HIGH WATERMARK ON THE GREAT PYRAMID?

Centuries old rumors declare the enduring presence of an ancient Genesis floodline circumscribing the Great Pyramid in Egypt. If the limestone block casing, pillaged for use in Cairo buildings was in fact mostly removed over the last thousand years, then the high watermark from the great deluge of Biblical times (if it did exist) must have disappeared with the destroyed exterior masonry.

Nevertheless, mystical writers still maintain the notion that marks of water erosion can still be seen along the upper reaches of the Great Pyramid. Doreal, claimed that the mighty, man-made stone mountain at Giza registers a waterline stain 300 feet above its base. The long and meticulous records of alternating rising and falling Nile elevations fail to show this mighty river as the cause.

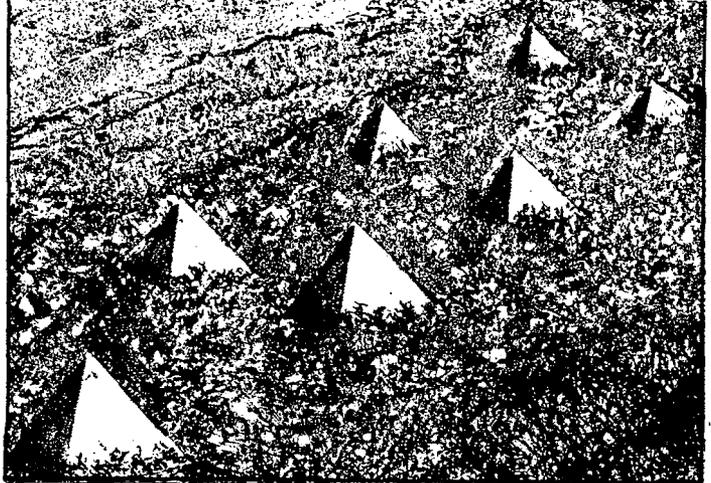

"...One of the first things I checked," writes Tom Valentine, in his recent book THE GREAT PYRAMID, Man's Monument to Man... "When I visited the Great Pyramid... (Chan) Thomas (cataclysmologist) had been told a watermark exists all the way around the masonry... about 200 feet up from the base. I've never read any mention of such a thing," Tom adds, "and it seems to me that (Pyramidologists—Pyramid explorers (Charles P.) Smythe, (William) Petrie and (David) Davidson would have noticed (the watermark if) it had existed. "no such watermark was there..."

Even at 300 feet above the Pyramid's base, a waterline at this elevation would only be 467 feet above the average low level of the Nile River nearby, a rather shallow record, considering the world deluge in Noah's time when the ark presumably rose to a point 14,000 feet up on Mt. Ararat before the drowning seas finally began to subside. But another connection occurs with mention of (pyramid) ziggurats in Genesis.

Leonard Woolley, archeologist in 1927-28, made some important excavations on the site of the ancient Sumerian city of Ur, now in Iraq on the Euphrates River, some 800 air miles east of Cairo and the Great Pyramid. Woolley found an eight foot thick layer of clay formed by sedimentation from surface waters 40 feet below ground-level. The young archeologist compared the Biblical version of Genesis with the much older Gilgamesh accounts of a great deluge; and by examining a long succession of ancient Sumerian kings, and previous archeological validations of Biblical writings, Woolley determined that this particular alluvial deposit of clay was evidence confirming the flood of Noah according to the time described in the Bible.

SATELLITE PHOTO REVEALS LOST PYRAMIDS

PYRAMIDIONS TOWER ABOVE PERUVIAN JUNGLE'S HIGHEST TREETOPS... Assuming that the tallest trees sheltering this ancient, lost city are 100 feet high, these recently discovered, South American Pyramids (and there are twelve) may even exceed the Great Pyramid in height.

A great sage once said: "Those remaining of the world's earliest constructed Pyramids when located on a global map will reveal a profound secret message." Researchers believe more than ever that the Great Pyramid is the "Rosetta Stone" of the Universe, and now it seems that it is connected with some very special planetary scheme of pyramids emerging from peculiarly remote and unlikely hiding places in the north and south latitudes. One site of intense interest marks a pyramid complex and possible lost Incan city first observed as dots of manmade origin appearing on a Landsat II Satellite photo taken 569 miles over a Peruvian Jungle area in 1975.

Eight miniscule specks later observed on the photo by Philip Miller, a world adventurer from Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, led him to organize a twenty-five man expedition into the eastern jungle slopes of the Andes. At this writing, it's not certain if Miller has completed his proposed June 1st, 1978 mission into the Peruvian interior west of the Amazon basin, but the explorer had already made a personal flight reconnaissance over the region March 28, 1978.

Two Peruvian explorers showed the photo to Miller and Herb Sawinski who made the preliminary studies of the phenomenon. All observed eight tiny dots lying alongside a nearly inaccessible, mountain ridge. A pattern of fleck in two parallel rows, two deep and four wide suggested that they were the works of man and not natural geologic structures. But Miller, flying over 15,000 foot peaks to the site some 90 miles east of Cuzco, discovered to his surprise that the eight photo dots were in fact twelve ancient pyramids grown over with vegetation. The pyramid layout extended for some 2 1/4 miles with the monuments perhaps attaining heights some 500 feet in height above the forest treetops: if so, Miller says this could well be the archeological find of the century.

I've been drinking distilled water for more than four years now. I seldom drink tap water from municipal supplies — only when I have no other choice — when travelling or visiting friends, etc.

After using distilled water for so many years I can readily smell and taste the often polluting organisms, inorganic minerals and unwholesome additives so evident in various metropolitan water service lines. Some tap water is so bad I dislike even brushing my teeth or rinsing out my mouth with the stuff, so I try to carry a quart bottle of distilled water in my car at all times.

Upon investigation I was shocked to discover the following problems existing with ordinary tap water.

