NHW H

DEVOTED TO THE NEW DISPENSATION, OR THE INAUGURATION OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN UPON EARTH, THROUGH THE AID OF SPIRITUAL INTERCOURSE.

VOL. III .-- NO. 8.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

WHOLE NO., 106.

Thoughts of the Age.

The Position of Science in True Religious Teaching.

An Address given at the Opening of the Meloda-on for Meetings of Spiritualists, Oct. 1, 1854. BY A. E. NEWTON.

The term science means simply knowledge certain knowledge-demonstrated truth concerning anything and everything within the cian, reach of human cognizance. Thus, the science of Astronomy includes all that is known respecting the sun, moon, planets, stars, comets, etc., and the relations of our earth to them- the science of Geology includes all that is known respecting the internal struc-ture of the earth—that of Geography embraces all knowledge respecting the earth's surface respecting the various kinds of substances of which the earth is composed-Chemistry respects the nature and properties of Deity Himself as "that chemical combinathese substances as ascertained by analysis tion whom men call God." and synthesis-the science of Botany includes all that is known of plants and vegetable productions-Zoology embraces all knowledge in relation to animal formations-An- and these are their God. thropology comprehends all that is known of man and his history-Pneumatology includes what is known respecting spiritual existences punitive safeguards against violation of specting the human soul-and Theology what bending Sovereign-" a consuming fire." is known respecting God-though it must be said that the present systems embrace truly all these, and inconceivably more? But what is believed, rather than what is known. to know Him truly, we must search all His All these branches of science have their di- revelations of Himself, that we may see all visions and subdivisions-as, for instance, sides of His character. If He has made a rev-Anthropology, or the Science of Man, in- elation in writing, (as the Bible is claimed cludes Animal Chemistry, Anatomy, Physi- to be,) that is but one of the endless methology, Dietetics, Medicine, Phrenology, ods He has taken to make Himself known. Psychology, and whatever relates to the di- And as we are better known by what we do versified manifestations of quality and capa- than by what we say, or write, so God may bility which the human being ever has exhi- be more surely known by His works than by bited or now exhibits.

Science, then, is our knowledge of actualities-it embraces all that we really know, festation of God through man, and of course of anything and everything in the universe, liable to be rendered imperfect by the imperbe the same more or less.

willing to admit, that all things in the uni- elation of God's Beauty, but flowers differ in verse have proceeded from one central or ul- their capacity to reveal the element of Beautimate cause, called Gon-be that cause con- ty,-and no one flower, nor all the flowers of sidered merely as a universal Forming Prin- our earth together, can be supposed to be ciple without personality, or embodied as a capable of revealing the whole Beauty of the Personal Intelligence,-it follows that sci- All-Beautiful. So man is an instrument ence in its broad sense is only Knowledge for revealing God's wisdom and love, but no or Gon-that physical science is simply one man, nor all men who have ever yet

This being so, it is self-evident that all Wisdom and Infinite Love, scientific truth (I do not say all scientific | Moreover, since man possesses an indetheories or speculations, but scientific TRUTH,) pendent consciousness and an intelligence of us-these are esteemed, with some honorable ly are his principles enforced! All that is DIVINE TRUTH-than which nothing can be his own, he must be peculiarity liable to exceptions, a descration of our pulpits! In words can do, all that language can express, science has arrived at any positive results in tions whatever revelations of the Divine are any department of inquiry, it gives positive made through his agency. Hence it is clear knowledge respecting the character and the that any written revelation of God is less will of the Divine Author of all, to just the likely to represent Him truly and more likely degree that these are manifested in that par- to represent Him falsely to our apprehenticular department of His works. The sculptor elaborates his interior conception in the chiseled marble, and in gazing on that, we learn the characteristics of his inner life .-The painter portrays his hidden thoughts upon the canvas; and from the pencillings he traces there, we read the emotions of his inmost soul. The poet "builds the lofty rhyme," and the architect constructs the stately edifice, and the artizan fabricates the skillful mechanism, from each of which productions we judge with certainty of the interior characteristics and capabilities of each mind. We all know each other by what we do and what we make. If our souls are filled with beauty, music, goodness, loveliness and truth, these characteristics will show themselves outwardly in what we do, and say, and create. So has it been truly said of God, that " the invisible things of Him, since the creation of the world have been clearly seen, being understood by the things that are

It is furthermore evident that we can derive full and complete knowledge of God only by becoming acquainted with all His works
—in other words, by a knowledge of all science. Just so far as we come short of this, so far are our conceptions of Him limited and partial-and those persons are necessarily most limited and partial in their conceptions of God, who know least of the various departments in which He has revealed Himself. Suppose one man to be possessed of a variety of capacities, each in an exalted degree ; is it not perfectly clear that whatever he might produce in one department would give little indication of his capacities in another, and thus little knowledge of his character as a whole ! That he could make a nicely adjusted watch might prove him a skillful mechanician, but it would give you no idea of his genius as a poet; nor would the most exquisitely chiseled statue give the slightest conception of his musical powers; nor would a moral essay convey any true idea of his abilities as an architect or a mathematician. He could reveal his capacities in each depart-

So the Deity reveals His various attributes. or characteristics in manifold outward exhibi-tions. Limited or partially developed human minds have ever been prone to fix on some

One sees in the Universe a grand exhibition of mechanical powers and contrivances, and hence he conceives of the Deity as a Grand Mechanic.

Another looks chiefly upon the artistic beauties of creation-the lights and shades of coloring spread out before the eye-and his God is a Great Painter.

A third listens enraptured to the song of the breeze, the cadence of the waterfull, the or, if a more positive expression be desired, notes of the bird, and the "music of the spheres "-and his Deity is a Mighty Musi-

"And the realms of space are His octave bars, And His music notes are the suns and stars." To another, " God is the Poet of Poets,"

"Each ray of light is a thought in verse, From the Poet-Heart of our God outsung."

Another sees in the Universe a grand chemical laboratory-each living organism is -Mineralogy comprehends all that is known but a piece of nicely adjusted chemical apparatus; and his God is thence a Great Chemist; and he can speak of even the

Some recognize nothing but a set of impersonal principles or Eternal Laws, destitute of moral, affectional, or intelligent attributes,

Others, fixing their minds chiefly on the manifestations of moral inflexibility, the in general-Psychology what is known re- law, conceive of a Stern Lawgiver-an Un-

Now is not it indisputable that God is writings. More than this, a revelation written in human language, is but a manifections of the medium or instrument em-Now if it be admitted, as most minds are played. A flower is an instrument for the revknowledge of God's works, and of his ways of written, can be supposed to have had suffi-working, in physical nature. cient capacity to unfold the whole of Infinite oritative. In so far as vitiate with his own thoughts an sions, than those revelations which are given without human agency. In other words, the deductions of positive science furnish us more reliable testimony as to the character and doings of God, than can be possibly be furnished by any revelation made in human lan-

> Especially must this be true as regards a revelation made in an age when science was almost wholly unknown, and when neither human language furnished the terms, nor human minds the capacity, to grasp its wonderful unfoldings.

Admitting, then, according to the formulas of the theologians, that the great end of all knowledge is to know God, and the great use of all knowledge is to enable us to understand and to do His will, and thus escape the penalties of transgression,-it is perfectly clear that these ends can never be attained without the aid of what is technically called science. For it is the very province of science, as before stated, to inform us of His works and of His ways of working.

It has been well said that "The undevout astronomer is mad," and the same may be as truly said of the devotee of any branch of science. But it is equally evident that the devout religionist who ignores science, and repudiates its positive deductions, is infected with a far more dangerous madness.

As God is one, and the Universe one, so Truth is one; all its departments are equally sacred, and important just in proportion to their bearing on human weal.

Illustrations of the importance of scientific knowledge to human welfare might be drawn abundantly from every hand. Man's relations to the external world, and to the internal world, are boundless as the Universe, measureless as Deity. And he can never wisely fulfil the duties of all these relations without some knowledge of them and of the laws which govern them.

For example, each of us, in our present life, is possessed of a physical body, composment only by what he produced in that de- ed of the elements of the material world around us, and affected by influences from it -a spiritual body, consisting of the more refined and subtle elements of this same material world, and susceptible to influences from the realm of the spiritual-and also a more self. We know not only that all manifestaprovince of science to inform us.

er attain them while he feeds the grossness modern cookery places on our tables. He weary school-men never knew." may supplicate most earnestly for "growth in grace"-but it will be of little avail while his dietetic habits tend surely to promote Personal Virtue Essential to growth in grease. He may agonize for spiritual and moral strength—power to resist temptation and to overcome evil—but his prayers will be likely to remain unanswered so long as he tampers with alcohol, tobacco, coffee, or any of those narcotics which weaken the nervous system and enervate the will. He may desire to consecrate all his energies of body and mind to what he conceives to be the service of God, but will be very apt to come short of the mark so long as he uses the suicidal razor to shave away the choicest of his physical strength three times every week. He may pray most earnestly for salvation in the future, but he can have little hope of attaining it, so long as he continues, in their examples; and yet the masses of so by violation of the laws of his physical being, to incur damnation in the present.

In short, no amount of wordy supplication to the Author of our being, for aid of any kind, can be expected to be of much avail, aid. Said an ancient writer, " Then shall I they practically disown. not be ashamed when I have respect unto all it need hardly be said, to a great extent, igtray the history of the earth's creation, as those tables of stone which encrust the globe to read the commandments written upon the physical, mental and moral constitution of man-in short, to scan the diversified re- refuse to practice. How sweetly are the enmotion, all beauty, and all beneficence around his virtues commended, and how energeticalhas no place within their precincts.

In the spiritual era, which is now dawnprehended its characteristics, science is to Science and Spiritual Truth are to be wedded Gon,-comprehensive as the Universe, and the person seeking it? exhaustless as Deity Himself.

The evidence of this I find not only in the fact that the present enlightened condition viction of the necessary oneness of all truth, of one person can make another good or will not permit it to receive spiritual revela- happy, unless that goodness become the actions which contradict the positive facts of tual property of the individual. It matters the revelations which mark this era, instead one else may be, to those who are destitute ual matters, do enter the domain of the God nor the angels can make a soul happy writings of Davis, of Ambler, Wilson, Hammond, Fishbough, and others,-the communications given through J. M. Spear, and many more, as well as the constant inter- is his own, and not the quality of another's course of more advanced minds and circles, acts, until he or she shall exercise by their furnish proof of this.

I do not affirm that all or any of these purported revelations, as yet given, whether heaven depends. What though all the anmade direct from Spiritual Intelligences, gels in heaven be happy, what doth it profit through unconscious entranced mediums, or final. I only say, that it is a characteristic of the revelations of this era, that they em- the principles which generate it. brace scientific and philosophical, as well as moral and theological questions; and that the great effort of the minds of the Higher Spheres, who are leading in this movement, evidently is to make man understand what of an ancient seer, "Truth shall spring out down from heaven." (Ps. 135: 11.)

I have only to add, in concluding these ob-

lied to the Great Soul of the Universe Him- to speak in this place, that their discourses cannot be transferred, and to suppose that will be confined to no one class of topics, the merits of Jesus may be set to the credit tions of the internal must be made through | that they will present no one phase of truth the external, but that the internal receives to the neglect of all others, and that their the elements of its growth and development texts will be derived from no one volume of through the external. There cannot there- the writings of the past, to be denominated fore be a sound and healthful development "The Sacred Volume." The whole outof the interior nature in an unsound and un- spread creation is our text-book, and every Maker. healthful body. But how to attain this healthfulness of the physical nature, it is the any department of it, is sacred truth. The flower, the pebble, you, even the paving-The devout man may pray for purity, and stone, trodden under foot as it is of man and sanctification, and holiness-but he can nev- beast,-each may furnish a text whose divine authorship none can call in questionof his animality with the impurities which each may preach lessons of "wisdom the Happiness.

An impartial review of public sentiment discloses a sad conflict of minds upon almost every question in which those minds are interested. No age or nation can claim unity of opinion, nor boast of infallibility of judgment. Whatever of refinement may be allowed to exist in individuals, still the masses of nations have not partaken of the perfectibility of the most refined, nor cared to become the followers of the light set before them. Great minds and good men have set the principles of justice and equity before their fellows in strong and effective language, and still stronger and more effectually ciety, though formally acknowledging the perfection of their principles and the purity of their conduct, have sadly ignored the practice which they commended in others. Complimentary as their words may seem to while we neglect or go counter to the very the wise and the good, it is but ignorant conditions on which He must bestow that zeal which allows them to approve of what

In no age or nation has this infatuationthy commandments," and this is the only this commendation of principles by words condition in which we shall not have reason and devial by acts-been more nakedly manifest than at this moment and in this coun-The popular religious teachers of the day, try. I see vast multitudes applauding with words the conduct of the wise and good, nore the lessons of science, in what are and seriously condemning the foolish and the termed their "sacred ministrations." Their bad, who have not the virtue to practice subjects must be chosen from the pages of their own recommendations. They can apone book, which all admit makes no claims prove of the noble and just principles of to teach of science. To set forth the glory other men, and laud their examples of beof God as declared by the heavens-to por- pevolence and worth with stirring words, but to follow them through good report and traced by the mighty Maker's own finger on gvil report is a task for which they have no

Instances are not wanting in which men commend to others what they themselves velations which God has made and is con- comiums of Jesus enunciated, how pathetitinually making of Himself in all life, all cally is his life described, how feelingly are act, it may be said that most of our modern is done to commend and enforce the religion religious temples are consecrated to the God which he taught. But what is the conduct? of the past,-a Deity who ignores science What are the examples, the doings, of those and frowns on all investigation,-while the who speak so favorably of him? Where LIVING Gop, who to-day is working in all the are they found in practice? How many seek forces of Nature, and is the Life of all life, to follow him? How many practically shun his footsteps? Why commend in words what is denied in acts! Does religion coning upon earth, if I have at all rightly ap- sist in words or deeds? Are men and women to enter heaven because Jesus is good, be the grand Revelator of God. Material or because he lived what he taught! Is no goodness in them requisite to be as happy as in Divine Harmony, and together will con- he? Is heaven so cheap, happiness so easy stitute a true Theology-a real Science or and plentiful, that no virtue is required in

We who have dwelt in the earth-body, and sojourned in the spirit-world for nearly half of a century, have not yet discovered of the human mind, and its intuitive con- any law or any way by which the goodness material science-but also in the fact that not how good the Infinite, or Jesus, or any of being confined to merely moral and spirit- of this quality. Neither the goodness of physical sciences and undertake to unfold without they possess that goodness and exman's relations to the world of matter. The ercise it for themselves. It is contrary to the laws of mind to make a soul happy without love and wisdom of its own.

What though Christ be good, his goodness own wills the principles of Jesus, or the virtues upon which all enjoyment in earth or those who reject the principles upon which written by highly spiritual minds acting nor- such happiness is immutably based ! It is a mally-I do not affirm that any of these fundamental and eternal law of nature, that scientific revelations are yet to be accepted all happiness must result from the practical as text-books of science-authoritative and and personal goodness of the possessor, and cannot accrue to any person dispossessed of

All happiness is resultant from individual qualities, and consists in the degree of the development of those qualities in each person. Relying upon finding enjoyment because another is possessed of the virtue he has never understood, and realize what he which brings it, is a delusion that paralyzes has never realized—the importance of his all our efforts to secure happiness. Men PHYSICAL relations to his SPIRITUAL develop- have dreamed that God, in his infinite goodment and immortal life. When this shall be ness, would in his purposes of grace transfer accomplished, then in the beautiful language the merits of Jesus to those who trusted in such an unjust and arbitrary insult to the of the earth; and righteousness shall look natural workings of his wisdom in the government of mankind. The moral force of such instruction is weakening to the cause of others, is a mistake which will find no justification in the truth. It matters not what authors or books may teach, the laws of God warrant no such injustice between man and man, nor between man and his

There is no law in the Universe that will justify the practice of crediting the merits of Jesus, or of angels, to any other individual than the proper one. And no individual has any right to expect such a fraudulent transaction as the doctrine of imputed sin and righteousness attaches to the Ruler of the Personal virtue recoils at the thought of such injustice. And if men and women venture to trust on getting to heaven because some one else is good while they are not, or in any record of history which may be thought to inculcate such an idea, it will still be a truth that they will find themselves disappointed when the justice of natural law shall be made known to them. They will then see that all happiness is but the result of an actual merit of some virtue existing in some person who is the recipient of its bless-

Men and women should not trust in errors to gain happiness. They cannot gain felicity by succumbing to popular views which conflict with the laws of reason and nature, nor receive the merits of another without possessing another's virtues. The noblest minds of earth and heaven are those who have merits of their own, and are capable of trusting in their own virtues to secure their exultation to higher spheres. In so doing, they act and think for themselves, and gather such instructions as nature with her millions of tongues, may present for their acceptance. Spirits may teach, men may listen, but when men do what law and nature demand, the virtue is the property of the doer, and the effect of such doing is happiness. This happiness is personal, and can accrue only to the actor. Such is the reward of good works.
C. Hammond, Medium.

[The following article has appeared once in the lumns of this paper, a year or two since; but we republish it at the request of several subscrib-We think it would be difficult for the talented authoress to find admission for such an artiele in any of our prominent religious journals at present. What was orthodox on this subject a few years since, is fearfully heterodox now .- N.]

From the N. V. Evangelist. On the Ministration of Departed Spirits in this World.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE. It is a beautiful belief,
That ever round our head
Are hovering on viewless wings
The Spirits of the dead.

While every year is taking one and another from the ranks of life and usefulness, or the charmed circle of friendship and love, it is soothing to remember that the Spiritual world is gaining in riches through the pover-

In early life, with our friends all around us—hearing their voices, cheered by their smiles—death and the Spiritual world are to us remote, misty, and half fabulous; but as we advance in our journey, and voice after voice is hushed, and form after form vanishes from our side, and our shadows falls almost solitary on the hill-side of life, the soul, by a necessity of its being, tends to the uns and Spiritual, and pursues in another life those it seeks in vain in this. For with every friend that dies, dies also some peculiar foru of social enjoyment, whose being depended on the peculiar character of that friend; till, late in the afternoon of life, the pilgrim seems to himself to have passed over to the unseen world, in successive portions, half his own Spirit; and poor is he who has not familiar-ized himself with that unknown, whither, despite himself, his soul is earnestly tending. One of the deepest and most imperative cravings of the human heart, as it follows its beloved ones beyond the vale, is for some assurance that they will still love and care for us. Could we firmly believe this, be-reavement would lose half its bitterness. As a German writer beautifully expressed it-"Our friend is not wholly gone from us; we see across the river of death, in the blue distance, the smoke of his cottage"—hence the heart, always creating what it desires, has ever made the guardianship of, and ministra-tion of departed Spirits, a favorite theme of

But is it, then, fiction ! Does revelation. which gives so many hopes which nature had not, give none! Is there no sober certainty to correspond to the inborn and passional craving of the soul! Do departed Spirits, in verity, retain any knowledge of what trans-pires in this world, and take any part in its

All that revelation says of a Spiritual state, is more intimation than assertion—it has no direct treatise, and teaches nothing apparently of set purpose, but gives vague, glorious images, while now and then, some accidental ray of intelligence looks out,

—like eyes of cherubs, shining From out the veil that hid the ark.

But, out of all the different hints and assertions of the Bible, we think a better inferential argument might be constructed, to prove the ministration of departed Spirits, than for many a doctrine which has passed, in its day, for the height of orthodoxy.

First, then, the Bible distinctly says, that there is a class of invisible Spirits who minis-ter to the children of men. "Are they not all ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" It is said of little children, that their "angels is said of little children, the face of the Father which is in Heaven." The last passage from the words of our Savior, taken in connection have derived but limited conceptions of Him. intelligence, affections and emotions, and al- the Boston Conference of the Spiritualists, of personal improvement, and makes the indifferent with the well-known tradition of his time, dividual who relies upon such faith indifferent as to his or her personal worth. Merit

For God's government over mind is, it seems throughout, one of intermediate agencies, and these not chosen at random, but with the nicest reference to their adaptation to the purpose intended.

Is it likely, then, that, in selecting subordinate agencies, this so necessary a requisite of a human life and experience, is overlooked? While around the throne of God stand Spirited and glorified, but thrillingly

while around the throne of God stand Spirits, now sainted and glorified, but thrillingly conscious of a past experience of sin and sorrow, and trembling to the soul, in sympathy with temptations and struggles like their own; is it likely that He would pass by these own; is it likely that He work, and commit souls, thus burning for the work, and commit it to those bright abstract Spirits, whose

it to those bright abstract Spirits, whose knowledge and experience are comparatively so distant and so cold?

It is strongly in confirmation of this idea, that in the transfiguration scene, which seems to have been intended purposely to give the disciples a glimpse of the glorified state of their Master, we find him attended by two Spirits of earth. Moses and Elias, "which appeared with him in glory, and stake of his appeared with him in glory, and spake of his death, which he should at accomplish at Je-

It appears that these so long departed ones were still mingling in deep sympathy with the tide of human affairs, not only aware of the tide of human affairs, not only aware of the present, but also informed as to the future. In coincidence with this idea, are all those passages which speak of the redeemed of earth as being closely and indissolubly identified with Christ, members of his body, of his flesh and his hones. It is not to be supposed that these united to Jesus above all others, by so vivid a sympathy and community of interests, are left out as instruments in that ereat work of human regeneration in that great work of human regeneration which engrosses him; and when we hear Christians spoken of as kings and priests unto God, as those who shall judge angels, we see it more than intimated that they are to be the parents and actors in that great work of Spiritual regeneration, of which Jesus is the

What then? May we look among the bands of ministering Spirits for our departed ones! Whom would God be more likely to send as? Have we in heaven a friend who knew us to the heart's core—a friend to whom we have unfolded our souls in their most secret recesses-to whom we have confessed our weaknesses and deplored our griefs!-if we are to have a ministering Spirit, who better adapted ?

Have we not memories which correspond to such belief! When our soul has been east down, has never an invisible voice whispered, "There is lifting up." Have not gales and breezes of sweet and healing thought been wafted over us, as if an angel has shaken from his wings the odors of Paradise! Many a one, we are confident, can remember such things; and whence come

Why do the children of the pious mother, whose grave has grown green and smooth with years, seem often to walk through perils and dangers fearful and imminent as the crossing Mohammed's fiery gulf on the edge of a drawn sword, yet walk unhurt? Ah! or a drawn sword, yet wank unnurt! An! could we see that glorious form! that face where the angel conceals not the mother—our questions would be answered.

It may be possible that a friend is sometimes taken because the Divine One sees that their windteness.

that their ministry can act upon us more powerfully from the unseen world than amid the infirmities of mortal intercourse.

Here, the soul, distracted and hemmed in by human events and by bodily infirmities, often scarce knows itself, and makes no impression on others correspondent to its de-sires. The mother would fain electrify the heart of her child; she yearns and burns in vain to make her soul effective on its soul, and to inspire it with a Spiritual and holy life; but all her own weaknesses, faults and mortal cares, cramp and confine her, till death breaks all fetters—and then first truly alive, risen, purified and at rest, she may do calmly, sweetly and certainly, what amid the tempests and tossings of life, she labored for painfully and fitfully.

So, also, to generous souls who burn for the good of man, who deplore the shortness of life, and the little that is permitted to any individul agency in this life, does this belief open a heavenly field. Think not, father or brother, long laboring for man, till thy sun stands on the western mountains—think not that thy day in this world is over. Perhaps, like Jesus, thou hast lived a human life and gained human experience, to become, under and like him, a savior of thousands—thou hast been through the preparation, but thy real work of good, thy full power of doing, is yet to begin.

There are some Spirits (and those of earth's choicest,) to whom, so far as enjoyment to themselves or others is concerned, this life seems to have been a total failure. A hard hand from the first, and all the way through life, seems to have been laid upon them; they seem to live only to be chastened and crushed, and we lay them in the grave at last in mournful silence. To such what a vision is opened by this belief! This hard discipline has been the school and task work by which their soul has been fitted for their nvisible labors in a future life; and when they pass the gates of the grave, their course of benevolent acting first begins, and they find themselves delighted possessors of what through many years they have sighed for—the power of doing good.

The year just passed, like all other years, has taken from a thousand circles the sainted, the just and the beloved-there are spots in a thousand graveyards, which have become this year dearer than all the living world; but in the loneliness of sorrow, how cheering to think that our lost ones are not wholly gone from us. They still may move about our nomes, shedding around them an atmosphere of purity and peace, promptings of good, and reproofs of evil; we are compassed about with a cloud of witnesses, whose hearts throb in sympathy with every effort and struggle, and who thrill with joy at our success. How should this thought check and rebuke every should this thought check and rebuke every worldly feeling and unworthy purpose, and enshrine us in the midst of a forgetful and unspiritual world, with an atmosphere of heavenly peace. They have overcome—have heavenly peace. They have overcome—have risen—are crowned, glorified—but still they remain to us, our assistants, our comforters, remain to us, our assistants, our comforters, and in every hour of darkness they seem to and in every hour of darkness they seem to say to us: "So we grieved, so we struggled, say to us: "So we grieved, so we struggled,

THE NEW ERA.

"BEHOLD! I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW."

S. C. HEWITT, A. E. NEWTON, EDITORS. S. C. HEWITT, PROPRIETOR.

OFFICE, NO. 15 FRANKLIN STREET.

Terms, $1,50 per Annum, in Advance. ISSUED EVERY SATURDAY.

Readers of this paper are all expected to do their own thinking, and no one to be held responsible for the opinions of another. The Editors will indicate their principal productions by their proper initials, and will exercise their best judgment in selecting from the favors of correspondents; but it is desired that every thought expressed, whether old or new, from spirits in the flesh or out, should stand only on its intrasse merits. stand only on its intrinsic merits.

BOSTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

The Marriage Question. The subject of the present article is now fairly before our readers, and it seems proper, if not absolutely demanded, that we should say some more definite word thereupon, than we have heretofore done. Some very sensitive friends think we should have done this sooner, but our own judgment has constantly decided otherwise. In relation to a question of this nature, and involving such momentous results, it has seemed to us especially needful to let the effervescence of thought and of passion have its brief day, that the public mind might be the better prepared for a more dispassionate and rationul view of the subject, than has, for the most part, been entertained of late in almost any quarter.

All questions, in their outset, are subject to extremes. And this is especially true of Marriage, which is the pivotal question of this age. Very seldom do we find those who are prepared to take neither side exclusively, but who, at the same time, see very clearly the truth and the error of both. Yet now and then, such do appear and say their word, only perhaps, for the time being, to get more kicks and curses, than good will and encouragement. Nevertheless, their word must be said, and if time does not, the eternities will, do them justice. So much then, in preface. We come now to the question itself. And

1. WHAT IS MARRIAGE! Does it consist in variety, or in duality? Is it a mere legal and external union, or is it mainly spiritual? We hesitate not to say that marriage is strictly dual in its nature-that it is the union of two, and of two only, in conjugal love. We have no possible faith in the idea of variety, either limited, or universal, if by that term is meant simultaneous change in one's conjugal loves-or, in other words, the capacity and strict rightfulness of loving, conjugally, more than one at the same time. The very idea of conjugality, by common consent, excludes the idea of various and simultaneous loves, for conjugality is duality, and that alone. It becomes, therefore, a solecism to talk of simultaneous variety in conjugal love. It is not simply an apparent, but a real paradox. The thing cannot be. There may be other loves, outside the conjugal-as that of charity, friendship, offspring, etc., which may be simultaneous and in variety; but the conjugal passion itself, is essentially dual, and is therefore exclusive, in the legitimate, proper and good sense of

But what proof have we of this! It is said that all nature illustrates the contrary. The male and female principles, we are told, exist throughout all nature-that even the mineral kingdom, as well as the vegetable, animal and human, reveals the principles of sexuality not only, but illustrates the doctrine of variety. There is a constant interchange of positive and negative, or male and female influence, not simply between two minerals, two vegetables, or two animals, but between each other, in almost endless variety. Here is a deposit of iron, copper, silver, or gold, giving off its chemical efflux, positively and negatively, or masculinely and femininely, not in a dual way, simply, but in variety, to any extent. Here, also, is a field of grain in blossom, and its impregnating substance is carried by the four winds, from one stalk to another, and another, and still another, without limit, knowing no exclusiveness-no confinement. And here again is the animal kingdom, with its genera and species-with also, its varied attractions -its constant crossing and re-crossing of breeds, and its endless interchanges of influences which reciprocally affect, not two only, from each other, but many from one, and one from many, on the male and female principles. So, also, it is argued, should it be with human beings, for the same law holds here as in all other departments of nature. If the law of variety is found everywhere else, and where, too, this principle of sex is especially concerned, why should it not be found also to be true of man-of the

The argument for variety, thus drawn from nature below and outside of man, it is said, is confirmed by human history. Scarcely a nation has yet existed, which has not, in some form, not only tolerated, but approved of polygamy. And those nations which have been openly and professedly monogamie, have not been able, after all, to suppress, except in part, and mostly in mere outside public opinion and conventional arrangements, the actual manifestations of that love of variety in sexualism, which is true of all nature elsewhere. The conclusion therefore is, that variety in love is native and radical in man and woman, and that all confinement, or dual exclusiveness, is contrary to the nature and the well-being of the full advantage of this specious and seeming ly plausible reasoning. We have done so in order to give them no just cause of complaint, while at the same time we might be enabled thereby to present a more striking contrast between truth and error, on this subject, than we otherwise could possibly

We have thus endeavored to give the argument its full force, and its advocates the ents will have patience.

And now, in replying, we may say in the outset, that the reasoning we have glanced at puts man on a level, not simply with the brutes, but lower still-with mere vegetable and mineral nature. And here is where it sadly fails, for although the great primary law of sexual union is essentially the same in all kingdoms, and although man is the complement, or epitome of the whole, yet he is vastly more than such complement or epitome. Man has a spiritually personal nature, which far outstrips all the relations of laws, elements, substances, creatures and influences in each and all the kingdoms below himself. The vegetable may grow out of the mineral, the animal out of both, and man, so far as they go, may be the culmina-tion of them all, yet if he were no more than that, he would be no more than a harmonial animal; he would have no spiritual nature -no properly reasoning intellect-no spiritosocial attributes. He would be simply and only, the great representative of animal nature-he would not be MAN. But being man, by virtue of a manhood superadded to his animal being, which gives to that being all its essential glory and crown, which, while it unites, yet divides the manhood from the animal attributes, the primary law of sexuality rises here to a similar dignity, and is characterized by qualities and principles as far above animal, vegetable and mineral variety, in their interchange of sexual influences, as the personality, human form and angelic nature of man, are superior to merely diffusible elements, unconscious forces and abstract laws. Minerals, vegetables and animals are utterly incapable of forming intelligent, and spiritually and morally conscious sexual relations with each other; and especially are they incapable of calculating and providing for those multitudinous, evervarying and elevated wants and results which constantly flow from the union of the sexes of the human race.

There is, therefore, a marked difference between man and all nature besides; and this difference puts every law of nature, outside of man, into different relations to him. when such law enters into, and becomes a part of himself. Purposes have now to be fulfilled and objects gained, which never could enter into the economy of 'the lower kingdoms, and hence the demands of the sexual law involve different relations, and in the ancient autograph to excite the powers those, too, of a more sacred and important of the psychometrist, so as to enable him to character, in human beings, than in all na-

While, therefore, the laws of nature in the inferior kingdoms may be the same essentially, or in principle, with those in the human race, it is plain that in the latter, these same laws become more complicated, imply new relations, and involve different results. And ourselves in endless absurdities, when we attempt to draw an exact parallel throughout, between human sexuality, or marriage, in its true and normal sense, and the relations and operations of the same essential principle, or law, in either or all of the three kingdoms below man.

And in relation to the argument from human history, it may be said, that we have so little that is truly normal in that, in reand what we have of a healthy character is so much on the side of duality, that it would seem the argument for variety must utterly fail in this direction. The Polygamy of ancient times, not only among the Heathen, but also among the Jews, as also that of a later day, not entirely confined to these classes, we should much sooner think the re sult of an inordinate and diseased sexuality, than of a healthy or normal tone of that passion of our nature. At any rate, it is a fact of history, that polygamy and its adjuncts, have always existed among those people who have been noted for very strong passions of the kind under consideration. But we think it will hardly be contended, on reflection, that this argument from history is tantamount to an argument from nature, inasmuch as nature is pretty effectually covered up by disease, so far as the history goes on that side of the question. Furthermore, when we take a comprehensive view of history in the premises, its testimony is very strongly on the side of the dual marriage, in this one particular, if no other,-viz. : that while polygamy and consequent variety have existed mainly among the older nations, and the ruder, less cultivated and less spiritually elevated people, the monogamic or dual marriage has prevailed most under the light and refinement of the later civilizations. True, even here, marriage is vastly inferior in character to the true idea of the conjugal relation, but at the same time, we find the idea of duality, or pairing, keeping exact pace with the progress of the human race. And in saying this, we do not overlook the great Mormon fact of these times, or the more formidable, because more subtle, doctrine of variety, as taught by some agitators of the present times. We look upon these, however, as the great summoning occasions of a mighty battle of principles already fairly begun, and not to be ended till the great doctrine of conjugal union, or dual marriage is brought out into bolder relief than ever before,-its laws, principles, and results thoroughly comprehended and acted upon-till loftier ideas of marriage are entertained, and vastly purer motives are cherished and made the constant promptings of such marriages as the angels smile upon, and God himself approves. But we must reserve much we would say for other opportunities.

Several articles intended for this paper are necessarily omitted. CorrespondConference at Harmony Hall,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. STH. It is seldom our privilege to meet with the friends, and take part in the discussions of the weekly Conferences of this city. But on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, we embraced the opportunity offered us, and met a quiet little circle of believers in Spiritualism at the Hall named above. The topic for discussion on this occasion, was Psychometry. We proposed the subject for consideration, and deavored to get at the philosophy of it. The statement and the argument were substantially these: That, although the human powers, (i. e., of the Psychometrist,) the autograph, etc., were absolutely necessary to the result, yet that they served rather as occasions, than as causes. The Psychometrician does not, of himself, read the lifestory of the writer of an autograph, or of a letter, but is made the organ of doing it, by operative causes superior to himself. These causes are Spiritual, and from the world of of causes. Spiritual beings, partly from personal knowledge of the person whose character is to be read, and partly from their clairvoyant powers, come en rapport with the Psychometrist, and use his organs for the work, while, to all appearance, the Psycho metrist himself does the whole of it. And the use of the autograph, the letter, or any thing else that may have been in contact with the person whose character is to be read, is simply to serve as a bond of connection, or to make an occasion for the reading. So much, then, for the statement. Now for the argument. It is granted, that the autograph, especially when written with ink, may be impregnated with the soul-magnetism of the writer. But it is hardly supposable that such magnetism will remain with the autograph for the space of a hundred years. And yet it is a fact, that letters a hundred years old have been as accurately psychometrized, as those just written, -or as the living person, whose hand takes that of the psychometrist. If we suppose the person present, who wrote the letter while in the flesh, or some other one who was familiar with his character when on earth, and making use of the organs of the apparent reader, the thing is easily explained. But to suppose there is enough soul-magnetism remaining, after the lapse of a hundred years, seems quite impossible. Even what is called the permanent magnet, if left without its armature, in contact with other freely conducting substances, would lose all its attractive force in less than one half of that time. This soul-magnetism is evidently governed by a similar law, and must, therefore, be diffused long before the hundred years are out. What is there, then, read, accurately and vividly, the character of the writer ! Plainly, nothing at all, or next to that. Certainly, there is not cause enough here to balance the effect. The former, therefore, must be sought elsewhere.

