THE JOURNAL OF BORDERLAND RESEARCH

BSRF No. 1 Published by Borderland Sciences Research Foundation, PO Box 549, Vista, California 92083 USA. Edited by the Director, Riley Hansard Crabb, MsD.

The Journal is published six issues a year with the assistance of the Associates, at the Director's home, 1103 Bobolink Drive, Vista. It is printed, 36 pages an issue. The Foundation is incorporated under California law, May 21, 1951, #254263, and has been in continuous existence since then. Correspondence is addressed to the PO Box. The Journal is included in the Foundation membership of $12.00 a year, domestic. Foreign membership/subscriptions are now $15.00. Single copies and back issues of the Journal are $2.50. A donation of $12 domestic or $15 foreign will also bring the Journal to those who don't care to join BSRF. The Director's wife, Mrs. Judith Crabb, is office manager and Secretary-Treasurer.

PURPOSES OF BSRF: This is a non-profit organization of people who take an active interest in unusual happenings along the borderland between the visible and invisible worlds. In the words of the late Meade Layne, founder and director of BSRF from 1946 to 1959: "BSRA publications are scientific in approach but employ few technical expressions. They deal with significant phenomena which orthodox science cannot or will not investigate. For example: The Fortean falls of objects from the sky. Teleportation, Radiesthesia, PK Effects, Underground Races, Mysterious Disappearances, Occult and Psychic Phenomena, Photography of the Invisible, Nature of the Ethers and the problem of the Aeroforms (Flying Saucers). In 1946 BSRA obtained an interpretation of the phenomena which has come to be known as the Etheric or 4-D interpretation; it has not been radically altered since that time. This continues to be the only explanation of the UFOs which makes good science, sound metaphysics and common sense."

The chief present concern of the Foundation is to make this kind of unusual information available as a public service at reasonable cost. Headquarters acts as a receiving, coordinating and distributing center. An important part of the Director's work is to give recognition, understanding and encouragement to people who are having unusual experiences of the borderland type and/or are conducting research in any of the above fields. For consultation on borderland problems or for Spiritual healing through prayer, write or phone 619-724-2043 for help or for an appointment. Donations and bequests toward Foundation research programs and expenses are welcome.

The 35-page list of BSRF publications is available from Headquarters for $2.00 in money, check or stamps. This includes brochures on borderland subjects, tape recordings of Crabb's lectures and of members of the Inner Circle, talking through trance-medium Mark Probert. A WAY TO PEACE, THROUGH ELF WAVES

Transcribed by Elaine Peick From a Talk Given By Dr. Andrija Puharich at the Understanding Convention at Astara, Upland, California, Nov. 6, 1982

Dr. Andrija Puharich was born in the slums of Chicago, Illinois. He learned about war there, as there were many ethnic groups in his area, and boys had to fight their way through them, frequently. As a teen-ager he delivered milk for Borden's Dairy; and, as a substitute for the regular milkman during his vacation, he had to quickly learn where to put the milk, where the mean dogs were, etc. On one occasion he was challenged by a vicious dog. Realizing he had to do something to protect himself, he sent out feelings of calmness and peace to the dog, which responded to the energy and stopped the attack. From then on, on his milk route, Puharich dealt with problem dogs in this manner, and it worked.

He was fascinated with the results of using his mental energy on attacking dogs and resolved to identify the force behind it. He entered medical school, still looking for this man-dog relationship. He got his degree in Medicine, but decided he wanted to go into research in the field of the mind. He studied under Dr. A.C. Ivy (the one who later developed Trebiozen) with whom he had to prove everything on a scientific basis. He was required to do experiments with dogs to obtain his degree of PhD in Physiology.

It was about this time that friends introduced him to the Alice Bailey books, including the one on "Telepathy". After reading that he decided to give himself two years to prove to himself that he could communicate directly with another mind. He wanted to have absolute proof.

To obtain this he built two copper rooms, to shield out any form of electricity from going through the walls. Such rooms are called Faraday Cages. He became acquainted with the well known medium, Eileen Garrett. She volunteered to become a subject for telepathy experiments at his laboratory in Maine, originally a barn, donated by an interested friend. Financing was arranged and research began on sending messages between the two Cages, with a subject in each. Dr. Puharich proved that information could be exchanged in this way with no electrical linkage between the rooms, with both telepathy and clairvoyance. He also proved that a good clairvoyant could look out into space and predict a cosmic pulse before it hit one of his recording instruments -- which is precognition!

This research went on between 1950 and 1955. He still wanted to know what was really happening inside the brain. Then came the opportunity to work with the Dutch psychic, Peter Hurkos. It was a fall from a ladder while painting a house that suddenly opened up Hurkos' psychic abilities -- a violent blow on the head. Among other things he could psychometrize a picture inside a sealed envelope. Hooked up to electronic metering equipment Puharich found that when Hurkos was most successful -- in locating missing people, for instance -- his brain produced an ELF wave of 8 Hertz (cycles per second).

CONSCIOUS CONTROL IS THE GOAL

Continuing his experiments Dr. Puharich had the opportunity to work with a Yogi in 1956. Here he found a subject who could consciously control his brain waves, deliberately shifting himself from one level of consciousness to another. From this Andrija came to realize that people could be trained, with bio-feedback, to produce the 8 Hertz and other ELF waves consciously.

In 1962 his research shifted to psycho-kinesis when heard of Arigo in Brazil. There he saw this psychic surgeon shove a knife into the eye of a patient, with no pre-preparation of any kind, and operate -- with no pain to the patient!-- removing cataracts. Puharich made several visits to Brazil to research Arigo. While doing his healing work Arigo's brain, too, produced that tell-tale 8 Hertz wave.

It was in the early 1960s also that Puharich met with his friend, Aldous Huxley, in Tecate, Mexico. There Huxley's wife, Laura, was doing psychic healing. She would make magnetic passes over a woman and heal her of her heart trouble. These passes produced huge waves or vibrations of eight cycles per second in the patient, and Andrija found that Laura's brain rate was also 8 Hertz. One brain could entrain another! At last Dr. Puharich had found the answer to his long quest. He now knew that if his brain sent out a certain energy the dog would receive it and be entrained by his signal. This is what had happened between the dog and him on his milk route as a young man.

On July 4, 1976 the Soviet Union unleashed a new weapon on the world. Nikola Tesla had shown in 1901 that a person could transmit power across the earth through the ground. The Russians were emitting an 11 Hertz signal (cycles per second) across the world. This powerful signal upset radio communications everywhere. Many nations protested. The U.S. Air Force identified 5 different frequencies in this compound harmonic the Russians were sending through the earth and the atmosphere. The intention was to affect a change of consciousness in mankind. The Extreme Low Frequency waves will penetrate anything and everything, the specially shielded Faraday cage, the ocean. Nothing stops or weakens these signals.

Dr. Puharich and Robert Beck designed receiving equipment which could measure these waves and their effects on the human brain. Their experiments proved that a signal of 6 Hertz easily penetrated the copper walls of a Faraday cage. So could a rate of 6.66 -- one of the rates being used by the Russians. This caused depression. 7.83 Hertz could make a person feel good. This is the so-called Schumann Resonance, the earth's pulse rate. 10.80 Hertz could cause riotous behavior.

As far as he could determine, the Soviets never sent out a signal in the 8 Hertz range that would be beneficial to people.

A MESSENGER WITH UNWELCOME NEWS

When Dr. Puharich presented this information to certain U.S. Military leaders they would not believe him! He then made up a secret report and had it hand delivered to President Carter, to the head of the French Intelligence Service, to Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, and to certain dignitaries of other Western nations. Heavy action was then taken by our government to shut him up. His home at Ossining, New York, containing the results of much of his research work, was burned to the ground. He fled for his life to Mexico. From there he continued to monitor the Russian ELF wave signals and the higher harmonics in the Megahertz range (5.340 Mh)

Through his Washington contacts a group meeting was arranged with the CIA. A showdown ensued, an agreement reached, since then no trouble with the CIA -- except for the publication of his books! The government program is now called the ELF (for Extreme Low Frequency) and the Navy set up a research program on it, two years late! Puharich's secret report was expanded into a book, under contract to Dell publishing company, but publication has been blocked for the past four years, meanwhile the Russian attack goes on, unknown to the general public.

Whole populations can be controlled by ELF waves. Intensive research on such "behavior modification" is now being conducted by the United States government, to find out just what such waves do to people. This electro-magnetic research is similar to the secret drug experiments conducted on the unsuspecting populace in the 1950s. Dr. Puharich did identify one ELF wave as a cancer-causing agent in mice.

THE POSITIVE SIDE TO THE STORY

The 8 Hertz wave is an aid to concentration and can be reproduced in others for beneficial results. To prove that this could be done Dr. Puharich took the young Israelite, Uri Geller, to 22 universities to demonstrate this power to the academic world. As a result of Geller's demonstration of the metal-bending power of the mind on British TV in November 1974, hundreds of English men and women, and children too, were encouraged to demonstrate this power to themselves and friends. Now metal-bending parties are becoming popular in the United States, and some are finding that this 8 Hertz wave can also be used to heal. Army and Navy experiments proved that many could develop this power and demonstrate it convincingly with only two hours of training.

Now, how can this work for peace? The sun radiates the same spread of ELF waves as the Russians, and others besides. It takes three days for these energies to reach the earth, filtering through the atmosphere, which is a cavity resonator of 7.83 Hertz between the ionosphere and the earth's surface. We are constantly bathed in these magnetic waves from the sun. Our bodies are 67% hydrogen, which oscillates at 8 Hertz as the plants wave in the sea. The source of the magnetic waves of the sun is hydrogen, too. When you get your brain oscillating at 8 Hertz, you are tuned in to and can communicate with the sun. 8 Hertz waves can be used in meditation.

THE MIND-OVER-MATTER RATE, A STRATEGIC WEAPON

One country, not ours, has learned that directed meditation can be used to bring down missiles from the sky. Increase the rate to 11 Hertz and one can bring on a storm. The resonating rate of the core of the earth is 6 Hertz. Generate this signal properly and one can bring on an earthquake, as the Soviets proved with earthquakes they caused in Iran and China, according to the monitoring done by Dr. Puharich. But he assured his audience at Astara, "We can do with our minds what the Soviets are doing with mechanical equipment! One hundred people, with synchronized thinking, can do incredible things. The Kahunas of Hawaii, or the Indian Rain Dancers, channeling this energy from their brains."

To generate 8 Hertz waves in the brain one must get rid of all body noise --- aches, itches, every disturbance. "Imagine that you are looking at a circle of light in your mind. This circle leads into a tunnel of light. Imagine you are travelling to the Sun and entering it. It is not hot and there are Beings there. When you have entered the Sun you have locked onto great power. Using this energy in a group -- one cant do it alone -- with mutual reinforcement, aligned, one could dematerialize nuclear bombs. Things can be made to disappear. This is the way to peace.

