Works on Mental Pathology and Therapeutics.

HYPNOTISM: Its History, Practice and Theory. By J. Milne Bramwell, M.B., C.M. Author of "Hypnotism and Treatment by Suggestion," and numerous articles on the Practice and Theory of Hypnotism. Third and cheaper edition. Med. 8vo, cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

Dr. Milne Bramwell is the acknowledged authority on the phenomena of Hypnosis, and his success in the use of Suggestion as a remedial agent has been instrumental in obtaining recognition of the importance of the subject from the Medical Profession, no less than from the general public in this country. The present work records the results of the researches and experiments of twenty years.

PSYCHO-THERAPY: Its Doctrine and Practice. By Elizabeth Severn, Ph.D. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

Contents.—I. Practical Idealism: The Science and Art of Healing. II. The Study of Consciousness: its Psychological Basis. III. The Causes of Disease: Studies in Mental Pathology. IV. The Rational of Psycho-Therapy: How to Treat Disease. V. Educational Aspects: Development of the Will and Character. VI. Spiritual Significances: The Philosophy of Mind-Cure. VII. Cases illustrating the Mode and Scope of Mind-Cure.

"An intensely interesting book on the power of mind upon the body, and the cure of the body through means of prayer, suggestion and personal contact."—The Tatler.

"That is no ordinary power which works in Dr. Severn's simple processes. . . . She moves far beyond the ordinary range of healing by mind methods into that mystery where God is realized, where the soul passes into the state of silence and has "consciousness of the All-Life."—A. E. Waite in the Occult Review.

THE VITAL BALANCE. By Albert Gresswell, M.A.,M.D., and George Gresswell, M.B. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2*s.* net.

Contents. Preface. Physical Health. Mental Health. Spiritual Health.

This little book is divided into three chapters, in order to illustrate what is necessary for the maintenance of physical, mental, and spiritual health in the true meaning of those terms.

"A pleasantly written health manual, which gathers into a small compass a great deal of instruction as to how to reach and preserve the exact balance of bodily, mental and spiritual health."—The Church Times.

"We strongly advise our readers to secure a copy."—The Medical Times.

HEALTH FOR YOUNG AND OLD: Its Principles and Practice. An Unconventional Manual. By A. T. Schofield, M.D., M.R.C.S. Author of "Elementary Hygiene," "Nervousness," "How to keep Fit," etc. New and cheaper edition. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 272 pp., 2*s.* net.

Summary of Contents.—Part I. The Principles of Hygiene. The Story of Life. Body, Soul and Spirit. How to Preserve Health. How to Keep Young. The Cycle of Life. What to Wear. What to Eat. What to Do.

Part II.—The Practice of Hygiene. On Babies' Health. On Children's Health. Health at School and College. A Man's Health. A Woman's Health. Health in Advanced Life. How to restore Health. Index.

"The sale of a million copies of the book should reduce the death-rate by a visible percentage."—Review of Reviews.

"Few words are needed to recommend Dr. A. T. Schofield's 'Health for Young and Old,' which aims at enforcing the principles that underlie all health questions."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"This book will be valued for its sound commonsense and the absence of anything in the way of gush or padding. It is essentially a volume to have beside one for frequent consultation on matters specially relating to health and hygiene."—Irish Farming World.

weight to a loose trine, say a trine within two or three degrees. We may go further and say that a semi-sextile if exact is equal in value to a loose sextile, but when we come to divide the semi-sextile into half and call it a semi-demi-sextile, and then divide this again into two, it is obvious that the effect is so watered down that in practice one can afford to treat it as negligible. This, however, appears to be the basis of Mr. Wylde's theory, and it seems to us that it has originated in the rather loose way in which astrologers generally have tended to fail to differentiate between a sextile and a trine, or a square and an opposition, and to allow approximately the same orb of influence for either aspect. It seems to us that the extent of the orb is strictly proportionate to the strength of the aspect, and the orb, therefore, of influence of a conjunction or opposition will be considerably more than the orb which may be allowed for a sextile or square. This is surely commonsense, but if we adopt this commonsense standpoint we can hardly take Mr. Wylde's theory seriously. Then, again, in writing of the influence of Neptune, it is astonishing to find that the author makes no allusion to its psychic character. This is about on a par with explaining the influence of Venus without alluding to its effect on the emotions.

