GUESTIMATES ON THE PYRAMID'S POWER RANGE

Though inconclusive, it's interesting to note the varying opinions concerning distribution of the replica's form-energy.

Most researchers agree that the one-third level above the base, directly under the apex, (conforming to the King's Chamber level in the Great Pyramid of Giza), produces maximum results. This is where the apparent optimum dehydration, mummification and sharpening processes take place.

Using this point in space - gauged at 100%, how then do other sectors of the replica register free energy as measured with Dowsing instruments?

The sensitive Diviner can "feel" a wide variance of rays and/or eddies issuing from within and without the replica. For example: The hips (ridges) outside, when tested from the base corners to apex, register pronounced fields of energy out from these climbing corner-to-corner lines.

When one's dowsing device, (pendulum, aurameter, wand, rod, or whatever), approaches the capstone area, the outward rush increases rapidly. Above the vertex a cylindrical beam of energy - as stated in a previous newsletter - blows upward. Yet, upon further examination, one finds an equal emission of power directed downward through the same invisible shaft, suggesting an interplay of forces resembling alternating currents.

The pyramid's exterior panels, outside, by contrast, produce very weak emanations when compared to the rigid lines of the slanting ridges and replica's four corners.

In its upright position, an elevated model representation of the Great Pyramid sends a form-energy below in conformance to its shape. That is, the rays extend downward as though the visible replica is only the capstone of a much larger invisible pyramid. I find these emanations below quite substantial and effective - probably behaving according to a presumed law: "The larger the pyramid, the greater the energy."

Dr. L.O. Anderson, D.D. of Los Angeles, recently suggested the following power distribution gathered through his own clairvoyant research:

My guestimates, measuring forces inside and out of a 5' high, panel-less Meditation pyramid, using the Cameron AURAMETER, disagree in some respects with Dr. Anderson's findings as shown by the following illustration:

Please note dotted-line-loops rising from corners inside upward about half-way, cause Aurameter pointer to push inward and away from corners and hip lines until about half-way up. Then a curious thing happens; the Aurameter's tip is suddenly drawn toward the angular support-poles as though pulled by a strong magnet.

CHARGING FLASHLIGHT BATTERIES WITH GREAT PYRAMID REPLICAS

Dear friends, I purchased two packs, (2 batteries to a pack) of size "D" batteries and then marked one from each pack to make sure one set was not older than the other two. I charged all four dry-cell batteries 24 hours in a charger to bring all to a peak charge. I placed the un-marked pair on a shelf and the marked pair in the Cheops Pyramid for one week; then I inserted the un-marked pair in a two-cell flashlight.

I put both "ON" and left them four hours until the lights became very dim. Next, I retired both flashlights in the "OFF" position for one week. I finally found the un-marked flashlight would not light, and I examined the batteries to find acid all over their exteriors. The marked flashlight lit up with about 50% brightness. I left the light "ON" for one hour a day for the next five days. The light became very weak at this time.

Next, I mounted the flashlight with the marked PYRAMID batteries on the shelf for one month after which there was no light. Later, I placed the marked batteries in the Pyramid for 24 hours, re-inserted them in the flashlight, and, when turned "ON" the light issued about 25% power, tapering to very dim in one hour.

I returned the batteries to the Pyramid for a 48 hours' charge. The light on the next test again produced about 25% power, diminishing to very dim in two hours. I placed them in the Pyramid again for one week, and, on a final test, the light burst in one big camera-like flash; and that was all. My conclusions: The light-producing time of the unmarked batteries (not placed in the Pyramid) was 4 hours as compared to the marked batteries (placed in the Pyramid) for 12 hours. ## LIGHTS TO REMEMBER

Doctor Douglas Baker's Second International Festival of Yoga and Esoteric Sciences, London, August '73, added yet more "lights" to a chain of illumination issuing from the first Festival in Switzerland, in 1972. Your editors and many from the United States and Canada joined those who had participated the year before in T.W.A. charter-flighting to Britain. This was to be a two-week's experience that would alter, in varying degrees, our individual life patterns of concentration.

Gathered on that first night, "jet-lagged", weary almost to oblivion, we were yet brought sharply to attention with the appearance of Sir George Trevelyan who welcomed us with the opening speech. Gracious and dignified, this man is an expression of high consciousness with every word he utters. Head of the Wrekin Trust, a foundation concerned with approaches to spiritual knowledge, Sir George is deeply motivated, along with other such alert ones as Charles Lindbergh and Buckminster Fuller, to seek out methods for the ecological preservation of our earth. That evening he gave us the meaning of the Festival's Yoga and Esoteric terms.

