious, are enjoined on Masons, may be gathered from our published Constitutions, which any one may purchase for eighteen pence. And, we repeat, any reputable person may learn our harmless secrets by seeking admission into our ranks. No one need fear a refusal whose character will bear investigation. These are elements in the case of Freemasonry which are entirely overlooked by our accusers, and remove us entirely from the category of those secret societies and organisations, such as the Vehmgericht of the middle ages, of which we read in Sir Walter Scott's Anne of Geierstein, the Inquisition, and others, whose sole purpose has been the destruction of all law and order, or, perhaps we should say rather, the substitution of an odious civil and religious tyranny for civil and religious freedom. Let the Universe "read, mark and inwardly digest" these remarks of ours, and if there is a grain of sense in its composition it cannot but retract its base insinuations, and still baser calumnies.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE.

MOST of our readers in the course of their experience, have doubtless met with enthusiastic brethren who take it for granted that a Mason can do no wrong. These enthusiasts are thoroughly convinced that the vast majority of those who join the Order are the most benevolent, the most moral, and the very noblest members of society. The theory in their minds, like some religious theories of "conversion," is that the instant a man has been received into the mystic circle he becomes a new being. The ignoble become noble minded, the hard hearted become sensitive, and the man of lax morals becomes a pattern of all the virtues. An enthusiastic over-estimate of the Order such as this, although it embodies a great deal of truth, is certain to do harm. We have never undervalued enthusiasm, and indeed we regard it as a great moral force, but when a brother, bent, at all hazards, upon blowing the trumpet of fame for the Order, ventures to describe the whole of his confraternity in terms which would be flattering if applied to the saints, we cannot but think that such commendation is sure to excite antagonism. The enemies of Masonry, on the watch for holes in our garments, will assuredly take up such a challenge as this. They will tell us that there are mean and ignoble Masons, mercenary Masons, they may add indeed, by way of capping the sweeping assertions of the enthusiast, that Masons generally are no better than other people, and are not to be distinguished from their neighbours for any of the special graces of character. Possibly a calm and clear thinker might be disposed to admit the general truth of some of these charges, but he would join issue with reference to the latter, and, on fairly reasonable grounds; he might urge, that Masons are a carefully selected community, that whereas society is necessarily composed of persons of all classes and dispositions, the ranks of the Order are filled only with men whose characters will bear a close inspection. Granted that men of the middle classes, for example, are generally speaking good citizens, the Mason, as such, gives an additional guarantee to society for his good behaviour, in the fact that he has become a member of a fraternity which rigidly punishes any infringement of a code which for high and pure morality will bear comparison with any system of ethics which has yet attracted the attention of men.

In saying thus much for the Order we should not unfairly beg the real point in dispute. In fact, we are willing enough to admit that there are indifferent Masons in the Order. A community of saints is quite unknown in this sublunary sphere. Wherever men are banded together for any noble object, there will be people who will seek admission to their ranks for purely selfish purposes. We are not, indeed, ignorant of the fact that the self seekers who employ Masonry for purposes of their own are to be found in every social grade. We should be the last to assert that the Order is more frequently degraded for purposes of trade than for objects which appear less sordid, but which in reality are not one whit more reputable. The rich man, who desires to get into a circle which may be entered by the agency of Grand Lodge, is unfortunately to be found occasionally in our midst. Some men make Masonry an engine for obtaining power and distinction, and while in pursuit of this object they are often willing to simulate a benevolence they do not feel. Thackeray has remarked, over and over again in his wonderful fictions, that rich people will do far more unkind things than persons of low degree. A poor man would blush to be seen squabbling over the expenditure of a few shillings. He would be ashamed to depart from his word, or to permit any one to think that he had done so. Some of our brethren who are by no means rich are the most active in all works of benevolence. They seek no reward for their labours, and would be astonished if they received any. But it has sometimes happened that a rich man has made his Masonic professions chime in with his personal interest. He does not indeed display the emblems of the Order over his door, or on his carriage, but there are other ways of trading on Masonry, and not a few candidates for social position have first qualified themselves by joining a Lodge. Some of our brethren have painful personal recollections of men of this class, who are all things to all men in the Lodge room, but who greet a brother when they meet him in the street with the cut direct. The great man, who is seeking to make his way into society, forgets the humbler member of the fraternity when it is convenient to do so, and only wakes up to a general and cordial recognition of his Masonic associates when his personal interests are directly at stake. We do not hesitate to characterise men of this stamp as unworthy members of the Craft. They may be eloquent advocates of the claims of the charities, but they have no heart in the cause, and merely display a fictitious activity to suit their own convenience.

An insincere professor is, indeed, a very unpleasant person, and it is gratifying to know that, although they are not uncommon, they are yet few and far between. A man whose zeal for Masonry keeps time with his personal interests, who is constantly making his voice heard while he has private objects of his own in view, but who is silent the moment he has accomplished his purpose, deserves to be received, when he appears among his brethren, with withering contempt. We have known Masons who were always ready with honied phrases, but who invariably forgot the homely adage that "fair words butter no parsnips." They were willing to patronise everything; our Schools, our Benevolent Institutions, anything, in fact, which might be converted into a Masonic ladder to lift them above the crowd. But when this height was gained they could afford to ignore the Charities, could turn their back upon their toiling brethren, and were utterly oblivious of the fact that they were indebted to the Order for all their poor social distinctions.

The cynic who decries Masonry is sure to point to men of this stamp when he is seeking to drive his adverse arguments home. He reminds us of the persons who have pushed themselves to the front by means of the fraternity, and concludes by asking us whether our professions of purity are not a mere sham; whether our Order is not, after all, a gigantic organisation, based on selfish interests, and trading upon sacred principles which deserve a better fate than to be thus perverted. Our answer to these unfair insendoes is clear enough. We frankly admit that there are men in our midst who are grossly selfish, in spite of their professions of benevolence and charity, but we urge that they are rare exceptions. We challenge denial when we assert that the Order, as a whole, is perfectly pure, that its devotion to charity and general benevolence is no mere sham, and that Masons as a body are true men, who have done, and are still doing, their best to make toleration, peace and goodwill universally current in the world.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

77th ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL.

THE Third Great Festival of the Year, that of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, took place at the Alexandra Palace, on Wednesday last, and may, without hesitation, be pronounced one of the greatest successes of this important Masonic year. The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master of England, and Provincial G.M. of Somerset, presided, and was supported by Lord Burleigh, the Earl of Shrewsbury, R. B. Webster (Hon. Treasurer), Sir Henry Edwards, J. Rucker (Vice-President), J. M. P. Montague Worrell, Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G.C., J. Boyd P.G.P., Cottebrune P.G.P., R. P. Albert A.G.P., T. Cubitt P.G.P., Roebuck, Cooper Smith P.G.J.W. Oxon., Read P.G.P. Oxon., Rev. Dr. Brett, Bros. Webster, J. A. Spencer, S. Smith, Stoner, J. Wright, McRae, C. Horsley, T. J. Sabine, G. Verry, A. C. Burrell, S. Rosenthal, W. Parsons, C. Pegler, C. Mootrie, Hopekirk, Bubb, Larkin, Pulsford, Davies, W. Pass, Wilkins, Farthing, Levy, Hodges, S. Jones, Watts, Morton, Leggat, Dr. Ramsay, Abrahams, Foxall, Richards, Condor, Hon. C. Barke, Rutherford; F. Binckes, Secretary Boys' School; R. W. Little, Secretary Girls' School; Jas. Terry, Secretary Royal Benevolent Institution, and about 240 Stewards from the several Provincial and Metropolitan Lodges.

The banquet, which was served in a most satisfactory manner by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, took place in the large dining-room of the Palace, and vast as the space is that was set apart, not a vacant chair was to be found. This is the first time, in the history of Masonic gatherings of this description, that arrangements have been made for the ladies to be present at the dinner; on previous occasions the rule having been that the ladies should dine by themselves, and not join the gentlemen until the business proceedings of the day had been disposed of. However, if we may judge by the result of this day's Festival, the claim thus established will not be readily surrendered by our fair friends.

After grace had been sung, the Chairman rose and said: It was the first time in his Masonic career that he had presided at a Masonic gathering of this novel character. He welcomed the ladies very cordially, and proposed that which had been the first toast from time immemorial. The Queen commanded their respect in every possible manner, in every possible place, and by every possible title; but now it was doubled, for Her Majesty was both their Patron and their Queen.

The National Anthem was then sung.

The Chairman then said:—Brethren, the next toast on my list is the "Health of M.W.G.M. his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G." Not only was he entitled to their respect as Prince of Wales, but as the Grand Master of English Freemasons. All those brethren who were present at the Albert Hall saw one of the greatest sights that Masons in any part of the world ever witnessed. All came to present their homage, and to welcome his Royal Highness to the chair. He was sure the wish of every brother then present was that his Royal Highness might long live to rule over the Craft, and conduct its affairs in happiness, in peace, and with success. (Cheers.)

The toast was drunk with great enthusiasm.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, R.W. Pro G.M. of Staffordshire, rose and said: He hoped the brethren would fill a bumper to the health of his old friend and schoolfellow, his old college companion, his brother in politics and his brother in Freemasonry, the Pro Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon. (Great cheers.)

The Earl of Carnarvon, in responding, said it was extremely pleasant to be praised by one who was himself praised. In this instance it was by an old college friend. He thanked this great meeting for the kindly way, nay, even friendly manner, in which they had drunk his health. Masonry was a compact body, composed of different orders and different degrees, but two great principles prevailed, the principle of election and the principle of appointment by the free vote of the craft. Both Master and Pro. Grand Master had great powers invested in them. The officers who represent them were the Grand Officers, who had all the light and pulse of the Craft. He would couple with the toast he was about to propose—viz., the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale R.W.D.G.M., the Provincial Grand Masters, and Present and Past Grand Officers—the name of one who had but lately attained the purple of office, his friend Sir Henry Edwards.

Sir Henry Edwards briefly responded.

Miss Josephine Sherrington then sang the Shadow Song from Dinorah in a manner that completely electrified the audience, who most enthusiastically demanded an encore, which was graciously conceded by the accomplished artiste.

The noble Chairman rose again. He said there was an old saying that after the nightingales came the crows. (Laughter.) After the air they had been listening to his voice would sound very much like a crow's. He was about to propose the toast of the evening—that which had brought them there that day—"Prosperity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys." (Loud Cheers.) In this as in every institution we naturally look back to the past, and if we compare the past with the present how very wide will that difference be. I must ask you to go back with me as far as the year 1739, and you need not be afraid that I shall give you a record of every fact that has occurred between then and now; but I ask you to remember what the year 1739 was in England. Politically it was very different from the present. We were on the eve of a civil war, and of an internal disturbance. In matters of education, though there were great writers and great thinkers, whom we still delight to read and to honour, there was little education in the class at least for whom this school is provided, and, Masonically, it was an important year, because just at that time the Pope had thought it worth while in England to fulminate the bull against Freemasonry; and English Freemasonry itself did not number, I suppose, within the four seas, one-half of those whom I see collected in this room. In that year, 1739, I find that a resolution was proposed during the Grand Mastership of one who, strange to say, bore my own name, the Lord Carnarvon of the day, from which grew out, some years afterwards, first the Girls' School, and secondly the Boys' School. That resolution is now matter of Masonic history. It was subsequently acted upon as I have said, and this institution was established. In those days it was but a small affair; there were but six scholars, and they were to be clothed, and brought up, and nurtured, and educated; but in the inevitable default of the necessary accommodation, it was provided that they should be brought up in any neighbouring school that would offer a good education. Since then, however, great is the difference! Buildings have been erected which we all know, and the present school, for the sake of which we are assembled together to-day, numbers within its walls no less, I am told, than 177 boys. Those boys are brought up, and clothed, and educated, entirely free of expense to their friends; they receive what may be termed a thoroughly good commercial education, they go forth subsequently into life, and I believe, from all that I have heard, they do honour to themselves generally, and to the institution which has sent them forth. Year by year this school has passed under examination—first of all under the Syndicate of Cambridge, and periodically by the University Local Examinations—and it may be a matter of satisfaction to all those who take an interest in this Institution to know that since the day when these buildings were erected, now some 18 years since, so satisfactory has been the health of those boys, that I am informed that during the whole of that period there have been but three deaths. In this time the school and the Craft have gone on steadily advancing together, and this is an illustration in fact of the way in which the Craft itself is worked in this country. It has undertaken useful works; by those useful works it stands; and through those useful works it has spread far and wide its great reputation for usefulness and for charity. I have to say one word on the subject of that which, after all, affects all these questions more closely than anything else, and which though it may sound dull, is yet of vital consequence—I mean the question of finance. I have not myself had the opportunity of looking into or of examining closely the financial condition of this institution. All that I can say is to be derived from those who are more conversant with it; and whilst on the one hand there is much that is satisfactory, I am bound also to point out to you that, like all human things, it even yet admits of amendment. You have, no doubt, done much; large sums are subscribed on every gathering such as this. You have erected magnificent buildings; you have even, as I am informed, paid off the debt upon these buildings; and you gave an education to these boys at what seems to me comparatively a very low figure, viz., £45 a year, and I am told further that even that £45 a year has been gradually reduced, as expenses have been brought down during the last few years. All this you have done, all this is matter for honest pride and satisfaction, but I have also to remind you that this Institution has no endowment, and that the money which is subscribed on these occasions has hitherto, as I understand, been only just sufficient to pay the way of this great Institution. And, more than that, I may repeat what was said by one who formerly spoke in this place, and spoke, I think, on that point with considerable truth when he stated that the subscriptions proceed too frequently from a certain given fixed number of individuals, and are not so largely taken up and supported as they should be by the whole body of the craft. In this, as in other matters of charity, I desire that the pyramid should have as broad a base as possible—should rest on that base, and should not rest on a tiny bottom. Nothing but a large amount of subscriptions from a great number of individuals can make the base of your pyramid broad, and nothing but breadth of base is a security for such an institution as this. And now I have said enough, and perhaps I should not have said so much had I not myself absolutely felt bound on such an occasion to do so. I have said quite enough for so festive an occasion as this. I can only commend the charity to you, and to your sympathies, by commending it to all those who have in former times supported it so nobly and liberally. I commend it further to those brethren who as individuals have sympathised with it, but have not yet given any visible and tangible evidence of that sympathy; and lastly, and certainly most potentially, I commend it to those who can do more for it than any brother here present, the ladies, who have sat down with us to-day.

After this toast, which it is needless to say was received with enthusiasm, was disposed of, Brother Binckes, Secretary of the Institution, announced that the recipients of the prizes—viz., Francis Dalrymple Lane (for good conduct) and Richard Newton Carter (elected by his schoolfellows)—were not present to receive their rewards. Bro. Binckes explained that the Festival had been postponed a week; it was now the holidays, and the boys could not attend. He hoped, however, that this public acknowledgment would make amends for the disappointment. He then commenced, amidst the greatest excitement, to read out the Lists of Donations, which amounted in the aggregate to the munificent sum of £12,700, with thirty-nine lists yet to be received, and triumphantly asked the brethren whether the result was not an answer to those who had prognosticated that the introduction of ladies to our banquets must end in failure?

After several other toasts, the ladies and brethren adjourned to the Concert-room, where the various songs were most artistically rendered; indeed, the musical arrangements, which were under the direction of Madame Thaddeus Wells, gave the most unqualified satisfaction.

We append the List of Patrons and Stewards, with the several amounts collected or subscribed by them which have been received up to the time of our going to press:—

FREDERICK BINCKES, Secretary of the Institution, Hon. Secretary.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of the Province of Hertford, of which the R.W. Bro. T. F. Halsey M.P. is the Grand Master, will be held at the Town Hall, St. Albans, on Wednesday, the 28th instant, at half-past one o'clock precisely. A banquet will take place in the Town Hall at four p.m.

Obituary.

We regret to have to announce the death of Bro. Donovan, of the Burdett Coutts Lodge, No. 1278. Bro. Donovan was Editor of the East London Observer, and was justly esteemed as an energetic and conscientious Mason.

FREEMASONRY IN ECUADOR.

WE are indebted to a writer in Le Monde Maçonnique, who signs himself "Un Equatorien," for the following interesting details of the rise, progress, and position of our Order in this country.

It was during the war of independence that Freemasonry penetrated into Ecuador. I am able to affirm that, in 1821, just one year before the battle of Pichincha, which sealed the independence of this Republic, there was, at Quito, a well organised Lodge, known as the Ley Natural. When the Grand Orient of Peru was constituted, this Lodge placed itself under the jurisdiction of that power, and its name figured in the list of Lodges of that Orient down to a very recent period. Nevertheless, during my sojourn at Quito, I could glean no knowledge whatever of this Lodge. It is probable it had ceased to exist for a long time previously, owing to causes of which we shall speak presently. At Guayaquil, there had been both a Lodge and a Chapter. These bodies disappeared for a period of some ten years, when, in 1856, the Lodge Philanthropie des Guayas was organised. At that time there reigned at Guayaquil a remarkable ardour for Freemasonry, and every day the Lodge saw its numbers increasing, but this ardour was unable to revive the zeal of the people of Quito. In those days Ecuador was chiefly influenced by liberal views. The Lodge of Guayaquil was a democratic one. On the other hand, the Masons of Quito showed a decided tendency to maintain the aristocratic character of the ancient, or, to speak properly, false Masonry, and to turn it to political purposes. Unable to plant this system in a liberal country, they preferred not to extend the influence of their temple. The Lodge of Guayaquil had, in its own ranks, to contend against analogous tendencies, promoted chiefly by those who possessed the high grades, but the democratic or Masonic element proved victorious in the struggle. In 1860, when, at the close of the civil war, the conservative party triumphed, its chief, M. Garcia Moreno, sought initiation in the Lodge of Guayaquil. The latter had serious reasons for distrusting this gentleman. The violent and haughty character of the man was certainly not in keeping with the ordinances and prescriptions of Masonry. Moreover, M. Garcia Moreno had proscribed many members of the Lodge of Guayaquil; he claimed to enter the Lodge as a Master, but where all are brothers, there unquestionably was no place for him. By way of reply to the conditions demanded by the Lodge, he authorised the Jesuits to return to the country. And when, in 1869, by the aid of the Ultramontanes, he had managed to get complete possession of the chief power in the state, then M. Garcia proscribed very many Ecuadorians, and framed a decree directing that every person denounced as a Mason should be tried by court martial. Hence, at this present time, there are no longer any Lodges in Ecuador.

MASONRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

ACCORDING to the Graaf Reinet Herald, a movement is on foot towards the establishment of an independent Grand Lodge for South Africa. The initiative has been taken by the Jaffa Lodge, No. 864, Cape Town, which has submitted the question to all the Lodges in the Colony, and we presume that, in course of time, some decision will be arrived at. Meantime, the Graaf Reinet Herald wisely cautions the craft against any precipitate action, and urges the various Lodges to consider well and seriously before they commit themselves by supporting a movement which must sever all connection between them and the Grand Lodges of England and Holland. It pertinently asks, "Are the Lodges in South Africa prepared to withdraw the allegiance they now owe to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of England, and H.R.H. Prince William Frederick Karl W.M., Grand Master National of the Netherlands?" If so, to whom will they offer it.

Among other Masonic items of news, to which the Graaf Reinet Herald has recently opened its columns, we learn that Bro. G. G. F. Hurford P.M. has been elected W.M. of the lodge "Midland," No. 882, Graaf Reinet, Cape Town, f[illegible]ing year, and that Bro. G. G. Munnick P.W[illegible] W.M. of the Lodge "Veereniging,"

THIRD NOTICE.

LOT 478 begins a rich series of Masonic poems and song-books. From lot 484 we learn that a pantomime called Harlequin Freemason was produced at Covent Garden Theatre in 1781, and can imagine our ancestors having been mightily diverted over broad hints and farcical ceremonies. We wonder, by the way, what references to our mysteries are contained in The Generous Freemason or the Constant Lady (lot 3), and whether we were the butts of Squire "Noodle" and his man "Doodle." Les Francs-Maçons, Comédie (lot 76), would seem to be of the same genus, and The Mason of Buda (lot 489). Freemason's Companions, Choristers, Assistants, Healths, Museums, Friends, Melodies, Budgets, Glees, Anthems, Minstrels, &c., abound in bewildering variety. Our gay and festive predecessors seem to have been eminently vocal, though we fear quality was not so conspicuous as quantity in their effusions. On the scarce Lodge lists and Calendars which follow, we offer no remark, they are so scarce as to be worth their weight in gold to a Masonic library. Curious particulars relative to the doings of the followers of Schrepffer and Cagliostro, also to the sectaries of Von Knigge, Zinnendorff, Schwedenberg and the Illuminati may be gleaned from lots 520 to 523. Lot 527, Anthologia Hibernica, Vol II., should contain Clinch's valuable essays on Masonry and the Doctrines of Pythagoras.

The scrapbooks and albums, with their interesting data and autographs, speak for themselves, as do also the MSS. portraits and symbolic engravings.

Whilst upon this topic we would say a word upon the fine library collected by Bro. Carson, of Cincinnati, U.S.A. Though not to be compared with Bro. Spencer's, in point of Calendars, Constitutions, sectarian, poetical, Rosicrucian, and mystic works, or of portraits and engravings, it yet contains more of the extremely scarce revelations of the early part of the last century, and excels it in other matters of less importance. Bro. Carson is publishing, in parts, for private circulation, at his own expense, a valuable "catalogue raisonnée" of the whole, his critical analyses of contents and learned remarks upon the Masonic value of the various books, render his catalogue a standard of reference, which will be quoted through all time. We abridge from his remarks which relate to certain lots in Bro. Spencer's catalogue.

(Lot 528) "A most valuable periodical, interesting generally as to continental Masonry. History of Freemasonry in the Netherlands, with 225 historical documents from French, Italian, English and Dutch. Editors Melton and de Wargny. Complete sets exceedingly scarce."

(Lot 212, Light on Masonry, original edition). "This book is extremely scarce, and commands a high price."

As to the Bucks (see Lot 30), Bro. Carson informs us, "they were a convivial Order, with signs, tokens, ceremonies, &c. In 1720 there were 18 Lodges of the Society in London and elsewhere." Of the pompous discourse which heads this lot, Bro. Carson echoes the immortal Captain Cuttle's eulogy, "there's wisdom for you!"

(Lot 196, Chemin-Dupontès), "learned and exceedingly interesting, quite scarce, the Memoire sur l'Ecossisme poged to form 12th and 13th cahier of the Encyclopédie. A scathing review of the grades of the Ancient and Accepted Rite."

(Lot 513, Almanach Pittoresque), "1841-48, all that was published, difficult to obtain."

(Lot 80, Considerations Filosofiques), "A very excellent and interesting work, in which the whole subject of Freemasonry, historical, doctrinal and moral, is fully discussed, pro and con, by way of dialogue. The bulls of Clement XII. and Benedict XIV., also a sketch of the Kts. Templars, are introduced. Also catalogue of books on Freemasonry. The latter is satirical, thus the first book in it, is Dispute between a Freemason and a Theologian, 81 vols. folio. Price, 222 livres. Very scarce."

(Lot 243, Cole's Constitutions, 1729). One of the rarest of Masonic books. Mr. Hughan, of Truro, possesses a copy, which he supposed unique, until he heard of this" (Bro. Carson's.)

Whilst amongst these, we notice one gem in the possession of Bro. Carson, which we believe is unknown in this country, the reprint of Anderson's Constitutions of 1723, by Benjamin Franklin at Philadelphia, in 1734.

(Lot 245). "Scarcer than the first edition."

(Lot 65, Corps complet). "Complete body of Masonry, adopted by the G.L. of France (1770). Very scarce."

(Lot 409, Cross Templars' Chart). "Original edition, very scarce."

(Lot 80, Essai sur les N. N.) "Displays much erudition, it is exceedingly scarce."

(Lot 203 and 234, Des Etangs). "His rituals are entirely original, different from the regular ones practised, they were used in the Lodge des Trinosophes and many others."

(Lot 16, Le F. M. dans la Republique). "Called forth by the decree of the Council of Berne, 1745, forbidding Masons in that Canton."

Relative to (lot 879) Proceedings of the G.O. of France, Bro. Carson gives a most instructive sketch, too long for us to reproduce. The metamorphoses of the great seal, from the lilies to the eagle, and back again to the lilies, with spots and blanks intervening, thence to a globe, are dwelt upon.

(Lot 194, Hardie's Monitor.) "Compilation of Historic matter and imperfect list of Lodges in the U.S. It is scarce."

(Lot 29, Les plus Secrets Mystères.) "Original edition, curious and interesting; the author's theory is that Masonry was instituted by Godfrey de Bouillon in Palestine in 1320."

(Lot 396 Gürtler's Templars) first edition. "Was made the text for an excellent article in the Retrospective Review.

(Lot 397, Dupuy.) "A vast amount of curious documentary evidence."

(Lot 409, Jacob, Recherches.) "Contains an interesting chapter on the Secret Tribunals of Germany."

(Lot 406, Nicolai Accusations, and in other lots.) "Has become exceedingly scarce."

(Lot 20, Le Maçon Demasqué.) "Solomon in all his glory is an English translation of this. It is rare and curious, quite different from other ritualistic productions of the period."

We could go on gleaning interesting matter from Bro. Carson's List, but our space compels us to close, with the regret that we have not been able to do full justice to the subject, a task which Dr. Kloss of Frankfort or Dr. Morison of Paris would have competently dealt with, but which probably, of all living men, Bro. William James Hughan, of Truro, could alone perform satisfactorily.

REPORTS OF LODGE PROCEEDINGS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In reply to M.M.M., in No. 26 of the Chronicle, allow me to remind him that he has misquoted the words of the Book of Constitutions as to printing reports in the Masonic journals. They are: "without the consent of the Grand Master or Provincial Grand Master;" and that, as the Masonic journals are under the patronage of the Grand Master and Provincial Grand Masters, no other sanction or consent is necessary, the editors of the journals being responsible that nothing unmasonic shall appear in print in connection with Lodges.

THE COMING MASONIC YEAR.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—As we have fairly entered on our Midsummer holidays and as no serious Masonic business will be transacted much before the month of September, a question naturally suggests itself, what shall we do in the meantime to further the ends of Masonry. There are various ways in which we may subserve the interests of the Craft. We have become so popular of late, our Order has extended its ramifications in so many new directions, that we may certainly look forward to a still more considerable accession of strength. We shall increase and multiply even more rapidly than in recent years, for once the ball is set rolling there is no saying to what magnitude it may attain ultimately. There is thus ample time for reflection between now and the resumption of Masonic meetings as to those who may honour us with their candidature. It must not be overlooked that mere numbers are not the principal elements of strength.

We should exercise the strictest supervision as to those who seek admission into our ranks, just as did the Essenes, who were scrupulously careful about whom they received as brethren. Then again, the time is approaching when we must begin to think about the election of new officers. And here may we devote our leisure to studying the merits of likely candidates. The character of a Lodge is fashioned by that of its rulers. If the are men possessing sound common sense and breadth of view, we may look for a good Lodge. But if the officers are feeble, or possess but little influence, we may anticipate that the Lodge will be correspondingly weak. These are points to which a few thoughts during our holidays may be fairly devoted.

Yours "Q."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

WEEKLY CITIZEN, OTTAWA.—Thanks for exchange. Lately we have received two copies of each number, we presume through a mistake.

APEX.—We witnessed the contretemps, and are sorry that it occurred. However, we do not think your long letter will mend matters. Your friend might have been less imperious.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Friday, in the House of Lords, the Earl of Camperdown brought the subject of Promotion and Retirement in the Royal Navy under their Lordships' notice, the Earl of Malmesbury stating, on behalf of the Government, that it was being carefully considered, with a view to reducing all grievances to a minimum. The Ecclesiastical Fees Redistribution Bill passed through Committee, and other measures were advanced a stage. On Monday, Lord Carlingford put a question relative to National Education in Ireland, to which the Duke of Richmond replied. On the report of amendments on the Sale of Food and Drugs' Bill, a discussion arose on certain of the clauses, but, in the end, the report was agreed to. On Tuesday, the House went into Committee on the Public Health Bill, which passed this stage after a brief debate. On Thursday, Earl Beauchamp moved the second reading of the Friendly Societies Bill, which was agreed to after a brief discussion, Lord Aberdare and the Earl of Morley being the principal speakers. The Marquis of Salisbury having replied to a question of Viscount Midleton respecting the Uncovenanted Civil Servants in India, and other business having been disposed of, the House adjourned.

The House of Commons, on Friday, devoted the first part of the sitting to a motion by Mr. Edwardes, that before establishing the proposed Naval College at Dartmouth the claims of other places should be considered. Mr. Edwardes urged the claims of Weymouth, Mr. Ashley those of Poole, and Mr. Baillie Cochrane those of the Isle of Wight. Mr. Childers raised the question whether there should be any college on shore. Mr. G. Ward Hunt urged the Government proposal. Mr. Goschen supported the motion, which, however, was defeated by 147 to 135. The narrowness of the majority caused much cheering. Discussions then ensued on the Civil Bill Courts in Ireland, on the Declaration of Paris, on Civil Service Co-operative Trading, and Overseers of Metropolitan Parishes, after which the House went into Committee of Supply, and passed a large number of votes for the Public Service. On Monday, the greater part of the evening was devoted to the Committee on the Supreme Court of Judicature Act (1873) Amendment (No. 2) Bill, after a preliminary discussion, raised by Sir H. James, Attorney-General of the late Government. On reaching clause 17 the chairman was ordered to report progress, and the House resumed. There was a morning sitting on Tuesday, the greater part of which was passed in Committee of Supply, the remaining Civil Service Estimates being agreed to. In the evening Mr. B. Cochrane made a motion relative to the progress of Russia in Central Asia, after which the appearance of Mr. Whalley, who rose to move for returns about the Jesuits in England, so terrified the House that a count out occurred. On Wednesday, Mr. G. O. Trevelyan's Bill for equalising the suffrage in counties and boroughs was defeated, on the second reading, by a very large majority, the numbers being for the Bill 166, against it 268. On Thursday, on the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. Disraeli announced that, at an early date, he should propose a vote of certain moneys to defray the expenses of the Prince of Wales's approaching visit to India. The cost of conveying His Royal Highness and suite thither and back again is estimated at £32,000, the cost of entertaining him in India is set down at £30,000, and will be defrayed by the Indian government, while the personal allowance to the Prince is estimated at £60,000. The Marquis of Hartington, as leader of the Opposition, promised the assistance of his side of the House in furthering the views of the Government, but sundry radicals, among whom were Mr. Macdonald and the irrepressible Mr. Taylor, of Leicester, who specially claimed to speak the mind of the working classes, objected to the proposal in toto. We do not imagine the House, or the country, look with any favour on the carping criticisms of these representatives of the people. Every man would wish that His Royal Highness should traverse India in right regal fashion, as becomes the heir apparent to the British crown, and this cannot be done without cost. Mr. Hanbury then made a motion relative to the East African Slave trade, but after a speech from Mr. Bourke, who represented the Government, it was negatived without a division. Mr. T. Brassey then brought forward the highly important subject of armoured vessels, pointing out that England ought to be well furnished with vessels of the best and most powerful character, and that the country would certainly not grudge the needful expense. Mr. Reed, as a late chief naval constructor, Mr. Goschen, ex-first lord, and Mr. Ward Hunt, the present first lord of the Admiralty, offered their views severally, all admitting in general terms the justice of Mr. Brassey's proposition. Shortly afterwards the House went into Committee of Supply on the Navy estimates, but after a brief discussion progress was reported, and the House having resumed, the remaining orders of the day were disposed of.

The Garden Party of the Prince and Princess of Wales, at Chiswick, which was to have been held on Thursday of last week, came off on Monday. The Queen was present, with several other members of the Royal family and the élite of the fashionable world. The Sultan of Zanzibar was among the invited, but his Highness having left London for a tour in the provinces was prevented from being present. Among the places which the Sultan has thus far honoured with a visit are Birmingham, Liverpool and Manchester, in which towns he was received with great enthusiasm. His Highness is evidently anxious to cultivate a strong feeling of friendship with England, to whom he looks for assistance in developing the resources of his country. We doubt not his wishes will meet with the success they deserve.

The latest attractions at the Alexandra Palace have proved a success, so far as regards the number of visitors. As regards weather, however, the directors have been singularly unfortunate. The Dramatic Fête was held on Saturday, and drew largely, both as to numbers and from the pockets of those who attended it. All the eminent artistes of the day were present, and the entertainment provided was in keeping with the general character of the fête. Fun and frolic reigned supreme. All that was needed to complete the success was just a slight consideration on the part of Phœbus Apollo. On Tuesday, the temperance people mustered in their thousands, and amused themselves, as is their custom, with kiss in the ring and other debaucheries. The price of ginger beer and other effervescing drinks, we imagine, is "riz" considerably in the neighbourhood, owing to the vast consumption of these inebriating liquors. We must note that, on this occasion, the weather was all that could be desired. On Thursday, the last of the series of Italian Opera Concerts was held, the principal artistes including Madame Adelina Patti and the most eminent members of the Royal Italian Opera. The weather was most unfavourable, and the effect of the fireworks, which were undoubtedly on a grand scale, was not as imposing as usual. On Wednesday, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys held its annual Festival here, our respected Brother the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon Pro G.M. presiding. The meeting was a great success, for the details, we must refer our readers to another portion of our columns. To-day will be held the sixth of the series of Popular Concerts, while the principal event set down for next week will be the Hound Show, to be held on the 14th and 15th, under very distinguished patronage.

At the Crystal Palace has been held during the past week the National Music meetings, the last meeting being fixed for to-day, when the distribution of prizes, by Madame Lind-Goldschmidt, will take place. Monday is the grand fete of the Catholic Total Abstinence League, under the patronage of Cardinal Manning. On Wednesday afternoon, at 3 p.m., Mr. Irving will give his only reading this season. The programme will include a scene from Othello, "The Dream of Eugene Aram," "The Feast of Belshazzar," and a scene from Hamlet. On Wednesday the Royal Botanic Society, Regent's Park, will hold an evening fête and special exhibition, the gates being thrown open at 8 p.m. The last concert of the Welsh Choral Union is fixed for Monday, at St. James's Hall. An admirable programme is announced. On Wednesday evening Madame Christine Nilsson will give her grand annual concert at the Royal Albert Hall, South Kensington. Among the artists who will take part in it are Mdlle. Titiens, Mdlle. Anna de Belocca, Madame Trebelli-Bettini, Mr. Sims Reeves, Signor Campanini, Signor Foli and Herr Behrens. Next week will see the last, for the present season, of Signor Salvini, whose benefit was arranged for yesterday evening. On Monday there will be a morning performance at 3 p.m., in which, at the request of a number of his patrons, Signor Salvini will appear as Il Gladiatore. On Wednesday evening he will play Othello, and on Friday Hamlet. Next week, also, will see the close of the season at both opera houses. At the Royal Italian the benefits of Mdlle. Zaré Thalberg, Madame Adeline Patti, and Mdlle. Albani, are fixed for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday respectively. Six special performances will be given at Her Majesty's, when the regular season is ended. Particulars will be announced in due course. Several of the theatres are already closed, the companies having betaken themselves to the provinces for their autumnal holiday.

The great event in the Cricketing world has been the match at Lord's between the Gentlemen and Players. The previous match at the Oval was eminently unsatisfactory, for the game was left drawn, owing to the weather being so unsettled. The "Profs" were winning hand over hand, when the rain put an end to all further progress. But at Lord's nothing interfered to mar the play. The Gentlemen went first to the wickets, and were disposed of for 152, Mr. Longman heading the score with a brilliantly made 70, while Mr. Ridley carried his bat out for 45. In this first innings the Players made 169; Jupp 25, Greenwood 51, Daft 28, Oscroft 28, and Pooly not out 11, being the principal contributors. In their second innings, however, the Gentlemen scored fast and furiously, over a total of 200 having been recorded before a single wicket fell. Mr. W. G. Grace played in his very best form, and those who have had the pleasure of seeing him at the wicket know well enough what that means. He ran up 152 in somewhat over three hours, and then carelessly ran himself out. Messrs. Webbe 65, Longman 41, Hornby

58, G. F. Grace 12, Lord Harris, not out, 39; Messrs. Green 25 and Francis 18 helped to swell the total to 444, thus leaving the Players 428 to win. Of these, however, they only contrived to put together 165, so that the Gentlemen were victorious by 262 runs. Jupp with 18, Lockwood 67, Greenwood 16, Oscroft 27, and M. M'Intyre not out 26, played in fine form, but their efforts were unable to avert defeat. It should be noted that A. Shaw, whose bowling is usually so effective, was hurt, and consequently disabled from playing in the second innings. Yesterday was the opening day, at Lord's, of the annual Eton v. Harrow match, which, next to the 'Varsity contest, is the most attractive of all the matches played at the St. John's Wood Ground. We shall give particulars next week.

Quite an alarming panic occurred at a meeting held in the Camberwell Hall, by Messrs. Sankey and Moody, the American revivalists, whose return to America will shortly take place. A tremendous rush was made to get in, and the noise caused much shrieking and fainting. Mr. Moody did his best to calm his audience, and after a long time peace was restored, and the service concluded.

On Wednesday evening, the Earl of Dufferin, who is Governor-General of the Dominion, and on leave from his post in this country, was entertained at a banquet at the Albion, by the Canada Club. His Lordship, in replying to the toast of his health, and prosperity to the Dominion, spoke very hopefully of the growing importance of this vast British dependency. The prevalent feelings in Canada were enthusiastic loyalty towards the British Crown, and a firm belief in a grand future for "this Canada of ours," as the Canadians proudly love to describe their country. The resources of the country are immense, and those Englishmen who find their struggles to get on at home unsuccessful, or less successful than they could wish, will find a hearty welcome from the people. Idle loafers, however, will do well to stay away. Men ready to fight lustily the stern battle of life, and possessing enough to keep them going at the first outset, these are the fellows that are needed, and we should council all such to select Canada in preference to the United States, for in the former case no transfer of allegiance is rendered necessary.

It is not often we have to chronicle so grand a feat as that of Captain Webb, who on Saturday swam all the way from Blackwall Pier to Gravesend, accomplishing the distance in something under four and three-quarter hours. The steamer "Falcon" was chartered to accompany the brave fellow, and the well-known Professor Beckwith, from the bows of a small wherry, gave the swimmer the benefit of his experienced counsel. As Captain Webb passed the various important spots on his course he was loudly cheered, especially by the boys of the Marine Society's ship "Warsprite," and those on board the training ships "Chichester" and "Goliah." Great enthusiasm manifested itself when he reached the pier, and the feat he had undertaken was accomplished. Captain Webb is a young man, 27 years of age, and possessing a grand frame. He is not a quick swimmer, but his forte is endurance, and after all it is far better that a man, especially a sailor, should be able to hold on for hours than that he should be able to swim a short distance at a high speed.

We are glad to see the subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers by the recent terrible inundations in the South of France are pouring in in such splendid fashion. It is only a few days since the lists were opened, and already considerably over £8,000 are announced on the Mansion House list alone. This includes £200 from her Majesty, £525 from the Corporation, and other large sums from such well-known firms as Coutts and Co., Rothschilds, &c. Nor are the efforts at relief confined only to the metropolis, as in most of our large manufacturing and commercial centres contributions are being made to the fund.

From Spain we hear of several severe engagements between the Carlists and Alphonsists. It is difficult to make out which of the two is getting the upper hand. According to the Madrid telegrams the Alphonsists are carrying all before them, while the London Committee of the Carlists tell a very different tale. In France, the truth of the adage, "it never rains but it pours," is being very disastrously illustrated. Scarcely have we recorded our grief at the calamitous inundations with which Toulouse and the whole valley of the Garonne have been visited, when there is announced a tremendous storm in the north-west of Normandy. This happened on Wednesday, and among the most serious consequences of which we have heard thus far is the almost complete inundation of Lisieux and its environs. Several houses have been destroyed, and seven lives are reported to have been lost. So heavy, indeed, has been the rainfall in this part of France, that great fears are being entertained of floods in the valleys of the Seine, Marne, and Saone. There has been a landslip on the Northern Railway, near Chantilly, the consequence being a serious interruption in the regular traffic. Nor is France the only country that has suffered in this respect. There have been inundations in Hungary, round about Pesth, the result being a heavy loss to the vine-growing community. Among the public characters who have played an important part in the world's history and have passed hence, must be mentioned the ex-Emperor Ferdinand, who died a few days since, at a very advanced age. It was he who, in 1848, abdicated in favour of his nephew, Francis Joseph, the present Emperor. Ex-Queen Isabella has had a narrow escape; returning to Paris from a suburban visit, the horses of her carriage, when it was passing Neuilly, took fright at the roaring of a lion. The coachman did his best to stop them, but his efforts were in vain, and very speedily the carriage was upset. The only person injured was La Duchesse de Valence. The Queen was very cool and self-possessed, and was the first to go to the assistance of the injured lady. Another imperial personage has had a narrow escape. The train carrying His Imperial Highness the Crown Prince of Germany from Vienna, had a slight collision with a goods train, near the St. Valentin Station. The Prince's valet was injured, and a workman, belonging to the station, was killed.

From the Navy, we gather that Bro. J. L. Toole, the deservedly popular comedian, laden with bright laurels of triumph freshly gathered in America and Canada, will shortly reappear among his multitude of friends of the United Kingdom. Since he left our shores, some small passing clouds, naturally enough, have met his view; but his first successes have proved the prelude to ever expanding triumphs in each succeeding performance. Bro. Toole possesses so many happy qualities, that he won the well-merited title of the "English gentleman actor" among our American cousins, while Canada now heartily endorses the sentiment. Our comedian has everywhere been received as well with tokens of genuine esteem as with hearty laudation. Both President Grant and the highest officials in Canada have extended to him the hand of friendly welcome, with expressions of personal regard. A Canadian contemporary recently addressed to its readers the following passage, which we reproduce with pleasure for the perusal of Bro. Toole's admirers and friends in this country:—

"Mr. Toole, who has won such fame on both sides of the Atlantic by his performances, has been the delight of thousands of the best classes of our citizens. Accomplished artists, such as Mr. Toole, are not, like blackberries, found in every hedge; and with this conviction only too forcibly impressed upon us, we cannot but lament the early departure of this brilliant and accomplished comedian, who will, on his arrival, be greeted not only by his Bro. artistes, but a numerous circle of private friends."

The Illustrated and Dramatic Sporting News has given a life-like portrait of Bro. Schubert, of the Industry Lodge, No. 186. This talented Bro. is a nephew of Charles Schubert, famous as a composer and violoncellist, and his mantle has fallen worthily on his talented nephew, who possesses the faculty of artistic instrumentation on the violoncello. Herr Schubert is the founder of the Schubert Society, of which Sir Julius Benedict is the president, which has been established for the purpose of preparing rising young artists, both vocal and instrumental, so that they may have a chance of appearing with credit at high class concerts.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—Observations on terrestrial magnetism are, of course, classed amongst the most valuable and important that can be made, and a very valuable "Memorandum on Determination of Elements and use of Magnetical Instruments," has been drawn up by Professor J. C. Adams and Captain Evans, the hydrographer. The elements to be determined are declination, inclination, and intensity; and, as is well observed, the determination of any of the elements anywhere within the Arctic regions will be valuable: if made within the limits of former voyages, by affording the means of determining the approximate amount of the secular changes by comparison with earlier observations; if made beyond the limits of former explorations by materially adding to our knowledge of the distribution of magnetic force over the earth's surface, and thereby contributing towards the perfection of the theory of terrestrial magnetism.—Naval Science for July.

MAGAZINES OF THE MONTH.

SECOND NOTICE.

One of the chief merits in the New Quarterly is that its fiction is not serial. It follows that we are not troubled over and anon to refresh our memories about the latest incidents before plunging further into the story. Mrs. Cashel Hoey's novel, "Dark Cybel," is made up of very slight materials, but it is well written. There is an air of reality about the personages and events which ensure our attention throughout. There is nothing in the shape of nonsense or sensationalism introduced. We feel that what happens might have happened, and, indeed, has happened many times over, and we are grateful, accordingly, that this fiction so closely resembles truth. Hardly less, if at all, less worthy of praise, is Mrs. Lynn Linton's "By the Law." The frequent antagonism between law and equity is well set forth in this tale. The law is with Lambert Dynevor, or Lambert Moss, as he really is, while equity is on the side of Dion Dynevor. But the burden of proof that Lambert is not his mother's son, but somebody else's, rests with Dion, no evidence that can be substantiated being forthcoming. Lambert succeeds to his mother's property, and Dion lives to vegetate on a few hundreds. Those interested in great historical characters, will find two articles to their taste, namely, "Affonso Henriques and the Rise of Portugal," by the Rev. F. Arnold. Both these papers are carefully written, and, as regards the latter, there is no trace of partisanship evidenced by the writer. In "The Town Mouse and the Country Mouse," the merits of town and country life are prettily evenly balanced, almost too evenly indeed. That careful weighing of every pro and con is very wearisome when judgment on the merits is withheld. With many of Mr. Buchanan's strictures on "The Modern Stage" we feel disposed to agree, but Mr. Buchanan lays down the law—or rather his views—somewhat too authoritatively, much as though he said—these views, being my dozy, are orthodox; all other people's views, being others' dozies, are heterodox. Nor is the case against the stage strengthened by the silly rant in which he indulges at the expense of that much-abused, yet very harmless official, the Lord Chamberlain. This indulgence makes one believe that Mr. Buchanan courts the applause of "the Gods." Be it so, but the applause of "the Gods" is not worth much. As to the critics, they will doubtless protect themselves from Mr. Buchanan's attacks. Doubtless these gentlemen will do what they are so well able to do—take care of themselves.

Of Belgravia, with the exception of the short biographical sketch of Mr. J. H. Houldsworth, accompanying his portrait, a sensible criticism on "the Noble Animal at the Royal Academy," and a further chapter of "Frank Raleigh of Watercombe," the contents are made up of summaries of recent doings in Cricket, Yachting, Rowing, Polo, &c., &c. To those who have not leisure to watch the progress, month by month, of their favourite in the cricket field, on the river, or elsewhere, these summaries are very useful. They are admirably compiled, and give a far better general idea of a man's performances than can be gleaned from a hasty glance at the various contests he has engaged in. "Our Van," which contains an omnium gatherum of sport, wit, and humour, is livelier even than usual. One or two of the anecdotes with which it is garnished will bear quotation. Such are the following: "A firm wrote from Germany to their agents in London, inquiring as to the credit of Coutts and Co. and (we will call the other gentlemen) A. B. and Co.; the answer was concise but true, viz., that both the firms in question were good, Coutts and Co. good for anything, A. B. and Co. good for nothing." Again, "a young lady at last year's Eton and Harrow Match at Lord's, asked, respecting a young Eton friend of hers, 'Why do they not play Mr. S. in the Eleven?' 'Oh!' was the reply, 'S. has not been playing with a straight bat lately!' 'Then why in the world does he not buy one?' was the innocent reply. Again, "At one of the Bishop of Rochester's visitations, a Kentish parson gave a little proof of his wit, when a neighbouring divine told him that he could'nt well pay attention to the address, from the annoyance of a certain small animal that was biting him. 'Simply a verification of the text,' rejoined our friend, 'The wicked flea, and no man pareneth.'" One more as to a subscriber to Bailly itself, of five years' standing, but who had never paid a subscription. When applied to, "his answer," we are told, "was not destitute of point: 'I paid your account,' he said, 'in August 186—. If you doubt my word, ask Mr. Commissioner ——.'" A reference to the public prints of the day named, showed us that it was on this very date that our friend had taken the benefit of the Act."

In Cornhill, besides the opening chapters of the new serial, "The Hand of Ethelberta," by Mr. Thomas Hardy, a well written sketch of the late Mr. Frederick Walker, A.R.A., an excellent article on "British Birds and Bird Lovers," "Venetian Popular Legends," "Art and Morality," and "The Sceptic, a Tale of Married Life," will be most attractive reading. "Penelope and other women of Homer," and "Horace's Two Philosophies," are scholarly performances.

No doubt it is within the recollection of our readers that the career and correspondence of the notorious Count Cagliostro, have been the subject of comment in these columns. Those interested in the history of this personage will find a well told narrative of his life in All the Year Round. Nor is this the only "Remarkable Adventurer" of whom we read in this periodical, for what is known of the "Count Saint Germain" is also recorded in a manner equally effective. A short tale, "The Hostess of the Raven," is very forcibly sketched and there is an admirable description of "A very low Restaurant in Paris."

Among the contents of the Leisure Hour and Sunday at Home should be mentioned papers on "Ventilation," "The Divers in South America," "Some Natural History Anecdotes," and "Recollections and Adventures of an Aeronaut" in the former, and in the latter, "A day at Norfolk Island," "Jewish Life in the time of our Lord," and "The Jews in Russia and Poland." We have, by the way, received the complete volumes for 1874 of these excellent periodicals. The nature of their contents is so generally known and appreciated that it is needless for us to mention any particular articles, or class of articles, as specially worthy of commendation. Let it suffice, if we suggest that we know of few, if any, periodicals which are better suited for presentation to the young of either sex. Every variety of subject is discussed in the pages of the Leisure Hour, while Sunday at Home, as its title betokens, is confined to one class of literature only. But each contains matter that cannot fail to entertain and instruct the youthful reader. Nor, for the matter of that, need adults hesitate about consulting their pages. We repeat, these volumes are among the most sensible gift books we know of.

The most interesting contribution to Le Monde Maçonnique, are sundry excerpts from an address by Bro. A. Arnal, to a newly initiated member of the Lodge of Besançon. We hope, if space permits it, to give a rough translation of this admirable address in some future number.

THE "KNOWING" MASON.

HOW strange, and yet how true, is the saying that the "world does not know itself," there is no mind capable of comprehending the vastness of this great machine. Every branch of business, no matter how great or how small, is but little known outside of its own world or sphere; every sect or denomination is more or less the same. The labourer or mechanic is not known by the great world of commerce, the merchant by the railroad men; the abilities of an underwriter are only known to the insurance world, so with every branch represented. The farmer, banker and railroad kings, all jog along in their own spheres and knew comparatively nothing of each other. Yet one could not well get along without the other. We all mingle together and make a busy world, all working to advance science, and get the "almighty dollar." Yet we find once in a while a man who knows it all; he will tell you all about every sect and denomination, about every branch of business represented on the globe; how ships are built and navigated; how millionaires made their fortunes; how railroad kings became rich. He will also tell you how he suggested to Franklin to fly his kite and control the elements of Heaven; how he suggested to Fulton to build a steamboat; he was the saviour of the country by being Lincoln's advisor; that he is the gem of the starry heavens, and salt of the earth; and finally he will tell you all about Masonry, when it began and when it will end. He has invested 25 cents. (most likely his all) in an "Exposure," and can tell you how the whole thing is done from the first to the thirty-third degree. He knows how Morgan was murdered, and who did it; will tell the atrocities of the Order, the heinous and blood-thirsty crimes that are committed by all Masons, and so freely he will tell you the folly and wickedness of any secret Order, where anybody can't know everybody's business. He proclaims (perhaps) that he has been a Mason and renounced it, but this he fails to get his own congregation to swallow. Trace this great apostle back, and perhaps in some little Lodge you will find he has been balloted for and rejected! But let him study and learn all that is going on in this world that is public and open, and he will then be old enough and perhaps wise enough to be a Mason. But I fear he is too much like a good old lady we once knew, who was very curious to know what was in a box, but couldn't get it open; she said she "knew well enough what was in the darned thing, but wouldn't open it for fear it would smell bad!"—Masonic Tidings.

of the ceremony being performed in an exceedingly impressive and masterly style. The following were the officers who were subsequently appointed, elected, and invested:—Bros. J. Hayes I.P.M., J. Lloyd S.W., the Rev. Philip Hains J.W., Dr. J. K. Smith P.M. Treasurer, M. Davis Secretary, W. Hamilton S.D., W. Forster J.D., W. Garlick I.G., J. J. Rose P.M. D.C., W. G. Veale Organist, F. Barnett S., and W. H. Ball Tyler. Before the close of the business, a very handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. J. Hayes I.P.M., as a token of the esteem of the brethren after his valuable services in the chair during the year. The more serious business of the day being over, the brethren and the ladies proceeded to Woodside Ferry, where 'bus and rail conveyed them to Hoylake, and a pleasant cross-country walk brought them to West Kirby, one of the most pleasant rural retreats in that neighbourhood, the place selected for the annual picnic. The party comprised about 200 ladies and gentlemen, and at the start it seemed as if bright and pleasant weather were to attend the annual "cut" of the "Mariners." Several sharp showers during the afternoon, however, interfered with the comfort and pleasure of the day, although these slight interruptions were quickly forgotten in the ample round of amusements which formed the principal portions of the programme. Races, games, dancing, &c., were on the cards, and every one seemed to enjoy the whole of the items. The only part of the arrangements which were unsatisfactory was the catering at the West Kirby Hotel, in which there was ample room for improvement. The large party started for Liverpool shortly after nine o'clock, and arrived safely, about half-past ten o'clock.

Royal Forest Lodge, No. 401.—The anniversary meeting was held on 24th June, at Hark to Bounty Inn, Staidburn. Present—Bros. Thos. G. Parker (P.G.W. West York) W.M., C. H. Rowlandson S.W., Edward Parker J.W., Joseph W. Sladen S.D., H. Harrison J.D., John Higson I.G., J. Livsey Tyler, John Slaiter Secretary. Past Masters—Bro. G. Lofthouse A.D.C. for East Lancashire. Visitors—Bros. Wm. Ainsworth P.M. 269, Wm. Roberts S.W. 369, W. Whewell P.M. P.P.G.S.B. 369, Thomas Clough 269, P.P.G.R. of East Lancashire, Edward Diggle 126 and 1504 S.D., Chas. Sutcliffe P.M. 126 and 1064. Business transacted:—The initiation of Mr. James Seed; the installation of Bro. T. G. Parker as W.M. for the ensuing year; the installing officer being Bro. Clough. The appointment by Bro. T. G. Parker W.M. of his officers for the ensuing year as above given, and his investing them with the jewels of their rank.

Drogheda Lodge, No. 411.—St. John's Day meeting, held on 24th of June, at Masonic Hall, Drogheda. Present—Bros. Jeffers W.M., Whitty S.W., Flinn J.W., Glenny S.D., Griffin J.D., Hannan (Clerk) Chaplain, Preston pro tem I.G., Browne Tyler, Clarke P.M. H.K.T. Secretary and Treasurer; P.M.'s Bros. Daly, Harbinson, Dyas. Visitors, Bros. Ratcliffe P.M. 244, Horan 77 (who kindly presided at the harmonium). Business transacted:—Letters of apology read from several members for non-attendance. Mr. Alfred Hamilton Ormsby was initiated, and subsequently Bro. Charles William Ormsby was passed to Fellow Craft degree. The brethren then adjourned to refreshment. The usual half-yearly banquet being served shortly after 7 o'clock, grace was said, both before and after refreshment, by the Rev. Bro. Hannan Chaplain. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and alternated with appropriate music. Instrumental accompaniments were effectively rendered by Bro. Horan, Grand Organist to Provincial Grand Lodge of Down, while Bros. Daly P.M., Preston, Daly jun., Ratcliffe P.M., and Knaggs, each assisted Bro. Horan by their vocal attainments in producing a musical "régalade" of no mean order. The entire company joined in the choruses. Several excellent Masonic speeches were delivered, and having spent a most enjoyable evening the company broke up shortly before 12 o'clock, the brethren departing in peace, love and harmony.

Carnarvon Lodge, 804, Havant, Hants.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Town Hall, on the 5th inst. There was a good muster of the members, all the officers being at their posts. There were also several visitors present, it being the installation of Bro. J. Lintott S.W. the W.M. elect; the ceremony being performed by Bro. Hanson, the retiring Master. There being a candidate for initiation, the ceremony was ably performed by the W.M., with honour to himself, and with the greatest satisfaction to the brethren. The banquet was held at Bro. Purnell's, the Dolphin Hotel, to which about thirty attended and spent a very pleasant evening. The following brethren were appointed officers:—H. F. Cox S.W., G. E. Purnell J.W., J. Weeks P.M. Treasurer, J. N. Hillman P.M. Secretary, H. R. Tripp P.M. M.C., T. P. Hall S.D., G. Carter J.D., Lemman I.G., Southwood and Liddell Stewards, W. Blackmore Tyler.

Clones Lodge, No. 881, Ireland.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Tuesday 6th July, at 7.0 p.m. Present—Bros. Edward L. Elliott W.M., John H. Montgomery S.W., John Robinson J.W., E. G. Fitzgerald P.M. Secretary, John Elliott P.M. Treasurer, James Martin P.M. S.D., J. W. Preslie J.D., Rev. Thos. R. Conway Chaplain, W. M. Fitzgerald I.G., William Heaney Tyler. Past Masters Bros. E. G. Fitzgerald, James Martin and John Elliott. Visitors—Bros. Alex. Dixon P.M. 11, and member of 141 Dublin; Thos. Higgins P.M. 473 Enniskillen. Business—Bro. F. C. Fitzgerald M.D. was passed to the 2nd degree. The Lodge was then lowered to the 1st degree, when business of a routine nature was transacted. Bro. J. Houston proposed, and Bro. J. Elliott seconded, that the name of Mr. James Armstrong, the Diamond, Clones, be placed on the books the usual time for ballot. The Lodge was then closed in due and ancient form, after which the brethren adjourned for refreshment, when the usual Masonic toasts were given and responded to.

Lodge Meridian, No. 893, Millbrook.—The brethren of this Lodge met in their new room, at Millbrook, on Monday 28th June, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master-elect, the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe P.G. Master of Cornwall. V.W. Bro. Wm. Veale P.M. P.P.G.J.W. introduced his lordship, and V.W. Bro. E. J. Worth P.M. P.P.G.J.W. impressively conferred the obligation. His lordship invested his officers for the year as follow:—Bros. J. H. Filmer I.P.M., E. J. Worth P.P.G.J.W. S.W., Captain H. O'Neil P.M. P.P.G.S.B. J.W., Wm. Veale P.M. P.P.G.J.W. Treasurer, the Rev. T. W. Wintle Chaplain, J. Henwood Secretary, W. H. Bickford P.M. P.P.G.S.D. S.D., W. Harris P.M. J.D., W. H. Clarke, P.M. I.G., W. Coath P.M. D.C., W. Cawse and S. Hutchings Stewards, and A. Fisher Tyler. His lordship then presented Bro. Filmer I.P.M. with a very handsome jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him by the brethren for his zeal and ability in conducting the business of the Lodge during his year of office; and in doing so his lordship expressed the very great pleasure he felt in being able to give so good an account of his immediate predecessor in the chair. Bro. Filmer, very feelingly returning thanks, said:—Right Worshipful Sir, allow me to express my gratitude to your lordship for the very kind expression you have used towards me in conveying the feelings of the brethren, as well as of your lordship, in presenting me with this costly Past Master's jewel, which I accept as a token of brotherly love and esteem, and which shall be treasured by me as one of the best and most valuable gifts I possess. Kindly excuse my emotion, for your handsome present has taken me by surprise, and I am at a loss to adequately convey my feelings on this occasion; suffice it to say that I look on this occasion as one of the proudest moments of my life, feeling deeply, as I do, the honour you have done me. During the time I had the pleasure of being Worshipful Master, it was very gratifying to see our numbers greatly increase, and my heartiest wish is, may the prosperity of the Craft still more increase and flourish under the auspices of our illustrious brother, the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, so that my words may be verified that Lodge Meridian will be the largest in the Province. Allow me to embrace this opportunity of tendering "one and all" my sincere and hearty thanks for the kindness and courtesy I have received at all times, as well as for the great assistance I have been rendered from Past Masters, which I shall always remember with pleasure.

Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1012, Bury.—A meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 1st inst., at the Derby Hotel. Present—Bros. Henry Heys I.P.M. (Ramsbottom), W. P. Woodcock S.W., Joseph T. Newbold J.W., John Halliwell P.M. Chaplain, George Spurgeon J.D., John B. Jackson P.M. D.C., James Barrett Steward, T. H. Sherborne I.G., James Thorman Tyler, Henry Maiden P.M. 191 P.P.G.S.B. E.L. Secretary, Joseph Handley P.P.G.T. E.L. Treasurer; P.M. Bro. William Handley. Visitors, Bros. G. A. O'Neil W.M. 191, Robert Whittaker P.P.G.D.C. East Lancashire 678 (Farnworth), H. Percival P.M. 274 (Newchurch), Walker W.M. 37 (Bolton), Edmund Milnes 1253 (Manchester), Ireland 1129 (Rochdale), Horridge 344 (Radcliffe), T. W. Probert S.D. 191, T. Barker J.D. 42, and a good muster of other brethren. Mr. George Ashworth, solicitor, Waterfoot, Rossendale, Mr. George McCann, spirit merchant, Bury, Mr. W. H. Hoyle, manufacturer, Mossfield, Bury, and Mr. James T. Milnes, manufacturer, Oaklands, near Bury, were unanimously balloted, and subsequently admitted to Masonic light. The initiations were performed respectively by Bros. Henry Maiden, J. B. Jackson, John Halliwell, and Joseph Handley, in a very excellent manner, and Bro. J. T. Newbold very appropriately explained the E. A. working tools. After a call to refreshment had been observed, and various toasts honoured, the Lodge was resumed in the third degree, when Bro. Harry Woodcock was duly raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason by Bro. G. A. O'Neil (brother to the late W.M. of Lodge 1012, whose place, along with that of the late Bro. Battersby S.D., is still vacant), in an exceedingly impressive manner. On the Lodge being closed down to the first degree, a presentation was made to the Lodge by Bro. Henry Heys, of a chaste set of working tools, in silver, and, on the motion of Bro. J. Halliwell, seconded by Bro. J. T. Newbold, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Heys, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes, for this handsome token of his esteem for the Lodge.

St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1125, Tiverton.—At the last regular stated Lodge, the locale chosen for the summer banquet was Dulverton, situate about 12 miles from Tiverton, just within the boundaries of the adjoining province of Somerset, and the day named was the 1st July. Accordingly, on Thursday morning last, a party of the brethren started by brake, and other conveyances, for a charming drive along the banks of the Exe and Barle for their destination. The richly-wooded scenery of the narrow and winding vale through which they passed were its most picturesque and luxuriant aspect, and was the theme of constant admiration, although familiar to many present. The course then diverged from Dulverton-road to Pixton-park, permission to visit which had been kindly accorded by the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro. G. Master, and the Dowager Countess, who is at present residing there. Here the brethren alighted from their vehicles, very pleasantly passed an hour or two in exploring the beauties of the park and gardens, under the courteous guidance of the steward and head gardener, and watching the graceful movements of the deer, Bro Gill giving additional interest to the short tour by observations on the flora and topography of the district. An adjournment took place to the Lion Hotel, Dulverton, where a very excellent and well-appointed dinner was provided by Bro. King. The company comprised Bro. Parkhouse W.M., Bro. Mills P.M. P.G.O. Secretary, Bro. Davey P.M., Gill as S.W., Crabb as J.W., Partridge, Sharland, Payne, H. Melhuish, J. Melhuish, Martin, Colsby, Wood, Bartlett, Snell, Sheppard, Vaughan, King, Arbery, Capron and others. The post prandial speeches were of the shortest description, and the brethren returned to Tiverton in the evening highly delighted with their day's outing.

Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, the 5th July, at the Moira Rooms, Freemasons' Hall. Present—Bros. Edward Frowin W.M., C. S. Jekyll S.W., W. A. Tinney J.W., E. Stanton Jones P.M. Secretary, H. Tinney I.G., J. Gilbert Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. C. Coote, J. Weaver, J. M. Chamberlin, J. Read, and many other brethren. Visitors—Bros. Dr. Stabell, Bergen, Norway, W. J. Hill St. James 177 (Scotch), F. de Leslie No. 84, J. Blyth 174, G. T. Turner and L. R. Royers 902. Business:—Lodge opened at half past 2 o'clock, minutes read and confirmed. This being the election meeting, the unanimous choice of the brethren fell on Bro. C. S. Jekyll S.W. The Lodge jewel of the highest value was voted to the retiring W.M., in approbation of the efficient manner in which he has carried out the duties of the Master's chair.

Beaminster Manor Lodge, No. 1367.—This Lodge held its usual meeting on Thursday, the 1st instant, at the White Hart Hotel, Beaminster. Present:—Bros. R. Leigh W.M., E. G. Legg S.W., T. Wetton J.W., E. Holland Secretary, J. Andrews Treasurer, S. Cox S.D., E. Toleman J.D., W. H. W. Toby D.C., F. W. Good and J. S. Webb Stewards, J. Hine I.G., F. Long Tyler; Past Masters:—Bros. J. Hine, J. S. Webb, W. H. W. Toby and James Andrews I.P.M. Bro. R. Leigh was duly installed. The annual banquet was held the same evening under the presidency of the W.M.

Truth Lodge, No. 1458.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday the 3rd of July, at Royal Archer Hotel, Dale Street, Manchester. Present:—Bros. Henry Smith W.M., Charles Pearson S.W., Charles Joel Kent J.W., J. Kinder P.M. Secretary, Thomas Tyers P.M. Treasurer, James Batcheldor S.D., James Branton J.D., Robert Caldwell P.M. D.C., R. Fallows I.G. Past Masters, Bros. Jno. W. Turner, Caldwell, Tyers, and Kinder. Business:—Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Mr. Henry James Oldham, initiated by Bro. J. Kinder P.M. in a very able manner, the W.M. Bro. Smith giving the charge. Bro. P.M. Turner withdrew two of his motions, he was also unsuccessful in carrying one for increase of subscription; on a division respecting the raising of initiation fee to seven guineas, Bro. Pearson carried his amendment for six guineas. The Lodge was closed at 6.45.

Chaucer Lodge, No. 1540.—A warrant having been granted by M.W.G.M. the Prince of Wales, the consecration of this Lodge took place on Friday, the 2nd instant, at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. The usual ceremonies were most impressively rendered by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, who had been selected for the purpose by the M.W.G.M., with the assistance of Bro. Rev. A. F. A. Woodford P.G.C. as Chaplain, and Bro. R. Wentworth Little P.M. P.G.S. Middlesex, and Secretary Girls' School, as D.C. The installation of the W.M. and the appointment of Officers followed:—Bros. T. J. Sabine P.M. 73, Treasurer 1423 and P.G.S.B. Middlesex, W.M., J. C. Mason S.W., E. S. Stidolph J.W., W. Hudson P.M. Treasurer, F. Walters P.M. P.G.P. Middlesex Secretary, Kemp S.D., E. Hudson J.D., H. Paige I.G., Hawks D.C., Rev. A. Hatch Chaplain, A. P. Steadman W.S. Votes of thanks and honorary membership were accorded to Bros. J. Hervey, R. Wentworth Little and Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, for their admirable rendering of the ceremonies, and the Lodge having been closed, an adjournment to banquet, which was provided by Bro. Spencer, took place. The new Lodge has every reason to congratulate itself on its successful inauguration, and may confidently look forward to a long and honourable career. The numerous visitors were highly pleased with everything, and especially with the very impressive manner in which the ceremonies had been carried out.

National Rifle Association—Among the valuable prizes at the forthcoming Wimbledon meeting is one for £20, contributed by the well-known firm, Messrs. Felice and Sons, of Albemarle-street, proprietors of the popular "Specialité" Sherry.

Holloway's Pills and Ointment—Despite of all competition or opposition, the sterling qualities of these remedies have caused them to maintain the first position as curative and alleviating agents. No other remedies so quickly and effectually cure diarrhœa, cramps, dysentery, and all bowel complaints of a similar character. In the most acute and violent attacks, it will be found that, no matter how severe the vomiting and pain may be, the brisk and frequent friction of this Ointment into the pit of the stomach, and abdominal surface, will allay the irritability of the stomach and soothe the pain. As soon as the vomiting, &c. has ceased, the Pills should be taken internally, to remove away irritant matter.

THE DRAMA.

The Dramatic College Fête at the Alexandra Palace—The Lady of Lyons at the Globe Theatre.

THE Dramatic College Fête, on Saturday last, was in some respects a great disappointment. From a pecuniary point of view the result was, no doubt, a success; but we were sorry to see that so few leading members of the profession were present, and that some most objectionable features of the old fêtes were still prominent. Mrs. Stirling, always prominent in any enterprise for the good of her fellow artists, once more lurked in her charming robber's cave, over which was inscribed: "Abandon cash all ye who enter here," an injunction which she tried hard to be carried out to the letter. Signor Salvini recited passages from Alfieri's tragedy of Saul with all his well-known force and fervour; Mr. H. Paulton officiated as showman to a wonderful aquarium, which included, amongst its attractions, that renowned sea-serpent of which so much has been heard and so little seen. This aquarium far surpassed its prototype at Brighton, in the oddity, if not in the number of its occupants. Mrs. Howard Paul gave her really good imitations of Mr. Sims Reeves. Selections were played from "Our Boys," "The Ticket of Leave Man," "Patient Penelope," and "Nicholas Nickleby." Richardson's Show was there, in which was performed an extraordinary drama, involving more dagger, blood and thunder, than were ever before seen on any stage. In fact the attractions of the fête were numberless, but "the trail of the serpent" was there also. It was not necessary, in the interest of a genuine charity, that a second-rate burlesque actress should sell to gentlemen, with more money than brains, a strawberry, which she had bitten, or a flower, which she had kissed, at the rate of half-a-guinea each. The dramatic profession is more subject to imputation than any other, and it was performances of this kind which threw discredit on the fêtes at the Crystal Palace, and caused them, eventually, to become resorts for many ladies of questionable character, and for some about whose character there could not be any question at all.

Miss Lottie Wilmot, with what may be called a scratch company, is now playing The Lady of Lyons at the Globe. The literary merit of Lord Lytton's play will always ensure for it a certain amount of favour in spite of its forced sentiment and its clap-trap; but we do not think that any peculiar interest is added to this occasion of its production by the brilliancy of the acting. Mr. John Nelson's is hardly the first name which would occur to us in seeking for a Claude Melnotte: Mr. McIntyre is a very heavy villain as Beauseant, and Mr. T. Mead, who plays Colonel Dumas, has hardly yet recovered from his ghostly experiences at the Lyceum. Miss Wilmot is a pretty and intelligent actress, but her physical powers hardly enable her to cope with such a part as Pauline, which requires great command of force and passion.

NEW MASONIC HALL, PARSONSTOWN.

THIS new hall has been dedicated and opened during last month. It is for the use of the brethren of St. Brendon's Lodge, 163. According to the local papers, some eight months since the committee obtained possession of a house in William Street, and having removed the top floor and all the partitions, found at their disposal a room which measured about 31ft. long by 17ft. wide, and 15ft. high to the braces of the roof. They then instructed Mr. A. B. Milne, C.E., to prepare plans for its conversion into a hall suitable for the meeting of their Ancient Order, and under his direction and superintendence the various works have been carried out. Throughout the whole there has been an endeavour to keep to the mediæval spirit which caused all work to exhibit its construction, and to make the constructive features ornamental—not to hide any work or material, but to let it tell its own story of its quality and use. All the exposed woodwork, as the ribs, consoles, pilasters, door and door-case, are simply stained and varnished, thus showing out the natural grain and beauties of the timber, while machine mouldings stuck on, and all imitations of any kind have been carefully avoided.

Under the supervision of Mr. R. J. Sheppard, the Secretary of the Building Committee, the Masonic details were carried out. The ribs, consoles, and entire gasfitting and heating arrangements were supplied by Messrs. Wallace and Co., of Wilmer-road; Messrs. Brooks, Thomas and Co., Dublin, executed the painting and decorating, attended to by Mr. Morris; and the carpentry and joinery, inclusive of benches and chairs, was the work of Messrs. Carroll and Dillon, all of which, we are informed, was satisfactorily executed.—Irish Builder, 1st July 1875.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 118 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

THE REV. SIR E. R. JODRELL, BART. TO MESSRS. FELTOE & SONS, 27 ALBEMARLE STREET, W.

WHEN at Galt I received an Analytical Report of your "SPECIALITE" SHERRY, and you must forgive me for saying that at first I regarded the whole matter as a most egregious piece of humbug. Having, however, tasted the Wine in question, and found it most agreeable to the palate, I determined, on my own responsibility, to have it analysed for myself, having fully also determined previously to expose any hoax, pro bono publico, or to give you the benefit of the analysis, should it turn out in your favour. I have the pleasure to forward you Professor Redwood's (of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain) Analysis, which says more than I can express. I am very particular as to the wine I drink, and as I have been hitherto buying every-day Sherry at 80s per dozen, I am rejoiced to find now that I can purchase Wine of equal strength and superior bouquet at half that price. This should be known to the general public, and you can make any use you deem proper of this letter, and also of Professor Redwood's most elaborate Analysis.

A WATER PARTY.

RESIDENTS on the quiet banks of the Thames at Richmond or Kew are accustomed, at this season of the year, to receive a large influx of visitors resolutely bent on enjoyment. They are not indeed of the class who care to inspect the rare botanical treasures of the latter named place, nor are they at all disposed to ramble in Richmond Park, and eat sandwiches under the shadow of its noble elms. These people are of the well-to-do classes, who know how to dine, who have acquired the art of spending what dear old Charles Lamb called "a shoemaker's holiday" in the most agreeable fashion. A stranger who should stand on Kew Bridge about eleven o'clock on any morning in July might wonder what Royal craft was moored in the stream. He would hear the agreeable "tooting" of Dan Godfrey's band stationed on the ample deck of a noble-looking vessel, gay with the bright dresses and brilliant bonnets of the ladies. If our stranger desired accurate information, the youngest inhabitant might possibly be able to tell him that the frigate-like craft is the so-called "Civic Barge," and the people on her decks good substantial citizens with their wives and daughters. He might learn that the dear old craft had made a score or so of trips up the river this season, and that the City Companies, who know what it is to dine well, the Corporate Authorities, and, perhaps a Masonic Lodge or two, had figured amongst her passengers. A trip on board the "Maria Wood" is, indeed, regarded by many people as the very acme of pleasure. Some of our acquaintances, who are great men amongst the Fishmongers or the Goldsmiths, boast of having "gone up the river" every year for the last decade. For our own part we should vote a repetition of any pleasure, however sublime it might be, as rather slow, but the "Maria Wood" is a unique craft of her kind, and if the caterer does his duty, or rather, if cash be no object, one may spend a whole day on board in the most gentle of all imprisonment without running any risk of being drowned. As no guest has ever yet voted the civic barge a prison, or has run any risk of a watery grave through her agency, she does not come under Dr. Johnson's definition of a ship. If she grounds at low water in the upper reaches of the stream, the most nervous lady on board never feels the least alarm, and her stability is so great that the paddles of the most troublesome of river steamers never have the effect of disturbing her equanimity. Many of our Masonic friends are no doubt fully acquainted with the merits of the old craft, and indeed we may venture to say that she never makes a pleasure trip without carrying a goodly sprinkling of the fraternity. Masons are supposed to be skilled in the art of dining out, but doubtless at this season most of our brethren would rather partake of a cold collation on board "the Barge" than they would sit down to a more ambitious spread at the "Star and Garter," or the "Trafalgar." Let us imagine that we are favoured guests of some Civic Company, and that we have stepped upon the deck of the old craft in time to partake of a late breakfast. The "providitors" are at their posts to receive us as we reach the gangway; we dive down to the spacious saloon, with appetites sharpened by our journey from town, and at once make serious inroads upon the good things placed before us. The barge casts off from her moorings at twelve o'clock, and proceeds slowly up the stream with her gay freight, who drink their coffee and discuss their ham and tongue to the accompaniment of delicious music. A gentle breeze enters the windows, and plays around us as we pass along amid some of that characteristic scenery which has so often excited the admiration of our transatlantic brethren. We pass green banks and gay gardens gemmed with flowers, and bright sunny villas, the abodes of wealth and fashion. Noble trees almost dip their foliage into the stream, which scarcely ripples under the bows of the slowly gliding craft. All is gaiety and animation. The old gentleman opposite tells you that this makes his twentieth annual trip, and that he never enjoyed himself so much in his life as on this occasion. He has made the same remark for the last twenty years, and it is therefore evident that he is rapidly reaching a climax, and will, some day or other, sink under the influence of his highly wrought feelings. Your next neighbour is a distinguished Mason; you always meet him where Masons most do congregate, and he tells you that he is here by virtue of his position as Liveryman of the Worshipful Company of Frying-pan Makers, who are the hosts of the day. The Worshipful Company never dines or goes up the river without its beadle, and that worthy, arrayed in gorgeous robes, his venerable head roofed with an enormous cocked hat, stands behind the master's chair, the observed of all observers. He looks uncommonly like a fossil man, and you imagine he has been dug up from some deep limestone formation, and decked in gay habiliments merely to give an air of respectable antiquity to the whole affair.

Breakfast over, the younger portion of the guests at once commence the mazy dance, under the influence of the magic strains of the band. The thoughtful providitors have provided neat gilt programmes of the dances, and the young ladies book their engagements under the ample awning of the barge as coolly as if they were about to foot it merrily on the boards at Freemasons' Hall. Staid gentlemen of middle age, whose dancing days are over, retire to the attendant shallop to smoke a morning cigar over a quiet glass of soda and brandy, and discuss the politics of the week. The shallop, indeed, is a great favourite with the lovers of the fragrant weed, who, reclining at their ease and watching the cool stream as the boat glides over its clear depths, or rather shallows, or following in imagination the blue smoke wreaths that curl up into spiral rings in the still air, may dream to their heart's content. A cold collation at three o'clock is the great event of the day, and at this the guests assemble with appetites by no means impaired by the previous inroads they have made upon the breakfast. One can feed quietly off cold lamb and a salad, washed down with hock or iced champagne, or more luxuriantly, but perhaps not more agreeably, off the numerous good things under which the table groans. There is more dancing after dinner, and when tea has been handed round the ladies are called up to the cuddy to participate in a lottery concocted by the Master, and at his own personal expense, where all the lots are prizes. One wishes one were a member of the female persuasion as one sees the exquisite cut scent bottles, the expensive Russia leather purses, and the other treasures disappear into the pockets of the fortunate winners. This little ceremonial over, the barge turns her bluff bows homeward, and amid the sounds of music and the measured tread of active dancers she takes up her old moorings off Kew Bridge long before the shadows of night have descended upon the river.

THE RETIRING MASTERS OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

IN our recent article on the Boys' School we mentioned, as one of the subjects in connection with it which had excited in us the strongest feelings of regret, that changes in the educational staff were again imminent. We pointed out that in the preceding Report, for the year 1873, it was stated, "A due regard for the important interests entrusted to their care, has forced upon the Committee the imperative necessity of introducing changes in the Educational department." A year elapses, and we are told, "Important changes have again taken place in the Instruction department, including the resignation of the Head Master, the Assistant Masters having also been replaced by new appointments." We remarked how damaging to the interests of this Institution such frequent changes must be, and we urged upon the Committee the desirability of selecting such new masters as would make the recurrence of similar changes in the last degree improbable. Elsewhere we publish a letter from the "Four Retiring Masters," and we have received from various quarters several other communications, all bearing on the unfortunate differences which have arisen as to the management of the School. We have no intention whatever of passing judgment on the contents of these documents. We are strictly impartial in the matter, and are only anxious that the interests of the boys should not suffer in the course of this turmoil. Moreover, the present time, when the grand success of the recent Festival is yet fresh in the minds of our readers, appears to be very favourable for bringing under notice some of the most important statements connected with these disputes.

We note, in the first instance, that the report to the Cambridge Syndicate, of the examiner, Mr. Finlaison, as regards the progress in study made by the boys is generally satisfactory, while as regards the discipline of the school it is overwhelmingly so. On the former point Mr. Finlaison remarks, firstly and generally, "I have great pleasure in certifying that the average educational condition of the boys, having regard to their ages and duration of residence in the school, is satisfactory—in some respects very much so—notwithstanding that I may feel it my duty to call attention to some points in which improvement is desirable." Then dealing seriatim with the subjects of study the examiner say, "In Scripture I had some very fair answers," notably from certain boys, while "in the second class the average was decidedly good." He thinks it would have been better had they taken up fewer books of the Old and New Testament and learned them more thoroughly, while he cautions them against answering at random. Again, "in Catechism," he say, "I was extremely well satisfied throughout. The boys appear to have got a very good text book, and to have made a very good use of it. Some boys also showed very considerable thought." In English Grammer "some fair essays were written, but, as a whole, the grammatical portion of the paper was weakly answered." Then, "the spelling and writing were unquestionably good throughout the school." In History, sundry boys answered remarkably well, "but the bulk of the school would do better to pay more attention to the leading principles of history." "In Geography, the map drawing was very good indeed," but greater attention is recommended "to geographical descriptions of countries." As regards Latin, "the average translation was fairly good, but the relative strength of the second class, as compared with the first, was not so great." "The French paper was very well answered throughout the school." "The German, which I examined viva voce, exhibited a satisfactory average." "The answers in Euclid were very fairly done, both viva voce and in writing." In Arithmetic the average merit was fair; but by no means remarkable. "The Algebra was not quite so satisfactory," and more attention to this subject is suggested. "The junior classes appear to possess fully as much information, and that of as sound a character as their ages would warrant one in expecting." Now nothing is easier than to praise or blame wholesale, but it will be remarked that Mr. Finlaison has passed judgment on the school with the nicest discrimination. He has not hesitated to point out faults, while giving every credit to what is admirable. This makes his judgment valuable, nor can it be denied that his opinion is, on the whole, very satisfactory to the masters and the manner in which they have performed their duties. As to the other point, the conduct of the boys, the examiner is stronger in his praise. "The conduct of the boys," he remarks, "was so uniformly good and highly disciplined that it is plain that no ordinary pains has been taken with them in this respect." On the strength of this report, the Head and Assistant Masters have every reason to congratulate themselves.

The next point to which we must call attention is the unenviable position of one of the subordinate officials of the school—to wit, the Matron. We presume no one in his senses would allow that any such official should have it in her power to thwart the views of the Head Master. We care not what school is in question, whether it be Eton, with its tutors and dames, or a small preparatory academy, with a head master and one or two ushers, it is clear the success of the school, both as regards moral and religious training, depends absolutely on the exercise of a supreme authority by the head master, subject of course to the laws and limitations imposed on him by the governing body. Without such a regulation, the management of a school would become a farce. We are convinced the Committee are too fully alive to the importance of their own duties and of those of their Head Master to sanction in any way the interference with the latter of any person properly subordinate to him. Into the complaints raised by the Assistant Masters against the Matron we shall not pause to enquire. They are ex parte to begin with. The Matron may be in a position to meet them, or they may be incontrovertible. At all events it is no business of ours to pass judgment on the merits. But be they right or wrong, the fact of such charges being bandied about between the Masters and the Matron is not creditable to the Institution. We judge of the excellence of a piece of machinery when we find the parts of which it is composed work harmoniously together. Here there seems to have been not only no harmony, but absolute discord, to what cause attributable remains to be decided.

Our respected Bro. Binckes says that all the statements in Bro. Tew's phamphlet, to which we recently referred, can be answered satisfactorily. The Rev. Bro. Perrott is anxious for a complete investigation into his conduct. The four retiring Under Masters give chapter and verse for their several allegations, and the Matron, no doubt, is ready with a complete answer to all that has been urged against her. We are no advocates for stirring muddy water; but if the Committee take no further steps, injustice to some of those concerned must be the result. It is clearly a case in which the Committee must exercise a very great amount of discretion. Equally clear is it that the Committee owe it as a duty to the supporters of the Institution that everything of a polemical character between the Head Master and his subordinates should be put down with a firm hand. There must be no war between masters and servants, or the boys will suffer. The one authority before which masters and servants must equally bow is that of the Committee.

THE RICHMOND COMMANDERY IN THE NORTHERN STATES.

THE presence of this Commandery in Boston for the purpose of sharing in the centennial celebration of the Battle of Bunker's Hill has been made the opportunity for a grand display, not only of Templar Masonry, but of a truly Masonic enthusiasm between the brethren of the Northern and Southern States. The Northern papers give most glowing descriptions of the reception accorded to the Richmond Knights by the Boston Commanderies, and speak, with a natural pride, of Masonry being among the most powerful of the many agencies at work to re-unite heartily, as they are governmentally, the two sections of the United States, the North and South, a few years since engaged in so terrible a struggle. The enthusiasm of the Bostonians for their Southern guests was immense, and as hearty as it was grand, while the latter are deeply sensible of the fervour and patriotism with which they have been greeted in Boston and other Northern cities.

The Richmond Commandery, No. 2 of Virginia, reached the Providence depôt, Boston, on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 16th ult. The officers accompanying them were E. Sir Wm. E. Tanner, Commander; Sir Wm. T. Allen, Generalissimo; Sir L. L. Bass, Captain-General; Rev. Sir George C. Vanderslice, Prelate; Sir O. M. Marshall, Treasurer; Sir George R. Pace, Recorder; Sir John E. Laughton jun. Senior Warden; Sir J. T. Keesee, Junior Warden; Sir John J. Wright, Standard Bearer; Sir Chas. T. Binford, Sword Bearer; Sir J. Thompson Brown, Warder; Sir Thomas Angel, Sentinel. With them also were R.E. Sir W. B. Isaacs, Gr. Commander of Virginia, and E. Sir F. A. Reed, Commander of Old Dominion Commandery of Alexandria. At the depôt the Richmond Knights, seventy-six in number, were met by the De Molay Commandery, and escorted to Park Square, where the public honours were given, after which the two bodies formed into procession, with the other Boston Commands, in the following order:—

Brown's Brigade Band.
Boston Commandery, 275 Knights, General Sir S. C. Lawrence, Commander.
Brockton Band.
Palestine Commandery of Chelsea, 130 Knights.
Lynn Brass Band.
St. Omar Commandery of South Boston, 76 Knights.
Salem Band.
Joseph Warren Commandery of Boston Highlands, 110 Knights.
Fall River Band.
William Parkman Commandery of East Boston, 76 Knights.
Metropolitan Band.
Cœur de Lion Commandery of Charlestown District, 100 Knights.
Hall's Brass Band.
De Molay Commandery of Boston, 200 Knights.
Sheriff Sir John M. Clark, Em. Commander, accompanied by a detachment of Hugh de Payen Commandery of Melrose, acting as a color-guard.
Kozmich's Band of Richmond, Va.
Richmond Commandery, No. 2, of Virginia, 76 Knights.
Col. Sir William R. Tanner, Em. Commander.

Thus the procession included over a thousand Templars, all in complete regalia, while the several bands swelled the column to over 1,100. Having passed through the principal streets of the city, the procession at length reached Faneuil Hall shortly after six o'clock, the enthusiasm on the line of march being very great, and this was intensified when the column reached the residence of Sir Curtis Gould, on Columbus Avenue, and every member of the visiting Commandery was presented, by a party of young ladies, with a beautiful bouquet. At the Hall, the Eminent Commander of the De Molay Commandery delivered an address of welcome on the part of the Masonic fraternity, while Alderman John T. Clark welcomed the Richmond Knights to the city of Boston. E. Commander Sir W. E. Tanner appropriately acknowledged this address, after which R. E. Sir Charles Stott, Gr. Commander of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, expressed the welcome of the Gr. Commandery, and to this, Grand Commander Sir W. B. Isaacs, of Virginia responded. An impromptu banquet followed, after which the Knights marched to American House, where, later in the evening, the De Molay and Richmond Commanderies enjoyed a substantial repast.

On Thursday the Battle of Bunker's Hill was commemorated, Masonry taking a very conspicuous part in the ceremonial. Among those present were M.W. Grand Master Percival C. Everett, wearing the Masonic apron originally worn by General Warren as Master of his Lodge, and M.W. Past Grand Master Dr. Winslow Lewis, who wore the apron formerly belonging to the Marquis De Lafayette, with a number of officers of Grand Lodge, together with the Grand Senior Wardens as representing the Board of Directors of the Masonic Temple, and a large number of invited guests, including M.W. Bro. Josiah H. Drummond, Grand Master of Maine, and head of the Supreme Council of the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States, M.W. Bro. Gen. Israel Hunt, Past Grand Master of New Hampshire, and R.W. Bro. Wiston, who was Grand Marshal of the Masonic processions when the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument was laid some fifty years ago. The De Molays joined the Richmonds at American House at 8.30 a.m., and conducted them, amid the plaudits of a vast crowd of spectators, to the site of the old redoubt near the Monument, and here further addresses of welcome were delivered and acknowledged, the principal part of the day's business not being overlooked. The fraternisation of the Northern and Southern brethren was made as complete as possible. The guests were then marched off to the Green Dragon building occupying the site of the Old Green Dragon Tavern where the first Lodge of Masons in Boston were wont to hold their sittings, and from this point the guests witnessed the Grand Centennial procession. Further speech-making followed, and in the evening the Richmond Knights visited the Globe Theatre. The week closed with a grand banquet given by the De Molay Commandery at American House, under the presidency of Em. Commander Sir John M. Clark, Sheriff of the County, there being considerably over three hundred guests. Before leaving Boston for Providence and New York, E. Commander Sir W. E. Tanner was presented with a handsome jewel of gold, the gift of the ladies of Boston, made in the form of a Maltese Cross 2½ inches square with the monogram O.V.M. representing Virginia and Massachusetts, with a legend in commemoration of this visit. They then left for Providence, where the reception they experienced was equally cordial, while at New York a delegation of the Palestine Commandery, of which the M.W. Bro. Ellwood E. Thorne, Grand Master of New York State, is Commander, awaited their arrival. After breakfast they were conducted over the new Masonic Temple, and on the Thursday following left, under escort of the Palestine Commandery, for Jersey City, whence they took train home again for Richmond.

So magnificent a reception was in every way worthy of Masonry, and will doubtless do more than anything else to cement and extend the feelings of brotherly love between the Northern and Southern States.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL.

The following returns have been made since the publication of our last list:—

Royal Standard, No. 1298, per H. T. Mozen S.D.			£20	19 0
Joppa, Royal Arch Chapter, No. 188, per H. M. Levy M.E.Z.			26	4 0

Bardett, No. 1293, per F. Kelly W.M.			10	10 0
Sir Watkin, No. 1477, per John Corbett J.W.			5	5 0

Eclectic, No. 1201, should be £21, not £64 1s, as published in our last.

A Quarterly General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Saturday, the 10th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, Bro. Major Creaton V.P. P.G.D. in the chair. Bro. R. W. Little, Secretary, read the minutes of the former meeting, also those of the General Quarterly Court of the 10th of April, which were confirmed. It was then announced that Miss Davis had resumed her position of Head Mistress, while Miss Moss returned to the post previously held by her. In pursuance of a notice of motion by Bro. T. W. White, the rank of Vice-Patron of the Institution was conferred on Bro. I. S. Howell, in acknowledgment of his long and valuable services as Honorary Medical Officer. It was also proposed by Bro. Griffiths Smith that the rank of Honorary Vice-President be conferred on Bro. Peter Matthews, in recognition of his valuable services, as Honorary Dental Surgeon, for many years. The two propositions were carried unanimously. The M.W. Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon and the R.W. Lord Skelmersdale D.G.M. were elected trustees of the Institution. The names of thirty candidates were placed on the list for the next election, there being six vacancies. A vote of thanks was accorded to the Chairman, and the meeting was adjourned. There were present Bros. H. Browse, J. Symonds, Peacock, J. R. Webster, T. W. White, Griffiths Smith, Harriss, H. Massey, and H. M. Levy.

The regular monthly meeting of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Wednesday, 14th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street. Bro. Major Creaton V.P. P.G.D. in the chair. Bro. Jas. Terry, Secretary to the Institution, read the minutes of the former meeting, also the Report of the Finance Committee, which were confirmed, and the Secretary announced that in two years 22 annuitants had been elected, and they had the sum of £3,500 to be invested, showing the prosperous state of the Institution. Several deaths were announced, and petitions were handed in. On the various qualifications being found correct, the names were placed on the list. Mr. G. Lee Hill was elected Clerk in the Office in place of Mr. Jones, the late Clerk. A sum of £10 was voted, to be given for the purpose of entertaining the inmates, the same as was done on a previous occasion; the date to be fixed hereafter.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—These twin remedies exercise, in a manner peculiar to themselves, such an effect on the Liver and excretory organs of the body, that the presence of inspissated Bile or any foreign, effete or morbid material in the stomach and bowels is rendered almost impossible. It is scarcely possible to over estimate the benefit conferred on mankind by such results, for if used in the commencement of bilious disorders and intestinal irritations, the removal of the exciting cause would reduce to a minimum, if it did not altogether avert, the suppression of typhoid and enteric Fevers, which are in the present day so rife amongst all classes of the community, especially during the hot and sultry summer months.

THE MASTER OF A LODGE—HIS DUTIES.

(From the CANADIAN MASONIC NEWS.)

IT has often occurred to us that the nature of the engagements, both expressed and implied, which are entered into by the Master of a Lodge, is, in general, but indifferently understood or appreciated. It is reasonable to presume that any man of ordinary understanding, who has gone through the subordinate offices, will, by the time he reaches the chair, be able to perform his part in the ceremonies of the Lodge with accuracy and propriety. If not, he must be a cypher, "if he can do nothing, but say nothing, he shall be nothing here." But we have a right to expect more than the getting by rote a few phrases. The Master should possess, and should be able to impart, some knowledge of the meaning and origin of our ceremonies, which, unless explained, may seem frivolous or tedious formalities. They are, it is true, calculated to awaken rational curiosity, and are fraught with meaning: Masonry, still bearing the impress of its Asiatic origin, teaches its moral precepts by symbolical actions. But explanation is needed to convey that meaning, and "THE MASTER" is not only supposed to be a master of men, but a master of work. The vulgar and illiterate may stand amazed at what they cannot comprehend: but Masonry is not confined to the vulgar and illiterate; men of high intellectual acquirements in our society, anxious not merely to share in its benefits, but to be instructed in the boasted philosophy that is "veiled in its allegories and illustrated by its symbols." Why, then, should we tolerate that ignorance which is the result of mere apathy? Surely it is worth while to know somewhat of a subject which engages the attention of many estimable and intelligent persons. And the means of that knowledge are in our reach. Masonry has now broken through the restraint which the timid jealousy of our predecessors had imposed upon it. We have shared in the irresistible progress of the age, and we now have Masonic treatises, magazines and journals, all devoted to the explanation of Masonic history, antiquities and principles. We attract more attention than heretofore, as appears not only by the multiplicity of our authorized publications, but by the host of spurious and despicable rituals and pretended exposures which feed the credulity of the vulgar.

To become Master of his Lodge is the legitimate object of every young brother who takes any interest in our Society. The very questionable policy of our present regulations seems to be to open to each in succession the way to the Mastership—almost, if not altogether, as a matter of course. Now, our younger brethren may rest assured, that although in deference to a usage, which it is too late, perhaps, to abolish, we may place a careless or ignorant Mason in the chair, invest him with the badge of authority, and address him with the external forms of respect, we cannot command for him the deference and consideration which will be sure to follow the enlightened and expert. He will be like the figure-head of a ship—placed foremost, and gaudily decorated; but, after all, it is a mere effigy, not contributing in the least to the management of the vessel. In small, as in great things, knowledge is power—intellectual superiority is real pre eminence.

An ignorant Master, may, however, find some charitable friend to prompt him—some expert craftsman to explain for him what he could not explain for himself. All that is but little creditable to the Master's ability, and cannot, one would think, be gratifying to his good opinion of himself, yet it is not necessarily injurious to the institution. But what shall we say of those who regard the office of Master of a Lodge as no more and no less than the presidency of a convivial club, which is to have no more effect upon our conduct in life than as it may enable us to pass a pleasant evening occasionally in sociable company? This is not so uncommon a case. The prevalence of this notion of Masonry (especially among the higher classes of society) has in a measure paralyzed its powers in doing good, and made it at best the empty image of what it ought to be, and might be, if well understood and thoroughly practised. We are often taunted with making too much of Masonry; but the truth is, we greatly underrate both its objects and capabilities, and are, therefore, too ready to admit men among us whom we can hardly expect to bestow a single thought upon either. The avowed enemies of Masonry have striven hard, but in vain, to injure it. Our worst foes have been those of our own household, who have tarnished the brightness of Masonic purity, and lowered the standard of Masonic excellence.

Let us hope, however, that as juster notions have begun to prevail, the office of Master will cease to be a mere name, and will resume its ancient utility and importance.

The Master's rights do not take effect until his installation. Once installed, his authority becomes absolute in his own Lodge, although due checks are provided by the Constitutions of Freemasonry against the arbitrary exercise of it. It is presumed that his brethren have elected one in whom they may confide, and that his conduct will be neither capricious nor tyrannical; therefore, by the immemorial Masonic law, obedience is his right, and he must be obeyed accordingly. By electing him, his brethren have given him, so far as they are concerned, an indefeasible right to preside in the Lodge during his term of office; therefore, they cannot remove, suspend, nor censure him, nor vote him from the chair, nor prevent him from taking it. They cannot compel him to open, close, or adjourn the Lodge. He does all this at his own pleasure, as our ancient forms of opening and closing sufficiently prove; and here, let us remark, how practically useful are these ancient forms, which are frequently hurried over, as too familiar. Every Master should insist upon those being strictly observed and accurately repeated in his Lodge, without abridgment or alteration. They remind each officer of his duty, and all of the due subordination which so peculiarly distinguishes the society.

There are certain matters which the Master must decide on his own responsibility, and on which he should not put any question to the Lodge—namely, all points of order, ceremonial, Masonic law and discipline, in which we include the arrangement of Lodge business. These he must determine according to his own conscientious notions of what is right, no matter how urgently he may be pressed to the contrary: if he does not, he is unworthy of his station. And his decision on each question should be at once and cheerfully submitted to. There must be no altercation, protesting, disputing or remonstrating between the Master and the craftsmen. Even the ordinary marks of approbation or disapprobation are unmasonic and irregular. As, in a court of justice, the opinion of the judge, though not always assented to as correct, is invariably treated with deference, and presumed to be right until it has been set aside by superior authority, so it should be with the decisions of a master in his Lodge. And it is for the common benefit of all of us to uphold the authority unimpaired; because the temporary inconvenience which may result from an error of the Master's judgment, or even from an occasional abuse of his powers, is of far less moment than the preservation of the harmony and order which it is one of our chief ends to attain.

But the Master is always amenable to the Grand Lodge, and any well-grounded complaint against him may be preferred there. Then, indeed, it becomes his duty to submit, with ready and cordial acquiescence, to the ultimate decision of the supreme Masonic power.

It is true that mutual forbearance is so much inculcated, and good feeling so widely prevails among us, that in the hands of a judicious ruler all goes on with easy and undeviating regularity. But we can assure them that in a well regulated Lodge there is ample scope for the exercise of intellect; and that the Master will soon find that he requires even more than a knowledge of Masonic laws and usages to acquit himself creditably of his responsibility. He should know his own limits, so as not to encroach upon the rights of his brethren, of which we candidly warn every Master. If he falls short of his own bounds, or oversteps them, he will find clear heads and keen tongues to remind him, respectfully, but unmistakably, of the fact. The Lodge will soon feel what sort of hands hold the helm; and, as they are bound to acquiesce in his opinion, as their Master, he must show equal deference to theirs when the question is to be settled by their votes. He may speak, and he may vote in the deliberations of the Lodge, but he must not let his conduct become liable to the imputation of partiality; for he is still entrusted with the duty of taking a division, or of a ballot; and though a division or ballot often takes place on questions of no great moment, yet it sometimes happens that the credit and character of individuals are vitally affected by the determination of the Lodge. Also, the peace and harmony of the Lodge, as well as its dignity, are to a great extent in his keeping.

One of the ancient privileges of a Master, was the right to summon his Lodge for "meetings of emergency." And should the Master die, or be suspended or expelled, the Wardens might convoke the Lodge, since there then would be no Master, and they, as well as he, are entrusted with the government of it.

As it is not only the Master's privilege, but also his duty to rule the Lodge, none are permitted to enter it as visitors but by his permission, since he is responsible for the conduct of the assembly. At a communication of the United Grand Lodge of England, held near the close of the year 1856, this subject was discussed, and the resolution unanimously passed was—"That it is the opinion of this Grand Lodge that it is in the power of the W.M. and Wardens of any private Lodge to refuse admission to any visitor of known bad character. But irrespectively of character, whoever claims to be present at a Masonic meeting must, if a Mason, be perfectly well aware that he is bound to satisfy the Master and brethren as to his qualifications. The investigation into them cannot be too strict, and it should never be entrusted but to a sagacious as well as competent examiner. The Master has the right to demand all the evidences of the visitor's right to admission—the production of his certificate—the proof of his being what he asserts himself to be, and any other test that he can devise. It is of course disagreeable to reject any one professing to be a brother, but it is better that many true Masons should go away disappointed from our doors than that one unauthorised person should gain admittance there.

It is hardly necessary to remind any one, however inexperienced, that the Master is as much Master during the entertainments of the Lodge as at any other time; and is bound, accordingly, to check any irregularity, and to prevent any abuse. For this reason it is advisable our entertainments should take place "in Lodge," as it is called; for the Master can thus exercise a salutary restraint over the meeting; and the closing of the Lodge (which should always take place at an early hour) is a signal for the members to retire.

One of the charges, to the observance of which each Master solemnly pledges himself at his installation, is to guard against all manner of intemperance and excess. Now, of all the charges brought against Masonry by its opponents, none is more frequently made than that of its leading to intemperance. We know that some cases have occurred where individuals have brought discredit on the Masonic Society, by indulging at our social meetings propensities which they certainly never acquired from our precepts, nor from the example of those we most look up to and respect. The world will not, however, draw those nice exculpatory distinctions; it will judge of us, not by the conduct of the many, who retire from the Lodge festival, as from a private party, early, and after temperate and harmless enjoyment, but by that of the few, who, in defiance of our principles, and in spite of our example, will remain at table after the Lodge has closed, and the meeting lost its Masonic character. This is an evil, and one which we cannot always prevent. We cannot turn men's hearts; we may advise, and we may act upon our own principles, but advice is not like medicine, which will produce an effect whether taken voluntarily or forced down a man's throat. We may point to the Sacred Law, that Great Light which should be the guide of the Mason's path in life, and remind our brethren of its precepts, but surely we cannot expect that Masonry will effect what genuine religion has not yet been able to accomplish. say, why do you suffer such persons to disgrace your Society? why do you not rather expel them? Simply because we cannot set up an inquisition to punish men because they want common sense or common prudence, or because we cannot get them to adopt our views of propriety. But though the world often unjustly imputes to Masonry the faults of individual Masons, for that very reason let each Master, each true Mason, be vigilant. Let each sweep before his own door, the street will soon be clean. Excess in even allowable things is transgression. "No deviation," says the excellent Bishop Hall, "is the silken thread running through the pearl chain of all virtues."

We have said the brethren must, in all lawful things, obey their Master. He, on his part, should have no object but the advantage, welfare and comfort of his brethren. He should be careful to preserve uniformity, and to hand down unaltered to our successors what we have ourselves received. Masonry is universal,—it knows no limit of country, or language, or time; therefore, its essential points must be strictly observed; if not, it will lose its universality, and, to the same extent, its utility. Ceremonies must indeed change from time to time, and from country to country, but the essentials of the institution—its universal language and reciprocal obligations—must be carefully preserved from all addition or diminution; we must adhere to the form in which we have learned them; we have no right to change even the antiquated phraseology to please the fastidiousness of modern taste. It was well said, "you may polish an old coin, to make it more legible; but if you go on polishing it, it will soon be a coin no longer." And the Master should take care that every newly-admitted or newly-raised brother shall be fully instructed in all the essentials of the degree he has received—that he shall know to whom and to what he is bound. He has come to seek the light of knowledge, and it is his right to receive it, full and pure, from him whose duty it is to impart it—the Master in the chair.

But it is not by learned researches—by groping in the darkness of the past—that we can best serve the institution, and do good in our own generation. It matters little to us whether the rites of Masonry can be traced to patriarchal times; to the exploded mysteries of heathenism; to the Jewish temple builders; or, as some suppose, merely to the artificers whose labours covered Europe during the middle ages with such wonderful monuments of skill and perseverance. It is with the morality of the Society, not with its literary curiosities, but with the utility of it, that we have essentially to do. It professes to be founded on the two sublime and simple precepts, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and thy neighbour as thyself."

Masonry may be older, or newer—we know not, and shall probably never know when it originated, or how; but these were the rules prescribed by the All-wise and All-merciful for the rational creatures of His hands, before the foundations of the world were laid. Throughout all the globe we inhabit—throughout the vast immensity of creation, obedience to these commands, universal as the presence of Him who has ordained them, constitutes the moral happiness of rational beings.

Living Faith, and Active Benevolence, are the real foundations of Freemasonry. Masters of Lodges, keep that fact in the view of your brethren, your words and style may be rude and unpolished, but if your hearts be in them they will awaken admiration and sympathy.

It is generally supposed, by those who do not object to Masonry as a positive evil, that it is at least a harmless charitable association; but, in truth, the real spirit of Masonry is not confined to the relief of a brother's physical wants, or the preservation of a brother's life in peril—of which we have all heard many interesting instances. Such occasions seldom occur; but every day affords opportunity to promote our brother's temporal good by lawful and honourable means; to help him, by enabling him to help himself; to extend our sympathy to his troubles, and our charity to his failings and imperfections; to make peace between friends; to warn one of his danger, another of his errors—to be patient, tolerant, and forgiving toward all.

And it is because Masonry brings into exercise qualities of which all acknowledge the excellence, that it has its vitality, universality, and importance. A bitter enemy of Masonry, through the public press, asked, "Who has sanctioned this combination, that it thus be permitted to spread over the world, and act as it liketh, at all seasons and in all places? It may exist in the Government, or the seat of justice, in the jury-box, in the legislature, in the army, in the navy, and even among our own dependents; it may plot or cabal against us, or for us; we are powerless in its meshes; they may, in spite of us, plot together against us? How insignificant is the power of the confessional when compared to this."

It is pleasant to think that, so far as regards the diffusion of our Society, this anxious alarmist is perfectly right. The meshes, as he calls them, of Masonry do, in truth, envelop the world. From St. Petersburgh to Tasmania, from Hong Kong to London, from Peru and La Plata to California and Canada, they include men of all estates and conditions; and whether you go to ask a favour from a prince, or to get a horse shod by the blacksmith, you may find a "Brother of the Mystic Tie" in him you seek. So mote it ever be! Yet, we do not see, and we do not believe, that any one is a whit the worse for Masonic plots and cabals—plans for infernal machines have never, that we know of, been submitted to the Board of General Purposes.

But this Fraternity, powerful as it is, is so only for good. It is powerless for evil. Direct it to a good end, then every true Mason will lend his aid; the arms of the Society will stretch over the globe to assist you, and the "meshes" of the net work will—

"Feel in each thread and live along the line."

But try to turn it to evil—the strong chain of Brotherhood drops short—it ceases to enfold the evil-doer, while it re-unites more firmly than ever around the rest. Other associations have died away in thousands, in all ages, because their ends were evil, and their purposes narrow. But Masonry, though cursed and denounced, ridiculed, reviled and persecuted, and, alas! too often perverted, abused, degraded, and prostituted, is still founded on Truth and the immutable laws of the Sovereign Architect of the Universe; and, therefore, it is the bond of a great and powerful association, spread over the whole habitable world, honoured and protected by Princes and Statesmen; and what is of greater importance to us, cultivated and cherished by a multitude of wise and pious, conscientious and honourable men—the approbation of a single one of whom outstrips the discredit of a whole priceful of drunkards, swindlers and impostors.

We take part in Masonry because we have experimentally found it to do good, and because we think that if it fails to do so the fault is in ourselves, not in it. And therefore, in turning its capabilities for good to account, and checking its tendencies to evil, we are all accountable to the Creator for the use we may make of this, as of every other opportunity afforded us to serve our fellow-men.

THE DRAMA.

"One Hundred Years Old" at the Olympic—Recent Announcements.

It happens, occasionally, that an actor fails, in the ordinary course of his profession, to attain that position to which he considers himself entitled, and attempts, by means of special performances, or other extraordinary means, to bring himself prominently before the public. This course has been adopted, to some extent, by Mr. Odell, who has won a certain amount of public favour in eccentric comedy and burlesque, but who, apparently, believes himself possessed of greater ability and higher art than those which he has hitherto had opportunities of exhibiting. On Saturday last, Mr. Odell gave a morning performance at the Olympic, at which was produced an adaptation of "Le Centenaire," a play by MM. Dennery and Pigou, successfully brought out in Paris a short time ago. The Paris correspondents of our daily papers have made all London familiar with the plot of the piece, and it is therefore unnecessary that we should recapitulate it, but we must remind our readers that the success of the piece was chiefly owing to the admirable acting of M. Lafont in the title rôle. It is this part which Mr. Odell attempted on Saturday, a part differing widely from any which he has played before: it would be as unjust as unkind to institute any comparison between the performance of M. Lafont and that of Mr. Odell, but, judging Mr. Odell's impersonation on its own merit simply, we must pronounce it to have been a failure. In make-up and appearance the actor was perfect; his picture of extreme old age was admirable; but when we looked for the expression of an active mind imprisoned in an infirm body, for the evidence of that love for his grand-daughter conflicting with a stern regard for the honour of his house, which is the leading characteristic of Le Centenaire, we were obliged to own ourselves disappointed. Mr. Odell is deficient in both pathos and power, as might have been expected by any one who had watched his career. The only other character we need notice is that of Camille, played by Miss Louise Willes, a lady new to London, whose grace and intelligence give promise of a bright future. We should deeply regret to damp the laudable ambition of any actor, and especially of one like Mr. Odell, with really good stuff in him, but we must express our conviction that at present he is overtasking his powers, and flying at too high game.

On Monday next Mr. and Mrs. Billington will appear at the Globe in a piece written expressly for them, called "Rough and Ready."

"Self," a new drama by Messrs. Oxenford and Horace Wigan, will speedily be produced at the Mirror.

Mr. Hare will shortly close his first season at the Court, and will then make a provincial tour. The theatre will be re-opened in September, with "A Nine Days' Wonder."

THE SURREY MASONIC HALL.

On Wednesday, 14th July, the new Masonic Hall for the South of London was formally dedicated to Freemasonry, by the Most Worshipful Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master of England and Provincial Grand Master of West Lancashire. The Hall is situated in the Camberwell New Road, close to the Camberwell Station of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway. It is built in the classic style, from the designs of Bro. E. Clark (Pain and Clark, Buckingham Street), by Mr. John Oliver, of Coldharbour Lane. The new building is fitted with every convenience for the assembling of Lodges, and for the wants of the brethren. In addition to a large Lodge Room and Banqueting Room, there is an extensive Public Hall, which may be secured for public entertainments. Lord Skelmersdale was supported by a large company of Freemasons, both from London and the Province of Surrey. At the conclusion of the ceremony of dedication of the Hall, Lord Skelmersdale consecrated the Surrey Masonic Hall Lodge, and Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, Secretary of the Girls' School, installed Bro. M. S. Lathan as its first Worshipful Master. The brethren afterwards partook of an excellent banquet.

QUESTIONS.—WAS WREN A FREEMASON?

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—At page 168 of the Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror, for 3rd Sept. 1859, we read:—"The Post Boy, No. 5245, from Saturday, March 2nd, to Tuesday, March 5th, 1723, states:—'This evening the corpse of that worthy Freemason, Sir Christopher Wren, Knight, is to be interred under the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.'" Is it true that Wren was really a "Freemason" before his death? and if so, when and where did he become one? At page 595 of the Graphic, for 19th Dec. 1874, we are told that the Duke of Edinburgh is a Mason, but I fear that is a mistake; consequently, if the latter scribe is not infallible as regards a living celebrity, I feel justified in doubting the veracity of the former respecting a dead one.

Yours, &c. W. P. BUCHAN.

OUR BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

Royal Masonic Institution for Boys,
Wood Green, N.

SIR,—We ask, in justice, to be allowed to say a few words upon our share of the pamphlet which was issued in Yorkshire in reference to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. That pamphlet has been condemned by one of your contemporaries, on the ground that it is calculated to injure the interests of this Charity. We wish to show that our letter was written with the express object of protecting those interests, neutralising a threatened action of the Secretary, which would have been far more fatal to this Institution than Mr. Tow's publication. The facts are as follow:—

Some time since a letter arrived here from the Secretary, containing the most outrageous charges against the pupils, calling them a "disgrace and a nuisance to the neighbourhood," and declaring his intention of bringing the matter before the next meeting of the House Committee. We knew these charges to be untrue, but we foresaw that were they allowed to go unchallenged, and to be made public without being refuted, the result would be injurious, not only to our characters individually, but to the school at large. If the pamphlet is to be condemned because by exposing real abuses it would alienate subscribers, what is to be said of the Secretary who makes a series of charges against the school which it is his duty to serve and guard, charges which he cannot prove, but which, if true, are calculated to drive away every subscriber from this charity, and who chooses the time just before the annual festival for such action? The Secretary made similar charges last year; an investigation was demanded then, an investigation has been demanded now, and neither has been held. Though it may suit the Secretary to make these charges against one with whom he is unfriendly, he should not have expected us to allow our characters to suffer at his hands without protest. We know them to be groundless; all visitors to this institution with whom we have conversed have expressed in high terms their admiration of the state in which they found it; the examiner of the Syndicate of Cambridge, after three or four days passed in the building, only a week or two ago, publicly declared himself gratified at the discipline observable among the boys; at the distribution of the prizes Lord Balfour complimented the Head Master and his staff upon the excellent condition of the institution; in the report of the Cambridge Local Examination this shows the greatest number of passes in the London Centres, all these facts show the school to be in an efficient state; moreover, the Head Master has documentary disproof of all the Secretary's charges, and is prepared to prove, by a reference to facts which are absolutely undeniable, that the state of the school is highly satisfactory, and contrasts most favourably with its condition two years ago. There was, therefore, only one course open to us on the receipt of the Secretary's letter; we wrote a letter to our Principal, denying these statements, and sent a similar letter to the Committee, demanding, both for the sake of the school and of our characters, a full investigation; and, our patience being fairly exhausted with all we had seen, we took the liberty of showing the obstacles with which Mr. Perrott and ourselves had constantly to contend. The Committee, in reply, called upon us to prove the statements contained in our communication, especially those affecting one of the officers resident in the building.

Before the Committee again met they had received Mr. Tow's Report, and were probably angry at some of the statements affecting the administration of the funds, for which we were not at all responsible. Be this as it may, we found that the charges affecting the boys were quite hushed up, and as far as our statements on other matters were concerned, our judges, it seemed to us, had turned our prosecutors—at least, we left the room so thoroughly dissatisfied with their proceedings that we at once, though with extreme regret, sent in our resignations.

On calling us in to accept our resignations, the Chairman was pleased to state that we had been guilty of a base conspiracy. Before any one makes so grave a charge he should be, at least, prepared to show some probable gain for which the conspiracy is entered into. Now, Sir, we came to the Institution last Christmas, from different parts of the country; we were entirely unacquainted with one another, had none of us ever heard either of the Rev. Mr. Perrott or Mr. Binckes, and most of us had before been ignorant of the very existence of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. We were not appointed only by the Head Master, but by the Head Master and the Secretary jointly, and we heard that the former was soon to leave, so that, had we consulted our own interests, we should certainly have fallen in with the powers that be; because, however, in the interests of justice and of the Institution, we have spoken out plainly, that which we believed has been too long suppressed, we are disbelieved and branded as conspirators.

We came here at a time of great difficulty, we have worked hard for six months, and just when we have been here long enough to restore fully the discipline, rudely disturbed by former disputes, and to become attached to the pupils, instead of enjoying the fruits of our labours, we are compelled to leave the Institution. Intentionally, or unintentionally, this is an instance of great injustice, both to us and still more to the boys, who must suffer materially by this constantly changing of masters.

We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

THE FOUR RETIRING MASTERS.

P.S.—Since the above was written the Report of the Cambridge Examiner has appeared. Speaking of the discipline, he makes the following unqualified statement: "The conduct of the boys was so uniformly good, and highly disciplined, that it is plain no ordinary pains have been taken with them in this respect." This is the opinion of an unprejudiced observer, after four days' experience, and is somewhat different from that of Mr. Binckes,—that the pupils are a "disgrace and a nuisance to the neighbourhood."

REPORTS OF LODGE MEETINGS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am glad that the subject of public Reports of Meetings has been broached, and think the correspondence in your columns likely to be productive of good. There can be no harm, but rather the contrary, in the publication of judicious reports, and it is only when details of an unnecessary character appear in newspapers that any objection can be made against them. Annual banquets and installations, with names of officers, may be reported with benefit, providing a Masonic discretion be exercised in the compilation of the reports, but names of candidates, with hints as to the ceremonial, must surely be regarded as antagonistic to the spirit of the Constitutions. I have forwarded to you a copy of the Cumberland Pacquet for 6th July, containing two lengthy reports of installations, which, however, are so judiciously arranged as to be free from the slightest objection, and calculated to place the Craft in a fair position before the public eye.

I am, Sir,

Yours fraternally,

T. B. WHITEHEAD.

8th July 1875.

REVOLVING STORMS.—Cyclones, or revolving storms, are atmospheric disturbances by virtue of which large masses of air are endued with a rapid rotary motion round an axis more or less vertical, revolving in a direction contrary to the hands of a watch in the northern, and in the direction of the hands in the southern, hemisphere; while at the same time these masses of air are carried forward with a considerable velocity in a parabolic orbit. These storms, in fact, bear a strong resemblance to whirlwinds of dust raised by the wind with which we are all familiar, which, like cyclones, move bodily forward at the same time that they revolve rapidly about an axis. All the great oceans, with the single exception of the South Atlantic, are the scenes of their activity. In the North Atlantic they rage between the 10th and 50th parallels of latitude, and the 50th and 100th meridians from Greenwich; the Indian Ocean from the coast of Australia as far as Madagascar, between the 6th and 40th parallels of southern latitude. In the Persian Gulf and Bay of Bengal they are to be found extending northwards from the 10th degree of latitude; in the China Sea, between the latitude of 12° or 15° as far north as 50°, but generally not beyond the longitude of 140° E.; and the Northern and Southern Pacific Oceans are not exempt from their ravages. They take their origin for the most part between the 5th and 20th degree of latitude in the regions of maximum temperature, and move in directions more or less inclined to the equator in a north-westerly or south-westerly direction, and describe a parabolic path sometimes not distinguishable from a straight line, and after reaching the apex of their parabolic path, which in the North Atlantic Ocean is generally situated about latitude 30°, they describe the second branch of their orbit towards the north-east or south-east. In the North Atlantic Ocean this branch sometimes reaches the coasts of Europe.—"Naval Science" for July.

THE OLD MASONIC CONSTITUTIONS.—On perusing the several manuscripts through, I came to the conclusion that they were neither more nor less than the rituals of the the pre-1717 Masons. Of course, the secret words, tokens, &c., were withheld from the written rituals, nor can we learn the precise fashion of riding the goat in the 17th century, but nevertheless these manuscripts were rituals, and they were kept out of reach of the uninitiated. Even Anderson informs us that, when he requested the brethren to give him their manuscripts from which to compile a constitution for the Grand Lodge, the old Masons were so shocked with the idea of printing them, that they went to work and destroyed their manuscripts. They destroyed, no doubt, manuscripts of the same character as that of Dowland's and the rest of the series.—Bro. Jacob Norton.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

The Constitution of the Grand Lodge of the Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons of Greece. Athens: Freemasons' Hall. MDCCCLXXII.

We shall be pleased to hear what progress this Grand Lodge is making. The English translation of the Constitution consists of twenty-two pages. From Part Fourth, page 19, we learn, "The Grand Lodge of Greece does not found Lodges in foreign States where a regular and independent Grand Lodge exists, and which is in correspondence with it. It does not recognise any Lodge under foreign jurisdiction existing in Greece. The Grand Lodge of Greece practises and recognises no degrees of Masonry but those of Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason—denominated St. John's Masonry." In this respect, therefore, it agrees with the English Grand Lodge, and more especially with the Grand Lodge of Scotland, which has so carefully preserved genuine Craft Masonry, whilst adopting the apocryphal notions of foreigners in their higher degrees so-called. The first General Assembly and the first Council of the Grand Lodge are elected for two years, after that for three years. This Council of the Grand Lodge consists of twenty-one members, elected by the General Assembly out of its own members, including the Grand Master, the Deputy and Substitute Grand Masters, and governs, when the Assembly does not meet, all the general affairs of the Masonic Order of Greece. Part Third informs us that "The central direction and government is exercised by the Grand Lodge, whose seat is the capital of the State. The Grand Lodge consists of representatives of all the Lodges of the Confederation, of the Council of the Grand Lodge, of the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master and the Substitute Grand Master." All the officers and members of this Grand Lodge take an obligation "on honour and conscience" to respect its laws. Part First gives the object and purpose of Freemasonry, and the qualifications necessary for its mysteries, in this differing little from the opinions prevailing in this country. We notice, however, that "Every balloting shall be visible, on whatever subject, either essential or personal."

Will our Greek brethren inform us what they are doing? The Order, we understand, has two Past Senior Wardens in England, Bros. C. F. Matier P.M. and John Yarker P.M., a Past Junior Warden in Scotland, Bro. Hunter, P.G.M. of Aberdeenshire, and a Greek as representative with the Grand Lodge.

The Constitutions are prefaced as follows: "We, Grand Master Mason of Greece: In conformity with the proceedings, under date 15th July 1872, whereby the Grand Lodge of Greece assembled and adopted, after mature deliberation, the fundamental Constitution of the Grand Lodge of Greece, as promulgated on the 1st April 1867, and printed in obedience to a decree, dated 9th February 1868, signed by the then Deputy Gr. Master, Bro. N. Damaskinos, acting Gr. M.M. of Greece, and a copy of which is hereunto annexed:

"We, the aforesaid Grand Master Mason of Greece, have decreed, and do hereby decree:—Art. I.—The aforesaid Constitution and Statutes thereupon enacted, to be in force and to be confirmed by these presents. Art. II.—The Statutes and General Regulations, now actually in operation shall, unless contrary in any respect to our fundamental Constitution, continue in force, until formally and authoritively revised, repealed, or annulled. Given at the Grand Lodge of Greece, in the City of Athens, this second day of August, in the year of our Lord 1872 and of Light 5872.

"Rhodocanakis, Grand Master.

"By Command of the M.W. Grand Master Mason of Greece, His Imperial Highness the Prince Rhodocanakis, Dep. Gr. Master."

The New Shakespearian Dictionary of Quotations, by G. Somers Bellamy. London: Charing Cross Publishing Company. 1875.

The writer of a dictionary, as Dr. Johnson has remarked, is fortunate if he escape the contempt of his readers. The work of compilation is dreary drudgery, which is enlivened by no prospect of fame, and little chance of adequate reward. If a man does not take up this work con amore, he is likely to meet with grave disappointment. The public do not readily buy works of reference, and our libraries are already so well stocked with this class of literature that there is no opening for a new aspirant in that direction. The writer of the work before us has very ably accomplished an exceedingly difficult task. His aim has not been to give a concordance of the works of Shakspeare, but the key of reference to numerous striking and beautiful passages. There are over four thousand quotations in his pages, and the subjects are so arranged that a lover of the great bard will readily find his favourite "beauties." A digest containing the sub-heads of the classification adopted throughout the work refers us to the page upon which we may find the key to the passage we are seeking. As an example, we may suppose that the reader desires to find the sublime soliloquy on sleep, which occurs in Henry IV. We turn to the sub-head of the work, and, under the word sleep, we find a digest and references to pages 208-209, where we immediately find the one, "Sleep, gentle sleep," and the accurate reference to Henry IV., pt. 2, Act III., scene 1.

Again, we had a faint recollection of a speech on "Boasters," which occurs in one of the historical plays, but could not find the passage. The sub-head of the work before us gives, under the word Boasters, a reference to page 17, and there we find that the passage we are seeking is in Henry V., Act III., scene 6.

The addenda gives us a selection of saxioms, proverbs, and other sayings, with their references, which will not be considered the least valuable part of the work. We heartily recommend Mr. Bellamy's book to our readers, and we venture to predict that it will be well received by the public.

MONEY MARKET AND CITY NEWS.

Friday.

At the meeting on Thursday of the proprietors of the London Joint Stock Bank, the net profit for the half-year was stated to amount to £142,002, out of which a dividend was declared at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum, leaving a balance of £32,002 to be carried forward. The guarantee fund, with its accrued interest, amounts to £522,713. With reference to the dishonoured bills held by the bank, amounting to £89,076, the Chairman stated that it would be a matter of great difficulty to make even an approximate calculation of the dividends which would be recovered from the 22 estates upon which the bank has claims, but there was no doubt that a considerable amount would be recovered, and a few of the estates might give 20s in the £. He added that these failures had had the effect of curtailing all speculation, but that the elements of prosperity in sound trade were made apparent in an unusual degree.

The report of the Union Bank of London states that the net profit for the half-year, including £32,185 brought forward, amounted to £165,748, from which a dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum has been declared. The directors at the meeting stated that the £100,000 which was set aside as provision for bad and doubtful debts would be amply sufficient.

The report of the London and South Western Bank Limited exhibits an available balance of £11,077, and recommends the payment of a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, free of income tax for the half-year, leaving £4,430 (including £1,346 rebate) to be carried to profit and loss new account.

The half yearly report of the Consolidated Bank Limited, presented at the meeting on Wednesday, showed an available total of £53,196, from which a dividend was proposed at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, free of income tax, leaving, after appropriating £6,320 to the reserve fund, a balance of £5,876 to be carried forward.

The directors of the Halifax Joint Stock Bank Limited have declared an interim dividend of 7½ per cent. for the half-year ending June last, and the directors of the West of England and South Wales District Bank one at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, free of income tax.

The half-yearly report of the Manchester and County Bank Limited shows, including £5,030 brought forward, a net profit of £59,936, out of which it is proposed to add £5,000 to the reserve fund, raising it to £350,000; to pay a dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum; and to carry forward £4,585. The directors state that, with the assistance of a surplus arising from the ample provision made in previous years for bad and doubtful debts, they are enabled, out of the surplus profits of the past six months, to fully provide for exceptional losses through the recent failures without touching the reserve or reducing the dividend.

The report of the directors of the Manchester Joint Stock Bank Limited announces a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, leaving, after the addition of £5,012 to the reserve fund, £3,013 to be carried forward.

The report of the Bank of Egypt states that the net profits for the half-year amounted to £17,242, making, with £3,486 brought forward, an available total of £20,728. The directors recommend the payment of a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum and a bonus of 10s per share, leaving £3,428 to be carried forward.

At the meeting of the Union Bank of Australia, held on Monday, the directors' annual report, which was adopted, showed a net profit of £106,471, out of which a dividend of 7 per cent., and a bonus of 6s per share were declared for the half-year, being at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum, and leaving £6,471 to be carried forward.

The South Eastern Railway dividend has been fixed at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, leaving £10,000 to be carried forward. At the corresponding period of last year the dividend was at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, and £5,000 was carried forward.

The Metropolitan Railway Company announce that the accounts, subject to final audit, show a balance on the half-year sufficient for a dividend on the ordinary stock at the rate of 3¼ per cent. per annum, carrying forward a balance of about £2,000. At the corresponding period of last year a dividend at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum was declared, and about £700 carried forward.

A dividend on the ordinary stock of the London and Greenwich Railway Company at the rate of £1 7s 6d per cent. for the half-year has been declared. The available balance was £17,607.

The directors of the London and St. Katharine Docks Company intend to recommend, at the general meeting of proprietors appointed to be held on the 29th inst., that a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, free of income tax, be declared for the past half-year, carrying £15,617 19s 2d to the reserve fund. The distribution at the corresponding period of last year was at the rate of ¼ per cent. per annum, and £16,156 was carried forward. The reduction in the dividend is doubtless due to the contraction of trade.

The report of the General Credit and Discount Company Limited, to be submitted to the meeting on the 22nd inst., states that from a considerable number of the recent failures the company escaped harmless, but was not so fortunate in others. The directors consider, however, that after paying the usual interim dividend, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum for the half-year, a sum of £60,000 brought into the account from the reserve fund will be sufficient provision for the exceptional and ordinary bad debts up to the present time. The liabilities on deposits, loans, &c., on the 30th June were £3,000,117, and the acceptances against securities £297,405.

At the general meeting, held on Tuesday, of the Eastern Telegraph Company Limited, a dividend was declared of 2s 6d per share, making, with the three previous payments, a total distribution of 5 per cent. for the year

The half-yearly report of Foster, Porter and Company Limited states that, including £11,033 brought from the last account, the available sum is £26,750, from which it is proposed to declare a dividend at the usual rate of 12½ per cent. per annum, free of income tax, leaving £13,625 to be carried forward.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

IN the House of Lords, on Friday, Earl Stanhope moved that an address be presented to Her Majesty, praying her to relinquish in future her prerogative of creating Irish Peerages. The Lord Chancellor dealt with the matter from a legal point of view. Earl Granville saw no difficulty, if there were a pretty general consensus, in settling the question in accordance with the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee. Earl Grey supported the motion, but threw out a suggestion as to the form of the proposal. The Marquis of Salisbury handled the matter practically. Earl Stanhope expressed his willingness to amend his motion in accordance with Earl Grey's suggestion, and the motion, thus amended, was in the end agreed to, the Duke of Richmond, with a slight modification only, accepting the proposal in its new form. On Monday, Lord Penzance brought forward the recent passage between Belgium and Germany, and this brought the Earl of Derby on his legs, for the purpose of explaining matters. Dover Harbour and the Autumn Manœuvres were discussed on Tuesday, Earl Granville asking the intentions of the Government as regards the former, and Lord Waveney instituting certain queries as to the latter. On Thursday, the Friendly Societies Bill passed through Committee with one important amendment, carried in opposition to the Government.

In the House of Commons, on Friday, the Report of Amendments to the European Assurance Society Arbitration Bill having been agreed to, the standing orders were suspended, and the Bill was read a third time. On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. Heygate submitted a resolution as to Consular Chaplains to the effect that the withdrawal of the Parliamentary Grant towards their maintenance was inexpedient. A long debate followed, the principal speakers being Sir H. D. Wolff, Mr. Bourke, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In the end the motion was negatived without a division. Mr. G. Duff then drew attention to the Report of the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the endowed schools and hospitals in Scotland, and hoped the Government would bring in a Bill next Session based on the recommendation of the Commissioners. The appointment of Sir A. Slade, as Receiver-General of Inland Revenue, having been made the subject of comment, the House went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates. Mr. Cross's Labour Bills engrossed the chief attention of the House on Monday. An amendment to Clause 3 of the Employers' and Workmen's Bill, proposed by Mr. Mundella and supported by Mr. Lowe, was also defeated by a majority, there being 162 for and 182 against the proposition. This Bill having passed through Committee, the House passed to the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill. On Clause 4 of this sundry amendments were proposed, but the Government generally held to their views, though evincing a very conciliatory spirit. Progress having been reported, the House went into Committee on the Militia Laws Consolidation and Amendment Bill, progress being reported on Clause 32. At the morning sitting on Tuesday, the Committee on the Supreme Court of Judicature Act (1873) Amendment (No. 2) Bill was resumed. On the House reassembling, at nine o'clock, Mr. Sullivan brought forward a motion relating to the Science and Art Department (Dublin), but it was withdrawn. Mr. P. Taylor then moved for returns of crime and punishment in the Navy, but was defeated by 101 to 63. On Wednesday, the Municipal Elections (Cumulative Votes) Bill was lost on the second reading, Mr. Cross moving the previous question. The Allotment Extension Bill, moved by Sir C. Dilke, was got rid of in similar fashion, Sir R. Knightley moving the previous question, and, on division, proving victorious by 164 to 116. The debate on the second reading of the Waste Lands (Ireland) Bill was adjourned. On Thursday, the question of the visit of the Prince of Wales to India occupied the greater part of the evening. The proposition of the Government was opposed, in the first instance, by Mr. Fawcett, on the ground that no part of the expenditure should fall on the revenues of India. But the Government carried the day, by 379 to 67. It is pleasant to record that no members were more enthusiastic in support of the votes for His Royal Highness's expenditure than Messrs. Gladstone and Bright. In Committee of Supply, the sums asked by Ministers were readily voted, but not without divisions, Mr. Macdonald leading the Opposition. Sir C. Dilke's motion for a more complete representation of the people was rejected by 190 to 120.

On Tuesday, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales gave a second garden party at Chiswick, at which, in addition to various members of the Royal Family, there were present his Highness the Sultan of Zanzibar and H.R.H. Humbert, Crown Prince of Italy. The previous afternoon their Royal Highnesses went to Norbiton, and there formally opened the Children's Branch of the Metropolitan Convalescent Institution. On Wednesday evening there was a grand fête at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, under the presidency of the Duke of Teck. H.R.H. the Duchess of Teck and the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz arrived about half-past ten, by which time the gardens were well filled, in spite of the abominable weather.

On Monday, the freedom of the City of London was publicly presented to his Highness the Sultan of Zanzibar. This interesting ceremony was conducted at Guildhall, whither the Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs went in state, attended by their officers. The freedom was contained in a large and beautiful casket, and His Highness evidently appreciated the honour conferred upon him. After the conclusion of the ceremonial, the Sultan accompanied the Lord Mayor to the Mansion House, and there partook of a sumptuous déjeûner. The guard of honour on the occasion was furnished by the 93rd Highlanders. Dr. Badger interpreted, as usual, the views of His Highness.

The Eton and Harrow match ended in a draw, the latter having 63 runs to the good and four wickets yet to fall. The weather on Saturday proved a satisfactory contrast to that of the day previous, when Eton made 66 runs without the loss of a wicket in the 35 minutes during which it did not rain. This number was increased to 202 before all the Eton team were disposed of. The Hon. E. Lyttelton made 59, E. Harding 26, W. E. Forbes 47, and Wakefield 22. Harrow, however, could only manage 110, Chater heading the score with a well played not out 30, while Cochrane, Clough-Taylor, and Grundy contributed 19, 10, and 22 respectively. Thus Harrow had to follow on, which, thanks principally to Tyssen, Chater, Kemp, and Meek, they did most effectively. The first two named were well set, when the stumps were drawn, the former having put together 39, and the latter 35; Kemp made 35, Meek 16, and Wilkinson 11.

As regards its principal feature, the Hound Show, the Alexandra Palace was most unfortunate. It rained without intermission during both days, the consequence being that except judges and others whose duty took them thither, there were hardly any visitors to what, had the weather been decently fine, would certainly have proved a great attraction. There were 149 entries, ranged in fifteen classes, the prizes varying from £2 to £10, and exceeding in the aggregate some £250. The judges were Messrs. H. Villebois, J. H. Barton, and Leicester Hibbert, and these admirably performed their arduous duties. Among the winners may be mentioned the names of the Duke of Beaufort, the Earl of Portsmouth, the Quorn Hunt, the Old Berkshire, the West Norfolk, and others. Had there been some sunshine, the scene would have been a very lively one, but no amount of enthusiasm would have quite reconciled the most ardent lover of field sports to the sloppiness of the ground, the leaden dulness of the sky, &c., &c. At times, indeed, it rained cats and dogs, the latter, no doubt, out of compliment to the hounds, who supplied all the music on the occasion—at least, the outdoor music. On Monday the fates were more propitious. The Licensed Victuallers fared better than the hounds. There was a bright warm sun the whole day through, and the fireworks were not, as is common, a failure. The publicans poured in in their thousands, and no doubt the funds of the Asylum will have considerably benefited. To-day is the Scottish Fête, first seen in London some five or six and twenty years since, in Holland Park. There is a long list of noble patrons, and we trust everything will pass off well. On Monday next is the grand gathering of the Odd Fellows, while, beginning from Wednesday, are a series of Concerts, to be given every Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday during the season. At the Crystal Palace, the principal events of the week have been the meeting of the Catholic Total Abstinence League held, under the presidency of Cardinal Manning, on Monday, and Mr. Irving's Shaksperian and other readings on Wednesday afternoon.

One of our grand annual events is now in progress. The International Rifle Association are holding their grand meeting, and for another week there will be rifle matches and contests of every description. We shall know, not many days hence, who is the Queen's prizeman of the year, and which is the stronger, the House of Lords or the House of Commons. Then there will be an international Enfield Match, and the contest for the Elcho Shield. A good half score of public schools will contend among themselves as to which of them shall hold the Ashburton Shield, and the best sportsman of each team will afterwards exhibit their individual prowess in firing for the Spencer Cup. As for the host of other competitors, All Comers, the Alexandra, the Albert, the Alfred, &c., we should only be puzzling our readers if we enumerated them. In one respect we certainly do not envy even the most fortunate winner his winnings, or the most enthusiastic volunteer his enthusiasm, if they have camped on the Common under the present somewhat trying conditions. This is infinitely beyond "a modest quencher" which Mr. Jupiter Pluvius has been so plentifully offering us since the morning of Tuesday. In fact, it occurs to us that we have not experienced so wet a summer since 1860, the first or second year of the Volunteer Movement.

The Meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society was held this year at Taunton, opening on the 10th instant, and closing yesterday. That the usual excellence of the display has been fully maintained, that the various classes of cattle, &c., were well filled, and that certain breeders will be found prominent among the prize winners, that follows almost as a matter of course, and equally so that Mr. H. Jenkins, the Society's able Secretary, should have carried out the usual arrangements without a hitch.

We cannot say we feel seriously discomposed at hearing that Messrs. Moody and Sankey have taken their farewell, and that the two revivalists are, or will soon be, on their return home to America. We have a great respect for all who labour strenuously in spreading the grand truths of religion among the lower classes, and the thanks of the public are due to them for the good they may have done. But the whole thing has struck us as having something of a Cheap Jack performance about it. Nor do we approve of unqualified persons, who fancy they have a "call," taking upon themselves to instruct others. Previous training is as necessary in order to enable a man to teach religion as to teach Latin and Greek, or French, German, Hebrew, Mathematics, &c., &c. Our faith, moreover, is in the silent worker, more than in those who advertise their performances from every housetop. There is a large army of men and women, who are constantly moving about among our poor and criminal classes. Their quiet work is worth a thousandfold the spasmodic efforts of whole regiments of Moodies and Sankeys, well-intentioned and earnest though these latter may be. The cultivation of religion and sound morals as a duty, not as the result of a factitious or momentary enthusiasm, is the labour on which we set the highest value. Moreover, the agents of these revivalists were becoming just a leetle too obtrusive in their house to house visitations. For these reasons, we repeat, we do not regret very seriously the departure from among us of Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

The Mansion House Relief Fund for the sufferers by the inundations in France is gradually swelling to a handsome total, and we trust the efforts of our respected brother the Lord Mayor and the committee that is working with him will be a grand success. The proposition that the funds being raised in other large commercial centres should be tacked on to, and so form part and parcel of the London fund, seems reasonable enough. The subscription would then be more national in its character. All the committee and the public must strive to secure is that the fund shall be worthy both of France and of England. As regards the Carlists, they seem to be in a bad way just now. The Alphonsist commanders have shown much energy in their recent operations, but the real results are not as yet clear. The Carlists have so often been beaten, past all hope of recovery, and so often have they proved themselves wonderfully vigorous in their hopeless condition, that we may be excused for withholding our belief from all the Madrid reports of decisive victory. To us in England it matters little which wins, Alphonsism or Carlism. Our chief anxiety is that a struggle so long continued, and which has caused such loss of life and property, should come speedily to a termination. Whether this "consummation devoutly to be wished" has been achieved is not beyond all question. In the French Assembly, M. Rouher, the great advocate of the Imperialists, has delivered a very effective speech, proving to the dissatisfaction of M. Gambetta that there is still a large amount of vitality in the Bonapartist cause. Less likely things may happen than a restoration of the Imperial Regime, more especially if the rumours be true that the Left is becoming less and less cohesive. But we shall avoid prophecy, no less as regards the future of France than as regards that of Spain.

Lodge Sukkhur, No. 1508, meets at Sukkhur, Up. Scind, on the last Saturday in every month. The following are the officers for 1875:—W. Bro. W. Scott I.P.M., J. Tate W.M., J. Ramsay S.W., H. F. Brayson J.W., J. C. Jowett S.D., J. D. Hodgson J.D., T. Rutherford I.G., W. Larkins Tyler, W. Handy Secretary, J. H. Boyce Treasurer.

An emergency meeting of the newly consecrated Chaucer Lodge, No. 1540, will be held on the 30th of July, at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, for the purpose of initiating brethren previously proposed, and to admit five brethren as joining members.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex, of which the Right Worshipful Bro. Robert John Bagshaw, Esq., is the Provincial Grand Master, will hold its meeting at the Corn Exchange, Rochford, on Tuesday next, for the transaction of general business. The Grand Lodge will be opened at two o'clock. A banquet will take place punctually at four o'clock.

On Wednesday next, Bro. Capt. Paul Boyton gives his entertainment at the Crown Baths, Kennington Oval, the proceeds are to be given to the Royal Masonic Boys' and Girls' Schools. This object, we trust, will ensure a good attendance of the brethren.

The popular and respected proprietor of Cremorne Gardens, Bro. John Baum, took his annual complimentary benefit on Monday last, which, to judge by the numbers present, was a great success. The entertainments consisted of elegant and artistic ballets, flying performance of Lu Lu, palmistry by De Vere, and dancing by the general company, who seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves. There was a maypole on the lawn, and a grand display of fireworks concluded the evening's entertainment.

FREEMASONRY IN CORNWALL.

From the Western Morning News.

THE meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Callington on Thursday, 8th July, was favoured with very fine weather throughout the day. The town been as yet unprovided with a railway was invaded by a multitude of vehicles for the conveyance of the brethren. The P.G.M. drove over to Callington a select party of brethren from Cotbele, where they had been sharing his hospitality in that ancient ancestral mansion. Among the brethren present at the meeting were the following officers:—The R.W. Bros. the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe P.G.M., Sir F. M. Williams Bart. M.P. D.P.G.M., Reginald Rogers P.D.P.G.M., the V.W. Bros. Col. J. Peard P.P.S.G.W., H. G. Colville P.G.S.W., Dr. J. Sedgwick Past G. Chap. of England, E. T. Carlyon P.G. Sec., R. Rich P.P.G.J.W., G. The Provincial Grand Chapter assembled at ten a.m. The P.G.M. presided, supported by R.W. Bros. the D.P.G.M., Reginald Rogers P.D.P.G.M., H. G. Colville S.G.W., R. Rich J.G.W. pro tem, and his officers. The minutes of the Prov. G. Lodge, held at Bodmin July 7th, 1874, were read and confirmed. The roll was called and the following Lodges reported represented 131, 318, 330, 331, 450, 496, 510, 557, 589, 699, 789, 893, 970, 977, 1071, 1136, 1164. It was suggested that as it was early some of the other Lodges would probably be represented during the day whose members had not yet arrived. The Treasurer's report, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. W. Tweedy P.G.T., was read by Bro. Chergwin. It showed at present an available balance of £47 2s 11d, and with this Bro. Chergwin stated might be reckoned about £100 that would become available in January next. The report was received and adopted. The Prov. Grand Secretary's report was also read and adopted, which showed an increase of three Lodges in the Province during the past year, viz.:—The Fort Lodge, 1528, at Newquay; Duke of Cornwall Lodge, 1529, at St. Columb; The Mount Edgcumbe Lodge, 1544, at Camborne. An addition to the number of members in the Province of 177 initiates and 54 joining members during the year, made the total number of members returned for the present year 1,240, an increase of 99 over the number of members returned for the previous year.

The Prov. G. Master had a few remarks to make to the Lodge, and he thought that was the available time to make them. He said the attendance of the brethren that day was much larger than he expected, when he considered the difficulty of access to that neighbourhood from most other parts of the Province; and he thanked the brethren for thus supporting him. He felt that in meeting the claims of Lodges, the convenience of brethren in the Province generally must be considered. In selecting Callington on the present occasion he had, however, been influenced by a desire to fulfil a promise made by his respected predecessor—the late Mr. Augustus Smith—that Callington should be visited. He thanked the brethren of the Province generally for the sympathy they had manifested towards him in his late domestic bereavement—the loss of his Countess. His lordship exhibited much emotion in referring to the subject. He then referred to the success of the visit of his Royal Highness the Grand Master, their Duke of Cornwall, to Plymouth, and stated that the Prince expressed himself exceedingly pleased at the fine display of Masonry made on that occasion in the Plymouth Guildhall. His Royal Highness, although accustomed to receptions, was unmistakably struck with that one. Since then there had been a still larger gathering of Masons at the installation of the Prince of Wales as Grand Master, in London. That, also, was certainly a very fine gathering, and he was much pleased to find that there was a large attendance of Cornish brethren in that great assembly. Much credit was also due to Bros. John and Courtenay for the facilities they had afforded to the attendance of the brethren. Progress was satisfactorily shewn by the three new Lodges that had been founded in the Province during the past year. He hoped it would not be long before they were consecrated either by himself or the D.P.G.M. He was much pleased at the gradual progress that was also being made in the Province in withdrawing Lodges from holding their meetings at places of public entertainment. A private room was no doubt in every way the best for a Lodge room. In some instances that could not be at once obtained, from the expense that would be incurred; but the opinion of the brethren generally was tending that way. Meridian Lodge at Millbrook, and Peace and Harmony Lodge at St. Austell had both, during the past year, obtained that requisite; and he had to thank the D.P.G.M. for consecrating the new Lodge room of the latter. At present he felt it was more necessary than ever for the brethren generally to be exceedingly careful in selecting candidates for the extension of the Order. Now Masonry was becoming fashionable and popular, nothing was more likely than for unsuitable persons to desire to join their ranks from motives very wide from Masonic motives. To join from an idea that it would be useful in their businesses and with a view to putting the square and compasses over their doors. W.M.'s should be asked to be specially careful of what candidates they allowed to be admitted to their Lodges. He had no desire to encourage a diffusion of black-balling. On the contrary, he thought where there was an objection against a candidate, it should be communicated to the W.M., in order that he might procure the withdrawal of the proposition prior to the contemplated day of election. It should, however, be understood that it was not merely W.M.'s who were responsible. On the contrary, every brother who took part in the election would be responsible, and should think before he voted. He thought an excellent test in admitting a candidate was to consider whether the voter would like to see that candidate W.M. of his Lodge. Bro. Hughan was unfortunately not able to attend. They were much indebted to that brother for his successful exertions, which had involved considerable hard work and energy. To him, with others, they were indebted for the return of one brother last and another this year, as annuitants on the Institution for the relief of Aged and Decayed Masons, from which they each received £36 per annum. It was the duty of the Province to do more for the great Masonic Charities. It had, however, done a great deal during the past year for a very meritorious local charity, the Royal British Female Orphan Asylum, and he had received a letter from its honorary secretary, Bro. L. P. Metham, expressing his grateful thanks for their assistance. Bro. Metham felt sure that in the whole not less than £1,500 would be the total of the Masonic contributions, about one-fourth of the money expended in making the improvement by which the charity could now accommodate two hundred children instead of one hundred as before. Of that money £150 had been contributed by the Province.

The report of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund was then presented and read by Bro. Chegwin, and adopted. It showed a decrease in the subscriptions of £17 12s less than last year, but an increase on the capital stock of £210 16s 3d over last year, making it £2,200 over last year, of which £1,999 1s 6d was invested.