One of the most interesting parts of Mr. Wylde's book is the list of horoscopes of celebrities at the end of it, and perhaps the most interesting of all these is that of Nietzsche, which is a very characteristic one. The ascendant is given as 27 degrees Scorpio, the Moon occupying the ascendant and Mars and Mercury the Mid-heaven, Mercury having the close opposition of Uranus from Aries in the Fourth house. The authors quaintly describe the celebrated iconoclastic philosopher as "a German writer of some repute."

Among other interesting horoscopes given are that of Monsieur Poincaré, Sir J. M. Barrie, S. R. Crockett, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and others of equal importance, though more familiar to the average astrologer.

We cannot help thinking it a pity that Mr. Wylde's undoubted abilities should have been side-tracked on to what appears to us such a bootless investigation.

Principles of Tantra

Being an English Translation of the Tantra Tattva of Shrīyukta Shiva Chandra Vidyārnava Bhattāchāryya Mahodaya.

Edited with Commentary by ARTHUR AVALON.

Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Paper covers.

Part I. pp. lxxxi + 393. Price 10/- net.

Containing Introduction by A. Avalon and Chapters on the following subjects: (1) Appearance and Suitability of the Tantra Scripture; (2) What is the Necessity for the Tantras when there is the Veda? (3) The Ephemeral and Modern Monism; (4) On the Gayatri Mantra and Image Worship, (5) Commands of Shāstra, (6) Worship of Devatās, (7, 8) What is Shakti, (9) Shiva and Shakti, (10) Worship of the Five Devatās.

Part II. pp. cxliv + 417. Price 15/- net.

This volume contains Chapters on the following subjects: (11) On Mantra, (12) Lettered and Unlettered Sound, (13, 14) On the Guru, (15) Worship, (16) The Play of Gunas, (17) Outer Worship, (18) Ordinances Relating to Worship, (19, 20) Ceremonial Worship, and is preceded by an Introduction (pp. cxliv) in general explanation of the Tantrik system by Sj. Barada Kānta Majumdār dealing with Vaidik and Tantrik Systems of Spiritual Culture compared.

"The Tantras are probably the worst (books) that Hinduism has produced, for they consist in the main of grossly superstitious rites, charms and diagrams and meaningless syllables said to be instinct with supernatural power, with here and there horrible filth."—International Review of Missions. (J. N. Farquahar).

"The impression created by the missionaries was that the Tantras from end to end were wicked and abominable books, and that those who believed in them were wicked and abominable people."—The Englishman (Calcutta).

"In the Tantras we find the lofty conceptions of earlier and purer beliefs often almost entirely obscured by brainless hocus pocus and debasing and sensual rites."—Athenæum.

"There are still many people who believe that the chief and practically sole subjects of the Tantra are sensual rites and black magic. To them this book will be a revelation. For it will show them that there is still quite a different aspect of the Tantras which is no less prominent for having been altogether neglected so far."—The Theosophist.

THE PATH OF ATTAINMENT. By D. N. Dunlop. Cr. 8vo, pp. 107. London : Path Publishing Co., Oakley House, Bloomsbury Street, W.C. Price 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The Path of Attainment is a comprehensive sketch of that steep ascent which breasts the mountain side and seeks to take the shortest route to the attainment of its goal—realization of oneness with the Divine—a goal aspired to by the Mystic no less than by his more adventurous brother Occultist.

The aim of the Occultist is given as "a process of self-conquest, the giving birth to oneself as a spiritual being, the creation from the concealed essence of one's own embryonic nature of a self-luminous immortal body," and to those who have ears to hear many valuable hints are dropped in relation to that well-guarded secret, the nature and function of the Kundalini. No fear, however, that the veil of mystery that shrouds the Paraclete is to be lightly torn aside by the unprepared : Nature has her own means of guarding her secrets till the time is ripe.

