BIOCRYSTALLOGRAPHY, ITS REBIRTH IN OUR CRYSTAL AGE

Frank Dorland, a quality man, swings wide the door of his Santa Barbara home, eyes flashing. Mrs. Dorland looks on approvingly. This interview should excite . . . we're tuned in to similar energies. These are kind people with the bearing of nobility, and both glow in the knowledge of higher things to share.

Once inside, I glance leftward. An interesting arrangement of various shaped crystals gleam above the surface of a small table, somewhat resembling an astral chess game awaiting the spirits' return.

Frank hands me a business card announcing his occupation as BIOCRYSTALLOGRAPHER. "It refers to a science," says Frank, "wherein pure crystal stimulates that part of the brain, opening a psychic door to the absolute. Most teachers," he adds, "describe the various planes of mind. This is only partially correct as the absolute mind is most important. It holds the Superconscious in balance." Dorland believes the crystal provides a means of direct communication with God the Absolute. "we're all our own saviors and responsible for what happens to us."

All eyes now shift to a replica of the crystal skull lying on a shelf against the rear wall, as I ask Frank about reports that the skull has been known to sing, perfume the air, and grow a huge aura. "Is it true the moving jawpiece establishes the crystal skull as a talking oracle," I ask.

"Visitors have suddenly become aware of a seemingly detached interloping voice joining in on the conversation." Frank replies. After several such experiences, the Dorlands rule out the possibility of echo, radio interference and ventriloquism. "The skull had spoken or spirits had to be present," they exclaim.

The crystal skull brought Frank to the realization that an interchange of energy can be readily activated between the human brain, (life), and the crystal structure. "Crystal continuously puts out electric-like radio waves," he continues. "Since the brain does the same thing, they naturally interact. We're convinced," he goes on, "crystal study proves we all possess an absolute sector in the brain. It's the cumulative memory of experience, of all that happened from the one cell from which all people — continuously alive — are reborn time and again. Absolute brain," says Frank, "constantly sifts and refines past experiences so we can intelligently alter the course of our destinies." Dorland believes births become past lives united — dream scenes — as the brain forms images of past experiences. "A baby dreams before birth," says Frank, "but upon first breath, the newborn is pushed into the world of five senses, no longer retaining in full the psychic sensing abilities operating before gestation. Down comes the veil," he affirms with a downswinging arm. "Still the youngster can reopen the door to psychic worlds. He now has twelve senses awaiting expression, seven inner — five outer, but failing to achieve the necessary state of higher awareness he reaches adulthood in a world consuming every waking moment. It's not too late, but difficult barriers of belief must be altered."

Frank Dorland believes the crystal amplifies mind energies. "Put in proper form for man or plant life to pick up its evident beams," he adds, "getting the right wave-length, then tuned to the right channel, behold . . . we have certain evidence of Biocrystallography."

Heightened Awareness Through A NEW SCALE OF VIBRATIONS

Master teachers of the Esoteric Sciences agree a higher order of human experience occurs as one's vibrations are raised, that is, the faster the vibrations, (more vibes per second), the higher the manifestation. Joseph Weed's two books, PSYCHIC ENERGY and WISDOM OF THE MYSTIC MASTERS give safe and proven techniques for achieving this state. Involuntary or voluntary action can trigger the event.

When one or more rates or states of high vibrations express, we have in the making, what we term phenomena; supra-normal or ESP activity of a kind. When they occur unannounced the person(s) involved can become momentarily distressed: They've entered a new space and full orientation can be temporarily suspended.

Masters themselves, generally control the various levels of sub and superconscious activity. Conversely, one learns the range of the radio and TV dial through trial and error. The dials, (physical symbols), enable one to tune into the precise broadcasting frequency we think of in terms of kilocycles, and/or channel selection. Just because we don't see or hear the broadcast doesn't mean for example in Los Angeles, that Channel 2 or KFI are not broadcasting in this room, this very moment. Without a proper tuner, amplifier, and antenna these stations lie outside the range of ordinary perception. But when mind (the tuner), psychic energy the amplifier, and form or device the antenna, come together in proper resonance, we experience higher forms of broadcast — sending or receiving. Unlike physical instruments, the unfocused mind in its random tuning often produces a hit or miss situation.

