spiritualism and science.

Kirs. Tappan's Lecture Delivered in London, Eng., Dec. 3d, 1878.

[From the Medium and Daybreak.]

On Wednesday evening, the 3d instant, Mrs. Tappan gave the fifth of her course of lectures on Spiritualism and Science, in the above hall. Mr. Luxmore occupied the chair, and, after a few prefatory remarks, gave way to Mrs. Tappan, who commenced the evening's discourse with the following prayer:—

Infinite Spirit! Thou who art the source of all life and knowledge! Thou whose power is everywhere made manifest! Thou whose thought doth pervade immensity! Thou whose mind hath enkindled all intelligence, to whom we must turn as the only absolute. whom we must turn as the only absolute source of being, the only perfect, the only divine, the only wise—we seek on all occasions thy presence and power, that uplifteth our thoughts, far transcending each material aim and object, to the divine gift of thy Spirit.
We seek only the truth; we ask only for knowledge. Striving and seeking for these, the human mind may for ever attain these gifts, since nothing is withheld by thee, since no power is concealed; and there is no mystery that man may not sometime fathom by the depth of knowledge that is shaped of peace, thankfulness, and the aspirations of the Spirit. *We praise Thee now and forever-

We ask the forbesrance of the audience this evening if we do not speak as loudly as we are accustomed to do, since the medium was last evening engaged in speaking to an audience in a very large hall for two hours, and consequently is more than usually fatigued to night. We propose, at the request of a friend, who is not, however, present, to give a discourse to-night upon the subject of

THE DUAL APPARITION OF THE EMBODIED HU-

Or what is known by some as the "Double," whereby some forms of spiritual manifestations have been confounded with these apparitions of the forms of embodied spirits. We also propose giving the relation between these double manifestations of embodied mind and the visible body of a spirit produced from the atmosphere of a seauce. It is thought by some minds, and indeed it has been maintained for many ages of the world, that there is a dual human nature—a body distinctively, and a spiritual body that inhabits the physical body. Certain apparitions, not only of the present century and generation, but . of, many past ages, tend to prove the existence of this spiritual body, even while you are still incarcerated in the human form. Among the Persian magicians there was the faculty of rendering this double, or this other self, visible at great distances; and while it unquestionably originated from genuine mediumship or spiritual power, the laws were not then understood. There was also possessed by the Persian magicians the power of rendering the physical body invisible. This is the reverse law of the double apparition, and is simply the result of surrounding the physical body with a certain dense sura by the rapidity of motion and gesticulations which is common to the workers of wonders, among those ancient people. These manipulations or gestures correspond to those that are sometimes now used by mediums, and were unquestionably connected with the subtile laws of this spiritual aura that surrounds every human

When we trace the history of these appari tions, or what is called the double existence of persons still embodied, we find that oftentimes persons who were thinking of a friend saw that friend. For instance, A comes into the office of B, and sees him actually sitting at his desk. "Why," says A, "I saw you a minute ago in such a street." B replies, "I was not there; but I was just thinking that as I got this latter friends I manually says. I got this letter finished I would go to so and so," which would take him through that very street that A supposed he saw him in. So decided was the thought, that to the mindof the friend he was actually there, showing that a spiritual substance had really projected itself momentarily in advance of his body. Occurrences of this kind have been very frequent, and in Scotland, where this gift of second-sight is very prevalent, there were fre-quent visitations of persons who were supposed to be distant several hundred miles; and their appearance would be similar to that of the outward body, but when surprised they would manifest no audible voice. The person seeing them, however, had a certain consciousness as though there was something dissimilar between the spirit-projection and those of whom the appearance came. Still more subtile are the manifestations that oftentimes occur, wherein a spirit which is really embodied visits a distant place, is seen by clairvoyants, holds converse with them, and tells them distinctly it is not dead, but only momentarily away from the material body.

Now, it has been observed in many seances for physical manifestations, that the form produced to represent the spirit resembles in the most provoking manner the form of the medium. It has led oftentimes to the sup-position of fraud—to the idea that the medium had in some manner been released from the chains and cords that had bound him, and thus it is that suspicions have arisen as to the genuineness of the manifestations. For instance, in a dark seance certain physical manifestations have occurred, and on the light having been suddenly sprung in one corner there has been seen what was supposed to be the medium, and in another, sitting where he had actually been bound, would be the medium in reality—two apparitions resembling the medium being distinctly seen at the same time. Of course the skeptic would only see the one in the other part of the room, not observing the other in the chair, in the confusion of the moment. This has oftentimes led to the suspicion of fraud. But it may very easily occur, without supposing it to be either the spirit of the medium or a fraudulent manifestation. Suppose the spirit desires to materialize a form whereby to make itself visible and produce a tangible touch, the most natural form that would appear would be that resembling the medium, because from every part of the medium's body goes out an emanation. That emanation, when it takes shape, will naturally resemble the form of the person from whom it arises, just as your shadow, thrown upon the ground by the rays of light, resembles your body. It could not be otherwise, since the rays of light reflect the same proportions, the same form, the same outline: and thus it, the spiritual body, would indeed represent the same figure. You know if there is a scar upon the human body, that, although the atoms change—and it is said that the human body does not contain, after seven years, any one of the elements or particles it previously contained—each succeeding atom, or atoms, assume the form of that scar, and thus replace one another. So when the spirit, acting upon the atomic elements that emanate from the medium's body, desires to produce a form, the most natural form that the atoms assume is the form which they have just been united with; because it requires some time for them (the atoms) to forget (if we may so express ourselves) the latest form under-which they were placed, but will still naturally be attract ed into something like a similar form. Hence the spirit, at the first, or second, or third, or fifth, or even twentieth experiment, may reasonably be expected to produce a form resembling that of the medium. As the power grows stronger and more independent of the direct personal aura of the medium, this resemblance becomes less and less; and we doubt not there are persons present who have witnessed a series of representations where first. second, and perhaps the fifth or tenth appari-tions have been like the medium, but less and less so each time, until finally the representa-tion becomes a distinct individual.

This is, of course, in consonance with natural laws, and it does not necessarily follow that the medium's spirit is outside the body and is the form or model, so to speak, upon which the spirit drapes this covering. It may be so in some instances, but it does not follow. It may be the result of the atoms striving, in the assumption of the desired form, to forget the form they have lately occupied. This be-longs to the province of special investigation; and when the double is seen, either at a seance or in your individual and private pursuits, a distinction should be made between the spirit that projects itself from the physical body and is seen only by the friend, and that form that is presented in the spiritual circle and seen by all present.

You are naturally more sensitive to the impression of those minds that are in sympathy with you. How often, in passing along the street, you meet a friend and say: "O, I was just thinking of you," as though your thought had gone out in advance to meet him; so if you had the gift of seeing as well as of impressibility, you could have seen the spirit of that person coming out in advance. For be-tween spirit and spirit there is much less space than between body and body; and the nearer you come to the human spirit, the sconer you are with your individual friend. It often occurs that the spirit which is but lately deceased—but recently released from the physical body—will .go to some person at a distance showing that the spiritual form is already per fected, already made for the spirit to occupy that it, in reality, had existed within the phys ical form. Such an instance would neces ly suggest that the spirit thus seen was ready to pass away from the body, and only waiting for the dissolution of the last thread that link ed it to the decaying frame to manifest its presence to the distant friend. In fact, many times when the body is in a state of coma, the spirit has left it, the vital spark only remaining. This appearance is not different from

It is possible to satisfy yourself on the existence of the double while in the possession of your faculties. If you intently think of a distant person, and at the same time figure his appearance to your imagination, so concentraiting your mind from all surrounding objects and influences as to be aware of no distracting thoughts, to a certain extent your spirit is in reality there; and that friend were he a sensitive and impressionable person, could detect your presence in the atmosphere. Of course, the chain that connects you with your bodies is not broken as in death; and in entrancing a person you would throw your mind forward and concentrate your thoughts so intently upon him that you are really there, space, time, distance not influencing the spirit in its conscious flight, but only affecting the body you inhabit. When, however, the spirit wishes to make a form in a seance, you must remember that the form which is most directly connected with the manifestations desired to be produced would usually (as we say) be the model upon which it would be constructed, hence so many differences of opinion concerning the spiritual form that is thus seen, as to whether it is really a spirit-form, or whether it is the result of an influence in the atmosphere. We will now answer the question. Every form that is seen by any person, or any number of persons, with the natural eye, is of necessity too material to be actually a spirit-form; it is, therefore, the result of the elements that the spirit You often determine across a room what a finds surrounding the medium and the circle; person is thinking of by glancing at him. So and when the seance is dissolved, that form necessarily dissolves with it. The real form does not so dissolve. It is not often made the product upon which this external form is constructed; although it may even be only the drapery covering the spirit-form. The spirit may be here, and the form projected there; but it is all made of the atmosphere or aura that surrounds the medium and the friends of the medium. the medium. When, however, one individual alone sees a spirit, it is not easy to determine whether it is with the spiritual or the natural eye; because one individual may sometimes see the spirit through the natural eye with the spiritual vision. Understand us: While the natural eye is still open, your spiritual vision may be so active that you can not in reality determine whether you saw the spirit with the eye of the spirit, or whether it manifested itself in the tangible form. You can only tell where two or more are assembled together, and each one compares with the other the results of the vision. If they agree that it presented certain features to cach, then it was a physical form. If they do not so agree, and only one has a distinct impression of it, then it may have been a spiritual vision. These dis; criminations are very necessary; since, in the one instance, it is a case of absolute spiritual vision, it is spiritual sight, but in the other it is simply a manifestation of the physical presence of spirits. Both these kinds of vision exist in the world to-day, and form the subject of the most searching scrutiny in those seances where spirit forms and faces are made man-

Then, again, you should not expect, nor is it readily to be supposed, that the spirits so presenting the form can represent the perfect lineaments—the exact features they wore in earthly life. If a person passed away at an advanced age, the spirit does not therefore look old. There is no wrinkle on the face of the spirit, there are no furrows on its beautiful. the spirit; there are no furrows on its brow. The spirit is in the prime of manhood or omanhood. If such spirits wish to manifest their presence, it is the most difficult thing in the world—although it has sometimes been done-to portray the form of an aged person, because the clottents of which they have to construct the fogus have to be drawn from the circle and the wara of the medium. If these, the frill of the cap, and the wrinkle upon the face, and the familiar glasses are presented, it is only for the purpose of identification; and is in itself a remarkable manifestation of the power of spirits over material substances to so simulate age and decay when in spirit-life there is neither age nor de cay. Again, if a child is presented, you must be aware that, though there are infants in spiritual existence, they are not acquainted with the modes of producing spirit-forms; hence these projections must be performed by some one else—it may be by a not very good artist—and the features may be presented in an unsatisfactory manner; but any form or any face so presented is of itself an evidence of an outside power, since there is no possible manner whereby any twenty or thirty individuals can simultaneously conjure up an intaginary figure out of the vacant air. These form collateral proofs, strong in themselves, of the power of spirit over material substances. They form the foundation of that science which unquestionably will one day be so perfected that you shall yourselves, with the aid of spiritual influences, be able to project your presence to distant friends. Of course, this method of communion or of tele graphy would supercede present methods of communication, and much of the fatigue of ordinary travel would be lessened if you could quietly sit in your drawing-room or by your own fireside, and hold communication directly with a distant friend. It is only requisite that the means of spirit-control shall be so adapted as to be made amenable to your own minds, and then you will be so enabled to do. Many persons are enabled thus to communicate to-gether to-day. There are persons in such di-rect sympathy of mind that they can communicate with one another at a great distance.

The medium who now addresses you, and her mother who is now a spirit, when the latter was still in this life, frequently thus held communion; and their letters were but a repeition some days afterwards, of conversations that they really had had in spirit. One letter would say, "I know you were doing such and such a thing, because I saw you;" and the reply would be, "I was aware of your doing so and so, because I felt you were with me. These, however, are only exceptional cases, where the spiritual faculties have been cultivated and used through the influence of spirits. But in time these faculties may become as customary with you as they are now excen-tional; and it will not be strange if you hold converse with distant friends, and it will not be strange to hold converse with spirits. We have said in a previous lecture that every spirit in the body possesses every faculty and attribute and power, in an embryotic style, that is possessed by any spirit out of the body. It only requires culture, enlightenment, knowledge, also for the disembodied spirit to possess every faculty and power of the embodied around every the best only the physical around the second only the physical around the second only the physical around the second only the mind, except only the physical organization which you so imperfectly understand.

Now the only difference between mind acting upon mind in the body and the spirit acting upon mind in the occuy and the spirit acting upon mind is, that in the former case you sway each other usually by actual presence—by sight, touch, or any other auxiliary organ. If, instead of using these auxiliaries, you simply made use of mental powers, and could think one another's thoughts and read one another's minds (those with whom you are in syractic) when you would have an avertage. are in sympathy), you would have an exact repeaping the spirit thus sent out of life is anxious to reveal; resentation of the spirit power of communion, and it has been left to Spiritualism to discover two persons in conversation will simultaneously start to utter the same sentence, and you say, "I was just about to make that re-mark," showing that there is a subtile sympathy between your minds, and which if it were fully established an actual vibration would take place without the ordinary process of conversation, and without the usual bungling methods of external sound and expression. These are the methods of the spirit. When they employ other means, it is to reach your senses. It a voice is heard, or a form created, or a sound produced, or an apparition appears, it is to reach your external sense: The thought of the spirit is to hold converse with your thought, not to augment miraculous things, not to build up wonders, not to work magic, but simply to open a channel whereby they may reach your minds. Just as soon as that is attained the wonder-working ceases. Because when a friend is admitted to your house and can hold converse with you, he certainly ceases to knock at your door; so when the spirit can hold direct communion with your mind, having by repeated visitations become familiar with you, unquestionably these outward and lesser manifestations must cease. There are many persons who hold this direct spiritual communion, the vibration of the brain alone being employed to convey thoughts and produce mental impressions. All forms of inspiration possessed by the prophets and seers of the world were unquestionably of this kind, whereby the spirits spoke to their understanding, not with the audible voice, but with the voice of the mind that the inspired one can fully comprehend and understand. You all have sometimes experienced this inward voice that does not come from your own consciousness, but is rather startling from its suddenness, and often from its lack of connection with the subject of your

A most singular instance is on record where a spirit, by the audible voice, saved the life of a person sentenced—or who would have been sentenced—to death as guilty of committing murder. Three times did the voice say to the individual an (an artist) to whom this experience occurred: "The ferryman waits! The ferryman waits!" And so impressed was this person with the voice that he went to the ferry where he had been accustomed to go for artist ic sketches, and found, to his surprise, although the time was several hours earlier than usual, that the ferryman appeared to be wait ing for him. Not wishing to embarrass him, the artist assumed an air of confidence, as though he had really sent him a message. Passing over the ferry, he went towards a city distant some ten miles, without the alightest idea why he was going thither. On entering an hotel for some refreshments, the waiter told him that a young man was being tried for murder. Forcing his way with the crowd into the court, he heard the judge ask the young man if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon him He replied that he had nothing to say, al though he was innocent. The person who had been so summoned recognized the voice as having something pecular about it, and tried to recall where he had heard it. It suddenly came back to him that, being out sketching at a certain place the very day of the alleged murder, the carpenter-for the man accused of murder was a corpenter-was at work in the very house where he had taken his dinner; and he said to the court: "I know that man is innocent, because he was on that day at such a place." On being asked for his proof, he replied: "There is only one proof; I know him by his voice, I know by the fact he said he had broken a saw which he required to complete his work." The evidence confirmed his statement, for upon the carpenter's person, on being arrested, was found s broken saw; and upon this testimony he was released. This, of course, could not have been but by the spirit-voice summoning this man in the dead of night to go out to the ferryman, who waited for him. Many persons—although without so singular and startling a result as this—have been summoned to go to a distant place by the sudden appearance of danger, or the information that the home was on fire. In fact, it is related that the late Dr. Guthrie—eminent divine that he was—was employed visiting at a certain time one of the poorest members of his parish, an elderly lady, who was an invalid and help-less, and that meeting a friend on the way they stopped to converse. After a time he distinct-ly felt some one tugging away at his coat. Turning round, he was surprised to see no one. The friend also felt some one pulling at his coat. Finally it came so strongly that he felt he must go on, and so dropped the interesting convergation he was engaged in. On arriving at the house he found the invalid enveloped in flames and smoke. A piece of coal had fallen from the fire and had ignited, so that the poor helpless widow must have perished had he not thus been summoned. This is in the experience of one who, from theological views, could not have entertained what is called Modern Spiritualism; yet it is as strong an evidence of spirtual presence as could be adduced by a believer, or one acquainted with spiritual manifestations.

Such visitations are made to day, illustrating the power and influence of mind to impress mind. Sometimes it takes the tangible form of the actual spirit presence. Sometimes, as Shakspeare has pictured in the play of "Hamlet," it appears in the form of a wraith or apparition that has been foully dealt with Haunted houses are said always to be the result of some secret and unknown crime, that the

the real cause of certain sounds and visions occurring at midnight in unknown places and obscure deserted dells. All these things are no longer mysterious. They no longer belong to the world that no one dare enter. They are the subjects of investigation, and may be classified as among the phenomena that connect the spiritual world with yours. The reason is apparent. Unhappy spirits dwell in the places where they have been foully dealt with; and as we see men who are persecuted on earth strive to ferret out the cause of their persecution and punish those who afflict them, so spirits are somewhat the same. When one has passed away, it is very natural that it should brood and hover near, trying to attract attention, and in some manner strive to gain reparation for a wrong.

Oftentimes there are unseen ghosts that disturb you so that you dare not enter a door, though you may not know the cause of this disturbed feeling. You have frequently visited places where some singular sensation has taken possession of you—gone into houses where you were full of unrest—been in the presence of persons who did not impart to you a feeling of repose, There is some law or subtile element to account for this influence. It may not be crime, or wrong, or injustice; there is simply a spiritual antagonism-something incompatible with your spiritual needs.

There are many more persons killed with uncongenial atmospheres than are killed by any other cause. There are sensitive beings who are oppressed with the antagonisms of outward life, who die because of the fragility of their organization; and you are apt to sup-pose it is the result of physical debility, since you do not understand the laws that govern your spiritual natures. You would think it an unpardonable offense if anyone were to crawd upon your person—if anyone interfered with your private individual life. Yet, spiritually, you often do this; you are constantly treading upon one another's toes, and encroaching in other ways; you are continually sending out shafts of spiritual animosity, that produce much harm. All these things when understood will certainly conduce much to your happiness. The laws and customs of ancient times were very barbarous; no society and no individual was protected as to day; so, in spiritual matters, when you understand these various and diverse laws, you will find every spirit and mind has its rights as well as every individual body and every class of society. You will find each mind is encased in a castle of its own, has its own atmosphere, its own surroundings, prerogatives, privileges; and you may no more enter the domains of that mind without permission, than you may enter your neighbour's dwelling, or than you may encroach upon his person. You consider it an offense if an individual addresses to you some insulting remark about your personal appearance. But persons are not so circumspect with reference to your mental or spiritual attributes, and feel quite privileged to enter the domains of any individual mind and call it to strict account for any supposed shortcoming or infirmity. The laws of politeness will be extended in the spiritual world, and in comprehending the laws that govern men and spirits, you will much less frequently encroach upon one another. There will be less unhappiness when this is the case. For many subtile nervous influences, whereby we act injuriously upon one another, will be avoided; and society itself will understand that there are subtile laws of mind, as well as actual forces of body, that tend to produce discord, dissimilarity, and make various friends.