This view of the subject, however, does not, in the least, contravene the idea of a constant efflux of soul-magnetism from each furthermore, such being the case, we involve person of the human race, or from the fingers and the pen of a writer, which impregnates everything with which it comes in contact, and especially the letter which is being written; but the question is, whether there is enough in this substantive efflux, which, per se, is as unconscious as any other diffusible element of nature, to account for the result we witness? It would seem that there is

Dr. Felch, quoting the language of some lation to the question under consideration, eminent savan, replied to our remarks, by saying, that "if t the conclusion" we drew from them, "must be true also," which, of course, was decidedly non-committal. The Dr. also made several other apt observations which we cannot

Mr. ATKINS coincided with our view of the matter, and related a case in his own experience, which confirmed that view. A gentleman on Cape Cod had written his autograph with a pencil, to make a trial, in that way, of this soul-reading. Now, it is plain that the steel pen and the liquid ink are more ready conductors of magnetism, than a dry lead pencil; and it may, therefore, be fairly supposed, that the autograph written with the latter, would be less fully charged, than with the former; and yet there is no perceptible difference in the results.

Mr. BLACKER did not feel competent to treat this matter; but he did feel, that the time was speedily coming when we shall understand and live by law. And this he thought would be the practical tendency of Psychometry. Heretofore almost everybody has lived in constant violation of nature's laws, and questions like the present will tend to make nature more transparent to us, so that we shall know what she is-what her laws arewhat our relations to her and them; and therefore, what our life ought to be.

We responded to this practical idea, and suggested, that we unconsciously, yet really and constantly affect each other, for good or evil, by the constant efflux of soul-magnetism. If we cherish elevated thought and sentiment, an elevated efflux radiates from us, and mingles with the spheres of others; and vice

Dr. Frich mentioned the fact, that a dog would readily track his master, whether the latter wore old boots or new ones, in confirmation of this idea of efflux.

Mr. Enson did not think we were forced to adopt the Spiritual theory of Psychometry. The dog, he said, was a natural clairvoyantan organ for the soul of the Universe to operate through instinctively. So may we be organs also, on a higher plane. -And the soul of the Universe may read, to us, individual souls, through the personal organism of the psychometrist, on the clairvoyant princi-So we are not obliged to suppose individual spirits to be en rapport with the visible reader, in order to account for the result.

Mr. LOVELAND did not agree with the clairvoyant view. The psychometrist feels-not N. sees. He had, furthermore, no doubt that | kins.

the soul of the writer impressed itself upon the autograph; and if Spirits do the reading, through the organs of the psychometrist, there is no need of an autograph.

We reiterated, that the use of an autograph is to make an occasion for the reading. If there were no occasion for the reading, there would be no reading. Mr. Crossy thought Spirits helped the psychometrist, and related a fact concerning friend Wilson's psychometrical delineations, which illustrated the point.

Dr. FELCH illustrated Bro. Loveland's position, that the psychometrist feels, and thereby determines the character he is reading, by relating the fact concerning a piece of money and its magnetic qualities in connexion with sensitives. Such determine to whom the money belongs by feeling alone-not by clair-

Mr. LOVELAND did not believe in giving up one's individuality, and attributing the whole of Psychometry to Spirits-making them the sole cause in the case. We replied, that our view of the matter did not thus yield the whole to them. It was true, that the Spirit World, being the world of causes, as all admit, became the primary cause in these readings; but, inasmuch, as the human medium, the autograph, and all other conditions requisite to the result produced, furnished the general occasion for the action of the primary causes, these also, in their turn, became, together, a secondary cause to the same end. It is thus that occasions form one-though an inferior-element of all causation; and while this idea remains, the psychometrist has no reason for parting with his individualities.

"Nothing New."

Dr. J. H. Robinson, in the last Spiritual Telegraph, thus disposes of that assumption which the opponents of Spiritualism so generally make their last resort, when all other subterfuges fail-namely, "Spirits communicate nothing new." He is dealing especially with the New York Tribune; and although that allegation is capable of a still further reply, yet this ought to be sufficient to close he mouths of those who so thoughtlessly use

"The Tribune has been in circulation several years, and carried many thousand of columns of matter to various parts of the Union. It has done more real, radical, practical talking than any paper in the country. Now will the frisky "ghost" editor, who loveth to haunt the columns of the Tribune, and flitteth darkly about the editorial kennel, and intern darkly about the editorial gennel, be so very kind and obliging as to inform me, and the world generally, what new principle in Art, Science, or Philosophy it has sent forth to enlighten the world, of which it can justly claim the paternity. Gentle spectre, I pause for a response! What has the organ you delight to honor with the playful children of your brain originated, that nobody ever thought of before? Still, has not the Tribune exercised a strong and lasting influence on the minds of men? Would it be too charitable to suppose that it has been the instrument of positive good to the human family? And yet the Tribune has not made a single grand discovery, notwithstanding it has communicated with the world so many years, and done so much hard rapping. Is the worth of anything to be measured by its absolute newness! What did Jesus of Nazareth, the most noted of re-formers, teach that was positively new? He proclaimed the fatherhood of God, the broth-erhood of man, and insisted on the practical acknowledgment of the "Golden Rule." Had not Confucius and several other "heathen philosophers" taught the same doctrines Many think that he was the "very God," yet find not a word of fault because he ached no doctrines entirely new. If a xpect of departed human spirits, in all essential respects beings like ourselves ! Does the spectre editor feel inclined to undervalue the ministry of Jesus, because he inculcated such plain and simple truths! Far from it, I imagine. He is quite aware that that per-sonage has exercised a very great influence on the destiny of the world. As a reformer, the majority of Spiritualists receive, believe in him, and love his pure and peaceable doctrines. They desire nothing better than the full realization of his prophecies. They bepower of godliness-the external code withut the inner life and spirit of Christ, written on the tablets of the mind. Churchmen hope they shall have a conscious existence after the death of the body, Spiritualists know they shall. Hence most of the latter class have a strong faith in the practicability of many of the strange things recorded in the Bible, and believed to be miraculous or contrary to the laws of Nature.

The Tribune has been in operation longer than the marvels of modern Spiritualism, yet it has convinced nobody of the immortality of the soul; Spiritualism has convinced thousands. Horace Greeley (the responsible editor) is a man of genius—as much a special instrument of Heaven as Henry Ward Beecher, or a clever shoemaker, blacksmith, or anybody else—but he gives us nothing wonderfully new."

Lectures in Lowell.

The friends of Spiritualism in Lowell are awake to the claims of the cause in that city, and are having lectures every Sunday by a variety of speakers. They have already made arrangements to continue these lectures to the first of January, when they hope to be better able to go forward, possess themselves of a more convenient place of meeting, and give a more substantial character to the movement in their locality. They now hold, and will continue to hold, their meetings in Wells' Hall until the time specified above, three times on Sunday, the afternoon being specially devoted to a free conference, while the morning and evening are occupied in listening to lectures.

MELODEON COMMITTEE. -At a meeting of the contributors to the "Melodeon Fund" held at that Hall on Sunday morning last, the following persons were appointed a Board of Directors to manage the Spiritualists' meetings held in that place:

J. S. Loveland, Chairman; M. T. Dole. Secretary; John Wood, William R. Hayden, W. K. Lewis, Abijah Fessenden, John WilA. J. Davis's Lectures.

The teacher of the Harmonial Philosophy spoke on Tuesday and Friday evenings of last week in the Music Hall Lecture Room, and in the Melodeon on Sunday afternoon and evening, Nov. 19th. We were unable to be present at the first two lectures, but a friend has furnished us the following synopsis of that of Friday evening :

Mr. Davis announced as his subject "The extent and import of Nature," and as his text therefor the lines which were by some poet applied to the Bible :-

"Within this sacred volume lies The mystery of mysteries

Mr. D. first spoke of the entire inability of the great mass of people to comprehend the beauties of nature. To them it is a meaningless mass, from which they are to procure their subsistence-nothing more. To others it is God's footstool, very prettily carpeted and decorated, but only a footstoolto the Almighty. To others it is a sort of basement story or cellar-kitchen of God's Universe. Some look on its most beautiful and sublime scenes without any deep and refined emotions whatever. It was related of Byron that he was once riding in a stagecoach through a very beautiful tract of country, the only occupant of the coach besides himself being a lady. Occasionally she would interrupt Byron's deep meditations on the ever-varying beauties which met his eye. At last a line of very beauciful hills came in view, when she said to him, "How pretty them hills is, aint they?" "Driver!" exclaimed Byron, putting his head out at the window, "stop and let me get out; I'll walk," unable longer to endure it. A New York dandy once visited Ningara Falls. On reaching there he took out his eye-glass and after surveying it a moment said, "An exceedingly foine display; but, Fwed," turning to his companion, come away, it makes such a disagweeable roar." These, said the speaker, are the only emotions produced in the breasts of some by such scenes.

But to him who comes with his perceptions quickened by an intercourse with Nature, each rose and violet is the symbol of something higher and better, and did we know how to question it, it would teach us some of the deepest lessons of life. The tree, to the chemist, is composed of so many chemicals of different kinds; to the anatom ist it is the teacher of anatomy; the traveler who reposes beneath its boughs, is reminded of a canopy formed by guardians for his case, as he refreshes his weary body beneath its shade and listens to the carols of the birds in its boughs; the philosopher had from time immemorial referred to "the brave old oak," and taught many lessons therefrom; but to the thinking Spiritualist it suggested deeper and holier lessons still.

The earth is two hundred and fifty thousand miles in circumference, yet how few have bestowed much thought upon it. How much yet unexplored land near where Franklin recently perished; how much in Patagonia! The ocean between the American coast and Asia is constantly traversed now, yet how few had meditated upon the vast expanse of water there. Mr. D. thought the surface of the earth had formerly been rough, mountainous rocks, traversed by strong, impetuous currents of water, which in washing the stones back and forth, had caused a continual rubbing of them together, and the effects of this was the first land. He does not sympathize with the idea that God made in six days, in than brotherly love, what can Trinitarians all that therein is," but believes that Nature by her own operations produced a great portion of her present population of both the vegetable and animal kingdoms. For instance, if a man does not disturb a tract of primeval forest after its being burned over. it will produce the first year fire-weed ; cut it down, and the next year it will produce smart-weed; cut it again, and the next year it will produce a very long, coarse grass, such as no cattle will eat; the next year it will produce Timothy grass; the fifth year it will produce a wild oat, and so on, producing every year something more valuable. So with trees. The meanest kind of land produces pines; the next, chestnut, and so on, up to the more valuable sorts, arriving in other climates to delicious fruits. This was caused by the natural properties of the vegetation imparted to the earth each by their

He passed lightly over the contemplation of the million and a half species of the animal world, to the most grand, most sublime of all things,-nine hundred millions of men and women who at this time inhabit the earth. The speaker was not of the opinion that the body was created and then the spirit fashioned to suit that vessel and its different organs, as is taught by the popular theology. He said that his first experience as a clairvoyant was as if the soul left the body and visited different places. He labored under this mistake some four years before he discovered to the contrary. The mind of each man daguerreotypes itself upon the atmosphere, and a person in the clairvoyant state reads, not the mind, but the daguerreotype of the mind. While in that state, the clairvoyant saw an entirely different representation over the cities of New York, Boston, London, Paris, Vienna, etc., according to the character and intelligence of the in-

And now the time has arrived when the world of men is brought into nearer communion with the spirit-world than ever before, and their influences are being exercised upon it. It is so in literature, politics, war. The spirits of departed Russian soldiers had informed him that many in their ranks longed to leave and fight for the Turks, but dared not. He read an exordium given through him by a member of the Spiritual Congress before the war commenced, which asserted that Russia would not be successful; her generals would lose their canning. This was being fulfilled. A great lesson of the war in the east is, that man is beginning to look more at justice, and less at dogmas and creeds; for Christian nations were now allying themselves with Pagan, to fight against Christians, for justice.

Thus, said Mr. Davis, he had endeavored to give some idea of Nature, but how slight were his remarks compared with the subject. He had not entered upon the threshold. lfow grand the theme! Let us strive to become more capable of studying, comprehending and enjoying her.

We have notes of the Sunday lectures which we have not room to insert in this paper. Both efforts were listened to by large and intelligent audiences. Mr. D. aimed to exhibit the true nature and tendencies of the Spiritual movement, and his remarks were characterized by a geniality and vigorous good sense which commended him and his subject to the better feelings of his auditories.

Communications.

Letter from Warren Chase. The following is the remainder of the comunication from which we gave the first paragraph last week,

BRO. HEWITT :- I send this short, "pickedup" letter more to inform my friends of my whereabouts, my latitude and longitude, than to instruct or advise; but I must drop in here a specimen of religious fanaticism which I found in my travels, but which the press which circulates so much gossip about Spiritualists, has failed to promulgate. A young man in a small village in Indiana, (Knightstown) not long ago became religious and fanatical to that degree that he declared both his hands had offended, and according to Scripture he must cut them off; but as he could not cut both off bimself he would burn them off. For that purpose he thrust them into a hot fire, and before he could be drawn away, actually burned them so as to result in his death soon after. Would not this horrible fact (for it is a fact, as any one can ascertain by inquiry in that town) be of use to our friends of the Olive Branch, and post them up in the character and effect of delusions ! Would they not have found out and used this act, if it could have been traced to Spiritualism as its source! The Bible literally followed, leads to some terrible results to fanatics, of which there are thousands of instances, both recorded and unrecorded. In fact, I believe I have heard of a preacher of sectarian religion who left his wife and ran away, or tried to, with a woman some other man legally owned. Wonder if the Olive Branch would find a fact of this character; and if so, if it would do as it does by Spiritualism with such facts!

Now, Bro. Snow, or any others, I am sorry I have hurt your feelings by the severity of my review of Bro. Ballou's article. I cannot, however, for my life, discover wherein I have done injustice to truth or to Spiritualism. I was not mistaken in my belief when I read that article, that it would afford more material for our opponents upon which to slander and abuse us, than any article of its length ever published by friend or foe. It has done so; and hence, as I supposed, it was (however honestly designed) the most deadly stab we have ever had. But it is not fatal; for the healing power is yet sufficient. My brother thinks I have some idolatry remaining. I have ever been termed Infidel, and was not aware of ever having or wor-God could teach nothing higher and nobler its present complete menner, "the earth and shipping any idol. If I do, and my brother will name the object of idolatry, I will hand it over to him, and worship outside.

I have recently met Mrs. Thomas, and find her an excellent medium, but teaching in my presence no such fears or allusions to "free-loveism" as Brother Ballou referred to: but both herself and the spirits through her, in my presence, teach and believe on this subject as I and Spiritualists generally do. But I did not intend ever to refer to this letter or discussion again, and I do it now merely to say I have nothing to take back. Yet I deny all hard feelings, all envy or hatred; for I felt nothing but kindness and pity, however severe my expressions might have appeared to some religiously sensitive friends. They often give me hard pills to swallow when they drag into Spiritualism modern or ancient idolatry, as superior to the unfoldings of the human intellect in the Rationalism or Spiritualism of our age. But I endeavor to excuse it, and make the proper allowances for education and condition, and never feel offended, nor withdraw my efforts or support from the cause or the papers on that account. I should be sorry to see our sensitive brethren show less charity for one who has ever been skeptical till facts and philosophy had reached and converted him, than such an infidel shows and feels for

One more item, and I have done. The letter of Brother Sunderland to me, in the last Era, needs no reply from me. I am glad, and so will many others be, to see Bro. S. winding, (to use a sca-phrase,) and I hope hereafter he will sail with us and with God in Nature, not discreted from Nature. Those who have read his letters and my comments will be able to judge of our positions and do justice to us both. If I did misunderstand my brother, I am glad, for he has thus been led to set others right, who also misunderstood him as I did. I meant all I said in my letter to Bro. S. of my experience; but as I find and recognize no evil, and in an absolute sense, no high or low. (only relative) and positively no good or bad, and progression only as change, of course I could have no avil communications, but only harmony and inharmony. course I could have no ovir communications, but only harmony and inharmony; express-ed in extremes by love and hate, which are never evidences of positive good or positive evil. He that dwells in and feels in love and harmony is happy, and the opposite unhappy. Their conditions are named in extremes sometimes Heaven and Hell. Still I suppose "all partial evil is universal good." Now let me pass, brethren, as

WARREN CHASE.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 6th, 1864.

Weekly Record of Phenomenn.

Spiritual Manifestations in London thirty years ago.

Messas Editors:—Were it possible to sat-isfy the human mind in reference to its undying interests in the yet, to us, unknown. because untrodden, fature, by the mere speculative theories of men, in either the past or present age, methinks we have enough to satisfy the most skeptical enquirer. But the ever continued, and still continuous cry for facts in reference to our existence in the future, are proofs, clear and demonstrative, that the mind can never rest its belief alone upon mere abstract and intangible theories, unsubstantiated by the most palpable and irrefragable facts; and in evidence of this, I refer you and your readers to the varied classes of phenomena spread through the entire range of Scripture history, and which ing-place, and without apparently anything have invariably proceeded the different theo-

And while we admit that these things have subserved the purposes for which they were given, in their adaptedness to the wants of the people of that age, we cannot surely decin it wrong that the people of the present age should seek similar evidence to satisfy the demands of their external senses as to the internal reality; especially when we find nature so lavish in unfolding her mysteries to the inhabitants of earth, and calling upon them to behold these symbols of wisdom; to investigate, to classify, and to arrange them, so that they may no longer remain ignorant of her laws by which they are surrounded and governed, and which connect man with an all-related system of things, both as it pertains to this world and that which is to come. It is then in view of these facts, and in answer to the "cui bono" so constantly sounded in our ears in reference to the phenomena called Spiritual Manifestations, that I have resolved to give you a relation of facts, which came (many of them) under my own especial notice, and all having occurred in the house of my sister, to, if needed. But to proceed :

Some few years after my sister's marriage, she was wont, in her frequent visits with her husband and little ones, to the home of her childhood, to make frequent complaints that their domestic tranquility at home was much disturbed and broken in upon by certain strange noises in the house, such as the ringing of the street door bell, and the bells eye-witness, but received the account from in the different rooms connecting with the kitchen; sounds of some one with thick, heavy-nailed shoes coming down stairs; the opening of doors after they had been locked and bolted; the running of the mangle after been doing some heavy repairs, were sitting all the inmates of the house had gone to in a back parlor, making out the ship's ac rest; moving about of a small work table; counts, they were suddenly alarmed by a flatirons coming down from the shelves on loud scream, and the sound of some one fallwhich they were placed; the long lath ing on the floor, proceeding from the kitchwindow-blinds coming down out of their en. Upon going down stairs, they found my brackets, with crashing noises like the fall- sister lying in the door-way between the ing in of the roof of the house; and number- front and back kitchens, where she had reless other strange things, to all of which ceived the alarm, fainted, and fallen. Upon the nature of those subtle and imponderable to the back kitchen to get her irons, as she agencies, with whose action and effects we came to the door, a figure arose up before are now so generally familiar; and in order her and prevented her from passing; upon to a proper solution of these occult mys- which she screamed and fainted. This is teries, they were obliged to be referred to the matter in brief. that the whole affair was the work of the any hu liking to remain in the house with only the to be other than real. servant girl and the children, would, on those occasions, ask my brother or myself, ere I conclude this narrative of facts. One sometimes both, to remain with her a few night, at the request of my sister, her husdays till he should return. This gave us full band being absent on business, I went to opportunity of witnessing many of the stay there, to see to the place being locked strange things already spoken of. But I up after the men had left, it being winter will now relate more in detail the various and they were working by candle-light. phenomena as they occurred from time to When the men were gone, I went through time, to the best of my recollection.

my father, in the day time, we had no soon- see that all was safe from fire. Having sater got within the passage and shut the street | isfied myself, I returned through the garden door, than the door-bell began to ring most into the house, the entrance to which was violently. My father being nearest the door through two doors, the outer one leading to instantly opened it, believing it to be a trick the garden, a sash or glass door, which fasof some one; but, to his surprise, the bell-tened by two bolts as well as a lock,-the handle was working in and out most violent- other two folding-doors, merely fastened by Iy, and that without any visible aid. He of two bolts, both of which I fastened; also course took hold of it to try and stop it, but the door leading from the back parlor to the without avail. It forced itself from his band passage, together with the passage door, with the utmost case. We then went into and then retired. The room in which I a back parlor, and were talking with my slept was a front chamber, over the one in sister on the subject, when the bell in the which my sister slept, and which looked into kitchen began to ring most lustily, and on the street. looking at the side of the fireplace, we saw the bell-pull working like that of the street was not yet asleep, when the street door-bell door, without visible aid.

These things being of almost daily occurrence, and of course very annoying, my brother took down the bells in the passage | bright; and I could see the handle of the and lower rooms, thinking if it was a trick | door-bell working in and out, but no visible played by any one, that would stop it. But being touching it. I then got into bed alas! the bell-pulls, wires and cranks, again, and might have laid there for half an danced as merrily as before. At another hour, ruminating upon these strange mystetime, when staying there with my brother, ries, when suddenly there came a noise, and we had just retired to rest, and had not the house was shaken to the very foundation. been in bed many minutes before the bed- I could conclude nothing else than that all clothes were dragged off on to the floor. the heavy ship-boats had broken from their No sooner were they righted than off they lashings, and had carried away both floors. went again; once more set right, we were After recovering myself from the fright, I got speaking of these strange things, the bell light from my sister, who, with the girl, scribers.

connected with this chamber began to ring. My brother then got out of bed, and applied the end of a thick oak walking-stick, which stood in the room, against the crank of the bell, the other end resting on his breast, when he was repelled backwards with considerable force.

Another instance; I went one evening to see my sister, but found both her and her husband were gone out. The girl saying she soon expected them home, I was induced to stop, and while there an uncle came to see them. While we were chatting over family matters, awaiting their return, imagine our surprise to see a small oval worktable which stood in the kitchen, begin to move about the room. My uncle, a man naturally timid, began to manifest symptoms of uneasiness, when the flatirons, on a shelf behind where he sat, came tumbling down one after another, till all had left their restto cause their disturbance. This was immediately followed by the sound as of some one with heavy nailed shoes or boots on, clumping heavily down the stairs, and whom we expected instantly to see in the kitchen with us, but we saw no one. The fears of my uncle had now attained their height; he seized his hat and made a very speedy exit from the house, and to the best of my recollection, never entered it again.

On another visit to the house with my father and mother, on a fine bright day in summer, as we were standing in a garden at the back of the house, talking about these things with my sister, (for they had become now a general theme of conversation whenever we met, and throughout the neighborhood,) the long green blinds (as we term them) came down from their brackets with much force. My father directly called the joiner, who was at work in a building contiguous to the house, to come and fix them up firmly in the brackets, which he did, inserting the gudgeons in the rest of the brackets, full an inch and a half in depth ; at the same time saying that he did not think they would stay there long, for when they were who resided at that time (about thirty years at their pranks, nothing would hold them. ago) in London. They can be well attested Scarcely had he spoken, and while looking up at them, down they came with a rush. They were subsequently put up again and then allowed to rest. So frequent were these things that it was very difficult for my sister to get a girl to remain long with her, they became so alarmed.

I must now relate a circumstance that took place there, but to which I was not an my sister and her husband, corroborated by a gentleman who was in the house when it occurred. One evening, as my brother and the captain of a vessel for which he had restoring her, however, they learned the would our family lend a listening ear.

At that period, few indeed of those in the cause of all the difficulty. She was doing middle walks of life, were acquainted with some ironing, and in passing from the front those minds, who were thought to be alone I will now relate a circumstance which capable of solving them; and of course the took place one Sunday afternoon. While minister was among the first to be applied my sister was making her toilet in an anteto. He, after witnessing many of the dem- room, between two chambers, the slap of a onstrations, arrived at the sage conclusion band on her back, as loud as that given by devil. This disposition of the matter, though her back, caused her to swoon, and she fell perhaps conclusive to his mind, was not ex- to the floor. The noise of the slap on her actly so to ours; and as my sister's husband back had aroused her husband, who had held a long lease of the house and premises, thrown himself on the bed in the front (he being a shipwright and boat-builder,) chamber, waiting the completion of her toithey could not leave the place without in- let, as they were going to church. He came volving themselves in a great sacrifice of forth just as she was falling; and I have property. I mention this in order to account heard him often speak of the circumstance, for their remaining there under such un- and when asked if it might not have been pleasant circumstances, and it will tend to imagination, reply, that hearing so loud a throw some light upon what follows. His noise close to him, and instantly seeing the business involving him in the necessity of print of the hand ere the blow could have being frequently from home, my sister, not had time to recede, were too plain evidences

I shall now give one more circumstance the boat-lofts, in which were suspended On one occasion, when at the house with | many new boats, and boats under repair, to

> I had been in bed perhaps an hour, but began to ring most violently. I jumped out of bed, and threw up the window, but all was still and calm, and the moon shone were in a terrible state of alarm. Judge, if hour or two before, all open to my egress. I passed through the shed where they made boat-lofts, and if my surprise was great at the noise I had just heard, and what I had seen, it was certainly greater on beholding all things in their places, as I had left them when I went to bed. I returned, went to bed again, and heard no more that night.

I could mention many other things of a like character, but I am warned that this letter is already too long, and therefore shall conclude with a few remarks. Shortly after these things had been seen and heard, my sister died. Her husband married again, and I have not learned that they have ever been troubled since. This leads me to infer that my sister must have been the medium through whom some of these manifestations were made, and I presume others may be accounted for in the peculiar electrical conditions of the place,

Now, Messrs. Editors, in view of the above given facts, combined with similar ones coming to us through all ages, and through different classes and conditions of people, supported and confirmed as they are by the multitudinous evidence of the present age, may we not reasonably infer that Spiritual intercourse is as much a reality of the present, as it is allowed and admitted to have been of the past? Why, I ask in the name of reason and common sense, is it demanded of men, by the religious teachers of all ages, that they believe in these things as coming through and based upon mere human authorities of the past, when they deny to the authority of the present the same right of belief, based, as we deem that belief to be, not only on the revelations of the past, but most fully substantiated, corroborated and confirmed in the more extensively unfolding phenomena of the present? If, as has been asserted by some, (but I believe falsely,) we have no right to doubt the authority of the past, coming to us as it does so strongly attested, and confirmed by so many competent witnesses, I think they should allow to the human family in this more progressed age of the world's history, the privilege of believing the evidence of their own senses in matters of this kind, in preference, at least, to that of others. This, man everywhere demands, as an inalienable right of his being. I will here (instead of inserting it,) refer your readers to an extract from "Reid on the mind," made by Judge Edmonds in his work on Spiritualism, page 14; and with this I shall conclude, and subscribe myself

Ever yours in the cause of Truth, THOS. MIDDLETON.

WOODSTOCK, Vt.

Mr. L. Parker, of Manchester, Conn., writes us concerning some facts and phenomena personally witnessed by himself, and of which we give the following digest: He says that during the month of July last, Mr. William Hulme, a speaking, writing, and rapping medium, spent nearly a week at his house. Soon after his arrival, the Spirits called the attention of our correspondent to some copper tacks lying in a certain place in the mill where the medium had never been, and advised him to take care of them as they were new. In reply to a question, the Spirits said the tacks were No. 12, which was the fact. On one evening, after the medium had refired to bed, Mr. Parker and his two sons being in other beds in the same room, the Spirits made various demonstrations, by carrying and throwing things about the room, inswering questions by pounding with a boot upon the floor, pulling up the carpet and pil-ing it up in the middle of the floor, moving the table to and fro, and answering questions by tipping it while the medium was not near write without the aid of the medium's hand, and tell, the next morning, where their writing might be found. The next morning they accordingly directed them to search in un adjoining room in an upper story of the house, on doing which there was writing found per-fectly executed. Soon after, being with the medium at the house of Mr. O. Spencer, in South Manchester, Mr. P. was directed to look under the table around which they were seated. He did so, and found a knot, ribbon and buckle, which, it would seem, the Spirits must have carried from his house, three miles distant. A lady present was requested to read from the Bille, which she declined to do, saying that she had left her spectacles at home. The spectacles were presently brought into the room by invisible hands, though the distance to the lady's residence was half a mile! [Spiritual Telegraph.

To Our Friends. Do our friends realize our needs ! Do they not know many persons interested in Spiritualism who would easily become induced to take the paper if the same were shown, and its merits made known to them? Will they not do what lies in their power to extend our circulation, and thus give us the needed help? These, friends, are three direct and practical questions. They need no explanation, except, perhaps, that we should say, that, with the amount of matter we give our readers weekly, (to say nothing of its quality,) we really ought to have our subscription doubled. Friends, one and all, will you do what you can to that end immediately! It only needs that each subscriber to the ERA now, get one of his neighbors to give in his name, with $1 50 in advance, and the work is done. That is just one of the easiest things in the world-only to get one subscriber each-and our list is doubled, our hands are strengthened, our hearts encouraged, and our needs are met. We speak to you, friends, the simple truth, when w say what we do of our needs; and we ent vith these questions, Shall the list of the New Era be doubled? And will you do it now !

DR. WILLIAM R. HAYDEN, of this city, will speak in the Melodeon on Sunday afternoon and evening next. The subject of the afternoon lecture will be, "What good will Modern Spiritualism do?" In the evening he will give, " Evenings with the Spirits at Koons' Spirit-room, Ohio," illustrated by sketches and diagrams. An admission fee of no further molested in that way. But while up, dressed, went down stairs, and took a ten cents charged in the evening to non-sub-

WARREN CHASE lectures at Worcester Nov. you can, of my surprise on beholding the 26th, and will be in this city Dec. 1st. He doors which I had locked and bolted only an | will probably speak in the Melodeon on Sunday, Dec. 3d. His address will be Boston, Mass., during December and January, where the masts, ears and blocks, up into both the friends wishing him to lecture in other places should address him without delay.

> SPIRITUAL MORALITY .- The following questions were dictated from a Spiritual source, as suitable to be asked previous to engaging in any undertaking or performing any action. If this be diabelism, as many good people would have us believe, we think the world will be much benefitted by its prevalence.

> "Ist. Is this thing which I am about to do, in and of itself, just, -aside from any considerations of honor, pleasure, or profit to 2d. Will this thing injure any person in

> "3d. Should I do this thing now? Are circumstances and conditions favorable !"

Special Notices.

LIST OF LECTURERS.

body or mind?

The following persons are now propared to lec-ture on the subject of Spiritualism wherever and whenever their services may be desirable and circustances permit. They may be desirable and circusoffice, No 15 Franklin st., Boston, Mass.

J. S. Loveland.

A. E. Newton,
R. P. Wilson,
S. C. Hewitt.

J. H. Fowler.

REGULAR MEETINGS IN BOSTON, Sunday meetings at the Melodeon, afternoons and evenings at the usual hours.

Conference meetings on Wednesday evenings, at the Hall in Chapman Place, and at Harmony Hall, 103 Court street.

THE DIAL ALPHABET. This unique and highly useful instrument for communicating readily with spirits, and which is very highly recommended by Prof. Hare of Philadelphia, may be had of Bella Mansh. Price $2,00. Seat only by express or private conveyance. Address Bela Marsh, 15 Franklin street, Boston, Mass.

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE. This interesting volume has now been before the public for some months, and is highly regarded by many who have read it. It comes professedly from the spirit of Dr Olin, through R. P. Wilson as medium, and cannot fail to interest all those devoted to Spiritual investigations. Price in cloth, 57 cents, in paper 45 cents. Address A. E. Newton, 5 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

BATHING ROOMS. M EDICATED, Sulphur, Iodine, and plain va-por Baths; warm, cold, and shower baths; administered from 8 a. m. to 10 r. m., at 233 Washington street, rear of Marlboro Hotel. 8tf C. BLODGETT.

Advertisements.

WILLIAM TEBB, Phonographic Teacher, Providence, It. I., continues to give lessons through the Mail on Phonography, enabling every one to report the Spiritual communications with the utmost case and correctness. Terms for a course of twelve lessons, with answers to all queries and full explanatory corrections to all exercises $2.5.

New and attractive book for every Family Circle, Young Man's Library, and Lady's Boudoir.

TOWN AND COUNTRY :

LIFE AT HOME AND ABROAD,

WITHOUT AND WITHIN US. By John S. Adams.

The undersigned will publish Monday, Nov. 27 the above work, with illustrations from original designs, in one elegant 12me volume of about 400 pages.

It is a book suited for all times and places, and is distinguished by its living, energetic style, boldness of expression, and originality of thought.
The Sketches of Life,—true to the originals, exhibit the various phases of TOWN LIFE: the temptations, trials, conflicts, and conquests of mind, struggling amid diverse circu which, together with PICTURES OF THE COUNTRY, The Sinlers Heart, and the Happy Home, cannot but deeply interest the reader, and at the same timn touch a chord of the heart that will vibrate in strong sympathy with all those who are battling for the right.

The deep sympathy of the author with every truly reformatory movement, disclosing itself on every page of this volume, cannot fail to enlist the carnest co-operation of every thoughtful mind, and to secure for the book a circulation unsurpassed by that of any American production. Its success is certain, for it is a book written for the people, for every class and condition, and is destined to receive from them an unbounded patronage.

Price, In Musilin, neatly bound, $1.00
By mail, post paid, to any part of U.S., $1.25 "TOWN AND COUNTRY" as a GIFT BOOK ! The cheapest, handsomest, and best volume of the Price .- In Muslin, full gilt, Superbly bound in Morocco, The usual Discount made to the Trade.

J. BUFFUM,

Publisher, Bookseller, and Stationer,
8-2t 28 Cornhill, Boston.

Series for 1855. THE HOME JOURNAL.

MORRIS AND WILLIS, EDITORS.

The first number of the new series will be issued on the first of January next. New subscribers can be supplied from that date; but immediate application will be necessary for such as desire to begin with the beginning. A home is hardly complete, we think we may safely venture to say, without the Home Journel, which, besides being a chronicle of the times, abounds in intelligence tending to enliven an American Home. Its editors (Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis) devote their entire time, skill and experience to the task of giving each week everything worth knowing. They particularly keep their eye on all the whims and novelties of the day. The numer pains are taken to present the facts and outlines of all news. In the literary department we aim at sketches and readable criticism, and in our condensations of the productions of the vast newspaper world of Europe, we endeavor to avoid the tiresome and the local, and transfer to our columns the pick of English information and brilliancy, while we endeavor to select with a true sense of pure morals, English information and brilliancy, while we endeavor to select with a true sense of pure morals, true wit, and genuine humor. In addition to the above, Mr. Willis will give the gossip of the day in a series of articles in dialogue, to be called "CHATS IN TOWN." These he will alternate with "LETTERS FROM THE COUNTRY." The graphic and highly-finished sketches by "The Lady of Shalott," "Timothy Quaint," and others, will be continued. We have also new correspondents in London and Paris, who will send us much that could never reach us through foreign Journals.

rais.

Terms.—For one copy, $2; for three copies, $5, or for one copy for three years, $5—always in advance. Subscribe without delay. Address

MORRIS & WILLIS,

107 Fulton street, New York.

HEALING MEDIUM. DR. T. H. PINKERTON, Office, 80 Cambridge St., Boston.

Office hours, from 8 to 11 A.M., daily. [is3m99

WHAT I CH . MAY OF SMIGHT.

AN ELEGANT CIFT BOOK SPIRITUALISTS AND FRIENDS OF TRUTH. Will be published on or about the 15th of Dec., THE LILY WREATH

SPIRITUAL COMMUNICATIONS, Received chiefly through the mediumship of Mrs. J. S. ADAMS. By A. B. CHILDS, M. D.

THOSE who have read the manuscripts of this work, pronounce it unsurpassed in purity and elegance of diction, in beauty and simplicity of style, and in its correct and attractive presentation of truth.

THE LILY WHEATH will be printed in a superior manner, equal to that of the finest annuals, bound in rich and durable binding, and in overy way made in typographical and mechanical ap-pearance, in keeping with the intrinsic value of its contents. Dealers and others can address

PARTRIDGE & BRITTAN, New York, 7tf
BELA MARSH, Reston.

LIDA'S TALES OF A RURAL HOME.