Fourth Dimension Reachout

THE WARP Δ TIME IN, TIME OUT

Time was ... is ... will be ... Unaware, we alternately flow with, or resist time. We obey its imposing disciplines when we catch a plane. Time's inevitable march frequently awakens distress in some with a second look in the bathroom mirror. The typical American, obviously a victim of time, roots for victory at game's end, mentally fracturing the seconds with one eye on the clock.

By contrast, the oriental waits patiently. It is in his nature to conserve and merge with time.

We perceive and comprehend earthly activity through our five senses by means of time. Literally speaking, time-sense, or lack of it, brings in, or takes us out of this world. When we are deeply engrossed in pleasurable activity, time really flies!

Time travel, where one moves forward or backward on a controlled wave of time, I believe, occurs out of body and within the higher Astral, mental, buddhic, and Monadic planes. It may indeed be a reachable goal while living in this strata of human existence. But moving oneself, others, or things physically forward or backward in time ... Ah! ... that's another matter.

"Yoga", he said, "means union with the supreme being, or ultimate principle. And "esoteric" "means something understood by, or meant for, only a select few with special knowledge or interest." He observed, however, that, in this "new age", the select few grows in numbers at an accelerating pace. More people are searching for "light" and "union" - turning from materialistic manifestations to the inner world reached in meditation - than at any time, perhaps, in the known history of our planet.

And glancing around at the rapt, attentive faces in that great room, faces belonging to individuals of all ages and descriptions, I felt a surging, warm sense of oneness, well-being, and confidence in the reality of a general rise of world consciousness.

We were to learn in the following days' classes and lectures by Dr. Baker and others, that in the Yoga exercises and disciplines are keys to opening the seven chakras, spiritual energy centers, connected along the spinal column from crown to sacral points. (see illustration on page 6). Progress in opening these centers is marked by initiations into degrees of awareness. And Doctor Baker intensely and dynamically shared with us his own personal travails along what was for him a "lonely" path.

There's so much to tell! Of the many, many esoterics on the festival's roster and the beautiful people we were privileged to meet, I can, with space limitations, describe only the ones who affected me most. Damien Simpson, co-organizer of the Festival and minister of Universal Mind Science Churches, led many of the morning and evening meditations. These had unforgettable moving qualities accompanied as they were by violin music that got in and moved about inside one.

Of the yogis, one Swami Bua, vital, small, and muscular, showed incredible control over a body seemingly devoid of bones or joints as he twisted it completely about between rigidly held

And what of "bi-location", where the mystic appears in human form, at two distinct locations within a measured period of day? Again, to support the idea of time - perhaps non-time events - we have reports of "teleportation", the instant transference of material substances through solid matter outside the scope of known physical laws.

The late western mystic, Joel Goldsmith, and others, have described experiences of "instantaneity". Joel spoke of an incident where he, himself, and with passengers in an automobile, were transported immediately from a point on the Pasadena Arroyo Seco Parkway to central Culver City. The entire trip, according to Joel, consumed less than five minutes, a dubious feat attainable by any speeding race-car on deserted freeways.

Instantaneity apparently comes with more frequency to those living in four-dimensional consciousness, a state of being, acquired through long periods of meditation and various physical-mental disciplines. Incidentally, the Pyramid form seemingly accelerates psychic energies associated with higher levels of awareness. The phenomena follows repeated thought, desire, and emotion toward the higher state in that order, coupled with selfless dedication in its pursuit - but not always.

In all humility, I'd like to share a similar experience - not completely of this world - with Pyramid Guide readers. I've been seeking a logical explanation - in particular to the first of three such happenings beginning about three years ago. Later investigation revealed the surprising frequency of instantaneous occurrences encountered in the search.

A lightninglike twenty-minute auto trip on a Saturday night from Laguna Beach to Mira Loma, California, normally would have required at least forty-five minutes. At first I thought my watch had stopped. It hadn't. I even considered the possibility of some kind of monstrous joke, with someone conspiring at either end to set watches and clocks (including my own), ahead or behind as the case might have been. But of course this wasn't so. I can only describe some of the latter part of the trip as lying outside the region of my conscious memory.