The sum of £100 or less was voted to be taken from the funds of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, to be dealt with by the subscribers at the next Provincial Grand Lodge, and a vacancy was declared in the Annuity Fund. The Committee of Relief presented their report. It recommended that £8 be given to an indigent brother of 510 Lodge, and £10 to an indigent brother of 967 Lodge. These recommendations were ultimately adopted.

The brethren adjourned at noon in procession, in full regalia, with banners and emblems displayed, and headed by the local volunteer band, to the parish church, where an excellent sermon was preached to the brethren and townsfolk, from 1st Peter, 11th chapter, 17th verse—"Honour all men, love the brotherhood, fear God, honour the King"—by W. Bro. the Rev A. H. Cumming P.G. Chap. The church was crowded, and a large number of persons, including several of the brethren, were unable to obtain admission. At the close of the service a collection was made of £11 14s. The brethren then returned in procession as before to the schoolroom.

The P.G.M. announced the result of the election for the vacancy in the Annuity Fund to be for the brother of Lodge 330, 508 votes, and for the brother of Lodge 699, 40 votes, and the former brother elected; the result of the election for a grant to the widow of a brother of 318 Lodge to be for granting £5, 23 votes; £6, 5 votes; £10, 450 votes; and the £10 accordingly granted.

A long report was read from V.W. Bro. W. J. Hughan, showing the admirable working of the system of the loan of votes in the Province during the past seven years it had been in use since recommended by him when P.G. Sec. During that time the Province had obtained, by carrying their candidates, the value of £2,300 from the charities. Bro. Hughan also pointed out how greatly the Province was indebted in those successes to the R.W. the P.G.M.

The Treasurer, Secretary, and Auditors for the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund were re-elected.

The Provincial Grand Treasurer and Auditors were re-elected.

The collection at the church was distributed, one-fifth to the vicar of the parish, two-fifths to the Callington Dispensary, two-fifths to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund.

The following votes were made to the London Masonic Charities:—Ten guineas to the Boys' School, ten guineas to the Girls' School, ten guineas to the Aged and Decayed Masons' Institution, and £25 to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund.

The Provincial Grand Master then appointed the following brethren his officers for the ensuing year:—Sir P. M. Williams Bart. M.P., D.P.G.M.; T. Chegwin, 131, S.W.; J. Peter, 557, J.W.; the Rev. A. Cummings, 131, P.G. Chap.; the Rev. J. Lethbridge, 789, P.G. Chap.; W. Tweedy, 331, Treas.; J. P. Lyne, 510, Regis.; E. T. Carlyon, 331, G. Sec.; W. Middleton, 131, S.D.; H. Cochrane, 1136, J.D.; W. H. Dunstan, 75, S. Wrks.; C. Trevithick, 1272, D.C.; J. Sims, 689, A.D.C.; C. Truscott, 496, S.B.; W. W. Dymond, 577, O.; F. Dennis, 75, Purs.; W. Rooke, 131, Asst. Purs.; —Dymond O.; the following Stewards:—A. Grant, 318; T. Gill, 967; J. H. Filmer, 893; W. Polkinghorne, 1151; J. Hill, 970; J. Hawkins, 789; and R. Penwarden, 510, Tyler. It was voted that the sermon preached at the church should be printed. Thanks were voted to the rector for the use of the schoolroom and his church.

In the afternoon over 120 of the brethren dined at Golding's Hotel. The P.G.M. presided. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drank and replied to, and vocal and musical accompaniments given by a glee party, consisting of Bros. J. Rundle, T. Goodall, J. Congdon, and Dymond.

WHAT FREEMASONRY HAS DONE.

FREEMASONRY has been the conservator of pure and sound religious morals in times of almost universal degeneracy. We do not claim too much for it when we say that, in the Fourteenth Century, more especially in Germany, and in Northern Europe generally, when corruption and licentiousness had invaded the Church of God; when vice in its grossest form, and immorality in its most revolting aspects, were sanctioned by those who ministered at the sacred altars of religious worship, Freemasonry entered its solemn and oft-repeated protests against the corruptions and profligacy of the time. The sturdy operative Masons, moved by these strong and vigorous words, engraved with their own honest hands upon the solid rock, which they wrought for building purposes, figures, words and sentences that stood out in mute rebuke of the unbridled licentiousness of the very priests themselves, who were the moral and religious instructors of the people! And many of those silent, but stern rebukes remain till the present time, in attestation of the high and healthful tone maintained by the Craft in mediæval times. In the meantime, the lives and examples of the Fraternity were in exemplification of a higher and purer morality than was found, at the time referred to, in the Church itself.

Thousands upon thousands of men at the present day, and all around us, in every day walks of life, are made better by their Masonic vows than they could be in absence of those restraints. They are better husbands, better fathers, better brothers, better in all the social relations of life, than they would be if they were not Masons.

Freemasonry has administered an untold and incalculable amount of relief and comfort to widowhood and orphanage, and to distressed Masonic brethern. These deeds have been done in secret. Darkened homes, where the shadow of death has been left brooding have been visited by Masonic charity. Tears have been dried up, bleeding hearts have been soothed, bread has been dispensed by the noiseless hand; guardian angels have been scarcely less silent and unostentatious in their visits to the homes of poverty and want, and scarcely less lavish and unselfish in their offices of love and mercy, than the Masonic Fraternity in dispensing charity and scattering its rich benediction upon the destitute and suffering poor. As the withered flowers spring up under the refreshing influences of the dew, gently distilled in the silence of the night, so many a withered and broken heart, pining in poverty and want, has been refreshed and invigorated by the noiseless visitation of Masonic benevolence.

The Masonic Fraternity, like the Great Author of every good and perfect gift, becomes the husband of the widow and father of the orphan; and the day of eternity alone will disclose the amount of benevolent work performed in time by this Universal Brotherhood.

The Temple is not yet finished. Masonry has not yet accomplished its mission in the world. Let us work on. Work, work! This is the law. The time is short. It is past high noon with many of us. The sun goes down. Soon we shall lay by the implements of our Masonic work; and soon our offices of friendship and brotherly love and relief will cease.—Craftsman.

BRO. DANIEL COX, THE FATHER OF FREEMASONRY IN AMERICA.—In 1730, Bro. Daniel Cox was appointed the first Provincial Grand Master of the Provinces of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, by the Grand Lodge of England, and it was by his authority that a Lodge of Freemasons was warranted in the same year, in Philadelphia, whereby this city became the "Mother-city of Freemasonry in America." We are glad to observe that our Brethren of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey are about to honour the memory of our earliest American Grand Master, by having prepared an accurate steel engraving of Grand Master Cox, at an expense of 275 dols. A copy of this engraving is to be appropriately framed, and presented to the living representatives of Bro. Cox, as a mark of the esteem of the fraternity of the present day for the Father of Masonry in America, and also in appreciation of the courtesy extended to the committee having the matter in charge, in enabling them to successfully accomplish their labours. Bro. James H. Stevens, Past Senior Grand Warden of New Jersey, is chairman of this Committee.—The Keystone.

It is one thing to make a man a Mason by initiation, and another to constitute him one in heart and brains. This latter work is, in part, that of the Masonic press, and 'tis a pity printing was not invented prior to the lecture of the second degree, so that we might have had eight, instead of seven, liberal arts and sciences.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Royal Shamrock Lodge No. 32.—A meeting was held on the 6th of July, at St. Olaves Place, Waterford. Present—Bros. Thomas Atherton W.M., Thomas Andrews S.W., Samuel H. Perry Secretary and J.W., James W. Andrews S.D., Edward G. Brooks J.D., Thomas Triggo Steward, Robert Whalley sen. D.C., David Atherton I.G., James Richardson Tyler, John Sunderland P.M. Treasurer. Past Masters, Bros. H. Waugh, H. D. Palmer, P. Whalley. Visitors, Bros. Elwin and Price Lodge 5 Waterford, Hiscox 1420 London, Nelson 297 Waterford, and about thirty brethren. Business transacted—This being the night appointed for the celebration of the Festival of St. John, the Lodge, after having been duly opened in first degree, was called off from labour to refreshment, when the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given and responded to, the W.M. called Bro. S. H. Perry forward, and presented him with a valuable silver tea service, accompanied by the following address, handsomely illuminated:

"To Samuel H. Perry, Esq., Junior Warden and Secretary of Masonic Lodge, No. 32, Waterford.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—Your brethren of the Royal Shamrock Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, desire to testify their regard and esteem for you, and therefore take advantage of your marriage to bear this testimony to your many good qualities, and the very efficient manner in which you have discharged the duties assigned to you.

"During your connexion with us your conduct, always regulated by true Masonic principles, your zeal for the welfare of our ancient Order, your exertions to promote the harmony and brotherly love which have always characterised the Craft, and the ability and care with which you have filled the important offices to which you have been elected, have won our esteem and regard, and called forth the praise and thanks of your brethren.

"We beg your acceptance of the accompanying tea service, as a tribute from the members of this Lodge to your sterling worth as a man and a Mason, and while it is no measure of your deserts or of our appreciation of them, we beg you to accept it in the same fraternal spirit in which it is offered. Wishing you and Mrs. Perry every happiness this world can afford; we pray the Great Architect of the Universe abundantly to bless you both, to smooth your steps in the rugged paths of this life, and, finally, to bring you to that better world, where all will be joy and peace and love, in the presence of the Most High.

"Given at our Lodge Rooms, Olaves Place, Waterford, and sealed with our seal, this 6th day of July 1875, and of Masonry 5875.

"Thomas Atherton W.M.,
Thomas Andrews S.W.,
John Sunderland P.M. and Treasurer,
"On behalf of the brethren of Royal Shamrock Lodge, 32."

Bro. Perry having replied in appropriate terms, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren enjoyed themselves with speech and song, parting, at a late hour, in peace, love and harmony, after a most enjoyable evening.

The Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—This Lodge held its regular weekly meeting on Monday, 12th July, at the Crown Tavern, Clerkenwell Green. Present—Bros. Pearcy W.M., Stock S.W., Halford J.W., Read S.D., Isaac J.D., Day I.G., Christopher Tyler. Past Master Bro. Beckett Preceptor. Business—Lodge opened in the usual manner, and the minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed. Bro. G. Walker passed to the degree of F.C., and Bro. Lake raised to the degree of M.M. The Lodge resumed to the first degree, and the W.M. worked the first section of the first lecture, and Bro. Beckett the fifth. The sum of 21s was unanimously voted from the funds to be given to the Mansion House Fund, for the relief of the sufferers by the inundations in France. Lodge closed pantedly, in due form, and adjourned until the 19th instant.

Temperance Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 56.—A meeting was held on the 13th June, at the Masonic Hall, Todmorden. Present—Bros. John Ratcliffe W.M., Frank Muttall S.W., Wm. Barrowclough J.W., Wm. Lord S.D., Wm. Marsden J.D., John Bolland D.C., Wm. Pilling Tyler, R. W. Waterson Secretary, John Watson Treasurer. Past Masters Bros. Pilling, Marshall, Watson, Wadsworth, and Bradshaw. Business transacted:—Installation, revising the bye laws, &c. Bro. Barrowclough, of the Rope and Anchor Inn, provided a splendid supper, of which the brethren partook.

Vitruvian Lodge No. 87.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, the 14th inst., at the "White Hart," College Street, Lambeth. There were present Bros. E. Thurkle W.M., B. Clegg S.W., C. Walter J.W., C. S. Jelly I.P.M., J. G.

Bond P.M. Treasurer, W. Stuart P.M. Secretary, H. T. T. Ross S.D., A. Timothy J.D., C. Nott I.G., Bentley Tyler, also Past Masters Whiting and Hopkins, and about forty brethren. The Lodge was opened in due form, and the summons calling the meeting read. During the evening Bro. T. H. Gantlett was raised to the third degree, and Bro. J. Shillton passed to the second. A ballot was taken for Messrs. Pimlett, Edwards, Thorp, Plows, and Schleicher, which proved unanimous in their favour, and they being in attendance were accordingly initiated in the ancient mysteries. Bro. H. Mandsley P.M. 87, and P.G.S.D. of the Grand Lodge of England, was unanimously elected an honorary member of the Lodge. The Lodge then closed in perfect harmony.

Prudent Brethren Lodge, No. 145.—Most of our Lodges, excepting the summer ones, are now closed until October next, but the brethren, not liking their Masonic associations to entirely drop during the vacation, organise picnics and summer outings. The Prudent Brethren Lodge held a summer banquet at the Alexandra Palace, on Tuesday, 12th July, where an assemblage of the brethren and visitors, numbering sixty-two, met, under the presidency of Bro. John Boyd P.M. and P.G.P., supported by Bros. T. Cubitt P.G.P., C. A. Cottebrune P.G.P., T. Bull P.M., G. S. States P.M. and P.G.S., Moore P.M., E. H. Thiellay, Haslett, Leggatt, &c. The W.M. was unavoidably absent through indisposition, a fact that was regretted by every member of the Lodge. The brethren occupied a spacious room, where a very sumptuous and récherché dinner, a la Russe, with dessert, was provided by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, whose catering gave unqualified satisfaction. The table presented a very beautiful appearance, being profusely decorated with flowers. Grace having been sung, by Miss Bessie Stroud, Miss Heath, and Bros. Farquarson and Carter, Bro. J. Boyd proposed the usual loyal toasts, and to that of the R.W. the Earl of Skelmersdale and the rest of the Grand Officers, said:—He was pleased to see two of the Grand Officers among them, viz., Bros. T. Cubitt and C. A. Cottebrune; the former brother returned thanks. Trio, "This Wagic Wove Scarf" was then sung. Bro. J. Boyd then proposed the toast of the W.M. All regretted his absence, but he hoped at the next meeting he would be able to be with them, in restored health. Bro. J. Boyd, in proposing the toast of the Visitors, said how pleased he was to see so many friends and familiar faces, and as the list was rather a lengthy one, he would couple with it the name of Bro. H. Dicketts P.G.S., who returned thanks. Bro. Moore, in proposing the toast of Bro. J. Boyd, alluded to his great Masonic qualifications; he had served the office of W.M. in the Lodge for two years; he was, in fact, the Father of the Lodge. They had seen how ably he had presided, and whatever Masonic or other capacity his services were required in, they were always readily given. (Cheers.) Bro. J. Boyd having left the chair, it was occupied by Bro. Bull P.M. The toast of the Masonic Charities was responded to by Bro. Leggatt, who, as representing the Lodge as a Steward for the Boys' School, had collected the highest amount of the London Lodges. The toast of the Officers found a very able exponent in Bro. E. Thiellay, who also expressed his regret at the absence of the W.M. Bro. J. Last P.M., in one of his genial and expressive speeches, hoped they would not separate without drinking the health of Bro. T. Bull P.M. They had seen what he had done while in the occupation of the chair; his study for the good of the Charities, combined with his other good qualities, and he hoped the brethren would give a hearty response to the toast. (Cheers.) Bro. Bull having replied, coffee was served, and the brethren separated, after enjoying a very agreeable evening. Bros. Farquarson, Carter, Miss Bessie Stroud, Miss Heath, Bros. Talbot, Chever and Brand singing some very excellent songs. Among those present were Bros. G. S. States P.M., Manby, Perry, Mumford, Jacobs, Bortch, Reis, Daw, Leggatt, Masters, King, Ponsford, Turry, Downing, &c. The visitors were Framjee Hormusjee (a Parsee), Bros. T. Cubitt P.G.P., C. A. Cottebrune P.G.P., Reiss, Ireton, J. Sadler, Hunt and H. M. Levy.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—This Lodge held its weekly meeting on Wednesday, 14th July, at Bro. Chard's, The White Hart, Abchurch Lane. Present—Bros. Chapman W.M., Tarquant S.W., Blinkhorn J.W., Abell S.D., Crocker I.G., Christopher Tyler. Past Master Gottheil Preceptor. Visitor, Bro. A Gedson S.W. 1479. Business—The Lodge was opened to the second degree. Bro. Holland was a candidate. The three sections of the second lecture were worked by the brethren, under the direction of the worthy Preceptor, Bro. Gottheil. Bro. Tarquant was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week.

Lodge of United Strength, No. 228.—The summer festival of this truly united Lodge, was held under the happiest circumstances of weather and place, on Tuesday last. The house selected was Bro. Stone's, the Ship Hotel, Shepperton, in the midst of the most charming scenery. The brethren flocked down by rail, road and river, and made in all a party a third larger than was looked for; but the embarrassment of the W.M., Bro While, at having so striking a proof of his popularity, was speedily relieved by finding that Bro. Host was equal to the occasion, with an ample banquet for all, though one room was not large enough for the dinner party. Bros. P.M. James Terry and Daniel Tallerman (known among his familiars as "the Baron") exerted themselves in every way to provide the company with amusement, and this was mostly found on the river, by the brethren and the ladies, in boating and fishing. At the dinner the W.M. presided, supported by Past Masters Crump Secretary, Winsland Treasurer, James Terry, Bottrill, Davies, Senior Warden Griggs, Junior Warden J. Hill, the other officers being Halford, Pearey and Flaws. The usual toasts were given, and the warm acknowledgments of the party were made to the W.M., the P.M.'s and to the officers for the happy day at this quiet limit of the world. With the J.W.'s greeting, ending with "happy meet again," the party separated to find their various ways to London. It should be mentioned that a large party started in the morning from the "Old Gate" at Clerkenwell (St. John of Jerusalem), and Bro. Gay provided an excellent luncheon for his brethren and their friends, and told them that supper would await them if they arrived within hours.

Abercorn Lodge, No. 299, Ireland.—The half-yearly dinner was held at the Beresford Arms Hotel, Armagh, on Wednesday evening the 7th inst. The following brethren were present:—As guests—Bros. Captain Evans, Dr. Whitla, George C. Cochrane, Dr. Fraser, Rev. Thos. Ellis, W. C. Magowan, E. V. Forshall, S. Call. The members of the Lodge—Bros. J. G. Winder J.P. D.P.G.M., Dr. Gray P.M. W.M. pro tem, Geo. H. Smith P.M. Secretary, A. Nelson P.M., Wm. Hardy P.M., J. W. Clements, Dr. Davison, Dr. Marks, J. A. Watson, Rev. F. G. M'Nally, Thos. White, W. J. Black, S. M'Kimm, T. W. Cowan, Dr. Leeper, J. Lonsdale, M. Bronte, J. A. Parris, and R. Gillespie. The brethren being seated about seven o'clock, grace was invoked by Bro. Rev. F. G. M'Nally, chaplain to the Lodge, and the practical discussion of Bro. Tranter's bill of fare then commenced. Non nobis domine having been sung by the musical brethren present. The W.M. (Dr. Gray) gave the usual loyal toasts from the chair, which were duly honoured. "The Grand Master of England and Ireland" were each toasted in true Masonic style, and saluted according to ancient custom. Amongst the several other toasts given was that of "Our Visiting Brethren," to which response was made by Bros. Evans, Cochrane, Ellis, Whitla, Forshall, and Fraser. Bro. Winder D.P.G.M., after acknowledging the pride and pleasure it always gave him to dine with "299," and take part in its proceedings, called for a flowing bumper for a toast he had only to name to ensure it enthusiastic reception amongst Irish Masons. He gave the health of Bro. Geo. H. Smith P.M., who, he said, was not only the Secretary of "299" since its formation, but its most energetic patron. Bro. Smith had originated and triumphantly carried "299" to its present high position in the province, and, as a member of the Lodge, he felt proud in congratulating his brethren on having for their guiding star such an acquisition as Bro. Smith. Bro. Winder then presented Bro. Smith with a valuable P.M.'s jewel, the gift of his brethren in "299." The toast, and Bro. Winder's remarks, were most cordially honoured, after which Bro. Smith acknowledged the compliment and presentation in an address of much feeling and eloquence. He assured those present that his connection with the Order and its members in Armagh was dear to him, and that he knew how well that good feeling was reciprocated. By a happy coincidence, the occasion of their kindness was not only the first anniversary of the "Abercorn Lodge," but his own birthday. Bro. Clements sang "Many happy returns of the day." Several glees and songs were given during the evening, by Bros. Marks, Clements, M'Nally and Nelson. Bro. Dr. Marks presided at the piano.

Beadon Chapter, No. 619.—A convocation of this Chapter was held on Thursday, 9th inst., at the Horns Tavern, Kennington. Comp. Green Z., Williams H., W. Smeed P.Z. as J., Augurs S.E., E. Coste S.N., Wyer P.S., Carrington 1st Asst., Capt. G. Smith P.Z., D. H. Jacobs, &c. The Chapter having been opened and the minutes confirmed, Bros. B. White, Beadon Lodge, 619, R. F. Tayler and E. Wilton, both of Southwark Lodge, 879, were duly exalted into Royal Arch Masonry by the M.E.Z., Comp. W. Smeed P.Z. delivering the addresses. The Chapter was closed, and he companions partook of a capital banquet, provided by Comp. Eaton. The usual toasts were given and responded to. Comps. W. Smeed, D. H. Jacobs, and Capt. G. Smith contributing to the harmony, the latter Companion giving a very excellent recitation.

Star in the East, No. 650.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Monday, the 12th of July, at the Pier Hotel, Harwich. Present:—Bros. James Durrant W.M., George Gard Pye S.W., Jonathan Dunlop J.W., Samuel Dutton sen. Secretary and Treasurer, Samuel Dutton jun. S.D., fal. Howard D.C., J. T. Henderson Steward, Wm. Basham I.G., Richd. Barlow Tyler. Past Masters Bros. R. T. Dickson, W. O. Ward, S. H. Wymark. Visitors, Bros. A. Matthews, R. Wilson, C. F. J. Barker, W. Downes, G. L. Jackson, R. Gay, Thos. M. Naylor, C. Lenie, J. Warren and W. Cockle. Business:—Bros. Thos. H. Jennings raised to M.M., W. Walker passed to F.C., Mr. W. Shaw initiated. The work was ably performed by Bro. Durrant W.M.

Fawcett Lodge, No. 661.—This Lodge held its general meeting on Wednesday, the 14th July, at the Masonic Hall, Seaham Harbour. Present—Bros. John Barrett Wells W.M., Geo. Stokold acting S.W., W. Stratford J.W., H. W. Richardson Secretary, John Richardson Treasurer, Samuel Cockburn S.D., Joseph Potts J.D., W. Foster P.M. D.C., J. Scorfield, and J. Clare Stewards, Geo. Grieves I.G., T. Taylor Tyler. Past Masters—Bros. H. B. Wright, J. Ayrd, R. Candlish. Business—Bro. T. H. Smarthwaite was initiated, Bro. Francis Carry was passed, and Bro. J. B. Turnbull raised. A ballot was taken for Bro. Geo. Wm. Emmerson of St. Peter's Lodge, No. 481, as a joining member, who was unanimously elected.

St. John's Lodge, No. 673, Liverpool.—The installation meeting in connection with this Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 6th inst. The brethren were summoned to meet at the Masonic Hall, Hope Street, and there was a large attendance. Bro. M. Corless, the retiring W.M., presided at the opening; and after the transaction of some formal business the chair was taken by Bro. H. Nelson P.M. 673, W.M. 1505, who proceeded to instal Bro. Joseph K. Diggon as the W.M. of St. John's for the ensuing year. The whole of the ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. Nelson, who received a special vote of thanks for his excellent working. The following were the officers invested by the W.M.:—Bros. M. Corless I.P.M., J. Hocken P.M. D.C., Thomas Roberts S.W., Henry Burrows J.W., R. Pearson P.M. Treasurer (re-elected for the tenth time), S. Johnson P.M. P.G.S. Secretary, D. Jackson S.D., W. Brackenbury J.D., L. Herman I.G., J. Sadden S.S., T. Palshaw J.S., R. Holmes Organist, and W. H. Ball Tyler. Previous to the conclusion of the business, a very handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. M. Corless I.P.M., as a mark of respect and esteem after his year's labours in the chair. The installation picnic subsequently took place at the Great Eastern Hotel, New Ferry, at which about 200 ladies and brethren were present. An excellent banquet was provided by "mine host," and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the W.M. and other brethren. The menu card and toast list was quite a model in its way, and reflected great credit on the taste of Bros. Barrows and Matthews. The weather was very delightful, and the whole of the afternoon's amusements were enjoyed with the greatest zest. The picnic was one of the most pleasant held for a long time, and the party returned to town at a seasonable hour.

De Warren Lodge, No. 1302.—This Lodge held its annual meeting on Monday, the 5th July, at Private Rooms, White Swan Hotel, Halifax, at 3 p.m. Present—Bros. W. Asquith W.M., Jeremiah Whitaker S.W., George Normanton P.M. P.P.J.G.D. J.W., William Cooke P.M. Secretary, John Frith P.M. Treasurer, Thomas Braithwaite J.D., John Seed P.M. D.C., W. Swift and C. W. Stead Stewards, George Holmes I.G., J. Greenwood P.M. Tyler; P.M. Bro. W. H. D. Horsfall. Visitor, Bro. J. Menzies W.M. 61. Business:—Lodge opened in 1st degree, minutes of last meeting read and confirmed; Mr. Thomas Edwin Hirschcliffe balloted for, unanimously accepted, and initiated by the W.M. A motion to increase the initiation fee to £10 10s was passed the second time. The Lodge opened in 2nd degree. The W.M. elect was presented to the Installing Officer (Bro. G. Normanton P.M.), took his obligation of fidelity to the Lodge, and answered the usual questions. Lodge opened in 3rd degree, M.M.'s retired. Board of Installed Masters formed, and the W.M. elect placed in the E., according to ancient usage and custom. Board of Installed Masters closed, brethren re-admitted, and saluted. Officers invested as follows:—Bros. Jeremiah Whitaker W.M., George Normanton P.M. P.P.J.G.D. S.W., Frederick Whitaker P.M. P.P.J.G.D. J.W., John Seed P.M. Treasurer, William Cooke P.M. Secretary, Thomas Braithwaite S.D., George Holmes J.D., William Sutcliffe D.C., Charles W. Stead Organist, John Gardiner I.G., William Swift and Seth Patchett Stewards, John Greenwood P.M. Tyler. The Secretary, on behalf of the Lodge, then presented and invested Bro. Asquith, the retiring W.M., with a new P.M. apron, collar, and silver jewel, as a mark of their appreciation of his earnestness in discharging the duties of his office during the past twelve months. Unfortunately, while this was taking place, a message was awaiting Bro. Asquith, announcing the death, that afternoon, of his father, at Dewsbury. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, which reflected great credit on the new manager of the White Swan Hotel Company. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, that of "the sister Lodges in Halifax" being replied to by Bro. Menzies W.M. Lodge of Probity, No. 61, and Bro. F. Whitaker W.M. St. James's Lodge, No. 448.

The Great City Lodge, No. 1426.—An emergency meeting was held on the 10th July, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon Street, E.C. Present—Bros. N. B. Headon W.M., J. H. Townend S.W., J. Seex J.W., G. W. Blackie as S.D., Chas. Taylor as J.D., W. H. Catchpool I.G., W. Steedman Tyler, Edward Moody Secretary. Bro. James Stevens I.P.M. Visitors — Bros. J. Lake 1471, Taylor Secretary 902, J. C. Pickard, Royal Mother of Solomon Lodge, Jerusalem, Wray, Robert Burns 25; and Bros. Farmer, Hicks, Lewis, Rolfe, Kebble, Barker, Potter, Goodman, McNiven, Measures, T. W. Headon, Boulton, White, Cox, Rowe, Hooker, Bristow, Liscombe, Davis, Baber, Keeble, J. R. Hartley, Tulldge, J. Hartley, E. H. Davis, Pendick, Lockitt, Clark. Business transacted:—Raised Bros. White, Bristow, Hicks, Farmer, Measures, and McNiven; passed Bros. Rowe, Lord, Goodman, Liscombe, and Beaskin; initiated Messrs. Julian, Hartley C.C., Lockitt, and D. J. R. Clark. The whole of the ceremonies were worked by the W.M. Several candidates were proposed. Supper at conclusion. Bro. Pickard, Royal Mother of Solomon Lodge, Jerusalem, responded for the visitors. Lodge opened at 3.15, closed at 9.30.

Metropolitan Lodge, No. 1507.—The first summer banquet in connection with this Lodge, which, although it has only been one year in existence, numbers 45 members, and has on its list many propositions for joining at the next meeting, was held on Friday, 9th July, at the Rye House, Hoddesdon, Herts. The weather was unpropitious, it raining all day, yet, despite this drawback, the brethren and ladies arrived by rail and road. Bro. Jas. Willing jun., the W.M., and the Stewards, determined that there should be no lack of attention on their part to secure the comfort of the visitors, in which endeavour they were most successful. The attractions of this beautiful place which, on account of the rain, could not be seen to such advantage as on a fine day, consist of its beautiful grounds, its historical associations, so suggestive of the celebrated Rye House Plot, its very old and valuable pictures, statuary, and relics, all of which are graphically described by the attendants. Another great feature of this establishment we must not omit to mention, that is, the facility it affords to those who are inclined for an aquatic excursion, as its supply of boats will serve the requirements of the most fastidious. When all these various attractions had been duly brought under the notice of the brethren and their lady friends, an adjournment took place to a very commodious room, where a capital dinner and dessert was provided by Bro. W. H. Teale, the worthy host. Bro. J. Teale personally superintended. Bro. Jas. Willing jun., the W.M., presided, and it is but justice to say that to his genial presidency, assisted by the officers of the Lodge and the Stewards, that every lady, brother and visitor thoroughly enjoyed themselves. On the removal of the cloth the usual loyal toasts were given. Bro. Michael, the S.W. proposed, in eulogistic terms, the toast of the W.M. He informed the Brethren that the success of the Lodge (he being one of its founders) was mainly due to him, and in proposing his health he hoped all present would do honour to it, he was one whom all respected for his many good qualities. (Cheers). Bro. James Willing responded to the toast, and in the course of a very eloquent speech said he was pleased to hear the commendations passed on him by Bro. Michael, and at the hearty response which was given by those present; any services that could be rendered by him to the Craft in general were at their disposal. He was proud to say the Metropolitan Lodge was flourishing. Bro. Ralph and Mr. R. Douglass responded for the toast of the Visitors in very happy terms. The W.M., in proposing the toast of the Officers, alluded to their Masonic qualifications, but he had more particularly to thank Bro. Time P.M. and Secretary for his arduous and indefatigable exertions, not only in the Lodge, but also in contributing to the day's successful proceedings. The next toast was that of the Stewards, and that found very able exponents in Bro. J. Douglas I.G. and Bro. Scales. The Ladies was next given, after which the toast of the Press. Bro. H. M. Levy P.M. 188 returned thanks. The ladies and brethren in the adjoining room enjoyed the pleasure of quadrilles, polkas, &c. A band provided by the W.M. discoursing some very excellent music. Tea and coffee was then served, and the visitors returned to town, after passing a delightful day, in spite of the weather, all present expressing to the W.M. their congratulation at the success of the first summer banquet. Among those present were Bros. Michael S.W., Williams J.W., H. G. Time, Child S.D., Kingham J.D., J. Douglas I.G., C. Scales W.S., Salisbury, Cook, Gilbert, Rapkin, Reed, Ralph, R. Douglas, J. Levy, Shand, Hatton, Trimmings, H. M. Levy, &c.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 112 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

THE REV. SIR E. R. JODRELL, BART. TO MESSRS. FELTOE & SONS, 27 ALBEMARLE STREET, W.

WHEN at Sall I received an Analytical Report of your "SPECIALITE" SHERRY, and you must forgive me for saying that at first I regarded the whole matter as a most egregious piece of humbug. Having, however, tasted the Wine in question, and found it most agreeable to the palate, I determined, on my own responsibility, to have it analysed for myself, having fully also determined previously to expose any hoax, pro bono publico, or to give you the benefit of the analysis, should it turn out in your favour. I have the pleasure to forward you Professor Redwood's (of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain) Analysis, which says more than I can express. I am very particular as to the wine I drink, and as I have been hitherto buying every-day Sherry at 60s per dozen. I am rejoiced to find now that I can purchase Wine of equal strength and superior bouquet at half that price. This should be known to the general public, and you can make any use you deem proper of this letter, and also of Professor Redwood's most elaborate Analysis.

WHAT NEXT?

THE honours that have been showered on Masonry of late years are great beyond conception. We will not say they are wholly undeserved, for Masonry can point to certain institutions and to certain times in its history as evidence that its aims are very different from what the blatant orators and the ready writers of a certain narrow sectarianism would have the world believe. But recent events, and the pertinacious attacks on our Order made by the Ultramontanes, have gone a long way towards developing our popularity, to such an extent indeed that the gentler sex, who hitherto have been rigidly excluded, not only from our Lodges, but from our banquets likewise, are beginning to interest themselves in our favour. The last Festival of the Boys' School was graced with their presence for the first time, and the idea of introducing them, we believe, originated with Bro. Binckes, the energetic Secretary of that Institution. In fact, he enjoyed a double credit in connection with that festival. The list of subscriptions handed in showed the greatest aggregate sum on record that was ever collected, and the ladies were present. But now a further honour is in store for us. The Baroness Burdett Coutts, with whose name and fame our readers are as familiar as with any household word, has announced her intention of presenting to the Lodge No. 1278, which bears her name, three chairs for the W.M., S.W. and J.W. respectively. The occasion will be honoured in a highly becoming manner. The formal presentation will be made at a meeting of the Lodge, on Thursday next, the 29th instant, the members present being, by dispensation from His Royal Highness the M.W.G.M., in full Masonic Craft clothing. They will also bring with them their ladies, and this will be the first occasion in England at which any ladies have been present when Lodge "furniture," as such, has been in the room. In France, there are, we know, Lodges of Adoption, while in the United States, the various public processions in which Craft, Royal Arch, and Templar Masonry figure, sometimes separately, sometimes together, have familiarised the American ladies with the insignia of our Order, and with the titles of our officers and chief dignitaries. But in England Masonry has been far more secret in its operations, so far, at least, as any outward display of Masonic emblems is concerned. There was nothing visible, for instance, in connection with the recent Installation of the Prince of Wales to the outer world, for the brethren arrayed themselves inside the Hall. In fact, the few occasions on which any Masonic display is to be seen are limited here to Masonic funerals, meetings of Provincial Grand Lodges, and occasionally the laying the first stone of some public building. Thus the presence of the ladies is quite a new feature, and not inappropriately perhaps. If the apron is an emblem of freedom, and has been adopted for that reason as the most important of our clothing, it is also the emblem of domesticity, so to speak. Women of every class and age wear one of these during, perhaps, some portion of the day, from the lady with her elaborate tablier, to the simple peasant with her plain white apron. Our zeal, however, must not outrun our discretion. We are afraid some of our readers may think it ungallant in us to caution them against seeking to establish too great an intimacy between Masonry and the fair sex. The old saying which describes a milksop as "tied to his mother's apron-strings" may suggest to us not to be tied too closely, in things Masonic, to the pretty apron-strings of the ladies. Their presence lends an additional charm to Masonry, but this ultimate charm of all must not predominate. Let us still be Masons first, and then admirers of beauty in the banqueting hall afterwards.

THE RETIRING MASTERS OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

WE publish elsewhere a communication from Bro. Binckes, in which that gentleman takes us to task for, and, in one passage, with less than his usual courtesy, impeaches the complete impartiality of our article last week on "The Retiring Masters of the Boys' School." He suggests, at the outset, that we should have done better had we followed the example of the Freemason, and left the subject unnoticed, except so far as inserting his circular, asking us to suspend judgment till his reply to Bro. Tew's pamphlet should have appeared. We note, in the next instance, that he considers we have shown a bias in dealing with the unhappy differences which have arisen between the late Head Master and the Committee, and this in the face of our disclaimer—"We have no intention of passing judgment on the contents of these documents. We are strictly impartial in the matter." He enters with some violence of language into a defence of the Committee, displaying a vigour, both defensive and offensive, in every way worthy of the vigorous official we know him to be.

Now, as to the policy or impolicy of referring, in a public journal, to what was already too notorious, we shall have no difficulty, we imagine, in justifying ourselves in the eyes of our readers generally. True, we did not imitate the conduct of our contemporary, and publish Bro. Binckes's letter, but we gave a very substantial reason for not doing so. In our short leader of the 26th ult., on "The case of the Retiring Head Master of the Boys' School," occurs the following: "As we have not thought it worth while to print Bro. Tew's report, it is needless to insert Bro. Binckes's explanation." As we neither published nor made extracts from the report, we did not deem it just to print the letter it had called forth from Bro. Binckes. The Secretary thinks we might have done so, in acknowledgment of his appeal to the principle audi alteram partem. Hear both sides first, and then judge. Now it is no business of ours to pass judgment, but we are not thereby precluded from criticising, either the facts or the decision, only we must take care, in doing so, to avoid anything like partisanship, and this, we think, we have manifestly done. What we have said has been governed by certain general principles, the justice of which are, in our opinion, beyond question. We have remarked that the Committee announce in two consecutive reports that changes in the educational conduct of the School have been thought expedient. Does anyone doubt the impolicy of frequent changes in the management of such Institutions? Do they help to raise the tone of a school, or to improve its character as a place of education? If they do, we are wrong in our objection, but the general tenour of all experience is on our side. Changes, again, may be costly in other ways. If we remember rightly, the accounts for the year 1873 contain an item of £250, as compensation to the late Head Master, and we do not imagine the Rev. Bro. Perrott can be discharged from his office without receiving a like, if not an equal, solatium. Here, at once, we have an admirable reason why the matter should be publicly criticised. The funds of the Institution are damaged to the extent of some £500, more or less, within the brief space of two years. This, in short, is the pecuniary fine inflicted on the School because the governing body proves to have been unfortunate in its selection of Head Masters. Thus, on moral, educational, and financial grounds, a frequent change of Masters, is, in our opinion, impolitic. Surely there is no bias in affirming a proposition so simple, so self-evident? Then, as to the report of Mr. Finlaison. We may, first of all, set Bro. Binckes's mind at rest as to there having been any foul play on the part of him or them who sent us a copy of it. It did not come from any one connected with the Secretary's office, and we presume it was sent us in order that we might either print it in extenso or quote from it. Considerations of space alone induced us to adopt the latter alternative. But does Bro. Binckes seriously consider it an act of partisanship in us to have quoted from this report? Should we not rather have been guilty of partiality towards the Committee if we had suppressed what was favourable to their opponents? We quoted fairly, that is, we took the blame and the praise equally, just as they came. At the distribution of prizes, on the 30th ult., the Lord Balfour of Burleigh thanked both the Masters and the Committee, and spoke highly of the admirable discipline and demeanour of the boys. To have quoted from a satisfactory report without giving credit to the Masters for their conduct of the School would have been an act of gross unfairness to them. There would seem to be far more of bias in Brother Binckes when he impugns that part of Mr. Finlaison's report in which the latter praises the general conduct of the boys, on the grounds that they would be sure to carry themselves with propriety before a stranger, and that four days are insufficient for Mr. Finlaison to have formed a trustworthy judgment. The questions at issue between the Rev. Bro. Perrott, Bro. Tew, and the "Four Retiring Masters" on the one hand, and the Committee, the Secretary, and the Matron on the other, we have refrained entirely from discussing. We have pointedly refused to touch upon the matters raised by Bro. Tew. The complaints of the Assistant Masters against the Matron we have passed by without a word of comment. We said last week, and we say again this, "They are ex parte to begin with. The Matron may be in a position to meet them, or they may be incontrovertible. At all events, it is no business of ours to pass judgment on the merits." We have not the slightest doubt the Committee and the Secretary believe themselves to be right, but the retiring Head and Assistant Masters must be excused if they are not of the same mind as regards themselves. The Committe have sat in judgment on these latter, and passed sentence. This it was fully competent for them to do, but the masters appeal, either directly or indirectly, against this verdict—and this they have an unquestionable right to do. The Committee say of them, We are not satisfied with their conduct, and we have thought it expedient, in the interest of the Institution, over whose welfare we have been called upon to preside, to dispense with their services. They urge, on the other hand, We have striven to do our duty and we believe we have been successful. The noble Chairman, at the last examination, thanked us, and the Examiner has praised the school, both for the general excellence of the training and for the discipline and bearing of the boys. In order to have shown any partiality towards one or other of these views, we must have said either to the Committee: We think you are in error in your conduct towards the Masters; or to the Masters, We do not think your conduct of the School has been satisfactory. We have done neither. We have said a frequent change of Masters is undesirable—an undeniable proposition. A Head Master, if he is to do good service, must be responsible to the governing body alone, all other masters and resident officials being subordinate to him—another undeniable proposition. As for Bro. Binckes's long and faithful services to the Institution, we shall not esteem him or them the less that we think he has utterly misconstrued our article of last week. With the rest of Masonry, we deplore that differences connected with the Boys' School have arisen, but we cannot shut our eyes to the fact of their existence. Those whose conduct has been impugned must be less than men if they do not seek, by every means in their power, to set themselves right in the eyes of the world. The matters to which we have been referring are matters of general notoriety throughout the Craft, but they are still, as it were, sub judice, and we have very carefully observed the well-known rule of journalism, not to pass judgment till both sides have striven to justify themselves. Our opinion, however, would be utterly without value if we did not express it freely, at the proper time, and irrespective of all party influences. If this squabble goes further, as we are assured it will, then, if the Rev. Bro. Perrott and his late subordinates are proved to have been guilty of misconduct in their several offices, we shall not hesitate to justify the action of the Committee, but if the Rev. Brother and his assistants succeed in proving that the Committee's conduct towards them has been harsh, unjust, and unreasonable, we shall not hesitate to speak our mind freely. At present we have said nothing to warrant Bro. Binckes's somewhat discourteous refusal to accept our disclaimer of last week—"We are strictly impartial in the matter."

We need say nothing, we think, as to the propriety of laying down certain general propositions in connection with what is known everywhere throughout the Craft. We have not made these differences public, nor do we see how the interests of Masonry can suffer by referring to them in our columns. Facts are sometimes very disagreeable, but it is seldom wise to ignore them.

THE PHILOSOPHER'S STONE,

CABALA AND NECROMANCY CONSIDERED AS THE FALSE SYSTEM OF FREEMASONRY.

(From the French of J. L. Laurens.)

In regarding Solomon as the founder of Freemasonry, and in attributing to him a knowledge of all the speculative sciences, we establish, as has already been shown, the important fact that these sciences form the principal system, and the purpose which Freemasons propose to themselves. This view, which has its supporters, is a natural result of that supposed relationship which men of grave thought have brought themselves to recognise between the idea of the Temple of Jerusalem and Freemasonry. Such an inference, in fact, would suggest itself, even if it had not already an existence in an infinity of writings and oral traditions.

If the search after the philosopher's stone could be one of the objects of Freemasonry, its founders would have placed in its very bosom the germ of its own destruction, and the virtues which we still see illumine it would form a striking contrast, if, indeed, they were not a wretched make-believe. What could we hope from a body of men which, under a false exterior of wisdom and philanthropy, confined their labours to searching in the midst of a mysterious obscurity for that vile metal which is destructive of every noble principle, and which, as regards the happiness of mankind, should have remained buried in the depths of the earth? What claims would they possess to public esteem? By what secret means would they have attracted to themselves the good will of so many princes, who admire in them only the splendour of their wisdom?

We know too well that the study of the cabalistic art, and the search for the philosopher's stone, has much occupied men, who were dazzled by the seductive hope of amassing wealth, or who were led astray by an ardent thirst for pleasure. We know, too, that utter failure has always been the result of these long and difficult researches. Misery and despair at having wasted their time and means in a laborious search, such have been the fruits they have gathered. And it is in the full tide of this illusion that most of these men have taken upon themselves to write upon these sciences, either to extort from public curiosity some trifling compensation for the loss of their time, or to conceal, amidst the number of their dupes, their shame and spite. The list of writings is immense. Some have remained in manuscript, and they are sought for by reason of their rarity; very many are in print. Germany, above all countries, is inundated with this class of book, nearly all written in Latin, and in a mystic sense and style, and, consequently, almost incomprehensible. When an outcry is raised against this dark obscurity, the answer seriously given is always that each of those books has its particular key. To seek out this key, this is the special study of mankind, and to have found it is to have attained the desired end. But what man has ever been fortunate enough to discover the key of these barbarous writings? He must be the phœnix himself. There is no rule, no sign, no data, for looking for this key; we must seek it blindfold, and chance alone will ever place it within our reach. Hence it is that the philosopher's stone has been described as ars sine arte, cujus principium laborare, medium mentiri, et finis mendicare.

It is then in a vast collection of rhapsodies, in manuscript or printed, and all written in mysterious and most obscure language; it is in a crucible, incessantly heated by a continuous fire, that man, already unhappy enough in being troubled by a mad longing after vain illusions, is obliged to labour, with all a madman's strength, in order to pursue a shadow which is always moving further and further off, which escapes him when his life, spent in sorrow and anguish, passes away, and which ends usually in the indolence of misery, if it does press forward to seek by rascally means a disgraceful and ephemeral support.

As it is necessary to call in the aid of examples, in order to sustain patience in a career in which people are only nourished with vain hopes, the mystagogues have been careful to announce as possessing the philosopher's stone, men who, at their death, left behind them the remembrance of some peculiarity, or of something ambiguous. All the works of the alchemists are filled with wonders and fables of this kind, which, from constant repetition, have acquired a certain degree of credit with the credulous.

It were too hazardous an undertaking to sketch here the history of all the people of this class. More than one biographer has made them known to us, and to him I refer those who have a desire to study such curious legends. But among those whom the seekers after the philosopher's stone hold up to themselves as leading models, I cannot forbear lingering for a brief time over N. Flamel, as much because he enjoys a wonderful reputation among the hermetic philosophers, and because the world attributes to him certain much vaunted monuments of his skill. This Flamel was, towards the year 1409, a scribe, at the mortuary Des Innocents, at Paris, and the alchemists maintain that he discovered the philosopher's stone, and they announce with emphasis that he died extremely rich, the grand art having produced him, they say, a fortune of one hundred and fifty thousand crowns, a very large sum at the beginning of the fifteenth century, and starting from this text, so attractive to all lovers of the marvellous, the different pretended hieroglyphic figures attributed to this individual are set forth as veritable documents, which seekers after the truth must follow, in order to arrive at its happy discovery.

As the question is to disabuse men's minds of this ideal, in order to do so, and to throw some light on the matter, be it our business to communicate the result of certain researches of ours regarding this Flamel. Monsieur Salomon, in his library of Chemical Philosophers, adepts, as well authenticated truths, all the marvels which are credited to Flamel, as well as the cause of his rapid fortune, and the proofs which he invokes in support of his opinion; these he finds in the pretended hieroglyphic figures which may be still seen in the Cemetery of the Innocents. But these figures, so extolled by enthusiasts, do not present a type sufficiently suggestive of any character that is reconcilable with hermetic science, still less do they strike those who weigh them well, with that overwhelming force which has enlisted the support of M. Salomon. Those figures which may be applied to religion, even more directly than to the purpose of the philosopher's stone, seem to have been traced rather as ornaments, and not as the expression of an idea foreign to the spot where they placed. Other monuments of the same kind bear figures nearly similar, and thus the proof of M. Salomon are not sufficient evidence to give rise even to a simple presumption. It would be necessary, indeed, to have a considerable amount of imagination in order to suspect that the author of these figures had been anxious to hand down to posterity ideas relating to the philosopher's stone, or indeed, to any other similar science.

Naudé, librarian to Cardinal Marazin, does not hesitate to describe Flamel as a mere rascal, who being in correspondence with the Jews and Lombards after their expulsion from France, and having robbed them right and left, in order to conceal the true source of his wealth, and to preserve an outward decency, pretended to have discovered the philosopher's stone. "But," judiciously remarks the president Hénaut, "would he not have kept secret his discovery quite as much as his treasures which, after all, had only been filched from the Jews, whose condition was such as to cause him no further embarrassment." If Flamel had really found in his discovery of the philosopher's stone a secret source of wealth, what need was there for him to announce it to the public and to posterity? And assuming that some motive impenetrable to ordinary sagacity had induced him to make it thus public, why should he have chosen the obscure medium of a hieroglyphic style in preference to that of writing, which he followed professionally? Borel, author of Le Trésor des Antiquités gauloises, who is one of the most zealous believers in the philosopher's stone, without assigning any other reason for the rapid rise to fortune of Flamel, maintains that he was indebted for his great wealth, neither to the Jews, the Templars, nor to the hospitals, "seeing that 'says he,' he administered the property of none of them."

We cannot, in justice, share the opinion of Naudé, for it rests on facts of sufficient gravity to require proofs, but we must doubt the view of Borél, for it attributes the fortune of Flamel to the philosopher's stone. It is wise to distrust that spirit of enthusiasm which is a veritable blindness, and which seems to influence this latter author.

The marvellous always finds people ready to believe, and thus Flamel has found believers and apologists. The Abbé Villain, in his Essai sur l'histoire de saint Jacques de la Boucherie, not having been favourably impressed with the sentiments of credulity in speaking of N. Flamel as an alchemist, the critics attacked the views to which he had given expression in his work, and defended the believers in the philosopher's stone discovered by Flamel, and in reply, and in order to justify his statement, Villain published, in 1761, a critical history of N. Flamel, and of Pernelle, his wife, in which he destroyed all the assertions of the alchemists in relation to Flamel, proving, by authentic documents, and even by the will of Pernelle, that the property of this scribe of Les Charniers, at the time of his death, only amounted to the small sum of £3,398 14s 2d of our money. This, then, is what all these magnificent facts come to! but—

Il est de feu pour le mensonge."

GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

THE Benevolent Fund Festival was held at the Alexandra Palace, on Wednesday, 21st July, under the presidency of the R.W. Bro. Wm. Romaine Callender, M.P., Dep. G.M.M.M. The banquet was served by Bros. Bertram and Roberts in a very satisfactory manner. On the removal of the cloth the following list of toasts was duly proposed and responded to:—

1.—The Queen and Mark Masonry.
2.—H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family.
3.—The Right Honorable the Earl of Limerick, M.W.G.M.M.M., and the Past Grand Masters, viz.:—
The Right Hon. the Lord Leigh.
The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon.
The Viscount Holmesdale, M.P.
W. W. B. Beach, Esq., M.P.
Rev. George Raymond Portal, M.A.
The Right Hon. the Earl Percy, M.P.
4.—The R.W. Deputy G. Master, Chairman of the day, and the Grand Officers present and past.
5.—Success to the Mark Benevolent Fund and the Masonic Institutions.
6.—The Board of Stewards.
7.—The Ladies.

In the course of the evening the following lists were announced as having been received:—

SPENCER'S GREAT LIBRARY.

Odd Notes.

KNOWING from experience that many a quaint and interesting memento has been mimed at sales by auction, through the practice of lumping up insignificant-looking soiled tracts in parcels, we had the curiosity, by the permission of the auctioneers, to examine for ourselves certain lots thus catalogued. Our readers who are collectors in bibliography will not be displeased at the result of our curiosity, which we now present.

Lot 338.—The speech by Dunckerley has been withdrawn, but we found the following:—Speech at a Lodge in Halle, with fine engraved title and tail-piece, 1744.—Speech at a Lodge in Hamburg, engraved title, 1794.—Speech at the Lodge of the three Hammers, Frankfurt, 1752.—Speeches at Lodges in Berlin 1753, 1754, 1755, and 1756, with quaint head and tail-pieces.—Speeches at the Lodge of the Three Crowns in Konigsberg, 1760-61.—Speeches at the Lodge Jonathan in Brunswick, 1761.—Speeches at the Military Lodge in Berlin, 1775.—Moser on Toleration of Freemasonry with reference to the Peace of Westphalia, 1776.—Speeches in the Lodges Minerva at Leipzig, and of the Three Globes at Berlin, 1777, with fine vignettes, and others.

Lot 339.—Speeches. Lodge of Three Stars at Rostock, one of them in honour of the Great Frederick, with vignette, 1762.—The Friend of Man—a speech. Wetzlar, 1769.—Social and Brotherly Love; a speech to Masons at Carlisle, 1769.—Speeches in Lodge Minerva at Leipsig, 1772, 1777 and 1778, in the Lodges of Honesty, Absalom and St. George, at Hamburgh, 1773.—Speech by W. Hutchinson, on laying the foundation stone of Rookby Bridge, by the Barnard Castle Lodge, 1773.—Speech on reception of the deputation from the Grand Lodge of Sweden, by the Grand Lodge, Royal York at Berlin; this is of historical importance, 1777.—Speech on unveiling the bust of the Great Frederick, in the Grand Lodge, Berlin, 1777.—Various Odes on the Peace, and Music, 1770.—Acte de Bienfaisance and speech on the King's Return, Grand Lodge of Berlin, 1779, and others.

Lot 340.—Scott. Oration at Newcastle, 1777.—Oration in Lodge Frederick, at Glogau, 1778.—Installation, Lodge Centre des Amis, 1797.—Consecration of the Temple, G.L. of three Globes at Berlin, 1801.—Sermon by Rev. H. Orme to Prov. G. Lodge, Louth, 1804, and General Objections to Freemasonry, answered by the same.—Address by Bro. Harris to Lodge Vectis of Peace and Concord, at Newport, Isle of Wight, 1808.—Sermon to the Zetland Lodge, Hongkong.—A parcel of curious scraps, published by Finch, and others.

Lot 341.—Sermon preached at Truro, 1779.—History of the Grand Mother Lodge of the Three Globes, Berlin, 1775.—Discourse by Manhouse to the Lodge of Unanimity, No. 202, with author's autograph, 1798.—Sermon at Peterbro', by Rev. S. Oliver, 1802.—Lawrie's History of Freemasonry, annotated by Dr. Krause, 1810.—Haswell Sermon to Prov. G. Lodge, 1800.—Orme Sermon at Louth, 1804, and others.

Lot 342.—Sermon to the African Lodge, Boston, 1789.—Dutch translation of Cardew's speech to the Prov. G. Lodge, Truro, Rotterdam, 1787, curious; speech in Lodges at Stendal, 1781; Installation, Lodge de l'Ocean Français at Paris, 1798.—Erection of monument to Oltbof by the Masons of Pomerania, 1795.—Wedekind, on the Festivals of St. John in Masonry, 1818.—Centenary of Lodge Three Swords, at Dresden, 1840, and others.

Lot 343.—Discourse to the Altman's Lodge, 1799.—Sermon to Lodge of Unity, Plymouth, 1792.—Sermon by Simpson, at Newcastle, 1797.—Sermon by Haswell, at Tynemouth, 1800.—Sermon by S. Oliver, at Cambridge, 1803.—Charge by Haswell, at Neath, 1804.—Dedication of Freemasons' Hall, Durham.—Three Sermons by Percy, cloth gilt.—Dedication of Temple, and Speeches to Lodges in Stralsund, and others.

Lot 344.—Address of Lodge 201 (Ancients), 1799.—Pamphlets on Masonic Disputes at Rostock, and Hinrichs on Masonic Despotism.—Appeal to all Freemasons in Protestant Germany to erect an everlasting monument to Fame at the present time, by a Protestant Clergyman, 1819.—Collection of Sermons, 1820 to 1841, in one vol., and others.

Lot 345.—Installation Lodge of St. Napoleon, 1805.—Inauguration of new Temple of the G.O. of France, 1802.—Proceedings of the Order of Harodim Kilwinning, 1806.—Bylaws Lodge de l'Abeille Impériale, 1809.—Proceedings of Sovereign Metrop. Chapter, Paris, 1807, of Lodge Triple Unité, 1811, Lodge des Trinosophes, 1824, Lodge des Neuf Sœurs, 1807.—Masonic Congress at Strasburg, 1846, of Lodge Phénix, and Parfaite Union, and of Chapters Athenée, and d'Arras, of Lodges St. Therèse, Fidoles Ecossais, Amis de Vesta, Chevaliers Croisés, Sept Ecossais réunis, 1805 to 1836, and others.

Lot 346.—Proceedings of 13 well known French Lodges and others.

Lot 347.—Dawson's Sermon, 1812, and 26 others.—Wood's Sketch of the Knts. Templar.—Oliver's Account of the Schism, 1847, and others.

Lot 348.—Discourse in the Loge d'Anacreon, 1814.—Proceedings of the Loge d'Anacreon, 1811.—Proceedings of L. Point Parfait, 1816, and of Lodges Commandeurs de Mont Thabor, Rose du parfait silence, Indivisibles Ecossais, Cœurs unis, Thémis, Trinosophes, Paix immortelle, 1809, and others.

Lot 349.—Sermons by Oliver, and others.—Masonic Offering to the Duke of Sussex.—Carlisle's Manuals (high grades) parts 2 and 3.—Ahiman Rezon (a fine copy), 1764, and others.

Lot 350.—(Fenn's Light of Masonry has been withdrawn).—There remain a volume of Sermons by Dr. Oliver, bound and tooled.—Masonry and Oppression, with special reference to the State of Prussia, 1816.—Gravell. What use is Masonry? 1809.—Voice of a Prussian Citizen, by Koppe, 1815, and various others.

Lot 351.—Installation of the Duke of York, 1823.—Reports of Committee on power of a D.G.M. and of Special Committee on Masonic Jurisprudence, Virginia.—Centenary of Lodge Minerva, in Leipzig, 1841. Carlisle's Manual, third part.—Sundry Grand Lodge papers. Two of these dated 1814. Various Sermons, and others.

Lot 353.—Fête to Odilon Barrot. Eulogy on General Norton.—Transactions Grand Lodge of New York, 1840-1-2.—Address by Sir James Barnes, Bombay, 1840.—Le veritable Lien des peuples.—Transactions Sup. Council of France.—United Fête of French Lodges.—First Séance of the Society du Reveil de la Nature (in the G.O. of France), and tableau historique des Fêtes (of the same), pour eight années, and others.

Lot 355.—Moore's Address.—Gryll's Masonic Prayers.—Hints for Freemasons.—Sermons and Addresses various, and others.

Lot 356.—Masonic Funeral Services, &c., for King George of Hanover—the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg—William IV.—Duke of Athol—Duke of Sussex—General Foy—G. H. France—Sir John St. Aubyn — Neander — Richard Carpenter — General Worth — John Asplatt—Goethe, with others in Goethe's Lodge Amalia at Weimar, and in Lodges Point Parfait, Wellington at Deal, Fruchthorn at Lübeck, &c.

Lot 357 (Convention of Delegates, withdrawn).—26 Sermons by Dr. Oliver and others, in 1 vol.—14 Tracts by Dr. Oliver, and others, in 1 vol.—28 select tracts, including 4 on Washington as a Freemason, in 1 vol., and others.

Lot 358.—What time is it?—30 tracts in English and German.—Proceedings of the College of Freemasons of the Church, 1846 and 1847.—Various selected numbers of various Masonic Journals.—Jacques de Molai, &c., MS., and other pieces.

Lot 359 consists of 6 volumes of pamphlets, bound up for his private use by the late Dr. Oliver.

Lot 360.—Pamphlets on disputes in which the Grand Lodge and St. John's Grand Lodge of New York have been mixed up from time to time.—The Freemasons' Monthly Magazine for 1841, half-bound, all that was published, with book-plate and notes of the Hon. T. Fitz Walter Butler, and other works.

Lot 361.—Lists of Members of the following Lodges, &c.:—Mars et Themis, M.S. 1785; Amis intimes, Paris, 1787, 1788, 1789 and 1790; St. Jean, Paris, 1788; Parfaite Estime et Société Olympique, Paris, 1788; Zèle, Paris, 1788; St. Jean de Jerusalem, Nancy, 1792 and 1809; Constance couronée, Paris, 1808; Constance éprouvée, Paris, 1808; Amis réunis, Tours, 1809; Centre des Amis, Paris, 1804, 1806 and 1811; Amis de la Constance, 1805 and 1812; Paix immortelle, 1806; Admirateurs de l'Univers, 1813; Point Parfait, Paris, 1810 and 1813; Harmonie universelle, 1813; St. Napoléon, 1813; Anacréon, 1811, 1813, 1815 and 1817; Ecole de la Sagesse, Metz, 1813 and 1814; Chapter des Amis triomphans, Paris, 1815; Loge de Jerusalem, Paris, 1816; L'age d'or, 1818; Concorde, Martinique, 1825.—Address to the F. and A. Masons of North Munster, by Michael Furnell.—List of the Supreme Council for Ireland for the years 1842, 1844, 1846, 1848, 1850 and 1851, and others.

Many of the above Lodges bore a part in lamentable political struggles, and historical names of men eminent in every department are found in their contemporary lists. It is a pity that these have not been sorted and bound in order of date.

Lot 362.—By Laws of Lodges.—Parfaite Union, 1763.—Zèle, 1778.—Frères unis, 1775.—Neuf Sœurs (with symbolic frontispiece, 1778 and 1779).—Réunion des Arts, 1779.—Amis réunis, 1783.—L'Amitié, 1787.—Frères intimes, 1787.—Centre des Amis, 1793.—Des Artistes, 1798.—Amis philanthropes, Bruxelles, 1798.—Ocean Français, 1799.—Institution for Sons of Freemasons. London, 1827.

Lot 363.—Contains, amongst other matter, a nice set of French pocket rituals.

Lot 389.—Eight By Laws of Lodges, &c., from 1802.—Masonic Journal of Marietta for 1852 and 1853, with vol. 1 of new series. 3 vols. half-bound, and others.

Lot 571 contains an antique painted tracing board, and an old ivory snuff-box, curiously enriched with Masonic emblems, the property of a defunct Lodge of last century.

To the student, curious in history, and especially in the vicissitudes of Masonry in France and Germany there is much which is very precious in what we have described. Each lot will probably be sold for a trifle, owing to the loose way in which it has been catalogued.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is much to be regretted that you have not thought proper to imitate the prudent reticence of your contemporary, the Freemason, in refusing publication to highly coloured ex parte statements, in reference to recent occurrences in this Institution.

The circular I issued on receipt of Bro. Tew's extraordinary "report" was not a "reply," as it is termed by the Head Master, with his accustomed accuracy. In that circular will be found the following passage: "I simply now, in the interests of the Institution, and in my own name, and on behalf of others, beg you to suspend your judgment, until a reply can be given to the ex parte statements to which your attention has been drawn." Of this circular I forwarded you a copy, and though it contained nothing of a controversial character, you declined to publish it. On the other hand, your contemporary, regarding it merely as an appeal, "audi alteram partem," inserted it.

Is it consistent with common fairness to give publicity to renewed gross accusations against Committee and officials pending the issue of a reply to the charges alleged in Bro. Tew's "Report?"

Is it justifiable to throw the weight of your editorial opinion into the scale, as you have evidently done in the leading article in your last number, "The Retiring Masters of the Boys' School," founding that opinion on a letter signed by them, which they ought to be ashamed of having written, so utterly at variance with truth are some, and so preposterously absurb are other, of the statements therein contained?

I admit that you say, "We have no intention whatever of passing judgment on the contents of these documents," but no one can fail to detect the bias throughout the article.

I contend that it is manifestly wrong to encourage young men, in the position of the "retiring Masters," to air their fancied grievances in the columns of a newspaper; that it is utterly subversive of discipline, and most mischievous in every respect. Supposing their grievances to have an established foundation, the proper tribunal before which they should be brought is the governing body of the Institution. To that tribunal they did appeal, and anything more ridiculous than their appearance—anything more contemptible than the evidence (it is a burlesque of terms to use the word) they adduced in support of their grave charges was never witnessed or listened to. Before a decision could be given, they sent in their resignations. Why? They know, within themselves, there could be but one result. They say, through Mr. Perrott, "because they were not satisfied with the way in which their evidence was received;" in their own names, they say, we left the room thoroughly dissatisfied with their (the Committee's) proceedings." Doubtless they were "dissatisfied," on perceiving that the Committee, with every desire to be impartial, detected at once the animus by which they were actuated, and the weakness of the trumpery testimony by which they sought to bolster up their case.

They ask, "What is to be said of the Secretary who makes a series of charges against the School which it is his duty to serve and guard, charges which he cannot prove, but which, if true, are calculated to drive away every subscriber from the Charity, and who chooses the time just before the Annual Festival for such action?"

The rich vein of insolent pomposity displayed in this question, and it pervades the whole of the letter under consideration, is most amusing—but what are the facts? "The Secretary" not only has not brought "a series of charges," but has not made any charge against the School, which he is solemnly warned "it is his duty to serve and guard." I had for some time noticed a change in the demeanour of the boys. I had noticed many departures for the worse from former habits and conduct. I was painfully aware of the increased destruction of books, &c. and of clothing, and had expressed my opinion on these matters in the proper quarter, as, with all deference to the collective wisdom of "the four," I contend I was perfectly at liberty to do.

Tolerably accurately gauging the real condition of affairs, I was not altogether surprised, though much mortified, at receiving representations from residents in the neighbourhood of the misconduct of our pupils. The words which, with so much pertinacious perversity, I am charged with using, were not my words, but were quoted by me in a letter to the (then) Head Master, as the description given by a gentleman who had called upon me, and I informed him that it would be my duty to submit the representations I had received to the next meeting of the Committee, together with any statement or explanation he might be disposed to favour me with. So much for this accusation.

"The Secretary made similar charges last year." Every one is familiar with the word which expresses the opposite of truth. The Secretary made no such charge. A charge of specific misconduct was made by a member of the Committee; but the witnesses were difficult of access, and it was deemed better not to commence an investigation, unless the proofs of misconduct could be adduced. I was, myself, most anxious for enquiry, but it was decided otherwise.

It is idle to pursue the subject further. The familiarity displayed by "the four" with occurrences which took place long antecedent to their appointment affords prima facie evidence of a concocted plan of operation between the (fortunately) late Head Master and his assistants. This has exhibited itself in a systematic attack upon the Secretary and the Matron. "Throw mud enough, and some will be sure to stick" has been their rule. This is exemplified in a second pamphlet, addressed to the "Yorkshire Vice-Presidents," presumably under the same auspices as the first. In this appear, set out in full, the whole of the allegations against the Matron. If they are thought worthy of serious consideration—disproved as they most of them have been—and more or less satisfactorily accounted for, as others have been—there is no difficulty whatever in giving answers to them seriatim. Should this be demanded and conceded, matters will assume a very different complexion from that under which they have been presented by presumptuous subordinates, coached up by an unscrupulous superior, in a history of events of which they could have no personal knowledge.

On the Report of the Examiner, I shall only observe that there has been a breach of trust somewhere. A copy was sent to me a few days ago by Mr. Finlaison, in compliance with official instructions to the Secretary of the Syndicate. That Report is the property of the Committee, who alone can order its disposition. It has not yet been presented to the Committee. It is issued on the distinct condition—"If this Report is published, it must be given in extenso." Spite of this, I read extracts from it in your columns, and "the four" also quote from it. The customary clever tactics—the usual questionable morals.

On the evidence afforded in the Report as to the educational condition of the School, I shall offer no remarks, because it is a document not yet fairly in court. On discipline and conduct, I shall merely observe generally that the demeanour of boys before an examiner for three days, or before a company assembled on an occasion such as the distribution of prizes, affords no test of general behaviour.

What I have witnessed I believe in. Whatever defects there may be, I do not blame, or in any way censure, those whom I have always regarded as my young friends, and for whom I have laboured cheerfully. Spero meliora.

Before this can appear in your columns, my "reply" to Bro. Tew and the late Head Master will be before the public, who will form their own conclusions on the various points at issue. Unfortunately, fresh matter suggests itself, and I could amplify my statements almost indefinitely, supporting them with irrefragable testimony.

Mr. Perrott's circular, of 25th June, shall have due notice, and his "crucial" questions shall be "crucially" answered. We shall see what is the value of the "veracity," with reference to which he "dare not be silent."

As regards "self-commendation" and "scurrility," I have found our late Head Master so perfect an adept in the one, and so inflated by the other, that I am content to leave him in the full enjoyment of both.

I shall conclude, deeply regretting the painful necessity of thus being compelled to vindicate my conduct, after fourteen years of faithful service, with a protest against the "ill-weaved ambition" which prompted the late Head Master to boast of "having the honour to preside over the Institution," which at once affords an insight into his character, and a clue to the sad chapter of our history in which he has figured so prominently.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

London, 19th July 1875.

REPORT OF LODGE MEETINGS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having just returned from the Continent, I take the first opportunity of thanking Bro. Magnus Ohren for correcting my letter that appeared in No. 26 of THE CHRONICLE. I being dull of hearing led to the mistake, which I regret.

Yours fraternally, M. M. M.

OUR FREEMASONRY.—SIR C. WREN, &c.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It will, I suppose, be useless to refer our redoubtable Bro. Buchan to my "Speculative Freemasonry" (page 110), where he will find a quotation from Aubrey's Natural History of Wiltshire (page 277). "This day, May the 18th, being Monday, 1691, after Recation Sunday, is a great Convention at St. Paul's Church, of the Fraternity of Adopted Masons, when Sir C. Wren is to be adopted a brother, and Sir Henry Gooderic of the Tower, and divers others." This is the sole minute, yet known to be preserved, of Sir C. Wren's initiation; but this, coupled with the undoubted fact that the 1717 Masons always acknowledged him as a brother, seems to be authoritive evidence of his actual initiation.

Whilst writing to Bro. Buchan upon this subject, I may call his attention to another confirmation of the Rosicrucian part of my Masonic work and theory, which was so jauntily handled by your airy critic, first in the review of my work itself, and, secondly, in a notice of this part by a pamphlet issued by the Sovereign Sanctuary of the Antient and Primitive Rite of Masonry, with which I have the honour and pleasure to be connected. At page 113 I gave an extract, furnished to me by Bro. M. Cooke, from a Rosicrucian work printed in 1722, and dedicated to the Grand Lodge, 1st March 1721; a copy of this book now forms a part of the contents of the fine library of that worthy brother, Capt. F. G. Irwin, and is entitled "Long Livers," by Eugenius Philalethes, 1722. Bro. Irwin has kindly collated the extract for me, and states that it is accurate. Having ceased advising and remembering Craftsmen of many things, he commences a new paragraph thus: "And now my brethren, you of the higher class, permit me to add a few words for you are but few, and these few words I shall speak to you in riddles, because to you is given to know those mysteries which are hidden from the unworthy." Bro. Irwin agrees with me that the words higher class refer to degree, and I consider that the alchemical language thereupon used refers to the degree of Royal Arch, which, in 1725, is called the fifth order. After giving a quantity of matter, showing the Rosicrucian bearing of Freemasonry, I quoted, at page 122, in A.D. 1743, a list of six Lodges of H.R.M.—Rosy Cross existing in London at that date "from time immemorial." The English system of the higher degrees have been so frequently repaired and tinkered that it is almost impossible to say what degree, or portion of a degree, is ancient; but, possibly, in their first form, the Royal Arch, Rosy Cross or H.R.D.M. Templar, and Kadosh Templar or Priest, were pre-1717 inventions of the Rosicrucian Freemasons, and from which Ramsay obtained his theory. About the 1721 allusion to some Rosicrucian degree, or degrees, there can now be no question, the only doubt is, as to what degrees allusion is made. The system of Ramsay was started in 1728. I cannot refrain from stating that the only Rite which still preserves the Rosicrucian dogma is that of the Antient and Primitive Rite of Masonry; as a system of Philalethes, it was carried by the French to Egypt, and brought back to Montauban in 1815, by Bro. Samuel Honis, a native of Cairo, and worked there, in connection with Marconis de Negre, Baron Dumas, Marquis de Lacroque, and Hypolite Labrunie; twice united with the Grand Orient of France, namely in 1828 and 1862. I believe the Rosicrucian theory to be the only true theory, and the only true high grade Masonry, and in my hands it will not be eradicated from the teaching of the Antient and Primitive Rite, no matter what amount of sarcasm or invectives may be, unmasonically, brought to bear.

I again, however, reiterate the expression of my belief that the only ancient Masonic grades are the three first. In England there is no allusion of any kind, to either a system of Marks or a degree of such, until recent times, whilst in Scotland my proofs are conclusive, that every apprentice got a mark without any ceremony. As regards the Master's ceremony, the ancient documents go to prove that it had nothing to do with the Royal Arch. The Royal Arch, Rosy Cross or H.R.D.M. Templar, and Templar Priest, seem to be the three steps alluded to in 1744 by D'Assigny, although he may mean the Excellent, Super-excellent, Royal Arch, to resemble most the Rosicrucian allusions, and to be most consistent. The latter degree of Priest or Kadosh claimed in old Lancashire Rituals to date from the "year of revival, or 1688," but in any case they are none of them a portion of genuine Craft Masonry.

The Scotch had not the system of H.R.M. Rosy Cross at all, until the middle of the eighteenth century, and carried it from London to Edinburgh. It is now discovered that there is an allusion in the minutes of the Lodge at Gateshead to the "Highrodiams" in 1746, and under this Grand Lodge might be included all the Rosicrucian system. The present system of Heredom Rosy Cross in Scotland (the French version of the secrets of which the Antient and Primitive Rite gives), consists of two parts, the first is a system of question and answer, recognising only the three degrees of Craft Masonry, but including Arch, and similar symbolisms, whilst the second part is in doggerel rhyme, making the brother a Knight of the Rosy Cross. I, myself, doubt the Order's antiquity in its present form; its boasted descent from Bruce, at least, is pure nonsense.

Truly and fraternally yours,

JOHN YARKER, P.M., P.Z., &c.,

P.S.G.W. of the Grand Lodge of Greece.

P.S.—Bro. F. G. Irwin believes that "Long Livers" (dedicated 1721), is the work of Dr. Mead. Can any one give me particulars of Dr. Mead's career, Masonic or otherwise?

PRACTICE versus PRECEPT.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR AND BROTHER,—Recently I have read, with no little interest, the pointed letters of certain brethren upon the objectionable course followed in some Lodges of initiating candidates hailing from other and, perhaps, somewhat distant towns, without strict inquiries being instituted as to why the said candidates did not choose to avail themselves of the means of Masonic access which their own towns afforded, et cetera. I have not a word to say against the words of caution contained in these letters, but I think, Sir,—if I may judge from what has recently occurred in connection with the Lodge whereof I am a member—there may be good reasons why, in some instances at any rate, persons Masonically inclined seek to enter our ranks through the medium of a Lodge in a town other than their own. At our last meeting but one, a Past Master (who is also a P. Pro. G.S.B.) proposed, for initiation, one of our leading tradesmen, who is also a member of the local municipal body; and the seconder was no less esteemed a brother than the I.P.M. The balloting took place last Thursday evening, and you may imagine the amazement of the proposer and seconder of the candidate on learning that something like eight black-balls were found in the box. The feeling of astonishment was such that, at the after Lodge meeting, certain of the brethren expressed themselves very warmly on the point, and protested against the spirit of vindictiveness being introduced into a matter of this kind. The fact is, Sir, this black-balling did not arise from the fact that the candidate was not a just and upright man, of sound judgment or strict morals, but it was purely a reprisal—a quid pro quo for the black-balling of a candidate some few months ago, who had the sympathies of those who, on this occasion, so liberally black-balled the gentleman who had two of the leading P.M.'s for his sponsors. Not the slightest hint was thrown out at any time that this candidate was in any respect unfit for, or unworthy of Masonic induction, and I can honestly assure you that the event has sent a thrill of surprise and indignation through the whole of the other Lodges in the town. It should be stated that the candidate who was black-balled a few months ago, was objected to by those who went against him, on the score of morality, so that this simply aggravates the recent attempt at making two blacks into a white. I may state, furthermore, that the I.P.M. had two candidates to propose at this last meeting, but, seeing how the tide had set in, he chose to leave the propositions alone rather than suffer further humiliation at the next meeting. So that instead of having our hands full of business, we may now sing, as sang the doleful operatives during the cotton famine, "We've got no work to do."

There has already been one secession from this Lodge on account of the questionable conduct of certain brethren—a secession which ultimated in the consecration of a new Lodge; and if things go on in this unbrotherly and suicidal manner, then these troublesome spirits, to whom I have alluded, who, Cato-like, are giving effect to the legend, Delenda est Carthago, will have only themselves to thank should they find "Ichabod" written across the title of their Lodge.

In the face of such a fact as the foregoing, I do not wonder much that certain parties should seek admission into our brotherhood beyond the confines of their own towns. I do not for a moment assume that all who seek admission through outlandish sources are "fit and proper persons;" my argument is that, in some instances, the candidate is much "more sinned against than sinning," that here and there he is confronted by a base and heathenish opposition, and that there are times when a candidate is warranted in seeking initiation in a locality where he is less known.

I could wish, Sir, that some abler pen than mine would take up this subject, and read our Lodges a practical homily on the subject.

Yours fraternally, EAST LANCASHIRE.

"WHAT FREEMASONRY HAS DONE."

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—You do favour us with some curious extracts sometimes, and, if I am not mistaken, the one at page 43, from the Scotsman, will stand alongside of any as a wonderful specimen of "drawing the long bow" upon Masonic matters.

The castle in the air, which the imaginative scribe calls up before us, would certainly be a grand and beautiful edifice if it had sufficient substantiality about it to stand looking at closely and fairly, but the worst of it is, that the more we look the less we see! I fear the writer is not a real "canny Scot," but some inspired missionary, who has felt constrained to visit our benighted land to remove the veil which so sadly obstructs our vision, I cannot help thinking, however, that instead of really removing this veil he has only made matters worse by painting it.

We are told that "Freemasonry was the conservator of pure and sound religious morals in times of almost universal degeneracy," and that, in the fourteenth century, it "entered its solemn and oft repeated protests against the corruptions and profligacy of the time." Of course it did, the only saints then living were "Freemasons." Wickliffe was a Freemason, so was Huss, Luther too was a Freemason, and even attained the dignity of Grand Master of the German Freemasons, and the best of it is that the reason why they made their mark upon the history of the world so well was because they were Freemasons, and because of the instruction they received within the bosom of their Masonic Lodges.

Some folks tell us that the devil is not quite so black as he is painted, but I fear that that piece of charity would not apply to his Catholic majesty, for he cannot be painted black enough. It is possible, however, to lay it on too thick sometimes, when it falls off with its own weight, displaying beauties before undreamt of. So with the Catholic Church in the fourteenth century, it had its faults, but still it had many valuable points about it too, and although it ultimately degenerated, yet in its time it did much good, and had many good men in its ranks.

As to what really kept up the standard of morals in and after the fourteenth century, perhaps the Scotsman will rub his spectacles and again strive to enlighten us?

I am, Sir,

Yours fraternally,

W. P. BUCHAN.

MASONIC CONVERSATIONS.—It was a source of pleasure to us to be present at a Masonic meeting a few evenings ago, under the intelligent presiding officer. The able manner in which he discharged all the duties of his office, the attention that his manner of discharging those duties commanded from the brethren, the earnest desire of every brother present to hear every word that fell from his lips, the readiness with which his decisions were bowed to, and the satisfaction which they gave the brethren, all went to convince us that our Worshipful Brother was indeed Master of his Lodge. One feature we noticed especially, and it particularly pleased us. The regular business of the Lodge was over; there was no "work," as the conferring of degrees is called, and instead of closing his Lodge, as most Masters do under such circumstances, he said: "Brethren, we can now spend half an hour profitably in a 'Masonic Conversation.' Is there anything on which any brother requires light? or has any brother a suggestion to make that may benifit us all as Masons? Let us have a regular Masonic talk over Masonic matters generally." A Masonic "family talk" followed, that interested all the brethren present—we know it interested us. There was no subtle discussion, no effort at display, no attempt at gaining a personal triumph. The eliciting of truth only seemed to be the object of every one present. How many Masters of Lodges might follow this excellent example, and have their "Masonic Conversations"—their "family talk over Masonic matters generally"—with profit and satisfaction to themselves and their brethren.—Hebrew Leader.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

Cats: their Points and Characteristics, with Curiosities of Cat Life, and a Chapter on Feline Ailments. By W. Gordon Stables, M.D., C.M., R.N. Author of "Medical Life in the Navy," "Wild Adventures in the Far North." The "Newfoundland and Watch Dog," in Webb's Book on Dogs, &c., &c. London: Dean and Son, 35, Dunstan's Buildings, 160A Fleet Street, E.C.

We have seldom come across a work so interesting as this of Dr. Stables on Cats. This animal, without which a house seems hardly to be furnished, is very properly a great domestic pet—in families which have any sort of respect for the animal. It renders valuable service in keeping down those troublesome vermin, the mice and rats, which infest cellars and all underground belongings. If treated well, by which we mean, not only with kindness, but also judiciously, the cat is sure to be one of the most popular inmates in a house. Pussy gets on famously with the youngsters, who tease it of course, as is the custom of wilful youngsters, and get scratched accordingly, but "the worry" of the three and four-year-olds is only momentary. One moment they plague, the next moment they pet, and puss is far readier to be on friendly terms than always spitting and scratching. A good housewife, too, knows the value of a good cat. She need have no fear, if proper care is exercised, that her feline friend will misbehave itself in the drawing-room, or go foraging on the sly in the larder. Cats get credit for more mischief than they ever commit. As Dr. Stables points out, and as the experience of many of our readers will confirm, sins are too often laid at the cat's door, for which the maid or her follower is truly responsible. It is wonderful how much crockery is destroyed by the domestic cat, which, be it remarked, is the reverse of clumsy in its movements. As for the cream, the chops, the fish, the cold lamb, &c., which disappear owing to the hungry passions of puss, the quantity would suffice to keep a whole regiment of cats in the plumpest condition imaginable. Cats are rather apt to fly at birds, but they may soon be taught to leave the feathered tribe alone. This disposition, which is part of their nature, may soon be corrected, and the favourite canary or piping bullfinch left in its cage in perfect security from any onslaught by Tom or Tabitha. But in our enthusiasm for cats, we are forgetting their friend, Dr. Stables, who, we repeat, has done good service by writing the work before us. The book is in two parts or volumes, the first of which is devoted to a description of the domestic cat, under such headings as "Pussy on her Native Hearth," "Pussy's Love of Children," "Pussy as a Mother," "Pussy's Playmates," "Hunting Exploits," the whole closing with a tale, entitled "The Miller's Friend." It is almost needless to remark that the whole of this, and, indeed, of the second part likewise, is freely interspersed with the liveliest anecdotes, all illustrative of some feline characteristic. The following is a case in point. We read, at pp. 97 and 98:—

"A Tom-cat, called Bruce, lived, some years ago, at a farm-house near Dundee. This cat—honest in every other way—could never resist the temptation to steal the cream. All efforts to cure him of this habit were resorted to in vain. But one day, Bruce, much to his own satisfaction, found himself shut up in the milk-house. When all was quiet, Bruce came from his corner and had a look round. What a grand and imposing array of basins of milk and tubs-full of cream! One of the latter stood on a table beneath the window, the edge of the tub being on a level with the sill. It was the largest tub in the room; and blessing his luck, up jumped Bruce and began to lick. It was so delicious, and Bruce closed his eyes to get the full flavour of it. Just then, however, some noise outside startled him,—he knew he was sinning, and was consequently nervous,—and in turning round, he missed his foot, and fell heels over head into the tub. Although half-choked, so soon as he came up, Bruce struck out boldly for the shore, but the sides of the vessel were too slippery even for a cat to hold on to; besides, the weight of the cream clogged his movements. He would fain not have screamed, but death stared him in the face, and the idea of dying in a tub of milk, as he had seen mice die, was awful; so he opened his mouth and gave vent to a smothered yell. That yell, loud resounding through the house, brought "ben" the good-wife, and Bruce's life was saved at the expense of about three pints of cream; but never more did that cat go near the milk-house. He was a reformed cat from that day; a burning and a shining light to all the cats in the country-side."

As to the love of pussy for her offspring, Dr. Stables mentions several interesting cases, of which the most remarkable are recorded at pp. 116-118:—

"Cats have been often known to leap gallantly into the water after a drowning kitten, and bring it safely to land. A case occurred only a few days ago. Some lads stole a cat's only kitten, and after playing with it all day, proposed drowning it. With this intention they went to a mill-dam, and threw it far into the water. But the loving little mother had been waiting and watching not far off, and, stimulated by the drowning cry of her kitten, she bravely swam towards it, and brought it on shore. I know another instance of a cat, that saved the life of a kitten which belonged to another cat. Her own kittens had been drowned a whole week before, but evidently she had not forgotten the loss; and one day, seeing four kittens being drowned in a pool, she plunged in, and seizing the largest brought it to bank, and marched off with it in triumph. She reared it carefully. The children baptized it Moses, very appropriately too; and it is now a fine, large Tom-tabby.

A poor cat some time since nearly lost her life in the Dee, attempting to save the life of her kitten. The river was swollen with recent rains, and the kitten was in the centre of the stream; but, nothing daunted, pussy, like the brave little heroine she was, plunged in, and finally reached it. Here her real danger only began, for the current was very strong, and pussy was whirled rapidly down the river. After struggling for nearly half an hour, she succeeded in landing at a bend in the river nearly a mile below. She had stuck to her poor kitten all the time; but the poor little thing was dead."

All the anecdotes recorded are authenticated as far as possible, the names and addresses of the persons from whom the author obtained them being given, and our readers will fully agree with us that cat nature is not as fully appreciated by human nature as it deserves.

The second volume is devoted more especially to the history, classification and points of cats, as well as to feline ailments and their mode of treatment. Here, too, are related sundry short stories and tales, also vouched for in the manner described under Part I. We wish we had more space at our disposal, so that we might convey to our readers some idea of the excellence of Dr. Stables as the historian and medical adviser of the cat, but it will suffice, perhaps, if we assure them that he may be accepted as readily in these latter capacities as in his capacity of student of the every day life and habits of this domestic protégé. The book is well printed, and though the illustrations leave something to be desired, we know of few books we would more readily place within reach of intelligent boys, or, indeed, generally of those who take an interest in animals.

THE DRAMA.

"Rough and Ready," at the Globe.—"Clancarty," at the Queen's.

After a very successful career in the provinces, Mr. and Mrs. Billington have returned to delight their numerous admirers in London, and have appeared in a piece written specially for them by Mr. Paul Merritt, entitled Rough and Ready. It is really refreshing to see one more genuine specimen of domestic melodrama; to hear once more the enthusiastic applause of vulgar audiences when they are told that honest poverty is noble, and, by implication, that a rich man is generally a scoundrel. Sentiments of this kind are not now frequently heard at any high class theatre: they are chiefly confined to the Dramas of the East London or the Pavilion, but the pleasure is all the greater for being unexpected, when we hear the gallery cheering frantically at the triumph of preternatural virtue over villainy of the blackest dye. Rough and Ready provokes a great deal of applause of this kind, and the Yorkshire gamekeeper who is the hero of the piece, equally good at verbal repartee, or at that physical kind of repartee which we call the noble art of self defence, is a very popular character; and when the end of the piece discloses the fact that he is the elder brother by a secret marriage of a young gentleman who has lost no opportunity since the rising of the curtain of grossly insulting him, it is felt that a most satisfactory climax has been reached. The drama is not without effective situations, but these are brought about by impossible means, and the dialogue appears to be a mixture of rude flippancy with sentimental nonsense. The acting is as a rule far too good for the piece; Mr. Billington plays the gamekeeper hero with real power, but he should remember that men who are strong mentally and physically do not indulge in hysterical snivelling on every possible occasion; beyond this tendency there is no fault to be found with Mr. Billington's acting. Mrs. Billington is always a safe actress, but we have seen her to much greater advantage than in Rough and Ready. Mdlle. Camille Dubois plays a small part, with charming vivacity, and sings, "I know a Maiden fair to see," with great point and expression, though with little vocal power. A rascally attorney, the villain of the drama, is portrayed by Mr. Jackson, with admirable discretion, and the minor parts are well filled. Although the piece may be said to be successful from a pecuniary point of view, we should much prefer to have seen Mr. and Mrs. Billington in some drama more worthy of their abilities.

It is rather rash on the part of Mr. George Rignold to open a short season at the Queen's with "Clancarty." The drama has been so recently played, by Mr. Neville, at the Olympic, that its newness cannot be an attraction, whilst it is tolerably certain that few will care to compare the renderings of certain parts by artistes no one of whom belongs to the first rank of his profession. Mr. Rignold, of course, plays Clancarty, and in a manner which shows that his visit to America has not in any way lessened his somewhat spasmodic vigour; if Mr. Rignold would repress a tendency to address frequent impromptu speeches to the audience, the dignity of his performance would be heightened. Miss Helen Barry is the new Lady Clancarty, and Miss M. Henderson now plays Lady Betty Noel; she labours under the disadvantage of succeeding Miss Fowler, whose style is admirably suited to the part, and whose rendering of it will probably never be surpassed by any successor. The revival is tolerably successful, and ought to profitably occupy Mr. Rignold until September, when he intends to revisit America.

"The 'Spécialité Sherry' sold by Messrs. Foltoe and Sons, of 27 Albemarle Street, W. is vouched for by various eminent chemical and medical authorities as being pure. We will take that as the very best and most satisfactory basis to start from to criticise the wine. From thenceforward we claim to have as good a right to speak, and when we say that the taste of the 'Spécialité Sherry' is very refined—something that meets the modern notion of dry, and yet fulfils the desires of those who ask for the old-fashioned nutty flavour—we think the public may exclaim—'We have found it! This is the very wine!'"—Court Journal.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

MORE than the usual amount of business has marked the past parliamentary week, several Government Bills of great importance having been advanced one or more stages. The usual declaration by Government, however, of the innocents they propose for massacre has not yet been made, and great, accordingly, is the amazement of the quidnuncs. In the House of Lords, on Friday, a debate was raised on the Army by the Earl of Galloway. He proposed that the cadre system laid down by the late Government should be discontinued till the first class reserve had attained a respectable numerical strength. His lordship further suggested certain modifications in our military system, the whole tendency of his resolution being to strengthen our military forces. The Earl Cadogan deprecated the motion, chiefly on the grounds that the new system had not yet had fair play. Among the other speakers were the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Duke of Cambridge, and Lord Cardwell, and ultimately the motion was withdrawn. But while the military doctors are discussing, where is the British Army that is to serve us in time of need? Is it on paper, or a real force? and if real, to what extent? After dealing with sundry other bills and questions the House adjourned. On Monday, the Coolie Traffic and Hyde Park Barracks were the leading questions discussed; as regards the latter, the case of Prince's Gate, &c. v. the Barracks, was handled with telling effect, the attack on the healthy condition and influence, and the morality of the Household Cavalry, was dealt with very warmly, it being pointed out that the houses had come to the barracks, not the barracks to the houses, and that the troops in question were notoriously among the best conducted in the whole Army. The question of site also was settled in favour of the present barracks. On Tuesday, the most important business was in connection with the Friendly Societies Bill, the report on amendments to which was agreed to. On Thursday, the Pharmacy Bill, on the motion of the Duke of Richmond, was read a second time, and the Sale of Food and Drugs Bill a third time, and passed, but with certain amendments proposed by the Government. The question of the Exportation of Refined Sugar from France was brought under the notice of the House by Lord Hampton. After a tolerably full statement from the Earl of Derby, who hoped, before the end of the Session, to be able to supplement the information he was able to furnish now, and, after a few remarks from Earl Granville, the subject dropped, and the House adjourned.

There was a morning sitting on Friday, at which the Labour Bills of the Home Secretary, namely, the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill and the Employers and Workmen Bill came under discussion, the reports being agreed to, but, as regards the former, not without several divisions, in which the opponents of the Government were seriously beaten. The question of the number of judges, in connection with the Supreme Court of Judicature Act (1873) Amendment

(No. 2) Bill, was afterwards discussed. At the evening sitting, the River Shannon Navigation Act was brought up by The O'Conor Don, after which Dr. Lush moved a resolution as to the status of medical officers in the army. The House was counted out at a quarter past twelve. On Monday, the State of Business led to a long discussion, the Premier being "chaffy," but hardly in his happiest vein. The Agricultural Holdings Bill occupied the greater part of the evening, Mr. J. W. Barclay's motion being under discussion, and, in the end, defeated by an overwhelming majority. Ultimately the House went into Committee on the Bill. At the morning sitting on Tuesday, Mr. Cross's Labour Bills came again under notice, and the Government carried their points by very narrow majorities. Afterwards the House passed to the Agricultural Holdings Bill, and sundry clauses passed through Committee. A count out again occurred in the evening. On Wednesday, the second reading of the Poor Removal Bill, moved by Mr. Downing, was rejected by 231 to 65. On Thursday, the House afforded a most unusual scene of excitement. Mr. Disraeli having, in response to Mr. Charley, announced that it was the intention of the Government to withdraw, for this Session, the Merchant Shipping Bill, Mr. Plimsoll used most unheard of Parliamentary language, the result being that he was ordered to withdraw, and Mr. Disraeli moved that the Speaker do reprimand the Member for Derby. At the instance of sundry, however, the debate was adjourned for a week, it being stated that Mr. Plimsoll was ill from excitement. The House then went into Committee on the Agricultural Holdings Bill, which Mr. Disraeli announced would be carried through its remaining stages. The greater part of the evening was thus occupied, several amendments being suggested, and one or two divisions occurring favourable to the government. On the House resuming, a personal explanation by Mr. E. Bates, the member for Plymouth, was offered in relation to certain statements earlier in the evening by Mr. Plimsoll, and then the order for the Discharge of the Shipping Bill was agreed to.

In spite of the unseasonableness of the weather, the worthy townsfolk of Margate turned out in full force on Monday last, on the occasion of the visit of their Royal Highnesses, the Prince and Princess of Wales, to open the Seaside Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb. Among those present were Prince Waldemar of Denmark, a brother of the Princess, the Archbishop of Canterbury, who offered up an appropriate prayer, invoking the Divine blessing on so admirable an institution, and a grand array of municipal authorities, including of course the Mayor and the Recorder. After the ceremonial, a déjeûner was served, at which in responding to the health of the Princess and himself, the Prince expressed the great pleasure it afforded them to be present on the occasion, especially as his family had been always so closely connected with the institution, and had always taken, as he hoped they still would continue to take, the liveliest interest in its welfare. Of course, the town was en fête, every kind of decoration was to be seen along the line of march—some two miles—and fireworks and a general illumination brought a day, admirable in all respects save that of the weather, to a brilliant close. With a view to meeting any accidents by fire that might occur, town councillor Bro. H. Davis sent his fire engine to parade the town during the evening, and the day following Bro. Merryweather, of Bow Street, showed the people its capabilities. The banquet, we may add, was sumptuously provided by Mrs. Rope, while the wines were supplied by Bro. Crawford.

The news from various parts of the country as to the effects of the recent continuous and heavy rains is very serious. In the Fen country and in Oxfordshire, in the Valley of the Thames, of the Nene, of the Trent, in Leicester, Monmouthshire, and elsewhere, a considerable amount of damage has been done to property, while, happily in a few instances only, the lives of sundry persons have been sacrificed, in the effort to assist others or to save property. But the worst yet remains to be told. The loss to the crops will be very considerable; the hay which was lying in the fields has been washed away in tons, the wheat is laid in many places, barley has suffered, and so, too, have oats. In some parts, as in Sussex for example, no amount of fine hot weather will make good the damage that has been done. In some parts, as in Bedfordshire, it is supposed the heaviest part of the floods has yet to come.

But what of Wimbledon, in the midst of all this water? Camping out in bright summer weather, within easy reach of the Metropolis, and leading as happy a life as the Pope is supposed to do, is extremely jolly, no doubt, under ordinary circumstances. Even a twinge or two of rheumatism may be endured in the search after the Common pleasures of the season. But the past fortnight has been very destructive, we imagine, of camp comforts to the between 2,000 and 3,000 volunteers and others, who seem to think a certain amount of soldiering every year does them good. But, wet or fine, the business part of the programme had to be got through, whatever might become of the pleasure. All day long, accordingly, there was firing at the butts, and some marvellous scoring was the result. Again and again was the highest possible score achieved, while the aggregate at different ranges was mostly respectable, and the average throughout the meeting we should think must have been almost higher than in any previous year. It were impossible, of course, to notice all, or even a tenth of those who distinguished themselves. Let it suffice that the Queen's prize was won by a Devonian, Captain G. Pearse, who scored, at 800 yards 30 points, at 900 28 points, and at 1,000 15 points, giving a total of 73 out of a possible 105. Private L. Chalmers, 5th Forfarshire, and Private P. Smellie, Edinburg Rifle Brigade, tieing for second place with 64 points. Of the other competitions we may mention that the Lords were greatly beaten by the Commons, Cambridge defeated Oxford for the Chancellor's Challenge Plate, Ireland for a second time carried off the Elcho Challenge Shield, with an aggregate score of 1,506 (15 shots at 800, 900, and 1,000 each, any rifle), Scotland being second with 1,503, and England last with 1,502. Harrow tied with Derby for the Ashburton Challenge Shield, with 543, but Philpot, Captain of the Marlborough team, took the Spencer Cup for the best score at the 500 yards with 30 points. The Americans were also present, while the Canadians beat the Mother Country for the Kolapore Challenge Cup.

While the Volunteers have been pounding away at the Wimbledon butts, the Regulars have been engaged in their Autumn Manœuvres, and, from all accounts, there seems to have been some very good work, plenty of marching and counter-marching, plenty of gunpowder expended, while the general idea for each of the various struggles appears carried out with more than the usual skill by the rival commanders, Sir Henry de Bathe and Sir John Douglas. There appears, too, to be a general belief that the soldiers, though not so heavily laden as they would be in real warfare, have shown themselves superior in physique to the general belief regarding them. Of course it is matter for satisfaction when we find that any portion of our small army represents something like a fair quid pro quo, considering the amount expended on it.

There has been no little excitement in banking circles at the news that the London and Westminster have burnt their fingers over discounting bills, and that the loss the Company has sustained cannot be set down at less than from £200,000 to £300,000. The persons inculpated are the Messrs. Collie, of London and Manchester, whose failure occurred no long time since. The Alderman, Sir Thomas White, was prepared to release the accused on heavy bail, but as this was not forthcoming at the outset, they were removed in the ordinary prison van to Newgate. This is not the only case which is likely to become public, another charge affecting the fair fame of one who, if not still, was till quite recently, a Member of Parliament, being shortly about to be heard.

The Scottish fête at the Alexandra Palace, last Saturday, was less of a failure, in respect of the weather, than the Hound Show. There were several close competitions in reel and Strathspey dancing, in pibroch playing, in playing marches, and in dancing reels; while, later in the afternoon, when the rain condescended to hold up, the outdoor sports took place, Donald Dinnie carrying all before him in the various feats of strength, such as tossing the caber, putting the stone, throwing the hammer, and also in a 500 yards hurdle race; but in pole-leaping he only secured second place. Monday was the day set apart for the Odd Fellows' fête, and, all things considered, there was a fair attendance, over 12,000 of these eccentric beings finding their way into the building and continuing to amuse themselves passably well. On Wednesday, the first summer evening promenade concert came off, and, musically, must be looked upon as a success. The second of the series will be held this afternoon, and let us hope the clerk of the weather will soon take pity on us and on the directors. Next Saturday will be held a grand international fête, in honour of the visit of foreign municipal authorities to this country. On this occasion the Lord Mayor and the lesser magnates of the City will be in full force, and there will also be a march past of the London Rifle Volunteers.

Christ's Hospital held its annual speech-day on Wednesday, but, owing to indisposition, the Lord Mayor was unable, as usual, to preside, and accordingly Alderman Sir Benjamin Phillips acted as his representative, the Lady Mayoress, however, being present with Alderman and Sheriff Ellis and other notabilities. The Orations were delivered very effectively, and were deservedly applauded. Then the University distinctions gained by past and present Blues since last speech-day were announced, and then followed the agreeable but somewhat tedious business of distributing the prizes. This over, Sir B. Phillips shortly addressed the company, and then, the National Anthem having been sung, the boys set off for their Midsummer holidays.

There seems little doubt that in the recent fighting the Carlists have got the worst of it, but the question is, have they been effectively beaten so that the chance of bringing the war to an end is any nearer? We have so often heard that Don Carlos is hopelessly beaten that we have become hopeless of ever hearing anything else. In France the late compact between the centres appears to have come to grief through the action of M. Gambetta to the great satisfaction of the Imperialists. Elsewhere the news, except so far as it relates to the recent storms and floods, which appear to have been pretty general over the Continent, is of little, if any, interest. We may add that the Pope is well in health, but obstinate, as usual, as regards one point. We need not explain further.

The regular meeting of the Grand Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday, 21st inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. J. Nunn P.G.S.B. in the chair. The Committee meeting was held previously. Grants to the amount of £300 were confirmed. There were 18 fresh cases, and relief was granted to the amount of £237. The G.L. of Benevolence was then closed. The following brethren were present:—Bros. J. Brett P.G.P., E. P. Albert A.G.P., H. Bartlett P.M. 147, W. Smith P.G.S., W. Mann 186, C. A. Cottebrune P.G.P., J. Savage P.G.D., H. Dicketts P.G.S., W. Stephens 1489, J. Boyd P.G.P., S. May P.G.S., W. Howe 1445, H. M. Levy P.M. 188, J. Wright G.P., H.W. Hemsworth P.M. 1193, Handley, R. G. Marsh No. 9, J. Willing 1507, C. Hogard, G. Brown, J. Smith P.G.P., J. Harvey, G.S., H. G. Buss P.M., Pendlebury, J. Spiers P.G.S.B., Hilton P.M., Hose W.M. Excelsior, J. E. Saunders P.G.D., Granbaum 1017, Harvey, and Busher P.G.S.B.

The Baroness Burdett Coutts is about to present a set of the "chairs of office" to the Lodge of Freemasons, No. 1278 under Grand Lodge of England, which is named after her. The presentation will be made by the Baroness, in person, at a meeting of the Lodge, which has been fixed for Thursday next, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, at five o'clock, when the members, by a dispensation from his Royal Highness the Grand Master, will be allowed to wear "clothing." The Baroness, in her letters to the Lodge, having recognised the charitable disposition of the Craft, has expressed her earnest desire to be a co-worker with Freemasonry. The brethren of the Lodge will entertain the Baroness at a repast, and this will be the first occasion in England in which a lady has been present when Lodge "furniture," as such, has been in the room.

The Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction meets at Bro. T. Lloyd's, Approach Tavern, Approach Road, Victoria Park, every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock p.m. The ceremony of installation will be worked on the 30th instant, by Bro. Ashburner, the I.P.M. of the Mother Lodge. Brethren are invited to attend.

The following brethren have been selected for Provincial Grand Honors in the Province of Middlesex, viz., Bro. W. Hammond P.G.S. and P.M. No. 201, I.P.M. 1326, is to be the Provincial S.G.J.D., representing the Lebanon Lodge 1326; Bro. E. Thiellay S.W. 145, S.W. 1423, is to be the P.G.A.G.P.; Bro. Robert Wentworth Little is to be Provincial Grand Senior Warden; and H. A. Dubois P.G.A.D.C., P.M. 1423, and W.M. 1326, is to be the P.G.D.C. for the Province. All the brethren selected have well and deservedly worked in their various Lodges, and the appointments have given great satisfaction.

COUNCIL OE ROYAL AND SELECT MASTERS.

ORDER OF ST. LAWRENCE, &c.

ON Wednesday afternoon, at 4 p.m., a Council of Excellent Masters was opened at the Hall, No. 2 Red Lion Square, W. Bro. F. Binckes presiding. The ceremony was impressively rendered with the assistance of Worshipful Bro. Hyde Pullen. A Council of Royal and Select Masters was afterwards opened, the degrees ably worked, and the degree of Super Excellent Master also communicated by way of lecture. The ceremonies of the Royal and Select are amongst the most beautiful known in Masonry, especially when rendered with Bro. Pullen's kind aid.

A Lodge of the Order of St. Lawrence, a curious degree of Lancashire operative origin, was subsequently opened, and amongst several candidates, Ill. Bro. N. Philips was dubbed a Knight of the Gridiron. A lecture from Bro. C. F. Matier concluded the ceremony.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Through the use of these remedies numbers have felt relief from suffering, and have experienced ease and comfort to a degree which has surpassed their fondest hopes. The rare combination of medicinal properties which these remedies possess is marvellously adapted for the cure and relief of all blood diseases, for where that vital fluid has become in any way contaminated, either by hereditary transmission, or acquired, by climate, excess, or any other cause, these potent purifying remedies, eliminate from it the morbific agency, and restore the constitution to sound and vigorous existence, properties such as these cannot be too highly extolled, and mankind has reason to be thankful that so valuable a discovery is within reach.

SYSTEMATIC CHARITY.

MANY of us, perhaps, are not aware of the large sums disbursed through the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, whose head quarters are at No. 33 Golden Square, in quiet and unostentatious charity. Considerable amounts have been sent in lately by its representatives at the Festivals, and the sum of five hundred francs has been remitted to the Supreme Council of France, as a contribution for sufferers by the inundations.

ENGLISH AND ITALIAN FREEMASONS.

ON Saturday the officers of the Grand Lodge of English Freemasons consecrated and constituted, under the warrant of the Grand Master, a new Lodge, named after the Princess of Wales and the Palace on Muswell-hill. The new Lodge is held in a suite of rooms in the Palace. The first Worshipful Master is Brother J. C. Parkinson, Past Grand Deacon, and at the banquet which followed, the Worshipful Master, in proposing "The Health of the Grand Master," referred to the forthcoming visit of the Prince of Wales to India, and said that his Royal Highness would see symbols of Freemasonry on the monuments which had stood in India from time immemorial, but he would also see, in the institutions of that country, that the spirit of the Craft was entirely absent. In reply to the toast of his health, the Worshipful Master remarked that since the grand demonstration at the Albert Hall, and as one of the earliest acts of grace of the Royal Grand Master, the Grand Lodge of Italy had been recognised officially by the Grand Lodge of England. The Masons of England and the Masons of Italy were now linked together by the strongest paternal ties, professing the same principles, and united for the high purposes of the Craft (cheers). There were nearly 200 Lodges, and about 10,000 Masons working under the Grand Orient of Italy, and the Orient included illustrious patriots and some of the most distinguished men in Italy (cheers). The Freemasonry of Italy was now identical with that of England, and its recognition by the Grand Master of England, was a complete answer to the heated vituperations of Pope, prelate, and pamphleteers.—Standard.

MARRIAGE.

ARMSTRONG—FISHBOURNE.—19th July, at Clondale Church, by the Rev. Robert Armstrong, M.A., brother of the bridegroom, James Armstrong, Esq., Farmhill, Clones, to Anna Catherine, youngest daughter of William Fishbourne, Esq., J.P., Foothill, Carlow.

ESSEX PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

WHEN the Provincial Grand Secretary announced, at the Festival of the Senior Lodge in the Province, that the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master had decided to hold his Lodge for 1875 at Rochford, not a few of those present expressed themselves as ignorant of the geography of the place, and "Where is Rochford?" has since passed somewhat into a proverb among the Freemasons of the Eastern Division of the County. For the sake of those who did not venture upon the journey on Tuesday, it may be stated that Rochford is an ancient town, consisting of four irregular streets, and situate on the banks of the Little Roche, which is navigable up to within about a mile of the town. It is distant 40 miles from London, 12 south of Maldon, 19¼ south-east from Chelmsford, and 4 north from Southend, and stands in a rich corn-growing district. Rochford Hall was the residence of Queen Anne Boleyn, and also of Lord Rich, afterwards Earl of Warwick, but the present structure is only a portion of the old mansion. At between five and six miles distance is another small town, of equal antiquity—Rayleigh—noted for some interesting earthworks, the remains of the Castle first built by Swene, who owned the place at the time of Doomsday Survey, and was founder of the De Essex family. In fact the district altogether is an exceedingly interesting one, and played an important part in the history of early times. Having said thus much as to the antiquity of Rochford and surrounding district, it will be interesting to note that it is 27 years since the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge has been held there, notwithstanding that the occasion of the last meeting has ever since been marked as one of the most memorable upon the records of Grand Lodge. The particular circumstance which distinguished that meeting was that a large sum of money was raised to assist the family of the Provincial Grand Chaplain, who had but lately died, in very reduced circumstances, and that the W.M. and Brethren of the Lodge of True Friendship had received the thanks of an especial Grand Lodge, for the prompt and Masonic manner in which they had acted towards the destitute orphans of a "beloved and highly talented brother." The claims of Rochford to be again honoured with a visit from the Provincial Grand Lodge, have, we believe, from time to time been urged, but a strong impression that its great distance from the chief towns of Essex, and the main line of railway, would militate against its success, has outweighed every other consideration.

The meeting on Tuesday, however, was a sufficient answer to these objections, for not only did the proceedings pass off with eclat, but the attendance was equal to the average of these occasions. The way was long, no doubt, to many who were present—one brother travelled nearly 80 miles by road, and 21 by rail, to reach the place of meeting, and traversed the same ground on the return journey; but the very nice arrangements of the Brethren of the Lodge of True Friendship were an ample compensation. The apparently recently-erected Corn Hall had been fitted up in a most tasteful manner as a temporary Lodge room, and when Grand Lodge had assembled, it had a very effective appearance. The great drawback of the day was the absence, from continued ill-health, of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master (Bro. R. J. Bagshaw), although his position was most ably filled by the new D.P.G.M., Bro. Matthew E. Clark.

Business commenced shortly after two o'clock, when the Grand Officers present were Bro. Matthew E. Clark, acting M.W.P.G.M., Bro. Vero W. Taylor P.M. 1312, S.G.W., Bro. J. J. Wilson P.M. 1437, J.G.W., Bro. Joseph Burton, G. Treasurer, Bro. John Wright Carr, G. Secretary, and Bro. A. Lucking A.G.D.C. The minutes of the last Grand Lodge, held at Chelmsford, having been read and confirmed, the Grand Secretary reported that he had received a large number of letters from Brethren regretting their inability to be present. Among these was a most kind one from Lord Tenterden, a personal friend of the M.W.D.P.G.M., who explained that special parliamentary duties prevented his attendance.

The Grand Secretary then called over the list of Lodges, and it was found that they were represented as follows:—

Angel (Colchester), No. 51, Bros. Henry Samuel P.M., T. J. Balling Secretary, J. Healy I.G., and W. S. Sprent. True Friendship (Rochford), No. 160, Joseph Essere W.M., J. A. Wardell I.P.M., P.P.J.G.D., Edward Judd P.M., and P.P.G.R., George Burgess P.M. Secretary, P.P.J.G.D., Henry Wood P.M., D. S. H. Garrington P.J.G.W., George Goodman, Wm. Thomas Allen P.M., A. Winmill, W. Pissey P.M., Fred. F. Jillings, Rev. H. J. Hatch S.W., J. Allen jun. Tyler, James F. T. Wiseman P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Wm. Frost, Arthur Harrington I.G. 160, G. H. Josling, John Allen jun. P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Wm. Allen jun. S.D., Thomas W. Gower J.D., William V. Willson, J. W. Harris P.P.A.D.C., Robert Grout, William Moore, and Frederick Wiseman P.M. Hope and Unity (Romford), No. 214, James Self P.M., Rev. T. Cochrane S.W., P.G. Chaplain Oxon. Good Fellowship (Chelmsford), No. 276, Frank Whitmore W.M., James Nicholls P.M., P.P.J.G.W., Thomas Smee P.M., Ebenezer Shadd, A. F. Hunt. Hope (Brightlingsea), No. 433, A. W. West Organist. Star in the East (Harwich), unrepresented. Chigwell (Woodford), No. 453, Charles F. Hogard W.M., Richard E. Motion P.J.G.W., D. Read S.W., P.P.G.S. United (Colchester), No. 697, A. E. Clench W.M. Priory (Southend), No. 1000, J. R. Homman I.P.M., H. Rowley P.M., P.P.G.S.D., William Waterhouse, William Chaplin, H. Neville Smyth, E. E. Phillips S.W., P.M. 379. St. Peter (Maldon), No. 1,024, Edward Kemp W.M., G. P. Jay P.M., P.P.G.S.W., Walter C. Bell J.W. Walden (Saffron Walden), No. 1,280, Alfred Jones W.M., Joseph Bell P.M., P.P.J.G.W., St. Mary (Bocking), No. 1,312, Vero W. Taylor W.M., A. Portway Secretary, Wm. Johnson I.G. St. John's (Grays), No. 1,343, Dav. Robertson W.M., Alfred Sturgeon S.D., D. Bartlett. Liberty of Havering (Romford), No. 1,437, E. West W.M. I. Tydeman I.P.M., G. W. Palmore S.D. Bagshaw (Buckhurst Hill), No. 1,457, Joseph Clarkson W.M., Joseph Tanner P.M., P.P.S.G.D., and Thomas Nicholson.

Visitors—Bros. J. C. Johnstone P.M. 20 (G.L. Ireland); H. Blattner 1328, T. Lawler sen., and T. Lawler jun. 1297; and G. T. Carter P.M. 382.

Grand Lodge then proceeded to the election of Treasurer, and on the motion of Bro. W. Pissey P.M., seconded by Bro. Jas. Nicholls P.M., the W. Bro. Joseph Burton was for the thirteenth time unanimously re-elected to that post.

In returning thanks, Bro. Burton alluded, in feeling terms, to the absence of the M.W.P.G.M., and moved that a minute of the regret of Grand Lodge should be made upon the records. He drew attention to the fact that when Bro. Bagshaw was appointed G.M. there were but 7 Lodges in the province, now there were 17, and it was to his unwearied exertions that the present flourishing position of Freemasonry in the province was to be attributed.

Bro. WILSON P.M. 1437, seconed the vote, and it was carried by acclamation.

The D.P.G.M. said he should feel great pleasure in informing the R.W.P.G.M. of their kind vote. Bro. Bagshaw's disappointment at not being able to be present was so keen that he had asked him to explain to the Brethren that it was only medical injunctions which had deterred him from attending. The last Masonic meeting he attended was when he went to represent the Province at the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the result of his exertions on that occasion was that he never left his bed for six weeks. His medical men had cautioned him not to risk entering into public again till he was cured, which they hoped he would be—(Hear, hear.)—and destroy the chances of his being present with them another year.

The following were then nominated and invested as officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Jas. Self P.M. 214, P.S.G.W., Alfred N. Jones W.M. 1280, P.J.G.W., the Rev. H. J. Hatch S.W. 160, P.G. Chaplain, Henry Samuel P.M. 51, P.G. Registrar, John Wright Carr, P.G. Secretary, Thos. Smee P.M. 276, P.S.G.D., J. R. Homman P.M. 1000, P.J.G.D., C. F. Hogard W.M. 453, P.G. Supt. of Works, Peter Matthews P.M. 276, &c. P.G.D.C., A. Lucking 160, P.A.G.D.C., Lieut. W. S. Sprent 51, P.G.S.B., A. W. West O.433, P.G. Organist, Augustus Portway Sec. 1312, P.G. Pursuivant, I. Tydeman I.P.M., P.A.G. Pursuivant, Gowen, Nicholson, Jillings, Johnson, Sturgeon, and Healy, P.G. Stewards, T. S. Sarel P.P.G.T., P.G. Tyler.

Bro. R. E. Motion P.M. proposed a vote of thanks to the R.W.D.P.G.M. for the able manner in which he had presided over the business of the day. Much as they regretted the absence of the W.M., it was a source of great gratification that they had a Deputy-Grand Master who could preside over them in the efficient way Bro. Matthew Clark had done.

Bro. Self S.G.W., seconded the vote, and it was carried with acclamation.

The D.P.G.M. thanked the brethren for their kind vote. He was sorry that, owing to the short time which had elapsed since his appointment—March last—he had been unable to visit all the Lodges. He had, however, visited seven (hear, hear), and he hoped, before the end of the year to see them all. Everywhere he had been he had met with a most kind reception; and he could only say that if in his further progress through the province he met with the same good feeling, he should have ample reason to be satisfied.

Grand Lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and about 4·30 some 50 brethren assembled in an improvised banqueting Hall, in the rear of the Old Ship Inn, and partook of a capitally served banquet. Here, again, the brethren of the Rochford Lodge had taken great pains to ensure the comforts of the guests; and were eminently successful.

Altogether the meeting at Rochford was a most happy one, and Bros. J. A. Wardell and A. Lucking, who specially exerted themselves to promote the success of the gathering, may be congratulated upon the felicitous manner in which the whole proceedings passed off.—Essex Standard.

THE HOLBEIN GATEWAY OF WHITEHALL.—By an Act of Parliament it was directed to be called "The King's Palace at Westminster" for ever. Its limits were defined on the one side by the "street leading from Charing Cross unto the Sanctuary Gate at Westminster," and on the other by "the water of the Thames." At this time it consisted of "a mansion with two gardens and three acres of land." Henry VIII., as we have shown in a preceding chapter, added very considerably to the buildings; and he likewise ordered a tennis-court, a cock-pit, and bowling-greens to be formed, "with other conveniences for various kinds of diversion." Here Holbein painted the portraits of Henry VII. and Henry VIII., with their queens, and also the "Dance of Death." Here too—or rather across the roadway in front, leading from Charing Cross to Westminster—he built his famous gateway. Holbein had been induced to come over to England through the reputation of the taste and generosity of Henry VIII. He was introduced to the king by the instrumentality of Sir Thomas More, at his house at Chelsea, where a large number of the painter's works had been recently ranged round the walls. Taken immediately into the king's service, Holbein had apartments assigned to him in the old palace at Whitehall, for which he designed, at the king's request in 1546, the gateway above alluded to. It stood in front of the palace, opposite the Tilt-yard, and was flanked on either side by a low brick building of a single storey in height. Its position was a little nearer to Westminster Abbey than the north-west corner of York House. The edifice was constructed of small square stones and flint boulders, of two distinct colours, "glazed and disposed in a tessellated manner." On each front there were four busts or medallions, "naturally coloured and gilt," which were stated to have resisted all influences of the weather. They were of terra-cotta, as large as life, or even a little larger, and represented some of the chief characters of the age. —From "Cassell's Old and New London" for July.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Lodge of Relief, No. 42, Bury.—The monthly meeting of this old Lodge was held at the Albion Hotel, on Thursday evening, the 15th inst. Present—Bros. E. Eccles W.M., Alfred Buckley S.W., J. Skerrett J.W., T. Barker J.D., E. Simpkin Secretary, S. Mosley I.G., Thorman Tyler; Past Masters Harry Grundy and J. W. Kenyon. Visitors—Bros. G. A. O'Neil W.M. 191 and J. Grime P.M. 128. Business—Bros. John Redfern and William Hewitson were raised to the sublime degree by Bros. O'Neil and Grime. The Secretary intimated, in respect of the proposed memorial stone for the grave of Bro. J. S. Redfern P. Prov. G.P. E.L., that the various Worshipful Masters in the town had signified their desire to take an active part in promoting the fund; that it had been agreed to send circulars on the matter to the East Lancashire Lodges: and that Bro. L. Booth, architect, be requested to submit a design. The W.M. stated that the subscription fund was progressing satisfactorily. It was resolved to make representations to the Provincial Lodge of the cases of the widow and children of Bro. B——(P.M.), and the widow of Bro. H——, to whom Lodge 42 has already given of its substance. A substantial repast followed the closing down of the Lodge.

Carnarvon Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 62. — This Lodge held its quarterly meeting on Tuesday, 20th July, at the Town Hall, Havant. Present—Bros. Price W.M., J. N. Hillman S.W., J. Harrison J.W., H. R. Tripp Secretary; and Purnell, Clarke and Lemon. Business—Bro. Liddell was advanced to the degree of Mark Master. P.M. Hillman's motion, "That this Lodge exceedingly regrets that the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters should be party to a treaty for expelling its own members who may belong to Masonic degrees not approved of by the other parties to that treaty," was discussed at some length, but, owing to the lateness of the hour, the further consideration of the same was adjourned until the next meeting.

Domatic Lodge, No. 170.—The members of this old established Lodge held their Summer Banquet on Friday, 16th instant, at Bro. Middlecott's, the Greyhound Inn, Dulwich, where, despite the weather, the brethren and their friends mustered in strong force. Bro. Geo. Everett W.M. presided, and was ably supported by the following Stewards: Bros. F. Kent C.C. I.P.M., A. Treadwell S.W., J. Willing jun. J.W., J. Smith P.M. Treasurer, T. Williams Secretary, W. Palmer S.D., I. Bascall J.D., G. Clarke I.G., E. White W.S., H. N. B. Spink D.C., J. McLean, E. W. Kent, A. Beard, D. Plenderleith, J. Jones, C. Sergeant, J. Willis. The banquet was very well served, and on the cloth being removed the W.M. said: It was not his desire nor his intention to inflict on the company, who he was pleased to see had assembled so numerously, any long speeches. He should, therefore, at once proceed to the first toast, which was that of the health of "The Queen." The brethren would all agree with him that her conduct throughout life had been everything they could wish, and that she had done all in her power to endear herself to her subjects. The W.M. then proposed the health of "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." The Princess of Wales was universally respected and beloved by the English people, and as for the Prince he had a double claim on those gathered around this board. All who were present at the Albert Hall, on the 28th of April last, could testify to the manner in which His Royal Highness had performed his duties, in fact, he had, by his conduct on that occasion, created an impression that would not be forgotten, and all would agree with him when he stated the Prince was a large-hearted and generous man. The W.M. then briefly referred to His Royal Highness's proposed visit to India, and hoped that it would be a successful one. He had no hesitation in saying that the Prince was a good Mason, and he was sure that, when the time arrived, he would make a good King." Bro. F. Kent, C.C., I.P.M. rose to propose the next toast, "The Worshipful Master," which was most enthusiastically received, and duly responded to, the W.M. saying that the unfavorable state of the weather had been a matter of serious concern to him, as he had feared it would sadly reduce the number of those who he hoped to see assemble round him, but the fact that his brethren and their lady friends, to the number of 85, had braved the storm and were gathered together was exceedingly gratifying, and he might safely say their meeting was a great success. The several toasts of "The Past Masters," "The Visitors," "The Officers," "The Stewards," and "The Ladies," were then given, the example set by the W.M., as to brevity, being adhered to by those brethren who rose to reply. After this, the rain having somewhat abated, an adjournment took place to the beautiful grounds attached to the Hotel, where the brethren enjoyed the luxury of cigars, meanwhile the energetic Stewards were making arrangements for the ball, which it had been arranged should follow the banquet. This part of the day's proceedings was carried out in a most spirited manner, and it was a late hour before the company separated, all expressing the utmost gratification at the way everything had been conducted, and reiterating their thanks to P.M. Bro. Foulger, who exerted himself most energetically as Master of the Ceremonies. Amongst those present, in addition to those named above, were P.M.'s Time, Stuart (141), Gardner W.M. (1381); Bros. Ambrose, Bennett, Beagle, Baker, Crane, Field, Harris, Higgins, Douglas, Scard, Stranger, Kruse, Walker, Norris, Bird, Ralphs, Richards, Ford, Shenstone, McPherson, Morgan, &c.

St. John's Lodge, No. 191.—This Lodge held its meeting on Wednesday, the 14th July, at the Knowsley Hotel, Bury. Present—Bros. G. A. O'Neil W.M., Samuel Hamer S.W., William Balmer J.W., Samuel Bailey Secretary, T. W. Probert S.D., W. E. Thornley J.D., Alfred Hopkinson I.G., Hartley Bates Tyler. Past Masters—Bros. W. O. Walker, Fred. Anderton, J. Smethurst, J. R. Fletcher. Visitors—Bros. Lawrence Booth P. Prov. G.S.B. E.L., Jas. Barrett 1012, Alfred Wroe 42, Harry Woodcock 1012. Business—Initiation of Mr. James Crossley; Crafting of Bro. J. C. Yule; Raising of Bro. William Barritt by Bro. Smethurst, the tracing board being explained by Bro. Walker. A very pleasant hob-nob followed.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193. — This Lodge held its weekly meeting on the 21st July, at the White Hart Tavern, Aldwych-lane, E.C. Present — Bros. Tarquand W.M., Blinkhorn S.W., Abell J.W., J. K. Pitt Secretary, J. Constable Treasurer, F. Croaker S.D., Blackhall J.D., Crasko I.G., Christopher Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Gottheil Preceptor and Bloomfield, also Bros. Pascoe, Woodward, Campbell, Brodie, Botibol, Walker, Horsley, Gomm, Swan, Saint, &c. Business—The usual formalities having been gone through, the W.M. proceeded to raise Bro. Walker, and accomplished the duty in a manner as gratifying to the members as it must have been to himself; the sections in connection with the degree were worked by Bro. Gottheil, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge, having been resumed, and all business transacted, it was closed and adjourned until the following week.

Tyrawley Lodge, No. 217.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, the 14th of July, at Dillon Terrace, Ballina. Present—Bros. John Gilbert W.M., H. Lyons S.W., James Beatty J.W., J. R. Budgeon Secretary, P. Atkinson Treasurer, H. Dover S.D., Harvey J.D., J. E. Edmonds I.G., R. Massey Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Lyons and Beatty. Visitors—Bros. Harvey 137 Ballinasloe, Wilson 218 Dublin, and Bowles 248 Roscommon. Business—Ballot for affiliation of Bro. Bole was successful. Bro. Scott's notice of motion was postponed for one month. Bro. C. Petrie was raised to the Fellow Craft degree.

Royal Union Lodge, No. 382.—This Lodge held its bi-monthly meeting on Monday, the 19th July, at the Chequers Hall, Uxbridge, Middlesex. Present — Bros. E. C. Woodward W.M., Davis S.W., T. Swallow J.W., Wm. Coombes P.M. and Secretary, J. L. Coulton Treasurer, Webb as S.D., Cook as J.D., Wm. Smith C.E. P.M. D.C., Dayson Steward, Cobley as I.G., Longstaff Tyler. Past Masters — Bros. Lonsdale, Swallow, Weedon, Jagnin, and Stacey Organist. Visitors—Bros. Flattley, Lane, Hayward, Manders, Burrell, and Henricks. Business—Lodge opened, minutes read and confirmed. Ballot for Messrs. Perkins, Day, Cripps, Winkler, Holland and Cook, which was unanimous, the first five were initiated, Mr. Cook being unable to attend until the September meeting. Bro. Rev. J. Holden was unanimously elected a joining member. Bros. Wallis, Partridge, Tait, Fowler, Rowles, and Hill received the 2nd degree. Bros. Allen, Arnold and Perkins received the 3rd degree. The Lodge was resumed to the 1st degree, the whole of the ceremonies of the three degrees were done by the W.M. in a most effective manner, showing that he was worthy to occupy the chair. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren, about 50, adjourned to Bro. Marshall's meadows, adjoining the Railway Hotel, where a marquee was erected, and an excellent banquet was provided by Bro. Marshall. The usual toasts were dispensed with on this occasion. The Visitors expressed themselves highly pleased with the good working, and particularly the brotherly feeling that always exists among the members of this Lodge, which has been the remark of visiting brethren on former occasions, their motto being Royal Unions. The present prosperous state of this Lodge is principally due to the much respected Secretary (Brother Wm. Coombes P.M.), whose services are always readily given to the Lodge, also to Bro. Wm. Smith C.E. P.M. D.C., who assisted in resuscitating this Lodge about 16 years ago, and who is always ready to give his Masonic intelligence for the good of the members. Bros. Moore, Allen, Pearce and Flattley contributed to the harmony of the evening. The brethren separated at 8.45, to catch the 9 p.m. train for Paddington.

Frederick of Unity Lodge No. 452.—The thir regular meeting was held on the 20th of July, at the Station Hotel, Sutton. Present—Bro. William Stanley Masterman W.M., J. W. Sagg S.W., George Wright J.W., A. T. Jeffery S.D., Chas. H. Edmands J.D., E. H. Sagg Steward, Charles Pawley I.G., C. T. Speight Tyler, Magnus Ohren P.M. Secretary, Jas. Robins P.M. Treasurer. Past Master Bro. Wm. Sagg. Visitor—Bro. T. H. Bolton "Hornsey Lodge" 880. Business transacted—Mr. Frederick Cassell, of Rotherhithe, Surrey, was initiated. Stewards were appointed for the Charities for 1876 as follow:—Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, Bro. Henry E. Francis, G. Deacon for Province of Surrey; Institution for Boys, Bro. George Wright; Institution for Girls, Bro. Frederick G. Gilbert.

Benevolence Lodge, No. 666.—This Lodge held its annual meeting on Wednesday, the 14th of July, at Private Rooms, Prince Town, Dartmoor, Devon. Present—Bros. N. Hammett W.M., Wm. J. Rowe S.W. W.M. elect, Hamilton McAllen J.W., J. H. Westlake P.M. P.P.G.P. Secretary, Geo. Alexander P.M. P.P.G.O. Treasurer, Wm. Holdstock S.D., Wm. G. Moore J.D., J. Stapleton D.C., Thos. Nicholls J.W. 282, T. L. Wright S.D. 282. Business—To install the W.M. and invest the officers for the ensuing year. The installing ceremony was performed by Bro. J. H. Westlake P.M. P.P.G.P. The W.M. invested the following as his officers:—Bros. N. Hammett I.P.M, Hamilton McAllen S.W., Wm. Holdstock J.W., Geo. Alexander P.M. P.P.G.O. Treasurer, N. Hammett I.P.M. Secretary, W. G. Moore S.D., E. Irish J.D., Thos. Bennett D.C., J. Tooker Steward, R. Hancock I.G., Jessie Stapledon Tyler. Business being over, the brethren adjourned to the Duchy Hotel, where an excellent banquet was provided by Mrs. Rowe. About eighteen sat down to dinner, and spent a very pleasant evening. Many more were expected from different Lodges, but were prevented from attending through the inclemency of the weather.

Bedford Lodge, No. 925.—This Lodge held its 160th meeting on Monday, the 19th July, at the Masonic Hall, New Street, Birmingham. Present—Bros. James Stevens W.M., W. Price S.W., J. W. Matthews J.W., J. P. Pearson Secretary, W. Pringle acting S.D., J. W. Wilkes J.D., J. C. Gray Steward, G. H. Gaydon I.G., J. Coates Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. E. Worrall, W. Pringle, C. Pembroke, and J. G. O'Leary. Visitors—Bros. Gray and Natting. Business—Lodge opened at 6 p.m., two candidates were initiated, one brother passed, and one gentleman was proposed.

Tregullow Lodge, No. 1006.—This Lodge held a meeting on Tuesday, the 20th instant, at St. Day, Cornwall. Present—Bros. Edmund Rogers W.M., Theo. Michell S.W., Fras. Bartle J.W., T. B. Provis Secretary, Geo. Michell P.M. Treasurer, J. H. Mayne S.D., G. J. Gregor J.D., J. H. Gillan Chaplain, Jos. Pryor Steward, Geo. S. Bray I.G., Jas. Kinsman acting Tyler; Past Master Bro. W. B. Bennett. Business—The Lodge having been opened, it was worked up to the 2nd degree, when Bro. Champion was examined as to his proficiency, received a test of merit, and, in due time, was impressively raised to the sublime degree of M.M. by the W.M., assisted by Bro. Michell P.M., who is also an excellent worker; after which the Lodge was resumed to 1st degree, and two candidates were proposed for the next meeting. This Lodge numbers fifty members, and is worth a visit, everything being well carried out.

Devon Lodge, No. 1188.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Tuesday, the 13th July, at the Masonic Hall, Devon Square, Newton Abbot. Present—Bros. W. R. King W.M., J. S. Saunders J.W., Jno. Oliver Sec., Wm. Harris S.D., Francis J. Pratt and C. Stevens Stewards, Richd. Crooke I.G., Jno. Haywood Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Philip D. Michelmore, Henry G. Beachey. Visitors—Bros. Robt. G. Bird W.M. Prudence Lodge, No. 1550, Thos. Taylor P.M. True and Faithful Lodge, No. 318. Business—Lodge opened in first degree, minutes confirmed. Mr. Ryland James Walford, who had been proposed and seconded at last meeting, was balloted for and unanimously elected. He was initiated into the Order by the W.M., the working tools being explained by Bro. P. D. Michelmore P.M., and the charge given by Bro. Robt. G. Bird. The Lodge was then closed in due and ancient form.

Burdett Coutts Lodge No. 1278.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday, the 15th of July, at the "Approach" Tavern, Victoria Park, E. Present—Bros. J. G. Harris W.M., W. J. Crutch S.W., Wm. Toye J.W., G. Ward Verry Secretary, James Terry P.M. and Treasurer, C. K. Crouch S.D., A. Lazarus as J.D., Marx Gross Steward, W. T. Christian as I.G., W. Gilchrist Tyler. Past Masters Bros. J. Ashburner and H. Lloyd. Visitors—Bros. J. White W.M. 228, Bro. Jennings 554, and Bro. John Berry S.W. 554. Business—After the confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting, the ballot was taken for Mr. John Ferry, and, proving unanimous, Mr. Ferry was introduced and initiated into Freemasonry according to ancient rite. The bye-laws having been read, the ballot was taken for W.M. for the ensuing year, and proved unanimous in favour of Bro. Crutch S.W. Bro. Terry was re-elected (a sixth time) Treasurer, and Bro. Gilchrist Tyler. A letter was read from Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, stating that Thursday, 29th instant, had been fixed for the presentation of the chairs by the Baroness Burdett Coutts, when a large muster of the members of the Lodge is expected. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet provided by the host, Bro. T. Lloyd jun., in that brother's usual liberal style.

Lebanon Lodge, No. 1326.—This Lodge held its installation meeting on Saturday, 17th July, at the Sun Hotel, Hampton, province of Middlesex. Present—Bros. Wm. Hammond W.M., E. Gilbert S.W., C. W. Fox J.W., P. Walters P.M. Prov.G. Secretary, S. Wickons P.M. Treasurer, J. Hammond P.M. S.D., R. W. Williams J.D., H. Gloster D.C., H. Catross Steward, J. W. Baldwin I.G., J. Gilbert Pro. G.T. Middlesex Tyler. This Lodge was consecrated in July 1870, but two Masters having held office two years each, there are but two P.M.'s, one, the Treasurer, was present. Visitors—Bros. Dr. Goldsborough P.M. 201, Watts P.M. 201, Carvell P.M. 201, Blockes P.M. and Secretary Boys' School, Terry P.M. and Secretary Benevolent Institution, and a large number of other brethren, there being sixteen present at the Board of Installed Masters. Business—Initiations only constituted the preliminary work, of which there were three. The W.M. then installed Bro. Dubois P.M. 1423, Prov.G.A.D.C. Middlesex. The addresses had been arranged to be given by the three Secretaries of the Charitable Institutions connected with the Order, but Bro. Little being unavoidably absent, his place was supplied by the veteran Secretary of the Lodge. Ten guineas were voted unanimously to the W.M. for his efficient services to the Lodge during the two years he had held the office of Master, to be applied, in accordance with his wishes, in procuring a life governorship of one of the Charities instead of a P.M.'s jewel.

De Grey and Ripon Lodge, No. 1356, Liverpool.—Although only about four years in existence, this Lodge has displayed a vitality and energy which has not been equalled by any in the province of West Lancashire; and its membership is now not only the most numerous in the Liverpool district, but also the most influential, as it embraces some of the best known representatives of the Fraternity. The annual installation meeting took place on Wednesday evening, 14th July, in the Lodge room in North Hill Street, where there was a gathering of nearly 100 brethren, including a good representation of W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and officers from other Lodges. Bro. E. O. C. Rothwell, the retiring W.M., presided at the commencement of the business; and after the transaction of some formal business the chair was taken by Bro. T. Evans P.M., who installed Bro. Joseph Bell as the W.M. of the Lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed in a very impressive and masterly manner, and a special vote of thanks was subsequently passed to Bro. Evans for the manner in which he had done the Installing Master's duties. Bro. J. Bell W.M. installed the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. E. O. C. Rothwell I.P.M., T. Evans P.M. D.C., T. Horne S.W., T. Nixon J.W., J. Ireland Treasurer (re-elected), Jos. Jones Secretary (re-appointed), W. G. Veagle Org., J. W. Williams S.D., E. Costigan J.D., R. Roberts I.G., A. Woolrich S.S., C. Arden J.S., and P.M. Larsen Tyler. A proposition by Bro. Marson P.M., seconded by the W.M., that a R.A. Chapter should be established in connection with the Lodge, was carried by acclamation. The annual pic-nic of the members of the No. 1356 took place on the Thursday, and, as on former occasions, proved one of the most enjoyable Masonic "outs" of the season. Arrangements were made with the Cheshire Lines Committee, and a special train conveyed about 160 ladies and brethren to Kumsford, on Thursday morning. The railway arrangements were admirable, and on arriving at their destination the large party sat down to an excellent banquet provided at the Royal George Hotel. The after-dinner proceedings included several toasts, amongst which that of the W.M. (Bro. J. Bell) was prominent, a general wish being expressed for his success during his year of office. A very massive and handsome P.M.'s jewel was also presented to Bro. Rothwell I.P.M., as a token of the esteem of the brethren. The privilege of visiting Tatton Hall, Lord de Tabley's mansion and grounds, and other places of interest, was afforded to the visitors, and many availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing these splendid grounds. A very pleasant day was spent, and the party returned to Liverpool shortly before eleven o'clock. Bro. Bell's year of office has commenced auspiciously, and there is no doubt that it will be one of the most prosperous the De Grey and Ripon has yet experienced.

Falcon Lodge, No. 1416.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday, the 14th of July, at the Masonic Hall, Thirsk. Present—Bros. John Rhodes acting W.M., John Harker acting S.W., Geo. Anderson J.W., T. J. Wilkinson Secretary, William Hall S.D., R. Atkinson Steward, G. Ayre I.G., J. Lee Tyler; Walton, Greenslide, Wright and Musgrave. Visitors,—Bros. S. Meynell, Anchor 1337, and G. W. Deighton, Cleveland 548. Business—Arrangements were made for the appointment of a Tyler, and two new members were proposed. It was reported that Arthur Richard Bourne had been accepted as a candidate for admission into the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and it was determined to use every effort to secure his election, the case being one of special urgency.

Acacia Lodge, No. 1314.—The installation meeting of this Lodge, which, though young, numbers in its ranks brethren holding high offices in the province, met at the Bell Tavern, Bromley. Bro. Manger, who has occupied the chair during the past year, to the satisfaction of the brethren, opened the Lodge. Bro. Seaman S.W., Williams P.M. Treasurer, E. Costa P.M. Secretary, and Past Masters A. Avery, J. W. Avery, Knott and Wells. The minutes of the former meeting having been confirmed, Bro. A. Avery P.M. and Provincial Grand Officer for Kent took the chair, for the first time in the Acacia Lodge. Bro. Seaman S.W. and W.M. elect having been presented, a board of Installed Masters was formed, and a very deserved compliment was paid the Installing Master for his rendering of the ceremony. The customary salutation having been given, the W.M. appointed his officers:—E. Costa P.M. Treasurer, S. W. Wyer J.W., A. Avery P.M. Secretary, Lovett S.D., Manley J.D., J. Boden I.G., and Bavin Tyler. The newly installed W.M. then initiated Mr. Cowell into the Order. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren, between 70 and 80, adjourned to banquet, in a new saloon recently built by Bro. Sutton, whose catering gave every satisfaction, while Bro. Savill, at his own expense, provided a sumptuous dessert, &c. At the conclusion of the banquet the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. Knight P.M. returned thanks for the toast of the R.W. Viscount Holmesdale P.G.M. Kent, and the rest of the Grand Officers. Bro. Manger I.P.M. proposed the toast of the newly installed W.M. The W.M. thanked the brethren for their kind expressions. He felt it an especial honour to see so many around him. Bro. Smith P.M. 619 responded to the toast of the Visitors. The W.M. proposed the toast of the Past Masters, and paid them a very just and deserved meed of praise for their working, and the admirable manner they had done their duty. He then, in the name of the Lodge, presented Bro. Manger I.P.M. with a very elegant gold Past Master's jewel, with monogram and the arms of the Province, originally designed by Bro. J. W. Avery P.M., for the manner he had conducted the duties of the Lodge during his year of office. (Cheers.) Bro. Manger suitably replied. The toasts of the Wardens, Officers, and Tyler, concluded a very agreeable evening. The visitors numbered nearly 60.

Chiltern Lodge, No. 1470.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Tuesday, the 20th of July, at the Town Hall, Dunstable. Present—Bros. Frederick Howell W.M., Hasselgrove S.W., Randall J.W., Middleton Secretary, Cutler J.D., Rev. C. B. Harris Chaplain, Sinkwell I.G., Day Tyler. Past Master Bro. Cawdell I.P.M., and other brethren. Visitor—Bro. Jeffery 128. Business—Although a young Lodge, the Chiltern has already made itself a name for very careful and correct working. Its first year of existence was one of great prosperity, under the able management of Bro. Cawdell, and his successor vies with him in continuing that success. Visitors have generally remarked on the ability of the officers, and on their careful training in their parts; and it is to the thoroughness of purpose they exhibit as ardent workers that the perfection arrived at in the working of the ceremonies is mainly due. The minutes having been read, and the Lodge opened in the 2nd degree, Bro. Saunders presented himself as a candidate for raising, and was asked the usual questions previous to retirement. The Lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the impressive ceremony of raising was gone through by Bro. Howell the W.M. The Lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to sup together at the Sugar Loaf Hotel, where Bro. Saunders catered for them in his usual successful manner. A Lodge of Instruction has been opened in connection with No. 1470, under Bro. Howell W.M. as Preceptor.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain :—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

recording facts contributed by strangers, the distinguished positions of whom place their statements—founded upon the experience of the Wine—beyond a doubt. It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and inspires specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its valuable dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

STABILITY OF MIND.

WE believe it was the late Lord George Bentinck who once announced, in the House of Commons, that the Prime Minister of England should be a man of stable mind. The announcement raised many a smile, for Lord George was a prominent man on the turf, and the idea not unnaturally suggested itself that he had borrowed his figure of speech from something intimately associated with his favourite pursuit. However this may be, there is undoubted truth in the statement that men in responsible situations, whether English premiers or in a more limited sphere of action, must possess firmness in a degree more or less conspicuous. Centuries before the nobleman we have referred to uttered his unintentional witticism, a familiar Roman Poet had sung, in one of his most famous odes:

Justum ac tenacem propositi virum,
Non civium ardor prava jubentium,
Non vultus instantis tyranni,
Mente quatit solidâ.

Stability of mind was a quality that was highly valued by the Romans, and even the Consul Terentius Varro, whom Hannibal defeated at Cannæ, was publicly thanked, because he had fought on to the last, gallantly, if unsuccessfully, and had not despaired of the Republic. It is scarcely less esteemed among Englishmen. It must be a national quality, indeed, or how else shall we explain the proverbial obstinacy, the bull dog tenacity of purpose so universally exhibited by our people. We never know when we are beaten; that is, theoretically, perhaps, we are beaten, but as a matter of fact we go on fighting, and issue victorious from the contest. But while we have exhibited this trait in nearly all our national undertakings, whether peaceful or warlike, it is by no means certain that we are equally careful to preserve our good fame in matters of less importance. In smaller circles firmness of mind, we fear, is not as highly valued as it should be. Men with a will of their own are not always selected to fill positions of responsibility. Other considerations are too often taken into account, and not unfrequently with consequences most pernicious. For instance, a new scheme, requiring the most dexterous management, is oftentimes conducted by one who is incapable either of coming to any settled conviction, or of abiding by it when formed. Every momentary consideration exercises a certain influence upon his mind. In fact, to use a familiar expression, he blows hot and cold almost in the same breath, and the result, we repeat, is, in nine cases out of ten, most pernicious, if not absolutely fatal to the enterprise. Take again, our Masonic Lodges. Their government does not often present difficulties of a very serious character, such as the display of a little firmness on the part of the W.M. will not readily overcome. Yet the conduct of our Lodges is not always satisfactory. Confusion, jealousy, narrow-minded cliquism occasionally manifest themselves, to the very serious disturbance of harmony. Were the Master only to show a little tact, and had he the courage not only to form an opinion but to abide by it, all would go well. This does not always happen. Such a W.M. is easily moved by the influence that is immediately present. He is swayed hither and thither, as a shuttlecock is tossed to and fro by the players, and the consequences to his Lodge are the reverse of edifying. In Masonry a distinct policy is laid down for all. There can be no two opinions as to the nature of the obligations we take upon ourselves when we join the Order. Yet while the outward forms may be strictly observed, for the want of a little firmness on the part of those in office, the inner life of the Lodge, the inter-relations of its members towards each other, may entail a good deal of ill-feeling. Such a state of things is seldom, if ever, apparent when the W.M. has a will of his own—by which we do not mean that he is an obstinate man, who turns a deaf ear to every suggestion that is offered, and who never consults his Lodge. The man we mean was aptly described by Horace, as being one who

Nec sonnit aut ponit secures
Arbitrio popularis auræ.

He should have a policy, and act up to it, modifying it, perhaps, to suit the ever varying circumstances of his position and that of the brethren he is associated with, yet never losing sight of the main principle of such policy. It is no good having weathercocks or trimmers to rule our Lodges, we want men of stable minds, and possessing sound common sense; we want men in eminent positions, who can guide us through a difficulty, if one arises; not men who, in such cases, must appeal to others for advice and assistance. Many a Lodge has come to grief for want of a little tact and firmness in its rulers. Masons, as a body, possess many eminent qualities, but they do not leave outside the portals of the Lodge the innumerable weaknesses which are incident to human nature. A ruler of Masons must possess the same qualities as any other ruler, and among those qualities none should be more conspicuous, or is more essential, than Stability of Mind.

THE MASONIC FEMALE ORPHAN SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

WE have just received a copy of the report of this Institution for the year 1874. Taking it as a whole, the account it renders must be looked upon as satisfactory. The revenue for the year, as compared with that of 1873, shows the considerable decrease of £349 2s 6d, which, we are told, however, is due to the presence, in the latter year, of certain exceptional items. The expenditure is slightly greater, but that calls for no special comment, and the capital has been increased by the investment of £100 in Masonic Hall Company shares. There is an increase in the annual subscriptions of £40, but as there had been a decrease in 1873 under this head, to the extent of £183 10s, this source of revenue is still below what it was in former years, and the loss arises "not from any want of new names in the subscription lists," but "from a loss of subscribers previously known as supporters of the School." As yet the Governors, who fully recognise the importance of increasing the accommodation of the School, have been unsuccessful in obtaining an eligible site for the new premises they are about to erect, but they think it probable that "the arrangements for this purpose will be completed before the next report." Under any circumstances, however, all the available capital of the School will be required for the erection of a suitable building, and, consequently, the annual income will be seriously diminished. Hence the necessity for increased activity among the Craft in Ireland, in supporting this admirable Institution. Of the other subjects touched upon we may note briefly that, taking all things into account, the health of the pupils was satisfactory. The results of the recent examination are highly gratifying, and show the improvement which has been made. Lastly, a tribute of respect is paid to the memory of the late Duke of Leinster, whose munificent support of the School was far greater than is generally known, and a hope is expressed that, under the auspices of the Duke of Abercorn, the new Grand Master, its career will be as useful as in the past. An analysis of the financial portion of the report seems not undesirable.

