PHARAOH'S MOVE

Do we have the capability today to build, reproduce and move the greater stone statues and monuments created by ancient engineers and craftsmen? One answer from an expert who should know proves inadequate: "We don't have any need to build (duplicate) these historic structures today," he reports, "so we have no way of knowing for sure..." In addition, no one has yet satisfactorily explained how the so-called, primitive builders designed and erected many of the world's great and—still magnificent—lesser wonders. Despite the expert's opinion, modern dis-assembly and reconstruction techniques were challenged with 'pharaoh's move' from the Upper Nile lowland at Abu Simel Egypt, May 21, 1965. In anticipation of intentional flooding behind Aswan Dam, money, talents, engineering and workmanship skills, and the world's most sturdy and sophisticated equipment took on the task of removing four gigantic statues of Ramses II carved out of the sandstone bluff 32 centuries ago. The four figures of Ramses, each 67 feet tall and sitting upon a throne had to be removed to a higher, dryer plateau above the historic temple site.

From the beginning, there wasn't the slightest suggestion that work crews should ever tackle any one of the Colossi in its entirety. As a matter of fact, the disassembly involved saw-men cutting the body of each 1,200 ton statue into sections. In one massive undertaking, workmen succeeded in separating part of Ramses' face with cuts made between the cheeks and ears and also separating these from the crown. One face cut alone weighed 19 tons, finally lifted off by cranes onto a specially designed sand-cushioned, truck and trailer. Just for comparison, to do the work, highly skilled engineering crews representing the world's great nations employed pneumatic hammers, chainsaws, drills, derricks, tractors, bulldozers, epoxy resin, reinforced concrete and even explosives, among other refined and powerful, mechanical aids to complete the job. The original cost estimate of $90 million with the cutting alone ran a whopping $36 million dollars. Experts believed that ancient builders used drills, hardwood and bronze tools to shape the Colossi in the soft but weighty sandstone. But none can reason-

THE MIRACULOUS MIND MIRROR

THE MIND MIRROR...a multi-channelled bio-feedback instrument enables one to attain instrumented control to produce maximum mind-body functions at extremely high levels. The years of self-work maintained by meditating Yogis, Zen Buddhists, Sufi Masters and Mystics of long standing and development can now be shortened to a matter of months, even weeks in some cases, where self-disciplined subjects proceed with a definite program, originally developed in London, England. Features of the Mind Mirror include: one's ability to view moving imprints of the brain's dual hemisphere activity via a system of LEDs (light emitting diodes) shown on the instrument's front panel. The MM's range spans 1.5 to 40 cycles per second and the equipment is portable.

Advanced scientists have dreamed of the day when we would have a thought viewing machine, one perhaps envisioned by Nikola Tesla 87 years ago (see Pyramid Guide #34 "TODAYS THOUGHTOGRAPHY, TOMORROW'S THOUGHT-VIEWER"). Well, the thought-viewer is already here, a spectacular breakthrough in the form of the Mind Mirror, recently demonstrated last July at the U.S. Psychotronics Conference in Houston, Texas.

No doubt there will be continuing improvements, refinements and variations of the Mind Mirror. Soon, we'll be able to see live, moving lines, symbols, shapes and colors on a TV screen, configurations revealing our innermost voluntary and random thought processes. These thought patterns, once decoded by means of bio-feedback techniques on machines that already exist will be interpreted by the subject, or one's auditor, to reveal the nature, expanded or inhibited progress of one's thinking and/or intuitive-reactive mind.

Despite the wonders of modern technology, and the tremendous benefits to be derived in behalf of humankind, there ever lurks the inherent danger of misuse, the destructive application of a constructive device by ignorant people holding positions of power, to invade one's most sacred domains, mind and body, against the will or standards of the victim. Thus, a great responsibility goes along with any new invention, its proper use and the results it can bring to millions living in an increasingly hostile, chaotic world.

For creatures that have the capability to hear them, the Earth is rich in ultrasounds, generated by mountain ranges, jet streams, ocean waves, thunderstorms and a host of other physical features. Infrasound waves uniformly travel hundreds, even thousands of miles and may serve as beacons for birds, just as pilots use radio signals as navigational aids. Perhaps infrasound provides pigeons and other birds with their kind of directional, "navigational map" and "all-weather compass." Known solar and stellar cues will not alone get a pigeon home, so an intense search for other clue systems is on.

Flying creatures have a powerful migratory instinct. If held captive during the season of migration birds may display a dramatic—even desperate—behavioral trait called "migratory restlessness." They hop, jump and flutter up and down, sometimes a hundred thousand or more times in a night, instinctively trying to continue on their way. They also orient themselves, hopping in the direction they normally would travel in flight.

Many birds, such as sparrows, align themselves with the "northern sky" which includes the Big Dipper and Cassiopeia, to obtain their instinctive compass headings. If placed under an artificial starscope our feathered friends reach up to it as if it were the real thing. This indicates that shape and or design plays a significant role, perhaps corresponding to an outward shape, inner "set." Scientists who endeavored to track the decision-making of one species of sparrow (to set itself on its migratory course) observed that they headed out to the northeast, even if the ground was obscured by fog, provided the sky above was clear. The principle involved — electronic or magnetic matching of symbols — is used in computers, so why couldn't nature duplicate the feat as a super computer?

The bird's heart may be the most powerful machine on earth. It can provide the propulsion and sustaining power for tremendous journeys. Without this cosmic source, powerful motor-winged creatures could never migrate great distances. Therefore, more study should be made regarding the bird's heart as it relates to migration.