Here is a series of books for the young, of the very first order. They are full of good moral sentiment, written in a chaste, pleasing style, and well adapted to children. Lida understands young human nature, and has dune abundantly well, in this series, to meet its mental wants. Success to Lida's Tales, for they are full of Spiritualism—therefore full of truth. All our readers who have children, and wish to put the best books into their hands, should send 36 cents, in postage stamps, or other currency, (postage paid,) to Emily Gay, Hopedale, Milford, Mass., and she will return them the whole series of Tales, (8 books in all,) pre-paying postage on them—so that 36 cents is all they cost he boyer.

H. LIDA'S TALES OF A RURAL HOME.

ECLECTICISM,

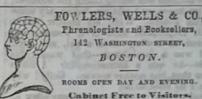

FOR THE RELIEF OF THE AFFLICTED. FOR THE RILIEF OF THE AFFLICTED.

IN J. T. PATERSON baving had considerable experience as a Mcdium, clairvoyant and psychometric, which, of course, has led to a thorough analytical and scientific investigation of these and other forms of mcdical treatment, makes examinations as usual from 9 A. M., to 2 P. M., and adopts Eelecticism as a rule of practice. Office 25 Winter street, Boston.

Dr. P. lectures by engagement on Clairvoyance, Psychometry, Health, and Human Physiology. 6tf

RS. MEITLER'S RESTORATIVE SYRUP though not a universal panacea, is one of the most efficacious remedies for all those diseases which originate in an impure state of the blood, derangement of the secretions, and billious obstructions. Those who are troubled with unequal circulation, sick and nervous headache, inactivity of the liver, constipation of the bowels, and irritation of the uncous membrane, together with their various sympathetic effects, will find this syrup invaluable. Also constantly on hand MRS. METTLER'S CELEBRATED DYSENTERY CORDITAL. A new supply of her CHOLERA ELIXIR received.

FEDERHEN & CO, 9 and 13, Court street, Boston, agents for New England, to whom all orders must be addressed. 3m5

Correct examinations and complete written descriptions of character, at all hours, including valuable advice as to the preservation and restoration of health, formation of proper habits, correction of faults, restraining of excesses, entitivating defects, choice of suitable eccupations, relections of partners, elerks, and apprentices in business, and conjugal companions for life.

Young men who choose their business in this way, and get into their true sphere, are almost and an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and are invaluable guide, and save much training of youth an examination will be found an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and are larger or the found an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and are larger or the found are larger or the larger or the

and perplexity.

Those who are debilitated and weakly will get just such advice as will must effectually restore them to health and save them the evils of quack them to health and save them the evils of quack medicines and drugs.

Books on Phrenology, Physiology, Water Cure, Phonography, Psychology and kindred subjects, for sale at the lowest prices. All of Fowlers & Wells' publications, including the Phrenological and Water Cure Journals, are sent by mail or furnished to agents from this office at the same prices as from New York.

FOWLERS & WELLS. D. P. BUTLER.

C. J. HAMBLETON. [4wn3

KNOW THYSELF.

SELF-KNOWLEDGE is of more importance than any other, because it is the index to the vart volume of wisdom and knowledge which exists in other minds, and in the external world around us. You can obtain this knowledge of your character and capabilities through the selence of Psychometry. Having located myself for the present in Boston, I am prepared to give psychometrical readings at my room at the Fountain House, corner of Beach street and Harrison Avenue by the autograph capital in a new plane.

nue, by the autograph enclosed in an envelope. Terms, $1,00. Address R. P. WILSON, Boston, Mass.

N. B. Persons desiring their ideal of the conjugal relation, in mental and spiritual adaptations, will please make it known.

A. KELLY PEASE, PSYCHOMETRIC AND SPEAKING MEDIUM,

LOWELL, MASS.

PSYCHOMETRIC examinations made in regard to health or character for $1 each.

Mr. P. will lecture on Spiritualism in the natural or trance state, upon reasonable terms. Please address as above.

3m2.

NEW FALL GOODS, FOR

GENTLEMEN'S, YOUTH'S AND BOYS' LATEST COSTUME.

-ALSO-NEW STYLES OF

GENTLEMEN'S AND BOYS' READY-MADE CLOTHING, For the Pall of 1854 and Wister of 1855. JUST RECEIVED.

OAK HALL, 6 tt NO. 34 NORTH STREET.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

It is with the greatest satisfaction that Dr. R. Cummings has received many testimonials of important service rendered to such of the afflicted as applied to him, in consequence of a notice in the New Era from February to June, 1854. Others now diseased who will send, postage paid, to R. Cummings, M. D., Mendon, Mass., a particular description of their disease and symptoms, their age, occupation, temperament, whether single or otherwise, the last medical treatment, and their own address, may be greatly benefitted.

N. B. Those who apply to Dr. C. must pay postage, and for such medicine as is necessary. Advice free.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

CHARLES C. YORK, Healing and Clairvoy-ant Medium. You can receive an examination and prescription by sending your name, age, and place of resilence. Price $2,00, post paid. Ad-dress C. C. York, Claremont, N. H.

THE NEW ERA.

The Third Volume of this Journal has now commenced. It will still be the advocate of SPINITUALISM in its broadest, most comprehensive, and most tolerant sense, according to the best un-derstanding and conviction of its Editor and Proderstanding and conviction of its bottor and Fre-prietor, who, while he recognizes his own proper individual responsibility to the Public for what he may utter through its columns, and for the gene-ral character and tone of the paper, at the same time wishes it to be distinctly understood that he is not responsible for many individual convictions and statements he may feel free to publish from others, in accordance with the obviously just demands of a truly FREE PAPER.

He also wishes it to be distinctly understood, that no subscriber, writer, or reader of this jour-mal will be considered as committed to its princi-ples, views, and measures, any farther than he pies, views, and measures, any farther than he voluntarily and willingly commits himself, independently of his subscription or his reading. He wishes it to be constantly borne in mind that this is the Age or Fase Thorony, and of individual Responsibility; and that in connection with what for the time being is, perhaps, somewhat peculiarly denominat d Speritualism, the Ena will be, as it ever has been, the uncompromising advocate of free thought,—and the free expression of thought, -for in that way only, as one essential element of advancement, can any true progress be made.

THE ERA will still be the vehicle of the prominent Facts of the Sipritual Movement, of the various phases of its PHILOSOPHY, and of such suggestions of a PRACTICAL nature as may with justice and propriety come within its own province to present and discuss. In short, while it will ever and carnestly strive to be true to its own convictions, it will as truly try to do its whole duty to the Public.

The New Volume begins with entire NEW Type and a New Heap,—and will contain from week to week about one third more reading matter than it ever has before. And yet for this, among other additions to its expenses, there will be no addition to the price of the paper. Thankful for the past efforts of its many friends in its behalf, it may be said the Ena still needs, der rer, and con-PIDENTLY EXPECTS the continuance of those efforts in the future, that it may not only be enabled to live, but to appear from week to week in the most attractive garb of Truth itself, and thereby exert an influence for good which otherwise it would be greatly incapable of doing. Terous: Single Copy for one year

Seven Copies
Ten " Ten " $12 00
One Copy Eight Months $1 00
Single Numbers 3 cts.

ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

ADDRESS: "New Era," No. 15 Franklin st.,

To the Numpoper and Periodical Press.—Any paper giving the substance of the above (including terms, of course) in its editorial columns, and sending a marked copy to this office, shall be entitled to the current vol. entire, either with or without an

DR. CUTTER'S

PSYCHOLOGICAL AND MEDICAL OFFICE, No. 292 Westington S ., Besteu Corner of Bedford St., Room No. 4, over J. T.

Brown's Drug Store.

A NEW and valuable remedy for Schottla, recently discovered by a Clairvoyant, is now ready and for sale at the above office.

WILLIAM D. EMERSON, The Medium Clairvoyant, or Seer, will attend to the examination of the Sick, as above.
Office hours, from 9 to 12 a.m., and 2 to 5 pm.

Wonderful Discovery.

THE NERVE SOUTHING VITAL FLU-IDS; prepared expressly by Spirit direction through Mrs. E. J. Franco, Medium, Pittsburg, Pa. These Medicines are purely vegetable, con-taining nothing injurious to the system, and are a certain cure for all Nervous Diseases, as St. Vi-tur's Dance. Tie Delegant. Newsylaid Blooms. certain cure for all Nervous Disenses, as St. Vitus' Dance, Tie Doloreux, Neuralgia, Rheumatism in all its varied forms, Locked Jaw, Epitepsy or Falling Sickness, Palsy, Nervous and Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver, Diarrhea, Irregularities of the female system, Tettér and all Cutaneous Diseases, Chills and Fever, Cramp, Cholera Morbus, Cholera, Quinsy, Croup, Influenza, Bronchitis, and all Acute Pains and Nervous Diseases with which the human family are afflicted, and which for ares human family are afflicted, and which for ages have baffled the skill of the learned. These Flu-ids have not failed to give relief in any of the above cases where they have been fairly tested, and we have now a number of living witnesses to and we have now a number of living witnesses to whom we can refer.

For further particulars address T. Culbertson, Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sold by H. F. Gardner, M. D., General Agent for Boston and vicinity, 654 Washington st; B. Wood, No. 391 Broadway, New York; Federhen & Co., No. 9 Court street, Boston; W. M. Laning, No. 276 Baltimore st., Baltimore; Henry Stagg, No. 43 Main st., St. Louis.

Mrs. French will continue to make clairvoyant examinations. Examination and prescription when the parties are present, $5; if absent, $10. No charge when parties have not the means to pay.

HARPERS' MAGAZINE.

Each number of the Magazine will contain 144 cetavo pages, in double columns, each year, thus comprising nearly two thousand pages of the choicest Miscellaneous Literature of the day. Every number will contain numerous Pictorial II-lustrations, accurate Pintes of the Fashions, a copious Chronicle of Current Events, and impartial notices of the important books of the month. The Volumes commence with the numbers for June and December; but subscriptions may commence with any number. with any number.

Terms.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at Three Dollars a year, or twenty-five cents a number. The semi-annual Volumes, as complet ed, neatly bound in cloth, are sold at Two Dellars each, and muslin covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back numbers uniformly bound, wish to have their back numbers uniformly bound, at twenty-five cents each. Eight volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply specimen numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply clubs of two persons at five dollars a year, or five persons at ten dollars. Clergymen supplied at two dollars a year. Numbers from the commencement are being reprinted, and will be entirely completed in a few weeks.

The Magazine weighs over seven and not over eight ounces. The postage upon each number, which must be paid quarterly in advance, is three ents.

Exchange Newspapers and Periodicals are requested to direct to "Harper's Megazine, New York."

York."

The Publishers would give notice that they have no Agents for whose contracts they are responsible. Those ordering the Magazine from agents or Dealers must look to them for the supply of the

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

Putnam's Monthly consists entirely of Original articles by eminent American writers. It is lotended to combine the more various and amusing the more various and amusing with the tended to combine the more various and amusing characteristics of a popular Magnaine with the higher and graver qualities of a Quarterly Review, aiming at the highest order of excellence in each departum att. Its pages will be devoted to the interests of Literature, Science, and Art, in their best and pleasantest aspects. An elevated national spirit—American and independent—yet discriminating and just, will be cultivated as a leading principle of the work. When its articles require pictorial illustrations, they will occasionally be given.

Terms—$3 per annum, or 25 cents a number, Terms—$3 per annum, or 25 cents a number, and Clergymen will be supplied at $2. The work will be sent free of postage on receipt of $3 promptly in advance.

ULEAR THE WAY.

Men of thought! be up and stirring
Night and day;
Sow the seed—withdraw the curtain!
Clear the way!
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a modraght blackness changing
Into grey; Into grey;
Men of thought, and men of action,
Clear the way!

Once the welcome light has broken,
Who shall say
What the unimagined glories
Of the day;
What the evils that shall perish
In its ray?
Aid the daring tongue and pen!
Aid it, hopes of honest men!
Aid it, paper—aid it, type!
Aid it, for the hour is ripe;
And our effort must not slacken
Into play;
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Lo! a cloud's about to vanish From the day— Lo! the right's about to conquer, Clear the way!

And a broken wrong to crumble And a broken wrong to crumble
Lot clay,
With that right shall many more
Enter smiling at the door;
With that giant wrong shall fall
Many others, great and small,
That for ages long have held us
For their prey—
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

CHARLES MA

CHARLES MACKAY.

AN ENCHANTED ISLAND.

A wonderful stream is the river Time, As it runs through the realms of tears, ith a faultless rhythm, and a musical rhyme, And a broader sweep, and a surge sublime, And blends with the ocean of years.

There's a musical Isle up the river Time, Where the softest of airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the tunes with the roses are staying.

And the name of that Isle is the Long Ago, And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow;
There are heaps of dust, but we love them so!
There are trinkets, and tresses of hair.

And a part of an infant's prayer;

There's a lute unswept, and a harp without strings;

There are broken yows, and pieces of rings,

And the garment she used to wear.

There are hands that were waved when the fairy shore
By the mirage is lifted in air;
And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent roar, Sweet voices we heard in days gone before, When the wind down the river is fair.

All the day of our life until night;
All the day of our life until night;
And when evening comes with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber awhile,
May that greenwood of soul be in sight.

THE SLEEPING CHILD.

A brook went dancing on its way,
From bank to valley leaping;
And by its sunny margin lay
A lovely infant sleeping.
The murmur of the purpling stream
Broke not the spell which bround him;
Like music breathing in his dream
A lullaby around him.

It is a lovely sight to view,

Within this world of sorrow,
One spot which still retains the hue
That earth from heaven may borrow;
And such was this—a scene so fair,
Arrayed in summer brightness,
And one pure being resting there—
One soul of radiant whiteness.

What happy dreams, fair child, are given, To cast their sunshine o'er thee? What cord unites that soul to heaven, Where visions glide before thee?

For wandering smiles of cloudless mirth
O'er thy glad features beaming,
Say, not a thought, a form of earth,
Alloys thine hour of dreaming!

Mayhap, afar on unseen wings, Thy silent spirit soaring, Now hears the burst from golden springs, Where angels are adoring.

And with the pure heliac throng,

Around their Maker praising, The joyous heart may join the song Ten thousand tongues are raising! LEIGH HUNT.

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE.

What might be done if men were wise,
What glorious deeds, my suffering brother;
Would they unite
In love and right,
And cease their scorn for one another?

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness;
And knowledge pour,
From shore to shore,
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies and wrongs,
All vice and crime might die together;
And wine and corn,

To each man born, Be free as warmth in suppy weather.

What might be done? this might be done; And more than this, my suffering brother,— More than the tongue E'er said or sung, If men were wise and loved each other.

TO LITTLE FREDDY IN HEAVEN.

Fair spirit, from the earth untimely fled, Dost thou come near me with thy silver wings?
Or is it some bright bird of heaven that sings
So sweetly in my heart, since thou wast dead?
Alas' the hands that pillowed thy dear head,
The eyes that watched thee through long nights of pain, Will know thee nevermore on earth again;

Will know thee nevermore on earth again;
For thou art gone unto thy narrow bed.
Yet if to weary hearts that long have shed
Their tears for thee in drops of scalding rain,
Thou comest still—oh! be it not in vain,
That we, too, follow where thy feet have led,
Upward through this dark world to that bright shore shore Where those who part on earth shall meet to part no more. H. W. ROCKWELL.

FREEDOM.

In the great feast of Freedom all men share, Whose lives unfold in harmony with truth. Joy, beauty, inspiration, deathless youth, Pure poet-vision, prophet sight, and skill To shape inferior natures to their will, And love so deep the soul may gaze into A golden ocean blended with the blue, And see therein an endless beauty-maze Where the celestial sun reflected plays; And gladness, like a rainbow that ascends, And all the radiant being overbends; And endless-growing virtues, summer-sweet, Rich as the fruits immortal angels cat—All these to Freedom's followers are given; They are the loved of God, and theirs is truth's own heaven.

Miscellany.

[From the "Sacred Circle," for September.] The Newsboy.

WEST ROXBURY, July 29, 1854. One day, while sitting in my room reading some letters to my family, my daughter became influenced quite unexpectedly, and began by saying: "Hurra! hurra! I am out of them dirty streets of New York."

I did not keep notes of this interview, and can therefore only state some things generated.

can therefore only state some things gener-ally about it. He said he was a news-boy in New York, and his name was Tim Peters that he had died since the last 4th of July of cholera, and was about twelve years old that his father had been run over by a rail road car; that he was a man of intemperat habits: that his mother had survived him awhile in feeble health, and he had one brother, named Bill, about ten years old.

He said many things which showed me that he was familiar with the localities near the upper end of Nassau Street, and his shrewdness, his slang terms, and his manner of speaking were particularly characteristic of the class of boys to which he said he belonged. And he spoke of men and boys, with whom he had been thrown in contact, in a manner so natural as to carry conviction that he was what he said be was.

There was a keen shrewdness of thought, a reckless, devil-may-care manner, and a love of fun about him that can be seen in full combination only in them. He some-times swore, but immediately checked himself, and said that his mother (who was with him) told him he must not talk so. He said he had seen me when I was a judge, and had read my letter of last August. had sold more Heralds with that in it than usual. I asked him if he had noticed what effect it had had on those who read it. He said, "I have seen a feller sitting on a hydrant, who said he 'liked that feller who opened his jaws, and dared to say what he thought, and not like —, who was afraid of having pins stuck in him.''

This is a part only of this interview, but it is enough to show the character of it. But in the course of it, he said that he wanted to give me his history, and have me write it down, and publish it in the Sacred CIRCLE, so that the newsboys might see it, for it would "do 'em good." I told him I would soon give him an opportunity.

We were then called to dinner, but in the afternoon he came again, and gave me his history, which I wrote down as he went along, nearly in the following words:

Hurra! hurra! Say! that light hurts this ere girl's eyes. [The medium was sitting facing the window.] You know, as I told you before, my name is Tim Peters. Well, my mother was a good, respectable kind of a woman, and worked at sewing when a gal, she says. Dad was a day-laborer—that wasn't his trade—he was a harness-maker. I didn't know that, but mother says so. Golly! why didn't he stick to it?

Dad worked at that ever so long after he bitched horses with mother, and I was his oldest boy. Well, I grow'd up longside my brother, and we had a jolly good time when little, mother says. Mother was American, father was English. Well, father took to drink, like a darned sight of other folks, and went head over heels down hill as fast as he knew how. Mother got sick and worn out, and got to feeling bad

When dad used to come home, she dreaded to speak to him. He would come tum-bling into the house, cuffing us here and there, and swearing at mother, and she used

One day I come in and see her crying, and says, "Well, marm, what do you feel bad bout?" she cried, and said, "Tim, my I says, "Well, marm, what do you feel about?" she cried, and said, "Tim, boy, your father's worse and worse; has taken everything from us, and if he don't take care, he will take me from you. And, Tim, I hain't got a cent in the house to get breakfast with for to-morrow.'

"Well," says I, "mother, wipe your peepers; I'll be supporting on you, mother; you ain't got two boys for nothin'; just say how I can go ahead, and I'll be doin' some-

So she ups with her apron and wiped her eyes. That was an awful cold night. Oh, mercy! I'd heard mother say, when she was a gal, if farmers wanted rain, they prayed in meetin' for it; so when I went to bed, I down on my benders and asked for pain. snow, and somehow or other snow come So the next morning I borrowed next-door neighbor's shovel, and went along the streets neighbor's shovel, and went along the streets hunting "snow-jobs," as the boys call it. I got one. "Hurra!" says I, "now you are set up in business, you're in for it, Tim." So I pockets my money, and trudges home. Says I, "Mother, here's your money." Well, I declare, if she didn't make me feel soft as a girl—I warn't no more a boy—kase she went to cryin' agin.

soft as a girl—I warn't he more a boy and she went to cryin' agin.

"Well," says I, "mother, I didn't pray for rain last night. You melt me all down, mother; I feel all gone."

Well, she smiled, and says, "Tim, my boy, what'll we do when this is gone?"

"Well," says I, "mother, give me half o'

"Well," says I, "mother, give me half o' that, and I'll buy some papers, and start in business myself."

[I asked him how much the half was—he said fiveness."

said fivepence. "I was better than nothing; 'twould huy a loaf of bread anyhow.]
Well! golly! I pitched down Fulton Street, and invested my stock in papers. "I was the Sun. You can get lots of 'em for that. I got six for fivepence, and they trusted me three more for tuppence. I don't know how they come to trust me—the boys. trusted me three more for tuppence. I don't know how they come to trust me—the boys 'round said they never did it to them. Well, I sold all but one, and what do you think I did with that! I kept it as a show for next day; for if I could only buy three, four would look more respectable. That's the way folks trade, you know. Well, I took my money home, and that's the way I helped my mother along.

my money home, ...
helped my mother along.
"Tim," I said, "let me ask you—" triesses' box—go; "Tim," I said, "let me ask you-" Well, I'm in the witnesses' box-go it. "How did you get money to buy papers next day ?"

Did another job of snow. [While I was writing this down, the medium whistled, and he immediately said, "Golly! I didn't think I could do that thought I must do something while waiting

Where did I leave off! Oh, I got a shillin', and give it to mother. Stock was up, but I had none on, so I said nothin'.

When I went home each night there was a grin on my face broad as a moon. Mother said, "Tim, I've hopes of you, if you'll only keep out of liquor." So down she went on keep out of liquor.' her marrow-bones -why-on-earth she did it I couldn't see—but she ups with her eyes and says, "God bless Tim!" Somehow I and says, "God bless Tim!" Somehow ; felt weak in the joints, and down I went; 'twas catchin', so says I, "God bless Tim, too." Then I played leap-frog all around the room, I was so happy. Mother laughed, and said, "Tim, my crazy boy;" that made me feel better, but I couldn't understand it.

Byme-by dad come in, and he smelt like a distillery; and oh, if he didn't rip it! but gave mother the wink not to let him know was set up in business. When he come in he couldn't stand up, so he down on his marrow-bones, and swore a blue streak. I thought I smelt brimstone. What was eterthought I smelt brimscone. What was eter-nal strange to me was, mother didn't cry a bit; says I, "Tim, that's mighty strange, she'd cry for you, and not a bit for that lub-ber." But she did worse—she took to coughing, and I knew the jig was up for that time. And so it went, day after day. Dad time. And so it went, day after day. Dad said she was drunk, but he knew he lied.

Well, I kept selling papers and increasing my stock. I took the Herald, and sold lots of 'em: 'tween a good of of 'em; 'twas a good investment. I ups Broadway one day, Bill at my side, and I seen some M. P.'s on a corner. I warn't afraid of 'cm, so I stepped on one of their toes. He gin' me a devil of a look—mother says I mustn't say that—says I to Bill, "Let's to our trotters, or we'll be sent to the House of Refuge." I'd heard tell that, dad used to threaten me with I'd heard tell of Down by the Park I saw some awful fine dandies prinking along; says I, "Bill, just seen the M. P.'s; now look at the M. T.'s." So I went it every day; I couldn't feel bad, to save my life—suspect I warn't born in a bad time. Mother said it used to make her heart good to see me come in.

I asked him, "Were you so cheerful, I warn't nothin' else. When I used to swear, it made her feel bad. I told her I took it the natural way.

I asked him, "How so?" I had heard my forefathers-I'll tell you what I heard one day in the Park.

A great lubberly feller was making a speech. He said, "The time is coming when the day shall be celebrated—, hem,—that speaks of the noble deeds of our forefathers." I'm not so grand as he; I forefathers.' I'm not so grand as l can't make such a cock-a-doodle doo. I'm not so grand as he; I run home and said, "Mother, the day is coming when it shall be celebrated that speaks of the noble deeds of our forefathers. She said, "Tim, Tim, what on earth will come of you?" So it went along.

ome of you?" So it went along.
One day dad was brought in dead. needn't enter into particulars, 'twas all in the papers. I cried it, and made it an extra Herald for me.
I asked him, "How so?"

It was the celebration of the death of my forefathers.

I went home, after getting a few coppers and found mother cryin' and blubbering like everything, for she had loved him once. She said, "Tim, step softly, your father's dead." Says I, "I will, for I'm 'fraid I'll wake him up." Oh," says she, "Tim, you'll break my heart, talking so; forget the past; go look at him who once loved you, and called you his child." I went and looked; his face warn't red no more, and there was a sorrowful expression about his mouth-and caught something running down my cheek afore I knowed it. Well, they held a coroner's inquest, and he was buried.

I asked what made his tears run.

Tasked what made his tears run.
He had a kind o' sorrowful look. I felt,
oh, dear! suppose he'd been a good man, like I see in the Park, wouldn't he love his Tim! and I thought, "Tim, don't you love him!" How could I, when he made mother suffers of I spread he was in hell and day. suffer so. I 'sposed he was in hell and dam-nation they talked of, and I couldn't but That was the end of that.

feel sorry. That was the end of that.

I watched mother mighty close after father's exit. In spite of herself she breathed freer. I never see the woman so happy. Bill come in with a forlorn old black bonnet he'd begged somewhere's; she kissed him, and said, "God has blessed me in my trials." I felt so proud I could have knocked over anybody. We had some potatoes that over anybody.

day—Bill got 'em.
I used often to feel soft—I was took that way every once in a while-tears and fun altogether. I used to be ashamed of myself, altogether and then I'd swear a blue streak to hide it.
Bill sold radishes for a living. He went into the vegetable line. I was more intellectual. Mother got sewing. She scratched, we scratched, and we got along nicely; there was nobody to drink it all up. I was death on the M. P.'s, just for deviltry : I couldn't keep still.

I used to feel bad, coming home nights, to see mother look so bleached. I saw a "pain-killer" advertised down Nassau St., so I went and got some for mother. Warn't

One day she said to me, " Tim, take this one day see said to the, ring, my boy, and go buy yourself a pair of shoes." Well, says I, "No, mother, I can't do it." She says, "Timmy, I'll never live to see you wear 'em out, so let me see you to see you wenr 'em out, so let me see you have them.' If I'd got a licking, I couldn't have felt worse. So I runs after Bill, and, says I, "Bill, come in here, mother's kinder lonely." Bill never stopped for nothing, but after the doctor he goes—a 'spensary doctor—mother looked so sick. Says I, "Mother, open your peepers; don't look so." She says, "Tim, God bless you, Tim and Bill. I hate to leave you, but God will take care of the orphans." I says, "Mothers of the orphans." I says, "Mothers of the orphans."

er, I'm sorry you are going, but seeing you can't stay, hurry up your cakes, and I'll take care of myself."

I asked him, "Why did you say that?"
Oh, she did feel awful bad; so says I, "Mother, Jordan is a hard road to travel. If you get there before I do, tell 'em I'm coming, too." She laughed, and, by colly the coming, too." coming, too." She laughed, and, by golly! if she didn't die a laughing, and that was just what I wanted. Bill didn't get back before she died. Oh Bill didn't get back before she died. Oh! didn't he take on! Poor cretur! He took on awful bad, seeing mother 'd gone before he got there. 'Well," says I, "Bill, if I only knew how to wear petticoats, I'd be a mother to you; but," says I, "never mind, we'll set up bachelor's hall."

I thought I was going to stay at that place, but no; rent day come, and we had to go; and when I gets outside I said to Bill, "Nothing like taking the air." So we slept 'round in the carts that night.

A poor old Irish woman washed for mother when she died. She did it for nothing. Catch rich folks doing that. She said she er when she died. She did it for nothing. Catch rich folks doing that. She said she knowed how she 'd feel if she should leave her boys kicking about, and if I wouldn't be up to so many tricks, she'd keep us. So we staid with her after that. She was a darned good old thing, but not so clean as mother. I told her I would do some odd jobs for her. Her rooms were dark and I whitewashed. Her rooms were dark, and I whitewashed them, and whitewashing it was! She was awful tickled; but I didn't like my boarding-awful tickled; but I didn't like my boardingplace, 'cause she wouldn't take any pay.

Says I to Bill, "I'll get you a situation."

So, as luck would have it, I used to listen to people's talking, and one day I heard a man say he wished he had a smart boy to take into the country. I goes up to him and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "What do you mean!" I says,
"I knows a fellow will suit your capacity."

Says he, "Are you the chap!" Says I,
"No, I aint, but I knows one what is."
"Well," says he, "I like the looks of you."

Says I, "I'm obliged to you." So I whistled to Bill, and he come. He was really a pretty-eyed fellow, just like mother. So the man axed me about my relations, and I told him all about it. "Well," says he, "I like the looks of your boy there, and I'll take him." "But," says I, "look here, mister, dan" you like him at franches in the says of the says I." look here, with the says of the s don't you lick him; if you do, I'll lick you back." I thought he'd die a laughing.

So I fitted Bill out. How do you think I did it! I give him some gingerbread.

'Twas as hard as two peas in a pod. But the old feller fixed him all up before he went out of town. Bill felt so grand and bappy, that he forgot to be sorry at leaving me.

[I asked him here if he could tell me the name of that old Irishwoman, and where she lived. He said it was Bridget Mahan; she lived near the Five Points; he couldn't mention the name of the street; said it was a short one, and added, "Hold on! see if I can fetch it!" He paused a moment, and not recalling the name, went on:]

I trudged home to the old woman's where I boarded I felt awful streaked; I couldn't or nor do nothing, so I went to the National Theatre. I saw nothing for my tears—had to laugh once in a while. "Twasn't the National Theatre—it was the next one to it, where the boys could get in for sixpence. sold papers ever so long after that. I got in all sorts of mischief; took to smoking and all sorts of mischief; took to smoking and chewing—the boys set me up to it. Then I got happy again, but I felt lonesome; I went to all the fires—used to go to Hoboken; pitched pennies till I got enough to pay the ferriage. The boys used to say I cheated. I wonder if I did! They said I was a gambler, but I only used common cents. I had a black eye every once in a while, fighting the boys who twitted me about Bill and mother. I wouldn't stand that, so I give 'em some thing to remember me by. They are hard boys—had to be so. I used to pitch into the bullies when pushing the little ones away, and hooking their papers.

I made about a shilling a day, depending on the news and the brain of the editor. I tell you one thing, if any one of the boys didn't sell his papers, we'd go shucks with him, and each take one—that was among the good fellers. Tell you what I used to do—go 'long up Broadway, and see one of your fine looking fellows, run agin' him, most knock his breath out, then ask, 'Have a paper, sir?

I always thought of mother while bawling my paper at the top of my lungs. Sunday was a forlorn day. One day I thought I'd treat myself, so I bought one of them penny ice creams that they sell at the corners. I was took up with the cramp, and went home. I had changed board was—if I made a shilling, I paid two cents for my board; if I made eighteen pence, then I paid four cents. I was awful sick. "Tim," says I, "you goin' home, ain't you glad!" my boarding-place, and the way I paid

I grew worse and worse, and all grew dark about me. I wished for Bill. I lay on some straw on the floor. I begun to feel so pleasant and happy. I heard mother speaking to me, "Tim, my boy!" I jumped right up in bed, but I saw nothing—then ngir up in bed, but I saw nothing—then the pain come on. One of the boys come in, and says he, "Tim, what you doing there?" "Ike," says I, "I'm going where the good niggers go, I 'spect."

"Tim," says he, "I guess you'll be well to-morrow."

"Ike," says I, "if I'm well, I won't be stay." What did he do but cry. I never see folks cry so easy. Says I, "Ike, don't let the bullies beat that new-comer—the green 'un-will yer !'

Says he, "No, I'll take care o' him till you come back." Then it grew darker; I didn't hear his voice. All at once I saw mother. I had no pain, and there was no tears in her eyes. Says I, "Hurra! I'm for it. Ain't I, mother? How the dickens did I come

Says she, "Look!"

I looked and saw them carrying my coffin out of the room. Then she took me with her, and if I ain't as happy as a bee, I tell you. I go 'bout singing, but not the papers. There are lots of other boys, but somehow I feel a kind of babyish; I don't want to be out of her sight. I thought I was independ-

I've been back to the Herald office; there I heard some one say, "Timothy."

grand, 's says I.

"Hush!' says mother, "don't talk so."

Then the other one said, "You must go back, my child, and teach the little newsboys, that if they keep a kind feeling in their hearts and try to be good, there is a happy place for them all."

"Well," says I, "mister, whoever you are, its easier said than done; because, if a boy tries to be good, there is always some-body to kick it out of him. But," says I, "mister, I'll do that same;" so here I am

Would you like to know how I learn to read? Mother taught me some, then I taught myself some. All the newsboys can't read, but when they have got through selling their papers, some one of 'em who and reads to 'em; so they know a darned sight more of what's goin' on than you think they do. Then they talk it over among

Look here, mister, I tell you what had a wonderful effect—when a newsboy come up to a gentleman, and he looked pleasant on him and smiled; 'twas worth three cents to sell a paper to that feller. But when they are cross and push 'em aside, it makes a feller swear. Whoever it is, tell 'em to be good to their mothers, and they'll be as happy as I am. Hurra!
Here ended this interview. The next day he came again, and talked considerably Among other things, he said that once he got drunk just to see how it was. "Golly," said he, "I got enough of it, never catch me at it agin." I asked him if he could give me the name of any of his companions. He me the name of any of his companions. He gave me the names of four of them: Jim,

He, John Smith, and Lazy Bob.

He brought with him at this interview the Spirit of a boy younger than himself, who said his name was Dick Hardin.

TASTES DIFFER .- In a lecture on what he he has seen abroad, Wendell Phillips ob-

In Italy you will see a man breaking up his land with two cows and the root of a tree for a plough, while he is dressed in skins with the hair on. In Rome, Vienna and Dresden, if you hire a man to saw wood, he does not bring a horse along. He never had one, or his father before him. He puts one end of the saw on the ground, and the other on his breast, and, taking the wood in other on his breast, and, taking the wood in his hand, rubs against the saw. It is a solemn fact, that in Florence, a city filled with the triumph of art, there is not a single auger, and if a carpenter would bore a hole, he does it with a red hot poker! This results not from the want of industry, but of sagacity of thought. The people are by no means idle. They toil early and late, men, women, and children, with an industry that shames labor-saving Yankees. Thus he makes labor, that the poor must live. In Rome, charcoal is principally used for fuel, and you will see a string of twenty mules, bringing little sacks of it upon their backs, when one mule could draw all of it in a cart. But the charcoal vender never had a cart, and so he keeps his mules and feeds them. This is from no want of industry, but there is no competition.

A Yankee always looks haggard and ner-

With us, money is everything; and when we go abroad, we are surprised to find that the dollar has ceased to be almighty. If a Yankee refuse to do a job for fifty cents, he will probably do it for a dollar, and will certainly do it for five. But one of the largery in the large tainly do it for five. But one of the lazaroni of Naples, when he has earned two cents, and eaten them, will work no more that day, if you offer him ever so large a sum. He has earned enough for the day, and wants no more. So there is no eagerness for making money, no motive for it, and everybody moves slowly.

Advertisements.

N. H. DILLINGHAM, M. D., PHYSIO-MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL PHYSICIAN,

PHYSICIAN,

OFFICE and residence, No. 1 Barton street, (corner of Leverett,) Boston, Mass., will endeavor to attend to all calls in and out of the city, with fidelity and scientific skill. We know we have a reputation for unqualified success, not only for the cure of all common diseases, but especially for female weaknesses, uterine diseases, all humors, old sores, tumors, ulcers, etc. Treatment Psychological and Dietetic to all who are susceptible to such influences.

We intend to have the best Clairvoyant in the country, who will examine for business, as well as country, who will examine for business, as well as the sick, at all hours of the day. Terms from $1 can be obtained for the different phases of spiritumanifestations. Rooms open from 10 to 12. M; 2 to 4, P. M.; and 7 to 9, evenings. No charge to the actually poor. Boston, Sept, 1854.

LIST OF PUBLICATIONS.

FOR SALE BY BELA MARSH, No. 15 Franklin Street, Boston. (OFFICE OF THE NEW ERA.)

The following list embraces all the principal works devoted to Spiritualism, whether published by Bela Marsh or Messrs. Parthibos & Brittan and others; the prices of the same being annexed, together with the rates of postage. All new publications received as soon as issued. The Trade supplied at publishers' prices.

Works by Andrew J. Davis.