THERE IS NO DOCTRINE OR RELIGIOUS CREED INVOLVED

"There must be absolute centerdness to oscillate our brains in tune with the Sun at 8 Hertz. These waves can be used for healing, to calm animals, to help the world. Other governments know about this and are going to use it for war. The Kahunas knew how to use this with the negative vibration. The CIA is approaching psychics to use this to get rid of enemies, to get rid of people. We must develop this power in ourselves, connect with the Sun and send out waves of peace.

"These waves cannot be jammed. The lower frequency Hertz waves are as long as 300,000 miles. The government has built huge transmitters in South Africa, Australia and other places to beam ELF waves back at Russia. There is no shield that will stop these signals. Only the brain stops it enough to cancel it. There is no chemical protection yet to stop the hydrogen atom from reacting with a magnetic field. These only interact with the brain, nothing else."

Dr. Puharich revealed that the Soviets used ELF waves to experiment with weather control in 1976 and 1977, using an 11 Hertz wave sent round the world; but even when they stopped their transmitters, they couldn't stop the waves! It took a year for the 11 Hertz wave to diminish in strength, causing a terrible winter. Since the Russians turned on this signal, they have had three crop failures in a row, as well as great floods. America had great heat and drought.

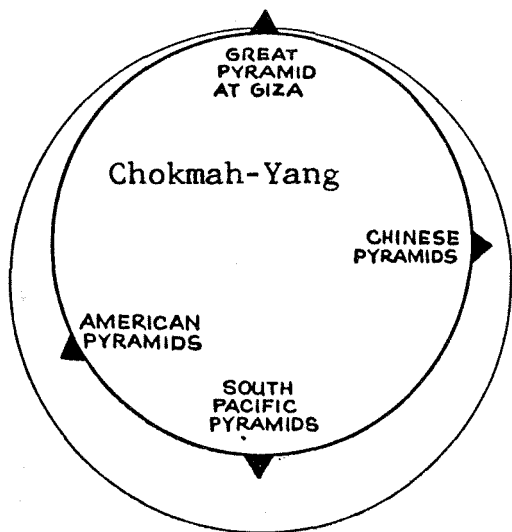

About 1980 they began to realize more fully what they were doing; so they built more transmitters, in Siberia and in Latvia, to send beams around the world. They created a great arc over Canada to Cape Cod, 42 miles in width. Soviet attaches, from the embassy in Ottawa, were going out to villages to determine the effects.

WHAT PYRAMID POWER IS ALL ABOUT

The great Pyramid of Giza near Cairo, Egypt is an ELF wave generator resonating at 8 Hertz. The Priests there kept the planet healthy with sound-tuning chambers in the Pyramid. One could energize the whole planet for peace using the Pyramid to get into contact with the center of the Sun. (Dr. Puharich may be contacted through Winsor Associates, Suite 1011, 1024 Connecticut Ave., Washington DC 20027)

* * *

Dr. Puharich apparently agrees with Russian researchers that the Great Pyramid of Giza is a major source of ELF waves on the planet. They have labeled it No. 1 on their World Power Grid. Take a good look again at our reproduction of the Russian Grid on page 13 of the Nov-Dec 1982 Journal. The best description we have seen yet of the Great Pyramid as an ELF Wave generator is in T.D. Pawlicki's "How To Build a Flying Saucer and Other Proposals in Speculative Engineering", a paperback published at $5.95 by Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632 in 1981.

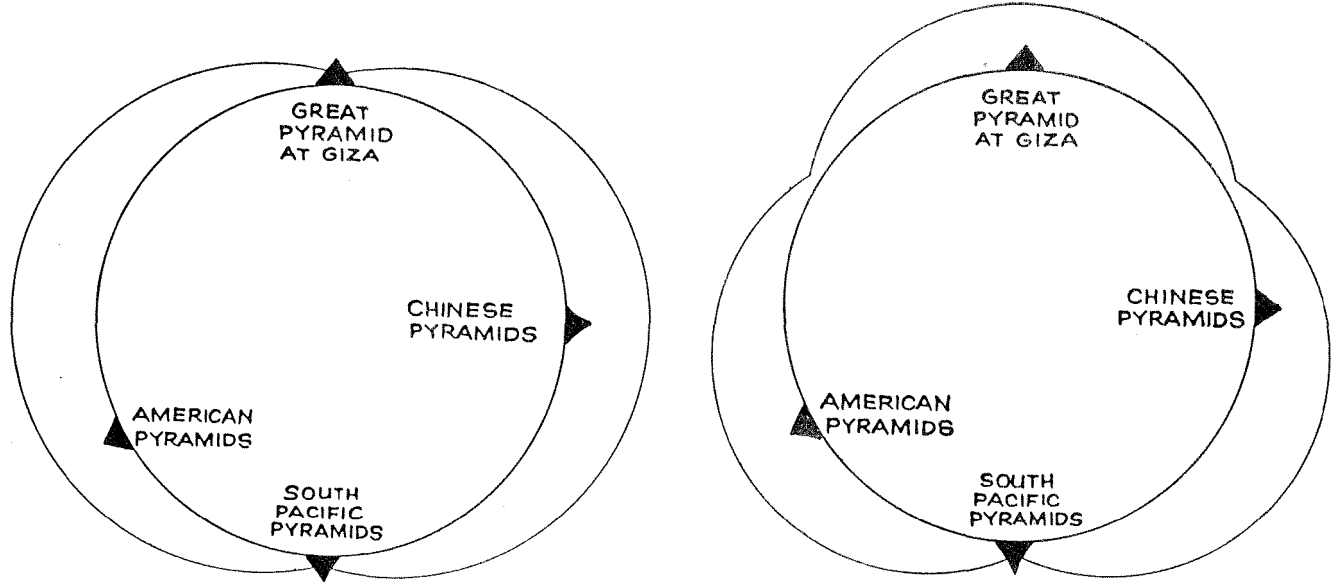

The Wave of Electro-Magnetic energy sweeps out in all directions from the four sides of the Pyramid, its circle expanding to a maximum diameter of 25,000 miles half way round the earth, then contracting to a point on the opposite side of the planet at the antipodes. This is the Male, Chokmah or Yang half of the sine wave. Pawlicki claims that underwater pyramids have been discovered in the South Pacific, referring specifically to Easter Island, Rapa Nui, as their approximate location; but Rapa Iti, a thousand miles further west, is closer to the antipodal point of Giza. There the wave peaks against itself and races back -- at the speed of light? -- in the Female, Binah or Yin half of the cycle, to the Great Pyramid, in time for the next cycle. The rate of pulsation is 7.8 Hertz or cycles per second and is called the Schumann Resonance. A great Chinese pyramid has been discovered in the south China jungles, a thousand feet to the side, thought to be a natural mountain, until its man-made form was uncovered. This pyramid is 90° or one-quarter of the way around the world from Giza. The American pyramids, Teotihuacan in Mexico and Cuzco in Peru, are 120° or one-third of the way around the world from Giza. Pawlicki believes that these placements are not accidental, even if the builders were not aware of the harmonic relationship.

"The fundamental electromagnetic resonance between the earth and its surrounding Ionosphere creates a voltage loop oscillating from one side of the world to the other (as shown in the diagrams on the preceding page)," writes Pawlicki. "The great pyramid of Giza and the pyramids of the south Pacific are located where the natural global voltage established the highest electrical potential.

"As the voltage loop oscillates between the Nile Delta and the south Pacific island at the Antipodes, an equatorial loop is established between the two poles. The Chinese pyramids (above left) are found where the equatorial loop established the highest electrical potential. The American pyramid civilization is found where the loop of the third harmonic established the highest electrical potential (above right).

"When the fundamental resonance is superimposed with the secondary, tertiary and quaternary harmonic, a standing-wave voltage structure is established (left), surrounding the earth with the electrical voltage pattern shown in the diagram. Although the electromagnetic waves flow around the world, the standing wave pattern remains static."

Russian ELF wave transmitters have been pin-pointed at three locations, Riga, Gomel and Kiev, and are considered to have created the atmospheric standing waves which affected weather so severely here in the United States in the late 1970s. Pawlicki's diagram for the pyramids suggests a way in which the Russian standing waves could be sketched and calculated, from their transmitters.

To quote Pawlicki again: "Although the Soviet system is inefficient in delivering consumer goods to its people, Communists are more receptive to revolutionary engineering. So while American authorities deny Tesla's discoveries, Soviet engineers have built a complex of Tesla towers in Karelia. Independent amateurs in America have found that the Soviets are using them to alter the natural pattern of electromagnetic standing waves surrounding the earth. Because the atmosphere carries electrical charge, air currents tend to follow geoelectromagnetic flow patterns. When the natural standing wave pattern is changed, the climate changes accordingly. Have you noticed?"

"Independent researchers, comparing the locations of the exceptional number of severe earthquakes during the past decade with the report of Soviet nuclear tests, conjecture that the Red are using seismic waves to plot the pattern of standing waves defining the interior of the earth. They give the planet a concentrated shock at a fault line and wait to see where the impulse emerges on the other side of the world. As long as local authorities deny the existence of this technology, how can the victims prove their earthquake was not a natural event?"

And again, from his chapter "Beyond Velikovsky: "The military-industrial-(and Religious?) establishment published the first release of atomic energy from uranium in 1945. Would you like to guess when Einstein's equations were used to prove the release the energy contained in the sun's gravitational field? According to information available to me, Nikola Tesla gained insight into spacic energy at the beginning of this century, before petroleum was used for much except kerosene lamps; by 1925 he was ready with experimental proofs. Reports have reached me of about a dozen private parties making similar discoveries in their own way. The latest word is that a party in the Northeast calling itself X-Tec, is trying to get into the consumer market by generating spacic energy from the Sun's gravitational field; we'll see if it survives any longer than its predecessors. In the meantime, the Soviet military-industrial establishment has managed to secure a monopoly on the free air their citizens are allowed to breathe; so it has no reservations about implementing Tesla's theories for generating electric power from the energy of empty space, and they are proceeding apace while Americans are building windmills to get the same energy the hard way." Pawlicki then reminds us of Dr. T. Henry Moray's success in developing a Free Energy device in Salt Lake City, Utah before World War I, and of its suppression!

THE GREAT TRADITION OF BORDERLAND SCIENCE, AND ONE WHO CARRIED IT FORWARD
IN THE FIFTH CENTURY

From Appendix I of Robert K.G. Temple's
"The Sirius Mystery", with CQC
By the Editor

PROCLUS

"To the lovers of the wisdom of the Greeks, any remains of the writings of Proclus will always be invaluable, as he was man who, for the variety of his powers, the beauty of his diction, the magnificence of his conceptions, and his luminous development of the abstruse dogmas of the ancients, is unrivalled among the disciples of Plato."