Basically the migratory call is a homing instinct, and this means a mating, reproductive and offspring-raising instinct. This should narrow down the possible explanation and demystification of the migratory drive and natural homing aptitudes found in the bird kingdom.

Fourth Dimension Reachout MULTIPLE PERCEPTIONS

Before me lies a chart of optical illusions. As my eyes shift from left to right eye dominance, a cleverly designed (two-dimensional) staircase ascends, seen as a left-side portal—now right—again left, and so on.

Another particular arrangement of geometric shapes (designed to trick the eyes) presents two rings surrounded by various patterns and colors. One unmistakably appears larger than the other, but I'm told the circles in the center are of equal dimension. I could compare sizes with a coin to make sure the author isn't trying to fool me, but I know better, his analysis is correct. This isn't the first time my visual apparatus has deceived me.

With some illusory patterns (figures 1. and 2. above) I cannot contemplate one in its entirety and fully comprehend the design applying ordinary reasoning processes; the eyes insist upon focusing on some particular line, corner or section of it. After studying each particular geometrical form in its parts making up the whole, I decide that all lines do lie in their proper perspective and am forced to admit: 'optical illusion strikes again.'

The Great Pyramid, Sphinx, Easter Island statues, Stonehenge and other spectacular world monoliths and megaliths, including ancient pictographs, petroglyphs, hieroglyphs and symbols may at times, also be likened to bona fide optical illusions; for we do not see them in their totality as combined scientific, artistic, religious and cosmo-natural wonders. We invariably try to comprehend them with the intellect which processes information by division, examining the complete structure according to a scientific, artistic, religious or engineering point of view, and then trying to make something of the whole out of its parts. But an immutable law of the Universe proclaims that one cannot know the whole by the sum of its parts. The static mind becomes enraptured with the fragments of effects; the analytical mind proceeds from oneness, the causal, wholistic imprint.

But how does one become a Tolcan, to alter awareness in such a way that the entire design can be simultaneously understood in its totality? There are two powerful avenues of instant cognition available (among others) to any rational mind: Subliminal and Supraliminal Perception, which will be described in the next column of 'Reachout.

Meanwhile, one could say multiple perception is nothing more than scattered unfocused observation. At one level, this would be a valid criticism, but in the higher planes of consciousness, omni-perception enables one to contemplate 'what is' not 'what only appears to be.' We may have to study a structure, artwork or scientific object using a systems approach, that is, peruse its purpose and function in series, first in one way, then study it from another standpoint and so on. Then, after careful analysis, try to put all of the impressions together to hopefully understand its full content. But this method has its shortcomings, there are alternative possibilities. (To be continued.)

NEW AGE GUIDE, ADVERTISING & PROMOTION...Tips on how to effectively advertise, budget and finance organizational promotion. Edited & published by Joan & Patrick O'Connell, c/o New Atlantean Research-Journal, 4280 68th Ave., Pinnellas Park, Fla. 33565.

Dear Sirs,

I have a twelve foot base pyramid completely covered with plywood sides and have been conducting experiments with fresh fruit of various kinds over the past year. So far, the results have been very disappointing, with produce inside the pyramid going more mouldy; in some instances quicker than controls of the same produce. A dowser checked the pyramid for correct alignment. He maintains it is correct and says he can detect energy fields inside. Still, my results are unsuccessful. Any comments you would like to make would be gratefully received. H.A. Witmore, Westbury, Tasmania, Australia.

Dear Reader,

We are publishing your letter, because we occasionally receive similar complaints. The answers to your unsuccessful pyramid experiments are many and varied. We sincerely don't believe any single solution can be given. Reasons for failures can originate in the size, makeup, precision, orientation and location; or humanly created electro-magnetic interference can be a factor. Thus proving over and over again that the operator, the one conducting the test may well be the all important and unknown ingredient.

Some people seem to register a kind of reverse polarity where vital, psychic and other subtle energies are concerned. Here and there we encounter magnetically powerful people. A few actually stop clocks or can't wear a wristwatch. An electric man lives in Phoenix. He receives shocks from certain people who come near him—beyond ordinary static electricity picked up between touching or near-touching people after one has shuffled over a nylon rug with leather-soled shoes. Magnetic people are often found among our spiritual healers, charismatic performers and "green thumb" horticulturists, or sometimes from among those unfortunate "brown thumb" gardeners who can't get anything to live long or grow under their care.

Extremely psychic people are often of reverse polarity. Verne Cameron spoke about them in our book Aquavideo. They seem to have been born of the veil or caul. Ask your doctor or any experienced nurse about this. It is a remarkable psychic phenomenon and has been documented as an actual fact. Many of these people aren't aware of having this both favorable, and rarely, unfavorable trait.

Finally, there is such a thing as psychic or telepathic jamming. Though usually unintentional, this peculiar manifestation among humans occurs when there is profound skepticism, lack of faith, emotional upset, or one of many other subtle but powerful expressions. ## PHARAOH'S MOVE ably account for the lighting methods the early Egyptian engineers used. Did they cast light into the adjacent temple interiors by reflecting sunlight off of bronze mirrors? Where are the candle, torch or fuel oil smoke stains? Did the ancient builders apply hydraulic jacks to lift single stone statues weighing several hundred tons 3,200 years ago? None of these devices or any record of them have ever been found.

