

levels it attained independence and self-containedness under the rule of a single force making for unity. The chief external influence at work upon the philosopher at this time appears to have been Positivism—not so much of the rationalistic type such as is common in England, but rather of the more spiritual German kind. Eucken describes his philosophical task as follows: "To resolve apparently solid and rigid structures into living action, and to understand each particular thing as an outcome of the whole; to awaken and detach some principle that was enclosed, almost buried, in the perceptible action." The chapter in this book entitled "The Growth of My Ideas" is concerned with recording his work along these lines.

An interesting chapter deals with the war from the point of view of a loyal German patriot who does not hesitate to ascribe its incidence to the clumsy methods of German diplomacy and to the policy of King Edward VII in forming alliances against Germany.

The book tells the story of a deep thinker and a prodigious worker. It is stimulating and never dull, despite a somewhat egotistic strain which is almost inevitable in an autobiography.

THE "MELIART" DISH. By J. Allen Pattrieuex, 18 Kings Road, Sedgley Park, Manchester. F'scap. Price 2s. 6d. net.

"A recipe worth a million" is what the author estimates would be the value in money to the people of this country if this dish were partaken of only once a day. The inventor claims that in this dish is offered a meal which, from the point of view of the most recent researches in dietetics, in vitamines content, etc., is perfectly full and well balanced. And not only is it nutritious in the highest degree, but it constitutes a palatable, appetising, and easily digested and assimilated food. The name "meliart" is derived from meli, honey, and artos, bread. The author gives in detail his reasons for selecting the various ingredients, and for using them uncooked. The questions, also, of nutrient values, vitamins, the elimination of uric acid, the effect of the use of drugs, etc., are all carefully gone into, with the result that the principles upon which the author works in the construction of his recipe appear to us to be sound and logical. The ingredients are easily procurable and inexpensive, and the promised benefits from the use of the dish are so alluring that we feel tempted to give these ideas a trial; and we cannot but think that a perusal of the author's pages will effect a similar disposition in the minds of other readers.

THE DEATH OF SUMMER. By June Butler. London: Hodder & Stoughton. Price 1s.

LADY JUNE BUTLER is a young poet, who daintily voices the sadness and April showers of youth, for youth like April smiles through many fleeting tears. If she has faults they are due to the same reason and will pass with experience and practice. In exchange for them we receive all the boon of freshness and unalloyed enthusiasm. Her little nature pictures form the best contributions to the small volume. "Twilight," "A Summer Night," "Dawn," and especially "To the Hills" are expressive of very real emotion, which conquers their irregularities and the occasional choice of a wrong adjective. "Loneliness" and "The Lover's Way" are the most perfect pieces in the collection. Lady June's charm is revealed by a stanza such as this:

"I am longing for the stillness for a while,
I am dreaming of the peace to be alone,
I am singing with the birds towards the sky,
I am calling with the deer to the unknown."

LIFE ETERNAL, PAST—PRESENT—FUTURE. By Barthélemy Prosper Enfantin. Translated by Fred Rothwell. 8½ ins. × 5 ins., pp. viii + 138 + 1 plate. London: The Open Court Publishing Co., 148 Strand, W.C. Price 6s.

ENFANTIN, who lived during the early part of the nineteenth century, was a devoted disciple of Saint-Simon, and after the latter's death was for some time one of the heads of the Saint-Simonite organization. He was a man of tremendous and oft-times rash enthusiasm, always sincere, but frequently ill-advised in his views. A great believer in philanthropy, he devoted himself to the moral and philosophical, rather than the political, side of Saint-Simonism, and the present book now offered to English readers in the form of an abridged translation "represents the fruit of his ripest thoughts on purely philosophical and moral, as apart from political, subjects." Enfantin constantly emphasizes the unity of life. An individual cannot live in a vacuum, and for Enfantin the essential feature of life was the interaction between the individual and his environment. He rejected the idea of personal immortality, but this may have been largely due to the fact that the alternative presented by orthodox theology was the type of vacuous existence, which he found so incredible, in which the individual was totally severed from the environment necessary to his life as such. For Enfantin we live again in our offspring—not necessarily those of our body, but our spiritual offspring, those who revere our ideas and cherish our memory. The occultist will, no doubt, agree with Enfantin's criticism of the Christian concept of heaven, but will urge that Enfantin's rather nebulous alternative is not the only possibility. The book, however, is of value, not only because it provides an interesting chapter in the history of thought, albeit one not in the direct line of development, but also because of the intrinsic merit of many things that Enfantin has to say. The thanks of English reading students are therefore due to Mr. Rothwell for the present convenient edition.

SRI KRISHNA : THE SAVIOUR OF HUMANITY. By Professor T. L. Vaswani. India : Ganesh & Co., Madras. Pp. 84. Price One Rupee.

"In the present circumstances of excitement and transition in India, it is vitally necessary that the Indian people keep a secure hold on the national dharma—the spiritual life." So write the publishers of this book, explaining that the papers in it have been collected in volume form because they point towards a spiritual ideal, and will appeal to large numbers of Indians. They should also appeal to European readers, for, written in admirably simple and well-chosen language, they are full of a real beauty of thought and feeling, and contain many gleams of true wisdom to throw light on the problems of the present day.

"At this hour humanity lies wounded in the house of her own children who have renounced the worship of the Eternal Values and built altars to the gods of 'Nationality,' 'Empire,' 'Race.' . . . At this hour, through the dark spaces of the night, comes the call of the Flute : 'Stand up, Parantapa, do thy Duty !' For the people are in bondage, and men are needed everywhere—men of courage, truth and love—to stand up and rebuild the nations on the reality of the Life Spiritual."

Certainly Professor Vaswani has done his readers, English and Indian alike, a good service in publishing these appealing little studies of the Divine Flute-player, Krishna the Beautiful, whose joyous song was a call to men and women to break the bonds of "evil desires, selfish actions and weak will, and to enter into the life of freedom." He writes so earnestly, and in a spirit of such genuine devotion, that none who read can fail to gain some understanding of the place held by Sri Krishna in the hearts of Indians to-day, or some realization of the truth of his statement that the "Word" that was in Jesus was in Krishna, too. In replying to a critic who had denied the possibility of this, he remarks, very truly:—

"The love of Jesus that ends in the hate of Krishna is not the love that will still the world's sectarian strife. The world's need is the Love that reconciles all races, all scriptures, all religions, all prophets, all peoples—of East and West—in the One Self whose vision is beauty, wisdom, truth."

