THE JOURNAL OF BORDERLAND RESEARCH

BSRF No. 1 Published by Borderland Sciences Research Foundation, Inc., PO Box 548, Vista, California 92083 USA. Edited by the Director, Riley Hansard Crabb, Doctor of Metaphysics in the Society of St. Luke the Physician.

The Journal is published six issues a year with the assistance of the Associates, at the Director's home, 1103 Bobolink Drive, Vista. It is printed, 36 pages an issue. The Foundation was incorporated under California law, May 21, 1951, #254263, and has been in continuous existence since then. Address all correspondence to the PO Box. The Journal is included in the Foundation membership of $7.50 a year. Single copies and back issues of the Journal are now $1.50 each. If you don't care to join you may receive the Journal by donating $7.50 a year or more to the Foundation. The Director's wife, Ms. Judith Crabb, is office manager and Secretary-Treasurer.

PURPOSES OF BSRF: This is non-profit organization of people who take an active interest in unusual happenings along the borderland between the visible and invisible worlds. In the words of the late Meade Layne, founder and director of BSRA from 1946 to 1959: "BSRA publications are scientific in approach but employ few technical expressions. They deal with significant phenomena which orthodox science cannot or will not investigate. For example: The Fortean falls of objects from the sky. Teleportation, Radiesthesia, PK effects, Underground Races, Mysterious Disappearances, Occult and Psychic Phenomena, Photography of the Invisible, Nature of the Ethers and the problem of the Aeroforms (Flying Saucers). In the year 1946 BSRA obtained an interpretation of the phenomena which since has come to be known as the Etheric or 4-D interpretation, and which has not been radically altered since that time. This continues to be the only explanation which makes good science, sound metaphysics and common sense."

The chief present concern of the Foundation is to make this kind of unusual information available as a public service at reasonable cost. Headquarters acts as a receiving, coordinating and distributing center. An important part of the Director's work is to give recognition, understanding and encouragement to people who are having unusual experiences of the borderland type and/or are conducting research in any of the above fields. For consultation on borderland problems or for Spiritual healing through prayer, write or phone 714-724-2043 for help or for an appointment. Donations and bequests toward Foundation research programs and expenses are welcome.

The 28-page list of BSRF publications is available from Headquarters for 50¢ in check, coins or stamps. This includes brochures on borderland subjects, tape recordings of Mr. Crabb's lectures and of members of the Inner Circle, talking through trance-medium Mark Probert. "PSYCHIC PAGE BRYANT SEES DEVIL'S TRIANGLE VICTIM KIDNAPPED BY UFOS"

By Paul Dougherty
National Star, Sept. 14, 1974

"We took off shortly after dawn in our tiny Piper Cherokee. As we headed out to sea from Orlando, Florida airport, our pilot, Bob Burr, turned to me and pointed silently at his radio compass. The compass had abandoned its previously steady bearing and was rapidly and jerkily rotating around and around the dial. This is it, I thought, already!

"Bob, a veteran of 18 years sport-flying in Florida and the Bahamas, said that no such thing had ever happened to him before. He added, reassuringly, that it might be the sending station. A switch of frequency restored the needle to stability, but the experience made it easy to see how planes could get lost in the area.

"An air of tension continued to hang over the tiny cabin, until the appearance of Grand Bahama Island about an hour later confirmed we were on course. Shortly afterwards, Page, who had become very silent, began to shift restlessly in her cramped seat next to the pilot.

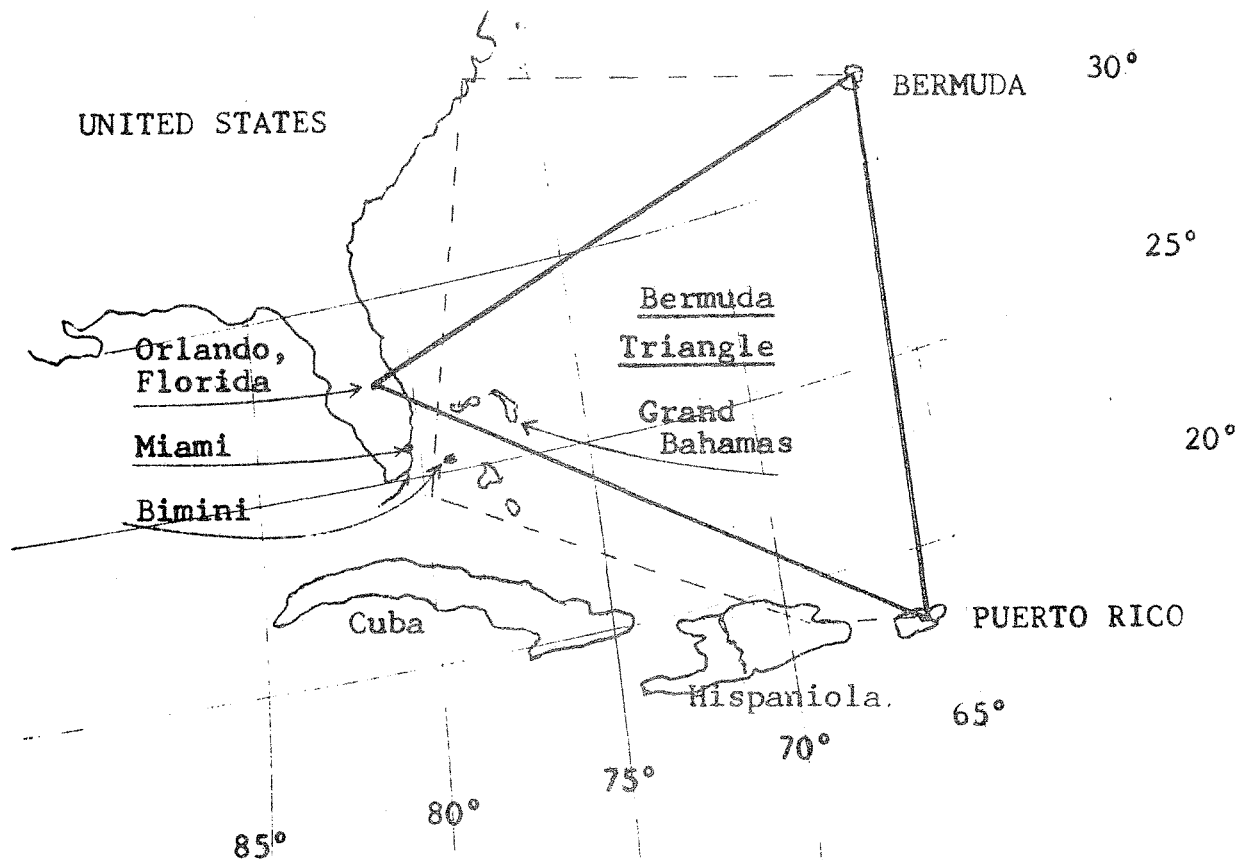

"'I'm feeling something,' the 300-pound woman said, 'Something's coming through to me.'

"Page became glassy-eyed. Her voice dropped into a trance-like slur. She began to mutter, sometimes inaudibly, about something 'very dangerous'.

"'Very exceptional solar energy,' she gasped, 'aberrations in our atmosphere. . . a long, tubular ray coming out of the water and on indefinitely into the sky. . . ship or plane moving into it will be dematerialized. . . Near Bimini, it's near Bimini. This plane must go nowhere near the island of Bimini!'

"Page suddenly sat bolt upright and said in a loud, normal voice: 'Paul, tell Bob not to go anywhere near Bimini.'

"Bob didn't wait to be told. He peeled off smoothly to the left and shoehorned the tiny plane through a gap between the thunderheads and towards Grand Bahama Island. Page later explained that the 'beam' would stay between Miami and Bimini until mid-September and then shift to a point between Grand Bahama and Walker Cay.

"While the 'beam' was there, she said, these places would be extremely dangerous. She then added calmly that this information had come to her through the spirit of Francis Gallivan -- one of the 27 men who vanished on December 5, 1945, in the part of the Triangle we were now traversing.

"There was a Sergeant Robert Gallivan aboard one of the five Avenger bombers and a Martin Mariner flying boat that flew off, apparently into nothingness, from Ft. Lauderdale naval base that grey December day. It was only when we landed back at Tampa airport that the full, extraordinary story of Ms. Bryant's leap into the past was revealed. Hypnotist and parapsychologist Al Miner, of St. Petersburg, Florida put Page into a deep hypnotic trance. This is the story that came out of her as she 'became' the missing pilot:

"I'm in a very large, bulky plane. It's dark green. Military. I'm slim, tall, my name is Galligan. The gauges in front of me read NNE 5,200 ft., on course, enough fuel. I am now 50 miles out in the Atlantic and turning back to Ft. Lauderdale. I'm in the lead plane, code number C26. There are five aircraft including myself. Purpose of this mission is to train new pilots for formation flying. It's getting a little hazier. Now, way off in the distance I can see large, dark storm clouds. It's very unusual, the radar records no storm clouds.

"We are moving completely into a storm pattern. The wind seems to be taking on a whirlwind effect. I am having difficulty in flying. The heat is building up on the plane. It seems like the tail of the plane wants to spin out on me. Now the plane seems to be losing altitude very fast. I can feel it dropping, but it's not showing on the altimeter. I have a feeling like being in a dark room. Visibility is zero. The compass is showing south but that is not possible.

ALIEN VOICES?