The sawmen were lauded for their ability to cut the iron impregnated sandstone (which clogged the cutting edges) within 10% error when the specifications allowed a 25% tolerance. But we must remember that the historic builders somehow sliced up much harder stone blocks with surfaces coming together, matching margins of 1/100th of an inch or better. Obviously, we don't have the technology or skills today that can even begin to compare with the forgotten or lost technologies known in the dim, distant past.

When the job of moving the Colossi and temple sites were completed, surveyors counted some 1,050 blocks and 5,500 lesser stone parts in reassembling the great temple alone. Ceiling and wall slab segments weighed twenty tons and facade slabs soared to 30 tons in weight. Final analysis showed that a total of 330,000 tons of the cliff had to be dug away before the Colossi and temples could be relocated on the plateau some 200 feet above, and 690 feet further back from the Nile. When the job was completed, the world work force at Abu Simel went away with a new and profound respect for the Ancient Engineers.

MIND MIRROR

In this regard, the Mind Mirror offers a most useful and benevolent potential; for the subject connected with the instrument's circuitry is able to audit oneself, to see what is going on as registered by the two hemispheres of the brain and to exercise complete sequential though control during moments of attempted, self communication.

The Mind Mirror is so constructed that two subjects, a metaphysical healer and the one desiring the healing, can be attached to the device and their coordinated brainwave patterns can be compared through the medium of light emitting diodes. These lights, made up of 24 rows aligned in two banks of 12 each (32 lights in each row — 16 left and 16 right) are so positioned as to give a readout from both right and left brain hemispheres. The multi-channelled instrument is composed of components based upon the electroencephalograph (EEG), an electrical skin resistance unit (ESR), the electromyograph (EMG) which detects voltages associated with muscle tension, and thermistor, a device which registers changes in skin temperature. The well-known, often used galvanic skin response detector (GSR) has not been adapted for use in the Mind Mirror due to its various limitations and is adequately replaced by the ESR.

What are the potential benefits of the Mind Mirror? The answer to this question will be the subject of an article in the next issue of Pyramid Guide, but briefly, here's an overall picture:

With the Mind Mirror, one can combine bio-feedback training with the ancient art of meditation, according to C. Maxwell Cade and Nona Coxhead, authors of a new book "The Awakened Mind" hardbound (Delacorte Press) at $10.00. This outstanding book thoroughly describes the history, virtues and potentials of the Mind Mirror. It also includes photos, diagrams, testimonials and a comprehensive explanation of bio-feedback in the New Age, where it's going and the current explosion of mind-body awareness, now available to the ardent seeker of heightened, self-controlled states of beingness.

BRAINWAVE PATTERNS...on the Mind Mirror register left to right as follows: 1. The pattern usually recorded with advanced meditators during deep meditation. 2. Imprints formed where both healing and advanced states of yoga have been observed. The study of right and left brain coherence or dominance, altered states of awareness experimentation, meditation and visualization with this brainwave analyzer has been adequately revealed in the Cade-Coxhead book, "The Awakened Mind (Delacorte Press). The various hierarchical states of conscious awareness showing that one side of the brain is nearly a perfect mirror image of the other includes: 1. Dream state; 2. Hypnogogic imaging (upon falling into sleep or just awakening); 3. The so-called conscious (awakened) state; 4. Meditation and/or transcendental level; 5. Inner (world) awareness during meditation, coupled with awareness of the outer (world). Lucid awareness, the mind sanctum of illumination; 6. Creativity; 7. Self-remembering, Beingness; 8. Cosmic consciousness, unity, omni-presence. The beginning plane "deep sleep" rates a beginning zero "0".

THE GREAT PYRAMID'S UNIQUE GEOMETRY

While doing research which was published in THE GIZA PYRAMIDS: FINAL DECODING (PoA Publishing Co.) by Rocky McCollum, Gerry Fraccaro and myself, some new relationships became evident. The information indicates that the ancient Egyptians had a knowledge of geometry still denied them by most historians.

The Great Pyramid is a pentahedron with a square base and four equal triangular faces. Now the following dimensions are within 0.05% (worst case) of those determined by use of W.M.F. Petrie's data (survey of 1881-82).

Area of the base 571,213.36 sq. ft.
Area of the 4 faces 924,242.63 sq. ft.
Area of the pentahedron 1,495,455.98 sq. ft.

Therefore the following unique relationships can be found from the dimensions:

- The ratio of the pentahedron's area to the area of the four faces is the numerical value of the golden number.  $\phi$  Phi 1.6180...
- The ratio of the four face's surface to the area of its base is the golden number.
- The ratio of the pentahedron's surface dimensions to the area of the base is the golden number squared.
- Since the area of the pentahedron (proportional to  $\phi^2$ ) equals the surface dimensions of the faces, (proportional to  $\phi$ ) plus the area of the base (proportional to unity), the pyramid thus incorporates the basic quadratic equation,  $\phi^2 = \phi + 1$ , which can be solved to provide the numerical value of the golden number and the negative of its reciprocal.
- The square root of the pentahedron's area is twice the slant height of the pyramid.
- The square root of the area of the four faces is twice the vertical height of the pyramid.