Physical, mental, metaphysical and Divine laws govern the many planes of vibrational activity, and their behavior in relation to sympathetic octaves and harmonics. Since science has published little in this four-dimensional range of energy manifestation, (some scientists even deny its existence), we ask Pyramid Guide readers to refer to the foregoing alphabetical list, whether Scientist, Pseudo-scientist, Dowser, Clairvoyant, Clairaudient, UFO Contactee, Medium, mediator, Self-Hypnotic Subject, or Meditator to mail us your impressions of just where the above described phenomena belong in the scale; their rates of vibration, octave, their arrangement in the Cosmic Spectrum, and any other useful information available.

AURAS AND THOUGHTFORMS IN ACTION

PYRAMIDS OF AN EXTINCT CULTURE
by Marianne Zezelic

Out of the forested lowlands of the state of Veracruz, Mexico, emerged a powerful Indian nation known as the Totonacs. It is believed that the Olmecs — the oldest of the native New World civilizations once flourishing in the southern Mexican jungles — may well be the basic civilization developing such high art centers as the Totonacs.

Of these cities, Papantla and Tajin, the latter was the capital and leading center. It was at Tajin that the Totonacs built magnificent stone-faced pyramids, platforms, plazas, and ball courts to honor their god of the rains and lightning. For a people essentially agricultural, as were the Totonacs, the rainy season and other atmospheric phenomena that influenced their crops were of fundamental importance. Thus it is not surprising that the worship of the gods of water and of vegetation should occupy a great part of their religious life. Tajin, "he who makes things grow," god of the rains and of lightning, is the most important deity in this group of gods. He is probably the most ancient of the gods worshipped by man in Mexico and Central America with beginnings so old they are lost in the remoteness of antiquity.

El Tajin, first occupied A.D. 600-900, is very extensive. Its nucleus covers about 146 acres, but subsidiary ruins are scattered over several thousand acres. The site is set among low hills and part of it has been built up with artificial platforms to compensate for the slope. Among the cluster of compact four-sided structures is the pyramid of the Niches, a relatively small monument, about 60 feet high. It is constructed of wonderful symmetry, faced with carved stone blocks, rising in six tiers to an upper sanctuary. A single stairway climbs to the top, flanked by balustrades embellished with a step-and-fret motif. Around the sides are a number of small square niches, 365 in all, the number of days in the solar year. Inside the pyramid has been discovered a more ancient one, almost a duplicate of the outer.

Other stone buildings at El Tajin are very similar in construction, the step-and-fret design being particularly common. Palace-like buildings with colonnaded doorways were roofed with massive concrete slabs. The Building of the Columns is the largest complex at the site; the drums of the columns are carved in reliefs showing winged dancers, serpents, jaguars, frogs, human sacrifices, and bar-and-dot numerals with day glyphs.

The Totonac civilization, obsessed with a ball game called volador, human sacrifice, and death, met its destruction at the hands of the Aztecs at the time of the Spanish conquest.

EL TAJIN GRANDE, Meaning Noise and Thunder — 60 foot-high Pyramid of the Niches, (ruins lie eight miles south of Papantla, Estado de Vera Cruz, Mexico). Excavations began in 1934. Each cardinal side of El Tajin was believed painted according to the seasons: EAST, yellow for spring; SOUTH, green for summer; WEST, reddish-brown for fall; and NORTH, grey-black for winter. Lightning frequently strikes the top of the pyramid during thunderstorms, and its builders were believed to be descendants of ancient Lemurian civilizations. Lesser Tajin, a truncated, smaller pyramid is inscribed with crosses and some Greek and Roman sculpture, plus many swastikas.

Auric perceptions by Edgar Cayce, and the early Theosophist, C. W. Leadbeater, and others, fairly well coincide with older reports, and those of psychics found throughout the world today. Yet there are fine nuances of difference not readily understood or explained away as uncommon views.

