The Manchester Lyceum District Council's Representative.

The subject of our sketch, Mr. Fred Snape, was born at Droylesden, on May 9th, 1880. When quite young he attended various Nonconformist Sunday Schools up to the year 1894, when some unpleasantness arose which caused his parents to sever their connection with the Chapel.

They then began to attend various Spiritualists' meeting-places, and decided to allow their children to attend the Lyceums, which was at that time held in the Granville Hall, Openshaw. He attended this Lyceum till 1898, when he removed to Hollinwood, and became a regular attender and worker in that Lyceum. He was an energetic worker, and was soon elected to the office of Secretary, which he filled very capably for a number of years.

His executive abilities led to his being elected as the Lyceum Representative on the Lancashire Demonstration Committee whose gatherings did good propaganda Lyceum work. He was also a representative on the Rochdale Lyceum District Council. At the present he is the Vice-President, for the third year, of the Manchester and Salford Lyceum District Council. He is also Conductor of the Hollinwood (Byrom Street) Lyceum, to which position he has been elected for five successive years.

He has had convincing proofs of the continuity of life after physical death. These proofs, coupled with the Lyceum teachings, and its system of training and education, he regards as the best religious training that the world has ever produced. He says that it was like being born anew when brought into touch with the wonderful teachings of the great seer, Andrew Jackson Davis, the beloved Founder of the Children's Progressive Lyceum.

THE HEREAFTER.

THROUGH AUTOMATIC WRITING.

ELLEN MANN (Bournemouth).

Sooner or later every mortal must pass the river of death. Death is only like passing out into our home to continue our spiritual work. Death does not break the continuity of our lives, for there is no break in our conscious and continuous identity in the world beyond the one we know. Genuine character, personality, and essential belongings, such as memory, culture, affections, and tastes, are continuous; while worldly possessions, bodily pain, and other disabilities are taken away. There is nothing startling in the new experience, it is the natural sequence and outgrowth of the old; for we know that the so-called dead never die.

Death is the coming into the real purpose of man's present career; so may be looked upon as a birthday, the beginning of a new and higher life. We must all go through that which is regarded as the "King of Terrors," to have the real life more abundantly in those spheres that through death are extended and expanded.

The Summerland—to which little children are taken at death—is not, as we have been taught in the past, only open to the chosen few, the elect; but for all to partake of its glorious pleasures and duties.

The hour of death is the moment of spiritual resurrection, and we must all try to leave off our journey here, where we hope to go on in the heavenly spheres.

This earth-life is given us to live up to our highest and best, and to speak the little word in season. The question is, are we living for real things now? If so, we build a spirit-home of our own.

Those beloved ones whom we call dead are not cut off in the sense that they have no more interest or concern in what we do or suffer here. They do come back to their dear ones still living in the physical body.

MOTTO FOR THE MONTH:—

“Kind eyes evoke many a sincere effort.

The heart that is eternally giving will not be ever craving.

Our opinions should expand year by year, as a tree grows.”

Elizabeth Gibson.

My dear Bluebells and readers all,—

Because of the unavoidable delay in the issue of the last BANNER; it is only three days since you got them, when I am now writing for our Page. (You see, the matter has to be sent to the printers nearly a fortnight before the BANNER is due out). The result this time is that I've only received one letter; and that has arrived to-day from Doris Ward (Horwich). Let me quote parts of her letter:—“In my estimation, Mr. Sharpe's explanation of the symbols was ably given, and able to be understood by a little thought on our part, making it very interesting.

Our last motto is a good guide for us;—to try to do a kind deed wherever we go. We can always do a kind action, or speak a sympathetic word, as we journey along in our daily life; and in doing so we shall be brightening the lives of others and making the world a little better than we found it.”

Thank you, Doris, for your letter, and for your unflagging interest in our Guild.

I'm sorry Mr. Sharpe's article was crowded out last month; but let us hope things will soon be better, and the BANNER back to its full size.

I'll conclude by giving you the promised story.

Your loving sister,

FLORA BELLE.