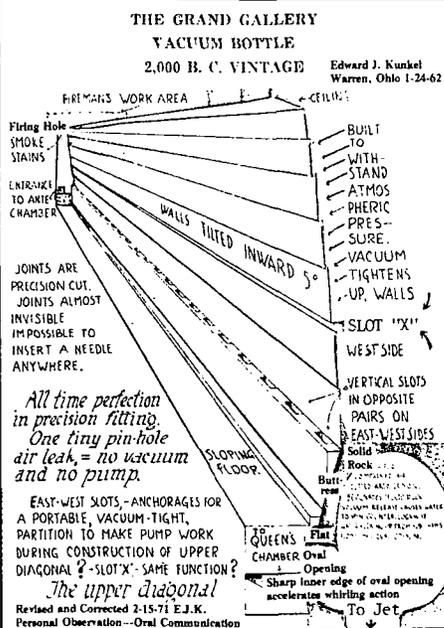

The findings of these unique relationships—and others of a similar nature show that John Taylor (c. 1750) was in error when he divided the perimeter of the Great Pyramid by twice its height to secure the number very close to Pi ( $\pi$ ) as we know it, and that the pyramid incorporated the numerical value of  $\pi$ . Taylor obtained a number, 3.144 which is the first four digits of four divided by the square root of Phi  $\phi$  the golden number. Had he recognized this, many people would not have been misled into believing that the Great Pyramid's design incorporated the value of  $\pi$ . Instead, the huge edifice incorporates functions of the golden number extensively within its design. Contributed by E.D. Robinson, Wheaton, MD

BOOK REVIEW

THE SELF PUBLISHING MANUAL, How to Write and Sell Your Own Book, Dan Poynter, Parachuting Publications, P.O. Box 4232-A, Santa Barbara, CA 93103, (at $9.95 soft cover 173 pages). Here's a chance to get the inside secrets of self-publishing, generously shared by Poynter, author-publisher of twelve books with over one-half million dollars in sales. This is an easy step-by-step system and a revealing expose of information so jealously guarded by most small publishing firms, showing tax breaks, copyright information, advertising, promotion and distributing techniques, only a few among many useful hints and guidelines for self-publishing authors.

AWARENESS TECHNIQUES (series), Diane & William Swygard. (Wm. Reilly, Publisher, 275 pages, at $7.95). This marvelous book is a collection of awareness technique pamphlets made available to some 10,000 groups, worldwide over the past decade. The methods presented, according to the authors, enable one, without help, to expand conscious awareness, to see one's whole being. It is a modern approach to the ancient axiom: "Man Know Thyself." Highly recommended. Order from Dept. "S," P.O. Box 63, Dover, Mass. 02030.

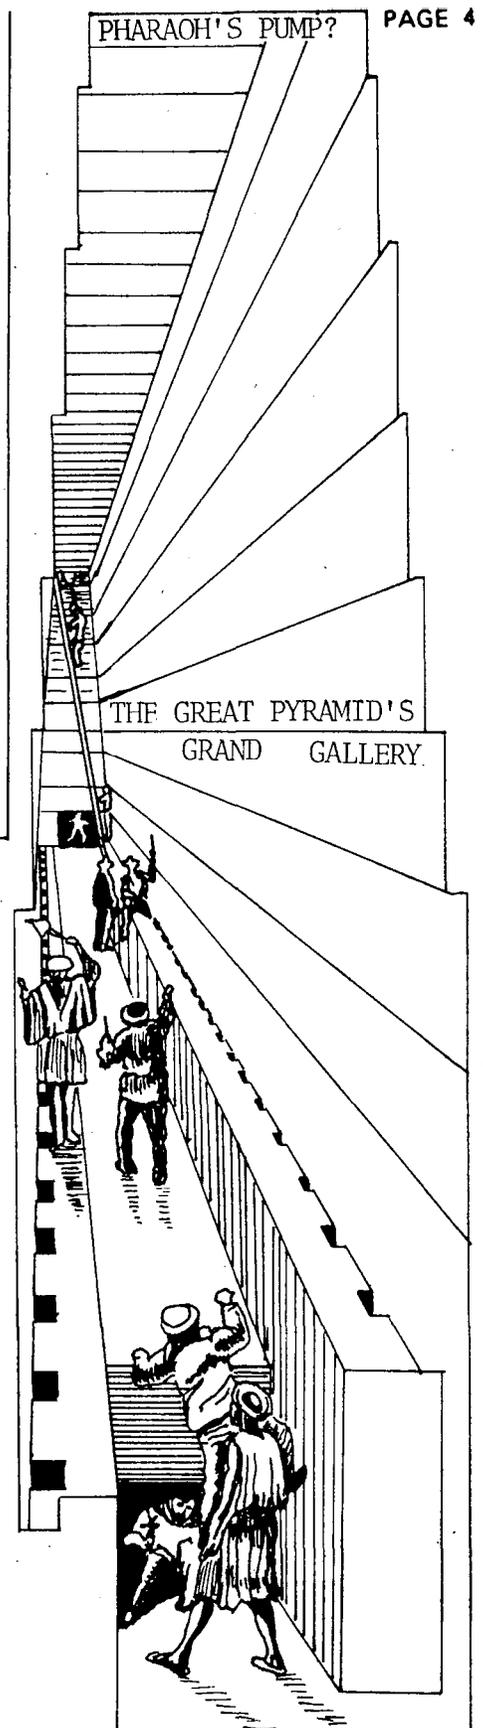

AREA FOR COMPRESSED AIR. DOTTED AREA OF BOWL DESIGNATES SOLID ROCK. VACUUM RELEASE CAUSES WATER TO SPIN COUNTER-CLOCKWISE. WATER FLOWING UP FROM SUB-CHAMBER FLOWS THROUGH OVAL OPENING.

A partition made of short slabs may have been installed in SLOT X forming two diagonals; the lower one for water, and the upper one for air. This pump uses plenty of air. A downflow activated a valve mechanism which diverted water to the Queen's Chamber.

