* * * It is the first thing I have seen which gives me any interest in Hindu literature—* * *

* * * They (the Lectures) have given me a broader view of the subjects of which they treat than anything I have ever read on the subject. * * *

* * * I consider it a very important contribution to my oriental library. I hope to review it favorably when the occasion presents itself. I am especially glad to note your defence and expositor of the Tantras.*

SARALA AND HINGANA.

Tales descriptive of Indian Life, one of which deals with the higher aspects of the life of a Yogi. Price Rupee one only.

We are indebted to Mr. K. Chakravarti, the noted Hindu Author, for a copy of his latest work, "Sarala and Hingana" an interesting story of Hindu life. In reading it one feels spiritual thought of its author pervading it, like the delightful perfume of a flower.—"The Worlds-Advanced Thought."

MR. CHAKRAVARTI, the talented author of this pleasant, with volume, has treated a small sample of the life of the Hindu nation with considerable skill. Mr. Chakravarti besides this has a wide knowledge of Eastern philosophy. His lecture on Hindu Religion and Yoga, is one of the most valuable work on the subject. He is not merely a wordy theorist but a practical worker gifted with a large amount of the clairvoyant faculty to which I can bear testimony. This is the man the Psychological Research Society would value.