"I can hear some kind of foreign language on the radio. It sounds like Spanish. I've issued a Mayday but there seems to be no return. It's absolutely dark. I'm scared now. I can sometimes see the wing tip of the plane to the left of me glinting somehow. I can't see to the right.

"I can hear a sound like a tornado, maybe a waterspout. I don't know. The plane seems to be taking a nosedive, a spin towards what I know is water. This plane is going down on us. I have to bail out. I can't get the cockpit open. There is nothing around, just water and wind. It's going round and round.'

"At this stage Page Bryant appeared to be highly excited and Miner brought her out of the hypnosis. Later, the hypnotic reenactment returned. Page referred to a clear patch roughly circular towards which the aircraft headed.

"It seems to be a vacuum of some sort. The plane I'm in is being disassembled. I can see three others. They are being disassembled but no one is doing it. Seems like a sort of assembly line. I get no feeling of life here. Ahead is a long, cylindrical shape. It looks something like a blimp. The back of it is open and parts of other aircraft are going inside. This place is very similar to a hangar. There are pieces of what look like might have been a passenger plane. I can see the fuselages of five aircraft inside the vehicle. The vehicle is standing on four metal legs. It has a kind of gondola attached to the under side.'

"She said that she had no doubt that the scene she had described was a UFO base under the sea near Florida. There had been numerous sightings there, of UFOs, and the base was used as a staging post for observations of earth.

"I feel that there are three bases on this earth, from which whoever sends them observes us. And it is the huge bursts of incoming power to the base here that causes the weather upsets in the Triangle.'

"Most of the details Ms. Bryant came up with, such as the presence of Sgt. Gallivan, are of the sort that could be known to any student of the Devil's Triangle or of simple meteorological phenomena. When she told her strange story though, it sounded eerie and compelling. Like Bryant, I will never fly into the Devil's Triangle again."

At left is Mark Probert as he was pictured in Mystic Magazine, in trance and under control, February 1955. He was born in Bayonne, New Jersey in 1907, died in San Diego, California, Feb. 22, 1969. He was a man of many talents. He served in the Merchant Marine during World War II. He was a dancer, singer and entertainer, also a portrait painter of considerable skill. This he liked best. Below is a photocopy of his portrait in oils of the Yada di Shi'ite, who posed for Mark's clairvoyant sight, for this likeness. Mark's mediumship manifested in different ways in earlier years but the systematic development of it by the Inner Circle began in earnest in 1945-1946, when a series of sittings was held in his San Diego home on 26th street.

Mark Probert

The quality of the messages received through Mark was uniformly high, concerned for the most part with questions in science, philosophy, metaphysics and cultural subjects generally. The Controls themselves are fully integrated personalities, highly informed and anxious to serve and inspire their friends in the flesh in every way. Thousands of pages of Seance reports have been transcribed and are available in mimeo book form at reasonable cost from BSRF headquarters. Send 50¢ in coin or stamps for a 20-page list.

Leader of the Inner Circle with its 16 members is the adept pictured at right. At the present time he prefers to appear in a Chinese body to those who have the necessary sensitivity to perceive him as a form rather than as a center of consciousness "whose center is everywhere and circumference nowhere". Under the Yada's guidance these worldly wise, cosmopolitan members of the human race, through Mark, have willingly discussed the major problems which interest people, displaying a praiseworthy tolerance, sympathy and understanding which has won them a wide reading public here in the Western states. Associates are continually grateful for the wisdom made available by them.

The Yada di Shi'ite

WHAT SAYS THE YADA ABOUT THE DEVIL'S TRIANGLE?

It was near the end of the Probert-Inner Circle ministry in March 1968 that the subject of disappearing planes and people was brought up at a seance session with the Yada in Mark Probert's San Diego apartment.

He: "Sometime ago you spoke of one of the Yadas in your temple who went into a state of meditation and disappeared. You could hear him but you couldn't feel him. Whenever he picked up any object, did the object disappear too?"

Yada: "Sometimes. But sometimes it moved around where someone observing it could just see the object moving. But this was not practiced very much because it was not thought very helpful just to see an object moving without knowing what the force was that was moving it."

She: "What happened there? Was it dematerialization?"

Yada: "Well, no, because very often when he picked up an object the moment he touched it, it disappeared into his particular vibration."

He: "If these same things happened today would they be called a space warp?"

Yada: "Yes."

She: "People will disappear but you'll hear them and the boy who was here at Christmas has a dog that does that -- you will hear the dog but not see it."

Yada: "You see, you do not have to be human."

He: "There have been three planes disappear off the coast of Texas recently, the last one a B-52 bomber. Now did that go into a space warp?"

Yada: "Yes. If you remember, some few years ago in Florida many planes disappeared there -- very large planes, your big bomb machines." (No doubt, the Yada was referring to the 1945 disappearance of the five Avenger bombers and the Martin rescue plane.)

She: "What happened to the people?"

Yada: "For a time they suffer quite greatly and they lose awareness. They have intense amnesia so they do not know who they are, to say nothing of where they are!"

He: "But they cant fly around forever!"

Yada: No, they do not fly around forever. They do not fly around at all! It's a very real condition. It has its own fields, its own substance, its own surface to move around on. When they suffer complete amnesia they are taken to a kind of station or hospital where they are permitted to sleep; and sometimes sleep for an extensive time. They are also treated with a kind of purple light, more on the ultra-violet light; and they are brought awake again; and they think they have been there all the time. They have no earth awareness any more."

(It would seem that medium Page Bryant tuned in to the enduring Akashic record of Sgt. Gallivan's terrifying experience of December 1945 as a pilot of one of the Avenger bombers, and relived it for the benefit of researcher Dougherty. There is no indication in the reporter's story that she was in touch with the soul of Gallivan in present time, 1974. RHC.)

WHOSE PROPERTY ARE WE?

He: "What constitutes their getting into that? Is it multiple energy created by the crowd in the airplane, to escape? Or is it -- its got to be something!"

Yada: "Not really. If we all lived consciously, if we all became aware of our tremendous potential, we would not become victims of other people -- either in the dimension we are in now or out of it, but because most people live in a very unconscious, unaware life."

He: "It just happens to them?"

Yada: "Yes. They become victims of people in other places who need them for whatever use they want to use them for. But mostly, these (kidnapped) people are not treated badly. The greatest pain they go through is losing contact with the physical world. Getting into the warp in the first place causes a great deal of pressure on the body because the body particles, the cellular activity, has to be changed. This can be very, very painful."

She: "Were you -- someone trying to use them?"

Yada: "Yes. Aren't we all used in one way or another? And do we not use one another? When I say use I do not necessarily mean abuse. I suppose to pull a person out of one dimension into another is an abuse, because it is taking direct control over his existence."

She: "Who?"

Yada: "There are certain people in other dimensions, there are groups of people. Their work is to do that. Not only to take people, but also to take things from one dimension to another."

He: "Suppose, if we were conscious of this, could we work our way back?"

Yada: "Yes, but it is very seldom you can stay that conscious. The pressure of the activity on the physical body is very, very acute. Just the activity of having yourself raised or lowered beyond normal vibration is like you are burning in the hottest kind of fire." (Remember St. Gallivan complaining of the heat in the cockpit of his plane?)

She: "Would you say that a negative quality about the person would tend to draw them into this?"

Yada: "No. Because there are some people who so learn to master their own bodies that they can change their cellular structure so that they can vanish into other dimensions, without being pulled there; they go on their own. I go to my Father who is in heaven."

She: "That's raising a vibration."

Yada: "The vibration of their cellular structure is certainly raised to the point of Light."

He: "I was thinking of these people as being in a lower area." (The kidnappers?)

Yada: "No not necessarily. You see, you do not know of any other race of people, any other beings, that are so cruel as humans to one another? So what about the world you are in! Look what you have created. You have made it into a very low vibration."

She: "Aren't we about the lowest?"

Yada: "No, there is one lower -- that's difficult to believe isn't it -- of greater density; the substance is of a tremendous density now. You go into space; you do not always have a likeness. The matter sometimes, the higher you go into space, becomes greater density until you have fields of substance out beyond your earth, whose density is so great that just a cubic inch weighs into the billions of tons."

He: "Like the core of the earth?"

Yada: "Yes."

THE ATLANTEAN FIRE CRYSTAL IN THE BERMUDA TRIANGLE

From a talk by Dr. Daniel W. Fry

Today, many scientists, pursuing various paths of scientific inquiry, mutually engaged in the attempt to advance and rediscover the art and science of crystalology that was lost to earth man during the last great collapse of science and civilization many thousands of years ago.

From those records of the lost civilization that are still available we can learn something of the tremendous powers that are inherent in the crystal. In our own laboratories we are working, sometimes almost feverishly, to rediscover and to put into operation the powers and abilities that our ancient ancestors used so wisely and so effectively. Our present Laser systems are one of the tangible results of such efforts. The output of the ruby crystalin a laser system is probably quite similar to that of the Vril stick about which so much has been written in the ancient records. Except of course, that the Vril stick employed a somewhat simpler and more compact system than any of those which we have yet been able to produce; although, with our rapid advance in miniaturization, we will soon begin to approach the results obtained by our ancestors.

In the hands of the supreme ruler, who was the only person to possess or to use the Vril stick, it represented total authority; since it contained the power of life or death through the laser-like beam which it emitted.