Al-Mamoun, A.D. 825, records: "...Removing one (slab) the next one slid down in its place, another and another, each was removed, till at length the entire upward avenue was freed from obstructions." MIS

To this day, I have been unable to reconstruct a valve mechanism that will divert water below the slot area, into the Queen's Chamber, while the region above the slot remains open, to allow a free passage of air down through the bowl.

If water ever completely filled this upper diagonal, the soot pattern on the ceiling would not be as clear, sharp, and distinct as it appears today. Drawing and caption reprinted from Pharaoh's Pump, by permission of the author Edward J. Kunkel, 295 W. Market St., Warren, OH 44481.

Now that the age of Aquarius is upon us it pays us to re-examine the old precepts we all knew as students in our teens. The tendency was to treat Light and Sound as separate subjects though a correlation between them exists.

The study of sound is a vast subject and there are Masters who have specialized in sound vibrations and know it is a marvelous tool once understood. One cannot hear sound without being affected by it as it thrums through the entire organism. With the right note and vibrational deformation one can create ANYTHING ONE WISHES. This means that one can reproduce a thought-pattern of any individual form with a sound. When this thought pattern exists in the environment, the creature or inanimate form having this pattern will find his (its) shape responding to it — usually, whether one wants it to happen or not. Thus, it is a tool for teaching self-discipline, or weapon, for sounds constitute the very bedrock of one's fears of pains.

This is a true story. An experiment produced instantaneous death in most tragic circumstances. A second test produced instant destruction of property.

Professor Gavraud, a French engineer almost gave up his post at an institute in Marseilles. He always felt unwell whilst at work in the office. Gavraud made exhaustive tests with various instruments to find out the possible cause of his malaise within the room and building, but all proved of no avail. Feeling decidedly off one morning he leaned backwards in his chair with the back of his head touching the office wall. Suddenly it dawned upon him that the whole room was in a state of vibration and the possible cause of his poor health. Seeking further, he finally discovered the whole room was vibrating at a very low frequency caused by an air-conditioning plant mounted on the roof of an adjoining building across the way. As the professor's office was the right shape and distance from the machine, the whole room was vibrating in resonance. It was this rhythm at seven cycles per second that made him sick.

Fascinated by the problem, Professor Gavraud searched around for suitable items which would produce a whole range of low-frequency sounds. Later he found the police whistle which all French gendarmes carry around most suitable. So, like some comic opera, Gavraud proceeded to build a large prototype whistle some six feet in length, and powered it with a large air compressor.

Then came the day of the fateful experiment. Everyone gathered around with a high degree of expectancy. Professor Gavraud gave the signal to his young technician to switch on the compressor while all stood back. Within a few seconds, and to their horror, the young man fell down on the floor and remained still. It was later discovered that he had died instantly, and a later post-mortem revealed that his internal organs had been turned into an amorphous jelly by the vibrations!

Gavraud, seemingly undeterred by this tragedy, went ahead with his experiments, but more carefully the next time. He performed the test out-of-doors with all observers screened from the machine viewing the experiment from inside a concrete bunker. But all the windows of every building within half a mile of the test site were shattered.

Professor Gavraud later learned to control the amplitude of his sound-generator and afterwards designed a series of smaller machines for experimental work. One of his most interesting discoveries showed that the waves of low frequency can be aimed, and that two infra-sound generators focussed on a particular point even five miles away could produce a resonance capable of knocking a building down as effectively as an earthquake! Later tests on derelict buildings conclusively proved the foregoing statements to be true.

Within the cosmos there are untapped forces waiting to be re-discovered when the time is right. Let us hope that we have learned the lessons symbolized in the destruction of Lemuria and Atlantis. Dr. James Hamnett, Osteopath, Downend, Bristol, England

Dear Bill Cox:

I've enjoyed recent issues of Pyramid Guide very much. I've enclosed a postcard in case you happen to know of an authority, book or books on the subject of the solar-lunar eye of Egypt, explaining theories about its numerical, cosmological significance. Joanne Ashley, Manlius, N.Y.

Dear Reader,

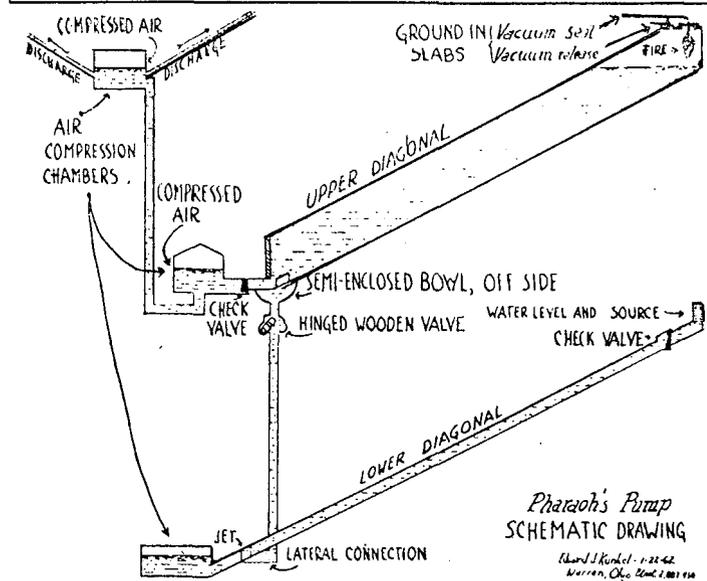

The "Eye" in the Pyramid, featured in the #42 July-August '79 edition of Pyramid Guide came into focus with other interesting "Eye" mysteries currently under investigation.