1. Every other American may be drinking water that fails to meet federal standards (ref. U.S. Health Service).
2. Some minerals and silicon cannot be assimilated by the body and may become deposited in one's internal organs, joints and arteries. I have seen what some household tap water can do to tarnish, clog and erode plumbing, so I'm not too surprised with this revelation; however, I once worried that distilling would remove valuable minerals from our drinking water; but now I realize it's safer to have them filtered out (all minerals by distilling) as I can replace these minute quantities of body assimilating minerals by eating fresh uncooked vegetables, grains, and other live natural foods. Besides if one needed to rely on water supplies for their daily ration of minerals, they would find swamp water highly rich in organic mineral content, but of course, one would be foolish to go that route. Plants thrive on inorganic minerals, humans don't!!
3. Some surface waters are known to contain agricultural and industrial wastes, insecticide residues, fertilizers and other unwholesome pollutants carried into the atmosphere from auto exhausts, etc., and find their way into waterways from runoff following a rainstorm. These include cadmium, asbestos, arsenic, cyanides and other poisonous substances. Pollutants from rivers and streams have decreased marine life in the seas by 40% over the last 20 years.
4. Boiling water for purification leaves one with a false sense of security. While some bacteria will be destroyed, the purest water disappears into the atmosphere as steam. Nitrates, heavy metals, such as lead and so on remain in the water, proportionately greater in content than before boiling.
5. The chemicals of chlorine, phosphates, sodium aluminates, flourine, alum, lime, carbon and soda ash are commonly added to drinking water in an attempt to purify municipal supplies.
6. An estimated 40% of Americans consume water previously used earlier for industrial or domestic purposes. Tap water in some cities may have been used by fellow Americans up to five times before I indulge in it, according to where I'm located at the time as a water consumer and depending upon the goals of a water company or municipality to make it potable and hopefully safe for drinking.
7. Soft water systems do not distill inorganic and possibly harmful minerals.
8. Water hardens as it runs over or through the ground. The more it filters through the soil the harder it becomes. And the nastier its taste, the more concerned I become...

THE MYSTERY OF MEMORY

We have ample research available today to show that there are several ways to pierce the veil separating moments of active awareness and memory. Clear recall of past events, subjects read, numbers, names and so on, can be learned once the functions of mental impress and means of desired recollection are rightly understood.

After long study, research and experimentation with memory readiness and the means to channel certain sought for information into conscious awareness, I have found the following self-discoveries most useful: A. To simplify a complex but natural activity of mind, there are three basic functions of memory one can work with in the beginning. 1. Short-Term, 2. Intermediate, and 3. Long-Term Memory. Short-Term Recall, is often applied when we don't want to clutter our minds with trivia; in looking up a phone number and remembering it just long enough to dial the digits after having closed the phone book. If the line happens to be busy, we frequently have to look the number up again, having already forgotten it in a matter of minutes, sometimes even seconds.

Intermediate Recall, is automatically used when one needs to retain certain information for a limited period of time, such as the phone number of a friend we may be staying with for several weeks while on vacation, etc. In time the number fades away from convenient recollection once the need for this information has outlived its usefulness.

Long-Term Memory, expressed so often with elderly, senile persons who can vividly recall the most minute details of their youth but who peculiarly fail to remember seemingly important names, instructions or significant points in a conversation just concluded. But one doesn't have to be old to forget things in this manner, we all have memory lapses with short and intermediate term — memory experiences frequently caused by inattention, boredom, fatigue, mindwandering and so forth.

Long-Term Memory experiences can surface to immediate awareness after being buried for several years within the deeper recesses of mind, those figuratively forgotten or willful events dredged up by some particular need, or through some unexpected, associative happening "in the now."

The veil separating so-called consciousness and clear memory can be seen through, ever so dimly in several ways, as suggested at the beginning of this article: the veil can be pierced through hypnosis, in trance states; by mediums, through association; training leading to an understanding of the linkages or clear channels connecting one's logical, reasoning mind with its various memory banks; and intense contemplation or meditation, with the latter methods being the most preferable and reliable. Dear Bill Cox,

I am still experimenting with pyramids. I rooted some African Violets and planted them and had a pyramid hanging from the wall over them, about two feet from the violets. They grew really fast and are beautiful plants now full of blooms. They are in 3 1/2 inch pots and the plants measure 14 inches across.

My husband put a large pyramid over four tomato plants. We had lots of tomatoes, very large. Then we brought them in and put them under a pyramid until time to eat or cook them. They were delicious.

Please keep the Pyramid Guide coming to our house. Sincerely, Margaret Allison, 10 Violet St., Hampton, Va. 23663

THE PURE PRANATARIAN is one who essentially extracts from earth's higher elements, the air and ethers, in the form of Prana, life energies associated with the spiritual and psychic and vital forces of human beings. Prana therefore, is belived to nourish and stimulate one's various vehicles, devoid of chemical supply (food and water).

As evidence that Pranatarism may be attainable and a desirable toward a harmonious evolution, here are two contemporary, well documented cases: 1. Giri Bala, the non-eating, female saint referred to in Paramahansa's remarkable book Autobiography of a Yogi, first published in 1946.

The saintly lady, reportedly vitalized her body with Cosmic Energy extracted from the sun and ether by applying certain methods well understood by Yogi masters.

Besides not eating, Giri Bala, who appears to be past middle age in one photo, experienced the ideal state of awareness known as continuity of consciousness, where the thin line between sleep and wakefulness dissolves; where deep rest may be gained by one so endowed, at any hour and for any length of time without the disciple ever losing so-called conscious awareness, also known in the ordinary sense as the nightly little death or sleep.

Furthermore, upon closer inspection from the air, Miller perceived what appeared to be yellowish stone walls, probably exposed in that great tangle of verdant green by constant seasonal rains and erosion. Moreover, a stone path or roadway led downslope from the pyramid row into something resembling an ancient lost city. Could the site somehow be connected with the legendary gold of the Incas removed from Cuzco and hidden by the Indians during the pillaging by Juan Pizarro, Spanish conquistador in 1532?

