THE CLOUD.

BY E. D. BABBITT, D. M.

On the sky. Flitting by Twixt the heaven and earth, Is a thunder cloud Gloomy as a shroud To the eyes below of mortal birth.

Is the golden tide
Of the sun's own light,
Sweeter and more bright
From the contrast with the darker side.

Type of death, When the breath Leaves the human clay, And the earthly eye Sees upon the sky, Clouds and storms which seem to hide the day.

But rejoice! Tune thy voice; For beyond is light! Angel spirits come,
To escort thee home,
Where there is no sorrow and no night! 42 E. 12th St., N. Y.

THE FLIGHT OF THE BIRDS.

BY ALICE CARY.

Last night I sat beside the pane,
And heard across the mist of rain
The wild birds twitter low,
And thought how soon the leafy nests,
Now warm with little speckled breasts,
Would all be filled with snow.

I saw the withered wet leaves fall, And cried, God shield and save ye all, Black birds, and blue, and brown; And all ye tribes of noisy things, With linings on your ashen wings Soft as the thistle's down.

And ye with top-knots on your heads
Of crimson grains and scarlet reds,
And tongues so wild and loud;
God save, I said, in kindest care,
Seeing ye drift along the air
Like a sunset cloud.

And ye in gray and russet suits, And ye with ruffles all in flutes About your necks ashine; When April sends her lamps of dew, To light her darkened daisies through, God fetch ve. darlings mine.

And ye, with tuneful, tender throats, And ye, with white and spotless coats, And ye that hold in scorn Soft music, and while summer gleams Snapping your bills of horn.

And let what will my life befall, I still shall love and need ye all; Nor can my heart make choice, Or hold the nightingale preferred Above the cuckoo, less a bird. Than "just a wandering voice."

Therefore I pray, and can but pray, Lord keep, and bring them back when May Shall come with shining train, This broidered with fields of wheat, And butterflies and field pinks sweet, And yellow bees, and rain.

Yes, bring them back across the seas In clouds of golden witnesses,
In grand, the grave, the gay;
And if thy holy will it be,
Keep me alive once more to see
The glad and glorious day.

I sought to do some mighty act of good
That I might prove how well my soul had striven.
I waited, and the minutes, hours passed,

Yet bore no incense of my need to heaven. Sad, without hope, I watched the falling rain; One drop alone could not refresh the tree, But drop on drop, till from its deepest root
The giant oak drank life and liberty. Refreshed, like Nature, I arose to try And do the duty that should nearest lie; And ere I knew my work was half begun, The noble deed I sought in vain was done

PHYSICAL MANIFESTATIONS.

A Reporter with Mrs. Hollis .- He becomes Converted.—Balls of Phosphorescent Lights turning into Faces .-Mrs. Libbie White.

[From the (Washington, D. C.) Capital, of September 28.] I was sitting in the editorial room of the Commercial, talking to one of its versatile editors who answers to the name of Plympton, and who ought to be known throughout the country as one of our most accomplished journalists, and who is known to a wide circle of friends, as the best sort of a fellow, when William M. Corry, late of the Commoner and Kentucky Resolutions, and now for all time the most brilliant conversationalist ever endowed with breath, came in and immediately opened a conversation concerning a message that he had received the night before from his grandfather, long since deceased and quite forgotton. The message, it seems, came in the shape of advice, directing William to drop the Commo and stick to bricks. This was certainly good sense, and showed that the grandfather's head was level if not brilliant. I thought the gentlemen were joking, and put in my little jest ac-There has always been something cordingly. There has always been something extremely ludicrous to me in the spiritual bus iness. At best it seemed a sort of rat-hole revelation, and an unseemly attack on furniture. I had known the little Foxes at an early day, when they were quite pretty, plump as par-tridges, and as full of the animal as they claimed to be of spirits. Through these little girls, we interviewed St. Paul and Julius Cæsar. They were both represented to Gris, we interviewed St. Paul and Julius Casar. They were both represented to me as small men with bald heads and hooked noses. Julius had a good deal of a stomach on him, which came, I suppose, on account of his unbounded ambition; at least that is what Queen Catherine said of Cardinal Wolsley. I soon discovered, however, that my two friends were in earnest, and not in a frame of mind suited to joking. They went on to tell me-first one, and then the other—of the wonderful things they had witnessed at a Dr. Wolf's, on Smith street, in the presence of a medium called Mrs. Hollis, of Louisville, Kentucky. I was, of course, interested, and when invited to accompany them that night to a seance at the house of said Wolf, under the direction of the said female medium, I readily assented.

We took dinner together at the St. Nicholas.
This restaurant is to Cincinnati what Delmonico's is to New York, or Welker's to Washington, with a slight difference. The fare is not quite so good at the St. Nicholas, the service is abominable, and the price one pays therefor out of all proportion.

At eight o'clock, we were at the house of the At eight o'clock, we were at the house of the Doctor, a charming residence in Smith street, just out of Fourth. I was introduced to Mrs. Hollis—quite a handsome, dark-eyed brunette, weighing about a hundred and forty, and some thirty-five or forty years of age. Like the little Foxes, she is personally attractive, but, unlike my former mediums, I found her quiet and unassuming, and rather diffident. Aside from her personal attractions, the chief characteristic personal attractions, the chief characteristic that impressed one was the exceedingly frank and honest expression of her face. A judge of human nature would dismiss all suspicion of fraud, after taking one good look at her kind, countenance. gentle countenance.

We were at once conducted through a long porch to the rear building, where, between the library and laboratory, the Doctor had erected for Mrs. Hollis what was called the cabinet. It consisted of a partition run across one end of the small room, in the centre of which was a door, and in the centre of the door a circular opening ten inches in diameter, and about four feet from the floor. This aperture was covered feet from the floor. This aperture was with black cloth, while on the outside lay a with black cloth, while on the outside lay a slate with a minute slate pencil upon it. The doctor made us examine the walls and floor, to satisfy ourselves that there was no machinery about, while in the the cabinet there was no thing but a common chair. Into this cabinet went Mrs. Hollis; but before so doing, the Doc-tor blackened the palm of her right hand. The door was closed, fastened on the outside, and we sat down to the rattle of a large music box that had borne about as much music in it as a tin pan covering an insane bug. The gaslight shone through in a dim way from the adjoining rooms on either side, and we sat watching that dark spot upon the door, like three terriers gazing into a rathole. In about ten minutes a delicate, white hand appeared, that seemed to waver and flicker before us, and then disappear. As it went down, it seemed to melt into dark ness. Directly the hand came back, and went out as before. The third or fourth time, it seemed to grow steadier, reached out, seized the pencil, and wrote something with easy rapidity. It then opened, so as to show the white palm, and disappeared. The doctor seized the slate, and we all rushed into the other room, to read this message from the spirit-world. It was to the effect that some fighting character felt certain that he could whip somebody a second time. I thought the message was addressed to me, and so said with the opinion to the ghost, that it couldn't be done; but it turned out subsequently, to have been addressed to Mr. Corry, from a venerable defunct, who, in the remote ages of Cincinnati, had thrashed his, (William's) grandfather, and unwilling to clasp hands over the bloody chasm, was prepared to fight again.

This message, with the subsequent ones, accorded with my sense of the ludicrous, and I quite annoyed my friends with my levity. After receiving four or five messages, a luminous ball, very dim, appeared at the aperture, grew lighter, resolved itself into a head, with the features clearly defined, and for a second, gazed at us from the opening. Mr. Plympton told me that that was his sister Mary—dead quite annoyed my friends with my levity. some years, and was very striking in its resemblance. After this, came a message addressed to me, purporting to come from a cousin deceased some time since, in Boone county, Ken-

Then came another face, appearing and disappearing like the other. After this, we saw the late President of the United States, James Buchanan, that was so like the common lithograph head of the old Pub. Func., that my sense of humor grew stronger than ever. I thought that if James Buchanan—dead these many years—had only got so far as Smith street, Cincinnati, he was as slow in the spirit as he used to be in the flesh. It seems, how-ever, that Doctor Wolf had been, at one time, the private secretary of the solemn, old pump and through life, quite intimate with him, so that his appearance was not so extraordinary as it otherwise would have been.

We then had the pleasure of seeing Stephen A. Douglas. Stephen came, I suppose, because Buchanan did, and my doubts overtook my fun, when I saw that the bow each gave to the response to the "good evening" of Doctor Wolf, was precisely that which would come from a crayon sketch on a pasteboard, if the upper end were dipped forward suddenly.

I had made up my mind that the whole affair was an ingenious, innocent sort of fraud, when the luminous appearance at the opening re-solved itself into a head that so shocked me, that for a second my heart seemed to stop its action. I was so surprised, that for a second I was stunned, and my first feeling was that of inaignation at what struck me as a wanton outrage. This was not, however, well defined. and the moment I could reflect, the fact forced itself upon my mind, that probably I had deceived myself. My sight is quite dim from over use, and I had only caught a glimpse of what so startled me. It was too sacred a subject to be trifled with, and I determined to investigate the matter closely, and if I found any fraud in the business, to make an example of one medium at least.

The face appeared but once afterward, and then more distinct than before, so that nothing was given me upon which to solve my doubt. I had enough, however, to satisfy me that there was something more in this than is generally attributed to such manifestations.

To tell the honest truth I had gradually settled into that unhappy state of belief so common to this materialistic age that we possessed nothing in the way of spiritual life that could be administered upon after death. This had been jammed into me, by being knocked on the head, when I found, by actual experience, that as the physical ceased to operate, that part of me which thinks, wills and remembers, ceased to exist also; and all was blank, until the blood began to circulate, and the material engine got under way again. For thousands and thousands of years, that chin of death has been tied up, and the napkin folded over the mouth never to be removed by any message from the world beyond. So, like the more eminent theologians of our day, I had come to the unpleasant conviction, that all there was of it we could taste, hear, smell and see. And yet, through this rat-hole came what purported to be facts, upsetting my settled opinions, and putting me all at sea upon this subject. It is a common error for us to reject the truth

It is a common error for us to reject the truth because it does not come to us in a dignified and imposing manner. At the miracles of Christ failed to overcome the disbelier of the Jews, that grew out of the melancholy fact that the Messiah had come out of Nazareth, and had been born in a manger. Newton got his idea of a great law from the falling of an apple, while his kite identified the lightning. And so, this startling disclosure of a great truth, is as likely to come when least expected, in an obscure way, as others have in an obscure way, as others have done before.

With this spirit of skepticism, and with no belief in anything, not even in myself, I entered upon this investigation. I do not propose to go into the details of it, for others are at work upon them; but I can say in brief, that at the end of a week, in which I gave from five to eight hour's investigation, I was forced to the conclusion that if I had not been holding intercourse with the dead I had at least been in course with the dead, I had, at least, been in communication with a mysterious intelli-gence outside the hun anity subject to the laws

Mrs. Hollis gave me, for example, a seance to tions in writing. I renaired to the house at ten A. M., and in brood derlight we sat down by a small tea-table, over which the medium threw a woollen cover, and giving me the slate, she requested me to ask any question, either mentally, or to write it. I did the first. She placed the slate under the teple, and while talking about other things, held it there with her right hand. By means of a mirror that was hung accidentally in such a way that I could see her entire person, I noticed that her left hand rested in her lap. In a few minutes, I heard the pencil drop upon the slate, and bringing it sure enough, I found written upon it, answer to my question. This continued for two hours and a-half, in which time I asked forty-one questions, and received the same number of answers. In spme respects these were not satisfactory; that is, I could not realize that the person who purported to be in communication with me would send precisely such messages. They were answers, and the were reasonable, but in the answers I could not feel the source indicated. There was one peculiarity which struck and somewhat annoyed me. Every question I asked was a test; and yet, while this was going on, quite unexpectedly, and of course, unlooked for, the most conclusive evidences would be given.

There was a circumstance that occurred that amazed me, for it was so unexpected. I had written a message upon the slate that I did not wish the medium 'o see; and so turned it down, putting the pencil upon the upper side. In this position she placed it under the table. We heard the pencil drop directly, and fetching out the slate found no writing Turning it over, however, under my written interrogatory was the response, the spirit had written it on the under side, and the medium told me of a fact that I immediately put to the test, that the writing would go on upon the upper side with the slate pressed to the bottom of the

The most striking manifestations were made in the dark when the voices of the spirits became audible to us. The spirit whose face I had seen—and, by the by, this had been re-peated to me until there could be no question about the resemblance at least, if not the identity, for I had procured a powerful opera glass that revealed to me the very color of the yes and hair-this spirit whispered to me long messages that could be heard by others, which fact saved me from the doubt as to whether my imagination had not played me false. But the most striking and conclusive manifestation was in an interview between Mr. Corry and his former friend, Elwood Fisher. This was introduced by the medium asking if any one knew Elwood Fisher and giving a description of his personal appearance. Mr. Corry said he would be glad to communicate with his friend, but asked for some evidence that it was Elwood Fisher he conversed with. Elwood the friend than began:

"Does thee remember the little store or

"Yes, very well," responded Corry.
"Does thee remember the first time thee saw me there, sitting on the counter?"
"Very distinctly."

"Does thee remember taking me to thy father, who expressed an approbation of

'I remember it all." "Does the remember Daddy Bassett, with his long queu and ruffled shirts?" "I do, and I have not thought of him these thirty years."

And his sort of thing continued, it seemed to me, for nearly an hour—this talk of the two friends over the events of their lives, in which the one from the spirit-land sought to convince the other of his identity, and succeeded beyond doubt. While this was going on Mrs. Hollis informed me that quite a stout gentleman was examining my arm lately twisted in a buggy-wheel, who claimed to be a surgeon and called himself Jesse Judkins. She described him as a merry gentleman, fond of his jest. Poor Jesse, no truer word was eversaid. After these whispered communications, that we were assured would grow stronger and become more distinct, we had a talk with Jimmy Nolan. Jimmy spoke right out, very like a man talking through a horn, which I have no doubt he was doing, for there was a tin horn in the room; and having decided that the medium was honest, this strange, hollow voice, speak-ing to us in a familiar way, with ease and fluency, had a very strange effect. I could not help asking Jimmie, however, whether Greeley was going to be our next President. "That I can not answer, sir, and you know as much about it as I do. I can only say that he seems to have a first-rate chance

I wish I could write more at length upon this interesting subject, but I find myself, since making the attempt, shrinking from the task. I am not ashamed, as many are, of my experiences or afraid to avow my convictions; but, unfortunately for my testimony, the proof came to me in a shape too sacred for common use. Dr. Wolf had invited this lady to his house after what I understand was rather an unfortunate experience as a medium at Cincin nati, for the purpose of calm, careful investi-gation of Spiritualism generally, and this lady's power and honesty in particular. Of all the prominent men invited in the city two only could be found possessing interest enough in the subject to look into it and report the result of their investigation. I happened accidentally to make a third. I join heartily in the report, which says that the medium is above all suspicion, and I can add my conviction that the intelligence with which we communicated was beyond if not above the experiences of material humanity.

GLORIOUS MANIFESTATIONS.

DEAR BANNER OF LIGHT-I have not read in your or any other paper any account of the materializing manifestations occurring at the house of Dr. H. H. Ostrom, through the me diumship of Mrs. Libbie White, in the quiet village of Alton, Wayne Co., N. Y. Since the beginning of this year the manifestations, have been of the most remarkable character, and have excited intense interest. Owing to the feeble health of Mrs. White, the seances have been limited in number. The spirit directors will now permit of only one seance per week. If she could give one or two sittings each day, the house would be continthronged with visitors. Not one party in ten that desires sittings can be favored. By 'party," is meant a company of eight persons None may be expect a sitting there unless arrangements are made in advance. The house is not open to all comers, as at Moravia It is hoped that her health will soon permit her to have more frequent sittings.

I will briefly chronicle the results of two sittings. Owing to the fact that some of our party were not Spiritualists, and some others only "investigators," I will give simply the initials instead of their full names. All are happy, however, to relate their experiences to those who desire more light.