Thomas Taylor

"There are many classical scholars," writes Robert Temple, "that the Golden Age of Greece was the only significant era in Greek philosophy. Within this period one can conveniently place Socrates, Plato (427-347 B.C.), Aristotle, Euripides, Sophocles, Aeschylus, Demosthenes and the historians Herodotus, Thucydides and Xenophon.

"These brilliant names tend to blind one into accepting the false notion that Greece at any other period in its history was merely second rate in the intellects it produced. . . there is no denying the tendency to ignore or belittle -- even to suppress and deny -- Greeks who preceded or followed the 'Glorious Greeks' who are most familiar to us. It certainly is an embarrassing fact, then, for certain classical scholars to have to face, that the Platonic Academy continued to function in Athens for over nine hundred years."

THE ENDURING LIGHT OF THE WESTERN WORLD

And in those nine hundred years thousands of students of Platonic philosophy placed their feet on the path of Divine wisdom and occult science. Plato founded his school in the grove of Academus in Athens around 388 B.C. and taught mathematics, philosophy and occult science there until his death. His most apt pupils carried on, as Temple observes: ". . . the duration of the Academy (apparently on the same site) in Athens. . . for the 916 years of the life of the Academy as a philosophical institution was equal to the amount of time which will have elapsed from the Norman conquest of Britain in 1066 to the year 1982. We thus see that Plato's Academy existed longer on one spot than Britain has existed since William the Conqueror."

In the Nov-Dec 1982 Journal we briefly reviewed the writings of the French initiate, Louis Charpentier, on the great cathedral of Notre Dame de Chartres. There he speculates on the mysterious origin of the sudden outbreak of Gothic architecture in the 11th Century in France, and suggests that the Knights Templars brought the new ideas with them when they returned from the Middle East, the land of Zoroaster. We find the answer in the Annex to Temple's book on the Sirius Mystery, which suggests that Temple himself is a reincarnated Templar and before that a student at Plato's Academy! This is the normal sequence of incarnations as outlined in Theosophical literature and in the Edgar Cayce life-readings, as the Life Wave moves from East to West.

"The Platonic tradition in the broader sense, with its Gnostic and heretical overtones and its myriad manifestations in later ages in such bizarre and fascinating figures as Giordano Bruno, Marsilio Ficino, John Dee and even Sir Philip Sidney and the Earl of Leicester -- not to mention the troubadours of Provence, Dante in Italy and the massacred tens of thousands of Albigensians in France, the Knights Templar, and an infinite range of hopeless causes over two and a half millenia, is an agonizing and impossible problem for the orthodox mind, whatever its creed.

"For Platonism in the general sense is a creed which denies creed, an anti-institutional tradition known to those who adhere to it as the Great Tradition. It resembles the Society of Friends (Quakers) in insisting on nothing by way of doctrinal dogma. It is truly free; it has no membership, no tithes, no rules which are enforced; it has no Pope, no Caliph. It terrifies those weaker mentalities which crave a structural belief system; they always try to destroy it, but succeed in only destroying individuals and individual 'movements' within the larger tradition.

A PERSECUTED UNDERGROUND MOVEMENT FOR TWO THOUSAND YEARS

"How can any 'intellectual establishment' conceivably admit that this undercurrent of spirituality has flowed outside the orthodox boundaries of the official religion of Christianity since the third century and the time of Origen? And how confess that Proclus, who lived seven hundred years later than Plato, had a mind as luminous in his own way as Plato's? What happens to the 'hermetically sealed Greek miracle' then? If Platonism is seen to continue as a persecuted underground movement for two thousand years and more, what conclusions must we draw from the supposed openness of orthodox Western culture?

"If our commonly accepted pattern of civilization is seen to be based on a lie, based on the denial of the non-orthodox, the implications are so immense that nothing short of a total intellectual upheaval could result. No person with a vested interest, whether a chair at a university or a weekly newspaper, a large corporation or a television station (or a Diocesan see) would be completely isolated from the results which would follow.

"The results need not be destructive in the sense of a political or social revolution; but they would be more fundamental, and hence more far-reaching in the end. It is fear of constructive change (which means fear of the unknown) which is here involved. These indeed are problems. And they go some way to explain why the reader hears nothing of a great many subjects which have a direct relevance in the matter. One of many such subjects is Proclus. No one dares discuss what Proclus really stood for and what he represents beyond his own specific ideas. Even to raise the subject of a figure such as Proclus is to bring the skeleton from the closet and rattle it with a vengeance."

The liberal Platonic philosophy of Proclus aroused the animosity of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Greece after he took over the Chair of the School from Syrianus somewhere around 450 A.D. He had to flee Athens for his life, probably across the sea by boat, to Lycia, the near west coast of Asia Minor. This part of the ancient world was familiar to him as he had been brought up there by his wealthy Greek parents, in the city of Xanthus.

That year of exile no doubt was put to good use in contacting the Hierophants of the Chaldean and Persian Mystery Schools still active at the eastern end of the Mediterranean. His parents had sent him to Alexandria in Egypt for his higher education. He studied grammar under Orion and philosophy under Olympiodorus the Peripatetic in the "public schools" at Alexandria; but of his private studies and initiations in occult science, nothing is said; for those were taken at Memphis and Thebes, no doubt, where he was sworn to secrecy. But Proclus made no secret of the results of those initiations! These put him in conscious touch with the Masters of the Occult Hierarchy of the planet, and with Visitors from Outer Space.

THE "SONS OF MILU" WERE HIS COMPANIONS

His biographer in the Encyclopedia Britiannica (1911 Edition) writes: "Proclus led a most temperate, even ascetic, life and employed his wealth in generous relief to the poor. He was supposed to hold communion with the Gods, who endowed him with miraculous powers. He acted up to his famous saying that 'the philosopher should be the hierophant of the whole world', by celebrating Egyptian and Chaldean as well as Greek festivals, and on certain days performing sacred rites in honour of the dead."

Temple says that in his 35 years as head of the Platonic School in Athens, Proclus wrote twelve volumes of commentaries on Plato's philosophy. We are approaching our 25th year as a "professor" of Platonic philosophy, and have a five-foot-shelf of Journals of Borderland Research to prove it. Other literary endeavors of Proclus included hymns to the Gods, seven of which are extant: to the Sun, Helios, to Aphrodite, to the Muses, to Athena, to the Lycian Aphrodite, to Janus, to Hecate -- who appears to have been his favorite. To modern Cabalists Hecate is known as the Queen of childbirth and of witchcraft, but to the Greeks She was much more than that. Proclus claimed he could invoke Her to physical appearance, at least as a cloud of luminous mist. This indicates he had some abilities as a materializing medium, as well as clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

"As an upholder of the old pagan religion Proclus incurred the hatred of the Christians and had to take refuge in Asia Minor," says the Britannica; but after a year he did return to Athens and stayed there to head the Platonic School for the rest of his life. There must have been other attempts over the years, character assassination, subversive students, legal wrangles, poisonings, etc., all unsuccessful because Proclus had suffered martyrdom in a previous life and had thus earned the right to protection from the Gods.

We learn from Leadbeater's "The Masters and the Path" that Proclus' previous life was as a Roman, Alban, now the English St. Alban. He was born in the ancient capital of England, Verulam, now St. Albans, around 240 or 250 A.D. Manly Hall writes that Alban's parents were affluent enough to send him to Rome to school. He may have met a young French Roman there, Amphibalus. When they returned to England, Albanus chose the military, Amphibalus the priesthood. Church historians claim Amphibalus was martyred because of one of Roman Emperor Diocletian's sweeping edicts against the Christians, the one of 301 A.D. Actually, the edict was Diocletian's attempt to control wages and prices in the Empire, especially the price of food; but his local satraps used the edict as an excuse to settle old political scores. Thousands of liberals, dissidents and religious leaders were rounded up and executed, depending on the religious preference of the Commissar. If the word Christian applied to Amphibalus it was because he was a priest of the

THE HOLY WARS OF 300 A.D.

Today's newspapers are filled with stories of the Holy Wars in Lebanon and the Philippines between Catholics and Moslems, and in Afghanistan between Moslems and Communists. In the early Fourth Century there was endless violent religious strife between the priest-hoods and devotees of Krishna, of Apollonius of Tyana (the prototype of the mythical Jesus), of Hesus of the Celtic Druids, of Mithra, and of other sects too numerous to mention. There was no Christian Church until after the Council of Nicea, 325 A.D.

By this time Albanus had risen to the position of Governor of the Works there at Verulam. When Amphibalus was rounded up with other liberals and dissidents there under Diocletian's decree, Alban used his power and position to protect the priest, his longtime friend. This gave Alban's political enemies the opportunity they had been looking for. He was charged with sedition and executed along with Amphibalus and the others. But this effort to bring some semblance of order to the declining Roman empire failed and Diocletian gave up the throne in 305 A.D. at the age of 59; however, Diocletian gave England its first saint and ancient Verulam became and still is the town of St. Albans -- while Alban himself set his feet on the Path -- to re-enter the physical world again 108 years at Byzantium as Proclus, through a Greek mother.

By that time Constantine's state religion had become a political power to be reckoned with. That Roman emperor determined to resolve the endless religious conflicts by creating a state religion; so he called the various high priests together to a council at Nicea to form one. In Oahspe it says that the high priests wrangled together for seven long years before Constantine finally had to "knock their heads together" and force them to come up with a state religion, thus the Roman Catholic Church and the compound or composite "god", Jesus Christ, to satisfy the followers of Krishna and of Hesus.

Constantine turned eastward rather than westward, against the tide of evolution, and moved the capital of the Empire from Rome to Byzantium, and renamed that Oriental city Constantinople. On his way from Rome to Byzantium he stopped at Delphi in Greece to consult the oracle of the Gods. For good luck he swiped the holy chair on which the oracle sat while delivering her messages and took it to his new capital city with him. Manly Hall says the three-legged stool is still on display in an Istanbul museum.

COPERNICUS A NEO-PLATONIST?

The famous Polish astronomer of the 16th Century is likely to have been a graduate of the Platonic school in a past life. He is credited with establishing the Heliocentric system in modern times, with the planets revolving around the sun. This in contradistinction to the Geocentric system of orthodox science and the Church, with the earth as the center of the universe. But Proclus was teaching the Heliocentric system in Athens over a thousand years earlier. It is likely that copies of Proclus' Greek texts were available when Copernicus studied and taught in Italy and thus shaped his radical ideas about the solar system.