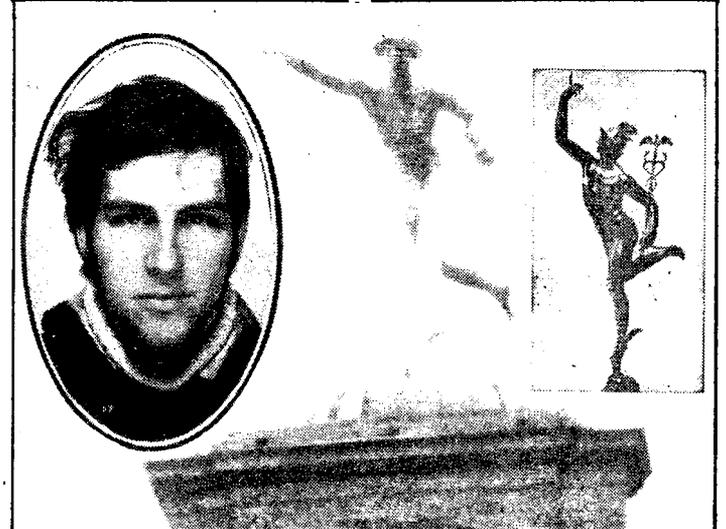

Philip Miller, president of the Ft. Lauderdale Explorer's Club, "Adventures Unlimited" is an experienced backcountry scout, having explored several far-flung temple, cave, ocean bottom and buried treasure sites in South America, Mexico and the West Indies. The Guide wishes Philip and his companions the best in their bold adventure, estimated to require a financial 'nut' of one-quarter million dollars. Their route takes them out of the ancient Incan capitol Cuzco, about 300 miles southeast of Lima, Peru. From Cuzco the entourage travels to a remote mountainous ranchsite 55 miles away. Beyond this first stop the explorers reportedly have to negotiate another 89 miles, most of it by motorboat upstream along the Pantiacolla River. The group must then find their way the remaining seven miles through an ascending, forested area before reaching the pyramid, lost city complex.

It will be interesting to learn of the outcome of this expedition, and two additional, separate safaris involving French and Japanese explorers. A follow-up to these reports is now in progress and will hopefully appear in an early, future edition of Pyramid Guide.

2. Terese Neumanaite, described in Viktoras Kulvinskas' outstanding book, Survival Into the 21st Century. Terese herself, has survived since 1926, on a daily serving of only one teaspoon of water and the host of Holy Communion. Terese, too, has thrived with short periods of rest in the form of twenty minute meditations.

Her foodless living has been observed by scientists, showing to them and others that contrary to standard belief, one needn't eat quantities of food and water, gross chemical nourishment in order to survive; that this universal concept can only be the result of humankind's longtime, mental imprisonment through Maya or illusion.

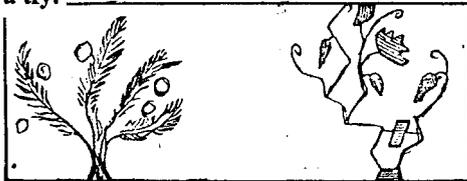

Terese, also demonstrated abundant energy in carrying out her daily physical activities, tending the church flower garden and so on. So the Pranatarian is a cut above the Fruitarian and Vegetarian, the eternal "Faster."

THE MERCURY MYSTERY... The progression of these three photos taken of the 'Merkur' statue located above a 50 year-old warehouse on the Kobmagergave in Copenhagen, and recently converted into a walking street, where random photos taken in the vicinity of the post office building across the way in the fall of 1977. Though the pictures were snapped by the photographer with no specific purpose in mind producing the unexpected results, they were taken at different times on the same day and with some change in photo perspective. Allowing for glare, overexposure and so forth, the strange phenomenon took place showing the metallic emblem in Mercury's right hand fading away into invisibility. Latest reports indicate that the hand-held symbol is back in the delty's grip, if it ever left at all. ## JOJOBA OIL WILL SAVE THE WHALES.

This little-known plant grows profusely in desert regions producing seed beans which chemically yield a liquid wax. The substance doesn't go rancid, decompose or change in viscosity under extreme temperatures and makes an ideal lubricant for everything from auto transmissions to wristwatches and cosmetics. Nothing compares with the Jojoba extract, except whale sperm which has been banned for importation to the U.S. since the Endangered Species Act of 1971. The plant sometimes referred to as the "Goat Nut" is growing in Asian, African, Latin American, U.S. and South Pacific regions. It happily flourishes along freeways and seems impervious to attack from auto exhausts and related air pollutants. The oil of Jojoba (Ho-ho-ba) has already reached the level of commercial distribution in U.S. health food stores. Give it a try.

COMMERCIAL CRUDE OIL FROM EUPHORBIA LATHYRIS, another desert loving plant is now potentially feasible, according to a July 1978 report. Dr. Melvin Calvin, a Nobel laureate Chemist has been experimenting with the Euphorbia (Caper Spurge, also called the Mole or Gopher Plant) and notes that it produces a milky latex of hydrocarbons and water. Photosynthesis enables the Euphorbia to capture carbon dioxide from the earth's atmosphere, separating the hydrogen from the water and turning it into a sugar-like carbohydrate with only one oxygen atom on each carbon atom. Some plants can eventually reduce the carbohydrates to the level of hydrocarbons with the oxygen atom conspicuously absent, and this is no less than petroleum.

Dr. Calvin, crushed a harvest of Euphorbia Lathyrus, releasing the latex and mixed it with an acetone solvent to produce black crude oil. This product will be a non-polluting source of energy and the answer to the waning supply of fossil fuels. "By the year 2,000," says Dr. Calvin, "the U.S. energy shortage will be 20 times more severe than it was during the Arab oil embargo of 1973." He envisions a series of Euphorbia Lathyrus plantations spread over arid, now unused lands in the Southwest United States and desert regions the world over. The plant can also save earth's atmosphere from expected devastation caused by pollutants emanating from fossil fuels.

WORDS OF WISDOM FROM WHAMMOND

RE: THE CAMERON CONE

In material recently sent to the 'gulde,' proving that the Cheops Pyramid is an OCTANT (ie. 1/8th of a sphere), I showed that for a cone to similarly constitute 1/8 of a sphere, the cone's 'apex' angle would have to be 82.8°. Note how close it is to Vern Cameron's 90° angle cone.

Verne's not being concerned about one-eighth of a sphere was trying to make incoming energy reflect out in a parallel beam like an auto headlamp — which is a parabolic-reflector, with the bulb at the focus, a kind of ray gun. One can only do this with a 90° angle cone. I previously pointed out that the normal triangle or 'octant' of a sphere is 3 planes mutually at right angles. This is the radar corner-reflector, because it resembles a corner cut off from a rectangular box. The radar corner reflector is used as a marker/buoy to give a good radar echo from mudbanks and other submerged navigational obstructions. The corner reflector also mirrors a beam back out parallel to the direction it came from. Just like Cameron's 90° angle cone! Why not try mocking-up a few corner-reflectors to see if they work as well as the Cameron cones? If there's something about that 1/8th of a sphere principle used in the Great Pyramid, and 1/8th of a sphere being an 82.8° cone, then Cameron's 90° angle cone has an interestingly close measurement.