It took more than two years of persistent study to partially at least find out the how, and why of this strange episode in and out of time. Instantaneity, (as I later came to understand it), must have brought me into some sort of altered time stretch - a brief excursion along the road - where I was suddenly schlocked into a peculiar time frame, a warp as it were, where the normal progression of moments, past, present, and future, all join as one.

Unlike cross-country "trance" driving, where one loses time-sense; then, later, when studying a road map, finds he has driven fifty miles further than realized - failing to recall, even, one or more small towns driven through enroute - but the individual observes that his watch of dashboard clock registers the actual time lapsed ... No, I refer to the mystifying realm of instantaneity where measured, speed, travel distance and clock time don't jibe!

My body and transporting vehicle were then, I believe, momentarily propelled out of earth's ordinary succession of moments and into the timeless infinite spheres of the fourth dimension. The event could have - as a division of time lengths - occur an instant ahead, or behind, earth-time sync. This moment of instantaneity, in essence, then, must have opened suddenly, an invisible gateway through, or bridge (wormhole), over, the normal pull of three-dimensional earth, to exist momentarily, perhaps, in and out of other sectors in the infinite universe.

My earlier acceptance of the possibility that man and material could project forward or backward, in interdimensional space - independent of earth's great time piece, had set up the beginning process for this activity to occur.

■ CLIPS, COMMENTS,
QUOTES, AND LETTERS ■

VIEWING PHENOMENA THROUGH WAR-SURPLUS PRISMS. Reverend Dorje Moore, of Los Angeles, California, drawing the figure "8" and other forms with heavy black lines on white paper, reports: "By making a sequence of them, getting bigger and bigger - sort of pyramiding - when seen through the glass prism, they produce a growth of beautiful colors, really something to see ... and worth exploring." Dorje adds, "Drawings of a pendulum should prove quite colorful. Some pendulums are very delicate instruments, scribing lines as they move and making lovely patterns - very close to thought forms." TIME CRAFT AND THE HUMAN ELEMENT. Thomas Allen LeVesque, of Beverly Hills, California, comes through again with the interesting view that: "A time craft - as it now appears - should have a crystal in the shape of a tetrahedron atop a cylindrical rod as control lever. The use is based on vector-tensor rotation. The energy transformation accountings are comprehendingly rational, and synergetic;" he adds, "one's body, in a modified lotus position, becomes part of the craft in the shape of a tetrahedron. The whole is interlocked with the craft's shape to form a six-pointed star, with point at the base opposite the star-point-apex at the top. More research is needed", says Tal, "I see a castle in the Sun where Rainbows have ends and the People are One." PYRAMID TRANSPARENCY AND LIGHT. In a May, 1972, article entitled "Metaphysical Mysteries of the Great Pyramid", Albert S. Evans, D.O., of Middlefield, Ohio, wrote of "an energy system within pyramids, and noting that his previous models were opaque to light frequencies," made a replica of transparent plastic and clear quartz. Evans' awareness of the piezoelectric properties of quartz led him to orient the pyramids' axis perpendicular to the center of the base, through the apex. The transmitted light from an overhead source reflected from each corner as four beams converging and terminating in a small squared area at the center of the base. When the transparent pyramid was immersed in water, the beams of light narrowed and brightened with the diminished central squares' illumination increasing. Dr. Evans slowly raised one side of the pyramid, observing light pouring through the structure onto a tabletop. Changing the light-source parallel to the replica's angular side, he continued raising the transparent model until the base attained an inclination of 52 degrees. At that point it formed a six-point Star of David light form, plainly appearing on the table top. MOON'S POLARIZED LIGHT MAY DULL CUTTING EDGES. We've received reports from subscribers, affirming that Czech researchers believe moonlight, vibrating in one direction, reacts unfavorably on razor blades and other cutlery. PYRAMID REPLICA A TWO-WAY POWER PLANT. numerous comments from experimenters suggest model representations, along with the Great Pyramid, are in fact cosmic (energy) accumulators and psychic-cosmic generators. Tuned into the psyche as symbols of universal force, the replicas thus gain in power. DOWSING INTO THE PAST. Sam J. Main, of Ely, Minnesota, with expanding techniques, divines that the legendary Garden of Eden was indeed located near Cairo, in Egypt, 9000 years ago. PERPETUUM MOBILE. "Will go without any impulse from without." J. Leslie Crowder, searching the nation's libraries, writes: "For several years I've specialized in unorthodox energies and propulsion." He tells of a 558 page book, published in England, (Library index T531.8 #D63 in Denver Library, 1357 Broadway, 80203, Colorado), with about 100 illustrations, and featuring some 500 articles on various anti-gravity and perpetual-motion devices. Crowder seeks a photo, or illustration, of the Perpetuum Mobile (not included in the book). If any of our readers know of one or more, please advise us here at the ' Guide. eds. REPLICA SENDS CHIGGERS ON THE RUN. Bernard Gotaut of Valparaiso, Indiana, says, "I've been sleeping in a large pyramid for two weeks now. Previously I had to burn the chiggers out with ether. With the pyramid above, they come out by themselves, or die. All bugs seem to die when confined within the pyramid," he says; "since the pyramid stops food spoilage caused by bacteria, it seems all lower forms of life are unable to survive the higher vibrations inside."