But this, of course, goes far into a range of thought that cannot now be discussed. only desired to point out the connection between these occult forces of your own organization and similar forces in spiritual existence, and to show that the two are not so unlike and separated as you imagine; that your minds and powers are similar, that the difference is in the disrobing or throwing off of the outward clothing, and that the atmosphere is peopled by beings having thoughts, emotions; and feelings similar to your own, which they manifest whenever opportunity favors, and often govern and direct your lives when you are not aware of it. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Is it best to cultivate this spiritual control, if we may not know with whom we talk? some may ask. Whether you cultivate it or no, you are under that control. Fire is a most dangerous element unless you understand its control, and electricity certainly does less harm when conveying messages than when striking down tall trees. This is the most subtile means of power in existence; you are under its influence whether you will or no; by knowing it you may ward off that which is injurious, by ignorance you may oftentimes be under the influence of that which is not benficial to you. Seeing that the knowledge of any law of nature cannot lessen the happiness of humanity, the knowledge of any force which is lying around you, of any power that is unemployed now instead of being used, and ultimately, when properly understood and guided, therefore this knowledge will ald as much in human progress as any of the elements that have been trained by the hand of man to do his work on earth. It is the vast mental power, the vast spiritual atmosphere, the vast resence that shapes and guides and interilends with your lives, laying hands upon each, throwing the influence of the spirit upon all, until at last all are interblended and governed by the supreme law of mind that controls every ving soul. On the conclusion of the lecture, the following questions were asked and answers

Judalsm, Christianity and Spiritualism.

BY OLIVER PORTER.

An important question of the day is, What is inspiration? One class hold that a personal Supreme Being selected certain media, such as prophets, apostles, etc., through whom to communicate his will, which he did directly, verbally or with inspired pen, closed it up with the apostles, put it within the lids of the Bible and made it authoritative. Unfortunately, however, it is given in such a manner that the people are, in opinion as to what that will is, widely apart and of endless shades, therefore its truth may well be questioned.

Another growing class hold that a personal Infinite and Omnipresent Being is an impossibility, therefore must be a principle of nature, an unchangeable law, and of course, can not be set aside or violated. Do what we may, whether in harmony with what is called good or not, we come under this law, for law is everywhere—;ve can not escape it; or in the language of another, "There is not a particle of matter in existence that is not alive and active, constantly undergoing change, and that change is progress from a lower to a higher condition."

However paradoxical it may seem, this law of unvarying change is unchangeable, and like progress, eternal. Spirit being a principle of nature, is also omnipresent and its power is everywhere felt—the higher and stronger con-trolling the lower and weaker—the latter being negitive to the former. Inspiration, therefore, being universal, can not be confined to time or space. A specific amount of its power may be concentrated or compounded by spirit bands, and often is, for special purposes.

This being founded on immutable laws, must be scientific and worthy our acceptation. No one can dispute that the Bible is a history of the Jews. One reason why it is called the Book of Books, is its many wise sayings and beautiful maxims of their own, and that of other nations woven into it; but its chief value lies in the Spiritualism that crops out in some of its phases all through it. Aside from this, it would be a matter of only ordinary interest, a mere history of the religion, wars, kings, prophets, etc., of a haughty, self-conceited cruel, hypocritical and mean people, despised by all other nations, and finally, on account of their wickedness and corruption overwhelmed and scattered. That we inherited their religion and traditions was our misfortune, and we are yet to be saved from its thraldom by the present coming, in great power, of Christ with an innumerable band of spirits.

It seems a mistake in binding together the two books and making them both authoritative, one retaliatory and the other kind and forgiving in spirit. It is like putting new cloth into old garments to be rent asunder. A divorce, doubtless, will sometime be made.

Christ did not fully indorse Moses nor should we. Both the principles and character of the latter, in some respects, were at fault. Although the Jewish government was theocratic and unitarian, their God, Moses God, who was leader of a band, and above other Gods. probably the spirit-father of Abraham, was sensual and of low order, and commanded many things cruel and revengeful, calculated to shock the moral sense of the people of this age. These spirits called Gods were as ignorate. ant and unprogressed, proportionately as the people; yet, of course, greatly superior to them in knowledge as a class. This higher God whom Moses consulted in his private temple, was jealous of the lesser ones who sometimes clashed with him, whereupon Moses forbade their having farther communications under penalty of death. From the era of Moses to that of Jesus, great progress seems to have been made in both contiguous worlds, and also since the days of Jesus to the present. Whether or not the spirit-father of Abraham controlled the medium Moses, we have spirit testimony that Confucius, leader of an association, controlled him, which appears probable, as he taught the Golden Rule and power of love while in earthlife. There ought not to exist a doubt that Jesus is at the head of a powerful band now. as the tests he gave of his reappearance is full proof of it, being literally fulfilled daily. A certain class are so critical as to insist on a literal fulfillment of prophecies by him, who spoke so constantly in allegories—still expecting his coming in person, instead of in spirit everywhere so manifest. It is possible, even probable, he may at no distant time, materialize himself sufficiently to give a lengthy dis-

SPIRITS CALLED GODS.

Moses was both a seeing and a hearing medium-occasionally saw and talked with a spirit, whom he called God—one time he saw his hinder parts, and at another talked with him face to face. Note the suggestive jeply of Jesus to the Jews, who sought to entrap him. They accused him of making himself God, meaning like or equal to the God of Moses. He replied substantially as follows: "Is it not written in your Law, I said ye are Gods unto whom the word of the Lord came? Why accuse me of blasphemy, because of saying, I am the Son of God," as much as to say, I have assumed a title less than you apply to the lesser Gods, spirits of the band, who received the word from their leader, for the purpose of transmission to those in earth-life. This is aptly put, and a lesson to his defiers.

IMMORTALITY.

As an evidence of the ignorance of the Jewich Gods, note the fact of their failure to recognize—certainly to teach, the actuality of an endless life. There are no words, so critics inform us, in the Hebrew language expressive of it. The word translated everlasting, and so flippantly used by some preachers to support the doctrine of an endless Hell, has a limited import, meaning a very long time, and applied to things temporal. It is said that "immortality was brought to light through the gospel," yet Plato and others taught it long before that time, and some of the Jews themselves received it from older nations more than a century prior, but the doctrine not being accepted by the authorities, did not spread to a very great extent...

ORTHODOX CRITICS. The late Rev. Dr. Theodore Clapp, a pulpit orator and President of a New Orleans college, in his auto-biography relates an interesting fact. Judge W.; an eminent scholar, who studied for the Episcopal ministry, but relinquished his purpose on account of failure to find requisite evidences of their dogmas in the Bible, after listening to an eloquent discourse on endless misery, by the Rev. Doctor, who quoted largely from both books of the Bible, and stated that there were hundreds of texts therein that affirmed it, expressed to him his opinion that they were mistranslations; that in the Hebrew texts he would find no such allusions. Dr. Clapp immediately prepared himself, and went into a thorough examination of both books, appropriating a portion of each day for eight years. The result was, he was unable to find in the Old Testament any allusion to any suffering after death; that he could not name a portion in the new, fairly interperted, affirming that a part of mankind will be eternally miserable, but found many declaring | had as much as the least bit of a martyr to | When, or how the paternal name Father, as | every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clo the ultimate salvation of all. "To my utter | nail at the mast-head of their non-immortality | first person, originated, cannot be definitely as eral invitation is extended to all.

astonishment," he added, "it turned out that orthodox critics were perfectly familiar with these fucte!" Suffice it to say, he withdrew from the order and presched Universalism. The fact of his remaining in the City of New Orleans during the unhealthy season for severaf years, to take charge of the sick, while other clergymen left, is evidence of his goodness and worth.

ORTHODOXY CRITICISED. It matters little if some Evangelical ministers are themselves more or less skeptical in regard to their articles of faith, so long as they are retained, but their moral tendency is a fit subject of inquiry, and criticism. Now, crime is seldom committed but with expectation of escape from its consequences. Christian plans ingeniously open a tolerable fair chance for such escape, but sufficiently mysti-fied to allow Shepherds to secure, fleeces from the flocks. It is for these (power and emoluments) that the differing sects have so often quarreled and fought, and aroused cruel wars among themselves. It could not be for true religion, as that means peace. Almost all wars have religion for their basis, not excepting the late French and German. If Christians thus fight vindictively for pelf and power among themselves, what may be exected in the coming conflict when the battle s between the sects united, against those whom they are pleased to term infidels, provided they succeed, as likely they may, in securing the religious amendment to the constitution?

The international Evangelical convention The international Evangelical convention held in New York, made out a programme of topics for discussions, and assigned speakers thereto, one being Church and State. Church and State a subject of inquiry by foreign and home dignitaries in the year of our Lord, 1873, in the land of the free! God save the Republict This surely smacks of the battling God of Moses, rather than that of the Prince of Peace, as war must inevitably follow such unholy marriage. It may be convenient to have both Gods, Jewish and Christian, in the constitution, so as to follow the banner of one in the field, and the other in the pulpit! As water can not rise above its fountain, so ethics of a sect must be an indication of moral standard. Dr. McLeod, in a 'discourse before the royalty of England, justified war on the principle that God demanded satisfaction.

TRUE FOUNDATION. A brother in one of his lectures makes out with great clearness the mission of Christ to rest on the fact of spirit-intercourse. Jesus questioned Simon Peter in regard to what others, as well as himself said of him, and received for an answer that he was the Christ, and thereupon Jesus declared he must have obtained the knowledge, not from flesh and blood but his father whom there is good reason to suppose, was Confucius. There was proin calling him God and Father, or God-Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. He was at the head probably of an association of spirits who took it upon themselves to raise up a highly organized personage for a great work; took charge of his Mother who brought forth one worthy to be anointed the Christ, and who should become ruler of the nations through his organized band, and to reign until his work is fully accomplished. His declaration to Peter substantiates fully the fact that the church, the key, the corner-stone, the head of the corner, the rock, all rest, on the fact of spirit-intercourse as the foundation of Christianity. This stone is Spiritualism cut out of the mountain by spirits without human aid, and it will roll on and on till it becomes universal.

Can it be made to appear probable that a personal, masculine, infinite God exists, who is around us for matters of our personal interests? Is it too much to assume that Jesus, or the spirits that lived a trillion of years before his time, and who were connected with this planet, or spirits connected with planets that were a trillion of years older than ours know no more of such personal supreme or first cause than does Plus the Ninth? People are slow to learn that all divine revelations, indeed all knowledge, comes to us through attendant spirits, and that they also, the same as we do, have their mediums and clairvoyants to obtain knowledge, messages of love, etc., from these in spheres above them, and so continued from one sphere to another upward to the highest that can be reached. Yet these facts are as patent to students of Spiritual Philosophy as any fact in science.

· Knowledge is power, The idea that spirits make and engineer worlds is well and ably sustained by the Associate Editor of the Journal, who received the fact from a highly exalted spirit, and which can not, it seems to me, be successfully controverted. Knowledge is not only a savior, but power as well, and in proportion as the soul brings its mind forces to bear upon matter and subjugates it, will its God-like powers become manifest. Waterford, Me.

Adventism.

BY EDWIN ABNER DAVIS.

"A lie well stuck to is as good as the truth." So says the old proverb. Acting from this standpoint, the Adventists are preaching what they know to be a lie, viz:—That Spiritualists, Infidels, Atheists and all other liberals, are working for the recognition of God in the constitution of these United States. Ever since this "God in the constituion" movement has been on foot, the Adventists have prophesied it would be a success, and they hope it will be from the fact that as the "blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church, they hope to be able to be made first-class martyrs of. No church, sect, or organization, either religious or political ever made much headway in the world, until it could advertise ts martyrs, and work through them, upon the eelings of the people. This is the world's aistory.

Now the proposed "God in the Constitution" amendment, may, or may not, be a success. If a success, why should the Adventists fear it? I am at a loss to see where their part of the martyrdom is to come in. The amendment is gotten up for the sole purpose of striking a blow at those whom the church terms Infidels; per se—those who deny the inspiration of the Bible, disbelieve the immaculate conception, and worship the God of Nature, rather than the God of many Creeds, many tempers, and many minds, as He is proved to be in the Christian bible. Infidels alone will feel the full force of ecclesiastical power if Christians gettheir God in the constitution. There is no doubt of this. The rack, the jibbet and the dungeon, have already been foreshadowed as the position of Infidels, by "gentlemen of the cloth," who are interested in the proposed amendment, The Advents know this, and are evidently very uneasy, for they squirm and twist terribly for fear they may not be included among the martyrs. Martyrdom is the molasses of their anticipations; the loaf-sugar of their hopes; the double-distilled nectar of roses, of their desires. All churches boast of their martyrs, Our poor Advent brethren have never, as yet, as much as the least bit of a martyr to flag, and they think it is about time for them to be set up in the martyr business. Well, I, for one, have no objection, but it does look a little strange and paradoxical, that while they are to be crucified for obeying God's laws, people of my faith are to he crucified for obeying the Devil's laws!

But so it is. The Advents preach and prophesy, that they are to be martyred for not receping Sunday, or reverencing it as a Holy Day. Well, now, are they not in the same boat with Infidels who keep no particular day, but claim that all days are the Lord's days: Most assuredly! Besides, we deny all forms of church rule, war against creeds, deny the infallibility of the Bible and its divinity, and are totally opposed to Christianity, as inter-preted for us by hireling priests. We also have little reverence or respect for the Christian God, whom, the bible says, slaughtered thousands of innocent men, women and children to satisfy his whims—repented several times of what he had done or was about to do; sent a lying spirit to Ahab; sends strong delusions that people may believe lies, and creates a devil to damn them for believing the lies he has forced them to swallow, and finally, says, "I create the good, and I create the evil. I am the Lord," thus virtually implying that the devil is guiltless of evil, for if the Lord creates it, and the Bible says he does, who is so irreverent as to charge it to the poor, slandered devil?

Ah, if there is a devil; I fear some of the clergy will catch hell for slandering him so. Well, sure enough, the Bible is a riddle, which none but the Advents understand, which leads us to exclaim, "Great is the mystery of godliness?"

Paul was content to "be all things to all men," and to lie for the upbuilding of Christianity. So likewise are our Advent friends willing to lie for the propagation of their pe-culiar dogmas. But how the "truth can abound," by their lie that Spiritualists, Deists, and Liberals are hand-in-glove with Christians to put a God in the United States Constitution, I am at a loss to discover. Yet an Advent exhorter, who lives upon the sweat of other people's brows, declared to me that such was the case, showing his utter ignorance of what is going on in the world, or an intention to speak falsely and uncharitably of people, some of whose shoe-latchets he is unworthy to unloose. Adventism has no charity for anyhody or anything outside of its theological chalk-marks. It is a bigoted, gloomy, selfish re-ligion, puffing its followers up with egotism and self-righteousness. Like the Catholics, they say, "Outside of our church, there is no salvation for man." "Believe what we teach, or be damned." "Accept our interpretation of the prophecies or be annihilated. We can't be wrong. Although all the wisdom of the world combined interpret the Bible and the prophecies differently, we alone are right. Our church i infallible; it can not err. Our newspapers, books, and pamphlets contain nothing but truth, and never so much as the smallest white lie. All the revelations—and they are many-given to our seer and prophetess, for the guidance of the church, come directly from God. Spiritualism with its revelations, is of the devil, and is a wicked fraud. All other churches or peoples, or sects, claiming to have revelations, are liars and of the devil. No people living in these last days has any business with revelation but us. We are God's anointed. The Second Advent people are those 144,000 whom John, the Revelator, saw gathered about the throne. Man has no immortal soul. -As a beast dieth, so dieth man. A very few people will be saved, and they, Advents, every one of them. Spiritualists are to make fife come down from heaven soon, to deceive the very elect, if possible. All spirit communications come from the devil. Our communications through Mrs. White, while in a trance condition, are of God, even to the communications for the guidance and direction of a love-sick girl." And this is Adventism, which has time and again prophesied the final winding-up of all things, even to setting days when this glorious world of ours is to "burn like an oven." No people living, have so slandered and vilified Spiritualists as those religious bigots and fanatics, called Adventists. They have retailed in pulpit and press, every dirty lie they could gather up, no matter from whence it came, so it tended to blacken and make hideous and deformed the character of Spiritualists as a body.

As a matter of course, this helped wonderfully to "fulfill the prophecies which they point out in their Bible as relating directly to Spiritualism, and which to ignorant and unsuspecting minds, is convincing of the evil tendency of Spiritualism, the power of the devil, and the truth of prophecy. And these people are spoiling for martyrdom, and so afraid are they that the Christian amendment will not become a law, they scarcely know what to do. Their martyrdom is to come through keeping the seventh day, or Saturday, as a Sabbath. So they say. They tell us they are to be imprisoned and even suffer death for the observance of the seventh day. They are already martyrs by anticipation. If they could be martyre in reality their cup of joy would be overflowing.

But in that day when our Advent brethren are led to the stake for the mere keeping of a day, where will the Infidel and Atheist appear? What will be the fate of those who deny Christ as the Savior of the world, disbelieve the Bible, and have no faith in any of the Christian sects?

I am afraid the Adventists will be cheated of their anticipated crucifixions, unless they can bring up something more plausible for martyrdom, than the flimsy pretext of the seventh day.

God in the constitution strikes at none but nfidels. If the Advents wiggle in, and force the constitution tinkers to give them a taste of hell, it matters little to me. I could not believe their doctrine, nor their Bible, if the government should behead the whole church. Palermo, Kan.