On Monday, Aug. 26th 1872, Judge Sone of our most highly esteemed citizens, and wife, Mrs. M—, Mrs. S—, Mr. M—, Mr. S— and wife, the writer, his wife and son, Fay, aged eleven years, Dr. Ostrom and Mr. Buth—all of sound mind and competent witnesses-took our seats in the lighted parlor at Dr. Ostrom's residence. Mrs. White entered the cabinet, and during the seance was "unconsciously entranced." We had no "dark circle." Our music was vocal, and excellent, to "harmonize conditions." My memory will not permit of giving an account of the appearance of all our spirit friends to the regular order in which they were seen. manifested themselves in a manner similar to those at Moravia and other places. Among those first seen, were the grandfather of the Judge, the father of Mrs. S—n, and Darius Cook, an old business friend of the writer. After singing,

Mrs. M-'s husband appeared, and the materialization was perfect. He beckoned her to She advanced, and they shook hands and exchanged kisses; and as he said "this is the happiest hour of my life," the curtain dropped, and she fell on her knees, and in a beautiful and touching attitude of prayer, thanked God and the angel world. The Judge exchanged expressions of continued love. After which her angel husband reappeared with their darling child in his arms. An Italian music-teacher of Mrs. Sand his wife also shook hands with him, and smiles; and as she sang one of the songs that he taught her in her youthful days, he flourish-ed his handkerchief in ecstatic delight. Mr. M. arose, approached the cabinet, and shook hands with his wife; and, after exchanging kisses and being embraced by her, he sank into a chair overcome with emotion. As we were singing,

"Yes, we'll gather at the river, The beautiful, the beautiful river That flows through the Summer-Land."

our precious angel daughter Eva, (în spirit-life two years—now aged eight,) made us happy in presenting her sweet face. Those beautiful eyes that closed in weariness again kindly looked upon father, mother and brother; and lips that faintly and softly whispered "Ma, ma," just before closing in death, stirred the depths of our hearts by their sweet music, as she wafted kisses to us on pulsating chords of love, in response to expressions of affection and kisses sent from parents' and brother's hearts. Her spirit mother held near her face white and pink daisies from the children's flower-gardens of the "Better Land." And how beautiful! Daisies of that color ever bloom on her grave in their season.

A sister in-law of the Judge's family appeared, in youthful beauty and vivacity, bearing in her hand choice flowers from the banks of the River of Life. Mrs. M—— arose and gave her a white geranium, which I handed Mrs M. for that purpose, that she pressed to her lips and returnd, thanking me, and also looks and gestures expressed a desire for more flowers.

Mrs. M—— took the paper containing them to the cabinet window, and she selected a beau-tiful fuchsia, pressed it to her lips, and returning it, expressing in an audible voice her feelings of happiness and joy. These flowers are prized by her friends beyond power of expression. My wife's Eva's angel-mother, smiled upon us, My wife a Eva's angel-mother, smiled upon us, in face of beautiful contour and celestial radiance. My wife arose and gave her a swe t-scented leaf, and received touches from h r hands, and a kiss from her lips. The curtain fell. She again appeared, and motioned for Fay to take the leaf from her hand. I led the dear boy forward, who received the leaf, and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the case of the leaf and a press from the leaf and a press f from the angel hand. It was my happiness to shake her haud twice, when she disappeared, and was seen no more by mortal vision. leaf, "by angel finger touched," and baptized with celestial love, is among our choicest

A brother of my wife bowed to us gracefully many times, and threw kisses to us as we expressed our happiness in meeting him. Shenandoah, a beautiful Indian spirit maiden, conversed with us a number of minutes in a melodious, fascinating voice. She said— "Have all the pale faces seen their spirit friends?" To the answer that all of our party from Rochester had, except Mrs. S., she re-plied—"That is too bad; I am sorry; we have done the best we could." Every eye was moistened by her words of heartfelt sympathy

We thanked the Indian maiden and our spirit friends for the inexpressible joy of that day, and thus closed the feast of love. We acknowledged freely and fully that all we had witnessed, marvelous as it may seem, were glorious realities, and felt that the "happy land" was not "far, far away;" that the chasm of the grave was beautifully and grandly

FINIS CORONET OPUS.

The end crowns the work of the last Convention of the American Association of Spiritual-That crown is the re-election of Victoria ists. That crown is the re-election of Thesis. C. Woodhull to the Presidency of that Association.

"Why do you persist in opposition to Mrs." Woodhull? It must be personal hatred"—is often asked, and occasionally charged to me. The solution—"personal hatred"—is but the reflection of the animus of those who indulge in it, and is as far from the truth as is darkness from light.

I do not oppose Mrs. Woodhull-the indivi dual, but I oppose making her the "standard-bearer" of a National Association of Spiritual ists. Partly because I do not deem her position upon vital questions of reform correct, and because of the undeniably unpopularity of the woman with the American people. Even though the public sentiment in regard to that lady be ever so erroneous; the fact that it exists so extensively--vitally, makes it, in my judgment, an absurd and fool-hardy work to place her in the front rank, at the head of a movement none too popular and strong, even among Spiritualists. That she is entirely unqualified for so high a trust as the position should be, is painfully evident from her celebrated "Message," and the "Constitution of the United States of the world;" as also from her lax ideas as to social, or rather sexual, rights and relations. It is true, she has read many finely composed lectures upon various topics; but in nearly all, especially in the address upon "the Principles of Social Freedom!" are positions that will not "hold wawater" under the criticism and arguments of such philosophers as A. E. Newton, and others. It is not my province to here point them out, nor are any really new ideas or principles involved in her addresses. The entire ground has been surveyed over and over, by equally as clear thinkers; and in some instances, as boldly "asserted points" staked out.

Not a medium and thinker in the land but has traversed the field, scanning every land-mark, as well as every ignis fatuus that has fluted before the gaze with seductive scintilla-tions, alluring the victim on to depths of woe and suffering inexpressible in many—far too many instances. Happy the individual thus stranded, who has not only an innate, but also an organic "balance wheel!" that finally enables the temporary erratic lines to again describe a true circle of moral evolution. Then where the requestly great merit 2—why the exwhere the unusually great merit?-why the excessive enthusiasm, even over the truths and sound logic which so intersperse the sad errors asserted in the various subjects discussed by Mrs. Woodhull?

We are told of the admirable "spirit and tone" of Mrs. Woodhull's addresses and articles. She presented some very fine sentiment in an article under the caption of "Impersonal Reform." published in the Banner of Light, last fall. But that "spirit and tone" would seem to have emanated from the writer of the respective lectures and articles; for it certainly presented an evidence of a fountain source in the author of the "speech," by Mrs. Woodhull, on the evening of the first day of the Convention at Boston. That "speech," according to the report thereof by the daily parameters of the triviage and discusses to envisely pers of that city, was a disgrace to anybody claiming respectability and deliberative func-tions. Strange, that among the many promitions. Strange, that among the many prominent individuals in attendance upon the Convention, no one had the inclination, presence of mind, or "backbone," to assert parliamentary rules, against such gross personalities—rank infractions of the proprieties of debate. Perhaps all were afraid of being charged with "desire for notoriety." And then to elect the individual who thus abuses the privileges of debate, who thus an uncovered the wolf within. debate; who thus uncovered the wolf within, to a second term in the first office of the Asso-'passing strange"-an exhibition of lack of dignity and self-respect, upon the part of that majority—thirty one members of that Convention. Those private circulars must have had the desired effect. It is evident that twenty-one members had a vivid idea of the "fitness of things." Pity some one of the number had not given evidence of "backbone" at the commencement of the sacrilegious infringement of the privileges and duties of debate.

THE RESULTS.

I would review the amended Constitution and other work of the Convention, but do not deem either of the least importance, so far as the work of practical organization is concerned, for it is, to me, plainly evident, that the last spasm of this long dying patient, is now exhib-

I said in my review of the first day's proceedings of that Convention, that if any good and practical result should come of the effort, I would rejoice, and would gladly hail and support a rational and proper plan and work. But the glimmer of hope which was aroused, be-cause of the heralding of the names of such delegates as William Denton, A. E. Newton and others, both gentlemen and ladies, has faded out, and only thick darkness remains.

It seems that the destructionists outnumbered those who would have put the Association upon a rational basis again. As 21 is to 32, so was the power of the destructionists. But while the Vic-iles out-voted the rationals, it is evident that the brains—the real intellectual power, was wielded by the minority, not a novel state of things. The "elaborate" plan of organization, the "Message," and "Constitution of the United States of the world," were all allowed to sleep on in sweet oblivion; nor did the "freedom shriekers" get the endorsement by the Convention, of their pet theory upon the

"social question."

The Banner of Light, editorially comments upon the results of the Convention, in number 3, volume xxxxx, to the point. For one, I fully endorse the positions therein set forth. And the Banner's opinions as to the ultimate results upon the Association, are significantly indicated in the statement that, "Our opinions concerning the organization whose meeting has thus, for the first time, transpired within the limits of our city, has been frequently given. In all matters wherein it extends its hand to further the best interests of the cause, we are with it, as all true Spiritualists While inclining to the belief that organization for effective work will be best accomplished by the forming of strong, local societies, from which State Associations will, in turn, be eliminated, and from which latter, in the order of natural succession, delegates may be returned to the National Association; still, if aught for the benefit of the truth, and the enfranchisement of the human mind from the grinding bondage of the past, can be brought about in the interim of the formation of the societies by this yearly Convention, we extend

"Brothers and sisters, let our highest ambition be the cultivation of charity for each other, and a spirit of self-abnegation for the good of all."

While the Banner of Light exhibits commendable charity and broad liberality, it is plainly evident that it has no faith in this American Association. Who can have, except it be the supporters of Victoria C. Woodhull?

I have for years advocated the above quoted ideas, as to proper mode of organization, both with pen and voice. And I am still confident they must prevail, ere successful organization will obtain, which I have ever favored and labored for.

WHAT NEXT?

It would now seem that a general Convention of those opposed to the American Association dynasty, is imperatively demanded, in order that the great mass of the Spiritualists of America may protest against present abominations; and to recommend a system for the true development of the organic work of Spiritualism, which is inevitable, as it is essential to the interests of humanity, "as I see it." Who will put the right ball in motion?

What David and Jesus Knew About God!

BY ASA FORREST.

In showing what David, the "man after God's own heart," knew about the God of the Christian Scriptures we will simply the sixty-ninth Psalm, deeming that sufficient to establish the character of his knowledge of that being for whom such thorough search has so lately been made.

SYNOPSIS.

"He devoteth his enemies to destruction. He praiseth God with thanksgiving."

"Let their table become a snare before them. and that which should have been for their

'For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded." They imitate God in cruelty, that's all.

"Add iniquity to their iniquity; and let them not come into righteousness."

"Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the right-

Now, Uncle David, you being "a man after God's own heart," please tell us why you offer up this charitable prayer?

"This shall please the Lord better than an ox or bullock with horns and hoofs."

Now, you see, we have here an exhibition of David's knowledge as to what is pleasing in the sight of the Lord—the God of Christianity, 'the same yesterday, to-day and forever. Stick a pin right here, while we turn and see what Jesus, "the son of David," knew about what was, and is, pleasing to his God, who is the Christian's God, also. We will quote from the sixth chapter of St. Luke:

"But I say unto you which hear, love your enemies, do good to them which hate you." Bless them which hate you and pray for (is it the damnation of?) them which despitefully

"But love ye your enemies, * * * * * and ye shall be the children of God, for he is kind unto the evil."

"Be ye, therefore, merciful as God is merciful." Now, my Christian friends, dig that old wax of superstition out of your ears, for we are go-ing to talk directly to your brains, and want you to hear, and not only hear, but set your old rusty, mental machines to work, and dispense with those of your priests, which you have been using for years, while your own, naturally as good as theirs, have been gathering the rust of, disuse on all questions involving popular theology.

David knew his God intimately, or the deductions of the Bible and the claims of priests, touching the relations of God and David, are false. David either knew what was more pleasing to his God than "an ox or a bullock with horns and hoofs," or he knew nothing what-ever of God, of any value to mankind. On the ever of God, of any value to mankind. other hand, Jesus must have known his God intimately, and knew what was pleasing to him in the spirit and form of prayer, or he, too, knew nothing of him, and was a lying impostor as well. Now, if it is proven by the Scripture quoted, that that which was pleasing to the God of David, was exactly the oposite spirit and principle, to that which was pleasing in sight of the God of Jesus, the "son of David," then, 1st., God is changable, and entirely unreliable; 2nd., the God of David, and the God of the "son of David," are not identical, and can not be one and the same being; 3rd, David knew nothing about God; 4th, David misrepresented God; 5th, Jesus knew nothing about God; 6th, Jesus misrepresented God; 7th, David's God was not the God of Jesus; 8th, Jesus' God was not the God of David; 9th, the Christian theology presents two God's as unlike as Saint and Devil; 10th, there is no God, known either to Jesus or

It is here demanded of some Christian, "wise unto salvation," to take the Scriptures quoted, and either tell us which one of the above ten plain propositions is true, or else arrange an eleventh which shall reconcile this matter to the satisfaction of men and women, who have a sufficient amount of reson to deter mine that a falshood can not be a truth at the same time, and in relation to the same sub Priests of the Christian faith, these prayers of David are recorded, and you expend thous ands of dollars taken from your faithful followers, every year, in publishing them to the world, as examples to men in their petitions to that God you have taught them to worship, that their prayers may be acceptable to him also. The teachings of Jesus are published, for the purpose of instructing men how they shall pray in a manner pleasing to this same, or another God of your theology. you frankly tell us whether you have been squandering the money of your deluded followers in behalf of the God of David or the God of Jesus, or both? Stand up to the rack and answer plainly like men. No talk about "superficial reading" "and new dispensations, meanings hidden in the original, and all such kind of chaff, which is your custom to employ when driven to close quarters, but come and take this book on our table—this "infallible book" bought of your agents with money, as an "infallible guide" to a knowledge of God's will, printed in plain English, and either acknowledge that you got our money for this book by a false pretense, which is crime against our laws, or explain to us how we are to arrive at an infallible understanding of God's will and pleasure, with this example of David and the teachings of the "son of David" before us.

Priests of the Christian faith, there is no shirking this matter. This article will be published, and thousands of your flooks will read it, and think for themselves! Your followers will expect you to "rise and explain. This you may do by adding another curiosity to literature, in the form of a good, improved, patent, Christian prayer, consistant, yet following closely, the example of David and the teachings of the "son of David." Tell us plainly, whether the God of David or the God of Jesus is the "only true God?" If the latter, will you make restitution of the money you have taking per force of fraud, from de-luded men, women and even little children, in behalf of the God of David. If the former, will you come forward and voluntarily mount the gallows, and expiate your hundred and fifty thousand crimes of murder in behalf of Priests of the Christian faith, will you tell us frankly, which of these two Gods you pro-pose to acknowledge in the constitution of our country? The people are anxious to know something about this matter. If we are to acknowledge a God in our constitution, we want to know whether it is a God to whom the revengeful breathings of a David are more pleasing than "an ox or a bullock with horns and hoofs," or whether it is the God whom to be like we must be merciful and love our ene-

Science and Spiritualism.

BY DR. H. C. PIERCE.

It is frequently observed that men of letters too often refuse an investigation of the phenomena of our philosophy of life. of this dereliction of duty may not always be the fear of public opinion, though it too often It may sometimes be due to the loose and careless method pursued by visitors at the circles and seances.

Bro. Bailey lately referred to this unsatisfactory style of investigation in these words:—
"But it occurs to my, perhaps too critical mind, that for the purpose of a more complete and satisfactory demonstration of the phenomena of so-called materialization, there should be a believe to the satisfactory demonstration. be absolute test conditions upon the part of the medium as well as all other surroundings. He speaks of the visits at Moravia, and of cabinet manifestations, where the medium is upon the inside, loose or perhaps doubtfully tied. Though he assumes Mrs. Andrews to be honest, "yet the conditions are not such as thoroughly scientific investigation demands." Truth never fears scrutiny. Let the possibility of deception be removed if it can be done. It is not sufficient to have the medium tied, unless it be securely done. When mediums direct the kinds of knots they are to be tied with, it ought to be, as it always is, quite unsatisfactory. The careless method of conducting these public exhibitions often does harm, and confirms skepticism. For one, I am firm believer in physical manifestations, but Spiritualists have enough of the truth, not to stand in need of juggleries.

Mrs. Pierce, a trance medium of this place, has often exhibited spirit faces, and several have been clearly recognized, but it was not in a cabinet—the "materialization" was upon the face of the medium. It would be easy for her to exhibit these through a small apperture in a cabin t, especially if as insecurely tied as we have known parties to be. The boys of the streets, in many places are counterfeiting the rope tying very successfully. Let Spiritualists be careful to see to those mat ters, even if the public are not. Truth will triumph, and if we allow ourselves to be imposed upon, the cause will suffer. I write wholly in the interest of Spiritualism, in which I have worked about fourteen years. Davis and other seers have predicted that as our cause becomes more popular the temptations to counterfeit the phenomena will be increased. This is more particularly the case where money is to be made by the operation.

