

RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

SCIENCE, LITERATURE

NOTED TO L PHILOS

ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM

Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing.

VOL. XXXIX.

CHICAGO, JANUARY 16, 1886.

No. 21

Readers of the JOURNAL are especially requested to send in items of news. Don't say "I can't write for the press." Send the facts, make plain what you want to say, and "cut it short." All such communications will go properly arranged for publication by the Editors. Notices of Meetings, information concerning the organization of new Societies or the condition of old ones; movements of lecturers and mediums, interesting incidents of spirit communion, and well authenticated accounts of spirit phenomena are always in place and will be published as soon as possible.

CONTENTS.

- FIRST PAGE.—Psychic Morphisms.
- SECOND PAGE.—An Old Maid's Story. The Protection of Public Mediumship. Chicago Independent Preachers' Lightnings.
- THIRD PAGE.—Woman and the Household. Book Reviews. New Books Received. Miscellaneous Advertisements.
- FOURTH PAGE.—Two Facts for Thought and Study. The Terrible Influence Exerted by Cranks in the Pulpit. G. Milner Stephen, the Great Healer. Infidelity. Secularizing Sunday. A Remarkable Case. General Items. Miscellaneous Advertisements.
- FIFTH PAGE.—Was He a Spiritualist? General News. Miscellaneous Advertisements.
- SIXTH PAGE.—A Retrospect. Tests of Spirit Presence. Another View of the Salvation Army. Gopal Vinayak Joshee. A Church Member Entranced. Notes and Extracts on Miscellaneous Subjects.
- SEVENTH PAGE.—Spiritualism in the South. Haverhill and Vicinity. A Critical Thinker. Miscellaneous Advertisements.
- EIGHTH PAGE.—Col. Ingersoll at Seat Experiments in Spiritual Research. Charles H. Foster's Mediumship. Miscellaneous Advertisements.

PSYCHE-MORPHISMS.*

PRE-EXISTENCE IN OTHER FORMS.

Objective evolution makes individuality to be very superficial and factitious, merely apparent or phenomenal, but not substantial. It makes all individualities of every grade and kind to be but the modes or mutable forms of the one great, only, and eternal force or power, and all generations and births are merely changes in these forms; so that progeny in all cases, whether in the seed, egg, or living animal, is a transmutation of what was once a vital part of its parent source. It forgets that all of these individualities, as well as all other phenomena, so far as they are known or knowable to any one, are states of the knowing subject, and that all births, deaths, progress, or decay, and all possible known forms and mutations of the universe, are modes of the perceptive ego, and that the real generation, birth, death, or extinction of any other individual, or of their mode of life is never known to us; and that we know only certain present changes in ourselves, which are taken as signs of corresponding changes in others and in our past conditions. When my organism was generated, that which was or is known and designated as such by others (each knowing a different organism), that was to them the sign that I had passed over from some other state into this which ranks me so and so with men. Now, the question arises, "What was that other state?"

We must reply that it was some mode of my own individual self. Here is a fact of vital importance, of which only subjective evolution can take cognizance. Objective evolution makes one being or individual to become extinct, and its disorganized forces to become transmuted into another by fresh organization, the utter ending of one and the absolute beginning of another, as individualized forms of the one eternal force. But that is irrational and does not agree with known facts. The known facts are only modal changes of the same one subject or individual, which, in every case, includes the whole universe, all its forces and all its forms. No evolution can transcend the universe to which it belongs. The course of evolution is, therefore, always confined to the modal changes of the same one individual, which undergoes a succession of changes, answering to, or rather constituting, those of the known universe. As this egotistic universe contains other forms like ours, it symbolizes that there are other men who have undergone the same line of successive evolutions as we have, from the lower stages of existence up to organic man.

PRE-EXISTENCE IN THE HUMAN FORM.

The human stage being reached, it were unreasonable to suppose that the process of evolution here ends. Such a view finds no support in the analogies of experience. As a rule, evolutionary changes are not great and sudden, but by successive small degrees. Yet very vast is the difference between the highest and the lowest intellect of man, between the most advanced and the least advanced of our race. This advance cannot be supposed to have taken place all at once. There has been gradual progress, though with steps of varying extent. Hence, to the question as to what was our immediately preceding state, we may answer, with considerable confidence, that it was some other and lower human form and condition, on the ground that all scientific indexes seem to point to this conclusion. Phenomenally, all human forms and states follow in birth upon others, as the effects or transformed forces of the other. This is also the utterance of objective evolution, and accords with all serious popular thought and expression. But, as all phenomena are modes of one individual subject, and as my organism especially represents one, and as its generation represents the beginning of my present organic mode of existence; so it apparently represents that my previous state, as symbolized in its phenomenal parents, was approximately like my present state. The phenomenal difference between phenomenal parents and offspring being generally not very great, and of lexical gravity, we may or must infer that such is the same concerning the real individualistic changes which these phenomena symbolize. These changes carry us back successively to lower human conditions, till we reach the dark border-land of Mosstrooper contests, as to which side of the line a thing belongs, and then back to the pre-human, then the pre-faunal, and even to the pre-floral condition.

Some phenomena may be considered as symbols of what is below organic consciousness. All the inorganic world may belong to this class. It is the form of my infra-organic and human consciousness, and it shows what was once wholly my life and consciousness. That I or anything is or was wholly unconscious I know not. It cannot be proved nor conceived. It is the supposition of a state which is wholly devoid of all intelligible marks. There may be egotistic force which is not yet or always in full conscious action. But even of this, we never have any direct proof. We know that different states of consciousness frequently fail to connect in memory, and all apparent unconsciousness may be of this kind. At all events, the spirit has evolved itself (not from itself), first, as chaos, then as kosmos, and then as the forms of organic life, vegetable and animal, and the process of evolution is still advancing; and what further capabilities are within the vast and awful womb of this spirit, the absolute ego, only everlasting experience can disclose.

NUMBER AND DURATION OF PSYCHE-MORPHISMS. This conclusion, it must be confessed, is very sweeping and very far removed from prevailing modern thought, and, on that account, it will be held to be very objectionable. It implies a doctrine of universal psychemorphisms of vast and incalculable multiplicity and duration. It implies that every advanced human being has probably undergone a psychemorphic change many times between his present state and the state in which he first emerged or evolved into man, if we may suppose such a point, on the location of which we are not likely to agree. It implies that this same creature or individual in that supposed immediately pre-human state probably underwent many such transformations between the first and last generation of the whole monkey family previous to the evolution into the human state. It implies further, perhaps, as many more psychemorphisms as there were generations from that time back to the beginning of its organic life.

Yet, we should not assume that life had only one point of beginning and only one time for all. There were just as many as there are living beings, or individuals, which are never derived from any other or others, each form being evolved from its previous state, and all from the first state, which in each case was a separate creation, if not external; and each one, let us remember, is itself always a universe. There can be no natural symbol for creation, because it can have no lexical antecedent, and no natural process. Abiogenesis, were it well established, would only show another example of evolution, and in that light it has been investigated; and the failure to establish it is of small account, by the methods used, because it is not necessary. Subjective evolution shows it to be a logical necessity which gives a theoretical completeness to the order of things: first, creation, which is unimaginable, but not inconceivable; second, the first and lowest created condition, which is, perhaps, infra-conscious and therefore pre-kosmic; third, evolution into the lowest conscious condition, a pre-organic kosmic experience; then fourth, abiotogenic evolution from the kosmic form; and then successive biogenetic evolutions as before indicated, and every such change or evolution simply a psychemorphic change.

In this long course of psychemorphic changes, the change, as indicated by the symbols, is sometimes a deterioration; but the main trend, the vast and overwhelming force and sweep of movement are in the direction of progress.

I have spoken of a possible unconscious pre-kosmic condition (though I do not believe it) because the kosmos is a mode of our consciousness, and therefore, whatever is in that state is conscious; but, as many think we have reason for believing there is occasionally even now an unconscious state, I name that the pre-kosmic or infra-kosmic state, and suppose that it is the lowest, and precedes the kosmic.

This appears to me consistent, thorough and complete; and, so far as I can see, it is a legitimate induction from facts and principles which are known and acknowledged by all. We ought not to be utterly repelled from the consideration of it because of its novelty in part, for it is nothing new, why should I write? Nor should its apparent proximate resemblance to any theory supposed to be obsolete condemn it without investigation. It is not improbable that some hourly errors are partial anticipations of truth. Many will identify the last few pages with some portion of Buddhism, and with that, too, which is deemed the most ungrounded and fanciful. But the metempsychosis of Buddhism is without a scientific basis. It is a dualism all through, the body being always other than the soul. Its final goal is indifferentism absolute, if not entire unconsciousness and personal annihilation. In all these and other points of great and vital importance, our psychemorphism differs from the metempsychosis of Buddhism. Yet, notwithstanding this difference, the one point of coincidence with Buddhism will extensively stand in the way of its reception, and, in some minds excite a stubborn prejudice and opposition. Some interesting inquiries will grow out of this exposition, which we cannot entertain, much less conclusively develop.

A METHOD OF EVADING PSYCHE-MORPHISM. There is, some may think, another course open to us, and leading to different conclusions, arising from the reasonable possibility of making a different inference from one class or series of facts which we have been obliged to use as symbols of transcendent realities. As our organism is the sensitive expression of the ego, and as other human organisms, though egotistic, are symbols of other men, so what we call our parents represent other human beings, who sustain to us very peculiar and important relations. Now, since, phenomenally, the progeny is from the progenitors, a part of their force transformed, it may be asked whether the law of symbolism does not require or justify the proposition that all real successive generations are not merely changes in the same person or individual, but the generation of new individualities from the parent sources, the progeny being a transformed part of the former energy of the progenitors, and now specialized into new individuals? It will appear, at first sight, very reasonable to answer this question in the affirmative. This would afford us a subjective theory, quite analogous to the popular objective evolution. This, like that, implies that all forms of existence are but modes of one all-embracing and all-perdure force, which evolves itself into all these forms according to laws of its own generation. This force may be appropriated by Theists as the Supreme Being, though some may oppose it because of its implicated pantheism.

OBJECTIONS TO THIS METHOD. I object to this because of its superficial individualism. I cannot believe that we are all simply modes of One. All the logical implications of experience compel me to think that each one of us is an individual, distinct and separate, at once, always and forever. I am not a mode of God, or of the great and only one, call it by whatever name you will. It makes all men one, just as all the members are one body, which my consciousness and reason repudiate.

I object, again, because like objective evolution, it logically excludes personal immortality. The whole existence of each is included within the period between birth and death. Our existence as specialized individuals consists in this form and its functions; and, when these are ended, our existence has passed away as individuals. This mortalism is distasteful to my higher aspirations, and cannot be admitted without the strongest evidence. Of course, I shall be reminded that all do not feel like this, and that, if they did, a mere feeling proves nothing. It may be right or it may be wrong, and the feeling of to-day may not be the feeling of to-morrow, which is very true, and so much the worse for him, I say, who ever feels satisfied with mortalism.

I object to this mortalism because I believe it is inconsistent with a regnant moral economy. It may be that there is no such moral economy as that which is conceived by me. But I am glad to despise an economy which can seldom live more than three or four-score years, and usually not so long, and which, after that, is only an imaginary shade, hovering in impotent menace or approval round imaginary shades, which are equally impotent to be either cursed or blessed. I cannot conceive the moral life to be an insignificant ephemeral, or a hot-house annual, but a tree (like the Igrasli) which endures through all the ages and ages, whose roots grasp all the ether universe, and whose top extends and spreads through all the heavens. Perhaps there is no such thing. Perhaps this conceit is only a relict of the old fuliginous pre-scientific ephemerals and animalcules. But, if time and occasion offered, it were easy to show that morality is this or nothing.

I object, again, because, apart from any moral scheme, evolution has thus in it no element of distributive rational propriety and honest verity. Forms come and go, and set themselves up for something distinct, as if they were ultimate individualities, when they are only automatic members of one individuality. This is an intolerable falsity, ever and forever repeated. The theory here conflicts with all psychological assumptions and convictions and the practical judgment of mankind, and makes all nature a series of hollow, deceptive, and deceived simulacra. That falsity cannot be the truth. We treat these simulacra as verities; and, therefore, our theories should accord with this, or they will justly and speedily be relegated to shades themselves.

I object to this theory, in the next place, because it divests the order of events, always and everywhere, of all rational significance and moral propriety. No reason whatever can ultimately be assigned why any of the innumerable figures of the universe should be what it is, or why it appears and disappears where and when it does. Very true, indeed, it is that this system can admit of no final causes. It is unintelligent and non-moral. "It knoweth not whence it cometh nor whither it goeth." Gradually, we see it shuffling off every distinctive intellectual as well as moral quality; and there is left to us a mere black hulk, rolling on waters ever dark and restless. Line these into rows. It is the primeval world of falling, simmering, waters, of vapors, clouds, and gases, with all the lights of heaven obscured. It cannot long be accepted as the ultimate evolution of the intellectual world, especially with those who, as subjective evolutionists, have already proved the agency of a mighty personal and supernatural power.

I object to this theory, in the next place, because it conflicts with the fundamental notion of being which is deduced from subjective evolution. Subjective evolution directly knows no being but the subject, ego, which is personal spirit. All being is force, and all is spirit and individualistic, though often of a very low order; and, as each includes all of an entire universe, there is nothing in common to any two, though there may be much of resemblance between many. Therefore, the notion of one great, underlying root, from which all phenomena are temporary outshoots (not offshoots), like the extemporized feet, hands or mouth, or stomach of the monera or amebae is inadmissible. The universe,—every universe,—is one, one individual; but all universes together are not one individual, but many. And these are absolutely isolated from each other. Infinite vacuum is between them, and they can reach each other no more than ringing of bells in airless space will generate sound.

I object to it, in the next place, because it involves a notion of the ego indefinitely inferior to that which is logically necessitated by subjective evolution, which identifies all the power and glory and duration of the knowable universe with the ego, so that no natural bridging of the gulf which separates one from another is possible; and all limitation to their power and duration, except as somewhere within the finite, is precluded. After attaining this conception of the ego, there is no room left in the mind for the beggarly notion of a transient wife, which is well compared to a vapor or breath or a meteor, or to burning stubble. The organism is but an infinitesimal portion of the ego, and each organic life is but such a fraction of the total life of the ego. So the absolute isolation of individuals precludes the possibility of one being the natural issue of another, as one subjective organism is from another. Such a notion makes the individual superficial, unreal, puny and temporary, limited to very little space and time, with corresponding disabilities. The sensible child to which the mother gives birth, being but a mode of herself, to call either of them a distinct individuality, as if they comprised two persons, is to contradict the science of psychology. They do not comprise even one person. They are only two out of an indefinite number of the experiences of one person,—the absolute ego, though, as we have expounded, they symbolize two different persons.

A final objection is that all the good of the universe is on this theory accidental. There is good developed in certain conditions; and these conditions come and go with the same indifference as opposing conditions, and all are equally legitimate, and neither are any more an end than the other. With certain physical changes, all attained good passes away remorselessly and irrevocably, because it was a mere accident of physical conditions, just as all evil is. It is, therefore, utterly void of all moral significance, just the same as lightning, mildew, and spring flowers, which are temporary consequences of certain physical interactions simply.

LIMITATION OF PSYCHE-MORPHIC CHANGES.

Let it not be overlooked that these psychemorphic changes are only partial relative to their subject. They do not comprise the whole being, not the absolute ego, but only the local and organic ego, which changes by changing interaction with the environment; which environment is the extra-organic and pre-organic subject, which first generates and then endlessly modifies the organic ego. In the meanwhile the inorganic ego, or universe, is constantly changing in its forms and in the relative motions, force and effect of its parts; and it is these changes which modify the organic world, which again reacts on the inorganic world. These organic forms and changes we can trace back to their origin in the inorganic. But they are modes of the same individual through all the changes; and they have the same conscious subject as that whose phenomena constitute the inorganic and extra-organic universe, which changes comparatively little. And so our total individuality changes very slowly; while the modes of our local organism change very rapidly. I,—the one individual constituting the universe,—exist through all time and constitute all time, because I am the subject of all known changes, all co-existence and succession.

DIGNITY AND SIGNIFICANCE OF THE LOWER ANIMALS.

Subjective evolution implies that in the whole course of times there are just as many creatures of one grade or kind as of any other (except the highest where they stop and accumulate, if we may suppose any such rank, which we do not); for all the lower pass into the higher (unless there be some irretrievable deterioration and perversion), and all the higher were once in all the lower conditions, and have evolved out of them. This gives us an ascending series of existences of a nobler order and significance than any of which poets and theorists have ever dreamed. The lowest, the most insignificant, and the most repulsive has before it a sublime destiny possible or certain. Its goal is manhood or archangelhood or we know not what of greatness and elevation beyond. What a glorious right to be is thus conferred upon the humblest creature; and what a persistent power to be is theirs, also, for their organic destruction is only a psychemorphic change which is preliminary to a first evolution somewhere by birth, in perhaps a nobler form. For each and all, not for a few late comers only, is this grand and endless destiny. The oft-raised question is now answered: "What did God make such things as these for?" He made them that they might be men, and better and wiser men than those who captiously ask the question. In the meanwhile they have their own enjoyments and subserviently many purposes of importance as they move on their unknown way to the higher stations which they are destined to attain, and above all the whole vast and grand chain of progressive existence, discloses a teleology far surpassing any that theologians have ever endeavored to expound.

REALITY AND THOROUGHNESS OF SUBJECTIVE EVOLUTION.

Subjective evolution is thus complete and universal. It is the normal privilege and law of every individual organic being to evolve itself from the lower to the higher evermore. Objective evolution, on the contrary, is accidental, partial and limited. All animals, including man, die to live no more, for at death their individuality is forever extinguished. Even where there is said to be an evolution from the lower into the higher, that means only the extinction of one individual and the beginning of another and a higher,—a new individuality as well as a new order or species. No one individual itself ever evolves into a higher order, except it be from the embryonic and preliminary and amphibious state into the subsequent developed condition. There is a succession of rising (or falling) orders and no more. On the other hand, according to the scheme of subjective evolution, I have briefly described; each individual existed in every order, the same individual in every preceding order, and the same will exist in every succeeding order. Death is but the ending of one form, and birth the beginning of another. Each individual is immortal, and an endless duration in an innumerable succession of mortal lines is the heritage of each. The general outline of the past history of those who are now men, we are getting quite able to trace on the pages of paleontology; but what are to be the evolutions of the future, and the duration of each is beyond our power even to imagine, except in a faint degree, as an inference from our pre-ent intellectual and moral life and action. But here Spiritualism may possibly help us some time.

UNIVERSALITY OF EVOLUTION BECAUSE SUBJECTIVE.

Objective evolution is also limited in that it is confined to particular points where only the ascent takes place. It searches for the forms in an order which make the closest approach to some of the forms of another and higher order, and the says that here and here only was the ascent made. Here is the narrow and crooked stairway up which nature climbed to the next landing place above. At all other points, the order or species remains unchanged, and none of its individuals ever pass beyond their present ranks. This is a scientific necessity with objective evolution, because it proves evolution (in distinction from creation), only by showing gradual approaches of the antecedents as a sign of naturalistic transition to the subsequent of a higher order. It has no other proof, and it can claim evolution only so far as it can show a close structural approximation of antecedents to certain subsequents of a superior rank.