Gentile Origin of the Christian Trinity.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

Antiquity furnishes evidence that the present trinitarian system was a tenet of belief incorporated with Christian theology, at a time subsequent to the apostles. The term trinity does not occur in the Bible, neither do we find the doctrine taught in any of the early confessions of faith. While a threefold idea of Deity is utterly ignored in the Old Test-ament, there is nothing definite related concerning it in the New. When the Jewish scribe earnestly asserted that "there is but one God, and there is none other but he," Jesus plainly acquiesced in the sentiment; when, if he believed that three distinct persons existed in God, a more opportune occasion for teach-ing a triology in divinity, could not have pre-sented itself. The tritheism afterward evincedby him in commanding his disciples to baptize their converts in the name of the Father. and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is historically shown to have been of gentile

When, or how the paternal name Father, as certained. The term has no deifical signification in the Pentateuch, which shows that it was foreign to the theosophical conceptions of Moses, who acknowledged no name for his God but Lord, or Jehovah. The limited use made of it by subsequent Jewish writers, was evidently derived from extraneous sources. According to the Christian writers, St. Cyril, Austin, Cyprian and Lactantius, the reformer Hermas Mercurius—surnamed Trismegistus, on account of his great wisdom in divinity, designated Deity by this social title; and is stated by Dr. Grey, in his Heathen and Jewish Literature to have the stated of the state o erature, to have taught the doctrine of a trinity in Egypt before the time of Maneths. The appellation was originally used among the nations as a term of respect by inferiors to superiors in society, and thus appears to have been gradually applied to a Supreme and Di-vine Being. This congenial term was adopted by Jesus in lieu of the name given by Moses to his hostile war-god.

The term Son, as second person in Deity and as applied in divine incarnation, seems to have originated in ancient solar worship, wherein the "orb of day" was adored as the Sun of God. Justin Martyr, in his Apology enumerates several religious renovators, styled sons of God, that were deified after becoming victims to a violent death,—and whose births invariably dated from that period in Winter when the Sun commences its retrogade move ment to redeem the earth from cold. He presents our Jesus to the religious philosopher Hadrian, (emperor of Rome,) as a parallel case to those martyrs; but maintains that Jesus was more deserving of the title, Son of God, on account of his superior wisdom. Yet Jesus, brough the course of his ministry, refuted the idea of being the Son of God in a corporeal sense, by announcing himself the son of man, and in claiming God for his Spiritual Father, he made a psychological advance in pneumat-ology so antithectical to Mosaic Materialism, that the priesthood declared him deserving of death for assuming an equality with God. The super-human paternity in connection with a Galilean virgin, ascribed to him by those writers who were unacquainted with his nat-ural birth, was considered the prerogative of a fictitious age of religious romance in godology, for the purpose of deification, in imitation of the cotemporary and antecedent gentile nations.

Traditions concerning the Holy Ghost, as third person, are traceable to oriental countries at a very remote date. By reference to the Anacalypsis, it will be found that under the Brahminical theocracy, this esoteric idea of divinity was considered the vital, and life imparting agency in both the first and second pirth of men and the gods. According to Indian theology, a dove or pigeon was the typical representation of our third member of the Trinity. -Though of Eastern emanation, its diffusion in the Christian church came more directly through the teaching of Plato. The special predilection to Platonism evinced by Origen—the most voluminous writer and learned defender of Christianity in the early ages—corroborates the testimony. It has also been shown by unbiased antiquaries, that the gentile philosophers, Numenius, Plotinus, Amelius, Porphyrius, Proclus, Damascius and other Platonists and Peripatetics held the Holy Ghost to be a divine hypostasis. The fact that it had no identification with the Apostolic dispensation during the ministry of John the Baptist, is shown from the fact that his proselytes ignored it.—Acts, 19: 2. The strongest scriptural argument that theologians have adduced in defense of this abstruse doctrine, is derived from that passage in St. John's first epistle, where he says, "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three But this testimony in its favor is invalidated by evidence, elicited from critical investigation, that the text is an interpolation, imposed by translators to establish a lame theory. The candid and learned commentator, Dr. A. Clarke, in examining 112 different MSS. of this epistle, states that he found it in but one—that of the Codex Montforti, Trinity Col. Dublin. And Dr. Bartlette on the "Euglish Bible," in the N. Y. Independent, (May 5th, 1871) says, "There can be no excuse now for retaining 1st John 5: 7, when it is found in no old manuscript, and was not contained in the first two editions of Erasmus."

A triune idea of Deity was the religious ex-cogitation of devout minds in congruity with the defical proclivity of a pre-historic period of antiquity that can not be reached by the modern student in mythological lore. Classical research in Oriental "sacred" literature, shows it to have been a fundamental doctrine among the theosophical gymnosophists of India at a very early date. It was a canonical tenet in the theology of Zoroaster, the Persian divine lawgiver—whose Mazian descendants in the days of Herod, were directed by a 'star"-to the babe of Bethlehem. It is asserted that through his fertile imagination the Trinity was first systematically syllogized into three united beings, equal and infinite in power, the same in essence and constitution. It is generally believed to have been introduced into Greece by Pythagoras, after his visit to the Egyptian colleges during the reign of Amasis; though the Christian chronologist Fimotheus states that Orpheus—the most ancient inspired law-giver of Greece, taught that all things were made by a co-essential and consubstantial Trinity, worshiped as Phanes, Uranus, and Chromas, deified in light, counsel, and life. After having been philosophically theologized there by Plato, as Supreme God, Reason or Logos, and Soul, four hundred years before the Christian era, it was antologically expounded in consistency with the metaphysics of Christianity by Athanasius, at the Ecumenical council convened by Constantine at Nicaea, A.D. 325. The present form of that faith was then declared orthodoxy, and became an essential part of the Christian creed.

Ecclesiastical history shows that the dogma had not been uniformly accepted by the patristic Fathers as a cardinal axiom of belief in the Christian church before its discussion and elucidation by Athanasius,—who is admitted to have been of gentile birth and education. His exegesis is supposed to have wrought a consubstantial improvement in adaptation to apostolic Christianity over the old homoousian conception, but in the con-troversy which he successfully waged in op-position to the Arian and Sabellian denomintions of Christendom, the profound Eusebius eems merely to have relinquished Arianism and formally accepted his views through secular or political motives. The present form of the creed is said to have been drawn up by Hilary, bishop of Arles, in the fifth century though Dean Stanly in his recent investigation of the subject finds no proof of its existence until the ninth century. He gives his opinion that the English copy of the Athanasian creed was not made from the original Latin, but from a faulty Greek translation which the compilers of the prayer book mistook for the work of Athanasius. It thus becomes crit-leized for savoring of heresy.

THE FIRST LIBERAL PROGRESSIVE LYCEUM meets at 452 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A genAgaşsiz and Darwin.

BY W. F. PERKINS.

DEAR JOURNAL:-The Atlantic Monthly for January contains a most interesting paper from the late Prof. Agassiz on the subject of "Evolution and Permanence of Type."

This article, reproduced in the New York Graphic of the 16th ult., will be read with unusual interest by all scientists, not only on account of its being one of the last utterances of the great naturalist, but from the fact that the article was called out by the criticisms of Prof. John Fisk in Appleton's Science Monthly for October last, ...

The reader will be struck with a few expressions near the close of Agassiz's article, which challenge careful thought from all who are disposed to accept in haste the conclusions of Darwin.

Prof. Agassiz says: The most advanced Darwinians seem reluctant to acknowledge the intervention of an intellectual power in the diversity which cbtains in nature, under the plea that such an admission implies distinct creative acts for every species. What of it, if it were true? Have those who object to repeated acts of creation ever considered that no progress can be made in knowledge without repeated acts of thinking? And what are thoughts but specific acts of the mind? Why should it then be unscientific to infer that the facts of nature are the result of a similar process, since there is no evidence of any other cause? The world has arisen in some way or other. How it originated is the great question, and Darwin's theory, like all other attempts to explain the origin of life, is thus far merely conjectural. I believe he has not even made the best conjecture possible in the present state of our knowledge.

The more I look at the great complex of the animal world the more sure. do I feel that we have not yet reached its hidden meaning, and the more do I regret that the young and ardent spirits of our day give themselves to speculation rather than to close and accurate invest-

The idea conveyed there, of the "thought of nature," call to mind some expressions in Davis's "Nature's Divine Revelations," where, on page 326, of that remarkable work, will be found the following:

"The Thoughts of the infinite Mind, therefore, constitute the laws of Nature; and the results of these thoughts are the animated forms of being, including the exalted form of man—which again form, on a corresponding principle, the interior, spiritual existence.

"Nature, therefore, is merely a thought of the Divine mind, as forms are the thoughts of nature. Thus the universal laws are merely the infinite expressions of the great positive mind. And thus are we brought to associate our interior principle with the thoughts of its own Productor. And it is only by a clear comprehension of nature's creations, that we can form any correct conception of even a thought emanating from the Divine mind."
Again, on page 314: "Before speaking of the type of anatomy that exemplifies, partially the form of man, it is well to remark that nature is like the human brain—and is incessantly producing forms, as the brain is thoughts. And each form and peculiar organization in nature is determined by the existing, controlling circumstances, which were the cause of such form's creation. It is therefore impossible for any order of animals to remain for many periods the same as its original; for they are changed in accordance with the exist ing surrounding circumstances. So also the thoughts to which the mind gives birth are the forms of their creating causes: And it is no more impossible for the brain to produce constantly thoughts in every particular similar to each other, than it is for nature to produce forms similar to each other. The mind is acted on by all the immediate and exciting causes which produce thoughts as an effect, and the effect always varies according to the variations of the cause. So forms are the thoughts of nature, as thoughts are the forms of the mind. Thus, although a general law governs the creation of thoughts, this does not produce invariableness in the forms of thought."

Is not all this far more rational than the. miracle theory, and is not this all that Agassiz means, albeit he has been 'charged with leaning strongly toward the miracle theory.

Utterances still more to the point are found in Davis' fifth volume "Great Harmonia," as follows: "We do not hold that one type of organism, by any conceivable possibility, can gradually modify its shape and ascend into another type, as a bimanal changing into a human being; but this we affirm: that a particular type is made the medium, through its ripened spermatozoa and germ-essence, of developing a superior form of fixed organism. Nature is filled with the vitalic principles which, when the proper embryonic fluid is deposited, empregnates the procreative functions of one plant or animal to the development of an order uperior."

To all who are aware of the circumstances under which Mr. Davis's works were prepared, the startling fact that they were written while he, an uneducated youth, was in an abnormal or trance state, this being attested to by thousands who visited him daily, while his earlier works were being prepared, his utterances, or the utterances challenge attention.
In "Nature's Divine Revelations," the first announcement of an eighth and ninth planet was given to the world, i. e., given to the inhabitants of this planet, the fact not then being known to scientific men. A particular description was then given of the eighth planet its descript the planet, its density, the composition of its atmosphere and the excessive degree of its light. A year later and the scientific world made the discovery, and then for the first time believed it.

Last summer the 'New York Graphic called attention to these old inspirational predictions, and to their fufilment, particularly to the more recent corroboration by scientific men of the testimony regarding the inherent light of some of the planets.

Can we hastily reject the testimony through Davis regarding the development of species? Darwin having had a full hearing, it is safe to say that the objections to his theory, will now be listened to with more attention, and Agassiz's paper will call for something more than theory in reply/.

As another writer says: "If it were possible during the preparatory stages of development, while the vital machinery of this earthly laboratory was being put in running order, during the process of mixing, compounding, and preparing its numerous materials for the formative spirit to accumulate substances in fitting place, so as to form protonlasm, and surround. place, so as to form protoplasm, and surrounded by fitting conditions to plant the conceptions there " " " and thus a lizard could be formed, so could an elephant, and so could man—and man will continue to be man, and apes will continue to be apes."

The inference is a fair one, viz: that if sci. entists see no miracle in the formation of a lizard, why should the formation of the human species, separate and distinct from all others. be miraculous?

And until Darwin and his followers find the "missing link," which they believe connects man with the brute creation, are they not traveling outside the record of science into the realm of speculation, if they affirm as fact that which yet lacks confirmation? It would seem that we should hardly get any more light on this subject, until psychological science dispels the darkness of "educated ignorance.'

WM, F. PERKINS. New Orleans, La., Dec. 21, 1874.

Dr. Samuel Maxwell—The Quaker Medium.

He is now lecturing at Grow's Opera Hall on West Madison St., before the First Society of Spiritualists. Having heard the doctor read his resolution in the late convention, which resolution has gone round the world as the hombshell which divided the convention and stamped the free-love concern with infamy, and which was an honor to the author and the minority that supported it, and hearing of his wonderful lectures in the trance state, resolved to hear him. We went on Sunday night, December 21, 1873, and was very much pleased and instructed by the lecture. The control asked for questions, which were promptly given, and then clearly, forcibly and at times eloquently answered—answered in the true spirit of "the beautiful Jesus." A question was asked concerning baptism by water, which the spirit did not endorse, claiming that injunction of "Holy Writ" had reference to "Baptism of the heart and soul, that shall destroy selfishness and place all your appetites under the spiritual control of your being."

He pronounced in favor of a pure and undefiled Spiritual union among all Spiritualists—not the crazy kind, which fills our asylums and makes men and women mad.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

We asked, "Does the legal enforcement of the death penalty find an endorsement in the Spirit-world?" To which an emphatic, "It does not," came

"Why not?"
"If you could stand as we do, and witness an execution of a fellow man on the gallows, and see that soul ascend into spirit life, and behold all its concomitants, henumbing and damning effect upon the community at large, and the shock it gives to those who are in the interior life, by the murder—for it is murder, a greater shock by far than is ever caused by the murder of one man by another; because the murder of one man by another; because, in the case of legal murder there are tens of thousands of persons interested in the earth life, and there are tens of thousands in spirit life more interested, and hence it becomes a murder of a thousand fold greater magnitude than that which the victim committed, for which crime he suffers the death penalty, and therefore we would say to you by all means—wipe out this blackest of all barbarisms, utterly and forever abolish this most heinous terly and forever abolish this most heinous offence against civilization."

"Oh! Lord these are my sentiments," as the lazy preacher said on glancing at his list of prayers, and jumped into bed. Mr. Editor, we are glad that the Journal, "vile sheet," is so unlike its Christian neighbors, while they-rejoice that Petteet swung off, notwithstanding the Herculean efforts of his distinguished counsel, Judge Knowlton, who labored honestly and diligently to give the unfortunate man a lease of life, and when that failed, gave him the only real comfort he received during his last days of life,—so unlike the canting hypocrites in white ties,—so we say while they rejoice that blood has been given for they rejoice that blood has been given for blood, you are bold and brave and determined in all your efforts to better the conditions of the criminal, who must soon become a citizen of this or the other world, by giving him good advice and words of cheer in the Journal, as to our State prisons and jails. Go on in the good work, and the liberal world will sustain so noble and so brave a paper as the Jour-

We are glad to tell our friends abroad that we have such a lecturer in our midst as Dr. Maxwell, who is attracting large-audiences day and night on Sundays, at the above named hall. After the lecture he describes spirits present, as is his custom, and Mr. Hall, an old gentleman on the West Side, very quickly recognized a little golden locked cherub, as it was described as gently caressing him, while the tears of joy trinkled down his cheek. More anon.

Capt. R. Hoyt Winslow.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—We have had a rich feast in the shape of two lectures from Capt. R. HOYT WINSLOW. The first lecture was on the evening of the 17th. The hall was filled to its fullest capacity, to hear the Captain give his telling and convincing lecture on "Bible evidences of Spiritualism." It was one of the best lectures which we ever had the pleasure of listening to, and delivered with an earnestness and eloquence that carried the truth to many hearts, who had never heard a Spiritualist lecture before, closing with a grand inspirational poem.

The second evening, the subject of the lecture was chosen by the audience, who appointed a committee of four to select a subject, and they chose the following: "What are the benefits to be derived from Spiritualism, as now taught by its leading advocates, compared with Christianity, taught by orthodox denominations?" The speaker hurled back the taunt of "leading advocates," and in the most severe terms denounced Victoria C. Woodhull, Moses Hull and others, and declared that they were not-leading advocates of Spiritualism; but even if they were, they would compare favorably with Moses, David and others. His lecture was able and full of truth, showing Spiritualism to be so much purer and better than orthodox Christianity, that there could scarce be any comparison. After the lecture, Elder White, pastor of the Baptist Church, asked Captain Winslow a few questions, taking the Bible and asking him to read certain passages therefrom, condemning those who had familiar spirits, and those who consulted them, to death, etc., and asked the speaker if he believed that God commanded them to be put to death? and he answered promptly "No." Then the Captain turned on the Elder, and asked him to read certain passages, and he read, answered and looked as if he would like to get out of it, but mustered up the courage to say that he believed every word in the Bible to be true. Altogether, the second evening's lecture was a grand success! The Captain also gave some very excellent tests. I would say that those desiring an able, earnest and eloquent speaker, can do no bet-ter than to get Captain Winslow.

THE PHILOSOPHER'S STONE.

BY T. HERBERT NOYES.

Would to God that some new Epicurus Had dawned on the days of our youth, And proclaimed, in our ears, to allure us, The war-cry of Reason and Truth; All the sermons which shirk it are shouldy. Their shafts all shoot wide of the goal, For we hold that what's right for the body Can never be wrong for the Soul.

We maintain that the laws of Creation, Which govern this marvelous Sphere, If they were but the laws of the Nation Are simple, sufficient, and clear; We proclaim the Religion of Reason, Which brooks neither rancor nor strife, In its love for sound logic, not treason To all the pure instincts of Life.

We proclaim war against Superstition,
No quarter to Fiction we grant,
Though it feign to be Faith or Tradition, We vote it a pestilent plant; We would own Truth alone as dictator, Its grain we would winnow and sift In the sieve the gracious Creator Has guaged and bestowed as his gift.

True Religion is quite independent Of Ecclesiastics and creeds; All its claim to maintain the ascendant Should rest not on words but on deeds; It was never its mission to blight us Or blast us with faggot and flame; The Religion/that fails to unite us Has lost its best right to its name!

True Religion is not speculation On mysteries hidden from view, It consists in no fond affirmation Of doctrine and dogmas as true. It consists in the practice and science Of duty to God and to man; If Mankind be the Deity's clients. We serve Him in serving His clan.

An Athenian Funeral Monument.

There has recently been dug up at Athens and placed in the Temple of Theseus a tombstone of the Fericlean epoch, or perhaps later, a simple slab of Pentelican marble, carved to commemorate the death of a Greek girl named Ameinocleia. It is a modest and safe judgment to declare that among all our British funeral monuments there is none, not excepting Chantrey's, so lovely, eloquent, and fitting as that little maiden's gravestone. We are all too familiar with the weeping willows, the rediculous tea-urns, the broken columns, and the other ugly and foolish symbols of sorrow which fills our cathedrals and cemeteries. This Athenian undertaker, when he got his order, cut for the family a beautiful bas-relief, simply-representing Amemocleia, sweet and graceful as she lived, putting forth her sandal to be tied by her favorite slave upon whose head she rests her little hand, with a quiet but smiling look on her fair countenance. In the background stands her father—the under-taker's customer—watching this calm preparation for the long journey which he can not share. The surpassing beauty of the work can not be conveyed by description; but the soft and restrained fancy which inspired it, is in as sharp a contrast with our dull and troubled handling of such topics as our best memorials are inferior in art to the style of that simple

A Correction.