ARCHEO-MAGNETISM. "New Mexico Magazine", in its May/June, 1972, issue, presented the article, 'A 1,100 Room Riddle', by Walter Kerr, about excavating an old Indian Pueblo, two miles south of Santa Fe, New Mexico. Kerr writes: "Archeo-magnetism starts from the knowledge that iron particles in clay are arranged helter-skelter in the clay's original state but line up with the earth's magnetic field when it is heated to about 1100 degrees Fahrenheit. They stay aligned as they were at the last heating. You take the clay from an Indian firepit, determine how its iron particles are lined up, relate that alignment to today's magnetic field, and you've got it." Dr. Robert L. DuBois of the University of Oklahoma who was at the Arroyo Hondo dig last summer gathering fire-clay for analysis knows there is no such thing as a fixed magnetic north pole, that the earth acts like a giant magnet, with lines of force sweeping from the antarctic to the arctic. With this magnetic field the compass aligns itself, not pointing in any one direction the world over, or from any area, in any one direction, for any long period of time. The direction the compass points depends on where you are, and when. It changes with the year. He can tell within fifteen years or so when an Indian built a fire in a fireplace (provided the clay reaches 1100 degrees). Information sent in courtesy of Ona M. Ellis. Eureka Springs, Arkansas. TESTING WITH THE AURAMETER. From Bryant Churko, Saskatchewan, Canada. "When we were using the angle wires and the Aurameter we also found that when the pyramid face perpendicular to the true magnetic north was turned just a bit to make the axis or face out of true line, it affected the energy given off by the pyramid. The energy was less, and we found that by turning it some more it couldn't even be detected. But would that make any difference for the food dehydration process? Perhaps at varying degrees the pyramid can be used for other things than just the areas and other subject matter that has been used up to the previous time. And more from Bryant: ORGONE ENERGY. "It seems that the ORGONE ENERGY, (life energy), pyramid energy, and cone energy all seem to have a lot in common. Baron von Reichenbach published several books around 1852, and he tells about people seeing orgone energy (auras) around magnets and other inorganic objects. It seems the eyes became more sensitive and perceptive in the dark. He goes throughout the whole book, trying to prove through countless experiments that there is really something there. Reichenbach also mentions the effect the sun has on orgone energy, or 'odic energy. Maybe this force holds the atoms together... If one were to keep breaking down the atom, he could come to the conclusion that atomic particles are held together by an energy called a 'field of ether'. This field of ether exists in a vortex energy field found to be around the pyramid. The energy seems to spiral downward in a vortex. When one sets up a pyramid, this orgone energy is there. It concentrates the vortices of the ether in such a way that the size and shape of the pyramid can make use of the orgone energy... And you can tune in on a person anywhere in the world by putting his 'photo or written signature inside the pyramid replica... Human beings seem to have the ability to focus 'Orgone Energy', and project it. It seems that this is the underlying factor in the experiments that were done on plants by using the methods of positive prayer and negative prayer. Perhaps this also explains why some people are better gardeners than others... I'm doing some more experimenting. This time I have tarnished coins set up under the pyramid about half way up. I also have coins in an orgone box. When I go back home after two weeks I'll be able to see how it works out. I read somewhere that it is possible to loosen the tarnish and then just rub it off."

CLUNKER-MID, An Imaginative, Massive, Ecological Pyramid Made of Junked Cars. Robert Manewal, Wyoming, Commercial Artist, has designed a modern art form 481 feet high, a 756 square foot based pyramid to be constructed of 300,000 derelict automobiles in the Red Desert region of Wyoming, as a salute to the United States' 200th. birthday in 1976. Manewal plans it as a tourist attraction with souvenir shop, restaurant, museum, and observation room.