Though the Theosophist descriptions of aura generally agree — if we are to hold to some basic patterns in ever-changing auric fields — I wonder about the thoughtform imprints so vividly described by Leadbeater in his illustrated books produced in the last century, and currently in reprint. They just seem too "pat."

The late Verne Cameron proved on several occasions he could locate, delineate with tactile observation, and detect the change in auras and thoughtforms Dowsing with his Aurameter. Cameron, until six months before his passing, said he had never seen these higher energy fields. "I know they're there, because I feel them," he said.

Cameron noted a small balloon-like form above religious objects and water in a glass container. Some five minutes after blessing the object or substance, the form would billow into an irregular puff, often as large as two feet in diameter. I was disappointed to find in my own tests the blessing thoughtform would emerge in a somewhat different shape, but later testing with Cameron where we both blessed a glass of water, jointly or separately, we found the thoughtform would naturally vary due to our own thought processes and the type of energy we put into the blessing. We would usually coincide when measuring the other's thoughtform bubble created separately in other instances. We also found meditation centers, houses of worship, such as churches and temples, when occupied with meditation, choir-song or prayer, powerful emanations bulged up and outward from the building or chamber housing the group. In some cases, the forcefields were more column-like. As with Leadbeater, we soon realized churches don't just happen to appear as they do because some religious leader or architect had a novel idea; far from it, religious edifices are living examples of devotion and worship materialized.

An awesome amount of energy can be gathered in group consciousness, where people of one mind pray together. The more fleeting or directly impelled thoughtform can be short-lived, but their thrust can frequently be felt with the Aurameter in the hand of a sensitive Dowser. Since auras have become more visible to me, I occasionally see them in color as a fantastic interplay of lights and spark-like display, both inside and out of the oval field around the human body. I can look out upon an audience at a lecture, and if the background and lighting are conducive to higher sight, I may see aura in color around a single individual, whereas the other people seem to be generating a colorless energy field resembling heat radiation. I can only explain this phenomenon as possibly a matching, or nearly so, of one's bodily vibrations with the rods and cones in the retinas of my eyes.

The energy fields vibrating just above, and along the ridges — apex to corner — of a panel-less pyramid are readily seen by people who claim they never saw an aura before. It's worth a try.

Georgiana and I often noted the vitic, shadow-light issuing from public speakers when they stood before a movie or projector screen. With careful attention, and in the right altered states of consciousness we would see an alternating expansion and contraction in the subject's auric field. At times the light image would project out to one side or the other. New anomalies would occur to baffle us, but it was a delight when we could agree. Bill Cox

Conclusion

A DOWSER AND HIS ANGEL — A sketch of the late dowsing mentor, Verne L. Cameron, of Lake Elsinore.

"I was once arrested," he says, "and received a fine and suspended jail sentence for having an instrument not recognized by medical authorities."

Undaunted, Verne Cameron pours himself into his work with an extravagance of energy. He thrives on controversy—it is the oriflamme of his life. He can sway disparate listeners to his point of view at public meetings, and just as well lose ground when he lets his emotions get in the way.

His work room shows the characteristics of a man who collects everything and throws nothing away. It is a room filled with machines, old tools, books; a lifetime supply of tape recorders and electronic gadgets. The clutter is a masterpiece of organized confusion, with equal space allotted the precious stone and the rusty bolt. "Boredom is the enemy of life," he says, "hard work removes the thought of self."

Verne Cameron hopes to do good things for children and animals. And he says, "I want to make the deserts bloom. It will solve the world starvation problem."

"The aurameter," he says, "is taking its place among accepted devices for the detection and measurement of temperature, humidity, light, and sound. Instruments used in detecting ore, mines, seismic shock, radio-activity and physical or mental reactions are no more accurate than the aurameter.* "Why, even the Marines in Viet Nam are using divining rods to locate enemy tunnels."