ENER-MAGNETIC'S OMNI-DIRECTIONAL PYRAMID... "with a powerful magnet installed in the apex," according to the inventor, "it serves as a functional household appliance, and can easily be used inside a refrigerator. Pyramids without additional magnetic fields are subject to a restriction of 8-10 of their volume for items that spoil at room temperature. For more information, see ENER-MAGNETIC PYRAMIDS ad, this issue.

PSYCHOTRONICS 1978

Psonics Researchers met at Oglethorpe College in Atlanta, Georgia last August '78 in a 4th annual conference and Psychotronics update. The three-day program was both informative and stimulating with the following highlights featured:

Robert Beutlich of Rebcu Industries in Chicago spoke on "THE RING THAT SINGS" producing some mathematical equations that tend to bridge the physical and prephysical dimensions. "The human being is a totally resonant electrical circuit," he said. "In working out the formula for the precious stones in Aaron's Breastplate, their mathematical vibratory identities and resonant relationships, Beutlich said, "I was somewhat dismayed to find that in musical vibratory terms they produced a dissonance."

Robert Miller and Paul Sauvin gave a presentation on the Methods of Detecting and Measuring Healing Energies, "which can change the hydrogen surface tension of water, the color of certain crystals and cloud chamber detection of healing energies. It is now a reality" they said. "Paraelectricity is a measurable amount, (a quantity) of energy which can lower the surface tension of water within three to fifteen minutes." Apparently the bonding energy associated with atoms is affected in some mysterious way. The healers energy rays can also be transferred from mentally charged water into a plant under the conscious, and/or superconscious will of the spiritual healing practitioner.

Dr. Galen Hieronymus, spoke on "From the 'Black Box' to the Radiation Laboratory—The Evolving Psychotronic Instrumentation." "Masonite is hydroscopic, subject to moisture in the air and therefore a poor material to use in building psychotronic, radionic or psonic devices," he said. Dr. Hieronymus also described the subtle difference between Emanation and Radiation. "Emanation," he went on, "is a constant auric force surrounding a form, while Radiation dissipates its energy beaming outward, inversely as the square of the distance attained."

Other speakers included Dr. Henry C. Monteith "Occult and Elementary Particle Physics..." Thomas E. Bearden, of the U.S. Army Missile Command, "Soviet Psychotronic Weaponry"... Dr. Charles Whitehouse "Ethereic Energies..." Dr. Paul Laussac & Mauro Pinheiro Brazilian representatives of Psychotronic International "Parallel Universes..." and Robert C. Beck, Director of Alpha-Metrics Co. "Extreme Low Frequency (ELF) and EEG Entrainment..."

Greetings, Bill;

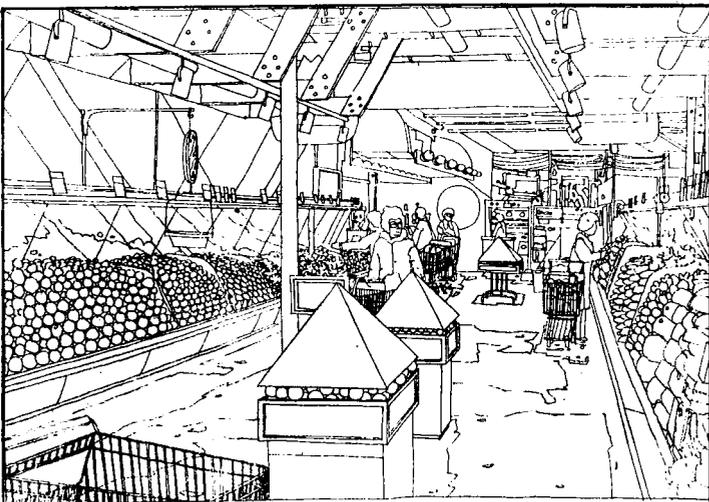

Figure 1. gives the latitude of the Great Pyramid and the locations of the Tropic of Cancer and Tropic of Capricorn. Figure 2. shows that at noon on the day of the winter solstice, the peak of the shadow is 270 feet north of the north base of the pyramid. Figure 3. shows that all four faces are illuminated as does Figure 4.

For the north face to be in a stage between being illuminated or not, the sun must be about 8.2 degrees south of the equatorial plane. The times when this occurs has been scientifically determined. I believe it occurs in late spring and early fall.

Incidentally, geodists have adopted locations for the tropical zones of 23°27' north and south latitudes. Some three years ago, two French geodists, Petrone and La Platrier, tried to determine the shift in the equatorial plane by examining ancient astrological data. They found evidence to indicate that the tropical zones may have been located at 23°31'32" in the year 2,200 B.C. If so, that would put the point you had in mind 271.8714 feet north of the north base of the pyramid. The difference is only 1.8 feet but it could be important if trying to locate the mouth of a vertical shaft, to a hidden chamber or lost hall of records.

On the occurrence of noon and its accuracy, several ancient "wells" in Egypt, the Roman empire and Greece were constructed so that the exact time of 'noon' could be determined. There are about five obelisks, one in China and one in Mexico, where the same appears to have been true: Some time-out to be accurate to +3 seconds of time.

It is worthwhile for you to explore the Great Pyramid shadow patterns, they could prove to be very interesting. Best wishes, Bill. Sincerely, E.D. Robinson, 2903 Collins Ave., Wheaton, MD 20902.

PYRAMIDS PRESERVING PERISHABLE ITEMS...In a produce store. Architectural concept and design by Robert Armon.

Dear Mr. Cox,

I wonder if you've read in the June '77 Atlantic Monthly: LIFE ON MARS, by David Chandler? Paraphrased, it states "some surprising formations have been seen, the most inexplicable of which are the three-sided pyramids found on the plateau Elysium. Scientists have tried to find a natural geological process to account for the pyramid formations; some two miles across at the base... As yet the pyramids' origin are far from being explained in conventional terms..."

Is this not a surprising bit of information, especially to those of us who are interested in pyramids? (See Mars pyramid photo and caption in #31 Sept.-Oct. '77 issue of the Pyramid Guide. eds.) I wonder why this information has never been publicized before? I hadn't previously heard about this phenomenon and presume you haven't either; but there it is, buried away in Chandler's LIFE ON MARS article: rather interesting, do you not agree? Mary Jane Doty, Elgin, Illinois.