Dear Sirs; I am very much interested in levitation and E.S.P. I think I read in Fate Magazine that there will be discovered a hidden room in the Pyramid that will explain levitation which they think was used to build the Pyramids and the Druid Stones of Stonehenge.

Fate told of an enormous block of stone which, if put on railroad cars, would cause the wheels to sink into the earth; therefore the only way to move such a block of stone would have to be by levitation. This is a fascinating subject. It would conquer locomotion and pollution and could make a heaven on earth or simply a paradise. I am 69 and feel that I have not reached my goal in life. We lived in Walnut, California, 24 years and came East because of pollution. Sincerely, Daniel R. Dows, Holbrook, Massachusetts.

hands. This was but one of many disciplines requiring, surely, a lifetime to accomplish.

Several mediums participated in the two weeks, but Ena Twigg, famous for her work with Bishop Pike, proved warm, engaging, and full of disarming humility.

Another speaker of great stature, Edgerton Sykes, world's foremost authority on Atlantis, was honored at a dinner party by psychic young members of the expedition he'd headed and was just back from Cadiz, Spain. There young divers had searched for artifacts and remnants of the Atlantean past. Present were Bill Cox, our editor, and I; and we were asked by Mr. Sykes to meet with him at his Brighton home following the end of the festival. Subsequently El Cariso Publications has become the United States distributor of his books. (see enclosed book catalog).

I will have to continue this in the next issue. There will be more about the speakers and an account of our visit to Stonehenge and Glastonbury.

Sirs; How about printing some practical measurements for making my own pyramid according to a pre-selected height? My rulers and tapes are in fractions, not decimals. Thank You. Ted Youn, Santiago, Chile.

PYRAMIDS AS LIVING MONUMENTS

Revelations From Cosmic Memory, Realized Through The Clairvoyance of SARI!

Pyramids are "living monuments" to the Creator as proof that life is indestructible. Cosmic forces have disseminated energy from the invisible spectrum to preserve these magnificent edifices throughout the ages.

Before breaking down pyramidal forms into zones representing man, let's endeavor to substantiate this premise by quoting two eminent scientists: 1. Nicola Tesla. "The universe is basically spiritual in nature, governed by immutable law; and intelligence is present at every point in so-called space and can be acted upon through the power of thought. By using thought dynamically, you can call upon this invisible universal energy and think what you want into existence, because thought is creative." 2. Charles P. Steinmetz. "I think the greatest discoveries will be made along spiritual lines. History clearly teaches that spiritual forces have been the greatest power in the development of man and nations."

The origin of pyramids came with dynamic thought derived from intense desire. A brilliant idea, planned upon an evolved planet, was executed upon the earth. How? Scientists and "gods" came to planet Earth in spaceships. Just as man has a spiritual center within, so must the earth; and the great pyramid of Gizeh, constructed on the west bank of the River Nile, is that center.

Having found that location, the specialist scientists from the other planet set about purifying land, air, minerals, and other of earth's constituents with dynamic thought and so brought forth the source of cosmic energy. (Called "God" by earthman). God is nameless, yet names All.

And the Lord of the planet came with many specialists in spaceships some forty-five hundred years ago, according to Earth timing. Among these were Cartographers, astronomers, crystallographers, physicists, alchemists, chromotherapists, geometrists, numerologists, highly evolved mathematicians, (who could in great measure calculate light), and metaphysicians. The latter knew and taught higher mind science, and all knew that God in action is the pure science; that is, the power in light, colors, and polarization, etc., and He is the creator and activator of the cosmic All.

The pyramids have endured because cosmic energy continuously charges them along with the land below and the atmosphere around the edifices. Lines of force, related to light, offer protection to these great stone monuments, insuring their permanence.

Limestone, charged with cosmic energy millions of years before the pyramids were constructed, forms their bases. Calcium preserves limestone, as with human bones, and solidifies these massive forms.

Zone A represents God Principle, the positive and negative polarity, i.e., man's spiritual goal. In this ultra-conscious zone, light and color are balanced, (light being positive and color negative).

Zone B represents Middle Mind, i.e., the two worlds between higher and lower consciousness. The Christ Principle being of Divine origin, a teacher for earthman is placed on the borderline between A and B, coordinating with C.

Zone C represents Earth Mind (the lower consciousness), or the unevolved or unawakened area in mind.