The Present Age and Inner Life: A Sequel to Spiritual Intercourse. Modern Mysteries classified and explained. Illustrated with engravings. Price $1,00. Postage 28 cents.

The Harmonial Man; or Thoughts for the age. Price 30 c.; postage 5 c. Nature's Divine Revelations, &c. Price $2,00;

The Great Harmonia, Vol. I—The Physician.
Price $1,25; postage 20 c.: Vol. II., The Teacher, price $1,00; postage 19 c.: Vol. III., The Seer, price $1,00; postage 19 c.

The Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. Price 50 c.; postage 9 c.

Free Thoughts concerning Religion : or Nature versus Theology.

The Philosophy of Special Providences.—A Vision. Price 15 c.; postage 3 c. The Approaching Crisis; being a Review of Dr.

Bushnell's recent Lectures on Supernaturalism. Price 50 c.; postage 12 c. A Chart exhibiting the Outline of Progressive History and Approaching Destiny of the Race. Cannot be sent by mail. Price $1,75.

Works by John S. Adams.

Answers to Seventeen Objections ag inst Spiritual Intercourse, and Inquiries relating to the Manifestations of the Present Time. Price 2 paper—38 c. in cloth; postage 5 and 7 c. Price 25 c. in

A Letter to the Chestnut street Congregational Church, Chelsea, Mass. Price 15 c.

An Intensely interesting Work! A Rivulet from the Ocean of Truth, an authentic and intensely interesting narrative of the advancement of a Spirit from darkness into light; proving in an over the departed. With Introductory and Incidental remarks by John S. Adams. ["God's mercy is eternal and complete."] Price 25 c.; postage 3 c.

Works by A. E. Newton. The Ministry of Angels Realized. A Letter to the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston. Price 10 c.; postage 1 c.

A Review of the Criticisms of The Congregationalist on the Letter to the Edwards Church. Price 10 c.; postage 1 c.

Answer to Charges of belief in Modern Revelations, &c., given before the Edwards Congrega-tional Church, Boston. Price 13 c.; postage 1 c.

Works by various Authors. Epitome of Spiritual Intercourse: A Condensed view of Spiritualism in its Scriptural, Historical, Actual, and Scientific aspects; Its relations to Christianity, Insanity, Psychometry, and Social Psychology. cial Reform. Manifestations in Nova Scotia; Important Communications from the Spirits of Sir John Franklin, and Rev. William Wishart, St. John, N. B., with Evidences of Identity and Directions for Developing Mediums. By Alfred Cridge, of Canada; Writing Medium. Price 38 c.; postage 5 c.

Nichols' Monthly, a Magazine of Science and Pro-gressive Literature. By T. L. Fichols and Ma-ry S. Gove Nichols. Price 12 cents, single; $1

The Shekinah, edited by S. B. Brittan; in three vols. or single. In plain or elegant binding, from $1,75 to $3,000 per vol. A Review of Dr. Dods' Involuntary Theory of Spiritual Manifestations. By W. S. Courtaey. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c.

The Tables Turned: A Brief Review of Rev. C. M. Butler, D. D. By S. B. Brittan. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c.

New Testament "Miracles" and Modern "Miracles." The comparative amount of evidence for each; the nature of both; testimony of a hundred witnesses, &c. Price 30 c.

The Religion of Manhood, or The Age of Thought.

By J. H. Robinson; with Introduction by A.

E. Newton. Price in cloth 75 c., in paper 50 c.;

postage 12 c. The Philosophy of Creation, unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and the Spirit World. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium. Price 38 c.; postage 6 c.

38 c.; postage 6 c.

Book for Skeptics; being communications from Angels, written with their own bands. Also Oral Communications spoken by Angels through a trumpet and written down as they were delivered, in presence of many witnesses; also a representation and explanation of the Celestial Spheres, given by the Spirits at J. Koon's Spirit Room in Dover, Athens county. Price 25 c.

Marriage—its History, Character, and Results; its Sanctities and its Profanities; its Science and it Facts. Demonstrating its influence as a civilized institution on the happiness of the Individual and the Progress of the Race. By T. L. Nichols, M. D., and Mrs. Mary S. Gove Nichols. Price $1,00.

Scripture Idolatry: a Discourse by Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Minister of the Worcester Free Church. Price 5 c. single, 38 c. per dozen; postage 1 c.

Messages from the Superior State; communicated by John Murray, through John M. Spear, in the summer of 1852: containing important instruction to the inhabitants of the earth. Carefully prepared for publication; with a sketch of the Author's earthly Life, and a brief description of the Spiritual Experience of the Medium. By S. C. Hewitt. Price 50 c.; postage 8 c.

The Spirit Minstrel: a collection of Hymns and Music for the use of Spiritualists in their Circles and Public meetings. By J. B. Packard and J. S. Loveland. Price in paper covers 25 c., in cloth backs 38 c.; postage 6 c.

Mr. Fernald's Compendium of the Theological and Spiritual Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. Price $2,00; postage 45 c.

Astounding Facts from the Spirit World, witnessed at the house of J. A. Gridley, Southampton, Mass., by a circle of friends, embracing the extremes of Good and Evil. Price 63 c.; post-

Spirit Intercourse: containing Incidents of Perso nal experience while investigating the new Phenomena of Spirit Thought and Action, with various Spirit Communications through himself as Medium. By Herman Snow, late Unitarian minister at Montague, Mass. Price 60; postage 10 c.

Supernal Theology. Price 25 c.; postage 6 c. Spiritual Instructor: containing facts and the philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. Price 38 c.; postage 6 c.

The Spiritual Teacher, by Spirits of the Sixth Circle; R. P. Ambler, Medium. Price 50 c.: postage 7 c.

The Macrocosm and Microcosm, or the Universe without and the Universe Within, by Wm. Fishbough—paper bound 50 c., Muslin 75 c.; postage 11 c. Shadow-Land, or the Seer, by Mrs. E Oakes Smith. Price 25 c.; postage 5 c.

The Secress of Preverst: being Revelations con-cerning the Inner Life of Man and the Inter-diffusion of a World of Spirits in the one we inhabit. By Mrs. Crowe. Price 38 c.; postage 6 c

Book of Human Nature. By Laroy Sunderland. Price $1.00. Book of Health, by the same. Price 25.

Book of Psychology, by the same. Price 25 c. An Exposition of Views respecting the principal Facts, Causes, and Peculiarities involved in Spirit Manifestations: together with interesting Phenomenal Statements and Communications. By Adin Ballou. Second Edition, with a Portrait. Price in cloth, 75 c., postage 12 c.: paper, 50 c.: postage 9 c. paper, 50 c.; postage 9 c.

Dexter, M. D., with an Appendix by Nathaniel P. Talmadge, late U. S. Senator, and Governor of Wisconsin. Price $1,25; postage 30 c.

Spirit Works Real but not Miraculous: a Lecture read at the City Hall in Roxbury, Mass., on the evening of September 21st, 1853. By Allen Putnam. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c. Philosophy of Mysterious Agents: Human and Mundane, or the Dynamic Laws and Relations of Man, by E. C. Rogers. Price $1,00; post-

Fascination, or the Philosophy of Charming, by John B. Newman, M. D. Price 75 c.; postage

Philosophy of the Spirit World: communicated by spirits through the mediumship of Rev. Charles Hammond. Price 63 c.; postage 12 c. The Birth of the Universe: being a Philosophical Exposition of the origin, unfoldings and ultimate of Creation. By and through R. P. Ambler. Price 50 c.; postage 7 c.

Brittan and Richmond's Discussion, 400 pages octavo. Price $1,00; postage 25 c.
Discourses from the Spirit World, dictated by Stephen Olin, through Rev. R. P. Wilson, writing medium. Price 63 c.; postage 12 c.

Rev. Charles Beecher's Review of the Spiritual Manifestations: read before the Congregational Association of New York and Brooklyn. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c.

Light from the Spirit World: comprising a series of articles on the condition of Spirits and the development of mind in the Rudimental and Second Spheres, being written by the control of Spirits. Rev. Charles Hammond, Medium. Spirits. Rev. Charles I. Price 75 c.; postage 10 c.

The Pilgrimage of Thomas Paine, written by the Spirit of Thomas Paine, through C. Hammond, Medium. Muslin 75 c.; 12 c. postage: paper 50 c; postage 9 c.

Proceedings of the Hartford Bible Convention. Reported Phonographically by Andrew J. Graham. Price 75 c.; postage 12 c.

Elements of Spiritual Philosophy: R. P. Ambler, Medium. Price 25 c.; postage 4 c. Reichenbach's Dynamics of Magnetism. Price

$1,00; postage 20 c. Pneumatology, by Stilling: Edited by Rev. Geo. Bush. Price 75 c.; postage 16 c. Celestial Telegraph, by L. A. Cahagnet. Price $1,00; postage 19 c.

Voices from the Spirit World: Isaac Post, Medi-Night Side of Nature; Ghosts and Ghost Seers: by Catherine Crowe. Price $1, 25; postage 20 c.

The Science of the Soul, by Haddock. Price 25 c.; An Epic of the Starry Heaven. Thomas L. Har-ris. "Hereafter ye shall see Heaven opened." Price 75 c.; postage 10 c.

GLEASON'S PICTORIAL DRAWING-ROOM COMPANION.

DRAWING-ROOM COMPANION.

A record of the beautiful and useful in Art.

The object of the paper is to present in the most elegant and available form a weekly literary melange of notable events of the day. Its columns are devoted to tales, sketches, and poems by the nest american Authors, and the cream of the domestic and foreign news; the whole well spiced with wit and humor. Each paper is beautifully illustrated with numerous accurate engravings by eminent artists, of notable objects, current events in all parts of the world, and of men and manners, altogether making a paper entirely original in its design in this country. Its pages contain views of every large city in the known world, of all buildings of note in the eastern or western hemisphere, of all the principal ships or steamers of the navy and merchant service, with fine and accurate portraits of every noted character in the world, both male and female. Sketches of beautiful scenery, taken from life, will also be given, with-numerous specimens from the animal kingdom, the birds of the air and the fish of the sea. It is printed on fine white paper, with new and beautiful type, presenting in its mechanical execution an elegant specimen of art. The size of the paper is fifteen-hundred and sixty four square inches, giving a great amount of reading matter and illustrations—a mammoth weekly paper of sixteen octave pages. Each six months will make a volume of 416 pages, with about one thousand splendid engravings.

TERWS: INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

One subscriber 1 year $3,00; four subscribers 1 year $10,00; ten subscribers 1 year $20,00. One copy of The Flag of Our Union, and one copy of Gleazon's Pictorial, when taken together by one person, one year, for $4,00.

No travelling agents are ever employed for this paper.

The Pictorial Drawing-Room Companion may be obtained. A record of the beautiful and useful in Art.

The Pictorial Drawing-Room Companion may be obtained at any of the periodical depots throughout the country, and of newsmen, at ear cents per country.

single copy.
Published every Saturday, by F. Gleason, corner of Tremont and Broomfield streets, Boston, Mass. LADIES' REPOSITORY.

LADIES' REPOSITORY.

The Ladies' Repository is published regularly on the first day of every month on the following terms: Single copies, per annum, in advance, $2; six copies for one year, $10; twelve conts for every three months' delay. Letters and communications, post paid, must be directed to A Tompkins, 38 Cornhill, Boston, Mass. No sub scription received for less than one year, and persons subscribing during the volume will be considered as taking the back numbers, as we print an equal number of copies each month. Volume begins in July of each year.

DEVOTED TO THE NEW DISPENSATION, OR THE INAUGURATION OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN UPON EARTH, THROUGH THE AID OF SPIRITUAL INTERCOURSE.

VOL. III .--- NO. 8.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

WHOLE NO., 106.

Thoughts of the Age.

The Position of Science in Truc Religious Teaching.

An Address given at the Opening of the Meloda-on for Meetings of Spiritualists, Oct. 1, 1854.

BY A. E. NEWTON.

The term science means simply knowledge; or, if a more positive expression be desired, certain knowledge-demonstrated truth concerning anything and everything within the reach of human cognizance. Thus, the science of Astronomy includes all that is known respecting the sun, moon, planets, stars, comets, etc., and the relations of our earth to them-the science of Geology includes all that is known respecting the internal structure of the earth-that of Geography embraces all knowledge respecting the earth's surface -Mineralogy comprehends all that is known respecting the various kinds of substances of which the earth is composed-Chemthese substances as ascertained by analysis and synthesis-the science of Botany includes all that is known of plants and vegetable edge in relation to animal formations-An- and these are their God. thropology comprehends all that is known of what is known respecting spiritual existences in general-Psychology what is known respecting the human soul-and Theology what | bending Sovereign-" a consuming fire." is known respecting God-though it must be said that the present systems embrace All these branches of science have their di-bited or now exhibits. Science, then, is our knowledge of actualibe the same more or less.

ciple without personality, or embodied as a capable of revealing the whole Beauty of the working, in physical nature.

This being so, it is self-evident that all Wisdom and Infinite Love. scientific truth (I do not say all scientific theories or speculations, but scientific TRUTH,) is DIVINE TRUTH-than which nothing can be his own, he must be peculiarity liable to more sacred or authoritative. In so far as vitiate with his own thoughts and concepscience has arrived at any positive results in | tions whatever revelations of the Divine are | religious temples are consecrated to the God | any department of inquiry, it gives positive made through his agency. Hence it is clear knowledge respecting the character and the will of the Divine Author of all, to just the degree that these are manifested in that particular department of His works. The sculptor elaborates his interior conception in the chiseled marble, and in gazing on that, we learn the characteristics of his inner life .-The painter portrays his hidden thoughts doings of God, than can be possibly be furnhe traces there, we read the emotions of his inmost soul. The poet "builds the lofty rhyme." and the architect constructs the stately edifice, and the artizan fabricates the ductions we judge with certainty of the in- human minds the capacity, to grasp its wonterior characteristics and capabilities of each mind. We all know each other by what we do and what we make. If our souls are filled with beauty, music, goodness, loveliness and truth, these characteristics will show themselves outwardly in what we do, and say, and create. So has it been truly said of God, that " the invisible things of Him, since the creation of the world have been clearly seen, being understood by the things that are

It is furthermore evident that we can derive full and complete knowledge of God only by becoming acquainted with all His works -in other words, by a knowledge of all science. Just so far as we come short of this, so far are our conceptions of Him limit- devotee of any branch of science. But it is ed and partial-and those persons are necessarily most limited and partial in their conceptions of God, who know least of the various departments in which He has revealed Himself. Suppose one man to be possessed of a variety of capacities, each in an exalted degree; is it not perfectly clear that whatever he might produce in one department would give little indication of his capacities in another, and thus little knowledge of his character as a whole? That he could make a nicely adjusted watch might prove him a skillful mechanician, but it would give you no idea of his genius as a poet; nor would the most exquisitely chiseled statue give the slightest conception of his musical powers; nor would a moral essay convey any true idea of his abilities as an architect or a mathematician. He could reveal his capacities in each department only by what he produced in that de-

So the Deity reveals His various attributes or characteristics in manifold outward exhibitions. Limited or partially developed human

One sees in the Universe a grand exhibition of mechanical powers and contrivances, and hence he conceives of the Deity as a Grand

Another looks chiefly upon the artistic beauties of creation-the lights and shades of coloring spread out before the eye-and his God is a Great Painter.

A third listens enraptured to the song of the breeze, the cadence of the waterfall, the notes of the bird, and the "music of the spheres "-and his Deity is a Mighty Musi-

"And the realms of space are His octave bars, And His music notes are the suns and stars." To another, " God is the Poet of Poets,"

"Each ray of light is a thought in verse, From the Poet-Heart of our God outsung.

Another sees in the Universe a grand chemical laboratory-each living organism is but a piece of nicely adjusted chemical apparatus; and his God is thence a Great Chemist: and he can speak of even the istry respects the nature and properties of Deity Himself as "that chemical combination whom men call God."

Some recognize nothing but a set of impersonal principles or Eternal Laws, destitute of productions-Zoology embraces all knowl- moral, affectional, or intelligent attributes,

Others, fixing their minds chiefly on the man and his history-Pneumatology includes manifestations of moral inflexibility, the punitive safeguards against violation of law, conceive of a Stern Lawgiver-an Un-

Now is not it indisputable that God is truly all these, and inconceivably more? But what is believed, rather than what is known. to know Him truly, we must search all His revelations of Himself, that we may see all visions and subdivisions-as, for instance, sides of His character. If He has made a rev-Anthropology, or the Science of Man, in- elation in writing, (as the Bible is claimed cludes Animal Chemistry, Anatomy, Physi- to be,) that is but one of the endless methology, Dietetics, Medicine, Phrenology, ods He has taken to make Himself known. Psychology, and whatever relates to the di- And as we are better known by what we do versified manifestations of quality and capathan by what we say, or write, so God may bility which the human being ever has exhibe more surely known by His works than by writings. More than this, a revelation written in human language, is but a manities-it embraces all that we really know, festation of God through man, and of course of anything and everything in the universe, liable to be rendered imperfect by the imperfections of the medium or instrument em-Now if it be admitted, as most minds are ployed. A flower is an instrument for the revwilling to admit, that all things in the uni- elation of God's Beauty, but flowers differ in verse have proceeded from one central or ul- their capacity to reveal the element of Beautimate cause, called Gon-be that cause con- ty,-and no one flower, nor all the flowers of of God as declared by the heavens-to porsidered merely as a universal Forming Prin- our earth together, can be supposed to be Personal Intelligence,-it follows that sci- All-Beautiful. So man is an instrument ence in its broad sense is only Knowledge for revealing God's wisdom and love, but no or Gon-that physical science is simply one man, nor all men who have ever yet knowledge of God's works, and of his ways of written, can be supposed to have had sufficient capacity to unfold the whole of Infinite

Moreover, since man possesses an independent consciousness and an intelligence of that any written revelation of God is less likely to represent Him truly and more likely to represent Him falsely to our apprehensions, than those revelations which are given without human agency. In other words, the deductions of positive science furnish us more reliable testimony as to the character and upon the canvas; and from the pencillings ished by any revelation made in human lan-

Especially must this be true as regards a revelation made in an age when science was almost wholly unknown, and when neither skillful mechanism, from each of which proderful unfoldings.

> Admitting, then, according to the formulas of the theologians, that the great end of all knowledge is to know God, and the great use of all knowledge is to enable us to understand and to do His will, and thus escape the penalties of transgression,-it is perfectly clear that these ends can never be attained without the aid of what is technically called science. For it is the very province of science, as before stated, to inform us of His works and of His ways of working.

It has been well said that

"The undevout astronomer is mad," and the same may be as truly said of the equally evident that the devout religionist who ignores science, and repudiates its positive deductions, is infected with a far more dangerous madness.

As God is one, and the Universe one, so Truth is one; all its departments are equally sacred, and important just in proportion to their bearing on human weal.

Illustrations of the importance of scientific knowledge to human welfare might be drawn abundantly from every hand. Man's relations to the external world, and to the internal world, are boundless as the Universe. measureless as Deity. And he can never wisely fulfil the duties of all these relations without some knowledge of them and of the laws which govern them.

life, is possessed of a physical body, composed of the elements of the material world -a spiritual body, consisting of the more refined and subtle elements of this same material world, and susceptible to influences from minds have ever been prone to fix on some the realm of the spiritual—and also a more one department of His revelation, and thence interior nature, or soul manifesting itself in who may be invited from time to time, by fore be a sound and healthful development province of science to inform us.

The devout man may pray for purity, and sanctification, and holiness-but he can nevof his animality with the impurities which modern cookery places on our tables. He may supplicate most earnestly for "growth in grace"-but it will be of little avail while his dietetic habits tend surely to promote growth in grease. He may agonize for spiritual and moral strength-power to resist temptation and to overcome evil-but his prayers will be likely to remain unanswered so long as he tampers with alcohol, tobacco, coffee, or any of those narcotics which weaken the nervous system and enervate the will. He may desire to consecrate all his energies of body and mind to what he conceives to be the service of God, but will be very apt to come short of the mark so long as he uses the suicidal razor to shave away the choicest of his physical strength three times every week. He may pray most earnestly for salvation in the future, but he can have little hope of attaining it, so long as he continues, by violation of the laws of his physical being, to incur damnation in the present.

In short, no amount of wordy supplication to the Author of our being, for aid of any aid. Said an ancient writer, " Then shall I not be ashamed when I have respect unto all thy commandments," and this is the only condition in which we shall not have reason to be ashamed.

The popular religious teachers of the day, it need hardly be said, to a great extent, ignore the lessons of science, in what are termed their "sacred ministrations," Their bad, who have not the virtue to practice subjects must be chosen from the pages of their own recommendations. They can apone book, which all admit makes no claims prove of the noble and just principles of to teach of science. To set forth the glory tray the history of the earth's creation, as traced by the mighty Maker's own finger on those tables of stone which encrust the globe relish. -to read the commandments written upon the physical, mental and moral constitution of man-in short, to scan the diversified revelations which God has made and is continually making of Himself in all life, all exceptions, a desccration of our pulpits! In of the past,-a Deity who ignores science and frowns on all investigation,-while the LIVING Gop, who to-day is working in all the forces of Nature, and is the Life of all life. has no place within their precincts.

In the spiritual era, which is now dawning upon earth, if I have at all rightly apprehended its characteristics, science is to be the grand Revelator of God. Material Science and Spiritual Truth are to be wedded in Divine Harmony, and together will constitute a true Theology-a real Science of Gon,-comprehensive as the Universe, and exhaustless as Deity Himself.

The evidence of this I find not only in the fact that the present enlightened condition of the human mind, and its intuitive conviction of the necessary oneness of all truth, will not permit it to receive spiritual revela- happy, unless that goodness become the actions which contradict the positive facts of tual property of the individual. It matters material science-but also in the fact that not how good the Infinite, or Jesus, or any the revelations which mark this era, instead one else may be, to those who are destitute of being confined to merely moral and spirit- of this quality. Neither the goodness of ual matters, do enter the domain of the physical sciences and undertake to unfold man's relations to the world of matter. The writings of Davis, of Ambler, Wilson, Hammond, Fishbough, and others,-the communications given through J. M. Spear, and many more, as well as the constant intercourse of more advanced minds and circles, furnish proof of this.

I do not affirm that all or any of these purported revelations, as yet given, whether heaven depends. What though all the anmade direct from Spiritual Intelligences, gels in heaven be happy, what doth it profit through unconscious entranced mediums, or those who reject the principles upon which written by highly spiritual minds acting nor- such happiness is immutably based? It is a mally-I do not affirm that any of these fundamental and eternal law of nature, that scientific revelations are yet to be accepted all happiness must result from the practical as text-books of science-authoritative and and personal goodness of the possessor, and final. I only say, that it is a characteristic cannot accrue to any person dispossessed of of the revelations of this era, that they em- the principles which generate it. brace scientific and philosophical, as well as moral and theological questions; and that the great effort of the minds of the Higher Spheres, who are leading in this movement, evidently is to make man understand what he has never understood, and realize what he has never realized—the importance of his For example, each of us, in our present PHYSICAL relations to his SPIRITUAL development and immortal life. When this shall be accomplished, then in the beautiful language around us, and affected by influences from it of an ancient seer, "Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven." (Ps. 135: 11.)

I have only to add, in concluding these observations, that it may be expected of those have derived but limited conceptions of Him. intelligence, affections and emotions, and al- the Boston Conference of the Spiritualists, lied to the Great Soul of the Universe Him- to speak in this place, that their discourses self. We know not only that all manifesta- will be confined to no one class of topics, the merits of Jesus may be set to the credit tions of the internal must be made through that they will present no one phase of truth the external, but that the internal receives to the neglect of all others, and that their the elements of its growth and development texts will be derived from no one volume of through the external. There cannot there- the writings of the past, to be denominated "The Sacred Volume." The whole outof the interior nature in an unsound and un- spread creation is our text-book, and every healthful body. But how to attain this iota of truth that we can gather respecting healthfulness of the physical nature, it is the any department of it, is sacred truth. The flower, the pebble, yea, even the pavingstone, trodden under foot as it is of man and beast,-each may furnish a text whose dier attain them while he feeds the grossness vine authorship none can call in questioneach may preach lessons of "wisdom the weary school-men never knew."

> For the New Era. Personal Virtue Essential to Happiness.

An impartial review of public sentiment discloses a sad conflict of minds upon almost every question in which those minds are interested. No age or nation can claim unity of opinion, nor boast of infallibility of judgment. Whatever of refinement may be allowed to exist in individuals, still the masses of nations have not partaken of the perfectibility of the most refined, nor cared to become the followers of the light set before them. Great minds and good men have set the principles of justice and equity before their fellows in strong and effective language, and still stronger and more effectually in their examples; and yet the masses of society, though formally acknowledging the perfection of their principles and the purity of their conduct, have sadly ignored the practice which they commended in others. kind, can be expected to be of much avail, Complimentary as their words may seem to while we neglect or go counter to the very the wise and the good, it is but ignorant conditions on which He must bestow that zeal which allows them to approve of what they practically disown.

In no age or nation has this infatuationthis commendation of principles by words and denial by acts-been more nakedly manifest than at this moment and in this country. I see vast multitudes applauding with words the conduct of the wise and good, and seriously condemning the foolish and the other men, and laud their examples of benevolence and worth with stirring words, but to follow them through good report and evil report is a task for which they have no

Instances are not wanting in which men commend to others what they themselves refuse to practice. How sweetly are the encomiums of Jesus enunciated, how pathetically is his life described, how feelingly are motion, all beauty, and all beneficence around his virtues commended, and how energeticalus-these are esteemed, with some honorable ly are his principles enforced! All that words can do, all that language can express. fact, it may be said that most of our modern | is done to commend and enforce the religion which he taught. But what is the conduct? What are the examples, the doings, of those who speak so favorably of him? Where are they found in practice? How many seek to follow him? How many practically shun his footsteps? Why commend in words what is denied in acts? Does religion consist in words or deeds? Are men and women to enter heaven because Jesus is good. or because he lived what he taught? Is no goodness in them requisite to be as happy as he? Is heaven so cheap, happiness so easy and plentiful, that no virtue is required in the person seeking it?

We who have dwelt in the earth-body, and sojourned in the spirit-world for nearly half of a century, have not yet discovered any law or any way by which the goodness of one person can make another good or God nor the angels can make a soul happy without they possess that goodness and exercise it for themselves. It is contrary to the laws of mind to make a soul happy without love and wisdom of its own.

What though Christ be good, his goodness is his own, and not the quality of another's acts, until he or she shall exercise by their own wills the principles of Jesus, or the virtues upon which all enjoyment in earth or

All happiness is resultant from individual qualities, and consists in the degree of the development of those qualities in each person. Relying upon finding enjoyment because another is possessed of the virtue which brings it, is a delusion that paralyzes all our efforts to secure happiness. Men have dreamed that God, in his infinite goodness, would in his purposes of grace transfer the merits of Jesus to those who trusted in such an unjust and arbitrary insult to the natural workings of his wisdom in the government of mankind. The moral force of such instruction is weakening to the cause of personal improvement, and makes the individual who relies upon such faith indifferent as to his or her personal worth. Merit cannot be transferred, and to suppose that of others, is a mistake which will find no justification in the truth. It matters not what authors or books may teach, the laws of God warrant no such injustice between man and man, nor between man and his

There is no law in the Universe that will justify the practice of crediting the merits of Jesus, or of angels, to any other individual than the proper one. And no individual has any right to expect such a fraudulent transaction as the doctrine of imputed sin and righteousness attaches to the Ruler of the

Personal virtue recoils at the thought of such injustice. And if men and women venture to trust on getting to heaven because some one else is good while they are not, or in any record of history which may be thought to inculcate such an idea, it will still be a truth that they will find themselves disappointed when the justice of natural law shall be made known to them. They will then see that all happiness is but the result of an actual merit of some virtue existing in some person who is the recipient of its bless-

Men and women should not trust in errors to gain happiness. They cannot gain felicity by succumbing to popular views which conflict with the laws of reason and nature, nor receive the merits of another without possessing another's virtues. The noblest minds of earth and heaven are those who have merits of their own, and are capable of trusting in their own virtues to secure their exultation to higher spheres. In so doing, they act and think for themselves, and gather such instructions as nature with her millions of tongues, may present for their acceptance. Spirits may teach, men may listen, but when men do what law and nature demand, the virtue is the property of the doer, and the effect of such doing is happiness. This happiness is personal, and can accrue only to the actor. Such is the reward of good works. C. HAMMOND, Medium.

[The following article has appeared once in the columns of this paper, a year or two since; but we republish it at the request of several subscribented authoress to find admission for such an article in any of our prominent religious journals at present. What was orthodox on this subject a few years since, is fearfully heterodox now .- N.]

On the Ministration of Departed Spirits in this World.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE. It is a beautiful belief, That ever round our head Are hovering on viewless wings The Spirits of the dead.

While every year is taking one and another from the ranks of life and usefulness, or he charmed circle of friendship and love, it soothing to remember that the Spiritual world is gaining in riches through the pover-

In early life, with our friends all around us-hearing their voices, cheered by their smiles—death and the Spiritual world are to us remote, misty, and half fabulous; but as we advance in our journey, and voice after voice is hushed, and form after form vanishes from our side, and our shadows falls almost solitary on the hill-side of life, the soul, by a necessity of its being, tends to the unseen and Spiritual, and pursues in another life those it seeks in vain in this. For with every friend that dies, dies also some peculiar form of social enjoyment, whose being depended on the peculiar character of that friend; till, late in the afternoon of life, the pilgrim seems to himself to have passed over to the unseen world, in successive portions, half his own Spirit; and poor is he who has not familiarized himself with that unknown, whither, despite himself, his soul is earnestly tending. One of the deepest and most imperative cravings of the human heart, as it follows its beloved ones beyond the vale, is for some assurance that they will still love and care for us. Could we firmly believe this, bereavement would lose half its bitterness. As a German writer beautifully expressed it-·Our friend is not wholly gone from us; we see across the river of death, in the blue distance, the smoke of his cottage"—hence the heart, always creating what it desires, has ever made the guardianship of, and ministration of departed Spirits, a favorite theme of

But is it, then, fiction ? Does revelation, which gives so many hopes which nature had not, give none? Is there no sober certainty to correspond to the inborn and passionate craving of the soul? Do departed Spirits, in verity, retain any knowledge of what transpires in this world, and take any part in its

All that revelation says of a Spiritual state, is more intimation than assertion—it has no direct treatise, and teaches nothing apparently of set purpose, but gives vague, glorious images, while now and then, some accidental ray of intelligence looks out,

—like eyes of cherubs, shining From out the veil that hid the ark.

But, out of all the different hints and assertions of the Bible, we think a better inferential argument might be constructed, to prove the ministration of departed Spirits, than for many a doctrine which has passed, in its day, for the height of orthodoxy.

First, then, the Bible distinctly says, that there is a class of invisible Spirits who minister to the children of men. "Are they not all ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" It is said of little children, that their "angels do always behold the face of the Father which is in Heaven." The last passage from the words of our Savior, taken in connection with the well-known tradition of his time, fully recognizes the idea of individual guar-

For God's government over mind is, it seems throughout, one of intermediate agencies, and these not chosen at random, but with the nicest reference to their adaptation to the purpose intended.

Is it likely, then, that, in selecting subordinate agencies, this so necessary a requisite of a human life and experience, is overlooked? While around the throne of God stand Spirits, now sainted and glorified, but thrillingly conscious of a past experience of sin and sor-row, and trembling to the soul, in sympathy with temptations and struggles like their own; is it likely that He would pass by these souls, thus burning for the work, and commit it to those bright abstract Spirits, whose knowledge and experience are comparatively so distant and so cold?

It is strongly in confirmation of this idea, that in the transfiguration scene, which seems to have been intended purposely to give the disciples a glimpse of the glorified state of their Master, we find him attended by two Spirits of earth, Moses and Elias, "which appeared with him in glory, and spake of his death, which he should at accomplish at Je-

It appears that these so long departed ones were still mingling in deep sympathy with the tide of human affirs, not only aware of the present, but also informed as to the future.

In coincidence with this idea, are all those passages which speak of the redeemed of earth as being closely and indissolubly identified with Christ, members of his body, of his flesh and his hones. It is not to be supposed that these united to Jesus above all others, by so vivid a sympathy and community of interests, are left out as instruments in that great work of human regeneration which engrosses him; and when we hear Christians spoken of as kings and priests unto God, as those who shall judge angels, we see it more than intimated that they are to be the parents and actors in that great work of Spiritual regeneration, of which Jesus is the

What then? May we look among the bands of ministering Spirits for our departed ones? Whom would God be more likely to send us? Have we in heaven a friend who knew us to the heart's core-a friend to whom we have unfolded our souls in their most secret recesses-to whom we have confessed our weaknesses and deplored our griefs !-if we are to have a ministering Spirit, who better adapted ?

Have we not memories which correspond to such belief? When our soul has been cast down, has never an invisible voice whispered, "There is lifting up." Have not gales and breezes of sweet and healing thought been wafted over us, as if an angel has shaken from his wings the odors of Paradise? Many a one, we are confident, can remember such things; and whence come

Why do the children of the pious mother, whose grave has grown green and smooth with years, seem often to walk through perils and dangers fearful and imminent as the crossing Mohammed's fiery gulf on the edge of a drawn sword, yet walk unhurt? Ah! could we see that glorious form! that face where the angel conceals not the motherour questions would be answered.

It may be possible that a friend is sometimes taken because the Divine One sees that their ministry can act upon us more powerfully from the unseen world than amid the infirmities of mortal intercourse.

Here, the soul, distracted and hemmed in by human events and by bodily infirmities, often scarce knows itself, and makes no impression on others correspondent to its de-sires. The mother would fain electrify the heart of her child; she yearns and burns in vain to make her soul effective on its soul, and to inspire it with a Spiritual and holy life; but all her own weaknesses, faults and mortal cares, cramp and confine her, till death breaks all fetters—and then first truly alive, risen, purified and at rest, she may do calmly, sweetly and certainly, what amid the tempests and tossings of life, she labored for painfully and fitfully.

So, also, to generous souls who burn for the good of man, who deplore the shortness of life, and the little that is permitted to any individul agency in this life, does this belief open a heavenly field. Think not, father or brother, long laboring for man, till thy sun stands on the western mountains-think not that thy day in this world is over. Perhaps, like Jesus, thou hast lived a human life and gained human experience, to become, under and like him, a savior of thousands-thou hast been through the preparation, but thy real work of good, thy full power of doing, is yet to begin.

There are some Spirits (and those of earth's choicest,) to whom, so far as enjoyment to themselves or others is concerned, this life seems to have been a total failure. A hard hand from the first, and all the way through life, seems to have been laid upon them ; they seem to live only to be chastened and crushed, and we lay them in the grave at last in mournful silence. To such what a vision is opened by this belief! This hard discipline has been the school and task work by which their soul has been fitted for their invisible labors in a future life; and when they pass the gates of the grave, their course of benevolent acting first begins, and they find themselves delighted possessors of what through many years they have sighed forthe power of doing good.

The year just passed, like all other years, has taken from a thousand circles the sainted, the just and the beloved-there are spots in a thousand graveyards, which have become this year dearer than all the living world; but in the loneliness of sorrow, how cheering to think that our lost ones are not wholly gone from us. They still may move about our nomes, shedding ground them an atmosphere of purity and peace, promptings of good, and reproofs of evil; we are compassed about with a cloud of witnesses, whose hearts throb in sympathy with every effort and struggle, and who thrill with joy at our success. How should this thought check and rebuke every worldly feeling and unworthy purpose, and enshrine us in the midst of a forgetful and unspiritual world, with an atmosphere of heavanly peace. They have overcome—have risen—are crowned, glorified—but still they remain to us, our assistants, our comforters, remain to us, our of darkness they seem to and in every hour of darkness they seem to say to us: "So we grieved, so we struggled,

"BEHOLD! I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW."

S. C. HEWITT, A. E. NEWTON, EDITORS.

S. C. HEWITT, PROPRIETOR. OFFICE, NO. 15 FRANKLIN STREET.

Terms, $1,50 per Annum, in Advance. ISSUED EVERY SATURDAY.