With subjective evolution, the case is entirely changed. The egotistic unity of the universe is immediately found by an analysis of consciousness, and all space and time and their contents are concentrated in the ego. I can transcend myself only by a sensitive inference, never by experience, or the action of any natural force or influence, nor therefore, in any wise can I be brought into contact or association or conjunction of actual proximity or natural influence with any other being. Hence, it is impossible for one being to be evolved from another. All action and interaction, all succession of cause and effect, are only between the different modes of the same one individual which is the subject, the cause and effect, antecedent and subsequent of all change and evolution in the same universe from the beginning to the end of its transmutations. This is a logical necessity, and we need not adduce close physical connections to prove this general proposition. And as no individual can be evolved from another, the later states of each may be and must be evolved from its earlier states. This is the only evolution that is possible, and this necessarily prevails from the beginning of the world onward and without end. Every successive state of the same individual or universe is necessarily an evolution from its predecessors, whatever they may have been; and this can never, for a moment, be brought into question by any alleged likeness between the succeeding and preceding forms known to us; for here in the same subject, there is no possible room for the supposition of the creation of a new species. This, therefore, is true of my local ego, while it has certainly evolved from precedent and lower forms of my universe, or absolute ego, whether I can give a scientific verification of the points where the transitions took place or not.

* Extracts from a forthcoming work by Rev. W. I. Gil.

AN OLD MAID'S STORY.

BY JULIA E. BURNS.

My name is Hannah Brown. I am a plain old maid, and the story I will tell is no love tale of mine, although I was mixed up in it. I was not, and am not, the heroine. I never had a lover in my life, and the only man that ever called on me with "intentions" was a minister of the gospel, who addressed his Maker when he prayed, "Oh! Lawd, Gawd, Thou art the Ruler of the heavens and the earth," just as though he was telling God a piece of news, and so when he asked me to marry him I promptly refused, and am glad to this day I did, for his wife, poor thing, had had four pair of twins and is dragging her life out trying to live with him in peace. But, dear me, I never meant to tell this; it is about my aunt's will that I started to tell. I have lived ever since I can remember, here in my aunt Jane's house, an old fashioned, cozy house, with as many cupboards, crooks and cuddy holes as my Aunt Jane was full of queer notions and human kindness. She was always good to me, and when I refused Mr. Podder, the preacher I was just telling you about, she called me a sensible girl and gave me a new black silk. We lived very happily in the old house that stood in the suburbs of one of the cleanest and best towns in Indiana. My aunt had two old servants, man and wife, that were as much a part of the house as one of the little cupboards. We were members of the Episcopal Church, and our old fashioned carriage was always to be seen at its doors every Sunday. Aunt Jane was getting old, and she often talked to me about what I should do when she was gone.

"Hannah," she said one day, "I feel like I ought to tell you I have made my will, and outside of a small present to John and Mary,—the two old servants—" "all I have is yours. You have given all your life to me, and I don't want James, my half-brother, to have a cent that's mine, and when I am gone, Hannah, I want you to stay right here. Never give up the old house as long as you live, and now, dear, get my brown circular and put it around me. I feel chilly this morning."

Aunt Jane's brown circular was an immense old cloth cloak that was lined and wadded, and covered her small form entirely. She wore it on all occasions, and always had it brought from the closet and wrapped around her when she was chilly. I did as she directed me, and then went out at her request to gather some roses. It was Jane, and all our rose bushes were in full bloom. I was busily clipping away with the garden shears, when Mary came running to me with scared eyes and saying that there was "something the matter with Mrs. Jane." I hurried into the house and there with the old brown cloak drawn up a little closer, and her head leaning back against the cushions of her chair, sat Aunt Jane—dead. The good old doctor said it was paralysis of the heart.

Any way, dear Aunt Jane was gone, and the will she had spoken of to me could not be found. We searched high and low for it, leaving not a spot unlooked. The lawyer knew that there was a will; he had written it. Aunt Jane had said so to me, but there the matter ended for no such paper could be found, and my dear aunt's half-brother being next of kin claimed the old home and what money there was, and gave me notice to leave. I was just wild with grief. Where could I go and what could I do? All my life had been spent with my invalid aunt. I could knit and sew a little, knew all about soups and taking care of sick people if they would be gentle and kind as she was, but to go out in the world and earn a living, having no money or means of any kind, I could not see how I could do it. Uncle James hated me and he would have sent me to the almshouse without one misgiving. While I was thinking it all over and wondering if there ever was such a lonely, distressed woman on earth before as myself, Mrs. Morgan, one of our old friends, a brisk, cheery, progressive sort of woman, came in. She talked to me in a comforting way, telling me to come and live with her, but said, "of course, dear, I will never be like your own home. Now that will be in this house," she continued. "Why don't you visit a medium?" "A what?" I asked. "Why a spiritual medium," she answered. "Dear me, Hannah Brown, don't you ever read? Have you never went to a clairvoyant yet?" I shook my head and she went on telling me all about what she knew of Spiritualism and mediums. "Why half our church believes in it," she said, confidentially, "and if any one can help you find that will it be one of these very mediums." I made up my mind to try, and she gave me a list of names. Mrs. James, Mrs. Longstreet and Mrs. Hood—each name accompanied with the street and number of the residence.

"Now, my dear, I don't know a blessed thing about any of these women, but Mrs. Hood, only by hearsay. She charges more than the others, but she is good, and is a lady, and has long ago convinced me of the return of our spirit friends, and communion with them."

Cheery, comforting Mrs. Morgan went away, and I put my bonnet and veil on and went out to call on the ladies whose names were on the slip of paper I carried with me. I had but little money, and thought I had better try the two whose charges were small, first, and if I failed with them I would go to Mrs. Hood, who, Mrs. Morgan informed me, charged two dollars, and would only see ladies—never a man could come in her house. I liked that part of the business, as it showed that she was not an adventuress, at least, but I would see the others first. I found the rooms of Mrs. James after tolling up three pairs of stairs that were very dark and dirty. My knock on the door that bore the legend, "Mrs. James, Medium," brought that lady herself to open it. She was large and red, with light hair that was frizzed and puffed all over her head. She wore a greasy green silk with dirty cotton lace frilled at her neck and wrists. Her rooms were very gaudily furnished, and as I live they smelt of cigar smoke, and I am sure I heard a suppressed cough in the next room, though she claimed to be a lone widow. She smiled and asked me if I wanted a "sitting." I told her I had never visited a medium before and wished her to do for me whatever she was in the habit of doing for ladies. She sat down in front of me and began to shiver, shake and gasp in a most dreadful manner, and at last, just as I was getting very much frightened concerning her, she began to talk in a high falsetto voice, saying: "You is a very much big squaw, and you got two chiefs; one dark complected and one light complected. You can take em choice, but em light complected chief am best." "What on earth did the woman mean? I was disgusted and demanded to know who and what she meant. She bowed her head and said in the same voice, "Oh! me am little squaw Starlight, me knows you and me tell em about chiefs." I gasped and laid her feet down and went out. I don't think I ever was in my life more thoroughly disgusted. Was Mrs. Morgan crazy to send me to such a woman as this? and then I remembered that she had only given me the name, and had recommended none but Mrs. Hood. I soon got over my anger and took a ludicrous view of the whole thing, and determined to see the other two. I had the whole afternoon before me and would not be so easily turned aside. I found Mrs. Longstreet in rather more comfortable quarters; she was tall, gaunt and dark; her voice was bass and sounded like it came from a deep well instead of her lungs. She also seated herself in front of me, and went off into a trance or sleep, from which she aroused herself, and me also, by the deepest and most guttural "ugh" I think ever escaped from a mortal being, and, bless me, if she did not go into such a tantrum as I never believed a woman in her senses could. She declared to me that she was the biggest chief that ever lived on earth and that I was a big medium, and a lot of such stuff, and not one word about the missing will. I tried to stop her and get out, but she paraded about the room and told me such startling things that I was almost frightened to death. She said that she had been gone to the spirit-land four hundred years, and that her mission now was to develop mediums, and that I was a very fine one; that if I would sit in a cabinet they would come out "full form." I no more understood her meaning than if she had talked in Greek. At last I got away from her one more dollar less and no wiser!

I was in for it and went directly to Mrs. Hood. She lived in two little plainly furnished rooms on a quiet street. She invited me in and I just sat down on the first chair I came to, and looked at her. She did not look to be over twenty, and was the most beautiful woman my eyes had ever looked upon. She was pale, with dark wavy hair that was gathered up in a curly knot at the back of her head. She had great dark dreamy eyes and the reddest curved lips that ever smiled. She was plainly and neatly dressed in light print. A handsome baby boy of four years sat in the middle of the floor playing with some picture cards. I told her I had come for a sitting or sitting, whichever it might be called. She smiled wearily, drew down the curtains a little, and after telling the baby to be very quiet, she sat down in front of me and closed her eyes. I nerved myself for another "war dance," and made up my mind that just as soon as it was over with I would go to Mrs. Morgan and recommend an insane asylum to her. She sat very still with closed eyes for a few moments, then opened them and they were luminous with a light I had never seen in any eyes before. Looking beyond me, and seemingly into space, she said in a low, calm voice: "Madam, you are looking for something that is lost—a paper I think it is. Now I see a spirit standing by you, an elderly lady with white puffs on each side of her face; she has wrapped about her a large brown circular. She calls you Hannah, and says, 'Here is the will,' and she clutches hold of the circular, and now she is gone, and that is all I see, madam." She arose, drew back the curtain and smiled at her baby, while I, why I just burst out a crying like an old goose, and told her somehow that she had told me wonderful things, and gave her the money, and went out. I think I ran all the way home and rushed in and up stairs, dragged the old circular cloak out from the closet, where I had put it when it was last taken off dear Aunt Jane's shoulders, got a pair of scissors and sat down in the middle of the floor and ripped the lining loose, and you may believe me or not—there was the will, and there in greenbacks was five thousand dollars, and I just hugged that old cloak and cried aloud until Mary came up to see if I was "plum gone mad," as she expressed it. I showed her the will and the money, and then there were two, instead of one, crying. I had John get out the old carriage and I went to the lawyer and the bank, and then I went back to the little woman who had secured me the old home I loved so well. I told her all and she was just as glad as could be for me. I then begged her to come home with me; she needed rest, and the baby should have the cats to play with, and all the fresh milk he could drink. She consented, after a while, and I took her to the old home that soon would not have been mine, had I not gone to her. I gave up to her two rooms and made her promise to live with me, and let me learn her beautiful faith. She was a sweet, modest, loving little woman, and the baby Robin was just the dearest child that ever blessed a mother. In a few weeks I was converted to Spiritualism—true, sensible Spiritualism—and she had learned to love and confide in me, and so one September evening she told me her story. She had been engaged to a young Scotchman, a handsome, high-spirited young fellow. Her father objected to the match and forced her to marry a man of his choice and not hers. They both died, father and husband, within a year after the marriage, and her child unborn. She was left with little money and no near friends. Her lover had gone away soon after her marriage, vowing never to forgive her. She had loved him always, and when her child came, named him Robin. She concluded her story with: "I have always been able to see clairvoyantly, and a year ago I left my home in Chicago and came here to earn a living for baby and me. I heard that my lover, Robin Macfarland, was coming home, and I feared to meet him. I love him so truly that it would have killed me to see him and have him refuse to speak to me; so I came here and no one knows where I am, and life was hard and dreary enough, dear Miss Brown, until we found you, baby and I," and she caught him up with fondest kisses, but I saw that she was crying all the same. That night a letter went out to Chicago, and when I slipped out and begged old James to take it to the depot and mail it on the train so it would be sure to go out that night, will you believe that he actually read the name, and looked at me in a most suspicious manner. I just leave it to you if the insolence and presumption of old house servants is not simply appalling, but a dollar softened him and he carried the letter away, and four days afterward, when Cecelia Hood and I were sitting in the back parlor, she rocking her baby and I knitting and looking at her because they made the sweetest picture I ever looked upon, Mary answered the door bell and came to say that a gentleman in the parlor wanted to see me. I left Cecelia slinging softly to Robin, "Oh! Douglas, Douglas, tender and true," and went to see my caller. As soon as I entered the room, a tall, handsome man, with the widest shoulders and yellowest curls I ever saw, came toward me with outstretched hand, saying, "Oh! this Miss Brown, who wrote to me, and can you tell me where I can find my darling Cecelia?" "Sit down," said I. He obeyed, and I said to him, "Now, if I tell you where that little woman who loves you so well lives, and can be found, will you promise to love her baby, her little Robin, and be kind to him?" "Yes, yes!" he cried in a shaking voice. "Robin—ah! she did love me, then, all the while." "Then come," I said, leading the way. "Cecelia, here is a friend of yours" I said, as we entered the room where she sat, and she arose with baby in her arms, and that great handsome fellow just fairly run over me and clasped them both to his breast, and kissed the baby first, while I—why I just ran off to my room and cried myself into the worst sick-headache I ever had in my life.

The Protection of Public Mediumship.

Three years ago, as the members of the London Spiritualist Alliance were reminded in the President's recent address, a new departure was taken in respect of the public investigation of the psychical phenomena of Spiritualism. It may be well to recall the weighty words in which the "educated Spiritualists of Great Britain," i. e., those whose experience in the investigation, and trained capacity for observation fitted them to pronounce an opinion, gave utterance to a conclusion that was practically unanimous, so few were the dissentients from its terms.

"Public or promiscuous sances for psychical manifestations (they wrote) have been of late years generally marked by the following characteristics:—(1) The sance has been conducted in imperfect light, or in total darkness. (2) The medium has been isolated from the circle, by being placed either in cabinet or behind a curtain. (3) The sitters have been wholly or in part, unacquainted with the subject and with each other. (4) There has not infrequently been a manifest want of harmony, consequent upon differences of opinion as to the nature and value of the tests employed.

"These conditions, usually found in combination, effectually preclude careful and dispassionate investigation; open wide an avenue to fraud; suggest suspicion of its presence even where it does not exist; and in many cases, we fear, expose the medium to very injurious influences.

"Such conditions should be allowed to prevail no longer. 'Mixed' circles should be as little mixed as possible—mere wonder-seekers, and men whose moral atmosphere is known to be impure, being carefully excluded. Above all, darkness should give way to light. In the early days of Spiritualism, public dark circles were the exception, and there is no need for them now. There is abundant evidence, that with mediums of the present day, satisfactory phenomena, including even form manifestations, can be obtained without isolation—the medium, where a cabinet is used, being placed near, but outside of it, and in full view of the sitters. But even if this were not so, it is neither wise nor honorable to expose mediums to the risk which have been shown to attend sances held under the conditions that have of late been prevalent; and it were far better that we should have no psychical phenomena than that they should be sought under circumstances which, to say the least, inevitably conduce to suspicion.

"In view of all these considerations, believing that fraud is not of the essence of this confessedly obscure subject, but rather an accident dependent on faulty conditions of research; feeling that Spiritualists have the remedy for the evil in their own hands, and that without its conscientious application they cannot hope to maintain a fair reputation before the world; we earnestly recommend—that in all public circles held for psychical phenomena, the medium be so placed, and in such light, as to be continuously under observation by each member of the circle."

About the same time Mr. Thomas Shorter addressed to the Central Association of Spiritualists some wise and well-considered advice on the question of Public Mediumship. It is needless for us to say that no man is more entitled to be heard with respect on such a subject than Mr. Shorter. His long experience, his sober habits of thought, his candid mind, and his outspoken fearlessness when necessity requires, mark him out as one eminently fitted to handle this difficult subject with discretion and thoroughness. This is Mr. Shorter's conclusion:—

"I maintain in the interests of the medium, of his health and integrity, in the interests of the investigation, in the interests of the public, in the interests of Spiritualists and Spiritualism, that this whole question of professional mediumship and of our relation to it should be seriously reconsidered. I believe if [certain changes were made which have in effect since been carried out] that Spiritualists would no longer have to hang their heads in shame, or to feel that Spiritualism was a reproach, but that it was something of which they might be honorably proud; the medium would see that I was anxious to magnify his office, for I would have him feel the responsibility of his position—that to him is committed a high and holy trust. . . . I believe that Spiritualism would be raised above that vulgar level of doubt and suspicion with which it is now beset and harassed; that we should rise into a higher and purer condition, and that many of us would be able to go beyond the need of psychical manifestations into the higher region of spiritual communion."

If there were some that heard these words, who at the time thought them a hard saying, events have subsequently abundantly vindicated their sagacious foresight. The Declaration promoted by the Central Association of Spiritualists was signed by some two dozen presidents or secretaries of country societies. It commended itself to such representatives of opinion, sufficiently divergent in general conclusions, but wholly agreed in this matter, as M. Akseof, Mr. W. P. Adsead, Mr. Barkas, Miss Anna Blackwell, Mrs. Hardinge Britten, Mr. Calder, Mr. Eglinton, Mr. Farrer, Mrs. and Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, Mr. S. C. Hall, Mrs. Hallock, Mr. J. Enmore Jones, M. Leymarie, M. A. (Oxon), Mr. C. C. Massey, Rev. W. Miall, Hon. Roden Noel, Mr. Hay Nisbet, Mr. Frank Podmore, Mr. Riko, Mr. Dawson Rogers, Dr. Spear, Mr. Morell Theobald, Mr. Tietkens, Mrs. Nosworthy, Mr. Alfred Russel Wallace, Rev. W. Whittear and Dr. G. Wyld, not to mention many other names of consideration and weight.

We need not dwell upon the result of this action. The President of the London Spiritualist Alliance claimed that by it "a heavy blow was given to methods of investigation which should never have been sanctioned"; and that "we have practically destroyed what led to grave abuses." Experience and knowledge will affirm the justice of this claim. At the present moment Spiritualism is in a far different position to that which it occupied when Mr. Shorter so pathetically lamented its fall from its former high estate; and it occupies its present honorable place very largely in consequence of the action that we are now recalling to recollection. If we carry the minds of our readers back to those dark days, it is only that they may the better be able to appreciate the bright outlook that now lies before them. For "we have changed all that" during these three years. We have grown in knowledge by sad experience; we have learned our lesson so far, at any rate, as to turn our backs upon the past with thankfulness, and to welcome the prospect of work worth the name of Research which the President of the Alliance set forth in his recent address.

We shall have occasion hereafter to recur to other matters therein set forth. For the present we desire to fix attention on the bearing of this plan of research on the question of Public Mediumship which Mr. Shorter handled so exhaustively three years since. It goes without saying that the abolition of payment without results would cut away one great source of temptation to which Mr. Shorter drew attention. It will remove from a weak person the temptation to "assist phenomena" when they are weak, or to counterfeited them when they are absent. It will go far, together with the absence of darkness, and of unknown observers promiscuously gathered together at haphazard, to prevent a medium from being placed in an equivocal position. Our attention will be increasingly drawn to the study of that most important question—the influence of conditions on the phenomena, and on the medium himself. Already we know that if we are to hope for good results we must provide good conditions, and above all that we must surround the medium with a harmonious circle who will treat him with tenderness and care, and shield him from injury that ignorance or malice might inflict.

The Spiritualistic public has much to hope for from a rational system of investigation such as that now laid before them. They may reasonably expect an extension of the knowledge of the causes which produce familiar effects; they may hope gradually to dispel the mists of ignorance and prejudice which hang round the subject in the popular mind, albeit in a decreasing degree year by year; they may hope to pick many an inflated theory, and show the hollow emptiness of what looked so fairly rounded till it collapsed. The public at large has much to gain by the clearing away of obstacles to rational investigation; by the sweeping away of vulgarity, folly, and a nauseous kind of cant that have repelled from the threshold of inquiry many a weak-minded investigator whose interest was not robust enough to save him from disgust; by the repression of ill-regulated enthusiasm and the development of reasonable methods of inquiry and research. But the medium has most of all to gain: by protection from insult and injury from foolish, or ignorant, or malicious persons; by his removal from equivocal conditions, under which it is almost impossible to distinguish perfect sincerity from consummate trickery; by the development of his powers under guarded conditions carefully carried out, so that they may be brought to perfection without injury to his health, whether of body, soul, or spirit.—Light, London.