The crystals produced by present day science are quite limited in size. Their shape is determined almost entirely by the nature of the electrical fields within the molecules of which they are composed. The Atlanteans, however, had no such limitations. By growing their crystals within an area of precisely controlled exterior electrical and magnetic fields they could cause a crystal to continue to grow almost indefinitely, and to take on any one of a number of predetermined shapes. These huge crystals they then incorporated into devices and systems which, while they were relatively simple compared to present technology, were still capable of performing functions which would certainly cause our present scientists to stare in awe and wonder, probably mixed with a certain amount of ego-saving scepticism of that which they were seeing.

Tremendous forces, acting over great distances, could readily be produced. When we bounce our tiny laser beams off the surface of the moon and record the signal after its 480,000 mile round trip journey, we are taking the first, few, child-like steps in the re-development of the Atlantean art. Substantial changes could be brought about in the electrical, the magnetic and the gravitational fields over large areas, and significant changes in the time fields could be created in local areas by the huge, crystal-controlled systems of the Atlanteans.

THEY CONTROLLED THE HEAVENS

In his manuscript Timaeus, or Theory of the Universe, and in his brief, twenty-two page paper Critieas, the Greek philosopher Plato described the history and culture of this long-submerged island continent, its amazing people, and some of the incredible science with which they could control even the heavens at will.

He named the continent Atlantis, which is simply the plural form of Atlas, the titan of Greek mythology, who was said to stand at the western extremity of the earth, near the islands of the Hesperides, holding up the heavens with his shoulders. There is no evidence however, that even Plato realised that the very mythology of the Titans from which he borrowed the name Atlantis, was in fact the unwritten history handed down through the centuries of the race of all-powerful Titans of the continent of Poseidon and with forces so great that they could indeed control the heavens at will.

We cannot fail to note, however, that the western extremity of the known earth was at that time about at what we now know as the center of the Atlantic ocean, and from which the continent of Atlantis once rose. We must also remember that Poseidon, the brother of Atlas and the God of the sea, was said to dwell in the same locality in a huge and magnificent palace at the bottom of the sea, from which he occasionally rose to vent his wrath on those who defied or ignored him.

WHAT SAID EDGAR CAYCE?

In the late Edgar Cayce's book on Atlantis mention is made of the powerful crystal systems. On page 86 we find the following words: "In Posiedia the entity dwelt among those that had charge of the motivating force of the great crystals that so condensed the Light and the forms of activity as to guide the ships in the sea and in the air." Again on page 87 we read: "In Atlantean lands, at the time of the development of electrical forces that dealt with transportation of craft from place to place, overcoming gravity itself, through preparations of the crystal, the terrible, the mighty crystal. Much of this later brought destruction."

Apparently some of these systems made use of energy accumulators coupled to natural energy sources, and were designed to operate automatically when triggered by some specific and predetermined stimulus. They required no human control or maintenance and were practically immune and impervious to time or to the conditions of their environment. At least two, and probably more, of these periodically operating devices are apparently still in operation and still performing their design function after some thousands of years of immersion in the Atlantic ocean.

WORKING WITH THE NATURAL LAWS

When the continent of Atlantis, or Poseidon, descended into these depths it took with it not only a whole nation of people but also some of the most remarkable technology ever created upon this planet. Because they worked with the natural laws instead of using one to oppose or overcome another -- as we have fallen into the habit of doing -- their systems were, on the whole, somewhat less bulky and cumbersome than ours; and yet they were capable of producing results which we are not yet able to duplicate, or in some cases even to understand.

Not only was this civilization aware of the many huge space ships which had, for countless generations cruised the Galaxy, but it had established firm commercial relations with the Galactic Foundation. The sale or barter of material and supplies to those ships whose course took them near to the earth had become one of the nation's most profitable industries.

The transportation of these materials and supplies between the earth and the space ship did, however, present some problems and difficulties because of the intense resonating fields produced by the propulsion systems of the huge ships, and the tremendous degree of ionization that would be created in any atmosphere through which they moved, it was not practical for them to approach closer than a few hundred miles to the earth's surface. And no matter how the lifting was done the earth's gravitational field still exacted a tremendous toll of energy from the transfer operation.

To solve this problem several crystal-driven and controlled systems were developed, which were capable of creating the effect of an almost complete warp in the space between the earth and the space ship, when the ship was directly above the system. The electrical and magnetic fields present were not greatly affected, although their direction was changed, but the time and the space factors between the craft and the earth became practically zero. Material and supplies placed within the conveying chamber or area could then immediately be transferred to the hold of the ship. (Here the reader should be reminded of the Transporter Beam technique dramatized on the Star Trek television series. RHC.)

While this concept may at first be somewhat difficult to grasp or accept, and while it may appear to be in violation of several of our currently cherished laws of science, it really is not at all.

In the change of location the energy of position offsets the gravitational loss and all laws of conservation are upheld and satisfied.

WE MUST CHANGE CONVENTIONAL THOUGHT HABITS

We have been too much in the habit of assuming that if an object is to change from one location to another, that is if it is to cease to occupy point "A" and instead occupy some other point, "B", it must, in the process, occupy momentarily all possible points between the two. This idea, however, is not a necessity of thought; nor is it a law of Nature. It is in fact simply a habit of thought which has resulted from the fact that objects which we observe almost always follow this pattern.

For example, if we place a number of sheets of paper at various distances between the rifle and the target at which it is aimed, when the bullet has left the gun and reached its target we will find a hole in each piece of paper, indicating that the bullet had occupied that point during some part of its motion. All of our laws of ballistics are based upon this principle and the exceptions to these laws -- that is, the cases where an object ceases to occupy one point and simultaneously occupies begins to occupy some other point, without having occupied the points between -- are so rare and so difficult to observe or demonstrate that it is much simpler for science to ignore or to deny them than to make any effort to explain.

Somewhere off the coast of Florida, under many fathoms of water, one of these Atlantean crystal driven systems apparently still exists and still performs at least some of its original functions. Fired by accumulators drawing their energy from natural sources and unaffected by time or its surroundings, it still springs into action when triggered by a specific impulse signal, and still goes through its design task of transporting any solid-state matter within its range from its original location to some, unknown to us, and probably remote point "X".

Since there are no detailed descriptions of this device available to us, we can gain more knowledge of it only through a careful and complete study of its performance, and its effects upon others during those brief but fateful periods when it comes into operation and thereby manifests its properties and its effects to us. Since there have been many demonstrations which are well documented, some of them in rather precise detail; and since they continue to occur at relatively frequent intervals, quite a substantial body of dependable fact and detail exists to furnish a fairly sound basis for such a study.

To describe in detail the many separate events which have occurred in this area, and which can only be adequately explained by the operation of the Atlantean device, would require several hours.

DAN FRY

The records fill a number of folders in my own research file, and the specific data continues to accumulate. It covers a period of more than 150 years and involves the area commonly known as the Bermuda Triangle. Although it is usually defined geographically as being roughly square, bounded on the north by a line stretching from Bermuda to the Virginia coast and on the south by the islands of Cuba and Hispaniola.

This stretch of ocean, dotted by a few islands which are the only visible remnants of the Atlantean continent has been the scene of more unconventional and inexplicable disappearances than any equivalent area on earth. In the last century alone, 42 ships and 27 planes, for which well documented records exist, have sailed into this area and simply vanished without warning and without a trace. Ships or planes lost to storms, fires or other normal hazards are not included in this list. They are all cases in which no distress calls were sounded. The weather was moderate, and in spite of the widest possible search and rescue operations, no wreckage, no debris, no survivors and not even an oil slick was ever found.

(Here Mr. Fry lists some of the better-known ship disappearances starting in 1866, including the "Cyclops" in 1918.) Similar disappearances have occurred every two or three years since then and will undoubtedly continue to occur in the future unless the exact location of the event can be determined and those spots avoided.

Attempts have been made to explain the loss of these ships as being due to mid-ocean earthquakes, or sea quakes, which might raise sudden waves as high as several hundreds of feet. Such waves might swallow a ship so suddenly and completely that there would be no time for distress calls or the launching of lifeboats. The Tsunami theory is however, like many other attempted explanations, in that it raises other questions which are even more difficult to answer. In the first place a Tsunami, or tidal wave, once it has been created, rolls on and on with little loss of height or energy until it encounters some land surface. A 200-foot wave generated anywhere in the Bermuda Triangle would still be at least 100 to 150 feet high when it reached the Florida coast; where it would then proceed to roll over about half of the state destroying everything in its path.

Also we are faced with the necessity of explaining the equally abrupt vanishing of some 27 or more airplanes in mid flight. It is exceedingly difficult to imagine a wave high enough to snatch up an airplane flying at 10,000 feet. One of the most significant and by far the best documented pieces of plane disappearances is of course that of Flight 19, consisting of five TBM Avenger bombers, which, on Dec. 5, 1945, took off on a routine patrol flight from the U.S. Naval Air Station, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

WEATHER CLEAR, FLIGHT CONDITIONS EXCELLENT

My own perusal of the weather conditions that day, as printed in Ft. Lauderdale newspapers indicate that there were a few broken clouds and a small amount of wind; however, there were certainly no weather conditions which would endanger a short, routine patrol of this kind.

The Flight Leader's plane had a crew of two while the remaining four planes carried three men each. The lead plane's third man had reported sick that morning and so was not on the flight. All of the 14 pilots and crewmen had flight and navigation experience ranging from 13 months to six years. The planes were expected to make a triangular patrol, flying east for 160 miles, then north for 40 miles, and then directly back to base at Ft. Lauderdale, a total flight time of about one hour and 40 minutes.