I approve the course of the JOURNAL in Bro. Slade's alleged expose, and rejoice that he has so ably vindicated the truth in his case. I can see no possible harm in "proving all things, and holding fast that which is good." want no Jesuits to help on the great work of progress, but if we sift the chaff from the wheat the cause will be the better for it. rope-tie, the iron ring manifestations, as well as cabinet manifestations can be closely counterfeited. There is no harm in holding all complices, and in closely examining the rings. and particularly in seeing that the medium has none concealed under his coat sleeves, which he slips down when held, while his accomplice steals the ring from the table supposed to be used. Again, some persons can easily slip off the ropes whatever be the knot; they can even slip hand-cuffs, so small are their hands. Spir itualists should show they are willing to have the whole matter fairly scrutinized in every case. There is genuine coin, and that is what we all want. Let us be on the look out for counterfeits, for be assured they are in circula-

Letter from Dr. DeWit Franklin.

DEAR JOURNAL:-Knowing that your columns are always open and free for all information, investigation and interchanging of ideas which may tend to good for the human family, and keeping your glorious motto in view, that "Truth wears no mask," etc.—"she only asks a hearing," then as a starting point, we find that a principle contains all there is of value in a policy; therefore, I would act upon the principle, and accept the private and public consequences. All new born ideas and theories no matter how practicable, how good and profitable they may have been, or will prove themselves to the human family, must neces sarily undergo a certain amount of private and public criticism, in consequence of which many intelligent individuals stand aloof, lacking moral courage enough to claim their Godgiven rights to their own individuality, fearing they might lose whatever little popularity they so much value in a rotten public policy which will not bear a thorough investigation. For the past seven or eight years, your correspondent has been a close observer of human nature, learning many valuable lessons from the pages of the great book of God-Nature, which never has, nor never will be closed to his children, though they persist in selfish blindness to reason, relying only upon the dictations of designing bread and butter priestcraft. We may liken those individuals to a great number of persons who wish to become acquainted with the practical philosophy of swimming, avoiding deep water and never venturing beyond what would be a safe wading depth. But if we never venture out into deep water, and over head, too, we never can acquire the art of swimming. By this analogy you see we find a great many who are satisfied to vegetate, yes, live and die on custom-tradition and su perstition. No one can strike out into the broad, deep waters of investigation without first freeing himself from the fear—selfish grasp and slimy coils of priestly tradition. Can you tell me, is there any device by which we can obtain knowledge unless we venture beyond the shoal waters of tradition? The age is upon us, wherein all things, old as well as new, must be investigated—the intelligence of the nineteenth century demands it for the future good of millions yet unborn. Old things are becoming new. The same identical principles and laws which governed and controlled the Fox sisters a quarter of a century ago at Hydesville, controlled media in patriarchical times—age—that same power moved the gentle Nazarene to acts of love and charity, by some called miraculous, is still controlling and governing all our true spirit manifestations, known as Modern Spiritualism throughout the world. The great Magnetic Key has unlocked the store-house of nature, and he who does not investigate with all the present age glaring around him, is blind to reason and common sense, deserving to be a worshiping dupe at the shrine of bigotism, but here let me say that such individuals should have our sympathy—not our censure!— Let none of us pretend to infallibility, but let us engage our intellectual efforts in investigating this grand spiritual philosophy which offers inducements to the ennobling and elevating of mankind. In God's name, let us be consistent, true to ourselves and to our brother man-accord to all their right of thought -break their trammels of Priestcraft, and let the spirit flow out in all its God-given rights; then mankind will be happier, persecutions will cease—no more bloody martyrs of church or state—the angel-world will draw closer to us,-God in his glory through our guardian angels will be made manifest, and mankind will be redeemed, and the Millenium declared! Then may we all vanquish prejudice, extend our zeal in seeking wisdom. Investigation has a claim upon us that is being pressed, and we must put in our plea, either that we are willfully regardless of the calls of the angel-world, the loved ones from the Summer-Land who are seeking admittance for our good here and in the immortal life beyond. Reader, we are upon the witness stand, let us be truthful, deceiving none, the eyes of the whole world are upon us-aye, the angle-world is witnessing our testimony for truth and progression, and at this moment, whilst penning these lines near the life-likeness of my little May, I feel her pure young spirit hovering over me, whispering words of childish love and affective the spirit work of the spirit hove and affective the spirit hove the spirit hove affective the sp tion, giving us the assurance of a better life, of joys untold beyond the river that we call May God, through his angels hasten the time when this earth plane shall be free, and false pride and vanity shall yield to better DR. BROTHER JONES:-We have recently been the recipients of a rich feast—a feast of good things—a feast of spiritual truths, which has rent the Old Orthodox shell of this place from center to circumterence, almost to the severing of the marrow from the bone. Bro. R. G. Eccles, "the young man eloquent," has been among us and delivered six lectures in Pleasanton, Linn county, and six in Paola, Miami county. On Sunday, September 22nd, I listened to a soul-stirring lecture from the text: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." This was one of Bro. Eccles' happiest efforts, using geological, historical data with effect and force, clearly proving his knowledge of the subject under discussion. Bro. Eccles is truly a "noble Roman;" a fearless, analytical and conclusive reasoner, never leaving a point until it is made clear, fully established, nailed with wrought-iron nails, and clinched on the other side. In the evening, Sister Henderson, of Aubury, Johnson county, Kansas, entertained largest audience that had ever turned out in this town, to listen to a lecture on Spirit-ualism. Sister Henderson has been for many years a student of the Harmonial Philosophy, under the direct teachings of her spirit guides for five hours a day, for many months; hence it may be inferred that she is well prepared for the great and noble work she now feels herself called upon to undertake-that of teaching and organizing. Sister Henderson's work is a peculiar one,— she is what may be termed a Bible Spiritualist; and through this method she reaches the very heart of society and the church. For the benefit of our friends I would say, that our sister is now traveling through South ern Kansas, and would like to secure engage-

I was amused at a remark of an editor just after the Rev. Gentleman threw out his challenge: Said he, "there goes a skinned Baptist." Paola is all excitement, anticipating the coming contest; there never was so much interest felt in matters of theology. The church trembles, and daily prayers ascend to the throne of the "Unknown God," for blessing on Bro. Jerold's head. young men are jubilant. DISCUSSION

On the Phenomenon of

MODERN SPIRITUALISM.

PROPOSITION: Resolved, That man lives after the death of the body in a conscious state, and communicates with the inhabitants of earth.

Negative,

This debate is rich in historical and scientific research, containing a vast fund of information in a compact style, and so brilliantly and c: gently expressed that the perusal of the same fascinates and instructs the reader. Every investigator should have it; every student of the Harmonial Philosophy should carefully examine is pages, and scrutinize critically the position of each of the disputants. Both of them are educated men, well versed in historic and scientific lore, and the knowledge that each one possessed on this subject, has been brought to light.

THREE POEMS. Voice of Nature. Voice of a Pebble. Voice of Superstition.

By Warren Sumner Barlow. The Voice of Nature tells no falsehoods, and in her communication to this author she represents God in the light of common sense, divesting him of all superstitions notions, and presenting him to the world in his unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only demolished, this author has erected a beautiful temple on the ruins of superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of the poem, says: "It will unquestionably cause the author to be classed among the ablest and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

The Voice of A Perric delineates the individuality in Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

In Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

The Voice of Superstition in the most chaste and beautiful language portrays the conflict between the orthodox God and the devil, and proves, by copious extracts from the Bible, that the former has ever been defeated by the latter, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary. It scintillates with rare gems of thought throughout, and will be read with pleasure and profit. This poem is an emanation from a master mind, and no one can peruse its contents without feeling that they have been made better thereby. Original, scientific, and fearless in its feonoclastic views, it is a repository of original thought, awakening noble conceptions of God and man, forcible and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that will grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Bhoodhism.

Bhoodhism, of Hindoostan, Burmah, China, etc., 700 years B.C., comprises over 300,000,000, or one-third of the population of the globe. The Bhoodish commandments are five in num-1st.—Thou shalt not destroy life.

"Overcome evil with good," says Bhood. To a man in the wrong, or who thinks me in the wrong, will I return good for evil; the protection of my ungrudging love; the more evil goes from him, the more good shall go from me, so the good fragrance may return to me, and the ill flavor go to him.

A perverse man hearing Bhood teach good for evil abused him. Bhood was silent, and pitying him, said:

"Son, when a man forgets the rules of politeness in making a present to another, the custom is to say, 'keep your present, son! You have railed at me; I decline to entertain your abuse, and ask you to keep it as a source of misery to yourself.' For as sound belongs to the drum, and shadow to the substance, so, in the end, misery will certainly overtake the evil doer. A wicked man who reproaches a virtuous one, is like a man who looks up and spits at heaven; the spittle soils not heaven, but comes back and defiles his own person."

Who is a good Man? Bhood says, "the religious (true) man is only good; goodness is the agreement of the conscience (reason) and the will ment of the conscience (reason) and the will. The great man is he who is strongest in the exercise of patience; endures injury, and maintains a blameless life. The worshipful man is he whose heart has arrived at the highest degree of enlightenment, and remains calm and pure without blemish, amid all he sees, knows and hears—this is illumination."

Spiritual Culture. Bhood says, "a man who cherishes lust and desire, and does not aim after supreme knowledge, is like a vase of dirty water, in which all sorts of beautiful objects are placed; the water being shaken up, men can see nothing of the beautiful objects therein placed. So, lust and desire causing confusion and disorder in the heart, are like the mud in the water; they prevent our seeing the beauty of supreme reason (religion). But if a man, by the gradual process of confession and pen-nance, comes near the acquirement of knowledge, then, the mud in the water being removed, all is clear and pure; remove the pollution, and immediately, of itself, comes forth the substantial form. So, the three poisons (covetousness, anger and delusion) which rage within the heart, and the five obscurities (envy, passion, sloth, veccularious and unbelief, which passion, sloth, vaccillation and unbelief) which embrace it, effectually prevent one from obtaining supreme reason. But once get rid of the pollution of the heart, and then we perceive the spiritual portions of ourselves, which we have had from the first, although involved in the net of life and death; gladly, then, we mount the paradise of all the Bhoods, where reason and virtue continually abide."

A man who devotes himself to religion (rea-

In reflection, in life, in conversation and in study, I never for a moment forget the supreme end—religion (reason).

Speaking of "Bhodi"—supreme reason— Bhood said, "the Shaman who has left his home, banished desire, expelled love, fathomed the bottom of his own heart, penetrated the deep principle of universal mind (Bhooda), understood the principle, that there is no subjective personal existence, or objective aim in life, or result to be obtained; whose heart is neither hampered by the practice of religion, or fettered by the bonds of life; to be without anxious thoughts, without active endeavor, without careful preparation, without successful accomplishment, attaining the highest possible point of true being, without passing through any successive and distinct stages of progress; this is, indeed, to be religious, or practice supreme reason.

Difficult things to do. Bhood says, "It is difficult to be poor, and charitable, rich and great, repress lust, banish desire, see selfish pleasure and not seek it; to be strong and not rash; to bear insult without anger; to move in the world and not set the heart upon it; to keep an even mind in diving to the bottom; not contemn the ignorant; to cast off self-esteem; to be good, learned and clever, or sagacious; to see hidden principles; to attain an end without exultation; to show the right way—the doctrine of expediency; to save men by converting them; to be the same in heart and life; to avoid contro-

Speaking of Illumination — Clairvoyance, Bhood says, "Bodies and minds worn out with exertion, obtain illumination (death-bed vision), and some anon perceive universal diffusion, and see all things within themselves. And still reflecting, they behold their generated bodies as so many grains of dust in the wide expanse of the universal void—now safe, now lost; or as a bubble of the sea-sprung from nothing, and born to be destroyed; but ever the same-identical with the substance of Bnood, incapable of increase or diminution. Oh! the mysterious depth, the all-embracing extent, the undisturbed and unmoved majesty. May we yet convert endless worlds of beings, and cause them deep gratitude through all time. Thought. Bhood says, "we are the result of thought, of what we have thought, we are founded on our thoughts, made up of our thoughts. If a man speaks or acts with an evil

"All that we are is the result of what we have thought; it is founded on our thoughts; it is made up of our thoughts. If a man speaks, or acts with a pure thought, happiness follows him like a shadow that never leaves him

"As an Archer makes straight his arrow, so a wise man makes straight his thought, which it is difficult to turn. Those who bridle their minds will be free from Mara (the tempter), while those who only look for the pleasures of sense, fall into her embrace; yet, she overcomes one as a top-heavy tree, and is resisted by the other, as the Rocky Mountain.

"As rain breaks through an ill-thatched house, passion will break through an unreflecting mind. Yet, as the well thatched roof resists, so resists the well-reflecting mind. The evil man suffers here and hereafter, when he thinks of evil done—yet more, while on the road of evil. To recite law and not do it, is like counting the cowherd of others.'

Hatred ceases by Love. "This," says Bhood, is an olden rule. Reflection, says Bhood, "is the path of immortality; thoughlessness, the path to death.

Those who reflect do not die; those who are thoughtless, are as if dead already." Reflection, self-restraint and control, make one's self an island which no flood can overwhelm. Earnestness is praised; thoughtless-ness blamed.

Flowers. Bhood says, "He who knows that this body is like froth, and has learned that it is as unsubstantial as mirage, will break the flower pointed arrow of mara (the tempter), and provided the beauty of death. As the beauty of death, as the beauty of death, as the beauty of death. and never see the king of death. As the bee collects nectar and departs without injuring the flower, or its color, or perfume, so let the sages dwell upon earth; yet, are fruitless words as the perfumeless flowers—mere appearance without life. ance without life. As the lily on the rubbish grows beautiful, and full of sweet perfume, so bloom those self-controls found growing unseen and unsung on the waste heaps of human misery."

The Fool. "If," says Bhood, "the traveler meets with none equal nor better than himself, let him keep on his course, since there is no companionship in a fool. Fools are as spoons to the soup, whereas, intelligence to the wise are as lips to the soup. When the fool's fruit ripens, he suffers grief."

"The Venerable," says Bhood, "are as solid rocks unshaken by the wind; he who is free from credulity is warmed by the inner spirit; has cut selfish ties; removed all temptations has cut selfish ties; removed all temptations and renounced all desires; is the greatest of Self Conquest. Bhood says, "The man who conquers himself, conquers more than if he had conquered one million of men, and ranks among the greatest of conquerors; he always lives under restraint; he who sees truth one moment at birth, is greater than the ignorance of untold ages."

"Work out your own Salvation. Bhood says, "The thoughtful on the free way are beyond the bondage of Mara. Watch the speech; restrain the mind, commit no wrong with the body; these are the paths of the wise. Knowledge comes through zeal; ignorance through inaction—all must redeem themselves who would be redeemed. As kinsfolk receive our return from afar, so will our good deeds receive us.'

Good and Evil. Says Bhood, "Commit not one sin, nor tell not one lie to protect another. He who has no wound in his hand may touch poison. The falling drop wears the rock away, or fills the pot—thus, good is overcome, or collected, little by little. Blow off thine infirmities, as the smith blows the dross off his ore. First learn and direct yourself, then learn and direct others." There is no fire like passion; direct others." There is no fire like passion, no shark like hatred, no snare like folly; no torrent like greed. "Health is the greatest of gifts." "Content is the greatest of riches." These primitive sayings and teachings need no

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON, Healing, Psychometric & Business Medium, 148 FOURTH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view rather than to graiffy idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex age, leading symptoms, and the length of time the patient has been sick; when she will, without delay, return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease, and permanently curing all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit-guides are brought en rapport with a sick person, through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the positive and negative forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. Robinson also, through her mediumship, diagany changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. Robinson also, through her mediumship, diagnoses, the disease of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter, as when the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric and business medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $3.00; each subsequent one, $2.00. Psychometric Delineation of character, $3.00. Answering business letters, $3.00. The money should accompany the application to insure a reply.

All About Prof. Tyndall's Prayer-Test.

It is really amusing to observe the sophistry that occasionally permeates an article in the Christian Union. In its efforts to be liberal, and at the same time satisfy the whimsical notions of the orthodox, it gives expression to exceedingly weak logic. It, too, is afraid to indorse the proposition of Prof. Tyndall, who desired to test the efficacy of prayer over physic, and thereby forever settle the question whether God does actually answer the petitions of mortals, or not. Carefully ponder the following remarks of the Christian Union.