Chicago Independent Preachers.

On Sunday, December 20th, before his large audience at the Opera House, Rev. H. W. Thomas preached on Religious Intolerance. He had not only a Scripture text, but the poor words of a living Methodist bigot for a text. We extract as follows from his discourse:

In a paper read before the Methodist preachers' meeting in this city two weeks ago, the Rev. J. W. Bland is reported to have said of Prof. Swing and myself that "these men are responsible for infusing into the church atmosphere of this city a type of theology and worship that is as foreign to the true principles of Christ's Gospel as Hell is far from Heaven. Men who ignore the wickedness of the unredeemed heart, the validity of the atonement, and the dreadful doom of the impenitent, are not fit representatives of that religion which cost the sufferings and death of the only begotten Son of God." "We are drifting," he said, "into virtual Universalism. Our standard of theology at Evans-ton Garrett Biblical Institute is so lame in its theodicy that any student who has any universalistic proclivities would be confirmed after embracing the teaching there given."

This studied attack upon the pastors of two of the largest Protestant congregations in Chicago was made before a meeting of Methodist preachers. It would be difficult to frame an accusation against the moral and religious teachings of any men in any age more surprising and severe than the charge this clergyman here brings against Prof. Swing and myself. He deliberately accuses us of corrupting the judgment and conscience and conduct of the Christianity of this city. He charges us with infusing into the church atmosphere of this city a "type of theology and worship that is as foreign to the great principles of Christ's Gospel as Hell is far from Heaven."

But what has there been to justify such a terrible arraignment as that formulated by the Rev. Bland? We had all hoped that the days of bitterness and denunciation in debate were passing away; but such a hope does not find much encouragement from the other Monday meetings of the city pastors should join in such attacks, would it help the cause of religion? Would it promote Christian love? To say nothing of the pastors of the Central and the People's Churches, what estimate must the Methodist preachers' meeting place upon the intelligence and the moral conscientiousness of the 5,000 people who attend these two churches? Do they think that all these people are children; that they have no judgment as to what is true or right, or that they suppose our teachings can change the eternal laws of God? Yes, that is about the way they rate you in the scale of intelligence and moral principle. What estimate does the Rev. Bland place upon the intelligence of Chicago, and the power of the hundred and more of other pulpits that Prof. Swing and myself should in a few years be able to corrupt the judgment and the morals of the whole city? Surely he must think that all these able pastors must have very little strength, and that the cause they represent is weak, and the people not strong.

What he means is this: That men who do not accept his views, or more broadly, who are called the old orthodox views on these subjects, are not fit to preach the gospel. And he means more than this. He means and says that the views that we do hold are as far from the principles of the gospel of Christ as hell is from heaven. That is the fair and only inference that I can draw from his statements, and I ask, is it possible for any position to be more narrow or dogmatic? The great principles of the gospel of Christ are to be found in his theory of depravity, atonement, and eschatology. Anything else is as far from the gospel as hell is far from heaven. And thus are the principles of the gospel taken out of the realm of the heart, and life, and sympathy of mankind and reduced to a cold, dogmatic statement concerning depravity, atonement, and perdition; and any one who does not accept this is not fit to preach. . . . John Wesley teaches that the lost will suffer the torments of material fire. He says: "Put your finger in that candle; can you bear it for one minute? How then can you bear hell-fire? Surely, it would be torment enough to have the flesh burnt off from only one finger; what, then, will it be to have the whole body plunged into a lake of fire, burning with brimstone?" Wesley is an authority in the Methodist Church, and of course Brother Bland and the Methodist preachers' meeting believe this; and to all this inexpressible torment Wesley adds and emphasizes the awful declaration that it will continue forever. This is what the Rev. Bland means by the "awful doom of the impenitent"; and if we do not believe it we are as "far from the principles of the gospel of Christ as hell is far from heaven." Well, if that is the gospel—the "good news" to our world—the further we can get away from it the better.

What we teach here is that God is the Father of all souls; that He loves all; that life is an education; that all punishment is for love and for correction; that if men sin they must suffer; that this great order of government moves on into the eternal world; that God's saving work goes forward there as well as here; and that sinners must suffer there as well as here—that the law that punishes sin is eternal, and that whilst sin lasts suffering must last. But we do not and cannot believe that God is good and at the same time believe in any such torment as Wesley and the old theology teach; nor that a God of goodness will inflict such torments upon any one soul forever. . . .

But still, the Rev. Bland confesses that "we"—that is, the Methodists and others—"are drifting into virtual universalism," and that with him means the "paralysis of conscience and spiritual apparacy." But he is not mistaken in saying that the world is drifting into virtual universalism, and that Dr. Raymond's "theodicy" is not holding it back, but rather helping it along. I am glad that this new preacher in our city is so wise in discovering the "signs of the times," but sorry that he sees in it "the paralysis of conscience." It is not the "paralysis," but the awakening of the higher life of the conscience of man that is revolting against the old despair and leading the new age on to a higher and better faith in God and a brighter hope for the ages to come. No theodicy or vindication of the justice of God has ever been written, or can one be, from the old standpoint of total depravity and endless punishment.

On the same day and hour Dr. Swing spoke on "The Naturalness of Christ" to his large audience in Central Hall, closing with this fine passage:

The goodness of God for which the people had waited went, in the hands of this new advocate, beyond all former limits. The summer rain was so copious that the stream of love overflowed its old banks and watered and enriched what had only been a desert. It passed into politics, and declared all men equal; it passed beyond the illogical lines of sex, and made woman the equal of man; it swept over the unjust line of age, and made the life of a little child equal the life of a king; it entered the home and asked kindness to displace severity; it approached the fasting, complaining ascetic and said "Why fast and weep in the world of God?" And when all earth had been touched by this new philosophy another curtain arose, and above them the abodes of the Father's House.

Then Judea came to her ringing of Christmas bells. By the contagion of love and truth the civilized lands followed to this festival. Standing on the border of such a week of home happiness let us all feel that beneath this season there does not lie as a basis only the humble life of a saint or divine man in Palestine, but a philosophy of life, happiness, love, and immortality; so vast that no one day of the year can express its beauty or value.

In traveling you will often see sitting in front of a mountain or the ocean some artist busy making a picture of what thus rises up or rolls out. How the ocean and the mountain must laugh and say, "That child wonder is trying to place us on his canvas!" But the artist does something. He secures some hint about the mountain, some trace of a wave. Thus we can come to this Christmas idea and barely touch it with our wreaths of evergreen and gifts to each other, but the real truth surpasses us and finds its life-size and color in the moral world of the human race and in the rich hopes of reunion and homes beyond the grave. Let us catch our best glimpses. Under our poverty of the symbols reposes the greater truth, just as in the days of Jesus beneath the simplest raiment of the thinker lay always the greatest thought. Let us go on, step by step, measuring earth's ideas. In a few years or days we shall pass from this world to one of clearer vision and more perfect measurements. The Christmas chimes are only the preludes to a grander music hereafter.

We are glad of the good words of these men, but we wish Dr. Swing could preach on "The Naturalness of the Spiritual Body," and show the inevitable continuity of personal life in the higher realm, and the naturalness too of return therefrom, of actual spirit presence here. Both of these gifted preachers might well enlarge with emphasis and clearness on this great question of our day. They would gain new life and light and power by the effort.

Lightning.

The cause of death by lightning is the sudden absorption of the electric current. When a thunder cloud which is highly charged with positive electricity hangs over any place the earth beneath it becomes abnormally negative, and the body of any animal standing under the cloud will partake of this influence. If in this condition a discharge takes place from the cloud, the restoration of the equilibrium will be sudden and violent—or, in the language of hypothesis, the electric fluid will rush up into the body from the earth with such force as to produce death. And this is what is meant by being "struck by lightning."—Inter Ocean.

The Paris correspondent of the Lancet states that when Dr. Pasteur read his last report on rabies at the Academy of Science, his friend, the late M. Bouley, asked whether dogs rendered insusceptible to hydrophobia by repeated inoculations would not themselves be liable to communicate the disease by biting. M. Pasteur could give no immediate reply, but admitted that it was a subject for serious consideration.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate. HUNDREDS OF BOTTLES PRESCRIBED. Dr. C. R. Dake, Belleville, Ill., says: "I have prescribed hundreds of bottles of it. It is of great value in all forms of nervous disease which are accompanied by loss of power."

Woman and the Household.

BY HESTER M. POOLE. [108 West 23rd Street, New York.]

READY.

I would be ready, Lord, My house in order set, None of the work thou gavest me To do, unfinished yet.

—Margaret J. Preston.

In continuation of the papers read at the last Woman's congress, we make extracts from the report made by Prof. Marie Mitchell, on SCIENCE.

"The best record of the work of women in science, during the past year, is that of the New Orleans Exhibition. Mrs. Ordway reports the names of some thirty women whose exhibits in Astronomy, Botany, Chemistry and Geology, she pronounces good or very good. These specimens of work were from Boston, N. E. Woman's Club; Nat. Hist. Society, Inst. of Technology, Cornell University; Louisville School of Pharmacy; Vassar College. The well known names of Grace Anna Lewis, Mary Treat and Ellen Swallow Richards reappear. While new ones are added as workers in the same fields. Scientific associations composed of both men and women have sprung up; one is reported from Buffalo which is said to do earnest work. Many of the students of Vassar, some from Wellesley, and some from Smith, have gone into the medical profession. The Massachusetts Medical Society have admitted fourteen women in the last year. Dr. Adeline S. Whitney, and Dr. Grace Wolcott and Dr. Lena Ingraham. At the close of the session of the A. A. S. of Ann Arbor, two young women were elected as Fellows, Mrs. Helen C. D. Abbott, Phil. Section Chemistry, and Mrs. Alice Boardman Roxbury, Geologist. We find little record in scientific journals of what women are doing in Europe. Occasionally there is a notice in Nature like the following: 'Mrs. E. A. Omerod has issued her eighth annual report on insects injurious to vegetation.' We think we may fairly mention as scientific work done by women the recent undertaking entered upon by the Association Collegiate Alumni. This undertaking has consisted in the collection of health statistics from female college graduates. The object was to test the widespread belief that college education is detrimental to the health of women. A list of questions prepared under the supervision of excellent physicians, was sent to the women graduates of our American colleges, numbering in 1882, twelve hundred and ninety. Of these seven hundred and five sent returns, a larger proportion than is generally received in like cases. These returns were put into the hands of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor, and the results were given to the public in a report recently published. They show that there is no reasonable foundation for the opinion that the college education is injurious to the health of young women.

WOMAN'S SEDENTARY WORK.

"In the half-lighted and wholly unventilated offices, women work patiently at the formulæ, and pile up the logarithmic figures; in the open air, under the blue sky or the starlit canopy, boys and men make the measurements. The broken-down school teacher or author is at once ordered out of doors; might not the out-of-door life save in advance? There seems to have been a backward movement in this respect. The seaside towns tell many stories of women who have in times past, successfully brought to port their husbands' ships when the captain has been disabled. We have the one recent instance in which Secretary Folger sustained the woman who wished to pilot her own boat. To navigate ships does not, at present, appear to be a suitable vocation for women, but why are they not land surveyors? Land surveying is fair weather work. Not every land surveyor carries his own chain and theodolite, and if he did, are they any more burdensome than the same amount of avoirdupois in the kitchen or the parlor? The students of Vassar have often surveyed the college farm, girls and boys from the New England High Schools have together measured some field. Why has it ceased with the school days? It will be said, 'There's no demand,' but supply makes demand. Let a woman put up a sign, 'Land Surveying,' and her office life will have its 'outings.' It will be remembered that the demand for female physicians was not great when a woman's name first appeared in front of a doctor's office. In 1771, there was born at Nantucket a woman, Phebe Folger by name, a near relative of the mother of Benjamin Franklin, who, studying by herself and with her brother, became an expert in mathematics. She taught navigation to her husband, and he became, in consequence, the captain of a ship. There is a tradition that she surveyed lots in the western parts of the island, but no records of these surveys can now be found. She added to these accomplishments the womanly attributes. She wrote a fine plain hand; she dressed with nicety and neatness; she gave also a third instance of the life-sustaining power of scientific work to those of Caroline Herschel and Mary Somerville, by living until upwards of eighty years of age."

Miss Mary F. Eastman reported on EDUCATION.

"There is especial rejoicing among the workers for temperance that in many of the States they have secured legislative action, requiring that public schools give special instruction as to the effect of alcoholic drinks and narcotics on the human system. If this prove as effective in checking the evil, as many believe that it will, it will probably signalize the centennial year of temperance work in the United States. There are local indications that industrial training is coming to be recognized as due even to girls. In the Normal school at Salem, Mass.—which is for girls only—an elective course for training in practice with hand tools, has been in operation for the last year and a half. Fifty-four pupils were classified last year, and there were more applications for instruction than could be accommodated. 'Now,' said the principal of the school to me, with apparent pride, 'when our young ladies want a bookshelf, or even a platform, they can make it.' As a help in the great work of moral education so difficult to accomplish through homilies and text-books, we recognize the 'Bands of Mercy' formed to encourage children to be tender to all living things. The organization, established in 1882, has now a thousand branches, with more than a hundred thousand members."

Mrs. K. G. Wells read a report of a committee lately formed, from which we extract, it is called,

EMERGENCY AND HYGIENE.

"The work of the Massachusetts Emergency and Hygiene Association has largely increased during the past year. Dr. Francis Minot is its President, Miss E. M. Tower its Secretary, and Mrs. K. G. Wells the chairman of the Executive Committee. Besides the executive committee there are nine other committees, each doing active work. Thirteen courses of lectures have been given to policemen and two to five men, two hundred and sixty-four passing the examination. One course on school hygiene was given to the teachers of the public schools, the lecture afterwards being published. Eight courses were afterwards given to women and five to men connected with various institutions."

The next essay by Dr. Jennie McCowan of Davenport, Iowa, was upon "Women Physicians in Hospitals for the Insane." The writer showed the necessity that women in hospitals should have one of their own sex as physicians, and then told how woman appointed in medical boards had been "hoycotted" by the male physicians in charge. In some cases they have been driven out of insane asylums by men in power, after having been kept in clerical capacity only, without professional recognition, or opportunity to exercise their skill upon women patients. Dr. McCowan said: "How much could justly be expected of women under such circumstances, with no opportunities for the exercise of what professional ability they had, no opportunities for the cultivation of judgment or skill in the specialty, obliged to do what their conscience did not approve, and leave undone what they considered of vital importance, embarrassed by the illy concealed disdain of their associates on the staff, ignored socially by the ladies of the official family, and hampered in every way by a superintendent who desired the failure rather than the success of the experiment. To live year after year with lunatics in this kind of a professional atmosphere, with no escape from the pressure day and night, but into the solitude of her own chamber, was enough to unnerve the strongest heart of them all. There was no escaping the conclusion that if the woman physician was to win her goal she must not be so heavily weighted for the race."

And yet in regard to success when opportunity is afforded, she continues: "In answer to the charge that women could not control virulent and vicious, it was sufficient to point to the Indiana 'Reformatory for Women and Girls,' and to the 'Reformatory Prison for Women,' at Sherborn, Mass. In these institutions the most violent and vicious criminals of the lowest and most degraded type have been successfully controlled by women—so successfully that they not only will compare favorably with any other prisons in the civilized world, but they are acknowledged models. In 1880, Pennsylvania took an advanced step. By statutory enactment, the female patients in the State hospitals at Norristown and Harrisburg were placed in charge of a woman, who, with the title of physician-in-chief, assumed the sole responsibility of their care and treatment. Last year (1884) Massachusetts passed a law providing for the appointment of female assistant physicians in the State hospitals. In New York, in the same year, a bill of similar import passed both House and Senate, but failed to become a law for want of the Governor's signature. In other States appointments have been made from time to time, chiefly by the younger and more progressive superintendents, without statutory compulsion.

"The following is a list, without regard to chronological order, of the hospitals in which women physicians are now employed: 'Pennsylvania—At the State hospitals at Harrisburg and Norristown, in each a woman physician-in-chief, the former with one and the latter with two women assistants, and at Blockley hospital in Philadelphia. 'Massachusetts—At the State hospitals at Taunton, Worcester, Danvers and Northampton, and at the New England hospital in Boston, and at Tewksbury almshouse. 'Ohio—Dayton and Athens. 'Michigan—Kalamazoo and Pontiac. 'Illinois—Kankakee and Cook County hospital. 'Indiana—Indianapolis. 'Iowa—Independence. 'Nebraska—Lincoln. 'New York—The Millard asylum at Ovid. 'Making a sum total of twenty-two women now serving on the staff of eighteen hospitals in nine States. And what of the results? It is yet quite too soon to speak of results. It is one hundred and thirty-five years since the first hospital in the United States was open for the reception of insane patients. When hospitals conducted by women have been in existence one hundred and thirty-five years, we may draw comparisons and speak of results."

BOOK REVIEWS.

[All books noticed under this head, are for sale at, or can be ordered through, the office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.] THE NEXT WORLD INTERVIEWED. By Mrs. S. G. Horn, author of "Strange Visitors." New York: Thomas B. Knox & Co., 813 Broadway. 1885. Price $1.50. This is a highly interesting work, containing messages from the following distinguished characters: Prince Albert, Harriet Martineau, Charles Kingsley, Judge Edmonds, John Stuart Mill, Horace Greeley, Prof. Agassiz, Secretary Seward, Bulwer, Tilton, Abraham Lincoln, Charlotte Cushman, Edwin Forrest, Charles Dickens, De Quincey, Fanny Fern, Hans Christian Andersen, George Sand, Mrs. Gaskell, Fenimore Cooper, Herodotus, G. Smith, Dr. Livingston, Victor Emmanuel, The Pope, Tiers, G. H. Lewis, William Howitt, George Thompson, Princess Alice, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lord Beaconsfield, George Eliot, Dean Stanley, Garibaldi, Charles Darwin, Mary, Queen of Scots, Gambetta, Wagner, Longfellow, Jane Carlyle, Benjamin Franklin, Egypt, Thomas Carlyle, James T. Brady, Peter Cooper, Robert Bruce, Czar of Russia, Lord Frederick Cavendish, Karl Friedrich Zöllner, Cromwell Fleetwood Varley, Bishop Colenso, A. Stranger.

The following message from Judge Edmonds will give our readers a general idea of the character of the book: "My work is now completed, and I here thank you, Mr. Horn, and the medium, for the attention you have shown to the guests I have presented to you. 'I have sought the aid of the most intellectual and competent individuals of the present century, for the purpose of representing to the public different phases of spirit-life. Spiritism is steadily progressing. Prophecies, made during the early years of its inception, are being fulfilled. 'Old creeds are passing away. In the light of these new truths, it is impossible for man to retain the dark superstitions of the past.

"The leading minds of Germany, France and England are awakening to the fact that the inhabitants of another world are knocking at their doors. The Church trembles for her mythical creeds, under the voice of this new dispensation."