The receipts amount to £3,162 4s 5d. This sum includes a balance from the previous year of £747 4s 8d; dividends and interest £358 11s 7d; annual subscriptions £931 19s 0d; life donations, both individual and official, £505, together with donations from Lodges, &c. and sundry, £123 11s 6d; net receipts at annual meeting £305 6s 2d, collections at Governors' breakfasts £21; contributions from Grand Lodge, including annual grant of £125, £169 11s 6d. The amount of the expenditure £1,903 18s 6d, is distributed thus: provisions £610 15s 5d; clothing and repairs £306 11s 10d; coals, gas, and chandlery £90 17s 0d, furniture, house repairs, and painting £102 1s 11d; medicine, &c. £34 13s 10d; postage and advertising £5 9s 8d; books, printing, stationery and music £110 1s 6d; rent, insurance, and taxes £35 16s 3d; apprentice fees and expenses £41 16s 4d; outfits for pupils leaving, £19 11s 10d; carriage, railway and incidentals £42 9s 3d; salaries and wages £503 13s 8d, including an annuity to former matron of £52, and collector's commission £46 12s 0d; and purchase of twenty Masonic Hall Shares £100. This leaves a balance in bank of £1,158 5s 11d. Why so considerable a balance, somewhat over one-third of the total receipts, is retained at bank is not explained, nor are we told if, at the close of the account, there were any outstanding liabilities. These are two points of no little importance. As regards the former, a few hundreds, say £500 or £600, would seem to be all that is required to meet the current expenses, while, as to the latter, it were as well if a statement of the School's assets and liabilities were furnished. It makes the account more complete, and enables the reader to judge at a glance whether the position of the asylum is or is not satisfactory from a pecuniary point of view. The stock account shows invested property to the extent of £3,682 2s 1d. Of this amount £2,737 2s 1d are in Government stock, £4,650 in railway securities, while £1,295 are in the Masonic Hall Company, being £5 shares, bearing five per cent. interest.

There can be no question that the foregoing statement, respecting which we have found it necessary to offer only one suggestion, is satisfactory. A previous falling off in the receipts is partially recovered. The invested property of the School has been slightly increased, and there is a good round sum in hand. There are forty girls on the establishment, and four vacancies have been declared for the next election. As evidence of the care bestowed on the education, it was stated, at the annual meeting and distribution of prizes, held in the Exhibition Palace, on 20th April 1875, under the presidency of the M.W.G.M. the Duke of Abercorn, that some of the pupils competed at the Royal Dublin Society's Art Examination, of whom one obtained a certificate from the Council of Education, South Kensington, while two others received certificates from the Royal Dublin Society.

It only remains for us to offer our hearty congratulations to the governing body on the success of their efforts, not only to maintain, but to extend the efficiency of the School over which they preside, and we trust their hopes of increased support from our brethren in Ireland will be amply realised. The establishment of such institutions as this and its companion school for boys, of whom there are 23 maintained by the Order at the Rev. Bro. S. S. Skeens, Adelaide Hall, Merrion Square, is one of the justest sources of pride with Freemasons. But in Ireland, as in England, their claims to support must be pressed, both in season and out of season, on the notice of all the Craft throughout the country. We imagine that, with an energetic body of stewards, as capable as they are sure to be enthusiastic, the generous instincts of Irish Masons will not be appealed to in vain on behalf of this charity. In such case we may anticipate the hope of the governors, that the School may be doubled, will be realised at no distant period. But even as the case stands now, our Irish brethren have every reason to be proud of what they have done.

THE EGYPTIAN PRIESTS.

(From the French of J. L. Laurens.)

Of all the institutions which have appeared in the world, and the memory of which excites our curiosity, there is not one of which so many marvels are recorded as that known in olden time by the name of the Egyptian Priests. These were, properly speaking, not ministers of religion. The word rendered "priests" has been improperly translated, and, in the language of antiquity, has a meaning widely different from that which we apply to it among ourselves, but above all having due regard to the initiation of the Priests of ancient Egypt, the word "priest" is synonymous with "philosopher." Thus to define properly the Egyptian Priests, we must look upon them as the Egyptian Philosophers, and then we shall form a just idea of the initiation of the Priests of ancient Egypt.

The origin of initiations, of manifestations, and of mysteries is lost in the obscurity of time. The Egyptian Priests were not, it seems, the inventors, for the History of the World by Thoth, and his successor, the Phœnician Sanconiathon, speak of them. Eusebius, who has preserved and transmitted to us fragments of this Sanconiathon, speaks of them likewise in relation to the Cabiric Gods. Sanconiathon, far more ancient than Moses, was written after the great Thoth, who, without doubt, is the same as Hermes, the first Mercury of Egypt, about eight hundred years later; and if we take into account that Herodotus only wrote a very long time after Sanconiathon, we shall easily arrive at the conclusion that the Egyptian Priests were not the first who practised the evidences, mysteries, and ceremonies of initiation. What seems probable is, that the Egyptian Priests possessed themselves of the idea of those ancient and venerated mysteries in order to form of them a rational system, from which they have derived all those benefits which have made them celebrated; for we do not find that before their time initiation had led to results so vast and so happy.

Egypt, the cradle of the arts and sciences, was likewise that of philosophy, of that science, inspired into man, which led him from natural effects to a knowledge of the first principle, of that knowledge which came from heaven for the happiness of the world, which mankind would have degraded and corrupted, and which, in spite of falsehood and ignorance, will preserve for ever among men the purity of their origin in order to console virtue and confound imposture.

The Mercuries, those beings allegorical or real, for we only know of them by their names, and the benefits they conferred, established in that happy country the central point of all those sciences, the possession of which ennobles man, by directing him in his weakness towards that state of perfection to which, by every dictate of nature, he aspires. It was from this concentration of light that burst forth in all parts of the world those brilliant, but passing rays, by means of which the sage distinguished the truth through the darkness and dazzling illusions with which falsehood and error unceasingly surround it. Hardly had men felt the importance of truth than they applied themselves to the study of those sciences which lead to a knowledge of it, and though it will be always accompanied by certain tokens, which easily determine its character, deceit will not be slow to assume its name, or to grace ignorance with it, and so impose upon the credulous, by spreading error under the name of truth. It was this strange travesty which caused so many disorders, divided so many societies, disturbed the harmony of mankind, and menaced its moral equilibrium. Truth, in fact, is an absolute need for man. The necessity for cultivating it, and preserving it from the fatal attacks of error, has been recognised from the moment when nations, united in grand sodalities, had need of the aid of morality, and of the repressive influence of laws so as to procure internal order, and thus establish the happiness of society.

The institution of the Egyptian Priests appears to have been merely a confederation of wise men, united for the several purposes of studying the art of governing men, and of centralising the dominion of truth, regulating its growth, and preventing its too dangerous dispersion. In order to attain this end, it was necessary to search, prove, and dispose the hearts of men; above all, it was necessary to oppose an impenetrable veil to curiosity, to menace indiscretion, and to trace around each of those confederated together the circle within which he must confine himself. To this end it was necessary to instruct, and arouse the springs of the imagination, and even to call in the aid of spells and illusions, in order to persuade and dispose, for experience proves beyond question that men must first traverse the circle of error before they can arrive within that of truth.

Digitized by Google

Such was the system of the association of the Priests of ancient Egypt. It was composed, particularly, of certain wise men, known in old times by the profundity of their knowledge, and by them it was directed towards the attainment of that one purpose which its founders had proposed to themselves. Initiation was the rock against which either indiscretion or mediocrity dashed itself. Proofs, combined together with skill and a discernment far from ordinary, kept away all those who were unfit to take part in the general working of the confederation, and often men who had no other recommendation than that of their rank, of fortune, or of qualities wholly superficial, received at their initiation nothing more than the knowledge of vague and indeterminate ideas. This adoption, which was simply honorary, was often nothing more than a link which, by attaching such men to the confederation, held captive all evil purposes, repressed vice, and converted into a useless member one whose enmity might possibly be dangerous. It is to this wise policy, this scrupulous care, that the Egyptian priests owed the progress of their Order, as well as the respect which accompanied it and determined its high destinies.

The Order comprised three classes, in each of which the members had their several duties well defined, and always in accordance with their natural tastes and the means at their disposal. The first class comprised the prophets or judges, the astronomers and the geometricians. The Hycrogramists or Sacred Scribes formed the second class. They determined, by means of their hieroglyphic characters, all ideas moral, religious, and political, and preserved the central store house of historical facts. In the third class were comprised the Comasta, who presided at the sacred banquets, the Zacori, the Neocori, and the Pastifori, who had charge of the temples and the decoration of the altars. The singers, the sealers or stampers, the medicine men, the embalmers and interpreters also belonged to this class.

Each class was presided over and directed by a number of ancients or élites, who were joined together and formed a supreme council. This assembled secretly. Its existence was unknown to the other members, and it issued decisions or oracles, the execution of which was as scrupulously observed as though they had emanated from God. It is to these extraordinary means that we must attribute that unity which impelled the three classes of the Order t move ever in one uniform direction. Above all, it is to the secret and invisible operations of the supreme council of ancients or élites that we must attribute the uniformity of movement and tendency on the parts of this body, the composition of which extended to all parts of the universe. Whenever it had cognizance of some man, whose wisdom, talents, or merits had acquired claims on the respect or esteem of nations, the order of the Egyptian priesthood sought every possible means for initiating him into their ranks. By this wise policy it was that it attracted to itself all men of talent, of virtue; in a word, of every quality that excites the interest of mankind. Thus it was it influenced all these, and moulded their services, so as to be governed by its system, its views and disposition. It is owing, then, to this concentration of all the sciences and of all means, that the order of Egyptian Priests is indebted for the distinguished honour in which it was held, and antiquity, and for all these wonders, the memory of which, though weakened by the prejudices of our customs, still excites our curiosity, and provokes the admiration of savants.

The Egyptian priests were looked upon by all the nations of the East as extraordinary, raised infinitely above all others. They were so in fact, for they held rank next after kings. If wealth, immunities, and the highest privileges were accorded them, it was because, being the sole depositories of the mysteries of religion, and of every science, respect and esteem followed them everywhere. It was because the prince himself, obliged to be initiated before ascending the throne, of which they had constituted themselves the promoters and support, obtained only among them the knowledge requisite to govern his kingdom, remained attached to them for the sake of his own interests, and often delegated to them a part of his authority, in certain cases, when such delegation amounted to an absolute duty. But all these honours and distinctions, far from weakening the ties which bound the prince to his people, served only to strengthen them by that influence, which the priests were called upon to exercise, on the one hand, over the power of the sovereign, and on the other, over the obedience of his people.

It was no easy matter to be initiated into the mysteries of the priesthood proper. It was necessary to possess eminent qualities; in a word, to offer as a guarantee of fidelity, and of the fulfilment of those duties which the Order expected from every candidate, actual abilities, the certainty of which was scrupulously inquired into, and approved by every refinement of skill and policy, before initiation. Thus, among the Egyptians, the character of an initiate into the mysteries of the holy priesthood acquired so great a reputation, that princes, heroes, and philosophers, considered they had only reached the extreme limit of their glory when they had obtained the honour of this rare distinction.

The knowledge of the Egyptian Priests was immense. We know them to have been the fathers of astronomy and geometry. The study of nature was familiar to them in a climate in which everything invited them to curious and learned researches, and in a country where nature hid nothing but what as secrets could be investigated in a manner equally facile and curious. This is why Egypt was, at one time, the resort of all men of eminence. Four colleges, established herein, and governed by the priests or initiates, offered to all strangers the means of acquiring knowledge or satisfying their curiosity. It was in that of Thebes that Pythagoras acquired his science of numbers. Thales and Democritus went to study at that of Memphis, and Orpheus is said to have found there all the material requisite for his mythology. Plato and Eudoxus tarried for some time in that of Heliopolis, and perfected themselves, the one in morality, the other in the science of mathematics. Lastly, Lycurgus and Solon, who found in that of Saïs all the secrets of legislation, afterwards astounded the whole world by their profound political wisdom.

The Egyptian priests must not be confounded with those sacred despots who, making a wicked use of their pretended intimacy with the gods sought, by imposture and cruelty, to lay the foundations of a sacrilegious authority. Priests and philosophers at one and the same time, the wise men of ancient Egypt governed nations, not by violence and oppression, but by means of a gentle persuasion, the secrets of which they had obtained in a profound study of man's nature, and by a policy at once luminous and complete. It was with all these advantages on their side that they combined, for the maintenance of law and the supreme authority, with two other powers, those of the princes and castes. This form of government, so foreign to our customs and habits, cannot be appreciated by people little accustomed to the genius of antiquity. It can only be fathomed by those who, in studying history, pay less regard to the sequence of events than to the moral and political causes which have induced their occurrence.

REPORT TO GRAND CHAPTER OF PRINCE MASONS, IRELAND.

BY HON. JUDGE TOWNSHEND, SOVEREIGN OF THE ORDER, 2ND APRIL 1875.

THE salient features of this Report cannot fail to excite the interest of our readers, and especially of our Brethren in Ireland. Naturally enough the first point to which the President of Grand Chapter refers is the death of his immediate predecessor, the late Duke of Leinster, whose presidency over the Chapter had endured so long, and been attended with results so beneficial. Nor is the memory of one other prominent officer passed over in silence. The late General Dunne, who had long held the office of Grand Standard Bearer, and conjoined with it that of Grand Deacon, is spoken of in fitting terms of eulogy, as having earned the respect of every class in the community by the faithful discharge of his military and civil duties, and especially of the Craft for whom he had ever laboured so cheerfully and so assiduously. Passing thence to the main objects of his address, and having regard to the reports which he had delivered in his previous capacity of Vice-President, Judge Townshend notes with satisfaction that in point of numbers the Order has doubled itself in the course of the last twenty years, the average rate of increase having been ten per annum. In 1854 there were 144 subscribing members, and now there are 290. Of these 197 members belong to the Dublin Chapters, and the remaining 93 to Provincial Chapters, the greatness of the difference being accounted for by the fact that of the thirteen Rose

Croix Chapters in Ireland, no less than eight are in Dublin As regards this increase, however, Judge Townshend utters a note of warning, which may be heeded equally by other sections of Masonry. He remarks, "the increase of this Order may be either a subject of congratulation or very much the contrary. It is true of it, as of the human frame, —the cessation of its growth may be taken to indicate the first beginning of its decay, yet it may grow too fast, or grow too large, to be in a perfectly healthy condition." Mere numbers, in fact, though oftentimes a subject of congratulation, as indicative of strength, are not necessarily so. Judge Townshend considers it but just that the Rose Croix Chapters should not be precluded from extension while the general body of Masonry is increasing in numbers; but he is very properly anxious that this extension should be regulated judiciously, so that the high character of the Order may experience no detriment. As to the number of Chapters there were seven in 1854, and there now thirteen, but no new warrant has been applied for since 1872. Here again, Judge Townshend, quoting a statement of his in a former address to Convocation, cautions Grand Chapter against too great facility in granting new warrants. "I should have you," says he, "grant new warrants with a very cautious hand, having regard to a great many circumstances which would not be taken into account if you were to grant them merely to gratify a few individuals, however estimable in character or anxious for the extension of the Order. We must not either withhold promotion from men who deserve it, nor make promotion too cheap, too easily had, too common to be thought very well worth having. I have stated this much for your consideration, knowing, as I do, that I incur the risk of displeasing many who may hear me, because it is my duty to point out a danger, and it will be yours to avert it, if you can, by good sense, discretion and circumspection." These are words of wisdom, on which it behoves every branch of Masonry to reflect. It is far more important that our brethren should be good representative members, who will spread the fame of our Order, and make it respected in the outer world than that we should aim at securing mere numerical strength. The next point to which the President reverts is the possibility, that as Grand Chapter has now become a numerous body, and is generally well attended, an attempt may be made to entrust a portion of its business to a committee. To this he thinks there is no valid objection, but he expresses a hope that the important trust of passing candidates will never be thus delegated. Once already, he notes, such an experiment had been tried, and proved a signal failure, Grand Chapter having very speedily taken back this most important duty under its own immediate superintendence. For though, as Judge Townshend argues, Grand Chapter may not be infallible, yet there is greater likelihood that, by its strict examination into the character and fitness of all candidates, the purity of the Order will be maintained than if these inquiries were entrusted to a committee, or left to subordinate Chapters. The latter are represented in Grand Chapter, and hitherto the system has worked admirably. Thus it is from no distrust of Subordinate Chapters that the President favours the retention of the present system, but evidently the maxim, "Leave well alone," has a strong influence upon the mind of our distinguished brother, and very properly so say we.

As to the relations presently existing among the several Chapters, these, we are told, are perfectly harmonious, there having been no complaint whatever raised by any single member of any one of them. What interchange of communication with Chapters of the Order in other countries there has been, has been of the friendliest character. Financially, too, the Order is in excellent plight. There now stand to the credit of Grand Chapter over £200 of Government Stock. The year 1875 opened with a cash balance in hand of £98 17s, while of a further sum of £76 15s then due to it, over £25 have been since paid to its account. Of the stock, £100 was invested last year, while as to the cash balance, it is considerably more than double what it was in the year 1872. Grand Treasurer, Bro. Charles T. Walmisley, who has resigned the office of Assistant Secretary General, but still retains his Treasurership, announces also that all claims made upon Grand Chapter have been satisfied, that there are none outstanding, or if they are, they are of very trifling amount, and have not been settled only because they have not been presented for payment. In other words, there is no debt impending over the Order.

Bro. Townshend next points out that a Revised Code of rules for the governance of the Order has been under consideration for some time past, but that it is not yet finally arranged. A few insignificant alterations in the existing code will be introduced, but "those relating to the 15th, 16th, and 17th Degrees of the 'Ancient and Accepted Rite'" will be of greater importance, involving, as they will, fresh arrangements, by means of which "Chapters will be enabled to qualify candidates for future elevation to our own ranks." Any opinion upon the propriety of the new regulations had better perhaps be reserved till the Code is actually promulgated. We shall then be in a position to judge of the nature of these changes as well as of their probable influence over the future of the Order.

With the remarks on Masonic ceremonials, and the necessity there is for studying them thoroughly, we concur most fully. Too many of us are content to observe them outwardly, but are careless about penetrating the beauties they are intended to symbolise. A thorough Mason is one who can read and convey to others, if necessary, the hidden meaning of our symbols. Brother Townshend further notes that the compact of 1836, "by which the several governing bodies of the Masonic Order had agreed to recognise and act upon each other's orders of suspension or expulsion" no longer exists, and a brother suspended or expelled by the Rose Croix Grand Chapter may yet "enjoy all the privileges of fraternity in a Master's Lodge." On the wisdom of this step Bro. Townshend offers no opinion. With regard to that portion of his concluding remarks, in which the President almost apologises for holding that distinguished position, we may at least remark, that if the present address were the only evidence before the world of Bro. Townshend's fitness for so high a position, we should still esteem it a piece of good fortune in the Rose Croix Grand Chapter that it is presided over by so able and so earnest a ruler. Judge Townsend not only has a sense of his important duties, but he fulfils them admirably, and none, we think, who read this address of his will come to any other conclusion.

FATALISM.

A Fragment from the Isle of Mindoro.

A Peri in a Nautilus-shell floats o'er a placid sea,
Gently wafted along by the swell of zephyr minstrelsy;
In her fragile coach, at ease reclined, the broad expanse she views,
Where ripples flow and sunbeams glow in pearl and opal hues.

To the balmy wind that wafts behind two tender sails are spread,
Above the nude and polished hood, which arches o'er her head,
Whilst tiny feelers trail beneath to warn that none intrude,
Ready to shrink to parent sheath before encounter rude.

The sunbeams gleam in a sparkling dream, the ocean lightly heaves,
Or wavelet breaks upon foamy flakes that drifting seaweed leaves;
The boat is borne in Orient morn, 'mid islets in verdure spread,
Where seabird-flocks on the coral rocks and the face of the cliffs are bred.

But when noon is past and the evening blast troubles an angry sky,
When a haze is shed o'er the sunset red, and clouds come drifting by,
Ere the chills of eve come shuddering up, she folds each silken sail,
The Nautilus closing its open cup, contracts its feelers frail,

And sinks down deep to the ocean-bed where no tidal current flows;
There in the dome of her pearly home the Peri enjoys repose,
And anchored safe in nether groves or in white basaltic cave,
The winds howl o'er their booty fled and the upper surges rave.

'Tis thus the Peri's journeys are, so fair and bright and free,
'Mid heav'nly scenes and sounds upon the bosom of the sea:
Never a fear of danger there, nor care for future day,
But lapt in sweet serenity she floats and dreams away.

O Man! Allah Akbár has aye a Providence for thee.
Life, Light and Love on thee bestowed transcend all ills that be.
Enjoy the calm, sleep through the storm, nor dream of aught but bliss!
The sun is bright, thy blood is warm, what would'st thou more than this?

Or if the hurricane should burst and Nature roar in pain,
'Tis Allah's will that on thee soon the sun shall shine again:
The morrow brings its own resource, and Time is ever new,

BURDETT COUTTS' LODGE, No. 1278.

PRESENTATION OF CHAIRS, BY THE BARONESS BURDETT COUTTS.

ON Thursday afternoon the members of the Burdett Coutts Lodge, with a large attendance of ladies, met at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, for the purpose of having presented to the Lodge, by the Baroness Burdett Coutts, three splendid carved oak chairs, to be used by the W.M. and Wardens of the Lodge which bears her ladyship's name. The time fixed for the interesting proceedings was five o'clock, and punctually to that hour the Baroness—who was accompanied by Mrs. Brown, the Countess Beauchamp, Lady Augusta Paulett, Lady Charles Wellesley, Miss Wellesley, Mr. and Mrs. Otway, the Hon. H. Ryder, Mr. J. K. Aston, Professor Tennant, Mr. W. H. Wills, and Mr. G. C. Silk—arrived at the Hall. The room at Freemasons' Hall selected for the presentation of the three chairs was the Zetland Room, wherein hangs the beautiful painting of Sir Christopher Wren, and this room was laid out for the occasion with the greatest care by Mr. C. B. Payne, the Grand Tyler of England. The three gift chairs were in their places, and were splendid specimens of carving. They were formed of the best English oak, surmounted each by a silver plate, with an inscription denoting the giver and the date of presentation, beneath which were the Baroness's arms, and the particular Masonic emblems signifying the place of the chairs in the Lodge.

So soon as the distinguished visitors had taken their places, Bro. Jas. Terry, who was the first W.M. of the Burdett Coutts Lodge, and who presided on the present interesting occasion, briefly announced the business they were assembled upon, and the programme was commenced by the singing of the hymn, "Bear ye one another's burdens." The Baroness then formally presented the chairs to the Lodge, saying she trusted they would be occupied by brethren as distinguished in Freemasonry as those who had gone before them. She noticed, with satisfaction, on the Master's pedestal, the volume of the sacred law which she had presented to the Lodge six years ago. Bro. Jas. Terry, in the name of the Lodge, accepted the gift of the chairs at her hands, and reiterated her wish that they might be filled by brethren who would be an ornament to the Order. Then taking possession of the Worshipful Master's chair himself, he called on the Senior and Junior Wardens, Bros. Crutch and Toye, to be seated in the other two. This done, the Secretary, Bro. G. W. Verry, read the following address of thanks:—

TO THE BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS.

MADAM,—The Worshipful Master, Wardens, and Brethren of the Burdett Coutts Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons desire to express their thanks for the interest which your Ladyship takes in the Lodge, and the patronage which you have extended to it.

We thoroughly appreciate your goodness in having conferred upon us a splendid and costly copy of "The Law of the Lord," which is "light to our feet, and a lantern to our way."

We also gratefully acknowledge your more recent benefaction of three beautiful Chairs, for the official use of the principal officers of the Lodge.

To your Ladyship acts of benevolence are customary and constant, and we trust that you will never have cause for regret for this new direction which you have given them.

It affords this worshipful Lodge the highest satisfaction to find that a lady of your rank and intelligence is able to set aside the prejudices which so many entertain towards a Society the most powerful and benevolent, as well as the most honorable and ancient, in the world.

We desire to express the hope that the example that your Ladyship has set in this respect will be followed by other good and kind ladies, as it has in so many other particulars been happily imitated. As the Bible always remains open in a Freemason's Lodge, we shall be reminded of you by the most sacred associations; and as our officers fill those Chairs, and ensure law and order, we shall naturally remember how much you have done to harmonise all classes of the people with lawfully constituted authority, and in peaceful social fellowship.

We sincerely pray that the Great Architect of the Universe may build up for you great happiness here and hereafter, and that He, who is "Light," may illumine your path, and conduct you to the World where the Sun of His Glory never sets.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge, this 29th day of July 1875.

The Deacons of the Lodge, Bros. Lloyd and Crouch, then handed the address to the Baroness. It was handsomely engrossed, and was enclosed in an album case. The presentation was most graciously received, and her ladyship made the following reply:—

Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren,—In tendering you my sincere and hearty thanks for the address you have just read, I must avail myself of the opportunity offered to express the grateful pleasure I feel, as the daughter of a Mason, that in the Lodge which you wished should bear my name, there will remain embodied the memory of my loyal, true-hearted, single-minded father, so long the representative of the liberties of the City of Westminster. In receiving the Bible for the table of your Lodge, and in the chairs which I now present for the use of the Officers, you have also conferred a favour upon me, though, like skilled Craftsmen in the art of kindliness, you have made the recipient appear the donor, and the courtesy and hospitality you extend to me and my friends to-day is one more of the many illustrations of that law of kindness which rules your beneficent and ancient Society. I earnestly reciprocate your wishes for myself, and that we may all rest in Him who is "Shadow as well as Light," for the Lord God is a Sun and Shield: The Lord will give grace and glory, and no good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly.

It was then moved, seconded, and unanimously carried, that the reply should be recorded on the minutes of the Lodge, and after the hymn, "O Lord how joyful 'tis to see," the ceremony of presentation was concluded, and the whole party adjourned to an elegant déjeûner, at which the Baroness's health was proposed in glowing terms by Bro. Terry, and drunk with great heartiness. Shortly after, the Baroness and her friends left, under the conduct of the Chairman and Stewards. On their return, Bro. Terry stated that he had been commissioned to say, on behalf of Lady Burdett Coutts, that she had never spent a more pleasant evening, and that her ladyship had invited the members of the Lodge and their ladies to her garden party at Holly Lodge next Monday, and that he and the worthy Secretary, Bro. G. W. Verry, would be pleased to receive the names of those brethren who might desire to accept this kind and gracious invitation. The remainder of the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner, and the company separated greatly pleased with the day's proceedings.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HERTFORDSHIRE.

THE annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertfordshire was held at the Town Hall, St. Albans, on Wednesday last, under the Banner of the Halsey Lodge, No. 1479.

T. P. Halsey, Esq., M.P., Provincial Grand Master, presided, and there were present the following Provincial Grand Officers, W. Bros. H. C. Finch P.G. Registrar, W. Wilson P.G.J.W., F. H. Wilson Ilse P.G. Sec., A. J. Copeland P.G. Treas., The Rev. Lewis Deedes P.G. Chap., T. S. Carter P.G.S.D., E. Lacey P.G.J.D., W. Cubbush P.G. Supt. Works, J. P. Cocks P.P.G.J.W., S. Austin P.P.G.S.B., J. Terry P.G.D.C., M. Heywood P.G. Org., W. H. Rowe P.P.G. Supt. Works, R. A. Wright P.P.G.S.D., and many other brethren.

The Minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge were read and confirmed.

The Report of the Committee as to the Bye Laws was read, and the Bye Laws were carefully considered and adopted.

The following brethren were appointed Prov. Grand Officers for the year ensuing:—

Bros. J. Sedgwick P.M. 404 D.P.G.M. (reappointed).
J. Lowthin P.M. 1385 and 1479 P.G.S.W.

H. C. Finch P.M. 404 P.G. Reg. (reappointed).
F. H. Wilson Ilse P.M. 404 P.G. Sec. (reappointed).
The Revs. Barchell Heron P.M. 404 and C. C. Mayo 869 } P.G. Chaplains.
E. Palin W.M. 404 P.G.S.D.
J. W. J. Gifford W.M. 409 P.G.J.D.
Hayward Edwards W.M. 1385 P.G. Supt. Works.
J. Terry P.M. P.G.D.C. (reappointed).
Young 1327 P.G.A.D.C.
J. G. Yolland 1385 P.G.S.B.
Laxton W.M. 504 P.G. Pur.

A. Godson S.W. 1479, L. N. Edwards J.W. 1479, Blenkinsop S.W. 404, Foster 504, Sheldon 1327 and Gilbert 1327 P.G. Stewards, Thomas 404, T. Wright 403 P.G. Tylers (reappointed).

£20 was voted to the Boys' School, £10 to the Restoration of St. Albans Abbey, £5 each to Bros. Wilson Ilse P.G. Sec. and T. S. Carter W.M. 403 to purchase the Steward's Jewel, in commemoration of the Grand Master's Installation, they having served the Office of Steward for the Province, and £5 5s to purchase a jewel for Bro. W. Wilson P.M. 504 for his services for several years as P.G.D.C.

INAUGURATION OF THE MAURITIUS LODGE OF HARMONY.

THE inauguration of this new Lodge, No. 1535, under the constitution of the Grand Lodge of England, took place in the Temple of the Loge La Triple Espérance, when the installation of Bro. Col. O'Brien and subsequent investiture of Officers was held. In the unavoidable absence of the Sen. P.M. in the Colony, the W. Bro. Geo. Levison I.P.M. Lodge of Friendship and the W. Bro. J. Melville Mason presented the W.M. to the Lodge, who received the honour of installation at the hands of Bro. Bewsher W.M. of the British Lodge.

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN A FREEMASON?

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read Bro. Yarker's remarks, at page 53, containing the quotation from Aubrey's Natural History of Wiltshire, to the effect that, on the 18th May 1691, Sir C. Wren "is to be adopted;" but it so happens that "is to be" and was are not quite the same, for, as "there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," it is possible he never was "adopted" at all. Of course we are told, in Preston's Illustrations, that Wren was a great Freemason, and got on to be a Grand Warden, in 1663, and a Deputy Grand Master in 1666, but as these two dates occur a considerable time prior to the morning of 18th May 1691, when even his adoption was still in the womb of futurity, it must be acknowledged that there do exist some little difficulties in the matter! It so happens also that there were no such Masonic "Grands," as above spoken of, before A.D. 1717.

As to the words "higher class," in any published work of date A.D. 1722, referring to "the degree of Royal Arch," that appears to me to be a wonderful stretch of imagination—about as good as Wren's 1663 Grand Wardenship.

As to Bro. Yarker's "pre-1717 inventions," it will be time enough for him to speak of them, as existing about 1717, after he has proved that the three first degrees of Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master existed before 1717. As yet, neither he nor any other person has ever done so.

No Masonic "Grand Lodge" existed before 1717, and no body of Masons whatever existed before 1717 who practised the ceremonies and promulgated the principles of our 1723 Speculative Freemasonry.

Yours fraternally,

WM P. BUCHAN.

OUR FREEMASONRY.—THE MARK DEGREE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the Manchester Courier of the 22nd July there is a history of the Mark Degree, asserting that it is of such antiquity that its origin "is lost in the mists of antiquity." I cannot believe that the writer of the article would willingly state what is false, but I wish to call attention to it, because brethren should be careful what statements they make to intending members. Masonry becomes a most abominable evil when its organisation is made use of to circulate all kinds of crude and untrustworthy statements; and I have of late years frequently seen even untruthful calumnies, detrimental to the standing of persons whom I know to be good and trustworthy Masons; but I do not wish to pursue this phase of Masonry,—the product of its over popularity.

The writer upon Mark Masonry to whom I have alluded says, rightly enough, that—"In A.D. 1598 William Schaw, Master of Works, to King James VI., ordered the Marks of all Masons to be inserted in their work. In the 17th Century the Kilwinning Lodge made members choose their Marks, and charged them 4s each for the same. In 1778 the Banff Operative Lodge resolved: That in all time coming all Members that shall hereafter rise to the degree of Mark Master Mason shall pay one Mark Scot; but not to obtain the degree of Mark Master before they are passed Fellow Craft; and those that shall take the degree of Mark Master Mason shall pay 1s 6d sterling for behoof of the Lodge. None to attain the degree of Mark Master Mason until they are raised Master. In 1865, the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland reported, through a committee: In this country, from time immemorial, and long before the institution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland (in 1736), what is now know as the Mark Master's degree was wrought by the operative Lodges of St. John's Masonry." Then the writer attempts to claim an ancient standing for the degree in England, and asserts that it was practised before 1813.

When the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland passed this Committee report, they must have had an eye upon the sillar; the report is quite untrustworthy and unfounded. Everything can be proved; if I am wrong in my statements let it be proved. But I make the statement, without fear of proof in contradiction, that neither the degree of Mark Mason or that of Mark Master was in being any length of time before the annals of 1726 at least. In Scotland, every Apprentice Mason was a Mark Mason, whilst the Mark Master, or the brother who had power to select and register the Mark, was probably the Secretary of the Entered-Apprentice Lodge. This is so apparent that I am astounded that any Mark Master can so far allow his imagination to run away with his wits as to make these assertions of antiquity; for neither Mark Mason nor Mark Master had any ancient ceremony. The Marks themselves were often handed down from father to son, they were made of all forms suitable for the chisel, Masonic symbols, and even in early times Runic and other alphabetical characters; the system was continued as a necessary part of the trade from ancient times. It may have been, and probably was made a portion of the speculative lodge system of registration in 1598, by the order of Wm. Schaw, for it is noteworthy that there is not a single line of any kind to be found in old English manuscripts or minutes to indicate that this system of Mark registration existed in South Britain in the Speculative Lodges of the Operatives. In the North, therefore, the Mark degrees, as such, became a necessity when the English ceremonies were introduced. There is no doubt that a Mark degree existed in England before 1813, that it was propagated by Finch, and that Grand Lodge at that time pronounced it an imposture. The rituals were very various, some only consisted of passages of Scripture, some had no legend, others only asserted that Marks were used at Solomon's Temple (no doubt of it, they were used everywhere, by every operative in his own pecuniary interests, like seals and written signatures), whilst a third ceremony was given along with a Red Cross degree of the building of the second Temple. The present ceremony is a modern Scottish invention—a fact of which I am quite certain, as I myself introduced it for Bros. Collins and Bidgway into Lancashire and Cheshire, and even since then it has been greatly improved. The latter brother has my time immemorial certificate, which I should be glad if he would return.

Mark Masonry, properly represented, may be made very useful, but it will not be by their present policy, or by an alliance with such Orders as the Trinitarian bodies, Templars, Sovereign Princes, Imperial Knights of Constantine, and such like. "Let every tub stand upon its own bottom."

Truly and fraternally yours,

JOHN YARKER P.M. Mark.

Manchester, 23rd July 1875.

P.S.—I think it desirable to remind your readers that the old English Excellent, Super-Excellent Degrees, were the "Veils," and have not a moiety of resemblance to the recently imported American nonsense, the illegitimate offspring of certain degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. Next week, if you will allow me, I will return to the Old System of High-grade Masonry.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read Bro. Binckes' letter in your last issue, and also your remarks upon the same, and I am constrained to express my unbounded astonishment at the tone Bro. B. assumes, as well as the offensive manner in which he refers both to yourself, Mr. Editor, and the Head Master of the Boys' School.

I can speak very positively, in the name of a large section of the Masonic community,—There are many errors of management at Wood Green, and it behoves the Committee to rectify them as speedily as possible. One thing is certain, no Head Masters will permit Secretaries to assume their functions.

Yours fraternally,

A LIFE GOVERNOR.

P.S.—I have been a school manager for thirty years, and, as such, may trouble you again.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read, with great interest, your two powerful articles on the Boys' School, and also the letter from the retiring masters, and while I cannot but deplore the existence of such a state of things, I do hope the brethren will take up the matter in a Masonic spirit—"of fair play." It is a simple thing to get at what specific charge is brought against Rev. Bro. Perrott. Most Masons go by a great fact; thus, before Bro. Perrott undertook the Head Mastership of the Schools, the boys were a long way behind others at the examination, whereas since Bro. Perrott commenced, they have passed up nearly to the top of the list, and with credit to their master and themselves. This speaks volumes, more than all this letter writing, &c. Many Masons now think, from the tenor of Brother Binckes' letter in your last, that it is simply a question, or rather quarrel, between Bro. Perrott and Bro. Binckes. If this is so, the Committee are to blame, as if each had maintained his own position all the discord would not have risen. Let Bro. Binckes be Secretary and Bro. Perrott Head Master; Masons desire the education of the boys sent to the schools by them, not personal matters, which myself and others think is at the bottom of all this Bro. Perrott offered and challenged an investigation as to his conduct—will Bro. Binckes do the same?

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

ONE INTERESTED IN THE SCHOOLS.

The first Masonic Lodge of Jerusalem is a beautiful illustration of the cosmopolitan nature of the principles of Brotherly love in practical operation. The Master of that Lodge, who is now lecturing in this country, says: "The Master is an American, the Past Master an Englishman, the Senior Warden a German, the Junior Warden a native, the Treasurer a Turk, the Secretary a Frenchman, the Senior Deacon a Persian, and the Junior Deacon a Turk. There are Christians, Mohammedans and Jews in the Lodge."—Pomeroy's Democrat.

"It is not the chief end of Masonry to make Masons, notwithstanding a laudable desire to recognise among our members good and true men wherever they may be, and yet we find the feeling prevails with a great many that when there is no work there is no necessity of attendance of their part. No greater mistake than this could be made, as upon the attendance of the membership, and the interest engendered thereby, depends the very existence of the Chapters."—Grand Chapter of Maryland.

The Grand Orient of Portugal has forty-eight Lodges affiliated with it, some of which are located in Portugal and others in Spain.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

THE QUARTERLIES.

THERE are two or three articles in the Quarterly which we think our readers will peruse with more than the ordinary amount of pleasure. The subject of Ballooning, for instance, is one which invariably exerts a most fascinating influence. A balloon ascent at one of our places of public entertainments is pretty sure to draw more than the average number of attendants. And if so, it is not surprising that a carefully prepared essay on "Balloons and Voyages in the air?" should be likely to prove popular with the readers of the Quarterly. The writer traces Ballooning from the very earliest efforts of the two Montgolfiers and M. Charles, down to the more elaborate experiments of our own Mr. Coxwell and the attempts to utilise balloons during the Franco-German war. Having done this, he then notes the special difficulties against which aëronauts have hitherto in vain contended in guiding the aerial machine. They can rise or fall at will, but they cannot guide it at will, and till this difficulty is solved voyaging in the air will be attended with extreme peril. All the most important experiments in directing balloons are mentioned, particular stress being laid on those of M. Giffard and the more familiar M. Dupuy de Lôme. This article is followed by one on "The 'Theatre Français.'" This too, chiefly, is historical, the writer taking us back to the reign of Louis le Grand, when there existed at Paris several theatrical companies, ultimately, in 1680, amalgamated into one body under the name of "Comédiens du Roi." Thence up to the present period the progress of the French Drama is skilfully traced to all the most eminent writers, such as Corneille, Racine, Beaumarchais, Molière, and actors such as Floridor, Madame Champmeslé, Baron, Lecouvreur, Le Kain, Mdlle. Clairon, Mdlle. Mars, Mdlle. Rachel, and others being introduced, and their influence and style discussed at considerable length and with great judgment. That the English theatrical world will derive both pleasure and instruction from this paper seems unquestionable. The visits to London recently of certain members of the Comédie Française, have created no small amount of enthusiasm for the "French plays," and the French actors who have come over, and performed to densely crowded houses, cannot but feel flattered at the reception they have experienced from their English audiences. Next comes a capital essay on "Falconry in the British Isles." There is still, we believe, attached to the Court an Hereditary Grand Falconer—our respected Bro. the Duke of St. Albans, Prov. G.M. for Lincolnshire, but Falconry, as a sport, has almost, if not entirely, died out. Yet it was held in high esteem among princes and nobles in the olden time, and a few there are who practise it even now in certain localities, with a considerable amount of success. "The Memoirs of Count de Ségur," which tell us more about Napoleon than we have known hitherto, give us also an insight into his character, which, numerous as are our histories of the First Emperor, cannot, from the close intimacy with him of the Count, be otherwise than admirable. This, also, we commend to the notice of our readers, as a paper in every way worthy of their attention. In fact, the whole number is excellent, but the articles we have named possess a more general interest.

In the Edinburgh we have noted specially the paper headed "On the Physiological Influence of Alcohol." The bases of this essay are by such well known authorities as Dr. Richardson, Dr. Thudicum, Dr. August Dupré, and Dr. Anstie. The baneful influence of alcohol, when imbibed in excessive quantities, on the human system is pointed out, and especially on the brain and softer tissues of the body. In the course of this interesting article we noted several important facts, and one or two singular illustrations mentioned by Dr. Anstie of the influence of alcohol for good. One is the case of an old soldier "who had lived for twenty years upon a diet composed of a bottle of unsweetened gin, and 'one small finger-length of toasted bread' per day, and who maintained the structures of his body for this long period upon that very remarkable liquid." The other is that of a young man eighteen years of age, so reduced by an attack of acute rheumatism that he could retain no food of any kind upon his stomach. "He was consequently maintained for several days upon an allowance of twelve ounces of water and twelve ounces of gin per day. His recovery under this treatment was very rapid and complete, and almost without any trace of the emaciation and wasting that ordinarily follows upon such a disease." The "life and works of Thorwaldsen" form the subject of the first article in the number, and this, again, is sure to prove attractive to the general bulk of our readers, who are familiar enough, no doubt, with the name of the great Danish sculptor, even though they may have had no opportunity of studying any of his chef d'œuvres. Another highly valuable contribution is a notice of certain works by "Sir H. S. Maine on Early Institutions," in which the Irish are shown to be clearly allied to the Aryans, and many points of similarity between Irish and Aryan customs are noted. After quoting Sir H. Maine's description of an Irish "Sept" from the Brehon Tracts, the writer remarks, "The primary conception of the 'Sept,' therefore, was that of a group connected by blood, and of a primitive Aryan type; but gradually acquiring the proprietary rights which seem to be the first signs of progress, though they were still overshadowed and controlled by ideas of more ancient modes of ownership once dominant among Aryan races. As in the case, however, of the 'Gens' and the 'House,' other elements besides the related kinsmen had entered, as we have seen, the 'Sept;' and it contained classes, which, though regarded as component parts of the collective 'Family,' were, nevertheless, in various degrees of dependence. Celtic Ireland certainly abounded in slaves; and in the landed arrangements of the 'Sept' we find orders of free and servile clansmen, known in the Brehon Tracts by the curious names of 'Ceile,' 'Saer-stock,' 'Daer-stock,' and 'Faidhir' tenants, and evidently analogous in some respects to the freeman and villeins of the feudal manor. In addition, the power of the chief of the 'Sept' had a constant tendency to extend itself, and to supplant every other kind of authority; we see the chief absolute in his own domain, encroaching on the common lands of the 'Sept,' and increasing the number of 'Faidhir' vassals; and here, again, we perceive an approach to the peculiarities of the feudal system. It is evident, therefore, that the 'Sept' bore marks, in some of its features, to what we can only call the growth and progress of Feudalisation, and these small units of Celtic society at once disclosed what is most archaic in the venerable forms of Aryan life, and the effects of comparatively modern changes." A notice of Mr. Carlyle's "Early Kings of Norway," which originally appeared in Fraser, and the closing article on the relations between "England and Russia in the East," based on certain papers by that eminent geographer, Sir Henry Rawlinson, together with an educational paper, entitled "Education of the children of the State," are also to be commended.

The St. James's Holiday Annual for 1875 includes a number of highly interesting contributions, the majority of which will enable the reader to spend a leisure hour or two very agreeably. Not the least attractive of these is the Editor's paper on "North Polar Exploration." The subject has been handled in many periodicals, but in none more successfully than in this number of the St. James's. Moreover, Mr. Mayer has done his best to give an air of novelty to a theme which has already passed through at least a score of variations, by dwelling more in detail on some of the more recent expeditions, and notably on that of the Polaris. There is, perhaps, but little to say that is new about "The Land of Windmills," or, in other words, about Holland, but Mr. Buckland has made his paper readable. We think he might have paid less attention to the pictures and museums, and more to the many great public works which have been undertaken at sundry times, such, for instance, as the draining of the Haarlem Lake, the North Holland Canal, &c., &c. The former are noticed at length in the guide books, but the latter fare a little worse in this respect, and receive therefore less than their due share of attention from the British travelling public. Yet they are stupendous undertakings, worthy of the people who have set a limit to the encroachments of the sea. Of the other contents, we would call attention to the story by Mr. Thos. Carlisle, "The Convict Cousin," with which the number opens. Out of every day materials, Joe Dyde, George and his Wife, and Major Ledbitter, who are personages familiar enough to all readers of fiction, Mr. Carlisle has woven a capital little story, and in doing so has shown that he possesses more than the average amount of constructive ability. His dialogue, too, is well and smartly written, while the denouement when the Major's "little game" has been played out unsuccessfully, is quite dramatic in its effect. The rest of the papers are, pretty well on a par with those we have referred to, and most of the illustrations are well drawn.

In the Masonic Review (Cincinnati, Ohio) we have noted especially an admirably written extract from the "address of C. H. Kingston," R.E.G.C. of Pennsylvania, to the Grand Commandery, and a paper by Bro. Cornelius Moore, the editor, on "The Charges of a Freemason." In both is visible the earnest spirit of a genuine Mason, and our readers cannot fail to profit by the advice so earnestly given by the writer. One other article well deserves to be read, and that is a sketch of "Mozart as a Freemason."

Among the contributors to the New England Freemason for May last, the name of one, at all events, will be familiar to our readers, that of Bro. Hughan; who supplements a former sketch of the Old Constitutions of England, by M.W. Bro. J. T. Heard, which had appeared in a previous number of this periodical, with some very interesting details about editions which Bro. Heard had passed over in silence. There is also the first of a series of articles on the "Old Halls in London associated with Masonry," Stationers' Hall being the subject of the present account. "Italian Freemasonry" is also passed under review, the materials being derived for the most part from certain of the London dailies.

The fourth number of the Canadian Masonic News is fully equal to its predecessors, as may be judged from one of its articles, which we recently quoted in extenso. There is also an account of the "Organisation of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba A.F. and A.M.," this having been found necessary in consequence of the distance of the Manitoba Lodges from the meetings of Grand Lodge of Canada. Delegates from the Lodge attended at Winnipeg on 12th May, and after a variety of necessary resolutions had been agreed to unanimously, the election of Grand Officers for 1875-6 was proceeded with, M.W. Bro. Rev. Dr. Clarke, Winnipeg, Past Gr. Chaplain, G.L. of Quebec, being elected G.M., R.W. Bro. Hon. W. N. Kennedy, Winnipeg, D.G.M., and R.W. Bros. Jas. Henderson, Winnipeg, and S. L. Bedson, Stone Fort, as G. Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. R. W. Bro. John Kennedy was chosen Grand Treasurer, and R. W. Bro. John H. Bell, Winnipeg, as Grand Secretary.

This month's number of Charing Cross contains the introduction and Chapter I. of a new story by G. Somers Bellamy, entitled "Two Wedding Rings," a prettily told story by Frank, and bearing the title of "How Kate Challenger was Wooed and Won," and some good musical and dramatic criticism. There is too "Proven," a tale in two parts, which deserves to be read.

The London and Brighton contains a very good programme, many of the contributions being very well written, and some highly interesting. Such are "Ulster Folk Lore," "Mesmerism, a Fabulous Legend," by Clarissa Arlo, and a neat set of verses 'A Fragment," by Mrs. Riddell. Nor must we overlook "A Hard Run, and what came of it," which will serve admirably to while away half-an-hour's leisure. Indeed, both this and the preceding magazine, the Charing Cross, contain some excellent light reading, the fiction being on a level with the average of magazine tales.

We have received also, but somewhat late, the July number of Le Monde Maçonnique, which, from the brief glance we have been able to give it, appears to be quite on a par with its usual high standard of merit. We have marked one or two extracts for quotation next week.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

FOR some reason or other the Government appear to be singularly reticent as to the conduct of public business during the rest of the Session. Earl Granville, for instance, on Friday evening, asked the Duke of Richmond as to what Government Bills would be proceeded with, and what, if any, abandoned, but he failed to elicit more than a general statement containing information already known to the House. Earl Delawarr having moved for and obtained certain papers relating to the Agricultural Children Act, and the Earl of Harrowby having asked the Under Secretary for War whether an examination in Chaucer's Canterbury Tales was deemed a a necessary introduction to Her Majesty's Cavalry and Infantry, Lord Strathnairn moved a resolution respecting admission into the Military Service by means of competition, but after a speech from the Under Secretary and a few remarks by other noble Lords, the motion was withdrawn. Lord Blachford's request for papers relating to the revised constitution of Natal was acceded to by the Earl of Carnarvon. The second reading of the Entail Amendment (Scotland) Bill was moved by the Lord Chancellor, and after observations from the Earl of Camperdown, the Duke of Buccleugh and others, was agreed to. Other Bills were then advanced a stage. On Monday, the Earl Beauchamp having brought up a message from the Queen, on the subject of the recent resolution respecting the Irish peerage, and Lord Penzance having put a question to the Colonial Secretary, touching an act for the compulsory purchase by the local government of land in Prince Edward's Island, which had been assented to by the Lieut. Governor of the Colony, the Lord Chancellor moved the second reading of the Statute Law Revision Bill. This was agreed to, and then Lord Stratheden and Campbell moved two resolutions having reference to the Ottoman Porte on the one hand, and a certain identic note presented in October of last year to that power by Austria, the German Empire, and Russia, and a treaty between Austro-Hungary and Roumania. A long and interesting debate, in which the Earl of Rosebery, Lord Hammond, and the Earl of Derby took part, followed, when, as regards the first resolution, it was got rid of by the previous question, while the second was withdrawn. The Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill and the Employers and Workmen Bill were then passed through their second reading. On Monday the Entail Amendment (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee after a brief debate, in which the Earl of Camperdown, Lord Napier and Ettrick, and Viscount Cardwell took part. In reply to a question from Earl Delawarr, respecting the defunct Merchant Shipping Bill of the Government, the Earl of Malmesbury announced that Ministers proposed to introduce a measure which would give the Board of Trade greater power than it now possessed, of stopping unseaworthy ships from putting to sea, and that this would continue in operation for a year, so that there would be ample time for a more elaborate Government measure, dealing fully with the subject, to be passed. On Thursday, the Conspiracy and Protection of Property, and the Employers and Workmen Bill passed through Committee, the Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Bill passed its second reading, and the Report on the Entail Amendment (Scotland) Bill was agreed to, after an amendment by the Earl of Camperdown on Clause 12 had been defeated by 28 to 22.

In the House of Commons, at the morning sitting on Tuesday, sundry questions were first put and answered, and then the House went into Committee on the Agricultural Holdings Bill. An amendment of Mr. Knatchbull-Hugessen, that ten years instead of seven should be the maximum of unexhausted improvements in the second class, was rejected by 196 to 138. In connection with the third class, an amendment to omit the words, "as the taking of a crop" from the section of the clause providing that the taking of a crop shall be considered an exhausted improvement was proposed, but the proposal was defeated by 248 to 29. A motion by Mr. Hunt to insert "seed" and "hay" was carried by 268 to 77. An amendment of Sir G. Campbell on Clause 7 was accepted by the Government, and agreed to by the House. At the evening sitting, the subject of the New Opera House, proposed to be erected on the Thames Embankment, was introduced by Colonel Beresford, but his motion was negatived. A long discussion ensued on the Enclosure of Commons. The subject of Police Cells was brought up by Sir W. Frazer, soon after which the House was counted out. On Monday, Sir C. Adderley gave notice of the introduction of a temporary measure relating to unseaworthy ships, for the better protection of life, Mr. Roebuck having previously moved that Mr. Plimsoll's Bill on the same subject should be fixed for Thursday. Later on, the House resumed the consideration of the Agricultural Holdings Bill at Clause 7, and after a long and searching discussion, reached the 15th Clause, when progress was reported. After this the remaining clauses of the Militia Laws Consolidation and Amendment Bill were gone through. On Tuesday, Mr. Dillwyn questioned the Premier as to the progress of business, after which a motion by Mr. W. H. Smith, to the effect that Government orders should take precedence on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, was carried by an overwhelming majority—178 to 19. The House then resumed Committee on the Agricultural Holdings Bill, and having reached the 43rd Clause, progress was reported, the sitting having, as usual, been suspended at seven o'clock and resumed at nine. On Wednesday, the debate was resumed on the same Bill, during the early part of the sitting, at Clause 43, and when the crucial Clause of the Act, Clause 45, was reached and agreed to by the House, after division —178 for, and 116 against—progress was reported, in order that Sir C. Adderley might ask for leave to introduce a Bill re unseaworthy ships. The object of the measure, which will remain in force for one year, is to give the Board of Trade greater power than it already possesses to stop the departure of ships deemed to be unseaworthy. For this purpose the Board of Trade will have the right to appoint officers at various ports, who may, proprio motu, and without reference to the Board of Trade, stop all ships which appear to be overladen. Leave was given, and the Bill was read a first time, the second reading being fixed for two o'clock on Friday. After this the House rose. On Thursday, at the commencement of the sitting, Mr. Plimsoll apologised frankly for his impetuous language of that day week, upon which Mr. Disraeli moved that the resolution calling upon the Speaker to reprimand the hon. Member for Derby be discharged. This was done accordingly. The House then went into Committee again on the Agricultural Holdings Bill, Mr. Dillwyn first blocking the way, by proposing that progress be reported, in order to enable Mr. Plimsoll to proceed with the second reading of his Merchant Shipping Bill. It transpired, in the course of the somewhat heated debate which followed, that Mr. Plimsoll was anxious that the Government Bill should take precedence of his, and, accordingly, Mr. Dillwyn's motion was withdrawn. The remaining clauses having been discussed seriatim, and the points on which the Government laid the greatest stress having been agreed to, though not without several divisions, the Chairman was ordered to report the Bill as amended, and the House accordingly resumed. The Militia Laws Consolidation and Amendment Bill having been read a third time, and other measures having been dealt with, the House rose at a quarter past one.

It is long since the annual meeting at Wimbledon, of the National Rifle Association, has been so unfortunate in respect of weather. During the whole of the fortnight over which it extended it rained almost without intermission, and those who camped out must have had experiences of mimic campaigning not always of the most agreeable character. However, the weather would seem to have had little, if any, effect upon the shooting, which appears to have been quite up to the average. In some cases, indeed, some splendid scores were made, notably by Lieutenant Birch, Leeds Rifles, who made 50, the highest possible score at 500 yards, ten shots, and so became the winner of the Any Rifle Association Cup, which, according to general expectation, had already been secured by one of the American team, with a score of 49. So sanguine, indeed, were the latter of carrying the cup back with them that they had already wired their success under the Atlantic, and great, of course, must have been their chagrin when they found themselves so unexpectedly birched out of their looked-for honour. To recapitulate even a tithe of the winners of important prizes would occupy far more space than we can devote. Suffice that all the recipients of prizes were heartily cheered by their friends and comrades, and that not a few names which for years have been associated with victory at Wimbledon figured among the fortunate ones. Thus, Lieutenant Fenton 77th Foot, won Lloyd's cup with 67 out of 75 points, distance 1,000 yards, and also the Dudley prize, with 44 out of 50, ten shots, same range. Sir H. Halford carried off the Duke of Cambridge's for military breech loaders, 15 shots, 1,000 yards, score 55. Mr. Edward Ross won the Albert Prize, second stage 1,000 yards, Private Burgess, the Prince of Wales's prize, and the Oxfordshire Yeomanry, Colonel Lloyd Lindsay's Prize. Among the winners, who, in addition to the above, met with the heartiest reception, were the Harrow Boys, who won the Ashburton Shield, Cambridge, who carried off the Chancellors' Shield, the Canadians, who took the Rajah of Kolapore's Cup, Major Fulton, of the Americans, the Irish eight, winners of the Elcho Challenge Shield, Captain Easton, winner of the St. George's Vase and two other prizes, and above all the hero of the year, Captain Pearse, of Devon, who received the Queen's Prize and the Gold Medal and Badge of the N.R.A. When the distribution was over, a long interval elapsed ere the march past began, but this went off extremely well, though shorn of its principal attraction, the regular cavalry and artillery, which generally put in an appearance. The Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, distributed the prizes, and said a few kind words to those who received their well-won laurels at her hands. It only now remains for the Volunteer Artillery meeting to be held at Shoeburyness, and then the leading incidents of the volunteer year 1875 will have passed away.

The Autumn Manœuvres closed with a grand review of the two army corps, which have been engaged for the last fortnight in testing their efficiency. The review was held in the Long Valley, in the presence of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, who was accompanied by a numerous and brilliant staff, including many foreign officers of distinction. The troops mustered close on 20,000 men, with 108 guns, and their behaviour appears to have drawn very warm expressions of praise from the Commander-in-Chief. The regiments were not numerically strong, but they seem to have some good material in them, good "food for powder," in spite of the outcry about weak, ill-conditioned youths. But 20,000 men is not a large army in these days, when even a small State like Belgium has its 100,000 men under arms.

This summer will long be remembered as one of the most disastrous to our harvest. The root crops, we believe, are in fine condition, though there is a talk of the potato disease having appeared. But vast quantities of hay have been lost, and barley and oats have likewise suffered to an almost equal extent. A propos of this, a Mr. W. A. Gibbs has invented a new machine for drying hay, and there would seem to be an excellent opportunity now for him to test its merits. If it answer the expectation of the inventor, this hay-making machine will certainly be serviceable in such a climate as ours. We may hope it will prove to be a success, though we greatly fear it will be of little use in restoring the present damaged hay crops to anything like their original value. While on matters agricultural, we may mention that the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland's Show was opened on Tuesday, at Glasgow. The display of implements was on a very large scale, and included this of Mr. Gibbs; while the entries for cattle, horses, sheep, swine, poultry, and agricultural produce, were satisfactory both as to quality and numbers. Among the shorthorn prize winners, may be mentioned the famous Lord Irwin, the Duke of Nosta, and two of the latter's progeny. The exhibitors included the Queen, the Dukes of Richmond, Athole, and Buccleugh, the last of whom won many prizes, the Earl of Ellesmere, who distinguished himself in swine, and Lord Chesham, who was among the prominent sheep winners. There has been held also, at Norwich, the East of England Horse Show. On Friday next, the International Dog Show opens, at Manchester; on Tuesday, the Dublin Horse and Rose Show. Saturday will be the first day of a Pony Show at Lillie Bridge.

The most important event in the sporting world is the Goodwood meeting, at which their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales have been present as guests of the Duke of Richmond. Fortunately the weather this week has been magnificent, and those who attended the meeting had a grand opportunity for enjoying themselves.

The chief event on Tuesday was the Steward's Cup, for which 22 appeared at the post. Trappist won by two lengths of Coomassie, in rear of whom by three lengths was Berryfield, the favourite, Killiecrankie, being among those who pulled up before reaching the post. On Wednesday, the Goodwood stakes was won by Freeman, ridden by Fordham, Bertram coming in second, a length behind, and Escort only half a length to the bad third. Thirteen started, and the race—two miles and a half—was run in 5 mins. 1 sec. Thursday was the cup day, the winner of the leading event being Lord Ailesbury's Aventurière, Scamp coming in second, and Trent third. In cricket there has been one first class match, Gloucestershire v. Yorkshire, played at Brammall ground, Sheffield, on Monday and the two following days, for the benefit of the veteran, J. Thewlis. The latter county won by seven wickets, chiefly owing to the brilliant batting of Greenwood, who made 52 and not out 24, Lockwood who made 74 and not out 39. Mr. W. G. Grace again made one of his brilliant three figure innings, 111, and at his second attempt he put together 43, but the rest of his team, with the exception of Messrs. Matthews (11 and 23), Monckland (14 and 17) and Bush give him but little support. The scores were Gloucestershire 194 and 107, Yorkshire 211 and 93, with three wickets down. After a hard fight Lancashire has beaten Kent; the former compiling 164 and 118, the latter 145 and 105. Barlow (31 and 45) for Lancashire, and Mr. C. Absolom (63 and 17) and Lord Harris (7 and not out 49) for Kent, were the principal scorers. In the Rugby v. Marlborough match, the latter were all out for 23, while Rugby amassed 156 in its first innings. In the second attempt the Marlborough fared somewhat better, and when stumps were drawn on Wednesday, had put together 83 for the loss of five wickets, G. P. Wilson being not out 32. On Thursday, play was resumed, Marlborough again appearing at the wickets, but they only succeeded in carrying their score to 98, and thus Rugby won in one innings by 35 runs. Next week is the great cricket festival at Canterbury, lasting all the week through. The three matches will be Gloucestershire and Kent v. All England, M.C.C. and Ground v. Kent and gentlemen of Kent v. I Zingari. Of other sporting events we may note the Grand International Polo and Pigeon Shooting Match at Brighton, to-day, and Monday, the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta, at Cowes, which will be held from Tuesday to Friday next, both days inclusive, and shortly the South Coast Regattas will be in full swing, and we hope will meet with the usual support from the holiday folks, whom, doubtless, the fine weather will take in their thousands to the various watering places along the South Coast.

The hospitalities of the Mansion House are being dispensed with a liberality which is in the highest degree creditable, both to our respected brother, the Lord Mayor, and the great and ancient city, of which he is this year the chief magistrate. On Thursday, he gave a grand International Municipal Banquet, there being present the French Ambassador, the Japanese Ambassador, the Italian Chargé d'Affaires, M. Ferdinand Duval, Prefect of the Seine, with other French prefects and mayors, the Burgomasters of Brussels, Antwerp, and Amsterdam, the Mayors of Turin, Florence, Quebec, Toronto, together with the Lord Mayors of Dublin and York, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and the municipal chiefs of all the most important towns in the United Kingdom. It is long, indeed, since so distinguished and so thoroughly civic a gathering has been seen within the walls of our Lord Mayor's residence. As a matter of course, the banquet passed off amid the greatest enthusiasm, and will doubtless prove a fitting inauguration to other international courtesies en tapis.

The Alexandra Palace Directors have at length—provided the present brilliant weather continue for a reasonable length of time—a chance of showing what their Palace and grounds are capable of affording in the way of entertainments. Not that we have not had already many opportunities of testing their directorial powers, but great as have been the numbers which, on occasions such as Whit-Monday for instance, have visited the Muswell Hill Grounds, a continuance of this weather will tax them still further. To-day with its International Fête will, we hope, bring thousands of visitors. The special programme for Monday, the Bank Holiday, may not improbably assemble a good century of thousands, while the agreeable Summer Evening Promenade Concerts are sure to prove as attractive in the future as they have been thus far. One of the chief features to-morrow and next week will be the presence and performances of the splendid band of the Garde Républicaine, which has been allowed to visit London by special permission of the President, Marshal MacMahon, and General Cissey.

The Crystal Palace has held a goat show, but one of the grand attractions of the year will come off to-day, when Mr. Sims Reeves holds his Annual Benefit Concert.

We note in the musical world that Her Majesty's closed on Saturday, with the performance of "Lohengrin," for the benefit of Mr. Mapleson, whose efforts to meet the wishes of his patrons are too well known to require comment. On Wednesday Mdlle. Titiens, who is about to leave England for the United States, gave her first benefit concert at the Albert Hall, and achieved a most brilliant success, not only as regards the programme provided—at which many of the most eminient artistes assisted—but from the numerous company which assembled to do honour to this popular singer.

As regards foreign news, the most important relates to Spain and the Herzegovina. The Turks have not yet put down the insurrection in the latter, and there is no knowing how soon in all Eastern difficulties, the slightest spark may kindle into a flame, and set all Europe in glowing heat. As regards the former country, it is evident the Carlists, as we fully imagined, are equal to a good deal more beating yet, before their utter extinction can be announced by the Madrid Government. There has been a succession of Alphonsist victories, and what then? Carlism still rears its head in proud defiance. Will the end of this miserable war precede the Greek Calends or vice versâ?

The final meeting of the Board of Stewards of the 77th Anniversary Festival of the Boys' School was held on the 22nd inst., at Freemasons' Hall, and was numerously attended. Bro. I. M. S. Montague, D.P.G.M. Dorset, was unanimously voted to the chair. Bro. F. Binckes, Hon. Sec., read the minutes relating to the Anniversary Festival, when it was resolved—that the Board of Stewards of the recent Festival desire to place on record the cordial approval of the alteration of the date of holding the Festival. They also desire to bear their unqualified testimony to the excellence of the banquet supplied by Messrs. Bertram and Roberts, and to the admirable manner in which those gentlemen gave effect to the wishes of the Board; and, further, their approbation of the system, inaugurated on the late occasion, under which ladies and brethren dined together at the same tables; no untoward event of any kind having occurred to interfere with, or militate against, the success of the assembly. The accounts rendered by Bro. Webster were very satisfactory, there being 301 ladies and 381 brethren present, and there were 159 stewards. The amount realised was £12,704; and 39 stewards at present not having made their returns. A sum of ten guineas was usually voted to be placed on the list of the Treasurer, but, having sufficient funds in hand, it was augmented to 25 guineas. A sum of ten guineas to Bro. Taylor, for services rendered by him on the occasion of the Festival. A sum of £60 bonus to Bro. Binckes was proposed by Bro. S. Rosenthal, and seconded by Bro. H. M. Levy, and also a cordial vote of thanks for his indefatigable exertions in not only arranging this Festival, but also former ones, thus contributing to the success of the Institution. Bro. F. Binckes, in returning thanks for the vote, said it was pleasing to him to receive so many expressions of satisfaction on the part of the Stewards. Bro. S. Rosenthal, in glowing terms, proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Montagu, the acting President, who had so ably presided over them, and also for his great exertions in the cause of the charity. Bro. Montagu returned thanks, and the last meeting of the Stewards' of the Festival of 1875 was dissolved. There were present Bros. R. B. Webster Treasurer, S. Rosenthal, G. W. Verry, W. Lane, F. Adlard, W. C. Parsons, J. Bingeman, A. Barfield, J. Healey, J. Wright.

The General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, met on Thursday, the 29th, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. Benjamin Head in the chair. Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, the Secretary, read the minutes of the last General Committee. The Quarterly General Court was read and adopted, also the report of the Audit Committee was read, showing a balance of £5,488 2s 6d, and the sum of £8,000 was ordered to be invested in the 3 per cent. reduced Consols, and candidates were placed on the list. The following brethren were present—J. Nunn, J. Boyd, H. A. Dubois, J. Rucker, F. Binckes, H. W. Hemsworth, L. Sabine, Griffiths Smith, T. White, A. H. Tattershall, H. Massey, A. H. Diaper, C. Montrie, H. M. Levy, &c.,

THE THANET CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS OF ROME, AND OF THE RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE, No. 121, MARGATE.

THIS Masonic and Military Grade of Masonry is, we are pleased to find, making great progress in the province, and it was with pleasure that we witnessed the consecration of this new Conclave in the town of Margate, on Wednesday 21st July. Nothing could have been more favourable to the success of the inauguration than the gratuitous assistance so kindly afforded to its Sovereign, his Officers and Sir Knights Companions, by the V.I. Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little P.G.S.G. Grand Treasurer, &c., the Ill. Sir Kt. H. A. Dubois Asst. Grand Treasurer, &c., the Ill. Sir Kt. the Rev. P. M. Holden P.S., and other eminent members of the Grand Council and Senate in the performance of the ceremonies.

Prior to the inauguration and enthronement of the M.P.S., and consecration of the Vy. Eus., the acting Principals installed the following brethren:—Bro. W. H. Charrington P.M., Bro. Hy. Botting P.M., Bro. Wm. Wells P.M., and W.M., all of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 717, Guildford, and Bro. H. C. Fuhr, P.M. of the Lodge of Peace and Harmony, No. 199, Dover, and Bro. Geo. Hills of the Lewis's Lodge, No. 429, Ramsgate.

The M.P.S. having duly installed and given offices to Sir Knights T. M. Compton, Vy. E. W. Searles S.G., H. Spurrier J.G., W. H. Hennah H.P., J. Bristed T., F. L. Sillani R., J. W. Smith P., G. Hills S.B., A. J. Cave H., W. K. Treeves D.C., J. McCubbin 1st A., H. E. Davis 2nd A., A. Aubrey O., H. C. Fuhr S., R. J. Feakins S[1], they were allotted stalls in the new Conclave. The M.P.S., Sir Kt. Mannering W. Bolton, was then enthroned, and the Vy. Eus. Sir Kt. T. M. Compton consecrated, and the solemn proceedings of dedication and inauguration were continued.

The petition and warrant were read by the Recorder. The Grand High Prelate, the Very Ill. The Rev. P. M. Holden, delivered the Grand Charge and Traditional History of this Order, with marked emphasis and effect, and the newly installed M.P.S. (to whom the Companions are indebted for the formation of this Conclave) with his Vy. Eus. and Officers closed the proceedings, and the Sir Knts. went to the King's Head Hotel to enjoy the magnificent banquet provided for them by the host, Bro. J. Smith. The usual toasts of this Order were given and received, but time would not permit us to remain longer than to hear the first one or two, on account of the inevitable "LAST TRAIN UP," and we regretfully took our departure. The great success that has attended the formation of the Thanet Conclave must be a source of considerable satisfaction to its founders, and they should ever feel indebted to the members of the Grand Council and Senate, and the M.P.S. of the De Shurland Conclave, No. 92, Sir Kt. John Hancock, who afforded them so much assistance.

The Conclave now musters some twenty Knights, residing in Thanet and its environs, and several in Surrey, and about ten more brethren have been duly elected, whose installations will shortly take place, so the Thanet Conclave is likely to become a numerous and popular one, and we wish it continued prosperity.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER OF ROYAL ARCH MASONS OF ENGLAND.

THE following is the agenda paper of the Quarterly Communication, to be held at Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C., on Wednesday, the 4th day of August proximo, at seven o'clock in the evening punctually:—

The foregoing Petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the Prayers thereof be respectively granted.

(Signed) JOHN SAVAGE,
President.

Obituary.

BRO. RICHARD BATTERSBY, OF BURY (LANCASHIRE).

ON Wednesday afternoon, the 21st inst., while the steamer Nelson (Captain Roskell) was returning from Morecambe to Blackpool, with excursionists, an object resembling a human body was seen floating below the mouth of the river Lune, some three or four miles from shore. A boat was at once lowered, and Captain Roskell and two of the crew proceeded to the spot, and succeeded in recovering what the Captain had good grounds for believing to be the body of Bro. Richard Battersby, late of Parsons Lane, Bury, aged 27, who, along with Bro. R. W. O'Neil, lost his life while yachting in Morecambe Bay on the afternoon of the 20th May last. A reward of £50 had been offered for the recovery of the body, and we need hardly say that the seafaring folk along the coast of Morecambe Bay and its approaches had long kept a sharp look out. The body, when picked up, was enveloped in a mackintosh—which he wore when he and Bro. O'Neil fell into the sea—that had no doubt tended to preserve it. From personal acquaintance with the deceased, Captain Roskell had no doubt it was the body of Bro. Battersby, the long submersion in the sea not having altogether obliterated the means of identification, and on an examination of the deceased's clothes, subsequent to the landing of the body at the South Pier, Blackpool, there were such evidences found—cards, envelopes, &c., bearing his name and address—as left no room for any doubt on the point of identity which might have previously existed. Mr. J. T. Newbold, The Springs, Bury, happened to be in Blackpool at the time, and hearing of the discovery of the body he proceeded to look at it, and was enabled (though not without some difficulty) to identify it by the features as the body of Bro. Battersby. All doubt, therefore, being removed, the family of the deceased at Bury were communicated with, and due preparations made for handing the body over into their charge.

Although the body had been upwards of sixty days at sea, it was in a fair state of preservation when found. The pockets of the mackintosh were turned inside out, but none of the other pockets appeared to have been disturbed, and the watch, notes, and loose cash that the deceased had taken out with him were all found; likewise the ring he wore when the accident occurred. The body was picked up some five miles from where the accident happened, and there is reason for supposing that it has never been washed out of the Bay into open sea. It is thought that the body had floated only the day on which it was picked up—the features being then quite white—and that up to that period it had either been sanded over or entangled among the sea weed, which on breaking up had released the body.

An inquest was held on the following day, and a verdict of "accidentally drowned" returned.

The funeral of the deceased took place on Saturday morning last, in the family vault at St. Paul's Churchyard, Bury.

As the funeral party entered the church, Bro. J. R. Fletcher, P.M. Lodge 191, played Mendelssohn's Funeral March on the organ, and as they left he played "Dead March" in Saul.

Just before the coffin was lowered to its last resting place, Mr. T. Battersby, brother of the deceased, laid a floral cross on the lid, and handsome wreaths of flowers were placed thereon by Bro. G. O'Neil and Mr. J. H. Openshaw.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—When the weather is hot it will be found that persons who suffer from swelled feet and ankles, various veins, ulcers, and sores of all kinds, and, in fact, from any skin disease, find these complaints more troublesome and aggravating than at any other time of the year, they will soon find relief in the use of these remedies, for if the wounds or ulcers are dressed with this Ointment, it at once soothes the irritability of the skin, causes the discharges to lose their acrimonious character, and lessens any inflammation that may be present. It cannot be too widely known that these twin remedies are the most powerful of anti-febrile and anti-inflammatory agents we possess.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—This Lodge held its regular weekly meeting on Wednesday, the 28th July, at the Crown Tavern, Clerkenwell Green. Present—Bros. Halford W.M., Crusch S.W., Isaac J.W., Killick Secretary, Defries Treasurer, Walker S.D., Saul J.D., Stock I.G., Christopher Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Beckett Preceptor, Killick sen., and a large muster of the members. Business—Lodge opened in the usual manner, and the minutes of previous meeting confirmed. Bro. Pearcy raised to the degree of W.M. 1st section of 3rd lecture worked by the Preceptor, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Beckett's adjourned motion to alter Bye Law 7 was then considered, and, being seconded by Bro. Pearcy, was carried unanimously. Bros. Saul, Pearcy, Stock, Beckett, and Killick were appointed a committee to consider the removal of the Lodge, and also a revision of the Bye Laws, and ordered to present their report at the next Lodge meeting. Next Monday, being a Bank Holiday, the Lodge was adjourned until the 9th August, and closed in Masonic form.

Prince Edwin Lodge, No. 138, Bury.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 21st July. Present—Bros. Warwick Wood W.M., W. S. Barlow S.W., J. Senior J.W., Edward Robinson S.D., Thomas Ramsbottom sen. J.D., Thomas Wood Treasurer, Thomas Ramsbottom jun. Secretary, Joseph Wolstenholme I.G., Wright Greenhalgh Tyler. Visitor—Bro. G. Brown I.G. Egerton Lodge, No. 1392. Business—Mr. Samuel Wrigley was balloted unanimously and initiated, and Bros. J. Tattersall and John Pilling were raised. Two propositions for initiation were received.

Lodge of Lights, No. 148, Warrington.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday evening last. The W.M. Dr. John Bowes P.M. P.Z. Past Prov. G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmoreland was supported by Bros. W. H. Robinson S.W., Thos. Tunstall J.W., Jos. Pickthall S.W., J. R. Young J.D., C. E. Hindley I.G., W. Sharp P.M. Treasurer, W. Mossop P.M. Prov. The Lodge was opened in due form with prayer, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and declared to be correctly recorded. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, when Bro. James Paterson claimed advancement, and having sustained his claim was entrusted. On re-admission, Bro. Paterson was raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. in ample form by the W.M., the working tools being explained by the S.W. The Lodge was closed down to the first degree, when the following gentlemen, who had already been approved, were separately introduced and initiated by the W.M., viz.: Messrs. S. E. Johnson, A. Peake and B. L. Pierpoint. Bros. Robert Vawser C.E. and Thos. Sutton were proposed as joining members; and a gentleman as a fit and proper person for ballot. The Lodge was closed in harmony.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—This Lodge held its weekly meeting on Wednesday, the 28th July, at the White Hart Tavern, Aldchurch Lane. Present—Bros. Blinkhorn W.M., Abell S.W., D. Posener J.W., J. Constable Treasurer, Gomes S.D., Blackhall J.D., Franks I.G., Christopher Tyler. P.M. Brother Gotthelf Preceptor. Business—The first ceremony was rehearsed by the W.M., who showed considerable proficiency in his work. The first three sections were worked by Bro. John Constable, assisted by the brethren. The proceedings ended, and the meeting was adjourned to Wednesday, 4th August 1875.

Everton Lodge, No. 823, Liverpool.—Another of the numerous installation ceremonies which take place in connection with the Liverpool Lodges at this season of the year was performed at the Masonic Hall on Wednesday evening, when Bro. Thomas Shaw was placed in the W.M.'s chair of the Everton Lodge, No. 823. There was a very large and influential gathering, including a number of W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and officers from other Lodges. The ceremony of installation was very ably performed by Bro. W. Cottrell, the I.P.M., to whom was presented a very handsome P.M.'s jewel, as a token of the respect felt for him by the brethren at the close of his year in the chair. The following were invested as the officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. Wilson S.W., J. Hoalding J.W., W. J. Last P.M. Treas., H. Ashmore Secretary, J. Goodman S.D., J. S. Cuthbert J.D., P. W. Oglesby I.G., T. Webster S.S., J. J. Boyle J.S., T. H. Careful A.S., J. Holland P.M., D.C., and A. J. Fishlock. The annual installation pic-nic took place at Parkgate on Thursday, and was generally voted the most enjoyable ever held in connection with the Everton Lodge. There were altogether about 250 ladies and brethren present, and as the weather was delightfully fine the enjoyment was all the greater. The catering of Bro. Acton, of the Union Hotel, Parkgate, gave universal satisfaction, dinner and tea being served in a large marquee erected on the grounds of the pleasantly situated hotel. The amusements of the large party were very varied, comprising dancing, boating, donkey and other races, &c., and the "outers" returned to town shortly before eleven o'clock.

Lebanon Chapter, No. 1326.—A convocation of this new and flourishing Chapter was held on Saturday, at the Red Lion, Hampton. The Chapter was opened by Comps. F. Walters P.Z. as Z., S. Wickens H., and W. Hammond J. The election for the officers were unanimous, and Comp. W. Smeed P.Z. exalted Bro. W. Mitchel, and afterwards Comp. S. Wickens was installed Z., by Comp. W. Smeed, who inducted W. Hammond H., H. A. Dubois J. The ceremonies were performed in Comp. Smeed's usual impressive manner. Comp. J. Hammond was invested Treasurer, F. Walters P.Z. S.E., E. Hopwood S.N., E. Gilbert P.S., Rev. P. M. Holden 1st Asst. and Chaplain, W. Mitchell 2nd Asst., J. Wallis D.C., H. Potter W.S. A five guinea P.Z.'s jewel was voted to Comp. J. T. Moss I.P.M., for services rendered by him to the Chapter during his occupation of the chair. Several candidates were proposed for exaltation, and the Chapter was closed. A banquet followed. The visitors were Comps. R. Watts P.Z. 185, F. Binckes P.Z. 10, R. W. Williams 79, H. J. Green 79, and several others.

Anchor Lodge, No. 1337.—The monthly meeting was held on Wednesday, the 21st day of July, at the Masonic Rooms, Durham House, Northallerton. There was a moderate attendance of the brethren. The officers present were—Bros. C. Waistell P.M., J. Fairborn W.M., G. F. Clarkson S.W., the J.W., S.D., J.D. and I.G. being prevented from attending, their places were filled by Bros. M. Walmsley, R. Palliser, C. Ashton and T. Bell, T. Bell Secretary, E. Wilkinson Tyler. The Lodge was opened in due form at 8.30. The minutes of the previous Lodge were read and confirmed. There being no other business the W.M. closed the Lodge at 9.15, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The W.M. then proceeded with the toasts, commencing with the Queen and the members of the Royal Family. To the toast of "The Visiting Brethren" Bro. J. Walker, of the Landmark Lodge, Chicago, responded. The last toast was given and the brethren separated after a very pleasant evening.

Formor Hesketh Lodge, No. 1350.—This Lodge held its installation meeting on Thursday, 15th July, at the Masonic Hall, Hope Street, Liverpool. Present—Bros. Dr. J. W. Bennett, W.M., R. Collinson S.W., W. H. Cooper J.W., J. O. Samuels Secretary, T. A. Collinson I.P.M. Treasurer, Dr. Pierce S.D., W. P. Evans J.D., S. Johnston P.M. D.C., T. Kay Steward, T. F. Cooper I.G., W. H. Ball Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. T. R. Hughes, Dr. Samuels, Dr. Crawford, Johnstone, Collinson and Harbord. Visitors—Bros. P.M. Buck P.P. Chaplain Shropshire, and V.W P.M. Goggin P.P. Chaplain of West Lancashire, J. P. Platt, A. J. Platt Provincial Officer, Cheshire, P.M. Mewburn, &c. Business—Installation of W.M. by P.M. Collinson. Banquet in evening; usual Masonic toasts. J. T. Evans, Esq. was initiated.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1507.—The weekly meeting of this Lodge of Instruction was held on 23rd July, at the Metropolitan Club, King's Cross. Bro. Side as W.M., Jas. Willing jun. S.W., Shead J.W., W. M. Stiles Secretary, Scales I.G., T. Adams P.G.P. Preceptor, and Bros. Carot, Jones, Cox, Fowler, Yeomans, Tetterborn and Rapkin. The Lodge having been opened and the minutes confirmed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Fowler acting as candidate. The ceremonies of passing and raising followed, Bro. Carot acting as candidate. The first and second sections of the first lecture were worked by the brethren, assisted by Preceptor Adams. Bro. Jas. Willing jun. was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and the meeting was adjourned until the following Friday.

The Hyde Park Lodge of Instruction, No. 1435.—This Lodge met on Monday at the Westbourne Restaurant, Crown Road, Bayswater. Bros. Savage W.M., Miles S.W., Cole J.W., Read Secretary, Beyett S.D., W. M. Stiles J.D., Ormiston I.G., Gellion and Alexander. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes confirmed, the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. Gellion acting as candidate. The 3rd degree was then worked, Bro. Stiles acting as candidate. Great credit is due to the acting W.M. for his able delivery of the ceremonies and his lecture on the tracing board of the 3rd degree. Bro. Miles was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

FOR the first time since January 1874, when an Emergency Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire Freemasons was convened for the purpose of attending the obsequies of the late Dr. Fearnley, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of West Yorkshire, a Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire Masons was holden at Dewsbury on Wednesday, 21st July. At the installation of the Right Worshipful Brother Lieut.-Colonel Sir H. Edwards, Bart., J.P., D.L., as Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master of West Yorkshire, which took place at a Lodge held at Halifax, on the 21st of April, the Grand Lodge was invited by the Worshipful Master of the Lodge of the Three Grand Principles, No. 208, Dewsbury, to hold its next meeting under their banner, and the invitation was accepted. We have every reason to believe that on no past occasion has there been so large a gathering of the Craft in Dewsbury, or the district, as that assembled in the spacious Lodge room in Long Causeway on Wednesday, and the members were as enthusiastic as the assembly was large in numerical strength. The meeting was regarded as a most important one in consequence of an announcement having been made that the province had determined to make some recognition of its appreciation of the valuable services rendered by W. Brother Bentley Shaw P.G.D. of England, as Deputy Prov. Grand Master, during the past eleven years. This took the form of a magnificent and richly chased "Corbeille à fleurs," in the Byzantine style, parcel gilt, with scroll handles and chased silver shields, bearing arms and inscription, value 300 guineas. The large shield bears the arms of Bro. Bentley Shaw, and the following inscription:—"From the Freemasons of the Province of West Yorkshire. Presented to Bro. Bentley Shaw J.P. and D.L., P.G.D. of England, Woodfield House, Holdersfield, in acknowledgment of distinguished services, as their Deputy Provincial Grand Master, from 30th March, A.L. 5864, to 21st April, A.L. 5875." The "Corbeille à fleurs" stands on a handsome shaped pedestal, with chased silver shields, one containing the arms of the Craft, and the other the following inscription:—"Presented by the Right Worshipful Master Lieut.-Col. Sir Hy. Edwards, Bart., and T. W. Tew, J.P., on behalf of the 59 Lodges of the Province of West Yorkshire." The plate was purchased from Bro. Manoah Rhodes P.M. P.P.G.W. of Bradford. Long before noon—the Provincial Grand Lodge being called for an hour later—the brethren from all parts of the province, but more especially from the Lodges in Dewsbury, Batley, Mirfield, Heckmondwike, Cleckheaton, and Morley began to assemble at the Masonic Hall, and before the commencement of the proceedings no fewer than 55, from a total of 59, Lodges in the Province were represented by Masters, Past Masters and Officers. On each side of the building were placed rows of seats for the accommodation of the brethren, the centre, as well as the platform, being reserved for the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge. The Masonic jewels and clothing presented a marked contrast when compared with the full evening dress worn by the members; and the sun shining, as it did during the whole of the proceedings, through the stained windows, assisted in making the scene a very pretty one. At 12.45 p.m. the Lodge of the Three Grand Principles was opened up in the three degrees, by Brother Thos. Wells W.M. and his officers; and shortly after one o'clock the Prov. Grand Lodge made its appearance in the usual form. The Right Worshipful Brother Sir H. Edwards Prov. Grand Master having taken his seat, and prayer having been offered and a portion of Holy Scripture read by the Prov. Grand Chaplain, Sir Henry was saluted according to ancient custom in a very enthusiastic manner by nearly 200 brethren from 55 of the 59 Lodges in the Province. He was supported by W. Bro. Thomas William Tew J.P. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, 910, Pontefract, W. Bro. Major Thomas Gouldburn Parker Prov. S.G. Warden, 401, Shaldburn, W. Bro. William Henry Brittain Prov. J.G. Warden, 139, Sheffield, W. Bro. Rev. Arthur Wolfe Hamilton M.A. Prov. G. Chaplain, 189, Sheffield, W. Bro. Rev. George Samuel Dunbar M.A. Prov. G. Chaplain, 910, Pontefract, W. Bro. Robert I. Critchley J.P. Prov. G. Treasurer, 208, Dewsbury, W. Bro. Edmund Mirsom Worrall jun. Prov. G. Registrar, 61, Halifax, W. Bro. Henry Smith Prov. Grand Secretary, 387, Wakefield, W. Bro. William Tasker Prov. S.G. Deacon, 61, Halifax, W. Bro. Thomas Heaton Prov. J.G. Deacon 275, Huddersfield, W. Bro. C. Mandall Hartley Prov. G. Sup. of Works 242, Doncaster, W. Bro. William Roddewig Prov. G.D. of C., 298, Sheffield, W. Bro. James Sack Prov. G.A.D. of C., 289, Leeds, W. Bro. Frederick Crossley Prov. G.S. Bearer, 1231, Elland, W. Bro. Frederick Whitworth Nicholson Prov. G. Organist, 1064, Ecclesshill, W. Bro. Adolph E. Powoley Prov. G Pursuivant, 1211, Leeds, W. Bro. John Richardson jun. Prov. G.A. Pursuivant, 1001, Harrogate, W. Bro. John R. Armitage Prov. Grand Steward, 302, Bradford, W. Bro. Jno. Ibberson Prov. Grand Steward, 1102, Mirfield, W. Bro. Allen Jackson Prov. Grand Steward, 531, Huddersfield, W. Bro. Geo. Haigh Prov. Grand Steward 149, Meltham, W. Bro. John Marshall Prov. Grand Steward, 1283, Sowerby Bridge, W. Bro. Henry Ward Prov. Grand Steward, 1018, Bradford, W. Bro. Joshua Lee Prov. G. Tyler, 290, Huddersfield, and Bro. Jonas Sheard Prov. G.A. Tyler, 208, Dewsbury.

The Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, on rising to acknowledge the salute, was loudly cheered, and when the enthusiasm had subsided, he cordially thanked the brethren for attending the meeting. He said he felt they had paid him a great personal compliment—one that he did not expect even from the Masons of West Yorkshire as their representative. In return he desired to say that he was proud to represent such a province as that of which he had the honour to be the head; he could assure all present that his best endeavours should always be used, not only for the Freemasons of West Yorkshire, but also for his brethren throughout the United Kingdom. (Applause.) He had not been for the past 25 years a Mason without understanding its principles and without having gained some faith in his brethren. (Applause.) He believed that a good Mason was a man of unsullied honesty and integrity; and he had learned, from experience, to trust a brother until he found his faith misplaced. If a man once suspected his neighbour,—if suspicion gained possession of the heart,—all trust and credit ceased, and anything but good was the result. In conclusion, Sir Henry said the gathering of the Craft, which he had the honour of addressing, was a credit to the province; and he cordially and fraternally thanked all present for the honour they conferred upon him personally by attending in such large numbers. (Cheers.)

The W. Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., having been saluted by the brethren, thanked the meeting for the kind sentiments expressed towards the Prov. Grand Master, and for the cordial reception they had given to himself (the speaker). He most cordially, heartily, and fraternally thanked them. He desired to state that when the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master installed him as Deputy Provincial Grand Master he felt there could be no better way of appreciating the honour conferred upon him than by making a personal visit to all the Lodges in the province. He had already been to a great number, and had, on every occasion, met with the greatest kindness and hospitality. (Cheers.) He intended to continue his visits, and hoped by so doing—and thus assisting in promoting the study of Freemasonry—he would not misplace the confidence of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Sir Henry Edwards, had placed in him. (Cheers.)

The Deputy Prov. G. Master next read the roll of Lodges, and some other routine business having been transacted,

The Right Worshipful P.G. Master, Sir Henry Edwards, after a few preliminary remarks, said:—Brethren,—If you refer to the summons convening this meeting you will observe that one of the most pleasing duties which it is possible to fall to the lot of any living being now devolves upon me, in presenting to our much-esteemed

Digitized by Google

Brother Bentley Shaw a piece of plate, which you have provided for that purpose. I sincerely congratulate myself on being selected to discharge this pleasant duty, inasmuch as it enables me, whilst speaking your sentiments, to express my own sense of the great and lasting obligations which Brother Shaw has laid upon us all by the manner in which he has discharged his various and important duties whilst holding the position of Deputy Prov. Grand Master of this province during the period of eleven years just expired. Any words of mine are inadequate to the faithful description of the feelings of respect and admiration with which we all regard Brother Shaw; and the only circumstance of regret with which the assumption of my present office was associated was the fact that those services, found to be so useful and valuable to my predecessor, could not be continued to my advantage. Bro. Shaw's exertions in promoting the best interests of our noble institution are well-known, both in the province and in other parts of England. During eleven long years he has exercised his fraternal — nay, even paternal — supervision of the business of this great province, and has seen the Lodges and the members thereof increase in numbers and influence. He has also aided and directed the great current of practical charity which has so greatly increased the means and spheres of usefulness of the several charities of our Order; and it is no figure of speech, nor unwarrantable statement of facts, to say that in all these great movements the name of Brother Shaw has been so indelibly impressed upon the minds of West Yorkshire Masons as to be admired by the present and future generations of the brethren of the Craft. Brother Shaw, permit me, therefore, to tender for your acceptance this token of the respect and admiration which the brethren of this province desire to confer upon you; and also permit me to say, on their behalf, that, beautiful as it is as a work of art, it possesses a far higher value than its material worth ten thousand times told. It is the freewill offering, and also the symbolical expression of the affectionate regard of a body of men intimately and agreeably associated with you in the business of the province,—men whose only regret, while making this presentation, is that they will, in the future, lose the advantage they have long enjoyed, and appreciated in the past, of working under the influence of your general character and conduct as their Deputy Prov. Grand Master. I trust that you will live long to look on this beautiful gift, which I am sure is a token of the good feeling that exists between you and the brethren of the province of West Yorkshire. (Loud cheers.)

Deputy Prov. G. Master Bro. Tew said he cordially responded to the sentiments expressed by the Provincial Grand Master. Although he had only known Bro. Shaw since he (the speaker) was appointed a Prov. G. Lodge Steward in 1864, he could bear testimony to his indefatigable zeal. He was possessed of great urbanity of character, and this had endeared him to all. His unwearied zeal and untiring industry—which was the foundation of great blessings—in the cause of Freemasonry, was such that only once throughout the eleven years he had been Deputy Provincial Grand Master in 1865, had he missed attending the Provincial Grand Lodge. Then it was through domestic affliction. It became now his (Bro. Tew's) privilege to respond to the sentiments of the Prov. Grand Master in offering him (Bro. Shaw) the substantial sympathy of the 59 Lodges of the West Yorkshire province. The speaker concluded by hoping he would take with him into his voluntary retirement, as he was sure he would, the best wishes of the Masons of West Yorkshire—a body which, he trusted, Bro. Shaw would live long to adorn. (Cheers.)

Bro Bentley Shaw, who was visibly affected on rising to respond, after the cheering that greeted him had subsided, said:—Most Worshipful Sir, Officers and Brethren,—You have often heard my voice; often have I had the privilege of addressing you, but I have never had so much difficulty before the present time in making my sentiments known to you. Your generous gift—your generous memento of my connection with the Masons of West Yorkshire has almost overwhelmed me. You must not measure my thanks by any words I may use, as I feel unequal to the task. I have often asked myself,—what have I done to deserve this signal of your favour? I have often asked,—what have I done to warrant such a proof of your love and esteem? All the answer that I can find is, that, while I had the approval of my conscience and of my God, I have striven to do my duty and all I possibly could to preserve Freemasonry. (Cheers.) Yet I feel how utterly unworthy I am to be the recipient of such a mark of your favour. (No, no.) I never dreamed of it. I may truly say that I never worked for this beautiful piece of plate; and in answer to the many questions which I have this day put to myself, I can find but one reply, and that is—a deep consciousness that I am unworthy of it. (No, no.) But let me endeavour to thank you for the valuable present you have given me—a present which is a beautiful work of art. I shall always value it—not only for its worth, its classic, and, at the same time, its chasteness of design, its rich ornamentation and its general beauty, but more than this, I shall value it because of the genuineness of feeling you have displayed towards me. I cannot fail to value it because it is an expressive symbol of generous hearts. Yours and mine are

"Hearts bound up together, Firm bound in fraternal love."

It will help me to think of the eleven years connection with you. It will also assist me in making me do my duty. My family will always prize it for my own sake, as well as yours. (Cheers.) I shall take care that it is handed down as a sacred heirloom. I take the liberty here of thanking the committee of selection for the handsome present; and yourself, Most Worshipful Grand Master, as well as Lady Edwards—(cheers)—who, if I am correctly informed, have greatly assisted the committee in their choice. (Hear, hear.) I desire to say here that it is a matter of congratulation that the present has been made to me in the good old town of Dewsbury—(cheers)—the town where Dr. Fearnley, my predecessor, lived, was loved, was honoured, and died. I am glad, too, that it has been your province, Most Worshipful Grand Master, to present me with this handsome gift; for, eleven years ago, I well remember, when your Right Worshipful's predecessor conferred the honour of Deputy Provincial Grand Master, you, sir, were on my right; and. I am glad that you are present to-day. I accept the gift with gratitude and deep humility. I trust that, as Sir Henry Edwards has said, I shall never cease to promote Freemasonry until my heart has ceased to beat and my breath has left me. Let my last words be that you will show affection to the Grand Master of England, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales—(cheers)—to Sir Henry Edwards—(cheers)—and to his coadjutor, Bro. Tew. May this great and influential province of the West Riding ever stand first and foremost in all that is beautiful and good, useful and happy in Freemasonry. May that noble column, symbolised by wisdom and strength and beauty, whose pedestal, shaft and capital have been founded, upraised and crowned by the indomitable skill, energy and self-denying efforts of her numerous sons stand inviolable amid the raging billows and rude shocks of time, seeing that it has its foundations, as I trust it ever will have, in heaven-born and heaven-approving charity. Bro. Shaw, who at periods evinced great emotion, and consequently was but indistinctly heard, then resumed his seat, amidst immense cheering.

The Right Worshipful Grand Master announced that Bro. Bentley Shaw had received from the Grand Master of England a patent appointing him a P.G.D. of England—a remark which elicited a hearty outburst of cheering. Some routine business having been transacted, the Prov. Grand Lodge and the Lodge of the Three Grand Principles were closed.

At the close of the Lodge Business the brethren adjourned to the Church of England Boys' School, where a banquet was served up in the most recherché style. The arrangements were well carried out by the Stewards, and the culinary department reflected great credit upon the ability of Bro. and Mrs. Petty, both of whom succeeded in winning high encomiums for the way the dinner was placed on the table. The edibles were such as would satisfy the most fastidious, while the wines were of the choicest vintage. The Right Worshipful Prov. G. Master, Sir Henry Edwards, occupied the chair, and he was supported by the before-mentioned, as well as a large number of influential members of the Craft. After the repast, the health of her Majesty the Queen was proposed by the Chairman, and this having been duly honoured, a similar compliment was paid to Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. Sir Henry Edwards, in very eulogistic and Masonic terms, gave the toast of the Most W. G. Master of All England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., and the Most W. Pro Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, and this was received in a very enthusiastic manner. The health of the R. W. Deputy G. Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Skelmersdale, and the Officers of Grand Lodge Present and Past was the next toast given by the Chairman, and then the W. D. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Tew, proposed the health of the R. W. Prov. G. Master, Sir H. Edwards, who responded in suitable terms; and in conclusion gave the toast of the W. D. Prov. G. Master, whose name was received with loud cheers. After a suitable response, Bro. Sir H. Edwards gave the health of the W. Past D. Prov. G. Master, Bro Bentley Shaw, J.P., P.G.D. of England; who, in a speech of some length, again thanked the province for the presentation made to him. Bro. Maccah Rhodes P.M. paid a high compliment to Mrs. Bentley Shaw, whose health was drunk. Bro. Shaw responded in feeling terms. The remaining toasts were "The Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Jo. Ibbotson, and responded to by Bro. Henry Smith P.M. Prov. G. Sec., Wakefield; "the W. Masters and P. Masters of Lodges," proposed by Bro. B. Shaw, and acknowledged by W. Bro. Thos. Wells W.M., Dewsbury, and W. Bro. Cocker P.M., "The Visiting Brethren" and "Lady Edwards and the Ladies." The speeches, which were truly of a Masonic character, were interspersed with selections of vocal music rendered by Bro. B. Watson, 974, Bro. H. Mitchell, 387, Bro. Thornton Wood, 1018, and Bro. J. L. Atherton, 439:—Bro. F. W. Nicholson, Prov. G. Organist, presiding at the pianoforte. The proceedings terminated between six and seven o'clock. The next Provincial Grand Lodge will be held at Sheffield.—Dewsbury Chronicle.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 5s per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 112 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to favour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

THE BARONESS BURDETT COUTTS AT FREEMASONS' HALL.

THE presentation of chairs by the Baroness Burdett Coutts to the Lodge bearing her name, is not without its significance. In England, Masonry, as a rule, fights shy of the ladies, not because Masons are ungallant enough to depreciate their presence or influence, but simply because Masonic teaching commands us to limit our society to the male sex. Abroad, perhaps, they view these things differently; but be this as it may, we have here our laws, and what is more, we act up to them. But, to say the least, the presence of a lady, not perhaps actually in a regular Lodge, but in the semblance of one, is a great innovation on our ordinary mode of procedure. The old story of a lady hiding herself in a clock-case, in order to learn our secrets, reads well as a story, but here we have a lady of high position heartily welcomed within the sacred precincts of a Lodge, in order that it may receive at her hands the gift of certain furniture. We admire the kindness of the lady who has thus done us honour. We recognise the wisdom of the Lodge which departed from the usual custom of Masonry, and accepted the gift in full Lodge assembled, but without Masonic working, or Masonic display of any kind, save dress. The speeches on the occasion, and at the banquet which followed, were in admirable keeping, and though we think these trifling eccentricities of usage should not be observed too frequently, it is clearly an advantage to Masonry that its work is thus liberally regarded. The full significance of this gift is not, perhaps, openly recognised. We are constantly charged with being a secret society, and therefore with being hurtful to society. The untruth of this accusation needs no demonstration, but this corroborative evidence in our favour of a lady who is kindly disposed towards all classes of her fellow-creatures is worth, at least, something. The Baroness Burdett Coutts is known, not only for her wealth, but for her philanthropy. She is a leader among men in all works of charity. Be it the fate of animals, or of the poor, of the middle-class, or of sufferers by some extraordinary calamity, she is always foremost in her efforts to relieve distress. Whatever people may think of Masonry in the abstract, it cannot be denied that we use much diligence in helping our fellow-men onwards in their course through life. The value of figures, as facts, is undeniable. There is no gainsaying the fact of thousands sterling being raised by us towards relief. We may put what interpretation we like on the motives of the donors, but the broad fact remains that some thirty thousand pounds annually are contributed towards the relief of suffering Masonry. This is the chief ground, indeed, urged by the Baroness for her interest in Masonry. Herself conspicuous among philanthrophists for her readiness to succour distressed people, she assigns this same readiness on the part of Masons to render aid where aid is needed as her chief motive for honouring one of our Lodges. Another reason assigned is that she herself is the daughter of a Mason, who, in his day, was not only a distinguished man, but fully carried out the beneficent views which Masonry strives to inculcate in all its followers. But further than this we see reason for congratulation. The Papacy has of late been most violent in its attacks on our Order. First the Bishop of Orleans, then His Holiness the Pope himself, have fulminated their anathemas at us. We cannot conscientiously say that we have seriously suffered by their abuse. We are about as free from harm as was Daniel in the den of lions, or the three who passed unscathed through the fiery furnace. But though uninjured by abuse, we readily admit that this act of the Baroness has exercised a benign influence over us. It is, in its way, an answer to the silly abuse of the Pope and his minions. An Order from which "there is no honest man who does not turn from it with horror" is not calculated to enlist the sympathies of philanthropic ladies. We have not heard it argued in any respectable society, that the Baroness Burdett Coutts has ever shown the slightest inclination to encourage murder, or that she is at all anxious or even disposed to "do guilty battle with the Church." But here she is, ready, as the daughter of a Mason, to do homage, or perhaps, we should say, to show respect to the Order whose interests we advocate. Her acknowledgment of our worth as a beneficent body must be taken as a complete answer to the silly bombast of the Pope, to whom of all men in the world has been reserved the special duty of committing the grossest act of folly of which any generation of men has ever been the witness.

THE PRESS AND THE CRAFT.

OUR Masonic friends on the other side of the Atlantic are apparently beginning to find that Masonic indifference is one of the grave evils against which enthusiastic members of the Craft have to guard. Notwithstanding the rapid growth of the Order in America, it would seem that, side by side with its unprecedented prosperity, has grown up a species of indifferentism with which we are only too familiar here. Masons in the States are apparently very willing to appear on Gala days, tricked out in the regalia of the Craft, but many of them are careless or absolutely ignorant of the practical business of which these toys are the mere symbols. Masonic Journalism does not appear to command as much support in America as it deserves, and we have before us at this moment the valedictory address of the St. Louis Freemason, which collapsed in the middle of its ninth volume. This journal, which appears to have been respectably conducted, fell from a combination of adverse circumstances. Masonic indifference, in the first place, largely contributed to bring it to the ground. The recent panic no doubt told heavily upon its subscription list, and, in addition, it had to struggle for existence amid younger and, possibly, more vigorous competitors for public support. That Masonic indifference was however the chief cause of the termination of a career of eight years and six months, the following extract from the valedictory address would appear to prove.

"To the many earnest and unselfish friends of our late journal, who adhered to its fortunes till the last, we desire to return our heartfelt thanks and sincere appreciation. To those who fell by the way, on account of poverty, we extend a deep sympathy, and to those who squander as much in dissipation in one day as would pay for a Masonic journal a year, yet "cannot afford to subscribe," we leave to their own guilty consciences to enjoy the torments incident to all who must feel that they are unworthy of the name and intellectual dignity of Freemasonry."

This is rather stronger language than journalists here would be disposed to use, but, leaving the coarser part of this piece of invective out of view, as in no way characteristic of our brethren, we confess that the indifference implied, though not expressed, reaches some of our friends on this side of the Atlantic. Active Masons here have often complained of that Masonic indifference, which is more difficult to conquer than any of the other failings of mankind. People who blow neither hot nor cold have, from time immemorial, been regarded with aversion and contempt by earnest workers. The sacred Scriptures tell us that the lukewarm professor of religion is an obnoxious person, compared with whom a zealous sinner, if we may use such a paradox, seems blameless. The sacred writer, no doubt, meant us to understand that he who possesses a knowledge of a truth or truths, and does not act upon his knowledge, is more deserving of censure than the ignorant transgressor who knows not what he is doing. The Mason who blows neither hot nor cold has indeed little excuse for his indifference. He knows that he incurred sacred obligations when he joined the Order, that he was expected to work in the cause of philanthrophy, and that he could not, without violating his pledges, live as if he stood alone in the world. But he has chosen an attitude of indifference, and he, and such as he, alone prevent the ultimate triumph and universal spread of Masonry over the world. The public point to him as a person in no wise improved by his connection with the Order, and an inference is at once drawn from the fact adverse to the claims of the Craft. Of course the conclusion is an illogical one, but men who reflect or reason are rare, and it not seldom happens that one indifferent Mason may do more indirect harm to the cause than can be repaired by the life work of an enthusiastic brother. We might perhaps complain, looking at the matter from our own standpoint, of the indifference of English Masons to the claims of their own press organs. The reproach has been levelled at the Craft by more than one disappointed projector, but we have always said that as a general charge it is unjust. We still hold to this view. More, indeed, might be done for the press, but we do not think that it would be fair to charge our brethren generally with indifference to Masonic journalism. In this sphere of labour indeed much remains to be done, and although the work of making known the claims, and extending the circulation of a newspaper may be less inviting than much of that which attracts many zealous labourers, it is not the less of grave importance to the fraternity at large.

THE EGYPTIAN PRIESTS.

IT comes naturally within the scope of the inquiry we have entered upon to say something of the religion of the ancient Egyptians. It would, in fact, be very singular if we spoke of the priests of ancient Egypt, and examined the nature of that celebrated body, without casting so much as a glance at the religion they professed or expounded to the people.

Nothing is so difficult to grasp as the doctrine the ancient Egyptians professed. The historians of those remote ages have transmitted to us, as regards this, rather lyrical pieces than veritable annals. The monuments, with which Egypt is covered even at this day, appear to be the sole records we can consult with any advantage. Did the Egyptians reverence as gods the sacred animals, and especially the bull Apis, or did they merely look upon them as allegories? This question would be problematical, if there did not remain to us of this people the theology, if I may so express myself, of the Pyramids, and the hieroglyphic figures with which they are inscribed.

The manner in which the Pyramids are built deserves special attention, whether we regard them as monuments of science or of religion. As the former, these bear witness to the high degree of excellence this people had attained in geometry and astronomy. As the latter, it is sufficient to look at the squares which compose those enormous masses and their exact correspondence with the four cardinal points, it is sufficient to cast a glance at the elevation of the summit, which receives exactly at mid-day the reflection of the sun's disc once before the vernal and once before the autumnal equinox as well as of the full moon of the equinoxes when in that parallel; in a word, it is sufficient to consider that the worship of Isis and Osiris is but the worship of the sun and moon, as Porphyrus and Diodorus Siculus testify, and as has been proved long since, in order to convince ourselves that the Pyramids of Egypt are nothing more than allegorical figures of the religion of ancient Egypt. These are the travels of Isis (the moon) after the death of Osiris (the sun), which were celebrated by the Egyptians under cover of an allegory, the meaning of which contains the exposition of the world's first two causes, which have confirmation in the heavens. Such are the figures which explain the whole system of the religion of the Egyptians. That religion, as we see, was confined to the worship of Isis and Osiris, that is to say of the sun and moon, which embrace all nature. Then we must bear in mind that the class of worship the people had adopted from the sacred animals, and more particularly from the bull Apis, was a relic of some former religion, traces of which the Egyptian Priests had found it expedient to preserve out of a respect for old popular customs, the toleration of which was thought desirable, almost as among us we find, in certain villages in Europe, where Christianity is the dominant religion, sundry relics of pagandom, like the carnival and other customs, the legitimacy of which lies in an immemorial usage, which it has been necessary to preserve and tolerate.

As regards the hieroglyphic figures with which the Pyramids of Egypt are inscribed, there is reason to believe that they are the common explanation and development of the doctrines inculcated by the religion of Isis and Osiris. Those hieroglyphics have long exercised the sagacity of savants, they have given rise to strange commentaries, and in their anxiety to explain them, people have found nothing but incoherence and obscurity. But hieroglyphic figures, like everything that is emblematic, form a language which it is necessary, above all, to acquire, for it is with hieroglyphics as with writing; how can we understand a book if we know not how to read? Let a book be placed before the eyes of the best mentally developed and most intelligent man, who, however, has no knowledge of the art of writing. He will understand nothing, and if he sets himself to criticising the sense of what is written without knowing how to read, what errors will he not commit?

Thus, ancient monuments bear witness that the priests of Egypt possessed the highest knowledge, and that they turned it to good account, with a view to govern nations and enlighten the world. The aspect of those obelisks, those Pyramids, that lake of Moeris, those vast caverns, even to this day astonish the traveller whom curiosity summons to those countries, once so favoured by nature, but now become the theatre of barbarism and ambition, and menaced by the near invasion of a burning and destructive sand. Those inanimate remains of the greatness of ancient Egypt still convey to the mind of the learned liberal and sublime ideas. If they have excited astonishment throughout the world when they were yet new, what tribute of admiration should they not demand from us? What intense regret must we not feel that we are so ill-informed of a country where such great wonders testify to man what is its power, what the resources of its industry.

It were to push a blind ignorance too far to regard these monuments, every part of which elevates the soul and excites our mental powers, as only the miserable relics of the pride and ostentation of the ancient masters of Egypt. Why! The Egyptians would never have employed so much time, they never would have made such tremendous efforts, merely to hand down to posterity the barren and empty evidences of their pomp and ostentation, which is nothing more than a regard of littleness of mind to inspire such grandeur. Can the effeminacy of pomp and the inanity of pride excite in the minds of men such noble resolves? If the Egyptians had aspired to nothing else than the admiration of posterity, would they not have found, in monuments of some other kind, a means for exciting enthusiasm without going and piling up, at heavy cost, in the midst of a vast champagne, or on the summits of lofty hills, stones of enormous size, perfectly wrought, and methodically and scientifically arranged, without digging vast caverns or opposing dykes to the power of the waves in order to mark out for them eternal limits? If they had not had in view to hand down to us ideas of the last importance, would they with so much care and skill have combined astronomy with geometry, and the language of hieroglyphics with architecture? The cities of Thebes, of Memphis, of Heliopolis, and Saïs, contained wonders enough, without rendering it necessary to erect at a distance from their walls, obelisks, and pyramids, the long and costly labour in building which would only have produced a vain and stupid display. Ostentation does not give rise to such grand undertakings, it raises not mankind to that point of greatness which arrests our admiration and commands our respect.

Some writers, among others MM. Rollin and Mellot, have made it a subject of reproach to the Egyptian priests that they used their superiority and the confidence of the people to keep the latter in a state of ignorance and superstition, but is this reproach based on justice or policy? Such a question would, in the eighteenth century, have been determined against the priests, and it would seem as though MM. Rollin and Mellot, in condemning on this isolated ground, have not examined the question impartially, but have yielded to the ruling prejudice of their country rather than to a sound and equitable judgment. To-day, when an experience fatal to our generation, but useful to our species, has determined the solution of this problem, it is permitted us to appeal from this erroneous judgment, the motives of which have since received more than one false application, owing to the institutions and customs which, for the peace and happiness of mankind, it was necessary to respect. It is permitted to revise a charge raised by disquiet, and sustained with desperation by a false philosophy, the enemy of wisdom, and yet destroyed before the supreme tribunal of experience.

Without doubt, knowledge is useful to man, it enlightens his reason and directs his halting steps along the difficult paths of a life both stormy and strewn with rocks. But just as that element, which is the first principle of life and of nature, embraces and consumes everything when it is scattered without discrimination and care, so the knowledge of philosophy, that is to say, human knowledge, disorders the progress of mankind, disorganises societies, and hurries them back into all the confusion of chaos, when it is spread abroad too abundantly, and presented in all its native brilliancy to the eyes of a multitude but little disposed to profit by its lessons, because it directs not its progress or its true application.

It is not enough to enlighten the mind only, we must instruct man's reason, and how shall we attain this end, which demands such preparation and arrangement, as regards a multitude so violently agitated by passions and tormented by the needs of life, so ill-fitted to receive the lessons of wisdom, so incapable of contemplation and thought, without the aid of those whose reason is always in a state of infancy.

The Egyptians, naturally a coarse people, were attached to any prejudice. In order to direct them, it was necessary rather to excite their senses than to appeal to their reason. Morality and religion, if in accord with policy supported by physical wonders, and concealed behind an ingenious veil of emblems, were better appreciated, were taken more directly to heart, more surely curbed their passions and vices, and encouraged more their virtues than if they had been taught without the veil of mystery. A people who could only be addressed figuratively were hardly fit to receive ideas moral, religious and political by the ordinary channels. It was necessary to have recourse to the disguise of fiction in order to lead captive their attention, and to inculcate in their minds those views which were necessary to their peace and happiness. Would it have done to have unrolled before their eyes the mystic table of those principles and truths which constitute the moral and political world? Would it have done to have followed the graduated and regular march of those axioms which form the science of governments? Would they not have been betrayed into error amidst this labyrinth? Would it have done to have guided them to the heights of metaphysics in order to enable them to penetrate into the sanctuary of the Godhead? Would not their reason have rebelled against the incertitude of probabilities? It was necessary for them to borrow the honesty of their idioms, in order to make them understand; it was necessary to descend to their level, so as not to frighten them, and to respect even their errors, in order to guide them towards the truth.

So likewise the Egyptian polity would have presented to us its chef d'œuvre of government had its character been well understood, if its progress, and its springs of action had not been hidden from our gaze. The disorders caused by civil wars, by invasions and persecution have made to disappear from this country even the ruins of its ancient spendour, and have left to our astonished eyes only scientific and religious monuments which have been recklessly looked upon as the relics of the pride and pomp of its rulers. Let us regard attentively the inimitable perfection of these monuments, the justice of their proportions and their symmetry, the vividness of their colour, which has triumphed over time. Let us think over the singular character which distinguished them in a manner strange, and then we shall form a just idea of the grandeur of the Egyptians, and of the transcendant genius which governed that remarkable people

Ordinary books are usually estimated for sale by auction at under one-fourth of their value, and a sale of class literature in a lump is considered successful if it realise even so much. The lots above quoted have evidently acquired renown, and been subjected to competition amongst learned and spirited lovers of our literature.

A new club is about to be formed in the City of London, for Masonic purposes, and also to supply accommodation to the brethren. The club is to be conducted on strictly Masonic principles. The names of the R.W. Lord Skelmersdale D.G.M. and the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor are at the head of the list.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex will hold its annual meeting on Thursday, 30th September. Bro. Alderman W. H. Hallett is to be the G.S.W. The Worshipful Mayor of Brighton, Bro. Alderman J. L. Brigden J.P., is to be G.J.W.

The members of the Burdett Coutts Lodge, No. 1278, who were graciously invited by the Baroness Burdett Coutts to attend her garden party, with their lady friends, visited Holly Lodge on Monday last, and spent a very pleasant evening.

CHARGES OF A FREEMASON.

By Cornelius Moore, Editor of The Masonic Review.

LODGES are of two kinds, "particular and general," or subordinate and Grand. A subordinate Lodge is the working department of the Craft, where the rituals are attended to and the degrees conferred. It is the door through which persons enter the Order; and to it is assigned the duty of instructing the members in the mystic art, and of exercising a wholesome discipline over those belonging to, or residing within, its jurisdiction. Subordinate Lodges are the constituents of the Grand Lodge, and should be represented in that body annually by its Master and Wardens.

Originally, the Craft had an inherent right to convene and hold a Lodge in any suitable place, where a sufficient number of members could be convened, and work was to be done. Such Lodge could only initiate, the other degrees being always conferred by the Grand Lodge. After the revival of Masonry, in 1717, the four old Lodges which constituted the Grand Lodge at that time, agreed to a change in these two particulars. That thereafter no new Lodge should be permitted to convene and work without a dispensation or charter, granted by the Grand Master or Grand Lodge; and that instead of the Craft being required to attend the Grand Lodge or General Assembly en masse, the particular Lodge should hereafter be represented in the Grand Lodge by their Masters and Wardens. In a very few years afterwards it was further agreed that, instead of the subordinate Lodges being permitted to confer the first degree only, they should, in the future, have the exclusive right to confer all the degrees; and this is now the practice in the York Rite in every country where Lodges are organised.

The necessary officers of a Lodge are the Worshipful Master, Senior Warden, Junior Warden, Treasurer, Secretary, Senior Deacon, Junior Deacon, and Tyler. The first five should always be elected; the rest may be appointed by the Worshipful Master, or elected by the members, as may be provided in the bye-laws. In some Lodges there are also Stewards, Chaplain, Organist, &c., but these are not essential.

A Grand Lodge is the highest judicial and legislative power known to Masonry. It is composed of its officers, together with the Masters and Wardens of all the Lodges in any given State, Kingdom, or Territory. The officers of a Grand Lodge are: Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, Senior Grand Warden, Junior Grand Warden, Grand Treasurer, and Grand Secretary. It is usual, however, to have several additional officers as subordinates, as may be provided for in the Constitution of the Grand Lodge. The officers above named are elected; while the subordinates are most generally appointed by the Grand Master. In former days the Grand Master appointed all the officers of the Grand Lodge; but for a long time it has been the practice to elect the principal officers, and allow the Grand Master to appoint, or nominate, the subordinates; but these things are usually provided for in the Constitution.

A Grand Lodge has the exclusive right to prescribe laws, rules, and regulations for the government of the subordinate Lodges within its jurisdiction; "provided, always that the landmarks be carefully preserved." Its legislation must not infringe on these; they are unalterable. The solemn compact between the four old Lodges in London, existing and working by immemorial custom, and the Grand Lodge of England at its reorganization, expressly provides that these "old landmarks" shall never be changed; and the officers of all Grand and subordinate Lodges, at their installation, solemnly engage to support and preserve unchanged these ancient charges and regulations.

In the trial of Masonic offences, the Grand Lodge holds original jurisdiction in the case of its own members, but only appellate in all others. It has the power of granting charters and dispensations, and may revoke them for good cause. It may remove the Master or Wardens of a subordinate Lodge from their office, for good cause shown. It may adopt a Constitution and rules for its own government, provided it does not trespass upon the "old landmarks;" and it should exercise a general superintendence of the Craft within its jurisdiction. In short, it is supreme in all that relates to Masonry, within the limits of the landmarks, and the powers granted to it by its Constitution. But it may not invade the inherent or reserved rights of individual Masons, or of subordinate Lodges. Its Constitution, however, is the best exponent of its prerogatives; and it should rarely venture to exercise a power not especially vested in it by that instrument.

The condition of society, as well as conventional rules, has materially changed since the "ancient times" mentioned in the text. The external character and aspects of Masonry have altered too; and while its changeless principles and absolute laws remain as they ever were, the prudential rules and regulations have been modified to accommodate a different condition of society. It will be observed that the Charge does not insist upon an absolute compliance with the ancient rule. It states what was the usage "in ancient times," as an example that it would be well to follow as far as practicable; but does not intimate that it is always to be strictly enforced without reference to the social changes and different habits of the various people, nations, and ages, in which Masonry prevails. It may be laid down as a rule of action, that Masons are expected to attend the Lodge of which they are members, regularly, if possible, but certainly as often as paramount claims upon their time and attention will permit. God has the first claim upon us; our families and country next. But we can serve the cause of humanity by attending to the duties incumbent upon us as Masons, and therefore we should make it a rule of action to be as regular in attendance at the Lodge as possible. At stated meetings especially, there should be a full attendance of the members of that particular Lodge, that its business and interests may be properly attended to. There is much to learn, as well as much to do at every meeting; and members should permit no trivial matter to prevent them enjoying the privilege or discharging the duty. Remember what the rule was "in ancient times," and observe it as far as circumstances will permit.

This paragraph reveals some of the most vital principles of the ancient landmarks of Masonry; and it should be carefully studied until it is fully understood, and its important and imperative requirements deeply engraven upon the memory of every Mason.

First. It tells what kind of men we may admit as members among us: they must be good and true. This language hardly needs an attempt at exposition, for all know what is meant by a good man. An intemperate man, a profane man, a dishonest man, is not a good man in any sense of the word. A good man is such an one as is described in the first Charge—one who "obeys the moral law;" one whose whole life, spirit, conversation and practice, accord with the divine requirements of the "great Light in Masonry." That moral law is the rule and standard of human action, and moral conduct must be judged in the light of that law. If by such a criterion he can be called a good man, he is in so far qualified to become a Mason. The heart, which gives tone and character to the actions, must be right; there the preparation must begin; goodness there will be shown in the life, just as the stream reveals the character of the fountain from which it emanates. He must be true, as well as good; one to be relied on when circumstances require firmness. His fortitude and integrity will both be tested; and he must be of that material which adheres to principle, and maintains its integrity whatever may be the consequence. If it be asked, in view of this requisition, "Who among us are proper material for the mystic building?" we reply, let each one answer for himself; but all may be, and all ought to be.

It is to be feared that this imperative rule is too frequently violated. Profane men are sometimes admitted because they are "clever fellows," or kind hearted, or have warm and influential personal friends in the Lodge. We can't find it in our hearts to say no, though aware we are violating a fundamental law of Masonry, which we have solemnly engaged to preserve inviolate. How often we forget our duty, or smother its demands for recognition! No wonder the fathers of the Craft left to us this positive injunction, that these rules are "to be read at the making of new brethren, or when the Master shall order it." They well understood human nature, and knew that in these important matters it was necessary that we should often be reminded of our duty. It should be laid down as a rule, that a man who wilfully violates God's law is not a suitable candidate for Masonry, and should not be admitted. A bad man (and this is the opposite of good) is unfit to be a Mason. An unstable, timid, prevaricating man; one who will adhere to a friend or a cause in the sunshine of prosperity, but forsake them when the storm comes down, should never be admitted. He is not a true man: he may be true for a season, or while circumstances are favourable; but in the day of trial his courage and constancy will both fail, and the cause and its friends will be deserted together. If this rule had been strictly observed, the waves of Anti-Masonry might have beaten against our fortress in vain; instead of scattering the Craft like the leaves of the forest, it would only have driven them into closer compact around our venerable temple, and thus strengthened instead of weakened the edifice. "Good men and true," and none else, should be admitted.

Second. They must be "free born." The Grand Lodge of England has, within the last few years, substituted "free man," instead of "free born," thus, in our opinion, striking at a most vital principle which that body was especially bound to protect, and setting an example of the most pernicious tendency. If a Grand Lodge can change one of these fundamental laws it may another, until nothing is left of Masonry but the name, and even that may be bartered away for a more popular and modern appellation. The principle in the text is borrowed from one laid down by the Supreme Architect in the economy of salvation. The world was to be blessed through the "seed of Abraham;" that is, through his lineal descendants a priceless blessing was to be given—the Prince of Peace was to come. Abraham had a son by a woman who was his slave; but not being "free born," that son could not be the channel through which the blessing could be given: and God saw proper to perform a miracle in order that the genealogy of Shiloh might not be tainted with the ignominy of bondage. Personally and morally Ishmael was as good and pure as Isaac, but the prestige of slavery rested on his name and birth, and the high distinction of being the progenitor of the world's Redeemer must be conferred upon another.

So Masonry requires candidates for its honors to have been free by birth: no taint of slavery or dishonor must rest upon their origin;—as unsullied by birth as they are in character. This is a landmark in Masonry, and must not be trifled with by any authority known to the Order. We should remember that it is our duty to preserve Masonry intact; not to alter or modify it to suit the ever changing views of men.

Third. Persons admitted members must also be of "mature and discreet age." It will be observed that no particular age is named; and for reasons that an arbitrary rule in such a case is not always a sure one. The object aimed at was to prevent young persons, whose judgments had not yet matured, and who were not yet of sound discretion, from being admitted. Some persons of eighteen are of riper judgment than others of twenty-five; and hence Washington and Warren, and many in former years, when the old landmarks were more carefully observed that at present, were admitted under the age of twenty-one. Within the last one hundred and fifty years, the age has varied in different countries, at different times. Some times twenty-eight was fixed on as the proper age; sometimes twenty-five; at the present day, twenty-one is generally the period fixed. But in many parts of Europe, persons under the age of twenty-one are sometimes admitted. We should remember that the applicant must be of "mature and discreet age," whether that be eighteen or twenty-five.

Fourth. "No bondman" must be admitted. He must not only be free by birth, but free in fact; free to go where his inclinations or judgment may lead him; free to judge for himself, to be master of his own time, and to contract and bind himself in obligations to others. If he his not a free man he cannot be made a free Mason for he can take upon himself no responsibility.

Fifth. "No Woman." Strange, and various and fanciful, have been the reasons assigned for this prohibition; but to the considerate Craftsman there is a sufficient reason in the nature of the institution and character of its rituals. It were enough to recall the fact that the Craft at first, and until a comparatively recent period, were engaged in an arduous mechanical employment. They were in the forest, felling, hewing, and preparing timber; in the quarries, digging out, squaring and fitting great stones. These again were to be transported a greater or lesser distance, and constructed into buildings—all requiring much rugged exposure and great physical labour. Would it be proper and suitable for women to engage in such a calling? They would be as much out of their natural sphere of action as rugged men would be in superintending the refined and delicate arrangements of the household. Hence, from regard for her natural physical weakness and refined sensibilities, she was exempted from the severe and laborious duties of the ancient Craftsmen.

Again: the rituals and ceremonies of the Order forbid the presence of woman. And though there be nothing in them improper for men of the most refined sensibilities, yet the nature of women, and the relation she sustains to the other sex, render it improper for her to mingle in the mystic labours of the Lodge room. Her relations to man, as wife, mother, sister or daughter, would forbid her presence. The place and the occupation are both unsuited to her nature. And as Masonry cannot be changed to accommodate itself to her condition, the law proclaiming her exclusion is as unrepealable as that of the Medes and Persians. If these reasons are not sufficient to satisfy the objection, we must recur to the fact that the law excludes her, and that of itself is enough. It may be retorted that the above reasons are not sufficient—that there is no reason for it; but the answer still holds good—the law forbids it. The law was made for us, not we for the law; we are compelled to take it as it is, and abide by it.

Sixth. They must not be "immoral or scandalous men, but of good report." This is a plain and sensible requirement, and one that commends itself to the judgment and approval of every well-meaning and reflecting man. To admit men who are immoral in their conduct, would be introducing antagonisms into the Lodge. It would bring together discordant principles, that, instead of perpetuating peace and harmony in the Craft, would produce confusion and discord. The Lodge is no place for an immoral man. The Holy Bible is there as the rule of faith and practice: the prayer is heard, and God is recognised there: the most important and sacred duties of life are inculcated; and the glorious doctrines of the resurrection by a redeeming power, and an immortal and ever blessed existence in a future world are taught and enforced there. The solemn responsibilities of man as a social being, and his still higher responsibilities to his Creator, are the themes of the Lodge room and the subjects of illustration. The spirit of purified affection and brotherly regard,—of charity in its broadest, deepest, highest sense, which ought always to pervade that sacred retreat of disinterested friendship, would repel immorality from its very threshold. Let it never be forgotten, then, that no immoral man must ever be admitted.

Nor "scandalous." This is simply a deeper degree of immorality. Men who are not only immoral, but who glory in it—make their boast of it—before the world, and thereby are properly termed "scandalous," should have no place in the Craft: they are intellectually, morally, and socially unfit for it. "Must be." Reader, the requirements and prohibitions in this Charge are not optional with us, to observe or violate them. They are imperative—they must be observed, for such is the language used.

"Of Masters, Wardens, Fellows, and Apprentices.—All preferment among Masons is grounded upon real worth and personal merit only; that so the lords may be well served, the brethren not put to shame, nor the Royal Craft despised; therefore, no Master or Warden is chosen by seniority, but for his merit. It is impossible to describe these things in writing, and every brother must attend in his place, and learn them in a way peculiar to this fraternity."

Only candidates may know that no Master should take an Apprentice, unless he has sufficient employment for him, and unless he be a perfect youth, having no maim or defect in his body, that may render him incapable of learning the art, of serving his Master's lord, and of being made a brother, and then a Fellow Craft in due time, even after he has served such a term of years as the custom of the country direct; and that he should be descended of honest parents; that so, when otherwise qualified, he may arrive to the honour of being the Warden, and then Master of the Lodge, the Grand Warden, and at length the Grand Master of all the Lodges, according to his merit.

No brother can be a Warden until he has passed the part of a Fellow Craft; nor a Master until he has acted as a Warden; nor Grand Warden unless he has been Master of a Lodge, nor Grand Master unless he has been a Fellow Craft before his election, who is also to be nobly born, or a gentleman of the best fashion, or some eminent scholar, or some curious architect, or other artist, descended of honest parents, and who is of singular great merit in the opinion of the Lodges. And for the better and more honourable discharge of his office, the Grand Master has a power to choose his own Deputy Grand Master, who must be then, or must have been formerly, the Master of a particular Lodge, and has the privilege of acting whatever the Grand Master, his principal, should act, unless the said principal be present, or interpose his authority by a letter.

These rulers and governors, supreme and subordinate, of the Ancient Lodge, are to be obeyed in their respective stations by all the brethren according to the old Charges and Regulations, with all humility, reverence, love, and alacrity.

Distinctions of birth and fortune are unknown in Masonry, for one of the first principles taught us is, that the internal and not the external qualifications of a man are what constitutes his fitness to be made a Mason. Is he a "good man and true," not "is he rich and honourable," is the question asked. It makes no difference whether he is the son of a president or a peasant; whether he is robed in broadcloth, or clothed with homespun, so his heart and head be right.

So, too, in the selection of officers for a Lodge. Promotion is, or should be, the reward of merit, not the result of favoritism. The subjects of inquiry should be: has he the capacity for government; is he prudent, discreet, courteous, yet firm; does he understand the laws, usages, and customs of the fraternity; has he studied the ancient Charges and Constitutions; is he familiar with the rules and regulations of the Grand Lodge? Is he master of the work? Does he understand the use of the instruments, and has he a proper appreciation of their sublime teaching? Does he fully understand the spirit and genius of the Order; and has he illustrations and resources at command so to work that "the brethren may not be put to shame, nor the Royal Craft despised?" These are the questions that should be asked in searching for the best material to fill the several stations in a Lodge, and especially for the office of Master. These qualifications are a sine qua non; if they are found united with education, refinement, a good address, and suavity of manners, so much the better; but education and refinement alone, will not supply the place of these Masonic qualifications.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION FOR AGED FREEMASONS AND WIDOWS OF FREEMASONS.

BY special invitation of Bro. Terry, a few of the supporters of the above Institution repaired to Croydon on the 30th ultimo, for the purpose of affording the inmates a little amusement. The day being particularly fine, and the arrangements of the indefatigable Secretary perfect, full scope was given for consummating the pleasure anticipated by the annuitants and visitors. After ample justice had been done to the tea, superintended by Mrs. Terry, the party inspected the dwellings and grounds, and were particularly delighted with the improved condition and lovely aspect of the garden, by the recent addition of plants and trees, so profusely and graciously presented by Bro. Cathush. The inmates and guests having assembled in the Lodge Room of the Institution, the amusements were enjoyed by the old folks with a heartiness gladdening to the contributors, amongst whom were Madame Thaddeus Wells, Mrs. Strong and lady friend (whose name we could not catch), the Misses Strong, Terry, Barry, Constable and Mrs. Webster; the brethren were Bros. Thaddeus Wells, John Stevens, Barry, and Constable. Madame Wells sung several songs, with her wonted ability and sweetness, whilst Bro. Stevens and his son contributed the comic portion of the entertainment, in songs, readings, and recitations, in fact, each individual succeeded in the attempt to amuse, to the intense satisfaction of the inmates, whose faces were radiant with joy. A vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. and Madame T. Wells for their kind assistance. One of the male annuitants proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Terry, for the treat he had afforded them, both by the concert and the liberal supply of fruits and wines; this was promptly seconded by one of the sisters, and carried amidst acclamation. Bro. Terry briefly returned thanks, assuring the inmates and friends that no stone should remain unmoved to secure their comfort and appreciation of his exertions. Bro. Dr. Strong desired to convey the thanks of the annuitants to those ladies and brethren who had assisted in the evening's pleasure, and although they were amateurs their efforts were highly appreciated.

This, we understand, is the first anniversary of what we may term Bro. Terry's treat to the old folks, and we go heart and hand with him, hoping to see many such happy unions. They cannot fail to be productive of good in various ways. We congratulate Bro. Terry in holding the sincere affection and regard of the annuitants, and commend him for his genial kindness to those whose interests he serves so well. One circumstance was particularly noticable; those who, from illness or age, could not attend the concert, were not overlooked. Bro. Terry tended them personally, with the wines and fruit provided. May he, in his declining years, surrounded with affluence, find a solace in the affection of his children, carrying out the example of their father. The party, numbering about forty, returned to town soon after nine p.m., highly gratified with the afternoon's proceedings

Obituary.

BRO. DAVID BRANDWOOD.

ON Sunday afternoon the mortal remains of Bro. D. Brandwood, P.M. Lodge of Faith, No. 344, Radcliffe, near Manchester, were committed to their last resting-place, in St. Thomas's Churchyard, Radcliffe. Preceding the hearse a number of brethren marched to the churchyard, Bro. E. Whittaker (Farnworth), P.P.G.D.C. East Lancashire, officiating as director of ceremonies. Our late brother, up to twelve months ago, held the post of manager and secretary to the Radcliffe and Pilkington Gas Company, and failing health led to his resignation. He was in his 62nd year.

OUR FREEMASONRY—THE OLD HIGH GRADES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In my first letter upon this subject I referred Bro. Buchan to two MSS., which themselves prove the antiquity of the system of the three degrees, and their identity with the present first three ceremonials; I cannot conceive what more he wants; and if he will not acknowledge evidence when he sees it, then it is useless to argue. The same may be said about his comments on the existence of the Royal Arch degree, which I showed to be alluded to by the 1721 Masonic Rosicrucians. The history of the so-called high grades is confessedly a very difficult subject, and I find, upon further reference to my papers, and to some recent private correspondence, that my memory has been a little treacherous upon some points of theory.

None of your correspondents have thought fit to attack my statements, that all ancient documentary evidence is opposed to the authenticity of the Mark degree in its present form as a degree; and equally so to the existence of any ancient historical connection between the Master Mason and the Royal Arch degree, and yet there is little doubt that the latter degree is Masonically of some considerable antiquity. As to the other two degrees, which were recognised by the Old York Masons, we have only the traditional teaching of the Templar Camps or Conclaves of Bath, Bristol, York, Manchester, and London, of which some were apparently not English, but of the Rite of Strict Observance, or the System of Baron Hunde. In Bath and Bristol we find the chief remains of this ancient teaching. Nearly all the ancient Rites were a System of Seven degrees; even the 33rd degree of the Ancient and Accepted Cumulative Scotch Rite makes admission of this fact. I was taught, many years ago, in these old conclaves, that it had always been considered there, that the Priestly Order of Holy Wisdom was the commander of the Templar, the Kadosh of the Knights Rosæ Crucis, and the Prince of the Royal Secret of the Swedish Knights of Palestine. Therefore the principle of cumulation is bad, and destructive of ancient landmarks. Upon this evidence we may tabulate four Rites, as follows:—

Scotch Rite	Old York & English	French Rite	German & Swedish
4.	Past Master
5. Heredom	Royal Arch	Red Cross	Novice
6. Rosy Cross	Heredom Templar	Rosæ Crucis	Knight of Palestine
7.	Templar Priest	Kadosh	Royal Secret

Moreover an examination of the Ritual, however much altered in transmission, will show that this is not mere theory. There is an identity of construction between them which indicates that they are not degrees which should be placed one upon another, but rites of one and the same derivation, altered by a transmission of some antiquity. The English Templar and Rose Croix had threefold trials of courage, constancy, and humility, whilst the Knights of Palestine is confessedly a Templar Order, and the Royal Order of H.R.M. Rosy Cross has made the same claim. In the Priest, Kadosh, and Royal Secret, there are many identical points; there are in each seven voyages, and seven pass-words, there are the same Templar claims, and the assertion that Masonry is a continuation of the Templar Order. In England the Arch, Templar and Priest were anciently presided over by a High Priest. Of all the Rites, that of the York and English Masons is the most decidedly trinitarian, and yet the Christianity of the "Holy Royal Arch Knight Templar Priest," is of a most philosophical kind, and was represented by the late Bro. Godfrey Higgins, in his Anacalypsis, to be of the most ancient derivation; it is, moreover, a degree of remarkable beauty and simplicity. The admission of a Past Master's degree in the Rite proves it not to be a very ancient system. Its certificate bears the formula: "Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars, the light that cometh from Wisdom shall never go out." The late Bro. William Carpenter some time ago called attention to the fact that the German Rosicrucians and the English brothers of the Rosie Cross of the seventeenth century were in all probability differing rites, holding opposing views on doctrine, and the relative value of revelation and scripture; which is saying precisely what we find to be the case in an examination of these rites.

Although the allusions of which I have made mention in 1721 and 1725 may only apply to the degree of Royal Arch, yet the variation in the four rites which I have mentioned seems to have been so marked between 1740 and 1750 that we must necessarily give them some number of years in which to arrive at this varying position. There can be no doubt that the speculative Masonry of the 1717 Grand Lodge was at some short distance of time of an operative character, the operations in the South, which had been going on for about a century, had not play in the North, and we must not therefore be met with Scotch Minutes, we must be faced with South of England's Minutes, and these, if found, would confirm the 1717 Masons. Rosicrucianism then all at once disappears, and Freemasonry takes its place. Whilst "Eugenius Philalethes jun" was dedicating "Long Livers," in Alchemical Language, to the Grand Lodge of England in 1721, the German Masonic Rosicrucians, still holding different views upon Christian teaching, were asserting, in 1745, in their three degrees that the original "Philalethes" was still living, and presiding over the Rosicrucian Colleges. All this is too remarkable to be passed over carelessly. Indeed, it is not at all unlikely that all through the latter half of the seventeenth century, the English Rosicrucians were speculative Masons, and vice versa, and, therefore, the ancient Masonic boast that Freemasonry originated the Templars, Knights of Malta, and Rosicrucians, may not be such an idle one as many believe. Although the Antient and Primitive Rite of Masonry derives from the Primitive Rite of Philalethes, yet it is no more free from the evils of a cumulative system than that of Lacorne's, now called the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. It is formed of the Rose Croix Rite, the Rosy Cross, the Rosicrucian, and Lacorne's, with extracts from all others, supplemented by an Egyptian system of philosophy, such as you are now so interestingly developing, in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, in the translations from Bro. J. L. Lauress, and a system of lectures, which give considerable information upon the old rites, and are of a most interesting nature. The object of the old Encampments of the three English high grades, in keeping up rites was, at first, probably to give their members what they had a right to expect, namely, admission to the same system of degrees, as they were practised in foreign countries; but they ended by adopting the cumulation of Lacorne, and in many cases forgot the true origin of their own customs. The old Camps have an unquestionable right to give everything, but in giving an Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite certificate they do themselves an injustice, by adopting a system without truth. They had only three Craft Grades, Past Master, the (place of which the Mark might fill), and three Rosicrucian Grades, and various synonymous ceremonies of other countries.

I remain, yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN YARKER, P.E.C. and Pt. R.G.C. of all the High Grades.

Manchester 31st July 1875.

MAGAZINES OF THE MONTH.

"THE State of the French Army" forms the subject of the leading article in Blackwood. The writer has clearly mastered all the details, so far as it was possible to do so, and the result is an able and succinct sketch of the military strength of France under the new law. Our readers will probably read with some surprise that the peace strength is less than a quarter of a million, and that in spite of all her efforts since the late war, that country has done so little in the way of reorganisation. The general belief, undoubtedly, is, that our neighbour is far stronger now than when, goaded by the nation he had ruled so long, Napoleon III. plunged into that unhappy struggle which cost him his throne and his country two fair provinces. But the picture drawn in this article places the matter in a different light, to that extent that we almost wonder how it was there could have been so terrible a scare in the spring of this year, lest war should again break out between the two great continental rivals. Part IV. of "The Dilemma" brings us into the full excitement of the mutiny, and the Residency of Mustaphabad, with Colonel and Mrs. Falkland, Brigadier and Mrs. Polwheadle, Yorkes, Captain Sparrow and others within its limits, is formally besieged by the mutineers. The native regiments mutiny, of course, and Yorke, being popular with his company, escapes with his life, but all are not so fortunate. "My Swan Song," we take leave to quote, it reads so prettily:—

To———

I.

Sing? How should I sing,
Maiden, for thy pleasure?
My harp hath many a broken string,
And few that keep the measure.

II.

Of its olden tones,
Should some faint chords linger,
Waking, ghost-like, in response
To a straying finger,—

III.

Blent, like sun and shower,
In false April weather,
Forth at once would pour
Tears and song together.

IV.

Defter hands fit lay
For thine ear must borrow;
Mine are weak and chill to-day,
And will be cold to-morrow.

There are two other contributions, one by the same pen as the above, which we strongly recommend to our readers' notice. The political article, which is a retrospect at the work of the Session, is well written, and, of course, favourable to the conduct of public affairs by the Conservative Ministry, but politics are no concern of ours,

We should like to see less serial fiction in Tinsley's. We have not a word to say against the three stories which have been current now for some months, indeed, we have expressed ourselves most favourably of all these, and this has been only a bare act of justice. But four, or even three novels are too many for any one to follow month by month. There is a tolerably certain prospect of the reader confounding them, and this sorry chance is the more to be avoided when, as in the case of these, each is so well worth following. We cannot say we welcome the appearance of the new serial, "A Star and a Heart," by Florence Marryat. It may suit some tastes perhaps, but we can feel but little sympathy with a vulgar heroine and a supient hero. As for "Magdalen Rochford," by Mrs. Alexander Fraser, we have tried very hard to reconcile the incidents of this tale with anything like the semblance of real life, but owing to our native obtuseness, to our general ignorance of men and things, or to some other cause, we have failed to trace her ideal to any basis of reality. Dr. Maurice Davies is perhaps less successful than usual in his "Social Status Quo," but his Troubadour Song, "Catalonia the Gay," is equal to any that have preceded it. The last stanza runs thus:

This alone I seek to know,
Why in love I sometimes fail?
Though no treacherous breezes blow
Through my heart in envious gale.
I would not with methods low
Her I dearly love assail,
Yet, a meek disciple, go
Where love's arts do still avail.
All is joy and glorious there,
'Mid brave knights and ladies fair.

Baily contains, among other entertaining matter, a brief memoir of Sir Henry Tufton, accompanying his portrait; a sketch by Amphion of the career of that fine old turfite, Mr. Merry, under the title of "Finis Coronat Opus;" a neatly written description of "Slapton Lea," and chapter xviii of "Frank Raleigh of Watercombe," who is again in disgrace with the terrible Dr. Twigg, and is expelled the school in consequence. The following, from "Our Van," is too good to leave unquoted:—

"Les enfants terribles have been a fruitful theme for many a year, but we think they increase and multiply. What said a young woman of tender years to her spiritual guide, the other day, on his questioning her as to her religious knowledge, the basis of which, of course, lay in the Catechism? Everything went on swimmingly until the question as to how many commandments there were elicited for answer a prompt 'nine.' The good priest smiled, as he patted the respondent's head, and told her she had forgotten—there were ten. 'Oh, yes!' gravely replied the young lady, 'I know there were ten, but there are only nine now.' This was rather awful, and the astonished divine could only find breath to say, 'My dear child, what do you mean?' 'I mean, father, that there really are only nine; for I heard cook say, yesterday, that when mamma went to town, on Wednesday, with Captain Douglas, she broke one!' The reverend gentleman means to give up catechising, or, at all events, restrict himself to the boy classes."

There is also a good story, connected with the late Government, as illustrating its economical tendencies, of a troop horse, which, on the petition of the officers and men of the Dragoon Guards, was, after twenty-six years' faithful service, allowed to be shot, instead of being sold into slavery. But the petition was only granted by "the Right Honorable E. Cardwell, on condition that credit be given to the country for the value of his hide!! And credit for three half-crowns was absolutely given to you, my British tax-payer, for the skin of your old servant."

We cannot speak too highly of the illustrations in Belgravia, nor are we less content with the literary matter. Mr. Sala suggests the execution of Major André as a fitting subject for Miss Thompson to pourtray. The reasons he urges are sensible enough, and will, doubtless, command themselves to most readers as sufficient. Nor is there any reason why, as Mr. Sala urges, the treatment of such a subject should be repulsive. A true artist will introduce into his picture nothing that will not bear criticism. We cannot say we feel any great enthusiasm about the subject, but we agree with Mr. Sala that, if properly handled by a talented painter, it might make a good picture. "From Paddington to Land's End," by the Editor, is a pleasantly written sketch, and so is Mr. William O'Brien's paper, headed "The Man of Speech." "Mr. Jangleby Dandrom" is the life-like sketch of a class of people whom we frequently meet in all parts of the country. "Our Home among the Vikings" is, we imagine, the first of a series of sketches of Norse life. But what has pleased us most in this number are the concluding chapters of "Sea-Bank Farm." The tale is not too long, so that the reader runs little chance of getting bewildered as to the principal personages. But it is a well-drawn story. The characters are natural, the incidents probable, and the dénouement equally so. The tale might have been prolonged, perhaps, but we question if, in such case, it would not have lost in force. "A Bad Black Dog" shows how they manage these animals in France.

There is, as usual, plenty of sound, sensible matter in Temple Bar. Of "Leah, a Woman of Fashion," we need say little, it has already earned for itself a high reputation among serial literature. Of the other contributions, however, there are several which are worthy of high commendation. Such are a description of "The Days of Henri Quatre," "Through the Canal,"—Suez Canal of course,—and "Laughing Madness." "Bitter Fruit," which is commenced this month, looks as though it would prove an attractive story. While, "Her Dearest Foe" is developing into a capital serial.

Colburn's New Monthly is noticeable for the commencement of two new tales, "Mary Barroughes" and "Master Martin," but as yet it were unjust to offer any opinion as to their merits or demerits. "To India and Back" is lively, if now and again somewhat mysterious, and no doubt, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will appreciate the writer's advice so freely tendered. "Calais Fair" is a well-drawn sketch, and so is that of the Triton River. The following is worth quoting:

AUGUST.

A ll Nature now is radiant, and gives forth
U nsparing treasures in a bounteous mood,
G reat blessings to the land in fruits and grain.
U ngrateful he who lightly passes by
S uch gifts, unmindful of that heavenly source:
T each us, O God, to love Thee thro' thy works!

We hope the author may prove a prophet, but thus far the season has not been very attractive.

We are getting on famously with "The Manchester Man," in Cassell's Family Magazine. Jabez Clegg is out of his apprenticeship, but is still retained in the service of, and remains under the same roof with Mr. Ashton, his employer. Moreover, but mainly at the intercession of Miss Ashton, he is instrumental in saving the life of his old rival, Laurence Aspinall, who, while showing off before the ladies, falls through the ice, and is within an ace of being drowned. There is a fully detailed account of "Education at Owen's College, Manchester," well worth looking into, for the institution has been steadily acquiring a sound reputation even from the very outset. "The Emigrant Ship's Matron" is also well written, and Phillis Brown conveys some excellent advice in "How to Nurse the Sick." "A Night's Work in the Crimean War" and "Hard Pressed—a Wolf Story" are exciting stories, especially the latter, in which Edgar Marston has a narrow shave for his life. "The next Public House" is, unhappily, too realistic. The unfortunate people who figure most prominently are to be seen in well nigh every part of London. "The Gatherer" has collected some excellent and most instructive notes, and Mr. Payne, who latterly has been favouring the readers of this periodical with his views on eating and drinking, throws out some valuable hints respecting the proper "Food for hot weather." We should not wish for a safer guide, in the matter of feeding, than Mr. Payne, and we trust he will add to the already considerable number of excellent hints for which we are indebted to him. We had almost forgotten to call attention to a paper on "Seal Hunting in Greenland North," which, short as it is, we feel sure will find many delighted readers. The other contributions are well worth reading, indeed, the whole number is to be commended.