Editor Journal —In your Journal of January 3d, you publish my commendation of Hudson Tuttle's "Coming Struggle," and your types make me say that Spiritualists "have clear confidence in prayer." I said "in progress," not prayer. I believe in that aspiration which the good old woman called "feeling up," and in the sublime idea of Plato, "When thou prayers saek for universal good. "When thou prayest, seek for universal good, not for special and particular good," but the notion of asking some being outside of the universe to give some special gift, that might be bane and not blessing, in answer to our humble petitions, is for theological babes, and it is time we "put away childish things."

The God of Jewish conception—an arbitrary being, making worlds as a carpenter builds.

being, making worlds as a carpenter builds houses, from the outside—is passing from the world's thought, and in place thereof will come the infinite wisdom, the infinite love, the infinite intelligence, the infinite design, the infinite spirit—the soul of things in and through all, which may well be called by a name hallowed by reverent association. Without the infinite spirit and intelligence and design, how can finite spirits and intelligences and persons, be possible? I but ask the question, to help the transition from the old to the new—which is yet old. Yours truly,

Mrs. Robinson's Tobscco Antidote.

The above named sure remedy for the appetite for tobacco in all its forms, is for sale at this office. Sent to any part of the country by mail, on receipt of $2.00. It is warranted to cure the most inveterate user of the weed, when the directions on each box are followed. Newspapers and quacks will tell you that this antidote is made from gentian root. It is false. Gentian root is no remedy for the appetite for tobacco, but it is injurious to health to use it. Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidots tones up the system and restores it to its normal condition, as it was before imbibling the hankering desire for a poison ons weed. It is a remedy presented by a band of chemists long in spirit-life, and is warranted to be perfectly harmless.

This House will pay any chemist one thousand dollars who will, upon analyzing this remedy, find one particle of gentian root, or any other poisonous drug in it.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing Psychometric & Business Medium Corner Adams St., & 5th Ave., Chicago.

CORNER ADAMS ST., & 5TH AVE., CHICAGO.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms, and the length of time the patient has been sick; when she will, without delay, return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease, and permanently curing all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the heating art, but when her spirit-guides are brought en rapport with a sick person, through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the positive and negative forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be opparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Jefferson Mills, N. H., March 21, 1872:—Prof. Payton Spence:

Dear Sir - Would Positive and Negative Powders are creating a great excitement here. It can truly be said, in my own person, that the Blind see, the Lame walk, and the Laper is cleansed. I had the Lepprosy for thirty years in my legs, arms, head, and nearly all over my body. After taking your Positive Powders about four days I shoved up my sleeve to see how my arm looked, and to my niter astonishment the scabs would cleave off easily and leave all smooth; and now my head and body are clean. The Catarrh in my head is arrested. They cared my lungs, that were tied up with Phiegm and Cough. The Rhoumatism in my muscles commenced many years ago, and by degrees extended all over me; so that I could not rake my in my muscles commenced many years ago, and by degrees extended all over me; so that I could not rake my right arm to my head, or put on my vest. I can now hold it in any position. My legs I could only with about the Heart, and it would beat a few beats and then stop and start again. I could not lie on it all. The about the Heart, and it would beat a few beats and then stop and start again. I could not lie on it all. The powders have set it all right. Several years ago, from overstraining one eye and a blow on the other I became Hiird, so that I could not mow a person in the same room. Now I can read the large words in your Circular; yet I took only two Boxes of Negatives. On Thursday I called on Mr. Bowles, who had been sick about two years; yet I took only two Boxes of Negatives. On Thursday I called on Mr. Bowles, who had been sick about two years, and his wife was sick from taking calomel. Her limbs were swelled to her bedy, and his wife was sick from taking calomel. Her limbs were swelled to her bedy, and his wife was sick from taking calomel. Her limbs were swelled to her bedy, and his wife was sick from taking calomel. Her limbs were swelled to her bedy, in the morning, and saw Mrs. Bowles on ton the plazza at work. He was greatly surprised, on inquiry she said she took on on to Spence's Positive Powders

WHAT DOCTORS SAY.

In the course of a large experience with the Positive and Negative Powders, I have found them almost infallible in all scute diseases, particularly Fovers of all kinds, such as the Billous Indam= mutory, Typhoid, Congestion of the Lungo, Scarlet Fever, etc. I have also found them infallible in Rowel Complaints and Nerv-Ous Hoadache. Therealso proved the Cintment recommended to be made of the Positive Powders (according to Rule the tenth) to be magical in its effects on all kinds of Sores and Eryslpelas. DE. W. E. JENKS, formerly of North Adams, now of Amesbury, Mass? One box of your Positive Powders cured David Willington of a pain in his stomach of S yenro? standing. Mrs. E. Claffia was cured by the Negative Powders of Numbress, or Palsy, of 12 years' duration. The Powders cured Mrs. H. Classin of Neuralgia. They also cured a lady of Painful Monstruction when given up as past cure. In cases of Parturition (Child-birth), I consider them of great value.

DR. JULIA WILLIAMS, Practical Midwife,

East Brainfree, Vt. I myself have been afflicted with Echoumatism. and Heart Disease for three years during which time I have not been able to labor. I have taken two boxes and a half of your Positive Powders. My Rheumatism is gone and the Heart Disease much relieved:

SCROFULA AND CATARRH

Cured.

Jane Worley was cared of Scrofulz of 15 years standing with 4 Boxes of your Positive Powders, in three weeks, having had five Doctors before. Her ankles were swollen, and in running sores; in fact, it was all over her body.—(MARTIN WOBELT, New Petersburg, Orion.

Four Boxes of Positive Powders have cured a little girl of a very bad case of Serofula.—(R. McRea, Fay-etteville, N. C.)

The daughter of Henry E. Lepper was afflicted with Serofulous Sore Eyes for several years. Much of the time she could not bear the light, and had to be shut up in a dark room. Ere she had taken 2 Boxes of your Positive Powders, her eyes, to all appearance, were well, and have remained so.—(Robert Thomas, Osseo, Ming.)

Went, and naming Scrothlous sores on me for 2 years, and could get no cure. I tried all the medicines I could get, but no cure or help until I took your Positive Powders. I am now about well.—(John W. Kendall, Bethel, Me.)

Mother had the Catarrh in her head so bid that, when lying down, she could hear it go drip, drip, or a ringing. Your Positive Powders cured her. They have cured my Catarrh in the head also.—(Miss E. M. Shayer, Burlington; N. J.)

I have raised one man from the dead with two Boxes of your Positive Powders. It is J. W. Nutitle of this place, who had what the Doctors called the Communication. They said he could not live long. He is now stwork for us, a well man.—(G. W. Hall, New Haven, Ind.)

Triumphant Victory

Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

A short time since my mother tried your Positive Powders for Byspepsia and Indigestion. If she ate a piece of apple as large as a nazelant, she would not sleep a particle all might, but be very weary and nervous. She is entirely well now.—(A. G. Mowerax, Stockton, Minn.)

Four years ago I used half a Box of your Positive Powders, which took all the Dyspepsia out of me, root and branch.—(John O. Rendern, Hartland, Wis.)

Your Powders have cured me of Dyspepsia in two weeks. I used but one Box of the Positives. My Dyspepsia was chronic and of 30 years standing. During the last ten years I could not use butter, pork, or pastry of any kind; but now they agree with me as well as they sever did.—(P. P. Mennen, P. M., Maple Springs, Wis.)

I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia for next I have been a sufferer from Byspepsia for near 30 years of my life, and for many years, had to restrict myself to the most rigid course of dieting, not having eaten a meal of hog meat, or anything that was seasoned with it, for many years. Three Boxes of the Positive Powders relieved me of all my symptoms of Dyspepsia. I now est anything that is common without suffering any inconvenience whatever.—(REV. L. JUDIAN, M.D., Branchville, Ark.) WHAT WOMEN SAY.

A woman in this place has used the Positive Powders for Falling of the Womb, and is high in praisa of them.—(Mas. J. Gimone Jones, Falmonth, Mass.)

My daughter, Martha, has been cared of Suppressed Menstruction by the use of the Positive Powders.—(J. Coorne, St. Johns, Ark.)

Your Positive Powders have cured me of Bropsy of the Womb of one-year's standing. The tendency to Dropsy was inherited.—(Mas. Emma Misz., Brooklyn, N. Y.)

A woman who had four Miscarriages got a box of Positive Powders of me, and they took her through her next Pregnancy all right.—(O. Henry, Sand Spring, Iows.)

My wife is now all right in her monthly periods. As I said before, she had suffered a great deal from Instruction of the extending as good as your Powders.—(W. H. Kenr, Smith Creek, Mich.)

Your Positive and Negative Powders have cured a case of Milk Ley ye 16 years standing, also a case of Rheumanism, a case of Falling Sickness or Fits, and a case of Dysentery.—(Powent Halloom, Yorkville, Ill.)

Miss Lena Anoth was taken with Stonage of the Periodicais, accompanied by great discress in the head, and coldness of the limbs. She was treated with your Positive Powders, and has entirely recovered.—(Rosa L., Gimes, Pardeeville, Wis.)

No More Headache, Neuralgia, or Rheumatism.

I have been troubled with the Neuralgia for the last 15 years, and at times have been laid up with for six weeks at a time. I have used your Positive Powders for Neuralgia and Sick Headache.—(Linsie G. Barrett, While Hills, Conn.)

I have been suffering nearly 40 years with Ohronic Headache, and often resorted to Chloroform to get temporary relief; but the paroxysms would return as soon as the effect of the Chloroform wore off. But after using your Positive Powders, I can say with others that they came like an angel of mercy in the night time.—(Mrs. M. A. Earney, Huntsville, Ala.)

I had a severe attack of Neuralgia last week, and I stopped it in 10 minutes with your Positive Powders.—(Jacob S. Rutter, River Shyn., Ohio.)

When I commenced taking your Powders, I had Spinal Complaint of nearly 30 years standing; also Biabetes, Scintica, Rheumatism and Errysipelas, I am now well of all. Oh, I do think them the most wonderful medicine ever given to men. While on a visit to my sister in Doyer she told me that there had been almost a miracle wrought with her in a terrible case of Neuralgia with the Positive Powders. She induced me to try them myself, I did so, with wonderful success.—(M. Huntley, North Richmond, N. H.)

CHICAGO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1874

The Avon Mystery!

In No. 16 of the Journal, we published an article clipped from the Rochester Democrat and Uhronicle, giving an account of a wonder: ful phenomenon, relating to Miss Eleanor Bonney, who had, several months ago, repeatedly announced to her friends, that she was, at some time not far distant, to go into a long and peculiar trance, the result of which would be the revelation of some startling facts—facts that would convince the skeptical world of the truths of Spiritualism! Her predictions were treated with a great deal of levity by many of her friends and relatives, being considered the result of ballucination, but the sequel shows that her-prophecies thus far have been literally verified. She seemed to entertain the extraordinary opinion, that it was her peculiar mission, to not only astonish the people, but convince them also, that a person could, to all appearance absolutely die, the soul he completely separated from its carthly enement, and the first stages of decomposition even set in, and then through the potent agency of spirits, be restored to life again.

There are a few things exceedingly curious connected with this remarkable case. Many entertain the idea that she had taken poison, from the fact that she predicted the hour at which she was to "go out," as she termed it, at two o'clock in the morning, and lying. down upon the bed, finished the directions she wished to give. No one was to be allowed to watch over her but Mr. and Mrs. Preston. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan and Mrs. Dr. Dutton. The attendants positively assert that many of the predictions she made have been fully realized, and they entertain a firm conviction that resuscitation will eventually follow.

The fact that she was a very large woman, weighing 208 pounds, perfectly healthy and gushing with vitality, may have made her a desirable subject for scientists in the Spirit World to expériment upon, and who may, in this instance, fail in accomplishing what they desire, the same as the denizens of earth often do in many of their undertakings.

The statement of the Democratand Chronicle, that, although five weeks had passed, there was no more unpleasant odor than would naturally proceed from a sick room, certainly is very strange, and indicates that something quite unknown to scientists here, was at work in preventing decomposition. Since then, however, an exchange positively asserts, "There has been no sign of resuscitation, but an examination of the coroner shows that the remains are far gone in decomposition." The statement is made that the body remains at the temperature of the surrounding atmosphere, and presents the same appearance that would naturally have been expected by the skeptical. The coroner did not think there was sufficient evidence of an unnatural death to warrant a dissection of the body. According to the Albany Hoening Journal, coroner Bissell, of Geneseo, accompanied by Dr. Lauderdale and Sheriff Arnold, had been to Avon to investigate the case of Miss Bonney. They met with no resistance in gaining an entrance and making a full examination of the "corpse," as they pronounce it to be. They found no appearance of violent death or other circumstances which would warrant them in taking the body in charge, and say that the body is so far decomposed as to render dissection useless in reaching the cause of her death. Externally, it presents a full and plump appearance and dark yellow color, and is of the same temperature as the room, and does not differ from the appearance of any body which had been kept the same length of time. In conclusion the Albany Eventing Journal says, "Thus it appears that Miss Bonney actually perpetrated a very severe joke upon herself. A large portion of the community will forever believe that she took poison. If she did not, she worked her mind into such a condition of excitement that death resulted therefrom. To most people the latter theory will seem highly improbable, if, as has been in the State. Address, 46 Beach street, Boston, stated, the deceased was at the time in a state | Mass.

of perfect physical health. It is to be regretted that the coroner did not do his duty promptly, and, by a thorough investigation, ascertain whether the girl was poisoned or not.

"The examination of this late day reveals the fact that the remains have been steadily undergoing the process of decay, and are now but a putrid mass, emitting a fearful stench. This should be enough to satisfy the most ardent Spiritualist that the body can never teturn to life. Still the family refuse to be convinced, and announce their purpose to keep the remains unburied for six months."

That Miss Bonney is absolutely dead, no one who visits her doubts. Yet that, even, was strictly in accordance with her prediction, for she had positively stated, that "when the soul had entirely separated from the body the house would be shaken violently, which prediction was fully realized by those in attendance. The Rochester Union and Advertiser says, "A physician from this city—not a believer in Spiritualism-visited Avon yesterday, and made an examination of the body, as he had done before. He was not allowed to touch the body, but merely to look at it, as it was one of the conditions of the 'going out,' that no hand should be brought in contact with it. This condition has been conscientiously lived up to by her attendants. The physician states that, in his opinion, the woman is positively dead, and it is an utter impossibility for life to be brought back into the body.

"Since his last examination, about a week ago, there had no material change taken place in the appearance of the corpse. He noticed, however, a slight ring about the eyes, which was a little lighter in color than the rest of the body. This he accounts for by saying that it is a perfectly natural result of the sinking of the eyes. They at first and for some time protruded slightly from the head, such as it was predicted, would take place, but have now sunk somewhat, which gives that appearance about the eyes so often seen in a

"As regards the odor in the room, the doctor says he thought he detected, on his visit yesterday, a different scent from that which he found on his first one. This, however, he did not think arose from any decomposition. as, in his opinion, that had not yet set in. Many reports have been circulated in regard to the time which it was said Miss Bonney predicted she would remain in that state, but her friends state that she did not give the exact time when she expected to come back to life, but said that they should keep her six months, not burying her unless decomposition should set in. When the soul reentered the body, she said they would hear a sound like the booming of a cannon.

"One thing is stated by the doctor, which, if true, in certainly remarkable. About four Thus far, every thing leemed serene. Soon weeks ago, when he was about to go up to after this man and this woman, apparently entire strangers to each other, had gone each handsome flowers at Vick's store on State street. That bouquet he took with him to Avon, and it was placed in the room where the body of Miss Bonney was lying. The flowers are to this day as fresh and as fragrant apparently as when they were purchased."

The whole incident is indeed curious, and is exciting great interest. Those flowers that do not seem to perish, the fact that Miss Bonney went into a trance precisely at two o'clock, surrounded by her friends, and that her tongue has protruded from her mouth, and a slight effusion of blood been perceptible on her nostrils, as predicted, must certainly awaken within the minds of her relatives and friends an earnest desire to scrupulously follow her directions, and the circumstance (also foretold), that when her soul had been finally separated from the body, that the house would be shaken violently, must, of course, arouse within each one anticipations of favorable results, however incredulous a person may be, and her brother and others strong in the faith, declare that she will yet come to life again as perfect as before.

We entertain the opinion that "nothing is impossible with God;" that is, that any thing not beyond the limitations of reason can be performed or accomplished by the power of mind. We believe that the resuscitation of Miss Bonney is possible, but very improbable. A partial decomposition of the body, would not seriously interfere therewith, if the nerve centres remained in a perfect state of preservation. Miss Bonney owed her life to the air she breathed, the water she drank, and the food she ate, being acted upon by the stomach and lungs, and through various avenues appropriated by the system. Now, is not the mind superior to the lungs and stomach; and may it not possess power as manifested in the organization of spirit, to infuse new life into the now inanimate body of Miss Bonney? The body of the sheep manufactures wool; that of the bird, feathers; that of the seal, fine fur. They do that from the elements—food, air and water. Now, the minds of advanced spirits are superior to the body of the sheep, bird or seal, and they can go direct to the elements and manufacture wool, feathers or fine fur, without transmitting food through the body of an animal. That man is a most consummate dunce, who denies that advanced minds in spirit-life can not do that, for if not, mind is inferior to the body of a sheep, bird or seal. It is possible (though improbable), then, that spirit may infuse new life into the physical organization of Miss Bonney. Already earth'a scientists can manufacture tissues resembling the human body, and why not finally be able to cut out a diseased member, and replace a new one manufactured to order, the same as engrafting skin on a "hair lip," or any other part of the body to cover up a deformity?

T. J. 'NICHOLS' CIRCULAR.

To the Citizens of Lansing and the Public at Large.

Knowing it is my duty to expose one of the worst villains, in my opinion, that walks the streets unhung, who is now preaching at the M. E. Church at North Lansing, named Wil liam Rice, and he is denying the charges made against him at Mason, I would hereby state that nearly all is true that is charged to him. He has disgraced the church, tried to ruin my wife, and destroyed my happiness. He has written note after note to my wife, saying how much he loved her, and trying to induce her to run away with him; has met her many times in the woods south of my house, all of which I can prove by eye-witnesses. He has requested her to meet him at the train; has met her after dark in the church, when there was no one else around; has passed letters to her on the streets and in the stores, using every means in his power to break up my family, and entice my wife into criminal actions with him.

Fathers, mothers, husbands, and brothers, will you stand still and see this hydra-headed monster gather fresh victims in his soils? Shall he be allowed to ruin your wives and daughters, and go unpunished? Nay, I think not. Will the Church shield him in this vile work?

Mason, Mich., Oct. 13th, 1878.