The influence of the book can only be a good one, and it is to be hoped that it will be widely circulated among those who are seeking to rebuild modern India. "The India of to-day," says Professor Vaswani, "is a world of questions; the India of the past is, I believe, a world of answers to many of these questions." And he prophesies that the people of India will continue to wonder and suffer in doubt and unrest "until they learn like those who made India great in the long ago, to build the Nation with the power of the Ideal." the 'heresies' as they regard them." These words well express the spirit of sweet reasonableness which pervades this collection of essays.

In addition to the Editor, Father Cuthbert, the respective authors are; the Rev. Ronald A. Knok, M.A.; the Rev. C. C. Martindale, S.J., M.A.; the Rev. M. C. D'Arcy, S.J., M.A.; Christopher Dawson, B.A., and E. J. Watkin, M.A. Each one develops some particular aspect of the central Truth, as he sees it, but there is an underlying unity of purpose which makes each essay complementary to the rest.

Spiritualism is pricked with a lance so courteous as to inflict the minimum of pain and discomfort.

There is much enlightenment of popular ignorance in this book, concerning the Catholic doctrines of life after death, of hell, and of purgatory, and the fate of unbaptized infants. The way of life laid down in these inspired pages is one that must lead many souls by green pastures and still waters to the City Beautiful.

I quote Father D'Arcy's fine words ("The Idea of God," page 66):—

"Preach as much as you wish the idleness of speculation, nevertheless the mind of man will never rest in its search for the perfect, the Grail. Finite helpers can satisfy only for a time; they are within their own, and they have no answer to the most profound questionings of the soul. The hierarchy of beauty and goodness visible in the world point beyond themselves to a consummate beauty—the Master and Interpreter of Fate. The universe is too significant to be anonymous, and if it has a meaning and an owner, then all in it, and earth and body and spirit, are protected by, and ensconced within, Infinite care."

A POET'S VISION. Transmitted by Sibyl. London: C. Maurice Dobson, 9 Fortis Green, East Finchley, N. Price 2s.

THIS is yet one more of the many little books which have been published of late purporting to describe conditions of the after life by one who passed over in the war.

The writer describes how "after a terrific explosion" he found himself in strange surroundings. He heard some one speaking to him. "As it was a woman's voice I thought I must be in hospital, and asked if I had been hit. Then came the voice again. 'You have been hit, my friend, but you are not in hospital; you are in the spirit-world and you are far away from the trenches.'"

There is nothing particularly new in these revelations. They agree in the main with other records of a similar nature. Occasionally the poet uses the medium of blank verse. But the prose chapters are more successful.

THE PARLIAMENT OF BIRDS. By Elise Emmons, Author of "Summer Songs Among the Flowers," etc. A. Tones, Bedford Street, Leamington Spa.

MISS ELISE EMMONS, who has set the four seasons of the year in a framework of pleasant rhymes, now follows with a longer effort, a single poem, in which the birds of the air voice their several grievances and complaints, to Man, the King, who does his best to listen sympathetically, and answer suitably, though it is to be feared he falls somewhat short of perfect Franciscan understanding in his replies. In these days of "Futurist" music there is much ground for the nightingale's wonder why people go in crowds to stuffy concert halls when the woodland has such heavenly melody to offer. The cover illustration by Cecil French is quaint and pretty.

Not everybody is drawn to the life of interior prayer, but every one is more or less interested in the trials and difficulties which attend the passage of the pilgrim soul to those realms from which tidings of a great satisfaction echo back to cause the careless wayfarer to pause and wonder whither he is drifting.

In the little work before us the author sketches in clear and attractive language the stages of that journey which ends in union with the divine. Wise counsel and inspiration to further effort on the way from disillusionment, through purgation, to illumination and peace, are offered in place of abstruse discussions on the psychological aspects of the subject; and it is not too much to hope that here and there a heart may be awakened by the divine fire and be drawn to essay the Great Adventure for itself. God speed our author's sincere little treatise.

GRANNIE'S LITTLE STORIES. By Katherine Godefroi. London :
Drane's Danegeld House, Farringdon Street, E.C.

THESE delightful stories, eight in number, will appeal particularly to the youngsters for whom they are intended, for the "moral" in each is so delicately interwoven that it is in no way aggressive, and one never tastes the salutary powder in the jam. In the story of "The Little Boy who was Changed into a Bird" we have the whole life-history of a skylark told with much realism and many vivid scenic touches. Indeed, the author has a keen eye for the beauties of Nature and the charms of an out-of-door life, as well as a subtle insight into the fascinating ways of the animal kingdom. "The Evolution of a Needle" is amusingly told, though it was rather a vindictive little needle, as its concluding reflections show. The story of the Wind is perhaps the best in the book, and no child on reading it should ever again be afraid of the weird whistling of the wind through the keyhole!

EDITH K. HARPER.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF DAY-DREAMS. By Dr. J. Varendonck, with an Introduction by Prof. Dr. S. Freud. 8½ in. × 5½ in., pp. 367. London : George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., Ruskin House, 40 Museum Street, W.C.1. New York : The Macmillan Company. Price 18s. net.

DR. VARENDONCK has written a very detailed and elaborate analysis of his day-dreams, so elaborate, in fact, that many readers, I fear, will find the book tedious. The conclusions at which he arrives are of considerable interest, but, although I find myself largely in sympathy with them, I must confess that the analysis of the day-dreams of one individual seems to me to afford an insufficient basis upon which to generalize. To put it otherwise, I do not think the criticism unjust that the size of the book and the importance of its conclusions are disproportionate to the extent of its data. However, it is to the credit of psycho-analysis in general, and to Dr. Varendonck in particular, that new ground has been opened up and investigation started of another of those aspects of our mental life that the older psychology ignored as beneath its notice.

Day-dreaming, according to Dr. Varendonck, is, in common with other thought-processes, a manifestation of universal energy—energy which is eternal and unceasing in its manifold operations. Day-dreams are near akin to those we experience when we are asleep—they are "thought structures which have been elaborated without the intervention of the will, but under the direction of affective elements" or the wish. To live in the world of day-dreams would be to effect a fatal severance from reality, yet, nevertheless, day-dreaming is not necessarily an abnormal or useless psychic process. Other writers have already indicated its service as "a safety-valve for the abreaction of strong affects." Dr. Varendonck emphasises the part it plays in the inspiration of the artist and scientist. He fully realizes the value and importance of imagination. "Will" and "wish" are not invariably in conflict, though this may be their usual relation, and when conscious thought, will-directed, and foreconscious thought, wish-directed, flow toward the same end, inspiration is the result. Most constructive thinkers will be able to bear out the truth of this from their own experience, and Dr. Varendonck has done good service in turning the searchlight of inquiry on to so important a question as that of the constructive work of foreconscious thought.