We have remarked in the Leisure Hour as among the most interesting papers, that on "The Birds of London," by Henry Walker, F.G.S., the Rev. F. Arnold's account of "Port Royal," and Mr. Kingston's "Bristol: Now, and in the Olden Time." Nor must we pass unnoticed the sketch of Gillray in the series, now current, of papers on "Caricature and Caricaturists." Dr. Rimbault contributes another musical article, this time on "Welsh National Music." In its companion publication, Sunday at Home, we have read with pleasure the continuation of Dr. Eberheim's "Jewish life in the Time of our Lord," and Dr. Stoughton's "The Town and League of Schmalkalden."

THE DRAMA.

Recent Revivals.

NO novelty calling for notice at our hands has been produced recently, with the exception, perhaps, of Salthello Ovini, at the HAYMARKET, the noticeable point of which piece was its deserved and utter failure. English taste in burlesque has no doubt sunk to a low ebb; but it is still difficult to find a public fitted for the appreciation of a stupid piece of vulgar buffoonery, the fun of which was supposed to lie in a burlesque of the style, and an exaggeration of the manner of one who is probably the greatest actor of our time. The fact that Signor Salvini is a stranger should have protected him from insult of this kind; and no worse treatment could be offered to any man than to make him the theme of probably the worst burlesque ever written. It is annoying in the extreme to see a man of talent wasting his time on unworthy objects, and Mr. W. J. Hill striving to extract fun from this ponderous piece of dulness, was a sight for gods and men. The one consoling feature of the piece, was that its length of run was limited to two night.

Summer is naturally an idle time in the theatrical world. No man of sense who can avoid it will sit baking slowly in a theatre, amid the combined smells of gas and orange peel. It is therefore unreasonable to expect any manager to spend his time and money on the production of novelties which have no chance of attracting an audience, but as change is still necessary, recourse is had to the stock pices in the repertoire of the theatre, and for some weeks in the year playgoers are regaled on the stale pieces of the year, or the ten years before. There is one exception to this rule, at the GAIETY no remanets is ever permitted, and by frequent change of programme Mr. Hollingshead keeps up the attraction of his pretty theatre, at present devoted to English opera, with Miss Blanche Cole as Larline. Changes have been frequent at the HAYMARKET. After a short season of the pieces, which went so well under Miss Litton's leadership at the COURT THEATRE, The Rivals and As You Like It have been played, with casts comprising the honoured names of Mr. and Mrs. Vezin, Mr. and Mrs. Chippendale, Mr. Compton, and a lady whose reappearance in London we are glad to welcome — Miss Caroline Hill. At the QUEEN'S, Mr. Rignold has already thought it necessary to make some alteration, and Anne Clarke, instead of Claverty, forms the chief dish of the evening's entertainment. It is needless to say that Mr. Rignold still fills the part which he first created. The revivals of Money and the Ticket of Leave, unhappily rendered necessary by previous failures, have been noticed in these columns. Nemesis, at the STRAND, completes our list of réchauffés: but that list is sufficiently long to show that the inveterate theatre-goer must be sadly hungering for new pieces, and he would probably welcome even the productions of Dr. Veline.

FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE only subject to which the House of Lords devoted its attention on Friday, was one introduced by the Earl of Shaftesbury relative to Cotton Factory Labour in Bombay. To this the Marquis of Salisbury gave a satisfactory reply, and the subject then dropped. On Monday, the sitting was still shorter, but certain bills of importance were advanced, notably the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill, and the Employers and Workmen's Bill. On Tuesday, the sitting was equally short, but a considerable amount of business was done. The questions to which attention was drawn were the state of affairs on the West Coast of Africa, by the Earl of Carnarvon, and Unseaworthy Ships, by Earl Russell. There was also a short discussion on the Importation of Coolies, after which the House rose. On Thursday, the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill, with a new clause inserted, at the instance of the Lord Chancellor, and the Employers and Workmen's Bill were read a third time, and passed. The Militia Laws Consolidated Bill passed through Committee, and other measures were advanced a stage.

On Friday, in the House of Commons, a long debate ensued on the new Bill on Unseaworthy Ships, introduced by the Government. Among the speakers were Mr. Bates and Mr. Plimsoll, as well as the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The second reading was carried. At the evening sitting, a debate ensued on various subjects, after which the House went into Committee of Supply, and rose at two o'clock. There was an early sitting on Saturday, as the recess is advancing. The important business was again Supply, after which the case of Plimsoll and Bates was again discussed. A long and wordy warfare was the result, and after settling this the House rose at eight o'clock. On Monday, the new Bill of the Government on Unseaworthy Ships occupied the attention of the House in Committee. Sundry amendments were proposed, but the most important met with little favour in the House. After this there was an adjournment. On Tuesday, the subject of the Navy Estimates was discussed, and the various sums asked for were voted. On Wednesday, a long discussion, in which Messrs. Dodson and Gladstone took an important part, ensued on Supply, but what was required for the public service was voted, and, on the whole, we think the Government had the best of the fight. On Thursday, a considerable period of time was wasted, notably by Dr. Kenealy, who brought under notice the recent trial of Colonel Baker, and the sentence passed by Judge Brett. Then certain resolutions in Committee of Supply were agreed to, the Report on Ways and Means was brought up, and Mr. Smith introduced the Appropriation Act, which was read a first time immediately afterwards. On the Report on Unseaworthy Ships Bill, certain clauses were added at the instance of the Government, and the third reading will have been passed before these pages meet the eye of our readers. The same was done with the Agricultural Holdings Bill, and this, too, will have left the Commons before to-day.

The great event of the week has been the extension, by the Lord Mayor, of the usual civic hospitality, to the Ministers, towards the end of the Session. The Premier was present in person, as were also all the most important members of the Cabinet. The Civic Ruler offered his congratulations on the progress of public business, and Mr. Disraeli replied in his happiest vein, descanting at some length on what his Ministry had done, and the general prosperity of the country. It is needless to add that his remarks were well received, and that the speeches of the other ministers, Mr. G. Hardy, Mr. Ward Hunt and others were applauded by both sides. The Premier's exposition was very simple, but his record of the past year was highly satisfactory. Some mistakes may have been made by Government in the management of public business, but they seem to be immaterial, and the country generally appears to be satisfied with the working of the Ministry thus far.

Next week will be the festival of St. Grouse, and we look forward to hearing shortly of wonderful bags in different parts of the country. We trust the season will be considerably bettter than those of the last year or two. There has been time for the disease to die out, and reports are favourable as to the state of the birds.

The annual meeting at Shoeburyness of the National Artillery Association attracts far less notice than its sister institution at Wimbledon. There are many reasons why this should be so. Shoeburyness is not within walking distance of the West End. There are no International matches to watch, and, more important still, perhaps, individual skill and precision do not stand out so prominently in handling a cannon as in the use of firearms. But there is good steady work done by our Volunteer Artillerists, and this year, at least, if the work is harder, they can boast of having had finer weather than the Rifles. The principal prizes have yet to be shot for, but we note that the 1st detatchment of the 1st Cinque Ports has won the Prince of Wales's prize.

Following the grand banquet at the Mansion House to the foreign Mayors, burgomasters and others, who have come over to London to honour the Lord Mayor with their presence, and to which we referred last week, we note that on last Friday there was an International Municipal Ball, and that on Saturday there was a grand meet of all these very illustrious personages at the Alexandra Palace, there being a considerable number of people present, a somewhat indifferent concert to listen to, and a guard of honour from the Honourable Artillery Company to look at and admire. The day passed off most agreeably, and in the evening there was a reception at the Mansion House, at which everybody saw everybody enjoying himself or trying to do so. We vastly admire the hospitality of the present Lord Mayor, who every week seems to find out some new batch of guests to entertain.

Monday was a Bank Holiday, and the clerk of the weather must have thought he had spoiled sufficient of our outdoor pleasure this year to justify him in being somewhat more favourably disposed on this occasion to the seekers after pleasure. Accordingly, those for whom the holiday was not intended came out in their noisy thousands, making every green spot within a few miles of Charing Cross ring again with their very over-boisterous merriment. The Alexandra Palace secured the patronage of some seventy thousand, while over fifty thousand favoured the older palace at Sydenham. Hampstead Heath was, of course, thronged, while numerous excursion trains to Margate, Ramsgate, Dover, Brighton, and other well known watering places, accessible in two or three hours from London, carried off whole multitudes besides. The day, in fact, was one of unbroken pleasure, albeit rough generally, and at times uproarious. As for the bank clerks, &c., for whose behoof these holidays were chiefly intended, they had a day's rest from labour, no doubt, but unless they got away into some quiet country lanes, far from the tumult of Park and Palace, we question if they found much "pleasure."

The Cricket Week at Canterbury appears, thus far, to have been a great success. The first match, All England v. Kent and Gloucestershire, ended in a victory for the latter by six wickets. In their first attempt, England amassed 220 runs, the principal contributors being Messrs. A. J. Webbe (30), I. D. Walker (38), A. Greenwood (54), R. H. A. Mitchell (22), and A. Ridley (18), with E. Pooley not out (31). In their second innings, however, they collapsed for 68; A. Shaw (21), E. Pooley (14), and Mr. I. D. Walker (15) being the chief scorers. For the allied counties, Mr. W. G. Grace made 19 and not out 12, Lord Harris (38), Mr. G. F. Grace (10), Mr. Yardley (51), F. Penn (48 and 0), and Mr. H. Renny-Tailyour (54 and not out 6). The second match M.C.C. v. Kent is, at the time of writing, yet unfinished, but the latter, so far, has the best of it, having made 262—W. Penn (39), W. Yardley (28), Lord Harris (53), and F. Penn (101). M.C.C. were all out for 108 in their first innings, and have lost five wickets for 161 runs in their second essay. The "leviathan" made 0 in his first, and 35 in his second innings, Mr. Wyatt (13 and 17), Mr. I. D. Walker (31 and 21), and Mr. Fryer (18 and not out 37), being the other principal contributors. It will be noticed that Mr. Gilbert Grace has, this year, made fewer three figure scores than in previous years, and this will, doubtless, affect his average. As a bowler, however, he appears to have been even more successful than formerly. There is little else to record in the way of cricket. Indeed, August is the close of the legitimate season, and there remains now only a few important county matches to play. Yachting, however, is in full swing. The Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta has been held this week, while those of the Royal Victoria Y.C. and Royal Albert Y.C. will follow next week and the week after. Brighton Race Meeting passed off pleasantly, and, so too, the International Polo and Pigeon Meeting, held at the same place.

The death of Hans Christian Andersen, the great Danish writer, is not only a loss to the country of which he was so conspicuous a literary ornament, but to the whole civilised world. As a writer of tales for the young of all ages, we shall be puzzled to find his equal. We have said "young of all ages" advisedly, for though his tales are designed especially for the young, they are almost as delightful to adults. We have devoted many a leisure hour to Andersen, and we can conscientiously say that we have never risen from such brief studies of his pages without feeling the most profound delight.

Ireland is now in the thick of the O'Connell Centenary celebration. Dublin especially is in a grand fever of excitement, all parties vieing with each other in doing honour to the mighty dead. Nor is the Lord Mayor behind his fellow countrymen. The first of a series of banquets to be held in connection with this fête was given in the King's Room, at the Mansion House, on Thursday, and must have been a grand success. Among the most distinguished guests were Cardinal Cullen, Prince Radzivil, the Earl of Granard, and a considerable number of Roman Catholic prelates, both Irish and foreign. The toast "to the memory of O'Connell," was drunk in solemn silence, the other leading toasts being the healths of the Pope, the Queen, and the Prince and Princess of Wales. There was held, on the same evening, a grand concert, at which Mr. D. F. McCarthy's National Ode, composed for the occasion, and giving a sketch of O'Connell's life, was read amid many expressions of pleasure. The songs that were sung were chiefly selected from Moore's Melodies, and were received most enthusiastically.

We allude to the trial of Colonel Baker, only for the purpose of expressing our surprise that any of the female sex, whom the papers think may rightly be described as "ladies," should have shown anxiety to be present. We have read of two ladies having forced an entrance to the Court through the windows. It is only a sense of decency which can exclude women from a public court of justice, and it is among ladies that we expect to find the sense of decency most developed. Such is our view, at least, though it may, perhaps, be an absurdly old-fashioned one. We suppose the evidence was expected to be somewhat of what is commonly called a "spicier" kind than usual, and the "ladies" went accordingly; but we should be sorry to number any such among our female, much less among our lady, acquaintances.

What is a vegetable? Our readers will look, perhaps, with amazement at our propounding so absurd a question. Yet certain articles have lately been described as vegetables which, within our experience, at least, have never been so described before. Two gentlemen, Messrs. W. J. Hurlstone and J. Francis, amateur comedians, very kindly agreed to give their services in a farce on the occasion of the benefit of the acting manager of the Greenwich Theatre, Mr. Crofton. When they appeared on the stage, however, they were saluted, from the neighbourhood of the boxes and dress circle, with, firstly, a cauliflower, which struck Mr. Hurlstone on the shoulder, and then with a shower of "other vegetables," these "other vegetables" turning out to be pigs' trotters and saveloys, one of which struck Mr. Francis on the right foot. This seems to us to be a most unfortunate confusion between certain highly respectable representatives of the animal and vegetable worlds, and has led us to ask the question, in all sober seriousness, "What is a vegetable?" Saveloys are popularly supposed to be made of—well, we must not be too ready to describe the several component parts of these attractive "vegetables." As for pigs' trotters, they are glutinous, and as there may be, for aught we know to the contrary, a vegetable glue, it is possible, perhaps, to see a connection between a cauliflower, or a cabbage, and a pig's foot. This is the only solution we have to offer in answer to our own question, and we fear this is but a lame one.

The sale by auction of a collection of wild beasts is a novelty but seldom met with, yet Mander's well-known collection was brought to the hammer on Wednesday, at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. The brutes went, in most cases, for next to nothing, the bidding being very slack, and the prices realised far below what might have been expected. The collection was a very good one, and included lions and lionesses, a gnu or "horned horse," a pair of Tasmanian "devils," a red and blue faced gorilla from Abyssinia, camels, bears, birds, &c. A pair of lion cats fetched one hundred and fifty pounds, a lioness in cub a hundred and fifteen, a blue faced mandril, which had cost one hundred and ninety pounds, realised only one hundred and five, while the gnu fetched fifty. On the other hand, one bear went for twenty-six, and another for only twenty, shillings, and one fine camel was knocked down for four pounds ten shillings. As the sale was an unreserved one, there was no help for it, and thus many a splendid specimen was allowed to go dirt cheap. The buyers, however, have no reason to grumble at the good bargains they made.

From abroad, the news as regards the Herzegovina is far from reassuring. When we see it announced by telegram that the Ambassadors of England and Russia at Vienna have interrupted their leave of absence, and have returned to their post, in order to the better watch the progress of events, and that Prince Milan of Servia has held a conference with the German and Russian Ambassadors, we may be sure it is a case of no smoke without fire. The trouble may be promptly suppressed, especially if the Great Powers adopt a common course of action. But if differences arise, if the ill-conditioned Montenegrins, the Servians and others in the neighbourhood are allowed directly or indirectly to send aid to the insurgents, the Eastern question will come forward with all its terrible difficulties. We may anticipate, however, that the Earl of Derby will do all he can to allay the storm without sacrificing one jot of the dignity of Great Britain. If the Turks are left to themselves, and recruiting abroad is promply put an end to, probably the insurrection will be put down, and the storm will blow over. As for the Carlists, there is little doubt that they have been dealt some tremendous blows of late, but they are still strong enough to keep their enemies at bay. They can still bear a good many more defeats before they are ultimately and decisively overthrown, if, indeed, that consummation, so devoutly to be wished by the Alphonsists, shall ever be arrived at. There has been a little excitement in the Paris Municipal Council, but there is little else to record.

CLOSING.—In the performance of a ceremony so solemn and momentous as the closing of a Masons' Lodge, every member has a lively interest. At the usual report, preceded by an inquiry involving the best interests of Masonry, the Brethren are again reminded what is the chief care of a Mason. the avenues to the Lodge are carefully inspected by the meridian officer, whose knowledge and fidelity have entitled him to the confidence of the Brethren, and after he has publicly proclaimed the security of the Lodge, the business of closing proceeds. The particular duties of the leaders of the respective bands of Craftsmen are rehearsed. At the command of the Worshipful Master, The Senior Warden performs his duty, after seeing that the Brethren have received their due proportion of Masonic instruction and improvement; and the whole concludes with an impressive address to the Brethren on their respective duties as men and Masons, when pursuing their accustomed avocations in the world; and with a fervent petition to the Deity, supplicating his blessing on the Fraternity, wheresoever dispersed under the wide canopy of Heaven. Such is the high ground which Masonry assumes from the extreme purity of the system. We are bound, therefore, to reflect that as our station is exalted, so ought our conduct to be exemplary; for the world regards us with a scrutinizing eye; and, which is of more consequence, we are under the constant inspection of the All-Seeing Eye of God. If we would adorn the system which is our pride and boast, nay, if we would not expose it to contempt, we must discharge the relative and social duties of life with a precision at least equal to the most virtuous of our fellow-men; for as the science we profess may be ornamented by our rectitude of demeanour, so will it infallibly be disgraced should we be found deficient in any of the obligations which are incumbent on us, in our respective characters of husband and father, citizen and subject, neighbour and friend.—Hebrew Leader.

MASONIC HALL AT GRIMSBY.

THE following particulars of laying the foundation stone of the new Masonic Hall at Grimsby, are gathered from The Grimsby Observer and Humber News, of 4th August:—

Last Monday was probably the most important, and more deserving to be remembered, of any day in the modern history of Grimsby Freemasonry, for seldom indeed is it that a public demonstration of the character and ceremonial surrounding the proceedings that then took place is witnessed in this town; and though much of the extraordinary interest manifested in the events of the day arose from curiosity, yet the magnificence, combined with the solemnity of the display, lent its peculiar attractiveness to the occasion. The "Pelham Pillar" Lodge was established, at Chapman's Hotel, in September 1859, and having been for three years conducted at that house, the Lodge was for various reasons, and during the Mastership of Bro. Whalley, removed to premises in Bullring Lane, where it is still held. It was in 1867, when Bro. Copeland was W.M., that the necessity for having a Masonic Hall was first mooted, but at that time the site required could not be obtained and the question laid dormant until a fresh movement was started in 1873 by Bro. Hadfield, who was then W.M., and who manifested a special interest in the matter. Since then the proposal has gained in strength, until a few months ago the "Pelham Pillar" Masonic Hall Company was formed, the chief promoters being Bro. Hadfield and the other P.M.'s. The site of the proposed hall is at the junction of George-street and Osborne-street. On this site, as many old inhabitants of Grimsby will remember, stood a hawthorn tree, in whose branches the school boys of bygone years have disported themselves. Additional historic celebrity will attach to the whitethorn tree, now removed, in the fact that the working tools, and the box containing them, used in the stone-laying ceremony on Monday last were manufactured out of it. The brethren on this occasion permitted the uninitiated in Masonic mysteries to be present, and for the especial convenience and accommodation of ladies a platform was kindly provided, from which about 300 fashionably attired ladies viewed the proceedings, adding a charm to their picturesqueness and brilliancy. A profuse display of flags also enlivened the scene. The hall is estimated to cost £2,635. Mr. T. G. Barker is the architect, and Mr. Thomas Drew the builder. Mr. Hasten Clark has been appointed secretary to the company, and Mr. A. Bates solicitor. A glass jar, deposited in a cavity cut in the stone, contained copies of the Grimsby Observer, News and Herald, a memorandum of the articles of the company, a programme of the day's proceedings, a scroll giving a brief history of the company, and some current coins of the realm.

After a Provincial Grand Lodge of Emergency had been opened at the Mechanic's-hall, the brethren formed and marched to the site of the proposed building in procession.

Arrived at the entrance to the site, the brethren divided to the right and left, facing inwards, leaving an avenue for the Prov. Grand Standard Bearer, the Prov. Grand Sword Bearer, Bro. Sutcliffe, and the deputy of R.W. Prov. G.M., who passed up to the foundation stone, followed by the officers of Prov. Grand Lodge and other acting officers. The inscription is as follows:—"This stone was laid by Bro. John Sutcliffe P.M. P.P.S.G.W., 2nd August 1875." The officiating brethren having duly taken their positions round the stone, the Prov. Grand Chaplain invoked a blessing on the undertaking, the Chaplain and brethren alternately reciting the psalm, "Except the Lord build the house," &c. The R.W.D.P.S.M., Bro. W. H. Smyth, having read his dispensation appointing Bro. John Sutcliffe to officiate in laying the stone according to ancient Masonic custom, Bro. Sutcliffe stated that they were assembled to lay the corner or foundation stone of a building to be hereafter erected, and which was specially intended to accomodate Masons, the Craft in Grimsby having made great progress, and their numbers and importance now rendered a Masonic Hall desirable and necessary. The Superintendent of Works then presented the plans of the proposed edifice to the officiating officer, who, after examining, approved and returned them to the Superintendent. The Secretary (Bro. H. Clark) next read a copy of the document placed in the phial deposited in the cavity of the stone.

The Treasurer (Bro. M. Dawson) placed some current coins of the realm in the phial, which he deposited in the cavity of the stone, which the officiating officer saw properly secured with cement. Bro. Acey's band was in attendance, and played a solemn dirge whilst the stone was being lowered by three distinct drops, the last leaving it suspended about 10 inches from its bed.

Bro. John Hadfield, advancing to the officiating officer and presenting him with a beautiful silver trowel, said: Right Worshipful Sir, you are very well aware that the room in the old Masonic Lodge in Grimsby has now become far too small to accommodate the brethren; therefore we propose to erect this building in order to make room for more gentlemen who wish to become members; and I, being chairman of the company who are about to erect this hall, have been requested by my brother directors to present you with this trowel for the purpose of laying the foundation stone. In presenting you with this trowel I am simply paying you the compliment which the brethren of the province think you deserve, knowing, as they do, how long you have been a good and faithful Freemason—(hear, hear)—how long you have fought the battles of the Craft, and how long you have always done your best to assist the suffering widows and orphans. In presenting you with this trowel, and in wishing you health, long life, and prosperity, I am sure a responsive throb of joy will emanate from every Mason in this assembly. (Applause.)

The trowel, which was supplied by Mrs. Webber, widow of Bro. Webber, bore the inscription—"Presented to Bro. John Sutcliffe P.M. P.P.S.G.W. on the occasion of laying the foundation stone of the new Masonic Hall, Grimsby. Monday, August 2nd, 1875."

The Officiating Officer having spread the cement, the stone was slowly lowered to its bed, the band playing "Rule Britannia." A flourish of trumpets then indicated that the stone was placed on its base. "God Bless the Prince of Wales" was then played. The Officiating Officer then directed the bearers of the plumb rule, the level, and the square to the performance of their respective duties. The first declared the stone to be perfect and trustworthy, the second well founded, and the third that it was true. The O. O., "having full confidence in their skill in the Royal art," proceeded to complete the work, knocking the stone thrice with a mallet, and declaring it properly laid in accordance with the ancient rules of architecture. After a performance by the band, corn in a cornucopia, wine in a ewer, and oil and salt in vessels, were handed in turn to the O. O., and poured by him on the stone. In doing so he said:—"I scatter corn upon this stone as an emblem of plenty, and may the blessings of bounteous Heaven be showered upon us, and may our hearts be filled with gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts."—"I pour wine upon this stone, the emblem of joy and gladness. May our hearts be made glad with the influence of divine truth, and may virtue flourish as a vine."—"I pour oil as an emblem of peace. May peace and harmony, goodwill and brotherly love, abound amongst us all."—"I scatter salt, the emblem of purity, of hospitality, of fidelity, and of friendship; and I dedicate this building to the peaceful pursuits of Freemasonry."—After each of these formalities the Chaplin read an appropriate text of scripture, and concluded with a brief prayer.

Bro. Sutcliffe then addressed the assembly, saying: Brethren, ladies and gentlemen,—We have met here to-day for the purpose of laying the foundation-stone of a new house in which the Freemasons of this town and ancient port may assemble. It has devolved upon me—unworthy though I am—as the oldest Freemason in the town, to discharge this duty. This must be to me a very proud day, and one which I shall ever remember with gratitude to my brethren for their selection of me to perform this office. In the outer world the principles of Freemasonry are a good deal criticised by men who do not thoroughly understand, or even know, our precepts or our practices. We are generally described as a party of men who meet together for social enjoyments. Admitted, admitted we do, is there anything improper in that? I say no. But we have higher, higher motives than that of occasionally meeting together for social pleasure. We meet for the promotion amongst ourselves of brotherly love and charity, and assistance to all—more especially our brethren perhaps—but to all who may require it outside the pale of our association. (Hear, hear.) I think I may safely say there is never any great national calamity arises but you see the Masons assisting the helpless and the sufferers. (Hear, hear.) We have amongst us high educational institutions. We care for the aged and infirm brethren and their widows, and find a home, education, and clothing for the orphans of our deceased brethren and sisters. In many places schools are maintained by the Masons of a province. In addition to them we have those grand institutions—an asylum for aged and infirm brethren, and our magnificent and splendid schools for boys and girls. Upwards of 200 aged Freemasons, and the widows of brethren, now receive very handsome annuities from the fund which is devoted to that purpose. In this province there are several widows—I don't know exactly how many—who receive an annuity of £26 per annum, and brethren who receive an annuity of £36 per annum. These allowances must be a great assistance and comfort to them in their old age. Then we have a school for girls, in which 150 daughters of decayed Freemasons are taught, educated, and clothed, and after they leave school respectable positions are found for them. At present, this province of Lincolnshire has 4 children in the Girls' School. But we have another institution of which we all feel proud—prouder almost than of any other institution connected with the Craft—I mean the Boys' School. (Hear, hear.) In it 178 orphan boys—children of deceased Masons—are educated and clothed, and a very excellent and superior education is given to them. These three institutions are supported by the voluntary contributions of the Masons of England, and during the past year no less a sum than £27,000 has been subscribed towards their maintenance. (Applause.) There is not another order, I believe, in this country that can boast such noble subscriptions. To the Boys' School alone the subscription was nearly £13,000, and that is unprecedented I believe, in the annals of almost any charitable institution. (Hear, hear.) The outer world has thought proper within the last two or three years to attack us, more especially one class or clique of men, who charge us with being irreligious and disloyal. This charge is made against us by a leading member of that party who said his second loyalty is due to the Queen of this country, but his first loyalty is due to the potentate of a foreign land. I leave you to judge whether that charge of disloyalty comes with good grace from men of that character. As to our being irreligious, why whenever we assemble the volume of Sacred Law is laid open, and it guides and rules all our actions and proceedings. (Hear, hear.) Thus much for their charge of religion. I think the public do not think we are such great hypocrites as to meet in this manner, if we were not really sincere in our principles. As to the charge of disloyalty coming from a class of men who say their second loyalty only is due to this country, and that their loyalty is firstly due to a foreign potentate, I think the lie has been crammed down their throats, by our Heir Apparent to the Throne having taken the office of Grand Master. (Applause.) But before he came into that position he knew and had studied the principles of Freemasonry. He came to the fore, and gave the lie to scandalous libellous fellows. (Hear, hear.) I have now only to say that we have placed this stone here to-day for the erection of a Masonic Hall for the purpose of affording more accomodation to the members who are crowding to our Craft. I have been a Mason over twenty-three years. At that time we had only 600 Lodges on the Grand Roll of England. Now the number has greatly increased, and we can count 1,500 Lodges, showing that in twenty years the number has more than doubled. The increase has been going on more rapidly during the past three years than during any previous period. We do not go hawking about the streets, in all the highways and byways what we do, but our principles only want to be known, I am quite sure, to be admired. (Applause.) Turning to the ladies' platform, Bro. Sutcliffe said: I thank you for the great compliment you have paid me and the Craft by gracing with your presence the ceremonial of to-day. (Applause.)

The Masonic version of the National Anthem was then sung, the air being taken by Bro. Copeland. With this the ceremony terminated, and the procession re-formed in inverted order. The brethren walked back to the Mechanics' Institute, where Grand Lodge was formally closed.

The banquet held in the evening in the large room at the Town Hall was presided over by Bro. John Hadfield P.M. P.P.G.J.D. for Lincoln, as chairman of the Masonic Hall Company, Bro. and Mrs. Sutcliffe occupying the post of honour. There was a large attendance of Masons, the board being graced by the presence of their wives and daughters. Amongst the brethren present were the following guests of Bro. Sutcliffe:—W. H. Radley, Boston; Wm. Watkins, Lincoln; Rev. Dr. Ace, Loughton; W. J. Bland, Boston; W. G. Moore, Grimsby; E. J. Cullen, Lincoln; A. Kirk, Gainsborough; R. Goodmann, Gainsborough; Thos. Slator, jun., Boston; J. A. Thomas, Boston; Rev. J. C. K. Saunders, Thornton-le-moor; C. M. Nesbitt, Louth; F. O. Marsden, Louth; T. W. Thimbleby, Spilsby; A. Parkin, Doncaster; W. Pooles, Boston; Geo. Nelson, Limber; Wm. Swallow, Barton; Jno. Barnclough, Lincoln; J. W. Palmer, Boston; W. B. Bratley, Boston; Wm. Sissons, Barton; Thos. Fryer, Brigg; G. G. Birkett, Louth; H. C. Chambers, Market Rasen; Rev. R. T. Ward, Salmonby; Martin Kemp, Hull; R. W. Vivian, Hull; F. Binckes, London; W. Pallitt, Manchester; J. Spink, F. Phillipson, Smith, Terry, and Little, Grimsby. A sumptuous repast was provided by Bro. W. H. Roberts, of the Yarborough Hotel. Mr. O'Connor, fruiterer, of Victoria-street, supplied the excellent dessert, and tastefully adorned the tables with flowers and plants.

The Chairman gave the three loyal toasts in enthusiastic terms; followed by Brother Radley (Boston) with "the Bishop and Clergy," to which Bro. the Rev. J. C. K. Saunders P.G.C. responded. Bro. Thomas proposed the patriotic toast, coupled with the name of Capt. Garvey, who returned thanks for the three services; after which several official healths were honoured.

The Chairman then proposed the health of "Bro. John Sutcliffe P.M. P.P.S.G.W. and acting D.S.G.M. on laying the foundation-stone." (Applause.) He invited the company to drink the health of Bro. Sutcliffe in a bumper, observing that it was needless for him to dilate on the many excellencies of that gentleman, many of which, however, he dwelt upon, and thus called forth an exuberance of cheering.

Bro. Sutcliffe thanked the company most sincerely and heartily. He felt that he should retire from the position he held in Masonry, and make room for a younger man. ("No.") There were as good fish in the sea as ever were caught. He had taken a prominent position in Masonry because he loved it, and because he thought it was the finest institution in the world. It inculcated brotherly love, and they were enabled to look more generously upon the little failings of a brother than upon those of the outer world. He then alluded to the charities which the brethren uphold, and proceeded to remark upon the growth of the Craft in numbers and strength.

The Chairman next proposed "The Visiting Brethren," for whom Bro. McMurchie, Bro. Swallow, and Bro. Nelson responded.

Bro. Sutcliffe proposed "The Chairman and Directors of the Pelham Pillar Masonic Hall Company Limited, and success to the undertaking." In doing so he remarked that the perseverance which their chairman had displayed in the matter was admirable—(hear, hear)—and he was to be congratulated upon the result of his exertions.

The Chairman, in responding, stated that the total cost of the building would be £3,000, towards which not a single gift would be received. The capital would be subscribed by Masons in £1 shares, and £1,700 worth had been applied for.

Bro. Vivian proposed "The W.M. of the Pelham Pillar Lodge, and the W.M.'s of our Lodges present." Bro. W. Marshall (Vice-Chairman), acknowledged the compliment paid him. Bro. A. Bates gave "The Masonic Charities," in a speech full of kindly sympathy. The remaining toasts were "The ladies," and "all poor and distressed Masons throughout the world," responded to by Bro. Collinson.

ROBIN HOOD.—As the hero of old popular tales and ballads, Robin Hood is supposed to have been formed by the gathering of later traditions about the memory of Robert Fitzooth, reputed Earl of Huntingdon, who was born at Loxley Chase, near Sheffield, in Yorkshire (by the river Loxley), perhaps at the close of the reign of Henry II., but more probably in the reign of Henry III., towards the year 1230. He was outlawed and lived in war against authority; eating the king's deer, defying the oppressive game laws, and all those of the king's officers who represented the hard hand of power that was used often oppressively against the poor. He scorned bishops and archbishops, who grew fat on the goods of the people. He was generous to the poor, and he was religious in the poor man's fashion, by devotion to the Virgin; for in her the mistaught and oppressed of the Middle Ages—forced to fear power in this world and in the next—found the lost spirit of love within an image of mild, womanly tenderness; and to her, therefore, they prayed for shelter from the wrath of God and man. Robin Hood personified to thousands in England the spirit of liberty in arms against the cruel forest laws, against all tyrannies of the strong in church and state, against all luxury fed on the spoils of labour. From the old days when Hereward the Saxon held the woods in defiance of the Norman kings, there had been stories of bold outlaws who through songs and tales of the country side became heroes to the labouring men with more freedom in their souls than in their lives. They were heroes full of wild energy, with roughness of the times in much of the adventure set down to them; but they represented not an inspiration only, for there was also the vigour of a shrewd practical humour that would in good time refine and raise, and realise all that was best in the ideal of the men who wrote such ballads as that of Robin Hood.—From "Cassell's Library of English Literature," edited by Professor Henry Morley, for July.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 188. — This Lodge held its weekly meeting on the 4th August, at the White Hart Tavern, Aldchurch-lane, E.C. Present—Bros. Abell W.M., Woodward S.W., Turquand J.W., Constable Treas., Blackhall S.D., Corner J.D., Gomm I.G., Christopher Tyler. P.M. Bro. E. Gottheil Preceptor, and several other brethren. Business—The W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Croaker being the candidate. The 4th and 5th sections of the lecture were worked by Bro. Gottheil, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Woodward was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. A proposition to subscribe for the First Volume of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE was carried unanimously. All business being ended the Lodge was closed, and adjourned until Wednesday, the 11th inst., 7.30 p.m. We take this opportunity of congratulating Bro. Gottheil as Preceptor, and admire his painstaking labour to impart Masonic instruction, and venture to remark further, that brethren should make themselves competent to fill any office to which they may be appointed with a fair amount of proficiency, constant and repeated corrections tend materially to obstruct the knowledge of patient and persevering listeners.

Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, Liverpool.— The annual installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 28th July, at the Garston Hotel, Garston, where there was a large attendance of the members and visitors. The chair, at the opening of the Lodge, was occupied by Bro. John Evans W.M., who was supported by a full complement of his officers. After two candidates had been initiated, the chair of installing master was taken by Bro. J. W. Baker P.M., to whom Bro. J. Evans I.P.M. and Bro. R. Jones P.M. presented Bro. John Hughes for installation as W.M. of the Lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremony was very ably performed, and the following brethren were subsequently invested by Bro. J. Hughes W.M. as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. J. Evans I.P.M., T. B. Tellett S.W., S. Tickle J.W., W. Vinos Treasurer, C. Humphries P.M. 1013 Secretary, J. Tewksbury S.D., G. Price J.D., W. C. Lawson I.G., J. Robinson S.S., A. Sharples J.S., and J. Robinson Tyler. The brethren afterwards adjourned to banquet, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed during the evening.

Zetland Chapter, No. 236.—This Chapter held its regular meeting on Wednesday, the 28th July, at the Masonic Hall, Duncombe Street, York. Present—Comp. Todd P.Z. as Z., Comp. Cowling P.Z. as H., Comp. Cooper P.Z. as J., Comp. T. B. Whytehead S.E., Comp. G. Balmford S.N., Comp. W. Lawton P.Z. as P.S., Comp. Wilson 2nd Ass., Comp. Redfare J., Comps. W. Flint, F. M. Herring, G. Cattell, J. Ward, T. Bellerby, T. S. Camidge, R. Wormald, G. Simpson, &c. Visitor—Comp. J. Teale. Bros. James Wilson and Wm. Thompson, both of the York Lodge 236, were duly exalted to the Supreme Degree. This Chapter is in a most prosperous condition, numbering no less than 79 members.

Harmony and Industry Lodge, No. 391.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Monday, 2nd August, at the New Inn, Darwen, Lancashire. Present—Bros. John Wardley P.G.S. E.L. W.M., David Ainsworth S.W., W. H. Hargreaves J.W., Lawrence Roberts P.M. Secretary, Wm. Almond P.G.S.W. E.L. Treasurer, A. M. Briggs S.D., J. A. Tullis J.D., Henry Berry P.G.S. E.L. I.G., W. G. Hutchinson P.M. Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Thos. Grime P.G.D.C. E.L., R. H. Smalley. Business—The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The evening's business was light. Four brethren ought to have come forward to be raised, but, being holiday time, many of them were away from home and did not put in an appearance, the consequence was the business was very short and consisted merely of the regular work. The Lodge was closed at 9 o'clock.

Alliance Lodge, No. 667, Liverpool. — The members of this Lodge held their annual summer reunion on Wednesday, the 28th ult. The locality chosen was the gardens attached to the Rock Ferry Hotel, and nothing could have been more enjoyable than this fête. Dancing to Martin's excellent band, croquet, bowling and other games, and a liberal supply of such accompaniments as excellent catering could afford, all tended to make the day's pleasure full and complete. In addition to the members of the Alliance Lodge, there were numerous visitors, including Bros. H. Nelson W.M.

1506 and P.M. 673, H. Pearce 249, Richard Brown W.M. 241, and Secretary Westham, Masonic Educational Institute, Shillicorn P.M. 667, Fabian P.M. 487, and P.P.S.G.W. of Hants, A. Strother 823, Nash 828, Gallagher P.M. 1011, Salford, Larsen P.M. 594, Widdows P.P. 673, &c. There were altogether 120 guests. The party returned to Liverpool, by special boat, at eleven o'clock.

Robert Burns Lodge, No. 999.—This Lodge held its 119th monthly meeting on Monday, the 26th of July, at Freemasons' Hall, Manchester. Present—Bros. W. L. Chew W.M., E. H. Flower S.W., J. A. Infiesta J.W., T. H. Jenkins Secretary and Treasurer, A. Bacon S.D., F. Cooper J.D., J. C. Whittington P.M. D.C., J. Hart Steward, J. McKinless I.G., J. Lawton Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. J. Prescott, J. M. Cruickshank Chaplain. Visitors—Bros. J. Walsh 1054, Castro Ruiz (Havana), J. P. Howarth 1147, B. Routley 37, W. S. Watson 1496, J. Hodgkinson 941. Business—Lodge opened in due form at 5.30 p.m., Mr. G. Hirsch and Mr. J. D. Brickles were duly initiated into Masonry by the W.M., Bro. T. A. Sutton was raised to M.M.

Hervey Lodge, No. 1260.—The summer banquet of this Lodge was held in the well known and beautiful gardens attached to the Crown Hotel, at Broxbourne Bridge, on Wednesday, 28th July. The banquet was under the presidency of the W.M. of the Lodge, W. Bro. Jabez Hogg P.G.D., and was attended by Bros. Harrison S.W., Southwood J.W., G. King jun. P.M. Secretary, Hollingsworth S.D., J. Sandilands Ward J.D., Burley, Herring, Mansell, J. R. Cox, Bywood, Vine, Hall, Butler and others. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. Baber P.M. 452 and 1238 P.P.G.S.D. Surrey, J. Wright P.M., Green S.W. 27, Fagg J.D. 30, Ballard 511, Saunders, Wesson, Williams and others, with a number of ladies. After the banquet, which was of the most recherché description, the W.M. proposed the health of the Queen, after which the health of the M.W.G.M. The gavel was then entrusted to Bro. G. King jun. P.M. and Secretary, who, in an eloquent speech, proposed the health of the W.M., Bro. Jabez Hogg, pointing out that notwithstanding the large and onerous professional avocations of the W.M., yet he never failed to attend to the duties and the interest of the Hervey Lodge. Bro. King said he was sure all the brethren would join him in the fervent hope that Bro. Hogg would have a happy and prosperous year of office, and that he might be spared to be amongst them as P.M. and Treasurer for many years to come. Bro. Jabez Hogg, in response, said he not only considered it was his duty, but he felt it was a happy privilege to attend constantly in Lodge, and also to partake with his brethren of the pleasures of the admirable summer banquet. He looked upon such a reunion as this as a most desirable mode of bringing the brethren more intimately and socially together, and, more than that, it gave them an opportunity of allowing the sisters to see somewhat of the Order, and so dispel erroneous ideas concerning it. The more they saw of it the more they would see that it was based on the purest principles of charity and brotherly love. The W.M. then proposed the health of the sisters and lady visitors, which was responded to by Bro. Ward. The next toast was that of the Visiting Brethren, acknowledged by Bro. Wright. The W.M. then proposed the Officers of the Lodge, especially eulogising the great services of their indefatigable Secretary, Bro. G. King jun., to whom they were all so much indebted for the pleasure they enjoyed that day. Bro. King, in returning thanks, spoke of the great assistance he had received from his colleagues, and dwelt warmly on that spirit of unity which now actuated all the brethren of the "Hervey Lodge" in promoting its welfare. He instanced the liberality of the Senior Warden, in presenting the Lodge with the beautiful menu cards, declared, by a competent judge, to be the perfection of art; and to the Junior Warden they were indebted for the lovely artificial bouquet which graced every lady in the room. The health of Miss Lincoln was then proposed by the W.M., who thanked her, in the name of the Lodge, for the kind and cordial manner in which she had exerted her great vocal talent to add to the charms of the day. The brethren, he said, would all join him in wishing her every prosperity, and he had no doubt but that Miss Lincoln would soon become a bright and shining star in the firmament of the musical world. After one or two other toasts the company adjourned to the ball room, and concluded a most agreeable day.

Metropolitan Lodge, No. 1507.—An emergency meeting of this flourishing and rapidly increasing Lodge was held on Thursday, at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville Road. Bros. Jas. Willing jun. W.M., Williams S.W., Berrie J.W., Rose Treasurer, Time P.M. Secretary, Child S.D., Kingham J.D., J. Doig'os I.G., Scales W.S., Farler D.C., Daley Tyler, and Bros. Stiles, Gilbert, Side, Brede, Saintsbury, &c. The Lodge was opened, and ballots were taken for the admission of Messrs. John Sayers, J. E. Erwood, F. H. Rogers, John Levy and M. Little, which was unanimously in their favor, and they were initiated. The working of the W.M. and officers deserves especial praise. Bro. Baron Von Tittenborn was elected a joining member. Bros. Read and Brunsell were raised to the third degree. The bye-laws were read. Several propositions for initiation and joining were announced, and the Lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to a very capital banquet, provided by Bro. Cox. The W.M. gave the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, and in proposing the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M. alluded to his proposed visit to India. He wished him God speed, and a safe return to his native land, in renewed health and vigour. There was no doubt he would meet many distinguished in the Order in India, and it would be the means of further cementing that cordial feeling that exists between the two countries. (Cheers.) Bro. Time P.M. and Secretary, in proposing the toast of the W.M., said he was proud of the success attending this young Lodge, not only in numbers, but in the knowledge that it had in its ranks gentlemen who would be an honour to the Craft; this was to be attributed to the exertions and geniality of the W.M., who was not only a good working Mason himself, but felt a pride in seeing Masonic duties carried out by the brethren. The W.M. having returned thanks, the toast of the Visitors was responded to by Bros. Savage W.M. 1425, and Berrie J.W. 1293, those brethren referring, in the course of their speeches, to the excellent working of the W.M. and officers. The toast of the Initiates having been responded to, Bro. Williams S.W. returned thanks for the toast of the Wardens and Officers, stating that through the influx of members to the Lodge, they held this their second emergency meeting, and from the number of propositions, it was very possible they would have another before the next regular meeting. Bro. Time P.M. and Secretary having also returned thanks, the Tyler's toast followed. The brethren were entertained by some very capital singing. The Visitors were Bros. Savage W.M. 1425, Berrie J.W. 1293, Bassall J.D. 177, Wicks 813, Musgrave Organist 1309, Ormiston 262, Graham 475, and Jordan 511. The brethren, previously to entering the Lodge, attended the concert and entertainment specially provided for the Grand International Fête at the Alexandra Palace, which was honoured by the presence of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor Bro. D. H. Stone J.G.W., the Sheriffs, Prefect of the Seine, &c., and which reflected great credit on Bros. Sir Ed. Lee, J. R. S. Vine (Private Secretary to the Lord Mayor), and the Committee.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, 1507.—The perfection many Lodges have attained in the working of the various ceremonies is due to their members attending Lodges of Instruction, under able Preceptors. This Lodge of Instruction, although but young, ranks high, as many of its members can work the various degrees perfectly, and we cordially recommend aspirants for office to pay it a visit. The members met at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville Road, on Friday, 30th ult., Bros. Jas. Willing jun. in the chair, Shand S.W., Scales J.W., W. M. Stiles Secretary, Yeomans S.D., Ormiston I.G., T. A. Adams Preceptor. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. The W.M. then rehearsed part of the ceremony of installation, Bro. Adams assisting with the ancient charges. The acting W.M. then rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. Stiles acting as candidate. Bro. Shand S.W. was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. A cordial and unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to the W.M. for his efficient working. The Lodge was then adjourned to the following Friday.

Chaucer Lodge, No. 1540.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge, the first since the Consecration, was held on the 29th ult., at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge. Present—Bros. T. J. Sabine P.P.G.S.B. (Middlesex) W.M., J. C. Mason S.W., E. S. Stidolph J.W., Rev. H. J. Hatch Chaplain, F. Walters P.P.G.P. (Middlesex) P.M. Secretary, W. J. Kemp S.D., E. Hudson J.D., H. Fuija I.G., A. J. Hawkes D.C., A. P. Steadman W.S., I. J. Hooper Wilkins as P.M. The Lodge was opened, and the following brethren were unanimously elected joining members—Bros. F. Walters P.G.P. (Middlesex) P.M. 73, Rev. H. J. Hatch M.A. S.W. 160, J. R. Wehley 180, R. Boon 1306, W. J. Walsham 1491, J. H. Spencer 73, I. John Hooper Wilkins 73, W. Breton 315, G. H. Mason 753, A. Neville 615. Ballots were taken for the following gentlemen, who were initiated by the W.M. in a very careful and impressive manner, Messrs. J. Wooster, E. Emanuel, Joel Emanuel, R. H. Willats, and P. W. Crosbie. The Lodge was then closed, and slight refreshment followed.

Alexandra Palace Lodge, No. 1541.—The first meeting of this Lodge since its consecration was held on Saturday, the 31st ult., at the Alexandra Palace, Muswell Hill. Bro. J. K. King S.W. P.G.S. in the chair, G. J. Palmer J.W., J. R. Stacey Treas., Haigh Sec., J. Lee I.G., John Dyte D.C., and C. T. Speight Tyler. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of the consecration meeting were read and confirmed. Ballots were taken for the admission of Bro. R. Rowland 1098, A. Smith No. 4, and F. H. Rooke P.M. 46 as joining members, and Messrs. R. Larchin, C. Chaplin, W. S. Daniels, E. Kensington, and J. Mathews were balloted for, unanimously accepted, and initiated into the Order. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a banquet and dessert that reflected great credit on Bros. Bertram and Roberts. Bro. J. C. Parkinson P.G.D. and P.P.G.M. for Middlesex, the W.M., genially presided. He proposed the toast of Her Majesty the Queen, also that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., and alluded to the circumstance of the Lodge being named after H.R.H. the Princess, whom all classes throughout the realm respected. He was sure it would be an omen of its success. The toasts of the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master followed. The W.M., in proposing the toast of the five newly initiated brethren, made a very eloquent speech, referring to the duties incumbent on brethren joining the Order. He was sure the impression made on them would never be effaced. Bro. J. Mathews in brief and appropriate terms responded. The W.M. now being obliged to leave the chair, it was occupied by Bro. John Kelly King P.G.S., who proposed the toast of the W.M. Brother Parkinson, who occupied the chair as the First Master of the Lodge, was one whom they were proud of; he was a distinguished member of Grand Lodge, and also of the province of Middlesex, and brethren did not get those honours without being worthy of them. (Cheers.) The Chairman then proposed the toast of the Visitors, who were Bros. Martin 188, J. H. Stacey 180, and H. M. Levy P.M. 188, the latter brother responding. The toasts of the Wardens, Officers, and the Tyler, concluded a very agreeable and harmonious evening, Bro. Chaplin Henry delighting the brethren with his melodious voice.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—The exceptional weather of the season indicates a disturbed state of the atmosphere, and causes a very great tendency to the development of epidemics. It is in such seasons that diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera, cramps, and fevers so frequently appear, and all should be on their guard against them. The consumption of uncooked or unripe fruit, or food not perfectly fresh, is a common exciting cause of these complaints, and if the early symptoms are not properly treated, very serious results may ensue. Holloway's Ointment rubbed briskly and efficiently into the stomach and surface of the bowels, relieves the cramp and vomiting very quickly, and the internal use of the Pills expels from the bowels the irritant matter.

THE WORKSHOP OF EARTHQUAKES.

A Fragment from the Isle of Mindoro.

After the chant was ended, as we steered
By star and jelly-fish which floating glanced,
The bamboo hut with nipa-thatch appeared
Amidst a clump of coco-trees ensconced.
Before its modest shade a yellow sand,
Spangled with mica, sloped into the tide;
Fantastic rocks around that fringed the strand
Invited the unwilling surf inside
To lave the bêche-le-mer and cuttle-fish which there did glide.

Then—ere we made for land—I begged Ismail
Some other rythmic legend to narrate,
Or some tradition sacred to the Isle,
Bearing some record of his nation's fate.
Under our light canoe the smooth clear deep
Moved gently, like a bosom breathing slow;
He chanted and I listened, half asleep,
Lulled by the cadence of the tidal flow
Which there upon the sunny shore did fall in murmurs low.

Mandàh the seer, in the undersphere, o'er the golden Jinns doth reign,
With their ceaseless toil the rivers boil and the mountains rock with pain:
They must obey till he display, in fulness of time, his face,
With a vengeance grand for his native land and the wrongs of our wasted race.
With iteration of dull vibration the blows of their labours sound,
Whose echoes roll down each vaulted hall in the galleries underground;
There the Jinns flit along ways dim-lit by the glitter of mineral star,
And a silver wake as their flight they take, winds back through the caves afar;
There glist'ning points in the roof's rough joints emit a diamond sheen,
Or ruby light glows in flashes bright upon patches of emerald green.

There the crystals wet of the cornice-fret in prisms refracting, shine
And, darting rays, light the devious maze of earth's endless central mine
Which will prove the tomb of a fiery doom for our false and cruel foes—
The Spaniards vile, who every isle have plunged in endless woes;
Whose chiefs unjust in pride and lust the Indians' land have won,
From Zamboànga to Cagayàn, from Sùlu to Luzòn.

The spoilers groan in their homes of stone when a roar is heard at night,
When the ground below sways to and fro in supernatural might;
Pallid they leap from the midnight sleep and shriek o'er the rising din, Down crash the walls of their lofty halls and roofs fall thundering in;
Naked they rush in their terrors' flush to their Woman-God to kneel;
Nor, by warning taught, do they give one thought to the wrongs the Indians feel;
Little they dream, as the death-lights gleam and ruins their temples mar,
How the Jinns have wrought the avenging thought of the Rajah Matandàh.

Walter Spencer.

MASONRY TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

There was a party of gentlemen travelling to the far West, not without gold in their pockets, at any time in sufficient supply in an inhabited country, but worthless where they then were to buy food. One morning eighteen pilgrims, all told, might have been seen to arise from their blankets on the ground, on the banks of Humboldt River, where its water was so impregnated with alkali that it had the colour of lye. The night previous they had eaten the last morsel of food in their possession. Four or five days' journey was ahead of them before they could reach the supplies sent out by the liberal-hearted Californians to meet the incoming immigration, which was very large. This party had been living on short rations of "jerked beef" for thirty days, without tasting bread in that time. Each one of them that morning, with a stick in hand, went frog-hunting, to obtain a breakfast before starting out. They succeeded in getting a pair of legs for each (one poor fellow could not eat them). They were cooked without grease or salt, and eaten with delight; the only fault found with them was, that there were not enough.

Ours was a "pack train"—no wagons. With this extra short allowance we started, hopeful that as there were hundreds of wagons on the route, certainly we could buy enough to keep soul and body together four or five days. Each person was appointed a committee of one, with gold in his pocket, and instructed to pay any exorbitant price they chose to ask. Some one hundred wagons, more or less, were overhauled by noon, without obtaining a mouthful. One party, sitting around a large tray of biscuits, were offered a dollar each for eighteen of them, but humanity nor gold could not move them.

We stopped as usual at noon to graze our wearied animals. Although feeling hunger sharply, we were undaunted, and laid ourselves down to rest in the sun, which we were accustomed to, there being no shade. The writer was sick, and had been so for several days. The doctor had just made a shade over me with a blanket, when up came the bright smiling face of one of the party, and he said he had gotten three pounds of flour, without money and without price, to feed eighteen hungry men! The doctor quickly, with his own hands, made up some "flap-jacks," and brought a portion to me, which I ate with more delight than any morsel ever eaten by me before or since. Remember, it was the first bread in thirty days. They acted like a charm. From that moment I speedily recovered.

The sequel to the three pounds of flour was Freemasonry, and that unasked in that name; and therein lies the greatest beauty of it. The brother accosted the owner of a wagon to buy food, and was refused. The owner was from Illinois, and was a minister. The brother who belonged to my party, finding he could not get anything of him (he saying he was nearly out), passed on. A thought occured to the man from Illinois, and he hailed our companion to stop and return. On his going back, the owner of the wagon asked him if he was a Freemason, and an affirmative reply being given, he stopped his team, stepped behind the wagon, and cautiously proved him to be such. He then said: "You can have half of what I have left, and when you have used that, I will divide as long as I have any," refusing the proffered gold—five dollars per pound. The narration of this to me filled my heart with the deepest gratitude to the silent power of the mystic tie, over-riding human nature and Christian sympathy.

This is one of the many instances of true Masonic principle I have witnessed. The favour was not asked as Masonic, and refused. This true Mason, fearing that he might, perchance, be turning away a brother, called him back and asked the question: "Are you a Mason."

May all Masons thus act, and only such be admitted; for ten true Masons in a Lodge are more desirable than a thousand that are indifferent.—Correspondent of Masonic Jewel.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

recording facts contributed by strangers, the distinguished positions of whom place their statements—founded upon the experience of the Wine—beyond a doubt. It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and incites specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its valuable dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

NEARLY THREE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

DINING AS A FINE ART.

So much has been written on Dining that we are rather reluctant to assist further in the ventilation of the subject. The season however is propitious, and we should not be consistent Masons if we did not occasionally turn our attention to the festive aspect of the Order. Some of our contemporaries are, indeed, of opinion that Masonry and dining are united in indissoluble bonds. The Saturday Review, for example, appears to imagine that an "emergency meeting" is merely a polite euphemism for a banquet; and people who are much better informed than the scribes who sway the destinies of the great gall bag of the literary world, appear to be inclined to credit the Order with a love for good cheer which is quite foreign to its principles and the inclinations of its leading spirits. We do not deny that Masons are a genial body; we admit that they occasionally dine together, and that their so-called banquets do much to cement those ties which are the pride and the boast of the Craft. It would be odd indeed if men who sometimes profess to owe some of the mysteries of the Craft to Bacchus should decline to toast the jovial god in his own nectar. We, however, are not quite sure that Masons, as such, are more highly skilled in the art of dining than any other section of society. A Masonic dinner may chance to prove a great success; it may please every one; men may leave the table duly impressed with the wisdom of the chairman, with the eloquence of the various speeches, and the greatness and grandeur of the cause which has brought them together. Or they may go away vexed and disappointed, lamenting an evening lost, and talents wasted. The company may in the one case be as brotherly as the most zealous friend of the cause could wish, and in the other the stiffness and coldness of the outer world may come like a wet blanket to mar the pleasure of the passing hour. Much of the success of a dinner depends upon the chairman. If he be a wise and genial man, conversant with the world, and skilled in the great art of managing men, the gathering may be a great success. But if he is at all stiff or formal, if he be a dull man, and is determined to make long speeches; or a wooden man, with a voice like a coffee mill, and a countenance as little expressive as a hickory nut, all will go wrong. We maintain that the chairman of any assembly should be a wise man, or, if wisdom be a qualification difficult to find, he should at least possess fine tact and discrimination. The chairman who assumes the control of a festive gathering should, above all things, possess fine tact. He has it in his power to make all who are around him either happy or decidedly uncomfortable. A judicious word from his lips would instantly stop an indiscreet discussion, or have the effect of pouring oil upon troubled waters. In proposing his toasts he should make no set speeches; a few graceful words will give zest to the most stereotyped sentiments, but to have their due effect the words of the chairman must always be graceful and few. A long winded bore in the chair is an intolerable nuisance, and such a one should never be allowed to tyrannise twice over a festive gathering. A wise chairman knows exactly how and when to say a kindly, a graceful, or a charitable thing. He aims at placing every one at his ease, and even when he is dealing with so technical a portion of his duties as the programme of songs, he will not forget to let fall a word or two of praise, which, if rightly timed, will fall like balm upon the ears of the vocalists. It is true that these gentlemen are paid for their services, but they are generally brothers, and, even if they were not, while they sit at the table, a true gentlemen will regard them as guests, and will treat them with courtesy and consideration. Did our chairmen know what spirit and life may be inspired in the breast of a vocalist by a few words of judicious praise, they would never forget to extend to them the same courtly attention which they are accustomed to bestow upon the distinguished guests.

We have attended dinners where all has gone gaily and merrily as a marriage bell, and it has been our lot to be present at others where the time seemed to drag heavily, and the flat dull oratory seemed to impart some of its lifelessness to the wines. We do not deny that an able chairman may find his duties arduous if he is not backed by clever and judicious speakers. It is becoming a custom to vote long orations in response to toasts whether they are dreary or not, a bore. We deprecate speaking for the sake of speaking, but we venture to think that courtesy should be above all things regarded at a Masonic banquet, and if brief orations be desired, it is better that the chairman should drop the hint than that un-Masonic expressions should be permitted to fall from the lips of the company. It is no doubt difficult for a man of ordinary calibre to say anything new in response to stereotyped toasts. But if it be impossible to be original, a speaker should not be dull. A few bright words, like sparks from the flint and steel, will always tell, and where it is possible, only bright persons should be called upon to respond. To take an example of the few non-Masonic toasts that we have in our mind, we may cite that of the press, which usually falls to the lot of some Masonic journalist. To say that the press is a great power is mere idle platitude; every one is aware of that. To assert that it is the fourth estate, is simply to talk bunkum. But if a speaker say that the English press is merely the mirror of the English mind, that the journalist simply holds this mirror up to society; and that for what is there seen society is strictly responsible, he is simply expressing a commonly ignored truth. While people neglect to use their brains, platitude will possibly commend a certain amount of respect. It is so easy to cheer the silly sentiment one has heard a hundred times before, and an original idea strikes the members of a festive party as a startling novelty. Yet with all due respect for the threadbare platitudes which have done such good service, we are of opinion that old truths put in a fresh light will be received with respect, if not with positive enthusiasm. Englishmen are indeed conservative, and will applaud a noble sentiment when couched in the stupid language current amongst wooden men, but they can be touched by thoughtful eloquence, by the brief crisp sentences which are intended to reach the heart and fire the imagination.

In considering the Art of Dining from our Masonic standpoint, we must not forget a word or two upon an innovation which may grow into a fashion. At some recent dinners the ladies, by their presence, have given tone and colour to festivities which, without them, are often anything but feasts of reason, however much the flow of soul may be quickened by the aid of wine. We are glad to welcome them to the table, and, without for a moment desiring to break in upon that reserve and modesty which are the most striking charms of the sex, we could almost wish that some wise woman would take the toast of the ladies out of the hands of the complacent gentlemen who pour forth their fulsome flatteries with faces distended by broad grins. It is, of course, possible to say something sensible and thoughtful in response to this toast, and perhaps a clever woman might tell us, if she were so minded, exactly what the sensible members of her sex think of the twaddle which, when applied to women, passes for homage, and the absurdities which pass for just praise. An American lady, who had the courage at a recent non-Masonic banquet to take this toast out of the hands of the stronger sex, told us we had hitherto seen society only en profile, and that if we would see it full faced we must know something of the opinions of women upon those vital questions which affect alike the happiness of men and women. We admit the justice of this remark, and although we should not care to see the ladies continually on their legs, we shall be glad if they will make diners out understand that they do not care for fulsome flattery, and do not desire to be praised for those personal charms which, however fascinating they may be, are trivial compared with the charms of mind.

A PROVINCE FOR BEDFORDSHIRE.

SPEAKING to the toast of "the Visitors," at the recent meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertford, at St. Albans, Bro. Howell, W.M. No. 1470 (Chiltern, Dunstable), remarked that he had the misfortune to belong to a County without a province—a state of things which he should like much to see altered. He had reason to believe that the Luton Lodge would favour a proposition to apply for one, and he was not at all sure that steps would not be taken to agitate the matter. Apart from the fact that the honours bestowed from time to time by the P.G.M. stimulated brethren to make themselves proficient, in order to attain the rank necessary to become entitled to them, it could not but be productive of good that, at stated times, the brethren of all the Lodges in a province should meet together, under the presidency of a distinguished brother, and make laws for their mutual benefit, and for the good of the Craft in general. In the County of Bedford, on the contrary, each Lodge was, as it were, isolated, the brethren of one did not, as a rule, know many of those of other Lodges, and there was an absence of that unity which is the strength of Freemasonry, as of everything else. The W.M. of St. John the Baptist Lodge, No. 475, Luton (Bro. Haselgrove), concurred as to the desirability of a province for the County of Bedford, and promised his co-operation.

GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

THE latest number of the published proceedings of this Grand Lodge contain abstract accounts of the Quarterly Communication held in Masonic Temple, Boston, on 9th June 1875, and of the late Special Communications held respectively on the 17th June and 3rd July. There were present at the first of these M.W. Percival Lowell Everett G.M., R.W. Charles A. Welch D.G.M., R.W. Henry Chickering P.G.W. as S.G.W., R.W. Lucius W. Lovell J.G.W., R.W. John McClellan G.T., R.W. Charles H. Titus, Recording G.S., R.W. W. T. R. Marvin, Francis Childs, Charles J. Danforth, George F. Homer, George F. Breed, Warren Currier, Bowdoin S. Parker, John R. Davison, John E. Shipman, William A. Smith, Irving B. Sayles, George L. Rhoads, Abraham H. Howland jun., John W. Atwood, Hosea Kingman, Theodore N. Foque, and John Wetherbee, the respective D.D.G.M.'s of Districts 1 to 6 and 8 to 18 (in each case both inclusive), together with W.R. Joshua Young G. Chaplain, Will. H. Cheesman G. Marshal, W.M. W. H. Soule S.G.D. and Charles E. Smith J.G.D., Marlborough Williams S.G. Steward and Thomas W. Davis, Albert H. W. Carpenter, and Henry Stephenson J.G. Stewards, Baylies Sanford jun. G. Sword Bearer, Fred. D. Ely, Henry S. Bunton G. Pursuivants, Thomas Waterman, Charles M. Avery, and J. Francis Lotta, G. Lecturers, Bro. Howard M. Dow G. Organist, and Bro. Frank E. Jones as G. Tyler. Besides these were R. W. Winslow Lewis, John T. Heard, Will. D. Coolidge, Charles C. Dame, Will. S. Gardner, and Sereno D. Nickerson, all P.G.M.'s; R.W. Abraham A. Dame, Rev. Lucius R. Page D.D., and G. Washington Warren, P.D.G.M.'s; and R.W. Joel Spalding, H. Chickering, W. W. Baker, Samuel P. Oliver, Will. Sutton, Will. F. Salmon, Samuel C. Lawrence, Charles Kimball, Peter C. Jones, Benjamin Dean, Wyzeman Marshall, Ivory H. Pope, Elijah W. Burr, and Tracy P. Cheever, P.G.W.'s; together with R.W. Andrew G. Smith, W. Samuel A. B. Bragg, and W. Joseph Winsor of the Committee on Returns; W. Henry G. Fay and Henry J. Parker of the Committee on Charity; and W. William J. Stevens of the Committee on Charters. Grand Lodge was opened in ample form at 2 p.m., with prayer by the W. Rev. J. Young G. Chaplain. The Record of the Quarterly Communication of 10th March 1875, having been distributed in printed form among members, was approved without reading; the Records of the Special Communications of 15th April, at Leominster, for the purpose of dedicating the new Masonic Hall of Wilder Lodge, and of 12th May at Newtonville, for dedicating the new Masonic Hall of Dalhousie Lodge, were then read and approved. After this the Bye-laws and amendments to Bye-laws from sundy Lodges were presented for approval, and referred to the Committee on Bye-laws, and two petitions for Charters from Norfolk and Cochichewick Lodges then under dispensation were referred to the Committee on Charters. The proceedings of Temple Lodge, East Boston, in the trial of Fred O. Thomas were submitted for approval, and referred to the Committee on Trials. The death of Bro. Eben F. Gay Grand Tyler having been announced, and a Committee nominated to prepare a suitable memorial for the Records of Grand Lodge, a vote of thanks was passed to the Morning Star Lodge, Worcester, for its very excellent gift of a portrait of P.G.M. Isaiah Thomas. Judge Owen A. Bassett M.W.G.M. Kansas, R.W. John H. Brown G.S. of same G.L., and R.W. John F. Burrill G.S. of Grand Lodge Illinois, were then formally introduced, the brethren all rising, and the G.M. addressing a few words of hearty welcome to the distinguished visitors. The roll of Lodges having been called, Bro. Francis C. Whiston, of Boston, rose, and in a very effective speech requested the acceptance by Grand Lodge of the Masonic Apron worn by the Marquis De Lafayette on the occasion of laying the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument, 17th June 1875, together with the autograph remarks of Daniel Webster and Lafayette at the banquet which followed that important ceremonial. R.W. John T. Heard P.G.M., and R.W. William S. Gardner having severally moved and seconded that the gift be accepted, and a vote of thanks passed to Bro. Whiston, the resolution was unanimously agreed to. The M.W.G.M. then rose and having described at length the steps he had taken to secure, if possible, the Royal Arch Apron worn by the late Major-General Joseph Warren, Past Grand Master, who was slain in the memorable defence of Bunker Hill, in the name and on behalf of Mrs. Charlotte L. Wheelwright and Miss Henrietta M. Russell, heiresses of the late P.G.M. Benjamin Russell, to whom the heirs of the late Gen. Warren had presented his apron, requested the acceptance by Grand Lodge of this priceless relic. R.W. Sereno D. Nickerson, in an interesting speech moved, and R.W. John T. Heard seconded the resolution, that the relic be accepted, the motion being carried unanimously. A resolution to the effect that an annuity of one hundred dollars be paid to each of the daughters of the late P.G.M. Benjamin Russell, as a slight token of their respect for his memory, and for their worth, was also agreed to. A report setting forth the virtues of the late Grand Tyler, Bro. Eben Flagg Gay, was then submitted and ordered to be recorded, after which the Committee on Ritual presented their report of the work and lectures of the second degree. These having been unanimously adopted as the work and lectures of this degree, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, the Committee nominated to consider the propriety of appointing a Board of Trials or a Masonic Commission to conduct Masonic Trials delivered their report, the purport of which was that all Masonic charges should be tried by Grand Lodge itself; that five commissioners, three to form a quorum, should be chosen to conduct each trial, the proceedings of which should be submitted to Grand Lodge at its regular Quarterly Communications, and that Grand Lodge should pass the final decree or judgment in the same manner as is now provided for in the trials by Lodges. The Committee further reported that, in order to carry these views into practice, it would be necessary to amend Article IV. of the Grand Constitutions, and accordingly they submitted such amendments as in their wisdom they considered would be necessary. The report was accepted, and the amendment referred to R.W. Will. S. Gardner, Sereno D. Nickerson, and Edward Avery. The Committee then presented their report on the working and lectures of the third degree, and it was unanimously adopted. The Committee appointed to consider certain proposed amendments to Grand Constitutions then delivered their report, which was accepted. On the motion of R.W. John McClellan, five hundred dollars was voted for charitable purposes, to be disbursed by the Committee on Charity. The Committee on Bye-laws then presented their report on Bye-laws and amendments to Bye-laws, submitted by sundry Lodges; that on Charters recommended the issue of Charters to the Norfolk and Coebichewick Lodges; that to which was referred the appeal of Bro. Albert F. Kelly against the ruling of the W.M. of John Cutler Lodge, recommended that the appeal be sustained, and the ruling of the W.M. be declared null and void, was accepted; while the Committee on Masonic Insurance submitted that further action on a certain petition that G. L. should take steps to protect the rights of individual brethren in connection with Life Assurance Associations, was inexpedient. M.W.G.M. Bassett, Kansas, having addressed a few words before retiring, Grand Lodge was shortly after closed in ample form, at forty minutes past seven p.m., W. Rev. J. Young Grand Chaplain offering up prayer. At the Special Communication held on 17th June, for the purpose of taking part in the public solemnisation of the hundreth anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, and the death of General Warren in that conflict, a considerable number of those already enumerated were present, the M.W.G.M. P. L. Everett, wearing the late General Warren's Masonic apron, and R.W. Winslow M.D. as D.G.M., wearing that of the late Marquis de Lafayette. After the procession was over, Grand Lodge, at the invitation of the Lodge of St. Andrew, returned to a building in Union Street, occupying the site of the Old Green Dragon Tavern, famous, a century since, as the place where Masonic Communications used to be held. Here they met the officers and members of the De Molay and Richmond Commanderies of Knight Templars, but as we have already referred to this in the account given, a few weeks since, of the visit to Boston of the Richmond Commandery, we need not go into details a second time. The special communication on 3rd July was held to celebrate the anniversary of the day when General George Washington, under the old elm at Cambridge, assumed command of the colonial forces in the War of Independence. G.L. having been opened the G.M. shortly after called it from labour to refreshment, and the brethren proceeded in carriages to Lyceum Hall, Cambridge, and there, as guests of the municipal authorities of the city, took part in the ceremony, and at the banquet which followed, in Memorial Hall, Harvard Lodge, under the presidency of the Mayor, W. Bro. Isaac Bradford, the toasts were—Washington, the United States, Massachusetts, the Thirteen Original States, the Army and Navy, and Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, to which last the M.W.G.M responded in appropriate terms, and with considerable eloquence. Other toasts followed, after which the brethren returned to the Masonic Temple, and Grand Lodge was closed in ample form at eight o'clock p.m.

EAST WEST AND SOUTH.

BY A WANDERING FREEMASON.

III.

"ONLY nine ounces and nine pennyweights," said the Captain, in deep disgust, laying down the scales and upsetting his bottle of quicksilver: "haven't done such a bad week's work since I helped a Maori woman to pull peas at six shillings a day. No wonder Alfred wants to leave us. I'll give up the claim, and make over my share to Jack!"

It was in the early days of New Zealand goldfields, before the great find in Otago. On the very day that great discovery dawned upon the Middle Island, I set sail from its shores in miserable ignorance. A month afterwards, forty thousand men landed at Port Chalmers.

There were five of us—the Captain, Scottie (called after his nationality), Baker (called after his former trade), myself (called "Alfred" upon abstract grounds which were never explained to me), and Jack, a runaway sailor boy whom we hired for his rations and £1 sterling a day: digging for gold at Wai-kara-mumu, Massacre Bay, New Zealand.

They were surface-diggings, discovered by the Captain, a first-rate prospector. The whole surface of the side of a hill was found to be pervaded with gold-dust. Our difficulty at the outset had been to get water-power in immediate proximity. A fine stream, the "Wai-kara-mumu," ran round the base of the hill, but the labour of bringing the soil down to it would have been too great for our small party. When Scottie and I joined the Captain and Baker we found, high up in the hollow of a hill which rose behind ours, a deep rotten swamp, and saw at once the water-power we wanted, if we could bring it to bear upon the golden soil. This I pronounced possible, and the work of engineering the same was delegated to me accordingly. Whilst with rude extemporised instruments I was taking the levels and staking out the tortuous course which should make the precious water our auxiliary, my comrades were employed building a hut on the bank of the stream. All day long the stroke of the axe rang through the bush. Many an empty sardine-tin and broken beer-bottle was flung upon roots and boulders which had remained untouched until the advent of the white man. The Ka-kas,* clinging sagely to the supplejacks† which overhung their native streamlet, ceased not to cackle their astonishment, and 'ere retiring to rest doubtless warned their night-watchmen, the Mawpawks,‡ and excited them likewise to screaming indignation. All night long did the latter flit to and fro over our tent of blankets, permitting little sleep to me, at least. After a time when established as inhabitants, we became mutually accustomed and I seldom noticed their monotonous cry.

A capacious chimney of clay and boulders was erected at the end of our hut, beside the doorway (door we had none), and a pile of faggots and brushwood stacked for future fuel. By that time we had commenced the hard work in the hills. Across the narrowest end of the swamp, where it just dipped between two saddles and struck rock, we builded bit by bit a solid dam. Through the centre of the latter we inserted a wooden conduit, closed by a trap. We then began cutting the "race" along the line traced by me. Two feet deep, on an average, and one foot wide, we made it, on a regular gradient winding round one hill, taking advantage of a saddle to cross to another, and so descending to the side of our claim. This done, we halted, after some days' hard close work, for "refreshment."

This, by an unanimous vote, it was settled should be taken at the nearest "accommodation-house"‖—Tākaka, some twenty miles off. Thither we journeyed, wading down the stream one bright morning, leaving poor Jack in charge of our dominions. I was glad of a change, as I should be of a trip to the sea-side now, and of the prospect of some variety in food, after a long course of salt meat, damper and tea, with an occasional fish or Maori-cabbage as a luxury. Especially I longed for fresh cows' milk; my comrades were equally athirst for milk to their taste of another description: and this was my first introduction to that ideal of celestial bliss, the digger's "spree."

No sooner had we entered the hospitable door of Miller, the highland proprietor of the solitary hostelry, than they began to imbibe, first with eagerness then with steady determination, beer (vile stuff), then brandy, whiskey, rum and gin (viler in quality, if possible), with utter impartiality. In two hours they were quarrelling, on the verge of a fight; Miller plied them with fire-water the more assiduously, and within four hours Scottie and Baker subsided into blessed insensibility. Towards evening came in one Maurice, known to fame as "the lucky digger," of whose good fortune and of the piles he had made and dissipated I had often heard. He had come from prospecting on the "Anatoka," and, with his usual luck, brought in his pocket about an ounce of gold, which he had scooped out of crevices with his knife. He let fall his swag,§ and came holding the little nuggets in his hand for us to see.

After supper we helped mine host to bar his doors and shutters; for a party of Maoris, headed by one "Tamati-Waka" (Tommy Walker), were camped in the neighbourhood. A law recently passed forbade their being supplied with liquor, and it was thought not unlikely they might attempt to obtain it by surprise or force. The "insensibles" were left as they lay, and I ascended to what, after long use to a Tasmanian Possumrug spread upon fern leaves, seemed a too luxurious couch.

Next day, a party of Germans arrived, on their way to some new diggings of which they made a great mystery, near the sources of the Grey and Buller: and I regret to say that the army of martyrs to alcohol was greatly augmented, including the Captain and Maurice. The landlord and I had to pile them one upon the other, against the bar, before retiring to rest. A special Providence is said to care for drunken men; to it alone those underneath must have owed freedom from suffocation before the dawn.

On the fourth day, considering that the state of our finances did not warrant further indulgence (the authorised term for a digger's spree, such as I have described, is a fortnight), I shovelled our friends outside the house, where, with Miller's assistance, they were drenched thoroughly with buckets of water, and rolled down the slope. There, heaped among the grass and fern, in the fresh air, they gradually revived and staggered to their feet: the first up being the most energetic in rousing and kicking up the others. The Captain had sense enough to make preparation for departure, which was effected towards nightfall, each of us being laden with from 60 to 90 lbs. weight slung across the back by leaves of the Flax-bush,* the burdens consisting of flour, salt meat, coffee, tea, sugar, and sundries.

After a jovial march, enlivened by stumblings and mishaps, as we waded along the creek or scrambled over the boulders in the darkness, we neared home and halted to listen to unwonted sounds of revelry which issued from the hut. Jack's rollicking voice sang out:—

"And now my song is ended, there's one last wish I crave,
That that infernal skipper may never rest in his grave:
May he be drownded, far away, upon some sandy shoal,
Where the sharks may rattle his bones about, and the devil may take his soul."

Here another voice struck up an irrelevant chorus—

Come, all you jolly diggers, come, diggers young and old!"

"My word!" said Scottie, "it's that scamp Maurice found his way here, to pump Jack about our claim."

So it proved: the pair were glorious, rattling their pannikins, and stamping round under the influence of new rum.

Thus began my life at the diggings. Having worked the claim for nine weeks, the gold-bearing limit of the soil was reached, and it became evident that to work longer wouldn't pay.

A description of surface-digging may not be uninteresting. The race which brought water to the side of our hill, was supplemented by a telescopic series of wooden troughs, called boxes, mounted on trestles. These boxes were fitted with false bottoms, so perforated as to make a series of shallow pits along their whole length. The trestles were moveable, and the alignment of the boxes was thus easily altered to suit our work; fresh boxes and trestles being added to suit distances as required.

The aqueduct being brought immediately alongside of our work, the soil from the hill's surface was flung in spadefuls into it. Over the earth thus thrown in the water rushed, sweeping it along, but depositing all metallic and heavy particles in the pits of the false bottom. At the end of the last box, the earth (called "tailings") fell out deprived of metal, and the water spent itself down the hillside. At the end of each day's work, after closing the trap in the dam to cut off the water, the boxes were dismantled, the false bottom removed, and the gold dust carefully collected. Gains were reckoned and divided every Saturday; and as I reflect upon the rough and ready character of my companions, I am pleased at remembering the entire confidence each reposed in the other.

We dissolved partnership: Scottie and Jack elected to remain on the ground, the former purchasing the greater part of our plant, the remainder of which we carried to Tākaka. The Captain and Baker started for Nelson, which I should have done also, had it not been my fate to again encounter "the lucky digger." We found him at Miller's, recovering from a severe attack of inebriety. On learning our intentions, he drew me aside, and told me in mysterious whispers he had had a remarkably rich prospect, which two men could work out and nett £500 each in a month. All his clothes and tools were gone in exchange for liquor, but he would make me the munificent offer of "halves" if I would furnish and start the concern. I agreed, made the requisite disbursements, and within a week started for Maurice's El Dorado, upon which that great discoverer bestowed the unsuggestive name of "One speck Gully."

A small dray, drawn by one bullock, laden with our plant, and managed by Miller's hopeful heir, a boy of ten, accompanied us one day's journey, beyond which was no practicable track. In the bottom of the ravine which formed the entrance to our gully we camped for the night. Two days were spent carrying the stores to the spot selected by Maurice, where, as we did not contemplate a very long stay, we erected a much slighter tenement than that of Waikara-Mumu. First we felled trees and cleared the ground, then we built a kind of American log-hut with long fern-trees, locally called "bungy." These trees are light to carry and soft to touch, have no branches but at the top; when severed their interior appears cellular and spongy, their core a complicated geometrical pattern darkly stained in. We dispensed with chimney, and suspended our pot outside, gipsy fashion, upon three forked sticks.

Our palatial abode I contemplated with intense satisfaction; never tired of admiring its interior snugness, its tight thatch of "ghighi," its hardened floor, the neat trench round about it, and, above all, the lovely prospect which greeted our opening eyes each morning on awaking, thro' the door-less door way. Just inside, well-sheltered, we planted our candlestick, literally a candle-stick or sapling. It was straight, six feet long, with sharp end driven into the ground. Its upper end was cleft in shape of a cross, and permanently distended by small wedges; into the gaping aperture thus made the end of the candle was inserted. Reviewing our arrangements, I felt "Monarch of all I surveyed," and Crusoe's feelings would have been tame compared to mine.

Maurice was an entertaining fellow. His thoughts ran in eccentric grooves, he narrowly missed being a genius, with methods of expression quite out of the common way. His distinguishing faculty was his strong perception, almost divination, of the presence of gold. Where another man would wander for weeks prospecting round and round, Maurice would hit upon the right spot almost at once. He had been three years a digger, had had many a lucky find, and had squandered his gains upon the "spree" as soon as made, remaining poor throughout. He had abandoned civilised life by reason of one heavy misfortune, and craved return to it in order to satisfy one great aspiration; these two were never absent from his mind, so that in conversation he would be sure to allude to one or the other. The former, was his having been in gaol. This, he asserted, arose from the villainy of a lodging-house crimp and beech-comber, who had nearly got him shipped off from Wellington, whilst he was there drunk on the spree, and who, after having robbed him of everything, trumped up a charge substantiated by falsehood. I never heard the other side of the question, but experience of the villainies practised undetected (both at home and abroad) upon the unfortunate votaries of alcohol, led me not to discredit his version. He dated everything, therefore, not from the year of our Lord, nor the month of the year, but so many weeks, months or years, "since I went to gaol."

For instance, "War broke out in Taranāki just two years and a half after I went to gaol"—"Collinson was found starved to death on the Wairau about nine months after I went to gaol."

His soul's ambition was to own a horse; he had, when a drover, often ridden the beasts of others, and had had gold enough to buy a stable-full; but somehow or other, always before effecting a purchase, opportunity had flown or his cash had vanished. He expressed his determination to work hard now, to stick to his next earnings, and to be happy, with a horse of his own, at last.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—For the cure of burns, scalds, wounds and ulcers, this justly celebrated Ointment stands unrivalled. Its balsamic virtues immediately on application lull the pain and smarting, protect the exposed nerves from the air, give to the vessels the vigour necessary to heal the sore, and confer on the blood a purity which permits it only to lay down healthy flesh in the place of that destroyed. Holloway's Pills, simultaneously taken, must assist the Ointment's purifying and soothing powers. Together, these medicaments act like a charm. Travellers embarking for unwholesome climates, where pestilential airs are constantly producing fever, should provide themselves with these remedies, which will assuredly save them nights of weary watching and days of pain.

BRO. JOHN YARKER v. BRO. W. P. BUCHAN.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As a young Mason I am interested in the discussion now waging between Bros. Yarker and Buchan, and hope that something of importance will be decided before the friendly encounter ends. I want to know a deal about Freemasonry, and fraternally look to Bro. Yarker, an old veteran, to assist us "recruits." Bro. Buchan has all the fire and enthusiasm of a young volunteer, and so, what with age and youth, I am anticipating a storehouse of facts to be reared. Bro. Yarker refers Bro. Buchan to Aubrey's "Natural History of Wiltshire" for proof that Sir C. Wren was initiated 18th May 1691. Will Bro. Yarker kindly tell me the date of the edition (the first, if more than one) of the History mentioned? It is idle for Bro. Buchan to cavil as to the difference between to be and was "adopted." The note has reference to the day of "adoption," and so it is quite enough for all practical purposes. Let us not be hypercritical, and expect too much from the evidence now being accumulated after the lapse of years of neglect. I should like to know more about the work of 1721, which Captain Irwin has in his library, and which speaks of the "higher class," and I wish Bro. Irwin would permit some other brethren to peruse it, such as our well known writers, Bros. Lyon, Hughan, Woodford, Woof or others, or would the owner kindly transcribe all the portion in any way referring to the Craft, so that the context may exhibit the character of the complete paragraph. It is surely most important, and deserves much more than a passing notice, and I thank Bro. Yarker for calling attention to it.

Will our brother favour me with the evidence that in 1725 the Royal Arch was called the Fifth Order? I have not been able to discover any evidence that warrants such a positive statement, neither has any Masonic historian with which I am familiar made any such proof known, neither has Bro. Yarker himself in his "Speculative Masonry," which is a valuable work, and so I presume Bro. Yarker has something in confirmation of his emphatic affirmative, about which we are, as yet, in ignorance. How does Bro. Yarker know that Bro. Ramsay's system "was started in 1728?" I thought there was a lack of evidence on the subject, but now, as our brother again states emphatically his discovery, will he kindly say the grounds on which he rests so important an assertion? It was said Ramsay visited the Grand Lodge of England (at London), but the minutes of the Grand Lodge were searched carefully for me by an English brother, but all to no purpose, and certainly in France there has not been a record produced which refers to Ramsay of so early a date as 1728 (and his degrees).

The "Antient and Primitive Rite" must be a very old society. Of what date are its earliest records, and did it precede the "Antient and Accepted Rite?" Is it not true that many of the degrees are alike virtually, and, if so, which was first of the two Rites, for one must be the younger, and therefore the plagiarist! Now then, which was first? It does not matter two straws to me as to the answer, save and except to discover the truth, and I am determined to sift the loose statements so frequently made, and see for myself what it all means as to Degrees, Rites, Offices, Antiquity, Humbug, and Pretension, and from the whole I hope to evolve the truth. We have far too many degrees and authorities, and if it is true, as I am told, that the "Ancient and Primitive Rite" is a late creation, then I say away with it to the bottom of the sea, or anywhere but in Great Britain, for else ere long it will be imported into the "Emerald Isle" to the disgust of us all! If it is ancient and worthy, then stick to it, and oh away with the counterfeits, but do not in the name of common sense go on multiplying until all that is really Masonry, and Freemasonry, is banished from our degrees.

With respect to the mark, is Bro. Yarker quite sure there was no ceremony. Why was there a fee for "chusing ye mark," and is he warranted in denying what now, in the ordinary course of things, cannot be decided either way? What "ancient documents go to prove that the Master's Degree had nothing to do with the Arch." This is news to me, and quite upsets my mind after it had rested on the perusal and study of Dr. Oliver's "Origin of the Royal Arch" (Spencer), and which connects the Arch with the Third Degree prior to say 1750. What had Dr. Dassigny to do with the Masonic Templars? His work was issued in 1744, and the Masonic Templars have not been traced until about 20 years after that date. Will Bro. Yarker, or any good brother, give me light?

MASONIC INVESTIGATOR.

OUR FREEMASONRY AND BRO. YARKER.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—At page 86 Bro. Yarker asserts that he referred me in his first letter (page 53, 24th July, I suppose) to two MSS. "which themselves prove the antiquity of the system of the three degrees, and their identity with the present first three ceremonials." Now the proof here spoken of appears to me to exist only in the region of Bro. Yarker's imagination. Imagination, however, goes a great way with our pseudo Masonic historians. As a specimen of Bro. Yarker's extreme accuracy turn to page 53, where he tells us that the note in Aubrey's MS., which says that Wren "is to be adopted," is the "sole minute, yet known to be preserved, of Sir C. Wren's initiation." What a wonderful transformation! Who but a doughty knight of the real old high grades could have managed that?

Then, again, when we turn to page 70, and behold our gallant warrior spurring on his Rosinante against the Mark Degree, how the better informed amongst the Mark supporters must have chuckled when they heard his solemn vow that "So sure as the 1598 speculative lodge system of Wm. Schaw was identical with our ancient three degree system, so sure was it that he would prove the Mark Degree was!!"

I have for long believed that the paragraph in Schaw's 1696 Statutes which says:—"Item, That na Maister or Fellow-of-Craft be resavit nor admittit without the numer of six Maisteris and twa enterit Prenteisis," &c., clearly showed that neither degrees nor secrets were here involved, but extra privileges.

If Bro. Yarker can produce some real "minute," or any properly clear evidence that a Masonic system of three degrees, "identical with the present first three ceremonials," existed either in or before the Seventeenth Century, and also therefore before A.D. 1717, pray let him do so in the next number. I trust he will not content himself with referring to some former quotation in some past volume, but give us real evidence now, and that to the point.

I am, yours fraternally, W. P. BUCHAN.

IRISH MASONIC CHARITIES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—From your article on the Masonic Female Orphan School, Dublin, you seem to consider the Report for the year 1874-5 satisfactory. I regret, however, that this is far from being the case, as both of the Irish Schools, Female as well as Male, are ill supported by the brethren in Ireland. The Lodges and their members, with a few honourable exceptions, spend money lavishly on refreshments, while they are slow to subscribe any to support the children of their deceased brethren. Take the number of the brethren belonging to the Irish Lodges (which does not represent the whole), and compare them with the number that supports the Schools, and it will be found that the latter are ridiculously small; and, anywhere in Ireland, if you ask an individual brother to subscribe, he excuses himself, as "my Lodge subscribes," yet, probably, the same man will boast he is a good Mason.

I am, Dear Sir,

Yours fraternally,

G. H. KINAHAN.

CHARGES OF A FREEMASON.

BY CORNELIUS MOORE, Editor of the Masonic Review.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In an article under the above heading, at page 84, we find the writer stating that candidates for Freemasonry "must be 'free born.' The Grand Lodge of England (he adds) has, within the last few years, substituted 'free man,' instead of 'free born,' thus in our opinion, striking at a most vital principle, which that body was especially bound to protect, and setting an example of the most pernicious tendency." How terrible thus to think that the mother of Freemasonry has gone astray! I used, foolishly I fear, to imagine that this substitution of "free man" for "free born," was a truly noble deed, and a specimen of real Masonic liberality! but since our worthy critic has told us that the tendency is "pernicious," I fear that like Galileo, the Grand Lodge of England will have to go down on her knees and do such penance as may be satisfactory to this worthy son of her worthy daughter.

As a Masonic reason for thus laying down the law we are told that — "The principle in the text is borrowed from one laid down by the Supreme Architect in the economy of salvation." Now, Bro. Cornelius, you must excuse me here reminding you of that other "text" which says, that before taking the mote out of your brother's eye you are first to take the beam out of your own." You a Masonic guide! You would tell us that English Freemasonry had done wrong when it, as you say, substituted "free man" for "free born." Why it appears from your own words that you have yet to learn what the real meaning of "Freemasonry" is. The chair of a Masonic Lodge, you must remember, is not exactly the pulpit of a Christian minister, nor is a Masonic review the proper place to promulgate the idea that the only way of salvation is through a belief in a Jewish Shiloh.

I am,

Yours fraternally,

W. P. BUCHAN.

REPORT OF PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

Laughton Vicarage, near Gainsborough,
10th August 1875.

SIR,—By whomsoever you were furnished with a report of the proceedings of Lincolnshire Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Boston, in June last, allow me to attest that your report was accurate and fair,—not so the official report just issued. The Provincial Grand Secretary has thought proper to eliminate certain important matters which you have published. You rightly state that I proposed a vote of thanks, which was cordially and unanimously passed, to Brother Pigott, and ordered to be recorded in the minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincoln, for his exemplary services in the cause of charity during the past year, and acknowledged by Brother Terry; also the proposals of Brothers Sutcliffe and Mantle in the cause of charity, which I seconded, are briefly mentioned, my name also being studiously omitted, and all reference whatever to the discussions both in Committee and the Grand Lodge which you antecedently reported,—and, I presume, with due authority,—respecting the projected Oliver Scholarship at the Boys' School, and yet the recollection of this Grand Officer, the P.G. Secretary, is so vivid that he relates, what he himself declared, that it was not in the power of the Grand Lodge to vote any of its hoarded money to charitable purposes without the previous recommendation of some omnipotent committee. I hope the bye-law on this matter will be altered. Although I disclaim reporting or writing on any subject discussed in the Grand Lodge, without the sanction of the Grand Master, I do most seriously claim that a succinct summary of all topics of discussion be accurately and faithfully recorded, and that no elimination, at the caprice of any one, be allowed, without the authority, at least, of the Deputy Grand Master.

One recommendation for the disposal of the Oliver Memorial Fund is mentioned, the other is suppressed. A question naturally arises; is that fair or ingenuous? We shall most certainly have a scholarship at the Boys' School; shall Lincolnshire have the credit? or, is it to be set aside by a side wind?

We have the most exalted specimens of genuine Masonry in Lincolnshire; men who would scorn any act of breach of faith and honour, men whose hearts and purses are at the disposal of any Masonic charity. Among the foremost of these stand Major Smythe and Brothers Sutcliffe and Pigott; these gentlemen shall not be snubbed, even if jealous juveniles are anxious to clip my wings. These gentlemen, by indefatigable exertions, by unexampled charity, have made Lincolnshire stand in the front rank of Masonry; all honour to them, and to whomsoever it is due. But we repudiate a garbled record of charity and devotion, even with the imprimatur of our Provincial Grand Lodge, to be circulated amongst the brethren on earth, even if our witness be in heaven and our record on high.

I am, Sir,

Yours respectfully,

DANIEL ACE, D.D.,

P.P.G. Chaplain for Lincolnshire, and P. Mark G. Chaplain for Lincolnshire.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

Travels in Portugal. By John Latouche, with illustrations by the Right Hon. T. Sotheron Estcourt. London: Ward, Lock, and Tyler, Warwick House, Paternoster Row.

WE are uttering a truism when we say there are travellers and travellers. There are travellers, for instance, who make the grand tour. This, not so very many years ago, meant a visit to the principal towns and cities of Europe. Now-a-days we fancy the grand tour embraces pretty well the whole of the civilised world. To this class belong the man, who by rail, road, or steamer has contrived, within a moderate space of time, to accomplish so many thousand miles of distance. He has seen towns innumerable, been bored by cathedrals, picture galleries, battle grounds, monuments innumerable. He has seen much, but learned little. In fact, his sole claim to enrolment among the noble and ignoble army of martyrs to an absurd fashion or mania for rushing about is that he has journeyed these several thousands of miles. To him, indeed, though not in its usual sense, may be applied the familiar adage,—"It is distance that lends enchantment to the scene," for it is only the distance travelled that makes him care at all for scenery. Then there is the Alpine traveller, usually of the muscular Christian type of man, who has ascended Monte Rosa, Mont Blanc, the Matterhorn, and all the peaks and passes of the Alpine range. He possesses great courage and activity, great presence of mind, great powers of endurance. Never a season passes but we hear of his doings, how on one occasion he narrowly escaped death in a crevasse, how on another he achieved some ascent of marvellous difficulty, which had seldom or never been attempted before. He communicates, perhaps, to the Alpine Club, a modest narrative of his achievements, and, in a few years, subsides into private life, honoured and respected by his friends and acquaintance, but having contributed very little to the general stock of knowledge about the country he has traversed. Then there is the naturalist traveller, who is often a bore, always an enthusiast, to whom the grand historic monuments that have been handed down to us from remote ages are of comparatively little worth, so long as he can find you a new kind of flea—supposing him to be an entomologist; a new species of bird, beast, or fish—supposing him to have a preference for either of those branches of natural history. Again there is the connoisseur in art, who is in raptures with everything pictorial or sculptural, though he has but a sorry modicum of art knowledge, and can no more distinguish between a genuine work of Titian or Correggio than we can describe the inhabitants—if there are any—of the planet Mercury. Another class of traveller are Cook's tourists, for setting down whom as batches of escaped lunatics the late consul and novelist, Charles Lever, we believe, got into hot water with the Foreign Office. These do a given journey in a given time, stopping at given places, and paying a given sum for their board and travel, though certain we believe take out tourists' tickets, and travel on their own hook between certain termini. We might, of course, extend this enumeration of the various species of the genus traveller almost ad infinitum, but we shall content ourselves with adding to our list one more, namely the man who travels for the purpose of enjoying and appreciating the country he visits, and of studying the people among whom he momentarily sojourns. To this class, we opine, belongs the author of these pages, Mr. John Latouche, whose experiences of travel in Portugal are no doubt familiar to such of our readers as have consulted the earlier numbers of the New Quarterly. That these experiences are now published in the form of a connected narrative must be a subject of congratulation, not only to the author's friends, but to all lovers of this class of literature.

In his preface to this volume Mr. Latouche describes his work as a collection of "nothing more than notes—mental notes, for I travelled without any design of future publication, and kept no single written memorandum of what I did or saw." Whether they are the result of mental notes only, or whether the style of the work is "discursive," as the writer suggests, is very immaterial. Here, at all events, is a most readable volume, from which we may gather more insight into Portuguese life or character than from all the guide books to this country that were ever written. Nor does it matter that he "did not travel continuously." Rather rejoice we that his "travels were interrupted by periods of residence," for these rests must have given time for reflection, time to digest what he had seen en route, and thus hasty conclusions have been probably avoided. Any slight derangement of a settled plan often induces a man to form impressions that are essentially unjust, and these pauses in his travels to which Mr. Latouche refers probably have enabled him to set right any such impression that he may have formed. Even since the first appearance in the New Quarterly of these notes, the author has seen fit to modify some of his statements, and it is just possible that, had he not broken his journey, these modifications might have been more frequent and more extensive. However this may be, the volume, we repeat, is eminently readable and is all the more valuable as it is intended, not for "the mere tourist, the ignorant, conceited, incurious, moneyed traveller, for whom so much deserved contempt has been expressed in current literature," but for those "who go to Portugal to enjoy a pleasant winter climate," or to "see a strange people, with a famous name in European history, to watch the successful working of a representative Constitution, to study archæology, ecclesiology, or natural history," or "who simply desire to take a month's holiday and a month's relaxation in spring, summer, or winter, in a quite new country (with no intention to 'do' the country in ordinary tourist fashion." This is just the kind of book that is needed. We have Guide Books innumerable, valuable, no doubt, in their way, but of use chiefly to those who, without an atom of true sentiment about them, travel, because it is the fashion. These fix their route beforehand, marking out the various stages of their intended tour, how long they shall stop at this, how long at that place, what lions they shall visit, and what they mean to spend. With such, we fancy, Mr. Latouche's book will find but little favour. Of what interest, for instance, to this kind of people is a sketch of "Farm Work in Northern Portugal," or of "Land Tenure and Tenant Farms?" The ordinary tourist neither knows nor cares anything about such interesting matters, and he would probably traverse Portugal, or any other country, from one end to the other and many times, without even giving a thought to these or similar questions. Yet, what more pleasant sight can be imagined than the following at pp. 45 and 46?—

"It was a 'festa'—a holiday—and the peasantry were all in their holiday dresses; the women very gaily attired, with embroidered muslin kerchiefs on their heads, over which is worn the heavy, black Spanish-looking hat, with ornaments of floss silk, made to curl and to look like a black ostrich feather. The costume of the women varies slightly in almost every parish of the kingdom; but it generally consists of an ample serge petticoat, descending to the ankle, and gathered round the waist into innumerable pleats, a close-fitting bodice (either black or gaily coloured) over a linen skirt, showing white on the shoulders and the arms, with a bright coloured kerchief, commonly red, or orange, or blue, crossed over their breasts. All this makes a picturesque costume, which well suits the comely, buxom, black-haired peasant women of the Minho province, with their rich olive complexions and fine eyes. The women have attained their national dress, and in the remoter parts, the men also; but in many places the latter are less conservative, and wear wide-awake hats, trousers and short jackets, in lieu of the old national costume.

"The women use their peculiar peasant jewellery of ancient Moorish design on feast days only. Heavy necklaces, of complicated pattern, suspend huge heart-shaped lockets on their breasts; in their ears are heavy pendant earrings. The women will often wear three or four such necklaces of gold, of a standard of no less than twenty carats; we have been assured that many of the peasant women carry about them no less than twenty or thirty pounds worth of gold ornaments."

The above scene was witnessed in the neighbourhood of Ponte de Lima, about ten or fifteen miles above Vianna on the river Lima. How many "ordinary tourists" would have left the high road to Oporto, and turned in this direction because it seemed to offer some "very rich and picturesque" scenery, or who among them would go out of their way to such a neighbourhood, "because it is classic ground to the student of Portugese literature." To them it would be no inducement to visit it, that "Not far from the town is the Quinta de Tapada, the country house of the great poet, Sá de Miranda, who holds the second place among the poets of Portugal, even if he does not deserve to rank with Camoens himself." Would it occur to them to note that "the 'Socco' or wooden solid slipper, worn by both men and women—by women only on gala days—is precisely the foot covering to be seen in the bazaars of Cairo or Damascus; and the Portuguese will shuffle off their slippers, in token of respect, as they enter a house or church, just as an Oriental will leave his at the entrance of his mosque." Again, we have another note which it is improbable the ordinary tourist could trouble himself to make:—

"Another instance of the prevalence and enduring character of Moorish art-forms is found in the Cangas or yokes of the oxen. While the ox-cart itself is purely Roman in shape and appearance, without having undergone the smallest change in its construction during fourteen centuries, the yoke is Oriental. It is, in shape, a high board, set edgewise upon the necks of the oxen, and is ornamented on each face, sometimes profusely and very beautifully, with characteristic Moorish incised designs." We have latterly had much experience of the value of macintoshes and other waterproof articles of clothing, but here is a waterproof, which, if not exactly becoming, is both cheap and serviceable.

"As the day was rainy, they"—the sturdy farmers on horseback, that is—"wore the curious waterproof cloak, made of rushes, which is peculiar to this province of the Minho—a waterproof which has many advantages over the very best macintosh coat; being, in the first place much lighter; in the second place, it does not make the wearer hot, or give him a head-ache, nor smell of tar; in the third place, a good one costs less than a shilling. Its appearance, however, is rather against it, and the wearer looks exactly as if he were thatched with straw from head to foot. These 'palhoças' are extensively used by all conditions of persons, and enable labouring men to do fieldwork on the rainiest days, when the water descends in tropical torrents, and when without some such protection no out of door labour could be done. Like many other customs and institutions in this province, where the Roman colonists have left such numerous traces of their presence, the 'palhoça' may perhaps be an inheritance from Roman times, and may be the representative of the Tuga Feminarlis of the Romans—the toga made of twigs."

The people of the district of Beira, in which Viseu is situated are thus described at p. 289:—

"The natives, men and women, in their hooded gaberdines of brown cloth—their only garment—without hats, with unkempt hair, and with bare legs, are as wild and savage looking a set of mountaineers as I ever saw, but they are well mannered and well behaved. They are a taller and more robust race than I had yet met with in Portugal, and ever since their long-continued resistance to the Romans, under their shepherd leader Viriatus, to the time of the Peninsular War, when the soldierly bearing and behaviour of the Beira regiments won praise from the Duke of Wellington, the fighting qualities of these mountaineers have been famous. The finest regiments in the Portuguese army are, to this day, recruited in this part of Beira."

We close the list of excerpts with the following sketch of what in England is called the "sporting parson," a village priest, who kindly guided our author "over the first three leagues of roadless hills," on his way from Lamego to Viseu. "A big, ruddy complexioned, genial man, of middle age," says Mr. Latouche, "his talk was not of 'matin, land, and compline prayer,' and I doubt if his Latin carried him further than the reading of his breviary and mass book. His reverence was, I was told at the inn, 'um grande caçador'—a famous sportsman, and much learned talk passed between us on his favourite pastime. He told me of waiting for woodcock at nightfall by the edge of damp meadows, and killing them by a pot shot on the ground. He told me of great shooting parties of a more legitimate kind, in autumn, on these heath-covered hills, when twenty or thirty or more sportsmen would walk in a line, interspersed with beaters and dogs, and get excellent sport with hares and red-legged partridges, great strong coveys of which birds rose now and then at our horses' feet, as if to corroborate his account; and the priest told me how sometimes an outlying she-wolf, with her cubs, would get up before the line, and then men and dogs would go wild with excitement, and every gun, far and near, would be fired off, and every one start in pursuit, and in the enthusiasm of his description, the jovial priest favoured me with a Portuguese equivalent of our national 'Yoicks!' that rang again in the morning air."

The conversation that ensues between the author and this worthy as to dogs and wolf hunting we have not space to quote, as we have prolonged our notice of the volume beyond what we intended originally. We have quoted enough, however, though very far from the most entertaining accounts and sketches, to show the justice of the opinion we have expressed, that the volume is written admirably, and with great modesty, and that its contents cannot fail to prove of interest to our readers. We may add, in conclusion, that the illustrations, by the Right Hon. T. Sotheron Estcourt, are in every way worthy of the book they adorn. Their artistic merit is as conspicuous as is the literary merit of Mr. Latouche's notes, be these "discursive" and the offspring of "mental notes" or not. The book itself, too, is well got up, that is, printed on good paper and in good type, with a good table of contents, and both substantially and neatly bound.

LITERATURE.

Henry Kingsley's "The Grange Garden," is still current in the St. James's, and, we may add, still as interesting as ever. Mr. Gibbs, in his "Battle of the Standard," is adding considerably to his reputation, already high by reason of his "Arlon Grange," and "Harold Erle." The editor's account of "Across the Channel with Captain Boyton," is a pleasantly written narrative, and his "Olla Podrida" of notes are smart; but they might be more numerous.

All the Year Round is a capital number. The serials are good, the occasional papers are generally interesting, but, to our mind, the most attractive contribution to its pages is the sketch among "Remarkable Adventurers," of "Casanova," whose career, even more than that of Cagliostro, merits the description of "Remarkable." Our readers cannot fail to be pleased with the sketch, and the hour or two they may devote to reading it will assuredly not be regretted.

The Charing Cross opens with further chapters of "Two Wedding Rings," which bids fair to be a well written serial, but its companion "Quits, Sweetheart," is very indifferent writing. We fully endorse the views of J. S. T. as to keeping open "Commons for Exercise and Recreation." We are already over crowded enough, and all the vacant space that can be retained must be kept if possible. But we do not feel disposed to accept his logic. His purpose is good, but his line of argument is very poor. Of the other papers, those containing "Some Personal Recollections of Latude," and on "Modern Legislation," are interesting.

In The London and Brighton will be found several readable papers, "A Romance of Real Life" being about the most prominent. "Tales of the Diamond Fields" will well repay perusal, and so will "My first Case: a Doctor's Story," by R. H. Stone. The serial, "A Legacy of Vengeance," is a fair specimen of this class of writing.

The Canadian Masonic News has two admirable articles, one on "Speculative Masonry," and the other "Fogyism and Radicalism." Both these we unhesitatingly commend to the notice of our readers. There is also a very full account of the twentieth annual communication of Grand Lodge of Canada, which was held on the 14th July. Of this we purpose giving a brief summary in our next issue.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE RELIEF OF THE SUFFERERS BY THE RECENT INUNDATIONS.

From Le Monde Maçonnique.

THE following is a translation of the circular letter addressed by the Council of the Order to all the Lodges under its jurisdiction:—

Very Dear Brethren,—In presence of the terrible disasters which have so cruelly smitten the people of one part of France, and have caused such wide-spread ruin, the Council of the Order, at its sitting of the 26th June last, decided that a subscription for the relief of the sufferers in the southern districts should be opened in the Grand Orient of France, and in all the Lodges in correspondence therewith.

The amounts so subscribed will be formed into a general fund, and paid in to the account of the Order, and the list of subscribers will be published.

We have no doubt, very dear brethren, that French Masonry will regard it as a point of honour, as well as a duty, to join its efforts to those which will be made for the relief of such dire misfortunes, and we earnestly invite you to forward the amount of your subscriptions as promptly as possible to the Grand Orient.

Receive, very dear brethren, the assurance of our fraternal sentiments.

In the name of the Council of the Order.

Cousin, Vice President,
Caubet, Poulle, } Secretaries.

MASONRY IN ROUMANIA.

THE Lodges in this country, according to Le Monde Maçonnique, held high festival on the 19th June last. Over a hundred brethren, belonging to every form of religion, and of every nationality, took part in this brilliant assembly, over which Bro. Costiasco, assisted by Bro. Ascher, editor of La Misthra, presided. Many admirable speeches were delivered, and the fête, to which music lent the charm of its presence, and which was publicly announced by a salute of cannon, was splendid. It is needless to add that the greatest cordiality prevailed throughout among the members of the different Lodges, whom a kindred spirit and the same love of humanity had brought together. We may remark, without fear of contradiction, that every one present will always retain the kindliest recollection of this excellent day.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE labours of Parliament are ended at last. The Queen has recognised the services during the Session of her faithful Lords and Commons, thanked them, and commended them to their scarcely less arduous duties during the recess. And by this time, perhaps, the majority of noble lords and honourable members are well on towards their third bag of grouse. But to summarise the Parliamentary history of the week. On Friday, Lord Oranmore and Browne put a question to the Duke of Richmond as to the precedence accorded, or supposed to have been accorded, to Cardinal Manning at the Prince of Wales's Garden Party at Chiswick. The question was not a proper one to have been put, nevertheless it was answered courteously enough, of course, yet curtly withal. The fancied precedence to his Reverence of the Red Hat proved to have been all moonshine. A number of Bills were then read a second time, sundry questions relating to the Indian Army asked and answered, and the Unseaworthy Ships Bill read a first time, after which the House rose. There was a short sitting on Saturday to get through some unopposed business. On Monday, a great deal of work was accomplished. After disposing of sundry questions, the Duke of Richmond moved the second reading of the National School Teachers (Ireland) Bill. A number of Irish peers opposed the measure, the Earl of Donoughmore moving its rejection. Lord Carlingford, however, supported the Government, and the Bill passed this stage by 38 contents to 17 non-contents. Then followed a long debate on the second reading of the Unseaworthy Ships Bill, moved by the Duke of Richmond, who, of course, took that opportunity of defending the withdrawal by the Ministry of their original and more comprehensive measure. Lord Carlingford, on the other hand, criticised the action of the Ministers, and having glanced at the nature of the measure before the House, Lord Hampton addressed their Lordships, and the Duke of Somerset, the Lord Chancellor and Earl Granville having said their say, more or less briefly, the second reading was agreed to. Other measures having been advanced, the Commons' Amendments to the Agricultural Holdings (England) Bill were agreed to, Earl Granville offering certain criticisms, the Duke of Richmond and the Marquis of Salisbury meeting them. The Commons' Amendments to the Supreme Court of Judicature Act (1873) Amendment (No. 2) Bill were also considered, and after sundry observations from Lord Selborne and the Lord Chancellor, agreed to with amendments. Other business, including the first reading of the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill having been disposed of, their lordships adjourned. The House met on Tuesday, both in the morning and evening, the Unseaworthy Ships Bill passing through Committee, and the report of amendments being agreed to. There was plenty of other business also transacted at these sittings. On Wednesday, a number of measures received the Royal assent by commission; a number of others, including the Unseaworthy Ships Bill, were read a third time and passed; and others, again, including the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill, passed through Committee, and were reported. On Thursday, there was a brief sitting for the purpose of passing a number of bills through the final stage. It was also agreed not to insist on their amendments to the Offences Against the Person Bill. Lord Oranmore and Browne then asked a question respecting the banquet given by the Lord Mayor of Dublin, at which the health of the Pope was proposed before that of the Queen. On Friday, the House assembled early, and the Royal assent was given to the remaining bills passed this Session, the Royal Commissioners being the Lord Chancellor, Earl Beauchamp and Lord Skelmersdale. The Queen's Speech was then read, and the Session of 1875 was at an end.

On Friday, in the House of Commons, a few unimportant questions having been answered, the third reading of the Unseaworthy Ships Bill was agreed to, after a short debate, in the course of which Sir C. Adderley was warmly praised by several members for his energy in connection with the bill, while the Chancellor described the bill succinctly, and most emphatically defended the conduct of the Government in relation thereto. A long discussion then ensued on the motion that the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, as amended, should be considered. A new clause was moved by Mr Norwood, but rejected. On clause 2 certain amendments were proposed by the Government, which had, at all events, the merit of drawing from Sir H. James a lengthy and rather smart criticism of the whole measure. Other amendments were made, considered, and accepted or rejected by the House, according as the weight of the Government leant for or against them. The bill was then re-committed, and a new clause added, after which it was read a third time and passed. The second reading of the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill gave the opportunity to the Marquis of Hartington, as leader of the Opposition, of criticising the conduct of business by Ministers during the whole Session, the text of his speech being Mr. Disraeli's speech at the recent banquet to Ministers at the Mansion House. The noble Marquis's speech elicited frequent and hearty cheers from his supporters, but Mr. Disraeli was equal to the occasion, and replied very effectively, being also applauded to the echo. The Sheriffs' Substitute (Scotland) Bill was then read a second time, and the other business disposed of. The House met on Saturday shortly after twelve. The Consolidation Fund (Appropriation) Bill passed through Committee. The Restriction on Penal Actions and Remission of Penalties Bill was considered as amended. Having then passed through Committee with Clause 2 amended, at the instance of Mr. Lowe, it was then reported and read a third time. The Registration of Trade Marks Bill passed through Committee, was reported and read a third time. The Committee on the Land Titles and Transfer Bill was next resumed at Clause 41, the remaining clauses being agreed to, after an attempt on the part of Mr. Jackson to get rid of Clause 80. Several new clauses were also added, whereupon the House resumed and the Bill was reported amid cheers. The Lords Amendments to the Employer's and Workmen's Bill were accepted. On considering their amendments to the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Bill, however, differences of opinion arose, but every attempt to overset the Government view was defeated. The other business, save, perhaps, the Sheriff's Substitute Bill, which passed through Committee, needs no comment. On Monday, after a number of preliminary questions had been disposed of, the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill, after some comment from Mr. Boord, to which the Chancellor of the Exchequer replied, was read a third time. The Land Titles and Transfer Bill was considered as amended, and then read a third time and passed. Then came the Indian Budget, or rather it would have come, but Mr. Fawcett moved a resolution, condemning governments for keeping the Indian Financial statement till the tail end of the Session. This, of course, only added to the delay, of which Mr. Fawcett complained. Lord G. Hamilton, however, replied smartly, and in the end carried the House with him by 90 to 55. He then rose and made his budget speech. This, of course, was criticised, but an amendment proposed by Mr. Smollett was defeated, and the original resolution of the Government was agreed to. Other business was disposed of, and the House adjourned till Wednesday. On that day several questions relating to Unseaworthy Ships, Colonel Baker's imprisonment, and other subjects were put and answered. The order of the day for the Increase of Episcopate Bill, at the instance of Mr. Beresford Hope, was discharged. The Lords' Amendments to a number of measures were considered and accepted, and the report on East Indian Revenues was brought up and agreed to. The House then disagreed with the Lords' Amendments to the Offences against the Person Bill, and a committee was appointed to draw up reasons. These amendments however were, as will be seen above, not insisted on by their lordships. On Friday the House met at twelve o'clock, soon after which it was summoned to the House of Lords to hear the Queen's speech read. It then returned, and members having taken a hearty leave of the Speaker and each other, the Parliamentary "breaking-up" was at an end.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales will visit Sheffield, and doubtless next week we shall have to chronicle a magnificent reception by the great Yorkshire town, differing, at least in this respect, from the needy knifegrinder of Canning—"Story, God bless you! I have none to tell, Sir." No doubt the Sheffield blades from highest to lowest will accord the Prince and Princess a most glorious welcome. Every kind of preparation is being made for the visit. His Grace the Duke of Norfolk, who has a residence in the neighbourhood, has issued cards of invitation to meet their Royal Highnesses at a Garden Party on Tuesday. Monday will be a general holiday. On the evening of Tuesday there will be a grand illumination. A licensing committee has been appointed. Banners and decorations are being prepared everywhere. The police force will be strengthened. In fact everything is being arranged so as to do honour to this occasion, the town, and the Royal visitors. The Railway is also making all the needful arrangements for the conveyance of people from the neighbourhood.

Thursday was the Festival of St. Grouse, and considering the doubtful appearance of the weather during the past few days, the season of 1875 seems to have opened more auspiciously than was generally expected. The reports from both the Scotch and English Moors vary somewhat, but the balance of opinion inclines towards a far better season this year than either last or the year before. Birds are reported generally to be strong on the wing, and the young broods to have been successfully reared. There is little, if any, talk of disease, and if sport be confined within moderate limits, so that the ravages by disease of the last two years may be repaired, it is confidently anticipated that next year will afford any amount of shooting. Some good bags are reported, especially from the North Derbyshire and South Yorkshire Moors. On Earl Fitzwilliam's, the Hon. — Fitzwilliam and Capt. Boscawen bagged 40 brace. On Hollins Moor, Mr. S. Cadman shot 24 brace. On Hemlin Moors, Mr. Fox and party obtained 38 brace. Elsewhere similarly successful bags have been made, and only decent weather is needed to make the sporting season of 1875 pass off most auspiciously.

Talking of the weather, we have had some very heavy thunderstorms within the last few days. On Saturday last one broke over the metropolis and neighbourhood. At Woolwich one of three privates who had sought shelter under a tree on the Common was killed, his companions being also injured, but not fatally. In Lee and Blackheath and thereabouts, the deluge of rain flooded the streets and the lower floors of the houses to the depth of several feet; indeed, in many parts of Kent the storm was furious, and caused heavy damage. Similar reports have come from other parts of the country, and again on Thursday, from Northampton, Manchester, and Sheffield where the rain descended in floods, and great damage was done.

Captain Webb's first attempt to swim across the Channel has failed, owing to the roughness of the weather. It was a gallant venture, and had he achieved it would have gained for the gallant Captain a niche in the temple of fame. Webb started from a small boat moored off the Pier-head, Dover, at 5 p.m. on Thursday, the weather being all that he could desire, but after accomplishing just one half the distance, the ever increasing roughness of the water compelled him to desist, and he was taken aboard the lugger that accompanied him, none the worse for his labour. However, Captain Boyton did not cross the Channel the first time he essayed to do so, and possibly Captain Webb, if only the weather and tide will serve him, may accomplish it, if he determines to make a second attempt.

Great events often spring from trifling causes. There is no saying how much of the unpopularity which the late Government contrived to incur during its last years of office might have been due to its discontinuance of the usual Ministerial white bait dinner at the close of the Session. Mr. Disraeli is a man of tact, and knows well enough that the careful observance of even the least important formalities is oftentimes more necessary than a strict adherence to the weightier matters of the law. Accordingly both last year and this nearly all the Members of the Government assembled round the familiar hospitable board at Greenwich, when each congratulated the other on the labours they had achieved, and the near prospect of a brief respite from work. We admire the wisdom of the premier in restoring this annual custom to all its pristine dignity. None can point the finger of scorn at him and his colleagues, as many, perhaps, may have done at the late Government, exclaiming, perhaps, sotto voce :— What a beggarly lot of rulers we have got, they cannot even dine!

The O'Connell celebration in Dublin did not end as well as it began. There were some rather serious differences of opinion in connection with one of the banquets, a considerable number being anxious that Mr. Butt should have spoken the praises of the Liberator and not Sir C. G. Duffy, whom the Lord Mayor had chosen for this task of honour. This led to a rather boisterous explosion, and neither the Lord Mayor nor Mr. Butt was able to allay it.

A rather serious matter has been brought under the notice of the Duke of Richmond, as President of the Council. On Saturday last, a deputation, representing the foreign importers of live stock—introduced by Mr. Twells, one of the Members for the City—had an interview with his Grace, and gave him to understand that unless the very severe restrictions imposed on the importation of cattle were somewhat relaxed, they would be compelled to close the supply altogether. Everybody, of course, has an interest in the question of meat supply, and the exclusion from our markets of the German and Dutch cattle would probably cause the price of meat to rise to famine prices. The deputation asked that they should be put on the same footing as the importers of Irish stock, or, in other words, that while every diseased animal should be rigidly condemned, cattle and sheep ascertained to be perfectly sound should go free into the market. The Duke promised inquiry into the matter as promptly as possible, but since then two cases have occurred, in one of which 700 or 800 Dutch sheep, in the other 1,500 sheep and lambs, were ordered to be transhipped to Deptford for slaughter because, in each, one sheep was found to be suffering from foot-and-mouth disease. This involved a loss to the importers of 5s per head. Now anything that can be done to prevent such losses should be done, but it must not be overlooked that one of such black sheep will most probably infect a whole herd. It is impossible for the most skilful veterinary inspector to discover the disease in its early stages of germination. Thus these animals that are certified to be sound may, nevertheless, have in them the germs of the disease, and thus might be the means of innoculating our own herds. It is, perhaps, the lesser of the two evils to bear with a short supply than to run the risk of having our home produce infected. If the cargoes were landed direct at Deptford, and there examined, instead of being sent up to London, the additional cost of reconveyance to Deptford would be saved.

In the sporting world Yachting for the moment is in the ascendant. The Regatta of the Royal Victoria Club commenced on Tuesday, and will close to-day. That of the Royal Albert Club will be held next week. In Cricket there have been several return matches played between the leading counties, such as Sussex and Surrey, &c., those between Middlesex and Notts, and Gloucestershire and Yorkshire being still in progress. We note also the meeting of the International Gun and Polo Club at Spa. The principal race meetings this week have been those of Egham and Windsor.

Our foreign notes are few. The attempt to overwhelm Carlism has not yet proved successful, and the insurrection in the Herzegovina seems from all accounts to be extending, and becoming more formidable from day to day. If the revolt is strictly localised, we do not anticipate there will be any serious difficulty on the part of Turkey in suppressing it. But if Bosnian and Montenegrin interference is permitted or connived at, the Turks have a tough piece of work before them for the summer. We trust the Great Powers will signify unmistakably to these petty, if rude buccaneers, that they have no intention of allowing the peace of Europe to be broken on their account. Once the insurgents find that Europe means peace, they and their adherents from other quarters will very soon come to terms and the rights of Turkey will no longer be imperilled.

A marriage will shortly take place between His Imperial Highness Prince Demetrius, G.M. and Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Grand Council, 33rd degree, for Scotland, &c., and eldest son of His Imperial Highness Prince Rhodocanakis, and Kathleen, eldest daughter of Capt. Geo. Newcomen R.N., of 33 Queen's Gate, South Kensington, and Feltwell Lodge, Norfolk.

We learn from Le Monde Maçonnique that M. Emile Littré, member of the French Academy, representative of the people, and author of a French Dictionary, as well as of numerous scientific works, was initiated on the 8th ult., in the Lodge "La Clémente Amitié." Fr. Charles Cousin, Vice President of the Council of the Order, presided, and there was present a large attendance of brethren. M. Littré has already attained the ripe age of 74; his joining the Order, observes our worthy French contemporary, is no act of youthful phantasy or misplaced enthusiasm, but a deliberate act, and the result evidently of a well-matured conviction of the immense value of Freemasonry. The same authority, in speaking of the Lodge banquets, which occur ordinarily at the season of the summer solstice, anticipates that the collections made for the relief of the sufferers by the recent inundations will prove considerable, having regard, of course, to the number and position of those present. The Lodge La Clémente Amitié has voted two hundred francs towards the subscription being raised by the Grand Orient, while, at the meeting held for the initiation of M. Littré, six hundred francs were collected, one-half of which will go to the Masonic Orphanage, and the other to the relief of the sufferers.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION FOR AGED FREEMASONS AND WIDOWS OF FREEMASONS.

THE Committee met at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, 11th August. Present — Bros. Major Creaton, chairman, H. G. Warren, R. Spencer, J. A. Farnfield, J. G. Stevens, A. H. Tattershall, L. Stean, W. Stevens, James Brett, S. Rawson, Griffiths Smith, L. Newton, Thomas Cubitt, W. Hilton, Prof. Erasmus Wilson and Jabez Hogg. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The Wardens' Report stated that the Entertainment kindly voted at the last meeting was held on the 30th ultimo, and gave great pleasure to the inmates assembled. The death of two annuitants was reported. The Chairman was authorised to sign cheques for payment of annuities due 1st September. One candidate was placed on the list for election in May next, and permission was granted to an annuitant to reside in the Asylum at Croydon. Votes of thanks were accorded to Bro. Griffiths Smith, for drawing up agreement, and to the Chairman.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

FRIDAY EVENING.

PARLIAMENT was this day prorogued by Commission. The following is

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I am happy to be enabled to release you from your attendance in Parliament.

The relations between myself and all Foreign Powers continue to be cordial, and I look forward with hope and confidence to the uninterrupted maintenance of European peace.

The visit paid to this country, on the invitation of my Government, by the ruler of Zanzibar, has led to the conclusion of a supplementary convention, which, I trust, may be efficacious for the more complete suppression of the East African slave trade.

I have learnt with deep regret that the expedition dispatched by my Indian Government from Burmah, with a view to open communications with the Western Provinces of China, has been treacherously attacked by an armed force while on Chinese territory. This outrage, unhappily involving the death of a young and promising member of my Consular service, is the subject of careful inquiry; and no effort shall be spared to secure the punishment of those by whom it was instigated and committed.

The condition of my colonial empire is generally prosperous. Progress has been made in the settlement of questions affecting the constitution and government of Natal; and I confidently look for important and valuable results from the proposal for a conference of the South African colonies and states.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have voted for the public service.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is gratifying to me to find that the lengthened consideration you have given to the various statutes which have, from time to time, been passed for the preservation of peace in Ireland has resulted in a measure which, while relaxing the stringency of former enactments, is calculated to maintain the tranquillity of that country.

I have, with pleasure, given my assent to an act for facilitating the improvement of the dwellings of the working classes in large towns, which will, I trust, lead to the decrease of many of the principal causes of disease, misery, and crime. I feel sure that this legislation, together with that relating to the consolidation and amendment of the sanitary laws, and of the laws relating to friendly societies, will greatly promote the moral and physical welfare of my people.

It has afforded me much satisfaction to give my assent to two important statutes for the amendment of the acts relating to master and servant and trade offences, and of the law of conspiracy as connected with these offences—statutes which will, I trust, place the relations of employers and employed on a just and equal footing, and add to the contentment and goodwill of large classes of my subjects.

Among the enactments which you have passed for the improvement of the law, I am well pleased to observe that a comprehensive measure for simplifying the title and facilitating the transfer of land in England has taken its place in the statute book; that an act has been passed for the amendment of the law of entail in Scotland; and that you have made provision, by amending the Judicature Act of 1873, for bringing the great changes in my civil courts, and their procedure which it inaugurated, into immediate and practical effect.

The state of public business and the differences of opinion naturally arising on a varied and comprehensive scheme, have unfortunately prevented you from completing the consideration of the Merchant Shipping Bill, but I rejoice that you have been able, by a temporary enactment, to diminish considerably the dangers to which my seafaring subjects are exposed.

By the Agricultural Holdings' Act, you have greatly and beneficially enlarged the powers of owners, limited in interest, to offer to their tenants a sufficient security for judicious outlay upon the farms they occupy, and, while maintaining absolute freedom of contract, you have raised a presumption of rights, under which a new inducement will be given to expend capital upon the improvement of land.

I have every reason to hope that the progress of the revenue, which has marked recent years, will be fully sustained in the present. The arrangements which you have made with respect to the reduction of the National Debt, and those for the better regulation of loans for public works will lead to valuable improvements in our system of Imperial and local finance.

The enactment for a registration of trade marks will supply a deficiency that has for some time been felt in our commercial system.

I trust that the act constituting a new bishopric at St. Albans may prove advantageous to the vast population of the dioceses affected by the measure.

In bidding you farewell for the recess, I pray that the blessing of Providence may fall on your recent labours, and accompany you in the discharge of all your duties.

MASONIC HONOUR.

THIS attribute of Masonic faith is no doubt frequently abused. Men put faith in others because they are members of the Craft, and, as the fruit of their trust, they are often deceived. The obligations of the Masonic Brotherhood, as all who have taken them well know, can only be violated at the expense of honour, as well as of one's general integrity. That which is gained by such derelictions is nothing less than perjured gold, which the years will cover with rust, and which will blast Masonic integrity as with the breath of a sirocco.

What is called honour, even in ordinary society, demands civility and respect, as well as a strict regard for truth, and all promises as well. No one can be an honourable man who violates or trifles with his own words or his own promises. They are his notes in the bank of honour, and if he suffers them to go to protest, his honour is gone, and he goes into moral bankruptcy. This is the result, even in general business society, as well as in the common walks of life. But much more than all this is required in Masonic relationships; for there men take upon themselves voluntarily obligations of relative integrity which they cannot violate without being guilty of moral perjury.

A Mason owes to his brothers who are worthy—that is, who are in good standing in the Order—respect and decent treatment, and in all dealings he is pledged by his obligations to treat a brother Mason, "or any other man," with a strict regard to justice, right and honourable equity; so that if the transaction is ever reviewed it will be seen that no wrong was done or intended.

The integrity of Masonic honour has ever been the boast of the Craft; so that it has grown to be a general conviction that he who has taken upon himself the obligations of the Fraternity is reliable—that is, that he will be true to his word, and that he will go to the length of his cable-tow in serving his brethren. But that all Masons fill the measure of this conviction is never claimed. We well know that it is human to err, and Masons have been taught that it is divine to forgive.

It is said that the eagle delights to ride above the fury of the storm, because there he dwells in safety, and feels the dignity of his kingship. It is, in some respects, the same with the Mystic Brother. In his Lodge he is secluded from the world, and taught the lessons of wisdom which enable him to govern himself with prudence, and conduct himself properly among his brethren. It is there he gains strength to build up his integrity, and, therefore, it is not remarkable that Masons, as a general rule, are honourable men. Why this is so may not be acknowledged by the world, for they do not see it, and consequently cannot comprehend it.

What men are in their faith and honour, in their integrity and principles, is the result of education, usually obtained after they have come to the years of maturity. The schools only instruct them in the sciences, and even the churches too often rely upon excitement, or upon the doctrinal influences of theological dogmas, which are much more apt to sectarianize the mind than to mould the heart in the dignity of an enlarged capacity.

It is possible for men, under certain religious training, to make pretensions to religion, without becoming moral, as they get the impression that devotion to the Deity is paid in songs and prayers and sermons, instead of services to poor perishing humanity. Even Masonic honour teaches a different doctrine than this, because it demands that a true and faithful regard be paid to the wants and character, the complaints and sufferings, of humanity around us. This is honour worthy of any profession, and the world, and even our Masonic Order needs much more of it. The Mason who travels in his thought no further than the mere ritualistic services of the Order still remains a novice, and it is not wholly strange that many such fall below the standard of Masonic honour and integrity. To be faithful to one's word; to be frank in action, sincere in purpose, and true to our obligations, are the continual demands of Masonic honour.

Men may be rich, intelligent, enterprising, and even popular; they may hold office and place, and live in the full tide of public prosperity, and yet may be wanting in true honour. Many do not see it until it is too late, and they retire to their last resting place with a very few regrets.

Honour grows not save upon honest soil. It is never the product of pride, or even of policy. It is the outshoot, the foundation basis, the result of careful thought and honest purpose. Some men borrow books, and never return them. The ownership, they imagine, is a small matter, and if not guilty of direct theft, they certainly are of obtaining goods under false pretences. Such men are usually loose in moral principles, and reckless of any nice sense of honour, no doubt, in many other matters. Honesty and honour are very near akin, and it is a difficult matter for any man to display the one when he does not possess the other.

Among creditors and debtors it does not always follow that delinquency involves the latter, for, in many instances, the creditor is full handed, and might, if he would, show some leniency, such as would set the poor debtor up again. But, alas! for the selfish spirit of human cupidity, many a poor debtor is hung without ceremony, demonstrating that his creditor had neither mercy nor honour.

Among Masons, honour is an especial attribute—an essential virtue, and the perfect character of the Craft cannot be sustained without it.

"Act well your part; there all the honour lies,"

Is recognised as being soundly ethical, as well as correct in principle, in all fraternities. That this noble principle should be wisely vindicated by every Mason is the expectation of the Craft everywhere; for that which is right and honourable is strictly enjoined in every law of Masonic jurisprudence. Even what the world sometimes calls honour will not always fill the Masonic requirement, for that is often founded on wealth, or office, or scholarship, or in some honorary relationship. Masonic honour must be an indwelling principle, and must show itself in every department of business, as well as in social life. It is not enough that any one should be a "bright Mason," for ethical and philosophic Masonry requires more than mere mystic brightness. To be well versed in mechanical Masonry, it is true, is a universal obligation, and to serve in the temple of honour is equally so, for without honour there is no Masonry, and he who fails in its evincement is just that far below the Masonic profession.

In Masonic teachings, it is not supposed that any man will be brought to the threshold of the temple unless he is honourable, and it is on this account that honourable action is so strictly demanded of the Brotherhood. Of course dull and stupid men, as well as those who may be educated shysters, are not apt to pay any very strict regard to this particular Masonic feature. Their conceptions of Masonry are often crude and sinister, and if the institution does not work to suit their notions, their interest dies away like the sanguine hopes of defeated candidates.

Honour, indeed, is essential to the peace and progress and happiness of society everywhere, and well would it be if men generally would watch themselves more strictly in this particular trait of character, for if they did, the world would certainly have fewer causes for litigation, and the standard of human respectability would be greatly elevated.

Among us, as Masons, a more tenacious adherence to its demands would increase our influence largely, as well as add greatly to our mystic prestige.—"H." in Masonic Advocate.

ENTHUSIASTIC FREEMASONS.

A SPLENDID passage up the Scheldt, the sea almost as smooth as glass; the unclouded sky, decked with countless stars, and illuminated by the brilliancy of the harvest moon, reflects upon the gently rippling surface. All was full of life and enjoyment on board the good ship. Song floated upon the balmy air, varied by the sound of graceful movement on the "light fantastic toe." Gradually the gleeful spirits depart to rest, and there remain on deck nine members of the sterner sex. Some were known to each other as Masons, the remainder were soon discovered to belong to the mystic brotherhood. "We are more than enough to form a Lodge," suggests one. The hint is at once acted upon. A place was soon found, in which they were as isolated and secure from observation even as were the ancients in the valley of Jehoshaphat. A well known Past Master was elected to preside, the Lodge formally opened, and the whole of the fifteen sections rehearsed. "And," says our informant, "I can tell you they were worked exceedingly well, considering the impromptu arrangement of the accidental meeting." Well done, brethren! similar cases may have occurred, but certainly have not been recorded. You employed your time wisely, while gently floating up the Scheldt.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Britannic Lodge, No. 33.—This Lodge held its recreation banquet on Friday, the 6th instant, at the Alexandra Palace. The gathering was a numerous one, covers being laid for over a hundred guests, a large proportion of whom were ladies. The chair was taken by Bro. Crombie, one of the P.M.'s of the Lodge, in the unavoidable absence, through indisposition, of the W.M., Bro. Clynoweth. After the banquet, which it is almost needless to add was served by Messrs. Bertram and Roberts in their most approved style—indeed, we have seldom assisted at a more recherché one—the less formal part of the proceedings commenced. Bro. Crombie, in proposing the first toast—the health of Her Majesty the Queen—offered an almost needless apology for having had to undertake the duties of chairman at short notice. He expressed himself highly pleased at meeting so numerous a company, promised to indulge in no lengthy speeches, and trusted that this first attempt to enjoy themselves in such excellent company around the festive board would by no means prove the last. The health of the Queen was a toast which all Englishmen received with enthusiasm, and such an assembly of Masons would, he felt sure, accord it a most enthusiastic welcome. "God Save the Queen" having been sung, the Chairman then gave the health of the M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, speaking in appropriate terms of His Royal Highness's fitness for that important office, and with a view to enlisting the sympathies of the lady guests, who might not fully understand the relationship existing between the G.M. and the Craft, Bro. Crombie coupled with this toast the name of Her Royal Highness the Princess. The response was enthusiastic, the appropriate four part song, "The Cambrian Plume," by Brinley Richards, following. Among the other toasts were those of the Chairman, who fittingly and modestly acknowledged the honour done him, and the gratification he felt at having been able to preside, and who, in expatiating in the course of his remarks on the value of Masonry, mentioned incidentally that a son of his had served during the Crimean campaign, and that the true value of Masonry would be best illustrated in times of difficulty and danger, as, for instance, were a brother wounded or taken prisoner of war, his sufferings would certainly be alleviated if, fortunately, he came in contact with a fellow Mason. "The Ladies," who had so kindly honoured the gathering with their presence on this occasion; with this toast was coupled the name of Bro. C. Horsley, who indulged in a free poetic vein of language in returning thanks on their behalf. Other songs were sung, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Bro. Lawler, who, himself, gave the familiar "Largo al Factotum," from Il Barbiere de Siviglia, with his usual heartiness. Shortly afterwards the meeting broke up, amid general expressions of pleasure at its success. The Chairman was assisted in his duties by Bro. Magnus Obren, P.M. and Secretary of the Lodge, who acted as his S.D. There were also present the Secretary Bro. T. A. Chubb; the following P.M.'s, viz., Bros. A. G. Church, G. E. Eachus, and F. G. Finch; Bros. C. W. Turner, Robertson, Davis, Clouston, Pauley, Wm. Sugg, Rowland, Pendred S.W., Sicks, G. W. Stevenson, Boddy, Bloor, Stroats, Henry Mandalay; nearly the whole of whom were accompanied by their ladies. The following were among the visitors: Major Crombie, Wm. Battye, Charles Bennett, W. W. Morgan, &c. Bro. Lawler was assisted in the musical arrangements by the Misses Wild and Wells and by Bro. Carter.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 165.—This Lodge held its weekly meeting on the 11th of August, at the White Hart Tavern, Aldchurch Lane, E.C. Present—Bros. Woodward W.M., Tarquhand S.W., Blackall J.W., J. K. Pitt Secretary, J. Constable Treasurer, A. Bell S.D., Croaker J.D., Blinkhorn I.G., Christopher Tyler. Past Masters Bros. E. Gotthell (Preceptor) and Bloomfield. Visitors—Bros. D. Posener, Walker, Geo. Harvey of Ebury Lodge 1348. Business—The second degree rehearsed, Bro. Walker candidate. The first three sections of the degree were worked by Bro. Gotthell, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was then adjourned to Wednesday, the 18th instant, when Bro. Tarquand will preside. The brethren then separated.

British Kaffrarian Lodge, No. 853.—The Masonic brethren celebrated the anniversary of St. John's Day by attending divine worship at Trinity Church in the forenoon, and holding a banquet in the evening. The weather throughout was propitious. At 10 o'clock the brethren assembled in the Temple, Alexandra Road, where, after the ordinary Lodge ceremonies had been duly observed, they formed into procession. The newly formed Rose Croix Chapter being partly represented, and headed by the excellent band of the 32nd Light Infantry, proceeded to Trinity Church. The service was conducted by the venerable Archdeacon Kitton, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Lewis. The choir was in attendance, and besides the usual Psalms was sung the anthem, "Oh Lord my God." An appropriate discourse, founded on the text in St. Paul's First Epistle to Timothy vi. 1-7, was delivered by the Venerable Archdeacon, who explained that the subject was one which he had intended to preach from on the previous Sunday, if he had occupied the pulpit on that day, it being the 38th anniversary of the accession of Her Majesty Queen Victoria to the throne. Gratifying allusion was made to the recent election of the Heir Apparent to the high office of Grand Master of English Freemasons, and to the watchword of the Craft as reported to have been named on that occasion by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. "Loyalty" to the Sovereign of the realm or to supreme rulers, under whatever name or country was also impressed and dilated on. The preacher was listened to throughout his discourse with rapt attention by the large congregation assembled within the edifice. At the conclusion of the service, the brethren proceeded, in order of procession, to the Temple, where, after an interval, during which the Lodge room was thrown open to the public. The ceremony of installing the W.M. for the ensuing year took place, viz., Bro. T. W. Robinson, who then invested his officers as follow:—Bros. C. J. Egan I.P.M., T. Broster S.W., J. C. Wenman J.W., W. F. Sissing Secretary, J. S. F. Johnson Treasurer, G. Randall S.D., James Webb J.D., Hasell I.G., J. Hendry Tyler, and H. Dickenson and W. Stoyle Stewards. The Lodge was then adjourned until seven o'clock in the evening, when between forty and fifty brethren assembled at the Central Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous banquet, that reflected great credit on the establishment. Ample justice having been done the viands, the following toasts were proposed and responded to: the Queen, Prince and Princess of Wales and the Royal Family, the Governor, the Army and Navy, responded to by Bro. E. Vaughan, 32nd Light Infantry; the Grand Master, the Hon. R. Southey, responded to by the S.W.; the Craft throughout the world, responded to by Bro. E. Vaughan; the W.M. and officers of the past year, responded to by Bro. C. J. Egan I.P.M. and by the P.S.W.; the W.M. and officers of the present year, responded to by the W.M. and P.M. McIntyre; Visiting Brethren, responded to by Bro. Dr. Hullah, G. B Attwell, Sonning and Kemp; Poor and Distressed Masons, by Bro. Portbury; Our departed Brethren, by Bro. H. Smith; The Ladies, responded to by Bro. Fleming and Hasell. A further adjournment took place, after which harmony was called on, and lasted until nearly midnight, and the brethren, after thoroughly enjoying themselves, departed.

Meridian Lodge, No. 893—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, the 9th inst., at the National School-room, New Street, Millbrook, Cornwall. Present—Bros. the Right Hon. Earl of Mount Edgcumbe W.M., Worth P.M. S.W., O'Neil P.M. J.W., Henwood Sec., Veale P.M. Treas., Bickford P.M. S.D., Harris P.M. J.D., Coath P.M. D.C., P.G. Filmer I.P.M. Steward, Hobbins I.G. pro tem, Fisher Tyler, Rev. F. T. W. Wintle Hutchings Chaplain, Carne Organist, Cawse, Evans, Penin, Tradgold, Sennett, Webber, Henwood, Ford, Yule, and Boyle. Visitors—Bros. Barnes P.M. and Hawke, Elliott Lodge, St. Germans. Business—To initiate Rev. John Bartlett, vicar Millbrook Church, Arthur Brickwood Hutchings, solicitor, Devonport, and Mr. John William Trevan, carpenter, Millbrook; to pass Bros. John Davey Henwood, surgeon, Charing Cross Hospital, London, and Thos. B. J. Ford, builder, Millbrook; to raise Bro. Haggerty to the sublime degree of M.M. After labour the brethren adjourned to the Commercial Inn for refreshment, and spent a most agreeable evening, presided over by Bro. Worth P.M., surgeon, Millbrook.

St. Barnabas, No. 948.—A regular meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Linslade, Bucks, on Tuesday, the 3rd inst. Present—Bros. W. King W.M., Killett P.M. as S.W., Farwig as J.W., Howell W.M. 1470 as S.D., Forbes P.M. 65 J.D., Bradshaw I.G., Fountain I.P.M., McCubbin P.M., Poynter P.M. 1070 Secretary, Morgan, Rafferty, Procter, Holland and others. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, Bro. Nicholson presented himself for examination previous to passing. This ordeal having been satisfactorily gone through, the Lodge was opened in the 2nd degree, and Bro. McCubbin having performed the requisite ceremony, the candidate retired. Bros. Wilkinson and Rae were then examined as to their proficiency in the 1st and 2nd degrees, by Bro. Forbes, were entrusted, and left the Lodge whilst it was opened in the 3rd degree. Upon again presenting themselves, they were raised, and took their seats in Lodge as M.M.'s. An adjournment to October having been agreed to, and the usual interrogatories made from the chair, the Lodge was closed in ancient form. The St. Barnabas Lodge has made very considerable strides during the past twelve months, and is now one of the largest in the united province of Berks and Bucks. In connection with it there is a Royal Arch Chapter meeting quarterly, the second Thursday in the months of February, May, August, and November, and on the same afternoon, at an earlier hour, the St. Barnabas Lodge of Mark Masters hold their meetings.

Furness Lodge, No. 995.—This Lodge held its meeting on Tuesday, the 3rd of August, at the Masonic Temple, Ulverston. Bro. R. Dodgson P.M. 995 and 1390, and P.P.G.S.B. Cumberland and Westmoreland occupying the chair. Bro. R. Dodgson rehearsed the first lecture in admirable style, after which Bro. T. Dodgson P.M. 995 and 1390 went through ceremony of "raising" with more than his usual impressiveness.

Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017.—An Emergency Meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 4th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street. Bros. J. Grunebaum W.M., A. D. Loewenstark P.M. as S.W., Posener J.W., Galliford S.D., Salomons I.G., E. P. Albert A.G.P. Secretary, De Solla P.M., &c. The Lodge was opened, and ballots were taken for the admission of Messrs. A. Freedman and Briedenbergh, who were initiated into the Order by the W.M. Bro. E. P. Albert then, by the courtesy of the W.M., passed Bros. Crump, Smith, and Budenber, and raised Bro. Cooper to the 3rd degree, in his usual effective manner. There being no other business on the agenda paper, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Hogg's, the Opera Hotel, Bow Street, where a hapital banquet was provided, and a very enjoyable evening was passed. The visitors were Bros. G. P. Perks P.M. British Caffraria Lodge 853, E. Hurton 1003, Cairo 125 Progress Lodge, and D. Posener J.W. 185.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 5th instant, at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. Present—Bros. C. Deakin W.M., J. Rose S.W., J. A. Smith J.W., F. H. Ebsworth P.M. Treasurer, F. Walters P.P.G.P. Middlesex P.M. Secretary, W. Batchelor S.D., J. Stock as J.D., F. Garbett I.G., J. H. Harnsworth P.M., &c. The Lodge having been opened, Bro. R. Sparks was raised to the 3rd degree; Bros. J. K. Deakin and S. E. Shaw were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and Messrs. E. H. Morley and J. Savage were initiated; the raisings and passings being rendered by Bro. Ebsworth in a very able manner. Bro. A. MacIntyre, St. John's Lodge, No. 73, was elected a joining member. A five guinea jewel was voted to the W.M., on his retirement from the chair, for his valuable services rendered in that capacity. The Lodge was then closed. There was no banquet, but an hour was passed in social conversation, after which the brethren separated.

Falcon Lodge, No. 1416.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday, the 11th of August, at the Masonic Hall, Thirsk. Present—Bros. J. Fairburn W.M. 1337 acting W.M., J. Rhodes S.W., W. Coltman acting J.W., T. J. Wilkinson Secretary, A. G. Duncombe acting S.D., W. Hall J.D., G. Ayre I.G., H. Milburn Tyler, and Bros. Wright, Ellsley, Barley and Irving. Business—Messrs. C. G. L. Kipling and J. S. Farmery were ballotted for and accepted, and subsequently having been proposed, were admitted, duly initiated, invested, and charged. The Secretary reported what had been done towards securing the admission of Arthur R. Bourne into the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

Truth Lodge, No. 1458.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, 7th August, at the Royal Archer, Dale Street, Manchester. Present—Bros. Henry Smith W.M., Charles Pearson S.W., Charles Joel Kent J.W., John Kinder P.M. Secretary, Thomas Tyers P.M. Treasurer, James Taylor Steward, R. Fallows I.G. P.M.'s Bros. Jno. W. Turner, Thomas Tyers and John Kinder. Visitors—Bros. John Walton 422, Oswego, New York, U.S. America, John Hey S.W. 387, John Croll 25, Daniel Lomas 823, R. Dottie 1161, R. Pierpont 645. Business—Minutes of last regular meeting read and confirmed. Bro. Oldham then answering the test questions to the satisfaction of the Lodge, was entrusted by the W.M. and retired. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Oldham was passed to a Fellow Craft, by the W.M. in his usual able manner. The Lodge was then closed in peace and harmony at 6.30, after which the brethren and visitors adjourned to refreshments provided by the host, Bro. Potts, in his usual excellent style. The cloth being removed, the W.M. proposed the Masonic toasts. Bro. Turner I.P.M. proposed the Visitors, and Bro. Tyers P.M. the W.M., all of which were duly honoured and responded to. The brethren separated about nine o'clock, after spending a very pleasant evening.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1507.—The above Lodge of Instruction held its weekly meeting on Friday, at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville Road. Bros. Shand acting as W.M., Scales S.W., Yeomans J.W., Stiles Secretary, Jas. Willing jun. S.D., Dawkins I.G., Cox Tyler, T. A. Adams P.G.P. Preceptor, and Bros. Rapkin, Carter, Read and Kingham. The Lodge having been opened, the minutes were read and confirmed. The W.M. then rehearsed the ceremony of initiation. Bro. Rapkin acting as candidate. The 1st, 2nd and 3rd sections of the 1st lecture were worked by the brethren, assisted by Bro. Adams. The ceremony of the 3rd degree was worked, Bro. Read acting as candidate. Bro. Scales was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Shand, acting as W.M., for the efficient manner in which he had performed the ceremonies, and his able conduct of the duties of the chair. The meeting was adjourned to the following Friday.