"America has always taken the initiative in progressive movements, and this greatest event of the nineteenth century, which opens the great North-west passage to the Polar Sea of death, making it navigable, and unveiling the mysteries that have kept mankind in a state of fear and tremor for centuries, has been owing to her enterprise and spirit of investigation. 'Every age has had its 'Mysteries,' which the priesthood have taught the people to believe were connected with their future state, that they might thereby strengthen their own power, and attain an influence over ignorant and superstitious minds, by professing to be the go-between, the exponents of these dread and sacred mysteries to the people, who were incompetent to fathom them. 'Our mission is to enlighten humanity, and to prove that the sacred mysteries of Christianity, like the superstitions beliefs in the past—attending the eclipse, the earthquake, the volcanic eruptions—are the result of simple laws, and no miracles to be received with unquestioning faith. 'As to the occupation of spirits: their mode of living; their creeds and theories of life; statements given by different individuals in the Spirit-world will vary according to their development, their intelligence and the position or locality they occupy in the Next World. 'It is true that that Next World is the refined spirit of this one, and therefore somewhat similar, but no more similar than the early geological condition of man, when it was unfit for the habitation of man, was compared with the present condition of the globe. 'The refining process had to take place in your sphere before man could exist so likewise the Spirit-world has been refined to its present condition. 'Many centuries from hence, earth will be refined to conditions that will enable spirits to live in its atmosphere, visibly, whereas now we can make ourselves apparent but for a few moments. 'There is a mistaken idea prevailing among many as to the different spheres in the Spirit-world. It is supposed that these spheres are strata or layers, one above the other. I inclined to that belief while I lived on earth, but have since discovered my error. A Spirit-world is a vast globe, very many times larger than the earth. I cannot give the exact size. The different localities in this Spirit-world we term spheres. Persons, passing from earth, according to their development, are drawn to different positions of this immense globe, and the word 'Gulf' that which Dives saw (as depicted in the Bible) which separated him from his companions, is the condition that existed in one locality remote from the others, and in that locality all individuals in need of reformation, all men from low dens, or evil-minded, undeveloped persons, are attracted by a fixed law. It is their own nature and native place as the Polar Region is the home of the Esquimaux. They progress out of it, and develop by means of education, the same as a small-eating Indian may grow out of his low state and grub-like condition into a higher and more civilized one. 'But time and their own efforts, and no miracle, will produce that change and result. On earth there are many places where those five whom we call 'earth-bound spirits.' Their homes are in the mountain fastnesses, uninhabited islands, great prairies and plains, and in the Polar Regions. Extremes of cold and heat generate an interior spirit-atmosphere unknown to the chemistry of earth, and which is never marked on your thermometer or barometer. 'A spirit community has inhabited the mountains of Asia and Africa, from the earliest existence of man. The historic Greeks and Romans and Italy have had their spiritual residents, known to the clairvoyant Greeks and Romans, and depicted in the ancient Mythology. But as civilization advanced, and roads were made over the hills and valleys, earth-bound spirits deserted those mountains, forests and glens, for more neglected regions. 'The practice of the Catholic Church in exorcising the demons and sorcery in the most of the world, inhabited by spirits, to exorcise so-called evil spirits, though regarded as a superstition, is based upon an instinctive perception of laws that govern the spirits between the two worlds; for the magnetism of living persons disturbs the rest and abode of spirits, and they are obliged to remove when their solitude becomes a place of general resort. 'The Dark Ages, when Christianity taught men cruelty and not love in the times of martyrdom and inquisition, earth-bound spirits were nearly as barbarous as the savages and cannibals. The horrid vision related by Dante, and the pictures by medieval monks and inspired painters, representing the tortures of the damned souls, were drawn from partially-clairvoyant visions of the condition of spirits who passed from earth in the midst of rapine and murder, and the innumerable cruelties of that age, fertile in inventions for producing pain and anguish. 'There is a spiritual meaning to every fable. Every creed, that has gained a place in the affections of mankind, has an interior spiritual significance based on the eternal principles of Truth—and the pictures of after-life drawn by the Brahmins, the Mohammedan, the Egyptians, Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans, contained the germ of spiritual truth. Language is symbolical, and the pictures of the soul's after-condition, represented by the Oriental writers of the Scriptures, are symbolical of mental states, and not actualities. 'It is well-known to all observers, and students of medicine, that the soul is capable of experiencing the most intense pain, and the most intense pleasure, and a desire for revenge, cause greater torment than pain inflicted upon the body, so that individuals resort to suicide and all species of bodily torment, to decrease the anguish of the soul. 'Therefore, as the spirit becomes many more times susceptible to ecstatic pain or pleasure, when released from the body, the clairvoyant pictures of heaven and hell are not to be regarded as emblematic of states, and not veritable places; as, for instance, the Sea of Ice described by Dante, the Hour's heaven of the Mohammedan, or the burning lake of fire of the Christian. 'We have now arrived at a point in the world's history, where practical knowledge has taken the place of ideal speculation. Plain truth has usurped the Kingdom of Dreams. The occult change has ensued in the World of Spirits. The angels and messengers from the Spirit-world no longer address the citizens of earth in hyperbolic language, but in words terse and explicit, free from the metaphoric allusions employed by the Prophets of old, they give to mankind information relative to the Next World without adornment; describing a world of cause and effect, not a miraculous Heaven and Hell, unadaptable to this material existence, but a spiritualized earth, for which mortal experience is given man, to adapt him to live in with pleasure or pain, according to development and the use here made of material advantages."

ELLY'S CREAM BALM. Cleanses the Head, Allays Inflammation, Heals Sores, Restores the Senses of Taste, Hearing & Smell, A quick Relief, A Positive Cure. CREAM BALM has gained an unenviable reputation, displacing all other preparations. It is sold in each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price 50c. by mail or at drugstore paid for circular. ELLY BROTHERS, Druggists, Oswego, N. Y.

DYSPEPSIA Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and droopy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases. 'I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla.' THOMAS COOR, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City. Sick Headache For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all. MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn. Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headaches. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used. Hood's Sarsaparilla Sold by all druggists. 21; six for $5. Made only by G. L. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar. BUY SALZER'S (No. 1) SEEDS, Cats, Free. LOTS, SIZE 40X100 FEET, LAKEVIEW, near LAKE KINGSLEY, $4 $50 ORANGE GROVE, FLORIDA. Send 2-cent stamp for Maps, etc., to the TROPICAL LAND CO., P. O. Box 153, Jacksonville, Florida. Refer to J. G. Geo. F. Drew, Jacksonville, Fla. or Rev. C. C. McLean, St. Augustine, Fla.

FISHER'S MOUTH-BREATHING INHIBITOR. Sleeping with the mouth open is the bane of millions. A very large percentage of all throat troubles are CAUSED from this unfortunate habit, and all throat troubles are aggravated by it. Can the habit be broken? Yes, at once. With the above device it is impossible to sleep with your mouth open. Fungus diseases are seldom found in those who use the Inhibitor. For cure of catarrhs, which tell of some of the terrible diseases that are contracted by mouth-breathing. Do You Snore? The snorer not only suffers personally, but becomes a general nuisance to a comfortable, quiet, and refreshing sleep. The mouth-breathing inhibitor, by closing the mouth during sleep, and forcing air into the natural breathing organs, will relieve him and enable him to sleep. With the above device you can snore. The Mouth-Breathing Inhibitor is sent post-paid to any address on receipt of 3c. per 100 in postage. Order from Address: FISHER'S PATENT NOVELTY CO., 69 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

ESTLEY ORGANS have been favorites for years. No organ is constructed with more care, even to minutest detail. Skilled judges have pronounced its tone full, round, and powerful, combined with admirable tone and softness. Illustrated Catalogues sent free. ESTLEY ORGAN CO., Brattleboro, Vt. 184 and 190 State St., Chicago, 202 North Broadway, St. Louis, 20 West Third and 40 Jackson St., St. Martin.

GUNN'S NEWEST (REVISED) Home Book of Health or Newest Family Physician: 213th Edition Now Ready, Gives ninety fresh items; shows how to put in the best sanitary condition house, premises, or town, for feeding of children, and all infants, and presents modern treatment in ordinary ailments and contingencies combined with large experience in forty years successful practice, with all forms of disease, and in preventing ill health. 125 pages royal octavo, dark leather, el. German or English. Copyrighted since 1885—of the additions made in original issues—by the estate of Dr. HENRY B. JOHNSON, Physician to the Cincinnati Cholera Hospital in 1849. Reasons Why Every Family Should Have It 1st. It is an APPROVED MEDICAL GUIDE for the family, giving the symptoms and treatment of the diseases of men, women and children—a Doctor in the house—ready to be consulted at any moment when sudden sickness and unforeseen accidents render immediate relief the one thing sought for. 2nd. It is written in the plain language of the people. Any order of common intelligence can understand it. 3rd. It contains the result of the life time study, practice and labor of one of the most noted writers of the country, and his labors have been largely supplemented. 4th. The remedies recommended are generally simple, efficient, and ordinarily such as are easily obtained. 5th. The work can be RELIED ON. 6th. Those who have it may economize; expenses may be avoided, and time and money saved. 7th. It is more than a book teaching how to cure disease, inasmuch as it will prove highly valuable to those who choose a wholly different class of remedies. It will teach ALL what to do to become good nurses of the sick, and good judges of symptoms, or indications of approaching illness. 8th. It is a "Home Book of Health," more important than the Family Doctor, because "prevention is bet'er than cure." 9th. The disease and death familiarity with the laws of life and health would prevent. Without an acquaintance with the rules that govern our being, it is hardly possible to avoid disease, and it is the plain duty of all, and a peculiar heads of families, to become informed as to the means of preventing disease, preserving health and prolonging life. 10th. It is, in all respects well manufactured of good material, and is furnished at a price within the reach of all. Experience has shown that no investment of time or money is so certain to bring in a rich return as that devoted to the acquirement of a knowledge of the physical laws of health-how to take care of the body. 11th. This "NEWEST" Revised edition has been carefully amended and improved throughout, and furnishes one-fourth increase of reading matter over prior issues. This book will be sent post-paid to any address where no agent is at work on receipt of the price, $4.50. DANIEL AMBROSE, Pub'r, 69 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH For Beauty of Polish, saving Labor, Cleanliness, Durability and Cheapness, Unequalled. MOISE BROS., Proprietors, Canton, Mass. NO MORE ROUND SHOULDERS! KNUCKERBOCKER SHOULDER BRACE Knickerbocker's Improved Shoulder Brace, Chest, promotes respiration, prevents round shoulders, a perfect Sarr Supporter for Ladies. No harness—simple—like all others. Sizes for Men, Women, Boys, and Girls. Cheapest and only Reliable Shoulder Brace. Sold by Druggists and General Stores, or sent post-paid on receipt of $1 per pair, plain and lined, or $1.50 silk-lined. Send check or money order to the MICHIGAN CENTRAL SHOULDER BRACE CO., Easton, Pa. N. A. Johnson, Prop'r.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL THE NIAGARA FALLS ROUTE. "So long as the waters of that mighty river thunder down to the awful depths below, on the rock and iron, the surge and foam, and pneumatic spray of nature's cataclysmic masterpiece remain to delight and awe the human soul, thousands and tens of thousands of tourists, young and grand-children will journey over the only railroad from which it can be seen. There is but one Niagara Falls on earth, and there is but one great railroad to it."—Col. P. B. Deming in St. Louis Spectator. Transfers at Falls View, near the brink of the Horseshoe Fall, where the finest view is obtainable without leaving the cars, cross the gorge of Niagara river on the grand steel double-track Cantilever Bridge, the greatest triumph of modern engineering, and connect in Union Depots, at Niagara Falls and Buffalo with the New York Central and Hudson River, the only four-track railroad in the world. Palace Cars through without change from Chicago, Toledo and Detroit to Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Bay City, Mackinaw, Toronto, Buffalo, Syracuse, Boston, Albany and New York. Also from Toledo to Buffalo, via Detroit and Niagara Falls, connecting with train for Mackinaw. Unrivaled Dining Cars. Trains leave Chicago, foot of Lake Street, daily at 3:30 p. m., 9:15 p. m., and 10:30 p. m., and daily except Sunday at 6:15 a. m., 9:00 a. m., and 1:00 p. m. No extra charge is made on the Limited New York Express, No. 6. For information regarding routes, rates or accommodations apply to any agent of the Company, or to E. L. WHITNEY, O. W. HUGGLES, ASST. GEN'L PASSENGER & TICKET AGT., CHICAGO.

DOMINOES ABSOLUTELY GIVEN AWAY! Any reader of this issue of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL that will get three friends to join with them in ordering each a set of our Improved Noiseless Dominoes, and remitting 50 cents, will get their own set free; four sets sent post paid for 50 cents; we want a boy or girl in every school in the UNITED STATES to act as agent. Every scholar is bound to have a set, as they will be all the rage this fall and winter. They sell for 10 cents per set. We will furnish them to any one willing to act as our agent, post paid, at the low rate of 75 cents per dozen sets. We will take postage stamps in payment if desired. From 3 doz. to 12 doz sets can be sold in any school. HOW TO DO IT: Order 1 doz. sets; take one set to school with you, and at recess get three of your best friends to join with you in a game and then tell them you are the agent, and supply them each a set for 10 cents a piece. Once started, every child will order. Many teachers are acting as agents. We are manufacturing them in large quantities, which enables us to furnish them at such a low price and we can fill all orders inside of 48 hours after remittance is received. A single set will be sent post paid to any address on receipt of 10 cents in postage stamps. Address Prairie City Novelty Co., 69 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

FOR COUGHS, CROUP AND CONSUMPTION USE TAYLOR'S "CHEROKEE" REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN. The sweet gum, as gathered from a tree of the same name, growing along the small streams in the Southern States, contains a stimulating expectorant principle that loosens the phlegm producing the early morning cough, and stimulates the child to throw off the false membrane in croup, and whooping-cough. When combined with the heating mucilaginous principle in the mullein plant of the old fields, it presents in TAYLOR'S CHEROKEE REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN the most known remedy for Coughs, Croup, Whooping-cough and Consumption, and is available at any drug store, please to call. Ask your druggist for it. Price, 50c. and $1. Walter E. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.

Religio-Philosophical Journal

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT 92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO.

By JOHN O. BUNDY.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION IN ADVANCE.

One Copy, 1 year, $2.50.
6 months, $1.25.

SINGLE COPIES, 5 CENTS. SPECIMEN COPY FREE.

REMITTANCES should be made by United States Postal Money Order, Express Company Money Order, Registered Letter or Draft on either New York or Chicago.

DO NOT IN ANY CASE SEND CHECKS ON LOCAL BANKS.
All letters and communications should be addressed, and all remittances made payable to JOHN C. BUNDY, Chicago, Ill.Advertising Rates, 20 cents per Agate Line.
Reading Notice, 40 cents per line.

Lord & Thomas, Advertising Agents, McCormick Block, Chicago. All communications relative to advertising should be addressed to them.

Entered at the postoffice in Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL desires it to be distinctly understood that it can accept no responsibility as to the opinions expressed by Contributors and Correspondents. Free and open discussion within certain limits is invited, and in these circumstances writers are alone responsible for the articles to which their names are attached.

Exchanges and individuals in quoting from the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, are requested to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications of correspondents.

Anonymous letters and communications will not be noticed. The name and address of the writer are required as a guaranty of good faith. Rejected manuscripts cannot be preserved, neither will they be returned, unless sufficient postage is sent with the request.

When newspapers or magazines are sent to the JOURNAL, containing matter for special attention, the sender will please draw a line around the article to which he desires to call notice.

CHICAGO, ILL., Saturday, January 16, 1886.

Two Facts for Thought and Study.

Here are two facts for psychic researchers to solve, and for all thoughtful Spiritualists to bear in mind. We give them as given us by persons whose testimony would be taken on any other subject without hesitation.

Some thirty years ago Dr. L. C. Whiting, of East Saginaw, Mich., a well known resident there, had a séance with a medium through whom Rev. James Beach of Winstead, Ct., purported to speak to Dr. Whiting. Mr. Beach preached in the old parish church in Dr. Whiting's boyhood in that town a score or two of years before this, and the medium knew nothing of him, and but little of Dr. Whiting. The Puritan minister said he took every opportunity possible to come back and correct the errors of his old doctrinal preaching, as he now saw the mistakes of his past, and regretted them as earnestly as he then believed them to be God's truth. This and much else was said in his quaint and characteristic way.

He also said: "Now I want to give you a test of my identity. You must go to the old house where I lived and hunt among the rubbish in the garret, and you will find one of my old sermons on infant damnation, a horrible falsehood which it seems strange I ever could have believed, and which I am very sorry I ever preached." Dr. Whiting soon went to what is now Whitingville, Ct., where the old parsonage stood, occupied by other persons. He said to the occupant, "I want to look in your garret among the old relics there," and the reply was: "You will find it full of cobwebs and very dirty. Nobody has been in it for three years, for I nailed up the door at that time and it has not been opened since. I advise you not to go into the dusty place, but you can, if you wish." Of course he went, broke open the door himself, found the cobwebs and dirt even worse than he was told, searched among old shoes, bits of iron, etc., found papers scattered about in a corner, and the sermon among them, which he took away, not telling why he sought or wanted it. Here we have the place where an old manuscript sermon was found given through a medium who knew nothing about it, to Dr. Whiting, who was equally ignorant. Clairvoyance might solve the finding, but could not well solve the statements and directions which purported to come from a third person, a returned dweller in the spirit-land. Dr. Whiting was, and is, a Spiritualist, with more than average care in his researches and conclusions.

Our second fact is from a middle-aged and very intelligent lady, the wife of a physician in a Western city, and not a Spiritualist. Her mother had been treated by a well known clairvoyant physician before this lady's marriage, and one day this physician, in an unconscious trance, talked very earnestly of the future career of her present husband, who was then in the room with her mother and herself. He was not decided as to his future, but rather expected to be a clergyman as his family wished, yet had thought of studying medicine. The entranced physician said he would be a doctor and would be very successful. He put great stress on the statement that his patients and friends would be deeply attached to him and hold him in an affectionate esteem peculiarly deep and tender, and that he would be greatly mourned when he passed away. This was said with such feeling that all eyes were filled with tears, and it has been fulfilled save the closing statement. He still lives, in an excellent medical practice, cherished as the near and trusted friend by a wide circle of good people. How the future life-line of this then young man could be so clear and open in the mind of an entranced seer—a man of strict veracity—we leave for others to decide.

The Pernicious Influence Exerted by Cranks in the Pulpit.

It appears from late special dispatches to the daily papers of this city, that the exhortations of a ministerial crank in Blount Township, eight miles north of Danville, Ill., has been instrumental in producing very deleterious effects. In that township there has resided for years a little community of Adventists. Prominent among them was Wolcott Allen, a prosperous farmer, who died two years ago, leaving his estate to be divided between two sons, George and Heber, then aged 30 and 32 years respectively, and his daughter, Mary, 22 years. The sons had previously married and settled upon farms which are now extensive and valuable, and to each two children had been born. The Allens had been content with the Adventist doctrines until they attended a Methodist revival at the town schoolhouse on the evening of Dec. 4th last. The Rev. John Swisher, a coal miner, of massive physique and great vocal strength, presided. He is a hallelujah exhorter, pounds the open Bible by way of emphasis, froths at the mouth, jumps over the pulpit, walks on the front seats, and, as he says, "shakes sinners over an open hell, so they can appreciate the climate in heaven." The Allens were visibly excited, and one of them arose to explain that he was a believer in the Adventist faith. "Read the Bible; I say to you, read the Bible," was Swisher's reply, "and then you'll find out which is right." The whole assemblage, comprising over one hundred farmers and their families, was greatly wrought up by Swisher.