THE HAUNTED WOMAN. By David Lindsay. Cr. 8vo, pp. 197.
London: Methuen & Co., Ltd. Price 6s. net.

"THE Haunted Woman" is hardly an adequate title for this novel, the motif of which is something much more original than mere haunting by spooks. Rather is it a story of the fourth dimension, a story of elfin glamour, whereby a normally rather stolid girl undergoes a change of consciousness under the eerie influence of a spell-ridden old house at Steyning, and knows herself for what she is—the soul affinity of an elderly gentleman, a dignified and noble character, and owner of the queer old house. Once away from the magic precincts, however, all memory is lost, except a vague feeling of something strange having occurred. The disappearance of a scarf, the finding of a hairpin, little happenings fraught with great significance, are the only indications of anything abnormal happening. Yet these are perhaps more effective for holding the interest than the strongest hair-raising sensationalism. The atmosphere of enchantment and the skilful interchange of the normal and supernormal states of consciousness, grip the reader, as they do the characters of the novel, in a spell which is not broken until the intensely dramatic climax is attained, which is not until almost the last page. Withal, this story of a secret stairway which leads to another world, a world of spiritual reality rather than human convention, should afford readers no small measure of enjoyment.

the use of such expressions as "enhazed," "enthrill," "the Endless Me," and so on, but there are passages of real beauty, and the sonnets on "The Silver Birch," "The Oaks," and "The Ash" have character and atmosphere.

Here is one of Mrs. Carter's most successful touches :

"Soft the swish
Of carmine fishes, strewing fairy rings
Upon the surface sounds, as all night long
They sing of jewels lost by Eastern kings."

That is the ending of a poem, and it seems as though endings were this writer's strong point, for again at the close of "To Mary of Bethany" she rises to heights unreached in any of the preceding lines. After speaking of Death, Evolution, the World of Matter, and, lastly, the religions taught by the Churches, she asks :

"What matter, then, if they Like war-worn warriors to their slumbers pass?
We shall arise, unscathed, and with a smile holders maintain, there should surely be a very marked diminution of illness in human society by this time. Miss Draper is not, however, the advocate for any special or exclusive method. She is broad-minded enough to realize that different individuals require different treatment—even for similar conditions. She remarks that many “healers” show a tendency to narrow-mindedness, believing that no real good can be done outside their own particular methods, and she holds that “the need of the moment is for . . . co-operation between those on different lines, so that patients may find the treatment really suited to their case without undue experiment or delay.” Miss Draper’s own faith rests primarily upon spiritual methods of healing, whose aim she describes as “the opening up of the lower nature so that it becomes a wider and cleaner channel for the higher life,” but she recognizes that these can often be advantageously combined with, and supplemented by, purely physical means.
Rebuild religion from a blade of grass."

A little book animated by such high ideals and by such “sweet reasonableness”—in regions where reason seems often to be thrown to the winds—may be read with profit by all who are interested in its subject.

audient, able to project his double—who is charming enough to be the subject of his discarnate wife's exquisite benevolence, and yet who walks the earth as one predestined to pay a Karmic debt. Rich and bereaved, he falls in love successively with two girl-mediums who are physically alike, and of whom the former powerfully reminds him of his dead sweetheart. Innocently linked to a shameful tragedy by the unjust human law of reflection, these girls unconsciously bring Biegouny to the beginning of the Path that leads to Nirvana.

KISMET!

The Mechanical Clairvoyant.

In reply to numerous inquiries the above psychological novelty is again on sale, difficulties of getting it manufactured preventing its being put on the market before. Why should readers describe it as "startlingly accurate"? How does it give a scientific reading of your own or friend's character? How does it foresee your health, fortune, friends, profession, marriage partner, destiny, coming events? Why will it answer any question, practically—speculation, games of chance, national and political events, etc.? Psychic temperament unnecessary. Anyone can get results. It consists of a zodiacal wheel with nine balls as symbols of the planets, and is the invention of a student of twenty-five years' experience of astrology. It may also be used as a game, for any number of players, thus combining amusement with instruction. For horoscope casting it is particularly useful, no knowledge of astrology being necessary. HEALTHY BREATHING. By Eustace Miles, M.A., formerly Scholar of King's College and Tripos (Honours), Coach and Lecturer at Cambridge University, etc., etc. London: Methuen & Co., Ltd., 36 Essex Street, W.C. Price 7s. 6d. net.

THIS book might almost have been called The Spiritual Significance of Breathing, for Mr. Eustace Miles reiterates in his well-known masterly and emphatic way the vital fact, overlooked by so many people, that the aim of breathing is not merely to take in oxygen and send out carbonic acid, but also to absorb spiritual energy, that mysterious unseen life-force known to the Hindus as "Prâna." To quote the author:

"It is now generally admitted that everything is vibrating, and that everything is full of energy. Ether is everywhere. When we inhale air, we inhale not only oxygen, but also energy, vitality. How much vitality we inhale and assimilate will depend largely on our mental attitude and on other factors; but we can inhale and assimilate a vast amount of it in the course of a day or two, if we inhale rightly."

The habit of correct breathing in all its aspects, and for divers purposes, is elaborately detailed in many chapters, so clear and concise that a child might understand them. They deal, respectively, amongst other points, with breathing in relation to the Control of the Circulation, Relaxation and Repose, Good Sleep, Real Health, Endurance, Happiness, Prayer and Self-Suggestion, Refinement, Self-Mastery and Character, Personal Appearance and Influence, Voice Production, and—very important—Memory.

Mr. Miles explains that his aim is not to advocate a mere system of wearisome breathing exercises, which few have the time or patience to carry out, and which in many cases are of little use, and often even harmful, but he strenuously insists on the formation of a habit of deep and full breathing on the one hand, and of its practice on the other, until it become automatic, or, in the old-fashioned phrase, "second nature."

Some common mistakes are dealt with, some popular fallacies exposed and objections answered, while A Few Warnings conclude a book that many will find interesting reading, quite apart from its highly comprehensive and instructive character.

EDITH K. HARPER.