The flight took off at 2 p.m. and by 3:45 p.m. they were expected to call the Control Tower for landing instructions; but the message actually received at that time was anything but a routine one. "This is an emergency! This is an emergency!" it said in part, and even with radio distortion there was an unnerving fear in the Flight Leader's voice. When asked for his position he replied, "We're not sure of our position. We cant be sure where we are. We dont know."

When told to assume a bearing of due west, the Flight Leader replied, "We cannot besure which way is west. We cannot be sure of any direction. Everything is wrong. Everything is strange. The ocean doesn't look as it should."

By this time the sun was nearing the western horizon; and when the tower operator, half jokingly, half sarcastically, suggested that they "head for the setting sun, since it usually sets in the west" or had they forgotten that, the Flight Leader replied that neither clouds nor sun were visible in the strange sky through which they were flying.

For nearly 30 minutes thereafter the tower could hear the planes talking to each other. It was obvious that none of the five pilots nor any of the nine crewmen had any idea of their position, even though all of them were experienced in aerial navigation; and it was completely incredible that all navigation instruments and all compasses could fail on all five of the planes simultaneously. The overheard conversations showed increasing signs of fear and hysteria among the five pilots.

Then, without prior warning, the Flight Leader turned over the command to another plane. This in itself was a most unusual act, and one which usually under the most desperate of emergencies. At about 4:15, the Control Tower received its last message from the flight. It said, "We are not certain where we are. We appear to be about 225 miles northeast of base. It looks like we are - - " The message broke off at that point, instantly and completely.

ANOTHER PLANE INTO THE SPACE WARP

Immediately thereafter a Martin flying boat with full rescue equipment and a crew of 13 men was dispatched to search for the missing flight, and to rescue the dazed pilots who, with all the navigation equipment to be found in military bombing planes couldn't find west. The rescue plane gave several routine radio reports and then lapsed into silence. Neither this plane nor any of the original five bombers were ever heard from again. Nor was any sign of them ever found, in spite of one of the largest air and sea rescue searches in American history. The American aircraft carriers Solomons was in the area. Many ships and over 300 planes joined the search. Not a single item of debris nor wreckage from any of the planes was ever seen. Even though the Martin flying boat was designed to land upon the ocean, and because it was used for Marine rescue service, had aboard life preservers, rafts and literally hundreds of items which would rise to the surface of the ocean and continue to float indefinitely, no matter how hard the plane had hit the water.

The U.S. Navy, after an exhaustive investigation of the incident, in which a total of 27 lives had presumably been lost, was unable to come up with any solution. Their report stated simply, "We are not even able to make a good guess as to what happened."

A little more than two years later, on January 9, 1948 a four-engined commercial airliner, belonging to the British South American Airways Corporation, with 34 passengers and a crew of six, were en-route to Kingston, Jamaica. The weather was clear and mild. At 10:30 p.m. a routine report was made to the control tower at Bermuda. This was the last message ever received from this airliner. No evidence was ever found that would indicate a crash into the ocean or elsewhere. No wreckage, no debris, no oil slick of any kind was ever located. The big plane with a total of 44 persons aboard had simply vanished. . . .

The total number of planes that have vanished in this manner can only be guessed at, since no genuine effort has ever been made to assemble even all of the known cases; and of course, the loss of smaller planes could, and almost certainly would, be attributed to engine failure, lack of fuel, radio malfunction or other other more readily understood causes. . . . (Dan also lists the disappearance of the nuclear attack submarine U.S.S. Scorpion in May 1968 in the Bermuda Triangle area, on its way home from duty in the Mediterranean.)

It would seem, therefore, that the Atlantean transportation device, driven by the huge crystals, performs its function equally well whether the object upon which it acts is in the air, upon the surface or beneath it.

THE BIRTH OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

There have been half-hearted efforts by several departments of the Federal government to probe the mystery of the Bermuda Triangle. In January 1946 a group of Naval Intelligence officers were ordered by President Truman to form a central intelligence group which became the forerunner of the CIA. In the spring of 1946 this central intelligence group participated in a series of secret hearings in Washington, D.C. in which the wives and the relatives of the missing Flight 19 were flown to Washington to attend a meeting. Since that time, most of those concerned, have refused to discuss the matter at all.

But the mother of one of the missing flyers has said that she thought her son was still alive, perhaps somewhere in space. . .

If the Atlantean device is indeed the answer to the endless chain of disappearances, the destination to which all of these planes, ships and submarines were transported can only be a matter of speculation. Since we have never had a report from any of the crews or passengers from the missing vehicles, it could be perhaps another planet, another dimension, another frequency or even another time. But, until some of those who were transported find a way to return to the same gate through which they left, we can only guess.

While the total number of vanished ships and planes may be far greater than anyone realizes it is still fairly obvious that the transporting mechanism is operative only at certain points, at certain times, and under certain conditions. For example, it might be triggered only by a certain minimum sized mass passing directly over the sensing device. The system would probably be operative only within a certain area above the device. This would explain why only two of a flight of five planes vanished, while the other three which were flying just outside the radius of the area, were untouched and unaffected.

In the case of the five TBM bombers, all of them chanced to be within the radius of activity when the System was triggered. The action of the electric and magnetic fields are relatively unchanged by the action of the Device; therefore, the pilots of the five planes were able to continue radio communication with the control tower so long as the device continued to produce and maintain the space warp. The planes were no longer really on earth, nor had they really left it. . . . When the device shut off and no longer produced the warp, the planes were instantly and completely at the remote end of the transportation system. . . . URI GELLER, CHALLENGE TO SCIENCE AND TO METAPHYSICS

Part II, of a review of "Uri", by Dr. Andrija Puharich, Doubleday, New York, 1974, $1.95

Dr. Puharich flew to Israel on Aug. 17, 1971, but his Brahmin advisors from the Astral plane tested his new dedication to psychic research by putting all kinds of obstacles in his path before he left New York, including ill health. Nevertheless he struggled aboard the plane and found, after it took off, "my illness improved, and by the time I landed in Israel I felt healthy again".

Whatever his expectations were regarding his new subject for borderland research, the doctor was pleasantly surprised to find Uri a tall, handsome young Israeli with a magnetic personality and a soft easy-going manner. He had also been a paratrooper in the 1967 war, wounded in action, now fully recovered and keeping himself in top physical shape.

Uri was making a living giving public, paid demonstrations of his psychokinetic and telepathic powers. Puharich witnessed one of these the night of his arrival, at a discotheque in Jaffa. He was not too impressed as he well knew that stage magicians could duplicate such feats with audience accomplices. Uri was agreeable to scientific testing by Dr. Puharich -- as long as he was paid for the hours and hours of testing the doctor would require to establish scientific proof which would "stand up in court". This was a switch for Uri because he had never had any desire to try to prove anything to scientists, and still doesn't! And your reviewer says, "Hooray for Uri!" Let scientists -- including Puharich -- create their own proof by taking the time and trouble to develop their own psychokinetic and telepathic powers!

The Nine Brahmins demonstrated their invisible presence, power and control by revealing to Puharich his own latent abilities as a telapathist, or receiver, and Uri's as a transmitter the very first afternoon of the research project. Uri wrote something on a pad and laid it down, face down, beside him; then he suggested that he would like to demonstrate his ability to pick Puharich's brain by having the doctor think of three numbers in sequence. Doc did this. Then Uri asked him to pick up the pad on which he had written before the experiment started. There were Doc's three numbers, in the order in which he had thought of them! Uri was delighted with his success as a transmitter. Puharich was rather startled at Uri's power to influence the thoughts of others. This was a switch! The young Israeli was delighted.

"I wanted to send you the numbers but I knew that if I told you to try to receive the numbers you would fight me. In this way you participated in the experiment without prejudice, and proved that you have telepathy, when I send or pass to you."

The education of Dr. Puharich was moving along, but neither of the two was ready to face the possibility at that time that both were under control -- or at least being guided -- by a third Force which put the set of three numbers in Uri's brain as well as in Doc's. Another disturbing possibility was suggested by Uri that "I might also hypnotize you to see and do things that are not really there".

COSMOPOLITAN AND UFO BELIEVER

Geller has four languages: Hungarian, learned from his parents; Hebrew, learned at school and from playmates in Tel Aviv; English, learned at a Roman Catholic school on Cyprus, operated by a priest mainly for English and American children living on the island; and Greek, learned from Greek children with whom he played while living on Cyprus.

He is not a practicing Jew. Geller's mother told Puharich that she wanted her only son to make up his own mind about religious beliefs; so he was not forced to go to the synagogue nor take the usual initiations for Jewish boys. He was pretty much a non-believing materialist when Puharich came to Israel in 1971.

In view of our thesis that the main control behind the Geller phenomena is the Brahmin priesthood, it is significant that Puharich is not a practicing Catholic; although he was born to Roman Catholic Croatian parents in a Chicago slum. Thus neither of these two subjected himself to the mass hypnosis of the priesthood of the religion of his race.

This made it possible for Geller to have advanced beliefs far ahead of his time. He faced Puharich with this blunt statement: "I believe there is life everywhere in the universe. There are advanced beings who can pass the light barrier, who can travel millions of light years in an instant. They can transfer themselves to different dimensions; they can change themselves into any form they wish, and appear as ants, birds, people or even as UFOs. These space people now know that earth people are finally advanced enough so that they can show newer forms than they used to take in biblical times."