AND SO OUR EYES fall upon the ringed marker he had located earlier; its blue pendants fluttering in the breeze. "Of the millions of water wells, good or bad, throughout the world," he says, "and whatever the locator's title, he alone must make the final decision where and how the well is to be drilled."

With this parting remark, the man who walks with an angel, rises from our improvised seat on the granite boulder, bids me goodbye, and shambles up the dusty path to a dirt road; enters his waiting automobile and with his invisible Guardian, drives away to new fields of search and discovery.

COMPASS REACTION TO STEEL PYRAMID

In our last issue we showed how the metal pyramid form affected the magnetometer in strange ways. Michael D. Huish of Newport Beach, Calif. Writes:

"... I decided to make my first pyramid from heavy gauge sheet metal. I tackled the job without proper tools - not having worked with ferrous material before. What I lacked in tools and knowledge, I made up for it with sweat. I finally succeeded in completing a 14" base-side pyramid with bottom cover. Perhaps I made this discovery by mistake, since there are easier, workable materials when it comes to bending metal. Anyway the following shows the REACTION OF A COMPASS to the ferrous pyramid."

S = South seeking pole

O = Neutral

(Same on all four edges)
Compass moved from base up, remaining south seeking till it hit 2/3 point between apex and base.

BOOKS IN REVIEW
By Marianne Zezelic

"Magnetism and its Effects on the Living System," by Albert Roy Davis and Walter C. Rawls, Jr. (Exposition Press, Hicksville, N.Y. $8.00, 132 pp.)

For the latest break-throughs in scientific research, this book is a must to read. Written in a non-technical language for the general public, never before published important discoveries of vast implications appear throughout the text.

Interested in the biological effect of the applications of magnetic fields to living systems, the authors, Davis and Rawls, have discovered through systematic research:

A division of the two poles' energies, each separated one from the other, and each having a different potential value in electronic magnetic currents.

Magnetic energy of the negative North pole arrests cancer when applied to the afflicted area.

Degrees of intelligence can be programmed in animals by the controlled use of regulated magnetic fields of energy. The normal life span of animals can be increased by the application of magnetic fields during crucial stages of development.

Magnetic stimulation of the human brain heightens psychic sensitivity and induces ESP.

Such discoveries as these have a wide range of applications. Its impact, upon acceptance by the scientific community, could radically alter present scientific concepts and promote the advancement of magnetic research and developments in the fields of medicine and the biological sciences.

Think of the significance of this! And to further boggle the mind, if levels of intelligence can be stimulated artificially in animals, why not in man also? Think of the achievements mankind might accomplish with minds now capable of unlimited understanding. New worlds could unfold with a better life for us all, as we enter into this, the New Age.

PYRAMID HOME IN THE NORTHLAND . . . The setting is Kachimak Bay, Homer, Alaska. The outside walls of this lovely, 50 foot square, two-story, (deck to apex 31' 6") structure is covered with Arizona sandstone. Elmer and Shirly Daarud are the contented owners.

A MATHEMATICAL FORMULA MADE VISIBLE AS PATTERN . . . Another schematic from the Cal-Tech analog computer. Pythagoras, 582-507 B.C., the Greek philosopher believed all life essence, and its relationships, could be understood and expressed in numbers. Clairaudients have heard music of the spheres for thousands of years. Composers, musicians with physical instruments, mathematics and sound have brought filtered flashes of Cosmic harmonies down into human awareness. Pythagoras saw an orderliness and interdependence between all vibrations, musical in structure, in their scales, octaves and harmonies. These tones of the Cosmos encompass the universal spectrum enabling interchanges to occur. Thus at the higher levels of self-realization, one can conceivably feel sounds, taste sights, and even hear colors. Science has already proven it. We're now on the threshold of seeing music without any special gifts.

CAMERA OBSCURA
A New Reality

Can we somehow see without eyes? Since our eyes receive reflected electromagnetic light waves, energies as magnetic lines of force from the objects and substances perceived, isn't it possible to cognize things as images by means of vibrations in other ways?