THE BOWL OF SAKI (3s., and leather 7s. 6d.), and THE MESSAGE (1s.). W. H. Smith & Son, 94 Above Bar, Southampton.

"THE Bowl of Saki" is a book of thoughts for daily contemplation, set down by one of his pupils from "The Sayings and Teachings of Pir O. Murshid, Inayat Khan," whilst "The Message" incorporates the verbatim report of two lectures delivered by the same Sufi teacher. Sufism is the pearl of Mohammedanism, it is the inner esoteric wisdom which Mohammed taught to his own son and his chosen disciples whilst giving the outer code of ethics and conduct to the masses in the Koran, precisely as the Rabbis employed the Kabbalah and the Talmud. The underlying mysticism of Persian and Arabic poets from Hafiz to Al-Ghazzali is Sufi in character and conception. Indian poets, like the Princess Zeb-Un-Nissa, are tinged by the same exalted school of thought.

Inayat Khan expresses this philosophy with eminent success and is even more the universalist owing to his modern facilities for travel and interchange of cosmopolitan thought, than his more restricted antecedents. There are many beautiful aphorisms in this Bowl of Jamshyd and Khayyâm and, even when not original, they are benign and beneficial.

REGINA MIRIAM BLOCH.

IT IS WRITTEN. By Lilian Bamburg. London : Erskine Macdonald, Ltd. Pp. 328. Price 7s. 6d. net.

IF this be a "first effort" it is rich with promise of a successful career. The author imagines that the spirits of a Grecian courtesan and the lover who murdered her were both reincarnated in female form in the England of to-day. The former, after misery in the uncongenial occupation of a hospital nurse, becomes, to use a metaphor very familiar to Sir Eric Geddes, the "Axe" of a music hall's economy. The latter becomes the star among "male impersonators," and earns the reputation of a selfish squanderer. Nevertheless, the attraction felt by the conscientious business woman for the fast and foul-mouthed impersonator is irresistible. It dwarfs all her other interests and strangely glorifies her death.

Evidence of inexpertness is not absent from the novel, but it has the sovereign virtue of readableness. Its local colour and vivid idiomatic dialogue suggest considerable acquaintance with the life described.

GHOSTS AND LEGENDS OF SOUTH SOMERSET. By G. F. Munford, Editor of the Western Gazette. London : Somerset Folk Press. Pp. 95 + portrait of the author. Price, post paid, 1s. 8d.

FIVE legends and a "sketch" of "Joanna Southcottism," at Crewkerne, are offered in this third number of "The Somerset Folk Series." Although such "clichés" of phraseology as "a thousand thoughts whirled through my brain with lightning speed" are prejudicial to the charm of folk stories, Mr. Munford deserves thanks for bringing together examples of the phenomenal influence of the past on certain localities. In one story a tragic smuggling episode provides a district with ghosts of horses as another place he gives it as his opinion that poets "are more closely in touch with the spirit of grimalkin . . . than either prose writers or painters. They should be, because poets are mystics, at least the great poets . . . and faith is needed to comprehend the cat, to understand that one can never completely comprehend the cat."

The chapter on "The Cat and the Occult" will be of special interest to readers of this review, who will find an OCCULT REVIEW article quoted in its first paragraph. Mr. van Vechten has gathered together an amazing amount of cat-lore in connexion with occult subjects. It will be a revelation to many to discover what fiendishly cruel treatment has been the portion of cats in the past, on account of their supposed connexion with sorcery and witchcraft. "We have forgotten the dark days, but the cat remembers," says Mr. van Vechten. "She will never forget her wild rides with witches, her appearances at the Sabbath, the use of her body as a casket for the soul of the sorceress, her persecution. And to-day, for that reason, she is more in touch with what we call the supernatural than any other animal, including man." After reading of these mediæval horrors, it is consoling to find, in the chapter on "The Cat and the Law," particulars of an ancient Welsh law of the tenth century, which declared that the value of a common cat was equal to that of a sheep or a goat, and that if a man and his wife should separate, "the goods and chattels were to be divided, but the husband took the cat if there was but one." Evidently puss was a rare beast in those days!

The book is a storehouse of quaint and fascinating information concerning this creature whom the Egyptians worshipped, and whom the Japanese speak of as "the tiger who eats from the hand"; and the illustrations are as attractive as the text. Judging from her photographs, the author's own cat, Feathers, is an enchanting person, and probably to her as much as to her owner—though, as Mr. van Vechten sagely remarks, "of course, no one ever really owned a cat"—our thanks are due for a truly delightful volume. pitfalls, and though one cannot but admire his command of a tongue not his own, the frequency with which he makes use of worn-out clichés and extremely commonplace expressions is a grave flaw in work which might otherwise be interesting. The rhythm, too, is often faulty, and Mr Thadani's ear does not seem to be awake to the subtleties of the music of the English language. He is at his best in poems such as that called "Indra's Nymphs":

"Thou art lord of the earth, thou art lord of the heaven;
Of the wind and the waters, and the glory of seven
Great centres of light is all to thee given:
Thou makest, thou takest;
Thou bindest, thou breakest;
Thou shapest, thou shakest—
O Indra, our lord, whose shadow we live in."

In "Home," "A Reverie," and "Radka and Krishna," also, the author shows that he has imagination and poetical thoughts, though he cannot, unfortunately, succeed in fully expressing them when handicapped by the difficulties of a foreign language. E. M. M.

ON LECTURING AND LECTURE ORGANIZATION. By Clara M. Codd.
London: Theosophical Publishing House. Pp. 62. Price 2s. net.

ALL who aspire to become lecturers and public speakers would be well advised to study this sincere and helpful little book. Though written primarily for Theosophical lecturers, it contains much sound advice of a general nature, drawn from the experience of one who, by her own confession, tried and failed, not once, but many times, before attaining her present position of one of the best-known and most popular speakers in the Theosophical Society.

Miss Codd does not believe in the time-honoured advice to imagine that the audience is a row of cabbages, so often given to those afflicted by nervousness. "Do nothing of the sort," she says. "Realize that the audience is a number of human beings very like yourself. . . . Do not be afraid of them. You have something to give them; give it with all your heart." And certainly her view has much to be said for it, being more reasonable as well as more altruistic than the "cabbages" idea.

Mrs. Besant contributes a short preface, every word of which is well deserved by the author of a book whose sphere of usefulness will be large in comparison with its modest size.