If Prof. Tyndall had studied the laws that obtain in the kingdom of grace as faithfully as he has those which rule in the province of heat, he would not have lent the weight of his name to the strange proposition to test the efficacy of prayer. The experiment proposed, whatever the result, would not be the final test desired. In one of its issues it would have no power to convince the gainsayer, and in the other none to confound the believer.

First, if the united prayer were answered, it would be in the same way that the Christian believes all his prayers are answered, not by the working of a miracle, but by the controlling of natural causes so as to produce the desired result. He believes that all the means conducive to the end in view, prayer itself included, have been foreknown by God from the be-ginning, and each has had its proper place and efficiency assigned it for the accomplishment of the end designed. So that, even though there should be a most marked difference between the wards prayed for and those that were not, the cavilers being able to trace the action of the natural causes, and not to detect divine interposition, would be sure to ascribe the result to the former, and would cavil still. Nothing short of a miracle would convince them, and, judging from the past, even that has little effect where the difficulty is in the will, rather than in the intellect. The Christian could not pray for the working of a miracle, because he believes the roll of miraculous evidence to be completed, and that he has no warrant to expect such interposition in his behalf. This formity to God's method of acting in His spiritual kingdom, through the agency of natural causes divinely preordained and controlled, would not prove, so as to satisfy the doubters at least, the test to be conclusive. Secondly, the result, if unfavorable, would prove nothing as against the efficacy of prayer. Indeed, the mere proposition shows that the true idea of Christian prayer is entirely misconceived. The challenge is evidently given on the assumption that prayer, especially in such a crucial experiments as this, must needs compel a favorable answer, or else suffer a humiliating defeat, and own itself altogether ineffectual. It does not claim to do the former: its denial by no means proves the latter. Submission to the will of the Best and Wisest always appertains to the spirit of true supplica-tion. If therefore, in the case proposed, the petitions of Christians should not be granted, they would suffer no defeat, for they would offer this prayer as they do all others, in submission to the will of Him who sometimes confers a greater blessing in denial than the giving would bestow. The denial would neither give the Christian just cause for humiliation, nor the doubter for exultation at what he might call the failure of the experi-

What an exceedingly small loop-hole the Christian Union endeavors to escape from, and how weak its interpretations of God's method of answering prayer. Its assertion that if "the petitions of Christians should not be granted, they would suffer no defeat," is equivalent to the statement that the sin of our first parents was not a victory to Satan

The idea "that prayers are answered by controlling natural causes so as to produce the result desired," is virtually doing away with the necessity of them altogether. A man commences to pray in early spring time for a bountiful harvest, and in order to bring about such a consummation, fertilizes the soil, ploughs deep, exterminates weeds, and uses every precaution in his power to save his crops when ripe, and in so doing, answers his own prayer! That is self-evident, for the next-door farmer, who never prayed, reaps equally as bountiful a harvest.

If the exertion of the praying man is absolutely necessary in order to obtain a response to his supplications, can we ever be certain which secures the answer, his own labors or those of God! If God requires the effort of the praying man, then he needs assistance to confer a blessing on his children, hence can not be omnipotent. We would like to see the Tyndall test tried. Let the Christian world occupy their whole time with requests to God to prove himself superior to physic, etc., and forever settle the vexed question. Let one universal prayer meeting be held all over the inhabitable globe-in the jungles of Africa, under the torrid sun of Asia, amid the icebergs of Iceland, among the orange trees of the tropics, and on the bleak hills of the extreme north and south-let one glory hallelujah ascend heavenward from millions of voices-sound forth from pianos, violins, accordions, and the organ of the Italian grinder! Let no pains be spared to attract the attention of God-entreat him to show his superiority! But what consistency in expecting God to manifest his superiority over physic when he directs his destructive thunderbolts against a house especially dedicated to him! To illustrate his peculiar character, we give the following:

from J. A. Dyer, of Baraboo, Wisconsin: I will give you a little item for the benefit of the orthodox churches. I was in this place on Saturday, the 5th of Oct. About ten o'clock there was a thunder shower come over the town of Baraboo, and the lightning struck the Congregational Church and made a large fissure in one side of the column supporting the spire, all the way down to the ground. Some of the splinters were thrown one hundred yards. It seems that God had another of his mad fits, and was going to thunder down his own church. After they have been so good to God as to build the house and give it to him, then he gives it a crack! This looks to me very much like little boy's, play to talk about consecrating the house to the service of God and that he has a special supervision over it from the time of its dedication.

Can a God who will maliciously destroy a church which has been especially dedicated to him, be relied upon to administer directly from his abundant stores, such remedies that will heal the sick? We think not. No reliance whatever can be placed in such a God. And, indeed, the Bible declares in unequivocal language, that God's ears are like the

and that they close whenever a wicked, contentious fellow drops on his knees to whine out a petition in serio-bass voice for something that he wants, or in other words, it declares that the prayers of the wicked are as useless as the shadow of a decaying stump, or that they availeth nothing!

Henry Bremer, a Norwegian, was accustomed to pray-read the "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation," then blew out his brains, in the Young Men's Christian Association Rooms, at Newark, N. J.-strange effect of prayers. Probably the valves to God's ears were closed. Again, a story of betrayal and seduction comes from Ware, Massachusetts, the victim being a young girl whose lover had deserted her and married her rival. All concerned belonged to the Methodist Church; they prayed, but in their case, those mysterious valves were closed. A Jesuit has been fined one hundred francs at Brussels, for forcing himself into the chamber of Professor Attmeyer, of the University of that city, when the Professor was at the point of death. He, too, prayed, but those flexible valves would not admit them to God's mind!

The Zion's Herald says Professor Tyndall's proposition to test the value of prayer offered for the recovery of the sick, is simply an impertinence. We can not regard it in such a light. If the Bible be divinely inspired, and its declarations true, then the Zion's Herald has no grounds whatever for charging Tyndall with impertinence; on the contrary, by its foolish declaration, it stamps itself with infidelity, for the Bible distinctly dcclares that "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up."—[James v: 15.]

The Church Union and Zion's Herald have no 'faith," or they would not give expression to such foolish sophistry and foolish charges of impertinence. If the "prayer of faith" can not save the sick, then the Bible is false, and may be considered as worthless trash. If physic can, and does at times cure the sick, and if the prayer of faith shall save the sick, in which is the most efficacy,-that which "can" and "does," or that which "shall," save. Who is so cowardly as to wish to avoid a test experiment? Professor Tyndall is thoroughly posted on Bible declarations, and keenly critical in nature; he is well aware that if they are true, that faith and prayer should eradicate all the ills of life. Poor cowardly Christians, with no real genuine confidence in the Bible, you present a sorry spectacle when confronted by sci-

BIBLE DECLARATIONS.

St. Mark (11: 24) says: "Therefore, I say unto you, what things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." What declaration could be more plain than that? St. Mark again asserts (16: 17, 18, 19,) "And these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name, shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall re-

If the ministers of the gospel are afraid to test the efficacy of prayer and faith, they should invent a new system of religion founded on common sense! Where is there a minister with faith enough to take deadly poison into the stomach. Alas, there is not one in all Christendom that dare do it. They will not rely on God.

PRAYER AND IGNORANCE

go hand in hand! The more ignorant the Christian, the louder he toots his hallelujahs, and the more vociferous in his expressions of -Glory to God! Glory! Glory to God! The proper understanding of nature's laws show the futility of prayer! As well prevent the approach of winter with its Northern blasts and banks of snow, by prayer, as to secure additional rain by any such method. The lightning rod does away with the necessity of asking God to restrain the lightning; a proper knowl- and clairvoyant medium.

edge of agriculture and chemistry secures the bountiful harvest, without any supplication to Deity; a knowledge of medicine, magnetism, surgery, etc., alone secures health. When man finds himself, after thousands of years of study, able to do what he attributed to God, he will dispense with a prayer-answering God altogether; through sanitary measures, it is rendered unnecessary to petition any being to keep epidemics away; in fact, Knowledge is the great Prayer Killer of the present age!

The Chicago Tribune, in an able manner, reviews the opposition of the Churches to the Tyndall "test." Desiring to keep our readers posted on this all-absorbing question, we give the opinion of the Tribune in full:

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

"A church-member suggests, in Zion's Herald, a new test of the efficacy of prayer, which he believes the Church in general will be willing to accept. He proposes that some one shall se-lect fifty abandoned wretches; that their names and sketches of their characters shall be given to a number of Christian men and women; and that these latter, without the knowlege of the subjects of the experiment, shall pray for their conversion every day for a year. The pro-

"'I would like to join in such a test as this, and should have no fears as to the result of such an experiment. Will those who challenge the faith of the Church accept the conditions, bide the issue, and accept its teachings?' "The fact that such a scheme has been suggested is a pleasing incident in this somewhat embittered controversy. Both parties are to blame. The men who indorsed the test proposed by Professor Tyndall's friend have too often done so in an arrogant, sneering manner, that was sufficient in itself, to prevent the trial. Then, again, they have boasted of the unwillingness of Christians to submit to such a test, arguing that the latter were unwilling because they were afraid, and that this proved their side of the question. Of course, it really proved nothing. It would have been strange if a single plan, without modification, had pleased everybody. Neither the rejection of this nor of all others would show fear. There are some thorough beliefs which men have, and which they would yet be loth to submit to a test, however sure of the result. An English review illustrates this by saying that a suggestion to a husband to test his wife's honor would be bitterly resented as an insult. Yet, a man's love for his wife, and his belief in her, are often excelled by a Christian's love for, and belief in, his creed, down to its minutest part. In a failure to comprehend this fact, and its consequences, lies the chief error of the inno-On the other hand, the tone taken in reply to the proposed innovation, has often been needlessly offensive. It is denounced, again and again, as 'impious.' This is absurd. No honest search for truth can ever be impious, no matter how far from the truth the seeker may stray. The Bible maintains also, by implication, at least, that the sun revolves around the earth. No one objects now to an allegorical interpretation of the passages concerning the latter statement, and in this way science and revelation are reconciled But when Gallileo wrote, he combatted as deeplyfixed a belief as that of to-day in the efficacy of prayer. It was not his hitting upon the truth that kept him from impiety. If he had been wrong he would still have been free from that reproach. And so, whether right or wrong in fact, the believers in Tyndall are right in maintaining what they believe to be the truth, and should have a fair hearing from the believers in prayer. The suggestion of this new scheme shows that some, at least, of the latter, are ready to give the former such a hearing.

"We therefore regret the more that the new scheme seems hardly as fair a test as the old The curious influence of one mind upon another, although many miles apart (shown by prophetic dreams, by the so-called spiritual man-ifestations, and by mesmerism), is acknowledged. Every man who gains power over his fellows is a man of strong will. There can be no greater strengthener of the will than a belief in some religion. In every age, delicate women and timid children have dared to die for belief's sake. Their faith made them strong. Their will, usually worthless as a force, carried them through hours of agony without a tear or a groan. The party of prayer might, then, by mere force of will, get such a mesmeric mastery over the minds of those prayed for, that the mental change of conversion would take place, simply as a result of the now imperfectly-understood laws of mind-connection. In the case of hospital-test, a physical change would have to be produced. To be sure, the knowledge of the patients that their recovery was an especial object of prayer, would tend to cause a mental condition favorable to that recovery. The powerful influence of mind up-on body has just been re-attested, once more, by the "miraculous" restoration to health of French pilgrims, at the shrines of La Salette and Lourdes. Nevertheless, the physical change would be harder to compass than the The will-power would be far weaker in regard to several hundred patients, most of whom would be unknown, than if only fifty, all of whom were known, were concerned. In the latter case, the will, in the former, prayer, would apparently have the bulk of the work to do. Now that a disposition has been manifested on one side to go half way, it is to be hoped that the other party, which boasts of its liberality, will not refuse to respond. This important suggestion should not be allowed to drop out of sight, leaving only a sting behind. Let us have some compromise test, acceptable, as far as possible, to both parties to the dispute. Then let the test be applied, as rigorously and as reverently as may be. Truth can always afford to be tried.

Did Christianity Kill Him?

The New York Tribune states that Henry Bremer, a Norwegian, and a jeweler by trade, blew out his brains with a pistol, in the read ing-room of the Young Men's Christian Association, at Newark, New Jersey, on Thursday morning. He had been sitting in the room reading a "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation" before he committed the deed. Bremer is about fifty years of age, and is supposed to be alone in this country. Those who knew him considered that he was always a little eccentric. Had he been perusing Robert Dale Owens' "Debatable Land," instead of the one designated, he would have been regarded as insane, and his suicide attributed to a belief in Spiritualism. The probability is, that his suicide was caused by the sublime mysticism of mystic philosophy-that assigned to the blood of Jesus a saving efficacy.

Psychic Force.

It is really amusing to witness the squirming of the scientific men when brought face to face with Spiritual manifestations! Prof. Crookes, of England, not wishing to endorse the wonderful doings of spirits through different mediums, invented a word to express his own ideas of the cause of the phenomena, and we now have the term Psychic Force. Prof Crookes, when brought in contact with Home and other remarkable mediums, no doubt was somewhat muddled, and finding himself between two "horns of a dilemma," resolved to extricate himself therefrom by applying a term to what he witnessed, that no one could comprehend. It is indeed strange that such a scientific man should attribute the movements of an accordion in a wire case to psychic force, ascribing to it a certain amount of intelligence. This mysterious force could elongate the body of Home some four inches, carry him through the air, move tables, answer questions, play beautiful tunes, produce brilliant phosphorescent lights, and perform many other remarkable feats! In our opinion, such an assumption on the part of Prof. Crookes shows unpardonable weakness, and proves conclusively that all great men have one "weak spot" in their nature, and the greater the man, the weaker that one spot! This psychic force is really a strange agent, and presents to us very curious phenomena. The Materialist who attended one of Maud Lord's seances saw it manifested in the person of his little girl who had died some time previously, and whom he believed had no immortal existence. She came and caressed him, and exhibited all the ardent affection that she did during life. Another man who visited Moravia, saw it presented in the form of his aged grandmother, giving her name and date of death. Another sees it before him in the form of a brother long since dead, who comes to her in her own room, and through his instrumentality her life is saved, and a field of usefulness opened up before her. Why will Prof. Crookes be so foolish? Is the weak spot in his nature so deep and soft that truth can not affect him? With all his wisdom he is decidedly weak, and his opinion is not worth as much as the common man, who is unlearned in the sciences. A writer in the Index touches the question in a nost admirable manner, as follows: That scientists do not always possess all the qualifications required by the "genuine scientific spirit," I lately had proof in the confessions of a young English gentleman of rising repute at home as a student of science, whom I met a few weeks since in Washington. versation turned upon the Cox and Crookes controversy. I inquired why the vexed ques tion was not subjected to some critical trial, which should make final decision upon its claims. His answer was: "We have tried to test it, but it evades all our tests." Subsequently however, he owned that the "psychic club" of which he had been a member, after experi menting prosperously for some time with raps, weighing tables, et cetera, were suddenly dis-persed by an astonishing communication! It was rapped out for them at a daylight sitting; and was so inscrutable in its origin and startling in its purport, that the club with one con-sent dissolved its sitting, agreed to say nothing about it, and never met again. It is easy to see - sees this, he will remember that he told the story in a large company as a good joke, adding that, "seriously, he didn't know what to make of it!" Yet this man waxes eloquent over the esthetics of the spectroscope, and the wonderful properties of sound. If it is true that "scientific men can not give heed to any phenomena to which they can not apply the usual scientific methods," let them wait quietly until new conditions are given, under which they can apply the old methods, or discover new ones. It is possible that now and then one may say like Galileo, when a friend suggested to him that Scheiner's es must be failing, as he complained of see ing spots on the sun: "Scheiner's eyes are good enough; I have myself watched those spots for some time past." Watched them, but said nothing; because he could not bring the proof that would save him from the jeers of his fellow-astronomers. No doubt science will have enough to do in classifying the new phenomena, in ascertaining their relations to establish laws, in furnishing the needed terminology, and so forth. "There is nothing in the universe except matter and force," says the Materialist. "For force read spirit," says the Spiritualist. May it not be that in the nomenclature of the future a word is waiting which shall unite the inner significance of both terms, while yet the truth it stands for shall prove itself something a little different from what is now anticipated by either Spiritualists or Materialists? With this safe prophecy I will close.

Elder Miles Grant.