N. B.—The Editors, Correspondents, and Readers of this paper are all expected to do their own thinking, and no one to be held responsible for the opinions of another. The Editors will indicate their principal productions by their proper initials, and will exercise their best judgment in selecting from the favors of correspondents; but it is desired that every thought expressed, whether old or new, from spirits in the flesh or out, should stand only on its intrinsic merits.

BOSTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

The Marriage Question.

The subject of the present article is now fairly before our readers, and it seems proper, if not absolutely demanded, that we should say some more definite word thereupon, than we have heretofore done. Some very sensitive friends think we should have done this sooner, but our own judgment has constantly decided otherwise. In relation to a question of this nature, and involving such momentous results, it has seemed to us especially needful to let the effervescence of thought and of passion have its brief day, that the public mind might be the better prepared for a more dispassionate and rationul view of the subject, than has, for the most part, been entertained of late in almost any quarter.

All questions, in their outset, are subject to extremes. And this is especially true of Marriage, which is the pivotal question of this age. Very seldom do we find those who are prepared to take neither side exclusively, but who, at the same time, see very clearly the truth and the error of both. Yet now and then, such do appear and say their word, only perhaps, for the time being, to get more kicks and curses, than good will and encouragement. Nevertheless, their word must be said, and if time does not, the eternities will, do them justice. So much then, in preface. We come now to the question itself. And

1. WHAT IS MARRIAGE? Does it consist in variety, or in duality? Is it a mere legal and external union, or is it mainly spiritual? We hesitate not to say that marriage is strictly dual in its nature-that it is the union of two, and of two only, in conjugal love. We have no possible faith in the idea of variety, either limited, or universal, if by that term is meant simultaneous change in one's conjugal loves-or, in other words, the capacity and strict rightfulness of loving, conjugally, more than one at the same time. The very idea of conjugality, by common consent, excludes the idea of various and simultaneous loves, for conjugality is duality, and that alone. It becomes, therefore, a solecism to talk of simultaneous variety in conjugal love. It is not simply an apparent, but a real paradox. The thing cannot be-There may be other loves, outside the conjugal-as that of charity, friendship, off spring, etc., which may be simultaneous and in variety; but the conjugal passion itself, is essentially dual, and is therefore exclusive, in the legitimate, proper and good sense of

But what proof have we of this? It is said that all nature illustrates the contrary. The male and female principles, we are told, exist throughout all nature-that even the mineral kingdom, as well as the vegetable, animal and human, reveals the principles of sexuality not only, but illustrates the doctrine of variety. There is a constant interchange of positive and negative, or male and female influence, not simply between two minerals, two vegetables, or two animals, but between each other, in almost endless variety. Here is a deposit of iron, copper, silver, or gold, giving off its chemical efflux, positively and negatively, or masculinely and femininely, not in a dual way, simply, but in variety, to any extent. Here, also, is a field of grain in blossom, and its impregnating substance is carried by the four winds, from one stalk to another, and another, and still another, without limit, knowing no exclusiveness-no confinement. And here again is the animal kingdom, with its genera and species-with also, its varied attractions -its constant crossing and re-crossing of breeds, and its endless interchanges of influences which reciprocally affect, not two only, from each other, but many from one, and one from many, on the male and female principles. So, also, it is argued, should it be with human beings, for the same law holds here as in all other departments of nature. If the law of variety is found everywhere else, and where, too, this principle of sex is especially concerned, why should it not be found also to be true of man-of the human race?

The argument for variety, thus drawn from nature below and outside of man, it is said, is confirmed by human history. Scarcely a nation has vet existed, which has not, in some form, not only tolerated, but approved of polygamy. And those nations which have been openly and professedly monogamic, have not been able, after all, to suppress, except in part, and mostly in mere outside public opinion and conventional arrangements, the actual manifestations of that love of variety in sexualism, which is true of all nature elsewhere. The conclusion therefore is, that variety in love is native and radical in man and woman, and that all confinement, or dual exclusiveness, is contrary to the nature and the well-being of the full advantage of this specious and seemingly plausible reasoning. We have done so, in order to give them no just cause of complaint, while at the same time we might be enabled thereby to present a more striking contrast between truth and error, on this subject, than we otherwise could possibly have done.

We have thus endeavored to give the argument its full force, and its advocates the ents will have patience.

And now, in replying, we may say in the outset, that the reasoning we have glanced at puts man on a level, not simply with the brutes, but lower still-with mere vegetable and mineral nature. And here is where it sadly fails, for although the great primary law of sexual union is essentially the same in all kingdoms, and although man is the complement, or epitome of the whole, yet he is vastly more than such complement or epitome. Man has a spiritually personal nature, which far outstrips all the relations of laws, elements, substances, creatures and influences in each and all the kingdoms below himself. The vegetable may grow out of the mineral, the animal out of both, and man, so far as they go, may be the culmination of them all, yet if he were no more than that, he would be no more than a harmonial animal; he would have no spiritual nature -no properly reasoning intellect-no spiritosocial attributes. He would be simply and only, the great representative of animal nature-he would not be MAN. But being man, by virtue of a manhood superadded to his animal being, which gives to that being all its essential glory and crown, which, while it unites, yet divides the manhood from the animal attributes, the primary law of sexuality rises here to a similar dignity, and is characterized by qualities and principles as far above animal, vegetable and mineral variety, in their interchange of sexual influences, as the personality, human form and angelic nature of man, are superior to merely diffusible elements, unconscious forces and abstract laws. Minerals, vegetables and animals are utterly incapable of forming intelligent, and spiritually and morally conscious sexual relations with each other; and especially are they incapable of calculating and providing for those multitudinous, evervarying and elevated wants and results which constantly flow from the union of the sexes of the human race.

There is, therefore, a marked difference between man and all nature besides; and this difference puts every law of nature, outside of man, into different relations to him, when such law enters into, and becomes a part of himself. Purposes have now to be fulfilled and objects gained, which never is evidently governed by a similar law, and could enter into the economy of 'the lower kingdoms, and hence the demands of the sexual law involve different relations, and those, too, of a more sacred and important of the psychometrist, so as to enable him to character, in human beings, than in all na-ly, or in principle, with those in the human race, it is plain that in the latter, these same laws become more complicated, imply new relations, and involve different results. And furthermore, such being the case, we involve attempt to draw an exact parallel through- everything with which it comes in contact, out, between human sexuality, or marriage, and especially the letter which is being writin its true and normal sense, and the relations and operations of the same essential principle, or law, in either or all of the three kingdoms below man. And in relation to the argument from human history, it may be said, that we have so little that is truly normal in that, in relation to the question under consideration, and what we have of a healthy character is so much on the side of duality, that it would seem the argument for variety must utterly fail in this direction. The Polygamy of ancient times, not only among the Heathen, but also among the Jews, as also that of a later day, not entirely confined to these classes, we should much sooner think the re sult of an inordinate and diseased sexuality, than of a healthy or normal tone of that passion of our nature. At any rate, it is a fact of history, that polygamy and its adjuncts, have always existed among those people who have been noted for very strong passions of the kind under consideration. But we think it will hardly be contended, on reflection, that this argument from history is tantamount to an argument from nature, inasmuch as nature is pretty effectually covered up by disease, so far as the history goes on that side of the question. Furthermore, when we take a comprehensive view of history in the premises, its testimony is very stand and live by law. And this he thought strongly on the side of the dual marriage, in | would be the practical tendency of Psychomelevated people, the monogamic or dual mar-shall know what she is-what her laws arerefinement of the later civilizations. True, therefore, what our life ought to be. even here, marriage is vastly inferior in character to the true idea of the conjugal relation, but at the same time, we find the idea of duality, or pairing, keeping exact pace with the progress of the human race. And in saying this, we do not overlook the great Mormon fact of these times, or the more formidable, because more subtle, doctrine of variety, as taught by some agitators of the present times. We look upon these, however, as the great summoning occasions of a mighty battle of principles already fairly begun, and not to be ended till the great doctrine of conjugal union, or dual marriage is brought out into bolder relief than ever before,-its laws, principles, and results thoroughly comprehended and acted upon-till loftier ideas of marriage are entertained, and vastly purer motives are cherished and made the constant promptings of such marriages as the angels smile upon, and God himself approves. But we must reserve much we would say for other opportunities. II.

Several articles intended for this paper are necessarily omitted. CorrespondConference at Harmony Hall. WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. STH.

It is seldom our privilege to meet with the friends, and take part in the discussions of the weekly Conferences of this city. But on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, we embraced the opportunity offered us, and met a quiet little circle of believers in Spiritualism at the Hall named above. The topic for discussion on this occasion, was Psychometry. We proposed the subject for consideration, and endeavored to get at the philosophy of it. The statement and the argument were substantially these : That, although the human powers, (i. e., of the Psychometrist,) the autograph, etc., were absolutely necessary to the result, yet that they served rather as occasions, than as causes. The Psychometrician does not, of himself, read the lifestory of the writer of an autograph, or of a letter, but is made the organ of doing it, by operative causes superior to himself. These causes are Spiritual, and from the world of of causes. Spiritual beings, partly from personal knowledge of the person whose character is to be read, and partly from their clairvoyant powers, come en rapport with the Psychometrist, and use his organs for the work, while, to all appearance, the Psychometrist himself does the whole of it. And the use of the autograph, the letter, or any thing else that may have been in contact with the person whose character is to be read, is simply to serve as a bond of connection, or to make an occasion for the reading, So much, then, for the statement. Now for the argument. It is granted, that the autograph, especially when written with ink, may be impregnated with the soul-magnetism of the writer. But it is hardly supposable that such magnetism will remain with the autograph for the space of a hundred years. And yet it is a fact, that letters a hundred years old have been as accurately psychometrized, as those just written, -or as the living person, whose hand takes that of the psychometrist. If we suppose the person present, who wrote the letter while in the flesh, or some other one who was familiar with his character when on earth, and making use of the organs of the apparent reader, the thing is easily explained. But to suppose there is enough soul-magnetism remaining, after the lapse of a hundred years, seems quite impossible. Even what is called the permanent magnet, if left without its armature, in contact with other freely conducting substances, would lose all its attractive force in less than one half of that time. This soul-magnetism must, therefore, be diffused long before the hundred years are out. What is there, then, in the ancient autograph to excite the powers read, accurately and vividly, the character of the writer ! Plainly, nothing at all, or next While, therefore, the laws of nature in the | to that. Certainly, there is not cause enough inferior kingdoms may be the same essential- here to balance the effect. The former, there-

This view of the subject, however, does not, in the least, contravene the idea of a constant efflux of soul-magnetism from each person of the human race, or from the fingers ourselves in endless absurdities, when we and the pen of a writer, which impregnates ten; but the question is, whether there is enough in this substantive efflux, which, per se, is as unconscious as any other diffusible element of nature, to account for the result we witness? It would seem that there is

> Dr. Felch, quoting the language of some eminent savan, replied to our remarks, by saying, that "if the premises were correct the conclusion" we drew from them, "must he true also," which, of course, was decidedly non-committal. The Dr. also made several other apt observations which we cannot

Mr. ATKINS coincided with our view of the matter, and related a case in his own experience, which confirmed that view. A gentleman on Cape Cod had written his autograph with a pencil, to make a trial, in that way, of this soul-reading. Now, it is plain that the steel pen and the liquid ink are more ready conductors of magnetism, than a dry lead pencil; and it may, therefore, be fairly supposed, that the autograph written with the latter, would be less fully charged, than with the former; and yet there is no perceptible difference in the results.

Mr. BLACKER did not feel competent to treat this matter; but he did feel, that the time was speedily coming when we shall underthis one particular, if no other, -viz. : that etry. Heretofore almost everybody has lived while polygamy and consequent variety have in constant violation of nature's laws, and existed mainly among the older nations, and | questions like the present will tend to make the ruder, less cultivated and less spiritually nature more transparent to us, so that we riage has prevailed most under the light and what our relations to her and them; and

We responded to this practical idea, and suggested, that we unconsciously, yet really and constantly affect each other, for good or evil, by the constant efflux of soul-magnetism. If we cherish elevated thought and sentiment, an elevated efflux radiates from us, and mingles with the spheres of others; and vice

Dr. FELCH mentioned the fact, that a dog would readily track his master, whether the latter wore old boots or new ones, in confirmation of this idea of efflux. Mr. EDSON did not think we were forced to adopt the Spiritual theory of Psychometry, The dog, he said, was a natural clairvoyantan organ for the soul of the Universe to operate through instinctively. So may we be organs also, on a higher plane. And the soul of the Universe may read, to us, individual souls, through the personal organism of the psychometrist, on the clairvoyant principle. So we are not obliged to suppose individual spirits to be en rapport with the visible reader, in order to account for the result.

Mr. LOVELAND did not agree with the clairvoyant view. The psychometrist feels-not sees. He had, furthermore, no doubt that kins.

the soul of the writer impressed itself upon the autograph; and if Spirits do the reading, through the organs of the psychometrist, there is no need of an autograph.

NOVEMBER

We reiterated, that the use of an autograph is to make an occasion for the reading. If there were no occasion for the reading, there would be no reading.

Mr. CROSBY thought Spirits helped the psychometrist, and related a fact concerning friend Wilson's psychometrical delineations, which illustrated the point.

Dr. Felch illustrated Bro. Loveland's position, that the psychometrist feels, and thereby determines the character he is reading, by relating the fact concerning a piece of money and its magnetic qualities in connexion with sensitives. Such determine to whom the money belongs by feeling alone-not by clair-

Mr. LOVELAND did not believe in giving up one's individuality, and attributing the whole of Psychometry to Spirits-making them the sole cause in the case. We replied, that our view of the matter did not thus yield the whole to them. It was true, that the Spirit World, being the world of causes, as all admit, became the primary cause in these readings; but, inasmuch, as the human medium, the autograph, and all action of the primary causes, these also, in their turn, became, together, a secondary cause to the same end. It is thus that occasions form one-though an inferior-element of all causation; and while this idea remains, the psychometrist has no reason for parting with his individualities. n.

"Nothing New."

Dr. J. H. Robinson, in the last Spiritual Telegraph, thus disposes of that assumption which the opponents of Spiritualism so generally make their last resort, when all other subterfuges fail-namely, "Spirits communicate nothing new." He is dealing especially with the New York Tribune; and although that allegation is capable of a still further reply, yet this ought to be sufficient to close the mouths of those who so thoughtlessly use

"The Tribune has been in circulation several years, and carried many thousand of columns of matter to various parts of the Union. It has done more real, radical, practical talking than any paper in the country. Now will the frisky "ghost" editor, who loveth to haunt the columns of the Tribine. and flitteth darkly about the editorial kennel, be so very kind and obliging as to inform me, and the world generally, what new principle in Art, Science, or Philosophy it has sent forth to enlighten the world, of which it can justly claim the paternity. Gentle spectre, I pause for a response! What has the organ you delight to honor with the playful chil-dren of your brain originated, that nobody ever thought of before?

Still, has not the Tribune exercised a strong and lasting influence on the minds of men? has been the instrument of positive good to the human family? And yet the Tribune has not made a single grand discovery, notwithstanding it has communicated with the world so many years, and done so much hard rapping. Is the worth of anything to be measured by its absolute newness? did Jesus of Nuzareth, the most noted of reformers, teach that was positively new? He proclaimed the fatherhood of God, the brothrhood of man, and insisted on the practical acknowledgment of the "Golden Rule." Had not Confucius and several other "heathen bilosophers" taught the same doctrines ? Many think that he was the "very God." yet find not a word of fault because he preached no doctrines entirely new. If a God could teach nothing higher and nobler than brotherly love, what can Trinitarians expect of departed human spirits, in all essential respects beings like ourselves? Does the spectre editor feel inclined to undervalue the ministry of Jesus, because he inculcated such plain and simple truths? Far from it, I imagine. He is quite aware that that personage has exercised a very great influence on the destiny of the world. As a reformer, the majority of Spiritualists receive, believe in him, and love his pure and peaceable doctrines. They desire nothing better than the it will produce a very long, coarse grass, full realization of his prophecies. They believe the churches have the form without the nower of godliness-the external code without the inner life and spirit of Christ, written on the tablets of the mind. Churchmen hope they shall have a conscious existence after the death of the body, Spiritualists know they shall. Hence most of the latter class have a strong faith in the practicability of many of the strange things recorded in the Bible, and believed to be miraculous or contrary to the laws of Nature.

The Tribune has been in operation longer than the marvels of modern Spiritualism, yet it has convinced nobody of the immortality of the soul; Spiritualism has convinced thousands. Horace Greeley (the responsible editor) is a man of genius—as much a special instrument of Heaven as Henry Ward Beecher, or a clever shoemaker, blacksmith, or anybody else-but he gives us nothing wonderfully new."

Lectures in Lowell.

The friends of Spiritualism in Lowell are awake to the claims of the cause in that city, and are having lectures every Sunday by a variety of speakers. They have already made arrangements to continue these lectures to the first of January, when they hope to be better able to go forward, possess themselves of a more convenient place of meeting, and give a more substantial character to the movement in their locality. They now hold, and will continue to hold, their meetings in Wells' Hall until the time specified above, three times on Sunday, the afternoon being specially devoted to a free conference, while the morning and evening are occupied in listening to lectures.

Melodeon Committee.-At a meeting of the contributors to the "Melodeon Fund" held at that Hall on Sunday morning last, the following persons were appointed a Board of Directors to manage the Spiritualists' meetings held in that place:

J. S. Loveland, Chairman; M. T. Dole, Secretary; John Wood, William R. Hayden, W. K. Lewis, Abijah Fessenden, John WilA. J. Davis's Lectures.

The teacher of the Harmonial Philosophy spoke on Tuesday and Friday evenings of last week in the Music Hall Lecture Room, and in the Melodeon on Sunday afternoon and evening, Nov. 19th. We were unable to be present at the first two lectures, but a friend has furnished us the following synopsis of that of Friday evening :

Mr. Davis announced as his subject "The extent and import of Nature," and as his text therefor the lines which were by some poet applied to the Bible :-

"Within this sacred volume lies The mystery of mysteries."

Mr. D. first spoke of the entire inability of the great mass of people to comprehend the beauties of nature. To them it is a meaningless mass, from which they are to procure their subsistence-nothing more. To others it is God's footstool, very prettily carpeted and decorated, but only a footstool to the Almighty. To others it is a sort of basement story or cellar-kitchen of God's Universe. Some look on its most beautiful and sublime scenes without any deep and refined emotions whatever. It was related of Byron that he was once riding in a stagecoach through a very beautiful tract of country, the only occupant of the coach beother conditions requisite to the result produced, furnished the general occasion for the she would interrupt Byron's deep meditations on the ever-varying beauties which met his eye. At last a line of very beauciful hills came in view, when she said to him, "How pretty them hills is, aint they?" "Driver!" exclaimed Byron, putting his head out at the window, "stop and let me get out; I'll walk," unable longer to endure it. A New York dandy once visited Niagara Falls. On reaching there he took out his eye-glass and after surveying it a moment said, "An exceedingly foine display; but, Fwed," turning to his companion, "come away, it makes such a disagweeable roar." These, said the speaker, are the only emotions produced in the breasts of some by such scenes.

But to him who comes with his perceptions quickened by an intercourse with Nature, each rose and violet is the symbol of something higher and better, and did we know how to question it, it would teach us some of the deepest lessons of life. The tree, to the chemist, is composed of so many chemicals of different kinds; to the anatomist it is the teacher of anatomy; the traveler who reposes beneath its boughs, is reminded of a canopy formed by guardians for his case, as he refreshes his weary body beneath its shade and listens to the carols of the birds in its boughs; the philosopher had from time immemorial referred to "the brave old oak," and taught many lessons therefrom; but to the thinking Spiritualist it suggested deeper and holier lessons still.

The earth is two hundred and fifty thousand miles in circumference, yet how few Would it be too charitable to suppose that it | have bestowed much thought upon it. How much yet unexplored land near where Franklin recently perished; how much in Patagonia! The ocean between the American coast and Asia is constantly traversed now, yet how few had meditated upon the vast expanse of water there.

Mr. D. thought the surface of the earth had formerly been rough, mountainous rocks, traversed by strong, impetuous currents of water, which in washing the stones back and forth, had caused a continual rubbing of them together, and the effects of this was the first land. He does not sympathize with the idea that God made in six days, in its present complete monner, "the earth and all that therein is," but believes that Nature by her own operations produced a great portion of her present population of both the vegetable and animal kingdoms. For instance, if a man does not disturb a tract of primeval forest after its being burned over, it will produce the first year fire-weed; cut it down, and the next year it will produce smart-weed; cut it again, and the next year such as no cattle will eat; the next year it will produce Timothy grass; the fifth year it will produce a wild oat, and so on, producing every year something more valuable. So with trees. The meanest kind of land produces pines; the next, chestnut, and so on, up to the more valuable sorts, arriving in other climates to delicious fruits. This was caused by the natural properties of the vegetation imparted to the earth each by their decomposition.

He passed lightly over the contemplation of the million and a half species of the animal world, to the most grand, most sublime of all things,-nine hundred millions of men and women who at this time inhabit the earth. The speaker was not of the opinion that the body was created and then the spirit fashioned to suit that vessel and its different organs, as is taught by the popular theology. He said that his first experience as a clairvoyant was as if the soul left the body and visited different places. He labored under this mistake some four years before he discovered to the contrary. The mind of each man daguerreotypes itself upon the atmosphere, and a person in the clairvoyant state reads, not the mind, but the daguerreotype of the mind. While in that state, the clairvoyant saw an entirely different representation over the cities of New York, Boston, London, Paris, Vienna, etc., according to the character and intelligence of the in-the east is, that man is beginning to look more at justice, and less at dogmas and creeds; for Christian nations were now allying themselves with Pagan, to fight against Christians, for justice.

And now the time has arrived when the world of men is brought into nearer communion with the spirit-world than ever before, and their influences are being exercised upon it. It is so in literature, politics, war. The spirits of departed Russian soldiers had informed him that many in their ranks longed to leave and fight for the Turks, but dared not. He read an exordium given through him by a member of the Spiritual Congress before the war commenced, which asserted that Russia would not be successful; her generals would lose their cunning. This was being fulfilled. A great lesson of the war in

Thus, said Mr. Davis, he had endeavored to give some idea of Nature, but how slight were his remarks compared with the subject. He had not entered upon the threshold. How grand the theme! Let us strive to become more capable of studying, comprehending and enjoying her.

We have notes of the Sunday lectures which we have not room to insert in this paper. Both efforts were listened to by large and intelligent audiences. Mr. D. aimed to exhibit the true nature and tendencies of the Spiritual movement, and his remarks were characterized by a geniality and vigorous good sense which commended him and his subject to the better feelings of his auditories.

Communications.

Letter from Warren Chase. The following is the remainder of the communication from which we gave the first paragraph last week,

BRO. HEWITT :- I send this short, "pickedup" letter more to inform my friends of my whereabouts, my latitude and longitude, than to instruct or advise; but I must dron in here a specimen of religious fanaticism which I found in my travels, but which the press which circulates so much gossip about Spiritualists, has failed to promulgate. A young man in a small village in Indiana, (Knightstown) not long ago became religious and fanatical to that degree that he declared both his hands had offended, and according to Scripture he must cut them off; but as he could not cut both off himself he would burn them off. For that purpose he thrust them into a hot fire, and before he could be drawn away, actually burned them so as to result in his death soon after. Would not this horrible fact (for it is a fact, as any one can ascertain by inquiry in that town) be of use to our friends of the Olive Branch, and post them up in the character and effect of delusions? Would they not have found out and used this act, if it could have been traced to Spiritualism as its source? The Bible literally followed, leads to some terrible results to fanatics, of which there are thousands of instances, both recorded and unrecorded. In fact, I believe I have heard of a preacher of sectarian religion who left his wife and ran away, or tried to, with a woman some other man legally owned. Wonder if the Olive Branch would find a fact of this character; and if so, if it would do as it does by Spiritualism with such

Now, Bro. Snow, or any others, I am sorry I have hurt your feelings by the severity my review of Bro. Bal cannot, however, for my life, discover wherein I have done injustice to truth br to Spiritualism. I was not mistaken in my belief when I read that article, that it would afford more material for our opponents upon which to slander and abuse us, than any article of its length ever published by friend or foe. It has done so; and hence, as I supposed, it was (however honestly designed) the most deadly stab we have ever had. But it is not fatal; for the healing power is yet sufficient. My brother thinks I have some idolatry remaining. I have ever been termed Infidel, and was not aware of ever having or worshipping any idol. If I do, and my brother will name the object of idolatry, I will hand it over to him, and worship outside.

I have recently met Mrs. Thomas, and find her an excellent medium, but teaching in my presence no such fears or allusions to "free-loveism" as Brother Ballou referred to: but both herself and the spirits through her. in my presence, teach and believe on this subject as I and Spiritualists generally do. But I did not intend ever to refer to this letter or discussion again, and I do it now merely to say I have nothing to take back. Yet I deny all hard feelings, all envy or hatred; for I felt nothing but kindness and pity, however severe my expressions might have appeared to some religiously sensitive friends. They often give me bard pills to swallow when they drag into Spiritualism modern or ancient idolatry, as superior to the unfoldings of the human intellect in the Rationalism or Spiritualism of our age. But I endeavor to excuse it, and make the proper allowances for education and condition, and never feel offended, nor withdraw my efforts or support from the cause or the papers on that account. I should be sorry to see our sensitive brethren show less charity for one who has ever been skeptical till facts and philosophy had reached and converted him, than such an infidel shows and feels for

One more item, and I have done. The letter of Brother Sunderland to me, in the last Era, needs no reply from me. I am glad, and so will many others be, to see Bro. S. winding, (to use a sea-phrase,) and I hope hereafter he will sail with us and with God in Nature, not discreted from Nature. Those who have read his letters and my comments will be able to judge of our positions and do justice to us both. If I did misunderstand my brother, I am glad, for he has thus been led to set others right, who also misunderstood him as I did. I meant all I said in my letter to Bro. S. of my experience; but as I find and recognize no evil, and in an absolute sense, no high or low, (only relative) and positively no good or bad, and progression only as change, of course I could have no avil communications, but only harmony and inharmony; expressed in extremes by love and hate, which are never evidences of positive good or positive evil. He that dwells in and feels in love and harmony is happy, and the opposite unhappy. Their conditions are named in extremes sometimes Heaven and Hell. Still I suppose "all partial evil is universal good." Now let me pass, brethren, as

WARREN CHASE.

For the New Era. Spiritual Manifestations in London thirty years ago.

MESSRS EDITORS :- Were it possible to satisfy the human mind in reference to its undying interests in the yet, to us, unknown. because untrodden, future, by the mere speculative theories of men, in either the past or present age, methinks we have enough to satisfy the most skeptical enquirer. But the ever continued, and still continuous cry for facts in reference to our existence in the future, are proofs, clear and demonstrative, that the mind can never rest its belief alone upon mere abstract and intangible theories, unsubstantiated by the most palpable and irrefragable facts; and in evidence of this, I of uneasiness, when the flatirons, on a shelf refer you and your readers to the varied behind where he sat, came tumbling down classes of phenomena spread through the entire range of Scripture history, and which have invariably preceded the different theo-

And while we admit that these things have subserved the purposes for which they were given, in their adaptedness to the wants of the people of that age, we cannot surely deem it wrong that the people of the present age should seek similar evidence to satisfy the demands of their external senses as to the internal reality; especially when ollection, never entered it again. we find nature so lavish in unfolding her mysteries to the inhabitants of earth, and calling upon them to behold these symbols of wisdom; to investigate, to classify, and to arrange them, so that they may no longer remain ignorant of her laws by which they are surrounded and governed, and which connect man with an all-related system of things, both as it pertains to this world and that which is to come. It is then in view of these facts, and in answer to the "cui bono" so constantly sounded in our ears in reference to the phenomena called Spiritual Manifestations, that I have resolved to give you a relation of facts, which came (many of ets, full an inch and a half in depth; at the them) under my own especial notice, and all same time saying that he did not think they having occurred in the house of my sister, who resided at that time (about thirty years at their pranks, nothing would hold them. ago) in London. They can be well attested | Scarcely had he spoken, and while looking to, if needed. But to proceed:

Some few years after my sister's marriage, she was wont, in her frequent visits with her husband and little ones, to the home of her | these things that it was very difficult for my childhood, to make frequent complaints that their domestic tranquility at home was much disturbed and broken in upon by certain strange noises in the house, such as the ringing of the street door bell, and the bells in the different rooms connecting with the my sister and her husband, corroborated by kitchen; sounds of some one with thick, a gentleman who was in the house when it heavy-nailed shoes coming down stairs; the occurred. One evening, as my brother and opening of doors after they had been locked the captain of a vessel for which he had and bolted; the running of the mangle after | been doing some heavy repairs, were sitting all the inmates of the house had gone to in a back parlor, making out the ship's acrest; moving about of a small work table; | counts, they were suddenly alarmed by a flatirons coming down from the shelves on loud scream, and the sound of some one fallwhich they were placed; the long lath ing on the floor, proceeding from the kitchwindow-blinds coming down out of their en. Upon going down stairs, they found my brackets, with crashing noises like the fall- sister lying in the door-way between the ing in of the roof of the house; and number- | front and back kitchens, where she had reless other strange things, to all of which would our family lend a listening ear. At that period, few indeed of those in the teries, they were obliged to be referred to the matter in brief. capable of solving them; and of course the took place one Sunday afternoon. While to. He, after witnessing many of the demthat the whole affair was the work of the devil. This disposition of the matter, though perhaps conclusive to his mind, was not ex- to the floor. The noise of the slap on her held a long lease of the house and premises, thrown himself on the bed in the front (he being a shipwright and boat-builder,) they could not leave the place without in- let, as they were going to church. He came volving themselves in a great sacrifice of forth just as she was falling; and I have property. I mention this in order to account heard him often speak of the circumstance, for their remaining there under such un- and when asked if it might not have been pleasant circumstances, and it will tend to imagination, reply, that hearing so loud a throw some light upon what follows. His noise close to him, and instantly seeing the business involving him in the necessity of print of the hand ere the blow could have being frequently from home, my sister, not liking to remain in the house with only the servant girl and the children, would, on those occasions, ask my brother or myself, sometimes both, to remain with her a few days till he should return. This gave us full opportunity of witnessing many of the strange things already spoken of. But I up after the men had left, it being winter will now relate more in detail the various and they were working by candle-light. phenomena as they occurred from time to When the men were gone, I went through time, to the best of my recollection.

On one occasion, when at the house with my father, in the day time, we had no sooner got within the passage and shut the street | isfied myself, I returned through the garden door, than the door-bell began to ring most into the house, the entrance to which was violently. My father being nearest the door | through two doors, the outer one leading to instantly opened it, believing it to be a trick | the garden, a sash or glass door, which fasof some one; but, to his surprise, the bell- tened by two bolts as well as a lock,—the handle was working in and out most violent- other two folding-doors, merely fastened by Iv. and that without any visible aid. He of two bolts, both of which I fastened; also course took hold of it to try and stop it, but the door leading from the back parlor to the without avail. It forced itself from his hand passage, together with the passage door, with the utmost ease. We then went into and then retired. The room in which I a back parlor, and were talking with my slept was a front chamber, over the one in sister on the subject, when the bell in the which my sister slept, and which looked into kitchen began to ring most lustily, and on | the street. looking at the side of the fireplace, we saw the bell-pull working like that of the street | was not yet asleep, when the street door-bell door, without visible aid.

rence, and of course very annoying, my was still and calm, and the moon shone brother took down the bells in the passage | bright; and I could see the handle of the and lower rooms, thinking if it was a trick | door-bell working in and out, but no visible played by any one, that would stop it. But | being touching it. I then got into bed time, when staying there with my brother, | ries, when suddenly there came a noise, and we had just retired to rest, and had not | the house was shaken to the very foundation. No sooner were they righted than off they lashings, and had carried away both floors.

connected with this chamber began to ring. My brother then got out of bed, and applied the end of a thick oak walking-stick, which stood in the room, against the crank of the bell, the other end resting on his breast, when he was repelled backwards with considerable force.

Another instance; I went one evening to see my sister, but found both her and her husband were gone out. The girl saying she soon expected them home, I was induced to stop, and while there an uncle came to see them. While we were chatting over family matters, awaiting their return, imagine our surmise to see a small oval worktable which stood in the kitchen, begin to move about the room. My uncle, a man naturally timid, began to manifest symptoms one after another, till all had left their resting-place, and without apparently anything to cause their disturbance. This was immediately followed by the sound as of some one with heavy nailed shoes or boots on, clumping heavily down the stairs, and whom we expected instantly to see in the kitchen with us, but we saw no one. The fears of my uncle had now attained their height; he seized his hat and made a very speedy exit from the house, and to the best of my rec-

On another visit to the house with my father and mother, on a fine bright day in summer, as we were standing in a garden at the back of the house, talking about these things with my sister, (for they had become now a general theme of conversation whenever we met, and throughout the neighborhood,) the long green blinds (as we term them) came down from their brackets with much force. My father directly called the joiner, who was at work in a building contiguous to the house, to come and fix them up firmly in the brackets, which he did, inserting the gudgeons in the rest of the brackwould stay there long, for when they were up at them, down they came with a rush. They were subsequently put up again and then allowed to rest. So frequent were sister to get a girl to remain long with her, they became so alarmed.

I must now relate a circumstance that took place there, but to which I was not an eye-witness, but received the account from

ceived the alarm, fainted, and fallen. Upon restoring her, however, they learned the cause of all the difficulty. She was doing middle walks of life, were acquainted with some ironing, and in passing from the front the nature of those subtle and imponderable to the back kitchen to get her irons, as she agencies, with whose action and effects we came to the door, a figure arose up before are now so generally familiar; and in order her and prevented her from passing; upon to a proper solution of these occult mys- which she screamed and fainted. This is those minds, who were thought to be alone I will now relate a circumstance which minister was among the first to be applied my sister was making her toilet in an anteroom, between two chambers, the slap of a onstrations, arrived at the sage conclusion band on her back, as loud as that given by any human hand, and leaving the print on her back, caused her to swoon, and she fell actly so to ours; and as my sister's husband back had aroused her husband, who had chamber, waiting the completion of her toihad time to recede, were too plain evidences to be other than real.

I shall now give one more circumstance ere I conclude this narrative of facts. One night, at the request of my sister, her husband being absent on business, I went to stay there, to see to the place being locked the boat-lofts, in which were suspended many new boats, and boats under repair, to see that all was safe from fire. Having sat-

I had been in bed perhaps an hour, but began to ring most violently. I jumped out These things being of almost daily occur- of bed, and threw ap the window, but all alas! the bell-pulls, wires and cranks, again, and might have laid there for half an danced as merrily as before. At another hour, ruminating upon these strange mystebeen in bed many minutes before the bed- I could conclude nothing else than that all clothes were dragged off on to the floor. the heavy ship-boats had broken from their went again; once more set right, we were After recovering myself from the fright, I got no further molested in that way. But while up, dressed, went down stairs, and took a speaking of these strange things, the bell light from my sister, who, with the girl, were in a terrible state of alarm. Judge, if you can, of my surprise on beholding the doors which I had locked and bolted only an hour or two before, all open to my egress. I passed through the shed where they made the masts, cars and blocks, up into both boat-lofts, and if my surprise was great at the noise I had just heard, and what I had seen, it was certainly greater on beholding all things in their places, as I had left them when I went to bed. I returned, went to bed again, and heard no more that night. I could mention many other things of a like character, but I am warned that this letter is already too long, and therefore shall conclude with a few remarks. Shortly after these things had been seen and heard, my sister died. Her husband married again, and I have not learned that they have ever been troubled since. This leads me to infer that my sister must have been the medium through whom some of these manifestations were made, and I presume others may be accounted for in the peculiar electrical conditions of the place,

Now, Messrs. Editors, in view of the above given facts, combined with similar ones coming to us through all ages, and through different classes and conditions of people, supported and confirmed as they are by the multitudinous evidence of the present age, may we not reasonably infer that Spiritual intercourse is as much a reality of the present, as it is allowed and admitted to have been of the past? Why, I ask in the name of reason and common sense, is it demanded of men, by the religious teachers of all ages, that they believe in these things as coming through and based upon mere human authorities of the past, when they deny to the authority of the present the same right of belief, based, as we deem that belief to be, not only on the revelations of the past, but most fully substantiated, corroborated and confirmed in the more extensively unfolding phenomena of the present? If, as has been asserted by some, (but I believe falsely,) we have no right to doubt the authority of the past, coming to us as it does so strongly attested, and confirmed by so many competent witnesses, I think they should allow to the human family in this more progressed age of Newton, 5 Washington street, Boston, Mass. the world's history, the privilege of believing the evidence of their own senses in matters of this kind, in preference, at least, to that of others. This, man everywhere demands, as an inalienable right of his being. I will here (instead of inserting it,) refer your readers to an extract from "Reid on the mind," made by Judge Edmonds in his work on Spiritualism, page 14; and with this I shall conclude, and subscribe myself

Ever yours in the cause of Truth, THOS. MIDDLETON.