The fact that the three addresses which comprise this work were originally delivered extemporaneously before the H. P. B. Lodge of the Theosophical Society, and have been reprinted from the stenographer's notes with but little revision, speaks well for the author's command of his subject ; for his work is characterized by clear-cut thought, methodical exposition of the theme, originality, and independence—characteristics which go to the making of a little volume which should prove a welcome addition to the library of the occult student. H. J. S.

THE SUPREME QUEST. By J. P. Langham. Cr. 8vo, pp. xi. + 228. London : Joseph Johnson, Holborn Hall, E.C. Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE scope of this little work, which we notice is in its second edition, is admirably planned and carefully worked out, the author's treatment of his theme exhibiting an extensive acquaintance with the literature of the subject. Quotations from writers so far apart as Ruysbroek and T. Lake Harris fit into his scheme of exposition.

His attitude towards the occult, however, is betrayed by his remark that "Occult investigation would bore a tunnel to the heart of the mountain of God, while spiritual religion treads with winged feet the path of spiritual ascent." Although, perhaps, divergence of opinion may arise in this connexion on account of difference of interpretation of the term "Occult investigation," the fact remains that to the mystic the Path is not always to be trodden with "winged feet." Times there are when the feet are weary and bleeding, and all the great souls who have achieved the term of the Supreme Quest testify to the bitterness and pain of the Dark Night of the Soul.

One of the most interesting and suggestive sections of Mr. Langham's treatise is that which deals with mystical substitution, a phenomenon met with in the lives of the great mystics, and which so far has received but scant attention.

Taken altogether we find this little work both helpful and instructive ; for it makes a twofold appeal, the author's discussion of the nature of Mysticism being supplemented by eminently sound advice on the practice of Mystical Religion, which should prove most useful to those who are intent on gaining experimental knowledge of the reality of the Spiritual Life. SONGS OF SUNSET. By Mary Lister Baxter. London: K. Mackenzie, Blythe Road, West Kensington. Pp. 44. Price 1s. 6d. net.

THIS is a little collection of verses written—though not, we are told, constructed by conscious effort—during a serious illness. Without possessing any special technical merits, they breathe a certain fragrant purity which seems to come straight from the mind and soul of the author. "The Everyday Shrine," "The Palace of Delight," "Alchemy," and "The Godmother's Gifts," may be singled out from the rest, and "Farewell to England" will find an echo in the hearts of many who cannot believe that sincere and genuine patriotism is a thing to be banished from the earth as a snare and a delusion. Only he who has first learnt to love his own country can learn to love other countries, too, and the finest patriot of to-day will be the finest world-citizen of the future. E. M. M.

STAMMERING; AND SUCCESSFUL CONTROL IN SPEECH AND ACTION. By Edwin L. Ash, M.D. (Lond.). Author of "Nerves and the Nervous," etc., etc. London: Mills and Boon, Limited, 49 Rupert Street, W. Price 2s. 6d. net.

AT the outset Dr. Ash warns his readers that this is not a medical book, nor concerned with ailments calling for surgical or medical treatment, but is intended to be "A practical guide for the assistance of those unfortunate persons who through weakened control in speech or action suffer the tortures of stammering and the discomforts of various tricks of voice and manner." In some cases stammering may be caused by disease, but in by far the majority of cases it is a bad habit caused by more or less disordered nerves. To such nervous sufferers Dr. Ash's clear and practical advice and suggestions will come as a spring of healing waters in a dry land. Many of the greatest orators and famous speakers have had to overcome the defect of stammering; notably Demosthenes, Charles Darwin, Charles Lamb, Manzoni, Camille Desmoulins, Phillips Brooks, and the late Father Hugh Benson. Peter the Great and Napoleon Bonaparte are among the many distinguished victims of nervous tricks of speech and manner. Dr. Ash urges the importance of routine and discipline in every day things as the best aids for the victims of an excitable nervous system, and the elementary precepts which he lays down—"Write slowly, think slowly, walk slowly, eat slowly," might be followed with advantage by many of us who have been caught in the modern maelstrom of hurry, worry, and flurry. In addition to much wise counsel the author gives a series of exercises applicable to the various defects of speech and manner dealt with in his admirable book. May all good luck go with it!