ROSA'S DREAM.

By LULU B. CAGER, Brighton.

It was Christmas Eve, and as usual, the great streets and squares of London were filled with an excitable and bustling crowd. Many people were on shopping excursions, but a great many were only looking with longing eyes at the brilliantly lighted shops. A certain small boy was standing before a baker's shop, looking with hungry eyes at the tempting hot and crisp pastries. He turned away, knowing full well that if he stayed much longer, some heartless policeman would come along and ask him if he “Was trying ter eadge.” As he turned wearily, he saw the shop across the road where he had looked many times that day, wondering why it was the Lord allowed some people to have all the money and others none;—it was very unfair. He now turned his weary feet in that direction, and pulling his threadbare coat tightly round his cold and thin little body, he stepped amongst the traffic, and reached the other side in safety. He then whispered to himself excitedly, “It's still there! It's still there!” He looked anxiously at the small imitation Santa Claus. He had often looked at it, and wished oh! so much that he had enough money to buy it for his baby sister, but he knew that would never come to pass. What was that! He suddenly realised that somebody was crying softly not far away; and, looking down, he saw a little girl crouching in a corner. He asked her gently the cause of her crying, and she told him how very cold she was. He then took his thin coat from his little shivering frame, and placed it around the little girl. Another little girl with her governess at that moment passed by in their carriage and saw the little incident, and Rosa, for such was this little girl's name, sniffed disdainfully, and said, “Fancy him being so silly as to take his own coat off to put on somebody else!” But her companion did not answer for she well knew what a selfish little girl Rosa had developed into.

Late in the evening both children retired to their respective homes, the boy to the rooms where his mother lodged, and Rosa to the stately and luxuriant mansion, where she had been born and bred. She had no sooner been put to bed and laid her head on the pillow than she fell asleep. She was not to sleep long, for suddenly somebody shook her gently by the shoulder. Upon opening her eyes, who should she see beside her but the boy whom she had that day thought stupid. (Strange to say she did not wonder how he got there!) He motioned to her to dress. She did so, and he then took her hand and led her to the door. Five minutes later found the two children walking quickly through the deserted streets. They stopped before a dingy looking house. The boy pulled her slightly and led the way into it. At any other time Rosa would have scorned the idea of being led by somebody sociably beneath her, but now—! At last they reached the top room of this house, and Rosa to her extreme surprise, saw her own beautiful mother, thin, white, and pinched, lying on a mattress on the floor. She saw a little girl like herself kneeling by the mattress, whispering soothing words to her mother, until she dropped asleep. Then, rising, Rosa saw her shake her head and heard her talking to herself. This was what she was saying, “It can't go on, it really can't. I must ask for a rise, my money that I am earning now, 5/- a week, can't keep us, and mother an invalid! I am only a little servant girl, but I will and can work till later hours, and therefore earn more money." The real Rosa turned and looked at her companion, and he, the boy, spoke for the first time, "Suppose that was really you?" So it was only a dream after all, and Rosa woke up with a start to find that the boy, the desolate room, and its inhabitants had disappeared. But the last words that were uttered in the dream, kept ringing in her ears, "Suppose that was really you" Rosa shuddered, Suppose!

She dressed herself quickly and ran into the room adjoining her own for a candle. She lit it, and when she went to her stocking and pillow case, she found them full of beautiful toys which Santa Claus had left for her. She ran downstairs, and found, to her delight, that her breakfast plate was also piled with queer-looking parcels. After breakfast, Rosa asked her mother if she could accompany her governess and take some of the good things and Christmas dinner round to the poor. Her mother readily consented, only too pleased to think her little girl should ask such a thing.

Now Rosa did something she had never done before. She collected more than half of her toys together and took them with her. (Her mother was delighted). The last house they visited was that of a poor widow, with two children. To Rosa's great delight she found that one of the two children was the little boy who had taught her such a great lesson in her dreams. Suddenly, to her dismay, she remembered she had only one toy left, a miniature Santa Claus, but she gave this to him with a willing heart. It did her heart good to see how pleased and grateful he was for such a small gift, but as much as he would have liked to have had it for himself, he said, "This is just the thing I was longing to buy for baby," and he placed it in the chubby hands so gently. Rosa thought to herself; how different from her he was; so unselfish. She determined this should be the turning point in her life. She would never be selfish any more.