[From the Kalamazoo Daily Telegraph, Dec. 26 A DECEITFUL PRIEST.

Our readers have seen in this paper frequent allusion to one Rev. William Rice, a minister of the Gospel of the Methodist persuasion, how he had become involved in a scandal with one Mrs. Mary Nichols, of Mason, Ingham County. Last week, at a Church trial, he was found guilty of the charges, and turned out of the ministry. In February, he is to answer in the Circuit Court of Ingham County, a charge of adultary

All the time this man has declared his innocence; he has asserted it in season and out of season, and in the face of overwhelming evidence. The amount of assurance he has manufactured has been truly wonderful.

Well, last Saturday a gentleman of this town, who occupies a very prominent posi-tion in a very honorable fraternity, received a letter from Rev. William Rice, soliciting pecuniary aid. He said he was persecuted by a ring of personal enemies, who were determined to leave no means untried to convict him of to leave no means untried to convict nim or an enormous crime, of which, thank God, he was as innocent as a babe, or words to that effect. They had partially succeeded in heap-ing obloquy upon him, but he says: "I shall be able to triumphantly vindicate my honor," etc. He appealed to the fraternity for aid with which to employ counsel for his trial in the courts, and said he would be here Monday

Last Monday evening, among the guests of the Burdick House, was one "Rev. Wm. Rice, of Lansing." Another guest was written down as "Mrs. Wallis, Saginaw." In due time, Rev. Wm. Rice went to the room which was assigned him on the second floor, and the woman went to her roem on the third floor. to their rooms, the workin slipt out and went down stairs. Not long afterwards she came back, but in going into her room she left, the door ajar, as though the possibly expected some one. Not long afterwards, the Rev. Wm. Rice, in his stocking feet, with boots in his hand, with Tarquin's ravishing strides toward his design, moved like a ghost. He stopped an instant in front of the door, when the interesting female in robes of white, approached, onened the portal and took him by the arm and led him in. The door was now closed and

The meaning of this pantomime so puzzled the proprietor of the house when the knowledge of the doings came to his ears, that he sent one of the employes to the room to tell the man to leave that room. But this summons was disregarded by the inmates, so Mr. Riley sent back this message: "Rev. Mr. Rice, if you don't get out of that room d-d quick. we will put you out." Then the reverend man did leave. After he had returned to his room and dressed himself, he wished to see Mrs. Nichols in the parlor, but this was not allowed. Then he wished to send word to her that he had concluded to go on the 2 15 train, and would like to have her go with him. This message was taken. He paid his bill and she paid hers, and the two left the hotel.

Instead of going to the train, however, it appears the two went to the City Hotel, and there was only one bed. In the morning Rice went out to see his friends to gather in assistance to enable him to carry on his suit to vindicate his fair fame. But while he was looking around, some of them had heard of his nocturnal doings, and sought to obtain evidence. Mr. H. went and found Rev. Mr. Peck, the Presiding Elder, (the gentleman who had defended Rice in his recent trial in the Church), and together they went to the City Hotel, to which place Rice had been already traced. They proceeded to room No. 40 and Mr. Peck confrounted the woman whom he recog nized as Mrs. Nichols. She was perfectly confonded when she saw him, and gave pretty direct answers to such questions as were asked her. They then left and went to Henderson & Giddings' store, where Rice was sitting as though he hoped to meet some one ke

Rev. Mr. Peck was the first speaker, "Ah, Brother Rice, how do things look now?-When did you leave home? s your wife with you?" Brother Rice responded, beaming with hope, with conscious rectitude, and confident of establishing his innocence. "Oh" said he, "Brother Peck, everything is looking ex-tremely well. The excitement is dying out, and my friends have full confidence in my power to prove myself innocent. All I want now is a little money to retain counsel." And he went on telling how sure he was of defeat ing his enemies. He remarked that his wife was not here. Rev. Mr. Peck asked him several other questions, to which William responded with truly Christian emotion. Finally Elder Peck, looking William in the eye, and putting firmness in his tone, asked him: "Brother Rice, is Mrs. Nichols in town?" Rice cowered, but, as well as he could, replied: "Why do you ask that question?" Four times Elder Peck returned the question, and four times Rice evaded an answer. "Why do you think so?" "Because, you villain, we have just seen her at the City Hotel, and learned that you and she occupied the same room, at that house. We have also learned that you were turned away from the Burdick House last night for disgraceful conduct! What have you to say to that. Brother Rice, what have you to say to that?"

go home and get out of the State as he could. Rice begged that nothing should be made known about this, as it would injure him in his trial. Rev. Mr. Peck said to him, "I defended you because I believed you to be innotended." cent. In regard to making known this matter, I feel too much humiliated to even speak of it." His other friends would give Rice no satisfaction—they said the facts were now public property and could not be suppressed even if they wished to suppress them.

We are just informed by a party concerned, that Rice's bail bond has been surrendered, and that a telegram has been sent for his ar-

December 28th—the above rascal is now in

Will the Methodist Church people hereafter bear in mind, when they accuse the great mass of Spiritualists of believing in "social freedom," that they, as a Church, are more amena ble to the charge, as a much larger per cent. of their whole number are addicted to the practice, than can be found among Spiritualists. Indeed, it is a fact that nearly all of the leaders of the "social-freedomites" in Spiritualism, come from the churches. Being old stagers, they came into the ranks of Spiritualism in its infancy in hopes to inaugurate in its ranks a a new phase of religion based upon sensualism!

Thanks to virtue and intelligence, they have been compelled to set up their goddess of lust and worship at her shrine outside of the pale of Modern Spiritualism. They have an organization of their own, exactly fitted for the Rev. Rice. Moses, Victoria and Dan will give him the right hand of fellowship, and Jamieson will record his name, while Warren takes his dollar admission fee. So while he goes out of the Methodist Church, he goes in where all is freedom, for a dollar.

Amusing.

It is really amusing to see a certain class of Woodhullites, send forth their vituperation and abuse against the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Journal! It has become accustomed to this smoke, and remains perfectly passive, moving along like an irresistible giant among a crowd of Lilliputians, and prospering amid the tempest of hisses, growing stronger every day like the oak, the king of the forest, which gains additional atrength every day, though cyclones and terrible storms beat against it, the Journal smiles defiance at each attack of its enemies, and thrusting out its vigorous tendrile, it becomes more massive and strong continually. It has grown up to vigorous manhood through the intense fires of opposition in the churches, and has nobly resisted the poisonous arrows of unfriendly Spiritualists, who have desired to control its columns or cause its death.

It is, however, particularly gratifying to us to see the Woodhullites send forth their bitter denunciations against the Journal, like his- resort in a hopeless case, to send to Mrs. A. sing serpents writhing in the agonies of death, for their lecherous anathemas return to them to roost, falling harmless from the fair robes of the Journal. Now, dear readers, whenever you hear one of these characters traducing the Journal, don't be alarmed-don't suppose that the influence created can injure us one particle—the paper will be issued regularly in the future as it has in the past, and will prosper, while its opposers will sink into merited obscurity.

One speaker, about five feet seven inches in hight, dark complexion, dilapidated appearance, changes his shirt once a month, and whose presence will remind you of an ulcer on a horse, and who is begging for engagements to lecture, takes especial pleasure in traducing the Journal. He usually carries one with him, its presence on his person indicating that it is the only really clean thing about him. He looks like a man who is dragging out a miserable existence, resembling a snake that has lost about three fourths of its skin, but which can still hiss and bite. His lectures will remind you of the renowned Rev. Philander Bragg, who was considered an expert in closing meetings. However crowded the hall, however large the assemblage, whenever he commenced talking, the meeting would "close-out" in about five minutes, leaving the "eloquent" expounder with the seats alone to greet him.

'It is one of the beauties of our philos. ophy, that even such a man as this vilifler of the Journal is, can gradually rise from the quagmire that envelops him, and become one of the best of men! We care not how low, degraded; or impure a man may be, eventually he will rise from the low conditions that surround him, and assume the stately grandeur of a true life.

But the Journal pities such men-their opposition to it will prove as unavailing as the attempt of a mole to remove a mountain, or the efforts of an oyster to subdue a whale. Pshaw! what does the Journal care for their attacks and invendoes—their resolutions their censures—their efforts to cause subscribers to discontinue—their billingsgate? Simppart is rather beneficial, for it is a sure sign of approaching death on their part. Wadsworth, Loveland, and others who had taken a contract to kill the Journal for its unflinching course in defense of right, have sunk so deep into obscurity, that the trumpet of a Gabriel could never resurrect them. Their voice is quiet, and their pulse beats only to perpetuate pigmies, equally as contemptible, send forth their tomb-like voice in opposition to it.

But even here the Harmonial Philosophy is a sovereign remedy. Time, of course, is required to work a beneficial change in their nature -hundreds of years may be required to accomplish it, but sometime they will be led to reform, to lead lives characterized by virtuous "Nothing," replied Brother Rice.

Then he became profusely apologetic, but was dismissed with contempt, and advised to look at them with pity. Although their efforts with holy words and a "smile so child-like" to injure us will prove vain, it shows their weakness and folly, in not directing their energies to effect a reformation in their own natures.

Another View of the Sherman Miracle.

A contributor to the Conhocton (Ohio) Dimocrat, gives his opinion in regard to the "Sherman Miracle," about which so much has been said by the press. He says, that Mrs. Ellen C. Sherman, wife of Moses Sherman, a Methodist minister of Pierpont, N. H., had been suffering from a) long and severe sickness, and that "she was suddenly made aware of a 'strange and unusual influence' about her, and very suddenly experienced strange sensations and feelings, and finally heard a voice (not human) which replied in answer to prayer, that her 'faith was not strong;' whereupon she prayed inwardly, 'Lord help my unbelief; and soon became conscious of returning strength. The cure was sudden and radical. And Mrs. and Mr. Sherman gave the facts to the world, attributing the result to a 'Miracle' performed by Jesus Christ, and probably there are many who will lean to this view of so strange a per-

"Now, to a well informed believer in the philosophy of Modern Spiritualism there is nothing strange or unnatural about it. The hypothesis they offer is greatly superior to that of Mrs. Sherman and husband, because in perfect harmony with the universal laws of God and nature, which are incapable of change or special miraculous suspension to any one at all familiar with spirit influence, and the feeling resulting from it in a mediumistic person, one familiar with the very sensations detailed by Mrs. Sherman while she was being healed and restored to health by spirit influence, this case is no more remarkable than numerous other cases, only they don't get to the public because the cures are performed through the agency of a professed 'Spiritualist'—as healing medium. There are many persons who slily send autographs or a lock of hair to clairvoyants and get perfectly correct diagnoses of their cases and prescriptions that effect wonderful cures, but for fear of being laughed at for tampering with 'Spiritualism' they keep still. Now as this case of Mrs. Sherman has been foisted upon the public and the most important fact about it kept from view, with the evident purpose to discredit the claims and facts of Spiritualism by giving credit to a 'miracle' to strengthen'a creed, it becomes me to puncture the deception, and give the facts which happen to be in my possession, as follows:

"Mr. Ward E. Clark, of Swift-Water, N.H., is a brother to Mrs. Sherman who was healed. The wife of Mr. Clark, sister-in-law of Mrs. Sherman, persuaded Mrs. Sherman, as a last H. Robinson, of Chicago, for an examination of her case, which was made, and forwarded to her with certain magnetized papers and plasters, which Mrs. Sherman applied and used before the 'miraculous' cure. The very directions given by Mrs. Robinson in applying her remedies, and the process of cure she points out, go to prove that it was by her remedies That Mrs. Sherman was so suddenly cured, and not by a 'miracle.' It was a 'spirit' cure, and nothing more nor less. But for fear of giving the Spiritual Philosophy credit for restored health these facts in the case were suppressed. When will deception and arrant hypocrisy cease to be practiced to appease the demands of Mrs. Grundy?"

All for Christ's Sake.

Here in the north they have a dull, monotonous way of settling church difficulties—they go into the courts of their Lord on the Sabbath day, and having duly fortified their souls with prayer and praise, they spend their week days in the courts of law; they sue and are sued, enjoin and are enjoined. And to get up a little harmless sport for their ardent followers, some dissenting minister ordains a brother dissenter as Bishop, and finally each party takes all the spoils the law and the Lord will give them, and then depart each his own way, in peace. But in the land of Orange Blossoms, Peanuts and Cotton, away down in Old North Carolina, they scorn to do their christian duty in so cold and heartless a manner—their warm southern blood boils as freely for Jesus as for any other man, and the boiling is especially strong among our Baptist brothers, owing, probably, to the greater quantity of water necessary in their devotions.

The Free-will Baptists, for years offered up their hearts and took their plunge baths in a church at Lumberton, but in time the old ones nearly all died off, and the children became more enlightened by reading the Religio-Pinnosophical Journal, and other-liberal papers, the old church was closed, and the sorrowing pastor departed to a still more benighted region, hoping to die soon, ere the whole ly nothing. Indeed, this opposition on their country becomes intelligent. The old church might have stood a monument to the departing glory of old theology, had there not been in the town another sect of Baptists, who, believing that what belonged to their master should be used by some of his children, took possession of the house of the Lord, and offered up worship therein. Now, this was against the Free-will of the Baptists who first sang a languid life! They have long since ceased to praises in it, and they took the matter into the resolve against the Journar, while other courts, not for settlement, but only to give them a little time for prayer and consideration. While thus engaged, the church, with a great noise and ringing of bells, proudly ascended heaven ward in a chariot of fire, leaving not even a policy in a bankrupt insurance company, to comfort the stricken children of Israel. This last bitter and unexpected event, was all that was needed to fire the heated blood of and bland," an anti-Free-willer, in the fear of his Lord and master, meekly raised a bludgeon and smote his recreaut brother upon the crown. and immediately the Free-willer seemed to lose all interest in the controversy. He ceased to argue or to smile, and his spirit took its flight to—the place prepared for it by his Master. This, however, does not settle the matter, and more blood is likely to flow for the sake of the Lamb.

Genrald Massey.

This distinguished poet will make a lecturing tour through the West during February and March. The New York Tribune speaks ,29 follows of him:

Mr. Massey comes to us to lecture upon literary subjects, and he brings with him a reputation as a lecturer not second to his poetical fame. In a truer sense than any English writer, he may be called the poet of the poor. But his early association with laboring people did not prevent him from becoming an unusually cultivated and ingenious scholar. He has made the most subtile and curious study of the character of Shakespear, as shown in his writings, which has as yet been put forth. He is at present engaged on a work requiring enormous research and acumen, an investiga-tion of the history of myths and the origin of language. In the meantime we do not doubt that the thousands who have read and enjoyed his pure and earnest poetry, will be glad to see and hear him on the platform.

Those desiring to engage Mr. Massey for lectures in the West, should make application at once to T. A. Bland, Manager, 287 West Madison St., Chicago, Ilí. He will deliver two lectures in this city during February.

Bastian and Taylor's Scances.

The above named well-known mediums for physical manifestations, continue to hold seances at the seance room of this Publishing House, every evening, Saturday excepted.

General satisfaction is given. The materializations are excellent. Friends of both spheres meet face to face, and not unfrequently hold social converse, and greet each other with the good old Saxon shake of the hands.

Mr. Taylor is a splendid test medium, and receives calls from 10 A. M. to 2 P. M., each day. His hand is controlled to write, often a fac-simile of the deceased friend's hand-writing. At other times he sees and describes spirits with great accuracy—hears their voices, and at other times his organs of speech are controlled by the spirit friend, who wish to communicate. He is to be found at room 12, of this Publishing House.

The Scientific Farmer.

The January number of the above named paper has been placed upon our table by Dr. Bland, the editor. It is as usual replete with interesting and valuable reading matter and richly embellished.

The Scientific Farmer is indeed beautiful to look upon, to read, interesting and instructive to all classes, but more especially to the agriculturist, for whom it is more particularly designed.

No matter how many other agricultural papers a farmer may take, his reading matter is insufficient until he takes the Scientific Farmer, C. F. Blakely & Co., 151 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Publishers.

Terms $1.50 per annum.

Br. B. M. Lowen, Orange, Mass., has our especial thanks for the club of thirty-six new subscribers, all from one small town, which he got in less than one day's time. If all of our old subscribers would but spend one day each in getting new ones for the Journal, their efforts and the Journal would disabuse public opinion, within three months, upon the question of Spiritualism and Woodhullism being synonymous. Our part of the arrangement shall be carried out even if the number is increased to one hundred thousand. Twenty-Five Cents pays for a three month's trial subscriber, remember.

Letter of Fellowship.

The Religio-Philosophical Society, on the second day of January, 1874, granted a letter of fellowship to Brether Thomas. Wardell, of Stageville, Ia.

The Poor.

Somebody writes the Times complaining that Chicago does not pay proper attention to her own poor. One thing is certain and that is, that the orthodox Christians of Chicago, do not neglect the heathen. At the present time, some publishing house in the east has inveigled the children of many of the orthodox denominations into acting as agents for the raising of money whose professed object is the sending of bible primers to the young niggers of the Southern States. This swindle is pushed more particularly among the Baptist societies, with the result that from $200 to $600 has been raised in each of them. Whether societies who do not pay their ministers, who owe pressing debts, who are persistent beggars for assistance, who never pass around the hat for the benefit of the home poor and starying, expect the Almighty will excuse these shortcomings on account of their contributing liberally to teach young niggers in the South to read, is a question which an unregenerate mortal can not answer: It is probable, however, that, if Providence takes common sense, business views of matters (and He does), He attaches more importance to paying church debts than he does to feeding bogus revivalists, or sending bible primers to young darkies in the Southern States,—Chicago Times.