The Allen brothers immediately took to studying the Bible, and soon became so enthusiastic in their researches that they began to neglect their farm labors, and were acting irrationally. They got to wandering aimlessly about the neighborhood and talking with every one they met on the subject of the Bible. Often they were noticed sauntering along the road, arm in arm, singing psalms and eyeing every passer-by with dumb indifference. Heber labored under the hallucination that George was God, and that he himself was one of the apostles. Both men offered repeatedly to give away their horses, wagons, and farming implements, as they were the chosen of God and had no further use for worldly things. One night a short time ago they disappeared, and upon returning home in the morning, jaded, worn, and hungry, could give no account of where they had been. Once, when Heber was advised by a pitying neighbor to go home and rest, he replied: "Physical men need rest; but we men born of God need no rest; we have nothing but rest all the time." Both the demented men believed that they were not living in the flesh, but that they were ordained to go about and straighten up the imaginary wrongs of humanity. Eventually they grew homicidal, their wives became alarmed, and neighbors volunteered to serve as guards. One Sunday night George Allen attempted to take the life of his wife and children with a cheese-knife, because, as he explained, "God told me to sacrifice them," but the three strong men watching overpowered him. He was brought to Danville the following day and adjudged insane in Judge Evans's court. The same night Heber chased a neighbor named Atkinson nearly a mile, but was unable to overtake him, and returned home. About midnight he entered the apartment where his two children lay sleeping. The guard followed to prevent any contemplated crime. Looking down into the faces of the little ones, he muttered: "What child's blood must be upon me?" His attendants, alarmed at his manner and the murderous expression, forcibly led him away. The next Tuesday he was also taken into the court of Judge Evans and pronounced insane.

The sister Mary is still affected by the milder form of the insanity. She believes herself the mother of God. Mrs. Allep, the mother of the three unfortunates, has also lost her mind. She spends most of her time over the Bible, in a stupor at intervals, and frequently breaks out into feeble and incoherent exhortations. A prominent physician at Danville, said that the whole of Blount township is lashed into a religious fever, and that the mental strain is so great on many that they are likely to suffer the fate of the Allens. He has advised several not to attend the revivals, and will endeavor to have them stopped.

The Rev. John Swisher should be barred from preaching, and treated in the same manner as a physician who has been guilty of malpractice. He should have two years in the penitentiary in consequence of the damage he has caused to different families.

Mr. Huxley says: "What we are pleased to call religion now-a-days, is for the most part Hellenized Judaism; and, not unfrequently, the Hellenic element carries with it a mighty remnant of old-world Paganism, and a great infusion of the worst and weakest products of Greek scientific speculation; while fragments of Persian and Babylonian, or rather Accadian, mythology burden the Judaic contribution to the common stock. The antagonism of science is not to religion, but to the heathen survivals and the bad philosophy under which religion herself is well-nigh crushed. Now, for my part, I trust this antagonism will never cease; but that to the end of time true science will continue to fulfill one of her most beneficent functions, that of relieving men from the burden of false science which is imposed upon them in the name of religion."

The article we published last week on "Experiences with the Spiritualists," from the pen of the Rev. E. P. Powell, should have been credited to the Christian Register.

G. Milner Stephen, the Great Healer.

Notwithstanding the fact that G. Milner Stephen, of Sydney, New South Wales, has occupied various prominent positions (having been at one time a leading Barrister-at-law, and then acting Governor of two Australian colonies), he has seen fit to comply with the urgent solicitations of his spirit guides, and practice his wonderful healing powers among those who are afflicted. The cures he has performed are truly remarkable, and show that he is doing an immense amount of good. As an exhibition of his remarkable gifts, the Wairarapa Standard states that at one of his meetings, when near six o'clock Mr. Stephen was warned that he would be late for the train. He looked around upon the remaining sufferers, who were present seeking relief, and told them that he could not stay longer, but they entreated him one by one and he gave way to their importunity. The work of the last few minutes on the previous Saturday was more marvelous than all that had been witnessed during the two days. He called to the waiting ones, and to the first he said, "What is the matter with you?" "Rheumatism in the arm," said the man, putting it forth. "It's gone," said the healer, and he turned to a deaf woman. With a pass of the hand he removed the deafness and then asked her a question in a low tone of voice, which she distinctly heard and answered. Mr. Stephen dealt with those around him by look, or word, or a pass of the hand, and his power appeared to be stronger than ever. One after the other confessed to having found relief, while those in the body of the hall looked on in wonderment at the marvelous display of healing power before them.The Echo, published in Dunedin, says that on one occasion when Mr. Stephen held a meeting for exclusively healing the poor who were sick, he had the stage clear, and requested the public to keep fifteen feet from him, claiming that "his power radiated to that distance, and anyone within that took some of his power from the patient." The method of manipulating his subject is quite different to that exhibited by the ordinary mesmerist, and was different according to different diseases. With all, however, he first laid one hand on the top and the other on the back part of the head, "connecting his power," so he said, "with the brain and sending it through the whole nervous system and thence to the muscles." For blindness and deafness he also breathed into the eye and ear through a silver tube. For paralysis and rheumatism he merely laid his hand on the afflicted part, telling the pains or disease to go, sometimes, but very seldom, making what appeared to be slight passes over the said part. For asthma and bronchial affections he breathed through the silver tube on the part affected, placing red "magnetized" flannel (already "breathed upon" by Mr. Stephen) thereon, to be worn for some time, and not touched by the patient, as this, said Mr. Stephen, "would take from its power."

Mr. Stephen did not, it is said, after his arduous efforts, experience the exhaustion that mesmerists do after operating upon their subjects. He seemed as sprightly as ever. This for a man of seventy-one is suggestive.

Mr. Stephen informed us in a letter from Sydney, New South Wales, that he intended to take a steamer for San Francisco on Dec. 1st, and he has probably arrived there by this time. He intends to practice his remarkable healing gifts in this country, and we have no doubt he will meet with the same success here as in the colonies. Mr. Stephen is the brother of the present Lieutenant-Governor of New South Wales. His wife, who will accompany him on his travels, is the daughter of Admiral Sir John Hindemarsch.

Infidelity.

Judge Holbrook in his late lecture before the Society of United Spiritualists, said:

"As a matter of evidence there is more proof as to spirit existence in modern Spiritualism than all the world has known before. It is as a sun risen upon stars that have indeed shed a light that was valuable, but now can be observed no longer by those who have the better light—at least need not be observed. I notice that one lecturer, learned in divine things according to the Christian scheme, did not advert to Spiritualism, much less call it to his aid, against modern infidelity, whereas this must be almost the only recourse, at least the chief resource for substantial proof that can reach the reasoning doubter. Modern infidelity is the protest of modern science against ancient pretenses of wonders not supported by evidence, in the present tense and now under control, such pretenses being against the course of events now."

"Modern Spiritualism comes as a science to prove what the early Christians asserted, or at least some of those things, and proved in this way what the church of to-day fails to prove. Perhaps our learned divine had not heard of it, or hearing of it, has not believed because the 'signs confirming' have not been sufficient to convince him. Very well; this is likely, but he is, therefore, an 'infidel' to our truth. Is he to blame for it if he can't believe? Not a particle; but yet just as much to blame as his modern infidel is to blame for his belief, or his unbelief. It is too late, as it is too absurd at any time, to be still proclaiming everlasting woes upon the unbeliever, when, as the mind is constituted, one has not the chance, not the power, to believe. The sound mind believes what it is compelled to believe, and does not believe only what satisfies by superior evidences. So reason teaches, and so does our spirit-communion—that a man always passes for what he is worth and achieves happiness according to his virtues—and that all superstitious notions are a burden and must be outgrown, and the more deep set they are and the more he has imposed them on others, the longer it will take to gain entire freedom."

Mr. Giles B. Stebbins has gone to Mt. Pleasant and Midland, Mich., for a week or more.

Secularizing Sunday.

It appears from late telegraphic dispatches that the armies arrayed for and against the secularization of Sunday are ready to do battle in New York on ground quite removed from the usual field of alcoholism. The immediate issue is the opening of the public museums that are supported jointly by the city and private contributors. In a general way it may be said that the preachers are on one side and the editors on the other, since sermons and articles are almost invariably opposed on the subject, which is being rather violently agitated. Each of the five influential morning journals has come out positively in favor of admitting the public Sundays, and two are making a specialty of the contest. Petitions are receiving signatures by the 10,000, and in most of the mechanics' unions votes for opening have been unanimously passed. The pastors have, to a large majority of the orthodox Protestants, delivered discourses formally denouncing the movement to turn their Sabbath into a day of diversion. The warfare centres around the Museum of Natural History, which is sustained about equally by municipal money and individual bequests. The trustees are divided and inclined to be conservative. Mayor Grace is for open doors, and declares that he will never sign another appropriation until the change is made. On the other hand, some of the chief donors of cash and exhibits threaten to withdraw their help if Sabbath-breaking is permitted, but they will see that the deficit resulting from the Mayor's action is made good if Sunday closing is maintained. The last victory of the secular party was in establishing Sunday free concerts in the parks, and the outlook is that, though more difficult to do, the museums will be opened soon.

A Remarkable Case.

At about three o'clock on Friday morning of last week Mrs. Emily Frayne, a widow, of Hamilton, Ont., who had come to Cleveland, Ohio, to visit her sister, who resided in a block on Prospect Street, died very suddenly. Frank Lamb, a fresco painter, aged thirty-three, who occupies apartments adjoining those in which Mrs. Frayne died, relates a remarkable story. He says that between two and three o'clock the morning in question he was awakened by something, and, looking across the room, he saw a woman sitting on a lounge about four feet from the bed. "What do you want?" he asked. Raising her right hand, the woman said, "Hush, hush," and then disappeared. Lamb is a disbeliever in ghosts, and at once made a search of the room and examined the lock of the door. He found the door was securely fastened, and getting into bed he lay for ten minutes thinking about the strange occurrence. Suddenly the clothing of his bed and the tick were tumbled off on the floor by some unseen power, and he found himself on the floor. Being angry by this time, Lamb made another search of the room without finding anybody. He then opened the door, and as he did so Mrs. Hadden, the sister of Mrs. Frayne, came from her room into the hall, saying: "My sister is dead." Lamb declares that he was not excited and that he was perfectly sober. He cannot account for the strange occurrence. Other people in the block who heard Lamb fall also left their rooms, and they corroborate his story. The Coroner decided that the woman's death was caused by heart-disease.

GENERAL ITEMS.

G. W. Kates lectured before the Atlanta, Ga., Spiritualists Dec. 27th, on "Childhood of the World."

J. H. Randall announces that he is ready to answer calls to lecture and attend funerals. Address him 431 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Religious Tract Society, by way of commemorating the jubilee of the introduction of Christianity into the Fiji Islands, has sent out an edition of 3,000 "Bible pictures," for distribution among the islanders.

The second number of Light in the West, published in St. Louis, appeared January 1st, the first number having appeared in October last. The publishers announce that it will appear the first and fifteenth of the month hereafter.

Mr. C. S. Black, writing from Ione, Cal., says: "We have no organization or regular meeting, yet Spiritualism has made great advancement in the last three years. Long may the JOURNAL continue to fight the battle of progress."

A Philadelphia clergyman proposes to boycott newspapers which issue Sunday editions, and a too well informed journal refers him to the luck of boycotting preachers who tried to put too much Sabbath into Sunday over eighteen hundred years ago. Even good Philadelphia editors are sometimes cruel.

A late number of Harbinger of Light of Melbourne, Australia, says: "Mrs. Ballou lectured twice during the past month, at the Bijou Theatre, under the management of Mr. Hulet of Richmond Lyceum. The first lecture was on Religious and Governmental Intolerance, in the course of which she animadverted upon the conduct of the Government and the press in connection with the detention of books belonging to the editor of this paper. The second lecture was a compound one based upon several subjects given by the audience. Mrs. Ballou's addresses were attentively listened to and applauded by the audience."

J. Frank Baxter is now lecturing Sundays in Providence, R. I.

Mrs. De Wolf lectured last Sunday before the Society of United Spiritualists at Haverley's Theatre.

We have received statements from Mr. S. E. Barrett and Mr. J. Simmons in the matter of Henry Slade's troubles in Weston, West Virginia, which we shall publish very soon.

The Social Drift says: "A lengthy communication from Dr. Babcock appears in the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, which, to use a homely expression, is pretty rough on full form materialization."

The Colegrove Book Company of this city has been absorbed by the vigorous book concern of S. A. Maxwell & Co. Mr. James Colegrove goes into the employ of the latter firm, and will take with him a goodly number of the most careful and intelligent buyers in the West. As an authority on books, and an adviser to those who are seeking information as to what to buy, Mr. Colegrove stands unrivalled.

Our very modest and highly useful little cotemporary, Unity, has been obliged to make a new combination owing to the dissolution of the Colegrove Book Co. Mr. Charles H. Kerr, who has been office editor of Unity for several years, is the active man in the new firm of Charles H. Kerr & Co. Mr. Kerr is a young man of sterling qualities and will wear well. The JOURNAL looks forward hopefully to the time when Mr. Kerr will control an establishment in Chicago similar to that splendid publishing concern in Boston which Mr. Geo. H. Ellis has built up.Henry Ware, Jr., with unsophisticated gentleness once recommended that steps be taken to persuade William Lloyd Garrison to submit his articles for the Liberator to a committee of "gentlemen of calm and trustworthy judgment." How little he realized that this would be like an attempt to halter the lightning, or to put a chute into Niagara that the water might go down easy. God's greatest workers wear no gloves. Every real advance must hurt somebody's feelings, but the pain of the few will grow to be the joy of the millions.—Unity.

Dr. J. K. Bailey writes that he spoke at Jamesburg, N. J., Dec. 6th, ult.; at Prospect Plains, the 8th; at Lakewood, the 13th; at Spruce Creek, Pa., the 24th and 25th; at Wheeling, West Va., Jan. 2nd, 3rd and 4th, inst.; at Bellaire, Ohio, the 10th, at 2 P. M., and at South Wheeling, W. Va., at 7:30 P. M. He has visited several other localities (intermediate) and done, it is reported, good work at healing the sick. Address him, for engagements, at his home address, Box 123, Scranton, Pa.

Dr. Daniel White of 507 Chestnut street, St. Louis, Mo., was very agreeably surprised at the commencement of the New Year, on being presented by his numerous friends and patrons, with an elegant gold-headed cane, on which his name, etc., was engraved, as a token of their confidence in his professional abilities and personal integrity; also to afford him some bodily support in his declining years. The presentation speech was made by H. A. Redfield, Esq., and appropriately responded to by the happy recipient.

Light of London, says: "At the next conversation of the London Spiritualist Alliance, a series of chalk drawings by Mr. J. G. Keulemans, representing various stages of the phenomena of materialization, will be exhibited by Mr. John S. Farmer, together with other drawings of a kindred character in his possession. If any of our friends have pictures of a similar scope, which they can place at the disposal of the President of the London Spiritualist Alliance for that occasion, we shall be glad if they will communicate with us at the earliest opportunity, so that they may be catalogued for the occasion."According to the Hong Kong Press the Empress of China has caused a great commotion among her counselors by her liberal ideas and her conduct. She has abated the rigor of court etiquette, has transferred her residence from the winter palace to the castle in the Imperial Park, takes boxing lessons, and does not conceal her opinion that reforms in social and religious matters are needed, and that China no longer can keep up her isolation from the rest of the world. The conservatives complain that her conduct is "weakening the popular belief in the divine power of the Imperial house, and are confirmed in their belief that a woman is unfit to rule a country."This is the week of prayer designated by the Evangelical Alliance as the one when special petition shall be made for the good of all. The reverend gentlemen who conduct meetings at which these prayers are offered, should perhaps know what mankind require, but suggestions from others than the elect may not be entirely out of order. There are few who will deny that prayer for a little more honesty in politics may be wisely made, and, as well, for mutual forbearance between capital and labor, for a greater sense of obligation in bank directors and referees of courts, for strength in legislators to resist the blandishments of corporations, and for a little less bigotry in reformers. Of course all these evils come, in one way or another, under the general heads made by the commandments for observance of which prayers will be offered, but a clearer definition of what is wanted will not hurt congregations. That clergymen themselves in 1886 may follow precept by example will be no needless supplication, and so through all professions the list might be extended of those who should be cared for. We are, as usual, a wicked and perverse generation.—Chicago Tribune.

For the Religio-Philosophical Journal. WAS HE A SPIRITUALIST?

Reminiscences of President Lincoln.

BY PROF. W. H. CHANEY.

Having read the articles by Messrs. Poole and Herndon, and observing that the latter inclines to the opinion that Mr. Lincoln was a materialist, I think I can make some explanations which will prove of interest to both Spiritualists and Materialists.

During the winter of 1865-6 I made the acquaintance of Col. Miller, in New York City. He was the inventor of "Miller's Steam Condenser," and made an agreement with me to act as agent for him to introduce it. It will thus be seen that our relations were very intimate. Besides he was one of the most earnest Spiritualists I ever met. He was then between sixty and seventy, but told me that his wife was less than thirty, and lived in Washington. Her maiden name was "Bell" Laurie, and her father had been for thirty years an appointee in the post office. Mr. Laurie, wife and children, were all mediums, and gave frequent sittings for members of congress and other distinguished personages at Washington. Isabel, then his wife, was the principal medium. In this way Miller first became acquainted with her and wanted her for a wife, because such a wonderful medium. He was negotiating the sale of his condenser at the time, and demanding a million dollars for it. Perhaps this circumstance was not without its weight on the Laurie family, in bringing about this marriage, for I am positive there was never any love between the Colonel and his wife.

From Colonel Miller I first learned about Mr. Lincoln having become a Spiritualist soon after his inauguration. Some senators were telling their experiences one day when the President expressed a curiosity to attend one of the Laurie sittings; not that he had the least faith in spirit communion with mortals, but would like to investigate the jugglery practical. A sance was arranged and he received such wonderful tests that his materialistic ideas were greatly shaken, and after a few more sittings he became a confirmed Spiritualist. But these things were not proclaimed to the public, and this explains why Mr. Herndon was not aware of the change from materialism.

In the spring of 1866, I read in a Washington paper that Judge Carter had granted a divorce to Isabel Miller from her husband, decreeing to her the guardianship of the children, and also decreeing to her all the rights previously granted to Col. Miller by letters patent for a certain steam condenser. The news was a great shock to me and I hurried to the Colonel for an explanation. Without the least warning, I read the item to him. On looking up I saw he was gasping for breath like a dying man and unable to speak. He had never seen the publication of the summons, nor had he even a hint concerning the matter until I read the item to him. But I soon learned that his distress was all on account of losing the condenser. He said he was very poor—was actually supported by his friends—that Bell never loved him; that she had been having a hard struggle to keep herself and children, and he did not blame her. But the condenser; it had been his pet for eight years; he had been offered half a million for it, and now to lose it—he broke down sobbing. As a lawyer I knew that I could procure a reversal of the decree so far as the condenser was concerned, but I would not tell him so. I was not only his attorney and agent, but his friend, and yet I would not reveal to him what his rights were. Was I not false to my client? Perhaps I was, if judged by the law of the land, but I was true to humanity. I would not have it on my conscience that I had been instrumental in destroying the last hope of that poor young woman and her helpless babes. An orthodox God might have done so and then sent her to school for stealing a loaf of bread for her starving children, but orthodoxy is played out with me.