D. W. Hull's discussion at Rochelle, Illinois, with Elder E. C. Marston, was a complete triumph in favor of Spiritualism. Mr. Marston flew from one point to another, but made no definite stand as Mr. Hull assailed all his points. When the discussion was half through, he abandoned the question entirely (Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion), and went to talking upon another subject, concerning the existence of the spirit after the death of the body. Mr. Hull followed him there, and proved according to his Bible, that they must exist, as Jesus was seen after his decease; that his body could not have been raised, as he was only seen by Clair. voyants.

Elder Miles Grant was lingering near the neigh. borhood of the discussion, but did not put in an appearance while Mr. Hull was in Rochelle. He was announced to speak the next week after the discussion. As Mr. Hull felt that he was following on his heels at a safe distance, he sent him the following challenge-a copy of which was published in the Rochelle Liberal-

ELDER GRANT-DEAR SIR:-As you stand in the front ranks of those who oppose Spiritualism, and as I occupy entirely an adverse position, the religious interests of the community demand that we should meet face to face in as as many places as convenient, and discuss the differences between us, that the public may have an opportunity of knowing our views and

Three times during last winter I was told by your friends that I would not meet you in dis-cussion, and when I replied that I had a standcussion, and when I replied that I had a standing challenge to you, my word was disputed. I then published a challenge to you, through the Banner of Light, Boston, to which you made no reply. Last summer I was told in this place, that neither my Brother, Moses Hull, E. V. Wilson, or myself, would discuss with you. My reply was that you could not with you. My reply was that you could not be induced to hold a discussion with either of us. Your reply to this, as given by Elder E. C. Worthy of Note.

At the time Chicago was burned, the whole civilized world was animated with sympathy. Contributions came flowing in for over two months after the dreadful calamity, in one continuous stream, and through the aid thus afforded a vast amount of suffering was prevented. Hardly had the fire ceased burning when the common laborer commenced to remove the debris preparatory to erecting buildings on a more magnificent scale than ever before. Now its business houses are larger, and better adapted for the demands of an increasing trade; its hotels when completed will be grander than ever before-in fact, not excelled by those of any other city in the world; its theatres and opera houses are equal in magnificence to those of New York, while its grain elevators surpass in magnitude those of any other city in the union. Under this favorable aspect of affairs, it is really pleasing to note the expression of prominent eastern papers. The New York *Tribune says:

Chicago celebrated the first anniversary of its great fire most characteristically. No sack-cloth, no ashes, but a procession, brass bands, newspapers in rebuilt offices, and with sixteenpage supplements, old firms taking possession of new trade palaces, and the Board of Trade formerly installed in a magnificent building that outshines in splendor the one which went down in the great fire of 1871. This is the way Chicago commemorates an event which would have wiped out almost any other city in the world. The best of it is, too, that, as Chicago had the sympathies of the country in its desolation, there will be no boundary to the satisfaction which its prosperous rebuilding

The N. Y., Herald is brilliant in its expression over the condition of affairs at the First Anniversary of the fire:

"The notes of thankfulness and rejoicing over the new city rising from the ashes of the old will be hailed all over the world with a heart-felt sympathy for the Queen of the West and her dauntless children. The magnificent building of the Chamber of Commerce was thrown open with appropriate ceremonies; the peo-ple appeared in their holiday habit, and the journals came out in new and enlarged dresses also. This, indeed, is something to be grateful Civilization rushed with one accord, to for. the relief of the city in its hour of agony; but the greatest triumph of all for humanity is that which shows in the rising structures on every side how nobly, determinedly, and undismayed the sufferers applied the words of Longfellow:

"Trust not the future, howe'er p'easant;
Let the dead past bury its dead.
Act, act in the living present—
Heart within and God o'erhead."

The New York World enthusiastically says: "Wonderful as was the rise of Chicago, and wonderful as was its fall, the re-building of it has been more wonderful still. The building of Carthage was not so fit a subject for an epic as the repair of Chicago. It lacks the epic-maker, though the inclination to sing its praises is rife enough in Chicago. must all be proud as well as astonished, to look at the great city which has sprung up from the rubbish-heap of a year ago, and own that the Chicago boaster is entitled to his boast, however untuneful it may be.'

"Everybody whom business or pleasure has lately called to Chicago has been struck with the enormous progress made toward a complete restoration, and the scale on which the buildings have been renewed. To imagine it, we must recall the fact that the burnt area was equal to half the size of New York City, from the Battery to the Central Park; and then picture it already covered by more than a thousand buildings, among which those of the first-class alone are valued at $40,000,000, and they are so numerous that the average appearance of the streets fall little if at all short of that of the best parts of Broadway. In place of the wooden sidewalks of old, the sidewalks in front of the completed business blocks are laid with a broad flagging, and in most other respects regard has been had in the reconstruction to protect against fire. The rapidity with which all this has taken place has, of course, not been favorable to the best workmanship beyond the requirements of the fire-laws and the vigilant supervision of the Board of Public Works. Neither of these controlled the architectural designs externally, and the amusing confusion of "orders" and schools in the New Chicago has not escaped comment. But this was simply inevitable, and it does not prevent the revival of the city from being, what we said a year ago it promised to be, more startling than its original growth."

These congratulations, of course, create within the mind of every Chicagoan, a true sense of pride at the wondrous growth that has accompanied the efforts of earnest souls in the work of reconstruction. In connection herewith, it might be well to remark that the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL has kept pace with the spirit of improvement manifested on all sides, and to-day its pages are more acceptable to its readers than ever before. It was the first weekly paper issued after the fire, and the only one that did not miss a single

Plain Talk for Intelligent Renders About the Bible, etc.

Starting out with the proposition that belief, sure and steadfast, is too important and sacred a thing to fix upon any other than absolute scientific evidence and positive demonstration, allow me to present to an indulgent public a starting point from which all, both old and young, can reason out the philosophy of life and true theory of rightdoing and reward and wrong-doing and punishment, which in the main is easily stated in theory, but which in particular application has to be wrought out in the life of each individual to be truly understood.

First, even a child can see the truth of this proposition, that it is beyond the possibility of any power in the universe (not excepting God Himself) to make a true circle that shall have ends, or what we call a straight line that shall have less than two ends. This is in the same sense that, as the Bible informs us, "It is impossible for God to lie." Some things, then, are impossible even with God. Now. we can not go astray if we start out upon our investigations with statement, Robbery is not right under any circumstances; and the "living and true God," the great Spirit of the universe, never has commanded one man to rob another. This must be as true as it is that it is impossible for God to do wrong. For the very idea of a God is that of an infinitely pure and holy being incapable of doing or encouraging wrong. If he ever did this we have the most incontestible evidence that he is not an infinitely holy being, or that the witness who testifies to God's complicity in wrong-doing is an unfaithful witness, and not worthy of belief on our part. But we read in Exodus that God commanded the Israelites to 'borrow' all their neighbors' jewelry; that he gave the people favor in the eyes of the Egyptians, that is, made it easy to do the horrowers and that there is expected. eyes of the Egyptians, that is, made it easy to do the borrowing, and that they "spoiled" (or robbed) "the Egyptians." Now, as we can not accept the statement that God could have lent his aid to wrong doing (for "two wrongs can not make one right"), we are compelled to accept the alternative that it is an error. Hence the Bible contains errors. When we consider that the testimony in the above case is furnished by a cruel old priest.

above case is furnished by a cruel old priest, who was capable of doing what is recorded of him in Numbers xxxi., where it says his band of marauders, after pillaging the country of his wife's father—Midian, the land of Jethro ruthlessly murdered in cold blood, by his command, over a hundred thousand a fair estimate, of helpless babes and defenseless women, and also kept thirty-two thousand young women (thirty-two of whom were for his own personal use) for a fate infinitely worse than that of their mothers and infant brothers and sisters, we can not fail to have grave doubts as to the inspiration and authority of the Bible.
What makes the incredible slaughter of Numbers xxxi. so much more barefaced an exaggeration than any of Baron Munchausen's stories, which were never printed or told for truth, is the following consideration:

According to the Pentateuch (see Exodus, vi., 20; Numbers, xxvi., 59, and I Chronicles, vi., 1, 15), Moses was the son of Jochebed, the sister of Konath, who himself was one of the seventy that went into Egypt in the famine. Hence Moses was born in the next generation after the Israelites went into Egypt. (These facts are more reliable for argument than the mere dates of 430 or 215 years, both of which are quite uncertain and apt to mislead.) Now, when any of our learned divines can tell us how "this Moses" could lead out 603,550 warriors, in addition to women, children and "strangers," or about three millions of people (see Numbers, i.), when each of Jacob's twelve sons had only about four children on an average, and where he afterwards mustered the 12, 000 warriors even, who performed the above Herculean task without the less of a man (sus picious), then, and not till then, shall we take the Bible as a better book than the Koran and implicitly follow its teachings as those of a

The writings of this man Moses and the laws of his Pentateuch are all that gives the New Testament any value; for Jesus Himself is rep-resented as saying, "All those things which you find in Moses and the prophets those things observe and do;" and "Not one jot or tittle shall pass from the law till all be fuifilled."

When Moses' infamous record and his fabulous accounts of creation, deluge, Egyptian plagues and incredible numbers of people and equally incredible feats of a barbarous age are a little better cleared up and relieved from the suspicion and obscurity in which they lie concealed, we shall be better prepared to base our arguments upon the infallibility of "the Scriptures."

Let us take one more of the numerous instances' of unreliability. In Genesis it is stated that "Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh," or was promoted to be governor. Then followed seven years of plenty. After two of the years of famine which followed had expired the Israelites moved into Egypt, seventy in number. Hence at this time Joseph was thirty-nine years old. Juda was three years older than Joseph, for he was born in the fourth and Joseph in the seventh year of Jacob's double marriage. Hence Judah was forty-two years of age at the removal into Egypt. But if this was his age how are we to account for his growing up to manhood, marrying, having three sons—Er, Onan and Shelah, two twin (illegitimate) grand-sons, after Er and Onan's death, and from one of these twin grandsons, Pharez, three great grandsons, who are enumerated among the seventy who went into Egypt, while at this time Joseph had only recently been married? This story is even more incredible than the others and equally as much "mixed" as Oakes Ames' political record. Hence the more intelligent part of community will lose enough of their confidence in "Bible Spiritualist's" quoted authorities against witches, so-called, and mediums, to try to account for the following facts:—In the presence of Dr. Henry Slade, of this city, the most wonderful communications are received, written by unseen hands. Having purchased a double slate, with a wooden frame, and a pencil, your correspondent went to Dr. Slade's rooms. After cleaning the slate and biting off a small grain of pencil about as large as a split pea, but small enough to move between the two surfaces of the slate when closed, I placed the little grain of pencil in the slate and closed it up. Dr. Slade and myself than joined our hands on the top of the table, all in broad daylight, and while we sat engaged in curious conversation about so wonderful a manifestation we distinctly heard the little piece of pencil moving over the surface inside the slate; and when the noise ceased, on opening the slate, we found a communication, commencing "My Dear Louise," and signed with my mother's signature, she having been in spirit-life nine years.

This can be verified by numerous witnesses who have seen the wonderful manifestations of spirit presence which occur in Dr. Slade's presence, and until otherwise scientifically explained, I take the most probable I take the most probable theory for accounting for so unusal an occurrence by attributing it to the cause purporting to pro-communication. The Doctor's honesty is undoubted, and if these facts are not so they can be disproved. Any one doing so, however, must write over his own signature, when I will agree to also contest the matter over Spirit Paintings on Glass.

[From the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Independent.] On a recent visit to Clinton county, in this State, our curiosity was aroused by startling stories of strange and altogether mysterious proceedings, which, by common consent was attributed to modern spirit ability, and fondness for doing things bordering upon the supernatural, and as these doings are somewhat varied from the ordinary manifestations of spirits, we give here a short account of "things we saw," leaving the reader to draw whatever inference the facts may suggest.

While at St. Johns, hearing that paintings had mysteriously appeared upon the windows of several buildings in the village, our curiosity prompted us to inspect them, and learn if "seeing" would verify the tough stories of the resident gossipers. We first inspected the the resident gossipers. We first inspected the windows of a wagon shop, locally known as the "Barracks," where we found several specimens of peculiar paintings. They were mostly a combination of brilliant colors, in regular rainbow tints, but without any apparent regard to design. When seen from the outside of the building the colors are brilliantly vivid, and one would naturally expect to find real paint on the opposite side of the glass. In fact as we viewed them from the exterior of the building, we concluded we were an easy victim to a very shabbily executed sell; but upon taking a look from the interior of the shop we found that appearances are often delusive, and that hasty conclusions are not unfrequently erroneous, for from this side we not only failed to find any paint, but to our astonishment found the glass to be purely transparent and entirely innocent of tint or

We were informed by an employe of the shop that these wonderful paintings were invaribly executed in the dark. Some of them were completed in a single night, while others underwent change and improvement for several nights in succession. The proprietor, who is a staunch orthodox churchman, had made several unsuccessful attempts to obliterate the pictures by the use of acids and chemicals, and had even substituted new glass in the place of that painted upon, but was dis-gusted at the stubborn perseverence of the unseen artist when he found that the newlyinserted panes were always painted the first night.

On the windows of the Union School House, in Maple Rapids, fourteen miles north and west of St. Johns, we found more of these same peculiar specimens of artistic skill. Here the pictures are better done, and many of them were tolerably well executed landscape paintings. In all, the colors were beautifully blended and as radiant as the dream of an artist. One peculiarity which we failed to noice at St. John's, was here a prom-inent feature of the paintings, as these pic-tures, when viewed from a little distance, appeared to be upon the glass; but upon a nearer view, they seemed to recede toward the interior of the building. Here, as elsewhere, we found that the paintings were entirely invisible from the inside of the house. We visited other places where we found paintings similar to those we have described. On a building owned by a Mr. Hoyt, we saw a very well ex-ecuted likeness of a man. The glass appeared to be smoked, and the coloring was very dim.
The likeness had the appearance of a faded photograph. We expected to find this glass at least, partially opaque from the interior, for, from outside, it seemed to be covered with smoke, but on inspection from the interior we found it perfectly transparent.

These paintings are a profound mystery to all who have seen them, though of course there are a great many absurd theories as to the whys and wherefores of their appearance. A Methodist preacher attributes their appear ance to a Spiritual lecturer who has for sometime past been holding forth in the vicinity; but how they are done was beyond his comprehension. One theory was they were caused by the near approach of the Plantamour comet and were considered as a sign of the ending of theory, however, is that they are the doings of spirits. We have no theory to offer. They are real and wonderful developments of some mysterious power.

BY DR. KAYNER,

ALLIANCE, OHIO.

We lectured at Lyceum Hall in Alliance, Ohio, Saturday evening and Sunday morning and evening, Oct. 3rd and 6th, to full houses.

The first lecture on "Man's relation to the Spiritual Universe," prepared the way for the introduction of the "Two Pictures," in those of Sunday, on which the difference was shown and the line clearly drawn by our resides between Orthodoxy and Spiritual Company. guides, between Orthodoxy and Spiritualism. The symbolic paintings of Bro. Streight contributed their magic influence to help electrify the audience and won encomiums of praise for the artist and his spirit band.

We here met R. M. Sherman, the medium in whose presence the spirit's talk in an audible voic, and attended his sceanes held at the house of Bro. D. G. Hester. After the medium's hands are securely tied behind him and a gag put in his mouth, Anna Leece, his spirit control, will talk to the different ones in the circle, and give tests to the separate ones of the presence of their spirit friends.

On one occasion, speaking of her acquiring the power to speak audibly, and of the phenomena of Spiritualism, she exclaimed; "Beautiful Philosophy! Beautiful Life! A Religion with Brains!"

While sitting with my feet upon the medium's, my hands upon his head, the guitar in another part of the room was raised to the ceiling, carried about over our hands and played upon, and finally placed across my arms and the playing by the invisible fingers continued while the medium's hands were still bound behind his back,

I understand he is soon to visit Chicago. when opportunity to converse face to face with the spirits of departed human beings will be afforded our Western friends.

PICTURES ON WINDOWS. We have also seen here the curious phenomena of glass staining and picture making on windows. The glass first assumes a tinge, gradually deepening in color not unlike the stain of iodine and bromine vapors, which be-comes arranged to form a likeness, or on which a likeness is impressed. And right here comes an inquiry: Have the spirits gained a sufficient knowledge of the subtile law of chemistry to apply the subli-mated elements and attenuated atoms of proper chemicals to the glass in our windows, and assume the control of the Spiritualized rays of light so as to photograph their invisible forms on our windows whensoever they will? duce it, and indicated by the address and signature and more especially as Dr. Slade was ignorant of any of the facts alluded to in the

"The Earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."