Due to the difference in these three zones, each varies in rates of frequency. Zone A, the Light range God consciousness, operates with very high frequency. Zone B and C vibrate with frequencies analogous to their respective degree of evolution. Here we hypothesize that the pyramidal zones correspond to, and symbolize, the trilogy in the structure of man.

PYRAMID FOOD TASTES BETTER

The following may sound far-out, but, as you may have noted, the 'Guide is already out there. Perhaps we are going further . . . Anyway, we have received a substantial number of reports showing the Pyramid replica improves the taste of food and beverages.

Exterior surfaces of bananas, prunes, and raisins become moist when first charged inside a simple cardboard model and seemingly take on a metallic (electric) but pleasant taste.

Long-picked fruit and vegetables are reported to be freshened in a short time, and green or hard fruit may ripen sooner. And liquids such as stale tea, coffee, and other perishable stimulants respond to Pyramid treatment with renewed taste and vigor. Although turning to a pleasantly sour cheese, milk doesn't usually curdle.

A limited or prolonged test apparently can reduce or eliminate shrivelling, wrinkling, in some, and stop spoilage and putrefication in most organic substances. Other reports describe the Pyramid replica's amazing ability to purify water as well as improve the flavor of cheap liquors!

We will be running an article on dehydration tests in an upcoming newsletter, and invite reader comments along these lines.

RAYS FROM BLESSED OBJECTS

Dowsing opens up exciting new perceptions of the invisible motions interpenetrating our physical world. For example, with a pendulum or another Diving instrument, one can easily detect the wave-fronts from all objects. Religious ones are particularly interesting.

A peculiar phenomenon occurs when one measures the radiations from a religious symbol such as the cross or a medallion before the blessing, (and one doesn't have to be a priest or holy man to bestow an effective blessing). First, the rays emanating from the object can be noted carefully with the dowsing device. Bless the symbolic object, wait five minutes and again approach with your instrument. Note the great enlargement of the previously irregular auric envelope.

The foregoing process can be repeated by blessing a glass of water. In every case there's a noticeable variation in the shape and the size of balloonlike emissions rising above, some outline several feet above and nearly as wide. When the test is performed with profound thought and highest ideals, brackish or chemically-treated water seems to taste sweeter following the experiment. The billowing form often remains an hour or more.

The VERNE L. CAMERON notebook of GREAT DISCOVERIES

Cone, Pyramid and Ray-gun Experiments

A further characteristic of the ray issuing from either a coil or cone (which appear to act in identical ways), according to indications of the aurameter, is that this ray is reflected by a mirror in the same manner as light, the angle of incidence being equal to the angle of reflection. It is also possible to pick up the reflected beam by means of a second mirror and reflect it back onto the coil group or cone, so that it appears to make a continuous circuit, like the particles in a cyclotron.

If this is considered carefully it seems to present good evidence of some kind of energy emanating from the cone in a directional beam and affecting the coils. It also strengthens the contention that energy from the non-activated coil and/or the cone can be conducted by a wire, as mentioned in connection with the series arrangement previously described.

For the last three or four years, I have been searching means for determining the wave length of the coil energy beam. Since I had no elaborate equipment for testing, I was compelled to use the simple things at hand. I learned that the same energy beam is radiated by an ultra-violet lamp, but apparently in a diffused sort of fashion; not as a concentrated beam, but that of an infra-red light source, or a small electric heater with a concentrated unit and a parabolic reflector. It drives the beam in a concentrated form in a straight line, easily located after passing through a stone wall, sheet metal, or anything except water or a living body.

I have many times turned the beam of a heater, or an infra-red light through a wall of stone or cement, meanwhile having someone manipulate the source of the ray and move it occasionally. Thus, I was able to locate the beam accurately and instantly and to determine its exact source while the radiating source was held on the opposite side of the wall. There seems to be no lag to the beam under these conditions, sometimes accompanying auric beams. This led me to the conclusion that the ray was not conducted by heat, as it would have required some time to build up warmth in the intervening cold wall in order to radiate the force through to the opposite side.

In ISIS UNVEILED, Volume 1, Section 1, Science Page 126, written about 1875, Madam Blavatsky stated, "Since we began to write this part of our book, an announcement has been made in a number of papers of the supposed discovery of a new force by Mr. Edison, the electrician of Newark, N.J., which force seems to have little in common with electricity or galvanism except the principles."

My conclusions, then, are that this force is of a wave-length somewhat shorter than ultra-violet light, and longer than X-ray. It may prove to be a harmonic of light, or even of Cosmic energy, near the gamma ray band.