FLYING MAN

Ever since the dawn of recorded history man has dreamed of flying, often envious of the liberating buoyancy of soaring birds, butterflies and the ever-present, seldom seen Angels of heaven. Sometimes man through invention and an extraordinary amount of faith has tried to make his dreams come true, all the way from flapping his arms billowed with sails, to grandiose notions of anti-gravity. As the history books show, many have tried but most have failed, many giving up their lives in the attempt.

But in our time, lighter than air — craft and equipment, rocketry and other mechanical devices, literally designed to overpower and somewhat release from the pull of gravity are now in vogue. Now the UFOs are with us, flitting through the skies seemingly free from the tug of gravitation. Various investigators agree that the motive force involved in navigating a flying saucer may be none of the foregoing, and that they are likely powered by celestial, solar, higher electrical or magnetic energies of one kind or another.

The ancient races, most notably the Egyptians, Greeks and Sumerians yearned for the day when ordinary man could fly; the great legacy of their paintings, stone sculptures, artifacts and historic inscriptions attest to the fact. Prior to the time on earth of these civilizations who left us a record of their activities, were the earlier races only known to us through mythological writings and sculpture. At least some of them could fly or their gods, demigods and angels became airborne at times.

AN ACCURATE NATURAL CALENDAR (Part I of Two Parts)

by James R. Morgan, M.S., F.R.C.

Reprinted by permission of the author and (abridged from) The Rosicrucian Digest, article of the same name, January 1976 edition.

Because of my training in the Rosicrucian Order and other studies of the Hermetic Wisdom, I was already conversant with Egyptian and Oriental esoteric values. I was therefore astounded to see so many points of similarity between the symbolism of an indigenous American culture and the Old World. I had read scientific reports describing Indian dances as "hunting magic" and "primitive incantations." That misinformation made me all the more startled to see firsthand that genuine Indian ceremonials were extremely profound esoteric rituals...

Personal visits to important archaeological sites throughout North America, has convinced me beyond doubt that trade and cultural exchange during thousands of years of pre-Columbian times had been vastly more extensive and enormously more potent in a cultural sense than most professional archaeologists have realised...Therefore, I undertook a thoroughgoing analysis of available information about Meso-american astronomy and related subjects.

TEXTBOOK VERSIONS OF INDIAN CALENDAR OPEN TO QUESTION

It was one of the greatest intellectual shocks of my life to realize, after minutely analyzing the quantitative technical literature, that much of the information about the American Indian calendar which one finds in general texts, and in popular articles is simply untrue! In particular, the Mayan calendar was neither original nor accurate. It was only one of many Meso-american calendars, all of which were derived from fundamental roots that go so far back into antiquity that their origin is quite obscure. The Mayan calendar took no account of a leap year correction and consequently had drifted so far out of synchronization with the real world of nature that the Spanish and Indians could have been celebrating New Year in July rather than in December when the conquistadors arrived in the sixteenth century. It is however, completely true that the Mayan calendar uniquely defined every day over extremely long periods of time, but was achieved in a perfectly arbitrary manner similar to our Julian day count.

CHACO INDIANS TUNED TO COSMOS

Thus the Chaco Indians of New Mexico may indeed have achieved a major scientific "breakthrough" by observationally keying their version of the basic Mesoamerican calendar to the astronomical phenomenon of winter solstice in a very practical manner. At winter solstice of each year the sun reaches its most southerly declination and "turns around" to start a new yearly cycle. By this simple idea, but technologically exacting procedure the Chacoans elevated their timekeeping regime above the shackles of superstition and placed it in perpetual and practical synchronization with nature. The more I delved into the minute details of the Native American calendar, the more clear it became that the original concepts must have been highly mystical...twenty-day names — crocodile, wind, lizard, and so on — denoted astrobiological and divination characteristics. Certainly these names must be alluding to cosmological forces rather than literally to a crocodile in the river or to a shelter on the hill, and so on. It made no more sense to assign literal translations to these names than it would to do so with our own symbols for zodiacal signs.

Ancient American Indians like other people in the world, had been more deeply concerned with subtle esoteric principles and astrobiological rhythms than with a civil calendar. This was a key that unlocked a Pandora's box of clues.

LUNAR CYCLES VS SOLAR CYCLES

Though professional archaeologists are reluctant to acknowledge that ancient Indians used lunar cycles, I maintain that lunar cycles were no less important to man than were the solar cycles, especially fertility and growth processes...Early American Indians recognized and used the lunar month as a unit of time and as a monitor of natural rhythms. They divided the lunar month into four phases in the same way as the rest of the world has divided it since the dawn of civilization...Ancient Indians recognized the same alternation of active and passive polarities of the lunar astrobiological force...They likely divided each phase of the moon into one negative and one positive period, thus generating eight polarity periods of about three and one-half days each during the course of a lunar month. By recognizing two tide cycles during each day, it's logical that the interval between each daily passage of the moon was divided into eight equal polarity units of about three hours' duration.

Pre-Columbian Indians, and I suspect other ancient people as well, went further and attached very great importance to the motions of the planets. Their change from evening to morning stars, and vice versa, for Mercury and Venus was of paramount significance. Even the Bible contains references to such astronomical phenomena: Job 38:6-7: "...who laid the cornerstone thereof; When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" Also Job 38:31: "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?"

Dear Mr. Cox:

A manuscript is presently pending before El Palacio, the official journal of the Museum of New Mexico, in which I show how Chaco's Great Kiva "computers," and also Stonehenge, could monitor the yearly motions of all the visible planets in addition to that of the sun, moon and Venus as indicated in the first paper. I show also how the Chaco Great Kivas could duplicate Dr. Fred Hoyle's thesis that the Aubrey Holes of Stonehenge were an eclipse-predicting working model of the Zodiac. Additionally I suggest some refinements of the Hoyle Idea that makes it simultaneously agreeable to ages old Hermetic calendrical and divination principles. Also in the second paper I show how, by means of simple observations without telescopes together with use of the elementary geometrical principle of similar triangles, ancient astronomers could have evolved a remarkably accurate notion of a heliocentric solar system.