I asked Col. Miller if he would be satisfied if Bell would convey to him one half interest in the condenser. O, yes, he would be perfectly satisfied and he would never trouble either her or the children. On this I drew up an agreement, under seal, which he signed and entrusted to me to deliver to her on her sittings to him. Thus armed I went to Washington and made the acquaintance of the Laurie family, stopping at the hotel where the old couple were staying. Here Bell came to see me, and I explained matters, saying I would continue to act as agent for both her and the Colonel if she would sign the transfer. She refused until she had consulted some patent right attorneys, and when she learned that I might have got the whole away from her had I been disposed, she ceased to regard me with suspicion, and accepted me as her friend. Her father and mother were also extremely grateful to me. Thus it will be seen how I became very intimate with the Lauries.

I remained in Washington two or three weeks. One day, soon after my arrival, I mentioned the subject of mediumship to Bell. We were in the large hotel parlor, and probably thirty persons, ladies and gentlemen, sitting about in groups. I desired Bell to allow me to accompany her to the piano and witness its tipping to the music, while she played. She objected because a poor performer and because there were some very fine pianists present, but said if I would accompany her to her father's house, out in the suburbs, that she would then gratify my desire. In turn I objected on the ground that I might afterwards suspect that she had some concealed machinery at her father's, for tipping the instrument, whereas it was hardly possible at the hotel. After much argument and persuasion she finally consented. I escorted her to the piano and took a seat by her side. She began playing and there was a hush of voices; but it was only for a moment, and I noticed expressions of contempt on the faces of nearly every one present. Bell faltered and would have stopped had not conversation been resumed, and all interest was thus withdrawn from her. Then she began playing a march, and instantly the piano tipped, keeping time with the music. In a moment all gathered about, crowding close to the instrument and vainly trying to discover the cause of the tipping. The difficulty which Bell had shown now all disappeared; her eyes had a far-off look and she appeared like an enthusiast at a sacred shrine. When she had finished the tune I took her seat and tried to raise the piano with my knee, placing my foot on the pedal, as hers was placed, but found that I could not exert a pound pressure unless I withdrew my foot from the pedal. This was one of the best tests of a physical manifestation that I ever witnessed, for the piano weighed nearly half a ton.

During my stay Mrs. Laurie told me many things connected with President Lincoln. Hundreds of times he had consulted Bell, and she preserved scores of his notes, in his own handwriting signed "A. Lincoln," inviting Bell to come and give him a private sance. It will be remembered that for a long time matters connected with the war went wrong, but when Washington, La Fayette, Jackson, etc., began to be listened to by Lincoln, things went better. Mr. Lincoln consulted these grand old patriots in matters of state as well as war. Sometimes his cabinet would be unanimous in their opposition to some of the President's measures, but when the spirits assured him he was right he would hold out against the whole world. But all these things were profound State secrets, and even at the time Mrs. Laurie made the revelations to me and showed me the notes in Mr. Lincoln's well-known chirography, it was under the seal of secrecy, and I have faithfully observed it for more than twenty years; but now that so much has been said about it, and there is no longer any reason for silence, I do not feel that I am violating confidence by making this publication.

I have spoken of many matters not strictly pertinent to the main issue, in this case, in order that I might account for my familiarity with the important events, and now for the gratification of the reader, I will add a brief explanation of these facts. Years before, Col. Miller had put one of his condensers in the Navy Yard at Washington, where it was still at work. Bell and her mother went with me to see it. The engineer assured me that it would condense steam and return it to the boiler at a temperature of 180° Fah. This resulted in a great saving of fuel. About the time the Colonel attached the condenser to a boiler at the Navy Yard a syndicate was forced to buy his patent right. After witnessing its operation they offered him half a million of dollars—counting it down on a table, thinking to tempt him by the sight of the gold, but he stood out for a million. Mr. and Mrs. Laurie and Bell were present, as they all assured me, and coaxed the Colonel to accept it, but he would not yield a particle. Then the capitalists swore that they would sooner spend half a million in preventing him from selling it than give him a penny. The result was that nothing could ever be done with it. The Colonel had many friends besides myself, in both New York and Washington, but our efforts were all in vain. He died in poverty. Mr. Laurie and wife and Bell are all dead and of the children I know nothing.

In conclusion I will relate an incident illustrative of the character of good old Abe, and also showing the esteem in which he held the Laurie family. Mrs. Laurie told it to me with tears in her voice as well as eyes. It was in 1861. Desertions had become so common among the soldiers that it was found necessary to enforce the death penalty more rigorously. A soldier from Maine went home on a furlough. The illness and death of a sister caused him to stay until the thirty days had expired. Then he started, and on landing from the cars in Boston a policeman touched him and asked to see his furlough. Innocently he showed it and was promptly arrested as a deserter. The policeman would get a reward of thirty dollars, and although the soldier assured him he was going back himself, the policeman put him in irons and took him to his regiment near Washington. There was a court martial; the policeman swore the poor fellow's life away and he was sentenced to be shot at sunrise. A friend to whom the soldier had told everything, mounted a horse after dark, and started for Washington to get a reprieve for thirty days that the soldier might obtain proofs of his statement. It was past midnight when the friend presented himself at the White House. Mr. Lincoln had just retired, leaving strict orders with the sergeant on duty not to allow any one to disturb him, as he had been broken of his rest for several nights. The friend told the sergeant the circumstances, but still he could not admit him. But the sergeant softened enough to tell him that he had orders to admit Mrs. Laurie at any hour, day or night. Then the friend rushed for Mrs. Laurie and told her the strait he was in. Scarcely stopping to dress, she hurried to the White House, reprieve in hand, and was instantly admitted to the room where the President and his wife were asleep. Mr. Lincoln awoke himself with great difficulty. In a few words she explained her mission, which he seemed to understand intuitively more than by his consciousness. Without speaking he motioned her to hand him a pen from the table, and as he put his name to the reprieve, with a moistened eye and trembling lip, he said: "Thank you, Mrs. Laurie; never fear to arouse me on an errand of mercy like this." The reprieve arrived just in time to prevent a murder. The story of the soldier was corroborated and his life spared. I think President Lincoln was warm hearted enough to be a Spiritualist.

handwriting signed "A. Lincoln," inviting Bell to come and give him a private sance. It will be remembered that for a long time matters connected with the war went wrong, but when Washington, La Fayette, Jackson, etc., began to be listened to by Lincoln, things went better. Mr. Lincoln consulted these grand old patriots in matters of state as well as war. Sometimes his cabinet would be unanimous in their opposition to some of the President's measures, but when the spirits assured him he was right he would hold out against the whole world. But all these things were profound State secrets, and even at the time Mrs. Laurie made the revelations to me and showed me the notes in Mr. Lincoln's well-known chirography, it was under the seal of secrecy, and I have faithfully observed it for more than twenty years; but now that so much has been said about it, and there is no longer any reason for silence, I do not feel that I am violating confidence by making this publication.

I have spoken of many matters not strictly pertinent to the main issue, in this case, in order that I might account for my familiarity with the important events, and now for the gratification of the reader, I will add a brief explanation of these facts.

Years before, Col. Miller had put one of his condensers in the Navy Yard at Washington, where it was still at work. Bell and her mother went with me to see it. The engineer assured me that it would condense steam and return it to the boiler at a temperature of 180° Fah. This resulted in a great saving of fuel. About the time the Colonel attached the condenser to a boiler at the Navy Yard a syndicate was forced to buy his patent right. After witnessing its operation they offered him half a million of dollars—counting it down on a table, thinking to tempt him by the sight of the gold, but he stood out for a million. Mr. and Mrs. Laurie and Bell were present, as they all assured me, and coaxed the Colonel to accept it, but he would not yield a particle. Then the capitalists swore that they would sooner spend half a million in preventing him from selling it than give him a penny. The result was that nothing could ever be done with it. The Colonel had many friends besides myself, in both New York and Washington, but our efforts were all in vain. He died in poverty. Mr. Laurie and wife and Bell are all dead and of the children I know nothing.

In conclusion I will relate an incident illustrative of the character of good old Abe, and also showing the esteem in which he held the Laurie family. Mrs. Laurie told it to me with tears in her voice as well as eyes. It was in 1861. Desertions had become so common among the soldiers that it was found necessary to enforce the death penalty more rigorously. A soldier from Maine went home on a furlough. The illness and death of a sister caused him to stay until the thirty days had expired. Then he started, and on landing from the cars in Boston a policeman touched him and asked to see his furlough. Innocently he showed it and was promptly arrested as a deserter. The policeman would get a reward of thirty dollars, and although the soldier assured him he was going back himself, the policeman put him in irons and took him to his regiment near Washington. There was a court martial; the policeman swore the poor fellow's life away and he was sentenced to be shot at sunrise. A friend to whom the soldier had told everything, mounted a horse after dark, and started for Washington to get a reprieve for thirty days that the soldier might obtain proofs of his statement. It was past midnight when the friend presented himself at the White House. Mr. Lincoln had just retired, leaving strict orders with the sergeant on duty not to allow any one to disturb him, as he had been broken of his rest for several nights. The friend told the sergeant the circumstances, but still he could not admit him. But the sergeant softened enough to tell him that he had orders to admit Mrs. Laurie at any hour, day or night. Then the friend rushed for Mrs. Laurie and told her the strait he was in. Scarcely stopping to dress, she hurried to the White House, reprieve in hand, and was instantly admitted to the room where the President and his wife were asleep. Mr. Lincoln awoke himself with great difficulty. In a few words she explained her mission, which he seemed to understand intuitively more than by his consciousness. Without speaking he motioned her to hand him a pen from the table, and as he put his name to the reprieve, with a moistened eye and trembling lip, he said: "Thank you, Mrs. Laurie; never fear to arouse me on an errand of mercy like this." The reprieve arrived just in time to prevent a murder. The story of the soldier was corroborated and his life spared. I think President Lincoln was warm hearted enough to be a Spiritualist.

Portland, Oregon.

General News.

A story is afloat in the East that McNeill, the defaulting President of the Lancaster (Mass.) National Bank, was murdered in Vermont by his associates.—Commercial travelers will try to secure from Congress action prohibiting the imposition of the license tax on their business in any of the States or Territories.—Congressman Gibson of West Virginia is dissatisfied with the Administration, claiming that it is moving too slowly in "turning the rascals out," and predicts disruption in the Democratic party unless the President uses the axe at a more lively rate.

—Father Jardine, who was rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church at Kansas City and got into trouble, thereby causing his suspension, committed suicide in a St. Louis church last Sunday. Last week Bishop Robertson affirmed the sentence of the religious court in which he was convicted of immoral conduct.—The star-gazer Palisa has just discovered his fiftieth comet.—Daudet made $22,000 out of his novel "Sapho" before it was dramatized.—It cost Mr. Pratt $1,033,333.33 to found the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore.—The society paper business is greatly overdone in London, and some of the publications barely pay expenses.—Dolls to the number of 17,000 and 5,000 baby cars were destroyed by a recent fire in a great toy factory at Brandenburg, Germany.—According to the Sanitary News, Gen. Beauregard is one of the most active members of the New Orleans Cremation Society.—Por chilblains the Lyon Medical advises that the parts affected be bathed twice daily, ten minutes at a time, with a mixture of half an ounce of sulphuric acid and one quart of water.—Krupp's famous works at Essen have turned out a larger number of guns during the last three months than are usually produced in a whole year. The heaviest delivery was made to Turkey, after which came Greece and Servia.—Some Indian arrow heads were lately shown at the Societe d'Anthropologie which were poisoned with curare over a century ago, but still retained their deadly power. Small animals scratched with them die in half an hour.

A prosperous farmer at Marion, O., has eloped with his hired girl. The local paper accounts for it by saying that he had always "manifested a deep interest in religious revivals, but of late has become a speculator in Bohemian oats."—At a race in South Australia, a few weeks ago, the falling of a leading horse brought nearly the whole field tumbling over him. Two jockeys were killed outright, half a dozen others seriously (some fatally) injured, and several horses killed or maimed.—A woman in Bohemia was lately sentenced to imprisonment for ten days for forgery because she changed her physician's prescription calling for 1.20 grammes of morphia so that it read 6.20 grammes. It is said that no similar case has ever appeared on the court records of the United States or England.—The food of Burmese peasants includes almost all kinds of reptiles, the grub of a ball-rolling beetle, a kind of ant which constructs nests of leaves in treecrofts (eaten in curries) and hill rats. The last named exist in such hordes that their consumption is almost a necessity to prevent the rats eating the Burmese.

The stirring editorials "Personality and Identity," "Evolution," "Is God a Person?" in last three issues of Mental Science Magazine, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, are each in 16 pp. pamphlets. Single copies, 6 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts. The three, 12 cts. Address above.

Gold Fields.

that pan out richly, are not so abundant as in the early California days, but those who write to Hall & Co., Portland, Maine, will, by return mail, receive, free, full information about work which they can do, and live at home, that will pay them from $5 to $25 per day, and upwards. Either sex, young or old. Capital not required; you are started in business free. Those who start at once are absolutely sure of snug little fortunes.

Zinc Collar Pads for Horses.

This is not an advertising paper, but for the good of horses we take pleasure in saying that after many conversations with horsemen and seeing many certificates of veterinary surgeons and others, we believe that for curing and preventing sores on horses, there has been no better invention than the Zinc and leather collar pads, patented, manufactured and sold by Dexter Curtis of Madison, Wisconsin, who was superintendent of the department of horses at the World's New Orleans Exposition.—From the Human Society Journal, "Our Dumb Animals."

The claims as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are based entirely on what the people say it has done for them. Send to C. L. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., for a book containing statements of many remarkable cures by Hood Sarsaparilla.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT Hale's Honey of Horchound and Tar. It softens the Cough, relieves the windpipe and bronchial tubes of mucus, tones the lungs and the membranes of the throat, and restores to the organs of respiration their natural strength and vigor. 75c, 50c, and $1.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Knickerbocker Race Co., in this issue of our paper. We can recommend this Company to do as they agree, and order carriers entrusted to their care will receive prompt attention.—St. Louis Presbyterian, June 19, 1885.

Glenn's Hair Restorer cleans and beautifies, 25c. German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c. Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 65c. Fike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Business Notices.

Hudson Tuttle lectures on subjects pertaining to general reform and the science of Spiritualism. Attends funerals. Telegraphic address, Ceylon, O. P. O. address, Berlin Heights, Ohio.

SEALED LETTERS answered by R. W. Flint, No. 1227 Broadway, N. Y. Terms: $2 and three cent postage stamps. Money refunded if not answered. Send for explanatory circular.

Mr. CHARLES DAVYARN will lecture for the Southern Reunion of Spiritualists at their gathering in Louisville, Ky., from March 28th to April 4th. Mr. Davyarn would be pleased to arrange for one or more lectures at any place where they may be convenient to his route, either going or returning. Address him at 403 West 23rd St., New York City.

AN ENGLISH CLAIMBOYANT of note has discovered an unfailing remedy for Baldness and Gray Hair. Send for circular. L. MILLER, 33 N. Ashland Av., Chicago.

The Society of United Spiritualists.

The Society of United Spiritualists, Chicago, meets each Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at Haverley's Theatre. The exercises consist of a lecture, tests, short addresses, and singing. DR. J. H. RANDALL, President.

Spiritual Meetings in Brooklyn and New York. Church of New Spiritual Dispensation, 416 Adolph St., near Fulton, Brooklyn, N. Y. Sunday services, 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Medium's Meeting 8:30 p. m. Ladies Aid Society meets every Thursday, 8 to 10 p. m. John Beard, President; S. J. Nichols, Vice-President; Miss Lulu Beard, Secretary; A. G. Klipp, Treasurer. January and February.—Mrs. A. L. Lull, of Lawrence Kansas.

The Ladies Aid Society meets every Wednesday afternoon at seven o'clock at 128 West 43rd Street, New York.

The People's Spiritual Meeting of New York City, convenes every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., at Miller's Arcadium Hall, 54 Union Square. FRANK W. JONES, Conductor.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a plan remedy for the above disease, by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Inquire for circular in French and English. TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any applicant. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 101 West St., New York.

THE JANY CENTURY

CONTAINS "THE SECOND GULL RUN" by Gen. Pope. THIS is graphically described by the commanding general with many anecdotes. It will be remembered that the alleged neglect of duty for which Gen. Fitz John Porter was court-martialed occurred in this battle, and Gen. Pope enters fully into the discussion.

OTHER FEATURES

Of the Jany Century are: An article on Verdi, whose name is probably the best known of living composers, with a frontispiece portrait; an interesting paper on "Feathered Forms of Other Days," with illustrations of some remarkable restored specimens; "The City of Teheran," by S. G. W. Benjamin, late U. S. Minister to Persia, richly illustrated; a paper on "Pointers" in THE CENTURY Dog Series, with seven pictures; short lectures on Art by Carolus Duran, the great French painter; two capital short stories by Joel Chandler Harris and Frank R. Stockton, both illustrated; "Some European Republicans," by W. J. Linton; an exceedingly interesting chapter in "Recollections of a Private," with numerous illustrations, etc., etc. Price, 35 cents; $4.00 a year. All dealers sell it. THE CENTURY CO., New-York.

THE INDIAN FARMER, Lincoln, Neb., is the great Agricultural Journal of the West. $1.50 per year.

WORK FOR ALL. $30 a week and expenses paid. Month's worth of work and particulars free. E. G. VEKREY, Augusta, Maine.

DICKSON SCHOOL OF ELOCUTION. (170 State St., Chicago.) H. M. DICKSON, PRINCIPAL. "Author of the 'Science and Art of Elocution.'" 9th YEAR—OVER 200 GRADUATES.

Pupils prepared for Dramatic Readers, Teachers, etc. Stammering and all defects of speech successfully treated. Send for Circular.

ELECTRICITY IN DISEASE. The scientific use of Electricity in the treatment of all forms of Paralysis, Convulsions, etc. Loss of Voice, St. Vitus's Dance, Neuritis, Chronic Rheumatism, Sciatica, Trismus, Dropsy of the Eye, Nervous Exhaustion, Headache, Insomnia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Post-epileptic Tremor, Laceration of the Tongue, Indigestion, etc., etc. Also, Electric Name-plates and all we will send Pamphlets, Free, referring to methods of treatment.

Address, DR. GEO. C. FITZGER, ST. LOUIS, MO.

I GURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return as rapidly as a mallet blow. I have made the disease of STES. EPILEPSY, or FALLEN CHINNESS, a life-long study. I want you to remedy the worst cases. Be careful of the name of the doctor. Do not run the risk of a cure that will cost you a fortune and a Ever Bottle of my infallible cure, with the name of the doctor and the name of the patient, will be sent you free of charge. Send for a copy of my pamphlet, and I will send you a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. BROWN, 158 Pearl St., New York.

The Weekly Inter Ocean. Circled its first year with 10,000 subscribers. It closes its volume with a circulation of 110,000.

The paper has grown steadily and rapidly in popularity. It is now the largest and most influential publication of 500,000. Because it has been for fourteen years THE BEST NEWSPAPER. THE BEST REPUBLICAN PAPER. THE BEST FAMILY PAPER. THE BEST SOLDIER'S PAPER. THE BEST FARMER'S PAPER.

Among its specialties are Stories by the Best American Authors!