WOODSTOCK, Vt.

Mr. L. Parker, of Manchester, Conn., writes us concerning some facts and phenomena personally witnessed by himself, and of which we give the following digest : He says that during the month of July last, Mr. William Hulme, a speaking, writing, and rapping medium, spent nearly a week at his house. Soon after his arrival, the Spirits called the attention of our correspondent to some copper tacks lying in a certain place in the mill where the medium had never been, and advised him to take care of them as they were new. In reply to a question, the Spirits said the tacks were No. 12, which was the fact. On one evening, after the medium had retired to bed. Mr. Parker and his two sons being in other beds in the same room, the Spirits made various demonstrations, by carrying and throwing things about the room, answering questions by pounding with a boot ing it up in the middle of the floor, moving the table to and fro, and answering questions by tipping it while the medium was not near write without the aid of the medium's hand, and tell, the next morning, where their writing might be found. The next morning they accordingly directed them to search in un adjoining room in an upper story of the house, on doing which there was writing found perfeetly executed. Soon after, being with the medium at the house of Mr. O. Spencer, in South Manchester, Mr. P. was directed to look under the table around which they were seated. He did so, and found a knot, ribbon and buckle, which, it would seem, the Spirits must have carried from his house, three miles distant. A lady present was requested to read from the Bible, which she declined to do, saying that she had left her spectacles at home. The spectacles were presently brought into the room by invisible hands, though the distance to the lady's residence was half a mile! [Spiritual Telegraph.

To Our Friends.

Do our friends realize our needs! Do they not know many persons interested in Spiritualism who would easily become induced to take the paper if the same were shown, and its merits made known to them? Will they not do what lies in their power to extend our circulation, and thus give us the needed help? These, friends, are three direct and practical questions. They need no explana- to begin with the beginning. A home is hardly tion, except, perhaps, that we should say, that, with the amount of matter we give our readers weekly, (to say nothing of its qual- tending to enliven an American Home. Its edi ity,) we really ought to have our subscription doubled. Friends, one and all, will you do what you can to that end immediately! It only They particularly keep their eye on all the whims needs that each subscriber to the ERA now. get one of his neighbors to give in his name, In the literary department we aim at sketches and with $1 50 in advance, and the work is done. That is just one of the easiest things in the world-only to get one subscriber each-and the local, and transfer to our columns the pick of our list is doubled, our hands are strengthened, our hearts encouraged, and our needs are met. We speak to you, friends, the simple truth, when w say what we do of our needs; and we end vith these questions, Shall the list of the New Era be doubled? And will you do it now ?

DR. WILLIAM R. HAYDEN, of this city, will speak in the Melodeon on Sunday afternoon and evening next. The subject of the afternoon lecture will be, "What good will Modern Spiritualism do!" In the evening he will give, " Evenings with the Spirits at Koons' Spirit-room, Ohio," illustrated by sketches and diagrams. An admission fee of ten cents charged in the evening to non-subscribers. Office hours, from 8 to 11 A.M., daily.

WARREN CHASE lectures at Worcester Nov. 26th, and will be in this city Dec. 1st. He will probably speak in the Melodeon on Sunday, Dec. 3d. His address will be Boston, Mass., during December and January, where the friends wishing him to lecture in other places should address him without delay.

SPIRITUAL MORALITY .- The following questions were dictated from a Spiritual source, as suitable to be asked previous to engaging in any undertaking or performing any action. If this be diabolism, as many good people would have us believe, we think the world will be much benefitted by its prevalence.

"1st. Is this thing which I am about to do, in and of itself, just, -aside from any considerations of honor, pleasure, or profit! "2d. Will this thing injure any person in body or mind?

"3d. Should I do this thing now? Are circumstances and conditions favorable to Special Notices.

LIST OF LECTURERS. The following persons are now prepared to leeture on the subject of Spiritualism wherever and whenever their services may be desirable and circustances permit. They may be addressed at this office, No 15 Franklin st., Boston, Mass. J. S. LOVELAND.

A. E. NEWTON,
S. C. HEWITT.

J. H. FOWLER.

REGULAR MEETINGS IN BOSTON. Sunday meetings at the Melodeon, afternoons and ovenings at the usual hours,

Conference meetings on Wednesday evenings, at the Hall in Chapman Place, and at Harmony Hall, 103 Court street.

THE DIAL ALPHABET. This unique and highly useful instrument for communicating readily with spirits, and which is very highly recommended by Prof. Hare of Phila delphia, may be had of BELA MARSH. Price $2,00 Sent only by express or private conveyance. Address Bela Marsh, 15 Franklin street, Boston,

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE. This interesting volume has now been before the public for some months, and is highly regarded by many who have read it. It comes professedly from the spirit of Dr Olin, through R. P. Wilson

Advertisements.

BATHING ROOMS.

M EDICATED, Sulphur, Iodine, and plain vapor Baths; warm, cold, and shower baths; administered from 8 A. M. to 10 r. M., at 233 Washington street, rear of Marlboro' Hotel. C. BLODGETT.

WILLIAM TEBB, Phonographic Teacher, Providence, R. I., continues to give lessons through the Mail on Phonography, enabling every one to report the Spiritual communications with the utmost case and correctness. Terms for a course of twelve lessons, with answers to all queries and full explanatory corrections to all exer-

New and attractive book for every Family Circle, Young Man's Library, and Lady's Boudoir.

TOWN AND COUNTRY;

LIFE AT HOME AND ABROAD, WITHOUT AND WITHIN US. By John S. Adams.

The undersigned will publish Monday, Nov. 27 the above work, with illustrations from original designs, in one elegant 12mo volume of about 400 It is a book suited for all times and places, and is distinguished by its living, energetic style, boldness of expression, and originality of thought.

The Sketches of Life,—true to the originals,—exhibit the various phases of TOWN LIFE:

the temptations, trials, conflicts, and conquests of upon the floor, pulling up the carpet and pil mind, struggling amid diverse circumstances, which, together with PICTURES OF THE COUNTRY,

The Sinless Heart, and the Happy Home, cannot it, etc. By request, the Spirits promised to but deeply interest the render, and at the same timn touch a chord of the heart that will vibrate in strong sympathy with all those who are battling for the right.

The deep sympathy of the author with every truly reformatory movement, disclosing itself on every page of this volume, cannot fail to enlist the earnest co-operation of every thoughtful mind, and to secure for the book a circulation unsurpassed by that of any American production. Its success is certain, for it is a book written for the people, for every class and condition, and is destined to receive from them an unbounded pat-Price,-In Muslin, neatly bound,

By mail, post paid, to any part of U.S., "TOWN AND COUNTRY" as a GIFT BOOK ! The cheapest, handsomest, and best volume of the Season!

Price .- In Muslin, full gilt, Superbly bound in Morocco, The usual Discount made to the Trade. J. BUFFUM. Publisher, Bookseller, and Stationer, 28 Cornhill, Boston.

Series for 1855.

THE HOME JOURNAL. MORRIS AND WILLIS, EDITORS.

The first number of the new series will be issued on the first of January next. New subscribers can be supplied from that date; but immediate application will be necessary for such as desire complete, we think we may safely venture to say, without the Home Journal, which, besides being a chronicle of the times, abounds in intelligence tors (Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis) devote their entire time, skill and experience to the task of giving each week everything worth knowing. and novelties of the day. The utmost pains are taken to present the facts and outlines of all news. readable criticism, and in our condensations of the productions of the vast newspaper world of Europe, we endeavor to avoid the tiresome and English information and brilliancy, while we endeavor to select with a true sense of pure morals, true wit, and genuine humor. In addition to the above, Mr. Willis will give the gossip of the day in a series of articles in dialogue, to be called "CHATS IN TOWN." These he will alternate with "LETTERS FROM THE COUNTRY," The graphic and highly-finished sketches by "The Lady of Shalott," "Timothy Quaint," and others, will be continued. We have also new correspond ents in London and Paris, who will send us much that could never reach us through foreign Jour-

Terms.-For one copy, $2; for three copies, $5, or for one copy for three years, $5-always in advance. Subscribe without delay. Address
MORRIS & WILLIS,
107 Fulton street, New York.

> HEALING MEDIUM. DR. T. H. PINKERTON, Office, 80 Cambridge St., Boston.

Office hours, from 8 to 11 A.M., daily. [is3m99

AN ELEGANT GIFT BOOK SPIRITUALISTS AND FRIENDS OF TRUTH. Will be published on or about the 15th of Dec., THE LILY WREATH

SPIRITUAL COMMUNICATIONS. Received chiefly through the mediumship of Mrs. J. S. ADAMS.

By A. B. CHILDS, M. D. THOSE who have read the manuscripts of this work, pronounce it unsurpassed in purity and elogance of diction, in beauty and simplicity of style, and in its correct and attractive presentation of

THE LILY WHEATH will be printed in a superior manner, equal to that of the finest annuals, bound in rich and durable binding, and in every way made in typographical and mechanical ap-pearance, in keeping with the intrinsic value of its

Dealers and others can address PARTRIDGE & BRITTAN, New York, BELA MARSH, Roston.

LIDA'S TALES OF A RURAL HOME. Here is a series of books for the young, of the very first order. They are full of good moral sentiment, written in a chaste, pleasing style, and well adapted to children. Lina understands young human nature, and has done abundantly well, in this series, to meet its mental wants. Success to Lida's Tales, for they are full of Spiritualism—therefore full of truth. All our readers who have children, and wish to put the best books into their hands, should send 36 cents, in postage stamps, or other currency, (postage paid,) to EMILY GAY, Hopedale, Milford, Mass., and she will return them the whole series of Tales, (8 books in all,) pre-paying postage on them—so that 36 cents is all they cost he buyer.

ECLECTICISM,

FOR THE RELIEF OF THE AFFLICTED. R J. T. PATERSON baving had considera-DR J. T. PATERSON baving had considera-ble experience as a Mcdium, clairvoyant and psychometric, which, of course, has led to a thorough analytical and scientific investigation of these and other forms of medical treatment, makes examinations as usual from 9 A. M., to 2 P. M, and adopts Eelecticism as a rule of prac tice. Office 25 Winter street, Boston. Dr. P. lectures by engagement on Clairvoyance, Psychometry, Health, and Human Physiology. 6tf

M RS. METTLER'S RESTORATIVE SYRUP though not a universal panacea, is one of the most efficacious remedies for all those diseases which originate in an impure state of the blood, derangement of the secretions, and bilious ob-structions. Those who are troubled with unequal circulation, sick and nervous headache, inactivity of the liver, constipation of the bowels, and irri tation of the mucous membrane, together with their various sympathetic effects, will find this syrup in-valuable. Also constantly on hand MRS. MET-TLER'S CELEBRATED DYSENTERY CORDI-AL. A new supply of her CHOLERA ELIXIR

FEDERHEN & CO, 9 and 13, Court street, Boston, agents for New England, to whom all orders must be addressed. 3m5

Correct examinations and complete written descriptions of character, at all hours, including valuable advice as to the preservation and reatoration of health, formation of proper habits, correction of faults, restraining of excesses, cultivating defects, choice of suitable occupations, relections of partners, clerks, and apprentices in business, and conjugal companions for life.

Cabinet Free to Visitors.

Young men who choose their business in this way, and get into their true sphere, are almost sure of success, as thousands who have tried it are ready to testify.

Clerks, apprentices, and helps selected in this way prove convenient and reliable, as many busi ness men of Boston have by experience proved In the training of youth an examination will be found an invaluable guide, and save much trouble and perplexity.

Those who are debilitated and weakly will get just such advice as will most effectually restore them to health and save them the evils of quack medicines and drugs.

Books on Phrenology, Physiology, Water Cure, Phonography, Psychology and kindred subjects, for sale at the lowest prices. All of Fowlers & Wells' publications, including the Phrenological and Water Cure Journals, are sent by mail or furnished to agents from this office at the same prices as from New York. FOWLERS & WELLS. D. P. BUTLER.
C. J. HAMBLETON. [4wn3]

KNOW THYSELF.

SELF-KNOWLEDGE is of more importance than any other, because it is the index to the va-t volume of wisdom and knowledge which exists in other minds, and in the external world around us. You can obtain this knowledge of your character and capabilities through the science of Psychometry. Having located myself for the present in Boston, I am prepared to give psychometrical readings at my room at the Fountain House, corner of Beach street and Harrison Avenue, by the autograph enclosed in an envelope. Terms, $1,00. Address R. P. WILSON, Boston,

N. B. Persons desiring their ideal of the conjugal relation, in mental and spiritual adaptations, will please make it known.

A. KELLY PEASE. PSYCHOMETRIC AND SPEAKING MEDIUM, LOWELL, MASS.

DSYCHOMETRIC examinations made in regard to health or character for $1 each. Mr. P. will lecture on Spiritualism in the natural or trance state, upon reasonable terms. Please address as above.

way lived ould thomas would select beats

of receipt and the con-NEW FALL GOODS.

GENTLEMEN'S, YOUTH'S AND BOYS LATEST COSTUME.

> -ALSO-NEW STYLES OF

GENTLEMEN'S AND BOYS' READY-MADE CLOTHING For the Fall of 1854 and Winter of 1855. JUST RECEIVED.

OAK HALL, 6 4 NO. 34 NORTH STREET. today and or towns to but

TO THE AFFLICTED. T IS with the greatest satisfaction that Dr. R.

Cummings has received many testimonials of important service rendered to such of the afflicted as applied to him, in consequence of a notice in the New Era from February to June, 1854. Others now diseased who will send, postage paid, to R. Cummings, M. D., Mendon, Mass., a particular description of their disease and symptoms, their age, occupation, temperament, whether single or otherwise, the last medical treatment, and their own address, may be greatly benefitted. N. B. Those who apply to Dr. C. must pay post age, and for such medicine as is necessary. Advice free.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

CHARLES C. YORK, Healing and Clairvoy-ant Medium. You can receive an examination and prescription by sending your name, age, and place of residence. Price $2,00, post paid. Address C. C. York, Claremont, N. H. THE NEW ERA.

The Third Volume of this Journal has now commenced. It will still be the advocate of SPINITUALISM in its brondest, most comprehensive, and most tolerant sense, according to the best understanding and conviction of its Editor and Proprictor, who, while he recognizes his own proper individual responsibility to the Public for what he may utter through its columns, and for the general character and tone of the paper, at the same time wishes it to be distinctly understood that bo is not responsible for many individual convictions and statements he may feel free to publish from others, in accordance with the obviously just demands of a truly FREE PAPER.

He also wishes it to be distinctly understood, that no subscriber, writer, or reader of this journal will be considered as committed to its principles, views, and measures, any farther than he voluntarily and willingly commits himself, independently of his subscription or his reading. Ho wishes it to be constantly borne in mind that this is the Age or Face Thought, and of Individual Responsibility; and that in connection with what for the time being is, perhaps, somewhat peculiarly denominated Spiritushism, the Ena will be, as it ever has been, the uncompromising advocate of free thought,-and the free expression of thought, -for in that way only, as one essential element of advancement, can any true progress be made.

THE ERA will still be the vehicle of the prominent Facts of the Sipritual Movement, of the various phases of its Philosophy, and of such suggestions of a Practical nature as may with justice and propriety come within its own province to present and discuss. In short, while it will ever and carnestly strive to be true to its own convictions, it will as truly try to do its whole duty to the Public.

The New Volume begins with entire NEW Type and a New Head, -and will contain from week to week about one third more reading matter than it ever has before. And yet for this, among other additions to its expenses, there will be no addition to the price of the paper. Thankful for the past efforts of its many friends in its behalf, it may be said the Era still needs, des res, and con-PIDENTLY EXPECTS the continuance of those efforts in the future, that it may not only be enabled to lire, but to appear from week to week in the most attractive garb of Truth itself, and thereby exert an influence for good which otherwise it would be greatly incapable of doing. TERMS: Single Copy for one year Seven Copies $0.00 Ten "$12.00 One Copy Eight Months Single Numbers

ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

To the Newspaper and Periodical Press -Any paper giving the substance of the above (including terms, of course) in its editorial columns, and sending a marked ony to this office, shall be entitled to the current vol. entire, either with or without an exchange.

ADDRESS: "NEW ERA," No. 15 Franklin st.,

DR. CUTTER'S PSYCHOLOGICAL AND MEDICAL OFFICE, No. 292 Washington S ., Besteu

Corner of Bedford St., Room No. 4, over J. T. Brown's Drug Store. A NEW and valuable remedy for Scropula, recently discovered by a Clairvoyant, is now ready and for sale at the above office. WILLIAM D. EMERSON. The Medium Clairvoyant, or Secr, will attend to the examination of the Sick, as above. Office hours, from 9 to 12 A.M., and 2 to 5 PM.

Wonderful Discovery.

condition and less

August 16.

THE NERVE SOOTHING VITAL FLU-IDS; prepared expressly by Spirit direction through Mrs. E. J. FRENCH, Medium, Pittsburg, Pa. These Medicines are purely vegetable, con-taining nothing injurious to the system, and are a certain cure for all Nervous Disenses, as St. Vitus' Dance, Tie Doloreux, Neuralgia, Rheumatism in all its varied forms, Locked Jaw, Epilepsy or Falling Sickness, Palsy, Nervous and Sick Hendache, Dyspepsia, Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver, Diarrhea, Irregularities of the female system, Tetter and all Cutaneons Diseases, Chills and Fever, Cramp, Cholera Morbus, Cholera, Quinsy, Croup, Influenza, Bronchitis, and all Acute Pains and Nervous Diseases with which the human family are afflicted, and which for ages have baffled the skill of the learned. These Fluids have not failed to give relief in any of the above cases where they have been fairly tested, and we have now a number of living witnesses to whom we can refer.

For further particulars address T. Culbertson. Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sold by H. F. Gardner, M. D., General Agent

for Boston and vicinity, 654 Washington st; B. Wood, No. 301 Broadway, New York; Federhen & Co., No. 9 Court street, Boston; W. M. Laning, No. 276 Baltimore st., Baltimore; Henry Stagg, No. 43 Main st., St. Louis. Mrs. French will continue to make clairvoyant examinations. Examination and prescription when the parties are present, $5; if absent, $10. No charge when parties have not the means to pay.

HARPERS' MAGAZINE.

Each number of the Magazine will contain 144 octavo pages, in double columns, each year, thus comprising nearly two thousand pages of the choicest Miscellaneous Literature of the day. Every number will contain numerous Pictorial IIlustrations, accurate Plates of the Fashions, a copious Chronicle of Current Events, and impartial notices of the important books of the month. The Volumes commence with the numbers for June and December; but subscriptions may commence with any number.

Terms.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at Three Dollars a year, or twenty-five cents a number. The semi-annual Volumes, as complet ed, neatly bound in cloth, are sold at Two Dollars each, and muslin covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back numbers uniformly bound. at twenty-five cents each. Eight volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply specimen numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply clubs of two persons at five dollars a year, or five persons at ten dollars. Clergymen supplied at two dollars a year. Numbers from the commencement are being reprinted, and will be entirely completed in The Magazine weighs over seven and not over eight ounces. The postage upon each number, which must be paid quarterly in advance, is three Exchange Newspapers and Periodicals are requested to direct to "Harper's Megazine, New The Publishers would give notice that they have no Agents for whose contracts they are responsible. Those ordering the Magazine from agents or Dealers must look to them for the supply of the

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

Putnam's Monthly consists entirely of Original articles by eminent American writers. It is intended to combine the more various and amusing characteristics of a popular Magazine with the higher and graver qualities of a Quarterly Rehigher and graver qualities of a Quarterly Review, aiming at the highest order of excellence in each department. Its pages will be devoted to the interests of Literature, Science, and Art, in their best and pleasantest aspects. An elevated national spirit—American and independent—yet discriminating and just, will be cultivated as a leading principle of the work. When its articles require pictorial illustrations, they will occasion-require pictorial illustrations, they will occasionally be given.

Terms -$3 per annum, or 25 cents a number. ally be given. The postage to any distance does not exceed nine cents per quarter. Clubs of six, Postmasters, and Clergymen will be supplied at $2. The work will be sent free of postage on receipt of $3 promptly

Men of thought! be up and stirring
Night and day;
Sow the seed—withdraw the curtain!
Clear the way!
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow,
There's a midnight blackness changing
Into grey: Into grey; Men of thought, and men of action, Clear the way!

Once the welcome light has broken, Who shall say
What the unimagined glories
Of the day;
What the evils that shall perish In its ray? Aid the daring tongue and pen! Aid it, hopes of honest men! Aid it, paper—aid it, type! Aid it, for the hour is ripe;

And our effort must not slacken Into play;
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Lo! a cloud's about to vanish

From the day-Lo! the right's about to conquer, Clear the way! And a broken wrong to crumble late clay, With that right shall many more Enter smiling at the door; With that giant wrong shall fall Many others, great and small, That for ages long have held us

For their prey-Clear the way! CHARLES MACKAY.

AN ENCHANTED ISLAND.

A wonderful stream is the river Time, As it runs through the realms of tears, With a faultless rhythm, and a musical rhyme, And a broader sweep, and a surge sublime, And blends with the ocean of years.

There's a musical Isle up the river Time, Where the softest of airs are playing; There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime, And a song as sweet as a vesper chime, And the tunes with the roses are staying.

And the name of that Isle is the Long Ago, And we bury our treasures there; There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow; There are heaps of dust, but we love them so! There are trinkets, and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of songs that nobody sings, And a part of an infant's prayer; There's a lute unswept, and a harp without strings; There are broken vows, and pieces of rings, And the garment she used to wear.

There are hands that were waved when the fairy By the mirage is lifted in air; And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent

Sweet voices we heard in days gone before, When the wind down the river is fair.

O, remembered for aye be the blessed Isle, All the day of our life until night; And when evening comes with its beautiful smile. And our eyes are closing to slumber awhile, May that greenwood of soul be in sight.

THE SLEEPING CHILD.

A brook went dancing on its way, rom bank to valley leaping; And by its sunny margin lay A lovely infant sleeping. The murmur of the purpling stream Broke not the spell which bround him; Like music breathing in his dream A lullaby around him.

It is a lovely sight to view, Within this world of sorrow, One spot which still retains the hue That earth from heaven may borrow; And such was this-a scene so fair, Arrayed in summer brightness, And one pure being resting there-One soul of radiant whiteness.

What happy dreams, fair child, are given, To cast their sunshine o'er thee? What cord unites that soul to heaven, Where visions glide before thee? For wandering smiles of cloudless mirth O'er thy glad features beaming, Say, not a thought, a form of earth, Alloys thine hour of dreaming!

Mayhap, afar on unseen wings, Thy silent spirit soaring, Now hears the burst from golden springs, Where angels are adoring. And with the pure heliac throng, Around their Maker praising, The joyous heart may join the song Ten thousand tongues are raising! LEIGH HUNT.

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE.

What might be done if men were wise, What glorious deeds, my suffering brother; Would they unite In love and right, And cease their scorn for one another?

Oppression's heart might be imbued With kindling drops of loving kindness; And knowledge pour, From shore to shore,

Light on the eyes of mental blindness. All slavery, warfare, lies and wrongs,

All vice and crime might die together; And wine and corn, To each man born, Be free as warmth in sunny weather.

What might be done? this might be done; And more than this, my suffering brother,-More than the tongue E'er said or sung, If men were wise and loved each other.

TO LITTLE FREDDY IN HEAVEN.

Fair spirit, from the earth untimely fled, Dost thou come near me with thy silver wings? Or is it some bright bird of heaven that sings So sweetly in my heart, since thou wast dead? Alas! the hands that pillowed thy dear head, The eyes that watched thee through long nights of pain, Will know thee nevermore on earth again; For thou art gone unto thy narrow bed. Yet if to weary hearts that long have shed Their tears for thee in drops of scalding rain, Thou comest still—oh! be it not in vain, That we, too, follow where thy feet have led, Upward through this dark world to that bright

Where those who part on earth shall meet to part no more. H. W. ROCKWELL.

FREEDOM.

In the great feast of Freedom all men share, Whose lives unfold in harmony with truth. Joy, beauty, inspiration, deathless youth, Pure poet-vision, prophet sight, and skill To shape inferior natures to their will, And love so deep the soul may gaze into A golden ocean blended with the blue, And see therein an endless beauty-maze Where the celestial sun reflected plays; And gladness, like a rainbow that ascends, And all the radiant being overbends; And endless-growing virtues, summer-sweet, Rich as the fruits immortal angels cat— All these to Freedom's followers are given; They are the loved of God, and theirs is truth's T. L. HARRIS. own heaven.

Miscelluny.

[From the "Sacred Circle," for September.] The Newsboy.

WEST ROXBURY, July 29, 1854. One day, while sitting in my room reading some letters to my family, my daughter became influenced quite unexpectedly, and began by saying: "Hurra! hurra! I am out of them dirty streets of New York."

I did not keep notes of this interview, and can therefore only state some things generally about it. He said he was a news-boy in New York, and his name was Tim Peters; that he had died since the last 4th of July. of cholera, and was about twelve years old; that his father had been run over by a railroad car; that he was a man of intemperat habits; that his mother had survived him awhile in feeble health, and he had one brother, named Bill, about ten years old.

He said many things which showed me that he was familiar with the localities near the upper end of Nassau Street, and his shrewdness, his slang terms, and his manner of speaking were particularly characteristic of the class of boys to which he said he belonged. And he spoke of men and boys, with whom he had been thrown in contact, in a manner so natural as to carry conviction that he was what he said he was.

There was a keen shrewdness of thought, a reckless, devil-may-care manner, and a love of fun about him that can be seen in full combination only in them. He sometimes swore, but immediately checked himself, and said that his mother (who was with him) told him he must not talk so. He said he had seen me when I was a judge, and had read my letter of last August. He had sold more Heralds with that in it than usual. I asked him if he had noticed what effect it had had on those who read it. He said, "I have seen a feller sitting on a hydrant, who said he 'liked that feller who opened his jaws, and dared to say what he thought, and not like —, who was afraid of having pins stuck in him."

This is a part only of this interview, but it is enough to show the character of it. But in the course of it, he said that he wanted to give me his history, and have me write it down, and publish it in the SACRED CIRCLE, so that the newsboys might see it, for it would "do 'em good." I told him I would soon give him an opportunity.

We were then called to dinner, but in the afternoon he came again, and gave me his history, which I wrote down as he went along, nearly in the following words:

Hurra! hurra! Say! that light hurts this ere girl's eyes. [The medium was sitting facing the window.] You know, as I told you before, my name worked at sewing when a gal, she says. | warn't red no more, and there was a sorrow-Dad was a day-laborer—that wasn't his

Dad worked at that ever so long after he hitched horses with mother, and I was his oldest boy. Well, I grow'd up 'longside my sight of other folks, and went head over hation they talked of, and I couldn't but heels down hill as fast as he knew how. feel sorry. That was the end of that. Mother got sick and worn out, and got to | I watched mother mighty close after fath-

When dad used to come home, she dreaded to speak to him. He would come tum-

I says, "Well, marm, what do you feel bad | day-Bill got 'em. about?" she cried, and said, "Tim, my boy, your father's worse and worse; he has taken everything from us, and if he don't take care, he will take me from you. And, breakfast with for to-morrow."

"Well," says I, "mother, wipe your peepers; I'll be supporting on you, mother; you ain't got two boys for nothin'; just say how I can go ahead, and I'll be doin' some-

So she ups with her apron and wiped her eyes. That was an awful cold night. Oh, mercy! I'd heard mother say, when she "pain-killer" advertised down Nassau St., was a gal, if farmers wanted rain, they so I went and got some for mother. Warn't prayed in meetin' for it; so when I went to I a fool, liked to have killed her, not the bed, I down on my benders and asked for pain. snow, and somehow or other snow come. So the next morning I borrowed next-door ring, my boy, and go buy yourself a pair of neighbor's shovel, and went along the streets shoes." Well, says I, "No, mother, I can't hunting "snow-jobs," as the boys call it. I do it." She says, "Timmy, I'll never live got one. "Hurra!" says I, "now you are to see you wear 'em out, so let me see you set up in business, you're in for it, Tim." So I pockets my money, and trudges home. have felt worse. So I runs after Bill, and, Says I, "Mother, here's your money." says I, "Bill, come in here, mother's kinder Well, I declare, if she didn't make me feel lonely." Bill never stopped for nothing, soft as a girl-I warn't no more a boy-kase | but after the doctor he goes-a 'spensary she went to cryin' agin.

"Well," says I, "mother, I didn't pray for rain last night. You melt me all down, mother; I feel all gone."

Well, she smiled, and says, "Tim, my boy, what'll we do when this is gone?" "Well," says I, "mother, give me half o' that, and I'll buy some papers, and start in business myself."

[Lasked him how much the half was-he said fivepence. 'Twas better than nothing; 'twould buy a loaf of bread anyhow.]

Well! golly! I pitched down Fulton Street, and invested my stock in papers. Twas the Sun. You can get lots of em for just what I wanted. that. I got six for fivepence, and they trusted me three more for tuppence. I don't didn't get back before sne died.

Bill didn't get back before sne died.

didn't he take on? Poor cretur! He took know how they come to trust me—the boys 'round said they never did it to them. Well, he got there. "Well," says I, "Bill, if I I sold all but one, and what do you think I only knew how to wear petticoats, I'd be a did with that? I kept it as a show for next mother to you; but," says I, "never mind, day; for if I could only buy three, four would look more respectable. That's the way folks trade, you know. Well, I took place, but no; rent day could be the state of the sta my money home, and that's the way I helped my mother along.

"Tim," I said, "let me ask you—" Well, I'm in the witnesses' box-go it. "How did you get money to buy papers

Did another job of snow. [While I was writing this down, the medium whistled, and he immediately said, "Golly! I didn't think I could do thatthought I must do something while waiting for yer."] Where did I leave off! Oh, I got a shillin', and give it to mother. Stock was up, but I had none on, so I said nothin'. When I went home each night there was a grin on my face broad as a moon. Mother said, "Tim, I've hopes of you, if you'll only keep out of liquor." So down she went on her marrow-bones -why-on-earth she did it I couldn't see—but she ups with her eyes into the country. I goes up to him and and says, "God bless Tim!" Somehow I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, Byme-by dad come in, and he smelt like a distillery; and oh, if he didn't rip it! but I gave mother the wink not to let him know I was set up in business. When he come in he couldn't stand up, so he down on his marrow-bones, and swore a blue streak. I thought I smelt brimstone. What was eternal strange to me was, mother didn't cry a bit ; says I, "Tim, that's mighty strange, she'd cry for you, and not a bit for that lub-ber." But she did worse—she took to coughing, and I knew the jig was up for that time. And so it went, day after day. Dad said she was drunk, but he knew he lied.

Well, I kept selling papers and increasing my stock. I took the Herald, and sold lots of 'em; 'twas a good investment. I ups Broadway one day, Bill at my side, and I seen some M. P.'s on a corner. I warn't afraid of 'em, so I stepped on one of their toes. He gin' me a devil of a look-mother says I mustn't say that-says I to Bill, "Let's to our trotters, or we'll be sent to the House of Refuge." I'd heard tell of that, dad used to threaten me with it. Down by the Park I saw some awful fine dandies prinking along; says I, "Bill, just seen the M. P.'s; now look at the M. T.'s." So I went it every day; I couldn't feel bad, to save my life-suspect I warn't born in a bad time. Mother said it used to make her heart good to see me come in. I asked him, "Were you so cheerful,

I warn't nothin' else. When I used to swear, it made her feel bad. I told her I took it the natural way.

I asked him, "How so?"

I had heard my forefathers-I'll tell you what I heard one day in the Park. A great lubberly feller was making a speech. He said, "The time is coming when the day shall be celebrated --- , hem, - that speaks of the noble deeds of our forefathers." I'm not so grand as he; I can't make such a cock-a-doodle doo. So I run home and said, "Mother, the day is coming when it shall be celebrated that speaks of the noble deeds of our forefathers." She said, "Tim, Tim, what on earth will come of you?" So it went along.

One day dad was brought in dead. I needn't enter into particulars, 'twas all in the papers. I cried it, and made it an extra Herald for me.

I asked him, "How so?" It was the celebration of the death of my

I went home, after getting a few coppers, and found mother cryin' and blubbering like everything, for she had loved him once. She said, "Tim, step softly, your father's dead." Says I, "I will, for I'm 'fraid I'll wake him up." Oh," says she, "Tim, you'll break my heart, talking so; forget the past; go look is Tim Peters. Well, my mother was a at him who once loved you, and called you good, respectable kind of a woman, and his child." I went and looked; his face at him who once loved you, and called you ful expression about his mouth-and I trade—he was a harness-maker. I didn't know that, but mother says so. Golly! why didn't he stick to it?

The expression about his about his caught something running down my cheek afore I knowed it. Well, they held a coroner's inquest, and he was buried.

I asked what made his tears run. He had a kind o' sorrowful look. I felt. oh, dear! suppose he'd been a good man brother, and we had a jolly good time when like I see in the Park, wouldn't he love his little, mother says. Mother was American, Tim? and I thought, "Tim, don't you love father was English.

Tim? and I thought, "Tim, don't you love him?" How could I, when he made mother Well, father took to drink, like a darned suffer so. I 'sposed he was in hell and damer's exit. In spite of herself she breathed freer. I never see the woman so happy. Bill come in with a forlorn old black bonnet bling into the house, cuffing us here and he'd begged somewhere's; she kissed him, there, and swearing at mother, and she used and said, "God has blessed me in my tri-One day I come in and see her crying, and over anybody. We had some potatoes that

I used often to feel soft-I was took that way every once in a while-tears and fun altogether. I used to be ashamed of myself, and then I'd swear a blue streak to hide it. Tim, I hain't got a cent in the house to get | Bill sold radishes for a living. He went into the vegetable line. I was more intellectual.

Mother got sewing. She scratched, we scratched, and we got along nicely; there was nobody to drink it all up.

I was death on the M. P.'s, just for deviltry; I couldn't keep still. I used to feel bad, coming home nights, to see mother look so bleached. I saw a " pain-killer" advertised down Nassau St., One day she said to me, "Tim, take this have them." If I'd got a licking, I couldn't doctor-mother looked so sick. Says I "Mother, open your peepers; don't look so." She says, "Tim, God bless you, Tim and Bill. I hate to leave you, but God will take care of the orphans." I says, "Mothers." er, I'm sorry you are going, but seeing you can't stay, hurry up your cakes, and I'll take care of myself."

I asked him, "Why did you say that?" Oh, she did feel awful bad; so says I, "Mother, Jordan is a hard road to travel. If you get there before I do, tell 'em I'm coming, too." She laughed, and, by golly! if she didn't die a laughing, and that was

I thought I was going to stay at that place, but no; rent day come, and we had to go; and when I gets outside I said to Bill, "Nothing like taking the air." So we slept 'round in the carts that night.