Rafael Swiecki, of the Iridology Institute of America, at the recent San Francisco Awareness Fair called my attention to some marvelous detective work he had done to unravel some mysteries connected with the famous "Eye."

With his knowledge of Yi Ching, Rafael, working with anagrams, was able to show how the various components making up the "Eye," in its basic form, represents certain mathematical values (see UTCHAT, Sacred Eye diagram). He has gone much deeper into this study, showing correlations with an encircled Star of David (Solomon's Seal) and Egyptian hieroglyphs. The separated parts of the Sacred Eye appear throughout the hieroglyphics as follows:

This tantalizing rediscovery conforms with the ancient saying: "Man Know Thyself," for if we are to understand the legacy of wisdoms painted, enscribed and carved by our forefathers, we must first look within and also know more about our human anatomy, as each individual (the microcosm) contains within him(her)self, in energy, form and potential manifestation all that exists in the Universe (the macrocosm).

The above schematic drawing is an effort to simplify the hydraulic principles involved in the Pyramid pump.

The position of the upper diagonal has been reversed. However, the shape of the Pyramid will not permit such an arrangement of the various mechanical elements.

A movement of water, caused by a vacuum and its release, causes a downward movement in the lower diagonal which compresses air in the subterranean rock hewn chamber.

The compressed air pushes water up and into the upper diagonal, thereby supplying it with water.

A downward movement of water in the upper diagonal compresses the air in the two compression chambers.

The lower compression chamber supplies the upper one; while the upper one discharges water to the outside.

In the Pyramid pump, the lower diagonal holds 88 tons of water while the upper diagonal has a capacity of 300 tons of water. The pump itself when full, holds about 600 tons of water.

Modern hydraulic engineers have a long way to go to catch up with the ancient engineers.

PYRAMIDS OF THE WORLD: MT. JAMBELYANG......a natural 21,000 foot high pyramid mountain covered with ice and snow the year round, rises above an appropriately, triangular shaped plateau near its base at some 15,000 feet elevation. Jambeyang is one of three peaks in the Konka Rismungongba mountain formation located close to that magical 30° north latitude, pyramid belt encircling our planet and 100° east longitude; between Lhasa in Tibet, but slightly closer to, and on a line with Chungking, China.

An incredibly beautiful glacier lies on Jambeyang's lower slopes above Duron Valley. Being one of the three sacred peaks, this spectacular pyramid crown symbolizes, for Tibetans, the god of learning, who with two other deities are believed to dwell in the tri-peaked, Konka, Rismungongba. Another god occupying Chanadordje Peak is depicted in Tibetan religious art as wielding a thunderbolt, and in Shenrezig Peak there lives the deity who is said to incarnate as the Dalai Lama.

Jambeyang rates mention here because of its four-fold character. 1. It is a near perfect pyramid. 2. It aligns with numerous other world pyramid and ancient megalithic sites, man made and otherwise. 3. Jam-beyang lies strategically in an area where Tibetan, Indian, Chinese and Burmese borders converge. 4. It is also venerated by these people as a sacred place of pilgrimage and spiritual elevation. Finally, Jambeyang, contrary to its sister, but humanly constructed form, the great crystal-capped pyramid (reported in #23 issue of Pyramid Guide) which lies in a seldom seen, low region, surrounded by mountains near Burma, Jambeyang Pyramid Peak maintains its lofty magnificence, closer to Shamballa; unhidden to the eyes of natives and travelers who may venture upward, into her heavenly, stately realm.

TIME OF THE TURTLE... Jack Rudloe, hardbound (Knopf) at $12.95, written with verve and out of Rudloe's long experiences with marine creatures. One reflects with awe the seven varieties of turtles surviving during the last 175 million years, and now in our lifetime, unbelievable but true, we may see the end of the long evolution of Mr. Turtle, unless greedy and ignorant men awaken to the futility of their folly. Natural predators and the elements have always participated in the thinning out processes, but now, as the turtle population rapidly dwindles, nature's perennial, selective modes add heavily to the losses inflicted by man. On the lighter side, the naturalist author provides humorous lines, episodes, anecdotes, mixing them with drama and dismay in his life dedication to save the last of these hardy, lovable but tortured creatures. Excellent reading, demanding a renewed reverence for the hard-shelled reptile who likely occupied this planet long before humankind dropped in to claim its superabundant resources.

THE DIVINING HAND...The 500-year-old Mystery of Dowsing, by Christopher Bird (Dutton) 340 pages 8½ x 11" hardbound at $24.95. Bird has produced a monumental research work, well infused with photos and illustrations and a broad spectrum of dowsing talents are revealed. Though the book is well worth the investment, don't expect to learn too much new regarding techniques that haven't appeared in print before. Again we see coverage representing history and numerous testimonials, adequately describing the many instruments employed by Dowsters the world over, and here one is erroneously lead to believe more in the superior importance of the dowsing device rather than the operator-locator. Unfortunately, a small gratuity of recognition had been given by Bird to the late master dowser, Verne L. Cameron, who selflessly gave so much of his life, innovative knowledge and extraordinary talents to the dowsing world.