St. Martins-le-Grand Lodge, No. 1538.—A warrant having been granted for this Lodge, it were consecrated on Tuesday last, at Bro. C. Gosden's, Masons' Avenue. The ceremonies of consecration and installation were ably rendered by Bro. Jas. Terry P.P.G.S.B. Herts., assisted by Bro. Col. Burdett P.G.M. Middlesex, Rev. Dr. Colles, and H. E. Frances. Bro. H. J. Green was installed as the first W.M. After the business of the Lodge a banquet was provided by Bro. C. Gosden, covers being laid for 40.

BOMBAY.

Holmesdale in the East Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 72 (E.C.)—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, 29th June, at Bombay. Present — Mark Masters Alex. McKenzie P.P.D.G.M. W.M., M. Balfour P.P.D.G.M. P.M., C. E. Mitchell P.G.S.W. S.W., W. C. Rowe P.G.S.O. J.W., J. E. Tyers as S.O., O. Tomlinson as J.O., Dr. De Tatham S.D., C. Tudball Secretary, W. G. Davie as I.G., Hatchell Tyler, and several other brethren and visitors. The Lodge was opened in due and solemn form at 6.30 p.m. The summons convening the meeting having been read, the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Bros. John Middleton and Charles Peters, of Concord Lodge, No. 757, E.C., both of whom were duly elected. The W.M. then informed the brethren that he had received instructions to instal Bro. Capt. Holloway as the first W.M. of St. Andrew's Lodge, Kamptee, but as he was not present he would proceed to instal the W.M. elect, Bro. C. E. Mitchell, as W.M. of Holmesdale in the East Lodge for the ensuing year. W. Bro. McKenzie expressed his regret that the absence of the Pro. Grand Master, W. Bro. Edward Tyrrell Leith, in England, prevented his taking the chair on this auspicious occasion. Bro. C. E. Mitchell was then presented and duly obligated. All the brethren below the rank of Installed W.M.M.M. were requested to retire from the Lodge, and a board of Installed Masters having being formed, Bro. C. E. Mitchell was regularly installed as W.M. The M.M.M. were then admitted, and the newly installed Master was proclaimed and saluted with the honours due to his rank. He then proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Alex. McKenzie P.P.D.G.M. I.P.M. and Treasurer, W. C. Rowe P.G.M.O. S.W., Dr. De Tatham J.W., C. Tudball M.O., O. Tomlinson S.O., J. E. Tyers J.O., W. G. Davie Secretary, B. Robinson S.D. The J.D. and I.G. not being able to attend, were not invested, but the W.M. said he hoped to have the pleasure at the next meeting. The W.M. then thanked the brethren for the high honour they had conferred on him, and said he would do all in his power to keep the Lodge up to the high standing that it now held, and hoped he would receive the hearty co-operation of his officers, and, from what he knew of them, he was sure he would have their support. He then proposed, and Bro. Dr. De Tatham seconded, that a Past Master's jewel be presented by the Lodge to W. Bro. McKenzie, for the valuable services he had rendered to the Lodge during the past year, as a slight mark of the esteem and regard in which he was held by the brethren. W. Bro. McKenzie then rose, and said he quite appreciated the honour the brethren wished to do him on the present occasion, but before the proposition was put to the vote he was sure the Lodge could not afford to go to such an expense, as it was only just beginning to get into a flourishing condition, and they must recollect they had, only during the last month, got a handsome kit from Bro. Spencer's, in England, but he was pleased to say that the Lodge had sufficient funds to pay for the same—(applause)—and he would be sorry to see the Lodge put to such an expense, he therefore must decline the honour they wished to do him, but appreciated their feeling of kindness just as much as a jewel. (Applause.) Bro. W. C. Rowe then proposed an amendment, and Bro. C. Tudball seconded, that a subscription list be circulated amongst the brethren of the Lodge, for the purpose of subscribing towards a Past Master's jewel for W. Bro. Alex. McKenzie, in token of the high esteem in which he is held by the brethren, and said that this would not affect the funds of the Lodge, and also be more appreciated by their worthy Past Master, which was carried unanimously. W. Bro. McKenzie then thanked the brethren for their great kindness, and said as they were determined to do him the honour of wearing a Past Master's jewel he should have much pleasure in accepting the same as it was not to be taken from the funds of the Lodge. He then proposed, and Bro. Rowe seconded, that Bros. Balfour, Robinson and Luke be elected members of the committee, which was carried unanimously. The W.M. then requested the Secretary to call a meeting at an early date. There being no further business before the Lodge, it was closed in peace and harmony at 8.30 p.m.

THE LONDON MASONIC CLUB.

WE understand that in the course of a few days the promoters will be able to announce that they have secured temporary premises for the City Club, and from the support received from the highest Masonic sources, there can be no doubt of their very shortly carrying out the original intention of opening one at the West End, in connection with it.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

DISCLAIMER.

THE PROPRIETORS OF THE "SPECIALITE" SHERRY

FEEL it incumbent to contradict the rumour that they are associated with the profession at present issuing of essays upon Sherry under assumed names.

THEY ONLY PUBLISH THEIR UNIQUE PAMPHLET,

(FORWARDED ON APPLICATION),

recording facts contributed by strangers, the distinguished positions of whom place their statements—founded upon the experience of the Wine—beyond a doubt. It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and incites specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its valuable dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

NEARLY THREE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

ROBERT BURNS AND TARBOLTON LODGE.

A WEEK or two since, the brethren of Tarbolton Lodge turned out in great force to lay the foundation stone of the new public school buildings, which are intended to provide increased educational accommodation for the youth of that thriving little town. The occasion, the display of the Masonic insignia, and of some relics which were once worn by the greatest of Scottish poets, could not but call to the minds of the assembled multitude the name and genius of Robert Burns. It is to him that Tarbolton and its Lodge owe their widely extended fame. Wherever Scotsmen are found, the memory of those valedictory verses which the poet addressed to his brethren when his mind was torn with anguish, and he was about to seek a home across the Atlantic, must constantly recur. Burns, indeed, was no idle Freemason, and it would appear that he devoted much of his spare time to the study of Masonry, and rose to some distinction in his Lodge. From the Memoir written by his brother, Gilbert Burns, which was published in Dr. Currie's edition of the poet's works, we infer that Robert Burns was admitted a Mason in the year 1783. He was then in his twenty-fourth year. His father at that time rented the farm of Lochlea, in the parish of Tarbolton, and the young and ardent poet was engaged in a daily struggle to keep the wolf from the door. Gilbert Burns tells us that his father took Lochlea in the year 1777, and held it for seven years. The bargain proved an unprofitable one; "no writings had ever been made out of the conditions of the lease; a misunderstanding took place respecting them; the subjects in dispute were submitted to arbitration, and the decision involved Mr. Burns in ruin. He lived to know of this decision, but not to see any execution in consequence of it." The brothers, in anticipation of the crash, which came in the year 1784, took the farm of Mossgiel from Mr. Gavin Hamilton, a gentleman who remained a firm friend of the poet. This speculation did not, however, prosper, and Robert endeavoured to establish himself in business as a flax-dresser, and actually wrought at the trade for six months, with a person who lived at Irvine. Here he is said to have acquired some of the tastes of a man of pleasure, and had suffered the opinions and the example of his associates to undermine his rigid ideas of virtue. Prior to his attempt to change his occupation, his habits had been most frugal; Gilbert Burns, who for some years kept the family accounts, affirms that, during the whole time of Robert's residence on the farm of Lochlea, his yearly personal expenses, including clothing, did not exceed the sum of £5. It was while Burns was at the farm of Mossgiel that he made the acquaintance of Jean Armour, afterwards Mrs. Burns. This connection, when it was discovered, caused great unhappiness in the girl's family, and Robert, who was most anxious to act like a man of honour, privately married her, and as he found it quite impossible to obtain a subsistence for a wife and family in his native land, he determined to go to Jamaica, as an assistant overseer or book-keeper of a plantation. It was at this period of anguish and remorse that he penned those valedictory verses which are familiar as household words to every Mason. As he had not sufficient money to pay for his passage to Jamaica, Mr. Hamilton advised him to publish his poems, by subscription. Burns himself says, in speaking of this painful portion of his chequered career: "Before leaving my native country for ever, I resolved to publish my poems. I weighed my productions as impartially as was in my power: I thought they had merit; and it was a delicious idea that I should be called a clever fellow, even though it should never reach my ears—a poor negro driver—or perhaps a victim to that inhospitable clime, and gone to the world of spirits! . . . . . I was pretty confident my poems would meet with some applause: but at the worst the roar of the Atlantic would deafen the voice of censure, and the novelty of West Indian scenes make me forget neglect. I threw off six hundred copies, of which I had got subscriptions for about three hundred and fifty. My vanity was highly gratified by the reception I had met with from the public; and besides I pocketed, all expenses deducted, nearly twenty pounds. . . . . I took a steerage passage in the first ship that was to sail from the Clyde. I had taken the last farewell of my friends; my chest was on the road to Greenock; I had composed the last song I should ever measure in Caledonia, 'The gloomy night is gathering fast,' when a letter from Dr. Blacklock to a friend of mine overthrew all my schemes, by opening up new prospects to my poetic ambition." The Doctor's opinion was that Burns would meet with encouragement in Edinburgh for a second edition, and the poet, at once giving up all idea of going to Jamaica, posted off to that city without a friend or even a letter of introduction. Of his brilliant success in the capital it is not necessary for us to speak. He was received into the highest literary circles of society; the second edition of his poems went off well, and Burns, finding himself for the first time in his life in affluent circumstance, made a series of tours through the most romantic portions of his native land. It was not until the year 1788 that he again settled down to the business of agriculture. In that year, having settled with his publishers, and finding himself in possession of £500, he took the farm of Ellisland, in Nithsdale. His public marriage with Mrs. Burns followed, and our poet entered seriously upon the business of a farmer. Unfortunately for Burns, he had conceived the idea that he might manage to combine the office of a Gauger, or Exciseman, with that of a farmer. He obtained an appointment, and, while attending to his new duties, his farm was left to the care of servants. The result was, of course, ruin. Burns abandoned his farm, and, relying solely upon his small income, derived from the appointment he held, he took a house in Dumfries, and tried to forget, in dissipation, the misfortunes which had darkened his life. But his greatest trials were to come, his irregular life estranged his friends, and the great bard, who had fired all Scotland with poetic enthusiasm, sank into the position of an obscure officer of the Excise. He died on the 21st July 1796, in the greatest poverty, and his last moments were rendered wretched by the dread of a debtor's prison. Of Burns's genius it does not become us to speak. His fame as a poet has been firmly established, and the world has rightly decided that this erratic child of genius possessed the highest powers that can adorn the human intellect. Pedants have affected to regret that this great man had not the advantage of a University education. Such an education would in all probability have spoilt Burns. He might have written more ambitious pieces, but the wild charm of his lyrics could not have survived the culture of a great city. Masons are justly proud of the man whose mind has spoken in praise of the mystic tie, and when the memory of Robert Burns is drunk, either at Tarbolton or in any Lodge in the world, the brethren will not deny "one round"

To him, the bard that's far awa'!

THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA.

THE twentieth Annual Communication of this Grand Lodge was opened at London, Ontario, on Wednesday the 14th July. The following is a summary of the proceedings, based on the very excellent report contained in the Canadian Masonic News for the current month. The R.W. Bro. J. K. Kerr, Acting G.M., presided, and before passing to the regular business he addressed Grand Lodge at some length on the leading events of the year. Firstly, he noted with extreme regret the losses which the Craft had sustained during that period. Bro. Kerr paid a happy tribute of respect to the memory of the late R.W. Brother Thomas Bird Harris, who for close on twenty years had filled the office of Grand Secretary, and to whose zealous efforts the brethren were so largely indebted for the present brilliant state of Masonry in Canada. "It is greatly to be feared," says the report of the Canadian Masonic News, "that the great interest which R.W. Bro. Harris took in the affairs of Grand Lodge incited him frequently to exert himself in the cause of Masonry beyond his physical strength, and in the effort to promote the interest of the Craft he had been wont to overtask his powers. Many whose privilege it was to know him intimately are aware that after our annual assemblies he almost invariably suffered from the severe strain then put on his energies, and that for years past he left our deliberations, agitated and protracted, to seek rest and repose, and to recover and regain his wasted strength." And, again, "Bro. Harris was devoted to the interest of Grand Lodge, and there can be no manner of doubt that he wore himself out in its service." Bro. Harris, we are told, was initiated in St. Andrew Lodge, No. 16, in 1848, and to his exertions are mainly due the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Canada. "He held many other important positions in Freemasonry during the whole time that he was Grand Secretary, and on many occasions he received warm acknowledgments of his services to Masonry from the Craft at large, from Grand Lodge and private Lodges, as well as from other Masonic bodies, and he was frequently the recipient of substantial tokens of the goodwill of his brethren, and of the esteem in which he was held by them." Bro. Harris died, after a brief illness, on the 18th August of last year, and was succeeded in his office by R.W. Bro. J. J. Mason, who was appointed to fulfil the duties of Grand Secretary for the remainder of the year. The next important loss was that caused by the death of the M.W.G.M. Wilson, within a few months of our respected Bro. Harris. The late Brother Wilson was initiated into Freemasonry in St. John's Lodge, in Simcoe, in 1840, from which date, down to the time of his death, he was almost uninterruptedly engaged in promoting the interests of the Order. "He was among the first to aid in the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and so highly were his services at that time regarded, that he was chosen the first occupant of the Oriental Chair, which he held uninterruptedly for several years. In 1860 he was permitted to retire, and chosen again in 1866, holding the position for two years, when he again relinquished it, on account of acceptance of office under the Government. Five years later he was again elected to this position, and continued to hold it up to the time of his death." "Brilliant in the discharge of his duties, untiring in his zeal and energy, possessing those qualities which attract and charm the minds of men, it is impossible to measure the service he has rendered to the Craft in Canada." And further, of his Masonic knowledge and experience we are told, "In M.W. Bro. Wilson were embodied those attributes symbolized by the three famous pillars of the ancient temple. His Masonic wisdom was great. The strength of his decisions was conceded by all, and the beauty of his Masonic and Christian walk won the admiration of his brethren. His exertions were largely crowned with success, and his untiring efforts were admired and appreciated by his brethren who continued to shower down upon him the highest honours that they could bestow, and whilst the records of our Grand Lodge abound with the work of his hands, they also bear testimony to the estimation in which M.W. Bro. Wilson was always held by his brethren. Full of Masonic honours he left this earthly scene." Both these eminent members were buried with full Masonic honours, and the funerals were more numerously attended than any ever held in this country. The death is also noted of R.W. Bro. Dr. R. M. Wilson, P.D.D.G.M. of Niagara District, on 31st May last, while the death of the late Duke of Leinster, for sixty-one years Grand Master of Masons in Ireland, is also noted. The appointment of the Duke of Abercorn as his successor and the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as R.W. Grand Master in England are alluded to in congratulatory terms.

R. W. Bro. Kerr afterwards passed on to record the business of the year, describing, in the first place, the operations of the late G.M. Wilson, who at the close of the last annual communication at Toronto repaired to Weston and dedicated two Lodges, the Humber, No. 305, and the Blackwood, No. 311. Shortly after conducting the ceremonies at the funeral of Bro. Harris, he was at St. Thomas, and there dedicated St. David's Lodge, No. 302. Ten days later he presented to the M.W. Bro. Thos. White P.G.M. the testimonial offered to that eminent Brother by Grand Lodge for his valuable services to Masonry. Only a few days before he was confined to his bed he delivered a lecture at Chatham, under the auspices of the Parthenon Lodge, No. 267, and dedicated Kent Lodge, No. 274, at Blenheim. During Bro. Wilson's illness, Bro. Kerr represented him in the Dedication Ceremonial of the New Masonic Hall, Hamilton. On the 3rd March the new Masonic Hall at Seaforth was dedicated, and on the 1st July R.W. Bro. McGloghlon D.D.G.M. of London, acting for Bro. Kerr, dedicated the new Hall recently erected for the use of Malahiti Lodge, No. 140. Several other ceremonies, chiefly of laying the corner stone of Masonic or other buildings, are then recounted. Dispensations to the following Lodges were renewed by the late Grand Master:—Hiram Lodge, Cheapside, and Chesterville Lodge, Chesterville, while Dispensations for forming New Lodges were granted to Walker Lodge, Acton; North Star Lodge, Owen Sound; Alvinston Lodge, Alvinston; Temple Lodge, Hamilton; and Orono Lodge, Orono. Dispensations have also been granted during Bro. Kerr's tenure of office to Zetland Lodge, Toronto; the Hammond Lodge, Wardsville; Ionic Lodge, Napier; King Solomon's Lodge, Jarvis; Corinthian Lodge, London East; Eden Lodge, London; Fordwich Lodge, Fordwich; Stratford Lodge, Stratford; and Prince Arthur Lodge, Flesherton. King Hiram Lodge, No. 89, Lindsay, has had its warrant returned, and received authority to resume work. After giving further details, Bro. Kerr then passed to the important question of funds, which, according to the Report about to be submitted to Grand Lodge by the auditors, show the following figures:—Investments, namely, Government Stock 45,573.33 dollars, Bank of Toronto 252.39, and Bank of Commerce 1,179.97, distributed to the various accounts as detailed, namely—General Fund 30,082.91 dollars; Asylum Fund 6,452.39; Investment Benevolence 6,486.21; Benevolence Account 1,002.54. The following brethren were elected as Grand Officers for the ensuing year, namely:—Grand Master, M.W. Bro. J. K. Kerr, Toronto; Dep. Grand Master, R.W. Bro. W. H. Weller, Coburg; Grand Senior Warden, R.W. Bro. Geo. S. Birrell, London; Grand Junior Warden, R.W. Bro. A. J. Cambia, Ottawa; Grand Chaplain, R.W. Bro. Rev. G. M. Innes, London; Grand Treasurer, R.W. Bro. Henry Groff, Simcoe; Grand Registrar, R.W. Bro. J. Burns, Toronto; Grand Secretary, R.W. Bro. John J. Mason, Hamilton, and Grand Tyler, V.W. Bro. J. Sweetman, Ottowa. Deputy District Grand Masters—St. Clair District, R.W. Bro. T. C. McNab, Chatham; London, R.W. Bro. W. D. McGloghlon, London; Wilson, R.W. Bro. C. Bennett, Port Rowan; Huron, R.W. Bro. J. H. Benson, Seaforth; Wellington, R.W. Bro. J. McLaren, Mount Forest; Niagara, R.W. Bro. D. E. Broderick, Caledonia; Hamilton, R.W. Bro. R. Brierly, Hamilton; Toronto, R.W. Bro. D. Spry, Toronto; Ontario, R.W. Bro. C. Peplow, Port Hope; Prince Edward, R.W. Bro. D. Ross, Picton; St. Lawrence, R.W. Bro. S. Wood, Kingston. A motion to hold Grand Lodge at Toronto for the future was defeated by a large majority. The Grand Officers were then installed in their several offices by M.W. Bro. Col. A. A. Stevenson, Montreal, and after they had severally thanked their brethren for the confidence reposed in them, Grand Lodge adjourned, about ten o'clock.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BRITISH BURMAH.

THE regular quarterly Communition of this District Grand Lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, on the 24th June last. There were present—W.B. H. Krauss D.D.G.M. as D.G.M., W.B. Jos. Dawson P.D.S.G.W. as D.D.G.M. and W. Bros. E. Hopper D.S.G.W., J. V. Douglas de Wet D.J.G.W., A. H. Etty D.G. Chaplain, W. D. Cruikshank D.G. Treasurer, Bernet Samuel D.G. Secretary, W. H. Porter D.G. Pursuivant, Geo. Greenhill and T. N. Seymour D.G. Stewards, and J. Hampson D.G. Tyler, together with the following representatives of Lodges; Bros. S. Andrews S.W., and J. Brown as J.W., Star of Burmah Lodge, No. 614, and W. B. H. Prince P.M. as W.M., H. B. Davidson as S.W. and W. H. Wootten as J.W., Victoria in Burmah Lodge, No. 832. The Lodge was opened at 6.15 p.m. The summons convening it was read. The minutes of the previous Communication having been printed and circulated were taken as read, and confirmed. Apologies from several brethren for non-attendance, were then read. Next the report of the Board of General Purposes, consisting of W. Bros. H. Krauss D.D.G.M. President, E. Hopper D.S.G.W., and J. V. Douglas de Wet members, and W. D. Cruickshank D.G. Treasurer and Bernet Samuel ex officio members, was read by the D.G. Secretary. The D.G. Treasurer's audited account showed the following figures: receipts, 133 Rs. 0 8, including a balance brought forward on 1st March 1875 of 17 Rs., disbursements Rs. 72 15 6, leaving a balance in hand on 7th June of Rs. 60 1 2. The D.G. Benevolent Fund showed receipts Rs. 448, viz., balance on 1st March of Rs. 309, and Lodge dues 139. The only disbursement was a loan to District Grand Lodge Fund of 50 Rs., thus leaving a balance in hand, on 7th June, of 398 Rupees. The revised returns for the Lodge Philanthropy, for quarter ended 31st December 1874, had been submitted, and were found in order. Returns and dues had been received from Lodges "Victoria in Burmah," No. 832, "Star of Burmah," No. 614, "Rangoon," No. 1268, "Philanthropy," No. 542, and "Greenlaw," No. 1095, for quarter to 31st March 1875, but those from Lodges "Arakan," No. 546, and "Astræ," No. 1376, were not yet to hand, and a reminder in each case had been sent. Permission was granted to "Victoria in Burmah" Lodge to hold two regular meetings in the month instead of one, provided the Bye-Laws of the Lodge were amended accordingly. The case of a distressed Irish Bro., Thomas L. Butt, was then referred for further inquiry to D.G. Secretary. The amended report of the Special Committee consisting of W. Bros. H. Krauss, D.D.G.M. President, C. J. Brown P.D.D.G.M., and W. D. Cruikshank D.G. Treasurer members, and Bernet Samuel D.G. Secretary ex officio, appointed by the District Grand Lodge of British Burmah, to report to the Board of General Purposes, what alteration it is advisable to make in the Bye-Laws of the D.G. Lodge, was submitted and adopted, as also was the report of the Board of General Purposes. A sum of Rs. 100 was, on the recommendation of the Board of General Purposes, voted to Bro. Butt from the District G. B. Fund. Bro. J. Hampson of Lodge "Star of Burmah," No. 614, was appointed to officiate as D.G. Tyler for the rest of the year. W. Bro. Krauss, having taken that opportunity of expressing the sense of the D.G. Lodge at the loss Masonry in British Burmah had sustained by the death, while in the execution of his duty, of Bro. Col. T. C. Hamilton, and having mentioned that only a few hours before his death Col. Hamilton had been elected W.M. of "Rangoon Lodge," No. 1268, so that had he been installed in that office he would have had a seat in the D.G. Lodge, The D.G. Lodge was closed at 7.15 p.m.

SPEAKERS AND SPEECHES.

FOLLOWING upon our article of last week, on "Dining as a Fine Art," we feel it incumbent on us to offer a few remarks on Oratory, especially on that class of Oratory which so generally follows a good dinner. True, in a very early number we dealt with this subject formally, under the head of "After-Dinner Speeches;" but the theme is a fertile one, and may be viewed from so many different standpoints that we feel no apology is needed for reverting to it once again. Oratory, perhaps, is too dignified a term to apply to the class of speeches we are about to refer to. Your true orator is a man who possesses many admirable qualities. He must be a fluent speaker. The man who halts and splutters over every half dozen words he utters is hardly the beau idéal of an orator. Then he should have a good sonorous voice. A speech delivered in a high squeaky sort of key, or a dull rumbling, grumbling sort of basso, is not calculated to impress an audience. If we imagine a man appealing to the better feelings of humanity in a voice which resembles the notes of a fiddle in a fit of discord, or endeavouring to pay a compliment to the ladies in a growl like distant thunder, we shall realise at once the kind of notes which are out of place in oratory. Again, your public speaker should have a commanding presence. We do not necessarily mean that he should be a very big man, but there should be a dignity about his bearing which will secure the rapt attention of his fellow diners. He must be thoroughly self-possessed. The man who is ever at a loss what to propose, and hesitates about the manner in which he shall propose it, the man, in fact, who is at all nervous over his oratory, invariably affords a very painful spectacle. Orator and audience alike suffer. Lastly, he should have abundance of ready wit, so that he may deal with each subject he speaks upon, not only fluently, calmly, sonorously, and self-possessedly, but appropriately. In other words, he should know a little, and, if possible, more than a little, about his subject matter, and then, though he may only express himself in good plain English, his speech will generally prove effective.

Our readers, perhaps, may suggest that we are too exacting in our picture of the orator. Not a bit of it. We do not look for a Cicero or a Demosthenes, a Pitt or a Burke, in every after-dinner speaker. We are only placing before our readers, suggestively rather than emphatically, sundry of the more essential qualities which pertain to the art of speaking. But, it may be argued, you are virtually shutting out from the category of speakers about nine-tenths of those who speak, and the majority of whom are forced to speak nolentes volentes. This, however, is the point we have in view, that the number of speakers should be more limited, for so shall we stand a better chance of having good after-dinner speeches. It is all very well to urge that every one who sits round the festive board must be what the late Artemus Ward would probably have described as a "a gay and festive cuss." All are very far from being "gay and festive cusses. Yet is it reasonable to confine the business of promoting gaiety and festivity to those who happily possess some gaiety and festivity in their composition. Nor is it immaterial to the case if we point out the necessity there is for a little logical consistency in the selection of speakers. Who would think of asking a clergyman to return thanks for the Army and Navy, or of inviting a tenant farmer to propose "Prosperity to the Hardware Manufacture." It might be the clergyman had once belonged to a body of fighting men before taking holy orders in the Church, and that the farmer was well-informed as to the process of manufacturing all sorts of iron and steel implements. But as a rule we look on clergymen as men of peace, and farmers as skilled workers in the field of agriculture. And if we are right in urging consistency in this particular, should we not carry it a little farther and consistently suggest as speakers only men who know how to speak, who can deliver themselves, that is to say, of more or fewer sentences in logical sequence, common sensible English, and a plain but impressive manner? Fancy a man replying to the toast of the Army and Navy in manner following: "Ladies and Gentlemen! Ahem—I—er—thank you—er—for your very great kindness—er—in—er—coupling my name with the toast—er! I' sure you I—er—take it as a great compliment to the—er profession I formerly—had the honour to belong—(N.B.—He had been a member of some yeomanry corps about thirty years before)—I will not detain you long—but I feel that we have had—er—very successful meeting, and I think we may congratulate ourselves on the prosperous condition of agriculture, not only in this county, but generally throughout the kingdom. I maintain, sir, the agriculturist, be he farmer or labourer, has many admirable qualities," and so on, ad nauseam. Or take a chairman who is continually hoping his hearers will not assign his frequent reference to himself to any spirit of egotism, his speech right away through being a most ridiculous exhibition of that selfish property. Now, to say nothing of the platitudes which people utter, properly six or seven out of every ten after-dinner speeches are simply painful to listen to. There are generally at every dinner, as in every Lodge, two or three people who, when called upon to respond to this or that toast, are equal to the occasion, and if they confine their remarks to a few well-worded sentences, all goes well; but it is as absurd to demand a speech of every man at table as to expect him to sing or talk French. "The cobbler to his last" is a very old, but a very true proverb. Let us invite speeches from speakers, and songs from men who sing. The old rule, that every man who attends a Lodge dinner must contribute, as the saying is, to the harmony of the meeting, is an absurd one. Those who can will do so, if they are the genial fellows we take them to be; the rest are quite content to sit quietly and listen. We once heard of a man who was required to sing. For half an hour he went on uttering, in a dismal chant—

"At the Battle of the Nile, I was there all the while.
I was there all the while, at the Battle of the Nile."

It is almost needless to add that he was never called upon to sing again. If chairmen will be careful to select speakers to make speeches, and singers to sing songs, our meetings, enjoyable as they are, will, we feel sure, be still more enjoyable.

Obituary.

Feelings of deep regret were experienced at Brighton by the announcement of the death of Bro. W. Curtis, P.P.G.W. Sussex, P.M. York Lodge, No. 315, P.M. 1141 and P.Z. 782, which took place at sea. Our late respected brother was only 47 years of age at the time of his decease. He was formerly associated with his father, as proprietors of the Brighton Gazette, and, on the death of the latter, became sole proprietor. He afterwards relinquished the paper, and went to Hong Kong, to edit and superintend the Hong Kong Times, and to manage the printing establishment connected with it. A telegram was received on the 5th of June, stating he was ill of rheumatic fever, which compelled him to relinquish his duties. He proceeded to Macao and Australia, in the hope of recruiting his health. Failing to derive benefit from the change, he resolved to return to England, accompanied by his eldest son, but a relapse took place, and he died on the homeward journey. He leaves a sorrowing widow and four children to deplore their sad loss.

On Saturday last, 14th August, Bro. J. Robinson P.P.J.G.D. Sussex, P.M. York Lodge, No. 315, died at his residence, 11 King's Road, Brighton, at the age of 57. He had been in failing health for some time past, and had been unconscious the previous week, when dropsy set in, which put an end to his sufferings. He was interred on Monday afternoon, at the Extramural Cemetery, where a numerous assemblage of the brethren and a large circle of private friends were present to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom they had known so well, and to show their appreciation of his sterling worth through life. Among those present at the melancholy ceremony were Bros. J. Dixon P.G.D.C. Sussex, C. Sandeman W.M. 315, Devin Secretary, W. T. Nell S.W. 315, Foat J.W. 315, C. P. Smith, G. Smith P.M. 811, W. Smith P.M. 811, J. W. Stride P.M. 315, A. Cowley 315, J. Pearson P.M. 811, J. Eborall Staples, T. Chandler, H. Payne, G. Emery, and several others.

Death, the great leveller, makes no distinction between young and old; he has snatched from our midst Bro. E. H. Finney, son of Bro. H. E. Finney, at the early age of 27. Though our late brother's health had been failing for some time, he rallied, and it was hoped by his friends that he would entirely recover, but a relapse took place, and he expired on Sunday, 1st August. He was I.P.M. of the United Service Lodge, No. 136, H. of Hope and Unity Chapter, and Assistant S.E. of the Metropolitan Chapter of Improvement. He was also a member of the various "High" degrees.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ALPHA.—As the law requires that every petition for a new Lodge should be signed by a certain number of Brethren, it is clear that all the Brethren who sign such a petition have an equal right to be regarded as the "founders," without distinction or seniority. But, under the circumstances described by you, there can be no doubt who was the original "promoter."

T.B.W.—Brethren joining the Club at the present time will only be liable for their annual subscription, £3 3s for town and £1 11s 6d for country members, but should they join after the first 500, they will, most probably, have to pay an entrance fee and a higher subscription.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our Correspondents.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications.

All Letters must bear the name and address of the Writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

OUR FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Certain members of my family are somewhat amused at the venerable antiquity which "Masonic Investigator" assigns me, in contradistinction to Bro. Buchan, who, by the way, places words in my mouth which I never used, at page 70 or elsewhere. Aubrey's manuscript is in the library of the Royal Society, my version of it was made from an extract by Mr. J. O. Halliwell, who may be depended upon.

I before quoted two sources which I consider undeniably to prove the antiquity of the system of three degrees. It is clear that I cannot go into the question freely in your pages, even had I the necessary time to do so, which I have not. I can merely, therefore, direct attention to the salient points, upon which I am content to rely, supplemented, as they are, and confirmed by numberless documents from the earliest time. Your readers must compare intelligently for themselves, and draw their deductions accordingly.

The first of these is the Sloane MS., No. 3329, recently edited by the Rev. Bro. Woodford, as a MS. of 1650, which I consider it is, and possibly one alluded to by Dr. Plot. The second is an Aberdeen ritual of 1727. Both are operative, but quite distinct in their character, the one professing to be a ceremonial, the other a memorandum of secrets and signs. One is a confirmation of the other, but, nevertheless, there is such a diversity in the treatment as to prove a distinct origin; they are the Masonic system of different parts of the country at a time when Masonic communication was difficult, springing separately and independently at a distance of time out of the oral Masonic instruction of South and North Britain.

A comparison of the two, and the "Grand Mystery," shows:—

1. That although there are signs and secrets in one which are not in the other, yet out of a numerous system of operative modes of recognition the bulk are identical.

2. Both distinctly mention the three recognised degrees by name, and both wholly or partially give the present recognised secrets of E.A.P., F.C., and M.M.; those of the M.M. being given in both with evident corruption, which proves the great value of the evidence. The Scotch Ritual gives our present modes of preparation (perhaps what is alluded to by Dr. Plot as the other secrets), and also the ceremonial of E.A. and F.C., but only a part of the M.M. secrets, not given in the other MS., which again gives a different part.

3. In no English MS. whatever is there any "mark" registration; whilst the Scotch ritual states that there was no ceremony beyond the selection of the Apprentice's Mark, and the registration at the fee of one Mark Scots. This fact is clearly confirmed and alluded to by all the old Scotch Minute books, no fact in Masonry is so certain, there is no question to decide, it already rests upon the most certain documentary evidence. Shaw's Mandate in effect converted the Speculative Craft Lodge into a sort of Operative Heralds College for the registration of Marks used by the operatives, and the fee was to pay the trouble of recording. Your correspondent may as well ask why there is a fee for registering trade marks. In spite of the thorough certainty of this evidence, Grand Mark Lodge will go on asserting, and will find believers. Nothing will suffice for people who will not read history, and cannot think.

4. Although these two documents enclose the whole of our present Craft secrets and ceremonials (confirmed by numerous other MSS.), there is no allusion whatever, even of the slightest kind, to anything belonging to the Arch degree, thus proving clearly that it had no old pretensions to be considered a Craft ceremony. Some French rituals, used in certain rites, state however that Hiram's jewel enclosed the sacred name. The value of this and other sacred names was the great study of the middle-age magicians and later Rosicrucians, and the English Royal Arch degree was doubtless introduced to instruct old Masons on these points. I think "Masonic Investigator" (if an Arch Mason) cannot have read my "Speculative Freemasonry," at p. 116, or he would have no doubt that the "fifth Order," there alluded to, is the Royal Arch degree. I feel certain that, if you, Bro. Editor, applied to Capt. F. G. Irwin, he would willingly place at your disposal the evidence of the 1721 Rosicrucian work. There is no proof of Ramsay's system having been started in 1728, but I see no valid reason to deny the usual historical assertion; his "Travels of Cyrus" appeared in 1727, and embodies a good deal of high-grade information. I merely mentioned d'Assigny as alluding, in 1744, to three steps above M.M., but without positively asserting what they were.

I thought I had sufficiently guarded myself from acknowledging any of the present degrees above Master Mason as ancient ceremonies. There is none of the present ceremonials above a few years old, and the ancient rites have all been long since abandoned, and are now only the perquisite of the Masonic antiquary. The word "Primitive" in the A. and P. Rite is simply derived from the Primitive Philalethes, an Order which had preserved the old genuine high-grade Masonry and dogma, as derived from the independent old Hermetic Rites of the continent, which were being transmitted side by side with Lacorne's and others last century. Its value consists in the genuine nature of its archæological lectures; that which it has taken me twenty years' hard study to acquire I could have got much better in one year from this valuable Rite, had I not been kept out of it by the stringent and degrading oaths and mummery of the ancient and accepted Scottish Rite, an Order, without a spark of truth, started in 1802. I must, however, caution brethren against giving up their time to these or any other high-grades, and the neglect of genuine Craft Masonry for them. In most cases it will assuredly end in disappointment; all brethren have not the necessary time and ability to develope the great truths found in many systems, and the A. and P. Rite courts not profane curiosity, and, when once properly established, will be made difficult of access.

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

P.S.—It would be interesting to know at what time the W.M. or Past Master of a Speculative Lodge diverged from the Master of the Operative Lodge. In extensive works the Master of the actual Lodge at work would be the W.M. of the Speculative Lodge, but he would often, no doubt, have qualified Masters working for him as journeymen. Evidently, in London, this matter had been separated at some distance of time from 1717. In Aberdeen the secrets of the two grades are given as those of the M.M. Brevet P.M. rank would not arise till after the Grand Lodge of 1717, I should think.

DINING AS A FINE ART.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BRO.,—I have read your article, "Dining as a Fine Art," with infinite pleasure, and concur in the opinion that the success of a meeting, and particularly the comfort of visitors, materially depend upon the chairman. Now, as the characteristics of a gentleman possessing taste and discrimination are indispensable qualifications for so honourable a post, how incumbent is it upon Masons, particularly, to see these virtues exemplified before they elect their W.M. We have frequently heard of late of numerous applications for warrants, rarely refused, evincing the marvellous craving for Freemasonry. It is evident that the proclamation, "I'm a Mason," will still be heard, since it is fashionable to be enrolled, the stimulus being the accession of H.R.H. to the Grand Mastership; but a question arises,—Who are these votaries daring publicly to inform the world at large of their connection with an Order whose boast it is to hide its principles and virtues from the unappreciative?

I have had many opportunities of witnessing the arrogance of this type of the Craft, in Lodge and elsewhere, and hope are long to hear that Grand Lodge has framed a rule that no member shall be elected as Master of a Lodge unless he can prove himself—both by his efficiency in the work and gentle bearing—fit to preside as the head of so august an assemblage as we proudly acknowledge a Freemason's Lodge to be.

It should be instilled into the mind of every Mason, and every man desirous to become one, that ours is not a benefit society, although we acknowledge "Relief" one of its grand principles, neither has it been founded to promote trade and business; higher teaching is ours, but the present thirst for gold, and the knowledge of fraternal ties has, and will continue, to assert its influence, hence it is necessary to ignore applications for admission of members until their position of life, viewed from every aspect, shall have been favourably reported.

It is not numbers we require, but an improved status. There are breakers ahead, and our Fund of Benevolence will become a wreck unless wiser discretion is adopted in the introduction of members.

It is particularly distasteful to many true Masons to find Masonic emblems greeting them at every corner of this vast metropolis, emblazoned in every colour of the rainbow over the shops of tinkers, tailors, bakers, shoemakers, &c. These facts proclaim an amount of ignorance it would be well to diminish, not augment by indiscriminate ballot.

Yours fraternally,

PURSER.

PRESENTATIONS TO RETIRING MASTERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In a report of Lodge No. 1335, published in your issue of 24th July last, I see that the W.M. expressed a wish on retiring from the chair that the money so kindly voted by the brethren "should be applied to the purchase of a life governorship of one of the charities instead of a P.M.'s jewel."

I have waited in the hope that some one of those brethren who, so to speak, live for the charities would take up the matter, but as they have not done so I shall feel obliged by your inserting this letter.

In my own case, I am a Past Master of three Lodges, and in each case have had a jewel presented to me on retiring from office; now, although I very much appreciate the spirit which induced the members of these Lodges to make the presentations, I personally question the utility of the three jewels; it may be said, why did you not think of this before the presentations were made, and do the same as the W.M. did to whom you refer? My only excuse can be forgetfulness, or I might say that the idea did not occur to me until I read the report referred to.

I think if the matter were brought before the brethren we should see the money applied to charitable purposes as a rule, and not, as I have found it, exceptionally. If a P.M. wishes to show some mark of office, I would propose that a special bar be introduced for that purpose, and I feel sure that our charity secretaries might be left to arrange this. Certainly half the Lodges in the kingdom present their retiring Masters with jewels during the year, and if only a part of the amount thus expended could be direct into the channel I propose, it would make a perceptible difference in the amount annually returned as devoted to

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

La Franc-maçonnerie. Lettre a Mgr. L'Evêque D'Orléans. Par Caubet, Directeur du journal le Monde Maçonnique. Paris, Aux Bureaux du Monde Maçonnique, 16, Rue de Seine. A la Librairie Maçonnique de A Teissier, 87, Rue Jean-Jacques Rousseau; et chez los principaux Libraires. 1875.

THIS is a very able vindication of Freemasonry from the recent bitter attack on it by the very reverend the Bishop of Orleans. Some of our readers, perhaps, who have not seen the latter's pamphlet, having only gleaned a slight knowledge of it from these pages, or from some contemporary, will be at a certain disadvantage in noting the course of argument which M. Caubet has adopted in his efforts to refute the foul aspersions of the Bishop, but enough is quoted to show their real character. It is always better, of course, to have the rival pamphlets side by side, but in the case before us, perhaps, it is of less importance. The Bishop's onslaught rested in the main on the bold assertions of a bigot, who had not even the merit of knowing what it was he was attacking. M. Caubet, on the other hand, knows well what he is defending, and is prepared with a whole armoury of reasoning with which he has little difficulty in repelling his adversary's attack. It is hardly, indeed, a fair duello, any more than could be a combat where one of the antagonists was blindfold, the other not; only the blindfold man must not grumble at the hard knocks he gets, for he it was who commenced the fray. Mgr. Dupanloup went out of his way to attack the Order of which M. Caubet is so great an ornament, and the latter's resolute defence is not only creditable, but is justifiable.

M. Caubet begins by pointing out that ordinarily he would have preferred to remain silent, leaving Freemasonry to vindicate itself by its acts. But he points out that people will ascribe importance to the utterances of one in the position of the Bishop. Not only is Mgr. Dupanloup a prince of the Church and a pastor of souls, he is also a representative of the people, elected into the Assembly by his fellow-citizens, a member of the French Academy, a chevalier of the Legion of Honour, and many folk will take him to be right in all circumstances, believing it impossible that he could deceive himself. Hence the need there is that some competent person should take upon himself the duty of replying, and M. Caubet volunteers accordingly to fulfil this duty. The competency of the writer will be apparent as he is followed in his argument, for, as we have stated already, the letter or pamphlet before us is a most successful vindication of our Order.

M. Caubet then notes how inconsistent is the title of the Bishop's pamphlet, "Etude sur la Franc-maçonnerie," which implies Masonry in its entirety, whereas its contents deal only with a fraction of the Order. How, for instance, suggests the writer, could I properly describe a study of mine as a study of Christianity, if I had inquired into only one of the thousand branches which compose Protestantism; or how describe that as a study of the National Assembly which was limited to only one of its smallest sections. Why then, in a general study of Freemasonry, has the Bishop confined his attention to Belgian and French Freemasonry? The answer to this question, thinks M. Caubet, is simple enough. The Bishop is more anxious to find arguments against the Order than to analyse its true sentiments. Belgian Freemasonry, writes M. Caubet, numbers some fifteen or sixteen Lodges; French, some three hundred and fifty; but in England, Ireland and Scotland, there are over two thousand Lodges, and in the United States, over eight thousand. Yet the Bishop has not dared to describe Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry, "si correcte, si profondément pénétré des sentiments religieux, si conservatrice," as revolutionary or irreligious. Moreover, the Bishop has sought to make the whole of French Freemasonry responsible for the act of a single Lodge, an act moreover for which that Lodge has been condemned by the Grand Orient of France. M. Caubet passes no opinion whatever on the act referred to, but he points out several errors into which the Bishop has allowed himself to be entrapped in his zeal to abuse Freemasonry. The writer, next proceeds to show how the Bishop has utterly misquoted a passage that appeared some years since in the Monde Maçonnique, giving the passage as quoted by Mgr. Dupanloup, and as it actually appeared in that Masonic journal. The difference is very striking, and cannot fail to prove to our readers, if any proof were needed, that the Bishop, as M. Caubet says, is far more anxious to fashion arguments than to trouble himself about the inner life of Masonry. Then, as to the comparison instituted by his adversary between the official declarations to be found in the Constitutions respecting freedom of conscience, and the acts and declarations of members, as well as the speeches in open Lodge by the chiefs of the Order, M. Caubet points out that the declaration by M. Felix Pyat is of no value whatever, Felix Pyat, far from being a chief in Freemasonry, had some difficulty in being initiated, and remained always an irregular and inactive Mason. Had the Bishop but glanced at the lines that followed the declaration by M. Pyat, as quoted by the Rappel from Le Monde Maçonnique, he might have satisfied himself of this fact. As to the statement that the real rulers of Freemasonry are kept concealed from the general body, and that the kings and princes who belong to it are not members of the higher grades, the writer instances Frederick the Great of Prussia, who so far from being excluded from the higher grades or ignorant of their existence, "fut, selon les maçons Kessels, organisateur et le réformateur de leur hiérarchie en trente-trois degrés;" the King of Sweden, who alone possesses the twelfth degree in the Swedish rite, that of "Maître regnant," "qui connaît et domine tout le régime de la Maçonnerie Suédoise;" and the Prince of Wales, who before his installation as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England was already protector of all the Orders of Masonic Knighthood in England, that is to say of all the high degrees. Into the able defence of the true principles of our Order, it is needless for us to enter. Most of the arguments which M. Caubet adduces will have suggested themselves to our readers. We may note, however, that Anderson's Constitutions form the basis of the defence. As for any war against religion being ever dreamt of by Freemasons, it is made clear that, on the contrary, Freemasonry has shown its respect for religion by assisting, on occasions, in religious offices, and that Catholic priests of various grades have at different times belonged to the Order. Another argument to show how valueless is the statement of the Bishop, that Freemasonry is the irreconcilable enemy of the Church, lies in the fact that it has always been the Freemasons who have been the victims, while it is the Church that has played the part of persecutor. In England, where Protestantism is in the ascendancy, there is never any conflict between religion and the Order, but in Roman Catholic countries Masonry has frequently been the object of the bitterest persecutions, and in these countries it is that the most grotesque misrepresentations of the Order have been invented by its opponents, in order, no doubt, to create an ill-feeling against it. Towards the end of his letter M. Caubet very justly assumes that he has proved "that the Masonry invented by our enemy, and which you have accepted throughout as real Masonry has nothing in common with the true one; that it has never existed in the form imagined; indeed that it was impossible it could exist. The true Masonry is a society progressive and peaceful, founded on the principles of the purest morality, to which, Monseigneur, whatever you may say to the contrary, not only can serious men and men of good sense belong, but also it would attract to itself all men of good feeling, all who take a real interest in the progress and happiness of mankind."

In writing this reply to the Bishop of Orleans M. Caubet has done a good work, and done it well. The pamphlet of the Bishop has made a great sensation. The Pope has publicly thanked Mgr. Dupanloup for having published it, and other ecclesiastics, both in this country and abroad, have also come forward and had their fling of mud at us. Here we can afford to treat these attacks with supreme indifference. We are utterly careless as to what the Pope may trouble himself to think or say about Masonry. Even those among us who justly regard Pius IX. with reverence, as the head of that section of the Catholic Church they belong to, experience a feeling of pity, rather than of indignation against His Holiness. It is known well enough that it is not the Roman Catholic Church which is attacking Freemasonry, but the Ultramontane section of it, a section represented by all that is most bigoted and least respectable in that branch of the Christian Church. The Saturday Review of last week, in noticing the translation of a German work, The Secret Warfare of Freemasonry against Church and State, writes, "No impartial person can deny that the Roman Catholics are justified in their hostility to Freemasonry, and that when, for instance, Lord Ripon retired from the Society, it was simply a logical sequence of his change of faith. The existence of a secret society, which repudiates the authority of the confessional, and is beyond the control of the Church, is clearly opposed to the fundamental principles of the Roman Catholic system. It does not matter how innocent may be the objects of the society; it is enough that it withdraws itself from the supervision of the Church." We attach no value whatever to the opinions of the Saturday Review on Freemasonry or any other subject. We maintain, and we feel that we are not guilty of partisanship in maintaining, that the Roman Catholic Church is not justified in first misrepresenting the aims and objects of Freemasonry and then condemning it. Were Freemasonry a political body, antagonism between it and the Roman Catholic Church, viewed as a political body, might perhaps—we do not say it would—be justifiable, but Freemasonry is not a political body, nor is Roman Catholicism. Again, Masonry accords equally to all its members perfect freedom of conscience in religious matters. Does not Roman Catholicism urge this very same doctrine in those countries where other forms of Christianity prevail? In the United Kingdom, for instance, the Romish Church has for years and years been battling, and not unsuccessfully, to be placed on an equal footing with, and to enjoy the same privileges as other Christian bodies. How can it logically refuse to grant in Roman Catholic countries, or to those in its own fold who believe in freedom of conscience, the very privileges it asks for elsewhere? There is no logic in seeking to repress in France what she may be in seeking to obtain in England or the United States. Again, in our opinion, it is a matter of the greatest importance that the objects of a society should be innocent. The more innocent it is, the less worthy of attack, the less justifiable, the less logical is the attack upon its privileges. However, our purpose now is not to argue with the Saturday Review, but to thank our brother, M. Caubet, for his spirited defence of Masonry. His letter is very worthy of the director of Le Monde Maçonnique, and we commend it unreservedly to the notice of our readers.

THE PLEASURE OF YACHTING.—Should a quiet amusement be desired this month, it may easily be found in a trip on a yacht. Few things, for instance, are more pleasurable than lying becalmed in the Bay one lovely day of this month off, say, Spurn Head (or any other headland which may be well), and watching the habits of the sea-fowl. They are numerous here, and approach near, as yet, with fearlessness, not having learned that their term of legal protection ended on August 1st. See the cormorants fly swiftly by, in a line, over the oily surface to their fishing grounds, further out at sea; a greater black-backed gull, that chartered robber, hovers round, sure that something will turn up for his omnivorous maw; the guillemots dive, near our craft, after the young whiting, and can be traced in their subaqueous course, so calm is it, by the ripples above; the terns hawk around, veritable sea-swallows, dive and bring up, by its middle, a young whiting, glittering like a bar of silver. This they throw up in the air in order to catch it head-foremost, then drop themselves, and if they miss, fling it up again until they succeed and swallow the dainty morsel. Meanwhile the porpoises roll in wheel-like gambols up the estuary; grateful whiffs of country air and faint echoes of rural life that seawards, as the song and blithe laughter of the forecastle breaks upon a dream of home.—From "Cassell's Family Magazine" for August.

The Grand Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday, 18th August, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, Bro. J. Clabon, V.P. The Report of the Board of Scrutineers was read. It was decided that a notice be sent to Provincial Secretaries that, excepting the jewel sanctioned by the Board of General Purposes, in honour of the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M., no others be allowed to be worn in Lodges. Previous grants, to the amount of £145, were confirmed, and 16 new cases were relieved, to the amount of £463. The Grand Lodge of Benevolence was then closed. There were present—Bros. J. Nunn P.G.S.B., J. Brett P.G.P., J. Hervey G.S., C. A. Cottebrune P.G.P., F. Binckes P.G.S., T. Cubitt G.P., Scott, Keys, Lee, Smith, James Willing jun., Bingemann, &c.

A crowded and fashionable audience was present at the Aquarium at Brighton, on Saturday morning and evening. Two opera recitals, Lucia di Lammermoor in the morning, and Somnambula in the evening; Madame Pettit (soprano), Bro. Geo. Perren, and Geo. Fox (basso). The band was under the direction of Mr. E. Reyloff. The solos and duets were encored. On Sunday the Aquarium was opened to the public, and a selection of sacred music was played. Bro. Geo. Reeves Smith, the manager and secretary, may be congratulated on the success attending the general arrangements. Bro. Maclagan gave his inimitable entertainment during the week.

The Hervey Lodge of Instruction, No. 1260, holds its meetings at the Clifton Arms, 152 Fulham Road (close to Thistle Grove), every Thursday evening, at eight o'clock, to work the ceremonies and lectures. Bro. G. King jun., P.M. and P.Z. 1260, Secretary and Preceptor. The Clifton Arms is within ten minutes walk of the South Kensington Station, and the Fulham Omnibuses pass the door.

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

THE second of the Wednesday classical evenings brought forth a programme drawn exclusively from the works of Mendelssohn—a fitting compliment to the illustrious musician who, both as a man and a composer, so long ago won the hearts and sympathies of the English public. The selections embraced the Ruy Blas overture, the Notturno, Scherzo, and "Wedding March," from the music to a A Midsummer Night's Dream; the Scotch Symphony (No. 3, in A minor), and three vocal pieces. The overture and symphony were well contrasted, inasmuch that the former—splendid, bright and highly-wrought overture as it is—did not take Mendelssohn a week to write; it was done upon the spur of the moment, quite as much from the wish to show what he could in the face of difficulties as from any interest in the task per se. Indeed the story of Ruy Blas was utterly repugnant to Mendelssohn. On the other hand, the Scotch Symphony is a record of the impressions made upon the mind of the composer during his visit to Scotland in 1829, matured and put into perfect form thirteen years later, the first performance of the symphony in England having been given by the Philharmonic Society in June 1842. The manner in which these productions of Mendelssohn's genius were rendered by Signor Arditi's band leaves but the slightest ground for adverse comment. The balance of tone was admirable, the light and shade effectively contrasted, and the nuances delicately given. The beautiful slow movement of the symphony went remarkably well, and the scherzo was hailed with the applause which inevitably follows its performance. The final allegro guerriero was rendered with all possible spirit and energy, and brought to an able termination a performance of high artistic merit. The Midsummer Night's Dream selection was productive of two encores, awarded respectively to the fairy-like scherzo and the pompous and imposing "Wedding March." The scherzo was taken too slowly the first time, but the repeat was in correct tempo. Mr. Pearson sang the song, "Retrospection" (from Mendelssohn's early opera, The Wedding of Camacho), only moderately well; Mdlle. Cristino gave the "Journey Song" (Reinclied), with fair effect; and Mdlle. Bianchi obtained a deserved encore for her tasteful delivery of "Auf Flügeln des Gesanges" ("On Wings of Song"). M. D. Swert played a romance for violoncello. The second part included the new popular selection from Lohengrin, and songs, contributed by Mr. Colli, Mr. Pearson, and Mdlle. Cristino. Of these the new vocal waltz, by Signor Arditi, "L'Incontro," sung by Mdlle. Cristino, was perhaps the most attractive feature.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are the proper medicine for people whose faculties are jaded, and whose energies are exhausted by excessive heat, too much work, or over indulgence. A few doses of these Pills always prove a simple, safe, and genial restorative for all stomach and liver complaints, a longer course will set right every organ whose action is impaired, strengthen every structure where decay is discernible, and reinstate that blood whose purity is tainted, sluggish, or deficient. Dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, flatulency, and all other dyspeptic symptoms, yield with surprising certainty and celerity to these corrective Pills, which lay siege to the seat of these distressing sensations, and carry off, without any pain or other disagreeable drawback, those peccant matters which are disordering the entire human machine.

GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE AND FREEMASONRY.

By R.W. William T. R. Marvin D.D.G.M.

From "The New England Freemason."

It has been remarked that the various Cathedrals of the Continental cities bear intrinsic evidence of their origin from a single master-mind, in the "unity in diversity" which characterises them all. Historic evidence, no less than tradition, declares them to have been the work of the travelling Freemasons of the middle ages, through whom the "royal art," with its mysteries and all its varied symbols, has been transmitted to our own times, and to the brethren of our Lodges, wherever dispersed. Who it was that drew the plans of these magnificient edifices is not certainly known. Tradition assigns the honour to various architects; but the claim of each has been denied, and it is too late to hope for a decision that shall be final and indisputable.

The same spirit of devotion which lavished its wealth in building these glorious temples kindled a flame in the hearts of those who worshipped in them; and inspired St. Hildebert to write his glowing hymn, and St. Bernard to pour out his soul in the triumphant strains describing "Jerusalem the Golden," that anthem of the church militant which will be sung until "The morning shall awaken,

The shadows pass away,
And each true hearted servant
Shall shine as doth the day."

The architect, no less than the poet, the painter, or the priest, caught the enthusiasm of the age, and the achievements of his genius stand to-day in a strength and beauty that have never been surpassed, if indeed they have been equalled, by any efforts of modern times. "The Italian basilica, an immense cube, with a triangular pediment, is fixed like a crystal, and if it is not finished it is unmeaning." The Gothic Cathedral, on the other hand, has in it, as has been truly said, "the forest's life and voice, and if a day should come when we could say 'it is done,' why then we should seem to say, 'it is dead.'"

The writer just quoted gives us, in a recent number of Lippincott's Magazine, the following description of the vision which greeted him on entering one of these brilliant Cathedrals: "The scene," he says, "was a rare one. I looked around me in the golden altar-lights; I thought I was in a forest,—a forest at sunset. The choir was almost filled with rising incense, touched with the yellow flare of the tapers; and it seemed, through the columns, like a vista into the clouds. The grand stems of the arcades were thickly crowded; only they fell into a natural order and alignment, like the trunks of pines; overhead they rolled to meet each other, breaking out everywhere into stiff, thickset needles and tufts of Gothic work. Vast patches and shields of prismatic hues lay rounded against their mighty cylinders. But this forest was not a solitude; it was crowded with speechless figures, thick as thoughts. And it was not silent or simply whisper haunted, like the real woods. It was all inflated, and swelled, and dazzled, and broken with pomps of organ-music that almost overcame the heart, and made the pillars seem to reel, and the painted windows to rock, in the Jove-like storm."

We leave to other hands the task of tracing out the intimate connection between the symbolic teachings of the Cathedral architecture and the imposing ritual which enshrines itself amid such surroundings. No one who has ever given a thought to the subject can have failed to recognise the fact that the whole structure is full of symbolism, and every portion of it enforces its own peculiar lesson. Wherever we go, into whatever temple of this Gothic order we enter, the same spirit meets us on the threshold, lingers with us along the aisles, tends beside us at the chancel rail, and whispers ever to us the same mystic language, eloquent with meaning to the ear that will listen to it. When we see them all, from the ruined arches of Melrose and Kilwinning to the still unfinished towers of Cologne, suggesting the same teachings in a manner so peculiarly their own; not obstrusively—rather indeed concealing them from the careless eye, yet opening readily to our thoughtful study, when once we have learned how to interpret them; when we realise the harmony which exists between them all, and the intrinsic evidence pervading them all, we can no longer resist the conviction that they had their origin in one master-mind, inspiring his brethren with the glow of his own enthusiasm, imprinting on their memories and pouring into their hearts his own immortal genius.

It requires no very vivid imagination to trace a close connection, also, between the magnificent and imposing ritual of the Cathedral service and the not less impressive and beautiful yet simple ritual of that Lodge which does its work in strict conformity to ancient usage, with those additions of musical harmony which so fittingly supplement the harmony of brotherly emulation. The majesty of the Cathedral has infused itself into those peculiar ceremonies which have at length become inseparably connected with the edifice; while the simpler rites and modest symbolism of our Order have crystallized themselves, as it were, and remain essentially unchanged. The traditions of the Institution, the language employed, with its quaint titles, its obsolete words, and its antique setting, are sufficient evidence of this, were any needed.

Our altar stands before the neophyte, unsurrounded by chancel-rail, and the humblest brother may kneel at its steps, without priestly absolution, and receive the pledge of fraternal love. Upon it lies the Book of Holy Scripture, the great light of Freemasonry. Not a word of human gloss or comment defaces it, or explains away the significance of its teachings, or in any way influences whoever desires to study its pages. The emblems that rest upon it have each their lesson, which he who beholds them cannot fail to understand. The square admonishes him, "Let virtue and integrity guide you," and the compasses respond, "Remember the great circle of humanity, composed of individuals like yourself, not one of whom is nearer or more remote from the Great Centre of all being than are you." These emblems are no less constantly or conspicuously displayed upon our altars than those hallowed and far more sacred symbols that are elevated before adoring eyes by the consecrated hands of a priesthood; concerning them no controversy is likely to arise—the real presence of the thing signified must be in the heart of him who seeks to read their lesson, or their teaching is profitless and vain.

The two lighted tapers upon the Cathedral altar symbolised the double nature of the Saviour, as both human and divine—the light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world—or the two Sacraments of the Christian Church; Baptism and the Eucharist; and though their flames have been multiplied till their brilliancy dazzles the eye, the significance of the emblem remains unchanged. Around our altar stand its burning tapers, no less eloquent in their teaching of that order and harmony which should preside over and characterise the assembly of brethren.

The clustering pillars bearing up the wide-spreading arches, and stretching out in seemingly endless vistas, yet ever bending beneath their burdens, remind us of the Man of Sorrows, bowed by the agony of his ineffable sufferings; and while they seem to sympathise with his passion, they whisper words of comfort from above to every sorrowing human heart. Our pillars are but three, and yet they point as plainly to the Grand Master of all, whose wisdom is infinite, whose strength is omnipotent, and whose beauty shines in every star.

From censers swung by chanting priests, the thick and fragrant cloud arises, symbolising on earth that heavenly incense offering which the Apocalypse declares typified the prayers of the saints. Our "pot of incense" is the emblem of a pure heart, no less an acceptable sacrifice, no less fragrant or grateful to Him before whom "all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid" by clouded canopy or fast tiled door.

The "frosted vault" and chancel arch of the Cathedral are often studded with glittering stars, emblematic, like the covering of our Lodges, of "the starry-decked heavens" where all good Masons hope at last to arrive.

The gorgeous hues and sun-set dyes which fall from rose-window or lancet upon the Cathedral's kneeling worshipper, remind him of the saintly lives and exalted virtues, the heroic deeds and glorious deaths of the goodly fellowship of the Church triumphant, whose toils are ended, and whose crowns are won. We, too, have bright and shining examples of fidelity under persecution, of heroism under trials, and of truth and faithfulness glowing with immortal radiance, and even though suffering the bitterest pangs and reproaches, unyielding to the end.

And so we might go on, pointing out in many and even more striking ways how the inspiration which built those venerable piles has infused itself into their worshippers, and elaborated those solemn and impressive services which find their congenial home within Cathedral walls. Is it too much to claim that this is the unconscious outgrowth of a secret principle whose interpretation by the profane is more difficult than any hieroglyphics of Egyptian priests, or Cabbala of Jewish rabbins, but to the skilful craftsman is an open book? The Scripture lesson, the prayer, the solemn vow, the light out of darkness, the charge, the anthems of praise—it were well nigh an endless task to follow out the parallel.

We are taught that to the Greeks is due all that "is great, judicious and distinct in architecture." Is it not time that the testimony of truth be incorporated into our tre-tle-boards, and that our candidates henceforth be taught that the Gothic architecture, not less ornamental than the Composite order, not less beautiful than the Corinthian, not less graceful than the Ionic, possessing no less strength than the Doric or the sturdy old Tuscan—combining all their charms while avoiding their defects; adapting itself to every requirement of the architect; now springing spirit-like into the air to form a flying buttress or a crowning pinnacle, now bearing up with massive masonry the weight of frowning battlements and tower of lofty spire or arching dome, and now stretching its seemingly endless colonnades like a labyrinth before us,—that the Gothic system, having a character so completly its own, was the invention of our ancient brethren, the travelling Freemasons of the middle ages?

"They dreamed not of a perishable home Who thus could build."

The Marine Engine of To-Day.—So far as economy in actual working is concerned, it appears, therefore, that superheating or drying, wherever it can safely be resorted to, is quite as capable of application to the simple engine as to the compound; that the jacket can be used on the simple engine and on the low-pressure cylinder of the compound engine, but that its use on the high-pressure cylinder is objectionable, and that while increased economy may be expected from increased speed in both engines (and certainly so in the case of unjacketed cylinders), high speed is accompanied by an increase of the loss between the cylinders of the compound engine, the loss varying with the nature of the passages according to the form of engine. The most important lesson definitely taught by the American experiments is that which we have already indicated—namely, that expansion cannot be carried in jacketed cylinders with increased economy to so great an extent as has been supposed. In the simple engine tried, no provision against loss from the clearance space by cushioning in the exhaust was made, and the maximum efficiency of the steam was therefore reached at a lower grade of expansion than would have been the case had cushioning been provided for.—"Naval Science" for July.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Session that terminated last Friday, if not a particularly eventful one, has been productive of sundry measures of great public utility. The Ministry did not accomplish all it proposed. Its enemies, and some even of its well-wishers, think it made one or two mistakes, while its out-and-out supporters claim credit for the measures it has passed, and throw the onus of blame as regards those which fell into limbo on the Opposition. But setting all political partisanship aside, the realised part of the Parliamentary programme for 1875 will be of great benefit to the community at large, and especially to those humbler classes to whom the new Labour Laws, the Artisans' Dwellings Act, and the temporary Unseaworthy Ships Act will be a boon. Thus, if the Session was not a brilliant one, the labours of Parliament have not been thrown away.

And now that Parliament has risen, London, of course, is absolutely deserted, by which figure of speech is meant, of course, that fashionable London, and that other section of it which supposes itself to be fashionable, is scattered to the four winds of Heaven. The glories of the Row and the Ladies' mile have passed away for the season; the theatres and operas are nearly all of them closed, the clubs look terribly empty, and everybody who is, or thinks himself to be anybody, is far away, on the hills of Scotland, or at the seaside, "doing" this or that continental tour. For the next few months the state of things will continue, and then, when there is a talk about Lord Mayor's Show, when we read again of Cabinet Meetings being held in Downing Street, and there are rumours that our jolly Father Christmas will soon be paying us his annual visit, London will resume its gaiety, and theatres and concerts et id genus omne suspirum will again become the order of the day. People will soon afterwards be thinking about the season of 1876 and hoping that sundry of the features that characterised the one just ended will not figure so prominently next year. We specially alluded to the very frivolous behaviour of the Clerk of the Weather. It is high time, we think, considering the very mature age of that elsewhere estimable personage, that he became a little more settled in his habits in this country. It is very unpleasant to find a person one day all smiles and sunshine, and the next day all tears, and this year the Clerk has been a very Amelia for raining tears, while granting us but now and again the faintest glimmer of a smile. These remarks apply not to the last few days, which have been hot enough to satisfy a Red Indian, but generally to the summer that is well nigh gone. We should not care to chronicle the number of garden parties and picnics that have been spoiled this year, owing to the very un-Masonic bearing of this Clerk. Doubtless he will be a little more considerate in the future, and not almost wholly exclude us from outdoor amusements.

First among those who are flitting northwards to spend the autumn in Scotland is Her Majesty the Queen, who quitted Osborne on Thursday, en route to Balmoral. Shortly before the Royal Yacht Alberta, with the Queen's suit, &c. on board, reached the Royal Clarence Yard, she ran into a schooner yacht, named the Mistletoe, belonging to a Mr. Heywood, member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. The Mistletoe was cut in two, and, worse still, three lives were lost, the captain and mate of the yacht, and Miss Annie Peel, a sister-in-law of Mr. Heywood. This sad casualty was deeply felt by Her Majesty, who personally gave directions to the various naval authorities at Portsmouth to show every care and attention to the sufferers. Commander Fullerton, with several of the crew, leaped over and rendered much valuable assistance in saving those on board the Mistletoe, himself having a very narrow escape from being drowned. The Royal Yacht received very considerable damage, losing her bowsprit, and having a considerable portion of her stem carried away. This, we believe, is the first accident that has occurred in connection with any of the numerous journeys the Queen has made.

The event of the week has been the reception of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sheffield. The occasion that led to the visit was a happy one. The present Mayor, Mr. Firth, has recently presented to the town a Park of some thirty-five acres, and this park was formally opened by the Prince, who, during his brief stay, was the guest of the Mayor. The route from the railway station to the park—a distance of about three miles and a half—was lined with people, who, as the Royal cortége passed along, were most enthusiastic in cheering the Royal Visitors, so much so, indeed, that the Prince may be said to have gone the distance bareheaded, while the Princess never ceased bowing graciously. On reaching the Park the Mayor delivered an address, in which he set forth, besides many expressions of loyalty to the Prince and his Court, the conditions on which the Park was given, prominent among which may be mentioned that no political meetings shall be held in it, no intoxicating drink sold, and no music permitted on Sundays or Good Friday. The Archbishop of Canterbury having offered up a prayer, the Prince declared the Park open, and having driven along the boundary road, the procession set out to return to Sheffield, and thence to the residence of the Mayor, the reception along this part of the route being equally enthusiastic. After dinner their Royal Highnesses went to the Ball given at Cutler's Hall in honour of the occasion, where they remained for about an hour. On Tuesday, the first part of the day was devoted to visiting the works of Messrs. Firth and Son, and the Cyclop Works of Messrs Cammell and Co., at both which they had an opportunity of inspecting some of those wonderful steel manufactures for which Sheffield has long been so famous. At the former of these establishments they witnessed the casting of a 6½-ton steel gun, the hammering the core of an 81-ton gun by a large 25-ton Nasmyth hammer, and other important processes of steel manufacture; while at the latter they had the opportunity of seeing, among other things, how a large armour-plate for one of our armour-clad ships of war is rolled. Then they adjourned to Cutler's Hall, for the purpose of partaking of the hospitality of the Cutlers. Some three hundred ladies and gentlemen were here assembled, and the reception of the toasts of the Queen and Prince and Princess of Wales were most enthusiastically received. Thence to a garden party given in their honour by the Duke of Norfolk, who has a seat in the neighbourhood, and here the Princess of Wales presented new colours to the 19th Regiment, prefacing the presentation with a brief address, in which Her Royal Highness recounted the valiant deeds which had signalised its career. This gracious address having been appropriately acknowledged by the Colonel in command, the Prince expressed a wish that the Regiment might henceforth be known as the Princess of Wales's Regiment, a request which will, no doubt, be acceded to by the Queen and the military authorities. Their Royal Highnesses then returned to Oakwood, the Mayor's residence, and on Wednesday morning took their departure, on a visit to the Duke of Rutland, at Longshawe, his grace's shooting box in Derbyshire. Yesterday they left for their residence in Scotland, where they will remain till the time comes for the Prince's departure for India. Thus much for the doings connected with the Royal visit to Sheffield. Of the enthusiasm displayed there can be no question, or of its reality. If evidence were wanted of the depth of English loyalty to the Sovereign and her family, this reception, by Sheffield, of the Heir Apparent and his wife may be cited as one of the grandest as it is perhaps the latest on record, a fact to which one of its members of Parliament, Mr. Mundella, in his address to his constituents, on Wednesday, referred pointedly, and at the express wish of His Royal Highness, who had asked him to convey to his constituents the pleasure their Royal Highnesses had derived from their visit, and from the hearty welcome which had been accorded them.

We have already mentioned one calamity at sea, the loss of the yacht Mistletoe, but a still more formidable disaster has occurred to the Boyne, one of the magnificent vessels owned by the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, which, owing to the prevalence of a dense fog, was wrecked off the French coast last Friday evening. Two firemen were drowned, but this, we believe, is the whole extent of loss as far as lives are concerned. The mails and specie have all been saved, and possibly the cargo, though in a damaged state, may be recovered. There is this consolation, however, there were boats enough, and the tackle was in order. The captain retained his coolness and self-possession throughout, and was well backed up by his crew and the passengers. The consequence was that all were got into the boats in the most perfect order. As soon as the shipwrecked people were released from their difficult position, and landed as rapidly as was possible, they were conveyed to houses and inns, and treated with the greatest kindness by the people, both on the island of Molène, where the disaster occurred, and in Brest, whence a vessel of war was dispatched to bring the unfortunate people, who had been unable to save their clothing, the children being, indeed, in their night clothes. One thing strikes us as being strange—that any vessel should have been steaming at the rate of 12½ knots, as the Boyne is reported to have been doing, when there was no seeing a-head for the denseness of the fog. Even drifting with the tide, we imagine, would be dangerous, but steaming at such a rate as is reported savours of something very much like madness. We presume, however, there will be the usual inquiry, and we shall then have the evidence to judge from, instead of vague rumours which may, after all, rest on no other basis than that of a more than usually fertile imagination. A large Norwegian barque is said to have narrowly escaped meeting a similar fate, but the shouting of the Boyne people warned her in time, and the Captain was able to steer his vessel safely through the intricate passages on that part of the coast.

The meeting of the National Volunteer Artillery Association at Shoeburyness came to an end last week. Owing to the extension of time granted by the Secretary of State for War the number of detachments that attended exceeded last year's number by twenty-seven. The proceedings were of the most business-like character throughout, a march past, with the distribution of prizes, bringing the meeting to a close. All who were concerned in the government of the volunteers while in camp appear to have been delighted with their conduct and discipline, and General McMurdo and Sir John Adye who were present paid many handsome compliments to the volunteers, as well as to the earnest labours of the regular artillery who "assisted" at the meeting. The winners of the Queen's prize hail from Woolwich, and on their return were received with the greatest enthusiasm. Wimbledon and Shoeburyness are two grand institutions, but though the latter is less showy and less fashionable, we question if it is not the more hard working institution of the two. However, both have our good wishes for their continued prosperity.

Grouse shooting is in full swing just now, but the weather appears to have been somewhat unfavourable, and in some places there has been a great scarcity of birds. It is more than probable too, that shooting will be moderate this year, so as to give time for the birds to recover from the ravages of disease during the past years. Nevertheless in some parts there have been good bags, and the sport on the English moors appears to have been generally successful. In less than a fortnight we shall be thinking of partridges as well, and then, a little later, we shall find ourselves in a whirl of excitement about game of all sorts.

There is still plenty of activity in the cricket world. Two great county return matches have been played—Surrey v. Yorkshire, and Notts v. Gloucestershire. In the former, Yorkshire gained the day by eight wickets. Score—Surrey 182 and 105, Yorkshire 161 and 127 for the loss of two wickets. For Surrey, A. P. Lucas (39), Elliott (not out 32), Southerton (24), and, in the second innings, W. W. Read (not out 49), were the chief performers with the willow; for Yorkshire, Hicks (61 and 9), Ullyet (29), Greenwood (2 and not out 19), Armitage (not out 27 and not out 38), and Rowbotham (12 and 18), were the principal contributors. The second match was drawn. Nottinghamshire compiled 192 and 21 for the loss of one wicket, Gloucestershire 289. For the former, Selby scored 66 and 15, Barnes 45, Shrewsbury 41, and Oscroft 19 and not out 6; for the latter, Mr. W. G. Grace made one of his grand three-figure innings—119, while his brothers, Dr. E. M. Grace and G. F. Grace, contributed 27 and 31 respectively. Mr. Townsend also played a somewhat fortunate innings of 84. Of the return between Surrey and Middlesex, which was put off from the 15th July, owing to the wet weather, we cannot yet give the result, but when this, and a few other matches have been played, the season of 1875 will be over. We shall, of course, see records of matches for many weeks to come, so long, in fact, as the weather will permit of playing, but legitimate cricket will be at an end in another ten days. It will be interesting to note the batting and bowling averages this year. We fancy there will be a considerable falling off from last in some of the more conspicuous players.

The Thames Regatta for professionals only, which, thanks to the energy of a few leading amateurs, notably Mr. J. G. Chambers, an old Cambridge oar and coach, has become one of the most important aquatic fixtures of the year, was held on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The former day was confined to rowing the preliminary heats, the finals being reserved for Thursday. The following are the winners in the several contests. The Newcastle crew, consisting of R. Hepplethwaite, W. Nicholson, R. Bagnall, R. W. Boyd (stroke), J. Scott (cox.), took the first prize of £100 for the Champion Fours; the Hammersmith crew, stroked by J. Sadler, being second, and a Blackwall crew, stroked by A. Egalton, third. J. Tarryer, Rotherhithe, won the Coat, Badge and Freedom for apprentices. The race for scullers who have never sculled for £100, was a splendid struggle from start to finish, T. Blackman, of the Plough R.C. winning by six inches. R. Bagnall and J. W. Boyd, of Newcastle, won the Champion Pairs very easily from H. Thomas and J. Saddler, of Hammersmith. We are sorry to learn that of the £230 which, apart from expenses, are devoted to prizes, hardly £100 has as yet been subscribed. Considering the number of amateur clubs there are, this is by no means creditable to them.

Londonderry is just now in a high state of excitement, the Royal Agricultural Society of Ireland having selected it for its annual display of cattle and implements. Among those present on the opening day were His Excellency the Viceroy, and many of the Irish nobility and gentry. The bulk of the exhibitors were, of course, Irishmen, but some of the leading prizes, and, singularly enough, that for swine, have been carried off by Englishmen, Mr. A. H. Browne, of Doxford, Northumberland, securing the Purdon challenge cup for the best shorthorn bull, Lady Emily Pigot the Purdon challenge cup for the two best shorthorn heifers, Mr. G. Turner, of Northampton, the Cork challenge cup for the best ram, and Mr. Jacob Dove, of Hambrook House, Gloucestershire, the first prize for the coloured breed of swine.

A most interesting geological discovery has been made at the Surrey Commercial Docks. For some time past excavations have been going on with a view to forming a new tidal basin, and owing to the prevalence of sundry rumours, several of the fellows of the Geological Society paid a visit to the neighbourhood, and evidences were found of a large subterranean forest, submerged ages since, and belonging, as we are informed, "to the bronze age of prehistoric archæology." Evidences of this fact have frequently been found along the river on both sides. All the trees are of the kind yet inhabiting Britain, and in the peat are bones of the great fossil ox (bos primigenius).

The news from the East is very serious. The insurrection in the Herzegovina appears to be extending, and there are rumours of Servia and Montenegro taking part in the struggle against Turkey. We hope the peace of Europe will not be disturbed for the sake of a number of petty principalities, the history of whose career is the reverse of creditable. If the Great Powers signify unmistakably their determination not to allow the whole continent of Europe to be set by the ears for the sake of a few tribes of freebooters, the insurrection will soon be at an end, but imperial jealousies may step in and prevent this happy consummation. That this is no idle imagination may be gathered from the panic reported on the French Bourse, which is chiefly, if not entirely, attributable to the unsatisfactory rumours about this revival of the Eastern question. More fighting in Spain has come to be quite a general piece of intelligence. We do not see, however, that the end of the war is much nearer.

From the United States is reported the death of Ex-President Andrew Johnson, who was buried with full Masonic honours on the 3rd instant. Further respect was shown our respected brother by General Grant ordering that all the public offices should be in mourning for several days before the funeral.

We are necessarily gratified at finding our articles so frequently quoted in extenso. In a recent issue of the Keystone will be found our article on the late Dr. Oliver, but we do not see the usual acknowledgment as to the source whence it was obtained. Doubtless this act of courtesy has been omitted through an oversight.

It is announced that a "Royal Masonic Cyclopædia" is in course of production. The work is to be issued in six half-crown parts of 128 pages each, and will be edited by Kenneth R. H. Mackenzie. Among the subjects to be specially treated may be mentioned, the History of Freemasonry, the revival of Masonry in the seventeenth, and its re-construction in the eighteenth century. Biographical notices of the principal Grand Masters and other Masonic celebrities will also find a place in the work. Intending subscribers may send their names to the office of the Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, London, E.C., or to the publisher, Bro. J. Hogg, 15A Paternoster Row, E.C.

On Tuesday next the Great Swimming Fête will take place at the Crystal Palace, and in connection with it will be held the annual competition of the Victoria Park Swimming Club. The following will be the events contested: a Mile Race for the Amateur Championship of England, the first prize, a cup given by the Swimming Association of Great Britain, the second prize being Excelsior and Leander Medals; the Crystal Palace Challenge Cup, a mile; a Two Hundred Yard Open Race, a Hurdle Race, and a Race in Dress, the Victoria Park Swimming Club Handicap for three prizes, given by Messrs. O. E. Coope M.P., J. H. Heeps and E. H. Currie, and a variety of ornamental swimming, racing in tubs, duck hunts, &c., &c. Sir Antonio Brady will present the prizes at the conclusion of the competition.

MONEY MARKET AND CITY NEWS.

FRIDAY.

The Bank rate remains at 2 per cent., and the weekly return issued by the Bank shows a further increase of £800,000 in the reserve; the proportion of reserve to liabilities is now 54¼ per cent.

The question as to the future allowance of interest by the London Joint Stock Banks for money on deposit remains unsettled, but it is fully assumed that the great strength of these institutions will prevent in future a thoroughly strict adherence to the old custom of giving 1 per cent. below the Bank of England rate. In accordance with the system of the Scotch banks, the London and Westminster Bank has for a long period paid interest on deposits at call, but it may be questioned whether the arrangement works so well as in Scotland, where money placed with a bank is usually kept there for many years. In London the changes in the value of money are, as a rule, much more sudden, and a large sum placed at call is not usually regarded with satisfaction by most bankers and discount establishments. The other joint stock banks require a week's notice before they repay any deposits. There is meanwhile no apparent outlet for the mass of floating capital, and further discussions upon the subject may be fully anticipated. For many years a very large proportion of the surplus capital of this country was diverted abroad in the shape of subscriptions to new loans, but the danger attending many of these investments has recently been fully shown, and hence there is no immediate prospect of any important reduction in the supply of money. The banks will therefore hold a very large sum unemployed, upon which interest is being paid, and it is not unlikely that the dividends for the present half-year will be smaller than those recently declared. But in the meantime the commercial atmosphere is being thoroughly purified, and when operations revive upon an active scale the legitimate trader will have a much better chance of obtaining a fair share of profit.

A new undertaking has been formed, under the title of the Maritime Passengers' and Mariners' Insurance Company Limited, "to insure the lives of persons who are about to undertake a sea voyage, or a voyage or journey, partly by sea, and partly by land." It is also proposed to insure passengers' personal baggage and effects against loss by either fire or shipwreck, and agents will be appointed at every outport in the kingdom. The capital is £25,000, in 5,000 shares of £5 each.

The report of the Anglo-Californian Bank Limited states that the net profits for the year, including £3,010 brought forward, amount to £41,398, and recommends the payment of a dividend of 10s, making, with the interim payment, 18s per share, or 9 per cent. per annum free of income tax, and leaving, after the addition of £5,000 to the reserve fund, £3,574 to be carried to profit and loss new account. The bills payable and current, deposit and other accounts, represent £679,226.

At the meeting on Thursday of the National Bank of New Zealand Limited the directors' report was adopted, and a dividend of 3 per cent. declared for the half-year, making, with the interim distribution, 6 per cent. for the twelve months.

The India Rubber, Gutta Percha, and Telegraph Works Company Limited notify that the second section of their West Coast of South America cables has been successfully completed, viz., that from Islay to Arica, both in Peru. This section is about 200 miles long, and increases the total length completely laid to 600 miles.

The report of the Submarine Telegraph Company shows that the ordinary receipts for the half-year amounted to £54,122, being slightly in excess of those of the corresponding period of 1874, and the total result of the business for the last six months enables the directors to add £2,251, being the usual proportion of the gross receipts, to the reserve fund, and to recommend a dividend at the rate of 15½ per cent. per annum, carrying over a balance of £325 to the next account. All the cables worked by the Company are in good order.

At the ordinary meeting on Tuesday of the Cuba Submarine Telegraph Company Limited the directors' report, which was adopted, showed an available total of £11,302, out of which, after making provision for the preference dividend, it was resolved to pay a dividend on the ordinary shares at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, to place £3,154 to the credit of the reserve fund, and to carry forward the sum of £852.

The half-yearly report of the London General Omnibus Company, to be submitted to the meeting of the 7th prox., shows an available total of £30,871, and recommends the payment of a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. In view of the possibility of dear hay and corn, and the expediency of maintaining an equal dividend, the directors recommend the carrying forward of a balance of £8,856, more especially as the sum proposed to be divided is slightly in excess of the actual profits of the half-year. The gross receipts for the six months were £327,212, against £323,524 at the corresponding period of 1874, showing an increase of £3,688.

The traffic receipts of the North Metropolitan Tramways Company for the week ending the 14th inst. amounted to £5,062; the Dublin Tramways Company to £1,811; the London Street Tramways Company to £959; The Provincial Tramways Company to £650; and the London Tramways Company to £2,942. During the past week 324,022 persons have been carried over the lines of the latter undertaking.

At the ordinary general meeting on Thursday of the Leipsic Tramways Company Limited the directors' report, which was agreed to, showed an available total of £2,416, out of which a dividend was declared at the rate of 6 per cent. for the year, leaving £166 to be carried forward.

At the half-yearly meeting on Tuesday of the Tower Subway Company the directors' report was adopted, and a dividend declared on the ordinary shares at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, to be paid in January next.

At the adjourned meeting on Wednesday of the creditors of Messrs. Fothergill, Hankey and Company, of the Aberdare and Plymouth Ironworks, it was resolved to further adjourn for a month, negociations for the sale of the works not having been yet completed. In the course of the proceedings it was mentioned that it will be necessary to obtain a large amount of money in order to pay off the first mortgage, but a gentleman who was prepared to enter into an arrangement had not as yet given his decision, there being many papers to look over as to the title, &c. The greatest consideration had been shown by the Marquis of Bute, that nobleman having met the creditors in a very liberal spirit. Meanwhile, no mischief is being occasioned by the delay in completing the negociations, the works being carried on, in fact, at a very considerable profit.

At the half-yearly general meeting of the English and Australian Copper Company Limited held on Thursday, a dividend was declared of 2s per share, free of income-tax.

STRAND THEATRE.

Bro. Terry had good proof of the estimation in which he is held in the audience which crowded the Strand Theatre, on the occasion of his benefit, on Thursday evening. The popular actor was greeted at every appearance in the most hearty manner. There was but little alteration in the programme, Mr. Clement's farce being succeeded by Byron's comedy, Weak Women, in which Bro. Terry played the part of Captain Ginger inimitably. Bro. Terry has powers which bid fair to place him in the first rank of the profession. The comedy was succeeded by a clever musical sketch by Mr. Geo. Grossmith, jun., and then Bro. Terry came forward and delivered the following metrical address, written for the occasion by Bro. H. J. Byron:—

"Ladies and Gentlemen, I can't allow
This night to pass unless I make my bow,
To speak my thanks for numerous favours past,
Which favours I mostly humbly hope may last.
For six years have you, in the little Strand,
Held out to me a friendly, helping hand;
Cheered all my anxious efforts to amuse,
And with Haze-a's helped to dispel the Blues.
I've tried, whilst your continued fire of cheers
Suggests, as one might say, the Fusiliers,
The Cavalry hoarse laughter to refine,
And, in a double sense, to draw the Line.
I, as Toledo's King, here first appeared,
And my "complaints" you cordially cheered.
Then, as the Widow Shepherd, showed my fear
Of the too effervescent "Ginger Beer."
And then as Richard of the Lion Heart;
Then Mr. Huxley (not a first-rate part,
Though in a clever piece); then Pluto, then
Claude Frollo—most malevolent of men,
And then in a burlesque which most surpasses
Polyphoisbois—there I pleased the lasses.
'Twas called Orion. Many a graceful she,
During its long run, kept her eye on me,
Causing domestic scenes, unpleasant very,
And several arguments with Mrs. Terry.
Then as King Edward, and, still later on,
Celestial garments was I forced to don,
As Widow Twanky did your favours gain,
In which, they tell me, I looked rather plain—
Which was correct, for all collectors boast
The ugliest china mugs are valued most.
If in Aladdin I looked plain and old,
I quite made up for it in Mr. Mould,
In which Sir Simon called me names, it's true,
But in his next burlesque gave me my Due—
Roderick Dhu, for those who don't quite see it.
And then as Cassidy I made a wee bit—
At least your kindly plaudits seem'd to say
As an "Old Soldier" I deserved my pay.
Paul Pry, Joe—El Dorado—the Maire, too,
Received your smiles, and not forgetting Loo,
In which I played the hero, such a silly 'un,
The piece brought hundreds, I was St. Emilion.
Lieutenant Lamb then bleated not in vain,
And Ginger fought his battles o'er again;
Whilst last, not least, let me allude to Nemesis,
Which seems to be a fixture on the premises,
It brings the management both peace and plenty,
A kind of Dolce H. B. Farnie-ente.
Too much, p'raps, of myself, and now to you,
My kind and generous friends, a word or two.
I am no orator, and have no art
To say more than is set down in my part,
So will you take the will, please, for the deed,
Let your kind feelings for one intercede
Whose heart, with deepest gratitude o'erflowing,
Knows but one way that gratitude of showing,
Which is to strive, in every part he's cast,
To do his best (as in the pleasant past
He has endeavoured) towards its illustration
Still further to secure your approbation.

Every quip and punning allusion in the address was greeted with a roar of applause, for each point was given with effect, and at the conclusion Bro. Terry had again to come forward in response to the prolonged plaudits. To finish a laborious evening, he next appeared in the three first scenes of Nemesis, in which he was as broadly humorous as ever. This artist is undoubtedly the active principle of the pieces now being played at the little Strand Theatre, a fact of which the public is well aware, as exemplified by the crowding of the house.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE CHLDREN'S HOSPITAL.

The Royal Infirmary for the Diseases of Women and Children, situated in the Waterloo Road, of which the Prince of Wales is patron, and which in 1810 was founded by his late grandfather, the Duke of Kent, is built on a plot of land, the property of the Duchy of Cornwall. This was, up to a short time ago, held by the Council of the Institution on a 35 years' lease at a ground rent of £10 per annum from the original lessee. Considerable inconvenience having arisen, the committee purchased the lease for a sum of £800, and then communicated with his Royal Highness, who, on the representation of that body, generously sold them the freehold for £1,000 (being about a third of its value). The hospital authorities are now engaged in enlarging the hospital at a cost of £3,000, and propose to double the bed accommodation of the institution.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, No. 27.—This Lodge of Instruction met on Thursday evening last, 19th August, at Bro. Muidwell's, The Hercules, Leadenhall Street. Bro. Green in the chair. Present—Bros. Blackball S.W., J. S. Fraser J.W., C. A. Grammer Secretary, Hocking S.D., Parker I.G., Crawley P.M. Preceptor. The Lodge was opened and the minutes of last meeting confirmed. The W.M. then rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. Williams acting as candidate. The Lodge was then closed and adjourned to the following Thursday. It is Bro. Crawley's intention of working the fifteen sections in September, when a good attendance of the brethren is invited.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction.—The regular weekly meeting was held at Bro. Chord's, Aldchurch-lane, E.C., on Wednesday, the 18th instant, the following officers being present:—Bros. Turquand W.M., D. Pouncer S.W., Abell J.W., F. Crosker S.D., W. Blinkhorn J.D., Christopher Tyler, J. Constable P.M. Treasurer. The constitutional preliminaries were observed, and the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. Crosker acting candidate; the W.M. performed his task with consummate ability, and to the entire satisfaction of the members. The sections of the degree were worked by Bro. Constable, assisted by the brethren. Bro. D. Pouncer was elected Master for the ensuing week. Bro. Abbott, 1385, was unanimously elected a joining member. As the 25th instant will be the fourth Wednesday, and, according to the bye laws, at the option of the W.M. as to programme, it was suggested by several members that the rehearsal of the Installation Ceremony would be pleasing to them: this arrangement however will remain in the hands of the W.M. The following brethren were present, Morgan, R. J. Bloomfield, Gomm, Saint, Walker, &c. The meeting was adjourned until Wednesday next.

Tyrawley Lodge, No. 217.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, the 11th of August, at Bolton Terrace, Ballina. Present—Bros. P. Atkinson W.M., James Beatty S.W., Braithwaite J.W., J. R. Dudgeon Secretary, P. Atkinson, Treasurer, J. Atkinson S.D., Monroe J.D., Gilbert I.G., Stacey Tyler. Past Master Bro. C. A. M'Culloch. Visitors—Bros. Russell 411, Drogheda, Braithwaite 124, Belfast. Business—Successful ballot was taken for Mr. George Thompson. The discussion of Bro. Scott's notice of motion, relative to the change of night of meeting, was again adjourned. It was then proposed by Bro. Dudgeon, and seconded by Bro. J. Atkinson, that Bro. Russell 411, Drogheda, become an affiliated member of 217.

The Frederick Lodge of Unity, No. 452.—This Lodge held its last regular meeting for the year on Tuesday last, the 17th instant, at the Station Hotel, Sutton, Bro. Wm. Stanley Masterman P.P.G.D. for Surrey, W.M., in the Chair. Our respected brother was supported by the following Officers and Members of the Lodge:—J. W. Sugg S.W., Poole P.M. as J.W., Magnus Ohren P.M., Secretary, James Robins P.M. Treasurer, Jeffery S.D., Edmands J.D., Frances P.M. D.C., Charles Pawley I.G., Mimpriss P.M., A. J. Dickinson I.P.M., Manning Steward, Speight Tyler; Bros. C. M. Ohren, Gray, Holmes, Beck, Spiers, Cassell, &c. Visitors—Bros. Major Shadwell H. Clerke P.G.S.W. for Devon, Richards P.G. Steward, and W. W. Morgan. Business—The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. F. Cassell was then passed to the degree of F.C., the ceremony being conducted by the W.M. Bros. Beck and Holmes were then placed under examination, and having proved their proficiency were raised to the sublime degree, the ceremony being conducted in a very impressive manner by Brother Frances P.M. The Treasurer then reported that he had a balance in hand of £55 3s 7d. Some routine business connected with the Lodge was then discussed, after which P.M. Magnus Ohren proposed the following resolution:—"That Stewards be appointed to represent this Lodge at the three Masonic Festivals for 1876, viz.—For the Royal Masonic Institution for Aged Freemasons, &c., Bro. H. E. Frances, G. Deacon for Surrey; for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Bro. George Wright J.W.; and for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, Bro. Frederick G. Gilbert; and that the sum of £5 be given from the Funds of the Lodge to be put on Bro. Frances's list, and that £5 5s be given from the Funds of the Lodge for Bro. Gilbert's list, and the like sum for Bro. Wright's list, for the respective Institutions for which they serve the office of Steward, and that the Treasurer is hereby instructed to pay those amounts accordingly." This proposition was seconded by Bro. Jas. Robins P.M. Treasurer, and was unanimously approved of. Some slight discussion, however, arose as to why a difference in the amount subscribed should be made, and it was hinted that doubtless our worthy Bro. Terry could make good use of the extra shillings represented by the guineas as against the pounds which distinguished the respective amounts voted to the Charities. We have heard similar remarks on other occasions, and commend the question to Bro. Terry's serious consideration. Surely he can relieve the minds of our worthy brethren who do not wish to make invidious distinctions by contributing more to the Charities represented by Bros. Binckes and Little than to that of the Benevolent Institution; while to the Craft we need hardly say that its members can easily get over the difficulty; let them subscribe the extra shillings; few not but that they will be well applied. After the transaction of other business, Bro. H. E. Frances rose, and said that he had, in commemoration of his appointment to Provincial Office, resolved to present the Frederick Lodge of Unity with an oil portrait of their esteemed Provincial Grand Master, Major-General Brownrigg. The portrait, which was pronounced to be a most faithful likeness, was then exhibited, and the brethren were unanimous in their expressions of pleasure at the kindness of Bro. Frances. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was very well served by Bro. Potter. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts followed, and a very pleasant evening was spent, under the presidency of Bro. W. S. Masterman.

Hervey Lodge, No. 1260.—This Lodge held its meeting on Wednesday, 11th August, at Freemason's Hall, Great Queen Street. Present—Worshipful Brother Julius Hogg P.G.D. W.M., G. Harrison S.W., J. H. Southwood J.W., G. King jun. P.M. and Secretary, Hollingsworth S.D., Goodacre I.G., C. T. Speight Tyler. Bros. Mounery, Robins, Hodgkinson, Barley, J. R. Cox, English, Butter, Bigwood, Vine, and others. Business—The Lodge was opened at 4 p.m. The minutes of last Lodge were read and signed. The Lodge was opened in the second and third degrees, when Bros. Howell, J. Cox, Mansell and Robins were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The Lodge was resumed to second degree, when Bro. W. Hall was passed to the degree of a F.C. The Lodge was resumed to the first degree, when the ballot was taken for Bro. H. Evans, of No. 212, as a joining member, and Mr. E. S. Foot for initiation, and proved unanimous in their favour. Mr. Foot, being in attendance, was initiated into Freemasonry, according to ancient custom, the whole of the ceremonies being worked in a very able manner by the W.M. Bro. Goodacre was appointed and invested as I.G. in the place of Bro. Kingcombe deceased. The bye-laws were then read. A letter was read from Bro. J. H. Southwood J.W., requesting the Lodge to accept as a gift a full-size oil painting, by Bro. Baron Tetteln, of the much respected Grand Secretary, Bro. J. Hervey, in his Judicial dress, also a letter from the Board of General Purposes, granting permission, under the circumstances, for it to hang in the Lodge room. It was carried unanimously that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Southwood J.W., for his very handsome and valuable present, for which Bro. Southwood returned thanks in a grateful speech. The installation jewel was then presented to Bro. King jun. P.M. and Secretary. A vote of condolence was then passed to the widow of the late much respected and esteemed I.G., Bro. Kingcombe, and the Secretary was instructed to write and convey the same. A vote of thanks was then passed to the Committee that had so successfully carried out the arrangements of the summer banquet at Broxbourne, on 28th July, for which Bro. Harrison S.W. returned thanks. After some other minor business was transacted, the Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned. We may here state that the oil painting presented to the Lodge is a most faithful likeness, and the best we have seen. It represents our Grand Secretary sitting at a table, in his full regalia, and will be a lasting tribute to the zeal and assiduity that he always takes in the cause of Freemasonry.

Albert Edward Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1428.—The ceremony of installing Bro. John Gristock Huxtable P.P.G.A.D.C as W.M. of the Albert Edward Prince of Wales Lodge, took place on 12th August, at the Masonic Hall, Newport. The Lodge was opened in due form at 2.30 p.m. by Bro. Wm. Watkins, the retiring W.M. He was supported by a numerous assembly of the brethren, not only of his Lodge, but also representatives of each Lodge in the town and Province of Monmouth. Shortly after the opening, Bro. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray A.G.D.C. of Eng. and D.P.G.M. of Monmouth, entered the Lodge, preceded by his sword bearer, Bro. Wickey Homfray W.M. Isca Lodge, and followed by Bros. B. Lawrence W.M. Silurian, Dr. Morgan, John Middleton, and a number of other brethren, members of the Grand Lodge of the Province. The formal business having been disposed of, the interesting ceremony of installing Bro. Huxtable was conducted, with much skill and ability, by Bro. Charles Rowe Prov. G.S. of Monmouth. This having terminated, the W.M. proceeded to appoint and invest his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Wm. Watkins I.P.M. and P.P.G.S.Wks., E. Whitehall S.W. P.G.S., F. Orders J.W., J. W. Bebell Sec. P.G.S.Wks., J. Horner sen. Treasurer P.G.D.C., J. James S.D., W. Twist J.D., E. W. Perrin Organist, W. M. Locke Supt. Works, C. Rowe D.C. P.G. Sec., J. Horner jun. I.G., J. Poole, L. Hermessen, H. Richards, S. Brakewich, Stewards, H. Fletcher Tyler, W. Hopton Assistant Tyler, &c., &c. Subsequently the accustomed votes of thanks were passed, and appropriately acknowledged in a manner peculiar to the Craft. The Lodge was closed in due form, and then the brethren repaired to the Westgate Hotel, where the annual banquet took place. Bro. Hallet's arrangements were such that the requirements of his guests were attended to in the fullest and most ample manner. Bro. Huxtable W.M. presided, and was supported at the banquet by the following brethren; covers having been laid for 60:—S. George Homfray A.G.D.C. and D.P.G.M. Mon., Wm. Watkins I.P.M. 1429 and P.P.G.S. Wks. Mon., W. H. Wickey Homfray W.M. 693 and P.P.G.S.B. Mon., W. W. Morgan P.M. 683 and P.P.G. Sec. Mon., Chas. Rowe P.M. 471 and 1429 and P.G. Sec. Mon., John Middleton P.M. 683 and 1098 P.P.G.S.W., Thos. Jones Davies 471, Thos. Boswell 1429, W. Milton Locke Superintendent Wks. 1429, T. Frederick 1429, D. L. James 471, C. M. Venn 36, 1133, R. G. Shaddick 1429, F. Orders S.W. 1429 and 471, John James S.P. 1429 and 471, Henry Evans 1429, W. Wolsford 1429, E. W. Perrin Org. 1429, J. A. Seys 1429, Samuel Davies P.P.G.S.B. Gloucester P.M. 1363 and 270, 471, 1429, James Horner jun. I.G. 1429, John Randall 1429, J. W. Bebell Sec. 1429 P.G.S. Wks., Jacob Berlyn 471, Hartley Feather Provincial Grand Pursuivant and Secretary Kennard Lodge, 1258, Pontypool, James Stallard 1429, John Sims 1429, Simeon Wyatt 147, John Hooper 251, John Neck 291 and 1429, Wm. Kinsey Morgan 1429, John Summers 1429, James Horner P.D.A.D.C. Treasurer 1429 and 471, S. Brinkewick Std. 1429 and 471, Wm. Twist 471, J.D. 1429, F. J. Heybyrne 1429, John Summers 1429, J. Evans Thomas 1429, Henry Richards S. 1429, Alfred Taylor 471 and 1429, Isaac T. Dando 683, Henry Fletcher A.P.G.T. 471, W. Hopton Assistant Tyler 1429. On the removal of the cloth, the Worshipful Master proceeded with the toast list, proposing, in the most loyal terms, "The health of the Queen and the Craft." The toast was drunk right loyally, and "God save the Queen" sung by the brethren. Bro. Perrin skilfully presiding at the pianoforte, as he did throughout the entire proceedings of the evening. The W.M. next gave "The M.W. the G.M. of England, H.R.H. Albert Edward Prince of Wales, K.G." He spoke befittingly of the illustrious head of the Masonic order, and of the joy and gratification he experienced in being present to witness the grand ceremonial of the installation of H.R.H. There could be no higher honour conferred upon the Freemasons of this Kingdom than to have H.R. Highness to preside over them, and no greater honour could be conferred upon a Prince than to be the chosen head of such a body of men as were the Freemasons of Great Britain. The toast having been duly honoured, Bro. Twist sang the air, and the brethren joined in the chorus, of "God bless the Prince of Wales." The W.M. gave "The M.W. Pro. G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Viscount Skelmersdale, and Officers of the Grand Lodge of England." He pertinently alluded to the high qualifications, as well as the social rank and position, of the brethren who composed the Grand Lodge. Great benefits must necessarily follow to the Craft when noblemen and gentlemen of such high renown were leaders in the movement. (Applause.) Bro. S. G. Homfray, as one of the Grand Lodge Officers, acknowledged the toast. It was the first time that he had had the extreme pleasure of appearing in any Lodge with the new and valuable insignia of office which had been presented to him by the Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire. He felt extreme pride in being amongst them, and could not but feel proud at the honour of receiving the appointment which he held, and to which he had been raised by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. So far as the Province was concerned, and so far as he was able, nothing should be lost to strengthen and uphold the genuine tenets and principles of Freemasonry. (Loud applause.) Bro. Middleton proposed "The R.W. the Provincial Grand Master for Monmouthshire," Bro. Lieut.-Col. Lyse. He regretted his absence, through indisposition. On that account, however, he could speak the more freely of his merits and distinguished position as a Mason, as a citizen, and as a public man. (Applause.) The W.M. gave the V.W. the D.P.G.M. for Monmouthshire, Capt. S. G. Homfray A.G.D.C. of England, and Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire." Bro. Homfray responded to the toast at length, and thanked the brethren most sincerely for the manner in which they had received his name. Nothing gave him greater pleasure than being amongst them that evening, and the brethren of the Albert Edward Lodge might rest assured that all he could do to further their interest would be most readily and heartily done. He congratulated them on the sound and vigorous condition of their Lodge. Bro. Watkins rose to propose the next toast, and called upon the brethren to drink, in a bumper, the health of their W.M., Bro. J. G. Huxtable. No one was more pleased or gratified than he to see the W.M. installed into the chair of King Solomon. He was one of the founders of the Lodge, and he yet hoped to see other brethren who had assisted in its formation occupy the distinguished position to which he had attained. The W.M. responded, and thanked them most sincerely for the kind manner in which they had proposed and drunk his health. He felt proud of the position to which he had been elected. Advancing in years as he was, he felt that his memory was not so clear or so retentive as in days gone by, but he promised them that he would do his best to carry out the important duties of his office faithfully and honourably. Whatever defects they may see in his efforts he trusted to their generosity and leniency, and he promised to do all in his power to hand down the warrant which had been entrusted to his keeping that day as pure and untarnished as he had received it from the hands of their late W.M. Bro. Watkins. He felt he should need the aid of his officers and brethren, and particularly that of his I.P.M. and Bro Chas. Rowe (loud applause), to whom they were all so much indebted. After alluding to the formation and progress of the Prince of Wales Lodge, he expressed the belief that in quality as well as numbers it would bear comparison with any Lodge in the Province, and concluded by again thanking the brethren for the honour conferred upon him by placing him in so proud a position as that which he now occupied. (Applause.) Bro. Homfray proposed the health of the I.P.M. Bro. Watkins P.P.G.S. Wks., and in the course of his observations took occasion to invest Bro. Watkins with a valuable P.M.'s jewel, on behalf of the Lodge, referring to the meritorious Masonic career of the recipient, and expressing the hope that he may long be spared to wear the jewel on his breast (loud and prolonged cheering). The inscription was as follows:—"Presented to Bro. Wm. Watkins P.M. 1429 and P.P.G.S.W. Mon., for valuable service rendered the Lodge. August 12th, 1875. Bro. Watkins, in appropriate and feeling terms, acknowledged the compliment that had been paid him, not merely in drinking his health, but in presenting him with so valuable a jewel. To adequately thank the brethren for their kindness and manifest appreciation of his services would be one of the most difficult tasks that he had been called upon to perform since he had been in the chair of this Lodge. He had ever aimed at doing his duty, and he now began to think that to some extent at least he must have succeeded in that direction. (Applause.) His aim would still be to labour to promote the interest of the Albert Edward Prince of Wales Lodge, so that it should stand second to none in the Province. The W.M. gave "The Installing Master, Bro. Chas. Rowe P.G.S." Long may he live to be an honour to the Province. Bro. Rowe acknowledged the toast in suitable terms. The remaining toasts were, "The Visitors," "The W.M.'s and brethren of the Silurian and Isca Lodges," "The other Lodges of the Province," "The Officers of the Albert Edward Prince of Wales Lodge," "The Masonic Charities," "To all poor and distressed Masons." These were acknowledged respectively by Bros. Capt. G. Homfray A.G.D.C. of England, and D.P.G.M. of Mon., Wyatt, Heath, Wickey Homfray, W.M. Isca Lodge; Hartley Feather, Pontypool; F. Orders, and Bro. H. Fletcher, the Tyler. The entire proceedings were characterised by the greatest cordiality and harmony, and some excellent songs were given by Bros. Perrin, Homfray, S. G. Homfray, Huxtable, Twist, &c.

Chislehurst Lodge, No. 1531.—An emergency meeting of this new Lodge took place on the 14th instant, at the Bulls Head Hotel, Chislehurst. Bro. John Coutts P.G.P. in the chair, supported by Bros. Hutchings as S.W., W. Kippe J.W., Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.P. Treasurer was unavoidably absent, J. Griffin P.M. Secretary, J. Mason S.D., H. Gloster J.D., W. Hardman I.G., R. Russell P.M., and Bros. Hunt, Skinner, &c. The Lodge having been opened, Bros. Wain, Hooker and Luck were passed to the 2nd degree, and Messrs. G. Humphreys and West were initiated. The W.M., Bro. J. Coutts, in his usual perfect and able manner, performed the ceremonies. Bro. R. Russell P.P.G.D.C. was admitted a joining member. The Lodge was then closed, and a very capital banquet followed. The usual toasts were given, and the brethren returned to town.

VICTORIA PARK SWIMMING CLUB.

The annual race for the captaincy of this Club took place on Tuesday morning last, at the lake in Victoria Park, in the presence of about 1,500 spectators. The race produced five starters, who went from the following stations:—1. W. Bell; 2. J. Slaney; 3. W. E. Robinson; 4. H. Pouncey; 5. A. Valentine. The winner proved to be Robinson, the captain of last year, who was, however, very hard pressed by Bell. The length was 500 yards, and the winner's time 12 min. 2 sec. A race for boys, for which 15 starters competed, came next, the prize being a silver medal, presented by Bro. T. Hadley Prestage, the secretary of the club. The race was swum in two heats, in each of which the first and second were Stubbs, Lincoln, Taylor, and Kirby. The final heat produced a good contest, in which Taylor was first, Stubbs second, and Kirby third. Our worthy brother Prestage officiated as starter, and Mr. Croxton as judge.

Bro. Gen. N. P. Banks has been the recipient of high honors at the hands of Memphis Masons; and when it is remembered that General Banks was at Port Hudson in 1863, assisting to open the Mississippi River, his reception was only to be equalled by that given to the Virginia Knights at Boston. Masonry is as long as from the East to the West, and as broad as from the North to the South.—The Keystone.

DR. WINSLOW LEWIS,

LONG known and highly respected as a physician, and one of the most prominent members of the Masonic fraternity in this city, died last night at half-past eleven at the summer residence of his son-in-law, Dr. George H. Gay, in Grantville, after an illness of about three weeks. Dr. Lewis was born in Boston, 8th July 1792, his parents being Captain Winslow Lewis, a noted ship master, and Elizabeth Greenough, the daughter of Thomas Greenough, the manufacturer of mathematical instruments. He graduated at Harvard in 1819, and studied medicine under the late Dr. John C. Warren, taking the degree of M.D. in 1822. He subsequently attended the lectures of Dupuytren in Paris and Abernethy in London. Upon his return, he began practice in Boston.

He was married, 22nd Feb. 1828, to Miss Emeline Richards, daughter of Captain Benjamin Richards of New London, Conn. He was for two years physician of the municipal institutions, three years physician of the House of Correction, and since Dr. Warren's decease a consulting physician of the Massachusetts General Hospital. His skill in his practice was great, and his benevolence in attending the poor notable. His public career, apart from his prominence as a Mason, is stated as follows: He was representative to the General Court in 1835, '52 and '53; one of the Common Council of Boston in 1839; on the School Committee 1839; '40, '41, '44, '45, '57, '58; visitor of the United States Marine Hospital, 1856 to 1863; one of the overseers of Harvard College, 1856 to 1862; consulting physician of the city, 1861; counsellor of the Massachusetts Medical Society; member of the American Medical Society of Paris; president of the New England Historic, Genealogical Society, 1861 to 1866, his successor being the late Governor Andrew. During several visits and one long sojourn in Europe, Dr. Lewis made the acquaintance and won the friendship of many of the most noteworthy characters of the time. His wife survives him, and his surviving children are the wives of Dr. George H. Gay and Mr. Arthur Cheney.

Dr. Lewis was made a Mason in Columbian Lodge, Boston, 3rd Nov. 1830. The circumstances which led him to become a member of this Institution are somewhat singular. In the days when the fraternity were abused without mercy and persecuted to the utmost, he saw an advertisement in a paper of one of the furious anti-Masons, Avery Allyn—a name now almost forgotten—that on a certain day in 1829 he would deliver a lecture, showing up the weakness and hypocrisy of Freemasonry, and its dangerous tendency. The Doctor was led by curiosity to go and hear him, and the very sophisms this arch-enemy of the brotherhood used, and the abuse he heaped upon many of them, who were men without fear and without reproach, made him a convert on the other side.

Dr. Lewis's opinion of the Masonic institution was well founded. He became most warmly attached to it, and for forty-five years has been a constant attendant upon the meetings of its various organisations. Years ago, at one of its social gatherings, he expressed his attachment to it in these words: "Truth and my feelings prompt the declaration that in Masonry I have found the best friends, the best social ties and comforts, and the 'whitest' hours of my life (apart from my family) have been when surrounded by 'brothers,' and around that altar where heart beats responsive to heart, and all 'mingle into bliss.'" These sentiments he continued to entertain up to the last moment of his life. Very recently, at a memorable gathering of the Craft he closed a very touching address as follow:—

"My limbs are tottering, my brain flags, but my Masonic heart and soul will be the last lingering remains of my existence; and when I die—and that time must soon come—written on my heart will be Masonry! Freemasonry! This may be almost the last tribute that I shall pay to Masonry, an institution which has developed in me kindly feelings and charitable deeds. Let me say as a parting, and it may be the last parting word,—May that institution from which I have derived so much benefit continue to bless you all as I have been blessed."

His high character, his literary qualifications, his genial manners and his warm interest in the institution, naturally led to the bestowal of almost every honour and dignity in the gift of the fraternity which it was possible for one person to attain. A recital of them would contain no news for the initiated, and would sound strange to the uninitiated. Suffice it to say that he had been Senior Warden of St. John's Lodge, High Priest of St. Paul's Chapter, and Commander of the Boston Encampment (all of Boston), Grand King of the Grand Chapter, Grand Generalissimo of the General Grand Encampment of the United States, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in 1855, 1856 and 1860 and an honorary member of Masonic bodies almost without number. His arduous and unremitting efforts to advance the welfare of the brotherhood have endeared him to them in the strongest manner. His long, useful and happy life has reflected the highest honor upon the fraternity. Few members of it have ever been so extensively known or so universally beloved and respected. He has gone down to the grave full of years and of honors, and has left a noble example, worthy of imitation by all the Craft.

The funeral will take place at St. Paul's Church on Friday at 2 p.m. The remains will be buried at Mt. Auburn, in the lot belonging to the deceased, by the Masonic fraternity, under the direction of the Grand Lodge.—Boston Paper.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 112 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

HONORARY DISTINCTIONS.

IT has often struck us that one of the petty charges brought against our Order, has, at all events, something of a substantial groundwork to rest upon. It is a common subject of ridicule, not with the hoi polloi so much as with the more intelligent classes, when they see ordinary folk arrayed in all the gorgeous finery of the Foresters and other friendly societies. The leader of the procession, who has arrayed himself beautifully, and quite regardless of expense, so as most nearly to resemble Robin Hood, or Little John, or some other "swell" of that remote period, is probably a most respectable and inoffensive tradesman, who, in his ordinary costume, and in the performance of his ordinary duties, is respected by all his neighbours. On the high days and holidays of Forestry, however, his appearance is so bewildering that the small boys jeer him, and his friends know him not in his quaint apparel. He is beribboned and bejewelled from head to foot, and, as it not unfrequently happens that his mien is neither the most graceful nor the most commanding, the grandeur of his costume adds not a little to the ridiculousness of his general appearance. Others there are who figure thus publicly, and cause more or less excitement and laughter among the spectators, according as they are more or less gorgeously arrayed. Now the public display of Masonic paraphernalia is not allowed except a dispensation has been obtained from the supreme authority. But none the less do sundry of our Order exhibit an undue love of finery, this display, however, being strictly confined, except as aforesaid, within the sacred precincts of the Lodge. Now we have no objection as a rule to a little vanity. A man may even be very justly proud of sundry of his decorations. The brother who has laboured in the performance of his arduous duties as W.M. of his Lodge, or as Steward to one of our Charities, is certainly deserving of some recognition, and our late M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, fully appreciating how small a reward would serve as an incentive to great exertion in the cause of beneficence, graciously sanctioned the wearing of Charity Jewels by those who had served the office of Steward to two of our Charities, with additional tokens in the shape of bars or clasps for further service of a similar character. Again, no reasonable objection can be raised to a deserving W.M. receiving some token from his Lodge of their appreciation of his services during his term of office. A P.M.'s jewel is a token of the respect in which an eminent brother is held by his brethren. But there is a limit to all things. As a correspondent pointed out in our columns last week, it may happen that a member has filled the chair of more than one Lodge, and that each has presented him with a P.M.'s jewel. He may have served also other offices and have received other tokens of respect for his services in those other capacities, the result being that some brethren are so bejewelled that a young craftsman might almost be excused for mistaking them for veteran Field Marshals or gorgeously bedizened Court Chamberlains. "Charity" suggests that a retiring W.M. should receive a life subscribership in those cases where he was already decorated as a P.M. The suggestion is a practical one, and we shall willingly give space in our pages to any of our readers who may be desirous of expressing an opinion on the subject. It is clear too, that the matter requires some "ventilation." Grand Lodge, while jealous in the case of all matters connected with the discipline of the Craft, is slow to intervene without just cause is shown for its intervention. We have received copy of a circular addressed to the Masters of our several Lodges, pointing out that no "Special or Commemorative Lodge Jewel" can legally be worn without the express sanction of the Grand Master. We hail this wholesome hint to members as to any undue display of jewellery with the utmost satisfaction, especially as we feel that it came not wholly uncalled for. The plain garb of a brother is more honourable than the decoration of the Garter or any other Order of Knighthood, and the more simple it is, the more it becomes our Craft, whose grandest claim to respect is its simple, quiet, and unobtrusive beneficence. The following is the circular above referred to:—

FREEMASONS' HALL, LONDON, W.C.,
25th August 1875.

W. Master,

The attention of the Board of General Purposes having been directed to the fact of "Special or Commemorative Lodge Jewels" being worn by Members of the Craft, without the authorization of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, I am directed to request you to warn all the Members of your Lodge that no "Special or Commemorative Lodge Jewel" can legally be worn without the express authority of His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful GRAND MASTER having been first obtained.

I am, W. MASTER,
Yours fraternally,
JOHN HERVEY G.S.

ORDER OF CHARLES XIII. OF SWEDEN.

THE following translation of the Manifesto of King Charles XIII. of Sweden, on the occasion of his establishing the Masonic Order which bears his name, and of the Statutes of the said Order, may be interesting to our readers.

MANIFESTO.

We, Charles XIII., by the Grace of God, King of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, &c., &c., &c., make known that among the cares which, under divine Providence, we have assumed in accepting the Crown of Sweden, not one is dearer to us than that of inquiring into and rewarding merit whose aim is to benefit the commonweal.

We have seen that our glorious ancestors and predecessors, animated by like sentiments, in renewing several ancient orders, strove to arouse their subjects to bold and patriotic acts, and bestowed some ostensible mark of honour on men of eminent virtue. If, not unfrequently, we confer reward on those who have shown themselves faithful, brave, intelligent, or industrious, neither must we overlook those good citizens who, in a narrower and less brilliant sphere, and guided only by a desire to be of service to humanity, are secretly prodigal of succour to the distressed and the orphan, and who, in the form of refuges for the indigent, leave traces, not of their names, but of the benefits they have conferred.

As we are desirous of paying honour to these virtuous actions, which the laws of the Kingdom prescribe not, and which are but seldom brought under the notice of the public, we have been unable to withhold certain proofs of our special goodwill from that estimable Society in Sweden, which we ourselves have administered and presided over, the dogmas and institutions of which we have studied and propagated, of which for so long a period of time we have been the chief, and with which, in fine, we have invariably preserved such excellent relations, as will assure on the part of its members, now our subjects, both to us and to our successors to the Swedish throne, the fulfilment of all those duties which religion, fidelity, and attachment to the throne can demand of men.

In order, then, to confer on this body a proof of our good will, we will and ordain that its principal dignitaries, in such numbers as we shall determine, shall, in the future, receive the most conspicuous mark of our confidence, which shall be to them the distinctive sign of the highest dignity, and we make it known by these presents that those who shall receive it shall for the future be known as a body of Knights, under the name of Charles XIII., of which we ourselves shall be the Grand Master.

As in establishing this Order our purpose is not only to excite our subjects to the practice of beneficence, and to perpetuate the remembrance of its devotion to our person of that society when subject to our direction, but also to furnish proofs of our royal esteem towards those whom for so long a period we have embraced and looked upon under the name of brothers; we have selected for the institution of this Order the day when our beloved son and successor, the Prince Charles John, hath taken upon himself, in conjunction with us, the general governance of the Society aforesaid.

We leave by these presents to him and to his successors to the throne of Sweden the care of maintaining and handing down this Institution in Sweden, in accordance with the following ordinances, which we have signed with our own hand, and which we have confirmed with the seal of our Royal Order of St. Seraphim.

Given at Stockholm, in the Chapter held on the 27th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1811, and in the second of our reign.

STATUTES OF THE ORDER OF CHARLES XIII.

Art. I. We have selected and do hereby select among the first dignitaries of the Society we desire to distinguish and reward, in accordance with our Manifesto of the 27th May, with some ostensible proof of our royal munificence, the number which we determine hereinafter, in order to establish an Order of Knights, which shall bear the name of Charles XIII., whereof we shall be the Grand Master. The King of the Sweden, Goths, and Vandals, and his successors, shall be the Grand Masters of this Order, which shall enjoy for ever their high protection. The heir to the throne shall have the general direction thereof.

II. The King shall never permit the abolition or extinction of the Order, but he shall encourage always the beneficent virtues, which should be practised by its members, and shall bear in mind those actions which have distinguished them during our administration.

III. There can only be admitted into the order of Charles XIII. twenty-seven Civil Knights and three Ecclesiastical; in all, thirty members. The King shall fill up this number or not at his pleasure, but he shall never exceed it. The hereditary Prince, and the princes of the blood royal, whom the King shall appoint Knights, shall not be included in this number.

IV. No one shall be admitted a Knight before he has completed his thirty-sixth year, the princes of the blood royal alone excepted, the King reserving to himself the right to bestow upon them the Cross of the Order when it pleases him.

V. This Order shall comprise one grade only, and all the Knights shall enjoy equal rights and prerogatives.

VI. Every Knight shall be held to be a member of the Order until death, whatever other Order, Swedish or foreign, he may possess, now or hereafter.

VII. No Knight of our Order shall be permitted to ask for, or accept, without permission of the Sovereign, the Order of any other Sovereign or power. He who contravenes these present regulations shall lose the Order of Charles XIII., and be deemed unworthy of wearing it.

VIII Whosoever, by word or action, shall seek to damage our Order, or question the choice of the King and Grand Master, shall, ipso facto, be adjudged unworthy to receive it, and shall, in addition, be punished according to the law.

IX. The Knights of the Order of Charles XIII. shall form a special Chapter, which shall not be conjoined with the Chapter General, the which will only assemble in presence of the King, for the purpose of deliberating about questions proposed by him.

X. Save the Chapter General, no other tribunal shall have power to declare that a Knight has been guilty of anything derogatory to this Order.

XI. The twenty-eighth January, the anniversary of our fête, shall be the only day set apart for the election of Knights.

XII. The institution and the ordinances of this Order, which the King hath published and signed in the Chapter General, shall be taken conjointly with its acts. The reception, as well as the death of any member, shall be published in the Chapter General next following the announcement of one or other event; meanwhile, no Knight shall be admitted into the Chapter General, unless he has the right of entry as Commander of one of the Royal Orders.

XIII. If the King is desirous of appointing certain Knights, he shall convoke, in his cabinet, the chief dignitaries of the Order, and shall communicate to them the names of him or them he has chosen. Whenever a Knight is nominated, he shall not wear the cross till he has been duly appointed by the King, and this ceremonial shall not be fulfilled till two months after his nomination.

XIV. If the King is desirous of raising a Knight, he shall do so in the apartments of the Palace, whither all the members of the Order shall have been summoned. The Knights of St. Seraphim shall be invited by the Chancellor to be present, as at all other receptions of Knights.

XV. When the Knight designate is introduced, the Chancellor of the Order shall read the letters patent of the King so designating him. It is conceived in the terms following:—"We, ——, by the Grace of God, King of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, &c., &c., &c., make known that having taken into our gracious consideration the zeal and beneficent acts by which our dear and well beloved N or M hath striven, and yet strives to furnish proofs of his attachment to the public weal, having regard also to the fidelity with which he has discharged the duties of a loyal subject and good citizen, we have determined to receive the said N or M, in testimony of our satisfaction, as a Knight of our Order of Charles XIII., as a recompense for his good will, and with a view to encourage him in its continuance For these reasons it is we nominate and receive, by virtue of these present letters patent, N or M, as Knight of our Order of Charles XIII., of which we are Grand Master. We bestow upon him accordingly, with every outward visible sign of honour and confidence, all the prerogatives, privileges, and powers attached, or which may be attached in future to our Order. We take him under our royal protection, so that all discomforts he may experience by reason of his promotion shall be regarded as an offence against our person, and the authors of such annoyances be punished according to the rigour of the laws. In the hope that every one shall conform to our will in respect of these presents, and in order to make them authentic, we have signed with our own hand, and have affixed thereto the royal seal of our Order of St. Seraphim. Given at Stockholm, in the Chapter of the Order, &c.

XVI. Thereupon the Chancellor of the Order shall call upon the newly nominated Knight to take the oath and shall express himself as follows:—"Chevalier N or M, nominated to the Order of Charles XIII., advance in order to take your oath of allegiance." The new Knight shall then approach, kneel down, and pronounce the following oath as dictated by the Chancellor of the Order:—

"I, N or M, do hereby vow to God and on his Holy Gospel, that while fulfilling inviolably all my obligations hereunto before contracted, I will with my whole life and fortune guard the pure doctrines of the Gospel, that I will be faithful and true to the King and his government, contribute to the well being of the State, resist oppression, maintain peace and equity, promote union and obedience to the laws; in short, that I will conform, as far as in me lies, to the statutes of the Order, and whatsoever shall be prescribed to me. So help me God."

XVII. When the oath is taken, the Knight shall advance and place himself upon a stool before the King, who will dub him Knight, by giving three strokes of his sword on the left shoulder, and saying:—"We, ——, by the Grace of God, King of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, receive thee as a Knight of our Order of Charles XIII.; be worthy of that honour." Thereupon the Treasurer of the Order hands the cross to the King, who suspends it from the neck of the Knight; the latter rises and kisses the hand of the King in token of thanks for the honour that has been conferred upon him.

XVIII. The ensign of the Order is a ruby-coloured cross, with branches issuing in the form of four triangles from a ball enamelled in white on both sides. On one side of the ball are two CC circumscribing the number XIII., and on the other the letter B in black, environed by a golden triangle. This cross, surmounted by a golden crown, is suspended from a ring by a red riband.

XIX. Knights of the Order of Charles XIII. will take precedence after Commanders and before Knights of our other Orders.

XX. If a Knight of this Order is Commander of another, or if he be raised to that dignity and take his seat accordingly in our Chapter General, he shall wear the riband and cross of the Order with other decorations.

XXI. Whenever a Knight dies, his death shall be announced to the King, as Grand Master, by the oldest Knight present. The insignia of the Order with which the deceased was decorated shall be borne in the funeral cortége in accordance with the usage of our other Orders. This decoration shall be afterwards handed by three Knights to the King, who shall receive it at their hands.

XXII. If a Knight of the Order leave any children under age, and in such a state of indigence that they cannot be maintained or educated, the King, as protector and guardian of orphans, shall, on due information to this effect, issue orders for their maintenance and education.

XXIII. For greater authenticity and certainty we have signed these statutes with our own hand, and have affixed thereto the seal of our Royal Order of St. Seraphim.

Stockholm, in the Chapter of the Order, this twenty-seventh day of May in the year of Grace 1811 and the second of our reign.

MASONS OUT OF TOWN.

AMONG the many places to which the tired Londoner betakes himself for recreation, there are few more pleasant, though perhaps there are many more fashionable, than the watering places of the East Anglian coast. From Cromer,—the favoured retreat of local magnates,—whose comparative inaccessibility keeps it more select than the rest, down to recently-discovered Clacton-on-Sea, there are endless delightful haunts, open to the German Ocean and its health-giving breezes, and all, to our thinking, more adapted for the great object, bathing, so far as the advantages of sandy beaches over shingly and rocky shores captivate the dabbler who likes to swim (?) with at least one foot on the ground. Above all the eastern watering places within reach of London, we confess to a strong predilection in favour of the ancient town of Great Yarmouth. In addition to the usual delights of reposing on the beach and wandering on the piers, imbibing the sea-breeze, not unmingled with tobacco smoke, we can enjoy the delights of inspecting the herring fishery, and, if we choose to dive into the recesses of the older and less watering-placeish part of the town, of saturating ourselves with the aroma diffused in the preparation of the succulent bloater. Here, too, is the old "jetty," preferred by all habitués of Yarmouth to the more stately modern piers, and on this, at the proper time of the year, a distinguished M.M. is generally to be seen, sinking the head of a department in a compound of Mr. Chucks and Captain Cuttle, and surveying the herring fleet with the eye of a Xerxes.

The visitor will at once be struck with the very handsome column commemorating Nelson's victories, at the southern end of the town, and near the extremity of the peninsula formed by the sea and the embouchure of several rivers,—locally known as Breydon Water,—on which the town is built, and will not, if his curiosity leads him to a closer inspection, fail to be yet further delighted with the naïveté which led the local magnates of the time to inscribe their own names in equally prominent positions with those of their mighty countryman and his captains. The "Rows," as they are locally called, connecting the principal streets, are by no means the least interesting feature in Yarmouth. We cannot at the present moment recal any other town possessing such a number of odd-looking alleys. Their number is indeed so great that the nomenclators of the place appear to have utterly failed in giving them names, and have contented themselves with numbering them after—or probably before—the manner of our American cousins.

Under the present arrangements of the Great Eastern Railway, not to mention the boat companies, Yarmouth has become very accessible, and a "Saturday till Monday" visit is now much more practicable, by the aid of special fast trains, than it was in the days when the dreary round through Cambridge and Norwich was the only alternative for those who feared sea-sickness, and a day may be very profitably spent in looking round the curiosities of the town and its immediate surroundings, not forgetting, if on Sunday, a visit to the beautiful old church, and, whatever day it be, a dip in the briny wave.

There is one point in which the neighbourhood of Yarmouth cannot, we think, be surpassed by any part of England,—we allude to fishing. Certainly trout and salmon are not obtainable here, but are they anywhere, except with difficulty and expense? every petty trout-stream being preserved, and necessarily so. But for those who are not above bottom-fishing, we venture to say that they cannot tell what it means till they have visited Norfolk. The "big takes" chronicled in the weekly reports from the Thames, in our sporting contemporaries, sink into insignificance beside the every-day catches of these waters. How would the potterer after illegally-sized roach and dace at Teddington or Moulsey like to reckon his fish by the stone? And despite the somewhat greater expense of the railway journey, we think that the whole cost of a few days' fishing here would not exceed that of the same number of days on the Thames or Lea by any great amount. The "broads" or lakes which abound in this neighbourhood literally swarm with fish, principally bream, but the perch are very fine and tolerably numerous, and in winter large jack may be taken by fair fishing, though the poaching habit of using trimmers or "liggers" as they are here called, is productive of much mischief. Most of the "broads" are free to the angler, and the only difficulty is the procuring a boat, which is indispensable. We may recommend the "Eel's Foot," at Ormesby Broad, as an excellent place to obtain boats. It is disgusting to think how these splendid fisheries are netted and the fish absolutely thrown away, and still more so to read letters in a sporting paper from some neighbouring snob defending the practice; but, despite this wilful destruction, any of the chain of lakes communicating with Ormesby Broad will, on a favourable day, afford more fish than the angler will care to carry away. And many of the others will give even better sport than these. We were conversing some time since with an old Thames angler, to whom we described the glories of our beloved "broads," and who informed us that he "did not care about still-water fishing." We must say that we failed to see the difference between Thames punt-fishing and sitting in a boat on a "broad." But if any of our readers are possessed with similar scruples, we can refer them to river-fishing, equally excellent. Mr. Benns's comfortable hostelry at Reedham Ferry, between Yarmouth and Norwich, will afford every accommodation to the angler, and the sport here, or indeed at almost any point on the Yare or Bure, is unrivalled.

For those who like sea-fishing, which we confess we do not, there is endless sport to be had, even by fishing from the piers. The non-fisherman will wonder, not at the quantity of herrings to be seen in London and all over the country—as we have frequently known people do—but at what becomes of all that are caught, when he sees the miles of nets stretched out to be dried and repaired on the "denes." For all information as to both sea and fresh-water fishing in the neighbourhood, we may confidently refer the visitor to our worthy brother, the landlord of the Crown and Anchor Hotel. We would however suggest to the fisherman, who only intends a short stay, to take with him a plentiful supply of worms. They are not easy to get here, especially in dry seasons.

As to the scenery of this neighbourhood, have you not the sea? But though many may cavil at this flat country, the "broads" and marshy rivers are not to our mind devoid of attraction. Do any of our readers recollect Mr. Wilkie Collins's description of a sunset on a "broad," in

"Armadale?" For the antiquarian and artist Norfolk will afford equal attractions by its endless variety of church architecture, and the naturalist will find an abundant field for observation, particularly among the water and wading birds, which, as might be expected, abound here. We have found a rare fern, the Lastrea Thelypteris, in what we believe is an unregistered habitat, on the banks of one of the "broads," but we will not say which. Selfish, perhaps—but kind to the plant.

We trust we have said enough to awaken the curiosity of those of our readers who have never visited this part of the world. We can assure them it is accessible, for, in addition to the excursion trains from Saturday to Monday, the railway offers facilities for a more protracted stay by issuing fortnightly tickets, by fast trains, at reduced rates.

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION OF GRAND LODGE.

THE following is the business to be transacted on Wednesday, 1st September, 1875:

1. The Minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 2nd June for confirmation.

2. Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for Grants to the amount of £350.

3. THE REPORT OF THE BOARD OF GENERAL PURPOSES.

To the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England:

The Board of General Purposes beg to report that the subject of wearing special or Commemorative Jewels unauthorized by the Most Worshipful Grand Master having been brought under their notice, they have considered it desirable to direct the Grand Secretary to issue a Circular to the Provincial Grand Secretaries and other Masonic authorities, requesting them to warn the Brethren under their several jurisdictions against wearing any such Jewels, except those which have previously received the sanction of the Most Worshipful Grand Master.

OUR FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I had a good laugh over the earnest way in which Bro. Yarker tells your readers that I, at p. 101, had placed words in his mouth which he had never used. I think the context may be fairly left to explain that. He might about as well have said that I had set him astride an animal which was dead three hundred years before he was born! To come to the point, however, we find Bro. Yarker, at p. 116, saying:—"I before quoted two sources which I consider undeniably to prove the antiquity of the system of three degrees. * * * The first of these is the Sloane MS., No. 3329,* recently edited by the Rev. Bro. Woodford, as a MS. of 1650, which I consider it is, and possibly one alluded to by Dr. Plot. The second is an Aberdeen ritual of 1727."

Now I have taken considerable interest in this Sloane MS. No. 3329, f. 142, in the British Museum, and in August 1872 I published a copy of it in the Masonic News. This copy I got through the kind courtesy of Bro. Hughan. The editor of the Masonic News got anything but thanks, however, from some of the more ignorant or bigotted portion of his readers. Bro. Woodford's pamphlet appeared in November 1872. The great question, however, is:—What is the real age of this Sloane MS.? Because it would help to support some of his other notions, Bro. Yarker unhesitatingly considers its age to be A.D. 1650. I however wrote to Dr. Bond, the Keeper of the MSS. of the British Museum, upon this point, and judging from the handwriting, he considered its age to be about 1710, so that is sixty years less than Bro. Yarker. In his "Unpublished Records of the Craft," Bro. Hughan says:—"We are also informed, by a gentleman whose name has been honourably associated with the British Museum for years, that 'as Sir Hans Sloane only died in 1753, the article on MS. 3329 might easily be of a date after 1717.'" Bro. Jacob Norton, of America, judging from its contents, is inclined to date it no older than 1730, while my own idea is about 1720. From the above, therefore, it will be seen that Bro. Yarker's dictum, that the age of this Sloane MS. 3329 is 1650, is of very little value, unless he can bring other evidence to support it, which neither he nor any one else, to my knowledge, has as yet done. As to the 1727 Aberdeen ritual it is not worth while taking up space about it, as that date is ten years after 1717. The upshot of this controversy, therefore, is, that so far as the production of "undeniable" evidence to prove the existence of our three degrees before A.D. 1717 is concerned, the result has been nil.

I am, yours fraternally,
W. P. BUCHAN.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—I have no intention of intervening in a controversy between two such doughty antagonists as Bros. Yarker and Buchan, but there are one or two matters relating, either directly or indirectly, to the points at issue, which seem to me worthy of remark from others. I must premise, however, that I am but a young Masonic student, and what I offer is more in the way of suggestion than of argument.

First, as to the question, Was Sir Christopher Wren a Mason? For my own part, I should be willing to accept Bro. Yarker's quotation from Aubrey as pretty conclusive evidence of a well-known, if not (according to our more exacting modern ideas) well-authenticated fact, namely, that Wren was a Mason. But had I any doubts about the value of Aubrey's statement, the concurrent testimony of eminent men, were such obtainable, would go a very long way towards silencing those doubts, and it strikes me such testimony is obtainable. Bro. Manningham, a former Deputy Grand Master, writing under date of 12th July 1737, to a Dutch Bro. Sauer on the subject of the high degrees at that time being imported into the Netherlands, records that "Grand Master Payne, who succeeded Sir Christopher Wren, is ignorant of them," (that is the high degrees). Now here is an eminent official in Masonry who quotes in evidence respecting certain innovations the living authority of the Master "who succeeded Sir Christopher Wren." And as what, may I ask, if not as Grand Master of Masons? Payne was G.M. in 1718 and 1720. Sir C. Wren died in 1723. Thirty-four years after the occurrence of this last event, Dr. Manningham speaks in the present tense of Sir C. Wren's successor being ignorant of certain things. Compare we this statement, which comes from a Mason, with the independent evidence of Aubrey as quoted by Bro. Yarker. The announcement in the latter that "Sir C. Wren is to be adopted a Freemason," and Bro. Manningham's reference to Payne, "who succeeded Sir C. Wren," form, at all events, a very remarkable concurrence of testimony. Are we to reject all but documentary evidence in a case of this description? The positive statements of well-known Masons, contemporary with Wren, cannot be overlooked, or set down as valueless, and there is no single Masonic writer, with whose works I am acquainted, who does not put down Wren as a Mason, not merely in what I will call a figurative sense, as an eminent architect associated with operative Masonry, but in accordance with the present, or speculative, definition of the art. Would the announcements of all these people have passed unchallenged had there been no foundation for what they announced? It must not be overlooked that Masonry, within a very few years of its revival, attracted a considerable amount of notice throughout Europe, to that extent, indeed, that some fifteen years after Wren's death, the then Pope honoured us with a special bull of excommunication. There was a considerable amount of antagonism to the Art in England, and the right of Masons to include Wren among the members of the Fraternity would assuredly have been questioned, had the claim been merely "the baseless fabric of a vision." Wren was a man of eminence, whose name would have been a pillar of strength to any order—whether of Masons or of Jesuit. Had he been no Mason, the inquiries of anti-Masons would certainly have disposed of the fact, when it was so openly and so generally announced by Masons. Again, there are special reasons why documentary evidence, not only in Wren's case, but in that of every speculative Mason of that epoch, should not be forthcoming. The political state of England was most unsettled, and the members of a secret society would have every reason to keep the fact of their membership a secret from the friends and foes alike of the powers that were. Nor is there any antecedent improbability in Wren being a Mason. He was the architect of his day, and, as such, a fitting patron of operative Masonry. He was otherwise a man of great learning—a philosopher in fact—and, as such, likely enough to have lent his mind to the speculative side of Masonry. Are we wrong, I ask, under these circumstances, in accepting him as "Grand Master of the most ancient and honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons?"—for so the well-known Lawrence Dermott, Grand Secretary of Ancient Masons, describes Sir Christopher, in his address prefixed to the third edition of Ahiman Rezon, published in 1788. Can Bro. Buchan disprove the statements of our Masonic historians?

* No. 3329, I suppose he means.—W.P.B.

Then, as to the question, Whether Masonry was at all speculative prior to the year 1717? Are we to assume that in that year Speculative Masonry sprang suddenly into being? Can we ignore the statement of Ashmole, that, in company with Colonel Mainwaring, he was made a Freemason in 1646, at Warrington, in Lancashire, and that in March 1682 he was present at a Lodge meeting in London, when Sir William Wilson Knt., Captain Richard Borthwick, and others "were admitted into the Fellowship of Freemasons." Again in 1626, that is only six years before Sir C. Wren was born—there died the great Francis Bacon, author of the New Atlantis, of which you gave an elaborate notice in one of your issues. In 1662 the Royal Society received its Charter from Charles II. Am I not justified in regarding the following concatenation of facts as suggestive of an era of speculative combined with operative Freemasonry anterior to 1717? Lord Bacon, the author of the New Atlantis, died 1626. Inigo Jones, whom we number among our Grand Masters, died, some say in 1646, while others set down his death in 1653. Wren was born in 1632, and had already achieved fame as a young philosopher in 1646, the year in which Ashmole, the antiquary, and a student of alchemy, was made a Freemason. In 1682 other non-operative Masons "were admitted into the Fellowship of the Craft," teste Ashmole. According to Aubrey, Wren was "to be adopted" into Masonry in 1691. The revival of Masonry occurred in 1717, from which year it ceased wholly to have anything operative in its character. Does not all this justify the views of those Masonic writers who look beyond 1717 for the origin of Speculative Masonry?

The question is one well worthy of consideration in your columns and I hope some brethren older and more competent than I feel myself to be, will take it up, and, to use an airy expression of the day, "ventilate" it thoroughly.

Yours fraternally, Q.

BROTHER YARKER ON "OUR FREEMASONRY."

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am pleased to find that my terming Brother Yarker an aged Freemason has created some amusement amongst the members of his family; but my information was derived from a remark of his a few years since. I am glad, however, to hear that our Brother is not an old man (which I did not say), though I am informed he is the senior of very many Craftsmen of the present day.

I wish in Ireland we had more Masonic investigators of the English and Scottish (not Scotch to please Bro. Buchan) stamp. Save the venerable Dr. Townshend (Judge), and a few honourable exceptions, like Bro. Neilson, of Dublin, Bro. Commander Scott, of Omagh, we have few in our "Emerald Isle" who "patronise our mysteries" beyond the threshold, so I mean to do a little myself in unravelling our history, if our British friends will hold out the right hand of fellowship.

I am much obliged to Bro. Yarker for his communication in answer to my first letter; and I feel sure that if other able brethren would follow his example, and reply to friendly criticisms or questions, much light would be elicited on obscure parts of our history. Bro. Yarker refers me to the Sloane MS., edited by Bro. Woodford, for evidence of the existence of the three degrees prior to the last century. I know the MS. well, and have again examined it. Of course, it is of doubtful antiquity; but assuming that the present MS., of date from 1710 to 1730, is a copy of a MS. (now missing) of 1640, as Bro. Woodford states, we do not thereby prove the antiquity of the three degrees. Bro. Yarker will be aware that not a Minute of any Lodge has been produced which mentions the separate meeting of Master Masons to raise Fellow Crafts to the third degree prior to 1720; that in fact not a MS. or printed work exists which alludes to the term degree until after the "Revival," and that the Master was placed in the Chair in the presence of all the Craftsmen. I quite think it likely that a word was whispered into the Master's ear on his election and assuming the Chair; but degrees are quite another and distinct matter, and certainly we cannot accept the evidence of the Sloane MS. as final. The next proof submitted is the "Aberdeen Ritual" of 1727. How does Bro. Yarker know it is 1727? I understood the date was uncertain. But suppose we accept the year in which it was printed to be 1727, what then? The work consists of "A Mason's Confession of the Oath, &c., at D——, about the year 1727;" but I have not heard of any date being on the title-page. Bro. Yarker says it mentions the three degrees by name. Suppose it does, is that evidence of the existence of the three degrees prior to the last century? No wonder if the three degrees were known in 1727 at Aberdeen (or Dundee) when the Rev. Dr. Desaguliers visited the Lodge of Edinburgh in 1721, and we know for a fact that whereas the three degrees are nowhere alluded to before then in the Minutes of the Lodge at Aberdeen, they are regularly noticed a few years afterwards.

With respect to the Mark question, I quite think, with Bro. Yarker, that the Mark degree has not had an existence much over a century, but the custom of choosing a Mark is an old one. Bro. Yarker says, "In no English MS. whatever is there any Mark Registration." As to that, there is scarcely any account of old English Lodges, but in one of the oldest preserved, viz., the Alnwick Lodge, from 1701, there are numerous Marks to be found attached to the names in the old records as with those of the Scottish Lodges. We are indebted to Bro. Hughan for a sketch of this ancient Lodge, which appeared in the Freemason some time since. In the fourth division of Bro. Yarker's interesting communication, he kindly informs us that the testimony of the two documents before mentioned is "confirmed by numerous other MSS." What MSS.? In such an important matter as our ancient history, surely Bro. Yarker ought not to make such a statement? According to our researches in Masonic works, there are no MSS. of any antiquity which allude to the three degrees, and so the confirmation spoken of by modern MSS. appears to us worthless, but I am open to correction, and can only say the production of MSS. prior to the last century, or anterior to 1720, which confirm the testimony of the two documents hereinbefore mentioned, will secure from me the amplest acknowledgment.

I have read Bro. Yarker's "Speculative Masonry," and at p. 116 have noted his remarks. He therein quotes from the "Grand Mystery Discovered," of 1725, in which allusion is made to a certain brother (evidently Dr. Rawlinson, F.R.S. and LL.D.) being of the "Fifth Order." The pamphlet is a whimsical production, and, so far as I can discover, contains nothing in reference to any degree beyond the third. Surely the allusion to the "Fifth Order" in such a connection is not a fair evidence of the existence of the Royal Arch in 1725? In fact, but little is said which would warrant us in believing there were as many degrees as three at that period, provided no other proof existed of their being then worked. I thank Bro. Yarker for his reference to Ramsay's "Travels of Cyrus," and will procure the work, so as see what that Brother says of the Hautes Grades, but I presume "High Grade Information" may mean something which existed prior to the Hautes Grades, which the latter adopted. I should like to get clear of an oath I once took, and as Bro. Yarker appears to have managed to purge himself of those he took under the "Ancient and Accepted Rite," I shall be glad to be informed how he has satisfied his conscience as to his obligations to that body. Cannot you, Brother Editor, induce that good Brother, Captain Irwin, to lend you his work of 1721, to be reprinted in your pages. I do wish he would consent, and thus circulate an ancient book of consequence to our researches. Facts we want badly, and not mere dogmatic assertions.

Fraternally yours,

COMMEMORATION JEWELS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am glad to learn, from the Report of the Board of General Purposes, that an order has been issued by the Grand Secretary, warning brethren against wearing any Commemoration Jewels except those sanctioned by the M.W.G.M. This edict will, at least, prevent the trafficing in tinsel to which so many of the Craft object, if not add to the value of the Installation Jewel proper.

I am, yours faithfully,

PURSER.

PRESENTATIONS TO RETIRING MASTERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—I have often thought over the question raised by your correspondent, who signs himself "Charity." It has more than once occurred to me that the love of what is certainly a very harmless, yet somewhat childish love of display, is a weak point in Masonry. We are a secret society—yet secret in no unworthy sense. We do our work very quietly, not because we are ashamed of what we do, but because we have some faith in the old adage "Virtue is it's own reward." Above all, we make no ostentatious display of our clothing in public places. Yet I confess the number of jewels which some of our brethren wear amazes me. I see no objection to members wearing sundry honorary distinctions bestowed on them for services rendered in different spheres of labour, but I quite agree with "Charity" that the multiplication of orders and decorations is unadvisable. I fully recognise that in a case of this kind no hard and fast line can be drawn, but I feel that excessive display of ornament should be discouraged as much as possible. However, I am only expressing my own opinion, and shall gladly withdraw or modify it on cause shown.

Yours respectfully,

M. P.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

Log-Book of a Fisherman and Zoologist. By Frank Buckland, M.A., late Student of Christ Church, Oxford, Inspector of Salmon Fisheries for England and Wales, &c., &c. Illustrated. London: Chapman and Hall, 193 Piccadilly, 1875.