Light energies passing through the pupil to the optic nerves of the retina, thence to the brain and mind-body aura enable us to perceive, apprehend and cognize the scene before us. Are internal forces capable of interpreting outside impressions by means of vibrations with the eyes closed? If so, is this in fact an activity of the third eye? Camera Obscura, a unique experiment conducted with eight students last February, at Balboa Island, California, convinced some of us it can be achieved. This extraordinary gathering in a beachfront house, and within a few blocks of home's immediate location awakened something new in our consciousness. The experiment unquestionably proved to some a supersensory state of beingness can be aroused from within. All participants were blindfolded off and on for the better part of three days.

At first, our eyes were covered for a few hours so we could become accustomed to visual, sensory privation. In the early stages, as would be expected, most of us moved around with great caution, protective hands feeling before slow shuffling feet, with an occasional stumble or bump now and then. Jean-Claude Roboly, Toronto movie and television producer directed the experiment. He appropriately set out the ground rules beforehand, and told us we could expect to enter into another dimension of beingness sometime between two, and fifteen hours after the blindfolds went on -BILL COX

ANOTHER KIND OF COSMIC CLOCK, HISTORY'S ETERNAL TIME CAPSULE . . . Within the great pyramid's mass and form, its chambers, lines, angles, and measurements, knowledge of man the microcosm, and the universe (macrocosm) awaits our discovery. Ancient adepts, perhaps with foreknowledge of some cataclysmic event, demonstrated their great wisdom in constructing this wondrous indestructable, library in stone.

Dear Bill,

My twelve year-old Jacque was stiff-legged, and losing hair . I had suspended an 18" high pyramid about six feet above his bed. Within a few days Jacque's energy level rose significantly. He was spry as a pup. My wife Eunice was astounded by the dog's sudden transformation. His legs became limber and he seemed to be continually under my wife's feet while she worked in the kitchen. Eunice liked Jacque better when he was less energetic, stiff, quiet and keeping to his bed most of the time. As a result, I had to remove the pyramid from above his bed. Prior to removal of the dog's pyramid canopy, I noticed his coat began to improve, with more hair and more shine. Jacque has now passed on, but wherever he is I'm sure he remembers the pyramid experience. Ed Serratore, Santa Barbara.

Howdy Bill,

We had a man named Ralph Swain in here yesterday and he is one of the most remarkable Dowzers I have ever met. He uses a little wooden pendulum, a Puget pendulum made by Ernie Johns. I suggested to Ralph that he visit you during his visit to Julian in San Diego County. Test this guy in any way, particularly where you desire unknown information. If you have lost anything, he can find it. If it's stolen he can tell you the town or area where it is. You can learn more about dowzing with him than with anyone I know, and I have had some very good Dowzers in here. Ralph thinks this "ray" business, as well as a lot of other theories are a lot of bunk, and demonstrates why. Try to find a chink in his armor, and if you do, let me know. Ralph wrote on a piece of paper that I was going to take a trip this coming week, and I didn't know it myself. He told me not to open the note until I had made up my mind to change my plans for the week of Feb 2 to 8th. Well this evening, when going through the mail, I found I had to go to Kansas City in a hurry. I opened the note, and it said: "Going to Kansas City. One warehouse closed by bankruptcy... other will provide necessities. Don't go to Omaha; Lincoln vendor will have engines. You will get to Hays, Kansas on return, and stay over in a storm." The storm part, I don't know about yet, but the other is correct. I called Omaha today, and they don't have my pumps, but a Lincoln source does. This guy knew absolutely nothing about my needing pumps and engines, and he didn't know my customary route is through Hays, Kansas. Figure this one out. Karl Von Mueller, Exanimo Establishment, Segundo, Colorado. (Ed. note: Unfortunately, Ralph didn't come by, and we don't know how to reach him.)