She did not find this easy, but "Perseverance wins," and Rosa tried hard, and soon improved greatly.

The Meaning and Adornments of Colour.

PART I.

We live in a most wonderful world; full of extraordinary things; but I want you to remember that it was by the almighty power of Love and Peace, through God, that the globe on which we dwell, with all its beautiful variety, was brought into being out of abounding Universal Chaos. The bright Sun that rules the day; the pale Moon that governs the night; with all the hosts of stars that adorns the sky; were formed out of nothingness. The fruitful trees, the lovely flowers, and the beautiful variety of their colours, were produced by His word, and all of His Works, and Laws, demand our admiration and praise; for who but a God of infinite power could have done all this! Now there is one thing which God when he created Man, the master of his creation, did not forget; for how could such workmanship overlook anything? That is He has made you and me, the noblest part of His creation, because He has endowed us with intellectual powers of inestimable worth. I may say it is for the development of those powers that I pen these meditations. Now, Mr. Critic, I may have gone beyond a small child's mind-conceptions, but, you see, I may appeal to those intellectual powers within, for as the child goes through the various phases of life, having come from babyhood to childhood, it has to reach out toward youth and manhood or womanhood. So if not now, probably in the later stage, these meditations may bear fruits. Has the significance of colour ever struck you? How lovely the blending together of a beautiful bunch of flowers of all colours! How grand the blending of colour in the rainbow! Need we wonder at form in our symbol being surrounded with shields of colours, when we come to reflect on Joseph's coat of many colours? Surely we are living in a wonderful world, also let us say a wonderful age. We should learn while young of the great Law of Vibration and how it regulates the Universe; the language of colour, and the language of flowers, were known by mankind in the ages past. The people of to-day pay little or no attention to the languages aforementioned, which is of the deepest importance to the fuller development of every man, woman or child's Body, Spirit, and Soul. People sometimes desire to learn some foreign language, such as Latin or Greek, because they consider them to be a valuable part in education. Then why not consider the message from the infinite to you, through the language of flowers, to unfold the significance of the language of colour. Remember flowers speak as they lift their smiling faces in their infinity of colour to just and unjust, the language of life, love, and purity.

After this chaos of war is ended, when we hope to see the whole world bound together by new ties, what a help thereto it would be if we could all learn to speak one language that we all could understand! If a universal language could be adopted, I myself advocate Esperanto. Now I will put you a question in Esperanto, hoping some Lyceumist will send the English version. Kad vu povas parolar la franca o ula altra stranja linguo?

There is one thing more needed to be adopted, that is the universal understanding of the language of colour, so that it may be made one of the principles of the League of Nations. Indeed it would be a mighty help in the building of that new House of Life, whose top will reach, we hope, the heavens. Then we shall be able to say to Mr. Critic, "Vox populi, vox Dei"; and, dear reader, we shall see if the symbolic language of God is untrue, or the Infinite Wisdom of Truth. Meditate on these words, "God the Eternal Spirit, is the giver of all good."

The Pioneers of Freedom.

By HAROLD TAYLOR.

All through the ages there have arisen men and women, who, having had revealed to them a higher and better way of life and conduct, are willing to suffer scorn, and ill-treatment, and to sacrifice position, pleasure, comfort and even life itself in order that their fellow men and women may learn and benefit by the great truths which they have discovered.

These are the Pioneers of Freedom; freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and freedom of action.

We recall to mind those pioneers of centuries ago, who, because of their fearlessness in upholding what they believed to be true and right, live to-day in our memories as splendid examples of truly great men and women.

Amongst the earliest of these leaders of whom history furnishes us with any definite or reliable record are the founders of the three great religions, Mohammed, Confucius and Buddha, none the less great because their views may not be our views.