THERE are few more genial, more deservedly popular writers than Mr. Frank Buckland, whose contributions to the natural history columns of Land and Water are so justly esteemed. Mr. Buckland, indeed, was one of the gentlemen to whom the establishment of that journal is due, and the bulk of the contents of the volume before us have appeared from time to time in its pages, so that we hail their re-appearance in a collected form with immense satisfaction. The bare mention of natural history is at once suggestive of a marvellous array of horrid technicalities, barbarous incomprehensible Latin names, and a number of other disagreeables which it is given to only a very select few to appreciate, while still fewer understand them thoroughly. But Mr. Buckland narrates his experiences in good plain English, just for all the world as if he were talking with his readers over a genial glass of wine and choice Havana cigar. Technical terms occur of course, and their appearance is very appropriate, but they never intervene between the reader and his comprehension of the subject. Mr. Buckland goes heartily to work, being scientific enough to satisfy even the most exigeant naturalist, and at the same time thoroughly intelligible by all classes of readers. The contents are various enough to suit every variety of taste, some of the entries in the log-book being highly amusing. Mr. Buckland's philosophy has a large admixture of fun in it, at the same time he exhibits in the proper place, and at the proper time, the deepest reverence for the wondrous power of the Great Architect of all things. We like the book all the more for the serious touches introduced here and there. We can hardly picture to ourselves, indeed, a naturalist who evinces not his respect for the Architect of Created Things. Such a person—if there be one—must be quite as singular a phenomenon as the octopus or any other of the strangers which Mr. Buckland has here delineated. To note, however, some of the more interesting of these delineations. The author presents himself, in the first instance, in the character of an art critic. He is "At the Royal Academy without a Catalogue," and he notes chiefly the animal pieces, and landscapes, smartly, too, as thus:—

"A fishing smack just come to an anchor. An old fisherman landing his fish—scenery like the coast at the north of Berwick-on-Tweed. The fisherman has got a very miscellaneous lot of deep-sea fish—skate, john-dory, ling, conger, plaice, garnard, &c. He must have been working both "long lines" and "trawl-net," as some of these fish are caught only by the trawl, others only by the long line. The painter is not a deep-sea fisherman. The basket of fish is put into scales. They don't sell sea fish like this by weight. Fish nicely done. I wish the painter would touch up some of the casts which I have painted.

An animal, I suppose meant for a red deer, wounded—a bullet-wound on the left side. A wound at this part would not bleed much, because the scapula would act as a valve to keep the blood inside the thorax; and yet there is no end of blood. A miserable production, and, as far as the animal goes, not fit for a public-house sign. The rest of the scenery good."

"King Charles the First's Parrot" is an amusing practical joke which some of the troopers of the 2nd Life Guards attempted to play Mr. Buckland when he was assistant surgeon of the regiment. The illustration gives a capital idea of the character of the joke, and speaks well, not only for the author's 'cuteness in detecting the trick at once, but for the inventive power of Life Guard troopers. "Exhibitions outside the Cattle Show," and "Netting the fish in the Serpentine" are most entertaining, and from the latter we quote the following extract, with all the greater pleasure that it introduces to us another popular naturalist, Mr. Henry Lee, whose name is so familiar in connection with the Brighton Aquarium:—

"Mr. Chamberlayne, one of the authorities, had ordered three water-carts to be brought close to the railing, and as the fish were taken out of the net they were transferred in buckets to the carts. Besides the big bream that we caught at the second haul were a great number of little roach and one or two big ones. Finding that our net was not long enough, and that the old man had several others in his boat, we made him join them all together, so as to have a good sweep of the whole water. While this was being done, Lee and myself got on the watering-cart and rode up with the old man to the Round Pond in Kensington Gardens, where the fish were to be deposited. I never rode on a water-cart before and particularly one like the present, that had no springs. The jolting was something tremendous, but we managed to hold on, and after all it was not bad fun to ride down the drive, among the smart carriages, on a water-cart. When we arrived at the Round Pond we tilted the cart up, let as much water run out of it as possible, and then turned the fish out with our hands, as the aperture at the top of the cart was not large enough to admit a net. This first cart-load of fish, which was by no means a heavy one, contained about 500 fish, little and big. We came back to the Serpentine on the water-cart at a trot,—about the roughest riding I ever experienced—and found that the men had joined all the nets together, and were preparing for a grand haul; the net was exceedingly heavy as we dragged it towards the shore, and our expectations were not disappointed. The old fisherman was delighted. 'Lor', sir,' said he, 'there's all twenty pounds' worth of fish in the net, and if it had been the Jews' holidays there might be thirty pounds' worth.' At all events there was a tremendous lot in the net. We filled three water-carts as full as we dared with these fish, and away we went again to the Round Pond, Lee sitting on the advance cart, and myself on the rear cart.

This time we had a strong escort of hundreds of dirty little vagabonds, shouting, laughing, and wild with excitement. Looking into the water-cart, I found a few dead fish on the top, and when we got into Kensington Gardens among the trees, in answer to a cry, 'Give us a fish, master,' I threw them out for a scramble. The little urchins raced after them like greyhounds, and fought for them on the ground, a dozen at a time, like hounds breaking up a fox. It was quite a treat to see how these boys enjoyed themselves; being English boys I suppose they have a natural love of sport in them. I don't believe they wanted the fish a bit; but it was the fun of seeing us draw the net, hunting the water-cart, and scrambling for the dead fish that seemed to amuse them so much. We had so many fish in these three carts that I found it perfectly impossible to count them; so I got the men to run the cart as near to the edge of the water as they could, and then we tilted it up as far as we dared. Having done this I opened the door of the cart, and there poured out a regular cataract of struggling fish. About twenty or thirty of them were sickly, but altogether we lost really very few indeed. The water-cart which carried the third load of fish was of a different construction from the others, and Lee and myself found it very difficult to get the fish out of it. We, therefore, backed it a little way into the water on the sloping bank, while the men on shore tilted up the shaft, and it was here an accident occurred. Lee was standing in the water, taking the fish out of the hole in the cart, and I had that instant moved on one side, when I saw the cart moving deeper down into the water. 'Look out, Lee,' I cried, 'she's got way on her,' but in a moment, before there was time for thought or action, this infernal water-cart, fish, water, and all, 'turned turtle,' and made a summersault clean over, 'end for end.' The great shafts came rushing down from above like two scaffold poles, and the body of the cart fell right over into the water, wheels uppermost, making a tremendous splash and sending the water flying high into the air. My first thought was for my friend Lee; he had luckily run backwards when he heard my shout, but could not get far enough to escape the shafts; something came down upon him with a tremendous crash, and he disappeared clean under the water. I rushed immediately into the water, nearly to a swimming point, and got hold of his collar: he came up in a second, blowing like a grampus, and I was glad to see he did not appear hurt. I think, however, that he was a little stunned, although he said he was not."

Of course a volume of this kind would be incomplete without a notice of the Brighton Aquarium, and no such notice would be entertained with any degree of favour which omitted to mention the Octopus. For a description of this animal we must refer our readers to the book itself, but of the enormous size of these monsters the following, from Mr. Harvey's account of a perfect specimen of the large cuttle, will give an excellent idea:—

"Since the appearance of the large cuttle in Conception Bay, I have been fortunate to obtain possession of a perfect specimen, though far inferior in size to the monster whose arms were amputated. It was taken in a net near Logy Bay. The body is upwards of seven feet in length, and about five feet in circumference. From the head ten arms radiate, two of them each being twenty-four feet in length, and armed at the extremities with a cluster of sucking discs, some of them an inch and a quarter in diameter, and furnished with small sharp teeth round their edges. Eight of the arms are each six feet in length, and nine in circumference at the junction with the head. They are completely covered on the inner surface with rows of large denticulated suckers. The beak is in the middle of the centre nucleus, from which the arms radiate, and the large eyes, which, unfortunately, have been destroyed, were on each side of this centre mass. The remains of one of the eyelids show that the eyes were four inches in diameter. They are dark and beautiful, but, when the creature is enraged, assume an expression of intense ferocity. The beak is sharp and powerful. The fishermen were compelled to kill it by cutting off its head before it could be landed, and it was with great difficulty that three men despatched it."

Other chapters may be mentioned, such as "My Monkeys," which originally appeared in Temple Bar, "The Bore on the Severn," "How I spent Whit Monday at Harting," which are capital examples of the points we have noted in Mr. Buckland's mode of writing; but space forbids us dwelling at greater length on its merits. We have said enough, we think, to convince our readers that the Log-book of a Fisherman and Zoologist is really a most entertaining and instructive book. It was a source of regret to us when, after several hours of most enjoyable reading, we found we had reached the end of the volume. We hope Mr. Buckland has such another work in store for us, and that no long time will elapse ere we have an opportunity of again tendering him our very cordial thanks for a "Log-book" No. 2.

We may add that the volume is well got up, being well printed, well illustrated, and furnished with a good index.

DEATH.

At Peterborough, on 20th instant, Brother W. Strickland, P.M., P.P.G.S. Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire. Aged 60.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—The close, sultry weather which prevails during the late summer months, is very liable to give rise to various forms of febrile and abdominal complaints, the action of heat on the vegetation causes generations of a most deleterious character to be given off, and these permeate the air and so are taken into the system by breathing; the products of vegetable decomposition also find their way into our water supply, and hence another source of danger arises. Whenever any symptoms arise, indicating that diarrœa, fever, or dysentery, is developing itself, immediate measures should be had to these remedies. The Ointment must be well rubbed to the abdominal surface, and the Pills taken inwardly in aperient doses.

NEW ZEALAND.—ST JOHN'S DAY.

A Masonic Banquet, in honour of St. John's Day, was held on 24th June, in the Thames Hotel, Thames Gold Fields, New Zealand. A very large number of Masons were present, including brethren from Australian Colonies and America, there being present Brother Turner, son of our well known citizen, Bro. Ben Turner, a member of one of the Lodges in San Francisco, and formerly captain of one of our Colonial men-of-war in the Waikato. The chair was taken by Brother M. Nicol R.W.M. of the Scotch Lodge; the vice-chairs were occupied by Brother W. R. Robinson W.M. Lodge Ara and Brother J. Herbert Burns W.M. of Lodge United Service. The following toasts were given and responded to in purely Masonic style: "The Queen and Craft, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, and the rest of the Royal Family." "His Excellency the Governor," proposed by Brother Captain J. Herbert Burns W.M. of Lodge United Service. "His Honor the Superintendent, the Army and Navy, and Colonial forces, coupled with the name of Brother Captain Burns." "Brother Hayward P.M. of the U.M.M.L.," proposed by Brother P.M. Wade, who presented Brother Hayward with a valuable Masonic ring and a chaste tea and coffee set. Accompanying this presentation was an illuminated address, bearing testimony to the appreciation by the Masonic brethren of the able manner in which the recipient had discharged the duties of his order. The "Memory of 'St. John'" was proposed by Brother Sloane, and properly responded to. The other toasts included "The Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland," "The Sister Lodges at the Thames," "The Ladies," "Poor and Distressed Brethren," "The Host and Hostess," and "The Chairman." After the list of toasts had been completed, the brethren indulged in a series of well selected songs, and brought to a close a most enjoyable evening's entertainment. The dinner did credit to the establishment in which it was provided.—N. Z. Herald.

MONEY MARKET AND CITY NEWS.

Friday.

The weekly return of the Bank authorities shows that the proportion of Reserve to Liabilities is now 55¼ per cent. The rate of discount remains at 2 per cent.

At the meetings, on Saturday last, of the London and North-Western and Great Northern Railway Companies, attention was drawn to the increase in the working expenses, from the addition to wages and the operation of the block system, but it was also explained that the strict working of the block system will, doubtless, greatly tend to diminish the number of accidents in future. When the extent of the sums paid by some of the railway companies on account of late accidents, notably by the London and North-Western and Great Eastern, is borne in mind, the importance of this prospective comparative immunity from serious disasters cannot be overrated. The price of coal and iron is also likely to be low during the present half-year, though it is probable that these considerations have been fully taken into account by recent "cliques," who have forced some stocks to extreme quotations. But it is asked: what are the public to do with their money? The recent great fall in Turkish, Peruvian, and other bonds, has increased the feeling of distrust attaching to most Foreign Securities, while Consols, Indian Government Bonds, Colonial Debentures, &c., have recently advanced to a very important extent. It is possible, therefore, that further investments may be made in English lines, though speculative purchases will be checked by the firmer tendency of the Money Market, and the consequent disposition of bankers to refuse fresh advances on stocks.

The amount of cheques and bills cleared in the Bankers' Clearing-house during the past week amounted to £80,602,000 against £97,215,000 in the corresponding week last year.

The Great Western Railway dividend was officially announced on Monday, at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum for the half-year, against 4 at the corresponding period of last year. The sum brought into the present accounts was £9,051, and it is proposed to carry forward about £9,500.

At the half-yearly general meeting, on Tuesday, of the Furness Railway Company, the report showed an available balance of £101,544, from which a dividend was declared at the rate of 6½ per cent. per annum, leaving £2,065 to be carried forward.

At the half-yearly meeting, on Thursday, of the Weymouth and Portland Railway Company, the directors' report, which was adopted, showed an available total of £1,903, out of which a dividend was declared at the rate of £1 7s 6d per annum, leaving a balance of £363 to be carried forward.

At the meeting, on Thursday, of the Isle of Wight (Newport Junction) Railway Company, the report of the directors, which was agreed to, mentioned that the traffic receipts since the opening of the line (five months) amounted to £2,339, and the expenditure to £1,381.

At an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders of the Bradford District Bank Limited, held on Friday last, resolutions were passed and confirmed, authorising an increase in the capital from £650,000 to £1,000,000.

At the half-yearly general meeting, on Monday, of the Bank of Australasia, the directors' report, which was adopted, stated that the amount of undivided profits exhibited in the last accounts admits of a second dividend at the rate of 6½ per cent. for the half-year, or £2 10s per share.

At the ordinary meeting of the Mediterranean Extension Telegraph Company Limited, on Tuesday, the directors' report was adopted, and a dividend declared on the ordinary shares at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, free of income tax. The sum of £500 was added to the reserve, increasing that fund to £7,848.

The annual general meeting of the Albion Life Assurance Society was held on Wednesday, when the report presented by the directors was unanimously adopted. During the year the Society has issued 489 new policies, assuring £119,850, while 74 proposals for £19,000 were declined. The death claims have been very moderate.

CRYSTAL PALACE SWIMMING FETE.

On Tuesday, the second annual swimming fete came off on the Lower Lake of the Crystal Palace, and attracted a large number of spectators. There were several boats gaily decorated with flags, and a band of music added to the interest of the proceedings. The races consisted of one of one mile for the amateur championship of England; the Crystal Palace Challenge Cup (one mile); a 200 yards race, open to all England; a hurdle race (150 yards), a race in dress weighing not less than 7 lbs. (100 yards), Victoria Park Swimming Club Handicap (100 yards), ornamental swimming-race in tubs, duck hunt, &c. Bro. Hudley Pressage acted as starter, and Mr. R. Watson as judge. The several races excited the greatest interest amongst the spectators, and the winners in the different races were loudly cheered as they came to the landing stage. The prizes, which were numerous, varied in value from a cup of 30 guineas to £1, and were on view on a table near the swimming-post. The competition commenced at half-past two, and continued till half-past 6. At half-past seven there was a meeting in the Concert Hall, at which Sir A. Brady was to have presided, and distributed the prizes to the successful competitors, but in his absence the chair was taken by Sir J. Bennett, who has taken an active interest in promoting the art of swimming in London. In opening the proceedings he expressed his satisfaction at what he had seen that day. Only a few years ago it would have been impossible to have had such a fête as they had seen, although is would not be denied by any one that the art of swimming was most beneficial to health, and a means of saving life. He hoped that the prejudices against it would gradually disappear, and that not only men but women and children would be instructed in it. He knew of no better purpose to which the water of the Crystal Palace could be applied. The prizes were then distributed. Mr. Horace Davenport taking the first prize. Mr. D. Ainsworth the second, and Mr. H. Cottam the third, in the Amateur Championship race. There were several prizes of £10 and £5, and Excelsior and Leander medals distributed. The several prizeholders were much cheered.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE lamentable accident to the Mistletoe, which we recorded last week, is still attracting public attention. An inquest, of course, followed, when the owner and crew of the unfortunate yatch, as well as Captain Prince Leiningen, Captain Welch, Commander Fullarton and other officers and men of the Alberta, and Victoria and Albert, appeared and gave evidence. At the request of the former, Captain Harris, one of the Board of Trade Assessors, appeared in Court, to give any assistance in his power. The result, after a long and searching investigation will, in all probability, be known to our readers before this reaches them. The sympathy of all classes with the relations of the deceased lady, the Captain, and the mate, has been loudly expressed. The body of Miss Annie Peel was recovered the day following the accident, but that of the mate has been carried away. The Mistletoe herself has been raised, but is reported to be utterly beyond repair, and the only purpose she can answer now is that of firewood.

But to pass from a dismal subject to something lively. The event of the week has been the accomplishment by Captain Webb of his self-imposed task of swimming the Channel—truly a Herculean task, and one that almost makes us believe that fabled hero, or demigod, to have been, after all, something more than a myth. Captain Webb, it will be remembered, like Bro. Captain Boyton in his life-saving dress, failed at the first attempt, but the Englishman, like the American, meant doing what he had undertaken, if possible. Of course, a comparison between the two feats is out of the question. Captain Boyton is known to be a practised and powerful swimmer, and he has more than once distinguished himself by his achievement in long-distance swimming, but the object at which he aimed was to exhibit the value of the invention in which he so ably performs. On the other hand, Captain Webb, who has received the gold medal of the Royal Humane Society for the gallant attempt to save the life of a man overboard in mid-Atlantic, somehow worked himself into the belief that a swim across the Channel was possible, and he determined to make the effort. Accordingly, by way of testing his powers, he first of all swam from Blackwall to Gravesend, accomplishing the distance in about 5½ hours. He next swam from Dover to Ramsgate, a distance of 18 miles, in 9 hours. After practice he set out to cross to the French coast, about a fortnight since, but the weather was too unfavourable; the sea was too rough, and after doing more than half the distance, in nine hours, Webb felt obliged to give it up. On Tuesday, he set out a second time, a few minutes before one p.m., and in 21 hours 45 minutes from the moment of starting he stood on the French coast, exhausted by his long and arduous efforts, but apparently none the worse. It were needless to recount the progress he made, or how roundly and heartily he was cheered on his return to Dover on Thursday. Nor need we enter into long historical sketches of former feats—by Leander, by Byron, by Brock of Great Yarmouth—the last named swam for seven hours, and so saved himself, all his companions in the lifeboat being drowned. All this has been done to death by the specials. Suffice it that the only long distance swimmer who has outdone all persons, and is not in turn outdone, is Captain Webb. The gallant sailor has surpassed his former feats as much as those had previously surpassed all the greatest known swimming feats ever achieved since Anno Mundi 1. It is no slight satisfaction to feel that an Englishman has done what no man of any other nation has been known to do. If any of our readers are desirous of joining in the testimonial, now being raised, to reward so grand a feat of skill, strength, and endurance, we shall have great pleasure in being the medium of forwarding their contributions to the Editor of Land and Water, who has charge of the fund. Strangely enough, Webb's achievement was hardly known throughout the country, where the value of the art of swimming was most painfully illustrated. The pupils of a school at Rhyl were bathing in the sea, when a number of them got out of their depth, and five, unfortunately, were drowned, while the lives of several others were forcibly endangered. We hope these two facts, and the continued experience of well nigh every year, will bring home to us more closely how imperative it is that all should learn swimming. Talk of compulsory rating, and voting and contracting and so on, compulsory swimming should become the order of the day!

We referred last week to the death of Bro. Andrew Johnson, ex-President of the United States. We learn from the Keystone that the Masonic services at the funeral were conducted by Bro. Deputy Grand Master Monro, Tennessee. The Knights Templar, of which body our deceased Brother was a member, furnished a guard of honour, and the Templar service was also recited, E. Sir Nat. Woodruff of Knoxville, officiating. The Craft had the post of honour, both in the procession and at the grave; the following tribute from Parson Brownlow to the memory of the deceased is worthy quoting, bearing directly, as it does, on one of those traits in human nature which ought to be, but is not, unfortunately, regarded at its full worth, and especially among public men, too many of whom act up to the adage, "The end justifies the means." "In one respect, at least," says Parson Brownlow, "ex-President Johnson was a model statesman. He was honest. Whatever men have said of him politically, no responsible man ever called his unflinching integrity in question. He was in public life almost half a century, yet no man can say that he ever betrayed the confidence of his friends by taking that which did not belong to him. His character in this respect was so well understood that he was scarcely ever approached by a dishonest lobbyist with a corrupt proposition. He was very scrupulous in refusing to give any sort of aid to enterprise which he could not conscientiously approve. Just after his election to the United States Senate, in January, he gave an illustration of this. A prominent politician from Pennsylvania, representing a company interested in the Alta Vela Isles, wanted him to send a war vessel to the above mentioned islands just before his great impeachment trial commenced. He attempted to make use of what he considered Mr. Johnson's embarrassment at the time in accomplishing his object. But the President spurned him, and gave him to understand that his official sanction to measures in which private parties are interested was not to be procured in that way. This trait in his character is worthy of emulation by all public men."

The fifty-fifth annual meeting of the British Association opened on Wednesday at Bristol. The General Committee met at one o'clock on that day, Dr. Carpenter, in the momentary absence of Professor Tyndall, occupying the chair. The Report of the Council was submitted and unanimously adopted. Two ladies, Mrs. W. Grey and Miss Carpenter, were added to Sectional Committee F, Economic Science and Statistics, on the resolution of Mr. J. Heywood, President of the section, seconded by Mr. Fellowes. The following are the sections into which the Society is divided for the purpose of better fulfilling the objects for which it was established, together with the names of their respective presidents:—A — Mathematical and Physical Science, President—Professor Balfour Stewart. B — Chemical Science, President—A. G. Vernon Harcourt M.A.; C—Geology, President—Dr. T. Wright F.G.S.; D—Biology, President—P. L. Sclater M.A.; Department of Zoology and Botany, P. L. Sclater will preside; Department of Anatomy and Physiology, Professor Cleland will preside; Department of Anthropology, Professor Rolleston will preside; E—Geography, President, Major-General Strachey R.E.; F—Economic Science and Statistics, President James Heywood F.R.S.; G—Mechanical Sciences, President—William Froude C.E. There will also be discourses by Dr. Spottiswoode on the "Colours of Polarised Light," and by Mr. Bramwell on "Railway Safety Appliances," a lecture by Dr. Carpenter to the working classes on "A Piece of Limestone," as well as a soirée and a concert by the Orpheus Glee Club. The Treasurer having read the accounts, which showed a surplus of £624 1s 2d, and were accepted, a vote of thanks brought the Committee to a close. In the evening, at the Colston Hall, the inaugural address was delivered by Sir John Hawkshaw, the new President. The outgoing President, Professor Tyndall, took the chair at the opening of the meeting, and having offered a few appropriate remarks respecting his successor, resigned his seat to Sir John Hawkshaw, who at once proceeded with his address, which was confined entirely to the subject of that profession in which he had attained such eminence. It is needless to add the theme was handled with a skill and perspicuity which were quite worthy of the speaker. On Friday, the several sections were opened, the President of each delivering the address, while sundry of the members read papers, all highly interesting and valuable contributions to science.

The annual Braemer gathering was held with more than the usual success on Thursday, in the presence of the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Leopold, Princess Beatrice, and a large number of the nobility and gentry. The Highlanders, who were mostly retainers of the Earl of Fife, Colonel Farquharson of Invercauld, and the Marquis of Huntly, arrived at the rendezvous, clad in Highland costume, and armed with the weapons of olden days. The races, especially the two mile race for the Queen's Prize, were keenly contested, the chief honours falling to M'Combie Smith, Fleming, and Peter Cameron. Her Majesty took a great interest in the sports, remaining on the ground for more than an hour.

London, at this season of the year, without some sort of amusement for those who are obliged to remain, would be dull indeed, and accordingly we look to the Promenade Concerts to help us to some relaxation from the severer toils of business. Signor Arditi wields the bâton, with what effect our readers will understand well. The "classical" evenings are among the most popular, and on Wednesday a very numerous audience assembled to hear a Beethoven selection, which included the Pianoforte Concert in E Flat (No. 5), and the Pastoral Symphony (No. 5), both of which were well received. Last night was to be devoted to Ballads, while a "Gounod Night" is announced for next Tuesday. May the series of Concerts prove a great success this year and always!

By the death of Commodore Goodenough, the Royal Navy loses a most valued officer. Captain Goodenough entered the service in 1844, and had seen a considerable amount of active service on various stations. In 1870 he was appointed to the Pearl 17, as commodore of the second class and senior officer on the Australian station, and had received the thanks of the Colonial Office for his services prior to the cession of the Fiji Islands. Not many days since, the Pearl anchored off Santa Cruz Island. On the 12th instant Captain Goodenough and party landed at Carlisle Bay, for the purpose of opening a friendly intercourse with the natives. They had been just an hour on shore, and the Captain was well satisfied with the progress made, when, just as they were preparing to return, a native, only about four yards off, fired a poisoned arrow at the Commodore, and this struck him in the left side. The boats were shoved off, receiving, at the same time, several flights of arrows; seven in all, including the Commodore and Sub-Lieutenant Hawker, being wounded. Captain Goodenough and two of the crew have since died, and the rest, though doing well, have not yet been pronounced out of danger. Carlisle Bay Village was burned by the Pearl's boats, but this is a poor satisfaction to the Service for the loss of so valuable an officer.

This being the season for regattas, especially on the South Coast, the dailies have been filled with accounts of the proceedings at the several meetings, held at Shanklin, Weymouth, Deal, Worthing and St. Leonards—both these last falling, unfortunately, on the same day—and elsewhere. We need not give details, but it is satisfactory to know the disappointments this year, in consequence of the weather, have been few and far between. Everywhere we read of success, and rejoice accordingly, for these regattas are a great attraction to the shoals of visitors now scattered along our coasts. Cricket, too, is still in vigorous activity, though, as we recently remarked, the legitimate season will soon be at end. We note a somewhat rare event, namely, that Kent has scored a rather tall victory over Hampshire, whom she beat in a single innings, by 217 runs. Hants were all down in their first attempt for 34, Holmes 11 being the only double figure. In their second innings they reached 82, Galpin making 13, Rev. J. G. Crowdy 18, and Mr. R. Henley 14. For Kent, the one innings realised 333, to which Mr. Shaw contributed 54, Mr. W. Fenn 16, Mr. F. A. Mackinnon 66, Lord Harris 75, Mr. F. Penn 47, Remnant 25, and Mr. Foord-Kelcey 18. In the North v. South Match played at Tunbridge Wells, there being a large attendance of spectators, the latter were beaten in a single innings; score, North 176, South 56 and 62, Mr. W. G. Grace making only 0 and 19, while his brother, Mr. G. F. Grace, (0 and 6) hardly gave any sign. Surrey beat Middlesex in the return match, by ten wickets, Middlesex 118 and 202, Surrey 293 (including W. W. Read 98) and 28, of which the same gentlemen made 22—without the loss of a wicket. In the return between Gloucestershire and Surrey the former were victorious by 40, Dr. E. M. Grace, with 65 and 71, being the most successful for Gloucestershire. Other matches are in course of progress, of which next week, but we may add that perhaps the longest score ever made, has been recently amassed by the Royal Engineers, at Chatham, in their match with I Zingari. The former remained at the wickets during the whole of last Friday and Saturday, and made 724 for eight wickets, the Hon. M. G. Talbot, Mr. F. K. Scott, and Mr. P. G. Von Donop contributing 172, 164, and 101 respectively, while three others were responsible for scores of over 50 a piece. We feel glad we were not of I Zingari team. Leather-hunting is not the liveliest occupation to follow in hot weather for two whole consecutive days. Sport on the moors is in many places satisfactory, and some very respectable bags have been made. Next week sportsmen will have their opportunities increased in number, and not a few partridges and hares will find their way into the market. There only remain the long tails, and then the tale of birds for the Winkles and the Tupmans of London Society to blaze at is, we suppose, complete.

As a squadron of three United States War Steamers, under the command of Rear Admiral Warden, has been lying for some time in the Southampton Waters, the opportunity has been taken of extending to them that hospitality which is readily accorded to our vessels in American waters. Two banquets have accordingly been given, the second by the Mayor and Corporation of Southampton. The Mayor presided, and was supported on his right by Admiral Warden, and on his left by Captain Franklin, of the "Franklin," there being present also Commander Green, of the "Alaska," most of the Officers of the squadron, together with Mr. W. F. Cowper Temple, M.P., and the Mayors of Portsmouth, Winchester, Romsey, Andover, and Lymington, Commodore Commercll, and several naval and military Officers. Everything passed off most agreeably, the toast of "Rear Admiral Warden and our other American guests" being received with great enthusiasm, and acknowledged by the gallant Officer in the warmest terms. Such banquets as these are of the greatest use in promoting good feeling between ourselves and other countries.

The news from abroad is not of the most satisfactory character, very far from being so, indeed. As regards Spain, the Alphonsist forces seem to be making considerable progress against the Carlists. The siege of Seo de Urgel, or rather of its citadel, is rapidly drawing to an end, the Carlist, Lizarraga, only holding out, it is reported, because he is bound in honour to fight to the last. Unless, then, the Carlists can make any impression on the besieging army, the capture of the place must be imminent. Elsewhere, too, we hear of Dorregaray being in a very deplorable condition, and doing his utmost to avoid pursuit by the numerous columns of Alphonsists which are hunting him up. So far the foreign news is decidedly satisfactory, for if Alphonso's armies can make a serious impression on Carlism it will be a great boon to Spain, which has been in a wretched state for the last few years. But will the defeat of Carlism in the field effectually put down Carlism, especially in the Basque provinces, which are, heart and soul, devoted to the cause? Time will show. From the Herzegovina the news is decidedly bad. Turkey, if left alone, would probably make short work of the insurgents. True, the difficulty of getting at them seems very great, but a disciplined force of a few thousands would soon disperse the various bands of marauders, whose object seems to be pillage and incendiarism rather than fair fighting. Unfortunately, however, there is very considerable excitement in Servia, and there are disturbances in Bosnia as well. The Montenegrins, too, are having a finger in the quarrel, so far, at least, as that numbers of volunteers are constantly arriving from Montenegro, and these swell the bands, the latest news of which is that they are committing all sorts of atrocities. Worse still—or better, some may think—the three great Eastern powers appear to think it necessary to intervene, and the irrepressible Eastern question is again cropping up, to the great risk of disturbing the peace of Europe. We do hope that the great powers will unite for the purpose of repressing these constant outbreaks against Turkish rule. Turkey invariably behaves well, and suffers not a little for her good behaviour. There is little from Paris to record, save that Mr. Gladstone's pamphlet about the Vatican Decrees is the cause of no little excitement throughout the country. From Germany we hear that the Emperor William was present, on Wednesday, at the festival of the delegates of the Gustavus Adolphus Association, and the speech he made was received with loud cheers. The Imperial Prince was present at the grand dinner given at Cologne, in connection with the opening of the Horticultural Exhibition. The Chief Burgomaster proposed His Imperial Highness's health, which was graciously acknowledged. Two other items of news and we have done. The severity of the training in the German army has resulted at the recent Autumn Manœuvres in a serious breakdown, it being reported that a great number of men have given way to the strain imposed upon them by the hard service exacted. In some regiments the number of disabled is said to equal that in many a well-contested field of battle. It is, as the Standard very properly urges, unwise to keep men at the highest possible training point. The German military authorities should bear in mind a rule observed among English athletes, not to overtrain. From China it is reported that our ambassador has been assaulted by the authorities. If so, we are in for a scrimmage.

On Monday evening, the 23rd instant, the fifteen sections were worked by several visiting brethren and the Members of the Lodge Friendship, No. 100, at the Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, Bro. T. J. Barnes P.M. 554 and 933 in the chair. Bro. T. Austin P.M. 933 and 1445 Senior Warden. Bro. W. Yetton P.M. 933 Junior Warden.

Those of our brethren who wish to possess a memento of American Masonry would do well to procure a copy of "the Dedication Memorial of the New Masonic Temple, Philadelphia," to which we referred in our issue of the 27th March last. Bro. Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, has a few of the copies left, which he received to introduce into England and will send them carriage paid for 23s each to any part of the Kingdom.

Obituary.

The Craft in general will learn with much regret of the death of Bro. W. Strickland, P.M. St. Peter's, No. 442, P.P.G.S. Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire. The melancholy event took place on Tuesday, the 10th inst. Bro. Strickland was well known as a worthy member of the Order, having the welfare of his brethren always at heart. His kind and generous disposition will long be remembered, and his loss is deeply felt in his mother Lodge, and throughout the Province. The funeral took place in the Cemetery at Peterborough, on Saturday, the 14th instant. A number of the brethren of the province followed (as personal friends) the remains of their lamented brother to their last resting place.

FREEMASONRY IN RUSSIA.

ACCORDING to Findel, Freemasonry found its way into Russia as early as 1731. Captain John Phillips is mentioned, in 1738, as Provincial Grand Master, under the Grand Lodge of England, and General Bro. J. Keith succeeded him, in 1741, though it is said that as early as 1732-4 the latter presided over a Lodge in St. Petersburgh. At first the meetings were, in all probability, held very secretly, for the earliest existing Lodge is fixed in 1750, when the Lodge of Silence was worked in St. Petersburgh, and that of the North Star was erected. During the reign of the Empress Elizabeth the Craft became more in vogue, though the greatest secrecy was still observed. The Emperor Peter III. is said to have presented a house to the Lodge of Constancy, and even to have conducted the Masonic work at Oranienbaum. In 1765, the Melesino Rite, consisting of seven degrees, and so named after Melesino, a Greek by birth, and Lieutenant-General in the Imperial army, flourished. The degrees were, besides the three of the English system, (4) the Dark Vault; (5) the Scotch Master and Knight's Degree; (6) the Philosopher's Degree; and (7) the Grand Priest or the Spiritual Knighthood. But according to the Freemason's Calendar for 1777 and 1778, the first regular Lodge was that of Perfect Unity, constituted in St. Petersburg in 1771, most of the members being English merchants residing there. In the following year a warrant was issued by the Grand Lodge of England, appointing His Excellency John Yelaguin (Senator) to be the Provincial Grand Master for the Russian Empire, the result being eminently satisfactory to the Craft. In 1783, twelve working Lodges formed themselves into a Grand National Lodge, Bro. Yelaguin being the Grand Master. Under Bro. Von Reichel's guidance the Lodges adopted the Swedish system. In 1790, matters changed for the worse. Divisions arose in the Lodges, things outside assumed a very threatening aspect, the Empress Catharine giving it to be understood by those around her that she did not approve of Masonic meetings. The majority of the Lodges were accordingly closed, though the Apollo, in St. Petersburgh, worked on silently till 1797, and afterwards assembled its members twice a year, on the feast of St. John and on the anniversary of its erection. The Lodge afterwards known as the "Crowned Pelican" also held meetings of its members, but without working regularly. Paul I., before he ascended the throne, had shown a favourable inclination towards Masonry, but the Lodges remained closed notwithstanding, until more favourable circumstances seemed to justify their being opened; but, contrary to expectation, a prohibition was, some time after, issued against the Craft. This prohibition, as against all secret societies, was renewed when Alexander I. became Emperor, in 1801. In 1807, application having been first made in the proper quarter, the Lodge of the Pelican was opened, and so rapidly did the members increase in numbers that they separated into three Lodges, namely, "The Crowned Pelican," the "Elizabeth, the Patroness of Virtue," and the "Peter, the Patron of Truth," the operations being carried on in Russian, French, and German.

In the Autumn of 1808, the Directory Lodge "Wladimir, the Maintainer of Order," in St. Petersburg (Swedish Rite) began to work, and, soon after, two new Lodges working under French warrants were ordered at the instigation of the Government to join this Directory Lodge, Bro. Böber, a Privy Councillor, being the Grand Master from 1811 to 1814, and after him, Prince Muskin Puschkin. In consequence of dissensions arising, owing, it is believed, to the dissimilarity of the two Rites, two Grand Lodges, with the approval of the Government, were constituted, namely, the Astrăa in St. Petersburg, and a Provincial Lodge, which remained faithful to the Swedish Rite. According to Polick, there were 23 Lodges under the Grand Lodge of Astrăa, while only eleven worked under the Provincial Lodge. In spite of further troubles, Freemasonry continued to advance rapidly in prosperity, when, in the month of August 1822, a decree was issued that all Freemason Lodges should be closed, and no others be constituted. Great as was the grief at the issue of this mandate, it was faithfully observed by our Russian brethren.

Bro. Gen Garibaldi, writing, on the eve of his departure for Caprera, to Signor Lucchesi, whose villa he had been inhabiting at Civita Vecchia, the General says, "I thanks to the miraculous thermal waters, and the kind attention received from you in your comfortable and pretty villa, I have substituted your stick for my crutches, which I leave you as a souvenir."

On the 1st of October an exhibition of metropolitan cabs and cab-horses will be held at the Alexandra Palace, under the patronage of the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Lord Mayor, Cardinal Manning, the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, &c.

The Earl of Aylesford will, says the Birmingham Post, accompany the Prince of Wales to India as Equerry to his Royal Highness.

Sir Moses Montefiore has started on his return from Jerusalem. According to the Jewish World, Sir Moses left Jerusalem on the 17th inst., and embarked at Jaffa on the 20th, en route to Naples and Marseilles, but he will not arrive in England for nearly another month.

The great half holiday fête of the year at the Alexandra Palace, will be held to-day, Lecocq's opera, "La Fille de Madame Angot," with the Opera Comique Company, in the theatre at 2.45, and a special evening promenade concert in the central hall at 6.45, after which the largest firework display of the season will take place.

The British Museum will be closed on Wednesday, the 1st of September, and re-opened on the following Wednesday.

BURMAH AND CHINA.

The King of Burmah, in whose presence the British Ambassador had to take off his boots, has addressed a letter to the Emperor of China, the text of which is given in a late number of the Peking Gazette. His Majesty calls himself "The Great, Glorious, and most Excellent Majesty who reigns over the Kingdoms of Thunaparanta and Tampadipa, and all the Umbrella-bearing Chiefs of the Eastern country, the King of the Rising Sun, Lord of the Celestial Elephants, Master of many White Elephants, the Great Chief of Righteousness, the King of Burmah," but acknowledges himself to be a vassal of China. He sends tribute and presents, including five tame elephants, some ivory and jewellery, piece goods, gold and silver leaf, and fifteen peacocks' tails. "Your vassal," he writes to the Emperor, "would with all humility set forth that under the universal sway of his Holiness the streams and hills are all objects of his fostering care, the kingdoms of the distant ocean become converted to his civilising rule, and as the sunflower bows before the sun, so does all mankind turn with adoration towards the Imperial person. Succeeding to your barren and far off dependency of Burmah, your vassal is impressed with the deep favours conferred by your Heavenly Dynasty when permitting his country to be enrolled amongst the territory of Ya; and in offering up, according to rule, the tribute prescribed the land of Burman is thus included in the heaven of Yan. The letter concludes with the hope that the Emperor will "deign to receive and graciously lend ear to the feelings of obedience, respect, and submission entertained by his vassal." It is rather singular that while we are treating with Burmah as an independent kingdom, the monarch of it should be acknowledging himself a vassal of China. The Lord of the White Elephants possibly expects that the Celestial Emperor will assist him in case of hostilities with England. It is only upon such an assumption that he would pay tribute.—Globe.

THOMAS CARLYLE.—Whatever else may be true of Thomas Carlyle—whatever may be taught of his especial system of philosophy or of his policy for the world's good governance—it must be allowed that he, more than any other Englishman of his century, has coloured and modelled English thought. If Dr. Samuel Johnson be excepted, it is probable that no man has ever more distinctively stamped the image of his own genius upon the literary feeling of his time. He has bequeathed to us no new faith, he has evolved no new system. The influence exerted by him has been, and is, almost purely idiosyncratic. It would be possible to express in a dozen or so of the wise saws of antiquity the whole of the Carlylean philosophy. Yet he has erected himself one of the most original—one of the newest and freshest of men. . . . . The special characteristic of Carlyle's genius is probably its intensity. He is for ever enthusiastically in earnest. He is the very Homer of prose, but he never permits himself to slumber. It is obviously impossible for him to over-inform the expression of his opinion. But for this his literary style might occasionally be called exaggerative. It is not so, because he is intenser even than his language, and because language has no tone more piercing than that in which he himself is inwardly addressed. He is terribly in earnest in all things, because to him the universe is in all things so terribly in earnest. When he speaks, it is as if necessity were laid upon him. He has a fine capacity for scorn, and he scorns few things more emphatically than dilletantism, the science of elegant ease and graceful indolence. In the keenness of his satire, the splendour of his eloquence, and the almost volcanic nature of his denunciation, he is very like Byron; But his satire and his denunciation have never lost point or force—as Byron's did—by being merely the outward sign of a discontented egotism.—From "Cassell's National Portrait Gallery" for August.

Baker 227, W. B. Farr P.M. 825, and W. J. Blake 23, Bros. A. Pinto Leite, W. H. C. Sharpe and T. Slater were raised to the third degree, and Bro. C. S. Duggan was passed to the second degree. The two former degrees were conferred on the candidates (through the courtesy of the W.M.) by Bro. G. Bubb P.M. 180, the newly accepted joining member, and the ceremonies were very impressively delivered. Ballots were then taken for the admission of Messrs. J. A. Burgan and W. Sherman, who being personal friends of Bro. T. A. Carr P.M., they were duly initiated into the Order by him. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren partook of one of those banquets that Bro. Deacon is so successful in supplying. The usual loyal, Masonic and routine toasts were given and responded to, and the brethren, after passing an agreeable day, in Masonic working and sociality, returned to town.

Robert Burns Lodge, No. 999.—This Lodge held its 119th meeting on Monday 23rd of August, at Freemasons' Hall. Present—Bros. W. L. Chew W.M., E. H. Flowers S.W., J. A. Infiesta J.W., T. B. LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF NEW SCHOOLS AT CUMNOCK, AYRSHIRE.

THURSDAY, the 19th of August, will be a day long remembered by the inhabitants of Old Cumnock, as that on which Col. Mure, M.P., the Provincial Grand Master of Ayrshire, assisted by about five hundred of his brother Masons, attended to lay the foundation stone of the building in course of erection by the School Board. The building, when completed, will accommodate eight hundred children, and is estimated to cost £4,000. The Old Cumnock Lodge, St. Barnabas, No. 230, under whose banner the Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, mustered in great strength. St. John's Lodge, New Cumnock, also supplying a good contingent. The following Lodges were represented: Mother Kilwinning, No. 0, St. John's, No. 22, Kilmarnock; Thistle and Rose, No. 73, Glasgow; Navigation, No. 86, Troon; St. James's, No. 125, Ayr; St. Andrew's, No. 126, Kilmarnock; St. James's, No. 135, Tarbolton; St. Mungo, No. 179, Maschline; St. Barnabas, No. 230, St. Andrew, 245, Muirkirk; Blair, 290, Dalry; St. John, No. 320, Ardrossan; St. John, No. 334, New Cumnock; St. Thomas, 433, Dalmellington; St. John, 497, Catrine, and Burns, St. Mary, Hurlford. Amongst the Provincial Grand Officers we noticed Col. Mure P.G.M., O. Patrick, of Woodside, D.P.G.M., R. Wylie P.G.S., J. Ferguson P.P.G.W., J. Tweed P.P.J.G.W., and J. M'Kay P.G.S.D.; and from Lodge Mother Kilwinning, Bros. W. H. Steven, H. Arthur and G. W. Wheeler. The brethren being properly marshalled by Bros. Wylie and McKie P.G.M.'s, proceeded round the picturesque village, to the site of the School, adjoining the old Churchyard, where sleep many of the old covenanters, men whose memories Scotchmen still delight to honour. The R.W.M. of St. Barnabas Lodge, No. 230, then, in a neat speech, presented a richly engraved trowel to the P.G.M., requesting him, in the name of the Lodge, to accept it, and perform the ceremony. The stone was then laid with the accustomed Masonic ceremonies, amid the plaudits of the assembled multitude, who were then addressed by the gallant Colonel, on the advantages of education, and the fitness of such a stone being laid by the Masonic fraternity, whose mission it had been in all ages to impart light and knowledge to those who might otherwise have remained in darkness and ignorance, proving that while formerly the public buildings, like arenas and amphitheatres, were built for purposes of sport and cruelty, that now, owing to the dissemination of light and truth, all public buildings were erected to act in the opposite direction. Mr. Bothwell, the chairman of the School Board, then proposed that the thanks of the inhabitants of Cumnock, as well as his own and those of the School Board, should be given to the P.G.M. and those brethren who had come from all parts of the country to honour them on this occasion. The procession then returned to the Lodge room, when the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed. A dinner then took place, at the Black Bull Inn, presided over by Mr. Bothwell, the chairman of the Local School Board, and attended by above 150 of the brethren. After the chairman, in an excellent manner, had given the usual loyal toasts, he gave the "Two Houses of Parliament," calling on Col. Mure to respond, who, he said, was not only P.G.M. of the Masons, but one who had done good service in the field as an officer of her Majesty, and now was doing equally good service to his country by serving in Parliament. We regret that space forbids us to give the gallant Colonel's reply, and also his speech afterwards, when he proposed "The School Board of Cumnock," as both were much above the usual species of after-dinner orations. The whole meeting was a complete success, and will be long remembered in South Ayrshire.

THE MASONIC SIGN.

"YES, sir," said Jones to his friend Smith, "the advantages to be derived from our ancient and honourable institution are incalculable."

By the way we should have said "Brother Jones," for Brother Jones was "high" in Masonry, and was Past Grand Deputy Junior Door Opener for the Counties of Cockaynashire."

"For instance," continued Brother Jones, P.G.D.J.D.O., "look at the position you take when travelling—think of the consideration paid to you. Why, when I landed on the island of Bambaroo, the King, hearing I was a Mason, sent down a detachment of his Horse Guards Black to escort me to his palace."

"But," said Smith, surprised, "are all Masons thus honoured?"

"Well—no," answered Brother Jones, hesitatingly; "only those who belong to the very highest degrees—and I belong to the very highest, the double superior and superlative degree of the combined Rose, Thistle, and Palm Tree, or the three hundred and sixty-fifth degree. There are but seven members of it in the known world, and they are all crowned heads except myself."

"And you," exclaimed Smith, "how on earth were you admitted?"

"I don't wonder at your surprise," continued Jones; "others have wondered at it and envied me. You see, such is the universality of Masonry, that even crowned heads are compelled to admit one outsider into their fraternity, else what would become of the principle of equality?"

"I see," said Smith savagely, for he began to suspect that Brother Jones was chaffing him; and you were a very outsider."

But Brother Jones was in earnest. If he was not a member of this superlative degree, he had dreamed he was, and believed it—so it came to the same thing.

"Now, about these signs," said Smith. "I don't ask you to tell me your secrets; but I object to take a leap in the dark, and if I am to join your Lodge"—for this was the contingency that led up to the conversation—"if I am to join your Lodge, I should like to know just some little about it beforehand."

Brother Jones seemed to hesitate for a few moments, then he appeared buried in profound reflection. At length he rose, and taking Smith by the hand, said:

"Smith, you are my oldest friend—can I trust you?"

Said Smith:

"You can, upon my honour."

"If it were known," said Jones, "that I had divulged the least part of a secret, my life wouldn't be safe for half an hour."

"What!" exclaimed Smith, "do you Masons go about like the bandits in melodramas, with daggers concealed in your boots?"

"Well, no—not exactly in our boots, because the majority of us wear shoes; but it is so. However, I'll chance it."

Here Jones went cautiously round the room, locked the door, and hung his hat on the knob, so as to cover the keyhole.

"Why do you put your hat there?" asked Smith.

"To keep off" ——, said Jones; "in short, to tile the room."

The offshoot of Brother Jones's reflections was this: he had thought of a plan to impart to his friend Smith a Masonic sign, without compromising his fealty to the craft.

"When do you propose going to Bristol?" he asked him.

"This day week."

"Good—now if I put you in possession of one of our secret signs, and you are satisfied with the result, I shall expect to propose you as a Mason; it is the only way you can make atonement to my conscience."

"I agree," said Smith, "and here's my hand on it."

"Very well. Now, you are going to Bristol this day week—well, you shall see the wonderful results of the Masonic signs. Double your fist thus—please to copy me—extend the fore finger of your right hand, and apply it three times to the right side of your nose—gently tapping it thus."

"But why three times?"

"Ah! true—I have made a mistake, and given you an advanced sign; once would have done, but it can't be helped now. When you go to the booking-office ask for a first-class ticket to Bristol; give the sign as I have shown you, and the booking clerk will give you one for nothing."

Smith opened his eyes in surprise.

"Yes," continued Brown, "a first-class ticket for nothing. It is in this way: if you had only tapped your nose once they would have given you a third-class ticket, what we call an 'E.A.P. ticket;' twice, you would receive a second, or 'F.C. ticket;' but, as I have told you three times, you may as well have the advantage of an 'M.M. ticket,' and ride first."

Accordingly, in due course Smith presented himself at the little window, gave the sign by tapping his nose three times as instructed, and at once received his ticket.

"All right, brother," said the clerk. "Pass on."

And it was all right. Smith obtained his first-class ticket, and went down to Bristol.

Great was his amazement, and little did he suspect that Brother Jones had arranged the joke thus: He had a friend who was a booking clerk at the G. W. R., and a member of his own Lodge, and not grudging a trifle for the fun of the thing, he had given him the cost of a first-class ticket to Bristol, and instructed him to hand it over to the person who should act in the manner he had instructed Smith to act.

Smith's business transacted, the next day it was imperative on him to return, and presenting himself at the booking-office, he again made the mystic sign.

"One pound twelve," responded the clerk.

"Yes, I know; but" —— Tap, tap, tap, and he repeated the sign.

"One pound twelve," repeated the clerk; "and don't stand there making grimaces at me all day."

Digitized by Google

"But, my good sir"——(Tap, tap, tap.)

Then he tried the single and the double tap, but no result followed; so he paid for a third-class ticket, and went on his way with the brotherly resolve of joining the Order, if it was only to obtain the satisfaction of reporting the conduct of this unworthy clerk. Arriving in town, his first business was to call on Brother Jones, and explain how he had been served, and how the man refused to give him a ticket without the money.

"Of course he did," explained Jones. "You made a mistake; you forgot you were returning, and that the signal ought to have been reversed. You should have tapped the left side of your nose with the finger of the left hand, thus."

Poor Smith more than suspected he had been made the victim of a joke—the hero of a tale with which Jones would regale many a Masonic Brother, with infinite relish. Certainly he never seeks to discover the sign by becoming a Mason. As to Brother Jones, he has risen higher and higher in the Craft, and is not only P.G.D.J.D.O. but P.M.M., P.F.C., P.E.A.P., and X.Y.Z. also.—Funny Folks.

THE FIRST STONE.

Forsaken, down trodden, crime-laden, heart-broken,
He lies in the dust. Cast thou not the first stone;
And be not, by thy too-ready lips, his doom spoken;
On high sits the Judge who may judge him alone.

He hath sinned. Well, who hath not? If to us were given,
To each and to all, what stern justice deems due,
Not a man of us ever could hope to gain heaven,
Nor e'er the strait gate of salvation pass through.

Forgive him! Who art thou dar'st sit on thy neighbour
In self-assured judgment? Say, hast thou no spot?
No speck on thy conscience? Why shouldest thou labour
To prove him all guilty, yet dream thou art not?

Oh, hypocrite! know that far sweeter to heaven
The tears of a sinner than those of the just,
As fresh scent gains the rose after tempest hath striven,
And sweeter her blossoms bloom out of the dust.

From the "Quiver" for August.

JENNY JONES.—Many melodies popular in Wales are not old, but the composition of modern bards and harpers. These are often composed in the old style, so that it requires some discrimination to distinguish between ancient tunes and the modern imitations. John Parry tells us that two of his airs, "John ap Kenn," composed in 1802, and "The Maid of Morna" in 1803, have been taken for ancient melodies. He says, "I have composed a number of airs after the Welsh modulation, as it is termed, and which consists of an admixture of the major and minor keys, similar to the well-known air, 'Of noble race was Shenkin,' which have become very popular in Wales; but when the harpers are asked who the composer is they know nothing about it; and, indeed, even the names of the tunes are frequently changed. For instance, when a lady of any consequence happens to admire a certain air, the minstrel, out of courtesy, calls it "Lady such-a-one's delight." The air of "Jenny Jones," sung in London in 1850, by Charles Mathews, the comedian, was picked up in Wales by that gentleman, who considered it to be an old melody. The real fact is that it was composed in 1804 by John Parry, and called by him Cader Idris, after the highest mountain but one (Snowdon) in North Wales.—Leisure Hour.

FREEMASONRY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

A Special Communication of the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was held on Saturday, 3rd day of July, A.L. 5875, A.D. 1875, for the purpose of commemorating the centennial celebration of the day when our illustrious Brother, General George Washington, under the old Elm at Cambridge, assumed command of the Colonial forces, soon to become, under his generalship, the Army of the United States.

Present—Bros. Percival L. Everitt Grand Master, William J Sawin Senior Grand Warden, Lucius W. Lowell Junior Grand Warden, John McClellan Grand Treasurer, Charles H. Titus Recording Grand Secretary, Geo. P. Sanger Corresponding Grand Secretary, and other Grand and Past Grand Officers.

The Grand Lodge was opened in ample form, in Grand Lodge Hall, Masonic Temple, Boston, at 10 o'clock a.m. By order of the Grand Master, the Grand Lodge was called from labour to refreshment.

The Grand Master, with the brethren of the Grand Lodge, proceeded in carriages to Lyceum Hall, Cambridge, as guests of the municipal authorities of the city, and were welcomed by his Honour the Mayor, W. Bro. Isaac Bradford. Here a procession was formed of the many eminent representative men who had accepted the invitation to unite with the city authorities in fitly celebrating the day, the Grand Lodge being assigned a position next to the President and Fellows of Harvard College, and was conducted to a tent on the Common, near the historic old elm under which Washington first drew his sword as Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

In the tent, after the music and prayer, a poem was read by James Russell Lowell, and an oration delivered by Rev. Augustus P. Peabody, D.D., both of great ability, and well befitting the occasion.

At the close of the services in the tent, the Grand Lodge joined again in procession, and was conducted to Memorial Hall, Harvard College, where a banquet had been provided for the citizens and their guests. Here his Honour, the Mayor, presided, as he had done during the services in the tent, and at the conclusion of the repast called upon Judge Sanger, our R.W. Corresponding Grand Secretary, to act as toast-master.

The first toast, "Washington," was responded to by a dirge from the band, the company all standing with bowed heads.

To the second toast, "The United States," Hon. George S. Boutwell, U.S. Senator from Massachusetts, responded.

The third toast was "Massachusetts," and to this his Excellency, the Governor, Bro. William Gaston, responded.

Hon. Josiah Quincy spoke to the fourth toast, "The Thirteen Original States."

To the next toast, "The Army and Navy," General, Judge, and Bro. Charles Devens, responded.

President Eliot spoke eloquently for "Harvard College," the next toast, when the "Grand Lodge of Massachusetts" was given as the sixth regular toast, to which the M.W. Grand Master eloquently responded.

The orator and poet of the day were called up, and Mr. Lowell, declining to make remarks, called up in his place Oliver Wendell Holmes, who read a poem well suited to the occasion. Other eminent men responded to sentiments appropriate to the day, and the exercises in this beautiful hall proved to be of exceeding interest.

On invitation of R.W. Henry Endicott, the brethren of the Grand Lodge enjoyed the hospitality of his pleasant home in Cambridgeport, thus adding pleasantly to the many enjoyable scenes of the day.

At eight o'clock p.m., the Grand Lodge returned to Masonic Temple, Boston, which was called from refreshment to labour, and closed in ample form.—The Keystone.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 112 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

recording facts contributed by strangers, the distinguished positions of whom place their statements—founded upon the experience of the Wine—beyond a doubt. It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and incites specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its peculiar dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

NEARLY THREE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

PUBLICITY.

ONE of the chief features of the age we live in is the very slight respect shown for privacy. Questions that affect the common weal, must, of course, be discussed in public, nor is there harm, but rather the reverse, in bringing before the tribunal of public opinion those acts done in private which may prove hurtful to the general body. But publicitiy is not unfrequently abused. The press, as a whole, has done service, by directing, restraining, or exciting public opinion on grave questions, and the most esteemed among our journals do studiously exclude from their columns whatever is offensive to propriety and good taste. Offences against decency are most carefully reported, all objectionable details being as carefully veiled in mysterious language as possible. Divorce cases are summarised in like manner. Not all journals, however, are careful to observe this highly proper rule of conduct, and too often the revolting details of a vicious act or life are displayed, in all their native hideousness, in black and white. Again, there is another way in which the privacy of life is treated with utter disdain. Some terrible catastrophe occurs, and some journals, which only look upon their raison d'être as the attainment of large profits, are not over nice in obtaining the earliest and most detailed intelligence. A well known case will best illustrate our meaning. Towards the end of last year we learned, by telegraph, that a large emigrant ship had been overtaken by that most terrible of all calamities—fire, and that of nearly five hundred souls aboard only three had escaped to tell the dreadful tale. It was known that these men were on their return home, and that in the ordinary course of things the usual inquiry into the disaster would be held. The anxiety of the public to learn all the particulars of the loss was perfectly natural, but we question if it did not learn with anger that even before landing the survivors had been "interviewed" by one or more of "Our Special Commissioner" class of news agents. No doubt the mate and his companions were glad enough to disburden their minds of their fearful narrative. Investigation was necessary, in the interests of the public, but the public court was the proper place for such evidence as could be furnished. This waylaying and interviewing of men who have just escaped with bare life from a terrible fate, merely in order that some journals may be first in the market with their news, strikes us as being a flagrant violation of decency. The feelings of the survivors were of little account compared with the all-important question of £ s d. Again, our readers may call to mind that in one of our earliest issues we reviewed a work by the late Sir Arthur Helps, the very last, indeed, that he wrote,—Social Pressure. The subject of one of the essays it contained was "Over Publicity." We cordially endorsed the author's views, and illustrated his condemnation of this special vice of the age by citing the publication of the "Greville Memoirs" as a case in point. Their appearance had attracted general attention, all the more for the scandal they contained; but the conduct of the editor in publishing them has been very generally and, we think, very properly condemned. Many of those who figure in the narrative are yet alive. For most of the information in his Diary Mr. Greville was indebted to private sources of information and the confidential position he held as Clerk to the Privy Council. We all know what a pestilent set of people are the busybodies and Paul Pry's of the circle we move in. Be we inhabitants of a small village, or members of a small cóterie, there are still certain things which we claim the right to keep sacred from the inquisitiveness of our neighbours. No matter how narrow the circle of our acquaintance, we can all of us point to one or more tittle-tattlers it contains who spend the whole of their days in prying into the private concerns of their acquaintances. We all despise these people in our hearts, if not openly, and the journal that rends the veil separating privacy from publicity is equally objectionable.

There is little danger of Masons erring on the score of over publicity. Indeed, many of us are too reticent. One of the greatest obstacles to the success of Masonic periodicals, is the aversion felt by many of the Craft to allow even a formal announcement to be made about Masonic proceedings. We have read somewhere—we fancy it was in one of Dr. Oliver's works—about a brother, in days gone by, who expressed himself, in no unmeasured terms, of his objection to all Masonic publications. When pressed to say what he had found in them that was objectionable, he very candidly admitted that he had never read, and never meant to read, any of them, and he thought they should one and all be committed to the flames forthwith. We do not for a moment believe that Craftsmen of the present day are so bigoted, yet is it beyond all doubt that a large and numerous section of our Order is opposed to Masonic journalism, while a still more numerous section is supremely apathetic in the matter. They will read a journal if it comes in their way, but they will not trouble themselves to support it. Those who object to Masonic publications are, doubtless, influenced by conscientious motives. They firmly believe that anything in the shape of a Masonic press is strictly forbidden by the Constitutions, that publicity in connection with a secret society is a monstrous anomaly. While, however, we shall always evince a proper respect for the opinions of our fellows, we feel constrained to point out to them that what they so strongly object to has been the very means to which the Fraternity is indebted for its wonderful progress in these latter years. No Mason would ever dream of divulging what he is obligated to keep secret. Would any one believe him if he did? Would it not be asked—Can he be trustworthy who has proved himself faithless, who has broken the most solemn obligation, voluntarily contracted? So far then as the secrets of Freemasonry are concerned, there need be no fear of their being made known. But we are a numerous body now, and scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land. The few hundreds of which the Fraternity consisted in the early part of last century have swelled into many thousands. Our kinsmen in America are most enthusiastic in their love of Masonry—in fact, all the world over, the Craft is most prosperous. Now what after all is a journal but a medium for the conveyance of news among the scattered members of a community? Events of general interest are happening around us every day of our lives. Questions of policy occasionally crop up, and where better can such questions be discussed than in the pages of some periodical? The history of our Order has given rise to a considerable variety of opinion. Some carry it back to the remotest ages, others look upon the Craft as the work of a few speculative philosophers who flourished about a century and three quarters ago. The open discussion of these and cognate matters involves no fracture of the conditions on which we were admitted into the Order. There is a numerous array of works on Freemasonry. These are known to the Masonic student, but the bulk of the Craft has but a very limited idea of their contents. The Reports of Lodge Meetings—discreetly worded, of course—of the anniversaries of our Charitable Institutions, of the progress that is being made by the Fraternity in other countries, or of the difficulties and even persecution which it occasionally, but, we are glad to say, very seldom, has to contend with, all these are matters which cannot fail to prove interesting to the Masonic world. Why then should there be no organs of Masonic opinion? The Army and Navy, the Civil Service, the various scientific and other societies, each of these has its organ, in which every variety of opinion about questions of general interest finds expression. Why should Masonry be the only one among public bodies which treats journalism with indifference? Publicity—to the point that is allowed by decency and the rules of our Order, is a benefit. Will any one be bold enough to suggest that the works on Masonry, already published, have not been of essential service? Is it no advantage that there should exist a medium for gauging the opinion of the Craft in those countries where Masons most do congregate. England is undoubtedly the progenitor of Masonry as it has existed since 1717, and we feel confident that our English brethren will recognise, on reflection, that a newspaper is at all events a convenient medium for learning about the doings of our fellows in other parts as well as for the study of important questions. We repeat, the brethren of to-day are becoming less and less bigoted. There is not that unreasoning opposition to Masonic publications of which we have already given an instance. But a more liberal support of the Masonic press—we say it from no interested motives—would betoken a more liberal interest in the Craft. When we were comparatively few in number, we could rub along very well without much trouble. Now that we are so considerable in respect of numbers we need, more than ever, the means for interchanging opinions, not only among ourselves at home, but with our friends and brethren abroad. There is to-day an absolute need for a Masonic press; let it not be a reproach to the Order that the efforts of its journals pass unappreciated.

M. FORAISSE ON THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE AND ITS DOCTRINE.

(Translated from the French.)

THE Order of the Temple is cosmopolitan, and is divided into two great classes, denominated respectively the Order of the Temple and the Eastern Order. The Eastern Order gave birth to the Order of the Temple, and in the course of time has become an appendage of the latter. It is in ancient Egypt that we find the cradle of the Eastern Order. Its chiefs were at one and the same time legislators and pontiffs. Their policy was opposed to the propagation of metaphysical knowledge and the natural sciences, of which they preserved the repository, and those who revealed to the people, that is to the profane, the secrets reserved only for those of a more elevated rank in the sacerdotal hierarchy were punished with death. To the profanum vulgus were offered only those emblems which constituted the outward form of theology, and that tended to give more power to superstition as well as greater strength to the ruling powers.

Moses was initiated in Egypt. Learned in all the mysteries of the priesthood, he was thus enabled so to profit by his knowledge as with the aid of the Almighty to rise superior to the power of the Magi, and deliver his countrymen from bondage. Aaron, his brother, and the chiefs of the Hebrew nation became the repositories of his secrets, those chiefs or Levites being divided into several grades or classes after the manner of the Egyptian priests.

In the fulness of time the son of God appeared on the earth. At the early age of nine he confounded in argument the learned doctors of the Synagogue Thereafter, by the force of a genius which was wholly divine, directing the fruits of his deep meditations towards the civilisation of the world and the happiness of mankind, he established the true religion, preached the love of God and of one's neighbour, equality before the common father of mankind, and, in the end, consecrated for ever, by a sacrifice worthy of the only Son of God, that is, God himself, the doctrine he transmitted for the spiritual benefit of man. He imparted his teachings to St. John the Baptist and to the apostles, and soon the morality of the gospel spread itself throughout the world, and nations, becoming enlightened, abjured the initiations of Egypt and the dogmas of pagan priests and their formulæ.

St. John the Evangelist, the apostle of brotherly love, never quitted the East. His teaching, always pure, was in nowise altered by the admixture of other doctrine. St. Peter and the rest of the apostles carried the dogmas of Christianity among distant peoples, but being obliged, in order to propagate their faith, oftentimes to countenance the manners and customs of those different nations, and even to sanction rites which were not those of the East, blemishes and differences found their way into the different gospels, as into the doctrine of numerous Christian sects.

Up to the year 1118, the mysteries and the hierarchical Order of Egyptian initiation which had been handed down to the Jews, and afterwards to the Christians, were preserved without alteration by the Eastern Brethren, but then the Christians, persecuted by the Infidels, appreciating the courage and piety of those brave Crusaders, who, with the sword in one hand and the cross in the other, flew to the defence of the Holy Places, and rendering, above all, a grand tribute of respect to the justice and ardent charity of the comrades of Hugues de Payens, considered they should entrust to hands so pure the repository of those sciences which had been acquired in the course of so many centuries and sanctified by the Cross, namely the doctrine and morality of the Man-God.

Such is the origin of the foundation of the Order of the Temple in which Hugues, learned in the esoteric doctrine and the initiatory formulæ of the Eastern Christians, was invested with patriarchal power and placed in the legitimate Order of the successors of St. John the Baptist.

We all know the prosecutions which were directed against the Templars. At that time, Jacques de Molay, foreseeing the misfortunes which threatened the very existence of an Order the existence of which he was anxious to perpetuate, designated as his successor Johannes Marcus Larmenius of Jerusalem, who invested the Grand Masters destined to be his successors with a patriarchal authority, as with magisterial power, by virtue of the charter of transmission which he issued in 1324, a charter the original of which is deposited in the treasury of the Order, under the title of Tabula aurea, and which contains the acceptance, signed with their own hand, of all the Grand Masters who have succeeded Larmenius.

After the death of Jacques de Molay, some Scotch Templars having become apostates from the Order, at the instigation of the king Robert Bruce ranged themselves under the banners of a New Order instituted by that prince, and in which the receptions were based on those of the Order of the Temple. It is there we must search for the origin of Scottish Masonry, and even that of the other Masonic rites. The Scotch Templars were excommunicated in 1324 by Larmenius, who described them as Templi Desertores, and the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem as Dominiorum militiæ spoliatores, &c. That excommunication has since been renewed by different Grand Masters against the Scotch Templars, who have been declared rebels against the legitimate authority, and cast out from the pale of the Temple.

From the schism introduced into Scotland have sprung a great number of different sects, nearly all of which lay claim to have descended from the Temple, while some even go so far as to call themselves the Order itself. Such are the corrected system, the Knights Kadosh of all systems, &c., &c. More recently still, in Germany, other branches have detached themselves from the parent stem, at the election of a Grand Master, and because a French Knight was chosed to fill that dignity, the dissidents constituted themselves reformed Templars, and gave themselves new laws.....

The Order of the Temple has never ceased to exist in France, under the government of a succession of Grand Masters worthy to be commended not only for their virtues but their high position in the State, and all have maintained the principles and doctrine of the institution such as they were at the origin of the Order. The actual organisation of the Temple is such as circumstances may permit; its archives contain the indisputable monuments of its ancient foundation, but what it is these knights have preserved with the most pious reverence, and what they will never depart from, is the teaching of their illustrious ancestors as set forth in an address of the Grand Master in esse.

"Devoted to honour, to our sovereign, to beneficence,

Digitized by Google

we never listen to any other voice than that of our prince, of nature, and of the most ardent charity. God, love, concord, peace towards all mankind, fidelity, unlimited devotion, inviolable attachment to each of our brethren, succour to all in distress, such are the thoughts of every initiate, of every Knight of the Temple."

GOOD FELLOWSHIP.

A MOST worthy, estimable man is he, who is described in the song as—

A jolly good fellow,
And so say all of us.

We may depend upon it the man on whom these convivial honours were so liberally bestowed had a good deal of the Mason about him. Were we publishers of Masonic music we should feel disposed to include this familiar refrain among our Masonic songs, especially as there is a marvellous dearth of singable matter in our répertoire. It is tolerably certain that this chorus, though universally applicable in these times—

It's a way we have in the army,
It's a way we have in the army, &c., &c.

must have had originally some "local habitation and a name"—the demon of quotation is haunting us at the moment, so our readers must excuse any apparent tendency to wander from the paths of common sense or connected sense:—

To err is human, to forgive divine.

Now it were a difficult, yet withal a most interesting problem to solve, and we specially commend it to those active-minded brethren among us, who dive into the more curious, and abstruse points of history relating to the Order, whether this glorious rollicking chorus had or had not a Masonic origin. For our own part we incline to the former theory. We give no reason for our belief—not even on compulsion. "Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I." We repeat, we give no reasons, but we feel morally certain they will be forthcoming and "plenty as blackberries" too, when the time for settling this knotty point shall have arrived. But while this digression lasts, our jolly good fellow is at a standstill, and to have trotted him forth in all his native joviality, and then abandon him to his own resources, well, that we call scurvy treatment, such as poor old Jack Falstaff resented on an ever memorable occasion. "There is nothing but roguery to be found in villanous men," and again, "Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring." So this worthy good fellow shall not stand alone or unadorned. We will make him for the nonce a convivial peg whereon to hang one or more suggestions. So walk in, ladies and gentlemen, walk in.

One of the chief aims of Masonry is the promotion of good fellowship. We cannot always be serious, "All work and no play"—well we all know the effect this had upon the mind of the unhappy Jack. It is not our duty to be always serious. To be declared to be both merry and wise is one of the highest compliments that can be paid a man. Now, in Masonry, of course, we take the wisdom for granted. We have a right to assume that a man who becomes a Mason affords the best evidence he can that he is the possessor of wisdom. But it follows not, as of course, that he has in him the wherewithal to be merry. We have no desire to sow broadcast anything so vulgar as imputations. When we say "the wherewithal to be merry," we are not thinking of the "Friar of Orders Grey" who described himself—in part—thus—

"Myself, by denial, I mortify
With a dainty bit of a warden pie.
* * * * * * *
With old sack wine I am lined withia."

We mean that he has not in him, or, at all events, that he has not sufficiently cultivated what of geniality there lurks about his system. He carries himself too stiff and formal. Without being "Hail, fellow, well met!" with every one, whether knowing or not knowing them, without going into ecstatic fits of gush over any new acquaintance he makes—we have no very high opinion of such fellows—there is plenty of room for him to throw aside a considerable part of that cold reserve which he draws so closely about him, just as men do their Ulsters on a wintry day. We are not going to suggest anything so lunatic as that all social distinctions of rank, all etiquette, all due formalities should be annulled—it is only the silly, soi-disant demagogue who is ranting continually—

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Who was then a gentleman?

—who does this. What we wish to see, and what we think it is the business of all brethren to promote, is a more genial intercourse among Craftsmen. Masonry is an omnium gatherum of classes, including in its ranks both prince and peasant. But Masons, as other men, have each their social sphere in which they live, and move, and have their being. There is, as far as we can see, no earthly reason why, within the limits of this sphere, there should not reign the most perfect cordiality. Having regard to the mixed character of all corporate bodies, we may take it that members of the same Lodge, as near as possible, occupy the same social rank. We are certain they must not only know but respect each other. Why, then, should not good fellowship be promoted among these worthy fellows outside, as well as inside the Lodge, and how better can it be promoted than by organising such pleasant "outings" as pic-nics, or such excellent "innings" as tea fights, at homes, dancing parties, &c., &c. The old-fashioned plan of half a dozen friends meeting successively at each other's houses, and enjoying either a general chat, a hand at cards, or a little music—a few glees, madrigals, and the like—was a most excellent one. Homely enough these friendly meetings were, and hardly to be mentioned in connection with the more showy entertainment of to-day, but they were promotive of geniality, of all kindliness—of good fellowship, in fact; and we question very much if the grand ball, or soirée musicale is as effective. Then an interchange of visits between town Masons and country Masons. Bro. A. B. C. and a few Masonic intimates run down to Herringtown, and eat the friendly bloater, an honour that is reciprocated by Bro. X. Y. Z., who is whirled from the land of bloaters to the land of smoke, to take a comfortable chop at the Criterion, or the London, or perchance, the Albion. For this reason, too, we hail with pleasure the establishment of a Masonic Club. This will, indeed, be a gain to Masonry. Here at once we have established a central point about which both town and country brethren may collect, and not only interchange the ordinary civilities of life, but indulge in free and friendly discussion about all that concerns our Order. Passing strange is it that the idea has never occurred before, for Masons are clubbable men—essentially so, in fact. They have the same objects in view. From frequently meeting together in the same Lodge they tolerably well appreciate each other. Having, as they must, their good and weak points severally, they become impressed with the same class of ideas, yielding, as they constantly do, to the same noble and generous impulses. Here, then, is excellent ground for the promoters of such a scheme to work upon, and we hope and believe their efforts will prove not unsuccessful, so that ere long we shall boast a good Masonic Club where brethren from all parts of the world may meet on the level and part on the square. So shall we advance the best of all causes—good fellowship. But time's up; so one more toast ere parting, and mind, reader, with musical honours—"Good Fellowship!"—

"For he's a jolly good fellow,
And so say all of us."

ON THE ADVANTAGES OF THE FRATERNITY.

[From a Lecture by Martin Clare, M.A., Junior G. Warden, 1735.]

Whatever therefore remains is to remind the brethren that Masons have ever been lovers of order. It is the business of their particular profession to reduce all rude matters to truth. Their aphorisms recommend it. The number of their lights, and the declared end of their coming together, intimate the frame and disposition of mind wherewith they are to meet, and the manner of their behaviour when assembled.

Shall it then ever be said that those, who by choice are distinguished from the gross of mankind, and who voluntarily have enrolled their names in this most ancient and honourable society, are so far wanting to themselves and the Order they profess, as to neglect its rules? Shall those who are banded and cemented together, by the strictest ties of amity, omit the practice of forbearance and brotherly love? or shall the passions of those persons ever become ungovernable, who assemble purposely to subdue them?

We are, let it be considered, the successors of those who reared a structure to the honour of Almighty God, the Grand Architect of the world, which for wisdom, strength, and beauty hath never yet had any parallel. We are intimately related to those great and worthy spirits, who have ever made it their business and their aim to improve themselves, and to inform mankind. Let us then copy their example, that we may also hope to obtain a share in their praise. This cannot possibly be done in a scene of disorder: pearls are never found but when the sea is calm; and silent water is generally deepest.

It has been long, and still is, the glory and happiness of this society, to have its interest espoused by the great, the noble, and the honoured of the land. Persons who, after the example of the wisest and the grandest of kings, esteem it neither condescension nor dishonour to patronise and encourage the professors of the Craft. It is our duty, in return, to do nothing inconsistent with this favour; and being members of this body, it becomes us to act in some degree suitable to the honour we receive from our illustrious head.

If this be done at our general meetings, every good and desirable end will very probably be promoted among us. The Craft will have the advantage of being governed by good, wholesome, and dispassionate laws; the business of the Grand Lodge will be smoothly and effectually carried on; your Grand Officers will communicate their sentiments, and receive your opinions and advice with pleasure and satisfaction; particular societies will become still more regular, from what their representatives shall observe here. In a word, true and ancient Masonry will flourish; and those that are without, will soon come to know that there are more substantial pleasures to be found, as well as greater advantages to be reaped, in our society, orderly conducted, than can possibly be met with in any other bodies of men, how magnificent soever their pretensions may be. For none can be so amiable as that which promotes brotherly love, and fixes that as the grand cement of all our actions; to the performance of which we are bound by an obligation, both solemn and awful, and that entered into by our own free and deliberate choice; and as it is to direct our lives and actions, it can never be too often repeated, nor too frequently inculcated.

Customs of the German Stone Masons.—When a Fellowcraft was on his travels, and wished to visit the Lodge of any place for the first time, he knocked three times distinctly, approaching with three upright regular steps the Master or Speaker (Polirer a corruption of Parlierer), who supplied the place of the Master in his absence, and also addressed strangers, the other Fellows all standing round, their feet placed at right angles. The salutations of the travelling Fellows were: God greet you,—God guide you,—God reward you—Master, Parlierer, and all good comrades. Upon which the Master or Parlierer returned thanks, that the Apprentice might know which was the chief, then he continued, "the Master N. N. sends you a greeting!" This is a summary account of the customs usual amongst the German Masons on the admission of a candidate. Whoever wishes to know more on the subject, is referred to the works of Fallou and Winzer, and likewise to Appendix A: "Examination of German Stone-Masons."—Findel.

Holloway's Pills.—Council and Cheer.—Many impurities enter the human system during the summer, from the decomposition of animal and vegetable matter, which often taints the air, and renders the water noxious. The grand quality displayed by these excellent Pills, of searching out and expelling all pernicious particles from the system, constitute them the best medicine for averting indigestion, bilious attacks, diarrhœa, and English cholera. Of all the various affections of the alimentary canal, constantly occurring in a variable climate, Holloway's Pills are the best, cheapest and safest remedies, since they can never act wrongly or be taken without benefit, if their accompanying directions receive only moderate attention, and the diet be restricted to plain, wholesome and digestible food.

GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemason's Hall. The Grand Master, the Pro-Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, and one of the Grand Deacons, besides many Past Grand Officers of high rank, were not present. Bro. Major-General Brownrigg, Prov. G.M. of Surrey, presided, and Bro. Robert Scott, District Grand Master of Trinidad, acted as Deputy Grand Master for this occasion. Nevertheless, Grand Lodge was well attended, there being, perhaps, nearly 300 brethren in all present. Since the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales this was the first Grand Lodge at which the jewel was worn, which was struck by command of the Grand Master to commemorate the great event of the 28th April last. This jewel, which was manufactured by Bro. H. T. Lamb, of St. John's-square, from designs of Sir Albert wood (Garter), was very much admired, both for the beauty of the design, the quality of the material, and the excellence of the workmanship; and the Stewards, who were its fortunate possessor, appeared to be very proud of the distinction which the wearing of it signified.

Among the brethren who were present, were Bro. S. Rawson, who acted as Past Grand Master, Bro. P. Pattison, as G.S.W., Bro. Capt. Platt, as G.J.W., and Bros. M'Intyre Q.C., Thomas Fenn, Thos. W. White, N. B. Headon, Wilhelm Kuhe, W. Kindon, H. Marshon, Richd. Spencer, E. M. Haigh, H. G. Buss, Henry Smith Prov. G. Secretary W. Yorks., John Boyd, C. A. Cottebrune, W. Ough, Joshua Nunn, E. Bradford, James Brett, Joseph Smith, J. A. Rucker, Dr. Jabez Hogg, Dr. Woodman, J. M. Clabon, J. B. Monckton, Rev. Sir J. W. Hayes, Rev. J. Stadholme Brownrigg, Rev. R. J. Simpson, Rev. C. J. Martyr, Bros. E. N. Albert, A. J. D. Filer, R. J. Spiers, H. Browse, T. J. Sabine, W. Wright, W. Stephens, F. Adlard, B. Baker, W. Dodd, Rev S. R. Wigram, John Constable P.M. 185, J. C. Parkinson, Israel Abrahams, Capt. Phillips, E. S. Snell, C. B. Payne, T. Speight, &c. The procession of Grand Officers into Grand Lodge was accompanied by the playing of the organ by Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe, Grand Organist.

Grand Lodge having been opened according to ancient form, Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, read letters from the Marquis of Hamilton G.S.W., the Lord Mayor G.J.W., and Bro. W. Speed G.D., regretting their inability to attend, which was occasioned by absence from London. The minutes of 2nd June were read and confirmed, and the report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which were recommendation for four grants of £50 and upwards, was also read by Bro. Hervey. Bros. J. M. Clabon and Joshua Nunn moved the adoption of the recommendations, and explained that in each case the recipients of the donations were most deservedly the brethren to be relieved, and the deceased husbands of the widows who were to be relieved, having been very serviceable members of the Craft, and been reduced to want by no acts or fault of their own. The recommendations were unanimously adopted, without any hesitation.

Bro. John B. Monckton moved that the Report of the Board of General Purposes be taken as read.*

Bro. Peter Long seconded the motion.

Bro. Monckton, after the motion had been put to the meeting and carried, moved that the report of the Board be received and entered on the minutes. In doing so he observed that there was nothing in it which required the confirmation of Grand Lodge; but the members of Grand Lodge would see it contained matter of importance. A practice had sprung up, principally in country places, of wearing jewels which were not authorised. Much notice, however, had not been taken of the circumstance till latterly, when probably the suggestion of people interested in the manufacture of Masonic jewels had led to inquiry into the subject. It had been thought right by the Board to direct Grand Secretary to put himself into communication with Provincial Grand Secretaries, and other Masonic authorities, as mentioned in the above report, and the matter would probably now be set at rest. It was in the order and fitness of things that only Craft jewels should be worn in Craft Lodges. Bro. Long seconded this motion also, which was then put and carried unanimously. The annual report of "the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons," dated the 21st May 1875, was laid before Grand Lodge.

FOGEYISM AND RADICALISM.

From the CANADIAN MASONIC NEWS.

THERE are in Freemasonry as in politics and religion, and indeed in all other mundane affairs, two extremes of thought, which have been distinguished by the names which make the caption of the present article. Fogeyism is quite a modern term, although the thing which it describes is of venerable antiquity. Doubtless there has been a corruption in the spelling of the word as well as in its pronunciation, and there was originally an expressed reference to the physical condition of being in a fog, when the sight is contracted to the narrow space upon which one stands. Thus the fogey comes to the consideration of any subject with a clouded or befogged understanding, which prevents him from seeing before or around him, and he denounces any change, because to change is, as he thinks, to pass recklessly into a terra incognita, where only imminent danger or certain destruction is to be anticipated. The fogey is naturally opposed to all revolution in government; all changes of customs; all amendments of laws. He has an eye single to the past, and can see in the present or the future nothing but danger or deterioration. Horace describes such a man as a "laudator temporis acti;" and Aristotle, long before Horace, painted him as ever speaking of what had been done in former times, and delighting in his recollections of his early days.

To such men steamboats were portentous experiments, and it is wonderful how they have survived the introduction of railroads and telegraphs.

Now, fogeyism abounds in Masonry, and is there much more to be dreaded than in either politics or religion. This is because its admirers find there a breastwork erected for another purpose, but behind which they unintentionally hide themselves, and bid defiance to all the shots that are fired at them by their opponents.

In Masonry there are of course certain things which admit of no change—which all Masons believe cannot be changed for the better, and in which any change must inevitably be for the worse. These are the landmarks of the society—the boundary lines which have ever circumscribed it, and separated and consecrated it as it were, from all other institutions. Now, innovations upon these landmarks are abhorrent to the mind of every Mason; and when improvements or alterations in these are talked of, the fogey gets on safe ground, and, in his opposition to change, finds himself supported by all the prudent Masons in the Craft.

But, unfortunately, he has generally very clouded and indistinct ideas of what the real landmarks are. With him, everything that he has been accustomed to see and hear is a landmark. Propose to alter a bye-law, and he talks of violating a landmark. Suggest an amendment to the regulations of a Grand Lodge, and he raises the cry of innovation, and flies behind his breastwork, and collects all his old fogey brethren around him, and then they praise the past and speak doubtfully of the future; and bring themselves to believe at last that a law of twenty or thirty years' standing is a landmark, and that all the laws of Freemasonry, by which they mean the regulations of their own little jurisdiction, are as incapable of repeal or amendment as the decrees of the Medes and Persians.

"Leges Anglie nolumus mutare," is the favorite motto with them, and, like the old barons of England, they respond to every proposition for improvement with the magic and, as they think, unanswerable sentence, "We are opposed to innovation."

The radicals betake themselves to the other extreme, and are much too prone to change, as the fogeys are too averse. The radicals, as their name imports, are not content, when they discover a rotten branch, to lop it off, and it alone, but they are for applying the axe at once to the root, and for felling the whole tree. If the fogeys believe everything to be a landmark, the radicals invest nothing with that character.

The radical is, in Masonry, a very dangerous character. As much a despiser of precedents, as the fogey is their worshipper, he is too often disposed to yield his rash and often unfledged opinions to no force of authority and to no argument of expediency. For him it is sufficient that a change has been proposed, and in his love of change, he often yields his love of truth and his love of right. He cannot tolerate an evil, however trifling in its nature, or transitory in its duration, and is ever ready to abolish it by the adoption of a remedy as questionable in its expected results, as the evil it is proposed to cure. In the hand of the fogeys, Freemasonry would long since have lost all its vitality, and becoming lifeless and effete, must have been cast aside as a worn out engine, which had done its work, and was incapable of repair. In the hands of the radicals, Freemasonry would soon lose its identity, and, amid a multitude of dangerous and irrational experiments, must, in brief time, wear out its forces, and, like the unfortunate patient celebrated in the Italian epitaph, die of too much physic.

It is evident, then, that both fogeyism and radicalism are opposed (but in different ways) to true and healthful progress, and that either system is dangerous to the welfare and perpetuity of Freemasonry.

Fortunately there is a middle system, which, partaking of the excellencies of both (for both have excellencies), is without the faults of either.

Conservatism is that medio tutissimo from which everything is to be hoped and nothing to be feared. Conservatism is not—at least in the sense in which we here use it—what Bailey has defined, as "keeping or preserving," and the American lexicographer, Webster, "The desire and effort of preserving what is established." By no means. That is exactly the definition which suits fogeyism. Conservatism, on the contrary, has no blind and superstitious respect for things established simply because they are so. Precedents with it, have no authority unless they are founded on principle, and on the other hand, changes have no support unless they are prompted by necessity and guided by reason.

To fogeyism we are indebted for the retention of a thousand puerilities in Freemasonry, which crept into the institution during times of great ignorance, and which have been since preserved by force of habit.

To radicalism we owe many a silly experiment, whose unsuccessful result has only proved that our forefathers were in some things much wiser than we thought them.

To conservatism our gratitude is due for that steady and healthful progress which Freemasonry is now making—which is giving it standing and character among the institutions of the age—which is rendering it every day more and more worthy of cultivation by men of intellect—and which must bestow upon it, as a science, and a system of philosophy, a perpetuity and prosperity which its merely social and charitable character could never have secured.

Let our motto then be—"Down with fogeyism and radicalism, the rock and quicksand which would for ever shatter and shipwreck the barque of Freemasonry, and long life to conservatism, the sheet anchor on which alone its safety depends."

MAGAZINES OF THE MONTH.

THERE are two or three contributions to Blackwood this month, which are well worth reading. In the first place we have part V. of "The Dilemma," in which the revolted Sepoys attack the Presidency. Colonel Falkland is the heart and soul of the defence. Young Yorke does his devoir manfully, and the charming Mrs. Falkland bears herself as we should expect her to do, bravely, never for a moment losing her coolness and self-possession. "In my Study Chair," is a pleasant kind of retrospect at the years that are gone, the old familiar text books and note books of the school-boy days calling past events to mind. "In a Studio, Conversation No. III," is chattily genial, the dialogue smart and lively, and many of the suggestions and criticisms noteworthy. The paper on "Elegies," and "Lessons from the Recent Summer Manœuvres," utterly opposite in character as they are, are equally to be commended, and there is a good review of "Tennyson's Queen Mary."

Tinsley's has its usual array of serial fiction, which is admirable, all except "A Star and a Heart," of which we have a very poor opinion. Dr. Maurice Davies contributes, as usual, "The Social Status Quo," and a troubador song. We suppose the author of Unorthodox, Orthodox, and Heterodox London cannot help introducing something connected with these "doxies" into his social sketches, but we think he would do well to see how these looked next month without any reference to matters ecclesiastical. As regards the song, it is excellent, as, of course, we may almost say. Of the other poetical contributions, Mr. Gordon Campbell's "Jockie"—one of his "Liltings from the Lowlands," and Mr. M. A. Baines's "September," are excellent. We take leave to quote the latter, which is ingenious, as well as admirable:—

S weet summer's glow still lingers on the scene,
E ach leaf and flow'r a richer tint reveals:
P erchance a rose in sheltered spot may stay
T o soothe our vain regrets. But ev'ry month—
E ach season that comes round—brings its own good,
M ost happy they who use these gifts aright;
B elieving they are sent for good of all,
E ach doing his own duty in the plan,
R eplete with bounteous wisdom from on high.

We noted a similar contribution last month to Colburn's New Monthly, and there can be little doubt, we think, they are from the same pen.

The St. James's has several interesting contributions. Henry Kingsley's tale of "The Grange Garden" heads the list, and is very agreeable reading. Mr. Paget's remarks on the "Makers and Breakers of International Law" are marked by good sound common sense. The Rev. Philip Hale writes pleasantly on "The Personification of Towns." There is Part IV. of Mr. Gibbs' "Battle of the Standard. The Editor is genial, as editors should be, in his Olla Podrida, though the last of his notes on Inhumation and Cremation is somewhat too long. One other paper we must mention, that of Mr. Thomas Carlisle, entitled "White Wings." The subject is our pleasure navy, that is our yachts, their owners, and all their various belongings and doings. The main point at which Mr. Carlisle is driving is that, seeing the service our yacht clubs do to the country by stimulating the building of vessels possessing a high rate of speed, and requiring some ten thousand able seamen to man them, the yachting fraternity deserves more public recognition than the few cups which Her Majesty presents annually to be sailed for by the Royal Yacht Squadron and one or two other clubs. We think so too, and we hope Messrs. Brassey, Ashbury and other M.P.'s, and Peers who are yachtsmen, will bring the subject under the notice of Parliament. We do not suppose the Chancellor of the Exchequer will relish this demand on the national purse, of which he is the guardian, but the suggestion is a very proper one. The statistics as to yachts, tonnage, men, &c., are taken from a very admirable Yachting Manual, published a few months since, and most creditably edited by Mr. Andrew Thompson. Next month begins a new volume, and among the great expectations held out to us is a new serial story by Mrs. S. E. Townshend Mayer, to be entitled "Sir Hubert's Marriage."

Capital progress is made with "The Manchester Man" in Cassell's Family Magazine. The procession in honour of George IV.'s coronation is described, and young Aspinall, having insulted Mr. Ashton, is denied the house by the latter. Nevertheless he obtains secret interviews with Augusta Ashton, and the part closes with Jabez Clegg's accidental discovery of the proposed elopement of Augusta with the ill-mannered Aspinall. We should have greatly preferred if Mrs. Banks had contrived that Miss Ashton had shown some common sense, and rejected her lover's dishonour.

able proposal. Perhaps the exigencies of the story demanded it, but we do not like to find our heroine cheating and deceiving her father and mother. We had a better opinion of her. As usual, the articles on domestic matters form a prominent feature. Phillis Browne writes of "Removing: A Lady's Troubles, Experiences, and Advice." Mr. Payne offers some valuable suggestions as to "Game and Gravy" in his genial kind of way, and Mr. G. Manville Fenn introduces to our acquaintance Mr. "Edward Brown, the Stoker." Professor Ansted tells us much that is both interesting and instructive about "Greece and its islands," the special article detailing "A flying visit to Nauplia" while the "Gatherer" has a goodly collection of notes on Batting, Needlework as an Art, How to eat Oysters, Old Hats, &c., &c. By the way, why are there no papers on matters sanitary? These are essentially of family interest and a few homely papers thereon would be very acceptable no doubt by the readers of this Magazine.

There can be no question as to Belgravia being a success this month. We have seen better illustrations, but we do not think the literary matter has been surpassed, though oftentimes it may have been equalled, for Belgravia observes a pretty even standard of merit, rarely deviating from it even a hair's breadth. We need not dwell on the serials which are old friends, but the contributions of such well known writers as Messrs. Sala and Escott, are worth noting. The former writes in his happiest and most amusing vein, about "Wills and Bequests,"—not from the Illustrated London News, and the latter is chatty over the "Warriors in Town." "Herring town" at Great Yarmouth, of which we gave a few particulars, will of course be recognised. The second part of "A Passage from the Life of Mr. A. Plassington," edited by Mr. F. Frankfort Moore, is amusingly told. The number concludes with an essay "Upon Sticks," from which we quote the following:—

"The sticks that footmen carry on state occasions, when their hair is powdered and they wear their best clothes, are not, as you might suppose, varieties of the wands used by chamberlains and other ceremonial functionaries. They represent the poles with which footmen were formerly armed, to act as levers to prise up the wheels in the frequent event of the carriage on which they attended sticking fast in a deep rut among the old-fashioned miry ways.

The custom of carrying sticks is, we think, rather on the wane in England. We have no statistics on the subject, but a general idea that we don't see so many people carrying sticks as of old. Is the habit of any service? There is perhaps a certain advantage in carrying a stick on a long walk, as the handling of it prevents the fingers from swelling and becoming stiff, and it gives a kind of rhythm to the march; but as an indispensable companion and adjunct to gentle and simple the stick has fallen from its high estate. The nice conduct of a clouded cane is no longer of any importance; and many a youth leaves his paternal dwelling and pilgrimages in search of fortune without thinking of going through the once indispensable ceremony of cutting his stick."

We need not dwell at great length on the merits of Baily. They are too widely appreciated to be greatly affected by praise of ours. But there is never a number which has not some capital stories in them. The driver of "Our Van" has not been influenced in the slightest degree by the seasonable dulness which affects so many. Otherwise he would not recount such lively jokes as the following, which we take leave to quote verbatim et literatim as the phrase goes:—

"A story comes to us from the shires anent a gentleman now very well known in the hunting world, but who took to the noble science rather late in life, and, with a certain praiseworthy idea of making up for lost time, rode accordingly. One of his first meets was with the A—— Hounds, and determining to choose a good leader, followed old D——, then the huntsman, and ere the hounds had gone three fields knocked the old man and his horse both down. He was overwhelmed with grief, apologized profusely, and gave D—— a sovereign, the latter being perfectly satisfied. Both got up and renewed the chase, but not very long afterwards the gentleman bowled over the huntsman again. The same scene was enacted: the same apology and another sovereign produced and accepted, D—— simply observing 'Well, sir, I must say yours is a most liberal style of riding.'"

"The subject of driving four-in-hand was being discussed the other day in the snuggery of a certain dealer well known in the Midlands, and out of them too, when some one said, 'I saw Colonel —— driving a team just now: I believe he is a very good hand; but whose coach was he driving?' Replied the dealer, 'Mr. —— of ——.' 'What?' said another, 'does he drive a team? What sort of a performer is he?' 'Well,' was the great dealer's answer, 'whenever I see Mr. —— driving four horses, he always reminds me of a butcher's boy drawing entrails out of a pail.' If our readers will only suit the action to the word, they will see how ludicrous was the simile. It was received with immense laughter in the snuggery."

"'Dear Jim,' wrote lately one of the most aristocratic of horse-dealers to a friend and customer, 'I can't get any money out of the swells, so I must ask you to let me have five hundred on account. Yours ever, Bob.' The reply was prompt. 'Dear Bob,—put me down among the swells. Yours ever, Jim.'"

Of the other contents a sketch or that fine old cricketer, Fuller Pilch, and a paper on "Provincial Coaching," with a further chapter of "Frank Raleigh, of Watercombe," are the most readable.

We must, this, as last month, call attention to Belspinner's contribution to the Gentleman's, the subject, "Walton's River," the treatment admirable. The Table Talk is good, and so is Part II. of "The Recollections of Writers known to an old couple, when young," by Mr. and Mrs. Cowden Clarke, among those to whom we are introduced being Leigh Hunt.

Le Monde Maçonnique contains several items of foreign news of considerable interest, together with a long and interesting letter from its London correspondent, Bro. H. Valletos, the absence of whose notes, for some months past, has been a source of great regret.

THE DUTIES OF A FREEMASON.

BEFORE engaging to become a member of the Fraternity, it would be well for the uninitiated to reflect upon what would be required of him by the profession he is about to adopt; and not to think of entering upon it lightly, or without serious thought of what his duties as a Mason would be. Before he can be entrusted with any of the "hidden things" of our venerable Institution, certain vows have to be made by which he engages to live up to his profession so as to reflect honour upon the Craft, and that, while he enjoys their fellowship, he will not in any way contribute toward that which would cause them pain or discomfort. He sees a Brother turning from the "straight and narrow path," and is not to join the mob in hue and cry at the erring one's wrongdoing, but must gently, and in the true spirit of Brotherly Love, throw the mantle of charity over his sin, and, with pleasant words of counsel, lead him back to where he has made the misstep.

He must jealously guard the honour of the Institution, and, through sunshine or cloud, stand by the Craft at all times.

The newly-made Mason is not to selfishly look out for number one, but is to have the welfare of the Craft at heart more than his own; this is what he pledged himself to do, and, even supposing that he had not, it is simply his duty. It may be all very well for him so long as Freemasonry enjoys prosperity; but will he still acknowledge himself a Mason should misfortune ever again overtake the Craft?

If he does not in his heart pledge himself to "stand by the ship through weal or woe," he is already a traitor, and, as such, deserves the contempt of his fellow men.

Masonry is not all show, as many profanes assert; it means more than showy uniforms or cocked hats and feathers; and he who seeks for admission solely on account of his desire to rule or dress up, had much better stay out and save his money.

If a man becomes a Mason of his own free choice, he has no right to talk of expense, for he knew all this before he applied for admission. Still many will, when they become tired of listening to lectures upon morality, throw out the expense of the Institution as a reason for not doing their duty, as sufficient ground for leaving the company of those who care the most for them and their welfare. Charity is the great duty of a Freemason, not only in giving alms to the needy, but in studiously covering the faults of others from the gaze of the rude world, and assisting the fallen to regain their lost position among their fellows. Locked in the faithful breast of a Brother Mason, the secrets of the unfortunate are secure from prying eyes, and he finds one ready to receive him regardless of the height from which he has fallen. God demanded of Cain the whereabouts of Abel, and He will make the same demand upon each and all of us, "Where is thy Brother?" Have a care then that, through your neglect, you do not slay him, and cannot face the inquiry with a clear conscience. If you see him falling, and assist him not, you are accessory to his fall, and responsible for the injuries sustained.

The heated term is rapidly drawing to a close. The quarries are full of rough material which will be presented for the labour of the Craft. Masonic celebrations have been numerous all over the country, and the attention of many have been drawn to our Institution. Beware, then, of curiosity-seekers; of such as desire initiation, not from any resolve to practise the virtues for which the Craft is renowned, but simply to gratify their idle curiosity or vanity, love of titles or fine dress. Such material is better thrown aside, for it will not prove serviceable toward completing the Temple. Now is the opportunity for the exercise of Masonic duty in studiously keeping out such as would not contribute honour to the Craft; they who seek admission from purely selfish motives, the vicious and the immoral. Stand firm at your post, and, if you know that the applicant is unworthy, prevent him from joining the Fraternity; once inside, he can do incalculable mischief; therefore meet him at the door. Do not let foolish sympathy for the man stay your hand, for "mercy to the one is cruelty to many." Be firm. Do your duty as a Mason.

Have a care that the quarrelsome man gains not admittance. Once within the precincts of your Lodge, he will change that abode of peace to a bear-garden. He will be continually full of arguments. Nothing can transpire but what he must take up the time of the Brethren in foolish talk, and no motion can be made but what he must object to it. Prevent this mischief-maker from troubling you by simply keeping him out.

Keep an eye on the profane man, for he would pollute any society, however old or honourable. There is no honour in him, and he casts discredit upon the Craft. A simple remedy for this evil: Keep him out.

Beware of the drunkard. Here is a class of applicants not to be desired at all. He will disgrace a tavern, and cannot reflect honour upon a Masonic Lodge. He will go from the Lodge-room to a dram shop, and be the cause of foul slanders. Keep him out.

We need not mention the immoral applicant, for no man who lives up to his profession would allow such a man to come into the Fraternity. Keep your eyes and ears open, Brethren, for there will be lots of material, but not all desirable.—The Square.

According to Pomeroy's Democrat dancing at Masonic festivals has been prohibited by the Grand Master of Iowa, and our brethren of that State are restrained from the enjoyment of this innocent amusement by an order from him, prohibiting it under no less a penalty than that of having the charters of their Lodges arrested. An appeal has been taken from his action, and the matter will receive the attention of the Grand Lodge at the next Annual Meeting.

OUR FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There is considerable force in the criticisms of Bro. Buchan and Masonic Investigator upon my last; but they fail at this point: the two documents I quoted as proving the antiquity of the three degrees, are not the Masonry of 1717, but both are of a period long anterior to Grand Lodge of 1717; therefore, whatever these two documents prove together, is pre-1717 Masonry, and three ranks—Apprentice, Fellow and Master.

The best published manuscripts are those of Bros. Hughan, Lyons, &c., and sight should not be lost of the Pritchard and other revelations.

With regard to the Marks of the Alnwick Lodge, that was bordering on Scotland; but had Mark registration existed generally in England, we should have, most certainly, found it in some of our ancient MSS., and it is never alluded to in this country, whilst frequent mention of it exists in Scotland.

Truly and fraternally yours,

JOHN YARKER.

PRESENTATIONS TO RETIRING MASTERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The letter of M.P. in your last issue is to the point, and there is no cause to withdraw or modify in any sense the salutary remarks he offered. It is patent to the mind of every right thinking brother that profuse decorations are of little use beyond satisfaction to the ignorant of our benevolent principles. I would suggest that to carry out our virtues, of "Loyalty and Charity," a law be framed in Lodges to prevent any member receiving a second jewel as Past Master. There are thousands of brethren who pass the the chair, yet know little of our Charities, or "charity jewel" (a decoration of more value than the majority of those worn), and who, no doubt, would be pleased to see their names inscribed on the Life Governors' List by the appropriation of the money voted as a testimonial for their Mastership.

Notwithstanding the vast sum contributed this year to our three institutions, it will be totally inadequate to meet the increased and urgent claims arising out of the numerous accession of members, and the daily application for new warrants.

Very recently I was in the presence of a brother who was bedizened with a mass of jewels, almost countless, and upon being interrogated how he gained them, he said they were all purchased, save three, and if I chose, he would sell, at a discount, the tawdry tinsel on view, as he was a jeweller, and could readily replace.

Those whose means permit the outlay should be taught the beneficent effect of our Charities before they purchase jewels which detract from the character of a true brother.

I am, yours fraternally,

P.M.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

M.M.—Every Master, Past Master, and Warden is eligible to attend Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communications—but they must have previously signed their names at the Grand Secretary's Office, and their signatures on the occasion of Grand Lodge Meetings will entitle them to admission. The same applies to Principals in Grand Chapter.

A MASONIC INCIDENT.—The "Minerva," a Dutch merchantman, returning from Batavia to Europe, 14th June 1823, with several rich passengers, most of them Masons, amongst whom was Bro. Englehardt, Deputy Grand Master of the Lodges in India, arrived on the coast of Brazil, where it encountered a corsair, under Spanish colours. The Dutchman was attacked, and after a severe struggle was obliged to yield. The corsair, irritated, ordered pillage and massacre. The conquerors had fastened one party of the vanquished to the mast, but the passengers, by tears and entreaties, ultimately were taken on board the corsair. Nothing, however, appeared likely to assuage the captain's fury. In this extremity, Bro. Englehardt made the sign of distress, and the man who a moment before would not listen to prayer and entreaty, became at once softened to kindness. He as well as several of his crew were Masons, members of a Lodge at Ferrol. However, although he acknowledged the appeal, he did not at once believe it, for the signs, tokens, and words were a little different from his own, and he demanded some other proofs. Unluckily the Dutch brethren, fearing to excite the anger of the pirates, who they considered to be the enemies of Freemasonry, had, before the commencement of the fight, thrown overboard all their jewels and Masonic papers, with the view of preserving them from getting into the possession of the pirate. Luckily, however, amongst the floating fragments was a parchment diploma. It was seized, and on being shown to the captain his doubts were removed. He acknowledged the brethren, restored their vessel and property, repaired the damage, demanding, as the only return, affiliation with a Dutch Lodge. He then gave the ship a safeguard against the Spaniards for the remainder of the voyage.—Canadian Masonic News.

ADDISCOMBE LODGE, NO. 1556.

THE Consecration of this new Lodge took place at the Alma Tavern, Addiscombe, on Tuesday, 31st August. The ceremonies of consecration and installation were most ably rendered, by the V.W. Bro. Major-General Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Master of Surrey, assisted by W. Bro. H. E. Frances P.M. P.G.D. D.C.

The brethren met at 4 o'clock, and the Provincial Grand Master nominated Bros. H. S. Brownrigg as S.W., Magnus Ohren P.G.W. for Surrey as J.W., Charles Greenwood Prov. G. Soc. as acting Secretary, Rev. C. W. Arnold Prov. G. Chaplain for Surrey as Chaplain. The Lodge was duly opened, and the following beautiful and impressive oration was delivered by the Chaplain:—

Before the consecration of a Lodge, it is customary to say a few words on the nature and Principles of Freemasonry. I shall then endeavour briefly to point out what ought to be the character of Masons in our Order, that they may carry out faithfully the duties of their profession. There are three great virtues that should strive in each man's breast,—Sincerity, Truth, and Brotherly Love,—without the two former, the latter cannot exist. The love of Masons must be pure and unalloyed—their friendship sincere and genuine—their cordiality without hypocrisy. The true Mason will not live for himself, but for those around him, despising all selfishness. What a different aspect would the world wear if all men were but truly actuated by the principles of Masonry. No longer would our hearts suffer at the horrors of war. Peace, with her olive wand, would descend from heaven; succour would come to the distressed, comfort to the afflicted; everywhere would be the voice of joy and gladness, and no complaining in our streets. What are the jewels and ornaments sparkling on your breasts but the emblems of the virtues which should dwell within. Like the medals of the soldier, they tell of noble and heroic deeds. Small may be their intrinsic value, but great are the truths they symbolise. We must contradict, by our lives, the statements of those who assert that trifles are our ambition, and that our meetings are but an excuse for conviviality. God teaches us, and we are reminded by Masonry that He came into the world poor and penniless, under the fostering care of the Great Architect of the Universe. We have passed through the days of childhood, and arrived at man's estate. We pass on by regular steps across the chequered flooring of the world, learning lessons as we go, looking from Nature to Nature's God. In the third degree yet more knowledge is given to us, and we behold the emblems of mortality everywhere around; and the star above, whose bright light pierces through the darkness of the tomb. Thus, in every step in Masonry, great lessons are inculcated, and the best instruction given. How man must live on earth—how die—how rest in heaven, when he has ascended to those immortal mansions whence all goodness emanates. Just as King Solomon, in the glorious building which he raised, in every ornament he used, conveyed a solemn message to his people, so the Mason is taught a lesson by every thing he sees and handles. But let us remember that these symbols are only useful as long as they inculcate and keep in view some truth, some vital principle. Above all, Masonry directs us to the volume of the Sacred Law, to guide our actions and govern our faith. Thus is Masonry the handmaid of religion, echoing the Apostle's advice, "that, avoiding all ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world," and that now we see but through a glass darkly, yet the time is drawing near when Masonry and all other human institutions will have passed away, and we shall see the Most High as He is in His temple, not built with hands, but eternal in the heavens.

The ceremony of consecration having been completed, the Lodge was resumed in the second degree, and a board of Installed Masters was then formed. The W.M. elect, Bro. G. J. Turquand, was installed into the chair in ancient form, by Bro. H. E. Frances, in a most careful and satisfactory manner, and the appointment of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—F. T. Mullett G.W., J. Parsons Smith J.W., John W. Gray S.D., S. J. Pitt J.D., H. E. Frances, Secretary, W. S. Masterman, Treasurer.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Provincial Grand Master for the honour he had done the Lodge in consecrating it, and to Bro. H. E. Frances for the care and trouble bestowed in getting up the petition, and bringing the affair to a successful close. Bro. Frances was also complimented by the P.G.M. for the very able manner in which the duties of installation were performed. The P.G.M. also complimented the Chaplain, who had come at short notice all the way from Woking to take part in the proceedings.

Five candidates were nominated for the ballot for initiation and to join the Lodge.

The brethren then adjourned to a very excellent banquet, provided by the Lodge, at the Alma Tavern, where the future meetings will be held. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The following were the visitors:—Edward King, St. Marks 857, E. Crouch, St. Marks 857, Henry Davis, Lion and Lamb 192, Fred Cambridge, Granite 1328, John Rhodes, Granite 1328.

Addiscombe is near Croydon, and the Lodge Room is close to the Addiscombe Station on the Mid-Kent line. It is just outside the 10 mile radius, and so becomes a Lodge within the Province of Surrey.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE regular Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday, under the presidency of R.W. Bro. Major-General Brownrigg, Prov. G.M. for Surrey. The report of the Board of General Purposes as to the unauthorised wearing of Commemoration Jewels was received and adopted. For full details as regards this and the other business transacted, we refer our readers to the full report contained in another column. We heartily congratulate Grand Lodge on the promptness it has shown in repressing this nuisance, and we trust our vainer brethren will regard the action both respectfully, as becometh good Masons, and goodnaturedly, as is the wont of sensible men.

The first "crowner's quest" into the fatal collision off Ryde, whereby three lives were lost, has ended unsatisfactorily. The jury could not agree, and were released, after being severally bound over to appear at the official inquiry which will be instituted. A second "crowner's quest," however, has been set on foot, the body of the unfortunate mate of the Mistletoe having been recovered and conveyed to Portsmouth. The first session for the formal identification of the body — which, as might have been expected, was very much decomposed—has been held, and the inquiry adjourned until Monday. Meantime there is a Board of inquiry being held, by order of the Admiralty, on board the flagship, Duke of Wellington. The Court consists of Captain Hood C.B., the Hon. H. C. Glyn C.B., and A. Herbert. The inquiry is being held with closed doors. While investigation is being made as to the cause of this sad calamity, another terrible collision is reported of two large ironclads, belonging to the reserve squadron of the Channel Fleet. The Vanguard and the Iron Duke have collided in the Irish Channel, off Wicklow Point, the result being, that the latter sank within three quarters of an hour, in from fifteen to twenty fathoms. The cause of this disaster is known. A thick fog prevailed on Wednesday night, when the squadron were proceeding under easy steam to the southward. The Vanguard, in order to avoid collision with a large sailing vessel, had put her helm hard astarboard, when the Iron Duke ran into her amidships. The Duke's ram penetrated the side of the unfortunate vessel, about four feet below the water line, and the influx of water was such that, immediately all hands were on deck, the boats lowered, and, happily, the whole of the crew were placed in safety on board the Iron Duke, the only life that was lost being that of a valuable dog, which was forgotten till the last moment. This, the second ironclad monster that has been sunk within a few years, is, even pecuniarily, a very serious loss. There seem to be doubts whether the ship, or any of her heavier stores can be recovered, so that some £350,000 of the national property lies at the bottom of the Irish Sea. This is not pleasant. However, there is a very fine old saying, "'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody any good." We may extract a few scraps of consolation from this untoward event. Firstly, there was no loss of life, owing to the admirable discipline of the Vanguard's crew. They fell in at the word of command, and waited patiently till they were told off to the several boats ready to convey them on board the Iron Duke. There was not the slightest confusion, and twenty minutes sufficed to place them all in safety, Captain Dawkins being the last to quit his ship. Then it is satisfactory to learn that these costly war ships of ours are so formidable, only we hope they will not go on proving their capabilities at the expense of other of our marine monsters. The ram with which the Iron Duke was armed proved only too effective a weapon, and we can easily picture to ourselves what would have been the result had the monster charged at full steam into some unfortunate enemy. A very gallant action is reported in connection with the accident. When the ram struck the Vanguard an artificer, at the imminent risk of his life, ran down into the engine-room and let off the steam, thus preventing a terrible explosion, and in all probability the loss of every life on board. Bravissimo, artificer!

Great was the slaughter of partridges on the First, at least in some districts, and having regard to the general scarcity of birds; for in many places the number was below the average, owing to the heavy rains with which we have been visited this season. In Surrey two guns bagged 17½ brace before luncheon, in the neighbourhood of Reigate. Sport good in Sussex, about Horsham, but birds weak. From Knockholt and thereabout in Kent, coveys small, birds thin and ill-matured. In Norfolk the supply is said to be up to the average. From Worcester heavy bags are said to be somewhat rare, while from Perth we hear of good sport, the prospects on the whole being very encouraging.

The Session of the British Association at Bristol appears to be a very successful one. Among the more interesting papers was one read by Mrs. Crawshay, in Section F, Economic Sciences and Statistics, and doubtless this will give rise to a lively, and at this, the silly season of the year, prolonged discussion. The subject was the employment of poor gentlewomen in reduced circumstances, and the proposition made by Mrs. Crawshay was the adoption of lady-helpers as upper servants. In order to carry out her plan, it is suggested that the services of footmen should be dispensed with. We can hardly gauge public feeling as yet. Already there have appeared in the Standard and elsewhere several letters on the subject both pro and con. On Saturday, a most admirable lecture was delivered by Dr. Carpenter, in Colston Hall, in the presence of an audience, composed almost entirely of working men, to the number of nearly 3,000. The subject was "A piece of limestone," and the lecture, which occupied some two hours in delivering, was accompanied by a series of most interesting lime-light illustrations, both of the tiny animals supposed to have formed the various limestone strata and of the fossil remains and shells found from time to time in the stone. The lecture was a great success, and Dr. Carpenter was very loudly applauded.

The gallant Captain Webb bears his honours meekly. On Saturday he visited his home, at Ironbridge, and the inhabitants turned out en masse to receive him. There was, of course, the inevitable address, to which, as is his custom, he replied very briefly, and then drove home, amid the applause of those who had assembled to meet him. By the way, a friend of ours, who is evidently en route for Colney Hatch, has submitted the following for our edification. We trust our readers will not suffer very seriously after reading it. "Mrs. B., who is enthusiastic about all matters athletic, to her husband: 'I knew that duck of a Captain Webb, would swim the Channel.' Husband: 'Why, my dear?' Mrs. B.: 'Why he is so perfectly web-footed.'" Another swimming feat has been accomplished, this time by a young lady, Miss Beckwith, the daughter of the well-known Professor Beckwith. Miss Beckwith swam from London Bridge to Greenwich, a distance of some five miles, and was so little affected by her exertions, that just before landing she went through a few gymnastic exercises. She was accompanied by a steamer, and her father and brother in a small boat, the latter all ready to render aid to his sister if necessary.

We have just heard of the latest marvel in printing—a Bible issued by the Oxford University Press, a perfect model of printing, and said to be the smallest ever produced. It measures 4½ by 2¾ and ¾ inches, is printed on a very thin but tough India paper, and when bound in limp Morocco leather weighs less than 3½ ounces, so that it can be sent by post for a penny.

The Alexandra Palace has had two highly successful gatherings of late. On Saturday was the half-holiday fête, and a special and most effective programme was set forth for the amusement of the thousands of visitors who betook themselves to this very popular place of resort. A few showers fell, and made the outdoor amusements somewhat less attractive, but inside the Palace there was one continued round of amusements, so that those must have been hard indeed to please who did not manage to enjoy themselves. Among the most attractive performances were that of La Fille de Madame Angot, by the Opera Comique Company, the organ recitals of Mr. Archer, and the evening promenade concert, with Jullien's popular British Army Quadrilles. On Tuesday, a fête was organised for the purpose of promoting that most admirable institution, the City and Metropolitan Police Orphanage, established in the year 1870. The leaders in the movement were Superintendent Mott and others of the superior officers of the force, and if bright genial summer weather, an admirable programme, and the presence of some 40,000 visitors, are to be looked upon as a criterion of the measure of success attained, we quite believe the Police Fête for 1875, at the Alexandra Palace, will rank among the most signal achievements of the year. The arrangements included Athletic sports, assaults of arms, a balloon ascent, dancing, swinging, fencing, wrestling, and music, the bands of all the divisions being present. These took place in the grounds. Inside the Palace the chief attraction was the concert, so ably conducted by Mr. Weist Hill, which included a selection of pieces from the most eminent composers, among them Beethoven and Donizetti. Of course there was a grand organic performance by Mr. Archer, and the day concluded with an illumination of the grounds. We trust the funds of the Orphanage have been materially benefited. It is only just to add that Sir Edward Lee and his able staff of assistants were indefatigable in their efforts to make the day a complete success.

This being the season for accidents as well as excursions, it is not surprising to hear every now and then of a break-down, attended with more or less loss of life and damage to limb and property. An excursion train on the Midland Railway has met with a terrible accident, having been run into by the Scotch express, at Kildwick, a station some sixteen miles north of Bradford. The result is that some five or six lives have been sacrificed, while about forty people have received injuries more or less serious. A Board of Trade inquiry stands adjourned sine die, but Capt. Tyler, of the Railway Department, will give timely information to the officials if any further information is needed.

There is news not exactly from the Pole, but from the Arctic Expedition, dated Disco, 15th July 1875. The voyage out had not been marked by any unusual incident. There had been some dirty weather, and both the Alert and Discovery had lost a whale-boat. The health of the Expedition is reported to be excellent, and the enthusiasm very great. As regards the supply of dogs, twenty-five have already been received at Disco, twenty more will be ready at Ritenbenk, and the rest will be taken aboard at Uppernivik. The services of an Esquimaux have been engaged at the first of these three places, and Captain Nares expresses a hope that Hans, who was in the Polaris with Captain Hall, may be willing to join. The Valorous, which accompanied the ships, reached Plymouth Sound on Sunday afternoon, when the mails and parcels from the Alert and Discovery were at once dispatched. The Valorous does not appear to have had a very pleasant time of it on her return home.

Cricket is still in favour, but when we read of a sixth match between North and South in the same season it is clear the end is at hand. It has come, indeed, to all intents and purposes, and, save a few scratch and school matches, we shall have nothing further to record this year. The matches that have been recently played have been the following:—The Return between Surrey and Gloucestershire ended in the single innings defeat of the former, with 84 runs to spare. Surrey made 181 and 104, Elliott, Swann, Pooley and Humphrey being the chief contributors, while the principal feature of the Gloucestershire performance was the not out innings of 180, Mr. W. G. Grace (21), Dr. E. M. Grace (28), Mr. F. Townsend (42), and Mr. Monkland (58), being the double figures. Yorkshire defeated Notts in the return match, making 49 and 183, while the latter totalled 87 and 58. So far as the sixth North and South has been played, eight wickets of the latter have fallen for 88, Mr. W. G. Grace with 29, and R. Humphrey not out 24, being the only double figures thus far. Soon we shall be reading of football, of the scrummages, the hots, the punts out, touches down, &c.—terms so familiar to the experienced. But should any of our readers be in any way anxious to learn their meaning, with a view to taking part in some friendly contest, we recommend them to study Mr. Alcock's useful little Football Annual for the current year. There they will find all the information they need, indeed, everything they can possibly wish to know about the game, its rules, and the clubs that exist throughout the country. As regards the other sports, yachting is coming to a close for this season, and we shall soon have the last of the South Coast Regattas. People, indeed, are beginning to think of resuming work—all save our legislators and fashionables, who have hardly yet got into the swing of their pleasure. This month, too, the London theatres will be waking up after their brief rest from labour. Meantime, the Promenade Concerts, with the companies that play in London at this period of the year, are doing their best to enliven us, and the former, especially, nightly draw crowded houses. Signor Arditi fully deserves the patronage of the British for the very admirable programme he arranges both on the classical and other nights, while his orchestra back him up most enthusiastically with all the skill they can command.

One of the leading events of the year at Sheffield is the Cutlers' Feast, and the meeting was a more than usually brilliant one on Thursday, when Mr. Alderman Tozer was installed Master for the ensuing year. Among the guests present to do honour to the occasion were the Duke of Norfolk, Lord Wharncliffe, Mr. Mark Firth, Mayor of Sheffield, whose gift of a park was the occasion of the recent visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and Mr. Roebuck, the old and tried representative of the town. The usual toasts were proposed and cordially acknowledged, the speech of the evening being that of Mr. Roebuck, who spoke with his usual strong common sense, a quality which his constituents and the guests at this feast seem readily to acknowledge, but which does not always experience the same fate at other times and in other places. One of the points on which he enlarged, and, as we think, most successfully, was the excellent effect produced by the visit of their Royal Highnesses. We feel that we can heartily endorse all that Mr. Roebuck said so eloquently on this subject, and the honourable gentleman himself deserves infinite credit for having been, as he tells us he was, the instrument for securing so splendid an interchange of kindly and good wishes between Royalty and what has always been considered a stronghold of Radicalism.

The news from the Continent is more reassuring, but the embers of general disturbance are not yet utterly stamped out. There is, happily, a determination on the part of the three great Eastern powers, to stop any action on the part of Servia and Montenegro. They proclaim they will have no attack on Turkey. Quite right too. A parcel of marauding ruffians set about burning, rifling, and destroying all they can lay their hands upon, and thus expect to obtain the sympathies of Asiatic Europe with their lawless conduct. All this is done, of course, on the ground of nationality or religious liberty. We wonder Turkey, like other countries, is not left to settle with its own revolted subjects. Germany has been in the full tide of celebrating the victory of Sedan. The rejoicings are only natural, but we wish they had been in honour of some less desperate struggle than the recent contest between Germany and France. There is no question that the Alphonsist troops have made considerable progress latterly. We hope the pacification of Spain may be not so very distant, but we confess that, at present, we see no beginning of the end. There is little else to record, except that there have been some financial difficulties in California. It is satisfactory, however, to learn that confidence is returning.

Bro. J. R. Mayo, 46 Devonshire-square, Bishopsgate, is a candidate for the Vacant Gown in the Court of Common Council caused by the decease of the late Mr. Heeps. This Ward is the most populous in the City of London, and numbers 1,182 voters.

We would beg to call the attention of our brethren to the Historical Picture of the Installation, the advertisement of which appears in another page. The artist is, we are informed, now in Paris, arranging respecting the engraving of it, and it is receiving the patronage of nearly all the Grand Officers and distinguished Masons. The M.W. Grand Master having carefully inspected it, has specially sanctioned its dedication to himself. This we regard as a guarantee that it is what it is represented to be, namely: a faithful record of an event unparalleled in Masonic history.

An extraordinary feat was performed, by Geo. Boden, aged 15, on a bicycle; he started from London at half-past eight on Monday morning, and arrived in Brighton, at the Aquarium Hotel, Bro. M. Van Diepenheim's, at a quarter to two o'clock, accomplishing the feat with perfect ease. He had previously done 1 mile in 3 minutes and 25 seconds at the Kennington Oval.

The Vezin-Chippendale Company have been playing "The School for Scandal," "As you Like it," and "She Stoops to Conquer," at the Theatre Royal—Bro. Nye Chart's establishment—Brighton.

A great Masonic Conference is announced to take place at Lausanne next month. Delegates from every Grand Lodge in the world are expected. It seems that there is a dreadful schism among Swiss Masons. Until a few years back they lived in Republican style, without a Grand Lodge. A Supreme Council decided questions that arose. Just before the war it was resolved to make a Swiss Grand Lodge, and the members of the Council cheerfully resigned their office. When the great war broke out, this new body, speaking for the Masons of Switzerland, protested against it. By this act, they gave umbrage to their Prussian brothers, who declared the protest an insult. Seeing that the war had been forced upon their country, an apology was demanded, and the Grand Lodge granted it. There were, however, many dissentients, headed by the members of the defunct Supreme Council. The breach has grown wider, and at this moment there is a talk of a secession. Peace makers have applied to all the first authorities of the Universe, and out of this dissension has sprung the idea of a Conference. The last was held in 1819. French Masons have taken the leading part in arranging this great ceremony. I hear no particular mention of English or American delegates, who, indeed, if all tales be true, would find themselves in an atmosphere quite strange amongst the Orients and the professors of the Scotch rite so-called.

Bro. Sir John Bennett has been commissioned to manufacture the Gold Chain and Badge for Mr. Deputy Breffit, Sheriff elect, who has appointed Bro. H. H. Crawford (of the firm of Chorley and Crawford, 48 Moorgate-street) to be his Under-Sheriff; and his Chaplain, Rev. R. H. Atherton, Chaplain to the Coopers' Company's Schools, St. James Vicarage, Ratcliffe. Bro. Alderman Knight (No. 1 Grand Master's Lodge) has appointed, as his Under-Sheriff, E. A. Baylis, Esq. (of the firm of Baylis, Baylis and Pearce), and his Chaplain, the Rev. C. C. Collins, Vicar of St. Mary-the-Virgin, Aldermanbury. The Badge and Chain will be supplied by Messrs. Alderman Carter & Son, of Cornhill.

MONEY MARKET AND CITY NEWS.

The Bank's financial half-year expired on the 31st ult., and the "Rest" in the return just published amounts to £3,680,640. It is understood, therefore, that a dividend of 4½ per cent. for the six months will be declared at the forthcoming meeting of the proprietors, leaving the "Rest" standing at about £3,025,000. The last dividend was also 4½ per cent., but that at the corresponding period of last year was 5.

At the meeting, on Wednesday, of the proprietors of the Anglo-Californian Bank Limited, the directors' report, which announced a dividend of 9 per cent. for the year, was agreed to. The Chairman, the Hon. Hugh M'Culloch, stated that the panic in San Francisco had now ceased, and there were no indications of any further unsettlement. A considerable number of the bills of the Bank of California were on their way to London, but the bank was not interested in these bills. The managers in America were the holders of some acceptances of the Bank of California, the drawers of which were said to be firms of great respectability, and who were considered entirely responsible for the amounts for which they were respectively liable. Mr. M'Culloch added that he attributed the panic in California to undue speculations in mining.

The directors of the Credit Foncier of England Limited, have made a call of £2 10s per share on the 100,000 new shares of £5 each, payable by two instalments, viz., £1 per share on the 14th inst., and £1 10s on the 14th October. The directors mention that in the present state of public credit they feel themselves compelled to make this call in order to carry on the business of the company without being so dependent on outside assistance as they have hitherto been. They would have been glad to avoid this course, but a due regard for the interests of the holders of both old and new shares has, under existing circumstances, left them no alternative. Upon the payment of this call the paid-up capital of the undertaking will amount to £1,500,000, but a large portion of this sum is invested in unmarketable securities. At the half-yearly meeting of the company on the 11th ult. it was resolved to carry forward the balance £52,901 at the credit of profit and loss, chiefly on the ground that some of the securities held had considerably declined in value.

The report of the Sambre and Meuse Railway Company, to be presented at the half-yearly meeting, states that the account for the year 1874 received from the Grand Central Company shows that the Sambre and Meuse Company is entitled to a surplus over the fixed rental. This account, however, has not yet been settled, as the directors consider that this company is entitled to a further proportion of the excess receipts. They therefore now propose to declare the usual dividend of 4s only on the ordinary shares, subject to the resolutions being approved of at the meeting to be held in Brussels on the 14th of September next.

The directors of the San Paulo (Brazilian) Railway Company Limited have resolved to pay a dividend on the share capital of the undertaking for the half-year ended 30th June last at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, which, with that paid in April, makes 9½ per cent. for the year, carrying forward £18,353 to the reserve fund.

At a meeting, on Tuesday, of the General Steam Navigation Company, a dividend of 15s per share was declared for the six months, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum; and at a meeting of the South Essex Waterworks Company an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

At the meeting, on Tuesday, of the India Rubber, Gutta Percha, and Telegraph Works Company Limited, the directors' report, which stated that the net profit for the half year was about £21,500, subject to the audit of the accounts for the whole year, was agreed to.

The report of Price's Patent Candle Company Limited, to be presented to the meeting on the 7th of October, shows a balance in hand of £21,925, against £10,702 at the corresponding period of last year. This sum is rather more than sufficient for payment of a dividend of 10s a share on the ordinary shares, in addition to the preference dividend; but as the company has not been in a position to pay an October dividend since 1863, and the subsequent discontinuance of such a dividend if now resumed would be injurious to the interests of the shareholders, the directors unanimously consider it best to carry forward to next half-year the £20,870 1s 4d which will remain in hand after paying the dividend on the preference shares.

At the general meeting of Hay's Patent Waterproof Glue Company Limited, a dividend of 20 per cent. on the company's capital was declared for the half-year ending June last.

At a meeting of the directors of the Surrey Commercial Dock Company, held on Thursday, it was decided to recommend to the proprietors, at the general meeting to be held on the 9th inst., to declare a dividend of 2½ per cent. for the half-year, free of income tax.

The Great North of Scotland Railway dividend has been fixed at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, leaving £797 to be carried forward. The distribution at the corresponding period of last year was 1½.

OUR LODGES.

The Masonic Lodge is in its intention similar to a well-ordered home. It teaches that truth, honour, industry and harmony are four corner stones on which a temple can be raised. To preserve these corner stones from being marked, marred, scarred or bedaubed is the duty of every Mason, as it is the duty of all the children of a family to work in harmony together to make the family name an honourable one and the home always a pleasant one. The brother who lies, steals, demoralizes the workmen or debauches society, is not a good Mason. He is guilty of unmasonic conduct. It is the duty of the brother who notices these spots that may grow into blemishes, to quietly call the attention of the thoughtless Mason to obligations he took before the Great Light in the East. It is not his Masonic duty or privilege to call the thoughtless brother a liar, in public, or to harden his heart, but to speak kindly and frankly to him as he would be spoken to. It is no privilege of Masonry to correct a Mason before profane listeners—in the presence of men who might say—"Behold these brothers! See how they quarrel!" The brother who is humiliated in public has a Masonic right to call his tormentor before the Lodge to make answer why he thus corrected a brother publicly. There he can plead his case and justify himself if he can. The defendant can, in the Lodge, correct his brother, but not with lashes. The brother who without cause or provocation assaults a brother with fist, foot, weapon or tongue, is guilty of unmasonic conduct, and it is the duty of the Master of the Lodge to order the trespasser into Court, to give hearing and teach discipline, exactly as a parent would correct his children when they do wrong. The true Mason will not wrong a brother. The Mason who is not true to his obligations comes under the ban of correction. The duty of the Master is to dress to the line.—Pomeroy's Democrat.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS,

Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, No. 27.—This Lodge of Instruction held its usual weekly meeting at Bro. Maidwell's, the Hercules, Leadenhall-street, E.C., on Thursday evening last, 2nd September, Bro. J. S. Fraser in the chair. Present—W. Fraser S.W., J. Calverley J.W., C. A. Grammer Hon. Sec., Parker S.D., Blackhall J.D., Horsley I.G., Bro. Crawley P.M. 174, Preceptor, and numerous other brethren. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of the last meeting were confirmed. The ceremony of Initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Burr acting as candidate. Bro. Crawley P.M. intimated to the brethren that through very pressing business he was compelled, reluctantly, to relinquish the important post of Preceptor to this Lodge of Instruction. It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that a cordial vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Crawley, for the very efficient, fraternal, and able manner in which he had carried on the onerous duties of Preceptor. Bro. Crawley returned thanks, and the Lodge was then closed in due form, and adjourned to next Thursday.

Commercial Chapter, No. 79.—This Chapter held its regular meeting on Friday, the 27th of August, at the Masonic Hall, 30 Hope-street, Glasgow. Present—Comps. Julius Brodé Z., J. Duthie 67 acting H., G. W. Wheeler Z. 73 acting J., J. Munro Scribe E., C. McKenzie 1st S., J. McLeish 2nd S., J. M. Oliver 3rd S., J. Jennings J. Visitors—Comps. Muller Z. 50, Wallace P.Z. 50, Wheeler Z. 73, J. McLeish H. 144, and John Campbell Z. 150. Business—Nomination of officers for the ensuing year, after which the 1st Principal proposed, and the Scribe E. seconded a motion, that Comps. Miller Z. of 50, and Wheeler Z. of 73, should be affiliated as Honorary Members for the services they had always rendered to the Chapter. This having been carried by acclamation, the two Companions took the oath de fidelas, and were proclaimed members of Chapter 79. The election of officers for the 23rd installation takes place on the 24th proximo.

Union and Crown Lodge, No. 103.—This Lodge held its regular monthly meeting on Monday, the 30th of August, at the Kilwinning Hall, Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Bros. A Muir Wright R.W.M., Bro. George Muir Deputy Master, J. Thomas S.W., J. Martin J.W., P.M. Bro. J. Bain P.G.B.B. Visitors—Bros. Arthur, Mother Kilwinning, No. 0, Wheeler 73, Adams 360, M'Innes 408, and several others. Business—The initiation of two gentlemen, which ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. Wright, the R.W.M., after which the Lodge was raised to the Fellow Craft degree. The R.W.M. having to leave, the chair was taken by Bro. J. Baw P.M., and Bro. G. Muir D.M. passed Bro. Duncan to the degree of Fellow Craft, after which the Lodge was closed in due form.

Lodge of Lights, No. 148, Warrington.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday evening last, at the Masonic Rooms. The W.M., Bro. Bowes P.M. P.Z. P. Prov. G. Reg., was supported by his officers, and a large number of members and visitors. After the minutes were read, Bros. Johnson, Peale and B. L. Pierpoint claimed preferment, and having sustained their claim, were entrusted. The Lodge was opened in the 2nd degree, when the three brethren were separately re-admitted, and passed by the W.M. The Lodge was then closed in the 2nd degree, when Dr. G. W. Joseph, who had been previously balloted for and unanimously accepted, was duly and solemnly initiated by the W.M. The working tools were presented by the J.W., Bro. Thomas Tunstall, and the charge was delivered by Bro. P. J. Edelsten, W.M. No. 1134. There being no further business, the Lodge was closed.

Provincial Grand Chapter of Lanarkshire.—This Chapter held its quarterly meeting on Friday the 27th August, at St. Mark's Hall, Buchanan-street. Present—Comps. W. W. Smith P.G.J., J. Miller Z. 50 acting P.G.Z., J. Duthie Z. 67 acting P.G.H., G. W. Wheeler Z. 73 acting P.G.J., J. Fraser P.G.S.N., J. Munro 79 Treasurer, J. Balfour P.Z. 73 1st P.G.S., J. Brodie Z. 79 acting 2nd P.G.S., G. Thallon Z. 119 acting P.G. 3rd S., G. McDonald P.G. Sword Bearer. Visitors—Comps. Wallace, J. McLeish, J. Lamb, J. Martin, and G. B. Adams. Business—Comp. W. W. Smith P.G.J. said he attended to apologise for the absence of Comp. F. A. Barrow, their respected Provincial Grand Superintendent, and as he had particular business to attend, he would leave Comp. J. Miller to preside. The P.G. Chapter was then opened in due form, the business, in the absence of the P.G. Superintendent, was only of a formal nature, but the Scribe was instructed to give notice that, at the next meeting, steps would be taken for the promotion of a Provincial Chapter of Instruction.

Commercial Lodge, No.—360.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Thursday, the 26th August, at their own Hall, 30 Hope-street, Glasgow. Present—Bros. John Munro R.W.M., J. Lamb Deputy Master, J. M. Oliver S.W., J. Brodé acting J.W., W. H. Bickerton Secretary. P.M. Julius Brodé. Business—Initiation of three gentlemen into the Order, and passing and raising of two brethren. Bro. Munro performing the work in his usual careful style.

Legiolium Lodge, No. 1542, Castleford.—On Monday the new Masonic Lodge, Legiolium, was duly consecrated by Brother T. W. Tew J.P. D.P.G.M. of the province of West Yorkshire, assisted by the brethen of the Provincial Grand Lodge, in the presence of a large number of the Craft. The Lodge is named after the ancient name of Castleford, where formerly stood the Roman camp, with which many historical facts of deep interest are connected. The Provincial Grand Lodge assembled at half past two, and were immediately joined by the other brethren. After the ceremony of consecration the first W.M. of the new Lodge (Brother W. W. Macvay) was installed by Brother C. Phillips, and having appointed his officers for the ensuing year, the brethren proceeded to the Parish Church. The prayers were intoned by Brother the Rev. A. W. Hamilton D.P.G.C., Vicar of Kimberworth. The lessons were read by Brother the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Savile, Rector of Methley. The sermon was preached by Brother the Rev. W. T. M. Sylvester, Rector of Castleford, and Chaplain to the new Lodge of Legiolium, from the text Ephesians vi. 10, "My brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might." Brother Dr. Spark presided at the organ. The services were exceedingly well rendered by the choir of the church, and were highly commended by Brother Dr. Spark. The offertory, amounting to £10 14s 9d will be given to the fund for providing a new organ for the Parish Church, now being built by Denman, of York, at the cost of £400. After divine service the brethen adjourned to the Co-operative Assembly Room, where a most able address was delivered by Brother T. W. Tew, who, at the request of Brother W. W. Macvay and the brethen, has kindly consented to have it printed. Amongst the brethen present were T. W. Tew J.P. D.P.G.M. of the province of West Yorkshire; Major Parker, Clitheroe; Pearson, Mayor of Pontefract; Addyman, Leeds; Cadman, Ackworth; Dr. Sparks, Leeds; Rev. J. Dunbar D.P.G.C. Pontefract; W. Wilkinson, Dewsbury; J. Simpson, Castleford; Kingston, Northampton; Captain France, Dewsbury; Robert Critchley J.P. P.G.T., Dewsbury; and Henry Smith P.G.S., Wakefield.

We insert the following report at the special request of a correspondent, who is a member of the Lodge. The meeting was held some time since, and our rule is to exclude all notices which do not reach us within a reasonable time. We offer every facility to correspondents and subscribers. We are quite willing, and shall be but too happy, to place our columns, within proper limits, at the disposal of our constitutents, but news ceases to be news when it refers to matters of ancient date. In the present case, the Lodge is a young one. The desire of its officers and members to do good yeoman service in the interests of our Order is so apparent that we feel we should have behaved churlishly had we not heeded the request of our correspondent. Thus, we meet his wishes readily, and with very great pleasure, but we trust, in future, our brethren will give timely notice when they wish anything inserted.

Prudence Lodge, No. 1550.—The first annual banquet of Prudence Lodge, No. 1550, was held, on 5th July, at Mrs. Chubb's Hotel, Old Town Street, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Robert Bird. This Lodge owes its existence mainly to the efforts of Bros. Bird, Gover and Rogers, who have long seen the necessity of a Lodge in which brethren who are engaged as commercial travellers should form the principal element. Their occupations are so migratory that, hitherto, it has only been at great inconvenience to themselves that they could attend existing Lodges, and their attendance was so uncertain that there was little hope of their ever reaching the W.M.'s chair—the ambition of all true Masons. But now they have a Lodge of their own; they can fix their meetings to suit their own convenience; they have there excellent principal officers, and the start which they have made augurs well for their future success. The banquet to which they sat down was an excellent one in every respect. The viands were all that could be desired, and the waiting—a great essential to a good dinner—was perfect. Amongst the brethren present were Bros. L. P. Metham D.P.G.M. and Past G.D. of England, Col. Elliott P.P.G.S.W.; I. Latimer P.G.J.W.; the Rev. W. Whittley Prov. G. Chaplain, and Chaplain of 1550; J. Aubrey Thomas P.G.S.D.; Vincent Bird P.P.G.T.; J. B. Gover P.P.G.S.; L. D. Westcott P.P.G.S. Works; R. B. Twose I.P.M. 105; C. Stribling P.M. 70; J. Manley I.P.M. 230; J. J. Avery W.M. 70; C. Cooper W.M. 105; F. Hall W.M. 156; J. Rendle W.M. 1247; C. Godschalk W.M. 1256; J. Y. Avery S.W. 1550; J. P. Rogers J.W. 1550; N. B. Westcott S.D. 1550; J. G. Keverne J.D. 1550; W. Garland D.C. 1550; C. Philip A.D.C. 1550; F. Bond I.G. 1550; G. H. Emery Organist 1550; H. W. Thomas S.W. 70; A. S. Stuart, J. Arnold, A. Joyce, W. H. Blackmore, C. G. Smith, all of 1550; D. Box S.W. 156; E. Tarratt J.D. 70; C. Matten D.C. 1206; Gibbons J.D. 1205; E. Searle J.D. 1091; L. J. Webber 1247; E. Hart 1205. In proposing the health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England, the W.M. referred to the recent demonstration in London, and said every Mason must be proud of the high position which His Royal Highness occupied in the Order. The spectacle presented to them on that occasion, was one which he was quite sure would never be effaced from their memories, and the magnificence of the demonstration must have surprised even the Prince himself. He hoped His Royal Highness would be spared for many years to preside over the Grand Lodge of the Order. (Cheers and applause.) Bro. Twose I P.M. gave the next toast, "The Prov. G.M., the D.P.G.M., and the Prov. Grand Officers of Devon." As Masons they were all acquainted with the qualities of those distinguished brethren. The Pro. Grand Master was well versed in Masonry,; he lived a truly Masonic life; in him they had a father, in him they had a pattern to all Christain men, whether inside or outside Masonry—(hear, hear)—his social qualities were known and appreciated by all, and he was beloved by rich and poor. (Applause.) Bro. Metham's earnest endeavours in the cause of charity were very well known: he was associated heart and soul with Masonry, and his life was mixed up with it. He always met his brethren with the same kind, genial face which he wore that day, and which he trusted was the precursor of many a happy meeting to come. (Applause.) Of the other Provincial officers he could only say that they always bore there honours well. Brother Metham who, on rising, was received with great cordiality, said he could only speak of Brother Huyshe as one man could speak of another who was his nearest friend in life, and he would do anything to serve him. (Hear, hear.) He was everything that Brother Twose had described him, and a great deal more. For himself he could truly say that he had never made an excuse which was not a valid one, for avoiding any Masonic gathering to which he had been invited. While he filled his present position he would do his work thoroughly or avoid it altogether. Before he sat down he would ask them to join him in drinking the health of their W.M., Bro. Bird. (Applause.) He congratulated them upon having started their new Lodge under such excellent auspices. As they had made Bro. Bird their first Worshipful Master, he had no doubt that they had every confidence in him. (Hear, hear.) At present the Lodge was an unwritten sheet of paper. It had its history to make, and the W.M. could have no excuse for treading in the faults of those who had gone before him. He had to mark out a path for himself, and in creating that path he (Bro. Metham) hoped that he would be more than usually careful that he did not deviate either to the right or to the left, because in so doing he would make a track in which others might be induced to follow. He felt great anxiety for the Lodge, because if the W.M. made mistakes it would be an excuse for others to do the same, but if he set them a good example there would be less excuse for others to go wrong. The Lodge had assumed a very ambitious name indeed, and he hoped that prudence would direct them, temperence chasten them, fortitude support them, and justice be the guide of all their actions. (Applause.) Bro. Bird responded in an excellent speech, in the course of which he said:—"As founder of Prudence Lodge, I am very gratified at the success which has attended my efforts in founding this Lodge, but I need hardly tell you how ably, readily, and successfully I have been assisted by many I see around me, especially Bros. Rogers, Gover and Avery. (Hear, hear.) I am confident we should not have succeeded so well; I might almost say we should not have succeeded at all, without the assistance of Bro. Gover. He stood by us and firmly did what I believe he felt to be his duty, and perhaps to some extent it was, for we were in a difficulty, and as one Mason should do unto another, he gave his assistance and steered us through all the intricate passages and windings that lay in our course, and finally placed us in the proud position we occupy to-day. (Applause.) The Lodge owes him a debt of gratitude which cannot easily be paid. He has been our consulting counsel, and I venture to think that in him we made a wise selection. Our case was safer in his hands than if we had several engaged in it; what he did was done willingly and with a true Masonic feeling—that feeling which should be always exhibited by Masons. (Hear, hear.) I regret to say we received great opposition when we were seeking to obtain the warrant for this Lodge. Numerous objections were raised, but we were only stimulated by this determined opposition to renew our efforts; we felt we were right, and you know if you believe a thing to be impossible, your own despondency is capable of rendering it so—(hear, hear)—but he who hopefully perseveres in a just cause, will ultimately overcome all difficulties. (Applause.) There are those in this part of the province, I am told, who think nothing can succeed in Masonry here unless they are in the front rank, but I trust our success will tend to remove such an erroneous impression from their minds and that they will remember that brotherly love teaches us to regard the whole human species as of one family, all being created by the same Almighty parent, and sent into the world for the mutual aid, support, and protection of each other. Freemasonry unites men of every country, sect, and opinion, and thereby cultivates a true and sincere friendship among those who may have otherwise remained estranged from each other. Let us in Lodge Prudence endeavour to show our Masonic brethren and those of the outer world, that we live and act in accordance with the principles and tenets of Freemasonry; let us never forget those great moral virtues—'Faith, Hope, and Charity'—Faith is the foundation of justice, the bond of amity, and the chief support of civil society. We live and walk by Faith, by it we have a Hope in the existence of a Supreme Being. By acting according to our profession we shall receive the reward promised to the faithful. Charity is one of the brightest gems that adorns Masonry. It has the approbation of Heaven and Earth,

'And, like its sister, Mercy, is twice blessed,
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes.'

Benevolence, attended by charity, is an honour to the country from whence it springs and by whom it was nourished and cherished. Happy is the man who has the seeds of benevolence sown in his breast. He envieth not his neighbour; he believeth not a tale when told by a slanderer; malice and revenge having no place in his breast, he willingly forgives the injuries he has received, and endeavours to blot them from his recollection. Let us remember we are brethren, ever ready to listen to him who might crave our assistance, or who is in want. Let us not withold a liberal hand. So shall a heartfelt satisfaction reward our labours, and the produce of love and charity will assuredly follow. Let a firm reliance in the Almighty's faithfulness animate our endeavours, and teach us to fix our desires within the limits of His most blessed promises. So shall success attend us, and may unity, peace and plenty abound among Masons until time shall be no more." Bro. Col. Elliott next proposed "The Senior and Junior Wardens of Lodge 1550;" and Bros. Avery and Rogers suitably responded. Bro. I. Latimer gave "The Treasurer and Secretary of Prudence Lodge," and remarked that he most heartily concurred in all that had been said about Lodge Prudence. He was very glad to do all in his power to promote its formation, because with the number of brethren they had who were engaged in employment which kept them very much away from the town, and who therefore could not work in other Lodges with any convenience to themselves; with such a large population as they had in the three towns, and with so numerous a Masonic community, he was convinced that the formation of such a Lodge was very desirable. He had a great esteem both for Bro. Gover and Bro. Avery, and was sure they would do all in their power to make the Lodge one of the foremost Lodges in the Province. (Applause.) Bros. J. J. Avery and Gover suitably acknowledged the compliment. Bro. H. W. Thomas proposed "The Senior and Junior Deacons and Assistant Officers of 1550," and Bros. Westcott, Kaverne, Bond, Garland, Philp, and Emery, returned thanks. The W.M. gave, in complimentary terms, "The Sister Lodges and Visiting Brethren," and Bros. Cooper and Mutten responded. The other toasts were, "The Newly Initiated Brethren, Bros. Smith and Blackmore," "Our Wives and Sweethearts," responded to by the W. Bro. Aubrey Thomas, and "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren." The various toasts were interspersed with songs, instrumental music, and recitations, under the direction of Bros. Emery and Gibbens, and joined in by Bros. Col. Elliott, J. Rendle, C. Mutten, Twose, H. W. Thomas, J. Y. Avery, and E. Hart. The latter acted very efficiently as toast master.