OUT OF THE MOUTH OF BABES. A Collection of Living Miniatures and Sayings of the Children. Written by James Leith Macbeth Bain. London: Theosophical Publishing Society, 161 New Bond Street, W. Third Edition. Price 1s. net.

THIS is a record of some of the sayings and doings of the children of "The Vegetarian Home," in Liverpool, which began its beneficent work in 1874, through the noble self-devotion of a certain Mrs. Thompson, "A Woman of the People." Its mission is to take children from the slums of Liverpool, and, placing them in an atmosphere of absolute loving-kindness, to allow full and free development of each little soul, otherwise derelict on the iron-bound coast of this life. The children are tended like flowers in a garden, and it is beautiful to read of the unfolding of the spiritual faculties in this unique aura of love and sunshine. Mr. Macbeth Bain paints his "Living Miniatures" with a fervent enthusiasm, born of his intense love for all helpless things. He is "Uncle James" to each little inmate of this earthly paradise. He gives some charming examples of clairvoyance among these little ones, of the "Angels they have seen at night time," even of the "Holy Mother," herself. . . . Is it too much to hope that these beautiful flowers of humanity may be a foreshadowing of the higher evolution of our race, when the tenets of a Christianity which has been preached for two thousand years may be put into universal practice.

EDITH K. HARPER.

WHAT OF OUR DEAD IN THE GREAT WAR? By Richard W. Seaver, M.A., B.D. Second Edition with Foreword by the Rev. Arthur Chambers. London: Charles Taylor, Brooke House, Warwick Lane, E.C. Price 1s. net.

THIS little book affords fresh evidence that the Church is shaking off the drowsy sleep of centuries and opening her eyes to the fact of a life beyond the grave which is not necessarily spent in the playing of harps and the waving of palm branches. We have already had the enlightened works of Archdeacon Wilberforce and of the Reverend Arthur Chambers, each in his own way splendid. The Vicar of Brockenhurst contributes a characteristic Foreword to the book. And though Mr. Seaver does not delve so deeply as does the former, yet it is unutterably refreshing to see the moss-grown dogmas of the old ecclesiasticism being swept boldly aside by a man who thinks. "God is not a God of the dead but of the living." . . . "We have come to understand," says Mr. Seaver, "that after the act of death, the human spirit, in its spiritual body—for we cannot even imagine it formless—leaves the physical body, and passes to a higher plane of existence." His pages are more especially addressed to the ever-increasing number of stricken hearts whose cry is "What of my dead?" Mr. Seaver speaks of the life beyond in much the same terms as does the modern spiritualist in the sense of its being a life of continued progress and development. But why does he assert that we know nothing of its details? Let him inquire but a little farther and he will find that through the Open Door he may see and hear many things.

The contents of Mr. Seaver's book were first given as a series of Lenten addresses during the present year. It is pleasant to note that this is already the second edition, and that the proceeds of the sale are devoted to the work of the Red Cross Society.

SATURN THE REAPER. By Alan Leo. Cr. 8vo. xx+108 pp. London: Modern Astrology Office. Price 1s. net.

THIS is the second of a new popular series of shilling primers dealing with the planets, their characteristics and effects. The first of these, which has already been noticed in the OCCULT REVIEW, treated of "Mars, the War Lord." The present volume deals with Saturn, the Reaper. As the author observes, "it is the natural mission of Mars to project and impel all the latent forces of matter, to push it forward or outward without restraint or hindrance. It is, in a word, what we may term the centrifugal tendency of our universe. The influence of Saturn is exactly the reverse, its whole tendency is what may be termed centripetal, and tends to draw all things back to a centre." In this manner Saturn represents the principle of limitation, whether in time or space, and thus typifies material manifestation, of which this limitation is the cause. Thus again Saturn

PSYCHIC PHILOSOPHY, as the Foundation of a Religion of Natural Causes.