He couldn't explain why he believed in reincarnation, why he believed that there were advanced civilizations on earth before the Ice Age -- "All that I do now, they once did. Somehow they have remained, not incorporated in a body, and I somehow have their powers. . . ."

This theory, one of four advanced by Uri to explain his powers, would also explain Brahmin control from the Astral plane, and the continuing existence of an earth organization going back thousands and thousands of years.

THE TEMPLES OF DARKNESS

From the new Bible, "Oahspe", and the section titled "The Wars Against Jehovih", we get this picture of the training of Brahmin priests in the city of Ctdar, on the plains of India, many thousands of years ago.

"There were four hundred and fifty Temples of Darkness, dedicated to the spirits of the dead. These were without any opening save the door; and when the communers were within and the door shut they were without light.

"In the midst of the temple, spirits and mortals congregated, and the spirits taught mortals the art of magic: of making seeds grow into trees and flowers; of producing serpents by force of will; of carrying things through the air; casting sweet perfumes, and casting foul smells; of casting virus to one's enemy, and inoculating him with poison unto death; of finding things lost; of bringing money to the poor, and flowers and food to the sick; of entering the dead sleep (cataleptic trance), and of becoming unconscious of pain by force of will."

Another of Uri's theories was that he was a descendant of people who had been brought to earth long ago by Flying Saucers. Some of their unusual powers had turned up in him. A third theory was that his mind and split or warped in such a way as to make him different from ordinary people. And finally, the theory that he was being used by "them", out there somewhere. Interestingly enough, the powers demonstrated by Uri don't seem to go beyond the elemental ones developed in the Temples of Darkness.

Whatever or whoever "they" are, the Puharich-Geller research project was an invasion of the domain of the Sanhedrin. Doc was subconsciously aware of this and at the physical level actively sought support and cooperation from the Israeli government. This was eventually obtained, but it didn't prevent Puharich from suffering a Black Magick attack in his Tel Aviv apartment one night. It manifested as a racing heart, paroxysmal tachycardia, and also as a sharp, stabbing pain in his right hip. If it hadn't been for the presence -- and presence of mind -- of an understanding companion, the research might have ended right there!

"WE CANNOT ENDURE BEING WORSE;
SO MAYBE WE SHOULD TRY BEING BETTER!"

By Manly P. Hall
From His Talk "The Next Decade - 1970-1980"

We are in a universe of laws, a universe in which law is the basis of morality, ethics and integrities. And our survival and growth depends upon obedience. . . Actually we are existing in a pattern that is so exact that it torments us to death -- on the one hand -- and is our hope and salvation on the other. It is a pattern which is contrary to our pleasure in many ways; and as long as pleasure comes first, the problems we now face will increase.

As long as we associate good with pleasure and evil with discomfort, we are missing the principal facts of our destiny. We must associate good with Truth, and we must associate evil with falsehood. These terms have nothing to do with our comfort or the advancement of our economics or the expansion of our territory.

The universe is an ethical instrument. For those who improve in character, the universe is increasingly benevolent; to those who fail to make such improvement, the universe is increasingly difficult and dangerous. The problem is so simple and so natural and so direct that we have completely overlooked it, and we have not prepared ourselves in education, culture, ethics or religion, to face the simple truth that we are here to live constructively; and no other way is acceptable in Nature. We are here to achieve the greater good for all; and as long as we interpret -- or misinterpret -- this to simply mean the advancement of ourselves at the expense of others, conditions will not get better. . .

We want the good things -- peace and contentment -- but we want them on our own terms; these terms being to do as we please and to spend our lives expanding our possessions at the expense of others; in order that in the end we may come to world peace. This is not possible. The incredible thing is that scholars have not realized this. . . We can see that up to the present time, the whole path of man's development has not brought him closer to peace, contentment, or security -- yet he possesses faculties and powers which can solve problems. Why then has he not solved them? Largely because he has developed a philosophy of life which is not concerned with the solution of basic problems, but rather with a series of conspiracies to advance personal ambition.

As we are in the presence of a crucial period in the history of mankind, we are becoming increasingly critical, more and more inclined to condemn; and we are becoming hysterical; and to a certain degree, we are in a psychological and neurotic panic. Now against this position, man is now taking a more positive point of view:

WHO DO WE THINK WE ARE?

Do we honestly believe that the universe is going to be outwitted by us? Are we going to get very far away from the facts, without being gently and firmly pushed back to the place where we belong? Now the gentleness and firmness get a little less obvious as we become increasingly delinquent. But nature has no intention that humanity shall fail, because man will find his own condition too uncomfortable long before it reaches the point where it could destroy him.

The individual does not enjoy suffering. He does not mind doing the things that cause suffering, but he is very anxious to avoid the consequences -- and he cannot. He is most likely to receive a strong indoctrination of integrity -- not because he wants to be better, but he cannot endure being worse! These situations will mature long before man reaches a point where he could actually perform some disservice against himself which could not be remedied.

We live within a pattern which has as its primary purpose survival. It is only because of this pattern that we can survive, and it is because survival is written into it that we will survive. The only problem that we face is that we are making survival a most unpleasant procedure, whereas by nature and substance it could be quite delightful. We could enjoy living well but we seem to prefer to suffer living poorly. We are not in a position to stand against the universal purpose to the degree that we can actually achieve some final catastrophe. We are far from catastrophe. We are in the midst, however, of evidence that the continuing of present procedures throughout the world will be increasingly painful; and that the Law of Cause and Effect in its operation is no longer concealed behind a network of mysterious interrelated factors. We do something badly today and we pay for it before the day is over. The long mysterious process of leaving mistakes for our descendants seems to have exhausted itself. The time for compensation is now; the time of compensation is the immediate condition that we are setting up.

So here we are, midstream in the midst of trouble, searching for a footing, searching for ways, by means of which we can bring back the essential principles of living. I feel that the period from now to 1980 is going to be tremendously vital and important in man's social and cultural development. . . the failure of the individual to elevate the Golden Rule above the sciences is coming home to man in an almost irresistible immediacy. We are in for a tremendous emphasis on integrities, and confronted with the reorganization, reintegration and redirection of human aspiration. . .

CLIPS, QUOTES & COMMENTS —

MARY AND JOSEPH

"Hey, reverend, there's a couple of hippies in your church!"

It was already dark in the Alaskan afternoon. I had stopped by for some last details before Christmas Eve services. The voice shouting the information sounded apprehensive -- as if caution were crucial. Granted, many people homeless and wandering from place to place, stopped by our church in Seward. But there had been a couple of recent incidents of church vandalizing, and the suspicions were aroused.

I entered the door wondering what kind of request would be made. There had been many over the months, usually with sad and immediate needs. There were no lights as I walked through the darkened church. I could hear no sound. The strelight streaming through the window reflected off the tree tinsel, and below the tree sat two huddled figures: a young man and a young woman -- hardling more than children; dressed in cast off clothing several sizes too large -- pathetic looking in their shabby attire.

Trying to sound festive, I called out, "Merry Christmas and welcome to the church."

They looked up, and in the darkness I could see that they had been crying. "I hope we're no bother. We'll leave if you like."

After I assured them that the church was for people, the young man introduced himself and his young bride. "We were married a week ago in Palmer and came down to Seward looking for work. There's no work here, and we're broke, and things just got to my wife; so we stopped here to straighten ourselves out."

We talked together at some length. They shared that Christ had recently come into their lives to replace an emptiness that had been overwhelming. Drugs, commune living and roaming the country -- nothing had helped. But separately they had found Christ. And in finding Christ they had found each other. Now, together on Christmas Eve, broke and homeless, they paused in the church to renew themselves. They refused an invitation an invitation to spend Christmas Eve with my family. I brought supper to them and there under the lights of the Christmas tree they celebrated together a renewal of hope and love and joy.

As I left the church the neighborly voice called out, "Did you find them Reverend?"

"Yes," I said quietly, "I found them."

"Just a couple of hippies, weren't they?"

"No," I answered, "I think they were Joseph and Mary!"

I was strangely warmed as I thought of that long ago couple who found to place to stay and settled for a stable. And there the Christ was born. For this young couple, they found a church, and Christ was reborn on Christmas Eve. And I walked home, having felt the glow of Bethlehem and sensing again the meaning of the Gift of a Savior born.

IN THE EYE OF THE HURRICANE

"With all the chaos and confusion in this country (Great Britain) and in the world, it is not necessary for you to become a part of it. You can remain in the eye of the hurricane in absolute stillness, with all hell let loose around you, keeping your mind stayed on Me, by raising your consciousness and by keeping it in a raised state, by being ultra positive about life, by seeing only the very best in everything and concentrating on that.

"This is something that each individual will have to do, and no one else can do it for you. The community cannot do it for the community. These are the latter days, the dividing of the two worlds that you have been told will happen and you should be prepared. You should all be prepared. This not mean putting on a pair of blinkers and refusing to recognize what is taking place. It does mean knowing with that deep inner knowledge exactly where your security lies. So many talk about raised consciousness and the New Age and oneness with Me, but they fail completely to live and demonstrate this way of life.