JUDAS : A TRAGEDY IN THREE ACTS. By Claude Houghton. London : C. W. Daniel, Ltd. Pp. 128. 3s. 6d. net.

It is customary to regard the latter end of Judas as a tragedy of money-lust defeated by remorse. It has occurred to Mr. Houghton to give the infamous disciple the grandeur of one catastrophically failing in attempting to force Jesus militantly to display his divinity. A very different Judas this from Longfellow's traitor who never knew "the love of woman." Mr. Houghton's Judas spurns an amorousness sublimely defiant of opposition; he is an aristocrat of thought, and that Gethsemane kiss of his which has enraged Christendom for far more than a thousand years was not a horrible insult to Love, but a move in a plan for establishing Christ's Kingdom on earth.

Mr. Houghton's tragedy is "for a People's Theatre," but he has not disciplined his eloquence to conform with modern dramatic art. He is in fact more a poet than a playwright, and not being able to resist the music of words doesn't secure for such rhetoric as "No heart can hold my hell" the value belonging to words which are as inevitable as sparks from the scratch of flint on steel. Still, something more than merely a polite reception is due to a drama which is, like this, both readable and quotable and helpful to just and charitable views about human actions.

W. H. CHESSON.

A NEW GOSPEL TO ALL PEOPLES. The Revelation of God uniting Physiology and the Religions of Man, first delivered to the Bishops in Session at Lambeth, 1920, through Marie Carmichael Stopes, D.Sc., Ph.D. 7½ ins. × 5¼ ins.; pp. 27. London : Arthur L. Humphreys, 187 Piccadilly, W.1. 2s. 6d. net.

THIS is a remarkable work by a remarkable woman. Dr. Stopes in her Preface disclaims authorship for its words; they were given to her, she says, in June, 1920, by way of revelation, with instructions to transmit them to the Anglican bishops then assembled in conference. This was done with as little loss of time as possible; and the book is now issued to the public, because Dr. Stopes believes that it contains a message for all peoples of all religions. Whether this message be regarded as emanating from an external intelligence or from the subconsciousness of Dr. Stopes herself, the book is no less significant. It is its contents rather than its mode of origin that is of importance. Dr. Stopes has specialized in a branch of scientific inquiry of the very greatest moment, dealing as it does with the most intimate and vital of all human relationships. Through science, she rightly points out, God reveals his mysteries to man, but the Church has failed to avail itself of this newer revelation and continues to base its doctrines concerning the relation of the sexes on the very incomplete knowledge of these relations which alone was possible two thousand years ago. To bring this revelation within the reach of all is the self-appointed task of Dr. Stopes. She is well equipped therefor, and her work is in every way admirable. The only pity is, seeing the importance of this little book and the number of minds it might urge to further inquiry, that the publishers have not seen fit to issue it at a price more in proportion to the number of its pages. The confirmation it contains of certain occult doctrine (I have Swedenborg's teaching particularly in mind) is especially interesting.

THE FALLACIES OF SPIRITUALISM. A Survey of Recent Claims and Pretensions. By A. Leonard Summers. London: 69 Great Russell Street, W.C.1. 2s. 6d. net.

LIKE so many books of its kind which set out to be an open-minded examination of the claims of Spiritualism, this little work conveys to the mind of the reader that its author really had a preconceived bias against the subject. Granted such bias against any subject it is often easy enough to array points that tell against it. Fraud and trickery should of course be exposed wherever they are found, and unfortunately it does not always follow that mediumship implies also the "Gifts of the Spirit." Weak-mindedness and fanaticism have played havoc with religious devotees to a much greater extent than Spiritualism has done with its followers, as statistics published by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle have testified. The author, by the way, quotes Professor Robertson, of the Royal Edinburgh Medical Hospital, as saying, in effect, that neither Sir Arthur Conan Doyle nor Sir Oliver Lodge are safe judges on this "difficult and important subject," in consequence of their own bereavement, but this is surely a haphazard remark, as both these eminent men had openly expressed their firm conviction of the truth of intercommunication before the loss of their sons. On the other hand, the late W. T. Stead stated that he had found Spiritualism stand the fiery test of a great bereavement.

As an ardent investigator, the late Sir William Vavasour, wrote :

"The careful student of Spiritism soon discovers that he is himself an actual part of the ordained earth and spirit phases of the universe, and all he can conclude is that he has to accept his place in that embodiment, and follow its organized course."

Psychical Research is the youngest of the sciences, and its cumulative array of evidence based on facts far outweighs the hostile criticism of its opponents, who invariably fall back upon the old mantra : "Fraud and Credulity !"

YOU AND THE UNIVERSE : A Book of Numbers. By Ernest C. Wilson,
San Diego, Cal. : The Harmonial Publishers. Pp. 196.

"To the practical mind which is largely concerned with results, the most remarkable feature of name and number analysis is that it works!" This statement of Mr. Wilson's may meet with a good deal of scepticism, but those of his readers who are sufficiently interested to experiment, as he suggests, with their own names and those of their friends, are likely to admit that it does "work," to an extent that is at least suggestive and conducive to further investigation. His chapters on the different numbers and their correspondences in sound, colour, health, vocational fitness, etc., are extremely interesting, and are characterized by a lucidity of expression that should make his book popular among all who feel drawn to take up the fascinating study of numbers and their hidden meanings.

TWENTY ELEMENTAL SONGS. Pp. 30. Price 2s. 8d., post paid, from Leo French, Lamorna, near Penzance.

READERS of the OCCULT REVIEW know Mr. Leo French's lyrical voice, and will sympathize with a poet who utters pathetic truth in such a stanza as this, in which the heavy third line aptly suggests a catastrophe of evil gravitation :—

"Some birds there are whose wings are broken in flight,
Yet are enamoured of the infinite;
Singers there are, fall'n from celestial choir,
Whose lips yet burn and thrill from altar-fire."

Although Mr. French derives musically somewhat from Blake and Shelley, one feels that he is urged into song by a genuine consciousness of super-terrestrial beauty and vitality. May my confrère's poetry attract to him the friendship of those wonderful beings of whom he would be the mouthpiece.

THE REASON OF THE BEGINNING AND OTHER IMAGININGS. By Nesta Sawyer. 6½ ins. × 4½ ins., pp. viii. × 136. London : John M. Watkins, 21 Cecil Court, Charing Cross Road, W.C.2. 3s. 6d.