Robert Temple tries mightily to prove that Proclus had specific information about Sirius as a binary system and Sun to a hundred suns, but could find no supporting references in the Proclus literature available today. There is abundant proof, especially in Proclus' commentaries on Plato's Timmaeus, that his astronomy is surprisingly modern in its understanding of the stars as suns with the planets orbiting around them and also spinning on their own axes.

"Proclus speaks with full authority in insisting that certain invisible heavenly bodies definitely exist," writes Temple. "These bodies are the moons of planets and the planets of other stars. Furthermore, Proclus seems to have an incredibly enlightened view of celestial phenomena in many other ways as well.

"THE MOON IS CELESTIAL EARTH"

"In Book III of 'In Tim.' Proclus says (I,425) that the Moon is made of celestial earth. Or why does the moon, being illuminated, produce a shadow, and why does not the solar light pervade through the whole of it? . . . we shall find that fire and earth subsist also analogously in the heavens; fire indeed, defining the essence of them, but each of the other elements being consubsistent with it. . . The elements being conceived in one way as unmingled, but in another as mingled, the first mixture of them produces the heavens, which contain all things according to a fiery characteristic. . . for all things are in the heaven according to a fiery mode. . .

"Hence the fire which is there (in the heavenly bodies) is light; and it is not proper to disturb the discussion of it, by directing our attention to the gross and dark fire of the sublunary region (the below-the-moon or earthly region)', And to make it beyond the slightest possibility of misunderstanding, he adds (page 282) that fire in the heavens is 'fire which is not perfectly fire' but rather, star-fire is more properly 'fire which is energy'.

"These conceptions are astounding in the light of modern science. . . Proclus views the stars as congealed bodies in a celestial medium and that between them lies 'fiery matter' which is invisible to us (and that) the planets move in orbits which are clearly conceived as trajectory spaces. . . NATURE WAS MY TEACHER

By Victor Schauberger

Translated From The German By Albert Zock
With Added Comment

The coat of arms of the Schauber family showed a broken tree trunk with a dogrose wound around it. Their motto was: "Fidus In Silvis Silentibus" (Loyalty to the silent forest). As the last of the Schauberger robber knights were captured, the older one was beheaded and the younger one pardoned and exiled into the wild, deep forest.

He settled on the Plockenstein lake in the Austrian mountains, and his descendants supplied an unbroken line of gamekeepers, fishermen and forest rangers. They knew the healing power of water and the way to build irrigation ditches for nighttime use only as a method of improving yields in their fields. Even today after a storm, torrential streams lay bare an old creek bed as a witness to the art and technique the Schaubergers used to build sluices for the transportation of logs.

Their method forced the water to flow first to the left then to the right, in sinuous spirals. The expression "zykloids" was unknown to them, yet they ingeniously used this principle. Through this rhythmical change of curves the logs moved in the sluice faster than the water itself and, in some places, against the law of gravity, even uphill!

"Since my childhood I wanted to be a forest ranger. After the first world war, I was able to get such a position with the Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe. He was a good man to work for, but like others in those days, the Prince had financial problems. I had submitted my plan for building a new kind of sluice to bring down the cost of transporting logs to the Management of the estate. I was rejected with the argument that beech and oak are heavier than water and, according to Archimedes' law, cannot float.

"On a hunting trip with the Princess, I told her about her husband's problems. The Princess came from a humble background. She understood the situation, listened to my plan, and decided it might help to save the estate. She knew about the attempt by the company who did the hauling to bribe me. She stopped and asked, 'How much did the company offer you?' I replied, 'Three times my yearly salary.'

"'And how much could be saved with your new way of transportation?'

"'Today a cord of wood costs 12 schillings and 30 thousand cords are moved in a year. That amounts to 360 thousand schillings.'

"How much would the cord cost with the new system?"

"One schilling, including amortization of the construction,' was my answer. The Princess agreed. The only condition I asked for was to have a free hand in the construction, taking all responsibility.

A COMBINATION OF VERTICAL AND HORIZONTAL CURVES

"After four months the sluice was finished and an enormous pile of wood stood at the ready. We made the attempt. A moderately heavy log was the first to go. It floated down about 300 feet and got stuck with the force of the water pushing it out of the channel. The workers were grinning. I sent them home, and sat down by the pond to gather my thoughts. Suddenly I felt a movement against my leg. I catapulted it into the pond with my cane and watched it cross the pond. Then, it hit me: how can a snake propel itself through the water without any fins? I studied its every move with my binoculars. It was turning and twisting in a combination of vertical and horizontal curves. I kept this picture in my mind till it became clear to me.

"I recalled the workers and gave them new directions. One went for nails, the other for lathes of larchwood. I promised them double pay for finishing the job, by torchlight if necessary. It took all night to nail the lathes diagonally into the trough, especially in the curves as suggested by the movements of the snake.

"When I returned home a letter was waiting for me. The prince, his wife and a building expert would be at the sluice to examine it by 10 o'clock the next morning. When they arrived I saluted the prince and chief forester, but ignored the guest. The gate was opened, the workers started pushing some medium-sized logs into the trough, leaving the larger ones aside.

"No, no,' said the chief forester, 'take that one.' I nodded my assent. Slowly the heavy log entered the sluice gate and blocked it, causing the water to rise. No one said a word. All eyes hung on the log expecting the rising water to overflow at any moment. Suddenly, there was a gurgling sound; the heavy log turned first right, then left, then twisting like a snake, floated past with its front end up in the air to finally disappear smoothly around the next bend. The float-master took the chewing tobacco out of his mouth and said, 'Kiss my _____, it works!'

"I took my rifle and went into the forest. Once out of sight, I sat down on a stump with the rifle and cane between my legs, wiping the cold sweat off my forehead. Never again, I thought. Had I not had the encounter with the snake at a most fortuitous moment, I would not be alive today. (Probably failure would have driven Schauburger to suicide, not uncommon in his day and circumstances.)

"After a few days I was informed that I would henceforth be managing the entire forest. Experts and specialists started to visit us, even the Secretary of State. Soon afterwards I was appointed to the Department of Agriculture in Vienna. From the day I promised the Princess to build that sluice I never had any peace!

"The sluice came very near not to being built at all, however. The chief forester came to me one day with an order to stop construction on the dam. I had to show my plans and explain them, as no one could believe that the 55 foot high dam could hold the water. Everyone was afraid that it would collapse under the pressure due to the weakness of the walls. Eventually, I realized the real intention was to prevent construction of the sluice.

THE MOMENT OF TRIUMPH

"I walked over to the middle of the dam and fired both barrels of my rifle upstream. This was the signal for an assistant standing above to open the gate and let the water in. The Commissioners thought I had lost my mind and had preferred to use my rifle than to answer their questions. Suddenly there was a roar. I pointed upstream wherefrom a mass of brown water 18 feet high came down blaring and carrying wood, stumps and chunks of turf with it.

"'Good heavens, come here quickly!' shouted one of the men. Others were gesticulating wildly with their arms. I only gave them a quick glance, then bent down over the 'weak' wall against which the onrushing waters were supposed to smash any moment. The water did no such thing, however. On the contrary, the impact was weak and the first wave rebounded back uphill against the oncoming stream which caused the logs to stand up almost vertically, jumping out of the water like fish. The basin, of almost a million cubic yard capacity, was quickly filled.

"No one had the nerve to come down to me on the dam, so I went up to them. 'Well,' remarked the District Commissioner, 'more luck than brain.'

"'I think it's the other way around,' said I. I emptied my rifle and walked away. The group had a short discussion after which we were informed that there would be an inspection by experts from Vienna, even though the dam seemed to hold -- but surely not for long! One week later the experts arrived and stated, after an extensive inspection, that the dam had a factor of 12 safety. In spite of their calculations they were puzzled by many questions. I had the basin filled once more to give them a demonstration. As the water came in I pointed out its behavior, that is how it recoiled against itself thereby breaking its own momentum. The idea for the shape of the dam had come not from technical books or schools but from your everyday chicken egg!

"On my first job as a graduate forester I spent my spare time at a mountain lake fishing or duck hunting from a boat. My greatest wish was to shoot the giant fish eagle. Every evening he circled high over the water, suddenly falling down like a rock. The next moment he would be up and away with large fish in his claws. How he could catch fish without touching the water was a mystery. For a long time I remained mystified. Obviously, careful observation was required. Equipped with good binoculars I took up position in a tall tree on the highest side of the lake, from where I could keep a watchful eye on both the eagle and the fish in the lake.

A PYRAMID OF SPIRALS

"Almost at the same moment, the eagle appeared. He circled with loud screams over the spot where the fish was, flying low and clapping its wings strongly as if trying to attract attention to itself. Next, it rose almost vertically in ever decreasing spirals. Then, it let itself fall like a rock, legs extended, toward the fish. As it reached the water it broke its fall with a strong flap of the wings and, the next moment, was holding a large fish in its claws. Heavily laden it flew toward the forest and disappeared. I was so fascinated I only paid attention to the bird, but promised myself that next time I would pay attention to the fish.

"The eagle came back, announcing his arrival loudly as usual, and drew his ever decreasing spiral upon recovering altitude. What happened next was so unbelievable that I lost my balance and almost fell out of the tree for having imitated what I saw. Fish in the lake were spiralling upward just like the bird above! They were one after the other, like pearls on a string, coming always closer to the surface. Because the spiral was becoming smaller, some of the fish were crowded together which caused their first dorsal fins to protrude from the water. A dark shadow fell over the spot, a little flash, and the eagle took off with its prey.

NEUTRALIZING GRAVITY WITH LENTICULAR FLOW

"It was spawning time. I took my post, on a clear moonlight night, close to a waterfall hoping to catch a fish poacher. I could see every move of the fish in the crystal-clear water. Suddenly, the fish moved toward the sides. A very large trout had come upstream. It swam along the fall as if in search of something, its motion like a winding dance, then finally disappeared beneath what looked like a sheet of glimmering metal under the moonlight. I noticed there was a whirlpool at the foot of the narrowing waterfall. The trout floated out of this vortex and up the waterfall as if drawn by an invisible force.

"Once at the crest, it was pushed out of the water and landed a few yards upstream. I was so excited by what I had seen I forgot all about the poacher and went home to think about it. I saw this phenomenon many times after that, but no scientist could give me an explanation.

"Later in the same winter I shot an alpine goat across a deep ravine. It slipped and fell down into the ravine. I could hear it bouncing over the ice on the frozen river below. I was unhappy about this as I expected the horns to be broken. Slowly I made my way down the icy slope. To my pleasurable surprise the goat was intact and dry. After cleaning it out, I threw the guts into the water which was calm at that spot, as well as crystal-clear and six to eight feet deep. I watched them sink and noticed some movement between the stones on the bottom. Although some were size of a man's head, they moved to and fro as if they were electrically charged. Defying the laws of gravity they went from side to side as if alternately attracted and repulsed by one another. I began to doubt my own eyes as a stone the size of a man's head spun then floated upward. It was egg-shaped.