THE MECHANICS OF CRYSTAL GAZING: A HYPOTHESIS

by Marianne Zezelic

Down through the ages, mankind has sought those who claim to foresee the future. By given a glimpse into future events, man felt he could better understand his position in the universe. Thus it evolved that people with the ability of second sight were looked upon as possessing powers of the gods.

Many seers expressed these abilities through various apparatus, one of them being the crystal ball. Such devices as tarot cards and the pendulum are used as a focus of concentration by the mind, but the crystal ball serves as an accumulator of terrestrial magnetism. With the presence of oxide of iron within the crystal, it is conceivable that magnetism is attracted to and accumulated in or around it.

By gazing at the crystal, the eyes set up a harmonic reaction stimulating the magnetism collected in the crystal, which is then projected back into the eyes of the gazer and collected in that portion of the brain known as the cerebellum. The cerebellum therefore becomes a reservoir of magnetism which influences the quality of the magnetic outflow through the eyes, thus setting up a continuous flow of magnetism between gazer and the crystal. The amount of energy entering the brain eventually increases to such a proportion as to affect the poles of the brain, a region extending just above the eyes. It is my belief that it is this region of the brain behind the forehead that contributes to psychic phenomenon.

The phenomena induced by the use of the crystal is that of clairvoyance, the ability to see pictures (images) in the crystal which relay information as to something past, present or future unknown to the gazer. It is through the medium of the crystal that an area of the brain becomes receptive to an unseen world.

Magnetism is poorly understood, especially that of the earth's. The moon exerts a tremendous influence on the earth's magnetic field, controlling among other things the menstrual cycles of women and the tides of the oceans. If this energy is known also to affect the migration of insects, could it not be an energy that affects biological - neurophysiological - psychological function of the human body which could thus stimulate psychic phenomenon?

Dear Miss Zezelic,

In one regard I can only account for the Dowsing phenomenon (from actual experience) by reducing phenomenal activity in my mind to pure energy without classification. From this point I perceive it manifesting as an Infinite scale of vibrations, frequencies, and densities. Once I can lock in on the right formula, in the manner of tuning a radio, only achieved with an established code using proper symbols - and learned through trial and error, do I gather so-called psychic information. This knowledge comes in the form of impartation beyond my external sensory perception; that is, sight, sound, touch, taste, and smell. The Divining rod becomes a physical symbol in my hand - coordinating with certain mental visualizations and projections hopefully in a complete interplay of communication between my memory-bank, conscious, sub-conscious, unconscious, and superconscious sectors of mind.

Q. I am very much interested in levitation and E.S.P. I think I read in Fate Magazine that there will be discovered a hidden room in the Pyramid that will explain levitation which they think was used to build the pyramids and the Druid Stones of Stonehenge. Fate told of an enormous block of stone which, if put on railroad cars, would cause the wheels to sink into the earth; therefore the only way to move such a block of stone would have to be by levitation. This is a fascinating subject. It would conquer locomotion and pollution and could make a heaven on earth or simply a paradise. I am 69 and feel that I have not reached my goal in life. We lived in Walnut, California, 24 years and came East because of pollution.... How can you tell the north and south pole of a magnet?

A. We've been warned we could step into a hole here. Perhaps our readers will answer this question for both bar and horseshoe magnets. From Valerie Ann Olin, Park Ridge, Illinois

Q. I completed a reading of John J. O'Neill's beautifully written, probing biography of Nikola Tesla, PRODIGAL GENIUS. A possible anticipation of energy of form is found in Chapter 9. Nikola developed the cone-shaped coil and carried this research further by designing the flat helix or pancake-shaped coil, both used in conjunction with currents of extremely high frequency. What cone apex angle he used was not specified. You might also be interested to know that Nikola's 154' broadcasting tower at Wardencliff, Shoreham, Long Island, N.Y., was cone-shaped. Again, I would like to know the degree of apex angle employed?

A. Many thanks for sharing this information with the 'Guide and our readers. All of Vern Cameron's cone research and testing, after earlier failures, was produced with 90° angle cones. That is, the cone would fit into a carpenter's square, or into a properly-constructed door jamb.

From Ruby Andrews, Danville, Illinois

Q. Have you tried taking the pyramid replica, with sides untaped, and flattening it out so the form becomes a perfectly-dimensioned Maltese Cross? Like so?  A properly designed cross  becomes a rectangular box when folded into a three-dimensional form. I wonder how it compares to the Ark of the Covenant? We've tried many forms; they are all recognizable and significant.