Not published anywhere is a considerable volume of personal research relating to the "WHY" of ancient man's deep concern with astronomy. When I realized that ancient civilizations all over the world had spent such huge percentages of their skilled manpower on astronomy, I reasoned that more than esthetic values were involved. Accordingly I have executed extensive computer studies of celestial rhythms that show why 52 years and certain fractions and multiples thereof were important and practical units of time.

Chaco's Great Kiva computer studies show the importance of considering the sun and Jupiter as a double star pair, the gravitational equilibrium of which is rhythmically perturbed by the movement of the other planets. This "modulation" of the Jupiter-induced solar tide by the motion of the other planets, I conjecture, induces corresponding variations in the gravitational "stirring" of the sun's surface thereby altering the quantity as well as the quality of energy the sun radiates to space. I believe this to be an important mechanism by which planetary movements significantly alter terrestrial energy levels and thereby influence life processes.

Not evident in any publication is the further important fact that I have continuously been an active student of the Hermetic "philosophies" for at least a third of a century. This has given me practical insights into several principles that are unacceptable to the archaeology "establishment" but which are nonetheless fundamental concepts in the Indian Way. In particular I argue that ancient Indian medicine men and other ancient shamen the world over, had a highly developed "sixth sense" by which they gained knowledge of fundamental natural principles "directly," and by means of which they could "project" their consciousness to distant places without the physical body. As scientific evidence that this is real and not nonsense, I point to the work of Stanford scientist Dr. Karl Pribram who offers plausible physical mechanisms for the "wild" talents of clairvoyance etc. Sincerely, James R. ## AGHARTA, LEGENDARY SUBTERRANEAN KINGDOM

A special feature of inquiry and information.

GROTTO OF ARTEMUS...Cliffside, cave temple entrance of Pakht (Sekhet), lies in a transverse gorge near Beni Hasan in Egypt.

Groups of people since prehistoric times have at one time or another occupied many of the world's great caverns and grottos. From cave-wall markings, petroglyphs, petrographs and the artifacts of early man there's ample evidence that inner earth cavities and caves served as planetary places of human habitation. Then, there are recorded those legendary inner realms of elevated dominion; the subterranean kingdom, Shanalar and finally the most venerable place of the "Holy Ones" on (in) earth, AGHARTA (Agharti).

A fascinating story about Agharta comes down to us through time, since the days of Ghengis Khan, from a place on the Mongolian Plain near Tzogan Luk, on the shore of the River Amyl. The ancient legend alludes to the last minute escape of a Mongolian tribe fleeing before the clutches of the driving Mongolian Chieftan and his merciless henchmen. "A small band of refugees hid themselves in a subterranean country," according to the tale, "after passing through the smoking gate that served as portal to the subterranean kingdom Agharti." A Soyot residing near the Lake of Nogan Kul presumably revealed the entrance to Ferdinand Ossendowski, adventurer, scientist, and an officer of the French Academie, some 57 years ago. No exact details of its location were given in an exciting account by Ossendowski in the journal of his travels, but it must have been near the trail in his journey through the western sector of outer Mongolia (approximately 98° East Longitude 47° North Latitude).

Lamas supposedly cut out the tongue of a hunter who also found his way inside and back out again, to keep him from relating what he had seen in Agharti and divulging the mystery of mysteries. "Finally in his December years it was said, "the old hunter disappeared into the subterranean kingdom never to be seen again."

Ossendowski received additional information from Hutuktu Jelyb Djamsrap, a native living in the mountainous region of Narabanchi Kure, probably near the suspected entrance of Agharti. Hutuktu, the Pandita of Erdeni Dzu, spoke excitedly of the 'KING of the WORLD,' from the subterranean realm, one of majestic appearance and a worker of miracles; unerring prophet and master of earth, ethers and subplanes. The Pandita, on his deathbed said he lived according to the will of the Goro, the "Great One." More supportive data about Agharti came to Ossendowski from the favorite Gelong Lama and Prince Chultun Beyli. "When the continents disappeared under the water in ancient times," said the Gelong, "the people retreated into the

A concerted search for evidence of the lost, sunken continent of Atlantis continues while some meteorologists predict a rise in ocean levels of accelerated proportions in our time. If they're correct, man is again the culprit in charge.

FATAL FOSSIL FUELS — Cause for this concern is well-founded, based on scientific fact. A stern warning follows from scientists who say that something must be done to stop a current, forced melting of the Antarctic ice sheet. The actual culprits in service, they say, are gasoline, oil, natural gas and coal (fossil fuels) which have been burning at an ever increasing rate over the last two centuries. As a result, carbon dioxide saturates earth's atmosphere and causes a potential overheating of our planet (the so-called greenhouse effect). This is explained by the fact that a carbon dioxide blanket surrounds our planet and filters the sun's ultraviolet radiations while infrared radiations from earth are prevented from escaping. So, according to scientists this phenomenon has been gradually heating up the world's atmosphere over the last 200 years. Burning fossil fuels has in large measure replaced wood burning, which benevolently helps to stabilize the atmosphere. By contrast, the eventual pollutants from fossil fuels which industry takes out of the ground are unfortunately pumped up into earth's all-pervasive sea of air.

SEAS CLAIMING THE LAND — The earth's carbon dioxide blanket has increased some 15% during the past century, but 5% of it has occurred since 1973. If the trend doesn't change, scientists predict that the carbon-dioxide accumulation can increase to levels between 30 and 45% in the century ahead. Meteorologists say the world's plants and water surfaces can't keep up with the conversion and absorption necessary and fossil fuels created in the ground over millions of years are predictably running out. If we don't have the threat of a sinking continent as reported in the times of Atlantis maybe we're confronted with a drowning one, or maybe both.

TENT OF BEDAWEEEN ARABS.

hollows of the world...A peculiar light exists in the caves which nourishes vegetables and plants and renders disease-free long life to the many different races of people who live there."

More details of the legend continued to unfold as an old Bhuddist Brahman from Nepal described a journey he made to the ancient kingdom of Jenghiz (Siam) whereupon he sailed three days with a fisherman to an island. There they reportedly met people with two tongues and the ability to speak with each separately in different languages. The Brahman claimed he and the fisherman saw strange creatures (not of this world), such as birds with teeth that caught fish from the sea for their masters. The inhabitants of this strange island said the people had come up from the Subterranean Kingdom.

To Be Continued.