"Now is the time when all shall be revealed, where those who truly know the meaning of oneness with all life and live and demonstrate it, will find that they are indeed in the eye of the hurricane, that nothing will be able to touch them no matter what is going on all around. You can tell Peter that there is no need to store food or fuel, that there is enough for everyone so long as they know where their security lies and have a consciousness of My limitless abundance. Let not what you have been taught be just words -- live and demonstrate them so that all may see that they live and move and have their being in Me, that My promises are not vain promises. 'Where your heart is, there shall your treasure be also.' 'A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee.' Why? Because your faith and trust are in Me and in Me alone."

This Masterly view of the World Situation was channeled through Elixir (Mrs. Peter Caddy), Jan. 30, 1974 and was published in the April 1974 edition of "Findhorn News", the Findhorn Foundation, The Park, Findhorn Bay, Forres, Moray, Scotland. Donation.

We offer a detailed description and charting of the "dividing of the two worlds" in our UFO talk, "Flying Saucers and America's Destiny". Due to demand it is out of print at the moment but should be available again in March 1975. $2.00 a copy.

PETER HURKOS' EARTH QUAKE PROPHECY FOR 1975

By this time in 1976 we should know if Peter Hurkos is a prophet with honor. The Dutch psychic, you will remember, was introduced to America by Dr. Andrija Puharich in the 1950s. In the November 1974 "Saga" magazine, Ann Slate writes an interview, "The Amazing UFO Discoveries Of Peter Hurkos". As UFO material, the interview is well worth reading and filing; but of immediate interest is this prophecy made by the psychic in between sessions of psychometrizing UFO photos and related material.

"Those people coming here in big earthquake that California will get (November 1975 to February 1976). The time is not right yet. If they came now, we'd either put them in jail or we'd ask them where they came from and then put them in the mental hospital. The government knows damn well there are flying objects. . . but the government doesn't know where they come from. . . The earthquake is going to play a big part in this with flying objects -- an earthquake which we ourselves create by underground explosions and taking out all of the oil from deep in the ground."

The illustration is from current advertising for the newest Hollywood colossal catastrophe spectacle, which dramatizes the destruction of Los Angeles by a great earthquake.

In the Saga-Slate interview Hurkos makes the interesting observation that Bigfoot and Sasquatch, the smelly, frightening human monsters of fleeting and fleeing appearance are actually projections or materializations from a Flying Saucer group. The reason no remains or skeletons of these elemental human types are ever found is the same reason UFO remains are never found, they dissolve quickly into powder or dust. Such sub-human types, almost mindless, would be more easily subjected to telepathic control than educated humans who have developed mental powers of their own, and also have a conscience which makes some distinction between right and wrong.

GEORGE VAN TASSEL'S "INTEGRATRON" AND RELATED TOPICS

We had a nice Christmas Holidays visit with George and Alice Dashiell, in Southern California to attend the annual meeting of Van Tassel's College of Universal Knowledge at Giant Rock. We were told that George is selling the airport at the Rock so he can concentrate full time on the completion of the Integratron on his own property nearby. George also told the assembled group that the U.S. government is sponsoring the production of 16 documentary films on Flying Saucer contactees like himself, and the segment dramatizing his UFO experience there at Giant Rock has already been filmed.

This is the first significant change in the "silence policy" on Flying Saucers since the policy was set in 1947 by our first Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal. As a Wall Street banker and devout Irish-American Catholic, Forrestal represented the conservative conglomerate of Military-Industrial-Religious oligarchies which runs this country from behind the scenes, call it MIRO.

Invasion of the air space over the United States by Flying Saucers in 1947 represented a threat to these honored institutions then, and it still does. The policy of cover-up could work then because it coincided with the vast, conservative inertia of the public mind. The majority didn't want to believe in Visitors or Invaders from outer space because it was too disturbing. In economics the radical new source of power demonstrated by the UFOs was a threat to the great energy cartels of oil and electricity. In politics the sovereignty of nations was threatened by a superior science and culture from off the planet. In religion the devout were faced with the terrifying thought that God and "His only begotten Son" might not be the exclusive property of this planet, and their religion, after all!

To keep the lid on, Flying Saucer contactees and believers must be discredited; so character assassination became an important part of that "silence policy". One of the chief "assassins" was J. Wafflemouth Highneck. For 25 years this pseudo-scientist was on the Air Force payroll as a propagandist, alleging that all contactees and Flying Saucer believers were either sincerely deluded fools or liars. The policy line then was that Flying Saucers weren't real so they couldn't be a threat to our honored institutions. But incredible sightings by credible people continued, became so numerous, that Highneck, as an Air Force propagandist completely lost his credibility; so he was conspicuously dropped from the Air Force payroll. But, does he still get government financing for his activities through research grants to his department of his university? More than likely.

Nevertheless, this signaled a coming change in Flying Saucer policy; for Highneck suddenly decided that UFOs were worthy of scientific investigation after all. This was a couple of years ago; so now character assassination has been dropped as official policy. Van says that documentation of his experience, and those of other contactees, is being treated straight, as it happened, without negative editorial bias except for one thing -- and this is the change in policy! Flying Saucers are now considered to be real and to be a menace to our honored institutions. NO Visitors or Invaders from outer space are to be welcomed, regardless of who they are or where they come from.

ALARMING UFO SIGHTINGS NEED INVESTIGATION

That was the attitude of President Gerald Ford when he was Congressman Ford of the Fifth District in Michigan in April 1966. That was the month when there was a rash of well-publicized, well documented sightings of UFOs in southern Michigan, and Professor Highneck made himself famous, or infamous, for labeling them Swamp Gas! Ford wasn't satisfied with this Air Force gobbledegook and said so publicly. Maybe he got some angry letters from his constituents. Anyhow, Saucer researcher Laura Mundo of Detroit wrote him a letter thanking him for saying publicly that Flying Saucers were real, real enough to be investigated; she received this reply from the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives:

"Dear Ms. Mundo: Thank you for your recent communication endorsing my proposal that Congress investigate the rash of reported sightings of unidentified flying objects in southern Michigan and in other parts of the country.

"It is proper for the Federal government to look into a matter which is causing alarm to the people of our nation as these sightings have, and it is for this reason that I have called for the investigation.

"Such an inquiry is necessary and wholesome because of the incidents that have occurred and I assure you that I will continue to press for this investigation. I want you to know that your specific comments were helpful to me in this respect, and that your remarks will not go unheeded. I am aware of other reports such as the UFO Evidence which poses questions that, like the most recent sightings, cannot be answered by a few 'pat' solutions." Signed Gerald R. Ford, M.C. (Member of Congress).

Now Mr. Ford is in the White House as leader of the nation and the suggested change in Flying Saucer policy has become a fact, though it seems likely that the documentary film project described by George Van Tassel was launched long before Ford was appointed Vice President by Nixon in August 1974

HOW LONG WILL FORD REMAIN IN OFFICE?

Not long, according to the prophets! Not even to the end of his appointed term in 1976. One of the better known seers, nationally, is Bernadene Villanueva. In the "Here and Now" journal of Uni-Com Foundation for December 1974, she predicts: "I see a dark cloud over President Ford which will prevent him from finishing out his term in the White House. Until then he will continue to reap the harvest of animosity and pressures from an unhappy nation -- the sad harvest of Richard Nixon's mistakes which will prevent him from properly functioning in office. We will hear a recurrence of Betty Ford's serious problem and her return to the hospital."

A DIFFERENT POINT OF VIEW, BUT THE SAME RESULT

In Washington, D.C. a LA "Times" staff writer asked Martha Mitchell, "Do you see any hopeful signs for 1975? If so, what?"

To which the wife of the former Attorney General replied: "Well, looking into my crystal ball, I can see very little good until we have some leaders in Washington. We're still sitting on the economy -- verbally denouncing it, but doing little else. The government's been the same as it's been for the last few years. Maybe one good thing will be that Mr. Ford will resign and Mr. Rockefeller will take over." (Los Angeles "Times", Dec. 29, 1974)

WHEN WILL IT HAPPEN?

Before he has finished a year in office. We have this prediction from Chicago prophet Irene Hughes: "The moment that Ford became president, I said, Mr. Ford will never be elected president in 1976, and that by the end of June of 1975 he will be in such grave difficulties due to economic problems in this nation, and due to the international problems, that he will have thoughts in his mind to resign." (Quoted from "Infinity Newsletter" for October 1974, sent in by Ansley Hill.)

AN ASTROLOGER SAYS SOONER

In a feature article in the Los Angeles "Times", Jan. 15, 1975, "Astrology, Skies Are The Limit" by David Larsen, he refers to "the bearded Hussein Chimy of Cairo, Egypt who successfully forecast Richard M. Nixon's resignation as President, the deaths of former presidents Gamal Abdul Nasser of Egypt and Charles de Gaulle of France, and the dates and victors of the last two Arab-Israel wars. 'Gerald Ford is a good man but he doesn't like to work,' the astrologer said recently, 'Probably in March or April of 1975, Rockefeller will continue as President.'"

Was this all planned in advance, with the script written before Nixon resigned his office? Suppose the game of Presidential musical chairs was planned this way, Congressman Ford was offered the Vice Presidency on three conditions: first that he fully pardon Nixon for all crimes committed in office as soon as he himself was in office; second that he appoint Nelson Rockefeller as his Vice President; and third that he resign from office well before the end of the term. This would put Rockefeller in the commanding position of being able to campaign for election from the White House.

Rockefeller, if anything, has even more ambition than Nixon; and he has more finesse. Also, he wants to make it on his own. How he would love to roll up an even larger popular vote than Nixon did in 1972, and from the same position, as President-in-office!