A. The true Maltese Cross has eight points like this:  If the sides of the pyramid had notched bases and each were a separate section so that parting (untaping) would leave them joined at the apex, the Maltese Cross would indeed be formed. It's interesting that the use of a cross as a mystical sign pre-dates Christianity. It's as old as civilization itself and has been employed by Brahmans, Hittites, Egyptians, and even the American Indian, in mystical, magical systems. The cross is also an astronomical sign of fire or luck.

From Mae Belle Simpson, Bedford, Penna.

Q. I love your publication; only please tell how to build a psychotronic generator. I tried the experiment of placing a Maltese Cross on one of my pyramids. My hand was truly repelled by some force. Now all of me is repelled by the north side of the rest of my pyramids too. I program them for all kinds of goodies. One of the main parts of programming is to feed energy into the north side. It's hard to do now. Also my hands levitate from the apex, and I notice a green glow that surrounds my hands while I chant.

A. We have extensive data and photos of psychotronic generators but have yet to construct a working model. There are a few research laboratories working on these devices. The only successful one so far has withheld their findings pending patent rights and negotiations for the sale of the instruments. We are very interested in publishing information useful to our readers and will be starting on an alternate Psychotronic Bio-energetic Newsletter sometime next year. Your responses to the pyramid are very exciting and support other claims we receive from readers in different parts of the world.

UFO A RASH OF YEAR-END SIGHTINGS

"Saucer light, saucer bright, will we communicate tonight?" Tal.

Project (OZMA)

U.S. scientists have for some thirteen years tried to establish communication with intergalactic beings disporting within our district of the universe.

Was the Great Pyramid of Giza designed as a cosmic accumulator-generator, a prime source of solar and other energies for space vehicles and later adapted by the Egyptians to suit their culture?

In other respects, the Great Pyramid, with its scriptural significance, has been referred to as "God's Holy Mark". Could it also be a giant time capsule, a repository of ancient knowledge, the Rosetta Stone of our universe?

IFO Identified Flying Object

KOHOUTEK. This dusty-tailed marvel, a mass of illumined energies speeding through our solar system, has been labeled by scientists as the comet of the century. George Van Tassel believes it will scare h - - - out of half the world's population.

Kohoutek should spread over 16% of our morning-twilight and evening skies in a 30 degree arc, during its December 28th., '73 to January 5th., '74, seventy-five million mile approach towards earth.

Strange how much man knows about the behavior of this celestial object - 'way out in space, yet at authoritative levels knows little of - or rejects - the existence of UFOs!

It will be interesting to learn whether the energy from Kohoutek comet affects our pyramid replicas, or flies by, taking its form-energy stimulants out into other space.

DOWSING THE WHIRLING CHAKRAS

The bright, multi-colored, ever-pulsating chakras, energy centers associated with the etheric double in humans, and occasionally seen by clairvoyants, can also be sensed and measured with simple dowsing instruments. Often this can be done by people making a first attempt to divine energies while applying their inborn tactile abilities.

The chakra, meaning "wheel" in Sanskrit, appropriately appears as a spoked wheel, a whirling vortex of vibrating, Divine energy within the perimeter of a saucerlike depression. According to occult belief, these astral stations of life-vitality operate in rapport with the more dense physical body. They vary somewhat in size, depending on their development, and function in three groupings of the lower, middle, and upper portions of one's body; that is, at the base of the spine, the spleen, solar-plexus, heart, throat, center-brow areas, and at the top of the head.

For example, Georgiana assumed a supine position; and I poised a pendulum weight about one inch above her solar plexus chakra. The instrument promptly began to rotate in a counter-clockwise circle and within a minute or so, the pendule attained its maximum gyration. All centers produced a leftward arc, but, surprisingly, the heart chakra stimulated a clockwise, elliptical motion.

Then, strange to say, when she turned over into a prone position, all chakras produced a counter-clockwise motion, except a point on her back, aligned with the heart region. Though this center continued to effect the expected elliptical rotation, it had, as opposed to the others, reversed its direction to an oval, counter-clockwise gyration.

When Georgiana turned over on her stomach, we had expected all gyrations to continue on through her form in the same direction. This would have been consistent with spinning chakras, as measured at the front. Alas, we got a peek into the source of one tactile-sensed but invisible mystery; and out flew a whole swarm of new ones! B.C.