With feelings of gratitude and thankfulness for renewed health, we rejoice in these words of the ancient writer How much of the sor-row and sadness, strife and contention that exists on the earth comes from sickness, either of body or mind. The world and all things therein contained are reflected on our interior natures, and according as our mirror is, so will be the truthfulness of the picture.

The winter of 1871 and '72 will long be remembered, not only as the most severe, but as one in which a most fearful epidemic of small pox prevailed in many of our large cities, and extended over a great portion of both conti-

Having, in our experience, witnessed several epidemics, and stood by the bedside, when the pestilence walked in our midst, we have become somewhat familiar with these terrible scenes, but never before have we seen anything to equal that of the past winter, in which strong men and women in the full vigor of life were stricken down, and in a few hours left to our vision only the lifeless body filled with the fearfully contaminating poison from which all were driven with fear. In several cases, we were obliged to assist, almost alone, in the last rites of these poor victims. This disease has been peculiarly hard upon our me diums, many of whom have suffered very much from it. It is a well-known fact, that during the prevalence of an epidemic, all diseases par-take more or less of its character, and especially when they attack sensitive and impressi

About the middle of February, we had an attack of nervous fever, which prostrated us very low, and kept us in the house nearly five weeks. This disease affected both the physical and mental systems; and during these long and weary hours, our soul was often "on the wings of remembrance" away from the prison house of the body, and it visited many of the scenes that had been familiar to it in former ages, but which it had not been able to impress upon our outer consciousness. The fact that the soul can and does pass away from the body, is to us a reality, not a mere dream or uncertain vision, but a knowledge as absolute as the most tangi ble evidences of our senses.

We were deeply impressed with the fact of the unity of the race of man as a common bro therhood, though of diverse origin as to locality and time, some families being much older than others, and also with the grand purpose in the divine economy which they were carrying forward. The history of all the past is repeated to-day, by the multitudinous varieties of mankind who swarm more or less densely over the globe, from the cold and frigid polar regions of the north and south, to the burning

Our attention was mainly directed to the temperate zone of the North, in which the physical, intellectual and moral faculties have accomplished their chief work, but there were times when we were attracted to the less advanced inhabitants of other portions of the We saw the shricking Bushman, of Africa, the wild man of Australia and the islands of the ocean, and the inhabitants of the cold regions of the North and South.

These lower tribes, just emerging from the plane of animality, presented many interesting leatures, for amid all the darkness and repulsiveness of their characters, we could discern the basis of spirituality which rendered them at the same time human and immortal. Never before have we been so much interested in tracing the operations of this divine spark scintillating in transient gleams of light among these peo ple, and manifesting themselves in their strange religious ceremonies, especially those observed when the angel of death came among them. We perceived that among all nations death is realized as a connecting link between this life and another, which is beyond. The idea of a Supreme Being-the great positive mind-may be very crude and imperfect, but that of returning human spirits, demons or ghosts, is very clearly defined and universal. Hence, when we saw, as we did, the Laplander wrapping the body of his deceased brother in the linest and warnest furs, and placing, in common with many other nations, the warlike instruments in the grave with the body, and bringing the most desirable food, and burning those things which not only gave out strong odors, but also gave brilliant lights for the spirit on its journey. When we witnessed the ceremonies, and heard the songs around the scenes where the departed lay, we could read the evidences of man's immortality and undy-We lingered among these scenes and recall them now in pleasant memories.

Turning to the more civilized nations, we looked into many of their habits and customs, and saw the spiritual meaning of all these We recognized in all the religious forms and ceremonies, the evidences of growing spiritual truth, many of which have died out, leaving the forms like the trunks of dead trees which have stood for centuries without any growth, greenness or foliage; and as in the ancient fable, the leaves were for the healing of the nations, we found but little in these that were attract-

We were deeply impressed with the fact that mankind, as they exist to-day upon the earth, present evidences mainly of the early stages of infantile life. Their habits and customs, forms and ceremonies, are very much like the child-ish things of which the Apostle spoke. In almost every thing, mankind do not come up to their highest standard of light and knowledge, but are continually excusing themselves for habits which they should have outgrown long ago. This will apply to the most advanced classes as well as to those who may be looking down upon others, and seeing how much they fall short of their ideals.

We were forcibly struck with the very general prevalence of a disposition to see the faults and short-comings of others, and an inability

If there is any one lesson that we would pro-claim to all mankind, it would be, to sweep before their own doors, to examine their own conditions, and to improve these, and not de-vote the most of their time and energy to the improvement of others, who, when seen spiritually, present quite as good, and often a better appearance than they do themselves. We would proclaim to all mankind, that the highest aims of life are to be good, and to do

It will be impossible to relate many of the things which we saw in these journeys, but one fact we must endeavor to present, for it has filled our soul with greater charity than we have ever had before. It was this—that many whom the world looked upon as low and depraved, had, through their own efforts, and the aid which they had received from their spiritfriends, although they were unaided by those in the form who should have been their saviors, had risen far above their original conditions, and were really progressing more rapidly than some that were looked upon as great and good. Our spirit vision enabled us to see, not only the present, but the past conditions of those whom we looked upon, and we could note the rate of progress.

The interior conditions of humanity which are seen from a spiritual standpoint, will change the relations of many; and there are many who occupy high positions, upon the walls of whose temples will be written "Thou hast been weighed and found wanting." We found that the lowly ones who were We found that the lowly ones who were thus traveling upward, were almost entirely free from that pharisaical disposition which has cursed the world in all ages by establishing caste, and saying, "Stand by, I am holier than thou" In all the religious denominations that we visited, we found many earnest and truthful souls who saw beyond the forms and ceremontes, and were laboring for a true life.

We were deeply impressed with the fallacy of human judgment, when unenlightened by spiritual perception, and we hope this lesson will not be lost upon us. We realized the necessity of placing ourselves, as far as possible, in the position of our fellow men before we judged them, and the inability to do this, except as we become spiritually free. We saw that it was the animal, and not the spiritual, that was fierce and warlike, full of strife and contention, and that just as man became spiritually unfolded, was this nature restrained, and the beautiful love nature permitted to come forth and express itself in deeds of kindness.

All the harshness and bitterness, the sorrow and suffering that exists in the world, is temporary. Though the soul may be overwhelmed with deep and poignant anguish, yet this will soon pass away, and that divine love which calls forth the purity of the soul, will de-

"Like the morning dew, To strengthen soul and body too," and thus, as the ancient writer declared, give "man dominion over all the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea." This declaration has a two-fold meaning, and its most important application is to man as a spiritual being, in which, the soul-nature, standing for h in its true freedom and dignity, finds itself, by the power of love, director-not ruler or king, because these are symbols of power that belong to the kingdom of force, and

We do not want a kingdom in which there is a king of kings and lord of lords, but a free community in which all are brothers and sisters, and he that is greatest among them shall be the servant and minister to others. Having attained this condition, we shall not need physical restraint of any kind, but will live in that glorious freedom which the truth gives to all who have received it in the fullness of their ca-Then, indeed, shall we know that "he is a free man whom the truth makes free.'

Letter from Bishop A. Beals.

DEAR JOURNAL: Once more I find myself in the beautiful and fertile valley of Almond, surrounded by the grand old hills of Alleghany, that on this autumnal day lift up flaming ban ners of crimson and gold and drip the red-life of glory down rugged rocks and waving trees. Since writing you last, I have been busily engaged speaking in towns and country places. At East Hamburg, a village some ten miles from Buffalo, I gave five lectures, using the Good Templars' Hall, the hall being crowded each evening.

At the close of my last lecture, a cordial invitation was given me to return and renew the interest which was so happily begun. I gave some very fine tests of spirit presence, awakened a deep interest in many a skeptic's heart. I found there many an earnest soul, and was glad to see the good-faced Journal in their homes, and to find it so warmly praised as a weekly messenger.

I went from there to Friendship, an old and well established town numbering about two thousand inhabitants. I met there Bro. Lattoe, who has been lately converted to Spiritualism through the wonderful manifestation at Mora-

I spoke twice there in the Universalist church to crowded houses. Sunday evening I had in attendance the Methodist minister of the place, who had the moral courage after the meeting to extend the hand of fellowship, expressing the wish I should call on him. I did so, and found on his table the JOURNAL, also some reformatory books. It is said that his church are fearful he is getting unorthodox in his belief, and have set times to labor with him, but his great spiritual power has thus far kept them at bay.

At the close of my Monday evening discourse the friends re-engaged me to return and speak to them again the second Sunday in Oct. I left there with many expressions of sweet sympathy which ever yields its rich fruit of gratitude in the heart of the weary wanderer. I then took up my work here again in Almond, meeting from many a dear and friendly face a fresh baptism of heart-felt sympathy. I held meetings in the Town Hall to good and appreciative audiences.

The wonderful phenomena of spirit-likenesses coming on the window glass, has been perfectly developed in this vicinity, which naturally creates much excitement,—the clergy, of course, calling it the work of the Devil. I send you the following article clipped from the local paper which will explain the matter: ALMOND ITEMS.

In my last, I spoke of Mr. Beals, and therefore I will dispose of him by saying that he held forth last Friday night, at the Handy School-house, and Saturday at the Town Hall, and in both cases he did wonders! At the Town Hall, the venerable editor of the Tribune put in some of his ponderous weights, which he alone can wield, to open the eyes of the blind, for he is a power in these last days; and once upon a time did preach the Methodist faith; but now he can bear more light and stronger food, which he is as willing to give as he is to receive.

I will further dispose of the spirits by speaking of the phenomena of likenesses coming on the window glass of Oliver Shumway, about one mile north of Union Church. 'Tis said the devil does it, but as to that your correspondent saith not, for this strange people say he is the most cunning of the two leading Spirits. About four weeks since it was discovered that some of the glass in a window on the second floor looked as if it had been smoked, and an effort was made with soap and hot water to remove the stain, which was found to be indelible, and could not be wiped out by acids or labor. The ingenious devil or some other agent, for this is harmless so far, has brought the likeness of an old gentleman, so plain that the color of the eyes and hair can be plainly seen at the distance of fifty feet. On other lights there are other figures developing and bids fair for quite a show in a house next to the Paul of the Church. As I write for all of your readers, I will in all cases confine myself to facts as they appear at the writing, and if subsequent developments should change the aspect, I will make the correction in the next week's issue. S. From here I go to Dansville, expecting to speak Sunday morning and evening. I hear that the Dansville people have been entertained with a visit from the Davenport Brothers, and a new interest awakened. Almond, October 3d, 1872.

GRANT CHARMS, or those wonder-GRANT CHARMS, or those wonderful Microscope Photographs are something you can not get everywhere, therefore are not common. INVOCATION.

Oh, beloved Star of light, thou that dost lead us by day and by night, thou art our bright and shining star, that shows us the light from that world that is not so far, and unto thee, thou beautiful bouquet of everlasting truth held in the vase of eternity, whose sweet waters glide from the springs of truth, may each branch with the leaves take deep root around the heart, and bear many buds of promise that shall bloom, not only here, but in all eternity.

Oh, may each leaf be a page in their lives, whereby the angel world can trace out the lines of love, and write the precious truths of improved in any live and more than the containing and immortality; and may the sweet waters from the pleasant stream ever keep fresh these flowers, and may our God ever be a sweet per fume to kill the poisonous air of bigotry! May a ray of light go wherever each one may go, and pierce through the wall of darkness and leave its healthful influence there; and may that be caught up with their atmosphere, b wafted from the windows of their souls, and penetrate throughout all eternity.

Oh, God, thy name is eternity! Immense are all the truths in the chamber of glorious light, and now that we walk through the grand aisles of peace, we see on all sides pictures of truth and pillars of truth supporting the grand dome of one immense eternity, and we behold no space; for we see that the beautiful principle of life fills and animates the entire Universe.

of Beverly, N. J., said, "I came down on the steamer with Mr. Warner, who is present. I was one hundred and two years of age-a very old man. It is a very short stream to cross indeed. I come back to inform you that the spirit never gets too old to return again. You will find my death in the morning papers of Sept. 16th! A reference to the morning papers proved this statement to be correct. The medium had not seen a morning paper in which his death was appeared."

REV. E. D. SAUNDERS, D. D., said: "I lived in West Philadelphia. There is a connection which brings me here. I died on the 13th of Sept. There is but a very short distance between us. Let me shake hands with you. [shakes hands] "I have come here to partake of that communion so sweet to the soul. I am happy and doing the work for others, that I could not affect in the body. I find rest in such sweet places set these. I have find rest in such sweet places as these. I have found sweet flowers, and place them here on your table as I would place them on the altar of truth. I come as one of the messengers to say that I find the spirit world one of law. I find it one grand military institute, and the sword of truth must yet govern. I see a bright light breaking forth in the centre of my city, light breaking forth in the centre of my city, state and country, to give out these truths to glorify the truth. There is enly a step between this and spirit life. We can look from the windows of life, and thus bring you a proof of a bright immortality. There are countless numbers of spirits in heaven so bright, who wish to bring the truths of importality to mortals here on earth, that they mortality to mortals here on earth, that they may not doubt, because the glorious millenium can not dawn so long as a heart doubts the truths of nature. I wish here to state that it is of great benefit for that class of persons called mediums, to visit churches, because spirits are there hovering around to find an avenue of communication with mortals. This medium visited yesterday the church where I used to preach, and thus I found a proper receptacle. These truths are the flowers which are planted here, that they may germinate and prove that there is a life beyond. Publish to the world that I am happy, and that I would not come back for all its pomp, glories and treasures. I must go for there is a work for me to do. Yes, I was a Presbyterian; like attracts like. I am no minister now. I am born again. I am henceforth a child of light, and will work my way through an endless eternity.

MARY ELLEN LITTLE.

"I have come in the footsteps of his path way. I have strewn flowers in his path. Much has Prof. Saunders done for the country, and still more will he do. I rejoice to know that my own cousin, the medium, is the instrument through which the Circle of Light will be inaugurated. I am now with other bright spirits wending to that sweet arbor of flowers cultivated by your hand, and ours.'

INGEBUR C. JACK,

a sister of the medium, said, "Tell editor Jones that I am his friend, and a friend of his paper. Take to him the good wishes of a spirit who dwells in the realms of light, and wishes to extend the circulation of his JOURNAL. Not only mortals love to read it, but it is read with delight by immortals. The Journal is a bouquet of truth. 1 know a minister in this who reads it secretly, and my brother knows him, too, but I will not give his late President of the Women's Medical College of this city, said: "As the request was made to raise the curtain slightly to admit more light into the circle room as it was approaching near sun down, I would say raise the curtain slightly; raise it very tenderly, for the truth is at hand; raise the curtain slightly, for things greater must be revealed. How natural it is to crave light in place of darkness. I am glad to find that my sex is gaining a proper recog nition in the world. A great reformation is coming in the medical college. Ninety-six o every one hundred are ailing in the soul. Old ideas are crumbling and passing away for new and better ones. We are the cogs that are turned by large ones, and you are turned by us. I want to carry out what I failed to do in earth-life. I am Ann Preston, and thoroughly a wake to the needs of the times. It startles me when I behold so much that needs reformation.

LITTLE MORNING GLORY.

"I am a very little girl. They call me here 'Little Morning Glory.' I do not know what my name was. I suppose that I must have had a father and mother, but I don't know their names. They tell me here that flowers are made to grow by God smiling on them. Are made to grow by God smilling on them. Are little girls made in the same way? I was deaf but could talk a little when on earth, but I awoke up here with my hearing good. I lived in Chicago and was burnt up in the big fire. How glad I am that the editor of this paper (THE JOURNAL) was not burned up there, as we would not have a place to publish our com-munications. There is lots of just such little girls as me up here in the spirit world.

They christened me by sprinkling water on the top of my head in the church, and I made a big cry about it. Some other little girls laughed when they were christened. You see smiles on their faces. They know more than you big folks think when they smile and cry. Our church in Chicago was burned up, and lots of other churches.'

of East Weare, N. H., said: "Tell Moses Hull to keep on "hulling" those advents, until he gathers the "hull" of them, and then becomes another Moses to lead the "hull" of them into the light, where they may continually, hear the trumpet of Gabriel sounding throughout the "hull" advent camp. Moses can "hull" them, but he must look out that they do not find him "sleeping in the bulrushes"; as in that case his old soul sleeping proclivities would be very apt to "hull" Moses "Hull." They will find Moses a hard nut to "hull" as he is not loth to penetrate their old "hull" and crack their old shell.