"The next moment it was floating on the surface surrounded by a ring of open water and tossing gently. There followed another and another, until most of the egg-shaped stones were floating. Only the smooth, ovoid stones had this property, the angular ones remained motionless at the bottom. My first thought was that they must be electrically charged as this phenomenon reminded me of the light which appears under water when milky hued pebbles rub against each other.

"I didn't know at that time that a number of forces were at work to create a light effect as well as overcome the laws of gravity to bring these stones to the surface. I crossed the newly formed bridge and went home. Years later I learned that the Ankara river which originates in Lake Baikal in Central Russia is the site of a similar phenomenon, which makes it possible for the local farmers to cross the river in winter.

A LAKE RECREATES ITSELF

"Remarkable phenomena can be observed on the Lakes of Desolation in the Hartzau valley of Austria, after a long hot spell. I was sitting on the shore of such a lake on a hot day wondering whether to go for a swim when I noticed that the water started to move in a circle. Trees which had been imbedded in the sand after a landslide were pulled loose and carried away by the merry-go-round. As the speed of the circling water increased, the floating debris moved closer and faster toward the middle of the lake. Once they reached the center, the trunks tilted upward and were sucked in with great force so the shores were cleaned like a peeled banana -- or like people whom a cyclone sets back down on earth almost naked. None of the trees resurfaced.

"Shortly afterward the lake calmed down. This, however, was only the calm before the storm. The bottom of the lake started rumbling and suddenly a spout as high as a house shot up out of its center with a thundering noise, spinning upon itself and overflowing from the top like a fountain. A short while later the spout collapsed sending waves to splash against the shore. I had witnessed the renewal of a lake devoid of fresh water tributaries.

Here ends Viktor Schaubberger's personal report. His discoveries represent only a fraction of the many ways Mother Nature uses a spiral combined with an egg shape. The expression "the egg of Columbus" should be "the egg of Viktor Schaubberger. After all, Columbus made the egg stand, but Schaubberger made the egg outstanding!

UPSETTING MEDICAL ORTHODOXY

"The uterus, for instance, is egg-shaped. To many scientists it is now obvious that the uterus, because of its shape, is sucking the egg through the Fallopian tube and not, as believed by orthodoxy the Fallopian tube conveying it downward. Similarly, William Harvey's theory of 1618 that the heart is pumping the blood through the body no longer holds water. Some medical scientists recognized long ago that the blood is making the heart contract and not vice versa. This was corroborated as far back as 1892 by Dr. Karl Schmidt and 1927 by Dr. Martin Mendelson, by cardiologists Harlicek in 1937 and Genta in 1958, as well as Dr. W. Simonis in 1970. Everyone knowledgeable about the function of the heart realizes how little it can be compared with a pump.

Embryologie teaches that there is at first a primary fluid circulation within the tissue of the embryo and, much later, the heart starts to form. The tender cardiac valves have only a thickness of .15 mm Hg (about 4 inches of mercury); they are completely passive; there is no sign of an active pump. Suction, because of the egg shape, does most of the work, or better, implosion. It is a kind of ram pump and no more.

The Japanese, K. Nishi, points out that the red blood cells could never be pushed through the fine capillaries since some of them have a much smaller diameter than the red blood cells themselves. Amending the theory concerning the functioning of the heart would lead to better diagnosis and therapy.

A HEART-LIKE CONTAINER

Dr. Karl Koller had a problem mixing drugs. He did not want to apply centrifugal force. Schauberger, whom he consulted, suggested that the liquid be shaken instead of the container.

"You have to build a heart-like container with a small, two-armed propeller on the bottom. Then you have the reversed movement." Replied Koller, "But then you'll have a centrifugal force again."

"Yes," said Schauberger, "but that will bring into play a suction in the middle of the container." It shouldn't be necessary to have the propeller built into the bowl; one driven by an electric drill, like that used to stir paint should do. Dr. Koller remembered an experiment made by Dr. Rudolph Steiner on conserving plant juice without alcohol by using rhythm on rose petals and distilled water in a heart-shaped bowl, and having his wife swirl the contents to create a whirlpool, each morning and evening. (To be concluded in the next Journal.)

CLIPS, QUOTES & COMMENTS —

"HUMAN POSSIBILITIES" by Stanley Krippner

This new book, published by Anchor Press, 1982, New York, 348pp, $14.95, is reviewed in the Jan-Feb 1983 "Parapsychology Review" by Benson Herbert. He writes: "Subtitled 'Mind Exploration in the USSR and Eastern Europe', this book provides an informative and authentic account of the state of parapsychology in communist Europe, against a lively background of personal observations made by the author on his itinerary, during which he met most of the leading figures in the field.

"The narrative commences in 1971 with his arrival in Moscow, where Larissa Vilenskaya invited him to give an address on parapsychology -- the first ever to be held at the Academy of Pedagogical Sciences, with 300 scientists as audience. Carefully briefed beforehand by Edward Naumov as to the use of nomenclature which not perturb materialists, Krippner learnt that telepathy should be referred to as 'biological communication', dowsing as the 'biophysical effect', psychokinesis as 'psychoenergetic phenomena', precognition as 'proscopy' and so on. . .

"Continuing the account of Soviet efforts to establish a physical basis for psi, Krippner lists eight centers in the USSR, mostly in Moscow, where research into 'psi particles' is said to be in progress. These are referred to by N.I. Kobozev in a monograph published by Moscow State University in 1971 titled 'Research in the Thermodynamics of Information and Thought Processes'. Kobozev postulates the existence of 'superlight elementary particles', infinitesimally smaller than an electron, as the source of Gurvich's mitogenic radiation, believed to be emitted by dividing cells in plant roots and capable of stimulating other cells to divide. Mitogenic rays are said to be detectable in the ultraviolet wavelength range by means of photomultipliers. Experiments were carried out with a psychic reputed to have PK ability. When he relaxed, the photomultiplier tubes registered almost no radiation, but when he concentrated on influencing a subject, the instrument responded.

"Dr. Krippner met prominent Soviet scientist A.S. Presman whose book 'Electromagnetic Fields and Life' had been published in English translation by Plenum Press, New York, 1970. In this book, Presman discusses parapsychology, suggesting that emotional factors might be able to enhance ESP scores and that electromagnetic fields may play a role in psi phenomena. Presman, in conversation with Dr. Krippner, speculated that psi might be an archaic human trait that began to disappear once its usefulness was minimized by language forms of communication. Krippner relates how Presman's work was applied to dowsers by the Yugoslave physicist Zaboij Harvalik; dowsing reactions took place when dowzers were exposed to an electromagnetic field, but not when the kidney or brain was shielded.

"At the Prague Congress, another approach to the problems of psi and mitogenic radiation was proposed by A.P. Dubrov, who cited data from his experiments with polarizing microscopes to support his claim that high-frequency oscillations of the cell's molecules can generate 'biogravitational waves' over long distances, accompanied by photons and ultrasonic sound. The human brain, he supposes, has the ability to produce observable psi effects such as movement of objects, exposure to sealed photofilm, organic interaction with time (as also proposed by N.A. Kozyrev) and air ionization during mental activity. Kozyrev regards time as a participant in physical processes rather than an abstract framework in which events happen. . . "

Krippner's book appears to be an important sequel to the Ostrander-Schroeder opus of 12 years ago, "Psychic Discoveries Behind The Iron Curtain".

AN INVITATION FROM SIBERIA

For thousands of years the priesthoods of the world have diligently sought out young psychics who could be drawn into their organizations and used for espionage work. Now government agencies, East and West, are doing the same thing -- only on a scientific and material rather than a religious basis. At the Understanding convention at Astara last fall, Dr. Andrija Puharich told his listeners that the CIA was looking for psychics to use in its work. We recently learned from one of our students of the Cabala ten years ago that the Russian KGB is trying to recruit American sensitives for psychic research, and from other countries as well, no doubt.

The Cabala studies were done in Yucca Valley and San Bernardino, California in the early 1970s and finished in 1973. A year or so later she and another student had a chance to take part in a psychic festival at Las Vegas, Nevada. They decided to summarize their studies in the Western Mystery Tradition in a two page sheet which could be given away at the Festival -- without naming your editor as the teacher or using the word Cabala -- emphasizing the use of ritual in developing magickal power and the use of geometrical symbols to shape and direct that power, such as the Pentagram.

Some time after that, perhaps a year or more, she was flabbergasted to receive a letter, in English, from a Russian psychic research center in Siberia, inviting her to come there and take part in their research program. Perhaps this was one of the Centers referred to by Krippner in his book? She didn't bother to reply to the letter; but it occurred to her that one of her give-away sheets at Las Vegas had been forwarded to the directors of this Russian research center; and the invitation was the result!

She wouldn't go to Russia, so Russia came to her, apparently; for she received an invitation from a Professor Solokoff or Sokoloff of California State University at San Bernardino to take part in his brain-wave research program there. This invitation she accepted, without realizing its significance at the time. Along with dozens of other willing volunteers her mental vibes were duly charted and the "profile" was filed away. Later, when she asked for a copy of her chart, and was refused, the realization came to her: Could a copy of it have gone to the psychic research center in Siberia? And, with her "mental signature" in their possession, did trained Russian mentalists now have the capability of entraining her consciousness with powerful telepathic suggestions? Wow!

Our former associate in Cabalistic studies doesn't see herself as a casualty in the psychic warfare now raging between the United States and Russia -- eight nations are now engaged in it according to Dr. Andrija Puharich -- but she is alerted to the danger that some of the thoughts arising apparently spontaneously in her stream of consciousness are not necessarily her own.

As for Professor Sokoloff, he is a casualty of the psychic warfare, and perhaps his wife as well. During the testing program at the university she died suddenly. This was a great shock to the professor and without her balancing polarity he became a victim of his own illusions and is now committed to Patton, the state hospital for the insane at San Bernardino.

SACRIFICED TO THE CAUSE

This is a danger faced by any government agent. Once he has served his purpose and mission accomplished, he is burdened with secret information which could be disastrous to his government if exposed; so, it is safer to eliminate him or at least neutralize him; thus we must consider the possibility that Russian mentalists, backing up their efforts with psychotronic equipment, made use of the brain-wave "signatures" of the professor and his wife.

Then there is the danger faced by any sorcerer's apprentice -- and these brain-wave researchers and operators are engaged in sorcery! -- that he or she is not alerted to the wild elemental and Lower Astral Forces hidden behind the Veil. Innocence, or ignorance of the Law is no protection! 50 years ago the Master Hilarion spelled it out for his channel, H.K. Challoner: "Man stands indeed upon the threshold of discoveries, of revelations, of the attainment of powers such as have not been known since the days of the Atlantean Race.