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Frank R. Stockton, Charles Egbert Craddock, Sarah Jane Jewett, Julia Hawthorne, G. P. Lathrop, J. P. Knowlton, H. H. Boyesen, and others.

Illustrated Letters by JENNY JUNE; Letters to a Musician, by the author of the SILVA LITTORAE; Letters from a Brother to the THEODORE STANTON, WINGED GUY, and others; WOMAN'S KINGDOM; OUR CHILDREN; SOLDIER'S CHRISTMAS; CHERRY TREES (Soldier and other anecdotes); LILA'S HOME; GENERAL GIBSON'S FARM; AND THE INTER-OCEAN is the only POLITICAL AND LITERARY WEEKLY that aims to cover each week the whole field of Foreign and Home News. It tells every week the story of that week, clearly and fully.

The Weekly Inter Ocean, per year, $1.00. The Semi-Weekly Inter Ocean, per year, $2.75. For the accommodation of its patrons the Management of the Inter Ocean makes the following offer:

The Weekly Inter Ocean, 10c. Youth's Companion, both one year, $2.60. The Weekly Inter Ocean, 10c. Godley's Lady's Book, both one year, $2.50. The Weekly Inter Ocean, 10c. The Cottage Hearth, both one year, $1.50. Send all orders to THE INTER-OCEAN, Chicago.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS. Full particulars given in the Chicago Weekly Journal.

Send postal card for SAMPLE COPY which will cost you nothing.

Address JOHN R. WILSON, PUBLISHER, Chicago Evening Journal, 159 & 161 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

A SUPERB OFFER. A First-Class Sewing-Machine, In connection with A First-Class Weekly Paper.

A Singer Pattern Machine, perfect in all its parts, iron frame, cover, two drawers and drop leaf, of black walnut, and the CHICAGO WEEKLY JOURNAL one year for $16.00.

The same Machine, but with half cabinet case of black walnut, eight drawers and drop leaf, and the CHICAGO WEEKLY JOURNAL one year for $20.00.

READY. Mental Gymnastics; OR MEMORY CULTURE.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D. A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose.

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons, THE STUDENT, His Lessons, THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

We cordially recommend it to all persons of falling memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—Interior.

Most ingenious; enables any one who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry out in any business, or in any profession, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources and been moved by them to wonder.—Admirer.

The author's method aids in getting control of all of the organs involuntarily engaged in acts of what are called "spontaneous recollection." It is ingenious and simple.—Chicago Times.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of Price, $1.00.

Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn-st., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED.—One intelligent, energetic man or woman in each county to take the POLAR WORLD, the only complete and authentic History of all the Voyages and Discoveries in the Arctic Regions, and the immense demand, low price, big discount to correspondents who secure subscribers. Full particulars free by mail. Address, G. C. CLAYTON & Co., Chicago, Ill.

BUSINESS AND MEDICAL PSYCHOMETRY. MRS. FANNIE M. BROWN, 506 W. 60th St., New York City.

Five business questions answered for 25 cents. Ten questions for a full business letter. $1.00. Medical Examinations and advice from look of patient's hair! $1.00.

WANTED. An active Man or Woman every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Commission on all Profits Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

FACTS! The Crop and Market Report's alone are worth 50 times the subscription price to any farmer, all of our contributors contribute to the only complete and authentic History of all the Voyages and Discoveries in the Arctic Regions, and the immense demand, low price, big discount to correspondents who secure subscribers. Full particulars free by mail. Address, G. C. CLAYTON & Co., Chicago, Ill.

PARTURITION Without Pain! The necessary remedies with directions highly endorsed by the Profession—only 50 cts. Sent Free by Mail.

LUYTH'S PHARMACY CO., 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis.

HAVE YOU SEEN A GLASS PEN? Send us one and we will send you one with a bottle of "Huntington's Indelible Ink." $7.50 Special terms to agents.

PRAIRIE CITY NOVELTY CO., 10 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Franchise of the "Huntington's Indelible Ink" for any territory. The greatest Fall American success story for 1885. The "Huntington's Indelible Ink" has been sold in every county in the United States for over a year. It is the only ink that will stand the test of water, and is the only ink that will stand the test of heat. It is the only ink that will stand the test of time. It is the only ink that will stand the test of use. It is the only ink that will stand the test of all.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi. her, 69 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN COMPANY. GOOD NEWS TO LADIES. Greatest inducement ever offered. Now a good time to begin collecting for Christmas. Tea and Coffee, and secure beautiful Gold Band Mugs, Rose China Tea Sets, and other beautiful goods. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, Publi.

Spiritualism in the South.

To the Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal: I have been holding meetings here for three Sundays in Old Fallow Hall...

Lookout Mountain camp has for its future bright prospects. The investment of seven thousand dollars there has proved of great advantage...

Haverhill and Vicinity.

Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes, of Boston, spoke for the First Spiritualist Society of Haverhill, Sunday, Dec. 27th, to good audience...

The Rev. Calvin Damon, Universalist, of this city, was present and said at the close of the lecture, that it was one of the finest spiritual treats that he had listened to for thirty years...

A Critical Thinker.

Sanford Betts, who is 84 years of age, and residing at Owatonna, Minn., writes: I have a number of questions not often presented in the JOURNAL...

Every Woman Knows Them. The human body is much like a good clock or watch in its movements...

Public Speakers and Singers. Can use "Brown's Bronchial Troches" as freely as requisite, containing NOTHING THAT CAN INJURE THE SYSTEM...

A Strong Endowment. Is conferred upon that magnificent institution, the human system, by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery"...

An anomaly—Baked dog is sometimes an Indian meal. "A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm" writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson...

Porcelain Complexion Powder produces a soft and beautiful skin. It combines every element of beauty and purity...

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and thus cures the disease...

The gambling tables at Monte Carlo are about to be made the subject of diplomatic action on the part of an international commission...

Good Appetite

Health depends largely on the condition of the liver. This organ is easily affected because of its sluggish circulation...

Better Health

way to insure the proper action of all the apparatus necessary to health, than to add the stomach and liver by the occasional use of Ayer's Pills...

Best Found in

Cathartic Pills. They stimulate the appetite, assist digestion, and leave the bowels in a natural condition...

Ayer's Pills,

Pills for twenty days. These Pills have been most successfully used in treatment of obstinate cases of Dropsy...

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A. Sold by all Druggists.

renders the partaking of needful bodily sustenance a matter of pleasure. Whenever the appetite fails, you may be sure the stomach and liver have become deranged...

is impaired a good cathartic medicine may aid you. Miss M. Boyle, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., writes: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills..."

the composition of Ayer's Pills. Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer, Boston, Mass., certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills..."

PILLOW SHAM. HOLDER. AGENTS

Advertisement for Pillow Sham Holder. Includes images of the product and text: "Are making money rapidly with this article. They are wanted in every house..."

It is positively better than any other holder. An absolutely perfect Sham Holder, combining in an astonishingly simple form the good points of all holders...

Prairie City Novelty Co., 69 Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois. Give the name and date of paper you saw this in.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best-selling articles. JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

20 CTS. will buy AMEN MASTERY OF THE P.S.S.—a guide to self-instruction—superior Gaskell's—former price $1. Stamps taken. Address R. A. MUNBY, 81 Warren St., New York.

Advertisement for James Pyle's Pearl Line. Includes image of a pearl necklace and text: "JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE THE BEST THING KNOWN FOR Washing and Bleaching"

Advertisement for Dillon Bros. Normal Ill. Includes image of a horse and text: "DILLON BROS. NORMAL, ILL. IMPORTERS AND BREEDERS OF NORMAN HORSES."

Advertisement for Norman Horses. Includes text: "NORMAN HORSES. (Formerly of firm of H. Dillon & Co.) NEW IMPORTATION. Arrived in fine condition June 15, 1884..."

Advertisement for Got Corns. Includes text: "GOT CORNS. LIEBIG'S CORN CURE WILL CURE. All kinds of hard or soft corns, callouses and bunions..."

Advertisement for DeLand & Co's Soda. Includes image of a soda bottle and text: "DELAND & CO'S GASTRO-SALERATUS SODA Best in the World."

FREE GIFT! A copy of my Medical Encyclopedia will be sent to any person afflicted with Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Sore Throat, or Nasal Catarrh...

Table listing newspapers and magazines for sale. Includes: Banner of Light, Boston, weekly; Medium and Daybreak, London, Eng., weekly; Olive Branch, Utica, N. Y., monthly; The Shaker Manifesto, Shakers, N. Y., monthly; The Theosophist, Adyar, (Madras), India, monthly; Light for Thinkers, Atlanta, Ga., weekly; The Mind Cure, Monthly, Chicago.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of pure Oxygen, widely known as the OXYGEN TREATMENT.

Advertisement for Violin-Outfits. Includes image of a violin and text: "VIOLIN-OUTFITS. We have made arrangements with one of the largest Importers of VIOLINS in the United States..."

Advertisement for Ammoniaphone. Includes image of the instrument and text: "AMMONIAPHONE. For VOICE CULTIVATION, and the cure of CATARRH, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and all Pulmonary Affections."

Advertisement for Ammoniaphone. Includes text: "PRICE $8.00, EXPRESS PAID. WILL LAST A LIFETIME. Recommended by the best Physicians. 6,000 TESTIMONIALS have been received in the last few months..."

Advertisement for A Big Offer. Includes text: "A BIG OFFER. Introduce them. Give away a 1,000 Self-Improving Washing Machines. If you want one send your name, P. O. and express office to THE NATIONAL CO., 23 Dey St., N. Y."

Advertisement for Dr. Jos. Rodes Buchanan. Includes text: "DR. JOS. RODES BUCHANAN. 29 Fort Avenue, Boston. I have given attention to the treatment of chronic diseases, aided by psychometric diagnosis..."

Advertisement for Dr. Somers. Includes text: "DR. SOMERS' Turkish, Russian, Electric, Sulphur, Mercurial, Roman, and other Medicated Baths, the FINEST in the country at the GRAND PACIFIC HOTEL, on Jackson-st., near La Salle, Chicago."

Advertisement for Sarah A. Danskin. Includes text: "SARAH A. DANSKIN, PHYSICIAN OF THE 'NEW SCHOOL'. Pupil of Dr. Benjamin Rush. Office: 481 N. Gilmore St., Baltimore, Md."

Advertisement for Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. Includes text: "CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY. By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West..."

Advertisement for The Great Rock Island Route. Includes text: "The Great Rock Island Route. Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly constructed road-bed..."

Advertisement for All About Kansas. Includes text: "ALL ABOUT KANSAS! Its People, Crops, Weather, Lands, Schools, Legislation, Railroads, Markets, its Politics, its Development, the Trial of Prohibition, and its Future will be found in the WEEKLY CAPITAL AND FARMERS' JOURNAL, an 8-page, 56-column Paper, published at the capital of the State, sent six months for 50 Cents, one year for $1.00. Address, J. K. HUDSON, Topeka, Kansas."

Advertisement for Opium Morphine Habit Cured in 10 Days. Includes text: "OPIMUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 Days. No pain, no cure, 100% success. T. S. DUNN, Chicago, Ill."

Advertisement for Maule's Spinal. Includes text: "MAULE'S SPINAL. A Surgical. New Scientific. Best published. Over 200,000 copies sold. Wm. Henry Maule, 105 Fifth Street, Philadelphia, Pa."

Advertisement for Group Remedy. Includes text: "GROUP REMEDY. The only medicine for the Membranous Group. The reputation of this medicine has been established by its success in curing the most obstinate cases of Group Remedy..."

Advertisement for A Man. Includes text: "A MAN. WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, SEE EXAMINE THIS MAP OF THE GREAT WESTERN RAILROAD SYSTEM..."

COL. INGERSOLL AT SEA!

A Criticism of Col. Ingersoll's Lecture, "Myth and Miracle."

BY THOS. HARDING.

Colonel Ingersoll, notwithstanding his legal training and matter of fact style of treating his subject, gets off the track sometimes, and although professing to speak from the standpoint of science, becomes as visionary, unscientific and inaccurate as the emotional religionist whom he criticises.

In his new lecture "Myth and Miracle," he says (referring to the miracles of Christ): "Christ was taken before the Roman rulers. He was to be put to death. A great multitude surrounded the judgment seat. Did anybody come forward and say, 'He raised me from the dead—save him for my sake?'"

A few short extracts from Col. Ingersoll's lecture will be sufficient to show that he gets clear out of sight of the base of science; his boat seems to be driven hither and thither by the waves of prejudice and the winds of public applause, without a compass to direct or a helm to guide it.

"Did anybody in the great, great throng say: 'I was a leper, and he healed me?' Not one! They said 'Spare Barabbas, but crucify Christ.' Do you think they would have said this if those miracles had been done? No; they would not. I would like to ask the Colonel whether he ever heard of such a word as 'ingratitude.' Every one knows that it frequently happens that the parties on whom he had conferred benefits, are the very persons, who, in the hour of adversity, will turn upon him and even sting the hand that fed them.

I am not discussing the question, "Did Christ work miracles?" but that of Mr. Ingersoll's unscientific and loose method of treating his subject. He advances no argument to prove that the miracles were not done; he produces wild statements and far-fetched inferences, but no argument. Whether the miracles were done or were not done, is a question, the affirmative of which I leave to the black-coated gentry to prove; that is their business, not mine.

Again he says: "This man is the true man who lives in the true life [no one will deny that]; it was such a man who drank the hemlock and met death as tranquilly as the star meets the morn." This is very good, indeed, from a Materialist. The Spiritualist will thank the Colonel for this admission; for probably he is aware that the Spiritualists have ever claimed Socrates as an elder brother. If he met death tranquilly, his tranquillity was the natural result of his Spiritualistic belief. Socrates had his "demon," which is but another name for spirit, and he was fitted for his work by spirit manipulation, and repeatedly acknowledged that he was commonly inspired, directed and even spoken to by his good "demon," whom it was his pleasure and profit to obey.

"Where shall we bury you, Socrates?" they inquired. "Any where, if you can catch me," said the dying philosopher. Socrates, "who met death as tranquilly as a star meets the morn," well knew that the hemlock could not accomplish his final destiny; this "man's knowledge" was not "bounded" by the circumscription of the materialist; his soul was not to be measured by Col. Ingersoll's metre. He was a Spiritualist in the comprehensive acceptance of that term; he knew that a continued life in a better and a greater city than Athens, awaited him, where the works of the unknown God are more clearly seen and better comprehended; a city, indeed, where I yet hope to meet Col. Ingersoll, and if he will permit me, take my brother immortal by the hand. "Men talk of immortality and heaven," says Col. Ingersoll, "as if they were sure of them." We do, because we are; for I presume by "immortality" the Colonel means life in the Spiritual world, and by "heaven," happiness therein. Yes, we are sure of them, as far as it is possible for man to be sure of any thing; and we are made sure by something more convincing than physical sense merely, although even these have measurably borne their testimony in favor of our confinement; for as the soul is more real than the body, so soul convictions are more real than conclusions based on physical-sense testimony.

As the physical sun is the light and life of the solar universe from a planet to a blade of grass, so is the all-pervading Christ the spiritual light and life of the soul, of all and each. But to the physically blind there is no sun. To the spiritually blind there is no Christ. To the mere intellect there is no soul. To the passions, morality is a farce. To self-love there is no religion. To earthly ambition there is no God.

We hear much about the evidence of the senses, reality, comprehension, etc., but who is able to give a satisfactory definition of them? "When I question a shoemaker concerning his work," said Socrates, "he gives me a precise explanation; but when I ask for a definition of terms in common use amongst the learned orators, he can tell me nothing." The value of sight, for instance, depends upon the mind within the eye. Col. Ingersoll's cat sees the doors and windows in his parlor, but she does not perceive them as he does. She knows that she can pass through the open door, but the door to the cat is not what it is to the Colonel. Things are not permanent realities, but ideas are. You plan a new house and build it according to your idea; but if burns and is lost; "Ah!" you say, "I don't care a fig. I've got the idea and can build another." Now which is the more real, the visible house or the invisible idea?

Our senses, at the best, enable us to take cognizance of comparatively few objects, which must be in a certain chemical condition to bring them within range; on every thing outside or within that, they are of no use. When we were trying to find out whether Spiritualism is true, it was said, "Oh! if I could see a spirit, I'd be convinced," but I have lived to know that seeing, hearing, etc., are not by any means the best evidence, even though no imposition had been practiced. The evidence which Socrates (and thousands of others) had, was far better: the knowledge that he was guided, directed and cared for day by day; that not his will, but the higher will must be done, and that angels had been given "charge concerning him."

Sturgis, Mich.

Experiments in Psychological Research.

In order to obtain more proof that the medium would recognize a vision she had once seen, when it afterwards purported to come to some other relative, a stranger to all present, the following experiment was tried. The alleged spirit of a lady who had been an intimate friend of mine, so often shook hands and talked with me at different seances, that Mrs. Lord came to know and recognize the vision whenever it presented itself. I engaged the son of this lady to attend a meeting under an assumed name. He had never been to a seance, and had no manner of knowledge of the subject, belief in it, or acquaintance among the persons connected with it. He knew nothing of my object in inviting him there. The circle was not held in the place where he resided, and he was a stranger to all present but myself. Whilst the medium was sitting in front of him, with her back toward me, she exclaimed that my friend, Mrs. S., was placing her arms around this gentleman's neck. On my observing that it was strange she did not come to me, as she had always done, a man's hand pressed mine (the medium was ten feet away, talking continuously) and another voice, close to me, replied, "She has found somebody she loves more." The gentleman's name and his mother's were then both spoken by a voice, in the same tone this intelligence had so often used to me. In this instance, the medium at once recognized the form she had before seen, this time not coming to "me, but appropriately embracing and talking to her son, a stranger to all the parties.

To ascertain whether my knowledge and presence had some unconscious influence in directing the result, I engaged a friend of mine to go alone to a seance. The medium presently told him that the spirit addressing him was the same which had so often come to me, and a voice gave his name, his own, and the relationship (a very near one) between them. Again there was recognition of a vision previously seen, although the person present was entirely unknown.

Hearing that Mrs. Lord was to give some seances in New York, I telegraphed to a relative to obtain an interview. He did so the same evening, and for greater precaution under an assumed name. Nevertheless, the medium, whom he had never before seen, gave him the same description of a form she had given to me, which he recognized at once, and a voice told him his true name, its own, and the relationship to him and myself.

A medical friend, at my request, attended a seance held by Mrs. Lord, whom he there saw for the first time. A child apparently, addressed him as Doctor (his profession and name were entirely unknown) stating that it knew me, sending its love, and giving its name as Snow-drop. Two years previously, a sprightly little intelligence with diminutive hands, arms, and a child's manner of speech, seemed to take a fancy to me, and sportively gave its name as Snow-drop.

I begged a friend residing in a distant place to attend a seance. At the time of writing I formed the wish that an intelligence which often professed to be with me, should make some demonstration of its presence at any meeting my correspondent might attend. My friend accordingly went to a seance, and although a stranger to the medium, my messenger so to speak, called him by his name, gave its own correctly, and added that I had written to him on the subject.