Bro. A. W. STRPHENS writes that there is a good field for a medium in Minneapolis,

[Continued from First Page.] manifestations have taken place, we have had strict injunctions not to grasp the hand of the spirit. What would have been the effect on the circle or medium if this injunction had been neglected—A. It might have been fatal. The possibility is that the sympathy between the medium and this constructed body would be so great, that by interfering with it you might strike a vital part of the medium's body. Certainly illness would ensue; for every fibre and atom of that spiritual body is in direct sympathy with the medium's nervous system, and nothing is so. potent as the nervous-system to affect and overthrow life and reason. Hence you are requested not to interfere; because any direct magnetism from your bodies to that of the spirit so organized, which is infinitely more sensitive than the finest vibrations of sense you know of, would produce most disastrous results upon the medium, perhaps upon your-

Q. 2.—In very many cases, the materialized body or body formed, on coming into the room, solicits the touch, and the hand of the apirit is often held and taken by some of the visitors. Does that affect the medium injuriously?—A. It does not; because it is by special preparation. A certain preparation by the spirit is always necessary when the body of the materialized spirit may be touched. The medium is shielded, so that there may not be any wrong done. When the engineer intends his engine to go straight ahead, he sets it in motion in that direction; if any obstacle comes in the way, it produces a collision which is disastrous. A spiritual motion or spiritual form is each for a certain purpose, for a certain range of manifestations, and if it is set to work in that direction the spirit desires that intention to be fulfilled. If anything comes in contact with it, disastrous results ensue. If the spirit arranges beforehand, it is like the engineer, always ready to reverse his

Q. 3.—I believe solid bodies pass through solid bodies. Now, why do they manifest that power? It does not appear to be a spiritual one,—A. At another place we have answered the question. We will repeat the answered the question, we will repeat the answer. That all seemingly solid bodies are not solid, you are aware. There is between every atom of every solid substance and every other atom a certain amount of space, and there is also a difference in the construction of so-called solid bodies. The human body and the piece of wood are both considered solid substances; yet they are not equally solid, nor are they absolutely solid. The fibres of which the wood is composed are capable of being separated, as you are aware if you apply a wedge and hammer. Now, a sufficiently rapid separation of these atoms, and a sufficiently rapid rejoining of them, produces the same effect as though there had been no separation; so that if the human body can be passed through the wall, and if the separation and reunition of that wall take place before the atoms have had time to lose their mutual attraction, it is as if no separation had occurred. If you cut your hand and instantly reunite the flesh before the atoms have forgotten their vital attraction, the parts immediately join again. So the spirit can dismember the fibres of a coat, for instance, and remove it from the arms of a medium by instantaneously joining the fibres. It is equivalent to no separation having taken place. course no two stoms of solic cupy the same place at the same time; one or the other must give way. But the manifestation named can be done by the subtile element of spiritual control so rapidly and ingeniously that you can not see the operation, you only see the result.

Q. 4.—You have said that when the spiritform is visible, it is in consequence of being clothed with the atomic aura. Now this aura is invisible to the material eye. Will you tell us how it is that it is visible when made into the form of a spirit? A. An ultimate particle or atom is invisible when alone, but when there is a visible number they are visible. It perhaps takes an infinite number of atoms to make a speck large enough for the eye to see. There is no atmosphere visible to you in this room; if, however, you admit a ray of sunlight, you will see an infinite number of little molecules floating about in the air that before were invisible. Now the spirit condenses these molecules and makes them visible to the

Q. 5.—Some persons say that when sitting in the spirit-circle they can control the movements of a table, so as to give forth any answer they please. Does the spirit controlling the manifestations allow itself to be influenced by him, or would you consider this to be the result of the sitter's mind, or is he mistaken? 1. We would like to have the person prove that he can do so. We have never discovered a person who can so control the manifestations. If so, he must be in direct sympathy with the controlling spirit, and, therefore anticipate the answers the spirit would give. But we have yet to learn that any person can so control the answers. Q. 6.—A lady tells me that some twelve years ago she lost her grandmother, who had been as it were her parent. The day she lost her grandma she saw her crossing a field. though she had not seen her for some days. She called attention to the fact to a companion, but who saw nothing. She noted the hour, and found that the old lady had passed away at that time. It is equally singular that every Christmas eye since, she has seen her grandma. Being a nervous woman, she invariably loses her consciousness for a certain time. Last Christmas eve she explained this to a friend she was staying with, and it was agreed to take every precaution to prevent the occurrence. It is equally singular that at a certain part of the evening this lady turned to go into a room, and the moment she lost sight of her friend the grandma touched her. She immediately fell back unconscious, causing considerable confusion. Does Mrs. Tappan think she is a medium? And what is the law that governs this circumstance?—A.

The young lady is unquestionably a medium, and if she were to give her grandma a little more cordial reception—since undoubtedly that departed spirit desires to hold converse with her grandchild—if she were to receive her at other times, the unpleasantness of the visitation would go away. Sometimes the grand-mothers in spirit-life are as persistent as in

Q. 7.—Would it do the lady good to attend a seance?—A. It would be quite advisable for her and her friends to sit in circle together, and thus avoid any unpleasant occurrence growing out of a sudden control.

Q. 8.—I have observed—whether rightly or wrongly I do not know—that the similarity of the spirit to the medium depends in a very great measure upon the construction of the circle. We admit no sceptics. We have sometimes a more congenial atmosphere and more congenial sitters; on such occasions the similarity is not so marked?—A. We stated in explanation that when conditions are favourable, or when the manifestations occur after the second or third time, the appearance does resemble the medium. But as the spirit gains power, the similarity is less. So if you would aveid changing the members of the circle, but always keep the same persons for a long time, tist Chi you would find that resemblance decrease. Of fifty?"

course the more favorable the conditions the less the spirit has to depend upon the model upon which the spiritual body has to be conupon which the spiritual body has to be constructed. It would do well for all investigators to have as nearly the same persons each successive evening; because naturally follows that in such a delicate and subtile experience your minds become harmonious, and the introduction of a new element destroys these conditions, and you have to begin anew each

W. L. Jack, M. D., can be addressed until further notice at Beverly, N. J. He will be in New York City about the third week in January; in Springfield Mass., about the second week in February, and remain there about four days. In the latter part of March, he will be in Boston. The Doctor says his health is improving so rapidly that he expects to be able to soon resume his labors as a professional medium. He regrets that he is not able to respond to the numerous calls he is receiving from different parts of the country to lecture. In speaking of the approval of the course the Journan is taken by the great mass of the people, he says, "an orthodox minister told me to-day that he had just sent a year's subscription to you for it, for his wife."

THE ANGELS:

AN IMPROVISATION BY M. S. TOWNSEND.

They gather about us when weary, And strengthen our hearts with love-Sweet angels who've passed on before us. To beautiful mansions above.

How can we but court their sweet presence, And welcome their songs as they sing, Dear spirits, who've lived in our loving. Now mounted on heavenly wings.

Ohi the beautiful bands all about us, Whose hearts are so full of sweet peace, Who gather in silence to bless us, And cause all our joys to increase. Our mothers who held us so fondly,

In love nestled close to the heart, Are found with the band of sweet angels From us they can never depart. Our fathers whose wise holy counsel, Seemed the strength of a God when twas

Are coming with mothers and dear ones, With these glorious angels from heaven.

Our brothers and sisters, sweet treasures, That blossomed at home with our love. They come to enjoy all our pleasures, And still in our circles to move.

Yes! the gates are ajar for poor mortals, And the earth is ablaze with the light, As it breaks through the glorious portals. And scatters the shades of night.

Though storm clouds may gather around us, And heavy the thunders may roar, Dear angels will guide and direct us, Till our barges are safe moored in shore.

When safely we've entered the kingdom And joined the dear spirits of peace, Our anthems shall ring thro' the heavens And all of our pleasures increase.

Courts of Conciliation.

A NEW MOVEMENT.

At the Seventh Annual Meeting of the At the Seventh Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Peace Society, of which the venerable Lucretia Mott is President, held in this city, J. Murray Spear presented the following paper on the establishment of Courts of Conciliation. It certainly contains suggestions worth the careful consideration of thoughtful and heavylent parsons. thoughtful and benevolent persons:

To some extent-one class of persons live, thrive and grow rich on the follies, crimes, diseases of others.

Often this may be seen in the workings of what pertains to so called courts of justice. Two persons are in dispute, and in the heat of passion they rush into litigation. Knowing almost nothing of law; less of the practice of the court, they each employ persons to act in their hehalf, the counsel retained may not have the least interest in the case as such, or in the persons by whom they are engaged, but both hope by their efforts to secure wealth, or what may be of more value, fame. A case taken into court may be continued for months, and perhaps from year to year. The expenses of litigation are very great in this country but are not so heavy as in England. Ordinarily it is the interest of lawyers to have cases continued when the parties in dispute can pay handsomely for services rendered; but what is the fact in respect to the poorer classes who seek to settle disputes before legal tribu-

May it not in truth he said that what is usually called justice is sold to the highest bidder! When Horne Tooke was told the courts were open, he replied "So is the London Tavern." Persons may enter one as well as the other, get what they wish if they have the means to purchase. The Modocs were tried by a military court, convicted as everybody knew they would be, and were speedily executed in the presence of five hundred of them in number; their wives and helpless children being compelled to witness the awful spectacle of the execution of their husbands and fathers, but these ignorant savages, poor in purse are of little account in the eyes of our civilization. The friends of peace did what they could in their behalf, but they are only a handful in this great nation.

The present system of litigation is further open to objection not only on account of its cost and the consequent advantages the wealthy and the educated classes have over the poorer and ignorant, but it lacks the love element which serves to quiet, subdues the passions, conciliates, and in fact is the mightiest power in the moral world. An apostle said, "God is in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing unto men their trespasses; and heth committed unto us the ministry of reconciliation." It is safe that they who love truth and justice and peace, are reconciled to God and act in harmony with the Divine will. Ours is a reconciliation so-ciety. We preach peace to them who are afar aff, and to them who are near by.

There is yet another objection to the courts of our time—they lack the gentle, considerate, matronly counsel and religious influence of woman. Purely masculine as they are, how can they wisely judge of the needs, temptations and trials of women? It is of little use to beseech individuals or communities to cease to do evilunless we can teach them how to do well. What then, it will be asked, is proposed to be done? Perhaps not much should be attempted in the outset. Great and radical changes should not be hastily undertaken. A prophet wisely said, "he that believeth shall not make haste." There must be ample time for the ideal to grow with the actual, the abstract to the concrete. Much may be done in the settlement of disputes by arbitration, as has been conclusively shown in the recent action of England and America. While it is the main purpose of the Pennsylvania Peace Soclety to teach the world to settle national disputes, it cheerfully does what it can to promote peace, in families, neighborhoods, and in wider circles. The Universal peace Union, of which this Society is a branch, have agents at work who have made it their business to settle family, neighborhood and other disputes, and their efforts have been as successful as could in any reason be expected, growing out of this labor it has come to be seen that there is need of establishing Courts of Conciliation, which, if discreetly managed, may prevent crime, instruct the ignorant, settle differences, and in numerous ways be of service, especially to the poorer and less informed classes.

This court should have an office in a favorable section of the city, in which to begin its work. I should have a hoard of arbiters composed of women and men, of different employment and complexions and varied social posi-tions, and it should be purely a beneficent as it will be an educative institution. It should have a competent secretary who should keep a careful record of all its proceedings, open to the inspection of interested persons, who might desire to contribute to its support. It is believed that in due time this conciliatory la-bor would meet the approval of thoughtful persons, and that eventually the State would afford its countenance and lend it pecuniary assistance. This plan of conciliatory action has been laid before the minds of several legal gentlemen, some able merchants and others, and has met their cordial approbation. Mr. Spear would be glad to confer with persons who may take interest in this work. Address J. M. Spear, 1114 Callowhill Street, Philadel-

Honorable Dealing.

All of our subscribers, excepting those who are under the present proposition of twenty-five cents for three months' trial, are expected to inform us, if they wish to have their paper discontinued, when their time is up, three weeks beforehand. To do so, will cost them only a cent by using a postal card. If the paper is suffered to be continued on credit, it is, dishonorable to then order it discontinued without, at the same time, remitting all dues, including the two weeks the paper will necessarily come after such order is sent.

We are very anxious that our friends, all over the country, should see the Little Bouquer, that they may the better judge of its beauty and its merit. To that end we will send to any address, specimen copies from May to January, on receipt of ten cents a

This proposition will place the whole nine months' issue in the hands of the family of children for the nominal sum of ninety centsa single dollar will pay for the nine last months, together with the forthcoming February issue,

A dollar thus invested for the benefit of the youth and children of any family, will be of more real value and deeper interest to them than any other reading matter of the same expense ever placed in their hands.

A New Proposition-Only Twenty-Five Cents for Three Months.

For the purpose of placing the Religio-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL in the hands of thousands of liberal-minded people who have for years stood aloof from Spiritualism, and never taken a Spiritual paper on account of the free-love infamy which has, in their minds, tainted everything appertaining to Spiritualism, we propose to send the Journal for three nonths to new subscribers for the nominal sum of Twenty five Cents.

This is just one-half of the cost of the pure white paper on which it is printed. At the end of that time the paper will be discontinued unless renewed, as that will give ample time for such subscribers to determine the fact that neither this paper nor the great mass of Spiritualists favor, in the least degree, the so-called "social freedom Jinfamy," which has so unjustly brought reproach upon Spiritualism,

This proposition will stand good for a short time only; due notice of its withdrawal will be given through the columns of the paper.

We trust that all true Spiritualists who are already familiar with the Journal will exert themselves to place the same in the hands of their neighbors.

By a day's effort each old subscriber can procure from ten to one hundred trial subscribers. How many will engage in this good work? No one will deny that Spiritualism is now passing through a most trying ordeal. We are making history. Our philosophy in its purity, certainly should be placed before the people, and now is the time for all to work to that end.

We hope to place the Journal in the hands of twenty thousand liberal-minded people, who have never before taken a Spiritual paper, by the middle of January. Pass in the names of subscribers, friends, and we will guarantee that you and new subscribers will say that the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL is every way a most acceptable, and valuable exponent of true Spiritualism.

A New Book.

For Twenty-five cents, I offer you a book that contains more truth concerning Christ and his Apostles, than has been given to the world since the Christian era. It is sifted. from the New Testament, and from the history of Josephus. One tells what was to come to pass, and the other what did come to pass. After giving their double-meaning, allegoric history a thorough sifting, I cut off their notes and arrive at the following conclusions: That Christ and his Apostles were gross impostors; that Josephus and St. Paul were no one else but Christ himself, after he had risen from the dead, still had never been dead. I carry them through the Jewish wars, where their awful threatenings were fulfilled. and they had put their enemies under their feet, and one of their number on the throne.

A RESPONSE.

To the "Protest of the Minority" in the Chicago Convention.

BY MRS, SUSAN C. WATERS.

Those of us who were among the first to express our opposition to the ''new departure,' have waited long and anxiously for that general awakening of Spiritualists, which should enable them to see the perverted use that was being made of the name and organizations of Spiritualism. The increasing murmur of public opinion, the earnest protests of many correspondents of the Journal, and the flagrant offensiveness of the new departurists at their late meetings and at the Chicago Convention, all indicate that such an awakening has taken

We hall the earnest protest—the minority report of Judge Holbrook and his co-workers, as the dawn of a brighter and better day. It is to be hoped that Spiritualists, as a whole, is to be hoped that Spiritualists, as a whole, will not only protest against having the beautiful and consoling philosophy of Spiritualism appropriated to base and unhallowed purposes, but that they will also act with both energy and concentrated judgment, in saving Spiritualism from becoming a wreck among the breakers of false philosophy and impure morals

I do not propose to review the offensive des tails of this subject, because that has been earnestly done, but I would say that Spiritualists in this locality are, with only two or three exceptions, firm opposers of the new departure theories, and staunch advocates of a Spiritual ism that recognizes virtue as a moral obliga-tion, which we all owe to ourselves and to the world of humanity around us.

To protest is easy, but to unite upon the condition of reform is far more difficult. I very much like the last clause of the minority report, which proposes a restrictive limitation to Spiritualism proper. Unquestionably it is just what is needed, to prevent a recurrence similar to the offensive leadership which has assumed present organizations and dedicated them to the most corrupting theories that ever disgraced humanity. This experience warns us not to build after the manner of the associations now in existence.

The important question of method now comes up. As protestant, or protesting Spiritualists, what points can we agree upon? he minority report recommends that a "call be made for a National Convention for the purpose of forming "a National Spiritual

In the past, many have objected to organization, but the order of things which we now wish to oppose and counteract, is already organized, standing shoulder to shoulder, and fully equipped to carry their "institution" into new territory. We, therefore, can not fail to see that the opposite course leaves our cause at the disposal of those who lack practical sagacity and well balanced faculties, while they at the same time thirst for leadership and usurp a dictatorship over the public activities of Spiritualism.

Looking hopefully forward to the action of such a convontion as is proposed, I venture to ask whether the proposition is for a mass convention or a delegate convention? If it should be a delegate convention the number of members will of course be so much more limited, that it would seem desirable to im prove upon the former method wherein societies have sent delegates, but without giving them any instructions to assist them in carrythem any instructions to assist them in carrying out the wishes of the majority. In such cases the action of the delegates was based upon and entitled to the weight of individual opinion only. It is to be hoped that our so-cleties will in the future feel it their privilege and obligatory upon them, to take such action as will represent their numbers and the carrier as will represent their numbers and the opinions of the majority through their delegates. If we are to have a new and spiritual organization, it must necessarily be on a basis alike acceptable to morality and reason. - While it should be definite enough to exclude the cor-rupting elements which have given odium to the deceased "American Association," will it not in the future, need the power to purify itself of those who may corrupt and disgrace it? Speculative beliefs need not be uniform or limited; but the law of human nature defines morality and purity, therefore they can not be matters of indifference to us. The le-gitimate work of a Harmonial Philosophy is to direct and assist, not to ignore or eradicate the moral sentiment. The theory that freedom requires opportunity for lawlessness, is false and pernicious to an extent which baffles

If Spiritualists can not unite on a platform that contains a moral plank, then it will be useless to claim Spiritualism as a religion, and we may, in that case, very properly lower the sails of "glad tidings" which we have with so much enthusiasm and exultation thrown to the breeze. We may as well ponder the question whether glaring immorality and criminality shall be any bar to membership in our Spiritualist societies? In the dead and dying societies the payment of one dollar yearly has been the only qualification for membership. Is it at all surprising that Spiritualism is in bad odor, when morality and virtue have been ignored as matters to be accepted or rejected at pleasure, and the all-absorbing dollar made the only test of fitness for participation in the visible work of Spiritualism? We can hardly conceive how any society, however beautiful its philosophy of morals might be, could keep itself in a desirable or influential condition, if all its unruly members were, as co-workers, retained in full fellowship and equal, or, as is often the case, greater prominence than those whose lives best express the principles of the society. We must at least confess that a society which does not define itself at all, is liable to be defined variously and often unwisely by those who take it upon themselves to be its representatives. If organization upon a specified moral basis, does not meet the approbation of the more radical Spiritualists, we have at least seen the folly of organizing the cautious, reflecting and moral element of society, into one body, with the impulsive, fa-natical, indiscreet, and immoral element, with-out making any specification regarding the basis of that alliance:

Are there not two ways of crushing truth— two ways of shutting off the inspirations of the higher spheres; one the limitations of creeds, the other the irrational license that in the name of freedom defies truth, decency and morality? Can a Spiritualism which embraces a moral requirement, be fully expressed except by giving that requirement a public recognition in our basis of organization? A Spiritualism which ignores our moral obligations, we can not afford to foster or accept. We are endeavoring to shake off all association with that form of Spiritualism which, by teaching the prostitution of the spiritual nature to basic animal propensities, defeated itself. Unquestionably we should be liberal enough not only to tolerate, but to extend a measure of respect to all shades of speculative belief, but can have little, if any, confidence in the usefulness of the compromising spirit, when purity and morality are at stake, for there is in purity and morality no half-way ground that is safe to stand upon.