"And herein lies his danger. Unless, this time, he is morally strong enough to control these forces and develops that spirituality of outlook essential to all those who wield great power, once again he will be overwhelmed; once again he will be swept to destruction by the very forces which are designed to be his benefactors.

"It is from this, the fell fruit of his own ignorance and pride, that we seek to protect him; and it is to this end that I desire to reveal to you some of the difficulties which must be faced and overcome if man is to learn to contact the devas with impunity. For again I would stress that the devas respond to the creative vibration a man gives forth, to the Note of Will or Love or of Activity he sounds upon the aeolian harp of the inner worlds. (And anyone who plays with telepathy, dowsing, radionics, psychotronics or whatever you choose to call it, is sending forth a creative vibration, is 'sounding a note' upon the aeolian harp of the inner worlds.) As his motives are, so will his tone manifest there, either in harmony or in discord; in floods of exquisite colour or suffused with the crude shades of his own aura -- and according to this Note will be the type of devas he attracts to himself.

"THEIR NATURES ARE UTTERLY UNLIKE"

"And herein lies the key to the dangers which attend the fusion of the human and deva lines of evolution; for although both are united in aim and are proceeding towards the one goal, their natures are utterly unlike. The devas are not possessed, as is man, of a sense which differentiates between right and wrong; therefore, because of their very nature, void of error, or of the possibility thereof, those who function on the lower planes of the Astral and Etheric can be used by man for good or ill.

"Only those possessed of a clear understanding of the fundamental laws of nature can, therefore, hope to invoke the devas with safety. For if a man attempt to so do before he has learned a great measure of control over his emotional and mental bodies, under the tremendous outpouring of force which his invocation will draw upon him he may easily be overpowered and driven eventually to what men, in their ignorance, mis-name madness. . . .

"Equally, should any seek to use the devas with deliberate intent for selfish or destructive purpose, let him beware! Eventually the result will be disaster; for the note he sounds will be a false one, setting up a dissonance with the creative note of the divine Will; upon this discord the deva essence will vibrate with greater and greater momentum until the man can no longer control it; gradually the increasing vibration will begin to disintegrate his bodies until finally they will be destroyed by paralysis, apoplexy, or by the slower process of some cancerous disease.

"Finally, I say: this may not happen in one life. Be it known to you that those who in Atlantis and even in later times thus trafficked with the devas, have been forced to re-incarnate with the discord which they themselves created sounding still within them; vibrating ever upon their etheric matter it causes ill health, disease or death according to its strength and their own weakness. It eventually must be transmuted by the man himself into harmony through service and through love; and he is ready to be 'cured' only when his note peals forth once more in unison. . . ."

The Russian scientists and KGB telepaths have closed the door to any possible understanding of the invisible Forces they have attracted and are dealing with by insisting on a purely material explanation for the psychic powers they are developing and using. This is a trap for the unwary and guarantees their enslavement by the Elemental forces to which they have sold their Faustian souls.

Bishop Leadbeater, in his book "The Masters and the Path", writes that Hilarion, in a former life, was the Neo-Platonic philosopher Iamblichus, a Greek, and an illustrious predecessor to Proclus. Iamblichus died during the reign of Constantine, probably about 330 A.D. His present position in the Occult Hierarchy of the planet is that of Star Logos of the Fifth Ray, Science and ordered knowledge.

DEUTERONOMY 2:30-35 REVISITED

"May I make a personal comment? I, as a Jew, felt very intimidated at the article in the December Journal in the blanket statement concerning the Jewish race. I feel that the true Christ love is 'Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself', and anyone who begins condemnation of a Race whose religion is Jewish, not their Race, becomes involved in Hitlerism and Naziism. Sorry to state it, it's the first time I've felt this about any article in your beautiful, rewarding and instructive Journal. Thank you for your years of service."

B.K., Los Angeles, California

Thank you for your memb/sub renewal and the honest expression of your feelings in the matter of the extra-terrestrial origins of the Jewish race. That material was derived from the writings of another member of the Occult Hierarchy, the Master D.K., an outstanding pupil of the Christ to whom you refer. One of the most important aspects of Mastership is an uncompromising search for truth -- to be true-minded rather than nice-minded. I stated that as my goal when I took over editorship of the Round Robin Journal in May 1959. It still is, and as such has helped me to produce "beautiful, rewarding and instructive" Journals. The writings of D.K. through Alice Bailey have been an important source of information in the borderland field over the years of editorship and I will continue to draw on them as needed in the search for truth. In the case of the Jewish race, that search leads us to their own history in the Old Testament and the probable ancient causes of the modern Holocaust, and the Nazis as reincarnated Heshbonites.

In Deuteronomy 2:30-35 Moses writes: "But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the Lord thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day. And the Lord said unto me, Behold, I have begun to give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.

"Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz. And the Lord our God delivered him before us; and we smote him, his sons and all his people. And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones of every city, we left none to remain: Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took."

So, taking Jewish history at its word, it would seem that the seeds of Naziism were planted by Moses and his army thousands of years ago. Who knows? Adolf Hitler may have been a reincarnation of King Sihon of Heshbon, or Og, king of Bashan, or any other of the leaders of that time destroyed in the Jewish wars of conquest. In my own fifty years of adult life I have learned that the worst enemies of any people, nation or race are members of that people, nation or race. God is not mocked. Be ye not deceived. Whatsoever a man -- or a woman -- or a nation seweth, that shall it also reap. But the man most people call Jesus came along later and offered the Golden Rule as a more desirable alternative to the old Mosaic law of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. One who chose that alternative in modern times was Oskar Schindler. Had he been one of Moses' more capable captains in those old wars of conquest? And chose this way of settling an old karmic debt? Probably.

The Man Who Saved Jews

NEWSWEEK/JANUARY 10, 1983

Schindler (third from left) in 1972 with Jewish survivors: An unlikely angel

Schindler's List. By Thomas Keneally. 400 pages. Simon and Schuster. $17.95.

Although it won England's prestigious Booker McConnell prize for fiction, Thomas Keneally's new book is not really a novel. It tells the astounding story of wealthy German industrialist Oskar Schindler, who saved hundreds of European Jews from Nazi extermination. The Australian Keneally, author of 13 novels (including "Confederates" and "The Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith"), says in a prefatory note that he used "the texture and devices of a novel . . . both because the novelist's craft is the only one I can lay claim to, and because the novel's techniques seem suited for a character of such ambiguity and magnitude as Oskar." He constructs conversation, based on survivors' testimony, but assiduously avoids making up facts—for in this case the truth is far more powerful than anything the imagination could invent.

Military Contracts: Oskar Schindler was an unlikely angel. A bon vivant who dressed exquisitely, chain-smoked elegantly, kept a wife, a mistress, a secretary/lover and a stable full of expensive cars, he was born a Roman Catholic in Moravia in 1908 and took over a bankrupt enamelware factory in Cracow after Germany invaded Poland in 1939. He made a fortune with lucrative military contracts, and as the Nazis began clearing Cracow of Jews, Oskar began turning his factory—Emalia—into a haven for them. One day he rode by the ghetto on horseback and saw SS teams with dogs rampaging through the streets, murdering men, women and children at random. "Beyond this day," he said later, "no thinking person could fail to see what would happen. I was now resolved to do everything in my power to defeat the system."

He walked right into the lion's den, where SS Capt. Amon Goeth was turning the ghetto into a forced-labor camp. The sexually voracious Goeth, who beat up his women and shot people for walking slowly, was also siphoning food out of the meager ghetto rations to make huge black-market profits. Oskar soothed the savage Goeth with cognac and gold—and tricked him into letting the Emalia Jews live at the factory. In 1943 Oskar spent $120,000 converting the factory into a camp, plus more than $10,000 a month for food—and he had just begun to pay. When the SS Jewish policy in Cracow shifted from forced labor to liquidation, Oskar growled to one worker, "I'm going to get you all out"—and he did.

He bought a factory in Moravia and with flamboyant cunning (augmented, as always, by huge bribes) got the Nazis to let him ship "his" Jews south to work there. The 800 men on "Schindler's list" went first—but the 300 women got diverted to Auschwitz. Perhaps Oskar's single most heroic feat, in this tale of outrageous rescue, was getting those freezing, starving, desperate women out of the death camp. He tried to bribe its commander with liquor, ham, diamonds—and his own pretty secretary. When that didn't work, Schindler himself went into the necropolis—and soon the women were loaded into one more cattle car. Two days later they were ordered out near what looked like yet another concentration camp—until they saw Oskar Schindler's familiar features under a new Tyrolean hat. "You're safe now," he told them, "you're with me."

Oskar lived an unexceptional life after the war, in Buenos Aires, Frankfurt and Israel. He died in 1974, was mourned by Schindler-juden all over the world and buried in Jerusalem. Keneally wisely does not try to guess what motivated this extraordinary man. When the Allies were approaching Moravia in the last days of the war, Oskar's workers presented him with a gift. It was a ring—made of the gold bridgework from one man's teeth—engraved with a line from the Talmud: "He who saves a single life saves the world entire."

MORE ON THOSE RUSSIAN EXPERIMENTS WITH PARAPSYCHOLOGY

Cleaning out and sorting the correspondence file we came on this postcard dated March 14, 1981: "In case you missed it, on NBC TV last night on the NBC Magazine show with David Brinkley, they had the first segment on 'If Thoughts Could Kill', about the Russian experiments with parapsychology, the various not-on-map institutes and buildings in Moscow that were engaged in it, some smuggled film of some of their experiments and interviews with some who had worked in that area -- now migrated to Israel; and there was an ex-KGB man who is now a Prof. at Cal State University at San Bernardino -- he defected. He has collected all the data on parapsychology, psychotronics and ELF (Extremely Low Frequency) attempts from interviews with with people from Russia and put it all in a computer! As I understand it, his name is Nikolai Kokoloff. Also interviewed was a Portland, Oregon radionics engineer who has recorded the Russian ELF 'Woodpecker' sounds and had them shown on an oscilloscope -- a Mr. Bise? He said the rate was 10 times a second or 10 Hertz. It might be of interest to you to contact the Russian at Cal State SB."

Al Fry, Bloomington, California

Needless to say we didn't follow up on Al's suggestion and now there's no need to as Kokoloff is in the insane asylum at Patton, a perfect example of the deliberate misuse of spiritual power. His former colleagues in the psychic warfare section of the KGB have -- by insisting on the purely physical nature of telepathy -- deluded themselves into believing they have no moral responsibility for their selfish and misguided behavior. Unknown to them, they are creating a Frankenstein which will haunt them in succeeding lives.