Gentlemen,

I have experimented with PHOTO-CHROMOLIGHT units on sick people. I would like to hear from Bill and Betty Finch, of Sedona, Arizona, regarding their experiments with CHROMOLIGHT units and pyramids, and would like to try this myself. I experimented with pyramids on house plants, very successful, also used them on my bed, wow, what a blast that lasted about eight months. How would you like to have your bed jump, or rather be jiggled for nearly eight months whenever I'd lie down. It's a good thing I have twin beds and nerve enough to outwit the situation with funny things happening around here. Things seem peaceful now for the past month and the bed is still, and I sleep well. But other things are happening again.

I've been hearing a loud popping at the north end of my room for three nights now. It happens between five and six a.m. and sounds like tops of bottles popping loudly. It doesn't stop until I'm wide awake, up and walking around. The other night I walked to the bathroom, and as I came back I turned out a small hall light. I then got into bed and pulled the covers up to my chin. I glanced at a pile of books, tabloids and the Holy Bible. A large, ten inch, diameter, round dish was filled with fire. I sat up and looked into the dish, seeing coils of fire, burning with a six-inch high flame. It was deep orange, and then suddenly disappeared, even the dish. I just went to sleep... never a dull day around here, but things have quieted down some.

I have an Atlantean generator, and put requests for health for my husband, and for my sons with their work, and a place of business for myself. My sons both got the help they needed already.

About ten days ago, my Atlantean generator took off for the first time. The outside temperature was 20 degrees. We were without heat for about forty hours, as a new gas furnace was being installed. I walked into the spare room, and having on warm clothes, didn't notice the cold at first. But after winding the generator again, about ten minutes later, I noticed the cold again. At noon, I went back into the room and it was warm. After removing a sweater, coat and scarf, I stood in a sleeveless dress and barefooted. As I neared the table, my legs felt warm and tingly. So I put my hand over the Atlantean generator. Heat was pouring out from it. The room temperature was about seventy degrees, and it continued through into the next day. I shouldn't have given it a second treatment of prosperity liquid, furnished by the Atlantean generator distributor. About five days before, I had cut one inch squares of blue prosperity papers and placed them around the generator, putting three drops of prosperity oil on each, and covering the planting ground with an eight inch pyramid. I wind the generator about three times a day, but now it has stopped heating. By the way, I have a bed-table clock under a pyramid. It's been there for ten days now, and it will only run face down. Mrs. Ione Meichler, St. Joseph, Mich.

Bill Cox, editor,

An experiment with what you refer to as the 57th octave could be very easily tested. Simply rub fragrance on to the hands, then hold your hands over the nostrils -- pyramid style -- with thumbs under the chin, and touching. Then, inhale the scent deeply. As you exhale, picture a telepathic recipient inhaling the scent. Don't use much fragrance, as overuse of perfume can fill an entire house with its aroma for hours. Of course there are technical explanations of dissimulation and reassimilation at the point of fragrance, where it is received. However I doubt you would need this explained to you. Judith Ann Christie, Ande Herald Press, La Habra, Calif.

PYRAMID ENERGY ENVIRONMENTS proudly announces the first "TWO FLUID SOLAR BOILER SYSTEM" installed and operating in a private residence. SOLAR ENERGY is now a REALITY! Imagine heating your water and home on the amount of energy it takes to burn one 100 watt electric light bulb! Since its installation, in observation and monitoring its observation, it far exceeds our expectations in both beauty and efficiency.

The unit, a "Two Fluid Solar Boiler," operates on the parabolic dome principle. The invention utilizes a transparent lens to focus solar light energy through a primary heat exchange fluid and onto a heat absorber. The primary heat exchange fluid employed is a substantially transparent oil so the lens is able to focus a large portion of the incident solar energy onto a curved heat-absorbing surface. In turn, it heats the domestic water supply. For further information, write to "The Pyramid Guide," P.O. Box 176, Lake Elsinore, Ca. 92330.