A poor old Irish woman washed for mother when she died. She did it for nothing. Catch rich folks doing that. She said she knowed how she 'd feel if she should leave her boys kicking about, and if I wouldn't be up to so many tricks, she'd keep us. So we staid with her after that. She was a darned good old thing, but not so clean us mother. I told her I would do some odd jobs for her. Her rooms were dark, and I whitewashed them, and whitewashing it was! She was awful tickled; but I didn't like my boarding-place, 'cause she wouldn't take any pay.

Says I to Bill, "I'll get you a situation." So, as luck would have it, I used to listen to people's talking, and one day I heard a man say he wished he had a smart boy to take

tled to Bill, and he come. He was really a pretty-eyed fellow, just like mother. So the man axed me about my relations, and I told him all about it. "Well," says he, "I like the looks of your boy there, and I'll take him." "But," says I, "look here, mister, don't you lick him; if you do, I'll lick you back." I thought he'd die a laughing.

So I fitted Bill out. How do you think I did it! I give him some gingerbread. 'Twas as hard as two peas in a pod. But the old feller fixed him all up before he went out of town. Bill felt so grand and happy, that he forgot to be sorry at leaving me.

I asked him here if he could tell me the name of that old Irishwoman, and where she lived. He said it was Bridget Mahan; she lived near the Five Points ; he couldn't mention the name of the street; said it was a short one, and added, "Hold on ! see if I not recalling the name, went on :]

I trudged home to the old woman's where al Theatre. I saw nothing for my tears— ing money, no had to laugh once in a while. "Twasn't the moves slowly. National Theatre-it was the next one to it, where the boys could get in for sixpence. I sold papers ever so long after that. I got in all sorts of mischief; took to smoking and chewing-the boys set me up to it. Then I got happy again, but I felt lonesome; I went to all the fires—used to go to Hoboken; pitched pennies till I got enough to pay the ferriage. The boys used to say I cheated. I wonder if I did! They said I was a gambler, but I only used common cents. I had a black eye every once in a while, fighting the boys who twitted me about Bill and mother. I wouldn't stand that, so I give 'em something to remember me by. They are hard boys-had to be so. I used to pitch into the bullies when pushing the little ones away, and hooking their papers.

I made about a shilling a day, depending on the news and the brain of the editor. I tell you one thing, if any one of the boys didn't sell his papers, we'd go shucks with him, and each take one-that was among the good fellers. Tell you what I used to do-go 'long up Broadway, and see one of your fine looking fellows, run agin' him, most knock his breath out, then ask, "Have a paper, sir?"

I always thought of mother while bawling my paper at the top of my lungs. Sunday

bought one of them penny ice creams that they sell at the corners. I was took up with the cramp, and went home. I had changed my boarding-place, and the way I paid my board was-if I made a shilling, I paid two cents for my board; if I made eighteen pence, then I paid four cents. I was awful sick. "Tim," says I, "you goin' home, ain't you glad?"

I grew worse and worse, and all grew dark about me. I wished for Bill. I lay on some straw on the floor. I begun to feel so pleasant and happy. I heard mother speaking to me, "Tim, my boy!" I jumped right up in bed, but I saw nothing—then the pain come on. One of the boys come in, and says he, "Tim, what you doing there?" "Ike," says I, "I'm going where the good

"Ike," says I, "if I'm well, I won't be me, and I can t stay." What did he do but cry. I never let the bullies beat that new-comer-the green 'un-will yer !" Says he, "No, I'll take care o' him till you come back."

Then it grew darker; I didn't hear his voice. All at once I saw mother. I had no pain, and there was no tears in her eyes. Says I, "Hurra! I'm for it. Ain't I, mother? How the dickens did I come

Says she, "Look!"

I looked and saw them carrying my coffin out of the room. Then she took me with her, and if I ain't as happy as a bee, I tell you. I go 'bout singing, but not the papers. There are lots of other boys, but somehow I feel a kind of babyish; I don't want to be

I've been back to the Herald office; there I heard some one say, "Timothy." "Oh,

Then the other one said, "You must go back, my child, and teach the little newsboys, that if they keep a kind feeling in their hearts and try to be good, there is a happy

"Well," says I, "mister, whoever you are, its easier said than done; because, if a boy tries to be good, there is always somebody to kick it out of him. But," says I, "mister, I'll do that same;" so here I am

Would you like to know how I learn to read? Mother taught me some, then I taught myself some. All the newsboys can't read, but when they have got through selling their papers, some one of 'em who can read sits down with a lot 'round him, and reads to 'em; so they know a darned sight more of what's goin' on than you think they do. Then they talk it over among 'emselves.

Here ended this interview. The next day he came again, and talked considerably Among other things, he said that once he got drunk just to see how it was. "Golly," said he, "I got enough of it, never catch me at it agin." I asked him if he could give me the name of any of his companions. He gave me the names of four of them : Jim,

He brought with him at this interview the Spirit of a boy younger than himself, who said his name was Dick Hardin. J. W. EDMONDS.

Tastes Differ .- In a lecture on what he he has seen abroad, Wendell Phillips ob-

In Italy you will see a man breaking up his land with two cows and the root of a tree for a plough, while he is dressed in

means idle. They toil early and late, men, women, and children, with an industry that shames labor-saving Yankees. Thus he makes labor, that the poor must live. In Rome, charcoal is principally used for fuel. and you will see a string of twenty mules, bringing little sacks of it upon their backs, when one mule could draw all of it in a cart-But the charcoal vender never had a cart, and so he keeps his mules and feeds them. This is from no want of industry, but there

A Yankee always looks haggard and neryous, as though he were chasing a dollar With us, money is everything; and when we go abroad, we are surprised to find that the dollar has ceased to be almighty, If a Yankee refuse to do a job for fifty cents, he will probably do it for a dollar, and will certainly do it for five. But one of the lazaroni can fetch it!" He paused a moment, and of Naples, when he has earned two cents, and eaten them, will work no more that day, if you offer him ever so large a sum. He I boarded I felt awful streaked ; I couldn't has earned enough for the day, and wants cry nor do nothing, so I went to the Nation- no more. So there is no eagerness for making money, no motive for it, and everybody

Advertisements.

N. H. DILLINGHAM, M. D., PHYSIO-MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL

OFFICE and residence, No. 1 Barton street, (corner of Leverett,) Boston, Mass., will en-deavor to attend to all calls in and out of the city, with fidelity and scientific skill. We know we have a reputation for unqualified success, not only for the cure of all common diseases, but especially for female weaknesses, uterine diseases, all humors, old sores, tumors, ulcers, etc. Treatment Psychological and Dietetic to all who are susceptible to such influences.

We intend to have the best Clairvoyant in the country, who will examine for business, as well as the sick, at all hours of the day. Terms from $1

We also intend to have the best mediums that can be obtained for the different phases of spiritual manifestations. Rooms open from 10 to 12 A. M; 2 to 4, P. M.; and 7 to 9, evenings. No charge to the actually poor. Boston, Sept , 1854.

LIST OF PUBLICATIONS,

FOR SALE BY BELA MARSH, No. 15 Franklin Street, Boston. (OFFICE OF THE NEW ERA.)

The following list embraces all the principal works devoted to Spiritualism, whether published by Bela Marsh or Messis. Partridge & Brittan and others; the prices of the same being annexed, together with the rates of postage. All new publications received as soon as issued. The Trade supplied at publishers' prices.

Works by Andrew J. Davis.

The Present Age and Inner Life: A Sequel to Spiritual Intercourse. Modern Mysteries classified and explained. Illustrated with engravings. Price $1,00. Postage 28 cents.

The Harmonial Man; or Thoughts for the age. Price 30 c.; postage 5 c.

Nature's Divine Revelations, &c. Price $2,00; postage 42 c. The Great Harmonia, Vol. I-The Physician. Price $1,25; postage 20 c.: Vol. II., The Teacher, price $1,00; postage 19 c.: Vol. III., The Seer, price $1,00; postage 19 c. The Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. Price 50 c.; postage 9 c.

Free Thoughts concerning Religion: or Nature versus Theology.

The Philosophy of Special Providences .- A Vision. Price 15 c.; postage 3 c.

The Approaching Crisis; being a Review of Dr. Bushnell's recent Lectures on Supernaturalism. Price 50 c.; postage 12 c. A Chart exhibiting the Outline of Progressive

History and Approaching Destiny of the Race. Cannot be sent by mail. Price $1,75. Works by John S. Adams.

Answers to Seventeen Objections against Spiritual Intercourse, and Inquiries relating to the Manifestations of the Present Time. Price 25 c. in paper-38 c. in cloth; postage 5 and 7 c.

A Letter to the Chestnut street Congregational Church, Chelsea, Mass. Price 15 c. An Intensely interesting Work! A Rivulet from the Ocean of Truth, an authentic and intensely interesting narrative of the advancement of a Spirit from darkness into light; proving in an actual instance the influence of man on Earth over the departed. With Introductory and Incidental remarks by John S. Adams. ["God's mercy is eternal and complete."] Price 25 c.; postage 3 c.

Works by A. E. Newton.

The Ministry of Angels Realized. A Letter to the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston. Price 10 c.; postage 1 c.

A Review of the Criticisms of The Congregationalist on the Letter to the Edwards Church. Price 10 c.; postage 1 c.

Answer to Charges of belief in Modern Revelations, &c., given before the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston. Price 13 c.; postage 1 c.

Works by various Authors. Epitome of Spiritual Intercourse: A Condensed view of Spiritualism in its Scriptural, Historical, Actual, and Scientific aspects; Its relations to Christianity, Insanity, Psychometry, and Social Reform. Manifestations in Nova Scotia; Important Communications from the Spirits of Sir John Franklin, and Rev. William Wishart, St. John, N. B., with Evidences of Identity and Directions for Developing Mediums. By Alfred Cridge, of Canada; Writing Medium. Price 38 c.; postage 5 c.

Nichols' Monthly, a Magazine of Science and Pro-gressive Literature. By T. L. Fichols and Ma-ry S. Gove Nichols. Price 12 cents, single; $1

The Shekinah, edited by S. B. Brittan; in three vols. or single. In plain or elegant binding, from $1,75 to $3,000 per vol. A Review of Dr. Dods' Involuntary Theory of

Spiritual Manifestations. By W. S. Courtney. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c. The Tables Turned: A Brief Review of Rev. C. M. Butler, D. D. By S. B. Brittan. Price

25 c.; postage 3 c. New Testament "Miracles" and Modern "Miracles." The comparative amount of evidence for each; the nature of both; testimony of a hundred witnesses, &c. Price 30 c.

The Religion of Manhood, or The Age of Thought. By J. H. Robinson; with Introduction by A. E. Newton. Price in cloth 75 c., in paper 50 c.; postage 12 c. The Philosophy of Creation, unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and the Spirit World. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Weod, Medium. Price 38 c.; postage 6 c. Book for Skeptics; being communications from Angels, written with their own hands. Also

Oral Communications spoken by Angels through a trumpet and written down as they were delivered, in presence of many witnesses; also a representation and explanation of the Celestial Spheres, given by the Spirits at J. Koon's Spirit Room in Dover, Athens county. Price 25 c. Marriage—its History, Character, and Results; its Sanctities and its Profanities; its Science and it Facts. Demonstrating its influence as a civilized institution on the happiness of the Individual and the Progress of the Race. By T. L. Nichols, M. D., and Mrs. Mary S. Gove Nichols. Price $1,00. Scripture Idolatry: a Discourse by Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Minister of the Worcester Free Church. Price 5 c. single, 38 c. per dozen; postage 1 c.

Messages from the Superior State; communicated by John Murray, through John M. Spear, in the summer of 1852: containing important instruc-tion to the inhabitants of the earth. Carefully prepared for publication; with a sketch of the Author's earthly Life, and a brief description of the Section 1981 of the Spiritual Experience of the Medium. By S. C. Hewitt. Price 50 c.; postage 8 c.

The Spirit Minstrel: a collection of Hymns and Music for the use of Spiritualists in their Circles and Public meetings. By J. B. Packard and J. S. Loveland. Price in paper covers 25 c., in cloth back in cloth backs 38 c.; postage 6 c.

Mr. Fernald's Compendium of the Theological and Spiritual Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. Price $2,00; postage 45 c.

Astounding Facts from the Spirit World, witnessed at the house of J. A. Gridley, Southampton, Mass., by a circle of friends, embracing the extremes of Good and Evil. Price 63 c.; post-Spirit Intercourse: containing Incidents of Personal experience while investigating the new Phenomena of Spirit Thought and Action, with various Spirit Communications through himself as Medium. By Herman Snow, late Unitarian minister at Montague, Mass. Price 60; post-

Supernal Theology. Price 25 c.; postage 6 c. Spiritual Instructor: containing facts and the philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. Price 38 c.:

The Spiritual Teacher, by Spirits of the Sixth Circle; R. P. Ambler, Medium. Price 50 c.: postage 7 c.

The Macrocosm and Microcosm, or the Universe without and the Universe Within, by Wm. Fishbough—paper bound 50 c., Muslin 75 c.; post-Shadow-Land, or the Seer, by Mrs. E Oakes

Smith. Price 25 c.; postage 5 c.

The Secress of Prevorst: being Revelations concerning the Inner Life of Man and the Interdiffusion of a World of Spirits in the one we inhabit. By Mrs. Crowe. Price 38 c.; postage 6 c

Book of Human Nature. By Laroy Sunderland. Price $1,00.

Book of Health, by the same. Price 25.

Book of Psychology, by the same. Price 25 c. An Exposition of Views respecting the principal Facts, Causes, and Peculiarities involved in Spirit Manifestations: together with interesting Phenomenal Statements and Communications. By Adin Ballou. Second Edition, with a Portrait. Price in cloth, 75 c., postage 12 c.: paper, 50 c.; postage 9 c.

Spiritualism. By John W. Edmonds and Geo. W. Dexter, M. D., with an Appendix by Nathaniel P. Talmadge, late U. S. Senator, and Governor of Wisconsin. Price $1,25; postage 30 c.

Spirit Works Real but not Miraculous: a Lecture read at the City Hall in Roxbury, Mass., on the evening of September 21st, 1853. By Allen Putnam. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c. Philosophy of Mysterious Agents: Human and Mundane, or the Dynamic Laws and Relations of Man, by E. C. Rogers. Price $1,00; post-

Fascination, or the Philosophy of Charming, by John B. Newman, M. D. Price 75 c.; postage Philosophy of the Spirit World: communicated by age 20 c.

spirits through the mediumship of Rev. Charles Hammond. Price 63 c.; postage 12 c. The Birth of the Universe: being a Philosophical Exposition of the origin, unfoldings and ulti-mate of Creation. By and through R. P. Ambler. Price 50 c.; postage 7 c. Brittan and Richmond's Discussion, 400 pages octavo. Price $1,00; postage 25 c.

Discourses from the Spirit World, dictated by Stephen Olin, through Rev. R. P. Wilson, writing medium. Price 62 c.; postage 12 c. Rev. Charles Beecher's Review of the Spiritual

Association of New York and Brooklyn. Price 25 c.; postage 3 c. Light from the Spirit World: comprising a series of articles on the condition of Spirits and the development of mind in the Rudimental and

Second Spheres, being written by the control of Spirits. Rev. Charles Hammond, Medium. Price 75 c.; postage 10 c. The Pilgrimage of Thomas Paine, written by the Spirit of Thomas Paine, through C. Hammond, Medium. Muslin 75 c.; 12 c. postage: paper

50 c; postage 9 c. Proceedings of the Hartford Bible Convention. Reported Phonographically by Andrew J. Graham. Price 75 c.; postage 12 c. Elements of Spiritual Philosophy: R. P. Ambler, Medium. Price 25 c.; postage 4 c. Reichenbach's Dynamics of Magnetism. Price $1,00; postage 20 c.

Pneumatology, by Stilling: Edited by Rev. Geo. Bush. Price 75 c.; postage 16 c. Celestial Telegraph, by L. A. Cahagnet. Price $1,00; postage 19 c.

Voices from the Spirit World: Isaac Post, Medium. Price 50 c.; postage 20 c. Night Side of Nature; Ghosts and Ghost Seers: by Catherine Crowe. Price $1, 25; postage 20 c. The Science of the Soul, by Haddock. Price 25 c.; postage 5 c.

An Epic of the Starry Heaven. Thomas L. Har-ris. "Hereafter ye shall see Heaven opened." Price 75 c.; postage 10 c.

GLEASON'S PICTORIAL

DRAWING-ROOM COMPANION.

A record of the beautiful and useful in Art. The object of the paper is to present in the most elegant and available form a weekly literary melange of notable events of the day. Its col-umns are devoted to tales, sketches, and poems by the BEST AMERICAN AUTHORS, and the cream of the domestic and foreign news; the whole well spiced with wit and humor. Each paper is beautifully illustrated with numerous accurate engravings by eminent artists, of notable objects, current events in all parts of the world, and of men and manners, altogether making a paper entirely original in its design in this country. Its pages contain views of every large city in the known world, of all buildings of note in the eastern or western hemisphere, of all the principal ships or steamers of the navy and merchant service, with fine and accurate portraits of every noted character in the world, both male and female. Sketches of beautiful scenery, taken from life, will also be given, with-numerous specimens from the animal kingdom, the birds of the air and the fish of the sea. It is printed on fine white paper, with new and beautiful type, presenting in its mechanical execution an elegant specimen of art. The size of the paper is fifteen-hundred and sixty four square inches, giving a great amount of reading matter and illustrations—a mammoth weekly paper of sixteen octavo pages. Each six months will make a volume of 416 pages, with about one thousand splendid engravings.

TERMS; INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE, One subscriber 1 year $3,00; four subscribers 1 year $10,00; ten subscribers 1 year $20,00. One copy of The Flag of Our Union, and one copy of Gleason's Pictorial, when taken together by one person, one year, for $4,00.

No travelling agents are ever employed for this The Pictorial Drawing-Room Companion may be obtained at any of the periodical depots throughout the country, and of newsmen, at six cents per single copy.

Published every Saturday, by F. GLEASON, corner of Tremont and Broomfield streets, Boston,

LADIES' REPOSITORY.

The Ladies' Repository is published regularly on the first day of every month on the following terms: Single copies, per annum, in advance, $2; six copies for one year, $10; twelve copies for one year, $18; to which will be added twenty-five cents for every three months' delay. Letters and communications, post paid, must be directed to A Tompkins, 38 Cornhill, Boston, Mass. No subscription received for less than one year, and persections. scription received for less than one year, and persons subscribing during the volume will be considered as taking the back numbers, as we print an equal number of copies each month. Volume begins in July of each year.

NOVEMBER

was a forlorn day. One day I thought I'd treat myself, so I niggers go, I 'spect."

"Tim," says he, "I guess you'll be well see folks cry so easy. Says I, "Ike, don't out of her sight. I thought I was independ-grand, 'says I.

"Hush!" says mother, "don't talk so."

place for them all."

Look here, mister, I tell you what had a wonderful effect-when a newsboy come up to a gentleman, and he looked pleasant on him and smiled; 'twas worth three cents to sell a paper to that feller. But when they are cross and push 'em aside, it makes a feller swear. Whoever it is, tell 'em to be good to their mothers, and they'll be as happy as I am. Hurra!

Ike, John Smith, and Lazy Bob.

skins with the hair on. In Rome, Vienna and Dresden, if you hire a man to saw wood, he does not bring a horse along. He never had one, or his father before him. He puts one end of the saw on the ground, and the other on his breast, and, taking the wood in his hand, rubs against the saw. It is a and says, "God bless Tim!" Somehow I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, felt weak in the joints, and down I went; 'twas catchin', so says I, "God bless Tim, too." Then I played leap-frog all around the room, I was so happy. Mother laughed, and said, "Tim, my crazy boy;" that made me feel better, but I couldn't understand it. Says I, "I'm obliged to you." So I whis says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "What do you mean!" I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "What do you mean!" I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "What do you mean!" I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "What do you mean!" I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." I says, "I knows a fellow." He looks at me, and says, "I knows a fellow." I says, "I knows a fellow will suit your capacity." Says I, "I knows a fellow will suit your capacity." Says I, "I knows a fellow will suit your capacity." Says I, "I knows a fellow will suit your capacity." Says I, "I knows a is no competition.

PHYSICIAN.

DEVOTED TO THE NEW DISPENSATION, OR THE INAUGURATION OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN UPON EARTH, THROUGH THE AID OF SPIRITUAL INTERCOURSE.

VOL. III .-- NO. 8.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

Thoughts of the Age.

The Position of Science in True Religious Teaching.

An Address given at the Opening of the Melodo-on for Meetings of Spiritualists, Oct. 1, 1854. BY A. E. NEWTON.

The term science means simply knowledge; cerning anything and everything within the cian, reach of human cognizance. Thus, the science of Astronomy includes all that is known respecting the sun, moon, planets, stars, comets, etc., and the relations of our earth to and them- the science of Geology includes all that is known respecting the internal structure of the earth-that of Geography embraces all knowledge respecting the earth's surface | chemical laboratory-each living organism is -Mineralogy comprehends all that is known but a piece of nicely adjusted chemical aprespecting the various kinds of substances paratus; and his God is thence a Great of which the earth is composed-Chem- Chemist; and he can speak of even the istry respects the nature and properties of Deity Himself as "that chemical combinathese substances as ascertained by analysis | tion whom men call God." edge in relation to animal formations-An- and these are their God. thropology comprehends all that is known of Others, fixing their minds chiefly on the specting the human soul-and Theology what | bending Sovereign-" a consuming fire." is known respecting God-though it must Now is not it indisputable that God is be said that the present systems embrace truly all these, and inconceivably more? But what is believed, rather than what is known. to know Him truly, we must search all His bited or now exhibits. ties-it embraces all that we really know, festation of God through man, and of course of anything and everything in the universe, liable to be rendered imperfect by the imperbe the same more or less.

knowledge of God's works, and of his ways of written, can be supposed to have had suffi- of man-in short, to scan the diversified re- refuse to practice. How sweetly are the enworking, in physical nature.

This being so, it is self-evident that all Wisdom and Infinite Love. scientific truth (I do not say all scientific | Moreover, since man possesses an indehe traces there, we read the emotions of his guage. inmost soul. The poet "builds the lofty skillful mechanism, from each of which proterior characteristics and capabilities of each | derful unfoldings. mind. We all know each other hy what we do and what we make. If our souls are filled with beauty, music, goodness, loveliness and truth, these characteristics will show themselves outwardly in what we do, and say, and create. So has it been truly said of God, that " the invisible things of Him, since the creation of the world have been clearly seen, being understood by the things that are

It is furthermore evident that we can derive full and complete knowledge of God only by becoming acquainted with all His works -in other words, by a knowledge of all departments in which He has revealed Him- dangerous madness. he might produce in one department would their bearing on human weal. give little indication of his capacities in another, and thus little knowledge of his character as a whole ! That he could make a nicely abundantly from every hand. Man's relaadjusted watch might prove him a skillful tions to the external world, and to the interexquisitely chiseled statue give the slightest wisely fulfil the duties of all these relations evidently is to make man understand what cause another is possessed of the virtue a moral essay convey any true idea of his laws which govern them. abilities as an architect or a mathematician. For example, each of us, in our present or characteristics in manifold outward exhibi- refined and subtle elements of this same mations. Limited or partially developed human terial world, and susceptible to influences from minds have ever been prone to fix on some the realm of the spiritual-and also a more servations, that it may be expected of those of personal improvement, and makes the inone department of His revelation, and thence interior nature, or soul, manifesting itself in who may be invited from time to time, by dividual who relies upon such faith indiffer-

Mechanic.

Another looks chiefly upon the artistic God is a Great Painter.

the breeze, the cadence of the waterfall, the or, if a more positive expression be desired, notes of the bird, and the "music of the certain knowledge-demonstrated truth con- spheres "-and his Deity is a Mighty Musi-

"And the realms of space are His octave bars, And His music notes are the suns and stars." To another, "God is the Poet of Poets,"

"Each ray of light is a thought in verse, From the Poet-Heart of our God outsung." Another sees in the Universe a grand and synthesis-the science of Botany includes | Some recognize nothing but a set of imperall that is known of plants and vegetable sonal principles or Eternal Laws, destitute of productions—Zoology embraces all knowl- moral, affectional, or intelligent attributes, the service of God, but will be very apt to feetibility of the most refined, nor cared to man and his history-Pneumatology includes | manifestations of moral inflexibility, the what is known respecting spiritual existences punitive safeguards against violation of in general-Psychology what is known re- law, conceive of a Stern Lawgiver-an Un-

All these branches of science have their di- revelations of Himself, that we may see all visions and subdivisions-as, for instance, sides of His character. If He has made a rev-Anthropology, or the Science of Man, in- elation in writing, (as the Bible is claimed cludes Animal Chemistry, Anatomy, Physi- to be,) that is but one of the endless methology, Dieteties, Medicine, Phrenology, ods He has taken to make Himself known. Psychology, and whatever relates to the di- And as we are better known by what we do versified manifestations of quality and capa- than by what we say, or write, so God may bility which the human being ever has exhi- be more surely known by His works than by writings. More than this, a revelation Science, then, is our knowledge of actuali- written in human language, is but a manifections of the medium or instrument em-Now if it be admitted, as most minds are played. A flower is an instrument for the rev- subjects must be chosen from the pages of their own recommendations. They can apwilling to admit, that all things in the uni- elation of God's Beauty, but flowers differ in one book, which all admit makes no claims prove of the noble and just principles of timate cause, called Gon-be that cause con- ty,-and no one flower, nor all the flowers of of God as declared by the heavens-to por- nevolence and worth with stirring words, Personal Intelligence,-it follows that sci- All-Beautiful. So man is an instrument | those tables of stone which encrust the globe | relish. ence in its broad sense is only Knowledge for revealing God's wisdom and love, but no -to read the commandments written upon Instances are not wanting in which men or Gon—that physical science is simply one man, nor all men who have ever yet the physical, mental and moral constitution commend to others what they themselves Spirits in this World.

theories or speculations, but scientific TRUTH,) pendent consciousness and an intelligence of is Divine truth-than which nothing can be his own, he must be peculiarity liable to exceptions, a descration of our pulpits! In words can do, all that language can express, more sacred or authoritative. In so far as vitiate with his own thoughts and concepscience has arrived at any positive results in | tions whatever revelations of the Divine are | religious temples are consecrated to the God | which he taught. But what is the conduct! any department of inquiry, it gives positive made through his agency. Hence it is clear of the past,-a Deity who ignores science What are the examples, the doings, of those knowledge respecting the character and the that any written revelation of God is less will of the Divine Author of all, to just the likely to represent Him truly and more likely degree that these are manifested in that par- to represent Him falsely to our apprehenticular department of His works. The sculp- sions, than those revelations which are given tor elaborates his interior conception in the without human agency. In other words, the chiseled marble, and in gazing on that, we deductions of positive science furnish us more learn the characteristics of his inner life .- reliable testimony as to the character and The painter portrays his hidden thoughts doings of God, than can be possibly be furnupon the canvas; and from the pencillings ished by any revelation made in human lan-

cient capacity to unfold the whole of Infinite stately edifice, and the artizan fabricates the almost wholly unknown, and when neither exhaustless as Deity Himself. ductions we judge with certainty of the in- human minds the capacity, to grasp its won-

> of the theologians, that the great end of all knowledge is to know God, and the great use of all knowledge is to enable us to understand and to do His will, and thus escape the penalties of transgression,-it is perfectly clear that these ends can never be attained without the aid of what is technically called science. For it is the very province of science, as before stated, to inform us of His | writings of Davis, of Ambler, Wilson, Ham- | the laws of mind to make a soul happy withworks and of His ways of working.

It has been well said that

"The undevout astronomer is mad," science. Just so far as we come short of and the same may be as truly said of the course of more advanced minds and circles, acts, until he or she shall exercise by their this, so far are our conceptions of Him limit- devotee of any branch of science. But it is ed and partial-and those persons are neces- equally evident that the devout religionist sarily most limited and partial in their con- who ignores science, and repudiates its posiceptions of God, who know least of the various | tive deductions, is infected with a far more self. Suppose one man to be possessed of a variety of capacities, each in an exalted degree; is it not perfectly clear that whatever sacred, and important just in proportion to scientific revelations are yet to be accepted all happiness must result from the practical

Illustrations of the importance of scientific knowledge to human welfare might be drawn of the revelations of this era, that they emmechanician, but it would give you no idea nal world, are boundless as the Universe. of his genius as a poet; nor would the most measureless as Deity. And he can never conception of his musical powers; nor would without some knowledge of them and of the

He could reveal his capacities in each depart- life, is possessed of a physical body, composment only by what he produced in that de- ed of the elements of the material world accomplished, then in the beautiful language the merits of Jesus to those who trusted in So the Deity reveals His various attributes —a spiritual body, consisting of the more of the earth; and righteousness shall look natural workings of his wisdom in the gov-

A third listens enraptured to the song of | healthful body. But how to attain this | iota of truth that we can gather respecting province of science to inform us.

modern cookery places on our tables. He weary school-men never knew." may supplicate most earnestly for "growth in grace"-but it will be of little avail while growth in grease. He may agonize for spiritual and moral strength-power to resist prayers will be likely to remain unanswered so long as he tampers with alcohol, tobacco, are interested. No age or nation can claim | disappointed when the justice of natural law en the nervous system and enervate the will. He may desire to consecrate all his energies allowed to exist in individuals, still the massthe suicidal razor to shave away the choicest them. Great minds and good men have set of his physical strength three times every the principles of justice and equity before week. He may pray most earnestly for sal- their fellows in strong and effective lanhope of attaining it, so long as he continues, in their examples; and yet the masses of soto incur damnation in the present. to the Author of our being, for aid of any practice which they commended in others. kind, can be expected to be of much avail, Complimentary as their words may seem to while we neglect or go counter to the very the wise and the good, it is but ignorant and gather such instructions as nature with aid. Said an ancient writer, "Then shall I they practically disown. not be ashamed when I have respect unto all In no age or nation has this infatuationthy commandments," and this is the only this commendation of principles by words nature demand, the virtue is the property of condition in which we shall not have reason and denial by acts-been more nakedly man- the doer, and the effect of such doing is hapto be ashamed.

nore the lessons of science, in what are and seriously condemning the foolish and the has no place within their precincts.

Science and Spiritual Truth are to be wedded goodness in them requisite to be as happy as a necessity of its being, tends to the unseen Especially must this be true as regards a stitute a true Theology—a real Science or and plentiful, that no virtue is required in rhyme," and the architect constructs the revelation made in an age when science was Gon,-comprehensive as the Universe, and the person seeking it?

fact that the present enlightened condition half of a century, have not yet discovered Admitting, then, according to the formulas | viction of the necessary oneness of all truth, | ef one person can make another good or will not permit it to receive spiritual revela- happy, unless that goodness become the acmaterial science-but also in the fact that not how good the Infinite, or Jesus, or any the revelations which mark this era, instead one else may be, to those who are destitute of being confined to merely moral and spirit- of this quality. Neither the goodness of physical sciences and undertake to unfold without they possess that goodness and exman's relations to the world of matter. The ercise it for themselves. It is contrary to mond, Fishbough, and others,-the commu- out love and wisdom of its own. nications given through J. M. Spear, and What though Christ be good, his goodness many more, as well as the constant inter- is his own, and not the quality of another's furnish proof of this.

brace scientific and philosophical, as well as All happiness is resultant from individual down from heaven." (Ps. 135: 11.)

have derived but limited conceptions of Him. intelligence, affections and emotions, and al- the Boston Conference of the Spiritualists, ent as to his or her personal worth. Merit | dian Spirits.

the external, but that the internal receives to the neglect of all others, and that their the elements of its growth and development texts will be derived from no one volume of coloring spread out before the eye-and his fore be a sound and healthful development "The Sacred Volume." The whole out- man and man, nor between man and his of the interior nature in an unsound and un- spread creation is our text-book, and every Maker. healthfulness of the physical nature, it is the any department of it, is sacred truth. The flower, the pebble, yea, even the paving-The devout man may pray for purity, and stone, trodden under foot as it is of man and sanctification, and holiness-but he can nev- beast,-each may furnish a text whose dier attain them while he feeds the grossness vine authorship none can call in questionof his animality with the impurities which each may preach lessons of "wisdom the righteousness attaches to the Ruler of the

For the New Era.

Happiness. An impartial review of public sentiment temptation and to overcome evil-but his discloses a sad conflict of minds upon almost every question in which those minds coffee, or any of those narcotics which weak- unity of opinion, nor boast of infallibility of judgment. Whatever of refinement may be of body and mind to what he conceives to be es of nations have not partaken of the percome short of the mark so long as he uses | become the followers of the light set before vation in the future, but he can have little guage, and still stronger and more effectually by violation of the laws of his physical being, ciety, though formally acknowledging the perfection of their principles and the purity In short, no amount of wordy supplication of their conduct, have sadly ignored the conditions on which He must bestow that | zeal which allows them to approve of what | her millions of tongues, may present for ifest than at this moment and in this counit need hardly be said, to a great extent, ig- words the conduct of the wise and good, termed their "sacred ministrations." Their bad, who have not the virtue to practice velations which God has made and is con- comiums of Jesus enunciated, how pathetitinually making of Himself in all life, all cally is his life described, how feelingly are motion, all beauty, and all beneficence around his virtues commended, and how energeticalus-these are esteemed, with some honorable ly are his principles enforced! All that fact, it may be said that most of our modern is done to commend and enforce the religion and frowns on all investigation,-while the who speak so favorably of him? Where LIVING Gop, who to-day is working in all the are they found in practice ! How many seek forces of Nature, and is the Life of all life, to follow him? How many practically shun us-hearing their voices, cheered by their his footsteps? Why commend in words smiles—death and the Spiritual world are to In the spiritual era, which is now dawn- what is denied in acts! Does religion coning upon earth, if I have at all rightly ap- sist in words or deeds! Are men and woprehended its characteristics, science is to men to enter heaven because Jesus is good, be the grand Revelator of God. Material or because he lived what he taught? Is no solitary on the hill-side of life, the soul, by in Divine Harmony, and together will con- he! Is heaven so cheap, happiness so easy

We who have dwelt in the earth-body, The evidence of this I find not only in the and sojourned in the spirit-world for nearly of the human mind, and its intuitive con- any law or any way by which the goodness tions which contradict the positive facts of total property of the individual. It matters ual matters, do enter the domain of the God nor the angels can make a soul happy own wills the principles of Jesus, or the vir-I do not affirm that all or any of these tues upon which all enjoyment in earth or purported revelations, as yet given, whether heaven depends. What though all the anmade direct from Spiritual Intelligences, gels in heaven be happy, what doth it profit through unconscious entranced mediums, or those who reject the principles upon which written by highly spiritual minds acting nor- such happiness is immutably based ! It is a scenes! as text-books of science-authoritative and and personal goodness of the possessor, and final. I only say, that it is a characteristic cannot accrue to any person dispossessed of moral and theological questions; and that qualities, and consists in the degree of the the great effort of the minds of the Higher development of those qualities in each per-Spheres, who are leading in this movement, son. Relying upon finding enjoyment behe has never understood, and realize what he which brings it, is a delusion that paralyzes has never realized—the importance of his all our efforts to secure happiness. Men PHYSICAL relations to his spiritual develop- have dreamed that God, in his infinite goodment and immortal life. When this shall be ness, would in his purposes of grace transfer around us, and affected by influences from it | of an ancient seer, " Truth shall spring out | such an unjust and arbitrary insult to the ernment of mankind. The moral force of I have only to add, in concluding these ob- such instruction is weakening to the cause

One sees in the Universe a grand exhibition lied to the Great Soul of the Universe Him- to speak in this place, that their discourses cannot be transferred, and to suppose that of mechanical powers and contrivances, and self. We know not only that all manifesta- will be confined to no one class of topics, the merits of Jesus may be set to the credit hence he conceives of the Deity as a Grand tions of the internal must be made through that they will present no one phase of truth of others, is a mistake which will find no justification in the truth. It matters not what authors or books may teach, the laws Another looks chiefly upon the artistic beauties of creation—the lights and shades of through the external. There cannot therebeauties of creation—the lights and shades of the past, to be denominated of God warrant no such injustice between the writings of the past, to be denominated of God warrant no such injustice between the writings of the past, to be denominated of a human life and experience, is overlooked?