THIS is a book of twenty-seven little parables and sketches, suffused by a spirit of gentle mysticism and breathing something of the good pagan consciousness of and joy in the unity of all life and much of the good pagan love of beauty. Miss Sawyer seeks (and let it be added, finds) beauty everywhere, even on winter days and in London streets, though her spiritual home is with nature untouched and unimproved by man. Her book is one to enjoy rather than to criticize. But I do not mean to let her off entirely. At times I find her both too sentimental and too nebulous. "Mist," for example, is sheer sentiment, untrue to life. On the other hand "Aspiration" is, to my mind, a clear cut gem, a little poem in prose of the birth of aspiration in the mind of a child. I also much enjoyed "A Legend," but surely the inference is wrong, though the words seem plain enough, that Miss Sawyer smokes a pipe! Many, others of the sketches have considerable charm—"Fairylands," perhaps, may be singled out for special mention. But I do not think that Fairylands are quite so easy for us dull-eyed mortals to find as Miss Sawyer asserts; and it is just because she guides us towards them—because she helps us to open our eyes—that we should thank her for her book.

LIFE AND ORGANIZATION: A PRACTICAL PHILOSOPHY. Glasgow: Scottish New Church Association, 229 Woodlands Rd. Price 6d.

THIS extremely interesting booklet contains four lectures delivered in Glasgow during the last year, by different speakers, under the following titles: "Life and Its Origin," "Organization in Nature," "Man and Motive," and "The Ideal Form of Society and the League of Nations." It is obviously impossible to summarize such subjects in the space of a short review, but each receives thoughtful and suggestive treatment, and all who feel in any way attracted to the Swedenborgian philosophy as applied to present-day problems will be well rewarded by expending the modest sum of sixpence upon a copy of this pamphlet.

tions. In future, they may (in reply) be referred to this book, which—whatever its demerits—never descends to triviality. On the other hand, the book, partly on account of this very fact and partly because the author deliberately suppresses all personal details concerning its production, is completely devoid of evidential value. It must be read as a contribution to philosophic speculation and judged on its merits as such. It is always interesting and frequently suggestive, but it suffers from the disadvantage of being presented positively rather than logically, and the author is certainly not justified in claiming for it any super-human degree of profundity. "It will be realized," he writes, "that no mere human mind could have formulated this scheme of philosophy. Its utter variance from all other existing systems is sufficient proof of its being a revelation." As a matter of fact, there is much in the book reminiscent of Swedenborg, especially as concerns his doctrine of influx. The correlative doctrines of degrees and correspondences are not, however, utilized; for, although we read of four planes of being in the ascending scale of man's becoming—namely the inner earth (or astral) plane, and the planes of inner being, individuality and identity—these would all appear to be quasi-material, since the abode of those spirits (or angels) who have attained to the highest of these states is placed in the Sun, and they would therefore appear still to be bound by the limitations of time and space. The central doctrine of the book is that of the unity of Life (Chapter I on this topic is excellent). The Infinite Self-conscious Life is a dual-unity (male and female) and transcends the concept of personality. Knowledge implies distinction, and this necessitates differentiation. Man is born that the Infinite Life may be enriched by experience—he is differentiated therefrom as to consciousness, but not as to life itself. His end is re-integration as distinguished from absorption. Evil is necessary for the existence of good: it can never be abolished, but is restricted to the phenomenal world. Such in brief are some of the leading ideas of this significant book. I may add that the ethical doctrines which might be drawn and the sociological ones that the author does actually draw from the theory of evil put forward seem alike deplorable.

HYPNOTISM.

10,000 Free Propaganda Books by the RAYMONT INSTITUTE.

WOULD you care to know the truth about this subject? Would you like to progress as much in a few weeks as it takes the cleverest of men and women to do in as many years? Would you like to acquire this mental power, which enables you to do with ease all that you now desire, but cannot accomplish? Would you like to see all your ambitions realized? In simple fairness to yourself you ought to do so. Mental Power will soon be taught universally, because it is indispensable to all who mean to progress, for, shorn of all exaggeration, Hypnotism is the greatest and strangest power on earth; and for the first time on record an opportunity is given you to acquire it.

A power which enables you to develop any specially desired capacity, to improve your memory; a power which enables you to acquire an iron will and an irresistible force of personality, and which allows you to master weaknesses, temper, or faulty inclinations, is worth acquiring, and that power becomes all the more important when you realize that in your dealings with others it makes you the "Upper Dog." Mental and Hypnotic knowledge means the absolute certainty to be able to gain a place of command.

There are entertaining and curative possibilities in Hypnotism which makes one gasp with surprise, and there are miraculous and incredible experiments, whilst there are ways of applying Hypnotic influences which completely baffle the uninitiated observer.

THE MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

We have published a booklet dealing fully with the whole subject in a concise and unbiased manner, and for propaganda purposes shall be pleased to send you a copy absolutely free of charge if you apply before the edition becomes exhausted. Those who can afford, and wish to do so, may enclose 3d. stamps for postage, etc., or simply mention that you are a reader of THE OCCULT REVIEW, and address your letter to

Planetary Influence

No one who takes the trouble to study and observe over a number of years the influence of the Sun, Moon, and Planets, upon human beings, can seriously question the truth of astrology, as modified and adapted to suit the existing state of humanity.

The position of the Sun, Moon, and Planets at birth, undoubtedly indicates the harmonious and discordant tendencies in the character, and how they may affect the life.

To the extent that we are able to overcome the discordant or unfavourable tendencies we can, to a large extent, make our own destiny.

Surania wishes it to be clearly understood that he does not pretend or profess to tell fortunes; he believes that Character makes Destiny, and that by KNOWLEDGE and WILL, we may rule our stars through our own inherent character.

Complete Study of Character and Temperament, 2 guineas.

WORKS BY
HENRY THOMAS HAMBLIN

WITHIN YOU IS THE POWER.

3rd Edition. Twentieth Thousand. Nearly 10,000 of these books have been sold through the post alone. This little book tells of the inward power by which man can rise to higher achievement, attain self-mastery, and realize in its fulness the joy of living.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT.

3rd Edition. Twentieth Thousand. The art and science of applied right-thinking in a nutshell. Very useful for propaganda.

THE DIVINE IMMANENCE, or THE MESSAGE OF A FLOWER.

2nd Edition. Tenth Thousand. These essays have opened up a new world of beauty and understanding to thousands.

The price of each of the above books is 1s. net, post free from the Author and Publisher, or through Messrs. Fowler, Imperial Arcade, Ludgate Circus, E.C., "The Rally," 39 Maddox Street, W., or any other bookseller. (Trade agents: Messrs. Simpkin Marshall.)