We must not forget such men as Socrates, Plato, Demosthenes and Aristotle, all of whom were originators of some new idea which has had an influence upon the civilised world.

At a time when he was most needed Jesus came into the world, and we are all familiar, or should be, with the life and work of this, one of the greatest and most influential messengers of truth the world has ever known, and the persecution and suffering which he endured, whilst giving his message.

Returning to more recent years we remember Martin Luther, the pioneer of Protestantism, and the Pilgrim Fathers, who gave up their homes and all the comforts of life, and went to suffer the hardships and dangers of life in a new and practically unknown country, in order that they might worship God freely in their own way without fear of persecution.

Then, too, we have the men who were the first to demand the Abolition of the Slave Traffic. What greater or more noble work could any man do for humanity, than to be the means of freeing so many of his fellowmen and women, no matter of what race or colour, from the awful clutches of the inhuman Slave Traders.

Neither must we forget the pioneers of Spiritualism, and the comfort their teaching has brought to the hearts of many bereaved ones. Also the wider and brighter outlook on this life and the next to which thousands have been brought through their efforts.

Truly, as we sit here this afternoon enjoying the privileges which the toils of all these and many other greatmen and women have given us, we cannot but feel grateful and inspired from the very depths of our hearts.

But it is of no use our spending our time in the study and discussion of the lives and works of these pioneers, unless we learn some lesson which will be beneficial to us in our everyday life.

In order to do this let us briefly consider some of the more essential attributes, which the characters of all the examples I have given, bear out in a marked degree.

Probably the two most important are a steadfast, unwavering faith in the convictions we uphold, and when

Then we must be willing to sacrifice all if necessary. Many people are inspired with the desire to play an important part in life, and to be a power for good in the world, but when the time comes to pay the price, and give up all which they hold dear, they are not ready or willing to go so far, and consequently they do not reach that position to which they aspire.

Also we must be tolerant and patient towards the views, either religious or otherwise of those with whom we come in contact, and considerate towards those who have not had the same opportunities of development as ourselves.

Although we cannot all be pioneers, by developing and introducing into our daily life and conduct these qualities, we can be of great use in the world, and our lives will not have been in vain.

FRATERNAL LOVE.

MRS. ELLEN E. MANN.

Given through automatic writing.

Fraternal love is the love which will be mostly in evidence in the spirit-world. All that is divine comes into perfection there. The sinner is not left out in the cold. Fraternal love is the very basis of evolution, as it makes for the benefit of humanity, the good of all that we come into contact with. We begin to realise the Kingdom of Heaven within us, when our fraternity is shewn for all whom God has created and made manifest in the flesh.

What a useful lesson is the purity, the beneficent effect of this love to those who participate in it. Not passion that will pass away with the physical body, but pure undefiled holy love, the love of the angel-world.

In the development of being kind and loving to others, we bring so much good and happiness into our own lives, that our thoughts will not cause us depression, because being unselfish our thoughts raise us to the pinnacle of joy.

We give out attention to our friends, but when it comes to purely fraternal love, we shall fall short unless the love of God is really in our hearts and lives.

We grasp earthly treasures, but often fail to grasp the greatest of all, our love for our brothers and sisters of whatever nation, creed and colour. How very unloving we are too to those who are not in our position in life! This is the question to ask ourselves, "Do we consider our employees, or love ourselves best? Have we emancipated ourselves, and left them to be emancipated by the State? We drift into positions we want to occupy, without any thought of our fitness, or, that someone else can fill that position better. We crowd out our habitations for the poor, and take no thought of their social betterment. How cruel rich people can be to their poor brethren! Is this brotherly love?"

Lyceum Notes and Comments.

Lack of space last month caused us to withhold the Lists of Lyceums, so as to enable us to insert the letters that were crowded out of October issue. These lists appear in this issue for the last time in their present form.