MANA PHYSICS: The Study of Paraphysical Energy, Serge King (172 pages paperback) Baraka Books, Ltd. 453 Greenwich Street, New York, N.Y. 10013 at $8.95. King, author of the Pyramid Energy Handbook and an avid Huna science researcher, gathers into one manuscript, a collection of free energy forms, devices and some history of pioneers in the little known field of "supernatural" tools, architecture and ancient means used by master practitioners to harmonize the whole person. Reich, Reichenback, Mesmer and other giants in this field get fair coverage. A "must book" for reader and researcher alike.

SHAMBALLA, DREAM OR REALITY?

Part IV of 4 Parts (Conclusion)

Shamballa today, then, is either literally or figuratively seen or otherwise known by initiates as a heavenly city, depending upon their levels of spiritual growth. Shamballa to others, is a repository of ageless wisdom, the home of the akashic records; and in the minds of aspirants and disciples, the seat of the human Hierarchy, suspended aloft above the Gobi Desert in central Asia; held ever imperishable, inviolate and invulnerable to the vagaries of time. Shamballa will never be subdued by the elements or obselence; to cataclysmic upheavals, great weapons and the follies of man. Humankind's higher vision of Shamballa still rests above earth's changless ethereal pole enveloping the great sphere of destiny about which all life spins endlessly into eternity.

The masters through their timeless writings, have allegedly inscribed into the records their impressions of Shamballa as the Holy of Holies, "the rock of the ages" undisturbed by the ever-threatening destruction of earth by time-fold events. "It is the place of He who dwells beyond the snows of 'Kilsa' ('Tise' in Tibetan)," as mentioned by the Yoga Shushas. "There sits the King of Kings, and Yogi of all Yogis," it is written, "untouched by human sin, sorrow or strife." It is still said that the natives of central Asia never venture beyond the 'white posts' possibly marking Shamballa's ancient and sacred physical boundaries.

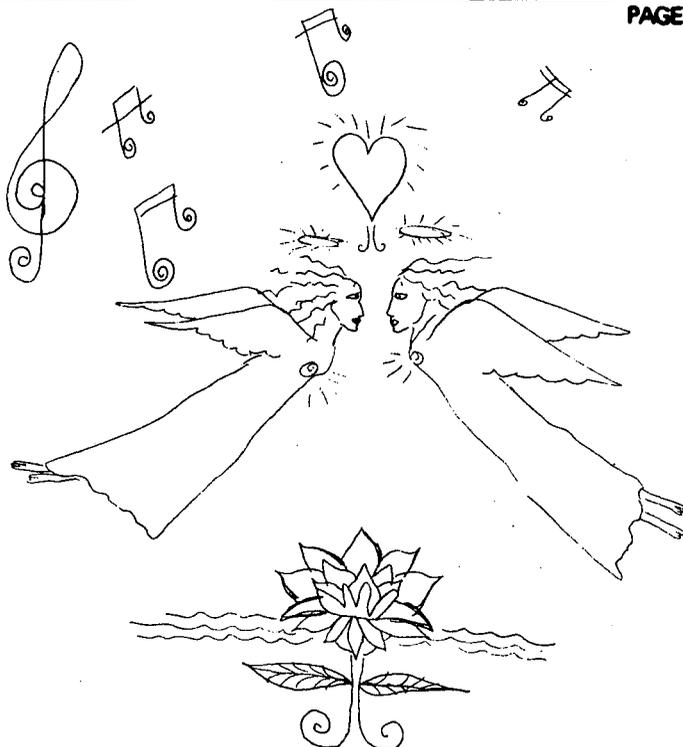

The great spiritual leaders of Shamballa were believed to have favorably influenced the Magna Carta, the Declaration of Independence, the Atlantic Charter and other political events of far-reaching world importance. The White Lodge, some believe, is now ruled by Theddu, whose assistants make up a council of twelve initiates. Harjas, one of various avatars believed to inhabit Shamballa, was presumably sent to earth in a physical body in 1966 they say. Will he be a world leader in the New Age?

As one scans the chronicles of time, more names come to fore, such as, the legendary Count Rakoczy (St. Germain), master of the seventh ray; Djwal Kul, Serapis, Jesus, Khemi, the Venetian, Sirius, Dhruva, Jupiter, El Morya, Althotos, Koot Hoomi, Hilarion, Triptolemus and Trithemius; masters all reportedly seen among men from time to time. Sixty-four were reportedly in physical incarnation 35 years ago. Today their numbers have dwindled to forty-nine. Other initiates, those of long ago included: Solon, Plato, Pythagoras, Moses, Plutarch, Herodotus and several more.

The purified Beings of Shamballa who now guide the elder brothers of the human race, have evidently over great spans of time, freed themselves from the wheel that still binds most of humanity to the scourges of toil, lust, guilt, privation, disease, pain and death. The initiates, in order to continue their own evolution, must aid those souls working in both ethereal and physical form; they are the world's great servers at the altar of humanity, if the mystical chronicles are to be believed.

Once every seven years the holy festival of Shamballa takes place. All adepts and initiates of high degree are said to gather in resolving matters of planetary and solar, systemic import. Such a time now occurs as I write these lines, between December 21st and 28th, 1977. Light groups and individuals all over the world are now linked together in meditation, bathing the planet with the feeling, flowing vibrations of love, peace and joy. The full moon passes over Santa Barbara, California, at 4:49 A.M. Christmas morning, a most rare and magnificent moment in time. It marks a marvelous notch in the wheel of evolution when contact with the masters of the Hierarchy in their heavenly domain can more easily be made. This cosmic, lunar moment is expected to bring more accelerated, higher awareness to humankind the world over. With this extraordinary contact comes new revelations of the mysteries and Sacred Sciences.