AN ELITE CORPS OF PSYCHIC WARRIORS

National Enquirer (Feb. 1, 1983) - "'I've succeeded in turning a grown man into a whimpering, screaming, gasping-for-air, wetting-the-pants infant,' boasted Dr. Vladimir Raikov, a top Moscow expert on hypnotism and brain research. Raikov, who is also a colonel in the KGB, the dreaded secret police force, recently expanded his bizarre experiments, hypnotically regressing about volunteers into whimpering babies -- while he was a mile away, according to Dr. Viktor Adamenko, who assisted in the experiment.

"Sources disclose that 800 volunteers have been trained in these eerie mind-control techniques and thousands more will be trained this year. And they say the Russian government fully intends to use these mental marvels to wage psychic warfare against the West. In an interview, Dr. Raikov himself virtually admitted the same thing when he said about his telepathic hypnotism experiments: 'It opens up tremendous possibilities. Military? Why not? I won't deny that.'

"Another psychic, Karl Nikolaev, is also deeply involved in psychic research aimed at paralyzing the minds of people through telepathy. In one astounding experiment, Nikolaev trained a team of telepathists to influence the outcome of a boxing match in which the underdog was given no chance of beating a local champion. Half of the team -- five telepathists -- beamed 'losing' thoughts at the champion to weaken his will. The other five concentrated on sending 'winning' thoughts to the challenger.

"'The match lasted for three rounds and our man won -- much to the surprise of the audience,' Nikolaev responded. 'Telepathy is an incredibly powerful weapon. We'll need it to protect ourselves against aggression wherever it may be coming from. Let me say that we are going to use it -- and leave things at that.'

"Says a leading Russian parapsychologist, who did not wish to be identified, 'The new Soviet leader, Yuri Andropov, is convinced that we are years ahead of the U.S. in the use of parapsychology -- to affect enemy command posts through mind control.'"

"Going to use it?" Russian telepaths have been using mental power to degrade the performance of some of our Olympic athletes and enhance the performance of their own! Especially the pair skating champions for the U.S. In the 1980 winters games in New York, the American pair, Randy White and Ty Babalonia were favored to win -- until Randy suffered a debilitating accident in practice. That's a sure way to win a competition, eliminate your major opponent before the games start! Nadia Comenici's flawless performance on the balance beam was marred by a spill, enabling her Russian opponents to outpoint her, and the most flagrant use -- or abuse -- of mind power was in the international chess match between Korchnoi and Karpov. Nothing was done by the match authorities -- in Manila as I recall -- to prevent a Russian telepathist in the audience from concentrating his professional powers on Korchnoi, forcing him into losing errors. Aware of what was being done to him, Korchnoi got an American friend to sit next to the Russian telepath, their auras interpenetrating, and break up his concentration. The Russians protested. The chess match authorities, also under hypnotic control, ordered the American ally to leave the Russian telepathist alone. Karpov went on to win the match. Here in the United States the winning records of at least two, perhaps three, professional football teams, indicate to your editor that the owners of the teams are resorting to black magick to tip the scales in their favor. It pays off where millions of dollars in gambling bets are at stake, and team owners are gamblers.

If two teams are fairly evenly matched, it is the turnovers and the judgement calls by the referees that usually decide the outcome. I well remember one game in which there were eight fumbles, four by each side. The winning team recovered all of their four fumbles; they also recovered all of the four fumbles by their opponent! This defies the odds. But to the blind who refuse to look at the power of mind over matter, the losing team just had tough luck.

ABUSING THEIR PROFESSION

Los Angeles "Times", Feb. 11, 1983: "The World Psychiatric Association said the Soviet Union has quit the organization, five months before the group was due to consider allegations that Soviet psychiatrists abuse their profession to stifle political dissent. The move, announced by association officials in Vienna, raised speculation that Yuri V. Andropov, the new Soviet leader, may be signaling his determination to reject foreign pressure for human rights reforms."

AND DISCREDITING RESEARCH IN AMERICA

"James 'The no-so-very-amazing' Randi came out with his book called 'Flim Flam' which was supposed to lay to rest once and for all the 'utterly fantastic claims' of just about everyone (including Berlitz and possibly even you and I) that has ever been associated in any way with anything occult, unexplained or parapsychological. Randi is a close associate of Phil Klass, Jim Oberg, Robert Shaffer and Co., all of whom are mixed up (closely) with Martin Gardner (founder of The Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, CSICOP) who, rumor has it, has been heavily funded by the KGB and the American Communists. Motive: The Russians are highly interested in developing ESP and other psychic phenomena for their own (nasty) purposes, and figure it is to their own benefit to confuse or discredit any similar efforts being conducted on this side of the Atlantic. My book 'The Philadelphia Experiment' continues to sell well in England (over 300,000 copies). One of the more positive results of this has been that several important sources of new information have emerged from the British woodwork, a couple of whom have provided some astounding data that neither Charles Berlitz nor I was even aware existed!"

Bill Moore, Prescott, Arizona

The rumor I heard a year ago, Bill, was that CSICOP was backed by the CIA! Maybe they're accepting money from both sides, as neither the extreme Right nor the extreme Left want uncontrolled psychics prying into their subversive activities. Remember, there are all kinds of organizations here in the United States that don't want telepathists looking in on their secret meetings -- religious, political, financial, industrial -- you name it; and so they are violently opposed to any borderland science which threatens to expose their illegal and evil machinations against the public.

THE "NOT-SO-AMAZING" RANDI BUFFALOED

It was the "Magic or Miracle" program on Channel 4 TV from Los Angeles, Feb. 9, 1983, which set up an extensive interview confrontation between Uri Geller and Randi, the trickster. But the producers of the television program tricked Randi into exposing himself for the fraud he is. They took him on a pilgrimage to the island of Shri Lanka, formerly Ceylon, off the coast of India, to personally observe a Hindu fire-walk. There were camera shots of the pre-preparations, and there was Randi, on his knees by the fire pit, ready to gleefully expose any evidence of fraud for all the world to see. The heat from the fiercely glowing embers was so great he had to lean back and shield his face from the heat! Barefooted the devotees calmly and deliberately walked across the glowing coals, even pausing to scuff them with their feet. A piece of Kleenex Randi tossed onto the coals burst immediately into flames. Afterward there was a camera shot of Randi closely touching and examining the bare foot of one of the fire-walkers. "I'm buffaloed!" Randi admitted, crestfallen. He has a standing offer of $50,000 to anyone who can prove psychic powers to his satisfaction. He should have paid the money to the producers of the TV show, or to the temple to which the fire-walkers belong!

THE CURSE OF GERONIMO

"When the Indian chief, Geronimo, surrendered in 1886 a large number of his Apaches were loaded on to freight cars and shipped from the Arizona desert to a concentration camp in the swamps of Florida. Geronimo gloomily eyed his beloved mountains. A soldier held his bayonet at the Chief's belly. Geronimo raised his hands toward the sky, addressing the Apache god Usen, and intoned in the Apache tongue: 'I put a curse on all Yankee white devils for your crimes of robbery and rape. Whites, your cities will be destroyed. Your young people will become evil and hate other White devils. In time they will become slaves to the green medicine (Mescaline) that Usen gave to heal the Apache. Black men will become strong and revolt. Great wars will come to you. Great White Chief will be murdered. No safety. No peace. My grandfather's spirit and Usen know that these things will happen.'

"Unquote. Look about you. Aren't these things happening today? It seems that the karmic birds launched by our forefathers are coming home to roost."

THE BLESSING OF ASHTAR: THE NEUTRINO SHIELD

"Realize that we give forth with few words, but those words are empowered to bring forth great realization in the minds of those open to receive. The blind see not and the deaf hear not, but the eyes and ears of the faithful are opened to receive.

"The Time of the Separation is completed and determinations of grade established. The testings by the Spirit are accomplished and the status of each individual's potential recorded as of the direction of their God Self. Our relationship to you is now one of following through, according to the edicts of the Divine Self.

"Your determination toward us is to be one of knowing your Spirit has given full instruction as to the degree of aid we are permitted to add toward your protection -- and the avenues of assistance we will be called upon to afford you. This cannot be changed!

"The Omega Shield, which is called so by us to identify the shield of the Last Days, is afforded by our God-given ability to bend the light rays around you in case of necessity. So as you walk in the ways of your Lord, by His command we give assistance.

"In no way can you command this Shield. In no way can you manipulate it or call for it successfully, as it is by the command of your Spirit that we issue forth this accomplishment. We are but assistants of the Lord, and carry forth the command of the Spirit.

"It is the gift of your Spirit to make you aware of this Shield, that your faith be strengthened in the knowing. Your awareness will not be by mere words, but by the assurance of your inner knowing, thereby assisting you to walk in strength and confidence in the world of turmoils.

"We intercede by the command of the Spirit and not by petitions to us; for your communications must always be with the Father, who is ever your authority, and so it is with us, likewise.

"Those who would advise you to call upon us are as the blind leading the blind -- as our source of guidance is the same as yours -- as we are directed in all actions by the Spirit. Our petitions and reverence are to the God-self -- as so yours must be.

"From our level of action we are called to assist your level of action by the Lord of Creation. Our hand is firm in His, and yours in His unites us as of one family. Fear not for the Lord is with you. The Comforter abides within. He sends His angels and Ambassadors of Light to catch you up."

It would seem, from the above, that the groundwork for the big change from Piscean to Aquarian influence has been laid. All that remains to do now is change the scenery. It is not in our hands.

This program is used to improve resistance. The integrity of the system is increased by taking into the system the homeopathically diluted personal antigens. The personal antigens are created when the body throws off waste products of a disturbed metabolism. These waste products can be found in either blood or urine.

PREPARATION OF ANTIGEN:

1. Obtain and clean a medicine dropper and six small test tubes as used in Clinitesting for sugar. Obtain from a drug store.
2. Place 18 drops of water into each tube and place in a cup to avoid spillage.
3. Collect a mid-stream urine specimen or a blood sample and place two drops into tube #1.
4. Succuss the tube 25-50 times. To do this clench the tube in a closed hand with the thumb over the tube mouth. Sharply pound the fist into the other palm. This is succussion and very important.
5. Then place two drops from tube #1 into tube #2. Repeat the succussion process. Rinse the dropper each time used. Continue the dilution-succussion processes until all six tubes have been used.
6. The mixture in tube #6 then represents a 6x or 1/1,000,000 dilution of your personal antigen.

ADMINISTRATION OF ANTIGEN:

1. Dosage frequency: Twice weekly to start, later may be increased to thrice weekly then daily.
2. Administration: Sub-lingually or under the tongue.
3. Dosage to start is one drop under the tongue and increase one drop each dose until ten drops are taken at one time.
4. Continue ten drops per dosage for a couple of months then take thrice weekly. Increase to daily dosages if indicated and desired after another couple of months or according to desired results.
5. Make a new 6x solution each time. Use only the 6x for dosages.