In the past, it has transpired that those who refused to be committed to any specified basis of thought or action, flave accepted the yoke of leadership as submissively as the most devout sectarian. That yoke we have found too heavy and too grievous to be borne. The proposition (contained in the minority protest) that the extent of the forbearance and liberali ty of our organization, shall be decided by the vote of two thirds of the members thereof duly assembled, seems a wise and just provision and would doubtless obviate a diseatis faction such as most of us have at some time felt in being obliged to see the time of large meetings consumed on subjects that were agree able to very few except the speakers. We must be aware that the most impulsive and fanatical mind is the most receptive to error, and at the same time the most enthusigntic declaimer of its opinions, therefore an absolutely free platform can not express the views of the majority, as fully as a platform on which there is a measure of restriction consented to by the majority, and which the majority has a discretionary power of waiving.

The present effort being to counteract the effect of too much license, may possibly in some points need what would seem like a near approach to stringency, in order to prove itself a disinfectant powerful enough to bring the cause of Spiritualism back to healthy conditions. Our sense of right has been so outraged, that so far as I have conversed with Spiritualists upon the subject, I think them more ready to organize upon a definite than an indefinite basis; that is upon a basis of moderate and reasonable limitation. If we can not agree upon a mutually acceptable basis for national organization; or if the expense of attending a national convention in any considerable numbers should prevent its consummation, it is quite possible that we might, at least for the present, agree upon a national committee to act as receivers, preservers and (if so decided) as publishers of information, and of our 'reports,' while we prosecute the work of reformation by organizing our local societies; each society organizing on the best and most reformatory basis that is practicable in its particular locality. The basis of these organizations reported to a national organizations reported to a national organizations. tional committee, (and if preferable through State committees in each State) the average basis of all the organizations would give a pretty fair expression of the will of the majority of Spiritualists.

The spirit of the article by A. J. Davis, in the Journal of Oct, 4th, indicates what seems a wise policy, if applied to this movement. Its admonition is not to be in haste for large numbers, but to build on a sure foundation of right, trusting to the omnipotence of just principles, for the strength, future numbers, comeliness, and acceptability of our societies, which are to be the visible body of Spiritualism. We could not wish to be over-religious with anything similar to dogmatic piety; but we have as much right to, and use for, morality, as any sect of religionists, and may not unwavering fidelity to principles be deemed the test of a truly Harmonial Philoso-

I do not express these thoughts in the expectation that they will be used as finalities, but simply throw them out as suggestions, to awaken and call out the views of others on the same, or similar points, that we may see where the majority stand, and what type of organization will be likely to find countenance from the majority of Spiritualists. Bordentown, N. J.

Shall we have a National Convention of Spiritualists Advocating Progres-. sive Civilization?

Bro. Jones:—Up to the time of reading the report of the late convention of polygamic Spiritualists, held in Chicago, where they "took themselves clean out of Spiritualism," I had entertained some feelings of respect for them in the opinions they held, believing that they, or at least many of them, were honest and sincere in their propagation. But since that convention, and the manner it treated the protest of that honest, faithful and pure minded minority, shutting off all debate on the subject, and treating the opposers to the usual rehash of slang, stereotyped by Woodhull & Claftin's Weekly, all my feelings of respect are gone, and it now appears to me that, instead of advocating in their peculiar doctrines what they believe to be higher and better principles of life and progress, they rather seek to degrade Spiritualists and the world to their own plane of lust, and assume the garb of inspiration and the influence of Spiritualism in its national organic form, to accomplish their foul purpose by. Not only their shrinking from an open field and a fair investigation, convinces me of this, but I can more readily believe that men and women in this enlightened age, and educated as these leaders have been, who will foist and advocate doctrines and practices before the world, so at variance with the moral, social and spirit-ual sense, not only of this, but every civilized and most of the barbarous nations and tribes of earth, are downright dishonest, deprayed and willing to live in their passional and ani-mal natures, than that they are unconsciously so much mistaken in their views. That is to say, I have less confidence, in their integrity than I have in their intelligence.

But enough of this. Were it not for the peculiar situation in which Spiritualists are placed in regard to them and their movements, I would say, let the whole matter alone, and let them, with their doctrines, as soon as possible find the deep oblivion to which they are hastening, and perpetuate not their disgrace by either requiem or epitaph. But this can not be. They hold still in the public mind, a relation to Spiritualism that can not be ignored and of which the public can be be ignored, and of which the public can be disabused in one way and one way only; and that is by a distinct and separate organization, in the constitution of which there shall be a in the constitution of which there shall be a total disavowal of polygamy in all its forms.

It should totally repudiate the action of the Universal Association of Spiritualists and ignore the society itself, and, in its declaration to the world, give distinctly as a reason for this action, that said society has taken itself 'clean out of Spiritualism,' by adopting and advocating as its chief corner stone, principles and practices of life inimical to the highest interests of individuals, families and society, and totally opposed to progress and reform. This will at once relieve the public mind of its fears and suspicions of true Spirmind of its fears and suspicions of true Spiritualism, place its advocates in their true light before the world, restore the confidence of the community at large, and elicit the respect of the age. It will also leave the "new departure" to navigate alone its wood (en) hull, until it founders, as it surely must, in the eluggish bay of forgetfulness, far away from the track of any reform barge that navigates the sea of progress.

This convention should be a delegate body, This convention should be a delegate body, and no one admitted as a member who comes not with credentials representing him or her as being an active member of, and appointed by, the society he or she represents. This plan will necessitate the thorough reorganization of a large proportion of the societies in the country, and it is sincerely to be hoped incubus as Moses-Woodhullism.

PAINT VALLEY, O.—E. H. Spencer writes.—Allow me to call your attention to the noteworthy fact that President Grant has been able to send his late message to Congress without in any way alluding to a Superintending Providence and his blessings upon the people. It is the only instance of the kind, probably, since the organization of the Government. What will the clergy think of it?

that Spiritualists everywhere will see and feel the necessity of prompt and thorough action on the subject. This is no time to valcilate or defer. The time for action is at hand. The public will continue to judge Spiritualism by Hull, Woodhull & Co., until such action is taken in earnest. -

I am and have been for years well aware of the fact enunciated of late so frequently by others, that we shall find our rank and file rapidly recruited by men and women of talent, wealth and influence, so soon as we are free from this incubus that has so long impeded the progress of the cause.

As regards the time and place of holding such convention, there will necessarily be a variety of differing sentiments and opinions, and my mind will only be one of the many, yet I would suggest that it be as early in the Summer of 1874 as practicable—say sometime in the month of June. I am aware that Spiritualists are tired of traveling long distances, paying railroad fare, hotel bills, and lastly, high rent for halls to attend conventions, and comparatively few are able to endure the expense. Large central cities have been selected as places of holding these meetings, chiefly, l presume, on account of their greater facilities for the accommodation of delegates. This, I think is doubtful economy at least, for board bills in the cities are not only higher, but hall rent proportionally higher also. Any town of 8,000 to 10,000 inhabitants, if proper arrangements are made beforehand, can be made to accommodate the few hundred delegates who may compose and conduct a national convention, and at cheaper rates for board than can be obtained in the cities.

In regard to a hall, I have this to say, that myself and a few others in this vicinity, intend, another year, to possess ourselves of a tent for holding meetings, of suitable dimensions to seat 1,500 to 2,000 people, the free use of which I will profer for a National Convention, at any point between New York and Chicago, provided the convention will pay simply its transportation from Hornellsville, N. Y., to and from the place of meeting, which will be but a trifle.

There are many towns in this State that are important railroad centers, as Corning, Hornellaville, Elmira, or Avon with its large hotel accommodations, used as cures and places of Summer resort. With few guests before the first of July, there could be accommodated, probably five or six hundred people, at such convention, and at low rate for board. It is easy of access from four directions by railway, and, probably no place in the State offers' better facilities than this. I throw these out as suggestions simply, having no choice myself when or where the convention is held, so it is held, and the great body of Spiritualists placed in their true light before the world, and the world made to know and see that we fully believe and claim that the Woodhull inspiration respecting the social reform comes from the base brain of those who advocate it, and finds its expression in their animal natures, and not from the Spirit-world, whose breathings to us have ever been those of purity and fidelity.

Bro. Jones, go on in your good work and the angel world and all generations of men-will bless you as one of the world's greatest benefactors.

MT. MORIAH, MO.—Alfred Carpenter writes.— After such a fight and victory over the Woodhulls and their infamous doctrines, I could no longer delay sending the one thing needful to sustain you

BIG RAPIDS, MICH. - R. Densmore writes. - As I am favorable to your policy relative to the free-lust question, and as you manifest a disposition to expose all humbugs, I feel disposed to give my support to your paper, so send you $3,00.

HELRON, NEB.-W. F. Folles writes.-I was sorry that the Journal had to be used to show up the wickedness of Woodhull & Co. It was a filthy job but was very necessary to be done. I am glad that you had resolution to do it.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—H. Morse writes.— May God and the angels bless you, dear old soul, for the work you are doing. We know they will. $7.50 inclosed for JOURNAL and LITTLE Thanks for the interest you take in circulating the Journal and Little Bouquet. We often hear of the good work you are doing. May good angels continue to guide you.—[Ed. Journal. ALBANY, WIS .- Harry VanWart writes .- I sent you last night four subscribers. My friends say that all Spiritualists are free-lovers. I want them to see that is not so, and that is why I want them to read your paper for three months. Thanks, Brother. The Journan is doing its work well. When you see the hells of licentiousness sending out their howling emisasries to howl down the most radical and yet the most truthful and philosophical paper published in the world, you may know it is doing its work well in cleansing the Augean stable. The people will soon understand what "social freedom" means, and all high-minded Spiritualists will spurn the doctrine, as coming from the lowest hell of infamy. Let every well-wisher for true Spiritualism see that the Journal goes broadcast over the land, for three months, and our cause will stand forth like gold from the refiner's fire, altogether more beautiful for the terrible ordeal it is now passing through,-[Ed. Journal.

SPRINGVILLE, MICH.—M. J. Marlatt writes. Enclosed you will find remittance for the renewal of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. I have taken it for one year, and like it very much. You will find me a subscriber as long as you stand erect for truth and virtue.

COLUMBUS, KY.—8. L. Ruffner writes.—I know of no weekly that equals the JOURNAL as an expounder of the Philosophy of Life. It has been about two years since I met with your paper. At that time I was a Materialist, and had, of course, no belief in a future life.

XENIA, OHIO.—D. B. Tiffamy writes.—Your course in the Hull and Woodhull matter is highly approved by the Spiritualists of this section of the country. We would like lecturers passing this way to give us a call, but not if of the Hull-Woodhull stripe.

HARBOR CREEK, PA.—Jeremich Adams writes.
—I read in one of your Journals about a haunted house in Wisconsin. My communications reveal to me that it was caused by the spirit of a hunter from Rochester, N. Y., that was murdered there. I claim to be a medium, and receive many tests that satisfies me. , I am 80 years old.

MILWAUKEE, WIS,-E. W. Baldwin writes. I send you two papers, giving accounts of C G. Jacoba seances, acknowledging considerable for Christians. I believe you would not intentionally injure any medium, but in the case of Jacobs, you have someway misapprehended.

Your Jacobs medium is not only an arrant imposter as a medium, but he admitted the same repeatedly in this city.

Spiritualists who countenance him as a medium will live to regret it.—[Ed. Journal.

LAPEER, MICH.—J. B. Evans writes.—Oh! how it makes my sad heart leap with joy when your good Journal comes to hand, loaded with love from our friends in the Summer land. I pray that the spirit of love and purity from the higher spheres; may pervade every avenue of your heart and mind, and its fruits spread broadcast through

BLOOMING GROVE, KA.—N. C. Lane writes. For a long time I have been a weekly receiver and a constant reader of your noble paper, and to say that I dearly praise its noble and fearless advocacy of those high and lofty principles which are so ennobling to the human character, is but a feeble expression of my real sentiments in its behalf. Your fearless handling of the social-freedom question has made you very many friends in UTICA, N. 3X.—Mrs. A. S. Pond writes.—Inclosed, please first post-office order for five dollars, three dollars to continue my subscription for the Journal another year, and two dollars for the pleasure you have given me, for the noble stand you have taken and the heavy blows you have given against the abominable doctrines put forth by Vic. Wood, Hull & Co. Long may you live, and long may the good old JOURNAL carry truth and joy to all who read it.

Thanks, dear Sister, and we transfer the same to the LITTE BOUQUET fund, hoping the children, when growing to men and women, will read this over and oper and over again and bless you for this little sum that was appropriated for their benefit.--[ED. JOURNAL.

OAKLAND, CAL.—R. B. Hall writes.—Mediums of a world-wide reputation, could be of great service to us and to themselves, about this time in California. To attract attention, we need something out of the ordinary course of spirit manifestations. Brother Foster will spend but a few thing out of the ordinary course or spirit maintest-ations. Brother Foster will spend but a few weeks here, when he will leave for Australia. I wonder if Brother Slade or Mansfield will oblige us with a visit: If one or both of them will fol-low in the wake of Foster's furor, they will not only reap a rich reward in converts, but in gold dollars.

AUBURN, NEW YORK.—C. A. Warden writes. -Enclosed please find remittance for which I deaire you to send your paper to my mother, a patriarch in the faith, having carefully investiga-ted and found the truth of the fact that if a man die he shall live again, very many years ago. Her first investigations were made with "Cathle" Fox first investigations were made with "Cathie" Fox as medium, and the beautiful philosophy then, and since then, taught has enabled her to pass through great afflictions with a heroic spirit and a full reliance upon the knowledge that her home beyond was all the while being made ready, and growing more beautiful by reason of the very discipline her trials gave her.

JOLIET PRISON, ILL.—John Jacobs writes.—
'According to my best judgment, I will frankly state to you my position, wishes, feelings and intentions. I am in prison, deprived of liberty, but not of hope, for the Lord has graciously given me a clean heart, and I hope to use it in his service. Had'I kept that parting wish of my dear mother, when she said with tears in her eyes, "Resist strong drink—never touch liquor." Alas! what have I done? I have taken a drink, and how many more, Safan only knows. I have been reading your paper constantly for nearly a year, but am now separated from the party I received it from. We are greatly interested in Spiritualism. I say we, because there are four of us in our shop, who have been moved into a different department. I wish you would send me your paper, although I have 3 years to stay here yet, but I am only 26 years of age, and hope to get out of this and do to you and my fellow men as I wish to be done by.

SHREVEPORT, LA.-E. J. Piggott writes .-The cause of progression is slowly gaining ground here, notwithstanding the illiberal opposition it has to contend with. We are few, but united. All favor the noble stand you have taken in the cause of truth and purity. We have developed in our little circle several excellent writing mediums, etc. and only your read a read and analysis. etc., and only now need a good organized head. Financially we are not able to pay the expenses of good lecturers and mediums from abroad; but can extend to them genuine home hospitality. So, Friend Jones; if you know of any earnest worker in the cause, who desire to increase his field of usefulness, we shall be pleased to give him a brotherly greeting.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Mrs. L. A. Hutchins I am nove a drawing teacher in the public school of this city, have taught penmanship and drawing in Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati; have moved in many circles of Spiritualism, and have been guided by the invisibles mysteriously. I am much interested in psychometry. Am now boarding in the family of a good speaking medium—she only speaks in her own family circle, and a few friends come in—among the number is Mr. W., one of the speaks in her own family circle, and a few friends come in—among the number is Mr. W., one of the members of the School Bosrd. He is also a medium. They call me a teaching medium. I can teach almost any one to make a potrait with brush or pen and India ink, and when they have made one, they can make another without assistance. There are a number of circles in this city held appears the unper ten. among the upper ten.

MANKATO, MINN.—C. H. Andrews writes.—
Speaking favorably of the healing powers of Br.
Packard, says further, may the good angels pay you for your kindness to a sick brother. Your letter cheered me up. Oh! it does me so much good to think that an entire stranger should do me such a kindness. I believe that I am going to get well after all. So keep on in your straight get well after all. So keep on in your straight and broad way, humanity would appreciate your efforts and come to the rescue. You have set spiritualism right before the world. Some of the weak-kneed thought you was too severe, and between them and the Woodhullites you have had a rough time, but thanks be to intelligence, you came through unscathed, a fearless champion of

MARIETTA.—Mrs. E. B. Atkinson writes.—
My heart overflows with sorrow on account of being left alone and deprived of the companionship of my dear husband, who has lately left this world of care and suffering, for a beautiful home in the Summer-land. He was a kind, noble man, and is now having his reward for the bold stand he took in defending our angel born philosophy. He also rejoiced to know that you fearlessly advocated purity in heart and life, and exposed the foul fiend, free-loveism, that had so steadily crept in among us. He knew our cause was safe in your hands, and often said the Angel-world had made a wise selection in placing you in your present position. Well, Brother Jones, go on and stand at your post, and heaven will guide and direct Attention Opium Exters?

Mrs. A. H. Robinson has just been furnished with a sure and hermless specific for curing the appetite for opium and all other harcotics, by the Board of Chemists, in spiritlife, who have heretofore given her the necescary antidote for curing the appetite for tobacco, and the proper ingredients for restoring hair to all bald heads, no matter of how long standing.

Mrs Robinson will furnish the remedy, and nd it by mail or express to all who may apply for the same within the next sixty days, on the receipt of five dollars (the simple cost of the ingredients), and guarantee a most perfect curs or refund the money, if directions accompanying each package are strictly followed.

The remedy is harmless, and not unpalatable.

She makes this generous offer for the double purpose of introducing the remedy, and for bringing the cure within the reach of the poorest people who use the pernicious drug. The expense of a perfect remedy will not exceed the cost of the drug for continuing the deleterious habit one month!

Address Mrs. A. H. Robinson, Adams St., and Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

We have so much confidence in the ability of the Board of Chemists and Doctors who control Mrs. Robinson's mediumship, that we unhesitatingly guarantee a faithful execution of the above proposition.-[En. Jour-

A-VILUDE.

The only Game ever published in the Interest of Science. Amusing, Entertaining and Instructive, to Young and Old.

It is the best incentive to the systematic study of Natural History possible, and the most entertaining game in the market. No one tires of it as a pastime, old and young alike play it with unabated enjoyment, while children pass hours in looking at the pictures of Birds and studying their descriptions. "The method of play is new and exceedingly interesting, while the valuable information afforded by the fine engravings of birds on one-half the cards and the accurate descriptions printed on the others, form a highly interesting chapter in natural history. This game of Avilude is an excellent addition, to our home amusements, and the very reasonable price at which it is offered, must insure for it an immense sale."-Chris-

The New Wonder! NATURE'S HAIR RESTORATIVE!

"Ring out the Old, Ring in the New."