Now that the awful war is virtually over we may apply our minds to the study of subjects that are in harmony with the aims and objects of the Children's Progressive Lyceum, namely, the Father-Motherhood of God; the Brother-Sisterhood of humanity, and Personal Responsibility for all words spoken, and actions done.

Six years ago we opened a Peace Brigade Page in our BANNER to try and counteract or modify the Boy Scouts' Brigade, which was attracting so many of our young people with its militarist display of dress, bugles, drums, and public parades, gradually psychologising their young, sensitive natures with a love for the military life.

We taught the sacredness of human life, and pointed out there was a saner way of settling international grievances than by resorting to the old barbaric method of fighting with destructive arms of all kinds, namely, the setting up of a judiciary International Council of Nations.

These suggestions were received with indifference by the majority of our readers. Invested interests in big International Armaments Companies (whose policy to play off one nation against another by raising bogus cries of being left behind in national defence, secured big dividends for the shareholders, at the expense of the nation) worked most assiduously to keep the military spirit alive.

Now, after twenty millions of people have been either killed or wounded, and all the horrors have been suffered, which will have their ruinous effects on the nervous systems of generations to come, the world is recognising the necessity of a unity of nations, and an International Peace Council.

In the meantime we have lost a good number of our young men,—not because they were attracted by the military pomp and glory (?) as the taking of human life was abhorrent to them, but because they must either do it or be subjected to a living death, and be a mark of reproach to the public.

Our young women have done splendidly in maintaining their Lyceum until the "Boys come home," and so have earned the lasting gratitude of the Lyceum Movement. Many of "Our Boys" will fail to come home. There will be vacancies in our ranks, once filled by bright, promising young men. Are these to be lost sight of at the Home Coming?

I beg to suggest that each Lyceum begin NOW to make arrangements for a special Open Session for the Home Coming of Our Boys to be known as the Welcoming Home Lyceum Open Session. Be sure to secure the attendance of all who are able to return home. See that a list of their names is carefully recorded; and also a list of all those Boys whose lives have been sacrificed on the field of battle. Draw up an appropriate programme, and at a specified section let the Lyceum Secretary, calmly and clearly read over the names, then let the Conductor personally welcome the Boys who are assembled; and also, extend a hearty welcome, on behalf of the Lyceum, to the Boys who are present in their spirit bodies, and invite them to become workers on behalf of their Lyceum teachings on the spirit side of life; and so lift up the scattered forces to carry forward the Lyceum work to a grander goal than hitherto realised.

PEACE ON EARTH TO ALL MEN OF GOOD WILL.

We are informed by Mr. Elliott, of Yeadon, that Mr. S. S. Smith is not the Secretary of the Society. He was permitted to make the arrangements for the visit of the B.S.L.U. Management Committee; and that Miss Amy Myers is the Lyceum Conductor, to whom the Lyceum owes its efficiency; and that Mr. Smith and Miss Slater are the assistant Conductors.

Another Lyceum is being opened in the Birmingham District, namely, at Saltley. The Lincoln Alliance Spiritualist Society has decided to start a Lyceum. The Clitheroe (King Street) Society also opened a Lyceum. News comes from a Glossop friend that they intend to re-open their Lyceum in the New Year.

We thank Mr. Richardson for a photo of the Basement portion of their new Spiritual Church at Toronto, Canada, which is to be known as The Emma Hardinge Britten Memorial Spiritual Church. It is a credit to the untiring energy and perseverance of Mr. and Mrs. Stair, late of York, and their band of workers.

Will Lyceum Secretaries please settle their LYCEUM BANNER Accounts before December 27th, as the books will be closed for the year on December 28th.

To each and all THE LYCEUM BANNER sends its seasonable greetings.

THERE'S A MAN IN THE HOUSE.

BY MRS. ANN WILSON.