By V. C. DESERTIS. With Introductory Note by Professor ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M., D.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S. New and cheaper edition, cloth gilt, gilt tops, crown 8vo, 421 pp., 3s. 6d. net.

becomes the Time God, corresponding to the Greek Chronos, and symbolizes in this sense all things that are of a lasting or durable character. It enshrines the idea of the Deity in the character of the Great Architect of the universe, and in the same sense rules the character building of the ego. Says Mr. Leo, " In character building we may think of Saturn as the Master Builder using the influence of all the other planets as stones or material for his purpose. . . . Thought, as we know, makes character, for thoughts repeated tend to produce acts, repeated acts become habit, and finally habit makes character. Astrologically we attribute persistent habits to the influence of the planet Saturn." Thus again the Karmic result of character-building becomes manifest as Destiny, and we have the planet Saturn in the rôle of the God of Fate. In the realm of thought, Saturn gives depth and seriousness ; in the realm of action, deliberation and stability. Primarily indeed Saturn is the ruler of the thought that leads to action rather than action itself. From another point of view Saturn rules the products of the earth, and therefore agriculture in especial. In this sense the age of the world, in which all men lived by the cultivation of the soil, becomes in mythology the Saturnian Age. The tracing out of the different meanings of the planets under their varying aspects and modified by their varying environment, in the signs of the zodiac which they occupy, is a very fascinating study, and the different attributes of what astrologers have been taught to regard as the major malefic are admirably described and elucidated in the present primer. It is, in fact, quite one of the best of Mr. Leo's many astrological handbooks. R. S.

A Primer of Higher Space (The Fourth Dimension). By Claude Bragdon. Demy 8vo. Illustrated. $1.25. The Manas Press, Rochester, New York.

In this volume the author has attempted to explain what is meant by the phrase The Fourth Dimension of Space. Our idea of space is, he submits, only partial, and like many other of our ideas needs modification to accommodate it to fuller knowledge. Kelvin felt the pressure of the mathematical reality of higher space so strongly that he declared himself ready to accept it as an explanation of physical phenomena when these could be more consistently explained by such a concept. Kant not only recognized the possibility of the existence in space of more than three dimensions, but he inferred their very probable real existence. Mr. C. W. Leadbeater, well known for his researches in super-physical realms, says, " I can at any rate bear witness that the tesseract, or four dimensionable cube, is a reality, for it is quite a familiar figure on the astral plane." The tesseract or magic cube of four is constructed and illustrated in plate 23 of this work, and is offered as " an inexpugnable illustration, founded upon the properties of number, of an open road for human thought into the fourth dimension," and is described further as " a pearl which anybody is free to examine and admire, but one which only a mathematician can properly appraise." The concluding portion of this suggestive little work is devoted to " Man : a three dimensional projection of a higher space unity," and by reading this carefully the general reader will be able to form an intelligible conception of the meaning of the heavenly or cube body, and its relation to the physical or " square body." The cube is the true individual, of which the square is but a single illusory and inadequate image. P. S. W.

THE NEW SCIENCE OF COLOUR. By BEATRICE IRWIN. Crown 8vo, cloth, with Coloured Frontispiece, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

CONTENTS.—Introduction. Colour Science. The Necessity for a Colour Theatre and College. Colour and Decoration. Colour and Evolution. Modern Science and Colour. Colour as a Medium of Expression. Colour Systems. The Development of the Colour-sense. Therapeutic Powers of Colour. Colour-stimuli and Colour Exercises. The Dawn of the Colour Age.

The author of this work has made a special study of colour values and colour effects, and has arrived at the conclusion that there are increasing signs that colour is destined to become in the near future a new and universal medium of expression, in view of the fact that the race is daily growing more fitted to receive the benefits of its message. The object of the present treatise is to emphasize the growing need for a definite and co-operative study of the various branches of this subject.