"Dr. Alan Nittler practiced medicine in Santa Cruz, California, but when he began to emphasize nutrition rather than drugs and surgery the county medical authorities lifted his license. He was my doctor until he died in 1981. His book, 'A New Breed of Doctor' with introduction by Linda Clark, was published in 1972. He founded the Nutrition Club, which promotes this New Breed Auto-Immune program. After the first week one can start right out the second week with 10 drop increments and within two to three weeks taking the antigen daily."

HOMEOPATHY UNDER A NEW NAME? MONOCLONAL ANTIBODIES

"For the first time, doctors have cured a deadly assault on the body's immune system, saving the life of a week-old baby with an experimental treatment called monoclonal antibodies. 'We were able to stop what was clearly a fatal reaction,' said Dr. Fred Rosen of Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. Many persons develop the reaction, known as graft-versus-host disease, after bone marrow transplants to treat leukemia and other diseases. Rosen said the new treatment holds great promise in reversing the often-fatal complication in such patients." LA "Times" 2/16/83

Homeopathy is and always has been anathema to organized medicine because it's too simple, too cheap, as indicated in the late Dr. Nittler's "Auto-Immune Program", by which one develops the necessary antibodies, or anti-gens, from one's own urine, at home!

A PROPHET WITH HONOR, BUT NO SATISFACTION

In the Nov-Dec 1982 Journal we predicted that NOW, the National Organization for Women, was on a collision course with MIRO, the Military-Industrial-Religious Oligarchy which runs the nation at a profit, if NOW developed enough political clout to "change the course of the nation". In the November elections the Daughters of Isis proved their political power by kicking out of office -- via the vote -- many of the Good Ol' Boys who blocked the passage of their Equal Rights Amendment. In January MIRO struck back with the arrest and imprisonment of Ginny Foat, president of the 30,000-member California chapter of NOW, on a trumped-up murder charge which had been dismissed 17 years ago in Louisiana for lack of evidence.

Ms. Foat has made no secret of her colorful past, of her marriage to the wife-beater, Sidote, who apparently implicated her in the murder of a South American businessman outside a New Orleans bar in 1965. Sidote refused to testify against her then. They separated. In 1977 he committed murder in Nevada, was charged, tried, convicted and sentenced to 25 years in prison. He was paroled in 1981, violated his parole and arrested again. Now the authorities are offering him a reduced sentence if he will testify against his ex-wife as Louisiana authorities warm up the old murder case. This is sweet revenge for them. Louisiana Good Ol' Boy legislators voted down the Equal Rights Amendment, so NOW organized a boycott against the merchants of the state. So vindictive are they that Ginny Foat is being held without bail in the Los Angeles prison until her extradition to Louisiana can be arranged. When their power is threatened, the Good Ol'Boys of our religious, financial, political, industrial and military institutions turn out to be arrogant malevolent bastards. I should know. I was one in past lives. That's why I'm here in this jail of the solar system, working out my karma here rather than on my home planet.

A CHAMPION OF THE OPPRESSED

Los Angeles "Times", Jan. 23, 1983: "This is in response to your article (Jan. 16), 'Ginny Foat: A Rambling, Tangled Life.' We know the Ginny Foat who has been the champion of human rights, for all people, but particularly for those of the oppressed. Within the National Organization for Women and the Democratic Party, Ginny has authored resolutions that insure our basic constitutional rights, resolutions that have been banners under which we all have fought to protect our basic freedoms. These resolutions have not been empty promises but have become legislation on the books of California.

"No matter what side of the issue people are on, whether it be reproductive rights, nuclear disarmament, or the equal rights amendment, it is clear that Ginny Foat has affected thousands of peoples' lives in a positive way. This is a rambling, tangled life?

"The idea that her 'feminist' friends are perplexed at the recent events is completely and totally false. We have known, for many years, of the events of Ginny's life, of her personal struggle as a battered wife, and were of the opinion, as was she, that following her Nevada acquittal, she was, finally free of any incriminating charges. In 1977, when the charges were originally brought against Ginny Foat, she was unknown to the press and to the public. In 1983, Ginny is a media event. It's the same allegation; we must ask, what is different? Politics? Of course it's political!

"Every time we have had an effective leader in human rights, something tragic has befallen them! Ginny Foat's civil liberties are being violated. Her fight for her life is the fight of every person in this country who loves the Constitution, as do we, Ginny's friends and colleagues."

DEATH OF A PASSIVE WOMAN

"From the Sybil Brand Institute (LA prison for women), Foat sent an open letter to supporters Tuesday night, thanking them and adding, 'I have no guilt. . . in these days to come you will hear many things about me and about the violent acts of which I am accused. You, by your own declaration of feminism, are unfortunately part of that terror. . . The only violence in my life is that which has been perpetuated against me. The only killing in my life was the death of a passive woman named Ginny Foat, before the birth of a strong feminist by the same name." On a minor legal technicality, the Los Angeles judge ordered Ms. Foat held without bail; and of course the State governor, a MIRO satrap, will approve her extradition to Louisiana for trial; while the leaders of NOW become even more dedicated in their resolve to seek justice under the Law.

Volume XXXIX, No. 2 of the Round Robin Journal of Borderland Research, and we push forward into the 24th year of Stewardship and the publishing of the results of our search for Truth, whatever that Truth might be, wherever that search might lead. Latest inquiry about a subscription to the Journal is from the Inst. F Grenzgebiete der Psych & Psychohygiene, Bibliothek: Micaela Brunner, Eichhalde 12, 7800 Freiburg, West Germany. An indication that we are becoming respectable to orthodox science? Dr. Andrija Puharich tells us that eight nations are now engaged in psychic warfare. That's a truth of the early 1980s we can answer with some authority because we've been engaged in Psychic Self-Defense for over 20 years! And some of the examples of successful defense have been published in our Journals, using mental means and ritual magick. 1982 saw us publishing information and schematics on ELF wave, electro-magnetic devices which also provide a measure of psychic self-defense. Russian military maniacs started that ELF wave warfare in 1976. The broadcasts from powerful transmitters at Kiev, Gomel and Kiev continue, at 5.340 Megahertz. We can pick them up easily here in Vista at night. No doubt other consciousness oppressing wavelengths will be identified and used. Countermeasures are being developed. As a clearing house for unusual information we will continue to publish such information and details as they become available. Readers are reminded to refer again to the "Garden Grid Point" item in the CQC section of the Nov-Dec 1982 Journal as a way of maintaining positive, protective vibes in their home environment. The Braida Medallion there should be copied out on a piece of paper. Place this, together with a person's "witness" -- picture or signature -- by a vibrating radio speaker, and you have the simplest of broadcast treatment arrangements.

THE BIBLE CANNOT BE BANNED FROM THE MAILS, YET

An Associate writes to tell us that the House-passed Bill to increase the police-state powers of the United States Post Office failed of passage in the U.S. Senate. So this Fascist threat to further curtail what freedom of the press we have has been stopped again -- for the time-being, at least; but if George Orwell's prophetic "1984" -- written in 1949 -- comes true, and we enter the "Caesar" period of our civilization, restricted use of the mails will be only a small part of the oppressive regulations put in force by a military-type dictatorship. We see horrible examples now in the military governments of Argentina and Chile. There the political corruption was so flagrant and inept that the people turned to a "strong man" to solve their problems -- only to find that the military type leader is even less capable of problem-solving than the civilian politicians he replaces! The military solution to domestic crises is to take the peoples' attention off the leaders' ineptness by starting a war -- such as the disastrous invasion of the Falkland islands. If the military takes over here in 1985 -- their solution to our domestic problems will be to start an atomic war with Russia -- an outward expression of their inward death wish -- one that is shared by the President and his staff. They will do their damndest to take us down with them in a flaming holocaust foreseen so clearly by Richard Wagner a hundred years ago, "The Twilight of the Gods". But if the "Blessing of Ashtar" (page 30) has any significance, protective measures have already been taken for those determined to live by the Golden Rule and to salvage what is worth saving from the wreckage of this old Piscean Age.

FLYING SAUCER CONVENTION IN TUCSON, ARIZONA

In the Feb 15th edition of "Saucer Smear", editor James Moseley (PO Box 163, Ft Lee, NJ 07024) tells us that the National UFO Conference (NUFOC) will be in Tucson this year and "your humble 'Smear' editor will act as Master of Ceremonies. This glorious conference will take place on the weekend of May 14th, and we hope to see a lot of our loyal non-subscribers out there. For details write to the local chairman, Ed Biebel, 1612 Charolais Way, Kino Springs, AZ 85621." He says UFO researchers Kal Korff, Hal Starr and Rick Hilberg have so far been scheduled. As this is an easy day's drive from Vista, and as one of Moseley's "loyal non-subscribers", we'll probably put in an appearance ourselves and welcome the chance for an exchange of ideas and anecdotes with members of the club.

"WHO FLYS THE SAUCERS?" - BSRF No. 2-N: Are they super-beings? Are they robots? Humanoids? Or all three? We take a closer look at the life-forms manning the elusive UFOs and re-reading the contactee stories for clues to the identities and purposes of the Visitors and the Intruders. The answers are the same, since before 1947 both Good Guys and Bad guys are coming from Outer Space. We marshall evidence from a 25-year accumulation of data, including first-hand accounts of contacts with Tin-Can and Jelly-Bag robots, the Three Men in Black, the Viknors from Venus-Etheria, and from the Ashtar Command with its Guide Lines for Space Contact. 48 pages, illustrated, postpaid. . . $3.00

WEST COAST CONFERENCE OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF DOWSERS

The 1983 Conference will be held again on the campus of the University of California at Santa Cruz, June 25-29, five days and nights of Schools, Workshops and Seminars. Dowsing, with Pendulum or Rod, takes one through the Veil and puts one in touch with the Elemental Forces which guard the earth's treasures, with its attendant rewards, and dangers. At present, Dowsing appears to be the only way to locate the power grid lines which created and sustain the earth, and us. We'll be there to give our illustrated talk on the World Power Grid and Its Relation To Psychotronic Warfare and Welfare. For more information write to Program Coordinator Susan Emigh, 757 Seminole Way, Palo Alto, California 94303.

"THE WORLD POWER GRID AND ITS IMPORTANCE TO DOWSERS"

Virginia Baker, president of the Orange County Chapter of the American Society of Dowsers, Inc., has invited us to give the World Power Grid talk at the Chapter's regular meeting, Saturday, afternoon, May 21st, at Santa Ana College, 17th and Bristol Streets. For more information on the Society and its meetings and purposes, write to Mrs. Baker, 702 West Park Lane, Santa Ana, California 92706 or call 714-543-5575