Contains no Lac Sulphue, no Sugar of Lead, no Litharge, no Nithate of Silver is not a health nor hair Destructive.

Articles called by its name are dyss, and it is well known that they destroy, not restore, the hair. This is the first and onex real restorative ever discovered.
It is as clear as crystal, pure as amber—a delicious which; having however, a slight dust from its perfume.
It keeps the hair fresh, moist, soft, tractile.
It restores gray hair to its original color by the simple to restote gray has no test original color by the simple process of new growth.

Use it straight along, and at seventry you will have the hair you wear at seventreen or twenty-neven, as its habitual use is a certain preventive of falling of, haldness, and gray bair. It relieves, and removes all tendency to *Asadocks*s,

It relieves, and removes all tendency to AGGAGASS, which have like causes.

Infinitesimal animalcules, discoverable only with a powerful microscope, infest the roots of the human liair and scalp when neglected and nahealthy. ADITION JOURNAL:—For the benefit c my friends and the world, I desire to make this brief fixteement.

I have been almost entirely bald for about six years. Had tried almost everything that I could hear recommended, and firmly believed that nothing could restore mended, and firmly believed that nothing could restore my hair.

One year ago this month I wrote Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the healing medium, 148 Fourth avenue, Chicago, as a last resort—or, rather, to please my vife.

Mrs. R. immediately prescribed for me. I did not get all the ingredients for the Restorative until some time in June, 1871. I then commenced using it as directed, and was encouraged, because it was the first application that had been felt upon the scalp,—it causing a smarting sensation. I continued the use of this preparation about three months, when I could see the hair starting in spots all over my head, and I now have a very comfortable head of hair, which money cannot buy. I am asked almost every day how it is, and what I had used to bring my hair back, all agreeing that it is unaccountably strange, etc., etc. And here let me state, that not one of all the eminent physicians I had consulted had given any encouragement, but, on the contrary, had told me all the eminent physicians I had consulted had given any encouragement, but, on the contrary, had told me that I never would get a head of hair.

I can fully substantiate the foregoing by 10,000 witnesses, if necessary, and will answer correspondents if desired

M. K. Shitti. Springfield, Mo.

Mr. Smith inclosed a lock of his hair along with the above letter. It is about one inch in length, and of a dark brown color, soft and flively as that of a young man of twenty.

Mrs. Robinson diagnoses the case and furnishes the Restorative complete (sent by express or by mail) on receipt of a letter in the handwriting of the applicant or a lock of hair. She diagnoses each case, and compounds the Hair Restorative to suit the temperament of each person whose hair is to be restored.

The Restorative never fails to reproduce a good head of hair in less than one year, no matter how long the applicant may have been bald. Address Mrs. A. H. Robinson, corner Adams street and 5th Avenue Chicago, Ill., Inclosing $5.00, which covers full expense of diagnosing, remedy, and postage

MR. LINCOLN'S: RELIGION.

A Feeble Wail from the Capital. [From the Washington Chronicle.]

There is no class of fanatics so illiberal, un just, and egotistical as those who think the particular religion that they profess is the only doctrine that is true and good, and that the rest of the world who believe something else are wicked and hypocritical. They do not hesitate, in defending their own peculiar views, to defame the living and descerate the dead. The late President Lincoln is just now the subject of some of these over-righteous discussions. Emineut, during a long and eventful life, for his kindness of heart and his generous sympathy for the opinions of all men of whatever station in life, President Lincoln listened to the discussions upon religious subjects that were forced upon him even by zealots with patient politeness; and because he did not combat them, however extravagant, each one so honored is now clamoring before the public to be recognized as the representative of the late president a personal views on the subject. Hence, the contradictory assertions that he was an atheish, an infidel, orthodox, or disbeliever, according to each one's own peculiar faith. The public must have grown sickened of this senseless twaddle; and yet it seems to be increasing, the last exhibi-tion being that of the Rev. Robert Collyer, of Chicago, who rushes into print to retail some private conversation of Mr. Lincoln with two gentlemen—one dead and the other living; and with becoming modesty he says he does not care what others call him, "I call him a believer, so far, of the truest type." Unequaledmodesty! That settles the controversy! What Collyer should "call him," after hearing a second-hand conversation between Mr. Lincoln and two other men, must be final! The Rev. Mr. Collver's friends ought to be proud of such a manifestations of personal consequence if not of his familiarity with the laws of evid-

History will little rekeon what were President Lincoln's religious views. The nation, to whom his name and memory are dear, care nothing for what he may have said to presumptuous religious zealots, or what such religious zealots may have said to him. The people of this great land of ours who fondly cherish the recollection of the acts of kindness of him, who, "with malice toward none and charity for all," devoted his life to the inter-ests of mankind, will care little for his sectarian views of religion. His great heart of sympathy for all mankind has won the love of the millions, who have no anxiety as to whether his opinions were heresy or orthodox, measured by the standard of religious bigots. That he had faith in the great principles of Christianity, that he exemplified them in his life; that he taught them in his family; that he impressed them on his children are facts established beyond cavil or question. He was too large of heart and of brain, and too generous and liberal to stoop to contest these little insignificant questions, in which small, illiberal men flourish; and while Mr. Lincoln's name or fame can neither be disturbed or affected by these puerile attacks, still it is due his memory and his life that the public be spared the affliction of such vain, egotistical wrangling that has no other object than to bring the parties themselves prominently before the public, without caring how it may affect Mr. Lincoln's reputation.

THE GHOST WON'T DOWN.

Wr. Lincoln Not a Christian—Prof.

Taylor's Opinion. By your permission, "I will show thee mine opinion." Mr. Lincoln was not a Christian, I think, if to be a Christian means to believe what orthodoxy defines as Christianity; or even what Mr. Channing, or Theodore Parker, or Robert Collyer would define as Christianity. This, however, I know of Mr. Lincoln, personally, namely, that he had much less repugnance to the views of Channing and Parker than he had to Calvin and Wesley; yet to say he found, through reading Channing and Parker, the foundation stone of what is claimed to be Christianity, viz: A belief in a personal God, such as is set out in the Hebrew and Chiristian scriptures—a belief in Jesus Christ—as anything more than man;—in the Holy Spirit as emanating from God the Father;—a belief in the inspiration of the bible—a coming Judgment, etc., is saying more than the facts in the case warrant.

Mr. Lincoln was not in any technical sense a Christian, but a pure rationalist or naturalist, not in the scientific, sense,—so much,—and yet scientific, for he looked at government politics, religion, everything from a scientific stand-point, more or less. He accepted what was natural in religion, but rejected the supernatural wholly. But the strongest possible evidence in my mind that Mr. Lincoln was not a Christian in even the sense defined by Mr. Collyer, or Mr. Channing, is my certain Conyer, or Mr. Channing, is my certain knowledge that he was a Spiritualist,—"secretly for fear of the Jesus"(?) Christians—rather. But Spiritualism is not Christianity, as expounded by any advocate of the Christian system, and never can be, at least till creedal dog-matism is annihilated. Nor is Spiritualism a religion at all,—but what there is of it, that is true, and there is doubtless a mighty deal of it spurious—but we say what there is of it, that is true, is simply a fact; and that is what Mr. Lincoln accepted, not as the miraculous or supernatural, but simply as fact in nature. Hence I call him a naturalist.

As to the evidence of this claim, I will put on the witness stand Dr. McGrew, of Bloom-ington, Ill., who testifies that he has "set with him in spiritual circles more than twenty times." If this does not suffice,—and it should be required by any Christian man or minister, I will corroborate the statement of Dr. Mc Grew by the testimony of a dozen other men, and that these consultations of the "occult forces" and unseen powers were conducted before and after he went to Washington as president of the nation. And that he has been practicing this theory of life since his assassination. tion can also be proven. So I conclude the good man was not a Christian.

T. B. Taylor.

Infidelity Rampant; Religious Redicalism.

The Daily Statesman of Austin, Texas, gives the following amusing article on the growth of Infidelity: "There has lately been held in the city of New York a meeting of an Association, called The Free Religious Association, devoted to what its members designate as free religion. It was held in the large hall of the Cooper Union, which the Tribune says was "two-thirds, filled with an audience of a high order of intelligence." The meeting was presided over by a Mr. Charles Storrs, of Brooklyn, and the Rev. (?) O. B. Frothingham made a very long address on the occasion. We have read the Tribune's report of this speech and must confess ourselves somewhat startled by its revelations. We were aware that Infidelity had progressed to an alarming extent in the scriptions.

Northern States, but we had no idea of the boldness and audacity with which it is being avowed and inculcated. Free Religion, according to Mr. Frouthingham, is no religion at all, so far as the Bible is concerned. It is purely a religion of Nature, without any Bible or Savior or God of the Universe. It is, as this Rev. Infidel explained it, the religion of science. We give an extract of his closing remarks, on the first day. Speaking of his faith he says: "The result will be a gospel of kindness, a religion of humanity, natural philanthrophy, social reform, social science, the deification of charity, the worship of culture, reports instead of liturgies, politics instead of prayers!" The benediction, which followed this extraordinary sermon o the Rev. Frothingham, was in keeping with his faith. It was, "I bid you good evening!" And we say, "Good night to Marmion," and the Reverend Infidel O. B. Frothingham. But this gentleman was not alone in his glory of trying to overturn nearly nineteen hundred years of Christianity. There were other Rev. gentlemen, so called, who were present, or who wrote letters approving the object of the meeting. There was the Rev. Mr. Gannett of Boston, the Rev. J., W. Potter of New Bedford. the Rev. J. W. Chadwick of Brooklyn, and many literary celebri-ties, such as James Parton, Henry B. Black-well, Francis E. Abbot, Professor E. S. Youmans, Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, all of whose productions our Southern youth are reading in the Northern magazines. It is well enough, we think, for them to be informed what sort of literature they are encouraging:

There were also letters read from Charles Bradlaugh, the English radical, now in this country, and from Gerrit Smith of old abolition memory, Judge Hoadly, of Cincinnati, William Lloyd Garrison, and even old Peter

Cooper himself. On the third and last day of this remarkable convention of reverend and literary Infidels, Mr. Frothingham made a good deal of fun out of the great revival which took place some years ago in Boston, and the irreverent Chadwick said that "God created the heavens and earth, and there was an end of it, except a very few times he had to interfere and try to mend in some way the great world machine, which had not somehow gone satisfactory." These free religious jokers seem to have had a

As usual on such gatherings at the North, there were semi-women present, who read essays and made speeches, Mrs. A. B. Blackwell and Mrs. Mary F. Davis among the number. The Rev. W. J. Potter, as evidence of the progress of the "free religion" among the churches, said that in his own society at New Bedford, the ordinances of baptism and the communion had been discontinued. As Frothingham began the Infidel exercises of the convention, so he ended them by asserting, that "the wildest dream cherished to-day, was the dream of the Christian Church, and the most audacious dreamer was Jesus of Naza-"How long, O Lord, how long?" Every one of these impious Infidels are radicals of the deepest dye.

He said it was a Miracle.

she felt his presence, etc.

Here is another case quite similar to Mrs. Sherman's:

Mrs. A. H. Robinson, Dear Sister:—Yours of December 12th, came to hand yesterday, with the magnetized papers. We have been waiting and wishing for them, and they came at a good time, for my wife was sick and dis-couraged. Her head has been feeling bad for some days, and the papers we had were all worn out, so she stopped the treatment until the others arrived. We applied them last night, and to-day she feels much better. She says she felt the spirits before the papers were applied, and afterward saw the arm and hand of one of them. There seemed to be two of them with her. I received a Journal vesterday, in which was a statement of Mrs. Sherman's case, which happened to be something similar to my wife's complaint, only my wife similar to my wife's complaint, only my wife has not been so bad. The disease seems to be in the head and spine. The spirits, I think, have been laboring under disadvantages in my wife's case, partly through necessity. We have not observed that quiet when the papers were applied, that I find we should have done, and some nights our baby was restless and worried its mother, so I think the conditions have not been very favorable, and we are just beginning to learn how to do our part so as to help the spirits with their work, or at least not to hinder them.

I remain as ever your well-wisher and friend James Edgar. Buckeye, Cal., Dec. 26, 1873.

Those of our readers who were taking the Journal four weeks ago, will remember that in No. 14, a full statement of the facts in the Sherman case was made, and that as soon as Mrs. Sherman insisted upon sleeping alone, as Mrs. Robinson, the medium, directed, the presence of spirits was felt, and the cure was performed. So in this case, as soon as the patient followed the directions, not only was the presence of the spirits realized, but their arms were seen by her. These so-called miraculous cures, will not seem so strange, when the Philosophy of Life is better understood.

STORIES OF INFINITY.

1. Lumen. 2. History of a Comet. 3. In Infinity. By Camille Flammarion.

Translated from the French by S. R. Crocker.

"However the theological world may regard the moral effect of such works as the present, no discriminating critic can deny to them astonishing research, profound thought, and a soul imbued with the spirit of belief in the Almighty."—Chicago Inter, Ocean.

M. Flammarion ranks among the most eminent astronomers of the day, and every word of his, touching his favorite science, is entitled to respect. In this volume, however, he has not confined himself to purely scientific studies, but has trained upon them—as one trains a vine upon a wall—a novel and fascinating theory of the future life. His theology may be said to be a refined Spiritualism; and however abhorrent it may be in principle to the common mind, it is undeniably attractive in the guise which he has given it. He believes in a plurality of habitable worlds; and in "Lumen," the dists of the three "Stories," reports the adventures and observations of a Spirit, who has visited many of them.

The tone of the Mason & Hamlin Organ spolls the ear for any hing less pure than itself—E. H. JONES. Organist, Southampton, England. Your instruments, in workmanship and quality of tone, are unsurpassed.—GEO. WILLIAM WARREN, New York. I regard them as unequaled.—A. GOUROUIT, Paris, France. I consider your Cabinet Organs superior, in all respects, to any I have ever seen.—EUGENE THAYER, Boston. At the numerous Sunday-school conventions and institutes which I attend. I generally find some portable reed instrument, good or bad, old or new. The Mason & Hamlin are the sweetest foned, the most manageable, and even when they bear the marks of egg. the most reliable and least likely to get out of order—[Rev.] A. TAYLOR, Sec. Amer. Sunday School Union, Phila Pa. For sacred music at home, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organ is very deel rable, and in many respects, that could casily be pointed out, it possesses great advantages over the small-priced pipe organs—BDWARD F. very desirable, and in many respects, that could casily be pointed out, it possesses great advantages over the small-priced pipe organs.—EDWARD F. RIMBAULT, London. For sweetness of tone and variety of eff cts I consider these instruments unequalled.—CHARLES F. DAVIS Organist, etc., London. The best instruments of the class made. They have more power and greater smoothness and fullness of tone, with equality and uniform character throughout their registers.—THRODORE WACHTEL AD. NEUENDORFF. CARL ROSA, C. STANLEY, of Opera Traupe.—N. Y. I have slavays entertained the opinion that Mason & Hamilia Cabinet Organs are of the very best class of that description of instruments.—J. L. HATTON, London. Eng. The finest reed instruments extant.—S. C. HIRST, Dundee, Scotland. I have exercised my organ at all sorts and styles of music, from the Requiem Mass down to polkas and Irish jugs. It will do almost any mortal thing between these, two extremes.—BUSTACE HINTON JONES, Southampton, Eng. We take pleasure in recommending the Mason & Hamilia Cabinet Organ as a very beautiful instrument, and consider it the best now in use.—CHRISTINA NILSSON, ANNA LOUISE CARY, MARIE LEON DUVAL, VICTOR CAPOUL, P. POWDERS

Early in September Mr. Fink writes, saying, "Brother is entirely cured, as following certificate will show; it speaks for itself." speaks for itselt."

SEFFEMBER Ist, 1873.—This is to certify, that after having been under the care of a large number of physicians, and having exhausted all other remedies. I have been cured of the following diseases by using Hull & Chamberlain's Magnetic and Electric Powders, viz: Catarth, Asthma, Rheumatism, Scrofula, Cancer in the face, Running issue from one cap, Erysipslav, etc., otc. Am new a well man.

I do solemnly affirm the above to be two in new a well man. I do solemnly affirm the above to be true. Edward Fink.

Catarrh Cured. Mr. Fink also sent the following certificate of another cure in the same Institution:

This does certify, that I, John W. Shaw, of National Soldier's Home, having been diseased with Catarrh in its worst form for sixteen years, and having expended a good deal of money with different Doctors without any relief until I commenced using Hull & Chamberlain's Magnetic Powders, after using them one month I was entirely cured of that losthsome disease.

I do solemnly sfilm the above statement true.

JOHN W. SHAW.

Paralysis, Chills, and Fever,

Tuscalòosa; Ala., July 16th, 1878. SEPTEMBER 22nd—Mr Selleck writes, "My old friend, Mr. Hollingworth, is bearly if not ourse wint. Thanks to your Powders. He walks four or five miles a day without a case, has no swimming of the head, numbness is all gone and he feels he will undoubtedly be spared many years. Your Powders cared one case of Chills and Feer in my own family.

Yellow Fever, Yellow Pever.

Yellow Fever, Yellow Pever.

Mr. J. M. G. Wood, Milton, Florida, Sept. 2d, writes, "In Flux your Magnetics act like a charm, curing severe cases in 36 hours and Diarrents. In from one to 3 hours. For Headache and Billous Fever they are unsurpassed. A severe case of Neuralgia was relieved in 16 minutos. A very bad case of periodical sick Headache and Spasms chred in 8 hours and no symptoms of it felt since."

Sept. 29th.—"A lady in delicate health injered herself by overstraining, which produced such terrible pains internally as to drive her to bed in terror; gave Magnetics every half hour and in 5 hours she fell asleep, and awoke well. The other night my wife had a severe attack of Cholers-Morbus, suffering intensely, she took two Magnetic Powders is minutes apart, went to sleep and next morning was well."

Oct. 15th.—A patient three days ago paralyzed on one side and unable to swallow for twelve hours, commenced taking Electric Powders and the fifth Powder he could drink gruel and is now progressing finely. Have cured several cases of Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, a bad scald and Ysllow Feyer, one case being in my own family. Where the doctors attend the Feyer they lose 20 per cent. and never get a patient out in less than ten to fifteen days. While your Magnetic Powders cure Every case when used, Removing the Feyer they lose 20 per cent. and never get a patient out in less than ten to fifteen days. While your Magnetic Powders cure Every case when used, Removing the Feyer in less than these days. They have never failed in curing Any cases when laken according to directions; are entirely infalling.

Mrs. Francis Kingman, New London, Conn., writes, "I shall be most happy to advise any and all who are suffering with nervous affections to use Hull & Chamberlian's Magnetic and Electric Powders, baving derived great benefit from them, I believe them to be a sovereign remedy for nearly all the liss flesh is helr to, as they act directly on the blood and nerves.