Stray Thoughts and Incidents--Religious Intolerance.

BROTHER JONES:-Some time ago I wrote to you requesting you to send the Journal to a poor widow lady, a friend of mine, which you kindly did. She came to this place to visit her daughter, also a widow. While here friends supplied her with your paper, and she anticipated the pleasure of reading her own on her return home, but during her absence her friends (?) being much opposed to the cause in general, and your paper in particular, ordered it to be stopped, refusing to pay the postage on it, the small sum of twenty cents! She has just returned home, and now I appeal to your generosity, and ask if you will continue it to the same address (Mrs. Hannah Clark, Gainsville, Ozark Co., Mo.) for a time, from the widow's fund, and if some of her liberal friends do not continue to assist her, and she should wish to have it stopped, she will inform you of the same herself.

A young gentleman from this same benighted region, called to see our friends at this place, and seeing a Journal lying on the table, picked it up and deliberately threw it into the fire, warning them against such infidelic and blasphemous literature, the same spirit that was manifested by that holy divine who burnt a copy of "Barlow's Voices," one of the best books extant. With what fiendish delight would some of these self-same intolerant bigots, consign us who claim to be Spiritualists to the flames, with our books, papers and liberal picked it up and deliberately threw it into the to the flames, with our books, papers and liberal works of all kinds, if they only dared to do so, but thank heaven we are now living in a progressive age, when we dare to think and reason for ourselves, and not for others, or as others do, and although we are "aware of the resentment we are provoking, yet we shrink not from the encounter; we are no longer burnt at the stake.'

This same intolerant and illiberal feeling is manifested in various ways in our midst from time to time, and the consequence is, that many who are not only liberal minded, but really Spiritualists at heart, dare not come out openly and avow themselves as such on ac-count of the pressure of public opinion. The few who dare proclaim themselves advocates of truth, reason, and the right, are compelled to march to the tune of bitter opposition, accompanied by the worn-out and threadbare words of "Free Love," etc., but notwithstand-ing all falsehoods, calumnies and ridicule, we still survive it all, keep our heads above water, and swim, too.

The liberal minded and charitable Christians (?) (I believe the word Christian means followers of Christ) are making every effort to keep the spiritual element out of our public schools, and in some instances have succeded Our board of education at this place is a standing specimen of this same species of narrow-minded religious intolerance. Teaching has been my profession for years, and I was re-quested to take a department in the public chool by some of the most liberal minded of the board. I accepted, but was finally ruled out by the religious bigots who cared little for experience, so they secure cheap teachers and church members, or those, at least, who were not tinctured with Spiritualism or liberality of sentiments. Our village correspondent in showing up their many short comings before the public asks: "What can be more illiberal than rejecting the claims of a meritorious teacher in our midst, simply because her religious opinions do not come up to their standard?"

My sister and myself are both Spiritualists and teachers, but she being somewhat more reticent on the subject than myself, and being a church member up to the very time of her conversion to the spiritual faith, her silence has been taken by many as proof of her dis-belief in spiritual matters, and it has been a source of some little amusement to me, that she has, on one or two occasions been selected as a teacher in my stead because they preferred a Christian teacher. Wonder if they felt them-selves or their children very much demoralized when their Christian teacher turned out to be a full fledged Spiritualist?

A very popular and competent teacher in one of our neighboring towns was treated to a similar dish of narrow-minded, straight jacketed religious hash to digest but a few months since, was dismissed from his school from the simple fact of his recent conversion to the grand truths of Spiritualism, through his own good sense, candid investigation, and constant reading the Journal for a number of years.

Many of the clergy of this place and vicinity, urge the necessity of liberal minded teachers being kept out of our schools, and one male teacher, I understand, did all he could to influence the board of trustees in one of our ad joining districts to reject a lady friend of mine who had applied for the school, because, for-sooth, she was a Spiritualist. This immaculate son of Adam failed to secure said school, as was his dishonest intention, but obtained another, and has recently had his certificate revoked on account of his frequent dissipations; "teaches all the week and gets drunk at the close of the week," as I heard a patron of his school remark, and such a specimen of moral rectitude had the audacity to oppose an intelligent and respectable lady becau had the good sense to be a Spiritualist! "Oh, consistency, thou art a Jewel!"

Well, let these religious fanatics rant, and use all the means in their power to crush out our glorious cause—they will only find to their utter dismay, that their conduct has had the effect to increase, instead of to retard, its growth; so my faith tells me to be patient; all will yet be well, for reason, freedom, and the truth must and will prevail, regardless of all

Physical Manifestations. BROTHER JONES:—I have repeatedly read in your popular paper, of remarkable phenomena occuring in various places remote from me, and often with the control of the property of the control of the and often wistfully wondered whether it would ever be my privilege to witness the like, little deeming my desire would so soon be gratified by the unexpected coming of the physical medium, Harry Bastian, in our midst. Just recovered from a severe attack of intermittent fever, accompanied by his friend, M. Taylor, he came by direction of his intelligent guides, to my house, where in the quiet seclusion of the country, among pleasant influences, he could regain his wonted health. After a few days' stay, being much improved in strength, and feeling able to stand the required strain on his system, he kindly consented to give us a seance, of which, knowing it will interest your readers, I send an account:

My family, Mr. Taylor and a few friends—fifteen persons in all—joined hands around Mr. B., who clapped hands continuously, and the light was put out.

Then followed the occurrence of various manifestations, such as hands of all sizes being felt; a bouquet being passed around to different persons; strange voices holding converse with the company; a guitar floating around our head, sweetly played upon; a fragrant perfume, as of a thousand flowers filling the room; a watch being taken from the wearer and watch being taken from the wearer, and handed about; a fan flaunting about, giving a good breeze, and other demonstrations, showing the positive presence of an outside power, as all in the company admitted.

I must also speak of the fine tests given by

Taylor, who, being a seeing medium, des cribed several spirits, giving some of their names, to the satisfaction of their recognizing

All of the above transpired in the dark, or first part; next came the light, or second part, to me, the grand climax of the circle. Improvising a cabinet out of an adjoining bed-room by tacking in the doorway a piece of black cambric, with a diamond-shaped opening cut out near the top, the medium sat behind in the darkness, while the company, in the mel-lowed light of a lamp, sat before the veil that soon revealed to view the dear ones gone before. After a little singing, behind the aperture there appeared what seemed a filmy cloud of haze, which, growing denser, soon assumed the form and features of an old lady's face. All ac quainted with her saw at once it was my wife's mother, Mrs. Hawkins, attired in the very ha-bilaments her body had but lately been buried

Next came that of a little boy, the brother of a young lady present, who at once exclaimed, "Willie!" in reply to which the spirit waved

Then appeared the full round girl's face of a cousin to the same lady who, not recognizing it at first, asked it to come a little plainer, which it did satisfactorily.

Then was shown the beaming infant face of a son of our neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, who, wishing to see how their boy had progressed, were gratified to see a manly face with whiskers and moustache, that every one who saw it, said bore a great family resemblance.

Next came Eliza Pierce, a relative of the above named gentleman, whose face, familiar to all, was, without doubt, identified. The last face shown, that of the grandfather of a young man present, who before had doubted the truth of immortality, came so distinctly, that he was convinced of the fact at once, and acknowledged with overcome feel-

Between the showing of the faces, hands of various shapes and sizes were presented—some holding flowers; and to conclude, the guide gave us some advice and consolation in an audible voice, and bade us good night. Every one of the faces came repeatedly in palpable perfectness, more or less plain as the spirit had power, and were all recognized.

Such is a synopsis of the delightful demonstration of the soul's ability to materialize it-

Words can not express the pleasure I experi enced in feeling, hearing and seeing the dear departed; and when I say that I consider I have been blessed, I do not convey half the appreciation I have of the privilege of being permitted to enjoy the glorious gift of God-spirit communion.

The mediums, I understand, are soon to start for your city; so wishing others to par-take of the joy I have tasted, I would advise all the friends living on or near the rail-line of the West, wishing to witness wonderful manifestations, through refined mediumship at their own homes, to write and secure the presence of the powerful physical medium, address is North Boston, Erie County, New York.

I am, yours, etc., E. S. CRAMPTON. Collins Centre, N. Y., September 29th, 1872.

Harry and his friend Taylor will soon be in this city, and then investigators will have ample opportunity at our new and spacious seance rooms, corner of Fifth Avenue and Adams street, to witness the marvelons spirit manifestations through his and Mr. Taylor's mediumship.

Meeting at Stockton, Me.

Having attended a three-days' meeting in Stockton, Maine, on the 13th, 14th and 15th ultimo, I thought it might be interesting to some of your readers to learn that the good cause shows no signs of dying out in the Pine-Tree State.

The meeting was presided over by Brother Crooker, of Stockton. The speakers present were Brother Wentworth, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Dunton, Mrs. Morse, and Brother Carpenter, of Boston, Mass. Each one of the speakers was highly appre-

We were captivated with the beautiful inspirations of Mrs. Thompson, Morse, More, Dunton, Carpenter and Wentworth; and not less interested in the Clairvoyant gift of Mrs. Gould. of Bangor, Maine, who, for the first time, read blindfolded in public. She was thoroughly blindfolded by a skeptic, who declared she could not see. Then she read from the Bible opened at random; also business letters and cards from gentlemen in the audience. In circles she paints and describes spirits, giving their names. We hope she may be developed to do as wonderful things as Mrs. Blair, of Vt., whose performances we have witnessed, and of which we can speak in the highest praise; Mrs. Smith, of Hampden, Me. must not be forgotten as a co-worker; she was the life of our circle, giving tests, improvising and singing to the edification of all.

Social meetings were held from 9 to 11, A. M., in which all were invited to participate, and many spoke in the normal and abnormal state. Each had a candid hearing and respectful attention. Although differing widely in s nti-ment, great harmony prevailed, each recogniz-ing the right of the others to think and speak freely his or her sentiments. The broad ban-ner of universal liberty was unfurled, and the common brotherhood of man was vindicated. We were made to feel that the celestials and terrestrials were separated only by a veil which is already rent from top to bottom, and we are now standing on the boundaries of the Sum-mer-land. We were bound together by the mer-land. cords of love, and our spiritual strength renewed.

We feel under lasting obligations to the whole souled people of Stockton and vicinity, for their hospitality and hearty co-operation in CHARLES WHITE. the good cause.

Foxcraft, Maine, September 20th, 1872.

"Prove all Things."

BRO. JONES:-The modern American idea of liberty is to grant unquestioned to every-body the right of private judgment. In my individuality and capacity as a citizen, I claim the right undisputed by men or angels, to hold such opinions, based upon such evidence as I see fit to entertain, and this right I do recognize for all my fellow men. But when a person intrudes his views upon the public, either from the forum, the pulpit or in the public journals which other's read, it is presumptive that he does so with a view to lead sumptive that he does so with a view to lead others to embrace his ideas in relation to the subject considered. It is readily seen that the right of private opinion does not cover this case, and the right becomes ours to question the evidence which the individual has, as a basis for his views. I hold that any belief or opinion of sufficient importance to seek and find expression in a widely circulated journal, must be considered of sufficient importance to be found in company with some pretense, at least, of evidence when any reader of such journal requires it, otherwise I may bring a journal into my family which may be the in-strument of inculcating glaring falsehoods in the minds of younger and less critical mem-bers thereof, by means of the bold assumptions of correspondents.

Now Brother Jones, let me say right here that the above has not been written as a pre-face to what follows in this letter merely, but is intended as a preface to all I may write for the JOURNAL during the next fifty years. I expect to be a reader of the RELIGIO-PHILOSO-PHICAL JOURNAL for fifty years to come. This haslong been my private opinion unquestioned, but now it has become my public opinion, and I hold myself ready to furnish the evidence, if any reader asks it.

It has been the opinion of many minds "that Jesus lived, preached, performed great things, died and rose again," while a contrary opinion is held by many others. I have been somewhat a student of history, and I have never seen the written evidence or heard evidence quoted in support of this first proposition, other than the statements of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John and the writer of the Acts -all writers of the New Testament. As I have been entirely unable to learn who any of these authors were in their day, where they lived, in what school they were educated, whose students they were while preparing themselves, each one for the role of the historian, what their motives were in writing these histories, what personal interest they might have had in either writing truth or falsehood, and above all, being so far, unable to find even their general narratives corroborated by contemporary history, I have seen fit to reject the proposition that Jesus lived, died, and rose again!

The evidence above referred to, being all I have been able to find, and finding that H. C. Pierce, in number 1, current volume of the Journal, proceeds, in a masterly manner, to completely invalidate the reliability of this evidence, I am anxious to be informed on what evidence he arrives at the conclusion, beyond a doubt, that Christ died and rose again.

I, as a reader of the Journal, seek to know where he finds confirmation of this declaration, "That Jesus lived, preached, performed great things, died and rose again, there can be no doubt?" For my part, I have serious doubts upon the subject, and my doubts multiply every day. If it is a fact that Jesus died and rose again, it is a fact of much moment to me and mine; and if I have been such a lusus naturae as to indulge in these doubts where there "can be no doubt," I solicit some explanation.

I ask H. C. P. to communicate to me and there in this proceduring condition of having others in this paradoxical condition, of having doubts when there can be no doubt, where he finds evidence to establish Jesus' death and resurrection beyond the possibility of a doubt. He has a right to this belief as a private opinion, but he must not feel unfriendly in these icono-clastic times, if he is required to present the proof, when he publicly expresses his opinion on a subject of such vast concern as this. He need not take the trouble to present arguments unless they are above criticism, for a proposition of undoubtable truth must have unequivocal arguments in its support-arguments partaking of the nature of the self-evident, while propositions of probability require less positive proof. I think H. C. P. will see that he has stated a positive proposition with only a possi-This is a very common of do. "Prove all things." bility to support it. mistake, but will not do. "Prove all things."
When a man says, "I have no doubt," it is none of my business, but when he says, "there can be no doubt," it is. That's the point I wish to make with all those individuals who think dead men get up out of the grave and walk about, bodily, as it is claimed Jesus did. Yours, in eternal hostility to assumptions

The Shermans.

BROTHER JONES:-The Sherman family-John and his son Henry—mediums for Physical manifestations, held two seances in my parlor on the evenings of September 9th and 10th, which not only gave great satisfaction to those who were present, but made a most profound ensation in our quiet village. The medium-Henry— was laboring under the disadvantage of a very severe cold at the time, which made it necessary for them to suspend further demmonstrations for the present; but the interest was so great, that they have promised to return soon and give further opportunity for investigation.

The writer shook hands with the spirits; other individuals felt the pressure of hands on their persons. Spirit voices spoke to us through the trumpet, and many tests were given which not only filled the room with earnest investigators, but also the yard with at least one hundred listeners. We can safely recommend them as faithful workers in the Spiritual vine-yard. Their P. O. address is Cardington, O. Let all friends of faithful mediums give them a A. A. POND.

WORTH, MICH.—J. D. Waterman writes.—Your treatment of the Woodhull farce meets with more than a hearty approval—just the precise language necessary at that particular time to counteract the evil tendencies of that fanatical woman and clique, so intimately connected with it.

ATLANTA, GA.—F. F. Taber, M. D., writes.—
I am delighted with the appearance of our dear Journal. It is perfectly beautiful! I am sure no one can complain of it. We are to have Mrs.
Annie C. Torrey with us in a few days, and E. V.
Wilson is to be with us in March and deal Orthodoxy some of his Sledge Hammer blows. Lois Waisbrooker and several others write .-

We take pleasure in informing you of the rapid progress of the cause of Spiritualism in Western Michigan, under the radical and soul-stirring lectures of M. C. Vandercook. Mr. Vandercook is a trance speaker of recent development, and we do confidently recommend him as one of the first-class lecturers of our land. first-class lecturers of our land.

NORTHFIELD, MINN.—J. L. Potter writes.—
Von Vleck is at St. Paul plying his trade of knavery and deception, disgusting every one that goes to see him. He belongs to the order of Christians that have never as yet reached the moral standard of development. We are looking forward to our convention with some degree of enthusiasm. E. V. Wilson and D. W. Hull will be with us. L. F. Cummings is expected.

WADE, OHIO.-C. H. Toler writes.-The WADE, OHIO.—C. H. Toler writes.—The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL seems to grow better and better all the time. I love its firm, unflinching defense of liberty and truth. That grand "Search After God" threw much light on my pathway through this mundane sphere. I have lost all respect for the Orthodox God, and for all other mythological gods. It seems to me, that whoever earnestly searches after the truth, must some conclusion. must sooner or later come to the same conclusion.