The night was a cold one, so dreary and chill,
 The house wrapped in silence, was peaceful and still;
 And dad, he was snoring, so cozy and warm,
 Not thinking of danger or dreaming of harm,
 For in fancy he roamed, 'mid visions of light.
 Life's ills laid aside, in dreams of the night.
 But hark, there's a call, in a clear ringing voice,
 "Say, dad, hurry up, there's a man in the house."
 Dad waits not for clothing, but seizes a chair,
 And in ghost like apparel, mounts up the stair,
 A chair in his hand, and a gleam in his eye
 That says, "I'll be master, I'll get him or die.
 But where is the monster? and why do you stare?
 Is it fun to be robbed? what an idiot you are."
 "Oh, dad, how jolly, it's my birthday you know,
 I'm just one and twenty, now go down below
 And finish your slumber. Now dad don't be cross,
 There's a man in the house, sleep with no fear of loss."
 Dad made no reply, but remarked to his spouse,
 "Say wife, did you know, there's a man in the house?"

HAPPY DAYS LONG AGO.

Happy days of my childhood, how distant they seem,
 When I played by the hedges in bloom,
 Making posies of roses; and down by the stream
 Pulling rushes to make a green broom.

Happy days long ago: Yes, I think of them yet,
 Let me still the fond mem'ry retain,
 The dead days of the past I can never forget,
 Ah, would I could see them again.

Happy days long ago in my boyhood's glad prime,
 How I revelled in sports on the lea,
 And a swim on the tide in the bright summer time,
 Or my skiff I would row on the sea.

Happy days when my sweetheart sat there by my side,
 On the old garden seat 'mid the flowers,
 And happy the day when I took my sweet bride
 To that rose covered cottage of ours.

Dear loving companion, I think of her yet,
 Let me still the fond mem'ry retain;
 Those dead days of the past I can never forget—
 Ah, would I could see them again.

H. T. WHORLOW.

If thou art worn and hard beset
 With sorrows that thou wouldst forget,
 If thou wouldst read a lesson that will keep
 Thy heart from fainting, and thy soul from sleep,
 Go to the woods and hills. No tears
 Dim the sweet look that Nature wears.

LONGFELLOW.

Nottingham Lyceum District Visitors' Report

NOTTINGHAM (Basford Mission).—Sorry to report that, owing to lack of encouragement, also adult workers, this Lyceum is having to close for a time.

PARLIAMENT STREET.—Good, talent very fine, credit due to all workers, pearls remarkable by young and old.

BURTON STREET.—Increased numbers; with the presence of Mr. E. Oaten, a very bright session. Glad to report more adult workers have come forward.

HUCKNALL.—Found closed owing to illness. Hoping to open in a few weeks, when better health prevails, and still more helpers offers their services.

LAMARTINE STREET.—No officers present through sickness, but on taking over the sessions all items were smartly given and marching and calisthenics good.

LEICESTER (Queen Street).—This Lyceum is making good progress spiritually; improvement in marching necessary, but good order always given.

DERBY (Forester Street).—New Lyceum open and very enthusiastic. Good number of adults, which speaks well for the effort. Numbers present 45.

EASTWOOD (Hill Top).—Good numbers continue to attend. Great improvement in marching and calisthenics. Better time required for singing. No pearls given, but responses smart.

MANSFIELD (Quacker Lane).—Owing to a wet morning we found not quite so many scholars. What came were very attentive in every way. Singing very good.

PEACE RESOLUTION.

DEAR SIR,—I would like to endorse the statements quoted by Eva A. Taylor, re our soldiers and C.O.'s. Like her, I agree that our soldiers on the war planes and our C.O.'s in the prison cells, are each fighting for freedom in their own particular way. Each individual, of both sexes, are laws unto themselves. I contend that experience is a wise teacher. No matter what station of life they may be placed in, it is no business of ours to condemn them without a moment's thought. Each one is some mother's son, and, believe me, there is no love like a mother's love. Rather would I pray for all our boys, that their experiences, both at home and abroad, may prove an incentive of helping them face the stern realities of earth life more bravely than ever before, and that they may ever strive to retain and attain that high standard quality of manhood we look for in our men to-day. Also, vice-versa. So shall we all be helping

"To redeem this world of folly
 Its wickedness, want and woe."

Yours, as ever,

ADA ELKIN.