Nixon had an administrative staff of 2000 people. One quarter of them were devoted to public relations, polishing the boss's image. What a masterful job they did for him is obvious when one compares the public image of 1972 with the real Nixon revealed on the White House tapes! Rockefeller already has his own PR staff. When he adds to that what is already available as White House staff the blizzard of public relations puffery coming from Washington in the 1976 campaign will be beyond belief!

However, Rockefeller will be bucking the natural political heart beat of the United States. This is the eight-year, equilibrating rhythm which put Republican Eisenhower in the White House in 1952, put Democrat Kennedy there in 1960, and put Republican Nixon there in 1968. It will be interesting to see if Rockefeller, with all his personal power and wealth, can overcome that tide and turn it to his advantage.

THE GASOLINE WAR AGAINST US

"Within 60 to 90 days the oil industry will once again attempt to victimize Americans by creating gasoline and oil shortages in an attempt to raise prices." That's another prophecy by Bernadene Villanueva. But this may not be necessary with their man Ford in the White House. The Romans got Bread & Circuses; we get income tax rebates; and the major oil producers get favoring taxes and controlled price rises which may cost each one of us another two or three hundred dollars a year, indefinitely; or until there is a political change of major magnitude in Washington.

Any simple invention which would increase automobile gasoline mileage by 30 or 40% would so decrease the demand for gasoline as to immediately break the stranglehold of the Arabian oil cartel on us. But the major oil producers already have overproduction of gasoline here in the United States; any significant cut in consumption would be disastrous to them. Consider this LA "Times" story from Washington, Dec. 15, 1974: "U.S. efforts to hold down energy consumption may seem soft to date, but they are having a very hard effect on oil industry plans for new refineries. Company after company is cancelling or postponing indefinitely plans for refinery expansion. The cutback in new facilities has been so pronounced that any return to normal growth in fuel use would come at the expense of massive dependence on foreign refineries. . . The cutbacks may also head off what might have been a surplus in petroleum products that could have driven down prices consumers have to pay. . . " And of course the oil majors have massive overseas investments in wells and refineries. Naturally, they want to get their money out of this foreign oil business. This has priority over increasing domestic production so we can become independent of foreign oil.

"OIL FIRMS MAY BE WITHHOLDING OFFSHORE PRODUCTION"

Another proof of Bernadene's prediction is the above headline story in the LA "Times", Dec. 12, 1974: "Mayor Tom Bradley charged Wednesday that oil companies may be withholding the production of oil from offshore leases in a possible attempt to increase profits. In a letter to Sen John V. Tunney (D-Calif) asking for a thorough investigation by the General Accounting Office, Bradley said if the charge proves true there would be no need for further offshore leasing in such areas as Southern California. The issue of shut-in wells, particularly in the Gulf of Mexico, where the vast bulk of offshore oil production takes place, has been raised several times over the last few months. . . ."

But nothing will come of it. The oil majors have too many friends in the White House and in Congress. One way or another the price of heating oil and gasoline will be forced upward.

LA FORCE GAS-SAVING ENGINE CONDEMNED BY EPA

Proof of major oil company political control was in the Associated Press story from Washington, Dec. 14, 1974: "The Environmental Protection Agency Friday discounted contentions that the experimental 'La Force' automobile engine could solve the nation's fuel shortage and air pollution problems. 'The La Force car that has received so much attention in the past few weeks is neither a new nor important development,' said Dr. Eric O. Stork, deputy assistant administrator of the EPA. Stork reviewed the EPA's tests of the new engine and told the Senate Commerce Committee, 'It does live up to the very large claims made for it by its developers and promoters.' Stork said the engine, developed by Robert and Edward La Force of Richmond, Vt., did not achieve radically better fuel economy without significant loss of horsepower.

"He also discounted contentions that the engine eliminated the need for antipollution devices, saying it produced much higher emissions of unburned hydrocarbons and carbon dioxide than a conventional engine. Stork dismissed as 'unscientific doubletalk' the contention that the La Force engine uses all of the gasoline supplied it through more complete combustion."

These statements by Stork are all lies, of course. He's not a scientist but a government propagandist in the same general category as the Air Force's J. Waffle-mouth Highneck, or the AMA's Dr. Stare. Mrs. Crabb and I watched the public testing of the La Force modified engine in a standard small sedan at a racetrack in the east. It was on television, NBC's evening news, seen by millions. La Force told us viewers that one quart out of every gallon of gasoline goes out the tailpipe of the car, unburned. This raw gasoline is the basis of our air pollution. His solution to pollution was to recycle that exhaust through the engine again, but it took a dozen years or more^{to} work out the mechanical problems. A similar sedan with a standard, unmodified engine was used for comparison. Each car was supplied with one gallon of gasoline only. The control car came to a stop after 17 miles of driving, but the La Force car went on, and on, and on, and on for 30 miles before coming to a stop! And of course it's exhaust was clean because it was burning up almost all of that gallon of gas.

When the news item was over I said to Mrs. Crabb, "The hatchet men of the oil majors will never let that invention get on the market!" Sure enough, a couple of weeks later there was the preceding news item from Washington in the LA "Times". The law setting up the Environmental Protection Agency has a provision stating that there can be no modification of automobile carburetors without EPA approval. Violators, if caught, are subject to fine and imprisonment. With this hammerlock on invention the EPA can guarantee the oil majors continued high gasoline consumption and air pollution for the public.

"THE CLUE TO THE PRESENT PROBLEM OF EVIL"

In this Space Age students of the Mysteries "must broaden their concept as to the purpose of evil and the place the evil forces play in the general scheme". We are quoting the Master D.K. from page 949 of "A Treatise On Cosmic Fire", where He is talking about mankind's Dweller On The Threshold. In our opinion, this astral reservoir of low human desire is the source of inspiration from which the leaders of the major oil companies draw their power.

But the guidance for this planetary evil comes from outer space, from other constellations in the Zodiac, according to D.K., one from the region of the Little Dipper and the other from the Pleiades. He speaks of "those representatives of what may be called 'cosmic evil' who. . . assume stupendous responsibilities, make possible the secondary vitalisation of the thought form (the Dweller on the Threshold) and produce conditions of such dire description that under Law rapid crystallization supervenes, and ultimate destruction becomes possible. . . "

When I first read this in 1965 it was difficult to understand; but now, in 1975 "conditions of dire description" are producing "rapid crystallization" of our society. The built in evils of our honored institutions are becoming stronger and more obvious every day; so locked-in are our leaders in their greed for profit that solution to problems become impossible. The problems mount until the suffering masses, under guidance from the Elemental Gods from outer space, rise up and destroy the institutions.

"THE SACKING OF WASHINGTON, D.C."

We turn to another prophet, the Georgia seer, "Doc" Anderson. Jean Orsolano sends in this appropriate quote from his 1970 book, page 144: "The death convulsions of our capital city, as we know it, will come on a warm summer night during a large demonstration in Washington! A half-million people will travel to that city to protest the policies of the government./ The mob will suddenly become furious with national leaders. Ugliness will replace peaceful petition. This gigantic crowd will get out of control, looting, burning, sacking the city. The President and important Government officials will flee for their lives. . . a helicopter crash will kill the Secretary of Defense and his aides. . . the Library of Congress will be sacked and burned. . . FBI files will be destroyed. . . Congressional leaders will hide in basements, fearing for their lives . . . It will require several days for the Armed Forces to recapture our capital from this bloodthirsty mob, and thousands of lives will pay the price. The time? Near the end of this decade. . . which will toll the final hours of this nation's capital. . . this community appears to have been cursed. . . "

Washington is cursed, all right, by the men of power who use the capital to perpetuate their rule and to line their pockets, and Master Law says it is the "stupendous responsibility" of the Gods of outer space to accelerate the crystallization of evil in these latter days and then to shatter it, through the agency of human rebellion. The Dweller on the Threshold over Washington, D.C. must be destroyed if the nation is to live.

"A NEW CAPITAL"

Men of vision have foreseen the necessity for this change. Plans have been laid, on the Inner Planes if not on the physical. "Doc" Anderson's vision concludes with this note of progress: "Even before the sacking of Washington, D.C. there will be plans to create a new capital city in the Plains states (Wichita, Kansas and surrounding counties). . . underground quarters. Washington will be abandoned by 1981, and the Government will be moved to the newly constructed city. . . "

GENERAL McARTHUR, ANOTHER MAN OF VISION

"Thank you, both of you, for your continued reporting of the usual and unusual. Seems Gen. McArthur was credited with the remark that the next great disturbance would be largely fought in the sky around earth and humans might have only a small part in the conflict. Is this correct?"

Yes, humans are pawns in a struggle for control of the planet. Figure on at least three major groupings: The Powers, Thrones and Principalities on the surface of the earth, the Invaders who need a new planetary home and think the earth is suitable, and the Guardians whose job it is to see that the evolutionary plan for mankind is carried out.

"Also, haven't heard lately about the City Four Square appoaching earth, anything on this?"

If you take it literally, no; but as an allegory, yes. You cant build sound, new structure on rotting timbers; and the rot in our honored institutions is only now becoming painfully obvious to millions -- Watergate and the present CIA and FBI investigations, for instance. We'll have to purge our system of evil before the City Foursquare can manifest on the physical plane.

"On Healing. What ever became of the Homeopathic system of treatment? I understand it survives in Europe. At the present rate of cost we will be busy heating up 'Grandma's Remedies' and many do already."