Observers in England have noted peculiar sensations, such as dizziness and faintness occurring in the vicinity of standing stones or circles, particularly when the stones are touched. Apparently an "earth current" is concentrated in the stones in some mysterious way. The alignment of ancient sites and structures along leys (old track lines) is believed by some to amplify this force. Perhaps these alignments define surface lines and patterns directly above underground watercourses which are carriers or amplifiers of energy currents.

In their recent book, The Secret Country, the Bords describe the ubiquity of quartz among the different minerals used in the construction of stone circles. They believe the piezoelectricity in quartz might be instrumental in allowing this mineral to transmit, or even store earth currents. Quartz consists of chains of alternating silicon and oxygen atoms which are arranged in geometrical helices. Thus the spiral structure vortex can be built up in two different ways, depending upon the orientation of the spiral, whether it is a left or right-handed spinning form. In organic substances, the two forms of a particular molecule rotate the plane of polarized light either to the right or left, and to the obvious asymmetry of the human hands, which are mirror images of each other. This asymmetry is often termed "chirality" a fundamental property of many of the complex organic molecules that constitute living matter. The asymmetry of the quartz helix suggests links exist in this particular structure.

Helical bans of force have been detected both with magnetometers and by dowsing on some standing stones. This energy seemingly changes polarity with a suspected link between this helical or spiral force, in the wealth of spiral carvings observed upon standing stones and natural rockfaces.

But what is this force stored in, or transmitted through these spirals and helices? The piezoelectric properties of quartz and its ability to convert mechanical deformation (compression) into a static charge arises because the open structure of the helical array has an innate compressibility. The generation of a static charge might allow discharge, or "earthing" to occur when the stone is touched. Furthermore, static electricity affects ionization in the surrounding air, sometimes with profound physiological effects. The structure of quartz possibly converts earth currents. If quartz is linked to underground watercourses, a conversion from hydrostatic pressure into static electricity may occur. The periodicity of the force observed could be a reflection of the original energy variation transformed by the quartz.

Many inorganic substances, both mineral and ceramics (the latter being the decomposition product of the former in many cases) are capable of picking up and storing an electrical charge. The spatial orientation of their electrical defects or storage capacity might influence the nature of the image stored by the substance. Therefore it's possible that the precise geometry of many stone circles: the exact configuration of hill-forts, mounds and tumps constructed by the ancients, were aimed at retaining this elusive force, until such time as it could be discharged. Though the nature of the current is unknown, the energy collecting and/or producing materials chosen for these alignment sites likely contain well-established electrical properties once stored, concentrated and amplified, possibly for later release and use by the sages of the past.

La Pyramide de Falicon.

FALICON PYRAMID...near Nice, France, was apparently erected above a subterranean chamber. A 2-1/2 meter high portal mounted in the Pyramid's eastern face was originally decorated with a sun-wheel which was broken off by vandals in 1921. The sun-wheel was the sacred symbol of the Jains, a dualistic ascetic group of followers organized in the 6th century by a Hindu reformer in revolt against the caste system in India. Their literary works were recorded in Sanskrit. As animists, they believed everything has a soul. The oldest and nearest village to the Falicon Pyramid was called Jain, according to ancient documents. The contemporary name for the community is Gaina. Some researchers familiar with the Falicon structure say the Jains constructed Pyramids in Europe and as far away as South America, with the Falicon Pyramid dated at 4,300 years or more. Dear Bill Cox:

Have Pyramid cavities been resonated at radio frequencies? A radio ham came up with a Driven Discontinuous Ring Radiator, a fat circular shape with one small section or gap left out. The stretched-out length of the tube used for the ring relates harmonically to the frequency. If it is fed from one side of the gap, which apparently resonates, it produces a phantom vertical antenna effect exactly the same length as the ring itself. The thing never really got off the ground because of the difficulties of fine-tuning the gap distance — very critical — with an external circuit handy to the operator. It seems possible that a phantom cone might be thrown up which radiates like a rod antenna; almost like resonating a thought-form shape. Best always, W.T. AMATERASH PYRAMID, JENNER, CALIFORNIA

THE PYRAMID OF AMATERASH...The form of a triangle, opening an energy vortex, develops at last into a pyramid. It is somehow connected with lines of flowing energy to all pyramids. The Amaterash temple is a stabilizer, spiritualizer, an energy accumulator and New Age Catalyst.

Seven years ago three penniless women students dedicated themselves to founding a center of spiritual unfoldment and growth, which welcomed all seekers on the lighted path. "Through Divine guidance," they say, the ladies found the perfect (Sacred) site—a Pacific ocean, view knoll on 40 acres, easily accessible, some 100 miles north of San Francisco. There, with volunteer labor, donated resources and a "Divinely manifested loan," the three students met the building deadline exactly, nine months to the day.

"The Masters' Plan," they say, "called for us to build it, and as we now realize, it is now time for the right person(s) to organize a spiritual retreat there, being the next (cosmo)logical step in the 40' X 40' pyramid's unfoldment. We seek positive energy and financial help, and are open to possibilities; partners, a new owner or whatever... Inquiries welcome...c/o M.S., 66-206 Haleiwa Road, Haleiwa, Hawaii 96712.

Dear Mr Cox,

I strongly desire to participate in PSI research which is the beginning dawn for better understanding of Man. I'm specifically interested in precognition, psychokinesis, psychotronic generators and "pyramid power" and wish to approach the challenge by route of the physical sciences. I received my B.A. in '75 with a major in Chemistry and minor in Mathematics along with numerous courses in Computer Science. Presently, I am employed as a programmer/analyst, with 3 years experience, in a commercial systems development area.

My interest in PSI started early with the reading of case histories. Next, I followed the early experiments at Duke University while taking an independent study course in parapsychology at college. I've studied Soviet research in these fields and about parapsychological investigations conducted at FRNM, Maimonides Medical Center, Psychical Research Foundation, Neuropsychiatric Institute and Stanford Research Institute on OOB, Kirlian photography, survival after death, telepathy, ESP... to name only a few.

In the study of PSI phenomena, attention has to be paid to psychological and physiological conditions of the test subject and experimenter, who is not apart from the experiment, as in the study of a closed system in the physical sciences; but rather who is a part of the experimental system whether a test subject is involved or not. Finally, the experimental design has to exclude alternate possible PSI phenomena as an explanation for the experimental results, as in the classic case of precognition and clairvoyance. The use of double blind experiment is one method of eliminating alternate PSI explanations.