There is no law in the Universe that will justify the practice of crediting the merits of Jesus, or of angels, to any other individual than the proper one. And no individual has any right to expect such a fraudulent transaction as the doctrine of imputed sin and Personal virtue recoils at the thought of such injustice. And if men and women his dietetic habits tend surely to promote Personal Virtue Essential to venture to trust on getting to heaven because some one else is good while they are not, or in any record of history which may be thought to inculeate such an idea, it will still be a truth that they will find themselves shall be made known to them. They will then see that all happiness is but the result of an actual merit of some virtue existing in some person who is the recipient of its bless-

Men and women should not trust in errors to gain happiness. They cannot gain felicity by succumbing to popular views which conflict with the laws of reason and nature, nor receive the merits of another without possessing another's virtues. The noblest minds of earth and heaven are those who have merits of their own, and are capable of trusting in their own virtues to secure their exaltation to higher spheres. In so doing, they act and think for themselves, their acceptance. Spirits may teach, men may listen, but when men do what law and piness. This happiness is personal, and can The popular religious teachers of the day, try. I see vast multitudes applauding with accrue only to the actor. Such is the reward of good works.
C. HAMMOND, Medium.

[The following article has appeared once in the columns of this paper, a year or two since; but we republish it at the request of several subscribverse have proceeded from one central or ul- their capacity to reveal the element of Beau- to teach of science. To set forth the glory other men, and laud their examples of be- ers. We think it would be difficult for the talented authoress to find admission for such an artisidered merely as a universal Forming Prin- our earth together, can be supposed to be tray the history of the earth's creation, as but to follow them through good report and ele in any of our prominent religious journals at ciple without personality, or embodied as a capable of revealing the whole Beauty of the traced by the mighty Maker's own finger on evil report is a task for which they have no years since, is fearfully heterodox now .- N.]

From the N. V. Evangelist.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE. It is a beautiful belief, That ever round our head Are hovering on viewless wings The Spirits of the dead.

While every year is taking one and another from the ranks of life and usefulness, or the charmed circle of friendship and love, it is soothing to remember that the Spiritual world is gaining in riches through the pover-

In early life, with our friends all around us remote, misty, and half fabulous; but as we advance in our journey, and voice after voice is hushed, and form after form vanishes from our side, and our shadows falls almost and Spiritual, and pursues in another life those it seeks in vain in this. For with every friend that dies, dies also some peculiar form of social enjoyment, whose being depended on the peculiar character of that friend; till, late in the afternoon of life, the pilgrim seems to himself to have passed over to the unseen world, in successive portions, half his own Spirit; and poor is he who has not familiarized himself with that unknown, whither, despite himself, his soul is earnestly tending. One of the deepest and most imperative cravings of the human heart, as it follows its beloved ones beyond the vale, is for some assurance that they will still love and care for us. Could we firmly believe this, bereavement would lose half its bitterness. As a German writer beautifully expressed it-"Our friend is not wholly gone from us; we see across the river of death, in the blue distance, the smoke of his cottage"-hence the heart, always creating what it desires, has ever made the guardianship of, and ministra-tion of departed Spirits, a favorite theme of

But is it, then, fiction ! Does revelation, which gives so many hopes which nature had not, give none! Is there no sober certainty to correspond to the inborn and passionate craving of the soul! Do departed Spirits, in verity, retain any knowledge of what transpires in this world, and take any part in its

All that revelation says of a Spiritual state, is more intimation than assertion-it has no direct treatise, and teaches nothing apparently of set purpose, but gives vague, glorious images, while now and then, some accidental ray of intelligence looks out,

-like eyes of cherubs, shining From out the veil that hid the ark

But, out of all the different hints and assertions of the Bible, we think a better inferential argument might be constructed, to prove the ministration of departed Spirits, than for many a doctrine which has passed, in its day, for the height of orthodoxy. First, then, the Bible distinctly says, that there is a class of invisible Spirits who minis-ter to the children of men. "Are they not all ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" It is said of little children, that their "angels do always behold the face of the Father which is in Heaven." The last passage from the words of our Savior, taken in connection with the well-known tradition of his time, fully recognizes the idea of individual guarWHOLE NO., 106.

For God's government over mind is, it seems throughout, one of intermediate agencies, and these not chosen at random, but with the nicest reference to their adaptation to the purpose intended.

Is it likely, then, that, in selecting subor-While around the throne of God stand Spirits, now sainted and glorified, but thrillingly conscious of a past experience of sin and sor-row, and trembling to the soul, in sympathy with temptations and struggles like their own; is it likely that He would pass by these souls, thus burning for the work, and commit-it to those bright abstract Spirits, whose knowledge and experience are comparatively so distant and so cold ?

It is strongly in confirmation of this idea, that in the transfiguration scene, which seems to have been intended purposely to give the disciples a glimpse of the glorified state of their Master, we find him attended by two Spirits of earth, Moses and Elias, "which appeared with him in glory, and spake of his death, which he should at accomplish at Je-

It appears that these so long departed ones were still mingling in deep sympathy with the tide of human affairs, not only aware of the present, but also informed as to the future.

In coincidence with this idea, are all those passages which speak of the redeemed of earth as being closely and indissolubly iden-tified with Christ, members of his body, of his flesh and his bones. It is not to be supposed that these united to Jesus above all others, by so vivid a sympathy and community of interests, are left out as instruments in that great work of human regeneration which engrosses him; and when we hear Christians spoken of as kings and priests unto God, as those who shall judge angels, we see it more than intimated that they are to be the parents and actors in that great work of Spiritual regeneration, of which Jesus is the

What then? May we look among the bands of ministering Spirits for our departed ones! Whom would God be more likely to send us? Have we in heaven a friend who knew us to the heart's core-a friend to whom we have unfolded our souls in their most secret recesses—to whom we have confessed our weaknesses and deplored our griefs!—if we are to have a ministering Spirit, who better adapted !

Have we not memories which correspond to such belief? When our soul has been east down, has never an invisible voice whispered, "There is lifting up." Have not gales and breezes of sweet and healing thought been wafted over us, as if an angel has shaken from his wings the odors of Paradise? Many a one, we are confident, can remember such things; and whence come

Why do the children of the pious mother, whose grave has grown green and smooth with years, seem often to walk through perils and dangers fearful and imminent as the ils and dangers learner and gulf on the edge crossing Mohammed's fiery gulf on the edge could we see that glorious form! that face where the angel conceals not the mother—our questions would be answered.

It may be possible that a friend is sometimes taken because the Divine One sees that their ministry can act upon us more powerfully from the unseen world than amid the infirmities of mortal intercourse.

Here, the soul, distracted and hemmed in by human events and by bodily infirmities, often scarce knows itself, and makes no impression on others correspondent to its desires. The mother would fain electrify the heart of her child; she yearns and burns in vain to make her soul effective on its soul, and to inspire it with a Spiritual and holy life; but all her own weaknesses, faults and mortal cares, cramp and confine her, till death breaks all fetters-and then first truly alive, risen, purified and at rest, she may do calmly, sweetly and certainly, what amid the tempests and tossings of life, she labored for painfully and fitfully.

So, also, to generous souls who burn for the good of man, who deplore the shortness of life, and the little that is permitted to any individul agency in this life, does this belief open a heavenly field. Think not, father or brother, long laboring for man, till thy sun stands on the western mountains—think not that thy day in this world is over. Perhaps, like Jesus, thou hast lived a human life and gained human experience, to become, under and like him, a savior of thousands—thou hast been through the preparation, but thy real work of good, thy full power of doing, is yet to begin.

There are some Spirits (and those of earth's choicest,) to whom, so far as enjoyment to themselves or others is concerned, this life seems to have been a total failure. A hard hand from the first, and all the way through life, seems to have been laid upon them; they seem to live only to be chastened and crushed, and we lay them in the grave at last in mournful silence. To such what a vision is opened by this belief! This hard discipline has been the school and task work by which their soul has been fitted for their invisible labors in a future life; and when they pass the gates of the grave, their course of benevolent acting first begins, and they find themselves delighted possessors of what through many years they have sighed for-the power of doing good.

The year just passed, like all other years, has taken from a thousand circles the sainted, the just and the beloved-there are spots in a thousand graveyards, which have become this year dearer than all the living world; but in the loneliness of sorrow, how cheering to think that our lost ones are not wholly gone from us. They still may move about our homes, shedding ground them an atmosphere of purity and peace, promptings of good, and reproofs of evil; we are compassed about with a cloud of witnesses, whose hearts throb in sympathy with every effort and struggle, and who thrill with joy at our success. How should this thought check and rebuke every worldly feeling and unworthy purpose, and enshrine us in the midst of a forgetful and unspiritual world, with an atmosphere of heavenly peace. They have overcome—have risen-are crowned, glorified-but still they remain to us, our assistants, our comforters, and in every hour of darkness they seem to say to us: "So we grieved, so we struggled,

THE NEW ERA.

EHOLD! I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW

S. C. HEWITT, EDITORS.

S. C. HEWITT, PROPRIETOR. OFFICE, NO. 15 FRANKLIN STREET.

Terms, $1,50 per Annum, in Advance. ISSUED EVERY SATURDAY.

Readers of this paper are all expected to do their own thinking, and no one to he held responsible for the opinions of another. The Editors will indicate their principal productions by their proper initials, and will exercise their best judgment in selecting from the favors of correspondents; but it is desired that every thought expressed, whether old or new, from spirits in the flosh or out, should stand only on its intrinsic merits.

BOSTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

The Marriage Question.

should say some more definite word thereupon, than we have heretofore done. Some to a question of this nature, and involving such momentous results, it has seemed to us especially needful to let the effervescence of that the public mind might be the better prepared for a more dispassionate and rational view of the subject, than has, for the most part, been entertained of late in al-

All questions, in their outset, are subject to extremes. And this is especially true of Marriage, which is the pivotal question of this age. Very seldom do we find those who are prepared to take neither side exclusively, but who, at the same time, see very now and then, such do appear and say their word, only perhaps, for the time being, to get more kicks and curses, than good will and encouragement. Nevertheless, their word must be said, and if time does not, the eternities will, do them justice. So much then, in preface. We come now to the question itself. And

1. What is Marriage! Does it consist in variety, or in duality? Is it a mere legal and external union, or is it mainly spiritual? We hesitate not to say that marriage is strictly dual in its nature-that it is the union of two, and of two only, in conjugal love. We have no possible faith in the idea of variety, either limited, or universal, if by that term is meant simultaneous change in one's conjugal loves-or, in other words, the capacity and strict rightfulness of loving, conjugally, more than one at the same time. The very idea of conjugality, by common consent, excludes the idea of various and simultaneous loves, for conjugality is duality, and that alone. It becomes, therefore, a solecism to talk of simultaneous variety in conjugal love. It is not simply an apparent, but a real paradox. The thing cannot be. There may be other loves, outside the conjugal-as that of charity, friendship, offspring, etc., which may be simultaneous and in variety; but the conjugal passion itself, is essentially dual, and is therefore exclusive, in the legitimate, proper and good sense of

But what proof have we of this? It is said that all nature illustrates the contrary. The male and female principles, we are told, exist throughout all nature—that even the mineral kingdom, as well as the vegetable, animal and human, reveals the principles of sexuality not only, but illustrates the doctrine of variety. There is a constant interchange of positive and negative, or male and female influence, not simply between two minerals, two vegetables, or two animals, but between each other, in almost endless variety. Here is a deposit of iron, copper, silver, or gold, giving off its chemical efflux, positively and negatively, or masculinely and femininely, not in a dual way, simply, but in variety, to any extent. Here, also, is a field of grain in blossom, and its impregnating substance is carried by the four winds, from one stalk to another, and another, and clusiveness-no confinement. And here and species-with also, its varied attractions -its constant crossing and re-crossing of breeds, and its endless interchanges of influences which reciprocally affect, not two only, from each other, but many from one, and one from many, on the male and female principles. So, also, it is argued, should it holds here as in all other departments of nature. If the law of variety is found every- tion, but at the same time, we find the idea and constantly affect each other, for good or where else, and where, too, this principle of of duality, or pairing, keeping exact pace evil, by the constant efflux of soul-magnetism. sex is especially concerned, why should it with the progress of the human race. And If we cherish elevated thought and sentiment,

The argument for variety, thus drawn from nature below and outside of man, it is said, is confirmed by human history. Scarcely a nation has yet existed, which has not, in some form, not only tolerated, but approved of polygamy. And those nations which have been openly and professedly monogamic, have not been able, after all, to suppress, except in part, and mostly in mere outside public opinion and conventional arrangements, the actual manifestations of that love of variety in sexualism, which is true of all nature elsewhere. The conclusion the engels smile upon, and God himself aptherefore is, that variety in love is native and the magnitude of the psychometrist, on the clairvoyant principle. therefore is, that variety in love is native and therefore is, that variety in love is native and the angels smile upon, and the angels smile upon angels and the angels smile upon angels and the angels smile upon ang confinement, or dual exclusiveness, is contrary to the nature and the well-being of the full advantage of this specious and seemingly plausible reasoning. We have done so in order to give them no just cause of complaint, while at the same time we might be brutes, but lower still-with mere vegetable influences in each and all the kingdoms betion of them all, yet if he were no more than that, he would be no more than a harmonial constantly decided otherwise. In relation it unites, yet divides the manhood from the animal attributes, the primary law of sexuences, as the personality, human form and ly diffusible elements, unconscious forces and animals are utterly incapable of forming intelligent, and spiritually and morally conscious sexual relations with each other; and sexes of the human race.

gument its full force, and its advocates the ents will have patience.

between man and all nature besides; and sible. Even what is called the permanent this difference puts every law of nature, out- magnet, if left without its armature, in conside of man, into different relations to him, | tact with other freely conducting substances, when such law enters into, and becomes a would lose all its attractive force in less than part of himself. Purposes have now to be one half of that time. This soul-magnetism fulfilled and objects gained, which never is evidently governed by a similar law, and could enter into the economy of the lower must, therefore, be diffused long before the kingdoms, and hence the demands of the hundred years are out. What is there, then, sexual law involve different relations, and in the ancient autograph to excite the powers those, too, of a more sacred and important of the psychometrist, so as to enable him to character, in human beings, than in all na- read, accurately and vividly, the character of inferior kingdoms may be the same essential- here to balance the effect. The former, therely, or in principle, with those in the human fore, must be sought elsewhere. race, it is plain that in the latter, these same laws become more complicated, imply new | not, in the least, contravene the idea of a furthermore, such being the case, we involve | person of the human race, or from the fingers ourselves in endless absurdities, when we and the pen of a writer, which impregnates attempt to draw an exact parallel through- everything with which it comes in contact, out, between human sexuality, or marriage, and especially the letter which is being writin its true and normal sense, and the rela- ten; but the question is, whether there is tions and operations of the same essential enough in this substantive efflux, which, per principle, or law, in either or all of the three | se, is as unconscious as any other diffusible kingdoms below man.

man history, it may be said, that we have not. so little that is truly normal in that, in re- DR. Felch, quoting the language of some but also among the Jews, as also that of a recall. later day, not entirely confined to these Mr. Atkins coincided with our view of the much as nature is pretty effectually covered | tible difference in the results. up by disease, so far as the history goes on still another, without limit, knowing no ex- when we take a comprehensive view of his- was speedily coming when we shall underagain is the animal kingdom, with its genera strongly on the side of the dual marriage, in would be the practical tendency of Psychomrefinement of the later civilizations. True, therefore, what our life ought to be. be with human beings, for the same law even here, marriage is vastly inferior in char- We responded to this practical idea, and not be found also to be true of man-of the in saying this, we do not overlook the great an elevated efflux radiates from us, and minmidable, because more subtle, doctrine of versa. variety, as taught by some agitators of the Dr. Falca mentioned the fact, that a dog mighty battle of principles already fairly begun, and not to be ended till the great doctrine of conjugal union, or dual marriage is to adopt the Spiritual theory of Psychometry. brought out into bolder relief than ever be- The dog, he said, was a natural clairvoyant fore,—its laws, principles, and results thoroughly comprehended and acted upon—till erate through instinctively. So may we be loftier ideas of marriage are entertained, and organs also, on a higher plane. And the vastly purer motives are cherished and made soul of the Universe may read, to us, individ-

Several articles intended for this pa-

Conference at Harmony Hall, WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. STH.

It is seldom our privilege to meet with the friends, and take part in the discussions of enabled thereby to present a more striking the weekly Conferences of this city. But on contrast between truth and error, on this Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, we embraced subject, than we otherwise could possibly the opportunity offered us, and met a quiet little circle of believers in Spiritualism at the And now, in replying, we may say in the Hall named above. The topic for discussion outset, that the reasoning we have glanced on this occasion, was PSYCHOMETRY. We at puts man on a level, not simply with the proposed the subject for consideration, and endeavored to get at the philosophy of it. and mineral nature. And here is where it The statement and the argument were subsadly fails, for although the great primary stantially these: That, although the human law of sexual union is essentially the same powers, (i. e., of the Psychometrist,) the in all kingdoms, and although man is the autograph, etc., were absolutely necessary complement, or epitome of the whole, yet he to the result, yet that they served rather as is vastly more than such complement or epi- occasions, than as causes. The Psychometome. Man has a spiritually personal na- trician does not, of himself, read the lifeture, which far outstrips all the relations of story of the writer of an autograph, or of a laws, elements, substances, creatures and letter, but is made the organ of doing it, by operative causes superior to himself. These low himself. The vegetable may grow out causes are Spiritual, and from the world of of the mineral, the animal out of both, and of causes. Spiritual beings, partly from perman, so far as they go, may be the culmina- sonal knowledge of the person whose character is to be read, and partly from their clairvoyant powers, come en rapport with the animal; he would have no spiritual nature Psychometrist, and use his organs for the The subject of the present article is now —no properly reasoning intellect—no spirito-fairly before our readers, and it seems social attributes. He would be simply and metrist himself does the whole of it. And proper, if not absolutely demanded, that we only, the great representative of animal natheur beautiful and the use of the autograph, the letter, or any ture—he would not be MAN. But being man, thing else that may have been in contact by virtue of a manhood superadded to his with the person whose character is to be very sensitive friends think we should have animal being, which gives to that being all read, is simply to serve as a bond of connecdone this sooner, but our own judgment has its essential glory and crown, which, while tion, or to make an occasion for the reading. So much, then, for the statement. Now for the argument. It is granted, that the ality rises here to a similar dignity, and is autograph, especially when written with ink, characterized by qualities and principles as may be impregnated with the soul-magnetism thought and of passion have its brief day, far above animal, vegetable and mineral va- of the writer. But it is hardly supposable riety, in their interchange of sexual influ- that such magnetism will remain with the autograph for the space of a hundred years. angelic nature of man, are superior to mere- And yet it is a fact, that letters a hundred years old have been as accurately psychomeabstract laws. Minerals, vegetables and trized, as those just written,-or as the living person, whose hand takes that of the psychometrist. If we suppose the person present, who wrote the letter while in the flesh, especially are they incapable of calculating or some other one who was familiar with his and providing for those multitudinous, ever character when on earth, and making use of varying and elevated wants and results the organs of the apparent reader, the thing clearly the truth and the error of both. Yet which constantly flow from the union of the is easily explained. But to suppose there is enough soul-magnetism remaining, after the There is, therefore, a marked difference lapse of a hundred years, seems quite imposthe writer ! Plainly, nothing at all, or next While, therefore, the laws of nature in the | to that. Certainly, there is not cause enough

> This view of the subject, however, does relations, and involve different results. And | constant efflux of soul-magnetism from each element of nature, to account for the result And in relation to the argument from hu- we witness? It would seem that there is lation to the question under consideration, eminent savan, replied to our remarks, by so much on the side of duality, that it would the conclusion "we drew from them, "must seem the argument for variety must utterly be true also," which, of course, was decidfail in this direction. The Polygamy of an- edly non-committal. The Dr. also made sevcient times, not only among the Heathen, eral other apt observations which we cannot classes, we should much sooner think the re | matter, and related a case in his own experisult of an inordinate and diseased sexuality, ence, which confirmed that view. A gentlethan of a healthy or normal tone of that pas- man on Cape Cod had written his autograph sion of our nature. At any rate, it is a fact with a pencil, to make a trial, in that way, of history, that polygamy and its adjuncts, of this soul-reading. Now, it is plain that have always existed among those people who the steel pen and the liquid ink are more have been noted for very strong passions of ready conductors of magnetism, than a dry the kind under consideration. But we think | lead pencil; and it may, therefore, be fairly it will hardly be contended, on reflection, supposed, that the autograph written with that this argument from history is tanta- the latter, would be less fully charged, than mount to an argument from nature, inas- with the former; and yet there is no percep-

Mr. BLACKER did not feel competent to treat that side of the question. Furthermore, this matter; but he did feel, that the time tory in the premises, its testimony is very stand and live by law. And this he thought this one particular, if no other, -viz. : that etry. Heretofore almost everybody has lived while polygamy and consequent variety have in constant violation of nature's laws, and existed mainly among the older nations, and | questions like the present will tend to make the ruder, less cultivated and less spiritually nature more transparent to us, so that we elevated people, the monogamic or dual mar- shall know what she is-what her laws areriage has prevailed most under the light and | what our relations to her and them; and acter to the true idea of the conjugal rela- suggested, that we unconsciously, yet really Mormon fact of these times, or the more for- gles with the spheres of others; and vice present times. We look upon these, how- would readily track his master, whether the ever, as the great summoning occasions of a latter wore old boots or new ones, in confir-

Mr. Epson did not think we were forced reader, in order to account for the result. Mr. LOVELAND did not agree with the clairsees. He had, furthermore, no doubt that | kins.

the soul of the writer impressed itself upon the autograph; and if Spirits do the reading, there is no need of an autograph.

If there were no occasion for the reading, there would be no reading.

psychometrist, and related a fact concerning friend Wilson's psychometrical delineations, which illustrated the point.

Dr. Felch illustrated Bro. Loveland's position, that the psychometrist feels, and thereby determines the character he is reading, by relating the fact concerning a piece of money and its magnetic qualities in connexion with of the great mass of people to comprehend sensitives. Such determine to whom the money belongs by feeling alone-not by clair-sole cause in the case. parting with his individualities.

"Nothing New."

Dr. J. H. Robinson, in the last Spiritual Telegraph, thus disposes of that assumption erally make their last resort, when all other subterfuges fail-namely, "Spirits communiwith the New York Tribune; and although that allegation is capable of a still further re-eral years, and carried many thousand of columns of matter to various parts of the Union. It has done more real, radical, pracjustly claim the paternity. Gentle spectre, I pause for a response! What has the organ you delight to honor with the playful children of your brain originated, that nobody ever thought of before?

Still he not the Tribute aversiond a street.

The earth is two hundred and fifty thouse. Still, has not the Tribune exercised a strong did Jesus of Nazareth, the most noted of re-formers, teach that was positively new? He proclaimed the fatherhood of God, the brothon the destiny of the world. As a reformer. the majority of Spiritualists receive, believe lieve the churches have the form without the power of godliness-the external code without the inner life and spirit of Christ, written trary to the laws of Nature.

The Tribune has been in operation longer than the marvels of modern Spiritualism, yet it has convinced nobody of the immortality of the soul; Spiritualism has convinced thousands. Horace Greeley (the responsible editor) is a man of genius—as much a Beecher, or a clever shoemaker, blacksmith, or anybody else—but he gives us nothing wonderfully new."

Lectures in Lowell.

The friends of Spiritualism in Lowell are awake to the claims of the cause in that city, and are having lectures every Sunday by a variety of speakers. They have already made arrangements to continue these lectures to the first of January, when they hope to be better able to go forward, possess themselves of a more convenient place of meeting, and give a more substantial character to the movement in their locality. They now hold, and will continue to hold, their meetings in Wells' Hall until the time specified above, three times on Sunday, the afternoon being specially devoted to a free conference, while the morning and evening are occupied in listening to lectures.

MELODEON COMMITTEE. -At a meeting of the contributors to the "Melodeon Fund" meetings held in that place:

J. S. Loveland, Chairman; M. T. Dole,

A. J. Davis's Lectures.

The teacher of the Harmonial Philosophy through the organs of the psychometrist, spoke on Tuesday and Friday evenings of last week in the Music Hall Lecture Room, We reiterated, that the use of an auto- and in the Melodeon on Sunday afternoon graph is to make an occasion for the reading. and evening, Nov. 19th. We were unable to be present at the first two lectures, but a friend has furnished us the following synop-Mr. Crossy thought Spirits helped the sis of that of Friday evening:

Mr. Davis announced as his subject "The extent and import of Nature," and as his text therefor the lines which were by some poet applied to the Bible :-

"Within this sacred volume lies The mystery of mysteries.

the beauties of nature. To them it is a cies of the Spiritual movement, and his remeaningless mass, from which they are to marks were characterized by a geniality and procure their subsistence-nothing more. Mr. LOVELAND did not believe in giving up To others it is God's footstool, very prettily one's individuality, and attributing the whole carpeted and decorated, but only a footstool of Psychometry to Spirits-making them the to the Almighty. To others it is a sort of basement story or cellar-kitchen of God's We replied, that our view of the matter Universe. Some look on its most beautiful did not thus yield the whole to them. It was and sublime scenes without any deep and retrue, that the Spirit World, being the world fined emotions whatever. It was related of of causes, as all admit, became the primary Byron that he was once riding in a stagecause in these readings; but, inasmuch, as coach through a very beautiful tract of the human medium, the autograph, and all | country, the only occupant of the coach beother conditions requisite to the result pro- sides himself being a lady. Occasionally duced, furnished the general occasion for the she would interrupt Byron's deep meditaaction of the primary causes, these also, in tions on the ever-varying beauties which met their turn, became, together, a secondary his eye. At last a line of very beautiful cause to the same end. It is thus that oc- hills came in view, when she said to him, casions form one-though an inferior-ele- "How pretty them bills is, aint they !" ment of all causation; and while this idea "Driver!" exclaimed Byron, putting his remains, the psychometrist has no reason for head out at the window, "stop and let me get out; I'll walk," unable longer to endure it. A New York dandy once visited Ningara Falls. On reaching there he took out his eye-glass and after surveying it a moment said, "An exceedingly foine display; which the opponents of Spiritualism so gen- but, Fwed," turning to his companion, "come away, it makes such a disagweeable cate nothing new." He is dealing especially only emotions produced in the breasts of some by such scenes.

ply, yet this ought to be sufficient to close tions quickened by an intercourse with Nasomething higher and better, and did we The Tribune has been in circulation sev- know how to question it, it would teach us some of the deepest lessons of life. The chemicals of different kinds; to the anatomtical talking than any paper in the country. chemicals of different kinds; to the anatom-Now will the frisky "ghost" editor, who ist it is the teacher of anatomy; the traveland flitteth darkly about the editorial kennel, minded of a canopy formed by guardians for be so very kind and obliging as to inform me, and the world generally, what new principle in Art, Science, or Philosophy it has sent forth to enlighten the world, of which it can neath its shade and listens to the carols of

The earth is two hundred and fifty thousand miles in circumference, yet how few and lasting influence on the minds of men? sand miles in circumference, yet how few would it be too charitable to suppose that it have bestowed much thought upon it. How has been the instrument of positive good to the human family? And yet the Tribune has not made a single grand discovery, not-has not made a single grand discovery and the singl withstanding it has communicated with the Patagonia! The ocean between the Amerworld so many years, and done so much hard | ican coast and Asia is constantly traversed rapping. Is the worth of anything to be now, yet how few had meditated upon the measured by its absolute newness! What vast expanse of water there. What vast expanse of water there.

Mr. D. thought the surface of the earth had formerly been rough, mountainous erhood of man, and insisted on the practical rocks, traversed by strong, impetuous curacknowledgment of the "Golden Rule." Had rents of water, which in washing the stones not Confucius and several other "heathen back and forth, had caused a continual rub-philosophers" taught the same doctrines? expect of departed human spirits, in all essential respects beings like ourselves? Does ture by her own operations produced a great the spectre editor feel inclined to undervalue | portion of her present population of both the ministry of Jesus, because he inculcated | the vegetable and animal kingdoms. For in-I imagine. He is quite aware that that per-sonage has exercised a very great influence primeval forest after its being burned over, it will produce the first year fire-weed; cut in him, and love his pure and peaceable doc- smart-weed; cut it again, and the next year trines. They desire nothing better than the all realization of his prophecies. They be such as no cattle will eat; the next year it will produce a wild oat, and so on, producon the tablets of the mind. Churchmen hope ing every year something more valuable. So they shall have a conscious existence after | with trees. The meanest kind of land prothe death of the body, Spiritualists know duces pines; the next, chestnut, and so on, they shall. Hence most of the latter class up to the more valuable sorts, arriving in decomposition.

> of the million and a half species of the anient organs, as is taught by the popular theology. He said that his first experience as them. a clairvoyant was as if the soul left the body and visited different places. He labored under this mistake some four years before he last Era, needs no reply from me. I am discovered to the contrary. The mind of glad, and so will many others be, to see Bro. each man daguerreotypes itself upon the | S. winding, (to use a sea-phrase,) and I atmosphere, and a person in the clairvoyant state reads, not the mind, but the daguerreotype of the mind. While in that state, the | Those who have read his letters and my clairvoyant saw an entirely different representation over the cities of New York, Boston, London, Paris, Vienna, etc., according | misunderstand my brother, I am glad, for he habitants.

And now the time has arrived when the world of men is brought into nearer communion with the spirit-world than ever before, and their influences are being exercised upon it. It is so in literature, politics, war. The spirits of departed Russian soldiers had held at that Hall on Sunday morning last, informed him that many in their ranks longed the following persons were appointed a Board to leave and fight for the Turks, but dared of Directors to manage the Spiritualists' not. He read an exordium given through harmony is happy, and the opposite unhappearings held in that place:

| Directors to manage the Spiritualists | not. He read an exordium given through harmony is happy, and the opposite unhappearings held in that place: him by a member of the Spiritual Congress before the war commenced, which asserted Secretary; John Wood, William R. Hayden, that Russia would not be successful; her We have thus endeavored to give the ar
Description:

We have thus endeavored to give the ar
Description:

Secretary; John Wood, William R. Hayden,

W. K. Lewis, Abijah Fessenden, John Wil generals would lose their cunning. This was being fulfilled. A great lesson of the war in the east is, that man is beginning to look more at justice, and less at dogmas and creeds; for Christian nations were now allying themselves with Pagan, to fight against Christians, for justice.

Thus, said Mr. Davis, he had endeavored to give some idea of Nature, but how slight were his remarks compared with the subject. He had not entered upon the threshold. How grand the theme! Let us strive to become more capable of studying, comprehending and enjoying her.

We have notes of the Sunday lectures which we have not room to insert in this paper. Both efforts were listened to by Mr. D. first spoke of the entire inability large and intelligent audiences. Mr. D. aimed to exhibit the true nature and tendenvigorous good sense which commended him and his subject to the better feelings of his auditories.

Communications.

Letter from Warren Chase.

The following is the remainder of the comnunication from which we gave the first paragraph last week.

BRO. HEWITT :- I send this short, "pickedup" letter more to inform my friends of my whereabouts, my latitude and longitude, than to instruct or advise; but I must drop in here a specimen of religious fanaticism which I found in my travels, but which the press which circulates so much gossip about Spiritualists, has failed to promulgate. A young man in a small village in Indiana, (Knightstown) not long ago became religious and fanatical to that degree that he declared both his hands had offended, and according to Scripture he must cut them off; but as he could not cut both off himself he would burn them off. For that purpose he thrust them into a hot fire, and before he could be drawn away, actually burned them so as to result in his death soon after. Would not But to him who comes with his percep- this horrible fact (for it is a fact, as any one can ascertain by inquiry in that town) be of the mouths of those who so thoughtlessly use ture, each rose and violet is the symbol of use to our friends of the Olice Branch, and post them up in the character and effect of delusions? Would they not have found out and used this act, if it could have been tree, to the chemist, is composed of so many traced to Spiritualism as its source? The Bible literally followed, leads to some terrible results to fanatics, of which there are loveth to haunt the columns of the Tribune, er who reposes beneath its boughs, is reunrecorded. In fact, I believe I have heard his ease, as he refreshes his weary body be- of a preacher of sectarian religion who left his wife and ran away, or tried to, with a woman some other man legally owned. Wonder if the Olive Branch would find a fact of this character; and if so, if it would do as it does by Spiritualism with such facts?

Now, Bro. Snow, or any others, I am sorry I have hurt your feelings by the severity of my review of Bro. Ballou's article. I cannot, however, for my life, discover wherein I have done injustice to truth or to Spiritualism. I was not mistaken in my belief when I read that article, that it would afford more material for our opponents upon which to slander and abuse us, than any article of its length ever published by friend or foe. It has done so; and hence, as I supposed, it was (however honestly designed) the most deadly stab we have ever had. But it is not fatal; for the healing power is yet sufficient. Many think that he was the "very God," bing of them together, and the effects of this My brother thinks I have some idolatry reyet find not a word of fault because he was the first land. He does not sympathize maining. I have ever been termed Infidel, preached no doctrines entirely new. If a with the idea that God made in six days, in and was not aware of ever having or wor-God could teach nothing higher and nobler its present complete manner, "the earth and shipping any idol. If I do, and my brother ave of a healthy character is saying, that "if the premises were correct, than brotherly love, what can Trinitarians all that therein is," but believes that Na- will name the object of idolatry, I will hand it over to him, and worship outside.

I have recently met Mrs. Thomas, and find her an excellent medium, but teaching such plain and simple truths? Far from it, stance, if a man does not disturb a tract of in my presence no such fears or allusions to "free-loveism" as Brother Ballou referred to; it will produce the first year fire-weed; cut | but both herself and the spirits through her, it down, and the next year it will produce in my presence, teach and believe on this subject as I and Spiritualists generally do. But I did not intend ever to refer to this letter or discussion again, and I do it now merewill produce Timothy grass; the fifth year it | ly to say I have nothing to take back. Yet I deny all hard feelings, all envy or hatred; for I felt nothing but kindness and pity, however severe my expressions might have appeared to some religiously sensitive friends. They often give me hard pills to swallow many of the strange things recorded in the other climates to delicious fruits. This was when they drag into Spiritualism modern or Bible, and believed to be miraculous or congetation imparted to the earth each by their | ings of the human intellect in the Rationalism or Spiritualism of our age. But I en-He passed lightly over the contemplation | deavor to excuse it, and make the proper allowances for education and condition, and mal world, to the most grand, most sublime | never feel offended, nor withdraw my efforts of all things,-nine hundred millions of men or support from the cause or the papers on special instrument of Heaven as Henry Ward and women who at this time inhabit the that account. I should be sorry to see our earth. The speaker was not of the opinion sensitive brethren show less charity for one that the body was created and then the spir- who has ever been skeptical till facts and it fashioned to suit that vessel and its differ- philosophy had reached and converted him. than such an infidel shows and feels for

> One more item, and I have done. The letter of Brother Sunderland to me, in the hope hereafter he will sail with us and with God in Nature, not discreted from Nature. comments will be able to judge of our positions and do justice to us both. If I did to the character and intelligence of the in- has thus been led to set others right, who also misunderstood him as I did. I meant all I said in my letter to Bro. S. of my experience; but as I find and recognize no evil, and in an absolute sense, no high or low, (only relative) and positively no good or bad, and progression only as change, of course I could have no evil communications, but only harmony and inharmony; expressed in extremes by love and hate, which are never evidences of positive good or positive evil. He that dwells in and feels in love and sometimes Heaven and Hell. Still I sup-Now let me pass, brethren, as WARREN CHASE.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 6th, 1854.