I am compiling a list of all existing occult-oriented shops throughout the world to be published shortly under the title, "INTERNATIONAL OCCULT-SHOPS DICTIONARY." Q. I have read all your Pyramid Guides, from the first letter to the last perion. One thing stands out to me. You and your readers often talk about "Correctly Oriented" (one side facing magnetic North) pyramids. I have made quite a few models of the pyramid, including one 7 1/2 feet high that I sleep in, and detected no difference when it (they) are not correctly oriented. I made a pyramid hat that I wear from time to time, and have found that it cures colds and flu, headaches, etc... (I do not keep it correctly oriented.) Maybe you or some of your readers can tell me why having a pyramid "Correctly Oriented" is so important. Bernard Gotaut, Valpariso, Indiana.

A. You are right in your assumptions, according to our understanding of latent energies to be found within the pyramid form. We believe the north orientation of the flat side (not corner), of the replica is important where magnetic and perhaps electromagnetic energies are concerned. It's readily apparent to us that we are experiencing the effects of a wide variety and intensity of energies, for example; solar, lunar, light, mental, emotional, gravitational, ultrasonic and uncountable other vibrations -- by the way -- unnamed in most cases, plus an infinite mixing and interplay of these forces. Psychic energy, (prana), seems to express as a grouping of the more positive fields, though this power is in itself an abstract manifestation to those who are unaware of its existence, in terms of the ability to summon its power. In short, we feel the orientation is useful and may help in most cases to build an immediate charge within the replica -- a disoriented model will eventually acquire a near-full charge, and as we see it, that is the essential difference we have discovered thus far.

Q. Larry L. Irvin, of Medford Oklahoma, offers help in answering Glenn Sweigart's, Hieronymus Box problem, (see page six, Pyramid Guide newsletter #14.)

A. "He has a 1/2 inch factor of error on his scale. I have studied the patent and experimented. If he would set up by patent description, with exception of prism and scale, the electrodes being stationary, and rotate the prism until the desired refraction of energy hits the receiving electrode it will help. This is easily done by using an epoxy glue, to fasten the triangular surface of one end of the prism to a rotating shaft, with knob with pointer, and scale on the other end. The system can be zeroed-in upon moving the secondary electrode.

Q. I've been studying Wilhelm Reich's inventions and as yet haven't been able to put together a proper lab for experiments. I'm wondering whether or not Pyramids act as "oraccus," and have to be aired out and watered down or grounded to water? I also wonder whether or not Pyramids transmute or transform the "DOR" (deadly orgone), they attract? One rancher told me underground water, as far down as 180 feet, below the base of a pyramid serves as a grounding force. Since he was talking to five people at once, I have doubts about that being a comprehensive answer. If you can help, please let me know. Mr. K. Jones, Vancouver, B.C. Canada.

A. Yes, pyramids can act as oraccus when alternating layers of organic and non-organic panels are used. We don't have any information on the use of water, or grounding in conventional ways. We believe the pyramids so constructed, will perform with all the force of an orgone accumulator of other shape. We have received several, rather strange stories of experiments involving the orgone principle. The results don't encourage further testing by those who are inexperienced in this area of research and testing. As for pyramids acting as a grounding force with underground water, we don't have any information to share in this regard, but Verne L. Cameron, noted that cone rays nullified emanations usually found emanating upward from this source, as detected with divining instruments.

The cutting edge of this razorblade, photographed under an electron microscope (1.1 x 10³ power), shows no appreciable change, after substantial charging under a properly constructed and directionally aligned pyramid. One can only wonder at the continuing rash of reports indicating pyramid-powered cheap blades, produce up to two-hundred smooth shaves. So-charged, electric razors and other cutlery reportedly cut better. Can the electron microscope record physical evidence of the presumed dulling of blades by moonrays?

Q. Can pyramid energies be harmful? Can one get a headache sitting in or near a model?

A. We can only go by our own investigations and reports. Once in a while we hear of a negative reaction experienced by someone. The bulk of our findings indicate the pyramid energies are beneficial, soothing, and/or stimulating. It's easy for some people to blame others, their environment or conditions on something else besides their own problems in consciousness. We are continually in, around and surrounded by form, forms and their arrangement: We are form! Our houses and rooftops are frequently geometric forms. We are unceasingly bombarded by textures and colors, sounds and myriad other sense activating objects and substances. Where does one draw the line. As mentioned before, we turn to our own research and experience for answers, and find the pyramid shape a positive instrument of nature's activity.