In the experiment I am about to relate, I placed Mrs. Lord at a table, with her hands resting near the middle, where she kept them during the whole time. The table had a lower horizontal shelf, which filled up the space between the legs, and was about three inches above the floor. Under this shelf I placed a slate with a short pencil lying on it. We joined hands on the top of the table for about the space of five minutes, when perfectly audible and rapid writing began, the pen being crossed and the i's dotted with vehemence. The writing stopped and a noise was heard as if turning the slate over. Then the pencil began again, and presently the slate was handed up and placed on my knees. Both sides of the slate were filled, each in a very different handwriting; the one cursive and flowing, the other cramped and stiff. The letters were signed with the names the substance of them required. Six names were written, all of them friends of mine, living or dead. This occurred in a lighted room, with a new and unused slate, the medium did not touch. One of the words had been rubbed out and another substituted in larger and whiter letters. The letters were very uniform, and the lines straight and parallel to each other. The writing was not at all like the medium's, of which I procured several specimens, and did not in the least resemble mine.

The following incident is introduced to show the emotional character of these rappings, independently of the persons present, and their intelligent adaptation to circumstances as they arise. Two ladies were engaged in the farther end of the room, endeavoring to quiet the frantic screams of an infant suffering from acute pain. I was called in to advise, and entering the room, saw two young boys kneeling at a chair near the door, and the two adults with the infant, standing at a distance of about twelve feet.

As I entered, one of the children exclaimed, "There is something tapping on the chair!" They retreated in alarm, and the untouched chair was shaken back and forth, as blow after blow fell upon it. One of the boys knowing the alphabet, and just able to make his letters in Roman capitals, I told him to go over the alphabet and put down the letters that were tapped to. He procured the following sentence: "Grandma A—a. I love you, dear little boy." Some one remarking that she must be a very partial grandmother, was called back to the chair by loud and tumultuous rappings, and the letter S was given, but nothing more. We tried again and again, but only got the S. When it dawned upon us that the letter S was intended to make boy into boys, a shower of rappings (no word expresses it so well) as if in joyous assent, fell upon the whole surface of the chair. The term joyous is not inconsiderately used. The rappings are hardly inferior to the human voice in their expression of emotions.

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement. New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud, but that neither lessened the humbug's receipts, hurt his reputation nor disturbed his temper. The writing on the arm was done by pricking. He made light among his boon friends of his spiritual mediumship, and was accustomed to show how he fooled his dupes. He had small liking for sincere Spiritualists, and rarely had anything to do with them. Personally he was a hail fellow, and in no sense a crank. However, when his brain began, about two years ago, to become diseased, he changed radically in character, and for the first time took an interest in Spiritualism beyond the income to be derived from it. He apparently became a believer, and was much rallied by his friends on that account. As his mental disease trouble progressed, he got fanatical, and for a while refused to be doctored in any other way than under what he conceived spirit guidance. He then avowed the genuineness of his mediumship, and it is thought that he was a convert to himself. But as his own credulity grew he lost skill, and his last seances were farcical in the openness of the devices.

In reply to letter of December 30th, about its enclosed slip from Pioneer Press, concerning the life and death of Charles H. Foster, the widely known medium. I would state that, in my opinion, the writer of that article knows personally nothing whatever about Foster. He speaks positively thus:

"Slate writing and blood red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond those feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. That statement is positive. A man who writes that, not only indicates, but assures the public that he knows the facts stated. I cannot tell how many years I have known Mr. Foster; certainly and continuously from 1852 to the time of his attack of insanity and leaving New York, which may have been five years or so ago.

Now I never even saw a slate in his presence, much as I was with him, nor any so-called slate-writing performed in his presence or attempted to be. His methods were entirely different. That part of the article is false. Slate-writing was not a specialty of his. The same is the case with "table tipping and chair whirling." It is false that either was "his specialty," or among the usual phenomena attending his seances. In the many times I was at them I never saw either. They belong to the class of Henry Slade's wonderful performances, and not Foster's at all. Blood red writing on the arm of Foster certainly was one of his "feats," and a wonderful feat it was.

The article in question states "this was done by pricking." Another falsehood, and a falsehood that has often been pricked. A person who, in Foster's presence, has seen that phenomenon, knows how impossible it was that it could be done in the manner asserted in the Pioneer's article, as by pricking the skin of his arm. As to what importance attaches to the location of Foster's office in this city, is not clear. The article fixes it in Fourth Street. It was there in 1856, and some years earlier and later; but, as a general thing, in late years it was very much further up town. The article states Foster's usual fee was $5 for each person, which is true; but the assertion that on some days "by accommodating large parties of investigators he made as much as $200," I believe is false, for the reason he always refused to sit with many present. One sitter was his usual limit, and three outside tolerated, though, when invited to a gentleman's house, he accepted all present; yet I admit he may have made $200 on some days, for his fame was great.

It is nonsense as well as falsehood to say that "scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud" of slate writing by Foster. Mr. Foster was a gentleman in all his instincts. Courtesy and decorum marked his deportment. Few men have more polish than he had. His sensitiveness to any slight was marked, and his resentment against a charge of fraud was outspoken. He had his faults, I know. Some of them were very serious. I will not say that all which he claimed to be genuine manifestations were such. I do not know; but I do know that many things transpired in my presence with him which by me could only be accounted for on the basis of invisible intelligences producing visible effects. That in his social hours he should have ridiculed the preposterous credulity of some persons, I am quite prepared to believe; but the man who writes for a paper concerning facts of which he has no knowledge and states them as within his knowledge, is the great fraud of the age and one of such I consider the writer of the article in the Pioneer Press alluded to. BRONSON MURRAY. New York.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, IS EXCELLENT IN LUNG TROUBLES. DR. ENOCH CALLOWAY, LaGrange, Ga., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with wonderful success in all Lung troubles, also find it has no equal in Summer Diarrhoea of children."

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement.

New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud, but that neither lessened the humbug's receipts, hurt his reputation nor disturbed his temper. The writing on the arm was done by pricking. He made light among his boon friends of his spiritual mediumship, and was accustomed to show how he fooled his dupes. He had small liking for sincere Spiritualists, and rarely had anything to do with them. Personally he was a hail fellow, and in no sense a crank. However, when his brain began, about two years ago, to become diseased, he changed radically in character, and for the first time took an interest in Spiritualism beyond the income to be derived from it. He apparently became a believer, and was much rallied by his friends on that account. As his mental disease trouble progressed, he got fanatical, and for a while refused to be doctored in any other way than under what he conceived spirit guidance. He then avowed the genuineness of his mediumship, and it is thought that he was a convert to himself. But as his own credulity grew he lost skill, and his last seances were farcical in the openness of the devices.

In reply to letter of December 30th, about its enclosed slip from Pioneer Press, concerning the life and death of Charles H. Foster, the widely known medium. I would state that, in my opinion, the writer of that article knows personally nothing whatever about Foster. He speaks positively thus:

"Slate writing and blood red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond those feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. That statement is positive. A man who writes that, not only indicates, but assures the public that he knows the facts stated. I cannot tell how many years I have known Mr. Foster; certainly and continuously from 1852 to the time of his attack of insanity and leaving New York, which may have been five years or so ago.

Now I never even saw a slate in his presence, much as I was with him, nor any so-called slate-writing performed in his presence or attempted to be. His methods were entirely different. That part of the article is false. Slate-writing was not a specialty of his. The same is the case with "table tipping and chair whirling." It is false that either was "his specialty," or among the usual phenomena attending his seances. In the many times I was at them I never saw either. They belong to the class of Henry Slade's wonderful performances, and not Foster's at all. Blood red writing on the arm of Foster certainly was one of his "feats," and a wonderful feat it was.

The article in question states "this was done by pricking." Another falsehood, and a falsehood that has often been pricked. A person who, in Foster's presence, has seen that phenomenon, knows how impossible it was that it could be done in the manner asserted in the Pioneer's article, as by pricking the skin of his arm. As to what importance attaches to the location of Foster's office in this city, is not clear. The article fixes it in Fourth Street. It was there in 1856, and some years earlier and later; but, as a general thing, in late years it was very much further up town. The article states Foster's usual fee was $5 for each person, which is true; but the assertion that on some days "by accommodating large parties of investigators he made as much as $200," I believe is false, for the reason he always refused to sit with many present. One sitter was his usual limit, and three outside tolerated, though, when invited to a gentleman's house, he accepted all present; yet I admit he may have made $200 on some days, for his fame was great.

It is nonsense as well as falsehood to say that "scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud" of slate writing by Foster. Mr. Foster was a gentleman in all his instincts. Courtesy and decorum marked his deportment. Few men have more polish than he had. His sensitiveness to any slight was marked, and his resentment against a charge of fraud was outspoken. He had his faults, I know. Some of them were very serious. I will not say that all which he claimed to be genuine manifestations were such. I do not know; but I do know that many things transpired in my presence with him which by me could only be accounted for on the basis of invisible intelligences producing visible effects. That in his social hours he should have ridiculed the preposterous credulity of some persons, I am quite prepared to believe; but the man who writes for a paper concerning facts of which he has no knowledge and states them as within his knowledge, is the great fraud of the age and one of such I consider the writer of the article in the Pioneer Press alluded to. BRONSON MURRAY. New York.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, IS EXCELLENT IN LUNG TROUBLES. DR. ENOCH CALLOWAY, LaGrange, Ga., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with wonderful success in all Lung troubles, also find it has no equal in Summer Diarrhoea of children."

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement.

New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud, but that neither lessened the humbug's receipts, hurt his reputation nor disturbed his temper. The writing on the arm was done by pricking. He made light among his boon friends of his spiritual mediumship, and was accustomed to show how he fooled his dupes. He had small liking for sincere Spiritualists, and rarely had anything to do with them. Personally he was a hail fellow, and in no sense a crank. However, when his brain began, about two years ago, to become diseased, he changed radically in character, and for the first time took an interest in Spiritualism beyond the income to be derived from it. He apparently became a believer, and was much rallied by his friends on that account. As his mental disease trouble progressed, he got fanatical, and for a while refused to be doctored in any other way than under what he conceived spirit guidance. He then avowed the genuineness of his mediumship, and it is thought that he was a convert to himself. But as his own credulity grew he lost skill, and his last seances were farcical in the openness of the devices.

In reply to letter of December 30th, about its enclosed slip from Pioneer Press, concerning the life and death of Charles H. Foster, the widely known medium. I would state that, in my opinion, the writer of that article knows personally nothing whatever about Foster. He speaks positively thus:

"Slate writing and blood red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond those feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. That statement is positive. A man who writes that, not only indicates, but assures the public that he knows the facts stated. I cannot tell how many years I have known Mr. Foster; certainly and continuously from 1852 to the time of his attack of insanity and leaving New York, which may have been five years or so ago.

Now I never even saw a slate in his presence, much as I was with him, nor any so-called slate-writing performed in his presence or attempted to be. His methods were entirely different. That part of the article is false. Slate-writing was not a specialty of his. The same is the case with "table tipping and chair whirling." It is false that either was "his specialty," or among the usual phenomena attending his seances. In the many times I was at them I never saw either. They belong to the class of Henry Slade's wonderful performances, and not Foster's at all. Blood red writing on the arm of Foster certainly was one of his "feats," and a wonderful feat it was.

The article in question states "this was done by pricking." Another falsehood, and a falsehood that has often been pricked. A person who, in Foster's presence, has seen that phenomenon, knows how impossible it was that it could be done in the manner asserted in the Pioneer's article, as by pricking the skin of his arm. As to what importance attaches to the location of Foster's office in this city, is not clear. The article fixes it in Fourth Street. It was there in 1856, and some years earlier and later; but, as a general thing, in late years it was very much further up town. The article states Foster's usual fee was $5 for each person, which is true; but the assertion that on some days "by accommodating large parties of investigators he made as much as $200," I believe is false, for the reason he always refused to sit with many present. One sitter was his usual limit, and three outside tolerated, though, when invited to a gentleman's house, he accepted all present; yet I admit he may have made $200 on some days, for his fame was great.

It is nonsense as well as falsehood to say that "scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud" of slate writing by Foster. Mr. Foster was a gentleman in all his instincts. Courtesy and decorum marked his deportment. Few men have more polish than he had. His sensitiveness to any slight was marked, and his resentment against a charge of fraud was outspoken. He had his faults, I know. Some of them were very serious. I will not say that all which he claimed to be genuine manifestations were such. I do not know; but I do know that many things transpired in my

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement.

New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud, but that neither lessened the humbug's receipts, hurt his reputation nor disturbed his temper. The writing on the arm was done by pricking. He made light among his boon friends of his spiritual mediumship, and was accustomed to show how he fooled his dupes. He had small liking for sincere Spiritualists, and rarely had anything to do with them. Personally he was a hail fellow, and in no sense a crank. However, when his brain began, about two years ago, to become diseased, he changed radically in character, and for the first time took an interest in Spiritualism beyond the income to be derived from it. He apparently became a believer, and was much rallied by his friends on that account. As his mental disease trouble progressed, he got fanatical, and for a while refused to be doctored in any other way than under what he conceived spirit guidance. He then avowed the genuineness of his mediumship, and it is thought that he was a convert to himself. But as his own credulity grew he lost skill, and his last seances were farcical in the openness of the devices.

In reply to letter of December 30th, about its enclosed slip from Pioneer Press, concerning the life and death of Charles H. Foster, the widely known medium. I would state that, in my opinion, the writer of that article knows personally nothing whatever about Foster. He speaks positively thus:

"Slate writing and blood red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond those feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. That statement is positive. A man who writes that, not only indicates, but assures the public that he knows the facts stated. I cannot tell how many years I have known Mr. Foster; certainly and continuously from 1852 to the time of his attack of insanity and leaving New York, which may have been five years or so ago.

Now I never even saw a slate in his presence, much as I was with him, nor any so-called slate-writing performed in his presence or attempted to be. His methods were entirely different. That part of the article is false. Slate-writing was not a specialty of his. The same is the case with "table tipping and chair whirling." It is false that either was "his specialty," or among the usual phenomena attending his seances. In the many times I was at them I never saw either. They belong to the class of Henry Slade's wonderful performances, and not Foster's at all. Blood red writing on the arm of Foster certainly was one of his "feats," and a wonderful feat it was.

The article in question states "this was done by pricking." Another falsehood, and a falsehood that has often been pricked. A person who, in Foster's presence, has seen that phenomenon, knows how impossible it was that it could be done in the manner asserted in the Pioneer's article, as by pricking the skin of his arm. As to what importance attaches to the location of Foster's office in this city, is not clear. The article fixes it in Fourth Street. It was there in 1856, and some years earlier and later; but, as a general thing, in late years it was very much further up town. The article states Foster's usual fee was $5 for each person, which is true; but the assertion that on some days "by accommodating large parties of investigators he made as much as $200," I believe is false, for the reason he always refused to sit with many present. One sitter was his usual limit, and three outside tolerated, though, when invited to a gentleman's house, he accepted all present; yet I admit he may have made $200 on some days, for his fame was great.

It is nonsense as well as falsehood to say that "scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud" of slate writing by Foster. Mr. Foster was a gentleman in all his instincts. Courtesy and decorum marked his deportment. Few men have more polish than he had. His sensitiveness to any slight was marked, and his resentment against a charge of fraud was outspoken. He had his faults, I know. Some of them were very serious. I will not say that all which he claimed to be genuine manifestations were such. I do not know; but I do know that many things transpired in my presence with him which by me could only be accounted for on the basis of invisible intelligences producing visible effects. That in his social hours he should have ridiculed the preposterous credulity of some persons, I am quite prepared to believe; but the man who writes for a paper concerning facts of which he has no knowledge and states them as within his knowledge, is the great fraud of the age and one of such I consider the writer of the article in the Pioneer Press alluded to. BRONSON MURRAY. New York.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, IS EXCELLENT IN LUNG TROUBLES. DR. ENOCH CALLOWAY, LaGrange, Ga., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with wonderful success in all Lung troubles, also find it has no equal in Summer Diarrhoea of children."

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement.

New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Scarcely a day passed without some acute observer exposing the fraud, but that neither lessened the humbug's receipts, hurt his reputation nor disturbed his temper. The writing on the arm was done by pricking. He made light among his boon friends of his spiritual mediumship, and was accustomed to show how he fooled his dupes. He had small liking for sincere Spiritualists, and rarely had anything to do with them. Personally he was a hail fellow, and in no sense a crank. However, when his brain began, about two years ago, to become diseased, he changed radically in character, and for the first time took an interest in Spiritualism beyond the income to be derived from it. He apparently became a believer, and was much rallied by his friends on that account. As his mental disease trouble progressed, he got fanatical, and for a while refused to be doctored in any other way than under what he conceived spirit guidance. He then avowed the genuineness of his mediumship, and it is thought that he was a convert to himself. But as his own credulity grew he lost skill, and his last seances were farcical in the openness of the devices.

In reply to letter of December 30th, about its enclosed slip from Pioneer Press, concerning the life and death of Charles H. Foster, the widely known medium. I would state that, in my opinion, the writer of that article knows personally nothing whatever about Foster. He speaks positively thus:

"Slate writing and blood red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond those feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. That statement is positive. A man who writes that, not only indicates, but assures the public that he knows the facts stated. I cannot tell how many years I have known Mr. Foster; certainly and continuously from 1852 to the time of his attack of insanity and leaving New York, which may have been five years or so ago.

Now I never even saw a slate in his presence, much as I was with him, nor any so-called slate-writing performed in his presence or attempted to be. His methods were entirely different. That part of the article is false. Slate-writing was not a specialty of his. The same is the case with "table tipping and chair whirling." It is false that either was "his specialty," or among the usual phenomena attending his seances. In the many times I was at them I never saw either. They belong to the class of Henry Slade's wonderful performances, and not Foster's at all. Blood red writing on the arm of Foster certainly was one of his "feats," and a wonderful feat it was.

presence with him which by me could only be accounted for on the basis of invisible intelligences producing visible effects. That in his social hours he should have ridiculed the preposterous credulity of some persons, I am quite prepared to believe; but the man who writes for a paper concerning facts of which he has no knowledge and states them as within his knowledge, is the great fraud of the age and one of such I consider the writer of the article in the Pioneer Press alluded to. BRONSON MURRAY. New York.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, IS EXCELLENT IN LUNG TROUBLES.

DR. ENOCH CALLOWAY, LaGrange, Ga., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with wonderful success in all Lung troubles, also find it has no equal in Summer Diarrhoea of children."

Charles H. Foster's Mediumship.

A subscriber from St. Paul sent us the following from the Pioneer Press of that city, with an inquiry as to its truth. We sent it to Mr. Bronson Murray, a gentleman of wealth, position and veracity, well known in New York and the West, whose reply will be found following the Pioneer Press statement.

New York, Special, Dec. 19.—The death of Charles H. Foster, the spiritualistic medium, resulted promptly in a familiar and unusually successful exposure of the trickeries of most operators in his line. Prof. Henry L. Mott, the scientist, is a firm unbeliever in the phenomena of spirit communication, and he was with a party of Columbia college professors when the demise of Foster was mentioned. It was proposed that, the same evening, each of the six men go to some well-reputed medium, and at the same time precisely, call for a message from the dead celebrity. On subsequently comparing notes it was found that five of the investigators had simultaneously been assured of Foster's presence. In this city he had rooms on Fourth Street, where his fee for sittings was $5 for each person, and on some days, by accommodating large parties of investigators, he made as much as $200; but he was a spendthrift and carouser, and his money went as freely as it came. Slate writing and blood-red manuscript on his arm were his specialties, and beyond these feats he attempted nothing beyond the most ordinary table tipping and chair whirling. The slate trick consists in the substitution of a slate on which a message has previously been written for the clean one that the visitor has examined. At least that was Foster's way of doing it. Sc