The approach to PSI research through psychology, physiology and biology should be used in conjunction with the physical sciences to achieve successful PSI research, thus I am interested in investigating the following:

1. Present physical laws and functional relationships in PSI studies
2. Types of energies involved
3. PSI parameters, physical and non-physical energies
4. New functional relationships formed by data analysis of these

Can you tell me where I can find research in the Parasciences involving Physics and Mathematics? Could your organization supply me with a list of universities where I could undertake undergraduate and graduate studies in Physics and simultaneously become involved in PSI research? Can you furnish me with a list of similar researchers whom I may contact? Your help will be appreciated, as I am going to make my career in this field, thank you. Cordially yours, Rickie C. Pancoe, 701 22nd Avenue, Bellwood, Illinois 60104

Answer: Dear Rickie, You'll find a wealth of useful information in current and back issues of the Pyramid Guide. You may also write to researcher R. Alan McConnell, 2520 N.W. 30th St., Miami, Florida 33142 (eds.)

A letter to Pyramid Power V, Santa Monica, California

Dear Sirs,

I recently purchased one of your Pyramid sets, and my wife and myself were so amazed and pleased with the results of the experiments we purchased another larger Pyramid.

My wife's name is Joan and I am Walter Stanley Wootton and we would like to become members of Pyramid Energy Research Society. We also are interested in Meditation and I notice in your Experimental Guide Book on page 23, a photograph of a young lady wearing a smaller type of Pyramid on her head. Can one meditate using the smaller type of pyramid in this way? Looking forward to your kind reply, I remain, Yours sincerely, Mr. W.S. Wootton, Colwyn Bay, North Wales, U.K. The answer is yes. (eds.)

Buying or building a pyramid? These things you should know about! 9

There are three electromagnetic planes of consciousness:
PHYSICAL MENTAL - SPIRITUAL

WITHIN 20 YEARS: The electromagnetic frequencies of the earth will change:
They will change from the physical plane to the mental plane!

Man's consciousness will have to change. Only those that seek the true knowledge of wisdom, THE HEAVENLY FATHER - will be able to make this change! It is by His grace. You are made of His spirit.

The pyramid was given by the angel Hermes, to help Mankind raise his frequencies to the electron spin of the mental plane. It is an electromagnetic antenna.

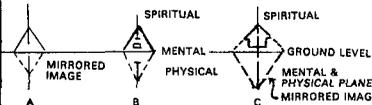

NOT ALL PYRAMIDS ARE CORRECT ANTENNAS FOR THIS TIME AND SPACE!
PYRAMIDS MUST CREATE A VORTEX OF LIGHT THAT CAN BE SEEN AND FELT.
FRAME PYRAMIDS DO NOT DO THIS. Jesus said: I AM THE LIGHT.

ILLUSTRATION

A AS ABOVE, SO BELOW!

B Cheops has three frequencies or planes of consciousness. This is the reason why there are THREE chambers. To benefit from the pyramid, you cannot mix the frequencies! Most pyramidologists do not understand this.

C The pack-up-and-go pyramid that Ken Killick designed has ONLY the spiritual frequencies built into it! The mental and physical planes are NOT designed in the physical structure of our pyramid!

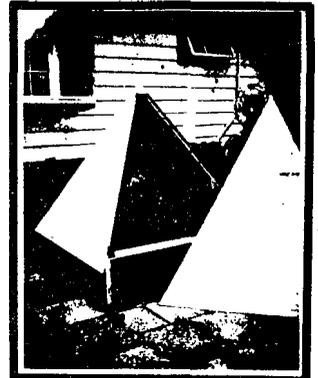

That's why our pyramid works! It was designed right! Pyramids are antennas! They help us advance into the MENTAL frequencies or planes of consciousness. WILL YOU be ready when the Earth advances into this plane of consciousness 20 years from now?

Will YOU be among those humans who will have made a start on the long road to overcome Matter?

You don't have to wait 20 years. Start today! Send today for blueprints that will enable you to build a pyramid that will develop ONLY the spiritual plane: INDOOR MODELS - $10; BACKYARD PYRAMIDS: $20 (all three planes - SPIRITUAL, MENTAL, PHYSICAL; see Illustration C above).

SRI RECORDS "SOUNDSCAPES..." Pianist Steve Halpern continues to add another dimension to the human musical experience with his recent record album releases of STARBORN SUITE and PERUVIAN WHISTLING VESSELS. The former album is the third in a series having the "soundscape" free floating quality that can trigger a deeper state of relaxation in the listener. Some of Halpern's aficionados say the music produces imagery that can only be described as "...a slow snowfall" or "...crystal petals ringing in a solar wind." Halpern says, "...One's body is given a vibrational massage that allows one's own centers to bioentrain. It helps one's centers to begin vibrating in phase with each other...all a part of the Cosmic Chord," according to Steve, "achieved through the technique of sustaining notes, rather than crisp, sharp tones."

It's not always so important what you hear on Halpern's albums, but there's the magic of what one doesn't hear. The Peruvian Whistling Vessels album features sounds long produced by members of the ancient Andean civilization over the thousands of years which Steve believes will provide a psycho-acoustic, time-tunnel into the meditational experience. SUNSET ON THE GOBI DESERT

AS The Gobi Desert, legendary site of earth-to-sky, heavenly "Shamballa," is the presumed home and working center of the world's all-time, great sages and luminaries, and Agharta (Agharti), the inner earth realm, reportedly inhabited by descendants of fleeing Atlanteans who sought refuge within our planet's immense caverns and hollow earth cavities prior to the sinking of the mythically lost continent. Both Shamballa and Agharta, are believed by some mystics to be complimentary, focal points, seats of wisdom and knowledge, lying at opposite ends of an extraordinarily powerful but invisible vertical axis or pillar of light, linking the two domains in planetary and humanitarian service; with Shamballa being the mythical headquarters of the Divine Contemplatives and Hierarchical Beings directing the world servers; and with the leaders in Agharta carrying out their function of balancing and preserving the beautiful, harmonizing but often disruptive forces in nature; sometimes due to the thoughtless tamperings of man. The first of an in-depth series on these two mysterious domains begins on Page 8 of this edition.