The symbol of this jewelry is of divine inspiration, for in this symbol are mysteries still not completely understood. But like the shape of the pyramid it is known to possess mysterious energies. In the proportions of this mystical symbol we find the mathematical equations to the Great Pyramid of Gizeh, the seventh and only remaining wonder of the ancient world, a structure that to this day of modern technology can not be duplicated. The Great Pyramid is a source of knowledge into the mysteries of life and once served as a temple of wisdom in the Hermetic mystery schools. Those passing through this holy school were allowed to possess this symbolic sign of their wisdom and position. Some of the great masters who wore this symbol were Solon, Thales, Pythagoras and Plato.

The exterior circumference is equal to 365.2424 and consequently represents the terrestrial orbit. The interior circumference is equal to 25,827 years, representing the procession of the equinox. It shows the first actual ratio of Pi, (3.14159) although officially π (Pi) was not discovered until just 600 years ago. It also shows the correct measurement of our Earth from the Sun, not confirmed by science until just a few years ago. It contains the formula for obtaining the weight of the Earth, the direct ratio to obtain the distances of both the Polar and Equatorial circumferences of our Earth, It is the first and last letters of the ancient alphabet, Alpha and Omega, used so often in the ancient mystical chants. This symbol is truly recognized as the mathematical equation of the Universe itself. These are but only a few of the mysteries cast in this mysterious symbol over 5000 years ago! Great honor was always bestowed on this great sign and its meaning was kept highly secret, and explains why such an air of mystery surrounds this holy symbol.

THE COSMIC CLOCK

This ANCIENT TIME WHEEL . . . reflects outward from its solar center, the equinoxes, solstices and falling sunside, displaying the eternal cycles of spirals, rhythms and patterns in our starry world, and the universe . . . the Divine Dance of Creation.

Mans' desire to understand himself and the world leads him to study both the cosmos and the atom. From a certain point, the similarity of movement between the two is strikingly apparent and time becomes the key to this knowledge.

The fact that this key has been known and used for thousands of years is revealed in numerous ancient writings, symbols and Hiero glyphs. Among the formulas giving a summary of the content of many symbols, there was one which had particular significance, "As Above, So Below," from the Emerald Tablets of Hermes Trismegistus.

From this evolved the concept that it would be possible, using the principle of scale, to put the entire universe into one complete unitary perspective. This perspective, when incorporating the eternal time cycles and their relationship to each other into any kind of all inclusive calendar, is known as the Cosmic Clock.

TWO VIEWS OF THE FAMED CRYSTAL SKULL . . . completely hand-formed, possibly centuries in its making from a single block of hard quartz crystal. It was recovered from beneath the altar ruins, within the jungle-covered, 7½ acre citadel of the ancient Mayan city of Lubaantu'n by explorer, F. A. Mitchell-Hedges in 1927. A several-stories-high pyramid was also found within the citadel complex. The skull, possibly of Atlantean, and/or Babylonian origin may have been brought to the Americas by the Phoenicians around 1,000 B.C. Frank Dorland, says historical records suggest the skull may have been held in the London, inner-sanctum of the Knights Templar prior to the holy wars. The high priests probably executed ceremonial magic with the skull; a ribbon-like prism in the cranium acts as a magnifier. Hollow light pipes projecting upward from the base permit light reflections from the eye-sockets. The moveable jaw easily coordinates motion with speech. Lesser quality crystal skulls exhibited in the British and Paris museums, and miniature versions lack the Mitchell-Hedges skull's brilliant craftsmanship.

FRANK DORLAND, Santa Barbara, Calif., art restorer, and six years, former keeper of the Crystal Skull, says the artifact helped him rediscover the ancient science of BIOCRYSTALLOGRAPHY, (crystals as they relate to the human mind and body). Frank describes the presence of voices, chanting choirs, bells, auras and other phenomena associated with the Crystal Skull on page one.