Initiates back in the deep reaches of time saw our planet as identified with the human brain, viewed as the world polar mountain, Mt. Moriah, the highest among the most high summits. It was reportedly located amidst the seven continents and called the mountain of mysteries. A marvelous temple, housing initiates of the Hierarchy supposedly occupied Mt. Moriah's utmost peak. The great temple was supported by a brilliant pillar of pure light representing the human spine emanating upward in direct line with the pole star. This supernal shaft of light became the stabilizing, ridge-pole of the heavenly Shamballa, gently resting atop the symbolic exfoliated, lotus blossom, making one who contemplates this scene mindful of Atlas, bearing the weight of the world upon his shoulders. It is said that the lower end of this magnificent spine of light was then anchored in the densest matter of earth, symbolic of the world of opposites, duality and the negative (south) pole; the black Shamballa, thus located at the lower axis of the mighty and cleansing pillar of light.

Shamballa, embraces Sha Mo, meaning: the Gobi Desert, and Sha-man, a Buddhist monk, a priest or magician; Sha-Mash, a sun-god and symbol of justice. Then we have Sha Kti, a power for generation; Shangrila, and finally Shalom, peace... Ah, Shamballa!

Mrs. Luisa Lunelli,

In answer to your July 26th letter, the Sky Lab experiment (meditative-psychic efforts to delay or entirely eliminate Sky Lab's ultimate fall to earth by various individuals and groups over the planet) apparently failed (see Pyramid Guide edition #43). There were several unexpected problems, delays and changes in organizing a worldwide effort during Sky Lab's final months in orbit which may have contributed to the failure, according to organizers of the psychic (psychokinetic) space station project. The project was set up to see if humans could influence matter at a distance by thought alone.

Dear Bill Cox,

I have just read the latest PYRAMID GUIDE. On page 9, I have a point of interest for you in regards to ancient Egyptian crook and flail. The rings appear to be induction coils, but this suggests magnetism, not carbon. Anyway, the article stated a right hand-magnet, left-carbon correlation. Just the opposite is true. Egyptians used magnetics in left plus carbon in right hand. The reverse can be detrimental to polarity, heart, and health in general. My sources are: the Yada Di Shi'ite, Dr. Pat Flanagan, Count Walewski, Reichenbach and Mesmer to name a few. Since you mentioned future articles, you may want to take another look at this in a new light. Ask your pendulum. Please tell us more about vril! I would love to know your sources! Mushroom (Rolling Thunder), Rock Island, Ill.

Dear Mr. Cox,

My basic premise is that the Great Pyramid is a mathematical-engineering-astronomical-prophetic monument to the Lord located in the center of ancient Egypt (see Isaiah 19:19 and Job 38:4-7). The Great Pyramid has mathematical units of measurement built into the chambers and designs of the structure. These units can be enlarged so that they serve as British feet and miles. They can then be transferred to fit over the surface of the Nile Delta-Palestine area, forming mathematical patterns and designs.

The mathematical units can be enlarged to form a pattern over America and western America. These patterns coordinate with certain major reports of the UFOs spread out over the land and over periods of years. I think the missing top-stone, or chief corner stone of the Great Pyramid is buried at a certain site on the Plain of Gizeh near the structure. This is made clear by the mathematical patterns and the architect's design. Kenneth Lloyd Larson, Los Angeles, Calif.

Notice the photograph of the Tau cross captured on film at the Palenque Pyramid ruins in the Yucatan, Mexico this year. If a vertically aligned oval ring were placed atop the upper (center) edge of the Tau symbol a full-blown Ankh appears (see inset). Though separated by the vast formidable expanse of land and the Pacific Ocean, the Ankh, Tau relationship shows the ancient masters from Egypt, China and Mayan cultures were obviously linked back in time immemorial.

For unknown hundreds of centuries the Great Pyramid—the last standing of the world's remarkable wonders—has kept silent watch over the Nile Delta. Was it constructed as a temple to the Sun and Moon, the foundation pillar for sacred fires as set out in ancient manuscripts? Or was it a granary for Joseph? Could the majestic stone mountain have been a place of refuge from a recorded second deluge? Maybe it was erected to serve as an astronomical observatory or a gigantic mausoleum, or even a Bible, an ancient library of ancient wisdoms encoded in stone?

Professor C. Piazzl Smyth, first noted that when the vertical plane of the Great Pyramid passages is produced northward, it passes along the central axis of the Nile Delta region. Meanwhile, the northeast and northwest diagonals of the structure, similarly produced, enclose the Delta in a symmetrical, well-balanced manner. When all prominent coastal points are evenly swept by the arc of the Nile Delta, the southern center of projection lies at the Great Pyramid.

More land surface can be seen in both the Great Pyramid's Meridian and Latitude than in any other place the world over; while its nether meridian (the longitude) projects over the other side of the globe and ranges its entire length through water, except for a short distance near Bering Strait. The Great Pyramid is situated at the most ideal zero of Longitude of any nation on the planet. This most extraordinary monument was curiously placed near the meeting point of both 30° Longitude and 30° Latitude, which precisely divides the eastern world from the western hemisphere in Asia and Europe. Hawaii on the other side of the planet assumes a similar position, separating east from west in the theoretical world division of two equal halves.

This under-cutting of blocks was a common practice in temple wall construction. This type of a stone setting barge is imaginary. When the water goes down in the pool, the barge goes down with it, the stone is set on the wall and the barge pulled away.