WATSONVILLE, CAL.—R. B. Tripp writes.—As to "Water-Witching," I have poised dry sticks upon a pivot, and tney will point to the hidden waters. I have unconsciously been taken to locations and pointed out concealed fountains, which, upon digging, became flowing streams. In the winter of '38, in the then village of Binghamton, N. Y., at the residence of Col. Doubleday, I induced this condition upon a young woman that had never seen or heard of me or mesmerism, and had never seen or heard of me or meswerism, and she being at the time in another part of the house. That I produced the effect was evident from the fact that she was oblivious to all others. Upon coming out of it after some twelve hours, she was unconscious of anything that had passed during WINDSOR, CAL -D P. Myers, President, and Jordon Cox, Secretary, write.—At the close of Dr. Geo. W. Morrill's last lecture at Windsor, Sonoma county, California, September 22nd, 1872, the following was adopted unanimously as the sense of the meeting: The friends of religious reform in Windsor and vicinity, deem the following an imperfect expression of the high appreciation in which they hold Bro. Geo. W. Morrill, who has just closed a six months' lecture engagement with us. It is but just to Dr. Morrill to b. ar testimony to his high morel worth and genial, harmonious character, as a man. As a lecturer he is an in-spirational speaker of high order. Few speakers spirational spearer of lingh order. Few speakers address the heart, stir the religious nature, and arouse the spiritual intuitions, as Dr. Morrill does. He has endeared himself to a large circle of friends here by his gentlemanly deportment, pure character and rare abilities as a lecturer, and we commend him to the friends of reform everywhere.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—T. J. Smith writes.—The following appeared in the Brooklyn Union, of the 28th ult: "Bryan Grant, Esq., will speak at the Brooklyn Institute to morrow evening before the Society of Progressive Spiritualists (of whom there are a goodly number in Brooklyn) on "The THEOLOGY OF THE AGES." As the lecture is expected to be something remarkable, there will undoubtedly be a large attendance." As Mr. Grant is a new speaker in our Spiritualistic field, his lecture deserves more than a passing notice. Possessed of a strongly analytical mind, and being ns recture deserves more than a passing notice. Possessed of a strongly analytical mind, and being gifted with a forcible and pleasing eloquence, it was an occasion to remember. He declared reason and nature to be his torch-bearers, in his search for the true theology of God through the ages. He believes with the great-souled Shakspeare, that

Some of the descriptive passages challenged the best efforts of rival orators. It is under the inspiration of all speakers and thinkers like him that the cause of Spiritualism will find its most successful advocates and defenders.

OSBORN, OHIO.—Mrs. M. Woodard writes.—It appears from reading E. V. Wilson's Western Tour Number Five, that he has been having some unity of the second write a woman a "woman". Number Five, that he has been having some un-pleasant experiences with a woman—a "woman," he says, "what was a woman with a voice, a will, wore the breeches, stood in her own boots;" and then adds with much sympathy, "we pity the poor benedict that boards with her." One might infer from your speech that your ideal woman is a weak, submissive, subservient chattel, without will, voice or self-reliance, which, I should be sorry to believe the case. Pray, whose "boots" should a woman stand in if not her own? By the other term you use, I suppose you mean that she rules her husband. Now, I do not know what your provocations may have been, but I should like to ask if you are as particular in noting down instances which come under your observation in which your own sex play the tyrant, in which the wife who should stand by the side of the husband wife who should stand by the size of the husband as his equal, is only a dastardly slave without a voice or will, but that of her lord and master? To Spiritualism the world is looking for the elevation of woman. Let its votaries beware how they retard her progressive march, by a single word.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA.-Thos. S. Johnson writes. As the following statement may interest your readers, and add a brick to the Spiritual edifice, I will, with your permission, submit it for their perusal: About a year ago, Dr. J. B. Read, the well known inventor of the "Read Shell," came well known inventor of the head specification of place of business, and, seeing your JOURNAL and other Spiritual papers, asked if I was a Spiritualist? I replied "that I was interested in that philosophy, and searching for truth." He then made the following statement, as near as I can recollect: "In my younger days, I felt betweeth is Spiritualism and having havin then made the following statement, as near as I can recollect: "In my younger days, I felt interested in Spiritualism, and, having business below on the Warrior river, I met some friends where a lady intranced, was playing on a piano. After having listened some time to the strange music, two sharp raps were given on the instrument, and our attention was diverted thereto, when the piano was moved up and down several times in front, but resting on the back legs. One of the heaviest men present then placed himself on the front of the instrument, still the movement on the front of the instrument, still the movement went on. Dr. R— then placed himself on it. Their united weight was five hundred pounds. The movements, however, went on as before.

Meeting an old friend soon after the occurrence, the Doctorrelated what had transpired. "Pooh!" said the friend; "the player raised it with her knees." The next day Dr. R—— again called in said the friend; "the player raised it with her knees." The next day Dr. R.— again called in where the strange things had taken place, and the first person he saw was his friend under the piano trying to lift it in front, but failed. "Well." said he, I give up;" thus exonerating the lady medium from the suspicion of lifting it in the way he had said. Wishing to know what the Doctor thought of so strong a marifestation, to my surprise he said, "It was the works of the Devil!" The Doctor is a member of the Presbyterian church, and got out through the trap door of the noninvestigator when in a tight place—"it's the noninvestigator when in a tight place—"it's the Devil's works." We want a medium here to give tests, a good clairvoyant or physical medium would command attention.

Report of the Iowa State Convention.

The Iowa State Convention held its Fourth Annual Session at Des Moines, capitol of the State, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 4th, 5th and 6th. The convention was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock A. M., on the 4th. Present, fifty-two delegates; President Bendbow in the chair; Secretary Kate promptly in his place. The old wheel-horse, Bro. Warren Chase, and the Gentle Wilson on hand ready for the work before them. There were many local speakers taking part in the great work of reforming Christians. Among these speakers were Sisters Comstock, of Oskalossa; Swain, of Fort Dodge; two as true and faithful souls as ever animated the human form. Bros. Babcock, Sanford, Twitchell, Brooks, Connelly, Caster, and others rendered efficient aid in counsel and in speaking. There was one other corps of workers, Sisters in the vineyard of truth, who rendered efficient aid in furnishing and attending to a lunch table in the ante-room of the hall. There were so many of these good workers that to name them in detail, would take up too much room in our column, hence we will call them legion.

The people of Des Moines promptly responded to the call, entertaining all who came, and there were full two hundred delegates present; some of the well-to-do citizens, who are not identified with Spiritualism, sent their carriages for the speakers, inviting them to dinner. Every person that came to the con-vention from outside the city, were provided with homes, and were made comfortable.

Warren Chase, of St. Louis, Mo., did excellent service in the convention, winning the good will of all. Truly he is one of the pillars on which our cause rests. He is a faithful worker in the spiritual vineyard, and dur ing the convention, he imparted fresh fruit, rare and ripe, of truth. Never have we listened to nobler words, of holy counsel than fell thick and fast from his lips. Bro. Chase is growing old, ripening for eternity, and soon will take his place among the Gods, there mingling in counsel with the sainted ones that have gone on before.

Dr. Sanford, of Iowa City, has a fine healing and seeing mediumship, that ought to be man ifested in the field instead of the hotel. The State Association have appointed him State Missionary, and we trust he will take the field at once.

Our own work was, as is usual, work hard. work all the time, helping on in our own way, delivering five lectures, averaging an hour each, and held two mattinees for the benefit of the cause, giving many fine tests.

Other workers, too numerous to mention, di dgood service, among whom was a young man, a graduate of the law school of Philadelphia, by the name of Carter. He made a most excellent speech on Sunday morning. We predict for him a glorious future.

The Iowa State Convention of Spiritualists

at this, its Fourth Annual Session, has accomplished a great work, and one that will leave its impression on the minds of the citizens of Des Moines, and the State at large, that will take a world of praying to obliterate.

One of its works was to divide the State into six Conferences, known as the Western, North-eastern, South-eastern, Eastern, and Central Conferences, in which will be held at least one convention during the year, preceding the Fifth Annual Convention of the State Association. They offered Dr. Sanford the Missionary office for the State at large. A paper was circulated among the people, and several hundred dollars subscribed for missionary purposes.

was a wedding on Sunday afternoon, at which the miracle of making two mortals one, was accomplished before three hundred and fifty spectators, through the mediumship of Dr. Sanders. Mr. C. H. Kirkwood took to himself a tidy little woman. 1st, Bro. Chase read an appropriate hymn which was admirably sung by the choir accompanied by the organ. Then followed thoughts on mar-riage by E. V. Wilson, which commanded the closest attention of the audience. Then came forward Dr. Sanford and united them in marriage, according to the laws of the State of Iowa, after which the advice of Bro. Warren Chase, given in beautiful language, freighted chase, given in beautiful language, freighted with gems that delighted the people. Then the choir sang the beautiful words, "Be Happy," accompanied by the organ, after which the happy pair stepped upon the platform, Dr. Sanford introducing them to the audience as Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood, of Guthre county. Love. Then followed a segme by E. county, Iowa. Then followed a seance by E.

V. Wilson, in which fifty tests were given.

Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the hall was well filled, and still they came until every inch of our hall was occupied—a great many standing; for two hours and a-half, Warren Chase and the "Gentle" Wilson held the audience in wrapt attention. Most of the time you could have heard a pin fall in the house. Then came the amens—the hand-shaking at parting—the farewell and good-bye—God bless you—we shall meet again!

bless you—we shall meet again!

Everything worked well. Friday and Sunday were fine, fair days. Saturday morning it rained some. The people of Des Moines entertained kindly, the choir gave sweet music and sang every evening and Sunday. The Convention was composed of practical men and women. The officers were in their places promptly, sharp time observed. The speakers had something to say and spoke to the point. The house was well filled at every session. The old board of officers retired gracefully, and with honor. The new board gracefully took their places and are eminently qualified for the work hofor them. Their recent for the work before them. Their names are, Joel P. Davis, of Des Moines, President; Mrs. A. Comstock, of Oskaloosa, First Vice President; Dr. J. Owen, Des Moines, Second Vice President; Mrs. J. Swain, of Fort Dodge, Secretary; W. W. Babcock, of Shelby, Treasurer; Judge S. H. Riddle, of Counsel Bluff, Trustee.

Under the authority vested in the Association by Charter from the State, Dr. C. P. Sanford was accredited with authority to sanction the marriage contract.

Long shall we cherish the memory of the good time we had with the Spiritualists of Iowa at their Fourth Annual State Convention. The friends we made, the greetings we received, the work that was done, the satisfaction given, and the demand that we meet again, and the close tie of friendship between Warren Chase and ourself-heretofore we have respected him, now we love him. Brave old Brother, we shall soon be youths together in the Summer-

Land. At 10 o'clock P. M. we parted, all demanding that we meet again.

A. E. Dory lectured at Edmerton, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 13th.

W. A. Conney, your remittance is received. What is your post-office address?

CAPT. WINSLOW lectured at Dodgeville, Wis., on Sunday last. He is an excellent medium for physical manifestations.

EVERY woman, whether married, or single, should read in another column, "What Women Know about the Positive and Negative Powders in diseases of females."

Mrs. Wilcoxson lectured at Joliet. Illinois. on Sunday, Oct., 13th; at Hannibal, Mo., on Thursday and Friday, the 17th and 18th. See her notice in another column.

DEAN CLARK has been lecturing at Manchester and Roscoe, Ill. He is an able advocate of our cause. Address him at Beloit, Wis.

MRS. L. H. PERKINS will be at Warren, Ill., October 25th, 26th and 27th, to hold a three days' meeting. Mrs. Perkins is an excellent trance speaker and test medium, and, under her ministrations, the Spiritualists of Warren will, no doubt, have a fine time.

TILDEN AND OSGOOD .- Our readers who may have law business to do in this city will do well to employ the above named gentlemen. They are young men of ability and integrity, with a number of years experience in the different courts. Mr. Tilden, a son of judge Tilden, of Ohio, comes to this city with the highest recommendations. Mr. Osgood is an old resident here, who is already well and favorably known to many of our readers.

MATTIE HULETT PARRY is now lecturing at Terre Haute, Ind. Sister Parry began as a trance speaker nearly twenty years since. Like most trance speakers, she is now inspirational -that is, she is as much under spirit control as when she was entirely unconscious; but is allowed the great privilege of listening to what the angels say through her lips. She is one of the first speakers in the field. All who engage her services will be more than satisfied with

E. D. BABBITT, D. M., now of No. 42 East Twelfth street, New York, is very successful, as we are informed, in healing magnetically many of those cases which baffle the old school of medicine. He cures intemperance, opium eating, etc., etc.; considers his method more effective than those of merely preaching and lecturing on the subject, as he treats the cause, which is a disease of the gastric membranes. A Mrs. Dr. Towne is Dr. Babbitt's co-worker. See his advertisement.

D. W. Hull has been very unfortuate of late. He has had sickness in his family ever since the first of August, being sick a great part of the time himself. September 8th, his youngest child, NELLIE MAUD VICTORIA, passed to the spirit-world. He has partailly recovered from his sickness, and is now lecturing in the neighborhood of Willingford, Ill., to crowded houses. He wishes to make engagements, commencing immediately after the election. Address him at Hobart, Ind.

[Notices for this Department will be charged at the rate of twenty cents per line for every line exceeding twenty. Notices not exceeding twenty lines published gratuitously.]

On Tuesday morning, the 3rd, ult., near Grand Junction Iowa, Guy Madison passed to spirit-life. He was fully prepared for the change. His high spiritual culture had taken all the sting from death. The grave had no terrors for him.

MRS. COPELAND.

Passed to the higher life, on September, 26th, H. S. ROBBINS, Esq., of Newton, Ohio Falls, aged fifty years. He leaves a wife and three daughters to mourn his physical absence, but they rejoice in the consciousness of his spiritual presence. His funeral was held on Sunday, the 29th. Mrs. S. M. Thompson, of Cleveland, spoke words of comfort and consolation to the family and a very large number of sympathizing friends. Brother Robbins was a wellknown Spiritualists, liberal and generous in its support. OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS: Being an Argument on God in the Constitution of the United States.

By D. W. Hull.

In this work the author shows that Jehovah was only one out of a school of Gods who play their part in the Bible; all of wh m are shown to be spirits of departed human beings, who had been translated to the sun or one of the heavenly constellations, in accordance with the behef of that people. He sles shows the impossibility of legislating upon the subject, and gives extracts from Jefferson's correspondonce on the subject.

A Good Head of Hair Restored by a Spirit Prescription.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—For the benefit t my friends and the world, I desire to make this brief statement. I have been almost entirely bald for about six years. Had tried almost everything that I could hear recom-mended, and firmly believed that nothing could restore my bair.

Had tried almost everything that I could hear recommended, and firmly believed that nothing could restore my hair.

One year ago this month I wrote Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the healing medium, 148 Fourth avenue, Chicago, as a last resort—or, rather, to please my wife.

Mrs. R. immediately prescribed for me. I did not get all the ingredients for the Restorative until some time in June, 1871. I then commenced using it as directed, and was encouraged, because it was the first application that had been felt upon the scalp,—it causing a smarting sensation. I continued the use of this preparation about three months, when I could see the hair starting in spots all over my head, and I now have a very comfortable head of hair, which money cannot buy. I am asked almost every day how it is, and what I had used to bring my hair back, all agreeing that it is unaccountably strange, etc., etc. And here let me state, that not one of all the eminent physicians I had consulted had given any encouragement, but, on the contrary, had told me that I never would get a head of hair.

I can fully substantiate the foregoing by 10,000 witnesses, if necessary, and will answer correspondents if desired

Springfield, Mo.

Springfield, Mo. Mr. Smith inclosed a lock of his hair along with the above letter. It is about one inch in length, and of a dark brown color, soft and lively as that of a young man of twenty. Mrs. Robinson diagnoses the case and furnishes the Restorative complete (sent by express or by mail) on receipt of a letter in the handwriting of the applicant

C. L. James' Poems.

Permeated by the liberal spirit of the social, political and religious reformation of the nineteenth century, these poems may be considered the epitome of the Spir itualistic movement. THE COURT OF HYMEN

In particular has received the discerning commencation of our ablest critics, as the most vigorons, picturesque and dramatic exposition of the enormities of our social state ever put in verse. Unlike too many of his predecessors, the author writes less to destroy orthodox errors than to express the in-piration of that sublime belief which forms the essence of modern radicalism.