The Editor of "Now," speaking of the above three books, says: "No New Thought or Divine Science books ever written surpass these books in breadth, depth and understanding of The Law."

READERS' OPINIONS.

"I would like to add my thanks to those of many others and say how deeply grateful I am for your teaching on 'Science of Thought.' It is showing me the way to health and happiness: at one time I thought that happiness could never again be mine. Your writings are showing me that life is what one makes it, and am proving every day that this is so, and, instead of a dreary, tiresome round, life is growing brighter and fuller each day."

"All my life I shall be thankful for the day on which I received from you that illuminating little book 'Within You is the Power.' Every day now I find a newness and freshness and beauty in everything and everybody about me, consequent on my altered outlook and the controlling of my thoughts."

Some Press Opinions of the First Edition.

"It is the most complete record of the various forms these talismans have taken; and for a collection of the objects of which it treats it should prove most useful. Not only do the authors give a series of very clear descriptions, but there are also many excellent illustrations of the various talismans of pre-historic, classic and mediæval peoples. . . . The work, from whatever point of view it is approached, is certain to entertain."—The Outlook.

"A book of deep interest to the occultist."—T.P.'s Weekly.

"A very complete and exhaustive study on a most interesting subject, the result of many years' study of ancient and modern occultism. This authoritative and reliable book is an extremely valuable addition to our reference bookshelves."—Lady's Pictorial.

"The archæological part of the book especially is of great interest. A good index facilitates reference to the book."—The Times.

"A very complete and accurate account of a subject which in recent years has been attracting fresh attention."—The Queen.

KISMET!

The Mechanical Clairvoyant.

In reply to numerous inquiries the above psychological novelty is again on sale, difficulties of getting it manufactured preventing its being put on the market before. Why should readers describe it as "startlingly accurate"? How does it give a scientific reading of your own or friend's character? How does it foresee your health, fortune, friends, profession, marriage partner, destiny, coming events? Why will it answer any question, practically—speculation, games of chance, national and political events, etc.? Psychic temperament unnecessary. Anyone can get results. It consists of a zodiacal wheel with nine balls as symbols of the planets, and is the invention of a student of twenty-five years' experience of astrology. It may also be used as a game, for any number of players, thus combining amusement with instruction. For horoscope casting it is particularly useful, no knowledge of astrology being necessary. Send to-day for this little wizard, 6s. 6d. post free; 8s. abroad.

Planetary Influence

Do you realize that your SUCCESS or FAILURE in life depends, largely, upon your attitude towards yourself and the things in the world, and even towards the world collectively?

The favourable and unfavourable tendencies in your Character and Temperament that combine to form that attitude are indicated by the position of the Sun, Moon and Planets, at the moment of birth.

By optimistically constructive thought you can counteract the effect of the unfavourable tendencies and thus alter your attitude towards yourself and life generally so that you will fail to respond to unfavourable planetary vibrations.

Character is Destiny

Given the KNOWLEDGE of the particular tendencies in your own character that make for Success or Failure, and the WILL to overcome the unfavourable characteristics, within reasonable limits, your Destiny is in your own hands.

That the Sun, Moon and Planets as posited at birth do indicate the Character and Temperament, and trend of life generally, can be proved by anyone willing to actually study and examine thoroughly the art of astrology, as adapted to modern civilization; and to observe over a number of years the influence of the celestial bodies upon human beings, considered in relation to their sign position in the zodiac.

Astrological Studies of the Character and Temperament, and possibilities of life generally,
1 & 2 guineas.

State : Date, Time, and Place of Birth ; Sex ; Married or Single.

SURANIA wishes it to be clearly understood that he does not pretend or profess to tell your fortune ; believing that Character makes Destiny, he will point out the tendencies in your character according to the best practice of modern Astrology, and show you how they may affect your life.

Are you Satisfied with Your Life?

Have the dreams of your youth come true? Are you the man or the woman you once hoped to be? Are your achievements, your circumstances, and your position in life what you once expected them to be? You may be what is called successful, but are you happy, healthy and full of the joy of living? Are you getting the best out of life? Have you reached the real, true, abundant life of joy, peace and inner satisfaction, that, intuitively, you know is possible or ought to be possible? If not, you should read

WITHIN YOU IS THE POWER

20th Thousand.

This book has brought joy, hope, peace, happiness and inward satisfaction to thousands. Those who had given up all hope, have found, within its pages, that which has restored to them the joy of living: brought a zest to their life which they never possessed before, and a peace of mind which nothing can ever destroy. This book is not a religious book, yet it has brought happiness and content to thousands who had lost all joy and hope in religion.

"I have appreciated your books more than I have ever before appreciated anything. I have been longing, hungering for some such teaching all my life, but always there has been none to help or to understand."

"I could never, before, discover a 'reasonable' path to a spiritual understanding. The above author compels one, by force of reason, to sense a loftier plane."

SUCCESS

AND HOW WON THROUGH AFFIRMATION.

A BOOK for daily companionship. One to be carried in the pocket for meditation in hours of leisure. Of his other books many have written that they so carry and use them. This is a fitting continuation of "How to Control Fate" and "Concentration." One friend said of it: "A grown-up edition of 'Dollars Want Me'!"

Here are titles of its sections. Is it not a promising list?

SECT. I. Faith in Self.—2. The Ideal.—3. What is My Ideal?—4. I Can!—5. Health.—6. Do Right.—7. Reputation.—8. Dare and Do!—9. Hold Fast, and Let Go.—10. Silence.—11. The Dollar Side.—12. The Test.—13. Purpose of Life.—14. Résumé.

Interspersed between the sections are valuable quotations from many sources suitable for memorising and meditation.

Do you realize that your SUCCESS or FAILURE in life depends, largely, upon your attitude towards yourself and the things in the world, and even towards the world collectively?

The favourable and unfavourable tendencies in your Character and Temperament that combine to form that attitude are indicated by the position of the Sun, Moon and Planets, at the moment of birth.

By optimistically constructive thought you can counteract the effect of the unfavourable tendencies and thus alter your attitude towards yourself and life generally so that you will fail to respond to unfavourable planetary vibrations.

Character is Destiny

Given the KNOWLEDGE of the particular tendencies in your own character that make for Success or Failure, and the WILL to overcome the unfavourable characteristics, within reasonable limits, your Destiny is in your own hands.