ATTWOOD OF THE THOUSAND POUND CHEQUES.—A relative of the late Benjamin Attwood asks us to correct an error in the statements that went the round of the newspapers after the death of this millionaire. He was not a bachelor, but a married man, without family, and long a widower. He adopted a niece, and brought her up from childhood. She lived under his roof till she married—without the consent of her uncle, who never forgave the offence, and never was reconciled to her. The lady and her husband now live near London, respected not less in the lack of the lost fortune. With regard to Mr. Attwood's life we have received some particulars, of which the following may be of general interest. He was a member of the well-known banking family of Attwood, but not personally connected with the Bank at Birmingham. He amassed a fortune as a glass merchant, having an office in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, London, where the Royal Hotel now stands. He was also largely interested in the General Steam Navigation Company, and frequently went voyages in their vessels. Upon one occasion he visited the late Emperor Napoleon in Paris. He lived for many years of his life in the Grove End Road, St. John's Wood. He was a Fellow of the Zoological Society, and also of the Royal Botanical Society, which in its earlier years he aided by his purse and efforts. He was always ready to help any local charities, invariably requiring that his name should not be published. He usually attended a Baptist Chapel in that neighbourhood. Probably his great wealth was not known or suspected, or the demands upon him would have been heavy and unceasing. His wife, who died in 1853, was a large-hearted, generous woman, and had probably much influence in the disposition of his means. In his later years he gave his donations almost entirely through his bankers, and the secret of the much-discussed cheques was well sustained. We are assured, however, that the total said to have been given has been greatly exaggerated. In recording the large and generous gifts of Mr. Attwood, it is right to mention that surprise has been felt that he did nothing to relieve the dire distress caused by the failure of the Attwood Bank of Birmingham. It is true there was no legal claim, nor even any moral claim, yet it might have been in good taste and right feeling to have helped in such a calamity. An unusual proportion of the depositors were people in middle and humble life, and some aid to them would have been well-bestowed and generous charity. Other members of the Attwood family were applied to and refused to assist. Benjamin was not asked, so far as we have heard, but he must have been well aware of the circumstances of that ruinous affair.—Leisure Hour.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain :—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and incites specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its valuable dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

NEARLY THREE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

GENIALITY.

AKIN to that good fellowship of which we wrote last week, or perhaps we should say a prime element in its composition, is geniality, and the duties of Masonry necessitate a considerable leaven of this admirable quality. Softness of disposition—by which we do not mean weakness or any lack of intellectual vigour, but gentleness merely—is a necessary property of the genial man. Emollience, in the sense implied in the old familiar line, Emollit mores nec sinit esse feros, would best convey our meaning, but it savours somewhat of certain advertised soaps, and sounds pedantic withal. The evenness of temperament which is understood by contentedness is indispensable. The man who is dissatisfied with his position or prospects—we by no means imply that he should be hopeless of better things—such a man hardly comes up to our idea of a genial man. We call him genial who is gentle, contented, happily disposed towards his fellows, not unduly shy or reserved, for that implies a degree of coldness, and geniality and coldness run not together in the same channel; who, while not ignoring the dark side of things, is readier to acknowledge the silver lining, be it never so small, which philosophers tell us even the darkest clouds are furnished with; who can sympathise with the unfortunate, and cheer them in their efforts to make good their losses, who is both moral and religious, that is, respectfully observant of human and divine ordinances. The man who is, or strives to become, all this we are justified in regarding as the model of geniality. There is, however, a more modified form of this virtue with which our readers are more familiar, for the picture we have drawn of the genial man is what the Americans would call a "tall" ideal, not easily attainable by even the best of men. We mean the man who is all smiles and good wishes for every one he meets, who is a companionable fellow, one with whom you feel at home the moment you see him, who is the heart and soul of every entertainment, and always to the fore when some kind action is on the carpet. The rule of conduct he invariably follows, both at home and abroad, is known of all men as the suaviter in modo. He is easy and frank always, yet a man of resource and of ready wit, whom few contretemps are likely to ruffle. He goes through life thinking no evil. Being a man of the world, he knows well enough there are evil thinkers and evil doers—he dreads to think how many. Such as are incorrigible he avoids; while others with whom he is brought in contact he shames into good behaviour by the very force of his geniality. Such a man makes a good chairman at a banquet. He is the heart and soul of the meeting, and infects all with his lively humour. He is geniality in himself, and the source of geniality in others. Such a man is a tower of strength in the conduct of all charitable work. Who shall resist his happy pleadings for the worthy objects of our charity? We assume, and rightly too, that no unworthy object will meet with even the slightest degree of help from him. He will charitably abstain from all active opposition, though he will not support what is unworthy of support. Then the genial man is a good W.M., during whose reign the petty carpings of our weaker nature find no outlet for expression. With a genial Master to rule and direct it, the harmony of a Lodge runs no risk of being disturbed. Differences of opinion are likely enough to occur, nay inevitable, perhaps, but they involve no bitterness in the settlement. Again, the genial is a firm man as well as a kind and gentle. He is alive to the responsibilities of his office, and is fully resolved to brook no invasion of his right. He wields his sceptre gently yet resolutely. He disarms opposition by his very gentleness. He is an effective ruler, for obedience to his sway is no hardship, involves no sense of inferiority, no loss of self-respect. We respect the man of eminent abilities, of great attainments, of commanding genius; but the genial man we love, and love is of the very essence of Masonry. How often do we meet with men for whom we feel the deepest and sincerest respect, whose intimate acquaintance, however, we have no desire to cultivate. Old Cantanker, for instance, is not a bad fellow really. There is a splendid array of kindly actions set down to his credit. Most of these have been done by stealth, as though doing good were, in his sight, a vice. Many a distressed fellow being has he relieved, many an institution is indebted to him for liberal support, but men fight shy of him, for he has contracted the unpleasant habit of cultivating unpleasant thoughts, and worse still of giving expression to them when in the company of his fellows. His rough personalities, his invariable objection, "on principle," to any proposition that is made, his habit of grumbling, all these neutralise the effect of what good he does, and people go about saying, "Cantanker has some admirable qualities in him, but his presence in the social circle is unendurable." Then there is Cold Shoulder. Many a time and oft has he done a good turn to some well-deserving fellow. But there is no bearing his society, his very appearance is enough to freeze all the kindlier feelings of our nature. Nor is Shy Boots perceptibly more sociable. He is so uncomfortable, so painfully reserved, with never a word to say for himself, never a smile of hearty greeting, that we feel he is worse even than a wet blanket. We wonder of what use such men are in society, who seem incapable of helping either themselves or others. Yet Shy Boots has some excellent points about him. He, too, has given freely of his substance, and is written down as governor or patron of half-a-dozen, or it may be half-a-score, of institutions. There is the Shy Boots scholarship for the encouragement of political economy, and the Shy Boots exhibition for the highest proficiency in modern languages or modern history. All these are ordinary types of men whom we meet and associate with, under protest, of course, everywhere and every day of our lives. We know the good that is hid behind a most unprepossessing exterior. We respect that good, but we cultivate not the society of its owner, or at least we do so as little as possible, and then with a sort of mental protest, as we have said, against its being taken as a precedent to bind us in our future relations with him. To show the influence of geniality, a man has only to assume the outward and visible signs of it; let him talk kindly, be ready to fall in with even the slightest of our wishes, plunge into any conceivable business merely to oblige, and at once his shortcomings are overlooked and his peccadilloes forgiven. How popular he is. How every one sings his praises. What hosts of friends he makes, and, being worldly wise, what famous services he extracts from them. Some one at length discovers that the geniality was merely a cloak, under cover of which the fellow pursued his own selfish ends with earnest vigour, and, invariably, with success. Old Cantanker and the others had many excellent qualities about them, but they hid them from the world, and assumed or gave rein to a roughness of disposition which, in spite of their virtues, brought them unpopularity. The vicious man looked pleasant, while the virtuous seemed disagreeable, and the world, in the face of the old adage, "Nimium ne crede colori," was influenced by externals only. There is nothing very remarkable in what we have just said. We have adduced it only as evidence of the force of geniality, and we ask, if the semblably genial man exerts so great an influence and becomes popular, why should we not exert ourselves always to be genial? Why should our worthy friend Cantanker be always busy with his objections and innendoes? Why, being a good fellow at bottom, should he not be so outwardly as well? Why does he not strive to cultivate the suaviter in modo? The trouble he takes to make himself disagreeable would suffice to make him endurable in every society of men he might find himself in. Why be so frigid, Mr. Cold Shoulder? Why so reserved, Mr. Shy Boots? The average run of men are not ranging about for the purpose of destroying you. They have no evil designs on your property. In whatever circle we move, we endeavour to pass life as agreeably as we can. Even where the disagreeables predominate, a sensible man tries to make the best of it. We will not say it absolutely, but it occurs to us that crying involves more physical exertion than laughing. If it be so, this alone is a sufficient reason why we should court laughter rather than tears. Of the two ancient philosophers, Democritus, who laughed always, and Heraclitus, who was always weeping, we infinitely prefer the former as a companion, and as we have already hinted, the cultivation of pleasure is no more trouble than the cultivation of pain. But to point the moral of our remarks, we find some difficulty in picturing to ourselves an ungenial Mason, or even a semblably genial one. We meet in Lodge, firstly, for mutual instruction and the cultivation of virtue, and, in the next place, that we may learn to appreciate each other. This geniality, with the true ring in it, is requisite to make us good Masons. It is our duty, both in Lodge and out of Lodge, to speak well of all men, to treat them well, to be suave in manner, gentle in speech, willing to oblige, and contented with our lot. The man who fulfils this duty is a genial Mason. We need not go far afield for an unexampled illustration of geniality. The immortal Mr. Pickwick, in reading whose adventures we have spent so many happy hours, was nothing if not genial. He set out on his memorable travels in search of knowledge, and to do good to his fellow creatures. We do not call to mind a single instance in which he faltered from his purpose, or in which he failed of ultimate success. We will quote two extracts from the Papers of the Pickwick Club to prove the value of our statement. "'I shall never regret,' said Mr. Pickwick, in a low voice, 'I shall never regret having devoted the greater part of two years to mixing with different varieties and shades of human character, frivolous as my pursuit of novelty may have appeared to many. Nearly the whole of my previous life having been devoted to business and the pursuit of wealth, numerous scenes, of which I had no previous conception, have dawned upon me—I hope to the development of my mind and the improvement of my understanding. If I have done but little good, I trust I have done less harm, and that none of my adventures will be other than a source of amusing and pleasing recollection to me in the decline of life. God bless you all!'" And almost the closing lines of his history read thus:—"Mr. Pickwick is somewhat infirm now; but he retains all his juvenility of spirit, and may still be frequently seen contemplating the pictures in the Dulwich Gallery, or enjoying a walk about the pleasant neighbourhood on a fine day. He is known by all the poor people about, who never fail to take their hats off, as he passes, with great respect. The children idolise him, and so, indeed, does the whole neighbourhood Every year, he repairs to a large family merry-making at Mr. Wardle's; on this, as on other occasions, he is invariably attended by his faithful Sam, between whom and his master there exists a steady and reciprocal attachment which nothing but death can terminate." Surely Mr. Pickwick's was a good Masonic life, if not the life of a Mason. At all events, we shall have no cause to repent if we all imitate his chiefest virtue—geniality.

IV.

OUR domestic arrangements ended, we proceeded to examine in detail the surroundings of our claim, which gave great promise. We intended to work it in a similar way to that of Wai-kara-mumu, by digging a race about 300 feet long. This was preferable to the labour of carrying the soil to the creek and washing or cradling it, so we at once set to work. Maurice was fond of roving about prospecting after our day's work was over, and would sometimes return to the hut quite late. He more than once put me off with some pretence when I spoke of going with him. I thought this odd, and one moonlight evening determined to follow him up. His track was difficult; it led me to an open space overgrown with fern, through which great blocks of quartz cropped up at intervals. Beyond a copse bordering this open space rose a rocky ridge, which ascended and formed part of the rugged mountain range. On this ridge I found a pickaxe, which had been left on our claim, lying amid a pile of débris. Maurice sprang out of the shadows, and seeming rather confused, parried my enquiries; shouldering the pick, we marched home.

The next day our work came to a sudden stop, by our striking rock midway between the claim and the creek, with no possibility of evading it in our excavations. The matter became serious when we found the same to extend for some distance lightly covered with soil. Said Maurice, "We can't finish this without powder."

He seemed to have a good knowledge of the method of "blasting," and of finishing the race effectually, so that I relied on his experience. It was, therefore, arranged that I should go down to Tākaka to purchase powder. Having done this, I, one morning, started on my return, laden with an 8 lb. tin, fuzes, a piece of fresh beef and some small tools. This trip remains graven in my memory as one of the most annoying chapters of accident it has been my lot to experience.

I tried a short cut home by turning up a small canyon, which would strike "One Speck Gully" halfway, and save about three miles' detour. From the canyon diverged a creek which formed a confluence with that of "One Speck Gully" lower down. I found in this creek, to my surprise, a decayed dam (I heard afterwards that it had been constructed by the Germans we had seen at Miller's), in the inside of which the water was still deep, so that I was compelled to take to the bank. The soil on the bank was loose, and crumbling down a steep declivity; as I scrambled through it, ankle deep, I stumbled—and down fell the beef out of my swag, into six feet of water. I had to strip for a dive, depositing my burden, clothes and gold-belt* carefully in a hollow. I recovered the beef, but in struggling up the bank again, almost "tooth and nail," had the misfortune to clutch at my boots, which turned over and plunged into the gulf. I had to dive again to recover them, and pursued my way in rather a savage mood. I reached the hut at sundown, to be further chagrined at finding no fire, no supper and no Maurice. I supposed he was roaming as usual, and lighted the fire for tea and a broil. Tired and sleepy after supper, I turned into my blankets, having carefully suspended my boots over the fire to dry.

Surprised next morning to find that Maurice had not returned, I looked out, and was disgusted to see that the poles over the fire had given way, dropping my only pair of boots to perish. Maurice's swag was gone, but nothing else had been removed, and I was forced to the conviction that he had intentionally deserted. Remembering his nocturnal rambles and furtive manner, I suspected that even if our settlement had not been wholly and simply planned for his advantage, he had, since our arrival, made one of his specially lucky finds, and been unable to withstand the temptation.

I did not relish working on in solitude; the chance of getting a partner or a help was very remote, and yesterday's mishaps had rather sickened me, so I did not long ponder upon my position; I buried the powder, tools and effects inside the hut, and bidding a last adieu to "One Speck Gully" of evil omen, left it—a shoeless—though a wiser youth.

Over the boulders and shingle of the creek, through rough fern and tauhi bushes, along ridges covered with painful needle-grass, I reached Tākaka, with bleeding feet. There I found, encamped, a party of Maoris of the broken tribes of the Ngatitamma and Ngnatiraraa; they also were shoeless, but the contrast between their condition and my own made me ashamed of civilised effeminacy, and awakened the desire to become as hardy as they. I had at Miller's a supply of sketching materials, of which I had made good use at Wai-Karu-mumu, and, getting them, sketched a native group, in colours. They surrounded me with admiration, and a contract was at once made for me to stay at their village, near Motupipi, until I had produced satisfactory portraits of all their chiefs, at the rate of £2 a head. At Motupipi, whence a schooner traded every month to Nelson, my baggage had been deposited, and it suited me well for my next halting-place.

I remained some weeks in their village, living as they did, with the exception of sleeping out under an open shed; the atmosphere of their long low wharries being too overpowering, to say nothing of the fleas. Potatoes and shellfish were our staple diet. It was a new sensation to find about an hour and a half after a hearty meal, that in the absence of solid animal food, I felt as hungry as ever. I swam in the creeks, waded in the mud-flats and partook of their sports and labours in the bush (bee hunting, &c.), until I could run fast over a rough shingle beach without the least inconvenience. I made duplicates of the portraits that doubtless to this day decorate the walls of their meeting-house, and retain some now in my possession. My most critical task was the accurate delineation of a large old meri or war-club, of greenstone, which had a sacred character as tutelary genius, and was called "Kaikanohi." The convolutions of every vein in white, green or grey, had to be exactly measured and reproduced. They paid me in pigs and potatoes, which the settler at Motupipi exchanged for gold-dust. To the chief "Ritemon" or "Richmond" (named after a well known member of the General Assembly) I became much attached. He was, in every respect, one of the finest fellows I ever met. The physique of all of them was splendid, and their morale to match, those who had been born in slavery excepted. They were Protestants, provided with testaments and good books, and could read and write in Maori fluently. This spoke well for the Missionaries, but I feel assured that the gradual influx of a low order of whites around them, must have since undone the good work. I left them with the fixed conviction that, physically, intellectually and morally they were the superiors of the Europeans with whom they came in contact. Communication was carried on in mixed jargon of Maori and English, much resembling the Pidgin-English of the ports of China.

Sending my baggage to Nelson in the schooner, I preferred to walk thither overland; having most keen appreciation of the beauties of the scenery on the way and of New Zealand summer air in the month of February. Discarding for ever the digger's dress, I donned a new tweed tourist suit with civilised boots again, and substituted an Alpine knapsack for the unwieldy swag. I passed a night at Miller's, one at Sparrow's in the valley, one with my friend Dr. Cottrell at Motueka, one at the German village on the Moutere, and on the fifth day, after substantial luncheon at the regular English Inn at Waimea, found myself on the last stage of the road to Nelson.

Some distance in advance, was marching vigorously a fine figure dressed in black, with an unusual bellopper hat. Being a fast walker, in good health and training, I began speculating as to which of us could walk the faster. Spurred by the comparison, I overtook and passed him, but was soon mortified by being passed in my turn. Putting on a spurt I passed him again, with the same result; I again overtook him, and both of us seeming determined not to be beaten, we went striding on abreast. A smile and jocose remark were soon exchanged; which, upon his asking whence I came, led to a long conversation. Being full of facts about the Maoris and the diggings, I had plenty to say, and the remaining eight miles of our walk slipped by unheeded. Arrived at the town, and our ways diverging, the stranger wound up with "Do me the pleasure of dining with me to-morrow, any one will show you my house—the Bishop."

"So!" thought I, "here have I, fresh from a lot of Maoris and unseemly diggers, been talking for ever so long with unguarded tongue, to a live Bishop, whose conventional notions and orthodox views I may have shocked again and again without being aware of it. Truly a Bishop in the Colonies must stand upon a broader platform than those dignitaries in England! He doesn't even know my name!"

These reflections were cut short, upon passing the open gates of a livery-stable yard, where a crowd was attending an auction. I lingered to look on. A fine Australian roan, but unmistakable buck-jumper, was being put up; the remarks which passed about the beast were interspersed with talk of his late owner. "Poor fellow! Lucky in everything but that! Nothing else would please him, and he caught it too hot! Wonder where that large nugget he showed me came from?" and so on. The description which followed my enquiries informed me that I was gazing upon the property of Maurice, my late comrade, who had purchased it at this stable a month before, and been pitched off, with a broken neck, on his first ride.

Poor Maurice! My animosity was gone; I remembered only his good qualities; I was not certain he had meant to defraud me, and he had taken away nothing of mine. Then, though the illustration was mean and ridiculous, his was an example of the end of an empty ambition. The hobby he had cherished and brooded over which, perhaps, he had sacrificed me to realise, had brought him—death.

Next day I dined at the snug villa of my pedestrian acquaintance, and found it replete with all the comforts and elegancies which the presence of ladies and refinement can bestow. Though I fear I was too wild and headstrong to profit much by friendly advice, I hold ever in grateful remembrance the kind courtesy and genial welcome of Bishop Hobhouse.

WALTER SPENCER.

THE LODGE LES SAGES D'HELIOPOLIS.

WE are indebted to our esteemed Bro. Caubet for the following details in connection with this Lodge, as set forth by him in the August number of Le Monde Maçonnique. Les Sages d'Héliopolis, Orient of Bucharest (Roumania), under the jurisdiction of the Grand Orient of France, has been working for less than two years, yet the results are eminently satisfactory, and merit the very flattering commendations our worthy brother bestows upon it. During the year, from 1st March 1874 to 28th February 1875, the Lodge held sixty-five meetings; namely, forty-seven in the 1st degree, eight in the 2nd, seven in the 3rd, besides two Lodges of Emergency and a Funeral Lodge in memory of a deceased member, and of all deceased brethren in the two hemispheres. Eleven Lodges of Conference and Instruction were likewise held. The financial state of the Lodge shows the following excellent results. According to the Treasurer's account, the receipts, including a balance in hand on 1st March, amounted to Frs. 28,021·84; the expenditure for rent, furniture, &c., &c., being Frs. 21,454·12, leaving a balance in hand, on the 28th February 1875, of Frs. 6,567·72. The fund of Benevolence for the same period showed receipts Frs. 10,017·47, inclusive of Frs. 886·67, being the opening balance in hand for the year; expenditure Frs. 4,733·98; balance in hand and set apart for the school of arts and trades, which the Lodge proposes to establish, Frs. 5,283·49. The aggregate of these funds amounts to Frs. 38,039·31, and if to this be added the sum of Frs. 13,670·63, received for the broken period of the preceding year, there will be a total receipt of Frs. 51,709·91 for the year and some months during which the Lodge has been in full working. From these figures we find the pertinency of Bro. Ascher's remarks as quoted by Bro. Caubet. "In the presence of a will so firm, of sacrifices so eloquent, what may we not hope," asks Bro. Ascher, in his report, "from a mere handful of men, resolute, and entirely devoted to the public good? For myself, I have the full conviction that if we go on as we have begun, we shall do honour to the name of Roumania, and, at the same time, fulfil our duties as good Masons."

Our attention is next drawn to the services rendered by the Lodge during the period of its existence. The Sanitary Section, composed of medical men, members of the Lodge, has, in the course of the year, given gratuitous advice and medicines to 747 at the Lodge Dispensary, and to 113 at their own residences, besides placing in the city hospitals fourteen others, whose cases were of a graver character. Altogether, 874 persons have been the subjects of medical relief administered on behalf of the Lodge by this section. The names of all these, who were of all nationalities and creeds, are entered in the Sectional Register. The Legal Section, composed of lawyers, has rendered services equally important. Besides numerous consultations held gratuitously on the Lodge premises, and sundry cases conducted in open court, without fee, by legal brethren for various of the non-

Masonic world, who were too poor to obtain legal assistance, it was enabled to settle a very serious dispute between two Masons, strangers to the Lodge, by submitting the point at issue between them to a Board of Arbitration composed wholly of brethren. By this means, one of the interested parties was spared a considerable loss, and the other was preserved from dishonour. This section further conferred honour on our Order by supporting, in a very complicated commercial case, the legitimate claims of a brother's widow, who, without such powerful and completely disinterested support, might have been ruined. The Committee of Instruction has also been most actively employed, chiefly in obtaining the requisite funds for the establishment at Bucharest, of a School of Arts and Technical Education. Over and above the various sums collected for this purpose at every Lodge Meeting, and at the residences of the members; a brilliant theatrical representation was arranged under the committee's auspices, the result being a net profit of 2,785 frcs. The capital specially set apart for this project already amounts to close on 6,000 frcs., and the Lodge, in the course of its labours, is hopeful of success. We cannot too highly praise the persevering efforts it is making to attain its end. The Committee has further given, with the strictest Masonic impartiality, every encouragement to the Roumanian Schools. At the general examinations in 1874, there were distributed at its instance to the most zealous and active pupils a goodly number of educational works, the number thereof and the various institutions to which they were sent being as follows: To the Ministry of Worship and Public Instruction:—43 books for the pupils of the gymnasia, 24 for those of the seminary, 15 for the pupils of the Central Boarding School for Girls, 12 for those of the Central Day School for Girls, and 31 for the normal school, Charles I. To the Municipality of Bucharest:—50 for the pupils of the primary schools—boys, and 50 to the primary schools—girls. To the Board of Superintendence of the City Asylums:—51 books for the pupils of the Hellenic Asylum, and 42 for those of the Panhellenic Orphanage. To the committee of Ladies'—Infant School, 5 German books; to the Society for the instruction of the Roumanian people, 30 books for the pupils of the Normal School; to the Committee of the Evangelical School, 33 German books; to the Committee of the Jewish Schools, 20 Hebrew and other books; to the Committee of the Bulgarian Schools; 30 Bulgarian and other books; to the Committee of Armenian Schools, 20 Armenian and other books: Making in all 456 volumes distributed to the various schools in Bucharest, without regard to the religions which they taught in them severally. It is to the labours of this Committee of Instruction that the Lodge Les Sages d'Héliopolis is indebted for the inauguration of a series of scientific assemblies very noteworthy and singularly interesting. Among the conferences it is well to make mention of that of Bro. E. Protopoppesco on the motto of the Lodge, "Droit, Liberté, Fraternité," that of the same Brother on "Misery and its causes," those of Bro. MiKailesco on Education and Work, and that of Bro. Dr. Lowenthal, orator of the Lodge Le Phare Hospitalier, Orient of Ibraïla, on the evils that affect society and the remedies it is desirable to apply to them.

Further the Lodge has established a journal, La Mistria, which is most praiseworthy and successful in its efforts to propagate Masonic ideas in Roumania, and which already holds a good position in the press of the country. The Lodge also possesses a library, comprising a good number of volumes, among them being several rare Masonic works and most of the foreign Masonic publications. In fine, it is on terms of amity with 34 Lodges in different countries.

The concluding observations of Bro. Ascher, as quoted by Bro. Caubet, are worth reproducing.

"While there yet remains much to be done in order to attain the end we have in view, I think we may congratulate ourselves for the little we have succeeded in doing in the short space of less than two years which have elapsed since the revival of our Lodge. Let us go on as we have begun. Let us not hesitate either in the face of sacrifices to be made or fatigues to be endured, and I have reason to hope that we shall not fail in the means to realise the good we have in view, namely to be a credit to Freemasonry, and to deserve well of it and of our country."

We can only repeat what we said at the onset, that we most cordially endorse all the good wishes and kind compliments to which Bro. Caubet gives expression for the prosperity of the Lodge, Les Sages d'Héliopolis.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE,

UNITED STATES, NORTHERN JURISDICTION.

WE learn from the Hebrew Leader that the Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Rite of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States, held its annual Session, at Portland, Maine, on the 17th-20th ultimo, both days inclusive. The usual address of the Grand Commander, Josiah H. Drummond, 33°, was first delivered, after which the several Committees set actively to work, in the transaction of important business. The deaths of no less than twelve members of the Supreme Council were recorded since the Session of 1874, held in Boston, Mass. Steps were taken at the first Executive Session, held on the afternoon of the opening day, to place Vermont on an equal footing with the other states as regards representation, and Ill. Bro. Tyler was elected an active member of the Council. Bro. Gen. William Sutton, Mass., in his seventy-sixth year, and the oldest member of the Supreme Council, was elected an active member of the Supreme Body. The Honorarium was conferred on thirteen S.P.R.S. 32 degree. The number and distribution of these, as well as of Initiates in this Jurisdiction, at the close of the year ending 10th July 1875, is as follow:

	Members	Initiates	Total
Maine	130	6	136
New Hampshire	137	0	137
Vermont	46	9	55
Massachusetts	810	40	850
Rhode Island	131	5	136
Connecticut	123	14	137
Albany	171	16	187
Cosmopolitan	95	7	102
Central City	134	23	157
Rochester	184	34	218
Oneonngo...	67	1	68
Corning	174	6	180
Aurora Grata	198	13	211
New Jersey	237	21	258
Pennsylvania	596	63	659
Michigan	249	20	269
Ohio	458	46	504
Indiana	284	38	322
Illinois	677	40	717
Wisconsin	112	9	121
Grand Total	5,014	411	5,425

There are two consistories each in Rhode Island and Connecticut, four in Pennsylvania, three in Indiana, five in Illinois, and seven in New York, as given above, these last including 1023 S.P.R.S., or over one-fifth of the number enrolled in the whole jurisdiction, and it is estimated there are over a thousand unenrolled members, whose names are only to be found in the Roll Book of the Supreme Body. It is understood that the number of the Ancient and accepted Rite of all grades will be officially announced at no very distant date by the Supreme Body. The next Session will be opened in New York, in the Consistorial Chambers of the new Masonic Temple, on the third Monday in August 1876, when the triennial election of officers of the Supreme Council will be made public. The Ancient and Accepted Rite, thanks to the very liberal charter granted by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is now a corporate body of very considerable proportions, both financially and otherwise. As might have been expected, the greatest harmony prevailed during the four days' Session.

THE ENLARGEMENT OF OUR INSTITUTIONS.

AT the banquet held last Saturday, at the Ship Hotel, Hallingford, Middlesex, under the presidency of Bro. the Rev. Dr. Brette of Christ's Hospital, Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Secretary Girls' School, replied to the toast, "Success to the Masonic Institutions." In the course of his remarks, Bro. Little contrasted the past and present position of the Craft, and pointed out that the rapid increase in the number of members brought with it greatly increased demands on the resources of our various charities. The officials of the three Institutions have been continually bethinking themselves how best to meet these additional demands. The numbers on the books, both of the Royal Benevolent and the Boys' School, have been greatly increased, but as regards the Girls' School, the premises at Battersea will not allow of any further extension, as the accommodation is only sufficient for the present number, one hundred and fifty. Already a notice of motion for its enlargement has been given in Committee by Bro. Joshua Nunn, and a scheme will shortly be laid before the subscribers. It has been found impossible to enlarge the present site, as no more land, in immediate contiguity, could be obtained. Doubtless the ground, at present occupied, is very valuable, and we doubt not, would realise a very considerable sum, with which other premises might be erected in some locality somewhat more remote from London, where land is cheaper. There is a growing tendency now-a-days to send all our big London schools into the country, where greater accommodation can be had at a lower cost, and the marvellously increased value of land in, and around the Metropolis, enables the governing bodies of these schools to do this without difficulty, as regards money, while the purer air of the country is an additional incentive thereto. We see no reason why the Masonic Girls' School should be an exception to, in this repect, the prevailing tendency of the day.

CHARGES OF A FREEMASON

BY CORNELIUS MOORE, EDITOR OF THE Masonic Review.

MERE seniority of years will not make up for a deficiency in essential qualities. It is safer, however, to select those who are mature in age, than the young and necessarily inexperienced. Wisdom and knowledge are more likely to dwell with gray hairs; but they alone are not sufficient. Seniority should not be the standard, but qualifications; and while these are more frequently the heritage of years, the industrious and studious youth may have acquired a fitness which age has not gained. The writer of this, totally unexpected to himself, was elected and installed Master of his Lodge in less than a year after his initiation. This was evidently in violation of a venerable law, which requires one to have served as Warden before he shall be eligible to the office of Master; but it was at a time when those laws were not well understood or very strictly obeyed. Besides this, it was an experiment that should very rarely be tried, for he was evidently unfit to perform the duties of that office—not having had sufficient time to acquire the requisite knowledge or experience. But while youth should sit at the feet of age, and learn wisdom from the lips of experience, qualifications, and not seniority, should be the passport to promotion and honour.

The great reason for this rule of preferment is, "that the lords may be well served." This was the rule when Masonry was exclusively operative in its character; and it is still a good rule in speculative Masonry. "The lords" were then "well served," when the buildings on which the Craft were engaged were skilfully and tastefully erected; when the material was well selected and accurately prepared, and the several portions properly adjusted in the building. Now the work is well done when the moral precepts of the Order are wisely and impressively taught, and the moral structure so reared that the supreme Grand Master will be "well served," and the temples built such as will meet his approbation.

The "mode and manner" of acquiring knowledge, such as will prepare a Mason for eminence among his brethren, cannot be "described in writing;" they depend upon the listening ear, the instructive tongue, and the faithful breast. The rituals of Masonry can only be acquired by diligent attention, oral instruction, and long experience. They can be learned nowhere but in the Lodge room, for the illustrations can be witnessed nowhere else. "Every brother must attend in his place, and learn them in a way peculiar to this Fraternity." The Lodge is the school room of the Masonic student; and while he may learn much from a constant study of the written charges and constitutional rules of the Order, as well as by "a diligent perusal of the Holy Scriptures—the great Light in Masonry," and its moral trestle-board—yet the illustration and application, which are absolutely essential, can only be found in the tyled recesses of the Lodge room. No Mason should fail to attend the meetings of his Lodge unless a higher duty interpose. This rule was important when the Craft was engaged in building. If there were more Craftsmen than there was work to do, some of them must be unemployed, and, having no other resources for a livelihood, must become a charge upon the brethren. The supply would be greater than the demand, and the evils resulting from this state of things would be serious. Hence the wisdom of this injunction,—not to "take an apprentice unless "there was "employment for him"—to instruct no more in the art than would be sufficient to perform the amount of work to be done. Persons should not be admitted to the Order merely to enjoy its benefits, for no mercenary motives should dictate their petition. "A desire for knowledge, and a sincere wish to be of service to his fellow creatures," should be his plea at the door of the Lodge. He should not come to share the honours or the benefits of Masonry so much as the faithful labours of the Craft, and their legitimate rewards. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

A candidate for Masonry must be physically perfect. As, under the Jewish economy, no person who was maimed or defective in his physical organism, though of the tribe of Aaron, could enter upon the office of a priest, nor a physically defective animal be offered in sacrifice, so no man who is not "perfect" in his bodily organization can legally be made a Mason. We have occasionally met with men having but one arm or one leg, who in that condition had been made Masons; and on one or two occasions we have found those who were totally blind who had been admitted! This is so entirely illegal—so utterly at variance with a law which every Mason is bound to obey—that it seems almost incredible, yet it is true.

If a man cannot see, how can he "learn the art" which is taught, in a great measure, by ocular illustration? If he cannot see, how can he recognise a call of distress which is addressed only to the sight? If his right arm be wanting how is he to discharge those peculiar duties which devolve upon him in the Lodge room, or in his intercourse with the Craft? So, also, if he be deprived of a leg or foot? It is impossible to explain, fully, the reason for this necessity for physical perfection, but the intelligent Mason will readily understand, by recurring to the duties and ceremonies, from a participation in which no one is exempt. "A candidate must be perfect, having no maim or defect in his body." This is plain, positive, and admits of neither question nor cavil.

He must be perfect to enable him to "learn the art," to "serve his Master" and "be made a brother." He will be utterly incapable of any of these if he should be deprived of any of his limbs or his senses. Hearing, seeing, feeling—all are equally essential. But he must be perfect to enable him to work as a Fellow Craft; to examine and adjust the work, and see that it is well and accurately finished. If he cannot do the work himself, he cannot tell whether it is done well by others. Every person made a Mason should have the physical qualifications to discharge any duty required of him as a Mason, or to fill any office to which he may be called.

"Term of years."—In earlier days a much longer novitiate was required than now. The great truths and duties of Masonry were not learned in a few weeks, or even months; it required years. And even now, in some portions of Europe, the rule is—one degree a year, until symbolic Masonry be passed, at least. One great evil now prevalent among the Craft in the United States is, that degrees are too rapidly conferred. No man can be a proficient in the knowledge of ancient Craft Masonry in less than one year, and very few will be in five. Yet how often we see him passing through a degree each month, when it is utterly impossible, in that length of time, for him to have made a "suitable proficiency" in understanding the degree already received. Perhaps in six months he is in the Chapter, and by the close of the year, has become a Royal and Select Master, and even a Knight of Malta! This is a work which should have occupied at least five years; and yet it has been accomplished in little more than twice that number of months. By this haste a two-fold injustice is done: first, to the candidate; and, secondly, to the Craft.

"It should be a rule of action, in the admission of new members, never to admit one, who, from any defect in body, mind, or moral qualities is not entirely eligible to the discharge of any duty, or to fill any office to which the Order may call him." The rule before us requires, among other qualities, that he should "be descended of honest parents"—that is, that he should have been born in lawful wedlock. It was a universal rule, and is still preserved in some Grand Lodge jurisdictions, that an illegitimate could not be made a Mason. One reason for this, in the olden days, was the prevalence of the laws of primogeniture, which deprived the illegitimate of many rights and privileges; it may also have been borrowed from the Jewish Laws, which, in cases of illegitimacy, visited the "sins of the father upon the children." But from whatever source it was borrowed, it is clear from the text that the "fruits of illicit love" were excluded from the rights and privileges of Masonry. We live too far from the times in which this law was enacted, to judge of its propriety. Masonry was, undoubtedly, then, as now, influenced a little by the laws and customs of society; hence we are not capable at this day, in this country of different laws and usages, properly to appreciate the reasons for excluding the class of persons referred to. That they were excluded, is perfectly clear from the text; and the principal reason, then given for excluding them, is by implication, that such persons were ineligible to the various offices of honour and responsibility in the Craft. They could not be Warden, Master, or Grand Master; therefore, they should not be admitted. It may have been a mere barbarous prohibition, and ceased to be operative when the usages from which it was borrowed passed away.

Degrees were not conferred so rapidly in former times as now. The first degree was always conferred by the particular Lodge to which the application was made; but the degrees of Fellow Craft and Master Mason were only conferred by the Grand Lodge or General Assembly. Hence it might be one, two, three, or half a dozen years, before an Entered Apprentice could reach the degree of Master; and many, it is most likely, never received it. These degrees were distinctions, not conferred as a matter of course upon every one who was initiated, but after long probation, and as a reward of singular merit. An Entered Apprentice was regarded as a Mason, and entitled to all the ordinary rights and privileges of the Order, even to the attendance upon Grand Lodge, and voting there on great questions affecting the interests of the whole body. If after a reasonable time he became distinguished as an artisan, and proved himself worthy, he was advanced to the degree of a Fellow Craft. After having received this degree, he could act as Warden of a Lodge; indeed, it would seem, from the language of the text, that he not only received the Fellow Craft degree as a reward for his industry and skill, but with a view to his eligibility to the position of Warden. After he had performed the duties of a Warden, and proved himself worthy as a Fellow Craft, he was rewarded with the sublime degree of Master, and could then legally preside over a Lodge. He could not be a Grand Warden unless he had before that been a Fellow Craft; his having previously received this degree was the evidence which was required by the Craft to show that he was worthy and competent. But to be a Grand Warden another qualification was necessary; he must be a distinguished man, as well as a skilful Mason. He must be either "nobly born," a gentleman of "the best fashion," an "eminent scholar, curious architect, or other artist, descended of honest parents," and be "of singular great merit in the opinion of the Lodges." These provisions speak for themselves, and need no comment or explanation. The times and the condition of society seemed to require that some one distinguished in the community should be at the head of the Craft.

If there was a member of the Royal family belonging to the Order, and he would consent to serve, he was always selected as Grand Master, while a nobleman, or some distinguished scholar or artist, served as Warden. If there were none of royal blood, then men of less note were selected, such for example, as was Inigo Jones, Sir Christopher Wren, and others, the ablest architects of their times. But the altered condition of society has rendered these precautions unnecessary; and in this free country, where all are noble born, personal merit has very properly become the only passport to honour and distinction.

It seems to have been the prerogative of the Grand Master, in ancient times, to select and appoint his own Deputy, but was limited in his selection to those who had served as Masters in subordinate Lodges. We are clearly of the opinion that the Grand Lodges of modern days have, in providing for the election of Deputy Grand Masters, departed from ancient usage. It would appear that, then, the Deputy had no power to act except as he was directed by the Grand Master, and that the duty he discharged became the act of the Grand Master,—for it was done in his name and by his command, and he was responsible for it. As at present arranged, there are in effect two Grand Masters in the same jurisdiction; for the Deputy can, on his own responsibility, do almost anything which the Grand Master can, except take precedence in Grand Lodge. He can grant dispensations, arrest charters, etc., etc., without consultation with the Grand Master, even while the latter officer is within his jurisdiction. This is generally the case, although some Grand Lodges restrict the Deputy to a narrower sphere of action. Notwithstanding it may be in the power of the Grand Lodge to confer upon the Deputy, in many things, equal power with the Grand Master, yet we are inclined to think the former practice the best; he should be the Deputy of the Grand Master, and not of the Grand Lodge, and should only act when directed by his superior officer, and in his name. If the Grand Master should die, or remove out of the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge before the expiration of his term of service, of course the Deputy will succeed to his place, and discharge all his duties until a new Grand Master is elected, unless the regulations provide differently.

In every department of Masonry, obedience to superiors is absolutely necessary; not the obedience of the slave, but of the subject or citizen—an obedience springing from principle and reverence for law. Order must reign in all departments of the mystic temple; the officers, supreme and subordinate, are entitled to respect, and the Craft should render to their lawful commands a prompt and willing obedience. According to the rules laid down in this Charge, great care has been taken to secure worthy, competent, and judicious officers—men selected for their merit and skill in the Royal Art—men fully competent to govern; and they should be obeyed with "reverence, love and alacrity." It is true that when a man is promoted to office he is not thereby rendered infallible; but we have a right to presume that he exercises his best judgment; and should he err, obedience for the time being would be a less evil than discord and rebellion. The error can be remedied in the next Grand Lodge, but rebellion strikes at the foundation of all order and all government.

Of the management of the Craft when working.—All Masons shall work honestly on working days, that they may live creditably on holy days; and the time appointed by the law of the land, or confirmed by custom, shall be observed.

The most expert of the Fellow Craftsmen shall be chosen or appointed the Master, or Overseer of the lord's work, who is to be called Master by those who work under him. The Craftsmen are to avoid all ill language, and to call each other by no disobliging name, but brother or fellow; and to behave themselves courteously within and without the Lodge.

The Master, knowing himself to be able of cunning, shall undertake the lord's work as reasonably as possible, and truly dispend his goods as if they were his own; nor to give more wages to any brother or apprentice than he really may deserve.

Both the Master and the Masons, receiving their wages justly, shall be faithful to the lord, and honestly finish their work, whether task or journey; nor put the work to task that hath been accustomed to journey.

None shall discover envy at the prosperity of a brother, nor supplant him or put him out of his work, if he be capable to finish the same; for no man can finish another's work so much to the lord's profit, unless he be thoroughly acquainted with the designs and drafts of him that began it.

When a Fellow Craftsman is chosen Warden of the work under the Master, he shall be true both to Master and Fellows, shall carefully oversee the work in the Master's absence to the lord's profit, and his brethren shall obey him.

All Masons employed shall meekly receive their wages, without murmuring or mutiny, and not desert the Master, till the work is finished.

A younger brother shall be instructed in working, to prevent spoiling the materials for want of judgment, and for increasing and continuing of brotherly love.

All the tools used in working shall be approved by the Grand Lodge.

No labourer shall be employed in the proper work of Masonry; nor shall Freemasons work with those that are not free, without an urgent necessity; nor shall they teach labourers and unaccepted Masons, as they would teach a brother or fellow.

Masonic tradition informs us, and it is confirmed by the great Light which shines from the altar of every Lodge, that Masons in ancient times adopted six days to labour, but the seventh was devoted to rest, to the solemn worship of God, and the contemplation of his glorious works. By the term "holy days," in the text, is meant the days set apart as Sabbaths. To "live creditably," on the Sabbath, is therefore to rest on that day from ordinary labour, and devote it to the worship of the Infinite One, to the contemplation of his sublime works in nature and Revelation, and to yielding our homage and our hearts to him. This is to live "creditably" on that day, according to Masonic law and usage. But in order that we may devote the seventh, or "holy" day to this purpose, we must work on the other six days; and it should be remembered that it is just as obligatory upon Masons to devote the six days to labour, as the seventh one, to rest; and no Mason can violate either duty without forfeiting his moral integrity and fixing a stain upon his Masonic character. It is worthy of observation that this, the highest Masonic law, does not fix the day which shall be set apart as "holy;" it does not name the "seventh" day of the Jews, nor the "first" day of the Christians; but the one "appointed by the law of the land, or confirmed by custom" of the country. In Christian countries, the "first day of the week," is set apart by law and custom both, as the day of rest—the Sabbath. If the Jews had a country under their own laws, the "seventh day" would be the "holy day." Masons should, therefore, in obedience to the law in the text, observe the day appointed by the laws of the nation in which they reside. They cannot be good, obedient, law abiding citizens or subjects unless they do. It should also be remembered that this is not merely advisory; "All Masons shall," is the imperative language of the text.

In this paragraph the principle of personal merit is again recognised. We have already seen that promotion among the Craft is to be regulated by this principle; and here it is repeated and confirmed. "The most expert of the Fellow Craftsmen"—those who have made the greatest proficiency in the art—are to be selected to fill the office of Master; the degree of Master Mason was then probably conferred upon him, and he was duly installed as "overseer of the lord's work," and was to be recognised and respected as such by those that work under him."

This paragraph not only requires the Craft to be respectful to the Master, but to be courteous to each other. They are to use no ill language; their passions are to be controlled and kept within the boundary prescribed by the compasses; they are to be kind, respectful, and agreeable to one another, and to call each other brother, or by some other fraternal designation. Masonry requires its members to be gentlemen—respectful, courteous, kindly: rough, uncouth, and boorish habits are to be laid aside—must be—under the refining and elevating social influence of our venerable association.

This was especially applicable when the Craft were yet engaged in operative Masonry. The Master was then not only the overseer of the work, but also the agent or steward of the "lord," or proprietor of the building. Honesty was a virtue particularly important in the Master; for, while he was required not to "give more wages to any brother or apprentice than he really deserved," he must, at the same time, have such a knowledge of the business as to enable him to do the work for a fair and reasonable price. He stands between the proprietor and the workmen, and must do justice to both: justice is one of the cardinal virtues, and must be constantly cherished by every one who would be a very consistent Mason or an honourable man.

FREEMASONRY AND THE BOURBONS.

IT is a fact not generally known, and yet which is worthy of ventilation, that the last three kings of the Bourbon line in France were Freemasons. The Chevalier Cæsar Moreau makes, in his Precis sur la Franc-Maçonnerie (pp. 1, 91), the following statement:—

By the new constitution (in 1772) three chambers were erected in the bosom of the Grand Orient for the administration of the Lodges of Paris and the provinces. The Duke of Luxemburg performed the ceremony of installation, and gave on this occasion a superb fête to the Grand Orient. "Paris had never seen," says Lalande, "a more pompous and brilliant Masonic fête." A Lodge was instituted at Court, and three kings, being then only Princes, Louis XVI., Louis XVIII., and Charles X., were made members of the Order.

Mr. George Long, in his work entitled France and its Revolutions (London, 1850, ch. VII., p. 41), partly confirms the statement in the following words. Speaking of the visit of Louis XVI. to Paris, three days after the capture of the Bastile by the populace, he says:—

"On reaching the Place de Greve, the Freemasons, who were there in great numbers, received the king with the honors which the Craft pay to distinguished brethren, by forming a double line and holding their swords crossed over his head. As soon as Louis set his foot on the ground to ascend the steps of the Hotel de Ville, the 'vault of steel,' as the crossing of swords was called, was formed. He walked with a firm step beneath the canopy of swords."

The subsequent unhappy fate of the king might suggest the inquiry how the Freemasons of France could permit this judicial murder without some effort to prevent it. The answer is found in the fact that from the very commencement of the revolution, the Lodges of France, disgusted with the political atrocities of the nation, had ceased to act. "After the events of 1789," says Rebold, "most of the Lodges of France virent en sommeil," that is, suspended their labours. For the follies and crimes of the "reign of terror" the French Freemasons were not responsible, for during all that time Masonry had in France, and especially in Paris, no organized existence. When reason resumed its sway the Lodges renewed their work. And this fact, which is amply confirmed by the French Masonic historians, is an all-sufficient reply to the calumnies of Barruel, Robinson, and the other anti-Masons, who have charged, and continue to charge, Freemasons with a revolutionary spirit.—Voice of Masonry.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 67 Barbican, E.C.

A Short Sketch of the Original Progress of the Italian Language. By R. Palumbo, Professor of the Italian, French, and Spanish Languages and Literature. London 1875.

This is what it professes to be, a clearly written and very succinct sketch of the progress of the Italian Language. The writer points out the meagreness of the materials which remain to us, and which in no way, or but to a very slight extent indeed, enable us to form a clear view of the rude beginnings of the most musical language in Europe. The Oscan and Latin elements are, in our opinion, justly placed high among the elements of which the present language is composed, and the close affinity between these two and others is also noted, as well as the changes which came over the spirit of the language by reason of the ever-growing influence of the Christian Church; thence we advance to the dark ages, when literature and literary pursuits were at their lowest. Then we approach the glorious epoch in which flourished the immortal Dante, Petrarca, and Boccaccio. This is rightly described as the Golden Age of Italian Language, and with the view of illustrating both the author's style and the character of his criticisms, we take leave to quote the following passages:

"The thirteenth century was called the Golden Age of Italian language; patriotism, religion, and love formed the great triumvirate of Dante, Petrarca, and Boccaccio. With their pen the native tongue acquired a new impulse. From the time of Dante and Petrarca it took a rapid stride. A multitude of barbarous words were eliminated, the nobler became separated from the base, and this latter was excluded from poetry. Meanwhile this language took some time to be generally cultivated. The different provinces of Italy still remained attached to their dialects; so the vulgar was at that time but little developed. We have a proof of this in the beautiful account Dante sent to Guido Novello on his mission to Venice; he wrote, 'How can I express the gross ignorance of these grave, venerable fathers? When I found myself in the presence of this grey-bearded and aged assembly, I naturally wished to fulfil my mission and communicate your message in the Latin tongue. Hardly had I pronounced my exordium when they sent to beg me either to seek an interpreter or to speak in another language. Half astonished, half indignant (I can hardly tell which sentiment predominated), I began to say something in that tongue which I first lisped at my mother's knee, and even this scarcely sounded more natural or familiar to their ears than Latin.'"

Bro. Palumbo then gradually traces the history of the language to the present time, and concludes his brief, but useful brochure, with the following remarks, which are as creditable to his patriotism as they are to his critical acumen, and his noble aspirations:—

"Comparing the past with the present, Italy may feel proud of the great work that her children have achieved in this nineteenth century, a work which yet will raise her to a first rank among nations. The Italians will never forget that they have risen to new life through the ever living spirit that breathes in every delineation of their art, in every note of their music, and in every tone of their language. The national freedom so nobly attained by these irresistible weapons, will ever be kept bright to preserve her independence; these are the instruments God appointed, wherewith Italy must fight the battle of life and educate her sons more highly. 'The proper study of mankind, is man,' said Pope. The noblest part of man is his moral and intellectual nature, and no nation knows better than the Italians the tremendous moto-force of philosophy and art. The divine light which illuminated with such radiant glory the minds of Dante, Petrarca, Vico, Michel Angelo, Alfieri, Manzoni, Cavour, Garibaldi and Mazzini will continue to shed a lustre upon her succeeding generations, and keep for ever fresh in the hearts of her people that spirit of freedom, without which no nation can achieve greatness."

In the Westminster Papers will be found much valuable information about "The Chess World," with several Problems and Solutions of Problems, several Hands at Whist, and a letter on "Honours—Dealer v. Non-dealer," in which the writer enters most minutely into a variety of calculations, which are marvellous enough to look at, and must be still more marvellous to have compiled. The editor, however, is fully equal to the task of meeting J.W.S. with weapons of the latter's choice, and parries his thrusts with counter thrusts of such marvellous figure-power, as to have made our very hair stand on end. There are, besides, a capital review of a recent well-known work by Mr. A. Trollope, some more wonderful "Calculations for Leader" in Ecarté, and a notice of Napoleon, a game with which we are not acquainted. Owing to the few theatrical performances going on now, there are no Dramatic Notes.

The New England Freemason (Boston, U.S.) for July devotes a considerable portion of its space to the visit of the Richmond Commandery of Knights Templar to Boston, in the month of June, regarding the event, as the whole Masonic world does, as a very significant and very pleasing episode in the history of the Craft. It contains also an account, abridged from the Freemason's Repository, of the laying of the first stone of the New City Hall, Providence, R.I. There are, besides, an article congratulating the Keystone on having entered on its ninth volume, a short biography of the Duke of Montague, whilome M.W.G.M., as well as one of Mercers' Hall, as one of the London Halls associated with Masonry, both signed "J. T. H.," and the concluding portion of a recent address by R.W. Bro. Cornelius Hedges, Grand Secretary of Grand Lodge, Montana.

We have received two small yet interesting pamphlets, one on the "Genealogy of the Brigantes or Dongbs," the other on the "Origin, Intent, End, or Purpose of Masonry," by Loyland Folliden. We purpose noticing them at some length in our next issue.

THE DRAMA.

"The Shaughraun" at Drury Lane Theatre.

THE opening of our national theatre is an event which interests all play-goers, heralding, as it does, the approach of another dramatic season. Under the judicious management of Mr. Chatterton, the star of Drury Lane has risen high of late years. It is too much to expect from private management that regard for art, and striving for artistic merit, which, in these days are incompatible with pecuniary success; they certainly cannot be expected from the m , who wrote that "Shakspeare meant ruin, and Byron bankruptcy;" but Mr. Chatterton may claim that his productions at Drury Lane have been at least harmless, and have not left any unpleasant taste in the mouth. For some years Mr. Halliday has had the honour of supplying the opening piece of the season, in the shape, generally, of an adaption from one of Scott's novels, but this year the author is changed, and Mr. Boucicault comes to the front with an Irish drama which has aquired some notoriety in New York, entitled The Shaughraun. We all know the materials of which Mr. Boucicault's Irish dramas are invariably composed: the inevitable faithful follower, with his keen appreciation of fun and his readiness to do anything right or wrong in the service of the master whom he loves, that master is always the same young Irish gentleman who has got into trouble through "wearing of the green," he is betrayed by that spy, generally also a process server, whom we know so well, and arrested by that familiar English officer who always brings his many stupid mistakes to a climax by marrying that wild Irish girl, the patriot's sister. All these are familiar to us; are they not sketched in the "Colleen Bawn," and drawn more boldly in "Arrah-na-Pogue?" It says much for Mr. Boucicault's ability as a playwright that out of such materials he can and does construct dramas which never fail to interest and please; it says little for his artistic feelings that with such undoubted ability he has written no work more worthy to endure than "London Assurance," a good, but very artificial comedy. Of all living British dramatic authors, Mr. Boucicault has most mechanical ability and most instinct for effect; but we think it extremely improbable that any one of his dramas will be played in the next generation. The Shaughraun is a fair specimen of his style; it is well constructed, contains some good situations, well led up to, and some touches of that mingled humour and pathos which Mr. Boucicault knows so well how to use: it has, too, the inestimable advantage of the acting of Mr. and Mrs. Boucicault, both of whom are inimitable in their respective lines: the always sound acting of Mr. David Fisher, the manly bearing of Mr. Terriss and Mr. J. B. Howard, and the really powerful performance of Mr. Shield Barry, all combine to make The Shaughraun an undoubted success; but we cannot think the piece worthy of Mr. Boucicault's genius, or of the great theatre in which it is played.

MACCABE.

Frederic Maccabe, the entertainer, who has recently returned from a long and, we believe, successful tour in the United States, has been appearing nightly to highly appreciative audiences at the Philharmonic Hall, Islington, and it may be said, with truth, that there is no "single-handed" entertainment going at all comparable to the musical and ventriloquial one entitled "Bygone Dull Care." Mr. Maccabe is like we don't know how many talented gentlemen rolled into one, for he composes the music, writes the songs, and enacts all the characters—male and female—in this varied, unflagging and thoroughly artistically finished entertainment; the only drawback, on the night we were present, was the excessively crowded state of the Hall, a fact attributable to the universal popularity of Mr. Maccabe, and to the tact and indefatigableness of Mr. Sutton, his business manager.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

Fourth Application—October Election, 1875.

The favour of your Votes and Interest is most earnestly solicited on behalf of

RICHARD THOMAS GARDNER, Aged 8 Years.

SON of the late Brother RICHARD RAVENSHAW GARDNER, of 13 Graham Street, Walworth, Surrey, Dancing Master, who died 22nd October 1870, after a long and painful illness, leaving a Widow and Four Children totally unprovided for; his lengthened infirmity having exhausted all previous savings. Brother Gardner was initiated in the Panmure Lodge, No. 720, in 1858, served the several Offices, and passed the Chair of that Lodge, and was generally respected by the numerous Brethren with whom his business brought him in contact.

The case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren, viz:—

Bro. George Kenning P.M. 192, Past Grand Deacon for Middlesex.
Bro. Magnus Ohren P.M. P.Z. 33, P.M. and M.E.Z. 452, G.J. Warden for Surrey; Lower Sydenham, S.E.
Bro. William Hudson P.M. 315, Past Prov. G.J.D. for Sussex, P.Z. 732, P.M. Mark 75; Brighton.
Bro. Nathan Bryant Headon W.M. Great City Lodge, No. 1426; 65 Friday Street, London, E.C.
Bro. James H. Vockins W.M. Sphynx Lodge, No. 1329; 138 Blackwell Road, Brixton, S.
Bro. James Weavers P.M. 872, W.M. 1319, M.E.Z. 872, P.P.G. Organist, Middlesex; 45 Howland Street, Fitzroy Square, W.
Bro. Charles L. Marshall P.M.; 22 Grosvenor Park, Camberwell, S.E.
Bro. Mark Samuel Larkham J.W. 1216; York Street, Walworth, S.E.
Bro. James Freeman 1287, Treasurer 1425; 68 Friday Street, E.C.
Bro. William S. Webster P.M. 231, P.Z. 21; 17 Ely Place, Holborn, E.C.
Bro. Thomas Moore P.M. 720; High Street, Clapham.
Bro. James Stevens P.M. 23, 720, 1216, 1426, P.Z. 720, M.E.Z. 771, P.G.O. Mark, &c.; 10; Clapham Common, S.W.

THE LONDON MASONIC CLUB.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP should be made at once, in order to secure the advantages offered to the First Subscribing Members. Negociations are now pending for excellent Central Premises. All particulars may be obtained on application, personally or by letter, to the Secretary, Brother CAPTAIN LATHBURY, at the Offices, Victoria Buildings, 27 Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE public mind is still exercised with certain collisions at sea that have occurred recently. A second inquiry into the loss of the Mistletoe is progressing at the moment of writing, but we have not noticed anything new in the way of evidence. We shall be curious to learn what, if any, verdict the Portsmouth jury will arrive at; or will they, as at the first inquest, separate without expressing any opinion whatever? Then there is the loss of the Vanguard—a loss which, taking everything into account, means something like half a million of money, caused by the butt of an Iron Duke's ram. Pity the merits of the latter's offensive power could not have been tried on some enemy, instead of putting in peril the lives of about five hundred of our gallant sailors. The Admiralty has ordered a court martial on Captain R. Dawkins and other of his officers, and this will be held at Devonport. No particular charge, we believe, will be raised, and the court will, in effect, be one of inquiry pure and simple. Meantime, steps are being taken to ascertain the extent of the damage which the Iron Duke has sustained, and all that is possible is being done by the divers in recovering the masts, &c., of the ill-fated ironclad. As for the hull, with its mass of iron plating, &c, it is said that no steps, if indeed any, can be taken to raise it till the spring of next year, and then, perhaps, a vast accumulation of sand may render the task still more difficult. Meanwhile, just to prove the truth of the old adage, "It never rains, but it pours," another collision, off Holyhead, is reported, by which two lives were lost. It seems the Edith, one of the London and North Western Railway Company's boats, left the Company's wharf at 1.25 a.m. on Wednesday morning for Greenore, when an in-coming steamer, the Duchess of Sutherland, belonging to the same company, came into collision with it, the result being that, in three quarters of an hour, the former sank with two men, a fireman named Jones and his brother, on board. What makes the occurrence of the accident still more singular is that the weather was calm and clear at the time. There were from sixty to eighty passengers aboard the Edith when the two vessels collided, but these and the crew, with the exceptions named, were fortunately rescued, owing to the valuable assistance rendered by Captain Kendall, of the Royal Mail Steamer Connaught, and the boats of the R.M.S. Ulster, though Captain Owen of the Edith, and others, had a narrow escape. Three accidents at sea in about as many weeks hardly looks well for a maritime people. We shall soon be asking of each other—Does Britannia rule the waves, or is this only a myth?

It is not often our lot to record so well-merited a rebuke as that administered by Lady Strangford to Mr. J. Lewis Farley. It is a disgrace to Englishmen that whenever a petty internal outbreak against recognised authority occurs in any foreign country, there is always to be found almost ready to hand a committee of Englishmen who take upon themselves to foment these disturbances, and the matter on which we are about to comment is a case in point. A few weeks since a number of marauding blackguards took upon themselves to pillage, burn, destroy a number of villages in the Herzegovina, one of the provinces of European Turkey, just as Cumberland and Devonshire are among the provinces of England. No sooner does intelligence of the so-called outbreak against a so-called despotism reach this country than forthwith a committee of wiseacres—we might also describe them in stronger terms—is established, and the sympathies of a narrow-minded section of the British public with the insurrectionists is expressed formally. Reputable people are invited to lend their sanction to the action of this committee, and unfortunately for his reputation, one of our statesmen, no less a man than the Earl Russell, twice Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, and an ex-Foreign Secretary, has taken part and subscribed £50 towards the maintenance of a revolt against the just authority of a foreign sovereign friendly with Great Britain. Happily, however, a lady, the Lady Strangford, has had the courage to administer a veritable coup de grâce to the English advocate of foreign ruffianism. Mr. Farley, once a consul in the service of the Porte, appears to have invited Lady Strangford to allow her name to be placed on the committee for an object which we suppose we must describe as, at the very least, the destruction of Turkish property, and the slaughter of innocent Turkish families. Lady Strangford first reminds Mr. Farley of the labours of her late husband, Lord Strangford, in upholding the authority of the Turks in the late insurrection in Crete, and gives this as a first reason why she should hesitate before acceding to his request. She then suggests that Mr. Farley's views appear to justify every insurrection, "whether provoked or unprovoked," "whether likely to succeed or certain to involve unnecessary and unprofitable bloodshed," and, "whether, if unsuccessful, conducive to the peace of Europe, or only to the aggrandisement of those who disturb that peace." She then points out that no trustworthy accounts have yet been received of the disturbances; that no explanation has been made public of the objects of the insurgents; that no grievance has yet been suggested as the fons et origo mali. She then, with all the skill of a practised logician, directs Mr. Farley's attention to a work of his, published in 1872, dedicated to the Turkish Ambassador, and entitled, "Modern Turkey," and she calls upon him to justify, or, at all events, to account for the marvellous change of opinion which he has undergone in less than three years. She remarks: "Englishmen who have not the advantage you have enjoyed of serving as Consul in the service of the Porte, and thus becoming acquainted with the various races it includes, are sometimes misled by the arrogant and unfounded dogma, that in any and every difference between Mahommedans and non-Mahommedans, the latter must necessarily be the oppressed and the former the oppressors. This untenable and bigoted assumption has been, or ought to have been, long ago disposed of by those who read and those who travel." She then crushes Mr. Farley, with an extract from his own work, which we cannot do better than give as quoted, premising, of course, that as we have not read Mr. Farley's work, we are dependent on Lady Strangford for the accuracy of her quotation. The passage reads as follows: "'I wish some learned theologians would tell me, why it is that men are so much better, in all the social relations of life, under Mahommedan laws than under those of Christianity. It is unheard of for a Turk to strike a woman. He is always tender to women, children, and dumb animals; and if a dog howls with pain in the streets of Pera, you may be quite certain that it is not a Turk that has struck the blow. A Turk is truthful, and scorns a lie; he is sober, temperate, and never a drunkard or a gambler; he is honourable in his dealings, kind to his neighbour, and charitable to the poor. In Turkey no man, woman, or child can really want bread, much less die of starvation. Can as much be said for Christian countries?'" (p. 122.) We are very much grieved to find that it has been reserved for a lady to come forward manfully to do battle against the gross impertinences of self constituted British Committees who busy themselves in fostering domestic turmoils, the causes of which they are profoundly ignorant of, in foreign countries. We Englishmen know well enough how annoyed we were at the sympathy of the dregs of the American public with Fenianism, whose principal exploits were the murder of a harmless policeman, who was faithfuly discharging his duty, and the destruction of sundry property in Ireland. What should we say if Turkey merchants in Constantinople, took to supporting Fenianism, or agricultural or trade differences. We think Lady Strangford is entitled to the thanks of all England for the vigour and point of the refusal to join in resistance to the legal authority of the Sultan.

The British Association has been continuing its labours, about the most agreeable of which must undoubtedly have been the trip by a hundred of the members to Salisbury, and thence to Stonehenge. The excursionists were met on the platform at Salisbury by the Mayor and other leading citizens, and were by them conducted in the first instance over the Blackmore Museum, the American collection of Indian war weapons, which was highly eulogised by one of the party, General Carrington, of the U.S. army. Then they visited other places of interest in the town, and lastly the cathedral, over which they were conducted by Archdeacon Hare; and after paying a visit of respect to the venerable Bishop of the diocese, the party made for the Town Hall, where, at the invitation of the Mayor, the labours of the party were for a time suspended, in order that refreshment might be taken. After a few toasts, the party were called from refreshment to labour, and being placed in a number of carriages specially provided for them, drove to Stonehenge, a distance of about nine miles. Having examined this marvellous structure sufficiently, and having heard the learned remarks of the Rev. E. Duke, and Sir Walter Elliott, the excursionists drove back to Salisbury, and returned thence by train to Bristol, their hosts, the mayor and citizens, bidding them "God Speed" on their way home.

A great discovery has been made of certain most interesting relics of Peter the Great, who, it may be remembered, visited this country towards the end of the seventeenth century, and was for a long time successful in maintaining his incognito. It might have been imagined that after the lapse of nearly two centuries there would remain no further vestige of his presence among us, but a polish gentleman, M. Stanislaus, recently came across, in Great Tower Street, a sideboard, a bookcase, and an iron chest, all the work of His Imperial Majesty, and most minutely corresponding with the description given of them in the "London Gazette. Published by authority. Supliment from Monday, 6th February, to Thursday, 9th February 1698." They are in splendid preservation, and have now become the property of a Roman nobleman, who intends, it is said, presenting them to the Emperor Alexander II., so that they may be placed at Moscow among other mementoes of the Czar Peter.

Barnet Fair was held on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, and, the weather being magnificent, drew a large concourse of visitors from all parts, especially men of horsey and agricultural tastes. Why it is that one of the noblest animals should always find itself associated with the greatest blackguards, the most degraded brutes and ruffians, is just one of those paradoxes which a "fellow" may be pardoned for not understanding. Nevertheless it is so, and a "horsey" man or a "doggy" man is—well not over nice in his dealings with his fellow-men. Were there any doubt on the subject, any who were at Barnet Fair, and paid a visit to the field in which the horse fair was held, must soon have had it set at rest. The noise, the blasphemy, the flagrant cruelty shown to these animals, made the scene hideously disgusting. No doubt somebody benefits by it, but it is not the poor four-footed brutes, and still less the worthy people of Barnet, who must be thankful the fair, like Christmas, comes once a year only.

The energy of Bro. Mapleson, of Her Majesty's Theatre, Drury Lane, is such as to require little comment from us. There are few men who would take upon themselves the burden of such an enterprise as the building of a New National Opera House. All the more credit is due, therefore, to our respected brother for inaugurating so laudable an undertaking. Bro. Mapleson has been many years before the public in connection with the Italian Opera, and we note with pleasure that, on Tuesday afternoon, the first step was taken towards erecting the new building on the Victoria Embankment. The ceremony was very simple and unpretending. There was only a limited number of friends present to witness it, the principal actor being Mdlle. Titiens, whose name alone has been a tower of strength to the artistic company which acts under Bro. Mapleson's auspices. This ceremony was nothing more than that of laying the first brick of the new lyric temple, and it is superfluous to add that the fair lady already named performed her task both easily and gracefully. Mr. Fowler, the architect, Lord Alfred Paget, and Bro. Mapleson then, each in turn, went through the business of placing and mortaring bricks. Hearty cheers were given by those assembled, and the company then adjourned to refreshment and mutual congratulations. We wish the enterprise every success.

The week has not been unfruitful of interest at the Alexandra Palace. The chief event was on Thursday, which was set apart for the delectation of the youngsters, admission to the various amusements within the grounds being for the occasion reduced one-half. The day was a great success, and the weather being magnificent there was a capital attendance.

As usual, at this season of the year, the various agricultural societies throughout the United Kingdom have been holding their annual meetings. The exhibitions have been quite up to the high standard of excellence, for which the British Agriculturist is so renowned, but the prevalence in some parts of the country of foot-and-mouth disease has been a serious drawback in respect of the cattle. There have also been sundry sales of short-horn cattle, and in the case of one animal, only three months old, lately the property of our R. W. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, the sum of 2,000 guineas was realised. In another case, a cow was sold to R. W. Bro. the Earl of Bective for 520 guineas.

The result of the inquiry into the Kildwick collision on the Midland Railway is that the jury have returned a verdict of manslaughter against Harrison Palfreyman, the driver of the express. They also censure Jonathan Baldwin, the signalman at Cononley Station for altering the signal from red to green one minute too soon. They add a rider to this verdict in the shape of a recommendation to the Railway Company to remove the passenger station and signal apparatus to a point at or near the railway bridge, so that the danger of similar accidents, of which there have already been several, may be reduced to a minimum.

Captain Webb's splendid swimming feat is still the theme of general admiration, nor of this only, for a very substantial sum has been collected, and this in due course will be presented to him, or at least invested for him in the manner most agreeable to his wishes. Miss Beckwith's swim from London Bridge to Greenwich has been followed by another performance, in which a young girl swimmer, Miss Emily Parker, sister to the London Champion, has shown her powers of endurance by swimming from London Bridge to Blackwall, a distance of seven miles, in a little over an hour and a half. Of course the attendance on her of wherries was very great, and there were demonstrations of encouragement, as she swam along, pistols, guns, and small cannon being fired at frequent intervals. We admire swimming, and we trust that the rising generation of Britons will make a point of trying their skill in the natatory art, but we trust these exhibitions will not become too frequent. They smack a little too strongly of the advertising "dodge." What made Webb's performance so generally admired was that it was a genuine attempt to accomplish an unexampled feat of skill and endurance. We hope swimming and swimming professors will be generally encouraged, but it is too manly an art to be mixed up with advertising schemes.

In the Dramatic World we note the opening, for the season, of Drury Lane, the piece chosen being written by Mr. Dion Boucicault, and entitled Shaughraun, to which we briefly refer in another part of our columns. At Covent Garden the Promenade Concerts still continue to attract large audiences, but we regret to see that some disturbances are alleged to have taken place, and have been thought serious enough to call for investigation before a police magistrate.

The news from abroad contains no new element of interest. The insurgents seem to be getting the worst of it, and we fancy the verdict of all order-loving people will be "Serve them right." The victories we have heard so much about their having gained, turn out to have been all moonshine, the only success that may fairly be placed to their credit, having been gained by fire and brutality over houses and helpless women and children. The Carlists are not yet annihilated, in spite of the heavy pounding to which they have been recently subjected. Paris has been thrown into a certain state of excitement by the publication of a letter written by Vice Admiral de la Roncière le Noury in command of the French Mediterranean Fleet. In this letter the gallant sailor announced his intention of supporting the existing order of things only so long as it continued to exhibit its present conservative tendencies, avowing his strong dislike for the promoters of the revolutionary movement of the 25th September 1870. The result of this ill-advised publication is that the Admiral has been removed from his command. It is always well for both naval and military men, when on active service, to fight shy of politics. They should sink the politician in the officer, and confine themselves wholly to the discharge of their official duties. We do not see how the government of President MacMahon, could have acted otherwise than it has done, if it were earnest in its attempts to make the law observed. Of course, the Bonapartists are not over pleased. Russia is again engaged in Central Asia, General Kauffman being en route for Khokland, and having inflicted heavy losses on the Khokanas. The Emperor of Germany is visiting Breslau, where his reception was most enthusiastic, this being the first visit since the conclusion of the war. The Crown Prince and Princess and the Duke of Connaught were of the party, the object of the journey being to witness the Autumn Manœuvres.

We have been favoured with an illustration of the jewel commemorative of the Installation of our M.W.G.M. It was designed by Sir Albert Woods, Garter, G.D.C., approved by the M.W.G.M., and is to be worn suspended by a ribbon of the Swedish National colours, yellow and blue. ONLY those are entitled to wear it who officiated as STEWARDS at the ceremony of the Installation. The artist to whom was entrusted the duty of providing these jewels is Bro. Lamb of St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, who appears to have fulfilled his task with his usual skill. When the 334 jewels had been made and supplied to Grand Lodge, the dies were destroyed. The jewel is a double star, five-pointed, surmounted by the coronet and the ostrich feathers of H.R.H. On the face is a medallion likeness of the Prince, with "Installed MDCCCLXXV," on a blue enamel ground, encircling it.

A Conclave of the the Ancient Ebor Preceptory of the Royal Exalted Religious and Military Order of the Temple will be held at the Masonic Hall, Duncombe-street, York, on Tuesday, the 14th of September next, at 7 o'clock in the evening. Two Companions belonging to the Zetland Chapter, No. 236, will be installed.

At a meeting held at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville Road, it was resolved to present the Metropolitan Lodge, No. 1507, with an oil portrait of Bro. Jas. Willing jun., as a memento of the services rendered by that esteemed Brother as the first W.M. of this flourishing Lodge. The presentation will take place at the next regular meeting of the Lodge, in October, and the necessary arrangements have been entrusted to the following brethren, who have formed themselves into a committee, with power to add to their number:—Bros. Williams, Side, Rapkin, Shand, Berri, Yeate,

H. B. Fowler and Carter. Bro. Baron Von Tettenborn has been commissioned to paint the portrait, while Bros. Scales and Stiles have been respectively appointed to the posts of Treasurer and Hon. Secretary.

The Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45, the oldest in London, purposes returning to its old quarters at St. John's Gate, St. John's Square, Clerkenwell, on and after Monday, 13th inst.

At Brighton, the West Pier is nightly crowded, and the artistic selections from operas—ancient and modern—under the direction of Bro. W. Devin, are listened to with rapt attention. The Aquarium, too, still attracts its thousands, who flock to see the marvels of nature which are exhibited in the tanks. Thanks to Bro. G. Reeves Smith, Mr. Geo. Buckland, and Mr. Henry Lee, the public, both morning and evening, are entertained by talented artistes. On Saturday, Bro. Caravoglio and Madame Osborne Williams appeared, and during the week Miss Fanny Heywood has been delighting crowded and appreciative audiences. At the Theatre Royal, Mr. Charles Barrington's Clancarty Company, with Miss Helen Barry, have been the attraction. The Sisters Elliott have appeared in a new ballet; while Bro. H. Cox, of the Strand, and an old favourite of the frequenters of Bro. Chart's theatre, has performed in the farce of "Catching an Heiress." An engagement with Mr. and Mrs. Billington is also announced. Bro. Kuhe (Grand Organist) announces his first Subscription Concert, at the Dome, on the 18th instant, when he will be supported by the following artistes:—Mad. Adelina Patti, Madame Sinico, Sig. Urio, Sig. Campobello (violin), Therese Castellan (harmonium). Mr. R. Taylor and Bro. Kuhe will preside at the pianoforte.

The "Oxford," under the able direction of Bro. Botham, is nightly crowded. The bill of fare is highly attractive, the Sisters Lindon, in their excellent entertainment, gaining fresh laurels. Miss Annie Clayton appears in her serio-comic entertainment, and Bro. Herbert Campbell, in his artistic and talented impersonations of various characters, has lost none of his celebrity, he nightly gaining immense applause. At the conclusion of his engagement here, he appears at Bro. J. R. Sweasy's, the "Royal," Holborn.

According to the Graaf Reinet Herald, new Lodges will shortly be established in Uitenhage, Kimberley, and East London, Cape Colony. Our contemporary, having a firm belief in the efficiency of Masonic teaching, is rejoiced accordingly. At the same time he points out, very properly, that the constitution of new Lodges in small villages should be pursued with the greatest caution. In neighbourhoods where there are but few men of standing and influence, there is always the risk that the strictness of Masonic discipline may be relaxed.

These last few days we have been giving full rein to a sense of the supremest satisfaction. Any of our readers who may chance to have seen us either abroad or in the editorial sanctum must have noticed that our face was beaming, if not with seraphic, at least with truly Pickwickian smiles of happiness. And with good reason. In a recent issue we offered certain comments on the last report of the Masonic Female Orphan School, Dublin. These comments have been echoed back to us from the other side of the Atlantic by an esteemed contemporary of ours, the Hebrew Leader of New York. In its issue of the 27th ult. it gives expression to the very same ideas, and, with a few trifling exceptions, in the very same language. The fact that two editors, living some two thousand miles apart, should have adopted precisely the same views on a certain Irish Masonic Charity is of itself a sufficiently striking coincidence, but that these same Editors should have expressed the same views in almost verbatim the same language, this is about the most marvellous coincidence we ever remember to have heard or read of. That there can have been any pre-arrangement between them is impossible. We can personally affirm that the gentlemen in question are unknown to each other, even by name, much less personally. Our own remarks on this Irish Charity appeared on the 31st July. Those of our contemporary on, as we have said, the 27th August. It seems almost unmasonic to hint that the Hebrew Leader is indebted to us for the ideas he has formulated, and, in a fit of editorial abstraction, has forgotten to extend towards us, as he generally does, the courtesy of acknowledging the source of his inspiration. Be this as it may, we should offer our brother Editor our warmest congratulations on the justice of his remarks, only we should be virtually congratulating ourselves. We have a very lively recollection of the old copy-slip—"Self praise is no recommendation."

GRAND LODGE OF SOMERSET.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge of Somerset held its meeting on Monday afternoon, at Wells, when there was a large attendance of Masons from the province, together with many visitors. The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon Pro. G.M. of England, and Prov. G.M. presided, supported by a goodly array of P.M.'s. The minutes and accounts for the past year having been passed, the patent appointing W. Bro. R. C. Else (Bridgwater) as D.P.G.M. was read by Acting-Secretary Prideaux. The R.W.P.G.M. in investing Bro. Else with the collar of office, said he felt that in his selection of deputy he had chosen one who would study to fulfil the important duties of the office with satisfaction to all. Within the past few minutes a jewel had been placed in his hands, subscribed for by the brethren of the Bridgwater Lodge, as a token of the respect which they entertained for him (Bro. Else) in his new office. It was, therefore, an additional pleasure to him (the noble Earl) to adorn Bro. Else with the jewel of D.P.G.M., feeling assured that he would wear it with satisfaction to the province, and with credit to himself. Bro. Else assured them that although he already possessed several jewels earned by Masonic work, no jewel should be more prize than the one that had come from the brethren of his own Lodge. The R.W.P.G.M. then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers for the ensuing year as follow:—Bros. Major Preston 41 P.G.S.W., Capt. Perkins 446 P.G.J.W., Bailey 261 and T. Gatehouse 437 P.G. Chaplains, E. T. Payne 53 P.G. Treasurer, W. Cox 329 P.G. Reg., F. K. Prideaux 291 P.G. Sec., W. H. May 135 P.G.S.D., W. Bennett 976 P.G.J.D., B. Atwell 437 P.G. Supt. Works, T. S. Lord 53 P.G.D.C., R. Baker 1197 A.P.G.D.C., Capt. W. Long 1199 P.G.S. Bearer, A. Down 772 P.G. Org., W. Channing 261 P.G. Purst., J. T. Knight 446 A.P.G.P., W. Woodward 291 P.G. Tyler, A. J. Salter 53 A.P.G.T., Forty 291, Ricks 135, Fry 437, Butter 1322, Hyatt 285, Taylor 772 P.G. Stewards. The R.W.P.G.M. then, in the course of some feeling remarks, alluded to the loss the province had sustained by the death of Capt. Bridges, the late D.P.G.M., and moved, "That this P.G.L. desires to place on record its great sorrow at the death of its beloved and esteemed V.W.D.G.M., Bro. Capt. H. Bridges, and its deep sense of the loss Freemasonry has sustained thereby." It was subsequently proposed by Bro. Capt. Perkins, "That a subscription be set on foot in the province to provide a memorial to the late V.W.D.P.G.M., this memorial to take the form of a scholarship at one of the Masonic schools, should the subscriptions reach to a sufficient amount, or such other form as the P.G.L. may decide on." It was also resolved, on the proposition of Bro. E. T. Payne P.G.D. of England, "That this P.G.L. receives with cordial assent and hearty congratulations the appointment by the R.W. the P.G.M. of Somerset, of their esteemed Bro. R. C. Else to be the D.P.G.M. of Somerset, in the room of their lamented friend and brother, Captain Henry Bridges deceased. The labours of Bro. Else on behalf of the province during many years are thus gracefully acknowledged, and the P.G.L. trusts that many years of usefulness may be granted to their valued brother in the more important office to which he has now been promoted." Some other formal business was then disposed of, including sundry charitable grants, which brought the business to a close. At three o'clock a banquet took place at the Shire-hall, the M.W.P.G.M. presiding. The repast, which was of a most recherché character, was served up in capital style by Bro. George, of the Swan Hotel. The toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," and "M.W.G.M. of England, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," were proposed by the noble Earl. Bro. General Doherty, of Bath, proposed, in flattering terms, the health of the M.W.P.G.M., the R.W. Deputy G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers past and present, which the noble chairman acknowledged. The Grand Master then vacated the chair to leave by the train, and the duties of chairman devolved upon the V.W.D.P.G.M. Else, who commenced by proposing the health of Bro. H. C. Lopes, Q.C. M.P. S.W. 973 (Frome Lodge), which was enthusiastically received. Bro. Major Clarke (of London) proposed the health of P.W.D.P.G.M. Bro. R. C. Else, who appropriately replied in a brief speech. Bro. Else then proposed the health of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Monmouthshire. Bro. Homfray replied. Bro. Payne, of Bath, proposed, in eloquent terms, the members of the Wells Lodge, coupling with the toast the name of Captain Perkins, who has done great things for the benefit of the Wells Lodge and the Craft in general. Captain Perkins suitably responded. The Chairman next gave the health of the visiting officers and brethren of the provinces. The W.M. of 973 (Frome), Bro. Malim Messiter, in a humorous speech, acknowledged the compliment. The toast of "Visiting brethren outside the province" was replied to by Bro. Wood P.M., of Brighton. "The Masonic Charities" was proposed by the Chairman, and responded to by Bro. Blockes, Secretary of the Boys' Masonic School. The Tyler's toast brought a most enjoyable gathering to a close.

Holloway's Pills and Ointment.—Nervous debility often occurs at this season of the year, in persons otherwise healthy, but who, having overtaxed both mind and body in some one of the many ways so common now-a-days, suffer in consequence from an irritability of the whole nervous system, characterised more especially by sleeplessness, tremors, palpitation of the heart, and a general feeling of shakiness and sense of sinking fibre, more distressing even than actual pain. The muscular and vital energies in these cases seem almost as if they were utterly relaxed, and mental despondency, sufficient to alarm anxious relatives and friends, often accompanies this condition. No time should be lost, but immediate recourse had to these powerfully tonic and restorative remedies.

P.M. occupied the chair as W.M., supported by Bros. F. Rose S.W., J. A. Smith J.W., F. H. Ebsworth P.M. Treasurer, W. Batchelor S.D., W. Lover J.D., F. Garbett I.G. and Dr. Dixon P.M., also Bro. W. Ough P.G. P.G.M., C. J. Hogg P.G.S. P.M., H. Keeble P.M., and E. W. Mackney P.M., also Bros. A. Tisley, J. Brooks, W. Brough, S. Markelis, J. Finch, A. C. Woodward, W. P. Tong, H. J. Clark, &c. The Lodge was opened, and after the confirmation of the minutes, Bros. Easterbrook, Savage and Nice were passed to the degree of Fellow Crafts, and Bros. Bell and Shaw were raised to the 3rd degree. The election for W.M. then took place, and Bro. J. A. Smith J.W. was duly elected. Bro. F. H. Ebsworth P.M. was elected Treasurer, and W. J. Laing Tyler. The Lodge was then closed by Bro. Deakin, the W.M., and the brethren separated. Bro. P. Magee, No. 548, was present as a visitor.

Beacontree Lodge of Instruction, No. 1228.—If there is one section of the Craft more than others in the Metropolitan district in which Masonic energy is developed, the palm must decidedly be awarded to our brethren in the East. There, night after night, do we find enthusiastic Craftsmen devoting their spare time to assisting each other to obtain a knowledge of the beautiful precepts inculcated by our sublime ritual. Those brethren who are anxious to render themselves proficient in the duties of office are always sure of a kindly greeting at any one of the many Lodges of Instruction, and the visitor can always rely on meeting those who will most readily communicate to him the knowledge he is anxious to obtain. It is thus that we have great pleasure in announcing that the Beacontree Lodge of Instruction, No. 1228, was successfully inaugurated on Tuesday evening. The meeting was held at the Red Lion, Leytonstone, Bro. T. Barford being the W.M., and the following brethren likewise being present, viz:—R. J. Tucker S.W., J. Boulton J.W., G. E. Walters Secretary, W. G. Durrant S.D., I. Buscall J.D., W. Allen I.G.; Bros. W. Musto P.M. 1349, W. Hogg P.M. 1349, W. Allen 1471, J. Pinder 15 and 1445, Westfield 813, King 1056, W. W. Morgan 1385, Lewis Lewis 1426, Massey, Barton 548, Taplay 1076, G. Lewis 1076, and E. J. Anning 1364. The ceremony of Consecration was rehearsed by Bro. J. Terry, assisted by Bro. P.M. Barnes 933 and 554, acting as S.W., and Bro. Allcock I.P.M. 1228 as J.W., and the manner in which Bro. Terry fulfilled the office is worthy of the highest commendation. There was not the slightest hesitation in the discharge of this important duty, and considering that our worthy Brother had undertaken it at short notice, we heartily congratulate him on the success which attended his efforts. We offer the same gratulation to Bro. W. H. Myers, F.S.A., P.M. 820 and W.M. 1445, who acted as I.M., and who shewed a high order of proficiency in that capacity. The installation ceremony having been completed, the W.M. appointed his officers, and in due course the Lodge was closed. After a short interval a banquet was served, at which Bro. T. Barford presided, and the genial manner in which he conducted the business of the evening gave great satisfaction to all assembled. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the brethren separated. It was announced that the Lodge will meet at the Red Lion, Leytonstone, on every succeeding Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, until the last Tuesday in May. The three ceremonies will be worked on each evening.

Star Lodge, No. 1275.—The installation meeting of this capital working Lodge was held on the 3rd inst., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, Bro. Joseph Smith P.G.P. P.M. in the chair, supported by the Wardens and Officers. On the confirmation of the minutes the P.M. raised Bro. F. J. Lindsay, and initiated Mr. Chas. Marr. A Board of Installed Masters having been formed, Bro. J. Limebeer S.W. was presented to the Lodge, and installed into the chair by Bro. J. Smith P.G.P. P.M. The W.M. having been saluted according to ancient form, invested his officers:—W. H. Green S.W., R. W. Williams J.W., Rev. G. J. P. Collis Chaplain, J. Smith P.G.P. P.M. Treas. (re-invested for the 7th time), C. W. Williams J.D., W. Kipps I.G., E. W. Chetwynd D.C., J. Gilbert P.G. Tyler (Middlesex) re-invested Tyler. Votes of thanks were unanimously accorded to Bro. J. Smith P.G.P. P.M., and F. Walters P.P.G.S., Middlesex, for the able and assiduous manner those brethren had discharged their respective duties as Treasurer and Secretary. The Lodge was then closed, and a very sumptuous banquet and dessert was provided. The usual toasts were given during the evening. Bro. E. W. Mackney sang several harmonious songs in his best style, and the brethren passed a very delightful evening. Among the visitors were Bros. G. T. Fox P.M. 78, W. Bourne P.M. 1348, G. A. Garrett P.M. 704, F. D. Vine 173, J. Barford 173, A. W. Farber 27, F. R. Vine 173, J. H. Kemp 27, H. Potter P.M. 11, J. Wright P.M. 1158, A. C. Barrell W.M. 1446, J. Hillhouse P.M. 228, T. Jennings P.M. 59, J. V. Watkins 1336, L. Dettimus 179, &c.

Prince Leopold Lodge, No. 1445.—This Lodge held its installation meeting on Thursday, the 2nd of September, at the Lord Stanley, Sandringham-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. F. Green W.M., W. H. Myers P.M. 820 S.W., F. Wilkins J.W., J. Pinder Sec., W. J. Howe P.M. Treas., W. F. Stevenson S.D., J. Clark D.C., S. L. Green and S. E. Goddard Stewards, J. E. Simms I.G., Gilchrist Tyler, and the following members:—Joshua Moore P.G.S.B., G. Townsend P.M. 820 and W.M. 754, S. Hill, S. Clark, J. Bodkin, S. Howell, G. Lord, W. A. Ide, S. Cox, E. Smith, J. Rainbow, J. Jermy, J. H. Cambridge, J. H. Vellum, E. Blackmur, G. Mewl, J. C. Preston and G. C. Obey. P.M. Bro. W. J. Howe. Visitors—Bros. J. Wright P.M. 781 G. Pursuivant, P. de L. Long P.M. 114 Vice President Board of General Purposes, H. G. Buss P.M. 27 P.G. Treasurer Middlesex, W. Monckton P.M. 1063 G.S.D. Kent, E. Palmer P.M. 1414 P.P.G.D. Kent, S. Watkins P.M. 202, T. Grimes P.M. 881, T. J. Barnes P.M. 933 and 554, G. Kenning P.M. 192, H. Massey P.M. 609, F. W. Koch P.M. 820 and 1381, F. S. Knoyvett 58 W.M. 1495, A. Guthmann (Hungary), H. A. Robinson 65, S. Moss 202, G. C. Young 820, B. Candlick 1421, G. Williams 933, F. Fellows 192, W. G. Durrant 1056, and J. Green 27. Business—The Lodge was opened in due form, and after the usual preliminary business, Bro. W. H. Myers F.S.A. P.M. 820, was presented as the W.M. elect for the ensuing year. A board of installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Myers was duly installed in the chair of K. S. according to ancient rite, the ceremony of installation being most ably performed by Bro. F. Green I.P.M., who brought all his well-known histrionic powers to bear on this portion of our sublime ritual. After the usual proclamation and salutation in the three degrees, the newly installed W.M. then appointed and invested his officers in that perfect manner which is so habitual to Bro. Myers. The officers were as follow:—Bros. F. W. Wilkins S.W., J. Pinder J.W., W. H. Howe P.M. P.G. Pursuivant Middlesex Treasurer, G. E. Walters Sec., J. E. Simms S.D., J. Clark J.D., S. L. Greco I.G., T. E. Goddard D.C., N. D. Partridge and C. Hubbard Stewards. After the proposition of five candidates for initiation, the Lodge was closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. G. M. Townsend. The evening was enlivened by the vocal and instrumental efforts of Bro. G. Young 820. The usual toasts having been duly honoured, the brethren separated at an early hour, thoroughly gratified with their entertainment.

Truth Lodge, No. 1458.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, the 6th of September, at the Royal Archer Hotel, Dale-street, Manchester. Present—Bros. Henry Smith W.M., Charles J. Kent J.W., John Kinder P.M. Sec., James Batcheldor S.D., Jas. Branton J.D., Robert Caldwell P.M. D.C., Thomas Sellers Steward, Robert Fallows I.G., Charles Beswick Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Jno. W. Turner, Caldwell and Kinder. Visitors—Bros. John F. C. Walton 422, Frontier City, Oswego, J. B. Williams 3, Cork. Business—The minutes of last regular meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. asked the test questions preparatory to passing Bro. Brayshaw, which being answered satisfactorily, the candidate was entrusted and retired. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Brayshaw having been re-admitted, was passed by Bro. Smith W.M. Bro. Oldham was then questioned, before being raised to the sublime degree of M.M., and proving himself worthy, was entrusted and retired. The Lodge was opened in the third degree, when Bro. John Kinder P.M., on the re-admission of Bro. Oldham, proceeded with the beautiful and solemn ceremony of raising; Bro. Oldham was evidently much impressed with the solemnity of the ceremony and the impressiveness with which it was delivered by the acting W.M., who took every member by surprise, each being highly delighted with Bro. Kinder's manner of working. The Lodge was then closed in the third and second degrees, and a communication having been read from Grand Lodge, the labours were brought to an end, and the Lodge closed at 6.20 p.m. An excellent banquet was provided by the host, Bro. Potts, and on the removal of the cloth, Bro. Turner I.P.M. took the chair, the W.M. Bro. Smith having to fulfil an engagement. The usual Masonic toasts were then proposed and duly honoured. Bro. Caldwell P.M. proposed the health of the W.M., coupling with it the health of the I.P.M., to which the I.P.M. responded in suitable terms. The Officers, Visitors and Wardens' toasts having been given, the brethren separated, having spent a pleasant evening.

Halsey Lodge, No. 1479. — This Lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday, 8th inst., at the Town Hall, St. Albans. Present—Bros. Geo. Askew W.M., Arthur Godson S.W., Isaac Edwards J.W., F. Venables Secretary, W. Palin Treasurer, John Parrott S.D., Kent J.D., J. Reynolds D.C., R. Blakey Steward, Wm. Marks I.G., Kirby Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. J. Lowthin, Webster, Wingham, &c. After the routine business of the Lodge had been completed, the brethren adjourned to the Peahen Hotel, where supper was provided by Bro. Marks.

Alexandra Palace Lodge, No. 1541.—The second meeting of this newly consecrated Lodge was held on Saturday, at the Alexandra Palace. The W.M., Bro. J. C. Parkinson D.P.G.M. (Middlesex) being absent, Bro. J. K. King P.G.S. and S.W. occupied the chair; H. Dyte P.M. D.C. as S.W., J. Willing jun. W.M. 1507 as J.W., J. R. Stacey P.M. Secretary, J. H. Dodson S.D., W. W. Snelling J.D., J. Lee as I.G., and J. White W.M. 228 as I.P.M. The Lodge having been opened, the minutes were confirmed. Bro. J. Dodson, No. 55, was elected a joining member; Messrs. W. Dennison and J. E. Ward were initiated, and Bros. Daniel Larchin Chapman, Kensington and Matthews were passed to the degree of Fellow Crafts, the latter ceremony being impressively delivered by Bro. J. R. Stacey, in his usual perfect manner. The same compliment may justly be paid to the acting W.M., Bro. J. K. King. Several propositions for joining and initiation were handed in, and the Lodge was closed. The brethren afterwards partook of a very capital dinner at the table d'hôte, the catering of Bros. Bertram and Roberts giving great satisfaction; the brethren had a quiet corner to themselves, the various toasts were given, and sociality and harmony prevailed. The visitors were Bros. J. Willing jun. W.M. 1507, Boys P.M. Camden Lodge, Styles 1507, H. Ralph 177, H. Thompson P.M. Great City Lodge, H. Potter, J. W. Berry 1185, C. Scales 1507, &c.

Lodge of Prudence, No. 1550.—The regular monthly meeting was held on Friday, 3rd inst., at the Huyshe Masonic Temple, Plymouth. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. R. G. Bird, the chair was occupied by Wor. Bro. J. J. Avery W.M. 70 Treasurer 1550, assisted by Bros. J. B. Gover I.P.M., J. Y. Avery S.W., J. P. Rogers J.W., J. G. Keverne S.D., W. Garland J.D., A. S. Stuart I.G., C. Philp D.C., Rev. W. Whittley Chaplain, L. D. Westcott Treasurer, J. Smith Tyler. The Lodge having been opened in usual form, Bro. W. H. Blackmore was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, and Bro. J. Faulder was passed to the second degree. The ballot was taken for Messrs. Roskruge and Westlake, and both were declared to be clear. Messrs. C. Foster and J. Trodinnick were proposed for initiation. After the accustomed prayer the Lodge was closed in the usual manner. The success of this Lodge almost exceeds the expectations of its founders.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 112 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

recording facts contributed by strangers, the distinguished positions of whom place their statements—founded upon the experience of the Wine—beyond a doubt. It is not surprising that the Wine's unbounded popularity provokes envy among other Sherry Importers, and incites specious attempts to impede its daily increasing favour. It has been exhibited by special permission (being a rare privilege) in the Museum of the British Medical Association as a Dietetic; it is now adopted and recommended by including many of the most distinguished, for its valuable dietetic qualities; it is pronounced by the leading medical journals, by the chief analysts, by the public press, by experts and connoisseurs, and by many thousands of the public in the United Kingdom—the nobility, the clergy, the gentry, clubs, messes, &c. —to be the most wholesome and agreeable Wine. It is exported, free of duty, largely to India, to our Colonies, being very suitable for hot climates, and to all parts of Europe. The price is low, because based upon the "Cash Payment System."

NEARLY THREE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

ON Monday, 6th instant, the pupils of this Institution presented a very handsome and costly musical album to the Matron, Miss Hall. The presentation was made, before the assembled pupils, by the Head Master, the Rev. D. Morris, at their request and on their behalf, who, in addressing Miss Hall, said, he was extremely gratified by the request made to him to present the handsome testimonial of respect and esteem entertained for her by her young friends. The offering was entirely spontaneous, and hence its value in evidencing the sense felt by her young charges for the kindness which had, during her long term of office, characterised her domestic management. His brief experience would not allow him to say much on this head, but the fact of this testimonial having been subscribed for voluntarily, by the entire School, was the best assurance she could receive of the estimation in which she was held, and of the appreciation of her labours for the comfort and well-being of those under her care. Miss Hall offered a few feeling words in reply, expressive of the satisfaction and delight afforded her by this kind recognition of the manner in which she had discharged her duties. She thanked them most heartily, and should ever treasure the handsome present just given her.

It is always well when the services of an official are thus generously recognised. Those only can appreciate such a presentation who have had the same or similar duties entrusted to them, and it speaks well for the Matron of this Institution, that after a lengthened service, those under her charge have paid her this compliment. The duties of a matron are many and arduous; she occupies a position in which her temper is daily, nay, even hourly, tried. Boys will be boys, and in the exuberance of their abundant spirits, are often forgetful of the wear and tear of temper to which she must be subjected. Clearly her conduct, in this respect, must have given general satisfaction, or we should not be recording this interesting event. Nor in this respect only. The duties of a matron are very much those of a mother. She has all the responsibilities of a mother resting upon her shoulders. She must advise those in her charge in all their little troubles, soothing down any animosities that may have broken out amongst them, and reconciling disputants. A judicious matron may exercise a great deal of influence for good with the masters, and help not a little in the maintenance of discipline. It often makes all the difference between ease and difficulty in maintaining discipline if the matron be a judicious person. It is, we suppose, in the nature of boys to give trouble to those in authority over them, but feminine influence rightly employed does a world of good in reducing the exercise of this habit of our boy-nature to a minimum. Thus when the small school world takes upon itself to do such a graceful action as we have just had the pleasure of recording, we may be sure there have been good and sufficient reason for its action. The boys must be, as their fathers were before them, genial fellows, admirable chips from good old Masonic blocks, and the lady who has given such satisfaction in the discharge of her functions as Matron must be a genial and kind lady, and motherly withal. Boys are keen to learn whether or not a person over them is lovable and worthy of their respect, and it is very creditable to Miss Hall that she can show how thoroughly and properly her services have been appreciated, not only by the governing body, but by the governed likewise. We repeat most cordially our felicitations on this most pleasant occasion.

A FEW HINTS HOW TO MANUFACTURE A MASONIC SONG.

IT is passing strange, perhaps, yet indubitable, that Masons, as a rule, are not given to poesy. Our system is veiled in allegory, and our symbolism is most beautiful. Nevertheless, the poetic fancy is not strong among us. It may be some of the terms in use among the Craft are somewhat unpoetical in sound, and that more than the usual difficulties in the way of rhyme and rhythm are encountered by any brother who may essay to put his thoughts into verse. We remarked in some of our earlier numbers on the lack of feeling noticeable in most of our Masonic minstrelsy, and we quoted specimens from the best known répertoire of songs in proof of the hardness, we might almost say the woodenness, of very many of the lines. We have said this is somewhat strange, for there are those among us who indulge their imagination freely, while the principal tenets we profess, indeed, the worship of all that is beautiful and good, are both elements towards the making of tuneful verses. Some there are who write in true poetic language of the antiquity of the Order. The archæologists among us are, in truth, poets, for their flights of fancy are calculated to reach even the loftiest Parnassian heights. Some trace our Order straight back to King Solomon, others have taken us still further back into the remote past, and connect the origin of Craft Masonry with Moses, and through him with the patriarchs, of whom, from a Masonic point of view, Abraham is the most admirable. Others, again, go further back, even into the Garden of Eden, and make Adam the founder of Freemasonry. We are not aware if any have made researches beyond this epoch, but, doubtless, it is in the order of things that, as years roll on, and men become wiser, we shall hear of inquiries, extending not only as far back as the pre-historic period of the universe, but even into the glacial, and possibly, the pre-glacial periods, on the supposition, at least, that there was a pre-glacial period. Now these worthy brethren are, beyond all question, indued with a lofty imagination, and should be capable, with so grand a field before them, of producing one or two admirable poems. Mr. Tennyson, within narrower limits, has fashioned, out of the famous Arthurian legends, a series of magnificent idylls. May not some Bro. Tennyson, W.M. of the Lodge Poetic, contrive to equal, if not surpass, the efforts of the Poet Laureate? As it is, the only real poets among us are the Masonic archæologists who write in prose, while our soi-disant poet is nothing if not prosy. Hence has it occurred to us to offer our readers a few hints on versification, in the hope that some of them, having profited by our suggestions, may be encouraged to cultivate the art of poetry, and give us now and again some tuneful song.

The practice of verse-making is one of which all of us, no doubt, have had, more or less, experience. "Our Old Friend John" remembers, doubtless, that in the days "when we were boys together," one of the few intellectual games indulged in was "capping verses." Any number might take part in it, and the manner of playing it was very simple. One boy would quote a line from some favourite poet, another would cap it with a line that rhymed, taken from the same or any other poet. A greater test of poetic reading was to quote a sentiment, and cap it with other lines expressive of the same sentiment. The simpler form of the game accustomed our juvenile ears to the value of sound, while the severer necessitated a wider acquaintance with the poets of our own and other countries, and so led us gradually to the cultivation of poetic feeling. It is not for us to say whether or not these early games induced in us any greater sense of the poetical than what, if there were any, may have been innate, but we commend the game to the notice of those who may contemplate the making of Masonic verses. We have noticed, and no doubt our readers have noticed likewise, that Masonic poets are very indifferent about there being any sense in their songs and ballads. In practising this game of "capping verses," therefore, the nonsense of a stanza will be an additional feature, and one that will increase greatly the charm of this kind of versification. Let us illustrate our meaning. We will suppose five brethren, whom we will distinguish severally as A, B, C, D, and E, are playing. After a supreme effort the following is the result:

Bro. A: In eighteen hundred and fifty three,
" B: Hubbledy Gee! Hubbledy Gee!
" C: Brother Stiles
" D: Ran forty miles;
" E: Nonsense! Fiddledee!

The rhyming is admirable, the nonsense clear, the ejaculations being both ancient and modern, and displaying therefore a rigid impartiality between the two sections of Craftsmen—those who accept the "time immemorial" theory, and those who incline to the seventeenth century origin of our order. Add to this that the idea is unique, and the language simplicity itself, and we flatter ourselves the effort is a very moral of successful poesy. How much better it reads than:—

One hundred and fifty-three thousand six hundred Employed for the Temple, we find they were number'd,
With Crafts many thousands and bearers of loads,
And Masters six hundred, say Scripture records.

Here is another specimen, the manipulators being four in number, namely, Bros. Menticent All, Won Der Ment, Fancy Bread, and Cynnic Call.

Bro. Menticent All: I know a bank whereon the wild thyme grows.
" Won Der Ment: You don't say so!
" Fancy Bread: I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls.
" Cynnic Call: More fool you!

Or again, á la Christy's Minstrelsy:

Up and down de ribber,
O-hi-O,
Him took him pretty coe, Susannah,
For a charmin' row!

The Ohio being, as the Americans say, a "big" thing in rivers is very properly assigned a whole line to itself. We might go on multiplying our illustrations ad infinitum, but we are too pressed for space to write a volume of Masonic songs. We hope the few we have given will find places of honour in every new song-book that may be published. They are right worthy of such distinction.

We have then two suggestions to offer, one that intending poets should cultivate the art of rhyming. As we have already noticed, a lack of rhyming power is one of the chief weaknesses which the Masonic poets of by gone-days have developed. It is not necessary to be particular about the words selected for practice, the only points worth attending to being rhyme and accent. For instance, a gushing brother meeting a friend will blurt out all at once the greeting, "Hów d'y' do?" with the first word well accentuated. This rhymes with "Hullaballoo." Another, who is of a phonetic turn of mind, and writes his words as he pronounces them, will exclaim, "And How d'yér do?" With this rhymes pérdu as pronounced in pure Anglo-French. A flippant brother, or one in a grievous hurry will salute with "Hów do?" this fits with "cow, too," or "row, too," the "too," in each case being thrown in without any particular meaning, but merely for euphony' sake. Then, there is the peculiar man, whose salute is "How dó?" with the accent throw well on the "dó'," which is pronounced long, and in a high falsetto key. A verbal representation of one kind of sneeze "A-tchish-ahóo" fits capitally with this, the "ahóo" being long, and uttered in a high squeak. We need not continue. The cases we have furnished are a few among many thousands, and will suffice as examples for the ingenious brother who has any rhyme or reason in his composition to imitate. Our concluding suggestion is this:—Some may ask, what class of poetry is the best for a sprouting Masonic poet to study? Our answer is, "Nursery Rhymes." The story of "Old Mother Hubbard," "Hey-diddle-diddle," "Jack and Gill," and the like are very beautiful. Masonic minstrelsy, with a few exceptions, contains nothing to equal them in the way of sense, rhythmic beauty, or thrilling interest.

If the outcome of these remarks of ours is no more than a simple song or ballad, we shall feel that our labour has not been in vain, and that our duty as a friendly critic has been successfully discharged.

A MASONIC DINNER.

WE dined the other day with an old friend and brother, Tobias Smollett; no relation whatever either of Hume and Smollett the historians, or Smollett the illustrious author of Roderick Random. It was the funniest thing in the way of dinners we remember to have participated in. As owing to a rather heavy traffic our cab was somewhat delayed, we were the very last to enter the drawing room, where the host and his guests were assembled, and were struck with no little astonishment on hearing the former put the question, "Whither directing your course?" and still more astonished at the answer, "To the dinner table, as soon as Bro. Toddlekins arrives." We being the Toddlekins in question, a move was accordingly made to the dining room, and in a very brief space of time the company were assembled around the gay and festive board of our respected W.M., host we should have written, who occupied the oriental chair, while his friends, S. W. and J. W. Jenkins, were located in the west and south respectively. The courses may be conveniently classified under the three several heads of fish, fowl and flesh, of the first of which there were seven different sections or kinds, the second having five, and the third three. There were also two capital soups à la Tracing Board, and a goodly array of game, which last may be looked upon as representing the high degrees. The vegetables were most conveniently arranged in squares and circles, and the different wines occupied favourable positions at intervals along the tesselated table.

We were very comfortably placed in close proximity to the wife of P.M. Snail on the one hand, and the wife of our own I. G. Thomas; the highly respected Prov. Grand Secretary, Bro. Steelpen, being almost our immediate vis-à-vis. It was very quaint to hear every now and then our excellent host pressing on the guests, in his own neighbourhood, if they would take a slice of Section III. à la Charles XIII., or a cut from Section V. à la loge d'adoption, while the brother in the direct west was equally impressive in bringing Sections II. and IV. Cod à la Grand Orient, and a mayonnaise of Salmon à la Porch under the notice of his fellow guests. In the direction of the Southern aspect was Bro. Loudvoice, who distinguished himself highly in conducting the distribution of the other items named on the Carte, consisting of Sections I., VI., and VII., severally represented by Turbot à la Triangle, Red Mullet à la Twenty-four inch Gauge, and Fricassee of Soles à la Gavel. It was casually remarked by a very hilarious Brother, in reference to the last of these dishes, that its presence was possibly in some way connected with a certain custom peculiar to the County of Kent, to wit, the custom of Gavelkind, and he was about enlarging on this point when he was interrupted by our W.M. asking his respected Bro. S. W. Jenkins, "What is our next duty in Freemasonry," to which the latter replied, with all that promptitude he has shown he possesses, "To order in a fresh supply of hock and sherry." This ended the first course and Lecture, and after a brief respite for the sake of digestion, discussion, and the re-ordering of our palates, with a view to further operations, we passed on to the fowl, or second course, and instituted a vigorous attack on a compôt de pigeon, Section VIII., varied with occasional references to Sections IX. and X., in which were represented all that is excellent in the way of Turkey à la Royal Arch, and Ducks à la Ancient and Accepted Rite. By way of interlude there came Sections XI. and XII., of which the first was made up entirely of Coxcombs à la Chine, while the latter was a very simple, but delicious, dish of larks, à la Level, and Sparrows à la Plumb Rule. So successful had we been thus far that nothing was needed to raise our hopes as we passed to the third course, or Lecture, of Meats, the veritable piéces de résistance of the most Masonic banquet we ever took part in. The first item on the Menu was Section XIII, in the shape of a sirloin of beef à la Misraim, fillet of veal à la Rite of Memphis, haunch of Venison, with a sauce piquante, flavoured chiefly with extract of Knights of the Pelican. This ended, there appeared a variety of sweets, with game and other delicacies; after which the board was cleared, and the business of toast-drinking came into full operation. Amongst the principal wines we noticed port of the Prince of Libanus vintage, a very fine Amontillado named the Grand Pontiff, two or three excellent clarets, hocks, and Burgundies, among them an old claret of the Sovereign Grand Commander's, and a good Burgundy, the "Rose Croix." We did not break up till a somewhat advanced hour, when the sun was not at its meridian, except for purposes of Freemasonry. We have seen since then several of our fellow guests, and one and all unite in speaking most rapturously of this novel entertainment.

FRANCIS LAMBERT AND HIS PARADOXES.

From "The History of Protestantism," by Rev. Dr. Wylie.

Francis Lambert had read the writings of Luther in his cell at Avignon. His eyes opened to the light, and he fled. Mounted on an ass, his feet almost touching the ground, for he was tall as well as thin, wearing the grey gown of the Franciscans gathered round his waist with the cord of the order, he traversed in this fashion the countries of Switzerland and Germany, preaching by the way, till at last he reached Wittemberg, and presented himself before Luther. Charmed with the decision of his character and the clearness of his knowledge, the Reformer brought the Franciscan under the notice of Philip of Hesse. Between the thoroughgoing ex-monk and the chivalrous and resolute landgrave, there were not a few points of similarity fitted to cement them in a common action for the good of the Church. Francis was invited by the landgrave to frame a constitution for the Churches of Hesse. Nothing loth, Lambert set to work, and in one hundred and fifty-eight "Paradoxes" produced a basis broad enough to permit of every member exercising his influence in the government of the Church. We are amazed to find these propositions coming out of a French cell. The monk verily must have studied other books than his breviary. What a sudden illumination was it that dispelled the darkness around the disciples of the sixteenth century! Passing, in respect of their spiritual knowledge, from night to noon-day, without an intervening twilight, what a contrast do they present to nearly all those who in after-days left the Romish Communion to enroll themselves in the Protestant ranks! Were the intellects of the men of that age more penetrating or was the Spirit more largely given? But to pass on to the propositions of the ex-monk. Conforming to a custom which has been an established one since the days of the Emperor Justinian, who published his Pandects in the Churches, Francis Lambert, of Avignon, nailed up his "Paradoxes" on the Church doors of Hesse. Scarce were they exposed to the public gaze, when eager hands were stretched out to tear them down. Not so, however, for others and friendly ones are uplifted to defend them from desecration. "Let them be read," say several voices. A young priest fetches a stool—mounts it; the crowd keep silence, and the priest reads aloud. "All that is deformed ought to be reformed." So ran the first Paradox. It needed, thinks Boniface Dornemann, the priest who acted as reader, no renegade monk, no "spirit from the vasty depth" of Lutheranism to tell us this. "The word of God is the rule of all true Reformation," says Paradox second. That may be granted as part of the truth, thinks priest Dornemann, but it looks askance on tradition and on the infallibility of the Church. Still, with a Council to interpret the Bible, it may pass. The crowd listens and he reads Paradox the third. "It belongs to the Church to judge on matters of faith." Now the ex-monk has found the right road, doubtless thinks Dornemann, and bids fair to follow it. The Church is the judge. "The Church is the congregation of those who are united by the same spirit, the same faith, the same God, the same Mediator, the same Word, by which alone they are governed." So runs Paradox the fourth. A dangerous leap! thinks the priest; the ex-monk clears tradition and the Fathers at a bound. He will have some difficulty in finding his way back to the orthodox path. The priest proceeds to Paradox fifth. "The Word is the true key. The kingdom of heaven is open to him who believes the Word, and shut against him who believes it not. Whoever, therefore, truly possesses the power of the Word of God, has the power of the keys." The ex-monk, thinks Dornemann, upsets the Pope's throne in the little clause that gives right to the Word alone to govern. "Since the priesthood of the law has been abolished," says the sixth proposition, "Christ is the only immortal and eternal Priest; and he does not, like men, need a successor." There goes the whole hierarchy of priests. Not an altar, not a mass in all Christendom that this proposition does not sweep away. Tradition, Councils, Popes, and now priests, all are gone, and what is left in their room? Let us read proposition seventh. "All Christians, since the commencement of the Church, have been and are participators in Christ's priesthood." The monk's Paradoxes are opening the flood-gates to drown the Church and world in a torrent of democracy. At that moment the stool was pulled from under the feet of the priest, and, tumbling in the dust, his public reading was suddenly brought to an end. We have heard enough, however; we see the ground-plan of the spiritual temple; the basis is broad enough to sustain a very lofty structure. Not a select few only, but all believers, are to be built as living stones into this "holy house." With the ex-Franciscan of Avignon, as with the ex-Augustinian of Wittemberg, the corner-stone of the Church's organisation is the "universal priesthood" of believers.

MASONIC TEACHING—WHAT IT REALLY IS.

THE following letter, having been found by a worthy brother of ours, has been sent us for publication. The writer has evidently gone into his subject con amore, and if he should chance to see it in these columns, and would like to have his manuscript back, we shall have great pleasure in returning it, with many thanks for the use of it:—

My Dear Son and Brother,—Your last affectionate letter gave me more pleasure than I can well express. For I had looked forward, for many years past, to the time when age and circumstances would entitle you to claim Masonic brotherhood with me, and the fact of your having allied yourself with the Fraternity consummates my wish. The pleasure is further enhanced by the acknowledgment that your steps were guided by the purest motives, and a firm conviction of the truth of our principles, not by personal solicitation.

You must be aware of my enthusiasm in the cause of Freemasonry, and know full well that it never led me to overstep the bounds of discretion. Otherwise I might have been induced to express a wish that you should become one of us. When I took leave of you at Liverpool my tongue almost betrayed me to express it, but remembering the trials of bygone years, and the lesson instilled, the strictest silence was observed, and I have always avoided asking any one to join us. At the same time it is well to admit that I have been the means of inducing many highly intelligent and worthy men, by simply enunciating the true principles upon which the Order is founded.

Long years of close application have established my faith, and it is my intention that this letter should be rather of Masonic than of family interest. Ere I proceed with Craftsmen's characteristics or their principles, be assured there is nothing which follows which might be considered an infraction of my oath. If any subject or particular is omitted, remember it is purposely done, and you must refer for yourself to those shining lights of your Eastern Hemisphere for the deficient parts.

In early childhood you were taught to love, but it was a limited love only. Masons exemplify it more universally. Their love is brotherly, and teaches them to regard the whole human species as one family. Both high and low, rich and poor were created by the same Almighty being, and sent into the world for the support and protection of one another. By acting up to this principle you may be united to men of every country, sect and opinion, and by its dictates excite a true friendship amongst those who might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance. The seeds of relief ripened early in your mind, and I remember well your earnest pleading on behalf of a poor creature who crossed our path when traversing the downs of Hampshire. Such a virtue is indeed noble, and it is a duty incumbent upon all men, particularly Masons, who are linked together in one indissoluble bond of fraternal affection, to relieve the distressed. Hence you are to soothe the unhappy, sympathise with their misfortunes, and, if possible, restore peace to their troubled minds. This is a grand aim to keep in view, and will establish you as a good Mason, while truth, being a divine attribute, will lay the foundation of every virtue. To be good and true is a lesson you were taught early, so that you might regulate your life and actions. Let hypocrisy be unknown to you, so that sincerity and plain dealing may prove your distinguishing characteristics, whilst heart and tongue join in promoting the welfare of others. Doubt not, my dear Son, what I say; have faith, for it is the foundation of justice, the bond of amity, and the chief support of civil society. Always live and walk by faith, as, by it, you will be justified, and finally received. True faith is the evidence of things not seen, but the substance of those hoped for; this, well and Masonically observed, will secure you eternal happiness hereafter. Hope is an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast. Have firm reliance in the Almighty. Keep your desires within the prescribed limits of His blessed promises; so will success attend you. Believe not things impossible, or despondency will render them so, but perseverance will overcome all difficulties. Above all, I pray you practise charity, but without detriment to yourself or connections. It is beautiful in itself, and the brightest ornament that can adorn a Mason, being the best test, and surest proof of his sincerity. Benevolence rendered by Heaven-born Charity is an honour to the nature whence it springs. Happy indeed is he in whose breast the seeds of benevolence are sown, for the fruit will destroy envy, refute slander, induce forgiveness, and blot out wrong from recollection. Be always ready to listen to him who may claim your assistance; so shall a heart-felt satisfaction follow your labour, and love and charity be your reward.

There is one thing it is necessary to call your attention to before I proceed further. It is too well known that the climate of India induces great thirst, therefore practise temperance. This means put a due restraint upon your passions and affections, so as to render the body governable, and the mind will be relieved from the allurements of vice. Temperance teaches you to avoid excess, and the contraction of any vicious habits which might lead you to disgrace. In order to prevent this, cultivate prudence; it is a firm support of the soul, the golden mean between rashness and cowardice, and will enable you to undergo any labour, pain, difficulty, or danger. Let this be deeply impressed upon your breast, as a security against any attack that might be made to extort a secret. And bear in mind that all these matters require prudence, which should guide your actions according to the dictates of reason. It is that habit of mind whereby men wisely judge, and determine upon whatever relates to their temporal and eternal welfare. Let this virtue be your distinguishing characteristic, not only for the regulation of your own conduct, but that you may set a pious example to all around. Above all, be just, for justice is an enlightened perception of moral right, and will teach you to render to every man his due. It is the essence of both divine and human laws. Without the exercise of justice, universal confusion would ensue, and social intercourse no longer exist, and as justice in a great measure constitutes the really good man, ever bear in mind the excellent injunctions you have received,—To be just and upright in all your dealings.

The first portion of my letter is nearing its close, and will be confined to a simple illustration of the distinguishing characteristics of every true Freemason; they are virtue, honor, mercy, and should they be banished all other societies, they will be found exemplified by faithful Craftsmen.

It is recorded in History that the Consul Marcellus erected two temples, to be dedicated to Virtue and Honor, and they were so contiguous, that the only avenue to the Temple of Honor was through that of Virtue, thereby inculcating the elegant moral, that virtue is the only direct road to honor. Virtue is the highest exercise and improvement of reason, the integrity, harmony, and just balance of the affections, the health, strength and beauty of the soul. The perfection of virtue is to give reason full scope, to obey the dictates of conscience with alacrity, exercise the defensive faculties with fortitude, the public with justice, the private with temperance, and the whole of them with prudence, that is, in due proportion to each other, with calm and diffusive benevolence; to love and adore God with an unrivalled and disinterested affection, and acquiesce in divine dispensations with cheerful resignation. Every approach to this standard is a step towards perfection and happiness, while every deviation has a tendency to vice and misery.

Honor may be considered the secret links of virtue's chain. It is the most manly and dignified sentiment of the human mind, the primeval standard of moral, social and obligatory acts, and the true foundation of mutual faith and credit, by which the intercourse of men is carried on with safety and pleasure. Honor differs from religion, still, the results are similar, the lines of action, though drawn from different parts, terminate in the same point.

Religion embraces Virtue as it is enjoined by the laws of God: Honor, as it is graceful and ornamental to human nature. Religious men fear, men of honor scorn an evil action; the latter considering vice beneath them, the former as offensive to the Deity, the one unbecoming, the other strictly forbidden, thus what some are prompted to by duty, conscience, or religion, others are by honor.

Men of true honour are not content with the literal discharge of duty as citizens, they raise and dignify it to magnanimity, giving where they might refuse, and forgiving where they might, with justice, resent, deeming it more honourable to forgive than resent injury. Rest assured that the only path to the temple of true honour is by that of virtue. Always bear in mind that you have been clothed with a badge more ancient and honorable than any other Order can boast; this alone will set you above the level of evil-minded men, and prove that you have been brought out of darkness. Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works, may emulate your example, and glorify the G.A.O.T.U. So much has been said of mercy, and in a thousand forms, that my pen is loth to tread ground so delectable. Our immortal bard wrote:—

> "The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
> It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
> Upon the place beneath: It is twice bless'd,
> It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes:
> 'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
> The throned monarch better than his crown;
> His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
> The attribute to awe and majesty,
> Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings,
> But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
> It is enthroned in the hearts of kings:
> It is an attribute to God himself;
> And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
> When mercy seasons justice."

FREEMASONRY—AN ADVANCIVE SCIENCE.

IT is strange how the language of common life will find its way into the recesses of Science the most abstruse. Custom, it is true, is the law of language, and every idiom is permissible, if not strictly proper, "Si volet usus," as declared by the Augustan Poet. All which is permissible, and even proper, however, is not always agreeable to the laws of a pure taste; and it would seem that certain walks of Science, if not of Literature, itself a science, should be left in the undisturbed possession of their own vocabulary. But custom, as a law of language, is almost paramount, and the learned as well as the unlearned, the doctors of science as well as the unlettered labourers, the Masters in Israel equally with the bearers of burdens, all fall under its acknowledged sway, and speak even in their own fields, "si volet usus."

These reflections naturally arise out of a consideration of the subject indicated in the title of this article. The proclivity of man to evil is so much greater than his aptness for virtue, the progression downward is so rapid, the "facilis descensus" so plain and marked, while the effort to do good is so painful and slow, so great the "opus" and "labor," that the common mind, impressed with a firm conviction of its truth, will not believe but that all progression must needs be an advancement for evil. Thus, the phrases "Advancive age," "fast youth," and the like, are always used in this last and worse sense, and the thought of our people, so far at least as it is to be found in their language, one of the outward signs of that thought, would seem to ignore all advancement for good. It is to this cause we would impute the jealous honour entertained by some brethren, at the use of the word "Advancive in Freemasonry." We think that this feeling arises from a misapprehension of the meaning of the word, and, with the hope of reconciling in some degree the variant opinions held on this subject, propose to devote a short space to its consideration.

It is to be remarked that the different opinions now held, are held with equal zeal, pertinacity and earnestness, and that brethren of the greatest intelligence, and the most undoubted integrity and devotion to Freemasonry, are to be found on either side of the question,—and while some would not have a word out of place from what they have been taught as the Ancient Lectures, others would have, while they retain the substance, a new and more lively interest imparted to them, through the greater copiousness of illustration and wealth of imagery, furnished in the enlarged materials of a more advanced, and advancive state of Art and Science. This argues, we own, most conclusively, the great power of Freemasonry to attract and fix the regard of the intelligent and good, but at the same time it presents a case the most rare of want of agreement among debatants upon the terms of the question discussed. As we believe herein lies the whole difficulty, and that, rightly understood, there is really no point of difference between them, but that Freemasonry here, as everywhere, is a unit, vast, complete—we shall begin our enquiry by defining, if we may be able, what is meant by stating that Freemasonry is an Advancive Science. We must premise that advancement is not innovation—that there is an advancement in good—in virtue—as well as in evil. Slower, it is true, scarcely perceptible at times, we, perforce, must allow—but still, blessed be God, an advancement, unmistakeable, positive, sure.

And here it does seem strange, that a science which was in early times denominated Lux, and whose initiates are even now called "Sons of Light," should be claimed within itself, to contain its own definitions, an abnegation of the principles of the advancement. But this is error. The whole scope and design of Speculative Masonry is to produce advancement in morality and virtue. Her ritual, her degrees, her symbols all teach and encourage to the same. From the first step, when Light first beams upon the sense of the initiate, throughout he is taught to ask for more light, and more is constantly given. And the same advancement is sedulously inculcated in our outward and moral life in the world. We are taught, in the language of our lectures, that "We ought in youth, as Entered Apprentices, industriously to occupy our minds in the attainment of useful knowledge, the discharge of our respective duties to God, our neighbours and ourselves; that so, in age as Master Masons, we may enjoy the happy reflection consequent on a well-spent life, and die in the hopes of a glorious immortality"—thus pointing out the natural advancement of progression of goodness and virtue, to the final reward of the just.

The ritual of the three symbolic degrees especially declares advancement. The candidate, in the first, is made to enter upon the arduous road of reform and moral improvement. A new code of social conduct is given to him, and his attention directed to the Great Light whence are quarried all the moral truths of her teachings. In the second he is passed along the road of advancement, under the guidance of faithful conductors, until in the third he is raised to the full perceptions of his relations to God, his fellow-men and himself—that Great light ever burning before him as the precious Heart of his maker, displayed in His love and mercy towards the sons of men. If here is not advancement, what is advancement?

The same idea M.W. Bro. Scott, an American Masonic writer, of a high order of talent, in his "Analogy," thus developes: "There are three steps and three degrees in Symbolical Masonry. Each step or degree is an advance towards light and knowledge. There is more revealed in the Fellow Craft's degree than in the degree of the Entered Apprentice; and there is fullness of light and knowledge in the degree of Master."

Even in the "Ancient Charges," as we have them, an advancement in Masonry is acknowledged. For whereas it is said that "though in ancient times Masons were charged in every country to be of the religion of that country or nation, whatever it was,—yet it is now thought more expedient only to oblige them to that religion wherein all men agree, leaving their particular opinions to themselves, &c.—

and thus to advance and more surely secure the great object of Freemasonry, to present to all a "centre of union, and the means of conciliating true friendship among persons that must have remained at a perpetual distance;"—thus assisting in the advent of that day, when all the earth shall know and acknowledge the one, true and living God, and bow no more unto "stocks and stones."

There is a sense, in which there can be no advancement in Masonry. And this is in relation to the ritual and landmarks of the Society. Advancement here would be no innovation. These are fixed and unalterable, and cannot be changed without changing the distinctive feature of Freemasonry itself. In this sense we are as bitterly opposed to "Advancement" as any, and admit as freely, and are prepared to depend as stoutly as any, "that it is not in the power of any men, or body of men, to make innovations in the body of Masonry."

But this is a confined sense. Without touching the ritual or the landmarks, we see no good reason why the brother, who is capable, should be debarred from amplifying and enriching the lectures with the stores of his own learning and experience. The only difficulty in the way of latitude here, is to be found from the vain-glorious and vaulting ambition of some who might fancy themselves capable, when the brethren would not be so ready to admit it. But does not herein consist the remedy for this? Aside from this, whenever the demands of the work will allow, we think it would not be without profit to encourage such lectures. "It is clear," says Dr. Oliver, "that the lectures of Masonry are arbitrary; and, with the exception of a few determinate landmarks, vary essentially in different countries; being constituted in such a manner as to agree with the peculiar habits and belief of the fraternity who use them; that the introduction of no startling facts or unacceptable doctrines may cause disputes or divisions to arise amongst a brotherhood who profess to be connected by the indissoluble chain of brotherly love.

For Masonry meddles with no system of religion, and leaves every member at full liberty to follow that way of faith to which he had been educated. So that the Mahommedan, the Israelite, and the believer in the new Dispensation may each in his own country tinge, in his imagination, the ceremonies of the Lodge with the hues of his own faith, without doing violence to the essentials of Freemasonry, and without cause of complaint from each other as brethren.

We would by no means be understood to wish to abrogate, nor do we infer that such was the wish of Bro. Oliver—any part of what are known among Masons, as the "Lodge Lectures." Those must necessarily remain the same, at least so far as they are in elucidation of the work. But, we do think, that here is the very design of our fathers, to allow the experienced and talented brother, according to his gifts and qualifications, to amplify, to beautify, to complete, and render more impressive on the candidate, their solemn and useful lessons. They are the mere skeleton, to be clothed upon, and filled out into perfect and attractive shape, by the stores of learning and experience, and of disciplined imagination, in the hands of the skilful and well tried brother.

The readers of the "CANADIAN MASONIC NEWS," we feel assured, will bear us out, in their own experience, as they call to mind the great difference they have themselves felt between the lectures thus vivified and vivifying, and the same lectures rehearsed in monotonous tone and pinched limits. It is the difference between the lifeless frame, the naked, lifeless skeleton, and the same skeleton clothed upon with flesh, and muscles, and arteries, and with the breath of life in its nostrils, moving before us in all the poetry of life, motion, and intelligence.

Encourager of the Arts and Sciences as Freemasonry is, it is reasonable to expect her to show that she is not blind to their advance, and that in the tropes and figures in her lectures she is able, with a Mistress' hand, to call from every field whatever she may desire for ornament or for conviction, thus giving indubitable evidence that her advancement is ever paced with theirs. For, though it may be, that all our boasted advance in Arts and Science, is more imaginary than real, and that we are only moving back in the great cycle of those to a point already witnessed and passed in Earth's ages, still it is advancement from the condition in which they stood in the "dark ages;" and Freemasonry were false to her own teaching did she not fail to adopt herself to the enlightment of her day

This is what we understand by advancement in Masonry. We would not disturb one stone in the Temple, where essentials are concerned. We mourn after uniformity of work, equally with any of our brethren. We want that work to remain ancient, intact. The principles of Freemasonry we would have the same, and count it sacrilege in any one to offer to change them. Founded on eternal wisdom, they are from everlasting to everlasting immutable, sacred. Indeed, all true principles are in their very nature indestructible and immutable; for what are they but the pulsations of the Great Heart of the Universe—even the unmoved God Himself. We believe if all understood advancement in Freemasonry to mean this, all would be content to have such advancement, and we cannot but suspect that it is only from a want of enquiring as to what it is they mean by "advancement" in Masonry that the difference is so wide among some of the brethren thereon. If this article shall contribute to a better agreement as to the definition of "advancement"—and any shall find, that misled by the popular use of the word, they have mistaken advancement for innovation, and that in truth there exists no real difference in the minds of the brethren on the subject, we shall be abundantly compensated. Not that the harmony of the workmen has ever been disturbed in consequence of these differences of opinion—for that is not so—but when there is perfect agreement, even on minor points, the work will be more effective. Brethren, Freemasonry has a great work before her. "Let us work while it is day, remembering the night cometh when no man can work."

REVIEWS.

The Land of the North Wind: or Travels among the Laplanders and the Samoyedes. By EDWARD RAE, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. London: John Murray, Albemarle-street. 1875.

THIS is one of the most genially written books of travels it has been our lot to read, and one which, from the slight knowledge the public possesses of the countries visited, is well calculated to excite the interest of the general reader. Both countries are far enough removed to be seldom explored by the almost ubiquitous British traveller. In fact we know of but one or two books of recent date which contain any record of travelling experiences in Lapland, and none which refers to the land of the Samoyedes. Hence Mr. Rae has conferred a service on the reading public, by setting before it the narrative of his and "the Doctor's" experiences, the success of which will, we think, be fully recognised by all. It is not necessary to enter into a long account of the narrative. By so doing we should anticipate the reader in his study of the work. Our object is to commend it to his notice, not to furnish him with such abundant extracts as to save him the trouble of perusing it. Moreover, there is an excellent map of the two journeys, and this will enable any one to follow the course of the travellers with the greatest ease. Let it suffice to state that the visits were paid in two consecutive summers, namely, those of 1873 and 1874; that the travellers simply equipped for the journey, that the weather was suitable, and that the explorations were accomplished without misadventure. Everywhere they experienced hospitality. Everywhere facilities for their progress were offered. Possibly, other Englishmen may follow in their wake. If so, we think they will do well to read this narrative before setting out. By so doing they will benefit by the experience of Mr. Rae and his fellow voyager, both as to equipment and the course they should pursue.

We have said that Mr. Rae is a genial writer, in fact, we feel ourselves at home with him after the very commencement of his journey, almost as though we were of the party. The start is from Hull, and we are immediately introduced to the compagnons de voyage with whom fate ordains that the author shall be associated on board the steamer. The early part of the journey, however, is uneventful, and accordingly we hasten forward to the early experiences in Lapland. On reaching terra firma, a guide is, of course, engaged, and Jones, the individual in question, is decidedly a character, the source of intense amusement to the travellers, if not remarkably efficient in the rôle he undertakes. In fact, but one half of the first stage to Kanto-Keino is accomplished, when it turns out, not seriously to the disturbance of Mr. Rae's equanimity, that Jones is as much in need of guidance as those whom he has undertaken to guide. Fortunately the right man turns up, and all goes well, the party reaching their destination in due course. This episode is most amusingly told. Strand, or, as he is afterwards named, Somerset, says Mr. Rae, "came in shortly, and said that Jones waited without: I said, desire Jones to step in. When Jones had stepped in he stood with his hair erect all over his head, his embroidered collar upright above his ears, and twirling uneasily in his hands his blue and red square cloth cap. His woeful, penitent, comical, uncomfortable expression, was too much to look at seriously: but I shook my head at him, and said, O! Jones, and has it come to this; and Jones, who was uncertain whether to fall upon his knees, burst into tears, or burst into laughter, then confessed everything, saying, finally, he would be content with any arrangement we might make as to his remuneration. We decided to give him his due proportion of money, and a present of two silver dollars and a pocket knife, upon which he advanced and shook our hands with effusion." Under Somerset's guidance Kanto-Keino is reached in good time, and safely. They approach a clean wooden building, and knocking for entrance, are met by a hard featured, wooden figured woman, but we had better quote the narrator's own description:

"A hard featured, wooden figured woman came to the door: and on catching sight of us, jerked her hands like a semaphore, and exclaimed 'Mangarich mafeesh,' meaning, in the Lapp tongue, Nothing to eat—no got to eat. This she said twelve or thirteen times, and went on jerking her hands; but we desired her to be calm, and walked into the clean birch-lined room, where she had been spinning, and sat down upon a comfortable couch. We said we were able to eat a little fish, a few dozen eggs, and one or two loaves of bread; otherwise, we said, we should swallow her wool and drain her lamp, oil, wick and all. She exclaimed, 'Sadazi probodn Vensis!' equivalent, we should think, to Oh, good gracious, and jerked herself out of the room. In another half-hour a snowy table-cloth, and clean knives, forks, cups, plates, and glasses were placed in front of us. We had forreted out of the hampers some biscuits, marmalade, and chocolate. Shortly notre dame en bois came in with a steaming dish of fried fish—eggs we could not have till to-morrow; but there was coffee, and there was delicious cream, and there was a vessel full of milk. We ate like panthers who have not seen a kid for three days, and then lounged upon the sofa in peaceful repletion."

This, we think, will give a very fair idea of the author's style, and will fully confirm our opinion as to the geniality of his narrative. But this is not his only excellence. His descriptive power is very considerable; witness his account of the descent of the Lappiafors on the Muonio River, a matter of some ninety feet, and dangerous withal, for there are jagged rocks and a swift torrent, yet the descent is accomplished, almost without misadventure, under the skilful guidance of Abraham. Not so the descent of the Kengis Fall, with another less able crew. It is touch and go with the boat, which is half filled with water, when shelter rounds nasty rock is found. At Kemi, the travellers see the mummy—one of five hundred, we are told—of a departed bishop. After various excursions in the neighbourhood of Haparunder the travellers take boat to Uleaborg in Finland, and thence, after further adventure, pass on to Stockholm, and thence onward till they return to England. Thus ended their summer campaign of 1873. In 1874, they set out for the home of the Samoyedes, on the White Sea. Archangel was the first point, and here Mr. Rae and the Doctor, whose real name, by the way, is Mr. Henry Pilkington Brandreth, having obtained whatever was requisite in the way of passports, and also a podorostowi, or order for post-horses from station to station, the exploration is commenced. It is hardly needful, however, that we should dwell, at any length, on the writer's account. The journey was well worth undertaking, and the narrative is well worth reading. Little, perhaps, is known in England of this simple people, so that the account of this journey cannot fail to be instructive as well as interesting. The excerpts we have given are sufficient evidence of the proposition we stated at the outset. For the full particulars of—to use a commercial expression—those highly successful ventures, we refer our readers to the book itself, in the firm conviction that they will derive infinite pleasure from the study of its pages. We may add that the book is admirably "got up," as, indeed, is the case with all Mr. Murray's publications, that there are a few illustrations and an excellent map with the course followed by the travellers on each journey.

Carter's Catalogue of Fresh Imported Dutch Flower Roots, 1875.

Messrs. Carter and Co., the well-known seedsmen, are always foremost in their desire to furnish their patrons with the newest and choicest varieties of bulbs and other plants. As the season for cultivating the former is close at hand, those of our readers who wish to have their beds well filled with hyacinths, narcissus, tulips, crocuses, and the like, who confine their attention to the conservatory or the room, or a small amount of window decoration only, should take an early opportunity of laying in the needful supply of bulbs. For first come, first choice. Messrs. Carter and Co.'s collections are well assorted, and contain, according to price, named varieties of every description of bulb. Those for the conservatory and window decoration vary from half-a-guinea to four guineas, those for the conservatory and open ground from fifteen shillings to four guineas, and those for planting in the open from half-a-guinea to four guineas. Among the most costly varieties are "King of the Blues," dark blue and purple, marked seven and sixpence a root, "Lothair" and "Lord Derby," light blue, four and sixpence and three and sixpence a-piece respectively, "La Grandesse" and "L'Innocence," pure white, six and sixpence and five and sixpence a-piece; "Garibaldi," dark red and crimson, five and sixpence each, "Bird of Paradise," yellow, six and sixpence each. Other varieties good, but less costly, range from sixpence to two shillings, and two and sixpence per root. Among Lilies are the beautiful "Lilium Auratum" of Japan, varying from half-a-crown to half-a-guinea a-piece, and some new varieties of which the "Lilium Krameri," and the "Lilium Tigrinum Flore Pleno," range as high as a guinea each, while the "Lilium Giganteum" ranges from five to fifteen shillings each. Then there are Iris, Ixias, Ranunculi, Gladioli, &c., &c., all of the best class, and fair in price. But while the greatest prominence is given to these plants, others are included in the catalogue, among them being the beautiful foliage plants, the new crocus, "Duchess of Edinburgh," to which first class certificates were awarded last year and this, another coleus "The Mandarin," both being half-a-crown a plant, or three and sixpence if extra strong; the new Gloxinea, "Queen of England," half-a-guinea a piece, to which a first class certificate was awarded last year by the Royal Horticultural Society. Then there are Greenhouse Plants, Herbaceous Plants, Roses of every kind, besides Fruit Trees, Vines, Ornamental Trees and others. In fact, those given to floriculture will find no difficulty in obtaining what they want of Messrs. Carter and Co., whose anxiety to please their patrons is too well known to stand in need of any comment from us.

James Veitch and Son's Catalogue of Hyacinths and other Bulbous Roots. Autumn 1875. Royal Exotic Nursery, King's-road, Chelsea, S.W.

Messrs. Veitch and Sons confine themselves in this catalogue almost wholly to bulbs, of which they offer a great variety, some of their choicest specimens being those to which prizes were awarded at different exhibitions both last year as well as in 1871, 1872 and 1873. Here again the Hyacinths are in great force both as regards the number and quality of their specimens. There are Polyanthus Narcissus, Narcissus, Jonquils, Tulips, Scillas, Ixias, Sparaxis, Tritonias, Cyclamens, especially "Cyclamen Persicum Grandiflorum," five shillings and seven and sixpence each, to which the first class certificate of the Royal Botanic Society was awarded on the 22nd March 1871. The lilies also include the rarest varieties (L. Auratum, L. Giganteum, L. Brownii or Japonicum, L. Hamboldti, &c.), and Gladioli, besides varieties of vegetable seed for autumn sowing, and flower seeds for ditto, &c., &c. We are are confident the patrons of Messrs. Veitch and Sons will be well pleased with the quality of the purchases they make, but the purchases should be made soon, as the range of selection is necessarily greater.

Vita di Michel Angelo Buonarroti Narrata con l'aiuto di nuovi documenti di Aurelio Gotti, Direttore delle R.R. Gallerie di Firenze. Firenze: Tipografia della Gazzetta d'Italia Editrice. 12 Settembre 1875.

This year marks the fourth centenary of one of Italy's greatest sons, the painter, poet, sculptor and architect, Michael Angelo. Additional interest has been given to the fact by the appearance, on the 12th of the present month, of a new biography of the artist, from the pen of Signor Aurelio Gotti, Director of the Royal Galleries of Florence. In this are published for the first time, some important documents, preserved in the Buonarotti family, which lend to the work a value not possessed by the older biographies of Condivi, Vasari, Harford, and Grimm. The work moreover is executed with great skill, reverence, and discretion, and it can scarcely be doubted that it will henceforth be regarded as furnishing the most authoritative exposition of this extraordinary man's career. From the letters that are published in the second volume, we obtain a very clear insight into what is unquestionably the most interesting artistic epoch of modern times, the age of Raphael Leonardo da Vinci and Michael Angelo. Contemporary with these three men existed a crowd of painters and sculptors of an inferior, but yet high order, amongst whom jealousy of their greater fame became in many instances exalted or degraded into an all absorbing passion. The malignant envy of Baccio Bandinelli caused the destruction of one of Michael Angelo's greatest works, the cartoon executed for the Hall of the Grand Council of Florence, and of which but a few fragments remain.

It was of this grand work that the celebrated Benvenuto Cellini writes: "As long as the Cartoon stood it was the school of the world." To the jealousy of Bramante, however, we owe the scenes of scriptural frescoes which adorn the vaults of the Sistine Chapel at Rome. For, to quote Vasaris, he persuaded the Pope "to take Michael Angelo away from sculpture, in which they, Bramante and other jealous ones, recognised his perfection, and put him to painting, in which, as he had small experience in frescoes, they hoped he would produce less praiseworthy work than Raphael, and should he succeed, they still resolved to set the Pope against him, and prevent him from continuing, it being their intention, in one way or another, to get rid of him."

But it is needless to add that the artist's genius, on this as on other occasions, altogether confounded his adversaries. Perhaps the works in which Michael Angelo's powers are best shown are the painting of the "Last Judgment," and the finely sculptured tomb of Julius II. Of the former work one Signor Biagio ventured to express an opinion to Pope Paul. "Holy Father," he said, "if I might utter my thoughts, I would say that this painting is more fit for a tavern room than for the chapel of a Pope." The artist heard this not too flattering criticism, and revenged himself on the speaker by painting his portrait amongst the lost souls. The same Pope, at another time, took upon himself to find some fault with this work, and the fact was reported to the painter. "Tell Pope Paul," he replied, "to trouble himself less with correcting my picture, which it is easy for him to do, and to try and reform public manners, which he will find more difficult." Signor Gotti's work corrects some mistakes into which former biographers have fallen, and adds some facts which, being both interesting and new, would of themselves suffice to ensure for the work a hearty welcome.

Madeline, and other Poems. By J. Puntis. London: Civil Service Printing and Publishing Company. 1875.

This is an attractive little work, handsomely got up, and very well suited for a birthday or other present. The poetry is of a passable order, though more remarkable for promise than performance. As a fair average specimen of the quality of the work, we may quote the following poem:—

THE AMBUSCADE.

Hark! hark, my men, to the distant sound
Of the tramp of the coming foe;
Lie close! lie close to the shelt'ring ground,
Soon enough our presence he'll know.

Hist! hist, my men, a word do not breathe,
Their plumes are fast rising in sight;
Keep close! keep close, don't your places leave,
We will soon put them all to flight.

Be ready! fire! don't hurry! take aim!
That's a welcome they didn't expect;
Your rifle's music's like pat'ring rain!
See! they reel like a ship that's wreck'd.

Start up! start up! fix your bayonets fast;
Charge! charge with a ringing cheer!
March on! march on! hark, the bugles blast!
They'll be off before we get near.

They fly! quick, quick! oh, never mind me!
Hurrah! for my Queen I die!
On, on! just put me under that tree;
Till you come back there I will lie.

The Freemason's Repository (Providence, R.I.) contains part of the address, recently delivered, by the Hon. George B. Loring, at the dedication of the Masonic Hall, North Andover, Mass., on St. John's Day, 24th June. We commend it to the notice of our readers. There is a long and appreciative obituary notice of our late distinguished Bro. Dr. Winslow Lewis, whose Masonic career, extracted from this account, will be quoted in another issue, and summarised accounts of Masonic proceedings in various part of the United States.

Chamber's Journal contains the first eleven chapters of a new story from the pen of that well-known romancist, Captain Mayne Reid, whose previous tales have afforded so much pleasure to all classes of readers, but especially to those of the lively and more imaginative age boyhood. The other contents are unusually excellent, and we have noted with great pleasure the articles on the "Natural History and Sport of South America," "Edible Birds' Nests," "Factory Life in Lancashire," "Seventeen years among Savages," and "Holiday Botanism," the last being extracted almost wholly from the Queen, but none the less worthy of attention for being quoted. There are also some useful remarks "About Gas Meters," which will prove of interest to householders, intending or actual, as the case may be.

The principal features in The Leisure Hour are, in the first place, "The Siege of Stralsund," by Jacob B. de Liefde, whose Great Dutch Admirals and The Beggars have been so justly appreciated in the literary world. The siege was one of the leading incidents during the ever memorable Thirty Years' War. Wallenstein was the heart and soul of the Imperialists, while inside the revolted town prevailed at various times a number of serious dissensions, which threatened its safety. But though Wallenstein impiously swore he would take it even though it were tied to heaven by iron chains, the siege had to be raised. We have in the present number only a portion of the history, but what we have, and what, no doubt, will follow in future numbers, is eminently readable. Then Mr. Henry Walker discourses pleasantly of "The Birds of London," and some of our readers who have given little thought to the matter, who think, perhaps, the London sparrow and the pigeons at Somerset House and the Guildhall are about the only representatives of the feathered race this dirty metropolis of ours can boast, will be not a little surprised to find so many others included in the list. There are some pleasant "Natural History Anecdotes," a paper entitled, "Down the Road With a Gentleman Coachman," No. IV. of "Caricatures and Caricaturists," in which the career of the great Gillray is sketched, the majority of his best and happiest hits being re-counted. Lastly, we have brief notes of the "Norwich Vivisection Prosecution," and a short biography of Daniel O'Connell, apropos, of course, of the recent centenary celebration of the great Liberator's birth.

Sunday at Home is equally interesting. Dr. Edersheim's series of papers on "Jewish Life in the Time of our Lord," is continued, the subject of the present essay being "Commerce." There is a most valuable paper on the "Nusairiych and their Religion." These dwell in Palestine, in the neighbourhood of Antioch and its vicinity, and the writer furnishes an excellent account of them as well as of the tenets they profess. "The Kaiser's Gift" and "Jeannie Wilson of Lammermoor," are also pleasant reading, while the general matter exhibits all the usual points of excellence, for which this periodical is so justly known.