Homeopathic remedies are still very much available at certain drugstores in the major cities and at health food stores, and doctors with homeopathic training are prescribing them -- graduates of Hahnemann's in Philadelphia, for instance. They just haven't been popular for years as the fickle public chases after the newer fads in medicine. Few people really want a cure. They just want an escape from present pain, so they can go on indulging their vices unhindered.

"Are the Forces behind the scene, behind Uri Geller, spreading out since Tibet was dismembered?"

Dont confuse the priesthoods, Ray. The Brahmins of India, with their false God, Kabalactes, are quite a separate Power or Principality from the Buddhist Lamas of Tibet with their false Buddha, Ennochissa. Judging from Dr. Puharich's own statements in his book, "Uri", the Saucer phenomena created for their benefit are projections of Brahmin priests of the Lower Astral plane. When Puharich brought Geller to the United States to demonstrate his magickal powers, this was an invasion of the Principality of Looeamong, the false Christ. It wasn't long before government agents were slandering Geller. This was followed by a vicious attack in "Time" magazine, an Establishment mouthpiece. Whereas there has been an Unholy Alliance between Looeamong and Ennochissa since before World War I; so we have Tibetan Lamas moving and teaching among us unhindered.

In his 1951 book "Agharta", Sumgma Red Lama Ernst Dickhoff lists these Lamaseries: His own, Dordjelutru Lamasery, New York; The International Buddhist Mission, Thaton, Burma; The Maitreya Society, Darjeeling, India; The Spiritual University, Bogota, Columbia; Seminario Rosa Cruz Maitreya del Tahuantisuya, Quito, Ecuador; and still more are in Urumchi, Sin Kiang; Bombay; Ceylon; Buitenzorg, Java; Geneva, Switerland and Los Angeles, California. But there is another major Principality to be reckoned with in evaluating Flying Saucer phenomena, the Moslems or Mohammedans, with their false Mohammed, Thoth-Gabriel.

"At the present rate, radioactive air, food and water, is it possible that these will become the method to introduce Humanity to the vibrations of the emerging influence of the newest sector of Space? Just wondering. If so, shortly a new type human should be immune to the radioactivity. The air waves are full in every direction. Just imagine if all radio, TV and other assorted energies were shut off. Could the race of man stand the silence? Awaiting your next Journal."

R.D., Clarence, Iowa

Yup, radioactive air, food and water are introducing us to the new sector of space into which the solar system is moving. In the Vela Sector System given to George Van Tassel by his UFO contacts. We are in the Arc of Cosmo, the "cusp" between the huge space vortexes of Contri and Blaau, one pointing upward and the other downward. A little illustration should help, drawing on the one in Oahspe, page 603, plate 71 -- also page 19 of our talk, "Flying Saucers and America's Destiny". ($2.00)

Contri revolves in a counter-clockwise direction. This gave mankind the negative, materialistic nature characteristic of the Piscean Age. Blaau revolves in a clockwise direction, a new force guaranteeing an almost unbelievable, positive, spiritual character to mankind in the Aquarian Age. According to Oahspe the ideal number of years for crossing one of these Zodiacal vortexes is 3000, but actual performance may vary considerably from the norm.

TUNE UP YOUR VIBES VOLUNTARILY!

Or be tuned up forcefully! It is true we are moving in an ever increasing electronic fog of radiant energies. They only increase the pressure for change, for a new man, a new woman. Even more important is the radiant energy coming from the Occult Hierarchy of the Masters who run the planet. D.K. describes it this way in the Alice Bailey book, "The Destiny of Nations":

"A large number of seventh ray egos or souls and also men and women of seventh ray personalities are coming into incarnation now, and to them is committed the task of organising the activities of the new era and of ending the old methods of life and the old crystallized attitudes to life, to death, to leisure and to the population. The result of the increasing flow of seventh ray energy plus the decreasing influence of the sixth ray -- which shows itself as a pronounced crystallization of the standardised and accepted forms of belief, religious, social and philosophic -- is to throw millions of people who do not respond to either influence through egoic or personality relation, into a state of bewilderment. They feel entirely lost, are gripped by the idea that life holds for them no desirable future, all that they have learnt to cherish and to hold dear is rapidly failing."

Here is a key to the Flying Saucer contactee, a man or woman with seventh ray soul or personality, or who is open to seventh ray influence. Such people may outwardly have absolutely nothing in common -- which makes it so difficult to construct a "profile" of the contactee -- at the physical level.

THE FIFTH DIMENSION

We dont know for sure what the typical Aquarian Ager will look like after the big change, with a much enlarged brain capacity and a body built to respond positively to atomic and other radiation, but English occultist Vera Stanley Alder has outlined some of the interesting possibilities in her book, "The Fifth Dimension", a 220-page paperback published by Samuel Weiser, Inc., New York at $2.75 a copy. Our American edition is from the third printing, 1971. The first English edition was published in 1940.

MISS ALDER

Here's a sample on The Future of Government, page 120: "A central world committee will so organize agricultural coordination that the grower of food will be henceforward the least-to-be-pitied mortal instead of, as now, perhaps the most. In view of the resources accumulating in government coffers people with revolutionary ideas about the distribution of money will gain a hearing. Sooner or later one country will try out a new system altogether, in which every citizen is subsidised by the state from the time of birth and entitled henceforth to the bare necessities of life. It may be found more convenient to work the system without money, using instead ration cards for food, rent, clothing and medical supervision, and education,

"In the country where this system is first tried out certain results will soon become evident. A generation brought up without fear and dread of the future, and with an assurance of the necessities of life, will show an amazing improvement in health, and a growing reserve of vitality and energy. This will enjoy a natural outlet as initiative and creativeness.

"People will hardly know at first what to do with this vital personal energy. They will soon become incapable of sitting still to be spoon-fed with entertainment, and with the spectacle of other people doing things, as in sport, television, etc. New psychological problems of this character will have to be tackled by the government. People will clamour to learn and to know and to do. Their artistic senses will come to life, arousing a love of nature, of handicraft, and of their own possibilities for beauty in physique and in living. Hospitals and asylums will empty, as colleges, farms and model towns fill up. Coming inventions will do their share to change living conditions considerably. . .

AQUARIAN AGE AMUSEMENTS --

". . . The hope of setting up communications with life outside the earth's radius will become an ever-growing desire. . . No instruments or machines will avail them. They will finally realise, after many generations have been practising various forms of mind-control, that if a group of people could project their minds together as one mind to a particular planet they wish to contact, the channel formed would be strong enough to act as a 'television', allowing them to gain admittance by mental wireless. . . This 'magic' of the future will become so absorbing and dangerous a game that many will unfortunately lose their minds over it, thus adding to the subtle mental diseases of the day. Like spiritualism, this practice will be bitterly accused because the wrong people are able to take part in it. . . "

-- CAN BE DANGEROUS IN THE PISCEAN AGE

"Mrs. Crabb, do you by any chance know of an effective banishing ritual for the disposing of obsessing thoughts and elementals? I believe I may have picked these up earlier in the year when I left myself wide open for astral flights, which I have since ceased to do as they are often rather unnerving. Also on awaking I would break out in uncontrollable shivers. I believe I still carry the scars, one on the chest and one on each shoulder blade. The one on the left is practically gone, whereas that on my chest and right shoulder, though I believe they are going down now and again, just as quickly flare up. Also of late I haven't been myself, having difficulty concentrating, imagine I am hearing voices. These very often come out with the most suggestive, goading, sinister remarks. This is the direct opposite of the real me. I am having difficulty now in expressing emotion, which is something I have never had trouble with before. Can you also explain the reason behind my being confronted with three explosions, none of which could be accounted for, occurring in areas exposed to heavy electrical currents. Luckily these have stopped now, but in the process unnerved me sufficiently that I haven't been the same since. Can you offer any assistance?"

R.A.F., Auckland, New Zealand

Well, as we've said before, the border between the two worlds is heavily patrolled, by good guys and bad guys; and if you cross, without the proper signs and passwords, self-appointed authorities on the "other side" can be very nasty; and they're always looking for victims who can be turned into agents, hypnotically programmed to do their bidding. Now that you've plugged into their communications system, no doubt the evil suggestions will continue to come -- until you can break the connection with ritual magick -- IF they will allow you enough energy and concentration to perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram effectively. A copy of our "Retro Me, the Art of Psychic Self-Defense" is on its way by air. The scars indicate you've been operated on as part of the programming. The explosions were warnings to stop that particular line of research. They probably saved your life. We'll put in a call for astral police.

HELP! SHIP 60 COPIES OF "RETRO ME" AS SOON AS POSSIBLE!

"I must write you about the reason for so many shortly. It has to deal with conditioned entities being sent against a Scientology group which has broken away from the organization in disillusionment. The Guardians of the Scientology organization are involved in this type of activity against any former members who turn against them. Will keep you informed."

Vienna Clinics Books, Alberta, Canada

Armageddon is on. The pace of the war for the control of men's minds is speeding up, and the list of battle casualties grows also. One of the generals in the war is L. Ron Hubbard, a prize pupil of the English magician, Aleister Crowley. The basic ideas for Dianetics and Scientology were derived from Crowley's "Equinox" -- or so we were told by a CIA agent in Los Angeles many years ago. You can create an "eye" in the hurricane of conflicting forces with a magical ring of geometrical figures of the kind described and illustrated in "Retro Me", 18 pages. 50¢