That the Sun, Moon and Planets as posited at birth do indicate the Character and Temperament, and trend of life generally, can be proved by anyone willing to actually study and examine thoroughly the art of astrology, as adapted to modern civilization; and to observe over a number of years the influence of the celestial bodies upon human beings, considered in relation to their sign position in the zodiac.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT

Every thought that you think is a stone in the edifice of your future. Your life is built of your thoughts. You are attracting to yourself either happiness or misery, health or ill-health, success or failure, prosperity or poverty, by the thoughts that you think. There are thoughts which build up and thoughts that break down the life, the health, the character. Which thoughts are you indulging in ? Your life is in your own hands. By thought-control you can govern your life, for your thought-life is the "cause" and your outer life is but the "effect." Health, success, happiness, achievement and peace of mind are possible to all who will govern their thoughts and live in harmony with Cosmic purpose.

Nearly 10,000 copies of this book, "The Power of Thought," have been sold in a few months through the post alone. A well-known author writes : "I have read your 'Power of Thought' ; it is an inspiration ! "

DEATH AND ITS MYSTERY:

Before Death. Proofs of the Existence of the Soul.

By CAMILLE FLAMMARION. Cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

To be followed at short intervals by

DEATH AND ITS MYSTERY: At Death.

DEATH AND ITS MYSTERY: After Death.

"Death and its Mystery" is devoted to the setting forth of proof that "man is not merely an animal organism endowed with material sense, but also a psychic being endowed with qualities altogether different from those of the animal organism; that there is in him something else than that which can be seen, touched and weighed—an element independent of the senses, a personal principle that thinks, wills, and acts."

The proof of the existence of the soul independent of the body involves treatment of intuitions, divinations, seeing without eyes, hearing without ears, telepathy, auto-suggestion, hypnotism, etc.

The Evolution of Consciousness.

By A. WYATT TILBY. Cloth, 15s. net.

This book is a serious and very able contribution to the study of the development of mental processes from the dawn of consciousness through the senses to the more abstract conception of deity. The author discusses the order and relationship of the sense, the will to live, the intellectual and emotional results of sexual differentiation, the categories of thought, the interdependence of society and the individual and so on from the point of view of the growth of the more intricate and wider implications from simpler and utilitarian ones.

Psychopathology of Everyday Life.

By Professor SIGMUND FREUD, LL.D. Authorised English Edition, with an Introduction by A. A. Brill, Ph.D., M.D. (Seventh Impression.) Cloth 12s. 6d. net.

"The book is extraordinarily interesting and full of hints for the study of human nature."—Nature.

Instincts of the Herd in Peace and War.

By W. TROTTER. Revised and Enlarged. (Sixth Impression.) Cloth. 8s. 6d. net.

"An exceedingly original essay on individual and social psychology."—New Statesman.

"It is a balanced and inspiring study of one of the prime factors of human advance."—Times.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT

"You are the architect of your own life ; it is yours to make or to mar ; by the power of thought you are building your future ; are you building it aright ? "

Every thought that you think is a stone in the edifice of your future. Your life is built of your thoughts. You are attracting to yourself either happiness or misery, health or ill-health, success or failure, prosperity or poverty, by the thoughts that you think. There are thoughts which build up and thoughts that break down the life, the health, the character. Which thoughts are you indulging in ? Your life is in your own hands. By thought-control you can govern your life, for your thought-life is the "cause" and your outer life is but the "effect." Health, success, happiness, achievement and peace of mind are possible to all who will govern their thoughts and live in harmony with Cosmic purpose.

Nearly 10,000 copies of this book, "The Power of Thought," have been sold in a few months through the post alone. A well-known author writes : "I have read your 'Power of Thought' ; it is an inspiration ! "

POWER to overcome

There is in man a tremendous and potent power. Through ignorance of the inner laws of life and being, man misuses this power and produces evil, which may manifest either as disease, sickness, unhappiness, failure or poverty. This power, which is spiritual and mental and not hypnotic, is infinitely good, but through being diverted into wrong channels, produces evil and negative conditions.

WITHIN YOU IS THE POWER is a book with a message. A well known author, who recently came in touch with it, describes it as: "One of the trumpet-calls of progressive and unfolding Truth." This book is the herald of a new age: an age without disease, sickness, ill-health, poverty or unhappiness. It reveals to you the inner secrets of life: it describes an inward source of inexhaustible power: it unfolds the laws which govern your life: it shows you how to work in harmony with Cosmic Law, thus transmuted the evil in your life into abundant good. Instead of disease, sickness and ill-health there is produced abounding health; in place of failure, poverty and unhappiness, there is manifested success, abundance and unspeakable joy.

Within the space of only a few months, over 10,000 copies of this book have been sold through the post alone. It has already brought joy, achievement and abounding health to thousands of lives.

D. D. HOME: HIS LIFE AND MISSION.

By MRS. DUNGLAS HOME. Edited with an Introduction by SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE. 8vo, cloth, gilt. 9s. net.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE has slightly abridged, and written an Introduction to this book, which has latterly been receiving much attention at the hands of spiritualists. SIR ARTHUR says: "Home is a man to whom the human race, and especially the British public, owes a deep apology. He came as one of the first missionaries to prove immortality, to do away with the awful mystery of death, to found religion on positive knowledge and to break down dense materialism. He devoted his life to this end; he left a trail of religious conviction and of human consolation behind him; he was admirable in every relation of life."

THE SURVIVAL OF THE SOUL AND ITS EVOLUTION AFTER

DEATH: Notes of Experiments by PIERRE-EMILLE CORNILLIER, with 2 full-page portraits. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [This day.

A careful and detailed account and description of a series of extraordinary experiments made by the Author, a well-known artist, on a young French girl—Reine—who, in a sequence of 107 séances, made many astounding and highly interesting revelations and communications.

POWER to overcome

WITHIN YOU IS THE POWER is a book which shows you that there is no power in circumstances or environment, but that the Power is in YOU. This power is infinite; for you, whether you are aware of it or not, are one with the Infinite. Environment can affect you only to the extent that you allow it so to do. Within Yourself, and not in your circumstances, is the cause of everything which comes into your life. You can overcome every difficulty and weakness by using the power within you and obeying the laws of your being. Your life is in your own hands. You can rise to a higher, purer, more joyous and useful life; you can overcome yourself and know the joys of achievement, of highest service and perfect health, if you will only realize the infinite nature of the Power within you, and call it into expression.