MASONRY AND THE EGYPTIAN MONUMENTS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The articles that have appeared from time to time in your columns, upon the Antiquity of Freemasonry, have been read by me with deep interest. Though but a young member of the Craft, I take great delight in all that pertains to its history, and would fain discover if the great nations of antiquity comprehended its principles and obligations in the sense in which we understand them at the present day. I call to mind some verses I once read, entitled an "Address to a Mummy in Belzoni's Exhibition," in which the lines occur:—

"Perhaps thou wert a Mason, and forbid
By oath to tell the secrets of thy trade;"

And wonder if the recent deciphering of Egyptian inscriptions can have thrown any light upon this question. It is quite certain that the Egyptians in architecture, mechanics and astronomy had attained a very high degree of excellence. We need no further proof of this than is afforded by the pyramids and other architectural remains, and that even more remarkable monument still, the volume of Euclid's elements. My object in writing to you is to endeavour to obtain from you, or from one of your numerous correspondents, some elucidation of this, to me, most interesting question, or if not this, at least some information as to the sources from which such knowledge may be obtained. I cannot help thinking, Sir, that there are many of our fellow Craftsmen who would welcome, as I should, a series of articles showing what light, if any, has been thrown by recent researches upon the supposed connection existing between the ancient Egyptians and our glorious Craft.

I am, Sir, &c.

NEOPHYTE.

STEWARDS FOR OUR FESTIVALS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—I have been a subscriber to your paper from the first, and have watched, with great concern, the progress you have made to carry out the programme you set yourselves. You certainly seem not to have lacked energy. We have had presented all sorts of [illegible] you have been early in the field in giving us reports of the various gatherings that have been held during the year, and you seem to have tided over the slack period, if I may so express myself. In a few weeks we shall have our Lodges assembling, and the various questions so paramount to the success of the Craft will come under discussion. Arrangements will have to be made that the several Lodges shall appoint good men and true to work for our Old Men and Women, our Girls, and our Boys; we have done well it is true, it is true; but our numbers have materially increased, and larger amounts must necessarily be collected to meet the increased demands that are sure to arise from the accession that has been made to our numbers. I would strongly urge upon those brethren who may be called upon to serve as Stewards to consider well the responsibility they take upon themselves. It requires that a man should use great discretion in finding a fit and proper opportunity ere he solicits his acquaintances for their donations. I may mention an instance that occurred to me a short time back. A worthy and most energetic brother, one universally respected, called upon me, and exhibiting a long list of names, told me that he was about to pay them his outstanding business accounts, and that he meant to get something out of them for the Charity he was then working for as a Steward. This was perhaps all very well for the Charity, but it occurred to me that he was using a kind of thumbscrew, and that it might not raise our institution in the opinion of those interested, some of whom would, I venture to say, consider themselves victimised. A form in frequent use among a certain class is something of this kind: "Ah! Bro.—— I have put you down on my list for one guinea (or any other amount), same as the others; I suppose that is right?" and as this is, perhaps purposely, said in the presence of comparative strangers, it generally goes for "right." Then we have the over cautious brother, who is afraid to ask for subscriptions except by printed circular or a short letter, and although most of the best men in our Order never require asking twice, there are more who require a great deal, and among the latter class can be named men who, to use a business term, can best afford it. The characteristics of our Lodges are so different that I fear there is no hope of our ever having "A Royal Road to Canvassing," as what would be successful in one case might offend half the members in another.

YOURS, &c. ONE WHO HAS NOT YET SERVED.

A MASONIC LIST.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR,—Notwithstanding the works and journals published in connection with Freemasonry, there is an obvious requirement that has not yet been fulfilled—one that I believe the brethren generally will acknowledge and support—I mean a complete list, not only of the various Lodges, but of their several members, officers, &c., with the dates of initiation of the former, and appointment of the latter. Such lists, if carefully revised annually, would be of great utility in scores of instances, as it would show at a glance the really active and effective members of our noble Craft.

I believe that Grand Lodge would approve of such a work, and that every secretary would gladly furnish the desired information.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,

1227.

A ROUGH COMPUTATION.—On calling at the residence of the modest and unobtrusive medical practitioner, Leverrier refused to say who he was, but in the most abrupt manner, and in the most authoritative tone, began, "It is then you, sir, who pretend to have observed a new planet, and who have committed the grave offence of keeping your observation secret for nine months. I warn you that I have come here with the intention of doing justice to your pretensions, and of demonstrating either that you have been dishonest or deceived. Tell me then unequivocally what you have seen." The doctor then explained what he had witnessed, and entered into all the particulars regarding his discovery. On speaking of the rough method adopted to ascertain the period of the first contact, the astronomer inquired what chronometer he had been guided by, and was naturally enough somewhat surprised when the physician pulled out a huge old watch, with only minute hands. It had been his faithful companion in his professional journeys, he said: but that would hardly be considered a satisfactory qualification for performing so delicate an experiment. The consequence was that Leverrier, evidently now beginning to conclude that the whole affair was an imposition or delusion, exclaimed, with some warmth, "What, with that old watch, showing only minutes, dare you talk of estimating seconds? My suspicions are already well founded." To this Lescarbault replied that he had a pendulum by which he counted seconds. This was produced, and found to consist of an ivory ball, attached to a silken thread, which, being hung on a nail in the wall, is made to oscillate, and is shown by the watch to beat very nearly seconds. Leverrier is now puzzled to know how the number of seconds is ascertained, as there is nothing to mark them; but Lescarbault states that with him there is no difficulty whatever in this, as he is accustomed to "feel pulses and count their pulsations," and ran with ease carry out the same principle with the pendulum. The telescope is next inspected, and pronounced satisfactory. The astronomer then asks for the original memorandum, which after some searching is found, "covered with grease and laudanum." There is a mistake of four minutes on it when compared with the doctor's letter, detecting which, the savant declares that the "observation has been falsified." An error in the watch regulated by sidereal time accounts for this. Leverrier now wishes to know how the doctor managed to regulate his watch by sidereal time, and is shown the small telescope by which it is accomplished. Other questions are asked and satisfactorily answered. The [illegible]'s rough drafts of attempts to ascertain the distance of the planet from the sun, "from the period of four hours which is required to describe an entire diameter of that luminary, are produced, chalked on a board. Lescarbault's method, he being short of paper, was to make his [illegible] blank, and make way for fresh ones by planing them off. [illegible] mathematician, it may be remarked that he had not succeeded [illegible] the distance of the planet from the Sun. The end of it all was that Leverrier became perfectly satisfied that an extra-mercurial planet had been really observed. He congratulated the medical practitioner upon his discovery, and left with the intention of making the facts thus obtained the subject of fresh calculations.—From "The Planets and Leverrier's Balance," in the "Cornhill Magazine" for September.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

Fourth Application—October Election, 1875.

The favour of your Votes and Interest is most earnestly solicited on behalf of

RICHARD THOMAS GARDNER, Aged 8 Years.

SON of the late Brother RICHARD RAVENSHAW GARDNER, of 12 Graham Street, Walworth, Surrey, Dancing Master, who died 22nd October 1870, after a long and painful illness, leaving a Widow and Four Children totally unprovided for; his lengthened infirmity having exhausted all previous savings. Brother Gardner was initiated in the Panmure Lodge, No. 720, in 1850, served the several Offices, and passed the Chair of that Lodge, and was generally respected by the numerous Brethren with whom his business brought him in contact.

The case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren, viz:—

Bro. George Kenning P.M. 169, Past Grand Deacon for Middlesex.
Bro. Magnus Oliven P.M. P.Z. 33, P.M. and M.E.Z. 862, G.J. Warden for Surrey; Lower Sydenham, S.E.
Bro. William Hudson P.M. 316, Past Prov. G.J.D. for Sussex, P.Z. 732, P.M. Mark 75; Brighton.
Bro. Nathan Bryant Headon W.M. Great City Lodge, No. 1426; 65 Friday Street, London, E.C.
Bro. James H. Vockins W.M. Sphynx Lodge, No. 1329; 198 Stockwell Road, Brixton, S.
Bro. James Weaver P.M. 862, W.M. 1216, M.E.Z. 862, P.P.G. Organist, Middlesex; 46 Howland Street, Fitzroy Square, W.
Bro. Charles L. Marshall P.M.; 22 Grosvenor Park, Camberwell, S.E.
Bro. Mark Samuel Lanham J.W. 1216; York Street, Walworth, S.E.
Bro. James Freeman 1297, Treasurer 1426; 65 Friday Street, E.C.
Bro. William S. Webster P.M. 231, P.Z. 21; 17 Ely Place, Holborn, E.C.
Bro. Thomas Moore P.M. 720; High Street, Clapham.
Bro. James Stevens P.M. 25, 720, 1216, 1426, P.Z. 720, M.E.Z. 771, P.G.O. Mark, &c.; 18°; Clapham Common, S.W.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE jury in the inquest on the body of the mate of the Mistletoe have given their verdict, but whether that verdict is calculated to throw any light on the accident is another question. Most people were already aware of the fact that the unfortunate fellow came by his death through drowning, and likewise that the Alberta and Mistletoe came into collision. There is, however, a rider, and in this the jury suggest that a better look-out should be kept on board the Royal Yacht, and a slower rate of speed adopted, especially in the summer months, while they believe that on the day in question the navigating officers were guilty of an error in judgment. We presume the jury mean by this that the accident arose through the fault of those in charge of the Queen's Yacht, in which case the rider and the verdict to which it is attached are inconsistent. An accident which is the result of negligence is hardly an accident in the strictest sense, and if the non-observance of certain precautions led to the collision, the fault lies with those who neglected such precautions. However, the verdict is given, and there is, we presume, an end of the matter. The Queen has written a letter, expressive of her wish that yachts should keep clear of the Royal Yacht, instead of steering alongside of it, from motives of loyalty or curiosity, as too often happens now; and this, we fancy, is the gist of the case. The Alberta was steaming as usual, pleasure yachts were flitting about in its neighbourhood as usual, and one of them, contrary to past experience, came to grief. People who mix in crowds occasionally get their toes trodden on. It may be they escape such a calamity for twenty times, but the twenty-first time they suffer in a way that must have been expected sooner or later. If people will act on the Queen's suggestion, and keep out of the way of her yacht, there will be no likelihood of an accident, even though it speed along at twice or thrice the rate she was going; and common courtesy suggests that her wishes should be respected.

As to the loss of the Vanguard, the Court-Martial on Captain Dawkins is still prosecuting its inquiries, while the divers are still at work on the sunken vessel, parts of which, or rather its top-gear, have already been recovered. Whether the hull can be got up now, or some future time, is a doubtful question. Twelve thousand tons, or thereabouts, is a goodish weight to lift, even in these scientific days. However, "impossible" is a word which all Englishmen strive to keep out of their vocabulary, and it may be that the Vanguard will appear again in company with the Iron Duke, the Warrior, and its sister ironclads. There is yet another accident, of which the results have been very serious. An overladen boat capsized in Plymouth Harbour, and some ten marines drowned. The usual inquiry was held, and the result is that Colonel Penrose, Commandant of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines, and Staff-Sergeant George, as senior non-commissioned officer present at the embarkation of the men, are charged with being the cause of their death, Corporal Furness being completely exonerated. This verdict the Coroner was specially requested by the jury to forward to the Admiralty. Three such accidents as these; the collision of the Alberta and Mistletoe, the loss of the Vanguard, and the upset of a boatful of "jollies" coming so closely together, will cause people to inquire if our Navy is as efficient as it should be, if our seamanship is what it was half-a-century since. But misadventures seldom come singly, and nothing has happened that we wot of to shake our confidence in the Navy.

A trial is about being made—by the time these remarks come under the notice of our readers, will have been made—with the largest thing in the way of Woolwich Infants. The 81-ton gun has been tried at the butts, with what result our readers, no doubt, are already acquainted. A slight hitch occurred in getting it into position, but not from any of the causes the probability of which had been anticipated. The bridge stood the weight, the rails proved true, but the truck that bore the gun got off the rails, and a few hours' hard labour were necessary to get it back again. This, however, was safely accomplished, and the monstrous weapon reached its distination. This huge gun is expected to throw half a ton of metal a distance of eight miles, about from, say, Kensington to Poplar. What next? the Germans flatter themselves their Krupp Guns are the ne plus ultra in cannon. Can they outdo this? We fancy they will be a little puzzled to find us so much ahead of them in gunnery, especially as they are the military power, par excellence, of Europe—in their own estimation at least. But we must look out, too, for our laurels, for guns of a hundred tons calibre are being manufactured for the Italian Government, so we presume a hundred and sixty tonner will be the next novelty. But where will it all end? If a ton weight be sent a distance of some ten miles in the course of a few seconds, what will become of us all in the next war? The two opposing armies will kill each other without knowing it.

It is seldom we have to record so terrible a crime as that with which the man Wainwright is at present charged. We have no intention of discussing the evidence, or of saying a word that could prejudice the public against him, but there is nothing in the annals of crime so terrible since the days of the notorious Greenacre, except, perhaps, it be the murder of O'Connor by the Mannings. The man Stokes, to whom the discovery of the murder is due, deserves great praise for the energy he showed in following the cab, and we trust some proper recognition, in the shape of a handsome testimonial, will follow.

The third great racing event came off on Wednesday. The St. Leger was run at Doncaster, there was a field of thirteen, and after a good race the greater part of the way Mr. Crawford's Craig-Millar came in winner by some three lengths, Balfe and the Earl of Dartrey, with half a length between them, being second and third respectively. The winner was ridden by Chaloner, and is by Blair Athol, out of Miss Roland. His previous appearances in the field have been pretty successful, but as the winner of neither the Two Thousand nor the Derby was present on this occasion, there was less of interest than usually attaches to this event. The other principal event of the meeting, the Great Yorkshire Handicap, was won by the favourite, Mr. W. S. Mitchell Innes's Saint Leger, Louise Victoria and Polonnise being second and third respectively. The usual sale of yearlings passed off very successfully, Central Fire, for whom 1500 guineas was given, heading the list, while of the others Chillanwallah fetched 800 guineas, Muta 500, Waterloo 500. There only remain now two events of interest in the racing world, the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire. The other noteworthy event of the week was the Trotting Meeting at the Alexandra Park. There was a capital attendance both days, and some good sport.

There is nothing particular to chronicle in the way of Cricket. There have been one or two matches, and Mr. W. G. Grace has made another brilliant score of 152. The excitement about Captain Webb's feat is not yet over. It must be somewhat trying for the hero himself to be fêted, &c., &c., wherever he goes, but this, we presume, is inevitable. It is satisfactory, however, to learn that the testimonial to him has already reached a good round sum, somewhere about thirteen hundred pounds having been acknowledged up to last Saturday. Tuesday at the Promenade Concerts was set apart as a Webb benefit, the proceeds being paid over to the general fund, and there have been other monies collected at the Alexandra Palace and elsewhere, all which help to swell the total. Besides this, a chronometer and an aneroid barometer have been presented to him. In fact there is every chance of the testimonial being a most substantial one, and right glad are we it is so. Such an achievement deserves to be recognised most handsomely. On Saturday was held a swimming fête in the Victoria Park ornamental water, by the London Swimming Club, Lord Henry Lennox having given his sanction. There were several competitions for prizes, presented by Bro. Sir John Bennett and others, after the racing was over Miss Emily Parker, accompanied by her brother, gave a display of ornamental swimming, which was greatly applauded. We gladly note the encouragement so generally given to swimming, an art which, considering we are a maritime people, has been pretty generally neglected in this country. We trust the day is not far distant when the swimming master or mistress will be looked upon as an essential member of every school staff in the kingdom.

The Ex-Premier, Mr. Gladstone, has latterly been giving more than one speech on the necessity for mental cultivation, Mr. Gladstone himself being one of the most brilliant living illustrations of the advantages of such cultivation. It seems also the right honourable gentleman varies his amusements by occasionally felling trees, truly a marvellous pleasure for such a man to indulge in. We wonder what other people must think of us as a nation. We have a score or two of eccentricities written down against us, and of these, felling timber by ex-premiers, we imagine is the latest. Henceforth, instead of singing, "Oh Woodman spare that tree," it will be, Oh "Gladstone," which is synonymous with woodman. A strange world this, in which the same statesman brings down Vatican Decrees and British oaks with equal skill! We naturally go back in our minds to the early history of Rome, and think of Cincinnatus, in his retirement from the cares of state, turning ploughman. We need never despair of our country, when we find our leading men voluntarily taking upon themselves laborious work, and exhibiting such skill in doing it. There must be good stuff in us somewhere.

We do some things very deliberately. It seems strange to be talking of Wellington monuments when the hero whom they are intended to honour has been dead some three-and-twenty years. Nevertheless, the monument a grateful country voted in 1852 to the hero of Waterloo is only just on the point of completion. It took the Iron Duke some seven years of hard fighting to drive the French out of the Peninsula, but more than thrice the length of time has been required by the artist to erect a monument to the hero's memory. However, as the gratitude we owe him is most profound, it is in keeping that we should extend our display of it over as large an extent of time as possible. It is satisfactory to know that the monument is worthy of the fame of our greatest soldier. But is it creditable that the Albert Memorial should have been finished first. The Prince Consort fulfilled his duties admirably, and in honouring his memory we are doing honour to the Queen his widow, but good men are happily not scarce among our people, while a great man turns up once only in the course of half-a-dozen centuries. We are improving however. It took some forty years to get Nelson perched up in the clouds, whereas Wellington is done for in about three-and-twenty, and the Prince Consort in about ten or a dozen.

Macti Virtute, say we, and in time we shall be honouring our heroes before we know who they are.

Dr. Kenealy, it seems, is not to be allowed to pursue unhindered his system of abusing everybody who has the honour to differ from him. Mr. George Potter, a member of the London School Board, and Editor of the Beehive, applied, on Thursday, at Guildhall, for a summons against the ex-Q.C. for publishing a libel in the columns of the Englishman. In the articles complained of, Mr. Potter is described as "a rogue and a sham." Sir Benjamin Phillips, who presided, declared the article was undoubtedly libellous, and granted a summons forthwith. We are glad of this. It is, perhaps, an honour to be abused by such a man, but the lower and more ignorant classes are not capable of taking so high a view. It is nothing less than a public scandal that a journal should go on from day to day, vilifying every one who has the courage to think differently from its editor.

The management of the Alexandra Palace are unwearying in their exertions to cater for the public. The Trotting meeting was held on Monday and Tuesday. There have been a number of excellent musical and dramatic entertainments. To-day will be given Wallace's opera, Maritana, by the Carl Rosa Company. There will also be a grand rural fête and an illumination of the Grove. On Tuesday next, Gounod's opera, Faust, and there will be a grand display of fireworks. On Monday, the 27th instant, our worthy friends the Foresters will take their annual "outing," and no doubt the attendance will be on a very large scale. The Robin Hoods and Little Johns and Friar Tucks are genial good fellows, though given to the public display of a little finery. This, after all, is a very harmless weakness, and detracts nothing from the merits of the order, which does a large amount of good.

There has been a considerable fire in Bunhill-row, close to the grounds of the well-known Honourable Artillery Company of world-wide fame. Everything was burnt clean out, leaving only the bare walls standing. On Thursday an accident occurred through the fall of a portion of one of them, and for a time the lives of three men were seriously imperilled. Fortunately, exertions were made, and the three men were speedily extricated from the ruins, having met with some very severe contusions. They were conveyed at once to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and there received prompt attention from the medical officers, who at once dressed their wounds, after which they were taken to their homes. The party wall was in a very dangerous condition, and, if a high wind blew, would probably come down at once. However, the police take the necessary precautions to keep the too inquisitive from running any risk.

What might have proved a most serious accident occurred, a few days since, to the Empress Elizabeth of Austria. She was out riding, when her horse threw her, and she lay insensible for some time. Nothing more resulted than sundry pains in the head, and a few slight abrasions of the skin, which, by the latest accounts, have already disappeared. Indeed Her Majesty intends taking walking exercise shortly, so that, happily, she may be said to have wholly recovered already.

The latest novelty in the way of jokes has been handed to us by a brother, whose private residence is only about a mile or two from Colney Hatch. He draws a very terrible picture of the pious horror with which an old lady overhears the following brief dialogue between two of her sons: Charlie: "Where the deuce (a more powerful word appears in the original, which we have thought it better to tone down) where the deuce is Providence, Ned?" Ned: "Why in Rhode Island, you muff." Charlie is merely studying a little United States geography, but the old lady is struck at the flagrant irreverence of her darling boys, and lectures them accordingly.

The marauders in Herzegovina are not to have their own way. The great European powers recognise that burning and pillage and the slaughter of inoffensive Turks are not such virtuous actsas to justify their giving the Herzegovinese any countenance. We are glad that no political jealousies have been allowed to stand in the way of the fulfilment of this duty. The consuls from the leading powers are traversing the disturbed districts, and plainly hint to the people that they will get nothing in the shape of encouragement from their respective countries. Meanwhile the Turks have taken the bull by the horns, and are making short work of the animal. The insurgents are being famously trounced everywhere, and the authority of the Sultan seems likely enough to be maintained intact, in spite of Servia, whose ruler, Prince Milan, wisely inclines towards peace, and Mr. Farley, who has constituted himself judge of the Sultan's government and all its acts. By the way, this gentleman has replied to the letter of Lady Strangford we commented on last week. But, according to our notion, he begs the question entirely. Lady Strangford questioned the propriety of a few irresponsible persons in this country taking upon themselves to excite sympathy with insurgents against the Government of a friendly power, and we illustrated the case by asking our readers—What would their feelings be if a committee of Turks had met together, and solicited aid for the Fenians, when they were rebelling against the authority of their lawful Sovereign? Mr. Farley, however, thinks that if the Sultan does not conduct his government exactly as he (Mr. Farley) thinks should be done, rebellion is justifiable. We have heard of certain tailors of Tooley-street, but they are a mere shadow by the side of Mr. Farley, who has appointed himself judge of foreign potentates. We must advise Prince Bismarck, Prince Gortshakoff, Count Andrassy, M. Buffet, and other foreign prime ministers—to say nothing of the various sovereigns they serve so faithfully—to be careful how they offend this gentleman, or the consequences may be very terrible. But, joking apart, it seems monstrous that anyone should be allowed to foment rebellions against recognised authority. It is all very well to give liberty, but that liberty should not be allowed to degenerate into license. However, the rebellion seems to be pretty well on its last legs, and, if interference by Servia is forbidden, will soon die out, and with it the existence of Mr. Farley's Committee. As for Lord Russell's conduct, we have never given him credit for much political sagacity, but we had hoped he was old enough to have known better than to contribute to a fund in aid of rebellion.

As regards Spain, the course of Alphonsist victory seems to go on uninterrupted, and one stronghold of the Carlists after another seems to fall before the Royal troops. The other day it was Seo de Urgel, now we read of Oyarzun having been captured. Meantime there has been a change of ministry, and General Jovellar is the new prime minister. We wonder what is the average duration of life in a Spanish ministry. How many ministries have there been in the course of, say, the last five years, which is about the time a good English ministry usually endures. We do not object, however, to a new ministry every day in the week, if only the miseries of the war can be brought to a close. Nor are we particularly concerned as to which of the twain—Carlism or Alphonsism—prevails in the long run, provided that something prevails at an early date, and the sooner the better for Spain.

The Mark Festival at Grimsby will take place on the 30th inst. The Constitution of Sutcliffe Lodge, No. 188 of Mark Master Masons, at 11.15 a.m., and the 1st annual Lincolnshire Grand Lodge of Mark Masons at 1.15 a.m. The banquet at the Town Hall, Grimsby, at 3.15, on which occasion Bro. J. Sutcliffe, R.W.P.G. Mark Master, will preside.

The 15 sections will be worked at the Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction, No. 1278, Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria Park, by Bro. M. Gross, on Friday evening, the 24th inst., commencing at 7 o'clock. Some of the most skilled brethren in Freemasonry have given their names, and promised to be present to assist Bro. Gross.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. D. D. Pankhurst, Past Grand Steward, at his residence, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, at the age of 57.

Bro. G. Reeves Smith, the manager of the Aquarium at Brighton, has been presented, by Mr. George Westley, of West-street, with a sword. The sword was recovered from the bed of the sea; from the hilt to the tip of the blade it is covered, like a sheath, with pebbles that have grown thereon. It will be on view at the Aquarium. A new Skating Rink was opened on Wednesday, at the Queen's Park, Brighton. The opening was a great success, and was numerously attended. Mr. H. Malcolmson is the lessee. The asphalte was laid down under the superintendance of Bro. Barnett (of Barnett's Patent Asphalte Company) and Mr. C. Sadler, Clerk of the Works. The band of the Scots Greys, by the permission of commanding officer attended. Mr. M. V. Bligh is the manager, and Bro. W. Devin's band will play each morning andafter noon. Bro. John Billington and Mrs. Billington have been playing at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, during the week, in Mr. Paul Meritt's comedy of "Rough and Ready," assisted by Miss Meryck, Mr. D. Gresham, and a powerful London company.

Some weeks since we gave an announcement of the death, at sea, of Bro. W. Curtis, formerly proprietor of the Brighton Gazette. The P. and O. steamer "Gwalior" brings the following particulars, from a letter of the ship's purser to the sorrowing widow. "It seems that Mr. Curtis was brought on board the ship, very ill, at Hong Kong, on the 31st July, he having been ordered home by his medical attendant. His health did not improve, and on the morning of the 3rd August he expired." The steward also wrote: "It will be some consolation to you to know that his last moments were peaceful, and that he was free from pain, and had every care and attention paid to him. His remains were consigned to the deep on the same day he expired."

In another page appears an article, entitled "Freemasonry—an Advancive Science," which we have extracted from the Canadian Masonic News for September. We have referred on previous occasions to this admirably conducted periodical.

Bro. J. L. Toole, the celebrated comedian, made his first appearance, since his return from America, at the Theatre Royal Manchester. The house was crowded in every part, and he received a perfect ovation. He makes his appearance in London, at the Gaiety Theatre, on the 8th November.

Bro. J. Fitzgerald, late of the Strand, and of Miss Lydia Thompson's Company, has been engaged as chef d'orchestra at the Globe Theatre, which opened on Monday last, under the management of Mr. Fairlie.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC RETURNS.

The following statement shows the receipts for traffic on the undermentioned railways for the past week, as compared with the corresponding week in 1874:—

Railway.	Miles open. 1875	Receipts. 1875 £	1874 £
Caledonian	739	58,405	57,991
Glasgow and South Western	315¼	16,299	17,434

A Summary Execution.—In connection with this affair, the treatment of Boyer, the Mayor of Bodmin, was cruel in the extreme. Prior to their advance on Exeter, the Cornish rebels formed a camp near Bodmin, the inhabitants of which compelled the Mayor to give them supplies. Soon after their defeat, the Provost Marshal of the Army, Sir Anthony Kingston, arrived there to punish certain fugitives, and sent Boyer notice, that, with certain followers, he would dine with him on a certain day. He was received with the greatest hospitality and, before dinner, he whispered to Boyer that one of the townspeople was to be hanged, and ordered the gallows to be erected. When dinner was over the Mayor answered that "all was ready," on which Kingston took his arm, and they walked together to the place of execution, when he asked him, if he thought the gallows was "strong enough." "Doubtless," replied the Mayor. "Well then," said the Provost, "get thee up speedily, for it is prepared for you." "I hope," urged the poor Mayor, "that you mean not as you speak?" "In faith! there is no remedy, for thou hast been a busy rebel;" and so the Mayor was hanged without further ceremony.—From "British Battles on Land and Sea," by James Grant.

THE DRAMA.

Mr. Charles Matthews at the Gaiety—"Talbot's Trust" at the Globe.

It is difficult, except for a modern Methusaleh, to fix the time when Mr. Matthews first appeared on the stage. It is still more difficult, indeed impossible, to find any occasion on which he has not been watched and listened to with delight, and the time is yet, we hope, far distant when he shall be finally lost from our standing dishes of amusement. Mr. Matthews is fairly in his element at the Gaiety; the character of the theatre, the light, bright airiness of its decorations, accord admirably with the style of his acting. The chief piece in which he appears at present is one adapted by himself from Le Père Prodigue, and entitled My Awful Dad. Major Adonis Evergreen is a gay youth of fifty, possessing a son, Wick, a staid barrister of twenty-seven. The usual relation of father and son are, in their case, reversed. The Major is a reckless, gallant spendthrift, whilst Wick supplies the funds, as far as possible, and is a most respectable member of society. Some amusing imbroglios result from this; the Major intends going to a bal masqué, as "Punch," and orders his costume to be sent to his son's chambers in the Temple. Whilst dressing there, in his son's absence, a client arrives, and the Major, slipping a barrister's gown over his absurd dress, takes the place of the absent Wick. The client proves to be a young widow, Mrs. Weddagain, come to take opinion on the validity of her late husband's will, which provides that she shall not marry a man under the age of fifty. After a most amusing impromptu address by the Major to an imaginary jury, the difficulty is solved by his marrying the widow himself, and the son also is satisfactorily disposed of. We have indicated enough of the plot to show to ordinary playgoers how much capital might be made out of it by Mr. Matthews, and his acting will quite come up to any sanguine anticipations. The buoyant bearing; the careless, joyous ease of manner of a man who feels himself above the reach of time, are admirably pourtrayed, and Mr. Matthews, young as he always is, is equal to the task of making up well as a man of fifty. He is well supported by Mr. Royce, whom we noticed lately playing well in Tom Cobb, and who now makes a good character part out of the son, Wick. The minor parts are well filled, more particularly those played by Mr. Maclean and Miss Henderson. We are glad to chronicle the success of a piece which is earned by such good workmanship, witty dialogue, and bright acting.

The Globe has been re-opened, with a programme consisting of Talbot's Trust, a new drama, by Mr. T. A. Thorp, and of a translation of Offenbach's Les Brigands. It is difficult to convey in words an idea of the utter weariness and dreariness with which Talbot's Trust oppresses the spectators. The incidents are so inconsequent, the dialogue so vapid, the characters such dummies. Talbot does not appear in the play at all, and his "Trust" consists of his property, his widow and his daughter, which are all left in the care of a friend, Harold Garnet. Mr. Garnet first makes love to the widow, then, by dint of forgery, obtains possession of the property, and then deserts the widow for another young lady. Pursued, by detectives, for the forgery, he is smashed up in a railway accident, but recovers sufficiently to forgive everybody, and die at the widow's house, just as the detectives arrive. It is impossible to criticise the merits of a piece which, to our thinking, has but one, that of consisting of only two acts; but we should like to point out to Mr. Lin Rayne that many more performances by him such as that of Harold Garnet, must inevitably lower the position on the stage which he has earned so well. He would appear to be making an attempt to acquire the style of transpontine melodrama, very good in its way no doubt, but slightly out of date. Miss Dubois and Miss Ada Ward are both very well dressed. After such a preparation as that of Talbot's Trust, a less lively opera than Les Brigands would be welcomed. As it is not by any means new to London, we shall only note that its performance is better than at any previous production. The acting of Miss Dubois and of Miss N. Bromley is arch and piquant, and their singing is careful and discreet. Signor Barri is hardly equal to the part of Falscappa, his singing is decidedly weak, and his acting still weaker. His lieutenant, Pietro, is admirably played by Mr. J. A. Shaw, and with such an exhibition of tasteful dresses, pretty faces and well developed limbs, "The Brigands" should be an attraction for some time to come.

MASONRY IN EAST LANCASHIRE.

These "brethren of the mystic tie" who are resident in Ramsbottom and the immediate neighbourhood labour under the disadvantage of being located about four miles from any Lodge—the nearest meeting places being Bury on the one hand and Haslingden on the other—and with a view to remove this difficulty, a meeting was held at the Railway Hotel on Tuesday evening, under the presidency of Bro. S. Porritt S.W. of Lodge No. 215 (Haslingden), when it was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Bro. Peak P.M., seconded by Bro. John Scholefield, that a petition be drawn up praying the Provincial Grand Master (Colonel Le Gendre Starkie) to issue a warrant for the holding of a Lodge at the Railway Hotel. It is not improbable that the new Lodge will be named "The Cheerydle Brothers"—the late Mr. John Grant, of Ramsbottom, one of the brothers made famous in Dicken's "Nicholas Nickleby," having been a member of the Masonic Order.—Bury Times.

Holloway's Pills and Ointment.—It would be startling to many were it possible to state accurately the number of persons who have been restored to health and relieved by these remedies, and if all the details connected with such individual case could be collected, the enormous amount of pain and suffering which has been soothed and got rid of would be beyond belief. These remedies are so well known in the present day, east and west, south and north, that it is strange any individual should remain in ignorance of their suitable qualities in correcting all blood impurities, whether hereditary or acquired, the ill effects of which they effectually modify and counteract, rendering the sickly and feeble physically strong.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS,

St. John's Lodge, No. 3.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Monday, the 13th inst., at their Hall, 213 Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Bro. Wm. Bell W.M., J. Neilson Deputy Master, J. Gillon S.W., Jones J.W., J. Dick Secretary, Brownlie S.D., J. Jameson Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Fletcher, McMillan. Visitors—Bros J. Munro E.W.M. 360, J. Bannerman Deputy Master 73, and several others. There was a large amount of business on the cards; first the initiation of two candidates, who were received by the Master, Wm. Bell, in a very impressive manner. A Fellow Craft's Lodge was then opened, and five brethren received that degree at the hands of Bro. Dick, Secretary. The Lodge was then opened in the sublime degree, and, at the request of the Master, Bro. Munro, R.W.M. of the Commercial 360, raised seven brethren, in the solemn manner for which he is celebrated, and for which he received the unanimous thanks of the Lodge. Bro. Munro expressed the pleasure it had given him to be allowed to work in this old and well-conducted Lodge. Thereafter the Lodge was closed by Bro. Fletcher P.M.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—This Lodge held its regular weekly meeting on Monday, 13th September, at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell. Present—Bros. Stock W.M., Tolmie S.W., Read J.W., Killick Secretary, Walker S.D., Lake J.D., Cooke I.G., Christopher Tyler. Business—Lodge opened in usual manner, and the minutes of the last meeting were confirmed. Bro. Pettett passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. Bro. Tolmie worked the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th sections of the second lecture, assisted by Bro. Saul and brethren. Bros. Main P.M. 813, Swales 813, W. Partridge 882, and T. W. Ockenden 1512, were elected members.

St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 69.—This Chapter held its regular meeting on Tuesday, the 14th September, at 170 Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Comps. Dr. T. D. Humphries, Ph. Dr., Z., George Herron H., G. W. Wheeler acting J., J. M. Oliver Secretary, W. Thomas Treasurer, J. Balfour 1st S., T. Anderson 2nd S., J. Moon 3rd S., David Ramsay Tyler. Visitors—Comps. J. Duthie Z. 67, G. W. Wheeler Z. 73, J. Balfour S.E. 73 P.G. 1st S., Jas. Anderson Z. 76, M. Nicholl J. 76. At the commencement of the business, Comp. Anderson Z. of 76, Abbey Chapter, Paisley, asked the favour of 69 exalting for him two brethren of the Paisley Lodge, 370. This request was at once acceded to, and a Lodge of Most Excellent Masters was opened, when Comp. Wheeler conferred that degree on the two Paisley brethren. A Holy Royal Arch Chapter was then opened, and the same brethren were duly exalted to that degree by Comp. Wheeler Z. of 73, his Scribe E. the Provincial Grand Sojourner acting as 1st S. Comps. Anderson and Nichol, on behalf of the Paisley Chapter, returned thanks to the Z. of 69 for granting permission for the ceremony to be performed, and to the two Comps. of 73 who had done the work. The Chapter then nominated the officers for the ensuing year.

Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Friday, 9th August, at their Hall, 170 Buchanan-street, Glasgow, at 6.30 p.m. Present—Bros. G. Wm. Wheeler acting W.M., J. B. Hardie S.W., J. Ambridge J.W., J. Bannerman Treasurer, A. McLeod S.D., J. Kay J.D., E. Ramsay I.G., A. Kay Tyler. Visitors—Bros. E. Arthur No. 0, and J. W. McCallum 147. Business—A proposition for the initiation of Mr. Robert McIver, engineer, was read and unanimously passed. He was then introduced by Bro. McLeod, and initiated by Bro. Wheeler. A Lodge of Fellow Crafts was then opened, and a brother passed to that degree. The Lodge was then raised to the third degree, when Bros. Robert Nichol and John McIver were raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons by Bro. Wheeler, as Bro. McDonald, the R.W.M., was out of town, and unable to be present.

The Union and Crown Lodge, No. 103.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Monday, the 13th inst., at 170 Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Bro. A. M. Wright W.M., attended by all his office bearers. Business—The initiation of two gentlemen into the Order, which ceremony was ably performed by Bro. Bain P.M. P.G.B.B. The Lodge afterwards made arrangements for a presentation to that worthy brother for the services rendered by him for many years to the Lodge.

Domatic Lodge, No. 177.—An emergency meeting of this flourishing Lodge, which is famed for its working and the harmony existing among its members, was held on Friday, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. Bros. G. Everett W.M. in the chair, Treadwell S.W., Jas. Willing jun. J.W., J. Smith P.G.P. P.M. Treasurer, Williams Secretary, Palmer S.D., Buscall J.D., Spink I.G., and P.M.'s Time, Kent I.P.M., and Bros. Plummer, Montague, Morris, Beesly, J. Ambrose, J. Jones, Willis, Crane, Robinson, Holder, &c. The Lodge was opened, and Bro. Fowler, No. 244, by the courtesy of the W.M., was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. Ballots were then taken for the admission of Messrs. G. L. Everett, R. Osborn, Captain A. S. Gilbert (late 70th Regt.), F. Wigmore, and F. Harding, who were initiated into the Order by the W.M. There being no other business, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a banquet provided by Bro. Clemow, the W.M. presiding. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts and complimentary speeches were given. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Sir John Bennett, No. 1, who made a very capital speech; Sumner P.G.W. British Burmah, Thompson W.M. No. 233, Gardner W.M. No. 1381, D. Still P.M. No. 1293, Kent No. 209, Fowler No. 244, and Read 1507.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—The weekly meeting was held at Bro. Chard's, Abchurch-lane, on Wednesday. As announced last week, the ceremony of raising was rehearsed, in a very able manner, by Bro. Berrie as W.M. We congratulate him upon his efficiency, and urgently recommend those brethren seeking instruction to attend this Lodge, which is conducted under the able presidency of Bro. Gottheil. The sections in connection with the degree were worked by Bro. Gottheil, assisted by the brethren. The remaining officers were Bros. Cohen S.W., Blackhall J.W., Tolles S.D., Corner J.D., Croaker I.G., Christopher Tyler, Gottheil P.M., Constable Treasurer. The following brethren were also present:—Bros. W. W. Morgan, Abbott, Rose W.M. 185, W. D. Bailey J.D. 185, D. Posener J.W. 185, R. T. Bloomfield P.M. 185, G. S. Pare S.D. 185, S. L. Hickman W.M. 188, and several others. We were gratified at hearing the formula of closing down the Lodge, which is so seldom gone through in regular form; it was carried out with such exactitude that the pleasure was greatly enhanced. Bro. Cohen was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and Bro. Constable is to work the ceremony of installation; after which the first degree will be worked. A vote of thanks was accorded the W.M. for his genial conduct and able performance of the duties of the chair, it being the first time he had officiated therein.

Tyrawley Lodge, No. 217.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, 8th September, at Dillon-terrace, Ballina. Present—Bros. P. L. Petrie W.M., M. Scott S.W., P. Atkinson J.W., J. R. Durgeon Sec., James Beatty S.D., Wm. Beatty J.D., D. Taylor I.G., Robert Massey Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Gilbert, Reid, T. Scott and Petrie. Business—Night of meeting was changed from second Wednesday to second Monday in each month. Bro. C. Petrie was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Dr. Thomas Boyd, having been successfully ballotted for, was admitted to E.A. degree. Ballot for affiliation of Bro. Russell 411, Drogheda, was also successful.

Drogeda Lodge, No. 411.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday, 9th September, at the Masonic Hall, Drogheda. Present—Bros. Jeffers W.M., Whitty S.W., Dean P.M. as J.W., Preston as Secretary, Harbinson P.M. as S.D., Griffin J.D., Appleyard as I.G., Browne Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Morton, Harbinson and Dean. Business—Three new members were proposed for initiation, ballot in each case to take place next regular night of meeting. Bro. Hatch was raised to the high and sublime degree, and afterwards saluted.

St. John's Lodge, No. 795.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 14th inst., at the Ray Mead Hotel, Maidenhead, Bro. G. Bubb P.M., in the absence of the W.M. Bro. C. W. Moule jun., occupied the chair, J. Sadler S.W., H. H. Hodges P.M. Secretary, C. Gammon P.M. Treasurer, J. E. Foulger P.M., and several brethren were present. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. Bro. C. S. Dugan was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Bros. Burgan, Bell and Sherman were passed to the degree of Fellow Crafts by Bro. G. Bubb P.M., whose correct working was listened to with attention. The election for W.M. then took place, and Bro. J. Sadler S.W. and I.P.M. of the Highgate Lodge (who on the previous evening had installed his successor in that Lodge), was unanimously elected. Bro. C. Gammon P.M. was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Nowell Tyler. A sum of £7 was voted from the funds of the Lodge to the retiring W.M. Bro. C. W. Meale. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet, where, under the genial presidency of Bro. C. Gammon P.M., the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the brethren returned to town, in a saloon carriage specially provided for the brethren by the R.W. Sir Daniel Gooch D.P.G.M. for Berks and Bucks.

Dalston Lodge of Instruction, No. 975.—At the weekly meeting held on the 8th inst., the fifteen sections were worked to celebrate the first anniversary of the Lodge, Bro. W. Gilchrist P.M. 933 in the chair, Bro. Fieldwick I.G. 1361 S.W., Bro. Lee W.M. 1524 J.W. 975 Junior Warden. There was a large attendance of the brethren, and all expressed themselves gratified at the skilful Masonic working. Votes of thanks were unanimously given to the W.M. and the visiting brethren for their services. Several brethren were elected joining members, and the Lodge was closed and adjourned. This highly prosperous Lodge of Instruction, although only established twelve months, numbers over sixty members, and has been well attended every Wednesday evening throughout the past year; a fact which speaks well for the interest taken in our ancient Craft in Dalston and its neighbourhood.

Burdett Coutts Lodge, No. 1278.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 16th, at the Approach Tavern, Victoria Park. We regret that space prevents our giving detailed particulars of the proceedings, which were of a very interesting character. There were present the following brethren:—Harris W.M., Crutch S.W., Toy J.W., Crouch S.D., Lazarus I.G., Gilchrist Tyler, Terry P.P.G.D.C., Herts Treasurer, Verry P.M. Sec., also P.M.'s Ashburner and Lloyd, besides an array of visitors numbering twenty. Upon the confirmation of the minutes Mr. Aitken was initiated, and Bro. Ferry passed. The following were ballotted for as joining members, Bros. J. J. Berry S.W., and T. Jennings, both of the Yarborough Lodge. A vote of thanks was recorded on the minutes, and offered to Bros. Terry and Verry, for their able and energetic efforts in carrying out the arrangements for the presentation of the Album to the Baroness Burdett Coutts. The installation ceremony was performed by Bro. Jas. Terry with more than usual ability, who placed Bro. Crutch in the chair of K.S., according to ancient rite. The W.M. appointed the following as his officers, Bros. Toy S.W., Crouch J.W., Terry Treasurer, Verry Secretary, Lazarus S.D., Christian J.D., Gross I.G., Barker W.S., Gilchrist Tyler. All business being ended, the brethren adjourned to banquet, provided by the host, Bro. T. Lloyd, in the most recherché style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were gone through with strict brevity, and quite in accordance with the views we entertain. The W.M. performed his duties with proficiency, and fully realised the expectations of the brethren. One fact was particularly noticeable—the various officers were letter perfect in their duties, and we have no hesitation in saying that such heads as guide this Lodge will ensure this happy condition while they last. Bro. Terry was very facetious in his criticisms of the Officers of the Lodge, and created much amusement; as did the many others who contributed songs and recitations. The brethren adjourned at an early hour, much pleased with the proceedings.

Addiscombe Lodge, No. 1558.—This very young Lodge, only two weeks old, met on the 11th inst., at the Alma Tavern, Addiscombe, for the first time after the consecration. Bro. Turquand, the newly installed W.M., presided, assisted by Bro. Mullett S.W., J. Parson Smith J.W., and the rest of the officers. Five gentlemen were initiated by the W.M., who performed his task with more than average ability. This Masonic sapling has every chance of speedily gaining strength, especially when watched over by a brother whose earnestness of character is sufficient guarantee of the nursling being carefully attended to. A plain but ample repast followed the labours in the Lodge, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to, the name of His Royal Highness being received with prolonged acclamations, and heartfelt wishes were expressed for a successful voyage and safe and speedy return to his native shores. Amongst the visitors were P.M.'s Bros. Dr. Dickson, E. Gottheil, Drew, and Bro. Brownson J.W. of the Gore Lodge.

MASONIC POWER.

THAT the institution of Freemasonry is one of great influence will readily be admitted by all who are acquainted with its mystic organisation; but it is not, as some suppose, an institution of sinister power, for, though it doubtless benefits many of its members in their business interests, this is not its mission or its special purpose. Many men who are not Masons, as the world knows, do just as well in the fortunes of trade and business as any that are Masons, and therefore it should not be alleged that Masons support one another in business and in pursuit of office and place, for it would not be true. Indeed, we should be glad to see more mutual support in business among the Craft than generally obtains in these days, as it would give a much brighter reflection upon the practical workings of the Order than we now see.

To be sustained in either his business or office a Mason must be something else than a mere member of the Craft. If he is a true man, imbued with the spirit and principles of Masonry, he will be found right in any position, and he may hope for success in any calling or undertaking. In Masonry, as it is in other institutions, the spirit and manners and principles of the man give him success much more than any nominal relationship ever can do.

The power of Masonry, where it has any, is chiefly found in its fraternities and charities, and these many never experience, because they so act as to ask no favours of any one. They are Masons because they love the principles and philosophic teachings of the Order. They have seen something of its work, and they have joined the association because they believed that the organisation is one of brotherly love, relief and truth. All such connections as these show its great moral power, as well as its distinguished relative worth.

As an institution of patronage, we believe the Masonic is not even as good as many others, for anything like clanishness or partiality or especial patronage, except for cause, is contrary to the spirit and general teachings of the mystic circle.

Masonry loves to show its power, especially in grand humanities and in free and generous fraternities, where liberality of sentiment is intelligently tolerated, and where none is made a favourite at the expense of the many. Intelligent qualifications, of course, give prominence in any association, and so it often is in Masonry, and yet at the same time personal ambition and sinister aspirations are considered at all times out of order.

As an organisation of moral power it perhaps stands unequalled, for its obligated intelligence is more binding and of stronger influence upon the general actions of life than those of any other society with which we are acquainted.

This power no doubt makes many better men and better citizens than they would have been if they had never become Masons. Yet we yield the point that true and honourable men anywhere are as good as any Masons, though they never belonged to the fraternity. The Mason may probably understand more of the systematic theory of fraternity and charity, and yet he may not excel his outside brother in any of life's higher nobilities. It will therefore be seen that some men are good Masons in spirit and principle and honour who never were Masons, while others have utterly failed to become Masons though they have taken all of its degrees.

The seed sown by the mystic fraternity can only germinate and grow in good soil, and this may be given as the reason of that Masonic defectiveness we sometimes see, and which at times reflects such great dishonour upon the fraternity itself. Making no pretensions to civil power or government, or any attempts at theological or religious dictation, it quietly takes its position in society and goes on in its work without any boastings or display, or ever asking for a word of praise from any class of men, whether they are in power or out of it.

As harmless to the outside world as the child at the breast of its mother, and ruled by the law of non-interference in regard to all other organisations and associations, its operations are quiet and peaceful, and its history therefore is one of "peace on earth and good will to man."

It makes no litigations, creates no discords, sheds no blood, makes no widows, and knows nothing of orphanage, except in its sympathies and charities.

It never proscribes, because it has no faith in proscription as a theory of reform or of human government. Its liberality of sentiment is the measure of its charities, and wherever it fixes its empire it is only to stay while it has its supporters, and where it is not wanted it retires with becoming grace and without a single murmur.

Men and organisations of different kinds have for ages been waging war against its very existence without even knowing the alphabet of its genius or the power of its name. What it is, they have often tried to divine without a single success, and all their efforts to destroy it have been equally abortive. Its very being has continued to be a mystery, while its solemn tread through the nations has astonished the whole world of Propagandists of every faith and order.

It has no permanent investment fund to live on, and it sends out no missionaries to make proselytes or to extend its dominions. It claims no territory of earth as the boundary of its rule, and it asks no patronage at the hands of any Church or State. Its very existence indeed is sui generis, while its conservative system of operations never interferes with either the rights or privileges of any other organisation, whether civil, religious or fraternal.

It ignores dogmatisms, laughs at all persecutions, and pities the brainless folly of all enemies, as it well knows that the wildest storms may howl around it, and the fiercest thunders roll above it, without even harming a fibre of its mantle or staining the integrity of its organic character, and therefore it makes no defence even when the mightiest come against it. Its own Lodge rooms is its favourite retreat, for there it can go in safety when the world turns against it.

Governments have been its foes, and the oldest Church on earth to this day is its enemy, and the old mother of all is imitated by a number of her spawns in the same sort of bigoted vindictiveness. Still the institution of Masonry lives and flourishes in spite of them all. What they are Masonry does not desire to be, for if she once yielded to their spirit the genius of Masonry would hie from the earth like an insulted angel, and we should hear of it no more for ever.

Masonic power, like its genius, lives in the atmosphere of a charitable intelligence. It cannot breathe anywhere else, for it is a child of the higher humanities, and drinks only of pure crystal streams. Its temples, lit up by the lights of intelligence, humanity and charity, have kindled a sanctified glory over the world and given to the benevolent of all classes examples which they cannot ignore without destroying their own prestige and inflicting upon themselves the pitiful contempt of the intelligent, the sympathetic and the noble. So mote it be.—H., in Masonic Advocate.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.

MASONIC TEACHING.

OUR readers have doubtless noted with some degree of interest the first portion of a mislaid letter which appeared last week, while the remainder will be found in another part of our columns. This letter, which was forwarded to us under circumstances that are somewhat strange, is written by one Bro. Lionel Harrison, to his son and brother, whom, in ignorance of his proper designation, we will designate as Bro. Harrison jun. The point we are anxious to insist upon in connection with this letter is one that will have especial weight with our readers. It demonstrates, beyond all doubt, that Masonic teaching is not only perfectly harmless, but that it far transcends, in respect of value, the doctrines inculcated by the most illustrious teachers of morality of the past or any age. Nor is this its only merit. Of late, and, indeed, at various times more or less frequent, Freemasonry has been seriously attacked by sundry spiritual advisers, whose Christian charity should have induced them to avoid all hostility to an Order which, before all things, inculcates the divine virtues of brotherly love, relief, and truth. Not only this, they should have utilised the doctrines of Freemasonry to the common good of mankind. They should have striven to show that a Society, which struggled so persistently to unite men of all creeds and nationalities in one common brotherhood, was worthy of the greatest support possible; that while, for sufficient reasons, it veiled its teachings in language more or less mysterious and inappreciable by the profane, or outer world, it yet sought to inculcate the purest virtue, and a sincere and heartfelt belief in the Grand Creator of the Universe. Yet, in spite of the purity of our morality, we are constantly invited to believe that Freemasonry is dangerous, and likely to prove subversive of all that good and true and religious men deem most worthy of respect. Let us, then, take the text of this mislaid letter, written by our unknown yet worthy brother, Lionel Harrison.

Bro. Harrison is anxious that his son, who is also, in Masonic parlance, a Brother, should benefit to the utmost by the teachings of Masonry. He bears in mind the sacred nature of his own obligations, and regardful, no doubt, that even in these days of progress the miscarriage of a letter is not only possible but probable, he is content to limit his paternal and personal instruction to sundry general directions, the value of which no man in his senses will venture to set at naught. Bro. Harrison, in the first instance, insists on the holy value of love. Love is instilled into the mind of every child, but the range of Masonic love, like that of charity, is universal. Masons love each other and all mankind, not merely as a whelp loves its dam, of sheer instinct, but as a matter of duty. Thus is set forth that love must be genuine, and from the heart; that is, there must be no hypocritical display of this brotherly love, and, as necessary to the attainment of this, Masons must have a firm faith in the merits of their system. "Faith," says Bro. Harrison, "is the foundation of justice, the bond of amity, and the chief support of society." How, otherwise indeed, could society exist without love in the first instance, and faith in the general excellence of human kind in the second. Charity, again, is urged with a solemn impressiveness. We bear in mind the doctrine of the Evangelist as to "Faith, Hope, and Charity, but the greatest of these is Charity." Whosoever ignores the just demands of Charity falls short of his duty, not only as a Mason, but as a man. Then again temperance is a virtue of which both heathen and Christian philosophers have spoken in the highest terms of praise and commendation, and the observance of this is rightly insisted upon, not merely in its narrow, but in its widest signification. We are enjoined to be temperate in all things, not only in our affections, but in our passions, so that, by a strict governance of the reason, we may "be relieved from the allurements of vice." In order to attain temperance, however, we must be prudent, which is rightly described as "the golden mean between rashness and cowardice." Prudence enables a man to judge wisely, and to determine fully whatever pertains "to their temporal and eternal welfare." Besides prudence, the full value of justice is inculcated, for this virtue guides us to render every man his due. Honour, again, and virtue, and mercy—as illustrated by our greatest poet—are further inculcated, and in the teaching laid down, even the Pope himself, we venture to affirm, can find nothing which is in the slightest degree devious from the strictest code of morality. Lastly, mercy is insisted upon, with an eagerness that is highly commendable. Men are weakly by nature. They experience in their course through life many vicissitudes, many temptations. The result frequently is that they fall, yet humanum est errare. The best among us fall short in the performance of our duties, and for these shortcomings it is imperative we should crave indulgence occasionally. Thus mercy is "as the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath; it is twice blessed—it blesseth him that gives and him that takes." So says Shakspeare, so says Freemasonry, so says Christianity, and with such a concurrence of opinion who shall gainsay the correctness of our view?

We shall not prolong this article much further. The casual finding of a letter, unintended for publication, has led us to make these remarks. We fully believe they are in keeping with our general teaching, and we express most firmly our opinion that if the profanum vulgus will but give heed to these few comments of ours there will never be the slightest doubt as to the efficacy of Masonic teaching.

We have offered these few remarks in the most genuine spirit. We are actuated by the purest motives. We feel that Masonry has no claim on the respect of mankind if it cannot show itself to be actuated, as it is in very truth, by the purest, the most disinterested, and the most virtuous of all laws, both human and divine. Care we, then, if others doubt our virtue? Yea, forsooth, for we pride ourselves, not unnaturally or unbecomingly, on the virtues we possess. At all events, till something more alarming than slander can be directed against us, we are content to remain as we are; charitably disposed towards all men, brothers or non-brothers, eager to do good wherever good may be done, or to allay differences where differences may have arisen. We strive humbly to cultivate charity, prudence, mercy, and the kindred virtues. If we fail, it is owing to the frailty of nature. But we trust continently in the help of the G.A.O.T.U. We believe in His power to aid us, and shall, sooner or later, be the better for our faith. May the doctrines laid down by our Bro. Harrison find a full responsive echo in the breasts of all Masons!

GENTEEL MENDICANTS.

THE society for the repression of Mendicity is, we believe, doing a great and good work. It is endeavouring so to organise charity that our old and absurd fashion of indiscriminate almsgiving may be, in a measure, discredited. It has already done much to expose the crowd of hungry needy beggars, who will starve rather than work; but, as far as we can judge, it has done little to repress that vast mass of genteel mendicity which finds a home in a great city like London. We are not speaking of the professional begging letter writers, or of the rogue, of gentlemanlike manners, who has seen better days. These harpies, without character, having been through the gamut of villainy, must, sooner or later, come within the clutches of the law. By genteel mendicants we mean those persons who, with characters apparently unspotted, make begging a profession. We are thinking of the widows of clergymen and schoolmasters, who imagine all the world is bound to help them. Of the needy half pay officers and their wives, who, in obscure country towns, beg credit of poor little tradesmen, and never pay until they are compelled; who run bills with the butcher, and turn up their noses when they meet him in the streets. We are, in short, thinking of people who are capable of any dirty or mean action which will save them from the necessity of working for their bread. Here, for example, is a genteel beggar, who has been the round of half the genteel charities in the metropolis, and she finds the game a paying one. She is a lady of "irreproachable character." Her husband was a clergyman, and during his long career he never obtained a larger stipend than £120 per annum. She is the sister of a colonial bishop, one of those poor and much despised preachers of the Word, who, when they do visit our shores, appear to be in a state of perpetual wonder at the magnificence of their own gaiters and aprons. Our heroine learned the trade of a genteel beggar whilst she and her family were starving on a pittance of £80 per annum. Like very many of the educated, and so-called refined classes, she is utterly devoid of fine feeling. A poor charwoman would blush for shame to be caught importuning the mistress of the house for a few cast-off clothes, but our fine lady, who can rattle off a symphony of Beethoven and speak French with the accent of a Parisian, has no such mauvaise honte. When she, or rather her husband, was curate of Dunder-cum-Puddenhead, she had managed to make her woes known to all the grand people in the neighbourhood. She had always some bill to meet, or the brokers to pay out of the house, or a baker's bill to settle; and if cash came in but slowly to her urgent and masculine appeals, she was quite ready to accept payment in kind. When her husband obtained a better post, far away in the north of England, she canvassed her friends, and actually contrived to raise enough money to pay second class fare for the family. Of course she could not ride in the third class. She, a clergyman's wife, and sister of a "colonial," could not think of "pigging"—that was her refined way of putting it—with artisans and labourers, in those horrid carriages, which railway companies provide for the common herd, who pay their way with hard earned money. She had to think of her girls, whose morals might be contaminated by the "creatures" who might chance to be their fellow travellers. She had to think of her own dignity, as the wife of the new curate of Slocum Podger, and so the family travelled second class, on charity. Her boys were educated at charitable institutions, and grew up to manhood with the fixed impressions that they would never be compelled to sully their genteel fingers by hard work, but that light and agreeable employment would be found for them by the good people who had so kindly provided mamma with ways and means. Our enterprising heroine was in active treaty with certain powerful friends, who had half promised to help the lads in their first battle with the world, when her husband unfortunately died; and his widow was now enabled to throw in her weeds as an invaluable portion of the stock in trade of the genteel mendicant. Letters were written to all and singular who might be interested in so charming a family circle. The bishop of the diocese was dunned; the clergy were importuned for help, the Poor Clergy Relief Society heard of her misfortunes; and the ground having been thus carefully prepared the crop of alms began to come in. A subscription, amounting to a respectable sum, was invested for her benefit. The Poor Clergy Relief Society sent her, from time to time, large boxes of cast-off clothing. The best of these articles, and some of them were really excellent, were at once sold for ready cash, and the charming widow, who, during her husband's lifetime, had never known what prosperity was, now found herself on the high road to that agreeable goal. She discreetly made the metropolis her head quarters, and plenty reigned at her table. Her benevolent friends had kindly paid all her debts, but it was impossible for a lady who all her life had had her leisure enlivened by duns to avoid getting on the wrong side of the tradesman's ledger. Fresh liabilities were immediately incurred, and the family rioted in plenty, while the begging epistles were daily going out to excite the compassion of the charitable. Nothing came amiss to this bold veteran mendicant; her husband, in his early days, had become a freeman of a City Company, and this body was importuned for cash, and not, we are sorry to say, in vain. A place in the Civil Service was found for the eldest son, and the other was taken into the counting house of a soft-hearted merchant, who was overcome by the vivid picture of the colonial bishop which his mother conjured up before his pitying eyes. The lad, it is true, in spite of his educational advantages, could not spell, or cast up a column of figures, but our merchant, a big parvenu, pleased himself with the idea that a lad with high connections was grinding in his commercial mill. Our widow tried desperately to get up a flirtation between her daughter, a girl gifted with red hair and an enormous appetite, and the son of an old college chum of her husband, but the affair came to grief, and the charming young lady left the parental nest to take charge of the education of the children of a friend. Thus far all had gone swimmingly with our heroine, she had indeed made strenuous efforts to change her own condition, but a widow devoid of personal charms, and encumbered with seven children, is heavily weighted in the matrimonial race. With responsibilities lightened, a certain but small income, and such help as her boys could afford, she should at least have found it possible to make both ends meet; but some people, as the Frenchman remarked, are never happy unless they are miserable, and at this moment she is working all the charitable agencies in the metropolis with a view of lightening in some measure her vast load of debt. We are of opinion that such persons as the widow of the brazen face and resolute heart should be summarily suppressed. It is scandalous that such a person should be permitted to trade upon charity, and make a good thing of the calling. We are happy to know that our Masonic charities are not so shamefully abused as some that we could name. The brotherhood have indeed made it impossible for an adventuress such as the lady we have sketched to live upon the charity of the Order, but if the husband of our heroine had been a Mason she certainly would have tried her arts upon the directing spirits of Grand Lodge. One contribution she might have obtained, but she certainly would not have received a second.

PLAGIARISM.

OUR readers must remember that among the games of their boyhood one appropriately known as "Follow my leader." The boy selected as leader usually possessed, in a pre-eminent degree, the qualities of skill and courage, combined with a certain amount of humour and fertility of expedient, judgment, of course, being necessary in the exercise of these qualities. For instance, the leader having first gauged, or already knowing, perhaps, the powers of those who were to follow him, would hardly attempt or do what it was impossible for them to repeat. His feats must be pretty well within the limits of their ability, or the game would resolve itself into leading only, without the followers. Now this following a leader is one of those boyish things, which as men, we do not cast aside, only what was done for pastime in our boyhood is become a business or a duty in our manhood. Some one marks out for himself a particular line of conduct, others, from a variety of motives, think it their duty, or make it their business to adopt such line of conduct for themselves. Some one originates a new system of ethics, or he inaugurates a new theory respecting the planetary system, or he invents a patent; immediately there is a goodly number of people who adopt his views or follow in his footsteps. Others again denounce these systems and theories, and invent counter systems and theories of their own. These, too, find a multitude of followers. All this is natural enough, and, in the main, proper. Yet is there one kind of lead the following of which is generally reprehended. We mean that adoption or imitation of ideas which is known in journalism, and generally throughout the world of literature as plagiarism. One man racks his brains with a view to writing a book. The book is written, and then, forthwith, some one else

helps himself more or less, yet generally more than less liberally, to the contents of the work, appropriating them to his own ends. Another writes an article for some newspaper, whereupon another article, almost, if not verbatim, the same, makes its appearance in some other newspaper. One editor lays down for himself a particular kind of programme, which, in his opinion, will most conduce to the success of his journal or periodical. Another editor, too lazy or too incapable to initiate a programme, adopts the former's, without the slightest hesitation or scruple. In all these cases the man who follows is a plagiarist, or appropriator of his leader's ideas, and the press, indeed the whole world of literature, has set its face strongly against the practice, and condemns it with just severity. As Freemasons we, of course, view any Appropriation Act of this kind with the most fraternal tenderness, but as journalists we feel bound in duty to object on principle, when our ideas or contents are copied or adopted without acknowledgment. We are careful, however, to express our objections as courteously as possible, we remonstrate only in the most friendly spirit imaginable, we do our utmost to observe, not only the laws of journalism, but its amenities likewise. Thus, whenever we feel called upon to express our concurrence with, or disapprobation of the policy pursued by our Masonic contemporaries, we do so cordially in the former case, in the latter gently, and with all the courtesy we can command. Thus the week before last we drew attention to a most marvellous coincidence, none other, in fact, than the appearance, with one or two verbal differences only, in two journals, ours and the Hebrew Leader of New York, of the very same article on a certain Masonic charity—not simultaneously, but in these columns on the 31st July, in those of our contemporary on 27th August. A few weeks previously we noticed that an article of ours on the late Dr. Oliver had re-appeared, after a brief interval of rest, in the columns of the Keystone. In both these cases we suggested, with becoming courtesy, that the omission of the usual acknowledgment was the result of an oversight. We gave them credit, in fact, for those good intentions which they had previously extended to us when quoting from our columns, which in the case of the Keystone have been most handsomely extended to us since, and which the Hebrew Leader, if it should do us the honour to utilise any of our articles, will doubtless put in practice for the future. These are the only two cases of the utilisation by other journals of articles which made their first appearance in our paper to which we have directed our readers' attention, but they are very far from being the only ones that have occurred. Thus far have we dealt with our American Masonic contemporaries. Coming nearer home, we find that sundry of the main features of our programme are not unfrequently followed by an English contemporary. To give one or two illustrations of our meaning. After the presentation of chairs by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts to the Lodge bearing her name, we had a leader on the subject, entitled "What Next?" wherein we discoursed pleasantly about this novel episode in Masonry, and pertinently inquired, "What next is going to happen?" The week following, our contemporary had also an article entitled "What next?" We will do him the justice, however, to say there was this difference between the two leaders. Ours was à propos of something very particular, while his was à propos of nothing in particular, and would have borne any other title just as well. With a very slight change

"The rose, by any other name, had smelt as sweet."

Again, as we have never seen any just cause or impediment why our readers should not have a digest of the week's news, or why that digest should not contain mention of the events, political, scientific, social, athletic, &c., happening from day to day in the outer world, we introduced and commented upon, among other matters of public interest, various athletic achievements. No long time passes, when our contemporary, once careless about such mundane trifles, follows suit, and discourses pleasantly, if not scientifically, of similar matters. In our issue of the 11th inst., we gave an account of the Lodge Les Sages d'Héliopolis, our authority being Bro. Canbet's article in Le Monde Maçonnique, which we reproduced, according to the best of our poor ability, in English, in the belief that our readers would be pleased to note the difference in working between a foreign Lodge, under the Grand Orient of France, and our English Lodges. Last week our contemporary gave a summary of the same article. We might go on multiplying these instances in which our contemporary has, to use a common phrase, taken a leaf out of our book, but these will suffice to show that, while some of our Transatlantic Masonic contemporaries have thought our articles worth utilising, our Cisatlantic contemporary is not too proud to copy our ideas. Yet, funnily enough, this same contemporary has calmly ignored us from the very first moment of our existence, and persistently describes himself in his advertising columns, as The Masonic Journal of the period in this country. But there is something funnier even still. In one of our earliest numbers we quoted something from Pomeroy's Democrat, with the usual acknowledgment. For so doing a correspondent of our contemporary took us somewhat severely to task, a week or two afterwards, calling in question our Masonic good faith. We shall not describe this writer's onslaught as a vulgar attack on an inoffensive journal. We are not called upon to express any opinion on the character of the letter, nor is our contemporary responsible for the opinions of his correspondents. It is enough that his attempt to ascribe a fault, had any been committed, to the wrong journal was a complete failure, and doubtless the writer has long since repented in sackcloth and ashes the error of his ways. Grave inconsistency of human, to say nothing of Masonic human nature, that any English contemporary should suffer us to be attacked in its columns, nor hesitate to utilise our titles and ideas, yet not even acknowledge our existence.

After all, though we have felt these few remarks are not uncalled for, we have made them in all good nature. It is impossible to be otherwise than courteous and contented when so many of our Masonic contemporaries so often pay us the graceful compliment of quoting our articles and adopting our ideas. We are fairly entitled to regard the frequent adoption or imitation of some part of our weekly issue as a tribute of respect to such humble merit as we may have given evidence of possessing. We necessarily feel that such slight services to Masonry as it has been in our power to render have not been wholly unrecognised or unappreciated. When the most youthful Masonic journal in the world is thus liberally quoted, when its views find favour with its elder brethren in journalism, we may be pardoned if we unconsciously yield to a slight yet delicious feeling of self complacency; we should be less than human, indeed, if we did not. We are quoted often abroad, mostly with, yet occasionally without acknowledgment; we are respectfully imitated at home. Our place in the periodical literature of the Craft is everywhere recognised, either directly or indirectly. We are grateful, and express publicly our gratitude. What more in the way of thanks it is in our power to render, will be rendered willingly, even to the uttermost "thank."

CAMBRIDGE SLANG, A.D. 1795.

TURNING over the pages of the Freemason's Magazine for February 1795, I lighted on a very amusing account of the slang then in vogue at Cambridge University, written by one who signed himself "A friend to Alma Mater, but an enemy to all ambiguity." This brought a rejoinder, the month following, from "A Cantab," and as a sketch of the two letters may be interesting to your readers, I have jotted down the following details.

The writer of the first letter, having occasion to visit Cambridge on business, accepts an invitation to dine at the rooms of an old Yorkshire schoolfellow, in the expectation he should hugely enjoy, as he says, "the feast of reason and the flow of soul." He first introduces to his readers' notice the company in which he finds himself. These included a Harry Soph, a fellow-commoner and senior soph—occasionally also "called an empty bottle; whilst, è contra, a bottle decanted was, from time to time, denominated a fellow-commoner"—a junior soph and pensioner—who "talked much of his independence, of his having refused exhibitions, and (what gave me no good opinion of his learning) declared he had no pretensions to either scholarship or fellowship—a jolly fat fellow—"by nature formed 'to lard the lean earth as he walked along'"—who was a non ens and had not yet been matriculated; and, lastly, a sizer and questionist. His next experience is that those who go in for honours come out plucked, senior or junior optime and senior or junior wranglers, having previously kept all their acts. Their names are printed on a tripos—"a long piece of whited-brown paper, like that on which our commonest ballads are printed." When the cloth is removed, one of those present exclaims, "D—n those retros! My Jip brought one in this morning, faith! and told me I was focussed. I resolved in this dilemma to smile my tutor; but, as I lately came over him for a good round sum, I was forced to run the rig upon him. Luckily, I crammed him so well, that at last honest Jollus tipped me the cole." Another said "he had just been convened in the combination (query commination) room, and was very near rustication, merely for kicking up a row after a beakering party. 'So ho, Jack!' briskly rejoined another, 'almost presented with a travelling fellowship? very nigh being sent to grass, hey?'" He next learns that the men at the different colleges are known, some as Jesuits, some as Christians, some as Johnian Hogs or Trinity Bull-dogs, some as Clare Hall Greyhounds, others as Sidney Owls, &c. But he can make nothing of the uses of the words cut and sport. A man is cut in hall, cut at afternoon lectures, cut at a ball, &c., while, on the other hand, he cuts a figure, cuts chapel, cuts gates, cuts examinations, &c. Some, says the writer, even "cut their tutors. I own, I was shocked at the latter account, and began to imagine myself in the midst of so many monsters." But his horror is increased when he hears "a lively young man" assert "that, in consequence of an intimation from the tutor relative to his irregularities, his own father came from the country to jobe him: 'but, faith!' added he, carelessly, "I no sooner learned he was at the Black Bull (an inn so called, in High Street) than I determined to cut the old codger completely.'" Still worse is "one most ferocious spirit," who declares that he is "resolved to cut every man of Magdalen College; concluding, with an oath, that they were a parcel of rippish quoses." As to the word sport, he learns that men "sported knowing, and they sported ignorant; they sported an agrotat, and they sported a new coat! They sported an ovat, they sported a dormiat, they sported their outer, a lion, a lioness, a cat, and a levant." The astonishment of "A friend to Alma Mater, but an enemy to all ambiguity," may be more easily imagined than described.

In the rejoinder, "A Cantab" first of all remarks on the absence of all mention of the Wooden Spoon—the last on the list of the junior optimés, the third and lowest class of those who have taken honours. Even the lowest of the hoi polloi, who are his inferiors, make him their butt, and reiterate the stale and perennial remark, "that wranglers are born with gold spoons in their mouths, senior optimés with silver, junior optimés with wooden, and the hoi polloi with leaden ones." As to the hoi polloi, he says, if there be one only, he is "a Bion, who carried all his learning about him, without the slightest inconvenience;" if two, they are dubbed "the Scipios, Damon and Pythias, Hercules and Atlas, Castor and Pollux;" if three, "the three Graces, or the three Furies, or the three Magi, or Noah, Daniel and Job; if seven, "the seven wise men, or the seven wonders of the world;" if nine, "the nine unfortunate suitors of the Muses;" if twelve, "the twelve apostles;" if thirteen, "they deserved a round dozen, or, like Americans, should bear thirteen stripes on their coat and arms;" and so on, in addition to which they were known also as "constant quantities and martyrs." "A Cantab" then explains the titles of the various undergraduates—the fellow-commoner, pensioner, tizer, &c.—with only one of which I need trouble your readers. He says, "a Harry or errant Soph I understand to be either a person four-and-twenty years of age, and of an infirm state of health, who is permitted to dine with the fellows, and to wear a plain, black, full-sleeved gown; or else he is one who, having kept all the terms by statute required previous to his law-act, is, hoc ipso facto, entitled to wear the same garment, and thenceforth ranks as bachelor by courtesy." Later on he adds, "The Jesuits are the inhabitants of Jesus College; the Christians, those of Christ's; the Johnian hogs were originally remarkable, on account of the squalid figures and low habits of the students, and especially of the sizers, of St. John's College; Catherine-Puritans, inhabitants of Catherine Hall, so pruningly called from Katharo; they are also yclept Catharine-doves, for the same reason—doves being emblems of purity. Hence, perhaps, we derive the epithet of 'a plucked puritan.' Trinity bull-dogs, from their ferocious deportment, in consequence of peculiar immunities attached to their college, and of their remarkable dress. I am yet to learn the etymology of Sidney Owls and of Clare Hall Greyhounds." He closes his letter with two stanzas from a poem by Kit Smart the poet, himself of Pembroke—written in 1741, while yet at college—and "intituled The Pretty Bar-keeper of the Mitre." They are as follow:—

"Her snuff-box if the nymph pull'd out,
Each Johnian, in responsive aire,
Fed with the tickling dust his snout,
With all the politesse of bears.
Dropt she her fan beneath her hoop,
Ev'n stake-stock Clarians strove to stoop.
The sons of culinary Kays,
Smoking from the eternal treat,
Lost in ecstatic transport, gaze,
As though the fair was good to eat;
Ev'n gloomiest King's men, pleased awhile,
Grin horribly a ghastly smile.

I have no desire to attempt an addition to this, it embraces all that could well be said, but having learnt another form more particularly appertaining to ourselves, I may be permitted to repeat it. So refined a virtue, if possessed by a monarch, adds lustre to every gem that adorns his crown; if by the warrior, it imparts unfading freshness to the wreath that shades his brow. It is the companion of true honour and the ameliorator of justice, on whose bench, when enthroned there, interposes on behalf of the victim a shield of defence impenetrable by the sword. As the vernal showers descend to refresh the vegetable creation, so mercy acting upon the heart returns nature to its source in a purer stream. It is the attribute of the Deity on whom the best of us must rest our hopes and dependence, for at the final day, when arraigned at His bar, and the actions of life are unveiled to view, though justice may demand the fiat, let us hope His mercy will avert the awful doom.

My object was to have sent this to you last mail, but finding the task longer than anticipated at the outset, anxiety to complete it must plead an excuse for delay. The second portion combines various subjects more or less symbolical, and were I to give details of them your patience would be sorely tried, and I fear my integrity impugned; hence reference must again be made to those skilled in the liberal arts and sciences for more particular information. I may, however, proceed with what may be termed the moral advantages of geometry. It is one of the first and noblest of the sciences, and the basis upon which the superstructure of Masonry is erected. By geometry we may trace her various windings to her most concealed recesses, discover the wisdom, power and goodness of the G.A.O.T.U., and view with delight the beautiful variety which decorates and graces the vast machine; by it we may discover how the planets move in their orbits, and mathematically demonstrate their various revolutions; by it also we may rationally account for the return of seasons, and the mixed and beautiful variety of scenes each season displays to the discerning eye, and how numberless worlds all formed by the same Almighty being, and governed by his unerring laws roll around in the vast expanse of space. Whilst such objects engage our attention, how ought we to improve, with what grand ideas should such knowledge fill our minds? It was a survey of nature and an observation of her beautiful proportions which first induced man to imitate the divine plan, and study symmetry and order. This gave rise to society every useful art. The architect began to design the plans then laid down, and having improved by time and experience, produced those beautiful works of art which have secured the admiration and imitation of every succeeding age. Knowing that your Biblical knowledge is extensive, I shall merely refer you to the portion of the sacred volume respecting the building of the temple, and content myself by observing it is from the plans of K.S. to carry on and complete that structure that we deduce the origin of our system of government. The two great pillars placed at the entrance to the temple were intended as a memorial to the children of Israel of the happy deliverance of their forefathers from bondage, and in commemoration of the miraculous pillars of fire and cloud, which had two wonderful effects, the fire having given light to the Israelites and facilitated their escape, whilst the cloud proved darkness to Pharaoh and his host, and retarded their pursuit. K.S. ordered them to be placed at the entrance to the temple that the children of Israel might have the happy event before their eyes in going to and returning from divine worship.

You may not perhaps concur in the general opinion that speculative Masonry, as practised, has arisen out of operative; be that as it may, it is not my intention to enter the arena of discussion upon such a point, or say one word disparagingly of those worthy students of the Craft whose efforts may be accepted as proofs of erudition and zeal to promote the interest of the Order. Suffice it for me to say that architecture has gone hand in hand with civilisation, while for the rise of the various orders (laying aside our interpretation) consult your books of reference.

Ere this you will have gained some information as to Masonic symbolism. A prominent feature therein is that in connection with the seven liberal arts and sciences, and of these I purpose giving a definition so far as my memory will serve.

Grammar teaches the proper arrangement of words according to the idiom or dialect of any particular country or people, and is that excellency of pronunciation which enables us to read or write a language agreeable to reason, orthography, and the strict rules of literature.

Rhetoric teaches us to speak fluently upon any subject, not merely with propriety, but with all the advantages of force and eloquence, wisely contriving to captivate the hearer by strength of argument and beauty of expression, whether it be to entreat, exhort, admonish, or applaud.

Logic enables us to guide our reason discreetly, and to direct our inquiries after truth as well for our own improvement as for the instruction of others. It consists of a regular train of argument, whence we infer, deduce, and conclude according to certain premises laid down, admitted, or granted; in it are employed the faculties of conceiving, reasoning, judging, and disposing, and through the whole of which we are led on from one gradation to another, until the point in question is finally determined.

Arithmetic treats of the powers and properties of numbers as they are variously expressed by figures, tables, and instruments. By this science reasons and demonstrations are given for finding out any number, the relation and affinity of which to another number is already known and determined.

Geometry treats of the powers of magnitude in general where length, breadth, and thickness are separately and collectively considered. By this science, the architect is enabled to form his plans and carry out his designs; the general to arrange his army, the engineer to mark out ground for the intended encampment, the geographer to give us the dimensions of the world, delineate the extent of seas, and specify the divisions of empires, kingdoms, and provinces. By it also, the astronomer is enabled to make his observations, calculate and fix the duration of time, seasons, years and cycles. In fine, geometry is the foundation of architecture and the root of mathematics.

Music is the art of forming concords, so as to produce delightful harmony by a mathematical and proportionate arrangement of sounds. This art, by a series of experiments, has been reduced to a demonstrable science with respect to tones and the interval of sound; it enquires into the nature of concords and discords, and enables us to find a due proportion between them by numbers, nor is it ever heard to greater advantage than when employed in the praise of the G.A.O.T.U.

Astronomy is that sublime science which enables the contemplative mind to soar aloft, and there read the wisdom, power and goodness of the G.A.O.T.U. How nobly illustrative of the Supreme being is the celestial hemisphere. It is the most magnificent herald of His glory, it speaks to the whole creation, and there is no people so barbarous, or nation so far distant, but its voice is heard amongst them. Assisted by astronomy, we obtain a knowledge of the laws governing the heavenly bodies, ascertain their size, and determine their distance, become acquainted with the general phenomena, whereby we are enabled to correct the fallacy of the senses by the light of truth. Can anything be more wonderful than these observations? Yes! there are truths far more astounding, scenes far more extensive, for as there is no end to the Almighty's goodness, so can no imagination set a limit to his creative hand. Could we soar beyond the moon, pass through the planetary choir, wing our way to the furthest apparent star, and there take our stand upon the loftiest pinnacle of heaven, we should see the sky constantly expanding before us, other suns darting their inexhaustible beams; other, perhaps nobler, worlds in unknown profusion through the illimitable expanse of space. Nor do the dominions of the Grand Geometrician of the Universe terminate here, for at the end of even this vast tour we should find ourselves no further advanced than into a suburb of creation on the frontier of the Great Jehovah's Kingdom. Thus, what an august idea of the Creator's power does astronomy afford! As it scarcely admits of doubt that the fixed stars are suns, so is it rational to infer that each sun is the centre of a system, hence ten thousand times ten thousand worlds burst upon the mental eye all arranged like our planet in beauteous order, rapid in motion, yet harmonious and serene, and invariably keeping the bounds the great law giver first prescribed. Surely, then, it is not too presumptuous to conclude, as the all wise Creator has made nothing in vain, that each world in every system is peopled with myriads of intelligent beings, candidates like ourselves for the dominions of bliss and capable of endless progress in felicity and glory; then, as so much wisdom is displayed throughout the universe, how great! how glorious! and how worthy of adoration must He be who created, sustains, and controls the whole?

In conclusion, let me beg of you always to remember the sacred retreat of peace and friendship.

Amid all cares and employments, forget not the sacred duties which have been inculcated and so strongly recommended; therefore, be discreet, prudent, and temperate.

Remember also that you have voluntarily and solemnly vowed to befriend and relieve every brother who shall need your assistance, that you have promised to remind him in the gentlest manner of his failings, and to aid his reformation, to defend and vindicate his character whenever wrongfully traduced, and to suggest the most favorable circumstances, even when it is most liable to reprehension and blame: thus shall the world see how dearly Masons love one another. But, my dear Son and Brother, you are to extend these noble and generous sentiments even further; let me impress upon your mind, and let it be instilled into your heart that every human being has an undoubted claim to your kind offices. I therefore, strictly enjoin you to do good to all, while I more particularly recommend to your care the household of the faithful, so that by diligence and fidelity in our various avocations, by liberal benevolence and diffusive charity, by constancy and sincerity in your friendship, by being uniformly kind, just, amiable and virtuous in your department, you may prove to the world the happy and beneficent effects of our ancient and honorable institution.

Let it not be said that you have laboured in vain, for your work is before God, and your recompense is with Him.

Finally, My dear Son, live in peace, and may the God of love and mercy delight to dwell with you and bless you evermore.

I shall reply to your letter in a mail or two with full domestic particulars. Meantime, be assured of our undying love, and believe me,

My dear Son and Brother,

Your affectionate Father,

LIONEL HARRISON.

THE DRAMA.

"Flamingo" at the Strand—Recent Changes.

IF any unsophisticated playgoer is desirous of seeing how a bright and amusing French comedy may be metamorphosed into a dull and meaningless English burlesque, he will best satisfy his wish by going to see Flamingo, at the Strand. Gavant, Minard et Cie, of which Flamingo is supposed to be an adaptation, is not quite what would be called a moral play, in fact it would hardly, at first glance, be considered a fit subject for production on the English stage; but, at least, it is amusing, and deserves a better fate than that of being converted into a weak imitation of Nemesis. It is difficult to appreciate the humour displayed in the invention of such names as Rumb the Renown, and Sobil the Simple, in place of the original Gavant and Minard, and the laughter gained by the exhibition of grotesque dresses is not such as is likely to assure the success of any play. Flamingo affords parts for most of the leading favourites at THE STRAND. Mr. Edward Terry, as the senior partner, acts with all his amusing eccentricity, and sings one capitally written song on the perplexities of arithmetic; Miss Claude always looks charming, and plays the servant, Alisarina, as well as has been her custom to play lately. The chief success in the piece was gained by Miss Lottie Venne, an immensely improved actress, whose vivacious acting and quiet fun would have saved a worse piece than Flamingo from failure. M. Marius also acts well, as, indeed, he invariably does, and, owing to the efforts of these clever artistes, the piece was well received; but it must be acknowledged that their talents are, to a great extent, wasted, and that the fountain of success at THE STRAND, which opened so well with Nemesis, has, apparently, run dry.

Money again opens the season at THE PRINCE OF WALES'S, and, judging from appearances, its attractions are undiminished. Little change has been made in the cast, with the exception that Mr. A. Wood plays the part of Graves, in place of Mr. Honey. The comedy is most admirably acted all round, and two particular performances in it will bear comparison with any acting of the present day. Mrs. Bancroft as Lady Franklin, and Miss Ellen Terry as Clara Douglas, affords a real treat to all admirers of good acting. The piquancy and finesse of the one, combined with the womanly feeling and passion of the other, afford a series of charming scenes. Whenever time shall necessitate a change in the programme at this theatre we shall lose a general performance which does credit to the English stage.

The production of Macbeth, at THE LYCEUM, announced for last Saturday, was, at the last moment, postponed until to-night, when Mr. Irving's numerous and enthusiastic admirers will assemble in great force, to witness, we hope, another great success.

A change in the programme at THE MIRROR is promised for Monday next, when Self, the new drama by Messrs. Oxenford and Wigan, will be produced, preceded by a new comedietta, by Mr. J. M. Morton.

Mr. J. S. Clarke has been playing in The Toodles, and Among the Breakers, during the week at THE HAYMARKET, where a new comedy, by Mr. Byron, is promised for speedy production.

GOOD NIGHT.

(To be sung at the Closing of Lodge.)

Good-night! the spirits of the blest and good,
From Masons walls go with you and abide
In hours of sorrow, hours of solitude;
Or, when the hosts of melancholy brood
And cloud your mind, may angel-spirits glide
From the WHITE THRONE, and give you great delight,—
Dear Friends, GOOD NIGHT!

Good-night! good-night! and joy be with you all!
May sickness never blight, nor poverty;
May slanderous breath your spirits ne'er appal;
May no untoward accident befall—
But all things prosperous and happy be;
May morning's sun rise on you fresh and bright—
Dear Friends, GOOD NIGHT!

Good-night! and when the shadows of the grave
Close in around you; when the labouring breath
Draws heavily; and unto Him who gave,
You yield the spirit; be He strong to save,
Who is our GUIDE and MASTER unto death!
Then may dear friends and heavenly hopes unite
To say GOOD NIGHT!

Memoir of the Life of Admiral Sir E. Codrington. Edited and abridged from the larger work, by Lady BOURCHIER. London: Longmans. 1875.

To a maratime nation like England, the lives of its great admirals must ever possess a deep and abiding interest. The names of Drake, Howe and Nelson can only be forgotten when the country, whose flag they so often bore to victory, has fallen from her position in the scale of nations. The Memoirs of Sir Edward Codrington offer peculiar features of interest, covering, as they do, one of the most thrilling periods of England's naval history. Almost the first engagement in which he held command was the ever memorable Battle of Trafalgar. It is interesting to note with what eagerness the officers of the fleet awaited the arrival of Lord Nelson during the few weeks which preceded this great engagement. Admiral Collingwood is described as a "Stay-on-board," and the question is repeatedly asked, in our hero's letters, "Is Lord Nelson coming out to us again?" On September, the 4th, he writes, "I anxiously hope he may be coming soon." Again, on September the 20th, "For charity's sake send us Lord Nelson, oh, ye men of power." At last comes the intelligence, "Lord Nelson is arrived! A sort of general joy has been the consequence." The great battle follows close after this, and Lord Nelson is no more. Glorious as the victory was, the death of its hero seemed to nullify the disposition to rejoice over it. Codrington commanded the "Orion" in this action, and greatly distinguished himself by his coolness and vigour. The letters of Sir Edward, from which there is a large number of extracts, prove him to have been a man of very keen perceptions, and kindly sympathies. All who take a pleasure in reading of England's triumphs by sea will hardly fail to enjoy a perusal of the volume.

Plea for Mercy to Animals. I.—Claims of the Lower Animals to humane treatment from man. II.—Various forms of needless suffering inflicted by man. III.—Means of prevention, legal and educational. IV.—Vivisection and other experiments on Living Animals. By JAMES MACAULAY, A.M., M.D. Edin. Editor of the Leisure Hour. London: Religious Tract Society, 56 Paternoster Row.

We feel confident that no appeal for mercy to the lower animals will be made in vain to Freemasons. Those who make it their chief delight to cultivate all the kindlier feelings of our nature are sure not to confine the practice of human kindness to men only, but will extend their consideration even to the humblest among the lower animals. How can we picture to ourselves a genuine Mason who spends all his days in a state of peace and goodwill with all mankind being otherwise than humane in his treatment of animals. A Mason who could beat unmercifully a horse, or, a dog, or would work the former when ailing, were certainly a paradox. Kindness to our fellow-creatures, must surely include kindness to cats, dogs, horses, and other members of the animal world. Besides, the folk who are not kindly disposed towards animals, are not usually kind towards their fellowmen. Just as we have pointed out that a truly kind man could not maltreat an animal; so, it seems to us, must the converse proposition hold good—that one unkind to animals cannot be a truly kind man towards his fellows. It is, however, becoming more and more recognised every day as a duty we owe to humanity —to place it on no higher ground—that all animals should receive the gentlest treatment at our hands. And with the rapid strides that are being made in educational improvement, we shall soon begin to find a higher and more refined tone of feeling developed among the lower classes of men. Not, indeed, that cruelty towards animals is unknown among educated people, or kindness towards them among the uneducated. But the preponderance of virtue in this, as in all other respects, will be found among the former, and of vice among the latter. Undoubtedly education softens the minds of men, and helps to eradicate the brutality that is innate in them. We must first, therefore, as Dr. Macaulay very properly points out, look to education to aid us in developing a kindlier treatment of animals among all classes. Our next help will be from wise legislative enactment. The idea that we shall succeed in making people either kind or virtuous by Act of Parliament is, of course, ridiculous. But the mere fact that Parliament recognises more stringently than it does now the claims of animals to kind treatment cannot fail to have a general deterrent effect. But Dr. Macaulay is not content with pressing only the above points. He adduces the example of some of the most civilised nations of antiquity in support of his plea. He cites for instance, the case of the Egyptians, among whom very many animals were held sacred, and again that of the Jews, among whom a love for animals was strictly enjoined by the Mosaic law. We are glad, indeed, to find that the author brings forward so gallant an array of reasons in support of his thesis, the justice of which, however, is self-evident. But there are still further reasons, as the author points out. Those animals which are brought more immediately into contact with man possess a very high order of intelligence. The horse, the ass, the dog, the cat, these soon become attached to man, and it is surprising that folk after knowing this to be the case should not be more urgent in pressing their claims for merciful treatment. Yet, as we remarked the other day in relation to Barnet Horse Fair, we invariably find the greatest human brutes associated with the greatest and most intelligent animals, the horse and dog being notable instances in evidence of our assertion. Other grounds are urged, but many of them will probably suggest themselves to the minds of our readers. However, in any case, we commend this Plea for Mercy to Animals to their notice in the firm belief that having once read it they will direct their minds towards the attainment of that object which Dr. Macaulay is so strenuously seeking.

We need not dwell longer on the Plea. We have shown that it is earnestly written, that it naturally commends itself to all right thinking people, and that in the course of time, the advocacy of such writers as Dr. Macaulay, and the example of such eminent persons as the Baroness Burdett-Coutts and the late Sir Arthur Helps, will certainly be productive of good. Meanwhile, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals deserves our warmest sympathies and support, and we trust it will find itself at no distant date in a position to carry matters with a far higher hand against those brutes in human form, of which the number, even in these highly civilised days, is Legion.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Look to your Health.—Any abrupt change in the weather always causes much disordered action in the human body. It is a matter of primary importance to rectify every irregularity without delay, which it is in the power of every one to do by taking Holloway's Pills. These Pills are the best preventives of indigestion, and the mildest aperients ever prescribed. They purify and cool the blood, and equalise the circulation through the system, even to the minutest vessels of the skin. They act admirably on the liver and kidneys. By these salutary effects many ailments are averted, and more serious illness prevented. Persons subject to bilious attacks, flatulency, gout, rheumatism, and rheumatic gout, will be benefitted by this treatment.

OUR FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR,—Like your correspondent who signs himself a "Neophyte," I have been hoping that you would continue your articles on the "Archæology of the Craft." I am sure you can throw great light upon this subject, and I am quite certain that a very large body of the brethren are interested in antiquarian researches having for their object the elucidation of obscure beginnings of the Order of Masonry. I have myself devoted some little time to the study of the archæology of Egypt, and I am of opinion that the monuments of that mysterious land will, if carefully studied, throw great light upon the early history of speculative Masonry. You have already directed attention to the fact that the Egyptian Osiris and the Greek Bacchus are one and the same, and this fact, carefully sifted, should afford a clue to matters of the deepest interest. It is well known that the Egyptians excelled in practical Masonry. Their works were the wonder and admiration of the Greeks, in the days when the Greeks had themselves achieved a high degree of skill in the constructive arts. When Manetho wrote his summary of Egyptian Chronology, the wonderful past upon which he expended his learning and skill had become invested with all the characteristics of a hoar antiquity. Egyptology has, in these days, assumed the dignity of a science, and it is possible that we may soon know more of Egypt and its wonderful artificers than was known to Herodotus; at all events, the works of Bunsen and others should afford material for the study of the place which Masonry held in Egyptian social life.

Trusting that you will further elucidate the Masonic past,

I remain, Sir,

Yours fraternally,

London, 23rd September. G. J. L.

DISCIPLINE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Discipline is justly placed in the foremost rank of Masonic qualifications, and, as a rule, irregularities find no place in our procedures. The spirit of loyalty reigns supreme among Craftsmen, and no one ever willingly or knowingly deviates from the path laid down for our guidance in the regulations of the Order. Exceptions do, however, sometimes arise, probably from the fact of carelessness or neglect on the part of some whose business it should be to make themselves perfectly acquainted with the laws of the Constitution. A Worshipful Master, whose position imposes upon him the government of his Lodge, should be sufficiently learned in what may with propriety be termed Masonic Common Law to enable him to check even an approach towards illegality. I have been led to enumerate these trite remarks by a report which has reached me, the authenticity of which I have no reason to question considering the reliable source whence it emanated. A very youthful suburban Lodge, whose name I will for the present forbear to mention, elected a W.M. for the ensuing year, in the usual course. At the next regular meeting the majority refused to confirm the minutes, therefore the W.M. could not be installed. So far the proceedings were right, according to law. Under those circumstances, the existing Master is bound by his obligation not to vacate his position until "the next regular period of election within the Lodge, or until a successor shall have been duly elected and installed in his stead." Now, the "next regular period" cannot again occur until after the lapse of twelve months. This our sapient brethren either did not know or ignored. Seeing that, without the confirmation of the minutes, the W.M. elect could not be constitutionally installed, they decided upon the anomalous course of proceeding to election de novo. I need not point out the irregularity of this act, which I am sure can never be sanctioned by the authorities. I trust the brethren will perceive the error before it is too late to escape the penalties which must of necessity follow should so clear a breach of the laws of the Constitution be persisted in.

Yours fraternally,

E. GOTTHEIL.

A MASONIC LIST.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I observe a letter in your impression of Saturday, 18th September, we may presume to be written by a member of Lodge Upton, No. 1227, Upton, Essex, in which he advocates the propriety of printing and publishing, not only the names of the officers, but every member of each Lodge, &c.; and, in addition, he suggests that Grand Lodge would sanction such a proceeding.

I venture to say, the brother has had little experience in Freemasonry, or he would never have made the suggestion. I do not know what advantages would arise from such publication, but I do know what it would do in a contrary direction. Itinerant vagabonds, calling themselves Freemasons, and trading upon the liberal and careless members of the Craft, find sufficient means already to extract contributions, till the more prudent brethren have found it necessary to use great caution; and, so far as I have been able to ascertain the custom prevailing here, relief is seldom given without due enquiry, and no one is allowed to give the name of another brother but the one appointed by each Lodge to attend to applicants for relief. By inserting these few hastily written lines, you will greatly oblige a

MARRYING A MASON.

"Had I known you were a Freemason, I should never have married you."

On a snug and well cultivated farm, but not of large extent, in one of the western counties of Western New York, had been erected a cosy and convenient little cottage, yet large enough to answer the present needs of the family which was to occupy it. A much travelled road passed it a few rods in front, leaving abundant room for the display of horticultural taste, which opportunity had been freely improved. The centre was a mass of bloom, gravelled walks conducted to unexpected and half concealed beauties, while a thick forest of the common evergreens, spruce, cedar and pine formed a protecting wall against the freezing blasts of winter, and a screen from the piercing heats of summer.

Around, and in the rear of the residence, were the usual appliances of a thrifty farm, and the neighbourhood gave evident and abundant proof that industry, frugality and taste had regenerated the sterile soil, and that the owners were the masters and not the slaves of labour. To the eastward, through the thick foliage of the evergreens, could be seen the white spire of the one church where nearly every family in the neighbourhood assembled on the Sabbath to worship God, and on an opposite corner of the street had been reared the necessary adjunct of a well governed community—a schoolhouse of such dimensions and used under such regulations as precluded the necessity of any child growing up in ignorance and consequent vice. All the surroundings seemed fitted for engendering pure and salutary influences over those who come within its reach.

The school building, which was of two stories, and of a more pretentious character than most edifices used for that purpose in the country at the period of which we write, had a portion of the space beneath its roof devoted to other matters than

"Teaching the young idea how to shoot."

It was occupied to teach the maturer generation the way of duty—in fact, it was a Masonic Lodge Room. There could have been but little of the anti-Masonic element in the community, else a building erected by a general tax, would hardly have been rented for a purpose which, in that case, must have been obnoxious to a portion of the proprietors. And this little community prospered and were happy, and no element of discord was mixed with the public disposition.

It was into this arcadian paradise that William Walton brought his newly wedded bride. She was a daughter of the Puritans, and self-reliant; a little opinionated, and had been taught that Freemasonry was the source of great evil in the community, and that Freemasons were not very inactive emissaries and worshippers of his "Brimstone Majesty." It may be as well to say that Walton, previous to his migration from Vermont, had largely shared in that opinion; but a few years' residence in New York, where the Fraternity was tolerated, and an acquaintance with many of the active members, convinced him there was much good in the Institution, and just before he set out on his journey to bring to the home he had prepared his wife, he received the degree of Master Mason.

It was only a few days after the happy pair had become settled in their beautiful and love-lighted home, that one of the brethren called, and during the conversation that ensued, casually asked Walton if he would attend the Lodge on the next regular communication. His reply was in the affirmative, when the wife, who was present, arose, and demanded, in a voice hoarse with excitement:

"William Walton, are you a Freemason?"

"I am," was the reply.

"Had I known you were a Freemason, I should never have married you," she fairly screamed, her face livid with anger; and before an answer could be given, she left the room, and retired to her own apartment. Of course the brother apologized on the score of ignorance that his question would introduce an unsettled controversy, and left the husband to smooth the anxieties of the "ragged edge of connubial difficulty" as best he could.

But that task was not so easily performed. The lady uniformly refused to listen to what the culprit had to offer in his own justification, and whenever he undertook that task, either left him alone, or replied so bitterly that it required all his self-command to prevent him from retorting in a similar strain. Thus passed the years. Children were born unto them, acres were added to acres, barns were pulled down that greater ones might be builded, a new and more pretentious house was erected in the evergreen grove; all the evidences of prosperity were about them, and still the controversy on the Masonic question was unsettled, and the stereotyped phrase which stands at the head of this article was often yet repeated.

The family had commanded the respect and esteem of their neighbours; its head had been chosen by his fellow citizens to fill high and honourable places in the public service; he had achieved a reputation for honesty and capability which is possessed by few in this age and country; he was a good husband, a kind father, a trusty public officer, and an honoured man; and still if his wife had known he was a Mason she would never have married him.

A man with an honest principle and purpose, is likely to give too much credit to others for honest, and this frequently leads him to place his confidence and trust where they will be abused and betrayed. Walton had extensive dealings in real estate, "endorsed for a friend" occasionally, but managed to keep things square and easy during his lifetime, though his property was sometimes considerably encumbered with mortgages.

It so happened that business took him to New York City. There was a collision of trains—several were killed, some were desperately wounded, among whom was Walton, and others escaped unhurt. Fraternal hands ministered to his wants, and heeding his request to be taken home to his family, accompanied him, and, as far as human skill could compass that end, relieved him from his sufferings. But it was written that he should die, and soon the Lodge, of which he was a member, was called to pay the last tribute of respect which the living can perform for the dead. As it was the expressed wish of the deceased that he should be buried by the Fraternity, with all the impressive forms and rites of the Order, the widow could scarcely object, however much she felt like doing so, and the burial was performed under the sole auspices of the Lodge.

On examination of the affairs of the estate, they were found to be in a far worse condition than any one had anticipated. The executor was compelled to sell all the real estate except the homestead, and the proceeds of these sales barely were sufficient to pay the legal demands against the estate, including several indorsements amounting to about twenty thousand dollars; leaving the homestead, with a mortgage of two thousand, for the family. The widow, with her family, seemed likely to be turned out upon the cold charity of the world.

The Lodge, however, without consulting her, had determined otherwise. That portion of the homestead which was situated between the house and the river, was laid out in town lots, some of the more wealthy of the members purchased a number of them, and through their influence "Walton's addition" became popular as a place for residences. Real estate in that quarter increased rapidly in value, and in an incredibly short time the mortgages were paid off, and a sum realized in addition sufficiently large to secure a respectable livelihood to the bereaved family.

When the final settlement was accomplished, the executor, who was also Master of the Lodge, as the safest securities with which he was acquainted, invested the surplus in United States Bonds. It was a pleasant day for the Lodge, as well as for the family, when those bonds, representing a sum, the interest of which placed the widow and her children in comfortable and independent circumstances, were reported as the result of the effort to save the homestead, and it would be difficult to say which was most pleased with the successful administration of the estate, but from that day the widow forgot to repeat the old refrain, that had she known her husband was a Mason she never would have married him. But it was soon known to the Craft, she had said privately to some of her intimate friends, that no daughter of hers should marry a man not a member of the Lodge, with her consent, and that her sons should all be Masons if they were found worthy.

We leave the reader to decide when she acted most wisely—when she was sorry she had married a Mason, or when she was desirous that all her children should participate in the benefits of the Institution? and would only say, there are many Mrs. Waltons in the world. —Voice of Masonry.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

LATTERLY we have had but little to chronicle of the movements of the Royal family, but this week has been more stirring. The Queen left Balmoral on Tuesday evening, on a visit to His Grace the Duke of Argyll, at Inverary Castle, which was reached shortly after 1 p.m. on Wednesday. The family of the Duke were in attendance to receive Her Majesty, and along the whole route were evidences of the most loyal welcome. The town of Inverary was quite en fête, several thousands being assembled, and triumphal arches, illuminations, decorations, and so forth, formed, as usual, the chief outward features which marked the reception. It is the intention of Her Majesty to spend some ten or twelve days with the Duke. Among those present to receive her were the Marquis of Lorne, H.R.H. the Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, the Ladies Campbell, daughters, and Lord Colin, the youngest son of the Duke, Lord and Lady Dufferin, the sheriff, and other officials of the county. On Saturday morning the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their children, left Abergeldie for Marlborough House, en route to Sandringham, where they will remain till the time arrives for His Royal Highness's departure for India. Wherever the train conveying the Royal party stopped, crowds had assembled, and lustily cheered them. The correspondent of the Standard, in describing the journey, declares the Prince and Princess were highly gratified with the loyal demonstrations, while their children "were evidently highly tickled." Is this really a fact, or merely the result of a too active imagination on the part of our contemporary's representative? Fancy the grave indecorum of tickling young princes and princesses. If they tickled themselves, or their parents tickled them, well and good; but if any of the Royal suite or any one else were guilty of such liberties, they have committed an act little short of high treason. However, an eminent poet once remarked, and less eminent people have frequently repeated it:—

"One touch of Nature makes the whole world kin."

It is at least a satisfaction to know that the flesh of young princes and princesses is as sensitive as the flesh of ordinary mortals. We hope to hear, however, of no more similar indiscretions at the expense of the Royal boys and girls. But to pass on. The preparations for the Prince of Wales's visit are now nearly complete. The officers and crew of the Serapis have taken up their quarters on board that vessel, which has been thoroughly overhauled and magnificently furnished for the reception of the Prince and his suite. It is expected she will leave harbour forthwith, so as to await His Royal Highness's arrival at Venice, whence he will be conveyed on board by the Royal yacht, Osborne, the draught of the Serapis being too great to allow of any nearer approach to the Queen of the Adriatic than within a distance of seven miles. The arrangements, as thus far made, are, we believe, as follow: The Prince will leave London on the 12th prox. for Paris, reaching Venice the 16th. The Serapis will then proceed to Corfu, or it may be direct to Athens, where the Prince will visit his brother-in-law, King George of Greece. On reaching Ismailia the Prince will disembark for the purpose of visiting Cairo and other places. At Suez he will again embark on the Serapis, and after calling at Aden will reach Bombay, about the 8th November. After a stay in this presidency of some eight or nine days, the Prince will proceed to Calicut, where he will land and visit Mysore. Thereafter he will go to Colombo in Ceylon, where a stay of ten days will be made, in order that His Royal Highness may enjoy some shooting, and visit some of the coffee plantations. A move will then be made to Calcutta, which will be reached a day or two before Christmas day. Visits will be paid to Delhi, Lucknow, and other important cities, and the Prince will gradually work his way back to Bombay, which he is expected to reach by the 17th March, thence returning home by the same route as on the outward journey. It is needless to add that every preparation is being made for the reception of His Royal Highness, and no doubt the visit will have an excellent effect in cementing still closer our grand Indian dependency with the British Crown. We anticipate nothing but good from this visit. The Prince will become known to a part of his future subjects, and will be able to judge also, with his own eyes, of the magnificent resources of our Eastern Empire, so grandly acquired, last century, by the energy and courage of a Merchant Company, and so heroically preserved a few years since by the valour of our troops.

The court of inquiry into the loss of H.M. Ironclad Vanguard is still progressing. A mass of evidence has been given as to the circumstances under which the collision occurred, and the second part of the inquiry has been entered upon, namely, as to what happened after the collision had taken place. Thus we anticipate that no long time will elapse before the court will deliver its opinion as to the conduct of the officers and men now on their trial. As to the loss of the Edith, which was run down some time since on the Mersey by the steamer, Duke of Sutherland, the verdict is that the collision was accidental, but a rider is appended that the captain of the latter vessel committed an error in judgment in steaming into port at such a speed when he knew another steamer was outward bound. The loss of the Mistletoe is still on the carpet, and much misconception appears to have arisen in connection with a letter written to Lord Exeter by the Queen's command, in which the wish is expressed that yachts should give Her Majesty plenty of sea-room. When crossing the Solent we see no reason why Her Majesty's wishes should not receive the most respectful attention. She has a right to move freely about from one residence to another without being pressed too closely by the over curious. We do not imply by this that the owner of the unfortunate Mistletoe exhibited any such curiosity, for in his evidence he most emphatically disclaimed any such idea, but all yachtsmen are not as courteous and considerate as Mr. Heywood. We note with pleasure that the families of the captain and mate of his yacht have not been lost sight of by the Queen, who has right royally placed certain moneys at their disposal, while the Lords of the Admiralty have taken the cases into their consideration, and, under the circumstances, have awarded gratuities to the captain's widow of £500, and to the mate's of £400. Their lordships, however, require that guarantees shall first be given that no claims whatever will be made on H.M. Government for compensation in connection with the recent accident.

We never knew of an excursion season passing without a multitude of accidents. We presume they are inevitable, yet some half-dozen occurring at or about the same time is rather more than we have a right to expect. But, considering the multitude of what Mrs. Partington has described as "exertionists," we have no reason to be surprised at the number of casualties occurring from time to time. People will travel, and points and signals and railway officials have a knack of getting out of order or doing the wrong thing at dangerous conjunctures. Perhaps we must congratulate ourselves the accidents are so few.

Cricket is all but over, and very soon football will reign in its stead, when we shall read of little else but "hots," and "scrummages" "punts out" and "touches down," three-quarters, half, and quarter-backs" and so forth. Meanwhile we note that Mr. W. G. Grace has just achieved his highest score this season—210, but with one or two chances in its manipulation. This was against eighteen of the Hastings District, who, though a strong team, appear to have made little stand against the United South Eleven, opposed to them. Two other extraordinary feats have been accomplished. One Perkins has walked eight miles in fifty-five seconds under the hour. We have no intention of challenging Perkins in pedestrianism, unless, perchance, he will consent to give us a five miles' start, in which case we fancy we might contrive to hold our own. In the other case, a Mr. John Alcock, of the Oxford Tavern, Macclesfield, backed himself to walk backwards from that town to Buxton, a distance of twelve miles, within three hours. The task was accomplished with sixteen minutes to spare. This almost beats "that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that run o' horseback up a hill perpendicular." Soon we shall have people running upside-down, and hanging on by their eyelids to the ceiling. Truly a topsy-turvy world this!

There have been the usual attractions during the week at Alexandra Palace, but the weather somewhat interfered with the display of fireworks on Tuesday. The Carl Rosa Company, however, have been highly successful with their English Opera. On Thursday the Christy's Minstrels made their last appearance at the Palace this season, and to-day, if the weather proves fine, there will doubtless be a considerable gathering to hear Faust. On Monday a special programme has been prepared for the annual fête of the Foresters, which will conclude with a grand pyrotechnic display, illuminations, &c. The chief event, at the Crystal Palace, has been the Exhibition of Bees, under the auspices of the Bee-keepers' Association. In the musical world there have been two important annual festivals held—that of Norwich, and that of the Three Choirs at Worcester. The former has proved a grand success, but the latter has been less satisfactorily attended than usual, as the festival has been shorn of some of its greatest attractions

Our friend from the neighbourhood of Colney Hatch is quite proud that we exposed one of his eccentricities last week; so proud, indeed, that he has honoured us with another specimen of his mental weakness. He writes, Il y a, en Angleterre, deux Angots—l'Angot qu'on chante, et l'Angot qu'on adore. Madame Angot has certainly achieved greatness in this country; this is indisputable, and ingots are not to be sneezed at; yet we tremble for the consequences if our correspondent is permitted to continue his wild career unchecked. Heaven knows what will befal him if he does not soon pull up and repent him of his evil ways.

Another of our numerous correspondents has asked us to describe the difference between "organic" and "inorganic" matter. We confess we feel a little nervous about the answer we shall give him. We are not a little unscientific in our ideas—we say it with much sorrow. We can only hazard an answer, but this, we can only hope, will prove not unacceptable. We consider "organic matter" is harmony gone mad, while "inorganic" is the barrel and other apparatus which provides the discord.

The sea-serpent has made its appearance again, not, however, in the sea—so far as our knowledge goes, but in the columns of the Daily Telegraph. We presume our contemporary has been less successful than usual in procuring a seasonably big gooseberry, and, in default, has fallen back upon this ancient mariner or monster, whichever he may be. One of our contemporary's correspondents, it seems, in his eagerness to lasso one of these serpents, only some eighty or ninety feet long, managed, in his excitement, to overbalance himself, and went head over heels into the sea within easy reach of the serpent. But the latter was frightened, dived some few hundred fathoms, and reappeared shortly after, but quite out of sight of the frightened sailor, who thought his last moment had come. We have never seen a sea-serpent, and have no desire to cultivate his acquaintance. We are not quite sure if we know what he is like. Is he an eel-longated kind of a brute?

We cannot say we altogether sympathise with the ill-used letter "H." To us it seems a very wilful kind of letter. It slips away when its presence is necessary, and turns up again at most inconvenient times, just when it ought to keep out of the way. A cockney, for instance, a most intelligent sort of fellow, is quite willing to lend a hand to any friend in difficulty. But letter "H.," meanwhile, has worked himself into a fit of obstinacy, and the result is that our friend the cockney is only able to lend a 'and, a mere conjunctive particle, of no use whatever by itself, but only as conjoining two things or persons together. Another intelligent cockney, who is a great admirer of landscapes, thinks Muswell Hill and the neighbouring palace is "a thing of beauty and a joy for ever." Unfortunately, letter "H.," however, is again obstinate, and Muswell Hill degenerates into a mere Muswell 'ill, which, if we remember rightly, is one of those nasty uncomfortable little things which all human flesh is heir to. This is not paying Muswell Hill a very great compliment. Of the perverse conduct of letter "H." we had a most extraordinary illustration the other day. Two friends, or acquaintances, were in the same compartment of a carriage on the Great Northern Railway. A difference of opinion arose between them as to which of the two, Crouch Hill Station, or Crouch End Station, was on the Great Northern, which on the Midland line. The question was authoritatively solved thus: "Crouch Head" is on the Northern, "Crouch 'ill" on the Midland. We had previously been suffering from a mild attack of dyspepsia, but the information was so good that we forgot at once all our *ail*ments, and spent the rest of the journey in little else than chuckling and grinning over the improper uses to which "H." is weak enough to lend its countenance. "H." has, in fact, been hanging ever since in the passage between guttural and pectoral. In other words, it has been obstinately sticking in our throats, and we know not when we shall get rid of it.

The latest illustration we have heard of the familiar saying about adding insult to injury was brought, a few days since, under our notice by a friend of ours who is on the staff of a contemporary. Paying an early visit, one morning, to the printer's, for the purpose of handing in more copy, he was met by the manager of the composing department, who, with a hesitation that may have been natural, but which was certainly considerate under the circumstances, remarked, "Mr. ——, the first sheet of your last copy was simply dreadful. It was blotted, and all that, and none of us could make head or tail of it." "Ah," said Mr. —— in reply, "I admit that was a most picturesque study, but this"—writter, if possible, at least a thousand times worse—"is simply beautiful." Mr. Manager, on looking at the said copy, at once subsided into tears, but whether of rage or sympathy our informant deponed not.

We hear of a very heavy storm having recently visited Texas, and caused serious loss, both of life and property, especially at Galveston. Elsewhere, similar disasters have happened, and we hear that notice has been given at our various ports that the approaching equinoctial gales may be expected to prove of greater severity than usual. So, say we, look out for squalls. If we were nautically given we should offer further advice as to "furling taupsails and foretaupsails, &c., &c., but we are ashamed to say we are not, so our readers must look out for themselves. Let them study one of Marryatt's sea novels—Peter Simple, for instance—they will find all the needful technical terms, and far more than they will probably understand.

Foreign news, as the saying is, is "pretty much of a muchness." That is to say, the telegrams we read yesterday will probably hold good for nearly every day in the week. From Bosnia and the Herzegovnia we still hear of Turks being mutilated and Turkish dwellings burnt to the ground. The valiant upholders of liberty seem, at their best, to be merely a parcel of marauding ruffians, gathered together from the four winds of heaven—wild, unruly people, who know about as much of true liberty as we do of Chinese, and whose sole delight is to take part in every disturbance that breaks out, provided only it be an uprising against legitimate authority. We hope the Turks, who are gentlemen at all events, even though they may conduct their government in a manner different from what we are accustomed to at home, will make short work of these disturbers of the public peace. We are not very blood-thirsty, but we think the world would get on better if the ruffian classes were less considerable in numbers. From Vienna we learn that the Empress of Austria is progressing favourably, after her late severe accident, and there is every prospect of her complete and immediate restoration to health! As to the Emperor of Germany, he is making a rare progress through his dominions, being received everywhere with the greatest enthusiasm. It seems also settled that His Imperial Majesty will visit King Victor Emanuel early next month. No doubt Kaiser Wilhelm will meet with a magnificent reception, and justly, too. Is not the complete consolidation of the Italian kingdom, by the acquirement of Venice, and subsequently of Rome, due to his alliance with the Italian monarch. Italy is not likely to forget these services, and will, no doubt, welcome her late ally and present friend with effusive loyalty. In France the usual military manœuvres have been taking place in various parts of the country. The war in Spain is still being pursued with considerable energy on the part of the Alphonsists. Some eight hundred Carlists having crossed the French frontier have been interned. This, of course, means the deduction of a considerable strength from the already weaker side. We care not how soon this struggle is brought to an end, though, as regards Spain itself, it seems to us a simple case, which of the twain shall be king over her, King Log or King Stork. From Copenhagen we hear H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, with his wife, have reached and left Copenhagen on their return to England, while his brother, the Duke of Connaught, who has been appointed on the staff at Gibraltar, will shortly take up his appointment in that garrison.

The members of the Salisbury Lodge of Instruction, which meets at the Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-street, will work the fifteen sections on Thursday, 30th September, at seven o'clock p.m. precisely. Bro. Mander, W.M. 1201, will preside, and the following brethren will assist:—

Madame Patti (Marquise de Caux) and the Marquis arrived in Brighton on Friday, and were met at the railway station by the Mayor, Bro. Alderman Brigden, the Mayoress, Bro. Sir John Cordy Burrows, Bro. Kuhe, Mrs. Kuhe, Bro. George Reeves Smith, &c. They proceeded to the Norfolk Hotel, and at half-past ten in the evening Bro. Devin's band played some very excellent pieces. At the conclusion, Madame Patti sent for Bro. Devin, and complimented him on the performance, and the taste displayed by him in the pieces selected. Bro. Kuhe may be congratulated on the success of his first subscription concert. The elite of Brighton filled every available seat. Madame Patti's singing was faultless, and she was presented with a very splendid bouquet by Miss Harriet Young, and another by the Mayor. Madame Campobello Sinico also received a deserved share of applause. Madame Castellan played artistically on the violin. Signors Ciro and Campobello sang several songs with great effect. Bro. Kuhe's appearance was a signal for loud and prolonged cheering. The second concert takes place on the 27th, when Madame Albani, in conjunction with Madame and Bro. Patey, will appear. On Saturday, despite the counter attractions, the Aquarium was crowded, the opera recitals being a great attraction. In the morning the Bohemian Girl was the selection, supported by Bro. Geo. Perren, Miss Blanche Terri (soprano), Miss Palmer (contralto), and Geo. Fox (basso). The evening concert was also well attended, Wallace's opera of Lurline proving equally attractive.

The Prospectus has been issued of the Briton Life Association, which is formed for the creation of a "new series" of the Briton Medical and General Life Association on a perfectly independent basis, and entirely free from any of the existing liabilities or engagements of the parent institution. The capital required is £500,000 in £1 shares, of which 100,000 are now offered to the public. Shareholders will receive an annual interest of 5 per cent., payable half-yearly, in addition to 20 per cent. of the net divisible profits. In the ten years ended the 31st December 1873, the New Annual Premiums of the old Society amounted to an average of £21,698 per annum; hence the prospects of the new Company, which has been formed in connection with the 2,000 old established agencies, are unusually encouraging.

The Peckham Lodge, No. 1475, will hold its future meetings at the New Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New Road.

Bro. Henry Samuel is a candidate for the vacancy created in the Ward of Castle Baynard by the resignation of Alderman Sir Sills John Gibbons, Bart. Bro. S. C. Hadley P.A.G.D.C. is also a candidate, and from the numerously signed requisition he has received, has a probable chance of success.

Grand Lodge has voted to our worthy Bro. Superintendent James Mott the Steward's Jewel, as a testimonial for the services rendered by him at the Installation of the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M.

A military Lodge, that had hitherto held its meetings in the Garrison at Chatham, has been ordered in future to discontinue doing so.

A new drama, entitled Olive Branch, by Paul Merritt, Esq., preceded by Who Speaks First, and concluding with A Bank Holiday, has been drawing good houses during the week at Bro. Nye Chart's Theatre Royal, Brighton.

The Medical Times, in alluding to Felice and Sons' "Specialité" Sherry, states, it is "A very pleasant light wine, with no heat; a real vinous flavour, which, unlike that of the majority of Sherries at low prices, leaves an impression on the palate of belonging to a real wine. * * * * It is exceedingly pleasant to the eye; the taste is soft, round, and not acid; the flavour is vinous and dry, without any suggestion of artificial bitterness. We have no doubt that as a moderately stimulating accessory to the meal of a patient suffering from a tonic dyspepsia it would be valuable."

THE LATE COUNTESS OF CARNARVON.

The granite and marble tomb of the late lamented Countess of Carnarvon has just been completed, and presents a very chaste and massive appearance. It is situated at the west end of the mortuary chapel in the cemetery in Highclere Park, near Newbury. The monument is composed of axed Peterhead granite, with a fine polished grey granite kerb. Within this is an open space for flowers; and in the centre is a slab of red Aberdeen granite, surmounted by a cross of white Sicilian marble. The red slab is splayed, and has the following inscription cut in raised letters on a rusticated ground:—"Evelyn Georgina Katherine, wife of Henry, fourth Earl of Carnarvon, Born, 3rd November 1834, Died, 25th January 1875." On the plinth of the red granite slab is the following inscription:—"We asked life of Thee, and Thou gavest her a long life, even for ever and ever." The monument was designed by Mr. T. H. Wyatt, architect. —Standard.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

The District Grand Lodge of Bengal has appointed a committee, under the resolution passed on the 24th June 1875, which has for its object the building and maintaining a Masonic hall worthy of the Freemasons of Bengal and of the capital of India. The committee met at the Freemasons' Hall in Bentinck-street, Calcutta, on the 3rd July last, and the whole of the necessary resolutions were passed to carry out the scheme for the building of the new Masonic Temple. A company has been created, and is called "The Bengal Freemasons' Hall Building Company," with a capital of 1,50,000 rs., divided into 100 rs. each, bearing interest at 6 per cent., and the necessary officers and directors have been appointed. The site for the new Temple has been fully determined upon, and nothing remains but the completion of the list of shareholders, which already numbers 150. There are still some 500 shares at the disposal of the committee, and it is hoped some of the Craft in this country may feel disposed to assist the undertaking. It is anticipated that everything will be in readiness for the commencement of the building during the visit of the Prince of Wales to India, and that a very forcible appeal will be made to his Royal Highness to lay the foundation stone himself.—Daily News.

SEWAGE.—Sewage consists of the entire water-supply of our towns after it has been used for domestic purposes, of the excreta of man and animals, of the rainfall of the town area, and of earthy matter washed and worn from the streets. It contains valuable fertilising matter in an extremely dilute condition. This can be demonstrated by analysis, and many eminent chemists having examined town sewage at various times, have given us a tolerably accurate idea of its composition. Phosphoric acid, nitrogen, and potash, are the three principal ingredients of agricultural importance. These substances can be purchased in the form of guano, "superphosphates," potash salts, and other manures; and since these substances are marketable, an estimate can readily be formed as to the cheapest rate at which they may be obtained. Thus, it may be shown that ammonia may be purchased in the form of some manurial substance at the rate of, say, £20 per ton. Hence, a commercial value may be attached to the three substances above mentioned, and by finding the proportion in which they exist in town sewage, an estimate may be formed as to its value. It is needless here to enter further into detail, and it is sufficient to state that the value of sewage, calculated upon purely chemical grounds is 1·8d per ton, varying, of course, according to season and other conditions. The result of sewage irrigation agrees closely with this estimate, being more usually below than above it.—From "Cassell's Technical Educator" for September.

A FAMINE INCIDENT.—Just about the time Lord Dufferin came of age a dreadful famine broke out in Ireland, and he and a friend, the Hon. Mr. Boyle, went over to Skibbereen together to see for themselves the actual condition of the people, and to devise what schemes they could for their assistance. They published, under their joint names, a brief history of their journey; and the profits arising from the sale of the book were devoted to the relief of the sufferers. The amount of good effected by the journey could, however, be scarcely measured by the monetary product of this little work, which did much to awaken the attention of the general public to the terrible condition of things that prevailed in the district described, and to incite them to assist in ameliorating it. The narrative is written in a very broad, plain, straightforward way, and is thoroughly matter-of-fact. There is no attempt made at effect. The facts are left to speak for themselves, and the result is a narrative of singular pathos and vigour. One part of the story is remarkably affecting in its simplicity. It relates how the two generous young fellows bought a huge basket of bread for distribution among the starving populace, and how they were besieged when the fact of this provision was made known. Something like an orderly distribution was attempted, but the dreadful hunger and impatience of the poor wretches by whom the donors were surrounded rendered this absolutely impossible, and the bread was thrown out to the crowd, loaf by loaf, from a window. It seems that there was nothing better to be done; but the struggles of the famished women, over what was after all but a very indifferent supply, were dreadful to witness. When Lord Dufferin and his companion left the town, the vehicle in which they rode was impeded by the crowds which followed, invoking blessings and praying for further relief.—From "Cassell's National Portrait Gallery" for September.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS,

Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, No. 27.—The above Lodge met at Bro. Maidwell's, the Hercules, Leadenhall-street, E.C., on Thursday last, 23rd September. Present—Bros. Hocking W.M., Brown S.W., Fraser J.W., C. A. Grammer Hon. Secretary, Hollands S.D., Webb J.D., Ellis I.G., Austin P.M. Preceptor, and numerous other brethren. The first and second ceremonies were worked by Bro. Hocking, and the third ceremony by Bro. Brient. The Lodge was then closed in perfect harmony. The fifteen sections will be worked in this Lodge of Instruction on the fourth Thursday in October, when it is hoped that there will be a full attendance of brethren.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—This Lodge held its regular weekly meeting on Monday, the 20th of September, at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's-gate, St. John's-square. Present: Bros. Tolmie W.M., Read S.W., Walker J.W., Killick Secretary, Lake S.D., Crawley J.D., Robinson I.G., Christopher Tyler. Past Master Bro. Beckett, Preceptor, and a full meeting of the members. Business—Lodge opened in the usual manner, and the minutes of previous meeting confirmed. The W.M. worked the third ceremony, with traditional history, and raised Bro. Saul to the degree of M.M. The W.M. worked the 1st, 2nd and 3rd sections of the third Lecture, Bro. Beckett dictating the answers. The S.W. was unanimously elected W.M. for the next ensuing meeting. The revised bye-laws will be finally considered at the next meeting, and the fifteen sections worked on the 4th of October proximo.

Industry Lodge, No. 129.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Thursday, the 16th inst., at Graydon's Hotel Masonic Rooms. Present—Bros. Thomas Hyacinthe Dickson W.M., Charles E. Eccles S.W., Capt. James Nias Croke J.W., Capt. R. W. M. Jenkins Secretary, Francis Fawcett Treasurer, Hyacinthe Dickson S.D., Doctor Wm. Erwin J.D., John Reynold Dickson D.C., W. A. Graydon Steward, Richard Hamilton I.G., Patrick Morrow Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. J. W. Dickson I.P.M. and Johnstone. Visitors—Bros Wilson, Kennedy and Henry Burton. Business—To ballot for and if approved initiate Mr. Michael Drummond. The ballot was unanimous, and consequently Mr. Drummond, Barrister-at-Law, was initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry by Bro. J. Reynolds Dickson P.M.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 186.—The usual place of meeting of this Lodge, being occupied for that night by the Royal Alfred Chapter, the brethren adjourned to Cannon-street Hotel, on Wednesday last. Bro. J. P. Cohen occupied the chair. The proceedings commenced with the usual preliminaries, after which the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of the first degree, Bro. Ockenden acting as candidate. Bro. Cohen is only a Mason of scarcely three years' standing, yet displayed abilities in the performance of his duties which many might reasonably envy, for he showed a perfect acquaintance with every detail of the ritual, which he delivered with remarkable ease and intelligence. Bro. John Constable next worked the ceremony of Installation. It would be superfluous to comment upon that brother's performance. All who know him are aware that whatever he undertakes he does thoroughly and well. The brethren expressed their appreciation of the services of Bros. Cohen and Constable by an unanimous vote of thanks, which was duly recorded in the Lodge book. A curious incident occurred in the course of the evening. A French Brother, whose credentials show him to be the present Master of the Lodge of Ceremony at Brussels, presented himself, and after proving his acquaintance with the necessary etceterns of an Entered Apprentice and Fellow Craft, flatly refused to proceed to the third degree, on the plea of his not being sure that we are assembled as a regular Lodge, he perceiving a want of the usual regalia, &c. In vain was it explained to him that we had only met as a school of instruction. The French eloquence of the whole assembly (which, by the way, appeared extremely limited) was employed in the endeavour to convince him that under the circumstances he could not be permitted to remain in the room, and, still continuing stubborn, he was politely but firmly requested to retire. As soon, however, as it became clear to his comprehension what was required of him, he made his exit, with profuse bows, hand shakings and expressions of fraternal goodwill, his impression all the time remaining unaltered that we had met as an irregular Lodge. The officers present were Bros. Ayton S.W., D. Posener J.W., Abell J.D., J. Levy I.G., J. K. Pitt Hon. Sec., J. Constable P.M. Hon. Treasurer, E. Gottheil P.M. Preceptor, Past Master Bloomfield, Hickman W.M. 180, John Rose W.M. 185, and a number of brethren.

Union Lodge, No. 332.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, the 20th inst., at 170 Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Bros. J. McNair R.W.M., J. Gilles S.W., J. Jackson J.W. P.M.'s Bros. R. Mitchell and Belfour. Visitors—Bros. Grange No. 3 Bis, G. Wheeler No. 73, J. J. Duthie P.M. No. 362. A considerable amount of business relative to the future prospects of the Lodge was discussed and amicably disposed of.

Probity and Freedom Lodge, No. 367.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 16th inst., at the Bull's Head Hotel, Smallbridge. Present—Bros. John James Ashworth W.M., W. Schofield S.W., W. Beswicke Secretary, C. M. Jones P.M. and Treasurer, W. J. Kinder S.D., A. T. Shore J.D., J. Midgley Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. England and Rigg. Business—The Lodge was opened at 7.30 p.m. in due form by the Worshipful Master. The minutes of last regular meeting having been read, were declared correctly recorded. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Henry Ashworth, and it being favourable, he was regularly initiated into Freemasonry by Bro. Jones P.M. Bro. Swift was passed to the second degree by Bro. Davies P.M. The Lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 9.30 p.m. The brethren and visitors then sat down to a substantial banquet.

Socrates Lodge, No. 373.—The installation meeting was held at the George Hotel, Huntingdon, on Tuesday evening, the 14th inst., and was made the occasion of presenting a testimonial to Bro. J. Marsom, P.P.G.S.W., P.G.D.C., P.M. 373, in recognition of his valuable services as Secretary of the Lodge. Beside the officers and six Past Masters, the brethren assembled in great force, to witness the installation ceremony and to do due honour to their much esteemed Secretary, who, while accepting an oak cabinet and a Masonic jewel, appropriated the sum of £25 (being the cash portion of the testimonial) to the Masonic Charities. As Bro. J. Marsom is a Provincial Grand Officer this generous act must secure him an increased fraternal regard beyond the limits of this Lodge.

St. Vincent Lodge, No. 553.—The first visitation of this season took place on Thursday, the 16th September, when Bro. F. A. Barrow D.P.G.M. acting P.G. Master was accompanied to the St. Vincent Lodge by the following P.G. Officers:—A. McTagarth, M.A., P.G.S., J. Walker P.G.T., J. Gelles P.G.S.D., G. Thallon P.G.J.D., J. Fraser P.G.A.M., J. Balfour P.G.D.C., Wm. Phillis P.G.S.B., J. Sinclair Treasurer of the Benevolent Fund, and J. B. Hardie P.G. Tyler. The Lodge having been previously opened by Bros. R. McDougal P.W.M., assisted by D. Stark S.W., J. Best J.W., R. Cleland T., J. Halley S., R. Stevens S.D., J. Clayson J.D., and J. Cullis I.G., the provincial deputation were received with all the honours of the St. Vincent Lodge, and a number of visitors were present. The P.G.S. then read the minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge relative to the examination of the books, and made a few comments thereon. The D.P.G.M. rose, and said, As this is only a young Lodge, and it is our first official visit of inspection, we wish to show the brethren that, at any rate in this province, visitations are not mere matters of ceremony at which the members of Provincial Grand Lodge may appear in their official clothing for the purpose of receiving honour at the hands of the rest of the brethren, but to practically test the working of the Lodge, to overhaul their books, and see that they were kept correct, and their expenditure properly vouched. He had felt a great interest in the establishment of this Lodge, as he had long thought a west end Lodge was wanted in that locality, and he was glad to find, from their books, that though scarcely twelve months since he was in that hall to consecrate the Lodge they had initiated 76 gentlemen. He would advise them to raise their fees, and be sure of the quality of the materials they were bringing up for the building. He thought, from the sample before him, they had been doing so, but it was always wise to give a word of caution. He also trusted they would be very careful with their books; the P.G.S. had detected a slight inaccuracy, and called attention to it. No doubt it was susceptible of explanation, but he mentioned that the young Masons who constituted the Lodge might have greater confidence by seeing that even if there was any little error committed by their Secretary there was a supreme body who would be sure to detect it; altogether he must highly congratulate them on the progress they had made as a Lodge. The R.W.M. said he was pleased to hear these encomiums from the acting P.G.M. who had already proved a good friend to them at the time when they obtained their charter. The slight error they had noticed had arisen from two causes, the neglect of the Grand Lodge to send them a roll book at first, and the vast amount of labour involved upon the young Secretary; few could say they had time to fetch up the account for 76 entries in so short a time. He was determined, with the aid of the members, to get a better hall in which to meet—this was only a temporary place. The fees, as suggested, should then be raised, and by this time next year he trusted to be second to none in the province in any respect. The P.G.M. having expressed his satisfaction with the explanation given, the deputation then retired. The Deputy Master, Bro. Stark, then initiated six gentlemen into the Order. After this amount of labour the J.W. took charge, and a very substantial supper was served, about 40 of the brethren, who remained, spending a few hours in harmony, the geniality of the R.W.M. putting all at their ease. The Lodge was again resumed, and then closed in due form.

Star in the East Lodge, No. 650.—There was a large muster of the Brethren of this Lodge on the 13th inst., to witness the installation of Bro. Geo. Gard Pye, of Dovercourt and Colchester, as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed in a very able and impressive manner by the V.W. Bro. Chas. J. Martyn P.G. Chaplain England. At its close the new W.M. appointed and invested his officers as follow:—Bros. J. Durrant I.P.M. and D.C., J. Doulop S.W., S. Dutton jun. J.W., S. Dutton sen. Secretary and Treasurer, J. Cartlidge S.D., W. Axenham J.D., S. J. Newton I.G., W. Downs and G. A. Smith Stewards, and R. Barlow Tyler. The Brethren afterwards sat down to a sumptuous banquet at the Pier Hotel, the catering of Bro. Brice giving great satisfaction. During the evening the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were heartily drunk, and the proceedings passed off most successfully. Among the Brethren present, in Lodge or at the banquet, besides those already mentioned, were the R.W. Bro. Matthew E. Clark D.P.G.M. Essex, Bro. John Wright Carr P.G. Secretary, Bros. A. Welch W.M., T. J. Ralling Secretary, J. J. C. Turner Organist, J. Hasly I.G., E. Hannemeyer, T. A. Middleton, T. Rix, A. R. Staines and C. Gunner, Tyler of Angel Lodge, No. 51, W. Rivers P.M. 74, A. Tennant No. 158, late 178, W. Westgate P.P.G.D.C. Suffolk, F. Wright 213, 697, and 1,500, A. E. Clench W.M., T. Eustace P.M. S.W., H. Everett, T. Downing and W. G. Siggers, of No. 697, W. Richey P.M. 700, W. F. Laxton P.P.G.S.D. Middlesex, P.M. 1,238, and the following members of No. 650:—Bros. J. W. C. Butcher P.M., R. T. Dickson P.M., W. O. Ward P.M., S. H. Wymark P.M., C. F. J. Barker, W. Walker, S. J. Newton, J. Warren, Charles Lucas, J. H. Robinson, T. W. Naylor, R. Guy, W. Nickerson and G. L. Jackson. Letters expressive of regret at their inability to attend were received from the R.W. Bro. R. J. Bagshawe P.G.M., the R.W. Bro. R. Bolton Barton LL.D., P.P.G.M. Western India, &c.

Yarborough Lodge, No. 811.—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday, the 18th, at the Masonic Rooms, Pavilion, Brighton, Bros. Rev. Dr. O'Brien W.M., Rev. Edward Walker S.W., M. B. Tanner Treasurer, G. De Paris Secretary, and Past Masters Bro. Hyde Pullen P.G.S.B., P.P.G.M. Isle of Wight, C. Horsley P.P.G.R. Middlesex, Wood P.G.S.B., P.P.G.W. Sussex, Cunningham, P.P.G.S.W. Sussex, and Bro. Aldermen Abbey, the future Mayor of Brighton. The Lodge was opened and the minutes were confirmed, Bro. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B. of the Grand Lodge of England, P.P.D.G.M. for the Isle of Wight, then occupied the chair, and a Board of Installed Masters was formed. Bro. Rev. Ed. Walker, S.W. and W.M. elect, was presented to the Lodge, and Bro. Hyde Pullen installed him into the chair in a very perfect and impressive manner. The W.M. having been saluted, invested his officers. At the conclusion of the ceremony the newly installed W.M. requested Bro. Charles Horsley P.M. to present Bro. Hyde Pullen P.M., in the name of the Lodge, with a very elegant gold jewel, with suitable inscription, in recognition of the services rendered to the Lodge; Bro. C. Horsley, in the course of his remarks said, he hoped he might live long to enjoy it, as he was one the Lodge was proud of, and the unanimous manner the jewel was voted was a proof how he was appreciated and respected (cheers). Bro. Hyde Pullen then returned thanks, and said he felt proud of the honour shewn him; he had already received so many acts of kindness from every Bro. in the Lodge that he felt additional pride in receiving the jewel. He had at a very early period been associated in the formation of the Lodge, in conjunction with Bro. Wood, and he was pleased to say that their exertions were crowned with success (cheers). Bro. Chalk, a son of an old and respected P.M. of the Lodge, was then proposed as a joining member. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a very sumptuous banquet, at the banqueting hall. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. Hyde Pullen returned thanks for the toast of the Grand Officers, and Bro. Wood, P.P.G.W. Sussex, responded to the toast of the R.W. Lord Pelham P.G.M. Sussex, and the rest of the Grand Officers; Bro. Major Clark P.P.G.W. returned thanks for the toast of the Visitors—who were Bros. B. Turner P.G.D. and Pros Grand Master for Sussex, Dixon P.P.G.D. Sussex, and S. Rosenthal P.P.G.W. Middlesex, &c. The toasts of the W.M., Wardens and Officers were given, and the Tyler's toast concluded a very agreeable and harmonious evening.

The Dramatic Lodge, Glasgow.—This new Lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday, the 15th September, at 213 Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Present—Bros. Dobson W.M., H. C. Jackman S.W., J. Seevewright J.W. There was a goodly number of visitors. Business—The initiation of a candidate, which was performed in a superior manner by Bro. Dobson. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Bro. Jackman S.W. presented the Lodge with a box of working tools. The Master, in accepting the gift, said it was only an additional proof of the great interest their S.W. felt in the Lodge, and another augury for its success.

St. Mungo Encampment of Knights Templar.—This Encampment held its annual meeting in St. Mark's Hall, Glasgow, on Monday, 20th September. Sir Knight Bell E.C. presiding. Comp. J. Rotherham, who had taken the Esquire degree in July, was duly introduced by Sir Knight J. McLeish, and was duly dubbed a Knight, and afterwards created a Knight of the Temple by the E.C., assisted by Sir Knights G. W. Wheeler as Prelate, C. McKenzie as Marshall, and J. McLeish as Warder. The election of the whole of the officers for the ensuing year then took place, and the following Sir Knights were unanimously appointed to the respective offices:—R. Bell eminent Commander, Sir Knight's T. Clanachan Sub-Commander, Rev. J. C. Stewart Prelate, F. Bates Treasurer, S. Scott Recorder, J. Johnson Chancellor, R. Mitchell Almoner, M. Clanachan Chamberlain, J. McDade Bannerenneter, R. Currie Vexillium Bell, J. McLeish 1st Aide-de-Camp, R. Muir 2nd Aide-de-Camp, R. Smith 1st Warder, J. Smith 2nd Warder, J. B. Hardie Sentinel, with G. W. Wheeler and R. Mitchell as auditors. The Encampment was then closed in ancient form.

GRAND COMMANDERY OF NEW JERSEY.

THE Seventeenth Annual Conclave of the Grand Commandery of New Jersey met at New Brunswick, on Tuesday, September 7th inst. It was quite a gala day, and the Conclave was heralded by a Templar parade, in which nine commanderies participated—Coeur de Leon, No. 8, Ivanhoe, No. 11, St. John's, No. 9, Cyrene, No. 7, Palestine, No. 4, Helena, No. 5, De Molay, No. 6, Hugh Hugh de Payen, No. 1, and Damascus, No. 5—all with banners displayed, and bands of music, escorting the Grand Officers in carriages. After proceeding through the principal streets of the city, the parade concluded with a grand inspection and review. All then partook of the hospitalities of Coeur de Lion Commandery, in the Masonic Hall, ample arrangements having been made for eight hundred guests. The Grand Commandery then assembled in the Blue Room, the principal Lodge and Commandery Rooms not being yet completed, the Deputy Grand Commander, Sir W. L. Newell, presiding, in consequence of the unavoidable absence of the R.E. Grand Commander, who sent his sincere regrets, together with the report of his proceedings for the past year, which was listened to with marked attention. The Grand Officers were then elected and installed for the ensuing Templar year, and Camden was selected as the place of the next annual Conclave, so as to be adjacent to the Centennial City during the observance of our National festivities in 1876. The celebration incident to the holding of this 17th Annual Conclave concluded with a grand promenade concert, tendered by the Knights of New Brunswick to their visiting fratres. It was very largely attended by the Knights and their ladies, all of whom enjoyed the occasion.

The Masonic Hall just erected by the Masonic Building Association of New Brunswick is a magnificent structure. On the second floor is a fine Opera House; the lower portion is rented for stores, there is a large Assembly Room, Music Hall, and Offices on third floor. In the upper stories are the Lodge Room, of splendid architectural design, by Bro. Windrim, of Philadelphia, and a commodious Commandery Room, not yet completed, of which we shall speak further on the occasion of its Dedication, which, judging from the energy of our New Jersey brethren, will not be long delayed.—The Keystone.

ACTUARY AND MANAGER—John Messent, F.I.A.

Offices—429 Strand, London.

The primary object of this Company is the creation of a New Series of the BRITON MEDICAL and GENERAL LIFE ASSOCIATION upon a perfectly independent basis, and entirely free from any of the existing liabilities or engagements of the parent Institution, which, though continuing on its present basis, will devote its more immediate attention to its existing contracts and the profitable investment of its funds.

THE BRITON MEDICAL and GENERAL LIFE ASSOCIATION had on the 31st December last upwards of 26,000 existing policies, assuring the sum of £7,362,198, producing an annual income of £222,355. Its net assets amounted to £459,304, exclusive of its large uncalled capital.

It has been determined, on the highest actuarial advice, to continue this large business as an independent First Series, and to create a Second Series, in the form of a new Company, with a distinct capital for fresh policy-holders.

The creation of a New Series is not a novel idea. It has been adopted by some of the largest and most successful Assurance Companies, and in the present instance it can be more effectually established by means of a new Company, which, having the benefit of an existing organization of over 2,000 agencies in perfect working order, will commence operations with advantages never before enjoyed by any similar institution.

The new Company will, under special agreement, undertake the collection of the income of the old society at a fixed scale of commission, and will have the privilege of working all its well-established branches, agencies, and other valuable connections. The value of these will be best appreciated by the fact that the old association has transacted nearly, if not quite, the largest business of any kindred institution of the same age. In the ten years ended 31st December 1873, the new annual premiums amounted to an average of £31,998 per annum. Hence the prospects of the new Company are exceptionally encouraging, and offer inducements for the investment of capital seldom to be met with. It will be able at once to command a large and lucrative business without incurring the heavy outlay usually inseparable from the formation and development of similar institutions.

The Directors have caused full estimates to be made as to every point of this scheme, and have submitted the details to four actuaries of the highest eminence, viz., Mr. C. J. Runyon, M.A., Actuary of the Norwich Union Life Insurance Society; Mr. A. H. Bailey, F.I.A., Actuary of the London Assurance Corporation; Mr. Marcus N. Adler, M.A., F.I.A., Actuary of the Alliance Insurance Company; and Mr. Arthur Pearson, F.I.A., Actuary of the Metropolitan Life Assurance Society (whose report, together with the special valuation of the Old Series Company, which has been independently checked by Dr. W. Farr, F.R.S., of the General Register Office, Somerset House, and Mr. Geo. Humphreys, M.A., of the Eagle Insurance Company, may be had on application).

Persons taking 100 shares or upwards may pay 10s on application, and 10s by two instalments of 5s each, at intervals of three months; and persons taking 500 shares or upwards may pay 5s on application, and the balance by three instalments of 5s each, at similar intervals. Share warrants payable to bearer will also be issued.

A large portion of the first issue of capital has already been taken up by the Directors and their friends, and the remainder is now offered, in the first place to the shareholders and policy-holders of the old Company, and next to the public generally, to whom the Directors confidently recommend the investment as one of an unusually promising nature.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association may be seen at the Registered Offices of the Company as above.

Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained from any of the District Managers or Agents of the Company, the Broker, or direct from the Company's Chief Office, 429 Strand, or its City Branch, 21 Cornhill.

NO APPEAL TO THE LODGE FROM DECISION OF THE MASTER.—It is well known Masonic law that the decision of the Master cannot be appealed from to the Lodge; it can only be taken to the Grand Master or the Grand Lodge. Why this is so, however, is not so well understood, and we give the view of Bro. ALBERT PIKE on the subject, and believe in its correctness. The origin of such law had its existence in the fact that, anciently, Lodges were composed of apprentices and craftsmen, and the Master being a Master Mason, the same rule which prevailed in Operative Masonry was carried into the Speculative organization, viz.: The workmen could not appeal from the decisions of the overseer or master of the work, for he alone was responsible for the designs laid down on the "trestle board." So is our present system, although Master Masons compose the Lodge, the ancient law still prevails, for the Master is now responsible only to the Grand Lodge or Grand Master. From this rule of supremacy by the Master, he can call the Lodge together at pleasure, and close the same at will, and it cannot be adjourned by vote of the members; he can also close debate when unnecessarily protracted, and the "previous question" cannot be called for by any member. It is a wise provision for the preservation of harmony and to expedite business.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company has been formed for the establishment of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and for the publication of newspapers, books, pamphlets, &c., connected with Freemasonry.

The inadequate representation of the Craft in the public press of this country has long been a subject of regret, and the wish has not unfrequently been expressed that a journal might be established, in the interests of the Order, which should be owned and conducted entirely by members. This wish it is the object of the present Company to carry into effect. THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will be the property of Freemasons, and its devotion and loyalty to their cause will thus be effectively secured. It has been decided to raise the requisite capital in shares, of a small amount, in order that a large number of the Fraternity may have the opportunity of acquiring an interest in the undertaking. As it is not proposed to call up more than 50 per cent. of the capital, it will be seen that such an interest may be obtained at an immediate outlay of £1 per share.

If only a small proportion of the Freemasons in the United Kingdom subscribe to THE CHRONICLE it will suffice to guarantee the Company from actual loss, while the more numerous the subscribers the greater will be the opportunities of the Paper for promoting the interests of the Craft.

It is intended that THE CHRONICLE shall contain:—

Leading articles on subjects of interest.
Special reports of all Masonic Meetings.
A Weekly summary of News.
Antiquarian Notes and Sketches relating to the Craft.
Reviews of Books.
Critical notices of current events of the day.

Its columns will also be open for the discussion of topics interesting to the Brotherhood.

On questions of religion and politics the new Journal will assume a position of strict neutrality.

Intending subscribers should fill up the Form of Application and forward it, together with the deposit, to the London and County Bank, 113 Aldersgate Street, London, E.C.

In conclusion, the Members of the Provisional Committee desire to express their grateful acknowledgment of the many promises of support they have already received from influential Members of the Craft, in various parts of the Country, and they earnestly appeal to all who approve of their project to labour with them to make it a brilliant and enduring success.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application for Shares, can be obtained from the General Manager.
